1 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Litigation Guide Author(s)

Author(s)

FEDERAL LITIGATION
GUIDE VOLUME 1 PLEADINGS
MOTION PRACTICE
INJUNCTIONS
PROVISIONAL REMEDIES

The Members of the Firm of JENNER & BLOCK, LLC Chicago, Illinois
2010

2 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Litigation Guide Questions?

Questions?

Technical Questions?

Phone: (800) 223-5297
Fax: (800) 533-1645 or (518) 487-3191
E-Mail: technical.support@lexisnexis.com
Visit Our Web Site: http://www.lexis.com

Editorial Questions?

For questions about the Editorial Content appearing in these volumes or reprint permission, please call: Medico-Legal
Joseph Fogel, J.D. Joseph.Fogel@lexisnexis.com at 1-800-424-0651 Ext. 3351
Mark Landis, J.D. Mark.A.Landis@lexisnexis.com at 1-800-424-0651 Ext. 3300
For assistance with replacement pages, shipments, billing or other customer service matters, please call:
Customer Services Department at(800) 833-9844
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000
Fax Number(518) 487-3584
Customer Service Websitehttp://www.lexisnexis.com/custserv/
For information on other Matthew Bender publications, please call
Your account manager or (800) 223-1940
Outside the United States and Canada, please call(518) 487-3000

3 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Litigation Guide Cite As

Cite As

Cite as:
[Vol. #] Federal Litigation Guide, § [00.00] (Matthew Bender).

Example:
2 Federal Litigation Guide, § 11.03[2] (Matthew Bender).

4 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Litigation Guide Copyright

Copyright

This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold with the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting, or other professional services. If legal advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks and Michie is a trademark of Reed Elsevier Properties Inc., used under license. Matthew Bender and the Matthew Bender Flame Design are registered trademarks of Matthew Bender Properties Inc.

Copyright © 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All Rights Reserved.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulations, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work. Permission to copy material exceeding fair use, 17 U.S.C. § 107, may be licensed for a fee of 25cent(s) per page per copy from the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, Mass. 01923, telephone (978) 750-8400.
ISBN 978-0-8205-1097-2
Library of Congress Card Number: 84-073455

5 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Litigation Guide Preface

Preface

The optimum method for an attorney to learn the art of federal litigation or improve on his or her existing skills would be to have the benefit of the years of experience of seasoned federal litigators. While substantive law problems are ready subjects for scholarly research, the practical "how to's" of federal trial practice are not as easy to come by. Most aspiring or practicing trial lawyers gain their practical knowledge through the rough school of trial and error. But the "error" portion of the trial and error system is often a painful process for attorney and client alike, especially in the high-stakes field of federal litigation.

The goal of the *Federal Litigation Guide*is to provide all who are or would be litigating in the federal courts with the "voice of experience" of top federal litigators. The focus of the set is not the presentation of the law governing federal practice-that is the province of Moore's Federal Practice.The focus of the *Federal Litigation Guide*is guidance on the practical, strategic aspects of federal court litigation-*how*to proceed throughout the litigation and *how*to use the rules and statutes governing federal practice to your best advantage.

As any litigator knows, there are many means to a given end. The choice of the right course, and the correct utilization of the available options, often makes the crucial difference in bringing a lawsuit to a satisfactory conclusion. To choose the right course you must understand the options open to you and the advantages and disadvantages of each. Knowing the law is only the first step; you must know how best to *use*the law in any given circumstance.

To accomplish its goal most effectively, the *Federal Litigation Guide*is organized to parallel the usual course of federal court litigation. Volume One covers pre-trial aspects of federal litigation, including pleadings, motion practice, and provisional remedies. Volume Two discusses discovery in the federal courts, including depositions, interrogatories, production and management of documents, and requests to admit. Volume Three covers all aspects of the trial itself from initial planning and preparation to closing argument, jury deliberation, and verdict. Volume Four covers post-trial considerations, including judgments, post-trial motions, relief from judgment, and appeals. Coverage of settlements is also included in Volume Four.

6 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Litigation Guide Editorial Staff

Editorial Staff

DENNIS SCHNEIDER
Senior Director of Publishing

STEVE REVELL
Practice Area Director

MICHAEL BOSS
Practice Area Editor

ORLANDO FERNANDEZ
Manager of Publishing Operations

THOMAS J. EATON
Publishing Operations

KARIN NEWTON
Indexing Manager

CARL WIKANDER
Indexer

7 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Litigation Guide About The Consulting Editors, Jenner & Block, LLC

About The Consulting Editors, Jenner & Block, LLC

MICHAEL T. BRODY. Born Milwaukee, Illinois, August 9, 1958; admitted to the Illinois Supreme Court, 1983, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1984, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, 1984, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1984; University of Wisconsin-Madison (B.S. with honors, 1980), University of Chicago Law School (J.D., with honors, Order of the Coif, 1983); Comment Editor, University of Chicago Law Review, 1982-1983; Law Clerk, Honorable Antonin Scalia, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, 1983-1984; Associate, Jenner & Block, 1984-1990, partner 1991-; member Chicago, Seventh Circuit, and American Bar Associations; General Chair, Representation of Indigents Committee, Seventh Circuit Bar Association; Lecturer in Law, University of Chicago Law School, 2000-.

ROBERT L. BYMAN. Born, Chicago, Illinois, November 25, 1945; admitted to the Illinois Supreme Court, 1970, United States Supreme Court, 1985, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1975, United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, 1976, United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, 1983, United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit, 1988, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, 1992, United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, 1994, United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, 1997, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1970, United States District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin, 1984; University of Illinois (B.A. 1967); University of Illinois College of Law (J.D. 1970); Notes & Comments Editor, Illinois Law Review; associate, Jenner & Block, 1970-1972, 1974-1978, partner, Jenner & Block, 1979-; Associate General Counsel, A.C. Nielsen Company, 1973-1974; Member: American, Illinois, Chicago Bar Associations; Fellow, American College of Trial Lawyers, Chairman, ACTL Federal Civil Procedure Committee, 2002-.

TIMOTHY J. CHORVAT. Born Chicago, Illinois, November 22, 1961; admitted to the Illinois Supreme Court, 1986, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1987, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1993, United States Supreme Court, 1994, United States District Court for the District of Arizona, 1997; Northwestern University (B.A. 1983); Phi Beta Kappa; University of Michigan (J.D. magna cum laude 1986); Order of the Coif; member, Michigan Law Review; associate, Jenner & Block, 1986-1993; Assistant Professor of Law, IIT/Chicago Kent College of Law, 1988-1989; partner, Jenner & Block, 1994-; Member: Illinois, Seventh Circuit and American Bar Associations.

CLARK C. JOHNSON. Born Evanston, Illinois, January 20, 1967; admitted to the Illinois Supreme Court, 1994; U.S. Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit, 1996; U.S. District Court, Northern and Central Districts of Illinois, 1996; U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Michigan, 1997; U.S. District Court, Northern District of Illinois (Trial Bar), 2000; U.S. Court of Appeals, Eleventh Circuit, 2002. Northwestern University (B.A. 1989), Indiana University (J.D. magna cum laude 1994); Order of the Coif; Executive Articles Editor, Indiana Law Journal 1993-1994; Law Clerk, Hon. S. Hugh Dillin, United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, 1994-1996; associate, Jenner & Block, LLC, 1996-2001, partner, 2002 to present, Member: American Bar Association, Chicago Council of Lawyers.

C. JOHN KOCH. Born Peoria, Illinois, May 26, 1956; admitted to Illinois Supreme Court, 1981, United States Supreme Court, 1997, United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, 2000, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1991, United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, 1999, United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, 1984, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1982, United States District Court for the District of Colorado, 1984, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, 1991, Colorado Supreme Court, 1984; Washington University (A.B. summa cum laude 1978), University of Chicago Law School (J.D. 1981); Law Clerk, Hon. David Ebel, United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit; partner, Jenner & Block, 1989-.

BARRY LEVENSTAM. Born Chicago, Illinois, July 10, 1953; admitted to the Illinois Supreme Court, 1978, United States Supreme Court, 1983, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1978, United States District Court for the Central District of Illinois, 1994, United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, 1991, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, 1993, United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, 2000, United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, 1987, United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, 1988, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1979, United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, 1999, United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, 1987, United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, 2002, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, 1981, United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, 1989; University of Illinois (B.S. summa cum laude 1975), University of Illinois Law School (J.D. magna cum laude 1978); Topics Editor, University of Illinois Law Review, Order of the Coif; Law Clerk, Hon. Philip W. Tone, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1978-1979; Hon. Robert J. Steigmann, Circuit Court of Champaign County, 1977-1978; associate, Jenner & Block, 1979-1984, partner, 1985-present; Member, American Bar Association, Seventh Circuit Bar Association, American Academy of Appellate Lawyers, American Law Institute, Illinois State Bar Association, Appellate Lawyers Association, Federal Bar Association; Recipient, The Walter J. Cummings Award for excellence in pro bono advocacy before the Seventh Circuit, 1995; University of Illinois College of Law Board of Visitors, 1998-2000.

MATTHEW M. NEUMEIER. Born Racine, Wisconsin, September 13, 1954; admitted New York, 1987, Michigan and U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Michigan, 1988, Illinois and U.S. District Court, Northern District of Illinois including Trial Bar, 1991, U.S. Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit and U.S. Supreme Court, 1992, U.S. Court of Appeals, Federal Circuit, 1998, U.S. District Court, Central District of Illinois, 2003; University of Michigan (B.G.S., with distinction 1981), Harvard University (J.D. magna cum laude 1984); Editor, Harvard Law Review, 1982-1984; Law Clerk Hon. J. Clifford Wallace, U.S. Court of Appeals, 9th Circuit, 1984-1985) Hon. Warren E. Burger, Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, 1985-1986; partner, Jenner & Block, LLC, 1996- ; Member, Association of the Bar of the City of New York, Chicago and American Bar Associations; State Bar of Michigan; Defense Research Institute.

JEFFREY T. SHAW. Born Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 31, 1960; admitted to the Supreme Court of Illinois, 1986, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1986, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1987, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, 1990, United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, 1994, Supreme Court of the United States, 1996, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1996, United States District Court for the Central District of Illinois, 1997, United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, 1999; Northwestern University (B.A. 1982), University of Iowa College of Law (J.D., with honors, 1986); Senior Articles Editor, Iowa Law Review, 1985-1986; Associate, Jenner & Block, 1986-1993, Partner, 1994-, Member, American and Illinois State Bar Associations.

JEROLD S. SOLOVY. Born, Chicago, Illinois, April 10, 1930; admitted to the Illinois Supreme Court, 1955, United States District Court for the District of Columbia, 1955, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, 1955, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, 1993, United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, 2000, United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, 1985, United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, 1989, United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, 1991, United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, 1956, United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, 1994, United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, 1999, United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, 1989, United States Supreme Court, 1968; University of Michigan (B.A., 1952), Member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, Pi Sigma Alpha, and Phi Eta Sigma; Harvard Law School (L.L.B. cum laude, 1955), Member of the Board of Editors for the Harvard Law Review 1953-1955; associate, Jenner & Block, 1955, partner, 1964, chairman, 1990-present; Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers; Member of the American Law Institute; Chairman of the Advisory Board of the International Human Rights Law Institute; Trustee for the U.S. Supreme Court Historical Society; Member of the American Judicature Society's Center for Judicial Independence; Board Member for the National Equal Justice Library.

HOWARD S. SUSKIN. Born Chicago, Illinois, August 9, 1959; admitted to the Illinois Supreme Court, 1983; U.S. District Court, Northern District of Illinois, 1984, U.S. Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit, 1985, U.S. Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, 1987, U.S. Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit, 1988; Northwestern University (B.A., with distinction, 1980); Phi Beta Kappa; University of Michigan (J.D., with honors, 1983); Editor, Michigan Law Review, 1981-1983, Arbitrator, Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois; Member: Chicago (Chairman, 1997-1998 and Vice-Chairman, 1996-1997, Securities Law Committee; Chairman, Subcommittee on Securities Litigation and Enforcement, 1994-1995; Legislative Liaison, 1995-1998; Member, Judicial Evaluation Committee) and American (Co-Chair, Class and Derivative Actions Subcommittee, 2001&-) Bar Associations; National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. (Member, Board of Arbitrators); National Futures Association (Member, Board of Arbitrators); Chicago Board Options Exchange (Member, Board of Arbitrators); American Arbitration Association (Member, Board of Arbitrators); New York Stock Exchange (Member, Board of Arbitrators); associate, Jenner & Block, LLC 1983-1990; partner, 1991-present.

8 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

What's New

1 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

HIGHLIGHTS

Release 57 October 2010

Recent Case Law Developments.
The publication has been updated with recent case law developments.
Expanded Coverage.
The publication has been expanded to include coverage of the Equal Access to Justice Act.
Amendments to Fed. R. Civ. P. (effective 12/1/10).
The publication has been updated to include new amendments to Fed. R. Civ. P. 8, 26, and 56 (effective 12/1/10).

FEDERAL RULES AMENDMENTS (effective 12/1/10)

Rule 8(c)(1). Under amended Rule 8(c)(1), discharge in bankruptcy is no longer an enumerated affirmative defense which must be included in a responsive pleading.

Rule 26(a)(2)(B). Rule 26(a)(2)(B) is amended to specify that expert disclosure is only required regarding "facts or data" considered by the expert witness, instead of "data or other information" under the previous version of the Rule.

Rule 26(a)(2)(C). For those expert witnesses who do not need to provide an expert report, the party (not the expert witness) must disclose the subject matter of the expected expert testimony and a summary of the expected facts and opinions.

Rules 26(b)(4)(B)&(C). The work-product protections of Rule 26(b)(3)(A)&(B) are expanded to limit discovery of drafts of expert disclosure statements or reports and, with three exceptions, of communications between expert witnesses and counsel regardless of form (oral, written, electronic, or otherwise). The exceptions are for those parts of the attorney-expert communications regarding compensation, identifying facts or data considered by the expert in forming the opinions, and identifying assumptions relied on by the expert in forming the opinions.

Rule 56. Rule 56 is revised to improve the procedures for presenting and deciding summary judgment motions, and to make the procedures more consistent with those already used in many courts. The procedural changes do not affect the standard for granting summary judgment. Subsections of the Rule have been renumbered, and new sections have been added for clarification purposes.

Amendment to Civil Form 52 - Report of Parties' Planning Meeting (effective 12/1/10). The form has been amended to include in the discovery plan the handling of electronically stored information.

Case Law The publication has been updated with recent case law developments, including several new Supreme Court decisions.

Corporate Principal Place of Business. The Supreme Court held that for purposes of federal diversity jurisdiction, a corporation's principal place of business is where its "high level officers direct, control, and coordinate the corporation's activities." Hertz Corp. v. Friend, __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1181, 175 L. Ed. 2d 1029 (2010) (See § 1.32[3].)

Attorney's Fees and Lodestar Adjustments. The Supreme Court held that the calculation of an attorney's fee based on the lodestar method may be increased due to superior performance, but only in extraordinary circumstances. Enhancements should not be awarded without specific evidence that the lodestar fee would not have been adequate to attract competent counsel. The Court set forth specific factors to consider with regard to enhancements. Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494 (2010) (See § 47.74.)

Class Action Certification. The Court held that the federal class action rule, Civil Procedure Rule 23, trumped a New York law prohibiting class actions that seek to recover statutory penalties or minimal recoveries. Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs. v. Allstate Ins. Corp., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311 (2010) . (See § 42.30.)

Class Arbitration Requires Arbitration Agreement Specifically Providing for Class Arbitration. The Supreme Court held that the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) prohibits arbitrators from imposing class arbitration on parties unless an arbitration agreement specifically provides for it. Stolt-Nielsen S.A. v. AnimalFeeds International Corp., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1758, 176 L. Ed. 2d 605 (2010). (See § 42.230.)

9 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide 1.syn

§ 1.syn Synopsis to Chapter 1: Pleadings *

§ 1.01 The Judicial Code

§ 1.02 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and Federal Rules of Evidence

§ 1.03 Local District Court Rules, Standing Orders, and Individual Judge's Rules

§ 1.04 Structure of Federal Court System: Federal Courts Constitutionally Mandated and Congressionally Created

§ 1.05 Jurisdiction of Federal and State Trial Courts
[1] Federal Courts and State Courts Share Jurisdiction Over Most Claims Arising Under Federal Law
[2] Federal District Courts Are Courts of Limited Jurisdiction
[2.--1] Federal Question Jurisdiction and Diversity Jurisdiction
[2.--2] Supplemental Jurisdiction
[3] State Courts May Not Hear Cases Over Which Federal Courts Have Exclusive Jurisdiction
[4] Federal District Courts Lack Jurisdiction Over Certain State Law Claims

§ 1.06 Pleadings Allowed in Federal Court

§§ 1.07 through 1.09 [Reserved]

§ 1.10 Practical and Procedural Differences

§ 1.11 Statute of Limitations

§ 1.12 Federal and State Forums Generally Share Territorial Limits on Personal Jurisdiction

§ 1.13 Pleading Requirements May Vary in Federal and State Forums

§ 1.14 Federal Rules Require Mandatory Disclosure

§ 1.15 Role of Judges May Vary in Federal and State Forums

§ 1.16 Interlocutory Appeals

§§ 1.17 through 1.29 [Reserved]

§ 1.30 Encouraging Liberal Joinder of Parties and Claims

§ 1.31 Complying With General Pleading Standards
[1] Satisfying Notice Pleading Requirements
[2] Complying With Special Pleading Requirements
[3] Using Official Forms
[4] Avoiding Consequences of Failure to Comply With Pleading Requirements

§ 1.32 Drafting Jurisdictional Allegations
[1] Alleging Subject Matter Jurisdiction
[2] Pleading Federal Question Jurisdiction
[3] Pleading Diversity Jurisdiction
[4] Pleading Minimal Diversity in Accidents Resulting in 75 or More Deaths
[5] Pleading Diversity Jurisdiction in Class Action Lawsuits
[6] Pleading Supplemental Jurisdiction
[7] Statement of Personal Jurisdiction or Venue Not Required

§ 1.33 Alleging Parties' Capacity, Authority, or Legal Existence Generally Unnecessary

§ 1.34 Pleading Claims
[1] Drafting Short, Plain Statement of Claim
[2] Exhibit to Complaint Becomes a Part of the Pleading
[3] Alleging Facts on Information and Belief
[4] Presenting Alternative and Inconsistent Legal Theories
[5] Negating Affirmative Defenses
[6] Dividing Statement of Claim Into Paragraphs
[7] Pleading Separate Counts
[8] Pleading Special Matters
[8.--1] Pleading Fraud and Mistake With Particularity
[8.--2] Pleading Conditions Precedent
[8.--3] Pleading Official Document or Act
[8.--4] Pleading Judgment
[8.--5] Alleging Time and Place
[8.--6] Pleading Special Damages
[8.--7] Making Necessary Allegations in Shareholder Derivative Action
[8.--8] Alleging Specific Facts in Support of Request for Ex Parte Temporary Restraining Order

§ 1.35 Joining Claims
[1] Procedural Rules Encourage Liberal Joinder of Multiple Claims and Remedies
[2] Joining Contingent Claim to Principal Claim
[3] Joinder of Claims is Permissive, Not Compulsory
[4] Determining Whether Joinder Is Prevented by Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction or Improper Venue
[5] Claim Joinder Is Permitted Only for Properly Joined Parties
[6] Amending Complaint to Join Claims Against Third Party Impleaded by Defendant
[7] Segregating Joined Claims

§ 1.36 Drafting Prayer for Relief

§ 1.37 Signing Complaint

[1] Complaint Must Be Signed
[2] Determining Consequences of Signing Complaint
[3] Making Reasonable Inquiry Before Signing

§ 1.38 Verifying Complaint

§ 1.39 Demanding Jury
[1] Preserving Right to Jury Trial
[2] Endorsing Jury Demand on Face of Complaint
[3] Checking Box on Civil Cover Sheet Is Usually Insufficient
[4] Specifying Issues for Jury Trial

§ 1.40 Preparing Summons

§ 1.41 Preparing Civil Cover Sheet or Information Form

§ 1.42 Preparing Corporate Disclosure Statement
[1] Determining Who Must File Disclosure Statement
[2] Filing Disclosure Statement

§ 1.43 Preparing and Filing Notice of Constitutional Challenge to a Statute

§ 1.44 Understanding Privacy Protection For Filings Made with the Court
[1] Redacting Private Information
[2] Limiting Remote Access to Electronic Files in Social Security Appeals and Immigration Cases
[3] Filings Made Under Seal
[4] Seeking Protective Order to Limit Access to Private Information
[5] Filing Unredacted Copy Under Seal
[6] Filing a Reference List of Redacted Information
[7] Waiving Protections Under Rule 5.2
[8] Seeking More or Less Protection Than Specified in Rule
[9] Failing to Redact Private Information

§§ 1.45 through 1.49 [Reserved]

§ 1.50 Due Process Requires Minimum Contacts and Service of Process

§ 1.51 Rule 4 Governs Service of Process

§ 1.52 Obtaining Issuance of Summons by Court Clerk

§ 1.53 Service of Process Generally Must Be Effected Within 120 Days After Filing Complaint

§ 1.54 Waiving Service of Process
[1] Notifying Defendant of Commencement of Action, and Requesting Waiver of Service
[2] Waiver of Service of Process Does Not Constitute Waiver of Court's Jurisdiction Over Defendant
[3] Waiver of Service Provisions Apply to Individuals, Corporations, Partnerships, and Associations
[4] Imposing Costs on Defendant for Failing to Execute Waiver of Service
[5] Defendant's Time to Respond to Waiver Request Does Not Toll 120-Day Period Plaintiff Allowed for Service

§ 1.55 Filing Proof of Service

§ 1.56 Determining Whether Defendant Has Minimum Contacts for Specific Jurisdiction

[1] General and Specific Jurisdiction Distinguished
[2] Cause of Action Must Arise Out of Defendant's Activities Within Forum State
[3] Considering the Contacts Leading to and Surrounding Cause of Action
[4] Evaluating the Purposeful Availment Requirement
[5] Evaluating Fairness Requirement
[6] Applying Jurisdictional Analysis to Internet Contacts

§§ 1.57 through 1.59 [Reserved]

§ 1.60 Understanding Removal

§ 1.61 Distinguishing Removal in Federal Question and Diversity Cases

§ 1.62 Waiving Right to Remove

§ 1.63 Obtaining Consent of All Defendants in Notice of Removal

§ 1.64 Removing to Correct Federal District Court

§ 1.65 Drafting Notice of Removal
[1] Contents of Notice
[2] Signing Pursuant to Rule 11 Required
[3] Joining of All Served Defendants Required

§ 1.66 Filing Notice of Removal and State Court Papers
[1] Deadline for Filing Notice of Removal
[2] Filing Notice of Removal in Proper Federal District Court

§ 1.67 Renewed Jury Demand Usually Not Required

§ 1.68 All State Court Proceedings Occurring Prior to Removal Remain in Effect Upon Removal

§ 1.69 Remanding Case
[1] Forcing Remand by Joining Non-Diverse Party
[2] Moving for Remand
[3] Deadline for Motion Seeking Remand
[4] Moving for Costs and Attorney's Fees Following Remand

§§ 1.70 through 1.79 [Reserved]

§ 1.80 Deadline for Responding to the Complaint
[1] General Rule: 21 Days to Respond to Complaint
[2] Computing 21-Day Period
[3] United States, Foreign States, and Political Subdivisions Must Respond Within 60 Days
[4] Deadline for Responsive Pleading Extended If Service of Process Is Waived
[5] Responding After Serving Pre-Answer Motion
[6] Responding to Amended or Supplemental Pleading
[7] Obtaining Extension of Time to File Pleading or Motion

§ 1.81 Some Defenses and Objections Are Waived If Not Raised in Responsive Pleading

§ 1.82 Raising Defenses and Denials

§ 1.83 Pleading Affirmative Defenses

§ 1.84 Filing Corporate Disclosure Statement
[1] Determining Who Must File Disclosure Statement
[2] Filing Disclosure Statement

§§ 1.85 through 1.89 [Reserved]

§ 1.90 Asserting Counterclaims
[1] Counterclaims Must State Affirmative Claim for Relief
[2] Distinguishing Between Compulsory and Permissive Counterclaims
[3] General Rule: Compulsory Counterclaims Must Be Pleaded or Waived
[4] Exceptions to General "Use or Lose" Rule
[4.--1] Exception: Counterclaim is Subject of Another Pending Action
[4.--2] Exception: Court Lacks Jurisdiction to Render Personal Judgment on Claim
[4.--3] Exception: Presence of Third Parties Required
[4.--4] Exception: No Final Judgment Reached in Prior Action
[4.--5] Exception: No Responsive Pleading Filed in Prior Action
[5] After Acquired or Unripe Counterclaims Not Compulsory
[6] Permissive Counterclaims Allowed in Later Action If Not Pleaded
[7] Counterclaims Not Limited to Recoupment or Damages
[8] Asserting Counterclaims in Responsive Pleading
[9] Counterclaims Should Be Clearly Designated
[10] Counterclaims May Be Inconsistent With Affirmative Defenses
[11] Deadline for Asserting Counterclaims
[12] Determining Whether to Join Additional Counterclaims
[13] Pleading Jurisdiction Over Counterclaims
[13.--1] Supplemental Jurisdiction Over Compulsory Counterclaims
[13.--2] Alleging Independent Basis of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Permissive Counterclaims
[13.--3] Personal Jurisdiction
[14] Preserving Omitted Counterclaims Though Amendment
[15] Pleading Counterclaims Maturing or Acquired After Pleading
[16] Determining Parties to Counterclaims
[16.--1] Asserting Claims Against Third Parties
[16.--2] Determining Whether to Join Additional Parties Under Rule 13(h)
[17] Pleader Does Not Waive Rule 12(b) Defenses by Filing Compulsory Counterclaims
[18] Filing Jury Demand of Counterclaims

§ 1.91 Asserting Cross-Claims
[1] Cross-Claims Must State Affirmative Claim for Relief Against Co-Party
[2] Cross-Claims Should Comply With Pleading Standards
[3] Determining Parties to Cross-Claims
[3.--1] Asserting Cross-Claims Against Co-Party
[3.--2] Asserting Cross-Claims Against Third-Parties
[3.--3] Determining Whether to Join Additional Parties Under Rule 13(h)
[4] Deadline for Asserting Cross-Claims
[5] Alleging Jurisdiction
[6] Pleading Cross-Claims Through Amendment
[7] Determining Whether to Join Additional Cross-Claims (Rule 18(a))
[8] Filing Jury Demand of Cross-Claims

§ 1.92 Filing Answer or Reply to Counterclaim or Cross-Claim
[1] Answering Counterclaim or Cross-Claim
[2] Failing to Answer or Reply to Counterclaim
[3] Deadline for Serving Answer or Reply to Counterclaims
[4] Raising Rule 12(b) Defenses to Counterclaims
[5] Answer May Assert Additional Claims

§§ 1.93 through 1.99 [Reserved]

§ 1.100 Impleader Permits Defendant to Bring in Third-Parties

§ 1.101 Relationship Between Impleader and Other Joinder Procedures
[1] Permissive and Compulsory Joinder Rules
[2] Joinder Under Counterclaim and Cross-Claim Rule
[3] Interpleader
[4] Intervention

§ 1.102 Impleader Is Permissive, Not Compulsory

§ 1.103 Only Defending Parties May Implead

§ 1.104 Leave of Court Not Required If Third-Party Complaint Is Served Within 14 Days After Serving Answer

§ 1.105 Asserting Additional Claims Against Third-Party Defendant

§ 1.106 Asserting Claims Against Original Plaintiff
[1] Third-Party Defendant May Assert Claims Against Plaintiff
[2] Claims Must Be Transactionally Related to Main Claim
[3] Deadline for Bringing Claim Against Original Plaintiff
[4] Joining Additional Claims Against Original Plaintiff
[5] Response by Plaintiff
[6] Court Must Have Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Claim Asserted Against Original Plaintiff

§ 1.107 Impleading New Parties

§§ 1.108 through 1.119 [Reserved]

§ 1.120 Amending Once as a Matter of Course

§ 1.121 Moving for Leave to Amend

§ 1.122 Amendment Freely Permitted

§ 1.123 Effect of Amendment

§ 1.124 Responding to Amended Pleading

§ 1.125 Supplemental Pleadings Focus on New Events

§ 1.126 Supplementation Requires Leave of Court

§ 1.127 Adding Omitted Counterclaim by Amending Pleading

§§ 1.128 through 1.139 [Reserved]

§ 1.140 Understanding Misjoinder and Non-Joinder
[1] Non-Joinder
[2] Misjoinder
[3] Dropping Parties to Cure Lack of Diversity
[4] Relationship Between Rule 21 and Rule 25

§ 1.141 Moving to Add Party
[1] Determining Grounds for Adding Party
[2] Moving to Amend Complaint
[3] Deadline for Adding Party
[4] Notice and Service of Motion to Add Party
[5] Order Adding Party Must Be on Just Terms

§ 1.142 Opposing Motion to Add Party

§ 1.143 Moving to Drop Party
[1] Grounds for Motion to Drop Party
[2] Avoiding Prejudice
[3] No Deadline for Motion to Drop Party
[4] Court May Dismiss Party but Not Action
[5] Effect of Dropping Party

§ 1.144 Severing Claim to Cure Misjoinder
[1] Grounds for Severing Claim
[2] Court's Discretion
[3] Effect of Severance

§ 1.145 Substituting Parties
[1] Scope of Rule 25 Substitution
[2] Rule 21 as Alternative to Rule 25 Substitution
[3] Procedure for Substitution on Death of Party
[3.--1] Determination of Whether Claim Survives is a Function of Substantive Law
[3.--2] Deadline for Filing Motion to Substitute Based on Death of Party
[3.--3] Substitution on Death of Party Is Discretionary
[3.--4] Serving and Filing Suggestion of Death

§ 1.146 Substitution for Incompetent Party

§ 1.147 Substitution on Assignment of Interest

§ 1.148 Effect of Substitution

10 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter examines pleadings in the federal court. After a brief look at whether the federal forum should be selected when a choice exists, the following topics are covered:

- Understanding personal jurisdiction requirements
- Pleading Subject Matter Jurisdiction
- Drafting and serving the summons and complaint
- Demanding a jury
- Removing a state court case to federal court
- Responding to the complaint, including cross-claims and counterclaims
- Impleader (third-party practice)
- Amending and supplementing pleadings
- Adding, dropping, and substituting parties

For expanded coverage of the topics covered in this chapter, see the following chapters of Moore's Federal Practice, (Matthew Bender 3d ed.):

- Ch. 4, Summons
- Ch. 8, General Rules of Pleading
- Ch. 12, Defenses and Objections--When and How Presented--By Pleading or Motion--Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

- Ch. 14, Third-Party Practice
- Ch. 15, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings
- Ch. 25, Substitution of Parties
- Ch. 38, Jury Trial of Right
- Ch. 107, Removal
- Ch. 108, Territorial Jurisdiction: Jurisdiction Over Persons and Property

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
A. Understanding Federal Procedural Framework

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.01

§ 1.01 The Judicial Code

Title 28 of the United States Code, commonly known as "the Judicial Code," governs judicial procedure in federal courts, as well as the organization of the judiciary. Additionally, the Judicial Code addresses federal jurisdiction and venue. n1 A surprising amount of detail is contained in the Judicial Code; it should be consulted even on subjects contained in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

12 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
A. Understanding Federal Procedural Framework

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.02

§ 1.02 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and Federal Rules of Evidence

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply in all suits of a civil nature brought in federal court absent a direct expression by Congress of contrary intent. n1 Requirements imposed by the Federal Rules must be followed throughout the litigation of each case pending in federal court. n2 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are designed "to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding." n3

The Federal Rules of Evidence govern the admissibility and use of evidence in federal district courts. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureGeneral OverviewEvidenceGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsRulings on Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re Davis, 194 F.3d 570, 577-579 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 1 et seq.; see also 28 U.S.C. § 2072 (Rules Enabling Act).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Evid. 1 et seq.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

13 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
A. Understanding Federal Procedural Framework

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.03

§ 1.03 Local District Court Rules, Standing Orders, and Individual Judge's Rules

Local district court rules may govern practice in a manner consistent with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n1

Local district court rules govern many aspects of federal practice including pleadings, form and format of filings, discovery, motion practice, pretrial conferences, settlement, arbitration, and trial procedure. The practitioner must be alert for changes to local rules, although most districts provide notice and comment period for proposed changes.

Likewise, district courts and individual judges may promulgate general orders and standing orders regulating court administration, practice, and procedure, provided the orders are not inconsistent with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, federal statutes, and the district court's local rules. n2 Any standing orders and rules of the judge assigned to a case should be obtained from court staff at the outset of litigation. Individual judge's rules may contain idiosyncratic preferences as to formatting papers and other minutiae, and should not be overlooked.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2071; Fed. R. Civ. P. 83; see also Frazier v. Heebe, 482 U.S. 641, 107 S. Ct. 2607, 96 L. Ed. 2d 557 (1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
A. Understanding Federal Procedural Framework

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.04

§ 1.04 Structure of Federal Court System: Federal Courts Constitutionally Mandated and Congressionally Created

Article III of the United States Constitution explicitly authorized the creation of the United States Supreme Court, giving Congress the authority to structure a system of "inferior courts." Congress accordingly created a federal court system consisting of the following:

- District Courts. The United States District Courts are trial courts of original jurisdiction. There is at least one district court in each state of the United States.

- Courts of Appeals. The United States Courts of Appeals, also known as the circuit courts, review the decisions of federal district courts. Each of the 13 circuit courts reviews cases from the district level within the circuit.

The United States Supreme Court reviews decisions of the circuit courts, as well as decisions of state courts that turn on issues of federal law. n1

Congress also exercised its constitutional authority under Article I to create a system of specialized "legislative" courts, such as the tax courts. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawCongressional Duties & PowersGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryCongressional LimitsConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. U.S. Const. Art III, § 1; 28 U.S.C. §§ 1291, 1292, 1330; see, e.g., Northern Pipeline Co. v. Marathon Pipeline Co., 458 U.S. 50, 87 (1982) .

(n2)Footnote 2. U.S. Const., Art. I, § 8, cl. 18; see, e.g., Freytag v. Commissioner, 501 U.S. 868, 889, 111 S. Ct. 2631, 115 L. Ed. 2d 764 (1991) (tax courts).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

15 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
A. Understanding Federal Procedural Framework

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.05

§ 1.05 Jurisdiction of Federal and State Trial Courts

[1] Federal Courts and State Courts Share Jurisdiction Over Most Claims Arising Under Federal Law

With certain exceptions, both federal and state courts may hear claims arising under federal law, although state law jurisdiction over federal claims may be limited by Congress. n1

[2] Federal District Courts Are Courts of Limited Jurisdiction

[2.--1] Federal Question Jurisdiction and Diversity Jurisdiction

Federal district courts have original, but not exclusive, jurisdiction over most cases arising under the Constitution and federal laws and treaties. n2 Additionally, federal district courts have original, but not exclusive, jurisdiction over cases arising under state law that involve citizens of different states, or citizens of the United States and those of foreign states, as long as the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of costs and interest. n3

[2.--2] Supplemental Jurisdiction

When a district court has proper jurisdiction over a civil action, it also has supplemental jurisdiction over all other claims that are so related to claims in the original action that they form part of the same case or controversy. n4

Once it is determined that a supplemental claim is related to the claim within the court's original jurisdiction such that they form the same case or controversy, supplemental jurisdiction over the related claim is mandatory. The court has some discretion to decline to hear a claim over which there is supplemental jurisdiction, if the claim falls within one of circumstances enumerated in 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c). n5

The supplemental jurisdiction statute grants supplemental jurisdiction over all claims transactionally related to the claim originally invoking federal court jurisdiction. In diversity of citizenship cases, however, the statute imposes severe limitations on plaintiffs' ability to use supplemental jurisdiction. n6

Supplemental jurisdiction in diversity cases is unavailable in three situations: n7

- Supplemental jurisdiction does not apply to claims asserted by plaintiffs joined under Rule 19

(necessary parties)

- Supplemental jurisdiction does not apply to claims asserted by absentees seeking to intervene as plaintiffs under Rule 24

- Supplemental jurisdiction does not apply to claims asserted by plaintiffs against parties joined under Rule 14 (third-party practice or impleader), Rule 19 (necessary parties), Rule 20 (proper parties), or Rule 24 (intervention)

[3] State Courts May Not Hear Cases Over Which Federal Courts Have Exclusive Jurisdiction

Congress has reserved to the federal courts exclusive original jurisdiction over certain types of claims, such as those arising under the Bankruptcy Code. State courts lack jurisdiction to hear matters falling within this exclusive jurisdictional grant. n8

[4] Federal District Courts Lack Jurisdiction Over Certain State Law Claims

Federal district courts lack jurisdiction to hear cases arising under state law which do not meet the statutory diversity of citizenship and amount in controversy requirements. Federal district courts may elect not to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over certain types of related state law claims, such as those that raise novel or complex issues of state law, or that predominate over the federally based claim. n9

Federal district courts typically do not hear certain types of state-based claims, even if they technically meet the requirements of diversity jurisdiction. Examples of these are family law matters and probate cases. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionDiversityConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionExclusive JurisdictionConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionFederal QuestionsConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionSupplemental Jurisdiction

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Gulf Offshore Co. v. Mobil Oil Corp., 453 U.S. 473, 478 (1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a); Cicio v. Does, 321 F.3d 83, 97 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 726 (1966) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1334(a); see 11 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.

(n9)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Ankenbrandt v. Richards, 504 U.S. 689, 704 (1992) (domestic relations); Markham v. Allen,

326 U.S. 490, 494 (1946) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, sub nom. Clark v. Allen, 331 U.S. 503 (1947) (probate).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

16 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
A. Understanding Federal Procedural Framework

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.06

§ 1.06 Pleadings Allowed in Federal Court

Only the following pleadings are permitted in federal court: n1

- Complaint
- Cross complaint
- Answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim
- Answer to a cross-claim
- Third-party complaint
- Answer to a third-party complaint
- If the court orders one, a reply to an answer

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
A. Understanding Federal Procedural Framework

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.07 through 1.09

[Reserved]

§§ 1.07[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.10

§ 1.10 Practical and Procedural Differences

Assuming the state and federal trial courts share concurrent jurisdiction over a party's claim, there are important differences in the practical and procedural approaches of each forum that make it vital for the practitioner to assess which is more appropriate for the particular case.

Some of the factors to be considered are listed and discussed briefly in §§ 1.11-1.16. The list is not exhaustive, and counsel seeking to make an informed decision about choice of forum should consult each forum's rules of court, practices, and procedures.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionConcurrent JurisdictionConstitutional LawRelations Among GovernmentsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.11

§ 1.11 Statute of Limitations

A federal district court sitting in a diversity action applies the relevant state statute of limitations. n1 On the other hand, when exercising its federal question jurisdiction, a district court will utilize the limitations period pertaining to the applicable federal statute, if there is one. n2 If the federal substantive law does not have an applicable limitations period, the federal court may use the state law of limitations governing an analogous cause of action. n3

When an action arising under federal law is before a state court, the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution obligates the state court to enforce and apply federal substantive law, including applicable statutes of limitation. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionDiversityConstitutional LawSupremacy ClauseGeneral OverviewGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Guaranty Trust Co. v. York, 326 U.S. 99, 65 S. Ct. 1464, 89 L. Ed. 2079 (1945) (following Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938)) ; Torre v. Brickey, 278 F.3d 917, 919-920 (9th Cir. 2002) ; Larsen v. Mayo Med. Ctr, 218 F.3d 863, 867 (8th Cir. 2000) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Board of Regents v. Tomanio, 446 U.S. 478, 483, 100 S. Ct. 1790, 64 L. Ed. 2d 440 (1980) .

(n4)Footnote 4. U.S. Const. Art. VI, cl.2.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.12

§ 1.12 Federal and State Forums Generally Share Territorial Limits on Personal Jurisdiction

Serving a summons or filing a waiver of service establishes personal jurisdiction over a defendant who is subject to the jurisdiction of a court of general jurisdiction in the state where the district court is located. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsConstitutional LimitsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsLong-Arm JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsMinimum ContactsCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(1)(A).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

21 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.13

§ 1.13 Pleading Requirements May Vary in Federal and State Forums

Under the Federal Rules, the party seeking relief is permitted to make a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the party is entitled to relief. n1

The Federal Rules require a pleader to raise any compulsory counterclaims that the party has at the time of serving the pleading against any opposing party. If a party fails to assert a claim that was compulsory in a prior federal or state court action that reached final judgment, the claim will be barred in a subsequent federal court action based on the same transaction or occurrence. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

22 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.14

§ 1.14 Federal Rules Require Mandatory Disclosure

Except in categories of cases specifically exempt, Rule 26(a) requires litigants to disclose certain types of information to opposing parties at specified stages of the pretrial process. The three basic categories of Rule 26(a) disclosure are: n1

- Rule 26(a)(1) "initial" disclosures: Basic information about persons with knowledge, documents that may be used in support of claims or defenses, damages claims, and insurance, all of which is to be shared with other parties very early in the pretrial period

- Rule 26(a)(2) "expert" disclosures: Information about and from retained expert witnesses, which is to be shared further into the pretrial period

- Rule 26(a)(3) "pretrial" disclosures: Information about evidence that the parties contemplate using at trial, which is to be disclosed near the end of the pretrial period

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

23 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.15

§ 1.15 Role of Judges May Vary in Federal and State Forums

In the federal courts, one judge is typically assigned to a case from commencement to final disposition. In many state courts, on the other hand, law and motion judges hear preliminary motions, and trial judges are not assigned until fairly close to the trial date.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral Overview

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

24 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.16

§ 1.16 Interlocutory Appeals

Generally, in the federal courts, only final orders may be appealed, although some interlocutory orders are also appealable. Appeals of interlocutory orders generally may only be pursued when a final judgment has been rendered in the case. n1 For discussion of appellate jurisdiction in the federal court system, including nonfinal decisions deemed final for appellate purposes, and appealable interlocutory orders, see Moore's Federal Practice (3d ed.), Ch. 201, Appellate Jurisdiction in the Federal System .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1292.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
B. Choosing Appropriate Forum When Federal and State Courts Share Concurrent Jurisdiction

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.17 through 1.29

[Reserved]

§§ 1.17[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.30

§ 1.30 Encouraging Liberal Joinder of Parties and Claims

Plaintiffs are granted broad discretion to determine the structure of their actions. Subject to jurisdictional constraints, plaintiffs are encouraged to bring all interested parties together in a single action. n1

Once properly joined, parties may join as many claims, legal, equitable, or maritime, as they have against a defending party. There are no procedural restrictions on the number or type of claims a party may assert in a single case. n2 Although there is no limit to the number of parties joined in an action, every party must meet certain baseline requirements, such as capacity and real party status, in order to sue or be sued. n3

The selection of parties and joinder of claims is also limited by jurisdictional requirements and other Federal Rules of Civil Procedure which permit other parties, absentees, or the court itself, to override the plaintiff's party structure. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesLiberal Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a) (permitting defendants to implead third-parties liable for contribution); Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 (permitting the court to drop misjoined parties); Fed. R. Civ. P. 24 (permitting absentees to intervene).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.31

§ 1.31 Complying With General Pleading Standards

[1] Satisfying Notice Pleading Requirements

To commence a civil action in federal district court, the plaintiff must file a complaint. n1 The complaint must contain all of the following: n2

- A caption that sets forth the name of the court, the title of the action, the names of the parties, the file number of the action, and a designation of the pleading as a complaint
- A short and plain statement of the grounds on which the court's jurisdiction is predicated
- A short and plain statement of the claim, showing that the plaintiff is entitled to relief
- A demand for judgment for the relief the plaintiff seeks
- The signature of the plaintiff's attorney or if the plaintiff is unrepresented, the signature of the plaintiff

A complaint filed in federal court must include sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face, and all claims must be accompanied by facts which allow the court "to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." n3 This "facial plausibility" cannot be supported by "mere conclusory statements" and a reviewing court is required to "draw on its experience and common sense" in its determination of plausibility. n4 A claimant may state inconsistent claims regardless of the fact that it would be impossible for the claimant to prevail on all of the claims. n4.1

All parties to a federal civil action must be properly identified in the caption of the initial pleading in which they are named. n5 In the absence of prejudice, the court will permit a party to amend most errors and omissions in the naming of parties. n6

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not explicitly authorize, or absolutely prohibit, the use of fictitious names by plaintiffs or other parties asserting a claim for relief, n7 but their use is discouraged as against the public's legitimate interest in the facts of a lawsuit, including the names of the parties. n8 However, in special circumstances the federal courts have made exceptions to the policy favoring disclosure, allowing plaintiffs to proceed anonymously to protect privacy interests or to avoid physical harm. n9 Use of a fictitious name is appropriate when the plaintiff's interest in anonymity outweighs both the public interest in disclosure and any prejudice to the opposing party. n10 In conducting this balancing test, courts must take into account whatever factors may be relevant, such as the following factors identified by the Second Circuit: n11

- Whether the litigation involves matters that are highly sensitive and of a personal nature
- Whether identification poses a risk of retaliatory physical or mental harm to the party seeking to proceed anonymously or to innocent non-parties
- Whether identification presents other harms, and the likely severity of those harms
- Whether the plaintiff is particularly vulnerable to the possible harms of disclosure
- Whether the suit is challenging the actions of the government or of private parties
- Whether the defendant is prejudiced by allowing the plaintiff to press the claims anonymously, whether the nature of any prejudice differs at any particular stage of the litigation, and whether any prejudice can be mitigated by the district court
- Whether the plaintiff's identity has thus far been kept confidential
- Whether the public's interest in the litigation is furthered by requiring the plaintiff to disclose his or her identity
- Whether, because of the purely legal nature of the issues presented or otherwise, there is an atypically weak public interest in knowing the litigants' identities
- Whether there are any alternative mechanisms for protecting the confidentiality of the plaintiff

The complaint should not include any matters that are redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous. n12 However, a court ordinarily should not dismiss a complaint merely because it contains repetitious and irrelevant matter, provided it also includes allegations sufficient to put the defendant on notice. The court should ignore the surplusage in the interest of resolving the case on the merits rather than on the basis of pleading defects. n13

Nevertheless, a complaint may be dismissed when, because of its length and inclusion of repetitious and irrelevant matter, it becomes unintelligible, provided the plaintiff has been afforded sufficient opportunity to correct the deficiencies. n14

[2] Complying With Special Pleading Requirements

The general pleading rules may be supplemented by specific requirements imposed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. For example, special requirements apply to the complaint in a shareholder's derivative action. The complaint in such an action must state, among other things, that the action is not a collusive one to confer jurisdiction on the federal court. n15

Federal statutes may also impose special pleading requirements. For example, the 1995 Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (PSLRA) requires that a complaint alleging securities fraud specify each statement alleged to have been misleading and the reasons the statement is misleading; if an allegation regarding the statement or omission is made on information and belief, the complaint must also state with particularity all the facts on which that belief is formed. n16

[3] Using Official Forms

The plaintiff may use one of the official complaint forms contained in the Appendix of Forms to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n17 Use of the official forms is not mandatory, but the forms are sufficient under the rules and are intended to indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement that the rules contemplate. n18

The official forms are not widely used, in part because their number is quite limited, especially in comparison to unapproved forms available from bar associations, commercial vendors, and others. Also, the official forms are based on very simple hypothetical fact situations, and most actions filed in federal court involve more complex issues. Finally, many civil claimants in the federal district courts choose to plead more detail than is illustrated in the official forms.

[4] Avoiding Consequences of Failure to Comply With Pleading Requirements

The court clerk may not refuse to accept for filing any complaint or other paper presented for filing solely because it is not presented in the proper form as required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or by local rules or practices. n19 Thus, for example, if an improperly formatted complaint is offered for filing on the last day before the statute of limitations expires, the filing will be timely.

If the complaint fails to comply with the pleading requirements, the court has the power to order a more definite statement, to strike improper material, or to dismiss the complaint. n20 However, a dismissal will usually be without prejudice, so that the plaintiff will have an opportunity to amend the complaint. n21

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to Comply

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 3.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a), 10(a), 11(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884-885 (2009) ; see also al-Kidd v. Ashcroft, 580 F.3d 949, 956 (9th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts sufficient to state plausible claim); Sinaltrainal v. Coca-Cola Co., 578 F.3d 1252, 1261-1270 (11th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts failed to state plausible claim).

(n5)Footnote 4.1. See United Techs. Corp. v. Mazer, 556 F.3d 1260, 1273-1274 (11th Cir. 2009) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Zocaras v. Castro, 465 F.3d 479, 483-485 (11th Cir. 2006) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Yeseta v. Baima, 837 F.2d 380, 382-383 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Coe v. United States Dist. Ct., 676 F.2d 411, 415 (10th Cir. 1982) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Doe v. Smith, 429 F.3d 706, 710 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See Doe v. Frank, 951 F.2d 320, 324 (11th Cir. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See Sealed Plaintiff v. Sealed Defendant #1, 537 F.3d 185, 189 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n12)Footnote 11. See Sealed Plaintiff v. Sealed Defendant #1, 537 F.3d 185, 189 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n14)Footnote 13. Wynder v. McMahon, 360 F.3d 73, 80 (2d Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's).

(n15)Footnote 14. See United States v. Lockheed-Martin Corp., 328 F.3d 374, 378-379 (7th Cir. 2003) (district court properly dismissed 155-page complaint, with 99 attachments, when it was "so long, so disorganized, so laden with cross-references and baffling acronyms, that they could not alert either the district judge or the defendants to the principal contested matters").

(n16)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(2).

(n17)Footnote 16. 15 U.S.C. § 77z-1(b)(1) (1933 Act); 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(1); see Novak v. Kasaks, 216 F.3d 300, 305-314 (2d Cir. 2000) ; see § 1.34[8][8.1] for further discussion of pleading under the PSLRA.

(n18)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 84.

(n19)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 84.

(n20)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(4).

(n21)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e), 12(f), 41(b).

(n22)Footnote 21. Monteiro v. Tempe Union High Sch. Dist., 158 F.3d 1022, 1026 (9th Cir. 1998) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 15.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.32

§ 1.32 Drafting Jurisdictional Allegations

[1] Alleging Subject Matter Jurisdiction

A complaint must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds on which the court's subject matter jurisdiction depends. n1 The jurisdictional statement is usually made in the first paragraph of the body of the complaint. The statement must set forth the basis for federal question jurisdiction or diversity jurisdiction. n2

More specifically, the complaint must allege the requisite factual elements underlying subject matter jurisdiction. The complaint may also refer to the appropriate jurisdictional statute. However, affirmative pleading of the precise statutory basis for subject matter jurisdiction is not required if the complaint alleges sufficient facts to establish jurisdiction. n3

Official Form 7 provides model allegations of subject matter jurisdiction, one for diversity, one for federal question, one for statutory jurisdiction, and one for admiralty or maritime jurisdiction. n4

The Supreme Court has held that a federal district court may exercise jurisdiction over a petition to compel arbitration of a state law action only where the complaint, and not the counterclaim, in the state action establishes a basis for federal jurisdiction. Where a complaint rests on state law only, a federal law counterclaim is not sufficient to vest jurisdiction in the district court. n5

[2] Pleading Federal Question Jurisdiction

A federal district court has general federal question jurisdiction over any action in which the claimant's basis for recovery, rather than a defense to a claim for relief, is grounded in federal law. n6 A general allegation of federal question jurisdiction must be borne out by the well-pleaded facts in the body of the complaint. n7

The well-pleaded complaint rule does not allow a counterclaim to serve as the basis for the district court's jurisdiction. n8

It is good practice to include a specific reference to the section of the Constitution, federal statute, or treaty that supplies the basis for recovery. n9 If federal common law is pleaded as the basis for federal question jurisdiction, a reference to the relevant case and a description of its holding seemingly would suffice. n10 However, a failure to cite the federal law on which the plaintiff's claim is based is not fatal, provided that the facts alleged in the claim for relief sufficiently demonstrate the basis for jurisdiction. n11

If jurisdiction is founded on a special jurisdictional statute, reference to the statute should be made in the first paragraph of the pleading, and specific factual averments should be made in the body of the pleading demonstrating that the statute applies. n12

If the applicability of a federal statute turns on the existence of a particular fact, the absence of that fact impacts jurisdiction only if the fact is specifically jurisdictional rather than an element of the claim. n13

To determine whether federal-question jurisdiction exists over federal issues embedded in state-law claims, the question is whether the state-law claim necessarily raises a stated federal issue, actually disputed and substantial, which a federal forum could entertain without disturbing any congressionally approved balance of federal and state judicial responsibilities. n14 The Supreme Court has emphasized that federal jurisdiction over a state-law claim based on the fact that federal law is a necessary element of the claim is reserved for a special and small category of cases. n15

The party pleading federal jurisdiction has the burden of showing a right to standing for each type of relief sought. n16

[3] Pleading Diversity Jurisdiction

In general, a federal district court may exercise diversity jurisdiction over a civil action if the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and if any of the following applies: n17

- The matter in controversy is between citizens of different states
- The matter in controversy is between citizens of a state and citizens or subjects of a foreign state
- The matter in controversy is between citizens of different states, and citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties
- The matter in controversy is between a foreign state as plaintiff and citizens of a state or of different states

A claim alleging jurisdiction based on diversity of citizenship must contain averments of the parties' citizenship and the amount in controversy. n18 Both the amount in controversy and citizenship of the parties must be alleged specifically, even if an express reference is made to the diversity statute. Allegations that fall short of addressing each party's citizenship and the amount in controversy are insufficient. n19

Because complete diversity of citizenship is required to establish general diversity jurisdiction, a complaint alleging general diversity jurisdiction must aver that every plaintiff is of diverse citizenship from every defendant. n20 Citizenship of the parties is determined based on the facts as they exist at the time the suit is filed. n21 An interpleader action requires only minimal diversity. Thus, a complaint in an interpleader action may establish diversity of citizenship by alleging that two or more defendants are of diverse citizenship from one another. n22

The Supreme Court held that for purposes of federal diversity jurisdiction, a corporation's principal place of business is where its "high level officers direct, control, and coordinate the corporation's activities." n22.1

[4] Pleading Minimal Diversity in Accidents Resulting in 75 or More Deaths

The district courts have original jurisdiction of any civil action involving minimal diversity between adverse parties that arises from a single accident, where at least 75 people died in the accident at a discrete location, if: n23

- A defendant resides in a state and a substantial part of the accident took place in another state or location, regardless of whether that defendant is also a resident of the state where a substantial part of the accident took place

- Any two defendants reside in different states, regardless of whether such defendants are also residents of the same state or states, or

- Substantial parts of the accident took place in different states

Minimum diversity exists between adverse parties if any party is a citizen of a state and any adverse party is a citizen of another state. n24 The district court shall, however, abstain from hearing such a case where: n25

- The substantial majority of all plaintiffs are citizens of a single state of which the primary defendants are also citizens, and

- The claims asserted will be governed primarily by the laws of that state

[5] Pleading Diversity Jurisdiction in Class Action Lawsuits

Under the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (CAFA), and with limited exceptions, federal courts have diversity jurisdiction over class actions involving at least 100 class members with combined claims of $5 million or more, where at least one member of a class of plaintiffs is from a different state than any defendant. n26 In class actions not covered by the Act, the "complete diversity" rule requires that each named class representative must be a citizen of a different state than each defendant. n27

Where the other elements of diversity jurisdiction are present and at least one named plaintiff in the class action satisfies the amount-in-controversy requirement, 28 U.S.C. § 1367 authorizes supplemental jurisdiction over the claims of other plaintiffs which arise under the same case or controversy, even if those claims fail to satisfy the amount-in-controversy requirement. n28

For a complete discussion of diversity jurisdiction in class actions, see § 42.21.

[6] Pleading Supplemental Jurisdiction

Supplemental jurisdiction allows a federal court to entertain claims over which it has no independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction, if those claims are sufficiently tied to a suit that is properly in federal court. Generally, in a civil action in which the district court has original jurisdiction, it may also exercise supplemental jurisdiction over other claims that are so related to claims within the court's original jurisdiction that they form part of the same case under Article III of the Constitution. n29

Where the other elements of diversity jurisdiction are present and at least one plaintiff in the action satisfies the amount-in-controversy requirement, Section 1367 authorizes supplemental jurisdiction over the claims of other plaintiffs in the same Article III case or controversy, even if those claims are for less than the requisite amount. n30

To establish that two claims form part of the same case under Article III for purposes of supplemental jurisdiction, the plaintiff must plead and prove facts sufficient to support a finding that the claims have a common nucleus of operative facts. n31

[7] Statement of Personal Jurisdiction or Venue Not Required

A complaint does not need to include allegations of personal jurisdiction or venue. A defense based on lack of personal jurisdiction or improper venue will be waived unless the defending party makes a timely objection by motion or in a responsive pleading. n32

Although a statement of venue is not required, most attorneys include in the complaint a statement of the grounds for venue, along with descriptions of the citizenship and residence of all parties.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionAmount in ControversyGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionSupplemental JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueIndividual DefendantsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331-1365.

(n3)Footnote 3. Brock v. Superior Care, Inc., 840 F.2d 1054, 1063-1064 (2d Cir. 1988).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 7.

(n5)Footnote 5. Vaden v. Discover Bank, -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1262 ; 173 L. Ed. 2d 206, 218 (2009) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n7)Footnote 7. Merrell Dow Pharm., Inc. v. Thompson, 478 U.S. 804, 808 (1986) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 2(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Vaden v. Discover Bank, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1262 ; 173 L. Ed. 2d 206, 218 (2009) ; see also The Holmes Group, Inc. v. Vorace Air Circulation Systems, Inc., 535 U.S. 826, 831 (2002) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 2(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Ivy Broad. Co., v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 391 F.2d 486, 492 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Elliot v. Tilton, 62 F.3d 725, 728 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 2(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. Arbaugh v. Y&H Corp., 546 U.S. 500, 515-516, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097, 1110 (2006) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Grable & Sons Metal Prods., Inc., v. Darue Eng'g & Mfg., 545 U.S. 308, 313 (2005) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Empire Healthchoice Assurance, Inc. v. McVeigh, 547 U.S. 677, 699, 126 S. Ct. 2121, 165 L. Ed. 2d 131 (2006) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Summers v. Earth Island Inst., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1142, 1149, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2009)

.

(n17)Footnote 17. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 2(a).

(n19)Footnote 19. Prescription Plan Serv. Corp. v. Franco, 552 F.2d 493, 498 n.6 (2d Cir. 1977) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. Ed. 435 (1806) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Grupo Dataflux v. Atlas Global Group, L.P., 541 U.S. 567 (2004) .

(n22)Footnote 22. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a); see State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 531 (1967) .

(n23)Footnote 22.1. See Hertz Corp. v. Friend, __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1181, 1184, 175 L. Ed. 2d 1029 (2010) .

(n24)Footnote 23. 28 U.S.C. § 1369(a).

(n25)Footnote 24. 28 U.S.C. § 1369(c).

(n26)Footnote 25. 28 U.S.C. § 1369(b).

(n27)Footnote 26. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2).

(n28)Footnote 27. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a); see Supreme Tribe of Ben-Hur v. Cauble, 255 U.S. 356, 365, 41 S. Ct. 338, 65 L. Ed. 673 (1921) .

(n29)Footnote 28. Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Allapattah Servs., 545 U.S. 546, 125 S. Ct. 2611, 2625, 162 L. Ed. 2d 502 (2005) .

(n30)Footnote 29. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n31)Footnote 30. Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Allapattah Servs., 545 U.S. 546 (2005).

(n32)Footnote 31. See United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1966) .

(n33)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

29 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.33

§ 1.33 Alleging Parties' Capacity, Authority, or Legal Existence Generally Unnecessary

Except when required to show that the court has jurisdiction, a pleading need not allege: n1

- A party's capacity to sue or be sued
- A party's authority to sue or be sued in a representative capacity
- The legal existence of an organized association of persons that is made a party

To raise any of those issues, a party must do so by a specific denial, which must state any supporting facts that are peculiarly within the party's knowledge. n2

Although specific allegations are usually unnecessary, complaints often include allegations of capacity, authority, or legal existence because such allegations facilitate stating a claim in a short and plain manner as required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n3 A public officer who sues or is sued in an official capacity may be designated by official title rather than by name, but the court may order that the officer's name be added. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsCapacity & Legal ExistenceCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(d).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.34

§ 1.34 Pleading Claims

[1] Drafting Short, Plain Statement of Claim

A complaint must include a short and plain statement of each claim showing that the plaintiff is entitled to relief. n1 Each averment in support of the claim must be simple, concise, and direct. n2

Ordinarily, the complaint is not required to set out in detail the facts on which the claim for relief is based. n3 However, the complaint must include sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face, and all claims must be accompanied by facts which allow the court "to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." n4 This "facial plausibility" cannot be supported by "mere conclusory statements" and a reviewing court is required to "draw on its experience and common sense" in its determination of plausibility. n5 The plausibility standard for pleading, which applies to all civil actions, does not prevent a plaintiff from pleading facts alleged upon information and belief where those facts are peculiarly within the possession and control of the defendant. n5.1 No technical form of pleading is required. n6

A party is not required to plead the specific elements of a claim. n7 The Supreme Court has held that a pro se complaint must at least show that the pleader is entitled to relief. n8

[2] Exhibit to Complaint Becomes a Part of the Pleading

If a written instrument is the subject matter of a suit, the forms accompanying the Rules suggest annexing the document as an exhibit to the pleading. n9 A written document attached to a pleading as an exhibit effectively alleges the contents of the document, because the exhibit becomes a part of the pleading for all purposes. Accordingly, statements in the exhibit may be adopted by reference in the body of the complaint. n10

Even if a written instrument is not formally attached to the complaint, the instrument may be treated as incorporated by the complaint if there is a clear and definite reference to the instrument in the complaint. n11 A written instrument not formally attached to a pleading may be offered by a defendant in support of a motion to dismiss the complaint. Thus, a plaintiff may not avoid the consequences of an entire document by quoting from it selectively in the complaint instead of attaching the document as a whole to the pleading. n12

[3] Alleging Facts on Information and Belief

After making reasonable inquiry, a plaintiff may aver facts that he or she believes to be true, but that lack evidentiary support at the time the complaint is filed. Such allegations must be specifically identified in the complaint as likely to have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery. n13

Generally, however, such averments on information and belief are allowed only if the facts that would support the allegations are within the defendant's knowledge or control. n14

[4] Presenting Alternative and Inconsistent Legal Theories

A complaint may include alternative and inconsistent legal theories of recovery on a claim. n15 With the exception of a judgment rendered by default, a final judgment must grant the relief to which a party is entitled, regardless of the relief demanded in the party's pleading. n16

[5] Negating Affirmative Defenses

The complaint is not required to allege facts to negate an anticipated affirmative defense that the defendant might assert in the answer. Such affirmative defenses are automatically taken as denied. n17 However, if the complaint pleads facts that tend to establish an affirmative defense, the complaint should allege any additional facts that negate the defense. n18

[6] Dividing Statement of Claim Into Paragraphs

A party must state its claims in numbered paragraphs, so that particular paragraphs may be referred to in other paragraphs of the complaint, and in succeeding pleadings and motions. n19 A failure to number paragraphs may be excused, however, if the complaint is comprehensible and there is no prejudice to the defendant. n20

The contents of each paragraph must be limited as far as practicable to a statement of a single set of circumstances. n21 The forms accompanying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provide guidance on what constitutes a single set of circumstances, including the following examples: n22

- Form 9 suggests that when pleading injuries, the varying harms to both person and business caused by a single act or series of related acts can be combined in a single paragraph. Thus, in an auto accident case, a plaintiff can plead in one paragraph all injuries resulting from the defendant's negligent operation of a motor vehicle, including physical injuries, loss of earnings or business opportunities, pain and suffering, and expenses for medical attention and hospitalization, because these injuries all arose from a single set of circumstances. n23

- Form 10 indicates that when pleading the bases for a defendant's liability, varying wrongs, even if inconsistent, can be combined by a plaintiff in a single paragraph. Thus, in an automobile accident case, a plaintiff can plead in one paragraph that a defendant drove a car "willfully or recklessly or negligently," because these actions constitute a single set of circumstances. n24

If the complaint is carefully drafted to avoid compound statements, it may force the defendant into making key admissions in the answer. If a sentence in the complaint is compound, the defendant will have an easy "out" in answering. The defendant can deny the allegation in its totality, even if only one of the compound elements is untrue. On the other hand, if the compound allegation is replaced by two simple sentences, the defendant's answer must admit or deny each allegation separately. n25 Therefore, in making allegations on critical issues, it may be useful to ensure that each element is alleged in a separate sentence or paragraph.

[7] Pleading Separate Counts

Each claim founded on a separate transaction or occurrence must be stated in a separate count, if separation facilitates the clear presentation of the matters set forth. n26 When the essence of the complaint against multiple defendants is a scheme, plan, or course of conduct, Rule 10 does not require that each claim against each defendant be stated separately merely because all the defendants may not be involved in each transaction or occurrence. n27

The objective of the requirement of separate counts is clarity in pleading; therefore, the requirement is not strictly enforced if a violation causes no uncertainty or prejudice to the defendant. Because a violation of the separate-count requirement is technical in nature, even if a complaint is dismissed, dismissal will generally be without prejudice, and an amended complaint will be allowed. n28

[8] Pleading Special Matters

[8.--1] Pleading Fraud and Mistake With Particularity

Although Rule 8 sets out the general rules of pleading, it is supplemented in certain respects by other federal rules of civil procedure. Rule 9 contains special rules for pleading fraud. n29 In all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting the fraud or mistake must be stated with particularity. n30

The purpose of this requirement is to provide the defendant with fair notice of a plaintiff's claim and adequate information to frame a response. n30.1 However, some courts have relaxed this heightened pleading requirement in cases involving complex fraudulent schemes or those occurring over a lengthy period of time and involving thousands of billing documents. n31

The element of scienter--the defendant's intent to defraud--usually may be pleaded generally. n32 When fraud is not an essential element of a claim and the plaintiff alleges both fraudulent and non-fraudulent conduct, only the allegations of fraudulent conduct need to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements of Rule 9(b). n33 Rules 8 and 9 are not antithetical but must be read together to provide the appropriate pleading requirements in cases involving fraud or mistake. n34

The requirements of particularity may differ with the facts of each case. However, the circumstances constituting fraud usually include the following: n35

- The fraudulent statement
- An explanation of why the statement was fraudulent
- The identity of the person who made the fraudulent statement
- The time and place of the fraudulent statement
- The method by which the misrepresentation was communicated
- The resulting injury

In a securities fraud class action, the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 specifies the circumstances that must be pleaded in the complaint. n36 To plead a "strong inference" of scienter, as required under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act, a complaint must include allegations that give rise to an inference of fraudulent intent that is not merely plausible or reasonable, but is cogent and at least as compelling as any opposing inference of nonfraudulent intent. n37 The basic elements of a private securities fraud action-which resembles a common-law tort action for deceit and misrepresentation, and include economic loss and "loss causation." An inflated purchase price will not by itself constitute or proximately cause the relevant economic loss needed to allege and prove "loss causation." n38

If the complaint alleges that multiple defendants engaged in fraud, the specific conduct of each defendant generally must be alleged separately. n39

Pleadings alleging fraud usually may not be based on information and belief. n40 However, allegations of fraud may be made on information and belief provided the pleadings set out the facts on which that belief is founded with sufficient particularity to satisfy Rule 9(b). n41

Allegations that fail to provide sufficient information so that the defendant can defend against the charge are not sufficient under the particularity requirements of Rule 9. n42 A complaint was sufficient to state a claim, even though it was "sprawling, confusing, and redundant," when it set out all the acts constituting fraud somewhere in the complaint and provided enough detail to enable the defendant to respond. n43 If a general averment of condition of mind is so vague or ambiguous that the defendant cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading, the court may require more detail of the plaintiff by granting the defendant's motion for a more definite statement. n44 A complaint that fails to state a claim under the PSLRA warrants dismissal, but not with prejudice unless the trial court determines that the allegation of other facts consistent with the challenged pleading could not possibly cure the deficiency. n45

[8.--2] Pleading Conditions Precedent

In pleading the performance or occurrence of conditions precedent, it is sufficient to aver generally that all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred. n46 A general averment of the performance or occurrence of a condition precedent is typically quite brief and to the point. For example, in connection with a contract claim, it is sufficient to allege simply that "all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred." n47

A denial of the performance or occurrence of conditions precedent must be made specifically and with particularity. n48 For example, in an action for breach of contract based on the defendant's failure to perform a condition precedent, the complaint must include a specific allegation of the nonperformance of the condition precedent. n49

[8.--3] Pleading Official Document or Act

In pleading an official document or official act, it is sufficient to aver that the document was issued or the act was done in compliance with law. n50 The official forms accompanying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure illustrate the simplicity permitted in pleading official documents or acts:

- Form 18 allows a claimant in a patent infringement case to aver that "Letters Patent ... were issued to the plaintiff." n51

- Form 19 allows a claimant in a complaint for infringement of copyright to aver that the claimant "received a certificate of registration" in compliance with all laws governing copyright. n52

[8.--4] Pleading Judgment

In pleading a judgment or decision of a domestic or foreign court, a judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal, or a board or officer, it "suffices to plead the judgment or decision without showing jurisdiction to render it." n53 General allegations will usually suffice, and particularity in pleading is not required. Any further detail required may be obtained by motion for a more definite statement or through discovery. n54

[8.--5] Alleging Time and Place

For the purpose of testing the sufficiency of the complaint, averments of time and place are material and will be considered like all other averments of material matters. n55

By providing that any averments of time and place are material, this rule requires exactitude. Thus, for example, the dates and places set forth in the complaint may be used to set up a defense based on the bar of the statute of limitations and other defenses on which the date and place have a bearing. n56

The rule making averments of time and place material does not itself require that a complaint allege time and place. Whether time and place must be pleaded generally depends on the substantive law that provides the elements of the plaintiff's claim and on any other applicable pleading rules. For example, in a claim based on fraud, the circumstances constituting the fraud or mistake, including the time and place of the fraud, must be stated with particularity. n57

[8.--6] Pleading Special Damages

If the plaintiff claims any items of special damage, they must be specifically stated in the complaint. n58 In this context, "special damages" are those that, although resulting from the commission of the conduct complained of, are not the usual or necessary result of the wrong complained of. n59 For example, damages for personal injury are unusual in contract cases but normal in automobile accident cases, while lost profits are normal in contract cases and unusual in automobile accident cases. n60

[8.--7] Making Necessary Allegations in Shareholder Derivative Action

Special requirements apply to the complaint in a derivative action. A "derivative action" is one brought by one or more shareholders or members of a corporation or of an unincorporated association to enforce a right that the corporation or association could assert but has failed to assert. The action may not be maintained if it appears that the plaintiff does not adequately represent the interests of the similarly situated shareholders or members. n61

In a derivative action, in addition to the allegations necessary to establish the corporation's substantive right to relief, the complaint must include the following: n62

- An allegation that the plaintiff was a shareholder or member at the time of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains, or that the plaintiff's share or membership thereafter devolved on the plaintiff by operation of law

- An allegation that the action is not a collusive one to confer jurisdiction on a federal court that the court would not otherwise have

- Allegations stating with particularity the efforts, if any, made by the plaintiff to obtain the action the plaintiff desires from the directors or comparable authority of the corporation or association, and from the shareholders or members if necessary, and the reasons for the plaintiff's failure to obtain the action or for not making the effort

- A verification

[8.--8] Alleging Specific Facts in Support of Request for Ex Parte Temporary Restraining Order

A complaint that requests an ex parte temporary restraining order must allege specific facts sufficient to prove that the plaintiff will suffer immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage before the defendant can be heard in opposition to the request. n63

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsFraud ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsMistakeCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsSpecial DamagesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a); see also Wynder v. McMahon, 360 F.3d 73, 79-80 (2d Cir. 2004) ; Bass v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., 324 F.3d 761, 764-766 (4th Cir. 2003) ; Magluta v. Samples, 256 F.3d 1282, 1283 (11th Cir. 2001) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Pelman v. McDonald's Corp., 396 F.3d 508, 511-512 (2d Cir. 2005) ; In re Tower Air, Inc., 416 F.3d 229, 236-238 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884-885 (2009) ; see also al-Kidd v. Ashcroft, 580 F.3d 949, 956 (9th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts sufficient to state plausible claim); Sinaltrainal v. Coca-Cola Co., 578 F.3d 1252, 1261-1270 (11th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts failed to state plausible claim).

(n6)Footnote 5.1. *See Arista Records, LLC v. Doe 3, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 8879, 27 (2d. Cir. Apr. 29, 2010) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(1).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Leibowitz v. Cornell Univ., 445 F.3d 586, 591-592 (2d Cir. 2006) see also; Doe v. Smith, 429 F.3d 706, 707-710 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081, 1086 (2007) (per curiam).

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Forms 3, 4, 12.

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c).

(n12)Footnote 11. See B.V. Optische Industrie De Oude Delft v. Hologic, Inc., 909 F. Supp. 162, 167 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

(n13)Footnote 12. I. Meyer Pincus & Assocs. v. Oppenheimer & Co., 936 F.2d 759, 762 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n15)Footnote 14. Boykin v. KeyCorp, 521 F.3d 202, 215 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2)(3), Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n17)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(c).

(n18)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n19)Footnote 18. See Tregenza v. Great Am. Communications Co., 12 F.3d 717, 718 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b), (c).

(n21)Footnote 20. See Phillips v. Girdich, 408 F.3d 124, 127-130 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b).

(n23)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 84.

(n24)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 9; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Forms 14 and 15.

(n25)Footnote 24. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 10.

(n26)Footnote 25. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b).

(n27)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b).

(n28)Footnote 27. Thomas v. Luzerne County Correctional Facility, 310 F. Supp. 2d 718, 721 (M.D. Pa. 2004) .

(n29)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Vance v. American Soc'y of Composers, 13 F.R.D. 109, 113 (S.D.N.Y. 1952) .

(n30)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9.

(n31)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n32)Footnote 30.1. See United States ex rel. Bledsoe v. Community Health Sys., Inc., 501 F.3d 493, 503 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n33)Footnote 31. See United States ex rel. Tiesinga v. Dianon Sys., 231 F.R.D. 122, 123-124 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n34)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n35)Footnote 33. See Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 1097, 1103-1105 (9th Cir. 2003) ; Madison River Mgmt. Co. v. Business Mgmt. Software Corp., 351 F. Supp. 2d 436, (M.D.N.C. 2005) (court held that Rule 9(b) particularity requirement for fraud also applies to allegations of negligent misrepresentation).

(n36)Footnote 34. United States v. Martin-Baker Aircraft Co., Ltd., 389 F.3d 1251, 1256 (D.C. Cir. 2004) .

(n37)Footnote 35. See Boykin United States ex rel. Karvelas v. Melrose-Wakefield Hosp., 360 F.3d 220, 226 (1st Cir. 2004) ; see also In re Rockefeller Ctr. Props. Secs. Litig., 311 F.3d 198, 217 (3d Cir. 2003) .

(n38)Footnote 36. 15 U.S.C. § 77z-1(b) (1933 Act); 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b); see Livid Holdings Ltd. v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc., 403 F.3d 1050, 1057-1058 (9th Cir. 2005) (complaint must state facts giving rise to strong inference of scienter); see also In re Cabletron Sys., Inc., 311 F.3d 11, 28-33 (1st Cir. 200 3).

(n39)Footnote 37. See Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 127 S. Ct. 2499, 2510, 168 L. Ed. 2d 179 (2007) ; see also Central Laborers' Pension Fund v. Integrated Elec. Servs., 497 F.3d 546 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n40)Footnote 38. Dura Pharmaceuticals, Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 346 (2005).

(n41)Footnote 39. DiVittorio v. Equidyne Extractive Indus., Inc., 822 F.2d 1242, 1247 (2d Cir. 198 7).

(n42)Footnote 40. Inn Chu Trading Co. v. Sara Lee Corp., 810 F. Supp. 501, 507 & n.13 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n43)Footnote 41. United States ex rel. Karvelas v. Melrose-Wakefield Hosp., 360 F.3d 220, 226-231 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n44)Footnote 42. United States v. Martin-Baker Aircraft Co., Ltd., 389 F.3d 1251, 1256-1259 (D.C. Cir. 2004).

(n45)Footnote 43. Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Intercounty Nat'l Title Ins. Co., 412 F.3d 745, 748-750 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n46)Footnote 44. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n47)Footnote 45. See Belizan v. Hershon, 434 F.3d 579, 583-584 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n48)Footnote 46. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c).

(n49)Footnote 47. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c).

(n50)Footnote 48. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c).

(n51)Footnote 49. See Kamen v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 791 F.2d 1006, 1015-1016 n.1 (2d Cir. 1986) (citing Moore's).

(n52)Footnote 50. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(d).

(n53)Footnote 51. Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 18.

(n54)Footnote 52. Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 19.

(n55)Footnote 53. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(e).

(n56)Footnote 54. Sherwood v. United States, 112 F.2d 587, 593 (2d Cir. 1940) .

(n57)Footnote 55. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(f).

(n58)Footnote 56. Bleecker v. Drury, 3 F.R.D. 325, 326 (W.D.N.Y. 1944).

(n59)Footnote 57. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n60)Footnote 58. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g).

(n61)Footnote 59. See, e.g., PdP Parfums de Paris, S.A. v. International Designer Fragrances, Inc., 901 F. Supp. 581, 585 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n62)Footnote 60. See Avitia v. Metropolitan Club, Inc., 49 F.3d 1219, 1226 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n63)Footnote 61. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(a).

(n64)Footnote 62. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b).

(n65)Footnote 63. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.35

§ 1.35 Joining Claims

[1] Procedural Rules Encourage Liberal Joinder of Multiple Claims and Remedies

A plaintiff may join, either as independent or as alternate claims, as many claims as the plaintiff has against any defendant. n1

[2] Joining Contingent Claim to Principal Claim

The plaintiff may join principal and contingent claims in a single complaint, even though technically the contingent claim does not accrue until resolution of the principal claim. For example, a plaintiff may sue a debtor to recover a money judgment, and in the same complaint the plaintiff may join a claim against a third party to whom the debtor has conveyed property, asserting that the conveyance is in fraud of creditors. n2

[3] Joinder of Claims is Permissive, Not Compulsory

The joinder of claims is permissive, not compulsory. n3 Accordingly, the plaintiff is not required to assert, all in the same action, all claims against the defendant.

However, the doctrine of claim preclusion, or res judicata, may effectively require a plaintiff to assert all transactionally related claims in a single case. The doctrine of claim preclusion generally precludes a plaintiff from suing the same defendant twice on the same transaction or event. Therefore, a plaintiff must be careful to join all transactionally related claims in a single case. n4

[4] Determining Whether Joinder Is Prevented by Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction or Improper Venue

Neither the claim-joinder rule nor any of the other Federal Rules of Civil Procedure can expand the jurisdiction of federal courts. n5 Therefore, although the procedural rules permit unrestricted joinder of claims as a matter of pleading, the court must have a basis of subject matter jurisdiction for each joined claim. n6

[5] Claim Joinder Is Permitted Only for Properly Joined Parties

The claim-joinder rule does not permit the joinder of claims against persons who have not properly been brought into the case under the various party joinder provisions. n7

For example, one of the party joinder provisions allows parties to be joined in the same case if the claims by or against them arise from the same transaction, and give rise to at least one common question of law or fact. n8

If the parties have been properly joined in a case, the claim-joinder rule then operates to allow the assertion of all claims between any such properly joined parties. n9

[6] Amending Complaint to Join Claims Against Third Party Impleaded by Defendant

After the original complaint is filed, a defendant may assert an "impleader" claim against a third party, essentially seeking indemnity or contribution concerning the plaintiff's claim. n10

If the defendant asserts such a third-party claim, the claim-joinder rule will permit the original plaintiff to join any claims he or she has against the properly impleaded third-party defendant, regardless of transactional relatedness to the underlying dispute. n11

[7] Segregating Joined Claims

The district judge has discretion to order separate trials of claims or issues that have been properly joined in the same complaint. n12 Unlike severance of a claim that has been asserted against a misjoined party, an order of separate trials does not result in the filing of separate cases. Instead, it simply leads to separate factual inquiry of claims or issues in the context of a single, properly joined case. n13

If a claim is asserted against a party that cannot be joined in the case under the party joinder provisions, the court may dismiss the misjoined party without dismissing the remainder of the action. Alternatively, the court may order that the claim against the misjoined party be severed from the case and pursued in a separate action. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesClaimsCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesLiberal Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a); see § 1.30.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lytle v. Household Mfg., Inc., 494 U.S. 545, 552 (1990).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a); see also United Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725 n.13, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1966) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h), 14, 19, 20, 22, 24.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(b), 42(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(b), 21.

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.36

§ 1.36 Drafting Prayer for Relief

A complaint must contain a demand for judgment for the relief the plaintiff seeks. Relief in the alternative or of several different types may be demanded. n1

The demand for judgment may be stated in general terms. For example, a single sum of money may be the requested relief sought for an act of negligence resulting in physical injury, pain of body and mind, and loss of business. n2 Although each item of special damages must be specifically stated in the body of the complaint, the demand for judgment does not have to distinguish between general damages and special damages. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Form 9.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix, Forms 9, 14; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.37

§ 1.37 Signing Complaint

[1] Complaint Must Be Signed

A complaint or other paper presented to a federal district court in connection with any civil action must be signed. n1 Along with the signature, the complaint must include the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n2

An unsigned complaint must be stricken if the omission is not corrected promptly after the attorney or party has been informed of the omission. n3 Only the original complaint must be signed; copies served on attorneys for other parties need not be signed.

If the plaintiff is represented by counsel, the complaint must be signed by at least one attorney of record. The signature must be in the attorney's individual name. n4 If the plaintiff is not represented by counsel and appears pro se, the complaint must be signed by the plaintiff. n5

A typed or rubber-stamped name is not sufficient to meet the signing requirements of Rule 11. n5.1

[2] Determining Consequences of Signing Complaint

If a party is represented by counsel, the complaint must be signed by at least one attorney of record. n5.2

An attorney or unrepresented party who signs a complaint or other paper certifies, to the best of his or her knowledge, information, and belief, formed after reasonable inquiry, all of the following matters: n6

- The paper is not being presented for an improper purpose
- The paper's legal contentions are warranted by existing law, or by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law n7
- The paper's factual contentions have, or, if specifically so identified, likely will have, evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery

Signing or otherwise presenting a complaint or other paper in violation of the implicit certifications may result in the imposition of sanctions. n8

Improper purposes for filing a complaint include the following: n9

- Harassment of an opposing party
- Delay
- Needless increase in litigation costs

Forum shopping is not an improper purpose for filing a complaint in federal court, if a ground for federal jurisdiction arguably exists. n10

For a claim presented in a complaint to be deemed frivolous, it must be clear that there is no chance of success. However, a claim need not ultimately prevail in order to be nonfrivolous. n11 In determining whether a complaint is frivolous, courts are to resolve ambiguities in favor of the plaintiff. n12

[3] Making Reasonable Inquiry Before Signing

Attorneys and unrepresented parties have an affirmative duty to make a reasonable investigation of the facts and the law before signing a complaint or other pleading. n13 The reasonableness of an attorney's or unrepresented party's investigation of the facts and the law is measured by an objective standard, based on the circumstances of the case. n14

An attorney may rely on objectively reasonable representations of his or her client. n15 Reliance on information received from other sources may not be reasonable if the attorney has an opportunity to verify the information independently. n16 A failure to make a reasonable investigation prior to signing the complaint may result in the imposition of sanctions. n17 However, an attorney may not be sanctioned for failing to conduct a reasonable inquiry if the complaint turns out to be well-founded. n18

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n6)Footnote 5.1. See Becker v. Montgomery, 532 U.S. 754, 764, 121 S. Ct. 1801, 149 L. Ed. 2d 983 (2001) (typed name not sufficient); see also Jenkins v. Sladkus, 226 F.R.D. 206, 206-207 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (stamped name not sufficient).

(n7)Footnote 5.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a); see also Duran v. Carris, 238 F.3d 1268, 1271-1273 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Knipe v. Skinner, 19 F.3d 72, 75 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n11)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 10. See Sussman v. Bank of Israel, 56 F.3d 450, 457 (2d Cir. 1995).

(n13)Footnote 11. See Pierce v. F.R. Tripler & Co., 955 F.2d 820, 830 (2d Cir. 1992).

(n14)Footnote 12. Oliveri v. Thompson, 803 F.2d 1265, 1275 (2d Cir. 1986).

(n15)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n16)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n17)Footnote 15. Hadges v. Yonkers Racing Corp., 48 F.3d 1320, 1323, 1329-1330 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n19)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n20)Footnote 18. See Calloway v. Marvel Entertainment Group, 854 F.2d 1452, 1470 (2d Cir. 1988).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

34 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.38

§ 1.38 Verifying Complaint

Except as otherwise specifically provided by rule or statute, the complaint does not need to be verified or accompanied by affidavit. n1 Verification is specifically required in the following cases:

- A complaint in a shareholders' derivative action n2
- A complaint that requests an ex parte temporary restraining order n3
- A complaint in admiralty stating a quasi-in-rem or in-rem claim n4

If a verification or affidavit is submitted with a complaint, it must be signed in accordance with the rule governing signatures on pleadings. The signature denotes the same implicit representations to the court concerning the basis and purpose of the document as does a signature on a pleading. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims, Rules B, C.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a), (b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.39

§ 1.39 Demanding Jury

[1] Preserving Right to Jury Trial

The complaint may include a demand for a jury trial of any issue triable of right by a jury. A demand for a jury trial on any such issue may also be served and filed by any party by not later than 14 days after the service of the last pleading directed to the issue. n1 The failure to demand a jury trial constitutes a waiver of trial by jury, although in such a case the court has discretion to try any issue with an advisory jury. n2

[2] Endorsing Jury Demand on Face of Complaint

A demand for a trial by jury may be endorsed on the complaint. n3 The preferred method of endorsing the demand on the complaint to place a notation such as "Jury Demanded," on the face of the complaint. However, a jury demand made on the last page of a pleading has also been deemed sufficient to place the opposing party on notice that a jury trial has been requested. n4

[3] Checking Box on Civil Cover Sheet Is Usually Insufficient

Checking the "Yes" box on the civil cover sheet next to "Jury Demand" generally does not constitute a valid demand for jury trial. The cover sheet typically will not accompany pleadings served on litigants, and therefore would not give opposing parties notice of the jury demand. However, if the cover sheet containing the jury trial notation is served with the summons and complaint, it may be deemed sufficient. n5

[4] Specifying Issues for Jury Trial

In the jury demand, the plaintiff may specify the issues for trial by jury. n6

If the plaintiff has demanded trial by jury for only some of the issues, any other party will have the right to demand a jury trial of any other or all of the issues of fact in the action. n7 If the plaintiff's jury demand does not specify any issues, the plaintiff will be deemed to have demanded trial by jury for all the issues so triable. n8

A plaintiff's jury demand that does not specify particular issues generally covers all issues raised in subsequent pleadings affecting the plaintiff. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DemandsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsRight to Jury Trial

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(d), 39(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Gargiulo v. Delsole, 769 F.2d 77, 78-79 (2d Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Favors v. Coughlin, 877 F.2d 219, 220 (2d Cir. 1989).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. YJR Enters., Inc. v. Twin County Grocers, Inc., 709 F. Supp. 499, 501 (S.D.N.Y. 1989).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.40

§ 1.40 Preparing Summons

A summons must: n1

- Name the court and the parties
- Be directed to the defendant
- State the name and address of the plaintiff's attorney or--if unrepresented--of the plaintiff
- State the time within which the defendant must appear and defend
- Notify the defendant that a failure to appear and defend will result in a default judgment against the defendant for the relief demanded in the complaint
- Be signed by the clerk
- Bear the court's seal

The court may permit a summons to be amended. n2 On or after filing the complaint, the plaintiff may present a summons to the clerk for signature and seal. If the summons is properly completed, the clerk must sign, seal, and issue it to the plaintiff for service on the defendant. A summons--or a copy of a summons that is addressed to multiple defendants--must be issued for each defendant to be served. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsIssuance

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.41

§ 1.41 Preparing Civil Cover Sheet or Information Form

Local rules may require the plaintiff to complete and submit a Civil Cover Sheet or Information Form when the complaint is submitted for filing. The sheet or form is usually available from the court clerk. The sheet or form typically seeks information for the benefit of the clerk and court in administering the court's caseload, and it is not ordinarily served on opposing parties.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsContent & FormGovernmentsCourtsClerks of Court

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.42

§ 1.42 Preparing Corporate Disclosure Statement

[1] Determining Who Must File Disclosure Statement

To enable judges to make informed decisions concerning possible disqualification based on financial interest, all nongovernmental corporate parties must file two copies of a statement that either: n1

- Identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock
- Indicates that there is not a parent corporation nor any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock

[2] Filing Disclosure Statement

A corporate party must: n2

- File the disclosure statement with its first appearance, pleading, petition, motion, response, or other request addressed to the court
- Promptly file a supplemental statement if any required information changes

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.43

§ 1.43 Preparing and Filing Notice of Constitutional Challenge to a Statute

A party that files a pleading, written motion, or other paper drawing into question the constitutionality of a federal or state statute must promptly file a notice of constitutional question stating the question and identifying the paper that raises it, if either of the following is true: n1

- A federal statute is questioned and the parties do not include the United States, one of its agencies, or one of its officers or employees in an official capacity n2

- A state statute is questioned and the parties do not include the state, one of its agencies, or one of its officers or employees in an official capacity n3

Although Rule 5.1 does not so state, the party's obligation to "file" the notice of a constitutional challenge to a statute means that the party must comply with all the obligations of Rule 5(d). In other words, the notice must be tendered to the clerk or filed by electronic means established by court rules. n4 The filing must take place within a reasonable time after service and must be accompanied by a certificate of service. n5 In addition, the filing party is required to serve the notice and paper on the Attorney General of the United States if a federal statute is challenged, or on the state attorney general if a state statute is challenged, either by certified or registered mail or by sending it to an electronic address designated by the attorney general for this purpose. n6

No source provides further guidance on the content of the notice. Because the rule requires only a "notice," however, it is highly unlikely that the party giving notice has any obligation to do more than give a cursory summary of the nature of the challenge and point to the paper in which the challenge is raised (which must accompany the notice when it is served on the relevant attorney general). n7 The party raising the challenge need not fully brief the constitutional question merely to assist an attorney general in deciding whether to intervene.

The court must, under 28 U.S.C. § 2403, certify to the Attorney General of the United States that there is a constitutional challenge to a federal statute, or certify to the state attorney general that there is a constitutional challenge to a state statute. n8

Unless the court sets a later time, the attorney general may intervene within 60 days after the notice of constitutional question is filed or after the court certifies the challenge, whichever is earlier. Before the time to intervene expires, the court may reject the constitutional challenge, but may not enter a final judgment holding the statute unconstitutional. n9

The court may extend the 60-period on its own or on motion. One occasion for extension may arise if the court certifies a challenge under § 2403 after a party files a notice of constitutional question. The court may not enter a final judgment holding the federal or state statute unconstitutional until after the 60-day time period to intervene set out in Rule 5.1 has expired. n10 The rule limits only a final judgment of unconstitutionality during the 60-day period. All other procedures are unaffected by the notice or certification of the constitutional challenge and the potential intervention of the appropriate attorney general. Among other matters that may occur during the 60-day period are the following:

- Pretrial activities, which may continue without interruption n11
- Grants of injunctive or other interlocutory relief n12
- Entry of a final judgment or order rejecting the constitutional challenge to the statute n13

A party's failure to file and serve the notice, or the court's failure to certify, does not forfeit a constitutional claim or defense that is otherwise timely asserted. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(c).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1 Committee Note 2006.

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1 Committee Note 2006.

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(c).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(d).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.44

§ 1.44 Understanding Privacy Protection For Filings Made with the Court

[1] Redacting Private Information

Rule 5.2 was adopted in compliance with the E-Government Act of 2002. n1 This Act requires, among other things, that federal courts make all electronic filings available online, through each court's website. Any paper filings that are scanned into electronic form must be made available to the same extent as any original electronic filings. Electronic filing is becoming the normal mode for filing papers in federal district courts. District courts may adopt, and more and more district courts have adopted, local rules requiring parties to file electronically. n2 Thus, courts must deal with the consequences of having its files available to the public over the internet.

Unless the court orders otherwise, in an electronic or paper filing with the court that contains an individual's social-security number, taxpayer-identification number, birth date, the name of an individual known to be a minor, or a financial-account number, a party or nonparty making the filing may include only: n3

- The last four digits of the social-security number and taxpayer-identification number
- The year of the individual's birth
- The minor's initials
- The last four digits of the financial-account number

The redaction requirement does not apply to the following: n4

- A financial-account number that identifies the property allegedly subject to forfeiture in a forfeiture proceeding
- The record of an administrative or agency proceeding
- The official record of a state-court proceeding

- The record of a court or tribunal, if that record was not subject to the redaction requirement when originally filed

- A filing covered by Rule 5.2(c) (social security appeals and immigration cases) or Rule 5.2(d) (unredacted filing under seal)

- A pro se filing in an action brought under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2241, 2254, or 2255

While the term "redacted" is used, the rule is intended to govern a filing that is prepared with abbreviated identifying information in the first instance, as well as a filing in which the information is edited after its preparation. n5 The responsibility to prepare or redact filings so that they include only the allowed information rests with counsel and the party or nonparty making the filing. The clerk is not required to review documents filed with the court for compliance with the rule. n6 Further, the advisory committee note indicates that attorneys should consult with their clients as to what personal information is to be included in a document filed with the court. The attorney should make the client aware that any personal information not protected by sealing or redaction will be made available over the internet. n7

[2] Limiting Remote Access to Electronic Files in Social Security Appeals and Immigration Cases

Unless the court orders otherwise, in an action for benefits under the Social Security Act, and in an action or proceeding relating to an order of removal, to relief from removal, or to immigration benefits or detention, access to an electronic file is authorized as follows: n8

- The parties and their attorneys may have remote electronic access to any part of the case file, including the administrative record

- Any other person may have electronic access to the full record at the courthouse, but may have remote electronic access only to the docket maintained by the court, and an opinion, order, judgment, or other disposition of the court, but not any other part of the case file or the administrative record

[3] Filings Made Under Seal

The court may order that a filing be made under seal without redaction. The court may later unseal the filing or order the person who made the filing to file a redacted version for the public record. n9

[4] Seeking Protective Order to Limit Access to Private Information

For good cause, the court may require redaction of additional information. n10 The court may also limit or prohibit a nonparty's remote electronic access to a document filed with the court. n11

[5] Filing Unredacted Copy Under Seal

A person making a redacted filing may also file an unredacted copy under seal. The court must retain the unredacted copy as part of the record. n12

[6] Filing a Reference List of Redacted Information

A filing that contains redacted information may be filed together with a reference list that identifies each item of redacted information and specifies an appropriate identifier that uniquely corresponds to each item listed. The list must be filed under seal and may be amended as of right. Any reference in the case to a listed identifier will be construed to refer to the corresponding item of information. n13

[7] Waiving Protections Under Rule 5.2

A person waives the protection of Rule 5.2(a) as to the person's own information by filing it without redaction and not under seal. n14

[8] Seeking More or Less Protection Than Specified in Rule

Rule 5.2 requires the redaction of certain information "unless the court orders otherwise." n15 Accordingly, the court retains authority under the rule to require that information, otherwise subject to redaction, be included in a filing. Alternatively, the rule allows the court, for good cause, to issue protective orders that either: n16

- Require redaction of additional information that would not otherwise need to be redacted
- Limit or prohibit remote electronic access by nonparties to a document filed with the court

While Rule 5.2 provides for the public filing of certain information, such the last four digits of an account number, it does not create a presumption that even this information cannot be protected in an appropriate case. The advisory committee note indicates that it may be necessary in some cases to prevent remote access to any part of an identifying number, or to protect information not referred to in Rule 5.2, such as a driver's license number or alien registration number. n17

The court may also order that records be sealed in an appropriate case. Rule 5.2 neither prevents the sealing of records nor affects the limitations on sealing that are otherwise applicable to the court. n18

[9] Failing to Redact Private Information

Although Rule 5.2 requires that parties omit or redact certain information from their filings with the court, it is silent as to the consequences of a failure to do so. It is clear that a court may instruct the clerk to delete the offending material. n19 Moreover, if the party fails to redact information in bad faith or to harass, sanctions may be in order. In an egregious case, the failure to comply with Rule 5.2 and with the Courts orders may warrant contempt. n20

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3); See, e.g., Local Rule, D. Me., L.R. 5(c) ("Unless exempt or otherwise ordered by the Court, papers shall be filed and served electronically as required by the court's Administrative Procedures Governing the Filing and Service by Electronic Means"); Local Rules, E.D. Cal., L.R. 5-133 ("Unless excused by the court or by the electronic filing procedures set forth in these Rules, attorneys shall file all documents electronically pursuant to those Rules."); Local Rules, D. Ore., L.R. 5.1(a) ("All documents filed with the Court by a Registered User shall be in accordance with the Electronic Filing Procedures set forth in these local rules.").] Scanning the decreasing number of paper filings still being made into electronic form is common practice in the district courts. [1.03: Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).] ("the number of filings that remain in paper form is sure to diminish over time. Most districts scan paper filings into the electronic case file, where they become available to the public in the same way as documents initially filed in electronic form.").

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a)(1)-(4).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(1)-(6).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(c)(1), (c)(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(f).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(g).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(h).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n19)Footnote 19. *See Luster v. City of Lebanon, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 813, at 2 (S.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2007) .

(n20)Footnote 20. *See Luster v. City of Lebanon, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 813, at 56 (S.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2007) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
C. Drafting the Summons and Complaint

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.45 through 1.49

[Reserved]

§§ 1.45[Reserved]

42 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
D. Understanding Personal Jurisdiction Requirements

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.50

§ 1.50 Due Process Requires Minimum Contacts and Service of Process

In general, district courts may exercise personal jurisdiction to the same extent as the courts of the state in which the district court is located. n1 Before a defendant may be subjected to a court's jurisdiction, due process requires both of the following: n2

- The defendant must have "minimum contacts" with the state
- The defendant must be served with process in accordance with statutory requirements

For further discussion of minimum contacts requirements for specific jurisdiction, see § 1.56.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsConstitutional LimitsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsMinimum ContactsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Omni Capital Int'l, Ltd. v. Rudolf Wolff & Co., Ltd., 484 U.S. 97, 101, 108 S. Ct. 404, 98 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1987) ; see also Claus v. Mize, 317 F.3d 725, 727-729 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 311, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945) ; see also World-Wide Volkswagen Corp. v. Woodson, 444 U.S. 286, 291-292, 100 S. Ct. 559, 62 L. Ed. 2d 490 (1980) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
D. Understanding Personal Jurisdiction Requirements

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.51

§ 1.51 Rule 4 Governs Service of Process

Service of a summons is a means of obtaining personal jurisdiction by a court over a defendant, n1 with the goal of providing the defendant with notice that an action has commenced. n2 Rule 4 governs service of process. n3 A summons must be served with a copy of the complaint. n4 The plaintiff is responsible for having the summons and complaint served and must furnish the necessary copies to the person who makes service. n5 Service may be made by any person who is at least 18 years old and not a party to the action. n6 At the plaintiff's request, the court may order that service be made by a United States marshal or deputy marshal or by a person specially appointed by the court. n7

Unless federal law provides otherwise, an individual other than a minor, an incompetent person, or a person whose waiver has been filed may be served in a judicial district of the United States by following state law for serving a summons in an action brought in courts of general jurisdiction in the state where the district court is located or where service is made. n8 In the alternative, a person may be served by doing any of the following: n9

- Delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the individual personally
- Leaving a copy of each at the individual's dwelling or usual place of abode with someone of suitable age and discretion who resides there
- Delivering a copy of each to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsIssuance

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cory v. Aztec Steel Bldg., Inc., 468 F.3d 1226, 1229 (10th Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. Oklahoma Radio Assocs. v. FDIC, 969 F.2d 940, 943 (10th Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(e)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(e)(2).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
D. Understanding Personal Jurisdiction Requirements

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.52

§ 1.52 Obtaining Issuance of Summons by Court Clerk

At or after filing the complaint, the plaintiff may present a summons to the clerk for signature and seal. If the summons is in proper form, the clerk will sign, seal, and issue it to the plaintiff for service on the defendant. n1 The summons must be issued by the clerk, and is defective if signed by the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney. n2

Although the summons may be presented to the clerk for issuance after the complaint has been filed, the summons and complaint must be served contemporaneously. One of the reasons why the plaintiff may wish to file the complaint prior to issuance of the summons is to comply with the statute of limitations.

In any action involving multiple defendants, a separate summons must be issued for each defendant named in the action. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsIssuanceGovernmentsCourtsClerks of Court

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Kramer v. Scientific Control Corp., 365 F. Supp. 780, 788 (E.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

45 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
D. Understanding Personal Jurisdiction Requirements

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.53

§ 1.53 Service of Process Generally Must Be Effected Within 120 Days After Filing Complaint

If service of process is not properly made on the defendant within 120 days of the filing of the complaint, the court must, upon motion or on its own initiative after notice to the plaintiff, either dismiss the action without prejudice as to that defendant, or direct that service must be effected within a specified time. n1 If an amended complaint that adds additional defendants is filed, service on the new defendants begins to run from the date of filing the amended complaint. n2

The court must extend the 120-day deadline for serving process if the party effecting the untimely service demonstrates good cause for the failure to timely serve. n3 Although the court must extend the 120-day deadline for serving process if good cause is shown, the court has discretion to extend the deadline even absent a showing of good cause. n4 Relief may be warranted if the statute of limitations would bar refiling the action, if the defendant is evading service, or if the defendant conceals a defect in service. n5

The 120-day service of process deadline does not apply to service on a defendant in a foreign country. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessAmended & Supplemental Service

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m); see also Thompson v. Maldonado, 309 F.3d 107, 110 (2d Cir. 2002) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See McGuckin v. United States, 918 F.2d 811, 813 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m); see also In re Sheehan, 253 F.3d 507, 512 (9th Cir. 2001) ; Hatfill v. Foster, 372 F. Supp. 2d 725, 737-739 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Henderson v. United States, 517 U.S. 654, 663 n.10, 116 S. Ct. 1638, 134 L. Ed. 2d 880 (1996) ; Horenkamp v. Van Winkle & Co., Inc., 402 F.3d 1129, 1131-1133 (11th Cir. 2005) ; Hoffman v. Balt. Police

Dep't, 379 F. Supp. 2d 778, 785-787 (D. Md. 2005).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m) Committee Note (1993); see also Mann v. American Airlines, 324 F.3d 1088, 1090-1091 (9th Cir. 2003) (deadline extended based on statute of limitations).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m); Nylok Corp. v. Fastener World Inc., 396 F.3d 805, 806-807 (7th Cir. 2005) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.54

§ 1.54 Waiving Service of Process

[1] Notifying Defendant of Commencement of Action, and Requesting Waiver of Service

In order to initiate the waiver of service option under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the plaintiff must notify the defendant that an action has been commenced, and request the defendant to waive service of process. The notice and request for waiver must be delivered in writing. n1 Two waivers of service are not required when the same defendant is sued in two capacities. n2

To be effective, the waiver must be signed and returned to the plaintiff. In the absence of an executed waiver, a defendant's actual knowledge of the lawsuit resulting from receipt of the request for waiver does not establish the court's personal jurisdiction over the defendant. n3

[2] Waiver of Service of Process Does Not Constitute Waiver of Court's Jurisdiction Over Defendant

By waiving service of process, a defendant does not waive any objection to the venue of the court, or to personal jurisdiction. The only issues precluded by execution of a waiver are those involving the sufficiency of the summons, or the sufficiency of service. n4

[3] Waiver of Service Provisions Apply to Individuals, Corporations, Partnerships, and Associations

The waiver of service provisions of Rule 4(d) apply only to individuals, corporations, and associations that are subject to service under Rules 4(e), (f), or (h). n5 This includes the following: n6

- Individuals within a judicial district of the United States
- Individuals in a foreign country
- Domestic or foreign corporations
- Partnerships or unincorporated associations

The waiver option does not apply to service on the following: n7

- Minors or incompetent persons (service governed by Rule 4(g))
- United States, its agencies, corporations, or officers (service governed by Rule 4(i))
- Foreign, state, or local governments (service governed by Rule 4(j)) n8

[4] Imposing Costs on Defendant for Failing to Execute Waiver of Service

A defendant subject to the waiver provisions of Rule 4(d) who has received notice of the action and a request for waiver of service has an affirmative duty to avoid unnecessary costs involved with serving process. If the defendant fails to execute the request for waiver of service, the costs incurred in effecting service will be imposed on that defendant, unless good cause for the failure is shown. n9

Only those costs arising after the expiration of the time to return the waiver may be imposed on the defendant. If the plaintiff proceeds with formal service before the defendant's deadline to return the executed waiver, those costs cannot be imposed on the defendant. Costs include all costs incurred in effecting service, as well as the costs, including reasonable attorney's fees, of any motion required to collect the costs of service. n10 The costs incurred for service are imposed on the defendant even if the defendant is the "prevailing party" entitled to costs under Rule 54. n11

[5] Defendant's Time to Respond to Waiver Request Does Not Toll 120-Day Period Plaintiff Allowed for Service

The period of time given to a defendant to respond to the plaintiff's waiver request does not toll the 120-day period within which the plaintiff must serve the defendant after commencing the action. If the defendant does not return an executed waiver, the plaintiff must serve the defendant within the remaining time. A court may in its discretion grant the plaintiff additional time within which to serve the defendant if the date by which the defendant is obligated to return the waiver is later than the end of the 120-day period. n12 The 120-day time limit for service is not applicable to foreign defendants. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessAmended & Supplemental ServiceCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessWaiversGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessWaiversCosts of ServiceCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessWaiversRequests

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Chapman v. New York State Div. for Youth, 227 F.R.D. 175, 180-181 (N.D.N.Y. 2005).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Cambridge Holdings Group, Inc. v. Federal Ins. Co., 489 F.3d 1356, 1362 (D.C. Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(5); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4), (5).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Nylok Corp. v. Fastener World Inc., 396 F.3d 805, 806-807 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(2); see Maranto v. Dillard Nat'l Bank, 230 F.R.D. 478, 478-479 (W.D. La. 2005).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. Estate of Darulis v. Garate, 401 F.3d 1060, 1063-1064 (9th Cir. 2005).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Nylok Corp. v. Fastener World, Inc., 396 F.3d 805, 806-807 (7th Cir. 2005) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
D. Understanding Personal Jurisdiction Requirements

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.55

§ 1.55 Filing Proof of Service

If the defendant waives service of process, the plaintiff is not required to file proof of service. n1 In all other cases, if service of process was made by a person other than a United States marshal or deputy marshal, an affidavit attesting to service must be filed with the court. n2

A paper is filed by delivering it to either: n3

- The clerk
- A judge who agrees to accept it for filing, and who must then note the filing date on the paper and promptly send it to the clerk

If service of process was effected outside of the United States pursuant to a treaty or convention, proof of service must be made in accordance with the requirements of the treaty or convention. n4 If service of process was effected outside of the United States other than pursuant to a treaty or convention, proof of service must include a receipt signed by the addressee, or other evidence of delivery acceptable to the court. n5

Failure to file proof of service does not affect the validity of the service, provided the service was properly effected. n6 The court may permit a proof of service to be amended. n7

After the plaintiff files the proof of service, a defendant refuting the validity of service bears the burden of proof to overcome prima facie evidence of proper service. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofAmendmentsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofCertificates

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(l)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(l)(2)(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(l)(2)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(l)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(l)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Trustees of Local Union No. 727 Pension Fund v. Perfect Parking, Inc., 126 F.R.D. 48, 52 (N.D. Ill. 1989) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
D. Understanding Personal Jurisdiction Requirements

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.56

§ 1.56 Determining Whether Defendant Has Minimum Contacts for Specific Jurisdiction

[1] General and Specific Jurisdiction Distinguished

General jurisdiction refers to jurisdiction to adjudicate claims that do not arise from the defendant's contacts with the forum state. n1

Thus, if a defendant is amenable to general jurisdiction in a state, the state may exercise jurisdiction over the defendant based on any claim, including claims unrelated to the defendant's contacts with the state. General jurisdiction ordinarily exists only when the defendant's forum connections are continuous, systematic, and substantial.

By contrast, specific jurisdiction refers to jurisdiction to adjudicate claims arising from the defendant's contacts with the forum state. n2

If a defendant is not amenable to general jurisdiction in a state, the state may exercise jurisdiction over the defendant only for claims that arise out of the defendant's forum contacts. Specific jurisdiction may be available when the defendant has few contacts, or even a single contact, with the forum state, if the claim arises directly from the contacts. A typical example is the exercise of specific jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant who has committed a tort within the state. n3

[2] Cause of Action Must Arise Out of Defendant's Activities Within Forum State

If a nonresident defendant's contacts with the forum state are not substantial, continuous, and systematic enough to support general jurisdiction, a defendant may still be subject to specific jurisdiction for claims arising from or related to its activities within the state.

Specific jurisdiction requires a showing by the plaintiff of each of the following: n4

- The nonresident defendant has purposefully established significant (i.e., not random, fortuitous or attenuated) contact with the forum state; and

- The plaintiff's cause of action arises out of or is related to the defendant's forum contacts

If the plaintiff can make that showing, the defendant will have the burden of showing, from the balance of interest factors, that the state's exercise of specific jurisdiction would be unfair. n5

[3] Considering the Contacts Leading to and Surrounding Cause of Action

The proper focus in the specific jurisdiction analysis is on those contacts leading up to and surrounding the accrual of the cause of action. Later events are not considered. This focus is required by three key themes of specific jurisdiction analysis: n6

- Fair notice to the defendant
- Purposeful availment by the defendant
- A relationship between the forum-based activity and the cause of action

[4] Evaluating the Purposeful Availment Requirement

In addition to the requirement that the cause of action derive from the contact with the forum state, it must also be shown that the contact is properly attributable to the defendant. It is essential in each case that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws. n7

Intentionally causing an effect in the forum state constitutes purposeful availment. n8

[5] Evaluating Fairness Requirement

Once the plaintiff has shown that the defendant has purposefully established minimum contacts within the forum state giving rise to the lawsuit, it remains necessary to consider whether the balance of competing interests and the nature and quality of the defendant's purposeful contacts would make it fair play and substantial justice to subject the defendant to jurisdiction there. n9

Once the plaintiff establishes purposeful contact by the defendant, the burden of proving that the exercise of jurisdiction would be unfair shifts to the defendant. n10

The Supreme Court has identified five factors to consider to evaluate fairness: n11

- The burden on the defendant
- The forum state's interest in adjudicating the dispute
- The plaintiff's interest in obtaining convenience and effective relief
- The interstate judicial systems' interest in obtaining the most efficient resolution of controversies
- The shared interest of the several states in furthering fundamental substantive policies

[6] Applying Jurisdictional Analysis to Internet Contacts

The likelihood that personal jurisdiction can be constitutionally exercised based on internet contacts is directly proportionate to the nature and quality of commercial activity that an entity conducts over the internet. n12 This sliding scale is consistent with well developed personal jurisdiction principles. At one end of the spectrum are situations where a defendant clearly does business over the internet. If the defendant enters into contracts with residents of a foreign jurisdiction that involve the knowing and repeated transmission of computer files over the internet, personal jurisdiction is proper. n13

At the opposite end are situations where a defendant has simply posted information on a website which is accessible to users in foreign jurisdictions. A passive website that does little more than make information available to those who are interested in it is not grounds for the exercise of personal jurisdiction. The middle ground is occupied by interactive websites where a user can exchange information with the host computer. In these cases, the exercise of jurisdiction is determined by examining the level of interactivity and commercial nature of the exchange of information that occurs on the website. n14

Generally courts have ruled that availability in the forum state of a mere passive website, which functions as a kind of advertisement or source of information about a defendant and its products, is not a sufficient basis for specific personal jurisdiction. This type of website is not seen as establishing purposeful availment in the forum state. n15

Personal jurisdiction may be proper when the internet connections go beyond a mere passive website and indicate that the defendant intentionally directed activity toward the forum state. n16 Interactive websites, which allow the user to exchange information with the website (such as by allowing the user to order products directly over the internet), have been found to be a basis for jurisdiction. n17 However, the potential for interactivity with forum residents should not, by itself, be a basis for jurisdiction. The court must examine the circumstances to determine whether there is deliberate action aimed at the forum, such as transactions between the defendant and residents of the forum. n18 The Ninth Circuit found that the sale of a single item on an eBay internet auction website was not a substantial contact that would support specific personal jurisdiction over the seller. n19

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Helicopteros Nacionales de Colombia, S.A. v. Hall, 466 U.S. 408, 414 n.9, 104 S. Ct. 1868, 80 L. Ed. 2d 404 (1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 473 n.15, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See McGee v. International Life Ins. Co., 355 U.S. 220, 223, 78 S. Ct. 199, 2 L. Ed. 2d 223 (1957) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 472, 486, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1985) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 472, 483, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Harlow v. Children's Hosp., 432 F.3d 50, 60-64 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Hanson v. Denckla, 357 U.S. 235, 254, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 (1958) ; see also Hannon v. Beard, 524 F.3d 275, 284 (1st Cir. 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783, 790, 104 S. Ct. 1482, 79 L. Ed. 2d 804 (1984) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 476, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1985) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 477, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1985) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 478, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1985) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Zippo Mfg. Co. v. Zippo Dot Com, Inc., 952 F. Supp. 1119, 1124 (W.D. Pa. 1997) ; see also Lakin v. Prudential Secs., 348 F.3d 704, 711 (8th Cir. 2003) see also ALS Scan, Inc., v. Digital Serv. Consultants, Inc., 293 F.3d 707, 712-714 (4th Cir. 2002) ; see also Neogen Corp. v. Neo Gen Screening, Inc., 282 F.3d 883, 890 (6th Cir. 2002) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Zippo Mfg. Co. v. Zippo Dot Com, Inc., 952 F. Supp. 1119, 1124 (W.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Zippo Mfg. Co. v. Zippo Dot Com, Inc., 952 F. Supp. 1119, 1124 (W.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Jennings v. AC Hydraulic A/S, 383 F.3d 546, 549-550 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See ALS Scan, Inc., v. Digital Serv. Consultants, Inc., 293 F.3d 707, 712-714 (4th Cir. 2002) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Bridgeport Music, Inc. v. Still N the Water Publg, 327 F.3d 472, 484 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Jackson v. California Newspapers Pship, 406 F. Supp. 2d 893, 895-898 (N.D. Ill. 2005) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Boschetto v. Hansing, 539 F.3d 1011 (9th Cir. 2008) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
D. Understanding Personal Jurisdiction Requirements

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.57 through 1.59

[Reserved]

§§ 1.57[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.60

§ 1.60 Understanding Removal

Certain federal statutes permit defendants to remove an action originally brought in state court to the federal district court for the district and division in which the state action is pending. A defendant may invoke federal removal jurisdiction only if the case originally could have been brought in federal court. Removal is usually done through the general removal statute, which provides for removal on the basis of federal question and diversity jurisdiction. n1

The general removal statute sets forth the following restrictions on removal: n2

- Only a civil action brought in a state court may be removed
- The civil action must be one of which the district courts of the United States have original jurisdiction
- Only a defendant may remove
- The action must be removed to the federal district court for the district and division within which the action is pending

Special removal statutes also provide for removal under certain circumstances. n3 The removal procedure changes the forum in which the case will be tried. n4 Thus, unlike a transfer of a case from one federal district court to another district court within the federal court system, the removal statutes allow a case to be taken from a state forum system to the federal system. n5

The removal statutes provide defendants with an opportunity similar to that a plaintiff exercises-- to choose to have a federal forum adjudicate the claim, so long as federal subject matter exists. n6 Removal jurisdiction for federal question cases was designed to ensure that the tribunal better informed on questions of federal law will adjudicate the matter. n7 In diversity cases, removal jurisdiction was designed to protect nonresident defendants from any perceived prejudice or preference of the state court regarding the resident plaintiffs. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisFederal Questions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1441.

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1441-1445.

(n4)Footnote 4. Dahiya v. Talmidge Int'l, Ltd., 371 F.3d 207, 212 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Sierminski v. Transouth Fin. Corp., 216 F.3d 945, 947 (11th Cir. 2000) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Dunlap v. G&L Holding Group, Inc., 381 F.3d 1285, 1289 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Chronologic Simulation, Inc. v. Sanguinetti, 892 F. Supp. 318, 321 (D. Mass. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. China Basin Properties, Ltd. v. Allendale Mut. Ins. Co., 818 F. Supp. 1301, 1304 (N.D. Cal. 1992)
.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.61

§ 1.61 Distinguishing Removal in Federal Question and Diversity Cases

A federal question action is removable without regard to the citizenship or residence of the parties. n1 If a federal question action is joined with one or more otherwise non-removable claims or causes of action, the entire case may be removed. The district court may then determine all issues in the action, or in its discretion, may remand all matters in which state law predominates. n2

To determine whether federal-question jurisdiction exists over federal issues embedded in state-law claims, the question is whether the state-law claim necessarily raises a stated federal issue, actually disputed and substantial, which a federal forum could entertain without disturbing any congressionally approved balance of federal and state judicial responsibilities. n3

A diversity action is removable only if both of the following requirements are met: n4

- There is complete diversity between the parties
- None of the parties in interest properly joined and served as defendants is a citizen of the state where the action is pending

Accordingly, defendants may remove an action on the basis of diversity of citizenship if there is complete diversity between all named plaintiffs and all named defendants, and no defendant is a citizen of the forum state. n5 It is not incumbent on the named defendants to negate the existence of a potential unnamed defendant whose presence in the action would destroy diversity. n6

Class actions governed by the Class Action Fairness Act may be removed even when there is not complete diversity between the parties and without regard to whether any defendant is a citizen of the state in which the action is brought. n7 For a complete discussion of removal of actions under the Class Action Fairness Act, see Ch. 42, Class Actions.

Because removal invokes federal jurisdiction, the defending party must establish federal jurisdiction over the suit currently in state court; federal courts, therefore, must resolve close cases against removal. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisDiversity of CitizenshipCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisFederal Questions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Grable & Sons Metal Prods., Inc., v. Darue Eng'g & Mfg., 545 U.S. 308, 313, 125 S. Ct. 2363, 162 L. Ed. 2d 257 (2005) (quiet title claim warranted removal because the owner's claim was premised on the Internal Revenue Service's failure to give adequate notice as defined by federal law).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lincoln Prop. Co. v. Roche, 546 U.S. 81, 126 S. Ct. 606, 613, 163 L. Ed. 2d 415 (2005) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lincoln Prop. Co. v. Roche, 546 U.S. 81, 126 S. Ct. 606, 613, 163 L. Ed. 2d 415 (2005) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. Dixon v. Coburg Dairy, Inc., 369 F.3d 811, 816 (4th Cir. 2004) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.62

§ 1.62 Waiving Right to Remove

A defendant waives the right to remove an action to federal court by failing to file the removal notice within the statutory time limits. n1

Likewise, a defendant may waive the right to remove a case from state to federal court by contract in a forum selection clause. Forum selection clauses are generally enforced unless found to be unjust or unreasonable, or unless they are obtained by fraud or overreaching. n2 The waiver must be clear and unequivocal, n3 and must contain obligatory language that mandates a particular forum as the exclusive forum for the resolution of any dispute between the parties. n4 However, a waiver of removal rights need not include particular words such as "waiver of right of removal." n5

Finally, a defendant may waive the right to remove an action to federal court by taking actions in the state court that clearly and unequivocally manifest submission to the state court's jurisdiction, including the following: n6

- Participating in state court proceedings when it is not required, such as filing a permissive counterclaim n7
- Moving in state court to compel arbitration n8
- Filing a motion to dismiss the state court complaint n9

The following have been found to not constitute a waiver of the right to remove:

- Filing a pleading raising a defense that might be conclusive on the merits n10
- Opposing a motion for a temporary restraining order n11
- Failing to remove a previous voluntarily-dismissed state action based on the same claim n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalWaivers

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. The M/S Bremen v. Zapata Off-shore Co., 407 U.S. 1, 15-16, 92 S. Ct. 1907, 32 L. Ed. 2d 513 (1972) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Dixon v. TSE Int'l Inc., 330 F.3d 396, 397 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Excell, Inc. v. Sterling Boiler & Mech., Inc., 106 F.3d 318, 320-321 (10th Cir. 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Waters v. Browning-Ferris Indus., Inc., 252 F.3d 796, 797-798 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Bayside Developers, 43 F.3d 1230, 1240 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Isaacs v. Group Health, Inc., 668 F. Supp. 306, 308-309 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 8. McKinnon v. Doctor's Assoc., Inc., 769 F. Supp. 216, 220 (E.D. Mich. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Hill v. Citicorp, 804 F. Supp. 514, 516-517 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Haun v. Retail Credit Co., 420 F. Supp. 859, 864 (W.D. Pa. 1976) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Rothner v. City of Chicago, 879 F.2d 1402, 1418-1419 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Baker v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 537 F. Supp. 244, 247 (S.D. Fla. 1982) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

53 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.63

§ 1.63 Obtaining Consent of All Defendants in Notice of Removal

All defendants must consent to removal, and the consent must be noted in the notice of removal. n1 The failure of one defendant to join in the notice precludes removal. n2 The joining requirement is satisfied when a defendant who does not join in the initial notice of removal files a written consent to removal within the statutory time for filing the notice of removal. n3

Defendants served after a case has been removed may either accept the removal or make a motion for remand. n4

The following types of defendants do not need to join in the notice of removal:

- Unserved defendants. Any defendant that was not served with state court process need not join in the notice of removal. n5

- Nominal parties. Nominal or formal parties, being neither necessary nor indispensable, are not required to join in the notice. n6

In any case, the notice of removal should expressly indicate why one or more defendants have not joined in the removal notice. n7

Class actions governed by the Class Action Fairness Act (CAFA) may be removed by any defendant without the consent of the other defendants. n8 For a complete discussion of removal of actions under the Class Action Fairness Act, see Ch. 42, Class Actions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsNoticesCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsUnanimityCivil ProcedureRemovalWaivers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Harper v. AutoAlliance Int'l, Inc., 392 F.3d 195, 200-202 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Roe v. O'Donohue, 38 F.3d 298, 301 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1448.

(n5)Footnote 5. Salveson v. Western States Bankcard Ass'n, 731 F.2d 1423, 1429 (9th Cir. 1984) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Hewitt v. City of Stanton, 798 F.2d 1230, 1232-1233 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. P.P. Farmers' Elevator Co. v. Farmers Elevator Mut. Ins. Co., 395 F.2d 546, 548 (7th Cir. 1968) (citing Moore's).

(n8)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.64

§ 1.64 Removing to Correct Federal District Court

A defendant seeking to remove an action from state court must file a notice of removal in the federal district court for the district and division within which the state action is pending. n1 Venue principles applying to actions originally filed in the federal courts have no applicability to removed actions, and it is irrelevant that venue would not have been proper under the general venue statute in the district to which a case is properly removed. n2

Once an action has been removed to federal court, however, the action may be transferred to another district under the venue statutes. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsNoticesCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1391.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Mortensen v. Wheel Horse Prods., Inc., 772 F. Supp. 85, 89-91 (N.D.N.Y. 1991) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.65

§ 1.65 Drafting Notice of Removal

[1] Contents of Notice

The notice of removal must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds for removal. n1 The defendant must indicate plainly that the requirements for federal jurisdiction are satisfied on the basis of one or more of the following:

- Federal question jurisdiction
- Diversity jurisdiction
- Jurisdiction based on special removal statutes

In a case removed on the basis of federal question jurisdiction, the removal notice must allege that the case arises under federal law, and identify the statutory basis for the claim. n2 In a case removed on the basis of diversity of citizenship, the removal notice must allege complete diversity of citizenship at the time the case was filed in state court and at the time of removal. The notice must also allege facts showing that the amount in controversy requirement is met. n3 If nondiverse state court defendants are voluntarily dismissed or abandoned before the filing of the removal notice, the notice only needs to allege diversity as of the filing of the removal notice, and must explain why diversity is not being alleged at the time of the filing of the complaint. n4

[2] Signing Pursuant to Rule 11 Required

The notice of removal must be signed pursuant to Rule 11. n5 Rule 11 authorizes the imposition of sanctions if papers are filed containing statements that are not well-grounded in fact and warranted by law. n6

[3] Joining of All Served Defendants Required

All defendants served with summons in an action must consent to the removal. n7 All consenting defendants need not actually sign the initial notice of removal if those defendants who have not signed the notice of removal subsequently file, within the time provided for filing the notice of removal, their own written statement stating that they agree to the removal. n8 However, a mere statement by the initial removing defendant that the other parties consent to, or do not object to, the removal does not satisfy this requirement. n9 However, a defendant with an independent right of removal, such as a federal agency or officer, may remove the entire case without the consent of other defendants. n10 Nominal defendants, persons against whom no real relief is sought, need not join in the petition. n10.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisCases Involving Federal OfficersCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisDiversity of CitizenshipCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisFederal QuestionsCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsNoticesCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsUnanimity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Laughlin v. Kmart Corp., 50 F.3d 871, 873 (10th Cir. 1995).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Leonard v. Enterprise Rent a Car, 279 F.3d 967, 972-973 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Adams v. Lederle Labs., 569 F. Supp. 234, 243 (W.D. Mo. 1983).

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U.S. 192 (1894).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Miami Herald Publ'g Co. v. Ferre, 606 F. Supp. 122, 124 (S.D. Fla. 1984) ; Albonetti v. GAF Corp. Chem. Group, 520 F. Supp. 825, 828 (S.D. Tex. 1981).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Roe v. O'Donohue, 38 F.3d 298, 301 (7th Cir. 1994).

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1442(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10.1. See Thorn v. Amalgamated Transit Union, 305 F.3d 826, 833 (8th Cir. 2002) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.66

§ 1.66 Filing Notice of Removal and State Court Papers

[1] Deadline for Filing Notice of Removal

The defendant must file a notice of removal within 30 days after the earlier of the following: n1

- The date when the defendant receives, through service or otherwise, a copy of the initial pleading setting forth the claim for relief on which the action or proceeding is based (if that initial pleading shows the basis for removal)

- The date on which the defendant receives a copy of a pleading, motion, or order from which it first may be ascertained that the case has become removable, but, in a diversity case, in no event more than one year after the original complaint was filed

[2] Filing Notice of Removal in Proper Federal District Court

The notice of removal must be filed in the federal district court in the district and for the division in which the state court action is pending. n2 The notice of removal must be filed with a copy of all state court process, pleadings, and orders served on the removing defendant in the action. n3

Promptly after filing a notice of removal, the defendant or defendants must give separate written notice of the filing to all adverse parties and must file a copy of each notice with the clerk of the state court where the case was filed. n4

Removal is effected once the copy of notice served on adverse parties has been filed with the court. Once the case is removed, the state court may not proceed unless and until the case is remanded. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsNoticesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.67

§ 1.67 Renewed Jury Demand Usually Not Required

Under the Federal Rules, if either party demanded a jury trial in accordance with state law prior to the removal, that demand need not be repeated in federal court after removal. If the case was removed from a state court that does not require an express demand for a jury, no demand need be made after removal unless the district court requests it. n1 Federal courts will indulge every reasonable presumption against waiver of the jury trial right. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsNotices

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lutz v. Glendale Union High Sch., 403 F.3d 1061, 1064-1065 (9th Cir. 2005) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.68

§ 1.68 All State Court Proceedings Occurring Prior to Removal Remain in Effect Upon Removal

The federal removal statute provides that all state court injunctions and orders, and other state court proceedings occurring prior to removal remain in effect upon removal, until dissolved or modified by the district court. Likewise, all bonds, undertakings, or security given by any party prior to removal of the action from state court to federal court will remain valid and effectual, notwithstanding the removal. n1

A temporary restraining order granted by the state court prior to removal is extended automatically upon removal, until dissolved or modified by the district court. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsNotices

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1450.

(n2)Footnote 2. Morning Tel. v. Powers, 450 F.2d 97 (2d Cir. 1971) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.69

§ 1.69 Remanding Case

[1] Forcing Remand by Joining Non-Diverse Party

If, after removal, the plaintiff seeks to join additional defendants whose joinder would destroy subject matter jurisdiction, the court may deny joinder, or permit joinder and remand the action. n1

[2] Moving for Remand

An action that has been removed to federal court may be remanded sua sponte by the court, or on motion by any of the parties. n2 Remand may be had on either statutory grounds or nonstatutory grounds. Statutory grounds for remand are: n3

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction
- Procedurally defective removal

Nonstatutory grounds for remand include:

- Abstention; n4 and
- Interpretation of a forum selection clause n5

A federal court may not remand a removed case over which the court would otherwise have jurisdiction solely because of a crowded court docket. n6

After dismissing all federal claims, a district court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over remaining state-law claims and remand the case on that basis. Such remand is entirely within the court's discretion. n6.1

[3] Deadline for Motion Seeking Remand

A motion for remand based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction may be made at any time by either the court or any of the parties. n7 In diversity cases, the crucial time for a jurisdiction determination is at the time of removal. n7.1

A motion for remand based on procedural defects must be made within 30 days of the filing of the notice of removal or the right to object to removal is waived. n8 The 30-day period runs from the day the notice was filed, not from the day plaintiff was served with the notice, and is not extended if the notice is served by mail. n9

[4] Moving for Costs and Attorney's Fees Following Remand

Counsel who has succeeded in remanding a case to state court may move for attorney's fees, costs (including filing fees, process service fees and similar fees), and any actual expenses incurred as a result of the removal. Awards of these amounts are a matter of the district court's discretion. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsJurisdictional DefectsCivil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsProcedural DefectsCivil ProcedureRemovalWaivers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(e).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 716-719, 116 S. Ct. 1712, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1996) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Travelers Ins. Co. v. Keeling, 996 F.2d 1485, 1488 n.2 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Thermtron Prods., Inc. v. Hermansdorfer, 423 U.S. 336, 342 (1976).

(n7)Footnote 6.1. Carlsbad Technology, Inc. v. HIF Bio, Inc., -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1862, 173 L. Ed. 2d 843, 849 (2009).

(n8)Footnote 7. See 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n9)Footnote 7.1. Campbell v. Stone Ins., Inc., 509 F.3d 665, 669 (5th Cir. 2007).

(n10)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n11)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n12)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
E. Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.70 through 1.79

[Reserved]

§§ 1.70[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
1. Deadlines for Responding; Denials and Affirmative Defenses

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.80

§ 1.80 Deadline for Responding to the Complaint

[1] General Rule: 21 Days to Respond to Complaint

As a general rule, a party must respond within 21 days after being served with a complaint, counterclaim, or cross-claim. n1

The 21-day rule applies as follows:

- Answer to complaint. A defendant must serve an answer or motion to dismiss within 21 days after being served with the summons and complaint. n2 Unless the court orders otherwise, an answer to an amended complaint must be made within the time remaining to respond to the original complaint or within 14 days after service of the amended complaint, whichever is later. n3

- Answer to cross-claim. A cross-defendant served with a pleading stating a cross-claim must serve an answer or motion to dismiss within 21 days after being served with the pleading containing the cross-claim. n4

- Answer to counterclaim. The plaintiff must answer or move to dismiss a counterclaim asserted in the answer within 21 days after service of the answer. n5

A party must serve a reply to an answer within 21 days after being served with an order to reply, unless the order specifies a different time. n6

For complete discussion of pre-answer motions pursuant to Rule 12, see Ch. 3, Rule 12 Motions.

[2] Computing 21-Day Period

The 21-day period for responding begins to run the day after service of the pleading to which the response is directed. Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays are counted as part of the 21-day period. However, if the last day of the 21-day period is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period is extended and ends on the first day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n7

A party served with a pleading by any of the following methods has three additional days to respond to the pleading: n8

- Service by mail
- Service to the clerk of the court based on no known address
- Electronic or other means of delivery consented to in writing

Legal holiday means: n9

- The day set aside by statute for observing New Year's Day, Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day, or Christmas Day
- Any day declared a holiday by the President or Congress
- For periods that are measured after an event, any holiday declared a holiday by the state where the district court is located

[3] United States, Foreign States, and Political Subdivisions Must Respond Within 60 Days

The United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States sued in an official capacity, must respond to a complaint, cross-claim, or counterclaim within 60 days after the U.S. Attorney is served with the pleading asserting the claim. n10

An officer or employee of the United States sued in an individual capacity for acts or omissions occurring in connection with the performance of duties on behalf of the United States must serve a response to the complaint, cross-claim, or counterclaim within 60 days after service on the officer or employee, or service on the U.S. Attorney, whichever is later. n11

Likewise, if the defendant is a foreign state or a political subdivision, agency or instrumentality of a foreign state, the defendant must serve an answer or other responsive pleading to the complaint within 60 days after service is made. n12

[4] Deadline for Responsive Pleading Extended If Service of Process Is Waived

The time period for responding is extended if the defendant timely waives service of process at the plaintiff's request. n13 If service of process was waived, the defendant must respond to the complaint within one of the following time limits: n14

- 60 days from the date the request for waiver was sent, if the request was sent within the United States
- 90 days from the date the request for waiver was sent, if the request was sent to a foreign country

[5] Responding After Serving Pre-Answer Motion

Defendants, including counter-defendants and cross-defendants, may raise certain defenses and objections by motion before responding to a pleading. A defendant may make any or all of the following motions before serving an answer:

- Motion to dismiss n15
- Motion for more definite statement n16
- Motion to strike n17

As a general rule, if the defendant serves one of the above Rule 12 pre-answer motions, the defendant need not serve an answer until 14 days after receiving notice of the court's action. n18

The 14-day time period applicable when a motion is filed under Rule 12 has been held not to apply when a motion is filed under a different rule, such as Rule 56, which governs motions for summary judgment. n19

[6] Responding to Amended or Supplemental Pleading

If a party amends its pleading pursuant to Rule 15, the other party must serve a response within the time remaining for responding to the original pleading, or within 14 days of service of the amendment, whichever period is longer. n20

If the court permits a party to serve a supplemental pleading, it may order the adverse party to respond within a specified period of time. n21

[7] Obtaining Extension of Time to File Pleading or Motion

A party may request that the court enlarge the time period for filing a pleading, a motion, or a response to a motion. A request for enlargement may be made before or after the time period has expired. The court has discretion to grant such a request "for cause shown." n22

If the time period has already expired, the request must be made by motion. If the time period has not expired, the request may be made with or without motion or notice. Thus, the requesting party does not have to file a formal motion for enlargement. The prudent course, however, is always to file a motion when requesting an enlargement. n23 Counsel must check the individual judge's rules on extensions.

If the time period has already expired, the court will extend the time period only if the party can establish excusable neglect. n24

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(C).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(6).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(3); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(i)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1608(d).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4).

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Hathaway v. Coughlin, 841 F.2d 48, 50 n.1 (2d Cir. 1988).

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3).

(n21)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n22)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n24)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b); see Dimmitt v. Ockenfels, 407 F.3d 21, 23-24 (1st Cir. 2005) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

62 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
1. Deadlines for Responding; Denials and Affirmative Defenses

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.81

§ 1.81 Some Defenses and Objections Are Waived If Not Raised in Responsive Pleading

The defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction, improper venue, insufficiency of process, or insufficiency of service of process are waived: n1

- If omitted from a pre-answer Rule 12 motion
- If it is neither made by motion nor included in a responsive pleading or an amendment thereof permitted by Rule 15(a) to be made as a matter of course

The following defenses and objections are so fundamental that they are not waived if omitted from a Rule 12(b) motion or from a responsive pleading: n2

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction
- Failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted
- Failure to join an indispensable party
- Failure to state a legal defense to a claim

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2), (h)(3).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
1. Deadlines for Responding; Denials and Affirmative Defenses

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.82

§ 1.82 Raising Defenses and Denials

A defending party must state in short and plain terms its responses to each claim asserted in the complaint, and must admit or deny each averment. If the defendant lacks sufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of a statement, the defendant must so state; this has the effect of a denial. n1 A party that intends in good faith to deny only part of an allegation must admit the part that is true and deny the rest. n2

The following defenses can be raised either by motion or responsive pleading: n3

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction
- Lack of personal jurisdiction
- Improper venue
- Insufficient process
- Insufficient service of process
- Failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted
- Failure to join an indispensable party under Rule 19

For complete discussion of pre-answer motions pursuant to Rule 12, see Ch. 3, Rule 12 Motions. If a Rule 12 motion is filed, all of the applicable foregoing grounds for dismissal must be included or are waived.

Failure to deny an averment in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required, other than those as to the amount of damages, is deemed an admission. n4 An admission in an answer is binding on the defendant.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(4).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

64 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
1. Deadlines for Responding; Denials and Affirmative Defenses

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.83

§ 1.83 Pleading Affirmative Defenses

An affirmative defense, if accepted by the court, will defeat an otherwise legitimate claim for relief. In a responsive pleading, generally the answer, the defendant must set forth affirmatively the following defenses and any other matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense: n1

- Accord and satisfaction
- Arbitration and award
- Assumption of risk
- Contributory negligence
- Duress
- Estoppel
- Failure of consideration
- Fraud
- Illegality
- Injury by fellow servant
- Laches
- License
- Payment

- Release
- Res judicata
- Statute of frauds
- Statute of limitations n2
- Waiver n3

Failure to raise the affirmative defense may result in waiver. n4 The effect of waiver is that evidence relating solely to the defense may not be admitted at trial, at a summary judgment hearing, or at any similar proceeding. n5 A motion for summary judgment may not be granted based on an affirmative defense which a party has failed to plead. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Youren v. Tintic Sch. Dist., 343 F.3d 1296, 1302-1303 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Western World Ins. Co. v. Stack Oil, Inc., 922 F.2d 118, 121-122 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. S. Wallace Edwards & Sons, Inc. v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 353 F.3d 367, 372-373 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Saks v. Franklin Covey Co., 316 F.3d 337, 350-351 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Jones v. District of Columbia Dep't of Corrs., 429 F.3d 276, 278-280 (D.C. Cir. 2005) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
1. Deadlines for Responding; Denials and Affirmative Defenses

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.84

§ 1.84 Filing Corporate Disclosure Statement

[1] Determining Who Must File Disclosure Statement

To enable judges to make informed decisions concerning possible disqualification based on financial interest, all nongovernmental corporate parties must file two copies of a statement that either: n1

- Identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock
- Indicates that there is not a parent corporation nor any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock

[2] Filing Disclosure Statement

A corporate party must: n2

- File the Rule 7.1 statement with its first appearance, pleading, petition, motion, response, or other request addressed to the court
- Promptly file a supplemental statement if any required information changes

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDisqualifications & RecusalsGroundsFinancial Interests

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
1. Deadlines for Responding; Denials and Affirmative Defenses

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.85 through 1.89

[Reserved]

§§ 1.85[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
2. Counterclaims, Cross-Claims, and Replies

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.90

§ 1.90 Asserting Counterclaims

[1] Counterclaims Must State Affirmative Claim for Relief

Counterclaims are affirmative claims for relief asserted by a defending party against the plaintiff or other opposing party. Counterclaims may either arise from the same transaction or occurrence as, or exist independently of, the subject matter of the original pleader's underlying claim. n1 Counterclaims should be distinguished from affirmative defenses, which challenge the plaintiff's legal right to bring an action but do not permit the pleader to recover damages or other relief. n2 A counterclaim may request injunctive relief if it meets the requirements for pleading an injunction. n2.1 Similarly, a counterclaim may demand declaratory relief if it meets the requirements for pleading the existence of a case or controversy between the parties. n2.2

[2] Distinguishing Between Compulsory and Permissive Counterclaims

A defending party must plead as a counterclaim any claim that, at the time of its service, the pleader has against an opposing party if the claim: n2.3

- Arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim; and
- Does not require adding another party over whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction

The defendant must plead any compulsory counterclaims that the party has at the time of serving the pleading against any opposing party or will lose to right to raise the claim in a later action. A counterclaim is compulsory if a "logical relationship" exists between the claim and the counterclaim. n3

If the claim does not arise out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim, it is a permissive counterclaim. Claims that do not meet the test for compulsory counterclaims are permissive counterclaims. n4

[3] General Rule: Compulsory Counterclaims Must Be Pleaded or Waived

If a party fails to assert a claim that was compulsory in a prior federal or state court action that reached final judgment, the claim will be barred. While the claim will not be barred unless a final judgment was reached in the previous action, counsel should be aware that any final judgment, including a default judgment, triggers the prohibition. n5

[4] Exceptions to General "Use or Lose" Rule

[4.--1] Exception: Counterclaim is Subject of Another Pending Action

The defendant is not required to raise a counterclaim arising from the same transaction or occurrence as the main action when it is the subject of another prior action that was pending before the federal action now asserted. This exception to the compulsory counterclaims rule is elective; a claimant may, but is not required to, file the counterclaim in the second action. The counterclaimant may elect to continue to prosecute the claim in the first-filed action. n6 However, the first action to reach final judgment generally will be dispositive and binding as to transactionally related issues in the still pending action. n7 There is, therefore, a risk to be assessed to allow two or more actions to pend simultaneously, when the same facts are involved.

[4.--2] Exception: Court Lacks Jurisdiction to Render Personal Judgment on Claim

Likewise, a defendant is not required to plead a compulsory counterclaim when the opposing party has sued using attachment or other process so that the federal court obtains only in rem or quasi in rem jurisdiction and does not have jurisdiction to render a personal judgment on the claim. n8 However, if the defendant appears in the action, and asserts any compulsory or permissive counterclaims against the plaintiff in an action over which the court has only in rem or quasi in rem jurisdiction, that defendant must plead all compulsory counterclaims against that opposing party. n9

[4.--3] Exception: Presence of Third Parties Required

Finally, a pleader is not required to assert a compulsory counterclaim which requires for its adjudication the presence of third parties over whom the court is unable to obtain jurisdiction. Although a counterclaimant may name parties needed to obtain complete relief on a compulsory counterclaim, the claim will not be considered compulsory if the court is unable to obtain personal jurisdiction over the additional defendants. n10

[4.--4] Exception: No Final Judgment Reached in Prior Action

A claim that should have been asserted as a compulsory counterclaim in a previous action will not be barred in a subsequent action if no final judgment was rendered in the first suit. n11

[4.--5] Exception: No Responsive Pleading Filed in Prior Action

A claim that should have been asserted as a compulsory counterclaim in a previous action will not be barred in a subsequent action if a responsive pleading was not required to be, or was not actually served in the first suit. A motion to dismiss is not a responsive pleading. n12

[5] After Acquired or Unripe Counterclaims Not Compulsory

A party need only "state as a counterclaim any claim which at the time of serving the pleading the pleader has against any opposing party." Counterclaims that did not accrue or mature until after service of the responsive pleading, even if transactionally related, are not compulsory in the action. n13

[6] Permissive Counterclaims Allowed in Later Action If Not Pleaded

A defendant may, but is not required to, bring any permissive counterclaims against the plaintiff or other opposing party in one action. The party may alternatively choose to bring any or all permissive claims in an independent action. n14

[7] Counterclaims Not Limited to Recoupment or Damages

Counterclaims may state independent and affirmative claims for relief, and are not limited to seeking relief that diminishes or defeats the opposing claim. A counterclaim does not have to seek the same type of relief as that of the opposing party's claim. n15 A counterclaim may seek injunctive relief, although the main claim is for damages only. n16 Likewise, a counterclaim may seek declaratory relief, although the main claim is for damages only. n17

[8] Asserting Counterclaims in Responsive Pleading

The defendant or other pleader asserting counterclaims must raise them in a responsive pleading: either the answer or a reply to an opposing party's counterclaims. n18

[9] Counterclaims Should Be Clearly Designated

Counterclaims should be clearly designated as such in the pleading. If they are not, the opposing party will not be obligated to file a reply in response. n19 As with claims stated in the complaint, counterclaims should be clearly pleaded and contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief and a demand for judgment. They should comply with all other applicable pleading standards, such as form and certification requirements. n20

[10] Counterclaims May Be Inconsistent With Affirmative Defenses

A pleader may state counterclaims that are inconsistent with affirmative defenses raised in the same pleading. n21 It is wise to state that the allegations are alternative.

[11] Deadline for Asserting Counterclaims

Unless a different time is prescribed by statute, a defendant must serve an answer containing any counterclaims within 21 days after being served with the summons and complaint. If the counterclaims are contained in the reply, it must be served within 21 days after service of the answer, or if a reply was ordered by the court, within 21 days after service of the order unless the court directs otherwise. n22

If the defendant timely waived service of summons under Rule 4(d), the defendant has 60 days after the date when the request for waiver was sent in which to serve the answer. n23

If the defendant is the United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States sued in an official capacity, the defendant has 60 days after service of the pleading upon the U.S. Attorney in which to serve the answer or the reply. n24 An officer or employee of the United States sued in an individual capacity for acts or omissions occurring in connection with the performance of duties on behalf of the United States must serve an answer containing any counterclaims within 60 days after service of the complaint on the officer or employee, or service on the U.S. Attorney, whichever is later. n25

[12] Determining Whether to Join Additional Counterclaims

The counterclaimant must join as many compulsory counterclaims as the claimant has against any opposing party. n26 The pleader may also join numerous permissive counterclaims, subject to the rules governing joinder of claims. n27

[13] Pleading Jurisdiction Over Counterclaims

[13.--1] Supplemental Jurisdiction Over Compulsory Counterclaims

Parties pleading compulsory counterclaims that do not form an independent federal jurisdiction, should allege that they fall within the supplemental jurisdiction of the district court, which has jurisdiction over claims that "form part of the same case or controversy" as the main claim over which the district court has original jurisdiction. Claimants do not have to allege an independent basis of subject-matter jurisdiction. The court has discretion to decline supplemental jurisdiction under listed circumstances. n28

Parties pleading counterclaims in a case in which the original basis of jurisdiction is diversity of citizenship may also invoke the supplemental jurisdiction of the district court, if their claims "form part of the same case or controversy" as the primary claim. While the jurisdictional statute does not permit plaintiffs to assert claims against certain third or joined parties if their joinder would destroy diversity, the prohibition does not apply to defendants raising counterclaims. The court has discretion to decline supplemental jurisdiction under listed circumstances. n29

Unless it falls within the supplemental jurisdiction of the court, a counterclaim in an action based on diversity must satisfy the jurisdictional amount. n30

[13.--2] Alleging Independent Basis of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Permissive Counterclaims

Parties pleading permissive counterclaims will have to allege an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction, since, by definition, these claims are unlikely to form part of the same case or controversy as the primary claim over which the district court has original jurisdiction. However, claims for setoff, which defeat or reduce the opposing party's claim, and do not seek affirmative relief, are generally excepted from the requirement that permissive counterclaims require an independent basis for jurisdiction. n31 However, the Seventh Circuit has determined that the supplemental jurisdiction statute governs whether the court may hear a claim for setoff that lacks an independent jurisdictional basis. n32

[13.--3] Personal Jurisdiction

A plaintiff who has submitted to the personal jurisdiction of the court by bringing suit has also submitted to the court's jurisdiction for purposes of any counterclaims brought by the defendant. n33

[14] Preserving Omitted Counterclaims Though Amendment

A party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course within: n34

- 21 days after serving it, or
- If the pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, 21 days after service of a responsive pleading or 21 days after service of a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f), whichever is earlier

Rule 15(a) provides, as to any amendment of a pleading, that the court "should freely give leave when justice so requires". n35

[15] Pleading Counterclaims Maturing or Acquired After Pleading

A pleader may, with permission of the court in a supplemental pleading, raise a counterclaim that matured or was acquired by the pleader after service of the responsive pleading. Factors the court will consider include whether: n36

- Claim will create inconvenience and confusion in the litigation process
- Pleader has unduly delayed in filing the claim

- Pleader offers a reasonable explanation for failure to earlier assert it or move to assert it
- Claim arises from the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim

[16] Determining Parties to Counterclaims

[16.--1] Asserting Claims Against Third Parties

A counterclaim may only be pleaded against an opposing party. n36.1 Opposing parties include third-party plaintiffs and the third-party defendants they have joined. For example, if an original defendant/third-party plaintiff impleads a third-party defendant under Rule 14, that third-party defendant must file any compulsory counterclaims, and may file any permissive counterclaim it has against the third-party plaintiff. n37

It is important to distinguish when a party may be joined under Rule 13(h), governing joinder of additional parties, and when a party may be brought in under the Rule 14 third-party practice provision. In order to bring a third-party complaint the requirements of Rule 14 must be satisfied. Rule 13(h) does not apply to third-party claims, but to counterclaims already existing before the court to which additional parties may be joined for the granting of complete relief. n38

[16.--2] Determining Whether to Join Additional Parties Under Rule 13(h)

A pleader may join parties required for the granting of complete relief in the determination of a counterclaim if jurisdiction of the parties can be obtained and their joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the action. n39 Additional persons may only be joined for adjudication of a claim that is already before the court against an existing party in the action. n40 The counterclaimant seeking to join additional parties should allege that the court has statutory supplemental jurisdiction over them. However, in order to join additional parties to counterclaims, the court must obtain personal jurisdiction over them. n41

When bringing in additional parties under Rule 13(h), a pleader must comply with the service and summons requirements set forth in Rules 4 and 5. Any new party to a counterclaim must be personally served. n42

[17] Pleader Does Not Waive Rule 12(b) Defenses by Filing Compulsory Counterclaims

A pleader does not waive Rule 12(b) defenses by asserting compulsory counter- claims. However, counsel should be sure to comply with Rule 12 strictures regarding consolidation, timing and preservation of defenses. n43

However, a pleader risks waiving Rule 12(b) defenses by asserting permissive counterclaims. n44

[18] Filing Jury Demand of Counterclaims

If the defendant seeks a jury trial of counterclaims in the action, a specific demand should be filed. While a general demand may include compulsory counterclaims, a demand by plaintiff for trial of all issues does not necessarily encompass counterclaims. n45

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsCompulsory CounterclaimsCivil ProcedurePleading &

PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsPermissive CounterclaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Baker by Thomas v. GMC, 522 U.S. 222, 226, 118 S. Ct. 657, 139 L. Ed. 2d 580 (1998) .

(n4)Footnote 2.2. Iowa Prot. & Advocacy Servs. v. Tanager, Inc., 427 F.3d 541, 543 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n5)Footnote 2.3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 3. Moore v. New York Cotton Exch., 270 U.S. 593, 609-610 (1926).

(n7)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b); Baker v. Gold Seal Liquors, Inc., 417 U.S. 467, 469 (1974) ; Jones v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 358 F.3d 205, 209-210 (2d Cir. 2004).

(n8)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1); Baker v. Gold Seal Liquors, Inc., 417 U.S. 467, 469 (1974).

(n9)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(2)(A); Southern Constr. Co. v. Pickard, 371 U.S. 57, 61 (1962) .

(n10)Footnote 7. See In re PCH Assoc., 949 F.2d 585, 594 (2d Cir. 1991).

(n11)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(2)(B).

(n12)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(2)(B).

(n13)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (h).

(n14)Footnote 11. See Adam v. Jacobs, 950 F.2d 89, 93 (2d Cir. 1991).

(n15)Footnote 12. In re Integrated Resources v. Integrated Resources Equity Corp., 851 F. Supp. 556, 570 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n16)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n17)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b); Baker v. Gold Seal Liquors, Inc., 417 U.S. 467, 469 (1974).

(n18)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(c).

(n19)Footnote 16. Baker by Thomas v. GMC, 522 U.S. 222, 226, 118 S. Ct. 657, 139 L. Ed. 2d 580 (1998) .

(n20)Footnote 17. Iowa Prot. & Advocacy Servs. v. Tanager, Inc., 427 F.3d 541, 543 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n21)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n22)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a); see Reiter v. Cooper, 507 U.S. 258, 263, 113 S. Ct. 1213, 122 L. Ed. 2d 604 (1993) .

(n23)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(3), 9, 10, 11(a).

(n24)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(3).

(n25)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(i), (a)(1)(C).

(n26)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n27)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(2).

(n28)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(3).

(n29)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1).

(n30)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b), 18(a).

(n31)Footnote 28. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n32)Footnote 29. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n33)Footnote 30. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n34)Footnote 31. United States ex rel. D'Agostino Excavators, Inc. v. Heyward-Robinson Co, 430 F.2d 1077, 1080-1081 (2d Cir. 1970) .

(n35)Footnote 32. See Lefkovitz v. Wagner, 395 F.3d 773, 781-782 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n36)Footnote 33. See Adam v. Saenger, 303 U.S. 59, 67-68 (1938) .

(n37)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1).

(n38)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n39)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(e).

(n40)Footnote 36.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (b); see also Transamerica Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Aviation Office of Am., Inc., 292 F.3d 384, 389-393 (3d Cir. 2002) .

(n41)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), 14.

(n42)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h), 14.

(n43)Footnote 39. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19, 20.

(n44)Footnote 40. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n45)Footnote 41. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n46)Footnote 42. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4, 5.

(n47)Footnote 43. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g), (h).

(n48)Footnote 44. See In re Arbitration Between Intercarbon Bermuda, Ltd. v. Caltex Trading & Transp. Corp., 146 F.R.D. 64, 70 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n49)Footnote 45. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
2. Counterclaims, Cross-Claims, and Replies

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.91

§ 1.91 Asserting Cross-Claims

[1] Cross-Claims Must State Affirmative Claim for Relief Against Co-Party

Cross-claims state an affirmative claim for relief by a party against a co-party, usually a co-defendant. n1

A pleader may state as a cross-claim any claim by one party against a co-party arising out of the same transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the original action or of a counterclaim. Courts conduct three inquiries to determine whether a cross-claim arose out of the same transaction or occurrence: n2

- Whether the issues of fact and law raised in the complaint and cross-claim are largely the same
- Whether substantially the same evidence will support or refute the complaint as well as the cross-claim
- Whether there is any logical relationship between the complaint and the cross-claim

A pleader may also state as a cross-claim any claim by one party against a co-party relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action. n3

A cross-claim is a permissive claim, and if the pleader chooses not to raise it in the original action it will not be barred in a subsequent independent action. n4 However, as cross-claims arise from the same transaction and occurrence as the primary claim, if other collateral estoppel elements are met, the first judgment may be binding as to transactionally related issues in any subsequent action. n5

[2] Cross-Claims Should Comply With Pleading Standards

As with claims stated in the complaint, cross-claims should be clearly pleaded and contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief and a demand for judgment. They should comply with all other applicable pleading standards, such as form and certification requirements. n6

[3] Determining Parties to Cross-Claims

[3.--1] Asserting Cross-Claims Against Co-Party

Cross-claims, by definition, may be pleaded only against co-parties. A co-party has been described as any party that is not an opposing party, but must be an already existing party in the action. n7

[3.--2] Asserting Cross-Claims Against Third-Parties

It is important to distinguish when a party may be joined under Rule 13(h), governing joinder of additional parties and when a party may be brought in under the Rule 14 third-party practice provision. In order to bring a third-party complaint the requirements of Rule 14 must be satisfied. Rule 13(h) does not apply to third-party claims, but to cross-claims already existing before the court to which additional parties may be joined for the granting of complete relief. n8

[3.--3] Determining Whether to Join Additional Parties Under Rule 13(h)

A pleader may join parties required for the granting of complete relief in the determination of a cross-claim if jurisdiction of the parties can be obtained and their joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the action. n9 Additional persons may only be joined for adjudication of a claim that is already before the court against an existing party in the action. n10

The cross-claimant seeking to join additional parties should allege that the court has statutory supplemental jurisdiction over them. However, in order to join additional parties to cross-claims, the court must obtain personal jurisdiction over them. n11

When bringing in additional parties under Rule 13(h), a pleader must comply with the service and summons requirements set forth in Rules 4 and 5. Any new party to a cross-claim must be personally served. n12

[4] Deadline for Asserting Cross-Claims

Unless a different time is prescribed by statute, a defendant must serve an answer containing any cross-claims within 21 days after being served with the summons and complaint. If the cross-claims are contained in the reply, the reply must be served within 21 days after service of the answer, or if a reply was ordered by the court, within 21 days after service of the order unless the court directs otherwise. n13

The cross-claimant must comply with the service requirements for pleadings set forth in Rule 5. n14

If the defendant timely waived service of summons under Rule 4(d), the defendant has 60 days after the date when the request for waiver was sent in which to serve the answer. n15

If the defendant is the United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States sued in an official capacity, the defendant has 60 days after service of the pleading upon the U.S. Attorney in which to serve the answer or the reply. n16 An officer or employee of the United States sued in an individual capacity for acts or omissions occurring in connection with the performance of duties on behalf of the United States has 60 days after service of the complaint on the officer or employee or service on the U.S. Attorney, whichever is later, to serve the answer or the reply. n17

[5] Alleging Jurisdiction

Parties pleading cross-claims in a case in which the original basis of jurisdiction is federal question should allege that the cross-claims fall within the supplemental jurisdiction of the district court, which has jurisdiction over claims that "form part of the same case or controversy" as the primary claim over which the district court has original jurisdiction.

Claimants then do not have to allege an independent basis of subject-matter jurisdiction. n18

Parties pleading cross-claims in a case in which the original basis of jurisdiction is diversity of citizenship may also invoke the supplemental jurisdiction of the district court, if their claims "form part of the same case or controversy" as the primary claim. While the jurisdictional statute does not permit plaintiffs to assert claims against certain third or joined parties if their joinder would destroy diversity, the prohibition does not apply to defendants raising cross-claims. n19

[6] Pleading Cross-Claims Through Amendment

A defendant may amend the answer once without leave of court to include an omitted cross-claim within 21 days after the answer was served. The defendant may move the court to amend the answer to include cross-claims if the requirements of Rule 15(a) are met. n20 The defendant may, with permission of the court in a supplemental pleading, include a later acquired cross-claim under Rule 15(d). n21

[7] Determining Whether to Join Additional Cross-Claims (Rule 18(a))

The cross-claimant may join numerous cross-claims, subject to the rules governing joinder of claims, against any co-party. n22

[8] Filing Jury Demand of Cross-Claims

A specific demand is required for a jury trial of cross-claims. n23

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsPermissive Cross-ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsTransactional Requirement

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Wheeling Downs Race Track & Gaming Ctr. v. Kovach, 226 F.R.D. 259, 261-262 (N.D. W. Va. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n5)Footnote 5. In re PCH Assoc., 949 F.2d 585, 594 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(3), 9, 10, 11(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P.13(g).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h), 14.

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19, 20.

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n11)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4, 5.

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(i), (a)(1)(C).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(2).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(3).

(n18)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n19)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n21)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n22)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g), 18(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
2. Counterclaims, Cross-Claims, and Replies

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.92

§ 1.92 Filing Answer or Reply to Counterclaim or Cross-Claim

[1] Answering Counterclaim or Cross-Claim

A party may file an answer to a cross-claim or a counterclaim denominated as such. n1

Answers to counterclaims and cross-claims are governed by the same rules as answers to complaints. For discussion of raising defenses, denials, and objections, see §§ 1.81-1.83.

[2] Failing to Answer or Reply to Counterclaim

If a pleader fails to answer or otherwise reply to a counterclaim denominated as such, it will be considered an admission of the averments within the counterclaim other than those involving damages. n2 The adverse party may seek and obtain a default judgment against a party for failing to file an answer or reply to designated counterclaims. n3

[3] Deadline for Serving Answer or Reply to Counterclaims

A plaintiff must serve an answer or reply to a counterclaim in within 21 days after service of the answer containing the counterclaim. n4 A party served by any of the following methods with a pleading containing counterclaims has three additional days to reply: n5

- Service by mail
- Service to the clerk of the court based on no known address
- Electronic or other means of delivery consented to in writing

Compliance with the service requirements for pleadings set forth in Rule 5 is required. The reply must be served to the attorney for all represented parties, and directly on any party without counsel. n6 Service may be made by delivery, by mail, or by electronic or other means consented to under Rule 5(b)(2)(D). n7 If the party has no known address, the reply may be served by leaving it with the clerk of the court. n8 The reply must be filed with the court within a reasonable time after service. n9

If the reply was ordered by the court, the party must serve a reply within 21 days after service of the order unless the court directs otherwise. n10

If the party is the United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States sued in an official capacity, the defendant has 60 days after service of the pleading upon the U.S. Attorney in which to serve the reply. n11 An officer or employee of the United States sued in an individual capacity for acts or omissions occurring in connection with the performance of duties on behalf of the United States has 60 days after service of the pleading on the officer or employee or service on the U.S. Attorney, whichever is later, to serve the reply. n12

[4] Raising Rule 12(b) Defenses to Counterclaims

A plaintiff or other counter-defendant may challenge the sufficiency of a counterclaim by moving under Rule 12(b) in the same way a defendant may challenge the plaintiff's claims. Counsel should be sure to comply with Rule 12 strictures regarding consolidation, timing and preservation of defenses. n13

[5] Answer May Assert Additional Claims

The body of the answer may itself contain affirmative claims for relief, such as counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A), (B), (C), (E), (F).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(D).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(C).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(3).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b), (g), (h).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a), 13(a), (b), (g), 14.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
F. Responding to the Complaint
2. Counterclaims, Cross-Claims, and Replies

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.93 through 1.99

[Reserved]

§§ 1.93[Reserved]

71 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.100

§ 1.100 Impleader Permits Defendant to Bring in Third-Parties

Although the plaintiff generally has control over the parties in the case, impleader gives the defendant a voice in the composition of the action. Impleader is a remedy for a defendant who believes that a third party is liable to the defendant for the plaintiff's claims. n1

The impleader rule requires that the third-party defendant's liability be derivative of or secondary to that of the third-party plaintiff (i.e., the defendant in the main action). Thus, the third-party defendant's liability must be dependent upon the outcome of the main claim or the third-party defendant must be potentially secondarily liable as a contributor to the third-party plaintiff. In other words, in order to implead a third party, the third-party plaintiff must show that if he or she is found liable to the original plaintiff, then the third-party defendant will be liable to the third-party plaintiff. n2

However, once a party has asserted a proper impleader claim, it may join any other claim, whether or not transactionally related, through the permissive claim joinder rule. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleaderCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesClaims

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14; McNeil v. Nissan Motor Co., Ltd., 365 F. Supp. 2d 206, 213-214 (D.N.H. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.101

§ 1.101 Relationship Between Impleader and Other Joinder Procedures

[1] Permissive and Compulsory Joinder Rules

Generally, the federal rules allow the plaintiff, rather than the defendant, discretion to determine the parties. Under the permissive joinder rule, persons may be joined in an action as plaintiffs if their claims are transactionally related and share any common question of law or fact. Similarly, the plaintiff or plaintiffs may join as defendants any persons against whom they assert any claims in which the right to relief arises from the same transaction and in which there will arise any question of law or fact common to all defendants. n1

A defendant may require the joinder of a party under the compulsory joinder rule. This rule requires the joinder of "necessary" parties; that is, parties that are needed for just adjudication of the claims. n2

[2] Joinder Under Counterclaim and Cross-Claim Rule

A defendant may assert counterclaims against the plaintiff and cross-claims against other defendants joined by the plaintiff. If so, the defendant acts as a plaintiff and may join other persons who were not originally joined by the plaintiff if the joinder satisfies the permissive or compulsory joinder rules. n3

Joinder in these circumstances is based on a transactional relationship between the claim against the new party and the counterclaim or cross-claim. Impleader, by contrast, is based on the derivative liability of the new party for the plaintiff's original claim. n4

[3] Interpleader

Under the interpleader rule or interpleader statutes, a person acting as a plaintiff may join two or more parties and require them to interplead when their claims are such that the plaintiff is or may be exposed to multiple liability. In this situation the nominal plaintiff, who initiates the action, may either take the part of a neutral stakeholder or may dispute liability. n5

A defendant in an existing suit who is exposed to multiple liability may obtain interpleader by way of cross-claim or counterclaim. The defendant is entitled to join the additional party or parties required for interpleader under the joinder provision of the counterclaim and cross-claim rule. n6

[4] Intervention

Intervention is a procedure by which a person may, under appropriate circumstances, join in an action even though the party has not been joined by the plaintiff, defendant, or other party under any joinder rules. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleaderCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13, 19, 20.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13, 14.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.102

§ 1.102 Impleader Is Permissive, Not Compulsory

Since impleader is not mandatory, counsel should analyze the situation carefully before bringing a third-party claim. n1

If a defending party fails to implead a third party, or if the court refuses to allow the impleader, the defending party may assert its claims against the third party in a later action. In this situation, the third party would not be bound by any findings from the original case, since it was not a party to that action. On the other hand, the third party might be able to assert collateral estoppel against the party bringing the claim in the later suit. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleaderCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a); Richards v. Jefferson County, Ala., 517 U.S. 793, 797, 116 S. Ct. 1761, 135 L. Ed. 2d 76 (1996) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

74 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.103

§ 1.103 Only Defending Parties May Implead

Any "defending party" may assert an impleader claim as a third-party defendant. The term "defending party" includes not only the named defendant but also any party against whom a claim is asserted. The rule expressly allows a third-party defendant who has been impleaded to implead additional parties. n1

When a claim has been asserted against a plaintiff, the plaintiff may implead a third party under circumstances that would allow any defendant to do so. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleaderCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

75 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.104

§ 1.104 Leave of Court Not Required If Third-Party Complaint Is Served Within 14 Days After Serving Answer

The third-party plaintiff does not need to obtain leave of court to implead a third-party defendant if the third-party plaintiff files the third-party complaint not later than 14 days after serving the original answer. n1 The filing of an amended complaint that substantially adopts the allegations of the first complaint does not afford a new opportunity to implead without leave of court. n2

If leave of court to implead is required, notice of the motion must be served on all parties to the action. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleaderCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a); United Nat'l Ins. Corp. v. Jefferson Downs Corp., 220 F.R.D. 456, 457-458 (M.D. La. 2003).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.105

§ 1.105 Asserting Additional Claims Against Third-Party Defendant

The impleader rule allows joinder of a third party only if the claim against the third party is based on derivative liability. However, once a third-party plaintiff properly impleads a third-party defendant, the third-party plaintiff, under the permissive claim joinder rule, may then assert any other claims he or she has against the third-party defendant, irrespective of whether they are transactionally related. The additional claims are proper only if the impleader is proper. n1

Any claim brought under the permissive claim joinder rule will need to satisfy a basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. Moreover, the court has great discretion to order severance or separate trials of separate claims. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleaderCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a) (impleader), Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a) (joinder of claims).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21, 42(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.106

§ 1.106 Asserting Claims Against Original Plaintiff

[1] Third-Party Defendant May Assert Claims Against Plaintiff

The impleader rule allows the third-party defendant, after being impleaded, to assert any transactionally related claims against the original plaintiff. Such claims are permissive, and not mandatory. Failing to assert the claims does not prejudice the third-party defendant's ability to pursue the claims in a separate proceeding. n1

Claims by the third-party defendant against the original plaintiff, as permitted by the impleader rule, are not considered to be either counterclaims or cross-claims. Because no affirmative claim between the third-party defendant and the original plaintiff is raised by the impleader, they are not opposing parties. Nor are they co-parties. Consequently, claims of this type are not governed by the requirements of Rule 13, the counterclaim and cross-claim rule. n2

[2] Claims Must Be Transactionally Related to Main Claim

The claims against the plaintiff are proper under the impleader rule only if they arise out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff who brought about the impleader. Unrelated claims may not be joined under this rule. n3

[3] Deadline for Bringing Claim Against Original Plaintiff

Rule 14 is silent as to when a claim by the third-party defendant against the original plaintiff should be asserted, or whether leave of court is required. Accordingly, it seems clear that the third-party defendant should be able to assert the claim without seeking court permission. The court should guard against the prejudice that might be caused by the third-party defendant's delay in asserting the claim. Thus, it should grant a motion to strike or order a separate trial in appropriate circumstances. n4

[4] Joining Additional Claims Against Original Plaintiff

The impleader rule allows the third-party defendant to bring only transactionally related claims against the plaintiff. However, once the third-party defendant does assert a proper claim against the plaintiff under the impleader rule, the third-party defendant may use the unlimited claim joinder rule to join any additional claims against the plaintiff, irrespective of whether the claims are transactionally related. n5

[5] Response by Plaintiff

Once the third-party defendant asserts a claim against the original plaintiff, the two become "opposing parties" under the counterclaim rule. The plaintiff therefore must assert any transactionally related claims against the third-party defendant as compulsory counterclaims, and may assert any unrelated claims against the third-party defendant as permissive counterclaims. n6

[6] Court Must Have Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Claim Asserted Against Original Plaintiff

The impleader rule prescribes the procedural circumstances in which certain claims may be asserted. However, the Rules do not extend the jurisdiction of the federal courts. Thus, any claim brought under the impleader rule must satisfy federal subject matter jurisdiction requirements. n7

A district court has supplemental jurisdiction if the claim is so related to the main claim (over which the court has original jurisdiction) that it forms "part of the same case or controversy" under the jurisdictional grant of Article III of the United States Constitution. Because the claim by the third-party defendant against the original plaintiff may be brought only if it is transactionally related to the main claim, the two claims are necessarily related in such a manner that supplemental jurisdiction exists. n8

In diversity cases, the courts cannot exercise supplemental jurisdiction over claims by plaintiffs against persons made parties under certain joinder rules, including the impleader rule, if this would defeat the complete diversity requirement of the diversity jurisdiction statute. Since the third-party defendant is not considered a plaintiff, this provision does not prevent supplemental jurisdiction over the claim by the third-party defendant against the original plaintiff, even though the two may not be diverse in citizenship. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsCompulsory CounterclaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsPermissive CounterclaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleaderCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Caterpillar, Inc. v. Lewis, 519 U.S. 61, 67 (1996) (quoting Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f), 42(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

78 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.107

§ 1.107 Impleading New Parties

The third-party defendant, once impleaded, is entitled to implead additional parties under the impleader rule. Impleader claims of this type are sometimes referred to as "fourth-party" claims. n1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Interstate Power Co. v. Kansas City Power & Light Co., 992 F.2d 804, 806 (8th Cir. 1993) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
G. Impleader

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.108 through 1.119

[Reserved]

§§ 1.108[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.120

§ 1.120 Amending Once as a Matter of Course

A party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course within:

- 21 days after serving it n1

- If the pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, 21 days after service of a responsive pleading or 21 days after service of a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f), whichever is earlier n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.121

§ 1.121 Moving for Leave to Amend

Leave of court to amend is required if either: n1

- The party seeking to amend has already amended once as of right
- The time period to amend has elapsed

Although leave of court to amend a pleading will be freely given when justice so requires, local rules may require a party seeking leave to amend to file a written motion. Some courts may therefore deny oral requests to amend a pleading, even when such a request is made on the record. n2 Accordingly, parties should consult local rules before requesting leave to amend pleadings. A motion for leave to amend a pleading should be stated with particularity, n3 and should also include a copy of the proposed pleading. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Belizan v. Hershon, 434 F.3d 579, 582 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Evans v. Pearson Enters., Inc., 434 F.3d 839, 853-854 (6th Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Gaskin v. Pennsylvania, 231 F.R.D. 195, 196 n.1 (E.D. Penn. 2005) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.122

§ 1.122 Amendment Freely Permitted

Leave to amend will be freely given when justice so requires. n1 There is a preference that amendments be permitted. n2 Refusal to grant leave to amend without reason is an abuse of discretion, unless an obviously correct reason for denying leave appears from the record. n3

A district court must possess a substantial reason to deny a request for leave to amend. However, the decision is entrusted to the sound discretion of the district court. In the Fifth Circuit, the court examines five considerations: n4

- Undue delay
- Bad faith or dilatory motive
- Repeated failure to cure deficiencies by previous amendments
- Undue prejudice to the opposing party
- Futility of the amendment.

Absent any of these factors, leave should be freely given. Courts will consider the legal sufficiency of the proposed amended pleading in determining whether to grant the motion to amend. n5

A potential conflict may arise between Rules 15 and 16. Rule 15 requires a court to freely grant leave to amend, and "mere delay" is not sufficient reason to deny leave. Rule 16, on the other hand, allows the court to set time limits for amendments and other pretrial matters. n6 Under this rule, the scheduling order may not be modified except on a showing of "good cause." A number of circuits have considered this issue in ruling that the Rule 16 "good cause" standard, rather than the more lenient Rule 15 standard, governs a motion to amend filed after the deadline a district court has set for amending the pleadings. n7

Courts considering motions to amend made late in the litigation process should consider the prejudicial effect that granting the motion would have on the defendant. n8 After final judgment, a plaintiff may not file an amended complaint unless the judgment is set aside or vacated under Rules 59(e) or 60(b). Courts have generally refused to allow a postjudgment amendment when the moving party had an opportunity to seek the amendment before entry of judgment, but waited until after judgment before requesting leave. n9

The "clearly erroneous" standard is generally applied in an appeal challenging a denial of a motion for leave of court to amend. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962) ; California Pub. Employees' Ret. Sys. v. Chubb Corp., 394 F.3d 126, 163-166 (3d Cir. 2004) (district court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend in a securities fraud case in which the plaintiffs had been given ample opportunity to amend and had not brought forth facts sufficient to meet the pleading standards of the PSLRA).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lone Star Ladies Inv. Club v. Schlotzsky's, Inc., 238 F.3d 363, 367-368 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Smith v. EMC Corp., 393 F.3d 590, 595-596 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Brereton v. Bountiful City Corp., 434 F.3d 1213, 1219 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R.Civ. P. 16.

(n7)Footnote 7. See S&W Enters., LLC v. South Trust Bank, N.A., 315 F.3d 533, 535-537 (5th Cir. 2003) ; O'Connell v. Hyatt Hotels, 357 F.3d 152, 154 (1st Cir. 2004) ; Leary v. Daeschner, 349 F.3d 888, 905-909 (6th Cir. 2003) ; Rent-A-Center, Inc. v. 47 Mamaroneck Ave. Corp., 215 F.R.D. 100, 104 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Austin v. Mariner Health Care, Inc., 226 F.R.D. 548 (N.D. Miss. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Benzon v. Morgan Stanley Distribs., Inc., 420 F.3d 598, 612-614 (6th Cir. 2005) ; see also The Tool Box, Inc. v. Ogden City Corp., 419 F.3d 1084, 1087-1088 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fielding v. Tollaksen, 510 F.3d 175, 178 (2d Cir. 2007) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.123

§ 1.123 Effect of Amendment

An amended pleading generally supersedes the original and renders it of no legal effect. n1

Amendments to pleadings may revive the right to a jury trial. Specifically, the right to a jury trial is waived if the demand is not made within 14 days of service of the last pleading related to that issue. n2 Amendments to the pleadings will revive the right to a jury trial if the amendments involve new issues or change the original issue.

Rule 15 allows a party to amend despite the running of an applicable state statute of limitations when parties are sufficiently on notice of the facts and claims that gave rise to the proposed amendment. n3 It is implicit in the rule that in order to amend, a party must have a pleading on file. n4 However, an amendment generally relates back to the original pleading filed in the current matter in federal court. n5 The rationale of allowing an amendment to relate back is that once a party is notified of litigation involving a specific factual occurrence, the party has received all the notice and protection that the statute of limitations requires. n6 An amendment naming a new party relates back to the original complaint when the new party had adequate notice of the action and should have known that it would have been named in the complaint but for a mistake--whether the mistake was a mere misnomer or was based on lack of knowledge of the true identity of the defendant. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsRelation BackCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., International Controls Corp. v. Vesco, 556 F.2d 665, 668 (2d Cir. 1977) , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1014 (1978) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c); see also Kansa Rein. v. Congressional Mortgage Corp., 20 F.3d 1362, 1366 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Kansa Rein. v. Congressional Mortgage Corp., 20 F.3d 1362, 1367-1368 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lucchesi v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 226 F.R.D. 172, 174-175 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Baldwin County Welcome Ctr. v. Brown, 466 U.S. 147, 150 n.3, 104 S. Ct. 1723, 80 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1984) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Arthur v. Maersk, Inc., 434 F.3d 196, 207-209 (3d Cir. 2006) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.124

§ 1.124 Responding to Amended Pleading

Unless the court orders otherwise, a party must respond to an amended pleading either within the time remaining for response to the original pleading, or within 14 days after service of the amended pleading, whichever is the longer time period. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsRelation BackCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

85 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.125

§ 1.125 Supplemental Pleadings Focus on New Events

A pleading may be supplemented to include transactions, occurrences, or events that happened after the original pleading in the action has been filed and served. n1 Under Rule 15(d), a party may supplement its complaint even though the original pleading is defective in its statement of a claim for relief. n2 Supplementing differs from amending in that the focus is on subsequent events related to the original pleading. n3

Supplementary pleadings are permissive, not compulsory. n4 Accordingly, a plaintiff who elects not to file a supplemental pleading to assert claims that arise during the pendency of a lawsuit is not barred by res judicata from pursuing those claims in a later action. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsRes Judicata

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d); see also Alabama v. United States Army Corps of Eng'rs, 382 F. Supp. 2d 1301, 1329-1331 (N.D. Ala. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Franks v. Ross, 313 F.3d 184, 198-199 (4th Cir. 2002) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Owens Illinois, Inc. v. Lake Shore Land Co., 610 F.2d 1185, 1188 (3d Cir. 1979) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.126

§ 1.126 Supplementation Requires Leave of Court

A party seeking to file a supplemented pleading must obtain leave of court. n1 Although not expressly mandated by the Rules, it has been held that the amended pleading requirement that leave of court be freely granted also applies to supplemental pleadings. n2

The court may allow a party to file a supplemental pleading at any stage in the lawsuit. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. D. C. Precision, Inc. v. United States Gov't, 73 F. Supp. 2d 338, 342 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Novak v. National Broad. Co., 724 F. Supp. 141, 145 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

87 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.127

§ 1.127 Adding Omitted Counterclaim by Amending Pleading

A party may amend an answer to add an omitted counterclaim in the manner prescribed by Rule 15. n1 Under Rule 15, a party may amend its answer once as a matter of course. The deadline for amending as a matter of course depends on whether the answer already contains a counterclaim. If the answer to be amended contains no counterclaim, and the proposed amendment seeks to add an omitted counterclaim, a party may amend its answer as a matter of court within 21 days after serving it. n2 If the answer already contains at least one counterclaim, and the party seeks to add an additional counterclaim, the answer may be a pleading "to which a responsive pleading is required." This would mean that the party may amend its answer as a matter of course within 21 days after service of a responsive pleading to the existing counterclaim, or within 21 days after service of a Rule 12 motion attacking the existing counterclaim, whichever 21-day period concludes first. n3 After the time for an amendment as a matter of course has expired, a party still may amend its answer to add an omitted counterclaim, but only with leave of court or the written consent of the opposing party. n4

When leave of court is required for an amendment, the court should freely grant leave "when justice so requires. n5 The court should favor granting leave to amend absent a showing of undue delay, bad faith, or prejudice to the opposing party. n6 The fact that an omitted counterclaim is compulsory increases the desirability of an amendment, because the omitted claim would otherwise be barred in a subsequent action if not allowed in the present action. n7 On the other hand, a court may deny a motion to amend if the counterclaim is meritless and the amendment would prove futile. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Pioneer Inv. Serv. Co. v. Brunswick Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 507 U.S. 380, 392 n.10, 113 S. Ct. 1489, 123 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1993) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Salomon S.A. v. Alpina Sports Corp., 737 F. Supp. 720, 721-722 (D.N.H. 1990) (citing Moore's).

(n8)Footnote 8. Frank M. McDermott, Ltd. v. Moretz, 898 F.2d 418, 420-421 (4th Cir. 1990) (citing Moore's).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
H. Amending and Supplementing Pleadings

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 1.128 through 1.139

[Reserved]

§§ 1.128[Reserved]

89 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.140

§ 1.140 Understanding Misjoinder and Non-Joinder

[1] Non-Joinder

Non-joinder generally results from a failure to join a "necessary party" whose presence in the lawsuit is required under the compulsory joinder doctrine. n1 The plaintiff's failure to join a necessary party may be cured under Rule 21, which provides that parties may be added by order of the court on motion of any party, or sua sponte, at any stage of the proceedings, "on such terms as are just". n2

[2] Misjoinder

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not define misjoinder. Several district courts have stated that parties are misjoined if the claims asserted against them do not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence, or do not present some common question of law and fact. For example:

- Corporation and its officers were improperly joined in civil rights action against subsidiary n3
- Claims alleging systematic gender discrimination by individuals in employer's management group were not misjoined n4
- Parties were not misjoined when fraud/conversion claims arose from the same transaction and presented common issues n5

Misjoinder may also result from the plaintiff's mistake in naming the wrong party or violating a statutory ban on joinder. n6

Rule 21 provides for dropping parties to cure misjoinder. Parties may be dropped by order of the court on motion of any party, or sua sponte, at any stage of the proceedings, "on such terms as are just." n7 Rule 21 also provides for severance of parties as a cure for misjoinder. n8 Likewise, Rule 21 authorizes severance of any claim, even without a finding of improper joinder, when there are sufficient other reasons for ordering a severance. n9 Rule 21 severance creates separate, independent suits. n10

Dismissal of an action can not be grounded merely on misjoinder. n11

[3] Dropping Parties to Cure Lack of Diversity

Rule 21 may be used to cure lack of diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n12 When deciding whether simply to eliminate non-diverse parties to a suit rather than dismiss the entire proceeding under Rule 12(b), the court must determine whether the action may "in equity and good conscience" proceed without the nonjoined parties. n13

[4] Relationship Between Rule 21 and Rule 25

Although Rule 25 provides for substitution in limited circumstances, parties may be substituted under Rule 21 in the discretion of the court in situations not covered by Rule 25. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n3)Footnote 3. Glendora v. Malone, 917 F. Supp. 224, 227 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Henderson v. AT&T Corp., 918 F. Supp. 1059, 1061 (S.D. Tex. 1996) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Winner's Circle of Las Vegas, Inc. v. AMI Franchising, Inc., 916 F. Supp. 1024, 1029 (D. Nev. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1346.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n9)Footnote 9. Wyndham Assocs. v. Bintliff, 398 F.2d 614, 618 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Wyndham Assocs. v. Bintliff, 398 F.2d 614, 618 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n12)Footnote 12. Newman-Green, Inc v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 828 (1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Jaser v. New York Property Ins., 815 F.2d 240, 242 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Hackner v. Guaranty Trust Co., 117 F.2d 95, 98 (2d Cir. 1941) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.141

§ 1.141 Moving to Add Party

[1] Determining Grounds for Adding Party

The most common grounds for adding a party are the necessary party requirements found in the compulsory joinder rule. "Necessary parties" are: n1

- Absentees needed to grant complete relief to existing parties to the action
- Persons needed to assure that the court's judgment as a practical matter does not impair or impede that absentee's ability to protect its interest in later litigation
- Absentees who have an interest in the litigation such that their nonjoinder would leave an existing party exposed to substantial risk of multiple liability or inconsistent obligations n2
- Absentees who would be merely proper parties in the action are not subject to compulsory joinder. The plaintiff may name proper parties, or a defendant may seek to join proper parties, but their presence is not required. n3

[2] Moving to Amend Complaint

Parties may be added by order of the court pursuant to Rule 21 on motion of any party or on the court's own initiative at any stage of the action, and on such terms as are just. n4 Rule 15, governing amendments to the pleadings, may provide an additional basis for adding parties. n5

In either case, the proposed amendment should be attached to the motion to amend stating the names of the new party and the jurisdictional facts applicable.

[3] Deadline for Adding Party

A motion to add a party can be made at any stage of the action. n6

[4] Notice and Service of Motion to Add Party

There is no requirement in the Rules to provide notice to the proposed new parties of the motion to add those new parties.

[5] Order Adding Party Must Be on Just Terms

Orders adding proper parties must be made on "such terms as are just". n7 In determining just terms, the court will consider whether an order under Rule 21 would prejudice any party. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Citizen Potawatomi Nation v. Norton, 248 F.3d 993, 997-999 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Askir v. Boutros-Ghali 933 F. Supp 368, 370 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) citing In re Joint E. & S. Dists. Asbestos Litig., 124 F.R.D. 538 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) , aff'd 899 F.2d 1281 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n8)Footnote 8. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 838 (1989) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.142

§ 1.142 Opposing Motion to Add Party

Opposition to adding a party may be based on prejudice to the other parties. n1 Finally, a party's delay in seeking relief may be a basis for denying the motion. Late joinder is disfavored because it can create discovery problems. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Newman-Green, Inc., v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 838, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 , reh'g denied, 492 U.S. 932 (1989) . Also, parties may not be added to preserve an action that has become moot. See, e.g., Fox v. Board of Trustees 148 F.R.D. 474, 484-485 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) , aff'd, 42 F.3d 135 (2d Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1169 (1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Giorgio Morandi, Inc. v. Textport Corp., 761 F. Supp. 12, 14 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.143

§ 1.143 Moving to Drop Party

[1] Grounds for Motion to Drop Party

Parties may be dropped by order of the court, on motion of any party or on the court's own initiative, at any stage of the action, and on such terms as are just. n1 The most common example of misjoinder occurs when a plaintiff structures the case in violation of permissive party joinder prerequisites. Parties are misjoined if the claims asserted against them do not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence, or do not present some common question of law or fact. n2

Rule 21 may also be used to drop a properly joined party for the purpose of maintaining diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n3

[2] Avoiding Prejudice

In exercising its discretion under Rule 21, the court must consider principles offundamental fairness and judicial efficiency. n4 As part of this inquiry, the court should consider whether an order under Rule 21 would prejudice any party. n5

[3] No Deadline for Motion to Drop Party

Parties may be dropped at any stage of the action. n6 A dispensable nondiverse party may be dropped even after judgment has been rendered. n7

[4] Court May Dismiss Party but Not Action

Orders dropping parties must be made on such terms as are just. n8 The district court has great discretion in determining whether to drop parties. n9

Although misjoinder is not grounds for dismissal of an entire action, n10 the court may rely on Rule 21 to dismiss parties that have no connection to the claims asserted. n11

[5] Effect of Dropping Party

Dismissal of a misjoined party under Rule 21 is without prejudice; a claim by or against such a party may be refiled as a separate suit. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n2)Footnote 2. Glendora v. Malone, 917 F. Supp. 224, 227 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) ; see also In re High Fructose Corn Syrup Antitrust Litig., 361 F.3d 439, 441 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 832-833 (1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See German v. Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 896 F. Supp. 1385, 1400 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Newman-Green, Inc., v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 838 (1989) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n7)Footnote 7. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 832 (1989) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n9)Footnote 9. New York v. Hendrickson Bros., Inc., 840 F.2d 1065, 1082 (2d Cir. 1988) ; see also Glendora v. Malone, 917 F. Supp. 224, 227 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n11)Footnote 11. Glendora v. Malone, 917 F. Supp. 224, 227-228 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Michaels Bldg. Co. v. Ameritrust Co., 848 F.2d 674, 682 (6th Cir. 1988) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.144

§ 1.144 Severing Claim to Cure Misjoinder

[1] Grounds for Severing Claim

Rule 21 provides for severance as a cure for misjoinder of parties. n1 However, severance is not limited to misjoinder. Rule 21 authorizes the severance of any claim when there are sufficient other reasons for ordering a severance. n2

A motion to sever a claim against a party may be made by any party. n3

[2] Court's Discretion

The question of whether to enter a severance order is committed to the sound discretion of the district court. n4 In deciding whether severance is appropriate, courts generally consider the following factors: n5

- Whether the issues sought to be tried separately are significantly different from one another
- Whether the separable issues require the testimony of different witnesses and different documentary proof
- Whether the party opposing the severance will be prejudiced if it is granted
- Whether the party requesting the severance will be prejudiced if it is not granted

[3] Effect of Severance

Severance under Rule 21 results in separate actions, and the severed claim proceeds as a discrete, independent suit. It and the original case result in their own separate final judgments from which appeals may be taken. n6 If a severed claim is one of multiple claims asserted by a single plaintiff against a single defendant, both parties are involved in two separate actions. n7 A claim or counterclaim properly severed from another by virtue of Rule 21 "may be ... proceeded with separately". n8

By contrast, an order of separate trials does not result in the filing of separate cases. It leads to two or more separate factual inquiries in the context of a single, properly joined case. No matter how many separate trials the court may order, they remain part of a single case. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n2)Footnote 2. Wyndham Assocs. v. Bintliff, 398 F.2d 614, 618 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n4)Footnote 4. New York v. Hendrickson Bros., Inc., 840 F.2d 1065, 1082 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. German v. Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 896 F. Supp. 1385, 1400 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United States v. O'Neil, 709 F.2d 361, 368 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Henderson v. AT&T Corp., 918 F. Supp. 1059, 1062 (S.D. Tex. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Spencer, White & Prentis Inc. v. Pfizer Inc., 498 F.2d 358, 361 (2d Cir. 1974) .

(n9)Footnote 9. United States v. O'Neil, 709 F.2d 361, 368 (5th Cir. 1983).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.145

§ 1.145 Substituting Parties

[1] Scope of Rule 25 Substitution

Rule 25 provides for the substitution of parties under the following circumstances: n1

- Death of a party.
- Incompetency of a party
- Transfer of a party's interest
- Death or separation from office of a public official who is a party

[2] Rule 21 as Alternative to Rule 25 Substitution

Rule 25 provides for substitution only in particular circumstances. n2 Parties may, however, be added under Rule 21 in the discretion of the court in situations not covered by Rule 25. n3

[3] Procedure for Substitution on Death of Party

[3.--1] Determination of Whether Claim Survives is a Function of Substantive Law

If a party dies and the claim is not extinguished by the death, the court may order substitution of the proper parties. n4 The determination of whether a claim survives is a function of substantive law and is unaffected by Rule 25(a). n5

Federal courts will apply state law to decide whether a state law claim survives the death of a party. To determine the substantive rights involved in or as a condition to substitution in a nonfederal case, the district court must look to state law and apply the appropriate survival statute of the state in which the federal court sits. n6

In the absence of a specific federal statutory directive, the question of survival of a federal claim is determined under federal common law. The general rule under federal common law is that an action survives the death of a party if it is remedial and not penal in nature. n7

[3.--2] Deadline for Filing Motion to Substitute Based on Death of Party

Rule 25(a) establishes a time limit for the motion to substitute based not upon the time of the death, but rather based on service of a statement noting the death. n8 If the suggestion is not made of record, there is no strict time limit for the motion.

Substitution of a party for a deceased party may be accomplished by the following procedure: n9

- The motion for substitution may be made by any party or by the successors or representatives of the deceased party
- The motion must be made not later than 90 days after service of a statement noting the death
- If the motion to substitute is not timely made, the action must be dismissed as to the deceased party

In the event of the death of one or more of the plaintiffs or of one or more of the defendants in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiffs or only against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate. The death must be suggested upon the record and the action must proceed in favor of or against the surviving parties. n10

[3.--3] Substitution on Death of Party Is Discretionary

Substitution on the death of a party is discretionary. n11 A motion to substitute made within the prescribed time will ordinarily be granted, but under the permissive language of the rule, it may be denied by the court if made long after the death--as can occur if the suggestion of death is not made or is delayed--and circumstances have arisen rendering it unfair to allow substitution. n12

[3.--4] Serving and Filing Suggestion of Death

Rule 25(a)(1) contains no restriction on who may file the statement of the fact of death. There is no requirement that the statement of the fact of death must be filed by a party or a formal or appointed representative of the decedent. n13

The suggestion of death must be personally served on a representative who has been appointed for the estate of the deceased party. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsDeath of PartyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsIncompetencyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for Substitution

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25.

(n2)Footnote 2. See [1], above.

(n3)Footnote 3. Hackner v. Guaranty Trust Co., 117 F.2d 95, 98 (2d Cir. 1941) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Saylor v. Bastedo, 623 F.2d 230, 238 (2d Cir. 1980) (citing Moore's).

(n6)Footnote 6. Knauer v. Johns-Manville Corp., 638 F. Supp. 1369, 1387 (D. Md. 1986) (citing Moore's); see Barrett v. United States, 689 F.2d 324, 331 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 7. International Cablevision, Inc. v. Sykes, 172 F.R.D. 63, 67 (W.D.N.Y. 1997) (citing Moore's).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a) advisory committee note (1963).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1); Unicorn Tales, Inc. v. Banerjee, 138 F.3d 467, 469 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Barlow v. Ground, 39 F.3d 231, 234 (9th Cir. 1994).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.146

§ 1.146 Substitution for Incompetent Party

If a party becomes incompetent, the court may allow the action to be continued by or against the party's representative. n1 The rule does not define incompetency or provide for a determination of competency. State law determines incompetency and the procedure for appointment of a representative.

Rule 25(b) is discretionary, and the court can deny the motion to substitute for a good reason. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsIncompetencyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for Substitution

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

96 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.147

§ 1.147 Substitution on Assignment of Interest

In case of any assignment of interest by a party, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court upon motion directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party. n1

Courts have applied the term transfer of interest broadly to cover transfers of assets. The types of transfers of interests embraced by the rule include a corporate acquisition, change in ownership of a financial instrument, or a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy succeeding to the assets and liabilities of the debtor. n2

Rule 25(c) only applies to pending litigation. n3 The transfer must take place after the commencement of the action; transfers before the action is filed must be dealt with through amendment. n4

Rule 25(c) does not provide a deadline for filing a motion to substitute on transfer. n5 Thus, a Rule 25(c) motion may be made at any time. n6 However, the discretion vested in the court under Rule 25(c) allows denial of an untimely motion.

The court has the following three alternatives on a motion to substitute based on a transfer of interest: n7

- Keep the original party
- Substitute the transferee
- Join the transferee and keep the original party

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsTransfers of Interests

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Herrera v. Singh, 118 F. Supp. 2d 1120, 1122-1123 (E.D. Wash. 2000) ; see Trombino v. Transit Casualty Co., 110 F.R.D. 139, 147 (D.R.I. 1986) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Horphag Research Ltd. v. Consac Indus., Inc., 116 F.3d 1450, 1453 (Fed. Cir. 1997) (citing Moore's).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unison Realty Corp. v. RKO Theatres, Inc., 35 F.R.D. 232, 233 (S.D.N.Y. 1964) .

(n5)Footnote 5. General Battery Corp. v. Globe-Union, Inc., 100 F.R.D. 258, 261 (D. Del. 1982) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Air Line Pilots Ass'n Int'l v. Texas Int'l Airlines, Inc., 567 F. Supp. 78, 81 (S.D. Tex. 1983) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c).

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Pleadings *
I. Adding, Dropping, and Substituting Parties

1-1 Federal Litigation Guide § 1.148

§ 1.148 Effect of Substitution

Substitution or joinder under Rule 25(c) has no effect on subject matter jurisdiction. Even if substitution destroys complete diversity of citizenship, the court retains subject matter jurisdiction as long as proper jurisdiction was previously established by the original parties. n1 Likewise, a Rule 25(c) substitution does not effect venue or personal jurisdiction. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsTransfers of Interests

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Freeport-McMoRan Inc. v. K N Energy, Inc., 498 U.S. 426, 428-429, 111 S. Ct. 858, 112 L. Ed. 2d 951 (1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Eco-Chem, Inc., 757 F.2d 1256, 1264 (Fed. Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 1 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide 2.syn

§ 2.syn Synopsis to Chapter 2: The Mechanics of Motion Practice

§ 2.01 Use of Motions
[1] Request for Court Order
[2] Types of Pretrial Motions
[3] Frivolous Motions May Result in Sanctions

§ 2.02 Federal Rules Governing Motion Practice

§ 2.03 Importance of Local District Court Rules Governing Motion Practice

§ 2.04 Importance of Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge

§ 2.05 When to Seek Particular Relief
[1] Nature of Relief Requested Determines Timing
[2] Waiver of Right to Make Motion
[3] Complying With Motion Deadlines in Scheduling Orders

§ 2.06 Determining Hearing Officer for a Particular Motion

§§ 2.07. through 2.09 [Reserved]

§ 2.10 Distinguishing Oral Motion From Oral Argument on Written Motion

§ 2.11 Availability of Oral Motion

§§ 2.12 through 2.19 [Reserved]

§ 2.20 Considerations in Determining Whether to File Motion

§ 2.21 Stipulating in Lieu of Filing Motion
[1] Obtaining Court Approval of Stipulation
[2] Matters Typically Resolved by Stipulation
[3] Sample Forms of Stipulation
Short Form of Stipulation
Long Form of Stipulation

§ 2.22 Complying With Pre-Motion Procedures

§ 2.23 Papers Required in Support of Motion

§ 2.24 Preparing and Filing Notice of Constitutional Challenge to a Statute

§§ 2.25 through 2.29 [Reserved]

§ 2.30 Purpose of Notice of Motion

§ 2.31 Combining Motion and Notice of Motion

§ 2.32 Drafting Notice of Motion
[1] Specifying Relief Sought in Notice of Motion
[2] Scheduling Motion Return Date
[2.--1] Federal Rules Require Minimum of 14 Days' Advance Notice
[2.--2] Computing Advance Notice Period
[2.--3] Consulting Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge Before Scheduling Return Date
[2.--4] Adjourning the Motion
[3] Expediting Motion Return Date
[3.--1] Consider Pre-Motion Conference If Prompt or Immediate Court Intervention Is Necessary
[3.--2] Court May Shorten Advance Notice Otherwise Required
[4] Listing Papers Submitted in Support of Motion
[5] Specifying Grounds on Which Motion Is Predicated
[6] Request for Oral Argument If Required by Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge

§ 2.33 Seeking Ex Parte Relief

§ 2.34 Preparing Memorandum of Law

§ 2.35 Preparing Supporting Affidavits or Affidavit Substitutes
[1] Purpose of Supporting Affidavits
[2] Affidavit Substitutes (Declarations and Verifications)
Preparing Supporting Affidavits or Affidavit Substitutes
[3] Affidavits May Not Be Served Separately From Motion
[4] Affidavit Requirements

§ 2.36 Submitting Evidence in Support of Motion
[1] Documentary Evidence in Support of Motion
[2] Judicial Notice of Evidentiary Facts

§§ 2.37 through 2.39 [Reserved]

§ 2.40 Motion Papers Must Be Properly Formatted

§ 2.41 Sample Motion Forms Promulgated Under Federal Rules

§ 2.42 Clerk May Not Reject Improperly Formatted Papers

§ 2.43 Motion Papers Must Contain Signature, Address, E-mail Address, and Telephone Number

§§ 2.44 through 2.49 [Reserved]

§ 2.50 Seeking Additional Time to Act

§ 2.51 Extending Time Improper as to Certain Specified Motions

§ 2.52 Request Made Prior to Expiration of Time Period

§ 2.53 Request Made After Expiration of Time Period

§§ 2.54 through 2.59 [Reserved]

§ 2.60 All Parties, Except Defaulting Parties, Must Be Served With Motion Papers

§ 2.61 Serving Motion Papers on Attorney of Represented Party

§ 2.62 Manner of Serving Motion Papers

§ 2.63 Deadline for Filing Motion Papers

§ 2.64 Filing Deemed Complete Only When Motion Papers Received by Clerk of Court

§ 2.65 Proof of Service Required

§ 2.66 Content of Proof of Service

§ 2.67 Delivering Courtesy Copies to Assigned Judge

§ 2.68 Redacting Private Information

§§ 2.69 through 2.79 [Reserved]

§ 2.80 Determining Whether to Oppose Motion

§ 2.81 Papers Required in Opposition to Motion

§ 2.82 Deadline for Serving and Filing Opposition Papers
[1] Federal Rules Deadline for Serving Opposition Papers
[2] Extension of Deadline for Serving and Filing Opposition Papers

§ 2.83 Proof of Service Required

§ 2.84 Failure to Submit Opposition Papers

§ 2.85 Format of Opposition Papers

§§ 2.86 through 2.89 [Reserved]

§ 2.90 Cross-Motion and Counter-Motion Defined

§ 2.91 No Governing Federal Rules Regarding Cross-Motions and Counter-Motions

§ 2.92 Combining Opposition and Cross-Motion or Counter-Motion

§ 2.93 Serving and Filing Cross-Motions and Counter-Motions

§ 2.94 Seeking Enlargement of Time Within Which to Respond to Cross-Motion or Counter-Motion

§§ 2.95 through 2.99 [Reserved]

§ 2.100 No Governing Federal Rules Regarding Reply Papers

§ 2.101 Practice Tip: Proper Function of Reply Papers

§§ 2.102 through 2.109 [Reserved]

§ 2.110 Local District Court Rules and Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge Govern Oral Argument

§ 2.111 Practice Tip: Benefits of Oral Argument

§§ 2.112 through 2.119 [Reserved]

§ 2.120 Prevailing Party May Be Required to Settle Order

§ 2.121 Practice Tip: Contents of Proposed Order

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses the mechanics of motion practice. Local district court rules, as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, govern many aspects of motion practice, and those rules and procedures should be consulted in conjunction with this chapter.

The chapter covers the following topics:

- Determining whether to file a motion
- Using stipulations in lieu of motions
- Governing procedural law of anserfederal motion practice
- Oral motions
- Papers required in support of and in opposition to motions, including memoranda of law and affidavits or affidavit substitutes
- Scheduling the motion return date, and expediting the return date
- Obtaining ex parte relief
- Motions to enlarge (extend) time
- Serving and filing motion papers
- Opposing the motion and replying to opposition papers
- Filing cross-motions or counter-motions
- Oral argument of motions

- Settling orders

For expanded coverage of motion practice in general, see Moore's Federal Practice,, Ch. 5, Service and Filing of Pleadings and Other Papers , and Ch. 7, Pleadings Allowed; Form of Motions (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

100 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
A. Use of Motions; Governing Procedural Law of Federal Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.01

§ 2.01 Use of Motions

[1] Request for Court Order

A motion is a request to the court for an order. All motions must be in writing unlessmade during a recorded hearing or trial. n1 Related to motions are applications, petitions, and orders to show cause; the purpose of each is to bring a matter to the court's attention for decision.

Pretrial motions may be used to test the strengths and weaknesses of a case, to narrow issues before trial, or to resolve cases without the need for trial. When used effectively, pretrial motions reduce litigation costs and time expenditures.

[2] Types of Pretrial Motions

Some motions are specifically identified in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The Rules do not limit the variety of motions that may be made, and parties may file a motion as to any matter requiring a ruling or order from the court.

Motions should be titled to reflect the order sought. For example, if a party is about to destroy relevant evidence, a motion designated "Motion for Order to Preserve Evidence" would be appropriate.

[3] Frivolous Motions May Result in Sanctions

Although a party may bring a series of motions to control the focus and pace of the case, federal district judges have little patience for frivolous motions, or motions designed to delay or harass. n2 In fact, many local district court rules contain specific warnings against bringing such motions, under penalty of sanctions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsBad Faith MotionsGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
A. Use of Motions; Governing Procedural Law of Federal Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.02

§ 2.02 Federal Rules Governing Motion Practice

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure set forth general parameters regarding motions. The applicable Rules are the following:

- Rule 5; Serving and filing motions. Rule 5 sets forth the manner in which motions must be served and filed with the court [see §§ 2.60 -2.66]

- Rule 6; Timing of service of motions. Rule 6 requires that motions be served at least 14 days before the hearing date [see § 2.32[2]]

- Rule 7(b); Form of motions. Rule 7(b) requires that motions must state with particularity the grounds for the motion, and must set forth the relief sought [see § 2.32[1], [5]]

- Rule 10; Form of motions. Rule 10 contains format requirements for pleadings; those requirements apply to motions [see §§ 2.40 -2.43]

- Rule 11; Signing Motions. Rule 7(b)(3) provides that written motions must be signed in accordance with Rule 11 [see § 2.43]

In addition, specific types of motions may be impacted by the particular Federal Rule or statute governing the relief requested.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentHearingsGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
A. Use of Motions; Governing Procedural Law of Federal Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.03

§ 2.03 Importance of Local District Court Rules Governing Motion Practice

Local district court rules generally control the details of motion practice, including the following:

- Notice requirements
- Timing of opposition and reply papers
- Papers required or permitted to be submitted in support of or in opposition to the motion (including reply papers), and the form of those papers
- Formatting requirements for motion papers
- Service and filing requirements
- Meet and confer requirements

A table of applicable local district court rules of the United States District Courts is included in the Appendix to this chapter for reference purposes. These rules are regularly amended, and the practitioner should consult the current version of the applicable local district court rules.

In addition, local district court rules may govern specific types of motions. For example, many districts have special local district court rules governing:

- Discovery motions
- Summary judgment
- Class action certification
- Preliminary injunctions and temporary restraining orders

- Motions to dismiss for failure to prosecute
- Motions to amend
- Motions to vacate default
- Motions to consolidate

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
A. Use of Motions; Governing Procedural Law of Federal Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.04

§ 2.04 Importance of Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge

Federal judges may establish their own practical rules and procedures, provided those rules and procedures are consistent with federal law, including the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and local district court rules. n1

Judges' individual rules and procedures, frequently referred to as standing orders, often contain provisions governing motion practice, including:

- Pre-motion conference requirements
- Procedures for obtaining ex parte orders
- Availability and manner of requesting oral argument
- Times and days of week for motion calendars
- Courtesy copies
- Page limitations

Individual rules and procedures vary from one judge to another. It is essential toconsult the rules and procedures of the assigned judge prior to drafting any motion.

Idiosyncratic individual judges' rules have proliferated. District judges have sometimes adopted complex requirements that differ, sometimes slightly, from other judges' requirements on the same subject.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.05

§ 2.05 When to Seek Particular Relief

[1] Nature of Relief Requested Determines Timing

The timing of motions generally is driven by the strategy and demands of each particular case. Some motions generally are brought during the early stages of the litigation. For example, challenges to jurisdiction must be raised in the first responsive pleading. n1 Motions involving parties n2 or the sufficiency of the pleadings are generally raised early in litigation as well. n3

Other motions are more likely to be brought as the litigation progresses, such as:

- Motions to compel discovery n4
- Motions for protective orders n5
- Motions for partial summary judgment n6
- Motions to file and serve third-party complaints n7

Other motions are more likely to be brought as the time for trial nears, such as:

- Motions for summary judgment n8
- Motions to exclude evidence
- Motions to sever matters for trial n9

Still other motions are made during or after trial. These include:

- Motions for judgment as a matter of law n10
- Motions for relief from judgment n11

[2] Waiver of Right to Make Motion

Some motions must be made at specific times, and failure to do so results in waiver. For example:

- A motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction must be consolidated with any other Rule 12 motion, or the objection to personal jurisdiction is waived n12

- A Rule 60(b)(3) motion for relief from a judgment on the ground of fraud must be made within one year of entry of judgment n13

- A complaint may be amended once as of right within 21 days after serving it, or if the pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, 21 days after service of a responsive pleading or 21 days after a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f). To amend after that, a motion for leave to amend is required n14

- Third parties may be impleaded as of right until the fourteenth day after the answer is served; after that, leave of court to file a third party complaint must be sought by motion n15

[3] Complying With Motion Deadlines in Scheduling Orders

Except in categories of actions exempted by local district court rule, the judge is obligated to enter a scheduling order which, amongst other things, limits the time to file motions. This aspect of the scheduling order is intended to set time limits "for interposing various motions that otherwise might be used as stalling techniques." n16

Although it is not entirely clear what types of motions are intended to be covered by this provision, Rule 16 orders may be used to schedule any motions that seem appropriate to the court and the parties at that time. Certainly, counsel should not attend a scheduling conference without being prepared to discuss a timetable for motions. Likewise, at any status conference which may be held throughout the course of a case, the court might ask the parties to identify any motions that are contemplated, and to propose a timetable for such motions. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCriminal Law & ProcedureTrialsMotions for Severance

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. E.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 14, 19, 21.

(n3)Footnote 3. E.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b), 12(b)(6).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26-37.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14.

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42.

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50.

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60.

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g), (h).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b) advisory committee's note (1983).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
A. Use of Motions; Governing Procedural Law of Federal Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.06

§ 2.06 Determining Hearing Officer for a Particular Motion

Motions are heard either by a judge or a magistrate judge. n1 In deciding whether to file a particular motion, it is important to consider the inclinations of the judge or magistrate judge hearing the motion. For example, some judges or magistrate judges may be inclined to permit liberal discovery, and will therefore be more likely to grant motions to compel. Likewise, some judges or magistrate judges may be more likely than others to grant Rule 23 class certification.

In some districts, it is not possible to determine which judge or magistrate judge will be hearing a particular motion. Some districts have an assigned judge system, where a specific judge is assigned to the case when it is filed, and the assigned judge handlesall matters other than those specifically referred to a magistrate judge. Other districts have a master calendar system, where motions are heard by a judge sitting in "law and motion" at any given time, and cases are not assigned to a particular judge until trial. The particular system followed in the district could impact the moving party's strategy.

For example, in a district that utilizes the assigned judge system, a party may decide to file a motion knowing that it will be denied, but hoping at least to educate the judge. That strategy is useless in a district that uses the master calendar system, because the judge hearing the motion may never again have any contact with the case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 636 (empowering magistrate judges to hear motions).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
A. Use of Motions; Governing Procedural Law of Federal Motion Practice

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.07. through 2.09

[Reserved]

§§ 2.07.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
B. Oral Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.10

§ 2.10 Distinguishing Oral Motion From Oral Argument on Written Motion

An oral motion is one which does not have to be supported by any writing. An example of an oral motion is a motion at trial to exclude evidence.

An oral motion is not the same as oral argument, which may be available in connection with a written motion.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersMotions in LimineExclusion of Evidence

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
B. Oral Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.11

§ 2.11 Availability of Oral Motion

Motions generally must be made in writing, unless made during a hearing or trial that is officially recorded. n1

Examples of motions that may be made orally include motions to exclude evidence, motions for judgment as a matter of law, and motions for mistrial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureTrialsMotions for Mistrial

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
B. Oral Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.12 through 2.19

[Reserved]

§§ 2.12[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
1 Preliminary Considerations

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.20

§ 2.20 Considerations in Determining Whether to File Motion

Before a motion is filed, the party seeking relief should consider the following:

- The comparative benefit of success on the motion to the damage caused by loss on the motion
- The probability of success on the motion, weighed in tandem wiwth the other listed considerations
- Can the relief sought be obtained by stipulation rather than by motion?
- Have other motions been filed, and if so, will numerous motions create an unfavorable impression with the judge?
- What are the likely financial costs of bringing the motion?
- Are there any pre-motion procedures (i.e., meet and confer requirements) required by the Federal Rules, local district court rules, or rules of the assigned judge that must be followed prior to filing the motion?

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
1 Preliminary Considerations

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.21

§ 2.21 Stipulating in Lieu of Filing Motion

[1] Obtaining Court Approval of Stipulation

Unless otherwise provided by local district court rule, or by the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, stipulations require court approval. Counsel should not assume that the court will "rubber stamp" all stipulations.

Counsel should consult the local district court rules, as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, to determine how a stipulation must be presented to the court for approval. The following are among the methods used in district courts:

- Noticed motion. This method is cumbersome, and often cannot be effected in time to accomplish the desired end

- Motion without notice. Some districts provide a regularly scheduled time to present stipulations without notice

- Unopposed motion. Some districts require that stipulations be presented in the form of an "unopposed motion," together with a proposed order, signed as approved by all counsel

- Letter. In some districts, the parties may send a letter to the judge, clerk, or secretary enclosing a stipulation and requesting that it be ordered and filed, with conformed copy returned to the sender

- Filing a copy in chambers or with the clerk. In some districts, the stipulation is delivered to the court, either directly to the assigned judge's chambers or to the central clerk's office

[2] Matters Typically Resolved by Stipulation

Orders routinely sought by stipulation include:

- Postponing a hearing date

- Granting an extension of time within which to respond to a motion or discovery requests
- Extending time to plead
- Discontinuing an action

For discussion of court approval of stipulations, see [1], above.

[3] Sample Forms of Stipulation

Short Form of Stipulation

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
..... District of .....

_____

(Title of Action)	)	Civil No. Stipulation And Order

_____

Plaintiff John Jones and defendant Richard Roe, by and through their respective attorneys, hereby stipulate and agree that plaintiff's time for responding to "Defendant's First Set of Interrogatories to Plaintiff" shall be extended to March 30, 2008. There has been one prior extension of time (totaling 30 days) granted.

(date)
_____

_____

Attorneys for _____

(date)
_____

_____

Attorneys for _____

SO ORDERED.
Dated: _____

_____

United States District Court Judge

Long Form of Stipulation

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
..... District of .....

_____

)

(Title of Action)) Civil No. Stipulation And Order
)

_____

This stipulation is made in light of the following facts:

1. Plaintiffs have served their First Amended Complaint on 31 defendants in this action.

2. Some defendants are answering the complaint while others are moving to dismiss the complaint on various grounds.

3. Defendants may have multiple grounds upon which to assert cross-claims against one another.

4. The court by its order filed July 11, 2007 requires that motions to challenge the joint and several liability alleged by plaintiffs be brought on or before October 11, 2007.

5. A holding by the court that defendants are not jointly and severally liable will moot many potential cross-claims.

6. The undersigned defendants (hereinafter referred to as "these defendants") desire to further the orderly and efficient pleading of cross-claims, if such are necessary.

ACCORDINGLY, IT IS HEREBY STIPULATED, by and between these defendants, by and through their respective attorneys that none of these defendants shall file a cross-claim against any other of these defendants before notice of the court's action in respect to motions regarding the alleged joint and several liability of defendants.

IT IS FURTHER STIPULATED that if responses by defendants to the complaint, as amended, are due 21 or more days following such notice, none of these defendants shall file a cross-claim against any other of these defendants unless at least 15 days written notice of intent to file cross-claims shall have been served on all of these defendants by any of these defendants.

IT IS SO STIPULATED.

Dated: _____

_____

Attorneys for _____

Dated: _____

_____

Attorneys for _____

IT IS SO ORDERED.

_____
(date)

_____
Judge

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
1 Preliminary Considerations

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.22

§ 2.22 Complying With Pre-Motion Procedures

Before filing a motion, the party seeking relief must comply with any preliminary procedures required by the Federal Rules, local district court rules, or rules and procedures of the assigned judge.

For example, before filing a motion for an order compelling disclosure or discovery, the movant must in good faith confer or attempt to confer with the party not making the disclosure in an effort to secure the disclosure without court action. n1 Likewise, local district court rules sometimes mandate preliminary motion procedures. Forexample, in the S.D.N.Y. & E.D.N.Y., if the attorneys cannot agree on a resolution of a non-dispositive pretrial dispute, they must notify the court either by telephone conference or by letter not exceeding three pages in length outlining the nature of the dispute and attaching relevant materials. Within three days of receiving such a letter, any opposing party may submit a responsive letter not exceeding three pages attaching relevant materials. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMotions to CompelCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(2)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. S.D.N.Y. & E.D.N.Y., L.R. 37.3(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
1 Preliminary Considerations

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.23

§ 2.23 Papers Required in Support of Motion

The Federal Rules require notice of the hearing on the motion to be provided to all parties, but otherwise do not specify the papers required in support of a motion. Consult the local district court rules for the papers required to be submitted in support of and in opposition to a motion.

A party's moving papers generally must consist of the following:

- Notice of motion [see §§ 2.30 -2.32]
- Supporting affidavits or affidavit substitutes [see § 2.35]
- Supporting memorandum of law [see § 2.34]
- Supporting evidence attached to the moving papers as exhibits [see § 2.36]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
1 Preliminary Considerations

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.24

§ 2.24 Preparing and Filing Notice of Constitutional Challenge to a Statute

A party that files a written motion drawing into question the constitutionality of a federal or state statute must promptly file a notice of constitutional question stating the question and identifying the motion that raises it, if either of the following is true: n1

- A federal statute is questioned and the parties do not include the United States, one of its agencies, or one of its officers or employees in an official capacity n2

- A state statute is questioned and the parties do not include the state, one of its agencies, or one of its officers or employees in an official capacity n3

In addition, the filing party is required to serve the notice and paper on the Attorney General of the United States if a federal statute is challenged, or on the state attorney general if a state statute is challenged, either by certified or registered mail or by sending it to an electronic address designated by the attorney general for this purpose. n4

The court must, under 28 U.S.C. § 2403, certify to the Attorney General of the United States that there is a constitutional challenge to a federal statute, or certify to the state attorney general that there is a constitutional challenge to a state statute. n5

Unless the court sets a later time, the attorney general may intervene within 60 days after the notice of constitutional question is filed or after the court certifies the challenge, whichever is earlier. Before the time to intervene expires, the court may reject the constitutional challenge, but may not enter a final judgment holding the statute unconstitutional. n6

A party's failure to file and serve the notice, or the court's failure to certify, does not forfeit a constitutional claim or defense that is otherwise timely asserted. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral

OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1)

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1)(A)

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1)(B)

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
1 Preliminary Considerations

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.25 through 2.29

[Reserved]

§§ 2.25[Reserved]

116 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.30

§ 2.30 Purpose of Notice of Motion

The purpose of a notice of motion is to provide notice to the court and the parties of:

- Relief sought [see § 2.32[1]]
- Date and time when the motion will be heard, often referred to as the return date of the motion [see § 2.32[2]]
- Where the motion will be heard
- The statute or rule, if any, on which the motion is predicated [see § 2.32[5]]
- The papers which are submitted in support of the motion [see § 2.32[4]]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.31

§ 2.31 Combining Motion and Notice of Motion

The motion and notice of motion are oftencombined in one paper. This form is utilized in many districts.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.32

§ 2.32 Drafting Notice of Motion

[1] Specifying Relief Sought in Notice of Motion

A notice of motion must set forth the relief or order sought. n1

The relief requested should be tailored to the facts of the motion, and should not be stated too broadly, or the movant will risk denial of the motion. The papers submitted in support of the motion must justify the relief.

[2] Scheduling Motion Return Date

[2.--1] Federal Rules Require Minimum of 14 Days' Advance Notice

A written motion, other than one heard ex parte [see § 2.33], must be served no laterthan 14 days prior to the hearing date, unless a different period is fixed by the Federal Rules or by order of the court. n2

Consult the rules and procedures of the assigned judge for any additional notice requirements.

[2.--2] Computing Advance Notice Period

Notice requirements for motions are computed as follows: n3

- Exclude the day of the event that triggers the period (i.e. the day of service of motion and notice of motion)
- Count every other day, including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays
- Include the last day of the period, but if the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday

If a motion deadline is stated in hours: n4

- Begin counting immediately on the occurrence of the event that triggers the period
- Count every hour, including hours during intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays
- If the period would end on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the same time on the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday

Unless the court orders otherwise, if the clerk's office is inaccessible: n5

- On the last day for filing under Rule 6(a)(1), then the time for filing is extended to the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday; or
- During the last hour for filing under Rule 6(a)(2), then the time for filing is extended to the same time on the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

If the motion is served by any of the following methods, three additional days' advance notice of the return date must be provided to the responding party: n6

- Service by mail
- Service to the clerk of the court based on no known address
- Electronic or other means of delivery consented to in writing

Rule 6 governs the computation of deadlines based on the passage of a fixed number of days and, therefore, has no application to situations in which the court has established a specific calendar day as a deadline. n7

Unless a different time is set by a statute, local rule, or court order, the last day ends: n8

- For electronic filing, at midnight in the court's time zone
- For filing by other means, when the clerk's office is scheduled to close

[2.--3] Consulting Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge Before Scheduling Return Date

The rules and procedures of the assigned judge generally govern the procedure for placing the motion on the judge's calendar. Some judges require a pre-motion conference before a motion may even be filed. Other judges hear motions on the same day and time once each week, and do not require permission before serving and filing the motion. Other judges require the moving party to telephone chambers to schedule the motion.

[2.--4] Adjourning the Motion

Local district court rules, or the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, generally govern the procedure for adjourning (also referred to as "continuing") motion hearings. Stipulations, requests for adjournments, and ex parte applications are each used in various districts to continue hearing dates.

[3] Expediting Motion Return Date

[3.--1] Consider Pre-Motion Conference If Prompt or Immediate Court Intervention Is Necessary

If prompt or immediate court intervention is necessary, the practice has evolved of using the pre-motion conference that many district judges require, as a substitute for the motion itself. Counsel write the court, generally on the pretext of needing an immediate pre-motion conference, setting forth the relief needed, and the arguments and facts in support. Because the request is for a conference to be held as soon as possible, the letter induces opposing counsel to promptly respond with the facts and arguments in opposition. The district court thus has, sometimes in the space of one day, the entire picture necessary for decision. Many district judges will then schedule a prompt pre-motion conference at which they will hear all counsel and render a decision, formally or informally. Sometimes the decision will be communicated by telephone, without conference, expediting the procedure even further. Thus, as a formal matter, a decision has been rendered, but no motion made.

Disputes arising during the course of depositions can sometimes be expedited by a telephone call to the district or magistrate judge's chambers, with a decision being made on the telephone.

The willingness of the court to participate in any variation of these informal procedures should be ascertained, if at all possible, in advance of such issues arising.

[3.--2] Court May Shorten Advance Notice Otherwise Required

The court may shorten the advance notice otherwise required for a motion. Under appropriate circumstances, a motion to shorten advance notice may be made on ex parte application. For discussion of ex parte motions, see § 2.33. n9

An ex parte application for an order shortening time may be appropriate when immediate relief is necessary, and there is no time for a noticed motion, even if heard on an expedited basis.

The affidavit in support of the application should state why the order to shorten time is necessary, and should emphasize the merits of the underlying motion. Local district court rules and the rules and procedures of the assigned judge generally govern applications for orders shortening time. The party filing the application for order shortening time generally must notice opposing counsel of the application, and must describe in declaration form all efforts made to obtain opposing counsel's consent to the order shortening time.

It is good practice to submit the underlying motion papers with the application for an order shortening time. It demonstrates to the judge that there will be no delay with respect to hearing the underlying motion.

[4] Listing Papers Submitted in Support of Motion

The notice of motion should list the papers which are submitted in support of the motion. The list should include the title and date of the supporting paper (i.e., "This motion is supported by the affidavit of John Doe, sworn to [date], as well as a memorandum of law dated [date]").

[5] Specifying Grounds on Which Motion Is Predicated

A written motion must state with particularity the grounds on which the motion is made. n10

[6] Request for Oral Argument If Required by Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge

It is imperative that counsel be familiar with the rules and procedures of the assigned judge. Many judges will not permit oral argument of a motion unless requested either in the notice of motion or in the opposing papers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral

OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Violette v. P.A. Days, Inc., 427 F.3d 1015, 1017-1019 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(4).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.33

§ 2.33 Seeking Ex Parte Relief

It is sometimes necessary to apply to the court for immediate relief, without the full briefing and hearing schedule provided for ordinary motions. In those instances, a motion may be made ex parte. Examples of orders that might be sought by ex parte motion include:

- Temporary restraining orders, pending the hearing of a motion for preliminary injunctive relief n1
- Orders extending time to plead or to respond to discovery when the deadline is near

Consult the local district court rules, as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, regarding ex parte motions.

Ex parte practice occurs on an expedited basis with varying degrees of participation by the responding party. In some districts, the local district court rules contemplate true one-sided practice where the moving party may appear in court with little or no notice to the opponent. However, local district court rules often require a good faith effort to advise opposing counsel of the date, time, and substance of the proposed ex parte application.

An application for ex parte relief typically includes the application, a memorandum of law, supporting affidavits or declarations, and a proposed form of order. Papers in support of the application should place particular focus on the reasons justifying immediate relief.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.34

§ 2.34 Preparing Memorandum of Law

The Federal Rules do not require the filing of a memorandum of law, but local district court rules typically do. A memorandum of law generally includes:

- Statement of issues presented. When the issues in a motion are particularly complex, it may be useful to include with the statement of issues a concise summary of the arguments.

- Statement of facts. Depending on the complexity of the issues and how familiar the court is with the case, this portion of the memorandum may be more or less detailed. Facts should be stated accurately and used to persuade the court to rule in the moving party's favor.

- Legal arguments applying controlling law to facts. This portion of the memorandum should state the controlling law, including adverse authority, and explain how the law applies to the facts of the case. The argument should rely on statutory law, legislative history as appropriate, and decisions of the United States Supreme Court, as well as the circuit court of appeal and the district court in which the case lies. The argument may also cite cases on point from other circuits or unpublished opinions, though these may not be as persuasive. In diversity cases, the decisions of the courts of appeal of the forum state may also be cited. Legal analogies and public policy arguments may also be useful, especially on issues of first impression.

- Table of contents and table of authorities. Local district court rules dictate whether a table of contents and table of authorities are required. Even whennot mandatory, such tables are generally useful and may assist the court in analyzing the arguments.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.35

§ 2.35 Preparing Supporting Affidavits or Affidavit Substitutes

[1] Purpose of Supporting Affidavits

Affidavits (or affidavit substitutes) in support of a motion should set forth the evidence demonstrating the need for the relief sought, and together with a supporting memorandum of law, often serve as the sole basis for the court's ruling. n1

Supporting affidavits should address each of the factors for the relief sought, and should be as detailed and credible as possible. Every affidavit should explain the basis for the affiant's knowledge, and should give sufficient personal information to make the affiant credible as a person. It is helpful to present the information to the court in the same fashion as if the affiant were testifying on the witness stand. But, be as concise as the facts permit, as the papers may be read hurriedly. They should be well organized, with headings and indices that will assist the court in understanding the facts justifying the relief. All relevant documents should be submitted as exhibits; exhibit tabs should be used to assist the judge in reading the papers.

[2] Affidavit Substitutes (Declarations and Verifications)

In lieu of an affidavit, a motion may be supported by an unsworn declaration, certificate, verification, or statement, subscribed as true under penalty of perjury, and dated. Affidavit substitutes may be easier to prepare and obtain because they do not require notarization.

A motion may be supported by an unsworn declaration subscribed as true under penalty of perjury, and dated. n2 The following is the form prescribed by 28 U.S.C. § 1746:

Preparing Supporting Affidavits or Affidavit Substitutes

I, [name of deponent], declare as follows:

[state the relevant facts in separate numbered paragraph] I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. n3 Executed on [date].

_____

Signature

Good practice suggests that the following subscription be used so that there is no question with respect to where and when the declaration was executed:

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. This declaration is executed in [city, state] on [date].

_____

Signature

[3] Affidavits May Not Be Served Separately From Motion

If a motion is supported by affidavits or affidavit substitutes [see [1], [2], above], the affidavits or substitutes must be served together with the motion. n4

[4] Affidavit Requirements

Affidavits must: n5

- Be made on personal knowledge
- Set forth facts admissible in evidence
- Show that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsAffidavitsEvidenceTestimonyLay WitnessesPersonal Knowledge

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 78.

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1746.

(n3)Footnote 3. This form if declaration is for use with declarations executed within the United States, its territories, possessions or commonwealths. If the declaration is executed outside the United States, this sentence must read: "I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct."

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.36

§ 2.36 Submitting Evidence in Support of Motion

[1] Documentary Evidence in Support of Motion

Documentary evidence may be submitted in support of a motion, provided the documents are authenticated by an affidavit or affidavit substitute of an individual having first hand knowledge of the documents. The affidavit or affidavit substitute establishes the competence of the maker, and authenticates the documents. n1 The document should be attached as an exhibit to the authenticating affidavit or affidavit substitute, and should be clearly labeled with an exhibit tab.

Documents attached as exhibits may include the following:

- Deposition transcripts. Deposition testimony is admissible under the rules of evidence, and may be used against any party who was present or represented at the taking of the deposition or had reasonable notice, in accordance with the provisions of Rule 32(a)

- Transcripts from other proceedings. In addition to deposition testimony, there may be transcripts of other proceedings, such as a prior trial, earlier hearings or administrative proceedings, that support a motion

- Discovery responses. Responses to both interrogatories and requests for admission may be used to support a motion. An admission may be more usefulthan a response to an interrogatory because under Rule 36(b), admissions are conclusively established unless the court on motion permits withdrawal or amendment, whereas responses to interrogatories may be supplemented or changed by the answering party during the course of litigation

- Stipulations. A stipulation may eliminate factual disputes either for purposes of the motion or for all purposes during the litigation

- Concessions. Concessions and admissions made by the opponent in briefs and other papers filed with the court may be used to support a motion

[2] Judicial Notice of Evidentiary Facts

Judicially noticed facts may be used in support of a motion. The court is required to take judicial notice if so requested by a party, and the party supplies the court with the necessary information. Judicial notice may be taken of the following: n2

- Facts generally known within the territorial jurisdiction of the trial court
- Facts capable of accurate and ready determination by resort to sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned

Facts with respect to which judicial notice may be taken include facts established by prior orders of the court, and facts contained in court records. Such prior orders and records may be introduced as exhibits attached to supporting affidavits or declarations.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsResponsesEvidenceDocumentary EvidenceWritingsGeneral OverviewEvidenceJudicial NoticeAdjudicative FactsFacts Generally KnownEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsPreliminary QuestionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 104, 1001 et seq. .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Evid. 201.

123 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
2. Preparing Notice of Motion, Memorandum of Law, and Supporting Affidavits

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.37 through 2.39

[Reserved]

§§ 2.37[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
3 Format of Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.40

§ 2.40 Motion Papers Must Be Properly Formatted

All motion papers must be formatted in the same manner as a pleading. The motion papers, like any pleading, must contain a caption, setting forth: n1

- Name of the court
- Title of the action (which may be abbreviated to state the name of the first party on each side, with an appropriate indication of other parties)
- File number
- Designation as to nature of the motion

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(2), 10(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
3 Format of Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.41

§ 2.41 Sample Motion Forms Promulgated Under Federal Rules

The following forms of motion are contained in the Appendix of Forms to the Federal Rules, and are sufficient under the Rules: n1

- Motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b) [see Fed. R. Civ. P., App. of Forms, Form 19]
- Motion to bring in a third party defendant [see Fed. R. Civ. P., App. of Forms, Form 22-B]
- Motions to intervene as a defendant under Rule 24 [see Fed. R. Civ. P., App. of Forms, Form 23]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 84.

126 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
3 Format of Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.42

§ 2.42 Clerk May Not Reject Improperly Formatted Papers

The clerk may not reject papers solely because they are not presented in proper form as required by the Federal Rules or local district court rules or practices. n1 This rule is intended to avoid exposing litigants to the hazards of time bars.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
3 Format of Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.43

§ 2.43 Motion Papers Must Contain Signature, Address, E-mail Address, and Telephone Number

Written motions must be signed in accordance with the requirements of Rule 11, which provides as follows: n1

- Every written motion and other paper must be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name, or by the moving party personally if not represented by an attorney, and must include the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number

- Every motion or other signed paper presented to the court certifies that the motion is not made for an improper purpose, and that it has a basis in law and in fact

- A violation of Rule 11 by the responsible attorney or party is sanctionable

Motion papers not properly signed will be stricken unless remedied as soon as called to the attention of counsel or the pro se litigant. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
3 Format of Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.44 through 2.49

[Reserved]

§§ 2.44[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
4. Motions to Extend Time

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.50

§ 2.50 Seeking Additional Time to Act

A request to extend time may be used when a party requires additional time to act beyond the period of time fixed by the Federal Rules, court order, local district court rule, or notice of motion. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
4. Motions to Extend Time

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.51

§ 2.51 Extending Time Improper as to Certain Specified Motions

Courts may not extend the time to make the following motions: n1

- Motions for judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(b)
- Motions to amend or expand the court's findings under Rule 52(b)
- Motions for new trial under Rule 59(b), (d)
- Motions to alter or amend judgments under Rule 59(e)
- Motions for relief from judgment under Rule 60(b)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
4. Motions to Extend Time

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.52

§ 2.52 Request Made Prior to Expiration of Time Period

If a request to extend time is available [see § 2.51], and is made prior to the expiration of the period originally prescribed or as extended by previous order, the court may grant the request without motion or notice. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(A).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
4. Motions to Extend Time

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.53

§ 2.53 Request Made After Expiration of Time Period

A request to extend time made after the expiration of the specified period must be made by motion, and may be granted in the court's discretion if the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect. n1

Excusable neglect generally requires a showing of good faith, as well as a reasonable basis for missing the deadline. n2 A claim of unfamiliarity with the rules and procedures in federal court does not establish "excusable neglect." n2.1

A finding of excusable neglect may be more likely if the opposing party is not prejudiced by the delay. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(B); see also Smith v. District of Columbia, 430 F.3d 450, 456-457 (D.C. Cir. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Maine v. United States Dep't of Interior, 124 F. Supp. 2d 728, 734-735 (D. Me. 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Dimmitt v. Ockenfels, 407 F.3d 21, 23-24 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Al-Jundi v. Rockefeller, 88 F.R.D. 244, 247 (W.D.N.Y. 1980) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
C. Preparing Moving Papers
4. Motions to Extend Time

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.54 through 2.59

[Reserved]

§§ 2.54[Reserved]

134 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.60

§ 2.60 All Parties, Except Defaulting Parties, Must Be Served With Motion Papers

All written motions, except motions to be heard ex parte, must be served on all parties to the action. Parties in default for failing to appear need not be served with motion papers. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.61

§ 2.61 Serving Motion Papers on Attorney of Represented Party

Service of motion papers must be made on the attorney of a represented party, unless direct service upon the party is ordered by the court. Service must be made directly on all parties not represented by counsel. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureCounselGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.62

§ 2.62 Manner of Serving Motion Papers

Service of motion papers is made by any of the following methods: n1

- Hand delivering a copy to the person being served n2
- Leaving a copy at the person's office with a clerk or other person in charge n3
- If there is no one in charge, leaving a copy in a conspicuous place in the office n4
- If the office is closed or there is no office, leaving a copy at the person's dwelling house or usual place of abode with someone of suitable age and discretion residing there n5
- Mailing a copy to the last known address of the person served n6
- Leaving a copy with the clerk of the court if the person served has no known address n7
- Delivering a copy by any other means, including electronically, as consented to in writing by the person being served n8
- Delivering a copy through the court's transmission service with written consent of the person being served, and pursuant to local rule authorizing such service n9

Service by mail is complete on mailing. n10 Service by electronic means is complete on transmission, and service by other consented means under Rule 5(b)(2)(D) is complete when the person making service delivers the copy to the agency designated to make delivery. n11 Service by electronic means is not effective if the party making service learns that the attempted service did not reach the person to be served. n12

If service is made by any of the following methods, the time to respond is extended by three days: n13

- Service by mail

- Service to the clerk of the court based on no known address
- Electronic or other means of delivery consented to in writing

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B)(i).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B)(i).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B)(ii).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(D).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(F).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)F.

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.63

§ 2.63 Deadline for Filing Motion Papers

Motion papers must be filed "within a reasonable time after service." n1 Local district court rules typically specify the deadline for filing motion papers.

Some district judges require all motion papers to be held by counsel and not filed until counsel have completed service of all motion papers. District judges are attempting to avoid the beginning of countdown of days lapsed before motion decisions. Apparently, the statistic gathering done by the Federal Judicial Conference commences with the initial filing of a motion, rather than the date of argument or submission. Again, individual judge's rules must be consulted. There is room for argument that these individual judge's rules violate Rule 5(d), or could do so in connection with a particular motion. While interesting, that issue will be meaningless to parties and their attorneys. It is difficult to visualize an attorney violating an individual judge's rule, informing the judge that the rule is in violation of law.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1); see also Palmquist v. Conseco Med. Ins. Co., 128 F. Supp. 2d 618, 622-623 (D.S.D. 2000) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.64

§ 2.64 Filing Deemed Complete Only When Motion Papers Received by Clerk of Court

A paper is filed by delivering it to either: n1

- The clerk
- A judge who agrees to accept it for filing, and who must then note the filing date on the paper and promptly send it to the clerk

A motion submitted for filing may not be rejected by the clerk merely because it is not in proper form. n1.1 Failure to sign a certificate of service is considered to be a matter of form, at least when service is actually made. n1.2The mailing of papers addressed to the clerk's office does not constitute filing under Rule 5. The Federal Rules, unlike some state court rules, do not authorize filing to be accomplished by deposit of papers in the mail. Accordingly, papers deposited in the mail to the clerk on the filing deadline date are not timely filed. n2

In addition, a court may by local rule permit papers to be filed, signed, or verified by electronic means that are consistent with technical standards, if any, that the Judicial Conference of the United States establishes. n3 A local rule may require filing by electronic means only if reasonable exceptions are allowed. n4 A paper filed by electronic means in compliance with a local rule constitutes a written paper. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsClerks of CourtGovernmentsCourtsCourt Records

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(2).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(4).

(n3)Footnote 1.2. See Wilson v. Lowe's Home Ctr., Inc., 401 F. Supp. 2d 186, 189 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 2. Raymond v. Ameritech Corp. 442 F.3d 600, 604-605 (7th Cir. 2006).

(n5)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n7)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.65

§ 2.65 Proof of Service Required

After the motion papers have been served [see §§ 2.60 -2.62], they must be filed with the clerk of the court, together with proof of service. n1 The principal importance of the proof of service is to provide the court with clear evidence that service has been accomplished. n2

Proof of service generally will be in the form of a declaration or affidavit of service, or an acknowledgment of service from the party.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsClerks of Court

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Russell v. City of Milwaukee, 338 F.3d 662, 665-667 (7th Cir. 2003) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.66

§ 2.66 Content of Proof of Service

The proof of service should include the following information:

- Description of papers served
- Date, time, and place of service
- Person or entity served
- Manner of service
- Name and signature of person who served papers

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.67

§ 2.67 Delivering Courtesy Copies to Assigned Judge

The rules and procedures of the assigned judge should be consulted regarding courtesy copies. Some judges require courtesy copies, while others will not accept them.

If the judge does not forbid the delivery of courtesy copies, those copies should be filed with the clerk and contemporaneously delivered to chambers. Counsel should want the court to have the opportunity to understand their positions at the earliest time, and in advance of argument.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.68

§ 2.68 Redacting Private Information

Unless the court orders otherwise, in an electronic or paper filing with the court that contains an individual's social-security number, taxpayer-identification number, or birth date, the name of an individual known to be a minor, or a financial-account number, a party or nonparty making the filing may include only: n1

- The last four digits of the social-security number and taxpayer-identification number
- The year of the individual's birth
- The minor's initials
- The last four digits of the financial-account number

The redaction requirement does not apply to the follow: n2

- A financial-account number that identifies the property allegedly subject to forfeiture in a forfeiture proceeding
- The record of an administrative or agency proceeding
- The official record of a state-court proceeding
- The record of a court or tribunal, if that record was not subject to the redaction requirement when originally filed
- A filing covered by Rule 5.2(c) (social security appeals and immigration cases) or Rule 5.2(d) (unredacted filing under seal)
- A pro se filing in an action brought under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2241, 2254, or 2255

The court may order that a filing be made under seal without redaction. The court may later unseal the filing or order the person who made the filing to file a redacted version for the public record. n3 For good cause, the court may require redaction of additional information. n4 The court may also limit or prohibit a nonparty's remote electronic access to a document filed with the court. n5 A person making a redacted filing may also file an unredacted copy under seal. The court must retain the unredacted copy as part of the record. n6 A filing that contains redacted information may be filed together with a reference list that identifies each item of redacted information and specifies an appropriate identifier that uniquely corresponds to each item listed. The list must be filed under seal and may be amended as of right. Any reference in the case to a listed identifier will be construed to refer to the corresponding item of information. n7 A person waives the protection of Rule 5.2(a) as to the person's own information by filing it without redaction and not under seal. n8

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a)(1)-(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(1)-(6).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(f).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(g).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(h).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
D. Serving and Filing Motion Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.69 through 2.79

[Reserved]

§§ 2.69[Reserved]

144 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
E. Opposing the Motion

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.80

§ 2.80 Determining Whether to Oppose Motion

If motion papers pose a strong argument, it may be prudent to endeavor to negotiate a stipulated disposition of the matter. Otherwise, the following grounds for opposition should be considered:

- Procedural deficiency. Has the moving party complied with all procedural requirements, including proper notice?

- Inadmissible, inadequate, or incompetent evidence. Is the motion based on inadmissible, inadequate, or incompetent evidence?

- Inaccurate statement of the law. Has the moving party accurately stated the law?

- Opposition on the merits. Has the moving party accurately characterized the facts? Are there additional facts that may substantiate the opposition? Has the moving party accurately applied the law to the facts?

Local district court rules sometimes provide that if a party does not intend to oppose the motion, a statement of non-opposition must be filed with the court, or the motion may be granted on default. Even if not required by local district court rule, it is good practice to file a statement of non-opposition. It will save the court the trouble of hunting through the file to find a nonexistent brief in opposition.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
E. Opposing the Motion

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.81

§ 2.81 Papers Required in Opposition to Motion

Consult the local district court rules, as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, regarding papers required in opposition to a motion.

Generally, a party's opposition papers should consist of affidavits (or affidavit substitutes) and a memorandum of law.

It is not necessary to refute everything said in the moving party's memorandum of law. Some statements and arguments may be true, and it may enhance credibility to acknowledge them. Other statements may be simply irrelevant and not worth addressing in the opposing papers.

Sometimes parties have fundamentally different views of the premise underlying the case. In that situation, it makes little sense to refute each of the moving party's arguments. If the basic dispute is with the moving party's premise, that should be the focus of the opposition.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
E. Opposing the Motion

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.82

§ 2.82 Deadline for Serving and Filing Opposition Papers

[1] Federal Rules Deadline for Serving Opposition Papers

Papers in opposition to a motion must be served at least 7 days before hearing, unless the court permits them to be served at some other time. n1

When a motion for a new trial is based on affidavits, they must be filed with the motion. The opposing party has 14 days after being served to file opposing affidavits. n2

[2] Extension of Deadline for Serving and Filing Opposition Papers

The deadline for serving and filing opposition papers may be extended by court order. n3

If the moving party refuses to stipulate to an extension, an ex parte application maybe made to the court. Consult the local district court rules, as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, regarding ex parte applications.

Every application for an extension of time within which to file opposing papers should explain to the court precisely why more time than usual is required to oppose the motion. Factors which may be relevant include the following:

- Unusually complex or numerous issues
- Lengthy briefs
- The need for additional discovery on the relevant issues
- The need for additional time to consult or coordinate efforts with clients or with co-counsel (particularly in a complex, multi-party case)
- Unavailability of counsel during the briefing period or on the hearing date

According to Rule 6(b)(1), a request for enlargement after the time period has elapsed must be made by motion. The motion must be made in writing, pursuant to Rule 7(b)(1), unless it is made during a hearing or trial. n4 Before the court will grant a request for enlargement made after the time period has expired, the moving party must show cause and prove that the failure to act was the result of "excusable neglect." n5

For complete discussion of extensions of time within which to act, see §§ 2.50 -2.53.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. E.g., Nestle Co. v. Chester's Market, Inc., 571 F. Supp. 763, 769 (D. Conn 1983) , rev'd on other grounds, 756 F. 2d 280 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(B); see also Dimmitt v. Ockenfels, 407 F.3d 21, 23-24 (1st Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
E. Opposing the Motion

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.83

§ 2.83 Proof of Service Required

Opposition papers must be filed with the clerk of the court, together with proof of service. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsClerks of Court

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
E. Opposing the Motion

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.84

§ 2.84 Failure to Submit Opposition Papers

Failure to submit opposition papers may result in the court granting the motion on default. n1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. *See, e.g., General Brands, Inc. v. Steamship Gulf Spirit, No. 90 Civ. 7179, 1991 U.S. Dist. Lexis 125 at 2 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
E. Opposing the Motion

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.85

§ 2.85 Format of Opposition Papers

The same basic format requirements for moving papers apply to opposition papers. For discussion of those format requirements, see §§ 2.40 -2.43.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime Limitations

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
E. Opposing the Motion

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.86 through 2.89

[Reserved]

§§ 2.86[Reserved]

151 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
F. Filing Cross-Motions or Counter-Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.90

§ 2.90 Cross-Motion and Counter-Motion Defined

The terms cross-motion and counter-motion are interchangeable. A cross-motion or counter-motion is a motion filed in response to a different motion, and which seeks a separate order regarding issues introduced in the original motion.

For example, in response to a motion for a protective order pursuant to Rule 26(c), the opposing party may elect to file a cross-motion or counter-motion for an order compelling disclosure or discovery pursuant to Rule 37.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMotions to Compel

152 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
F. Filing Cross-Motions or Counter-Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.91

§ 2.91 No Governing Federal Rules Regarding Cross-Motions and Counter-Motions

The Federal Rules do not specifically address cross-motions or counter-motions. As a technical matter, a cross-motion or counter-motion is just another independent motion. Consult the local district court rules as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge to determine whether cross-motions and counter-motions are permitted.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
F. Filing Cross-Motions or Counter-Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.92

§ 2.92 Combining Opposition and Cross-Motion or Counter-Motion

If a cross-motion or counter-motion is permitted to be filed, the cross-motion or counter-motion may also serve as opposition to the original motion provided the papers clearly state their dual purpose.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
F. Filing Cross-Motions or Counter-Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.93

§ 2.93 Serving and Filing Cross-Motions and Counter-Motions

If a cross-motion or counter-motion is permitted to be filed, the cross-motion or counter-motion should be served and filed prior to the deadline for filing opposition papers.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
F. Filing Cross-Motions or Counter-Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.94

§ 2.94 Seeking Enlargement of Time Within Which to Respond to Cross-Motion or Counter-Motion

If opposition to a cross-motion or counter-motion cannot reasonably be made within the time otherwise required, the original moving party should seek an enlargement of time. For discussion of seeking enlargements of time, see §§ 2.50 -2.53.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
F. Filing Cross-Motions or Counter-Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.95 through 2.99

[Reserved]

§§ 2.95[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
G. Replying to Opposition Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.100

§ 2.100 No Governing Federal Rules Regarding Reply Papers

The Federal Rules do not address reply papers. Consult the local district court rules as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge to determine whether reply papers are permitted.

Nonetheless, reply papers are common. If the motion opponent seeks more time than the minimum within which to oppose the motion, typically the motion proponent bargains for a schedule that includes time for service of reply papers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
G. Replying to Opposition Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.101

§ 2.101 Practice Tip: Proper Function of Reply Papers

Some courts believe that reply papers should be viewed as the exception and not the rule. "Clearly, nothing but delay, unnecessary work, and unwarranted expense can result from the routine filing of reply and, inevitably, sur-reply papers which do nothing more than restate in a different form or with additional detail material set forth in the moving and opposing papers". n1

Consult the rules and procedures of the assigned judge to determine whether reply papers will be accepted. Many judges permit reply papers only in limited situations. For example, the judge may limit submission of reply papers to: n2

- Situations in which a party demonstrates to the court that papers to which it seeks to file a reply raise new issues which are material to the disposition of the question before the court

- Situations in which the court determines sua sponte that it wishes further briefing of an issue, and orders the submission of additional papers

Notwithstanding the antipathy of some courts to reply papers, reply papers are the norm. Moreover, for the motion proponent, reply papers represent an opportunity that should not be lightly foregone. It is the rare motion proponent who can anticipate every argument made by the opponent. The method by which the opponent presents opposition typically sharpens the issue, making a reply that deals with the sharpened issue a necessity. The fact that there is a body of law as to which side opens and closes to a jury demonstrates that there is an advantage to having the first and last word on any issue. About the only times that a motion proponent should not submit a reply is when the opposing papers are so weak on their face that no reply is useful, or when a good set of reply papers cannot be written. It is the rare court that will ignore reply papers, even if it would rather not have received them. If leave must be sought to file a reply, the request for leave should itself reflect the reply points counsel would make.

A reply should be very concise and persuasive, dealing only with the matters that warrant reply, and avoiding redundancy. Otherwise, a reply can be counter-productive. Replies should focus on the following:

- Significant misstatements or mischaracterizations of fact or law in the opposition papers

- Rehabilitation of cases that have been distinguished in opposition papers

- Distinguishing new authorities cited in opposition papers

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. International Business Machines Corp., 66 F.R.D. 383, 384 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. International Business Machines Corp., 66 F.R.D. 383, 384 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
G. Replying to Opposition Papers

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.102 through 2.109

[Reserved]

§§ 2.102[Reserved]

160 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
H. Oral Argument of Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.110

§ 2.110 Local District Court Rules and Rules and Procedures of Assigned Judge Govern Oral Argument

There are no governing Federal Rules regarding oral argument of motions. Instead, local district court rules and the rules and procedures of the assigned judge generally govern oral argument. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 78.

161 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
H. Oral Argument of Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.111

§ 2.111 Practice Tip: Benefits of Oral Argument

Consult the rules and procedures of the assigned judge regarding oral argument of motions [see Table of Local Rules, Appendix Part I].

Notwithstanding any contrary local district court rules, most judges will routinely hear argument, and most attorneys will want to argue. Even if the attorney's view is that the client has won the motion on the papers, it is questionable whether argument should be foregone. While motions may be won or lost on the papers in an ultimate sense, argument at least affords the platform for the judge's questions that may reflect the court's misunderstanding of some fact or position. Additionally, argument may cause a more careful rereading of the papers. Many attorneys fear that submitting without argument reflects a disinterest in the outcome.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
H. Oral Argument of Motions

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 2.112 through 2.119

[Reserved]

§§ 2.112[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
I. Settling Orders

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.120

§ 2.120 Prevailing Party May Be Required to Settle Order

Local district court rules or the rules and procedures of the assigned judge may require the moving party to submit a proposed order when filing the moving papers. Other rules or procedures may require the prevailing party to prepare a proposed order in accordance with the court's ruling. The prevailing party may be required to meet with opposing counsel to reach an agreement regarding the wording of the proposed order. Still other rules or procedures may specifically provide that counsel is not to submit a proposed order at all, but that the court will prepare its own order.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 The Mechanics of Motion Practice
I. Settling Orders

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide § 2.121

§ 2.121 Practice Tip: Contents of Proposed Order

The Federal Rules are silent as to the required contents of an order. In the absence of any local district court rule, the order should include the following:

- Case caption, including case number
- Title of order
- Recitation of papers considered in connection with motion (for appellate purposes)
- Factual findings, if required
- Statement of specific relief granted
- Name and signature of judge

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Appendix 2: Appendix to Chapter 2

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide Appendix 2:.syn

§ 2.syn Synopsis to Appendix 2: Appendix to Chapter 2

TABLE OF LOCAL RULES

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Appendix 2: Appendix to Chapter 2

1-2 Federal Litigation Guide

TABLE OF LOCAL RULES

Click here to view image.

1 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide 3.syn

§ 3.syn Synopsis to Chapter 3: Rule 12 Motions

§ 3.01 Moving to Dismiss Before Answering

§ 3.02 Moving to Narrow and Clarify Issues

§ 3.03 Answering the Claim

§ 3.04 Moving for Judgment on the Pleadings

§ 3.05 Understanding Relationship Between Rule 12 and Other Rules
[1] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rules 4 and 4.1: Summons and Service of Process
[2] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 6: Computing Time
[3] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 7: Pleadings Allowed; Form of Motions
[4] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 8: General Rules of Pleading
[5] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 9: Pleading Special Matters
[6] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 10: Form of Pleadings
[7] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 13: Counterclaim and Cross-Claim
[8] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 15: Amended and Supplemental Pleadings
[9] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 19: Joinder of Persons Needed for Just Adjudication
[10] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 54: Judgments; Costs
[11] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 56: Summary Judgment

§ 3.06 Filing Corporate Disclosure Statement with First Pleading or Motion

§§ 3.07 through 3.09 [Reserved]

§ 3.10 Time for Presenting Pre-Answer Motions

§ 3.11 General Rule: 21 Days to Answer
[1] Serving Responsive Pleading Within 21 Days
[2] Computing 21-Day Period
[3] Responding to Pleading Served by Mail
[4] Responding to Pleading Served Electronically
[5] Responding to Pleading Served to Court Clerk

§ 3.12 Determining Applicable Exceptions to 21-Day Rule
[1] Determining If Statute Provides Different Time Limit
[2] United States Defendant: 60-Day Response Period
[3] Foreign State Defendant: 60-Day Response Period
[4] Response Period Extended If Service of Process Waived
[5] Responding After Serving Pre-Answer Motion
[6] Responding to Supplemental Pleading
[7] Responding to Amended Pleading

§ 3.13 Obtaining Extension of Time to File Pleading or Motion
[1] Requesting Extension of Time Period
[2] Establishing Cause for Extension of Time
[3] Obtaining Court Approval of Stipulated Extension

§ 3.14 Late Answer Is Treated as Motion to Vacate Default

§ 3.15 CHECKLIST: Deadline for Serving Responsive Pleadings and Motions

§§ 3.16 through 3.19 [Reserved]

§ 3.20 Rule 12 Defenses and Objections Must Be Consolidated
[1] Joining Rule 12 Defenses in Single Motion
[2] Joining Motions to Strike and Motions for More Definite Statement
[3] Joining Inconsistent Defenses
[4] Raising Previously Unavailable Defenses
[5] Waiving Objection to Successive Motions

§ 3.21 Waiving Rule 12 Defenses
[1] Understanding Which Rule 12 Defenses Are Subject to Waiver
[2] Waiver by Conduct

§ 3.22 Raising Non-Waivable Defenses and Objections
[1] Asserting Omitted Defense
[2] Raising Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction
[3] Non-Rule 12 Defenses and Matters Are Not Waived

§ 3.23 Drafting Rule 12(b) Motions

§ 3.24 Trial Court Has Discretion to Determine Procedure

§ 3.25 CHECKLIST: Determining When to Raise Rule 12 Defenses and Objections

§§ 3.26 through 3.29 [Reserved]

§ 3.30 Responding to Motion
[1] Options for Responding to Motion
[2] Filing and Serving Opposition Papers
[3] Voluntarily Dismissing Action
[4] Amending the Complaint

§ 3.31 Requesting Hearing on Motion to Dismiss or Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings

§§ 3.32 through 3.39 [Reserved]

§ 3.40 Appealing Ruling on Motions to Dismiss
[1] Order Denying Motion to Dismiss Not Appealable
[2] Order Dismissing Less Than Entire Action
[3] Order Dismissing Complaint With Leave to Amend
[4] Order Dismissing Complaint Without Prejudice

§§ 3.41 through 3.49 [Reserved]

§ 3.50 Raising Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction
[1] Defense May Be Raised at Any Time
[2] Defense May Be Raised by Any Party or by Court
[3] Burden of Proof
[4] Court Resolves Jurisdictional Issues First

§ 3.51 Attacking Subject Matter Jurisdiction on Face of Pleading
[1] Facial Attack Challenges Sufficiency of Allegations of Pleading
[2] Plaintiff's Allegations Accepted as True
[3] Court May Consider Undisputed Facts in Record
[4] Responding to Facial Attack by Amending Complaint

§ 3.52 Attacking Subject Matter Jurisdiction Based on Facts
[1] Using Extrinsic Evidence to Attack Jurisdiction
[2] Evidence Considered in Deciding Motion
[3] Introduction of Extrinsic Evidence Does Not Convert Motion
[4] Seeking Discovery

§ 3.53 Challenging Jurisdiction Based on Amount in Controversy
[1] Basis for Challenge
[2] Determining Amount in Controversy
[3] Burden of Proof
[4] Factors Considered by Court in Determining Whether to Dismiss Case Based on Amount in Controversy

§ 3.54 Challenging Diversity of Citizenship
[1] Court May Consider Unpleaded Bases for Federal Jurisdiction
[2] Court May Dismiss Nondiverse Parties

§ 3.55 Attacking Federal Question Jurisdiction
[1] Basis of Jurisdiction
[2] Jurisdiction Exists If Federal Question Claim Not Frivolous
[3] Challenge Treated as Motion to Dismiss on Merits
[4] Effect of Dismissal

§§ 3.56 through 3.59 [Reserved]

§ 3.60 Raising Defense of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction
[1] Challenging Substantive Basis for Personal Jurisdiction
[2] Methods of Challenging Personal Jurisdiction
[3] Combining Motion With Motion to Transfer Venue

§ 3.61 Waiving Defense of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction
[1] Failing to Assert Defense in Rule 12 Motion or Answer
[2] Failing to Raise Defense in Motion for Change of Venue

[3] Failing to Pursue Defense Raised in Answer
[4] Engaging in Discovery
[5] Consenting to Forum Selection Clause
[6] Removing Case to Federal Court Does Not Waive Defense
[7] Plaintiff Automatically Waives Personal Jurisdiction Objection to Counterclaims

§ 3.62 Submitting Evidence Outside Pleadings

§ 3.63 Burden of Proof
[1] Plaintiff Has Burden of Proof
[2] Showing Required Depends on Procedure
[3] When Motion Decided Before Discovery Is Conducted
[4] When Motion Decided After Discovery, But Without Evidentiary Hearing
[5] Effect of Challenge by Defendant
[6] When Motion Decided After Evidentiary Hearing

§ 3.64 Requesting Discovery on Jurisdictional Issues
[1] Court Has Discretion to Permit Discovery
[2] Disputed Factual Allegations
[3] Jurisdictional Facts and Merits Entwined

§ 3.65 Challenge to Personal Jurisdiction Decided Before Challenge to Venue

§ 3.66 Court's Action on Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction
[1] Denial of Motion to Dismiss
[2] Dismissal Not Decision on Merits
[3] Court May Transfer Rather Than Dismiss Action

§§ 3.67 through 3.79 [Reserved]

§ 3.80 Basis for Challenging Venue
[1] General Venue Statute
[2] Federal Statute With Venue Provision
[3] Forum Selection Clause

§ 3.81 Raising Challenge to Venue
[1] Who May Challenge Venue
[2] Challenging Venue in First Response
[3] Combining Venue Challenge With Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

§ 3.82 Waiving Objections to Venue
[1] Omitting Objection From Rule 12 Motion or Answer
[2] Waiving Objection by Taking Default
[3] Waiving Objection by Conduct
[4] Waiving Objection to Venue by Removing Action
[5] Compare: Right to Request That Venue Be Transferred Is Not Waivable

§ 3.83 Responding to Motion to Dismiss for Improper Venue
[1] Burden of Proof
[2] Conducting Discovery

§ 3.84 Court's Action on Motion to Dismiss for Improper Venue

[1] Dismissal Not on Merits
[2] Transferring Action When Venue Is Improper
[3] Transferring Action When Venue Is Proper

§§ 3.85 through 3.89 [Reserved]

§ 3.90 Basis for Motion

§ 3.91 Motion May Be Made by Any Defendant

§ 3.92 Motion May Be Made at Any Time During Proceedings

§ 3.93 Materials Considered by Court
[1] Pleadings and Matters of Judicial Notice
[2] Materials Court May Consider Without Converting Motion
[3] Materials Court May Not Consider Without Converting Motion

§ 3.94 Determining If Claim for Relief Is Stated
[1] Moving Party's Burden of Persuasion
[2] Court Construes Allegations of Complaint in Favor of Plaintiff

§ 3.95 Moving to Dismiss Claim Involving Fraud or Mistake
[1] Methods of Attacking Pleading
[2] Pleading Fraud and Mistake
[3] Applying Particularity Requirement on Motion to Dismiss

§ 3.96 Court May Convert Rule 12(b)(6) Motion to Motion for Summary Judgment
[1] Court Considers Matters Outside Pleadings
[2] Providing Notice of Conversion
[3] Consequences of Conversion: Court Applies Different Standard on Motion for Summary Judgment

§ 3.97 Amending Complaint in Response to Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim
[1] Clarifying Factual Allegations
[2] Amending Complaint as Matter of Course
[3] Amending Complaint With Leave of Court

§ 3.98 Effect of Rule 12(b)(6) Dismissal
[1] Dismissal on Merits
[2] Court May Still Consider Supplemental State Law Claims

§§ 3.99 through 3.109 [Reserved]

§ 3.110 Dismissal for Insufficiency of Process

§ 3.111 Dismissal for Insufficiency of Service of Process
[1] Grounds for Dismissal
[2] Distinguished From Challenge to Personal Jurisdiction
[3] Raising Challenge to Sufficiency of Service of Process
[4] Waiving Defense of Insufficient Service of Process
[5] Asserting Defense of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction Does Not Preserve Defense Based on Service
[6] Failing to Assert Lack of Personal Jurisdiction Does Not Waive Defense of Insufficient Service

§ 3.112 Procedure on Motion to Dismiss for Insufficient Service of Process

[1] Plaintiff Has Initial Burden of Proof
[2] Burden Shifts to Defendant
[3] Determining Disputed Facts

§ 3.113 Action by Court on Motion to Dismiss
[1] Court's Discretion
[2] Dismissal With or Without Prejudice
[3] Quashing Service
[4] Extension of Time

§§ 3.114 through 3.119 [Reserved]

§ 3.120 Moving to Dismiss for Failure to Join Party Under Rule 19
[1] Basis of Challenge
[2] Raising Challenge
[3] Burden of Proof

§ 3.121 Court's Inquiry on Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Join Party

§ 3.122 Court's Action on Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Join Party

§§ 3.123 through 3.129 [Reserved]

§ 3.130 CHECKLIST: Moving to Dismiss Pursuant to Rule 12

§ 3.131 CHECKLIST: Responding to Rule 12 Motion to Dismiss

§§ 3.132 through 3.139 [Reserved]

§ 3.140 Evaluating Use of Motion for More Definite Statement

§ 3.141 Specific Uses of Motion
[1] Determining Dates for Statute of Limitations
[2] Examples of Proper Motion for More Definite Statement
[3] Motion May Not Be Used to Clarify Damages Claims
[4] Motion May Not Be Used as Substitute for Discovery
[5] Motion May Not Be Used to Ascertain Legal Theory
[6] Motion May Note Be Used to Avoid Answering Complaint

§ 3.142 Motion Must Be Made Prior to Responding

§§ 3.143 through 3.149 [Reserved]

§ 3.150 Using Motion to Strike
[1] Motion Not Favored
[2] Arguing Prejudice
[3] Motion Limited to Attacking Pleading
[4] Basis of Motion
[5] Joining Rule 12 Defenses in Single Motion
[6] Enforcing Order for More Definite Statement

§ 3.151 Understanding Time Limits for Motion to Strike

§§ 3.152 through 3.159 [Reserved]

§ 3.160 Moving for Judgment After Pleadings Close
[1] Nature of Motion
[2] Defenses and Objections Raised by Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

§ 3.161 Timing of Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings

§ 3.162 Standards Applicable to Determining Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings
[1] Court Applies Standards Applicable to 12(b)(6) Motion
[2] Court Assumes Truth of Facts Pleaded by Party Opposing Motion

§ 3.163 Conversion to Motion for Summary Judgment
[1] Court Considers Matters Outside Pleadings
[2] Court Must Provide Reasonable Opportunity to Present Relevant Materials
[3] Propriety of Conversion Depends on Facts of Specific Case

§§ 3.164 through 3.199 [Reserved]

§ 3.200 Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction
[2] Use of Form
[3] Time for Raising Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction
[4] Consolidation of Rule 12 Motions Required
[5] Challenging Diversity Jurisdiction
[6] Challenging Federal Question Jurisdiction

§ 3.201 Alternative Paragraph: Lack of Personal Jurisdiction
[1] FORM
Alternative Paragraph: Lack of Personal Jurisdiction
[2] Use of Form
[3] Time for Raising Lack of Personal Jurisdiction; Waiver

§ 3.202 Alternative Paragraph: Improper Venue
[1] FORM
Alternative Paragraph: Improper Venue
[2] Use of Form
[3] Venue Provisions; Burden of Proof
[4] Transfer as Alternative to Dismissal for Improper Venue
[5] Time for Raising Improper Venue

§ 3.203 Alternative Paragraph: Transfer for Improper Venue
[1] FORM
Alternative Paragraph: Transfer for Improper Venue
[2] Use of Form
[3] Venue Provisions; Burden of Proof
[4] Dismissal as Alternative to Transfer for Improper Venue
[5] Time for Raising Improper Venue

§ 3.204 Alternative Paragraph: Failure to State Claim
[1] FORM

Alternative Paragraph: Failure to State Claim
[2] Use of Form
[3] Burden of Proof
[4] Granting Leave to Amend Before Dismissal
[5] Time for Raising Failure to State Claim
[6] Special Pleading Standards Applicable to Fraud and Other Actions
[7] Submission of Extrinsic Evidence; Conversion to Summary Judgment Motion

§ 3.205 Notice of Motion for Judgment on Pleadings
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Judgment on Pleadings
[2] Use of Form
[3] Grounds for Motion for Judgment on Pleadings
[4] Time for Moving for Judgment on Pleadings
[5] Submission of Extrinsic Evidence; Conversion to Summary Judgment Motion

2 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

When presented with a complaint, a defendant must examine the allegations to determine whether to respond to the pleading by filing an answer, or by making a Rule 12 pre-answer motion. Rule 12(b) sets forth seven defenses that may be raised by pre-answer motion practice: (1) subject matter jurisdiction; (2) personal jurisdiction; (3) improper venue; (4) insufficiency of process; (5) insufficiency of service of process; (6) failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted; and (7) failure to join a party under Rule 19.

Whether to make a pre-answer motion does not depend on whether a defense exists. Counsel may choose to answer a complaint rather than make a Rule 12 motion because of expense, or because counsel wants to move quickly for summary judgment. Few defenses give rise to a successful motion to dismiss the complaint: incontestable documentary evidence supporting the defense is one of the exceptions.

Where the plaintiff is required to plead with specificity pursuant to Rule 9(b)'s requirement of detail where fraud or mistake are elements of the cause of action, a motion to dismiss may be useful. The Private Securities Law Reform Act of 1995 (15 U.S.C. § 78u-4), when added to the Rule 9(b) requirements, puts a very heavy pleading burden on federal securities law plaintiffs, making a dismissal motion particularly useful.

Rule 12(b) motions are nonetheless common. Counsel must, however, be familiar with the individual judge's rules, since many judges require a pre-motion conference. Other Rule 12 motions include motions for judgment on the pleadings (Rule 12(c)), motions for a more definite statement (Rule 12(e)) and motions to strike (Rule 12(f)). These motions are far less common than Rule 12(b) motions.

This chapter discusses how to raise defenses and objections in pre-answer motions pursuant to Rule 12. Also included are:

- The timetable for serving responses to pleadings
- Each defense and objection available pursuant to Rule 12
- The procedure for raising those defenses or objections

The chapter includes the following sample forms:

- Motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, with alternative language for lack of personal jurisdiction, improper venue, and failure to state a claim

- Motion for judgment on the pleadings

For expanded coverage of Rule 12 motions, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 12, Defenses and Objections--When and How Presented--By Pleading or Motion--Motion for Judgment on Pleadings (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
A. Considering Responsive Options

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.01

§ 3.01 Moving to Dismiss Before Answering

A party may raise the following defenses in a motion to dismiss, before serving the responsive pleading: n1

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction [see §§ 3.50 -3.55]
- Lack of personal jurisdiction [see §§ 3.60 -3.66]
- Improper venue [see §§ 3.80 -3.84]
- Insufficient process [see §§ 3.110]
- Insufficient service of process [see §§ 3.111 -3.113]
- Failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted [see §§ 3.90 -3.98]
- Failure to join an indispensable party pursuant to Rule 19 [see §§ 3.120 -3.122]

A party is not required to make a pre-answer Rule 12 motion, but may instead assert any or all of the above defenses in a responsive pleading. However, a party who makes a pre-answer Rule 12 motion must assert any available Rule 12 defenses and objections in the motion. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g).

4 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
A. Considering Responsive Options

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.02

§ 3.02 Moving to Narrow and Clarify Issues

Rule 12 provides for two pre-answer motions aimed at clarifying the pleadings:

- Motion for more definite statement. A party may move for a more definite statement to clarify a pleading that is so vague and ambiguous that the party cannot reasonably be expected to frame a responsive pleading. n1 Rule 12(e) motions are rarely granted. n2

- Motion to strike. A party may move to strike redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous material, or insufficient defenses from an adverse party's pleading. n3 Motions to strike are generally not favored. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDefects of FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeImmaterial MattersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeRedundant MattersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeScandalous Matters

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e); see § 3.140.

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Hanford Nuclear Reservation Litig., 780 F. Supp. 1551, 1583 (E.D. Wash. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f); see § 3.150.

(n4)Footnote 4. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Vanderweele, 833 F. Supp. 1383, 1387 (N.D. Ind. 1993) .

5 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
A. Considering Responsive Options

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.03

§ 3.03 Answering the Claim

If the defending party does not file a Rule 12(b) pre-answer motion to dismiss theclaim for relief n1 (whether a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim), or a motion to clarify the complaint, n2 then the defending party must file an answer stating in short and plain terms its responses to each claim asserted, and must admit or deny each averment. n3

Generally the defendant's strategy will involve a combination of Rule 12(b) motions filed before the answer, and denials and affirmative defenses set forth in the answer.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 3.01.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 3.02.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b).

6 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
A. Considering Responsive Options

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.04

§ 3.04 Moving for Judgment on the Pleadings

A party may move for judgment on the pleadings after the pleadings are closed. n1 Although Rule 12(c) rule does not specify a deadline for filing a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the motion may not delay the trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
A. Considering Responsive Options

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.05

§ 3.05 Understanding Relationship Between Rule 12 and Other Rules

[1] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rules 4 and 4.1: Summons and Service of Process

Rule 4 prescribes the procedures for preparing, issuing, and serving process in the form of a summons. n1 Rule 4.1 covers service of process by means other than a summons. n2 When those procedures have not been adequately followed, Rules 12(b)(4) and 12(b)(5) provide a vehicle for challenging the sufficiency of either the process or service of the process. n3

[2] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 6: Computing Time

Rule 6 interacts with the Rule 12(a) specifications of the time periods that apply to serving answers and motions. Rules 6(a) and 6(b) respectively set out the provisions for computing and enlarging those periods, while Rule 6(e), often called the "mail rule" allows for more time when service is through the mail. Rule 6 must therefore be taken into account in calculating the time in which to answer. n4

[3] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 7: Pleadings Allowed; Form of Motions

Rule 7 specifies the types of pleadings permitted and describes the form motions should take. n5

Rule 12 interacts with Rule 7 in the following ways:

- When all of the pleadings allowed under Rule 7(a) that will be filed in the action have been filed, the pleadings are "closed." Rule 12(c) allows for a motion for judgment on the pleadings after the pleadings close. n6

- Rule 12(h)(2) allows certain defenses and objections to be made in any pleading included in Rule 7(a) without incurring the risk of waiving those defenses or objections. n7

- A Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted replaces the demurrer abolished by Rule 7(c). n8

- The requirements for motions pursuant to Rule 7(b) apply to Rule 12 motions.

[4] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 8: General Rules of Pleading

Rule 8 gives the pleader guidance in framing claims for relief and defenses, which generally should be by "notice pleading." n9 Sufficiency of the pleading, or inclusion of matters that go beyond providing notice, has a great bearing on the following matters:

- Whether to grant a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) n10
- Whether to order the plaintiff to file a more definite statement pursuant to Rule 12(e) n11
- Whether material is redundant, immaterial, or impertinent, and should be stricken pursuant to Rule 12(f) n12

[5] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 9: Pleading Special Matters

Rule 9 imposes additional requirements for pleading certain matters. n13 For example,although notice pleading discourages inclusion of detailed factual allegations, the circumstances surrounding allegations of fraud must be pleaded specifically pursuant to Rule 9(b). n14

This requirement for specificity will affect the rulings on a motion for a more definite statement, a motion to strike, or a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. n15

[6] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 10: Form of Pleadings

Rule 10(c) provides that any written instrument that is an exhibit to a pleading is a part of the pleading for all purposes. n16 Rule 10(c) controls the determination of whether a matter is considered part of a pleading or outside the pleading.

Whether the court considers matters outside the pleadings affects the procedures for disposing of the following Rule 12 motions:

- Motions to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction [see §§ 3.50 -3.55]
- Motions to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction [see §§ 3.60 -3.66]
- Motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim [see §§ 3.90 -3.98]
- Motions for judgment on the pleadings

[7] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 13: Counterclaim and Cross-Claim

Rule 12 specifies the time periods for answering counterclaims and cross-claims. n17 Rule 13 provides the procedures for pleading counterclaims and cross-claims. n18

Whether and when a counterclaim and its reply, or a cross-claim and its answer, are filed affects when the pleadings close. Motions to dismiss filed after the pleadings close, known as motions for judgment on the pleadings, are governed by Rule 12(c). n19

[8] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 15: Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

Rule 15 allows a party to amend its pleading once as a matter of course within 21 days of serving it. n20 Any such amendment affects the time to answer prescribed in Rule 12(a). n21

Many defects raised by Rule 12 motions to dismiss can be cured by amending the pleading. Rule 15(a) expressly directs that the "court should freely give leave when justice so requires."

[9] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 19: Joinder of Persons Needed for Just Adjudication

Rule 19 specifies when a party is considered indispensable to the litigation. n22 Rule 12(b)(7) allows a motion to dismiss for failing to join a party pursuant to Rule 19. n23

[10] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 54: Judgments; Costs

In a case involving multiple claims and multiple parties, the court may dismiss fewer than all claims and parties involved in response to a Rule 12 motion. n24 Rule 54(b) provides that a partial dismissal is not a final appealable order, unless the court does both of the following:

- Directs the entry of final judgment as to the dismissed claims or parties
- Expressly determines that there is no just reason for delaying entry of the final judgment until adjudication of the remaining claims and parties

[11] Relationship Between Rule 12 and Rule 56: Summary Judgment

Rule 56 governs the procedure for summary judgment. n25 If the court considers matters outside the pleadings on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, or a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings, the motion must be converted to a motion for summary judgment. n26

If a Rule 12 motion is converted to a motion for summary judgment, the court must comply with the provisions of Rule 56, such as affording the parties an opportunity to present all material made pertinent to the motion by Rule 56.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.1.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4), (5); see also §§ 3.110, 3.111.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c); see also § 3.240.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2); see also § 3.22.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); see also § 3.90.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8.

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 3.93.

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 3.144.

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 3.156.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9.

(n14)Footnote 14. See § 3.95 (moving to dismiss claim involving fraud or mistake).

(n15)Footnote 15. See §§ 3.144, 3.156, 3.93.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 10.

(n17)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13.

(n19)Footnote 19. See § 3.240.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(A).

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 3.12[7].

(n22)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19.

(n23)Footnote 23. See § 3.120.

(n24)Footnote 24. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n26)Footnote 26. See §§ 3.96, 3.243.

8 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
A. Considering Responsive Options

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.06

§ 3.06 Filing Corporate Disclosure Statement with First Pleading or Motion

To enable judges to make informed decisions concerning possible disqualification based on financial interest, all nongovernmental corporate parties must file two copies of a statement that either: n1

- Identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock

- Indicates that there is not a parent corporation nor any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock

The statement must be filed with the corporate party's first appearance, pleading, petition, motion, response, or other request addressed to the court. n2 Corporate parties must file a supplemental statement updating any changes in the disclosure information. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDisqualifications & RecusalsGroundsFinancial Interests

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
A. Considering Responsive Options

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.07 through 3.09

[Reserved]

§§ 3.07[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
B. Timing of Responsive Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.10

§ 3.10 Time for Presenting Pre-Answer Motions

A defendant may make any or all of the following motions before serving an answer:

- Motion to dismiss n1
- Motion for more definite statement n2
- Motion to strike any insufficient defense, or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
B. Timing of Responsive Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.11

§ 3.11 General Rule: 21 Days to Answer

[1] Serving Responsive Pleading Within 21 Days

As a general rule, a party must serve a responsive pleading within 21 days after being served with a complaint, counterclaim, or cross-claim. n1

The 21-day rule applies as follows:

- Answer to complaint. A defendant must serve an answer within 21 days after being served with the summons and complaint. n2 Unless the court orders otherwise, an answer to an amended complaint must be made within the time remaining to respond to the original complaint or within 14 days after service of the amended complaint, whichever is later. n3

- Answer to cross-claim. A cross-defendant served with a pleading stating a cross-claim must serve an answer within 21 days after being served with the pleading containing the cross-claim. n4

- Reply to counterclaim. The plaintiff must reply to a counterclaim asserted in the answer within 21 days after service of the answer. n4.1

A party must serve a reply to an answer within 21 days after being served with an order to reply, unless the order specifies a different time. n5

[2] Computing 21-Day Period

The 21-day period for responding begins to run the day after service of the pleading. Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays are counted as part of the 21-day period. n6 However, if the last day of the 21-day period is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period is extended, and expires on the first day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n6.1

[3] Responding to Pleading Served by Mail

If a pleading was served by mail, the time period for responding to that pleading is extended by three days. n7

For example, if an answer containing a counterclaim is served by mail, the plaintiff must serve its reply to the counterclaim within 24 days after the answer was served. Service by mail is complete upon mailing. n8

[4] Responding to Pleading Served Electronically

If a pleading was served electronically or by any other means based on written consent under Rule 5(b)(2)(D), the time period to respond to the pleading is extended by three days. n9

[5] Responding to Pleading Served to Court Clerk

If a pleading was served to the clerk of the court based on no known address, the time period to respond to the pleading is extended by three days. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a); see [2], below. (calculating 20-day period).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(C).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n8)Footnote 6.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n10)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(2)(c).

(n11)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n12)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
B. Timing of Responsive Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.12

§ 3.12 Determining Applicable Exceptions to 21-Day Rule

[1] Determining If Statute Provides Different Time Limit

A federal statute may prescribe its own time limit for responding. If the claim was brought under such a statute, the responsive pleading must be served within the time limit prescribed by the statute, rather than the 21-day time limit prescribed by Rule 12. n1

[2] United States Defendant: 60-Day Response Period

The United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States sued in an official capacity, must respond to a complaint, cross-claim, or counterclaim within 60 days after service is made on the United States attorney. n2

An officer or employee of the United States sued in an individual capacity for acts or omissions occurring in connection with the performance of duties on behalf of the United States has 60 days after service of the pleading on the officer or employee or service on the U.S. Attorney, whichever is later, to respond to a complaint, cross-claim, or counterclaim. n2.1

[3] Foreign State Defendant: 60-Day Response Period

If the defendant is a foreign state or a political subdivision, agency or instrumentality of a foreign state, the defendant must serve an answer or other responsive pleading to the complaint within 60 days after service is made. n3

[4] Response Period Extended If Service of Process Waived

The time period for responding is extended if the defendant timely waives service of process at the plaintiff's request. n4

If service of process was waived, the defendant must respond to the complaint within one of the following time limits: n5

- 60 days from the date the request for waiver was sent, if the request was sent within the United States

- 90 days from the date the request for waiver was sent, if the request was sent to a foreign country

[5] Responding After Serving Pre-Answer Motion

Filing a Rule 12 motion to dismiss, strike, or for a more definite statement before responding to a claim, cross-claim, or counterclaim alters the time period for filing a responsive pleading. n6

With respect to a motion to dismiss or strike, if the court denies the motion or postpones its disposition until the trial, the responsive pleading must be served within 14 days after notice of the court's action. n7 With respect to a motion for a more definite statement, the responsive pleading must be served within 14 days after the service of the more definite statement. n8

The response time is computed as follows: n9

- Exclude the day the order is entered
- Count every other day, including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays
- Include the last day of the period, but if the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday

[6] Responding to Supplemental Pleading

If the court permits a party to serve a supplemental pleading, it may order the adverse party to respond within a specified period of time. n10

Local rules may permit the time for answering to be set in the pretrial conference or case management plan.

[7] Responding to Amended Pleading

If a party amends its pleading pursuant to Rule 15, the opposing party must serve a response within the time remaining for responding to the original pleading, or within 14 days of service of the amendment, whichever period is longer. n11

Local rules may permit the time for answering to be set in the pretrial conference or case management plan.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1608(d).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 3.13.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(A).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(B).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d); see Ch. 1, Pleadings.

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3); see General Mills, Inc. v. Kraft Foods Global, Inc., 487 F.3d 1368, 1376 (Fed. Cir. 2007) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
B. Timing of Responsive Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.13

§ 3.13 Obtaining Extension of Time to File Pleading or Motion

[1] Requesting Extension of Time Period

A party may request that the court extend the time period for filing a pleading, a motion, or a response to a motion. A request for an extension of time may be made before or after the time period has expired. The court has discretion to grant such a request "for cause shown." n1

If the time period has already expired, the request must be made by motion. If the time period has not expired, the request may be made with or without motion or notice. Thus, the requesting party is not obligated to file a formal motion for extension of time. The prudent course, however, is always to file a motion when requesting an extension. n2

Counsel must check the individual judge's rules on extensions.

[2] Establishing Cause for Extension of Time

A court has wide discretion to grant an extension of time if the request is made before the time period has expired. n3

If the time period has already expired, the court will extend the time period only if the party can establish excusable neglect. n4

[3] Obtaining Court Approval of Stipulated Extension

Parties may stipulate to an extension of time. Even if the parties reach such an agreement, however, the stipulation must be approved by the court. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureCounselGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b); see Maldonado-Denis v. Castillo-Rodriguez, 23 F.3d 576, 584 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Baden v. Craig-Hallum, Inc., 115 F.R.D. 582, 584-585 (D. Minn. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b); In re VMS Sec. Litig., 145 F.R.D. 458, 462 (N.D. Ill. 1992) , aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 21 F.3d 139 (7th Cir. 1994).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Orange Theatre Corp. v. Rayherstz Amusement Corp., 130 F.2d 185, 187 (3d Cir. 1942); In re Sonoma V. 703 F.2d 429, 431-432 (9th Cir. 1983) ; Allstate Ins. Co. v. Administratia Asigurarilor De Stat, 163 F.R.D. 196, 199 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
B. Timing of Responsive Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.14

§ 3.14 Late Answer Is Treated as Motion to Vacate Default

The filing of a late answer is treated as a motion to vacate a default and Rule 55(c) criteria will be applied. n1 For discussion of Rule 55(c) motions to vacate defaults, see Ch. 44, Findings and Judgments.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From Default

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. John v. Sotheby's, Inc., 141 F.R.D. 29, 35 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; see Fed. R.Civ. P. 55(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
B. Timing of Responsive Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.15

§ 3.15 CHECKLIST: Deadline for Serving Responsive Pleadings and Motions

The following checklist will assist counsel in determining the deadline for serving an answer, a Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss, a Rule 12(e) motion for more definite statement, or a Rule 12(f) motion to strike. Counsel should check local rules and the individual judge's rules for motion procedures. Note that individual judge's rules may require scheduling a pre-motion conference.

Determine when response to pleading must be served. Upon receiving a pleading, determine which of the following is the applicable time period for serving an answer or a Rule 12 pre-answer motion:

☐ Statutory time period. If the claim was brought under a federal statute that prescribes a time period for responding, that time period prevails. n1

☐ 21-day period. If there is no time period prescribed by statute, the defendant must usually serve an answer or a Rule 12 motion within 21 days of the date the complaint was served. n2

☐ 60-day period. A response must be served within 60 days if:

☐ Federal government defendant. The United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States sued in an official capacity, must respond to a complaint, cross-claim, or counterclaim within 60 days after the U.S. Attorney is served with the pleading asserting the claim. n3 An officer or employee of the United States sued in an individual capacity for acts or omissions occurring in connection with the performance of duties on behalf of the United States must serve a response to the complaint, cross-claim, or counterclaim within 60 days after service on the officer or employee, or service on the U.S. Attorney, whichever is later. n4

☐ Foreign state defendant. If the defendant is a foreign state or a political subdivision, agency or instrumentality of a foreign state, the defendant must serve an answer or other responsive pleading within 60 days after service is made. n5

☐ Service of process waived. If the defendant timely waived service of summons upon request by the plaintiff, the defendant has 60 days from the date the request was sent within which to serve an answer or file a motion. If the request was sent to the defendant at an address outside a United States judicial district, this period is extended to 90 days. n6

☐ Time period for responding to complaint amended as a matter of course. The defendant must respond to the amended pleading within 14 days after it is served or within the time remaining for responding to the original complaint, whichever is longer, unless the court orders otherwise. n7

☐ Time period for answering complaint after making Rule 12 motion. If the defendant has made a pre-answer motion under Rule 12, counsel must serve an answer within 14 days of the following events. With respect to a motion to dismiss or strike, if the court denies the motion or postpones its disposition until the trial, the responsive pleading must be served within 14 days after notice of the court's action. n8 With respect to a motion for a more definite statement, the responsive pleading must be served within 14 days after the service of the more definite statement. n9 If, instead of dismissing the complaint, the court permits the plaintiff to amend, counsel must serve an answer within 14 days of the service of the amended pleading.

☐ Determine whether time period is extended. Determine whether the time period is extended because of any of the following:

☐ Service by mail. If the pleading was served by mail, three days are added to the applicable time period. n10

☐ Electronic service and other means of delivery. If the pleading was served by electronic or other means consented to in writing, three days are added to the applicable time period. n11

☐ Service to the court clerk. If the pleading was served to the clerk of the court based on no known address, three days are added to the applicable time period. n12

☐ Counting Saturdays, Sundays, and Holidays. Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays are not counted toward the time period. If the last day of the period for responding is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the time period is extended and ends on the first day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n13 For any response period, Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays are always counted. n14

☐ Request additional time, if needed. If a response cannot be made within the prescribed time period, request that the court grant additional time for responding. n15

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A(i)).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(3); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(i)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1608(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(A).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(B).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
B. Timing of Responsive Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.16 through 3.19

[Reserved]

§§ 3.16[Reserved]

17 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
1. Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.20

§ 3.20 Rule 12 Defenses and Objections Must Be Consolidated

[1] Joining Rule 12 Defenses in Single Motion

A party who raises a Rule 12 defense in a pre-answer motion must join with it any other Rule 12 defenses that are available to the party at the time the motion is made. n1

In other words, a party may not assert some Rule 12 defenses in a Rule 12 motion and others in the answer; likewise, the party may not bring successive Rule 12 motions. n2

[2] Joining Motions to Strike and Motions for More Definite Statement

If a motion for a more definite statement or a motion to strike is made, it must be consolidated in a pre-answer motion with any other Rule 12 defense then available to the party. For example, a defendant who moves for dismissal pursuant to Rule 12(b) and does not join with it a Rule 12(e) motion for a more definite statement waives the right to move for a more definite statement. n3

Likewise, a defendant who moves for a more definite statement pursuant to Rule 12(e) cannot later move to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, if the defense was available at the time the motion for a more definite statement was made.

[3] Joining Inconsistent Defenses

A party does not waive a defense merely by joining it with another inconsistent or mutually exclusive defense. n4

[4] Raising Previously Unavailable Defenses

Mandatory consolidation applies only to defenses and objections "available to the party at the time the motion is filed." n5

If a new defense or objection becomes available after the party's initial pre-answer Rule 12 motion, the party may raise the defense or objection in either a new pre-answer motion or in the answer. If, for example, the defendant moves for and obtains a more definite statement, and that statement reveals a new ground for a motion to dismiss, the defendant may make another Rule 12 motion raising the new defense, or may raise the new defense in its answer.

If the defendant files a Rule 12 motion to dismiss, and the plaintiff subsequently amends the complaint, the defendant may make a new Rule 12 motion if the amended complaint reveals a new defense.

However, amending a complaint does not revive omitted defenses or objections that the defendant could have raised in response to the original complaint. n6

[5] Waiving Objection to Successive Motions

A plaintiff may waive any objection to successive Rule 12 motions by responding to the merits of the defenses asserted in the second motion. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g); Albany Ins. Co. v. Almacenadora Somex, S.A., 5 F.3d 907, 909 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Santos v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 902 F.2d 1092, 1095 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g); California Int'l Chem. Co. v. Neptune Pool Serv., Inc., 770 F. Supp. 1530, 1532 (M.D. Fla. 1991).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g); see Glater v. Eli Lilly & Co., 712 F.2d 735, 738 (1st Cir. 1983).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Gilmore v. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc., 811 F.2d 108, 112 (2d Cir. 1987) ; Harris Bank Naperville v. Pachaly, 902 F. Supp. 156, 157 (N.D. Ill. 1995) ; Church of Scientology v. Linberg, 529 F. Supp. 945, 967 (C.D. Cal. 1981) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Guccione v. Flynt, 617 F. Supp. 917, 919 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
1. Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.21

§ 3.21 Waiving Rule 12 Defenses

[1] Understanding Which Rule 12 Defenses Are Subject to Waiver

The defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction, improper venue, insufficiency of process, and insufficiency of service of process are waived under either of the following circumstances: n1

- The party made a pre-answer motion under Rule 12 but omitted the defense, despite its availability at the time the motion was made. A waivable defense that is omitted from a pre-answer motion under Rule 12 may not be pleaded in the answer. n2

- The party did not make a pre-answer motion and did not include the defense in a responsive pleading or an amended pleading permitted to be made as a matter of course. n3

Accordingly, before filing the answer, the defendant must decide whether to object to personal jurisdiction, venue, process, or service.

The following defenses and objections are so fundamental that they are not waived if omitted from a Rule 12(b) motion or from a responsive pleading: n4

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction [see §§ 3.50 -3.55]

- Failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted [see §§ 3.90 -3.98]

- Failure to join an indispensable party

- Failure to state a legal defense to a claim

[2] Waiver by Conduct

A party may waive a defense by his or her conduct, even though that party has technically complied with Rule 12 requirements for raising the defense. n5

Asserting lack of personal jurisdiction, insufficiency of process, or improper service of process in an answer does not preserve the defense in perpetuity. To preserve the defense, the defendant must still present it by motion for the court's consideration in a reasonably timely manner. n6

Likewise, if a defendant participates in substantial activity in the case after first asserting the defense in the answer but prior to moving to dismiss, the defendant may have waived the defense raised in the answer. n7

The following types of conduct have been held to waive a Rule 12(b) defense that was properly raised in a responsive pleading:

- Engaging in extensive discovery addressed to the merits of the case. Agreeing to a pre-trial discovery schedule and participating in extensive discovery is inconsistent with a defense of lack of personal jurisdiction or insufficiency of service of process. If the answer raises one of these defenses, the proper course is to engage in limited discovery on jurisdictional issues. n8

- Delay in pursuing defense of improper service of process. The defendants against whom a default judgment was entered participated in post-judgment proceedings for more than six years, after which they moved to vacate the judgment on grounds of insufficient service. The appellate court affirmed the lower court's finding that the defendants had waived the defense. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultEntry of Default Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h), Committee Note of 1966.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2), (3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Neirbo Co. v. Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp., 308 U.S. 165, 168 (1939).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Yeldell v. Tutt, 913 F. 2d 533, 538-539 (8th Cir. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Continental Bank, N.A. v. Meyer, 10 F. 3d 1293, 1296-1297 (7th Cir. 1993) ; Krank v. Express Funding Corp., 133 F.R.D. 14, 17 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) ; cf. Classic Motel, Inc. v. Purchasing Group Corp., 149 F.R.D. 528, 533 (1993) (court found that defendant did not waive defense of absence of personal jurisdiction even though he waited two years to bring motion to dismiss and during those two years participated in written discovery, deposed plaintiff and an expert and brought motion for summary judgment).

(n8)Footnote 8. Burton v. Northern Dutchess Hosp., 106 F.R.D. 477, 481 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Trustees of Cent. Laborers' Welfare Fund v. Lowery, 924 F.2d 731, 734 (7th Cir. 1991) .

19 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
1. Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.22

§ 3.22 Raising Non-Waivable Defenses and Objections

[1] Asserting Omitted Defense

A party who omits a non-waivable defense or objection n1 from a Rule 12 pre-answer motion may assert the omitted defense or objection in any of three ways: n2

- In a Rule 7(a) responsive pleading
- In a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings
- At trial on the merits

[2] Raising Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The defense of lack of subject matter jurisdiction may also be raised at any time "by suggestion of the parties" or sua sponte by the court. n3 Lack of subject matter jurisdiction may also be raised for the first time on appeal. n4

For complete discussion of subject matter jurisdiction and Rule 12, see §§ 3.50 -3.55.

[3] Non-Rule 12 Defenses and Matters Are Not Waived

Rule 12's consolidation and waiver provisions apply only to defenses or matters that may be raised by motion under Rule 12. They do not govern waiver of affirmative defenses, which must be pleaded in accordance with Rule 8(c).

Similarly, motions other than those specified in Rule 12, such as motions to stay or for transfer pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a), are not waived if they are omitted from a Rule 12 pre-answer motion. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over

ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 3.21[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Things Remembered, Inc. v. Petrarca, 516 U.S. 124 (1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Giotis v. Apollo of the Ozarks, Inc., 800 F.2d 660, 664 (7th Cir. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
1. Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.23

§ 3.23 Drafting Rule 12(b) Motions

Rule 12 motions are generally drafted and served like any other motions.

The following motion practice topics are covered in detail in Chapter 2, The Mechanics of Motion Practice:

- Governing procedural law of federal motion practice
- Oral motions
- Papers required in support of and in opposition to motions, including memoranda of law and affidavits or affidavit substitutes
- Scheduling the motion return date
- Use of orders to show cause, to expedite the return date, or to obtain ex parte relief
- Motions to enlarge (extend) time
- Serving and filing motion papers
- Opposing the motion and replying to opposition papers
- Filing cross-motions or counter-motions
- Oral argument of motions
- Settling orders

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

21 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
1. Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.24

§ 3.24 Trial Court Has Discretion to Determine Procedure

A district court judge has broad discretion to determine the procedure to be followed on a motion to dismiss. The court may determine the motion on the basis of affidavits alone, or it may permit discovery in aid of the motion and conduct an evidentiary hearing. The court may also defer the matter until trial. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cutco Indus., Inc., v. Naughton, 806 F.2d 361, 365 (2d Cir. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
1. Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.25

§ 3.25 CHECKLIST: Determining When to Raise Rule 12 Defenses and Objections

The following checklist will assist counsel in analyzing basic Rule 12 procedures, before deciding what defense to raise, and when to do so.

☐ Joining defenses. All available Rule 12 defenses must be joined in one motion. n1

☐ Avoiding waiver. The following defenses are waived if not raised in Rule 12 pre-answer motion, answer, or answer amended as matter of course: n2

- ☐ Lack of personal jurisdiction [see §§ 3.60-3.66].
- ☐ Improper venue [see §§ 3.80-3.84].
- ☐ Insufficiency of process [see § 3.150].
- ☐ Insufficiency of service of process [see §§ 3.111-3.113].

☐ Analyzing waiver by omission from previous Rule 12 motion. If the party has already served a Rule 12 motion, and the defense or objection was available at the time the motion was made, the following rules apply:

- ☐ The defense or objection may not be raised in a second Rule 12 pre-answer motion. n3
- ☐ Waivable defense may not be raised in the answer. n4

☐ Omitted non-waivable defense may be raised in pleading permitted under Rule 7(a), in motion for judgment on pleadings, or at trial on merits. n5

☐ Lack of subject matter jurisdiction may be raised at any time, including on appeal. n6

☐ Raising non-waivable defenses. Omitted defenses or objections can be raised by: n7

☐ Rule 7(a) responsive pleading.

☐ Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings.

☐ At trial on the merits.

☐ Following up on defenses raised by answer. Raising a waivable defense (i.e., lack of personal jurisdiction, improper venue, insufficiency of process, or improper service of process) in an answer does not preserve the defense indefinitely. The defendant must still present the defense for the court's consideration in a reasonably timely manner. n8

☐ Avoiding sanctions. Raising an improper defense or objection may result in sanctions under Rule 11. n9

☐ Filing corporate disclosure statement. When filing a pre-answer Rule 12 motion, corporate parties must file two copies of a statement that either:

☐ Identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock

☐ Indicates that there is not a parent corporation nor any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g); see § 3.20.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 (h)(1); see also § 3.21.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g), (h).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g), (h).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Things Remembered, Inc. v. Petrarca, 516 U.S. 124 (1995) ; see also §§ 3.50-3.55.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Yeldell v. Tutt, 913 F. 2d 533, 538-539 (8th Cir. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
1. Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.26 through 3.29

[Reserved]

§§ 3.26[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
2. Opposing Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.30

§ 3.30 Responding to Motion

[1] Options for Responding to Motion

A party may respond to a Rule 12 motion to dismiss by taking any of the following actions: n1

- Filing and serving opposition papers [see [2], below]
- Voluntarily dismissing the action [see [3], below]
- Amending the complaint [see [4], below]

[2] Filing and Serving Opposition Papers

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require opposition papers to be served no later than 7 days before the hearing, unless otherwise permitted by the court. n2

As a general rule, opposition papers are filed with the court at the same time they are served on the other parties. Local rules should be checked for applicable requirements.

[3] Voluntarily Dismissing Action

At any time before an answer is filed or a motion for summary judgment is made, the plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss the action without a court order. In most instances, a voluntary dismissal is without prejudice. However, if the plaintiff has previously dismissed an action based on or including the same claim in any state or federal court, the dismissal is with prejudice. n3

Voluntary dismissal may be used to dismiss an action as to a nondiverse defendant for the purpose of preserving federal diversity jurisdiction, unless the defendant is an indispensable party pursuant to Rule 19. n4

[4] Amending the Complaint

A party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course within: n5

- 21 days after serving it, or
- If the pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, 21 days after service of a responsive pleading or 21 days after service of a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f), whichever is earlier

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotionsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Rhone-Poulenc Inc. v. International Ins. Co., 71 F.3d 1299, 1306 (7th Cir. 1996).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1).

25 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
2. Opposing Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.31

§ 3.31 Requesting Hearing on Motion to Dismiss or Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings

Unless a party requests a hearing, the court may decide a motion to dismiss or for judgment on the pleadings without conducting a hearing. The court also has the discretion to defer the hearing until trial. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(i).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
2. Opposing Rule 12 Motions

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.32 through 3.39

[Reserved]

§§ 3.32[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
3. Considering Appeals

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.40

§ 3.40 Appealing Ruling on Motions to Dismiss

[1] Order Denying Motion to Dismiss Not Appealable

The denial of a motion to dismiss is considered nonfinal, and is therefore not immediately appealable. n1

[2] Order Dismissing Less Than Entire Action

Ordinarily, an order that dismisses some claims or parties but leaves others in the action is not a final judgment, and is therefore not immediately appealable. n2

However, if the court makes an express determination that there is no just reason for delay, it may direct the entry of a final judgment as to fewer than all claims or parties in the action. In that case, the order of dismissal may be appealed. n3

[3] Order Dismissing Complaint With Leave to Amend

An order dismissing a complaint but granting leave to amend is not final, and is therefore not appealable. n4

However, an order that dismisses a complaint "without prejudice" but does not specifically grant the plaintiff leave to amend is a final order, and may therefore be appealed. n5

If an order dismisses a complaint with leave to amend, the plaintiff may elect to stand on the original complaint rather than file an amended complaint. In that case, the plaintiff may appeal the order dismissing the complaint. n6

A plaintiff who chooses to stand on the complaint should file a written disclaimer of his or her intent to amend. n7

[4] Order Dismissing Complaint Without Prejudice

If the district court dismisses a complaint without specifically granting leave to amend, the order of dismissal is a final order, and therefore appealable. Dismissals "with prejudice" and "without prejudice" are equally appealable.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & AmendCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Hill v. City of New York, 45 F.3d 653, 659 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Holloway v. Walker, 765 F.2d 517, 525 (5th Cir. 1985) ; Briggs & Stratton Corp. v. Local 232, Int'l Union, Allied Industrial Workers of America (AFL-CIO), 36 F.3d 712, 714 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. WMX Technologies, Inc. v. Miller, 104 F.3d 1133, 1135-1136 (9th Cir. 1997) ; Communications Workers of Am. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 932 F.2d 199, 204-205 (3d Cir. 1991) ; Bastian v. Petren Resources Corp., 892 F.2d 680, 682 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Quartana v. Utterback, 789 F.2d 1297, 1299-1300 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Shapiro v. UJB Financial Corp., 964 F.2d 272, 278-279 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Connecticut Nat'l Bank v. Fluor Corp., 808 F.2d 957, 960-961 (2d Cir. 1987) ; Borelli v. City of Reading, 532 F.2d 950, 951 n.1 (3d Cir. 1976).

28 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
C. Procedure for Rule 12 Defenses and Objections
3. Considering Appeals

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.41 through 3.49

[Reserved]

§§ 3.41[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
1. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.50

§ 3.50 Raising Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Defense May Be Raised at Any Time

A party may seek dismissal based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction at any time during the course of trial or appellate proceedings. n1

Because the defense of lack of subject matter jurisdiction challenges the court's statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate the case, it cannot be waived. n2

[2] Defense May Be Raised by Any Party or by Court

Lack of subject matter jurisdiction may be raised by any party to an action. Even a party who sought the benefits of federal court jurisdiction by bringing an action in federal court or removing an action to federal court may subsequently challenge subject matter jurisdiction on appeal. n3

In addition, the court may sua sponte dismiss an action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, even if the parties themselves neglect to raise the issue. n4

[3] Burden of Proof

If subject matter jurisdiction is challenged in a Rule 12(b)(1) motion, the party asserting subject matter jurisdiction has the burden of proving its existence. n5

This means that if the case was originally filed in federal court, the plaintiff has the burden of proof; if the case was removed from state court, the defendant has the burden of proof. n6

The nature of the burden of proof depends on whether subject matter jurisdiction is attacked on the face of the pleading or through the introduction of extrinsic evidence. n7

If a "facial attack" is made, the court accepts the allegations in the complaint as true, and the party asserting subject matter jurisdiction need not introduce any extrinsic evidence. However, if the truthfulness of the jurisdictional allegations is attacked, the party alleging subject matter jurisdiction must establish those allegations by a preponderance of the evidence, through the introduction of competent proof. n8

[4] Court Resolves Jurisdictional Issues First

As a general rule, if a pre-answer motion raises several different defenses, including lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the district court should resolve the issue of subject matter jurisdiction first, since without subject matter jurisdiction the court lacks the power to hear the case. For example, if a defendant moves to dismiss a complaint under Rule 12(b)(1) for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, the court will usually consider the Rule 12(b)(1) challenge first. n9

However, in the interest of judicial economy, the court may exercise its discretion and dispose of the case on another ground, in order to avoid a difficult question of subject matter jurisdiction. n10 The Supreme Court has held that a motion to dismiss based on forum non conveniens may be considered prior to resolving challenges based on subject matter jurisdiction. Specifically, the Supreme Court held that courts may dispose of an action by a forum non conveniens dismissal, bypassing questions of subject-matter and personal jurisdiction, when considerations of convenience, fairness, and judicial economy warrant doing so. n11 If, however, the alternative ground must be decided by reference to state law, the court should consider the issue of subject matter jurisdiction first. n12

However, because jurisdictional facts may be interrelated with the factual merits of the case, the court may postpone a jurisdictional determination until later in the case, even delaying the jurisdictional determination for trial. n12.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofAllocation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Carlisle v. United States, 134 L. Ed. 2d 613 (1996) (Ginsburg, J., concurring); O'Brien v. R.J. O'Brien & Assocs., 998 F.2d 1394, 1399 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3); see Laughlin v. Kmart Corp., 50 F.3d 871, 873-874 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See American Fire & Cas. Co. v. Finn, 341 U.S. 6, 16-18 (1951) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3); Things Remembered, Inc. v. Petrarca, 516 U.S. 124 (1995) (Ginsburg, J., concurring).

(n5)Footnote 5. Bally Export Corp. v. Balicar, Ltd., 804 F.2d 398, 401 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United Food & Commercial Workers Union, Local 919 v. Centermark Properties Meriden Square, 30 F.3d 298, 301 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See §§ 3.51, 3.52; see also Garcia v. Copenhaver, Bell & Assocs., M.D.S., 104 F.3d 1256, 1260-1261 (11th Cir. 1997) ; Ohio Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. United States, 922 F.2d 320, 325 (6th Cir. 1990) ; Oaxaca v. Roscoe, 641 F.2d 386, 391 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 8. United Food & Commercial Workers Union, Local 919 v. Centermark Properties Meriden Square, 30 F.3d 298, 305 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 682-683 (1946).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Alpine View Co. v. Atlas Copco AB, 205 F.3d 208 (5th Cir. 2000) (district court did not abuse its discretion in determining a motion to dismiss on personal jurisdiction grounds before considering motions to dismiss based on subject matter jurisdiction, when this order was supported by reasons of judicial economy).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Sinochem Int'l Co. v. Malaysia Int'l Shipping Corp., 549 U.S. 422, 127 S. Ct. 1184, 1192, 167 L. Ed. 2d 15 (2007) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Cantor Fitzgerald, L.P. v. Peaslee, 88 F.3d 152, 155 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 12.1. See Valentin v. Hospital Bella Vista, 254 F.3d 358, 364 n.3 (1st Cir. 2001) .

30 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
1. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.51

§ 3.51 Attacking Subject Matter Jurisdiction on Face of Pleading

[1] Facial Attack Challenges Sufficiency of Allegations of Pleading

The defendant may make a "facial attack" on subject matter jurisdiction by challenging the sufficiency of the pleading to allege subject matter jurisdiction. n1

[2] Plaintiff's Allegations Accepted as True

In a facial attack, the defendant does not challenge the accuracy of the facts as alleged, and does not introduce extrinsic evidence to challenge jurisdiction. When a facial attack on jurisdiction is made, the trial court examines the complaint to determine if the party asserting jurisdiction has sufficiently alleged a basis for federal jurisdiction. The court must accept the allegations in the complaint as true, and must construe them most favorably to the plaintiff. n2

[3] Court May Consider Undisputed Facts in Record

Even if the complaint is facially defective, the court may regard the complaint as satisfactorily amended if undisputed facts in the record as a whole establish the existence of federal jurisdiction. n3

[4] Responding to Facial Attack by Amending Complaint

If the defendant makes a Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss based on the insufficiency of the complaint, the plaintiff may amend the complaint as a matter of course to cure the defect within 21 days of service of the motion. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a); Cummings v. United States, 648 F.2d 289, 291 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 474 (1974) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Baer v. United Servs. Auto Association, 503 F.2d 393, 397 (2d Cir. 1974).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
1. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.52

§ 3.52 Attacking Subject Matter Jurisdiction Based on Facts

[1] Using Extrinsic Evidence to Attack Jurisdiction

In a "factual attack" on the court's subject matter jurisdiction, the defendant attacks the accuracy of the jurisdictional facts asserted in the complaint through the introduction of extrinsic evidence. For example, if federal jurisdiction is based on diversity, the defendant may challenge diversity of citizenship by presenting extrinsic evidence showing that, contrary to the plaintiff's allegations, there is not complete diversity.

If a factual attack is made, the court does not presume that the allegations of the complaint are true. Instead, the court may look beyond the complaint and inquire into the facts as they exist. n1

[2] Evidence Considered in Deciding Motion

The court has discretion to allow affidavits, documents, and even a limited evidentiary hearing to resolve disputed jurisdictional facts. n2

[3] Introduction of Extrinsic Evidence Does Not Convert Motion

A Rule 12(b)(1) motion, unlike a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, is not converted to a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment when evidentiary matters outside the pleadings are submitted. n3

However, when issues of fact are central both to subject matter jurisdiction and the claims on the merits, the trial court must assume jurisdiction and proceed to the merits. The court should deal with the objection to jurisdiction as an attack on the merits--that is, as a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim or as a motion for summary judgment. n4

The distinction between an attack on subject matter jurisdiction and an attack on the merits of the claim is critical, and sometimes the distinction is a fine one. For instance, the issue of whether an employer may be properly sued for sexual harassment under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which requires the employer to have at least 15 employees, has been deemed by the United States Supreme Court as an attack on the merits when, after judgment, the employer first raised the issue that it had fewer than 15 employees. n5

[4] Seeking Discovery

Either party may request discovery when subject matter jurisdiction is factually attacked. The court may permit the party asserting jurisdiction to engage in limited discovery if the facts demonstrating jurisdiction are within the other party's control. n6

Similarly, the party moving for dismissal may seek discovery if it is needed to controvert facts in the opposing party's affidavits. n7 The district court has broad discretion whether to allow discovery concerning jurisdiction in connection with a motion to dismiss. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsAffidavits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. McCann v. Newman Irrevocable Trust, 458 F.3d 281, 290-291 (3d Cir. 2006) ; Luckett v. Bure, 290 F.3d 493, 496-497 (2d Cir. 2002) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Daniel v. Ferguson, 839 F.2d 1124, 1127 n.5 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Safe Air for Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004) ; Kamen v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 791 F.2d 1006, 1010-1011 (2d Cir. 1986) ; Crawford v. United States, 796 F.2d 924, 927 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Gentek Building Prods., Inc. v. Sherwin-Williams Co., 491 F.3d 320, 330 (6th Cir. 2007) ; Montez v. Department of the Navy, 392 F.3d 147, 149-151 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Arbaugh v. Y&H Corp., 546 U.S. 500, 515-516, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097, 1110 (2006) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Kamen v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 791 F.2d 1006, 1011 (2d Cir. 1986) ; Dew v. Illinois Cent. Gulf R.R. Co., 621 F. Supp. 153, 154 (S.D. Miss. 1985).

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Exchange National Bank of Chicago v. Touche Ross & Co., 544 F.2d 1126, 1131 (2d Cir. 1976) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Freeman v. United States, 556 F.3d 326, 341-343 (5th Cir. 2009) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
1. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.53

§ 3.53 Challenging Jurisdiction Based on Amount in Controversy

[1] Basis for Challenge

The amount at issue in a diversity case must exceed $75,000. n1

Diversity jurisdiction may be challenged on the ground that the amount in controversy falls below the minimum jurisdictional amount for bringing suit in federal court. n2

[2] Determining Amount in Controversy

The amount in controversy is determined from the complaint itself. n3 Even if recovery of the jurisdictional minimum appears extremely unlikely from the allegations of the complaint, the court may not dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction unless it appears "to a legal certainty" that the plaintiff will be unable to recover the jurisdictional minimum. n4

The amount in controversy is determined as of the time the plaintiff commenced the action. n5

An event that occurs after the suit is brought that reduces the plaintiff's potential recovery below the statutory minimum does not affect jurisdiction. n6

If the plaintiff discovers after commencing the action that he or she was mistaken as to the amount in controversy, and that the true amount is actually below the jurisdictional minimum, the court will be divested of jurisdiction to determine the claim. n7

Because the amount at issue is determined on the face of the complaint, a valid defense on the merits does not deprive the court of jurisdiction. n8 For example, in a diversity case in which the plaintiff alleged damages exceeding the jurisdictional minimum, the fact that the defendant's liability was limited by statute to an amount below the jurisdictional minimum did not deprive the federal court of jurisdiction. n9

The fact that the plaintiff is ultimately unable to recover at least the jurisdictional minimum does not divest the court of subject matter jurisdiction. In other words, a defendant may not argue on appeal that the court lacked diversity jurisdiction based on the plaintiff's failure to recover the jurisdictional amount at trial. n10

[3] Burden of Proof

Once challenged, the party asserting subject matter jurisdiction has the burden of proving its existence. n10.1 If the party's allegations concerning the amount in controversy are challenged, the party must support those allegations with competent proof, and must establish to a "reasonable probability" that the claim is for more than the jurisdictional minimum. n11 A party meets its burden if it made its claim in apparent good faith. The party may establish its good faith belief by reference to the pleadings and to any relevant facts adduced in discovery. n12

Before determining that the plaintiff has not met the amount in controversy requirement, the court must afford the plaintiff a reasonable opportunity to demonstrate its good faith in believing that a recovery exceeding the statutory minimum was reasonably possible at the time the action was filed. n13

[4] Factors Considered by Court in Determining Whether to Dismiss Case Based on Amount in Controversy

In deciding whether to dismiss a case based on the amount in controversy, the court looks at two factors:

- Whether the plaintiff's allegations of damages were made in good faith, and not as a ruse to obtain federal jurisdiction n14

- Whether the legal impossibility of recovery is so certain from the face of the complaint or from the proofs "as to virtually negate the plaintiff's good faith in asserting the claim" n15

The court may ascertain a plaintiff's good faith by reference to the pleadings and to any facts adduced in discovery. n16 If the right of recovery is uncertain, the court must resolve all doubts in favor of the good faith of the plaintiff. n17 Even if the plaintiff acted in subjective good faith, the court will dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction if it is certain that recovery of the jurisdictional minimum is legally impossible. n18

The court's inquiry depends on the stage of the proceedings at which the motion is decided, and whether the challenge to jurisdiction is facial or factual. If the motion is decided on the basis of the pleadings, the court must dismiss the suit if it appears to a legal certainty from the face of the pleadings that the plaintiff cannot recover the jurisdictional minimum. If the motion is decided after evidence has been admitted, dismissal is mandated if it appears to a legal certainty from the evidence that the plaintiff was never entitled to recover the jurisdictional amount and never had a colorable claim for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction. n19

If the damages sought are uncertain, the court must resolve doubts in favor of the plaintiff's pleadings, regardless of which party invoked federal court jurisdiction. However, if the pleadings are inconclusive as to the amount in controversy, the court may look outside the pleadings to other evidence in the record. n20

If the plaintiff seeks unliquidated damages in a tort action, the court should not predetermine whether the plaintiff could recover the jurisdictional minimum, but should instead permit the action to proceed. n21

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionAmount in ControversyDeterminationsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionAmount in ControversyCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Horton v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 367 U.S. 348, 353 (1961) ; 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 288-289 (1938) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Pratt Cent. Park Ltd. Partnership v. Dames & Moore, Inc., 60 F.3d 350, 351 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Gould v. Artisoft, Inc., 1 F.3d 544, 547 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 290 (1938) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Tongkook Am., Inc. v. Shipton Sportswear Co., 14 F.3d 781, 785-786 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Work v. U.S. Trade, Inc., 747 F. Supp. 1184, 1186 (E.D. Va. 1990) (citing Smithers v. Smith, 204 U.S. 632, 642 (1907)).

(n9)Footnote 9. Ochoa v. Interbrew Am., Inc., 999 F.2d 626, 629 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 10. St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 289 (1938) .

(n11)Footnote 10.1. See Boudreau v. United States, 53 F.3d 81, 82 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. v. Tarbuck, 62 F.3d 538, 541 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. v. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 93 F.3d 1064, 1070 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. v. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 93 F.3d 1064, 1070 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n15)Footnote 14. See St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 289, 58 S. Ct. 586, 82 L. Ed. 845 (1938) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Pachinger v. MGM Grand Hotel-Las Vegas, Inc., 802 F.2d 362, 364 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n17)Footnote 16. See Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. v. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 93 F.3d 1064, 1070 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Shaw v. Dow Brands, Inc., 994 F.2d 364, 366 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Pratt Cent. Park Ltd. v. Dames & Moore, 60 F.3d 350, 353 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Tongkook Am., Inc. v. Shipton Sportswear Co., 14 F.3d 781, 785 (2d Cir. 1994).

(n21)Footnote 20. See Giangrande v. Shearson Lehman/E.F. Hutton, 803 F. Supp. 464, 467 (D. Mass. 1992) .

(n22)Footnote 21. See Deutsch v. Hewes St. Realty Corp., 359 F.2d 96, 99-100 (2d Cir. 1966) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
1. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.54

§ 3.54 Challenging Diversity of Citizenship

[1] Court May Consider Unpleaded Bases for Federal Jurisdiction

Even if subject matter jurisdiction cannot be sustained on the grounds pleaded in the complaint, the court must examine the complaint to determine if it may assume jurisdiction on other grounds. The court must explore any possible basis for jurisdiction, irrespective of whether it has been pleaded by the parties. n1

[2] Court May Dismiss Nondiverse Parties

A court may drop a party by order of the court on motion by any party, or on its own initiative, at any stage of the action and on any terms that are just. n1.1 Accordingly, rather than dismiss an action because of lack of complete diversity, the court has the discretion to dismiss the party whose presence prevents diversity jurisdiction. The court may dismiss a non-diverse party at any stage of the proceedings, including appeal, unless there has been a reasoned determination that their nonjoinder makes a just resolution of the action impossible. In making this determination, the court must apply the "equity and good conscience" test of Rule 19(b). n2

If diversity jurisdiction is attacked for the first time on appeal, the equities in favor of preserving the fully litigated judgment are strong, and the court should be more reluctant to dismiss the action than it would be at an earlier stage of the proceedings. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Curley v. Brignoli, Curley & Roberts Assocs., 915 F.2d 81, 85 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n3)Footnote 2. Universal Reinsurance Co. v. St. Paul Fire &Marine Ins. Co., 312 F.3d 82, 87-89 (2d Cir. 2002) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b), 21.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Sweeney v. Westvaco Co., 926 F.2d 29, 41 (1st Cir. 1991).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
1. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.55

§ 3.55 Attacking Federal Question Jurisdiction

[1] Basis of Jurisdiction

Federal district courts have jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States. n1

[2] Jurisdiction Exists If Federal Question Claim Not Frivolous

Challenges to subject matter jurisdiction on the grounds that the complaint fails to state a federal question rarely succeed unless either:

- On its face, the complaint does not seek recovery under a federal statute or the federal Constitution. n2

- The federal question claim is obviously without merit or wholly frivolous. n3 The district court may assume jurisdiction even if the federal question claim is "somewhat marginal." n4

Otherwise, the court must assume jurisdiction, despite the possibility that the complaint may fail to state a cause of action on which the plaintiff could actually recover. n5

[3] Challenge Treated as Motion to Dismiss on Merits

If the complaint seeks recovery under a federal statute or the Constitution, the court should not dismiss the complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction even if it believes that it would dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim. n6 Instead, the court should deal with the objection to subject matter jurisdiction as a direct attack on the merits of the plaintiff's case, and should examine the merits pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6). n7

Whether the court labels its action as a dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction or a dismissal for failure to state a claim is significant in some cases. There are two important differences between a Rule 12(b)(1) dismissal and a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal that may impact the disposition of a case: n8

- Res judicata effect. Unlike a dismissal for failure to state a claim, a Rule 12(b)(1) dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction does not have a res judicata effect.

- Supplemental jurisdiction. A Rule 12(b)(1) dismissal precludes a district court from exercising supplemental jurisdiction. By contrast, once the court has assumed jurisdiction, a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal of the sole federal claim does not prevent the federal court from exercising jurisdiction over the remaining state claims.

[4] Effect of Dismissal

A dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is without prejudice, because it is not based on the merits of the claim. Such a dismissal has no claim preclusive or res judicata effect. n9

A court must have original jurisdiction in order to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over related state claims. Therefore, a Rule 12(b)(1) dismissal precludes a district court from exercising supplemental jurisdiction. n10

If the court determines that it lacks subject matter jurisdiction, it may not transfer the action to a court that has subject matter jurisdiction. Instead, it must dismiss the action. n11 The sole exception to this rule is if a federal statute vests exclusive jurisdiction over the action in another federal court, such as the Court of Claims, in which instance the court may transfer the case to the appropriate court. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionFederal QuestionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsRes Judicata

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n2)Footnote 2. Nowak v. Ironworkers Local 6 Pension Fund, 81 F.3d 1182, 1188-1189 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 682-683, 66 S. Ct. 773, 90 L. Ed. 939 (1946) ; Nicodemus v. Union Pac. Corp., 440 F.3d 1227, 1236 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Hagans v. Lavine, 415 U.S. 528, 537, 94 S. Ct. 1372, 39 L. Ed. 2d 577 (1974) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 681-682 (1946) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Nowak v. Ironworkers Local 6 Pension Fund, 81 F.3d 1182, 1187-1189 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Nowak v. Ironworkers Local 6 Pension Fund, 81 F.3d 1182, 1187-1189 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Nowak v. Ironworkers Local 6 Pension Fund, 81 F.3d 1182, 1188 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Thompson v. County of Franklin, 15 F.3d 245, 253 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Nowak v. Ironworkers Local 6 Pension Fund, 81 F.3d 1182, 1188 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Levitt v. Maryland Deposit Ins. Fund Corp., 643 F. Supp. 1485, 1489 n.3 (E.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See 28 U.S.C. § 1631.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
1. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.56 through 3.59

[Reserved]

§§ 3.56[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.60

§ 3.60 Raising Defense of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

[1] Challenging Substantive Basis for Personal Jurisdiction

A Rule 12(b)(2) motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction challenges the court's substantive authority to exercise jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant, rather than the sufficiency of process or service of process. In other words, this motion is used to challenge the court's assertion of long-arm jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant, based on statutory law, and constitutional principles of due process. n1

A motion to dismiss for insufficiency of process is brought under Rule 12(b)(4); a motion to dismiss for insufficiency of service of process is brought under Rule 12(b)(5). n2

[2] Methods of Challenging Personal Jurisdiction

There are three methods for challenging personal jurisdiction:

- Filing Rule 12(b)(2) motion to dismiss. The defendant may attack the court's exercise of personal jurisdiction by filing a Rule 12(b)(2) pre-answer motion to dismiss.

- Raising defense in answer. If the defendant does not file a pre-answer Rule 12(b) motion, the defendant may include an objection to personal jurisdiction in its answer or an answer amended as a matter of course. However, the defendant may not raise the objection in the answer if the defendant has already filed a Rule 12 motion on other grounds. n3

- Collaterally attacking default judgment. A defendant may decide not to appear in the action, allow the plaintiff to obtain a judgment by default, and then collaterally attack the default judgment for lack of jurisdiction. n4 However, if a default is taken, a finding that the court in the original action did have personal jurisdiction over the defendant will preclude any further litigation on the merits. As a result, the defendant will be faced with a final enforceable judgment without ever having had an opportunity to present relevant defenses or appropriate counterclaims.

[3] Combining Motion With Motion to Transfer Venue

A motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction may be combined with an alternative and less drastic motion to transfer venue. n5 Presenting both motions simultaneously gives the court a choice of options, which increases the likelihood that at least one motion will be granted.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsConstitutional LimitsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsChallengesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Santos v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 902 F.2d 1092, 1095 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Chilicky v. Schweiker, 796 F.2d 1131, 1136 (9th Cir. 1986) , rev'd on other grounds, 487 U.S. 412 (1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g), (h)(1); see § 3.13.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Insurance Corp. of Ireland v. Compagnie de Bauxites, 456 U.S. 694, 706, 102 S. Ct. 2099, 72 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1982) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1404(a), 1406(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.61

§ 3.61 Waiving Defense of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

[1] Failing to Assert Defense in Rule 12 Motion or Answer

A defendant waives any objection to the court's exercise of personal jurisdiction if the defendant makes a Rule 12 pre-answer motion, and omits the defense from the motion. A defendant who does not make such a motion must assert the defense in the answer or answer amended as a matter of course. n1 A defendant who alleges lack of personal jurisdiction in a timely answer does not waive the defense by asserting permissive counterclaims in the same pleading. n2 A defendant may not raise the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction for the first time in an amendment that requires leave of court. n3

A delay in challenging personal jurisdiction by motion to dismiss may result in waiver even when the defense was asserted in a timely manner. In one case, the court of appeals ruled that the defendant forfeited its defense of lack of personal jurisdiction by participating in extensive pretrial proceedings and forgoing numerous opportunities to move to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction during the four-year interval that followed its inclusion of the defense in the answer. n4

[2] Failing to Raise Defense in Motion for Change of Venue

A defendant may also waive any objection to personal jurisdiction by moving for a change of venue based on forum non conveniens without simultaneously moving for dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction. Waiver will be found if the facts underlying the motion for change of venue are the same as the facts that form the basis for the claim of lack of personal jurisdiction. Moreover, a motion for change of venue presupposes initial proper jurisdiction in the transferor court. n5

[3] Failing to Pursue Defense Raised in Answer

Even if the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction is properly raised in the answer, it may be waived if the defendant does not press the issue in a timely fashion. Defenses referred to in Rule 12(h)(1), including lack of personal jurisdiction, may be waived by expressly submitting to a court's jurisdiction, or by submission through conduct. n6 Similarly, while asserting a counterclaim in the answer does not result in waiver of the jurisdictional defense, n7 seeking affirmative relief on a counterclaim prior to pressing the jurisdictional challenge will waive personal jurisdiction.

[4] Engaging in Discovery

A defendant who engages in extensive discovery addressed to the merits of the case may be found to have waived any objection to personal jurisdiction. Agreeing to a pretrial discovery schedule and participating in extensive discovery is inconsistent with a defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. Instead, if the answer raises lack of personal jurisdiction, the proper course is to engage in limited discovery on jurisdictional issues. n8

[5] Consenting to Forum Selection Clause

By consenting to a forum selection clause, a party waives its right to object to personal jurisdiction in the designated forum. n9

[6] Removing Case to Federal Court Does Not Waive Defense

Removing a case to federal court does not waive a defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. n10

[7] Plaintiff Automatically Waives Personal Jurisdiction Objection to Counterclaims

By virtue of bringing suit, the plaintiff waives any personal jurisdiction objections to a defendant's counterclaims. The plaintiff is deemed to have voluntarily submitted to the court's jurisdiction for all purposes. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsConstitutional LimitsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsChallengesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g), (h)(1); see also Uffner v. La Reunion Francaise, S.A., 244 F.3d 38, 40-41 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Rates Tech., Inc. v Nortel Networks Corp., 399 F.3d 1302, 1307-1309 (Fed. Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Hamilton v. Atlas Turner, Inc., 197 F.3d 58, 60 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Sangdahl v. Litton, 69 F.R.D. 641, 642-643 (S.D.N.Y. 1976) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Hamilton v. Atlas Turner, Inc., 197 F.3d 58, 60 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Rates Tech. Inc. v Nortel Networks Corp., 399 F.3d 1302, 1307-1309 (Fed. Cir. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Burton v. Northern Dutchess Hosp., 106 F.R.D. 477, 481 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) ; cf. Classic Motel, Inc. v. Purchasing Group Corp., 149 F.R.D. 528, 533 (S.D. Miss. 1993) (defendant did not waive personal jurisdiction defense even though he waited two years to bring motion to dismiss, and during those two years participated in written discovery, deposed plaintiff and an expert, and brought motion for summary judgment); Wilson v. Kuwahara Co., Ltd., 717 F. Supp 525, 527-528 (W.D. Mich. 1989) (discovery activity not substantial enough to constitute waiver).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Monesson v. National Equip. Rental, Ltd., 594 S.W.2d 780, 781 (Tex. Ct. App. 1980).

(n10)Footnote 10. Cantor Fitzgerald L.P. v. Peaslee, 88 F.3d 152, 157 n.4 (2d Cir. 1996).

(n11)Footnote 11. Adam v. Saenger, 303 U.S. 59, 67-68 (1938).

38 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.62

§ 3.62 Submitting Evidence Outside Pleadings

The parties may submit evidence outside of the pleadings for the court's consideration on a Rule 12(b)(2) motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. n1

Unlike a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a Rule 12(b)(2) motion is not converted into a motion for summary judgment if the court considers extrinsic materials in deciding the motion. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsConstitutional LimitsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Moran v. Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, 27 F.3d 169, 171-172 (5th Cir. 1994).

(n2)Footnote 2. Pilates, Inc. v. Pilates Inst., Inc., 891 F. Supp. 175, 178 n.2 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.63

§ 3.63 Burden of Proof

[1] Plaintiff Has Burden of Proof

If personal jurisdiction is challenged, the plaintiff has the burden of proving personal jurisdiction over the defendant. n1

[2] Showing Required Depends on Procedure

The showing that the plaintiff must make to meet its burden of proof depends on whether the lack of personal jurisdiction is presented by a Rule 12(b)(2) motion to dismiss, or is raised in the answer and presented by a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment. n2

If the defense is presented by a Rule 12(b)(2) motion to dismiss, the burden of proof also depends on whether discovery has been conducted, and if so, whether an evidentiary hearing has been held. n3

[3] When Motion Decided Before Discovery Is Conducted

If the court decides the motion before discovery is conducted and relies solely on pleadings and affidavits, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the court has personal jurisdiction over the defendant. The plaintiff makes a prima facie showing if the allegations, construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, are legally sufficient to establish personal jurisdiction. n4

[4] When Motion Decided After Discovery, But Without Evidentiary Hearing

If the court decides a Rule 12(b)(2) motion without an evidentiary hearing after discovery has been conducted, the plaintiff still need only make a prima facie showing. However, the plaintiff may not rely solely on the allegations in the complaint. Instead, the plaintiff's prima facie showing must include an averment of facts that if credited by the trier would be sufficient to establish jurisdiction over the defendant. n5

The requirement that a plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing prior to an evidentiary hearing on the issue of personal jurisdiction is not affected by a controverting presentation by the moving party. n6

[5] Effect of Challenge by Defendant

If the court rules on a Rule 12(b)(2) motion without conducting an evidentiary hearing, the plaintiff will be found to have met his or her burden of proof even if the defendant contests the plaintiff's allegations or averments of fact. n7

However, if the defendant contests the plaintiff's prima facie showing, the plaintiff will eventually be required to establish personal jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence, either at an evidentiary hearing or at trial. n8

[6] When Motion Decided After Evidentiary Hearing

If the court conducts a full evidentiary hearing on the motion, or if the motion is decided at trial, the plaintiff must establish personal jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence. Until such a hearing is held, a prima facie showing suffices, notwithstanding any controverting presentation by the moving party to defeat the motion. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofAllocation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. D'Jamoos v. Pilatus Aircraft Ltd., 566 F.3d 94, 102 (3d Cir. 2009) ; Negron-Torres v. Verizon Commc'ns, Inc., 478 F.3d 19, 23 (1st Cir. 2007) ; Dever v. Hentzen Coatings, Inc., 380 F.3d 1070, 1072 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Ball v. Metallurgie Hoboken-Overpelt, S.A., 902 F.2d 194, 197 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Ball v. Metallurgie Hoboken-Overpelt, S.A., 902 F.2d 194, 197 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. TH Agric. & Nutrition, LLC v. Ace European Group Ltd., 488 F.3d 1282, 1286 (10th Cir. 2007) ; Northern Laminate Sales, Inc. v. Davis, 403 F.3d 14, 22-24 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Ball v. Metallurgie Hoboken-Overpelt, S.A., 902 F.2d 194, 197 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Hoffritz for Cutlery, Inc. v. Amajac, Ltd., 763 F.2d 55, 57 (2d Cir. 1985).

(n7)Footnote 7. Marine Midland Bank, N.A. v. Miller, 664 F.2d 899, 904 (2d Cir. 1981).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Rice v. Nova Biomedical Corp., 38 F.3d 909, 915 (7th Cir. 1994). .

(n9)Footnote 9. PDK Labs, Inc. v. Friedlander, 103 F.3d 1105, 1108 (2d Cir. 1997).

40 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.64

§ 3.64 Requesting Discovery on Jurisdictional Issues

[1] Court Has Discretion to Permit Discovery

The district court may allow a party asserting jurisdiction to conduct discovery to help establish the jurisdictional facts. n1 Whether discovery is allowed, and the scope of the discovery permitted, is within the court's discretion. n2

As a general rule, to be permitted jurisdictional discovery, the plaintiff must at least allege facts that would support a colorable claim of jurisdiction. n3

[2] Disputed Factual Allegations

If the defendant disputes the plaintiff's factual allegations, thereby requiring the plaintiff to prove jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence, the court should allow discovery. n4 Such discovery should be limited to the facts necessary to establish personal jurisdiction. n5

[3] Jurisdictional Facts and Merits Entwined

If the jurisdictional facts and questions of liability are entwined, and jurisdictional discovery and general discovery on the merits will overlap, the court should defer determination of the jurisdictional issue until after all discovery is completed. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Magnetic Audiotape Antitrust Litigation, 334 F.3d 204, 207-208 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Moran v. Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, 27 F.3d 169, 172 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Toys "R" Us, Inc. v. Step Two, S.A., 318 F.3d 446, 455-458 (3d Cir. 2003).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Siderman de Blake v. Republic of Argentina, 965 F.2d 699, 713 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Butcher's Union Local No. 498 v. SDC Inv., Inc., 788 F.2d 535, 540 (9th Cir. 1986).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Kinetic Instruments, Inc. v. Lares, 802 F. Supp. 976, 988-989 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

41 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.65

§ 3.65 Challenge to Personal Jurisdiction Decided Before Challenge to Venue

If a Rule 12(b) motion challenges both personal jurisdiction and venue, the court typically decides the personal jurisdiction issue first. However, a court may decide the issue of venue first if there is a "sound prudential justification for doing so." n1

For example, if the challenge to personal jurisdiction raises a novel constitutional issue, and the issue of venue can be easily decided, the court should decide the venue question first. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Leroy v. Great W. United Corp., 443 U.S. 173, 180 (1979) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Leroy v. Great Western United Corp., 443 U.S. 173, 180-181 (1979) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.66

§ 3.66 Court's Action on Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

[1] Denial of Motion to Dismiss

If the court denies a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, it will generally do so without prejudice to renewing the motion after discovery. n1

Denial of a motion to dismiss is not a final judgment. Consequently, a defendant may not take an interlocutory appeal from such a judgment. n2

[2] Dismissal Not Decision on Merits

A dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction is not a decision on the merits. Consequently, after such a dismissal the plaintiff may bring the suit anew in another jurisdiction or under circumstances supporting jurisdiction. n3

[3] Court May Transfer Rather Than Dismiss Action

Instead of dismissing an action when it lacks personal jurisdiction, it is common for a court to transfer the action to the appropriate federal court. A court has the power to transfer an action even if it lacks personal jurisdiction over the defendants, if a dismissal would unjustly deny the plaintiff an adjudication on the merits of his or her claim. n4

A court may transfer an action without first determining whether it has personal jurisdiction over the defendant, if the balance of conveniences is in favor of the transferee jurisdiction. n5

The district court may sua sponte transfer an in the interest of justice. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory Orders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Air-Flo M.G. Co., Inc. v. Louis Berkman Co., 933 F. Supp. 229, 234 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Papilsky v. Berndt, 503 F.2d 554 (2d Cir. 1974) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Baris v. Sulpicio Lines, Inc., 74 F.3d 567, 571 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1406; see also Schenck v. Walt Disney Co., 742 F. Supp. 838, 843 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a); Volk Corp. v. Art-Pak Clip Art Serv., 432 F. Supp. 1179, 1180-1181 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lead Indus. Ass'n v. Occupational Safety & Health Admin., 610 F.2d 70, 79 n.17 (2d Cir. 1979) ; St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Servidone Constr. Corp., 778 F. Supp. 1496, 1508 (D. Minn. 1991) ; LaRose v. Sponco Mfg. Inc., 712 F. Supp. 455, 460 (D.N.J. 1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
2. Moving to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.67 through 3.79

[Reserved]

§§ 3.67[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
3. Challenging Improper Venue

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.80

§ 3.80 Basis for Challenging Venue

[1] General Venue Statute

Unless an action is brought under a statute that contains its own venue provision, the proper venue for an action is determined according to the general venue statute, as follows:

- Diversity cases. If federal jurisdiction is based solely on diversity, venue is proper in any of the following judicial districts: n1
  - A district where any defendant resides, if all defendants reside in the same state
  - A district in which a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred, or a substantial part of property that is the subject of the action is situated
  - A district in which the defendants are subject to personal jurisdiction at the time the action is commenced, if there is no district in which the action may otherwise be brought
- Non-diversity cases. If federal jurisdiction is not based solely on diversity, venue is proper in any of the following judicial districts: n2
  - A district where any defendant resides, if all defendants reside in the same state
  - A district in which a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred, or a substantial part of property that is the subject of the action is situated
  - A district in which any defendant may be found, if there is no district in which the action may otherwise be brought

In addition, the general venue statute contains provisions governing where an action may be brought if a defendant is a corporation, foreign citizen, alien, federal employee or agency, or foreign state n3 or when the action arises from an accident that results in at least 75 deaths. n4

[2] Federal Statute With Venue Provision

A federal act may contain its own venue provision, which governs the district in which an action may be brought. n5

A statutory venue provision only determines the proper venue for an action; it does not affect the court's subject matter jurisdiction to entertain a particular action. Therefore, if the venue selected by the plaintiff is improper under the venue provision of the applicable statute, the proper method for attacking venue is a Rule 12(b)(3) motion to dismiss for improper venue, and not a Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. n6

[3] Forum Selection Clause

A defendant may seek dismissal of a suit if the action arises out of a contract that includes a mandatory forum selection clause that requires that the action be tried in a different venue. n7

The Second Circuit has held that a motion to dismiss based on a forum selection clause is not a motion to dismiss for improper venue. The Circuit has found that "there is no existing [procedural] mechanism with which forum selection enforcement is a perfect fit." n8

If the defendant seeks dismissal based on a valid forum selection clause, the plaintiff must make a "strong showing" to overcome the presumption that the forum selection clause is enforceable. n9

However, at the initial stage of litigation, a plaintiff who seeks to avoid enforcement of a forum selection clause need only make a prima facie showing that the forum selection clause is not enforceable. When analyzing this preliminary showing, the court must view the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. A disputed fact may be resolved in a manner adverse to the plaintiff only after an evidentiary hearing. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391(c)-(f).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391(g) (effective for accidents that occur on or after January 31, 2003).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., 31 U.S.C. § 3732.

(n6)Footnote 6. See United States ex. rel. Thistlethwaite v. Dowty Woodville Polymer, Ltd., 110 F.3d 861, 864 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Rainforest Cafe, Inc. v. EklecCo, L.L.C., 340 F.3d 544, 546-547 (8th Cir. 2003) ; New Moon

Shipping Co. v. Man B & W Diesel AG, 121 F.3d 24, 28 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 8. New Moon Shipping Co. v. Man B & W Diesel AG, 121 F.3d 24, 28-29 (2d Cir. 1997).

(n9)Footnote 9. New Moon Shipping Co. v. Man B & W Diesel AG, 121 F.3d 24, 29 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 10. New Moon Shipping Co., v. Man B & W Diesel AG, 121 F.3d 24, 29 (2d Cir. 1997).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
3. Challenging Improper Venue

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.81

§ 3.81 Raising Challenge to Venue

[1] Who May Challenge Venue

A defendant may object to improper venue if the venue selected by the plaintiff is improper as to that defendant. n1

In a multi-defendant action, venue may be proper as to some defendants and improper as to others. An objection to venue may only be asserted by a party as to whom venue is improper. Thus, a defendant cannot object to venue on the ground that it is improper as to a codefendant. n2

In the vast majority of cases the plaintiff, by virtue of bringing suit, waives venue and personal jurisdiction objections to a defendant's counterclaims. By choosing a particular forum, the plaintiff is considered to have voluntarily submitted to the court's jurisdiction "for all purposes for which justice to the defendant requires his presence." n3

The district court may raise the issue of venue sua sponte, but not without notice and providing the parties an opportunity to be heard. n4 However, a court may not sua sponte dismiss an action for improper venue if the defendant has already waived any objection to venue. n5

[2] Challenging Venue in First Response

A defendant must challenge improper venue in its first response to the complaint, as follows:

- Motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(3). Prior to serving an answer, the defendant may move to dismiss the action for improper venue under Rule 12(b)(3). If the defendant makes a Rule 12 pre-answer motion on other grounds, failure to join a Rule 12(b)(3) motion waives any objection to venue. n6

- Asserting defense in answer. If the defendant chooses not to make a Rule 12 pre-answer motion, the defendant may assert the defense of improper venue in the answer or in an answer amended as a matter of course pursuant to Rule 15(a). n7

[3] Combining Venue Challenge With Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

A motion to dismiss for improper venue is frequently brought with a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, as the general venue statute provides that a civil action may be brought in "a judicial district in which the defendants are subject to personal jurisdiction at the time the action is commenced." n8 In such a case, if personal jurisdiction is found, venue is also proper. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Camp v. Gress, 250 U.S. 308, 317 (1919).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Camp v. Gress, 250 U.S. 308, 317 (1919).

(n3)Footnote 3. Adam v. Saenger, 303 U.S. 59, 67-68 (1938) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Lipofsky v. New York State Workers Compensation Bd., 861 F.2d 1257, 1259 (11th Cir. 1988).

(N5)Footnote 5. Concession Consultants, Inc. v. Mirisch, 355 F.2d 369, 371 (2d Cir. 1966) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a)(3).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Gilbert v. Wilson, 821 F. Supp. 857, 860 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
3. Challenging Improper Venue

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.82

§ 3.82 Waiving Objections to Venue

[1] Omitting Objection From Rule 12 Motion or Answer

An objection to venue must be raised in either a pre-answer motion to dismiss, or in the answer (or an answer amended as a matter of course). n1 Thus, the following considerations determine whether a defendant has waived any objection to venue:

- Defendant did not include objection in Rule 12 motion. If the defendant's first response to the complaint is a Rule 12 motion that does not include an objection to venue, the objection is waived unless it was not available at the time the motion was made. n2

- Defendant did not include objection in either answer or answer amended as matter of course. If the defendant's first response to the complaint is an answer that does not include an available objection to venue, the defendant waives the objection, unless the defendant adds the objection in an amendment permitted as a matter of course. n3

If the defense of improper venue was not available at the time the defendant's first response to the complaint was due, no waiver occurs and the defendant may raise the defense as soon as it becomes available. n4

If an objection to venue that was available against the original complaint is waived, the objection is not resurrected by a subsequent amendment of the complaint. n5

[2] Waiving Objection by Taking Default

A defendant waives the defense of improper venue, unlike the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction, by failing to appear and allowing a default to be entered against him or her. n6 However, if the defendant later succeeds in setting aside the default, the defendant may then move to dismiss for improper venue. n7

[3] Waiving Objection by Conduct

Even if the defendant complies with Rule 12 by including the objection to improper venue in his or her answer to the complaint, the defendant may waive the defense by engaging in pre-trial activity in the action before moving to dismiss for improper venue. n8

[4] Waiving Objection to Venue by Removing Action

The general venue provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 1391 do not apply to actions removed from state court. Instead, the venue of removed actions is governed by the removal statute itself, which provides that the proper venue of a removed action is "the district of the United States for the district and division embracing the place where such action is pending." n9

By removing an action from state court, the defendant waives any objection that venue would have been improper under the federal general venue statute if the plaintiff had originally commenced the action in the district court. n10

[5] Compare: Right to Request That Venue Be Transferred Is Not Waivable

The rules governing a defendant's waiver of the defense of improper venue do not apply to the defendant's right to request that venue be transferred for the convenience of the parties and witnesses. A motion to transfer venue may be made at any time. Thus, even if a defendant has waived the right to move for dismissal based on improper venue, the defendant may still seek a transfer of the action under 28 U.S.C. § 1404. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalElementsFederal VenueCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1); Wachovia Bank, N.A. v. Schmidt, 546 U.S. 303, 316, 126 S. Ct. 941, 163 L. Ed. 2d 797 (2006) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12, (g), (h); see King v. Russell, 963 F.2d 1301, 1304 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Gilmore v. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc., 811 F.2d 108, 112 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Hoffman v. Blaski, 363 U.S. 335, 343 (1960) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Bicicletas Windsor S.A. v. Bicycle Corp of Am., 783 F. Supp. 781, 785 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Sherman v. Moore, 86 F.R.D. 471, 473 (S.D.N.Y. 1980).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a); Polizzi v. Cowles Magazines, Inc., 345 U.S. 663, 665-666 (1953).

(n10)Footnote 10. Polizzi v. Cowles Magazines, Inc., 345 U.S. 663, 665-666 (1953).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Kolko v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 672 F. Supp. 713, 716 (S.D.N.Y. 1987).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
3. Challenging Improper Venue

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.83

§ 3.83 Responding to Motion to Dismiss for Improper Venue

[1] Burden of Proof

Most courts correctly treat the venue question as an affirmative defense. Therefore, the defendant has the burden of establishing that venue is improper. n1 However, some courts, apparently due to their confusion over the difference between subject matter jurisdiction and venue, have allocated the burden of proof to the plaintiff. n2 When determining a motion to dismiss for improper venue, the court should resolve all factual conflicts in favor of the non-moving party, unless the court holds an evidentiary hearing to resolve the factual issues. n3

If the case involves multiple claims, venue must be established as to each separate cause of action. n4

[2] Conducting Discovery

The court may permit the parties to conduct limited discovery on the issue of venue before ruling on a motion to dismiss for improper venue. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 17 MOORE'S Federal Practice (Matthew Bender 3d ed.) § 110.01[5][c].

(n2)Footnote 2. See Gulf Ins. Co. v. Glasbrenner, 417 F.3d 353, 355 (2d Cir. 2005) , aff'd, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 7998 (2d Cir. 2008) (if district court holds evidentiary hearing, plaintiff must demonstrate venue by preponderance of evidence).

(n3)Footnote 3. Murphy v. Schneider Nat'l, Inc., 362 F.3d 1133, 1137-1140 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Beattie v. United States, 756 F.2d 91, 100 (D.C. Cir. 1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Smehlik v. Athletes & Artists, Inc., 861 F. Supp. 1162, 1165 (W.D.N.Y. 1994).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
3. Challenging Improper Venue

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.84

§ 3.84 Court's Action on Motion to Dismiss for Improper Venue

[1] Dismissal Not on Merits

A dismissal for improper venue is not a judgment on the merits. n1

[2] Transferring Action When Venue Is Improper

Instead of dismissing a case that was filed in the wrong district for improper venue, a court may in its discretion transfer the case to any district in which it could have been brought, if such a transfer would be in the interest of justice. n2 If an action is transferred because venue was improper in the court in which the action was filed, the transferee court applies the law that it would have applied had the action originally been filed there. n3

The court need not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant to transfer the case. n4

The court may transfer a case even if the motion seeks dismissal only. n5

[3] Transferring Action When Venue Is Proper

Even if venue is proper, a court may transfer an action for the convenience of parties and witnesses, or in the interest of justice, to any other district or division where the action might have been brought. n6

If venue was proper in the transferor court, but the action was transferred for the convenience of the parties and witnesses under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a), the transferee court must apply the substantive state law, including choice of law rules, that would have applied had there been no change of venue. n7

Under some circumstances, a court in which venue is proper may nonetheless transfer an action under 28 U.S.C. § 1406, whose plain language appears to permit transfer only if venue is laid in the wrong district. Despite the language of the statute, some courts have read Section 1406 broadly to permit a transfer if it "would be in the interest of justice." n8

The critical distinction between a Section 1404 transfer and Section 1406 transfer is that the law of the original forum applies after a Section 1404 transfer, and the law of the transferee forum applies after a Section 1406 transfer.

Accordingly, a Section 1406 transfer may be needed to help the parties to surmount an obstacle, such as lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendant, which would have precluded suit in the original district. However, a court may not transfer an action under Section 1406 merely to avoid a statute of limitations problem which the plaintiff could have avoided through diligence. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferConvenience of PartiesCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferConvenience of WitnessesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Baris v. Sulpicio Lines, Inc., 74 F.3d 567, 571 (5th Cir. 1996) ; Schaeffer v. Village of Ossining, 58 F.3d 48, 50 n.2 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Horwitz v. Alloy Automotive Co., 992 F.2d 100, 102 (7th Cir. 1993) ; Concha v. London, 62 F.3d 1493, 1507-1508 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a); see Trujillo v. Williams, 465 F.3d 1210, 1216 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Schaeffer v. Village of Ossining, 58 F.3d 48, 50 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Goldlawr, Inc. v. Heiman, 369 U.S. 463, 465-466 (1962).

(n5)Footnote 5. Concession Consultants, Inc., v. Mirisch, 355 F.2d 369, 371 n.3 (2d Cir. 1966) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612, 639 (1964) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Verosol B.V. v. Hunter Douglas, Inc., 806 F. Supp. 582, 594 (E.D. Va. 1992) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Spar, Inc. v. Information Resources, Inc., 956 F.2d 392, 395 (2d Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
3. Challenging Improper Venue

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.85 through 3.89

[Reserved]

§§ 3.85[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.90

§ 3.90 Basis for Motion

To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must include sufficient factual context to state a claim for relief that is "plausible on its face." n1 All claims must be accompanied by facts which allow the court "to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." n2 This "facial plausibility" cannot be supported by "mere conclusory statements" and a reviewing court is required to "draw on its experience and common sense" in its determination of plausibility. n3

Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) may be appropriate if a successful affirmative defense or other bar to relief appears on the face of the complaint or in the attached exhibits. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsRes JudicataGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884-885 (2009) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Banco Santander de Puerto Rico v. Lopez-Stubbe (In re Colonial Mortgage Bankers Corp.), 324 F.3d 12, 16 (1st Cir. 2003) (res judicata); Brooks v. City of Winston-Salem, N.C., 85 F. 3d 178, 182 (4th Cir. 1996) (statute of limitations).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.91

§ 3.91 Motion May Be Made by Any Defendant

Any defendant to a complaint, counterclaim, or cross-claim may move for dismissal on the ground that the pleading fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.92

§ 3.92 Motion May Be Made at Any Time During Proceedings

A defendant may move for dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted at any time, as follows:

- Prior to serving a responsive pleading. The defense of failure to state a claim may be raised in a Rule 12 motion to dismiss prior to serving a responsive pleading. n1

- After pleadings are closed. The defense may be raised after the pleadings are closed by filing a motion for judgment on the pleadings. n2

- During trial. The defense may be raised at trial on the merits. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.93

§ 3.93 Materials Considered by Court

[1] Pleadings and Matters of Judicial Notice

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion is addressed to the face of the pleadings. A court may only consider the pleadings, documents referred to in the pleadings, and matters of judicial notice in ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. n1

If the moving party submits matters outside the pleadings on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the court must exercise one of the following options: n2

- The court may exclude the additional material and decide the motion on the complaint alone
- The court may convert the Rule 12(b)(6) motion to a motion for summary judgment under Rule 56, and give all parties notice and the opportunity to present all pertinent supporting materials n3

[2] Materials Court May Consider Without Converting Motion

Unless the court converts the Rule 12(b)(6) motion to a motion for summary judgment, the court may consider only the following materials:

- Facts alleged in the complaint n4
- Documents attached as exhibits to complaint n5
- Matters of which the judge may take judicial notice under Federal Rule of Evidence 201 n6
- Public records n7
- Documents that have not been attached to the complaint or incorporated by reference if the complaint relies heavily on the documents, and the documents are integral to the complaint n8

[3] Materials Court May Not Consider Without Converting Motion

The court may not consider extrinsic evidence without converting the motion to a motion for summary judgment. The following are examples of extrinsic evidence in appropriate for a court to consider:

- Factual materials attached to the motion n9
- Exhibits attached to motion or opposition to motion n10
- Factual allegations in motion or opposition to motion n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentEvidenceCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral OverviewEvidenceJudicial NoticeGeneral OverviewEvidenceJudicial NoticeAdjudicative FactsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); Stahl v. USDA, 327 F.3d 697, 700-701 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 3.96; Alioto v. Marshall Field's & Co., 77 F.3d 934, 936 (7th Cir. 1996) ; David v. City & County of Denver, 101 F.3d 1344, 1352 (10th Cir. 1996) ; Fernandez-Montes v. Allied Pilots Ass'n, 987 F.2d 278, 283 n.7 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Paulemon v. Tobin, 30 F.3d 307, 308-309 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Taylor v. Appleton, 30 F.3d 1365, 1370 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Lovelace v. Software Spectrum Inc., 78 F.3d 1015, 1017-1018 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Cinel v. Connick, 15 F.3d 1338, 1343 n.6 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See GFF Corp. v. Associated Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 130 F.3d 1381, 1385 (10th Cir. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 9. River City Mkts. v. Fleming Foods W., Inc., 960 F.2d 1458, 1460 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Finn v. Gunter, 722 F.2d 711, 713 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See In re Colonial Ltd. Partnership Litig., 854 F. Supp. 64, 79 (D. Conn. 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.94

§ 3.94 Determining If Claim for Relief Is Stated

[1] Moving Party's Burden of Persuasion

The party moving for dismissal must show beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of plaintiff's claim that would entitle plaintiff to relief. n1 The Supreme Court has held that a complaint may not survive a motion to dismiss unless it contains "enough factual matter" to state a claim to relief that is "plausible on its face." n2

All claims must include factual allegations that "plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief." n2.1

[2] Court Construes Allegations of Complaint in Favor of Plaintiff

In ruling on a 12(b)(6) motion, the court must accept the plaintiff's factual allegations as true. n3 The court will not accept as true any conclusory allegations, legal conclusions, or unwarranted deductions of fact in the complaint. n4 For example, to withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, a conspiracy claim should contain more than conclusory, vague, or general allegations, and should provide some details of time and place and the alleged effect of the conspiracy. n5

The court must draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. n6

In addition, the court must construe the complaint's allegations liberally. For most claims, the plaintiff need only allege a short and plain statement of the claim, sufficient to give the defendant notice of the claim, rather than detailed facts. n7 However, the pleading must set forth sufficient information for the court to determine whether some recognized legal theory exists upon which relief could be accorded the pleader. If it fails to do so, a motion under Rule 12(b)(6) will be granted. n8

If the plaintiff is proceeding pro se, the complaint is held to less stringent standards than a formal pleading drafted by a lawyer. n9 The court must make reasonable allowances so that a pro se plaintiff does not forfeit his or her rights by virtue of lack of legal training. n10

The court will not dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim merely because the complaint requests inappropriate relief, or miscategorizes legal theories. n11 Instead, the court has a duty to examine the complaint to determine if the allegations support a claim for relief on any possible theory. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State ClaimsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Koehler v. Brody, 483 F.3d 590, 596 (8th Cir. 2007).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929, 940-941 (2007) .

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (2007) ("when ruling on a defendant's motion to dismiss, a judge must accept as true all of the factual allegations contained in the complaint").

(n5)Footnote 4. Jeffery Y. v. St. Marys Area Sch. Dist., 967 F. Supp. 852, 854-855 (W.D. Pa. 1997) ; Sheridan v. Int'l. Bhd. of Elec. Workers, 940 F. Supp. 368, 372 (D. Mass. 1996) ; Davis v. Bayless, 70 F.3d 367, 371 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Dwares v. City of New York, 985 F.2d 94, 100 (2d Cir. 1993) (quoting Moore's).

(n7)Footnote 6. Sanner v. Chicago Bd. of Trade, 62 F.3d 918, 925 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a); Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence & Coordination Unit, 507 U.S. 163, 168 (1993) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Resolution Trust Corp. v. Gallagher, 800 F. Supp. 595, 598 (N.D. Ill. 1992), aff'd on other grounds, 10 F.3d 416 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Hughes v. Rowe, 449 U.S. 5, 9 (1980) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See, e.g., McBride v. Sharpe, 25 F.3d 962, 971 (11th Cir. 1994).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Norwalk CORE v. Norwalk Redevelopment Agency, 395 F.2d 920, 925-926 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Bowers v. Hardwick, 478 U.S. 186, 202 (1986) (Blackmun, J., dissenting).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.95

§ 3.95 Moving to Dismiss Claim Involving Fraud or Mistake

[1] Methods of Attacking Pleading

Rule 9(b) creates special pleading requirements for claims involving fraud or mistake. The sufficiency of such a claim may be attacked by either a motion to dismiss for failure to plead fraud with particularity under Rule 9(b), or a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), or a combination of both. n1

[2] Pleading Fraud and Mistake

If a claim involves fraud or mistake, the plaintiff must plead the following circumstances constituting fraud or mistake with particularity to survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss: n2

- Time and place of the alleged misrepresentation
- Identity of perpetrator
- Content of alleged false statement, and respect in which it was false
- Result of false representation

However, malice, intent, knowledge or other condition of the mind of a person may be averred generally, and need not be pleaded with great specificity. n3

The Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 n4 contains pleading requirements more rigorous than those of Rule 9(b).

Pleadings alleging fraud usually may not be based on information and belief, n5 unless the facts relating to the fraud are peculiarly within the opposing party's knowledge, and the pleader details his or her efforts to obtain the information. n6

[3] Applying Particularity Requirement on Motion to Dismiss

If the defendant seeks to dismiss a claim involving fraud or mistake, the general standards for analyzing a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss are applied in light of Rule 9(b)'s particularity requirements. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsFraud ClaimsCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State Claims

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); see, e.g., IUE AFL-CIO Pension Fund v. Herrmann, 9 F.3d 1049, 1052-1053 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); Tuchman v. DSC Communications Corp., 14 F.3d 1061, 1068 (5th Cir. 1994).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4.

(n5)Footnote 5. Tuchman v. DSC Communications Corp., 14 F.3d 1061, 1068 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Weiner v. Quaker Oats Co., 129 F.3d 310, 319-320 (3d Cir. 1997).

(n7)Footnote 7. Ross v. Bolton, 904 F.2d 819, 823 (2d Cir. 1990).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.96

§ 3.96 Court May Convert Rule 12(b)(6) Motion to Motion for Summary Judgment

[1] Court Considers Matters Outside Pleadings

The court has discretion to consider extrinsic materials offered by the parties in conjunction with a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. If the court chooses to consider extrinsic materials, it must treat the motion as a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment. n1

[2] Providing Notice of Conversion

If the court chooses to consider extrinsic evidence, thereby converting a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to a motion for summary judgment, it must provide all parties with a reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56. n2

The court is not required to give the parties formal notice that it is converting a 12(b)(6) motion into a motion for summary judgment. n3 Notice is sufficient when a party is aware that material outside the pleadings is before the court; the circumstances are such that the parties should reasonably have recognized the possibility that the motion might be converted into one for summary judgment, and therefore had a sufficient opportunity to present any relevant extrinsic evidence. n4

By contrast, notice is insufficient if the plaintiff is taken by surprise by the conversion and is therefore "deprived of a reasonable opportunity to meet facts outside the pleadings." n5

[3] Consequences of Conversion: Court Applies Different Standard on Motion for Summary Judgment

If the motion is converted, the court will treat the motion as a motion for summary judgment, and will grant the motion only if "there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." The court makes this determination on the basis of the pleadings and discovery materials. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fernandez-Montes v. Allied Pilots Ass'n, 987 F.2d 278, 283 n.7 (5th Cir. 1993).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); see also Global Network Commc'ns, Inc. v. City of N.Y., 458 F.3d 150, 154-156 (2d Cir. 2006).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Boateng v. InterAmerican Univ., Inc., 210 F.3d 56, 60-61 (1st Cir. 2000).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Gulf Coast Bank & Trust Co. v. Reder, 355 F.3d 35, 38-39 (1st Cir. 2004) ; Gay v. Wall, 761 F.2d 175, 177 (4th Cir.1985) ; see also Milwaukee Typographical Union No. 23 v. Newspapers, Inc., 639 F.2d 386, 391 (7th Cir. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. In re G. & A. Books, 770 F.2d 288, 295 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.97

§ 3.97 Amending Complaint in Response to Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

[1] Clarifying Factual Allegations

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim alerts the plaintiff to the legal theory underlying the defendant's challenge. If the motion appears to be meritorious, the plaintiff should determine whether it is possible to clarify the factual allegations of the complaint to state a valid legal cause of action. n1 If it is possible to state a valid cause of action, the plaintiff should respond to the motion to dismiss by amending the complaint to cure the defect in pleading. n2

[2] Amending Complaint as Matter of Course

A party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course within: n3

- 21 days after serving it, or
- If the pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, 21 days after service of a responsive pleading or 21 days after service of a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f), whichever is earlier.

[3] Amending Complaint With Leave of Court

If the plaintiff has already amended the complaint once as a matter of course, or if the time period to amend has elapsed, the plaintiff may amend only with leave of the court or with the written consent of the defendant. n4

It is the usual practice upon granting a motion to dismiss for the court to allow the plaintiff to replead, unless the court has a substantial reason to deny the motion. n5 The court may deny leave to amend if it determines that, as a matter of law, the amendment would not cure the complaint's deficiencies. n6 The court may also deny leave to amend based on the additional factors listed below. n7

- Untimeliness

- Undue delay
- Bad faith
- Dilatory motive
- Prejudice to the other party

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State Claims

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 329-330 (1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Alston v. Parker, 363 F.3d 229, 235-236 (3d Cir. 2004) ; Rolf v. City of San Antonio, 77 F.3d 823, 828 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See DeSalle v. Wright, 969 F.2d 273, 278 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See e.g., Wade v. Hopper, 993 F.2d 1246, 1249 (7th Cir. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.98

§ 3.98 Effect of Rule 12(b)(6) Dismissal

[1] Dismissal on Merits

A dismissal for failure to state a claim is a judgment on the merits, unlike dismissals for lack of subject matter or personal jurisdiction, improper venue, or failure to join the proper parties under Rule 19. Such a dismissal, presumed to be with prejudice, unless the order explicitly states otherwise, has a claim preclusive effect. n1

[2] Court May Still Consider Supplemental State Law Claims

Unlike a Rule 12(b)(1) dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal for failure to state a claim does not divest the district court of supplemental jurisdiction to consider pendent state law claims. n2

A court may, however, decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims if it has dismissed all claims over which it had original jurisdiction. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State Claims

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Federated Dept. Stores, Inc. v. Moitie, 452 U.S. 394, 399 (1981).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Finz v. Schlesinger, 957 F.2d 78, 83-84 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
4. Moving to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.99 through 3.109

[Reserved]

§§ 3.99[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
5. Challenging Defects in Process or Service

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.110

§ 3.110 Dismissal for Insufficiency of Process

A defendant may move to dismiss a complaint for insufficiency of process if the content of the summons does not comply with the requirements of Rule 4. n1

As a practical matter, dismissal of a complaint because of inadequate content of the summons occurs almost exclusively in state court, where counsel ordinarily prepares the summons. In federal court, counsel files the complaint with the court, and obtains a standard form summons authored by the United States judicial system. This form is simply filled out and served with the complaint. It is hard to have inadequate process when using the preprinted form. Consequently, Rule 12(b)(4) motions to dismiss for insufficiency of process are virtually unheard of in federal court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4); see also Shipley v. Orndoff, 491 F. Supp. 2d 498, 502-503 (D. Del. 2007) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
5. Challenging Defects in Process or Service

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.111

§ 3.111 Dismissal for Insufficiency of Service of Process

[1] Grounds for Dismissal

A defendant may move for dismissal of an action if the plaintiff failed to strictly comply with the requirements of Rule 4 in serving the summons. The fact that the defendant has full knowledge of the action does not confer jurisdiction on the court to enter a judgment against the defendant. n1

Rule 4 prescribes the procedures for properly serving a summons on various types of defendants, such as individuals, infants and incompetent persons, corporations and associations, and United States defendants. Rule 4 also provides for service on various types of defendants in accordance with state law procedures, as an alternative to the methods expressly authorized by Rule 4 itself. n2

Counsel should be aware that the current Rule 4(m) replaces a more stringent version of the Rule, which had been construed as forcing dismissal once the 120-day clock had expired. n3 Therefore, special caution should be used in citing and relying on cases applying the earlier version.

In addition to the requirements of Rule 4, the plaintiff must comply with any relevant district court procedures governing process and service. n4

Examples of defects in service of process include the following:

- Service of summons without complaint n5
- Service of complaint without summons n6
- Serving an individual not authorized to accept service on behalf of a corporation n7

[2] Distinguished From Challenge to Personal Jurisdiction

A Rule 12(b)(5) defense of insufficient service of process is different from a Rule 12(b)(2) defense of lack of personal jurisdiction, and must therefore be separately asserted. n8

A defendant who challenges the court's personal jurisdiction asserts that the defendant's contacts with the forum state are insufficient to permit the court to adjudicate the defendant's rights. By contrast, a challenge to the sufficiency of service of process attacks only the method by which service has been made, and not the court's power to exercise jurisdiction over the defendant. n9

[3] Raising Challenge to Sufficiency of Service of Process

Although no specific time is specified for raising a defense of improper service of process, such a motion must be raised in a reasonably timely fashion. n10 An objection to sufficiency of service of process may be raised prior to answering the complaint by filing a Rule 12 motion to dismiss.

If the defendant files a Rule 12 pre-answer motion on other grounds, but does not include an objection to sufficiency of service of process, the objection is waived. n11 If the defendant's first response to the complaint is an answer, the defendant may assert the defense of insufficiency of service of process in the answer or in an answer amended as a matter of course. If the defendant fails to assert the defense, any objection to service of process is waived. n12

In asserting the defense, the defendant must specify the manner in which service was deficient. Merely stating that the court lacks personal jurisdiction or that service was insufficient is not enough to preserve the defense. n13

A defendant who has not been properly served may decide not to respond to the complaint and allow a default judgment to be entered. The defendant may then attack the default judgment on the grounds of insufficient service of process. If the defendant had actual notice of the action, however, the defendant may have waived the defense. n14

[4] Waiving Defense of Insufficient Service of Process

The defense of improper service may be waived by failure to assert it seasonably. n15 The defense of improper service may also be waived by conduct. n16 The following types of conduct, however, have been held to not constitute waiver:

- Appearance of counsel at a status conference n17
- Taking basic procedural steps, such as appearing in the action n18

A defendant who asserts the defense of insufficient service of process in its answer may subsequently waive the defense by failing to move for dismissal based on insufficient service in a reasonably timely manner. In determining whether a delay in challenging service by motion to dismiss has resulted in waiver, the court looks at the following factors: n19

- Whether the statute of limitations has expired
- Whether plaintiff could have cured the defect in service if the statute of limitations had not expired.
- Length of delay
- Whether the defendant had an opportunity to seek dismissal earlier
- Whether a timely motion to dismiss would have saved the opposing party and court significant time and expense

[5] Asserting Defense of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction Does Not Preserve Defense Based on Service

If a Rule 12(b) motion or answer asserts the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction but does not assert insufficient service of process, the objection to service of process is waived. n20

However, if the defendant merely mislabels an objection to service of process as an objection to personal jurisdiction, and the papers supporting the defendant's motion indicate the true nature of the defense, the court may consider the defense of insufficient service of process. n21

[6] Failing to Assert Lack of Personal Jurisdiction Does Not Waive Defense of Insufficient Service

A court does not have personal jurisdiction over a defendant until the defendant has been properly served with a summons and complaint, or has waived of service of process. n22

However, a defendant's failure to assert lack of personal jurisdiction as a defense does not waive the defendant's right to assert the defense of insufficient service of process. n23

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4; McGuire v. Sigma Coatings, Inc., 48 F.3d 902, 907 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Mid-Continent Wood Products, Inc. v. Harris, 936 F.2d 297, 301 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Schaeffer v. Village of Ossining, 58 F.3d 48, 50 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Carimi v. Royal Caribbean Cruise Line, Inc., 959 F.2d 1344, 1345-1346 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Bolivar v. Director of the FBI, 846 F. Supp. 163, 166 (D.P.R. 1994) ; In re City of Philadelphia Litigation, 123 F.R.D. 515, 518 (E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Schaeffer v. Village of Ossing, 58 F. 3d 48, 49 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Santos v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 902 F.2d 1092, 1095 (2d Cir. 1990).

(n9)Footnote 9. Santos v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 902 F.2d 1092, 1095 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., O'Brien v. R.J. O'Brien & Assocs., 998 F.2d 1394, 1399 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12, (g), (h)(1); see Flory v. United States, 79 F.3d 24, 26 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P., 12(h)(1); see also Vax-D Med. Techs., LLC v. Texas Spine Med. Ctr., 485 F.3d 593, 597 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Santos v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 902 F.2d 1092, 1095-1096 (2d Cir. 1990) ; see also

O'Brien v. R.J. O'Brien Assocs., 998 F.2d 1394, 1400 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Sanderford v. Prudential Ins. Co., 902 F.2d 897, 900 (11th Cir. 1990) ; but see Triad Energy Corp. v. McNell, 110 F.R.D. 382, 386 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Trustees of Cent. Laborers' Welfare Fund v. Lowery, 924 F.2d 731, 732-733 (7th Cir. 1991) ; see [3], above.

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Trustees of Cent. Laborers' Welfare Fund v. Lowery, 924 F.2d 731, 733 (7th Cir. 1991).

(n17)Footnote 17. Howard v. Klynveld Peat Marwick Goerdeler, 977 F. Supp. 654, 659 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Grammenos v. Lemos, 457 F.2d 1067, 1070 (2d Cir. 1972) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Datskow v. Teledyne, Inc., 899 F.2d 1298, 1302-1304 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See O'Brien v. R.J. O'Brien & Assocs., 998 F.2d 1394, 1399 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Santos v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 902 F.2d 1092, 1096 (2d Cir. 1990).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Omni Capital Int'l, Ltd. v. Rudolf Wolff & Co., 484 U.S. 97, 104 (1987).

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g., Guccione v. Flynt, 618 F. Supp. 164, 168 (S.D.N.Y. 1985).

62 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
5. Challenging Defects in Process or Service

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.112

§ 3.112 Procedure on Motion to Dismiss for Insufficient Service of Process

[1] Plaintiff Has Initial Burden of Proof

If the sufficiency of service of process is challenged, the plaintiff has the burden of showing adequacy of service. n1 The plaintiff commonly meets this burden by submitting the process server's proof of service affidavit, which is presumptively valid. n2

[2] Burden Shifts to Defendant

If the process server's affidavit establishes that service was properly made, the burden shifts to the defendant to produce evidence, usually in the form of affidavits, establishing the insufficiency of service. n3 A bare allegation that service was improper is insufficient to overcome the presumption of validity of the process server's affidavit. n4

[3] Determining Disputed Facts

In deciding a motion to dismiss for insufficient service, the court may determine factual disputes between the parties on the basis of the parties' affidavits. n5

If the defendant's evidence challenges the assertions raised in the plaintiff's return of service, the court may conduct a hearing to determine the contested issues of fact as to the sufficiency of service. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Grand Entertainment Group v. Star Media Sales, Inc., 988 F.2d 476, 486-491 (3d Cir. 1993) ; Aetna

Business Credit Inc. v. Universal Decor I Interior Design, Inc., 635 F. 2d 434, 435 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Trustees of Local Union No. 727 Pension Fund v. Perfect Parking, Inc., 126 F.R.D. 48, 52 (N.D. Ill. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Nolan v. City of Yonkers, 168 F.R.D. 140, 144 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., FROF, Inc. v. Harris, 695 F. Supp. 827, 828-829 (E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Michelson v. Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith, Inc., 669 F. Supp. 1244, 1266-1267 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(i).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
5. Challenging Defects in Process or Service

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.113

§ 3.113 Action by Court on Motion to Dismiss

[1] Court's Discretion

If the court determines that process or service of process was insufficient, the court has broad discretion to do either of the following:

- Dismiss the action n1
- Retain the case but quash service, and extend the time for service n2

Generally, the court will dismiss if a defendant is not served within 120 days, unless the plaintiff can show good cause for delay. n3

[2] Dismissal With or Without Prejudice

On finding that either process or service of process was insufficient, the court has discretion to dismiss the action without prejudice. n4 Although a dismissal without prejudice is not ordinarily a final judgment, if the statute of limitations has run by the time of the dismissal, the courts will treat it as a final judgment, because the plaintiff will be unable to refile the complaint. n5

A court may dismiss an action with prejudice if it has already given the plaintiff several opportunities to achieve proper service. n6

[3] Quashing Service

If process or service of process was insufficient, the court may quash service and direct the plaintiff to effect service within a specified period of time. n7

Ordinarily, the court should quash service and retain the case if there is a reasonable prospect that the plaintiff will be able to properly serve the defendant within the limitations period. n8

[4] Extension of Time

If the plaintiff does not perfect service of process within 120 days after filing the complaint, Rule 4(m) allows the court, either sua sponte after notice to the plaintiff or on motion by the party challenging process or service, to dismiss the action without prejudice. However, on a showing of good cause, the court must extend the time for service for an appropriate period. n9

If the court quashes service of the summons, it will normally extend the time within which the plaintiff must re-serve the summons. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessTime LimitationsDismissalsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Adams v. Allied Signal Gen. Aviation Avionics, 74 F.3d 882, 887 (8th Cir. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. McGann v. New York, 77 F.3d 672, 674 n.2 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Forest v. Holland Distribs., Inc., 824 F. Supp. 87, 88 (M.D. La. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Ouzts v. Cummins, 825 F.2d 1276, 1278 (8th Cir. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Umbenhauer v. Woog, 969 F.2d 25, 31 (3d Cir. 1992) ; Powell v. Starwalt, 866 F.2d 964, 966 (7th Cir. 1989).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Michelson v. Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith, Inc., 669 F. Supp. 1244, 1266-1267 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n7)Footnote 7. McGann v. New York, 77 F.3d 672, 674 n.2 (2d Cir. 1996).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Zola v. Gordon, 685 F. Supp. 354, 377 (S.D.N.Y. 1988).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m).

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Myers v. Secretary of the Dept. of the Treasury, 173 F.R.D. 44, 47 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
5. Challenging Defects in Process or Service

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.114 through 3.119

[Reserved]

§§ 3.114[Reserved]

65 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
6. Challenging Failure to Join

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.120

§ 3.120 Moving to Dismiss for Failure to Join Party Under Rule 19

[1] Basis of Challenge

A defendant may move for dismissal if a person needed for a just adjudication pursuant to Rule 19 has not been made a party to the action. n1

A court will not dismiss an action for failure to join a necessary party unless it determines all of the following: n2

- Joinder of the absentee party is compulsory
- The absent party cannot be joined
- The prejudice resulting from nonjoinder of the absentee party outweighs the prejudice resulting from dismissal of the action

[2] Raising Challenge

A challenge based on failure to join an indispensable party may be raised at any stage of the proceedings. The challenge may be raised in a pre-answer motion, in any pleading permitted or ordered under Rule 7(a), by motion for judgment on the pleadings, or at the trial on the merits. n3

As a general rule, failure to join an indispensable party is a non-waivable defense. n4 However, a party may be barred from raising the defense by the doctrine of laches, if the party waits until late in the proceedings to raise the defense, despite ample opportunity to raise the defense earlier. n5

A party may not use its own failure to join a party offensively. In other words, a party who asserts a claim but fails to join a party indispensable to the adjudication of that claim may not later seek dismissal based on failure to join an indispensable party. n6

[3] Burden of Proof

A party moving for dismissal under Rule 12(b)(7) has the burden on the motion. n7 To meet its burden, the moving party must present credible evidence showing one of the following: n8

- Complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties unless the person is joined as a party
- The person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action, and disposition of the action in the person's absence may impair or impede the person's ability to protect that interest
- The person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action, and disposition of the action in the person's absence may subject any of the existing parties to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of the claimed interest

If the moving party intends to establish that a nonparty is a necessary party under either the second or third rationale listed above, the moving party must present evidence that the nonparty has actually claimed a legally protected interest relating to the subject matter of the action. The party seeking dismissal cannot merely claim such an interest on the absent party's behalf. n9

If the moving party meets its burden, the burden shifts to the opposing party to show that the action may proceed "in equity and good conscience" without joining the necessary party. The party opposing the motion may meet its burden by showing one or more of the following: n10

- That a judgment rendered in the nonparty's absence would not be prejudicial to the nonparty or to those already parties
- That any prejudice to the nonparty or the existing parties can be lessened by protective provisions in the judgment, by the shaping of relief, or by other measures n11
- That a judgment rendered in the nonparty's absence will be adequate
- That the plaintiff will not have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(7).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Gil Enters., Inc. v. Delvy, 79 F.3d 241, 247 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Judwin Properties, Inc. v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 973 F.2d 432, 434 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. West Peninsular Title Co. v. Palm Beach County, 41 F.3d 1490, 1492 (11th Cir. 1995) ; Associated Dry Goods Corp. v. Towers Fin. Corp., 920 F.2d 1121, 1123-1125 (2d Cir. 1990).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a); see Associated Dry Goods Corp. v. Towers Fin. Corp., 920 F.2d 1121, 1123-1125 (2d Cir. 1990) ; West Peninsular Title Co. v. Palm Beach County, 41 F.3d 1490, 1492 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B); Conntech Dev. Co. v. University of Conn. Educ. Props., Inc., 102 F.3d 677, 683 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Jaser v. New York Property Ins. Underwriting Ass'n, 815 F.2d 240, 243 (2d Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
6. Challenging Failure to Join

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.121

§ 3.121 Court's Inquiry on Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Join Party

In ruling on a Rule 19 motion to dismiss, the court must determine whether the party is a necessary party, and should therefore be joined. A person is a necessary party if any of the following are true: n1

- Complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties unless the person is joined as a party
- The person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action, and disposition of the action in the person's absence may impair or impede the person's ability to protect that interest
- The person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action, and disposition of the action in the person's absence may subject any of the existing parties to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of the claimed interest

In determining whether a person is a necessary party, a court must base its decision on the pleadings as they appear at the time of the proposed joinder. n2

If the court finds that the person is a necessary party who can be joined, the court will not dismiss the action but will instead order joinder of the necessary party. n3 If the person is found to be a necessary party under Rule 19(a) but cannot be joined, either because the person is not amenable to service of process or joining the person would deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction, the court must then determine whether, "in equity and good conscience, the action should proceed" without the necessary party. In making this determination, the court must consider the following factors: n4

- The extent to which a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to the person or to those already parties
- The extent to which the prejudice can be lessened by protective provisions in the judgment, by the shaping of relief, or by other measures
- Whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate

- Whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder

The court must determine the weight to be given each factor, based on the facts of the case and the governing "equity and good conscience test." n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Associated Dry Goods Corp v. Towers Fin. Corp., 920 F.2d 1121, 1124 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Peninsular Title Co. v. Palm Beach County, 41 F.3d 1490, 1492 (11th Cir. 1995) ; Associated Dry Goods Corp. v. Towers Fin. Corp., 920 F.2d 1121, 1123-1125 (2d Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
6. Challenging Failure to Join

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.122

§ 3.122 Court's Action on Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Join Party

Courts take a flexible approach when deciding what parties need to be present for a just resolution. n1

Dismissal for failure to join a party is disfavored and should be avoided unless the court has made a reasoned determination that a just adjudication will be impossible in the absence of the party. As a result, very few cases should be terminated due to the absence of a nondiverse party. n2

If an action involves multiple claims, the court may not dismiss the entire action if there are claims that can be adjudicated in the absence of a party who cannot be joined. In such a case, the court should dismiss only those claims as to which the absentee party is indispensable. n3

If the court determines that the person is necessary for a proper adjudication and joinder is possible, the court should order that the person be joined as a party. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 106, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936, (1968) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Jaser v. New York Property Ins. Underwriting Ass'n, 815 F.2d 240, 242 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Clarendon, Ltd. v. State Bank of Saurashtra, 77 F.3d 631, 635 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 118, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
6. Challenging Failure to Join

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.123 through 3.129

[Reserved]

§§ 3.123[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
6. Challenging Failure to Join

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.130

§ 3.130 CHECKLIST: Moving to Dismiss Pursuant to Rule 12

The following checklist will assist counsel in drafting a Rule 12 dismissal motion. Counsel should check the local district court rules, as well as the individual judge's rules, for motion procedures, including whether a pre-motion conference is required.

☐ Lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

- ☐ Is not waivable.
- ☐ May be raised at any time.
- ☐ May be raised by any party.
- ☐ May be used to challenge diversity.
- ☐ May be used to challenge amount in controversy.
- ☐ May be used to challenge federal question jurisdiction.

☐ Lack of personal jurisdiction.

- ☐ May be waived.
- ☐ May be used to challenge assertion of long-arm jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant.

☐ Improper venue.

- ☐ May be waived.
- ☐ General venue statute sets forth proper venue [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391].
- ☐ Some federal statutes contain venue provisions.
- ☐ Forum selection clauses are generally enforceable.
- ☐ Transfer of venue more likely than dismissal.

☐ Insufficiency of process.

- ☐ May be used to challenge the content of the summons as not complying with the requirements of Rule 4.

☐ Insufficiency of service of process.

- ☐ May be waived.
- ☐ May be used to challenge defects in service.

☐ Failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

- ☐ May be raised at any time.
- ☐ May not be waived.
- ☐ May be raised by any party.
- ☐ Asserts that no facts support relief, or that affirmative defense mandates dismissal.
- ☐ Court will only consider pleadings and matters of judicial notice.
- ☐ Motion may be converted to motion for summary judgment.

☐ Failure to join a party under Rule 19.

☐ May be raised at any time.

☐ May not be waived.

☐ May be used to challenge absence of person needed for a just adjudication.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionAmount in ControversyChallengesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsChallengesCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentNotices

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
6. Challenging Failure to Join

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.131

§ 3.131 CHECKLIST: Responding to Rule 12 Motion to Dismiss

The following checklist will assist counsel in responding to a defendant's Rule 12 motion to dismiss.

☐ Preliminary considerations.

☐ Consider amending pleading to cure defect.

☐ Consider dismissing action or claim and refiling when defect can be cured.

☐ Opposing the motion.

☐ Local district court rules govern the time for filing opposition papers. Generally opposition papers are filed with the court at the same time they are served on the other parties. Counsel should also check the individual judge's rules.

☐ Check local rules for required papers.

☐ Consider requesting a hearing. The court is required to conduct a hearing upon the request of any party. However, the court has the discretion to defer the hearing until trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsRule

Application & Interpretation

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
D. Raising Specific Rule 12 Defenses
6. Challenging Failure to Join

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.132 through 3.139

[Reserved]

§§ 3.132[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
E. Defensive Motions to Narrow or Clarify Pleadings
1. Rule 12(e) Motion for More Definite Statement

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.140

§ 3.140 Evaluating Use of Motion for More Definite Statement

Before deciding to use the motion for a more definite statement, counsel should evaluate his or her strategy in the light of the courts' general disfavor of this motion. n1

A party may make a motion for a more definite statement to clarify a pleading to which the party is permitted to respond. Either party may bring a motion for a more definite statement to clarify a pleading that "is so vague or ambiguous that [the] party cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading." n2

Courts are reluctant to grant Rule 12(e) motions, and will not do so unless the pleading is so unintelligible that the defendant cannot respond. n3 A motion for a more definite statement is designed to clarify unintelligible pleadings, and not to correct for insufficient detail. n4

A complaint is only required to provide the adverse party fair notice of the claim asserted to enable the party to answer and prepare for trial. This requirement is satisfied if the pleading informs the opposing party of the general nature of the action, and the incident out of which the cause of action arose. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore v. Fidelity Fin. Servs., 869 F. Supp. 557, 559-560 (N.D. Ill. 1994) ; see In re Hanford Nuclear Reservation Litig., 780 F. Supp. 1551, 1583 (E.D. Wash. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n3)Footnote 3. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Wise, 758 F. Supp. 1414, 1418 (D. Colo. 1991) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Kelly v. L.L. Cool J., 145 F.R.D. 32, 35 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) , aff'd without opinion, 23 F.3d 398 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. United States v. Uvalde Consol. Indep. Sch. Dist., 625 F.2d 547, 549 (5th Cir. 1980) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
E. Defensive Motions to Narrow or Clarify Pleadings
1. Rule 12(e) Motion for More Definite Statement

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.141

§ 3.141 Specific Uses of Motion

[1] Determining Dates for Statute of Limitations

A defendant may use a motion for a more definite statement to force the plaintiff to allege dates necessary to determine whether there is a valid statute of limitations defense. n1 For example, in one case the complaint alleged that the defendant had breached numerous oral contracts over a 22-year period, but failed to specify the dates of the contracts. Observing that the absence of dates made it difficult to determine if the claims were barred by the statute of limitations, the court ordered the plaintiff to file a new complaint that included the date of each contract. n2

However, there is also authority that a defendant may not use a motion for a more definite statement to force the plaintiff to allege dates. For example, in a case in which the plaintiff alleged that the defendant bank had wrongfully transferred plaintiff's funds, the court denied the defendant's motion for a more definite statement to force the plaintiff to allege the date of the transfer. Although the court acknowledged that the date would determine whether the defendant could successfully plead a statute of limitations defense, it reasoned that the defendant could plead the defense without further information. n3

[2] Examples of Proper Motion for More Definite Statement

The following are examples of circumstances in which a court has granted a Rule 12(e) motion for a more definite statement:

- The complaint was brought against multiple defendants, and it could not be determined which of the defendants was charged with each act n4

- The complaint was cumbersome in asserting a myriad of claims n5

- In a copyright infringement action, the complaint failed to allege whether and when plaintiff registered the copyright on the work that was the subject of the action n6

- In an employment discrimination action in which "the nature of the supposed contract of employment was entirely unclear" from the complaint, the court granted a motion for a more definite statement n7

[3] Motion May Not Be Used to Clarify Damages Claims

Because the plaintiff is not required to plead general damages with specificity, a court will not grant a motion for a more definite statement of general damages. n8

[4] Motion May Not Be Used as Substitute for Discovery

A motion for a more definite statement should not be used to obtain information that can be obtained through normal discovery procedures. n9

[5] Motion May Not Be Used to Ascertain Legal Theory

The court will deny a Rule 12(e) motion brought for the purpose of ascertaining the plaintiffs' legal theory or to pin the plaintiff down to a particular legal theory. n10

[6] Motion May Note Be Used to Avoid Answering Complaint

The court will deny a Rule 12(e) motion brought as a dilatory tactic to postpone filing an answer. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Wood v. Apodaca, 375 F. Supp. 2d 942, 949-950 (N.D. Cal. 2005)

(n2)Footnote 2. Van Brunt v. Rauschenberg, 799 F. Supp. 1467, 1472 (S.D.N.Y. 1992).

(n3)Footnote 3. Trustees of the Combined Pension Fund v. Chase Manhattan Bank, No. 92 Civ. 6251, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9428, at *2-5 (S.D.N.Y. July 9, 1993).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Gierlinger v. New York State Police, 738 F. Supp. 96, 98 (W.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Anderson v. Board of Trustees, 77 F.3d 364, 367 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Kelly v. L.L. Cool J., 145 F.R.D. 32, 35 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) , aff'd without opinion, 23 F.3d 398 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Bennett v. Beiersdorf, Inc., 889 F. Supp. 46, 52 (D. Conn. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Lampi Corp. v. American Power Prods., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12828 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Marx v. Gumbinner, 855 F.2d 783, 792 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Green v. First Reliance Standard Life Ins. Co., No. 96 Civ. 6859, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6607, at *10-11 (S.D.N.Y. May 12, 1997).

(n11)Footnote 11. Merrill Lynch Mortgage Corp. v. Narayan, 908 F.2d 246, 251-252 (7th Cir. 1990) .

74 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
E. Defensive Motions to Narrow or Clarify Pleadings
1. Rule 12(e) Motion for More Definite Statement

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.142

§ 3.142 Motion Must Be Made Prior to Responding

A motion for a more definite statement is always made before responding to a pleading. A party waives the right to move for a more definite statement by making a Rule 12 pre-answer motion that does not include a motion for a more definite statement. n1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
E. Defensive Motions to Narrow or Clarify Pleadings
1. Rule 12(e) Motion for More Definite Statement

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.143 through 3.149

[Reserved]

§§ 3.143[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
E. Defensive Motions to Narrow or Clarify Pleadings
2. Rule 12(f) Motion to Strike

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.150

§ 3.150 Using Motion to Strike

[1] Motion Not Favored

Before deciding to use the motion to strike, counsel should evaluate his or her strategy in the light of the courts' general disfavor of this motion. n1 Many courts view the motion as one that seeks an extreme remedy. n2

[2] Arguing Prejudice

Some courts require that a showing of prejudice to the defendant must be made before language in a pleading will be stricken. n3

[3] Motion Limited to Attacking Pleading

A motion to strike may only be used to attack material in a pleading. n4 Motions, briefs or memoranda, objections, or affidavits may not be attacked by a motion to strike. n5 However, a court has inherent authority to strike any filed paper that it determines to be abusive or otherwise improper. n6

Note
that the plaintiff may use this type of motion to attack the defendant's answer. n7

[4] Basis of Motion

A party may move to strike any of the following material from a pleading: n8

- Defense that is insufficient as a matter of law
- Impertinent or immaterial matter
- Scandalous matter
- Redundant matter

Some of the grounds listed in the rule for granting a motion to strike may overlap. But generally, courts will strike a claim as "redundant" when it essentially repeats another claim in the same complaint. n9 An allegation is "impertinent" or "immaterial" when it is neither responsive nor relevant to the issues involved in the action. n10 Material also may be struck as redundant, immaterial, or impertinent when the material seeks to raise issues that already have been fully decided by the court. n11

A party may not move to strike material from a pleading on the grounds that it is false. n12 However, such material may be subject to later challenge under Rule 11. n13

A successful motion to strike attacks allegations that are so unrelated to the plaintiff's claims that they are devoid of merit, and are prejudicial to the movant. n14

[5] Joining Rule 12 Defenses in Single Motion

A party who raises a Rule 12 defense in a pre-answer motion must join with it any other Rule 12 motion that is available to the party at the time the motion is made. n15

Accordingly, a motion to strike is often combined with a Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss. A defendant who moves for dismissal under Rule 12(b) and does not join with it a motion to strike waives the right to move to strike. n16

[6] Enforcing Order for More Definite Statement

A motion to strike may be used to request that the court enforce an order for more definite statement. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See NOW, Inc. v. Scheidler, 897 F. Supp. 1047, 1087 n.28 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Stanbury Law Firm v. IRS, 221 F.3d 1059, 1063 (8th Cir. 2000) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., In re NASDAQ Market-Makers Antitrust Litig., 164 F.R.D. 346, 350 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) ; Giuliano v. Everything Yogurt, Inc., 819 F. Supp. 240, 246 (E.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Hrubec v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 829 F. Supp. 1502, 1506 (N.D. Ill. 1993) ; Anna Ready Mix, Inc. v. N.E. Pierson Constr. Co., 747 F. Supp. 1299, 1303 (S.D. Ill. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. In re NASDAQ Market-Makers Antitrust Litig., 164 F.R.D. 346, 349 (S.D.N.Y. 1996); see also In re Smith, 656 F.2d 1101, 1104 n.8 (5th Cir. 1981) (approving third party's motion to strike his name from a criminal information and seal the record as an "innovative hybrid" of Fed. R. Crim. P. 7(d) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f)).

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., EEOC v. First Nat'l Bank, 614 F.2d 1004, 1008 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n9)Footnote 9. Munie v. Stag Brewery, 131 F.R.D. 559, 560 (N.D. Ill. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Morse v. Weingarten, 777 F. Supp. 312, 319 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Cambridge Toxicology Group., Inc. v. Exnicios, 495 F.3d 169, 178 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fleischer v. A.A.P., Inc., 180 F. Supp. 717, 721 (S.D.N.Y. 1959) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Kounitz v. Slaaten, 901 F. Supp. 650, 658 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 14. NOW, Inc. v. Scheidler 897 F. Supp. 1047, 1087 n.28 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g); Williams v. Jader Fuel Co., 944 F.2d 1388, 1399 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

77 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
E. Defensive Motions to Narrow or Clarify Pleadings
2. Rule 12(f) Motion to Strike

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.151

§ 3.151 Understanding Time Limits for Motion to Strike

A motion to strike must be made within the following time limits: n1

- Before responding to the offending pleading
- Within 21 days after the pleading is served, if a responsive pleading is not permitted

A court may consider a motion to strike that would otherwise be waived if doing so seems proper. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g. Wilson v. City of Chicago, 900 F. Supp. 1015, 1023 n.1 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

78 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
E. Defensive Motions to Narrow or Clarify Pleadings
2. Rule 12(f) Motion to Strike

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.152 through 3.159

[Reserved]

§§ 3.152[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
F. Moving for Judgment on the Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.160

§ 3.160 Moving for Judgment After Pleadings Close

[1] Nature of Motion

At any time after the pleadings close and before the trial commences, a party may move for a judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c). When no counterclaim or cross-claim is made, the pleadings are closed after the complaint and answer are filed. Accordingly, the motion for judgment on the pleadings may not be filed prior to the defendant's answer. n1 A court may grant judgment on the pleadings if the material facts are undisputed, and a judgment on the merits can be reached by considering only the contents of the pleadings and matters of which the court may take judicial notice. n2 In deciding the motion, the court may consider any of the pleadings, including the complaint, the answer, and any written instruments attached to them. n3

If the parties present materials outside the pleadings, the court may only consider such materials if it first converts the motion to a motion for summary judgment. n4

[2] Defenses and Objections Raised by Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

A Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings may be used to raise any of the following defenses and objections: n5

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction
- Failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted
- Failure to join an indispensable party
- Failure to state a legal defense to a claim

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral

OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Doe v. United States, 419 F.3d 1058, 1061-1062 (9th Cir. 2005).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Hebert Abstract Co. v. Touchstone Properties, Ltd., 914 F.2d 74, 76 (5th Cir. 1990).

(n3)Footnote 3. Commercial Money Ctr., Inc. v. Illinois Union Ins. Co., 508 F.3d 327, 335 (6th Cir. 2007) (documents attached to pleadings became part of pleadings and could be considered on motion for judgment on pleadings without converting motion to one for summary judgment).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Rubin v. Schottenstein, Zox & Dunn, 110 F.3d 1247, 1253 (6th Cir. 1997) ; Latecoere Int'l, Inc. v. United States Dep't of the Navy, 19 F.3d 1342, 1356 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
F. Moving for Judgment on the Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.161

§ 3.161 Timing of Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings

Either party may move for judgment on the pleadings after the pleadings close. Unless the court orders a reply to an answer or third-party answer, the pleadings close after the last of the following pleadings in the case has been filed: answer, answer to a counterclaim, answer to a cross-claim, and third-party answer. n1

A motion for judgment on the pleadings cannot be made at a time that will delay the trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
F. Moving for Judgment on the Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.162

§ 3.162 Standards Applicable to Determining Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings

[1] Court Applies Standards Applicable to 12(b)(6) Motion

The same standards apply to dismissing a complaint under Rule 12(c) and Rule 12(b)(6). n1 In deciding a Rule 12(c) motion, the court will accept the allegations contained in the complaint as true, and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the non-movant. n2

Because the same standards apply to Rule 12(b)(6) motions and Rule 12(c) motions, most of the voluminous authority on Rule 12(b)(6) applies to Rule 12(c). In fact, the cases often discuss both motions.

[2] Court Assumes Truth of Facts Pleaded by Party Opposing Motion

In considering a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the court must accept all allegations in the complaint as true, and draw all inferences in favor of the plaintiff. n3

Accordingly, dismissal on a 12(c) motion is proper only if it "appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of [the] claim which would entitle [the plaintiff] to relief." n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. GATX Leasing Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 64 F.3d 1112, 1114 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Sheppard v. Beerman, 18 F.3d 147, 150 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Park Univ. Enters., Inc. v. American Cas. Co., 442 F.3d 1239, 1244 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 4. GATX Leasing Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 64 F.3d 1112, 1114 (7th Cir. 1995) ;

Sheppard v. Beerman, 18 F.3d 147, 150 (2d. Cir. 1994).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
F. Moving for Judgment on the Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.163

§ 3.163 Conversion to Motion for Summary Judgment

[1] Court Considers Matters Outside Pleadings

A court must treat a motion for judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c) as a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment if the parties present matters outside the pleadings, and those matters are not excluded by the court. n1

[2] Court Must Provide Reasonable Opportunity to Present Relevant Materials

If the court decides to treat a motion for judgment on the pleadings as a motion for summary judgment, it must give all of the parties a "reasonable opportunity to present all the material that is pertinent to the motion." n2

The court may consider the following factors, among others, in determining whether the non-moving party had a reasonable opportunity to present relevant extrinsic evidence:

- Whether the contents of the motion put the non-moving party on notice. For example, when the defendant sought judgment on the pleadings based on both jurisdictional grounds and on the merits, but submitted an affidavit supporting only the jurisdictional grounds, the plaintiff was not put on notice that the motion would be converted to a motion for summary judgment on the underlying merits of the claim. n3

- Whether the caption of the motion put the non-moving party on notice. For example, a motion that is titled "motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, for summary judgment" may put the non-movant on notice that the motion may be converted. n4

[3] Propriety of Conversion Depends on Facts of Specific Case

In determining whether a trial court properly converted a motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment, the reviewing court must consider the facts and circumstances of the individual case. n5

Conversion is disfavored when: n6

- The motion comes quickly after the complaint

- Discovery is in its infancy, so that the non-movant is limited in obtaining and submitting evidence to counter the motion

- The non-movant does not have reasonable notice that a conversion might occur.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); Rubin v. Schottenstein, Zox & Dunn, 110 F.3d 1247, 1253 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c); Krijn v. Pogue Simone Real Estate Co., 896 F.2d 687, 689 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Krijn v. Pogue Simone Real Estate Co., 896 F.2d 687, 689-690 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. National Ass'n of Pharmaceutical Mfrs. v. Ayerst Labs., 850 F.2d 904, 911 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Krijn v. Pogue Simone Real Estate Co., 896 F.2d 687, 689-690 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Rubert-Torres ex rel. Cintron-Rubert v. Hospital San Pablo, Inc., 205 F.3d 472, 475-476 (1st Cir. 2000) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
F. Moving for Judgment on the Pleadings

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 3.164 through 3.199

[Reserved]

§§ 3.164[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
G. Forms

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.200

§ 3.200 Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 12(b)(1) dismissing this action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction on the ground that [state basis of motion, e.g., the required diversity of citizenship of the parties is not present under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other incidental relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules;]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1) to dismiss an action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. For discussion of the burden of proof on a challenge to subject matter jurisdiction, see § 3.50[3].

Jurisdiction may be attacked either facially or factually. In a facial attack, all of the plaintiff's factual allegations are taken as true, but the defendant argues those allegations do not establish the presence of jurisdiction. In a factual attack, the defendant introduces extrinsic evidence to contradict the jurisdictional facts alleged by the plaintiff.

[3] Time for Raising Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Lack of subject matter jurisdiction is a fundamental defect that is not waivable, and therefore may be raised at any time by any party, even after the entry of judgment. If subject matter jurisdiction is lacking, the court must dismiss the action.

No local rule may operate as a bar to an objection to subject matter jurisdiction.

[4] Consolidation of Rule 12 Motions Required

If the defendant has any other available defenses or motions under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12, they should be consolidated and presented in a single motion under Rule 12. If one Rule 12 motion is made, failure to include any of the following defenses or motions waives them: n1

- Lack of personal jurisdiction
- Improper venue
- Insufficiency of process
- Insufficiency of service of process
- Motion to strike under Rule 12(f)
- Motion for more definite statement under Rule 12(e)

However, other Rule 12 defenses available to a defendant are not forever waived if not included in an initial motion under the rule. These include: n2

- Lack of subject matter jurisdiction
- Failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted
- Failure to join an indispensable party

[5] Challenging Diversity Jurisdiction

Diversity jurisdiction exists only when there is complete diversity of citizenship and the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000. The party asserting the existence of diversity jurisdiction has the burden of proving both of these elements necessary to jurisdiction. As to the element of amount in controversy, the plaintiff's good faith allegation of a greater amount is sufficient, unless it appears to a legal certainty that the plaintiff cannot recover that amount. As to the citizenship element, if the plaintiff's allegations are insufficient, the plaintiff usually will be given leave to amend the complaint. However, if diversity is demonstrably lacking, the court may, if permittedunder Fed. R. Civ. P. 19 and Fed. R. Civ. P. 21, dismiss the nondiverse defendant to preserve jurisdiction.

[6] Challenging Federal Question Jurisdiction

A complaint that purports to rely on federal question jurisdiction may be dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction only if the federal claims are obviously without merit or wholly frivolous. Failure to state a federal claim is grounds for dismissal under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), but does not justify a dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g), (h)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2), (3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
G. Forms

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.201

§ 3.201 Alternative Paragraph: Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

Alternative Paragraph: Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 12(b)(2), dismissing this action for lack of personal jurisdiction over [party designation and name of moving party] on the ground that [state basis of motion, e.g., an exercise of personal jurisdiction by this court over this defendant would violate due process]; and

[2] Use of Form

This form is an alternative paragraph for the form in § 3.200, for moving under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2) to dismiss an action for lack of personal jurisdiction. Related, but distinct, is a motion to dismiss for insufficiency of service of process [Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(5)]. A challenge to personal jurisdiction disputes the power of the court to exercise jurisdiction over the defendant, while a challenge to sufficiency of process disputes the method by which that power was invoked.

[3] Time for Raising Lack of Personal Jurisdiction; Waiver

The defense of personal jurisdiction is unique in that it is fundamental, yet nevertheless it is waivable. It is fundamental in the sense that a federal court cannot render a valid in personam judgment without obtaining personal jurisdiction over the defendant. However, it is waivable in the sense that the defense is personal and must be raised by the defendant at the first available opportunity. Thus, if the defendant appears to defend the action, the defense must be interposed either in the first motion made under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 or in the initial answer.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
G. Forms

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.202

§ 3.202 Alternative Paragraph: Improper Venue

[1] FORM

Alternative Paragraph: Improper Venue

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 12(b)(3), and 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a), dismissing this action on the ground that venue is improper as to [party designation and name of moving party] under [state applicable venue statute, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a)]; and

[2] Use of Form

This form is an alternative paragraph for the form in § 3.200, for use by a party in moving under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(3) to dismiss an action for improper venue under 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a).

[3] Venue Provisions; Burden of Proof

Most actions in federal court are subject to the general venue statute [28 U.S.C. § 1391]. However, some federal claims have specific venue provisions that generally expand the venue options. Although the cases are not uniform, the better view is that when venue is challenged by a defendant, the plaintiff bears the burden of defending its venue choice.

[4] Transfer as Alternative to Dismissal for Improper Venue

While the improper venue statute authorizes an outright dismissal, it also provides for a transfer of the action to a proper venue "if it be in the interest of justice." n1 In general, the less drastic remedy of transfer will be ordered in lieu of dismissal, unless, of course, the plaintiff disclaims any desire to a transfer. For a form of notice of motion for seeking transfer rather than dismissal, see § 3.203. A related but distinct motion is a motion to transfer venue for the convenience of the witnesses and parties under 28 U.S.C. § 1404.

[5] Time for Raising Improper Venue

The defense of improper venue is personal and must be raised by the defendant at the first available opportunity. Thus, the defense must be interposed either in the first motion made under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 or in the initial answer.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
G. Forms

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.203

§ 3.203 Alternative Paragraph: Transfer for Improper Venue

[1] FORM

Alternative Paragraph: Transfer for Improper Venue

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 12(b)(3), and 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a), transferring this action to the [name of district, if any e.g., Middle] District of [state in which district located] on the ground that venue is improper in this district as to [party designation and name of moving party] under [state applicable venue statute, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a)]; and

[2] Use of Form

This form is an alternative paragraph for the form in § 3.200 to transfer the action, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(3), to another district on the ground of improper venue. n1

[3] Venue Provisions; Burden of Proof

Most actions in federal court are subject to the general venue statute [28 U.S.C. § 1391]; however, some federal claims have specific venue provisions that generally expand the venue options. Although the cases are not uniform, the better view is that when venue is challenged by a defendant, the plaintiff bears the burden of defending its venue choice. A related but distinct motion is a motion to transfer venue for the convenience of the witnesses and parties under 28 U.S.C. § 1404.

[4] Dismissal as Alternative to Transfer for Improper Venue

The improper venue statute authorizes either dismissal or transfer of the action to a proper venue "if it be in the interest of justice." n2

[5] Time for Raising Improper Venue

The defense of improper venue is personal and must be raised by the defendant at the first available opportunity. Thus, the defense must be interposed either in the first motion made under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 or in the initial answer.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
G. Forms

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.204

§ 3.204 Alternative Paragraph: Failure to State Claim

[1] FORM

Alternative Paragraph: Failure to State Claim

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 12(b)(6), dismissing this action on the ground that the Complaint of [party designation and name of party against whom relief is sought] fails to state a claim on which relief can be granted in that [state basis of motion, e.g., the Plaintiff's Complaint establishes that the statute of limitations has run on all claims]; and

[2] Use of Form

This form is an alternative paragraph for the form in § 3.200, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), to dismiss the action for failure of the plaintiff to state a claim on which relief can be granted.

[3] Burden of Proof

The movant bears the burden of demonstrating the failure of the plaintiff's complaint to state a claim on which relief can be granted. The movant must show that the plaintiff cannot prove any set of facts in support of the claim that would justify the granting of any relief. All of the factual allegations of the plaintiff's complaint are taken as true, and the plaintiff is given the benefit of any reasonable inferences from those facts.

[4] Granting Leave to Amend Before Dismissal

Even if the movant demonstrates that the complaint fails to state a claim, dismissal of the action generally will not be ordered until the plaintiff has been given at least one opportunity to correct the deficiencies of the complaint through amendment.

[5] Time for Raising Failure to State Claim

The defense of failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted may be raised at any time prior to the entry of judgment.

Local rules cannot supersede the federal rule permitting the defense to be raised at the trial on the merits. n1

[6] Special Pleading Standards Applicable to Fraud and Other Actions

Although generally only a short and plain statement of the claim for relief is required, a claim of fraud and certain other claims are subject to a heightened pleading standard. n2 The failure of a complaint to comply with these pleading standards makes it subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim.

[7] Submission of Extrinsic Evidence; Conversion to Summary Judgment Motion

In general, it is improper to submit evidentiary materials in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, because that motion tests only the sufficiency of the pleadings. However, if such material is submitted, the district court may disregard it and decide the motion based only on the pleadings, or it may consider the extrinsic evidence and convert the motion into one for summary judgment. Such conversion requires notice to all parties and an opportunity to submit any further evidentiary materials.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Rule 12 Motions
G. Forms

1-3 Federal Litigation Guide § 3.205

§ 3.205 Notice of Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

TO [party designation and name of party against whom relief is sought] AND ITS ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 12(c), granting judgment on the pleadings in favor of [party designation and name of moving party] on the ground that [state basis of motion, e.g., the pleadings establish that the statute of limitations has run on all of Plaintiff's claims]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other incidental relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law [if required] dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion for judgment on the pleadings under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

[3] Grounds for Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

A motion for judgment on the pleadings may raise any defense not previously waived under the provisions of Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h), including lack of subject matter jurisdiction, failure to state a claim, and the failure to join an indispensable party. The motion also may be made in support of an affirmative defense that appears from the face of the pleadings, such as the statute of limitations or res judicata. Usually a motion for judgment on the pleadings alleges the failure of the complaint to state a claim on which relief can be granted. For this reason, the standards applicable to the motion are the same as those under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

[4] Time for Moving for Judgment on Pleadings

A motion for judgment on the pleadings may be made at any time after the pleadings are closed, subject only to the requirement that the motion not delay the trial. n1 The pleadings close when the last of the mandatory pleadings is served and filed, or when the last of any court-ordered replies is served and filed. n2

[5] Submission of Extrinsic Evidence; Conversion to Summary Judgment Motion

In general, it is improper to submit evidentiary materials in support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, because that motion, as indicated by its name, tests only the sufficiency of the pleadings. If such material is submitted, however, the district court may disregard it and decide the motion based only on the pleadings, or it may consider the extrinsic evidence and convert the motion into one for summary judgment.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide 4.syn

§ 4.syn Synopsis to Chapter 4: Motions as to the Parties

§ 4.01 Understanding Types of Rule 19 Motions

§ 4.02 Defining Necessary Party

§ 4.03 Determining Whether Joinder of Necessary Party is Feasible

§ 4.04 Determining Whether Absent Party is Indispensable

§ 4.05 Naming Joined Party as Plaintiff or Defendant

§ 4.06 Newly Joined Party May Challenge Venue

§ 4.07 Timing of Rule 19 Motion

§§ 4.08 through 4.19 [Reserved]

§ 4.20 Understanding Rule 21

§ 4.21 Defining Misjoinder

§ 4.22 Moving to Add Party Under Rule 21
[1] Determining Grounds for Adding Party
[2] Time for Adding Party Under Rule 21
[3] Notice and Service of Motion
[4] Motion to Add Party Granted in Discretion of Court
[5] Opposing Rule 21 Motion to Add Party

§ 4.23 Moving to Drop Party Under Rule 21
[1] Determining Grounds for Dropping Party
[2] Time for Dropping Party Under Rule 21
[3] Motion to Drop Party Granted in Discretion of Court
[4] Court May Dismiss Party But Not Action
[5] Dismissal is Without Prejudice
[6] Opposing Motion to Drop Party

§ 4.24 Moving to Sever Claim Under Rule 21
[1] Understanding Severance
[2] Motion to Sever Granted in Discretion of Court
[3] Opposing Motion to Sever

§§ 4.25 through 4.29 [Reserved]

§ 4.30 Intervention Allows Nonparty to Gain Party Status

§ 4.31 Intervention as of Right
[1] Grounds for Intervention as of Right
[2] Moving to Intervene When Unconditional Right Conferred by Federal Statute
[3] United States May Intervene as of Right When Constitutionality of Federal Statute Affecting Public Interest Is Challenged
[4] Statutes Granting United States Right to Intervene
[5] State Governments May Intervene When Constitutionality of State Statute at Issue
[6] Statutes Granting Private Individuals Right to Intervene
[7] Intervention When No Statutory Basis Exists
[7.--1] Four Factors Must Be Established
[7.--2] Applicant Must Have Sufficient Interest in Property or Transaction at Issue
[7.--3] Disposition of Action Must Impair or Impede Applicant's Interest
[7.--4] Interest Must Be Inadequately Represented by Existing Parties
[8] Standing

§ 4.32 Permissive Intervention
[1] Grounds for Permissive Intervention
[2] Factors Considered on Motion for Permissive Intervention
[3] Moving Under Federal Statute Conferring Conditional Right to Intervene
[4] Permissive Intervention When Common Questions of Law or Fact Exist

§ 4.33 Intervention for Purposes of Appeal

§ 4.34 Considering Timeliness of Intervention Motion

§ 4.35 Analyzing Intervention in Context of Diversity Jurisdiction

§ 4.36 Tactical Considerations for Intervention
[1] Defensive Intervention
[2] Offensive Intervention

§ 4.37 Drafting Motion to Intervene
[1] Pleading Must Accompany Motion Seeking Intervention
[2] Drafting Intervention Pleading

§ 4.38 Serving and Filing Motion to Intervene and Pleading

§ 4.39 Evaluating Jurisdiction and Venue Issues
[1] District Court With Original Jurisdiction May Exercise Supplemental Jurisdiction Over Related Claims
[2] Intervenor Must Independently Meet Jurisdictional Requirements in Diversity Actions
[3] Intervenor May Not Object to Venue

§ 4.40 Opposing Motion Seeking Intervention

[1] Consider Timeliness Objection
[2] Consider Objecting on Ground That Intervention Will Unduly Complicate Litigation
[3] Consider Objecting on Ground That Proposed Intervenor Lacks Sufficient Connection to Action
[4] Consider Objecting on Ground That Representation Is Already Adequate
[5] Consider Fall Back Argument That Limited Intervention Will Sufficiently Protect Applicant's Rights

§ 4.41 Considering Alternatives to Intervention
[1] Assisting Existing Parties
[2] Requesting Leave to File Amicus Curiae Brief
[3] Joining or Adding Party
[4] Filing Separate Action

§ 4.42 Appealing Intervention Order

§ 4.43 CHECKLISTS: Motion to Intervene
[1] CHECKLIST: Drafting Motion for Intervention as of Right
[2] CHECKLIST: Drafting Motion for Permissive Intervention

§§ 4.44 through 4.49 [Reserved]

§ 4.50 Understanding Rule 25

§ 4.51 Moving for Substitution of Deceased Party Under Rule 25(a)
[1] Governing Law
[2] Motion Seeking Substitution May Be Made Without Filing Suggestion of Death
[3] Deadline for Filing Motion Seeking Substitution of Deceased Party
[4] Serving and Filing Suggestion of Death
[5] Substitution of Deceased Party Is Discretionary
[6] Understanding Effect of Death and Survival of Action
[7] Opposing Motion Seeking Substitution of Deceased Party

§ 4.52 Moving for Substitution of Incompetent Party Under Rule 25(b)

§ 4.53 Moving for Substitution on Transfer of Interest Under Rule 25(c)
[1] Defining Transfer of Interest
[2] Transfer of Interest Must Occur After Commencement of Action
[3] Deadline for Filing Motion Based on Transfer of Interest
[4] Serving Substitution Motion Based on Transfer of Interest
[5] Discretion of Court on Motion
[6] Considering Effect of Substitution Under Rule 25(c)

§ 4.54 Understanding Automatic Substitution of Public Officer Under Rule 25(d)
[1] Public Officer's Successor is Automatically Substituted
[2] Defining Official Capacity
[3] Deadline for Seeking Substitution of Public Officer

§ 4.55 CHECKLIST: Substituting Party

§§ 4.56 through 4.99 [Reserved]

§ 4.100 Notice of Motion for Severance of Party
[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Severance of Party
[2] Use of Form
[3] Grounds for Ordering Severance
[4] Deadline for Seeking Severance
[5] Propriety of Joinder of Defendants; Misjoinder
[6] Propriety of Joinder of Plaintiffs; Misjoinder

§ 4.101 Notice of Motion for Intervention
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Intervention
[2] Use of Form
[3] Deadline for Seeking Intervention
[4] Grounds for Intervention as of Right
[5] Grounds for Permissive Intervention
[6] Jurisdictional Considerations as to Intervenors
[7] Pleading Must Accompany Motion

§ 4.102 Caption: Intervention
[1] FORM
Caption: Intervention
[2] Use of Form
[3] Captions

§ 4.103 Notice of Motion Seeking Substitution Because of Death of Party
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion Seeking Substitution Because of Death of Party
[2] Use of Form
[3] Deadline for Seeking Substitution
[4] Action Must Survive Death of Party

§ 4.104 Suggestion of Death of Party on the Record
[1] FORM
Suggestion of Death of Party on the Record
[2] Use of Form
[3] Deadline for Filing Suggestion of Death
[4] Who May File Suggestion of Death
[5] Service of Suggestion of Death

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses who may or should be parties to a lawsuit. The plaintiff, in drafting the complaint, has the first chance to select the participants. The parties the plaintiff chooses to include, and even those the plaintiff chooses to exclude, may have the opportunity to challenge the plaintiff's choice by appropriate motions. The plaintiff may also move to add or drop parties after the suit has been filed.

The facts of any given controversy will determine who should be made a party to a lawsuit. Careful thought should be given to the determination of all potential parties who may be involved in the action. Rules 19 through 25 provide the appropriate framework for such consideration.

Issues related to parties arise in many and varied contexts. This chapter divides party-related motion practice into four overall categories:

- Motions related to "non-joinder" of necessary party under Rules 19 and 21. These motions are generally made by a defendant who contends that an essential party has not been joined in the suit. These motions seek to join the missing party or to dismiss the action because it would be improper to proceed in the absence of the missing party.

- Motions related to "misjoinder" of a party under Rule 21. Misjoinder motions are based on the contention that the action contains a party who should not be involved. These motions are brought either to drop the "misjoined" party, or to sever the claims against that party from the rest of the action.

- Intervention motions under Rule 24. Intervention provides a vehicle for an absentee party to join the action on a motion of their own.

- Substitution motions under Rule 25. These motions may be brought when one of the original parties dies, becomes incompetent, transfers an interest relevant to the litigation, or if the party is a public official, dies or leaves office.

The chapter suggests tactics and techniques for making and opposing each type of motion. The chapter also provides procedural checklists for use in moving to add or drop parties, intervene, or substitute, as well as checklists for opposing such motions. The chapter also provides the following sample forms:

- Notice of motion for severance of party
- Notice of motion for intervention
- Notice of motion seeking substitution because of death of party
- Suggestion of death of party on the record

For expanded coverage of the topics covered in this chapter, see the following chapters of MOORE'S Federal Practice, (Matthew Bender 3d ed.):

- Ch. 19, Joinder of Persons Needed for Just Adjudication
- Ch. 21, Misjoinder and Non-Joinder of Parties
- Ch. 24, Intervention
- Ch. 25, Substitution of Parties

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.01

§ 4.01 Understanding Types of Rule 19 Motions

Rule 19 motions challenge the complainant's selection of parties, and thus are always made by a defendant. Generally, two types of Rule 19 motions are available:

- Motion to add a necessary party who can be joined n1
- Motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b) because an indispensable party cannot be joined n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 4.03.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 4.04.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.02

§ 4.02 Defining Necessary Party

Motions under Rule 19 seek to join an unnamed party or to dismiss the action entirely because it would be improper to proceed in the absence of the missing, "necessary party." "Necessary parties" are any of the following: n1

- Absentees needed to grant complete relief to existing parties to the action
- Absentees needed to assure that the court's judgment as a practical matter does not impair or impede that absentee's ability to protect its interest in later litigation
- Absentees who have an interest in the litigation such that their nonjoinder would leave an existing party exposed to substantial risk of multiple liability or inconsistent obligations

If the particular absentee does not fall into one of the three enumerated categories, the issue of whether that absentee may be joined will need to be resolved by reference to either Rule 20 (permissive joinder), n2 or Rule 24 (intervention). n3

Absentees are not necessary parties when their interests were identical to those of existing parties who are capable of adequately representing the interests of the absentees. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 4.22.

(n3)Footnote 3. See §§ 4.30-4.43.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Ohio Valley Envtl. Coalition v. Bulen, 429 F.3d 493, 504-505 (4th Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.03

§ 4.03 Determining Whether Joinder of Necessary Party is Feasible

Once the court determines that a person or entity is a necessary party, n1 it mustdetermine whether joinder of that person or entity is feasible. n1.1

Joinder will not be feasible if it destroys subject matter jurisdiction. n2 This concern refers to the possibility that joining the absentee will destroy diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. The assessment requires the court to align the absentee on the side of the dispute most closely reflecting its interest.

If joinder of the necessary party is not feasible because subject matter jurisdiction will be destroyed, the court must determine under Rule 19(b) whether in equity and good conscience the action should proceed without the necessary party, or whether the action should be dismissed. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 4.02.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See EEOC v. Peabody W. Coal Co., 400 F.3d 774, 778-784 (9th Cir. 2005) ; see also Glancy v. Taubman Ctrs., Inc., 373 F.3d 656, 666 (6th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a); see also Gabriel v. Preble, 396 F.3d 10, 13-16 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 4.04.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.04

§ 4.04 Determining Whether Absent Party is Indispensable

If joinder of the necessary party is not feasible because subject matter jurisdiction will be destroyed, n1 the court must determine under Rule 19(b) whether in equity and good conscience the action should proceed without the necessary party, or whether the action should be dismissed. If the court decides that the missing person is indispensable, the action should be dismissed. n2

In determining whether a party is indispensable, Rule 19(b) directs the court to consider the following factors: n3

- To what extent a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to the person or to those already parties
- The extent to which, by protective provisions in the judgment, by shaping of relief, or by other measures, the prejudice can be lessened or avoided
- Whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate
- Whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder

Courts generally will dismiss the action only when serious harm may result from nonjoinder of the necessary party, and the plaintiff's interest can be protected by proceeding in another forum. n4

Rule 19 attempts to balance the following key interests: n5

- The plaintiff's interest in having a forum
- The defendant's interest in avoiding multiple litigation, or inconsistent relief, or sole responsibility for a liability shared with another
- The interest of the outsider whom it would have been desirable to join
- The interest of the courts and the public in complete, consistent, and efficient settlement of controversies

As a general rule, all parties to a contract will be necessary in an action to set aside the contract. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 4.03.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b); Extra Equipamentose Exportacao Ltda. v. Case Corp., 361 F.3d 359, 362-364 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b); see also Baker Group, L.C. v. Burlington N. & Santa Fe Ry. Co., 451 F.3d 484, 490-491 (8th Cir. 2006) ; Carnero v. Boston Scientific Corp., 433 F.3d 1, 18-19 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Kelly v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 709 F.2d 973, 977 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Provident Tradesmen Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 109-111, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Wilbur v. Locke, 423 F.3d 1101, 1111-1116 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.05

§ 4.05 Naming Joined Party as Plaintiff or Defendant

Initially, the party seeking joinder denominates the absent person as a plaintiff or a defendant. However, that alignment is not binding on the court, and is frequently contested. The court will align the absent person according to the party's interests in the litigation. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. City of Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Title & Trust Co., 197 U.S. 178, 180, 25 S. Ct. 420, 421, 49 L. Ed. 713 (1905) ; see also Gabriel v. Preble, 396 F.3d 10, 13-16 (1st Cir. 2005) (derivative action suit where court realigned the corporation as a defendant).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.06

§ 4.06 Newly Joined Party May Challenge Venue

If the previously absent party is joined, Rule 19 provides that the new party may assert that venue is improper. n1 This is particularly likely to happen in a diversity action where venue is based in the district where "all defendants reside," n2 and the joined party is not a resident of that district.

If the newly joined party objects to venue, and joinder renders the venue of the action improper, the party must be dismissed from the action. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(3).

98 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.07

§ 4.07 Timing of Rule 19 Motion

A motion to add a party is typically made pursuant to Rule 12(b)(7) if it precedes the service of an answer. Otherwise, the motion is typically made pursuant to Rule 21, which allows for joinder motions at any stage of the proceedings. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(7); Fed. R. Civ. P. 21; see §§ 4.20-4.24 (using Rule 21 motion to cure non-joinder or misjoinder).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
A. Understanding Compulsory Joinder Under Rule 19

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 4.08 through 4.19

[Reserved]

§§ 4.08 [Reserved]

100 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
B. Using Rule 21 Motion to Cure Non-Joinder or Misjoinder

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.20

§ 4.20 Understanding Rule 21

Rule 21 provides as follows: n1

- Misjoinder of parties is not ground for dismissal of an action [see § 4.21]

- Parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or of its own initiative at any stage of the action, and on such terms as are just [see § 4.22[4]]

- Any claim against a party may be severed and proceeded with separately [see § 4.24]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

101 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
B. Using Rule 21 Motion to Cure Non-Joinder or Misjoinder

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.21

§ 4.21 Defining Misjoinder

Misjoinder of parties is not ground for dismissal of an action. n1 The Federal Rules do not define misjoinder. Several district courts have held that parties are misjoined if the claims asserted against them do not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence, or do not present some common question of law and fact; for example:

- Corporation and its officers were improperly joined in civil rights action against subsidiary n2
- Claims alleging systematic gender discrimination by individuals in employer's management group were not misjoined n3
- Parties were not misjoined when fraud/conversion claims arose from the same transaction and presented common issues n4

Misjoinder can also result from the plaintiff's naming the wrong party or violating a statutory ban on joinder. n5

Rule 21 also applies outside the context of the joinder rules, for example to cure lack of diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n2)Footnote 2. Glendora v. Malone, 917 F. Supp. 224, 227 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Henderson v. AT&T Corp., 918 F. Supp. 1059, 1061 (S.D. Tex. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Winner's Circle of Las Vegas, Inc. v. AMI Franchising, Inc., 916 F. Supp. 1024, 1029 (D. Nev.

1996) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1346.

(n6)Footnote 6. Newman-Green, Inc v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 828, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 (1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
B. Using Rule 21 Motion to Cure Non-Joinder or Misjoinder

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.22

§ 4.22 Moving to Add Party Under Rule 21

[1] Determining Grounds for Adding Party

The most common grounds for adding a party are the necessary party requirements found in the compulsory joinder rule. n1

Absentees who would merely be proper parties in the action are not subject to compulsory joinder. The plaintiff may name proper parties, or a defendant may seek to join proper parties, but their presence is not required. n2

[2] Time for Adding Party Under Rule 21

A motion to add a party may be made at any stage of the action. n3

[3] Notice and Service of Motion

A proposed new party need not be given notice of the motion to add that party. n4

[4] Motion to Add Party Granted in Discretion of Court

Rule 21 requires that orders adding parties are to be made "on such terms as are just." n5 The Rule vests great discretion in the court in determining whether to add or drop parties. n6

In exercising its discretion under Rule 21, the court must consider principles of fundamental fairness and judicial efficiency. n7

[5] Opposing Rule 21 Motion to Add Party

Opposition to a motion seeking to add a party may be based on:

- Prejudice to the other parties n8
- The moving party's delay in seeking to add the party; late joinder is disfavored because it can create discovery problems n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19; see §§ 4.01-4.07.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21; see also Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc. v. Allegheny Energy, Inc., 500 F.3d 171, 180 (2d Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 (neither Rule requires that notice be given to absent party).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n6)Footnote 6. Applewhite v. Reichhold Chems., Inc., 67 F.3d 571, 574 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Bhatla v. U.S. Capital Corp., 990 F.2d 780, 786 (3d Cir. 1993) ; Aiello v. Kingston, 947 F.2d 834, 835 (7th Cir. 1991) ; New York v. Hendrickson Bros., Inc., 840 F.2d 1065, 1082 (2d Cir. 1988) ; Michaels Bldg. Co. v. Ameritrust Co., 848 F.2d 674, 682 (6th Cir. 1988) (citing Moore's).

(n7)Footnote 7. Intercon Research Assocs., Ltd. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 696 F.2d 53, 58 (7th Cir. 1982) ; Desert Empire Bank v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 623 F.2d 1371, 1375 (9th Cir. 1980) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Newman-Green, Inc., v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 838, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 (1989) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Giorgio Morandi, Inc. v. Textport Corp., 761 F. Supp. 12, 14 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) ; see also Hensgens v. Deere & Co., 833 F.2d 1179, 1182 (5th Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
B. Using Rule 21 Motion to Cure Non-Joinder or Misjoinder

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.23

§ 4.23 Moving to Drop Party Under Rule 21

[1] Determining Grounds for Dropping Party

Parties may be dropped by order of the court on motion of any party or on the court's own initiative at any stage of the action, and on such terms as are just. n1

Rule 21 may also be used to drop a properly joined party for the purpose of maintaining diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n2

[2] Time for Dropping Party Under Rule 21

A motion to drop a party may be made at any stage of the action. n3 A dispensable nondiverse party may be dropped even after judgment has been rendered. n4

[3] Motion to Drop Party Granted in Discretion of Court

Rule 21 requires that orders dropping parties are to be made "on such terms as are just." n5 The Rule vests great discretion in the court in determining whether to drop parties. In exercising its discretion to drop a party under Rule 21, the court must consider principles of fundamental fairness and judicial efficiency. n6 As part of this inquiry, the court should consider whether an order under Rule 21 would prejudice any party. n7

[4] Court May Dismiss Party But Not Action

Misjoinder is not grounds for dismissal of an entire action; rather, the court may rely on Rule 21 to dismiss parties that have no connection to the claims asserted. n8

[5] Dismissal is Without Prejudice

Dismissal of a misjoined party under Rule 21 is without prejudice; a claim by or against such a party may be refiled as a separate suit. n9

[6] Opposing Motion to Drop Party

Opposition to a Rule 21 motion seeking to drop a party may be based on:

- Prejudice to the other parties n10
- The fact that the party proposed to be dropped is properly joined n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n2)Footnote 2. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 832-833 (1989); see St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Universal Builders Supply, 409 F.3d 73, 80-82 (2d Cir. 2005).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n4)Footnote 4. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 832 (1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n6)Footnote 6. Intercon Research Assocs., Ltd. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 696 F.2d 53, 58 (7th Cir. 1982) ; Desert Empire Bank v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 623 F.2d 1371, 1375 (9th Cir. 1980).

(n7)Footnote 7. Newman-Green, Inc., v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 838 (1989) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n9)Footnote 9. Michaels Bldg. Co. v. Ameritrust Co., 848 F.2d 674, 682 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Newman-Green, Inc., v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 838, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19, 20.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
B. Using Rule 21 Motion to Cure Non-Joinder or Misjoinder

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.24

§ 4.24 Moving to Sever Claim Under Rule 21

[1] Understanding Severance

Rule 21 provides for severance as a cure for misjoinder of parties. A motion to sever a claim against a party may be made by any party. n1

Severance under Rule 21 results in separate actions. A single claim that is severed from a multiclaim action may be prosecuted separately. n2 In other words, the severed claim proceeds as a discrete, independent suit. It and the original case result in their own separate final judgments from which appeals may be taken. n3 If a severed claim is one of multiple claims asserted by a single plaintiff against a single defendant, both parties are involved in two separate actions. n4

By contrast, an order of separate trials does not result in the filing of separate cases. It leads to two or more separate factual inquiries in the context of a single, properly joined case. No matter how many separate trials the court may order, they remain part of a single case. n5

Because a severed claim becomes a separate case, it may be transferred based upon convenience and interest of justice. n6

[2] Motion to Sever Granted in Discretion of Court

The question of whether to enter a severance order is committed to the sound discretion of the district court. n7

The district court has broad authority to proceed with separate trials for a wide variety of reasons, including the prevention of embarrassment, delay, prejudice or expense. n8

[3] Opposing Motion to Sever

Under Rule 21, the only ground for severance is misjoinder of parties. n9 Accordingly, counsel opposing the severance motion must argue that the party has been properly joined. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Acevedo-Garcia v. Monroig, 351 F.3d 547, 558-560 (1st Cir. 2003) ; Abdullah v. Acands, Inc., 30 F.3d 264, 269 (1st Cir. 199 4).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Abdullah v. Acands, Inc., 30 F.3d 264, 269 (1st Cir. 199 4).

(n4)Footnote 4. Henderson v. AT&T Corp., 918 F. Supp. 1059, 1062 (S.D. Tex. 1996) .

(n5)Footnote 5. United States v. O'Neil, 709 F.2d 361, 368 (5th Cir. 1983).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1404(a), 1406(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Nase v. Teco Energy, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 2d 313, 322-323 (E.D. La. 2004) ; see also Applewhite v. Reichhold Chems., Inc., 67 F.3d 571, 574 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Aiello v. Kingston, 947 F.2d 834, 835 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Bank of Lincolnwood v. Federal Leasing, Inc., 622 F.2d 944, 947 (7th Cir. 1980) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
B. Using Rule 21 Motion to Cure Non-Joinder or Misjoinder

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 4.25 through 4.29

[Reserved]

§§ 4.25 [Reserved]

106 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.30

§ 4.30 Intervention Allows Nonparty to Gain Party Status

Intervention is the procedure that allows a nonparty to an action to gain party status without the consent of the existing parties. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.31

§ 4.31 Intervention as of Right

[1] Grounds for Intervention as of Right

Intervention is a matter of right when either:

- A federal statute confers an unconditional right to intervene in the action n1

- The applicant has an interest in the subject matter of the action that may, as a practical matter, be impaired or impeded without the applicant's participation, because the interest is not adequately represented by the existing parties n2

[2] Moving to Intervene When Unconditional Right Conferred by Federal Statute

Only a "statute of the United States" will support a motion for intervention as of right based on unconditional statutory authority. n3

If a state statute appears to grant an unconditional right to intervene, the applicant will nevertheless need to satisfy the alternative basis for intervention as of right--the applicant will need to claim an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action, and must be so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect that interest. n4

[3] United States May Intervene as of Right When Constitutionality of Federal Statute Affecting Public Interest Is Challenged

The United States may intervene as of right when the constitutionality of a federal statute affecting the public interest is at issue, and the United States or an agency, officer, or employee thereof is not initially made a party to the action. The court must notify the Attorney General in such a case, and permit the United States to present evidence and argue the constitutionality issue. n5

[4] Statutes Granting United States Right to Intervene

- Private Civil Rights Actions. When a private civil rights action is certified by the Attorney General to be of general public importance, the federal government may intervene. n6

- ERISA Actions. When a private action under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) is brought for a purpose other than for the recovery of benefits due under an employee benefit plan, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of the Treasury must be served with a copy of the complaint by certified mail. The Secretary of Labor may intervene as of right in such an action, and the Secretary of the Treasury may intervene unless the action is brought under the fiduciary responsibility section of the federal labor statutes. n7

- Certain Patent and Trademark Cases. When a party to an interference is dissatisfied with a decision of the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences, and commences a civil suit for relief, the Commissioner of Patents may intervene. n8 The Commissioner of Patents may also intervene when an applicant for registration of a trademark appeals a decision of the Commissioner or a decision of the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board. n9

- False Claims Act. A private person may bring an action in the name of the government under the False Claims Act, which provides a cause of action for knowingly making a false or fraudulent claim when seeking payment from the government. In such a case, the Attorney General must be provided with a copy of the complaint and written disclosure of substantially all material evidence. The Attorney General will then have 60 days from receipt of these materials within which to intervene as of right. n10 If the government seeks intervention after the 60-day period has run, the court may permit such intervention only upon a "showing of good cause." n11

- Action to Enforce Deepwater Ports Regulation. A private person may bring an action requesting equitable relief for the violation of deepwater ports regulations, if the Secretary or Attorney General are not diligently prosecuting such an action in federal court. The Secretary of Transportation or the Attorney General may intervene in such an action. n12

[5] State Governments May Intervene When Constitutionality of State Statute at Issue

When the constitutionality of a state statute is at issue, the state attorney general must be notified and given an opportunity to intervene. n13 The state will be given the opportunity to present evidence and to argue the constitutionality question. However, a state attorney general will not be permitted to intervene as of right if an agency, officer, or employee of the state is already a party to the action. n14

[6] Statutes Granting Private Individuals Right to Intervene

- Administrative Procedure Act. Interested persons may participate in federal agency proceedings, as long as their participation does not disrupt the orderly conduct of public business, and if time, the nature of the proceeding, and the public interest permit it. n15 Individual agencies may enact their own rules governing intervention. n16

- Appeal of Federal Agency Proceedings. A person adversely affected by an agency proceeding has a direct right of judicial review. n17 Communities, associations, corporations, firms, or individuals whose interests would be affected by an agency order, but who were not joined as parties to the agency proceeding, may intervene in the judicial review process. n18

- Environmental Statutes. Private persons may intervene in government suits to enforce the provisions of various environmental statutes, if the private persons would have been entitled to bring "citizen's suits" in the absence of governmental action. n19

- Civil Rights Action by EEOC or Attorney General. A person aggrieved may intervene in a civil rights action brought by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) or in an action brought by the United States Attorney General that involves a political entity. n20 Many of the procedures of the Civil Rights Act have been incorporated into the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990. Thus, a person alleging discrimination on the basis of disability may intervene in a related action brought by the EEOC or the Attorney General. n21

- Action Under Fair Housing Act. A person aggrieved by an alleged violation of the Fair Housing Act may intervene in an action brought on the aggrieved person's behalf by the Attorney General. n22 Similarly, an aggrieved party may intervene when the Attorney General brings an action to remedy discriminatory housing practices that are part of a "pattern or practice" of resistance to the full enjoyment of rights protected under the Constitution or federal laws. n23

- Corporation's Action to Recover Insider Profits. A corporate shareholder may intervene in the corporation's action to recover short-swing insider profits (obtained within a period of six months), if the corporation fails diligently to prosecute the action. While the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 does not expressly use the term "intervention," it provides: "Suit to recover such profit may be instituted at law or in equity in any court of competent jurisdiction by the issuer, or by the owner of any security of the issuer in the name and in behalf of the issuer if the issuer shall fail or refuse to bring such suit within sixty days after request or shall fail diligently to prosecute the same thereafter." n24

- Intervention by Trustee in Bankruptcy in Tax Court Action. The trustee of the debtor's estate in a Chapter 11 bankruptcy case may intervene in a proceeding before the Tax Court to which the debtor is aparty. Intervention in such a case is solely on behalf of the debtor's estate. n25

- Action Involving Surface Transportation Board. Interested communities, associations, corporations, firms, or individuals may intervene in a proceeding or judicial action brought by the Attorney General that relates to an order of the Surface Transportation Board (formerly the Interstate Commerce Commission). Such an action may be to enjoin or suspend a rule, regulation, or order, or to enforce an order that does not involve the payment of money or collection of fines. The Attorney General cannot discontinue the action over the objection of an intervenor, who may prosecute, defend, or continue the action regardless of the Attorney General's "action or nonaction." n26

- FCC License Application Hearings. Parties interested in the outcome of a Federal Communications Commission (FCC) license hearing may "acquire the status of a party to the proceeding" by filing a petition that shows the basis for their interest. The applicant and all parties in interest are entitled to participate in the hearing. n27

[7] Intervention When No Statutory Basis Exists

[7.--1] Four Factors Must Be Established

In the absence of a statutory basis, intervention as of right may be obtained if the applicant can establish each of the following: n28

- Motion has been timely filed [see § 4.34]

- Applicant has an interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action [see [7.--2]]

- Disposition of the action will impair or impede the applicant's interest if intervention is not permitted [see [7.--3]]

- Interest is not adequately represented by the existing parties [see [7.--4]]

[7.--2] Applicant Must Have Sufficient Interest in Property or Transaction at Issue

The applicant for intervention as of right must establish a sufficient "legally protectable" interest in the property or transaction that is the subject of the action. n29 Non-property interests generally do not satisfy the "sufficient interest" requirement. n30 However, a party has a sufficient interest for intervention if it will potentially suffer a practical impairment of its interests. n31

[7.--3] Disposition of Action Must Impair or Impede Applicant's Interest

The applicant for intervention as of right must show that the ability to protect his or her interest will be injured as a practical matter if the motion is not granted. This is a flexible standard. Clearly, if the applicant would be prevented from bringing a separate action by the doctrine of res judicata or collateral estoppel, his or her ability to protect the interest would be totally impeded. n32

[7.--4] Interest Must Be Inadequately Represented by Existing Parties

The burden of establishing the inadequacy of representation of the applicant's interest by existing parties is minimal. All that must be shown is that the representation "may" be inadequate. n33

Intervention as of right will be denied when the existing parties have precisely the same objectives as the absent party, and likewise possesses the same motivation and ability to protect the absent party's interest. n34

When a governmental entity brings an action as a representative of its citizens, the applicant for intervention must demonstrate an interest different from that of the public at large, and that this interest will not be adequately represented by the government. n35

[8] Standing

The circuit courts have reached varying conclusions as to whether a party seeking to intervene as of right must himself or herself have standing. n36

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionStatutory Right to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2); see also In re New Motor Vehicles Canadian Export Antitrust Litig., 225 F.R.D. 62, 62-64 (D. Me. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 2403(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. 42 U.S.C. § 2000h-2.

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 1132(h).

(n8)Footnote 8. 35 U.S.C. § 146.

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1071.

(n10)Footnote 10. 31 U.S.C. § 3730(b)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. 31 U.S.C. § 3730(c)(3).

(n12)Footnote 12. 33 U.S.C. § 1515(b)(1); see also 30 U.S.C. § 1270(c)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1.

(n14)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 2403(b).

(n15)Footnote 15. 5 U.S.C. § 551.

(n16)Footnote 16. 5 U.S.C. § 552.

(n17)Footnote 17. 5 U.S.C. § 702.

(n18)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 2348.

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 4911(b)(1)(B) (noise control action); 42 U.S.C. § 6972(b)(1) (hazardous waste action); 30 U.S.C. § 1270(b)(1)(B) (surface coal mining environmental regulations); 33 U.S.C. § 1515(b)(1)(B) (deepwater ports regulations).

(n20)Footnote 20. 42 U.S.C. § 2000(e)-5(f)(1); see also General Tel. Co. v. EEOC, 446 U.S. 318, 326, 100 S. Ct. 1698, 64 L. Ed. 2d 319 (1980) (EEOC's authority to bring civil action does not replace private action).

(n21)Footnote 21. 42 U.S.C. § 12117(a) (incorporating by reference 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5).

(n22)Footnote 22. 42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)(2).

(n23)Footnote 23. 42 U.S.C. § 3614(a), (b), (e).

(n24)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 78p(b).

(n25)Footnote 25. 26 U.S.C. § 7464.

(n26)Footnote 26. 28 U.S.C. §§ 2321, 2323.

(n27)Footnote 27. 47 U.S.C. § 309(e).

(n28)Footnote 28. Northwest Forest resource Council v. Glickman, 82 F.3d 825, 838 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Donaldson v. United States, 400 U.S. 517, 530-531 (1971) ; see also United States v. Alisal Water Corp., 370 F.3d 915, 919-921 (9th Cir. 2004) ; Arakaki v. Cayetano, 324 F.3d 1078, 1084 (9th Cir. 2003).

(n30)Footnote 30. Kitzmiller v. Dover Area Sch. Dist., 229 F.R.D. 463, 467-468 (M.D. Pa. 2005) ; General Star Indem. Co. v. Virgin Islands Port Auth., 224 F.R.D. 372, 375-376 (D.V.I. 2004) .

(n31)Footnote 31. California ex rel. Lockyer v. United States, 450 F.3d 436, 440-442 (9th Cir. 2006) .

(n32)Footnote 32. See Sierra Club v. Glickman, 82 F.3d 106, 109-110 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n33)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2); Trbovich v. United Mine Workers of Am., 404 U.S. 528, 538 (1972) (citing Moore's).

(n34)Footnote 34. In re General Tire & Rubber Co. Secs. Litig., 726 F.2d 1075, 1087 (6th. Cir. 1984) .

(n35)Footnote 35. United States v. Hooker Chems. & Plastics, 749 F.2d 968, 985 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n36)Footnote 36. Compare United States v. 39.36 Acres of Land, 754 F.2d 855, 859 (7th Cir. 1985) (intervention requires an interest in excess of that required for standing); Roeder v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 333 F.3d 228, 233-234 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (applicant for intervention who met the Rule 24(a) requirements also met the Article III requirements for standing), and Jones v. Prince George's County, 348 F.3d 1014, 1017-1018 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (the intervenor had a concrete and cognizable interest in the litigation that satisfied Article III standing demands), with Sagebrush Rebellion, Inc. v. Watt, 713 F.2d 525 (9th Cir. 1983) (resolving intervention questions without reference to standing doctrine), and Planned Parenthood of Minnesota, Inc. v. Citizens for Community Action, 558 F.2d 861 (8th Cir. 1977) (same).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.32

§ 4.32 Permissive Intervention

[1] Grounds for Permissive Intervention

On timely application, anyone may be permitted to intervene in an action when either:

- A federal statute confers a conditional right to intervene in the action n1
- The applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a common question of law or fact n2

The district court possesses broad discretion to decide whether to allow permissive intervention and will rarely be reversed on appeal. n3

[2] Factors Considered on Motion for Permissive Intervention

The principal consideration set forth in Rule 24(b)(2) is whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties. n4

[3] Moving Under Federal Statute Conferring Conditional Right to Intervene

Only federal statutes may be cited as a basis for permissive intervention. n5

The following are examples of a statutory conditional right to intervene:

- A "party in interest" may intervene in a case brought under the Bankruptcy Code upon a showing of cause. n6
- A person with an interest in the subject matter of an action under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA), relating to the clean-up of hazardous waste sites, may intervene if disposition of the action may impair or impede the person's interest. n7
- An employee may intervene in an action brought by a union representative pursuant to the Fair

Labor Standards Act. n8

- A parent or guardian may intervene in a school desegregation action, brought pursuant to the Equal Education Opportunities Act, by showing that implementation of a court busing order poses a risk to the health or education of a child. n9

- The United States may intervene in an action that involves property against which it claims a tax lien. n10

- When issues of public importance are involved, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) or the Attorney General may intervene in a private employment discrimination action. n11

- The Attorney General may intervene in an action under the Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act with a showing that the conditions that are the basis of the action are part of a pattern or practice of constitutional violations. n12

[4] Permissive Intervention When Common Questions of Law or Fact Exist

Permissive intervention may be obtained by showing that there is a common question of either law or fact between the applicant's claim and the underlying action. n13

The applicant for intervention does not need to show a direct interest in the litigation, as is required for intervention as of right under Rule 24(a)(2). n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionPermissive InterventionsCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B); see also In re New Motor Vehicles Canadian Export Antitrust Litig., 225 F.R.D. 62, 62-64 (D. Me. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Northland Family Planning Clinic, Inc. v. Cox, 487 F.3d 323, 346-347 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Purcell v. Bank Atlantic Fin. Corp., 85 F.3d 1508, 1512-1513 (11th Cir. 1996).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2018(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. 42 U.S.C. § 9613(I).

(n8)Footnote 8. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. 20 U.S.C. § 1717.

(n10)Footnote 10. 26 U.S.C. § 7424.

(n11)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 1997c(a)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B).

(n14)Footnote 14. SEC v. United States Realty & Improvement Co., 310 U.S. 434, 459 (1940) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.33

§ 4.33 Intervention for Purposes of Appeal

If the original parties choose not to appeal a judgment, an applicant may intervene for purposes of appeal when the motion is filed promptly after the entry of final judgment. n1 Post-judgment intervention is rarely permitted.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United Airlines, Inc. v. McDonald, 432 U.S. 385, 395-396, 97 S. Ct. 2464, 53 L. Ed. 2d 423 (1977) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.34

§ 4.34 Considering Timeliness of Intervention Motion

Timeliness is crucial to intervention. A motion for either intervention as of right or permissive intervention must be "timely" filed. n1

Although Rule 24 does not define timeliness, courts may properly deny permissive intervention in order to avoid the likelihood of undue delay or prejudice to the rights of the existing parties. n2

In evaluating timeliness, courts may look to the stage of the proceeding at which the applicant seeks to intervene, prejudice caused to other parties, and the reason for and length of any delay. n3

While motions for intervention filed after judgment are frequently denied as untimely, there is no absolute measure of timeliness, and post-judgment intervention may be allowed if the rights of the existing parties are not prejudiced and intervention does not interfere with the orderly processes of the court. Post-judgment intervention may be considered timely when it is sought for the purpose of appealing a decision the existing parties do not wish to appeal. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a), (b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., United States v. 36.96 Acres of Land, 754 F.2d 855, 860 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See United States v. State of Washington, 86 F.3d 1499, 1503 (9th Cir. 1996) ; see also United States v. British Am. Tobacco Australia Servs., Ltd., 437 F.3d 1235, 1238-1239 (D.C. Cir. 2006).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Ross v. Marshall, 426 F.3d 745, 750-52, 754-755 (5th Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.35

§ 4.35 Analyzing Intervention in Context of Diversity Jurisdiction

If a party intervenes as of right, the court has supplemental jurisdiction over that party even when the party lacks diverse citizenship. n1

Permissive intervention, on the other hand, must have an independent basis for subject matter jurisdiction. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Nelson v. Greenspoon, 103 F.R.D. 118, 121 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Davila v. Arlasky, 141 F.R.D. 68, 73 (N.D.Ill 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.36

§ 4.36 Tactical Considerations for Intervention

[1] Defensive Intervention

Given the proper grounds, a motion for intervention may be considered when disposition of the underlying litigation is likely to adversely affect the nonparty's interests if he or she does not participate in the litigation. This may occur when the nonparty is a privy of one of the parties, and would be bound by a judgment in the action by application of res judicata or collateral estoppel. n1

Even if the nonparty could not be bound by a judgment, application of the doctrine of stare decisis could affect the nonparty's ability to argue a point of law in a later action. n2 Intervention may also be considered when a nonparty determines that the existing parties may not adequately represent the nonparty's interests.

[2] Offensive Intervention

Intervention may be considered if participation in an ongoing litigation will allow the nonparty to assert a claim or defense in a more effective manner than in an independent suit. It may be more advantageous to intervene if:

- The nonparty lacks the resources to bring an independent action
- The nonparty's claim complements existing claims and can be more effectively asserted in the ongoing case
- Two distinct claims will benefit by being tried together
- Participation in the litigation provides an opportunity to advance the interests of a public interest group or other association
- The nonparty has factual information of data particularly helpful to the desired result, or counsel with special capacities to advance the claim

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. International Marine Towing, Inc. v. Southern Leasing Partners, Ltd., 722 F.2d 126, 129-130 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Nuesse v. Camp, 385 F.2d 694, 702 (D.C. Cir. 1967) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.37

§ 4.37 Drafting Motion to Intervene

[1] Pleading Must Accompany Motion Seeking Intervention

A pleading setting forth the claim or defense of the proposed intervenor must accompany the motion seeking intervention. n1 The applicant may not simply adopt the prior pleadings of an existing party. n2 However, a court may approve an intervention motion that is not accompanied by a pleading if the parties are on notice of the grounds for the motion and would not be prejudiced. n3

[2] Drafting Intervention Pleading

The applicant should state necessary allegations to establish the court's jurisdiction over the claims being asserted. n4

If the basis of jurisdiction is diversity of the parties, intervention that would otherwise destroy diversity will not rob the court of jurisdiction, if the new parties are not indispensable but merely conditionally necessary parties to the suit. n5

The applicant's claim for relief should be stated in accordance with the usual rules of pleading. If the pleading is an answer, the applicant should respond to all allegations in the complaint and state affirmative defenses and proposed counterclaims or cross-claims, as usual.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c); see also Gaskin v. Pennsylvania, 231 F.R.D. 195, 196 n.1 (E.D. Penn. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Retired Chicago Police Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584, 595 (7th Cir. 1993) (differences between motions to intervene and the complaint applicants attempted to adopt by reference were too significant to allow waiver of Rule 24(c) procedural requirements).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Providence Baptist Church v. Hillandale Comm., Ltd., 425 F.3d 309, 313-315 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Valley Forge Christian College v. Americans United for Separation of Church & State, 454 U.S. 464, 472 (1982) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Brooks v. Sussex County State Bank, 167 F.R.D. 347, 352 (N.D.N.Y. 1996) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.38

§ 4.38 Serving and Filing Motion to Intervene and Pleading

A motion to intervene, accompanied by a pleading that sets forth the claim or defense for which intervention is sought, must be filed and served on all of the existing parties to the action. n1

Technical noncompliance will not necessarily result in denial of the intervenor's motion, since the court may disregard purely formal defects in the absence of prejudice to the parties. For example, a court may approve an intervention motion that is not accompanied by a pleading, if the court is otherwise apprised of the grounds for the motion. n2 Likewise, failure to serve all parties with the motion to intervene was justifiable in a case in which the entire court file was sealed, and the intervenors therefore did not know the identities of the defendants and their attorneys when they made their motion. n3

All motions to intervene, whether permissive or as of right, must be timely filed. Judicial assessment of intervention timeliness is essentially discretionary, and timeliness is determined based on all the circumstances of the case. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionPermissive Interventions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c); Fed. R. Civ. P. 5 (service on parties); see also Armstrong v. Capshaw, Goss & Bowers, L.L.P., 404 F.3d 933, 936-937 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Marshall v. Meadows, 921 F. Supp. 1490, 1492 (E.D. Va. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Grove Fresh Distribs., Inc. v. Everfresh Juice Co., 24 F.3d 893, 896 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. NAACP v. New York, 413 U.S. 345, 366, 93 S. Ct. 2591, 37 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1973) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.39

§ 4.39 Evaluating Jurisdiction and Venue Issues

[1] District Court With Original Jurisdiction May Exercise Supplemental Jurisdiction Over Related Claims

Applications for intervention must have an independent basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. For example, the intervenor may plead a federal question claim, or base jurisdiction upon diversity of citizenship.

Alternatively, it is sometimes possible for the intervenor who lacks diversity or a federal claim to demonstrate supplemental jurisdiction. The jurisdictional requirements regarding supplemental jurisdiction are governed by federal statute. n1 Specifically, in any civil action in which a district court has original jurisdiction, the court may exercise supplemental jurisdiction over all other claims "that are so related to claims in the action" to "form part of the same constitutional case or controversy." n2

The district court may decline to exercise its supplemental jurisdiction if either: n3

- The claim raises a novel or complex issue of state law
- The claim would substantially predominate over the original action
- The district court has dismissed all claims over which it had original jurisdiction
- In exceptional circumstances, there are other compelling reasons for declining jurisdiction

[2] Intervenor Must Independently Meet Jurisdictional Requirements in Diversity Actions

The use of supplemental jurisdiction is severely restricted in diversity cases. If the subject matter jurisdiction in the original action is based on diversity of citizenship, the court is prohibited from exercising supplemental jurisdiction over either the intervenor's claim or claims by the plaintiff against the intervenor where such exercise would be inconsistent with the requirements of diversity jurisdiction. n4

A court lacks the discretion to find supplemental jurisdiction if, in a diversity case, the intervenor's citizenship renders the dispute inconsistent with the complete diversity requirement. n5

The applicant who seeks to intervene only to defend a claim should not be prevented from using supplemental jurisdiction. n6 Some courts will also allow for the exercise of supplemental jurisdiction over cross-claims by an intervenor aligned as a defendant, notwithstanding a lack of complete diversity. n7

A court may be willing to realign the parties to retain subject matter jurisdiction and hear claims by or against an intervenor. When party designations have jurisdictional consequences, courts normally will realign the parties before determining jurisdiction. n8

[3] Intervenor May Not Object to Venue

A person who intervenes as plaintiff or defendant cannot object to the venue chosen for the action. Since the intervenor specifically invoked the jurisdiction of the court, any potential venue objections are considered waived.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionSupplemental JurisdictionSame Case & ControversyCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a); Cf. 28 U.S.C. 1367(b) (if jurisdiction is based on diversity, the intervenor's claim must meet the requirements for diversity jurisdiction).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b); 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n5)Footnote 5. Betancourt-Torres v. Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 164 F.R.D. 307, 308 (D.P.R. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. MCI Telecommunications Corp. v. Logan Group, Inc., 848 F. Supp. 86, 89 (N.D. Tex. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Langone v. Flint Ink N. Am. Corp., 231 F.R.D. 114, 116-117 (D. Mass. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 8. In re Texas E. Transmission Corp. PCB Contamination Ins. Coverage Litig., 15 F.3d 1230, 1241 (3d Cir. 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.40

§ 4.40 Opposing Motion Seeking Intervention

[1] Consider Timeliness Objection

Four factors are generally considered in determining whether a motion has been timely filed. These factors may be used as a basis for attacking the motion: n1

- The applicant knew or should have known of his or her interest for a considerable amount of time before making the motion to intervene
- There will be prejudice to existing parties resulting from any delay
- There will be no prejudice to the applicant if the motion is denied
- Unusual circumstances exist militating against a finding of timeliness

[2] Consider Objecting on Ground That Intervention Will Unduly Complicate Litigation

If the party opposing intervention can demonstrate that intervention will radically change the nature of the litigation or will unduly complicate it, the motion may be denied. n2

[3] Consider Objecting on Ground That Proposed Intervenor Lacks Sufficient Connection to Action

Intervention as of right. The opposing party can argue that the proposed intervenor does not have a sufficient interest in the subject matter of the litigation. n3

Permissive intervention. The opposing party can argue that the proposed intervenor does not have a common question of law or fact with the parties to the action. n4

[4] Consider Objecting on Ground That Representation Is Already Adequate

The party opposing a motion seeking intervention should consider whether the proposed intervenor's interests are already adequately represented by the parties in the suit. n5

[5] Consider Fall Back Argument That Limited Intervention Will Sufficiently Protect Applicant's Rights

An alternative position to the wholesale opposition to the intervention motion is the argument that intervention should be limited by specific conditions, such as limits on the intervenor's right to conduct discovery or to assert specific types of claims. Such conditions will minimize delays and unnecessary complication of the litigation. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Edwards v. City of Houston, 37 F.3d 1097, 1105 (5th Cir. 1994) (en banc); Shea v. Angulo, 19 F.3d 343, 348 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Banco Popular de Puerto Rico v. Greenblatt, 964 F.2d 1227, 1231 (1st Cir. 1992) ; Farmland Dairies v. Commissioner of NY Dep't of Agric. & Mkts., 847 F.2d 1038, 1044 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Washington Elec. Coop., Inc. v. Massachusetts Mun. Wholesale Elec. Co., 922 F.2d 92, 97 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Shea v. Angulo, 19 F.3d 343, 347 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Stringfellow v. Concerned Neighbors in Action, 480 U.S. 370, 378, 107 S. Ct. 1177, 94 L. Ed. 2d 389 (1987).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.41

§ 4.41 Considering Alternatives to Intervention

[1] Assisting Existing Parties

An alternative to intervention is to assist the existing parties to the litigation, especially in cases in which a party and the nonparty sharesimilar, although not identical interests. In such a case, the nonparty can assist the existing party by providing any or all of the following: financial assistance, counsel, support staff, documents, technical advice, or witnesses.

The nonparty must be careful not to control the litigation. Such an exercise of control may result in the nonparty's being bound by the results of the litigation. Mere financial assistance, however, will not be considered controlling the litigation. n1

[2] Requesting Leave to File Amicus Curiae Brief

An alternative to formal intervention is to seek leave to file an amicus curiae brief. n2 When the nonparty's interest in the litigation is principally centered on an issue of law, this is a viable alternative to intervention. The decision whether to grant leave to file an amicus curiae brief is discretionary with the court. n3

[3] Joining or Adding Party

As an alternative to intervention, counsel should consider the possibility that an existing party may move for joinder of the nonparty pursuant to Rule 21. n4

[4] Filing Separate Action

In some cases, the nonparty's interests may be protected most effectively by filing a separate action. Factors that will help determine whether it will be more effective to move to intervene or to file an independent action include the following:

- Timing of the respective actions. When the pending litigation will determine all related claims, a separate action will be practical only if the pending suit can be stayed, if it can be transferred to the forum of the second suit, or if the second action can be decided first.

- Convenience of the forum. A different forum may be more convenient to the nonparty, and may offer advantageous rules of law.

- Existing parties and counsel. In some cases, it will be preferable not to associate with or share control of the litigation with parties and counsel from the original litigation. n5

- Court's prior rulings. The court's prior rulings in the existing action or rulings by the court in prior cases involving the same subject matter may dictate a preference for filing an independent action in a different forum. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedureAppealsAmici Curiae

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Rumford Chem. Works v. Hygienic Chem. Co., 215 U.S. 156, 160 (1909) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Getty Oil Co. v. Dep't of Energy, 865 F.2d 270, 277 (Temp. Emer. Ct. App. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., United States v. Brooks, 164 F.R.D. 501, 507 (D. Or. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See §§ 4.20-4.24.

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Crown, Cork & Seal Co. v. Parker, 462 U.S. 345, 103 S. Ct. 2392, 76 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United States v. School Dist. of Omaha, 367 F. Supp. 198, 200-201 (D.Neb. 1973) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.42

§ 4.42 Appealing Intervention Order

An order granting intervention cannot be immediately appealed because it is not a final order. n1 However, an order denying intervention is immediately appealable because it is a final collateral order. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsMotions on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Stringfellow v. Concerned Neighbors in Action, 480 U.S. 370, 379, 107 S. Ct. 1177, 94 L. Ed. 2d 389 (1987) (grant of permissive intervention with conditions is not immediately appealable).

(n2)Footnote 2. Alternative Research & Dev. Found. v. Veneman, 262 F.3d 406, 408-411 (D.C. Cir. 2001) ; Shea v. Angulo, 19 F.3d 343, 345 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Carlough v. Amchem Prods., Inc., 5 F.3d 707, 712 (3d Cir. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

§ 4.43 CHECKLISTS: Motion to Intervene

[1] CHECKLIST: Drafting Motion for Intervention as of Right

☐ Grounds. The following checklist may be used in drafting a motion pursuant to Rule 24(a) seeking intervention as of right:

☐ Allege that intervention of right is being premised on either:

☐ An unconditional right conferred by federal statute. n1

☐ An interest in the subject matter of the action that may be impaired or impeded, because it is not adequately represented by the existing parties. n2

☐ Timeliness. Allege that motion has been timely filed with the court.

☐ Statutory authority. If basing intervention on a federal statute, provide the relevant statutory authority.

☐ Required criteria. If basing intervention on an interest that may be impaired in the absence of intervention, allege each of the following:

☐ A direct, legally protectable interest in the property or transaction that is the subject matter of the action.

☐ Disposition of the action will, as a practical matter, impair or impede the applicant's interest.

☐ The applicant's interest is not adequately represented by the existing parties.

☐ Allegation of special expertise. If applicable, allege how participation in the action will provide the court with special expertise not held by the parties.

☐ Points and authorities. If necessary, include detailed discussion of the legal basis supporting intervention in the accompanying memorandum of points and authorities.

☐ Pleading. A pleading setting forth the claim or defense must accompany the motion. n3

[2] CHECKLIST: Drafting Motion for Permissive Intervention

The following checklist may be used in drafting a motion pursuant to Rule 24(b) seeking permissive intervention:

☐ Grounds. Allege that permissive intervention is being premised on either:

☐ A conditional right conferred by federal statute. n4

☐ The fact that the applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a common question of fact or law. n5

☐ Timeliness. Allege that motion has been timely filed with the court. n6

☐ Statutory authority. If basing intervention on a federal statute, provide the relevant statutory authority.

☐ Common question. If basing intervention on a common question of law or fact, allege that judicial efficiency and consistency will benefit from resolving related issues in a single proceeding.

☐ Points and authorities. If necessary, include detailed discussion of the legal basis supporting intervention in an accompanying memorandum of points and authorities.

☐ Pleading. A pleading setting forth the claim or defense must accompany the motion. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionPermissive InterventionsCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c); see also Gaskin v. Pennsylvania, 231 F.R.D. 195, 196 n.1 (E.D. Penn. 2005)
.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
C. Seeking Intervention Under Rule 24

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 4.44 through 4.49

[Reserved]

§§ 4.44 [Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
D. Seeking Substitution of Parties Under Rule 25

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.50

§ 4.50 Understanding Rule 25

Rule 25 provides for the substitution of parties under the following circumstances: n1

- Death of a party [see § 4.51]
- Incompetency of a party [see § 4.52]
- Transfer of a party's interest [see § 4.53]
- Death or separation from office of a public official who is a party [see § 4.54]

Rule 25 provides for substitution only in the circumstances enumerated above. Parties may, however, be added under Rule 21 in the discretion of the court in situations not covered by Rule 25. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for Substitution

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
D. Seeking Substitution of Parties Under Rule 25

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.51

§ 4.51 Moving for Substitution of Deceased Party Under Rule 25(a)

[1] Governing Law

Substitution of a deceased party may be accomplished under Rule 25 by the following procedure: n1

- The motion for substitution may be made by any party or by the successors or representatives of the deceased party
- The motion must be made not later than 90 days after the death is suggested upon the record by service of a statement of the fact of the death
- If the motion to substitute is not timely made, the action must be dismissed as to the deceased party

In the event of the death of a plaintiff or defendant in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiffs or only against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate. The death must be suggested upon the record, and the action must proceed in favor of or against the surviving parties. n2

[2] Motion Seeking Substitution May Be Made Without Filing Suggestion of Death

A motion to substitute for a deceased party may be made by any party or by the representative of the deceased party without awaiting the suggestion of death provided for in Rule 25(a). n3

[3] Deadline for Filing Motion Seeking Substitution of Deceased Party

The deadline for filing a motion seeking substitution for a deceased party is measured not from the date of the death, but rather from the date a formal "suggestion of death" is made on the record (i.e. service of a statement of the fact of the death). n4 If the suggestion of death is not served, there is no strict deadline for the motion. If the suggestion of death is served, the motion must be made not later than 90 days after the date of service. n5 If the motion is not timely made, the action will be dismissed as to the deceased party. n6 Accordingly, if any party or the representative of the deceased party desires to limit the time within which another may make the motion, he or she may do so by suggesting the death upon the record.

A Rule 6(b) motion to enlarge time to file a motion seeking substitution is available to counsel. n7 The party moving for extension has the burden of showing that the failure to move for substitution in a timely manner was excusable. This requires a demonstration of good faith, and a showing of some reasonable basis for noncompliance, rather than mere inadvertence. n8

One court has held that a deceased plaintiff's counsel had "standing" to file a motion for extension of time pending the appointment of an administrator for the plaintiff's estate. n9

If no motion to substitute is made after service of the suggestion of death, opposing counsel can move for dismissal as to the deceased party after the expiration of the 90 days. n10

[4] Serving and Filing Suggestion of Death

A "suggestion of death" must be served, if at all, in the same manner as the motion for substitution. n11 The suggestion of death must be personally served on a representative who has been appointed for the estate of the deceased party. n12 The suggestion must also be served on the parties. Service may be effected in any judicial district. n13

Rule 25(a)(1) does not require a suggestion of death to identify the successor or legal representative; it merely requires that the suggestion of death be served on the involved parties. n14 Although Rule 25(a) contains no such requirement on its face, some courts have held that the suggestion of death is insufficient unless it identifies the representative or successor who may be substituted as a party in place of the decedent. n15

[5] Substitution of Deceased Party Is Discretionary

Substitution of a deceased party is discretionary. n16

A motion to substitute made within the prescribed time will ordinarily be granted, but the court may deny the motion in the exercise of sound discretion if the motion is made long after the death--as can occur if the suggestion of death is not made or is delayed--and circumstances have arisen rendering it unfair to allow substitution. n17

[6] Understanding Effect of Death and Survival of Action

If a party dies and the claim is not extinguished by the death, the court may order substitution of the proper parties. n18 The determination of whether a claim survives is a function of substantive law and is unaffected by Rule 25(a). n19

Federal courts will apply state law to decide whether a state law claim survives the death of a party. n20 To determine the substantive rights involved in or as a condition to substitution in a nonfederal case, the district court must look to state law and apply the appropriate survival statute of the state in which the federal court sits. n21

Survival of a federal question claim is determined under federal common law, in the absence of a specific federal statutory directive. The general rule under federal common law is that an action survives the death of a party if it is remedial and not penal in nature. n22

[7] Opposing Motion Seeking Substitution of Deceased Party

In opposing a motion seeking substitution for a decedent, counsel should consider the following:

- Whether the claim fails to survive the death of the party n23
- Whether an improper party has been named as the substitute n24

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsDeath of PartyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for Substitution

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a), advisory committee note 1963.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a), advisory committee note 1963.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1) advisory committee note (1963); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. See also Russell v. City of Milwaukee, 338 F.3d 662, 667-668 (7th Cir. 2003).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Kernisant v. City of New York, 225 F.R.D. 422, 427-430 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Barlow v. Ground, 39 F.3d 231, 234 (9th Cir. 1994); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 4 (manner of service).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Ray v. Koester, 215 F.R.D. 533, 534-535 (W.D. Tex. 2003).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Smith v. Planas, 151 F.R.D. 547, 549 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; see also Fehrenbacher v. Quackenbush, 759 F. Supp. 1516, 1519 (D. Kan. 1991).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a), advisory committee note 1963; see Coffee v. Cutter Biological, 809 F.2d 191, 193 n.1 (2d Cir. 1987) ; Henkel v. Stratton, 612 F. Supp. 190, 191 n.1 (N.D. Ohio 1985) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n19)Footnote 19. Saylor v. Bastedo, 623 F.2d 230, 238 (2d Cir. 1980) (citing Moore's); see also Covert v. Liggett Group, Inc., 750 F. Supp. 1303, 1310 (M.D. La. 1990) (abatement of an action governed by law of sovereign that created course of action); Marcano v. Offshore Venezuela, C.A., 497 F. Supp. 204, 208 (E.D. La. 1980) (conflict of laws under diversity jurisdiction).

(n20)Footnote 20. See In re Bextra & Celebrex Mktg. Sales Practices & Prod. Liab. Litig., 244 F.R.D. 558, 558-559 (N.D. Cal. 2007) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Knauer v. Johns-Manville Corp., 638 F. Supp. 1369, 1387 (D. Md. 1986) (citing Moore's).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Kilgo v. Bowman Transp., Inc., 789 F.2d 859, 876 (11th Cir. 1986); see also James v. Home Constr. Co., 621 F.2d 727, 730 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See [6], above.

(n24)Footnote 24. See F.D.I.C. v. Conner, 20 F.3d 1376, 1384 (5th Cir. 1994) (estate not legal entity and cannot be sued as such); see also Ashley v. Illinois Cent. Gulf R.R. Co., 98 F.R.D. 722, 724 (S.D. Miss. 1983) ; Marcano v. Offshore Venezuela, C.A., 497 F. Supp. 204, 207-209 (E.D. La. 1980) (denying motion to substitute and rejecting claim by Venezuelan national that Venezuelan law permits her to become administratrix of decedent's estate without obtaining some judicial designation, but allowing opportunity to make a proper showing).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
D. Seeking Substitution of Parties Under Rule 25

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.52

§ 4.52 Moving for Substitution of Incompetent Party Under Rule 25(b)

If a party becomes incompetent, the court may allow the action to be continued by or against the party's representative. n1

The Federal Rules do not define "incompetency," or provide for a determination of competency. Apparently state law determines incompetency, as well as the procedure for appointment of a representative.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsIncompetencyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for Substitution

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
D. Seeking Substitution of Parties Under Rule 25

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.53

§ 4.53 Moving for Substitution on Transfer of Interest Under Rule 25(c)

[1] Defining Transfer of Interest

In case of any transfer of interest by a party, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court upon motion directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action, or joined with the original party. n1

Courts have applied the term "transfer of interest" broadly to cover transfers of assets. The types of transfers of interests embraced by the Rule include a corporate acquisition, change in ownership of a financial instrument, or a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy succeeding to the assets and liabilities of the debtor. n2 Accordingly, the asset acquisition of a defendant closely held corporation by another closely held corporation falls within the Rule. n3

[2] Transfer of Interest Must Occur After Commencement of Action

Rule 25(c) only applies to pending litigation. Accordingly, the transfer of interest must take place after the commencement of the action. n4

[3] Deadline for Filing Motion Based on Transfer of Interest

Rule 25(c) does not provide a deadline for filing a motion for substitution based on transfer of interest. n5 Arguably, a Rule 25(c) motion may be made at any time. n6

No existing cases deny a Rule 25(c) motion based on a lack of a timely request. Yet, the vast discretion inherent in Rule 25(c) n7 would presumably incorporate considerations of efficiency that could mitigate against an untimely filing.

[4] Serving Substitution Motion Based on Transfer of Interest

Rule 25(c) provides specifically that the motion to substitute based on transfer of interest must be served as provided by Rule 25(a)(1). Therefore, the motion must be served on the parties as provided in Rule 5, n8 and upon nonparties in the manner provided in Rule 4 n9 for the service of a summons. Service may be effected in any judicial district. n10

[5] Discretion of Court on Motion

There is some authority to the effect that substitution of a party under Rule 25(c) is discretionary, the better view appears to be that so long as a timely motion is filed, the court's discretion relates only to continuation of the original party. n11

In general, the court has the following three alternatives: n12

- Keep the original party
- Substitute the transferee
- Join the transferee and keep the original party

Keeping both parties in the action may be done when both retain an interest in the outcome of the action and are real parties in interest, such as when the transferor retains a mortgage on the property. n13

[6] Considering Effect of Substitution Under Rule 25(c)

Substitution or joinder under Rule 25(c) has no effect on subject matter jurisdiction. Even if substitution destroys complete diversity of citizenship, the court retains subject matter jurisdiction as long as proper jurisdiction was previously established by the original parties. n14

Likewise, a Rule 25(c) substitution does not effect venue or personal jurisdiction. n15

A Rule 25(c) change of parties does not substantively determine what claims survive the transfer of interest; rather, it provides substitution procedures for a claim that does survive. n16 The procedural nature of Rule 25 means that substantive rights are not affected when the proper party is joined in the suit. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsTransfers of Interests

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Trombino v. Transit Casualty Co., 110 F.R.D. 139, 147 (D.R.I. 1986).

(n3)Footnote 3. Virgo v. Riviera Bench Assocs., Ltd., 30 F.3d 1350, 1358 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Horphag Research Ltd. v. Consac Indus., Inc., 116 F.3d 1450, 1453 (Fed. Cir. 1997) (citing Moore's).

(n5)Footnote 5. General Battery Corp. v. Globe-Union, Inc., 100 F.R.D. 258, 261 (D. Del. 1982) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Air Line Pilots Ass'n Int'l v. Texas Int'l Airlines, Inc., 567 F. Supp. 78, 81 (S.D. Tex. 1983) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See [5], below.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1), (c).

(n11)Footnote 11. Trombino v. Transit Casualty Co., 110 F.R.D. 139, 147 (D.R.I 1986) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. Burka v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 87 F.3d 478, 479 n.1 (D.C. Cir. 1996) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Freeport-McMoRan Inc. v. K N Energy, Inc., 498 U.S. 426, 428-429, 860, 112 L. Ed.2d 951, 954 (1991) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Eco-Chem, Inc., 757 F.2d 1256, 1264 (Fed. Cir. 1985).

(n16)Footnote 16. ELCA Enters., Inc. v. Sisco Equip. Rental & Sales, Inc., 53 F.3d 186, 191 (8th Cir. 1995) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Maysonet-Robles v. Cabrero, 323 F.3d 43, 49 (1st Cir. 2003) ; In re Covington Grain Co., Inc., 638 F.2d 1357, 1361 (5th Cir. 1981) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
D. Seeking Substitution of Parties Under Rule 25

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.54

§ 4.54 Understanding Automatic Substitution of Public Officer Under Rule 25(d)

[1] Public Officer's Successor is Automatically Substituted

When a public officer is a party to an action in an official capacity, and during its pendency dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate, and the officer's successor is automatically substituted as a party. n1

Because no motion is required to achieve automatic substitution involving a public officer, the court may order substitution sua sponte. n2 The court may take judicial notice of the fact that a public officer has been replaced where it is common knowledge that officer has been succeeded in office. n3

When a court formally orders substitution, it should also direct the clerk of court to change the caption of the case on the court's records to reflect the substitution. n4 An order of substitution is not required, but may be entered at any time if a party desires or the court sees fit. n5

[2] Defining Official Capacity

The Rule governing substitution of a public officer applies to actions against officers to compel performance of official duties, or to obtain judicial review of their orders. It also applies to actions to prevent officers from acting in excess of their authority or under authority not validly conferred, or from enforcing unconstitutional enactments. In general, it applies whenever effective relief would call for corrective behavior by the one then having official status and power. n6

If the original official was named as a defendant in both an individual and official capacity, automatic substitution applies only to the official capacity, and the original official should remain a party in the officer's individual capacity only. The successor official will become a party defendant only in his or her official capacity. n7

If a public official dies in office and was a defendant in both official and individual capacities, the successor will be substituted in the official capacity claim automatically under Rule 25(d). However, for the claim in an individual capacity, the substitution procedures of Rule 25(a)(1) for deceased parties n8 will have to be used to avoid dismissal. n9

[3] Deadline for Seeking Substitution of Public Officer

An order of substitution of a public officer may be entered at any time. n10 Substitution may be effected at the time judgment is entered, or even afterward. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsPublic Officers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Joy Technologies, Inc. v. Manbeck, 751 F. Supp. 225, 227 n.1 (D.D.C. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Klassy v. Weaver, 575 F. Supp. 801, 804 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Modern Computer Corp. v. Ma, 862 F. Supp. 938, 950 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d) advisory committee's note (1961).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d) advisory committee's note (1961).

(n7)Footnote 7. Kentucky v. Graham, 473 U.S. 159, 165, 121 (1985) ; Saldana-Sanchez v. Lopez-Gerena, 256 F.3d 1, 9 n.16 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 4.51.

(n9)Footnote 9. Kentucky v. Graham, 473 U.S. 159, 166 (1985) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fay v. Ryan, 818 F. Supp. 882, 885 n.1 (W.D. Pa. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.55

§ 4.55 CHECKLIST: Substituting Party

☐ Moving for substitution due to death of party

- ☐ Determine if death occurred during pendency of action.
- ☐ Determine whether claim survives.
- ☐ Ascertain name and address of person to be substituted and his or her capacity (i.e., administrator,etc.), if possible.
- ☐ File suggestion of death.
- ☐ Move to substitute within 90 day period after suggestion.
- ☐ Move to extend time limit if representative has not been named.

☐ Moving to substitute due to incompetency of party, transfer of interest, or replacement of public official

- ☐ Ascertain name and address of person to be substituted.
- ☐ Draft motion for substitution. Explain reasons for substitution.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for Substitution

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
D. Seeking Substitution of Parties Under Rule 25

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 4.56 through 4.99

[Reserved]

§§ 4.56 [Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
E. Forms

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.100

§ 4.100 Notice of Motion for Severance of Party

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Severance of Party

Notice of Motion for Severance of Party

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, Defendant [name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

[If seeking severance of another defendant:]

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 20(a) and Rule 21, severing all claims asserted by Plaintiff against Defendant [name of moving party] from the claims asserted by Plaintiff against Defendant(s) [name of codefendant(s)] on the ground that [state basis of motion, e.g., the claims asserted against the said defendants are not transactionally related and therefore are not properly joined in a single action]; and

[OR, if seeking severance of one of plaintiffs:]

(b) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 20(a) and Rule 21, severing all claims asserted by Plaintiff [name of one coplaintiff] from the claims asserted by Plaintiff(s) [name of other coplaintiff(s)] on the ground that [state basis of motion, e.g., the claims asserted by the said plaintiffs do not share any common question of fact or law and therefore are not properly joined in a single action];

[CONTINUE]

(c) granting [moving party] such other incidental relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law [if required; see] dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion by a defendant for severance of another party on the ground of misjoinder, or for any other reason. It may be used by one of multiple defendants to seek severance of the claims against one of those defendants, or it may be used by a defendant sued by multiple plaintiffs to seek severance of one of the plaintiffs. This form is designed for use by a defendant only. If the plaintiff seeks severance, it may do so by amendment of the pleadings, or by nonsuiting one or more defendants.

Related, but analytically distinct, is a motion seeking separate trials of the claims against multiple defendants. True severance creates a new action in the district court, while separate trials simply are phases of a single action.

[3] Grounds for Ordering Severance

Misjoinder of parties is not a ground for dismissal of an action. n1 Instead, the court may sever any claim against any party, thereby creating a new civil action in the district court. Although the provision for severance is contained in the misjoinder rule, severance is not limited to those circumstances; severance may be ordered for any reason, subject only to review for an abuse of discretion. For example, if venue is proper as to some claims but not as to others, the claims may be severed and transferred to a proper venue.

[4] Deadline for Seeking Severance

A motion seeking severance is not subject to any particular time restriction; nevertheless, misjoinder is a waivable defect that should be raised as soon as practicable. The longer a defendant waits to seek severance, the less likely it is that the remedy will protect the defendant from the cost, delay, or other prejudice that severance is designed to prevent.

[5] Propriety of Joinder of Defendants; Misjoinder

Multiple defendants may be joined in a single action if the claims against those joined (1) arise from the same transaction or occurrence, and (2) present a common question of law or fact. n2 If a defendant is joined without the required connection, misjoinder has occurred, and any defendant may move to sever the misjoined defendant from the action.

[6] Propriety of Joinder of Plaintiffs; Misjoinder

Multiple plaintiffs may join in a single action if the claims by those joining (1) arise from the same transaction or occurrence, and (2) present a common question of law or fact. n3 If a plaintiff joins in an action without the required connection, misjoinder has occurred, and any defendant may move to sever the misjoined plaintiff from the action.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
E. Forms

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.101

§ 4.101 Notice of Motion for Intervention

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Intervention

Notice of Motion for Intervention

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [identify prospective intervenor, e.g., Intervenor, XYZ Corporation] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 24, granting permission to the Intervenor to intervene as a [Plaintiff/Defendant] in this action on the ground that [state basis of motion, e.g., the Intervenor has a right to intervene in this action under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 24(a)(2)]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other incidental relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law [if required] dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion for use by a nonparty to a federal action seeking intervention in the action pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 24. The form may be used whether intervention is as of right or permissive.

A sample form of Motion to Intervene as a Defendant Under Rule 24 is included in the Official Forms Appendix to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n1 The Official Forms may be utilized by the practitioner, but are not mandatory.

[3] Deadline for Seeking Intervention

Any application for intervention, even one seeking the remedy as of right, must be timely filed. n2 The motion to intervene need not be filed within any defined time period. Instead, timeliness is an issue determined under all the facts and circumstances of the case. n3

[4] Grounds for Intervention as of Right

Intervention as of right is available when: n4

- A statute of the United States confers the right
- The intervenor's interest in the action is likely to be impaired or impeded by the disposition of action, and that interest is not already represented by one of the parties to the action

[5] Grounds for Permissive Intervention

Permissive intervention is available when: n5

- A statute of the United States so provides
- The prospective intervenor's claims or defenses have at least one question of law or fact in common with the main action

[6] Jurisdictional Considerations as to Intervenors

The intervention motion and pleading should state the basis of federal jurisdiction over the claims asserted by or against the intervenor. In a federal question case, claims by or against intervenors as of right always will fall within supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a). In a diversity case, claims by plaintiffs intervening as of right are not within supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b), and so musthave an independent basis of jurisdiction. Any permissive intervenor must show a basis for federal jurisdiction over the claims in intervention, although if those claims arise from the same constitutional case or controversy, supplemental jurisdiction is available in a federal question case.

[7] Pleading Must Accompany Motion

The pleading to be filed by the prospective intervenor must accompany the notice of motion and motion for intervention. n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Official Form 23.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a), (b).

(n3)Footnote 3. NAACP v. New York, 413 U.S. 345 (1973) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.102

§ 4.102 Caption: Intervention

[1] FORM

Caption: Intervention

[Party designation and name of plaintiff]	)
v.	)
[Party designation and name of defendant],	)	Civil Action No. [number] [Identify document, e.g., Motion to Intervene as Plaintiff/Defendant]
[Identify prospective intervenor, e.g., XYZ Corporation, Applicant for Intervention]	)
	)

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of caption in proceedings seeking intervention. Once intervention has occurred, the caption will need to be modified to show the intervenor's party status.

[3] Captions

The proper form for a caption to an action generally is dictated by local rules of the district courts. Intervention, however, presents unique issues in captioning because a prospective intervenor has no identifiable party status; intervention is an attempt to obtain that status. Once intervention is obtained, the caption may require further changes.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
E. Forms

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.103

§ 4.103 Notice of Motion Seeking Substitution Because of Death of Party

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion Seeking Substitution Because of Death of Party

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 25(a)(1), substituting [identify legal representative of deceased party, e.g., Jane Doe, Executor of the Estate of John Doe] as a party in this action due to the death of [party designation and name of deceased party] as indicated in the Suggestion of Death filed in this action on [date]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other incidental relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law [if required] dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion for use by a party in seeking substitution under Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1) of the legal representative of a party who has died during the pendency of an action.

[3] Deadline for Seeking Substitution

A motion seeking substitution of the legal representative of a deceased party need not be made within any particular time of the death itself, but rather must be madewithin 90 days of the date on which a Suggestion of Death was made on the record. n1 If the motion for substitution is not made within the 90 days, the rule states that the action "shall" be dismissed as to the deceased party. n2 Despite this language, the time period is not jurisdictional, so that dismissal is not mandatory, and the court has discretion to grant a motion for substitution made outside the 90-day period. The substitution motion may be made either by any of the remaining parties to the action, or by the legal representative of the deceased party. n3 The movant need not wait until a Suggestion of Death is filed before moving for substitution.

[4] Action Must Survive Death of Party

Substitution in the event of death is proper only if under the substantive law applicable to the action, the claims survive the death of the party. If the claims do not survive, the action is extinguished as to the deceased party.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Motions as to the Parties
E. Forms

1-4 Federal Litigation Guide § 4.104

§ 4.104 Suggestion of Death of Party on the Record

[1] FORM

Suggestion of Death of Party on the Record

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

[Party designation and name of party making suggestion of death] hereby informs the court, and advises the other parties to this action, pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 25(a)(1), of the death of [party designation and name of deceased party], a party in this action. The duly appointed legal representative of the deceased is [identify legal representative of deceased party, e.g., Jane Doe, Executor of the Estate of John Doe].

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of suggestion of death on the record to be filed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1) whenever the death of a party occurs during the pendency of an action and, under the substantive law applicable to the action, the claims survive the death of the party.

A sample form of Suggestion of Death Upon the Record Under Rule 25(a)(1) is included in the Official Forms Appendix to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n1 The Official Forms may be utilized by the practitioner, but are not mandatory.

[3] Deadline for Filing Suggestion of Death

A suggestion of death on the record need not be filed within any particular time of the party's death. n2 However, the filing and service of the suggestion of death begins the running of the 90 days permitted for making a motion for substitution as to the deceased party. n3

[4] Who May File Suggestion of Death

Rule 25(a)(1) contains no restriction on who may file the statement of the fact of death. There is no requirement that the statement of the fact of death must be filed by a party or a formal or appointed representative of the decedent.

[5] Service of Suggestion of Death

If the suggestion of death is made by one of the remaining parties to the action, service of the suggestion must be made on the legal representative of the deceased party. Such service is treated as original process, and therefore must be made as provided in Fed. R. Civ. P. 4. n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Official Form 30.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide 5.syn

§ 5.syn Synopsis to Chapter 5: Motions for Summary Judgment

§ 5.01 Scope of Rule 56: Resolving Case Without Trial

§ 5.02 Considering Advantages of Summary Judgment Motion
[1] Avoiding Wasteful Litigation
[2] Focusing Litigation

§ 5.03 Court May Grant Summary Judgment Sua Sponte

§ 5.04 Differences Between Summary Judgment and Rule 12 Motions
[1] Bases and Time Limits Differ
[2] Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim
[3] Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

§§ 5.05 through 5.09 [Reserved]

§ 5.10 Analyzing the Case
[1] No Genuine Issue of Material Fact
[2] Identifying Who Has Burden of Proof
[2.--1] Movant's Burden of Production
[2.--2] When Movant Successfully Discharges Burden of Production, Burden Shifts to Opponent

§ 5.11 Bringing Timely and Proper Motion
[1] Filing up to 30 Days After the Close of all Discovery
[2] Motion Must Be Served 14 Days Prior to Date of Hearing, Unless Court Shortens Time
[3] Contents of Motion

§ 5.12 Following Rule 56 Procedures
[1] Supporting Factual Positions
[2] Objecting That a Fact is Not Supported by Admissible Evidence
[3] Court May Consider Materials Not Cited
[4] Submitting Affidavits or Declarations

§ 5.13 Using Affidavits in Summary Judgment Motions

[1] Affidavits Not Required Under Rule 56
[2] Submitting Affidavits in Support of Motion
[2.--1] Affidavits Must Be Based on Personal Knowledge
[2.--2] Affidavits Must Contain Admissible Trial Evidence
[2.--3] Affidavits Must Show That Affiant Is Competent to Testify to Matters Stated
[3] Verified Pleading in Lieu of Affidavit
[4] Signed Declaration in Lieu of Affidavit
[5] Expert Affidavits
[6] Inconsistent Statements
[7] Submitting Affidavit or Declaration in Bad Faith

§ 5.14 Using Discovery Materials in Summary Judgment Motions
[1] Rule 56 Authorizes Use of Discovery Materials
[2] Depositions
[3] Interrogatory Responses
[4] Admissions

§ 5.15 Moving for Partial Summary Judgment
[1] Partial Summary Judgment May Be Granted
[2] Procedure
[3] Standard For Partial Summary Judgment

§ 5.16 Hearing Is Not Required by Rule 56

§ 5.17 Procedure When Rule 12(b)(6) Motion Is Converted Into Summary Judgment Motion

§§ 5.18 through 5.29 [Reserved]

§ 5.30 Showing of Specific Facts Required

§ 5.31 Filing Timely Opposition
[1] Filing Pursuant to Scheduling Order, Federal Rules, and Local Rules
[2] Moving for Extension of Time Within Which to Respond

§ 5.32 Continuance for Further Discovery
[1] Availability of Continuance
[2] Submission of Affidavit Generally Required
[3] Demonstrating That Further Specified Discovery Will Defeat Summary Judgment Motion

§ 5.33 Contents of Opposition Papers
[1] Opponent Must Identify Specific Facts Creating Genuine Issue
[2] Affidavits Generally Not Required

§ 5.34 When Burden Shifts to Opposing Party
[1] After Movant Demonstrates No Material Facts Are in Dispute
[2] Specificity Required

§ 5.35 Filing Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment

§ 5.36 Notice Required When Rule 12(b)(6) Motion Is Converted Into Summary Judgment Motion

§ 5.37 Moving for Sanctions

[1] Rule 56(h) Sanctions
[2] Rule 11 Sanctions

§§ 5.38 through 5.49 [Reserved]

§ 5.50 Required Determination: No Genuine Issue of Material Fact

§ 5.51 Required Showing Based on Burden of Proof at Trial

§ 5.52 Determination Generally Does Not Involve Fact Finding

§ 5.53 Evidence Evaluated in Light Most Favorable to Opponent

§ 5.54 Failing to Properly Support or Address a Fact

§ 5.55 Granting Less Than all the Requested Relief

§§ 5.56. through 5.59 [Reserved]

§ 5.60 Judgment Must Be Final
[1] What Is Final Judgment
[2] Appealing Denial of Motion
[3] Appealing Grant of Motion

§ 5.61 Collateral Order Exception

§ 5.62 Appealing Partial Summary Judgment Under Rule 54(b)

§§ 5.63 through 5.99 [Reserved]

§ 5.100 Notice of Motion for Summary Judgment
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Summary Judgment
[2] Use of Form
[3] Supporting and Opposing Affidavits or Declarations
[4] Statement of Material Facts
[5] Sanctions for Affidavits Made in Bad Faith
[6] Timing of Motion
[7] Service of Motion

§ 5.101 Notice of Motion for Partial Summary Judgment
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Partial Summary Judgment
[2] Use of Form
[3] Supporting and Opposing Affidavits or Declarations
[4] Statement of Material Facts
[5] Sanctions Based on Affidavits Made in Bad Faith
[6] Timing of Motion
[7] Service of Motion

§ 5.102 Statement of Material Facts
[1] FORM
Statement of Material Facts

[2] Use of Form

§ 5.103 Request for Continuance Pursuant to Rule 56(d)
[1] FORM
Response in Support of Rule 56(d) Continuance
[2] Use of Form
[3] Continuance of Hearing Date

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses how and when to move for summary judgment under Rule 56, including:

- Bringing a timely motion
- Contents of the motion
- Using affidavits and discovery material to supplement the motion
- Specific procedures required to support factual positions
- How and when to oppose a motion for summary judgment
- The possibility of moving for sanctions
- Appealing a decision on a motion for summary judgment

The chapter contains the following sample forms:

- Notice of Motion for Summary Judgment
- Notice of Motion for Partial Summary Judgment
- Statement of Material Facts
- Request for Continuance Pursuant to Rule 56(f)

For expanded coverage of motions for summary judgment, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 56, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
A. Understanding Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.01

§ 5.01 Scope of Rule 56: Resolving Case Without Trialn1

A party may move for summary judgment, identifying each claim or defense--or the part of each claim or defense--as to which summary judgment is sought. n2 The court shall grant summary judgment if the movant shows each of the following: n2.1

- There is no genuine issue of material fact
- The movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law

Summary judgment motions may be made with respect to an entire case or part of a case. n3 Partial summary judgment is commonly used in cases where liability may be separate from damages or to enforce indemnification obligations.

The court should state on the record the reasons for granting or denying the motion. n3.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsGenuine DisputesCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsMaterialityCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
A. Understanding Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.02

§ 5.02 Considering Advantages of Summary Judgment Motionn1

[1] Avoiding Wasteful Litigation

Motions for summary judgment may accomplish the following:

- Prevent wasteful trials n2
- Eliminate those cases from the trial calendar that are predestined to result in a directed verdict n3

[2] Focusing Litigation

A summary judgment motion that does not ask for judgment on the entire case will focus the issues. The court on hearing the motion will ascertain what material facts exist without substantial controversy, and what material facts are actually and in good faith controverted. n4

The court will then make an order specifying the facts that appear without substantial controversy; at trial the facts so specified are deemed established, and the trial conducted accordingly. n5

The grant of partial summary judgment can speed up litigation by eliminating some issues or facts before trial. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.32 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Capital Imaging Assocs. P.C. v. Mohawk Valley Med. Assocs., Inc., 996 F.2d 537, 541 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 947 (1993) ; Shaw v. McFarland Clinic, P.C., 231 F. Supp. 2d 924, 931 (S.D. Iowa 2002) , aff'd on other grounds, 363 F.3d 744 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. United Nat. Ins. Co. v. Bernstein, 988 F.2d 351, 355 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d) advisory committee's note (1946); Algie v. RCA Global Communications, Inc, 891 F. Supp. 875, 883 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) ; see also Lovejoy Electronics, Inc. v. O'Berto, 616 F. Supp. 1464, 1473 (N.D. Ill. 1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
A. Understanding Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.03

§ 5.03 Court May Grant Summary Judgment Sua Sponten1

After giving notice and a reasonable time to respond, the court may do any of the following: n2

- Grant summary judgment for a nonmovant
- Grant a summary judgment motion on grounds not raised by a party
- Grant summary judgment on its own after identifying for the parties material facts that are not genuinely in dispute

The court should state on the record its reasons for granting or denying the motion. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentBurdens of Production & ProofMovantsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentPartial Summary JudgmentsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
A. Understanding Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.04

§ 5.04 Differences Between Summary Judgment and Rule 12 Motionsn1

[1] Bases and Time Limits Differ

Rule 12 motions are based on the pleadings and are available only to the answering party. n2

Rule 56 motions are based on discovery materials and affidavits, as well as the pleadings, and are available to any party. n3

Motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) must be served within 21 days of service of the pleadings, unless extended. n4

[2] Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

A party may move to dismiss for failure of the pleading to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. n5

A court may dismiss a claim for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted only if it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations. n6

The defendant may move for dismissal for failure to state a claim under any of the following circumstances:

- The legal theory advanced by the plaintiff is not a cognizable legal theory n7
- The plaintiff has advanced a cognizable legal theory, but has failed to include allegations concerning all elements necessary to support recovery n8
- An affirmative defense to the claim appears on the face of the complaint or exhibits thereto n9

If matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion must be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56, and all parties must be given a reasonable opportunity to present all material that is pertinent to the motion by Rule 56. n10

[3] Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

At any time after the pleadings close and before the trial commences, a party may move for a judgment on the pleadings. n11

A court may grant judgment on the pleadings if the material facts are undisputed and a judgment on the merits can be reached by considering only the contents of the pleadings and matters of which the court may take judicial notice. n12

If the parties present materials outside the pleadings, the court may consider such materials only if it first converts the motion to a motion for summary judgment. n13

The key difference between summary judgment and a motion for judgment on the pleadings is that a summary judgment motion requires analysis of facts, and not merely legal contentions. The parties in a summary judgment proceeding are expected to provide evidentiary factual material outside of the pleadings. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentPartial Summary JudgmentsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.30 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n6)Footnote 6. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 78 S. Ct. 99, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1957) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Brower v. County of Inyo, 489 U.S. 593, 594-595, 109 S. Ct. 1378, 103 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1989) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Teltronics Proprietary, Ltd v. Medtronic, Inc., 687 F. Supp. 832, 837 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) ; see also King v. Port Authority of N.Y. and N.J., 909 F. Supp. 938, 941 (D.N.J. 1995) ; Carey v. Mt. Desert Island Hosp., 910 F. Supp. 7, 9 (D. Me. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Sykes v. James, 13 F.3d 515, 519 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1240 (1994) ; see also Sabo v. Parisi, 583 F. Supp. 1468, 1470 (E.D. Pa. 1984) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see also Kopec v. Coughlin, 922 F.2d 152, 153 (2d Cir. 1991) ; see also Advanced Cardiovascular Systems, Inc. v. Scimed Life Systems, Inc., 988 F.2d 1157, 1164 (8th Cir. 1993) ; Miller v. Glanz, 948 F.2d 1562, 1565 (10th Cir. 1991) ; Farley v. Henderson, 883 F.2d 709, 711 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n12)Footnote 12. Juster Assocs. v. City of Rutland, 901 F.2d 266, 269 (2d Cir. 1990) ; Huntt v. Virgin Islands,

339 F.2d 309, 310 (3d Cir. 1964) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see also Sheppard v. Beerman, 94 F.3d 823, 828-829 (2d Cir. 1996) ; see also Taylor v. United States I.R.S., 915 F. Supp. 1015, 1018 (D.N.D. 1996) , aff'd on other grounds, 106 F.3d 833 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Garside v. Osco Drug, Inc., 895 F.2d 46, 49 (1st Cir. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
A. Understanding Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 5.05 through 5.09

[Reserved]

§§ 5.05[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.10

§ 5.10 Analyzing the Casen1

[1] No Genuine Issue of Material Fact

Summary judgment is appropriate only if there is no genuine issue of material fact. Substantive law identifies which facts are material; only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the case under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment. A material fact is "genuine" if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party. n2

[2] Identifying Who Has Burden of Proof

[2.--1] Movant's Burden of Production

A party who moves for summary judgment has the burden of showing that: n3

- No genuine issues of material fact exist
- The undisputed facts entitle that party to judgment as a matter of law

The movant's burden on a summary judgment motion is tied to the movant's burden of persuasion at trial. n4

The movant's required prima facie showing is relatively higher if the movant also bears the burden of persuasion at trial. n5

The movant must rely upon specific portions of the record presented to the court to support its case for summary judgment. It is not enough to submit material to the court or to include broad sweeping statements in a summary judgment motion, without detailing exactly where the proof relating to each claim is found in the supporting material. n6

When the moving party does not bear the ultimate burden of proof on an issue, that party satisfies its summary judgment burden by pointing to the absence of evidence to support an essential element of the non-moving party's claim. n7

[2.--2] When Movant Successfully Discharges Burden of Production, Burden Shifts to Opponent

If the movant adequately establishes a prima facie case for summary judgment, the burden is then placed on the opponent to rebut the evidence presented by demonstrating either: n8

- A genuine dispute of material facts exists, which requires a trial to resolve
- That the movant is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentBurdens of Production & ProofMovantsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentEvidenceCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250-254, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See United Missouri Bank v. Gagel, 815 F. Supp. 387, 391 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Williams & Sons Erectors Inc. v. South Carolina Steel Corp., 983 F.2d 1176, 1182-1183 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.11

§ 5.11 Bringing Timely and Proper Motionn1

[1] Filing up to 30 Days After the Close of all Discovery

Unless a different time is set by local rule or the court orders otherwise, a party may file a motion for summary judgment at any time until 30 days after the close of all discovery. n2 However, in most cases, the court will set the timing for summary judgment motions in a scheduling order.

[2] Motion Must Be Served 14 Days Prior to Date of Hearing, Unless Court Shortens Time

A summary judgment motion must be served at least 14 days prior to the date of the hearing on the motion. n3

If the motion is served by any of the following methods, three additional days must be added to the 14 day time period. n4

- Service by mail
- Service to the clerk of the court based on no known address
- Electronic or other means of delivery consented to in writing

Local rules often address timing of the motion, and some local rules require notice periods longer than that required by Rule 6.

The district court has discretion to shorten the 14-day period for good cause shown, provided the opposing party will not be unduly prejudiced. n5

Any opposing affidavit must be served at least 7 days before the hearing, unless the court permits service at another time. n6

[3] Contents of Motion

The conventional package of filings made in seeking summary judgment should include the following:

- Notice of the Motion. Includes the date, time, and location of the hearing on the motion

- Motion. Identifies the party seeking summary judgment, the claims on which summary judgment is sought, and the legal and factual grounds for the motion

- Proposed Order. Sets forth the relief sought by the moving party

- Memorandum of Law/Statement of Facts. Advocates the granting of the motion-either the memorandum or a separate statement of facts must state the asserted undisputed material facts with citations to the record

- Affidavits or Other Papers. Supports the basis for the motion

Local district court rules may specify additional requirements, provided those rules are consistent with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n6 Although affidavits and other materials are not strictly required by Rule 56, local rules or standing orders often require specific motion papers such as a notice of motion, a statement of uncontested facts, a proposed order, affidavits, or discovery materials.

Some local rules provide that if a movant's submissions are not specifically contested by the opponent, the facts asserted by the movant are deemed admitted. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. Rule v. Brine, 85 F.3d 1002, 1010 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(2).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(a)(1).

(n8)Footnote 7. See, e.g., E.D.N.Y. L.R. 3(g) (facts set forth by movant deemed admitted unless controverted by opponent); S.D.N.Y. L.R. 3(g) (same).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.12

§ 5.12 Following Rule 56 Procedures

[1] Supporting Factual Positions

A party asserting that a fact cannot be genuinely disputed, or conversely that a fact is genuinely disputed, must support the assertion by either of the following means: n1

- Citing to particular parts of materials in the record, including depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations (including those made for purposes of the motion only), admissions, interrogatory answers, or other materials.

- Showing that the materials cited do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact.

[2] Objecting That a Fact is Not Supported by Admissible Evidence

A party may object that the material cited to support or dispute a fact cannot be presented in a form that would be admissible in evidence. n2

[3] Court May Consider Materials Not Cited

The court need not consider only the cited materials. It may also consider other materials in the record. n3

[4] Submitting Affidavits or Declarations

An affidavit or declaration used to support or oppose a motion must be made on personal knowledge, set out facts that would be admissible in evidence, and show that the affiant or declarant is competent to testify on the matters stated. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil

ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsAffidavits

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.13

§ 5.13 Using Affidavits in Summary Judgment Motionsn1

[1] Affidavits Not Required Under Rule 56

There is no requirement that affidavits must accompany a motion for summary judgment. n2 As long as the movant satisfies the standard for summary judgment set forth in Rule 56(a), summary judgment should be granted. n3

Likewise, there is no requirement that nonmoving parties must use affidavits in their defense of a summary judgment motion. n4

[2] Submitting Affidavits in Support of Motion

[2.--1] Affidavits Must Be Based on Personal Knowledge

If affidavits are submitted in support of or in opposition to a summary judgment motion, they must be prepared by an individual with personal knowledge of the facts. n5

The following cases have interpreted this requirement:

- An affidavit in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment may not be based on information and belief n6

- An attorney's affidavit may not contain claims which counsel believes to be true, but which are not based on personal knowledge n7

- An attorney's affidavit submitted on personal knowledge as to procedural matters, items obtained through discovery, or other matters in evidence are competent summary judgment evidence n8

- Personal knowledge may be inferred from the content of the affidavit and the position of the affiant, such as a corporate officer's or principal's affidavit regarding information about the company n9

- Family members are presumed to have personal knowledge of certain family information n10

- Affidavits containing inadmissible hearsay may not be considered in summary judgment proceedings n11

[2.--2] Affidavits Must Contain Admissible Trial Evidence

Affidavits in support of or in opposition to a summary judgment motion must set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence. n12

Substance, not form, of the evidence is the focus at summary judgment stage.

- Rule 56(e) does not require the parties to submit evidence in the proper form at the summary judgment stage n13

- Affidavits are admissible if the affiant would be permitted to testify as to the content of the affidavit at trial n14

- Affidavits that contain nothing more than conclusory allegations or speculation are not sufficient to overcome a properly supported summary judgment motion n15

- Affidavits lacking specific facts to support legal conclusions will not be considered by the court in deciding the summary judgment motion n16

[2.--3] Affidavits Must Show That Affiant Is Competent to Testify to Matters Stated

Affidavits in support of or in opposition to a summary judgment motion must show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein. n17 Moreover, the affidavit or declaration used to support or oppose a motion must be made on personal knowledge. n18

[3] Verified Pleading in Lieu of Affidavit

A verified complaint may be sufficient material to support or oppose summary judgment. n19

A verified pleading is treated as an affidavit for summary judgment purposes, provided that it meets the other requirements for an affidavit under Rule 56(e). n20

[4] Signed Declaration in Lieu of Affidavit

Unnotarized signed declarations containing the statement "I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct" are sufficient to meet Rule 56(c)(4) requirements for affidavits in support of summary judgment motion. n21

[5] Expert Affidavits

Affidavits containing expert opinion testimony must contain admissible evidence. Specifically, the expert affidavit must: n22

- Be sworn

- Be based on personal knowledge

- Explain the expert's competency

- Set forth specific facts to support the expert's conclusion

A summary judgment affidavit may not contain expert testimony unless the affiant has first been designated an expert witness under Rule 26(a)(2). n23 The opinions of an expert contained in an affidavit must generally be competent in the same measure that they would be at trial. A conclusory affidavit may not be submitted as competent evidence to support a motion for summary judgment. n24

An expert's affidavit need not contain actual data upon which the expert's opinion is based, but must clearly reference the data used to form that opinion. This is especially true in certain types of cases, such as those in which the supporting data is typically the product of volumes of highly technical material. n25

Expert opinion submitted in opposition to summary judgment must be based on established facts. n26 The underlying methodologies of the expert must be explained in the affidavit. n27

[6] Inconsistent Statements

If a party's deposition and affidavit are in conflict, the affidavit is to be disregarded unless a legitimate reason can be given for the discrepancies. Courts generally give a deposition more weight because there was an opportunity for cross-examination. n28

A party cannot create a material issue of triable fact simply by submitting conflicting or contradictory sworn statements to prevent the entry of summary judgment. n29

[7] Submitting Affidavit or Declaration in Bad Faith

If satisfied that an affidavit or declaration under this rule is submitted in bad faith or solely for delay, the court--after notice and a reasonable time to respond--may order the submitting party to pay the other party the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, it incurred as a result. n30 An offending party or attorney may also be held in contempt or subjected to other appropriate sanctions. n31

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsAffidavits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.14 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), (c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4); see also Kemper v. Saline Lectronics, 348 F. Supp. 2d 897, 899 (N.D. Ohio 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Richardson v. Oldham, 12 F.3d 1373, 1378 (5th Cir. 1994) ; Cooper v. Lane, 969 F.2d 368, 372-373 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Friedel v. City of Madison, 832 F.2d 965, 969-970 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Sitts v. United States, 811 F.2d 736, 741-742 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n9)Footnote 9. FDIC v. Patel, 46 F.3d 482, 484 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Barthelemy v. Air Line Pilots Ass'n, 897 F.2d 999, 1018 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Cattawba Indian Tribe v. South Carolina, 978 F.2d 1334, 1342 (4th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 972 (1993) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Richardson v. Oldham, 12 F.3d 1373, 1378 (5th Cir. 1994) ; Cooper v. Lane, 969 F.2d 368, 372-373 (7th Cir. 1992) ; H. Sand & Co. v. Airtemp Corp., 934 F.2d 450, 454-455 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4); see also Dora Homes, Inc. v. Epperson, 344 F. Supp. 2d 875, 882 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(N13)Footnote 13. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Azrielli v. Cohen Law Offices, 21 F.3d 512, 516-517 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Winskunas v. Birnbaum, 23 F.3d 1264, 1267-1268 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Salas v. Carpenter, 980 F.2d 299, 304-305 (5th Cir. 1992) ; Hughes v. United States, 953 F.2d 531, 543 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Allen v. Coughlin, 64 F.3d 77, 80 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Rosemary B. v. Board of Educ. of Community High School No. 155, 52 F.3d 156, 159 (7th Cir. 1995) ; Peppers v. Coates, 887 F.2d 1493, 1498 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Burlington Coat Factory Warehouse Corp. v. Esprit De Corp., 769 F.2d 919, 922-923 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

(n19)Footnote 19. Lavado v. Keohane, 992 F.2d 601, 604 (6th Cir. 1993) ; Williams v. Griffin, 952 F.2d 820, 823 (4th Cir. 1991) ; Lodge Hall Music, Inc. v. Waco Wrangler Club, Inc., 831 F.2d 77, 80 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Colon v. Coughlin, 58 F.3d 865, 872 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Resolution Trust Corp. v. Starkey, 41 F.3d 1018, 1023 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Schroeder v. McDonald, 41 F.3d 1272, 1277-1278 (9th Cir. 1994) ; Sammons v. Taylor, 967 F.2d 1533, 1544-1545 n.5 (11th Cir. 1992) ; Williams v. Griffin, 952 F.2d 820, 823 (4th Cir. 1991) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Lantec, Inc. v. Novell, Inc., 306 F.3d 1003, 1019 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Iacobelli Const., Inc. v. County of Monroe, 32 F.3d 19, 25 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Brown v. Woodland Joint Unified School District, 27 F.3d 1373, 1382 (9th Cir. 1994) ; Fowle v. C & C Cola, a Div. of ITT-Continental Baking Co., 868 F.2d 59, 67 (3d Cir. 1989) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Bryant v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 432 F.3d 1114, 1122 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Reinke v. O'Connell, 790 F.2d 850, 851-852 (11th Cir. 1986) (physicians' affidavits stating merely that they were not guilty of malpractice were conclusory and not sufficient to support motion for summary judgment).

(n25)Footnote 25. Iacobelli Const., Inc. v. County of Monroe, 32 F.3d 19, 25 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Monks v. General Elec. Co., 919 F.2d 1189, 1192 (6th Cir. 1990) ; Cabrales v. Los Angeles, 864 F.2d 1454, 1460 (9th Cir. 1988) ; Merit Motors v. Chrysler Corp., 569 F.2d 666, 673 (D.C. Cir. 1977) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Mid-State Fertilizer Co. v. Exchange Nat. Bank of Chicago, 877 F.2d 1333, 1339 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n28)Footnote 28. Russell v. Acme-Evans Co., 51 F.3d 64, 67 (7th Cir. 1995) ; Mack v. United States, 814 F.2d 120, 124-125 (2d Cir. 1987) ; Camfield Tires v. Michelin Tire Corp., 719 F.2d 1361, 1364 (8th Cir. 1983) ; Kennett-Murray Corp. v. Bone, 622 F.2d 887, 893 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Darnell v. Target Stores, 16 F.3d 174, 176-177 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Trans-Orient Marine Corp. v. Star Trading & Marine, Inc., 925 F.2d 566, 572 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h).

(n31)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h).

144 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.14

§ 5.14 Using Discovery Materials in Summary Judgment Motionsn1

[1] Rule 56 Authorizes Use of Discovery Materials

Depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with affidavits, may be used to support a motion for summary judgment. n2

[2] Depositions

Statements made in depositions are competent summary judgment evidence. Rule 56(c) specifically allows the use of depositions to support or oppose a summary judgment motion. n3

[3] Interrogatory Responses

Responses to interrogatories may be used to support or oppose a motion for summary judgment. n4 Like affidavits, responses to interrogatories must be based on personal knowledge and contain admissible trial evidence; hearsay is not admissible. n5

The court will disregard portions of interrogatory responses that contain inadmissible or hearsay information, regardless of the probative nature of the evidence. Therefore, interrogatories containing hearsay will not be available to support or defeat a motion for summary judgment unless that evidence is independently supported by an admissible affidavit or deposition. n6

[4] Admissions

Admissions on file are among the types of competent summary judgment evidence listed in Rule 56(c). Admissions may take many forms, including, but not limited to: n7

- Admissions in response to a Rule 36 Request for Admissions
- Admissions made in interrogatory responses, depositions, or a party's pleadings
- Admissions made in written stipulations, as well as stipulations or statements made in open court

Certain types of admissions may have a substantial impact on summary judgment litigation. For example, admissions obtained pursuant to a Rule 36 Request for Admissions cannot be debated, and trump any conflicting evidence. n8

Other types of admissions that are deemed irrefutably established include: n9

- Default admissions, obtained when a party fails to respond or to timely respond to a Rule 36 Request for Admissions

- Judicial admissions, obtained during discovery or motion practice (i.e., uncontested statement of facts)

During the pendency of a summary judgment motion, the court may permit withdrawal or amendment of an admission made in response to a Rule 36 Request for Admissions only if: n10

- The presentation of the merits will be promoted by the withdrawal or amendment

- The party who obtained the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice that party in maintaining the action or defense on the merits

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsDiscovery Materials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.14[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(a); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) ; Cronin v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 46 F.3d 196, 202, 206 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Collier v. Budd Co., 66 F.3d 886, 892 (7th Cir. 1995) ; Bhan v. NME Hosps., Inc., 929 F.2d 1404, 1409 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Underberg v. United States, 362 F. Supp. 2d 1278, 1283 (D.N.M. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(a); 33(b)(4).

(n6)Footnote 6. Garside v. Osco Drug, Inc., 895 F.2d 46, 49-50 (1st Cir. 1990) ; Vidrine v. Enger, 752 F.2d 107, 110 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n7)Footnote 7. United States v. 2204 Barbara Lane, 960 F.2d 126, 129 (11th Cir. 1992) ; United States v. Kasuboski, 834 F.2d 1345, 1350 (7th Cir. 1987) ; Dukes v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 770 F.2d 545, 548-549 (5th Cir. 1985) ; Donovan v. Carl's Drug Co., 703 F.2d 650, 651 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b); see also AAA v. AAA Legal Clinic 930 F.2d 1117, 1120 (5th Cir. 1991) ; Appley v. West, 929 F.2d 1176, 1179-1180 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Tobey v. Extel/JWP, Inc., 985 F.2d 330, 333 (7th Cir. 1993) ; Donovan v. Carl's Drug Co., 703

F.2d 650, 651 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b); see also Nguygen v. CNA Corp., 44 F.3d 234, 242-243 (4th Cir. 1995) ; Hadley v. United States, 45 F.3d 1345, 1348 (9th Cir. 1995) ; American Auto. Ass'n. (Inc.) v. AAA Legal Clinic of Jefferson Crooke, P.C., 930 F.2d 1117, 1119 (5th Cir. 1991) ; Smith v. First Nat'l Bank of Atlanta, 837 F.2d 1575, 1577 (11th Cir. 1988) ; Donovan v. Carls Drug Co., 703 F.2d 650, 651-652 (2d Cir. 1983) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.15

§ 5.15 Moving for Partial Summary Judgmentn1

[1] Partial Summary Judgment May Be Granted

Summary judgment may be granted on all or any part of a claim. n2 Additionally, the court may enter a summary judgment which decides only the issue of liability and allows for a trial on the matter of damages. n3

[2] Procedure

The procedure for moving for a partial summary judgment is the same as moving for a summary judgment on the entire case.

Although a partial summary judgment decision is entered on less than the entire case, it is not a true judgment because it is not an appealable final order. n4 The court's grant of partial summary judgment, however, may establish the existence or nonexistence of certain facts which will be binding on the parties. n5

The following timing rules apply for motions for partial summary judgment unless a different time is set by local rule or the court orders otherwise: n6

- A party may move for partial summary judgment at any time until 30 days after the close of all discovery
- A written motion and notice of the hearing must be served at least 14 days before the time specified for the hearing
- Any opposing affidavit must be served at least 7 days before the hearing, unless the court permits service at another time

[3] Standard For Partial Summary Judgment

Courts employ the normal summary judgment standard in making partial summary judgment rulings resolving a claim or establishing facts. The failure to demonstrate that there is a genuine issue of material fact as it relates to a particular claim or aspect of a claim may therefore support a ruling eliminating that issue from the litigation. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentPartial Summary JudgmentsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), (g).

(n4)Footnote 4. Deimer v. Cincinnati Sub-Zero Products, 990 F.2d 342, 346 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1), 6(c)(2), 56(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Deimer v. Cincinnati Sub-Zero Products, 990 F.2d 342, 345 (7th Cir. 1993) .

146 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.16

§ 5.16 Hearing Is Not Required by Rule 56n1

Rule 56 does not require that a hearing to be held on a summary judgment motion; the opportunity to submit written evidence and argument satisfies the requirements of the rule. n2

Rule 43(c), authorizes that oral testimony may be used for summary judgment motions. n3 Oral testimony, however, is extremely rare and counsel should check both the local district court rules and the individual judge's rules with respect to hearings on summary judgment motions.

When the record contains an enormous mass of material, the court may decide that a hearing would allow it to assess the record more efficiently. n4 Complex factual determinations also present situations where oral testimony may be helpful in determining the existence of a factual dispute. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentHearingsOral ArgumentsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.15 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Sheinkopf v. Stone, 927 F.2d 1259 (1st Cir. 1991) ; Anchorage Assocs. v. Virgin Islands Bd. of Tax Review, 922 F.2d 168, 176 (3d Cir. 1990) (citing cases from various circuits).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 43(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Argus Inc. v. Eastman Kodak, 801 F.2d 38, 42 n.2 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. County of Oakland v. City of Berkeley, 742 F.2d 289, 297-298 (6th Cir. 1984) ; Utah v. Marsh, 740 F.2d 799, 801 (10th Cir. 1984) .

147 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.17

§ 5.17 Procedure When Rule 12(b)(6) Motion Is Converted Into Summary Judgment Motion

If, on a Rule 12(b) motion seeking to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion will be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56. All parties must be given a reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56. n1

The court must give sufficient notice to the opposing party and an opportunity to be heard. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see also Tri-Gen Inc. v. International Union of Operating Eng'rs, 433 F.3d 1024, 1029-1030 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f); Groden v. Random House Inc., 61 F.3d 1045, 1052 (2d Cir. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
B. Moving for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 5.18 through 5.29

[Reserved]

§§ 5.18[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.30

§ 5.30 Showing of Specific Facts Requiredn1

In order to defeat a summary judgment motion that is properly supported by affidavits, depositions, and documents as envisioned by Rule 56(c), the opposing party is required to come forward with materials setting forth specific facts showing there is a genuine issue of material fact to be tried. n2

The opponent must demonstrate that there are issues of fact that must be decided by a factfinder because they may reasonably be decided in favor of either party. n3

Opposition papers may consist of the same general types of evidence available to the moving party under Rule 56. This includes pleadings, affidavits, documentary evidence, electronically stored information, interrogatory responses, depositions, admissions on file and any other admissible evidence. n4 It is not enough for the opponent to rely on mere allegations or denials of the adverse party's pleading to overcome the motion. n5 Likewise, it is insufficient for the opponent to present unsworn documents, n6 or papers containing nothing more than the opponent's speculation. n7

A right to judgment as a matter of law is not established merely because the opposing party fails to respond. The court must first determine whether the movant has met its summary judgment burden. n8

However, if the moving party meets its initial summary judgment burden, it is quite likely that the court will enter a summary judgment in the absence of any opposition. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsAffidavits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.13[4] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. See National Amusements, Inc. v. Town of Dedham, 43 F.3d 731, 735 (1st Cir. 1995) ; Irby v. Bittick, 44 F.3d 949, 953 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) ; Tolle v. Carroll Touch Inc., 23 F.3d 174, 179 (7th Cir. 1994) ; United States v. Gilbert, 920 F.2d 878, 882-883 (11th Cir. 1991) ; Dister v. Continental Group, Inc., 859 F.2d 1108, 1114-1115 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A); see also Kehoe v. Anheuser-Busch, 995 F.2d 117 (8th Cir. 1993) (summary judgment reversed on basis of affidavits); see also §§ 5.13, 5.14.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) ; Campbell v. Sonat Offshore Drilling, Inc., 979 F.2d 1115, 1119 (5th Cir. 1992) ; Bald Mountain Park, Ltd. v. Oliver, 863 F.2d 1560, 1563 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 6. First Nat'l Life Ins. v. California Pac. Life, 876 F.2d 877, 881 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Slowiak v. Land O'Lakes, Inc., 987 F.2d 1293, 1295-1297 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Reed v. Bennett, 312 F.3d 1190, 1195 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(2); Hugueley v. Dresden Police Dep't, 469 F. Supp. 2d 507, 510 (W.D. Tenn. 2007) (defendants were entitled to summary judgment as matter of law when evidence presented refuted complaint allegations and plaintiff failed to respond to summary judgment motion).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.31

§ 5.31 Filing Timely Oppositionn1

[1] Filing Pursuant to Scheduling Order, Federal Rules, and Local Rules

The scheduling order typically will set forth filing deadlines for motions for summary judgment. n2

In general, a written motion and notice of the hearing must be served at least 14 days before the time specified for the hearing, and any opposing affidavit must be served at least 7 days before the hearing, unless the court permits service at another time. n3 Local rules may also set forth filing deadlines for motions for summary judgment.

[2] Moving for Extension of Time Within Which to Respond

If counsel is unable to submit a timely reply to a summary judgment motion, the prudent course is to request an extension of time within which to respond. n4 A history of timely filings is helpful in supporting a request for an extension of time within which to reply to a summary judgment motion. n5

A request for an extension of time within which to file a reply to a motion of summary judgment should be distinguished from a continuance pursuant to Rule 56(d) made when affidavits are unavailable. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.10[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1), (2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ruotolo v. IRS, 28 F.3d 6, 9 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 5.32.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.32

§ 5.32 Continuance for Further Discoveryn1

[1] Availability of Continuance

If a nonmovant shows by affidavit or declaration that, for specified reasons, it cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition, the court may do any of the following: n2

- Defer considering the motion or deny it
- Allow time to obtain affidavits or declarations or to take discovery
- Issue any other appropriate order

The district courts have a duty under Rule 56(d) to ensure that the parties have been given a reasonable opportunity to make their record complete before ruling on a motion for summary judgment. To this end, it has been held that Rule 56(d) should be liberally construed. n3

A party seeking a Rule 56(d) continuance is generally required to demonstrate due diligence both in pursuing discovery before the summary judgment motion is made, n4 and in pursuing the extension of time after the motion is made. n5

A court may reject a request for time to conduct further discovery, even if properly and timely made, if it deems the request to be based on speculation as to what potentially could be discovered. n6 A Rule 56(d) continuance is inappropriate if the information sought is already available to the summary judgment opponent. n7

[2] Submission of Affidavit Generally Required

A Rule 56(d) request for a continuance generally must be supported by an affidavit or declaration. n8 Some courts have developed detailed requirements for such affidavits. For example, the Second Circuit requires the party seeking further discovery to file an affidavit explaining: n9

- The nature of the uncompleted discovery (i.e., what facts are sought and how they are to be obtained)
- How those facts are reasonably expected to create a genuine issue of material fact

- What efforts have been made to obtain the facts
- Why the efforts were unsuccessful

The Third Circuit applies a similar three-part requirement. Specifically, the affidavit must specify: n10

- The particular information being sought
- How, if uncovered, the information would preclude summary judgment
- Why the information has not previously been obtained

[3] Demonstrating That Further Specified Discovery Will Defeat Summary Judgment Motion

A party seeking Rule 56(d) relief must demonstrate specifically how a continuance for further discovery will enable that party to rebut the assertions contained in the pending summary judgment motion. n11 The movant is required to state with some precision the material sought, and exactly how that material will help in opposing summary judgment. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.10[8] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. In re Deep Vein Thrombosis, 356 F. Supp. 2d 1055, 1060 (N.D. Cal. 2005) ; Elliott Assoc., L.P. v. Republic of Peru, 961 F. Supp. 83, 86 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Baker v. American Airlines, Inc., 430 F.3d 750, 756 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ayala-Gerena v. Bristol Myers-Squibb Co., 95 F.3d 86, 92 (1st Cir. 1996) ; see also Nidds v. Schindler Elevator Corp., 113 F.3d 912, 921 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Ortiz Cameron v. D.E.A., 959 F. Supp. 92, 93-94 (D.P.R. 1997) , aff'd on other grounds, 139 F.3d 4 (1st Cir. 1998) ; Mason Tenders Dist. Council Pension Fund v. Messera, 958 F. Supp. 869, 894 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) ; City of Rome v. Glanton, 958 F. Supp. 1026, 1039 (E.D. Pa. 1997) , aff'd mem., 133 F.3d 909 (3d Cir. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Mason Tenders Dist. Council Pension Fund v. Messera, 958 F. Supp. 869, 894 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) ; see also Paul Kadair, Inc. v. Sony Corp., 694 F.2d 1017, 1032 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Di Benedetto v. Pan Am World Serv., Inc., 359 F.3d 627, 630 (2d Cir. 2004) ; Gettings v. Building Laborers Local 310 Fringe Benefits Fund, 349 F.3d 300, 305 (6th Cir. 2003) ; Rivera-Flores v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Caribbean, 112 F.3d 9, 14 (1st Cir. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Burlington Coat Factory Warehouse Corp. v. Esprit de Corp., 769 F.2d 919, 926 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n10)Footnote 10. City of Rome v. Glanton, 958 F. Supp. 1026, 1039 (E.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Messina v. Krakower, 439 F.3d 755, 762 (D.C. Cir. 2006) ; Allen v. CSX Transp., Inc., 325 F.3d 768, 775-776 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Bliss v. Franco, 446 F.3d 1036, 1042 (10th Cir. 2006) ; Simmons Oil Corp. v. Tesoro Petroleum Corp., 86 F.3d 1138, 1144 (Fed. Cir. 1996) ; S.E.C. v. Spence & Green Chemical Co., 612 F.2d 896, 901 (5th Cir. 1980) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.33

§ 5.33 Contents of Opposition Papersn1

[1] Opponent Must Identify Specific Facts Creating Genuine Issue

The summary judgment opponent must prepare and present opposing papers that clearly and concisely illustrate the exact issue or issues presented by the case and detail the support within the record that support the opponent's position that a trial is necessary to resolve those material issues. n2

- Mere allegations or denials of the adverse party's pleadings are not sufficient n3
- The existence of a disputed fact alone without proving materiality will not defeat a motion for summary judgment n4
- Parties cannot create a disputed issue where none exists by submission of conflicting or contradictory statements in an attempt to defeat a summary judgment motion n5
- The summary judgment opponent cannot defeat the motion by merely relying on conclusory, speculative, immaterial, frivolous or non-credible evidence n6

A critical filing requirement for summary judgment motions commonly imposed by local rules is the requirement that the moving party submit a statement of facts that the moving party claims are undisputed, with citations to support in the record for each such fact listed in the statement. The opposing party is required to file a responsive statement as well, also with citations to the record. In virtually every court with such a requirement, the local rules provide that any fact supported by citation to the record that is not properly and timely opposed is deemed admitted. n7

A party may object that the material cited to support or dispute a fact cannot be presented in a form that would be admissible in evidence. n7.1

[2] Affidavits Generally Not Required

The summary judgment opponent may use any form of competent summary judgment evidence to establish the presence of a disputed material fact. These materials are specified in Rule 56(c), and include pleadings, discovery and disclosure materials, electronically stored information, and affidavits.

Affidavits may be used but are not required in opposing the summary judgment motion. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionSupporting MaterialsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.13[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); see also Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 249-250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Mack v. United States, 814 F.2d 120, 124-125 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See e.g., Resolution Trust Corp. v. Juergens, 965 F.2d 149, 152 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Gonzales v. Millers Casualty Ins. Co. of Texas, 923 F.2d 1417, 1419 (10th Cir. 1991) ; United States v. One Lot of U.S. Currency ($68,000), 927 F.2d 30, 32 (1st Cir. 1991) ; Knight v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 804 F.2d 9, 12 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Local Rules, D. Me., L.R. 56(b), (c), (f); Local Rules, D. Mass., L.R. 56.1; Local Rules, E.D.N.Y & S.D.N.Y., L. Civ. R. 56.1(a)(c); Local Rules, S.D. Fla., L.R. 7.5(A)(D); see also New York State Teamsters Conference Pension & Ret. Fund v. Express Servs., 426 F.3d 640, 648-649 (2d Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's, Second Circuit enforces local rules on required statements of undisputed facts because those rules relieve courts "of the onerous task of hunting through voluminous records without guidance from the parties").

(n8)Footnote 7.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(2).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c).

153 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.34

§ 5.34 When Burden Shifts to Opposing Partyn1

[1] After Movant Demonstrates No Material Facts Are in Dispute

Once the movant has demonstrated that no material facts are in dispute, the opposing party must set forth specific facts demonstrating that a genuine issue for trial exists in order to defeat the summary judgment motion. n2

[2] Specificity Required

The summary judgment opponent must cite to particular parts of materials in the record, including depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations (including those made for purposes of the motion only), admissions, interrogatory answers, or other materials; or show that the materials cited by the movant do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentBurdens of Production & ProofGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionSupporting Materials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.13 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) ; Campbell v. Sonat Offshore Drilling, Inc., 979 F.2d 1115, 1119 (5th Cir. 1992) ; Scherer v. Rockwell Int'l Corp., 975 F.2d 356, 360 (7th Cir. 1992) ; DeHorney v. Bank of America Nat. Trust and Sav., 879 F.2d 459, 465 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1).

154 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.35

§ 5.35 Filing Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment

The summary judgment opponent may cross-move for summary judgment. The fact that both sides have moved for summary judgment does not necessarily mean that summary judgment may properly be granted for either side; the court must evaluate each motion on its own merits. n1

The burden of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of fact does not shift when cross-motions are before the court. n2

Although Rule 56 does not require any waiting period before filing motions or cross-motions for summary judgment, scheduling orders are likely to supersede the rule provisions in most cases, deferring summary judgment motions until a stated time or establishing different deadlines. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionSupporting Materials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Association of Int'l Auto. Mfrs. Inc. v. Abrams, 84 F.3d 602, 611 (2d Cir. 1996) ; see also Otis Elevator Co. v. Factory Mut. Ins. Co., 353 F. Supp. 2d 274, 279 (D. Conn. 2005) ; Burlington Ins. Co. v. Okie Dokie, Inc., 398 F. Supp. 2d 147, 155 (D.D.C. 2005) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Eastman Mach. Co. v. United States, 841 F.2d 469, 473 (2d Cir. 1988) ; see also Cram v. Sun Ins. Office, Ltd., 375 F.2d 670 (4th Cir. 1967) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), Committee Note of 2008.

155 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.36

§ 5.36 Notice Required When Rule 12(b)(6) Motion Is Converted Into Summary Judgment Motion

If the court converts a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the court must give notice to the opposing party and an opportunity to be heard. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in Opposition

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Grodin v. Random House Inc., 61 F.3d 1045, 1052 (2d Cir. 1995) .

156 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.37

§ 5.37 Moving for Sanctionsn*

[1] Rule 56(h) Sanctions

If affidavits are submitted in bad faith or for the sole purpose of delay, opposing counsel may move for sanctions. The court may order the payment of expenses incurred by opposing counsel as a result of the offending affidavit, and may cite the offending party or counsel for contempt. n1

Rule 56(h) sanctions will not be imposed merely because an affidavit is inaccurate or misleading. Rather, the court must conclude that the affidavit's failings result from bad faith. n2

[2] Rule 11 Sanctions

Rule 11 provides for sanctions when a pleading, written motion, or other paper is presented:

- For an improper purpose n3
- That contains claims, defenses, or other legal contentions that are not warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument to change existing law or establish new law n4
- That contains allegations or factual contentions that do not have or are unlikely to have evidentiary support n5
- That contains denials of factual contentions that are not are warranted on the evidence n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsBad Faith MotionsLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h).

(n3)Footnote 2. Turner v. Baylor Richardson Med. Ctr., 476 F.3d 337, 349 (5th Cir. 2007) ; Fort Hill Builders, Inc. v. National Grange Mut. Ins. Co., 866 F.2d 11, 15-16 (1st Cir. 1989) ; Stewart v. RCA Corp., 790 F.2d 624, 632 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
C. Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 5.38 through 5.49

[Reserved]

§§ 5.38[Reserved]

158 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
D. Anticipating Court's Approach

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.50

§ 5.50 Required Determination: No Genuine Issue of Material Factn*

Summary judgment may only be granted if the court determines that there is no genuine issue of material fact. n1 Substantive law identifies which facts are material; only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the case under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment. A material fact is "genuine" if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party. n2

The determination of whether a given factual dispute requires submission to the factfinder is guided by the substantive evidentiary standard that applies in the case; for example, the clear and convincing standard applies in a libel action against a public figure. n3

The court should state on the record the reasons for granting or denying the motion. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsGenuine DisputesCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsMateriality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. DeMars v. O'Flynn, 287 F. Supp. 2d 230, 240 (W.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 254, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
D. Anticipating Court's Approach

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.51

§ 5.51 Required Showing Based on Burden of Proof at Trialn*

Rule 56 mandates the entry of summary judgment, on motion after adequate time for discovery, against a party who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. n1

Failure of the movant to establish proof on each and every essential element of its claim will preclude the entry of summary judgment in its favor. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentBurdens of Production & ProofGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentBurdens of Production & ProofMovantsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsGenuine DisputesCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsMateriality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.13 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) ; FDIC v. Giammettei, 34 F.3d 51, 54 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Tidmore Oil v. BP Oil Co./Gulf Products Div., 932 F.2d 1384, 1387-1388 (11th Cir. 1991) .

160 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
D. Anticipating Court's Approach

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.52

§ 5.52 Determination Generally Does Not Involve Fact Findingn*

Credibility assessments, choices between conflicting versions of the events, and the weighing of evidence are matters for the jury, and not for the court on a motion for summary judgment. n1

In deciding a motion for summary judgment, the court must be careful not to overstep its bounds by resolving issues of fact, whether through assessing the credibility of witnesses, weighing evidence, or through the inference of fact. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentEvidenceCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsNeed for Trial

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fischl v. Armitage, 128 F.3d 50, 55 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
D. Anticipating Court's Approach

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.53

§ 5.53 Evidence Evaluated in Light Most Favorable to Opponentn1

The court is required to view the evidence in the light most favorable to the summary judgment opponent, and to draw all permissible inferences in favor of that party. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentEvidenceCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fischl v. Armitage, 128 F.3d 50, 55 (2d Cir. 1997) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
D. Anticipating Court's Approach

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.54

§ 5.54 Failing to Properly Support or Address a Fact

If a party fails to properly support an assertion of fact or fails to properly address another party's assertion of fact as required by Rule 56(c), the court may: n1

- Give an opportunity to properly support or address the fact
- Consider the fact undisputed for purposes of the motion
- Grant summary judgment if the motion and supporting materials--including the facts considered undisputed--show that the movant is entitled to it
- Issue any other appropriate order

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentBurdens of Production & ProofMovantsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentStandardsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
D. Anticipating Court's Approach

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.55

§ 5.55 Granting Less Than all the Requested Relief

If the court does not grant all the relief requested by the motion, it may enter an order stating any material fact--including an item of damages or other relief--that is not genuinely in dispute and treating the fact as established in the case. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemedies

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(g).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
D. Anticipating Court's Approach

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 5.56. through 5.59

[Reserved]

§§ 5.56.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
E. Appealing Decision on Motion

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.60

§ 5.60 Judgment Must Be Finaln1

[1] What Is Final Judgment

A judgment is considered final when the trial court has conclusively adjudicated all the issues before it and there remains nothing left for it to do but execute the order. n2

[2] Appealing Denial of Motion

A denial of summary judgment is a nonfinal judgment as it does not resolve the case. Accordingly, a denial of summary judgment is not automatically appealable. n3 However, an order denying summary judgment is appealable when it is coupled with a grant of summary judgment to the opposing party. n4

[3] Appealing Grant of Motion

A granting of summary judgment as to the entire case is a final ruling, and is reviewable on appeal. n5 The appellate court reviews a district court's grant of summary judgment de novo, construing all evidence in connection with the motion in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewAppealabilityCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewStandards of ReviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.41 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Catlin v. United States, 324 U.S. 229, 233, 65 S. Ct. 631, 89 L. Ed. 911 (1945) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Kutner Buick, Inc. v. American Motors Corp., 868 F.2d 614, 619 (3d Cir. 1989) ; Akerman v.

Oryx Communications, Inc., 810 F.2d 336, 339 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See American & Foreign Ins. Co. v. Sequatchie Concrete Servs., 441 F.3d 341, 344 (6th Cir. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 5. SCS Communications, Inc. v. Herrick Co., 360 F.3d 329, 338 (2d Cir. 2004) ; Aaro, Inc. v. Daewoo Int'l (Am.) Corp., 755 F.2d 1398, 1401 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Horvath v. Westport Library Ass'n, 362 F.3d 147, 151 (2d Cir. 2004) .

166 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
E. Appealing Decision on Motion

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.61

§ 5.61 Collateral Order Exceptionn1

A collateral order is an immediately appealable final decision under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, even though the district court may have entered it long before the case has ended, provided the order does all of the following: n2

- Conclusively determines the disputed question
- Resolves an important issue completely separate from the merits of the action
- Will be effectively unreviewable on appeal from the final judgment

The practitioner should note that a defendant who has asserted the defense of qualified immunity and whose motion for summary judgment is denied may be permitted to bring an appeal under the collateral order doctrine. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewAppealabilityCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewStandards of ReviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionCollateral Order Doctrine

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.41 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Johnson v. Jones, 515 U.S. 304, 115 S. Ct. 2151, 2154, 132 L. Ed. 2d 238 (1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 528, 105 S. Ct. 2806, 86 L. Ed. 2d 411 (1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
E. Appealing Decision on Motion

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.62

§ 5.62 Appealing Partial Summary Judgment Under Rule 54(b)

An order granting partial summary judgment is interlocutory. n1 Accordingly it is not a final judgment and is not appealable. n2

However, counsel can request certification for appeal under Rule 54(b) under the following circumstances: when more than one claim for relief is presented in an action, whether as a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, or when multiple parties are involved, the court may direct the entry of a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all of the claims or parties only upon an express determination that there is no just reason for delay and upon an express direction for the entry of judgment. n3 Without the court's certification, a partial summary judgment is merely interlocutory. n4

Note that a partial summary judgment that dismisses a claim against one party but neither the claim nor the party is completely dismissed from the action is not eligible for entry of final judgment under Rule 54(b). n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewAppealabilityCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewStandards of ReviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentPartial Summary Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Chateatgay Corp. 922 F.2d 86, 89-90 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Steve's Homemade Ice Cream, Inc., v. Stewart, 907 F.2d 364, 365-366 (2d Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
E. Appealing Decision on Motion

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 5.63 through 5.99

[Reserved]

§§ 5.63[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
F. Forms

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.100

§ 5.100 Notice of Motion for Summary Judgmentn1

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Summary Judgment

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

Notice of Motion for Summary Judgment

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 56(c), for summary judgment in favor of [party designation and name of moving party], on the ground there is no genuine issue of material fact, and that [party designation and name of moving party] is entitled to judgment as a matter of law; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the annexed Statement of Material Facts, the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion for use by a party who seeks summary judgment.

A party seeking to recover on a claim, or a party against whom a claim, is asserted, may move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in the party's favor on all or any part thereof. n2

Summary judgment should be granted if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with any affidavits, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n3

[3] Supporting and Opposing Affidavits or Declarations

Any supporting and opposing affidavits or declarations must: n4

- Be made on personal knowledge
- Set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence
- Show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein

A party asserting that a fact cannot be genuinely disputed, or conversely that a fact is genuinely disputed, must support the assertion by either of the following means: n5

- Citing to particular parts of materials in the record, including depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations (including those made for purposes of the motion only), admissions, interrogatory answers, or other materials
- Showing that the materials cited do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact

[4] Statement of Material Facts

Local court rules often require the moving party to annex a separate short statement of material facts to the moving papers, in addition to the requirements of Rule 56. n6

[5] Sanctions for Affidavits Made in Bad Faith

Should it appear to the satisfaction of the court at any time that any of the affidavits presented pursuant to Rule 56 are presented in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay, the court will order the party employing them to pay to the other party the amount of the reasonable expenses that the filing of the affidavits caused the other party to incur, including reasonable attorney's fees. Any offending party or attorney may be adjudged guilty of contempt. n7

[6] Timing of Motion

The scheduling order typically will set forth filing deadlines for motions for summary judgment. n8 Unless a different time is set by local rule or the court orders otherwise, a party may file a motion for summary judgment at any time until 30 days after the close of all discovery. n9 In general, a written motion and notice of the hearing must be served at least 14 days before the time specified for the hearing, and any opposing affidavit must be served at least 7 days before the hearing, unless the court permits service at another time. n10 Local rules may also set forth filing deadlines for motions for summary judgment.

[7] Service of Motion

A summary judgment motion must be served at least 14 days prior to the date of the hearing on the motion. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. This sample motion for summary judgment was furnished courtesy of James P. Collins, Jr. and William D. Naeve, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California. The names of all parties and opposing counsel have been changed.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., E.D.N.Y. & S.D.N.Y., L.R. 56.1.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h); see also Ch. 8A, Sanctions.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1), (2).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
F. Forms

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.101

§ 5.101 Notice of Motion for Partial Summary Judgment

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Partial Summary Judgment

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

Notice of Motion for Partial Summary Judgment

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 56(c), for summary judgment in favor of [party designation and name of moving party] with respect to the issue of [specify, e.g., liability on a specified cause of action], on the ground there is no genuine issue of material fact with respect to this matter, and that [party designation and name of moving party] is entitled to judgment in [its/his/her] favor on this issue as a matter of law; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the annexed Statement of Material Facts, the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion for use by a party who seeks partial summary judgment with respect to specified issues in the case.

A party seeking to recover on a claim or a party against whom a claim is asserted, may move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in the party's favor on all or any part thereof. n1

An interlocutory summary judgment may be rendered on the issue of liability alone, even though there is a genuine issue as to the amount of damages. n2

Summary judgment should be granted if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with any affidavits, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n3

[3] Supporting and Opposing Affidavits or Declarations

Any supporting and opposing affidavits must: n4

- Be made on personal knowledge
- Set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence
- Show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein

A party asserting that a fact cannot be genuinely disputed, or conversely that a fact is genuinely disputed, must support the assertion by either of the following means: n5

- Citing to particular parts of materials in the record, including depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations (including those made for purposes of the motion only), admissions, interrogatory answers, or other materials
- Showing that the materials cited do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact

[4] Statement of Material Facts

Local rules often require the moving party to annex a separate short statement of material facts to the moving papers, in addition to the requirements of Rule 56. n6

[5] Sanctions Based on Affidavits Made in Bad Faith

Should it appear to the satisfaction of the court at any time that any of the affidavits presented pursuant to Rule 56 are presented in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay, the court will order the party employing them to pay to the other party the amount of the reasonable expenses that the filing of the affidavits caused the other party to incur, including reasonable attorney's fees. Any offending party or attorney may be adjudged guilty of contempt. n7

[6] Timing of Motion

The scheduling order typically will set forth filing deadlines for motions for summary judgment. n8 Unless a different time is set by local rule or the court orders otherwise, a party may file a motion for summary judgment at any time until 30 days after the close of all discovery. n9 In general, a written motion and notice of the hearing must be served at least 14 days before the time specified for the hearing, and any opposing affidavit must be served at least 7 days before the hearing, unless the court permits service at another time. n10 Local rules may also set forth filing deadlines for motions for summary judgment.

[7] Service of Motion

A summary judgment motion must be served at least 14 days prior to the date of the hearing on the motion. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See E.D.N.Y. & S.D.N.Y., L.R. 56.1.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h); see also Ch. 8A, Sanctions.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1), (2).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
F. Forms

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.102

§ 5.102 Statement of Material Facts

[1] FORM

Statement of Material Facts

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

Statement of Material Facts

In conjunction with the Motion for Summary Judgment of the [Plaintiff/Defendant], [name], against the [Defendant/Plaintiff], [name], and in compliance with Local Rule [number], Local Rules of the United States District Court for the [name] District of [state], the [Plaintiff/Defendant] [name] contends there is no genuine issue as to the following facts:

1. [Set forth facts]

2. [Set forth additional facts, using as many additional paragraphs as necessary]

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of statement of material facts required by local court rule to be annexed to a motion for summary judgment. The district courts generally require the moving party to annex a separate short statement of material facts to the moving papers, in addition to the requirements of Rule 56. n1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., E.D.N.Y. & S.D.N.Y., L.R. 56.1.

172 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Motions for Summary Judgment
F. Forms

1-5 Federal Litigation Guide § 5.103

§ 5.103 Request for Continuance Pursuant to Rule 56(d)

[1] FORM

Response in Support of Rule 56(d) Continuance

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

Request for Continuance Pursuant to Rule 56(d)

TO [party designation and name of moving party] AND ITS ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

[Plaintiff/Defendant], [name], by [its/his/her] attorneys, submits this response to the motion of [Defendant/Plaintiff], [name], for summary judgment, and requests a continuance of the motion pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d) as follows:

1. The following genuine issues of material fact exist in the above-entitled case: [describe genuine issues of material fact].

2. [Name and address] can attest to the following facts: [describe facts supporting existence of genuine issues of material fact, and identify corresponding issues of fact].

3. [Plaintiff/Defendant], [name], has attempted to [obtain the affidavit of (name), or serve (name) with a notice of deposition to obtain testimony, or other discovery attempt] to this effect, but has been unsuccessful in doing so because [state reasons].

4. [Plaintiff/Defendant], [name], reasonably expects to [obtain an affidavit to this effect from (name), or serve a notice of deposition on (name), or other discovery] by [date].

WHEREFORE, [Plaintiff/Defendant], [name], requests that the court continue the hearing on motion for summary judgment of [party designation and name of moving party] until such time as [Plaintiff/Defendant] has [obtained the affidavit or taken the deposition, or obtained other discovery] described above.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a response to a motion for summary judgment to request a continuance of the hearing date in order to obtain discovery in support of opposition to the motion.

[3] Continuance of Hearing Date

Should it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that the party cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts essential to justify the party's opposition, the court may do the following: n1

- Defer considering the motion or deny it
- Allow time to obtain affidavits or declarations or to take discovery
- Issue any other appropriate order

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide 6.syn

§ 6.syn Synopsis to Chapter 6: Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute

§ 6.01 Voluntarily Dismissing Action or Parties
[1] Rule 41(a) Applies to Dismissal of Parties or Entire Action
[2] Three Methods of Voluntary Dismissal
[3] Rule 41 Applies to Dismissal of Counterclaims, Cross-Claims and Third-Party Claims

§ 6.02 Effect of Voluntary Dismissal
[1] Immediate Termination
[2] Voluntary Dismissal Generally Without Prejudice
[3] Voluntary Dismissal With Prejudice If Claim Previously Dismissed
[4] Costs of Previously Dismissed Action

§ 6.03 Drafting Notice of Voluntary Dismissal
[1] Deadline for Filing Notice of Voluntary Dismissal
[2] Notice of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Served and Filed
[3] Content of Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

§ 6.04 Drafting Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal
[1] Use of Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal
[2] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Requires Signatures of All Parties Who Have Appeared
[3] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Filed
[4] Content of Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

§ 6.05 Actions Which May Not Be Voluntarily Dismissed Without Court Approval

§ 6.06 Consideration of Collateral Issues Following Voluntary Dismissal

§ 6.07 CHECKLIST: Obtaining Voluntary Dismissal by Filing Notice of Dismissal

§ 6.08 CHECKLIST: Obtaining Voluntary Dismissal by Filing Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

§§ 6.09 through 6.19 [Reserved]

§ 6.20 Situations in Which Court Order Is Required for Voluntary Dismissal

§ 6.21 Decision Whether to Grant Motion for Voluntary Dismissal Is Within Discretion of Court
[1] Motion Granted Only If No Undue Prejudice to Opposing Party
[2] Evaluating Prejudice to Opposing Party

§ 6.22 Imposing Terms and Conditions of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order
[1] Purpose of Terms and Conditions Is to Protect Opposing Party From Prejudice
[2] Typical Terms and Conditions of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

§ 6.23 Procedure for Filing Motion for Voluntary Dismissal or Opposition to Motion

§ 6.24 Effect of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order
[1] Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order Generally Without Prejudice
[2] Costs of Previously Dismissed Action
[3] Effect of Voluntary Dismissal With Prejudice
[4] Consideration of Collateral Issues Following Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

§ 6.25 Postjudgment Dismissal

§§ 6.26 through 6.29 [Reserved]

§ 6.30 Grounds for Involuntary Dismissal

§ 6.31 Court May Dismiss Claims on Motion or Sua Sponte

§ 6.32 Effect of Involuntary Dismissal
[1] Involuntary Dismissal Generally With Prejudice
[2] Involuntary Dismissal Without Prejudice for Lack of Jurisdiction, Improper Venue, or Failure to Join a Party

§ 6.33 Factors Governing Involuntary Dismissal

§ 6.34 Likelihood of Prejudice to Opposing Party
[1] Prejudice Must Be Considered by Court
[2] Prejudice May Be Presumed as Matter of Law
[3] Need to Show Actual Prejudice Increases Where Delay Is More Moderate

§ 6.35 Consideration of Less Drastic Sanctions

§ 6.36 Procedure for Filing or Opposing Motion for Involuntary Dismissal

§ 6.37 CHECKLIST: Obtaining or Opposing Involuntary Dismissal

§§ 6.38 through 6.99 [Reserved]

§ 6.100 Notice of Voluntary Dismissal
[1] Form
Notice of Voluntary Dismissal
[2] Use of Form
[3] Deadline for Filing of Notice of Voluntary Dismissal
[4] Content of Notice of Voluntary Dismissal
[5] Notice of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Served and Filed

§ 6.101 Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal
[1] Form

Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal
[2] Use of Form
[3] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Requires Signatures of All Parties Who Have Appeared
[4] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Filed

§ 6.102 Notice of Motion for Voluntary Dismissal
[1] Form
Notice of Motion for Voluntary Dismissal
[2] Use of Form
[3] Situations in Which Court Order Is Required for Voluntary Dismissal
[4] Motion Granted Only If No Undue Prejudice to Opposing Party
[5] Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order Generally Without Prejudice

§ 6.103 Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Prosecute, or Failure to Comply With Court Order or Federal Rules
[1] Form
Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Prosecute, or Failure to Comply With Court Order or Federal Rules
[2] Use of Form
[3] Grounds for Involuntary Dismissal
[4] Court May Dismiss Claims on Motion or Sua Sponte
[5] Involuntary Dismissal Generally With Prejudice

2 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses voluntary and involuntary dismissal of claims and parties under Rule 41 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The chapter covers the following topics:

- Actions and parties which may be voluntarily dismissed without court approval
- Drafting notice of voluntary dismissal
- Drafting stipulation of voluntary dismissal
- Effect of voluntary dismissal
- Consideration of collateral issues following voluntary dismissal
- Voluntary dismissal by court order when dismissal by notice or stipulation is unavailable
- Effect of voluntary dismissal by court order
- Grounds for involuntary dismissal
- Procedure for filing or opposing motion for involuntary dismissal
- Effect of involuntary dismissal

The chapter contains the following forms:

- Notice of Voluntary Dismissal
- Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal
- Notice of Motion for Voluntary Dismissal

- Notice of Motion for Failure to Prosecute or Failure to Comply With Court Order or Federal Rules

For expanded coverage of voluntary dismissals and dismissals for failure to prosecute, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 41, Dismissal of Actions (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.01

§ 6.01 Voluntarily Dismissing Action or Parties

[1] Rule 41(a) Applies to Dismissal of Parties or Entire Action

Although Rule 41(a) speaks of voluntary dismissal of an action, a voluntary dismissal may be taken against specific parties, provided all claims are dismissed as against each party affected. n1

A plaintiff wishing to eliminate specific claims or issues from the action should amend the complaint under Rule 15(a), rather than dismiss under Rule 41(a), n2 although several courts have suggested the difference is technical or immaterial. n3

Because Rule 41(a) permits dismissal of particular parties, a dispensable nondiverse party may be dismissed to preserve the court's diversity jurisdiction provided the party has not yet served an answer or motion for summary judgment. n4

[2] Three Methods of Voluntary Dismissal

Rule 41(a) establishes three distinct methods of voluntary dismissal of an action. n5

The first two methods of voluntary dismissal are as of right under Rule 41(a)(1), n6 which permits dismissal by filing a notice of dismissal or a stipulation of dismissal. The third method of dismissal, n7 addressed in Rule 41(a)(2), requires a motion for leave to dismiss by order of the court. n8

[3] Rule 41 Applies to Dismissal of Counterclaims, Cross-Claims and Third-Party Claims

The provisions of Rule 41 apply to the dismissal of counterclaims, cross-claims, and third-party claims. A voluntary dismissal by the claimant alone pursuant to a notice of dismissal must be made before a responsive pleading is served, or if there is no responsive pleading, before the introduction of evidence at the trial or hearing. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Gobbo Farms & Orchards v. Poole Chem. Co. 81 F.3d 122, 123 (10th Cir. 1996) ; General Signal Corp. v. MCI Telcoms. Corp., 66 F.3d 1500, 1513 (9th Cir. 1995) ; Gronholz v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 836 F.2d 515, 518 (Fed. Cir. 1987) ; Exxon Corp. v. Maryland Casualty Co., 599 F.2d 659, 661 (5th Cir. 1979) ; Management Investors v. United Mine Workers of Am., 610 F.2d 384, 394-395 (6th Cir. 1979) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Skinner v. First Am. Bank of Virginia, 64 F.3d 659 (4th Cir. 1995) (citing Moore's); Ethridge v. Harbor House Restaurant, 861 F.2d 1389, 1392 (9th Cir. 1988) (citing Moore's); Gronholz v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 836 F.2d 515, 518 (Fed. Cir. 1987) ; Management Investors v. United Mine Workers of Am., 610 F.2d 384, 394-395 (6th Cir. 1979) (citing Moore's); Vogel v. American Kiosk Mgmt., 371 F. Supp. 2d 122, 129 (D. Conn. 2005) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Wakefield v. Northern Telecom, Inc., 769 F.2d 109, 114 (2d Cir. 1985) ; Mechmetals Corp. v. Telex Computer Prods., Inc., 709 F.2d 1287, 1294 (9th Cir. 1983) ; Wilson v. Crouse-Hinds Co., 556 F.2d 870, 873 (8th Cir. 1977) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Guigliano v. Danbury Hosp., 396 F. Supp. 2d 220, 224 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 396-397, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359, 376 (1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See §§ 6.03, 6.04.

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 6.20.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.02

§ 6.02 Effect of Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Immediate Termination

A notice of voluntary dismissal is self-executing, and upon filing immediately terminates the action. n1 Once the action is terminated, the district court lacks the authority to issue further orders addressing the merits of the case. n2 Moreover, because a Rule 41(a)(1) dismissal has the same effect as if the suit had never been filed, and any orders issued in the dismissed action also have no effect. n3

[2] Voluntary Dismissal Generally Without Prejudice

A notice or stipulation of voluntary dismissal is without prejudice, unless the notice or stipulation states otherwise. n4 A dismissal without prejudice means that the plaintiff may sue again on the same claim. n5

Although a voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1) may be without prejudice, a subsequent action may be barred as a practical matter, since voluntary dismissal without prejudice of an action does not ordinarily toll the statute of limitations. n6

[3] Voluntary Dismissal With Prejudice If Claim Previously Dismissed

A notice of voluntary dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits if the claimant has previously dismissed in any federal or state court an action based on or including the same claim. This "second dismissal rule" applies only to notices of voluntary dismissal, and not to stipulations of voluntary dismissal. n7

[4] Costs of Previously Dismissed Action

If a claimant who has once voluntarily dismissed an action in any court commences an action based on or including the same claim against the same opposing party, the court may order the claimant to pay the costs of the action previously dismissed. Moreover, the court may stay the proceedings in the second action until the claimant complies with the order. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersDismissals With PrejudiceCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersDismissals Without PrejudiceCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Janssen v. Harris, 321 F.3d 998, 1000 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Matthews, 395 F.3d 477, 482 (4th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Harvey Specialty & Supply, Inc. v. Anson Flowline Equip., Inc., 434 F.3d 320, 324 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1); see Concha v. London, 62 F.3d 1493, 1506 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Brown v. Hartshorne Public School Dist. No. 1, 926 F.2d 959, 961 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Rodriguez v. Holmes, 963 F.2d 799, 804-805 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(d).

5 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.03

§ 6.03 Drafting Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Deadline for Filing Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

A notice of voluntary dismissal may be filed by the plaintiff at any time before the defendant has served an answer or a motion for summary judgment. Likewise, a notice of dismissal may be filed by a claimant who has asserted a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim at any time before a responsive pleading is served, or if there is no responsive pleading, at any time before the introduction of evidence at the trial or hearing. n1

[2] Notice of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Served and Filed

Provided a notice of dismissal is an appropriate means of dismissing a claim or party, n2 filing the notice effects the dismissal. No court order is required. n3 A copy of the notice of voluntary dismissal must be served on each of the parties. n4

[3] Content of Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

Rule 41(a) does not prescribe the precise form the notice of dismissal must take. The notice of dismissal should state, as appropriate, whether claims, counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims are being dismissed.

The notice of dismissal may specify that the dismissal is effective against less than all parties, and in that case, the notice should identify the parties being dismissed. The notice of dismissal should specify that dismissal is without prejudice, unless there is some reason for dismissing with prejudice. n5

The notice of dismissal may not include any conditions in it. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNotices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), 41(c); see also In re Microsoft Corp. Antitrust Litig., 332 F. Supp. 2d 890, 895 (D. Md. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See [1], above.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 6.02.

(n6)Footnote 6. See e.g., Hyde Constr. Co. v. Koehring Co., 388 F.2d 501, 507 (10th Cir. 1968) .

6 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.04

§ 6.04 Drafting Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Use of Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

A stipulation of voluntary dismissal is typically used when the time for filing a notice of dismissal has lapsed; for example, either the defendant has served an answer or motion for summary judgment, or with respect to a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, a responsive pleading has been served, or evidence has already been introduced at the trial or hearing. n1

The parties have an absolute right to a dismissal by stipulation, and the court is not permitted to impose terms or conditions, so that the court's role in resolving the matter is minimal. n2

[2] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Requires Signatures of All Parties Who Have Appeared

A stipulation of voluntary dismissal must be signed by all of the parties who have appeared in the action. n3 For discussion of types of actions that may not be voluntarily dismissed, see § 6.05.

[3] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Filed

A stipulation of dismissal is not self-executing. The stipulation must be filed with the court clerk to effectuate the dismissal, although an oral stipulation in open court may effectuate dismissal. n4

[4] Content of Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

A stipulation of voluntary dismissal should include: n5

- A statement that the parties stipulate to voluntary dismissal of the action or of specific parties
- Provision concerning costs, fees, or other conditions of the stipulation

If dismissal is sought in connection with a settlement, the stipulation of voluntary dismissal may include a statement incorporating the terms of the settlement. Counsel should consider whether the terms of the settlement should be part of the public record. In the absence of an independent basis for jurisdiction, the federal court may enforce the settlement agreement only if the dismissal order specifically reserves such authority or incorporates the terms of settlement. n6

A stipulated voluntary dismissal does not remove the district court's jurisdiction to impose fees and costs pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1927 for unreasonably and vexatiously multiplying the proceedings. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 6.03[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bryant v. MV Transp., Inc., 231 F.R.D. 480, 481 (E.D. Va. 2005) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), (c); see also GMAC Commercial Mortgage Corp. v. LaSalle Bank Nat'l Assoc., 213 F.R.D. 150, 150-151 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See e.g., Role v. Eureka Lodge No. 434, 402 F.3d 314, 318 (2d Cir. 2005) ; Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 51 (4th Cir. 1995) ; Morris v. City of Hobart, 39 F.3d 1105, 1109 (10th Cir. 1994) ; Broadcast Music, Inc. v. M.T.S. Enterprises, Inc., 811 F.2d 278, 279 280 n.1 (5th Cir. 1987) ; Eitel v. McCool, 782 F.2d 1470, 1472 n.3 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 511 U.S. 375, 381-382, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) ; Blue Cross & Blue Shield Ass'n v. American Express Co., 225 F.R.D. 230, 232 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Macheska v. Thomson Learning, 347 F. Supp. 2d 169, 179 (M.D. Pa. 2004) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.05

§ 6.05 Actions Which May Not Be Voluntarily Dismissed Without Court Approval

The following types of actions may not be voluntarily dismissed without court approval:

- Class actions n1
- Shareholder derivative suits n2
- Actions in which a receiver has been appointed n3
- Any action for which court approval is required by federal statute prior to dismissal n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e), 41(a)(1); Baker v. America's Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 58 F.3d 321, 324 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), 66.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

8 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.06

§ 6.06 Consideration of Collateral Issues Following Voluntary Dismissal

Even after an action or party has been voluntarily dismissed pursuant to a notice of dismissal, the district court may consider independent, collateral issues, n1 such as availability of attorney's fees n2 or sanctions, n3 including Rule 11 sanctions. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 394-395, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Baumgartner v. Harrisburg Hous. Auth., 21 F.3d 541, 544 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Bolivar v. Pocklington, 975 F.2d 28, 31 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bolivar v. Pocklington, 975 F.2d 28, 31 (1st Cir. 1992) ; Schering Corp. v. Vitarine Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 889 F.2d 490, 494-496 (3d Cir. 1989) ; Szabo Food Serv. Inc. v. Canteen Corp., 823 F.2d 1073, 1076-1079 (7th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 901 (1988) ; Greenberg v. Sala, 822 F.2d 882, 885 (9th Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.07

§ 6.07 CHECKLIST: Obtaining Voluntary Dismissal by Filing Notice of Dismissal

☐ Voluntary dismissal available by filing notice of dismissal with clerk before: n1

- ☐ Defendant serves answer or motion for summary judgment.
- ☐ Service of responsive pleading to counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, or if no responsive pleading, before introduction of evidence at trial or hearing.

☐ Notice of voluntary dismissal is without prejudice unless: n2

- ☐ Notice states otherwise.
- ☐ Plaintiff previously voluntarily dismissed action based on or including same claim in any court.

☐ Notice of voluntary dismissal should contain statement: n3

- ☐ Identifying actions or parties dismissed.
- ☐ That dismissal is without prejudice, if appropriate.
- ☐ Notice of dismissal must be served on all parties. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 6.03[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 6.02.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 6.02.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.03[2].

10 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.08

§ 6.08 CHECKLIST: Obtaining Voluntary Dismissal by Filing Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

☐ Voluntary dismissal available by filing with court clerk stipulation of voluntary dismissal signed by all parties appearing in the action. n1

☐ Stipulation is without prejudice unless it states otherwise. n2

☐ Stipulation should include:

- ☐ Statement that parties stipulate to voluntary dismissal of action or party.
- ☐ Statement that dismissal is without prejudice, if appropriate.
- ☐ Incorporation of settlement terms, if dismissal is in conjunction with settlement and parties want court to be able to enforce terms.
- ☐ Provisions concerning costs, fees, or other conditions.

☐ Oral stipulation in open court may effectuate dismissal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesDismissals Without PrejudiceCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 6.04[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 6.02[1].

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
A. Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 6.09 through 6.19

[Reserved]

§§ 6.09[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
B. Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order When Dismissal by Notice or Stipulation Unavailable

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.20

§ 6.20 Situations in Which Court Order Is Required for Voluntary Dismissal

A court order is required any time a claimant seeks to dismiss an action but the time within which a notice of dismissal may be filed has expired, and the claimant is unable to obtain a stipulation of dismissal from all parties. n1

Thus, a court order is required if: n2

- The plaintiff seeks to dismiss the action or a defendant, but another defendant has already served an answer or motion for summary judgment, and the plaintiff is unable to obtain a stipulation of dismissal from all parties n3

- The claimant seeks to dismiss a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, but a responsive pleading has been served, or evidence has already been introduced at the trial or hearing, and the claimant is unable to obtain a stipulation of dismissal from all parties n4

- The action is of a type that may not be dismissed without court order n5

If a defendant has asserted a counterclaim prior to service on the defendant of the plaintiff's motion to voluntarily dismiss, the court is not permitted to dismiss the action over the defendant's objection, unless the counterclaim can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2); see also §§ 6.03, 6.04.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), (a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. See §§ 6.03, 6.04.

(n4)Footnote 4. See §§ 6.03, 6.04.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 6.05.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
B. Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order When Dismissal by Notice or Stipulation Unavailable

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.21

§ 6.21 Decision Whether to Grant Motion for Voluntary Dismissal Is Within Discretion of Court

[1] Motion Granted Only If No Undue Prejudice to Opposing Party

Voluntary dismissal by court order pursuant to Rule 41(a)(2) is not a matter of right, but rather is at the court's discretion. A district court may grant such dismissal only if the opposing party will not be unduly prejudiced, and then only on terms and conditions that protect the opposing party from any unfairness. n1

Some courts have held that the court lacks discretion to deny a motion under Rule 41(a)(2) when the plaintiff requests that the dismissal be made with prejudice, because the defendant receives all the relief that could have been obtained after a full trial and is protected from future litigation by the doctrine of res judicata. n2 However, not all courts have adopted that rule. n3 When the dismissal with prejudice does not dispose of the entire litigation, the court may inquire as to whether the remaining parties would be prejudiced by a dismissal with prejudice. n4 For discussion of terms and conditions that the court may impose, see § 6.22.

[2] Evaluating Prejudice to Opposing Party

Factors relevant in determining whether a voluntary dismissal by court order will prejudice the opposing party include: n5

- The extent to which the suit has progressed, including the defendant's effort and expense in preparing for trial
- The plaintiff's diligence in prosecuting the action or in bringing the motion
- The duplicative expense of relitigation
- The adequacy of the movant's explanation of the need for dismissal

Other factors that have been cited include whether the motion is made at some critical juncture in the case, such as after the defendant has made a dispositive motion, n6 and any vexatious conduct or bad faith on plaintiff's part. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersConditionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsRes Judicata

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Zagano v. Fordham Univ., 900 F.2d 12, 14 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See ITV Direct, Inc. v. Healthy Solutions, LLC, 445 F.3d 66, 70 (1st Cir. 2006) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See County of Santa Fe v. Public Serv. Co., 311 F.3d 1031, 1049 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Allen v. Indeck Corinth L.P., 161 F.R.D. 233, 235 (N.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. United States ex rel. Doe v. Dow Chem. Co., 343 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2003) ; Grover v. Eli Lilly & Co., 33 F.3d 716, 718 (6th Cir. 1994) ; Clark v. Tansy, 13 F.3d 1407, 1411 (10th Cir. 1993) ; FDIC v. Knostman, 966 F.2d 1133, 1142 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Paulucci v. City of Duluth, 826 F.2d 780, 783 (8th Cir. 1987) ; Gap, Inc. v. Stone Int'l Trading, Inc., 169 F.R.D. 584, 588 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See FDIC v. Knostman, 966 F.2d 1133, 1142 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Paulucci v. City of Duluth, 826 F.2d 780 (8th Cir. 1987) ; see also Langley v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 407 F. Supp. 2d 897, 905 (N.D. Ohio 2005) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Zagano v. Fordham Univ., 900 F.2d 12, 14 (2d Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
B. Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order When Dismissal by Notice or Stipulation Unavailable

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.22

§ 6.22 Imposing Terms and Conditions of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

[1] Purpose of Terms and Conditions Is to Protect Opposing Party From Prejudice

Once the court concludes that dismissal is permissible, the court next must determine what terms and conditions, if any, should be imposed as part of the dismissal. n1

The purpose of authorizing terms and conditions on a voluntary dismissal by court order is to protect the opposing party from prejudice. n2

[2] Typical Terms and Conditions of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

Courts setting terms for voluntary dismissal typically require the claimant to pay attorney's fees and costs incurred by the opposing party in defense of the dismissed litigation. However, such costs cannot include expenses for items that will be useful to the opposing party in another action, or that were incurred unnecessarily. n3

In contrast, if the dismissal is with prejudice, the district court generally lacks the power to require the payment of attorney's fees. n4

Other conditions typically imposed by federal district courts include:

- Permitting the opposing party to use discovery obtained in the dismissed action in any subsequent action between the parties n5

- Requiring the claimant to furnish documents to other parties for use in ongoing or subsequent litigation between the remaining parties n6

- Requiring the claimant to make certain witnesses within its control available for pretrial interviews, and at trial n7

A plaintiff who finds the terms or conditions set by the court to be too onerous need not accept the dismissal, but is entitled to withdraw the motion and proceed with the action. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersConditionsCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Cross Westchester Dev. Corp. v. Chiulli, 887 F.2d 431, 432 (2d Cir. 1989) ; McCall-Bey v. Franzen, 777 F.2d 1178, 1183-1184 (7th Cir. 1985) ; D.C. Circuit GAF Corp. v. Transamerica Ins. Co., 665 F.2d 364, 367 (D.C. Cir. 1981) ; Bath Iron Works Corp. v. Parmatic Filter Corp., 736 F. Supp. 1175, 1178 (D. Me. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Marlow v. Winston & Strawn, 19 F.3d 300, 306 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Kern v. TXO Prod. Corp., 738 F.2d 968, 971 (8th Cir. 1984) ; Farmaceutisk Laboratorium Ferring A/S v. Reid Rowell, Inc., 142 F.R.D. 179, 181 (N.D. Ga. 1991) ; Bath Iron Works Corp. v. Parmatic Filter Corp., 736 F. Supp. 1175, 1178 (D. Me. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Colombrito v. Kelly, 764 F.2d 122, 133 (2d Cir. 1985) ; Cauley v. Wilson, 754 F.2d 769, 772 (7th Cir. 1985) ; Mobile Power Enters., Inc. v. Power Vac. Inc., 496 F.2d 1311, 1312 (10th Cir. 1974) ; Smoot v. Fox, 353 F.2d 830, 833 (6th Cir. 1965) ; Murdock v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 154 F.R.D. 271, 272 (M.D. Fla. 1994) ; Burnette v. Godshall, 828 F. Supp. 1439 (N.D. Cal. 1993) ; John Evans Sons, Inc. v. Majik-Ironers, Inc., 95 F.R.D. 186, 190 (E.D. Pa. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Templeton v. Nedlloyd Lines, 901 F.2d 1273, 1276 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Hunter v. Surgitek/Medical Eng'g Corp., No. 592-56m, *1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9696, at 11-12 (N.D. Ind. May 29, 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Hudson Eng'g Co. v. Bingham Pump Co., 298 F. Supp. 387, 389 (S.D.N.Y. 1969) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Jaramillo v. Burkhart, 59 F. 3d 78, 79 (8th Cir. 1995) ; *De Fontanez v. Jefferson Pilot Life Ins. Co., No. 93-2268, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 21581, at 1-2 (1st Cir. Aug. 15, 1994) ; Marlow v. Winston & Strawn, 19 F.3d 300, 305 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Choice Hotels Int'l, Inc. v. Goodwin & Boone, 11 F.3d 469, 471 (4th Cir. 1993) ; Mortgage Guar. Ins. Corp. v. Richard Carlyon Co., 904 F.2d 298, 300 (5th Cir. 1990) ; Beard v. Sheet Metal Works Union, 908 F.2d 474, 476 (9th Cir. 1990) ; Gravatt v. Columbia Univ., 845 F.2d 54, 55-56 (2d Cir. 1988) ; GAF Corp. v. Transamerica Ins. Co., 665 F.2d 364, 367 (D.C. Cir. 1981) ; Scholl v. Felmont Oil Corp., 327 F.2d 697, 700 (6th Cir. 1964) .

15 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
B. Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order When Dismissal by Notice or Stipulation Unavailable

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.23

§ 6.23 Procedure for Filing Motion for Voluntary Dismissal or Opposition to Motion

A claimant seeking an order of voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(2) must make a formal motion to the court for voluntary dismissal. Likewise, the opposing party may file opposing papers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotions

16 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
B. Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order When Dismissal by Notice or Stipulation Unavailable

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.24

§ 6.24 Effect of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

[1] Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order Generally Without Prejudice

Unless otherwise specified in the order, a dismissal pursuant to a motion for voluntary dismissal is without prejudice, so the claimant is not precluded from raising the claim in subsequent litigation. n1 When a party seeking to voluntarily dismiss a claim pursuant to Rule 41(a)(2) is silent as to whether the dismissal should be with or without prejudice, the Tenth Circuit requires the district judge to interpret the motion one way or the other. n2

[2] Costs of Previously Dismissed Action

If a claimant who has once dismissed an action in any court commences an action based on or including the same claim against the same opposing party, the court may order the claimant to pay the costs of the action previously dismissed. Moreover, the court may stay the proceedings in the second action until the claimant complies with the order. n3

[3] Effect of Voluntary Dismissal With Prejudice

A dismissal with prejudice is a final judgment on the merits favorable to the opposing party, which precludes all further claims between the parties based on the same cause of action that were or could have been litigated in the initial action. n4 Accordingly, a voluntary dismissal by court order with prejudice of a federal claim also precludes subsequent litigation of an unasserted state claim arising out of a common nucleus of operative fact, unless the court granting the dismissal clearly indicates a contrary intention, or it is clear that the court would not have considered the state claim on the merits if it had been asserted. n5

[4] Consideration of Collateral Issues Following Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

Even after an action or party has been voluntarily dismissed by court order pursuant to Rule 41(a)(2), the district court may consider independent, collateral issues such as availability of attorney's fees. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersDismissals With PrejudiceCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersDismissals Without PrejudiceCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. GF Gaming Corp. v. City of Black Hawk, 405 F.3d 876, 888 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. *Channell v. Gulf Operators, Inc., No. 89-5391, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3090, at 2 (E.D. La. Mar. 19, 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fitzgerald v. Alleghany Corp., 882 F. Supp. 1433, 1435-1437 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Valley Disposal, Inc. v. Central Vt. Solid Waste Management Dist., 71 F.3d 1053, 1055-1056 (2d Cir. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
B. Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order When Dismissal by Notice or Stipulation Unavailable

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.25

§ 6.25 Postjudgment Dismissal

Sometimes, settlement of an action is reached after judgment has already been entered. The purpose behind postjudgment settlement typically is to avoid a possible reversal on appeal.

However, if the case is already on appeal, a settlement does not automatically set aside the judgment. Even if the parties stipulate that the judgment is to be set aside, mootness by reason of settlement does not justify vacating the judgment absent exceptional circumstances. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersDismissals With PrejudiceCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersDismissals Without PrejudiceCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotionsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. U.S. Bancorp Mortgage Co. v. Bonner Mall Partnership, 513 U.S. 18, 29, 115 S. Ct. 386, 130 L. Ed. 2d 233 (1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
B. Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order When Dismissal by Notice or Stipulation Unavailable

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 6.26 through 6.29

[Reserved]

§§ 6.26[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.30

§ 6.30 Grounds for Involuntary Dismissal

A defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against the defendant on the grounds that the plaintiff has failed to: n1

- Prosecute the case
- Comply with any of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure
- Comply with court orders n2

Similarly, a plaintiff may move for dismissal of counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims as a result of the defendant's failure to prosecute such claims, or to comply with other rules or court orders. n3

Dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction that may be imposed only on a finding of a clear pattern of delay or willful contempt that cannot be remedied by lesser sanctions. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Doe v. Cassel, 403 F.3d 986, 990 (8th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b), (c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Betty K Agencies, Ltd. v. M/V Monada, 432 F.3d 1333, 1340-1342 (11th Cir. 2005) .

20 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.31

§ 6.31 Court May Dismiss Claims on Motion or Sua Sponte

Involuntary dismissal may be granted on motion. n1 Likewise, the court may dismiss claims sua sponte based on the claimant's failure to prosecute. Under appropriate circumstances, the claims may be dismissed by the court without prior notice of its intent to do so, and without a hearing. n2 While a district court may dismiss a suit sua sponte for lack of venue, it may not do so without first giving the parties an opportunity to present their views on the issue. This rule gives defendants an opportunity to waive the venue defense and plaintiffs an opportunity to present arguments as to why venue is proper before the case is dismissed. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to ProsecuteCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b), (c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Link v. Wabash R.R. Co., 370 U.S. 626, 629-632, 82 S. Ct. 1386, 8 L. Ed. 2d 734 , reh'g denied, 371 U.S. 873 (1962) ; see also Rogers v. Andrus Transp. Services, 502 F.3d 1147, 1151-1152 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Algodonera de las Cabezas, S.A. v. American Suisse Capital, Inc., 432 F.3d 1343, 1345 (11th Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.32

§ 6.32 Effect of Involuntary Dismissal

[1] Involuntary Dismissal Generally With Prejudice

Unless the court in its dismissal order specifies otherwise, an involuntary dismissal under Rule 41(b) operates as an adjudication on the merits, barring further litigation of the claims asserted under principles of res judicata. n1

A dismissal with prejudice also precludes further litigation of claims between the parties based on the same cause of action that could have been litigated in the initial action. Accordingly, a dismissal by court order with prejudice of a federal claim also precludes subsequent litigation of an unasserted state claim arising out of a common nucleus of operative fact, unless the court granting the dismissal clearly indicates a contrary intention, or it is clear that the court would not have considered the state claim on the merits if it had been asserted. n2

[2] Involuntary Dismissal Without Prejudice for Lack of Jurisdiction, Improper Venue, or Failure to Join a Party

Dismissals for lack of jurisdiction, improper venue, or failure to join a party under Rule 19 are without prejudice, and do not preclude a subsequent suit on the dismissed claim. n3 Thus, the preclusive effect afforded dismissals under Rule 41(b) n4 applies only to situations in which a defendant must incur the inconvenience of preparing to meet the merits of the plaintiff's claims because there is no initial bar to the court reaching the merits, as there would be, for example, if the defect was with the pleadings or parties. n5 Just as an involuntary dismissal for lack of jurisdiction or improper venue must be without prejudice, a dismissal for lack of standing must be without prejudice since standing is a jurisdictional mandate. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to ProsecuteCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotionsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsRes Judicata

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); see Payne v. Brake, 439 F.3d 198, 204 (4th Cir. 2006) ; Luney v. SGS Auto. Servs., Inc., 432 F.3d 866, 867 (8th Cir. 2005) ; Styskal v. Weld County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 365 F.3d 855, 859

(10th Cir. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Styskal v. Weld County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 365 F.3d 855, 859 (10th Cir. 2004) ; Fitzgerald v. Alleghany Corp., 882 F. Supp. 1433, 1435-1437 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); County of Mille Lacs v. Benjamin, 361 F.3d 460, 464 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See [1], above.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Costello v. United States, 365 U.S. 265, 284, 81 S. Ct. 534, 544, 5 L. Ed. 2d 551 (1961) ; Leaf v. Supreme Court of State of Wis., 979 F.2d 589, 595 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Brereton v. Bountiful City Corp., 434 F.3d 1213, 1216 (10th Cir. 2006) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.33

§ 6.33 Factors Governing Involuntary Dismissal

Though involuntary dismissal under Rule 41(b) is a matter within the court's discretion, dismissal is a harsh remedy to be utilized only in extreme situations. n1

Factors that a district court may consider in deciding a Rule 41(b) motion include: n2

- The duration of the claimant's failure to prosecute
- Whether the claimant was on notice that the failure would result in dismissal
- Whether the opposing party is likely to be prejudiced by further delay in the proceedings n3
- A balancing of the court's interest in managing its docket with the claimant's interest in receiving a fair chance to be heard
- Whether the judge has adequately considered a sanction less drastic than dismissal n4

Not all of the factors mentioned above need be found for a district court to conclude that a dismissal is warranted. n5

A delay of a particular duration will not alone be determinative, although prejudice to the defendants resulting from an unreasonable delay may be presumed. In cases in which the delay is more moderate or excusable, the need to show actual prejudice is proportionately greater. n6

In one case, the Sixth Circuit found that the district court abused its discretion in dismissing the action for failure to prosecute after plaintiffs failed to appear for a pretrial conference, because this was the only time plaintiffs missed an appearance and the court failed to give notice that it was considering an involuntary dismissal. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to ProsecuteCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Dodson v. Runyon, 86 F. 3d 37, 39 (2d Cir. 1996) ; see also Ferdik v. Bonzelet, 963 F. 2d 1258 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See e.g., Lucas v. Miles, 84 F.3d 532, 535 (2d Cir. 1996) ; Ferdik v. Bonzelet, 963 F.2d 1258 (9th Cir. 1992) ; Poulis v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 747 F.2d 863 (3d Cir. 1984) ; Samman v. Conyers, 231 F.R.D. 163, 165-167 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 6.34.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.35.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Windward Agency v. Cologne Life Reinsurance Co., 353 F. Supp. 2d 538, 540 (E.D. Pa. 2003) ; Burns v. Glick, 158 F.R.D. 354, 356 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Lyell Theatre Corp. v. Loews Corp., 682 F.2d 37, 43 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Nader v. Land, 433 F.3d 496, 502 (6th Cir. 2006) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.34

§ 6.34 Likelihood of Prejudice to Opposing Party

[1] Prejudice Must Be Considered by Court

In determining whether to dismiss a claim involuntarily, the court must consider, among other factors, whether the opposing party is likely to be prejudiced by further delay in the proceedings. n1

[2] Prejudice May Be Presumed as Matter of Law

Prejudice resulting from unreasonable delay may be presumed as a matter of law from the length of the delay. n2

[3] Need to Show Actual Prejudice Increases Where Delay Is More Moderate

In cases where delay is more moderate or excusable, the need to show actual prejudice is proportionally greater. n3 Actual prejudice refers not to the stigma of being a defendant in a civil action, but to those situations in which a plaintiff's delay hinders the defendant's opportunity to adequately defend the claim. n4

Examples of
such prejudice may include:

- Difficulty in locating witnesses due to death or relocation
- Destruction of important documents
- Dulling of witness memories through time
- Expenses incurred as a result of delay

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Lucas v. Miles, 84 F.3d 532, 535 (2d Cir. 1996) ; Poulis v. State Farm Fire & Casualty, 747 F. 2d 863 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Peart v. City of New York, 992 F.2d 458, 462 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Lyell Theatre Corp. v. Loews Corp., 682 F.2d 37, 43 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Giuliano v. Everything Yogurt, Inc., 152 F.R.D. 449, 453 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.35

§ 6.35 Consideration of Less Drastic Sanctions

In view of the drastic nature of a dismissal sanction, it should be employed only when the judge is sure of the impotence of lesser sanctions. n1

In deciding the suitability of lesser sanctions, courts should assess the relative roles of attorney and client in causing the delay, as well as whether a tactical benefit was sought by the delay. If the delay was occasioned by the attorney's disregard of his or her obligation toward the client, a sanction against the attorney might be more appropriate. n2

Alternative sanctions that might be considered are assessments of fines, costs, or damages against the plaintiff or its counsel, attorney disciplinary measures, conditional dismissal, dismissal without prejudice, and explicit warnings. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to ProsecuteLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Colon v. Mack, 56 F.3d 5, 7 (2d Cir. 1995) ; In re Bluestein & Co., 68 F.3d 1022, 1025 (7th Cir. 1995) ; World Thrust Films, Inc. v. International Family Entertainment, Inc., 41 F.3d 1454, 1456 (11th Cir. 1995) ; Berry v. CIGNA/RSI-CIGNA, 975 F.2d 1188, 1191 (5th Cir. 1992) ; Johnson v. United States Dep't of Treasury, 939 F.2d 820, 825 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Dodson v. Runyon, 86 F.3d 37, 40 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Boudwin v. Graystone Ins. Co., Ltd., 756 F.2d 399, 401 (5th Cir. 1985) ; Rogers v. Kroger Co., 669 F.2d 317, 321 (5th Cir. 1982) ; Schenck v. Bear, Stearns & Co., 583 F.2d 58, 60 (2d Cir. 1978) ; Giuliano v. Everything Yogurt, Inc., 152 F.R.D. 449, 454 n.3 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

25 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.36

§ 6.36 Procedure for Filing or Opposing Motion for Involuntary Dismissal

A claimant seeking an order of involuntary dismissal under Rule 41(b) must make a formal motion to the court. n1 Likewise, the opposing party may file opposing papers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to ProsecuteCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.37

§ 6.37 CHECKLIST: Obtaining or Opposing Involuntary Dismissal

☐ A claim opponent may move for involuntary dismissal of the claimant's action or claim based on the claimant's failure to: n1

- ☐ Prosecute case.
- ☐ Comply with Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.
- ☐ Comply with court orders.
- ☐ Motion for involuntary dismissal should:
  - ☐ Be in writing. n2
  - ☐ Request order dismissing claimant's action or claim pursuant to Rule 41(b).
  - ☐ Specify type of delay for which dismissal is sought.
  - ☐ Describe manner and duration of claimant's failure.
  - ☐ State, if accurate, that claimant was on notice that failure would result in dismissal.
  - ☐ Describe actual prejudice resulting to movant as result of delay.
  - ☐ Describe manner in which balancing court's interest in managing docket with claimant's interest in receiving due process tips in favor of dismissal.

☐ State that sanctions less drastic than dismissal would be ineffective.

☐ Include supporting authority.

☐ Order of dismissal operates as adjudication on merits barring further litigation of claims unless order states otherwise. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to ProsecuteCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b), (c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

27 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
C. Involuntary Dismissal

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 6.38 through 6.99

[Reserved]

§§ 6.38[Reserved]

28 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
D. Forms

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.100

§ 6.100 Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Form

Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 41(a)(1), plaintiff [insert name of plaintiff] dismisses this action, in its entirety, without prejudice.

Defendant [insert name of defendant, e.g., John Doe Company] [has/has not] been served with service of process, and has not filed an answer or motion for summary judgment. Plaintiff has not dismissed any other action based on or including the same claim or claims as those presented in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiff [name of plaintiff]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of voluntary dismissal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1). The form may be modified for use by a claimant who has asserted a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim.

A notice of voluntary dismissal may be used to dismiss either entire actions, or specific parties from an action. n1

[3] Deadline for Filing of Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

A notice of dismissal may be filed by the plaintiff at any time before the defendant has served an answer or a motion for summary judgment. Two dismissals of actions on the same claim, however, operate as an adjudication on the merits, even if the first action was in state court. n2

A notice of dismissal may also be filed by a claimant who has asserted a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim at any time before a responsive pleading is served, or if there is no responsive pleading, at any time before the introduction of evidence at the trial or hearing. n3

For discussion of types of actions that may not be voluntarily dismissed, see § 6.05.

[4] Content of Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

If the notice of dismissal pertains to dismissal of claims, the notice should state, as appropriate, that the claims, counterclaims, cross-claims, or third party claims are dismissed. If the notice of dismissal pertains to dismissal of parties, the notice should identify the parties being dismissed.

The notice of dismissal should specify that dismissal is without prejudice, unless there is some reason for dismissing with prejudice. n4

[5] Notice of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Served and Filed

Filing the notice of voluntary dismissal effects the dismissal. No court order is required. n5

Counsel for the claimant serve a copy of the notice of voluntary dismissal on each of the parties. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 6.01[3].

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), (c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.02[2].

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), 5(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
D. Forms

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.101

§ 6.101 Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Form

Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

IT IS HEREBY STIPULATED AND AGREED, pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 41(a)(1), by and between plaintiff [name of plaintiff] and all defendants who have appeared in this action, as follows:

1. This action was commenced on _____[date action filed].

2. The action is not a class action, a receiver has not been appointed, and the action is not governed by any statute of the United States that requires an order of the court for dismissal.

3. This action is hereby dismissed, in its entirety, without prejudice.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiff [name of plaintiff]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[Repeat date and signature line for each signatory]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of stipulation of voluntary dismissal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1). A stipulation of voluntary dismissal may be used to dismiss either entire actions, or specific parties from an action. n1

[3] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Requires Signatures of All Parties Who Have Appeared

A stipulation of voluntary dismissal is typically used when the time for filing a notice of dismissal has lapsed; for example, either the defendant has filed an answer or motion for summary judgment, or with respect to a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, a responsive pleading has been served, or evidence has already been introduced at the trial or hearing. n2

A stipulation of dismissal must be signed by all parties who have appeared in the action. n3

For discussion of types of actions that may not be voluntarily dismissed, see § 6.05.

[4] Stipulation of Voluntary Dismissal Must Be Filed

A stipulation of dismissal is not self-executing. Rather, the stipulation must be filed with the court clerk to effectuate the dismissal, though an oral stipulation in open court may effectuate dismissal. n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 6.01[3].

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 6.04[1].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), (c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.04[3].

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
D. Forms

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.102

§ 6.102 Notice of Motion for Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Form

Notice of Motion for Voluntary Dismissal

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____[date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 41(a)(2) [state with particularity any other legal basis for motion including any applicable local rules]:

(a) dismissing this action in its entirety; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute; generally required) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) _____[date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated _____[date], and upon all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiff [name of plaintiff]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of motion for voluntary dismissal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2). This form may be modified to dismiss only a particular party from the action. n1

[3] Situations in Which Court Order Is Required for Voluntary Dismissal

A court order is required any time a claimant seeks to dismiss a claim or party, but the time within which a notice of dismissal may be filed has expired, and the claimant is unable to obtain a stipulation of dismissal from all parties. n2

Thus, a court order is required if: n3

- The plaintiff seeks to dismiss the action or a defendant, but another defendant has already filed an answer or motion for summary judgment, and the plaintiff is unable to obtain a stipulation of dismissal from all parties

- The claimant seeks to dismiss a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, but a responsive pleading has been served, or evidence has already been introduced at the trial or hearing, and the claimant is unable to obtain a stipulation of dismissal from all parties

- The action is of a type that may not be dismissed without court order

If a defendant has plead a counterclaim prior to service on the defendant of the plaintiff's motion to voluntarily dismiss, the court is not permitted to dismiss the action over the defendant's objection, unless the counterclaim can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court. n4

[4] Motion Granted Only If No Undue Prejudice to Opposing Party

Voluntary dismissal by court order pursuant to Rule 41(a)(2) is not a matter of right, but rather is at the court's discretion. A district court may only grant such dismissal if the opposing party will not be unduly prejudiced, and then only on terms and conditions that protect the opposing party from any unfairness. This rule applies even when the party seeking dismissal seeks to dismiss with prejudice. n5

For discussion of terms and conditions that the court may impose, see § 6.22.

[5] Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order Generally Without Prejudice

Unless otherwise specified in the order, a dismissal pursuant to a motion for voluntary dismissal is without prejudice, which does not preclude the claimant from raising the claim in subsequent litigation. n6

If the district judge proposes to convert a voluntary dismissal to one with prejudice, fundamental fairness requires the court to afford the claimant an opportunity to withdraw the motion for dismissal, and to proceed with the litigation. n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2); see also § 6.20.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1), (2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 6.21[1].

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 6.24[3].

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Voluntary Dismissals and Dismissals for Failure to Prosecute
D. Forms

1-6 Federal Litigation Guide § 6.103

§ 6.103 Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Prosecute, or Failure to Comply With Court Order or Federal Rules

[1] Form

Notice of Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Prosecute, or Failure to Comply With Court Order or Federal Rules

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____[date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 41(b) [state with particularity any other legal basis for motion including any applicable local rules]:

(a) dismissing this action with prejudice [insert if appropriate: and with costs to defendant] on the ground that _____[choose one of the following: Plaintiff has failed to prosecute the action with due diligence; or Plaintiff has failed to comply with the order of this court, dated [date of order], requiring plaintiff to [set forth requirements of court order]; or Plaintiff has failed to comply with Fed. R. Civ. P. [set forth Rule violated by plaintiff and facts showing failure to comply with Rule]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute; generally required) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) _____[date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated _____[date], and upon all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiff [name of plaintiff]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion to dismiss, filed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

[3] Grounds for Involuntary Dismissal

A defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against the defendant on the grounds that the plaintiff has failed to: n1

- Prosecute the case
- Comply with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure
- Comply with court orders

Similarly, a plaintiff may move for dismissal of counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims as a result of the defendant's failure to prosecute such claims, or to comply with other rules or court orders. n2

[4] Court May Dismiss Claims on Motion or Sua Sponte

Involuntary dismissal may be granted on motion. n3 Likewise, the court possesses an inherent power to dismiss claims sua sponte (on the court's own motion) based on the claimant's failure to prosecute. Under appropriate circumstances, the claims may be dismissed by the court without prior notice of its intent to do so, and without a hearing. n4

[5] Involuntary Dismissal Generally With Prejudice

Unless the court in its dismissal order specifies otherwise, an involuntary dismissal under Rule 41(b) operates as an adjudication on the merits, barring further litigation of the claims asserted under principles of res judicata. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b), (c).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b), (c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.31.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 6.32.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide 7.syn

§ 7.syn Synopsis to Chapter 7: Injunctions

§ 7.01 Injunction Prevents Irreparable Injury

§ 7.02 Characteristics of Permanent Injunction

§ 7.03 Characteristics of Preliminary Injunction

§ 7.04 Characteristics of Temporary Restraining Order (TRO)

§ 7.05 Distinguishing Prohibitory From Mandatory Injunctions

§§ 7.06 through 7.09 [Reserved]

§ 7.10 Rule 65 Sets Forth Procedure for Obtaining Injunctive Relief

§ 7.11 Federal Law Governs Procedure for Seeking Injunctive Relief

§ 7.12 Acquiring Personal and Subject Matter Jurisdiction

§ 7.13 Injunctive Relief Available Only in Context of Pending Action

§ 7.14 Anti-Injunction Act Limits Power of Federal Court to Enjoin State Proceedings

§§ 7.15. through 7.19 [Reserved]

§ 7.20 Permanent Injunction Must Be Requested in Complaint

§ 7.21 Permanent Injunction Available Only After Trial on Merits

§ 7.22 Action Seeking Permanent Injunction Treated Like Any Other Action

§ 7.23 Factors Considered in Granting or Denying Permanent Injunction
[1] Injunctive Relief Available Only If No Adequate Remedy at Law
[2] Irreparable Injury
[3] Balancing of Hardships

[4] Considering Effect on Public Interest

§§ 7.24. through 7.29 [Reserved]

§ 7.30 Preliminary Injunction Preserves Status Quo Pending Final Determination of Merits

§ 7.31 Factors Considered in Granting or Denying Preliminary Injunction

§ 7.32 Preparing Papers in Support of Motion for Preliminary Injunction
[1] Providing Adequate Notice
[2] Importance of Supporting Affidavits
[3] Submitting Supporting Memorandum of Law
[4] Submitting Proposed Order
[5] Filing Complaint Contemporaneously With Preliminary Injunction Motion
[6] Submitting Other Papers in Support of Motion
[6.--1] Verified Pleadings
[6.--2] Deposition Transcripts
[6.--3] Transcripts of Prior Hearings
[6.--4] Affidavits

§ 7.33 Hearing on Motion for Preliminary Injunction
[1] Hearing Required If Essential Facts in Dispute
[2] Adverse Party May Waive Preliminary Injunction Hearing
[3] Conduct of Hearing on Motion for Preliminary Injunction
[4] Consolidating Hearing on Motion for Preliminary Injunction With Trial

§ 7.34 Requirements of Order Granting or Denying Preliminary Injunction
[1] Form of Injunction Order
[2] Security Must Be Posted by Applicant

§ 7.35 Appealing Grant or Denial of Preliminary Injunction
[1] Appealability of Preliminary Injunction Order
[2] Standard of Appellate Review

§§ 7.36. through 7.39 [Reserved]

§ 7.40 Temporary Restraining Order Preserves Status Quo Until Hearing on Preliminary Injunction

§ 7.41 Comparing Temporary Restraining Orders and Preliminary Injunctions

§ 7.42 Similar Factors for Temporary Restraining Order as for Preliminary Injunction

§ 7.43 Providing Adequate Notice of Application for Temporary Restraining Order
[1] Notice to Adverse Parties Generally Required
[2] Obtaining Temporary Restraining Order Without Notice

§ 7.44 Preparing Papers in Support of Application for Temporary Restraining Order
[1] Same Papers Typically Support Application for TRO and Motion for Preliminary Injunction
[2] Certificate of Applicant's Attorney If TRO Is Sought Ex Parte

§ 7.45 Expedited Argument on Motion for Preliminary Injunction If TRO Granted Ex Parte

§ 7.46 Content and Filing Requirements of Ex Parte Temporary Restraining Orders

§ 7.47 Security Must Be Posted by Applicant

§ 7.48 Limited Duration of Temporary Restraining Order Issued Ex Parte
[1] TRO Granted Ex Parte May Not Exceed 14 Days
[2] Extension of TRO Granted Ex Parte
[2.--1] Extension for Good Cause
[2.--2] Extension on Consent
[2.--3] Deadline for Requesting Extension

§ 7.49 Grant or Denial of Temporary Restraining Order Not Appealable

§ 7.50 Dissolving or Modifying Temporary Restraining Order
[1] Motion on Two Days' Notice
[2] Factors Considered on Motion
[3] Order Dissolving or Modifying Injunction Immediately Appealable

§§ 7.51. through 7.59 [Reserved]

§ 7.60 Considering Equitable Defenses
[1] Traditional Equitable Defenses May Be Raised
[2] Unclean Hands
[3] Laches, Estoppel, and Waiver

§ 7.61 Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies

§ 7.62 Adequate Remedy at Law

§ 7.63 Legal Defenses

§§ 7.64. through 7.69 [Reserved]

§ 7.70 Importance of Local District Court Rules and Rules of Assigned Judge

§ 7.71 Requirements of Injunction Order
[1] Rule 65(d) Requirements
[2] Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law
[3] Injunction Order Must Be Specific in Terms
[4] Description of Acts Prohibited or Required

§ 7.72 Persons Bound by Injunction or Restraining Order

§ 7.73 Security Requirements
[1] Security Required for Temporary Restraining Orders and Preliminary Injunctions
[2] Exceptions to Security Requirement
[3] Court Has Discretion to Dispense With Security in Limited Circumstances
[4] Importance of Value of Security

§ 7.74 Increasing or Decreasing Amount of Security

§ 7.75 Collecting Security When Final Judgment Favors Wrongfully Enjoined Party

§§ 7.76. through 7.79 [Reserved]

§ 7.80 Court May Utilize Power of Contempt

§ 7.81 Effect of Reversal of Injunction

§§ 7.82. through 7.89 [Reserved]

§ 7.90 FORM: Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order
Scope

§ 7.91 FORM: Complaint for Injunctive Relief
Scope

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses the manner by which injunctive relief is obtained in federal court. The chapter includes procedures for obtaining permanent injunctions, preliminary injunctions, and temporary restraining orders. Rule 65 governs injunctions and sets forth the procedural parameters for invoking injunctive relief while simultaneously guarding against abuse of the injunction remedy.

The section on permanent injunctions covers pleading requirements, and the standards for granting relief.

The section on preliminary injunctions covers arranging for the noticed hearing, the standards for granting relief, preparing the motion, and the use of oral testimony. It also discusses consolidating preliminary injunction hearings with the trial on the merits, and appealing preliminary injunction orders.

The section on temporary restraining orders discusses the procedure for obtaining a temporary restraining order, the standards for granting relief, preparing the application, and rules concerning the duration of temporary restraining orders.

The chapter discusses defenses that may be raised to oppose an application for injunctive relief. It also discusses drafting proposed orders, security requirements, and the court's power of contempt to enforce injunctions and restraining orders.

For expanded coverage of injunctions, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 65, Injunctions (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
A. Nature of Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.01

§ 7.01 Injunction Prevents Irreparable Injuryn*

An injunction is an equitable remedy ordering a party to do some act or refrain from doing some act to prevent irreparable future harm to the applicant. n1 Another broad definition of injunction is any equitable decree that compels obedience under threat of the court's coercive power of contempt. n1.1 Thus, if the harmful conduct sought to be enjoined has been discontinued, injunctive relief will not be granted. n2 The three types of injunctive relief are: n3

- Permanent injunctions [see §§ 7.20 -7.23]
- Preliminary injunctions [see §§ 7.30 -7.35]
- Temporary restraining orders [see §§ 7.40 -7.50]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Nken v. Holder, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1749, 1757, 173 L. Ed. 2d 550 (2009) ; Shain v. Ellison, 356 F.3d 211, 215 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Westar Energy, Inc. v. Lake, 552 F.3d 1215, 1222 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 2. See Brown v. Bartholomew Consol. Sch. Corp., 442 F.3d 588, 596 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
A. Nature of Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.02

§ 7.02 Characteristics of Permanent Injunctionn*

A permanent injunction is a means of finally settling a dispute, and may constitute part or all of the final judgment in a civil action. A permanent injunction is granted at the conclusion of a trial on the merits, and remains in force unless reversed or vacated by another court; it does not expire after a prescribed period of time. n1

For discussion of obtaining permanent injunctive relief, see §§ 7.20 -7.23.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.05[2], [3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Amoco Prod. Co. v. Village of Gambell, 480 U.S. 531, 546 n.12, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
A. Nature of Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.03

§ 7.03 Characteristics of Preliminary Injunctionn*

A preliminary injunction is issued as an interlocutory order, and is intended to protect a party from irreparable harm during the pendency of litigation. n1

A preliminary injunction: n2

- Is granted after a hearing, typically held on short notice, during the course of a pending action
- Remains in force until final determination of the merits of the action, unless modified
- May not be issued without notice to the adverse party

For discussion of obtaining preliminary injunctive relief, see §§ 7.30 -7.35.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.20-65.24 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See University of Tx. v. Camenisch, 451 U.S. 390, 395, 101 S. Ct. 1830, 68 L. Ed. 2d 175 (1981) ; Arthur Guinness & Sons, PLC v. Sterling Publishing Co., 732 F.2d 1095, 1099 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
A. Nature of Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.04

§ 7.04 Characteristics of Temporary Restraining Order (TRO)n*

A temporary restraining order (TRO) is a short term device used to restrain the actions of a party until the court holds a hearing to determine whether to issue a preliminary injunction. n1

A TRO should be sought when it appears that preliminary injunctive relief will not be granted in time to prevent imminent harm. In some circumstances, a temporary restraining order may be granted ex parte (without written or oral notice to the adverse party), but most judges insist on the best available notice.

A TRO granted ex parte may not exceed 14 days in duration, although the TRO may be extended on consent, or for good cause. n2

For discussion of obtaining a temporary restraining order, see §§ 7.40 -7.50.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.30-65.41 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. United States v. United Mine Workers, 330 U.S. 258, 293, 67 S. Ct. 677, 91 L. Ed. 884, 19 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2346 (1947) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(2).

38 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
A. Nature of Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.05

§ 7.05 Distinguishing Prohibitory From Mandatory Injunctionsn*

Prohibitory injunctions prohibit a party from engaging in specified conduct harmful to the applicant. n1

Mandatory injunctions require a party to engage in specific conduct to remedy harm to the applicant. n2

Courts are reluctant to issue mandatory injunctions because they disturb the status quo prior to adjudication on the merits, and they can be difficult to enforce. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsMandatory InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Texas & N.O.R.R. v. Northside Belt Ry., 276 U.S. 475, 479, 48 S. Ct. 361, 72 L. Ed. 661 (1928) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See United States v. Criminal Sheriff, 19 F.3d 238, 240 (5th Cir. 1994) ; United States v. Bedford Assocs., 618 F.2d 904, 914 (2d Cir. 1980) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Clune v. Publishers' Ass'n, 214 F. Supp. 520, 531 (S.D.N.Y.) , aff'd, 314 F.2d 343 (2d Cir. 1963) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
A. Nature of Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.06 through 7.09

[Reserved]

§§ 7.06[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
1. Governing Law, Acquiring Jurisdiction, and Limitations on Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.10

§ 7.10 Rule 65 Sets Forth Procedure for Obtaining Injunctive Reliefn*

Rule 65 sets forth the procedure for obtaining injunctive relief. Its requirements must be strictly followed. n1 The Rule also applies to copyright impoundment proceedings. n2

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65; see also Granny Goose Foods, Inc. v. Brotherhood of Teamsters & Auto Truck Drivers, Local No. 70, 415 U.S. 423, 438-439, 94 S. Ct. 1113, 39 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1974) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(f).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
1. Governing Law, Acquiring Jurisdiction, and Limitations on Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.11

§ 7.11 Federal Law Governs Procedure for Seeking Injunctive Reliefn*

Federal law governs the procedure for seeking injunctive relief. n1

In assessing the merits of a request for injunctive relief in a diversity case, the court will apply the substantive law of the forum state. n2

For discussion of the factors considered in determining whether injunctive relief is appropriate, see § 7.23.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsErie DoctrineCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
1. Governing Law, Acquiring Jurisdiction, and Limitations on Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.12

§ 7.12 Acquiring Personal and Subject Matter Jurisdictionn*

The court must have personal and subject matter jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief. n1

A complaint seeking injunctive relief must allege the basis for the court's subject matter jurisdiction. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.05[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Hitchman Coal & Coke Co. v. Mitchell, 245 U.S. 229, 234-235, 38 S. Ct. 65, 62 L. Ed. 260 (1916) ; Weitzman v. Stein, 897 F.2d 653, 658-659 (2d Cir. 1990) , aff'd, 963 F.2d 1521 (1992) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Lauf v. E.G. Shinner & Co., 303 U.S. 323, 327-328, 58 S. Ct. 578, 82 L. Ed. 872 (1938) ; Arkansas Peace Ctr. v. Department of Pollution Control, 999 F.2d 1212, 1216-1219 (8th Cir. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
1. Governing Law, Acquiring Jurisdiction, and Limitations on Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.13

§ 7.13 Injunctive Relief Available Only in Context of Pending Actionn*

Injunctive relief may be granted only in the context of a pending action, which generally means that a complaint has been filed either prior to or contemporaneously with the application for injunctive relief. n1 The district court lacks authority to issue injunctive relief after remanding the case to state court. n2

The purpose of injunctive relief is to prevent future harm. n2.1 Therefore, if the harmful conduct sought to be enjoined has been discontinued, injunctive relief will not be granted. n2.2

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Stewart v. INS, 762 F.2d 193, 198 (2d Cir. 1985) ; James Luterbach Constr. Co. v. Adamkus, 781 F.2d 599, 601 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Covanta Onondaga Ltd. Partnership v. Onondaga County Res. Recovery Agency, 318 F.3d 392, 400 (2d. Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Shain v. Ellison, 356 F.3d 211, 215 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 2.2. Crown Media, LLC v. Gwinnett County, 380 F.3d 1317, 1324-1325 (11th Cir. 2004) .

44 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
1. Governing Law, Acquiring Jurisdiction, and Limitations on Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.14

§ 7.14 Anti-Injunction Act Limits Power of Federal Court to Enjoin State Proceedingsn*

The Anti-Injunction Act n1 prohibits a federal court from enjoining state court proceedings, except:

- As expressly authorized by Act of Congress
- When necessary in aid of the federal court's jurisdiction
- To protect or effectuate a federal court's judgment

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsAnti-Injunction ActsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsAnti-Injunction ActsAnti-Injunction ActCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.07[1], 121.02, 121.04, 121.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2283.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
1. Governing Law, Acquiring Jurisdiction, and Limitations on Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.15. through 7.19

[Reserved]

§§ 7.15.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
2. Seeking Permanent Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.20

§ 7.20 Permanent Injunction Must Be Requested in Complaintn*

A party seeks a permanent injunction by praying in a complaint for a permanent modification of the defendant's behavior. n1

There are no special pleading rules governing complaints which seek injunctive relief. The complaint must include a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the plaintiff is entitled to a permanent injunction. n2

For discussion of drafting the complaint, see Ch. 1, Pleadings.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.05[2], [3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Hishon v. King & Spalding, 467 U.S. 69, 72, 104 S. Ct. 2229, 81 L. Ed. 2d 59 (1984) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
2. Seeking Permanent Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.21

§ 7.21 Permanent Injunction Available Only After Trial on Meritsn*

Unlike preliminary injunctions, permanent injunctions may be rendered as part of the final relief in the case after an adjudication of the merits of the action. n1

The court may order the trial on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the preliminary injunction hearing. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.05[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Amoco Prod. Co. v. Village of Gambell, 480 U.S. 531, 546 n.12, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
2. Seeking Permanent Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.22

§ 7.22 Action Seeking Permanent Injunction Treated Like Any Other Action

Rules governing pleadings, discovery, motion practice, pretrial conferences, and other matters apply equally to actions seeking permanent injunctive relief.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent Injunctions

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
2. Seeking Permanent Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.23

§ 7.23 Factors Considered in Granting or Denying Permanent Injunctionn*

[1] Injunctive Relief Available Only If No Adequate Remedy at Law

Injunctive relief ordinarily will be denied if an adequate remedy at law is available. The injury must be one requiring a remedy of more than money damages. A monetary loss will not suffice unless the movant provides evidence of damage that cannot be rectified by financial compensation. n1

Although injuries compensable by monetary damages ordinarily do not justify the granting of injunctive relief, a preliminary injunction may issue to preserve assets as security for a potential monetary judgment where the evidence shows that a party intends to frustrate any judgment on the merits by making it uncollectible. n2

[2] Irreparable Injury

The applicant for injunctive relief must demonstrate that the respondent's conduct will cause irreparable harm if the injunction is not granted. n3

The finding of irreparable harm is sometimes the most important factor indetermining whether to issue an injunction. n4

The applicant must demonstrate the specific nature of the harm that will be suffered if injunctive relief is denied. n5

[3] Balancing of Hardships

In determining whether to grant injunctive relief, the court must balance the hardship faced by the applicant resulting from the conduct sought to be enjoined against the hardship the defendant would suffer if the relief were granted. Essentially, this factor weighs in favor of an injunction if the hardship experienced by the applicant exceeds the hardship experienced by the defendant. n6

[4] Considering Effect on Public Interest

The court may consider the impact of the requested injunction on the public interest, particularly in an action implicating government policy or regulation, or other matters of public concern. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Morales v. TWA, 504 U.S. 374, 381, 112 S. Ct. 2031, 119 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1992) ; Crane v. Indiana High Sch. Athletic Ass'n, 975 F.2d 1315, 1326 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Tucker Anthony Realty Corp. v. Schlesinger, 888 F.2d 969, 975 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 2. E.g., Pashaian v. Eccelston Props., Ltd., 88 F.3d 77, 85 (2d Cir. 1996) ; but see Rosen v. Cascade Int'l, Inc., 21 F.3d 1520, 1529-1530 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Dominion Video Satellite, Inc. v. Echostar Satellite Corp., 356 F.3d 1256, 1261-1266 (10th Cir. 2004) ; Chemical Bank v. Haseotes, 13 F.3d 569, 573 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Basicomputer Corp. v. Scott, 973 F.2d 507, 511-512 (6th Cir. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Reuters Ltd. v. United Press Int'l, Inc., 903 F. 2d 904, 907 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See, e.g., International Bhd. of Teamsters v. Local Union No. 810, 19 F.3d 786, 794 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Basicomputer Corp. v. Scott, 973 F.2d 507, 511 (6th Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Honig v. Doe, 484 U.S. 305, 328 n.10, 108 S. Ct. 592, 98 L. Ed. 2d 686 (1988) ; Acumed LLC v. Stryker Corp., 551 F.3d 1323, 1330 (Fed. Cir. 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Yakus v. United States, 321 U.S. 414, 441, 64 S. Ct. 660, 88 L. Ed. 834, 28 Ohio Op. 220 (1944) ; Carey v. Klutznick, 637 F. 2d 834, 839 (2d Cir. 1980) .

50 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
2. Seeking Permanent Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.24. through 7.29

[Reserved]

§§ 7.24.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
3. Seeking Preliminary Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.30

§ 7.30 Preliminary Injunction Preserves Status Quo Pending Final Determination of Meritsn1

A preliminary injunction is an interlocutory order issued as a means of preserving the status quo between the parties pending a final determination of the merits of an action. n2

A preliminary injunction may be sought only in connection with a pending action in which a permanent injunction is sought. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Golden Gate Rest. Ass'n v. City of San Francisco, 512 F.3d 1112, 1116 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See James Luterbach Constr. Co. v. Adamkus, 781 F.2d 599, 603 (7th Cir. 1986) ; Stewart v. INS, 762 F. 2d 193, 198 (2d Cir. 1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
3. Seeking Preliminary Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.31

§ 7.31 Factors Considered in Granting or Denying Preliminary Injunctionn1

In determining whether to grant a preliminary injunction, the movant must demonstrate both of the following elements: n2

- Irreparable harm
- Likelihood of success on the merits

A party seeking a preliminary injunction must demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits and also establish that irreparable injury is likely in the absence of an injunction; a possibility of such injury is not sufficient. n3 Courts should pay particular regard to public consequences in employing the extraordinary remedy of injunction. n4 A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary remedy never awarded as of right. n5 In each case, courts must balance the competing claims of injury and must consider the effect on each party of the granting or withholding of the requested relief. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.22, 65.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Doran v. Salem Inn, Inc., 422 U.S. 922, 931, 95 S. Ct. 2561, 45 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1975) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 261 (2009) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 261 (2009) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Munaf v. Omar, 553 U.S. 674, 128 S. Ct. 2207, 2218, 171 L. Ed. 2d (2008) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Amoco Production Co. v. Village of Gambell, 480 U.S. 531, 542, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
3. Seeking Preliminary Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.32

§ 7.32 Preparing Papers in Support of Motion for Preliminary Injunctionn1

[1] Providing Adequate Notice

The party seeking preliminary injunctive relief must provide notice to all adverse parties to afford a fair opportunity to oppose the motion. n2 The notice requirement also applies to any modification of a preliminary injunction that substantially affects a party's property interest. n3

The court has discretion to determine whether the notice provided by the applicant is adequate. n3.1

For discussion of notice requirements for motions, see Ch. 2, The Mechanics of Motion Practice. Consult the local district court rules, as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge for notice requirements.

[2] Importance of Supporting Affidavits

Affidavits in support of a motion for preliminary injunction should set forth the evidence demonstrating the need for injunctive relief, and may serve as the sole basis for the court's ruling if the parties waive a hearing, or if the court concludes that there are no critical issues of fact necessitating a hearing. n4

Supporting affidavits should address each of the factors for injunctive relief [see § 7.31]. It is critical that the supporting papers be as detailed and credible as possible. Every affidavit should explain the basis for the affiant's knowledge, and should give sufficient personal information to make the affiant credible as a person. When drafting an affidavit, it is helpful to present the information to the court in the same fashion as if the affiant were testifying on the witness stand. But, be as concise as the facts permit, as the papers may be read hurriedly. They should be well organized, with headings and indices that will assist the court in understanding the facts justifying the injunction. All relevant documents should be submitted as exhibits.

For discussion of supporting affidavits, including formatting requirements, see Ch.2, The Mechanics of Motion Practice. The rules of the assigned judge should also be consulted.

[3] Submitting Supporting Memorandum of Law

Generally, and consistent with local practice, a memorandum of law must be submitted in support of a motion for a preliminary injunction. The memorandum should be as complete as possible, integrating the facts and the law justifying the relief, with citations to the supporting affidavits and exhibits.

For discussion of memoranda of law, see Ch. 1, The Mechanics of Motion Practice. The rules of the assigned judge should also be consulted for memorandum of law requirements.

[4] Submitting Proposed Order

Consult the local district court rules, as well as the rules of the assigned judge, with respect to submitting proposed orders. For discussion of proposed orders, see Ch. 1, The Mechanics of Motion Practice.

[5] Filing Complaint Contemporaneously With Preliminary Injunction Motion

Injunctive relief may be granted only in the context of a pending action, which generally means that a complaint has been filed either prior to or contemporaneously with the application for injunctive relief. n5

If the motion for a preliminary injunction is filed "contemporaneously" with the complaint, the movant should first file the complaint so that the docket number assigned can be included on the motion, thereby confirming to the assigned judge that the injunctive relief is indeed being sought in the context of a "pending" action.

[6] Submitting Other Papers in Support of Motion

[6.--1] Verified Pleadings

Allegations contained in a verified complaint may be used to support a motion for a preliminary injunction. n6

[6.--2] Deposition Transcripts

Transcripts of depositions taken under oath may be used to support a motion for a preliminary injunction. n7 Indeed, deposition testimony may be more persuasive than an affidavit, particularly if the deponent was subjected to cross-examination.

Typically, the expedited nature of a preliminary injunction motion inhibits the movant's ability to take depositions, obtain the transcripts, and submit them prior to argument on the motion, but the transcripts may supplement the motion.

[6.--3] Transcripts of Prior Hearings

Transcripts of prior hearings may be used to support a motion for preliminary injunction. n8

[6.--4] Affidavits

A party typically submits one or more affidavits in support of a motion for a preliminary injunction. n9 Although arguments on a motion for a preliminary injunction often must be prepared in haste, great care should be taken in preparation of affidavits, since the weight given to affidavits is within the court's discretion.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsEvidenceTestimonyLay WitnessesPersonal

Knowledge

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a)(1); see also Wyandotte Nation v. Sebelius, 443 F.3d 1247, 1252-1253 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Dr. Jose S. Belaval, Inc. v. Perez-Perdomo, 465 F.3d 33, 37 (1st Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. See Atwood Turnkey Drilling, Inc. v. Petroleo Brasileiro, SA, 875 F.2d 1174, 1177-1178 (5th Cir. 1989) ; People ex rel. Hartigan v. Peters, 871 F.2d 1336, 1339-1341 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Consolidated Gold Fields PLC v. Minorco S.A., 871 F.2d 252, 256 (2d Cir. 1989) ; Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 490 F.2d 400, 403 (2d Cir. 1973) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See James Luterbach Constr. Co. v. Adamkus, 781 F.2d 599, 601 (7th Cir. 1986) ; Stewart v. INS, 762 F.2d 193, 198 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Bascom Food Prods. Corp. v. Reese Finer Foods, Inc., 715 F. Supp. 616, 624 (D. N.J. 1989) (movant may not rely upon allegations in unverified pleadings); Huk-A-Poo Sportswear, Inc. v. Little Lisa, Ltd., 74 F.R.D. 621, 624 n.1 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Cf. Hoover v. Switlik Parachute Co., 663 F.2d 964, 967 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Redac Project 6426, Inc. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 402 F.2d 789, 790 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Dixon, 835 F.2d 554, 558 (5th Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
3. Seeking Preliminary Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.33

§ 7.33 Hearing on Motion for Preliminary Injunctionn*

[1] Hearing Required If Essential Facts in Dispute

A hearing on a motion for a preliminary injunction is required if there is a dispute as to essential facts. n1 No hearing is required when the issues are primarily questions of law. n2

[2] Adverse Party May Waive Preliminary Injunction Hearing

A party against whom an injunction is sought will be found to have waived its right to a hearing where that party was demonstrably "content to rest" on affidavits submitted to the court. n3

[3] Conduct of Hearing on Motion for Preliminary Injunction

If the court sets a hearing on the motion for preliminary injunctive relief [see [1], [2], above], the opposing party must be afforded an opportunity to cross-examine the moving party's witnesses, and to present evidence. n4

[4] Consolidating Hearing on Motion for Preliminary Injunction With Trial

The court may order the trial on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the preliminary injunction hearing. The court may make this determination before or after the commencement of the preliminary injunction hearing, but generally will require that the parties have clear notice that a consolidated hearing will be held. n5

Consolidation is discretionary, and the trial judge may order advancement and consolidation either on motion of a party, stipulation by all parties, or sua sponte. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCriminal Law & ProcedurePreliminary ProceedingsPreliminary HearingsWaiver

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Cobell v. Norton, 391 F.3d 251, 261 (D.C. Cir. 2004) ; Rosario-Urdaz v. Rivera-Hernandez, 350 F.3d 219, 222-224 (1st Cir. 2003) ; Feld v. Zale Corp., 62 F.3d 746, 763-766 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Certified Restoration Dry Cleaning Network, L.L.C. v. Tenke Corp., 511 F.3d 535, 552 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fengler v. Numismatic Americana, Inc., 832 F. 2d 745, 748 (2d Cir. 1987) ; see also International Molders' & Allied Workers' Local U. v. Nelson, 799 F.2d 547, 555 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Visual Sciences, Inc. v. Integrated Communications, Inc., 660 F. 2d 56, 58 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a)(2); Able v. United States, 44 F.3d 128, 132 (2d Cir. 1995) , vacated on other grounds, 88 F.3d 1280 (2d Cir. 1996) ; K-Mart Corp. v. Davis, 756 F. Supp. 62, 66 (D. P.R. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Cronin v. United States Dep't of Agriculture, 919 F.2d 439, 445 (7th Cir. 1990) ; John v. Louisiana, 757 F.2d 698, 704 (5th Cir. 1985) ; Glacier Park Found. v. Watt, 663 F.2d 882 886 (9th Cir. 1980) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
3. Seeking Preliminary Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.34

§ 7.34 Requirements of Order Granting or Denying Preliminary Injunctionn*

[1] Form of Injunction Order

Rule 65(d) governs the form and scope of injunction and restraining orders. n1

For discussion of those requirements, see §§ 7.70 -7.73.

[2] Security Must Be Posted by Applicant

Every preliminary injunction must require the applicant to post security to be used to compensate the enjoined party for the costs and damages resulting from wrongful enjoinment. The amount of the security, generally in the form of a bond or undertaking, is determined by the court. n2 Nevertheless, the movant should supply the factual predicate for the dollar amount of the security it proposes.

For discussion of security requirements, including exceptions to the general rule requiring security, see §§ 7.73-7.74.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.60, 65.61 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c); see Blumenthal v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 910 F.2d 1049, 1056 (2d Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
3. Seeking Preliminary Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.35

§ 7.35 Appealing Grant or Denial of Preliminary Injunctionn*

[1] Appealability of Preliminary Injunction Order

An order granting or denying a preliminary injunction is immediately appealable. n1

[2] Standard of Appellate Review

As a general rule, a district court's grant or denial of a preliminary injunction will not be disturbed absent an abuse of its discretion. n2 However, if the district court's ruling rests solely on a premise as to the applicable rule of law, and the facts are established or of no controlling relevance, that ruling may be reviewed de novo on interlocutory appeal. n3

De novo review may be appropriate if the district court made its decision without a hearing, and failed to set forth those portions of the record that it thought obviated the necessity of such a hearing. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.24 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Ashcroft v. ACLU, 542 U.S. 656, 664-666 124 S. Ct. 2783, 159 L. Ed. 2d 690, (2004) ; Shire US Inc. v. Barr Labs. Inc., 329 F.3d 348, 352 (3d Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Thornburgh v. American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, 476 U.S. 747, 755-757, 106 S. Ct. 2169, 90 L. Ed. 2d 779 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Leslie & Elliott Co., 867 F.2d 150, 151 (2d Cir. 1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
3. Seeking Preliminary Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.36. through 7.39

[Reserved]

§§ 7.36.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.40

§ 7.40 Temporary Restraining Order Preserves Status Quo Until Hearing on Preliminary Injunctionn*

A temporary restraining order (TRO) is a short term device used to restrain the actions of a party until the court holds a hearing to determine whether to issue a preliminary injunction. n1

A TRO is generally granted only in the most urgent of cases where irreparable harm appears imminent, and the court concludes that there is insufficient time to conduct a hearing to consider a preliminary injunction. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.30 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Garcia v. Yonkers Sch. Dist., 561 F.3d 97, 106 (2d Cir. 2009) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See United States v. United Mine Workers, 330 U.S. 258, 293, 67 S. Ct. 677, 91 L. Ed. 884 (1947) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.41

§ 7.41 Comparing Temporary Restraining Orders and Preliminary Injunctionsn*

A temporary restraining order is an extraordinary remedy that differs from a preliminary injunction in terms of:

- Procedural requirements. A temporary restraining order may be issued ex parte upon a showing of the need for immediate relief, while a preliminary injunction generally will not be issued without noticed motion. n1 However, most judges will not entertain an application for a TRO without notice, or a diligent attempt to provide notice.

- Duration. A temporary restraining order typically remains in effect until a noticed motion can be heard, while a preliminary injunction generally remains in effect until a final adjudication on the merits. n2 A TRO granted ex parte may not exceed 14 days in duration, although the TRO may be extended on consent, or for good cause [see § 7.48].

- Appealability. A temporary restraining order is not appealable, while a preliminary injunction order is appealable. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.31 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See EEOC v. Steamship Clerks Union, Local 1066, 48 F.3d 594, 608 (1st Cir. 1995) ; Little Tor Auto Ctr. v. Exxon Co., USA, 822 F. Supp. 141, 143 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; see also § 7.43.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Warner Bros., Inc. v. Dae Rim Trading, Inc., 877 F.2d 1120, 1124-1125 (2d Cir. 1989) ; see also § 7.48.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Geneva Assurance Syndicate, Inc. v. Medical Emergency Servs. Assocs., 964 F.2d 599, 600 (7th Cir. 1992) ; SEC v. Unifund SAL, 910 F.2d 1028, 1034 (2d Cir.) , reh'g denied, 917 F.2d 98 (1990) .

60 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.42

§ 7.42 Similar Factors for Temporary Restraining Order as for Preliminary Injunctionn*

The factors considered by the court in assessing whether to grant a request for atemporary restraining order are similar to the factors considered on a motion for a preliminary injunction. n1

Specifically, the moving party must demonstrate that irreparable harm will be suffered absent a TRO. n2

The moving party is also required to show a likelihood of success on the merits of the action. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.36 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Towers Fin. Corp. v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 803 F. Supp. 820, 822 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; National Football League Properties, Inc. v. Coniglio, 554 F. Supp. 1224, 1226 (D. D.C. 1983) ; see also § 7.42.

(n3)Footnote 2. See United States v. Jenkins, 974 F.2d 32, 35 (5th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1580 (1993) ; Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith v. Bishop, 839 F. Supp. 68, 72-73 (D. Me. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith v. Bishop, 839 F. Supp. 68, 72 (D. Me. 1993) ; see also Natural Resources Defense Council v. EPA, 806 F. Supp. 275, 277 (D. D.C. 1992) .

61 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.43

§ 7.43 Providing Adequate Notice of Application for Temporary Restraining Ordern*

[1] Notice to Adverse Parties Generally Required

The party seeking a temporary restraining order generally must provide to the adverse party whatever notice of the application is feasible given the emergency. n1

For discussion of notice requirements for motions, see Ch. 2, The Mechanics of Motion Practice. Local district court rules, as well as the rules of the assigned judge, should also be consulted for notice requirements.

[2] Obtaining Temporary Restraining Order Without Notice

A temporary restraining order may be granted ex parte in urgent circumstances if both of the following requirements are met: n2

- It clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or by verified complaint that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the applicant before the adverse party or the adverse party's attorney can be heard in opposition

- The applicant's attorney certifies to the court in writing the efforts, if any, that have been made to give notice, and the reasons supporting the claim that notice should not be required

A TRO may be granted ex parte if advance notice of the application would itself be likely to trigger irreparable injury. n3

Attorneys have ethical obligations regarding ex parte communications with judges. If ex parte action is not clearly required under the circumstances, notice is an ethical obligation. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary

InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining OrdersGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.32-65.34 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Little Tor Auto Center v. Exxon Co. USA, 822 F. Supp. 141, 143 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See A.B.A. Code of Judicial Conduct Canon 3, § A(4); Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-35 (1980).

62 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.44

§ 7.44 Preparing Papers in Support of Application for Temporary Restraining Ordern*

[1] Same Papers Typically Support Application for TRO and Motion for Preliminary Injunction

An application for a temporary restraining order typically is filed contemporaneously with the motion for a preliminary injunction. In fact, in most cases, the request for a temporary restraining order is made in the motion or order show cause for preliminary injunctive relief. The same papers typically support both applications.

For discussion of preparing papers in support of the motion for preliminary injunctive relief, see § 7.32.

[2] Certificate of Applicant's Attorney If TRO Is Sought Ex Parte

If a temporary restraining order is sought ex parte [see § 7.43[2]], the applicant's attorney must certify to the court in writing the efforts, if any, that have been made to give notice, and the reasons supporting the claim that notice should not be required. n1 The chances of procuring a TRO are diminished if the judge is not confident that the applicant has been diligent in providing adequate notice of the application.

Any time an attorney signs a paper and submits it to the court, the attorney is certifying that the paper is not being submitted for any improper purpose, the legal contentions are warranted by existing law, the arguments are not frivolous, and the factual contentions and denial of factual contentions are warranted by the evidence. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.45

§ 7.45 Expedited Argument on Motion for Preliminary Injunction If TRO Granted Ex Parten*

If a temporary restraining order is granted ex parte [see § 7.43[2]], the preliminary injunction motion must be set for argument or hearing at the earliest possible time. The argument or hearing on the preliminary injunction takes precedence over all matters, except older motions of the same character. n1

When the motion for a preliminary injunction comes on for argument or hearing, the party who obtained the TRO must proceed with the application for a preliminary injunction, or the court must dissolve the TRO, absent consent to an extension. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.39 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b); Hudson v. Barr, 35 F.3d 970, 975-976 (6th Cir. 1993) .

64 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.46

§ 7.46 Content and Filing Requirements of Ex Parte Temporary Restraining Ordersn*

A temporary restraining order granted without notice must: n1

- Be indorsed with the date and hour of issuance
- Be filed immediately in the clerk's office
- Define the injury, and state why it is irreparable
- State why the order was granted without notice
- Expire within 14 days, unless extended on consent or for good cause

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.37 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

65 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.47

§ 7.47 Security Must Be Posted by Applicantn*

A temporary restraining order must require the applicant to post security, generally in the form of a bond. The security is used to compensate the enjoined party for the costs and damages resulting from wrongful enjoinment. The amount of the security is determined by the court. n1 Nevertheless, the movant should supply the factual predicate for the dollar amount of the security it proposes.

For discussion of security for injunctions, including exceptions to the general rule requiring security, see §§ 7.73.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.50-65.53 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c); see District 17 U.M.W.A. v. A&M Trucking, 991 F.2d 108, 110 (4th Cir. 1993) ; Blumenthal v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 910 F.2d 1049, 1056 (2d Cir. 1990) ; Hoxworth v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., 903 F.2d 186, 209-211 (3d Cir. 1990) .

66 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.48

§ 7.48 Limited Duration of Temporary Restraining Order Issued Ex Parten*

[1] TRO Granted Ex Parte May Not Exceed 14 Days

A temporary restraining order granted ex parte may not exceed 14 days in duration, subject to an extension on consent or for good cause. n1

[2] Extension of TRO Granted Ex Parte

[2.--1] Extension for Good Cause

A temporary restraining order granted ex parte may be extended beyond its 14-day limit for good cause shown, for no longer than one additional period of not longer than 14 days. The reasons for the extension must be entered of record. n2

A showing of good cause for an extension might include the unavailability of a hearing date for the preliminary injunction motion within the 14-day period, the inability to serve adverse parties within the 14-day period, or the need for additional expedited discovery.

[2.--2] Extension on Consent

A temporary restraining order granted ex parte may be extended on consent of the enjoined party. n3 Frequently, the enjoined party will need additional time to prepare its defense, particularly if expedited discovery has been ordered.

[2.--3] Deadline for Requesting Extension

A request for extension of a temporary restraining order granted ex parte must be made prior to the expiration of the existing TRO. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n5)Footnote 4. See SEC v. Unifund Sal, 910 F.2d 1028, 1034-1035 (2d Cir.) , reh'g denied, 917 F.2d 98 (1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.49

§ 7.49 Grant or Denial of Temporary Restraining Order Not Appealablen*

An order granting or denying a temporary restraining order is generally not appealable. n1

However, if the court extends a temporary restraining order granted ex parte beyond 28 days from its entry date without the consent of the enjoined party [see § 7.48], the TRO becomes a preliminary injunction, and is immediately appealable. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.41 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Geneva Assurance v. Medical Emergency Servs., 964 F.2d 599, 600 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Hoh v. Pepsico, Inc., 491 F.2d 556, 560 (2d Cir. 1974) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Sampson v. Murray, 415 U.S. 61, 86-88, 94 S. Ct. 937, 39 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1974) ; United States v. Crawford, 329 F.3d 131, 136-138 (2d Cir. 2003) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.50

§ 7.50 Dissolving or Modifying Temporary Restraining Ordern*

[1] Motion on Two Days' Notice

A party affected by a temporary restraining order may move for dissolution or modification of the TRO on two days' notice, or such shorter notice as the court may prescribe. The court must hear and determine the motion expeditiously. n1

A motion for dissolution or modification of the TRO may be a wise tactical maneuver, as the defendant will be provided with an early opportunity to present facts to the court.

For discussion of motion practice in the federal courts, see Ch. 1, The Mechanics of Motion Practice. Local district court rules, as well as the rules and procedures of the assigned judge, should also be consulted for motion requirements and procedures.

[2] Factors Considered on Motion

In assessing whether to dissolve or modify a temporary restraining order, the court must consider whether the original purpose of the TRO would be facilitated. n2

A dissolution or modification may be granted if the restrained party demonstrates that the circumstances of the case have changed, or that it would be severely injured by the temporary restraining order. n3

Likewise, the court may modify or dissolve a TRO if the underlying law supporting the original TRO has been amended or repealed. n4

Of course, if the defendant can demonstrate that the TRO was improvidently granted on the facts, the TRO should be dissolved or modified.

[3] Order Dissolving or Modifying Injunction Immediately Appealable

An order dissolving or modifying a preliminary injunction is immediately appealable. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(4).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Patterson v. Newspaper & Mail Deliverers' Union, 13 F.3d 33, 38-39 (2d Cir. 1993) ; Consumer Advisory Bd. v. Glover, 989 F.2d 65, 67 (1st Cir. 1993) ; American Can Co. v. Mansukhani, 742 F.2d 314, 322-323 (7th Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See New York State Ass'n for Retarded Children v. Carey, 706 F.2d 956, 967 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 915 (1983) ; but see Transgo, Inc. v. AJAC Transp. Parts Corp., 911 F.2d 363, 365 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Protectoseal Co. v. Barancik, 23 F.3d 1184, 1187 (7th Cir. 1994) ; United States v. Snepp, 897 F.2d 138, 141 (4th Cir.) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 816 (1990) ; Wyatt v. King, 803 F. Supp. 377, 384-385 (M.D. Ala. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
B. Seeking Injunctive Relief
4. Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.51. through 7.59

[Reserved]

§§ 7.51.[Reserved]

70 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
C. Opposing Application for Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.60

§ 7.60 Considering Equitable Defensesn*

[1] Traditional Equitable Defenses May Be Raised

Traditional equitable defenses [see [2], [3], below] may be raised in opposition to an application for provisional or permanent injunctive relief. n1

[2] Unclean Hands

The doctrine of unclean hands may be raised as a defense to an application for provisional or permanent injunctive relief. An applicant has unclean hands if he or she engaged in acts of bad faith directly related to the issues in the underlying action. n2

[3] Laches, Estoppel, and Waiver

Laches, estoppel, and waiver are available as defenses to oppose the applicant's unreasonable delay in applying for provisional or permanent injunctive relief. n3

If the movant has unreasonably delayed its application for injunctive relief, the opposing party should highlight any change in its position during the delay.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsMandatory InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.06[5] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Members of Bridgeport Hous. Auth. Police Force v. City of Bridgeport, 646 F.2d 55, 63

(2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 897 (1981) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Jeffries v. Harleston, 828 F. Supp. 1066, 1096 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) , aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 21 F.3d 1238 (2d Cir.) , vacated on other grounds, 513 U.S. 996 (1994) ; Houston Oilers v. Neely, 361 F.2d 36, 42 (10th Cir. 1966) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Citizens & Landowners Against the Miles City/New Underwood Powerline v. Secretary, U.S. Dept. of Energy, 683 F.2d 1171, 1176 (8th Cir. 1982) ; Kay v. Austin, 621 F.2d 809, 813 (6th Cir. 1980) ; Jeffries v. Harleston, 828 F. Supp. 1066, 1095 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) , aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 21 F.3d 1238 (2d Cir.) , vacated on other grounds, 513 U.S. 996 (1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
C. Opposing Application for Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.61

§ 7.61 Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remediesn*

Failure to exhaust administrative remedies required by statute may be raised as a defense to an application for provisional or permanent injunctive relief. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityExhaustion of RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJusticiabilityExhaustion of RemediesAdministrative RemediesCivil ProcedureJusticiabilityExhaustion of RemediesFailure to ExhaustCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.06[4] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Renegotiation Bd. v. Bannercraft Clothing Co., 415 U.S. 1, 24, 94 S. Ct. 1028, 39 L. Ed. 2d 123 (1974) ; Rockland Physician Assocs., P.C. v. Grodin, 616 F. Supp. 958, 962 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
C. Opposing Application for Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.62

§ 7.62 Adequate Remedy at Lawn*

Availability of an adequate remedy at law may be raised as a defense to an application for provisional or permanent injunctive relief. n1 Frequently, money damages will compensate for the harm claimed.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.06[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Northern Cal. Power Agency v. Grace Geothermal Corp., 469 U.S. 1306, 1306, 105 S. Ct. 459, 83 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
C. Opposing Application for Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.63

§ 7.63 Legal Defenses

Legal defenses based on the adequacy of the plaintiff's complaint, the papers supporting the motion, or the court's jurisdiction may be raised in opposition to an application for provisional or permanent injunctive relief. n1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Cook v. Peter Kiewit Sons Co., 775 F.2d 1030, 1034 (9th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1183 (1986) ; Visual Sciences, Inc. v. Integrated Communications, Inc., 660 F. 2d 56, 58 (2d Cir. 1981) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
C. Opposing Application for Injunctive Relief

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.64. through 7.69

[Reserved]

§§ 7.64.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
D. Drafting Injunction Order; Security Requirements

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.70

§ 7.70 Importance of Local District Court Rules and Rules of Assigned Judge

The practitioner should consult the local district court rules, as well as the rules of the assigned judge, with respect to submitting proposed orders. Some districts require the moving party to submit a proposed order together with the motion, and other districts require submission of a proposed order after the motion has been decided. Still other districts do not welcome, or may even prohibit, submission of proposed orders altogether.

For general discussion of proposed orders in the federal courts, see Ch. 1, The Mechanics of Motion Practice.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsMandatory InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
D. Drafting Injunction Order; Security Requirements

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.71

§ 7.71 Requirements of Injunction Ordern*

[1] Rule 65(d) Requirements

An injunction or temporary restraining order must: n1

- Set forth the reasons for its issuance [see [2], below]
- Be specific in its terms [see [3], below]
- Describe in reasonable detail the acts to be restrained [see [4], below]

Ambiguities in the order generally will be resolved in favor of the enjoined party. n2

[2] Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

Every order granting an injunction, and every temporary restraining order, must set forth the findings of fact and conclusions of law that are the basis of the court's decision. n3

[3] Injunction Order Must Be Specific in Terms

Every injunction and temporary restraining order must be specific in its terms. n4

The specificity requirement serves to prevent uncertainty and confusion in complying with the order, and to facilitate informed appellate review. n5

[4] Description of Acts Prohibited or Required

Every injunction and temporary restraining order must describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the complaint or other document, the act or acts restrained. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsMandatory InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.60 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. New York Tel. Co. v. Communications Workers of America, AFL-CIO, 445 F. 2d 39, 48 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a)(2); Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(A); e360 Insight v. Spamhaus Project, 500 F.3d 594, 604 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(B); see JTH Tax, Inc. v. H & R Block E. Tax Servs., 359 F.3d 699, 706 (4th Cir. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Schmidt v. Lessard, 414 U.S. 473, 475-476, 94 S. Ct. 713, 38 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1974) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(C); see Schmidt v. Lessard, 414 U.S. 473, 475-476, 94 S. Ct. 713, 38 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1974) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
D. Drafting Injunction Order; Security Requirements

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.72

§ 7.72 Persons Bound by Injunction or Restraining Ordern1

An injunction or restraining order is binding upon the parties to the action. Additionally, an injunction or restraining order is binding upon the parties' officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and upon persons in active concert or participation with the parties who receive actual notice of the order. Notice may be given by personal service or otherwise. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsMandatory InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.61 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2).

78 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
D. Drafting Injunction Order; Security Requirements

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.73

§ 7.73 Security Requirementsn*

[1] Security Required for Temporary Restraining Orders and Preliminary Injunctions

Temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions may be not granted unless the applicant posts security, generally in the form of a bond. The security is used to compensate the enjoined party for the costs and damages resulting from a wrongful injunction. n1

The amount of the security is determined by the court. n2 Nevertheless, the movant should supply the factual predicate for the dollar amount of the security it proposes.

[2] Exceptions to Security Requirement

Security for a TRO or preliminary injunction [see [1], above] will not be required of the United States, or any officer or agency of the United States. n3

In addition, statutes may exempt particular actions from the requirement of injunction security. n4 However, Rule 65(c) does not facially recognize these exemptions.

[3] Court Has Discretion to Dispense With Security in Limited Circumstances

A district court issuing an injunction or a restraining order has the discretion to dispense with the security requirement under limited circumstances, including the following:

- The security requirement might discourage the initiation of a suit to enforce important federal rights or public interests n5
- There is no risk of monetary loss to the enjoined party n6
- The movant has "considerable assets" to pay damages n7
- A continuing relationship of the parties affords the enjoined party anopportunity to recover damages at a later time n8

[4] Importance of Value of Security

The amount of the security required to be posted generally is the maximum amount that may be recovered by a wrongfully enjoined party in the absence of proof that the movant sought to enjoin with malicious intent and without probable cause. n9

If it becomes clear during the hearing on the motion for injunctive relief that the court intends to grant the injunction, the respondent should shift its focus to obtaining the largest possible security to protect against damages resulting from wrongful enjoinment. Tactically, justifying a large amount of security may bear on whether the injunction is even granted.

If security for the injunction has not been posted, a wrongfully enjoined party generally will not be able to recover damages. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.50-65.53 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c); see Nintendo of Am., Inc. v. Lewis Galoob Toys, Inc., 16 F.3d 1032, 1036 (9th Cir. 1994) ; Blumenthal v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 910 F.2d 1049, 1056 (2d Cir. 1990) ; Continuum Co. v. Incepts, Inc., 873 F.2d 801 803 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c); Save Our Sonoran, Inc. v. Flowers, 408 F.3d 1113, 1126 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c).

(n5)Footnote 4. See People ex rel. Van de Kamp v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, 766 F.2d 1319, 1325-1326 (9th Cir. 1985) ; Reinders Bros., Inc. v. Rain Bird E. Sales Corp., 627 F.2d 44, 54 (7th Cir. 1980) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See People ex rel. Van De Kamp v. Tahoe Reg'l Planning Agency, 766 F.2d 1319, 1325-1326 (9th Cir. 1985) ; Crowley v. Local No. 82, 679 F.2d 978, 1000-1001 (1st Cir. 1982) , rev'd on other grounds, 467 U.S. 526 (1984) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Stuart, 85 F.3d 975, 985 (2d Cir. 1996) ; Coquina Oil Corp. v. Transwestern Pipeline co., 825 F.2d 1461, 1462 (10th Cir. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Continental Oil Co. v. Frontier Ref. Co., 338 F.2d 780, 782-783 (10th Cir. 1964) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See United States v. Bedford Assocs., 618 F.2d 904, 916-917 n.23 (2d Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 456 U.S. 914 (1982) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See Blumenthal v. Merrill Lynch, 910 F.2d 1049, 1056 (2d Cir. 1990) ; Continuum Co. v. Incepts, Inc., 873 F.2d 801 803 (5th Cir. 1989) ; Lucsik v. Board of Educ., 621 F.2d 841, 842 (6th Cir. 1980) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See W.R. Grace & Co. v. Local Union 759, 461 U.S. 757, 770 n.14, 103 S. Ct. 2177, 76 L. Ed. 2d 298 (1983) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
D. Drafting Injunction Order; Security Requirements

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.74

§ 7.74 Increasing or Decreasing Amount of Securityn*

A party may move the court to increase or decrease the amount of the security for the injunction as long as the restraining order or injunction is in effect. n1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.50[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Continuum Co. v. Incepts, Inc., 873 F.2d 801, 804 (5th Cir. 1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
D. Drafting Injunction Order; Security Requirements

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.75

§ 7.75 Collecting Security When Final Judgment Favors Wrongfully Enjoined Partyn*

Collection on injunction security may be had when a final judgment favors a wrongfully enjoined party that suffered damages as a result of the injunction or restraining order. n1

Rule 65.1 permits enforcement of a surety's liability on motion, without the necessity of an independent action. n2 Federal law determines what costs and damages are recoverable under an injunction bond. n3 Attorney's fees are generally not recoverable under an injunction bond. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesBondsSuretiesLiabilityCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.53 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Polymer Tech. Corp. v. Mimran, 975 F.2d 58, 65 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65.1.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. S.E.K. Constr. Co., 436 F.2d 1345, 1351 (10th Cir. 1971) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Matek v. Murat, 862 F.2d 720, 734 (9th Cir. 1988) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
D. Drafting Injunction Order; Security Requirements

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.76. through 7.79

[Reserved]

§§ 7.76.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
E. Enforcing Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.80

§ 7.80 Court May Utilize Power of Contemptn*

A court may enforce an injunction or temporary restraining order through civil or criminal contempt. n1

Civil contempt is remedial in nature and designed to coerce obedience and to compensate the complainant for losses sustained. Criminal contempt is designed to vindicate the court's authority. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining OrdersCivil ProcedureSanctionsContemptGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsContemptCivil ContemptCriminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesMiscellaneous OffensesContemptGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.80 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See United States v. United Mine Workers, 330 U.S. 258, 293-294, 67 S. Ct. 677, 91 L. Ed. 884 (1947) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See International Union, United Mine Workers v. Bagwell, 512 U.S. 821, 824-826, 114 S. Ct. 2552, 129 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
E. Enforcing Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.81

§ 7.81 Effect of Reversal of Injunctionn*

A prosecution of civil contempt collapses if an injunction is reversed. A prosecution of criminal contempt is not affected by a reversal of the underlying order or by the mootness of the underlying action. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining OrdersCivil ProcedureSanctionsContemptGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. See Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.80 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See United States v. United Mine Workers, 330 U.S. 258, 294-295, 67 S. Ct. 677, 91 L. Ed. 884 (1947) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
E. Enforcing Injunction

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 7.82. through 7.89

[Reserved]

§§ 7.82.[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
F. Forms 2

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.90

§ 7.90 FORM: Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS EASTERN DIVISION

BOSTON CLOTHING, LTD.,	)
Plaintiff,	)
v.	)	Civil No. .....
PHOENIX, INC., CREST, INC., SAM JONES and MARCY DAY,	)
Defendants.	)
	)

EMERGENCY MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

BOSTON CLOTHING, LTD. ("Boston"), by its attorneys, hereby moves this Court for entry of a temporary restraining order against defendants Phoenix, Inc. ("Phoenix"), Crest, Inc. ("Crest"), Sam Jones and Marcy Day (collectively, the "Defendants"), and in support thereof states as follows:

1. On ....., defendants Phoenix, Inc. and Crest, Inc. entered into a letter agreement with Boston (the "Agreement") whereby Boston sold and assigned to Phoenix and Crest its retail clothing business and certain assets, including without limitation Boston's clothing inventory (the "Inventory"), equipment, furnishings, fixtures and leasehold interests in Boston's Dayton store (the "Dayton Store") and Boston's Portland Store (collectively the "Assets").

2. Pursuant to Section 3(b) of the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest were to pay Boston on or before ....., thirty percent (30%) of the Base Purchase Price as defined in the Agreement ($150,000).

3. In violation of Section 3(b) of the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest failed to pay to Boston on or before ....., the second installment of the Base Purchase Price.

4. Pursuant to Section 11 of the Agreement and in order to secure the payment of their obligations under the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest granted to Boston a security interest in the Assets. Boston properly perfected its security interest in the Assets as evidenced by the copy of UCC-1 Financing Statement which is attached hereto.

5. Also pursuant to Section 11 of the Agreement, Defendants agreed that, in the event they failed to make any payment due or contemplated under the Agreement, Defendants would permit Boston to have access to the Dayton Store for the purpose of protecting and enforcing Boston's rights as a secured party in and to the Assets.

6. Since ....., Defendants have conducted a "going out of business sale" at the Stores. Upon failing to make the second payment contemplated by the Agreement, Defendants dramatically reduced the prices of merchandise in the Stores in an apparent attempt to liquidate rapidly the remaining Inventory before Boston could seek to enforce its security interest. In addition Defendants have distributed a 500,000-piece mailer advertising the sale of men's suits for the sum of $99.00 and $109.00, which at wholesale cost Boston in excess of $125.00 per item.

7. On the basis of previous payments made to Boston by Defendants, Boston estimates that Defendants are selling approximately $10,000 to $15,000 worth of merchandise per day at the Stores. Boston further estimates that Defendants will sell at an absolute minimum $50,000 worth of merchandise over the coming weekend.

8. Subsequent to execution of the Agreement, Defendants have transferred a considerable portion of the remaining Inventory out of the Stores into Defendants' other business locations. Within the last several weeks, Defendants have closed the bank account into which sales proceeds from the Portland Store had been deposited.

9. Defendants' continued sale of the Inventory will transform Boston from a secured to an unsecured creditor of Phoenix and Crest. Moreover, Defendants' recent actions, such as reducing prices, transferring the Inventory out of the Stores and closing the Portland Store bank account, will create tracing problems of enormous magnitude.

10. Boston has no adequate remedy at law, because the failure of Defendants to make the payments required by the Agreement raises serious doubts as to the ability of Phoenix and Crest to satisfy any judgment which is entered by this Court.

11. Boston will be irreparably harmed if Phoenix and Crest are not enjoined from further dissipating Boston's security.

12. Phoenix and Crest have continued to utilize Boston's corporate name in the conduct of a going-out-of-business sale.

13. Defendants' breach of the Agreement and repudiation of any future obligations under the Agreement renders it virtually certain that Boston will be forced to reoccupy the Dayton Store and operate its business in order to comply with the terms of the Dayton Lease on which Boston remains liable by virtue of a guarantee agreement with the Dayton Store's landlord.

14. Defendants' conduct of the going-out-of-business sale under Boston's name has destroyed much of the good will which Boston had established with its clientele and has dramatically reduced the going concern value of Boston's business. The damage to Boston's good will will be exacerbated with each additional day that Defendants are permitted to misuse Boston's name.

15. Boston has no adequate remedy at law, because the continued utilization of Boston's corporate name by Defendants in the context of the going-out-of-business sale and in a manner which is destructive of Boston's client base is not compensable by monetary damages.

16. Boston will be irreparably harmed if Defendants are not enjoined from their continuing use of Boston's corporate name.

WHEREFORE, Boston prays that this Court enter an order:

A. Temporarily enjoining Defendants from selling any additional items of Inventory;

B. Temporarily enjoining Defendants from continuing to utilize Boston's corporate name;

C. Directing Defendants to segregate the Inventory from merchandise belonging to Phoenix, Inc. and Crest, Inc.;

D. Directing Defendants to transfer to Boston the remaining Inventory; and

E. Granting such other and further relief as this Court deems equitable and just.

Respectfully submitted,

BOSTON CLOTHING, LTD.By: .....

2 Both of the following forms were provided courtesy of Robert L. Byman of Jenner & Block, Chicago, Illinois.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Injunctions
F. Forms 2

1-7 Federal Litigation Guide § 7.91

§ 7.91 FORM: Complaint for Injunctive Relief

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS EASTERN DIVISION

BOSTON CLOTHING, LTD.,	)
Plaintiff,	)
v.	)	Civil No. .....
PHOENIX, INC., CREST, INC., SAM JONES and MARCY DAY,	)
Defendants.	)
	)

COMPLAINT FOR INJUNCTION AND OTHER RELIEF

BOSTON CLOTHING, LTD. ("Boston"), by its attorneys, hereby complains against defendants Phoenix, Inc. ("Phoenix"), Crest, Inc. ("Crest"), Sam Jones and Marcy Day (collectively, the "Defendants") as follows:

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. This is an action for an injunction and for replevin, forcible entry and detainer, fraud and breach of contract. Jurisdiction is based upon diversity of citizenship pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332 and upon principles of pendent jurisdiction. The matter in controversy exceeds $75,000.00, exclusive of interest and costs.

2. Defendants Phoenix, Crest, Jones and Day all reside in the Northern District of Illinois. In addition, defendants Phoenix and Crest, each a corporation, are subject to personal jurisdiction in the Northern District of Illinois. In addition, upon information and belief, certain of the acts and events complained of in this Complaint occurred within the Northern District of Illinois. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a) and (c).

THE PARTIES

3. Boston is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Massachusetts with its principal place of business at ..... Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts. Until ....., Boston conducted a retail clothing business in Illinois at ..... Street, Dayton, Illinois (the "Dayton Store") and at ..... Mall, Portland, Illinois (the "Portland Store") (collectively, the "Stores").

4. Defendant Phoenix is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its sole office and principal place of business at ..... Street, Chicago, Illinois.

5. Defendant Crest is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its sole office and principal place of business at ..... Street, Chicago, Illinois.

6. Defendant Sam Jones is a resident of the Northern District of Illinois and is the Secretary of Phoenix and the President of Crest.

7. Defendant Marcy Day is a resident of the Northern District of Illinois and is the President of Phoenix and the Secretary of Crest.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

8. On ....., defendants Phoenix and Crest entered into a letter agreement with Boston (the "Agreement") whereby Boston sold and assigned to Phoenix and Crest its retail clothing business and certain assets, including without limitation Plaintiff's clothing inventory (the "Inventory"), equipment, furnishings, fixtures and leasehold interests in the Dayton Store and the Portland Store (collectively, the "Assets"). A copy of the executed Agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit A and is incorporated herein by reference.

9. As of the date of the Agreement, the value of the Inventory equaled $551,085, as evidenced by a Certificate of Valuation executed by the parties to the Agreement on ..... A copy of the Certificate of Valuation is attached hereto as Exhibit B and is incorporated herein by reference.

10. Pursuant to Section 3 of the Agreement, the purchase price of Boston's business, inventory and leasehold interests was to be the sum of (a) the value of the Inventory as evidenced by the Certificate of Valuation; (b) $1 to be allocated to Boston's equipment, furnishings and fixtures; and (c) $100,000. The sum of the first two items ($551,086) is defined in Section 2(c) of the Agreement as the "Base Purchase Price." The Base Purchase Price plus the sum of $100,000 is defined in Section 3(c) of the Agreement as the "Guaranteed Purchase Price" ($651,086). In addition, Section 3(d) of the Agreement provides that the Guaranteed Purchase Price shall be increased by certain stated sums and percentages in the event that sales by Phoenix and Crest at the Stores during the period from ..... until ..... (the "Sale Period"), exceed $1,400,000.

11. Pursuant to Section 3(b) of the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest were to pay to Boston 40% of the Base Purchase Price on or before ..... ($551,086 x.40 = $220,434.40), 30% of the Base Purchase Price on or before ..... ($551,086 x.30 = $165,325.80) and the final 30% of the Base Purchase Price ($165,325.80) on or before ..... In addition, pursuant to Section 3(c) of the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest were to pay to Boston no later than ....., the sum of $100,000 as the remaining portion of the Guaranteed Purchase Price.

12. Pursuant to Section 11 of the Agreement and in order to secure the payment of their obligations under the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest granted to Boston a security interest in the Assets. Boston properly perfected its security interest in the Assets as evidenced by the copy of the UCC-1 financing statement which is attached hereto as Exhibit C.

13. Pursuant to Section 5 of the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest agreed to accept an assignment of Boston's leasehold interest in the Dayton Store (the "Dayton Lease"), subject to the consent of the Dayton Store's landlord (the "Landlord"). A copy of the Assignment of Lease and Acceptance of Assignment by Assignees and Attornment which was executed by Marcy Day on behalf of Phoenix and Crest on or about ..... is attached hereto as Exhibit D.

14. A revised Assignment of Lease was delivered to Phoenix and Crest for execution on or about ..... The revised Assignment was virtually identical to the original Assignment executed by Marcy Day and in no material way affected the rights or potential liabilities of Phoenix or Crest. Copies of the original Assignment of Lease and the revised Assignment of Lease are attached hereto as Exhibits E and F, respectively.

15. With full knowledge that the Landlord had not accepted the Assignment of Lease at the time the Agreement was executed, Marcy Day, on behalf of Phoenix and Crest, nonetheless insisted on taking possession of the Stores on ..... Since ....., Phoenix and Crest have (a) occupied the Dayton Store, (b) utilized the Assets in the conduct of their business, (c) used Boston's name and good will to conduct business, and (d) sold a substantial portion of the Inventory. Upon information and belief, Boston alleges that Defendants have paid directly to the Landlord the rental payments due under the Dayton Lease.

16. On or before ....., Boston received from Phoenix and Crest the approximate amount of $145,000. This sum represented 40% of the Base Purchase Price, less the sum of $75,000 pursuant to a Bulk Sale Stop Order issued by the Illinois Department of Revenue. The Defendants have represented that the sum of $75,000 is being held in an escrow account at the ..... Bank in Chicago.

17. Shortly after the revised Assignment of Lease was delivered to Defendants, Boston's counsel received a letter from an attorney for Phoenix and Crest in which it was claimed that Phoenix and Crest had been damaged by Boston's alleged failure to assign to Phoenix and Crest the Dayton Lease. Despite receipt of the revised Assignment and their expressed desire to have an executed assignment, Phoenix and Crest have refused to execute the revised Assignment of Lease and return it to Boston for execution by the Landlord.

18. In violation of Section 3(b) of the Agreement, Phoenix and Crest failed to make the second installment payment of the Base Purchase Price on or before ..... On ....., counsel for Phoenix and Crest verbally informed Boston's counsel that Phoenix and Crest did not intend to make any further payments pursuant to the Agreement and did not intend to execute the Assignment of Lease.

19. As of ....., Phoenix and Crest continue (a) to occupy the Stores, (b) to conduct business at the Stores, (c) to use Boston's name and good will, and (d) to sell the Inventory in which Boston has a valid and properly perfected security interest.

COUNT I

Injunctive Relief

20. Boston realleges and restates paragraphs 1-19 as though fully set forth herein.

21. By virtue of the UCC-1 Financing Statement, which is attached hereto as Exhibit C, Boston has a valid and properly perfected security interest in the Inventory.

22. Phoenix and Crest have recently reduced dramatically the prices of the merchandise in the Stores in an apparent attempt to liquidate rapidly the remaining Inventory.

23. Phoenix and Crest have transferred a significant portion of the Inventory out of the Stores and into Defendants' other business locations.

24. On information and belief, Defendants have closed the bank account into which sales proceeds from the Portland Store had been deposited.

25. The continued sale of the Inventory by Phoenix and Crest will transform Boston from a secured creditor to an unsecured creditor of Phoenix and Crest. Moreover, on information and belief, Defendants' recent actions, such as reducing prices, transferring the Inventory out of the Stores and closing the Portland Store bank account, will create tracing problems of enormous magnitude.

26. Boston has no adequate remedy at law, because the failure of Phoenix and Crest to make the payments required by the Agreement raises serious doubts as to the ability of Phoenix and Crest to satisfy any judgment that is entered by this Court.

27. Boston will be irreparably harmed if Phoenix and Crest are not enjoined from further dissipating Boston's security.

28. During the Sale Period, Phoenix and Crest have continued to utilize Boston's corporate name in the conduct of the going-out-of-business sale.

29. The repudiation of the Agreement by Phoenix and Crest and their refusal to execute the Assignment of Lease renders it virtually certain that Boston will be forced to reoccupy the Dayton Store and operate its business in order to comply with the terms of the Dayton Lease on which Boston remains liable by virtue of a guarantee agreement.

30. The conduct of the going-out-of-business sale under Boston's name by Phoenix and Crest has destroyed much of the good will which Boston had established with its clientele and has dramatically reduced the going-concern value of Boston's business. The damage to Boston's good will will be exacerbated with each additional day that Defendants are permitted to misuse Boston's name.

31. Boston has no adequate remedy at law, because the continued utilization of Boston's corporate name by Phoenix and Crest in the context of a going-out-of-business sale and in a manner that is destructive of Boston's client base is not compensable by monetary damages.

32. Boston will be irreparably harmed if Phoenix and Crest are not enjoined from their continuing use of Boston's corporate name.

WHEREFORE, Boston prays that this Court enter an order:

A. Temporarily and permanently enjoining Phoenix and Crest from selling any additional items of the Inventory;

B. Temporarily and permanently enjoining Phoenix and Crest from continuing to use Boston's corporate name;

C. Directing Phoenix and Crest to segregate the Inventory from merchandise belonging to Phoenix and Crest;

D. Directing Phoenix and Crest to transfer the remaining Inventory to Boston; and

E. Granting such other and further relief as this Court deems equitable and just.

COUNT II

Replevin

33. Boston realleges and restates paragraphs 1-19 as though fully set forth herein.

34. Boston is lawfully entitled to possession of the Assets by virtue of the unlawful refusal of Phoenix and Crest to make the payments required by the Agreement.

35. The Assets are unlawfully detained by Defendants in the Northern District of Illinois.

36. The Assets have not been taken for any tax, assessment or fine levied by virtue of any law of the State of Illinois against the property of Boston or against Boston individually, nor seized under any lawful process against the Assets, nor held by virtue of any order for replevin against Boston.

WHEREFORE, Boston prays that this Court enter an order:

A. Directing Defendants to transfer immediately to Boston the Assets, including but not limited to the remaining Inventory;

B. In the event Defendants fail to deliver the Assets to Boston, entering judgment against Defendants for the value of the remaining Assets;

C. Entering judgment against Defendants in the amount of $100,000 for Defendants' wrongful detention of the Assets; and

D. Granting such other and further relief as this Court deems equitable and just.

COUNT III

Forcible Entry and Detainer

37. Boston realleges and restates paragraphs 1-19 as though fully set forth herein.

38. By virtue of Section 5(d) of the Agreement, Boston was to assign to Phoenix and Crest the Dayton Lease.

39. On or about ....., Boston delivered to Phoenix and Crest an Assignment of Lease which had been executed by Boston and which had been verbally assented to by the Landlord.

40. Despite repeated requests for return of the executed Assignment of Lease, Phoenix and Crest have refused to execute the Assignment.

41. The continued occupation of the Dayton Store by Phoenix and Crest without a valid, executed assignment of lease is unlawful.

42. Boston is entitled to possession of the Dayton Store and defendants Phoenix and Crest are unlawfully withholding such possession from Boston.

WHEREFORE, Boston prays that this Court enter an order:

A. Directing Phoenix and Crest to vacate the Dayton Store;

B. Finding that Boston is entitled to possession of the Dayton Store;

C. Directing Phoenix and Crest to pay to Boston two times the rental payments for the Dayton Store for the period during which Phoenix and Crest have occupied the Dayton Store in violation of the Agreement; and

D. Granting such other and further relief as this Court deems equitable and just.

COUNT IV

Fraud

43. Boston realleges and restates paragraphs 1-19 as though fully set forth herein.

44. During the period from ..... until on or about ....., Phoenix and Crest had in their possession for execution the original Assignment of Lease but failed to execute and return the Assignment to Boston for forwarding to the Landlord.

45. On ....., Phoenix and Crest received copies of the revised Assignment of Lease which had previously been executed by Boston and verbally assented to by the Landlord.

46. The revised Assignment of Lease is virtually identical to the original Assignment executed by Marcy Day and does not affect materially the rights or potential liabilities of the Defendants.

47. From ....., until ....., Phoenix and Crest refused to execute the Assignment of Lease and return it to Boston for forwarding to the Landlord.

48. On information and belief, Phoenix and Crest actually raised the prices of merchandise in the Stores, including the Inventory, during the Sale Period, thereby diminishing the volume of sales at the Stores. Only after the Defendants had refused to make any further payments required by the Agreement did Defendants reduce the prices of the Inventory. On information and belief, this reduction in the prices of the Inventory was motivated by a desire to increase the volume of sales at the Stores and liquidate the remaining Inventory before Boston had an opportunity to enforce its security agreement against the Inventory.

49. During the Sale Period, Phoenix and Crest either fired or forced the resignation of the majority of Boston's previous employees.

50. On information and belief, Phoenix and Crest have closed the bank account into which Phoenix and Crest had deposited proceeds from sales at the Portland Store.

51. On information and belief, Defendants have failed to initiate any action to further the formation of the new corporate entity which was to commence operations at the Dayton Store after the Sale Period.

52. On information and belief, Defendants have failed to purchase any merchandise in order to conduct business at the Dayton Store after the Sale Period.

53. On information and belief, Defendants entered into the Agreement without any intention of performing the Agreement and with the intent to work a fraud upon Boston.

WHEREFORE, Boston prays that this Court enter an order:

A. Finding that Defendants have willfully breached the terms of the Agreement;

B. Awarding compensatory damages to Boston for Defendants' willful breach of the Agreement;

C. Awarding Boston exemplary damages in the amount of $5 million for Defendants' willful breach of the Agreement; and

D. Granting such other and further relief as this Court deems equitable and just.

COUNT V

Breach of Contract

54. Boston realleges and restates paragraphs 1-19 as though fully set forth herein.

55. Phoenix and Crest entered into a valid and enforceable agreement with Boston on .....

56. Phoenix and Crest breached the Agreement by failing to make the second installment payment of the Base Purchase Price and by anticipatorily repudiating their obligation to make the additional payments required by the Agreement.

57. Boston has been damaged by the breach of the Agreement by Phoenix and Crest in that (a) virtually all of Boston's employees have been fired or forced to resign, (b) Boston's business reputation has been damaged by virtue of Defendants having conducted a going-out-of-business sale at the Stores, (c) the failure of Phoenix and Crest to execute the Assignment of Lease has activated Boston's contingent liability as guarantor of the payments under the Dayton Lease, (d) Defendants' breach of the Agreement will require Boston to reestablish its business at the Dayton Store accompanied by substantial start-up costs which it would not have incurred but for Defendants' entering into and subsequently breaching the Agreement, and (e) the breach of the Agreement by Phoenix and Crest has forced Boston to incur substantial legal fees in order to enforce the Agreement and protect Boston's rights pursuant thereto.

58. The sole reason advanced by Defendants for their refusal to honor the terms of the Agreement is the failure of Boston to deliver an executed Assignment of Lease. In actuality, it is Defendants themselves who have refused to execute the Assignment of Lease. Defendants' breach of the Agreement, therefore, is willful.

WHEREFORE, Boston prays that this Court enter an order:

A. Awarding Boston compensatory damages, the amount of which have not yet been determined, for the breach of the Agreement by Phoenix and Crest;

B. Awarding Boston exemplary damages for Defendants' willful misconduct; and

C. Granting such other and further relief as this Court deems equitable and just.

..... BOSTON CLOTHING, LTD.
..... By: .....
.....

2 Both of the following forms were provided courtesy of Robert L. Byman of Jenner & Block, Chicago, Illinois.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide 8.syn

§ 8.syn Synopsis to Chapter 8: Provisional Remedies *

§ 8.01 Understanding Provisional Remedies

§ 8.02 Understanding Due Process Requirements for Prejudgment Seizure Remedies

§ 8.03 Evaluating Whether Federal Statutes Govern Prejudgment Seizure

§ 8.04 Applying Rule 64 to Removed Actions

§ 8.05 Distinguishing Between Forms of Provisional Relief
[1] Civil Arrest
[2] Prejudgment Attachment
[3] Sequestration
[4] Garnishment
[5] Replevin
[6] Other Provisional Remedies

§ 8.06 Notice of Lis Pendens Governed by State Law

§ 8.07 Comparing Rule 64 to Other Federal Rules
[1] Rule 65 Provides for Provisional Remedy of Temporary Restraining Order
[2] Rules 69 and 70 Determine Remedies After Judgment
[3] Rule 4(n) Allows Assertion of Jurisdiction Over Property

§ 8.08 Using Provisional Remedies Strategically
[1] Settlement Leverage
[2] Deterring Dilatory Tactics
[3] Protection Against Bankruptcy

§ 8.09 Evaluating Risks Associated With Provisional Remedies
[1] Risking Bond
[2] Risking Tort Liability

§ 8.10 Obtaining the Writ--Considerations for Claimant

[1] Showing Likelihood of Prevailing on the Merits
[2] Determining Whether to Seek Relief on Noticed Motion or Ex Parte

§ 8.11 Opposing the Writ--Considerations for Defendants
[1] Evaluating Whether to Oppose Provisional Remedy
[2] Challenging the Amount of the Bond
[3] Stipulating to the Requested Relief

§ 8.12 Evaluating Bonds and Other Expenses
[1] Posting Bond
[2] Paying Storage Fees

§ 8.13 Appealing Order Regarding Provisional Remedy
[1] Order Regarding Provisional Remedy Is Not Usually Appealable as Final Judgment
[2] Certain Collateral Orders Are Appealable as Final Judgments

§§ 8.14through 8.19 [Reserved]

§ 8.20 Understanding Receivership
[1] Defining Receivership
[2] Distinguishing Equity Receivers and Bankruptcy Receivers
[3] Evaluating Types of Receivers Authorized by Federal Statute

§ 8.21 Understanding Role of Receiver
[1] Promoting Efficient Management of Property in Dispute
[2] Acting as Officer of Court
[3] Achieving Final Equitable Relief

§ 8.22 Determining Whether Appointment Is Appropriate
[1] Appointing Receiver Is Extraordinary Remedy
[2] Appointing Receiver Is Discretionary
[3] Evaluating Criteria to Determine Appointment of Receiver
[4] Evaluating Circumstances in Which Appointment Held Appropriate
[5] Evaluating Alternatives to Appointment of Receiver

§ 8.23 Complying With Notice and Bond Requirements
[1] Notice Generally Required
[2] Ex Parte Appointments
[3] Bond Requirements

§ 8.24 Meeting Subject Matter Jurisdiction Requirements
[1] Alleging Subject Matter Jurisdiction
[2] Determining Whether Supplemental Jurisdiction Exists

§ 8.25 CHECKLISTS: Appointment of Receiver
[1] CHECKLIST: Considering Grounds for Appointment of Receiver
[2] CHECKLIST: Considering Alternatives to Appointment of Receiver
[3] CHECKLIST: Considering Ex Parte Appointment of Receiver

§ 8.26 Determining Appealability of Order
[1] Order Appointing Receiver
[2] District Court Supervision of Receivership

[3] Abuse of Discretion Is Standard of Review

§ 8.27 Use of Summary Proceedings

§ 8.28 Determining Receiver's Capacity to Sue
[1] Capacity to Sue Depends on State Law
[2] Property Situated in Different Districts
[3] Same Rights as Owner

§ 8.29 Proceedings Against Receivers
[1] Determining Whether Receiver Exceeded Scope of Authority
[2] Determining Whether Court Consent to Sue Receiver Is Required

§ 8.30 Removing Case From State Court to Federal Court

§ 8.31 Terminating Receivership
[1] Effect on Property in Dispute
[2] Determining Court's Jurisdiction After Termination

§ 8.32 Voluntary Dismissal of Action in Which Receiver Appointed

§§ 8.33through 8.99 [Reserved]

§ 8.100 Notice of Motion for Appointment of Receiver
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Appointment of Receiver
[2] Use of Form
[3] Determining Whether Appointment Is Appropriate
[4] Criteria to Determine Appointment of Receiver
[5] Bond Requirements

§ 8.101 Notice of Motion for Discharge of Receiver
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Discharge of Receiver
[2] Use of Form
[3] Effect of Discharge on Property in Dispute

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter deals with provisional remedies, other than preliminary injunctions, and includes discussion of receivers. Provisional remedies involve the prejudgment seizure of property of the defendant in order to safeguard the ability of the claimant to collect a money judgment if the claim is successful.

The chapter first deals with prejudgment seizure as governed by Rule 64, which provides generally that prejudgment seizure remedies for the purpose of satisfying the judgment ultimately to be entered are governed by the law of the state in which the district court sits. The prejudgment seizure remedies available include arrest, attachment, garnishment, replevin, sequestration, and other corresponding or equivalent remedies, however designated by the forum state.

After an overview of the basic types of provisional remedies, the chapter addresses the strategic goals that can be served by the use of these remedies, as well as their potential disadvantages. In addition to providing protection against the debtor's bankruptcy, the inconveniences engendered by the use of a provisional remedy may provide incentive to settlement and may deter dilatory defense tactics. Because the hearing on the provisional remedy may be the first opportunity to impress the court with the merits of the action, thorough preparation for the hearing is vital.

The chapter then covers federal receivership under Rule 66. Since its principal use is likewise to preserve property pending the outcome of the litigation, it is related to the provisional remedies; however, since a receivership places the entirety of the defendant's property in the custody of the court, it is a considerably more drastic form of relief than the provisional remedies.

The chapter discusses the nature of receivership, appointing receivers, the role of receivers, proceedings by and against receivers, as well as termination of receiverships. The chapter also provides procedural checklists for use in determining whether appointment of a receiver is appropriate and whether ex parte relief is available.

The chapter also sets forth a sample Notice of Motion for Appointment of Receiver and a sample Notice of Motion for Discharge of Receiver, as well as comments for use of these forms.

For expanded coverage of provisional remedies, see MOORE'S Federal Practice, Ch. 64, Seizure of Person or Property (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

89 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.01

§ 8.01 Understanding Provisional Remedies

Rule 64 provides that forum state remedies which permit prejudgment seizure of persons or property for the purpose of securing a judgment ultimately to be entered in the action may used in federal court, unless an existing statute of the United States provides otherwise. n1 The remedies available include arrest, attachment, garnishment, replevin, sequestration, and other corresponding or equivalent forum state remedies. n2 State law determines the use of the provisional remedy but does not affect the underlying action, which continues to be prosecuted pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n3

The purpose of provisional remedies is to secure the payment of any judgment that ultimately might be entered in favor of the claimant. Provisional remedies are generally available only in cases in which part of the relief sought is a money judgment. n4

The use of state provisional remedies is available only upon the commencement and prosecution of the action. n5 Under Rule 3, an action commences upon the filing of a complaint. n6 Thus, in an action instituted in a federal court, a state practice allowing seizure of person or property before the filing of the complaint is not available. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesReplevinsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesSequestrations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 361 F.2d 838 (5th Cir.) , cert. denied, 385 U.S. 971 (1966) (Rule 4(c), not Florida rule, should have governed service of writ of garnishment).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., DeBeers Consol. Mines Ltd. v. United States, 325 U.S. 212, 65 S. Ct. 1130, 89 L. Ed.

1566 (1945) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 3.

(n7)Footnote 7. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Uranex, 451 F. Supp. 1044 (N.D. Cal. 1977) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.02

§ 8.02 Understanding Due Process Requirements for Prejudgment Seizure Remedies

Because prejudgment seizure remedies are sought prior to full adjudication on the merits, they are subject to constitutional due process limitations. n1

Prejudgment garnishment and attachment are permitted only when, at a minimum, a judge is involved in issuing the writ for good cause, a bond is posted to protect the party whose property is seized, and there is an early hearing to determine whether the order of seizure should continue until trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 80, 92 S. Ct. 1983, 32 L. Ed. 2d 556 (1972) ; Sniadach v. Family Fin. Corp., 395 U.S. 337, 89 S. Ct. 1820, 23 L. Ed. 2d 349 (1969) .

(n2)Footnote 2. North Ga. Finishing, Inc. v. Di-Chem, Inc., 419 U.S. 601, 95 S. Ct. 719, 42 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1975) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.03

§ 8.03 Evaluating Whether Federal Statutes Govern Prejudgment Seizure

Rule 64 provides that "a Federal statute governs to the extent it applies." n1

The following statutes limit the use of prejudgment seizure remedies in certain types of actions:

- 28 U.S.C. § 2463 (property taken under any revenue law of the United States is not obtainable by replevin).
- 28 U.S.C. § 2713 (limits third party claim of ownership of property attached by the United States).
- 40 U.S.C. § 308 (United States property is not subject to attachment or seizure by other judicial process).
- 12 U.S.C. § 91 (national bank is immune from attachment and other provisional seizure of its property).
- 12 U.S.C. § 632 (federal reserve bank is immune from attachment and other provisional seizures of property).
- 12 U.S.C. § 1819 (FDIC is immune from provisional seizures of property).

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a).

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.04

§ 8.04 Applying Rule 64 to Removed Actions

Rule 64 applies to actions removed from state court to federal court. However, for provisional remedies to be authorized, the Rule requires an action removed from state court to be prosecuted after removal pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The federal removal statute provides that all injunctions, orders, and other proceedings occurring in the state court prior to removal shall remain in effect upon removal to the district court. Any attachment or garnishment made by the state court will continue in force in order to secure the final judgment. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalPrior State Court OrdersCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1450.

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.05

§ 8.05 Distinguishing Between Forms of Provisional Relief

[1] Civil Arrest

Civil arrest is obsolete in most jurisdictions; however, some states still provide for civil arrest of defendants in some limited circumstances to secure their presence in the jurisdiction until final judgment. n1

The remedy of arrest, where available, is an alternative to attachment. The arrested defendant may secure release by posting bail or a bond, to which a successful plaintiff may look to recover its judgment.

[2] Prejudgment Attachment

Attachment is the seizure of defendant's property before judgment. It is designed to provide plaintiff with security that the judgment will ultimately be collectible. n2

If the property is seized under an order of attachment or sequestration, either it is held by the marshal as security for a later judgment, or it is released when the defendant posts a bond that will serve the same purpose. n3

[3] Sequestration

Sequestration is the act of seizing the property of a party pending the outcome of litigation or that party's compliance. n4

[4] Garnishment

Many states permit the remedy of garnishment, which attaches property of the debtor held by third parties as security for a judgment. In a garnishment proceeding, the levying officer collects and holds the property that is owed or belongs to the defendant. n5

[5] Replevin

The provisional remedy of replevin permits a court to compel an individual having wrongful possession of the goods of another to surrender and deliver the property to the rightful owner. n6

Replevied property is delivered to the plaintiff or, upon the posting of a bond for security, released back to the defendant. n7

[6] Other Provisional Remedies

Rule 64 also permits "other corresponding or equivalent remedies." These include the following:

- Writ of ne exeat, an order which restrains a person from leaving the jurisdiction or removing property from beyond the jurisdiction.
- Trustee writ, the process of garnishment of intangibles.
- Impoundment, the seizure and taking into the custody of the law or a court.
- Distringas, a mostly obsolete writ by which a defendant is compelled to appear by seizure of defendant's property.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesReplevinsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesSequestrationsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 2A:15-41-15-47. Illinois also permits arrest in limited circumstances under a writ of ne exeat. Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. ch. 735, §§ 5/16-101-111.

(n2)Footnote 2. North Ga. Finishing, Inc. v. Di-Chem, Inc., 419 U.S. 601, 95 S. Ct. 719, 42 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1975) ; Ross v. Peck Iron & Metal Co., 264 F.2d 262, 268 (4th Cir. 1959) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., N.D. Cent. Code § 32-08.1-14; N.Y. Civ. Prac. Laws & Rules § 6222.

(n4)Footnote 4. Altherr v. Swiss Am. of Miss., Inc., 446 F. Supp. 17, 18 (D. Miss. 1977) .

(n5)Footnote 5. United States v. Schuermann, 106 F. Supp. 86, 88 (E.D. Mo. 1952) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Commonwealth Trust Co. of Pittsburgh v. Reconstruction Fin. Corp., 28 F. Supp. 586, 587-588 (W.D. Pa. 1939) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., N.C. Gen. Stat. § 1-230; Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 12-1578(C).

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.06

§ 8.06 Notice of Lis Pendens Governed by State Law

State law often provides that a party asserting a right to real property in an action where the title of property is in litigation may record a notice of pendency or lis pendens where the property is situated. The implication of recording a notice of pendency is that a person who acquires interest in the property is bound by all proceedings that take place after the notice is recorded. Notices of pendency or lis pendens are governed by state law. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesLis PendensGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesLis PendensNoticesReal Property LawPriorities & RecordingLis Pendens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 64 advisory committee's note (1937).

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.07

§ 8.07 Comparing Rule 64 to Other Federal Rules

[1] Rule 65 Provides for Provisional Remedy of Temporary Restraining Order

Rule 64 was not intended to embrace all provisional remedies. Rule 65, for example, deals with the practice applicable to the equitable injunctive remedy. Under Rule 65, the court will issue, upon a sufficient showing of urgency, a temporary restraining order without a hearing, and in matters of exigency, even without notice to the adverse party. Such an order should be followed promptly by an application for a preliminary injunction, requiring notice and a hearing. n1

[2] Rules 69 and 70 Determine Remedies After Judgment

Rule 64 governs the use of provisional remedies prior to judgment. Other rules determine the availability of remedies after judgment. Rule 69 regulates execution to enforce a judgment. n2 Rule 70 regulates judgment for specific acts and vesting title. n3

[3] Rule 4(n) Allows Assertion of Jurisdiction Over Property

Under Rule 4(n), if personal jurisdiction over the defendant cannot be effected under Rule 4, a court may obtain jurisdiction over assets belonging to the defendant. n4 In order to effect service, the defendant's assets must be located within the court's jurisdiction. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining OrdersCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 69.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 70.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(n).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(n)(2).

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.08

§ 8.08 Using Provisional Remedies Strategically

[1] Settlement Leverage

Provisional remedies provide settlement leverage because they encumber the defendant's assets. A provisional remedy may do more than hasten settlement negotiations; it may also lead to settlement on more favorable terms. A defendant subject to an attachment may be willing to pay more to dispose of the attachment and the underlying lawsuit than to dispose of the lawsuit alone.

[2] Deterring Dilatory Tactics

Although the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure proscribe litigation tactics that are designed simply to delay a lawsuit, n1 such tactics unfortunately are still commonly employed. Prejudgment remedies offer a claimant some of the best counters to dilatory defense tactics. If a defendant's "active" assets (i.e., those that the defendant needs from day to day) can be tied up through attachment, garnishment, or other prejudgment remedy, delay will become as unwelcome to the defendant as to the claimant.

It may be a mistake, however, for a creditor's attorney to resort to prejudgment remedies automatically in order to guard against delaying tactics. Provisional remedies have their risks and costs and may not be needed for this purpose. Most federal courts now assign all matters in an action to a single judge, and the speed with which federal judges move their dockets is commonly known among the lawyers who frequently appear in federal court.

[3] Protection Against Bankruptcy

A defendant's bankruptcy can have a devastating effect on the prevailing plaintiff's ability to recover a judgment. A judgment debtor may seek the protection of the Bankruptcy Court in order to avoid, delay, or reduce payment on a judgment. Perhaps more common than an actual bankruptcy filing is the tactic of threatening a filing in order to gain leverage in post-trial settlement negotiations. Filing a bankruptcy petition invokes an automatic stay of all legal proceedings against the filer, including any efforts to collect a judgment entered before the bankruptcy filing. n2

A judgment creditor without any preexisting lien on the defendant's assets is relegated to standing in line with other unsecured creditors. If, however, a provisional remedy is selected to create a lien on the defendant's property, and at least 90 days lapse before the defendant files for bankruptcy, it may be impossible for the debtor to block enforcement

via the Bankruptcy Code. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

(n2)Footnote 2. 11 U.S.C. § 362(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See In re Gurs, 34 B.R. 755 (B. App. 9th Cir. 1983) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.09

§ 8.09 Evaluating Risks Associated With Provisional Remedies

[1] Risking Bond

Commonly, state law requires the posting of a bond or undertaking in order to obtain an attachment or other prejudgment remedy. If a remedy is granted, a claimant risks incurring liability and forfeiting the bond to the defendant if the claimant ultimately does not prevail in the action, or if it exercises a provisional remedy wrongfully. n1

[2] Risking Tort Liability

A plaintiff who utilizes a provisional remedy may face a tort claim for improper use of a provisional remedy. Abuse of process is one tort available to a defendant in such cases. n2 The abuse is usually that the claimant has sought to extort payment from the defendant through the misuse of a provisional remedy. For example, in states that do not allow provisional remedies in all civil actions, a creditor might commit an abuse of process by obtaining an attachment in an action in which its use is not authorized, or when the statutory requirements for attachment are not met. n3 Liability may also result from attaching property worth far more than the amount of the debt to be collected. n4 Excessive attachment is tortious because the claimant is not merely seeking to secure a later judgment; the claimant is really trying to extort payment by tying up the defendant's assets. Claimants are jointly liable with the attaching officer if they direct unlawful acts or subsequently ratify them. n5

Other torts that might be stated as a result of the improper use of provisional remedies include conversion, n6 intentional infliction of emotional distress, n7 and negligent infliction of emotional distress. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See HMG Property Investors, Inc. v. Parque Indus. Rio Canus, Inc., 847 F.2d 908 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Tyler v. Central Charge Serv., Inc., 444 A.2d 965 (D.C. App. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Washington Bldg. Servs., Inc. v. United Janitorial Servs., Inc., 352 F.2d 678 (D.C. Cir. 1965) (if plaintiff is not entitled to attachment, defendant may recover damages even though plaintiff prevails on merits).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., American Credit Bureau, Inc. v. Bel-Aire Interiors, Inc., 105 Ariz. 590, 469 P.2d 75, 76 (1970) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Woodring v. Jennings State Bank, 603 F. Supp. 1060 (D. Neb. 1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Langley Fed. Credit Union v. Harp, 471 F. Supp. 565 (D.D.C. 1979) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Martin v. Municipal Publications, 510 F. Supp. 255 (E.D. Pa. 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Molien v. Kaiser Found. Hosps., 27 Cal. 3d 916 (1980) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.10

§ 8.10 Obtaining the Writ--Considerations for Claimant

[1] Showing Likelihood of Prevailing on the Merits

Most states require that the claimant seeking a provisional remedy establish a likelihood of success on the merits. The stronger the case appears to be on the merits, the stronger the chance that the court will grant the provisional remedy. In addition, the judge will carry over this first impression to later pretrial motions and to the trial itself. Thorough preparation of the application for a provisional remedy is essential, since it will affect the court's view of the case until it is concluded. The standard that must be met to obtain the provisional remedy under the governing law should serve as a checklist for drafting papers in favor of the remedy.

[2] Determining Whether to Seek Relief on Noticed Motion or Ex Parte

Most states have some procedure whereby if there is danger that the property sought to be attached will be hidden or fraudulently conveyed, provisional remedies may be obtained ex parte, subject to the defendant's later right to move to dissolve or set aside the remedy. n1

Seeking relief by noticed motion is often preferred because the standard for getting relief ex parte is usually more strict and may be more difficult to meet than the standard for a noticed hearing. n2 Additionally, a victory in a contested hearing more vividly demonstrates the strength of a case than does a victory obtained without opposition. When, for example, a prerequisite of a provisional remedy is a showing of probable success on the merits, a judge is more likely to decide that the plaintiff will be successful if there is weak opposition than if the debtor has no chance to present its case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. E.g., Maine provides for an ex parte attachment order where, among other requirements, it is shown that there is an "imminent danger" that the debtor will damage the property, or a "clear danger" of removal or concealment of the property. Maine Rule of Civ. Pro. 4A(g). See also Utah Rule of Civ. Pro. 64A(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 52-278(e).

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.11

§ 8.11 Opposing the Writ--Considerations for Defendants

[1] Evaluating Whether to Oppose Provisional Remedy

The decision whether to contest a provisional remedy involves some different factors if the remedy has already been granted without the defendant's knowledge. The defendant's remedy in this case is a motion to dissolve, vacate, or quash, depending upon the terminology employed by the particular state. This motion is, in essence, a request that the court reverse its earlier ruling. As a result, considerable tact is required. It is not likely to be productive to tell the court that its earlier ruling was erroneous unless, under state law, the error is absolutely clear. A better strategy might be to convince the court that, having now heard both sides of the story, it should find against the propriety of the provisional remedy previously granted ex parte. Many courts will be receptive to this approach if the evidence supports it. Some judges take a liberal approach to issuing ex parte writs, because the debtor's defenses can be presented later via a motion to quash or vacate. These judges reason that, in the meanwhile, however, the plaintiff needs to be protected against the immediate risk it claims to be facing.

It always is a good idea to carefully examine the opponent's moving papers for conformity with requisite standards for obtaining provisional relief. If an ex parte writ has been issued and there are defects in the opponent's papers, it may be possible to get the writ vacated or quashed. If the plaintiff has moved under a procedure involving a hearing, defects in moving papers may be used in opposing issuance of the writ at that hearing.

Usually, to institute a federal case, the plaintiff must merely state a claim for relief. n1 To obtain a provisional remedy, however, the plaintiff often must go further and demonstrate the probable success of its claim on the merits. n2

[2] Challenging the Amount of the Bond

A debtor without viable defenses to a provisional remedy on the merits can sometimes focus instead on important collateral issues. For instance, in some jurisdictions, the plaintiff must post a bond in order to obtain a provisional remedy, and the amount of that bond is discretionary with the court. n3 It may be possible to convince the court that the damage the defendant will suffer from the issuance of the writ would be substantial. The more substantial the injury, the larger the bond must be that protects against the injury. At some point (which will depend in part on the plaintiff's finances, commitment to its case, and willingness to take risks), the price of the bond will become too large for the plaintiff to swallow. By "bidding up" the required bond, it may be possible to make the writ expensive enough that the plaintiff considers an early settlement instead.

[3] Stipulating to the Requested Relief

If it appears certain that the remedy sought will be granted, the client has nothing to gain by actively opposing it, but does stand to lose credibility in the eyes of the district court by doing so. Thus, if the plaintiff has noticed a hearing and seems certain to win, the defendant might offer to stipulate to the requested relief. The stipulation would deprive the plaintiff of its chance to give the court an early preview of the substantial merits of its case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Rodco Autobody, 138 F.R.D. 328 (D. Mass. 1991) ; Diane Holly Corp. v. Bruno & Stillman Yacht Co., Inc., 559 F. Supp. 559 (D.N.H. 1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Wash. Rev. Code Ann. §§ 6.25.080, 6.25.090.

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.12

§ 8.12 Evaluating Bonds and Other Expenses

[1] Posting Bond

Most states require the party seeking the remedy to post bond before any levy will issue. Once it has issued, the defendant may then normally remove the levy by posting an adequate bond. Local rules should be consulted regarding the proper posting of bonds. Some districts have rules about what sureties are acceptable. n1 Most bonds are written by insurance companies, and insurance brokers can obtain quotations. In addition to the initial bond premium and other security that the bonding company may require, there will also be substantial annual premiums that will have to be paid while the litigation is pending.

[2] Paying Storage Fees

The attachment of personal property generally requires that the property be continuously maintained under custody of the levying officer. This can be expensive. When the asset attached is a truck, for example, the marshal will garage it somewhere, and storage charges will accrue. When the marshal must levy upon the inventory of a going business, the costs can be substantial and must be paid to the marshal in advance. n2 Attachments of different assets generate different expenses. For some types of property (e.g., real estate), an inexpensive filing will suffice.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., N.D. Cal. Local Rule 290; W. D. Pa. Local Rule 67.1; S. D. Ohio Local Rule 67.1; N.D.N.Y. Local Rule 65.1.1.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1921(a)(1)(E).

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.13

§ 8.13 Appealing Order Regarding Provisional Remedy

[1] Order Regarding Provisional Remedy Is Not Usually Appealable as Final Judgment

An order permitting or denying a provisional remedy, the purpose of which is to secure satisfaction of the final judgment, is itself generally not appealable as a final judgment. However, if the court denies a provisional remedy and also dismisses the action, the dismissal is a final judgment and the ruling on the provisional remedy can be reviewed on appeal. Also, an order granting or denying an equitable attachment effected by an injunction order is probably appealable under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a), which in certain cases allows an interlocutory appeal of some orders including those granting or denying an interlocutory injunction. n1 There is also the possibility of review by prerogative writ.

[2] Certain Collateral Orders Are Appealable as Final Judgments

A small category of collateral orders are appealable as final judgments under the collateral order doctrine. n2 If an action is still pending, an interlocutory order vacating or discharging a provisional remedy is considered final and appealable if it conclusively determines the disputed issue, resolves this issue completely and independently of the merits of the action, and is effectively unreviewable on appeal from a final judgment.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishmentsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionCollateral Order DoctrineCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Cohen v. Beneficial Indus. Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 546, 69 S. Ct. 1221, 93 L. Ed. 1528 (1949) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
A. Provisional Remedies

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8.14through 8.19

[Reserved]

§§ 8.14[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.20

§ 8.20 Understanding Receivership

[1] Defining Receivership

A receiver is a person appointed by the court to be an officer of the court to receive, collect, care for, administer, and dispose of the property or the fruits of the property of another or others brought under the orders of the court by the institution of a proper action or actions. n1

[2] Distinguishing Equity Receivers and Bankruptcy Receivers

Rule 66 applies to receivers who are appointed pursuant to the general equitable powers of the court, and does not apply to receivers (trustees) in bankruptcy cases. n2 Trustees appointed in bankruptcy cases are governed by the Bankruptcy Act. n3

[3] Evaluating Types of Receivers Authorized by Federal Statute

Certain types of receivers are authorized by federal statute. For example:

- The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Act grants to the F.D.I.C. various receivership powers. n4

- The federal RICO Act empowers the district courts to prevent violations of the Act by issuing appropriate orders, and taking appropriate actions as the court deems proper. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Booth v. Clark, 58 U.S. (17 How.) 322, 331, 15 L. Ed. 164 (1854) ("A receiver is an indifferent person between parties, appointed by the court to receive the rents, issues, or profits of land, or other thing in question in this court, pending the suit, where it does not seem reasonable to the court that either party should do it.").

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 66 advisory committee's note.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. §§ 321-323.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 12 U.S.C. § 1821(d)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 18 U.S.C. § 1964.

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.21

§ 8.21 Understanding Role of Receiver

[1] Promoting Efficient Management of Property in Dispute

One of the primary reasons a court will appoint a receiver is to promote orderly and efficient management of any property involved in a dispute for the benefit of the creditors. Generally, any reasonable method the district court chooses to carry out this process will be acceptable. Any actions which the district court deems appropriate in the administration of the receivership may be properly exercised since the district court has broad discretion in the supervision of these matters. n1

[2] Acting as Officer of Court

The district court that appoints the receiver establishes the extent of the receiver's authority. The receiver is not an agent of the plaintiff, but actually is considered an extension of the court. n2 It is the order of appointment and the succeeding orders from the court that control the receiver's course of action. n3 As a result, the receiver's authority is wholly determined by the orders of the appointing court. n4

[3] Achieving Final Equitable Relief

The action which concludes with the appointment of a receiver is the main or primary action, and any other action that the receiver brings in the appointing court is an ancillary suit to the main action. n5 Therefore, while the district court has the power to appoint a receiver, the appointment is merely an attempt to provide equitable relief on the road to some form of full and final relief. A receivership is merely a step in the process to achieve a particular remedial outcome. Thus, "[a] receivership is only a means to reach some legitimate end sought through the exercise of the power of a court of equity. It is not an end in itself." n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversDuties

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See SEC v. Hardy, 803 F.2d 1034, 1038-1039 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. Tsinos, 854 F. Supp. 113, 115 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Bayside Developers, 43 F.3d 1230, 1241 n. 8 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. Spark Tarrytown, Inc., 829 F. Supp. 82, 85 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Haile v. Henderson Nat'l Bank, 657 F.2d 816, 822 (6th Cir. 1981) , cert. denied sub. nom. First Nat'l Bank v. Halie, 455 U.S. 949 (1982) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Gordon v. Washington, 295 U.S. 30, 37, 55 S. Ct. 584, 79 L. Ed. 1282 (1935) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.22

§ 8.22 Determining Whether Appointment Is Appropriate

[1] Appointing Receiver Is Extraordinary Remedy

Courts consider the appointment of a receiver to be an extraordinary equitable remedy. A court, therefore, will appoint a receiver only when clearly necessary. n1

A plaintiff must make a clear showing that appointment is necessary to prevent irreparable injury. n2

[2] Appointing Receiver Is Discretionary

The district court has broad discretion to decide whether it is appropriate to appoint a receiver. Under appropriate circumstances, a court may deny the request for a receiver, even if the parties agree to the appointment. n3 The receiver's authority is defined solely by the order of the appointing court. n4

[3] Evaluating Criteria to Determine Appointment of Receiver

Courts have identified many factors that are relevant when determining if a receiver should be appointed. These include: n5

- Whether fraudulent conduct (or the probability of fraudulent conduct) on the part of the property owner exists.
- Whether property is in immediate danger of being harmed or lost.
- Whether legal remedies are adequate.
- Whether the harm to the proponent by denying the appointment will be greater than the injury to parties opposing the appointment.
- The probable success in the underlying action of the proponent of the appointment.
- The possibility of irreparable injury to the applicant's interests in property.

- Whether the interests of the applicant and others sought to be protected will in fact be well served by receivership.

Courts may use some or all of these general factors to determine whether the appointment of a receiver is appropriate. The court's inquiry should include consideration of the facts of the particular case.

[4] Evaluating Circumstances in Which Appointment Held Appropriate

Examples of circumstances in which appointment of a receiver has been held to be appropriate include the following:

- When a secured creditor with an interest in real property seeks a receiver pending the foreclosure of a mortgage. n6

- When the Securities and Exchange Commission seeks to enjoin violations of the Securities and Exchange Act. n7

- When a minority shareholder seeks a receivership to protect corporate assets from dominant shareholders, officers, and directors. n8

- When the holder of deed to a trust seeks the conservation and management of the property. n9

- When an insolvent bank requires assistance in the management of its affairs or an insolvent federal savings and loan association needs to set aside an alleged preference. n10

- When a mortgage company needs assistance in the collection of rent from properties that are part of a foreclosure action. n11

- When a judgment creditor seeks to acquire and preserve the assets of the litigation prior to its destruction or demise. n12

[5] Evaluating Alternatives to Appointment of Receiver

A motion for appointment of a receiver may be denied if less drastic remedies are available.

For example, as an alternative to appointment of a receiver, the court may require a property owner to: n13

- Post a payment bond.

- Deposit funds in an escrow fund with the court.

- Submit a letter of credit to the clerk of the court to establish a payment fund.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversDuties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Aviation Supply Corp. v. R.S.B.I. Aerospace, Inc., 999 F.2d 314, 316-317 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Watt West Inv. Corp., 755 F. Supp. 287, 292-293 (E.D. Cal. 1991) (creditor made sufficient showing of imminent loss and probability of success).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Security Pacific Mortgage and Real Estate Servs. v. Philippines, 962 F.2d 204, 211-212 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Citibank, N.A. v. Nyland (CF8) Ltd., 839 F.2d 93, 98 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Consolidated Rail Corp. v. Fore River Ry., 861 F.2d 322, 326-327 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Brill & Harrington Invs. v. Vernon Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 787 F. Supp. 250, 253-254 (D.D.C. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. SEC v. Elliott, 953 F.2d 1560, 1564-1565 (11th Cir. 1992) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 998 F.2d 922 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Lyman v. Spain, 774 F.2d 495, 497-498 (D.C. Cir. 1985) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Bayside Developers, 43 F.3d 1230, 1242 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 10. In re Still, 963 F.2d 75, 77 (5th Cir. 1992) ; Biscayne Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Federal Home Loan Bank Bd., 572 F. Supp. 997, 1034 (S.D. Fla.) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 720 F.2d 1499 (11th Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1215 (1984) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Fountain Circle Assocs., 799 F. Supp. 48, 52 (N.D. Ohio 1992) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Aviation Supply Corp. v. R.S.B.I. Aerospace, Inc., 999 F.2d 314, 316-317 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See New York v. Financial Servs. Network, 930 F. Supp. 865, 871-872 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.23

§ 8.23 Complying With Notice and Bond Requirements

[1] Notice Generally Required

Unless notice is impractical, notice of an application for appointment of a receiver must be given to all parties. n1

Rule 66, however, does not require a formal hearing before a receiver is appointed. n2

[2] Ex Parte Appointments

Under exceptional circumstances, appointment of a receiver without notice (ex parte) may be justified. Lack of notice, however, deprives the opposing party of the opportunity to object to the appointment or to propose an alternative way of dealing with the situation giving rise to the application. Therefore, if ex parte relief is sought, the applicant must provide appropriate documentation to support the claim that appointment should be granted without notice. n3

Careful review of the terms of an order authorizing a receivership is important when ex parte relief is requested. Deficiencies in the ex parte order that require specific scrutiny include:

- Imposition of obligations enforceable by contempt on parties not shown by the papers submitted to have engaged in any wrongdoing, extending beyond mere recognition of the receiver as custodian of the property involved.

- Establishment of a low threshold for routine expenditure approval by the applicant or by the court in the event of a disagreement, risking unnecessary delay, expense, and consumption of resources.

- Failure to permit uninterrupted services to nonparties and action necessary in the ordinary course of business of supervision of the property.

- Requiring the production of large amounts of documents in the possession of parties not shown to have engaged in any wrongdoing without pursuing ordinary discovery or subpoena proceedings under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

- Requesting identical relief against all defendants, rather than relief pertaining specifically to each defendant.

- Failure to allege more than cursory efforts to serve the property owner.

[3] Bond Requirements

If a bond is not required by statute, the district court has the discretion to order the posting of the bond, and to determine the terms and conditions of the bond. n4

In cases in which a receiver is appointed to protect property, if requiring a bond would cause further depletion of property, a bond is not required unless it is essential to protect the interest in the property. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Connecticut v. Doehr, 501 U.S. 1, 12, 111 S. Ct. 2105, 115 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 66; see also Citronelle-Mobile Gathering, Inc. v. Watkins, 934 F.2d 1180, 1188-1189 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., United States v. Ianniello, 824 F.2d 203, 207 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See FTC v. World Wide Factors, Ltd., 882 F.2d 344, 348 (9th Cir. 1989) ; 28 U.S.C. § 754.

(n5)Footnote 5. See SEC v. Universal Fin., 760 F.2d 1034, 1039 (9th Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.24

§ 8.24 Meeting Subject Matter Jurisdiction Requirements

[1] Alleging Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The court must have subject matter jurisdiction of the action at the time the receiver is appointed. Subject matter jurisdiction may be established by any of the following:

- A federal question in the complaint. n1
- Diversity of citizenship and a claim in excess of $75,000. n2
- A statute setting forth a specific jurisdictional basis. n3

[2] Determining Whether Supplemental Jurisdiction Exists

If the court has subject matter jurisdiction over the underlying action in which the receiver was appointed, it has supplemental jurisdiction over all actions commenced by the receiver. n4

If the receiver seeks to commence an action in a different district, jurisdiction over the property in that district must still be established.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1345.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367; O'Neal v. General Motors Corp., 841 F. Supp. 391, 395 (M.D. Fla. 1993) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.25

§ 8.25 CHECKLISTS: Appointment of Receiver

[1] CHECKLIST: Considering Grounds for Appointment of Receiver

In view of the fact that the appointment of a receiver is an extraordinary remedy, the applicant must make a clear showing that appointment is necessary to prevent irreparable injury. The following checklist may be used as a guide to the most commonly used factors considered in considering an application for appointment of a receiver.

☐ Fraudulent conduct. Fraudulent conduct or the probability of fraudulent conduct on the part of a property owner is often determinative.

☐ Danger to property. Courts consider whether property in dispute is in immediate danger of being harmed or lost.

☐ Inadequacy of legal remedies. Equitable relief is available if legal remedies are inadequate.

☐ Harm to applicant. Courts consider whether the harm to the applicant if the appointment is denied will be greater than injury to the property owner.

☐ Applicant's likelihood of success in the action. Courts consider whether the applicant is likely to succeed in the underlying action.

☐ Irreparable injury. The possibility of irreparable injury to the applicant's interests in the property is an important determinative factor.

☐ Value of receivership. A receivership is likely only if the interests of the applicant and others sought to be protected will be well served by the receivership.

☐ Other specific facts. Specific facts relevant to the particular case should be considered.

[2] CHECKLIST: Considering Alternatives to Appointment of Receiver

When appointment of a receiver is sought, counsel should determine whether any of the following alternatives may be appropriate:

☐ Payment bond. A property owner may be required to post a payment bond.

☐ Escrow fund. A property owner may be required to deposit money in an escrow fund with the court.

☐ Letter of credit. A property owner may be required to submit a letter of credit to the clerk of the court to establish a payment fund.

[3] CHECKLIST: Considering Ex Parte Appointment of Receiver

If ex parte appointment of a receiver is sought, the court generally will view the following factors as deficiencies:

☐ Cursory efforts at service. The applicant must allege more than cursory efforts to serve a property owner with notice of the application.

☐ Documents requested of nonparties. Requiring the production of large amounts of documents from parties not shown to have engaged in wrongdoing is discouraged when ordinary discovery or subpoena proceedings under the Federal Rules was not pursued.

☐ Foreseeable "emergency." If the need for ex parte relief is traceable to the applicant's failure to anticipate the emergency, the doctrine of laches will apply.

☐ Identical relief requested. Relief pertaining specifically to each affected party, rather than identical relief against all affected parties, should be requested.

☐ Insufficient documentation. The applicant must supply appropriate documentation to support the claim.

☐ Interruption of ordinary business. Failure to permit uninterrupted routine provision of services to nonparties and action necessary to supervise the property is unduly disruptive.

☐ Low expenditure limits. Establishment of a low threshold for routine expenditure approval by the applicant or by the court in the event of a disagreement should be avoided.

☐ Obligations imposed on innocent parties. Courts negatively view imposing obligations on parties not shown to have engaged in wrongdoing.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral

OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsTerminations

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.26

§ 8.26 Determining Appealability of Order

[1] Order Appointing Receiver

An interlocutory order is an order of the court which is not final. The appointment of a receiver is considered an interlocutory order because a receiver is appointed in the midst of another proceeding in order to further prevent any harm to the property. Generally, interlocutory orders are not appealable because only final orders are appealable. n1 However, the order of appointment of a receiver is expressly made appealable by statute. n2 This provision means that these otherwise interlocutory orders can be appealed as a matter of right.

This statute applies specifically to those issues listed in the statute itself. It does not apply to all appeals in cases dealing with receivers. Therefore, the appellate court does not have jurisdiction under this particular statute when the issue on appeal regards something other than the appointment of the receiver or refusing to wind up a receivership or refusing to order steps necessary to accomplish the purposes of the receivership. n3

[2] District Court Supervision of Receivership

Most litigation concerning receivers surrounds the appointment of the receiver and other matters related to the appointment. In contrast, litigation regarding the court's supervision of a receivership is rare, and each case must be decided on the merits by a careful examination of the facts. n4

The district court has great discretion in supervising the receivership and in determining the appropriate steps to be taken in the administration of the receivership. n5

[3] Abuse of Discretion Is Standard of Review

The appellate court is limited to determining whether the appointing court abused its discretion, either in the appointment of the receiver or in the administration of the receivership. Thus, the standard of review used by the courts of appeal is an abuse of discretion standard. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointmentsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of Discretion

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(2); Towers Hotel Corp. v. Rimmel, 871 F.2d 766, 769 (8th Cir. 1989) (28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(2) did not provide appropriate basis for jurisdiction where appellant appealed district court's denial of its motion to enforce agreement).

(n4)Footnote 4. See SEC v. Hardy, 803 F.2d 1034, 1037 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See SEC v. Safety Fin. Serv. Inc., 674 F.2d 368, 372-373 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Lyman v. Spain, 774 F.2d 495, 497-498 (D.C. Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.27

§ 8.27 Use of Summary Proceedings

Summary proceedings are appropriate and proper to protect equity receivership assets. n1

As with any summary proceeding, however, the procedural due process rights of the parties must be respected. Therefore, all participants in the action must have a full and fair opportunity to present their arguments, and all creditors must receive adequate notice and an opportunity to respond. n2

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. Arizona Fuels Corp., 739 F.2d 455, 458 (9th Cir. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See SEC v. Wencke, 783 F.2d 829, 838 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied sub nom. DeLusignan v. Gould, 479 U.S. 818 (1986) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.28

§ 8.28 Determining Receiver's Capacity to Sue

[1] Capacity to Sue Depends on State Law

Once appointed, the capacity of a receiver to sue in federal court is dependent upon the law of the state in which the federal court is located. n1

The laws of the state in which the property is located govern the substantive responsibilities and duties of the receiver, but federal procedural rules apply to the receivership, including actions which may be maintained by the receiver. n2

An order of appointment grants the receiver exclusive jurisdiction over property in the district in which the appointing court is located. n3

[2] Property Situated in Different Districts

An order of appointment grants the receiver exclusive jurisdiction over property in the district in which the appointing court is located. A receiver may also obtain jurisdiction and control over property in other districts by filing copies of the complaint and the order of appointment in any and all districts where property subject to the dispute is located, within 10 days after entry of the order of appointment. n4

If a receiver fails to file copies of the complaint and the order of appointment within the 10-day period, the receiver will not have jurisdiction and control over the property in that district. n5

However, if the rights of the parties have not been prejudiced, the receiver may file the complaint and order of appointment late, and still retain jurisdiction over the property in that district. The filing requirements are intended to protect the receiver from responsibility for property that the receiver does not know exists. Therefore, to allow a receiver to file the appropriate documents by late filing is not deemed to be inconsistent with the intent of the statute. n6

The appointing court and the receiver have exclusive jurisdiction and control over property surrounding the dispute. If the proper filing requirements are met, jurisdiction of the appointing court extends to property located in all other federal judicial districts, including those located in other judicial circuits. n7

If the proper filing requirements are not met, jurisdiction over property located in another district may still be proper provided the minimum contacts test of International Shoe is satisfied. n8

[3] Same Rights as Owner

A receiver has the same rights and powers to sue as the person or entity whose property is in receivership. Court appointed receivers are real parties in interest entitled to sue on behalf of a represented party. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsJurisdictionPropertyCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversPowers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 66; Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b); Meyers v. Moody, 693 F.2d 1196, 1206 (5th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 920 (1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 959(b); Fed. R. Civ. P. 66.

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 754.

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 754.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 754.

(n6)Footnote 6. See SEC v. Equity Serv. Corp., 632 F.2d 1092, 1095 (3d Cir. 1980) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 754.

(n8)Footnote 8. American Freedom Train Found. v. Spurney, 747 F.2d 1069, 1073-1074 (1st Cir. 1984) ; see International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 316, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See In re Comcoach Corp., 698 F.2d 571, 574-575 (2d Cir. 1983) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.29

§ 8.29 Proceedings Against Receivers

[1] Determining Whether Receiver Exceeded Scope of Authority

Lawsuits in which a receiver is named as a defendant typically are against the receivership or the property in the receivership, and not against the receiver personally. n1

A receiver may be sued in his or her individual capacity only if the receiver has acted outside the scope of the receiver's authority. n2

[2] Determining Whether Court Consent to Sue Receiver Is Required

A receiver appointed to manage property assumes the place of the owner of the property with regard to claims based on the receiver's management and operation of the property. Claims for acts related to the receiver's acts or transactions in connection with the receivership property may be brought without the consent or approval of the appointing court. n3

The receiver must manage the property in his or her possession according to the law of the state where the property is situated. State law governs the substantive responsibilities and duties of the receiver, and federal procedural rules apply to the procedural aspects of actions in which a receiver has been appointed by a federal court. n4

Generally, a plaintiff must obtain the express permission of the appointing court to sue a receiver in his or her individual capacity. The court will not grant consent if the receiver has clearly acted within the scope of authority as granted by the appointing court. n5 This rule was devised in order to protect the receiver and the estate against the harassment and expense of possibly unnecessary litigation, and to preserve the estate for the benefit of all creditors equally. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversLiabilities

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 66.

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Still, 963 F.2d 75, 77 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 66; 28 U.S.C. § 959(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 959(b); Fed. R. Civ. P. 66; see also Meyers v. Moody, 693 F.2d 1196, 1206 (5th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 920 (1983) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Strategis Asset Valuation & Management, Inc. v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co., 805 F. Supp. 1544, 1553-1554 (D. Colo. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. Spark Tarrytown Inc., 829 F. Supp. 82, 88 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.30

§ 8.30 Removing Case From State Court to Federal Court

Removal from a state court to a federal court generally is permitted when there is a federal interest in permitting a defendant who has been sued in state court a statutory right of access to a federal forum. n1

If a state action involves a receiver charged with wrongdoing under state law, and liability is not directly based on acts done under color of office or in the performance of the receiver's duties, federal court access is not necessary to protect any federal interest. Thus, removal of the action to federal court will be denied. If the receiver's conduct or activities are questioned or challenged within the scope of the receiver's authority and in the receiver's official capacity, the issues directly involve the performance of duties and obligations ordered by the federal court. Therefore, a strong federal interest exists to provide access to federal court because the orders of the appointing court must be reviewed in order to evaluate the receiver's duties and performance. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversLiabilities

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1442(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1442(a).

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.31

§ 8.31 Terminating Receivership

[1] Effect on Property in Dispute

A receiver appointed to manage property is responsible for the property in dispute, and is subject to the orders of the court until discharged by the appointing court. If the receiver has not yet disposed of the property when discharged, the property itself remains within the jurisdiction and under the supervision of the appointing court. However, if the receiver has disposed of the property as required by the appointing court, the receiver's responsibility and liability for that property cease, and the receivership itself terminates. n1

[2] Determining Court's Jurisdiction After Termination

After a receivership has terminated, the appointing court retains personal jurisdiction over the individual receiver and may hear suits alleging a breach of authority by the receiver toward the receivership assets. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsTerminations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See United States v. Amodeo, 44 F.3d 141, 146 (2d Cir. 1995) ; see also In re Still, 963 F.2d 75, 77 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Federal Sav. and Loan Ins. Corp. v. PSL Realty Co., 630 F.2d 515, 521 (7th Cir. 1980) , cert. denied sub nom. Granite Inv. Co. v. Federal Sav. and Loan Inv. Corp., 452 U.S. 961 (1981) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.32

§ 8.32 Voluntary Dismissal of Action in Which Receiver Appointed

An action in which a receiver has been appointed may not be voluntarily dismissed without court order. n1 Likewise, it has been held that consolidated actions may not be voluntarily dismissed without court order if a receiver has been appointed in one or more of the actions. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Mansion House Cent. N., 95 F.R.D. 515, 518 (E.D. Miss. 1982) .

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
B. Receivers and Receivership

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8.33through 8.99

[Reserved]

§§ 8.33[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
C. Forms

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.100

§ 8.100 Notice of Motion for Appointment of Receiver

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Appointment of Receiver

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 66 [and state with particularity any applicable federal statute or local rule]:

(a) appointing a receiver in this action for the purposes of [state role of receiver], and on the grounds that [state basis of motion e.g., fraudulent conduct of property owner or property in imminent danger of being harmed or lost]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) [date] , the accompanying Memorandum of Law; and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local

district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion pursuant to Rule 66 seeking appointment of a receiver.

[3] Determining Whether Appointment Is Appropriate

Courts consider the appointment of a receiver to be an extraordinary equitable remedy. A court, therefore, will appoint a receiver only when clearly necessary.

The appointment of a receiver is discretionary. Under appropriate circumstances, a court may deny the request for a receiver, even if the parties agree to the appointment.

[4] Criteria to Determine Appointment of Receiver

Courts have identified many factors that are relevant when determining if a receiver should be appointed. These include:

- Whether fraudulent conduct (or the probability of fraudulent conduct) on the part of the property owner exists.
- Whether property is in immediate danger of being harmed or lost.
- Whether legal remedies are adequate.
- Whether the harm to the proponent by denying the appointment will be greater than the injury to parties opposing the appointment.
- The probable success in the underlying action of the proponent of the appointment.
- The possibility of irreparable injury to the applicant's interests in property.
- Whether the interests of the applicant and others sought to be protected will in fact be well served by receivership.

Courts may use some or all of these general factors to determine whether the appointment of a receiver is appropriate. The court's inquiry should include consideration of the facts of the particular case.

[5] Bond Requirements

If a bond is not required by statute, the district court has the discretion to order the posting of a bond, and to determine the terms and conditions of the bond.

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Provisional Remedies *
C. Forms

1-8 Federal Litigation Guide § 8.101

§ 8.101 Notice of Motion for Discharge of Receiver

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Discharge of Receiver

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [name of moving party] will move this Court at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 66 [and state with particularity any applicable federal statute or local rule]:

(a) discharging [name of receiver] as Receiver in this action on the ground that [state factual basis for discharge; e.g., the action has been resolved and a final accounting is filed with this motion];

(b) fixing the compensation of the Receiver and the fees of Receiver's counsel in accordance with the attached schedule;

(c) discharging the Receiver and the surety on the posted bond;

(d) directing the Receiver to make payment of the balance in Receiver's possession; and

(e) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law, and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a motion pursuant to Rule 66 for an order discharging a receiver previously appointed in the action.

[3] Effect of Discharge on Property in Dispute

A receiver appointed to manage property is responsible for the property in dispute, and is subject to the orders of the court until discharged by the appointing court. If the receiver has not yet disposed of the property when discharged, the property itself remains within the jurisdiction and under the supervision of the appointing court. However, if the receiver has disposed of the property as required by the appointing court, the receiver's responsibility and liability for that property cease, and the receivership itself terminates.

* Chapter 8 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

119 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide 8A.syn

§ 8A.syn Synopsis to Chapter 8A: Sanctions *

§ 8A.01 Sources of Authority Governing Sanctions

§ 8A.02 Purpose of Sanctions

§ 8A.03 Sanctions in Removal Cases
[1] Sanctions Generally Cannot Be Based Solely on State Filings
[2] Filing Frivolous Removal Petition Is Sanctionable

§ 8A.04 Sanctions Under Rule 11 for Improper Pleadings, Motions, or Other Papers
[1] Purpose of Rule 11 Sanctions
[2] Rule 11 Limited to Pleadings, Motions, or Other Papers
[3] Triggering Liability Under Rule 11
[4] Significance of Signing Pleadings, Motions, or Other Papers
[5] Conduct Is Measured by Objective Standard
[6] Rule 11 Is Not Available to Sanction Generalized Bad Behavior
[7] Moving for Sanctions Under Rule 11
[7.--1] Who May Move for Imposition of Sanctions
[7.--2] "Safe Harbor" Prerequisite to Filing Motion
[7.--3] Timing of Motion
[7.--4] Avoiding Frivolous Sanctions Motion
[7.--5] Considering Discovery on Motion
[7.--6] Awarding Expenses and Attorney's Fees to Party Who Prevails on Motion
[7.--7] No Time Limit for Decision on Motion
[8] Who May Impose Sanctions
[9] Sanctions Are Discretionary
[10] Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard--Due Process Considerations
[11] Lack of Jurisdiction in Underlying Action
[12] Effect of Dismissal of Underlying Action
[13] Determining Who The Court May Sanction
[14] Drafting Motion for Rule 11 Sanctions
[14.--1] Separate Motion Required for Rule 11 Sanctions
[14.--2] Rule 11 Motion Must Comply With General Rules Governing Motions

[14.--3] State Grounds for Sanctions Specifically, and Specify Order Sought
[14.--4] Sign Motion and Supporting Documents

§ 8A.05 Sanctions for Violating Local District Court Rules or Procedures

§ 8A.06 Sanctions Under Rule 16 for Failing to Follow Pretrial Procedures

§ 8A.07 Sanctions Under Rule 37 for Failing to Comply With Discovery Obligations

§ 8A.08 Sanctions Under Rule 41 for Failing to Prosecute Action or Claim

§ 8A.09 Sanctions Under Rule 45 for Failing to Properly Issue or Obey Subpoenas

§ 8A.10 Sanctions Under Rule 56 for Filing Summary Judgment Affidavit or Declaration in Bad Faith or to Delay

§ 8A.11 Sanctions Under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 for Multiplying Proceedings Unreasonably and Vexatiously
[1] Attorney May Be Sanctioned
[2] Client May Not Be Sanctioned
[3] Bad Faith Required
[4] Only Costs and Fees Are Available

§ 8A.12 Sanctions Pursuant to Court's Inherent Power
[1] Understanding Court's Inherent Power to Sanction
[2] Determining Whether Bad Faith Conduct Exists
[3] Relationship Between Inherent Power, Rule 11, and Section 1927
[4] Fashioning Appropriate Sanction

§ 8A.13 Sanctions Orders
[1] Decision May Be Written or on Record
[2] Specifying Source of Sanctioning Authority
[3] Awarding Monetary Sanctions, Costs, and Fees

§ 8A.14 Appealing Sanctions Orders
[1] Timing of Appeal
[2] Standing to Appeal
[3] Notice of Appeal
[4] Standard of Review

§§ 8A.15 through 8A.99 [Reserved]

§ 8A.100 Notice of Motion for Rule 11 Sanctions
[1] Form
Notice of Motion for Rule 11 Sanctions
[2] Use of Form
[3] Time for Moving for Rule 11 Sanctions; 21-Day "Safe Harbor"
[4] Separate Motion Required for Sanctions
[5] Grounds for Sanction
[6] Sanction Discretionary
[7] Deterrence as Purpose of Sanction

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses how to seek sanctions in civil actions. Sanctions are designed to procure court intervention regarding impermissible conduct by an adversary party or lawyer. Because of the courts' reluctance to impose sanctions, except in clear and extreme cases of wrongful conduct, sanctions should not be sought lightly. This chapter discusses statutory bases for sanctions motions, most particularly sanctions under Rule 11, as well as the inherent power of courts to impose sanctions for improper conduct.

The chapter begins with an overview of grounds for initiating sanctions proceedings, followed by detailed discussion of moving for sanctions under Rule 11, and responding to such motions. Also covered are hearings, standards governing sanctions orders, and when to appeal from a sanctions order.

Finally, the chapter sets forth a sample motion for sanctions under Rule 11 and includes a discussion on use of the form.

For expanded coverage of sanctions, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 11, Signing of Pleadings, Motions, and Other Papers; Representations to Court; Sanctions (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

121 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.01

§ 8A.01 Sources of Authority Governing Sanctions

Sanctions may be authorized by any of a number of rules or statutory provisions, or may be permissible on the basis of the court's inherent power. n1 Different standards apply to the various sources of authority governing sanctions. n2 This chapter discusses both statutory and inherent sanctioning power and concentrates on sanctions pursuant to Rule 11.

The following list may be used to determine what authority for sanctions is available when faced with improper behavior or actions by the opposition.

Rule 11. Rule 11 provides for sanctions when a pleading, written motion, or other paper:

- Is presented for an improper purpose; n3
- Contains claims, defenses, or other legal contentions that are not warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument to change existing law or establish new law; n4
- Contains allegations or factual contentions that do not have or are unlikely to have evidentiary support; or n5
- Contains denials of factual contentions that are not are warranted on the evidence. n6

Rule 16. Sanctions may be imposed under Rule 16 against a party, a party's attorney, or both on any of the following grounds: n7

- Failure to obey a scheduling or pretrial order.
- Failure to appear at a scheduling or pretrial conference.
- Being substantially unprepared to participate in a scheduling or pretrial conference.
- Failure to participate in good faith.

- Rule 26. Discovery requests, responses, objections, and mandatory disclosures, other than disclosures of expert testimony, must be certified as required by Rule 26(g). n8 Attorneys and parties who make certifications that violate the rule are subject to mandatory sanctions. n9

- Rule 37. Rule 37 permits the court to strike pleadings or dismiss the action when a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, or fails to appear for his or her deposition. n10

- Rule 41. Rule 41(b) allows a defendant to move for dismissal of a claim or the action if the plaintiff fails to prosecute or to comply with a court order. n11 This remedy can be utilized only in extreme situations, n12 and the court must first consider lesser sanctions under Rules 16 and 37. n13

- Rule 45. Sanctions may be awarded against an attorney or party who issues and serves a subpoena that imposes undue burden or expense on the recipient. n14 Failure to obey a subpoena can result in a contempt citation. n15

- Rule 56. A party who files an affidavit in connection with a motion for summary judgment in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay is subject to sanction of reasonable expenses and attorney's fees incurred by the opposition in connection with the offending affidavit. n16

- Local District Court Rules. Power to sanction under local district court rules derives from the inherent authority of the court. n17

- Inherent Power of Court. Under its inherent power the court can assess sanctions against either the client or the attorney for acting "in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons." n18

- Section 1927. An attorney who "so multiplies the proceedings in any case unreasonably and vexatiously" may be required to pay excess costs, expenses, and attorney's fees reasonably incurred by the other party as a result of the conduct. n19 Counsel should be aware of the following considerations relating to the application of Section 1927: n20

- Violations apply only to counsel.

- Violations do not hinge on the presence of a paper.

- Subjective bad faith by counsel is required.

- A violation results from a course of conduct, and the section imposes a continuing obligation to avoid dilatory tactics.

- There are no counterparts to the safe harbor and separate motion requirements of Rule 11.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsContemptCivil ContemptCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorMisrepresentationsLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Sakon v. Andreo, 119 F.3d 109, 113 (2d Cir. 1997) ; see also Zaldivar v. City of Los Angeles, 780

F.2d 823, 830 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 549, 111 S. Ct. 922, 932, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(4).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(3).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2), (d).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 41(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. Link v. Wabash R.R., 370 U.S. 626, 633, 82 S. Ct. 1386, 8 L. Ed. 2d 734 , reh'g denied, 371 U.S. 873 (1962) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Jackson v. City of New York, 22 F.3d 71, 74-76 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(e).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h); see also In re Gioioso, 979 F.2d 956, 962 n.6 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 764-765, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Alyeska Pipeline Serv. Co. v. Wilderness Soc'y, 421 U.S. 240, 258-259, 95 S. Ct. 1612, 44 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1975) .

(n19)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

(n20)Footnote 20. Lapidus v. Vann, 112 F.3d 91, 96 (2d Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 932 (1997) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.02

§ 8A.02 Purpose of Sanctions

When an attorney or party engages in forbidden conduct, sanctions may be used to:

- Deter repetition of the conduct. n1
- Punish the conduct. n2
- Compensate parties for expenses incurred as a result of the conduct. n3

Since the purpose of Rule 11 sanctions is to deter rather than compensate, if a monetary sanction is imposed, it should ordinarily be paid into the court as a penalty. n4 However, under unusual circumstances, particularly for Rule 11(b)(1) violations, deterrence may be ineffective unless the sanction not only requires the person violating the rule to make a monetary payment, but also directs that some or all of this payment be made to those injured by the violation.

Sanctions motions should not be used to intimidate, harass, increase litigation costs, obtain a settlement, test the sufficiency of allegations, emphasize the merits of a claim, create a conflict of interest between attorney and client, reveal privileged information or work-product, nor as a discovery device. n5

Since a motion for sanctions is subject to the certification requirements of Rule 11, an attorney or party may be sanctioned for filing a sanctions motion for an improper purpose. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsBad Faith MotionsCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsCertification RequirementsCivil ProcedureSanctionsContemptCivil ContemptLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Willy v. Coastal Corp., 503 U.S. 131, 138-139, 112 S. Ct. 1076, 117 L. Ed. 2d 280 , reh'g

denied, 504 U.S. 935 (1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(4).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.03

§ 8A.03 Sanctions in Removal Cases

[1] Sanctions Generally Cannot Be Based Solely on State Filings

Courts are divided on the question of whether Rule 11 may be invoked in a removed action to impose sanctions against a plaintiff solely on the basis of the original complaint. Most of the circuit courts that have addressed the issue have held that papers filed in state court prior to removal are not subject to Rule 11 sanctions. n1

However, an attorney or party who "later advocates" a frivolous position taken in the original complaint may be sanctioned. n2

[2] Filing Frivolous Removal Petition Is Sanctionable

An attorney or party may be sanctioned pursuant to Rule 11(c) for filing a frivolous removal petition. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Bisciglia v. Kenosha Unified Sch. Dist. No. 1, 45 F.3d 223, 226-227 (7th Cir. 1995) ; see also Worldwide Primates, Inc. v. McGreal, 26 F.3d 1089, 1091 (11th Cir. 1994) ; Kirby v. Allegheny Beverage Corp., 811 F.2d 253, 257 (4th Cir. 1987) ; Stiefvater Real Estate, Inc. v. Hinsdale, 812 F.2d 805, 809 (2d Cir. 1987) ; Hurd v. Ralphs Grocery Co., 824 F.2d 806, 808 (9th Cir. 1987) ; cf. Herron v. Jupiter Transp. Co. 858 F.2d 332, 335 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P.11(b) Committee Note (1993).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c); see Unanue-Casal v. Unanue-Casal, 898 F.2d 839, 841 (1st Cir. 1990) ; see also Hewitt v. City of Stanton, 798 F.2d 1230, 1232-1233 (9th Cir. 1986) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.04

§ 8A.04 Sanctions Under Rule 11 for Improper Pleadings, Motions, or Other Papers

[1] Purpose of Rule 11 Sanctions

The purpose of sanctions under Rule 11 is to deter frivolous litigation and filings. n1 Thus, when a district court determines that a sanction is warranted for violating Rule 11, the sanction imposed should be the minimum necessary to deter future violations. n2

[2] Rule 11 Limited to Pleadings, Motions, or Other Papers

Rule 11 requires an attorney to sign every pleading, motion, or other paper submitted on behalf of a client, and the attorney is subject to sanctions if the document he or she signs violates the rule. n3 The rule does not apply to appellate proceedings. n3.1 The following points summarize the scope of Rule 11: n4

- Rule 11 sanctions may be imposed on both counsel and client.
- A Rule 11 violation must be based on signed pleadings, motions, or other papers.
- Rule 11 may not be employed to sanction obnoxious conduct during the course of the litigation.
- Rule 11 requires only a showing of objective unreasonableness on the part of the person signing the papers.
- Misconduct under Rule 11 must be judged as of the time the paper was signed.

[3] Triggering Liability Under Rule 11

The operative events for triggering liability under Rule 11 are: n5

- Signing a document. n6
- Filing a document. n7

- Submitting an unfiled document to the court. n8

- Later advocating a position; that is, after a paper is filed, reaffirming to the court positions taken in the paper after learning that they cease to have any merit. n9 The use of the word "advocating" in the text of the rule means that continuing to advocate a position orally after a paper has been signed, filed, or submitted may result in the imposition of sanctions. Sanctions may not be imposed under Rule 11 for statements made for the first time during oral argument. n10

Rule 11 sanctions may not be imposed based on other conduct, such as discovery abuses, misstatements made during oral argument, or conduct in other litigation. n11

[4] Significance of Signing Pleadings, Motions, or Other Papers

Every pleading, written motion, or other paper presented to a federal district court must be signed by an attorney of record or pro se litigant. The paper must state the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n12 Failure to sign a document is not subject to discretionary sanctions under Rule 11(c). However, if the omission is not promptly corrected after being called to the attention of the person whose signature is required, the paper must be stricken. n13

A document bearing a typewritten signature does not satisfy Rule 11. n14 Similarly, a document bearing a rubber stamped facsimile of a signature has been deemed as not "signed" within the meaning of Rule 11(a). n15

The attorney's signature certifies, among other things, that to the best of the attorney's knowledge, information, and belief after reasonable inquiry, the allegations and facts are or will be supported by the evidence. Likewise, in signing the paper, the attorney or party certifies that the legal contentions have or will have proper evidentiary support, and that the arguments are warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument to extend, modify, or change the law. n16 Therefore, sanctions may be sought for a filing that contains both frivolous and nonfrivolous material. n17

In signing the paper, the attorney or party certifies that denials of factual contentions are warranted on the evidence or are reasonably based on a lack of information or belief; denials based on a lack of information or belief must be specifically identified. n18

Rule 11 places an affirmative duty on attorneys and litigants to make a investigation of the facts and the law that is reasonable under the circumstances before signing and submitting any pleading, motion, or other paper. n19

The amount of time available to investigate a case may be considered by a court in deciding whether sanctions should be imposed. n20

In the absence of time constraints, an attorney should interview witnesses and any attorneys who represented the client in prior related proceedings. n21 Likewise, all available documents that are relevant to the case should be examined. n22 Counsel for the plaintiff should also check any available public records to verify facts. n23

An attorney may rely on objectively reasonable representations of his or her client. n24 However, information received from other sources should be verified. n25

[5] Conduct Is Measured by Objective Standard

The courts have interpreted Rule 11 as establishing an objective standard of conduct for litigants and attorneys. n26 Although the subjective beliefs of a person who signed or advocated a document are irrelevant in determining whether the certification requirements of the rule have been violated, subjective factors may be considered, since "Rule 11 sanctions are based on 'an objective standard of reasonableness under the circumstances.' " n27

[6] Rule 11 Is Not Available to Sanction Generalized Bad Behavior

Counsel considering moving for Rule 11 sanctions must be aware that Rule 11 addresses specific behavior relating to signed papers; it does not allow the court to sanction any other action by an attorney or party of which it disapproves. n28 However, courts may impose sanctions for generalized bad behavior under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 and the inherent power of the court.

[7] Moving for Sanctions Under Rule 11

[7.--1] Who May Move for Imposition of Sanctions

A district court may impose sanctions under Rule 11 on motion of an aggrieved party. n29 A party may not move for sanctions under Rule 11 against his or her attorney. n30 A nonparty may not intervene to make a motion for sanctions. n31 A court also may initiate a sanctions proceeding on its own motion. n32 The substantive standards for sua sponte sanctions are the same as for sanctions initiated by a party and do not require subjective bad faith. n33 However, Rule 11 provides that a court may impose sanctions ordering an attorney to pay attorney's fees and costs to the opposing party only on motion of the opposing party. n34

[7.--2] "Safe Harbor" Prerequisite to Filing Motion

The "safe harbor" provision, granting a time period between the time of service and the time for filing is designed to allow for the correction of the alleged violation. n35 Accordingly, a motion for sanctions under Rule 11 may not be "filed or be presented to the court if the challenged paper, claim, defense, contention, or denial is withdrawn or appropriately corrected within 21 days after service or within another time the court sets." n36 Although the 21-day period starts with serving the motion, n37 the intention of the Rule is that counsel will give "informal notice to the other party, whether in person or by a telephone call or letter, of a potential violation before proceeding to prepare and serve a Rule 11 motion." n38

This "safe-harbor" provision is a mandatory procedural prerequisite. Sanctions imposed without compliance are subject to reversal. n39 The fact that a court has granted leave to move for sanctions may not be used to circumvent the "safe harbor" prerequisite. n40 However, technical noncompliance with the safe-harbor provision may not always be a bar to the imposition of sanctions, particularly if the sanctioned party had ample notice that sanctions would be requested. n41

The "safe harbor" provision immunizes litigants from Rule 11 sanction motions if they withdraw or correct the challenged paper before the motion is served. n42 Failure to comply with the 21-day service requirement does not, however, shield parties and attorneys from all sanctions under Rule 11, since the "safe harbor" provision does not apply when the court imposes sanctions on its own initiative. n43 However, when a sua sponte Rule 11 sanction denies a lawyer the opportunity to withdraw the offending document under the Rule 11 safe harbor provision, subjective bad faith, rather than objective unreasonableness, is the appropriate standard for imposing sanctions. n44

[7.--3] Timing of Motion

Rule 11 does not impose an explicit deadline for seeking sanctions. n45 The 21-day, safe-harbor service requirement controls not only the earliest date on which a motion may be filed, it also indirectly controls the last date on which the a Rule 11 sanctions motion may be filed. At the very least, a party must serve its Rule 11 motion before the court has ruled on the pleading, and thus before the conclusion of the case. Otherwise, the purpose of the "safe harbor" provision would be nullified. n46

One court has interpreted this to mean that Rule 11 motions must be served at least a full 21 days before the court concludes the case or resolves the offending contention, because if the court disposes of the offending contention within the 21-day safe-harbor period after service, it becomes impossible under the provision of Rule 11(c)(2) to file the motion or otherwise present it to the court. The Rule permits filing of the motion only after the expiration of the full 21-day "safe-harbor" period following service of the motion. n47

However, it has been found that sanctions may be awarded in response to a motion filed after final judgment, despite the safe-harbor provision of Rule 11, if the party seeking sanctions had previously served a motion seeking sanctions based on the same pleading. n48

[7.--4] Avoiding Frivolous Sanctions Motion

An attorney or party may be sanctioned for filing a frivolous sanctions motion. n49

[7.--5] Considering Discovery on Motion

Discovery should be conducted on a sanctions motion only in unusual circumstances, and then only by leave of court. n50

[7.--6] Awarding Expenses and Attorney's Fees to Party Who Prevails on Motion

The court may award to the party prevailing on a Rule 11 motion reasonable expenses and attorney's fees incurred in making or opposing the motion. n51 This provision eliminates the need for cross-motions under Rule 11. An award of fees and expenses is not automatic, since the Rule provides that the court may make such an award "if warranted." n52 The sanction must be limited to the fees and expenses that directly result from the sanctionable conduct, and the award must be the least severe sanction that is adequate to serve the purposes of deterrence. n53

Expenses and attorney's fees may also be awarded as a sanction for violating the certification requirements of Rule 11. n54

[7.--7] No Time Limit for Decision on Motion

Rule 11 does not specify a time limit for deciding a motion seeking sanctions. The 1993 Committee Note states that the question of when the motion should be decided will be resolved on a case-by-case basis. n55 A court may defer its ruling until the end of the case to prevent conflicts of interest and attorney-client privilege problems, or for other reasons that justify delay. n56

[8] Who May Impose Sanctions

A district judge has the authority to impose sanctions under Rule 11 if an attorney or a party violates Rule 11(b). n57 Case law differs on the issue of whether a magistrate judge assigned to hear pretrial matters has authority to impose Rule 11 sanctions. n58

[9] Sanctions Are Discretionary

When a district court determines that Rule 11(b) has been violated, it "may," but is not required to, impose a sanction. n59

If a court determines that sanctions are warranted under Rule 11, its determination as to the type of sanction to be imposed is also discretionary. n60 However, the court's discretion is not unrestricted. The sanction must be "limited to what suffices to deter repetition of the conduct or comparable conduct by others similarly situated." n61

The rule does not list other factors that a court should consider in deciding whether to impose a sanction and what sanction to impose. The Committee Note suggests the following factors for the court's consideration: n62

- Whether the improper conduct was willful, or negligent.
- Whether it was part of a pattern of activity, or an isolated event.
- Whether it infected the entire pleading, or only one particular count or defense.
- Whether the person has engaged in similar conduct in other litigation.
- Whether it was intended to injure; what effect it had on the litigation process in time or expense.
- Whether the responsible person is trained in the law.
- What amount, given the financial resources of the responsible person, is needed to deter that person from repetition in the same case.
- What amount is needed to deter similar activity by other litigants.

Ordinarily, a finding of subjective bad faith is not required before ordering sanctions under Rule 11. n63 The Second Circuit, while agreeing that the objective unreasonableness standard is applicable when sanctions are initiated by motion, has ruled that a subjective bad faith standard does apply to sua sponte sanctions, at least if the sanctions are initiated at a time when the sanctioned person no longer has an opportunity to correct or withdraw the challenged submission. n64 The Second Circuit left open the question of what mental standard would apply when sua sponte sanctions are ordered but the person is afforded an opportunity to avoid the sanction through correction or withdrawal. n65

The First and Fifth Circuits, on the other hand, specifically rejected the Second Circuit's view, ruling that the plain language of Rule 11 imposes the same substantive standard whether the court or an opposing party initiates a sanctions proceeding. n66

[10] Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard--Due Process Considerations

The parties and attorneys must receive both proper notice and a reasonable opportunity to respond before the trial court may impose sanctions under Rule 11. n67

The party against whom sanctions are sought is entitled to particularized notice. n68 At a minimum, he or she must be informed of the following: n69

- Rule 11 sanctions are being considered.
- The reasons why sanctions are being considered.
- The form of sanctions under consideration.

Judges who wish to impose sanctions sua sponte must provide notice by issuing an order describing the specific conduct that appears to violate Rule 11, and commanding the attorney, law firm, or party to show cause why it has not violated the rule. n70 Rule 11 requires that a party or an attorney be given a reasonable opportunity to respond to the alleged violation prior to imposition of sanctions. n71 However, Rule 11 does not require a formal hearing or a jury trial. n72 In the absence of a timely response, a Rule 11 motion may be granted by default as uncontested. n73

[11] Lack of Jurisdiction in Underlying Action

The absence of subject matter jurisdiction over the merits of a case does not prevent a district court from adjudicating the collateral issue of sanctions under Rule 11. n74

A district court also has authority to award sanctions to a defendant over whom it does not have personal jurisdiction but who has been forced to defend a frivolous complaint. n75 However, a court may not impose sanctions against a nonparty over whom it does not have jurisdiction. n76

[12] Effect of Dismissal of Underlying Action

Dismissal of an action does not deprive a district court of its jurisdiction to impose sanctions under Rule 11. n77 However, a court may not impose monetary sanctions sua sponte if it has not issued a show cause order prior to a voluntary dismissal. n78

[13] Determining Who The Court May Sanction

A district court may sanction an attorney who violates or is responsible for a violation of the certification requirements of Rule 11. n79 However, Rule 11 sanctions may not be awarded to a client against its own attorney for a breach of duty to the client. n80

An attorney who at any point certified that a document complied with Rule 11 is subject to the rule's strictures, regardless of whether he or she remains an attorney of record. Thus, a court may assess sanctions against a lawyer who has withdrawn from a case before the opposing party has moved for sanctions or the court has issued a show cause order. n81

Since Rule 11 applies to anyone who presents a document to the court, local counsel may be held liable for filing or submitting a frivolous paper, regardless of who actually signed it. n82

A lawyer's lack of experience or knowledge does not prevent his or her liability under Rule 11. n83 Inexperience may, however, be considered when making a sanctions decision. n84 If an inexperienced attorney works for a law firm, the court may decide to sanction the firm, rather than the individual attorney.

When an attorney is sanctioned, the court may order that the attorney bear the sanction personally and not be reimbursed or indemnified. n85

A represented party who is responsible for a violation of Rule 11 may be sanctioned. n86 Responsibility for a violation will depend on the extent of the client's involvement in the management of litigation and the decisions that resulted in a violation of the rule. n87 Imposition of sanctions against an attorney does not preclude imposition of sanctions against the client. n88

A party who is not represented by counsel may be sanctioned for violating Rule 11. n89 The district court may not decline to impose any sanction when a violation has arguably occurred simply because a plaintiff is proceeding pro se. n90 However, the court may consider the ability of the party to pay monetary sanctions as one factor in assessing sanctions. n91

[14] Drafting Motion for Rule 11 Sanctions

[14.--1] Separate Motion Required for Rule 11 Sanctions

A motion for Rule 11 sanctions must be made separately from any other filing. n92 The request for sanctions may not be included in a pleading or combined with any other motion. n93

[14.--2] Rule 11 Motion Must Comply With General Rules Governing Motions

A Rule 11 motion seeking sanctions must comply with Rule 7 and Rule 11, as well as with any applicable local district court rules. n94

[14.--3] State Grounds for Sanctions Specifically, and Specify Order Sought

A motion for sanctions must "state with particularity" the grounds for sanctions by indicating the authority under which sanctions are requested (e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1927) and describing the specific conduct alleged to be sanctionable. n95

A motion for sanctions must specify the order sought. If the governing rule or statute specifies the type of sanction that may be imposed, request only that sanction. n96

EXAMPLE:

Unreasonable and vexatious multiplication of proceedings. A motion for sanctions alleging a violation of Section 1927 may only request payment of excess costs, expenses, and attorney's fees incurred. n97 Do not cite Section 1927 and request dismissal.

If the type of sanctions available under the authority specified is discretionary, the motion should request a particular sanction and "appropriate" sanctions.

EXAMPLE:

Representations in pleadings. A motion for sanctions alleging lack of legal and factual basis for a lawsuit may request an order awarding attorney's fees and other sanctions that may be appropriate. n98

[14.--4] Sign Motion and Supporting Documents

A motion for Rule 11 sanctions and each supporting document must be signed by at least one attorney of record or by a party appearing pro se. An unsigned document may be stricken. n99

The signature certifies that:

- The motion or supporting document is not being presented for an improper purpose. n100
- Its legal contentions are warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument to change existing law or establish new law. n101
- Its factual contentions have, or, if specifically so identified, likely will have, evidentiary support. n102

If the motion, or any supporting document, violates any one of these certification standards, sanctions may be imposed. n103

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsBad Faith MotionsCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsCertification RequirementsCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsSigning RequirementsCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsVexatious LitigantsLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n2)Footnote 2. Waltz v. County of Lycoming, 974 F.2d 387, 390 (3d Cir. 1992) ; In re Kunstler, 914 F.2d 505, 523 (4th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 499 U.S. 969 (1991) ; Smith Int'l, Inc. v. Texas Commerce Bank, 844 F.2d 1193, 1202 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Roth v. Green, 466 F.3d 1179, 1187-1188 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See U.S. v. International Bhd. of Teamsters, 948 F.2d 1338, 1345-1346 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 544, 111 S. Ct. 922, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Bryant v. Brooklyn Barbecue Corp., 932 F.2d 697, 699 (8th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1005 (1991) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Eisenberg v. University of New Mexico, 936 F.2d 1131, 1133-1134 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b) Committee Note (1993).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n12)Footnote 11. Christian v. Mattel, Inc., 286 F.3d 1118, 1129-1131 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a); see also Operating Eng'rs Local 139 Health Benefit Fund v. Rawson Plumbing, Inc., 130 F. Supp. 2d 1022, 1023-1024 (E.D. Wis. 2001) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Becker v. Montgomery, 532 U.S. 757, 764, 121 S. Ct. 1801, 149 L. Ed. 2d 983 (2001) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Jenkins v. Sladkus, 226 F.R.D. 206, 206-207 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b); see also Coonts v. Potts, 316 F.3d 745, 752-754 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See Holgate v. Baldwin, 425 F.3d 671, 675-677 (9th Cir. 2005) (sanctions against attorney could be imposed based on one frivolous claim in complaint, regardless of whether remaining claims were frivolous).

(n19)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(4).

(n20)Footnote 19. See Coonts v. Potts, 316 F.3d 745, 753-754 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 401-402, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n22)Footnote 21. See Wigod v. Chicago Mercantile Exch., 981 F.2d 1510, 1523 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n23)Footnote 22. See Insurance Benefit Adm'rs, Inc. v. Martin, 871 F.2d 1354, 1357 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n24)Footnote 23. See Callahan v. Schoppe, 864 F.2d 44, 45-46 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n25)Footnote 24. See Hadges v. Yonkers Racing Corp., 48 F.3d 1320, 1323, 1329-1330 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n26)Footnote 25. See S.A. Auto Lube, Inc. v. Jiffy Lube Int'l, Inc., 842 F.2d 946, 949 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n27)Footnote 26. See Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 549, 111 S. Ct. 922, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) ; Margo v. Weiss, 213 F.3d 55, 64-65 (2d Cir. 2000) .

(n28)Footnote 27. Martin v. Brown, 63 F.3d 1252, 1264 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n29)Footnote 28. See Trulis v. Barton, 67 F.3d 779, 789 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n30)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n31)Footnote 30. See Mark Indus., Ltd. v. Sea Captain's Choice, Inc., 50 F.3d 730, 732 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n32)Footnote 31. New York News, Inc. v. Kheel, 972 F.2d 482, 486 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n33)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(3); see also MHC Inv. Co. v. Racom Corp., 323 F.3d 620, 623 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n34)Footnote 33. See Jenkins v. Methodist Hosps. of Dallas, Inc., 478 F.3d 255, 264 (5th Cir. 2007) ; see also Young v. City of Providence, 404 F.3d 33, 39-40 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n35)Footnote 34. Norsyn, Inc. v. Desai, 351 F.3d 825, 831-832 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n36)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n37)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2); see also Gal v. Viacom Int'l, Inc., 403 F. Supp. 2d 294, 308-309 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n38)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2); see also Roth v. Green, 466 F.3d 1179, 1191-1192 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n39)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n40)Footnote 39. See Radcliffe v. Rainbow Constr. Co., 254 F.3d 772, 788-789 (9th Cir. 2001) .

(n41)Footnote 40. Photocircuits Corp. v. Marathon Agents, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 449, 452 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n42)Footnote 41. See Cardillo v. Cardillo, 360 F. Supp. 2d 402, 419-420 (D.R.I. 2005) .

(n43)Footnote 42. Brown v. Pierce Mfg., Inc., 169 F.R.D. 118, 119 (E.D. Wis. 1996) .

(n44)Footnote 43. In re Pennie & Edmonds LLP, 323 F.3d 86, 89-90 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n45)Footnote 44. See In re Pennie & Edmonds LLP, 323 F.3d 86, 87, 91 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n46)Footnote 45. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

(n47)Footnote 46. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n48)Footnote 47. Ridder v. City of Springfield, 109 F.3d 288, 295 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n49)Footnote 48. See Divane v. Krull Elec. Co., 200 F.3d 1020, 1025-1027 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n50)Footnote 49. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n51)Footnote 50. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n52)Footnote 51. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n53)Footnote 52. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n54)Footnote 53. See Divane v. Krull Elec. Co., 200 F.3d 1020, 1030-1031 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n55)Footnote 54. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(4).

(n56)Footnote 55. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n57)Footnote 56. See Leidholdt v. L.F.P., Inc., 860 F.2d 890, 895 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n58)Footnote 57. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n59)Footnote 58. Compare Alpern v. Lieb, 38 F.3d 933, 935 (7th Cir. 1994) (power to award sanctions belongs in hands of district judge), with Maisonville v. F2 Am., Inc., 902 F.2d 746, 747-748 (9th Cir. 1990) (magistrate judge may order Rule 11 sanctions because sanctions are non-dispositive).

(n60)Footnote 59. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(1); see Corley v. Rosewood Care Ctr., Inc., 388 F.3d 990, 1013 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n61)Footnote 60. Mariani v. Doctors Assocs., Inc., 983 F.2d 5, 7 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n62)Footnote 61. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(4).

(n63)Footnote 62. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n64)Footnote 63. See Jenkins v. Methodist Hosps. of Dallas, Inc., 478 F.3d 255, 264 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n65)Footnote 64. In re Pennie & Edmunds LLP, 323 F.3d 86, 90-93 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n66)Footnote 65. In re Pennie & Edmunds LLP, 323 F.3d 86, 90-93 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n67)Footnote 66. Young v. City of Providence, 404 F.3d 33, 39-40 (1st Cir. 2005) ; Jenkins v. Methodist Hosps. of Dallas, Inc., 478 F.3d 255, 265 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n68)Footnote 67. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c); see Vollmer v. Publishers Clearing House, 248 F.3d 698, 709-711 (7th Cir. 2001) .

(n69)Footnote 68. Foster v. Wilson, 504 F.3d 1046, 1052 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n70)Footnote 69. Foster v. Wilson, 504 F.3d 1046, 1052-1053 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n71)Footnote 70. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(3); see Foster v. Wilson, 504 F.3d 1046, 1052-1053 (9th Cir. 2007) ; see also Jones v. UPS, 460 F.3d 1004, 1008-1011 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n72)Footnote 71. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n73)Footnote 72. See Childs v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 29 F.3d 1018, 1027 (5th Cir. 1994) (hearing not required); In re Itel Sec. Litig., 596 F. Supp. 226, 232 n.7 (N.D. Cal. 1984) , aff'd, 791 F.2d 672 (9th Cir. 1986) (jury trial not required).

(n74)Footnote 73. See DiPaolo v. Moran, 407 F.3d 140, 144-145 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n75)Footnote 74. Willy v. Coastal Corp., 503 U.S. 131, 133, 112 S. Ct. 1076, 117 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1992) .

(n76)Footnote 75. Mareno v. Rowe, 910 F.2d 1043, 1046-1047 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n77)Footnote 76. McGuire v. Sigma Coatings, Inc., 48 F.3d 902, 907 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n78)Footnote 77. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 396, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n79)Footnote 78. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(5)(B).

(n80)Footnote 79. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n81)Footnote 80. Mark Indus., Ltd. v. Sea Captain's Choice, Inc., 50 F.3d 730, 732 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n82)Footnote 81. See In re Itel Sec. Litig., 791 F.2d 672, 675 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n83)Footnote 82. Val-Land Farms, Inc. v. Third Nat'l Bank, 937 F.2d 1110, 1117-1118 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n84)Footnote 83. Hays v. Sony Corp. of Am., 847 F.2d 412, 419 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n85)Footnote 84. Blue v. United States Dep't of the Army, 914 F.2d 525, 546 (4th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 499 U.S. 959 (1991) .

(n86)Footnote 85. Derechin v. State Univ. of New York, 963 F.2d 513, 519 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n87)Footnote 86. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n88)Footnote 87. Independent Fire Ins. Co. v. Lea, 979 F.2d 377, 378 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n89)Footnote 88. See Skidmore Energy, Inc. v. KPMG, 455 F.3d 564, 567-568 (5th Cir. 2006) ; see also Collins v. Walden, 834 F.2d 961, 965 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n90)Footnote 89. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c); see also Warren v. Guelker, 29 F.3d 1386, 1389 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n91)Footnote 90. Warren v. Guelker, 29 F.3d 1386, 1390 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n92)Footnote 91. Warren v. Guelker, 29 F.3d 1386, 1390 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n93)Footnote 92. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n94)Footnote 93. See, e.g., Hadges v. Yonkers Racing Corp., 48 F.3d 1320, 1323, 1328 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n95)Footnote 94. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b); Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

(n96)Footnote 95. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n97)Footnote 96. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n98)Footnote 97. 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

(n99)Footnote 98. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n100)Footnote 99. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n101)Footnote 100. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

(n102)Footnote 101. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n103)Footnote 102. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n104)Footnote 103. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.05

§ 8A.05 Sanctions for Violating Local District Court Rules or Procedures

The power to sanction under local district court rules derives from the inherent authority of the court. n1 Sanctions generally may not be imposed for failure to comply with any requirement that is not in federal law, federal rules, or local district court rules (e.g., general orders, standing orders, and individual judge's rules) unless the alleged violator has been given actual notice of the requirement in the particular case. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 764-765, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(b).

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.06

§ 8A.06 Sanctions Under Rule 16 for Failing to Follow Pretrial Procedures

Sanctions may be imposed under Rule 16(f) against an attorney or party who: n1

- Fails to obey a scheduling or pretrial order.
- Fails to appear at a scheduling or pretrial conference. n2
- Is substantially unprepared to participate at a scheduling or pretrial conference.
- Fails to participate in good faith.

The range of sanctions available for violations is extremely broad, including reprimand, costs, attorney's fees, dismissal of an action, or entry of a default judgment. The appropriate sanction must be decided on a case-by-case basis. n3

A Rule 16(f) dismissal that does not specify whether it is with or without prejudice is not an adjudication on the merits so as to bar the filing of a subsequent suit. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctionsCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lydic v. Bayer, A.G., 219 F.R.D. 114, 115-116 (S.D. Tex. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Tower Ventures, Inc. v. City of Westfield, 296 F.3d 43, 46 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bay Fireworks v. Frenkel & Co., Inc., 359 F. Supp. 2d 257, 262-263 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.07

§ 8A.07 Sanctions Under Rule 37 for Failing to Comply With Discovery Obligations

Sanctions may be imposed for misconduct relating to disclosure or discovery. Rule 37 permits the court to strike pleadings or dismiss the action when a party fails to obey an order to permit or provide discovery, or fails to appear for his or her deposition. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresSanctionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMisconductCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctionsCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2),(d); Bobal v. Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst., 916 F.2d 759, 763-764 (2d. Cir 1990) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.08

§ 8A.08 Sanctions Under Rule 41 for Failing to Prosecute Action or Claim

Rule 41(b) authorizes involuntary dismissal of an action or claim for plaintiff's failure to prosecute. n1 This remedy may be utilized only in extreme situations. n2

Rule 41(c) makes the involuntary dismissal provisions of Rule 41(b) applicable to counterclaims, cross-claims, and third-party claims. n3

Failure to prosecute may be evidenced by either simple inaction or a pattern of delaying tactics. Factors that the court may consider include: n4

- The duration of the claimant's failure to prosecute.
- Whether the claimant received notice that further delays would result in dismissal.
- Whether the defendant is likely to be prejudiced by further delay.
- Whether the trial judge has taken care to strike a balance between alleviating court calendar congestion and protecting a party's right to due process and a fair chance to be heard.
- The efficacy of lesser sanctions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to ProsecuteCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Link v. Wabash R.R., 370 U.S. 626, 633, 82 S. Ct. 1386, 8 L. Ed. 2d 734 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lucas v. Miles, 84 F.3d 532, 535 (2d Cir. 1996) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.09

§ 8A.09 Sanctions Under Rule 45 for Failing to Properly Issue or Obey Subpoenas

An attorney or party who is responsible for issuance and service of a subpoena that imposes undue burden or expense on the recipient shall be sanctioned by the court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued. Determination of an appropriate sanction is discretionary, and may include the recipient's lost earnings and reasonable attorney's fees. n1

Failure to obey a subpoena without adequate excuse may be deemed contempt of court. n2

The court should analyze a violation of Rule 45 in the same manner as a violation of Rule 11. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctionsCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSubpoenasCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(1); see also Dravo Corp. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 160 F.R.D. 123, 128 (D. Neb. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(e).

(n3)Footnote 3. Dravo Corp. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 160 F.R.D. 123, 128 (D. Neb. 1995) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.10

§ 8A.10 Sanctions Under Rule 56 for Filing Summary Judgment Affidavit or Declaration in Bad Faith or to Delay

If satisfied that an affidavit or declaration under this rule is submitted in bad faith or solely for delay, the court--after notice and a reasonable time to respond--may order the submitting party to pay the other party the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, that party incurred as a result. n1 An offending party or attorney also may be held in contempt or subjected to other appropriate sanctions. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctionsCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h).

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.11

§ 8A.11 Sanctions Under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 for Multiplying Proceedings Unreasonably and Vexatiously

[1] Attorney May Be Sanctioned

An attorney or other person admitted to conduct cases in a federal court may be sanctioned for unreasonably and vexatiously multiplying the proceedings in a case. n1 Section 1927 does not apply to a pro se litigant who is not an attorney. n2

The filing of a complaint may be sanctioned under Rule 11 or a court's inherent authority; Section 1927, on the other hand, applies only to unnecessary filings and tactics after the filing of the complaint. n3

[2] Client May Not Be Sanctioned

Represented parties may not be sanctioned under Section 1927. n4

[3] Bad Faith Required

An award of sanctions under Section 1927 generally must be accompanied by a finding of bad faith. n5 However, the decision to impose a sanction under Section 1927 is discretionary. n6

[4] Only Costs and Fees Are Available

Only "the excess costs, expenses and attorneys' fees reasonably incurred because of such conduct" may be awarded under Section 1927. n7

A voluntary dismissal does not remove jurisdiction from the district court with respect to a motion for fees and costs pursuant to Section 1927. However, a motion for fees should be granted following a voluntary dismissal only in exceptional circumstances. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsVexatious LitigantsCivil

ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Browning v. Kramer, 931 F.2d 340, 344 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Zaldivar v City of Los Angeles, 780 F2d 823, 831 (9th Cir 1986) ; see also Willis v. City of Oakland, 231 F.R.D. 597, 598 (N.D. Cal. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1927; see United States v. International Bhd. of Teamsters, 948 F.2d 1338, 1345 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Schwartz v. Millon Air, Inc., 341 F.3d 1220, 1225-1226 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1927; see Lee v. First Lenders Ins. Servs., Inc., 236 F.3d 443, 445-446 (8th Cir. 2001) ; see also Manion v. American Airlines, Inc., 395 F.3d 428, 431-434 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (the district court could not award sanctions compensating the opposing party for time spent in attending court proceedings or for costs relating to an interlocutory appeal).

(n8)Footnote 8. Macheska v. Thomson Learning, 347 F. Supp. 2d 169, 178-180 (M.D. Pa. 2004) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.12

§ 8A.12 Sanctions Pursuant to Court's Inherent Power

[1] Understanding Court's Inherent Power to Sanction

Federal courts have inherent power to sanction bad faith conduct that occurs in the course of litigation. n1 However, when the district court invokes its inherent power to sanction misconduct by an attorney for violation of a court order or other misconduct that is not undertaken for the client's benefit, the district court need not find bad faith. n2

The court's inherent power has not been displaced by rules and statutes authorizing sanctions. However, if bad faith conduct can be sanctioned under a rule or statute, the court should ordinarily rely on the specific rule or statute to impose sanctions. n3

[2] Determining Whether Bad Faith Conduct Exists

There is no simple definition of "bad-faith conduct." In discussing the court's invocation of inherent power to punish conduct, the Supreme Court has spoken of:

- Disobeying judicial orders. n4
- Fraud. n5
- Abuse of judicial process. n6
- Acting vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive purpose. n7

[3] Relationship Between Inherent Power, Rule 11, and Section 1927

The inherent power of federal courts to impose sanctions for bad-faith conduct in the course of litigation is not displaced by the sanctioning provision of Section 1927 or Rule 11. Moreover, the district court is not required to apply other sanctions provisions first. When much of the bad-faith conduct is beyond the reach of the rules, but a party's entire course of conduct evidences bad faith, and the conduct sanctionable under the rules is intertwined with conduct that can only be reached by the inherent power, application of the rules before resort to inherent power would only delay litigation further. n8

[4] Fashioning Appropriate Sanction

A primary aspect of the court's discretion to exercise its inherent powers is the ability to fashion an appropriate sanction for conduct which abuses the judicial process. n9 Thus, counsel should approach the relief sought creatively.

Sanctions that may be imposed pursuant to the court's inherent power include:

- Attorney's fees. n10
- Dismissing the action. n11
- Entering a default judgment against the offending party. n12
- Vacating a judgment. n13
- Citing for contempt. n14
- Disqualifying or suspending counsel. n15
- Enjoining further litigation. n16
- Precluding admission of evidence. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 766-767, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) ; see also Toon v. Wackenhut Corrections Corp., 250 F.3d 950, 952-954 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See United States v. Seltzer, 227 F.3d 36, 39-42 (2d Cir. 2000) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 46, 50, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Young v. United States, 481 U.S. 787, 798, 107 S. Ct. 2124, 95 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1987) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. v. Hartford-Empire Co., 322 U.S. 238, 244, 64 S. Ct. 997 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 766-767, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Alyeska Pipeline Serv. Co. v. Wilderness Soc'y, 421 U.S. 240, 258-259, 95 S. Ct. 1612, 44 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1975) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 38-39, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 44-45, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Corder v. Howard Johnson & Co., 53 F.3d 225, 232 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 44, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Shepherd v. ABC, 62 F.3d 1469, 1475 (D.C. Cir. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 44, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 51, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Shepherd v. ABC, 62 F.3d 1469, 1475 (D.C. Cir. 1995) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Shafii v. British Airways 83 F.3d 566, 571 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Shepherd v. ABC, 62 F.3d 1469, 1475 (D.C. Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.13

§ 8A.13 Sanctions Orders

[1] Decision May Be Written or on Record

A decision to impose sanctions may be set forth in a written order or on the record. n1 An order imposing sanctions under Rule 11 must describe the conduct that violated the rule, and explain the basis for the court's selection of the sanction. n2

[2] Specifying Source of Sanctioning Authority

Because the various sources of the court's authority are governed by different standards, the court must explain its sanctions order with care, specificity and attention to the source. n3 Thus, the order must cite either:

- A Federal Rule of Civil Procedure.
- A law enacted by Congress.
- A local rule.
- The court's inherent power to sanction.

If a judgment includes an award of sanctions under Rule 11, the district court's order must specify what portion of the award is attributable to the violation of the Rule. n4

[3] Awarding Monetary Sanctions, Costs, and Fees

A monetary sanction may consist of an order to pay a fine to the court. n5

Fees that are assessed should be limited to amounts incurred as a result of the rule violation; in the case of Rule 11, a violation could warrant an imposition of fees covering the entire litigation. n6

A sanction or shifting of fees and costs need not reflect actual expenditures. n7

In making its decision, the court will consider whether the party requesting fees and costs has acted reasonably in attempting to mitigate the damages caused by the violation. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 Committee Note (1993).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(6).

(n3)Footnote 3. Sakon v. Andreo, 119 F.3d 109, 113 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Wigod v. Chicago Mercantile Exch., 981 F.2d 1510, 1523 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(5).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Chambers v. NASCO, 501 U.S. 32, 56-57, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. U.S. v. Meridian Construction Corp., 95 F.3d 153, 171 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Oliveri v. Thompson, 803 F.2d 1265, 1280 (2d Cir. 1986) , cert. denied sub nom. Suffolk County v. Graseck, 480 U.S. 918 (1987) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.14

§ 8A.14 Appealing Sanctions Orders

[1] Timing of Appeal

An order imposing sanctions under Rule 11 ordinarily will be reviewed on appeal from the final judgment on the merits in the action. If a motion for sanctions is made or remains pending after entry of final judgment on the merits of the underlying action, deferral of a ruling on the motion does not affect the finality of the judgment for purposes of determining the time for appeal. n1 An order awarding fees that does not include the amount of fees is not appealable. n2

Some courts have held that an award of sanctions prior to final judgment may be immediately appealable as a collateral order, n3 although other courts have held that interlocutory orders imposing sanctions are not immediately appealable. n4

[2] Standing to Appeal

A party or attorney must have standing to appeal an order imposing sanctions. If sanctions have been imposed on an attorney but not on his or her client, courts have held that the attorney has standing to appeal the order, but the client does not. n5

[3] Notice of Appeal

A court of appeals may lack jurisdiction to review an order imposing sanctions against an attorney unless the attorney is specifically named in the notice of appeal pursuant to Appellate Rule 3(c) 9 or the intent to appeal is otherwise clear from the notice. n6

[4] Standard of Review

Rule 11 is to be interpreted on appeal according to its "plain meaning." n7

Every aspect of a court's decision to award or deny sanctions under Rule 11 is reviewed under an abuse of discretion standard. n8 Abuse of discretion is shown if the district court did any of the following:

- Based its ruling on an erroneous view of the law. n9
- Based its ruling on a clearly erroneous assessment of the evidence. n10
- Failed to follow the procedural requirements of Rule 11. n11

However, the court's determination that it has or lacks authority to proceed under Rule 11 may present a pure question of law that is reviewable de novo on appeal. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityAdverse DeterminationsLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsDisciplinary ProceedingsAppeals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Southern Travel Club, Inc. v. Carnival Air Lines, Inc., 986 F.2d 125, 130 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Southern Travel Club, Inc. v. Carnival Air Lines, Inc., 986 F.2d 125, 131 (5th Cir. 1993) ; John v. Barron, 897 F.2d 1387, 1390 (7th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 821 (1990) ; Jensen Elec. Co. v. Moore, Caldwell, Rowland & Dodd, Inc., 873 F.2d 1327, 1329 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Serritella v. Markum, 119 F.3d 506, 512 (7th Cir. 1997) ; see also Triad Sys. Corp. v. Southeastern Express Co., 64 F.3d 1330, 1338 (9th Cir. 1995) ; Transamerica Commercial Fin. Corp. v. Banton, Inc., 970 F.2d 810 (11th Cir. 1992) ; Crookham v. Crookham, 914 F.2d 1027, 1029 n.4 (8th Cir. 1990) ; Eavenson, Auchmuty & Greenwald v. Holtzman, 775 F.2d 535, 537 (3d Cir. 1985) ; Markwell v. County of Bexar, 878 F.2d 899, 901 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Hill v. MacMillan/McGraw-Hill Sch. Co., 102 F.3d 422, 424 (9th Cir. 1996) ; see also Sanders Assocs., Inc. v. Summagraphics Corp., 2 F.3d 394, 398 (Fed. Cir. 1993) ; G.J.B. Assocs., Inc. v. Singleton, 913 F.2d 824, 827 (10th Cir. 1990) ; Haskell v. Washington Township, 891 F.2d 132, 133 (6th Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Harrison v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 974 F.2d 873, 886 (7th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 509 U.S. 904 (1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c); see also Miltier v. Downes, 935 F.2d 660, 663 n.1 (4th Cir. 1991) ; Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Alla Med. Servs., Inc., 855 F.2d 1470, 1473 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 540-541, 111 S. Ct. 922, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 401, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See e.g., In re Keegan Management Co. Sec. Litig., 78 F.3d 431, 435 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Warren v. City of Carlsbad, 58 F.3d 439, 444 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Johnson v. Waddell & Reed, Inc., 74 F.3d 147, 151 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Chase v. Shop'N Save Warehouse Foods, 110 F.3d 424, 430 (7th Cir. 1997) .

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
A. Practice Guide

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8A.15 through 8A.99

[Reserved]

§§ 8A.15[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8A Sanctions *
B. Forms

1-8A Federal Litigation Guide § 8A.100

§ 8A.100 Notice of Motion for Rule 11 Sanctions

[1] Form

Notice of Motion for Rule 11 Sanctions

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order:

(a) pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 11(b), imposing appropriate sanctions on [party designation and name of party against whom sanctions are sought], on [identify attorney for party, e.g., Joe Smith, Counsel for Plaintiff, Mary Roe Company], and/or on [identify law firm, if any, employing attorney for party, e.g., Smith & Jones], for presenting to this court [describe allegedly offending pleading, motion or other paper, and provisions of Rule 11 violated, e.g., a Motion for Summary Judgment without any factual evidentiary support];

(b) granting [moving party] such other incidental relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or other appropriate affidavit substitute) of [name of signatory] sworn to (or dated) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion for use by a party in moving for the imposition of sanctions under Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

[3] Time for Moving for Rule 11 Sanctions; 21-Day "Safe Harbor"

A motion seeking sanctions under Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 should be served on the persons to be sanctioned soon after the offending conduct occurs. Undue delay in seeking sanctions may constitute a waiver of any violation of the rule. When the motion is made, it should be served, but it may not be filed with the court for a period of 21 days (or such other period as the court has prescribed). n1 This 21-day period is a "safe harbor" within which the party may withdraw or correct the allegedly offending paper and thereby preclude the possibility of any sanction. The failure to give the party the 21 days (or whatever other time the court has ordered) is a ground for denial of the Rule 11 motion.

[4] Separate Motion Required for Sanctions

A motion seeking sanctions under Rule 11 must be separate from any pleading or any other motion presented in the action. n2 The failure to file a separate motion is a ground for denial of the motion.

[5] Grounds for Sanction

The presentation of a paper to the court constitutes a certification that the paper is: n3

- Not submitted for any improper purpose.
- Warranted by existing law or a nonfrivolous argument for changing the law.
- Factually supported or likely to have such support after an opportunity for discovery.

[6] Sanction Discretionary

When Rule 11 is violated, the district court "may" impose an appropriate sanction on a party, attorney, or law firm that committed or is responsible for the violation. n4 Accordingly, the decision to sanction is discretionary, not mandatory.

[7] Deterrence as Purpose of Sanction

Any sanction imposed under Rule 11 is to be tailored to deter repetition of the offending conduct, n5 and is not designed to compensate the party aggrieved by the violation. However, if a motion is brought and an award is justified for effective deterrence, the court may make a compensatory monetary award of expenses and attorney's fees incurred as a result of the violation. n6 If a party is represented by counsel, any monetary sanction imposed for unwarranted legal arguments cannot be imposed on the party, but only on the attorney or law firm. n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(4).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(4).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(5)(A).

* Chapter 8A was revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide 8B.syn

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.syn Synopsis to Chapter 8B: Electronic Case Filing

§ 8B.01 Purposes of CM/ECF
[1] Overhaul Outdated Existing Case Management and Statistical Court System
[2] Benefits of Electronic Case Filing (ECF) System

§ 8B.02 Rules and Statutory Provisions Governing Papers Filed Electronically
[1] Rule 5 Authorizes Electronic Case Filing and Service
[2] Local Rules Required to Implement Electronic Case Filing Authority
[3] Allowing for Reasonable Exceptions to Mandatory Electronic Filing
[4] Rule 5(b) Authorizes Service by Electronic Means
[5] Service by Electronic Means Contingent on Parties' Consent
[6] Rule 5.2 Addresses Privacy Concerns Regarding Electronic Filing
[7] Deadline for Electronic Filing

§ 8B.03 No National Requirements
[1] Significant Uniformity in ECF Procedures
[2] Some Emerging Requirements
[3] ECF Software Program and User's Manual Promote Uniformity
[4] Local Rules Authorizing Electronic Case Filing
[5] Model Local Rules Governing Electronic Case Filing
[6] Local Variation

§ 8B.04 Interface Between Public Access to Court Electronic Records (PACER) and ECF

§§ 8B.05 through 8B.10 [Reserved]

§ 8B.11 Equipment Required to File Papers Electronically

§ 8B.12 ECF Registration

§ 8B.13 PACER Registration

§ 8B.14 Logging on to ECF System to View Court Documents or File Papers with Court

§ 8B.15 Optional Client Code for Billing Purposes

§§ 8B.16 through 8B.19 [Reserved]

§ 8B.20 Navigating in ECF Using Computer Keyboard and Mouseclicking Prompts and Commands

§ 8B.21 Correcting Data Inputting Errors

§ 8B.22 Only Documents in PDF Format Accepted by ECF Courts
[1] PDF Documents Universally Accepted
[2] Methods of Producing a PDF Document

§ 8B.23 General Formatting and Captioning Requirements Apply to PDF Documents Filed Electronically

§ 8B.24 ECF Main Menu Screen

§ 8B.25 Types of Documents That Can Be Filed in Civil Event

§ 8B.26 Types of Documents That Can Be Filed in Criminal Event

§ 8B.27 Delivering Courtesy Copy to Court

§§ 8B.28 through 8B.29 [Reserved]

§ 8B.30 Summary of Instructions on Filing Document

§ 8B.31 Detailed Instructions on Filing Document in ECF
[1] Select Type of Document to be Filed
[2] Enter Case Number
[3] Designate Party Filing Document
[4] Select PDF File to be Entered into ECF
[5] Adding Attachments
[i] Filing Instructions
[ii] Filing Lengthy Attachments
[iii] Filing Scanned Documents
[iv] Filing of Paper Attachment
[6] Designating Related Documents
[7] Recording Filing in Docket
[8] Submit Filing
[9] Serving Electronically Filed Papers (Notification of Electronic Filing)

§ 8B.32 Understanding Signature Requirements
[1] Password and Login Constitute Signature
[2] ECF Filing User's Signature
[3] Filing Documents With Non-ECF Filing User or Multiple Signatures
[4] Retaining Hard Copies of Electronically Filed Documents

§§ 8B.33 through 8B.39 [Reserved]

§ 8B.40 Filing a Complaint or Other Initiating Document

§ 8B.41 Recording Service of Process

§ 8B.42 Filing Answer to Complaint

§ 8B.43 Responses and Replies to Motions

§ 8B.44 Other Filings

§ 8B.45 Proposed Orders and Proposed Documents

§§ 8B.46 through 8B.49 [Reserved]

§ 8B.50 ECF System Notifies Parties of Filings

§ 8B.51 Ineffective Service

§ 8B.52 Three-Day Extension

§ 8B.53 Certificate of Service

§ 8B.54 Service of Paper Copy Required

§§ 8B.55 through 8B.59 [Reserved]

§ 8B.60 Searching ECF Database Using Query Function

§ 8B.61 Reports

§ 8B.62 Utilities Function

§§ 8B.63 through 8B.69 [Reserved]

§ 8B.70 Entry and Notice of Court Orders and Judgments

§ 8B.71 Fees
[1] No Registration Fees
[2] Filing Fees
[3] Fees for Viewing or Downloading ECF Documents

§ 8B.72 Security Issues

§ 8B.73 Sealing Documents, Including Preventing Document's Posting on Internet
[1] Redacting Private Information
[2] Limiting Remote Access to Electronic Files in Social Security Appeals and Immigration Cases
[3] Filings Made Under Seal
[4] Seeking Protective Order to Limit Access to Private Information
[5] Filing Unredacted Copy Under Seal
[6] Filing a Reference List of Redacted Information
[7] Waiving Protections Under Rule 5.2
[8] Seeking More or Less Protection Than Specified in Rule

§ 8B.74 Record on Appeal

§ 8B.75 Court Reporter Transcripts

§ 8B.76 Improved Statistics and Data Gathering

§ 8B.77 Training

by John K. Rabiej n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *.

John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide Scope

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

Scope

by John K. Rabiej n* SCOPE

Electronic case filing (ECF) is now standard in most federal courts. In ECF courts, all documents filed in a case, except the initial complaint and process, must be filed electronically. Service is also accomplished by electronic means. The ECF program works through the Internet and offers significant savings and convenience to the bench and bar. Although the electronic case filing practices have varied from district to district, the differences are largely concentrated in a few discrete areas. This chapter describes the main legal and administrative features of the ECF program and provides instructions on how to file documents electronically in ECF.

Part A describes the purposes of ECF, the implementing authorities, and the emerging uniform electronic-case-filing practices in the courts.

Parts B and C describe the preliminary steps necessary to begin filing documents in ECF. The topics discussed include:

- Necessary equipment and software
- Registering in ECF
- Logging on to ECF
- Navigating in ECF
- Documents must be submitted in PDF format
- General formatting and captioning requirements

Part D provides step-by-step instructions on filing documents electronically in the ECF system. It includes a discussion of the following topics:

- Summary of filing steps
- Basic case-related information to be input
- Transmitting word-processor document to ECF system
- Docket entry
- Submission of filing and transmitting notice of filing
- Signature on documents electronically filed

Part E provides more details on filing specific types of documents, including the following:

- Complaint
- Service of process
- Answer
- Response and reply to motion

Part F discusses serving documents filed in ECF by electronic means through ECF transmission facilities. Part G notes the various methods case-related information can be searched on the ECF database.

Part H concludes with a discussion of miscellaneous topics, including:

- Electronic entry of court orders and judgments
- Fees
- Sealing documents and limiting their exposure on the Internet
- Electronic Transcripts
- Training

FOOTNOTES:
(n2)Footnote *.
John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
A. Case Management/Electronic Case Filing System (CM/ECF)

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.01

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.01 Purposes of CM/ECF

[1] Overhaul Outdated Existing Case Management and Statistical Court System

In January 1996, the federal judiciary embarked on an ambitious program to replace its computer-based case management system (Integrated Case Management System or ICMS). n1 Its replacement, the new, substantially more robust Case Management/Electronic Case Filing system (CM/ECF), modernizes statistical gathering and case-management functions of the former system. At the same time, it provides courts with the capability to maintain electronic case files and permits parties to file papers and other documents electronically in accordance with Rule 5(d)(3). n2

The Case Management/Electronic Case Filing system has two main components. The first updates the previous case management and statistical gathering system (ICMS), and the second provides courts with the capability to accept cases and docket entries filed electronically via the Internet.

[2] Benefits of Electronic Case Filing (ECF) System

The benefits of filing documents electronically with the court under an ECF Internet-based system include:

- Documents may be filed at any time.
- A record of documents filed and docketed is made instantaneously.
- Documents can be filed from remote locations.
- The public, including attorneys and individual parties, have immediate access to full case information and may download contents of filed documents at any time from remote locations.
- No limit is imposed on the number of documents that may be electronically filed or viewed at a single time (although a court may impose local limitations on the size and number of pages in a document transmitted to it).

- Postage, delivery, and other litigation costs, including expenses incurred in storing paper documents, are reduced.

Attorneys, court staff, and judges all benefit from an electronic filing system. Documents stored in a computer database can be better managed than conventional paper files. Electronically filed papers can be easily searched, retrieved, and archived. In a CM/ECF court, multiple court officials can review simultaneously a single electronic document without delay. A judge can also review an electronic document whenever and wherever internet access is available.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The Judicial Conference of the United States issued a long-range plan for the federal courts in December 1995. Recommendation No. 70 states that: "[t]he courts must remain current with emerging technologies and how they can be employed to improve the administration of justice generally." The commentary following the recommendation anticipates a future "paperless" or "virtual" courthouse.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
A. Case Management/Electronic Case Filing System (CM/ECF)

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.02

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.02 Rules and Statutory Provisions Governing Papers Filed Electronically

[1] Rule 5 Authorizes Electronic Case Filing and Service

Rule 5(b) and Rule 5(d) are the sole authority for electronic service and filing of papers in civil actions. n1 The provisions of Rule 5 generally apply only to those papers that Rule 5 requires to be filed and served. It does not apply to Rule 4 papers.

Rule 4 alone governs the service and filing of the initial pleadings and summons served on a party who has not yet appeared in the action. Rule 4 does not authorize filing by electronic means. n2 The electronic service and filing provisions of Rule 5 do not apply to the court processes covered by Rules 4, 4.1, 45(b), and 71A(d)(3). n3 Therefore, electronic service and filing become an issue only after the initial papers and process are served on a party.

[2] Local Rules Required to Implement Electronic Case Filing Authority

Under Rule 5(d)(3) no party may file papers in a civil case with a court by electronic means unless that method is approved by a local rule. n4 Similar rules permitting electronic filing are set out in the other sets of procedural rules. n5 A local rule may require filing by electronic means only if reasonable exceptions are allowed. n6

Rule 5 expressly recognizes the equality between electronic filings and written papers filed conventionally. A paper filed electronically in complaince with a local rule is a written paper for purposes of the federal rules. n7 The rule makes clear that an electronically filed paper need not be separately filed in writing. n8

The courts that are operating electronic case filing systems all observe the distinction drawn in the Federal Rules between initial pleadings and process and subsequent papers. They all require initial pleadings and process to be filed with the court by conventional means in paper format. n9 However, it is neither unusual nor impermissible for a court to require an attorney handling a case that is within a court's electronic case filing system to refile initial pleadings that had been originally filed conventionally so that the court can maintain a complete electronic record of the case (see § 8B.40).

[3] Allowing for Reasonable Exceptions to Mandatory Electronic Filing

A local rule may require filing by electronic means only if reasonable exceptions are allowed. n10

[4] Rule 5(b) Authorizes Service by Electronic Means

Service of papers, other than the complaint, may be made under Rule 5(b)(2)(E), by electronic means, "if the person consented in writing." n11 The 2001 amendments to Rule 5(b) are designed to ratify the practices of courts that allow electronic service. Service of the summons and complaint, however, may not be made electronically and must be made in the conventional manner (see § 8B.02[2]). n12

[5] Service by Electronic Means Contingent on Parties' Consent

Service by electronic means is expressly contingent on consent and cannot be imposed on an unwilling party. The consent requirement was imposed "because it is not yet possible to assume universal entry into the world of electronic communication." n13

A party's consent must be in writing and "cannot be implied from conduct." n14 Written consent to be served electronically may "be provided by electronic means," including by e-mail or facsimile. n15

ECF courts permit a party, on consent, to serve papers on other parties using the court's transmission facilities. n16 One of the main ECF advantages is that it facilitates service by maintaining a computer database that contains an electronic version of every filed document, which can be accessed by the parties via the Internet. Once a document is filed and docketed electronically, the ECF system automatically generates a Notice of Electronic Filing that alerts all parties in the case of the filing. A party is "served" when a Notice of Electronic Filing, which contains a hyperlink to the filed document that can be immediately viewed or downloaded, is sent by e-mail (see § 8B.50).

As part of the agreement to participate in the ECF program, parties consent to serve and be served filed documents by electronic means (see § 8B.50). The ECF system provides specific safeguards and requirements designed to ensure that service is effected properly. But if electronic service is made outside the ECF system between consenting parties, care should be taken that the electronic service is effective. The consent should specify the person to whom service is to be directed and the address or location of the service, including the e-mail address. The duration of consent and whether consent is limited to a single paper or to all papers filed in the case should be specified.

[6] Rule 5.2 Addresses Privacy Concerns Regarding Electronic Filing

Rule 5.2 was adopted pursuant to the E-Government Act of 2002 to address privacy concerns regarding the electronic filing of documents with personal information, and to address limitations on the public availability of electronically filed documents. The rule also regulates paper filings, even when they are not converted to electronic format. The rule provides for the following: n17

- Redaction of certain personal information from court filings
- Limited remote access to electronic files in social security appeals and immigration cases
- Filing of unredacted papers under seal
- Good-cause issuance of protective orders to further protect private information and electronic access
- Waiver of protection for failure to redact information prior to filing

[7] Deadline for Electronic Filing

To meet a filing deadline, an electronic filing must occur before midnight on the filing cutoff date. n18

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b) and (d)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. 4.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 2001; see also Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Gen. Order 97-38 (Oct. 6, 1997) ("filing of the initial papers, issuance and service of the summons, and payment of initial filing fees will be accomplished in the traditional manner on paper").

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 25(a)(2)(D); Fed. R. Bk. P. 5005(a)(2), 7005, 8008(a); and Fed. R. Crim. P. 49(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3) (courts may require, however, that some papers, including the complaint, be filed conventionally in paper while accepting all subsequent filings transmitted electronically).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12, § 1 (Oct. 23, 1997).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A) (applies to service of papers after complaint and summons served); Fed. R. Civ. P. 4 (requires service of complaint and summons in accordance with conventional delivery means).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 2001.

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 2001 (expressly rejecting contrary court ruling that held that mere presence of e-mail address on attorney's stationary submitted to court was consent to service by electronic means).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b), Committee Note of 2001.

(n16)Footnote 16. See W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 5.b (Nov. 5, 1998); N.D. Ohio, Gen. Order 97-38, § 6.c (Oct. 6, 1997) (parties encouraged to take advantage of electronic service and noticing).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2; see also § 8B.73 for additional coverage of Rule 5.2.

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
A. Case Management/Electronic Case Filing System (CM/ECF)

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.03

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.03 No National Requirements

[1] Significant Uniformity in ECF Procedures

The courts have not been required to adopt a uniform ECF system. Instead, individual courts have been allowed to develop different systems and test alternative emerging technologies. This freedom has led to the emergence of non-uniform practices among the federal districts. The long-term advantages of a uniform national process are apparent, however, and the federal judiciary is striving to achieve as much uniformity as possible through voluntary cooperation coupled with financial and equipment incentives. n1

During the transitional phase into ECF systems, a remarkable degree of uniformity has been attained, primarily because courts have modeled their procedures on the local rules and orders issued by other district courts that began early operation of ECF system.

In addition, courts have limited leeway to modify the standard software program used in the ECF system, and as a result, there is a significant degree of uniformity among the courts in electronic case filing procedures. Already, some common, though not universal, requirements have been imposed by courts that accept electronic case filings.

[2] Some Emerging Requirements

Among standard procedures emerging in the courts, two stand out. First, parties are required to file the initial process, i.e., complaint and summons, with the court by conventional means in paper format. n2 The filing of these documents initiates the litigation, marking the time from which many critical time deadlines are fixed. All papers filed after the initial pleadings may be transmitted electronically. To maintain a complete electronic record of the case, however, the initial pleadings are refiled electronically, either by the party or court personnel. Electronic copies of papers in a case that was removed from state court must also be filed.

Second, all documents filed with the court electronically must be in Portable Document Format (PDF). This requirement is the critical component of the system. PDF allows all documents to be viewed in their original, not easy to alter, formats regardless of whether the document was scanned or created by a word processor and irrespective of the type of computer or word-processing software used by the person creating or viewing it (see § 8B.22[1]).

[3] ECF Software Program and User's Manual Promote Uniformity

The new nationally-supported CM/ECF equipment replacing the courts' existing case-management equipment includes a standard software program that handles electronic case filings. All software used in the CM/ECF program was developed by the Administrative Office of the United States Courts. It is expected that all federal courts will eventually use the standard electronic filing system software.

[4] Local Rules Authorizing Electronic Case Filing

No effort has been made to prescribe national rules that would create a uniform system, although national rules may be considered in the future after courts have acquired more experience with electronic case filings and sufficient reasons justifying rules are offered.

In 1997, the Judicial Conference issued non-binding technical standards, which were developed in accordance with the 1991 and 1996 amendments to Rule 5. n3 Courts operating an electronic filing system have continued to rely on these technical standards and have selectively incorporated them in their local rules and other general orders. As for now, local rules of court, as well as standing and administrative orders continue to govern virtually all aspects of electronic filings. n4

Electronic case filing is authorized under Rule 5(e) only if the federal district court prescribes local rules permitting it. It is the practice of most courts that have accepted electronic filing of cases to prescribe a general local rule, relying on cross-references to a general order or administrative order to provide the details. These orders contain extensive procedures governing electronic case filing. n5 Because rules governing electronic filing can be found in a court's local rules, standing orders, or administrative orders, many courts provide hyperlinks to the pertinent ECF rules and procedures on their web sites under a single ECF category as a convenience to the public and bar. n6

[5] Model Local Rules Governing Electronic Case Filing

In September 2001, the Judicial Conference approved twelve model local rules governing electronic filing in civil cases, which were circulated to courts to promote uniformity. The model rules were based on the standards and procedures adopted by the first courts operating an ECF system. In many instances, existing provisions were borrowed verbatim and included in the model rules.

[6] Local Variation

As previously discussed, no nationwide procedures govern electronic case filing. However, within a district court, uniform standards, procedures, and formats for electronic filing are required because a document filed and stored electronically with a court becomes the court's official record. "A paper filed electronically in compliance with a local rule is a written paper for purposes of these rules." n7 The ECF systems must try to assure that the electronic filing system has the same uniform reliability and retrievability characteristics that a paper filing system does. n8

Some courts require that all documents in civil cases be filed electronically. n9 In other courts, certain types of cases are excepted from ECF participation, while electronic filing is mandated in other types of cases, e.g., social security appeals. n10

The use of ECF may vary within a particular district court. Individual judges may decide to participate or decline to participate in the court's ECF program. n11 Moreover, judges participating in ECF may exclude some types of cases while specifying other types of cases that can be filed electronically. n12

The court's local rules or other orders may set out a specific time, ordinarily at the initial scheduling conference attended by the attorneys, when the parties not registered in ECF may consent to electronic filing of papers with the court. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & InterpretationLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The Judicial Conference may prescribe national technical standards under Rule 5.

(n2)Footnote 2. See E.D.N.Y. Admin. Order 97-12, § 1-2.c (Oct. 23, 1997); N.D. Ohio, Gen. Order 97-38, § 4 (Oct. 6, 1997) (initial papers filed conventionally).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 1991, Committee Note of 1996.

(n4)Footnote 4. See N.D. Ohio, L.R. 5.1, 16.3(b)(2)(B); D. N.M., L.R. 1.5(d), 5.5, 5.6, and 83.6 (local rules authorizing electronic case filing).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., L.R. 5-4 (local rule adopts by reference procedures governing electronic filing set out in Gen. Order No. 45); see also Local Rules, D. Neb., Gen. Order No. 02-1 (Jan. 2, 2002) (authorizes clerk to issue Administrative Procedures for Filing, Signing, and Verifying Pleadings and Papers by Electronic Means, which contain extensive detailed procedures).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio L.R. 5.1, 16.3(b)(2)(B) (local rules authorizing electronic case filing); Local Rules, D.N.M., L. R. 1.5(d), 5.5, 5.6, and 83.6 (administrative order authorizing electronic case filing); W.D. Mo., En Banc Order (Nov. 5, 1998); and E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 (Oct. 23, 1997) (en banc orders authorizing electronic case filing).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 1996 ("[t]he amended rule also makes clear the equality of filing by electronic means with written filings").

(n9)Footnote 9. See Local Rules, E.D. Pa., Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, § 2(a) (May 16, 2002) ("[a]ll civil and criminal cases filed in this court on or after May 1, 2002, will be entered into the court's Electronic Case Filing ("ECF") System").

(n10)Footnote 10. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio R., L.R. 5.1(b) (local rules authorizing electronic case filing for social security appeals).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 3 (Oct. 23, 2002) (lists names of individual participating judges); see also Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 2(a) (Oct. 23, 1997) (names of judges participating in ECF posted on court's web site).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 1 (Nov. 5, 1998) ("[c]ourt shall select those cases to be designated for ECF and shall notify the parties").

(n13)Footnote 13. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 2(a) (Oct. 23, 1997) (parties consent to electronic filing at initial scheduling conference, or if no scheduling conference is held, within 120 days after first appearance of any defendant); see also Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, L.R. 16.3(2)(b) (electronic filing option to be determined at case management conference).

142 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
A. Case Management/Electronic Case Filing System (CM/ECF)

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.04

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.04 Interface Between Public Access to Court Electronic Records (PACER) and ECF

PACER is the acronym for Public Access to Court Electronic Records. PACER provides the public access to information about current federal cases, including dockets and case summaries. The system provides internet access to lists of cases in federal district courts, bankruptcy courts, and courts of appeals, which can be searched by party names or filing dates.

ECF enables a registered individual to file documents and create docket entries directly in the court's records. When the individual initiates a search request for a court document or docket entry while in ECF, the system automatically routes the search request to the PACER login screen, which provides access to view court documents filed in ECF (see § 8B.60). Separate login numbers and passwords are required to access each system.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsCourt RecordsLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
A. Case Management/Electronic Case Filing System (CM/ECF)

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8B.05 through 8B.10

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

[Reserved]

§§ 8B.05[Reserved]

144 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
B. Logging on to ECF System

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.11

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.11 Equipment Required to File Papers Electronically

Logging into the ECF system requires a computer with Internet access. Only papers that are transmitted in Portable Document Format (PDF) may be filed with an ECF court. Thus, the word-processing software used to create the document to be filed must be compatible with PDF, such as WordPerfect or Word.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementComputer & Internet LawGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
B. Logging on to ECF System

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.12

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.12 ECF Registration

Participation in the ECF electronic filing system is generally limited, by local rules or a general court order, to an attorney in good standing admitted to practice in the district court. n1 Some local rules also allow for participation by attorneys admitted pro hac vice and by pro se filers. n2 A court may make specific computers and scanning equipment in the courthouse available for pro se filers.

A login number and password identification number are required to access the ECF system. Registration forms also are available at the clerk's office. There is no registration fee.

When an attorney enrolls in the ECF program, user identification and password numbers are assigned. The identification numbers are unique and serve, by agreement, as the attorney's signature on all papers filed electronically (see § 8B.32).

Attorneys may change their login or password numbers at any time and are encouraged to do so periodically to promote added security. As part of the agreement, the attorney also agrees to accept and send service of papers filed with the court by electronic means (see § 8B.50).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePartiesSelf-RepresentationGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureCounselAdmissions Pro Hac ViceCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementComputer & Internet LawPrivacy & SecurityGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsClerks of CourtLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12, § 12 (Oct. 23, 1997); see also Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic

Filing Policies and Procedures Manual, § 12 (Aug. 5, 2002) (participation restricted to attorneys admitted to practice in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Ohio).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, E.D. Pa., Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, § 3(a) (May 16, 2002) (attorneys admitted pro hac vice may register in court's ECF system); see also Local Rules, D. Neb, Administrative Procedure for Filing, Signing, and Verifying Pleadings and Papers by Electronic Means, I.B.4 (June 2, 2003) ("[a]n attorney admitted pro hac vice must register for a password" in ECF).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
B. Logging on to ECF System

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.13

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.13 PACER Registration

A separate registration is required to participate in PACER, which permits a user to retrieve, view, and download documents filed in an ECF system. A registration form is provided online at pacer@psc.uscourts.gov. Each registered participant is given a unique password and login number to access PACER. There is no registration fee.

PACER is available in all district courts for a fee.

147 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
B. Logging on to ECF System

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.14

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.14 Logging on to ECF System to View Court Documents or File Papers with Court

Each court maintains an Internet web site that provides a hyperlink to its ECF system. n1 The ECF welcome screen contains a link to its login screen that allows a filing user to enter the system. It also often provides links to ECF information sources, such as ECF tutorials and ECF user's manuals.

After clicking on the login button on a court's ECF welcome screen, n2 a new screen with instructions appears that contains separate dialog boxes to log in to ECF and PACER systems.

Click here to view image.

A user must log on to PACER to view or download a court document or to query the court's database. A user must log on to ECF to file a paper with the court. An authentication box on the screen appears containing space to type in either the PACER or ECF login and password numbers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsCourt RecordsLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 10 (Oct. 1, 2001); see also Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Case Files, User Manual, p. 9 (Aug. 2002) (ECF access through court's home page or ECF web site).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing Users Manual, p. 10 (Oct. 23, 2002) (refers to live ECF Login); see Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 7 (Jan. 2003) (refers to "Begin: Electronic Case Filing") (Description of login varies, but easily identified).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
B. Logging on to ECF System

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.15

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.15 Optional Client Code for Billing Purposes

An optional client code is included that permits the filing user to track for billing purposes PACER transactions performed on behalf of a particular client. The user may identify particular clients by selecting a maximum of thirty-two alphanumeric characters. The quarterly PACER billing statement will contain charges broken down by client if the client code was input at the time of the transaction (see § 8B.71[3]).

149 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
B. Logging on to ECF System

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8B.16 through 8B.19

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

[Reserved]

§§ 8B.16[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.20

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.20 Navigating in ECF Using Computer Keyboard and Mouseclicking Prompts and Commands

There are three general types of user interactions in the ECF system. Persons with experience using personal computers and the Internet will quickly recognize each of these familiar features.

- First, text boxes appear on the screen as one moves through the process in which non-structured data, for example, addresses and personal identification numbers, can be entered by placing the cursor within the text box and typing in the requested information.

- Second, buttons or squares that indicate a selection or command can be clicked on. Common function buttons used throughout the ECF program are "Next" (opens next screen), "Clear" (eliminates input data), "Back" and "Forward" (opens next screen or returns to previous screen), and "Submit" (accepts data and opens the next screen) buttons.

- Third, hyperlinks are contained in the ECF program that allow quick access to different parts of the program or to filed documents.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.21

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.21 Correcting Data Inputting Errors

Errors in data inputting can be easily corrected before submission by clicking on the Back or Clear buttons. No corrections or other changes to input data can be madeafter the document has been submitted for filing and docketing. A warning screen appears prior to submitting the document and docket entry, alerting the user to the finality of the transaction (see § 8B.31[8]).

If an error is discovered after an electronic filing has been submitted for filing, only the court can make an entry correcting the error. The system does not permit the filer to make corrections in a document filed with the court once the transaction has been accepted. n1 In the event of an error, the user should contact the clerk of court to correct it.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsClerks of CourtGovernmentsCourtsCourt PersonnelGovernmentsCourtsCourt RecordsLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User Manual, p. 7 (Feb. 7, 2003); see also Local Rules, D. Neb., Administrative Procedure for Filing, Signing, and Verifying Pleadings and Papers by Electronic Means, II. G. 1. (June 2, 2003) ("[o]nce a document is submitted and becomes part of the case docket, corrections to the docket are made only by the Clerk's Office").

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.22

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.22 Only Documents in PDF Format Accepted by ECF Courts

[1] PDF Documents Universally Accepted

Only documents in Portable Document Format (PDF) may be filed electronically with a ECF court. n1 This universal requirement is based on several critical PDF characteristics that are crucial to a successful electronic filing system.

PDF documents may be viewed electronically on the Internet without any loss of formatting characteristics, regardless of the type of computer or word-processing software used by the viewer. PDF is widely used. A document can be created in PDF format, or can be converted to PDF format. Although the software to view a PDF document is free, a special software program is required to create PDF documents or to convert documents composed in WordPerfect or Word into PDF.

Adobe is the commercial vendor that invented the PDF format. Their products can be obtained on the Internet at www.adobe.com. Documents generated by Adobe Acrobat PDFWriter are compatible and accepted by all ECF courts.

[2] Methods of Producing a PDF Document

Saving a word-processor document in its native application as a PDF file is easily accomplished. Generally, the word-processor document is opened, saved as a separate pdf file, and stored in a specific file folder.

Although a document rendered in PDF format will always retain its formatting characteristics, converting a word-processor document into PDF format often alters its original formatting characteristics. The changes in the formatting characteristics may require adjustments in the original document to account for the altered formatting. For example, if PDFWriter is used to convert a word-processor document into PDF format, special characters may be inaccurately rendered. Symbols like a "§" or a " • " may be altered on conversion. Converting these symbols into PDF format also expands the file size, reducing the efficiency in retrieving the document. n2

Furthermore, documents that are formatted with an obscure font may be inaccurately rendered in the conversion. If the selection of fonts contained in a filing user's computer does not contain the document's font, Adobe Acrobat will substitute another font that it considers to be similar, which may introduce unintended errors. n3

Although a WordPerfect or Word document can be converted to PDF format at any time, there is a major advantage in creating the document in PDF format directly from a word-processing application. The key benefit of creating a document is that the appearance and formatting of the document will remain the same when it is later viewed or printed as a PDF document. n4 This practical advantage obviates the need, which otherwise often arises, to revise documents that have been converted into PDF to account for formatting changes introduced in the conversion process.

The ECF system accepts both text and imaged PDF files. A text PDF file is usually produced from a word-processing application using PDFWriter. An imaged PDF file is produced by scanning a paper document in PDF format.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & InterpretationLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 5 (Oct. 1, 2001) (all pleadings filed electronically must be in pdf format).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, App. B (Aug. 20, 2002) (tables are treated as special characters, and tabs instead of columns may be preferred).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, App. B, (Aug. 20, 2002).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, App. B (Aug. 20, 2002) ("[a]s you create your document, you are seeing how your document will be formatted in PDF").

153 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.23

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.23 General Formatting and Captioning Requirements Apply to PDF Documents Filed Electronically

Documents filed electronically must meet any format and page limitations requirements that apply to paper documents filed with the court. The documents also must comply with the form of pleadings requirements set out in Rule 10 and any applicable local rule. n1

Rule 10 requires that every pleading contain a caption setting forth specific information, including the "name of the court, the title of the action, the file number, and a designation as in Rule 7(a)." The requirements extend to all motions and other papers provided for by the rules. n2 Documents filed electronically must also be reasonably broken up into severable components and should not be merged and transmitted as part of a single file. Each distinct component should be filed separately in ECF. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10; see Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedures Manual, § 8 (Aug. 5, 2002).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedures Manual, § 14 (Aug. 5, 2002) (motion, supporting memoranda, and exhibits all filed as separate components).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.24

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.24 ECF Main Menu Screen

After inputting the password and login numbers, clicking on the "login" button at the bottom of the login screen prompts the system to display the "Main Menu" screen. The image of the screen varies among the courts. However, most of the information on the Main Menu screen is designed to welcome the user to ECF. The function bar, located at the top of the screen in a relatively narrow and inconspicuous banner, is used by all district courts. It is the screen's most important feature. The bar contains hyperlinks that engage the ECF system's applications.

The function bar is colored blue and sets out six major functions of ECF:

- Civil,
- Query,
- Reports,
- Utilities,
- Logout, and
- "?" (help informational source).

A limited number of courts include an additional seventh function Criminal. n1 Placing the cursor on any one of the six or seven functions highlights the hyperlink and clicking on it displays the designated function screen.

The Query and Reports functions allow a user to view court documents. These functions can only be accessed through PACER. Clicking on these functions while registered in ECF automatically engages the PACER login screen. The Query function allows a user to retrieve information and documents by specific case number or party name. The Reports function allows the user to retrieve calendar events, cases-filed reports, and docket sheets (see § 8B.61).

The Civil and Utilities functions permit the user to file documents and to docket events in the court's ECF system (see §§ 8B.61-62). These functions can only be accessed through ECF and not through PACER. The Civil function allows the user to file case pleadings, motions, and other court documents and to docket events. The Utilities function allows the user to review all ECF transactions.

The Logout function allows the user to exit ECF easily. The help informational source is self explanatory.

The date and time the system was last logged into by any user is noted in the bottom left-hand corner of the screen. The information provides the user with a security check to detect unauthorized access to ECF. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsCourt RecordsLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D.Neb., Electronic Case Filing CM/ECF: User's Manual, p. 12 (Jan 2003).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 13 (Oct. 1, 2001) (suspected misuse should be immediately reported to court).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.25

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.25 Types of Documents That Can Be Filed in Civil Event

The Civil Event screen identifies all the types of documents that can be filed in the court's ECF system. The listing of types of documents is exclusive and any document not included in the listing may not be entered into the ECF system. If a particular type of document is not listed in the court's ECF system, the filing user must notify the court. Recognizing that the title of the document to be filed may not exactly reflect a title included in the exclusive list of document types maintained by a court, one court expressly permits a filing user to file the document notwithstanding the difference. The court does not require the filing user to change the title of the document to match the title set out in the court's list. n1

The Civil Event screen lists different documents that can be filed under various categories such as:

- Initial Pleadings and Service,
- Motions and Related Filings, and
- Other Filings. n2

Under each of the three main categories, an exclusive list of specific types of documents that can be filed with the court is set out. No other filing is permitted. The list is critical to the proper functioning of the ECF system. Because the ECF system often links data contained in one type of document to another type of document, it is essential that the names of the document types be uniform. The linking can be achieved only if the names of the documents match.

Click here to view image.

"Initial Pleadings and Service" includes complaints and other initiating documents (e.g., civil cover sheet), service of process, answers to complaint, and other answers. n3 No court permits the initial filing of the complaint to be done electronically. But several courts require a party later to file the hard-copy complaint electronically in ECF, so that a complete electronic record of the case can be maintained.

In the courts that require a party to file a complaint electronically after the complaint has been filed in the conventional manner, the Initial Pleadings and Service category on the screen includes a hyperlink to "Complaints" (see § 8B.40).

"Motions and Related Filings" set out a comprehensive listing of motions. n4 The listing can contain more than one hundred different motions. In addition, responses and replies to motions and supporting documents attached to motions are listed under this category.

A catch-all category, "Other Filings," is usually included that can refer to miscellaneous events. Documents involving ADR, discovery, notices, trial, appeal, and other events may be contained under this category.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansGovernmentsCourtsCourt PersonnelLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, p. 6 (Feb. 10, 2003).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User Manual, p. 14 (Feb. 7, 2003) (adds a fourth category under Civil Events captioned "Social Security Events").

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 37-38 (Jan. 2003) (listing of over 25 separate types of filings).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 8 (Jan. 2003) (128 separate motions, including several subgroups, e.g., seven distinct types of judgment motions and five types of motions to extend time).

156 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.26

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.26 Types of Documents That Can Be Filed in Criminal Event

The Criminal Event function lists much fewer separate events than the Civil Events function. n1 Like the Civil Events function, however, there are three common main categories listed under the general Criminal Events function, including:

- Charging Instruments and Pleas;
- Motions and Related Filings; and
- Other Filings.

"Charging Instruments" includes Plea-Related Documents. "Motions and Related Filings" have an extensive listing. "Other Filings" include Waivers, Service of Process, Notices, Trial Documents, Appeal Documents, and Other Documents.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, E.D. Pa., Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, Attachment A, p. 13 (May 16, 2002) (lists types of proceedings and documents in criminal cases that are excluded from electronic filing); see also Local Rules, D. Neb., Electronic Case Filing User's Manual, p. 25 (Oct. 2002).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.27

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.27 Delivering Courtesy Copy to Court

As part of the ECF program, court personnel and judge's chambers can access all cases electronically filed. Most judges either view electronic documents on the computer screen or direct court staff to download and print the document for viewing. However, some courts and judges require the filing user to deliver copies of all filed documents and Notices of Electronic Filing to the clerk's office or the chambers of the judge assigned to the case. n1 Delivering paper copies of electronic filings relieves the court of the expense and staff time otherwise consumed in printing electronically filed documents for the judge's review.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsCourt PersonnelLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.5(c) ("[o]ne paper copy for the judge of each electronically filed document must be delivered to the Clerk within three (3) business days of the electronic filing"); see also Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User's Manual, p. 11-12 (Feb. 7, 2003) (conventional delivery until judge orders otherwise); see also Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 4(j) (Oct. 23, 1997) (delivery of courtesy copies of filed papers to participating ECF judge remains in force until rescinded by the judge).

158 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
C. Initiating ECF Filing Process

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8B.28 through 8B.29

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

[Reserved]

§§ 8B.28[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
D. Step-by-Step Guide for Filing Document in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.30

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.30 Summary of Instructions on Filing Document

There are nine general steps in filing a document in a civil case. Not all steps are required in every case.

- Select type of document to be filed
- Enter case number
- Designate party filing document
- Specify file name of document to be filed
- A attachments, if any
- Designate related filings, if any
- Modify docket description if appropriate
- Submit pleading
- Receive and transmit notification of electronic filing

Although there may be slight variations in filing different documents, the instructions for filing a motion apply to most other documents. The following discussion will focus on a "Motion" filing, unless specifically noted otherwise.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
D. Step-by-Step Guide for Filing Document in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.31

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.31 Detailed Instructions on Filing Document in ECF

[1] Select Type of Document to be Filed

The first step is to select the specific type of document to be filed. After identifying the specific motion or other document type in the pick list, placing the cursor and clicking on the item completes the first step of filing. Pressing the Ctrl key allows selection of multiple types of documents, if more than one document is being filed. Clicking on the Submit or Next button (courts use different nomenclature) opens the next screen.

Click here to view image.

Each court maintains its own exclusive pick list of documents that can be docketed. If the type of the document to be filed is not identified in the court's document list, most of the courts require the filer to contact it. In these circumstances, only the court can input the document and docket it as part of the official record.

[2] Enter Case Number

A text box appears on the screen captioned Case Number. The second step is to type in the number that was assigned by the clerk's office to the case when it was originally filed with the court in the conventional manner. A sample format for typing in the case number is set out in the dialog box for reference purposes. The number is entered in a Year-Number (yy-####) format. A hyphen between the two is required. n1

ECF defaults to the last case in which the user submitted a filing and automatically inserts in the text box the number of the case that was last accessed. n2 A filing user involved in multiple litigation within a particular district court must be aware of this default feature and take necessary precautions to ensure that the proper case number is inserted in the text box.

[3] Designate Party Filing Document

The third step is to designate the party filing the document. If the party's name is not listed in the system's text box, the practice varies among the courts on how new parties are added. Only court personnel may add a new party in some courts. n3 In most courts, however, the ECF system has been modified to permit the filing user to add or create a new party. n4 In ECF systems in these courts, the heading "Add/Create New Party" is located adjacent to the "Select the Party" text box.

Click here to view image.

[4] Select PDF File to be Entered into ECF

In the fourth step, the document in electronic format that will be filed in ECF must be retrieved and copied from the filing user's computer and transmitted to the ECF database. The next screen prompts the user to select and input the pdf file name of the document being filed. The file name may be inserted in the text box beneath the caption "Filename."

Click here to view image.

After locating and highlighting the appropriate pdf document for filing by placing the cursor on it, the document should be viewed to verify that it is the correct one. Right mouseclicking brings up a quick menu, and left clicking on "Open" displays the pdf document for viewing. Opening the document will engage the Adobe Acrobat software program. After verifying that the document is correct, Adobe Acrobat can be exited by closing it and returning to the "File Upload" screen. The "X" in the upper right corner of the screen or the File Close can be clicked on to close the Adobe Acrobat application.

Clicking on the Open button in the "File Upload" screen displays the earlier screen. The pdf file name and location are automatically inserted in the "Filename" text box. The pdf document is now stored in the ECF database and is ready to become part of the official record. The fourth step is completed by clicking on the Next or Submit button at the bottom of the screen.

[5] Adding Attachments

[i] Filing Instructions

Click here to view image.

A party filing a paper electronically must include all documents, including any attachments, that are part of the pleading under one docket number, as required by the court's local rules. n5 Attachments may include exhibits, appendices, or proposed orders. A filing user should also file a memorandum in support of a motion as a separate attachment to the motion. n6

The fifth step describes the process for filing an attachment. Beneath the text box captioned "File Name" described in step four is an "Attachments to Document" heading with an adjacent "Yes or No" selection. Clicking on the "Yes" selection opens the next screen captioned "Select one or more attachments." The process followed in filing an attachment is similar to the process in filing the underlying pleading.

After inserting the name of the pdf file in the appropriate text box, information identifying the type of and describing the attachment more fully may be inserted in two additional text boxes. This information may be inserted in the two text boxes immediately below the "Filename" text box. The information is optional. It is especially useful when multiple attachments are being filed. n7

The local rules and general administrative orders of ECF courts include provisions governing the filing of exhibits and attachments to pleadings or motions, e.g., leases, charts, and contracts. n8 Ordinarily, a court will accept them only if converted into electronic form, for example, by scanning and converting the material into PDF format.

[ii] Filing Lengthy Attachments

The length of attachments and exhibits may pose problems for ECF systems. Accordingly, most courts require that only relevant portions of any attachment or exhibit may be filed electronically. In these courts, only matters directly relevant and germane to the underlying filed document may be attached. n9 Responding parties may timely file additional excerpts from the attachment to augment the filed excerpt, if necessary. n10

Dividing a lengthy attachment into several smaller attachments may be an option in some courts. n11 Alternatively, one court provides ECF users with the option of submitting a lengthy document on electronic media that will later be filed in the clerk's office by means of a high-bandwidth Internet connection. n12

The local rules of court of some courts exclude certain types of documents from ECF filing, including administrative records, medical records, and demonstrative exhibits. Local rules may also exclude oversized exhibits. n13 If a party is unable to convert an exhibit or attachment to electronic form, it usually can be filed by conventional means.

[iii] Filing Scanned Documents

A scanner images a document and converts it into a digital format. Scanned documents consume more file space than documents transmitted in their native word-processor format. Filing lengthy scanned attachments electronically may raise problems with the court's computer storage capacity. For this reason, some courts disfavor scanned documents. n14

Some courts have imposed size limits on scanned attachments based on pages. In other courts, the limits are based on the number of data "bytes" in the document. n15

If the document to be filed electronically has been scanned, the filing user should verify that it is legible and that all pages have been included before submitting it as an attachment.

[iv] Filing of Paper Attachment

Sometimes an attachment or exhibit cannot be scanned or otherwise converted into an electronic format and can only be filed in paper format. In these cases, a court often requires that the filing user submit a single page pdf notice in the electronic record noting that a paper attachment has been filed with the clerk, which can be viewed and copied at the clerk's office. The court may offer a sample "Notice Regarding Exhibit Attachment" for the convenience of the filing user. n16 The notice is filed in the same way as an attachment. It serves solely to alert the viewer of the existence of a hard-copy attachment. It is designed to ensure that the record is complete. n17

It is important to remember that copies of an exhibit or attachment that is not filed electronically must be served on the parties in the traditional manner. The electronic filing of a notice "Regarding Exhibit Attachment," which merely indicates that a paper copy of the document is being maintained in the clerk's office, is insufficient service. n18 Unlike other notices of electronic filing, there is no hyperlink in the Notice of Electronic Filing to the filed electronic document because no electronic document exists (see § 8B.54).

[6] Designating Related Documents

The "Related Documents" screen is used throughout the ECF filing program to establish a link in the current document being filed to documents filed at an earlier time. It also serves as a vehicle to generate and assign deadlines. The screen appears only on a selected basis after certain underlying documents have been submitted for filing. n19 When one of these preselected types of documents is being electronically filed, the Related Filings screen opens.

Clicking on the check box to the left of the question: "Does this filing refer to an existing document in this case?" displays two additional screens. These screens facilitate linking a document with specific documents already docketed.

[7] Recording Filing in Docket

In courts operating under the ECF system, the filing attorney electronically transmits papers and documents to the clerk of court using the Internet. The filing attorney also simultaneously records the event on the court's electronic docket. n20 Basic components of the docket entry are generated automatically by the ECF system for the filing user's review. The filing user may not modify this information. The filing user has the option, however, to add information to the minimum docket entry generated by ECF. In most cases, the docket entry is provisional subject to later review and modification, if necessary, by court staff. n21

The seventh step explains the procedure to enter a docket entry to record the electronic filing of a document. The creation of docket entries is accomplished by the filing user at the same time that the papers and documents are being filed over the Internet. The filing user becomes responsible for the initial creation of the docket entry. n22 This is accomplished by means of a computerized program that requires the filing user to review and refine a docket entry that reflects data pertaining to the specific document being filed that had been earlier retrieved in steps one through six.

Click here to view image.

At a minimum, the basic docket entry generated by ECF will identify the general type of document being filed, e.g., motion for class certification or motion for continuance, and the name of the party filing it. This information is automatically inserted as the docket entry by the ECF system from the data earlier input by the filing user in steps one and two. The system provides the filer with options to elaborate and expand the docket entry.

Filings are stored in a court's computer database, which can be accessed from outside the court by authorized persons. n23 Presently, a few courts restrict access to electronic filings only to participating attorneys who have been issued password identification numbers. Most courts, however, permit the public to view (but not modify) electronic court records. Rule 5.2 was adopted pursuant to the E-Government Act of 2002 to address privacy concerns regarding the electronic filing of documents with personal information, and to address limitations on the public availability of electronically filed documents. The rule also regulates paper filings, even when they are not converted to electronic format.

A document filed and stored electronically with a court is the official record. A paper filed electronically in compliance with a local rule is a written paper for purposes of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n24 The electronic docket is the official court docket record. n25 Unless some obvious problems appear on the face of the record, a lawyer may rely on the electronic record without also reviewing the hard-copy docket sheet. n26

Special procedures govern the filing of sealed documents. Such documents are usually excluded from electronic filing and are submitted conventionally in paper format (see § 8B.73). n27 Under Rule 5.2(d), the court may order that a filing be made under seal without redaction. The court may later unseal the filing or order the person who made the filing to file a redacted version for the public record. n28

[8] Submit Filing

No further changes may be made to any filing after its submission. However, if the document should be accepted for filing even if there is a problem with its form.

A court's need for consistency and reliability in electronically filed papers must be balanced against the longstanding judiciary policy not to punish litigants for de minimis procedural errors. The clerk must not refuse to file a paper solely because it is not in the form prescribed by the Federal Rules or by a local rule or practice. n29 Only a judge may reject a filing for these types of defects under the rules. A judicial officer, not the clerk, must make this decision because rejecting a filing for failing to comply with a form requirement exposes litigants to the hazards of time bars. n30

ECF's core concept is that after a paper is filed electronically, it becomes available to all through the ECF system (see § 8B.50). If the electronically filed paper does not meet the format requirements of ECF, the electronically filed paper may, in practice, be unreviewable by the court or any party to the action. For example, transmitting a document as an attachment without converting it to PDF format may render it unreadable by the court or opposing parties.

These types of violations of a court's local rules or other court orders should probably be characterized as mere "form" defects, and be received for filing. Only a judge may reject a filing based on a form defect. n31

Every district court is considered always open for the purpose of filing any paper. Courts are presumed to be always open for the purpose of filing pleadings by conventional means involving delivery of a paper filing. n32 The rules recognize, however, that the time for conventional paper filing is extended if the last day on which a paper may be filed is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, or if the clerk's office is inaccessible. n33

Unless a different time is set by a statute, local rule, or court order, the deadline for electronic filing ends at midnight in the court's time zone. n34

Unless the court orders otherwise, if the clerk's office is inaccessible:

- On the last day for filing under Rule 6(a)(1), then the time for filing is extended to the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday; n35 or

- During the last hour for filing under Rule 6(a)(2), then the time for filing is extended to the same time on the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n36

The text of Rule 6(a)(3) no longer refers to "weather or other conditions" as the reason for inaccessibility of the clerk's office. The reference to weather was deleted from the text to underscore that inaccessibility might occur for reasons unrelated to weather, such as the outage of the electronic filing system. n37 The extensions under Rule 6(a)(3) apply unless the court orders otherwise. In some circumstances, the court might not wish a period of inaccessibility to trigger a full 24-hour extension; in those circumstances, the court can specify a briefer extension. n38

[9] Serving Electronically Filed Papers (Notification of Electronic Filing)

After the docket entry has been completed, clicking on the Submit or Next button opens the "Notice of Electronic Filing" screen, the ninth step of the process. The Notice of Electronic Filing confirms the successful filing of the document. It also serves as a filing receipt. Among other items, the case name, case number, and docket entry are displayed in the Notice of Electronic Filing screen. A document number is also assigned to the filing in the chronological order that it is entered on the docket. The number facilitates future retrieval of the document. To ensure the integrity of the filing, the document is also given a unique electronic document stamp. n39

Click here to view image.

The time of the document's filing is deemed to be when the Notice of Electronic Filing is generated by the ECF system. At that time, the filed document becomes an official court record. Transmission of the Notice of Electronic Filing constitutes service of the filed document to all parties in the case registered in the ECF system (see § 8B.02[5]). n40 In some courts, the Notice of Electronic Filing also represents the certificate of service and is the official notice of service in accordance with Rule 5 and pertinent local rules (see § 8B.53). n41 However, the local rules should be reviewed to ascertain the local practice (see § 8B.50).

The ECF system automatically sends the Notice of Electronic Filing by means of an e-mail to every case participant and counsel registered in the ECF case.

It is the responsibility of the filing user to serve hard-copy notices and filed documents on parties and attorneys who are not registered in ECF. n42

The e-mail message transmitting the Notice of Electronic Filing will contain a hyperlink to the filed document, which can be accessed by clicking on the highlighted name. No fee is assessed on the recipient for viewing the filed document for the first time. Subsequent viewing of the same document may be done only through PACER, which will generate costs in accordance with the PACER fee schedule (see § 8B.71).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCommunications LawInternet ServicesComputer & Internet LawCivil ActionsGeneral OverviewComputer & Internet LawPrivacy & SecurityGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 5.2(c) (Aug. 21, 2002).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 13 (Jan. 2003) (filing user should ensure that the case number is correct, otherwise the document will be filed in the wrong case).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 14 (Jan. 2003) ("[o]nly court personnel with pre-approved ECF security permissions can add or create new parties to a case").

(n4)Footnote 4. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 20 (Oct. 1, 2001); see also Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing Users Manual, p. 16 (Oct. 23, 2002).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 23 (Oct. 1, 2001).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, p. 23 (Feb. 10, 2003).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, p. 9 (Feb. 10, 2003).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 6.a.(2) (Nov. 5, 1998); E.D. N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12, § 4.g (Oct. 23, 1997) (filing of exhibits and other attachments).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Local Rules, E.D. Pa., Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, § 5 (May 16, 2002) (only excerpts that are relevant to the matter under consideration may be attached); see also Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.11(a)(1) (party may file only excerpts "that are directly germane to the matter under consideration by the court").

(n10)Footnote 10. See Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.11(a)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Local Rules, D. Neb., Electronic Case Filing CM/ECF: User's Manual, p. 21 (Jan. 2003) ("[f]or moderate length paper attachments, consider dividing them into two or more smaller attachments, scanning, and filing them electronically").

(n12)Footnote 12. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 4(g) (Oct. 23, 1997).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 3.4(e) (Sept. 13, 2002).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User's Manual, p. 2 (Feb. 7, 2003) ("[w]e are moving away from the utilization of scanned documents inside the Court and are asking you to do the same when possible").

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedures Manual § 14 (Apr. 5, 2001) (any scanned PDF file exceeding 1.5 megabytes must be filed manually, not electronically); see also Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 24 (Oct. 1, 2001) (attachment exceeding 25 pages in length may be filed electronically unless it is in digital, not scanned, PDF format); Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 18 (Jan. 2003) ("if document is more than 500 pages long, you may submit it in paper format").

(n16)Footnote 16. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User's Manual, p. 21 (Feb. 7, 2003) (one page pdf document titled "Notice Regarding Exhibit Attachment"); see also Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 20 (Oct. 23, 2002) (one-page pdf document captioned "Notice of Attachment (Exhibit/Document)" must be attached to pleading in the electronic case file indicating that exhibit is being maintained in clerk's office).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 6.a.(2) (Nov. 5, 1998) (conventional filing allowed for exhibits not available in electronic format).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 20 (Oct. 23, 2002).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Case Files, User Manual, p. 20 (Aug. 2002) (screen appears only if there is a likelihood that the document being filed will be linked to an existing document).

(n20)Footnote 20. See W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 3.b, c (Nov. 5, 1998) (filer responsible to make docket entry).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedures Manual, § 10 (Aug. 5, 2002) ("clerk of court will, where necessary and appropriate, modify the docket entry description to comply with quality control standards").

(n22)Footnote 22. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 3.b-c (Nov. 5, 1998).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a) ("[t]he clerk shall keep a book known as'civil docket' of such form and style as may be prescribed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts with the approval of the Judicial Conference of the United States").

(n24)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12, § 4.c-d. (Oct. 23, 1997) (electronically filed document is the official document of record); see also Local Rules, D. Or., LR 10014 ("official record is the electronic recording of the document as stored on the Cm/ECF system, and the filing party is bound by the document as filed").

(n26)Footnote 26. See Hollins v. Department of Corr., 191 F.3d 1324, 1328-1329 (11th Cir. 1999) (attorney's failure to file timely appeal was excused because it was based on omission in electronic docket).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 6.a.(3) (Nov. 5, 1998) (sealed documents in electronically filed cases).

(n28)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d).

(n29)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(4).

(n30)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e), Committee Note of 1991 (1991 amendments of Rule 5(e) were intended to address non-substantive mistakes when submitting paper documents for filing--former Rule 5(e) is now part of Rule 5(d)).

(n31)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e), Committee Note of 1991--former Rule 5(e) is now part of Rule 5(d).

(n32)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(a).

(n33)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a).

(n34)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(4).

(n35)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3)(A).

(n36)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3)(B).

(n37)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3), Committee Note of 2008.

(n38)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3), Committee Note of 2008.

(n39)Footnote 39. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., ECF User's Manual, p. 10 (Feb. 2001).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 16 (Oct. 1, 2001).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 20 (Jan. 2003).

(n42)Footnote 42. See Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 21-22 (Jan. 2003).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
D. Step-by-Step Guide for Filing Document in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.32

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.32 Understanding Signature Requirements

[1] Password and Login Constitute Signature

A court may allow "papers to be ... signed ... by electronic means." n1 Each ECF court has a local rule or standing order setting out procedures governing signatures. n2 An attorney's login and password identification numbers generally constitute a signature for all pleadings and papers filed electronically with the court for all purposes, including possible sanctions under Rule 11. n3 The password and login numbers assigned to a filing user effectively ensure the genuineness of the filing user's signature. However, signatures of nonfiling users on documents filed electronically pose different issues that are handled differently by the courts.

[2] ECF Filing User's Signature

Under most local practices in ECF courts, documents submitted electronically by an ECF filing user must include a signature block with the name of the attorney preceded by a "/s/" notation where the signature would ordinarily appear. As part of the ECF registration process, the filing user agrees that its password and login identification numbers serve as the filing user's signature for all purposes. There have been no reported problems to date with a filing user or other party disputing the authenticity or validity of the assigned password or login number. n4

When an electronically filed document is printed, the "/s/" notation serves as some indication that the document has been signed. Otherwise, the document, once downloaded and printed, would appear to have never been signed. The signature block may also include other personal identifier information, e.g., address, telephone number, and bar registration number. n5 Rule 11(a) requires every filed paper to include the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n6

[3] Filing Documents With Non-ECF Filing User or Multiple Signatures

The practices for handling documents containing non-ECF filing user or multiple signatures vary among the courts. There are three principal methods by which courts handle non-filing user or multiple signatures, and a fourth one that recognizes as valid any of the three methods.

- A filing user may in some courts attest that the signatories consented to the document being filed electronically in a notice contained in the document itself. n7

- A scanned image of the final document containing all signatures may be sufficient in other courts. n8

- Some local rules or other court orders may require the filing of the signatories' endorsement in a written letter as a follow up to the electronic filing. n9

- All three options are available to an ECF filing user in a few courts. n10

Retaining the original document with multiple signatures for at least one year after the final resolution of the action, including any appeal, is a standard practice (see § 8B.32[4]). n11 Also, a court may require a non-filing signatory or party to raise any objections to the authenticity of any signature within a designated period. n12 Failure to raise a timely objection may waive any right to later file an objection.

Alternate means of ensuring the integrity of signatures are currently in development.

[4] Retaining Hard Copies of Electronically Filed Documents

A document that contains original, hand-written signatures, other than the signature of an ECF filing user, may be needed as evidence in a later proceeding after the document has been filed electronically. These might include documents that must contain original signatures or that require verification or an unsworn declaration under any rule or statute, especially statements signed under the penalty of perjury, e.g., affidavits. Accordingly, some courts require the attorney filing a document with the ECF system to retain the original executed hard-copy document for a period of time set forth under local rules or other court order. n13 The time periods vary from one year to three years. n14

The responsibility to retain hard-copies of electronically filed documents usually rests with the filing user. A party may change counsel, however. If the case files are transferred to another attorney, arrangements should be made to transfer the retained hard copies of electronically filed documents to counsel of record.

Some courts require the attorney to retain documents only if they are scanned and filed in ECF. n15 This often occurs with documents containing a non-ECF user signature or multiple signatures. In these cases, the original hard-copy document would be retained by the filing attorney. n16

A filing user's login and password are deemed to constitute an original signature. Therefore, there is no need to retain copies of documents signed only by the filing user electronically.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementComputer & Internet LawCivil ActionsStatutes of LimitationsGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & InterpretationLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e), Committee Note of 1996 ("[a]n electronic filing that complies with the local rule satisfies all requirements for filing on paper, signature, or verification"--former Rule 5(e) is now part of Rule 5(d)).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., En Banc Order § 4.a (Nov. 5, 1998); Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12, § 5.a (Oct. 23, 1997); Local Rules, D. N.M., Admin. Order 97-26, § 1 (Feb. 11, 1997); Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 14 (Oct. 1, 2001); Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Gen. Or. 97-38, § 7 (Oct. 6, 1997).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Becker v. Montgomery, 532 U.S. 757, 763 (2001) (while ruling on signature requirement for appeal purposes, court favorably noted 1996 amendments to Civil Rule 5 authorizing electronic signatures).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedures Manual, § 17 (Aug. 5, 2002).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 14 (Oct. 1, 2001) (filer certifies by submission of multiple signatures that each of the signatories has expressly agreed to the document being filed); see also Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, pp. 12-13 (Oct. 23, 2002) (filing party attests that document is acceptable to all signatories and maintains record of original documents for one year); see also Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, p. 31 (Feb. 10, 2003) (endorsement contained in parenthetical immediately below the signature line indicating that it was signed with signatory's permission).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 13 (Oct. 23, 2002) (alternatively, party may file scanned image of signature page as an attachment to filing); see also Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 5(b) (Oct. 23, 1997).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12, § 5.b-e (Oct. 23, 1997); see also Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User's Manual, p. 12 (Feb. 7, 2003) (notice of endorsement attesting to the authenticity of signature must be filed within one day after the document has been electronically filed--illustrative endorsement notice provided by court at page 55).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.8(c) (documents requiring signatures of multiple parties may be electronically filed by: submitting scanned document; attesting to the signatures on the document itself; or submitting a notice of endorsement); see also Local Rules, E.D. Pa., Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, § 8(c) (May 16, 2002).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Case Files, User Manual, p. 13 (Aug. 2002) (one-year retention required; document subject to production on court order or on party's request for inspection); see also Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Gen. Order No. 45, § X (B) (Apr. 8, 2003) (filer required to retain record for one year after final resolution including any appeal); see also Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.12.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Local Rules, Electronic Case Filing CM/ECF: User's Manual, D. Neb., p. 14 (Jan. 2003) (objections must be filed within 10 days of receiving Notice of Electronic Filing).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 4(f) (Oct. 23, 1997) (filer obligated to make paper and electronic copies of documents filed electronically for a period of one year after final resolution if in paper form and 10 years if in electronic form); see also Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.12 (documents requiring original signatures other than filing user "must be maintained in paper form by the Filing User until either final disposition of the case plus the time for appeal; or until the expiration of any relevant statute of limitations, whichever is greater").

(n14)Footnote 14. See Local Rules, E.D. Pa., LR 5.1.2, Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, § 10 (May 16, 2002) (documents requiring original signature, other than ECF user's signature, "must be maintained in paper form by the ECF Filing User until three (3) years after the time period for appeal expires").

(n15)Footnote 15. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedures Manual, § 16 (Aug. 5, 2002).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Local Rules, E.D. Pa., Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, § 10 (May 16, 2002) ("[d]ocuments that are electronically filed and require original signatures other than that of the Filing User must be maintained in paper form by the ECF Filing User until three (3) years after the time period for appeal expires").

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
D. Step-by-Step Guide for Filing Document in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8B.33 through 8B.39

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

[Reserved]

§§ 8B.33[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
E. Filing Specific Types of Documents in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.40

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.40 Filing a Complaint or Other Initiating Document

All courts follow the same procedures in accepting the initial complaint for filing. A case is opened in the traditional manner using paper documents and physical presentation of the document to the clerk's office. Attorneys tender filing fees, along with an original and copy of the complaint or petition, a civil case cover sheet identifying the complaint, and requested service of process forms. n1 The clerk of court files the papers, accepts filing fees, issues a receipt, assigns the case a number and refers it to a judge, issues process and provides the attorney with case management orders that must be served on the opposing parties. In most courts, the clerk notifies the filing user that the complaint has been filed. n2

Practices vary among the courts, however, on the method in which the hard-copy complaint is converted into an electronic document and filed in the court's ECF system.

- Some courts require the party to submit a copy of the complaint on a floppy disk or CD-ROM simultaneously along with the hard-copy original n3

- Other courts require the party to resubmit a complaint electronically by means of an e-mail after filing a paper version n4

- Some courts require a party to resubmit the original complaint electronically in the ECF system, while other courts prohibit such filing because it will appear in the docket twice with different filing dates, generating confusion n5

In most federal districts, court personnel electronically file complaints that were filed in the conventional manner. In the minority of courts that require the filing user to refile the complaint electronically, the basic steps for filing any document in ECF apply to filing a complaint. The system requires input of relevant information, as well as uploading the complaint with any attachments into the system.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & InterpretationLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 10 (Jan. 2003) (file hard copy of complaint, along with civil cover sheet, and present $150 filing fee in the form of a check or money order to clerk's office).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, p. 13 (Feb. 10, 2003).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 4.1 (Aug. 21, 2002) (copy of original in PDF format required at time of filing); see also Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 16 (Oct. 1, 2001) ("strongly encouraged to accompany your initial filing ... with a diskette or CD-ROM of your papers in PDF format, so that these documents can be added to the electronic case file").

(n4)Footnote 4. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 3 (Oct. 23, 2002) (electronic copy in PDF format required to be e-mailed); see also Local Rules, D.D.C., Electronic Case Filing System User's Manual, p. 11 (Jan. 2003) (clerk's office opens complaint and notifies filer by telephone that case is open, requiring filer to resubmit complaint electronically within 24 hours of notification).

(n5)Footnote 5. Compare Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 2(c) (Oct. 23, 1997) ("[w]ithin ten days after an action becomes subject to EFP, each party shall refile electronically ... every paper in the action that the party previously filed") with Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 13 (Oct. 23, 2002) (previously filed document must be e-mailed).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
E. Filing Specific Types of Documents in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.41

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.41 Recording Service of Process

Service of process is performed in the conventional manner, with paper copies delivered to the parties and filed with the clerk's office. n1 To ensure a complete electronic record of a case file, the documents used in serving process must be recorded in ECF. These documents may include: request for waiver of service, acknowledgment of service, affidavit of service, waiver of service executed or unexecuted, or summons returned executed or unexecuted. n2

In most courts, court personnel docket the documents dealing with service of process in the traditional manner. In some courts, however, the filing user must record the service of process in the ECF system after service has been attempted or executed.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, App. A (Feb. 10, 2003).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
E. Filing Specific Types of Documents in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.42

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.42 Filing Answer to Complaint

An answer to a complaint may be filed by accessing the "Initial Pleadings and Service" menu from the Civil Events screen. An amended answer must be filed by clicking on "Other Answers" under the Initial Pleadings and Service caption.

The system requires input of the case number, attorney name, and party filer. A new screen appears displaying the complaints filed in a particular case with an adjacent check box that can be checked to designate which complaints are being answered. After inputting this information, the File Upload screen allows the filing user to retrieve and submit the answer. The screen collects the information about third-party complainants. Checking the boxes brings up new screens to add third-party defendants.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

166 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
E. Filing Specific Types of Documents in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.43

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.43 Responses and Replies to Motions

A list of responses and replies to a motion are contained in a drop down list that appears after clicking on the "Responses and Replies" caption under "Motions and Related Filings" in the Civil Events field. No special filing procedures are required. However, the filing user is always prompted to select the underlying motion responded or replied to in order to establish the link. As a result, the response or reply is always linked to a motion.

Depending on local practices, filings not customarily associated with a motion response or reply may be listed in the category, including objections to findings and recommendations and objections to a bill of costs. Filing users should review all items listed in the category to familiarize themselves with its contents.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
E. Filing Specific Types of Documents in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.44

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.44 Other Filings

A list of miscellaneous filings is set out under the "Other Filings" category in Civil Events. Jury demands, affidavits, stipulations, and notices to take deposition are several examples of documents that may be included in this category. n1 The procedure for filing these documents is similar to the one for filing all other documents in ECF.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulationsLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, App. A (Feb. 10, 2003).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
E. Filing Specific Types of Documents in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.45

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.45 Proposed Orders and Proposed Documents

Procedures governing filing of proposed orders vary according to local practices.

- In a few courts, the filing of a proposed order is done in accordance with the procedures that apply to all documents, including a docket entry.

- A proposed order may be attached as an exhibit to a motion or stipulation in other courts. n1

- In most courts, the proposed order is not filed in the ECF system because the judge wants the initial opportunity to revise it. In these courts, a party is required to transmit a proposed order directly to the judge's e-mail address, or other designated e-mail address, or to submit a floppy disk or CD-ROM containing the proposed order to the court. n2

- Alternatively, a court may require that a proposed order be filed electronically as an attachment to a filed motion or stipulation and e-mailed to the assigned judge's chambers. n3 The court may adopt or revise the proposed order. Court personnel would then enter the order directly into the ECF system.

If the document to be filed requires leave of court (for example, an amended pleading or a document to be untimely filed), the proposed document may be attached to the motion. n4 If the court later grants the motion, the filing user may be directed to refile the attachment electronically or the clerk of court may refile the document. n5

Additional requirements may apply to the filing of proposed jury instructions and voir dire questions. These documents are often subject to editing by the court. Local practices may require that an electronic version be separately delivered to the judge. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsClerks of CourtLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.10(a) (proposed orders docketed and served as proposed documents); see also Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 28 (Oct. 1, 2001) (submitted electronically as an attachment or submitted separately and identified as "proposed").

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User Manual, p. 29 (Feb. 7, 2003) (filer required to transmit proposed order in WordPerfect format to the courtroom deputy assigned to the presiding judge in the case).

(n3)Footnote 3. Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 25 (Oct. 23, 2002).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.10(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Compare, Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User Manual, p. 26 (Feb. 7, 2003) (requiring party to refile document) with Local Rules, E.D. N.Y., L.R. 5.7(f) (clerk of court electronically files document without further action by the attorney).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Local Rules, D. Or., L.R 100.10(c) (proposed jury instructions and voir dire questions must be filed in ECF, and a copy must be submitted on diskette or CD-ROM in WordPerfect format).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
E. Filing Specific Types of Documents in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8B.46 through 8B.49

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

[Reserved]

§§ 8B.46[Reserved]

170 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
F. Notification of Filing and Service of Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.50

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.50 ECF System Notifies Parties of Filings

A party does not actually deliver or send a copy of papers filed electronically to the opposing party in an ECF court. Instead, the ECF system transmits a Notice of Electronic Filing by e-mail to all individuals who are case participants registered in ECF that have consented to electronic service (see § 8B.31[9]).

The Notice of Electronic Filing contains a hyperlink to the filed document, which is contained in the court's computer database. The hyperlinked document may be accessed instantaneously by clicking on it. The document can then be printed or downloaded and saved. In order to constitute service under Rule 5(b)(2)(E), the Notice of Electronic Filing generated by the ECF system must be authorized by a local rule. n1

Service by electronic means is complete on transmission. n2 Electronic service is deemed complete on "transmission" by analogy to service by mail, which is also complete "on mailing." n3 In this context, "transmission" ordinarily occurs when the sender does the last act that must be performed by the sender, that is when a party clicks on the Submit button generating a Notice of Electronic Filing. n4 If an attorney has consented to be served electronically, the Notice of Electronic Filing is deemed service, and once the notice is transmitted on these parties, service is complete. n5

Attorneys participating in the ECF program generally agree to accept electronic service of papers in all future litigation handled by the attorney.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & InterpretationLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic CommunicationsLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 2001.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 28 (Oct. 1, 2001); see also Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing, Users Manual, p. 26 (Oct. 23, 2002); Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Case Files, User Manual, p. 24 (Aug. 2002) ("transmission of the Notice of Electronic Filing to the registered e-mail address constitutes service of a pleading, paper, order, or notice upon any attorney who is registered").

171 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
F. Notification of Filing and Service of Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.51

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.51 Ineffective Service

Electronic service normally is complete at the time that the filing user pushes the button that sends the Notice of Electronic Filing on its electronic way. n1 There is a significant exception to this general rule, however, that precludes effective service when the sender knows that electronic service has been ineffective. n2 The Rule does acknowledge that, on occasion, electronic transmission of papers and documents fails. n3 A sender may discover, soon after transmission, that the attempt at electronic service did not reach the intended recipient. Electronic service is not effective "if the serving party learns that it did not reach the person to be served." n4

The exception applies only when the sender of the notice knows that the attempt was ineffective. Normally, even if electronic service is ineffective, "the risk of non-receipt falls on the person being served, who has consented to this form of service." n5 Thus, for example, service remains effective at the time of sending if the recipient is merely being uncooperative, simply fails to turn on the receiving computer, or fails to read transmitted e-mail.

In circumstances where the sender knows that electronic service is ineffective, the person attempting electronic service "must either try again or show circumstances that justify dispensing with service". n6

The Eighth Circuit issued an opinion refusing to excuse an untimely appeal based on the excuse that the attorney failed to receive electronic notice of the denial of its motion to amend. The district court found that the party filing the untimely appeal failed to overcome the presumption of delivery and receipt of emails properly dispatched by the court's CM/ECF system. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCommunications LawInternet ServicesLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E) (service "is complete upon transmission").

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 2001 ("lawyers report continuing failures of transmission, particularly with respect to attachments").

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 2001.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note of 2001.

(n7)Footnote 7. American Boat Company, Inc. v. Unknown Sunken Barge, 567 F.3d 348, 353, 353 (8th Cir. 2009).

172 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
F. Notification of Filing and Service of Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.52

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.52 Three-Day Extension

If service is made electronically under Rule 5(b)(2)(E) and the document served requires some action on the part of the recipient, there is a three-day extension of the time period in which the recipient may act. n1 In this matter, electronic service is treated the same as service by mail and service by delivery of papers to the clerk when the recipient has no known address. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6, Committee Note of 2001.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
F. Notification of Filing and Service of Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.53

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.53 Certificate of Service

Rule 5(d)(1) requires that all papers after the complaint must be filed with the court together with a certificate of service. n1 Practices vary among the courts on whether a separate certificate of service must be filed for documents filed electronically.

The Notice of Electronic Filing serves many of the same purposes as does a certificate of service, including informing a party that a paper has been filed in the case.

- In some courts, the Notice of Electronic Filing represents the filer's Certificate of Service and no separate certificate is required. n2

- Other courts require a separate certificate of service to be delivered to each party. n3 The separate certificate of service may be delivered electronically at the same time that the Notice of Electronic Filing is transmitted. n4

Although seemingly redundant, a separate certificate of service provides an added safeguard reminding the filing user to properly serve all parties in the case. The reminder is especially useful in cases involving multi-parties, some of whom may not be registered in the ECF system and require service by conventional means.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofCertificatesLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., L.R. 5-6, Commentary ("parties are not required to include a certificate or acknowledgment of service upon registered ECF users when a document is filed electronically"); see also Local Rules, D. Or., LR 100.13(c) (Notice of Electronic Filing generated by ECF "constitutes proof of service upon a Filing User in accordance with the Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)".

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User's Manual, p. 24 (Feb. 7, 2003) (refers to sample certificate of service that attests that a paper was filed electronically and that a notification was sent electronically to ECF participants or mailed to non-ECF participants); see also Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedures Manual, § 13 (Aug. 5, 2002) ("certificate of service must be included with all documents filed electronically").

(n4)Footnote 4. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12 § 6(a) (Oct. 23, 1997) (filer must send by e-mail Notice of Filing to appropriate parties within one hour following filing); see also Local Rules, E.D. Pa., Procedural Order on Electronic Case Filing, § 7(b) (May 16, 2002) (all filed documents must contain certificate of service).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
F. Notification of Filing and Service of Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.54

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.54 Service of Paper Copy Required

The Notice of Electronic Filing generated by the filer of the electronic document lists the individuals receiving the notice electronically. It also specifies the names of parties who will not receive the Notice of Electronic Filing. The filing user must carefully review the recipient list to determine whether all appropriate parties have been notified of the electronic filing.

The filer of the document is responsible to serve a hard-copy of the document on any party in the case that has not been designated or able to receive an electronic notice as indicated in the Notice of Electronic Filing. In such a case, service is done in the traditional manner set out in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the court's local rules.

If service of a paper copy of the electronic filing is required, it is important to print and serve a copy of the pdf document filed in ECF. Serving a copy of the pdf version ensures that the formatting, pagination, and line numbering (if any) is identical to the official record as contained in ECF. n1

Even in cases in which all parties have been registered in ECF, service by conventional means may be necessary on occasion. Under certain circumstances, hard-copy documents are filed with the court in ECF cases in lieu of electronic documents. For example, an attachment or exhibit might not be filed electronically because of length or other reasons. Usually, only a single-page Notice of Exhibit/Attachment filing is posted in the electronic docket. No hyperlink to the underlying attachment is established (see § 8B.31[5] [iv]). In these cases, the document must be served on the other parties in the traditional manner. The paper copy must be served not only on all parties in the case, but the original must be delivered to the clerk's office with a copy for the assigned judge. n2

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, W.D. Mich., CM/ECF User Manual, p. 31 (Oct. 1, 2001).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User Manual, p. 21 (Feb. 7, 2003).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
F. Notification of Filing and Service of Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8B.55 through 8B.59

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

[Reserved]

§§ 8B.55[Reserved]

176 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
G. Retrieving and Viewing Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.60

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.60 Searching ECF Database Using Query Function

ECF provides the capability to search for case information by case name or case number. The names of parties and attorneys also can be searched. Name fields are not case sensitive. n1 Retrieval of case information from a search of the ECF database engages PACER, requiring submission of the PACER login and password numbers.

A search for information on a specific case in ECF is conducted by clicking on Query in the blue colored function bar. The first step is to locate and retrieve the specific case. The data fields on the Query screen beneath the caption "Search Clues" permit the user to search the ECF database using known case information, including case number, name of party, and name of attorney. Once a particular case has been selected, an additional list of items is displayed, which can be clicked on for more details about the selected case.

Click here to view image.

To begin a search for a specific case, partial information is sufficient. A wildcard symbol (*) may be used as a prefix or suffix to two known characters contained within the word to be searched, and such a search will retrieve all words containing the known characters. n2 A minimum of two characters (alphabetic or numeric) is required to begin a search.

If two or more items are found to match the search query, the matching items are listed and displayed on the next screen. For instance, all names of parties beginning with the letters "Smit_" will appear on the screen after running a query searching for "Smit*." Clicking on one of the matches displays a Query window that links the specific case in which the selected match was found. The case is displayed with the following identification information: case number, parties, presiding judge, date of filing, and date of last filing.

The same screen also contains additional query searches that can be used to obtain more information about the selected case. The additional information can be retrieved by clicking on one of the query searches located on the screen, including:

- Attorneys,
- Case Summary,
- Deadline/Hearings,
- Docket Report,
- History/Documents,
- Party, and
- Related Transactions.

The response to the attorney query displays the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of the attorneys representing each party in the case. The response to Case Summary is displayed on a single screen and provides key information about the parties, case status, and case history. Deadlines or hearing dates set by the court in the particular case can be found by using the Deadlines/Hearings query, which allows a search of deadlines or hearings by Document Number, Event Filed, Due/Set, Satisfied, and Terminated. n3 The process for selecting and retrieving data by using the other queries is similar.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 11.1 (Aug. 21, 2002).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 11.2 (Aug. 21, 2002).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, D. Neb., Electronic Case Filing CM/ECF: User's Manual, pp. 42-43 (Jan. 2003).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
G. Retrieving and Viewing Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.61

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.61 Reports

The reports menu can be accessed from the blue-colored Reports function bar at the top of the Main ECF screen. The Reports menu includes:

- Calendar Events,
- Cases Filed,
- Docket Sheets,
- E-Mail Info for a Case, and
- AO Statistics Division Reports.

Clicking on any of the reports engages PACER, and access is allowed only after the PACER login and password numbers are input (see § 8B.04).

A report can be retrieved after completing a series of prompts initiated by ECF. For example, clicking on Docket Sheet displays a "Docket Sheet" screen with a text box to enter the case number. Instead of displaying the entire docket sheet, which often can run for many pages, ECF provides an option of narrowing the retrieval of docket entries by retrieving only those submitted within a designated range of dates or within a designated range of document numbers. If neither a range of dates nor document numbers is entered, the system will default to print the entire electronic docketing report. Docket entries can be displayed in ascending or descending order and may be sorted by filing or entry date by clicking on the appropriate button.

Click here to view image.

After clicking on the "Run Report" button at the bottom of the screen, the requested docket sheet or portion of docket sheet is displayed on the screen. Each docket entry is set out in three columns. The first column contains the filing date, the second column contains the document number listed in chronological order, and the third column contains a narrative description of the docket entry. Clicking on the document number contained in the middle column displays the specific document.

ECF users may also retrieve a Notice of Electronic Filing from the displayed docket sheet by clicking on the icon or "dot" adjacent to the document number in the middle column. n1 The docket sheet may be printed by clicking on Print on the Netscape tool bar.

The Civil Case report allows the user to retrieve cases electronically filed within a specified range of dates or by Nature of Suit or Cause Code. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 12.2(b) (Aug. 21, 2002).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, D. Neb., Electronic Case Filing CM/ECF: User's Manual, p. 47 (Jan. 2003).

178 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
G. Retrieving and Viewing Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.62

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.62 Utilities Function

The Utilities function has several features that are common to most ECF systems. They include:

- Maintain Your Account,
- View Your Transaction Log,
- Legal Research, and
- Verify a Document.

Individual courts tailor the Utilities function to their own needs and may add different features.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
G. Retrieving and Viewing Documents Filed in ECF

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide §§ 8B.63 through 8B.69

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

[Reserved]

§§ 8B.63[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.70

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.70 Entry and Notice of Court Orders and Judgments

Click here to view image.

A judge may enter an order electronically, which is filed in the ECF system by court personnel. The ECF system automatically generates and transmits a Notice of Electronic Filing to all Filing Users notifying them that the judge has issued an order or judgment in their case. The electronic transmission of the Notice of Electronic Filing constitutes the notice required under Rule 77(d). n1 The notice contains a hyperlink to the order.

An order filed electronically without the judge's hand-written signature has the same force and effect as a paper order signed by the judge. In some courts, judges authorize "text only" orders that are solely docket entries, which themselves constitute the order. No separate pdf document is required to memorialize the order. A Notice of Electronic Filing is sent electronically to the parties, but unlike other notices, it has no hyperlink to an underlying document. Instead, the notice contains the text of the docket entry recording the judge's order. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementGovernmentsCourtsCourt PersonnelLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, D. Md., Electronic Filing Requirements and Procedures, p. 35 (Feb. 10, 2003).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.71

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.71 Fees

[1] No Registration Fees

There are no special or added fees assessed for electronic filing. Of course, the general fees assessed by the courts under the Judicial Conference Schedule of Fees apply to cases filed electronically. n1

[2] Filing Fees

A fee is assessed for the initial filing of a complaint or petition. Payment of the fee is done in the traditional manner along with the initial filing of the complaint or petition.

There is no uniform standard procedure governing the payment of the initial filing fee at the time of electronic filing. ECF courts require payment of fees through the clerk's office, in advance of any electronic filing of a paper requiring payment of a fee. n2 Alternative procedures are under study that would permit an attorney who is enrolled in the ECF system to pay filing fees by credit card or electronic means. At the present time, local rules and administrative court orders either are silent or explicitly require payment of filing fees using conventional means, though some ECF courts do accept payment by credit card. n3

[3] Fees for Viewing or Downloading ECF Documents

The fees governing public access to cases filed electronically are set out in a Judicial Conference "Electronic Public Access Fee Schedule" appended to section 1914, title 28, United States Code. n4 The access fee, however, does not apply to the first time that a party views a document after receiving a Notice of Electronic Filing. n5

The Notice of Electronic Filing sent to attorneys of record and parties in a case includes a hyperlink to the filed document. The hyperlink expires after it is opened for the first time. A charge is assessed for all subsequent access to the filed document. Accordingly, counsel will typically download and print copies of the electronically filed documents when they first receive them to prevent incurring the expense for viewing them at a later time.

An ECF document can be retrieved and viewed only by access through PACER. While in ECF, a document can be retrieved by clicking on Query or Report which engages PACER (see § 8B.04). Before an ECF document is viewed, a transaction receipt will appear indicating the type and description of the transaction, the number of pages billed, and the cost for that transaction.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsFiling FeesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1914(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, N.D. Ohio, Electronic Case Files, User Manual, p. 13 (Aug. 2002) (filing fee must be paid prior to filing with clerk's financial officer).

(n3)Footnote 3. See W.D.Mo., En Banc Order § 3.e (Nov. 5, 1998) (payment of filing fees by credit card over phone after faxing civil cover sheet and complaint); See also Local Rules, D. Neb, Administrative Procedure for Filing, Signing, and Verifying Pleadings and Papers by Electronic Means, II.D. (June 2, 2003).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1914.

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1914, Note, Judicial Conference Electronic Public Access Fee Schedule ("[a]ttorneys of record and parties in a case (including pro se litigants) receive one free electronic copy of all documents filed electronically, if receipt is required by law or directed by the filer"); see Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 3.5 (Sept. 13, 2002) ("[e]ach e-mail recipient [of Notice of Electronic Filing] receives a 'first free look' at the electronically filed document").

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.72

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.72 Security Issues

No computer system is foolproof against outside unauthorized access. Determined "computer hackers" might be able to gain access and compromise a court's electronic records. But courts have taken extensive precautions to ensure that their systems are immune from most attacks.

The ECF system complies with up-to-date security requirements. It employs 40-bit encryption and contains multi-layers of protections. n1 The ECF system has been examined by the National Security Agency and meets the highest government standards.

As part of the ECF system, every document filed with the system is analyzed to ensure that it does not contain any virus. A PDF CHECK software program performs the function automatically.

Like all computer systems, frequent back-ups and archiving of electronic records are performed on a regular basis. A firewall between outside users and the court is maintained to prevent an unauthorized person access to the system. As with other organizations that rely on the Internet, the courts are especially concerned with internal staff who have direct access to the system and have the ability to cause mischief.

As a precaution against loss of data, courts require parties to retain certain paper-based documents that contain original signatures other than the person who files the document for a significant length of time (one to five years) in the event that these documents may be necessary as evidence in future litigation, e.g., prosecution of fraud. n2 Some courts require that both paper and electronic copies of every paper filed electronically be kept by the party filing it. n3 Other courts require the parties to keep copies only of certain types of documents, such as those containing relevant, original signatures. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementComputer & Internet LawCriminal OffensesData Crimes & FraudComputer & Internet LawPrivacy & SecurityGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Or., CM/ECF User Manual, § 3.2(a) (Sept. 13, 2002) (employs technology identical to that used by financial institutions to prevent computer hackers from intercepting confidential information).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, E.D. N.Y., Admin. Order 97-12, § 4.f (Oct. 23, 1997) (retain document in hard-copy form for one year after case disposition).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Local Rules, E.D. N.Y., Admin. Order § 4.f (Oct. 23, 1997) (paper copies must be kept for one year following final resolution, electronic copies must be kept for 10 years).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Local Rules, D.N.M., En Banc Order, § 4.b (Oct. 2, 1997).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.73

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.73 Sealing Documents, Including Preventing Document's Posting on Internet

[1] Redacting Private Information

Rule 5.2 was adopted in compliance with the E-Government Act of 2002. n1 This Act requires, among other things, that federal courts make all electronic filings available online, through each court's website. Any paper filings that are scanned into electronic form must be made available to the same extent as any original electronic filings. Electronic filing is becoming the normal mode for filing papers in federal district courts. District courts may adopt, and more and more district courts have adopted, local rules requiring parties to file electronically. n2 Scanning the decreasing number of paper filings still being made into electronic form is common practice in the district courts. n3 Thus, courts must deal with the consequences of having its files available to the public over the internet.

Unless the court orders otherwise, in an electronic or paper filing with the court that contains an individual's social-security number, taxpayer-identification number, birth date, the name of an individual known to be a minor, or a financial-account number, a party or nonparty making the filing may include only: n4

- The last four digits of the social-security number and taxpayer-identification number
- The year of the individual's birth
- The minor's initials
- The last four digits of the financial-account number

The redaction requirement does not apply to the following: n5

- The record of an administrative or agency proceeding

- The official record of a state-court proceeding

- The record of a court or tribunal, if that record was not subject to the redaction requirement when originally filed

- A filing covered by Rule 5.2(c) (social security appeals and immigration cases) or Rule 5.2(d) (unredacted filing under seal)

- A financial-account number that identifies the property allegedly subject to forfeiture in a forfeiture proceeding

- A pro se filing in an action brought under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2241, 2254, or 2255

While the term "redacted" is used, the rule is intended to govern a filing that is prepared with abbreviated identifying information in the first instance, as well as a filing in which the information is edited after its preparation. n6 The responsibility to prepare or redact filings so that they include only the allowed information rests with counsel and the party or nonparty making the filing. The clerk is not required to review documents filed with the court for compliance with the rule. n7 Further, the advisory committee note indicates that attorneys should consult with their clients as to what personal information is to be included in a document filed with the court. The attorney should make the client aware that any personal information not protected by sealing or redaction will be made available over the internet. n8

[2] Limiting Remote Access to Electronic Files in Social Security Appeals and Immigration Cases

Unless the court orders otherwise, in an action for benefits under the Social Security Act, and in an action or proceeding relating to an order of removal, to relief from removal, or to immigration benefits or detention, access to an electronic file is authorized as follows: n9

- The parties and their attorneys may have remote electronic access to any part of the case file, including the administrative record

- Any other person may have electronic access to the full record at the courthouse, but may have remote electronic access only to the docket maintained by the court, and an opinion, order, judgment, or other disposition of the court, but not any other part of the case file or the administrative record

[3] Filings Made Under Seal

The court may order that a filing be made under seal without redaction. The court may later unseal the filing or order the person who made the filing to file a redacted version for the public record. n10

[4] Seeking Protective Order to Limit Access to Private Information

For good cause, the court may require redaction of additional information. n11 The court may also limit or prohibit a nonparty's remote electronic access to a document filed with the court. n12

[5] Filing Unredacted Copy Under Seal

A person making a redacted filing may also file an unredacted copy under seal. The court must retain the unredacted copy as part of the record. n13

[6] Filing a Reference List of Redacted Information

A filing that contains redacted information may be filed together with a reference list that identifies each item of redacted information and specifies an appropriate identifier that uniquely corresponds to each item listed. The list must be filed under seal and may be amended as of right. Any reference in the case to a listed identifier will be construed to refer to the corresponding item of information. n14

[7] Waiving Protections Under Rule 5.2

A person waives the protection of Rule 5.2(a) as to the person's own information by filing it without redaction and not under seal. n15

[8] Seeking More or Less Protection Than Specified in Rule

Rule 5.2 requires the redaction of certain information "unless the court orders otherwise." n16 Accordingly, the court retains authority under the rule to require that information, otherwise subject to redaction, be included in a filing. Alternatively, the rule allows the court, for good cause, to issue protective orders that either: n17

- Require redaction of additional information that would not otherwise need to be redacted
- Limit or prohibit remote electronic access by nonparties to a document filed with the court

While Rule 5.2 provides for the public filing of certain information, such the last four digits of an account number, it does not create a presumption that even this information cannot be protected in an appropriate case. The advisory committee note indicates that it may be necessary in some cases to prevent remote access to any part of an identifying number, or to protect information not referred to in Rule 5.2, such as a driver's license number or alien registration number. n18

The court may also order that records be sealed in an appropriate case. Rule 5.2 neither prevents the sealing of records nor affects the limitations on sealing that are otherwise applicable to the court. n19

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsElectronic MeansCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementComputer & Internet LawPrivacy & SecurityGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsClient RelationsConfidentiality of InformationLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3); See, e.g., Local Rule, D. Me., L.R. 5(c) ("Unless exempt or otherwise ordered by the Court, papers shall be filed and served electronically as required by the court's Administrative Procedures Governing the Filing and Service by Electronic Means"); Local Rules, E.D. Cal., L.R. 5-133 ("Unless excused by the court or by the electronic filing procedures set forth in these Rules, attorneys shall file all documents electronically pursuant to those Rules."); Local Rules, D. Ore., L.R. 5.1(a) ("All documents filed with the Court by a Registered User shall be in accordance with the Electronic Filing Procedures set forth in these local rules.").

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a)(1)-(4).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(1)-(6).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(c)(1), (2).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(f).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(g).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(h).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e).

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

(n19)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Committee Note (2007).

184 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.74

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.74 Record on Appeal

Most ECF courts have not addressed issues about the record on appeal in their local rules. The courts that have addressed these issues advise parties to file papers in the traditional manner with the courts of appeals. Paper copies of documents filed with the courts of appeals may need to be filed with the District Court Clerk's Office. n1

Courts of appeals are not yet accepting filings electronically, although a prototype of an appellate version of ECF is being developed and tested (see § 8B.01[3]). When the courts of appeals begin to operate electronic case filing systems, they will begin to accept the record on appeal transmitted electronically from lower courts.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealGovernmentsCourtsCourt RecordsLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Gen. Order No. 45, § XI (Apr. 8, 2003).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.75

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.75 Court Reporter Transcripts

Few courts have provisions governing the electronic filing of transcripts produced by court reporters. In the District of Nebraska, a transcript must be electronically filed. n1 In the Southern District of New York, the contract court reporter retains the transcript of court proceedings for 90 days. Thereafter, the transcript is submitted to the clerk of court to be filed electronically in ECF. Traditionally, parties and others pay court reporters for copies of transcripts of court proceedings. Posting transcripts on the Internet has obvious adverse financial implications for court reporters. n2

The use of digital recordings will likely become more widespread since such recordings can be uploaded into electronic case files for concise record keeping.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersCourt ReportersGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsClerks of CourtGovernmentsCourtsCourt Personnel

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, D. Neb., Administrative Procedure for Filing, Signing, and Verifying Pleadings and Papers by Electronic Means, II. A. 8. (June 2, 2003) ("official transcriber or contract court reporter must also either file the certified transcript of those proceedings electronically on the System").

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, N.D.Cal., Electronic Case Filing Users Manual, p.3 (October 2002) (transcripts may not be filed electronically).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.76

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.76 Improved Statistics and Data Gathering

The automation of docket entries creates tremendous opportunities for enhanced data collection that are presently unavailable. Ascertaining the number of individual motions filed in federal court, the number of motions for class action certifications or motions for summary judgment, for example, cannot be readily discerned from hand-written docket entries. Automated docket entries create the promise of a data-collection system that will capture valuable data with a rapid retrieval capability enhancing the abilities of future rulemakers and others interested in judicial administration and governance.

187 of 187 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8B Electronic Case Filing
H. Other Matters

1-8B Federal Litigation Guide § 8B.77

AUTHOR: by John K. Rabiej John K. Rabiej is Chief of the Rules Committee Support Office, Administrative Office of the United States Courts. His office staffs the Advisory Committees on Appellate, Bankruptcy, Civil, Criminal, and Evidence Rules and the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

§ 8B.77 Training

The web site of each ECF court is the initial and primary source of ECF information. The web sites contain instructions on how to register and file documents in the court's ECF system. The site contains the court's ECF user manual, which sets out step-by-step instructions on how to file a document electronically. A link to the court's local rules, administrative orders, or other court orders authorizing electronic filing is also provided on the web site. Most sites include a tutorial that can be operated "on-line" for practice purposes before filing a document in the court's "live" database. n1 In addition, most courts provide online support to ECF users. Questions about, or problems encountered with, an electronic filing may be submitted electronically to the court's Help Desk number. n2

In a minority of courts, training sessions are provided for the public by court personnel. These sessions may take from four to eight hours and are offered to potential filing users. Some courts require that the filing user successfully complete the training session before allowing the user to register in the court's ECF.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsCourtsCourt PersonnelGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & InterpretationLegal EthicsProfessional ConductElectronic Communications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Local Rules, W.D. Mo., Electronic Case Files User Manual, p. 3 (Feb. 7, 2003).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Local Rules, E.D.N.Y., ECF User's Manual, p. 13 (Feb. 2001); see also Local Rules, N.D. Cal., Electronic Case Filing Users Manual, p. 4 (Oct. 23, 2002).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide 9.syn

§ 9.syn Synopsis to Chapter 9: The Purposes of Discovery

§ 9.01 Obtaining Information to Resolve the Case

§ 9.02 Understanding the Relationship Between Discovery and the Pleadings

§ 9.03 Using Discovery to Prepare for Trial

§ 9.04 Using Discovery to Facilitate Motion Practice
[1] Establishing Facts to Support Motion Practice
[2] Gaining Tactical Advantage Through Discovery
[3] Using Discovery Offensively for Motion Practice

§ 9.05 Using Discovery to Promote Settlement
[1] Establishing Facts to Convince Opponent That Settlement Is Preferable to Trial
[2] Evaluating Likelihood of Success at Trial May Prompt Settlement

§§ 9.06 through 9.09 [Reserved]

§ 9.10 Understanding Mandatory Disclosure Under Rule 26(a)

§ 9.11 Evaluating the Applicability of Rule 26(a)
[1] Opting Out No Longer Authorized Under Rule 26(a)
[2] Determining Whether Case is Exempt From Disclosure Requirements

§ 9.12 Making Initial Mandatory Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(1)
[1] Exchanging Basic Information in Support of Claims or Defenses
[2] Timing of Initial Disclosures

§ 9.13 CHECKLIST: Initial Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(1)

§ 9.14 Making Expert Witness Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(2)
[1] Exchanging Expert Witness Reports
[2] Timing of Disclosure of Expert Witness Reports
[3] Protecting Drafts and Communications of Expert Witnesses

§ 9.15 Making Final Pretrial Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(3)
[1] Exchanging Information About Fact Witnesses, Evidence, and Exhibits
[2] Timing of Disclosure of Fact Witnesses, Evidence, and Exhibits

§ 9.16 Serving and Filing Mandatory Disclosures

§ 9.17 Supplementing Mandatory Disclosures

§ 9.18 Using Discovery Methods

§ 9.19 Considering Evidentiary Privileges in the Discovery Context

§ 9.20 Evaluating the Advantages of Available Discovery Methods
[1] Evaluating the Advantages of Taking Depositions Under Rule 30
[2] Evaluating the Advantages of Propounding Interrogatories Under Rule 33
[3] Evaluating the Advantages of Requests for Documents and Things and Entry Upon Land for Inspection Under Rule 34
[4] Evaluating the Advantages of Requests for Admission Under Rule 36
[5] Evaluating the Advantages of Physical and Mental Examinations Under Rule 35

2 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

Disclosure and discovery are used to obtain factual information to prove the various claims and defenses asserted in the pleadings of an action. This chapter first provides an overview of the purposes of discovery, with specific focus on planning for trial, participating in motion practice, and settling the case.

The chapter then covers disclosure requirements and discovery methods under the Federal Rules. Under Rule 26(a), all parties are obligated, without awaiting a discovery request, to provide to other parties certain initial disclosures regarding information that the disclosing party may use in support of its claims or defenses. Rule 26(a) also governs the disclosure of information concerning expert witnesses, as well as the exchange of pretrial information regarding fact witnesses, evidence, and exhibits. District courts may no longer opt-out of the disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a). However, the rule specifically excludes certain categories of cases from the disclosure requirements and district courts may order changes in the disclosure requirements on a case-by-case basis. Additionally, parties may stipulate out of some or all of the disclosure requirements under the rule.

In addition to disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a), the Federal Rules govern use of the following methods of discovery, and the advantages of each are briefly described in the chapter:

- Depositions
- Written interrogatories
- Production of documents and things and entry upon land for inspection
- Physical and mental examinations of persons
- Requests for admission

For expanded coverage of the purposes of discovery, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 26, General Provisions Governing Discovery; Duty of Disclosure (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

3 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
A. Evaluating the Purposes and Uses of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.01

§ 9.01 Obtaining Information to Resolve the Case

The various methods of discovery provided for under the Federal Rules allow the parties to establish the facts alleged in the pleadings. Discovery serves to narrow and clarify the issues and ascertain the facts that are actually in dispute and require trial. n1 The general purpose of discovery is to remove surprise from trial preparation so that parties may obtain the evidence necessary to evaluate and resolve their dispute. n2 By requiring disclosure of relevant information, the discovery rules allow ultimate resolution of disputed issues to be based on full and accurate understanding of true facts. n3

Well-planned discovery allows the parties to obtain information for the following purposes:

- To assist in identifying evidence and witnesses for trial
- To support pre-trial motions
- To promote settlement

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevance

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 501, 67 S. Ct. 385, 91 L. Ed. 451, 34 Ohio Op. 395 (1947) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Ragge v. MCA/Universal Studios, 165 F.R.D. 601, 603 (C.D. Cal. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. In re E.I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., 918 F. Supp. 1524, 1542 (M.D. Ga. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
A. Evaluating the Purposes and Uses of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.02

§ 9.02 Understanding the Relationship Between Discovery and the Pleadings

Although, traditionally, Rule 8 was interpreted to require parties only to provide notice of claims and defenses in short and plain terms without specific facts, a complaint filed in federal court now must include sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face, and all claims must be accompanied by facts which allow the court "to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." n1 This "facial plausibility" cannot be supported by "mere conclusory statements," and a reviewing court is required to "draw on its experience and common sense" in its determination of plausibility. n2As such, pretrial discovery may now be required in a greater number of cases to provide access to sufficient factual detail about the alleged claims.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, __ U.S. __, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884-885 (2009) ; see also al-Kidd v. Ashcroft, 580 F.3d 949, 956 (9th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts sufficient to state plausible claim); Sinaltrainal v. Coca-Cola Co., 578 F.3d 1252, 1261-1270 (11th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts failed to state plausible claim).

5 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
A. Evaluating the Purposes and Uses of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.03

§ 9.03 Using Discovery to Prepare for Trial

A chief purpose of discovery is to enable counsel to present a more coherent and comprehensible case at trial. Specifically, discovery serves the following functions in planning for trial:

- Identifying the existence and location of documents, witnesses, and other forms of evidence
- Narrowing the issues and eliminating the possibility of surprise at trial
- Forcing the opposing party to commit to a particular version of the facts
- Permitting counsel to assess the credibility of witnesses
- Promoting an efficient and economical trial process
- Recording and preserving testimony that may not be available at trial

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of Testimony

6 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
A. Evaluating the Purposes and Uses of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.04

§ 9.04 Using Discovery to Facilitate Motion Practice

[1] Establishing Facts to Support Motion Practice

Discovery may be crucial in developing a basis for a motion that may dispose of all or part of the litigation. For example, Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c) specifically provides that the following discovery devices may support the granting of a summary judgment:

- Depositions
- Answers to interrogatories
- Admissions on file

[2] Gaining Tactical Advantage Through Discovery

Discovery may be used to gain some significant tactical advantage with regard to an issue that, while not dispositive of the entire action, will substantially affect its practical course. For example, the disposition of a motion to dismiss for lack of personal or subject matter jurisdiction may hinge on early discovery directed to those issues. A court's determination that jurisdiction is lacking probably will not prevent the plaintiff from being sued again in another forum. However, the defendant's success on this preliminary issue may shift to the defendant the tactical advantage of the new forum, and may therefore have a significant impact on the case.

[3] Using Discovery Offensively for Motion Practice

Discovery may be used offensively to establish a certain fact by using information in the control of the opposing party. For example:

- Establishing personal jurisdiction. Plaintiff's counsel may seek documents from a corporate defendant or depose its key officers to determine whether there are sufficient minimum contacts to establish personal jurisdiction.

- Establishing notice in support of statute of limitations defense. If the running of a statute of limitations is triggered by the plaintiff's reasonable opportunity to have learned of its cause of action, the defendant may be able to target discovery to uncover the date on which the plaintiff acquired the requisite knowledge, thus possibly disposing of the case without spending time and money developing the merits.

- Limiting defendant's damages exposure. Effective discovery may permit a defendant to eliminate certain of the plaintiff's claims for damages, such as a claim for punitive or treble damages, or a claim by the plaintiff that a limitation on contract damages is unenforceable. Discovery undertaken by the defendant for this purpose is "offensive," as defendant's counsel will attempt to establish facts to support a motion that will, in turn, shift the tactical balance in the case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsWritten Depositions

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
A. Evaluating the Purposes and Uses of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.05

§ 9.05 Using Discovery to Promote Settlement

[1] Establishing Facts to Convince Opponent That Settlement Is Preferable to Trial

Discovery may be important to better understand the factual basis of the dispute so that the parties can adopt realistic settlement postures. Thus, in planning discovery, counsel should strive to obtain the necessary facts to convince the opposing party that settlement is preferable to the uncertainties and expense of trial.

[2] Evaluating Likelihood of Success at Trial May Prompt Settlement

Settlement is a viable option when one party believes that there is a strong possibility that it may not prevail at trial, and that it can cut its losses by settling the case. Settlement is also a viable option when either party determines that it is likely to expend more in litigation costs than it is apt to gain from any verdict. The extensive costs associated with ongoing discovery may even prompt parties to enter into settlement discussions.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
A. Evaluating the Purposes and Uses of Discovery

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 9.06 through 9.09

[Reserved]

§§ 9.06[Reserved]

9 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.10

§ 9.10 Understanding Mandatory Disclosure Under Rule 26(a)

Rule 26(a) requires litigants to disclose certain types of information to opposing parties at specified stages of the pretrial process.

The three basic categories of Rule 26(a) disclosure are: n1

- Initial Disclosures: During the early pretrial period, parties are required to exchange information regarding: (1) individuals likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment; (2) documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment; (3) claims and calculations of damages; and (4) insurance coverage [see §§ 9.12 -9.13]

- Expert Disclosures: Further into the pretrial period the parties are required to share information regarding expert witnesses [see § 9.14]

- Pretrial Disclosures: As trial approaches, the parties are required to disclose information about fact witnesses, evidence, and exhibits to be used at trial [see § 9.15]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral Depositions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.11

§ 9.11 Evaluating the Applicability of Rule 26(a)

[1] Opting Out No Longer Authorized Under Rule 26(a)

Although courts generally do not have the discretion to entirely opt-out of disclosure requirements, courts may issue case-specific orders regarding initial disclosure requirements, particularly when a party successfully objects that initial disclosure is not appropriate in the circumstances of the action. Additionally, specified categories of proceedings are entirely excluded from initial disclosure. n1 Parties may also stipulate to forgo the disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a). But even in a case where the parties stipulate to bypass disclosure, or in cases entirely excluded from disclosure requirements under the rule, the court may order exchange of similar information in managing the action under Rule 16.

[2] Determining Whether Case is Exempt From Disclosure Requirements

The following categories of cases are exempt from the disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a): n2

- An action for review on an administrative record
- A forfeiture action in rem arising from a federal statute
- A petition for habeas corpus or other proceeding to challenge a criminal conviction or sentence
- An action brought without counsel by a person in custody of the United States, a state, or a state subdivision
- An action to enforce or quash an administrative summons or subpoena
- An action by the United States to recover benefit payments
- An action by the United States to collect on a student loan guaranteed by the United States
- A proceeding ancillary to proceedings in other courts
- An action to enforce an arbitration award

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(B).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.12

§ 9.12 Making Initial Mandatory Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(1)

[1] Exchanging Basic Information in Support of Claims or Defenses

Except in categories of proceedings specified exempt from disclosure requirements, or to the extent otherwise stipulated or directed by court order, litigants are required to exchange the following information without awaiting a formal discovery request: n1

- Persons with knowledge in support of claims or defenses. The name and, if known, the address and telephone number of each individual likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment

- Supporting documents. A copy of, or a description by category and location of, all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment

- Damages information. Computations of all categories of damages, with copies of supporting documents n2

- Insurance information. The contents of any insurance agreement that may be implicated by the judgment in the action

A party who withholds documents subject to initial disclosure requirements on the ground that the documents are to be used solely for impeachment purposes is permitted to use the documents at trial for impeachment purposes only. n3

[2] Timing of Initial Disclosures

Initial disclosures under Rule 26(a)(1) must be made at or within 14 days of the discovery conference held under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f) unless a different time is set by stipulation or court order, or unless a party objects during the conference that initial disclosures are not appropriate in the circumstances of the action and states the objection in the Rule 26(f) discovery plan. n4 In ruling on the objection, the court must determine what disclosures, if any, are to be made and set the time for disclosure. Any party first served or otherwise joined after the Rule 26(f) conference must make these disclosures within 30 days after being served or joined unless a different time is set by stipulation or court order. n5

A party must make the initial disclosures based on the information then reasonably available and a party is not excused from making its disclosures because it has not fully completed its investigation of the case or because it challenges the sufficiency of another party's disclosures or because another party has not made its disclosures. n6 However, the parties may move for a stay of the initial disclosures pending the resolution of a motion to dismiss. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Clayman v. Starwood Hotels & Resorts Worldwide, 343 F. Supp. 2d 1037, 1047 (D. Kan. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Lomascolo v. Otto Oldsmobile-Cadillac, Inc., 253 F. Supp. 2d 354, 360-361 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(D).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(E).

(n7)Footnote 7. See In Re Lotus Dev. Corp. Sec. Litig., 875 F. Supp. 48, 51-52 (D. Mass. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.13

§ 9.13 CHECKLIST: Initial Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(1)

The following checklist may be used when the initial disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a)(1) are applicable in the case.

☐ The following categories of cases are exempt from the initial disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a)(1)(B): n1

- ☐ An action for review on an administrative record
- ☐ A forfeiture action in rem arising from a federal statute
- ☐ A petition for habeas corpus or other proceeding to challenge a criminal conviction or sentence
- ☐ An action brought without counsel by a person in custody of the United States, a state, or a state subdivision
- ☐ An action to enforce or quash an administrative summons or subpoena
- ☐ An action by the United States to recover benefit payments
- ☐ An action by the United States to collect on a student loan guaranteed by the United States
- ☐ A proceeding ancillary to proceedings in other courts

☐ An action to enforce an arbitration award

☐ If Rule 26(a)(1) is applicable in the case, prepare and serve initial disclosures within 14 days after discovery planning meeting held pursuant to Rule 26(f). Any party first served or otherwise joined after the Rule 26(f) conference must make these disclosures within 30 days after being served or joined unless a different time is set by stipulation or court order.

☐ A party must make its initial disclosures based on the information then reasonably available to it. A party is not excused from making its disclosures because it has not fully investigated the case or because it challenges the sufficiency of another party's disclosures or because another party has not made its disclosures.

☐ Avoid or modify initial disclosure requirements under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1) by, either:

☐ Stipulating with other parties.

☐ Asking court for relief from requirements.

☐ Determine matters to which the initial disclosures apply:

☐ Discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment. n2

☐ Readily available information as required under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

☐ Provide the following information for each individual likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment, as required under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(i):

☐ Name.

☐ Individual's address, if known.

☐ Individual's telephone number, if known.

☐ Subject of person's information.

☐ Provide a copy of, or describe by category and location, all the following materials that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment, as required under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(ii):

☐ Documents.

☐ Electronically stored information.

☐ Tangible things.

☐ For each category of damages claimed, provide the following pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(iii):

☐ A complete computation of damages.

☐ Make available for inspection and copying as under Rule 34 any non-privileged or otherwise unprotected documents or other evidentiary material on which the computation was based.

☐ Include materials bearing on the nature and extent of injuries suffered.

☐ Parties need not disclose as part of the computation of damages disclosures ofRule 26(a)(1)(A)(iii), the following: n3

☐ Information already possessed by other parties.

☐ Privileged or otherwise protected materials.

☐ As required under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(iv), make available for inspection and copying as under Rule 34 any liability insurance policies that may be liable to either:

☐ Satisfy a judgment that may be entered.

☐ Indemnify or reimburse payments made to satisfy the judgment.

☐ Do not make available liability insurance information that is inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 411.

☐ For any privilege or protection claimed, including work product, assert the privilege in the initial disclosure, briefly describing withheld materials.

☐ Prepare initial disclosures in writing pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(4).

☐ Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1), at least one attorney of record must sign initial disclosures and include the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number.. The attorney's signature certifies that to the best of the signer's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after a reasonable inquiry, the disclosure is complete and correct as of the time it is made.

☐ Serve initial disclosures on the other parties as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(4).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a) advisory committee's note (1993).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.14

§ 9.14 Making Expert Witness Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(2)

[1] Exchanging Expert Witness Reports

In applicable cases, each party is required to disclose the identity of any witness who may be used to present expert testimony and the substance of the expert's testimony. n1 The disclosure must be accompanied by a written report prepared and signed by the witness, which contains the following: n2

- A complete statement of all opinions to be expressed by the expert and the basis and reasons for them
- The facts or data considered by the expert in forming the opinions
- Any exhibits to be used to summarize or support the opinions
- The qualifications of the expert including a list of all publications authored by the expert during the preceding ten years n2.1
- The compensation to be paid to the expert n2.2
- A list of cases in which the expert has testified as an expert at deposition or trial in the last four years

Some courts interpret Rule 26(a)(2)(B) as requiring disclosure of all information, whether privileged or not, that a testifying expert generates, reviews, reflects upon, reads, and/or uses in connection with the formulation of his opinions, even if the testifying expert ultimately rejects the information. n2.3

Unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court, if the expert witness is not required to provide a written report, the expert disclosure must include both of the following: n2.4

- The subject matter on which the witness is expected to present evidence under Federal Rule of Evidence 702, 703, or 705

- A summary of the facts and opinions to which the witness is expected to testify

[2] Timing of Disclosure of Expert Witness Reports

In the absence of other directions from the court or stipulation by the parties, expert witness disclosures must be made at least 90 days before trial, unless the evidence is intended to rebut the opposing party's expert evidence, in which case the disclosure shall be made within 30 days of the opposing party's expert disclosure. n3 When a dispute arises concerning violation of expert disclosure obligations pursuant to a court-approved discovery plan, the court looks to Rule 16(f), and not Rule 26(a)(2), for determining both compliance with the time requirements and sanctions for failure to comply. n3.1 For complete discussion regarding discovery of experts, see Ch. 23, Discovery of Experts.

[3] Protecting Drafts and Communications of Expert Witnesses

Effective December 1, 2010, Rules 26(b)(3)(A) and (B) protect drafts of any expert report or disclosure required under Rule 26(a)(2), regardless of the form in which the draft is recorded. n4

Additionally, Rules 26(b)(3)(A) and (B) protect communications between the party's attorney and any expert witness required to provide a report under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), regardless of the form of the communications, except to the extent that the communications do any of the following: n5

- Relate to compensation for the expert's study or testimony

- Identify facts or data that the party's attorney provided and that the expert considered in forming the opinions to be expressed

- Identify assumptions that the party's attorney provided and that the expert relied on in forming the opinions to be expressed

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsExpert Witness Discovery

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Rivera Pomales v. Bridgestone Firestone, Inc., 217 F.R.D. 290, 293 (D.P.R. 2003) (district court excluded defendant's expert witness for failure to include a copy of the expert's curriculum vitae with the expert witness report).

(n4)Footnote 2.2. See Cary Oil Co. v. MG Ref. & Mktg., Inc., 257 F. Supp. 2d 751, 756 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (disclosure of hourly rate on its own is insufficient).

(n5)Footnote 2.3. See Synthes Spine Co., L.P. v. Walden, 232 F.R.D. 460, 464 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 2.4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(D).

(n8)Footnote 3.1. Akeva L.L.C. v. Mizuno Corp., 212 F.R.D. 306, 309 (M.D.N.C. 2002) .

(n9)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(B).

(n10)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.15

§ 9.15 Making Final Pretrial Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(3)

[1] Exchanging Information About Fact Witnesses, Evidence, and Exhibits

In applicable cases, each party is required to designate those factual witnesses who will be called at the trial or whose testimony will be presented by deposition, and identify each document or other exhibit that will or may be offered into evidence at trial. However, evidence that is to be offered solely for impeachment purposes need not be disclosed in advance. n1

[2] Timing of Disclosure of Fact Witnesses, Evidence, and Exhibits

Disclosures regarding factual witnesses, evidence, and exhibits must be made at least 30 days before trial and must be promptly filed with the court. An opposing party may then file objections to the use of deposition testimony or a document or exhibit within 14 days of the pretrial disclosure. Failure to raise a timely objection, with theexception of an objection to relevancy, generally results in waiver. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory Disclosures

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3); DeBiasio v. Illinois Central R.R., 52 F.3d 678 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3).

15 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.16

§ 9.16 Serving and Filing Mandatory Disclosures

Unless otherwise directed by order or local rule, disclosures made under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a) must be:

- Made in writing n1
- Signed by at least one attorney of record with the attorney's address, e-mail address, and telephone number n2
- Served on the other parties n3

Only pretrial disclosures made under Rule 26(a)(3) must be filed with the court. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory Disclosures

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(4).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3).

16 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.17

§ 9.17 Supplementing Mandatory Disclosures

Parties making mandatory disclosures have a duty to supplement them on learning that the information disclosed is incomplete or incorrect, and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the discovery process or in writing. n1

A party that without substantial justification fails to disclose or supplement information required by Rule 26(a), is not, unless such failure is harmless, permitted to use as evidence at a trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness or information not so disclosed. n2 In addition to or in lieu of this sanction, the court, on motion and after affording an opportunity to be heard, may impose other appropriate sanctions. In addition to requiring payment of reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, these sanctions may include informing the jury of the failure to make the disclosure. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresSanctionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMisconduct

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c).

17 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.18

§ 9.18 Using Discovery Methods

When discovery is sought from a party, the process is governed by Rules 26 through 37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n1 Under the Federal Rules, parties may obtain discovery by one or more of the following methods:

- Depositions upon oral examination under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30
- Depositions upon written questions under Fed. R. Civ. P. 31
- Written interrogatories under Fed. R. Civ. P. 33
- Production of documents and things and entry upon land for inspection and other purposes under Fed. R. Civ. P. 34
- Physical and mental examinations of persons under Fed. R. Civ. P. 35
- Requests for admission under Fed. R. Civ. P. 36

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsMental & Physical ExaminationsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsWritten Depositions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Etienne v. Oyake, 347 F. Supp. 2d 215, 220-221 (D.V.I. 2004) .

18 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.19

§ 9.19 Considering Evidentiary Privileges in the Discovery Context

Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1) recognizes that the duty of disclosure and theopportunity to discover information is limited to information that is not privileged. This language refers to common-law evidentiary privileges n1

When a party withholds information otherwise discoverable by claiming that it is privileged, the party must make the claim expressly and shall describe the nature of the privileged material in a manner that, without revealing privileged information, will enable opposing parties to assess the applicability of the privilege. n2

If information that has been produced in discovery is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material, the party making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified, a party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has and may not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved. A receiving party may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a determination of the claim. If the receiving party disclosed the information before being notified, it must take reasonable steps to retrieve it. The producing party must preserve the information until the claim is resolved. n2.1

The evidentiary privileges most frequently encountered in the context of disclosure and discovery are the attorney-client privilege and attorney work product privilege. However, other federal statutory privileges may be asserted. n3

For further discussion of the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine in the context of discovery, see Ch. 10, Planning and Preparation for Discovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersAttorney-Client PrivilegeCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral OverviewEvidencePrivilegesGovernment PrivilegesProcedures to Claim PrivilegesEvidencePrivilegesGovernment PrivilegesState Secrets Privilege

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. Reynolds, 345 U.S. 1, 6, 73 S.Ct. 528, 97 L. Ed. 727 (1953) (federal common-law evidentiary privilege for military and state secrets).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B).

(n4)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Pierce County v. Guillen, 537 U.S. 129, 142 ; 123 S. Ct. 720, 154 L. Ed. 2d 610 (2003) (federal statutory privilege under 23 U.S.C. § 409 for reports compiled or collected for purposes of the Federal Hazard Elimination Program).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 The Purposes of Discovery
B. Evaluating Disclosure Requirements and Discovery Methods

2-9 Federal Litigation Guide § 9.20

§ 9.20 Evaluating the Advantages of Available Discovery Methods

[1] Evaluating the Advantages of Taking Depositions Under Rule 30

Although depositions are considerably more expensive than other methods of discovery, depositions are often the most effective discovery tool for the following reasons:

- Depositions provide an opportunity to evaluate potential parties and witnesses
- Depositions allow for discovery of nonparty witnesses
- Deposition testimony may be used by an adverse party for any reason at trial, even if the party is present and testifies
- Deposition testimony provides the most effective means to impeach testimony at trial
- Deposition testimony may be used in susequent actions
- Deposition testimony may be used at trial if a witness has died or is otherwise unavailable

[2] Evaluating the Advantages of Propounding Interrogatories Under Rule 33

Interrogatories may only be served on parties to the action and only 25 interrogatories may be propounded, absent court order or stipulation. n1 Although the importance of interrogatories has arguably declined with the advent of mandatory intial disclosures under Rule 26(a)(1), interrogatories have the following advantages:

- Propounding interrogatories is generally inexpensive and takes little time
- Interrogatory answers may be used to ascertain the existence of relevant documents and key witnesses
- Interrogatory answers may be concisely introduced at trial

- Interrogatories may require opposing counsel to supply information or legal contentions unknown by the parties

- Interrogatories may be used to seek "all available" information from an opposing party

[3] Evaluating the Advantages of Requests for Documents and Things and Entry Upon Land for Inspection Under Rule 34

Inspection demands are a critical discovery method that offer the following advantages:

- There is no limit on the number of demands that may be made

- Responses provide the opportunity to review documents and physical evidence prior to taking depositions

- The demand for inspection allows for access to land or other property

- The method allows for photographing, testing, and sampling

- Requests may specify the form or forms in which electronically stored information is to be produced

[4] Evaluating the Advantages of Requests for Admission Under Rule 36

Requests for admission are effective for the following reasons:

- There is no limit on the number of requests that may be made

- If a party does not file a timely response to one or more requests for admission, the matters are deemed admitted

- Once a matter is admitted, it is conclusively established for the purposes of the action, unless withdrawn or amended by permission of the court

[5] Evaluating the Advantages of Physical and Mental Examinations Under Rule 35

The use of physical and mental examinations under Fed. R. Civ. P. 35 may be used only when the physical or mental condition of a party or a person in the legal custody or under the legal control of a party is in controversy. An order of examination must be sought on motion for good cause shown. Physical and mental examinations provide the following advantages:

- Physical and mental examinations document the physical or mental condition at a specific time before trial

- Physical and mental examinations may be used for expert consultation and testimony

- Physical and mental examinations allow for a broader scope of inquiry than depositions

- Physical or mental examinations may provide an opportunity to obtain privileged medical reports

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsMental & Physical ExaminationsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

20 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide 10.syn

§ 10.syn Synopsis to Chapter 10: Planning and Preparation for Discovery

§ 10.01 Understanding the Importance of Planning for Discovery

§ 10.02 Establishing a Discovery Plan at the Onset of Litigation

§ 10.03 Conducting Legal Research to Create Discovery Plan

§ 10.04 Conducting Client Interviews to Establish the Basic Facts
[1] Setting Up the Interview
[2] Meeting With the Client to Prepare Pleadings
[3] Eliciting Necessary Facts Through the Client Interview
[4] Limiting Note Taking By Client During Interview
[5] Establishing List of Potential Witnesses Through Initial Interviews
[6] Preparing the Client for Future Discovery During the Initial Interview

§ 10.05 Reviewing Relevant Documents in the Client's Possession, Custody, or Control
[1] Preparing for Mandatory Initial Disclosure of Documents Under Rule 26(a)
[2] Developing an Understanding of the Key Facts Underlying the Case Theory
[3] Evaluating Client Expectations
[4] Preparing for Depositions
[5] Conducting "Reasonable Inquiry" for Discovery

§§ 10.06 through 10.09 [Reserved]

§ 10.10 Understanding the Value of Early Investigation of the Case

§ 10.11 Gathering Evidence on an Informal Basis

§ 10.12 Investigating Personal Injury Actions

§ 10.13 Conducting Site Investigations

§ 10.14 Inspecting Medical and Hospital Records at the Treating Facility

§ 10.15 Reviewing Public or Other Accessible Records

§ 10.16 Interviewing Witnesses
[1] Conducting Witness Interviews as Soon as Possible
[2] Determining Who to Interview

§ 10.17 Arranging Witness Interviews

§ 10.18 Taping Witness Interviews

§ 10.19 Interviewing Difficult Witnesses

§ 10.20 Obtaining Witness Statements

§ 10.21 Searching For Witnesses

§ 10.22 Using Investigators and Other Technical Consultants
[1] Evaluating Types of Cases Where Investigators and Technical Consultants May Be Useful
[2] Ensuring Ethical Behavior of Investigators
[3] Evaluating the Effective Use of Investigators

§ 10.23 Protecting the Results of "Informal" Discovery Through the Attorney-Client Privilege
[1] Protecting Communications Regarding Legal Advice
[2] Evaluating the Attorney-Client Privilege in the Corporate Setting
[3] Understanding the Limits of the Attorney-Client Privilege
[4] Waiving the Attorney-Client Privilege
[5] Limitations on Waiver of Attorney-Client Privilege

§ 10.24 Protecting the Results of "Informal" Discovery Through the Work Product Doctrine
[1] Protecting Documents and Things Prepared in Anticipation of Litigation or Trial
[2] Understanding the Scope of Work Product Doctrine
[3] Protecting Attorney's Thoughts, Mental Processes, Strategy, and Opinions
[4] Protecting Tape Recorded Conversations
[5] Preparing Material in Preparation of Litigation or Trial is Critical
[6] Waiving Work Product Protection
[7] Limitations on Waiver of Work-Product Protection
[8] Protecting Drafts and Communications of Expert Witnesses

§§ 10.25 through 10.29 [Reserved]

§ 10.30 Making Initial Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(1) Before Participating in Formal Discovery

§ 10.31 Conference to Discuss Case and Possible Settlement Before Beginning Formal Discovery

§ 10.32 Understanding the Scope and Limits of Discovery
[1] Obtaining Discoverable Information
[2] Limiting the Scope of Discovery

§ 10.33 Stipulating Around the Limitations of Discovery

§ 10.34 Certifying Discovery Requests and Responses

§ 10.35 Filing of Discovery

§ 10.36 Supplementing Discovery Responses

§ 10.37 Seeking Protective Orders to Preclude Abusive Discovery

§ 10.38 Evaluating the Sequence in Which Available Discovery Procedures Should Be Used

§ 10.39 Evaluating the Potential Cost of Discovery

§ 10.40 Taking Depositions Under Rule 30
[1] Using Depositions to Evaluate Witnesses and to Preserve Testimony
[2] Determining When Depositions May Be Taken
[3] Videotaping Depositions

§ 10.41 Propounding Interrogatories Under Rule 33
[1] Seeking Information From Other Parties
[2] Obtaining Basic Information Regarding the Parties and Evidence

§ 10.42 Inspecting Documents and Property Under Rule 34
[1] Obtaining Disclosure and Demanding Inspection of Documents and Property
[2] Responding to Inspection Demands

§ 10.43 Conducting Physical and Mental Examinations Under Rule 35
[1] Seeking Physical or Mental Examinations
[2] Providing the Examiner's Report to the Examined Party

§ 10.44 Making Requests for Admission Under Rule 36

§ 10.45 Evaluating the Conventional Discovery Approach
[1] Serving Interrogatories and Requesting Documents Before Conducting Depositions
[2] Evaluating the Advantages of Taking Depositions After Reviewing Documents
[3] Considering Exceptions to the Conventional Discovery Approach

§ 10.46 Determining The Sequence of Depositions

21 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter deals with planning and preparation for discovery and includes discussion of the following pre-discovery considerations:

- Conducting research and developing the theory of the case prior to establishing a discovery plan
- Preparing a preliminary trial outline to aid in discovery
- Interviewing clients and reviewing client documents in preparation of discovery

The chapter also covers various forms and techniques of "informal" discovery including the following:

- Interviewing third parties and obtaining witness statements
- Reviewing public records
- Conducting site inspections

In addition, the chapter discusses the protection of informal discovery through the attorney-client privilege and the attorney work product doctrine.

The chapter also covers pre-discovery conferences and other pre-discovery requirements. An overview of the scope and limitations of discovery in general and the various discovery methods in particular is also provided. The chapter concludes with a discussion of factors that may be considered in selecting the most appropriate discovery methods for a particular case.

22 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
A. Implementing a Discovery Plan

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.01

§ 10.01 Understanding the Importance of Planning for Discovery

Planning for discovery begins with an understanding of the issues in the case. Otherwise, it is impossible to know what information must be obtained to prove a case or defense at trial. Before a complaint is filed, the plaintiff's lawyer must attempt to identify the key issues and facts underlying the case. The duty of prefiling investigation imposed by Rule 11 n1 requires diligent inquiry before the lawsuit begins. The same duty applies to defense counsel before filing an answer or any pre-answer motions.

The effort to conduct discovery with continuing reference to the issues and the facts necessary to prove or disprove them is beneficial for a number of reasons:

- It permits discovery to be conducted with a clear purpose, saving both time and money
- It makes the most of limited discovery--limited by the press of time, the strictures of the court, or cost constraints
- It assures that discovery will be completed well in advance of trial

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

23 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
A. Implementing a Discovery Plan

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.02

§ 10.02 Establishing a Discovery Plan at the Onset of Litigation

A litigation plan, including a discovery plan, should be established at the earliest possible time and updated periodically as the litigation progresses. In view of the obvious importance of discovery, careful planning is crucial. Discovery methods should not be used merely because they are available. Rather, discovery methods should be used for specified reasons and with clear objectives in mind. A comprehensive discovery plan will serve as the ultimate roadmap of what needs to be established or accomplished at trial.

In most cases the parties must, as soon as practicable and in any event at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), confer to consider, among other issues, a detailed discovery plan. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

24 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
A. Implementing a Discovery Plan

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.03

§ 10.03 Conducting Legal Research to Create Discovery Plan

The first step in creating a discovery plan is to conduct legal research and to review relevant jury instructions to determine:

- Elements of the claims and defenses
- Fact patterns supporting liability or that may be used as a defense
- Types of damages recoverable

Because the extent of discovery undertaken is likely to hinge on the value of the case, it may also be useful to research jury verdicts for similar cases in the district where the case is filed. Services that publish jury verdict information generally provide settlement information for various types of cases that have recently settled, which may even be more useful than jury verdicts.

Once the basic research has been completed, a list of the facts needed to successfully prosecute or to defend the action may be generated. The process of establishing requisite facts often begins with information in the custody or control of the client or others with whom informal access may be sought.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

25 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
A. Implementing a Discovery Plan

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.04

§ 10.04 Conducting Client Interviews to Establish the Basic Facts

[1] Setting Up the Interview

Client interviews are a critical component of discovery planning. In most circumstances, the disputants are apprized of the factual background, potential witnesses, and key documents that will serve as the core of the overall discovery plan.

If possible, contact the person to be interviewed in advance of the interview. Advance notice will make the interview more efficient and may eliminate the need for follow-up interviews. During that initial contact, give a general summary of the nature of the action and mention the matters to be covered in the interview. To the extent possible, identify the significant disputed issues in the suit, in particular, those on which the interviewee is expected to shed some light. This will help the interviewee to recollect pertinent information and to begin collecting the documents or evidence that otherwise would have to be located after the interview.

[2] Meeting With the Client to Prepare Pleadings

Whether representing a plaintiff or a defendant, development of the facts of a case will likely begin with an interview with the client, the client's survivor, or (in the case of an organization) with knowledgeable members of the organization. When representing the plaintiff, this interview will be a necessary prelude to the preparation of the complaint. When representing a defendant, the complaint should be promptly reviewed with the client in order to become familiar with the underlying facts and to prepare an answer or pre-answer motion. During the initial meeting with the client, it is critical to begin formulating a discovery plan to assure evidentiary support of the allegations in the pleadings.

[3] Eliciting Necessary Facts Through the Client Interview

The typical course of eliciting facts from one's own client resembles in many respects the subsequent conduct of discovery from the adversary. Difficulty may be encountered in assembling a body of facts that are sufficiently particular, and sufficiently well founded, to constitute potential evidence. Even a cooperative individual may have to be prodded in his or her recollection, and will in many instances have to be refreshed with documents. In the course of client interviews, it generally is helpful to use any pleadings on file and all relevant documents to structure the interview.

[4] Limiting Note Taking By Client During Interview

There is no reason for the client or any employees to take notes or make memoranda about the substance of attorney-client interviews. At most, they need to keep track of the kinds of documents to search for after the interview. Even if the client takes notes during attorney-client meetings, the notes may be protected from discovery as work product that reflects the opinions and theories of counsel. While the client should be careful to keep interview notes confidential, it has been held that inadvertent disclosure of such notes will not necessarily waive the workproduct protection afforded by Rule 26(b)(3). n1

[5] Establishing List of Potential Witnesses Through Initial Interviews

The initial interviewing and fact-collecting process is the first step in establishing who should be deposed, who should be asked to give written statements, and who should be subjected to only informal discovery. In the early stages of the interviewing process it is critical to learn the names of people likely to have first-hand knowledge of the events giving rise to the lawsuit, and the location and nature of documents which bear on the issues. This information can be used to prepare a list of potential deponents, which may be refined through the use of interrogatories and document requests.

[6] Preparing the Client for Future Discovery During the Initial Interview

During the course of interviews with the client or the client's agents, it is important to begin to lay the groundwork for later preparation of those individuals for future discovery, including their own depositions. To the extent that the themes of the case have been identified, the client can be informed about questions they may be expected to answer and documents they may be expected to produce.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In Bush Dev. Corp. v. Harbour Place Assoc., 632 F. Supp. 1359 (E.D. Va. 1986) , plaintiff inadvertently gave defendant a copy of an annotated draft of the complaint. The draft complaint had marginal notes made by plaintiff's vice president during an interview with plaintiff's attorney. During the interview, the attorney had advised the vice president of his opinion as to the likelihood of success in court and the consequences if plaintiff did not prevail. The court found that since the notes contained the mental impressions of counsel, they were subject to the nearly absolute protection from discovery afforded by Rule 26(b)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
A. Implementing a Discovery Plan

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.05

§ 10.05 Reviewing Relevant Documents in the Client's Possession, Custody, or Control

[1] Preparing for Mandatory Initial Disclosure of Documents Under Rule 26(a)

An early evaluation of the client's documents and electronically stored information is an essential component of planning for discovery. In applicable cases, even before any formal discovery demands are made, the parties are required to exchange documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment. n1

For complete discussion of mandatory disclosure under Rule 26(a), see Ch. 10, Purposes of Discovery.

[2] Developing an Understanding of the Key Facts Underlying the Case Theory

An early review of the client's documents provides a critical opportunity to begin developing the theory of the case, which in turn facilitates efficient use of discovery. Document review supports the development of a coherent narrative which will later be substantiated with evidence.

A thorough review of the client's documents and files may even suggest additional theories of liability or potential defenses to develop in the course of discovery. While it may be true that the documents that are most damaging to a case are often those in the client's files, often some of the most helpful documents are also in the client's control.

[3] Evaluating Client Expectations

A review of the client's documents will also provide a cross-check on the client's perspective of the case. While the job of an advocate is to put the best light possible on the facts at hand, lawyers in the early stages of a case sometimes may find themselves misled by their client's accounts of the facts. Although client reactions to involvement in litigation vary widely, there is often a tendency to overstate the strength of one's own position. While the process of lowering the client's expectations is delicate, seeking explanations of apparent inconsistencies between the documentary record and the client's version of events affords one way to approach the job.

[4] Preparing for Depositions

Reviewing the client's files helps to identify the principal actors in the events leading to the lawsuit, and thus to develop a list of potential persons to be interviewed or deposed.

Additionally, reviewing documents in the possession, custody, or control of the client may ultimately help to prepare the client to be deposed by an adversary. The client should not see a damaging document for the first time at the deposition.

[5] Conducting "Reasonable Inquiry" for Discovery

Rule 26(g) imposes a duty of "reasonable inquiry" on the attorney and the client with respect to discovery. Breach of this duty can result in the imposition of substantial sanctions.

An early review of the client's documents will save time when the adverse party serves a document request under Rule 34. Some lawyers, acting on the assumption that the contents of their client's files typically will do their case more harm than good, prefer to let the client search for responsive documents in the expectation that the job may be done less rigorously. However, as noted above, the duty of "reasonable inquiry" requires a diligent search by the client when responding to a document request from an adversary. n2

While there are certainly circumstances in which counsel may consider refraining from examining a client's relevant files, this should be a carefully considered decision. While lawyers are under a duty to maximize the client's resources and avoid wasteful expenditures, the practice of defensive law suggests that it is better to fully prepare by reviewing all the files rather than risk a later claim of malpractice stemming from the failure to do so.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. The "reasonable inquiry" duty mandated by Rule 11, which applies to signed pleadings, has been specifically extended to responses to discovery under Rule 26(g) as well. Failure to diligently search for responsive documents, whether by the attorney or the client, can result in substantial sanctions. Thomas v. Capital Sec. Servs., 836 F.2d 866 (5th Cir. 1988) ; Jennings v. Joshua Indep. School Dist., 948 F.2d 194 (5th Cir. 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
A. Implementing a Discovery Plan

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 10.06 through 10.09

[Reserved]

§§ 10.06[Reserved]

28 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.10

§ 10.10 Understanding the Value of Early Investigation of the Case

Delay in investigating a case will often mean that some evidence will disappear and that the value or content of other evidence will be diminished. Recollections fade over time and documents are mislaid or destroyed. The physical condition of an injured or mentally disturbed party will inevitably change. Physical evidence will disappear: skid marks on a highway will be worn away by use and weather; a faulty machine will be repaired; a dangerous stairway will be replaced.

The early investigation of facts will enable proper planning for the case, including an outline for formal discovery, at the earliest possible time. The early compilation of potential evidence helps in the preparation of factual investigation and legal research.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.11

§ 10.11 Gathering Evidence on an Informal Basis

If the circumstances of the case do not require early or aggressive formal discovery, and the client's knowledge of the case has been exhausted, it may be advantageous to gather as much evidence or information concerning the case as possible from independent, or third-party, sources in ways that do not require use of formal discovery methods. This is true for the following reasons:

- Formal discovery is almost always more time-consuming and more expensive than informal investigation
- Formal discovery involves disclosure of the matters discovered to opposing counsel
- Formal discovery often involves disclosure of theories of the case

Of course, it is unlikely that all these benefits or objectives of informal discovery will be achieved or preserved to the time of trial. Although opposing counsel will undoubtedly discover what is found through informal investigation, the temporary advantage of knowing more about a case than one's adversary knows, and the luxury of being able to evaluate and refine the legal and factual theories before witnesses, documents, and contentions are disclosed, will almost always be significant.

The informal investigation of the case should be made as early as possible, in some cases within days of the events which gave rise to the controversy. Plaintiff's counsel will often begin this investigation before filing a lawsuit. A defense attorney may get a similar chance at prefiling investigation if the client notifies the attorney that a lawsuit is threatened or expected.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.12

§ 10.12 Investigating Personal Injury Actions

Informal investigation of the facts is particularly important in personal injury cases. The accident itself generally will have happened abruptly. The recollections of witnesses and participants will be fleeting and often colored by the trauma of the event. Even investigating officers have the memory of a particular incident more firmly in their mind if they are asked about it shortly after their involvement. If they have investigated another 100 accidents since the one at issue, the chances are that details which may not have been in the writtenreport will have faded from their memories. Unlike a commercial case which is more likely based primarily on documents, the investigation of a personal injury case is more likely to require on-site inspection and more interviews with witnesses who are not connected to the parties.

Personal injury cases will often call for early investigation of one or more (and frequently all) of the following subjects:

- The accident scene
- Other relevant physical objects, such as equipment
- Medical and hospital records

The investigation should include:

- A visit to the scene as soon as possible
- If the client is available, he or she should be "walked through" the accident
- The client's and other witnesses' versions of the accident should be critically examined at the scene
- Photographs of evidentiary quality should almost always be taken by a professional or expert photographer
- The accident scene should be measured, diagramed, or surveyed
- The accident scene and its vicinity should be investigated for the availability of witnesses who have not yet come forward

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.13

§ 10.13 Conducting Site Investigations

Investigating the site where the events underlying a lawsuit occurred may be a critical part of early informal investigation. Faulty structures or equipment will normally be corrected or repaired within a few days or weeks of the accident. Evidence, including photographs, of their condition at the time of the accident will be important and should be obtained promptly. In addition, it may be necessary to conduct follow-up inspections after any subsequent repairs to learn the nature of the repair. Investigation about the cost and nature of the repair may suggest what a reasonable owner or landlord should have done before the accident.

Where cause and origin is in issue (e.g., an insurance claim where arson or fraud is raised as a defense, or a negligence case where the fault of the defendant in causing the fire or explosion is in dispute), a determination of cause and origin must be made promptly, because physical evidence may disappear with the passage of time and the condition of the premises may change. An inspection of this nature must be done by an expert. Few lawyers would be qualified to identify the cause of a fire or other physical event. Even if they were qualified, they would not be permitted to testify as an expert witness under the ethical rules forbidding a lawyer to be a witness.

Land does not disappear; therefore, at least in theory, land or other property involved in a case can be inspected and photographed at any time prior to trial. However, depending on the circumstances, buildings may be destroyed or the condition of the land altered mechanically or by the passage of time or the effects of major storms. Accordingly, it is critical to quickly obtain photographs or other evidence that will show the property in its true, or original, condition.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevance

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.14

§ 10.14 Inspecting Medical and Hospital Records at the Treating Facility

In any case where plaintiff's medical treatment is in issue, prompt investigation of the original medical records by plaintiff's counsel is essential. Review of the original record, either before or during litigation, may be critical because writings which appear to be in the same ink on a copy, may actually have been made in different colors on the original, thereby indicating that they were made at different times. Records often have marginal notes made after a copy has been sent to the patient or an attorney. Discharge summaries often contain damaging comments about the treatment.

A motion to preserve medical evidence may be necessary if the evidence is not routinely maintained for a long period of time. Some records and test results (e.g., videotapes of vascular or cardiac surgery) are kept only for a short time. Also, when requesting access to or copies of medical or hospital records, great specificity should be used. Many hospitals consider certain records as "outpatient records" (e.g., emergency room records) or not part of the hospital record at all (e.g., pathology slides, EKG monitor tapes, billing statements, the folders in which records are kept, etc.).

Another valuable record is a list of all hospital personnel, including nurses and volunteers, who were involved in the patient's care or assigned to the ward or unit where the patient was treated. Even if their names do not appear on the chart, they may be familiar with the care received or may have witnessed treatment. In summary, every conceivable document or thing which might shed light on the plaintiff's treatment or condition should be requested and reviewed at the treating facility.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.15

§ 10.15 Reviewing Public or Other Accessible Records

In commercial cases, a variety of public records, such as SEC or similar filings, can be obtained directly from the public body, without resort to formal discovery procedures. The same is true of a wide variety of documents potentially relevant in other types of cases:

- Agency Filings. County, state, and federal agencies often have critical information that is public in nature. For instance, the county recorder has records regarding property ownership; the Secretary of State has records regarding the structure and ownership of corporations; and the federal Patent and Trademark Office has patent and trademark filings available to the public. Agency websites and internet services specializing in public records may be used to expedite searches of public information.

- Court Records. Court records will identify pending and past litigation involving the adverse party, which may indicate similar lawsuits and those records may speed up your work in investigating the current case.

- Police Reports. Police reports will contain a near contemporaneous reconstruction of an accident or other events, the names and addresses of witnesses and, usually, a written account or accounts of the accident either as given by different witnesses or as interpreted by the police officer.

- Fire Department Reports. Fire department reports will contain information similar to that found in police reports but, in addition, will usually contain at least a preliminary assessment of the cause and place of origin of the fire as well as the number of points of origin.

- Transportation Authority Reports. Accidents involving public carriers (buses, trains and aircraft) will normally be investigated by a public transportation authority in addition to police departments, and the records of such investigations will often be available without the necessity of a subpoena.

- Weather Reports. Weather reports and records may provide significant information.

- Certain Hospital Reports. Hospital records will not normally be released without the consent of the patient and thus will usually require resort to formal discovery measures. However, some types of information available from hospitals are deemed "public" and might provide information concerning the fact, time, or duration of a patient's admission or treatment at the hospital or in its emergency ward.

- Newspaper and Television News Accounts. Newspaper accounts of pertinent events will often include the names of potential witnesses, as well as first- or second-hand accounts of the event itself. Local television stations will often have, and allow access to, videotape of news coverage of local events.

- Consumer Reports. Industry associations or consumer watchdog groups frequently collect reports which are not otherwise cataloged, as well as serving as a nationwide clipping service for companies or issues which they follow.

- Trial Attorney Association Reports. Local, state, and national trial attorney associations organize data about particular products or companies, in addition to specific doctors or expert witnesses.

This list is clearly not exhaustive. The realm of publicly available information which may be helpful will depend on the nature and facts of the particular case. Freedom of Information Act requests and similar state laws may be used to obtain publicly available information.

Locating public records is extremely valuable since the information in them is generally admissible as evidence-in-chief. n1 Thus, these informal discovery devices can lead to evidence which can, in and of itself, be used to prove or disprove a key issue at trial. You must expect that your adversary will be as thorough in his or her preparation as you have been and will find this information as well. Thus, if these public records are harmful to the case, you must be prepared, in advance, to address them at trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevance

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The Supreme Court has resolved any dispute that may have existed concerning the use of public records. Public records are admissible at trial, even if they contain opinions or conclusions, so long as those opinions or conclusions are based on a factual investigation. Beech Aircraft Corp. v. Rainey, 488 U.S. 153, 109 S. Ct. 439, 102 L. Ed. 2d 445 (1988) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.16

§ 10.16 Interviewing Witnesses

[1] Conducting Witness Interviews as Soon as Possible

Direct interviews with anyone not represented by counsel who might possess information concerning events involved in the case should always be contemplated in advance of formal discovery. Witness interviews generally should be conducted as soon as possible. Few individuals have either photographic memories or the capacity for total recall. Most people tend to forget unimportant events, especially those that do not involve themselves, and also to compress their recollection of important events. This is especially true of sudden or sensational physical events, which, after being reviewed in both recollection and conversation, are reduced or synthesized to the point where the more traumatic elements of the incident are preserved and peripheral details are lost.

[2] Determining Who to Interview

From the standpoint of case development, "witnesses" who can or should be interviewed are, of course, not limited to eyewitnesses, but include individuals or entities who have obtained second- or even third-hand information concerning relevant events.

For instance, newspaper reporters are often a fertile source for second-hand information. They will invariably have collected more names or facts than they included in their report of the event, and the articles which they submitted to their editor may have been substantially edited prior to publication. Newspaper reporters are usually very cooperative. Reporters deal in factual information and appreciate its importance and may even keep apprized of evolving facts in the hopes of writing a follow-up story.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.17

§ 10.17 Arranging Witness Interviews

The best way to conduct a witness interview will depend on a variety of considerations, including:

- The personality of the witness
- The age of the witness
- The physical or mental condition of the witness
- Possible bias of the witness
- The relationship of the witness to the parties and facts in the case

For obvious reasons, the time and place of the interview should suit the convenience of the witness. At the same time, the interview should be conducted at a time, and in surroundings, where the witness can tell, and if necessary, reflect on, his or her entire story. Oftentimes, a neutral meeting place, free of interruption, allows for the most productive interview.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.18

§ 10.18 Taping Witness Interviews

If the witness does not object, tape the interview. If the witness does object, offer a copy of the tape. If the witness still objects, forego the taping, but try to get an immediate written statement since this witness may be more likely to change his or her story later. Never tape an interview surreptitiously. Even though it is not illegal to record a conversation to which you are a party, it may be unethical to do so.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.19

§ 10.19 Interviewing Difficult Witnesses

Special consideration should be given to the witness who is reluctant or adverse. The reasons for reluctance or adversity can range from a feeling of not wanting to get involved at one extreme to outright antagonism (or strong sympathy for the adverse party) at the other. In some situations, the witness may already have talked to the adversary's lawyer, who may have urged or instructed the witness not to talk to anyone else. It may be helpful to ask at the beginning of the interview whether anyone has informed the witness not to cooperate. If the other side has interfered, contact them and suggest that it would be better for both sides to make their witnesses freely available for informal interviews. If they do not agree, you can give the same advice about interviews with opposing counsel or insurance adjusters to those witnesses friendly to you.

The possible solutions to witness reluctance or antagonism cover a wide range. If the witness has no particular view of the case but simply does not want to be inconvenienced, it may help to appeal to the witness's sense of civic duty to provide important information. Ask the witness, for example, to imagine how he or she would feel if they were involved in an accident and some third party was reluctant to provide important information. It is certainly permissible, and usually effective, to tell the witness that, if he or she is not willing to discuss the case informally, a deposition will be necessary.

If the witness is antagonistic, point out that you don't want to change the witness's story, but simply to understand it. You may also point out that the fact that the case or dispute has not been settled does not mean that it will not be settled; that, indeed, a settlement is not likely to be reached until both sides know all of the facts; and that, once again, you are only trying to learn what the witness has to say. Aconcern that one party will be ruined by having to pay damages may be alleviated by telling the witness that the party has insurance and will not have to pay money out of its own pocket. The following techniques may be helpful when interviewing antagonistic witnesses:

- Critically question the witness's story on the basis of known or likely facts
- Suggest different interpretations of ambiguous events
- Suggest, or argue limitations on, the witness's ability to know or to have seen the facts or events in question

- Attack the witness's bias if one appears to exist
- Urge the witness to view the events as an impartial observer

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.20

§ 10.20 Obtaining Witness Statements

Generally, in accident or similar cases, if the witness is worth interviewing and has knowledge of significant facts, it is important to obtain a witness statement. If there is any reasonable chance that the witness might change his or her story under the pressure of the adversarial process, it is even more important to obtain a statement.

Two problems are typically presented in connection with obtaining a witness statement. The first is whether the statement should be prepared during the interview or whether it should be prepared later and then submitted to the witness for review. The factors most likely to determine this question are:

- Whether the witness's story is simple or complex

- Whether there is any material risk that the witness will change the story (or grow reluctant to review or sign the statement) in the few days required to prepare the statement

The second problem commonly encountered is whether the witness should be asked to sign the statement. If the statement is worth getting, it is worth having it signed. When the statement is written on the spot, it should be read to or by the witness, who should be asked to sign or initial each page. Any corrections which are made should also be initialed by the witness. If the witness, after speaking with the other side, is persuaded to change his or her story, this will obviate a later claim that the statement was not read or understood by him and is not true.

A third, and relatively unimportant question is whether the statement should be written in the first person or the third person. Views on this issue vary, but in general it would seem that a short statement, prepared by counsel and signed by the witness "on the spot" is best written in the first person, while a longer, more complex statement prepared by counsel is best written in the third person. When jurors hear the statement, or part of it, read in court, they will think that a shorter statement in the first person is more credible. They will naturally assume that a longer statement was drafted by someone other than the witness and then signed.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.21

§ 10.21 Searching For Witnesses

Sometimes, third-party witnesses cannot be located or will not be forthcoming. Once again, the "I don't want to get involved" syndrome is typically at work. Under such circumstances, an active search for witnesses may be necessary. This might be done by door-to-door inquiry; it is sometimes done through newspaper advertisements or television appeals; it may even be effectively done by posting printed material in prominent locations near the scene of an accident.

Once the identities of witnesses are determined, it may be necessary to determine their whereabouts. Internet search sites or other publicly available computerized databases, as well as private investigators, may be used to locate hard-to-find witnesses.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.22

§ 10.22 Using Investigators and Other Technical Consultants

[1] Evaluating Types of Cases Where Investigators and Technical Consultants May Be Useful

Private investigators and other technical consultants (fingerprint, handwriting, questioned-document, or similar experts) may be of use in a variety of situations, from the mundane "witness search" to cases involving, for example:

- Forgeries
- Employee theft
- Misuse of customer lists and trade secrets
- Private, commercial and public fraud
- Kickbacks
- Feigned injuries and disabilities
- Missing persons
- Commercial or industrial "espionage" (e.g., wire-tapping and other bugging)
- Explosions
- Fires, including arson

In hiring and using handwriting, fingerprint, document-analysis and similar experts, the primary concern will be to engage a competent professional who can be an effective witness.

[2] Ensuring Ethical Behavior of Investigators

Of paramount importance is the risk that a private investigator will use improper or illegal methods of investigation.

These methods include, but are by no means limited to, entrapment, illegal wiretapping, or the use of force or other coercion to obtain statements or confessions. Any engagement letter to the private investigator should state in no uncertain terms that the use of any illegal or unethical means of conducting the investigation is forbidden.

It is possible that a party's use of an investigator will not be discovered by the adversary and will not be made known to the court or the jury. Among other possibilities, the investigator's work may be protected by the work product privilege. However, if the purpose of the investigator's work is to generate trial evidence, and if that work is successful, the manner in which the evidence was obtained will almost certainly become known. No matter how small the chance that your adversary will learn of the investigator and his or her work, the consequences of that possibility should be carefully evaluated.

[3] Evaluating the Effective Use of Investigators

Counsel should carefully consider the pros and cons of using investigators to develop a case. The use of a private investigator to follow, observe and photograph "lapses" on the part of a plaintiff feigning a permanent disability is common practice and is clearly within ethical guidelines. It might, however, be viewed by some jurors as unfair. Where, however, photographs or videotapes show an allegedly disabled plaintiff engaging in vigorous physical activity (e.g., where the witness has been videotaped playing baseball or changing a tire, or photographed atop a ladder painting a house), the jury is more likely to be offended by plaintiff's bogus contentions than by the intrusiveness of the investigator's surveillance.

On the other hand, the use of a private detective to develop "background information" on the plaintiff in a libel case, particularly if the information sought is unrelated to the subject matter of the defamatory statement, is likely to be viewed by the jury as fundamentally unfair. Generally, "digging up dirt" concerning a party or witness on subjects clearly unrelated to the merits of the case will be viewed as improper by most judges and jurors.

In general, private investigations are more likely to be viewed as improper when:

- The relevance of their work strays from the merits of the case
- The investigator's activities encroach on traditional concepts of privacy

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.23

§ 10.23 Protecting the Results of "Informal" Discovery Through the Attorney-Client Privilege

[1] Protecting Communications Regarding Legal Advice

Federal law recognizes an attorney-client privilege that protects from formal discovery communications from a client to an attorney for the purpose of obtaining legal advice, provided the communications were intended to be confidential. n1 Such communications include client interviews, including those conducted in preparation of formal discovery. The burden is on the party asserting the attorney-client privilege to demonstrate its applicability. n2

The attorney-client privilege extends to initial interviews and consultations between attorneys and their prospective clients, even if the attorney decides not to take the case, or the client decides not to retain the attorney. n3

[2] Evaluating the Attorney-Client Privilege in the Corporate Setting

Corporate in-house counsel are treated in the same manner as counsel retained from the outside. n4 However, a company may not shield itself from formal discovery simply by filtering business information through staff counsel. To be entitled to the protection of the attorney-client privilege, a corporate lawyer must not only be functioning as a lawyer, but the advice given must be predominantly legal, as opposed to business, in nature. n5

Five criteria are used to determine whether Upjohn protects particular communications by corporate employees to the lawyer for the company:

- The communication is one that would not have been made except for the rendering of legal services;
- The content of the communication must relate to the subject matter of the legal services;
- The statement must be made by an employee, agent, or independent contractor with a significant relationship to both the corporation and its involvement in the subject matter of the legal services;
- The statement must be made in confidence; and
- The privilege must be asserted by either the corporation or the person who made the statement. n6

[3] Understanding the Limits of the Attorney-Client Privilege

A client may not push a document under the umbrella of privilege merely by turning it over to an attorney during the pre-discovery phase of litigation. n7 The underlying facts of an action are not protected by the attorney-client privilege. n8 The attorney-client privilege applies only to communications between the attorney and the client. It does not apply to correspondence from others that may be in the attorney's possession. n9 However, communications between a client and an agent of the attorney are privileged, provided they are intended to be confidential. n10

The attorney-client privilege applies to entries in a client's diary that describe communications from the attorney to the client or memorialize confidential communications made by the client to the attorney in furtherance of seeking legal advice. n11

[4] Waiving the Attorney-Client Privilege

The attorney-client privilege may be waived by the client either expressly, as when a client voluntarily turns over privileged documents, n12 or implicitly, as when the client places otherwise privileged matters in controversy. n13 Discussing the underlying facts of a privileged communication does not by itself waive the privilege. n14

If it is clear that the attorney-client privilege will be waived at trial, the court should permit pretrial discovery of the privileged communication. n15

[5] Limitations on Waiver of Attorney-Client Privilege

Any waiver is limited to actual material disclosed and does not extend to other material on the same subject, unless the disclosure is done intentionally to gain tactical advantage, in which case waiver would be extended to all related material. n16

When made in a federal proceeding, a disclosure does not operate as a waiver if: n17

- The disclosure is inadvertent
- The holder of the privilege or protection took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure; and
- The holder promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error, including (if applicable) following Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersAttorney-Client PrivilegeEvidencePrivilegesAttorney-Client PrivilegeGeneral OverviewEvidencePrivilegesAttorney-Client PrivilegeExceptionsEvidencePrivilegesAttorney-Client PrivilegeScopeLegal EthicsClient RelationsConfidentiality of Information

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(g); see also Montgomery v. Leftwich, Moore & Douglas, 161 F.R.D. 224, 226 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Savoy v. Richard A. Carrier Trucking, Inc., 178 F.R.D. 346, 351 (D. Mass. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Diversified Group, Inc. v. Daugerdas, 304 F. Supp. 2d 507, 513 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) ;

Montgomery v. Leftwich, Moore & Douglas, 161 F.R.D. 224, 225-226 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 389, 101 S. Ct. 677, 66 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See United States v. Rowe, 96 F.3d 1294, 1297 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Sexton, A Post-Upjohn Consideration of the Corporate Attorney-Client Privilege, 57 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 443 (1982).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Guzzino v. Felterman, 174 F.R.D. 59, 61 (W.D. La. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Simon v. G.D. Searle & Co., 816 F.2d 397, 403 (8th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 917 (1987) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Sobol v. E.P. Dutton, Inc., 112 F.R.D. 99, 102-103 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See United States v. Schwimmer, 892 F.2d 237, 244 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Alexander v. FBI, 186 F.R.D. 154, 161 (D.D.C. 1999) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See In re Sealed Case, 877 F.2d 976, 980 (D.C. Cir. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Conkling v. Turner, 883 F.2d 431, 434-435 (5th Cir. 1989) ; Sedillos v. Board of Educ. of Sch. Dist. No. 1, 313 F. Supp. 2d 1091, 1094 (D. Colo. 2004) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Charles Woods Television Corp. v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc., 869 F.2d 1155, 1162 (8th Cir.) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 848 (1989) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Handgards, Inc. v. Johnson & Johnson, 413 F. Supp. 926, 929 (N.D. Cal. 1976) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.24

§ 10.24 Protecting the Results of "Informal" Discovery Through the Work Product Doctrine

[1] Protecting Documents and Things Prepared in Anticipation of Litigation or Trial

Work-product protection means the protection that applicable law provides for tangible material (or its intangible equivalent) prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial.

The work product doctrine, as codified in Rule 26(b)(3), n1 provides that a party may not obtain discovery of documents or other tangible things prepared in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for another party or that other party's representative, unless the following conditions are met:

- The party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of his or her case, and

- The party is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means.

Moreover, in ordering discovery of such materials when the required showing has been made, the court must protect against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation. n2 The purpose of the work product doctrine is to protect an attorney's mental processes so that the attorney can analyze and prepare for the client's case without interference from an opponent. n3 The language of Rule 26(b)(3) attempts to strike a balance between the necessity of protecting an attorney's preparation under the adversary system, and the policy of full and open discovery underlying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n4

The party asserting work product protection has the burden of establishing that the doctrine applies. n5

[2] Understanding the Scope of Work Product Doctrine

By its own terms, the work product doctrine, as codified in Rule Rule 26(b)(3) n6 applies only to requests for production of documents and tangible things. However, because the doctrine is intended only to guard against divulging an attorney's strategies and legal impressions, it does not protect facts concerning the creation of work product, or facts contained within work product. n7 Likewise, facts are not protected from disclosure by virtue of having been gathered by an attorney. n8 Nevertheless, the courts do afford work product protection to documents in which an attorney collates or categorizes the facts. Thus, while the facts themselves are not privileged, a chart or other compilation of facts may be protected as work product. n9

There is no preset limitation on what constitutes a "document or tangible thing" within the meaning of the work product doctrine, provided the item was prepared in anticipation of litigation. Items that have been held within the protection include letters, n10 interview notes, n11 interview transcripts, n12 surveillance tapes, n13 and studies. n14

[3] Protecting Attorney's Thoughts, Mental Processes, Strategy, and Opinions

Although some cases have held that the work product doctrine protects only documentary evidence, n15 other courts have protected an attorney's thoughts, mental processes, strategy, and opinions from disclosure, regardless of the discovery method employed. In Hickman v. Taylor, n16 the case from which Rule 26(b)(3) is derived, the Supreme Court articulated the work product doctrine in terms that spanned the entire scope of discovery. Courts have continued to prevent parties from circumventing the work product doctrine by attempting to elicit an attorney's thought processes through depositions or interrogatories. n17

[4] Protecting Tape Recorded Conversations

A number of courts have ruled that tape recorded conversations may constitute work product material. n18 On the other hand, courts have ruled that unprofessional attorney conduct may constitute grounds to vitiate work product protection, and a number of courts have applied that rule to secret taping of conversations. n19

[5] Preparing Material in Preparation of Litigation or Trial is Critical

The work product doctrine, as codified in Rule Rule 26(b)(3) n20 applies to documents or things prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial. Courts have devised various formulations regarding just how concrete the prospect of litigation must be before protection will attach to a given document.

For example, some courts require "more than a remote possibility of litigation" when the document is prepared. n21 Others state that there must be "an identifiable prospect of litigation" and require that specific claims must have already arisen when the document is prepared. n22 Still others require that at the time the document is created, the party or its representative must have in mind a "specific claim supported by concrete facts which would likely lead to litigation." n23 Some courts require that the primary motivating purpose behind the creation of the document be to aid in possible litigation. n24

Because Rule 26(b)(3) work product protection extends only to documents prepared in anticipation of litigation or trial, n25 it follows that documents prepared in the regular course of a party's business are not protected by the doctrine. n26 The crucial factor in determining whether a document was prepared in the regular course of business or in anticipation of litigation is the party's purpose in preparing the document, or causing its preparation. n27 If there was an ordinary business purpose behind the document's preparation, it is unprotected, even if litigation was imminent. n28 Merely placing a stamp that reads "attorney work product" on a document prepared in the ordinary course of business is not sufficient to turn it into work product. n29

[6] Waiving Work Product Protection

Unlike the attorney-client privilege, which is designed to protect the client's confidences, the work product doctrine is designed to protect the adversary process. n30 Therefore, not every disclosure of work product waives the doctrine. n31

Failure to assert the work product rule waives any work product immunity for the documents produced. n32 A common issue is whether work product protection is waived by disclosing the document to a third party. If the disclosure to the third party is deliberate, the test for determining whether the work product rule has been waived is whether, at the time of disclosure, there was a substantial danger that the documents would be disclosed to an adversary. n33 However, if the disclosure to the third party is inadvertent, the court considers the following: n34

- Whether the party seeking discovery of the documents was misled by the disclosure, or relied on the disclosure to its detriment
- The reasonableness of the precautions the party claiming the privilege took to prevent accidental disclosure
- The amount of time it took that party to notice its error
- The overriding interest of fairness and justice.

A party also impliedly waives work product protection if it places the substance of the documents for which the protection is claimed at issue. n35 Similarly, if a party uses the substance of the documents in testimony, any work product protection is waived. n36

[7] Limitations on Waiver of Work-Product Protection

Any waiver is limited to actual material disclosed and does not extend to other material on the same subject, unless the disclosure is done intentionally to gain tactical advantage, in which case waiver would be extended to all related material. n37

When made in a federal proceeding, a disclosure does not operate as a waiver if: n38

- The disclosure is inadvertent
- The holder of the privilege or protection took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure; and
- The holder promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error, including (if applicable) following Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(b)(5)(B)

[8] Protecting Drafts and Communications of Expert Witnesses

Effective December 1, 2010, Rules 26(b)(3)(A) and (B) protect drafts of any expert report or disclosure required under Rule 26(a)(2), regardless of the form in which the draft is recorded. n39

Additionally, Rules 26(b)(3)(A) and (B) protect communications between the party's attorney and any expert witness required to provide a report under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), regardless of the form of the communications, except to the extent that the communications do any of the following: n40

- Relate to compensation for the expert's study or testimony
- Identify facts or data that the party's attorney provided and that the expert considered in forming the opinions to be expressed
- Identify assumptions that the party's attorney provided and that the expert relied on in forming the opinions to be expressed

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductFact Work ProductCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductOpinion Work ProductCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductScopeCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductWaivers

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. See United States v. Adlman, 68 F.3d 1495, 1501 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Loustalet v. Refco, Inc., 154 F.R.D. 243, 246 (C.D. Cal. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 266 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 266 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Audiotext Communications Network v. U.S. Telecom, Inc., 164 F.R.D. 250, 254 (D. Kan. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See In re Grand Casinos, Inc., 181 F.R.D. 615, 622 (D. Minn. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Rail Intermodal Specialists, Inc. v. General Elec. Capital Corp., 154 F.R.D. 218, 219 (N.D. Iowa 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Ryall v. Appleton Elec. Co., 153 F.R.D. 660, 662-663 (D. Colo. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See American Standard Inc. v. Bendix Corp., 71 F.R.D. 443, 446 (W.D. Mo. 1976) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Marchello v. Chase Manhattan Auto Fin. Corp., 219 F.R.D. 217, 219 (D. Conn. 2004) ; Ford v. CSX Transp., Inc., 162 F.R.D. 108, 111-112 (E.D.N.C. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Martin v. Monfort, Inc., 150 F.R.D. 172, 173 (D. Colo. 1993) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Boyer v. Board of County Comm'rs, 162 F.R.D. 687, 689 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 505, 67 S. Ct. 385, 91 L. Ed. 451, 34 Ohio Op. 395 (1947) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g., United States v. 266 Tonawanda Trail, 95 F.3d 422, 428 n.10 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Suggs v. Whitaker, 152 F.R.D. 501, 506 (M.D.N.C. 1993) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Ward v. Maritz, Inc., 156 F.R.D. 592, 597 (D.N.J. 1994) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Fox v. California Sierra Fin. Servs., 120 F.R.D. 520, 524 (N.D. Cal. 1988) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Panter v. Marshall Field & Co., 80 F.R.D. 718, 725 n.6 (N.D. Ill. 1978) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g., Linde Thomson Langworthy Kohn & Van Dyke v. Resolution Trust Co., 5 F.3d 1508, 1515 (D.C. Cir. 1993) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g., Navigant Consulting, Inc. v. Wilkinson, 220 F.R.D. 467, 477 (N.D. Tex. 2004) ; Hugley v. The Art Inst. of Chicago, 981 F. Supp. 1123, 1128-1129 (N.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n26)Footnote 26. See Martin v. Bally's Park Place Hotel & Casino, 983 F.2d 1252, 1260 (3d Cir. 1993) ; In re Raytheon Secs. Litig., 218 F.R.D. 354, 359 (D. Mass. 2003) .

(n27)Footnote 27. See United States v. Ernstoff, 183 F.R.D. 148, 156 (D.N.J. 1998) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Allendale Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bull Data Sys., 145 F.R.D. 84, 87 (N.D. Ill. 1992) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See Ledgin v. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kansas City, 166 F.R.D. 496, 498-499 (D. Kan. 1996) .

(n30)Footnote 30. See Shields v. Sturm, Ruger & Co., 864 F.2d 379, 382 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n31)Footnote 31. See In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 43 F.3d 966, 970 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n32)Footnote 32. See Carte Blanche (Singapore) PTE, Ltd. v. Diners Club Int'l, Inc., 130 F.R.D. 28, 32 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n33)Footnote 33. See Samuels v. Mitchell, 155 F.R.D. 195, 200-201 (N.D. Cal. 1994) .

(n34)Footnote 34. See City of Worcester v. HCA Mgmt. Co., 839 F. Supp. 86, 89 (D. Mass. 1993) .

(n35)Footnote 35. See Harding v. Dana Transp., Inc., 914 F. Supp. 1084, 1098-1099 (D.N.J. 1996) .

(n36)Footnote 36. See Remington Arms Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 142 F.R.D. 408, 419-420 (D. Del. 1992) .

(n37)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Evid.502(a).

(n38)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b).

(n39)Footnote 39. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(B).

(n40)Footnote 40. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
B. Conducting Factual Investigation and "Informal" Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 10.25 through 10.29

[Reserved]

§§ 10.25[Reserved]

44 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.30

§ 10.30 Making Initial Disclosures Under Rule 26(a)(1) Before Participating in Formal Discovery

Initial disclosures under Rule 26(a)(1) must be made at or within 14 days of the discovery conference held under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f) unless a different time is set by stipulation or court order, or unless a party objects during the conference that initial disclosures are not appropriate in the circumstances of the action and states the objection in the Rule 26(f) discovery plan. n1

Initial mandatory disclosure under Rule 26(a) requires parties to exchange information regarding the following:

- Individuals likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment

- Documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment

- Claims and calculations of damages

- Insurance coverage

For complete discussion of initial disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a)(1), see Ch. 9, The Purposes of Discovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(E).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.31

§ 10.31 Conference to Discuss Case and Possible Settlement Before Beginning Formal Discovery

Except in categories of proceedings exempted from disclosure under Rule 26(a), or when authorized under the Federal Rules or by order or agreement of the parties, a party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f). n1

Under Rule 26(f), the parties are obligated to confer, at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), for the purpose of:

- Discussing the nature and basis of their claims and defenses
- Discussing the possibility for a prompt settlement or resolution of the case
- Making or arranging for the initial mandatory disclosures required by Rule 26(a)
- Developing a proposed discovery plan

The proposed discovery plan must indicate the parties' views and proposals concerning the following:

- What changes should be made in the timing, form, or requirement for disclosures under Rule 26(a), including a statement as to when initial disclosures were made or will be made
- The subjects on which discovery may be needed, when discovery should be completed, and whether discovery should be conducted in phases or be limited to or focused on particular issues
- Any issues relating to disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information, including the form or forms in which it should be produced
- Any issues relating to claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material, including-if the parties agree on a procedure to assert such claims after production-whether to ask the court to include their agreement in an order

- What changes should be made in the limitations on discovery imposed under these rules or by local rule, and what other limitations should be imposed

- Any other discovery orders that should be entered by the court

The attorneys of record and all unrepresented parties that have appeared in the case are jointly responsible for arranging the conference, for attempting in good faith to agree on the proposed discovery plan, and for submitting to the court within 14 days after the conference a written report outlining the plan. A court may by order require that the parties or attorneys attend the conference in person. If necessary to comply with its expedited schedule for Rule 16(b) conferences, a court may by local rule require that the conference between the parties occur fewer than 21 days before the scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), and require that the written report outlining the discovery plan be filed fewer than 14 days after the conference between the parties, or excuse the parties from submitting a written report and permit them to report orally on their discovery plan at the Rule 16(b) conference. n2

The federal courts have taken two common approaches to determining whether expedited discovery is appropriate. The first approach is called the "good cause standard" and the second more "liberal" test is called the "reasonableness test." n3 Under the more stringent "good cause standard" approach, the courts require the plaintiff to demonstrate:

- Irreparable injury

- Some probability of success on the merits

- Some connection between the expedited discovery and the avoidance of irreparable injury

- Some evidence that the injury that will result without expedited discovery is greater than the injury that the defendant will suffer if the expedited relief is granted

The "reasonableness test," requires the court to decide the motion based on the reasonableness of the request in light of all of the surrounding circumstances. Among the factors to be considered by the court are:

- Whether a preliminary injunction is pending

- The breadth of the discovery requests

- The purpose for requesting the expedited discovery

- The burden on the defendants of complying with the requests

- How far in advance of the typical discovery process the request was made

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d); see also El Pollo Loco, S.A. de C.V. v. El Pollo Loco, Inc., 344 F. Supp. 2d 986, 991 (S.D. Tex. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n3)Footnote 3. See In re Fannie Mae Derivative Litig., 227 F.R.D. 142, 143 (D.D.C. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.32

§ 10.32 Understanding the Scope and Limits of Discovery

[1] Obtaining Discoverable Information

Parties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party. n1 Parties may not seek to discover information that has no possible bearing on the case and is unlikely to lead to discoverable evidence. n2 Relevance is broadly construed, and a request for discovery should be considered relevant if there is any possibility that the information sought may be relevant to the claim or defense of any party. n2.1

For good cause, the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n3

[2] Limiting the Scope of Discovery

By order, the court may alter the limits on the number of depositions and interrogatories or the length of depositions under Rule 30. By order or local rule, the court may also limit the number of requests under Rule 36. n4

A party need not provide discovery of electronically stored information from sources that the party identifies as not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. On motion to compel discovery or for a protective order, the party from whom discovery is sought must show that the information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. If that showing is made, the court may nonetheless order discovery from such sources if the requesting party shows good cause, considering the limitations of Rule 26(b)(2)(C). The court may specify conditions for the discovery. n5

The frequency or extent of use of the discovery methods otherwise permitted under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and by any local rule shall be limited by the court if it determines any of the following: n6

- The discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive, or

- The party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought, or

- The burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues

The court may act upon its own initiative after reasonable notice or pursuant to a motion under Rule 26(c). n7

In general, district courts have broad discretion in structuring discovery, and an appellate court will not interfere with a trial court's exercise of its discretion to control its docket and dispatch its business except on the clearest showing that the procedures have resulted in actual and substantial prejudice to the complaining party. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lewis v. ACB Bus. Servs., Inc., 135 F.3d 389, 402-403 (6th Cir. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Breon v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of New England, 232 F.R.D. 49, 52 (D. Conn. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(A).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Hussain v. Nicholson, 435 F.3d 359, 363 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

47 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.33

§ 10.33 Stipulating Around the Limitations of Discovery

Unless otherwise directed by the court, the parties may stipulate around the limitations of the various discovery rules. n1 In most cases, these stipulations do not require court approval.

However, advance approval is always necessary if a stipulation is to extend the 30-day period for responding to interrogatories, requests for production, or requests for admissions, or if the extension would interfere with dates set by the court for completing discovery, for hearing of a motion, or for trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29; Bobrosky v. Vickers, 170 F.R.D. 411, 416 (W.D. Va. 1997) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.34

§ 10.34 Certifying Discovery Requests and Responses

Every discovery request or response must be signed by counsel, whose signature constitutes a certification of the merits of the signed document. n1 If a certification is made in violation of Rule 26 without substantial justification, the court shall impose an appropriate sanction on the person who made the certification, the party represented by the person who made the certification, or both. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.35

§ 10.35 Filing of Discovery

The following discovery requests and responses must not be filed until they are used in the proceeding or the court orders filing: n1

- Depositions
- Interrogatories
- Requests for documents or to permit entry upon land, and
- Requests for admission

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.36

§ 10.36 Supplementing Discovery Responses

Every discovery response must be supplemented or corrected whenever the party learns that the prior response was in some sense incomplete or incorrect, and that new information is not otherwise already made known to the other parties in the action. n1

For purposes of the duty to supplement, information is incomplete or incorrect in "some material respect" if there is an objectively reasonable likelihood that the additional or corrective information could substantially affect or alter the opposing party's discovery plan or trial preparation. n1.1

A party that without substantial justification fails to supplement discovery, is not, unless such failure is harmless, permitted to use as evidence at a trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness or information not so disclosed. n2 In addition to or in lieu of this sanction, the court, on motion and after affording an opportunity to be heard, may impose other appropriate sanctions. In addition to requiring payment of reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, these sanctions may include informing the jury of the failure to make the disclosure. n3 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not create the right to a separate negligence action based on a party's prior litigation conduct in another case, including the defendant's violations of Rule 26(e). n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresSanctionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1); see also Sender v. Mann, 225 F.R.D. 645, 654 (D. Colo. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Sender v. Mann, 225 F.R.D. 645, 654 (D. Colo. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Living Designs, Inc. v. E.I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., 431 F.3d 353, 372 (9th Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.37

§ 10.37 Seeking Protective Orders to Preclude Abusive Discovery

The discovery rules are designed to operate subject to a minimum of court supervision. However, if a party's pursuit of discovery becomes overzealous the court may issue a protective order precluding or limiting discovery in order to protect any person subject to abusive discovery practices. n1

Rule 26(c) requires a showing of good cause to justify the issuance of a protective order. A frequently asserted ground for a protective order is the allegation that the sought discovery involves privileged materials or information. The moving party has the burden of establishing good cause. n2

As a general rule, any party or representative of a party, or witness with information relevant to the claims or defenses, or any investigator or expertwitness, can attend depositions in the case, but they may be excluded on a specific showing that some harm or prejudice might occur to a party or the deponent through the disclosure of secret or sensitive information, and can also be excluded on a specific showing that they might act coercively or disruptively. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Terra Int'l, Inc., 134 F.3d 302, 306-307 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Estate of Bell v. Board of Educ. of Fayette County, 225 F.R.D. 186, 196 (S.D. W. Va. 2004) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.38

§ 10.38 Evaluating the Sequence in Which Available Discovery Procedures Should Be Used

Parties may conduct discovery in any sequence, unless the court ordersotherwise. n1 The court may issue an order prescribing the sequence of discovery on motion, for the convenience of parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice. n2 Typically, a party wishing to establish a particular sequence of discovery will proceed by motion for a protective order. n3 Both parties may conduct discovery at the same time. The fact that one party is conducting discovery shall not operate to delay any other party's discovery. n4

Each of the methods of discovery provide different strategic advantages and selection of the proper method or combination of methods is critical to efficient litigation. For example, if the availability of a key witness is limited, it is advisable to depose the witness early in litigation to preserve critical testimony. Likewise, if the opposing party is known to be careless in thought or rash in expression, it might be advisable to depose first, rather than after that party's counsel has had the opportunity to craft interrogatory responses that will have the effect of diminishing the spontaneity of deposition testimony.

On the other hand, interrogatories demanding precise information regarding damages may provide a fertile ground for deposition questioning. Similarly, document demands may serve as the basis for strategic interrogation during deposition.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.39

§ 10.39 Evaluating the Potential Cost of Discovery

One of the most important factors to be considered in drafting a discovery plan is the likely cost to the client. In formulating a discovery plan, the following costs need to be considered:

- Attorney's fees associated with drafting the particular discovery device, or preparing for and attending a deposition

- Attorney's fees associated with opposing objections to the discovery, including possible motion practice

- Stenographic fees associated with a deposition

While the review and designation for copying of documents in a suit in which hundreds of thousands or millions of pages of material are produced can involve enormous expense attributable to lawyer and paralegal time, copying costs, and travel and living expenses, the largest expense associated with discovery in the more typical civil action is that of preparing for and taking depositions. This is true even when there is no travel out of town because the deponents are local. Attorney time and court reporter costs will be the major expenditures. Accordingly, determining who to depose and planning for efficient depositions is one of the most critical components of preparing for discovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue BurdensCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.40

§ 10.40 Taking Depositions Under Rule 30

[1] Using Depositions to Evaluate Witnesses and to Preserve Testimony

The deposition is perhaps the most important and effective discovery tool. In addition to providing a procedure for in-depth examination of the factual underpinning of the claims, the deposition can be used to evaluate the credibility, presence, and demeanor of the witness. A witness's voice characteristics, predominant body language traits, and idiosyncratic tendencies all factor into an analysis of the likely credibility of the witness.

Depositions are also critical to preserve necessary testimony of witnesses that may not be available for trial due to death, illness, or other causes.

[2] Determining When Depositions May Be Taken

A party may take the oral deposition of any person, including a party, without leave of court unless the person to be examined is confined in prison, or if, without the written stipulation of the parties: n1

- The proposed deposition would result in more than ten depositions being taken
- The person to be deposed has already been deposed in the case
- The deposition is scheduled before the time specified in Rule 26(d), unless the deposition notice properly states that the person to be examined is expected to leave the United States and will be unavailable for examination

[3] Videotaping Depositions

Consideration should be given to videotaping the deposition. There may be great advantage to videotaping if there is concern that the witness may not be available at trial, and videotaped testimony will be much more effective than reading the transcript. Any party may, by providing prior written notice to the deponent and other parties, designate that the deposition will be taken byvideotape as well as stenographically. n2

For a complete discussion of depositions, see Ch. 16, Preparation for Depositions, Ch. 17, Taking Depositions, and Ch.

18, Defense of Depositions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyEvidenceTestimonyGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.41

§ 10.41 Propounding Interrogatories Under Rule 33

[1] Seeking Information From Other Parties

Unlike many of the other discovery tools, interrogatories may be employed only to seek information from another party, and not from nonparty witnesses. n1 Under Rule 33 no more than 25 interrogatories may be served, including all discrete subparts, without leave of court or stipulation.

[2] Obtaining Basic Information Regarding the Parties and Evidence

Much of the information generally sought through interrogatories must be disclosed without any discovery request under Rule 26(a). However, where court order or stipulation has varied the disclosures required, interrogatories may be used for the following purposes:

- To identify persons with knowledge of relevant information
- To discover relevant documents
- To discover the factual basis for positions taken in the pleadings
- To discover the basis and method of computation of claimed damages
- To identify insurance information

If properly and thoughtfully prepared, written interrogatories can be an extremely useful discovery tool. They may be used to hold the opposing party to particular factual claims and legal contentions at an early stage of the case and serve as the basis for subsequent document demands and depositions.

For a complete discussion of interrogatories, see Ch. 12, Interrogatories.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33; United States v. Lot 41, Berryhill Farm Estates, 128 F.3d 1386, 1397 (10th Cir. 1997) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.42

§ 10.42 Inspecting Documents and Property Under Rule 34

[1] Obtaining Disclosure and Demanding Inspection of Documents and Property

The right of a party to obtain disclosure of documents, electronically stored information, or things, and to inspect premises or personal property, is an important discovery tool. Because there are no specified limitations on the number of demands for production that can be made, n1 the procedure provides a fruitful means of obtaining documentary insight into the issues and available proof, and an important basis for deposing both parties and nonparty witnesses.

The demanding party is entitled to have disclosure and discovery of all items that are relevant to the issues or that may lead to the ascertainment or disclosure of relevant evidence, which are in the possession, custody, or control of the respondent, control being defined to include items to which the respondent has a legal right of access, or a practical ability to obtain possession. n2

The request must set forth, either by individual item or by category, the items to be inspected, and describe each with reasonable particularity. The request shall specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection and performing the related acts. The request may specify the form or forms in which electronically stored information is to be produced. n2.1

A properly drafted demand for production may succeed in providing access to computer derived compilations, and if circumstances warrant, to computer software and hardware, including direct access into a computer system.

[2] Responding to Inspection Demands

From the respondent's standpoint, care should be taken in preparing the written response to each production demand to insure that the response is complete, accurate, and specific. If there is objection to any demand, the objection must be explicitly stated. When a privilege is claimed, there must be a specific and adequate description of the withheld item, without intruding on the privileged content of the item. n3

The response must state, with respect to each item or category, that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested, unless an objection is raised and the reason for the objection is stated. A responding party must also state the reason for objection when objecting to the form or forms for producing electronically stored information and it must state the form it intends to use. If objection is made to part of an item or category, the part shall be specified and inspection permitted of the remaining parts. n4

While the responding party may bring a motion for a protective order against a demand for production, n4 generally speaking it is better practice to respond to the demand, stating specific reasons for inability or refusal to produce. Following the latter course will have the effect of placing the burden on the demanding party to move to compel responses, and may often lead to an accommodation between the parties as to production without court intervention.

For a complete discussion of production of documents and things, and entry upon land for inspection and other purposes, see Ch. 13, Production of Documents.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. 34.

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.43

§ 10.43 Conducting Physical and Mental Examinations Under Rule 35

[1] Seeking Physical or Mental Examinations

Physical or mental examinations are available only if both of the following conditions are met: n1

- The mental or physical condition of a party or a person in a party's custody is "in controversy"
- There is "good cause" for the examination

The decision to grant or deny a physical or mental examination is within the court's discretion. n2

The order may be made on notice to the person to be examined and to all parties and must specify the following: n3

- The time of the examination
- The place of the examination
- The manner of the examination
- The conditions of the examination
- The scope of the examination
- The person who will conduct the examination

[2] Providing the Examiner's Report to the Examined Party

If the examined party requests a copy of the examiner's report, the party requesting the examination must deliver to the examined party a copy of the detailed written report of the examiner setting out the following: n4

- The examiner's findings including the results of all tests

- The examiner's diagnoses and conclusions
- Reports of all earlier examinations of the same condition

By requesting and obtaining a report of the examination or by taking the deposition of the examiner, the party examined waives any privilege the party may have regarding the testimony of every other person who has examined or who may thereafter examine the party regarding the same mental or physical condition. n5

For a complete discussion of physical and mental examinations, see Ch. 21, Physical and Mental Examinations.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsMental & Physical Examinations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 35; Schlagenhauf v. Holder, 379 U.S. 104, 118-119, 85 S. Ct. 234, 13 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1964) .

(n2)Footnote 2. O'Quinn v. New York Univ. Med. Center, 163 F.R.D. 226, 227 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.44

§ 10.44 Making Requests for Admission Under Rule 36

A party may serve a written request on any other party for the admission of any matter relevant to the litigation. The recipient must respond by admitting, denying, or setting forth reasons why the request may be neither admitted nor denied. n1 Thus, for example, a request may be submitted for an admission that:

- A particular person signed a contract with authority
- The amount of actual damages is a certain figure
- Attached documents are genuine

Requests for admission are a valuable discovery tool. Early in the discovery process, they may be used to limit the amount of necessary discovery. Late in the discovery process, they may sharply limit the need for trial witnesses.

At the onset of discovery, every important document as to which authentication will be necessary should be identified, as should every important fact that is apparently not in dispute. To the extent thatadmissions of authenticity and facts are procured, no further discovery will be necessary.

For a complete discussion of requests for admissions, see Ch. 19, Requests to Admit.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.45

§ 10.45 Evaluating the Conventional Discovery Approach

[1] Serving Interrogatories and Requesting Documents Before Conducting Depositions

The three most commonly used methods of discovery provided for in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are often employed in the following sequence:

- Written interrogatories under Rule 33;
- Requests for documents under Rule 34; and
- Depositions on oral examination under Rule 30.

In this approach, the lawyer, whether representing the plaintiff or defendant, first uses interrogatories to identify individuals with knowledge and the location and description of potentially relevant documents. Although the importance of interrogatories has arguably diminished in light of the initial mandatory disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a), interrogatories may also be used to begin exploring the contentions of the opposing party. Having used Rule 33 interrogatories to supplement the allegations of the pleadings and to lay the groundwork for further discovery, documents may then be requested from the opposing party under Rule 34.

While interrogatories may precede document requests, a better practice may be to initiate both these methods of discovery at the same time. The strongest reason for doing so is to compress what might be termed the pre-deposition phase of the action. Although interrogatory answers may prompt the filing of a second set of document requests, at least in the meantime the process of document production and review has been set in motion.

In addition, counsel should consider requesting admissions under Rule 36. The too-often-ignored use of requests for admission of facts and genuineness of documents can reduce discovery costs by eliminating issues from dispute, thereby eliminating the need to conduct discovery on those admitted facts.

Once the basic facts in the case are established through these initial forms of discovery, depositions may be planned accordingly.

[2] Evaluating the Advantages of Taking Depositions After Reviewing Documents

There are real advantages in taking depositions only after having had access to the pertinent files of the adverse party and of the deponent in particular:

- Documents prepared by the opposing party and its agents and employees serve as an invaluable check on the deposition testimony of those individuals.

- The files also provide a framework from which you can understand the involvement of a particular individual, and from which you can outline your questioning of that person.

- To the extent that documents are of independent evidentiary importance, you may need to use the deposition to authenticate them, and to learn whether the author can explain away the apparent effect of what he or she has written.

It follows that in determining the sequence in which to conduct discovery, counsel should review all available documents before taking depositions. It is worth pursuing even in a situation in which review of documents will precede depositions by a matter of hours only, as where a distant business has been sued in its local court for a limited sum, and you will make a single trip to the defendant's offices, reviewing and selecting documents one day, preparing your questioning overnight, and beginning depositions on the following morning.

[3] Considering Exceptions to the Conventional Discovery Approach

To the extent that it appears that an early settlement of the litigation may hinge on making the process unpleasant or expensive for the other side, the use of the "conventional" approach may be less suitable. In the typical lawsuit, the process becomes unpleasant for the adverse parties when depositions begin. To the extent that settlement will be helped by coming to close quarters with the opposition early in its preparation (or to the extent that the client believes that the opposition will collapse under pressure), counsel may wish to avoid the delays involved in the more systematic approach.

Another reason for varying the sequence of discovery is the conviction that an early deposition of a critical witness may so tilt the balance between the parties as to promote early and favorablesettlement without the expense of substantial additional discovery. Such a deposition will most typically be one of a nonparty witness; if the opponent is being well served by his or her own lawyer, he or she should already be aware of anything his or her own people can say that is so devastating as to radically change his or her perception of the case. Early depositions of nonparty witnesses who may be related to or friendly to the opposing party also may affect the opposing party who is seeking to protect them from the rigors of discovery or curry favor with them.

Another exception may be made for an early deposition of a nonparty witness whose knowledge of the facts bearing on some important issue will be pivotal in its outcome. In addition, some issues in the case may call for a deposition for which documents are not important, even though significant in the litigation as a whole. Typically this too will be a deposition of a nonparty witness that is expected to provide testimony that will be helpful to the case.

Finally, if you have access to a nonparty witness who is disposed to cooperate, but who may not be available to appear at trial, you may choose to take that person's deposition at once because the testimony is favorable and may be delivered without dependence on documents. Opposing counsel's opportunity to cross-examine will be less useful than it would be after further discovery by both sides. Such a deposition will preserve the testimony of the witness for trial should the witness become unavailable. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & Transcripts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(3).

60 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Planning and Preparation for Discovery
C. Preparing for Formal Discovery

2-10 Federal Litigation Guide § 10.46

§ 10.46 Determining The Sequence of Depositions

Because depositions are often the most useful discovery method, special consideration should be given to when depositions are conducted. The following general factors may affect the sequence of depositions in any given case:

- Considering the Opponent's Perception. You may decide that the early deposition of a key witness (before interrogatories have been answered and documents have been produced) is desirable because the testimony may affect your opponent's perception of the case, and you may decide to schedule that deposition to take place as soon as the preliminary stages of discovery are completed.

- Preserving Testimony. The possible future unavailability of a witness whose testimony you want will prompt you to take that witness' depositions as soon as you can.

- Deposing Key Witnesses First. In a case in which the issues are relatively uncomplicated and the witnesses are few, logic dictates that the most important witness for the opposing party be deposed first. Because of the cost of depositions, and the fact that most lawsuits are settled, you should normally learn as much as you can as quickly as you can about the basic issues in the case.

- Deferring Depositions Until After Key Facts Are Understood. In a complex case, where you are concerned that opposing counsel is more familiar with the underlying facts than you are, it may be advisable to defer the depositions of key actors for the adverse party until you have educated yourself to the point of being able to do an exhaustive job.

- Deposing Experts Typically, the depositions of the opposing party's expert witnesses will not be taken until late in the sequence. Since such experts will usually testify about opinions which they have developed based on the underlying facts of the case, you should thoroughly understand those facts before attempting to examine the witness.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsWritten Depositions

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide 11.syn

§ 11.syn Synopsis to Chapter 11: Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

§ 11.01 Evaluating the Use of Expedited Discovery When Seeking Interim Injunctive Relief

§ 11.02 Considering the Types of Interim Injunctive Relief Available

§ 11.03 Seeking a Temporary Restraining Order Under Rule 65(b)
[1] Evaluating the TRO Standard
[2] Timing Generally Precludes Discovery

§ 11.04 Seeking a Preliminary Injunction Under Rule 65(a)
[1] Noticing the Opposition of Request for Relief
[2] Evaluating the Standard for Preliminary Injunctions
[3] Preparing for the Preliminary Injunction Hearing

§ 11.05 Evaluating Discovery Timing as it Relates to Injunctive Relief
[1] Using Information Obtained Through Mandatory Initial Disclosure in Preparation of Interim Relief Motion
[2] Making Initial Disclosures and Attending Discovery Conference Before Conducting Formal Discovery

§ 11.06 Stipulating to an Expedited Discovery Schedule
[1] Agreeing to Early Discovery In Advance of Preliminary Injunction Hearing
[2] Stipulating to Expedited Discovery Under Rule 29
[3] Considering the Requirement for a Discovery Conference and Discovery Schedule

§ 11.07 Evaluating the Court's Discretion to Order Expedited Discovery
[1] Seeking a Court Order When the Parties Cannot Reach Agreement to Expedite Discovery
[2] Comparing Expedited Discovery for Purposes of Interim Relief With Depositions Taken Under Rule 27 in Preparation of an Action
[3] Seeking Expedited Discovery on the Basis of Necessity or Prejudice
[4] Offering Evidence in Support of Expedited Discovery

§ 11.08 Deciding Whether to Pursue Expedited Discovery
[1] Evaluating Whether Expedited Discovery is Necessary
[2] Seeking Expedited Discovery on Behalf of Plaintiff
[3] Seeking Expedited Discovery on Behalf of Defendant

§ 11.09 Moving for Expedited Discovery
[1] Filing Motion for Expedited Discovery With Motion for Preliminary Injunction
[2] Providing the Opposing Party With Notice of Motion
[3] Specifying the Scope and Nature of Expedited Discovery Sought
[4] Anticipating Objections to the Motion for Expedited Discovery

§ 11.10 Considering the Use of Expedited Depositions
[1] Evaluating When Court Order is Required to Take Depositions
[2] Noticing the Deposition
[3] Noticing the Deposition of Corporate Party or Other Organization

§ 11.11 Determining the Scope of the Expedited Deposition
[1] Considering the Overall Claim and the Interim Relief Sought
[2] Seeking Information Regarding Irreparable Harm
[3] Seeking Information Regarding Alleged Hardship
[4] Organizing Depositions for the Preliminary Injunction Hearing

§ 11.12 Using Expedited Document Requests in Preparation of Preliminary Injunction Hearing
[1] Considering the General Time Constraints of Document Requests
[2] Considering Possible Objections to Court Order
[3] Managing Documents During Expedited Discovery

§ 11.13 Propounding Interrogatories In Preparation of Preliminary Injunction Hearing

§ 11.14 Preparing for the Preliminary Injunction Hearing
[1] Offering Evidence Obtained Through Expedited Discovery
[2] Submitting a Brief in Support of the Preliminary Injunction

§ 11.15 Emergency Motion for an Order Expediting Discovery
[1] FORM
Emergency Motion for an Order Expediting Discovery
[2] Use of Form
[3] Filing of Affidavits
[4] Critical Considerations

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter explores discovery incident to a request for injunctive relief. A party may decide to seek interim injunctive relief if it will likely suffer irreparable harm before full resolution of the action. Expedited discovery is often a necessary and valuable aid in preliminary injunction proceedings.

The decision to engage in expedited discovery and the methods by which the process can be accelerated are examined. The chapter discusses each of the following:

- Stipulations between the parties concerning expedited discovery
- Moving for an order to expedite discovery
- Judicial standards for granting motions for expedited discovery
- Methods and scope of expedited discovery

Suggestions for handling expedited depositions and document requests in the limited time available are also offered. The chapter provides a discussion of how the information obtained through expedited discovery may be used as evidence at the preliminary injunction hearing.

The chapter concludes with a sample form of a motion seeking expedited discovery and includes comments on use of the form.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.01

§ 11.01 Evaluating the Use of Expedited Discovery When Seeking Interim Injunctive Relief

Cases in which interim injunctive relief is sought may be among the most challenging and demanding. The underlying litigation is likely to be complex in its own right, and proceedings for interim relief are usually fast-breaking and there is generally little time to prepare or oppose an application for interim relief.

Cases involving a request for interim injunctive relief often require expedited discovery. If properly used, expedited discovery may be used to obtain extremely valuable information. Because of the accelerated pace of injunction proceedings, however, discovery may not be necessary or appropriate in every instance. Therefore, it must be decided at the outset whether to seek expedited discovery and, if so, how to pursue that discovery most effectively.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

64 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.02

§ 11.02 Considering the Types of Interim Injunctive Relief Available

Interim injunctive relief in federal court is governed by Rule 65 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. On proper showing, interim relief may be sought in the following forms:

- Temporary restraining order (TRO) n1
- Preliminary injunction n2

This chapter focuses on the use of early discovery for the purpose of preparing for preliminary injunction hearings. For further discussion of injunctive relief, see Ch. 7, Injunctions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.03

§ 11.03 Seeking a Temporary Restraining Order Under Rule 65(b)

[1] Evaluating the TRO Standard

Under Rule 65(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a temporary restraining order (TRO) may be granted on an ex parte basis only where the applicant can show, by specific facts set forth in an affidavit or verified complaint, each of the following:

- Immediate and irreparable harm n1 will result before the adverse party may be heard in opposition n2

- Likelihood of success on the merits n3

The applicant's attorney must also certify to the court in writing the efforts, if any, made to give notice to the opponent and the reasons supporting the claim that notice should not be required. n4

[2] Timing Generally Precludes Discovery

Temporary restraining orders are generally sought at the immediate onset of litigation or in an emergency. The duration of a TRO is expressly limited and may not exceed 14 days. n5 By their very nature, the circumstances warranting the grant of a TRO generally do not afford time for discovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Clemente v. Pearle Vision, Inc., 762 F. Supp. 1518 (D. Me. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See FDIC v. Cafritz, 762 F. Supp. 1503 (D.D.C. 1991) (factors considered by the court); Doe by Doe v. Shenandoah County School Bd., 737 F. Supp. 913 (W.D. Va. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Motor Vehicle Bd. of Cal. v. Orrin W. Fox Co., 434 U.S. 1345, 98 S. Ct. 359, 54 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1977) . See also Rita, Inc. v. Flandreau Santee Sioux Tribe, 798 F. Supp. 586 (D.S.D. 1992) ; Trailer Marine Transport Corp. v. Ortiz, 733 F. Supp. 490 (D.P.R. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

66 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.04

§ 11.04 Seeking a Preliminary Injunction Under Rule 65(a)

[1] Noticing the Opposition of Request for Relief

Preliminary injunctions are typically sought when the threatened harm is less immediate than in the case necessitating a TRO, or after expiration of a TRO. Under Rule 65(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a preliminary injunction may be entered only after the defendant is given notice and an opportunity to oppose the application for injunctive relief. In most situations, then, preliminary injunctions involve an evidentiary hearing with respect to the request for interim relief. n1

Unlike a TRO, a preliminary injunction remains in effect until the matter is disposed of by final trial on the merits or until further order of court. n2 Accordingly, an injunction entered following a hearing and for an indefinite duration is properly classified as a preliminary injunction rather than as a TRO. n3

[2] Evaluating the Standard for Preliminary Injunctions

To obtain a preliminary injunction, in most federal courts the moving party must demonstrate each of the following:

- A likelihood of success on the merits n4
- A substantial threat of irreparable injury pending the litigation n5
- That the injury to the moving party outweighs any hardship or harm the proposed injunction may cause the opposing party or other interested parties n6 and
- That the public interest will not be disserved n7

Although the precise formulation of the standard, or balancing, conducted by the court may vary from circuit to circuit, the analytical elements considered by the courts are essentially the same. n8

While these factors structure the court's inquiry, no single factor will necessarily determine the outcome. Rather, the evaluation of a request for a preliminary injunction entails a "delicate balancing" of all these elements. n9 Where, for example, factors of irreparable harm and consideration of the public interest strongly favor the moving party, the court may issue an injunction without as strong a likelihood of ultimate success as would otherwise be required. n10 On the other hand, where the threatened injury to the movant is limited or balanced to a substantial degree by countervailing hardship to the defendant, or by detriment to third parties or to the public interest, the court may place greater significance on the requirement that the moving party demonstrate a substantial likelihood of success on the merits. n11

[3] Preparing for the Preliminary Injunction Hearing

The importance of the preliminary injunction hearing should not be underestimated. Success or failure at the hearing often has a profound impact on a party's ability and desire to continue the litigation. Where, for example, a preliminary injunction restrains a defendant from exploiting an opportunity that might diminish or even disappear by the time of trial, that interim relief resolves the litigation for all practical purposes. Moreover, the preliminary injunction hearing will affect the final disposition even where substantial issues remain to be resolved at trial. In some cases, trial on the merits will be advanced and consolidated with the preliminary injunction hearing. n12

In all cases, evidence received at the preliminary injunction hearing will become part of the record for purposes of trial on the merits. n13 It is imperative to treat the preliminary injunction hearing as a trial. Accordingly, pre-hearing discovery on an expedited basis is a critical consideration when seeking a preliminary injunction.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Forts v. Ward, 566 F.2d 849, 851-854 (2d Cir. 1977) ; SEC v. Frank, 388 F.2d 486, 490-491 (2d Cir. 1968) ; Sims v. Greene, 161 F.2d 87 (3d Cir. 1947) .
An evidentiary hearing is not required, however, in every case. Drywall Tapers and Painters of Greater N.Y., Local 1974 v. Local 530 of Operative Plasterers & Cement Masons Int'l Ass'n, 954 F.2d 69 (2d Cir. 1992) (hearing unnecessary where prior hearings, affidavits, and court's findings supporting an earlier injunction "provided an adequate basis for the court's decision."); Jackson v. Fair, 846 F.2d 811, 819 (1st Cir. 1988) ; International Paper Co. v. Inhabitants of the Town of Jay, 672 F. Supp. 29, 33 (D. Me. 1987) ; Sugarhill Records, Ltd. v. Motown Record Corp., 570 F. Supp. 1217, 1221-1222 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) .
The findings of fact made at the hearing on the preliminary injunction are not binding on the court at the trial on the merits. Technical Publishing Co. v. Lebhar-Friedman, Inc., 729 F.2d 1136 (7th Cir. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. An application for a TRO is not a prerequisite for an application for a preliminary injunction. Nevertheless, where a TRO is issued, Rule 65(b) provides that "the motion for a preliminary injunction shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time ... ." If the party who obtained the TRO does not proceed with the application for a preliminary injunction, the TRO will be dissolved.

(n3)Footnote 3. In re Steakhouse, Inc., 46 B.R. 227 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Senate of State of Cal. v. Mosbacher, 968 F.2d 974 (9th Cir. 1992) ; Abbott Labs. v. Mead Johnson & Co., 971 F.2d 6 (7th Cir. 1992) (noting that the greater the likelihood of success on the merits, the lower the required showing of irreparable harm).

(n5)Footnote 5. Kelbe Corp. v. Hall, 789 F. Supp. 241 (S.D. Ohio 1992) (irreparable harm a "critical issue"); Transamerica Rental Fin. Corp. v. Rental Experts, 790 F. Supp. 378 (D. Conn. 1992) (monetary loss does not satisfy irreparable harm requirement).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Wroncy v. Bureau of Land Management, 777 F. Supp. 1546 (D. Or. 1991) ; Gilleo v. City of Ladue, 774 F. Supp. 1559 (E.D. Mo.) , summary judgment granted, 774 F. Supp. 1564 (E.D. Mo. 1991) , aff'd on other grounds, 986 F.2d 1180 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Abbott Laboratories v. Mead Johnson & Co., 971 F.2d 6 (7th Cir. 1992) (public interest may be outweighed by other factors); Tally-Ho, Inc. v. Coast Community College Dist., 889 F.2d 1018, 1022 (11th Cir. 1989) ; All Care Nursing Serv., Inc. v. Bethesda Memorial Hosp., Inc., 887 F.2d 1535, 1537 (11th Cir. 1989) ; DeBaca v. County of San Diego, 794 F. Supp. 990 (S.D. Cal. 1992) (public interest should be taken into account when balancing the hardships).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cabot Corp. v. King, 790 F. Supp. 153 (N.D. Ohio 1992) ; Cardona v. Oakland Unified School Dist., 785 F. Supp. 837 (N.D. Cal. 1992) . See, e.g., Tucker Anthony Realty Corp. v. Schlesinger, 888 F.2d 969, 972 (2d Cir. 1989) ; Instant Air Freight Co. v. C.F. Air Freight, Inc., 882 F.2d 797, 800 (3d Cir. 1989) ; Ping v. National Educ. Ass'n, 870 F.2d 1369, 1371-1372 (7th Cir. 1989) ; Vision Sports, Inc. v. Melville Corp., 888 F.2d 609, 612 (9th Cir. 1989) ; Sea Containers Ltd. v. Stena AB, 890 F.2d 1205, 1208 (D.C. Cir. 1989) ; Jackson v. Fair, 846 F.2d 811, 814-815 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Little Ceasar Enters., Inc. v. R-J-L Foods, Inc., 796 F. Supp. 1026 (E.D. Mich. 1992) (stating that the four elements are "factors to be balanced, not prerequisites to be met").

(n10)Footnote 10. Budish v. Gordon, 784 F. Supp. 1320 (N.D. Ohio 1992) (noting that the strength of one or more of the other factors may overcome weakness of substantial likelihood of success factor); Diginet, Inc. v. Western Union ATS, Inc., 958 F.2d 1388 (7th Cir. 1992) ("The greater the harm to the plaintiff if the injunction is denied, the less of a showing that his case has merit need he make").

(n11)Footnote 11. Direx Israel, Ltd. v. Breakthrough Medical Corp., 952 F.2d 802 (4th Cir. 1991) ; Fashion Victim, Ltd. v. Sunrise Turquoise, Inc., 785 F. Supp. 1302 (N.D. Ill. 1992) (there is a sliding scale relationship between the likelihood of success on the merits and the degree to which a plaintiff must demonstrate that it is favored by a balancing of the relative harms). See also American Hosp. Ass'n v. Harris, 625 F.2d 1328, 1331 (7th Cir. 1980) ("the required showing of probability of success on the merits 'varies with the quality and quantum of harm that [the moving party] will suffer from the denial of an injunction' "); Roth v. Bank of the Commonwealth, 583 F.2d 527, 537-538 (6th Cir. 1978) ("the likelihood of success that need be shown will vary inversely with the degree of injury the plaintiff will suffer absent an injunction"); Constructors Ass'n of W. Pa. v. Kreps, 573 F.2d 811, 815 (3d Cir. 1978) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Burlington N. Ry. Co. v. Sheet Metal Workers' Int'l Ass'n, 636 F. Supp. 809 (N.D. Ill. 1986) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a)(2) provides in pertinent part:

> Before or after the commencement of the hearing of an application for a preliminary injunction, the court may order the trial of the action on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the hearing of the application. Even when this consolidation is not ordered, any evidence received on an application for a preliminary injunction which would be admissible on the trial of the merits becomes part of the record on the trial and need not be repeated on the trial.

However, a factual finding made pursuant to a preliminary injunction hearing may be rejected by the court at trial on the merits. University of Texas v. Camenisch, 451 U.S. 390, 101 S. Ct. 1830, 68 L. Ed. 2d 175 (1981) ; Technical Pub. Co. v. Lebhar-Friedman, Inc., 729 F.2d 1136 (7th Cir. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.05

§ 11.05 Evaluating Discovery Timing as it Relates to Injunctive Relief

[1] Using Information Obtained Through Mandatory Initial Disclosure in Preparation of Interim Relief Motion

Initial mandatory disclosures made under Rule 26(a)(1) will often precede the filing of a preliminary injunction motion and the information exchanged pursuant to the rule may help in the preparation of the motion.

Except in categories of cases specifically exempt, Rule 26(a) now provides for mandatory disclosure of certain core information at the onset of litigation. Under Rule 26(a), parties are required to exchange information regarding the following, before conducting formal discovery: n1

- Individuals likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment
- Documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment
- Claims and calculations of damages
- Insurance coverage

For complete discussion of initial mandatory disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a), see Ch. 9, The Purposes of Discovery.

[2] Making Initial Disclosures and Attending Discovery Conference Before Conducting Formal Discovery

Unless otherwise stipulated or directed by the court, initial mandatory disclosures must be made at or within 14 days after the initial discovery conference between the parties, as required under Rule 26(f). With respect to discovery in general, Rule 26(d) provides that a party may not seek discovery from any source until the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f), "except in categories of proceedings exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26(a)(1)(E), or when authorized under these rules or by order or agreement of the parties." n2

Under Rule 26(f), unless otherwise ordered or exempted, the parties are to hold a discovery conference at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), unless a different time is set by stipulation or court order, or unless a party objects during the conference that initial disclosures are not appropriate in the circumstances of the action and states the objection in the Rule 26(f) discovery plan. n3 For additional discussion regarding the initial discovery conference, see Ch. 10, Planning and Preparation for Discovery.

The discovery provisions specifically relating to depositions, n4 interrogatories, n5 and document requests n6 echo this restriction.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulationsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(iii) states that leave of court is required if "the party seeks to take the deposition before the time specified in Rule 26(d), unless the party certifies in the notice, with supporting facts, that the deponent is expected to leave the United States and be unavailable for examination in this country after that time."

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) ("Without leave of court or written stipulation, interrogatories may not be served before the time specified in Rule 26(d)").

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) ("Without leave of court or written stipulation, a request may not be served before the time specified in Rule 26(d)").

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.06

§ 11.06 Stipulating to an Expedited Discovery Schedule

[1] Agreeing to Early Discovery In Advance of Preliminary Injunction Hearing

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provide time periods prescribing when discovery may be initiated and when responses must be made. n1 The rules provide, however, that the parties may enter into stipulations regarding the scheduling of discovery. Accordingly, when the parties each have an interest in expediting the discovery process, the simplest approach is to stipulate to an expedited discovery schedule.

The timing of discovery necessarily is dictated by the urgency of a particular case. Optimally, discovery should be concluded a few days before the scheduled hearing to allow adequate time to prepare for the hearing.

[2] Stipulating to Expedited Discovery Under Rule 29

Where parties are mutually interested in expedited discovery, agreement should be reached regarding the scope, method, and timing of discovery. Rule 29 permits the parties to agree to expedited discovery. Both parties can benefit from expeditious discovery regarding the matters that will be raised in the hearing for interim relief. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29 states:

Unless otherwise directed by the court, the parties may by written stipulation (1) provide that depositions may be taken before any person, at any time or place, on any notice, and in any manner and when so taken may be used like other depositions, and (2) modify other procedures governing or limitations placed on discovery, except that stipulations extending the time provided in Rules 33, 34, and 36 for responses to discovery may, if they would interfere with any time set for completion of discovery, for hearing of a motion, or for trial, be made only with the approval of the court.

The purpose of this rule is to provide greater opportunity for parties themselves to agree on discovery modifications. According to the 1993 Advisory Committee Note, counsel "are encouraged to agree on less expensive and time-consuming methods to obtain information, as through voluntary exchange of documents, use of interviews in lieu of depositions, etc." n2 Note that under Rule 29, the court's approval is generally not required. However, court approval must be obtained if the court's discovery deadline would be affected by the parties' extension of the 30-day period for responding to interrogatories, document requests, or requests for admissions.

[3] Considering the Requirement for a Discovery Conference and Discovery Schedule

Regardless of whether the parties can reach an agreement on expedited discovery, parties must agree to a discovery schedule in conjunction with the Rule 26(f) conference. This conference must be held "as soon as practicable and in any event at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b)." n3 At this conference the parties must discuss the nature and basis of their claims and defenses and the possibilities of a settlement; they must also develop a proposed discovery plan, n4 which must be submitted to the court in written form within 14 days after the meeting. n5 The court's subsequent scheduling order, among other things, shall limit the time to complete discovery, n6 and it may also include modifications of the times for disclosures under Rules 26(a) and 26(e)(1) and of the extent of discovery to be permitted. n7 When the parties have agreed to expedited discovery, that agreement should be reflected in the written report required by Rule 26(f). This report will likely be incorporated into the court's scheduling order, thus minimizing the risk of non-compliance and providing a basis for prompt relief in the event of a breach.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulationsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a), 33(a), 34(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29 Advisory Committee's Note (1993).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n4)Footnote 4. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3), a discovery plan must state the parties' views and proposals on:

> (A) What changes should be made in the timing, form, or requirement for disclosures under Rule 26(a), including a statement of when initial disclosures were made or will be made;
>
> (B) The subjects on which discovery may be needed, when discovery should be completed, and whether discovery should be conducted in phases or be limited to or focused on particular issues;
>
> (C) Any issues about disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information, including the form or forms in which it should be produced;
>
> (D) Any issues about claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation materials, including -- if the parties agree on a procedure to assert these claims after production -- whether to ask the court to include their agreement in an order;
>
> (E) What changes should be made in the limitations on discovery imposed under these rules or by local rule, and what other limitations should be imposed; and
>
> (F) Any other orders that the court should issue under Rule 26(c) or under Rule 16(b) and (c).

The plan should also provide for the exchange of exhibits, witness lists, and briefs prior to the scheduled date of the hearing. Note that it is a good idea to have the names of deponents listed in a discovery order. If additional depositions become necessary, they may be arranged by agreement with counsel. If counsel refuses to produce the additional deponents, the court may order the additional depositions, if they are necessary.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.07

§ 11.07 Evaluating the Court's Discretion to Order Expedited Discovery

[1] Seeking a Court Order When the Parties Cannot Reach Agreement to Expedite Discovery

Absent a stipulation to expedite discovery, formal discovery generally may not commence until the parties have conferred and have developed a proposed discovery plan. Accordingly, it may be necessary for a party seeking interim relief to seek a court order expediting the discovery process. The 1993 Advisory Committee Note to Rule 26 states that expedited discovery will be appropriate in some cases, such as those "involving requests for a preliminary injunction or motions challenging personal jurisdiction." n1

[2] Comparing Expedited Discovery for Purposes of Interim Relief With Depositions Taken Under Rule 27 in Preparation of an Action

Although the federal rules provide for leave of court to allow expedited discovery, the rules set forth no firm standards for determining whether leave should be granted. The determination is left entirely to the court's discretion. However, Fed. R. Civ. P. 27, which governs the use of depositions in preparation of an action, provides some guidance for the related issue of expedited discovery. Rule 27 is normally used when testimony of a witness would be lost if not recorded immediately, such as when the witness is quite old or infirm or in danger of dying due to a serious illness or injury. n2

Under Rule 27, the applicant need not show an independent ground for federal jurisdiction to conduct a deposition before an action is filed, although the applicant is required to demonstrate that federal jurisdiction will exist for the action for which the testimony is sought. n3 Similarly, expedited discovery in the context of seeking immediate injunctive relief may precede a detailed examination of the basis for subject matter jurisdiction. A district court will order pre-filing discovery if satisfied that the perpetuation of testimony may prevent a failure or delay of justice. n4 Likewise, a similar standard may be applicable in expedited discovery for the purpose of seeking interim relief.

[3] Seeking Expedited Discovery on the Basis of Necessity or Prejudice

There are few reported opinions dealing with expedited discovery. Those courts that have written on the subject have uniformly required some showing of necessity or prejudice that would occur if the requested discovery were not allowed. The degree of necessity or prejudice that will be required depends, of course, on the facts and circumstances of each case.

Courts have suggested that leave of court for expedited discovery may be appropriate in the following circumstances:

- Where a party seeks testimony from an aged or infirm witness who might not be available otherwise n5
- Where there is a significant risk of loss of evidence n6 (such as where the witness is about to leave the country), n7
- Where the party seeking a preliminary injunction lacks the information necessary to succeed on the motion n8
- Where the moving party suffers or is in danger of suffering irreparable harm and needs to discover information to avoid further injury n9
- Where discovery is necessary to locate a missing defendant n10

In seeking expedited discovery in support of a motion for a preliminary injunction,counsel must do more than assert that discovery will allow for better preparation for the injunction hearing. n11

[4] Offering Evidence in Support of Expedited Discovery

One court has held that a plaintiff's request to expedite taking a deposition of the defendant must be supported by each of the following: n12

- A showing of irreparable injury
- Some probability of success on the merits
- Some connection between the expedited discovery and the avoidance of the irreparable injury
- Some evidence that the injury that will result without expedited discovery looms greater than the injury that the defendant will suffer if the expedited relief is granted

Although not every court will require such a stringent showing for expedited discovery, these factors provide a useful guide to follow in preparing a motion for expedited discovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulationsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26 Advisory Committe's Note (1993).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Petition of Rosario, 109 F.R.D. 368 (D. Mass. 1986) ; In re Sims, 389 F.2d 148 (5th Cir. 1967) .

(n3)Footnote 3. General Motors Corp. v. Gunn, 752 F. Supp. 729 (N.D. Miss. 1990) ; Dressler Indus., Inc. v. United States, 596 F.2d 1231 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Babolia v. Local 456, Teamsters & Chauffeurs Union, 11 F.R.D. 423, 424 (S.D.N.Y. 1951) . Cf. In re Agent Orange Product Liability Litigation, 96 F.R.D. 587 (E.D.N.Y. 1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc. v. Eastern R.R. Presidents Conference, 14 F.R.D. 189, 190 (E.D. Pa. 1953) . Cf. K.J. Schwartzbaum, Inc. v. Evans, Inc., 279 F. Supp. 422, 424 (S.D.N.Y. 1968) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(iii).

(n8)Footnote 8. Notaro V. Koch, 95 F.R.D. 403, 405 n.3 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fimab-Finanziaria Maglifico v. Helio Import/Export, Inc., 601 F. Supp. 1, 3 (S.D. Fla. 1983) ; Fimab-Finanziaria Maglifico v. Kitchen, 548 F. Supp. 248, 250 (S.D. Fla. 1982) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Allendale Mut. Ins., Co. v. Bull Data Systems, 32 F.3d 1175 (7th Cir. 1994) (discovery order not appealable as an interlocutory injunction, as there was no showing of irreparable harm or infringement of any substantive right); United States v. Agnew, 80 F.R.D. 506 (S.D. Fla. 1978) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Pearce v. Southeast Banking Corp., 97 F.R.D 536-537 (S.D. Fla. 1983) ; Gibson v. Bagas Restaurants, Inc., 87 F.R.D. 60, 61 (W.D. Mo. 1980) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Notaro v. Koch, 95 F.R.D. 403, 405 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.08

§ 11.08 Deciding Whether to Pursue Expedited Discovery

[1] Evaluating Whether Expedited Discovery is Necessary

The liberal purposes of discovery under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are widely recognized. Therefore, when time permits, it is not surprising that most trial lawyers are inclined to ask for discovery before appearing at a preliminary injunction hearing.

Even if the requirements for obtaining expedited discovery can be met, however, consideration should be given to whether expedited discovery is necessary or desirable. If the party seeking interim relief has the evidence necessary to satisfy the standards for issuance of a preliminary injunction or if the issues in dispute are essentially legal rather than factual, expedited discovery may not be advantageous. In fact, early discovery may only delay the proceedings or suggest to the court that there are substantial factual issues in dispute, thus diminishing the strength of the request for injunctive relief.

In most cases, however, some discovery is advisable. In cases where issues of intent and credibility are involved or where the underlying facts are subject to sudden change, expedited discovery can be particularly helpful.

[2] Seeking Expedited Discovery on Behalf of Plaintiff

Plaintiff's counsel may seek an order for expedited discovery to provide early momentum in the case and to establish admissions and other evidence necessary to sustain the burden of proof at the preliminary injunction hearing. Expedited discovery may also make it possible to flush out the defenses on which the defendant will rely to oppose the request for injunctive relief.

By facilitating and perhaps simplifying preparation for a motion seeking interim relief, expedited discovery can enhance the likelihood of success at the preliminary injunction hearing. In addition, effective discovery at the outset of the case may establish a stronger posture for potential settlement negotiations.

[3] Seeking Expedited Discovery on Behalf of Defendant

Defense counsel may seek early discovery for similar reasons as plaintiff's counsel. Obviously, to oppose a motion for preliminary injunction it will help to learn as much as possible about the facts and theory of the moving party's case before the evidentiary hearing.

By effectively using discovery, the defendant may also slow down a plaintiff's momentum and obtain valuable evidence, including admissions favorable to the defense. Discovery may also be used to identify areas of common interest and other information that may advance settlement negotiations.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.09

§ 11.09 Moving for Expedited Discovery

[1] Filing Motion for Expedited Discovery With Motion for Preliminary Injunction

As a general rule, depositions and document requests are the most useful methods of expedited discovery. Interrogatories are not often practical, but, in rare cases, may be helpful to elicit basic facts.

The memorandum of law in support of an expedited discovery motion should state as clearly and forcefully as possible both the basis on which discovery is appropriate and the facts that support the motion. With few exceptions, the motion for expedited discovery should be filed with the proposed motion for preliminary injunction and the request for a hearing date.

[2] Providing the Opposing Party With Notice of Motion

Courts are reluctant to grant a motion for expedited discovery without notice to the opposing party except in the most compelling circumstances. One source suggests that a party who seeks expedited discovery on an ex parte basis, such as in a case involving a threat of alteration or destruction of evidence, should treat the matter as a request for a temporary restraining order and should simultaneously present affidavits or other evidence in support of the motion for expedited discovery and an application for a temporary restraining order prohibiting alteration or destruction of specific documents. n1

[3] Specifying the Scope and Nature of Expedited Discovery Sought

The motion for expedited discovery should identify as precisely as possible the scope and nature of the discovery sought. If the moving party seeks leave to take depositions, the motion should identify the witnesses to be deposed and should include a proposed deposition schedule. If seeking an order to expedite requests for production of documents, the actual requests should be attached to the motion as an exhibit.

Overall, expedited discovery requests should be precise, well focused, and drawn as narrowly as possible.

[4] Anticipating Objections to the Motion for Expedited Discovery

Anticipate the opponent's objections and persuade the court that the request for expedited discovery is reasonable under the circumstances. For example, if it is likely that the opponent will claim that the information sought is highly confidential, is a trade secret, or is otherwise commercially sensitive, propose to submit a confidentiality order that may be quickly approved and implemented. Similarly, if it is anticipated that the opposition may raise a claim of privilege, prepare a motion to compel on the basis of the information already known, so that the matter may be resolved promptly.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See DeAnda, Hogan & Healey, Injunctive Relief and Expedited Discovery in Federal Court (Part II), 1987 Tex. B.J. 1250, 1251.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.10

§ 11.10 Considering the Use of Expedited Depositions

[1] Evaluating When Court Order is Required to Take Depositions

Absent an agreement between the parties, in all circumstances other than where the witness is expected to leave the country, expedited depositions require leave of court. Rule 30(a) states that without a written stipulation, a court order is required to depose a prisoner or to take a deposition in the following circumstances: n1

- The deposition would result in more than ten depositions under Rule 30 or 31 by the plaintiffs, or by the defendants, or by third-party defendants
- The proposed deponent has already been deposed
- A party seeks to take a deposition before the time specified in Rule 26(d), i.e., before the parties haveconferred regarding discovery as required by Rule 26(f). An exception exists if the notice of deposition "contains a certification, with supporting facts, that the person to be examined is expected to leave the United States and be unavailable for examination in this country unless deposed before that time."

Under Rule 30(a)(2), leave of court is to be granted for the purpose of allowing depositions to the extent consistent with the principles enunciated in Rule 26(b)(2). n2

[2] Noticing the Deposition

Under Rule 30(b)(1), parties are required to give reasonable notice in writing of any deposition to be taken to all parties in the action. The notice must include the following: n3

- The time and place of the deposition
- The name and address of the person to be examined

Prior agreement between counsel on the time and place of the deposition is extremely important in expedited discovery because the delay caused by objections to time and place impair the immediate objectives in the litigation. Only if agreement on those details is not possible should counsel send a peremptory notice of deposition.

If the deponent is to bring any documents or other tangible items to the deposition, specify with particularity in the notice of deposition the items the deponent must produce. The request must be made in compliance with Rule 34. n4 Any ambiguity will result in delay if the witness does not bring the desired documents to the deposition.

[3] Noticing the Deposition of Corporate Party or Other Organization

When seeking a preliminary injunction in an action involving a corporate party or a partnership, association, or governmental agency, consider the provisions of Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6). Under that rule, the party taking discovery must describe "with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested." The organization named as the deponent must then designate one or more officers, directors, or other persons to testify on its behalf.

Where more than one individual is necessary to comply with the deposition request, the organization is required to designate individuals who will testify on each of the matters listed. Use of Rule 30(b)(6) in this setting is advantageous. Time is not wasted deposing people who lack sufficient knowledge of the pertinent subject matter. More importantly, because the organization is bound by the testimony of the person it designates, this procedure can yield valuable admissions that may be introduced against the organization at the injunction hearing.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. That rule states:
The frequency or extent of use of the discovery methods otherwise permitted under these rules and by any local rule shall be limited by the court if it determines that: (i) the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; (ii) the party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought; or (iii) burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues. The court may act on its own initiative after reasonable notice or pursuant to a motion under Rule 26(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.11

§ 11.11 Determining the Scope of the Expedited Deposition

[1] Considering the Overall Claim and the Interim Relief Sought

The basic outline for deposition inquiries depends on the elements of the cause of action and the attendant defenses. With discovery incident to obtaining a preliminary injunction, it is critical to elicit evidence of irreparable harm and the balance of hardships.

[2] Seeking Information Regarding Irreparable Harm

Irreparable harm is harm that cannot be redressed by a legal or equitable remedy following a trial. n1 In most cases the issue is whether monetary damages will adequately compensate the plaintiff for the defendant's alleged wrongdoing. Factors relevant to that issue include the following: n2

- The nature of the plaintiff's losses and the difficulty of quantifying those losses with reasonable certainty
- Whether an award of damages will be too late to save the interests plaintiff is trying to protect
- The likelihood of collecting an award of damages

Loss of profits or income that ultimately can be recouped at trial usually does not constitute irreparable harm. n3

Accordingly, the deposition should be used to develop evidence supporting the adequacy or inadequacy of money damages. Testimony obtained at deposition may be critical to show whether or not money damages will be sufficient to compensate the plaintiff and whether the defendant's conduct should be enjoined.

[3] Seeking Information Regarding Alleged Hardship

Just as the defendant should probe plaintiff's claim of irreparable harm, so the plaintiff should inquire as to any alleged hardship that the defendant would suffer because of the injunction.

If any potential hardship to the defendant from an erroneously issued injunction can be cured by a favorable final judgment or can be fully compensated by the bond required under Rule 65(c), then there is no real harm to the defendant, nor is there any reason to deny interim relief that is otherwise warranted. n4

[4] Organizing Depositions for the Preliminary Injunction Hearing

In conducting expedited discovery, and particularly during depositions before the preliminary injunction hearing, counsel should create a discovery record that may be used easily at the evidentiary hearing. For example, when multiple depositions are taken in preparation of the hearing, it may help to identify and number exhibits sequentially continuing from one deposition to the next, instead of initiating a new numbering system for each deposition. It will save time and avoid confusion if the parties can use the exhibit numbers from the depositions for the preliminary injunction hearing. Similarly, when referring to the discovery record at the hearing on the preliminary injunction, there will be less likelihood of confusion from the use of differing sets of exhibit numbers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Campbell Soup Co. v. ConAgra, Inc., 977 F.2d 86 (3d Cir. 1992) ; Instant Air Freight Co. v. C.F. Air Freight, Inc., 882 F.2d 797, 801 (3d Cir. 1989) ; Puerto Rico Conserv. Found. v. Larson, 797 F. Supp. 1066 (D.P.R. 1992) . See generally Laycock, The Death Of The Irreparable Injury Rule, 103 Harv. L. Rev. 688 (1990).

(n2)Footnote 2. Nnadi v. Richter, 976 F.2d 682 (11th Cir. 1992) ; Instant Air Freight Co. v. C.F. Air Freight, Inc., 882 F.2d 797, 801 (3d Cir. 1989) ; Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 386 (7th Cir. 1984) ; Little Caesar Enters., Inc. v. R-J-L Foods, Inc., 796 F. Supp. 1026 (E.D. Mich. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Instant Air Freight Co. v. C.F. Air Freight, Inc., 882 F.2d 797, 801-803 (3d Cir. 1989) ; Franks GMC Truck Center, Inc. v. GMC, 847 F.2d 100 (3d Cir. 1988) ; Owens-Illinois, Inc. v. Levin, 792 F. Supp. 429 (D. Md. 1992) (litigation costs insufficient to show irreparable harm); Transamerica Rental Fin. Corp. v. Rental Experts, 790 F. Supp. 378 (D. Conn. 1992) (monetary losses not irreparable harm).

(n4)Footnote 4. National Kidney Patients Assoc. v. Sullivan, 958 F.2d 1127 (D.C. Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 966, 122 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1993) ; Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 387 (7th Cir. 1984) ; qad., Inc. v. ALN Assoc., Inc., 781 F. Supp. 561 (N.D. Ill. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.12

§ 11.12 Using Expedited Document Requests in Preparation of Preliminary Injunction Hearing

[1] Considering the General Time Constraints of Document Requests

Rule 34(b) provides that "[w]ithout leave of court or written stipulation, a request may not be served before the time specified in Rule 26(d)." The rule also provides that all parties must respond to a request to produce documents or things within 30 days of service of the request; a shorter or longer time may be ordered by the court or agreed to by the parties. n1 Accordingly, if the opponent does not agree to expedite the schedule to request and produce documents, counsel may petition the court to shorten the time period set by the rule.

[2] Considering Possible Objections to Court Order

Counsel should anticipate objections that might delay production of essential documents. For example, if it likely that the other party will claim that many of the sought-after documents are highly confidential and sensitive, draft a form of agreed protective order. If the opposing party is likely to raise a claim of privilege regarding certain essential documents, submit a memorandum of law on the anticipated objection in support of the motion for expedited discovery. In the alternative, propose placing the documents under seal or requiring their production in camera.

[3] Managing Documents During Expedited Discovery

The obvious goal of expedited document discovery is to have the documents available for examination as soon as possible. Nevertheless, the need for careful document control procedures is even more acute here than in routine document discovery. The heightened time pressure of expedited production and inspection increases the risk of error for all parties. In the typically frenetic rush to complete discovery in time for the injunction hearing, privileged documents may be producedinadvertently, critical documents may be overlooked and not marked for copying, and any number of other errors may occur.

In screening the client's documents, and in requesting and inspecting production by the opponent, counsel must strike a balance between selectivity and thoroughness. Make special efforts to identify key documents for purposes of the preliminary injunction hearing. All documents potentially useful in the case, however, should be copied even though their significance might relate to issues that will only arise later in the litigation.

Obviously, as with all document production, no document should be produced until it is first reviewed by counsel for privilege and substance. An agreement between the parties providing that inadvertent disclosure of privileged material will not constitute a waiver of the privilege may be helpful in moving discovery along.

For additional discussion regarding document management, see Ch. 15, Document Management.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

75 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.13

§ 11.13 Propounding Interrogatories In Preparation of Preliminary Injunction Hearing

A court order is required to propound interrogatories at any time before the parties have conferred regarding discovery as required under Rule 26(d). n1 Usually, it is not practical to use interrogatories in preliminary injunction discovery. Generally, the information desired may be obtained more quickly through document requests and depositions.

In certain cases, however, a few, narrowly drawn interrogatories designed to identify key witnesses may be useful and generally will not impose substantial burdens. Those questions must be extremely narrow so as to permit opposing counsel to respond in a few days. It is likely, however, that the trial judge will not grant an order allowing for the early use of interrogatories (including a response on shortened time) unless he or she first reviews the proposed interrogatories and finds that they are not burdensome and that the information cannot be obtained more easily by another type of discovery. In most situations, counsel should limit preliminary injunction discovery to document requests, depositions, and perhaps a request to inspect the premises in appropriate cases.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.14

§ 11.14 Preparing for the Preliminary Injunction Hearing

[1] Offering Evidence Obtained Through Expedited Discovery

It is critical to make effective use of evidence obtained through expedited discovery at the preliminary injunction hearing. Evidence received at the hearing becomes part of the record and the results of the hearing can determine the course of the litigation.

While the most salient and dramatic points of a case are probably best presented through live testimony, the presentation of the case should be streamlined at the preliminary injunction hearing. Testimony and documents obtained through expedited discovery may be effectively offered for the following purposes:

- To establish a foundation and background evidence
- To corroborate and underscore evidence presented through the key witnesses
- To help establish factors in support of, or in opposition to, the preliminary injunction, such as the degree of harm at issue

[2] Submitting a Brief in Support of the Preliminary Injunction

It is absolutely necessary to submit a supporting brief in advance of the preliminary injunction hearing. The brief should set forth the relevant law and analogous cases supporting the elements of the requested injunctive relief and the relevant factors to be balanced under the circumstances. In addition, the brief should address anticipated objections of privilege or work-product.

The brief should contain references to the testimony and documents obtained through expedited discovery, which will be offered as evidence of record. Such a brief will provide the court with a roadmap of arguments to be made at the hearing, which includes reference to supporting evidence that will be offered. For additional discussion regarding preliminary injunction hearings, see Ch. 7, Injunctions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 11 Discovery and Interim Injunctive Relief

2-11 Federal Litigation Guide § 11.15

§ 11.15 Emergency Motion for an Order Expediting Discovery

[1] FORM

Emergency Motion for an Order Expediting Discovery

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse, located at [address of court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 26(d); [Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 30(a)(2) (depositions); and Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 34(b) (document requests]:

> (a) granting that discovery may be expedited in this action in preparation of a preliminary injunction hearing, pursuant to the following discovery schedule: [set forth proposed schedule of expedited discovery including individuals to be deposed and time and place of depositions (making reference to attached deposition notices); as well as all proposed document requests (making reference to attached requests)]; and
>
> (b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute (substantiating the need for the early discovery under the circumstances)) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules; see § 2.03]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d) seeking an order to expedite discovery for the purpose of preparing for a preliminary injunction hearing. The party seeking relief should provide the court with a proposed discovery schedule to aid in the preparation of the preliminary injunction hearing and attach proposed deposition notices and document requests.

[3] Filing of Affidavits

Parties seeking and opposing orders for expedited discovery should submit affidavits or appropriate affidavit substitutes supporting their position for the necessity or lack of necessity of expedited discovery.

[4] Critical Considerations

Parties must consult the federal rules, local rules, and individual judge's rules regarding the following issues:

- Formatting requirements
- Bluebacks and other covers
- Page limits
- Caption
- Signature block
- Specifying the rule or statute on which motion is based
- Date and time of hearing
- Oral argument on the motion
- Expedited hearing
- Supporting papers
- Serving motion papers
- Filing motion papers
- Courtesy copies
- Opposing papers

- Reply papers

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

78 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide 12.syn

§ 12.syn Synopsis to Chapter 12: Interrogatories

§ 12.01 Interrogatories May Inquire Into Claims or Defenses

§ 12.02 Persons Subject to Interrogatories
[1] Parties Only
[2] Non-Adverse Parties
[3] Interrogatories Must Be Directed to Named Party
[4] Party Challenging Jurisdiction Is Subject to Interrogatories Until Case Dismissed
[5] Next Friend Not Personally Subject to Interrogatories, But May Answer Interrogatories on Behalf of Infant or Incompetent Party
[6] Interrogatories to Named or Unnamed Class Members in Class Actions
[6.--1] Named Class Members Are Parties Subject to Interrogatories
[6.--2] Court Has Discretion to Permit Service of Interrogatories on Unnamed Class Members
[6.--3] Several Factors Determine if Unnamed Class Members Should Be Subject to Interrogatories

§ 12.03 Effect of Interrogatory Responses

§ 12.04 Understanding Permissible Scope of Interrogatories
[1] Interrogatories Must Seek Information Relevant to Claims or Defenses
[2] Seeking Facts Within Knowledge of Interrogating Party Permissible
[3] Seeking Legal Conclusions Impermissible

§ 12.05 Two Types of Interrogatories

§ 12.06 Using Identification Interrogatories

§ 12.07 Using Contention Interrogatories

§ 12.08 Advantages of Interrogatories

§ 12.09 Disadvantages of Interrogatories

§ 12.10 Impact of Rule 26 Mandatory Disclosure
[1] Nature of Rule 26 Requirements

[2] Use of Interrogatories to Discover Further Information

§§ 12.11 through 12.19 [Reserved]

§ 12.20 Interrogatories Must Adequately Inform Responding Party of Information Requested

§ 12.21 Using Instructions and Definitions

§ 12.22 Interrogatories May Cross-Reference Other Discovery Demands

§ 12.23 Using Form and Pattern Interrogatories

§ 12.24 Number of Interrogatories That May Be Propounded Is Limited
[1] Original Actions: 25 Interrogatories on Each Party, Absent Court Order, Stipulation, or Local Rule
[2] Numerical Limits Include Discrete Subparts
[3] Exceeding Numerical Limits
[3.--1] Courts Permit Additional Interrogatories if Benefits Outweigh Burden
[3.--2] Courts Evaluate Requests for Additional Interrogatories on Case-by-Case Basis
[3.--3] Court May Grant Leave to Serve Additional Interrogatories in Scheduling Order or at Pretrial Conference
[4] Parties May Stipulate to Additional Interrogatories
[5] Removed Actions: Propounding Party Must Specify Interrogatories to Be Answered, Seek Additional Interrogatories, or Resubmit

§ 12.25 Local Rules May Require Numbering Sets in Sequence

§ 12.26 Signature Required

§ 12.27 Timing and Service of Interrogatories
[1] Restrictions on Timing of Discovery
[2] Effect of Discovery Cutoff Dates or Trial Setting
[3] Serving All Parties

§ 12.28 CHECKLIST: Drafting Interrogatories

§§ 12.29 through 12.39 [Reserved]

§ 12.40 Deadline for Responding
[1] 30-Day Deadline Generally Applies
[2] Agreement or Order May Alter Deadline for Responding
[3] Timing of Response for Removed Actions
[4] Failure to Make Timely Response Sanctionable

§ 12.41 Duty to Respond, and Form of Answer
[1] Responding Party Must Answer or Object
[2] Interrogatories Must Be Answered Separately, Fully, and in Writing
[3] Responding Party Has Duty to Furnish All Information Available to It
[3.--1] Duty Encompasses Information Controlled by Party, But Does Not Include Duty to Search Out New Information
[3.--2] For Organizational Entity, Duty Encompasses Information Possessed by Officers, Employees, and Subsidiaries
[3.--3] Lack of Knowledge May Excuse Answering Interrogatory

§ 12.42 Incorporation By Reference of Other Discovery Disfavored

§ 12.43 Persons Who May Respond; Duty to Sign, Verify, and Certify Responses
[1] Interrogatories Directed to Individual Must Be Answered, Signed, and Verified by That Person
[2] Interrogatories Directed to Organization Must Be Answered, Signed, and Verified by Officer or Agent
[3] Organization Entitled to Designate Agent; Attorney May Be Agent
[4] Interrogatories Directed to Government Agency Must Be Answered, Signed, and Verified by Officer or Agent
[5] Attorney for Party Must Certify Responses

§ 12.44 Providing Business Records in Lieu of Response

§ 12.45 Responding Party Has Continuing Duty to Supplement Answers

§ 12.46 Strategic Approach to Responding to Interrogatories
[1] Identifying Persons With Knowledge of Specific Event
[2] Identifying Documents
[3] Evaluating Damage Claims
[4] Dealing With Contention Interrogatories
[5] Identifying Persons Involved in Preparing Responses
[6] Providing Factual Narratives
[7] Providing Supplemental Answers

§§ 12.47 through 12.59 [Reserved]

§ 12.60 Objections Must Be Served With Answers

§ 12.61 Stating Precise Grounds for Objection

§ 12.62 Avoiding Blanket Objections

§ 12.63 Untimely Objections Are Waived Unless "Good Cause" is Shown

§ 12.64 Replacing Insufficient, But Timely Objection

§ 12.65 Serving Appropriate Parties

§ 12.66 Claiming Privilege

§ 12.67 Protecting Trade Secrets

§ 12.68 Signing Objections

§ 12.69 CHECKLISTS: Preparing Objections to Interrogatories
[1] CHECKLIST: Grounds for Objection
[2] CHECKLIST: Considering Strategic Avoidance of Objection

§§ 12.70 through 12.99 [Reserved]

§ 12.100 Interrogatories
[1] FORM
Interrogatories
[2] Definitions
[3] Precise Interrogatories Required
[4] Content of Interrogatories
[5] Limits on Number of Interrogatories

[6] Signature Required
[7] Rule 26(f) Meeting May Be Required Prior to Commencement of Discovery
[8] Timing of Service of Interrogatories
[9] Service on Parties
[10] Filing of Interrogatories Generally Not Permitted

§ 12.101 Answers to Interrogatories
[1] FORM
Answers to Interrogatories
[2] Response to Each Interrogatory Required
[3] All Available Information Must Be Provided
[4] Answer of Corporation or Other Entity
[5] Signing Answers
[6] Methods of Service

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter covers procedures for propounding and responding to interrogatories, and includes coverage of the following topics:

- Types of inquiries that may be made through interrogatories
- Advantages and disadvantages of using interrogatories as opposed to other discovery devices
- Drafting and timing considerations
- Distinctions between identification and contention interrogatories
- Service requirements
- Requirements for answering interrogatories on behalf of a business entity
- The use and effect of interrogatory answers
- Objecting to interrogatories
- Consequences of a party's failure to respond to interrogatories

The chapter contains sample interrogatories, as well as sample answers to interrogatories. A checklist of possible objections is also included.

For expanded coverage of interrogatories, see MOORE'S Federal Practice, Ch. 33, Interrogatories to Parties (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.01

§ 12.01 Interrogatories May Inquire Into Claims or Defenses

Interrogatories are written questions served by one party on any other party that may relate to any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party. n1

Interrogatories are typically used to determine the basis for a claim or defense, and to delineate the facts and issues in dispute. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1), 33.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fonseca v. Regan, 734 F.2d 944, 948 (2d Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 882 (1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.02

§ 12.02 Persons Subject to Interrogatories

[1] Parties Only

A party may serve interrogatories on any other party to the action. n1 Parties subject to interrogatories include any person or entity named in the summons and complaint, including public and private corporations, partnerships, associations, or governmental agencies. n2

Interrogatories may not be served on a nonparty, although an exception is occasionally carved out for absent class members. n3 The closest alternative discovery device, the deposition upon written questions, may be used to inquire of nonparties. n4

[2] Non-Adverse Parties

A party may serve any other party with interrogatories, even if their interests are not adverse. n5 Accordingly, a plaintiff may require that a third-party defendant respond to the plaintiff's interrogatories, even though the plaintiff is not suing the third-party defendant. n6

[3] Interrogatories Must Be Directed to Named Party

Interrogatories may not be directed to a particular person within a corporation or business entity if that person is not a party. Rather, the interrogatories must be directed to the named corporation or business entity itself. n7

If the propounding party seeks to learn the names of individuals with personal knowledge of each response, it can ask for them as part of the interrogatories directed to the corporation or business entity. n8

[4] Party Challenging Jurisdiction Is Subject to Interrogatories Until Case Dismissed

A party challenging the jurisdiction of the court is still a party for purposes of answering interrogatories, until the jurisdictional issues are determined. n9 The party's failure to respond to interrogatories pertaining to jurisdiction may even result in sanctions, including a determination that personal jurisdiction exists. n10

[5] Next Friend Not Personally Subject to Interrogatories, But May Answer Interrogatories on Behalf of

Infant or Incompetent Party

The next friend of an infant or incompetent party is not a party. n11 Consequently, a next friend cannot be compelled to answer interrogatories in his or her personal capacity. n12 However, a next friend may answer interrogatories on behalf of an infant or incompetent party when the party is incapable of answering. n13

[6] Interrogatories to Named or Unnamed Class Members in Class Actions

[6.--1] Named Class Members Are Parties Subject to Interrogatories

In a class action, named members of the class are parties, and are thus subject to interrogatories. Plaintiffs whose actions are consolidated as a class action are all properly subject to discovery as parties without any showing of special circumstances. n14 For discussion of class actions, see Ch. 42, Class Actions.

[6.--2] Court Has Discretion to Permit Service of Interrogatories on Unnamed Class Members

Unnamed class members are not technically parties within the meaning of the rules governing class action suits. n15 However, unnamed class members may not be immune from discovery. The court has discretion to permit submission of interrogatories to unnamed but identifiable members of a class, pursuant to its authority to manage class action suits. n16 Reasonable discovery by means of interrogatories should be permitted from unnamed class members when the special circumstances of the case justify it. n17

The propounding party has the burden of demonstrating the merits of the requested discovery. n18

If the court allows discovery from unnamed class members, they must receive adequate notice so that they are fully informed of the discovery order and the potential consequences of noncompliance with the order. n19

[6.--3] Several Factors Determine if Unnamed Class Members Should Be Subject to Interrogatories

In determining whether unnamed class members should be subject to interrogatories, courts generally consider the following factors: n20

- The relevance of the discovery to issues which are common to the class
- Whether the interrogatories are tendered in good faith and not be unduly burdensome
- Whether the information sought is unavailable from the named class representatives

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersNamed MembersCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a); Chilcutt v. United States, 4 F.3d 1313, 1320-1324 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Transamerican Ref. Corp. v. Dravo Corp., 139 F.R.D. 619, 621 (S.D. Tex. 1991) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 31.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) advisory committee's note (1970).

(n6)Footnote 6. Andrulonis v. United States, 96 F.R.D. 43, 45 (N.D.N.Y. 1982) (citing Moore's).

(n7)Footnote 7. Holland v. Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., 28 F.R.D. 595, 595 (D.D.C. 1961) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Shepherd v. American Broad. Cos., Inc., 62 F.3d 1469, 1482 (D.C. Cir. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Provident Nat'l Bank v. California Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 819 F.2d 434, 438 (3d Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Insurance Corp. of Ir., Ltd. v. Compagnie des Bauxites de Guinee, 456 U.S. 694, 706, 102 S. Ct. 2099, 72 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1982) .

(n11)Footnote 11. A "next friend" is defined as "[o]ne acting for benefit of infant, or other person unable to look after his or her own interests or manage his or her own lawsuit." BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY 1043 (6th ed. 1990).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Ju Shu Cheung v. Dulles, 16 F.R.D. 550, 552 (D. Mass. 1954) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Hall v. Hague, 34 F.R.D. 449, 450 (D. Md. 1964) .

(n14)Footnote 14. In re Folding Carton Antitrust Litig., 83 F.R.D. 260, 264 (N.D. Ill. 1979) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank v. Roper, 445 U.S. 326, 333-336, 100 S. Ct. 1166, 63 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 (class actions).

(n16)Footnote 16. Brennan v. Midwestern United Life Ins. Co., 450 F.2d 999, 1004 (7th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 921 (1972) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d) (court may make appropriate procedural orders in conducting class action suits).

(n17)Footnote 17. Brennan v. Midwestern United Life Ins. Co., 450 F.2d 999, 1004 (7th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 921 (1972) ; but see Cox v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co., 784 F.2d 1546, 1556 (11th Cir. 1986) (individual discovery from unnamed class members may be available only in rare situations at later stage of sex discrimination proceeding).

(n18)Footnote 18. Clark v. Universal Builders, Inc., 501 F.2d 324, 340 (7th Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1070 (1974) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Brennan v. Midwestern United Life Ins. Co., 450 F.2d 999, 1006 (7th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 921 (1972) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Dellums v. Powell, 566 F.2d 167, 187 (D.C. Cir. 1977) , cert. denied, 438 U.S. 916 (1978) ; Transamerican Ref. Corp. v. Dravo Corp, 139 F.R.D. 619, 621 (S.D. Tex. 1991) .

82 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.03

§ 12.03 Effect of Interrogatory Responses

Responses to interrogatories may be used as evidence to the extent permitted by the Federal Rules of Evidence, including:

- As admissions of a party opponent n1
- For impeachment purposes n2
- In support of motions, such as motions for summary judgment, or motions to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction n3

If an interrogatory seeks the factual basis of a party's allegations, the response does not usually limit the responding party's proof at trial, except in unusual circumstances where reliance on the response has caused serious prejudice. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseEvidenceHearsayExemptionsGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2); Bell v. A-Leet Leasing Corp., 863 F.2d 257, 259 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid. 613(a); see also Meadows v. Palmer, 33 F.R.D. 136, 137 (D. Md. 1963) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., King v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 117 F.R.D. 2, 6 (D.D.C. 1987) ; see also Duff v. Lobdell-Emery Mfg. Co., 926 F. Supp. 799, 804 (N.D. Ind. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b) advisory committee's note (1970); see also Ruiz v. Hamburg-American Line, 478 F.2d 29, 33 (9th Cir. 1973) ; Zielinski v. Philadelphia Piers, Inc., 139 F. Supp. 408, 413-414 (E.D. Pa. 1956) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.04

§ 12.04 Understanding Permissible Scope of Interrogatories

[1] Interrogatories Must Seek Information Relevant to Claims or Defenses

Interrogatories may inquire about matters relating to any claim or defense including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any books, documents, or other tangible things, and the identity and location of persons having knowledge of any discoverable matter. n1

For good cause the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information need not be admissible at trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n2

[2] Seeking Facts Within Knowledge of Interrogating Party Permissible

Interrogatories may inquire into information within the knowledge of the interrogating party. n3 This type of inquiry narrows and defines the issues and gives the propounding party insight into how the responding party views the facts. n4

[3] Seeking Legal Conclusions Impermissible

Interrogatories may not pose questions when the answers would involve a statement of pure law. n5 Interrogatories involving pure law are those that call for "legal issues unrelated to the facts of the case." n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevance

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); see Tri-Star Pictures, Inc. v. Unger, 171 F.R.D. 94, 101 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See SEC v. Cymaticolor Corp., 106 F.R.D. 545, 549 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Weiner v. Bache Halsey Stuart, Inc. 76 F.R.D. 624, 625 (S.D. Fla. 1977) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(c) advisory committee's note (1970).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b) advisory committee's note (1970); see also Everett v. USAir Group, Inc., 165 F.R.D. 1, 3 (D.D.C. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.05

§ 12.05 Two Types of Interrogatories

There are two general types of interrogatories: n1

- Identification interrogatories seeking factual information n2
- Contention interrogatories inquiring into an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact and helps a party determine the other party's theory of the case n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See generally, Johnston & Johnston, Contention Interrogatories in Federal Court, 148 F.R.D. 441 (1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 12.06.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 12.07.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.06

§ 12.06 Using Identification Interrogatories

Identification interrogatories are used principally at the beginning of a case to: n1

- Identify and locate witnesses for deposition, and to develop deposition questions
- Obtain factual detail pertaining to an opposing party's allegations and defenses
- Identify the opponent's expert witnesses
- Identify relevant documents
- Identify conversations or other communications concerning specified subjects
- Understand the opposing party's computation of damages
- Request information about the opposing party's corporate or business structure, and the nature of its business

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.07

§ 12.07 Using Contention Interrogatories

Contention interrogatories, as distinguished from identification interrogatories, n1 are generally used later in the case to inquire into an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact, including asking a party to: n2

- State what it contends, or whether it is making a certain contention
- Explain the facts underlying its contention
- Assert a position or explain that position with regard to how the law applies to the facts
- Articulate the legal or theoretical basis for a particular contention

While a contention interrogatory is not objectionable merely because its answer involves the responding party's opinion or contention, the court may order that answers to contention interrogatories be deferred until after other designated discovery has been completed, or until a pretrial conference or other later time. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Discussed in § 12.06.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(c); McCarthy v. Paine Webber Group, Inc., 168 F.R.D. 448, 450 (D. Conn. 1996) ; Everett v. USAir Group, Inc., 165 F.R.D. 1, 3 (D.D.C. 1995) ; Diversified Prods. Corp. v. Sports Ctr. Co., 42 F.R.D. 3, 4 (D. Md. 1967) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2); United States ex rel. Tyson v. Amerigroup Ill., Inc., 230 F.R.D. 538, 541 n.5 (N.D. Ill. 2005) (citing Moore's).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.08

§ 12.08 Advantages of Interrogatories

Advantages of interrogatories compared to other discovery devices include the following: n1

- Interrogatories are more convenient and less expensive than depositions
- Interrogatories may help the propounding party prepare for trial by informing that party of the opponent's evidence
- Interrogatories require a party to provide all information available to that party, compared to deposition questions which only require the deponent to provide information as to which he or she has knowledge

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Compagnie Francaise d'Assurance v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 105 F.R.D. 16, 43 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) .

88 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.09

§ 12.09 Disadvantages of Interrogatories

Disadvantages of interrogatories include the following:

- Interrogatories are limited to parties; depositions may be used to obtain discovery from nonparties n1

- Interrogatory responses typically are prepared by the opposing attorney (after consulting with the client); deposition questions, on the other hand, must be responded to personally by the deponent

- Interrogatories do not allow for follow up questions; depositions permit the attorney to ask follow-up questions based on the answers to previous questions, or to repeat questions if the party being deposed attempts to evade answering or gives incomplete answers n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral Depositions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1), 31(a)(1), 33(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.10

§ 12.10 Impact of Rule 26 Mandatory Disclosure

[1] Nature of Rule 26 Requirements

Except in certain categories of cases, parties must voluntarily sharecertain specified types of information at specific pretrial stages without a discovery request: n1

- Preliminary disclosures: During the early pretrial period, parties are required to exchange information regarding (1) individuals likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment; (2) documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses,unless solely for impeachment; (3) claims and calculations of damages; and (4) insurance coverage

- Expert witness disclosures: Information about and from retained expert witnesses is to be shared later into the pretrial period

- Pretrial disclosures: Information about evidence that the parties contemplate using at trial is to be shared near the end of the pretrial period

Many of the types of information subject to mandatory disclosure, such as names of witnesses, had often been obtained through interrogatories prior to enactment of the mandatory disclosure rules. Now, use of interrogatories must be modified in accordance with the disclosure rules. Interrogatories concerning a matter subject to mandatory disclosure should not be promulgated prematurely, before the mandatory disclosure is due.

For complete discussion regarding initial mandatory disclosure under Rule 26, see Ch. 9, The Purposes of Discovery.

[2] Use of Interrogatories to Discover Further Information

Parties may use traditional discovery methods, including interrogatories, to obtain further information regarding any matters subject to mandatory disclosure. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a) advisory committee's note (1993).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
A. Understanding Use of Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 12.11 through 12.19

[Reserved]

§§ 12.11[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.20

§ 12.20 Interrogatories Must Adequately Inform Responding Party of Information Requested

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not prescribe any specific form for interrogatories. n1 However, as one district court has pointed out, properly drafted interrogatories must be definite, clear, concise, and adequately advise the interrogated party what information is being sought. n2 To further this goal, the court may suggest the manner in which questions may be asked, although it may not substitute its own questions. n3

Before drafting interrogatories, the attorney should consult local rules. Most federal jurisdictions have rules that govern the format of interrogatories. For example, some federal district courts require that interrogatories be numbered consecutively and provide space for the responding party's answer immediately following each interrogatory.

Apart from requirements imposed by local rule, the propounding party has considerable leeway in drafting its questions. However, it is to the propounding party's advantage to craft its interrogatories as precisely as possible, because an artlessly drafted question is unlikely to produce any useful information, and may be subject to objection on the grounds that it is overly broad and ambiguous.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33.

(n2)Footnote 2. Babcock Swine, Inc. v. Shelbco, Inc., 126 F.R.D. 43, 45 (S.D. Ohio 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Sempier v. Johnson & Higgins, 45 F.3d 724, 736 (3d Cir. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.21

§ 12.21 Using Instructions and Definitions

Interrogatories may include standard instructions for answering questions or raising objections. n1

Interrogatories may also include definitions of certain terms, especially when the dictionary definition may be insufficient. For example, a definition of "corporation" that includes parents, subsidiaries, affiliates, officers, employees, and agents is probably justified. Definitions should be kept as simple as possible. n2

Lengthy definitions should be avoided because they may increase the likelihood of objection based on undue burden.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Harlem River Consumers Coop., Inc. v. Associated Grocers, 64 F.R.D. 459, 465 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Diversified Prods. Corp. v. Sports Ctr. Co., 42 F.R.D. 3, 4 (D. Md. 1967) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.22

§ 12.22 Interrogatories May Cross-Reference Other Discovery Demands

Interrogatories may refer to other discovery requests served with the interrogatories.For example, requests for admission may be served at the same time as interrogatories, and an interrogatory may ask the responding party, if it denies a particular admission, to explain the reason for the denial. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., United States v. National Steel Corp., 26 F.R.D. 603, 606 (S.D. Tex. 1960) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.23

§ 12.23 Using Form and Pattern Interrogatories

Although form or pattern interrogatories are often derided, n1 they are not prohibited. They may provide an inexpensive and efficient means of covering all aspects of a case. One district court held that when pattern interrogatories are used, they must be used selectively as appropriate to the case, prepared by a lawyer or under a lawyer's direction, and numbered consecutively. n2

The district courts have disparate attitudes towards pattern or "canned" interrogatories. Some criticize them harshly, while some merely attempt to discourage their use by means of local rules mandating that they be geared to the particular case, or by forbidding service of photocopied interrogatories or those that are not numbered consecutively. By contrast, some federal districts have developed court-approved uniform interrogatories for use in special circumstances.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Robbins v. Camden City Bd. of Educ., 105 F.R.D. 49, 57 (D.N.J. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. SCM Societa Commerciale S.P.A. v. Industrial & Commercial Research Corp., 72 F.R.D. 110, 113 n.5 (N.D. Tex. 1976) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.24

§ 12.24 Number of Interrogatories That May Be Propounded Is Limited

[1] Original Actions: 25 Interrogatories on Each Party, Absent Court Order, Stipulation, or Local Rule

Absent court order or written stipulation of the parties, a party may serve on each other party up to 25 written interrogatories, including discrete subparts. n1 A court may alter the 25-interrogatory limit by local rule, and many district courts have done so. n2

In multi-party cases, a party may serve 25 interrogatories on each party involved. For example, if parties A and B are suing parties X, Y, and Z, then A can serve 25 interrogatories on X, 25 on Y, and 25 on Z, and B can do the same. n2.1 The interrogatories are subject, however, to objections based on duplication. n3

[2] Numerical Limits Include Discrete Subparts

The limit on the number of interrogatories a party may serve includes "all discrete subparts." n4 In other words, a party cannot avoid the numerical limits by asking questions about distinct subjects, but numbering the questions as subparts. A party is permitted, however, to ask a general question about a particular kind of communication and then request the time, place, persons present, and contents of each communication without violating the subparts rule. n5

Once a subpart of an interrogatory introduces a line of inquiry that is separate and distinct from the inquiry made by the portion of the interrogatory that precedes it, the subpart must be considered a separate interrogatory, no matter how it is designated. n5.1 If the first question can be answered fully and completely without answering the second question, then the second question is totally independent of the first and not "factually subsumed within and necessarily related to the primary question." n5.2

[3] Exceeding Numerical Limits

[3.--1] Courts Permit Additional Interrogatories if Benefits Outweigh Burden

To serve more than 25 interrogatories, a party must secure a court order or a written stipulation from the responding party. n6 The court's permission may be granted at a scheduling conference or other pretrial conference, n7 but otherwise, the propounding party may need to file a formal motion.

A court may permit a party to serve additional interrogatories to the extent such additional discovery is consistent with Rule 26(b)(2). n8 The point of requiring leave of court to serve additional interrogatories is not to curtail necessary discovery, but to permit the court to examine the situation before the parties propound excessive interrogatories. n9

[3.--2] Courts Evaluate Requests for Additional Interrogatories on Case-by-Case Basis

In evaluating requests to serve additional interrogatories, the courts do not apply any specific criteria, other than balancing the benefits of more discovery against the burden on the responding party. n10 Rather than applying a rote test, the courts examine each request in the context of the case. The propounding party bears the burden ofpersuading the court that the additional interrogatories are necessary under the circumstances of the case. Some jurisdictions have local rules requiring an express showing of "good cause" before they will grant a request to serve more interrogatories.

The court may find numerous interrogatories appropriate in a case involving complex, technical litigation or significant amounts of money. n11

[3.--3] Court May Grant Leave to Serve Additional Interrogatories in Scheduling Order or at Pretrial Conference

The court may grant leave to serve additional interrogatories when it issues a scheduling order before trial, n12 and courts often address discovery matters at that time. The court may also grant permission to pose additional interrogatories at a pretrial conference. n13

[4] Parties May Stipulate to Additional Interrogatories

Rather than seeking permission from the court to serve more than 25 interrogatories, the parties may stipulate to a greater number. n14 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require that stipulations be written. n15 Some local rules provide that a stipulation may be informal, but must be confirmed in writing. Obtaining a stipulation in writing is always the safer practice.

Some jurisdictions do not permit the parties to stipulate to more than 25 interrogatories, and require the parties always to obtain leave of court.

[5] Removed Actions: Propounding Party Must Specify Interrogatories to Be Answered, Seek Additional Interrogatories, or Resubmit

When a case with more than 25 outstanding interrogatories is removed from state court to federal court, the propounding party has three choices. n16 It may: n17

- Move the court to permit the additional interrogatories
- Specify which 25 of the interrogatories are to be answered
- Resubmit 25 interrogatories

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Birch, Stewart, Kolasch & Birch, LLP, 217 F.R.D. 288, 289 (D. Mass. 2003) (local rule, which limited interrogatories to 25 per side, was superseded by Rule 33, which permits each party to serve 25 interrogatories on any other party).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a); see also Nyfield v. Virgin Islands Tel. Corp., 200 F.R.D. 246, 247-248 (D.V.I. 2001) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) advisory committee's note (1993).

(n7)Footnote 5.1. See Willingham v. Ashcroft, 226 F.R.D. 57, 59 (D.D.C. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 5.2. See Estate of Manship v. United States, 232 F.R.D. 552, 555 (M.D. La. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n10)Footnote 7. See [3.--3], below.

(n11)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2).

(n12)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) advisory committee's note (1993).

(n13)Footnote 10. See [3.--2], above.

(n14)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Roesberg v. Johns-Manville Corp., 85 F.R.D. 292, 297 (E.D. Pa. 1980) (defendant asbestos manufacturer required to answer numerous, detailed interrogatories listing products it had manufactured since 1925 and nature of advertising, education efforts, and government findings).

(n15)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) advisory committee's note (1993); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b).

(n16)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a) advisory committee's note (1983).

(n17)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n18)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29, 33(a).

(n19)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(c) (federal civil procedure rules govern removed cases).

(n20)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) advisory committee's note (1993).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.25

§ 12.25 Local Rules May Require Numbering Sets in Sequence

When more than one set of interrogatories is served, local rules may require that the questions in each set be numbered sequentially. That is, if the last question in the first set is number 15, the first question in the second set should be numbered 16.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.26

§ 12.26 Signature Required

Interrogatories must be signed by the propounding party's attorney and include the attorney;s address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

98 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.27

§ 12.27 Timing and Service of Interrogatories

[1] Restrictions on Timing of Discovery

Interrogatories may be served as determined by:

- Time limits prescribed by federal statutes and local district court rules n1
- Agreement of the parties n2
- Order of the court n3

In most districts, the parties' Rule 26(f) preliminary discovery conference is the event triggering the opening of formal discovery, including service of interrogatories. Rule 26(d) disallows parties from seeking discovery before the conference, absent a court order or stipulation between the parties. n4 n5

The various discovery devices may be used in any sequence, so that interrogatories may be served before or after other discovery devices have been used, unless the court orders otherwise for the convenience of the parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice. n6

The fact that a party is conducting a deposition or is in the midst of any other type of discovery does not operate to delay any other party's discovery. n7

[2] Effect of Discovery Cutoff Dates or Trial Setting

When the court has established a discovery deadline, a party must serve interrogatories in sufficient time to permit the responding party the 30-day response time allowed under Rule 33. n8

Accordingly, a party must serve its interrogatories at least 30 days before the discovery deadline. n9

[3] Serving All Parties

When interrogatories are served on one party, copies must be served on all other parties, even though responses are only sought from one party. n10

Parties to an action include any person or entity named in the summons and complaint, including public and private corporations, partnerships, associations, or governmental agencies. n11

Interrogatories may not be directed to a particular person within a corporation or business entity if that person is not a party. They must be directed to the corporation or business itself. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, 33.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), 33(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1), (f).

(n5)Footnote 5. [Reserved]

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(A).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(B).

(n8)Footnote 8. Northern Ind. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Colorado Westmoreland, Inc., 112 F.R.D. 423, 424 (N.D. Ind. 1986) , aff'd mem., 845 F.2d 1024 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Thomas v. Pacificorp, 324 F.3d 1176, 1179 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a); Diversified Prods. Corp. v. Sports Ctr. Co., 42 F.R.D. 3, 4 (D. Md. 1967) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a); see also United States v. Kordel, 397 U.S. 1, 8, 90 S. Ct. 763, 25 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1970) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Holland v. Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., 28 F.R.D. 595, 595 (D.D.C. 1961) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.28

§ 12.28 CHECKLIST: Drafting Interrogatories

The following checklist may be used as a general guideline for drafting interrogatories. Each interrogatory should be drafted with the following issues in mind:

☐ Useful information. Is interrogatory precisely calculated to elicit information useful to proponent?

☐ Clarity. Is language of each interrogatory unambiguous? If not:

- ☐ Subparts. Consider dividing the ambiguous inquiry into various subparts.
- ☐ Definitions. Consider including separate list of definitions at beginning of set of interrogatories.
- ☐ Instructions. Consider including separate instructions at beginning of set of interrogatories.

☐ Breadth. Is the interrogatory appropriate in its scope?

☐ Burden on responding party. Is the interrogatory defensible as to its scope and degree of burden in the context of a motion to compel under Rule 37?

☐ Determining permissible number of interrogatories.

☐ Limitations. Note any limitations on number of interrogatories that may be served under local rules.

☐ Expanding number. If necessary, consider expanding permissible number of interrogatories by stipulation or motion.

☐ Review possible grounds for objection. Review list of possible grounds for objection and frame interrogatories, as appropriate, to minimize potential for objection.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulations

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
B. Preparing Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 12.29 through 12.39

[Reserved]

§§ 12.29[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.40

§ 12.40 Deadline for Responding

[1] 30-Day Deadline Generally Applies

A party on whom interrogatories have been served must serve the answers and objections, if any, on the propounding party within 30 days after service of the interrogatories. n1 An additional three days are allowed if interrogatories are served by any of the following methods: n2

- Service by mail
- Service to the clerk of the court based on no known address
- Electronic or other means of delivery consented to in writing

Service of interrogatory responses ordinarily is complete when the responses are hand-delivered to the party or the attorney for the represented party, or when they are placed in the mail. n3

Service by electronic means is complete on transmission, and service by other consented means under Rule 5(b)(2)(D) is complete when the person making service delivers the copy to the agency designated to make delivery. n3.1 Service by electronic means is not effective if the party making service learns that the attempted service did not reach the person to be served. n3.2

[2] Agreement or Order May Alter Deadline for Responding

The deadline for responding to interrogatories may be shortened or lengthened by: n4

- Written agreement of the parties n5
- Court order

An agreement extending the time for responses requires court approval if it would interfere with any dates set by the court for completion of discovery, for the hearing of a motion, or for trial. n6

A motion for an order extending the time for responses should show good cause for the extension. n7 Parties frequently move the court to delay answers to contention interrogatories, and the court has the discretion to order that such interrogatories need not be answered until other, designated discovery has been completed. n8

[3] Timing of Response for Removed Actions

In cases removed to federal court that have outstanding interrogatories at the time of removal, the time limit for responses to interrogatories is measured from the date of the parties' meeting under the federal meet and confer requirements. n9 Those requirements provide that the parties must meet as soon as practical, or at least 14 days before the scheduling conference, to attempt to settle the case and to resolve discovery issues. n10 Response time is measured from this meeting in removed cases because, under the federal rules, a party may not seek discovery from any source until the parties have met and conferred. n11

[4] Failure to Make Timely Response Sanctionable

Sanctions may be levied against a party who fails to comply with discovery deadlines. n12

For complete discussion of sanctions, see Ch. 8A, Sanctions, and Ch. 22, Enforcement of Discovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2); see Turick v. Yamaha Motor Corp., 121 F.R.D. 32, 36 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(D).

(n5)Footnote 3.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(3).

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n7)Footnote 5. See also Tropix, Inc. v. Lyon & Lyon, 169 F.R.D. 3, 3-4 (D. Mass. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29.

(n9)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3).

(n10)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2); see also § 22.07 (using contention interrogatories).

(n11)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) advisory committee's note (1993); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d).

(n12)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n13)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n14)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f), 37(d); Geiserman v. MacDonald, 893 F.2d 787, 791-792 (5th Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.41

§ 12.41 Duty to Respond, and Form of Answer

[1] Responding Party Must Answer or Object

A party on whom interrogatories have been served has the following options: n1

- Answer the interrogatories in writing and under oath
- Object to some or all of the interrogatories
- Move for a protective order

Under certain specified conditions, an answer may take the form of production of business records. n2

A party does not have the option of simply ignoring one or more interrogatories. n3 Indeed, the court may impose sanctions for failing to answer or object to an interrogatory. n4

A party answering interrogatories generally must provide all responsive information that is available to that party. n5 Any part of a multi-part interrogatory that is not objectionable must be answered. n6

If the responding party is unable to give a complete answer by the time responses are due, but has access to the information, it is proper for the party to give whatever incomplete information it can, and move to extend the time for serving a complete answer, with an estimate of how much time will be needed. n7

To the extent that a party is unable to respond because it lacks knowledge, it may admit this circumstance in response to an interrogatory and should set forth and explain efforts made to obtain the information. n8

[2] Interrogatories Must Be Answered Separately, Fully, and in Writing

The responding party must answer each interrogatory separately, fully, and in writing. n9 Local rules often require that in the document containing the responses, the responding party first set forth each question before answering or objecting to it.

Answers to interrogatories must be responsive, complete, and not evasive. n10

Answers to interrogatories must include sufficient detail to respond fully to the question. n11 A sufficient answer generally entails a conscientious and good faith effort to comprehend the question and to answer it explicitly.

One district court has held that if the responding party is unable to give a complete answer by the time responses are due, but has access to the information, the proper course of action is for the party to give whatever incomplete information it can, and move to extend the time for serving a complete answer, with an estimate of how much time will be needed. n12 This should be distinguished from the situation in which a party is unable to respond because it lacks the information and cannot obtain it.

[3] Responding Party Has Duty to Furnish All Information Available to It

[3.--1] Duty Encompasses Information Controlled by Party, But Does Not Include Duty to Search Out New Information

A party answering interrogatories has an affirmative duty to furnish any and all information available to the party. This duty to provide all information available encompasses the responsibility to provide information controlled by a party. n13

[3.--2] For Organizational Entity, Duty Encompasses Information Possessed by Officers, Employees, and Subsidiaries

In the case of a organizational party to an action, the duty to provide all information available refers to any information imputed to the organizational party itself, including information possessed by officers, employees, and former employees of the party, as well as the party's counsel. For example, an officer or agent answering interrogatories for a corporation must secure all information within the personal knowledge of anyone in the corporation. n14 Also, a corporate officer or agent must furnish, in response to interrogatories, whatever information is available to the corporation through reasonable efforts. n15

This rule has been found subject to an exception for personal information acquired by a corporate officer outside the scope of official duties. A corporate party has no duty to ferret out such information in response to interrogatories. n16

When a subsidiary is under the control of its parent corporation, one district court has held that the answers to interrogatories directed to the parent corporation normally must include information in the possession of the subsidiary. In that case, the party must either obtain the information from its subsidiary or state specifically why it is unable to do so. n17

In the case of an unincorporated association, which has no identity separate from that of its members, interrogatories may seek information unknown to the answering agent individually, but presumptively known to the organization's members. In such acase, courts have required the answering agent to solicit the information from its members or other sources under its control. n18

[3.--3] Lack of Knowledge May Excuse Answering Interrogatory

If a party is unable to reply because it lacks knowledge or information, the party may not simply refuse to answer. Rather, the party must respond in a way that lets the requesting party know the information is unavailable. n19 At least one court has ruled that the response to the interrogatory must state under oath the party's inability to provide the information sought, disclose any information the party does have, and set forth specific efforts made to obtain the rest of the information. n20

If the party acquires more information later, it has a duty to supplement its responses. n21

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 12.44.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Hansel v. Shell Oil Corp., 169 F.R.D. 303, 305 (E.D. Pa. 1996) ; Gray v. Faulkner, 148 F.R.D. 220, 224 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Harlem River Consumers Coop., Inc. v. Associated Grocers, 64 F.R.D. 459, 465 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b), 33(b)(3); see, e.g., Trane Co. v. Klutznick, 87 F.R.D. 473, 476 (W.D. Wis. 1980) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b) advisory committee's note (1993).

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Harlem River Consumers Coop., Inc. v. Associated Grocers, 64 F.R.D. 459, 463 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b) advisory committee's note (1993).

(n8)Footnote 8. Hansel v. Shell Oil Corp., 169 F.R.D. 303, 305 (E.D. Pa. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(1); see Sempier v. Johnson & Higgins, 45 F.3d 724, 734 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Profile Gear Corp. v. Foundry Allied Indus., 937 F.2d 351, 353-354 (7th Cir. 1991) ; Truck Treads, Inc. v. Armstrong Rubber Co., 818 F.2d 427, 429 (5th Cir. 1987) ; Ruiz v. Hamburg-American Line, 478 F.2d 29, 33 (9th Cir. 1973) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Chubb Integrated Sys., Ltd. v. Nat'l Bank of Wash., 103 F.R.D. 52, 60-61 (D.D.C. 1984) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Association of Am. Physicians & Surgeons, Inc. v. Clinton, 837 F. Supp. 454, 457 (D.D.C. 1993) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b) advisory committee's note (1993) (need for additional time to answer some questions or some aspects of questions does not justify delay in responding to questions that can be answered within prescribed time.

(n13)Footnote 13. Trane Co. v. Klutznick, 87 F.R.D. 473, 476 (W.D. Wis. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n14)Footnote 14. General Dynamics Corp. v. Selb Mfg., 481 F.2d 1204, 1210 (8th Cir. 1973) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Martin v. Brown, 151 F.R.D. 580, 593-594 (W.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Gerling Int'l Ins. Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 839 F.2d 131, 137-139 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Transcontinental Fertilizer Co. v. Samsung Co., 108 F.R.D. 650, 652-653 (E.D. Pa. 1985) .

(n18)Footnote 18. International Ass'n of Machinists, Dist. 169 v. Amana Refrigeration Inc., 90 F.R.D. 1, 2 (E.D. Tenn. 1978) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Cullins v. Heckler, 108 F.R.D. 172, 177 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Hansel v. Shell Oil Corp., 169 F.R.D. 303, 305-306 (E.D. Pa. 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 12.45.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.42

§ 12.42 Incorporation By Reference of Other Discovery Disfavored

Responses to interrogatories should not rely upon a mere reference to pleadings, depositions, other documents, or other interrogatories, at least when a reference to another interrogatory makes it difficult to ascertain if the original interrogatory has been answered completely without a detailed comparison of answers. n1

However, the incorporation of outside material by reference in responses to interrogatories is evaluated on a case-by-case basis, and the judge has discretion to find such a response acceptable. n2 Thus, it may be acceptable for a response to an interrogatory to refer to answers of other interrogatories or other discovery in order to avoid unnecessary repetition, but the referral must be clear and precise. n3

However, referring to allegations of the complaint in answers to interrogatories is improper because the answers must be in a form acceptable for use at trial. n3.1 Answers to interrogatories are admissible in support of a motion for summary judgment, as affirmative evidence at trial, for cross-examination, and for impeachment, while assertions in a complaint are not admissible because they are merely the statements of the drafting attorney. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Atlanta Shipping Corp., Inc. v. Cross & Brown Co., 113 F.R.D. 108, 111 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Guruwaya v. Montgomery Ward, Inc., 119 F.R.D. 36, 40 (N.D. Cal. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Kenney v. Shaw Indus. Inc., 764 F. Supp. 1501, 1503 (N.D. Ga. 1991) .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. See Davidson v. Goord, 215 F.R.D. 73, 77 (W.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. King v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 117 F.R.D. 2, 6 (D.D.C. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.43

§ 12.43 Persons Who May Respond; Duty to Sign, Verify, and Certify Responses

[1] Interrogatories Directed to Individual Must Be Answered, Signed, and Verified by That Person

Interrogatories directed to an individual party must be answered in writing under oath and signed by that party. n1

Courts are aware that a party often will require and receive assistance from counsel in the preparation of responses to interrogatories, particularly complex interrogatories or those requesting opinions or contentions. But despite counsel's substantial assistance, it is not proper or acceptable for the attorney alone to sign or verify responses. n2 However, the attorney must certify the responses by signing them along with the client. n3 In addition, objections to interrogatories must be signed by the attorney making them. n4

[2] Interrogatories Directed to Organization Must Be Answered, Signed, and Verified by Officer or Agent

When the party to whom interrogatories are directed is a corporation, partnership, or association, the interrogatories must be signed by an officer or agent of the business. n5 The officer or agent has a duty to provide all information available to the corporation, n6 but may sign and verify the interrogatories on the basis of knowledge, information, and belief, without firsthand knowledge of the information in the responses. n7 On the other hand, the signing agent must be able to warrant the veracity of the answers. Thus, when a corporate defendant's agent signed interrogatories by disclaiming personal knowledge of the facts stated in the answers, but acknowledging that the persons who provided the facts had stated them to be true, the court found the verification adequate, stating that "the law requires no more." n8

[3] Organization Entitled to Designate Agent; Attorney May Be Agent

When interrogatories are addressed to a corporation, partnership, or association, the business is entitled, and indeed is required, to designate its own officer or agent toanswer the interrogatories. n9 The officer or agent designated to answer interrogatories may be an attorney for the business. n10

The propounding party is not entitled to select the person who will answer for the company by directing the interrogatories to a particular officer or agent; rather, the interrogatories must be directed to the company as a whole. n11 In selecting its agent to answer interrogatories, a corporation or business has a obligation to appoint someone who can furnish the requested information. n12 In all other respects, the responding party has a fair amount of discretion in its selection of agents, on the rationale that the corporation is generally in the best position to know who can provide the requested information most effectively. Moreover, as one district court has pointed out, it is not the agent's personal knowledge that is called upon to respond to the interrogatories, but the collected knowledge of theorganization. n13

A corporation that abuses its powers of designation by selecting an agent who does not provide responsive answers is subject to sanctions. n14

[4] Interrogatories Directed to Government Agency Must Be Answered, Signed, and Verified by Officer or Agent

Interrogatories addressed to governmental agencies may be answered by an officer or agent of the government. Governments and governmental agencies generally are subject to the same rules as corporate entities in designating agents to answer interrogatories. n15

[5] Attorney for Party Must Certify Responses

In addition to being signed and verified by the party making them, responses to interrogatories must be signed by at least one attorney of record. The attorney must include his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. An unrepresented party must certify the responses personally and state his or her address. n16

Any objections to the interrogatories must likewise be signed by the attorney making them. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. McDougall v. Dunn, 468 F.2d 468, 472 (4th Cir. 1972) ; Saria v. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 228 F.R.D. 536, 538-539 (S.D. W. Va. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(5).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. United States v. 42 Jars, 264 F.2d 666, 670 (3d Cir. 1959) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see also Shepherd v. American Broad. Cos., 62 F.3d 1469, 1482-1483 (D.C. Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Dial v. Travelers Indem. Co., 780 F.2d 520, 525 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 9. United States v. Kordel, 397 U.S. 1, 8, 90 S. Ct. 763, 25 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1969) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Rea v. Wichita Mortgage Corp., 747 F.2d 567, 574 n.6 (10th Cir. 1984) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Law v. NCAA, 167 F.R.D. 464, 476 (D. Kan 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n12)Footnote 12. United States v. Kordel, 397 U.S. 1, 8, 90 S. Ct. 763, 25 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1969) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Zenith Radio Corp. v. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., 505 F. Supp. 1190, 1257 n.82 (E.D. Pa. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n14)Footnote 14. Black Panther Party v. Smith, 661 F.2d 1243, 1257 (D.C. Cir. 1981) , vacated on other grounds, 458 U.S. 1118 (1982) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Trane Co. v. Klutznick, 87 F.R.D. 473, 476-477 (W.D. Wis. 1980) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.44

§ 12.44 Providing Business Records in Lieu of Response

Rule 33(d) allows a responding party to substitute access to business records, including electronically stored information, for an interrogatory answer in situations where the burden of deriving the answer will be substantially the same for either party. n1 To substitute documents or electronically stored information for an interrogatory answer, the responding party should:

- Specify the records from which the answer may be derived or ascertained
- Afford the propounding party a reasonable opportunity to inspect the records

The option is limited to situations in which the burden of deriving the answer from the records is substantially the same for the propounding party as the responding party. n2

Directing the propounding party to an undifferentiated mass of business records that may or may not answer the interrogatory is not permitted. n3

The application of the option to produce records is limited to business records, including electronically stored information. Before a court will consider the appropriateness of allowing the responding party to use the option, the court must determine whether the offered documents or electronically stored information constitute business records.

A party that opts to produce business records in lieu of answering an interrogatory must specify the records in sufficient detail for the propounding party to locate and identify, as readily as can the responding party, the records from which the answer may be ascertained. n4 The specificity requirement is intended to guard against misuse of the option to produce business records. A responding party cannot abuse the option by making vague references to "company files" or by directing the propounding party to a mass of undifferentiated records. n5

A party is not entitled to avail itself of the option to produce business records in answer to interrogatories and then claim that some or all of the records are privileged. When a party invokes the option, the party must be prepared to permit inspection of the records. n6 In addition, a responding party cannot use the option to produce business records to avoid answering an interrogatory if the answer cannot be ascertained from the records. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Rainbow Pioneer No. 44-18-04A v. Hawaii-Nevada Inv. Corp., 711 F.2d 902, 906 (9th Cir. 1983) ; In re Heritage Bond Litig., 220 F.R.D. 624, 626 (C.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d); United States v. Rachel, 289 F. Supp. 2d 688, 693 (D. Md. 2003)

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Rainbow Pioneer No. 44-18-04A v. Hawaii-Nevada Inv. Corp., 711 F.2d 902, 906 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Blake Assocs., Inc. v. Omni Spectra, Inc., 118 F.R.D. 283, 288-290 (D. Mass. 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Govas v. Chalmers, 965 F.2d 298, 302 (7th Cir. 1992) .

106 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.45

§ 12.45 Responding Party Has Continuing Duty to Supplement Answers

If a responding party acquires material additional information or learns that information submitted was materially incorrect after submitting answers, and that additional information is not otherwise known to the propounding party, the responding party has a duty to supplement or amend its responses. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1); see, e.g., Alldread v. City of Grenada, 988 F.2d 1425, 1436 (5th Cir. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.46

§ 12.46 Strategic Approach to Responding to Interrogatories

[1] Identifying Persons With Knowledge of Specific Event

If an interrogatory seeks identification of persons with knowledge of a specific event, and if many individuals have knowledge of the particular event, counsel should consider drafting a narrow response combining an objection (based on the ground that interrogatory is unduly burdensome and not calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence) with a reasonable amount of information (e.g., the approximate number of individuals with knowledge, and the names of specific individuals who were most closely involved in the event).

[2] Identifying Documents

Interrogatories seeking identification of documents will sometimes call for the responding party to attach some significance to the documents. In identifying documents in an interrogatory response, counsel should not inadvertently apply or accept characterizations of the legal significance of those documents. Counsel should consider objecting to the contention aspect of the interrogatory, or give a carefully qualified response.

[3] Evaluating Damage Claims

The response to an interrogatory directed to a party's claimed damages will vary according to the simplicity or complexity of the type of damages claimed. The response will require adequate detail so that the propounding party can conduct further discovery regarding the claimed damages. Claims for lost profits, goodwill, or claimed future losses often are denied as imprecise or speculative, so sufficient information should be provided to guard against pretrial motions for summary dismissal or limitation of damages claims, and to permit intelligent probing of these claims.

[4] Dealing With Contention Interrogatories

When confronted with contention interrogatories, counsel should ensure, so far as possible, that the client's answers do not incorporate inadvertent admissions that will assist the opposing party.

It may be desirable to seek to delay the response to contention interrogatories until after designated discovery has been completed, or until a pretrial conference or other later time as permitted by Rule 33(a)(2). n1

A decision to delay answering will depend on assessment of the likelihood that the contention will change over time and how plausibly counsel can justify (to the opponent and the court) a present inability to respond. If counsel represents a plaintiff, and the defendant's interrogatory is directed to a contention central to the plaintiff's case, it may be difficult to rationalize a need for more time. On the other hand, a defendant who has asserted a defense or a waiver may legitimately claim a need to develop that position through discovery.

In phrasing the interrogatory response, counsel should keep in mind that under appropriate circumstances, opposing counsel might attempt to bring the response to the attention of the jury or the court for impeachment purposes, or as an admission. Care should be taken to avoid any invitation for such use.

[5] Identifying Persons Involved in Preparing Responses

When representing a large organization, counsel must decide who will verify the responses to interrogatories. The person providing the information is a clear target for further discovery. If the client has in-house counsel, and if information must be gathered from a number of sources, it is helpful to have the in-house counsel gather the information and provide the verification. Generally, an in-house lawyer will be an unrewarding deponent for the opposing party.

[6] Providing Factual Narratives

Interrogatories calling for factual narratives are disfavored, and frequently the responding party can resist answering such interrogatories altogether, arguing that the facts are better developed using some other method of discovery. If a party is directed to provide a factual narrative, or if counsel chooses to have the client answer for tactical reasons, counsel should be alert to the same risks as when responding to a contention interrogatory [see [4], above].

[7] Providing Supplemental Answers

Whenever counsel discovers new information that helps the client's case, counsel should review prior interrogatory responses to determine whether a supplemental response is necessary to ensure that the newly discovered evidence may be used at trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
C. Responding to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 12.47 through 12.59

[Reserved]

§§ 12.47[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.60

§ 12.60 Objections Must Be Served With Answers

Objections and separate answers to each interrogatory not objected to must be served together, within 30 days of service of the interrogatories, or as otherwise ordered by the court or agreed to by the parties. n1 An objection to a specific interrogatory will only postpone the time to answer, unless the objection is sustained or a protective order issued, if the party seeking discovery is not content to acquiesce in the objection.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2); see also § 12.40 (deadline for responding to interrogatories).

110 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.61

§ 12.61 Stating Precise Grounds for Objection

Objections to interrogatories must: n1

- State which interrogatory is being challenged
- Include the precise reason for the objection

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4); Burns v. Imagine Films Entertainment, Inc., 164 F.R.D. 589, 593 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.62

§ 12.62 Avoiding Blanket Objections

Generally, blanket objections are unacceptable. For example, it is insufficient merely to assert that the party objects, or that the interrogatories are burdensome, oppressive, duplicative, irrelevant, or that they require research. n1 Rather, the objecting party must explain why an interrogatory has any of these undesirable characteristics. n2

Although Rule 33 requires a specific statement of objection, general objections stated at the beginning of the response may sometimes be appropriate. For example, a general objection may be made with respect to improper definitions and with respect to defects that permeate the entire set of interrogatories.

General objections to all interrogatories should conclude with a statement that incorporates the general objection into each response. Moreover, if counselprovides answers over objections, counsel's answer to each such interrogatory should include the statement "subject to and without waiving the objection to_____ (e.g., overbreadth) stated above, the_____ (plaintiff or defendant) responds as follows. ..."

Objections to interrogatories asserting a general objection "to the extent" it may apply to a particular interrogatory are "meritless" and are considered "mere hypothetical or contingent possibilities, where the objecting party makes no meaningful effort to show the application of any such theoretical objection to any request for discovery." n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. McLeod, Alexander, Powel & Apffel, P.C. v. Quarles, 894 F.2d 1482, 1485 (5th Cir. 1990) ; see also Cliffstar Corp. v. Sunsweet Growers, Inc., 218 F.R.D. 65, 69 (W.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Chubb Integrated Sys. v. National Bank of Washington, 103 F.R.D. 52, 59-60 (D.D.C. 1984) ; see Swackhammer v. Sprint Corp. PCS, 225 F.R.D. 658, 660-661 (D. Kan. 2004) (objections to interrogatories asserting a general objection "to the extent" it may apply to a particular interrogatory are "meritless" and are considered "mere hypothetical or contingent possibilities, where the objecting party makes no meaningful effort to show the application of any such theoretical objection to any request for discovery").

(n3)Footnote 3. See Swackhammer v. Sprint Corp. PCS, 225 F.R.D. 658, 660-661 (D. Kan. 2004) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.63

§ 12.63 Untimely Objections Are Waived Unless "Good Cause" is Shown

Any ground for objection to an interrogatory that is not raised in a timely manner is waived. Strict attention must be paid to the 30 day period (or any different stipulated or ordered time period) to avoid waiver of valid objections. n1

The court may excuse a failure to object timely for "good cause". n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4); see, e.g., Richmark Corp. v. Timber Falling Consultants, 959 F.2d 1468, 1473-1477 (9th Cir. 1992) , cert. dismissed sub nom,. China Everbright Trading Co. v. Timber Falling Consultants, Inc., 506 U.S. 948 (1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.64

§ 12.64 Replacing Insufficient, But Timely Objection

If a party in good faith makes an initial timely objection, it will not waive another, more valid objection if it promptly puts forward the more valid objection on realizing the insufficiency of the first objection. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Cahela v. Bernard, 155 F.R.D. 221, 226-227 (N.D. Ga. 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.65

§ 12.65 Serving Appropriate Parties

Objections must be served on the following: n1

- Counsel for the propounding party or, if the propounding party is unrepresented, directly on the party
- Counsel for all other parties to the action, or directly to parties unrepresented by counsel

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a), (b), 33(b)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.66

§ 12.66 Claiming Privilege

The assertion of privilege must be specific. A naked, nonspecific assertion of privilege may be insufficient. n1 A party claiming privilege must provide sufficient information regarding the nature of the material not disclosed to enable the opposing party to evaluate the applicability of the claimed privilege. n2

A party who wishes to assert privilege in objection to an interrogatory should providea responsive answer except for the specific items claimed to be privileged, and should include a statement of the basis for the privilege. The party must describe the allegedly privileged material in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged, will enable other parties to assess the applicability of the privilege. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Shopping Carts Antitrust Litig., 95 F.R.D. 299, 305 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5); see e.g., Stabilus v. Haynsworth, Baldwin, Johnson & Greaves, 144 F.R.D. 258, 268 (E.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5); see McLeod, Alexander, Powel & Apffel, P.C. v. Quarles, 894 F.2d 1482, 1485 (5th Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.67

§ 12.67 Protecting Trade Secrets

A party may protect trade secrets or confidential business information from disclosure through interrogatories by seeking an order limiting discovery or a protective order preventing the discovery. n1

Courts may be reluctant to strike completely interrogatories requesting confidential information because these kinds of interrogatories normally request information that is quite relevant to the issues. By granting a limiting or protective order, the court can provide the propounding party with the information it needs, while still shielding the information from public disclosure. n2

The responding party usually may not assert the rights of third parties to protect the third parties' proprietary or confidential business information. n3 Rather, the affected third parties must intervene directly to protect this information. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersTrade Secrets LawCivil ActionsDiscoveryTrade Secrets LawCivil ActionsProtection Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(G); see, e.g., Gelb v. AT&T, 813 F. Supp. 1022, 1035 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Stillman v. Vassileff, 100 F.R.D. 467, 468 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) (order limiting discovery).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Burton Mechanical Contractors, Inc. v. Foreman, 148 F.R.D. 230, 234 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Blum v. Schlegel, 150 F.R.D. 38, 38-39 (W.D.N.Y. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.68

§ 12.68 Signing Objections

Responses to interrogatories must be signed by the person making the responses, n1 as well as by the attorney. n2 Any objections to the interrogatories must be signed by the attorney making them. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUse

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.69

§ 12.69 CHECKLISTS: Preparing Objections to Interrogatories

[1] CHECKLIST: Grounds for Objection

On receiving interrogatories, counsel for the responding party should consider the possible grounds for objection. The following checklist may be used as a guide to the most frequent grounds for objection to interrogatories.

☐ Argumentative or speculative. Interrogatories are subject to objection if they call for argumentative or speculative answers. n1

☐ Available from another source. Interrogatories may not seek information that is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive. n2

☐ Burden outweighs benefit. The burden or expense of the interrogatories must not outweigh their likely benefit, considering the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake, and the importance of the interrogatories in resolving the issues. n3

☐ Cumulative or duplicative. Interrogatories may not seek information that is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative. n4

☐ Not Related to Claim or Defense. Absent a court order, parties may only seek information relevant to claims or defenses. n5

☐ Legal conclusions. Interrogatories may not seek legal conclusions on questions of pure law. n6

☐ Nonwitness experts. Facts known and opinions held by nonwitness experts are beyond the scope of discovery. n7

☐ Number exceeded. Interrogatories served on a specific party must not exceed the number permitted under local rules. n8

☐ Other opportunities to obtain same information. Interrogatories may not seek information that the propounding party has had ample other opportunities to obtain. n9

☐ Overbreadth. Overbroad interrogatories are subject to objection. n10

☐ Premature contention interrogatories. Prematurely served contention interrogatories may be subject to objection.

☐ Privilege. Privileged information is beyond the scope of discovery. n11

☐ Trade secrets. Trade secrets and confidential business information aregenerally subject to restrictions on discovery. n12

☐ Vagueness. Interrogatories are subject to objection if they are so vague or ambiguous as to be burdensome or oppressive. n13

☐ Work product protection. Protected work product is beyond the scope of discovery. n14

[2] CHECKLIST: Considering Strategic Avoidance of Objection

If one or more of the objections stated in [1], above, clearly applies, counsel should make the following determinations:

☐ Evaluate scope of objection. If the interrogatory is subject to objection on vagueness grounds, determine whether it can be responded to broadly or narrowly, as best serves the client's interests.

☐ Ascertain reciprocity. If counsel intends to serve a similarly objectionable interrogatory on behalf of his or her client, determine whether the court adheres to a rule of reciprocity based on the substance of discovery requests.

☐ Balance utility and risk. If considered objection is of marginal validity and utility, consider whether the benefit of an objection would be outweighed by the cost, risk of failure, or possible loss of credibility with the court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesFormCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesUseCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Erie Lackawanna Ry. Co., 496 F.2d 1189, 1190 (6th Cir. 1974) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(iii); see Macmillan, Inc. v. Federal Ins. Corp., 141 F.R.D. 241, 243 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 12.04[3].

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) (25-interrogatory limit, from which many district courts have opted out by local rule or policy); see § 12.24[1].

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(ii).

(n10)Footnote 10. Cahela v. Bernard, 155 F.R.D. 221, 227-228 (N.D. Ga. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 12.67.

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Frost v. Perry, 161 F.R.D. 434, 435-436 (D. Nev. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
D. Objecting to Interrogatories

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 12.70 through 12.99

[Reserved]

§§ 12.70[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
E. Forms

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.100

§ 12.100 Interrogatories

[1] FORM

Interrogatories

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

TO: [Party designation and name of responding party]

FROM: [Party designation and name of propounding party]

SET NO. [number]

[Name of propounding party] requests that you, [name of responding party], answer all of the following interrogatories, in writing and under oath, as required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 33. Under Rule 33, a copy of your written response to these interrogatories must be served on [name of attorney for propounding party], the attorney for [name of propounding party] within 30 days after service, at the address listed in this document.

In answering each interrogatory:

(a) Identify by date, sender, recipient, location, and custodian each document relied on or that forms a basis for the answer given or that corroborates the answer given or the substance of what is given in answer to these interrogatories;

(b) State whether the information furnished is within the personal knowledge of the person answering, and if not, the name, if known, of each person to whom the information is a matter of personal knowledge;

(c) Identify each person who assisted or participated in preparing or supplying any of the information given in answer to or relied on in preparing answers to these interrogatories; and

(d) If you maintain that any document or record that refers to or relates to anything about which these interrogatories ask has been destroyed, set forth the content of that document, the location of any copies of the document, the date of destruction and the name of the person who ordered or authorized the destruction.

The following definitions apply:

(a) "Communication" means the transmittal of information (in the form of facts, ideas, inquiries, or otherwise).

(b) "Document" is defined according to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 34(a), including, without limitation, electronic or computerized data compilations. A draft or nonidentical copy is a separate document within the meaning of this term.

(c) "To identify a person" means to give, to the extent known, the person's full name, present or last known address, and when referring to a natural person, additionally, the present or last known place of employment. Once a person has been so identified, only the name of that person need be listed in response to subsequent discovery requesting the identification of that person.

(d) "To identify documents" means to give, to the extent known, the (i) type of document; (ii) general subject matter; (iii) date of the document; and (iv) author(s), addressee(s) and recipient(s).

(e) The designation of "Plaintiff," "Defendant," a party's full or abbreviated name, or a pronoun referring to a party, means the party and, where applicable, its officers, directors, employees, partners, corporate parent, subsidiaries or affiliates. This definition is not intended to impose a discovery obligation on any person who is not a party to the litigation.

(f) "Person" means any natural person or any business, legal, or governmental entity or association.

(g) "Concerning" means relating to, referring to, describing, evidencing, or constituting.

[Insert numbered interrogatories, taking into account format and numerical limitations imposed by Rule 33 or local court rules. For example:]

1. Identify each person who saw [describe occurrence].

2. State which of the persons in the answer to Interrogatory 1 made written statements concerning [describe subject matter], and further state in whose custody each written statement reposes.

3. Identify each person who was present during [describe occurrence].

4. State which of the persons in the answer to Interrogatory 3 made written statements concerning [describe subject matter], and further state in whose custody each written statement reposes.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[2] Definitions

The definitions in the form may be omitted or modified as needed. n1

Consult local district court rules regarding use of definitions in discovery demands.

[3] Precise Interrogatories Required

Interrogatories must be definite, clear, and narrowly tailored for the case, and must adequately advise the responding party of the information sought. n2

[4] Content of Interrogatories

Interrogatories may include the following:

- Standard instructions for answering questions or raising objections n3
- Definitions of certain terms, especially when the dictionary definition is insufficient n4
- Subparts, if necessary to avoid ambiguity or confusion; note, however, that subparts may count toward a limited number of interrogatories permitted
- Cross-references to other discovery requests

[5] Limits on Number of Interrogatories

Rule 33 limits the number of interrogatories that may be served by one party on another party to 25. However, some district courts have opted out from this limit. n5

In districts that limit the number of interrogatories that may be served, in order to exceed the limit, a party must secure a court order or, if local rules permit, a written stipulation from the responding party. n6 Additionally, the court may grant leave to serve additional interrogatories. n7

[6] Signature Required

Interrogatories must be signed by the propounding party's attorney, and must state the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n8

[7] Rule 26(f) Meeting May Be Required Prior to Commencement of Discovery

Under the Federal Rules, interrogatories generally may not be served before the parties have had their initial discovery planning meeting, as required by Rule 26(d) and (f). n9

[8] Timing of Service of Interrogatories

The timing of service of interrogatories may comply with any of the following: n10

- Time limits prescribed by federal statutes and local rules n11
- Agreement of the parties n12
- Order of the court n13

Discovery methods may be used in any sequence. Interrogatories therefore may be served before or after other discovery, unless the court orders otherwise for the convenience of the parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice. n14

When the court has established a discovery deadline, a party must serve interrogatories in sufficient time to permit the responding party the 30-day response time allowed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 33. n15 A party therefore must serve interrogatories at least 30 days before the discovery deadline. n16

[9] Service on Parties

Interrogatories must be served on the attorney of the responding party, or if the party does not have an attorney, on the party. n17

When one party is served with interrogatories, copies of the interrogatories also must be served on all other parties, even though responses are only sought from one party. Therefore, copies must be served on the attorneys of all other parties, or on the parties themselves if unrepresented. n18

If a party is a corporation or other business entity, interrogatories may not be directed to a particular person within a corporation or business entity if that person is not also a party. They must be directed to the corporation or business itself. n19

[10] Filing of Interrogatories Generally Not Permitted

Discovery requests and responses shall not be filed unless they are used in the proceedings or the court orders filing. n20

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 12.21.

(n2)Footnote 2. Roberts v. Heim, 130 F.R.D. 424, 427 (N.D. Cal. 1989) ; see § 12.20.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Harlem River Consumers Coop., Inc. v. Associated Grocers, 64 F.R.D. 459, 465 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., S.D.N.Y. & E.D.N.Y., L.R. 26.3(a), (b) (setting forth uniform definitions and construction rules deemed incorporated in all discovery requests).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2), 33(a); see also § 12.24.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29, 33(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 12.24[1].

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1); see § 12.26.

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d), 33(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 12.27.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, 33.

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), 33(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2).

(n15)Footnote 15. Northern Ind. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Colorado Westmoreland, Inc., 112 F.R.D. 423, 424 (N.D. Ind. 1986) , aff'd mem., 845 F.2d 1024 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Smith v. Principal Cas. Ins. Co., 131 F.R.D. 104, 105 (S.D. Miss. 1990) ; see § 12.27[2].

(n17)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a),(b); see § 12.27[3].

(n19)Footnote 19. Holland v. Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., 28 F.R.D. 595, 595 (D.D.C. 1961) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 12 Interrogatories
E. Forms

2-12 Federal Litigation Guide § 12.101

§ 12.101 Answers to Interrogatories

[1] FORM

Answers to Interrogatories

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

Answer of [responding party, e.g., defendant, or responding entity, e.g., name of corporation by designated agent] to interrogatories served on [him/her/it] by [party designation and name of propounding party] on [date].

Interrogatory No. 1: [Repeat interrogatory verbatim] [give answer or objection, as appropriate].

Interrogatory No. 2: [Repeat interrogatory verbatim] [give answer or objection, as appropriate].

[Date]

[Signature of responding party]

[Party designation and name of responding party]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[2] Response to Each Interrogatory Required

A party must respond to each interrogatory by any of the following: n1

- An answer
- An objection
- A motion for protective order

The court may impose sanctions for failure to respond to an interrogatory. n2

[3] All Available Information Must Be Provided

A party answering interrogatories generally must provide all responsive information available. n3 Any part of a multi-part interrogatory that is not objectionable must be answered. n4

A responding party who is unable to give a complete answer in a timely manner, but has access to the information, may provide whatever information it can and move to extend time for serving a complete answer within an estimated time. n5

To the extent that a party is unable to respond because it lacks knowledge, it may admit ignorance in response to an interrogatory and describe efforts made to obtain the information. n6

[4] Answer of Corporation or Other Entity

When interrogatories are served on a corporation, partnership, association, or government agency, the entity must: n7

- Furnish all responsive, nonprivileged information that is available to the entity
- Designate one of its officers or agents to verify the answers

The officer or agent must provide all information available to the entity, but may sign and verify the interrogatories on the basis of knowledge, information, and belief, without firsthand knowledge of the information in the responses. n8

[5] Signing Answers

Rule 33 requires that answers be signed under oath by the person making them. n9

In addition, Rule 26(g) requires any answer made by a represented party to be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name, with the attorney's address, e-mail address, and telephone number included. An unrepresented party is required to sign the answers personally and state his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n10

[6] Methods of Service

Service of interrogatory responses ordinarily is complete when the responses are hand-delivered to the party or the attorney for the represented party or when they are placed in the mail. n11

Service by electronic means is complete on transmission, and service by other consented means under Rule 5(b)(2)(D) is complete when the person making service delivers the copy to the agency designated to make delivery. n12 Service by electronic means is not effective if the party making service learns that the attempted service did not reach the person to be served. n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 12.41[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. Harlem River Consumers Coop., Inc. v. Associated Grocers, 64 F.R.D. 459, 465 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b), 33(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. see Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b) advisory committee's note (1993).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Harlem River Consumers Coop., Inc. v. Associated Grocers, 64 F.R.D. 459, 463 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b), advisory committee's note (1993).

(n6)Footnote 6. Cullins v. Heckler, 108 F.R.D. 172, 177 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a),(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Skelton & Co. v. Goldsmith, 49 F.R.D. 128, 130-131 (S.D.N.Y. 1969) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(5).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E), (F).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide 13.syn

§ 13.syn Synopsis to Chapter 13: Production of Documents

§ 13.01 Using Requests for Production of Documents or Production of Electronically Stored Information
[1] Types of Discovery Available Under Rule 34
[2] Use Limited to Pending Action
[3] Use Generally Limited to Pretrial Discovery
[4] Use Limited to Parties
[4.--1] General Rule: Any Party May Serve Rule 34 Request on Any Other Party
[4.--2] Dispute May Arise as to Who Is Party
[4.--3] Limitation: Absent Class Members Are Not "Parties" for Purposes of Rule 34
[5] Advantages of Rule 34 Requests
[6] Disadvantages of Rule 34 Requests

§ 13.02 Ensuring Timely Request
[1] Restrictions on Timing of Discovery
[2] Mandatory Disclosure Provisions May Affect Timing
[2.--1] Nature of Mandatory Disclosure Requirements
[2.--2] Requests for Items Subject to Later Disclosure May Be Untimely
[3] Request May Be Untimely If Served After Discovery Cutoff Date

§ 13.03 Ensuring Request Seeks Discoverable Matter
[1] General Rule: Rule 34 May Be Used to Request Documents in Possession, Custody, or Control of Another Party
[2] Limitations to General Rule
[2.--1] Discoverable Matter Must Be Relevant to Claims or Defenses
[2.--2] Unnecessary or Burdensome Requests May Be Barred
[2.--3] Ready Availability of Matter From Another Source May Bar Discovery
[2.--4] Discoverable Matter May Be Protected by Work-Product Doctrine
[2.--5] Discoverable Matter May Be Protected by Privilege
[3] Requesting Electronically Stored Information

§ 13.04 Making Requests Specific
[1] Making Requests in Writing
[2] Complying With Required Formalities
[2.--1] Identifying Requested Items Individually or by Category

[2.--2] Describing Requested Items With Reasonable Particularity
[2.--3] Description Satisfying Rule 26(a)(1)(A)(ii) Also Should Satisfy Rule 34 Requirements
[2.--4] Specifying Time for Inspection at Least 30 Days After Service of Request
[2.--5] Party May Seek Change in Requested Time
[2.--6] Specifying Reasonable Place and Manner for Inspection

§ 13.05 Certifying Requests

§ 13.06 Serving Appropriate Parties

§ 13.07 Requesting Documents from Nonparties by Subpoena
[1] Using Rule 45 Subpoena to Obtain Documents or Electronically Stored Information
[2] Serving the Subpoena
[3] Obtaining Documents at Trial
[4] Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas
[5] Use of Rule 45 to Circumvent Discovery Rules or Orders Improper
[6] Notifying Party of Inadvertent Disclosure of Privileged Materials

§ 13.08 CHECKLIST: Drafting Rule 34 Document Request

§§ 13.09 through 13.99 [Reserved]

§ 13.100 Request for Production of Documents or Electronically Stored Information
[1] Form
Request for Production of Documents or Electronically Stored Information
[2] Use of Form
[3] Contents of Request
[4] Signature Required
[5] Rule 26(f) Meeting May Be Required Prior to Commencement of Discovery
[6] Request Must Not Conflict With Mandatory Disclosure Obligations
[7] Effect of Discovery Cutoff Date
[8] Service
[9] Filing Generally Not Permitted

123 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

The right of a party to obtain disclosure of documents pursuant to Rule 34 is a valuable discovery tool. Rule 34 requests may be used to request not only the inspection and copying of documents and/or electronically stored information, but the Rule also allows for the testing and sampling of documents and/or electronically stored information. Because there are no specified limitations on the number of demands for production that can be made, the procedure provides an important means of obtaining or electronically stored information insight into the issues and available proof. Document requests serve the offensive purpose of obtaining favorable evidence with the help of the other party, as well as the defensive object of establishing before trial the affirmative points the other party's evidence will make. Documents and electronically stored information obtained in discovery are critical for deposing both parties and nonparty witnesses. Rule 34 also recognizes that similar discovery may be obtained from nonparties pursuant to Rule 45.

This chapter focuses on requests for production of documents and electronically stored information pursuant to Rule 34. The chapter outlines the key legal, strategic, and tactical issues concerning production requests, including the procedural and substantive requirements for requests. The use of a subpoena to obtain documents from nonparties pursuant to Rule 45 is also considered. Local rules must be consulted before proceeding under Rule 34, as district courts may impose procedural requirements and limitations in addition to those found in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

The chapter includes a sample request for documents and electronically stored information, and discusses procedural requirements and use of the form.

For related coverage, see Ch. 14, Document Responses, Ch. 15, Management of Documents, and Ch. 20, Inspection of Land and Other Tangibles.

For expanded coverage of production of documents, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 34, Production of Documents and Things and Entry Upon Land for Inspection and Other Purposes (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.01

§ 13.01 Using Requests for Production of Documents or Production of Electronically Stored Information

[1] Types of Discovery Available Under Rule 34

Rule 34 allows for two basic types of discovery: n1

- Requests to a party for production of documents or production of electronically stored information
- Requests for inspection of land and other tangibles

This chapter focuses on requests for production of documents and electronically stored information. For coverage of requests for inspection of land and other tangibles, see Chapter 20, Inspection of Land and Other Tangibles.

[2] Use Limited to Pending Action

Rule 34 discovery is only available after an action is commenced. n2

Perpetuation proceedings pursuant to Rule 27 may be used to obtain production or inspection before the initiation of a formal action. n3

[3] Use Generally Limited to Pretrial Discovery

Rule 34 is intended to be used principally as a pretrial discovery device. n4

Whether Rule 34 may be used at trial is generally made moot by the Rule's 30-day response time, the easy availability of a Rule 45 subpoena, and the existence of court-ordered discovery deadlines. n5

[4] Use Limited to Parties

[4.--1] General Rule: Any Party May Serve Rule 34 Request on Any Other Party

A Rule 34 discovery demand may be served by any party on any other party. n6

A plaintiff or defendant may serve a request on a third-party defendant, and vice versa. Co-plaintiffs and co-defendants

may serve Rule 34 requests on each other. n7

Document requests against nonparties are governed by Rule 45. n8

[4.--2] Dispute May Arise as to Who Is Party

Although it is usually clear who is and is not a party to a lawsuit for purposes of Rule 34, occasionally a dispute may arise on this point. n9 Most commonly, the issue involves whether documents are in the "custody" or "control" of an entity standing in a legal relationship to a party. n10

[4.--3] Limitation: Absent Class Members Are Not "Parties" for Purposes of Rule 34

In class action litigation, absent class members are not "parties" within the meaning of Rule 34; therefore, requests for production may not be served on them under the Rule. Instead, production of documents may be ordered pursuant Rule 23(d) on a proper showing. n11

[5] Advantages of Rule 34 Requests

Advantages of using Rule 34 compared to other discovery devices may include the following:

- Rule 34 requests may be used to obtain documents from nonresident alien parties at locations where a subpoena duces tecum cannot be served
- Rule 34 requests may be used to obtain documents prior to taking a deposition, to be reviewed at counsel's convenience
- Rule 34 requests generally may be unlimited in number and length, in contrast to limitations on the number and length of oral depositions, and the number of interrogatories and requests for admission
- Rule 34 requests may specify the form or forms in which electronically stored information should be produced
- Rule 34 requests may be used to request not only the inspection and copying of documents and/or electronically stored information, but the Rule also allows for the testing and/or sampling of documents and/or electronically stored information

[6] Disadvantages of Rule 34 Requests

Disadvantages of using Rule 34 compared to other discovery devices may include the following:

- Rule 34 requests cannot be used to obtain production of documents from nonparties (although Rule 45 may permit documents to be obtained from a nonparty)
- Rule 34 requests generally require a minimum 30-day response time, while the response time for subpoenas may be shorter

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSubpoenas

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Goldy v. Beal, 91 F.R.D. 451, 456 (M.D. Pa. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), (c).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Biben v. Card, 119 F.R.D. 421, 424-425 (W.D. Mo. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(c), 45(d).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., In re Penn Cent. Sec. Litig., 560 F.2d 1138, 1145 (3d Cir. 1977) (Rule 34 inapplicable because street name record owners of stock were not "parties" in class action by beneficial owners); In re Greenwood Air Crash, 161 F.R.D. 387, 394-398 (S.D. Ind. 1995) (tax returns of decedent's minor children who were arguably his statutory wrongful death beneficiaries must be produced pursuant to document request served upon plaintiff who brought action as personal representative of decedent's estate, because children were "parties" within meaning of Rule 34).

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Japan Halon Co. v. Great Lakes Chem. Corp., 155 F.R.D. 626, 627-629 (N.D. Ind. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d); see In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 104 F.R.D. 559, 562 n.1 (E.D.N.Y. 1985) , aff'd, 821 F.2d 139 (2d Cir. 1987) ; see also Dellums v. Powell, 566 F.2d 167, 187 (D.C. Cir. 1977) , cert. denied, 438 U.S. 916 (1978) ; Brennan v. Midwestern United Life Ins. Co., 450 F.2d 999, 1004-1005 (7th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied sub nom., Herriman v. Midwestern United Life Ins. Co., 405 U.S. 921 (1972) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.02

§ 13.02 Ensuring Timely Request

[1] Restrictions on Timing of Discovery

Rule 34 requests may be served as determined by:

- Time limits prescribed by federal statutes and local rules n1
- Agreement of the parties n2
- Order of the court n3

In most districts, the parties' Rule 26(f) preliminary discovery conference is the event triggering the opening of formal discovery, including Rule 34 requests for production. Rule 26(d) disallows parties from seeking discovery before the conference, absent a court order or stipulation between the parties. n4

[2] Mandatory Disclosure Provisions May Affect Timing

[2.--1] Nature of Mandatory Disclosure Requirements

Except in certain categories of cases, Rule 26(a) requires parties to exchange specified types of information, unless a court order or stipulation allows otherwise. n5

Rule 26(a) requires the following voluntary disclosures:

- Preliminary disclosures: During the early pretrial period, parties are required to exchange information regarding (1) individuals likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment; (2) documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment; (3) claims and calculations of damages; and (4) insurance coverage n6
- Expert witness disclosures: Information about and from retained experts must be shared later in the pretrial period n7

- Pretrial disclosures: Information about evidence the parties contemplate using at trial must be shared near the end of the pretrial period n8

For complete discussion regarding initial mandatory disclosure under Rule 26, see Ch. 9, The Purposes of Discovery.

[2.--2] Requests for Items Subject to Later Disclosure May Be Untimely

A court may strike as untimely a Rule 34 request that seeks the same information required by the mandatory disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a) if the Rule 34 request is served before the Rule 26(a) disclosures are due. n9

This general prohibition does not prevent otherwise timely discovery under Rule 34 of independently discoverable documents or things not generated for purposes of mandatory disclosure. n10 For example, a party may serve a document request, perhaps coupled with a Rule 45 subpoena, to obtain material evidence provided by an expert for review, testing, or experimentation. n11 However, a party may not request the test results or drafts of the expert's report before that disclosure is due under Rule 26(a)(2), as modified by court order or stipulation of the parties. n12

[3] Request May Be Untimely If Served After Discovery Cutoff Date

Because the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allow parties 30 days to respond to requests for production, requests must be served at least 30 days prior to the deadline for completion of fact discovery. n13 When the court enters a Rule 16(b) scheduling order setting the time for completion of discovery, a party must seek permission from the court to serve Rule 34 requests that seek production after the cutoff date. This rule applies whether service of the request is accomplished before or after the cutoff date. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulationsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevance

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, 34.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), 34(b)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1), (f).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3).

(n9)Footnote 9. See B.C.F. Oil Ref., Inc. v. Consolidated Edison Co., 168 F.R.D. 161, 166 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (expert interrogatories seeking opinions in advance of date set by court stricken); see also Thompson v. Glenmede Trust Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13083 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 26, 1996) ("once mandatory discovery is complete, a party, pursuant to Rule 26(b), may 'obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action' " under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1)).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Furniture World, Inc. v. D.A.V. Thrift Stores, 168 F.R.D. 61, 62 (D.N.M. 1996) "[w]hen Rule 34(c) is read with Rule 26(a)(2), it is clear that all documents provided to a party's expert witness must be produced on request"); see also Corrigan v. Methodist Hosp., 158 F.R.D. 54, 58 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (documents provided by counsel to expert and which expert considered in coming to his opinions discoverable pursuant to Rule 34 or 45).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. Thomas v. Pacificorp, 324 F.3d 1176, 1179 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b) see also Contardo v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 119 F.R.D. 622, 625 (D. Mass. 1988) .

126 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.03

§ 13.03 Ensuring Request Seeks Discoverable Matter

[1] General Rule: Rule 34 May Be Used to Request Documents in Possession, Custody, or Control of Another Party

Rule 34 may be used to request production of documents or electronically stored information in the possession, custody, or control of another party. n1

The production of documents is not limited by:

- The admissibility of the evidence at trial n2
- The requesting party's prior knowledge of or access to the matters sought n3

Note,
however, that Rule 34 discovery is subject to Rule 26(b), which allows a court to limit discovery that it finds cumulative or duplicative, burdensome or expensive, or directed at information that the discovering party already has within its control. n4

[2] Limitations to General Rule

[2.--1] Discoverable Matter Must Be Relevant to Claims or Defenses

Discovery under Rule 34 is limited to information that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party. n5

For good cause the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information need not be admissible at trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n6

[2.--2] Unnecessary or Burdensome Requests May Be Barred

A party need not provide discovery of electronically stored information from sources that the party identifies as not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. On motion to compel discovery or for a protective order, the party from whom discovery is sought must show that the information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. If that showing is made, the court may nonetheless order discovery from such sources if the requesting party shows good cause, considering the limitations of Rule 26(b)(2)(C). The court may specify conditions for the discovery. n7

The frequency or extent of use of the discovery methods otherwise permitted under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and by any local rule shall be limited by the court if it determines that: n8

- The discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive, or
- The party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought, or
- The burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues

[2.--3] Ready Availability of Matter From Another Source May Bar Discovery

A court may refuse to order production of documents, such as public records, that are equally accessible to all parties. n9

However, the court may order production from the adverse party when it would be excessively burdensome (for financial or other reasons) for the requesting party to obtain the documents from the public source rather than from the opposing party. n10

[2.--4] Discoverable Matter May Be Protected by Work-Product Doctrine

The work product doctrine protects documents and tangible things used in preparation for trial that reveal an attorney's legal theories, strategy, evaluation of strengths and weaknesses, and mental impressions. n11

[2.--5] Discoverable Matter May Be Protected by Privilege

Discovery under Rule 34 is limited to information that is not privileged. Discovery of privileged information is not permitted even if the information is relevant to the claims or defenses of any party. n12

[3] Requesting Electronically Stored Information

Rule 34(a)(1) governs requests for electronically stored information. The Rule is intended to be broad enough to cover all current types of computer-based information, and flexible enough to encompass future changes and developments. n13

Rule 34(b) allows the requesting party to designate the form or forms in which it wants electronically stored information produced. However, the rule does not require that the requesting party choose a form or forms of production. n14

The responding party also is involved in determining the form of production. In the written response to the production request that Rule 34 requires, the responding party must state the form it intends to use for producing electronically stored information if the requesting party does not specify a form or if the responding party objects to a form that the requesting party specifies. The Advisory Committee Notes encourage parties to communicate concerning the forms in which production is to be produced before the production occurs. This may permit the parties to identify and seek to resolve disputes before the expense and work of the production occurs. n15

If the requesting party is not satisfied with the form stated by the responding party, or if the responding party has objected to the form specified by the requesting party, the parties must meet and confer under Rule 37(a)(1) in an effort to resolve the matter before the requesting party can file a motion to compel. If they cannot agree and the court resolves the dispute, the court is not limited to the forms initially chosen by the requesting party, stated by the responding party, or specified in this rule for situations in which there is no court order or party agreement. n16

If the form of production is not specified by party agreement or court order, the responding party must produce electronically stored information either in a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable. n17

Whether or not the requesting party specified the form of production, Rule 34(b) provides that the same electronically stored information ordinarily need be produced in only one form.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevanceCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Seattle Times Co. v. Rhinehart, 467 U.S. 20, 29-30, 104 S. Ct. 2199, 81 L. Ed. 2d. 17 (1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Italia di Navigazione, S.p.A. v. M.V. Hermes I, 564 F. Supp. 492, 495 (S.D.N.Y.) , aff'd on other grounds, 724 F.2d 21 (2d Cir. 1983) (citing Moore's); see also See Burton Mechanical Contractors, Inc. v. Foreman, 148 F.R.D. 230, 236 (N.D. Ind. 1992) (citing Moore's); Weiner v. Bach Halsey Stuart, Inc., 76 F.R.D. 624, 625 (S.D. Fla. 1977) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2); see also Bartley v. Isuzu Motors, Ltd., 158 F.R.D. 165, 167 (D. Colo. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Bleecker v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 130 F. Supp. 2d 726, 739 (E.D.N.C. 2000) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Snowden v. Connaught Lab., Inc. 137 F.R.D. 325, 333 (D. Kan. 1991) ; see also Dushkin Publ'g Group, Inc. v. Kinko's Serv. Corp., 136 F.R.D. 334, 335 (D.D.C. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3), (4); Fed. R. Evid. 502(g); Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 511-512, 67 S. Ct. 385, 91 L. Ed. 451 (1947) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a) Committee Note (2006).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) Committee Note (2006).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) Committee Note (2006).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) Committee Note (2006).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E)(ii).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.04

§ 13.04 Making Requests Specific

[1] Making Requests in Writing

Rule 34 requests must be in writing. n1 A court may refuse to compel production if it finds the formalities of Rule 34 are not satisfied. n2

[2] Complying With Required Formalities

[2.--1] Identifying Requested Items Individually or by Category

The request must contain the items to be inspected or produced, identified either by individual item or by category. n3

It is good practice to number sequentially each particular request.

[2.--2] Describing Requested Items With Reasonable Particularity

Each item in the request must be described with reasonable particularity. The test is whether a reasonable person would know what documents are called for in the request. n4

The specificity required may depend on the extent of the requesting party's knowledge with regard to the documents requested, n5 as well as how far the proceedings have progressed at the time the request is made. n6

[2.--3] Description Satisfying Rule 26(a)(1)(A)(ii) Also Should Satisfy Rule 34 Requirements

A "description by category and location" satisfying a party's obligations under Rule 26(a)(1)(A)(ii) (mandatory disclosures regarding documents and things relevant to disputed facts) should also satisfy the Rule 34(b) requirement to set forth by category the documents to be inspected with reasonable particularity. n7

Consequently, if a party has furnished a description of documents and things pursuant to Rule 26(a)(1)(A)(ii), the opposing party should be able to use that description in a Rule 34(b) document request.

[2.--4] Specifying Time for Inspection at Least 30 Days After Service of Request

The requesting party chooses the time for inspection. The time chosen must be reasonable, and should be at least 30 days after service of the request, extended by three days for service by any of the following methods: n8

- Service by mail
- Service to the clerk of the court based on no known address
- Electronic or other means of delivery consented to in writing

The date chosen for production of the documents should be after the date the response is due, so that the requesting party will know whether the responding party plans to produce the items.

[2.--5] Party May Seek Change in Requested Time

If a party wants more or less time to make a request or to produce the requested documents, the party must do one of the following:

- Obtain an agreement in writing from the opposing party, except that stipulations extending the time for responses may be made only with approval of the court if they would interfere with any time set for completion of discovery, hearing a motion, or for trial n9
- Obtain a court order n10

[2.--6] Specifying Reasonable Place and Manner for Inspection

The place and manner of inspection must be reasonable. n11 The place of inspection also is subject to control by the court. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevance

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a) (requiring service of process).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Roberts v. Americable Int'l, Inc., 883 F. Supp. 499, 501 n.2 (E.D. Cal. 1995) ; see also Schwartz v. Marketing Publishing Co., 153 F.R.D. 16, 20-21 (D. Conn. 1994) (motion to compel denied as to documents requested in letter).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(A); Bruggeman ex rel. Bruggeman v. Blagojevich, 219 F.R.D. 430, 436 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Westhemeco Ltd. v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 82 F.R.D. 702, 709 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Taylor v. Florida Atl. Univ., 132 F.R.D. 304, 305 (S.D. Fla. 1990) , aff'd, 976 F.2d 743 (11th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1051 (1993) (plaintiff set forth categories of documents "with as much reasonable particularity as can be expected at this stage of discovery").

(n7)Footnote 7. See Brook Groupe Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 230, 113 S. Ct. 2578, 125 L. Ed. 2d 168 (1993) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1) advisory committee's note (1993).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A); Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(B).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(B).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(B), 34(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.05

§ 13.05 Certifying Requests

If the requesting party is represented by counsel, the requests must be signed by at least one attorney of record. The attorney must include his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n1

An unrepresented party must certify the requests personally and state his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n2

If the request lacks proper certification, no action need be taken with respect to it by the other parties, and the court will strike the request, unless it is promptly signed after the omission is called to the requestor's attention. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.06

§ 13.06 Serving Appropriate Parties

A Rule 34 request must be served on the party to whom it is directed and on all other parties in the action, unless the court directs otherwise. Service usually is made by mail to each party's attorney of record. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a), (b), 34(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.07

§ 13.07 Requesting Documents from Nonparties by Subpoena

[1] Using Rule 45 Subpoena to Obtain Documents or Electronically Stored Information

The procedure for obtaining documents or electronically stored information from nonparties requires use of a subpoena pursuant to Rule 45. An attorney, as an officer of the court, may issue a subpoena on behalf of the court in which the attorney is authorized to practice, or for a court in a district in which production is compelled by subpoena, and valid attorney-issued subpoenas operate as enforceable mandates of the court on whose behalf they are served. n1 A Rule 45 subpoena compels a nonparty to attend and give testimony or to produce and permit inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of designated books, documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things in the possession, custody or control of that person. n2

A command to produce evidence or to permit inspection, copying, testing, or sampling may be joined with a command to appear at trial or hearing or at a deposition, or may be issued separately. n3

The requesting party may designate a form or forms for production of electronically stored information. n4 Rule 45(c)(2) authorizes the person served with a subpoena to object to the requested form or forms. n5 Pursuant to Rule 45(d)(1)(B), if the subpoena does not specify the form or forms for electronically stored information, the person served with the subpoena must produce electronically stored information in a form or forms in which it is usually maintained or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable. n6 Rule 45(d)(1)(C) provides that the person producing electronically stored information need not produce the same information in more than one form unless so ordered by the court for good cause. n7

Rule 45(c) provides protection against undue impositions on nonparties. Rule 45(c)(1) directs that a party serving a subpoena "must take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to the subpoena." n8 Rule 45(d)(1)(D) provides that the responding person need not provide discovery of electronically stored information from sources the party identifies as not reasonably accessible, unless the court orders such discovery for good cause, considering the limitations of Rule 26(b)(2)(C), on terms that protect a nonparty against significant expense. n9

[2] Serving the Subpoena

A subpoena may be served by any person who is not a party and is at least 18 years old. If the subpoena compels attendance, fees for attendance and mileage must be tendered when the subpoena is delivered. n10 Prior notice of any commanded production of documents and things or inspection of premises before trial must be served on each party in the manner prescribed by Rule 5(b), which allows for service by personal delivery, by mail, or by electronic or other means consented to in writing under Rule 5(b)(2)(D). n11

[3] Obtaining Documents at Trial

Rule 45 explicitly applies to trials and hearings, and thus may be used to subpoena any person--party or nonparty--to produce documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things at the trial. n12

While Rule 34 is silent as to whether its procedures may be resorted to once trial has commenced, it is clearly intended to be used principally as a pretrial discovery device. n13

[4] Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

Rule 45 explicitly provides protection to nonparties who are subpoenaed to produce documents, including placing an enforceable duty on the party seeking a subpoena to "take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to the subpoena." n14

The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued will enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorneys' fee. n15

Rule 45(c)(3) provides for the quashing of a subpoena as a means of protecting a witness from the oppressive or unreasonable use of the subpoena power. n16

To determine whether a subpoena presents an undue burden, the court considers the following factors: n17

- Relevance of the information requested
- The need of the party for the documents
- The breadth of the document request
- The time period covered by the request
- The particularity with which the subpoena describes the requested documents
- The burden imposed

The court may also consider the expense and inconvenience to a nonparty in responding to a subpoena.

[5] Use of Rule 45 to Circumvent Discovery Rules or Orders Improper

Although Rule 45 is not limited by its terms to nonparties, it should not be used to obtain pretrial production of documents or things, or inspection of premises, from a party in circumvention of discovery rules or orders. Discovery from a party, as distinct from a nonparty, is governed by Rule 34, not Rule 45. n18 If a Rule 45 subpoena is used to obtain documents from a party as a discovery device, the subpoena must be filed and served prior to the close of the discovery period. n19

[6] Notifying Party of Inadvertent Disclosure of Privileged Materials

If information is produced in response to a subpoena that is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material, the person making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. n20

After being notified, a party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has and may not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved. n21

A receiving party may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a determination of the claim. n22 If the receiving party disclosed the information before being notified, it must take reasonable steps to retrieve it. The person who produced the information must preserve the information until the claim is resolved. n23

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSubpoenas

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Calabro v. Stone, 224 F.R.D. 532, 533 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(c) (a person not a party to the action may be compelled to produce documents and things or to submit to an inspection as provided in Rule 45).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(C).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(D).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Klockner Namasco Holdings Corp. v. Daily Access.Com, Inc., 211 F.R.D. 685, 687 (N.D. Ga. 2002) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1), (c)(2)(A).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Goldy v. Beal, 91 F.R.D. 451, 456 (M.D. Pa. 1981) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(1).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3); see also Wiwa v. Royal Dutch Petroleum Co., 392 F.3d 812, 818 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Wiwa v. Royal Dutch Petroleum Co., 392 F.3d 812, 818 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Hasbro, Inc. v. Serafino, 168 F.R.D. 99, 100 (D. Mass. 1996) (denying defendant's motion to compel production of documents from plaintiff under Rule 45).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Mortgage Info. Servs. v. Kitchens, 210 F.R.D. 562, 566-567 (W.D.N.C. 2002) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B).

(n21)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B).

(n22)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B).

(n23)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

§ 13.08 CHECKLIST: Drafting Rule 34 Document Request

The following checklist may be used as a general guideline for drafting Rule 34 document requests:

☐ Determine party status. Determine whether the person or entity to whom the request is to be directed is a party to the action. n1

☐ Determine when requests will be served. Determine when requests will be served, considering:

- ☐ Conference requirement. Ascertain that parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(d), unless stipulation or court order provides otherwise. n2
- ☐ Local rules. Review local rules for any exceptions to general rule for service of papers.
- ☐ Shortening time. Consider whether a motion for shortening time for service of responses and objections is appropriate. n3

☐ Draft requests. Draft each request keeping in mind the following issues:

- ☐ Useful information. Is the request precisely calculated to elicit information useful to the proponent?
- ☐ Mandatory disclosures requirement. Ensure that request does not seek the same information required by Rule 26 before the time those disclosures are due. n4

☐ Organization by individual item or by category. Is the request organized either by individual item or by category? n5

☐ Description with reasonable particularity. Are the requested documents described with reasonable particularity? n6

☐ Does the request designate the form or forms for electronically stored information? n7

☐ Designation of time for inspection or production. Does the request designate a reasonable time for inspection for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling? n8

☐ Date of inspection compared to date of response. Is the date of inspection set at least 30 days after the request is served? n9

☐ Date of inspection compared to date for completion of discovery. Ensure that the request does not seek production or inspection after the discovery cutoff date. n10

☐ Designation of reasonable place, and manner for inspection. Does the request designate a reasonable place and manner for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling? n11

☐ Number requests sequentially. Number each request sequentially, as required by applicable local rules.

☐ Review possible grounds for objections. Review list of possible grounds for objections, and frame requests, as appropriate, to minimize potential objections.

☐ Certifying request. If requesting party is represented by counsel, counsel must sign the request and include an address, e-mail address, and telephone number. An unrepresented party must certify requests personally and provide the same information. n12

☐ Service of requests. Serve requests within appropriate time frame. n13

☐ Certificate of service. Attach certificate of service, if required by local rules.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 13.01[4].

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d); see § 13.02[1].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) (30-day basic time frame for response).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 13.02[2].

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 13.04[2.--1].

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 13.04[2.--2].

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 13.03[3].

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 13.04[2.--4].

(n9)Footnote 9. See § 13.04[2.--4].

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 13.02[3].

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 13.04[2.--6].

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 13.05.

(n13)Footnote 13. See § 13.06.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 13.09 through 13.99

[Reserved]

§§ 13.09[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 13 Production of Documents

2-13 Federal Litigation Guide § 13.100

§ 13.100 Request for Production of Documents or Electronically Stored Information

[1] Form

Request for Production of Documents or Electronically Stored Information

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

Request for Production

[Party designation and name of requesting party] requests, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure, Rule 34, that [party designation and name of responding party]:

1. Produce and permit [party designation and name of requesting party] to inspect and copy each of the following documents: [list documents].

2. Produce and permit [party designation and name of requesting party] to inspect, copy, test, and/or sample the following electronically stored information in the designated forms [list the information requested and designate form of production].

3. Produce and permit [party designation and name of requesting party] to inspect and [specify, e.g., photograph] each of the following objects: [list objects].

[Party designation and name of requesting party] requests that the production described above be made on _____[date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)]. Inspection will be made by [specify manner of inspection].

_____ [Date]

_____ [Signature of attorney]

_____ [Typed or printed name of attorney]

_____ [Firm name, if applicable]

_____ Attorney for [name and designation of party]

_____ [Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of request for production of documents or electronically stored information for use by a requesting party.

[3] Contents of Request

A request for production must contain the following:

- A description of the documents or electronically stored information to be produced, identified either by individual item or by category, and described with particularity n1

- The time for production which must be reasonable and should be at least 30 days after service of the request, extended by three days for service by mail, service to the court clerk, or service by electronic or other agreed-upon means of delivery n2

- The place and manner of inspection, which must be reasonable, and is subject to control by the court n3

[4] Signature Required

Rule 34 requests must be signed by the requesting party's attorney, and must state the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n4

[5] Rule 26(f) Meeting May Be Required Prior to Commencement of Discovery

Under the Federal Rules, Rule 34 requests generally may not be served before the parties have had their initial discovery planning meeting, as required by Rule 26(d) and (f). n5

[6] Request Must Not Conflict With Mandatory Disclosure Obligations

A court may strike as untimely a Rule 34 request that seeks the same information required by Rule 26 before the time those disclosures are due. This general prohibition does not prevent otherwise timely discovery under Rule 34 of independently discoverable documents or things not generated for purposes of mandatory disclosure. n6

[7] Effect of Discovery Cutoff Date

When the court enters a scheduling order under Rule 16(b) setting the time for completion of discovery, a party must seek permission from the court to serve Rule 34 requests that seek production or inspection after the cutoff date. This rule applies whether service is accomplished before or after the cutoff date. n7

[8] Service

A Rule 34 request must be served on the party to whom it is directed and on all other parties in the action, unless the court directs otherwise. Service usually is made by mail to each party's attorney of record. n8

[9] Filing Generally Not Permitted

Discovery requests and responses shall not be filed unless they are used in the proceedings or the court orders filing. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d), 34(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a), (b), 34(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide 14.syn

§ 14.syn Synopsis to Chapter 14: Responding to Document Requests

§ 14.01 Options Regarding Rule 34 Requests

§ 14.02 Ensuring Timely Response
[1] Basic Deadline: 30 Days After Service of Request
[2] Modifying Deadline by Court Order or Stipulation
[3] Avoiding Waiver of Objections

§ 14.03 Formatting Response to Rule 34 Requests
[1] Numbering Items in Response
[2] Complying With Local Rules Governing Format

§ 14.04 Making Response Specific

§ 14.05 Objecting to Request

§ 14.06 Seeking Protective Orders
[1] Using Protective Order
[2] Asserting Rights of Third Parties in Proprietary Information

§ 14.07 Certifying Responses

§ 14.08 Serving Appropriate Parties

§ 14.09 Failure to Respond Is Sanctionable

§ 14.10 CHECKLIST: Drafting and Serving Responses to Rule 34 Production Requests

§§ 14.11 through 14.19 [Reserved]

§ 14.20 Making Timely Objection to Request

§ 14.21 Making Objections Specific

§ 14.22 Considering Grounds for Objections

§ 14.23 Avoiding Blanket Objections

§ 14.24 Claiming Privilege
[1] Providing Opposing Party Sufficient Information to Analyze Privilege Claim
[2] Considering Effect of Unintentional Disclosure of Privileged Material

§ 14.25 Protecting Privacy and Trade Secrets

§ 14.26 Complying With Unobjectionable Portions of Request

§ 14.27 Serving Objections on Appropriate Parties

§ 14.28 Certifying Objections

§ 14.29 CHECKLISTS: Preparing Objections to Rule 34 Production Request
[1] CHECKLIST: Considering Grounds for Objection
[2] CHECKLIST: Considering Protective Order
[3] CHECKLIST: Drafting Objections to Rule 34 Production Request

§§ 14.30 through 14.39 [Reserved]

§ 14.40 Discovery Encompasses Material in Party's Possession, Custody, or Control

§ 14.41 Determining Generally What Constitutes Possession, Custody, or Control
[1] Court's Territorial Jurisdiction Over Requested Materials Is Not Required
[2] Materials Located Outside United States May Be Discoverable
[3] Party's Mere Assertion Regarding Possession, Custody or Control May Be Insufficient
[4] Possession, Not Legal Ownership, Is Determinative
[5] Control and Custody Are Broader Than Possession
[5.--1] Establishing Control
[5.--2] Party Seeking Production Generally Has Burden of Establishing Control
[5.--3] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Related Corporations
[5.--4] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Affiliated Entities
[5.--5] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Corporate Officers or Directors
[5.--6] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Party's Attorneys or Insurers
[5.--7] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Assignor

§§ 14.42 through 14.49 [Reserved]

§ 14.50 Requesting Party Sets Date for Inspection

§ 14.51 Determining Place of Production

§ 14.52 Determining Manner of Production

§ 14.53 Paying Costs of Compliance
[1] General Rule: Responding Party Pays Cost of Production; Requesting Party Pays Copying Costs
[2] Limitation: Responding Party's Undue Burden or Expense
[3] Requesting Party Generally Bears Any Translation Costs
[4] Responding Party May Bear Additional Expense If Special Procedures Are Required to Read Document

§ 14.54 CHECKLISTS: Evaluating Rule 34 Requests
[1] CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Responding Party Has Possession, Custody, or Control

[2] CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Time, Place, and Manner of Inspection Is Reasonable
[3] CHECKLIST: Determining Whether to Allow Destructive Testing

§§ 14.55 through 14.99 [Reserved]

§ 14.100 Response and Objections to Request for Production and Inspection
[1] FORM
Response and Objections to Request for Production and Inspection
[2] Use of Form
[3] Sequential Numbering
[4] Specific Responses Required
[5] Signing Responses
[6] Service of Response
[7] Filing Generally Not Permitted

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

Rule 34 controls the right of a party to request the production of documents and electronically stored information from another party, as well as the obligation to respond to that request.

Care should be taken in preparing the written response to each production demand to insure that the response is complete, accurate, and specific. If there is an objection to a particular demand, the objection must be explicitly stated, and not merely couched in generalized, conclusory language. When a privilege is claimed, there must be a specific and adequate description of the withheld item. Adequate procedures should be established to govern the pre-production review by qualified personnel to insure that privileged materials are not inadvertently disclosed. Otherwise, inadvertent disclosure might be held to constitute a waiver of the privilege.

While the responding party may bring a motion for protective order against a demand for production, generally speaking it is better practice to respond to the demand, stating specific reasons for inability or refusal to produce. A proper response will have the effect of placing the burden on the demanding party to move to compel responses, and can often lead to an accommodation between the parties as to production without court intervention.

This chapter discusses the various issues involved in responding to a Rule 34 production request. The chapter examines requirements under the Rule, and describes the timing and content of the response. Tactical considerations regarding potential objections are explored. The attorney-client and attorney work product privileges, as they apply to a document production, are evaluated.

The chapter includes a form of response to a production request, and discusses procedural requirements and use of the form.

For related coverage, see Ch. 13, Production of Documents, Ch. 15, Document Management, and Ch. 20, Inspection of Land and Other Tangibles.

For expanded coverage of responding to document requests, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 34, Production of Documents and Things and Entry Upon Land for Inspection and Other Purposes (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.01

§ 14.01 Options Regarding Rule 34 Requests

A party upon whom a Rule 34 document request has been served may respond by doing any of the following: n1

- Agreeing to produce documents as requested
- Objecting to the request
- Moving for a protective order

Unless a protective order has been obtained, the party to whom a Rule 34 request is directed must respond in writing. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Badalamenti v. Dunham's, Inc., 896 F.2d 1359, 1362 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c) (protective orders).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.02

§ 14.02 Ensuring Timely Response

[1] Basic Deadline: 30 Days After Service of Request

The party responding to a Rule 34 document request has 30 days, extended three days if service is to the court clerk, electronic, by mail, or by other agreed-upon means, in which to serve a response. n1

[2] Modifying Deadline by Court Order or Stipulation

On motion of the responding party, the court may shorten or lengthen the 30-day time period to respond to a Rule 34 document request. n2

The parties also may agree in writing to shorten or lengthen the 30-day time period to respond to a Rule 34 request. n3 However, court approval of any stipulation extending the time to respond is required if the extension would interfere with a discovery cutoff date, a motion hearing, or trial. n4

[3] Avoiding Waiver of Objections

The court may hold that the responding party has waived its objections to the request if the party: n5

- Fails to respond to the Rule 34 request
- Fails to make a timely objection
- Fails to follow the requirements of Rule 34 for objecting

However, the court may grant relief from waiver on a showing of good cause. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for

Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d) (three additional days if served to the court clerk, electronic, or by mail).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A). see also Hall v. Sullivan, 231 F.R.D. 468, 474 (D. Md. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29.

(n5)Footnote 5. Richmark Corp. v. Timber Falling Consultants, 959 F.2d 1468, 1473 (9th Cir.) , cert. dismissed sub nom., China Everbright Trading Co. v. Timber Falling Consultants, Inc., 506 U.S. 948 (1992) ; Marx v. Kelly, Hart & Hallman, 929 F.2d 8, 12 (1st Cir. 1991) ; Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. v. West, 748 F.2d 540, 541-542 (10th Cir. 1984) , cert. dismissed, 469 U.S. 1199 (1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Scaturro v. Warren & Sweat Mfg. Co., 160 F.R.D. 44, 46 (M.D. Pa. 1995) (citing Moore's); In re Uranium Antitrust Litig., 480 F. Supp. 1138, 1149 (N.D. Ill 1979) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.03

§ 14.03 Formatting Response to Rule 34 Requests

[1] Numbering Items in Response

Each item in the response to the Rule 34 document request should have the same number or letter and be in the same order as the item or category of the request to which it relates. n1

[2] Complying With Local Rules Governing Format

Local district court rules often provide that in answering or objecting to Rule 34 requests, the responding party must first state verbatim the propounded request, and immediately after the quoted request, must state the answer or objection. Local rules should be consulted for any such requirements.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.04

§ 14.04 Making Response Specific

The party responding to a Rule 34 request must address individually each item or category of the request. n1

The response specifically must state, with respect to each item or category, that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested, unless the responding party objects to the item or category requested, in which event the reasons for the objection must be stated. n2

The responding party may state that it is unable to comply with the Rule 34 request. This type of response should state that a diligent and good faith inquiry has been made, as well as the reason the party cannot comply (e.g., the document never existed, has been lost or stolen, was inadvertently destroyed, etc.). n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Searock v. Stripling, 736 F.2d 650, 654 (11th Cir. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.05

§ 14.05 Objecting to Request

The responding party may object to a particular item or category of the request, in whole or in part. The objection must: n1

- Identify the specific item or category to which objection is made
- Specify the reason for the objection

When the party objects to the production of an item or category in part, rather than in its entirety, the objection must specify the part to which the objection pertains. n2

If a responding party objects to the requested form or forms for producing electronically stored information - or if no form was specified in the request - the responding party must state the form or forms it intends to use. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(D).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.06

§ 14.06 Seeking Protective Orders

[1] Using Protective Order

As an alternative to responding to a Rule 34 request, a party may seek a protective order. n1

Instead of filing a motion for a protective order, a responding party more typically will elect to interpose an objection, which will place the burden on the requesting party to make a motion to compel production or inspection pursuant to Rule 37(a). n2

[2] Asserting Rights of Third Parties in Proprietary Information

The party responding to a Rule 34 document request generally may not assert the rights of a third party to protect the third party's privacy or proprietary or confidential business information. Rather, the affected parties must intervene directly to protect such information. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Burton Mechanical Contractors, Inc. v. Foreman, 148 F.R.D. 230, 234 (N.D. Ind. 1992) ; see also Bush Devel. Corp. v. Harbour Place Assocs., 632 F. Supp. 1359, 1364 (E.D. Va. 1986) .

142 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.07

§ 14.07 Certifying Responses

If the responding party is represented by counsel, the responses must be signed by at least one attorney of record. The attorney must include his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. An unrepresented party must certify the responses personally, and state his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n1

If a response lacks proper certification, no action need to be taken with respect to it by the other parties, and the court will strike the response, unless it is signed promptly after the omission is called to the responding party's attention. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.08

§ 14.08 Serving Appropriate Parties

The response to a Rule 34 document request must be served on the requesting party's counsel, or on the requesting party itself if that party is without counsel. Copies must also be served on all other parties in the action. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a).

144 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.09

§ 14.09 Failure to Respond Is Sanctionable

The failure to respond to a Rule 34 document request is sanctionable pursuant to Rule 37(d), regardless of whether a prior motion to compel has been made or granted. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresSanctionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.10

§ 14.10 CHECKLIST: Drafting and Serving Responses to Rule 34 Production Requests

☐ Review requests for required form and content. Determine whether requests adhere to the form and content requirements of Rule 34 and any applicable local rules

☐ Objectionable requests. Consider which requests, if any, are objectionable; consider seeking protective order. n1

☐ Information and materials to be gathered. Consider documents which must be gathered to respond to requests.

☐ Consider motion for enlargement of time. Determine whether motion for order enlarging 30-day period for responding to requests is appropriate. n2

☐ Format of response. Depending on applicable local rules, precede each item in the response with the same number or letter, and in the same sequence, as the item or category of the request to which it pertains. n3

☐ Content of response. Respond separately to each item or category in the request by either:

- ☐ Agreeing to comply. State specifically with respect to each item or category that inspection or related activities will be permitted as requested.
- ☐ Stating inability to comply. State client's inability to comply, including reason.

☐ Note objections. For responses objected to, state that no answer is required because objection is raised. Note that if a party objects to only a part of the information requested, the responding party must permit inspection of the unobjectionable parts. n4

☐ Certifying response. If responding party is represented by counsel, have at least one attorney of record sign response. An unrepresented party must certify responses personally.

☐ Service of response. Within 30 days after service of the request (extended three days for service by mail), serve response on requesting party; serve copies on all other parties in the action. n5

☐ Certificate of service. Attach certificate of service if required by local rules.

☐ Responses generally not filed. District courts generally do no require filing of responses to Rule 34 requests.

■ FORM: For a sample form of response to a Rule 34 document request, see § 14.100.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d) (service by mail).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
A. General Rules Governing Responses to Rule 34 Production Demands

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 14.11 through 14.19

[Reserved]

§§ 14.11[Reserved]

147 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.20

§ 14.20 Making Timely Objection to Request

Absent court order or written stipulation between the parties, the responding party has 30 days (extended three days for service by mail) after service of a Rule 34 request to serve a response, stating any objections. n1

If the responding party fails to make a timely objection, the party may be held to have waived its objections. n2 Even claims of attorney-client privilege and work product immunity are waived unless the party's failure to object is excused by the court for good cause shown. n2.1

However, a finding of waiver is not mandatory. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevanceCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d), 34(b)(2)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Marx v. Kelly, Hart & Hallman, 929 F.2d 8, 12 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Cardenas v. Dorel Juvenile Group, Inc., 231 F.R.D. 616, 618 (D. Kan. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Young v. United States, 149 F.R.D. 199, 206 (S.D. Cal. 1993) (dictum that waiver of privilege might not be found because response was only three days late (citing Moore's)).

148 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.21

§ 14.21 Making Objections Specific

Objections to Rule 34 requests must: n1

- Specifically state which document or thing is being challenged
- State the reason for the objection

If the party objects to the production of an item or category in part, the objection must identify specifically the part to which the objection pertains. n2

If objection is made to the requested form or forms for producing electronically stored information - or if no form was specified in the request--the responding party must state the form or forms it intends to use. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevanceCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b); see also Hall v. Sullivan, 231 F.R.D. 468, 474 (D. Md. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.22

§ 14.22 Considering Grounds for Objections

The most frequently asserted objections to Rule 34 document requests are:

- Lack of relevance to claims or defenses of any of the parties n1
- Requested material is privileged or proprietary information, or attorney work product
- Request is unnecessary or unduly burdensome, and compliance would beunreasonably difficult and expensive n2

A party need not provide discovery of electronically stored information from sources that the party identifies as not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. On motion to compel discovery or for a protective order, the party from whom discovery is sought must show that the information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. If that showing is made, the court may nonetheless order discovery from such sources if the requesting party shows good cause, considering the limitations of Rule 26(b)(2)(C). The court may specify conditions for the discovery. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevanceCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.23

§ 14.23 Avoiding Blanket Objections

The party objecting to a Rule 34 document request must clearly set forth the specifics of the objection and how the objection relates to the documents being demanded. n1

Generally, blanket objections are unacceptable. For example, an objection stating that each request "seeks information and material protected by the attorney-client, work-product doctrine or other privilege" is insufficient, and may be held to be a waiver of any objections not adequately stated. n2

However, when objections are stated but they do not fully comply with Rule 34, the court may allow the responding party to make a more complete response. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionEvidencePrivilegesAttorney-Client PrivilegeWaiver

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Obiajulu v. City of Rochester, 166 F.R.D. 293, 295 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Harris v. United States, 121 F.R.D. 652, 655 (W.D.N.C. 1988) (defendant produced some documents and objected to production of others on six separate grounds but failed to specify which parts of the requests the objections applied to, and court granted leave to make more complete response).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.24

§ 14.24 Claiming Privilege

[1] Providing Opposing Party Sufficient Information to Analyze Privilege Claim

A party claiming privilege in response to a Rule 34 document request must provide sufficient information regarding the nature of the material not produced or disclosed to enable the requesting party to evaluate the applicability of the privilege. n1

A responding party who wishes to assert a privilege in response to a Rule 34 request should provide a responsive answer except for the specific items claimed to be privileged, and should include a statement of the basis for the privilege. The party must describe the allegedly privileged material in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged, will enable other parties to assess the applicability of the privilege. n2

Rule 26 does not detail how much information must be furnished when withholding documents under claim of privilege; it merely requires sufficient information to enable other parties to evaluate the applicability of the privilege or protection. n3

An accepted method of asserting a privilege with respect to documents withheld from production is to furnish a privilege log identifying each document by author, date, recipient, description of its nature and general content, and the basis for withholding it. n4

[2] Considering Effect of Unintentional Disclosure of Privileged Material

When made in a federal proceeding, a disclosure does not operate as a waiver if: n5

- The disclosure is inadvertent
- The holder of the privilege or protection took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure; and
- The holder promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error, including (if applicable) following Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B)

If information is produced in discovery that is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material, the party making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified, a party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has and may not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved. A receiving party may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a determination of the claim. If the receiving party disclosed the information before being notified, it must take reasonable steps to retrieve it. The producing party must preserve the information until the claim is resolved. n6

A party asserting a claim of privilege or protection after production must give notice to the receiving party. n7 That notice should be in writing unless the circumstances preclude it. Such circumstances could include the assertion of the claim during a deposition. The notice should be as specific as possible in identifying the information and stating the basis for the claim. n8

Because the receiving party must decide whether to challenge the claim and may sequester the information and submit it to the court for a ruling on whether the claimed privilege or protection applies and whether it has been waived, the notice should be sufficiently detailed so as to enable the receiving party and the court to understand the basis for the claim and to determine whether waiver has occurred. n9

After receiving notice, each party that received the information must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the information and any copies it has. No receiving party may use or disclose the information pending resolution of the privilege claim. The receiving party may present to the court the questions whether the information is privileged or protected as trial-preparation material, and whether the privilege or protection has been waived. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Taylor v. Florida Atlantic Univ., 132 F.R.D. 304, 306 (S.D. Fla. 1990) , aff'd sub nom., Taylor v. Popovich, 976 F.2d 743 (11th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1051 (1993) (requiring defendant to supply privilege list identifying documents objected to in response to request for production).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5) Committee Note (2006).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5) Committee Note (2006).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5) Committee Note (2006).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.25

§ 14.25 Protecting Privacy and Trade Secrets

A party may protect privacy, or trade secrets, or confidential business information from disclosure through a Rule 34 request by seeking an order limiting discovery, n1 or a protective order. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersTrade Secrets LawCivil ActionsDiscovery

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Petz v. Ethan Allen, Inc., 113 F.R.D. 494, 497 (D. Conn. 1985) (limiting inspection to plaintiff's counsel).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(G).

153 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.26

§ 14.26 Complying With Unobjectionable Portions of Request

The party responding to a Rule 34 document request must specify the item or category to which the objection pertains. If an item or category is objectionable only in part, the responding party must comply with the unobjectionable portions of the request. n1

A party who fails to specify the parts of the request to which the objections apply may be held to have waived any objections not adequately stated. However, when a responding party makes noncomplying objections, the court may allow the party to make a more complete request. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

(n2)Footnote 2. Harris v. United States, 121 F.R.D. 652, 655 (W.D.N.C. 1988) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.27

§ 14.27 Serving Objections on Appropriate Parties

Objections to a Rule 34 document request must be served on the requesting party, or if the requesting party is represented, on the party's attorney. n1

Copies of objections must also be served on all unrepresented parties, as well as on attorneys of all represented parties. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, 34(b)(2)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a), (b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.28

§ 14.28 Certifying Objections

If the objecting party is represented by counsel, the objections must be signed by at least one attorney of record. The attorney must include his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. An unrepresented party must certify the responses personally, and state his or heraddress, e-mail address, and telephone number. n1

If an objection lacks proper certification, no action need to be taken with respect to it by the other parties, and the court will strike the objection, unless it is signed promptly after the omission is called to the objector's attention. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.29

§ 14.29 CHECKLISTS: Preparing Objections to Rule 34 Production Request

[1] CHECKLIST: Considering Grounds for Objection

The following checklist may be used as a guide to preparing objections to a Rule 34 document request:

☐ Available from another source. Requests may not seek information that is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive. n1

☐ Inaccessible Source. Determine whether requested electronically stored information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. n1.1

☐ Burden outweighs benefit. The burden or expense of the requests must not outweigh their likely benefit, considering the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties'resources, the importance of the issues at stake, and the importance of the responses in resolving the issues. n2

☐ Cumulative or duplicative. Requests may not seek information that is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative. n3

☐ Inadequate description. Requests may be objectionable for inadequate description if they describe a category that encompasses too many subcategories to have any real meaning. n4

☐ Not in possession, custody, or control. Documents are not in the responding party's possession, custody, or control. n5

☐ Not relevant to claims or defenses. Rule 34 requests are subject to objection if they are not relevant to the claims or defenses of any of the parties. n6

☐ Privileged information. Privileged information is beyond the scope of discovery, even if the information is relevant to the subject matter of the action. n7

☐ Trade secrets. Trade secrets and confidential business information are generally subject to restrictions on discovery.

☐ Unrelated to discovery of admissible evidence. Information that is not reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence is beyond the scope of discovery. n8

☐ Work product protection. Protected work product is beyond the scope of discovery. n9

[2] CHECKLIST: Considering Protective Order

A protective order may be used instead of an objection:

☐ Evaluate use of protective order. Determine whether motion for protective order is appropriate, and what type of relief would be desired. n10

☐ Confer with other affected parties. Party seeking protective order must confer or attempt to confer with other affected parties before filing the motion. n11

[3] CHECKLIST: Drafting Objections to Rule 34 Production Request

Counsel should take the steps outlined below when drafting objections:

☐ Comply with local rules. Local district court rules frequently contain provisions governing the format of a response to a Rule 34 document request. In the absence of any such requirements, precede each item in the response with the same number or letter, and in the same sequence, as the item or category of the request to which it pertains. n12

☐ State objection grounds. Set forth grounds for objections.

☐ Comply with unobjectionable requests. Comply with any requests not objected to.

☐ Service of written objections. Absent court order or written stipulation, within 30 days after service of request (extended three days if served by mail), serve objections to requests on either requesting party or requesting party's attorney, and on all other parties to the action. When a party is represented by an attorney, objections to requests must be served on the party's attorney, unless the court orders service on the party. n13

☐ Certificate of service. Attach certificate of service, if required by local rules.

☐ Objections generally not filed. District courts generally restrict filing of objections.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective OrdersCivil ProcedureDiscoveryRelevanceCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B) Committee Note (2006).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(iii).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n11)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B).

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
B. Objecting to Rule 34 Requests

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 14.30 through 14.39

[Reserved]

§§ 14.30[Reserved]

158 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
C. Determining Whether Requested Material is in Party's Possession, Custody, or Control

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.40

§ 14.40 Discovery Encompasses Material in Party's Possession, Custody, or Control

To be subject to discovery under Rule 34, the documents, electronically stored information or things requested must be within the possession, custody, or control of a party. n1

The terms possession, custody, or control are listed in the disjunctive, and thus, only one of these requirements must be met. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1); see Cumis Ins. Soc'y, Inc. v. South-Coast Bank, 610 F. Supp. 193, 196 (N.D. Ind. 1985) (argument on "control" without merit when possession undisputed).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
C. Determining Whether Requested Material is in Party's Possession, Custody, or Control

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.41

§ 14.41 Determining Generally What Constitutes Possession, Custody, or Control

[1] Court's Territorial Jurisdiction Over Requested Materials Is Not Required

To be within a party's possession, custody, or control, the requested materials need not be within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, because a court having jurisdiction over the parties can enforce an order for production regardless of the location of the documents or things. n1

[2] Materials Located Outside United States May Be Discoverable

A party seeking to discover documents or things located outside the United States from a party over whom the court has personal jurisdiction may use Rule 34 without first resorting to the Hague Convention on Taking Evidence Abroad, although the Hague Convention procedures are also available to facilitate the gathering of evidence. n2 However, federal courts often exercise "special vigilance" in this situation to protect foreign litigants from unnecessary or unduly burdensome discovery. n3

[3] Party's Mere Assertion Regarding Possession, Custody or Control May Be Insufficient

When it appears that the documents may exist or are within in the possession, custody, or control of the responding party, that party's mere assertion to the contrary may be insufficient. n4

[4] Possession, Not Legal Ownership, Is Determinative

Legal ownership is not required for "possession"; a party having actual possession of materials must permit discovery even if the documents belong to someone else. n5

[5] Control and Custody Are Broader Than Possession

[5.--1] Establishing Control

The term control is broadly construed. Control includes the legal right to obtain the documents on demand. Neither legal ownership nor actual possession is necessary if the party has the right, authority, or ability to obtain the items. n6

The concept of control also extends to situations in which the party has the practical ability to obtain materials in another'spossession, even if the responding party cannot compel the other person or entity to produce the requested materials. n7

[5.--2] Party Seeking Production Generally Has Burden of Establishing Control

The party seeking production has the burden of establishing control overthe requested documents by the responding party. n8

However, if the requesting party demonstrates that its adversary has a legal right to obtain the requested documents, the burden shifts to the adversary to show why it lacks control. n9

[5.--3] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Related Corporations

Although cases involving related corporations are often highly fact specific, courts generally look at the following factors to determine whether the party from whom documents are sought has sufficient control for purposes of Rule 34: n10

- Corporate structures, including one company's share ownership in the other companies, and any overlap of directors, officers, and employees
- Financial relationship between the corporations
- Nonparty's connection to the transaction at issue
- Whether and to what degree the nonparty will receive the benefit of any award in the case
- Ability of the party to action to obtain the documents when it wants them

Courts generally consider whether there is, on balance, a sufficiently close connection between the entities to justify a finding of control, rather than assigning any particular weight to any one factor. n11

[5.--4] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Affiliated Entities

A nonparty company that is affiliated in some way with a business entity party may be ordered to produce documents in its possession when those documents are requested under Rule 34. n12

However, production will be denied if the showing of a connection between the companies is insufficient. n13

[5.--5] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Corporate Officers or Directors

A corporation may be required to produce documents in the possession or control of one of its officers. n14

Conversely, a party to an action who is an officer, director, or majority shareholder of a corporation may be required to produce documents in the corporation's possession. n15

[5.--6] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Party's Attorneys or Insurers

Documents may be considered to be within the party's control within the meaning of Rule 34 when the documents are in the possession of the party's attorneys n16 or insurers. n17

[5.--7] Seeking Possession of Documents Held by Assignor

A party may seek possession of documents pursuant to Rule 34 held by an assignor when to do otherwise would frustrate discovery. n18

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsForeign DiscoveryCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Societe Nationale Industrielle Aerospatiale v. United States Dist. Court, 482 U.S. 522, 539-540, 107 S. Ct. 2542, 96 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1987) ; see also In re Uranium Antitrust Litig., 480 F. Supp. 1138, 1145 (N.D. Ill. 1979) ; Laker Airways Ltd. v. Pan Am. World Airways, 103 F.R.D. 42, 46-47 (D.D.C. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Societe Nationale Industrielle Aerospatiale v. United States Dist. Court, 482 U.S. 522, 539-541, 107 S. Ct. 2542, 96 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1987) ; see Hague Convention on Taking Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters, 23 U.S.T. 2555, T.I.A.S. No. 7444, 28 U.S.C. § 1781.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Societe Nationale Industrielle Aerospatiale v. United States Dist. Court, 482 U.S. 522, 539-541, 107 S. Ct. 2542, 96 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Norman v. Young, 422 F.2d 470, 472-473 & n.4 (10th Cir. 1970) (citing Moore's).

(n5)Footnote 5. See In re Bankers Trust Co., 61 F.3d 465, 470 (6th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied sub nom., Bankers Trust Co. v. Proctor & Gamble Co., 517 U.S. 1205 (1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Japan Halon Co. v. Great Lakes Chem. Corp., 155 F.R.D. 626, 627 (N.D. Ind. 1993) ; Camden Iron & Metal Inc. v. Marubeni Am. Corp., 138 F.R.D. 438, 441 (D.N.J. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See In re Woolworth Corp. Secs. Class Action Litig., 166 F.R.D. 311, 313 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) ; see also Soto v. City of Concord, 162 F.R.D. 603, 620 (N.D. Cal. 1995) ; Comeau v. Rupp, 810 F. Supp. 1127, 1166 (D. Kan. 1992) ; In re Domestic Air Transp. Antitrust Litig., 142 F.R.D. 354, 356-357 (D. Ga. 1992) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See United States v. International Union of Petroleum & Indus. Workers, 870 F.2d 1450, 1452 (9th Cir. 1989) ; see also Norman v. Young, 422 F.2d 470, 472-473 (10th Cir. 1970) ; McBryar v. International U.A.W., 160 F.R.D. 691, 695 (S.D. Ind. 1993) ; Camden Iron & Metal Inc.v. Marubeni Am. Corp., 138 F.R.D. 438, 441 (D.N.J. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Scott v. Arex, Inc. 124 F.R.D. 39, 42 (D. Conn. 1989) (resisting party must show substantial justification).

(n10)Footnote 10. See McBryar v. U.A.W., 160 F.R.D. 691, 697 (S.D. Ind. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Japan Halon Co. v. Great Lakes Chem. Corp., 155 F.R.D. 626, 627-629 (N.D. Ind. 1993) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Cooper Indus., Inc. v. British Aerospace, Inc., 102 F.R.D. 918, 919-920 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) ; see also Alimenta (U.S.A.), Inc. v. Anheuser-Busch Corp., 99 F.R.D. 309, 313 (N.D. Ga. 1983) ; In re Uranium Antitrust Litig., 480 F. Supp. 1138, 1152-1153 (N.D. Ill. 1979) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See e.g., Pennwalt Corp. v. Plough, Inc., 85 F.R.D. 257, 263 (D. Del. 1979) (production denied in case in which it was not shown that corporations had identical Board of Directors nor that their respective business operations were sufficiently intertwined).

(n14)Footnote 14. Riddell Sports, Inc. v. Brooks, 158 F.R.D. 555, 558-559 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n15)Footnote 15. General Env't Science Corp. v. Horsfall, 136 F.R.D. 130, 134 (N.D. Ohio 1991) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Gray v. Faulkner, 148 F.R.D. 220, 223 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Henderson v. Zurn Indus., Inc., 131 F.R.D. 560, 565-568 (S.D. Ind. 1990) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Bank of New York v. Meridien Biao Bank Tanz., 171 F.R.D. 135, 148-149 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

160 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
C. Determining Whether Requested Material is in Party's Possession, Custody, or Control

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 14.42 through 14.49

[Reserved]

§§ 14.42[Reserved]

161 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
D. Producing Material for Inspection Pursuant to Rule 34 Request

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.50

§ 14.50 Requesting Party Sets Date for Inspection

The requesting party must specify a reasonable time for inspection. The time specified in the request should be at least 30 days after service of the request. n1 The court may, on motion of the affected party, permit a longer or shorter time to produce the requested documents. n2

Any questions or disputes regarding the timing of production normally are resolved without the necessity of filing a motion. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(B), (2)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Village Creek Joint Venture, 130 F.R.D. 357, 360 (N.D. Tex. 1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
D. Producing Material for Inspection Pursuant to Rule 34 Request

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.51

§ 14.51 Determining Place of Production

The requesting party must specify a reasonable place for inspection. n1

When the volume of material sought would make copying and transporting burdensome and oppressive to the party from whom discovery is requested, or when the distance between the parties is great, the court may require that the requesting party conduct the inspection at the convenience of the party in possession of the documents. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsStipulationsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Caruso v. Coleman Co., 157 F.R.D. 344, 349-350 (E.D. Pa. 1994) ; Baine v. General Motors Corp., 141 F.R.D. 328, 331-332 (M.D. Ala. 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
D. Producing Material for Inspection Pursuant to Rule 34 Request

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.52

§ 14.52 Determining Manner of Production

Unless the parties otherwise agree, or the court otherwise orders: n1

- A party who produces documents for inspection shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the request

- If a request does not specify the form or forms for producing electronically stored information, a responding party must produce the information in a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable

- A party need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
D. Producing Material for Inspection Pursuant to Rule 34 Request

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.53

§ 14.53 Paying Costs of Compliance

[1] General Rule: Responding Party Pays Cost of Production; Requesting Party Pays Copying Costs

Ordinarily, the responding party pays the cost associated with document production, while the requesting party pays for the cost of making copies. n1

[2] Limitation: Responding Party's Undue Burden or Expense

The court has authority to condition production of documents on the requesting party's paying the costs of production. n2

The court will shift costs if the responding party can show that production involves undue burden or expense. n3 However, the court generally will issue a protective order for cost-shifting or sharing only when the burden is extreme. n4

[3] Requesting Party Generally Bears Any Translation Costs

The requesting party generally bears the cost of translating a document into English. A production request requiring translation would be unduly burdensome, especially if it comes when the significance of the documents requested is not yet known. n5

However, if the requesting party translates a document for its own use, it may seek to recover its translation expenses as cost of suit if it prevails in the litigation. n6

[4] Responding Party May Bear Additional Expense If Special Procedures Are Required to Read Document

If requested documents can only be read or comprehended by the use of special procedures, the responding party may be required to pay theadditional expense associated with producing the documents for inspection. n7

In cases involving computer data, Rule 34(b) specifically provides for translation of data compilations into "reasonably usable form." n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & Inspection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Riddell Sports, Inc. v. Brooks, 158 F.R.D. 555, 559 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) ; see also Caruso v. Coleman Co., 157 F.R.D. 344, 349-350 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a) advisory committee's note (1970); see In re Coordinated Pretrial Proceedings in Petroleum Prods. Antitrust Litig., 669 F.2d 620, 623 (10th Cir. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bills v. Kennecott Corp., 108 F.R.D. 459, 464 (D. Ut. 1985) (computer stored data).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bills v. Kennecott Corp., 108 F.R.D. 459, 464 (D. Ut. 1985) (computer stored data).

(n5)Footnote 5. See In re Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 687 F.2d 501, 505-509 (1st Cir. 1982) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See In re Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 687 F.2d 501, 506 (1st Cir. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Delozier v. First Nat'l Bank of Gatlinburg, 109 F.R.D. 161, 164 (E.D. Tenn. 1986) (bank must bear costs of producing microfilmed documents if they are not readable unless photocopied by special equipment).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E); see In re Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 687 F.2d 501, 508 (1st Cir. 1982) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.54

§ 14.54 CHECKLISTS: Evaluating Rule 34 Requests

[1] CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Responding Party Has Possession, Custody, or Control

Both requesting and responding parties must determine whether the respondent has possession, custody, or control of the documents or things requested, considering: n1

☐ Possession. Does responding party have actual possession, even without legal ownership?

☐ Control or custody. Does responding party have:

☐ The right or authority to obtain the requested items on demand, even without legal ownership or possession?

☐ The practical ability to obtain materials in another's possession, even if the responding party cannot compel the other party to produce the requested materials?

☐ Related entities. Is there a sufficiently close connection between related corporations or entities to justify finding control if requested materials are in the possession of the related entity, considering:

☐ Corporate structures, including one company's share ownership in the other companies and any overlap of directors, officers, and employees.

☐ Financial relationship between the entities.

☐ Nonparty's connection to the transaction at issue.

☐ Whether and to what degree the nonparty will receive the benefit of any award in the case.

☐ Ability of the party to action to obtain the documents when it wants them.

☐ Affiliated entities of individuals. Are the documents in the possession of the party's:

☐ Attorneys.

☐ Insurers.

☐ Corporate officers, or directors.

☐ Assignor.

[2] CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Time, Place, and Manner of Inspection Is Reasonable

Both requesting and responding parties must consider whether the time, place, and manner of inspection is reasonable, including:

☐ Timing. Date specified for the request must be at least 30 days after service of the request. n2

☐ Place. Place specified for inspection must be reasonable. n3

☐ Manner. Manner of document production must be reasonable and may be either: n4

☐ Usual course of business. As the documents are kept in the normal course of business.

☐ Requestor's categories. Labeled to correspond to the categories in the request.

[3] CHECKLIST: Determining Whether to Allow Destructive Testing

Both requesting and responding parties must determine whether destructive testing is necessary and whether it can be justified, considering:

☐ Interests served compared to value of preserving evidence. Are the interests served by testing greater or less than the value of preserving the evidence? n5

☐ Previous testing. Has the party in possession of the items already tested them? n6

☐ Destruction of entire item. Will the entire item of evidence be destroyed. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue Burdens

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Ostrander v. Cone Mills, Inc., 119 F.R.D. 417, 419 (D. Minn. 1988) (granting motion to compel production of fabric swatches for destructive testing in action alleging injury from flammable nightwear).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Ostrander v. Cone Mills, Inc., 119 F.R.D. 417, 419 (D. Minn. 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Ostrander v. Cone Mills, Inc., 119 F.R.D. 417, 419 (D. Minn. 1988) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
D. Producing Material for Inspection Pursuant to Rule 34 Request

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 14.55 through 14.99

[Reserved]

§§ 14.55[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 14 Responding to Document Requests
E. Forms

2-14 Federal Litigation Guide § 14.100

§ 14.100 Response and Objections to Request for Production and Inspection

[1] FORM

Response and Objections to Request for Production and Inspection

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

Response to Request for Production and Inspection

[Party designation and name of responding party] by [his/her] attorney(s), makes the following response to the request of [party designation and name of requesting party] for [production of documents/production of electronically stored information] dated [insert date]:

INTRODUCTION AND RESERVATION OF OBJECTIONS

[Party designation and name of responding party] has attempted to determine what [documents/electronically stored information] it has in response to the request, but this attempt will by necessity be ongoing. This response reflects [party designation and name of responding party]'s present state of knowledge [documents/electronically stored information] requested. By making this response, [party designation and name of responding party] does not waive, and expressly reserves, all privileges, including the attorney-client privilege and the work-product rule.

In addition, [party designation and name of responding party] does not waive, but on the contrary reserves, (a) the right to object on the grounds of competency, relevancy, and materiality, or any other proper ground, to the use of any document or electronically stored information for any purpose, in whole or in part, in any subsequent step or proceeding in this action or in any other action; (b) the right to object on any and all grounds at any time to interrogatories, requests for inspection, or other discovery procedures involving or relating to the subject matter of the Requests herein answered; and (c) the right at any time to revise, correct, add to, or clarify any of the responses propounded herein.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. [Party designation and name of responding party] objects to the requests and each of them, to the extent they seek [documents/electronically stored information] thatare privileged from disclosure pursuant to the attorney-client

privilege, the attorney work product doctrine, and any other legal privilege or immunity.

2. [Party designation and name of responding party] objects to the requests and each of them, to the extent that they are overly broad, unduly burdensome, excessive, unreasonable, oppressive, and/or seek documents that are irrelevant, immaterial, or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

REQUEST NO. 1 [Reproduce request]

[EITHER]

1. [Party designation and name of responding party] will permit production as requested.

[OR]

1. [Party designation and name of responding party] is unable to comply with the request for production as requested because [specify reasons, e.g., nonpossession of documents]. [Party designation and name of responding party] has made a diligent and good faith inquiry to comply with this request in that [describe efforts to comply with request].

[OR]

1. [Party designation and name of responding party] objects to the request for production on the ground that [specify objection].

[Repeat for each Request]

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable] Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of response to a Rule 34 request for production.

[3] Sequential Numbering

Each item in the response should have the same number (or letter) and be in the same order as the item or category of the request to which it relates. n1

Many local rules require a party answering or objecting to Rule 34 requests to first state verbatim the propounded request and, immediatelyafter the quoted request, must state the answer or objection. n2

[4] Specific Responses Required

The response must state, with respect to each item or category, that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested, unless the request is objected to, in which case the reasons for the objection must be stated. If objection is made to part of an item or category, the part must be specified and inspection permitted of the remaining parts. n3

[5] Signing Responses

If the objecting party is represented by counsel, the objections must be signed by at least one attorney of record. The attorney must include his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. An unrepresented party must sign the responses personally and state his or her address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n4

[6] Service of Response

The party on whom the request is served must serve a written response within 30 days after the service of the request, extended three days if service is to the court clerk if there is no known address by mail, by electronic means, or after agreed-upon means. n5

A shorter or longer time may be directed by the court or, in the absence of a court order, agreed to in writing by the parties, subject to Rule 29. n6

[7] Filing Generally Not Permitted

Discovery requests and responses shall not be filed unless they are used in the proceedings or the court orders filing. n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. See N.D.N.Y., L.R. 26.1; W.D.N.Y., L.R. 5.2(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d), 34(b)(2)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d).

168 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide 15.syn

§ 15.syn Synopsis to Chapter 15: Management of Documents *

§ 15.01 Organizing Documents for Accessibility

§ 15.02 Considering Methods of Document Management

§ 15.03 Managing Documents Manually
[1] Examining and Evaluating Documents
[2] Filing Documents
[3] Creating a Master Document List

§ 15.04 Managing Documents Manually and Electronically

§ 15.05 Managing Documents Electronically
[1] Imaging Documents on CD-ROM
[2] Indexing Words Within the Document or Coding the Document
[3] Storing Electronic Documents in Folders

§ 15.06 Combining Imaging Systems with Network- and Web-Based Access

§ 15.07 Reviewing and Organizing Key Documents
[1] Reviewing Key Documents
[2] Organizing Key Documents

§ 15.08 Using Paralegals for Initial Document Review

§ 15.09 [Reserved]

§ 15.10 Reviewing Documents for Initial Mandatory Disclosure Under Rule 26(a)

§ 15.11 Preparing for Document Production Under Rule 34
[1] Anticipating Production Requests
[2] Obtaining Documents from the Client's Employees and Agents
[3] Considering Whether Documents Are Protected From Production
[4] Redacting Documents Prior to Production

[5] Numbering Documents for Production

§ 15.12 Producing Client E-Mails

§ 15.13 Reviewing Documents Produced Under Rule 34
[1] Determining Time and Place of Production
[2] Reviewing Documents On-Site

§ 15.14 Maintaining Electronically Stored Information in Reasonably Usable Form

§§ 15.15 through 15.19 [Reserved]

§ 15.20 Keeping a Control Set of Documents

§ 15.21 Organizing Documents Chronologically

§ 15.22 Indexing Significant Documents
[1] Creating a Computer-Based Index System
[2] Coding Electronic Documents

§ 15.23 Maintaining a "Hot Document" File

§ 15.24 Recording Document Use

§ 15.25 Creating Witness Files

§ 15.26 Creating Subject Matter Files

§ 15.27 Maintaining Files for Potential Exhibits

§ 15.28 CHECKLISTS: Managing Litigation Documents
[1] CHECKLIST: Choosing a Method of Organization
[2] CHECKLIST: Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

In document-intensive litigation, the most important concern is to be able to locate all documents and be certain of their origin. A system of control and indexing that makes documents readily accessible is critical. Typical document management involves sorting, labeling, filing, and indexing documents in a manner that allows for easy retrieval. Document management typically involves some level of automation. Even for a small case, it is useful to maintain a computer-based index of pertinent documents.

The use of electronic documents has revolutionized document management, especially in large cases. Document imaging services that scan paper documents into digital images on CD-ROM are commonly used for the purpose of automating and indexing documents in complex cases. At some firms, document imaging and management systems with comprehensive indexing and retrieval features are used in all cases. A growing number of firms use Web-based sites with document management systems that make it possible for multiple users to store, index, retrieve, and electronically distribute all types of case documents with accuracy and ease.

This chapter discusses effective management of pertinent litigation documents. The chapter covers the following topics:

- Methods of document management
- Objectives of document management
- Organizing discovery documents
- Keeping a control set of documents
- Indexing documents for retrieval and annotation
- Keeping "hot document" files, witness files, subject matter files, and exhibit files

The chapter concludes with two checklists. The first checklist reviews the methods of document management and highlights the benefits of digital imaging and electronic coding. The second checklist covers techniques for keeping track of documents throughout the course of litigation.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.01

§ 15.01 Organizing Documents for Accessibility

Proper document management allows counsel to keep track of and retrieve pertinent documents throughout the course of litigation. The key to document management lies in planned organization. Regardless of the number of documents, standardized methods of organization require:

- Indexing and/or coding of documents
- Secure storage of documents
- Accessibility to documents on an as-needed basis

Management efforts do not need to be complex in every case. In many cases, document management will involve nothing more than labeling a few tabs on file folders, putting the documents in the appropriate folders, and maintaining a master list or index of the documents.

The large number of documents involved in some cases requires management with some additional foresight, and will typically involve some level of computerized automation. In cases involving large amounts of documents, CD-imaging is often the most practical means of coding and storing documents for future use and accessibility. When paper documents are received in an office, they must be organized to be useful. Documents are labeled, sorted, filed, and indexed. Electronic documents are no different. A document imaging software system must have a comprehensive indexing system that organizes documents in a manner that makes them available on an as-needed basis.

Regardless of the method of organization, the objectives will be the same whatever the actual number of documents involved. What will vary is the complexity of the organization or the expense of technology that must be put in place to accomplish the task. Although the sole practitioner or small firm with a limited number of large cases may be unable to justify buying imaging systems, litigation support services may be retained for imaging needs on a case-by-case basis.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase

ManagementEvidenceDocumentary EvidenceWritingsGeneral OverviewEvidenceDocumentary EvidenceWritingsSummaries

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.02

§ 15.02 Considering Methods of Document Management

Methods of document management may include:

- Manual organization and filing of paper documents for manual retrieval
- Manual organization combined with automated indexing to retrieve paper documents
- Electronic CD imaging, coding, indexing, and retrieval of electronicdocuments on CD-ROM
- Electronic imaging combined with network-based or web-based access to documents for multiple users

The decision to use a manual system or a high-tech approach will probably be determined by one or more of the following variables:

- The information technology resources available
- The case budget
- The specific litigation
- The number of individuals in need of document access

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.03

§ 15.03 Managing Documents Manually

[1] Examining and Evaluating Documents

The first step in the management of documents is reviewing relevant documents on receipt. The initial review requires counsel to consider whether the document has relevance in the litigation, and to also consider whether the document is protected as privileged or confidential material, or whether it is subject to discovery.

[2] Filing Documents

As documents are received, counsel should establish a system of organization for filing. Documents may be subdivided based on the type of document, such as: party correspondence, investigation documents, transaction documents, documents that tend to prove the client's position, discovery-related documents, and privileged documents. Separate files may then be organized in a standardized manner, such as chronologically based on the date the document was generated or received.

[3] Creating a Master Document List

Maintenance of a master document list is essential in all cases, and in its simplest form the list may be generated in table format with basic word processing software. The master document list should include basic information about each document, such as:

- Document title or type of document
- Date of document
- Author or source of document
- Short description or significance of document
- Potential uses for the document (discovery, trial exhibit, etc.)
- Document location (file name)

The master list provides an inventory of relevant litigation documents, as well as a means to quickly review and access key documents.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase Management

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.04

§ 15.04 Managing Documents Manually and Electronically

The combined approach to document management typically involves:

- Organizing documents as they are received,
- Classifying documents for index purposes, and
- Developing a computerized database for indexing

The documents are then manually filed and may be retrieved using the electronic database. Once located, documents may be pulled and copied as needed.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.05

§ 15.05 Managing Documents Electronically

[1] Imaging Documents on CD-ROM

Imaging is the creation of an electronic copy of a document. Each person on the case may then display the document on a computer screen. Paper copies of the documents may still be retained as a backup, but are rarely touched. Electronic documents may be organized and manipulated quickly and efficiently.

With electronic imaging, each page is electronically scanned and saved on a CD-ROM disk. Electronic image software is then used to electronically access documents based on coded information. The software may be modified to suit the needs of a particular case. Most software systems for organizing electronic documents will also store deposition transcripts and other full-text files in fully searchable form. Legal support services that specialize in imaging technology offer various services relating to the creation and management of electronic documents.

Electronic documents in an imaging system may be stored and accessed based on various forms of organization, including:

- Full-text indexing
- Indexing of coded information
- Storing documents in electronic folders and sub-folders

[2] Indexing Words Within the Document or Coding the Document

Document imaging systems with Optical Character Recognition (OCR) provideautomatic full-text indexing of all documents. Once scanned, the imaging software can automatically index every word to track the location of each word and phrase within every document, dramatically reducing indexing costs while providing extensive searching capabilities.

Documents may also be organized by index codes that are specifically assigned to documents. The most basic coding systems and services provide bibliographic information for coded documents,such as: document page numbers, packet/attachment ranges, authors, recipients, copies, date, and document type.

A more comprehensive database may include bibliographic information, as well as relevant data extrapolated from the document body, such as: names and organizations in-text, key words, and issue-specific codes.

Whatever combination of indexing methodologies are employed, it is important to remember that they be easily used and understood by the people who need access to the documents.

[3] Storing Electronic Documents in Folders

Along with full-text and code-based indexing, some imaging software systems have a visual method of filing documents. In any office, files are normally found by looking in a particular folder in a particular drawer in a particular file cabinet. There is a variety of document management software that has the ability to duplicate this filing system. A flexible folder structure eases the transition from paper filing to electronic filing and may make the use of electronic documents more successful at the onset.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

175 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.06

§ 15.06 Combining Imaging Systems with Network- and Web-Based Access

As the number of documents increases in a given case, the opportunity for a single lawyer to review each document diminishes. Hands-on work with key documents often plays a crucial role throughout the course of litigation, and the number of individuals with the need for access to key documents may be substantial depending on the size of the case.

A document imaging and retrieval system, combined with a network- or Web-based database, enables multiple users to search for a document, retrieve the document to a computer screen, view the document, make notations to the related searchable database about the document, and print the document if needed. Secure sites allow firms to post documents and other data online and selectively share the information with clients, co-counsel, or other individuals. A wide variety of litigation support businesses specialize in providing services to organize and access electronic documents.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase Management

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

176 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.07

§ 15.07 Reviewing and Organizing Key Documents

[1] Reviewing Key Documents

An important goal of document review is to progress towards an ever-decreasing body of important documents. Whatever methods are employed to review and organize documents, the documents should be culled throughout the course of litigation to eliminate those that have little or no bearing on the action's key issues.

Key documents need to be gathered and made accessible at the onset of litigation in order to begin with substantive case preparation. The object must be to initially identify potentially significant documents, in such a way as to minimize the work required in a second, more thorough review. Prompt culling of a large body of documents minimizes the time and expense of a subsequent handling. However, it generally is better to reduce the universe of documents in later stages than to overlook totally important documents in the first step.

[2] Organizing Key Documents

Relevant documents should be organized in the manner (e.g., chronologically, by subject matter, by witness, etc.) best calculated to facilitate their overall review. It is always necessary to maintain some system of control over the entire body of documents.

At the same time, counsel may want the ability to "parse" the documents in ways different from their fundamental, or source-related, arrangements. For instance, it is possible to assemble all significant documents seen by a particular witness or party, or all documents, from whatever source, dealing with a given subject. Under some circumstances, it might be necessary to simultaneously sort the universe of relevant documents according to several distinct criteria-- e.g., all documents seen or authored by a particular witness within a given period of time.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.08

§ 15.08 Using Paralegals for Initial Document Review

An important question to consider in apportioning document review assignments to paralegals is whether each paralegal will be responsible for a particular fact area or segment of the case, or whether each paralegal should be available for whatever most needs to be done. Specialization has the obvious advantage of promoting detailed understanding. Also, clearly defined roles and responsibilities foster independent thought, initiative, and a sense of equality among team members. A disadvantage of specialization, on the other hand, is that if a specialist leaves the job, a potentially serious gap may be left. In a particularly complex case, specialization may result even if not initially intended, just because it is not possible for each person to understand equally all aspects of the case as itdevelops; different issues frequently require analysis of very different types of documents.

One way to avoid the shortcomings of specialization is to have a central place where all attorney and paralegal work product is kept available for use by all team members. Both paralegals and attorneys should be required to generate memoranda when they learn significant new information about pertinent documents. Electronic imaging and file share software provides centralized access for multiple users, and it also allows users to annotate document files. Other mechanisms for sharing and documenting information can alleviate the dangers inherent in specialization. The pace and complexity of the case, however, are the chief factors in determining whether to have individuals specialize or not. A particularly fast- moving case may require that the paralegals handle one rush assignment after another, while a complex but slower-paced case may require that detailed long-term research be conducted on several fronts simultaneously.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase Management

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
A. Evaluating Objectives and Methods of Document Management

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.09

[Reserved]

§ 15.09[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
B. Managing Discovery Documents

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.10

§ 15.10 Reviewing Documents for Initial Mandatory Disclosure Under Rule 26(a)

An early evaluation of the client's documents is an essential component of planning for initial disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a). In applicable cases, even before any formal discovery demands are made, the parties are required to exchange documents, electronically stored information, and other tangible things that: n1

- Are in the possession, custody, or control of the party, and that
- The disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment

For complete discussion of mandatory disclosure under Rule 26(a), see Ch. 10, Purposes of Discovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase Management

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
B. Managing Discovery Documents

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.11

§ 15.11 Preparing for Document Production Under Rule 34

[1] Anticipating Production Requests

While reviewing the client's files in preparation of mandatory disclosure requirements under Rule 26(a), it is important to start anticipating the opponent's production requests under Rule 34. At this stage of the process, it is generally sensible to be over-inclusive and to gather all documents and electronically stored information that may be needed throughout the discovery process, as well as throughout the course of litigation.

Rule 34 may be used to request production of documents or electronically stored information that are relevant to claims or defenses and that are in the possession, custody, or control of any party. n1

Unless the parties otherwise agree, or the court otherwise orders: n2

- A party who produces documents for inspection shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the request

- If a request does not specify the form or forms for producing electronically stored information, a responding party must produce the informationin a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable

- A party need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form

Based on the facts in the case, counsel should consider what types of documents may be subject to discovery, and then inquire of the client whether such documents exist, in what form (e.g., hard copy, electronic file, e-mail, etc.) they exist, and what their production would entail.

It is critical to maintain careful records of the documents that have been or will be subject to production. In addition, it is always important to identify, segregate, and record identifying data on documents that are not subject to production on privilege or other grounds.

[2] Obtaining Documents from the Client's Employees and Agents

If the client's employees or agents are in possession of documents needed for discovery, explore whether you will encounter resistance obtaining the documents. If resistance is likely, it may be useful to consult the client on how best to overcome it. Resistance is common when the needed documents are considered "personal" in nature, such as desk calendars, note files, or e-mail messages. Be prepared to explain the need for the intrusion. To the extent possible, counsel should work with the client to minimize disruption, and to promote the good will of people who are mostly unfamiliar with litigation and its demands.

Once all of the individuals in a client corporation or organization who may have relevant documents are identified, develop amemorandum that will be sent to each of them by a senior person within the client, such as its general counsel. An important part of this memorandum should be a request for a response even if the particular individual has no documents that fit the description given. Thus, if at some future point an individual's name arises as a potential source, your records will contain a sign-off indicating that, as of the date of the original request, that person had no documents meeting the description of the request.

[3] Considering Whether Documents Are Protected From Production

When inquiring about and accumulating discovery documents, keep in mind that some documents may be excepted from production based on "undue burden," confidentiality, or privilege. As with all steps in the litigation process, the client needs to know about the risk and reward of taking certain positions in discovery, including the expense of defending that position and the possibility of sanctions. The inadvertent disclosure of protected communications or information does not result in privilege waiver if the disclosing party took reasonable steps to prevent the disclosure and to correct the error after it occurred. n1

[4] Redacting Documents Prior to Production

Since documents in the client's possession, custody, or control may cover a number of topics or contain confidential or privileged material, it may be necessary to produce them in part, by masking or otherwise concealing irrelevant or privileged materials. This procedure is sometimes time-consuming, difficult to implement, and subject to criticism by opposing counsel. However, if there is no alternative, redactions should be performed carefully.

[5] Numbering Documents for Production

Numbering of documents is often the simplest way to identify and organize documents for production. The numbering system serves as a means to keep inventory of produced documents, and the production numbers can be used for purposes of indexing discovery documents. If documents are organized by request, the response to the request can make reference to document numbers, and the documents can be easily referenced and retrieved.

For complete discussion concerning responses to document requests, see Ch. 14, Responding to Document Requests.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryUndue BurdensCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

(n3)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b).

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
B. Managing Discovery Documents

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.12

§ 15.12 Producing Client E-Mails

Individuals often use e-mail as a quick and convenient way to engage in a wide variety of business activities, including discussion and revision of policies and procedures, circulation of draft documents and meeting minutes, distribution of work assignments and schedules, and actual business transaction. While many organizations have enthusiastically embraced the opportunities provided by e-mail, the vast majority overlook the fact that when e-mail messages contain evidence of business decisions, actions, and transactions, they become documents which are subject to the same legal requirements, restrictions, and standards as any record produced in any form or media.

If there are e-mail documents that a party may use to support its claims or defenses, those documents are subject to mandatory disclosure under Rule 26(a). n1 Likewise, if e-mail documents concerning a subject of litigation exist, whether in print, on someone's hard drive or network system, or on backup tapes after the messages have supposedly been deleted, they are subject to discovery and must be produced upon request. n2

Failure to produce documentation in a timely manner can result in severe sanctions. If e-mail documents are not properly organized as business documents, the client may have to face the possibility of financing a search of unmanaged andunclassified electronic data for the purpose of production. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresMandatory DisclosuresCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See In re Brand Name Prescription Drugs Anti-Trust Legislation, 1995 U.S. Dist, LEXIS 8218, *1-2 (N.D. Ill. June 13, 1995).

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

182 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
B. Managing Discovery Documents

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.13

§ 15.13 Reviewing Documents Produced Under Rule 34

[1] Determining Time and Place of Production

The requesting party must specify a reasonable time and place for production of requested documents. n1 Typically, the parties will agree to a means of production that involves either the delivery of copies to the requesting party or reviewing the documents in the office of the opposing party or opposing counsel. As a practical matter, the possibility of review at the document site arises most often where those records have been produced as maintained in the ordinary course of business.

[2] Reviewing Documents On-Site

In the case involving an extensive body of documents that are being produced as maintained in the ordinary course of business, the document review will almost invariably take place in the offices of the opposing party or opposing counsel. Hence, the reviewers may be operating under time constraints and without complete support facilities.

Each of these factors militates against a carefully selective review at this production stage. The risk of error is too great, and the time normally is not available. The appropriate course is to sweep very broadly, saving fine distinctions for a more detailed review in your own offices after selected documents are copied.

In cases involving the exchange of large numbers of documents, the parties may reach an agreement to share the cost of electronically imaging documents selected from production. Additional copies of the CDs may then be made for nominal cost.

For complete discussion concerning document production, see Ch. 13, Production of Documents.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b).

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

183 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
B. Managing Discovery Documents

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.14

§ 15.14 Maintaining Electronically Stored Information in Reasonably Usable Form

Rule 34(b) allows the requesting party to designate the form or forms in which it wants electronically stored information produced. However, the rule does not require that the requesting party choose a form or forms of production. n1

The responding party also is involved in determining the form of production. In the written response to the production request that Rule 34 requires, the responding party must state the form it intends to use for producing electronically stored information if the requesting party does not specify a form or if the responding party objects to a form that the requesting party specifies. Stating the intended form before the production occurs may permit the parties to identify and seek to resolve disputes before the expense and work of the production occurs. n2

If the requesting party is not satisfied with the form stated by the responding party, or if the responding party has objected to the form specified by the requesting party, the parties must meet and confer under Rule 37(a)(2)(B) in an effort to resolve the matter before the requesting party may file a motion to compel. If they cannot agree and the court resolves the dispute, the court is not limited to the forms initially chosen by the requesting party, stated by the responding party, or specified in Rule 34 for situations in which there is no court order or party agreement. n3

If the form of production is not specified by party agreement or court order, the responding party must produce electronically stored information either in a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) Committee Note (2006).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) Committee Note (2006).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b) Committee Note (2006).

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

184 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
B. Managing Discovery Documents

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 15.15 through 15.19

[Reserved]

§§ 15.15 [Reserved]

185 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.20

§ 15.20 Keeping a Control Set of Documents

Regardless of the method of document management, it is critical to maintain a master set of documents. This serves as a control when any document-related problems, questions, or issues subsequently arise. In the early stages of a case, the importance of such a control set may not be readily apparent. However, as documents are handled, redacted, copied, analyzed, used as deposition exhibits, given to experts for analysis, used in witness preparation, or used as attachments to pleadings, the importance of the control set grows.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.21

§ 15.21 Organizing Documents Chronologically

In many cases, it is valuable to establish a chronological set of all documents. Alternatively, a chronological index of documents may be assembled to concisely present the flow of events and of the documents surrounding those events.

Once this is done, your staff can simply review that index rather than spend hours grappling with great volumes of documents. There should be sufficient information in the index to permit selective document requests when needed.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.22

§ 15.22 Indexing Significant Documents

[1] Creating a Computer-Based Index System

Once document review is completed, pertinent documents have to be organized in a meaningful yet flexible manner. The use of computer-based indexing systems in which abstracts of documents can be searched by key word methods, as well as date and author, is a vital tool in controlling documents in a large case. The ability to make multiple indexes for different purposes aids the ability to prepare for each deposition, as well as trial.

The most useful indexing includes:

- The document number (where applicable)
- The date of the document
- The author
- The people to whom it was addressed either directly or by copy
- A brief description of the contents

The indexing process provides subdivisions for the entire body of documents and begins to focus attention on the most important documents. Large document cases often yield remarkable quantities of transactional documentation such as sales receipts and invoices. Unless the case revolves around issues directly linked to these transactions, once the documents are indexed, they may never have to be handled again.

[2] Coding Electronic Documents

When CD imaging of key documents is employed each electronic document may be coded in a variety of ways for indexing. Documents can then be accessed using:

- Full-text searching

- Objective codes (date, author, title or number of document, etc.)
- Subjective codes (issues discussed, good and bad language, etc.)

Documents can then be retrieved in electronic form, according to any coded characteristic or combination of characteristics. If the document has been scanned with a document imaging system with Optical Character Recognition (OCR), a search can be conducted based on key words or phrases. This type of search is likely to resultin the retrieval of many more documents than the coded systems, but full-text searching is critical in large cases where familiarity with large numbers of documents and codes may be impractical.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.23

§ 15.23 Maintaining a "Hot Document" File

It is extremely unlikely that there will be any one document that will be dispositive of a complex case. Rather, there will be a sequence of documents which establish a course of events that is either very helpful or very harmful. These are the types of documents to include in the "hot document" file. Here too, however, the variations in individual perceptions within your staff, and caution on the part of the reviewers, may lead to over-inclusion. Therefore, the contents of this file should be reviewed periodically to eliminate documents whose importance has been supplanted by subsequent discoveries. An "issues memorandum" based on the hot document file can help determine whether the possible proof afforded by the documents is consistent with the evidence discovered from other sources.

The hot document file is also a convenient place for preliminary research and notes about the admissibility and evidentiary issues with regard to the most important documents in the case. That research may then be a basis for motions in limine or the trial notebook. Each time the documents are handled during the discovery process, lawyers and paralegals can insert thoughts about the evidentiary issues, which may continue to change as the case proceeds.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

189 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.24

§ 15.24 Recording Document Use

A complete document index should identify documents produced to different parties, withheld on grounds of irrelevance and/or privilege, partially withheld by redaction, considered extremely sensitive, or covered by protective orders. The index should also identify the various ways in which each document was used, such as deposition exhibits, attachments to pleadings, and attachments to affidavits.

Furthermore, an index that tracks the uses to which opposing counsel puts various documents may provide insight into the opponent's strategy well in advance of the trial. Large document cases tend to boil down to limited document use by the time of trial. Therefore, it may be very important to anticipate your opponent's case by having an adequate document-use inventory.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.25

§ 15.25 Creating Witness Files

The purpose of a witness file is the collection in one place of all of the documents:

- Authored by a particular witness
- Received by a particular witness
- Mentioning a particular witness

The witness file should be a manageable instrument which can be used to prepare witnesses for deposition or trial or to prepare for cross-examination. Therefore, it may be necessary to consider subdividing a large witness file into subject categories, chronological periods, or other meaningful segments. Whatever choices are made for a particular witness file, the best means of organization is to put each segment in chronological order so that the witness may work through the documents in an orderly manner.

A properly prepared document index containing all of the names mentioned in any document can be a useful tool in the assembly of witness files. It may be helpful to prepare a "witness book" by placing the document copies pertaining to a particular witness in a binder. The goal of any indexing system, whether manual or computerized, should be to permit this kind of flexibility.

Obviously, the greatest advantage of the witness files is their use in dealing with witnesses whom you consider bringing to court or to a deposition.

Witness files and preparation for depositions are discussed in Ch. 16, Preparation for Depositions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsDepositions

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

191 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.26

§ 15.26 Creating Subject Matter Files

The use of subject or issue files serves functions quite similar to those of the witness files. Depending on the volume of subject files, it may be desirable to use abstracts or summaries of their contents in lieu of the files. As long as these abstracts or summaries contain adequate reference to the documents, there is no reason not to place full reliance on them. As with witness files, subject files may become too cumbersome to use effectively, if they are not constantly divided and subdivided to outline the issues and sub-issues as they develop during discovery. In most cases, those issues will continue to evolve right up to the eve of trial, long after discovery is complete. The subject files should continue to evolve along with the issues.

Subject files may be extremely valuable in preparing to address issues of proof, educating new members of the trial team, or simply as a refresher. The periodic re-evaluation of those files refines the case and understanding of all its details in a way nothing else can.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.27

§ 15.27 Maintaining Files for Potential Exhibits

If the organizational process has worked according to plan, the documents with the greatest potential as trial or deposition exhibits will become increasingly apparent. Typically, the most important documents for use as exhibits are located in the "hot document" file.

An important consideration in the selection of exhibits is whether they are easily understood or presented. Exhibit files provide an opportunity to evaluate the strength of potential exhibits before they are used for evidentiary purposes.

For a complete discussion on exhibits, see Ch. 34, Exhibits.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

193 of 193 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 15 Management of Documents *
C. Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

2-15 Federal Litigation Guide § 15.28

§ 15.28 CHECKLISTS: Managing Litigation Documents

[1] CHECKLIST: Choosing a Method of Organization

The following checklist highlights some document management considerations:

☐ Consider basic method of organization. The method of organization may include one of the following:

☐ Manual organization. Manual organization and hand-filing of paper documents for manual retrieval.

☐ Automated indexing. Manual organization combined with automated indexing to retrieve paper documents.

☐ CD-ROM imaging. Electronic CD imaging, coding, indexing, and retrieval of electronic documents on CD-ROM.

☐ CD-ROM imaging combined with electronic file sharing. Electronic imaging combined with network-based or web-based access to documents for multiple users or locations.

☐ Factors lending to method of organization. The decision to use a manual system or a high-tech approach will probably be determined by one or more of the following variables:

☐ Technological resources. The information technology resources available.

☐ Budget. The case budget may or may not warrant the use of automated organization.

☐ The specific litigation. Document intensive cases often necessitate some level of automation.

☐ Access needs. The number of individuals in need of document access may require network- or Web-based access for multiple users.

☐ In document-intensive cases, consider using CD imaged documents. The benefits of imaged documents include the following:

☐ Capacity for multiple users. Images can be accessed simultaneously by multiple parties to a lawsuit or by multiple offices.

☐ Time savings. There will be a significant time savings with regard to document handling, searching, retrieving, and distribution of litigation documents.

☐ Protection of original documents. Images cannot be damaged, regardless of how often they are used.

☐ Portability. Images are more portable and easier to access during trial than hard copy documents.

☐ Copy quality. Copies printed from an image will be of original quality.

☐ Copy ease. There is no waiting for documents to be copied or electronically faxed.

☐ Loss reduction. No need to deal with lost or misfiled documents.

☐ Document annotation. Documents can be annotated as needed and even annotations can be electronically searched.

☐ Quick retrieval of documents. When imaged documents are linked to a database or coupled with indexing information, search and retrieval is virtually instantaneous.

[2] CHECKLIST: Maintaining Control of Documents Throughout Litigation

☐ Gathering documents from client. Early in the litigation, discuss with the client the documents that need to be gathered for the case.

☐ Consider whether the client's agents or employees have pertinent documents.

☐ Consider whether electronic documents, such as e-mails, will be subject to disclosure and/or discovery.

☐ Organize documents for discovery. Early in the case, it is critical to begin organizing documents that may be subject to:

☐ Mandatory initial disclosure under Rule 26(a).

☐ Production requests under Rule 34(a).

☐ Keeping a control set of documents. A control set of documents will:

☐ Limit damage to documents.

☐ Reduce the possibility of losing documents.

☐ Maintaining a hot document file. A hot document file should include:

☐ Documents that are helpful to prove the client's position.

☐ Documents that may be damaging to the client's case.

☐ Recording document use. Throughout the course of litigation, it is critical to annotate the document index for each document. Annotations might include:

☐ The significance of the document and how it has been used (investigation, deposition preparation, response to document request, etc.).

☐ Whether the document is helpful to the client's case or harmful to the case.

☐ Whether the document is privileged.

☐ Whether the document is a potential exhibit.

☐ Creating witness files. Witness files for the separate witnesses may include the following documents, amongst others:

☐ Documents authored by the witness.

☐ Documents received by the witness.

☐ Documents that mention the witness.

☐ Creating subject matter files. Subject matter files may be useful in large cases for the following purposes:

☐ To group documents based on discrete issues that need to be proved.

☐ To review the case based on the subject matter of the pertinent issues.

☐ Creating exhibit files. Throughout the litigation, specific key documents can be segregated and filed as potential exhibits:

☐ Exhibit files may include many of the same documents as the hot document file.

☐ Exhibit files provide an opportunity to continually weigh the strength of potential evidence.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersGeneral Overview

* Chapter 15 was rewritten in 2003 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

1 of 179 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide 16.syn

§ 16.syn Synopsis to Chapter 16: Preparation for Depositions *

§ 16.01 Purpose of Depositions
[1] Law Authorizing Depositions
[2] Using Depositions to Evaluate Adversary's Case
[3] Benefits of Taking Depositions
[4] Establishing Strategic and Tactical Goals of Deposition
[5] Establishing Deposition Plan
[6] Evaluating Deposition Objective

§ 16.02 Developing a Successful Deposition
[1] Understanding Theory of the Case
[1.--1] Establishing Underlying Theory
[1.--2] Using Deposition Planning to Develop Theory
[1.--3] Considering Various Sources of Information to Develop Theory
[2] Developing Lists of Issues and Witnesses
[3] Developing Case Chronology
[4] Developing Witness Files
[5] Deciding When To Begin Deposition Preparation
[6] Timing of Depositions

§ 16.03 Identifying Witnesses To Be Deposed
[1] Understanding Basic Guidelines
[2] Using Pleadings to Identify Witnesses
[3] Using Documents to Identify Witnesses
[4] Using Interrogatories to Identify Witnesses
[5] Using Client Interviews to Identify Witnesses
[6] Using Deposition Testimony to Identify Witnesses

§ 16.04 Anticipating an Adverse Party's Deposition Requests
[1] Understanding Importance of Adversary's Deposition Plan
[2] Considering What Depositions Will be Taken by Adversary
[3] Influencing Opposing Counsel's Deposition Choices
[4] Designating a Rule 30(b)(6) Witness

[4.--1] Understanding Rule 30(b)(6)
[4.--2] Choosing Individual Best Suited for Rule 30(b)(6) Deposition
[4.--3] Deciding Whether to Designate Important Witness Under Rule 30(b)(6)
[4.--4] Scope of Deposition Under Rule 30(b)(6)
[5] Anticipating Adverse Counsel's Non-Party Deponents

§ 16.05 Planning To Take Depositions of Adverse Parties
[1] Reviewing Subjects to be Covered in Deposition of Adverse Party Witness
[2] Using Documents to Prepare for Deposition of Adverse Party Witness
[3] Obtaining Admissions from Adverse Parties at Deposition
[4] Preparing Questions for Adverse Party Deposition
[5] Videotaping Adverse Party Depositions

§ 16.06 Planning Depositions of Non-Party Witnesses.
[1] Understanding Importance of Non-Party Testimony
[2] Evaluating the Non-Party Witness
[3] Making Contact with Non-Party Witness
[4] Interviewing Third Party Witnesses
[5] Planning for Depositions of Former Employees
[6] Deciding To Depose Non-Party Witnesses
[7] Preparing the Friendly and Neutral Non-Party Witness for Deposition
[8] Evaluating the Friendly, but Unfavorable, Non-Party Witness
[9] Using Non-Party Witness Statements

§ 16.07 Understanding Privilege and Issues Concerning Representation
[1] Considering Privilege in General
[2] Understanding Attorney-Client Privilege
[3] Representing Current and Former Corporate Employees

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

As the first of three chapters on the subject of depositions, this chapter discusses various techniques for planning an effective deposition strategy and considers some of the issues that arise when preparing to take a deposition. While Chapter 17 focuses on the taking of a deposition and Chapter 18 on the defense of a deposition, this chapter examines more generally the strategy that underlies an effective deposition program and some of the issues that may be confronted when preparing for depositions of various kinds of witnesses.

The chapter addresses the role depositions play in the discovery process. It discusses several tools that can be used to organize depositions to discover information that will maximize the chances for success at trial. By developing and pursuing a deposition strategy that explicitly probes for information supporting the theory of the case, counsel can make depositions a vital component of the discovery program.

The chapter then turns to a discussion of how to most effectively select the deponents to examine and how to anticipate the witnesses an adverse party will depose. By carefully selecting the most appropriate deponents, counsel can obtain deposition testimony on important issues in a cost-effective manner. Then, anticipating the depositions that an adversary will take, counsel can frequently obtain valuable additional time to prepare friendly witnesses for their depositions, communicate with "neutral" non-party witnesses before their views have been prejudiced by biased information learned from adverse counsel, and designate the most effective corporate deponents under Rule 30(b)(6).

The chapter also covers preparation of an adverse party's deposition. The chapter considers the scope of the questions and the role of documents. It also explores how to develop effective lines of questioning to elicit testimony supporting the theory of the case.

Next, the chapter discusses preparing for the deposition of a non-party witness, including how to identify likely non-party deponents and best approach them to secure their cooperation. This chapter offers advice on conducting successful interviews with non-party deponents, paying particular attention to former employees of the parties. In addition, the chapter considers factors to evaluate when determining whether a written statement from the witness may be useful as an alternative to a deposition.

Finally, the chapter explores some of the issues that can arise when taking and defending depositions of current and former employees of a client. It examines the status of the attorney-client privilege between counsel for a corporation and the corporation's employees, and it reviews some of the legal and ethical considerations that may lead to the conclusion that an employee should be represented by separate counsel.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide § 16.01

§ 16.01 Purpose of Depositions

[1] Law Authorizing Depositions

Rule 30(a)(1) states that, "A party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon oral examination without leave of court except as provided in paragraph (2). The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by subpoena as provided in Rule 45."

Deposition practice is the linchpin of litigation. At depositions, facts are learned, theories tested, and witnesses evaluated. In short, the deposition has become a major battlefield where cases can be effectively won or lost. n1

[2] Using Depositions to Evaluate Adversary's Case

The significance of depositions has made them one of litigation's most valuable discovery devices. They provide a meaningful mechanism for discovering what potential witnesses know and what they may say at trial. Depositions also allow attorneys to gauge how well witnesses will perform at trial. Unlike other forms of discovery, the deposition is a dialogue. It is the only discovery method that enables counsel to receive an answer and then frame a new question based on that answer or to inquire into subtleties and nuances; to change the subject and later return to it from a different perspective; and to explore areas that could be damaging if explored at trial.

In addition, depositions give an opportunity to probe the factual allegations in pleadings and the content of documents that have been produced. A deposition commits a deponent to a definite version of the facts, reducing the risk of ad hoc or creative stories by the witness. It preserves testimony and helps prevent faulty memory, changes of heart, or influence of the adversary. It may even lead to early admissions. Vital information for impeachment purposes can be obtained. In view of the important advantages that depositions offer, they should be used to probe all relevant facts, both favorable and unfavorable. n2

[3] Benefits of Taking Depositions

Depositions provide an opportunity for a party to test its theory of the case by asking some of the "tough" questions. This allows counsel the opportunity to alter or adapt the theory after hearing key witnesses' deposition testimony. Deposition testimony also may provide an adequate basis for adding claims or counterclaims. Likewise, a deposition may bring to light weaknesses in a case, which may prompt settlement or withdrawal of a claim. At the very least, it will demonstrate the rigors, inconveniences, and unpleasantries of having unfavorable evidence brought to light. A deposition also provides a good opportunity to show the other side your confidence, diligence, and thoroughness. This also may help prompt settlement. Finally, deposition testimony may provide the evidence necessary to secure a summary judgment.

Clearly, then, the value of depositions as a discovery tool cannot be underestimated, and most lawyers are keenly aware of this value. Yet while pretrial depositions are a dominant feature of modern federal civil litigation, not all counsel engage in the preparation and planning required to obtain the most from depositions. Now more than ever, strategic thinking must form a part of the deposition-planning process. With the presumptive limits on depositions set out in Rule 30, it is no longer safe to assume that the key information will eventually come out in discovery. Counsel must plan not only each deposition, but the entire discovery process.

[4] Establishing Strategic and Tactical Goals of Deposition

Before beginning a deposition, counsel should begin thinking about how the case will be presented at trial. By thinking about trial presentation from the start, the attorney can frame deposition strategy and even the actual question to yield evidence strengthening the case. Certain deposition questions should be asked exactly as they will be asked at trial to ensure that necessary answers are obtained. Others should be asked merely to find out what the witness will say, and deposition questions for witnesses who will be at trial can be phrased in a variety of ways to test the witnesses' veracity and minimize the possibility of changed testimony.

Focusing on trial-presentation issues before depositions begin reduces the risk that deposition testimony favoring the client's case will be overlooked. Unlike pleadings and discovery requests, which can usually be amended and supplemented, depositions yield immediate and finite results. Once closed, a deposition cannot be resumed merely because counsel neglected to develop a line of questioning or failed to question the witness about a document now considered critical.

[5] Establishing Deposition Plan

A useful starting point when planning depositions is the development of various conceptual and organizational tools. Four tools in particular can greatly assist with planning for successful depositions: n3

- The theory of the case.
- The issues and witness lists.
- The case chronology.
- The witness file.

While the use of these tools may seem cumbersome in smaller cases, and unnecessary when merely discovering facts and not presenting them, they help ensure that the trial presentation will be enhanced as much as possible. In addition, as discovery progresses and the quantity of information on each potential trial witness becomes larger, these tools provide an accessible and flexible way of organizing information learned from and about each witness. Whether these or other organizational tools are used, the most important aspect of deposition planning and preparation is the recognition that tools are necessary.

Many courts have established presumptive limits on not only the number of depositions but their duration as well. Similarly, some courts now require estimates of the total number of deposition hours a party will need. n4 These types of limitations make efficient use of deposition time essential.

[6] Evaluating Deposition Objective

To make the most of a deposition's advantages, counsel, as part of the planning process, should carefully define the purpose and objectives of each deposition. Examples of purposes and objectives include:

- To learn or prove essential facts.
- To establish background facts, relationships, and unique perspectives of parties and witnesses.
- To re-create reality through the witness's recollection.
- To block a defense or neutralize an opponent's theory.
- To secure documents and explanations about them.
- To establish damages for settlement purposes.
- To develop a prima facie case.
- To perpetuate testimony of important witnesses who may not be available for trial.

Each is a legitimate goal, and more than one may be pursued in a given deposition. There is no single correct way either to prepare an effective deposition strategy or to take, or defend, a deposition. Indeed, deposition preparation varies a great deal depending upon counsel's style, the personality of the witness, the size and complexity of the case, and cost constraints. Although these factors may result in many different approaches to preparing for depositions, some degree of systematic preparation is warranted in every case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentEvidenceEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. To the extent that the preparation for the defense of a deposition is discussed in this chapter, it is primarily to show how certain organizational tools can help counsel prepare for the deposition of a witness. The preparation of the witness to be deposed and the actual defense of the deposition are discussed in Ch. 18, Defense of Depositions.

(n2)Footnote 2. In a limited number of circumstances unfavorable responses should be avoided. For example, when deposing a witness who will not testify at trial, limiting the deposition to the development of favorable facts prevents negative testimony in a transcript from being used at trial, absent examination by opposing counsel. Similarly, where the witness is a non-party witness, avoiding unfavorable testimony may be beneficial if opposing counsel fails to cross-examine, or cross-examine effectively.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 6.02 for a complete discussion of these tools.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Guzman v. El Paso Natural Gas Co., 51 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1767 (W.D. Tex. 1990) .

* Chapter 16 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide § 16.02

§ 16.02 Developing a Successful Deposition

[1] Understanding Theory of the Case

[1.--1] Establishing Underlying Theory

Ultimately, a theory of the case will be used to persuade the trier of fact that your client's version of the facts is more accurate or believable than the adverse party's; each side will attempt to persuade the trier of fact that the evidence supports its theory of the contested events. Thus, deposition planning generally should begin with an effort to develop a theory of the case to explain the events in the lawsuit. Although the theory often changes and develops as discovery proceeds, its formulation helps ensure that discovery covers all necessary areas and assists in designing a discovery plan that will yield the factual support to make the theory, as adapted, as persuasive as possible.

A theory of the case ideally should be conceived as early as possible in litigation, or even before litigation begins. Unfortunately, the liberal pleading rules allow pleadings to contain minimal detail and conflicting, alternative causes of action. As a result, some lawyers delay thinking about a case theory until the later stages of discovery. Delaying consideration of the theory of the case until after depositions, however, can result in the loss of valuable opportunities to further develop evidence that supports your theory of the case. A better approach is to formulate a theory at the outset of the case and to refine it as the litigation progresses.

[1.--2] Using Deposition Planning to Develop Theory

When taking depositions of both adverse parties and non-parties, counsel should systematically ask questions of all key witnesses to elicit testimony that supports the theory. At the same time, carefully framed questions may yield answers that reveal facts undermining that theory. By learning about potentially negative facts early in the litigation, counsel can refine the theory of the case to reduce the possibility of surprise at trial. It is, of course, entirely possible that the deposition process will reveal that the initial theory of the case is simply untenable. Under such circumstances, it may be necessary either to refine the initial theory or to reject it and formulate a new one.

Deposition planning thus helps the trial attorney develop a theory of the case in several ways:

- It forces counsel to think about and develop the theory at an early stage.
- It requires counsel to consider what proof will be required to put forth that theory.

- It forces counsel to develop a list of deponents and the preferred order for taking their depositions.

In addition to helping counsel develop facts bearing on the theory of the case, depositions allow counsel to learn about and undermine the adverse party's theory of the case. By anticipating an adverse party's theory of the case, counsel can probe for facts that may undermine it and better prepare witnesses for their own depositions. In short, development of a theory of the case requires thinking about the big picture early in the litigation and mapping out how to get where you need to go to win at trial.

[1.--3] Considering Various Sources of Information to Develop Theory

To develop a theory of the case, counsel should consider a number of sources.

First, conduct a careful review of the pleadings, interrogatory responses, and documents served or produced by the parties in the action. Although there is seldom a single allegation or document that leads to one indisputable theory of the case, these sources are the bedrock that support the possible theories that explain the factual issues in the case.

Second, in the early stages of litigation, the client may be a source for possible theories of the case. Even though clients may not always appreciate the issues that are legally relevant in a lawsuit, they often develop a theory that explains the basis of the dispute.

Third, it also is essential to hear each known witness's version of the facts, compare that version with other witnesses' recollections and the written records, and determine whether possible theories are plausible in light of this information.

Either before or after an initial theory of the case is developed, themes can be created for presenting that theory. Basic trial advocacy requires development of a theme that sets forth a basic moral foundation of persuasion as to why one side should win.

[2] Developing Lists of Issues and Witnesses

Once initial themes and theories of the case are developed, it is useful to develop a list of issues raised by these tools. The issues list addresses what legal and factual proofs and support will be necessary to prove the theory of the case. Along with the issues list, the witness list should be put together early. Together, these lists allow serious discovery planning to go forward.

The issues and witness lists consist of the relevant legal and factual issues in the litigation and the people who may testify concerning each issue. The issues list develops in tandem with the effort to develop a theory of the case and assists in the organization of the deposition process. The issues list helps with development of the theory of the case by identifying the legal and factual requirements the theory of the case must meet. Creation of an issues list aids the deposition process by identifying testimony necessary to prove these issues at trial. Once the relevant issues have been identified and paired with the witnesses who can provide testimony on them, planning for the actual depositions can begin.

There are numerous ways to identify issues that are likely to arise and that must be proven at trial. For example, drafting a proposed set of jury instructions can provide counsel with a detailed road map of the elements of the claims that will be asserted at trial. Similarly, if the case is to be tried to a judge, drafting a set of conclusions of law and even a set of proposed findings of fact will lay out the elements of the causes of action asserted and the facts that may support them.

When preparing an issues list, counsel need not know the names of potential witnesses. Generally, it is important only to determine at the early stage the role a person played. For instance, in a case where it is relevant to learn the events at a factory at a particular time, the names of the employees are not necessary to appreciate that they may know what happened. Simply knowing the actual or likely job title is enough. Similarly, where it is relevant to know how a document was prepared, the document custodian or secretary probably can provide such information, even though that person's name is unknown.

With presumptive limits on the number and length of depositions becoming commonplace, the issues list allows for a more strategic approach. It allows the witness list to be prioritized and forces attorneys to think through exactly what they hope to learn from each witness.

[3] Developing Case Chronology

One of the simplest and most useful ways to organize the facts in a case is by the creation of a chronology. Organizing the key events in a case in chronological order helps to develop a better sense of how those events took place and perhaps even why they took place. Sometimes, the relationship among the events in a case takes on a greater clarity when organized chronologically.

A case chronology is an especially useful tool for preparing depositions. Because witnesses frequently recall events without reference to the order in which they occurred, a detailed chronology can clarify what might otherwise be disjointed testimony. Once key facts have been elicited from a witness, the deposing attorney can then use the chronology to reorganize that testimony in a series of clear, concise questions.

A case chronology should not be limited to a diagram. In addition to developing a written chronology, all of the documents should be put in chronological order, if time and expense allow. In fact, creating a chronological document set should precede the creation of a case chronology, to ensure that all important events are accounted for. Once this chronological set has been reviewed, an overall chronology can be drafted, with supporting documents identified. The client or its employees can then be interviewed for additional details. As new facts come to light, the chronology can be updated.

[4] Developing Witness Files

Witness files are usually thought of as accompanying trial preparation. Individual witness files for trial generally include all of the relevant material on each witness, including background information about the witness, the documents about which the witness may testify or from which the witness may be impeached, and testimony of other witnesses about him.

But a witness file need not await pretrial. In many cases, witness files can aid greatly in deposition preparation. Thus, witness files for probable deponents should be created as early as possible in the litigation so that all relevant materials for the witness can be gathered in one place for easy retrieval. Of course, cost is a factor in deciding whether to create witness files early on. If a case has several hundred thousand production documents, creating witness files for all potential witnesses is inefficient.

The contents of a witness file are often incorrectly limited to a collection of those documents authored or received by the witness. Original documents should be supplemented with documents that concern the subject matter about which the witness will be questioned. Once the probable subject matter of a witness's testimony is identified, witness files can be updated to include these documents.

Although witness file creation and maintenance can be labor intensive and expensive, new technologies have helped to reduce both the time and cost of this important effort. Some of the new software products designed to assist with litigation can significantly reduce the costs of maintaining witness files. For example, documents can now be copied onto computers using imaging software. These documents can then be searched by field or word and then reviewed or printed as necessary. Rather than spending enormous paralegal effort pulling documents and putting them in chronological order, this software allows the user to conduct a search and then either read or print the documents in whatever order desired.

[5] Deciding When To Begin Deposition Preparation

Deposition planning should not be restricted to a specific period of time during a lawsuit. In fact, effective deposition planning continues from the beginning of a case until discovery ends. Thus, planning for the prosecution or defense of depositions should begin with the first meeting with potential witnesses.

Similarly, notes from pre-litigation meetings with an adverse party should be preserved for possible use during depositions. When planning or preparing for depositions, trial counsel often find key information in earlier depositions in the same case. Counsel should always be alert for information that can be used in a deposition.

[6] Timing of Depositions

Generally, a deposition should be taken only after sufficient written and document discovery to make the deposition as useful as possible. Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, no deposition can occur until after the Rule 26(f) conference has been held, absent court order or the parties' consent. As a practical matter, this puts depositions off until after initial mandatory disclosure is provided, and in complex cases, probably until after at least one round of discovery requests has been served and answered.

Except where counsel believes one or two early depositions could lead to early settlement, the wisest course of action is to wait before taking depositions. Generally, depositions should not be taken until after documents have been produced and individuals with relevant information identified. Unless circumstances require otherwise, i.e., because the parties dispute a need to produce documents, depositions should always await a review of documents produced. Knowledge of the relevant documents is essential for framing probing questions. Further, documents can be used to refresh a witness's recollection or to keep a witness from straying too far from the written record. A deposition is the ideal place to establish the admissibility of documents. By using documents with deposition witnesses, counsel can dispense with pretrial objections and ensure that the documents can be used at trial.

Exceptions to this general flow of events occur when, for example, a party seeks a preliminary injunction. Similarly, early depositions may occur where necessary to develop facts to support a Rule 12 motion to dismiss.

In addition, other strategic circumstances might prompt counsel to take depositions before other discovery. For example, taking a deposition before the witness's counsel has developed a more sophisticated knowledge of the case may help ensure that the witness's testimony is as uncoached as possible. Also, if important non-party witnesses are about to leave the court's jurisdiction or otherwise become unavailable, their deposition should be taken without the benefit of other discovery rather than risk losing the opportunity to depose them.

A further exception to the rule of waiting to take depositions may arise where the adverse party's case depends to a large extent on the testimony of a particular witness. Deposing that witness shortly after the lawsuit commences could enable better, early evaluation of the case. Lastly, it may be appropriate to take limited deposition testimony before other discovery if the parties agree that the depositions will help in evaluating settlement possibilities. In such circumstances, the scope of these depositions can be curtailed by agreement to those issues that will promote settlement.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsEvidenceTestimonyRefreshing RecollectionGeneral Overview

* Chapter 16 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide § 16.03

§ 16.03 Identifying Witnesses To Be Deposed

[1] Understanding Basic Guidelines

Under the Federal Rules, counsel may depose "any person" without leave of court, subject to certain limitations. n1 The Federal Rules require careful selection of deponents to avoid wasting time and money on useless depositions. n2 Rule 30 provides that a party must obtain leave of court if, without the written stipulation of the parties, a proposed deposition would result in more than 10 deposition being taken under Rule 30 or Rule 31 by the plaintiffs, or by the defendants, or by the third-party defendants. n3

In addition, the Federal Rules also presumptively limit each deponent to one deposition. n4 Unless otherwise authorized by the court or stipulated by the parties, a deposition is limited to one day of seven hours. n4.1

Furthermore, Rule 26(b)(2) provides that:

[t]he frequency or extent of use of the discovery methods ... shall be limited by the court if it determines that: (i) the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; (ii) the party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought; or (iii) the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues.

Thus, a party or witness may be entitled to an order preventing the other party from taking a person's deposition a second time. n5

Although the Federal Rules allow broad inquiry, local rules limiting the length of depositions may effectively curtail the breadth permitted by the Federal Rules. n6 Rule 30(a)(2) allows the presumptive limit on the number of depositions to be waived if the court finds in fairness that additional depositions are necessary for full discovery.

Under Rule 30(b)(6), included in the "any person" definition are depositions of corporations, partnerships, associations, government agencies, and other entities. Rule 30(b)(6) presents a very useful tool, especially in complex litigation, for obtaining relevant information with a minimum number of depositions. Because the presumptive limits are based on the number of depositions, not witnesses, Rule 30(b)(6) has taken on even greater significance.

After an attorney prepares the issues and witness lists and identifies the individuals who may be able to provide relevant information on the various issues in the case, it is relatively easy to identify the witnesses who should be deposed and those whom adverse parties will probably depose. Nonetheless, the selection of deponents should be made after careful consideration, because depositions are an expensive and time-consuming process. Moreover, the significant restrictions that now exist on the number and/or duration of depositions require that deposition discovery be targeted, planned, and focused.

[2] Using Pleadings to Identify Witnesses

The identification of potential deponents usually begins with a review of the pleadings, although their usefulness varies from case to case. In simple cases, many of the needed deponents may be identified in the pleadings. For instance, if the complaint in a slander case indicates who made and who heard the slanderous remarks, it may provide the identity of all of the necessary liability deponents.

In most cases, and especially in complex litigation, the pleadings probably are devoid of the type of factual detail necessary to compile deposition witness lists. With the advent of mandatory disclosure, however, the information provided under Rule 26(a) will identify most or all witnesses, with discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment. Further identification or refinement of the potential deposition witness list will then require a review of the documents ultimately produced and consideration of persons identified during other depositions.

[3] Using Documents to Identify Witnesses

Before the advent of mandatory disclosure, interrogatory answers and documents furnished by a client or produced by adverse parties were the principal sources of the identity of possible deposition witnesses. Now, the mandatory disclosure statement is likely to be that source. Nonetheless, in the course of reviewing documents, the identity and relationship of the critical participants in the disputed events may become clear. Thus, documents will provide a means for narrowing the list of potential deponents from that provided in the initial mandatory disclosure. Careful review of documents also will enable counsel to determine potential witnesses based upon subjects that must be probed. Additional facts about these subjects may be discovered either by identifying an individual or pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6).

In litigation involving corporate entities, corporate organization charts can provide a quick means for identifying persons by subject. These charts will allow refinement of the deposition list based on responsibilities that coincide with areas that require investigation. Wherever possible, then, organizational charts should be obtained early in discovery. Ideally, requests should be made for all corporate organizational charts covering the time period affecting the events raised in the suit. In this manner, counsel can identify relevant witnesses based on their corporate responsibilities at the appropriate time. Past corporate organization charts also will allow identification of witnesses no longer employed by the parties, but whose former jobs make their testimony relevant and desirable.

[4] Using Interrogatories to Identify Witnesses

The identification of witnesses has long been recognized as one of the primary types of information that can be obtained by the use of interrogatories. However, given mandatory disclosure, the usual interrogatories asking for the identity of persons most knowledgeable could become largely obsolete. Rule 26(a)(1)(A) requires the disclosure, without request, of the name and known addresses and telephone numbers of all individuals likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment. As a result, parties should not have to use their now-limited number of interrogatories to obtain this basic information. Moreover, since Rule 26(e) requires supplementation of the initial disclosure, a party need not use an interrogatory to obtain the names of later-discovered witnesses.

The use of interrogatories to identify witnesses should not be completely abandoned. A well-drafted interrogatory may serve to narrow or focus the list of names provided in mandatory disclosure. By asking an adverse party to identify witnesses concerning specific issues in the lawsuit, counsel can reduce the possibility that an important witness on a key issue will not be identified and deposed.

Typically, an adverse party is best able to identify its own employees or agents who may have played a role in the disputed events. Thus, an interrogatory seeking to identify witnesses "most knowledgeable" about an issue (as opposed to the requirement of Rule 26(a)(1)(A) requirement to identify persons "likely to have discoverable information") can still be quite useful.

Using an interrogatory also increases a party's options when forced to resort to court intervention. If an adverse party fails to identify an important witness in response to an appropriate interrogatory that seeks such information, the court will probably permit a deposition of the witness after he is identified, even though discovery is otherwise complete. Under Rule 37(a), the court can compel such a deposition upon motion by a party.

Amended Rule 37(c)(1) states that a party that "fails to disclose information required by Rule 26(a) or 26(e)(1) shall not, unless such failure is harmless, be permitted to use as evidence at trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness or information not so disclosed" (emphasis added). Thus, failure to disclose an important witness in a mandatory disclosure jurisdiction requires the exclusion of that witness's testimony.

[5] Using Client Interviews to Identify Witnesses

The client or client's employees may help identify people who can provide testimony on the disputed issues. Because clients are usually closer to the events in a lawsuit, they may know the identity of people who can give relevant testimony, but whose names do not appear on any of the relevant documents. For instance, a client may know that a secretary heard a discussion at a key meeting, even though the secretary is not identified in any of the documents describing the meeting.

Moreover, employees are likely to be aware of third-party contacts for which no documentation exists, or whose documents will have to be subpoenaed. In cases in which the client has had an ongoing relationship with the adverse party, the client can be an especially good source for the names of adverse witnesses. In addition to providing the names of relevant witnesses, the client may know much about each person's background and personality. Such background information may help with the preparation of deposition questions and anticipation of how the witness may react to questioning. In those situations where it appears that several potential witnesses may provide necessary but overlapping testimony, a knowledgeable client may provide information that will help in making the determination about which witness is likely to be the most useful or in what order the depositions should be taken.

The client or its employees are also often a great source for determining which of the party's own witnesses are best able to testify about certain matters. This information, if obtained early, allows counsel to meet with potential witnesses to decide who will be the best witness on a given topic.

[6] Using Deposition Testimony to Identify Witnesses

One of the best times to learn about witnesses with relevant information is during the depositions themselves. In responding to deposition questions, a witness frequently will reveal the name or identity of a person who may become an additional deponent. Whenever the witness discusses a meeting or telephone conversation, the witness should be asked to identify all the participants. Similarly, when the witness testifies about a document, he should be asked to identify the person who wrote or compiled it, with whom the witness discussed it, and to whom it was sent. Only by asking these questions can counsel be certain that relevant witnesses and related documents will be identified. n7

In addition, every deposition should routinely include questions asking who else might have knowledge of events in the case and whether there are any other documents relating to the issues. Such questions should always be asked as follow-up questions when a witness cannot fully answer because of lack of knowledge or memory. In this way, depositions help prevent surprise witnesses and documents from turning up at trial.

Even though witnesses are identified through mandatory disclosures, the identification of important witnesses should also be probed through deposition questions in case all relevant witnesses were not identified in the disclosures.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(i).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(ii) states, in part, that a party must obtain leave of court if, without written stipulation of the parties, "the deponent already has been deposed in the case."

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Graebner v. James River Corp., 127 F.R.D. 532 (N.D. Cal. 1989) (deposing party did not raise any questions about completeness of first deposition).

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., N.D. Okla. Civ. R. 30.1(G) ("No deposition shall extend beyond six hours in length, beyond 5:00 p.m., or be taken on a weekend or holiday without [consent of the parties].")

(n8)Footnote 7. See Marino v. Otis Eng'g Corp., 839 F.2d 1404, 1414 (10th Cir. 1988) . See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(2).

* Chapter 16 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide § 16.04

§ 16.04 Anticipating an Adverse Party's Deposition Requests

[1] Understanding Importance of Adversary's Deposition Plan

Discovery planning should include identification of witnesses that an adverse party may depose. There are significant benefits in successfully anticipating an adversary's deposition plans. Such benefits include:

- Early warnings to likely witnesses to avoid discussing the case except with counsel.
- An opportunity to select the best Rule 30(b)(6) witnesses.
- More complete preparation when the individuals are deposed.

Moreover, it allows trial preparation to begin at an earlier stage by focusing on defensive aspects of the case as well as the offensive ones.

[2] Considering What Depositions Will be Taken by Adversary

By anticipating a deposition long before the notice of examination arrives, counsel can ensure that there is adequate time to prepare the witness. In a highly technical case it may be necessary to begin a witness's preparation sessions substantially in advance of the deposition to ensure that there is ample time to understand the witness's testimony before the deposition. Similarly, if a witness's likely testimony will pose significant attorney-client privilege concerns, early preparation will leave sufficient time to file a motion for a protective order, if necessary, or to warn opposing counsel in advance. This can help avoid unnecessary cost and confrontation by allowing these issues to be debated and either settled or decided before the deposition begins.

Anticipating adverse depositions also helps when an important witness presents special problems. For example, an especially hostile or timid witness will probably require multiple meetings to prepare fully for the deposition. By preparing a difficult witness over the course of several sessions, the attorney may afford the witness the opportunity to practice and comprehend essential deposition skills. The witness will then be in a better position to offer clear, accurate testimony. Finally, becoming familiar with both the witness and the testimony allows counsel better control over the deposition once it begins.

[3] Influencing Opposing Counsel's Deposition Choices

Another potential advantage of anticipating depositions is the possibility of influencing adverse counsel's deposition choices. Although opportunities to influence an adverse party's choice of deposition witnesses are usually limited, they do exist. For example, it is not uncommon for adverse counsel to notice the depositions of the persons who verified the complaint (if the complaint was verified), assisted in thepreparation of answers to interrogatories, or are identified as persons most knowledgeable about a topic. Each instance presents an opportunity to steer the opposition toward preferred witnesses.

First, those who sign pleadings can be kept consistent. If pleadings are signed by persons other than counsel, there is little need to have different persons certifying the accuracy of alleged facts in a complaint or interrogatory answer, since the signatory need only attest that she has read the document and believes after reasonable inquiry it is accurate. n1

Similarly, careful selection of those listed in an interrogatory answer as most knowledgeable about a topic can minimize the number of persons exposed to depositions. n2 While it is poor practice to fail to name truly knowledgeable people (and presently a violation of Rule 26(a)(1), among others), it is often possible to designate or identify in an interrogatory response one person as knowledgeable on a variety of related issues. Careful selection of individuals in response to interrogatories or Rule 30(b)(6) motions can result in influencing opposing counsel's deponent selection.

If a proposed deponent's name appears on numerous relevant documents, only with mutual trust and respect among counsel is it still possible to influence the selection of deposition witnesses. If opposing counsel, for example, asks to depose a witness whose name appears as a "cc" on numerous documents, but the person has little or no information about the issues in the lawsuit, a wasteful deposition can be avoided by discussion among counsel, explaining the situation, and offering the names of more suitable witnesses. This approach should not be used to wrongly convince opposing counsel that a key witness has no information. Thus, if there is even a possibility that the person may be a witness at trial, this approach cannot apply. The purpose is to avoid unnecessary expense, not to mislead the opponent.

An opportunity for influencing the order of depositions can arise when an adverse party wants to depose numerous witnesses represented by the same counsel. Under these circumstances, that counsel may be given the opportunity to propose the order in which the depositions will be taken. For example, if counsel for a large corporate defendant agrees to bring witnesses from around the country to be deposed at the corporation's headquarters, adverse counsel may be willing to allow the corporation's counsel to determine the dates for each deposition or the sequence in which they will be taken. In short, influence by opposing counsel over such matters is the price a party may be willing to pay to ensure cooperation.

A number of courts have held that depositions of senior corporate managers and officers can justifiably be delayed until after lower level employees are deposed. The rule recognizes that senior management is rarely the most knowledgeable about the details of a case. Rather, their testimony can often be redundant. n3 Further, some courts hold that the busy schedules of senior personnel should be recognized. n4 These courts conclude that depositions of these busy people should occur only if the relevant facts cannot be obtained from lower level employees. n5

Scheduling favorable depositions, including those of key witnesses, earlier in a case may have advantages. For example, it may promote settlement prospects. On the other hand, if a key witness's testimony is potentially damaging, waiting until later in the discovery process could promote settlement as well.

[4] Designating a Rule 30(b)(6) Witness

[4.--1] Understanding Rule 30(b)(6)

Under Rule 30(b)(6), a party may notice the deposition of "a public or private corporation, partnership, an association or a governmental agency," rather than name a person as a deponent. When a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice is served, the Rule states that the named organization "shall designate one or more officers, directors, or managing agents, or other persons who consent to testify on its behalf." The Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice must "describe with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested." Thus, the focus of a Rule 30(b)(6) notice is not a particular person but the subjects identified in the notice.

In response to a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice, the deponent organization may choose someone from within the organization or even someone outside it to testify on its behalf. However, the designated Rule 30(b)(6) witness must be able to "testify as to matters known or reasonably available to the organization." n6

When a corporation produces an employee witness pursuant to a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice, the corporation represents that the employee has the authority to speak on behalf of the corporation with respect to those areas on which testimony was requested. n7 The witness's authority to speak on the corporation's behalf extends to matters of both fact and opinion. n8 Moreover, a witness designated to answer questions at a deposition under Rule 30(b)(6) must be prepared to testify for the entire organization, not merely for a certain unit or department. n9

[4.--2] Choosing Individual Best Suited for Rule 30(b)(6) Deposition

If no one person can testify as to all of the matters contained in the deposition notice, the party must provide more than one person or must educate one person about the organization's knowledge about the particular subject.

Thus, even if only one individual actually knows the facts relating to the identified subject, Rule 30(b)(6) does not command that this witness testify. Rather, the Rule permits a party to present the witness it chooses so long as the witness is fully educated about the factual information sought by the party issuing the notice. Moreover, Rule 30(b)(6) allows a party to select a different Rule 30(b)(6) witness for each topic on which Rule 30(b)(6) testimony is sought. And the witness need not be an employee. As a result, it is always possible for the noticed party to choose the Rule 30(b)(6) witness.

Before the designation is made, Rule 30(b)(6) witnesses should be interviewed and evaluated. When interviewing possible 30(b)(6) witnesses, counsel should discuss their roles in the events of the lawsuit, as well as relevant documents. For Rule 30(b)(6) witnesses in particular, it is essential to evaluate the witness's knowledge and credibility.

[4.--3] Deciding Whether to Designate Important Witness Under Rule 30(b)(6)

One issue that often arises when designating Rule 30(b)(6) witnesses concerns whether to designate "important" witnesses. Some lawyers prefer not to designate an important trial witness as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness because they do not want that witness to assume any additional obligations. By preventing an important witness from being designated as the organization's Rule 30(b)(6) witness, these lawyers apparently believe that the witness will be spared a more extensive cross-examination at trial. When the organization from which a Rule 30(b)(6) witness is sought is outside the court's subpoena power, some lawyers even try to select as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness someone who cannot be compelled to appear at trial. This gesture reflects a misunderstanding of the Federal Rules and of Rule 30(b)(6) testimony as well.

Under Rule 32(a)(3), testimony taken pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6) can be used by an adverse party at trial "for any purpose." Thus, using a Rule 30(b)(6) witness who will be beyond the court's subpoena power for trial merely limits the testimony to that obtained in the deposition. It does not avoid the introduction of that testimony at trial. On the other hand, selecting an important witness as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness can have the salutary effect of minimizing the number of witnesses that will be called for deposition. Further, it minimizes the probability of inconsistencies. Thus, there may be strong reasons for either decision.

[4.--4] Scope of Deposition Under Rule 30(b)(6)

Generally, a deposition under Rule 30(b)(6) must be confined to matters stated with "reasonable particularity" in the notice of deposition or subpoena. If the examiner goes beyond these matters, the deponent's attorney may be able to instruct the witness not to answer the questions. While the Rules generally permit broad inquiry, consistent questioning clearly beyond the scope of a Rule 30(b)(6) notice's categories is not generally tolerated. If this happens, courts will often sustain objections and will consider motions for sanctions or for terminating the deposition. n10

Often the genesis of confrontation in Rule 30(b)(6) depositions is the deposition notice. Far too often, Rule 30(b)(6) notices put forth broad categories that transcend corporate responsibilities. But confrontation can be avoided either by a subsequent definition or breakdown of the information sought, or by more narrowly drafting categories in the first instance. If neither of these actions is taken, the party preparing the Rule 30(b)(6) witness is left to flounder.

[5] Anticipating Adverse Counsel's Non-Party Deponents

Anticipating non-party witnesses that an adverse party may notice for deposition can be especially productive. Because non-party witnesses are often disinterested in the outcome of a litigation, they are sometimes surprisingly willing to meet with either side to discuss the case, even if they are not willing to testify for either side. Thus, it is often easier to anticipate and prepare for non-party testimony. Of course, this fact works against both sides equally. Moreover, the ethical constraints that prevent communication with an adverse party witness do not usually apply to non-parties. n11

In rare cases, early identification of a non-party witness that adverse counsel is likely to call may allow for earlier meetings during which a rapport can develop. If this happens before the witness is contacted by opposing counsel, the impact of the non-party witness's testimony might be significantly and legitimately blunted. Further, meeting with the non-party witness before he has met with the other side allows for a more candid conversation. The witness will not have been prejudiced by any information learned from adverse counsel. Even though meeting the witness first may not always result in a better interview or rapport, the possibility that it will is usually worth the effort.

Care must be exercised when meeting ex-employees of the opposing party. As discussed, infra, ethical rules in many states prohibit such meetings if the ex-employee has knowledge relevant to the case. Moreover, the ex-employee probably hasrestrictions on what can be disclosed based on continuing confidentiality agreements.

Assuming contact is permissible, however, by anticipating who these witnesses may be, and meeting with them, counsel can exert indirect influence over opposing counsel's deposition planning and scheduling. Moreover, it will demonstrate that you are one step ahead of the opponent.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyEvidenceTestimonyGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Generally, counsel can correctly object to use of the term "most knowledgeable," since the opposing party's identification of categories will rarely correspond to any one individual's corporate responsibilities. As a result, counsel can usually, in good faith, exercise some discretion in selecting knowledgeable individuals.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Wertheim Schroder & Co. v. Avon Prods., No. 91 Civ. 2287, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79 (Jan. 9, 1995 S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Armstrong Cork Co. v. Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., 16 F.R.D. 389 (S.D.N.Y. 1954) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Salter v. Upjohn Co., 593 F.2d 649, 651 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6).

(n7)Footnote 7. Cates v. LTV Aerospace Corp., 480 F.2d 620, 623 (5th Cir. 1973) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lapenna v. Upjohn Co., 110 F.R.D. 15 (E.D. Pa. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 9. In FDIC v. Butcher, 116 F.R.D. 196 (E.D. Tenn. 1986) , defendants' attorneys were advised during the initial depositions that the witnesses spoke only for the FDIC's investigative unit and that defendants would have to ask others if they wanted information known to FDIC employees outside the unit. The court granted defendants' motion to compel the FDIC to designate witnesses who would be fully knowledgeable about matters known or reasonably available to the FDIC in keeping with the very purpose of the rule.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Paparelli v. Prudential Ins. Co., 108 F.R.D. 727 (D. Mass. 1985) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Compare Model Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 4.3 (a lawyer is only restricted in dealing with an unrepresented person to the extent that he cannot represent that he is disinterested) with Rule 4.2 ("[A] lawyer shall not communicate about the subject of the representation with a party the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized by law to do so").

* Chapter 16 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide § 16.05

§ 16.05 Planning To Take Depositions of Adverse Parties

[1] Reviewing Subjects to be Covered in Deposition of Adverse Party Witness

Preparation for the deposition of an adverse-party witness should begin with a review of the subjects that must be covered in the deposition. Much of this information will come from a careful review of the issues and witness lists and the witness files.

A witness should be interrogated about each item on counsel's issues and witness lists where her name appears. This will ensure she is questioned about her recollection on as many of the important issues about which she can testify. As discussed earlier, a deposition witness also should be questioned about the relevant documents in her witness file.

Since it is forbidden to communicate with an adverse party witness in advance, counsel must resort to other sources, such as client interviews and documents to learn about the anticipated subject matter of adverse witnesses' testimony.

[2] Using Documents to Prepare for Deposition of Adverse Party Witness

The documents in the witness file for an adverse witness often provide the best basis for planning and structuring the deposition. Even when the documentary record is not complete, it can be a reliable source for questions about the matters that are recorded; it will be, as well, a starting point for learning about undocumented events.

The complexity and bulk of the documents in the witness file may help determine whether the deposition questioning should proceed chronologically or by subject. If the documents are confined to a single issue, this may suggest that a simple chronological organization for the examination will be best. If the documents concern many issues over various time periods, it may be best to organize the questioning by subject matter. Even where this is done, however, consideration should be given to whether each subject matter should be approached chronologically or in some other fashion.

When documents are central to a case, which is the case in most commercial or complex litigation, systematically reviewing each important document with a knowledgeable witness can greatly improve the amount of discovery obtained and the usable evidence elicited. Documents can be used profitably in a deposition in a number of ways, including:

- Questioning a witness about the preparation and content of numerous documents to help prod the witness's memory and improve the witness's overall recall.

- Using documents to keep in line witnesses who might be tempted to stray too far from the written record.

- Questioning a deposition witness about documents to discover what is behind that which appears on the face of the record.

Documents used at depositions should not be limited to those produced in response to discovery requests. Public sources of information about a deponent, such as newspapers, journals, public filings, databases, and previous legal actions (including depositions) all can contain useful information about either the deponent or the case. If the witness was quoted about the case or the issues in the case, a deposition may be the perfect venue for confronting him with his earlier statements.

While documents are clearly a means to obtain fruitful discovery during a deposition, overuse or over-reliance on documents can cause problems. First, deponents may be inclined to merely agree with what is said in the documents, and may be well-prepared by counsel for dealing with difficult documents. Further, many deponents will correctly refuse to look behind what is in a document. Thus, a deponent's recollection of important facts should first be probed without documents. A second problem with over-reliance on documents is time. Lawyers are under increasing pressure from clients and courts to be more efficient during depositions. There usually is not enough time to go over every relevant document with every witness. As a result, the development of good deposition taking skills has taken on greater importance than ever before. Lastly, over-reliance on documents makes the questioner lazy and can lead to significant gaps in the development of the factual record. Not everything is in the documents.

[3] Obtaining Admissions from Adverse Parties at Deposition

Another consideration in the planning process is whether to try to obtain admissions from an adverse witness that may support a theory of the case. Even if an adverse witness is not likely to give favorable testimony on the issues that are central to the theory of the case, the deponent's predictable testimony on some ancillary aspects of the theory may be useful.

For instance, in an employment discrimination suit, even though the documents may state that the plaintiff was terminated for insubordination to a supervisor, plaintiff's counsel may be able to elicit testimony that the supervisor was aware of senior management's desire to replace the plaintiff with a lower-grade employee at the time of the alleged insubordination. This type of admission can be quite useful. Although the fact may not even be in dispute, obtaining testimony on it will help minimize the likelihood that a change in testimony will occur later. Similarly, in a products liability case, a witness who testifies to the plaintiff's recklessness in using machines may also testify that the plaintiff appeared to be careful on the day she was injured. As these examples illustrate, some portions of an adverse witness's testimony may support a theory of the case even if the general thrust of the witness's testimony is adverse. Moreover, as with requests for admission, adverse witness testimony about essentialundisputed facts can be used to narrow the disputed issues at trial, thus saving costs and time.

[4] Preparing Questions for Adverse Party Deposition

Generally, it is best to choose a means of preparing deposition questions that allows for flexibility as well as thoroughness. In any deposition, the questioning technique must be flexible enough to permit the pursuit of unexpected topics that may emerge from the witness's testimony. It is extremely important to listen to the witness's complete answer before asking the next question. If a particular answer leads to a new and unexpected area, it should be pursued, regardless of any outlines or preset questions. After the tangent has been exhausted, the outline can be returned to, and the planned course resumed. Reference to an outline or list of subjects to be covered is important, however, to avoid omitting a line of questioning that may be interrupted.

Most experienced trial and deposition lawyers use few notes and rarely prepare specific questions. There is, however, at least one exception. If it is known in advance that deposition testimony will be used at trial, more careful planning of questions is necessary. In this instance, questions should be asked exactly as they would be at trial, to maximize their effect and ensure admissibility. Aside from this exception, experienced counsel prefer to prepare an outline of the topics they intend to cover at the deposition.

When preparing a deposition outline, the appropriate degree of detail may vary depending on the nature of the questions, the witness's role in the case, the purpose of the deposition (discovery versus use at trial), and the time and resources available to prepare.

The expected use of a deposition is an essential consideration in preparing for deposition questioning. While deposition questions that seek inadmissible responses still must be answered, if counsel intends to use the deposition testimony at trial, the information must be elicited in a manner that allows for admissibility under the Federal Rules of Evidence. When it is clear in advance that a deposition, rather than live testimony, will be used at trial, deposition questions must be choreographed, almost to the same extent as trial testimony. This may not be the case for a pure discovery deposition. Where a deposition is noticed solely to learn more about the witness, or to discover information that counsel hopes will lead to admissible evidence in later discovery, prepared questions can be cumbersome.

Despite the potential dangers of a verbatim script, some deposition examiners prepare verbatim questions as a framework for their questioning. These examiners use the prepared questions as a starting point, but allow themselves to detour into unexpected branches as they arise. Used in such a flexible manner, carefully prepared questions allow the examiner to draw out all of the anticipated testimony, but still have the freedom to explore unexpected opportunities for questioning the witness.

[5] Videotaping Adverse Party Depositions

Videotaping depositions has become much more commonplace. n1 Videotaping captures not only the witness's words, but demeanor as well. But videotaping also captures counsel's actions and demeanor. As a result, videotaped depositions require special consideration.

The degree of preparation necessary for taking videotaped depositions is similar to that for trial. Because the trier of fact will see the interrogation as it actually took place, counsel's performance must be more like trial than a typical deposition. Long pauses and verbal stumbling that mark some depositions must be avoided. For that reason, reliance on prepared questions is not unusual. Videotaped depositions, like trial, must be carefully planned while not appearing so to the trier of fact.

Generally, a videotaped deposition should be used as an evidentiary deposition, and not a discovery deposition. A discovery deposition, which by its nature focuses on learning new facts, can often yield unwanted testimony. The videotape can be used at trial, and the witness thus appears as if she were live. As a result, videotaped depositions should be reserved for situations where the witness's testimony will aid the taking party's cause. If there is any doubt whether the deposition will help your case, videotaping may be a risky proposition.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureTrialsDepositionsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & Transcripts

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. This is due largely to the fact that leave of court or stipulation of the parties is no longer a prerequisite to a videotaped deposition. Rule 30(b)(3)(A) provides that the party taking the deposition must state in the notice the method by which the testimony will be recorded. Unless the court orders otherwise, it may be recorded by sound, sound-and-visual, or stenographic means, and the party taking the deposition must bear the cost of the recording. Any party may arrange to transcribe a deposition recorded by any means.

* Chapter 16 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide § 16.06

§ 16.06 Planning Depositions of Non-Party Witnesses.

[1] Understanding Importance of Non-Party Testimony

Non-party testimony may be critical to the outcome of a case. The trier of fact may weigh non-party testimony more heavily in the belief that, because the witness has no stake in the outcome of the litigation, his or her testimony is more reliable. By this reasoning, for example, a passerby who happens to witness a car accident will have no motive to give testimony that favors a particular party.

In some cases, non-parties may actually be better witnesses; a non-party is often not directly involved in the occurrence that gave rise to the litigation and, therefore, may have had a better opportunity to perceive the disputed events.

[2] Evaluating the Non-Party Witness

When confronted with the need for non-party testimony, the first task is to determine whether the potential non-party witness is adverse, neutral, or friendly. In some cases, the witness's attitudes may be known or may be easily discerned from available documents.

After a thorough review of the documentary record, consideration should be given to what information can be obtained from the third party. Once the situation has been evaluated, a meeting with the potential non-party witness should be arranged, if possible. Ethical rules do not prohibit contacting an unrepresented non-party witness, but may impose restrictions where the witness is a former employee of the adverse party.

The opportunity to speak directly to a non-party witness usually provides the best chance to determine how the witness will testify. In many cases, a non-party witness will provide information in an interview that is quite different from what was expected. A witness that the client believed was in the adverse camp can sometimes be favorable. Just as often, a non-party witness that the client considered friendly may actually be cooperating with an adverse party. In either event, interviewing the non-party witness before noticing a deposition allows for a reasoned assessment of the costs and benefits of the proposed deposition.

[3] Making Contact with Non-Party Witness

When contacting a non-party witness, it is best to be as clear as possible about your role as counsel in the litigation. Identify explicitly who the parties are. Explain that the witness may be able to provide information that is important to the fair resolution of the dispute and express your appreciation for the witness's cooperation.

Although some lawyers prefer a letter, it is almost always better to make the first contact with the witness by telephone. A telephone call is more personable and usually more difficult for the witness to ignore. Even when the non-party refuses to meet, it reveals something. Therefore, making an approach to a third party is almost always useful. When a third party is uncooperative, the unwillingness to cooperate may reveal that the third party does not want to become involved in the dispute because it does business with both of the parties. The third party also may have already met with adverse counsel or been instructed not to cooperate by his current employer. Learning that opposing counsel already contacted this non-party witness may also yield insights into his theory of the case, or how he plans to pursue critical information. In short, something can always be learned by attempting to contact relevant third party witnesses.

Many third parties are willing to cooperate, but do not wish to be perceived as taking sides. As a result, it may be necessary to use a "friendly subpoena" so the third party can use the subpoena to indicate it had no choice in the matter.

[4] Interviewing Third Party Witnesses

Assuming that a non-party witness is willing to meet, several steps can be taken to ensure a successful interview. It is generally advisable to ask the potential witness whether he or she has a preference concerning the location of the meeting. The formality of an office setting may inhibit a relaxed conversation with the witness. Thus, interviewing the witness on neutral ground may be advantageous. Going outside the office also eliminates the possibility of interruptions and office distractions.

Although all of the elements of a witness's story--both favorable and unfavorable--must be learned in order to make an intelligent decision about whether to depose a third party, posing questions in a way that stresses a positive version of the events will protect against problematic later disclosures and may help any deposition testimony eventually given. In no event should the interviewer comment about litigation strategy, opposing counsel, the adverse party, or the court in a way that would be embarrassing if repeated by the witness. Since meetings with a non-party witness are subject to discovery, they can be extremely damaging if handled incorrectly.

Although it is wholly proper to remind a non-party witness of favorable facts during an interview, the witness should be encouraged to disclose all relevant facts. If the witness's recollection of unfavorable facts weakens your client's cause, learning them in an interview allows a considered judgment about whether to go forward with a deposition or to name the person as a trial witness.

In an interview with a non-party witness, all relevant areas of inquiry must be addressed. Use documents that refresh the witness's recollection, as well as documents to inform the witness of certain helpful facts. In addition, determine whether the witness has any documents that may bear on the issues that are being discussed. If the contents of any documents in the witness's possession are harmful, discuss them with the witness to determine if they can be explained in a favorable way.

At the conclusion of the interview, be sure to address several important points. Ask to be informed if the witness is approached by opposing counsel. Although some witnesses are so determined to remain neutral that they will decline to make such a commitment to either side, many potential witnesses will readily agree to this request. Also request that the witness follow up with additional information that subsequently comes to mind about the issues that were discussed.

If the witness is likely to be called at trial, she should be told to anticipate a deposition notice or other contact from opposing counsel before trial.When issuing a subpoena for a third party witness, be sure to include all necessary witness and travel fees. Without the accompanying fees, the subpoena is not effective. n1

Rule 26(e) requires supplementation of the information provided under Rule 26(a) or in response to a discovery request

if ordered by the court, "if the party learns that in some material respect the information disclosed is incomplete or incorrect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known ... during the discovery process." Thus, it appears that if a third party witness with material information relevant to a disputed fact alleged with particularity in the pleadings was not identified in the original mandatory disclosure statement, the witness's name must be disclosed after the interview reveals that they have knowledge of relevant facts.

No longer can counsel ignore relevant, damaging third party information in the hope opposing counsel will not find it, as some have in the past. As a result, analysis of the potential for uncovering harmful information from third parties must occur early, before the interview is scheduled.

[5] Planning for Depositions of Former Employees

Former employees, both friendly and adverse, deserve special attention. Because their employment experiences have likely triggered emotional responses, a special set of problems is posed by such witnesses. In addition, contacting former employees of adverse parties raises complex ethical questions.

The first thing to learn about a former employee is their attitude toward the former employer. If the witness is a former employee of your client, this should be relatively simple because your client should be able to provide information about the circumstances of the employee's departure. In some cases, current employees of the client may still be in contact with their former colleague. Learning the former employee's disposition probably will not affect the decision to contact them. It will, however, dictate how you approach the person. In all instances, it is generally advisable to approach former employees through people they knew while working for your client. This raises their comfort level and your success level.

Interviewing Former Employees of Adverse Party

If the witness is a former employee of an adverse party, sources of information are usually more limited, but the client may still be helpful. If the litigation arises from a continuing relationship between your client and the adverse party, the client's employees may know why the witness is no longer employed. It is imperative to try and obtain at least some information about why the person left. One efficient way of learning about departed adverse employees is through depositions of current adverse employees. In addition, by requesting the ex-employee's personnel file, the history of employment can be reviewed for clues about why the individual left.

While ethical restrictions surrounding the contact of former employees have been relaxed in several jurisdictions, n2 some states continue to impose constraints. n3 These states tend to express a continuing concern that former employees may possess privileged information, and a willingness to grant protective orders on their behalf. n4

A special opportunity may be presented when the potential witness is a disgruntled former employee of the adverse party. If the witness played a significant role in the events underlying the lawsuit, there is much to gain by attempting to obtain discovery. The witness may be able to testify credibly in a manner that contradicts the accounts given by those people still employed by the adverse party. While special effort should be made to interview such witnesses where it is permissible under local ethics rules, special care should be taken to avoid the ethical quagmire that this situation raises. If there is reason to believe that the former employee is disgruntled, the safest way to proceed is to notice a deposition.

Finally, if the former employee is truly hostile, even if she has relevant information, counsel must weigh the costs and benefits of trying to make contact. It may be best to do without the witness's testimony rather than lose control of the case or drive the witness into opposing counsel's open arms.

Interviewing Friendly Former Employees

Interviewing a former employee of your client who did not leave on good terms also requires special consideration. If the former employee is not predisposed to help his former employer, or has been approached by the adverse party, the interview can be described to the witness as a means of defending your client against its opponent. Often the lawyer must play the role of understanding intermediary, trying to get the witness to put aside personal issues for the benefit of the company as a whole.

If, on the other hand, the witness is disposed toward helping your client and thus can be expected to testify favorably, a different approach is required. Where the former employee has maintained ties with the client's organization, a current employee may be a useful intermediary. By injecting a known personality into the process, at least at the introductory stage, the former employee is more likely to trust counsel more and be more cooperative. The alternative, unilateral, unannounced contact by counsel runs a distant second to this practice.

Interviewing Former Employees of Adverse Party

Interviewing Friendly Former Employees

[6] Deciding To Depose Non-Party Witnesses

As a general rule, there is no need to take the deposition of a favorable non-party witness. Instead, present that witness at trial. If the witness refuses to appear at trial, however, and is not subject to a trial subpoena, a deposition may be the only available means for presenting the favorable evidence at trial. Under those circumstances, take the witness's deposition to preserve the testimony, and consider videotaping the deposition.

Even if the witness will appear or can be subpoenaed for trial, a favorable non-party witness probably will be deposed by opposing counsel shortly after he is identified in response to discovery supplementation or a request to identify trial witnesses. There are also occasions when a favorable witness's testimony should be preserved as a precautionary measure. For example, if the trial is scheduled some time in the future and the witness may not be available at that time, a deposition can ensure that the testimony will be available at trial even if the witness is not. Under these circumstances, if the witness is credible and presentable, the deposition should be videotaped for the judge and jury to watch as though it were live testimony. Once preserved, the testimony is readily subject to change. Although this will not compel the witness to give testimony at trial, it ensures that the testimony will be available for refreshing recollection should the need arise. In extreme situations where a favorable non-party witness changes his story, the preserved testimony can be used for impeachment. Finally, the testimony may be helpful in settlement discussions.

The decision to depose an unfavorable non-party witness will depend on several factors. First, if there will be no time to depose the witness after revelation of trial witnesses, there is significant risk in not taking the deposition. This risk can be avoided through early interrogatories asking for identification of all expected trial witnesses. Although this type of interrogatory meets objection early on, as the time nears for the close of discovery, its value increases significantly.

Where there is no opportunity to learn the identities of potential trial witnesses, however, there may be little choice but to take the deposition of an adverse non-party witness. By definition, the witness's testimony has the potential to do harm. Thus, understanding the witness's testimony is essential to the development of the theory of the case, and to presentation at trial. Not taking the adverse witness's deposition could result in surprise when the witness shows up as a witness for the other side at trial. Although noticing this deposition may disclose the identity of a harmful witness to an opponent, counsel must make a value judgment under these circumstances about whether opposing counsel is likely to know about this witness.

[7] Preparing the Friendly and Neutral Non-Party Witness for Deposition

Shortly before taking the deposition of a friendly non-party witness, if possible, review the witness's direct testimony with him so that it will be presented clearly and concisely. A friendly non-party deposition is an opportunity to obtain "unbiased" direct testimony, and should therefore be treated similarly to direct trial testimony and prepared for in somewhat similar fashion. After going over the witness's direct testimony, the witness must be prepared for cross-examination. In the preparation session, remind the witness again that she should testify according to her truthful recollection. Review the general scope of the questions you will ask, together with all of the documents you will use as exhibits at the deposition, and caution the witness not to take notes of the preparation session and not to bring anything to the deposition.

Be particularly cautious in showing the witness memoranda, summaries, or other trial material prepared by or for counsel. These materials are not always protected from discovery if used in preparation for a deposition. Some protection is provided by Rule 26(b)(3), which provides that "a party may obtain discovery of documents and tangible things otherwise discoverable ... and prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or by or for that other party's representative (including the other party's attorney) ... only upon a showing" of substantial need and undo hardship if discovery is denied. n5This is not an absolute rule, however.

Fed. R. Evid. 612 provides that if a witness uses a writing to refresh her memory, either while testifying or before testifying, the adverse party is entitled to have the writing produced for its inspection at the hearing if the court in its discretion determines it is necessary in the interest of justice. Some courts have held that showing attorney work product to a witness waives the conditional privilege for trial preparation materials and, where applicable, the attorney-client privilege. n6 Other cases have rejected the argument that all documents used in preparing a witness are discoverable under Fed. R. Evid. 612. n7 Some cases have employed a balancing test evaluating the totality of the circumstances. n8

While Fed. R. Evid. 612 applies only to writings, not to oral preparation, statements made to non-party witnesses are difficult to cloak in attorney-client privilege. A court is not likely to sustain a claim of privilege for documents shown to a non-party witness. Nonetheless, a claim of work product might be sustainable for oral statements to non-party witnesses.

Generally excepted from these rules of forced disclosure of work product are the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, and legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation ("opinion work product"). These materials and statements are subject to more stringent protection, if not outright immunity. n9 However, there is rarely, if ever, a need to convey such mental impressions to a third party, and there is generally even less need to make the disclosure in preparation for a deposition.

Preparation for a deposition is a proper subject of inquiry by adverse counsel. Thus, any witness, but especially non-party witnesses, should understand that meetings with counsel are completely proper and should be readily and truthfully acknowledged.

In some cases, the non-party witness will have his own lawyer present for the deposition preparation and during the deposition. The presence of the witness's lawyer has both pluses and minuses. One advantage is to cloak the preparation under the attorney-client privilege. For example, the friendly witness's lawyer can, under the right circumstances, protest privilege by discussing the areas for deposition questioning with you in advance and then reviewing them with the witness. In this manner, the adverse party's ability to determine what was said when the witness was prepared for the deposition probably will be limited by the attorney-client privilege.

Of course, the desirability of allowing another lawyer to prepare a witness for the deposition turns largely on the relationship between counsel. If the witness's lawyer is cooperative and competent, this method may work. However, if a friendly non-party witness does not intend to use another lawyer, pushing that approach can lead to unintended results in the witness's testimony.

[8] Evaluating the Friendly, but Unfavorable, Non-Party Witness

Sometimes a friendly non-party witness will only be able to give damaging testimony. Do not take this witness's deposition. However, counsel should learn about the potentially damaging testimony. When evaluating this unfavorable testimony, it is important to learn any facts that might make the witness's testimony less damaging. The development of such facts will provide a basis for cross-examination in the event an adverse party deposes the witness or calls the witness at trial. A complete understanding of the potentially harmful testimony improves the prospect of locating and developing testimony to limit the significance of this witness's negative testimony. The friendly nature of the witness allows delving into the details and nuances to locate inconsistencies or weak points. But counsel must exercise caution in learning this witness's probable testimony. If the witness concludes his testimony will be discredited, he may be less inclined to continue cooperating.

The adverse party's deposition plans will usually determine how important this type of witness's adverse testimony may become. It is thus especially important that the friendly non-party witness be asked to advise counsel of any contacts with the adverse party. In the event the adverse party chooses to take this witness's deposition and the witness will not be available at trial, cross-examination should be used to ask questions that will mitigate the effect of the negative testimony. Under these circumstances, the deposition transcript will probably be read at trial. Thus, the deposition will be the trial testimony.

[9] Using Non-Party Witness Statements

After meeting with a non-party witness, consider whether to prepare a witness statement. Witness statements are used more frequently in smaller, non-business disputes. In such cases, they are a convenient way to record events where a lawsuit is likely. Witness statements are rarely used in complex civil litigation. In a complex case, it is difficult to prepare a written summary that the witness will agree to sign because there may be too many facts to cover. Further, a sophisticated witness in a commercial case is likely to appreciate the perils involved in summarizing testimony in a formal written statement. Moreover, such witnesses are generally represented by counsel, who are likely to caution against providing a witness statement. Thus, in a complex case a witness statement loses much of its attraction as a relatively inexpensive discovery device.

Despite the difficulties inherent in the use of a witness statement, there are circumstances in which witness statements can be useful in preparing complex civil cases. n10 These include:

- If a non-party witness is especially weak and may be easily swayed, it may be useful to reduce the witness's favorable testimony to writing at a time when the witness will provide it.

- If a non-party witness has supplied facts that are contrary to the witness's own interests and will be less helpful if later coached by adverse counsel, the favorable version should be recorded in a signed statement.

- If a non-party's witness's story is adverse but is likely to get much worse under the guidance of adverse counsel, it may be useful to commit the story to writing.

The concern in each of these situations is the likelihood that the witness's story will change under pressure from adverse counsel or in recognition of the witness's self-interest or other partisan interests.

On the other hand, witness statements are counterproductive where the witness is friendly, where the witness has already testified under oath about the issues in dispute, or where there is little likelihood that opposing counsel will have access to or carry weight with the witness.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyEvidenceDocumentary EvidenceWritingsTranscripts & TranslationsDeposition TranscriptsEvidenceTestimonyRefreshing RecollectionGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyRefreshing RecollectionRefreshing Before TestimonyEvidenceTestimonyRefreshing RecollectionRefreshing During Testimony

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B)(iii).

(n2)Footnote 2. In 1991, the American Bar Association issued Formal Opinion 91-359 which stated that Rule 4.2 of the Model Rules of Professional Conduct does not prohibit ex parte contact with former employees of an adverse corporate party. Several states have adopted this interpretation. See Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. Nakano Warehouse & Transp. Corp., 6 Cal. App. 4th 1256 (1992) ; Neil S. Sullivan Assoc., Ltd. v. Medco Containment Services, Inc., 257 N.J. Super. 155, 607 A.2d 1386 (1992) ; Charleston Area Medical Center v. Herb, 190 W. Va 186, 437 S.E.2d 759 (1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Monsanto Co. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 593 A.2d 1013 (Del. 1990) (court held that prior to interviewing former employees of a corporate-defendant, the interviewing attorney must 1) determine that the former employee is not represented by an attorney, 2) identify himself as an attorney for the adverse party in pending litigation involving the former employer, and 3) state the purpose of the communication).

(n4)Footnote 4. In Bobele v. Superior Ct. of Los Angeles Cty., 199 Cal. App. 3d 708, 715 (1988) , the court held that while an attorney can interview a former employee of a corporate defendant without the presence or consent of corporate counsel, he must nonetheless inform opposing counsel who may wish to seek a protective order on the former employee's behalf. The court indicated that such an order would be granted in a case where the former employee was privy to privileged information.

(n5)Footnote 5. This "work product" doctrine codifies the rule of Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 67 S. Ct. 385, 91 L. Ed. 451 (1947) . Since Hickman, the scope of the work product doctrine has been defined in numerous court decisions.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Boring v. Keller, 97 F.R.D. 404 (D. Colo. 1983) ; James Julian, Inc. v. Raytheon Co., 93 F.R.D. 138 (D. Del. 1982) ; Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. v. Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., 81 F.R.D. 8 (N.D. Ill. 1978) ; Prucha v. M&N Modern Hydraulic Press Co., 76 F.R.D. 207 (W.D. Wis. 1977) ; Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 74 F.R.D. 613 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) ; Bailey v. Meister Brau, Inc., 57 F.R.D. 11 (N.D. Ill. 1972) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Bogosian v. Gulf Oil Corp., 738 F.2d 587 (3d Cir. 1984) ; Sporck v. Peil, 759 F.2d 312 (3d Cir. 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Barrer v. Women's Nat'l Bank, 96 F.R.D. 202 (D.D.C. 1982) . A deponent had used his own handwritten memorandum to refresh his recollection. He had prepared the memorandum for his attorney, setting forth the events relevant to the litigation. Following the deposition, opposing counsel moved for production of the entire memorandum under Fed. R. Evid. 612. The court found the memorandum clearly fell within the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine, but that use of the memorandum to refresh the deponent's recollection constituted a waiver of those protections. However, the court balanced the competing interest by ordering an in camera comparison of the deposition transcript and the memorandum. If any discrepancies were found, disclosure would be ordered.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n10)Footnote 10. Witness statements prepared as part of your trial preparation are entitled to work product protection. Thus, to obtain such a statement an adverse party will have to show that the qualified work product protection should yield to the practical difficulty of obtaining such information. Of course, if you expect to call a witness who gave such a statement at trial, the witness's statement will be discoverable for purposes of the adverse party's cross-examination. See State of Colorado v. Schmidt-Tiago Constr. Co., 108 F.R.D. 731, 735 (D. Colo. 1985) .

* Chapter 16 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 16 Preparation for Depositions *

2-16 Federal Litigation Guide § 16.07

§ 16.07 Understanding Privilege and Issues Concerning Representation

[1] Considering Privilege in General

Deposition preparation requires counsel to be aware of issues relating to attorney-client privilege. This awareness should be heightened when preparing for the deposition of a corporate employee. n1

In addition to privilege issues, representation of a corporate employee can raise joint representation questions. In many instances, counsel must consider whether it is appropriate to represent both the corporation and the employee. Although a full discussion of these questions is beyond the scope of this chapter, these issues can influence deposition planning.

[2] Understanding Attorney-Client Privilege

The Supreme Court's decision in Upjohn Co. v. United States n2 left little question that corporations may assert an attorney-client privilege to protect communications made by corporate employees for the purpose of securing legal advice for the corporation. n3 Since Upjohn, it is generally recognized that the attorney-client privilege will protect communications between counsel for the corporation and most employees.

Upjohn has been applied to protect "orientation sessions" where counsel meets with current and former employees of a corporate client before their depositions. In In re Coordinated Pretrial Proceedings in Petroleum Products Antitrust Litigation, n4the court, relying on Upjohn, rejected plaintiffs' claims that they were prejudiced by defense counsel's representation of both the employees and the corporation. Although plaintiffs argued that the corporation's counsel's discussions with these employees would have been discoverable had the witnesses been separately represented, the court held that Upjohn protects the conversations between employees and corporate counsel. In concluding that "orientation sessions" between corporate counsel and the corporation's current and former employees are protected, the court agreed that the possibility that counsel may use information provided at these sessions when advising the corporation was a significant factor. Moreover, the court held that the protection applies to the discussion whether or not counsel actually represents the witnesses at the deposition. n5 Despite these cases, caution and jurisdiction-specific research should be undertaken to thwart an attempt by an adversary to discover conversations with a potential deponent who is an employee of the corporate client. Under the Federal Rules, attorney-client privilege is governed by state law in diversity cases and federal law in other matters. n6 Therefore, the likelihood of differences is great. It is imperative that counsel become familiar with the rules of the locality relating to privilege before beginning deposition preparation.

[3] Representing Current and Former Corporate Employees

In addition to privilege issues, corporate representation requires consideration of whether a current or former employee of the corporate client should be represented by different counsel. The Model Rules of Professional Conduct provide some guidance about when counsel representing a corporation may conclude that an employee witness requires separate counsel. Model Rule 1.13, entitled "Organization as Client," provides in pertinent part:

(a) A lawyer employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents. ...

* * *

(d) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, a lawyer shall explain the identity of the client when it is apparent that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the constituents with whom the lawyer is dealing.

When a conflict develops between the interests of the corporation and any of its directors, officers, employees, or shareholders, both must be advised of the conflict. Further, it may be appropriate for the directors, officers, employees, or shareholders to retain independent representation. Most versions of this Rule place the burden on corporate counsel to advise officers, directors, and other employees of the potential for conflict and the need for independent counsel.

Further, Rule 1.13 is expressly made subject to Rule 1.7, which sets forth a general ethical rule on conflict of interest between clients. Under Rule 1.7, counsel may represent clients with adverse interests if counsel reasonably believes that the representation of one will not affect the relationship with the other and if both clients consent to counsel's continued representation of both. The thorniest issue here is whether the individual defendant is provided with sufficient information to allow for truly informed consent. This should include a discussion about where the parties' interests might diverge, the potential need for separate counsel if divergence occurs, and the possibility that claims or defenses may be waived if not pursued at that time.

Under the Model Rules, it is thus appropriate for counsel for a corporation to act also as counsel for an individual employee so long as the interests of the corporation and the employee are not adverse. Nonetheless, if there is a possibility that the corporate client and employee will develop adverse interests, counsel should promptly consider whether the employee should retain separate counsel.

Because it is possible that an employee deponent who is not a party may assume that counsel for the corporation is protecting the employee's independent legal interests, lawyers have a professional duty not to abuse the employee's confidence. If the employee thinks she is being represented, counsel must insure that the employee understands that only the corporation is represented and that she will need separate representation if she has individual interests to protect.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewEvidencePrivilegesAttorney-Client PrivilegeGeneral OverviewEvidencePrivilegesAttorney-Client PrivilegeScopeEvidencePrivilegesAttorney-Client PrivilegeWaiverLegal EthicsClient RelationsConfidentiality of InformationLegal EthicsClient RelationsConflicts of Interest

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In Consolidated Litigation Concerning Int'l Harvester's Disposition of Wisconsin Steel, 666 F. Supp. 1148 (N.D. Ill. 1987) , the court held that where International Harvester executives revealed confidential attorney-client communications during depositions without objection from defense counsel, there was a waiver of the attorney-client privilege as to all such communications on the same subject.

(n2)Footnote 2. Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 101 S. Ct. 677, 66 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1981) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Prior to Upjohn, courts did not uniformly recognize a corporate attorney-client privilege. See, e.g., Radiant Burners, Inc. v. American Gas Ass'n, 207 F. Supp. 771, 773 (N.D. Ill. 1962) (attorney-client privilege may be claimed only by a natural person), rev'd, 320 F.2d 314, 322 (7th Cir. 1963) (the privilege may be claimed by any client without regard to its corporate or non-corporate character), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 929, 84 S. Ct. 330, 11 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1963) .

(n4)Footnote 4. In re Coordinated Pretrial Proceedings in Petroleum Products Antitrust Litigation, 658 F.2d 1355 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. After Upjohn, it is clear that a corporation's attorney-client privilege includes communications with even low and mid-level managerial employees, regardless of their power to "bind" the company. Upjohn thereby rejected the "control-group" test, which defined a "party" to include only the most senior management personnel exercising substantial control over the corporation.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Quenneville v. Delmark Co., 708 F.2d 727 (6th Cir. 1982) ; Fed. R. Evid. 501 (providing that state law regarding privileges will apply in actions in which state law supplies the rule of decision of a claim or defense--namely, diversity cases).

* Chapter 16 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

10 of 179 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 17 Taking Depositions *

2-17 Federal Litigation Guide 17.syn

§ 17.syn Synopsis to Chapter 17: Taking Depositions *

§ 17.01 Understanding Use of Depositions
[1] General Purpose of Depositions
[2] Importance of Depositions
[3] Procedural Requirements for Deposition Practice

§ 17.02 Permissible Scope of Deposition
[1] Seeking Information Relevant to Claims or Defenses
[2] Using Objections and Protective Orders to Limit Scope of Deposition

§ 17.03 Timing and Location of Depositions
[1] Considering General Importance of Time and Place of Deposition
[2] Timing of Depositions Under Federal Rules
[3] Taking Depositions After Written Requests for Discovery
[4] Considering Location of Deposition
[4.--1] Cooperating with Witnesses
[4.--2] Understanding Subpoena Power for Non-Parties
[4.--3] Considering Where to Depose Corporate Employees
[4.--4] Strategizing Place of Deposition
[4.--5] Considering Effect of Location on Witness.

§ 17.04 Evaluating Basic Principles of All Depositions
[1] Understanding Importance of Deposition Transcript
[1.--1] Determining Method of Recordation
[1.--2] Developing a Clear Record
[1.--3] Going "Off the Record"
[1.--4] Concluding the Deposition
[2] Determining Who May Attend Deposition
[3] Using Professional Demeanor in Deposition Practice
[4] Positioning the Participants at Deposition
[5] Evaluating Special Considerations for Videotaped Depositions
[6] Seeking Protective Orders
[7] Entering Into Deposition Stipulations

[8] Understanding Opening Statements at Deposition
[9] Considering Form of Questions

§ 17.05 Taking the Deposition of an Adverse Witness
[1] Understanding Purpose of Deposition of Adverse Witness
[1.--1] Evaluating Adversary's Case
[1.--2] Limiting Scope of Adversary's Testimony
[1.--3] Asking Leading Questions
[1.--4] Using Outline to Organize Deposition
[2] Understanding Methods of Questioning Adverse Party
[2.--1] Determining Bases of Questioning
[2.--2] Questioning About Background
[2.--3] Determining Sequence of Questioning
[2.--4] Exhausting the Witness's Knowledge
[2.--5] Dealing with Vague, Evasive or Ambiguous Answers
[2.--6] Handling Interruptions

§ 17.06 Considering Special Issues Under Rule 30(b)(6) Depositions
[1] Using Rule 30(b)(6) Deposition Notices
[2] Considering Advantages of Noticing a Deposition Under Rule 30(b)(6)
[3] Considering Disadvantages of Noticing a Deposition Under Rule 30(b)(6)
[4] Using Rule 30(b)(6) Deposition for Non-Party Witnesses

§ 17.07 Understanding Objections
[1] Objecting to Form of Question
[2] Objecting on Basis Other Than Form
[3] Dealing With Objections

§ 17.08 Dealing with Documentary Exhibits
[1] Identifying Documents
[2] Using Documents Effectively at Deposition

§ 17.09 Taking the Deposition of a Non-Party Witness
[1] Determining When to Take Non-Party Deposition
[2] Deposing the Cooperative Non-Party Witness
[3] Deposing the Non-Party Witness Expected to Testify For an Adverse Party
[4] Deposing the Neutral Non-Party Witness
[5] Deposing the Adverse Expert

§ 17.10. Deposing One's Own Witness
[1] Deposing Witness Due to Unvaliability for Trial
[2] Deposing Witness for Purpose of Motion Practice

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 17 Taking Depositions *

2-17 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter concerns the taking of a deposition under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The chapter first reviews the Rules that govern the scope of discovery at a deposition. It then discusses when a deposition should be scheduled during the discovery process to achieve optimal results and considers the Rules that govern where a deposition may be taken. Although the location of the deposition is a routine determination in many cases, if the parties or witnesses are not all in the same location, it can become a more complex decision.

Certain practical and procedural concerns that should be addressed prior to the start of a deposition are then discussed. Among these are issues concerning the deposition transcript and court reporter, preliminary statements and stipulations, protective orders, and videotape recording.

The chapter then focuses on the deposition of an adverse witness. It considers the purposes for the deposition of an adverse witness and discusses various questioning techniques that can help ensure that the examiner learns what the adverse witness knows, and does not know, about the factual issues in the lawsuit.

Following the discussion of depositions of adverse witnesses, the chapter reviews some of the common objections and the use of documentary exhibits.

The chapter then turns to non-party depositions and depositions of the examiner's own witness. Non-party depositions vary greatly depending upon both the extent of the witness's knowledge and the purpose of the deposition. Depositions of the examiner's own witness are relatively uncommon because lawyers try to save their own witnesses for trial. When such depositions are taken, it is often to preserve favorable testimony that may be unavailable at trial. For each of these types of deposition, the chapter highlights some of the examiner's more important concerns.

For expanded coverage of depositions, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 30, Depositions Upon Oral Examination (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 17 Taking Depositions *

2-17 Federal Litigation Guide § 17.01

§ 17.01 Understanding Use of Depositions

[1] General Purpose of Depositions

A deposition is a record of testimony taken outside the courtroom that has been certified in conformity with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure so that a court may regard it as equivalent to testimony delivered inside the courtroom under oath. n1 The purpose of a deposition is to find out what the witness saw, heard, and knows, or what the witness thinks, through a question and answer conversation between the deposing lawyer and the witness. n2 Unlike interrogatories or requests for admission, which may not be addressed to nonparties, depositions of nonparties are permitted as of right. n3 Nonparties may also be required to produce documents through a deposition by service of a subpoena duces tecum pursuant to Rule 45.

Although the deposition is defined in terms of constituting sworn testimony equivalent to that given in open court, depositions are used most often for gathering information and supporting pretrial motion practice rather than for use at trial or as a substitute for testimony at trial, although these are also important functions of the deposition. The chief use of depositions at trial is for cross-examining witnesses and attempting to impeach their trial testimony to the extent it differs from testimony previously given at a deposition.

[2] Importance of Depositions

Depositions are used for a wide variety of litigation purposes including not only basic discovery but also preservation of information and establishment of facts crucial to settlement or rulings on pretrial motions. Even with the presumptive limit of 10 depositions per side, n4 depositions are a major pretrial litigation event and often comprise the most significant or costly pretrial segment of a case. The occasionally heated atmosphere surrounding depositions can also serve to make them a source of discovery motions, sanctions or other judicial intervention to assure that the deposition accomplishes valid purposes and no others.

Despite the importance of depositions, "there is not a lot of caselaw" regarding lawyer conduct and other aspects of the proceedings. n5 This relative lack of authoritative precedent stems from the normally nondispositive nature of depositions. Because deposition rulings seldom determine case outcome, district courts seldom write lengthy (or any) opinions for publication and appellate courts are even less inclined to write at length on deposition matters. In addition, trial courts supervising discovery are generally accorded broad discretion. As a result, good deposition practice is in many ways a matter of common sense and professionalism more than an exercise in legal doctrine or rule. Important rules and principles set the parameters for deposition practice but within those parameters the success or failure of deposition endeavors often hinges on counsel's ability to adapt broad deposition principles to a particular situation and to convince the trial judge or magistrate judge of the reasonableness of the deposition behavior in question.

[3] Procedural Requirements for Deposition Practice

Depositions on oral examination are governed by Rule 30. n6 Depositions generally may be taken without leave of court, n7 but Rule 30 lists certain situations in which leave of court is required to take a deposition. n8 Rule 30 also contains specific procedures fornoticing depositions, n9 compelling the attendance of witnesses, n10 the production of documents at depositions, n11 and the recording of deposition testimony. n12

A deposition must be conducted before an officer. n13 This requirement simply means that the deposition must be taken before someone "authorized to administer oaths either by federal law or by the law in the place of the examination." n14 Either an official court reporter or a private court reporter who is a notary public normally qualifies as an officer for purposes of conducting a deposition as this person can administer an oath or affirmation, swear the witness, transcribe the proceedings, and attest to the deposition.

With certain exceptions, examination and cross-examination of the witness proceeds in the same manner as at trial. n15 However, if desired, a party may participate in the deposition by submitting written questions. n16 In addition, a deposition may be conducted by telephone or other electronic means. n17

Unless otherwise authorized by the court or stipulated by the parties, a deposition is limited to one day of seven hours. The court must allow additional time if needed for a fair examination of the deponent if the deponent or another person, or other circumstance, impedes or delays the examination. n18 Sanctions may be imposed on those who frustrate the fair examination of the deponent. n19

A notice for a second deposition, issued without first seeking leave of court, is invalid, and a party may properly refuse to submit to such a deposition. n20

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsWritten DepositionsCivil ProcedureTrialsDepositions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Windsor Shirt Co. v. New Jersey Nat'l Bank, 793 F. Supp. 589, 606 (E.D. Pa. 1992) , aff'd, 989 F.2d 490 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hall v. Clifton Precision, 150 F.R.D. 525, 528 (E.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(i).

(n5)Footnote 5. Hall v. Clifton Precision, 150 F.R.D. 525, 526 (E.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a), 30(b)(5).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a)(1)(A).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(1).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(3).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(4).

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(1).

(n19)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(1).

(n20)Footnote 20. See In re Sulfuric Acid Antitrust Litig., 230 F.R.D. 527, 531 (N.D. Ill. 2005).

* Chapter 17 revised in 1999 by Peter Kearns, Esq., San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 17 Taking Depositions *

2-17 Federal Litigation Guide § 17.02

§ 17.02 Permissible Scope of Deposition

[1] Seeking Information Relevant to Claims or Defenses

The baseline for all discovery is Rule 26(b)(1), which provides that "[p]arties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party." For good cause the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information need not be admissible at trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n1

Rule 30(c) states:

Examination and cross-examination of witnesses may proceed as permitted at the trial under the provisions of the Federal Rules of Evidence except Rules 103 and 615. ... All objections made at the time of the examination ... shall be noted by the officer upon the record of the deposition; but the examination shall proceed, with the testimony being taken subject to the objections.

