

1 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Author(s)

Author(s)

FEDERAL SECURITIES
ACT OF 1933 Volume 1

A. A. SOMMER, JR.
General Editor [1982-2002]
Originally Authored by Hugh L. Sowards
2010

2 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Questions?

Questions?

Technical Questions?

Phone: (800) 223-5297
Fax: (800) 533-1645 or (518) 487-3191
E-Mail: technical.support@lexisnexis.com
Visit Our Web Site: <http://www.lexis.com>

Editorial Questions?

For questions about the Editorial Content appearing in these volumes or reprint permission, please call:
Securities-Legal

Julie Chee, LL.B., M.A. Practice Area Editor Julie.Chee@lexisnexis.com at 1-800-252-9257 Ext. 673.3345

For assistance with replacement pages, shipments, billing or other customer service matters, please call:

Customer Services Department at (800)833-9844

Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518)487-3000

Fax Number (518)487-3584

For information on other Matthew Bender publications, please call

Your account manager or (800)223-1940

Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518)487-3000

3 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Cite As

Cite As

Cite this publication as:

Cite as: [Vol. no.] A.A. Sommer, Jr., Federal Securities Act of 1933 § [sec. no.] (Matthew Bender, Rev. Ed.) Example:
1 A.A. Sommer, Jr., Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 1.01 (Matthew Bender, Rev. Ed.)

Because the section you are citing may be revised in a later release, you may wish to photocopy or print out the section for convenient future reference.

4 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Copyright

Copyright

This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold with the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting, or other professional services. If legal advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks and Michie is a trademark of Reed Elsevier Properties Inc., used under license. Matthew Bender and the Matthew Bender Flame Design are registered trademarks of Matthew Bender Properties Inc.

Copyright © 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All Rights Reserved.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulations, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work. Permission to copy material exceeding fair use, 17 U.S.C. § 107, may be licensed for a fee of 25cent(s) per page per copy from the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, Mass. 01923, telephone (978) 750-8400.

ISBN 978-0-8205-1627-1

Library of Congress Card Number: 73-010837

5 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Publisher's Editorial Staff

Publisher's Editorial Staff

Edward Berger
Director Content Development

Julie Chee
Legal Editor

Jay Huber
Index Manager

Jeanne L. Leleszi
Index Editor

Courtney Barker
Manager, Publishing Operations

Carly Fornabio
Publishing Operations Analyst

6 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Foreword

Foreword

Foreword

A. A. SOMMER, JR.

Commissioner, Securities and Exchange Commission, 1973-1976

Counsel, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, Washington, D.C., 1994-2002

Former Vice Chairman, National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc.

Former Chairman, Public Oversight Committee, American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

Former Chairman, Section on Corporation, Banking and Business Law and of the Federal Regulation of Securities Committee, American Bar Association

7 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Preface

Preface

For over thirty years "Sowards" has been the ultimate authority on the Securities Act of 1933 and "Gadsby" on the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The treatises were originally the product of their talented hands and enormous experience - Sowards as a preeminent teacher and scholar, Gadsby as a former SEC chairman and outstanding practitioner. As the laws of which they wrote so well changed, and particularly after their deaths, their treatises increasingly reflected the work of the talented authors and editors at Matthew Bender & Co. and other outstanding lawyers and scholars who undertook to rewrite or update parts of the original treatises. While the original excellence of the books continued to reflect the pioneering work of Hugh Sowards and Ned Gadsby, the work of other capable hands became increasingly visible.

As the Securities and Exchange Commission rounded out its efforts to integrate the 1933 and 1934 Acts, a work commenced just about the time the original treatises were published, the distinction between the acts diminished, thus compelling the conclusion that there was little reason to distinguish the two treatises as sharply as had been done in the past. The volumes increasingly constituted an all-embracing "encyclopedia" of the two acts, an encyclopedia rounded out by Securities Law Techniques and the more recently published Regulation of Investment Companies. This integration of the core federal statutes, and recognition of the increased role of other authors, made it only fit and proper to integrate Sowards and Gadsby and their primary source volumes into the Securities Regulation Series.

So identified, they continue to be the unique resource for the practitioner they have always been: the one source in which he or she can find authoritative, up-to-date information about every aspect of the two acts. By combining the primary source volumes that have been discrete parts of each treatise, the recognition of the now integrated statutes and the treatise volumes is complete. Some tidying will continue, but the "heavy lifting" is done.

It is the continuing desire and determination of the editors and authors who are now and will in the future be responsible for these works to preserve the tradition of excellence, reliability and authoritativeness established by the two distinguished original authors. The debt which now more than one generation of securities law practitioners has to the original authors is monumental; it can only be repaid by their successors on behalf of those who use these volumes through continued adherence to the standards to which they so faithfully hewed when they write the original works.

Many of us who practiced through most of our careers with "Gadsby" and "Sowards" at our elbows may feel a sense of loss when those familiar names no longer identify the volumes so long associated with them. But we can be confident their dedication to quality scholarship will continue unabated.

A. A. Sommer, Jr.
General Editor
July 1997

8 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Contributing Authors

Contributing Authors

Jonathan G. Katz

Former Secretary of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission

Theodore Altman

Joshua Sohn

Piper Rudnick

New York, New York

W. Reece Bader

Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe

Menlo Park, California

Frederick Robinson

Thomas A. Ferrigno

Matthew H. Kirtland

Fulbright & Jaworski

Washington, D.C.

Mark Borrelli

Sidley Austin

Chicago, Illinois

Elliot Cohen

Robert M. Carmen

Troutman Sanders LLP

New York, NY

Cristopher Greer

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Contributing Authors

Willkie, Farr & Gallagher
New York, New York

Marc E. Elovitz
William H. Gussman
Shulte, Roth & Zabel
New York, New York

Professor Howard M. Friedman
University of Toledo
Toledo, Ohio

Sara Hanks
Clifford Chance
New York, New York

Paul Hughes
Richard McGrath
Murtha Cullina
Stamford, Connecticut

Daniel J. Kramer
Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison
New York, New York

Yoon-Young Lee
Wilmer Culter Pickering Hale & Dorr LLP
Washington D.C.

Thomas P. Lemke
Legg Mason, Inc.

Gerald T. Lins
ING Investment Management Americas

Brandon C. Parris
Andrew D. Thorpe
Morrison & Foerster
San Francisco, California

Marvin G. Pickholz
Duane Morris LLP
Alan H. Aronson
Akerman Senterfitt
New York, New York

Morton A. Pierce
Chang Do-Gong
Dewey & LeBoeuf

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Contributing Authors

New York, New York

Robert N. Rapp

Calfee, Halter & Griswold
Cleveland, Ohio

Peter J. Romeo

Hogan & Hartson
Washington, D.C.

Thomas I. Selling

Thunderbird, The Garvin School of International Management
Glendale, AZ

Kenneth B. Winer

Samuel J. Winer

Marc B. Dorfman

Foley & Lardner LLP
Washington, D.C.

Yvette VanRiper

Patrick Daugherty

Foley & Lardner LLP
Detroit, MI.

Peter Underwood

Regal-Beloitt Corporation

Antonio Yanez, Jr.

James C. Dugan

Willkie, Farr & Gallagher
New York, New York

9 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

What's New

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Scope

Scope

and related publications

Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934
Securities Primary Law Sourcebook

HIGHLIGHTS

Release 108 November 2010

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Chapter 1, Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission.
Chapter 10, SEC Enforcement Practice

Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934

Chapter 9, SEC Enforcement Legal Considerations

Securities Primary Law Sourcebook

Volumes A, B, D and E have been revised and updated.

Federal Securities Act of 1933. Chapter 1, Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission. . Chapter One has been significantly revised to expand topics of discussion and reflect important legislative and regulatory developments since 2004. In particular, the discussion of the function and organization of the SEC has been broadened, including a new section on the structure of the SEC and an enhanced discussion of the roles of the Division of Corporation Finance and the Division of Enforcement. A new and in-depth discussion of the securities offering reform rules promulgated in 2005 has been added, including information on the categories of issuers, various reforms to the process of communicating with shareholders before, during and after registered securities transactions, the use of research reports and shelf registration reforms. Finally, an updated discussion of the enactment of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 and developments under that Act since the prior update has been included.

1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Scope

Chapter 10, SEC Enforcement Practice. The chapter has been updated to reflected initiatives that the SEC took in 2009-2010 under the leadership of Chairman Schapiro and Enforcement Director Khuzami. These initiatives include delegating to the Staff authority to issue a Formal Order empowering the Staff to issue subpoenas, an extensive restructuring of the Enforcement Staff, and initiatives to encourage cooperation.

Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Chapter 9 , SEC Enforcement--Legal Considerations. Regulation of Market Manipulation Chapter 9 provides an overview of the SEC's power to investigate and initiate legal proceedings against the entities and individuals it regulates. This chapter reviews the investigative process and related legal issues. This chapter has been revised to reflect the legislative responses to the 2008 Financial Crisis, as well as to the revelation of Bernard Madoff's massive fraudulent Ponzi scheme. In particular, the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, signed into law by President Obama in July 2010, represents perhaps the largest overhaul of the enforcement powers of the SEC since its creation in the 1930s. Dodd-Frank has broadened not only the jurisdictional reach of the SEC and the federal securities laws, but also granted the SEC new enforcement powers. Furthermore, Dodd-Frank enhances whistleblower protection and rewards whistleblowers who supply new information to the SEC with ten-to-thirty percent of any fines recovered in excess of $1 million. In addition to Congressional action, the SEC itself has demonstrated its intention to be a more forceful watchdog of the securities industry through the reorganization of its subdivisions in order to be more expeditious in the prosecution of securities violations. The SEC has already created specialized enforcement units staffed by professionals with extensive experience in specialized areas and has begun seeking and obtaining increased monetary penalties against wrong-doers. Accordingly, as a result of these recent legislative and administrative developments, it can be expected that individuals and entities subject to the federal securities laws will face a more vigorous and rigorous regulatory and investigatory regime for the foreseeable future.

Securities Primary Law Sourcebook. Some of the highlights in The Securities Primary Law Sourcebook update includes new Sections to the Securities Exchange Act 1934 such as § 4D-Additional Duties of Inspector General, § 4E-Deadline for completing enforcement investigations and compliance examinations and inspections, § 4F-Report and certification of internal supervisory controls, § 4G-Triennial report on personnel management, 4H-Annual financial controls audit and § 4I-Report on oversight of national securities associations. There are also new sections 15F and 15G, pertaining to Registration and regulation of security-based swap dealers and major security-based swap participants and Credit Risk Retention. There is also a new rule to facilitate interim Commission review of Public Company Accounting Oversight Board inspection reports under Section 104(h) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, and its Rules of Organization and Program Management and Rule of Practice to delegate authority to the Chief Accountant related to these reviews. Regulation P is established to include procedural rules relating to the Public Company Accounting and Oversight Board.

10 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 1

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 SA.syn

§ SA.syn Synopsis to Chapter SA: Special Alert to Chapter 1

Special Alert to Chapter 1

§ I. Introduction to the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996

§ II. Provisions of the Act Affecting the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934

[A] Preemption of State Authority Over Securities Offerings

[B] Commission Exemptive Authority

[C] Broker Dealer Margin Requirements

[D] Promotion of Efficiency, Competition, and Capital Formation

[E] Coordination of Supervision

[F] Commission Reports

[G] Foreign Press Conferences

[H] Fees

§ III. Provisions of the Act Affecting the Investment Advisers Act of 1940

§ IV. Provisions of the Act Affecting the Investment Company Act of 1940

[A] Partial Preemption of State Registration Requirements -- Amendments to Section 18 of the Securities Act of 1933

[B] Fund-of-Funds -- Amendments to Section 12(d)(1) of the 1940 act

[C] Registration of Indefinite Amount of Securities -- Amendments to Section 24(f) of the 1940 Act

[D] Advertising Flexibility -- New Section 24(g) of the 1940 Act

[E] Modification of Attribution Rule for Private Investment Companies -- Amendments to Section 3(c)(1) of the 1940 Act

[F] Exclusions for "Qualified Purchaser" Private Investment Companies -- Amended Section 3(c)(7) of the 1940 Act

[G] Expansion of Exclusion for Brokers and Financial Intermediaries -- Amendment to Section 3(c)(2) of the 1940 Act

[H] Exemption from Unit Investment Trust Requirements for Variable Insurance Contracts -- Amendments to Section 26 of the 1940 Act

§ V. Analysis and Conclusions by A. A. Sommer, Jr.

11 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 1

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933

Special Alert to Chapter 1

THE NATIONAL SECURITIES MARKETS IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1996 n1

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. This Special Alert was written by A.A. Sommer, Jr., the General Editor of the Securities Regulation Series. Part IV, discussing the amendments to the Investment Company Act of 1940, was written by the co-authors of Regulation of Investment Companies, Thomas P. Lemke, Gerald T. Lins, and A. Thomas Smith III.

This Special Alert is not intended to be a complete summary or statement of all of the provisions of the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996. Reference should be made to the text of the Act and the Conference Committee Report.

12 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 1

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 § I

§ I. Introduction to the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996

On October 11, President Clinton signed into law the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 (H.R. 3005 -- "The Act") proclaiming it the "most significant overhaul of the securities regulatory structure in decades." The Act effected significant changes in the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Investment Company Act of 1940, and the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, and removed many anomalies and inefficiencies from securities regulation that had been discussed and sought for a long time.

The Act originated with two bills introduced in 1995 by Representative Jack Fields, chairman of the House Commerce Committee's Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance. The first would have amended the Investment Company Act of 1940; the second would have amended the 1933 and 1934 Acts. The latter, while containing in different form many of the provisions eventually enacted, also contained a number of highly controversial provisions that were omitted from the Act as enacted.

13 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 1

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 § II

§ II. Provisions of the Act Affecting the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934

The following is a summary of the principal provisions of the Act affecting the Securities Act of 1933 ("the 1933 Act") and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("the 1934 Act").

[A] Preemption of State Authority Over Securities Offerings

Perhaps the most significant change effected by the Act is the near total preemption of state authority over offerings of securities. Under amended Section 18 of the 1933 Act, no state may prohibit an offering or sale in the state, oppose additional disclosure requirements, impose "merit" standards, require the registration or qualification of a security or transaction, or prohibit or limit the use of any offering document prepared by or on behalf of an issuer in connection with an offering (including proxy statements and reports to shareholders required to be filed under Section 15A of the 1934 Act unless the issuer is incorporated in the state) if the security offered is a "covered" security. A "covered security is defined as:

- a security listed, or authorized for listing, on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, the Nasdaq National Market System, or listed or authorized for listing on a national securities exchange which the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") determines has listing standards substantially similar to those of the named markets;
- a security that is equal in seniority or senior to a securities described in the preceding paragraph;
- a security issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act;
- a security offered or sold to a "qualified purchaser" as defined by the Commission -- presumably the Commission will define such purchasers in a manner similar to the definition of "accredited investor" in Rule 501 under the 1933 Act;
- securities offered or sold pursuant to most of the exemptions contained in 1933 Act Sections 3(a) and 4 (in the case of Sections 4(1) and 4(3) the issuer must be a reporting company under the 1934 Act), the principal exceptions being the intrastate exemption in Section 3(a)(11) and the exemption in Section 3(a)(4) for securities issued by non-profit religious and eleemosynary institutions; and

- a security that will become a covered security under any of the foregoing definitions of covered security upon completion of the transaction.

The states may continue to impose filing requirements for documents filed with the Commission and for certain annual and periodic reports. The states may also require filing of consents to service of process and may impose filing fees (except for listed or to be listed securities and securities senior to them) in the amounts provided by state law on the day before the Act became effective. Moreover, the states under the Act continue to have the authority to investigate and bring enforcement actions for fraud and deceit or unlawful conduct by a broker or dealer.

With regard to brokers and dealers, while the states retain the power to require the registration of brokers and dealers subject to their jurisdiction, states may not impose requirements with respect to capital, custody, margin, financial responsibility, making and keeping records, bonding, or financial or operating requirements that differ from or are in addition to those provided by federal law. In addition, the Act provides an exemption from registration in a state by an associated person of a broker or dealer if he or she makes an occasional sale in the state to a previous customer who is visiting for a short period in the state.

[B] Commission Exemptive Authority

The Act gives the Commission the authority to exempt by rule or regulation any person, security or transaction, or class of such, from any provision of the 1933 Act or rule or regulation thereunder "to the extent that such exemption is necessary or appropriate in the public interest and is consistent with the protection of investors." It is believed that this latter clause, which qualifies all of the Commission's rulemaking power, would preclude the Commission from exempting a security, person or transaction from the anti-fraud provisions of the federal statutes.

The Act gives the Commission a similar exemptive authority, expanded to include the authority to exempt by order, with respect to the 1934 Act.

[C] Broker Dealer Margin Requirements

The Act permits broker-dealers to borrow from sources other than banks. It also exempts from the margin requirements credit extended, maintained, or arranged to or for a member of a national securities exchange or other broker or dealer: (1) a substantial portion of whose business consists of transactions with persons other than brokers or dealers (e.g., a retail broker), or (2) to finance its activities as a market maker or an underwriter.

[D] Promotion of Efficiency, Competition, and Capital Formation

The Act requires the Commission in its rulemaking and other actions to take into account whether its action promotes efficiency, competition, and capital formation.

[E] Coordination of Supervision

The Act requires that the Commission and the self-regulatory organizations, through cooperation and coordination of their activities and sharing of information, eliminate unnecessary and burdensome duplication of examinations. Somewhat in anticipation of the adopted of this provision, in late 1995 the Commission, state regulators, and the SROs entered into a memorandum of understanding with respect to the coordination of activities.

[F] Commission Reports

Congress mandated that the Commission undertake to make studies and submit to it reports with respect to a number of matters.

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 § II

- Congress directed the Commission to examine proposals for the privatization of the EDGAR system and to report on such examination within 180 days after adoption of the Act, and to include in such report recommendations for legislative action to implement any Commission proposals for privatization.
- Congress directed the Commission to make a study of the impact of technological advances, the use of on-line information systems on securities markets, and related matters and to make a report within one year after the adoption of the Act of the steps the Commission has taken to address such matters.
- Congress directed the Commission to study whether shareholder access to proxy statements by the submission of shareholder proposals had been impaired by recent statutory, judicial or regulatory changes, and the ability of shareholders to have proposals relating to corporate practices and social issues included as a part of proxy statements, and to report within a year, including recommendations for regulatory or legislative changes to improve shareholder access to proxy statements. This proposal stemmed from the 1992 Commission staff decision allowing corporations to exclude shareholder proposals regarding corporate employment practices.
- Congress directed the Commission to study "preferencing," i.e., the practice of a broker as a dealer on a national securities exchange directing a customer order to itself for execution as principal under rules that permit the broker to take priority in execution over same-priced orders or quotations entered prior in time, and to report within 6 months after adoption of the Act.
- The Commission was directed to report to Congress within one year on progress in the development of international accounting standards and the outlook for the successful completion of a set of international standards that would be acceptable to the Commission for offerings and listings of foreign corporations in U.S. markets. Earlier, the Commission had indicated its support for the effort of the International Accounting Standards Committee to develop suitable standards and indicated the characteristics they would be required to have to be acceptable to the Commission.

[G] Foreign Press Conferences

Responding to the complaints of financial writers that they were often excluded from the press conferences of foreign companies proposing to offer securities in the United States because of concerns with the registration and prospectus requirements of the 1933 Act, Congress directed the Commission to develop, within a year, rules concerning the status of foreign press conferences and foreign press releases under the registration provisions of the 1933 Act.

[H] Fees

The Act contains provisions with respect to the fees that the Commission may charge. It directs the Commission to collect registration fees under the 1933 Act that are designed to recover the costs to the government of the securities registration process and the costs related to that process. It also sets forth a new schedule of such fees under which the registration fees are reduced each year until 2007. For the first time, pursuant to the Act, security transactions off an exchange are subjected to the same fees to which transactions on exchanges have been subject.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 2. The text of the Act does not appear to include as a "covered security" a security offered for listing on the Nasdaq National Market System; this appears to have been a drafting error. 142 Cong. Rec. E1928 (October 4, 1996) (statement of Rep. Bliley).

14 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 1

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 § III

§ III. Provisions of the Act Affecting the Investment Advisers Act of 1940

Title III of the Act contains the Investment Advisers Supervision Coordination Act, which amends the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.

The principal effect of the Act on the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 is the partial federal preemption of the regulation of investment advisers. The Act accomplishes this by providing that no investment adviser regulated or required to be regulated in the state in which it maintains its principal office and place of business may register with the Commission unless it manages assets of not less than $25 million (or such higher figure set by the Commission) or is an adviser to an investment company registered with the Commission under the Investment Company act of 1940, and that no state may require an investment adviser registered with the Commission to register, secure a license, or qualify under any state law. This formulation was apparently adopted to assure that no small investment advisers located in states that do not regulate investment advisers would be required to register with the Commission.

States may continue to require the registration of investment adviser representatives (broadly defined in the Act) if they have an office in the state.

States may not impose books and records, minimum capital, or bond requirements on advisers licensed in other states in addition to those required by the licensing state if the adviser is in compliance with those requirements. In addition, states may not require the licensing, registration, or qualification of anyone exempted from registration under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 or of any investment adviser that does not have a place of business in the state and during the preceding twelve months has had fewer than six clients resident in the state.

Consistently with other provisions of the Act, the states' authority to investigate and bring enforcement actions with respect to fraud and deceit is preserved, and states may require the filing of anything filed with the Commission for notice purposes and continue to impose the fees in effect on the day before adoption of the Act.

In recognition of the Commission's frequent complaint about its ability to regularly examine investment advisers, the Act authorizes $20 million in each of 1997 and 1998 for enforcement of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.

15 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 1

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 § IV

§ IV. Provisions of the Act Affecting the Investment Company Act of 1940

Title II of the Act contains the Investment Company Act Amendments of 1996. The most important of the amendments affecting investment companies are set forth below.

[A] Partial Preemption of State Registration Requirements -- Amendments to Section 18 of the Securities Act of 1933

One of the most important aspects of the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 is the partial preemption of state "blue sky" registration and disclosure requirements for mutual funds. Under amended Section 18 of the Securities Act of 1933, states may no longer impose registration or qualification requirements on certain sales of securities, including shares of registered investment companies. States are also precluded from reviewing mutual fund prospectuses and advertising.

However, states retain the authority to require investment companies to file, for notice purposes, any documents filed with the SEC and to continue to collect filing fees. States also retain jurisdiction to investigate and bring enforcement actions for fraud and deceit.

[B] Fund-of-Funds -- Amendments to Section 12(d)(1) of the 1940 act

The Investment Company Act amendments permit fund-of-fund structures within an investment company without an exemption from the SEC. Under amended Section 12(d)(1)(G) of the 1940 Act, a registered open-end investment company or unit investment trust (an "upper-tier fund") may acquire shares or units of other open-end funds or unit investment trusts ("lower-tier funds") within the same group of investment companies without percentage limitations, as long as:

- the shares or units are the only investments held by the upper-tier fund (other than government securities and short-term paper):
- distribution-related fees or charges are not charged by both the upper-tier and lower-tier funds, or, alternatively, the aggregate distribution-related charges at both levels are not excessive under SEC rules; and

- the lower-tier fund may not itself invest in shares or units of registered investment companies or unit investment trusts.

[C] Registration of Indefinite Amount of Securities -- Amendments to Section 24(f) of the 1940 Act

Under amended Section 24(f), commencing in October 1997 (or earlier if the SEC adopts rules), registered open-end investment companies and unit investment trusts will be deemed automatically to have registered an indefinite amount of securities and will pay registration fees based on the net amount of new shares or units sold (i.e., purchases less redemptions).

[D] Advertising Flexibility -- New Section 24(g) of the 1940 Act

Under new Section 24(g) of the 1940 Act, mutual fund advertising restrictions will be eased. Section 24(g) directs the SEC to adopt rules and regulations to permit advertising that includes information "the substance of which is not included in a [Section 10(a)] prospectus"

[E] Modification of Attribution Rule for Private Investment Companies -- Amendments to Section 3(c)(1) of the 1940 Act

The amendments significantly reduce the need for a private investment company to look through and count the underlying owners of an entity investing in it as its beneficial owners. Under amended Section 3(c)(1)(A) of the 1940 Act, the ownership of the private investment company is attributed to the underlying owners of the investing entity only if the investing entity itself is an investment company or an entity relying on the exclusion from the definition of an investment company in Sections 3(c)(1) or 3(c)(7).

[F] Exclusions for "Qualified Purchaser" Private Investment Companies -- Amended Section 3(c)(7) of the 1940 Act

The amendments provide an exclusion for a new type of private investment company. Under amended Section 3(c)(7) of the 1940 Act, effective October 1997, a company is excluded from the definition of an investment company if its outstanding securities are owned only by "qualified purchasers" and it is not making or proposing to make a public offering of its securities.

A "qualified purchaser" is defined in new Section 2(a)(51)(A) of the 1940 Act to include the following categories of persons:

- a natural person with at least $5,000,000 in investments;
- certain family-owned companies owning at least $5,000,000 in investments; and
- any person who, for its own account or for other qualified purchasers, owns and invests on a discretionary basis at least $25,000,000 in investments.

[G] Expansion of Exclusion for Brokers and Financial Intermediaries -- Amendment to Section 3(c)(2) of the 1940 Act

In recognition of the growing number and complexity of financial instruments, Congress expanded the class of intermediaries entitled to rely on the exclusion from the definition of an investment company in Section 3(c)(2) of the 1940 Act. Under amended Section 3(c)(2), in addition to certain underwriters, distributors, and brokers, a "market intermediary" is excluded from the definition. A "market intermediary" is a person who holds itself out as being willing to engage in transactions on both sides of individually negotiated financial contracts, such as swaps, repurchase agreements, and options.

[H] Exemption from Unit Investment Trust Requirements for Variable Insurance Contracts -- Amendments to Section 26 of the 1940 Act

Under new Section 26(e) of the 1940 Act, the trustee and custodian requirements governing unit investment trusts do not apply to any registered separate account funding variable annuity contracts, or the sponsoring insurance company and principal underwriter of the account, provided:

- the various fees and charges for the contract are reasonable; and
- the insurance company files annual financial information with the appropriate state insurance authority evidencing a combined capital and surplus of $1,000,000.

16 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 1

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 § V

§ V. Analysis and Conclusions by A. A. Sommer, Jr.

The National Securities Markets Reform Act of 1996 accomplished numerous reforms which virtually all practitioners and people in the securities industry regarded as long overdue without endangering investor protections. As capital markets have become increasingly global, the necessity of multiple state registration in addition to federal registration has become increasingly anomalous. The original scheme which carefully preserved state jurisdiction was the fruit of an age in which "states rights" were accorded deep respect and during which the national nature of the capital markets was less clear. The dual system of registration endured as long as it did because of the adoption of a number of devices designed to ease the burdens of the system (e.g., registration by coordination and notification, exemptions for offerings of securities to be listed, etc.).

In the final analysis, the states preserved perhaps their most important power which was imperiled in the first draft of the eventually enacted Act, namely, the undiminished power to pursue fraud committed within their jurisdictions. In addition, they continue to share concurrent jurisdiction over offerings of securities registered with the Commission which are not going to be listed. Thus, limited partnerships public offerings, initial public offerings of securities that will be traded in the NASDAQ Small Cap Market or in the "pink sheets," and offerings of numerous other types of "exotic" securities will continue to be subject to the full authority of the states where the offering is made.

Perhaps the main beneficiaries of the preemption are the investment companies that have historically been restrained because of the sometime vagaries of state regulation, many of which were recounted during the course of Congressional testimony on the Act.

The states retain considerable, if somewhat attenuated, authority with respect to brokers and dealers. However, the signals are clear in the Act and the dialogue leading to its enactment that failure by the states to use their authority in a less burdensome manner may result in the forfeiture of virtually all authority with respect to brokers and dealers.

The Commission received enhanced power to adopt rules and regulations providing exemptions under the 1933 and 1934 Acts. This eliminates the awkward necessity of using questionable "definitions" and other circuitous means to achieve needed exemptions, such as those included in Regulation D and Rule 144. The enhanced power opens the door to a more comprehensive and conceptually consistent overhaul of the disclosure system such as that reflected in the proposals of the Commission's Advisory Committee on the Capital Formation and Regulatory Processes.

The division of jurisdiction over investment advisers between the states and the Commission is a sensible way of assuring better policing of an activity that has never received the attention it should receive and which poses increasing peril to investors. Hopefully, the overall quality, quantity, and effectiveness of investment adviser will be considerably enhanced with the Act's direction that the SEC focus attention on the larger advisers and that the states retain unfettered opportunity to regulate small advisers.

The requirement in the Act that the Commission, in rulemaking, take into account efficiency, competition, and capital formation is unlikely to affect the Commission's rulemaking since the Commission would undoubtedly deny that any of its rulemaking ever mandated inefficiencies or hampered competition or capital formation.

Absent from the final version of the Act were some of the more controversial provisions of the original Fields bill, such as a provision that would have sharply reduced the ability of institutional investors to assert lack of suitability claims against broker-dealers. Apparently, the initiative of the National Association of Securities Dealers in adopting a rule governing suitability for institutional investors prompted Congress to drop this proposal. However, if Congress believes that the NASD rule, in practice, has not struck a fair balance, it may revisit the issue down the line.

The reports the Commission is directed to make after the numerous mandated studies may constitute the agenda for future legislation. However, it is doubtful that Congress will revisit the fundamentals of securities regulation in the near term. In the Act, Congress has addressed the most troublesome problems in the current securities regulation scheme and has given the Commission significantly increased power to deal with future problems. Perhaps the most pertinent question until the end of this century and somewhat beyond is how the Commission will use its enhanced powers.

17 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 1.syn

§ 1.syn Synopsis to Chapter 1: Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

Scope

§ 1.01 Background

§ 1.02 The Securities Act of 1933--Objectives and Scope

§ 1.03 Overview of the Securities and Exchange Commission

[1] Structure of the Commission

[2] The Work of the Commission in Relation to the 1933 Act

[a] The Division of Corporation Finance: Disclosure Review, Interpretations and Rulemaking

[b] The Division of Enforcement

[i] Investigation and Enforcement

[ii] Statutory Sanctions

[3] Administrative Proceedings

[4] Disciplinary Proceedings

§ 1.04 Registration of Securities

[1] Non-Shelf Registration Statements

[2] Shelf Registration Statements

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 1.syn

[3] Exemptions Under the 1933 Act

[4] Causes of Action Under the 1933 Act

[5] Securities Offering Reform of 2005

[a] Background: National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996

[b] General Framework

[c] Categories of Issuers

[d] Communications Reforms

[i] The New Communications Scheme

[ii] Regularly Released Information

[iii] Communications More Than 30 Days Prior to Filing a Registration Statement

[iv] Communications by WKSIs

[v] "Tombstone" Advertisements Under Rule 134

[vi] The Free Writing Prospectus

[vii] Road Shows

[viii] Communications on Web Sites

[ix] Media Publications and Broadcasts

[x] Expanded Use of Research Reports

[6] Registration Reforms

[a] Shelf Registration Reforms

[b] Automatic Shelf Registration for WKSIs

§ 1.05 The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002

[1] The Need for Reform

[2] Internal Control and Disclosure Controls

[3] CEO/CFO Certifications and Corporate Responsibility

[4] Enhanced Disclosure

[5] Audit Committees and Auditor Independence

[6] Listing Standards

[7] Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

[8] Enforcement and Criminal Sanctions

§ 1.06 Recent Developments and The Future

[1] SEC Developments in Recent Years

[2] The Future

18 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933

Summary of This Chapter

The first U.S. federal regulation of securities transactions, the Securities Act of 1933 (the "1933 Act" or the "Securities Act"), and the establishment of the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission" or the "SEC") pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, were direct legislative responses to the loss of public confidence in the U.S. securities markets that followed the stock market crash of 1929, the ineffectiveness of then-existing state laws regulating securities transactions and the widespread employment of unethical and manipulative practices by sellers of securities that had contributed to the severe losses suffered by the investing public. See § 1.01 infra.

In public offerings of securities, the 1933 Act requires full and fair disclosure of pertinent information regarding the issuer, the offered securities and the offering. Disclosure is made by means of a registration statement, which the issuer files with the Commission, and a prospectus, which is part of the registration statement and is distributed to potential purchasers of the securities. Although the 1933 Act exempts offerings of certain types of securities and certain types of offerings from registration and prospectus delivery requirements, there are no exemptions from the 1933 Act's antifraud provisions. In 2005, the Commission adopted fundamental reforms of the rules governing the communications and offering processes for securities offerings registered under the 1933 Act. See § 1.02 infra.

Administration and enforcement of the 1933 Act are the responsibility of the Commission, which is empowered under the 1933 Act, consistent with investor protection, to adopt rules and regulations, issue interpretations of the federal securities laws and the rules and regulations thereunder and investigate possible violations of the 1933 Act. Where violations are found, the Commission may seek a civil injunction in a United States District Court, refer fraudulent or willful violations to the Department of Justice with a recommendation for criminal prosecution, or apply administrative sanctions.

The Commission does not intercede on behalf of investors who may have sustained damages as a result of violations of the 1933 Act. It is the responsibility of the investor to evaluate the merits and risks of a securities investment and to pursue any private remedy available.

Administrative proceedings conducted by the Commission must comply with the Commission's Rules of Practice and with the Administrative Procedure Act. These provide for notice of hearing, a hearing before a Hearing Officer and an opportunity for interested parties to participate in the hearing. After conclusion of the hearing, the Hearing Officer issues an initial decision that may be appealed to the Commission. The Commission's rulings may be appealed to a United States Court of Appeals. The Commission, with sufficient cause, may suspend, temporarily or permanently, any person from practicing before it.

The Commission consists of five presidentially-appointed commissioners, one of whom is designated by the President as Chairman of the Commission. The work of the Commission is carried out by five Divisions and 16 Offices in Washington, D.C. and 11 regional offices throughout the United States.

In recent years, the Commission has been faced with major challenges in keeping up with the rapid expansion and globalization of the financial markets and changes, technological and otherwise, in the ways that securities are traded and information distributed. The Commission has implemented significant rulemaking to respond to pressures created by demands for more efficient global markets. The Commission engaged in significant rulemaking following the passage of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 in an effort to address accounting scandals and other corporate fraud in the wake of the Enron and Worldcom bankruptcies. See § 1.04 infra.

This publication is not concerned with a detailed description of the historical background and development of securities legislation. Rather, its primary purpose is to deal with the 1933 Act in its current form. Nevertheless, as in the case of most legislation, at least a brief and general statement of that background and development is helpful in gaining a clear understanding of the basic philosophy of the 1933 Act and what it seeks to accomplish.

* Patrick Daugherty, Yvette M. VanRiper and Peter C. Underwood. This chapter was revised and updated by Patrick Daugherty and Yvette M. VanRiper, partners at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Peter C. Underwood, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Regal-Beloitt Corporation. The authors would like to thank Stephen J. Byrnes, Jr. and Megan A. Odronic, associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Morgan J. Tilleman, Nicholas J. Fox, Christina T. Jones and Morgan J. West, summer associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, for their assistance.

19 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 1.01

§ 1.01 Background

In the prosperous era following World War I, there was little support for federal regulation of securities markets. n1 This ended abruptly with the 1929 stock market crash and the onset of the Great Depression. n2 The time was ripe for reform and to restore the public's confidence in the market system. n3

Before the passage of the 1933 Act, various forms of securities legislation had been enacted, both by other countries n4 and by individual states in the United States. n5 Some of these state "blue sky laws," as they came to be called, n6 required only registration of securities; others required only registration of persons engaged in selling securities; still others required registration of neither securities nor sellers, but instead contained antifraud provisions. Some blue sky laws combined two or more of the foregoing types of provisions. It was against this varied background of existing foreign and state regulation and the paucity of existing federal regulation n7 that the authors of the 1933 Act and the Congress that enacted it had to determine what the basic philosophy of the new Act was to be.

Certain facts were clear. First, strong and workable federal legislation was a requirement if public confidence in securities and the securities markets, badly shaken as a result of the 1929 debacle, was to be restored. Second, the existing securities laws of the several states were inadequate to deal with the situation. n8

From pre-1933 securities legislation two fundamental approaches to the problem of securities regulation had emerged. Legislation could either regulate the intrinsic merit of securities as potentially profitable investments, or it could simply require the kind of disclosure sufficient to enable an investor to make his or her own informed decision regarding intrinsic merit. In 1933 there were many proponents of strong securities legislation who insisted that the only way to provide adequate investor protection was to give the federal government the power to pass upon the merits of securities before they could be offered and sold to the public. Bills to that effect were introduced in the Senate and the House of Representatives. n9 But perhaps an even greater number of informed persons were wary of giving the federal government, as a "capital issues bureaucracy," the power to control the domestic issuance and sale of securities. n10 These were the proponents of "full and fair disclosure." Significantly, the latter camp included President Roosevelt, whose message to Congress on March 29, 1933, contained the following observations:

[T]he Federal Government cannot and should not take any action which might be construed as approving or guaranteeing that newly issued securities are sound in the sense that their value will be maintained or that the properties which they represent will earn profit.

There is, however, an obligation upon us to insist that every issue of new securities to be sold in interstate commerce shall be accompanied by full publicity and information, and that no essentially important element attending the issue shall be concealed from the buying public.

This proposal adds to the ancient rule of caveat emptor, the further doctrine "Let the seller also beware." It puts the burden of telling the whole truth on the seller. It should give impetus to honest dealing in securities and thereby bring back public confidence. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. U.S. Securities & Exchange Comm'n, How the SEC Protects Investors, Maintains Market Integrity, and Facilitates Capital Formation, <http://www.Securitiesgov/about/whatwedo.shtml>.

(n2)Footnote 2. Id.

(n3)Footnote 3. Id.

(n4)Footnote 4. Prominent among these statutes was the English Companies Act, 1929, 19 & 20 Geo. 5, c. 23, although England had legislation dealing with securities for over 200 years prior to that time. See 1 William Robert Scott, The Constitution and Finance of English, Scottish and Irish Joint-Stock Companies to 1720 (1912); Seigvald Nielson, The Issuance of Securities Under the English Companies Act, 20 Va. L. Rev. 88 (1933).

(n5)Footnote 5. Section 16(a) of the 1933 Act provides: "The rights and remedies provided by this title shall be in addition to any and all other rights and remedies that may exist at law or in equity." 15 U.S.C. § 78bb (2006). Thus federal securities laws were not intended to preempt state securities laws. However, state statutes may be void under the Supremacy Clause, U.S. Const. art. VI, to the extent that they conflict with valid federal legislation. See, e.g., Rousseff v. Dean Witter & Co., 453 F. Supp. 774, 780, Fed. Securities L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,578 (N.D. Ind. 1978); Ray v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 435 U.S. 151, 158, 98 S. Ct. 988, 55 L. Ed. 2d 179 (1978). The blue sky situation has been simplified by the National Securities Markets Improvements Act of 1996, which amended the 1933 Act to preempt state registration requirements for securities listed, or authorized to be listed, on the New York Stock Exchange or the American Stock Exchange or listed on the Nasdaq National Market. National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996, Pub. L. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416. See also Robert N. Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation, (Matthew Bender)

(n6)Footnote 6. These laws are frequently referred to as "blue sky" laws because of colorful language in a United States Supreme Court case decided in 1917, in which the Court upheld the power of a state to pass legislation aimed at "speculative schemes which have no more basis than so many feet of 'blue sky.'" Hall v. Geiger-Jones Co., 242 U.S. 539, 550, 37 S. Ct. 217, 61 L. Ed 480 (1917).

(n7)Footnote 7. For a discussion of federal regulation of securities issuance prior to 1933, see Edward N. Gadsby, Historical Development of the S.E.C.--The Government View, 28 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 6, 7 (1959); Forrest B. Ashby, Federal Regulation of Securities Sales, 22 Ill. L. Rev. 635 (1928).

(n8)Footnote 8. A Department of Commerce survey indicated the following principal reasons for inadequacy of state blue sky laws and the corresponding need for federal participation: (1) evasion of state regulation by operating strictly on an interstate basis; (2) lack of uniformity in state legislation; (3) lack of adequate investor protection under the laws of several states; and (4) loopholes through exemptions afforded by the laws of several states. A Study of the Economic and Legal Aspects of the Proposed Federal Securities Act: Hearing on H.R. 4314 Before the H. Comm. on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, 73d Cong., 99-101 (1933).

(n9)Footnote 9. S. Rep. No. 73-875 & H.R. 73-4314 (1933). See also James M. Landis et al., The Legislative History of the Securities Act of 1933, 28 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 29, 30 (1959).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Landis et al., supra note 9 at 30-31. As early as 1914, Brandeis, in Other People's Money, had advocated disclosure: "Sunlight is said to be the best of disinfectants; electric light the most efficient policeman."

(n11)Footnote 11. S. Rep. No. 73-47, at 6-7, & H.R. Rep. No. 73- 85, at 1-2 (1933).

* Patrick Daugherty, Yvette M. VanRiper and Peter C. Underwood. This chapter was revised and updated by Patrick Daugherty and Yvette M. VanRiper, partners at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Peter C. Underwood, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Regal-Beloitt Corporation. The authors would like to thank Stephen J. Byrnes, Jr. and Megan A. Odronic, associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Morgan J. Tilleman, Nicholas J. Fox, Christina T. Jones and Morgan J. West, summer associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, for their assistance.

20 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 1.02

§ 1.02 The Securities Act of 1933--Objectives and Scope

The advocates of full and fair disclosure prevailed, and that is the basic philosophy of the 1933 Act. Seventy-five years later, the Commission still has no inherent power to regulate the investment quality of the securities issues that it processes. It is in this respect that the 1933 Act differs markedly from many of the state blue sky laws that grant to state securities commissions the power to evaluate the merits of securities proposed to be offered. Although the 1933 Act adopted the full disclosure philosophy of the English Companies Act, the authors, with subsequent approval by Congress, borrowed antifraud provisions from existing state blue sky legislation. Accordingly, the antifraud provisions of the 1933 Act prohibit material misrepresentation, falsity and other fraudulent or manipulative acts and practices in connection with the sale of securities. n1

The 1933 Act, also known as the "Truth in Securities" law, n2 has two primary objectives: to require that investors receive pertinent financial information regarding securities offered for public sale and to eliminate fraud, deceit and misrepresentation in the sale of securities. n3 The 1933 Act accomplishes this by requiring companies to file a registration statement with the Commission. n4 A registration statement must include a prospectus containing material financial and other information about the company and the offering. n5 The registration statement is available to the public upon filing. n6 The Commission is not responsible for the content of the registration statement or for the quality of the underlying security. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Securities Act of 1933 § 17, ch. 38, 48 Stat. 74.

(n2)Footnote 2. Thomas Lee Hazen, Disparate Regulatory Schemes for Parallel Activities: Securities Regulation, Derivatives Regulation, Gambling, and Insurance. 24 Ann. Rev. Banking & Fin. L. 375, 382 (2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. U.S. Securities & Exch. Comm'n, How the SEC Protects Investors, Maintains Market Integrity, and Facilitates Capital Formation, <http://www.Securitiesgov/about/whatwedo.shtml>.

(n4)Footnote 4. Bloomenthal & Wolff, Securities and Federal Corporate Law § 1:54.

(n5)Footnote 5. Id. For tips on Drafting and Filing the Registration Statement see K&L Gates, Securities Practice Guide § 4.05 (2010 Edition)

(n6)Footnote 6. Id.

(n7)Footnote 7. Id.

* Patrick Daugherty, Yvette M. VanRiper and Peter C. Underwood. This chapter was revised and updated by Patrick Daugherty and Yvette M. VanRiper, partners at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Peter C. Underwood, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Regal-Beloitt Corporation. The authors would like to thank Stephen J. Byrnes, Jr. and Megan A. Odronic, associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Morgan J. Tilleman, Nicholas J. Fox, Christina T. Jones and Morgan J. West, summer associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, for their assistance.

21 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 1.03

§ 1.03 Overview of the Securities and Exchange Commission

[1] Structure of the Commission

The Commission was created in 1934 pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "Exchange Act" or the "1934 Act") to protect investors, promote stability in the market, and facilitate capital formation. n1 The Commission achieves this by overseeing key participants in the securities industry, requiring public disclosure of important financial information and enforcing securities laws, with the goal of achieving a more active, efficient, and transparent capital market. n2 The Commission administers seven statutes: the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, the Investment Company Act of 1940, the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 and the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002. n3

The Commission has broad authority over the securities industry n4 and has a variety of powers to ensure securities transactions are performed in fair and honest markets. n5 The Commission may register, regulate and oversee various members of the securities industry, including brokerage firms, transfer agents, clearing agencies and self regulatory organizations (SROs). n6 The Commission is also vested with the power to discipline regulated entities for a variety of prohibited behaviors. n7 Additionally, the Commission has the power to require periodic reporting of information by companies with publicly traded securities. n8

The Commission consists of five Commissioners, with an administrative structure organized into five Divisions and sixteen Offices. Additionally, there are eleven regional offices that operate primarily as extensions of the Commission's Division of Enforcement and the Commission's Office of Compliance Inspections and Examinations. n9

The five Commissioners are presidential appointees, each for a five-year term. n10 The terms are staggered, so that one expires each year on June 5. n11 No more than three of the Commissioners may belong to the same political party. n12 One Commissioner is designated as Chairman of the Commission by the President and serves as the Commission's chief executive. As the Commission's staff and responsibilities have grown in recent decades, authority and responsibility for the Commission's program has become increasingly concentrated in the Chairman and his or her staff. The Commission's primary responsibilities include interpreting federal security laws, issuing new rules and amending existing rules, overseeing the inspection of security firms, brokers, investment advisers and ratings agencies and coordinating U.S. securities regulation with federal, state and foreign authorities. n13

The Commission has five Divisions: the Division of Trading and Markets; the Division of Investment Management; the Division of Risk, Strategy and Financial Innovation; the Division of Corporation Finance and the Division of Enforcement.

The Division of Trading and Markets has the responsibility to help maintain fair, orderly and efficient securities markets by overseeing the nation's stock exchanges and other major security market participants. The Division oversees the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, carries out the Commission's financial integrity program for broker-dealers, assists the Commission in establishing rules and issuing interpretations on matters affecting the operation of the securities market, and monitors the markets. n14

The Division of Investment Management (commonly referred to as "IM") is primarily responsible for the oversight of mutual funds, professional fund managers, analysts and investment advisers. The Division also assists the Commission in interpreting laws and regulations for the public, responding to no-action requests, reviewing investment company and investment adviser filings, assisting the Commission in enforcement matters involving investment companies and advisers, and advising the Commission on adapting its rules to new circumstances. n15

The Division of Risk, Strategy, and Financial Innovation (commonly referred to as "Risk Fin") was established in September 2009 to help the Commission identify developing risks and trends in the financial markets. The Division is primarily responsible for risk and economic analysis, strategic research and financial innovation. n16 It provides cross-disciplinary support and specialized expertise to the Commission's other Divisions and acts as a "think tank" in the Commission's policy making, rule making, enforcement and examination activities.

The Division of Corporation Finance and the Division of Enforcement are the two largest Divisions within the Commission. Their responsibilities are discussed below.

The Commission has sixteen offices, including the Office of the General Counsel, the Office of the Chief Accountant, the Office of Compliance Inspections and Examinations and the Office of Investor Education and Advocacy. The General Counsel serves as the chief legal adviser to the Chair of the Commission and is responsible for establishing the Commission's policy on legal matters. When appropriate, the General Counsel also represents the Commission in civil, private, or appellate proceedings. n17

The Office of the Chief Accountant serves as the Commission's primary adviser on accounting and auditing matters. Additionally, the Office establishes accounting principles and oversees the private sector standards-setting process. n18

[2] The Work of the Commission in Relation to the 1933 Act n19

[a] The Division of Corporation Finance: Disclosure Review, Interpretations and Rulemaking

The Division of Corporation Finance (commonly referred to as "Corp Fin") oversees corporate disclosure of financial information. n20 It reviews documents such as registration statements, annual and quarterly filings, proxy materials and annual reports to determine whether and to what extent public companies are meeting their disclosure requirements. n21 Additionally, as part of its activities under the 1933 Act, the Division provides guidance to registrants, prospective registrants and the public to help them comply with the 1933 Act and relevant rules and regulations. This guidance is formally provided through no-action letters, which the Division issues to requesting companies, indicating whether it would recommend the Commission take action against the company's course of action proposed in its request for the letter. n22 This guidance might also take the form of an informal expression of opinion as to whether the offering of a particular security is subject to the registration requirements of the 1933 Act and, if so, providing advice relating to compliance with the disclosure requirements of the applicable registration form. Interpretive letters also are issued on other topics. The Division also drafts proposals for new rules, solicits comments on these drafts and recommends final rules to the Commission for adoption.

The Commission's overall objective of effective disclosure with minimum burden and expense requires the periodic review of the practical operation of the rules, registration forms and procedures that it promulgates. If a particular requirement fails to achieve its objective or if a rule appears unduly burdensome in relation to the benefits resulting from the disclosures it requires, the Division presents the issue to the Commission for possible modification of the rule or requirement. Many suggestions for rule modification follow consultation with industry representatives and others affected by the regulation. Moreover, the Commission also gives public notice of proposed rules or rule amendments and invites comments and criticism. The comments submitted are considered by the Commission in determining the nature and scope of the rules or rule changes ultimately adopted.

[b] The Division of Enforcement

[i] Investigation and Enforcement

It is the Commission's duty under the laws it administers to investigate complaints or other indications of possible violations of law in securities transactions, most of which arise under the 1933 Act and the 1934 Act. Investigation and enforcement work is primarily the responsibility of the Commission's regional offices and its Division of Enforcement. The Division reviews cases and recommends when the Commission should bring a civil action in federal court or before an administrative law judge. The Division then prosecutes these cases on behalf of the Commission. n23

Most of the Commission's investigations are conducted privately, and facts are developed through informal inquiry, interviewing of witnesses and examination of books, records, trading data and other documents. The Commission is empowered to issue subpoenas requiring sworn testimony and the production of information pertinent to the investigation. If a party refuses to respond to a subpoena, the Commission may apply to a federal court for an order compelling obedience.

Inquiries and complaints of investors and the general public provide a primary source for the detection of securities law violations. Another is the surprise inspection of books and records of regulated persons and organizations that are conducted by the regional offices of the Commission and the Division of Trading and Markets to evaluate whether their business practices conform to the prescribed rules. Still another source is the Commission's inquiries into market fluctuations in particular stocks that do not appear to result from general market trends or from known developments affecting an issuer.

The more general types of investigations concern (1) the sale of unregistered securities that are subject to the registration requirements of the 1933 Act and (2) the misrepresentation or omission of material facts concerning securities offered for sale (whether or not registration is required). With the exception of Section 17(a) under the 1933 Act, which only applies to the sale of securities, the antifraud provisions of the law apply equally to the purchase of securities, whether such a purchase involves outright misrepresentations or simply the withholding or omission of material facts that the seller of the securities has a right to know. For example, it is unlawful in certain situations to purchase securities from another person while withholding material information that would reveal that the securities have a value substantially greater than the price at which they are being acquired. These legal principles apply not only to transactions between broker-dealers and their customers but also to the reacquisition of securities by an issuer or its "insiders."

[ii] Statutory Sanctions

The Commission's investigations are essentially fact-finding inquiries. Following its investigations, the staff of the Commission (the "Staff") considers the information gathered to determine whether there is prima facie evidence of a violation of law and, if so, whether an action should be commenced to determine whether a sanction should be imposed. Assuming that the developed facts show possible fraud or other violation, the laws provide several courses of action or remedies that the Commission, upon recommendation by the Staff, may elect to pursue:

- Civil Injunction. The Commission may apply to an appropriate United States District Court for an order enjoining those acts or practices alleged to violate the law or the Commission's rules and other equitable remedies.
- Criminal Prosecution. If fraud or other willful violation is detected, the Commission may refer the facts to the Department of Justice with a recommendation for criminal prosecution of the offending persons. That Department, through its United States Attorneys (who are sometimes assisted by Commission counsel), may then present the evidence to a grand jury and seek an indictment.
- Administrative Remedy. The Commission may, after an administrative proceeding, issue orders suspending or expelling members from the national securities exchanges, or denying, suspending, or revoking the registrations of broker-dealers, censuring individuals for misconduct or barring them from employment with registered firms.

[3] Administrative Proceedings

All formal administrative proceedings before the Commission are conducted in accordance with its Rules of Practice, n24 which must conform to the Administrative Procedure Act and are therefore designed to establish procedural "due process" safeguards protecting the rights and interests of the parties to the proceedings. Among these is a requirement for reasonable advance notice of the proceeding as well as sufficient specification of the charges or issues involved so that the parties are able to adequately prepare for the proceeding. All parties, including counsel for the interested Division or Office of the Commission, may appear and present evidence and cross-examine witnesses at the hearing in much the same manner as in the trial of court actions. In addition, interested persons who are not parties may be given limited rights of participation.

Hearings are conducted before a Hearing Officer, who is normally an Administrative Law Judge appointed by the Commission. The Hearing Officer is charged with serving independently of the interested Division or Office and rules on the admissibility of evidence and on other issues arising during the course of the hearing. At the conclusion of the hearing, the parties and participants may urge, in writing, specific findings of fact and conclusions of law for adoption by the Hearing Officer. Thereupon, the Hearing Officer prepares and files an initial decision (unless waived), setting forth his or her conclusions as to the facts established by the evidence and including an order disposing of the issues involved in the proceeding. The parties may seek Commission review of the Hearing Officer's initial decision. If review is not sought and the Commission does not order review on its own motion, then the initial decision becomes final and the Hearing Officer's order becomes effective.

In the event of Commission review of the initial decision, the parties and participants may file briefs and be heard in oral argument before the Commission. On the basis of an independent review of the record, the Commission prepares and issues its own decision; the Office of Opinions and Review aids the Commission in this decisional process. The laws provide that any person or firm aggrieved by a decision or order of the Commission may seek a review by the appropriate United States Court of Appeals.

[4] Disciplinary Proceedings

Rule 102(e) of the Commission's Rules of Practice n25 is the disciplinary rule governing the conduct of persons who appear before the Commission in a representative capacity. For the most part, such persons are attorneys and accountants. Broadly speaking, paragraph (1) of the rule authorizes the Commission to temporarily or permanently suspend any person from appearing before it in a representative capacity if that person is found by the Commission "not to possess the requisite qualifications to represent others, or to be lacking in character or integrity or to have engaged in unethical or improper professional conduct." n26 Additionally, the Commission may suspend from practicing before itself any person who is found to have willfully violated, or willfully aided and abetted the violation of, any provision of the federal securities laws. n27

Rule 102(e)(2) and 102(e)(3) have automatic sanctions. Rule 102(e)(2) provides for suspension from securities practice in the event of suspension or disbarment by a federal or state court or conviction of a felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude. Rule 102(e)(3) provides for suspension if a court enters a permanent injunction of misconduct in an action brought by the Commission stemming from the violation of, or the aiding and abetting of the violation of, any provision of the federal securities laws. Moreover, partners of a suspended attorney may not permit the attorney to participate in the firm's profits from Commission business. n28

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. U.S. Securities & Exch. Comm'n, How the SEC Protects Investors, Maintains Market Integrity, and Facilitates Capital Formation, <http://www.Securitiesgov/about/whatwedo.shtml>.

(n2)Footnote 2. Id.

(n3)Footnote 3. 1 Louis Loss et al., Securities Regulation 326 (4th ed. 2006). For 70 years, the Commission also administered the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935. The Energy Policy Act of 2005 repealed this statute, effective February 8, 2006.

(n4)Footnote 4. U.S. Securities & Exch. Comm'n, supra note 1 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Loss et al., supra note 3, at 328 .

(n6)Footnote 6. U.S. Securities & Exch. Comm'n, supra note 1 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Id.

(n8)Footnote 8. Companies with over $10 million in assets whose securities are held by over 500 owners must file periodic reports. Id.

(n9)Footnote 9. Loss et al., supra note 3, at 473 .

(n10)Footnote 10. U.S. Securities & Exch. Comm'n, supra note 1 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Bloomenthal & Wolff, Securities and Federal Corporate Law § 1:111.

(n12)Footnote 12. U.S. Securities & Exch. Comm'n, supra note 1 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Id.

(n14)Footnote 14. Id.

(n15)Footnote 15. Id.

(n16)Footnote 16. Id.

(n17)Footnote 17. Id.

(n18)Footnote 18. Id.

(n19)Footnote 19. Part of the material in the remainder of this chapter has been adapted from the text of The Investor's Advocate: How the SEC Protects Investors and Maintains Market Integrity, published by the Commission. Only those portions pertaining to the Commission's activities in connection with the 1933 Act have been included. This publication, as well as much other useful information about the Commission and its activities, is available on the Commission's website, www.Securities.gov.

(n20)Footnote 20. Loss et al., supra note 3, at 467 .

(n21)Footnote 21. U.S. Securities & Exch. Comm'n, supra note 1 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Id.

(n23)Footnote 23. Id.

(n24)Footnote 24. Rules of Practice, 17 C.F.R. Part 201 (2008). In 1995, the Commission adopted comprehensive revisions to its Rules of Practice. Rules of Practice, Exchange Act Release No. 34-35833, 60 Fed. Reg. 32738, 1995 SEC LEXIS 1505 (June 9, 1995) (the "Rules Release"). The revisions were the culmination of three years of effort by the Commission's Task Force on Administrative Proceedings appointed in 1990. The Rules Release presents the text of the revised Rules of Practice, together with comments that describe the basis and rationale for each rule, reference related rules, provide pertinent information regarding Commission practice and explain changes in the adopted Rules from those that were proposed in 1993. The comments are intended to assist a practitioner in obtaining a more thorough understanding of the Commission's Rules of Practice.

(n25)Footnote 25. 17 C.F.R. § 201.102(e). No federal statute expressly grants authority to the Commission to regulate the conduct of professionals who appear before it. Rule 102(e) was adopted pursuant to Section 23(a)(1) of the 1934 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78w(a), granting the Commission "power to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary... for the execution of the functions vested in [it]..." In Schwebel v. Orrick, 153 F. Supp. 701 (D.D.C. 1957) , aff'd on other grounds, 251 F.2d 919 (D.C. Cir. 1958) , it was held that the Commission has the power under Rule 102(e) to discipline attorneys. This issue was a contentious one for decades but is now considered settled.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Paul M. Kaufman, Securities Act Release 8925, 1970 SEC LEXIS 414 (July 2, 1970) ; Emmanuel Fields, Securities Act Release 5404, 1973 SEC LEXIS 2816 (June 18, 1973) ; George Mariscal, Securities Act Release 5442, 1973 SEC LEXIS 156 (Nov. 30, 1973) . The Commission has amended Rule 102(e) to clarify the Commission's standard for determining when accountants engage in "improper professional conduct." Securities Act Release 7593, 1998 SEC LEXIS 2256 (Oct. 19, 1998) . This amendment was in response to a finding by a U.S. Court of Appeals that the Commission had not articulated clearly the improper professional conduct element of Rule 102(e). Checkosky v. SEC, 139 F.3d 221 (D.C. Cir. 1998) .

(n27)Footnote 27. 17 C.F.R. § 201.102(e)(1)(iii). In 1974, the Commission announced a proposal to amend Rule 102(e)(7) to provide that proceedings brought under Rule 102(e) be public. Securities Act Release 5477, 1974 SEC LEXIS 3344 (April 5, 1974) . The proposal was withdrawn, but in so doing the Commission stated that "it nevertheless wishes to apprise members of the profession who practice before it that the Commission is not suggesting that all disciplinary proceedings will be conducted on a private basis in the future...it believes that the provisions of existing Rule 102(e)(7) provide it with ample discretion to institute public disciplinary proceedings under Rule 102(e) when the Commission deems it to be in the public interest to do so." Securities Act Release 5572, 1975 SEC LEXIS 2117 (Mar. 5, 1975) . In what was reportedly the first Rule 102(e) proceeding ever opened to the public, the Second Circuit upheld the Commission's authority to discipline accountants under Rule 102(e) as a means of "merely attempting to preserve the integrity of its own procedures, by assuring the fitness of those professionals who represent others before the Commission." Touche Ross & Co. v. SEC, 609 F.2d 570, 579 (2d Cir. 1979) . The court also found that the rule is not inconsistent with the Commission's statutory authority since the regulation is in furtherance of a legitimate statutory purpose and was promulgated pursuant to its statutory rulemaking authority. Id. at 579-582 .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Securities Act Release 5147, 1971 SEC LEXIS 1390 (Aug. 23, 1971) .

* Patrick Daugherty, Yvette M. VanRiper and Peter C. Underwood. This chapter was revised and updated by Patrick Daugherty and Yvette M. VanRiper, partners at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Peter C. Underwood, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Regal-Beloitt Corporation. The authors would like to thank Stephen J. Byrnes, Jr. and Megan A. Odronic, associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Morgan J. Tilleman, Nicholas J. Fox, Christina T. Jones and Morgan J. West, summer associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, for their assistance.

22 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 1.04

§ 1.04 Registration of Securities

In a public offerings of securities, the 1933 Act requires full and fair disclosure of pertinent information regarding the issuer, the offered securities and the offering. Disclosure is made by means of a registration statement, which the issuer files with the Commission, and a prospectus, which is part of the registration statement and is distributed to potential purchasers of the securities.

There are two principal methods of utilizing registration statements: traditional, non-shelf registration statements; and shelf registration statements permitted by Rule 415 under the 1933 Act. n1 The latter method is, as a practical matter, generally available only to fairly large, well-established issuers that are already public companies.

[1] Non-Shelf Registration Statements

In a public offering of securities utilizing a non-shelf registration statement, including the initial public offering ("IPO") of securities by a company, the registration statement and the prospectus relate only to a specific issuance of securities and describe the terms of the particular securities being offered and the particular manner in which they will be offered to the public. The registration statement must be filed before the public offering of the securities and includes a preliminary prospectus containing that portion of the information in the registration statement considered necessary to enable an investor to evaluate the securities and to make an informed judgment whether or not to purchase them. n2 No sale of the securities may be made until the registration statement has been declared "effective" by the Commission. n3 In short, there is a "waiting period" between the time of filing and the effective date. In this connection, the 1933 Act provides for the effectiveness of registration statements on the 20th day after filing (or on the 20th day after the filing of an amendment to the registration statement) or such earlier date as the Commission may determine. n4

In practice, the length of the waiting period varies depending upon whether the registration statement is reviewed by the Commission, the issuer's ability to meet the applicable registration requirements, how quickly the issuer responds to any deficiencies noted by the Staff in comment letters, and various other factors. In many instances, particularly those involving IPOs, the waiting period will be much longer than 20 days and may be several months. But for certain short-form registration statements filed under the integrated disclosure system and not fully reviewed by the Staff, the waiting period may be only a couple of days (or less).

The Commission may examine the registration statement to determine whether it complies with the full and fair disclosure requirements of the 1933 Act. If the examination reveals material misstatements or omissions, the Commission may, after notice and opportunity for hearing, issue a "stop order" denying effectiveness to, or suspending or revoking the effectiveness of, the registration statement, thus prohibiting the sale of the issuer's securities until the registration statement is amended to correct the deficiencies. In practice, however, the Commission usually resorts to this procedure only in cases of willful concealment or misrepresentation. The usual practice is to send a comment letter to the issuer suggesting that the registration statement be amended to cure the apparent deficiencies. Upon the filing of appropriate amendments, or shortly thereafter, the registration statement will usually be made effective and the public sale of the securities can be commenced.

The Commission's examination of a prospectus, thorough as it may be, is no guarantee of the adequacy or accuracy of the information presented in the prospectus. Indeed, the 1933 Act expressly makes it unlawful to represent to investors that the Commission has approved or otherwise passed on the merit of the securities or found that disclosure was accurate or complete. n5

[2] Shelf Registration Statements

In a public offering of securities utilizing a shelf registration statement pursuant to Rule 415 under the 1933 Act, the registration statement and the "base" prospectus in the registration statement can relate to a specified amount of generic "securities" (which may include debt and equity securities and warrants for the purchase of those securities) and may describe a variety of ways in which the securities might be distributed to the public (such as through underwriters or agents or directly by the issuer).

The process for the filing, Commission review and declaration of effectiveness of a shelf registration statement are the same as for a non-shelf registration statement, as described above. Typically, however, the securities covered by a shelf registration statement are not offered for sale prior to the effectiveness of the registration statement and preliminary prospectuses are not circulated.

Once a shelf registration statement has been made effective by the Commission, the issuer may offer and sell all or any portion of the securities covered by the registration statement at any time, without further review or other action by the Commission. The issuer simply prepares and files with the Commission a supplement to the base prospectus that describes the particular terms of the specific securities being offered and the method by which the securities are being offered. The prospectus supplement (together with the base prospectus) is sent to investors with a confirmation evidencing purchase of the offered securities and must ordinarily be filed with the Commission no later than two business days after the earlier of the date the securities are first offered for sale or the date the prospectus supplement is first used. n6 By using a shelf registration statement, an issuer is essentially able to offer and sell its securities on a moment's notice and thereby take advantage of opportune market conditions.

[3] Exemptions Under the 1933 Act

The 1933 Act contains specific exemptions from registration for certain securities and transactions. Some are "true" exemptions in that they are automatic if the security or transaction complies with statutory conditions. But others, such as Regulation A, which permits certain issuers and controlling persons to make "exempt" offerings under certain conditions, require the filing of documents with, and processing by, the Commission before the securities may be sold. Furthermore, exempt securities and transactions are exempt only from the registration and prospectus requirements of the 1933 Act. The antifraud provisions of the 1933 Act are applicable to all sales of securities in interstate commerce or by use of the mails, whether or not the securities are registered with the Commission. n7

For a thorough discussion of the various exempt securities and offerings, see Chapters 3, 4, 5 and 6 infra.

[4] Causes of Action Under the 1933 Act

In addition to its antifraud provisions, n8 the 1933 Act contains penal sanctions for false and misleading statements in the registration statement and prospectus. n9 Furthermore, investors who suffer losses in the purchase of securities have recovery rights under the 1933 Act if the disclosures contained in the registration statement or prospectus are incomplete, false, or misleading. n10 Equally important, recovery rights exist in the event of nondisclosure or misrepresentation in the sale of even "unregistered" securities when the mails or facilities of interstate commerce are used to effect the transaction. n11 Finally, liability exists if securities that must be registered are sold without registration and the provisions with regard to the delivery of prospectuses are not followed. n12

[5] Securities Offering Reform of 2005

[a] Background: National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996

Previously under the 1933 Act and 1934 Act, the Commission generally had limited authority to adopt rules exempting transactions and issuers from specific requirements of the Acts. n13 This changed dramatically with Congress' adoption of the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 ("NSMIA"). n14 With the passage of the NSMIA, the Commission became empowered to exempt issuers, securities and transactions from provisions of the 1933 Act and the 1934 Act by rulemaking for purposes of not only protecting investors, but also for promoting efficiency, competition, and capital formation. n15 Thus, the Commission now had the authority to undertake fundamental reforms of the securities offering process.

In 2005, the Commission used its expanded rulemaking power by adopting fundamental reforms of the rules governing the communications and offering processes for securities offerings registered under the 1933 Act. The new rules adopted by the Commission are commonly known as the Securities Offering Reform rules. The Securities Offering Reform rules impact registration and other procedures in offering and capital formation processes, communications related to registered securities offerings and delivery of information to investors and timeliness of that delivery. n16

[b] General Framework

The Securities Offering Reform rules were meant to bring the regulatory regime governing registered securities offerings into line with modern market needs and capabilities by adapting to recent advances in technology, facilitating timely disclosure to investors of issuer information and developments and reducing needless regulatory hurdles to issuers' access to the public market.

[c] Categories of Issuers

The Commission used a tiered approach to classify issuers and the commensurate benefits they receive under the Securities Offering Reform rules. The categories of issuers are:

- (1) Well-Known Seasoned Issuer ("WKSI")--A WKSI has the greatest freedom to take advantage of the Securities Offering Reform rules benefits. Generally, an issuer is a well-known seasoned issuer if it qualifies to use a Form S-3 registration statement n17 and it has a worldwide public float of at least $700 million in common equity. n18
- (2) Seasoned Issuer--Generally, an issuer qualifies as a seasoned issuer if it qualifies to register securities on Form S-3. n19
- (3) Unseasoned Issuer--Generally, an issuer is an unseasoned issuer if it is required to file reports under the 1934 Act but it is not eligible to use Form S-3. n20
- (4) Non-Reporting Issuer--An issuer is a non-reporting issuer if it is not required to file reports under the

1934 Act. n21

(5) Ineligible Issuer--Generally, an issuer is an ineligible issuer if: (a) it was not current in filing reports under the 1934 Act during the prior 12 months, excluding certain current reports on Form 8-K; (b) it was a blank check company, shell company, or issuer for an offering of "penny stock" during the prior three years; (c) it has filed for bankruptcy or insolvency during the past three years; or (d) it has been convicted of certain felonies or misdemeanors or has been found to have violated the antifraud provisions of the 1933 Act. n22

[d] Communications Reforms

Under the Securities Offering Reform rules, the Commission relaxed restrictions on the types of offering communications that can be used in connection with a registered securities offering. Previously, permissible communications made to investors in connection with a registered securities offering were severely limited. Under Section 5 of the 1933 Act, an issuer was prohibited from making any communications that constituted "offers" prior to the filing of a registration statement. During the period between the filing of a registration statement and the time it became effective, known as the "waiting period," the issuer could make written offers only through a "statutory prospectus" meeting the requirements of Section 10 of the 1933 Act (although issuers were able to freely communicate with investors through oral communications, such as by telephone or an in-person meeting). n23 Moreover, even when a registration statement became effective, the issuer could still make offers to investors only through the final statutory prospectus, or through additional written materials, so long as a final statutory prospectus had previously been sent to the investors. n24 These restrictions on offering communications are commonly known as "gun-jumping provisions."

The practical effect of the gun-jumping provisions was that issuers could not actively and periodically communicate with potential investors while a registered securities offering was in process. As a result, investors often did not receive timely information regarding the securities offering or developments relating to the issuer undertaking a securities offering. A regulatory regime founded on the principle of full disclosure was actually impeding disclosure. The Commission recognized the burdens on the effective use of communications between issuers and investors caused by the gun-jumping provisions. n25 In response, the Commission implemented a series of reforms under the Securities Offering Reform rules.

[i] The New Communications Scheme

The Securities Offering Reform rules include communications rules designed to meet the market's need for ongoing information from issuers while easing the restrictions on the ability of issuers and offering participants to make written offers outside of the statutory prospectus.

The communication framework permits the following communications:

- (1) regularly released factual business information and forward-looking information; n26
- (2) communications made more than 30 days before filing a registration statement; n27
- (3) communications by WKSIs at any time prior to filing a registration statement; n28
- (4) written communications made in accordance with an expanded safe harbor (Rule 134) under the 1933 Act; and n29
- (5) written communications (other than a statutory prospectus) by an eligible issuer after filing a registration statement. n30

[iii] Regularly Released Information

The Securities Offering Reform rules provided two safe harbors from the gun-jumping provisions of the 1933 Act to exempt and permit continuing ongoing business communications by issuers. First, issuers filing reports under the 1934 Act ("reporting issuers") are permitted to continue publishing and disseminating communications containing regularly released factual business and forward-looking information at any time, including during the time of a registered securities offering. n31 "Factual business information" includes factual information about an issuer, its business or financial or other aspects of its business, advertisements or information about its products or services, and dividend notices. n32 "Forward-looking information" includes projections of an issuer's financial performance, statements about the issuer's management's plans and objectives for future operations, statements about the issuer's future economic performance and those assumptions underlying the assessments of the issuer's future performance. n33 Second, non-reporting issuers may continue publishing and disseminating regularly released business information intended for use by persons that are not acting as potential investors. n34

[iii] Communications More Than 30 Days Prior to Filing a Registration Statement

The Commission also provided a broad safe harbor for communications by all issuers that are made more than 30 days prior to the filing of a registration statement. n35 Issuers may communicate freely without risk of violating the gun-jumping provisions so long as: (1) the communications do not refer to the issuer's securities offering that "is or will be the subject of a registration statement"; (2) the communication is made by the issuer or by representatives or agents other than underwriters or other offering participants; and (3) the issuer takes reasonable steps to prevent further publication of the communication during the 30 days preceding the actual filing of its registration statement. The 30-day bright-line exemption allows freer communication by issuers with investors, but still limits pre-filing communications by prohibiting any references to a registered securities offering that the issuer will undertake.

[iv] Communications by WKSIs

The Commission also provided a safe harbor for all pre-filing communications by WKSIs. Under this exemption, a WKSI or its agents or employees, other than underwriters or offering participants, may make unrestricted written or oral offers at any time before the filing of a registration statement without violating the gun-jumping provisions. n36 If the communications made under this exemption are offers, they must contain a legend as prescribed by the Commission. In certain circumstances, the communication must also be filed with the Commission.

[v] "Tombstone" Advertisements Under Rule 134

Previously under Rule 134 of the 1933 Act, issuers and offering participants such as underwriters were permitted to provide very limited public notices about a registered offering (commonly referred to as "tombstone" advertisements) after the issuer had filed a registration statement including a preliminary statutory prospectus. The Securities Offering Reform rules expanded the type of information that may be included in a Rule 134 notice. These notices may now include: additional information about the issuer and its business; more detailed information about the terms of the securities being offered; more information about the offering; more information on the participation of the issuer's officers, directors, and employees in the offering; and disclosure of any security rating expected to be assigned to the offering. n37

A Rule 134 notice still may not be used to provide detailed descriptions of the terms of the offered securities. This information may instead be disclosed in a new type of authorized communication, the free writing prospectus.

[vi] The Free Writing Prospectus

As previously explained, the gun-jumping provisions of Section 5 of the 1933 Act generally permitted issuers to make written offers only through a statutory prospectus following the filing of a registration statement. Further, once the registration statement became effective, written offers other than a statutory prospectus could only be made to investors if a statutory prospectus had been delivered to investors. Under the Securities Offering Reform rules, the Commission authorized a much wider array of written offers outside the statutory prospectus, which are referred to as "free writing prospectuses." n38 A free writing prospectus may include information about a registered securities offering that is in addition to, supplements, or is different from the information contained in the statutory prospectus filed with the registration statement, as long as the information does not conflict with the information in the prospectus. n39

Any eligible issuer may use a free writing prospectus to make offers to potential investors following the filing of a registration statement without violating the gun-jumping provisions of the 1933 Act. In addition, other offering participants such as underwriters and broker-dealers may use free writing prospectuses to make offers to investors.

Unseasoned issuers and non-reporting issuers can use free writing prospectuses only if a registration statement including a statutory prospectus has been filed and the most recently filed statutory prospectus is delivered prior to or concurrently with the free writing prospectus. n40 For WKSIs and seasoned issuers, a free writing prospectus may be delivered after the issuer files a registration statement containing a statutory prospectus; the issuer is not required to make actual delivery of the statutory prospectus. The free writing prospectus must include a specified legend and is generally filed with the Commission, subject to certain exceptions. n41

[vii] Road Shows

Historically, electronic road shows were regarded by the Commission as impermissible written offers that were not lawful statutory prospectuses. The Commission began permitting electronic road shows under limited circumstances in 1997 pursuant to a series of no-action letters. The Commission's embrace of information technology continued in its Securities Offering Reform rulemaking.

Due to advances in electronic media, the Commission concluded in the Securities Offering Reform rules that electronic road shows that are not presented live, in real time, to a live audience, and are transmitted graphically, are "written communications" that are free writing prospectuses. n42 Accordingly, they must generally satisfy the conditions applicable to free writing prospectuses under Rule 433. The new rules ease the Commission's previous restrictions on use of electronic road shows as there are now no limitations on the road show audience, the road show need not be a re-transmission of a live presentation, reviewers can obtain a copy of, and may download, the road show, and multiple versions of a road show may be presented.

[viii] Communications on Web Sites

Under the Securities Offering Reform rules, offers of securities featured on the issuer's website, or featured on a third party's website that may be linked through the issuer's website, are considered written offers and, as a result, are deemed to be free writing prospectuses that must satisfy the conditions of Rule 433 of the 1933 Act. n43 Thus, issuers must be careful in assuring that any offers of securities featured on their websites, or on linked third-party websites, satisfy the requirements of a free writing prospectus so that no violation of the gun-jumping provisions occurs.

[ix] Media Publications and Broadcasts

Along with the use of Internet and electronic media, issuers use traditional broadcast and other media to provide information about their registered securities offerings. In adopting the Securities Offering Reform rules, the Commission recognized the role that the financial news media plays in reporting on issuers and their securities offerings and gave special consideration to independent media publications or broadcasts about issuers. n44 Generally, in determining whether media broadcasts about an issuer or its offering are considered offers of securities by the issuer, the Commission focuses on whether the issuer or another offering participant prepares or pays for the media broadcast or publication, or whether an unaffiliated media outlet prepares and distributes the media broadcast or publication. n45

When a media publication is prepared or paid for by an issuer or an offering participant, it is considered an offer under the 1933 Act and a free writing prospectus. As a result, the issuer must comply with all the delivery, informational content and other conditions that apply to free writing prospectuses. n46 The rules are different when a media publication is prepared and published or broadcast by unaffiliated media outlets. First, while a registration statement must be on file for issuers (other than WKSIs), an independent media publication about an offering need not be preceded or accompanied by a statutory prospectus. Second, an issuer has flexibility in satisfying the filing condition for independent media publications. n47 Finally, independent media outlets are not required to file any media publications or broadcasts that they prepare about an issuer and its registered securities offering. n48

[x] Expanded Use of Research Reports

The use of research reports in connection with registered securities offerings was also liberalized under the Securities Offering Reform rules. Generally, research reports are subject to separate safe harbors that exempt them from treatment as offers of securities that may violate the gun-jumping provisions, depending on the time of publication. n49 Under the Securities Offering Reform rules, the Commission adopted a uniform definition of what constitutes a "research report"; namely, a written communication "that includes information, opinions, or recommendations with respect to securities of an issuer or an analysis of a security or an issuer, whether or not it provides information reasonably sufficient upon which to base an investment decision." n50

In the Securities Offering Reform rules, the Commission expanded the research report safe harbors to permit brokers or dealers that are not offering participants to publish research reports on a non-reporting issuer's securities (previously, the only reports that could be published were those regarding reporting issuers) n51 and to allow publication of research reports on a broader class of issuers by brokers and dealers that participate in a distribution of securities. n52

The increased scope of permissible research reports provides potential investors with more diverse resources for gathering information relevant to weighing the merits of an investment in an issuer's securities offering. Further, the adoption of a uniform definition of "research report" brings certainty to brokers and dealers about the information they can publish about issuers and their securities when involved in a distribution of a particular issuer's securities.

[6] Registration Reforms

Under the Securities Offering Reform rules, the Commission adopted important changes that modernize the shelf registration process. Most significantly, the rules eliminated restrictions affecting "at-the-market offerings," immediate takedowns from shelf registration statements and the volume of securities that can be registered for the shelf. n53

[a] Shelf Registration Reforms

As previously discussed, n54 issuers may register securities for offering and sale on an extended or delayed basis through use of a shelf registration statement pursuant to Rule 415 of the 1933 Act. n55 Previously, the volume of securities that could be registered for the shelf was limited to the volume reasonably expected to be offered and sold within two years from the effective date of the registration statement. n56 The Securities Offering Reform rules removed this limitation. n57 Nevertheless, the shelf registration statements used for these offerings may now be used for only three years from the initial effective date. n58 Thus, issuers must file new shelf registration statements every three years if they wish to continuously sell registered securities.

The Securities Offering Reform rules also removed restrictions on "at-the-market" offerings that required an underwriter's involvement and limited the volume of securities that could be registered. An "at-the-market" offering is an offering of securities into an existing trading market other than at a fixed price. Issuers registering certain primary equity shelf offerings can now register at-the-market offerings without identifying any underwriters or limiting the size of the offering. n59

[b] Automatic Shelf Registration for WKSIs

One of the more significant changes brought about by the Securities Offering Reform rules was the establishment of "automatic shelf registrations" for WKSIs. WKSIs were singled out for this favorable treatment because they are established companies with reporting histories under the 1934 Act and significant market followings. n60

Under the automatic shelf registration process, all automatic shelf registration statements and post-effective amendments are not subject to staff review and become effective immediately upon filing with the Commission. n61 Using an automatic shelf registration statement, WKSIs may register unspecified amounts of different classes of securities and can add new classes of securities by post-effective amendments that are immediately effective upon filing. n62 Automatic shelf registration statements may be used for up to three years. n63

With these reforms, the automatic shelf registration process permits WKSIs to gain immediate market access, raising more money on better terms than would otherwise be the case. n64

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Rule 415 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.415. The Rules under the 1933 Act are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C. See infra Ch. 7 for discussion of registration forms.

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 5(c) of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77e(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Section 5(a) of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77e(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. In the language of Section 8(a) of the 1933 Act, "such earlier date as the Commission may determine, having due regard to the adequacy of information respecting the issuer theretofore available to the public, to the facility with which the nature of the securities to be registered, their relationship to the capital structure of the issuer and the rights of the holders thereof can be understood, and to the public interest and the protection of investors." 15 U.S.C. § 77h(a). See Rule 461 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.461.

(n5)Footnote 5. Section 23 of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77w.

(n6)Footnote 6. Rule 424(b) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.424(b). Note that there are limitations on the types of offerings that can be shelf-registered. See 7A.05 infra for a discussion of shelf registration.

(n7)Footnote 7. Section 17 of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77a.

(n8)Footnote 8. Id.

(n9)Footnote 9. Sections 20 and 24 of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 77t, x.

(n10)Footnote 10. Section 12 of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77l.

(n11)Footnote 11. Sections 12 and 17 of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 77l, q.

(n12)Footnote 12. Section 12 of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77l.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Linda C. Quinn, The SEC's "Aircraft Carrier" Release--A New Registration System: An Assessment Retrenchment and Reform, in Securities Offerings 1999: What Issuers' & Underwriters' Counsel Need to Know, 1110 P.L.I. Corp. 93, 96 (1999) ("Prior to its being given broad exemptive authority under the Securities Act of 1933 by the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 (NSMIA), the Commission had to resort to its definitional powers to provide safe harbors for various communications that might otherwise run afoul of Section 5 [of the Securities Act].")

(n14)Footnote 14. National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (codified in scattered sections of 15 U.S.C.).

(n15)Footnote 15. Alan R. Parmiter, Toward Disclosure Choice in Securities Offerings, 1999 Col. Bus. L.R. 1, 89-90 (citing H.R. Rep. No. 104-622, at 101-02 (1996)).

(n16)Footnote 16. Securities Offering Reform, Securities Act Release No. 33-8591; Exchange Act Release No. 34-52056, 70 Fed. Reg. 44,722 (July 19, 2005) , available at <http://www.Securitiesgov/rules/final/33-8591.pdf> [hereinafter Securities Offering Reform Release].

(n17)Footnote 17. An issuer qualifies to use Form S-3 if it has registered securities under the 1934 Act or is required to file reports under the 1934 Acts and has timely filed such reports in the previous 12 months. See General Instructions I.A.2 and 3(a) and (b) to Form S-3.

(n18)Footnote 18. Rule 405 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.405.

(n19)Footnote 19. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,730 ; Rule 433(b)(1) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.433(b)(1).

(n20)Footnote 20. Securities Offering Reform Release at 44,731

(n21)Footnote 21. Id.

(n22)Footnote 22. Rule 405 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.405.

(n23)Footnote 23. See 15 U.S.C. § 77e(b).

(n24)Footnote 24. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,731 .

(n25)Footnote 25. See id.

(n26)Footnote 26. Rule 168 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.168.

(n27)Footnote 27. Rule 163A of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.163A.

(n28)Footnote 28. Rule 163 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.163.

(n29)Footnote 29. Rule 134 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.134.

(n30)Footnote 30. Rule 433 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.433.

(n31)Footnote 31. Rule 168(a) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.168(a).

(n32)Footnote 32. Rule 168(b)(1) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.168(b)(1).

(n33)Footnote 33. Rule 168(b)(2) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.168(b)(2).

(n34)Footnote 34. Rule 169 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.169.

(n35)Footnote 35. Rule 163A of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.163A.

(n36)Footnote 36. Rule 163 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.163.

(n37)Footnote 37. Id.

(n38)Footnote 38. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,746 .

(n39)Footnote 39. Rule 433(c) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.433(c).

(n40)Footnote 40. Rule 433(b)(2) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.433(b)(2).

(n41)Footnote 41. Rules 164 and 433(b)(1) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. §§ 230.164, 230.433(b)(1).

(n42)Footnote 42. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,753-4 .

(n43)Footnote 43. Rule 433(e) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.433(e).

(n44)Footnote 44. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,757 .

(n45)Footnote 45. Id.

(n46)Footnote 46. Rule 433 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.433.

(n47)Footnote 47. Rule 433(f) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.433(f).

(n48)Footnote 48. Id.

(n49)Footnote 49. Rules 137-39 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. §§ 230.137-139

(n50)Footnote 50. Id.

(n51)Footnote 51. Id.

(n52)Footnote 52. Rule 138 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.138.

(n53)Footnote 53. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,770 .Additionally, the Securities Offering Reform rules clarified information that may be included in or omitted from shelf registration statements and spelled out the manner for including information in the final statutory prospectus.

(n54)Footnote 54. See supra § 1.04[2].

(n55)Footnote 55. Rule 415 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.415.

(n56)Footnote 56. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,774 .

(n57)Footnote 57. Rule 415 of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.415.

(n58)Footnote 58. Id.

(n59)Footnote 59. Securities Offering Reform Release, 70 Fed. Reg. at 44,770 .

(n60)Footnote 60. Id. at 44,774 .

(n61)Footnote 61. Rule 462(e) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.462(e).

(n62)Footnote 62. Id.

(n63)Footnote 63. Rule 415(a)(5) of the 1933 Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.415(a)(5).

(n64)Footnote 64. Securities Offering Reform Release, 709 Fed. Reg. at 44,777 .

* Patrick Daugherty, Yvette M. VanRiper and Peter C. Underwood. This chapter was revised and updated by Patrick Daugherty and Yvette M. VanRiper, partners at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Peter C. Underwood, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Regal-Beloitt Corporation. The authors would like to thank Stephen J. Byrnes, Jr. and Megan A. Odronic, associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Morgan J. Tilleman, Nicholas J. Fox, Christina T. Jones and Morgan J. West, summer associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, for their assistance.

23 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 1.05

§ 1.05 The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002

[1] The Need for Reform

In late 2001, Enron Corporation, which was one of the largest U.S. companies, collapsed into bankruptcy amid allegations of fraud and improper accounting. n1 Following the collapse of Enron, accounting scandals and other types of corporate misbehavior at several other large companies came to light. In response to the public outcry over these improprieties and in an effort to restore investor confidence in the public equity market, Congress enacted the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 (the "Sarbanes-Oxley Act"). n2 The Sarbanes-Oxley Act was the most comprehensive legislation in the field of corporate governance in U.S. history. Its sweeping package of reforms was intended to remedy many of the accounting, disclosure, mismanagement and self-dealing issues that commanded headlines following the Enron debacle. Because of Congress' desire to respond quickly to these problems, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act was approved with little debate. n3 As a result, many of its provisions required SEC rulemaking (or clarification) for effective implementation.

The enactment of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act significantly changed U.S. securities laws and regulations. These changes were intended to improve the quality of corporate disclosure and accelerate the flow of public information to investors. As summarized below, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act contained provisions designed to create a "culture of oversight and compliance" by instilling greater corporate responsibility among senior management of public companies, enhancing disclosure made by issuers in the reports they file under the 1934 Act, improving auditor independence, introducing regulatory oversight of the auditing profession and remedying perceived conflicts of interest of equity analysts. The Sarbanes-Oxley Act also substantially increased the penalties and other sanctions associated with corporate and criminal fraud and white-collar crimes. Changes in the rules and regulations affecting these areas are discussed below.

[2] Internal Control and Disclosure Controls

Since 1977, U.S. securities laws have required public companies to maintain a system of internal control relative to accounting and financial reporting. The Sarbanes-Oxley Act elaborated on what controls are specifically required and mandated that independent auditors issue an audit report on internal control in conjunction with the annual audit of an issuer's financial statements.

Responding to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, the Commission adopted the term "internal control over financial reporting," stating that its purpose is to provide "reasonable assurance regarding the reliability of financial reporting and the preparation of financial statements for external purposes in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles." n4 The process of internal control over financial reporting must address three elements: (1) the maintenance of records that accurately, fairly and in reasonable detail reflect transactions; (2) reasonable assurance that transactions are properly recorded; and (3) reasonable assurance regarding prevention or detection of unauthorized acquisition, use or disposition of the company's assets.

Each issuer must include an internal control report of management in its annual report as well as an audit report on internal control by its independent auditor. n5 Further, the CEO and CFO must each acknowledge management's responsibility to establish and maintain adequate internal control over financial reporting. n6 Management's report must describe its conclusions about the effectiveness of the company's internal control over financial reporting based on its evaluation of those controls as of the end of the company's most recent fiscal year. n7 The report must also disclose any "material weakness" in internal control and cannot conclude that internal control is "effective" if there is any material weakness. n8

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act also requires periodic disclosure of conclusions of the issuer's principal executive officer and principal financial officer about the effectiveness of the issuer's disclosure controls and procedures based on their evaluation of these controls and procedures, as well as the occurrence of significant changes in the issuer's internal controls or in other factors that could significantly affect its controls. n9

[3] CEO/CFO Certifications and Corporate Responsibility

In addition to the certifications described above, CEOs and CFOs of public companies are required to certify that each periodic report containing financial statements filed with the Commission fully complies with the reporting requirements of the 1934 Act and that the report fairly presents the financial condition and results of operations of the company. n10

Loans by public companies to directors and executive officers are prohibited, subject to limited exceptions. n11

If a public company makes an accounting restatement due to misconduct, its CEO and CFO are required to reimburse the company for their bonuses and other incentive-based or equity-based compensation received from the company in the one-year period after the error, as well as any profits from sales of the company's securities during that period. n12

The Commission can prohibit any person who has violated the antifraud provisions contained in Section 10(b) of the 1934 Act or Section 17(a)(1) of the 1933 Act from acting as an officer or director of a public company, if the conduct of that person demonstrates "unfitness" to serve in those roles. n13

Directors and executive officers of an issuer are prohibited from trading equity securities of the issuer during pension plan blackout periods. n14

[4] Enhanced Disclosure

The SEC is required to review, at least once every three years, the annual reports and other periodic reports of public companies. n15

Directors, officers and persons owning 10% or more of any class of registered equity securities of a public company must report changes in their ownership of the company's equity securities, in each case before the end of the second business day after the occurrence of the change. n16

Issuers are prohibited from making public any financial measure that is not calculated in accordance with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP") and that contains an untrue statement of material fact or omits to state a material fact necessary to make the information not misleading. If an issuer publicly discloses any material information that includes a non-GAAP financial measure, the issuer must also reconcile the differences between the non-GAAP financial measure and the comparable GAAP measure. n17

Issuers must disclose material correcting adjustments and off-balance sheet transactions. n18

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act effectively requires public companies to adopt codes of ethics for senior financial officers by mandating disclosure of whether or not the issuer has adopted a code of ethics covering these persons and, if not, explaining why not. n19

Issuers must make "real time" disclosure of material changes in financial condition or operations. n20

Each issuer must disclose whether its audit committee has at least one member who is a "financial expert" and, if not, an explanation of why it has no financial expert on its audit committee. n21

[5] Audit Committees and Auditor Independence

An issuer's independent auditor must communicate certain information to the issuer's Audit Committee before filing its audit report with the Commission, including a description of critical accounting policies and practices being used and alternative accounting treatments within GAAP relating to material items that have been discussed with management.

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act limited the scope of non-audit and consulting services that accounting firms can perform for their public company audit clients. n22 The audit committee of a public company must pre-approve all non-audit services performed by the company's auditors. n23

All audit committee members of companies with shares listed on a national securities exchange are required to be independent, and all authority regarding audit-related matters must be vested in the audit committee. n24 Further, companies must disclose in their annual reports whether or not the board has determined if the company has at least one "audit committee financial expert" serving on its audit committee and, if there is no such expert, why not. n25

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act prohibits any improper influence over the audit process, including bribery, providing the auditor a misleading legal analysis, threatening to cancel existing non-audit engagements, blackmail and physical threats and seeking removal of an audit partner who objects to the issuer's accounting. n26

[6] Listing Standards

The New York Stock Exchange and the Nasdaq Stock Market adopted numerous changes to the corporate governance listing standards that must be continuously satisfied by their respective listed companies, as required by the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. These included changes regarding director independence, the composition of and procedures followed by audit committees, compensation committees and nominating or governance committees, codes of conduct, meetings of independent directors and shareholder approval of equity compensation plans, among other topics. In general, the New York Stock Exchange listing standards are somewhat more demanding relative to corporate governance than the Nasdaq Stock Market standards.

[7] Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act established the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("PCAOB") and subjects public accounting firms and accounting professionals to significant supervision by the PCAOB. n27 The PCAOB itself is subject to SEC supervision and functions as a self-regulating body. n28 The PCAOB has adopted auditing, quality control, ethics and independence standards for registered public accounting firms to use in performing audits of public companies. n29 Additionally, the PCAOB conducts periodic inspections of registered public accounting firms and has the authority to conduct investigations and disciplinary proceedings. n30

The constitutionality of the PCAOB was considered by the Supreme Court in 2010. n31 The Court held that the Sarbanes-Oxley Act's "dual for-cause" limitation n32 violated the separation of powers because it prevented the President from removing PCAOB members and restricted the President's ability to oversee the decision to remove members. n33 Nevertheless, the Supreme Court also held that these limitations were severable from the remainder of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. n34 After giving effect to the Court's severance of the unconstitutional provisions, the Commission has the right to remove members of the PCAOB at will. Accordingly, the Commission is accountable for the PCAOB's actions, and, in turn, the PCAOB is subject to Presidential control through the President's oversight of the Commission's actions. n35

[8] Enforcement and Criminal Sanctions

The Commission's enforcement authority was expanded through the adoption as law of Rule 102(e) of the Commission's Rules of Practice. n36

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act established new criminal offenses, including for securities fraud, tampering with and destruction of records and conspiracy, and increased criminal penalties under certain existing statutes. n37

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Smith, Enron Files for Chapter 11 Bankruptcy, Sues Dynergy, Wall Street Journal, Dec. 3, 2001, at A3; Emshwiller and Smith, Corporate Veil: Behind Enron's Fall, A Culture of Operating Outside Public's View, Wall Street Journal, Dec. 5, 2001, at A1.

(n2)Footnote 2. Pub. L. No. 107-204, 116 Stat. 745.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Investor Self-Protection, The Economist, November 30, 2002; Bourge, "Analysts Say New Accounting Act Inadequate", United Press International, October 31, 2002.

(n4)Footnote 4. Securities Act Release No. 33-8238, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47936, 2003 SEC LEXIS 1380 (June 5, 2003) ; Rules 13a-14(d) and 15d-14(d) of the 1934 Act, 17 C.F.R. §§ 240.13a14(d), .15d14(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. Item 9A of Form 10-K; Item 308 of Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.308.

(n6)Footnote 6. Id.

(n7)Footnote 7. Id.

(n8)Footnote 8. Id.

(n9)Footnote 9. The concept of "disclosure controls and procedures" is broader than the concept of "internal control over financial reporting." Disclosure controls and procedures refers to controls and procedures designed to assure that information required to be disclosed by an issuer in the reports that it files under the 1934 Act is accumulated and communicated to the issuer's managers so as to facilitate timely decisions regarding disclosure of the information. See Section 302 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act; Item 9A of Form 10-K; Item 4 of Form 10-Q; Item 307 of Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.307.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Section 906 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act; 18 U.S.C. § 1350.

(n11)Footnote 11. Section 402 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act provides, in part, that "It shall be unlawful for any issuer ... , directly or indirectly, including through any subsidiary, to extend or maintain credit, to arrange for the extension of credit, or to renew an extension of credit, in the form of a personal loan to or for any director or executive officer (or equivalent thereof) of that issuer." See 15 U.S.C. § 78m(k).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Section 304 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Section 305 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act; Section 21(d)(2) of the 1934 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78n(d)(2); Section 20(e) of the 1933 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 771(e). Previously, the Commission had to seek an order from a court to ban an individual from service as a director or officer. Section 1105 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act authorizes the Commission to issue such an order through an administrative proceeding without judicial involvement. See Section 21C of the 1934 Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78u-3(f).

(n14)Footnote 14. Section 306(a) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act is a restriction of insider trading by any director or executive officer during a pension plan blackout period that prevents plan participants and beneficiaries from engaging in transactions involving issuer equity securities held in their plan accounts, if the director or executive officer acquires the equity security in connection with his or her service or employment as a director or executive officer. See Exchange Act Release No. 34-47225, 68 Fed. Reg. 4337 (Jan. 22, 2003) (adopting Regulation BTR, which clarifies the application and prevents the evasion of Section 306(a) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act). See Regulation BTR, 17 C.F.R. §§ 245.100-104.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Section 408 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. In scheduling the order and timing of reviews, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act directs the Commission to consider specific criteria, including issuers with material financial statement restatements, significant stock price volatility and the largest market capitalizations and emerging companies with disparities in price to earnings ratios.

(n16)Footnote 16. Section 403 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act amended Section 16(a) of the 1934 Act to provide that officers and directors of a company with equity securities registered pursuant to Section 12 of the 1934 Act and "beneficial owners" of 10% or more of any class of those equity securities (other than exempt securities) must file with the Commission (and any applicable exchange) a statement before the end of the second business day following the day on which the reportable transaction is executed, except for cases in which the Commission determines that this reporting deadline is not feasible. Exchange Act Release No. 34-46421, 67 Fed. Reg. 56462 (August 21, 2002) implemented the accelerated two-business-day filing deadline for Form 4 effected by Section 403 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act and established a slightly later filing deadline for certain transactions for which the Commission determined that the statutory period is not feasible. See also Securities Act Release No. 33-8230, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47809, 2003 SEC LEXIS 1095 (May 7, 2003) (requiring the electronic filing, and website posting by issuers with corporate websites, of beneficial ownership reports filed by officers, directors and principal security holders under Section 16(a) of the 1934 Act).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Section 401(b) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act (directing the Commission to issue rules requiring that any public disclosure or release of "pro forma financial information" by a public company be presented in a manner that (i) does not contain an untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the "pro forma financial information," in light of the circumstances under which it is presented, not misleading; and (ii) reconciles the "pro forma financial information" presented with the financial condition and results of operations of the company under GAAP). See Securities Act Release No. 33-8176, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47226, 2003 SEC LEXIS 193 (January 22, 2003) (adopting rules to address the disclosure of certain financial information that is calculated and presented on the basis of methodologies other than in accordance with GAAP, including the adoption of a new disclosure regulation, Regulation G, which will require public companies to disclose or release such non-GAAP financial measures to include a presentation of and a reconciliation to the most directly comparable GAAP financial measure); 17 C.F.R. § 244.100-102.

(n18)Footnote 18. Section 401(a) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act requires each annual and quarterly report filed with the Commission to disclose "all material off-balance sheet transactions, arrangements, obligations (including contingent obligations), and other relationships of the issuer with unconsolidated entities or other persons, that may have a material current or future effect on financial condition, changes in financial condition, results of operations, liquidity, capital expenditures, capital resources, or significant components of revenues or expenses. See Securities Act Release No. 33-8182, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47264, 68 Fed. Reg. 5982 (January 28, 2003) (requiring a registrant to provide an explanation of its off-balance sheet arrangements in a separately captioned subsection of the "Management's Discussion and Analysis" section in its disclosure documents). See Item 303 of Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.303(a)(4).

(n19)Footnote 19. Section 406 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act required the Commission to issue rules requiring each issuer to disclose whether or not it has adopted a code of ethics for senior financial officers and, if not, the reason for not doing so. See Securities Act Release No. 33-8177, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47235, 68 Fed. Reg. 5100 (January 23, 2003) (adopting rules requiring disclosure in annual reports of whether the company has a code of ethics for its principal executive officer, principal financial officer, principal accounting officer or controller, or persons performing similar functions and requiring speedy disclosure of any changes to, or waivers from, the code for the specified senior officers). See Item 406 of Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.406.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Section 409 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. See also Securities Act Release No. 33-8400, Exchange Act Release No. 34-49424, 69 Fed. Reg. 15594 (March 16, 2004) (adopting rules expanding the number of reportable items under Form 8-K in response to the "real time issuer mandate" in Section 409).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Securities Act Release No. 33-8177, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47235, 68 Fed. Reg. 5100 (January 23, 2003) (adopting rules requiring disclosure in annual reports with respect to financial experts); Item 407 of Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.407(d)(5).

(n22)Footnote 22. Section 201 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act limits the scope of non-audit and consulting services that accounting firms can perform for their public audit clients. Prohibited services include, among others, bookkeeping, financial information systems design, appraisal, investment adviser services and legal services and expert services unrelated to the audit. See generally Securities Act Release No. 33-8183, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47265, 68 Fed. Reg. 6005 (January 28, 2003) (adopting rules pursuant to Title II of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act strengthening auditor independence and requiring additional disclosures to investors about the services provided to issuers by the independent accountant) and Section 10A(g)-(l) of the 1934 Act.

(n23)Footnote 23. Section 202 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act also requires (apart from specified de minimus exceptions) the audit committee of a public company to pre-approve all audit and non-audit services performed by the company's auditors. See Sections 10A(h) and (i) of the 1934 Act.

(n24)Footnote 24. Section 301 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act required the Commission to adopt rules having the effect of prohibiting any issuer from having its securities listed on any national securities exchange if that issuer is not in compliance with requirements set forth in the Sarbanes-Oxley Act relating to independent audit committees. One of these requirements is that audit committees must be comprised solely of independent board members. The Sarbanes-Oxley Act defines an "independent" director for this purpose as one who, except in his or her capacity as a member of the audit committee, another board committee or the board, (i) does not accept any consulting, advisory or other compensation from the issuer and (ii) is not an affiliated person of the issuer or its subsidiaries. See Securities Act Release No. 33-8220, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47654, 68 Fed. Reg. 18788 (April 9, 2003) (adopting Rule 10A-3 under the 1934 Act implementing requirements for standards relating to listed company audit committees).

(n25)Footnote 25. Securities Act Release No. 33-8177, Exchange Act Release No. 34-47235, 68 Fed. Reg. 5110 (January 23, 2003) (adopting rules requiring disclosure in annual reports with respect to financial experts). See Item 401 of Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.401.

(n26)Footnote 26. Section 303 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act provides that it shall be unlawful for any director or officer of an issuer, or any other person acting under the direction thereof, in contravention of rules to be adopted by the Commission, to take any action to fraudulently influence, coerce, manipulate or mislead any independent public or certified accountant engaged in the performance of an audit of the financial statements of that issuer for the purpose of rendering such financial statements materially misleading. See Exchange Act Release No. 34-47890 (May 20, 2003) (adopting new Rules 13b2- 2 (b) and (c) under the 1934 Act relating to the improper influence on audits).

(n27)Footnote 27. Section 101 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act established the PCAOB to oversee the audits of public companies that are subject to the federal securities laws. The PCAOB has five members, each selected by the Commission, only two of whom may be or have been certified public accountants. Members may not be employed in any other professional or business activity, nor receive a share of any profits from any public accounting firm (other than customary and fixed retirement payments). See generally Title I of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. A company's auditor cannot prepare or issue or participate in the preparation of any audit report for the company unless it is registered as a "registered public accounting firm" by the PCAOB. See Section 102 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. The company's registered public accounting firm must provide the audit committee of the company with timely reports regarding critical policies, alternative treatments of financial information and any other material communications between the accounting firm and the company's management. See Section 204 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act; 15 U.S.C. § 78j-l(k).

(n28)Footnote 28. See Section 107 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

(n29)Footnote 29. See Section 103 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. In establishing rules for auditing and quality control, the PCAOB may adopt its own standards or use any portion of auditing standards or professionalism standards proposed by professional groups of accountants designated for such purpose by rule (such as the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants) or other advisory groups. The rules are subject to approval by the Commission (with a notice-and-comment process based on the rulemaking process for self-regulatory organizations), except for initial or transition rules that will be subject only to Commission approval.

(n30)Footnote 30. See Sections 104 (inspections of registered public accounting firms) and 105 (investigations and disciplinary proceedings) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

(n31)Footnote 31. Free Enter. Fund v. Pub. Co. Accounting Oversight Bd., --- U.S. ---, 78 U.S.L.W. 4766, No. 08-861, slip op. at 5-7 (2010).

(n32)Footnote 32. Under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, the members of the PCAOB could be removed by the Commission only for good cause. The Commissioners of the SEC be removed by the President only for good cause. Id. at 14-16.

(n33)Footnote 33. Id. at 11-27.

(n34)Footnote 34. Id. at 28-29.

(n35)Footnote 35. Id.

(n36)Footnote 36. See Section 602 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g., Sections 802 (alteration or destruction of records) (18 U.S.C. §§ 1519-20), 807 (securities fraud) (18 U.S.C. § 1348), 1102 (impeding an official proceeding) (18 U.S.C. § 1512), 1106 (increased criminal penalties) (15 U.S.C. § 78ff(a)) and 1107 (retaliation against whistleblowers) (18 U.S.C. § 1513) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

* Patrick Daugherty, Yvette M. VanRiper and Peter C. Underwood. This chapter was revised and updated by Patrick Daugherty and Yvette M. VanRiper, partners at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Peter C. Underwood, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Regal-Beloitt Corporation. The authors would like to thank Stephen J. Byrnes, Jr. and Megan A. Odronec, associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Morgan J. Tilleman, Nicholas J. Fox, Christina T. Jones and Morgan J. West, summer associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, for their assistance.

24 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction to the Securities Act of 1933 and to the Securities and Exchange Commission *

1-1 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 1.06

§ 1.06 Recent Developments and The Future

[1] SEC Developments in Recent Years

Although the Commission is one of the world's most experienced regulatory agencies in matters relating to both the issuance and trading of securities in the world's primary financial markets, the Commission has faced major challenges in recent years in keeping up with the rapid expansion and globalization of the financial markets and changes, technological and otherwise, in the ways that securities are traded and information distributed.

The following is a brief description of some the changes the Commission has implemented under the 1933 Act in recent years in response to these challenges:

- In an effort to address the problem of selective disclosure of material nonpublic information, the Commission adopted Regulation FD, which requires the broad dissemination of information by public companies and thereby enhances the efficiency and fairness of the securities markets.
- The Commission has actively sought to reduce the accounting burden on foreign issuers that wish to offer and sell their securities in this country.
- The Commission, through its small business initiatives, has made it easier and less expensive for smaller, less well-known companies to raise capital in the public markets.
- The Commission, as part of its efforts to shorten the time period for the settlement of securities transaction (so as to minimize the systemic risks of severe market breaks), modified its rules regarding the form and content of prospectuses so that prospectuses can more easily be prepared and delivered to investors in the reduced time period.
- The Commission has also sought to keep up with technical innovations by first permitting, and then requiring, issuers to file registration statements and prospectuses with the Commission electronically (by means of the Commission's "EDGAR" system) and by making these same documents electronically available to the public. In addition, the Commission has issued guidelines with respect to the use of electronic media for information delivery under the federal securities laws and has proposed amending its rules to permit issuers and underwriters to deliver prospectuses electronically.

[2] The Future

The Commission has come under substantial criticism in recent years for the perceived failure to detect massive Ponzi schemes perpetrated by Bernard L. Madoff and others. Additionally, detractors have criticized the Commission for taking a hands-off approach with respect to the financial services industry in recent years, asserting that reliance on industry self-regulation contributed to conditions that led to the 2008-2009 financial crisis. In response to this, the Commission implemented a number of initiatives and reforms, most of which impact the Commission's Division of Investment Management, Division of Trading and Markets, Division of Enforcement and Division of Risk, Strategy, and Financial Innovation. n1 In its draft "Strategic Plan for Fiscal Years 2010 through 2015" n2 the Commission does, however, identify several initiatives impacting the work of the Division of Corporation Finance in relation to the 1933 Act. Specifically, before 2015, the Commission plans to implement the following initiatives:

- Improve the quality and usefulness of disclosure by public companies, particularly disclosure regarding risk management, executive compensation decisions and practices, nomination of directors, board governance and discussion and analysis of results of operations and financial condition; n3
- Promote high-quality accounting standards by supporting efforts to improve financial reporting and support of a single set of global accounting standards; n4
- Continue to assess the effect of the Commission's rulemaking to gauge the effectiveness of the Commission's rules and determine whether better alternatives are available; n5
- Improve the processing of no action, interpretive and exemptive regulatory requests so that responses are completed in a timely manner; n6 and
- Evaluate the Commission's filing review programs to determine whether the Commission is identifying appropriate filings for review and to seek disclosure enhancements. n7

The challenge for the Commission in the future will be to endeavor to retain its reputation for high standards of agency excellence in the regulation of the domestic securities market while continuing to respond to pressures created by demands for ever-more-efficient global markets. Increasing internationalization, institutionalization and computerization of the markets must be addressed by the Commission, both timely and effectively, if it is to fulfill its historic mission as the investor's advocate. n8

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Additionally, in July 2010 the Commission announced the creation of three specialized offices within the Division of Corporation Finance to enhance its disclosure review and policy operations. The new offices are: a disclosure review office, expanding the Division's reviews of large financial services companies; an office focused on disclosure review and policy-making for asset-backed securities and similar structured finance products; and an office, to review new securities products and capital market trends and recommend changes to enhance investor protection in securities offerings.

(n2)Footnote 2. U.S. Sec. and Exch. Comm'n, Strategic Plan for Fiscal Years 2010-2015 Draft for Comment, www.Securitiesgov/about/secstratplan1015.htm.

(n3)Footnote 3. Id. at 23.

(n4)Footnote 4. Id. at 24-25.

(n5)Footnote 5. Id. at 30-31.

(n6)Footnote 6. Id. at 32.

(n7)Footnote 7. Id. at 35.

(n8)Footnote 8. The substantive work on this chapter was completed before enactment, on July 21, 2010, of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. That legislation was enacted in response to the stock market crash and severe recession that occurred in 2008 and 2009. It did not alter the composition or mission of the Commission and did not amend core provisions of the 1933 Act, but it did require the Commission to conduct numerous studies and adopt rules unrelated to the agency's traditional disclosure program. The ramifications of the Dodd-Frank statute have not yet been felt. Subsequent developments will be covered in the next edition of this book.

* Patrick Daugherty, Yvette M. VanRiper and Peter C. Underwood. This chapter was revised and updated by Patrick Daugherty and Yvette M. VanRiper, partners at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Peter C. Underwood, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Regal-Beloitt Corporation. The authors would like to thank Stephen J. Byrnes, Jr. and Megan A. Odronic, associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, and Morgan J. Tilleman, Nicholas J. Fox, Christina T. Jones and Morgan J. West, summer associates at Foley & Lardner LLP, for their assistance.

25 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Applicability of the Act: "Security" and "Sale"

1-2 Federal Securities Act of 1933 2.syn

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp This chapter was prepared by Robert N. Rapp (A.B., 1969, J.D., 1972, Case Western Reserve University; M.B.A., 1989, Cleveland State University), partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation, Second Edition (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, 2003).

§ 2.syn Synopsis to Chapter 2: Applicability of the Act: "Security" and "Sale"

§ 2.01 The Meaning of "Security" -- Section 2(1)

[1] Notes and Other Evidences of Indebtedness

[a] Generally.

[b] Reves v. Ernst & Young: Family Resemblances.

[c] Factors for Evaluating Notes as Securities.

[i] Motivations Associated with the Transaction.

[ii] The Plan of Distribution.

[iii] Reasonable Expectations of the Investing Public.

[iv] Presence of Some Other Risk-reducing Factor.

[d] The Commercial Paper Exclusion and Demand Notes.

[e] Other Evidences of Indebtedness.

[i] Loan Participations.

[ii] Mortgage Pools.

[iii] Bank Checks and Deposit Relationships.

[iv] Guarantees.

[2] Stock

[a] Generally.

[b] Traditional Attributes, Economic Reality, and the Meaning of "Stock."

[3] Bonds

[4] Voting Trust and Collateral Trust Certificates; Other Commercial Trust Instruments

[5] Certificates of Deposit for Securities; Receipts for Securities

[6] Guarantees

[7] Warrants and Subscription Rights

[8] Preorganization Subscriptions

[9] Options, Derivatives and Synthetic Securities

[10] Fractional Undivided Interests in Oil, Gas, or Other Mineral Rights; Related Financing Schemes

[11] The Unconventional Forms: "Certificate of Interest In Any Profit-Sharing Agreement [or any] Investment Contract"

[a] Generally.

[b] The Elements of an Investment Contract.

[i] Investment of Money.

[ii] Common Enterprise.

[iii] Expectation of Profits From the Efforts of Others.

[c] Particular Applications

[i] Partnership and Joint Venture Interests.

[ii] Limited Liability Partnerships.

[iii] Limited Liability Company Membership Interests.

[iv] Club Memberships and Membership Organizations.

[v] Real Estate and Related Financing.

- [vi] Pooled Funds and Collective Investment Vehicles.
- [vii] Employee Benefit Plans.
 - [A] Corporate Plans.
 - [B] Keogh Plans.
 - [C] IRAs and Simplified Employee Pension Plans.
 - [D] 401(k) Plans.
 - [E] Miscellaneous Plans.
 - [F] Interests of Plans in Collective Investment Media.
 - [G] Workout and Reorganization Participations.
- [viii] Pyramid Sales Schemes, Multilevel Distributorships, and Franchises.
- [ix] Insurance and Annuities.
- [x] Insurance Premium Funding Plans.
- [xi] Viatical Settlements.
- [xii] Bank and Thrift Deposit Relationships.
- [xiii] Investment Programs in Personal Property.
- [xiv] Management "Services" Generally.
- [xv] Securities and Commodity Trading Accounts: "Horizontal" vs. "Vertical" Commonality.
- [12] The "Risk Capital" Alternative in Determining the Existence of a Security.
 - § 2.02 The Meaning of "Sale" -- Section 2(3)
 - [1] Gifts, Bonuses and Free Stock Distributions
 - [2] Stock Dividends and Related Distributions
 - [3] Reorganization Distributions
 - [4] Pledges
 - [5] Changes in Securities Provisions; Exchanges of Securities
 - [6] Warrants and Rights; Conversion Privileges

[7] Employee Benefit Plans and Related Distributions

[8] Spin-offs and the "Shell" Game: The Instant Public Market

[9] When a "Sale" Occurs

Robert N. Rapp n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *.

This chapter was prepared by Robert N. Rapp (A.B., 1969, J.D., 1972, Case Western Reserve University; M.B.A., 1989, Cleveland State University), partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation, Second Edition (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, 2003).

26 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Applicability of the Act: "Security" and "Sale"

1-2 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 2.01

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp This chapter was prepared by Robert N. Rapp (A.B., 1969, J.D., 1972, Case Western Reserve University; M.B.A., 1989, Cleveland State University), partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation, Second Edition (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, 2003).

§ 2.01 The Meaning of "Security" -- Section 2(1)

The federal securities laws establish a scheme of special protections, the object of which is a security transaction. "Security" is a defined term in Section 2(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 ("Securities Act" or "1933 Act").ⁿ¹ The statutory definition was drafted in "sufficiently broad and general terms so as to include within it the many types of instruments that in our commercial world fall within the ordinary concept of a security,"ⁿ² but decades of practice and application in the courts have since taught that the concept is something more complex.

A "security" may be thought of as an easily recognizable thing. A share of stock, a bond, or a limited partnership interest is generally known to be a security. As seen above, Section 2(1) of the Securities Act prescribes a collection of instruments that is both specific and non-specific, in which all included items are presumed to possess characteristics that create a need for special protection in the circumstances of an "offer" or "sale," as defined by Section 2(3) of the Securities Act. It is in that set of circumstances that the object of securities law protection -- an investment decision -- arises.

Section 2(1) enumerates instruments that are by definition deemed to be securities "unless the context otherwise requires." The specific instruments included in the definition are presumed to have certain characteristics, which set securities apart from other species of property or interests in property, and create a need for special protection. Non-specific categories, such as "investment contracts," are included in order to extend the reach of the Securities Act to circumstances evidencing the characteristics of a security and the consequent need for protection, regardless of form. The elements of a security transaction defy precise definition. Whether the focal point is a conventional, recognizable form, or whether the inquiry concerns the undefined forms, such as an "investment contract," whether a security is present is a function of the characteristics of the instrument and the relationship between the parties to a transaction that it entails. A security is a bundle of characteristics that evidence investment risk.

The expansion of Securities Act coverage to novel and uncommon situations has come with recognition of circumstances evidencing the need for special securities law protections, without regard to the form of an instrument or, indeed, whether there is any "form" at all. Conversely, the presence of a form of instrument "literally" included within

1-2 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 2.01

Section 2(1) does not automatically lead to "security" classification where the context in which it appears manifests other characteristics. Reviewing the evolution of the definition of a security in terms of the fundamental objectives of the regulatory scheme, the U.S. Supreme Court offered this cogent instruction on the meaning of the term "security:"

The fundamental purpose undergirding the Securities Acts is "to eliminate serious abuses in a largely unregulated securities market." In defining the scope of the market that it wished to regulate, Congress painted with a broad brush. It recognized the virtually limitless scope of human ingenuity, especially in the creation of "countless and variable schemes devised by those who seek the use of the money of others on the promise of profits" and determined that the best way to achieve its goal of protecting investors was "to define" the term "security" in sufficiently broad and general terms so as to include within that definition the many types of instruments that in our commercial world fall within the ordinary concept of a security.' " Congress therefore did not attempt precisely to cabin the scope of the Securities Acts. Rather, it enacted a definition of "security" sufficiently broad to encompass virtually any instrument that might be sold as an investment. n3

Although the term "security" generally evokes the notion of property, a security, in all its forms, is thus a species of property or an interest in an enterprise marked by characteristics that demonstrate the need for the special protections accorded by federal and state securities laws. n4 Congress' purpose in enacting the federal securities laws was to regulate investments, in whatever form they are made and by whatever name they are called. n5 The list of specific instruments and interests contained in Section 2(1) notwithstanding, the existence of a security is thus not a matter of particular form. Rather, it is a function of a set of characteristics and a relationship between parties, one of whom makes an investment decision. An "investment decision" implies a rational assessment of the risk associated with a choice of action, namely, the commitment of financial resources, relative to an expected return. Any "security," whatever its form or type, has the essential characteristic of risk that is a function of the loss of control over the value "invested." One who makes an investment decision, therefore, must be able to evaluate that risk. The federal securities laws are intended to provide, to the greatest extent possible, the informational means to do so. Indeed, the single most significant consequence of identifying the existence of a "security" is to trigger the information generation and dissemination mechanisms of the Securities Act through the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of § 5 of the Securities Act. The particular instruments and interests identified in Section 2(1) are there because, they are presumed to embody these characteristics -- relating to ownership, control, and, perhaps most importantly, relative access to information that is necessary to assess risk.

The latter characteristic -- the disadvantaged position of a purchaser in regard to necessary information -- has long been identified as a principal focus of Securities Act protection. As the U.S. Supreme Court observed in Wilko v. Swan:

While a buyer and seller of securities, under some circumstances, may deal at arm's length on equal terms, it is clear that the Securities Act was drafted with an eye to the disadvantages under which buyers labor. Issuers of and dealers in securities have better opportunities to investigate and appraise the prospective earnings and business plans affecting securities than buyers. It is therefore reasonable for Congress to put buyers of securities covered by the Securities Act on a different basis from other purchasers. n6

Literally, every transaction involving one of the instruments or interests identified in Section 2(1) involves a security. Yet, as will be seen, the analysis does not end there. Indeed, in many instances Section 2(1) is but the starting point.

The inadvertent creation of a security and the failure to recognize one already existing in a set of circumstances are perhaps two of the most prominent occupational hazards of the business lawyer. From the simple organization and capitalization of a small business enterprise to a sophisticated financing transaction, the presence of a security and the complex regulatory and liability scheme it triggers dramatically affect all aspects of the undertaking. n7 Thus, the practitioner must be alert to recognize the essential characteristics of not just those specifically enumerated instruments that are presumed to be securities, but, more importantly, the characteristics of a transaction or relationship that create one under one of the broader general headings.

To better understand the characteristics common to all securities, and as a prelude to consideration of each type of security within the ambit of Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, consider the following situation: A, B, and C pool their funds to purchase an apartment building. By mutual agreement, the three individuals delegate day-to-day management responsibilities to C, who will receive a somewhat larger share of net profits for her efforts. Otherwise they intend to share equally in profits and losses from operation of what each individual hopes will be a successful enterprise.

In this scenario, each of the participants has acquired an ownership interest in tangible property. It is not direct ownership, but rather an undivided, indirect interest to which the right to possess is curtailed and control is apportioned. Though something less than absolute, it is ownership nonetheless, and the dominant attribute of the relationship among the three participants is the ultimate control that each of them is presumed to possess. Despite the delegation of day-to-day management duties to one among them, the ultimate ability of each participant to exercise control over the enterprise is presumed. It is that empowerment or opportunity to exercise control that creates a relationship immediately recognizable as one of general partnership or joint venture.ⁿ⁸ Each of the participants in this situation is positioned so as to be able to directly affect the value of the property. Whether exercised or not, the opportunity for control: (a) defines the relationship between the participants in the enterprise; and (b) determines the relationship between the "owner" of the property and its value as an enterprise, or, more precisely, the nature of the risk faced by the participant.

Implicit in this relationship is the notion that each of the participants in the enterprise has the ability to protect herself through the power to control, even though two of them may be considered "passive" in operations. The essential point is this:

So long as the investor retains ultimate control, he has the power over the investment and the access to information about it which is necessary to protect against any unwilling dependence on the manager. It is not enough, therefore, that partners in fact rely on others for the management of their investment; a partnership can be a [security] only when the partners are so dependent on a particular manager that they cannot replace him or otherwise exercise ultimate control.ⁿ⁹

A true general partnership or joint venture relationship can never involve a security because it is premised upon the ability of the participants to control the enterprise. Agreements negotiated one-on-one, creating enterprises in which "investors" are actively involved, have access to or are empowered to obtain information, and are able to protect their own interests, are not within the protective reach of the federal securities laws.ⁿ¹⁰ In the above example A, B, and C came together under this presumption. They may, of course, choose fundamentally to alter their relationship. A and B, for example, might agree to be specifically excluded from any right to or opportunity for the exercise of control whatsoever. To do so would not change their ownership but would obviously alter the nature and extent of risk to them in making their contribution. The introduction of constraints on control, and the concomitant change in the risk characteristics of the relationship between the parties and the ability of a participant to deal with them, can transform the relationship into one involving a security, even though the relationship is labeled as a "partnership" or "joint venture."ⁿ¹¹

The fundamental characteristic of a security is the presence of investment risk, created by the separation of ownership from value determinants. That is to say, a security is involved where the value of a thing purchased is, either presently or in the future, a function of something other than the thing itself and the realization of that value is beyond the meaningful control of the purchaser. In the earlier example, A, B, and C, as partners or joint venturers in the acquisition and operation of an apartment building, cannot demonstrate the presence of investment risk because the value of what they own, as an enterprise, is presumed to be within their shared control. The business risk of their enterprise is ever present, but it is a risk each of them is presumed to know and, more importantly, presumed to have the power to manage. n12

If A, B, and C had instead elected to form a corporation to acquire and own the apartment building, and if each of them contributed equally to capital of the new entity by purchasing a third of its common stock, would the characteristics of their relationship and the nature of their control be different? Introducing "stock" to the scenario invokes a different presumption. Traditional corporate "stock" is presumed to be a security because the common perception of the relationship between stockholders and corporations involves separation of ownership and control. The presence of "stock" alters expectations about a relationship and, as a matter of law, creates no right of control beyond whatever appurtenant rights in corporate governance may be associated with owning the shares. And, of course, stock is "literally" a security under Section 2(1) of the Securities Act.

Among A, B, and C, it may well be that nothing has changed in their relationship regarding shared control of what is now a "corporate" enterprise rather than the partnership or joint venture relation described earlier. That their ownership interests are now evidenced by "stock" certificates may not alone make any one or all of them purchasers of securities simply by reason of the instrument now involved. Yet, the presence of actual corporate "stock" may in fact alter expectations of a participant in the venture concerning risk and the availability of securities law protections, and thus, as will be seen, the presumption of coverage applies solely by reason of the traditional attributes of the instrument involved. n13

Whether the focal point of a transaction is a conventional, recognizable instrument such as a share of stock, or a bond, or whether the focus is on the more esoteric, undefined, categories of securities in Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, the real issue is not the form of the instrument but its characteristics and the relationship between the parties that results. The Securities Act itself, by qualifying the entire list of things defined to be securities with the caveat that they are securities "[u]nless the context otherwise requires," n14 presumes that particular circumstances may shape the contours of the definition and its application. Context can operate to exclude certain types of instruments literally within the definition from coverage. Certain kinds of "notes" or "evidences of indebtedness," for example, have been recognized to fall outside the intended scope of the securities laws. n15 But in all cases the inclusion or exclusion of an instrument within the definition, or the creation of any other form of security in any set of circumstances, depends on the presence of three elements:

- (1) Present or future value being determined by something other than the thing itself;
- (2) A separation of ownership from value determinants; and
- (3) Disparate positions of a purchaser and seller with respect to information with which to evaluate risk.

Understanding the meaning of value is critical to isolating the characteristics of a security. There may be intrinsic value in a thing purchased. The price paid for an asset is first and foremost a reflection of the essential value of the thing. Even a share of common stock represents, at the very least, an identifiable interest in the liquidation value of the corporation, net of creditors, and other superior claims to the assets. However, few would suggest that such "value" defines the investment characteristics of stock. The real value of stock as an investment is the expected return to the purchaser that derives from a future income stream and capital gain from market value appreciation of the stock. These aspects of value are entirely a matter of enterprise risk when management of the company is separated from the control of the shareholder.

It may also be that an asset purchased has no value apart from an enterprise attached to it. In an early examination of the meaning of security, SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., n16 the Supreme Court held that assignments in oil leases were securities where the assignments -- interests in real property -- only had value in the opportunity to share in discovery values that might follow the drilling of a nearby test well. According to the Court, "the undertaking to drill a well runs through the whole transaction as the thread on which everybody's beads were strung." n17 But for the test well and the prospect of its success, the assignments were worthless. Joiner well illustrates that whatever the circumstances, the key to finding a security is whether there is a separate and unmanageable risk affecting the actual or reasonably expected value of the asset purchased. n18

It is also the nature of every security transaction that the purchaser must rely on the seller for information concerning the value of the security. In Rubin v. United States n19 the Supreme Court held that a pledge of securities to secure a loan is a sale of those securities for purposes of the antifraud provisions of the securities laws. The Court considered the "economic considerations and realities" of such a transaction as similar to those facing an investor when purchasing shares: "Both are relying on the value of the securities themselves, and both must be able to depend on the representations made by the transferor of the securities" n20 This is true investment risk. The transaction is such that some portion of the present value of the property received by the buyer is explained in terms of the future successful operations of an enterprise. Not only does the buyer have no meaningful control over that enterprise but the seller also possesses the information with which to evaluate the extent of the risk.

The enumerated instruments in Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, in "context," are presumed to entail these essential characteristics. In its assessments of particular categories of instruments included within the Section 2(1) definition considered in detail below, the Supreme Court has underscored the point that the enumerated instruments in Section 2(1) are there because they match, or tend to match, a standard view of value characteristics that are dependent upon separate value determinants. Not all "stock" may be a security, nor are all "notes," but the exclusion of such instruments from the definition will come only when the presumption arising from their express inclusion is rebutted by showing actual characteristics that are contrary to a standard view. Beyond them, the catchall categories -- "certificates of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement [or] investment contract" -- expand the reach of the statute to situations in which the characteristics are present regardless of the form of instrument, if any, involved.

Evolution of the concept of "investment contract" from SEC v. W.J. Howey Co., n21 in which the sale of tracts of land in orange groves coupled with essential management and exploitation services was held to be the sale of securities, has cemented the circumstantial focus of any inquiry concerning the presence of a security, in which it is today universally recognized that "form [is] disregarded for substance and emphasis [is] placed upon economic reality." n22 In 2004, the Supreme Court made clear in SEC v. Edwards n23 that the focus is on investments in whatever form they are made and by whatever name they are called. In Edwards, which involved a passive sale and leaseback program for pay telephones promising a low risk fixed rate of return, the Court dispelled any notion that an investment within the ambit of securities law protections can only involve "profit" of an uncertain or variable nature. The fact that investors have bargained for a fixed return, said the Court, does not make any difference when the investor is attracted by representations of investment income, whether fixed or variable. Nor does it change the fact that whatever return is promised is dependent on the efforts of others. n24

This element of investment contract analysis continues to be developed in "viatical settlement" cases. A viatical settlement is a transaction in which a terminally ill insured sells the benefits of his or her life insurance policy to a third party in return for a lump sum cash payment equal to a percentage of the policy's face value. The purchaser of the viatical settlement realizes a profit if, when the insured dies, the policy benefits paid are greater than the purchase price, adjusted for the time value. In these circumstances, the extent to which a return is dependent on the efforts of others, in order to find an investment contract, is an ongoing challenge for courts in the assessment of programs and activities undertaken by opportunistic entrepreneurs. Viatical settlements as investment contracts are specifically discussed elsewhere. n25 Their economic realities are such, however, that courts have shown a marked willingness to apply an expansive approach to the notion of investor dependence that is critical to finding an investment contract. n26

There are differing approaches to requisite commonality of interests in investment contract analysis. The Howey analysis of "common enterprise" is characterized as "horizontal" commonality. There is no uniformly accepted method of determining whether a transaction satisfies the common enterprise requirement of Howey. Instead, the courts employ various interpretations, with most circuits embracing the "horizontal commonality" approach. Under that interpretation, courts find the common enterprise requirement satisfied where a movant shows the "pooling" of investor funds, through which the individual investors share all the risks and benefits of the business enterprise. The Eleventh Circuit, however, has articulated the "broad vertical commonality" approach. n27 Broad vertical commonality only requires a movant to show that 'the investors are dependent upon the expertise or efforts of the investment promoter for their returns. Arguably the focus on the efforts of a promoter in the broad vertical commonality approach deprives the term "common enterprise" of any significance. n28

A large part of "economic reality" is perception, which in turn generates legitimate expectations. Common "stock" is generally perceived to be a security, although state "close corporation" and "limited liability company" statutes, n29 and the agreements defining managerial powers and rights among stockholders or members that result from them, may severely undermine the validity of that perception and of "economic reality," if all that has occurred is the reconfiguration of a true general partnership or joint venture relationship into a corporate form of organization. The purchase of acreage in an orange grove, or perhaps the purchase of a resort condominium, is not generally perceived to involve a security, but, as Howey and its progeny have taught, "economic reality" changes perceptions and expectations.

In United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, n30 the Supreme Court squarely confronted purchaser "expectations" -- and at the same time the broader point of the intended scope of federal securities law protections -- in a decision holding that shares of "stock" in a state-subsidized housing cooperative were not securities. The "stock" in question represented the right to an apartment. It was not transferable and could not appreciate in value. There were no dividend rights associated with it and, as a general proposition, the shares had none of the traditional attributes of corporate stock. Thus, the Court declared: "Common sense suggests that people who intend to acquire only a residential apartment in a state-subsidized cooperative, for their personal use, are not likely to believe that in reality they are purchasing investment securities simply because the transaction is evidenced by something called a share of stock." n31

On the other hand, the Supreme Court has mandated the availability of securities law protections where the subject of a transaction is stock possessing the significant characteristics typically associated with corporate stock. In the companion cases of Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth n32 and Gould v. Rufenacht, n33 the Court rejected the "Sale of Business" doctrine under which some lower courts had refused to recognize securities law antifraud claims by purchasers of all or substantially all of a corporation's outstanding stock. Courts applying that doctrine reasoned that notwithstanding the presence of traditional corporate stock, the instruments were merely indicia of ownership and should not be considered securities by reason of the control over the future course of the enterprise acquired by the purchaser. The idea was that someone who bought all of the stock in a closely-held corporation was as an economic matter buying the corporation's assets, so the transaction should not be governed by the securities laws. Landreth held, however, that one who wants the legal treatment of an asset acquisition must buy the assets rather than the stock; people may choose between transacting in securities and transacting in assets, and the law follows the form--not only because that is what the statute says, but also because trying to determine, one case at a time, when a transaction "really" has the economic attributes of a different form would lead to a great deal of uncertainty for little purpose. n34

In Landreth and Gould, the Supreme Court held that stock is a security when its characteristics bear out the label. n35 As discussed in greater detail later in this Chapter n36 such characteristics commonly include the right to receive dividends, transferability, and the potential for appreciation in value. n37

Purchaser expectations, and the role of the characteristics of an instrument in shaping those expectations, are thus plainly important factors in identifying a security. In Forman, purchasers of "stock" could not have reasonably believed that they purchased an investment security, and no promotional efforts fostered such a belief. n38 In Landreth and Gould, the characteristics of the corporate stock were not in doubt, and it was likely, said the Court, that an investor would believe that the securities laws would apply. Thus: "[t]he public perception of common stock as the paradigm of a security suggests that stock, in whatever context it is sold, should be treated as within the ambit of the Acts." n39

The Court subsequently amplified this view in Reves v. Ernst & Young,ⁿ⁴⁰ in which the question expressly left open in Landreth and Gould whether a similar per se rule could be applied to notes as securities. In Reves, the Court opined that such a rule would not be justified in the case of notes. The Court opted instead for the so-called "family resemblance" test, by which particular notes are compared to a recognized collection of instruments that are plainly not securities. The resemblance of the particular note in question to one within that collection, or the determination that the note in question should be added to the collection, controls whether it shall be deemed a security within the ambit of the federal securities laws.ⁿ⁴¹ For other situations, where investment expectations are induced through marketing or promotional efforts, the caveat in Joiner applies: "In the enforcement of an act such as this it is not inappropriate that promoters' offerings be judged as being what they were represented to be."ⁿ⁴²

In sum, it can safely be said that the identification of a security is first the function of the attributes of the thing itself. Secondly, but only to the extent necessary, external considerations that produce investment characteristics will be considered. Landreth and Gould teach that courts will, indeed should, look beyond the characteristics of an instrument when there is a need to do so in order to determine whether securities law protections should apply. The enumeration of many types of instruments in Section 2(1) means that such instruments are securities unless the characteristics traditionally associated with them are inconclusive or where the label attached to an instrument, e.g., "stock," does not hold true. This message of Landreth and Gould is clear enough,ⁿ⁴³ but the reality of Section 2(1) is that among the enumerated instruments only "stock" can be described as having "traditional characteristics" against which any such assessment can be made. For the others, courts must look further.

In *Reves v. Ernst & Young*ⁿ⁴⁴ the Supreme Court provided further guidance in the process. Reves focused specifically on the question of "notes" as securities under Section 2(1) of the Securities Act -- a question perennially described as one of the most "vexatious" raised under the federal securities lawsⁿ⁴⁵-- but in doing so articulated criteria of general application in inquiries beyond the particular label of an instrument. The standards the Court established in the "notes" context further illuminate the fundamental characteristics of any security transaction. They are:

- (1) The motivations that prompt reasonable parties to enter into the transaction;
- (2) The "plan of distribution" involved;
- (3) The reasonable expectations of the investing public concerning the instrument involved; and
- (4) The presence of any other factor which significantly impacts the risk associated with the particular instrument.ⁿ⁴⁶

Each of these factors is helpful in identifying and understanding investment risk regardless of the form of instrument or relationship involved. They are benchmarks of a security transaction and were offered by the Supreme Court as a backdrop of what Congress intended to accomplish in the enactment of the securities laws. Taken together with all that has been said about purpose, context, and "characteristics," it can be said in summary that identifying any security requires a series of inquiries:

First, what is actually being acquired in the transaction? If the value of the thing purchased is significantly measured by the thing itself, i.e., its own worth, the likelihood of a security being found is lessened.

Second, what is the post-acquisition value of the thing, and what determines that value? If the motivation for the transaction is an expected return that is dependent upon factors not within the control of the purchaser, an investment is indicated.

Similarly, if one purchases a thing based upon an assessment of post-acquisition value, whether or not there will be control by the purchaser, investment risk is indicated where the information bearing upon the validity of the purchaser's expectations is within the control of the seller. This is to say that post-acquisition control is irrelevant to obtaining the knowledge before the purchase by which to evaluate the risk/return characteristics for the future.

Expectations concerning post-acquisition value in turn lead to the third essential inquiry: what are the relative positions of the purchaser and seller vis-a-vis the information necessary to assess risk/return? The securities laws operate on the premise that purchasers of securities are necessarily disadvantaged in knowledge of or access to information needed to make an investment decision. An "investor" must rely on the representations made by the seller. n47 Where the circumstances of a transaction are such that the disparity is not present, as in ordinary "commercial" or "mercantile" settings, for example, application of the securities laws is unwarranted. n48

Relative positions of a buyer and a seller vis-a-vis information are also a part of the fourth essential inquiry to be undertaken in the search for a security: what is the setting for the transaction? Do the surrounding circumstances paint a picture of meaningful disparity in the possession of or ability to access material information? It is this disparity that best distinguishes settings involving actual investment risk from the "commercial" or "mercantile" settings mentioned above.

The transactional setting is the canvas on which this picture is painted. Some transactional settings simply do not produce concerns for investment protections. Those notes, for example, which after Reves are recognized as being excluded from the definition of security, arise out of settings that are decidedly commercial or consumer oriented and in which no "investor" expectations are reasonable. n49 To be sure, some aspect of a transaction may ultimately alter its non-investment character as, for example, where a pledge of stock is made to secure a commercial loan. n50 In all cases, however, unless there are factors that evidence genuine investment risk and that legitimate securities law protections, no security will be found.

Collectively, these preliminary inquiries into the nature of the thing purchased, its value determinants, and the transactional setting are the predicates for a conclusion that an instrument or transaction embodies the characteristics of a security. It is an essential series of inquiries because the federal securities laws were intended to operate only when special protection over and above that otherwise available at law or in equity is needed. When Congress formulated Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, the traditional views of instruments such as stocks or bonds prevailed. The included instruments were generally perceived as possessing these characteristics. Today, however, the task is more difficult not only because the securities laws to reach are "[n]ovel, uncommon or irregular devices, whatever they appear to be," n51 but also because it has been shown that there are limits on the scope of intended protection.

Addressing the definition of security under both the Securities Act and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act" or "1934 Act"), the Supreme Court has consistently focused attention on the intended role of the securities laws. In United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, n52 the Court isolated capital formation and the operation of capital markets as the prime congressional concerns and observed that the primary purpose of the securities laws was to eliminate abuses in a "largely unregulated securities market." In International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Daniel, n53 the Court raised the important, and practical, point that other regulation aimed specifically at the need for protection in particular areas is the proper vehicle for that protection rather than unwarranted extensions of the securities laws. That point was underscored again in Marine Bank v. Weaver, n54 in which not only was other regulation a determining factor but other protection plainly eliminated investment risk and dispatched any perceived need for securities law coverage. And in Reves v. Ernst & Young, the message that congressional intent for the operation of the federal securities laws is a paramount consideration, and that interpretation of the definition of security must be consistent with the objective of the acts, could not be any clearer. n55

While Section 2(1) purports to identify what is deemed to be a security, the larger and more important question is why an instrument or transaction may, or should, be so characterized. What follows below is an examination of the enumerated instruments in Section 2(1) -- the "statutory" securities. Thereafter, thorough consideration of the catchall categories is undertaken. In all of it, the common elements that make a security in whatever form or transaction are identified, thus facilitating practical assessments based on the true scope and intended protection of the securities laws.

[1] Notes and Other Evidences of Indebtedness

[a] Generally. The array of instruments defined to be securities in Section 2(1) is headed by "any note," with any "evidence of indebtedness" following shortly thereafter. It is clear on the face of the Securities Act, however, that all "notes" were not intended to be viewed alike for purposes of Securities Act coverage. Indeed, in creating exemptions from coverage of the Securities Act, Congress itself made distinctions between some kinds of notes, by exempting instruments generally referred to as prime commercial paper. Section 3(a)(3) exempts: "any note, draft, bill of exchange, or banker's acceptance which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which has a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding nine months" n56 Moreover, Reves v. Ernst & Young n57 clearly instructs that there are categories of notes which are to be excluded from the definition. Doing so recognizes that in certain circumstances concerns for "investor" protection are simply not present. Nevertheless, literal inclusion of the terms "note" or "evidence of indebtedness" in the statutory definition of security establishes a rebuttable presumption of coverage. That presumption is not rebutted in most instances except by looking beyond the instrument itself to the circumstances in which it is used.

Varying historical approaches to the question of notes as securities produced considerable uncertainty. Courts employing a "commercial/investment dichotomy" test looked for investment characteristics. Notes offered and sold to large numbers of people for investment or speculation were easily distinguished from those instruments involved in commercial financing of a business enterprise. Other courts grounded their conclusions in "risk capital" assessments, in which factors evidencing the nature and determinants of returns were prominent considerations. This approach was often used in conjunction with investment contract analysis. Still other courts adopted an approach based on the assumption that all notes are securities, but which assumption was rebutted upon a showing that the particular instrument bears a "strong family resemblance" to instruments used in commercial or consumer finance settings, which are presumed not to be securities.

In Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, n58 the Supreme Court addressed "traditional characteristics" of "stock" in assessing whether an instrument within the literal coverage of Section 2(1) should be deemed to be a security, but expressly left open the question whether notes or any other category of instrument listed in the definition of security might be shown "by proving [only] the document itself." n59 For all of the uncertainty and varying approaches to the question that had prevailed to that point, however, certain fundamental points flowing from the purpose of the federal securities laws had emerged. The Supreme Court itself identified the gist of intended securities law protection in Marine Bank v. Weaver n60 with the observation that "Congress was concerned with regulating the investment market, not with creating a general federal cause of action for fraud." And the lower courts, despite their varying approaches, had plainly identified a set of common factors that were critical elements in all assessments, regardless of terminology, and which remain at the heart of the issue. They are:

The purpose of a transaction. The process of capital formation and conduct relating to capital markets are of prime importance to the Securities Act. Where capital is being raised to establish and operate an enterprise in which the provider of that capital has no meaningful managerial control, an "investment" is plainly indicated regardless of the form of instrument that may be involved. n61 Where the purpose of a transaction, or the use of proceeds of a loan evidenced by a note, is to raise money for a business enterprise, and the lender ("purchaser") of the note is interested primarily in a return expected to be generated from the enterprise, the purpose or motivation for the transaction is decidedly investment-oriented.

The nature and determinants of risk. When the nature of an expected return in a negotiated loan transaction is a fixed or formula rate of interest, the payment of which is not dependent upon the entrepreneurial efforts of the borrower to generate profits, and the loan is secured, no "investment" risk is indicated. Credit risk is one thing; investment risk is another. Moreover, in some credit relationships such as deposit relationships, risk reducing factors such as other regulation may be present. n62 Collateral may also be involved, playing an important risk reducing role by reducing dependence upon the borrower's success to secure the expected return. n63

Term. The notion of an "investment" implies a long term commitment and corresponding exposure to risk of an enterprise. A loan for working capital needs, a short term construction loan, or other similarly short term obligations indicates a commercial credit relationship, both in substance of the transaction and the expectations of the lender. n64 Thus, term may itself be a risk reducing factor that runs counter to an investment orientation.

The relationship to the borrower and the borrower's enterprise. Restrictions or covenants concerning a borrower's business operations and the ability to extract them as a condition of providing capital evidence diminished risk and a position of the lender vis-a-vis the borrower's enterprise that runs counter to the essence of a security transaction. Relative bargaining position and the ability to secure protection are important considerations in determining the need for securities law protections. n65

The transaction setting. Where notes are issued in circumstances involving a "public" solicitation to persons who are not engaged in the business of making loans, the setting is no different from that involving a traditional distribution of any security. The form of instrument involved is unrelated to the fundamental objectives of the Securities Act to assure the dissemination of adequate, accurate information in the distribution process. n66 There may be no better indicator of a security transaction than the offering of any form of instrument characterized as an investment to a broad segment of the public in circumstances that trigger all the concerns of inadequate information, a "selling" process, and the need for antifraud protection. Any "plan of distribution" now figures prominently in determining whether notes will be deemed securities. Public solicitation or "common trading" has invariably resulted in the creation of a security, and, where notes are involved, the Supreme Court has made no distinction. Indeed, in Reves v. Ernst & Young, the Court made "plan of distribution" a critical consideration:

As to the plan of distribution, the Co-Op offered the notes over an extended period to its 23,000 members, as well as to non-members, and more than 1,600 people held notes when the Co-Op filed for bankruptcy. To be sure, the notes were not traded on an exchange. They were, however, offered and sold to a broad segment of the public, and that is all we have held to be necessary to establish the requisite "common trading" in an instrument. n67

The evolution of a practical, rather than literal, definition of "notes" as securities proceeded within a patchwork analysis of characteristics of particular instruments and a set of objectives that the federal securities laws were intended to accomplish. Yet, in the varying approaches and "tests," there emerged a unitary sense of intended protection. The task was to unify its application, and in Reves v. Ernst & Young the U.S. Supreme Court responded.

[b] Reves v. Ernst & Young: Family Resemblances. In Reves, the Supreme Court acted to resolve uncertainties surrounding the status of notes as securities. The Court eschewed the "commercial/investment," investment contract and various "economic reality" approaches that had been employed by lower courts, and, instead, adopted the "family resemblance" test articulated in Exchange National Bank v. Touche Ross & Co. n68 as setting the parameters by which all notes are to be evaluated. After Reves, it every note is presumed to be a security, but the presumption may be rebutted by showing that a particular note bears a strong resemblance to identified categories of notes recognized as not constituting securities, or is one that should be added to the list of such exceptions.

In Reves the holders of variable rate demand notes issued by an agricultural cooperative asserted claims under the antifraud provisions of the Exchange Act. The notes had been offered to large numbers of people, who were both members and nonmembers of the co-op, as an "investment program" to raise capital for general business operations. Purchasers took the notes expecting to profit from interest at a rate that was constantly revised to keep it slightly above that available at local bank and thrift institutions. Observing that from both sides a transaction involving these notes "is most naturally conceived as an investment in a business enterprise rather than as a purely commercial or consumer transaction," n69 the Supreme Court found no resemblance between the notes and any category of notes previously identified as not constituting securities. Thus, claims under the Exchange Act antifraud provisions were allowed to stand.

Although under Reves any note is first presumed to be a security, there is nothing about the analysis that is based upon "literal" inclusion in the Section 2(1) definition. To the contrary, the Court made clear that "the phrase 'any note' should not be interpreted to mean literally 'any note', but must be understood against the backdrop of what Congress was attempting to accomplish in enacting the Securities Acts." n70 This purpose, said the Court, was to regulate investments. Thus, Reves actually establishes a two-tiered approach in determining whether a particular note or debt instrument is a security. The first step involves assessment of "family resemblance;" comparison of the instrument to those specific categories comprising the list of non- securities. Assuming no direct family resemblance, however, does not end the inquiry. The second stage inquiry is whether the presumption that a note is a security is rebutted through an application of specific standards articulated by the Court. That is to say, any particular note or debt instrument may bear sufficient family resemblance in terms of factors applied. The Supreme Court framed the inquiry as follows:

[I]n determining whether an instrument denominated a "note" is a "security," courts are to apply the version of the "family resemblance" test that we have articulated here: a note is presumed to be a "security," and that presumption may be rebutted only by a showing that the note bears a strong resemblance (in terms of the four factors we have identified) to one of the enumerated categories of instrument. If an instrument is not sufficiently similar to an item on the list, the decision whether another category should be added is to be made by examining the same factors. n71

As to "family resemblance," the categories of notes identified in Exchange National Bank, as being excluded from the definition of a security include those involved in consumer financing, residential mortgages, open account relationships, and commercial loans. n72 However, the critical aspect of Reves is not what particular kind of note is or is not on the established "list" of non-securities. What matters instead is why a certain type of note either is or should be on it. Making the critical point that there is no list "graven in stone," the Supreme Court undertook in Reves to supply guidance for a meaningful inquiry concerning any particular instrument. According to the Court, it is impossible to evaluate family resemblance without specifying what it is about those instruments comprising the list that make them non-securities.

The object of the ensuing analysis in Reves was thus simple enough: "[S]ome standards must be developed for determining when an item should be added to the list." n73 In articulating those standards, however, the Court provided a capsule restatement of fundamental characteristics that, to one degree or another, have always been involved in determining the existence of a security. As presented in Reves, they are:

- (1) the motivations that prompt reasonable parties to enter into the transaction;
- (2) the "plan of distribution" involved;
- (3) the reasonable expectations of the investing public concerning the instrument; and
- (4) the presence of any other factor which significantly impacts the risk associated with the particular instrument. n74

These standards had in fact been a part of all of the Court's previous analyses of the definition of a security. The motivations, or purpose, for a transaction are the heart of United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman. n75 The "plan of distribution" was critical in SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp. n76 The reasonable expectations of the investing public were a major focus in Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth. n77 A factor that significantly reduced the risk associated with a particular instrument, namely, another regulatory scheme, rendered application of the securities laws unnecessary in Marine Bank v. Weaver. n78

Clearly, the "standards" articulated in Reves are not new or different from those that apply universally in determining the existence of a security. n79 Yet, the manner of their presentation in explaining why the specific notes that comprise the Exchange National Bank "list" are conclusively deemed not to be securities and to provide the means of assessing "family resemblance" of other notes is particularly instructive. Post-Reves decisions evidence a much sharper focus on, and more careful analysis of, the intended scope of securities law protections. Courts approach the question of notes as securities with a degree of confidence that is a function of common "standards." n80 Still, these standards are in most cases only the starting point.

It is essential to bear in mind that Reves did not resolve the question of whether any particular note or evidence of indebtedness is not a security except in those cases where the "family resemblance" to an excluded category is plainly apparent. These will not be difficult cases. The list of non-security notes adopted in Reves is fairly straightforward. In addition to notes evidencing loans by commercial banks for current operations, the list is comprised of the following:

[T]he note delivered in consumer financing, the note secured by a mortgage on a home, the short-term note secured by a lien on a small business or some of its assets, the note evidencing a 'character' loan to a bank customer, short-term notes secured by an assignment of accounts receivable, or a note which simply formalizes an open-account debt incurred in the ordinary course of business (particularly if, as in the case of a customer of a broker, it is collateralized). n81

The real challenge in the "family resemblance" test lies in its application to the myriad transactions and settings involving notes or other evidences of indebtedness that do not look at all like these basic commercial or consumer credit instruments. Reves and the "family resemblance" test only establish a specific collection of notes that are not securities. Every other instrument must be measured against the Reves standards either to confirm the presumption that it is a security or to justify its inclusion with those notes that are not. "Resemblance" to a particular type of note enumerated in the Reves and Exchange National Bank list will not be the crucial inquiry in most cases. Rather, courts will necessarily continue to examine what it is about any note in any setting that either compels or negates concern for securities law protections. Notes arising out of common commercial and consumer credit relationships may be easily dispatched, but, in the majority of note cases, the analysis must proceed as it always has, only now with the Reves four factors as the common frame of reference.

To declare that all notes are presumed securities unless shown by particular characteristics or a transactional setting defined by "standards" to be something else is only another way of saying that context controls. Where notes or "other evidences of indebtedness" are involved, there is really no other way. The same form of instrument can evoke diametrically opposed concerns for securities law protection depending upon the context of the transaction. The point is perhaps best illustrated by Marine Bank v. Weaver, n82 the Supreme Court's first consideration of the application of the federal securities laws to a form of debt instrument. In Marine Bank, the Court held that a certificate of deposit issued by a federally insured bank was not a security, and in doing so counseled: "Each transaction must be analyzed and evaluated on the basis of the content of the instrument in question, the purposes intended to be served, and the factual setting as a whole." n83 In Marine Bank, the narrow issue was whether a federally insured certificate of deposit was a security -- the functional equivalent of "withdrawable capital shares" of a savings and loan association held to be securities in Tcherepnin v. Knight. n84 The Court held that such a certificate was not a security by reason of the "abundant" protection accorded to holders under the federal banking laws. The larger sense of the case is the Court's emphasis on weighing the facts of a particular set of circumstances to identify characteristics which bring a particular instrument within "the ordinary concept of a security." Clearly setting the stage for the ultimate identification of factors in Reves, the Court declared in Marine Bank: "We have repeatedly held that the test is what character the instrument is given in commerce by the terms of the offer, the plan of distribution, and the economic inducements held out to the prospect." n85 This approach has been aptly characterized as a "functional" one. n86

The four factors articulated by the Court in Reves for ultimately evaluating "family resemblance" to notes which are deemed not to be securities, and for determining whether a particular note should be added to that category, represent the same transactional criteria. Thus, in Holloway v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co.,ⁿ⁸⁷ state regulated, uninsured savings certificates issued by the finance and trust subsidiaries of a bank holding company were held to be securities on an application of the Reves criteria and, in particular, the absence of a cognizable risk-reducing "other regulation" factor that was so important in Marine Bank.ⁿ⁸⁸

Holloway illustrates that there will be relatively few debt instruments conclusively excluded from the definition of security by reason of "family resemblance." Rather, the Reves standards supply guidance for what must continue to be a largely case-by-case analysis of the attributes of a particular instrument in a given set of circumstances. Thus, closer attention to each of the Reves factors is essential to resolving the critical question posed by the Court concerning what it is about any instrument that removes it from the definition of a security.

[c] Factors for Evaluating Notes as Securities.

The four factors articulated in Reves, which set the standard for determining when a note should be added to the list of those notes deemed not to be securities and rebut the presumption embodied in Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, merit close consideration.

[i] Motivations Associated with the Transaction. In Reves, the Supreme Court identified the motivation for a transaction -- what would prompt a reasonable buyer and seller to enter into it -- as the first factor in deciding whether the transaction involves a security. If the purpose is to raise money for the general use of a business enterprise, or to finance an investment, and the buyer is interested primarily in a profitⁿ⁸⁹ the note is expected to generate, the instrument is more likely to be a security. On the other hand, if a note is used in connection with a minor asset transaction to address cash-flow difficulties or some other commercial or consumer purpose, a security is much less likely to be involved.ⁿ⁹⁰ The line between commercial and investment uses or purposes may not always be sharp. One court approached the distinction in terms of funding an enterprise generally versus funding a discrete component or department of the enterprise.ⁿ⁹¹

Historically, courts labored to make the same distinction that is now identified as the first factor in Reves. Commercial financing transactions are negotiated face-to-face, with the lender presumed to be able to obtain all desired information and to be able to fend for itself in obtaining satisfactory security and other protections against the credit risk involved. The motivation of a "lender" has always been seen differently from that of an "investor." In Reves, the Court spoke of motivation in terms of what is most naturally conceived by both sides of the transaction, and it is plain that the perceptions of a senior lender in a corporate acquisition are different from those of the purchasers of agricultural co-op notes. The Court described the perceptions of the parties this way:

The Co-Op sold the notes in an effort to raise capital for its general business operations, and purchasers bought them in order to earn a profit in the form of interest. Indeed, one of the primary inducements offered purchasers was an interest rate constantly revised to keep it slightly above the rate paid by local banks and savings and loans. From both sides, then, the transaction is most naturally conceived as an investment in a business enterprise rather than as purely a commercial or consumer transaction.ⁿ⁹²

"Motivation" under Reves practically translates into the putative seller's purpose. With any anchor in purpose, however, there is little objective guidance. Indeed, the Reves distinction between raising money "for the general use of a business enterprise or to finance substantial capital investment" versus raising money "to correct for the seller's cash flow difficulties or to advance some other commercial or consumer purpose" has been described as somewhat tautological.ⁿ⁹³ From the buyer's perspective, a transaction clearly intended to address the seller's cash flow difficulties may manifest the same economic characteristics as one aimed at providing funds for general business use. There may be situations in which a "purpose" distinction is easily made, n94 but plainly this Reves factor reincarnates a version of the commercial/investment dichotomy as the first consideration in identifying the presence of a security once it is determined that a particular note or evidence of indebtedness fails a family resemblance match.

[ii] The Plan of Distribution. Since the decision in SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp. n95 the manner in which an instrument finds its way to the holder has been a most significant consideration in identifying the presence of a security. As the second factor established in Reves, it is in fact the one among all four that could be independently dispositive. There is no more recognizable basis for concern in providing securities law protections than the circumstances attendant to a "public offering" or systematic solicitation of potential investors.

In Reves, the Supreme Court spoke of "plan of distribution" in terms of examining whether the instrument in question is one in which there is "common trading for speculation or investment" n96 However, as shown by the Court's own analysis, "trading" is not the critical point. Rather, as noted earlier, n97 it is the manner and scope of the offer and sale of an instrument.

With this second factor, the Court necessarily sought to differentiate transactional settings. A large number of notes or payees involved in solicited transactions evidence an economic context vastly different from the process involved in the negotiation of a conventional mortgage loan. n98 Confronting hundreds, or in the case of Reves thousands, of individuals with the decision to purchase a note or other evidence of indebtedness is as much the quintessential security transaction as the public offering of stock by a corporate issuer. The attributes of the transaction -- its economic context -- are indistinguishable. n99

Family resemblance to notes that are excluded from the definition of security after Reves will likely be determined under this factor by characteristics that indicate a "unique agreement, negotiated one-on-one" or a "private transaction" rather than "offers to a number of potential investors." n100 While it is clear that a truly private transaction may still be accorded securities law protection, n101 a plan of distribution of notes or other evidences of indebtedness that, perforce, involves significant numbers of offerees or purchasers or circumstances that evidence no genuine ability of the purchaser to interact with the borrower in the manner of a true debtor/creditor relationship will not likely be seen as akin to any Reves excluded note. In the main, the focus will be on whether the subject transactions involve broad-based, unrestricted sales to the general investing public. n102

[iii] Reasonable Expectations of the Investing Public. In Reves, the Supreme Court declared that it would consider instruments to be securities on the basis of public expectations "even where an economic analysis of the circumstances of the particular transaction might suggest that the instruments are not 'securities' as used in that transaction." n103 The rejection of "economic reality" as the test for defining a note as a security is a major aspect of Reves. While such analysis may be necessary to set parameters for identifying the presence of an "investment contract" form of security, it is inapplicable where a specific instrument is enumerated in Section 2(1). Notes may not be investment contracts, said the Court, but that does not mean they are not securities.

Public expectations concerning the particular instrument, however, can operate either to exclude or confirm its status as a security. In Reves, the Court emphasized that the fundamental essence of a security is its character as an "investment." The notes involved there had been advertised as such, and the Court found no countervailing factors that would have led a reasonable person to question the characterization. n104 Advertising or holding out an instrument to the public as an investment implies an intent that the instrument be perceived as such. It is well to remember that long ago the Court declared: "In the enforcement of an act such as this it is not inappropriate that promoters' offerings be judged as being what they were represented to be." n105

Much as with the "plan of distribution" factor of Reves, public expectations will easily be discerned in circumstances involving a large-scale solicitation focused on investment character of an instrument. n106 Beyond those situations, however, the inquiry depends upon the largely subjective perspectives of buyers and sellers. In Singer v. Livoti, n107 for example, the court could only observe that "[s]urely there was no public expectation that a short term note of this sort would be traded or speculated in as a security" But in Pollack v. Laidlaw Holdings, Inc., n108 the court had no trouble concluding that notes representing participations in home mortgages purchased by unsophisticated, passive investors, who had instructed that conservative investments be made on their behalf, produced reasonable expectations that securities laws would apply despite such factors as fixed interest rates and personal guarantees. n109 In the same manner conversion features, by which the unpaid balance on a promissory note may be converted into common stock has been viewed as a strong factor for holding the note to be a security. n110

In the end, apart from what will be asserted as purchaser expectations, reasonable expectations of the public will be a function of an identifiable need for special securities law protections. The presence or absence of a security in any transaction involving a note or other evidence of indebtedness is not a matter of subjective perception but, rather, a set of circumstances that demonstrates those concerns addressed by the securities laws. n111 This Reves factor necessarily translates into an examination of the aspects of any note transaction that make it deserving of securities law protections. "Reasonable expectations" can be objectively evaluated in terms of the specific concerns of the securities laws applied to any given fact setting.

[iv] Presence of Some Other Risk-reducing Factor. The fourth and final factor established in Reves is whether there is a risk-reducing factor suggesting that the instrument in question is not a security. In Reves, the notes were uncollateralized and uninsured. The Court drew a distinction between them and FDIC insured certificates of deposit, which were involved in Marine Bank v. Weaver, or the ERISA regulated pension plans that were the subject of International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Daniel. n112 In both of those cases, the presence of a comprehensive regulatory scheme was seen as eliminating the need for securities law protections. On the other hand, in Reves, without application of the federal securities laws the Court observed that the notes involved would escape federal regulation entirely.

Another regulatory scheme is surely not determinative on the question of notes or other evidences of indebtedness as securities. FDIC insured certificates of deposit do not appear among the excluded categories of instruments adopted in Reves against which family resemblance is measured, and the Supreme Court did not suggest that such instruments should be added to the list. Thus, for example, in Holloway v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., n113 the court post-Reves reaffirmed its holding that thrift certificates and passbook savings certificates issued by the finance and trust subsidiaries of a bank holding company were securities. The court found no resemblance between such instruments and anything on the excluded list in Reves. In its second stage analysis, i.e., whether the instruments should be added to the list via application of the four factors, the court found nothing to alter its earlier conclusion on any applicable factor, including the existence of "other" regulation. In Holloway, the instruments were subject only to state regulation. The court limited application of the Reves risk-reducing factor to other federal regulation. n114

The proper inquiry is whether there is any risk-reducing factor that alters to some significant degree the characteristics of an instrument, whether a note or any other evidence of indebtedness, such that securities law protections are not needed. n115 As in the past, collateral will continue to play a role in the post-Reves environment. n116 Adequate collateralization not only operates to diminish a lender's dependence upon the success of the borrower to secure its return but is also evidence of such broader points as the lender's bargaining position, access to information concerning the transaction, and, in general, its ability to secure protection. n117 Other protections against a lender's risk, such as forms of guarantees, are also possible. The array of available risk-reducing mechanisms or factors in debtor/creditor relationships is considerable.

It is well to remember that in applying this Reves factor, other regulation is but one avenue to displacement of the federal securities laws where notes and other evidences of indebtedness are involved. None of the instruments comprising the list of non-securities embraced in Reves is subject to any comprehensive scheme of other regulation. Yet, the Court instructs that they are on the list because of fundamental characteristics that include risk-reducing factors.

[d] The Commercial Paper Exclusion and Demand Notes. In Reves, the Supreme Court was unanimous in holding that the definition of notes as securities should be controlled by the "family resemblance" test. However, the Court was sharply divided over the operation of the statutory exclusion from the definition of security for any "note ... which has a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding nine months." This aspect of Reves involves Section 3(a)(10) of the Exchange Act, which incorporates the exclusion directly into the definition of a security for purposes of that act. Securities Act § 2(1) does not incorporate an exclusion within its definition but, rather, creates a category of "Exempted Securities" under § 3(a)(3) of the Securities Act as follows:

Any note, draft, bill of exchange, or bankers' acceptance which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which has a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding nine months, exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal thereof the maturity of which is likewise limited.

This exclusion is thought primarily to cover short term commercial paper -- notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and bankers' acceptances that are eligible for discount at a Federal Reserve Bank. n118 In Reves, however, the particular notes at issue were demand notes, and that feature triggered the prospect of statutory exclusion by reason of the fact that demand for payment could be made within nine months.

A bare majority of the Reves Court interpreted the statutory exclusion as not covering the Co-Op notes because demand notes do not necessarily have short terms and exclusion of these notes would be inconsistent with the broadly protective purpose of the federal securities laws. However, the majority opinion on this issue clearly left open the possibility of a different conclusion where the design of a transaction is such that both parties contemplate demand being made within the statutory period. n119

While the further contours of the statutory exclusion for "demand" notes will be developed case-by-case, it is clear that the exclusions from the definition of security in both the Securities Act and the Exchange Act will operate where "commercial paper" is involved. Indeed, concurring in the majority opinion in Reves, Justice Stevens characterized this conclusion as so well established that "[a] departure from this reliable consensus would upset the justified expectations of both the legal and investment communities." n120

In Tanner v. State Corporation Commission, n121 the Virginia Supreme Court most recently underscored that the nine month commercial paper exclusion found in that state's securities law, which mirrors the federal exclusions, is not controlled simply by a less than nine month maturity. Rather, the essential inquiry is whether true "commercial paper" is involved in the transaction. The nine month notes in Tanner were not prime quality negotiable paper, and were sold to the general public. The instruments thus did not qualify for the exclusion despite their less than nine month maturities.

Beyond the consensus associated with commercial paper, the status of demand notes generally as securities after Reves is entirely a matter of context. The note may qualify for exclusion if it can clearly be shown that the parties' expectations and intentions for the instrument are that demand will be made within the statutory period and that excluding it is consistent with the protective purposes of the federal securities laws. It is highly unlikely (indeed after Reves it would be ill-advised) that a court would exclude a short-term note used in what is plainly an "investment" setting simply because the parties have designed the transaction to require payment, or demand for it, to occur within nine months. The "commercial paper" exclusion involves implicit assumptions concerning the nature of the instruments, the parties involved, and the context. The door to its extension for some demand notes may have been opened in Reves, but passage remains closely guarded.

[e] Other Evidences of Indebtedness.

The presumption after Reves that all "notes" are securities may logically be extended to any evidence of indebtedness that arises out of a debtor/creditor relationship. n122 The "family resemblance" test, and second-stage analysis under the

Reves four factors, are triggered by the circumstances of a transaction rather than the label affixed to the particular form of debt instrument involved. n123

[i] Loan Participations. In some cases, it will be necessary to determine whether a particular instrument or set of circumstances involves a note or other evidence of indebtedness in order to be evaluated under the Reves factors at all. Such a determination is often required with respect to "participations" of various forms related to or involved in debt financing. Loan participations in which a lead lender, in order to spread credit risk, arranges for a group of financial institutions to fund portions of a loan or line of credit to a borrower (often by means of a "master participation agreement" or like instrument) have generally been held not to constitute securities. To be sure, a "note" of the borrower underlies the financing, but institutions participating in the credit occupy a position no different from that of any commercial lender for purposes of ascertaining "family resemblances" under Reves. Their interest is tied directly to the direct relationship with the borrower, and the "participation" agreement or relationship establishes no separate identity from the underlying instrument. n124

Other kinds of "participation" interests may, however, be deemed to be securities. For example, although an underlying financing or credit relationship may not involve a security, a participation in it may. n125 This is in keeping with the caveat expressed by the Supreme Court in Marine Bank v. Weaver, that "[e]ach transaction must be analyzed and evaluated on the content of the instruments in question, the purposes intended to be served, and the factual setting as a whole." n126 The key, post-Reves, is to demonstrate circumstances and expectations that set the transaction apart from an ordinary commercial credit relationship, and present a risk that is different from usual business or credit risk. n127 Purchasing an undivided interest in a pool of loans, rather than participating in a specific, identifiable loan, may have all the essential characteristics of a security transaction. n128 Application of Reves factors resulted in a "certificate of participation," which represented the right to receive payments of principal and interest under an instrument involved in financing the construction and operation of a county government facility being deemed a security in which the instrument had "all the earmarks of a note as that term is commonly understood." n129 In Putnam Diversified Premium Income Trust, n130 the SEC examined the question of loan participations as securities for purposes of portfolio investment limitations imposed on closed-end management investment companies under the Investment Company Act of 1940. Expressing the view that loan participations should be considered securities in that context, the Staff supplied insight into the true sense of the inquiry:

[W]hile it would be difficult to generalize as to their characteristics, the loan participations in which the Fund proposes to invest will possess risk attributes which strongly suggest securities treatment. These include the risk of insolvency of the underlying debtor and/or issuing bank, and the risk that the debtor will prepay principal if interest rates fall, which would require the Fund to reinvest these prepayments at potentially lower yields. Additionally, the Fund will purchase loan participations solely for investment purposes. Except for its investigation of the creditworthiness of the corporate borrower, the Fund will have no involvement in the commercial transactions underlying the original loans. The Fund's transactions in loan participations, viewed as a whole, will be handled no differently from transactions involving other U.S. Government, domestic high yield and international debt instruments. n131

As a matter of "earmarks" or any other description or characterization of a note or evidence of indebtedness and "participations" involving them after Reves, the ultimate determination of family resemblance to a non-security classification necessarily entails such an inquiry as this. What the instrument or interest represents in the hands of the particular buyer, in the context of the transaction and the buyer's business, and the logical view of the circumstances as a whole, will bear heavily on the outcome.

[ii] Mortgage Pools. As with loan "participations" generally, an interest or participation in a pool of real estate mortgages may involve a security, despite the fact that an individual underlying mortgage loan falls squarely within a non-security classification of notes under Reves. The main considerations have been articulated thusly:

[A] note secured by a mortgage on a single home is typically not a security because the return on investment therefrom is not derived from the entrepreneurial or managerial efforts of others ... However, participation interests in a managed pool of mortgage notes are securities Such interest in amalgamated mortgage notes are securities because any profits realized are derived from the managerial efforts of those who run the pool and make such decisions as determining which mortgages shall be in the pool, and how the individual notes will be serviced and managed, and other fund decisions. Thus, a commercial mortgage-maker ... may sell two different kinds of investment products to the public: 1) individual notes, which are not securities; and 2) interests in a managed pool, which are securities. n132

In making this determination, courts apply "investment contract" analysis, which emphasizes economic reality and the expectations of people regarding success of the investment being dependent on the efforts of others. "Securitization" programs involving the packaging and distribution of interests in a managed pool of mortgages may easily present investment contract elements. n133 On the other hand, the purchase of specific mortgages, on specific properties, involves different expectations and, presumably, an entirely different set of characteristics that determine family resemblance under Reves. n134

[iii] Bank Checks and Deposit Relationships. Bank checks, which would normally be regarded as cash substitutes, may become evidences of indebtedness. n135 However, checks were held not to be securities where post-dated instruments were used in the context of a loan obtained to correct cash flow problems. The post-dated checks represented payment of principal and interest on the loan, and the substance of the transaction was seen as falling within the Reves family of excluded instruments. n136 In a similar vein, a bona fide personal loan has been held not to involve a security. n137

Deposit relationships present specialized evidences of indebtedness. On the one hand, bank or savings and loan institution certificates of deposit, passbook savings accounts and the like do not evoke notions of "investments" and associated risk in an "other" regulation environment. n138 The instruments associated with such relationships would, in the main, qualify for exemption from the Securities Act in any event. n139 Moreover, under Reves, despite the fact that an evidence of indebtedness is plainly involved, the four factors required to establish a category of family resemblance -- particularly motivation and "other regulation" -- would normally operate to prevent these instruments from being securities. Other regulation protecting holders of bank-issued instruments was the key to the holding in Marine Bank v. Weaver that a certificate of deposit issued by a federally regulated, FDIC insured bank was not a security. The reasoning has been extended to certificates of deposit issued by a federal and state regulated credit union, with the observation that to apply federal securities laws would unnecessarily "double-coat" the transactions. n140 A certificate of deposit that does not involve a shifting of risk to the holder will not be deemed to be a security. n141

Nevertheless, in Holloway v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., n142 the court applied Reves to hold that "thrift certificates" and passbook savings certificates issued by the finance and trust subsidiaries of a bank holding company were securities. The court saw no family resemblance to a classification excluded under Reves and found no basis for creating another excluded category where there was no other federal regulation involved and the instruments were issued to a broad class of persons as a vehicle for raising capital. n143

There is also little doubt that investment schemes involving bank accounts will not avoid being considered securities simply because bank instruments are present. In SEC v. Deyon, n144 a program touting 85% monthly returns from deposits made into a Mexican bank account was held to be a security applying "investment contract" analysis. The bank account was represented to potential investors as being safe because, among other things, the bank was supported by the Mexican government. The court, however, found the factual scenario to be "bizarre and incredulous." Although there was no question in the case that individuals did make deposits into the Mexican bank account, the court found that the depositors faced the risk that interest the bank offered could fall significantly, and imperil any return. The depositors were characterized as participants with the promoters of the bank account for the expected return, and that there was a pro rata sharing of profits, thus establishing either vertical or horizontal commonality for purposes of finding an investment contract. Moreover any claim of legitimacy of the bank account was vitiated by fraud in the promotion of the scheme. The case simply illustrates that circumstances evidencing the need for protection of the federal securities laws may outweigh more parochial notions whether bank instruments and deposit relationships fall within the definition of security.

Outside the bank account setting, an instrument relating to the "deposit" of an asset acquired for investment has been held not to be a security where the bank acts only as a depository and the investment is with the offering corporation. n145

[iv] Guarantees. A guarantee of a debt represented by a note may be a separate security in its own right, n146 but may also be merged with the associated obligation for consideration under Reves as a promissory note. n147 The scope of the terms "note" and "evidence of indebtedness" in Section 2(1) plainly is not to be bounded by any precise criteria. The second-stage analysis under Reves is capable of broad application to the full range of instruments and transactions where the fundamental issue is the need for securities law protection in any debtor/creditor relationship.

[2] Stock

[a] Generally. Surely there is no more common perception of a security than "stock." Indeed, it has been characterized as the "paradigm of a security." n148 Yet, in United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, n149 the U.S. Supreme Court instructed that there is more to a security than the label affixed. Section 2(1) may reference "any stock," but unlike notes in the post-Reves environment, there is no clearly stated presumption that "stock" is a security. Indeed where stock is involved, the Supreme Court, in Forman and Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, n150 has instructed that the "stock" label assigned to an instrument is determinative only when it is matched by characteristics generally associated with actual corporate stock. Though outwardly akin to a "family resemblance" test, the approach to stock is much more direct. There is little room for application of context or transactional factors that now dominate post-Reves analyses of notes as securities. n151

In Forman, the Supreme Court held that shares of "stock" in a state-sponsored cooperative housing project were not securities. The Court emphasized the characteristics of the instrument as the controlling consideration under Section 2(1). Under Forman, "stock" possessing traditional characteristics--a "standardized" instrument in commerce -- is a security under Section 2(1). The Court identified the characteristics generally associated with such an instrument as these:

- (1) the right to receive dividends when profits are apportioned, the "most common feature;"
- (2) negotiability;
- (3) the capacity for pledge or hypothecation;
- (4) voting rights proportionate to the number of shares owned; and
- (5) the potential to appreciate in value. n152

These characteristics indicate attributes of an instrument that is recognizable as "stock" and that would "lead a purchaser justifiably to assume that the federal securities laws apply." n153

The "stock" involved in Forman possessed none of these characteristics and represented only the right to a residential apartment. No purchaser could rationally look upon the "stock" as presenting an investment decision, and the economic realities were such that no other conclusion could obtain. As the Supreme Court characterized the situation:

There is no doubt that purchasers in this housing cooperative sought to obtain a decent home at an attractive price. But that type of economic interest characterizes every form of commercial dealing. What distinguishes a security transaction -- and what is absent here -- is an investment where one parts with his money in the hope of receiving profits from the efforts of others, and not where he purchases a commodity for personal consumption or living quarters for personal use. n154

Economic reality -- disregarding form for substance -- has long been the "touchstone" of inquiries into the existence of a security. n155 It is something that may be embodied in the instrument itself. A share of "stock" possessing traditional characteristics by its very nature evidences the economic reality that underlies any security, that is, separation from control over the value determinants of the interest represented and a reliant position with respect to information needed to evaluate risk. The determination that stock possessing traditional characteristics is a security is now virtually automatic, n156 and courts are not required to look beyond the character of the instrument to the economic substance of the transaction. n157

The protections of the federal securities laws have rarely been denied to purchasers of corporate stock. The Supreme Court opinions in Landreth n158 and the companion case, Gould v. Ruefenacht, n159 underscore the fact that the characteristics traditionally associated with corporate stock not only identify the instrument in commerce as an investment security but also evidence the "typical kind of context" in which the securities laws normally operate. n160 It is, said the Court, a matter of the plain meaning of the statutory definition.

In Landreth and Gould, the Supreme Court rejected the "Sale of Business" doctrine formulated in several lower court decisions that had denied securities law protections to purchasers of all or a substantial amount of a corporation's stock to acquire control. Despite the presence of corporate stock, courts embracing the doctrine found no security by reason of the control vested in the purchaser. The Supreme Court held that where the focus is upon corporate stock possessing traditional attributes, there is to be no definitional distinction made on the basis of transactional circumstances. The Court declared in Landreth:

Reading the securities laws to apply to the sale of stock at issue here comports with Congress' remedial purpose in enacting the legislation to protect investors by "compelling full and fair disclosure relative to the issuance of 'the many types of instruments that in our commercial world fall within the ordinary concept of a security.' " Although we recognize that Congress did not intend to provide a comprehensive remedy for all fraud, we think it would improperly narrow Congress' broad definition of "security" to hold that the traditional stock at issue here falls outside the Act's coverage. n161

Where protection has been denied for "stock" transactions it is because the object of protection -- an investment decision -- is not in evidence. n162 Or, as Forman so clearly demonstrates, protection will be denied where there is no legitimate expectation of protection shown. Where "stock" is the focal point, the expectations of purchasers take on much importance. The conclusion in Forman that purchasers of the "stock" involved there could not be misled by use of the label into thinking that the securities laws applied to their transactions was central to the decision. However, in Landreth the Court contrasted the situations, noting that by the nature of the instrument itself -- actual corporate stock -- it was likely that an investor would believe that securities law protections would apply. n163

Use of the term "stock" may produce an expectation of securities law protection, and where the instrument involved is corporate stock possessing traditional attributes, no further inquiry is necessary after Landreth and Gould. But use of the term will not reasonably lead to such an expectation in all cases, and it remains true that not all "stock" is a security, even where the context is a business enterprise.

Business co-op cases illustrate distinctions in attributes of "stock" and the effect on expectations of those who purchase it. Participation in a business cooperative may be evidenced by "stock," but the typical characteristics of the enterprise are these:

- (1) all members participate directly in management;

- (2) all members act together to set policy;
- (3) the "stock" involved is non-negotiable and may not be pledged or hypothecated;
- (4) the "stock" cannot appreciate in value, since termination of membership requires the sale of the stock back to the co-op at a predetermined price, or in accordance with a predetermined formula; and
- (5) no dividends are paid, as members are paid in accordance with contributions to the productivity of the enterprise. n164

In contrast to Forman and the housing cooperative cases, a business cooperative may pursue profits and be viewed as an enterprise in which the members are motivated by the prospect of economic success. Yet the purchasers of its "stock" do not take securities because they do not make an investment decision. In Great Rivers Cooperative of Southeastern Iowa v. Farmland Industries, Inc., n165 the court held that "capital credits" which, among other things, included the right to purchase stock issued by the coop, were not securities because they lacked essential characteristics. Although they were financial interests that were transferable under limited circumstances, and convertible into common stock by qualified holders, the capital credits were non-voting and conferred no dividend rights. Chief among the factors applied by the court to conclude that no security was involved was the expectation of members:

"[T]he class members enter into the cooperative relationship not in the expectation of the profits that will be generated from such a relationship but instead to reap the benefits of that relationship. The capital credits are non-interest bearing and thus do not provide the valuable return on an investment normally expected from the purchase of a security." n166

The credits involved here reflected a membership or former membership in the cooperative, and their sole value, the court observed, laid in future redemption at face value. In business coop relationships, members base their decisions to join on the effectiveness of the services provided rather than on the risk inherent in an investment. Regulation as a security, said the court, "would do little to protect or advance the interests of the cooperatives' members or patrons." n167

Even where actual stock is involved, the relationship between parties may still be characterized as something other than "corporate," such that the protections of the securities laws could be denied. Where, for example, a relationship among entrepreneurs is actually a joint venture in which the parties actively participate in the management of the business, a "joint venture gloss" may be applied to defeat securities law claims where the factual setting contradicts essential aspects of a securities transaction. A true partnership or joint venture relationship is the antithesis of a security. The presence of corporate "stock" possessing all traditional characteristics means little where stockholders are in fact active entrepreneurs and managers in the enterprise. n168

Post-Landreth state courts have shown a willingness to examine circumstances to determine whether in coming together to pursue a business enterprise active participants create what is actually a partnership in corporate form. n169 In these analyses the corporate stock, regardless of its characteristics, may be deemed insignificant in relation to the apparent direct contributions to the success of the enterprise that are the true focus of a transaction in which the combination of resources trumps any "investment" characteristics. This analysis is at the heart of considerations of "close corporation agreements" discussed further below.

In many of these situations one may fairly conclude that there is no security expectation tied to the "stock" involved. However, after Landreth, a true "corporate" relationship based upon stock ownership can change expectations and perceptions, if not the reality. Consider, for example, Sulkow v. Crosstown Apparel, Inc., n170 in which "corporate stock" of a closely-held corporation involving three equal shareholders was held to be a security because the stock carried proportional voting rights, rights to dividends, and the capacity to appreciate in value. The fact that Crosstown was a close corporation and that a shareholders' agreement placed limitations on transferability of the stock was insufficient, said the court, to negate the character of the stock as a security.

The advent of "close corporation agreements" as a matter of state corporation law adds a new wrinkle to the issue of stock as a security in an otherwise standard corporate setting. In order to allow for negotiated shareholder rights, responsibilities, minority protections, and, in effect, to permit closely held corporations and their shareholders to be governed as if the corporation were a partnership, the typical "close corporation agreement" now authorized under state law n171 empowers shareholders to agree among themselves on such matters as:

- (1) Regulation of management the business and affairs of the corporation;
- (2) The right of one or more shareholders to dissolve the corporation at will, or on the occurrence of a specified event;
- (3) Voting obligations among shareholders;
- (4) The designation of directors and officers;
- (5) Terms and conditions of employment of officers and other employees;
- (6) Dividend policy;
- (7) The scope of directors' authority;
- (8) Access to books and records;
- (9) Limitations on the issuance of new shares; and
- (10) Deadlock resolution procedures.

To empower corporate shareholders in the manner that is functionally equivalent to partnership or joint venture relationships, in which no security is involved, is to test the meaning of Landreth's "traditional attributes" premise. The association among agreeing shareholders may be "corporate," but an essential aspect of a security -- separation from control over value determinants -- is missing. In Sulkow, the court viewed the limitations imposed by an agreement among the shareholders as insufficient to negate the character of the stock as a security. The much broader powers and internal affairs constraints possible under a close corporation agreement, however, may be quite sufficient to change the character of "stock," particularly where the express purpose of allowing such agreements is to empower shareholders as if they were partners. The contours of the definition of "stock" as a security in this special context remain to be shaped. Plainly, however, the Landreth admonition that "stock" is a security when it matches characteristics generally associated with corporate stock mandates careful analysis of the impact of a close corporation agreement in light of the protections intended by the Securities Act. n172

In any event, the contemporary Supreme Court cases focusing on "stock" as a security teach the wisdom of the observation, many years earlier in SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., that whatever the subject matter of a transaction may be, whether or not it involves a security, will not be determined solely by the label of what is being sold but equally by "what character the instrument is given ... by the terms of the offer, the plan of distribution, and the economic inducements held out to the prospect." n173 Corporate stock is a security because its traditional attributes make it so and because, in the main, its character in commerce is established.

This is not to impose an absolutely "literal" application of the definition of security in Section 2(1). In both Landreth and Gould, as it had done in Forman, the Supreme Court eschewed an approach to defining a security that would invoke coverage simply because an instrument carried the label "stock." Application of a joint venture gloss in a particular setting to defeat or avoid security status despite the presence of stock remains possible. However, where traditional stock is involved, and the instrument thus falls plainly within the statutory definition, "[t]here is no need ... to look beyond the characteristics of the instrument to determine whether the Acts apply." n174

[b] Traditional Attributes, Economic Reality, and the Meaning of "Stock." In Landreth and Gould the Supreme Court revitalized the meaning of the much earlier observation of the Court concerning "stock" as an instrument that is "pretty much standardized [with] the name alone carr[ying] well settled meaning." n175 Such a standardized notion is a function of the traditional attributes of the instrument, i.e., dividend rights, negotiability, the ability to be pledged or hypothecated, voting rights and the ability to appreciate in value. Thus, in Gould the Court added:

In Landreth, we held that where an instrument bears the label "stock" and possesses all of the characteristics typically associated with stock, a court will not be required to look beyond the character of the instrument to the economic substance of the transaction to determine whether the stock is a "security" within the meaning of the Acts. n176

Landreth and Gould direct attention to the traditional attributes of corporate stock as the guide on which instruments labeled stock are to be examined. The attributes of corporate stock are identifiable and capable of consistent, predictable application. As the Court observed in Landreth:

Instruments that bear both the name and all of the usual characteristics of stock seem to us to be the clearest case for coverage by the plain language of the definition. First, traditional stock "represents to many people, both trained and untrained in business matters, the paradigm of a security." Thus persons trading in traditional stock likely have a high expectation that their activities are governed by the Acts. Second, ... "stock" is relatively easy to identify because it lends itself to consistent definition. n177

Implicit in the Court's holdings that traditional attributes of corporate stock supply the parameters of the statutory definition is emphasis upon the real object of securities law protection -- an investment decision. Lower court decisions previously embracing the "Sale of Business" doctrine focused entirely upon post-purchase considerations in defining the nature of the stock being purchased. However, it must be remembered that the purchase of corporate stock entails a decision to purchase what the stock and all of its "attributes" then represent, that is, an interest in the net assets and future earnings stream of the corporation. The value of real stock is determined by the ability of the corporation to succeed in the future and to produce an expected return. The investment risk in the purchase is that the stock is presently misvalued.

The bundle of "characteristics" that evidences real corporate stock more fundamentally evidences the investment decision being made when it is purchased. "Economic reality" after Landreth and Gould necessarily means that the presence of "stock" with attributes that match the conventional perception of the term not only prompts a legitimate expectation of securities law protection but the characteristics themselves are such as to warrant the special protection of the Acts.

Some state courts looking to Landreth and Gould for guidance in the application of blue sky law definitions patterned after the federal acts have fashioned a decidedly literal stock "characteristics" test. Under this test, the controlling question is whether the stock bears such characteristics usually associated with corporate common stock so that a purchaser justifiably may assume that securities laws apply. n178 Some caution is in order. A "literal" test is not the message of the Supreme Court cases. The cases do not stand for the proposition that any stock displaying traditional characteristics is a security. The presumption may be large, but the analysis in Forman is in no way lessened, and indeed in Landreth the Court made it explicit. n179 Innovations such as "close corporation agreements" and operating agreements that define relationships among members of a "limited liability company," all of which impact fundamental aspects of a securities transaction in a particular "corporate" relationship, will yet have to be confronted case-by case. However, the Supreme Court decisions surely do redirect the focus of attention to the reality of stock in a commercial universe rather than a transaction-specific analysis of the meaning of the instrument for a particular purchaser. n180

[3] Bonds

Like stock, "bonds" are generally perceived to be securities. Case authority pertaining to the status of bonds under the securities laws is scarce. In Marine Bank v. Weaver, n181 the Supreme Court simply noted without analysis that "ordinary bonds" are clearly securities. n182 The characteristics of an "ordinary" bond would appear to raise no question of security status under Section 2(1). However, as Marine Bank and the cases focusing on notes, certificates of deposit, and other forms of evidences of indebtedness well illustrate, the character of a thing in commerce and its attributes affecting risk can alter the assessment. n183 Thus, in Wingsco Energy One v. Vanguard Groups Resources, Inc. 1984, Inc., n184 zero coupon bonds were held not to be securities. Plaintiffs were investors in a series of leveraged oil and gas limited partnerships in which the partnerships purchased zero coupon bonds that were pledged as collateral for loans to the partnerships. Plaintiffs claimed that they were purchasers, through the partnerships, of the zero coupon bonds and asserted securities law claims. The court rejected their claims, finding that the "bonds" were simply "commercial notes" used to secure a loan rather than any "speculation or investment." n185

There are no attributes or "traditional" characteristics of bonds that prompt a swift conclusion on security status. Marine Bank itself best illustrates the extent to which attributes of the instrument bear upon risk assessment. The certificate of deposit issued by the bank had the basic characteristics of a bond, i.e., a long term debt instrument with a fixed rate of return. Yet, because of other regulation and the virtual full guarantee of repayment assured by FDIC insurance, the instrument was held not to be a security. Bonds, on the other hand, involve at least a credit risk, that can easily be translated into an "investment" risk where the expected future income stream associated with the bond is dependent upon the issuer's ability to generate sufficient revenues to pay it.

Corporate bonds are typically offered in public distributions, the instruments typically have long maturities, and manifest characteristics of an investment in the issuer's enterprise. Government or municipal bonds, though publicly offered, are most often distinguished by government guarantees. As such, their characteristics differ to the extent that most are specifically exempted from registration requirements under the Securities Act, n186 some even from the express antifraud remedy prescribed in Section 12(a)(2) of the Securities Act. n187 However, investment programs or schemes built around otherwise exempt securities will not escape application of all aspects of the Securities Act to the plan or program itself via an application of "investment contract" analysis, or another catchall term in the Section 2(1) definition.

The general perception of a bond as a security prompts thoughtful consideration of the caveat, in United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, that use of the term "bond" itself may lead to a finding that an instrument not intended to be a bond may be one and that the purchaser may legitimately expect the availability of securities law protections. n188 Conversely, use of "bonds" to capitalize a business enterprise in which the purchaser expects to play a significant managerial role would lead to a conclusion that the bonds are not securities. As with stock, the economic reality of the circumstances will dictate the availability of securities law protections where the generally recognized characteristics of the instrument do not fit the circumstances in which it appears. Labeling an instrument as a "bond" in an entrepreneurial setting in which the purchaser is directly involved in the operation of the enterprise may have no significance in circumstances where it is clear that protections of the securities laws are not needed, and not reasonably expected. n189

[4] Voting Trust and Collateral Trust Certificates; Other Commercial Trust Instruments

The Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission" or "SEC") observed in an early Release that the express inclusion of voting trust certificates in Section 2(1) left no question that these certificates are securities under the Securities Act. n190 Consideration of voting trust certificates under the Securities Act would most likely arise in an antifraud setting. However, in some circumstances, a public offering of the certificates may be deemed to exist. In some states, for example, all stockholders of a corporation are entitled to deposit their shares under the terms of a voting trust agreement. Since the certificates are securities, and the voting trust is open to all shareholders, a public offering may exist, thus triggering the full range of compliance responsibilities. n191 Collateral trust certificates, on the other hand, are specifically identified as securities, but their issuance is not likely ever to involve a public offering with attendant registration requirements. Collateral trust certificates (or bonds) represent an interest by collateral deposited by a borrower with a trustee. The collateral may consist of stocks or bonds of a company controlled by the issuer, or other securities. Such a transaction involves an agreement on the part of the borrower to pledge these other securities with a trustee, who acts as the lenders' representative and whose duty it is, in the case of default to realize on the collateral. The "certificate" is evidence of the holder's interest in the collateral securing the obligation, which collateral is comprised of securities other than those of the borrower. Although a somewhat archaic form of financing arrangement, the attributes of a collateral trust certificate can be assessed in modern terms of value determinants and other factors evidencing a security. n192

Voting trust certificates and collateral trust certificates are the only trust instruments specifically identified in Section 2(1). However, the Securities Act specifically contemplates that any trust may be an "issuer" of securities, n193 and the expanding financial services environment has led to the development of new trust programs that are scrutinized under the Securities Act.

While a typical commercial trust account with a financial institution evidences no investment character and is not deemed to be a security, the creation of trust accounts for commingled funds having investment objectives may well create a security. As the court observed in one such case, SEC v. Professional Associates: n194 "[T]he classification of an investment as a trust does not ipso facto prevent it from being a security if it in actuality ... fits the description of an investment contract under the securities law." n195 Contemporary analyses look to the purpose of the program. If trust assets are received for a true fiduciary purpose rather than as an investment vehicle, no security will be found. n196 But, where funds are received for collective investment and management services, often as a result of promotional and marketing campaigns, interests in the collective investment fund may be deemed to be securities. The question is whether there is a departure from true fiduciary service that leads instead to reliance upon investment skill. n197

Though not a trust vehicle per se, private, mortgage-backed "pass-through certificates" have been found to be securities on the basis of a collective investment trust analogy. These instruments represent an undivided percentage ownership in a trust that, in turn, consists of a pool of conventional mortgage receivables of a financial institution. In Securities Industry Association v. Clarke, n198 a plan proposed to be undertaken by a national bank to offer publicly such certificates was challenged as a violation of Glass-Steagall Act prohibitions against bank underwriting of securities. The bank claimed that the certificates were not securities but, rather, only represented an interest in its own assets. The court disagreed, finding that the certificates represented the right to receive apportioned interest profits, were negotiable, and had the potential for appreciation. Relying on United Housing Foundation Inc. v. Forman, and the attributes addressed there, the court thus held the certificates to be securities.

[5] Certificates of Deposit for Securities; Receipts for Securities

A "certificate of deposit for a security" and a "receipt for [a security]" are expressly included as securities in Section 2(1). The term "certificate of deposit for a security" has its roots in instruments issued by a protective committee, and reflect a security interest in a company undergoing reorganization. n199 These certificates should be distinguished from a certificate of deposit representing a deposit of cash or cash equivalents in a bank. n200

The notion of "certificate of deposit for a security" is not well developed outside the reorganization setting. However, its potential application in other areas is illustrated by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., n201 in which the SEC staff declined to issue no-action advice that certificates for undivided participations in a security would not themselves be securities.

The "certificates" in issue were proposed to be publicly offered and represented undivided interests in a "guaranteed investment contract," or funding agreement. Relying on the analysis of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in Gary Plastics Packaging Corp. v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc.,ⁿ²⁰² the staff opined that issuing such certificates was no different than publicly offering interests in bank certificates of deposits, and that the plan would thus create a security. It is not clear whether these programs represent certificates of deposit for securities or are simply investment contracts themselves. In either case, the consequences for the issuer are the same.

American Depository Receipts (ADRs), which evidence an interest in foreign securities held by a depository to facilitate trading, are securities.ⁿ²⁰³

ADR trading usually involves at least two banks: a foreign bank located where the foreign company selling its shares is organized or transacts business and a United States bank. A company deposits certificates for the underlying securities with the foreign bank and, when that bank confirms the deposit, the United States bank issues the ADRs. Receipts may then be traded without having to mail certificates between countries. While the ADR simply evidences the underlying security on deposit with the foreign bank, it is the functional equivalent of the security when offered to investors.

Other investment vehicles which represent an interest in underlying government securities also illustrate this form of security. However, a receipt for a security is not itself a security if it merely evidences obligations of an ordinary bailee as, for example, where a transfer agent issues a window ticket evidencing the deposit of securities for transfer.ⁿ²⁰⁴

[6] Guarantees

A "guarantee" of a security is included within Section 2(1) as being a security itself.ⁿ²⁰⁵ It is certain, however, that there is no commonly understood meaning or set of traditional characteristics that mark such an instrument as a security.ⁿ²⁰⁶ Thus, investment contract analysis is more likely to be applied in determining whether such an instrument qualifies as a security as a matter of economic reality rather than attempting to characterize an instrument or arrangement as a security merely because of the included label.ⁿ²⁰⁷

Separate security status for a "guarantee" could arise in circumstances in which a debt security, for example, is guaranteed as to principal, interest, or both, by a party other than the issuer. To illustrate, if Company X wishes to undertake a major project but is unable to finance the project itself, it may look to Company Y to become involved in a joint undertaking in which both will share in the project and its benefits. Company X may issue bonds separately guaranteed by Company Y. The bonds are securities, but the separate guarantee may also be a security. In the hands of purchasers, the guarantee, as a separate security, may have important ramifications under the antifraud provisions of the securities laws. Indeed, it may be the actual focus of the investment decision.ⁿ²⁰⁸

[7] Warrants and Subscription Rights

A right to purchase a security may take the form of a warrant (a separate freely traded instrument) or a form of contract (a "subscription right"). When a company wishes to raise additional funds by issuing additional securities, it may give its shareholders the opportunity, ahead of others, to purchase the new securities in proportion to the number of shares each owns. Through a "rights offering," the shareholders, for the exercise price of the "right," may purchase one or more of the new shares at a specified price, typically below the prevailing market price. In other situations, a "warrant" may be used specifying the rights of the shareholder.ⁿ²⁰⁹

Generally speaking, a warrant or right to subscribe is a contract that allows the holder to purchase a security at a future date on specified terms. Logically, a right to purchase a security, offered in circumstances no different from those that would involve the offer and sale of the subject security itself, should be treated no differently. However, in some circumstances conveying a contract right to acquire a security may evoke no concerns for making the protections of the securities laws available. In Rispo v. Spring Lake Mews, Inc.,ⁿ²¹⁰ for example, a promise to deliver stock as partial consideration for a loan was held not to constitute a warrant or right. "Commercial context" was apparent, and the arrangement did not evidence the "very specific sort of written agreement" indicative of a warrant or right for purposes of the securities laws. n211

However structured and evidenced, the substance of the transaction is the conveyance of the right to acquire an underlying security. If presently exercisable, the sale or distribution of the right is the simultaneous offering of the underlying security. n212 Warrants and rights are thus specifically included as securities under Section 2(1). They need not be evidenced by a written instrument. n213 In the preorganization stage of an enterprise, where subscription rights are most common, whether security classification can be avoided through a "joint venture" gloss, or whether an exemption is available, is entirely dependent upon the circumstances.

[8] Preorganization Subscriptions

Section 2(1) further prescribes that a "preorganization certificate or subscription" for a security is itself a security. n214 In the pre-formation stage of an enterprise, the nature of the "investment" decision to be made by one committing capital to the enterprise is no different from a post-formation decision to do the same. The offer and sale of pre-formation units or subscriptions is common, and, absent an available exemption, these securities are subject to all aspects of the Securities Act. n215

Consideration of preorganization subscriptions as securities prompts a closer look at the relationship between those who "subscribe." Consider the following situation: "A" has plenty of experience in a specific business. "B" and "C" have no experience but have plenty of money. The three individuals agree to form a corporation in which each will contribute $10,000 and receive one-third of the stock. The money is quickly used up, and the corporation is never formed. "B" and "C" believe that they were deceived by "A." Are they purchasers of "securities"?

Though apparently not evidenced by an instrument, "B" and "C" purchased preorganization subscriptions in the corporation to be formed. Does the context evidence an investment character of the transaction that the securities laws are intended to protect, or are the two really participants with "A" in the organization and operation of the enterprise, i.e., joint venturers?

As with all of the specific forms of securities included in Section 2(1), there is a presumption that preorganization subscriptions entail characteristics of separation of ownership from value determinants and disparate positions with respect to material information, for which special protection is needed. The preorganization setting perhaps best illustrates the need to distinguish between co-venturers, for whom no securities law protection is available, and investors, for whom it is. A preorganization subscription is a security "unless the context otherwise requires." The interest of a true joint venture participant cannot be deemed to be a security. Presumably, joint venture participants actively participate in the management of the enterprise. The expectation of participants to do so should be no less significant in the pre-formation stage of the enterprise. A joint venture gloss may be applied to exclude the preorganization stage from coverage under the Securities Act. However, logic would require that the same gloss be applied to any other security ultimately issued upon organization of the enterprise. n216

The typical preorganization subscription process involves solicitation and a selling process no different from that which marks the offering and sale of any conventional form of security. The joint participation of entrepreneurs in the organization of a business venture does not. To examine the preorganization setting and the relationship between those involved in it is to examine the fundamental purpose of the Securities Act and to identify the setting in which it was intended to operate.

[9] Options, Derivatives and Synthetic Securities

Options. Section 2(1) specifically includes within the definition of a security any put, call, or option. Exchange-traded puts and calls, like warrants or rights, are contracts conferring the right to buy or sell a fixed number of shares of an underlying stock at a specified price during a particular period of time are themselves securities. Options are a simple form of derivative securities, meaning that their value and pricing derives from the underlying common stock, coupled with temporal factors that control pricing models. Options do not represent any equity interest in the issuer of the underlying common stock.

A call option is the right to buy shares of stock, and a put option represents the right to sell shares, at a set price during the life of the option. The seller of an option becomes obligated to deliver (in the case of a call) the stock to, or purchase (in the case of a put) the stock from, the option holder during the period of the option. If the holder of an option does not exercise it or sell it prior to expiration, the option becomes worthless. n217

In the early 1970's, with the introduction of exchange-traded options and their increasing popularity, special securities law concerns emerged. Regulatory initiatives were directed principally at market professionals and exchanges. n218 At the same time the registration and prospectus delivery procedures of the Securities Act operate to assure the dissemination of information and risk disclosure to prospective option traders.

An ever-increasing array of option instruments, particularly those relating to a group or "index" of securities, raised new questions, and jurisdictional tensions, between securities and commodities futures regulators. To address these issues and bring certainty to the regulatory process, Section 2(1) was amended in 1982 specifically to include within the definition of security "any put, call, straddle, option, or privilege on any securities (including any interest therein based upon the value thereof), or ... entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currency"

The 1982 amendments to the Securities Act, along with correlative amendments to the Commodity Exchange Act, were undertaken to clarify the respective jurisdictions of the SEC and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission with respect to innovative investment and trading instruments emergent in the 1970s that confused previously drawn lines of regulatory responsibility. Today, as a result of this legislative action, the following are included within the definition of "security" in § 2(1):

- (1) options on securities;
- (2) options on certificates of deposit;
- (3) options on security indexes or groups; and
- (4) options on foreign currencies, when such options are traded on a national securities exchange.

Exclusive jurisdiction of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, and regulation under the Commodity Exchange Act, is provided for options on commodity futures contracts and for futures contracts on a group or index of securities where, inter alia, settlement or delivery on the contract is effected in cash or by means other than the transfer of or receipt of any security, except an exempted security under § 3(a)(12) of the Securities Act (government securities). n219 Nevertheless, "index participations" -- contracts of indefinite duration based on the value of a basket, or index, of securities -- have been held not to be covered by the securities laws because they do not constitute options on a security. n220

The specific reference in Section 2(1) to puts and calls should not distract attention from the fact that security status attaches to any option that amounts to the right to purchase another security. Indeed, an option to purchase stock has been characterized in the post-Landreth era as such a traditional instrument that its existence as a security may be shown simply "by proving the document itself," and without any need to look beyond its own characteristics. n221 trading in them and the propensity of market professionals to develop and market specific options investment strategies has raised other questions concerning the creation of separate securities in the form of managed, or discretionary, trading accounts. Applying investment contract analysis, some courts have held that discretionary trading accounts involving options and other securities or commodities futures are securities. n223 These results are not a function of the particular investment vehicle employed, but the nature of option trading and strategies has made discretionary accounts built around them particularly open to scrutiny. Thus, whether the focus is on a specific option instrument or a more specialized contract vehicle, securing the right to purchase a security is no less significant than the purchase of the security itself.

While there is no question concerning the applicability of the Securities Act to options themselves, n222 the nature of

The treatment of options as securities is most often considered in the context of standardized option contracts to buy or sell listed securities that are themselves traded on national securities exchanges. However, any option contract may be deemed to be a security if the elements of an investment contract are present. In RA Investments I, LLC v. Deutsche Bank AG, n224 option contracts on foreign currency that were not traded on any recognized market, and that involved no right to physical delivery of any underlying currency, were held to be securities. The court applied investment contract analysis to determine that there was a common enterprise in which profits were to be derived solely from the efforts of others. The option contracts, identified as "foreign exchange digital contracts," represented the investment element of a complex tax planning strategy designed and marketed by the defendants to wealthy individuals. The investment element of the program was represented as a legitimate opportunity for investors to make substantial profits while enjoying very significant tax benefits of the program. Control over key elements of the investment in the option contracts was retained by the defendants, and the court found that the option contracts, when considered as part of the entire program, constituted a common enterprise under investment contract analysis. The option contracts were thus deemed to be securities. n225

Derivative and Synthetic Securities. Although not specifically addressed in Section 2(1), under the general heading of options there has emerged a genre of securities generally referred to as derivative or synthetic, which involves contracts under which counter-parties have certain rights based on the value of securities. "Synthetic" transactions, for example, typically involve cash-settled over-the-counter options and "equity swaps." Such options are not on securities themselves, but are rather based upon the value of a security. The arrangements involve cash settlements based on security values rather than any right to take possession of a security.

In Caiola v. Citibank, N.A., n226 the Second Circuit Court of Appeals concluded that "synthetic" options represented simply cash-settled over-the-counter options on an underlying stock and are therefore securities within the scope of the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws. An "option" within the definition of security is not limited, said the court to "conventional" exchange-traded options. It applies to both exchange-traded as well as over-the-counter options, and does not distinguish between physically-settled and cash-settled options. The right to take possession of a security does not define an option within the coverage of the securities laws. The court was satisfied that the broad definition of security to include an option on "any" security, as well as an option on any "group or index of securities" permits no distinction between cash-settled options and those that are settled by physical delivery. n227 Caiola illustrates that courts will find the necessary flexibility in the statutory definition of security to be certain that actual investments will not escape coverage by the creation of a new instrument that would not be covered by a more determinate definition. The transaction at issue was fairly straightforward in its link to the value of a specific underlying stock. In other situations courts will examine the structure of transactions and instruments to determine whether a security is present. Caiola demonstrates once again, however, that in all cases the key is determining economic reality of a transaction or arrangement. n228

[10] Fractional Undivided Interests in Oil, Gas, or Other Mineral Rights; Related Financing Schemes

In 1934, the SEC described the intended scope of the Securities Act regarding oil and gas interests as follows:

The amendment to the definition of the term security makes clear that the provisions of the

1-2 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 2.01

Securities Act apply to the sale of certain oil or gas interests. The ordinary royalty interest which entitles the holder to share in the oil or gas produced from a particular tract of land clearly comes within this definition. Whether such interests are transferred by deed or contract and whether under the law of the particular state in which the tract is located such interests are regarded as real estate or as personal property makes no difference in the application of the Act. The word "rights" is broad enough to make the definition applicable to interests which are regarded as giving ownership to the oil or gas in place as well as to interests which merely afford the owner the right to produce oil or gas. The Act applies, however, only to "fractional" interests. The transfer of the whole royalty interest in any tract of land, though under the terms of the lease the holder may be entitled only to a portion of the production, is not considered a transfer of a security under the Act. n229

Fractional interests in oil, gas, or mineral rights constitute interests in real property -- often leasehold interests or assignments of leases. However, SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp. n230 taught at an early date that the focus in many of these situations is not upon the conveyance of real estate but, rather, upon an enterprise and the induced expectation of profit to come from it. Joiner emphasized the dependency of value of the real property interest upon the enterprise, and the Court undertook to apply securities law protections to property rights that were clearly subject to speculation and fraud and that had no independent value. Although the Court was careful to point out that the sale of "naked leasehold rights" does not involve the sale of a security, the opinion makes it clear that when something more than a lease is involved, the concerns for securities law protection arise. The something more is investment risk, brought on by an associated value-determinative enterprise. The defendants in Joiner did not offer naked leasehold rights but, instead, held out the economic inducement of the proposed, and promised, exploration well. The defendants' proposition, said the Court:

[W]as to sell documents which offered the purchaser a chance, without undue delay or additional cost, of sharing in discovery values which might follow a current exploration enterprise. The drilling of this well was not an unconnected or uncontrolled phenomenon to which salesmen pointed merely to show the possibilities of the offered leases. The exploration enterprise was woven into these leaseholds, in both an economic and legal sense; the undertaking to drill a well runs through the whole transaction as the thread on which everybody's beads were strung. n231

Thus, if what a promoter offers is not a lease in the regular way, but actually a plan for an enterprise and profit-sharing, with the profits to come from the efforts of persons other than the "purchaser," the interest will be deemed to be a security. Congress did not intend for the Securities Act to burden the oil industry with controls designed only for traffic in securities, or impact upon ordinary financing arrangements among oil and gas developers. But it did intend to regulate the form of splitting up of mineral resources used for speculative purposes. Context thus becomes important, and investment characteristics must be identified. n232 The "common thread" in this setting need not be among a large group of purchasers. In the oil and gas setting, a one investor/one promoter relationship ("vertical commonality") may suffice so long as it is clear that the fortunes of the investor are interwoven with and dependent upon the efforts and success of the promoter. n233

Investment programs built around the sale or lease of mineral rights further illustrate contemporary applications of the Joiner principle. For example, in SEC v. International Mining Exchange, Inc., n234 interests in mines were held to be securities where there was no practical prospect for development or exploitation of individual interests. In Johnson v. Rogers, n235 not only were working interests in oil and gas leases held to be securities by definition, "turnkey" contracts for drilling and completion of wells were held to be separate securities where they were offered to investors as an inducement to increase investments in the lease interests.

These cases exemplify the Joiner approach to identifying the investment character of a property interest. The approach is certainly not limited to interests in oil, gas, or mineral rights. It is in fact a fundamental element of all "investment contract" analysis, n236 but it is well illustrated in these cases in which the expected value of the interest is so clearly dependent upon the enterprise.

Mineral interests, fractional or otherwise, have most often been evaluated as securities via investment contract analysis. That need not be the case, however, where the instrument involved plainly constitutes a "fractional undivided interest in ... mineral rights." In the post-Landreth environment, there may be no need to look beyond the characteristics of the instrument itself to determine its status as a security. n237 Still, the sale of such interests, even in prearranged programs, should not involve a security when the buyer enjoys rights and powers beyond those of a passive investor, and the presence of such powers would likely alter the characteristics of the instrument so as to preclude literal treatment. It is axiomatic that the federal securities laws are intended to protect passive investors. One who purchases a mineral interest, and with it has the means to protect his or her interest through controls on the process of development or operation, is not such a passive investor and, absent other considerations, has no legitimate expectation of securities law protection. n238

Oil and gas financing schemes have rarely escaped the securities laws. Fractional interests in producing properties are normally deemed to be securities by definition. n239 Moreover, courts have long shown a willingness to apply investment contract analysis to reach the same result. In SEC v. Crude Oil Corp. of America, n240 for example, a corporation with interests in oil royalties sold contracts for future delivery of specified quantities of oil to investors, none of whom contemplated taking actual delivery but who instead expected to profit from sales of the oil by the promoter. The purchase contract, a forward contract, provided that actual delivery was intended but further stated that if the purchaser did not demand delivery, the seller was empowered to sell the oil and remit the proceeds to the holder of the contract. The investors purchased oil; however, the court held the scheme to be an investment contract. n241

Finally, oil and gas investment funds, typically organized as limited partnerships, for the acquisition and development of producing properties involve the creation of interests deemed to be securities under several Section 2(1) classifications. Such interests may be deemed to be interests in a profit-sharing agreement, to constitute investment contracts, or, as limited partnership interests, to represent interests commonly known as securities. They often utilize preorganization subscriptions as well, another express Section 2(1) category. Whatever form the fund investment takes, the interests are securities, and they must be offered and sold in compliance with the Securities Act or pursuant to an available exemption. n242

[11] The Unconventional Forms: "Certificate of Interest In Any Profit-Sharing Agreement [or any Investment Contract]"

[a] Generally. Examination of the "conventional" instruments collected in Section 2(1), and their character in commerce, produces sensitivity to the three common elements of any form of security:

- (1) The absence of control over value determinants;
- (2) Disparate positions between seller and buyer vis-a-vis information needed to assess risk; and, as a function of both,
- (3) The presence of investment risk.

The approaches taken by the courts to conventional instruments such as notes and stock teach that the definition of a "security" is in actuality a definition of the scope of specialized securities law protections. As some courts have sought to limit protection through "context" analyses despite literal inclusion of an instrument within the definition, many more decisions have expanded the protective umbrella to reach the "[n]ovel, uncommon, or irregular devices, whatever they appear to be ..." n243 where investment characteristics are demonstrated and the need for protection evident. This expansion has come under the mantle of the "unconventional" forms of securities, most prominently the "investment contract."

"Investment contract" and "certificate of interest in any profit-sharing agreement" comprise the so-called "catchall" categories in the definition of security. n244 But for speaking of a "certificate" of interest in any profit-sharing agreement, and thus contemplating some writing, n245 Section 2(1) prescribes no attributes for either of these forms of securities. Only the ingenuity of promoters has limited the variety of schemes that have become securities by way of these categories, and it is here that practitioners face the greatest challenge. An "investment contract" is not identifiable because of its character in commerce or because of attributes that prompt its common recognition as a security. It arises out of circumstances and relationships.

The setting plays an extremely important role. It is unlikely that an investment contract will be found where the setting contradicts any asserted need for securities law protections. For example, in Behar v. Professional Network Systems, Inc., n246 the court concluded that although an agreement for financing a business undertaking ostensibly met each element of the test for an investment contract, still no security was found. The setting, said the court, was a private face-to-face negotiation in which the putative investor demanded, and received, concessions and "was not merely a passive purchaser of a security offered to the general public." The investor, the court further stated, was "able through his bargaining power to determine the terms" on which he made his advance of funds. Securities law protections were not intended to be available in this context and the claims were dismissed. n247

The concept of investment contract, as applied in all areas, has evolved from SEC v. W.J. Howey Co., n248 the landmark 1946 decision in which the Supreme Court held the sale of tracts in an orange grove, coupled with a contract for management and production, was the sale of an investment contract. The Court defined the term as follows:

[A]n investment contract for purposes of the Securities Act means a contract, transaction or scheme whereby a person invests his money in a common enterprise and is led to expect profits solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party, it being immaterial whether the shares in the enterprise are evidenced by formal certificates or by normal interests in the physical assets n249

The essence of an investment contract is the extent to which the risk of an enterprise lies within the control of someone other than the purchaser. Countless applications in the decades since Howey have shown the universe of candidates for investment contract analysis to be nearly limitless. n250 Yet, there is both a constancy and consistency in the case law considering the many and varied schemes. Before undertaking to examine the many specific areas in which "unconventional" forms of securities lurk, it is necessary to focus on the elements of an investment contract involved in all of the applications. n251

[b] The Elements of an Investment Contract.

[i] Investment of Money. In looking for an investment contract, an "investment of money" does not mean the commercial purchase of property or an interest in a tangible thing. Rather, it is the induced commitment of money or value to the purchase of something having no significant economic viability apart from a coupled scheme or structural mechanism for shared fortunes with others. This is the concept of economic reality that is the foundation of Howey, in which the Supreme Court observed that the promoters offered persons who resided in distant localities and who lacked any experience or equipment necessary to undertake cultivation, harvesting and marketing of citrus products the opportunity to contribute money and share in the enterprise operated by others. Thus, said the Court:

Such persons have no desire to occupy the land or to develop it themselves; they are attracted solely by the prospects of a return on their investment. Indeed, individual development of the plots of land that are offered and sold would seldom be economically feasible due to their small size. ... A common enterprise managed by respondents or third parties with adequate personnel and equipment is therefore essential if the investors are to achieve their paramount aim of a return on their investments. n252

While virtually any purchase of property, or interest in property, may be perceived by the purchaser to be an

"investment," such a general perception is not the focal point of protection under the federal securities laws. In Forman the Supreme Court observed that "economic interest" characterizes every form of commercial dealing, but that it does not create a security transaction. n253 Plainly stated, the special protections of the securities laws do not extend to every perceived "investment." An investment of money within the contemplation of Howey and its progeny means that the investor must commit his assets to an enterprise or venture in such a manner as to subject himself to financial loss from a risk he or she cannot manage. n254

By contrast, there is no Howey investment of money where, as an incentive to attract and retain the services of competent persons, and to provide an incentive for such key persons to expand and improve the profitability of a company, "appreciation units" are awarded to employees at management's discretion. In Orthotec, LLC v. Reo Spine, LLC. n255 The court rejected the claim that such "appreciation units" amounted to a form of equity, and were thus securities. The units allowed beneficiaries to receive cash payments in the event of a sale of the company. The units created no other rights, and offered only the opportunity to appreciate in value. Applying the Howey investment contract analysis, the court found that there was no investment of money by beneficiaries. The units, offered as an incentive, were awarded solely by management's decision. Recipients did not contribute any cash or value in exchange. Because the units failed to satisfy the first prong of the Howey test, there was no basis to proceed further.

For investment contract analysis, an investment of money also must involve an expectation of "profit." In SEC v. Edwards, n256 the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that a fixed rate of return offered by a promoter can constitute an expectation of profits under Howey. In Edwards, the Supreme Court examined a program involving the sale and leaseback of pay telephones under agreements by which the promoter provided essential managerial efforts in the placement and servicing of the telephones. The agreements provided for investor-lessors to receive fixed monthly payments representing a fixed 14% annual return. Holding that the program constituted an investment contract, the Supreme Court found that there is no reason to distinguish between promises of fixed returns and promises of variable returns when assessing the "profit" element of Howey. n257

[iii] Common Enterprise. The root of an investment contract is common enterprise, a circumstantial and economic relationship among purchasers and someone else. The notion was perhaps most cogently described in SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp. as "the thread on which everybody's beads were strung." n258 Common enterprise normally connotes some form of pooling. n259 A simple contract relationship with another will generally not constitute a common enterprise, which presumes the existence of other investors and an intertwining of their interests and expectations. A financial consulting agreement, for example, whereby an investment banking firm was engaged to assist in the search for suitable "reverse merger" candidates, was held to involve only a private service transaction and not a security. The engaging company had no expectation of receiving profits from the efforts of the investment banker or any other third party. It would benefit under the agreement only by reason of its own efforts, despite provision for payment of a fee of 10% of the value of any reverse merger transaction consummated. n260

Commonality among putative investors has historically been classified as either "vertical" or "horizontal" for investment contract analysis, with courts differing as to which approach should be required. "Vertical" commonality allows for a common enterprise between a single investor and a promoter/seller without regard to the presence of others or any pooling of interests. On the other hand, "horizontal" commonality is based upon the presence of a pool of investors whose fortunes are intertwined and collectively tied to the success of the overall venture. Horizontal commonality is "a pooling of interests not only between the developer or promoter and each individual 'investor' but also among the other investors... in short, a wheel and not just a hub and a spoke." n261 To require horizontal commonality for establishing a common enterprise is a more restrictive approach to investment contracts. n262 Nevertheless, the pooling required to satisfy horizontal commonality may in some circumstances be demonstrated simply by the design and marketing of the scheme regardless of whether it actually occurs. In SEC v. Lauer, n263 for example, the subject program for trading purported bank instruments was presented as involving the pooling of investor funds and required such pooling in order to operate as represented. n264

Vertical commonality focuses only upon the extent to which an investor's fortunes are interwoven with and dependent upon the efforts and success of the promoter/seller or a third party. As distinguished from horizontal commonality, the focus is upon the relationship between an investor and a promoter. While others may be similarly situated in relationships with the promoter, "[t]he critical factor is not the similitude or coincidence of investor input, but rather the uniformity of impact of the promoter's efforts." n265 In those cases in which vertical commonality is accepted as sufficient "common enterprise," however, it must still be shown that there is actual interdependence between the parties. n266 Interdependence does not necessarily require that there be a sharing in profits or losses, but it must be clear that the relationship involves reliance on the promoter's expertise. Thus, where vertical commonality suffices:

It is not necessary that the funds of investors are pooled; what must be shown is that the fortunes of the investors are linked with those of the promoters, thereby establishing the requisite element of vertical commonality. Thus, a common enterprise exists if a direct correlation has been established between success or failure of [the promoter's] efforts and success or failure of the investment. n267

[iii] Expectation of Profits From the Efforts of Others. The separation of ownership and control over value determinants is an element of every "security" transaction. For investment contract analysis, it is the most significant point of emphasis. Where power or rights in a transaction give the purchasers the leverage or the ability to protect themselves, no investment contract will be found. A person who is positioned to manage enterprise risk may not claim securities law protections. The Howey test prescribes a passive investor n268 who invests in a common enterprise with profits to come solely from the efforts of others. However, the term "solely" as used in Howey has not been applied in its strictest sense. When the functions an investor performs are not managerial but rather ministerial ones, investment contract status will not be denied merely because the profits are not derived "solely" from the efforts of others. As the Supreme Court itself recast the Howey test: "The touchstone is the presence of an investment in a common venture premised on a reasonable expectation of profits to be derived from the entrepreneurial or managerial efforts of others." n269 The degree of managerial control may be an issue. n270 Moreover, the expectation itself may play an important role when promotional initiatives are aimed at enticing purchasers.

The inter-relationship of induced expectations and the specific Howey criteria is richly illustrated in this Fourth Circuit assessment of the offering of "Lifetime Partnerships" for accommodations at resort facilities operated by the defunct "PTL" ministry of the Rev. James Bakker:

[T]he promotional materials used to market the LTPs can be seen as emphasizing the profit potential of the LTPs. The materials not only speak generally of the LTPs as "investment[s]," but also offer specific calculations of the true value of the LTPs as compared to their purchase price. The materials also allow the reader to infer that the value of the LTPs was enhanced by virtue of the commercial activities of the PTL facilities in catering to patrons paying the full price. Moreover, it is clear and... undisputed, that this benefit arises from the managerial efforts of others. For Howey's third prong to be satisfied, the benefit available to lifetime partners must arise either as capital appreciation or as participation in earnings. We believe that the record before us allows for the conclusion that the benefit in this case arises as capital appreciation. Under the LTP scheme, it seems that the value of the rights to use the various Heritage, USA, facilities would be enhanced, and therefore capital appreciation might accrue, by virtue of the regular commercial operations of half of all the facilities reserved by regular patrons paying full price for their accommodations. n271

In almost all instances that an investment contract has been found in what is, ostensibly, the sale of tangible property, promotional characteristics have played a role. Indeed, the Supreme Court set the stage in Joiner when it declared: "In the enforcement of an Act such as this it is not inappropriate that promoters' offerings be judged as being what they were represented to be." n272 There is a logical link between promotional characteristics and the expectation of an "investor" that is an essential element of an investment contract. n273

A New York state court made the point best: "The manner in which an item is sold and presented to the buying public is very often a factor, if not the major one, in determining the nature of the relationship between the seller and purchaser. ... In the Joiner and Howey cases the United States Supreme Court considered investment-oriented advertising to be a factor in finding the existence of an investment contract." n274 Similarly, in an SEC enforcement action a federal appeals court concluded that representations made on a website ostensibly operating a "virtual stock market" game played upon greed and fueled expectations of profit, holding out a form of inducement that substantial profits could be earned in buying "virtual shares" in the game. The payments were not for entertainment, said the court, but were in fact made in anticipation of investment gains. n275

In SEC v. Infinity Group Company, n276 the district court held that "property transfer agreements" sold to over 10,000 people and promoted through offering materials that, in the words of the court, constructed a "wonderland of international finance," were securities. As a central theme in the analysis, the court offered:

[T]he duck theory applies: if it looks, reads and sounds like an investment contract, it is an investment contract. TIGC's get-rich-without-risk scheme certainly is such a duck.

In the end, the essential question is always where the risk of the enterprise lies. If it is within the control of the purchaser, or the purchaser plays a significant role in determining the success of the enterprise, this third element of an investment contract will not be found. n277

The treatment of franchises under the federal securities laws well illustrates the extent to which the role played by purchasers in the management and operation of an enterprise is a determinative factor in determining the presence of and investment contract. Where a franchisee must contribute meaningfully to the success of a franchise, no security will be found. n278 However, where a franchisee is clearly dependent upon the efforts of others in order to achieve sales through which to gain on their investment, a security will be found. Where, for example, the realization of profit through exploitation of a franchised territory in which deregulated electric utility services would be provided depended upon the ability of the franchisor to deliver the utility power, and upon the telemarketing operations of the franchisor to convert residential customers in the territory within a finite period, the role of the franchisee was purely ministerial and involved no real control over the success of the enterprise. The relationship involves all investment contract elements. n279

With the essential elements of an investment contract now in place, various applications of the concept are considered below.

[c] Particular Applications

[i] Partnership and Joint Venture Interests. The essential characteristic of a partnership or joint venture is the presumed equal role of participants in management and control of the enterprise. Such a role is the antithesis of the relationship that marks a security transaction. General partnership and joint venture interests, as such, are not securities. On the other hand, limited partnerships, which by law separate "partners" from control, are securities. n280

The structural distinction between general and limited partnerships well illustrates the notion of the "passive" investor often used to describe one who has purchased an investment contract. A general partnership by its very definition is an "association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners a business for profit." n281 Unless otherwise agreed, all general partners have an equal voice in management regardless of their financial interest in the partnership, and all partners share in the profits and losses. n282 General partners act as principals for themselves and agents for the partners as a group. They are jointly and severally liable for damages caused by any tort or breach of trust committed by a partner within the scope of the partnership's business, and they are jointly liable for other partnership obligations. n283 In terms of Howey, a true general partner or joint venturer, n284 can only expect to derive profits through his or her individual contribution to the efforts of the partners or co-venturers. n285

Entirely different considerations apply to limited partnership interests. Indeed the use of the word "partner" is actually a misnomer. A limited partner is a passive investor, having no active voice or meaningful control in the conduct of the partnership's affairs. Nevertheless, use of the term will not control if in fact a limited partner retains such control in an enterprise as to directly affect the profits expected to be received. In Steinhardt Group, Inc. v. Citicorp, n286 a limited partnership agreement empowered the partner to take various "material actions" without the consent of other partners, including actions that the court considered crucial to the success of the enterprise. The kinds of powers reserved to the "limited" partner, said the court, actually gave him pervasive control over the management of the partnership, and were powers far afield of the typical limited partnership agreement. Indeed, the court concluded that without the limited partner's involvement, "the Partnership could only operate in a static, inflexible way that is unrealistic and impractical in today's business climate." n287

An assessment of actual control characteristics can surely lead to a conclusion such as that in Steinhardt that no "limited" partnership is present. In the main, however, because the Uniform Limited Partnership Act provides that a limited partner is not liable for the obligations of the partnership beyond the amount of his investment unless he takes part in the control of the business, n288 structuring a relationship so as to comport with the mandated absence of control means that the interest of a limited partner is unquestionably an investment contract and, at the same time, a "certificate of interest in [a] profit-sharing agreement." n289

Armed with the principle that, in determining the scope of federal securities law protection, the form of an instrument or transaction is to be disregarded for its substance and the emphasis placed on economic reality, n290 purported "general" partnerships have been held to involve investment contracts. This result flows from an examination of the actual relationship among the partners or venturers and an assessment of control characteristics. Partners or co-venturers may, among themselves, alter the presumption of shared control through delegation of management responsibilities. But delegation of authority does not deprive actual partners of ultimate responsibilities for management of the enterprise. Contrasting the position of a general partner to that of a corporate stockholder, it has been said:

General partners, no matter how many or few they may be, are still as a group, legally responsible for the management of the firm. Stockholders, however, no matter how many or few they may be, have a legally circumscribed role in the management of the corporation. State corporation statutes uniformly invest exclusive power to manage the ordinary business affairs with the Board of Directors, and indeed the very concept of a corporation is one in which the control of assets is divorced from ownership. n291

The power of general partners to alter their own relationships for purposes of managing the enterprise is evidence of their ultimate control.

Other factors, however, can lead to different conclusions concerning the reality of a general partnership interest as a security. In the leading case to consider the issue, the following factors were enunciated for making the determination:

- an agreement among the partners leaves so little power in the hands of the partner or venturer that the arrangement in fact distributes power as would a limited partnership;
- the partner or venturer is so inexperienced and unknowledgeable in business affairs that he is incapable of intelligently exercising his partnership or venture powers; or
- the partner or venturer is so dependent on some unique entrepreneurial or managerial ability of the promoter that he cannot replace the manager of the enterprise or otherwise exercise meaningful partnership or venture powers. n292

The essential question is whether the partnership agreement or arrangement leaves purported "general" partners with such little power as to place them in a position analogous to a limited partner. n293 The issue is one of fact. n294 It is not whether one has been deprived of partnership powers, which would be solely redressable as a matter of partnership law, but rather whether the structure and actual relationship among partners ab initio is such that the partner had no real opportunity to exercise any power normally accorded to a general partner. The controlling principle has been most cogently stated:

Even when general partners do not individually have decisive control over major decisions, they do have the sort of influence which generally provides them with access to important information and protection against a dependence on others The managerial powers and the right of inspection vested in general partners therefore takes them outside the intended scope of federal securities laws. n295

[ii] Limited Liability Partnerships. As an emergent hybrid between general and limited partnerships, the "limited liability partnership" (LLP) is one in which a partner is liable only for the amount of his or her capital contribution, plus the partner's personal acts, and is not exposed to vicarious liability for the acts of other partners or the acts of the partnership as a whole. In that respect the LLP bears some similarity to a limited partnership. However, while the limitation on liability in an LLP may mean that partners have less incentive to preserve control than general partners do because their personal assets are at not at risk, this does not mean that LLP partners lack the ability to control the profitability of their investments. The powers of partners can be prescribed by a partnership agreement in the same manner as any form of organization. An LLP partner may wish to remain wholly passive, and the applicable agreement may provide for that. However, it is just as likely that an LLP agreement will provide significant powers of partners, as in a general partnership. Not surprisingly, the same investment contract analysis applied in the determination whether general partnership interests are securities is applied in the LLP context.

In SEC v. Merchant Capital, LLC, n296 the court considered the application of registration and antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws to interests sold in twenty-eight registered limited liability partnerships to 485 persons, raising $26 million. The LLP partners were all members of the general public with no demonstrated expertise in the debt purchasing business of the partnerships. The SEC asserted that the LLP interests were investment contracts within the meaning of the federal securities laws, and that the defendants had committed securities fraud in marketing the interests. The Eleventh Circuit agreed, and reversed a District Court determination that had found no investment contract to be involved.

In Merchant Capital the LLP partners entered into agreements under which a "Managing General Partner" was designated as the operational head of each partnership, with sole authority to bind the partnership. Partnership marketing materials informed the partners that they were expected to have an active role in managing the business of the partnership, and the partnership agreement reserved certain powers to the partners. Partners had the ability to select the managing general partner. They had the exclusive right to approve any act obligating the partnership in an amount exceeding $5,000. They could remove the Managing General Partner for cause, and they could inspect books and records and participate in committee meetings. That being the case, the Court nevertheless concluded that in practice the LLP partners exercised little control over the operations of their partnerships. The Managing General Partner, who was the only candidate for the position on ballots submitted to partners, made the key business decisions, and the commitment approval process was inadequate and often ignored. The court concluded that partners had no significant ability to control the business after their initial investment, and that their other reserved powers were either insignificant or meaningless in practical terms.

The court applied each of the factors that had been articulated in Williamson v. Tucker, n297 discussed above in regard to whether interests in a general partnership could be deemed to be securities, to conclude that the LLP partners in Marchant Capital had only the powers of limited partners. They had no real ability to remove the Managing General Partner, and their purported authority to approve partnership commitments was illusory. The partners were completely inexperienced in the business of the partnership. All of these factors compelled the conclusion that the LLP interests were securities. n298

[iii] Limited Liability Company Membership Interests. "State Limited Liability Company" (LLC) laws provide for the creation of a business organization by "members" who enjoy the limited liability associated with a corporate form of organization while at the same time permitting taxation of the entity as a partnership. LLCs are based upon a contractual arrangement ("Operating Agreement") among members prescribing, among other things, the extent of participation in and control by members in management and operations. Unlike limited partnerships, the limited liability of LLC members is not lost with participation in control of the enterprise. LLCs are hybrid entities that combine desirable characteristics of corporations, limited partnerships, and general partnerships. LLCs have greater flexibility than corporations in terms of organizational structure. Most LLC statutes establish a default rule that management of the LLC shall be vested in its members, but permit that members may establish particular forms of governance in their operating agreements

In some instances, the ability or extent to which LLC members may participate in management of the enterprise is dictated by statute. Some statutes require management by managers--a board-managed or centralized form of organization in which management is reserved to a limited number of persons. n299 Others prescribe variants of both centralized and decentralized management, the latter leaving management in the hands of the members and allowing for the specification of member roles and rights through "operating" or "member control" agreements. In this manner, the LLC resembles a close corporation, controlled in accordance with a "close corporation agreement." n300 However, because LLCs are non-corporate, they are not bound by state corporation law requirements and restrictions in matters such as governance and finance. LLC members' governance rights may be prescribed by the LLC statute or by agreement among the members. The operating agreement, is the key to defining LLC membership interests as securities.

Although many state securities laws today expressly include limited liability membership interests in the statutory definition of security, as a matter of the federal securities laws whether LLC membership interests are securities depends upon the application of investment contract analysis. In this analysis the focus is largely upon the management characteristics of a particular LLC. Interests in a centralized management LLC, in which members are merely passive investors, will clearly be deemed to be investment contracts. An operating agreement among members that delegates control over ordinary business decisions to certain "managing members," who also are vested with the sole power to bind the LLC and do all other things necessary to carry on the business and affairs of the LLC, creates a relationship and set of investment risks little different from a limited partnership. n301 On the other hand, as meaningful involvement in operations and control increases, the likelihood that general partnership or joint venture control characteristics will be found also increases, thus precluding security status. For example, in Keith v. Black Diamond Advisors, Inc., n302 membership interests in a New York limited liability company were held not to be investment contracts because there was no expectation of profits from the efforts of others, and the member was not a passive investor. In fact, the member became involved in the enterprise on representations that he would oversee marketing operations, and that his ownership interest would never be unfairly diluted. Coupled with rights accorded to him under the state's LLC Law, the court concluded that although the degree of control the member actually exercised was less than he expected, he clearly did not intend to be a passive investor. The level of control he possessed, said the court, was "antithetical to the notion of member passivity required under the fourth prong of Howey." n303

Because an ultimate question is whether securities law protection is needed in a particular set of circumstances, the plan or manner of distribution of LLC membership interests will also play an important role in determining their status as securities. Public offerings or systematic solicitation of unsophisticated prospective members by promoter/managers through mass marketing campaigns have triggered administrative actions by state securities regulators. n304 Moreover, investment contract analysis is easily applied in such settings, where the essential managerial efforts for the success of an LLC enterprise are those of the promoter or a related party.

In the absence of any clear line, and the ultimate necessity of applying investment contract criteria notwithstanding, as noted above, several states have expressly included LLC membership interests within their own Blue Sky Law definitions of security. n305 At the same time, respected commentators urge that there should be a rebuttable presumption against characterizing LLC membership interests as securities. n306 Neither approach is sound unless there is uniformity among provisions for, or limitations on, member involvement in managerial control of an LLC. Partnership and joint venture cases teach that finding a security in any non-corporate business association requires a discrete assessment of the relationship between the parties and the risk characteristics inherent in it. Statutory flexibility in prescribing possibilities for structuring management and control of LLCs compels an examination of the particular form in operation and counsels against generalizations about whether the membership interests are securities.

[iv] Club Memberships and Membership Organizations. The sale of memberships in a club or similar organization has sometimes been held to constitute the sale of securities in the form of investment contracts. n307 Use of the term "membership" in these situations is often merely a cover for a financing scheme that evidences the characteristics of any investment contract as promoters raise capital and "members" assume risk. Indeed, it was in the "membership" context that the important "risk capital" approach to the definition of a security first emerged. n308

A bona fide membership organization with no investment characteristics will not involve the sale of a security. The SEC Staff has agreed, for example, that memberships, or seats, on the American Stock Exchange are not securities. Exchange members have interests in a not-for-profit organization, characterized as a commonly- owned platform which members use to earn their livelihood from their individual trading efforts or the efforts of a lessee. Their "economic interests" are not such as to support an expectation of profits from the efforts of anyone else. n309 On the other hand, a New York state court concluded that "a seat on the NYSE is the ultimate security." In Wey v. New York Stock Exchange, n310 the court concluded that an NYSE seat clearly meets the test for an investment contract. The creation of the NYSE itself, said the court, satisfies the common venture and reasonable expectation of profits elements of an investment contract. Moreover, the value of a seat on the Exchange is derived from the efforts of brokers and traders driving the stock market, by trading volume, by adding new companies to the Exchange, and making a profit from each trade. The particular Exchange seat involved in Wey was purchased as an investment opportunity. It is not at all clear in this "membership" context that investment contract analysis is faithfully applied to protect against true investment risk. However, Wey clearly illustrates a willingness to look beyond common perceptions of a membership organization to identify a need for investor protection.

Even the sale of memberships for financing the acquisition of property by a non-profit membership corporation has been deemed permissible without Securities Act compliance. n311 The true character of the particular "membership" will control. Thus, "memberships" that represent nothing more than pyramid or multi-level sales programs constituting investment contracts will not escape security status. n312

The question of whether memberships in investment clubs constitute securities is a difficult one. The many forms such clubs can take make it dangerous to generalize about them. However, a common characteristic, indeed an attraction, is the shared decision-making among members with respect to investments. The relationship suggests a joint venture and, despite the goal of "investment" profits, the members jointly participate in the selection process. As previously seen, however, the structure of a particular club may negate meaningful participation. Each case must be evaluated on its own facts. n313

[v] Real Estate and Related Financing. Howey illustrates the transformation of what is ostensibly a purchase of real property into a security through coupled arrangements or mechanisms that bear directly upon the value of the property. The promoters offered small tracts in an orange grove development coupled with a contract for cultivating, marketing, and remitting the net proceeds of production to owners of the tracts. The coupled arrangements were not mandatory, but the small size of the individual tracts rendered any independent development and management economically unrealistic. Although purchasers received warranty deeds to the property upon full payment of the price, the court held that the land sales contracts coupled with the service contracts were securities and, thus, set the stage for evaluating all investment-oriented programs built around "ownership" of real property.

In the opposite corner, United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman n314 stands as a caveat. The federal securities laws protect investment decisions. Forman and its progeny deny that protection to the acquisition of residential real estate, purchased with the expectation of residence. n315 Real estate transactions are typically deemed outside the definition of "security." A piece of real estate, such as a condominium, has an inherent worth that is not solely dependent on the efforts of a promoter. "Investments" in real estate solely for the purpose of gaining from appreciation on resale cannot be securities. n316

On the other hand, where properties are offered with emphasis on investment considerations and with coupled programs for management and income production, as have typified some offerings of condominiums, investment contracts are likely to be found. Certain real estate investments may be securities when the sale itself is tied to a collateral rental or service agreement, when the purchase is motivated by economic inducements and expected profits, when the purchaser expects to participate in a profit-sharing or rental pooling arrangement upon completing the transaction, or when the transaction includes restrictions limiting the owner's control over the property. n317 The presence of rental pools and the employment of marketing and promotional campaigns that stress investment potential have often triggered application of the securities laws and have been isolated as determinative factors in certain settings. In a 1973 Release on point, the SEC addressed offerings of resort condominiums in which such "investment" opportunities are a major thrust. The Commission offered these guidelines for determining whether a security is present:

- (1) The condominiums, with any rental arrangement or other similar [device], are offered and sold with emphasis on the economic benefits to the purchaser to be derived from the managerial efforts of the promoter, or a third party designated or arranged for by the promoter, from rental of the units;
- (2) The offering of participation in a rental pool arrangement; and
- (3) The offering of a rental or similar arrangement whereby the purchaser must hold his unit available for rental for any part of the year, must use an exclusive rental agent or is otherwise materially restricted in his occupancy or rental of his unit. n318

By contrast, when real estate units "are not offered and sold with emphasis on the economic benefits to the purchaser to be derived from the managerial efforts of others, and assuming that no plan to avoid the registration requirements of the Securities Act is involved," the unit owner "may enter into a non-pooled rental arrangement with an agent not designated or required to be used as a condition of purchase" and the transaction will not involve the sale of a security. n319

Induced expectations play an important role, as this observation in Adams v. Hyannis Harborview, Inc. n320 well attests:

Not surprisingly ... the plaintiffs bought their units with the expectation that they would operate as investments. The thrust of their testimony was that they wanted investments that would be run by a management company so they would not have to be involved in the day-to-day management of the property. Their testimony is supported by the fact that the plaintiffs generally are nonresidents who lack the skill, knowledge and equipment necessary to manage the kind of investment involved in this case The fact that some plaintiffs expressed an interest in using their units for vacations a few times each year does not negate their investment-oriented expectations. It simply acknowledges the fringe benefits to the investment. n321

However, sale and leaseback arrangements and other management or service programs that do not intertwine potential profit with the enterprise of the seller/lessor or other purchasers will generally preclude security status for want of requisite common enterprise. For example, where condominium purchasers entered only into management service contracts with a seller/promoter, there was nothing to indicate that the fortunes of the purchasers were interwoven with the promoter's fortunes. Although purchasers intended their units to be investments, i.e., to rent out, the purchases were in no way conditioned upon participation in any rental pooling arrangement and there were no limitations placed on use of the units. n322

Financing real estate development through syndications to investors is common, and, in their typical format, syndications are unquestionably subject to the securities laws. n323 In these situations, the "security" involved is not the ownership interest in real estate. Rather, the security is that issued by the entity, most often a limited partnership, which acquires the ownership interest in the real estate. n324 Real estate investment trusts are also financing vehicles for the development of commercial properties. As with limited partnerships, there is little question that the securities issued by these entities are subject to all aspects of the Securities Act in the absence of an exemption.

Limited partnership syndications and real estate investment trusts engage in capital formation for financing real estate development. Capital formation activities lay at the heart of the securities laws. Other financing schemes relating to real estate do not facially resemble these kinds of offerings but trigger the same concern for investor protection. For example, in Woolridge Homes, Inc. v. Bronze Tree, Inc., n325 monies collected as pre-sale purchase commitments for units in a resort condominium complex were pooled and utilized to obtain construction financing for the project. The scheme was held to involve the sale of securities, and it rather clearly evidences the capital formation and investment risk setting at which protections of the Securities Act are targeted.

Investment contracts in the real estate setting are most often found in situations in which purchasers are led to expect future development and profitable results from the promoter's efforts. n326 Offerings of resort or recreational properties provide many excellent examples. Many of these are development projects in which the purchasers actually fund the completion and development. It is important, however, to understand the distinction between the conventional sale of real estate and one involving an investment contract. Even if bought for "investment," the acquisition of real estate is not considered to be a security. Commitments and promises incident to the purchase, linked enterprise of the seller/developer, and other arrangements may convert the interest acquired into one involving a common enterprise. However, as the First Circuit opined in Rodriguez v. Banco Central Corp., n327 merely purchasing with an induced expectation that the surrounding area would develop into a thriving residential community does not indicate the requisite linkage to what amounts to a promised business venture harnessing the entrepreneurship of the promoter. Where there was only an expectation that a community was going to develop through "natural forces," said the court, there was no pretense of a common enterprise, and no investment contract could be found.

Other contemporary investment contract issues in real estate arise in the context of interval ownership or "time sharing;" n328 mortgage pooling, "pass-through," or servicing programs; n329 "leaseback" programs; n330 and, in general, in many creative programs relating to mortgage financing of residential and commercial properties. n331 The fundamental analysis under Howey remains constant. In Wals v. Fox Hills Development Corporation, for example, a time sharing purchase and rental and swapping agreement was held not to be a security where the purchasers did not receive an undivided share of some pool of rentals or profits. The court characterized the "investment" of the purchasers as:

[A] specific time slice of a specific apartment the physical and temporal characteristics of which (including price) differed from those of other apartments. Their return was tied to another space-time slice with its own unique characteristics. Every week of every apartment was a different product. n332

Owning a temporal slice of a condominium unit, said the court, was no different than owning the unit year round. The expected return was rental on a single unit and not a pooling of all units.

Whatever the subject matter of a transaction, a mere expectation of "profit," be it in the form of an income stream or simply the appreciation in value of a property, will not create a security without more. It is the third element of the Howey test -- an induced expectation of profits from the efforts of others -- that makes the purchaser of real estate an investor within the contemplation of the securities laws. It has been said that Congress did not intend to bring every real estate venture, limited partnership, or multi-party transaction within the regulatory sweep of the federal securities laws, n333 and Forman itself best illustrates that an investment contract turns, first and foremost, on the presence of an investment and the creation of investment risk through an arrangement in which value determinants -- the "entrepreneurial or managerial efforts" -- are separated from ownership. n334

The extent of involvement, if any, of a purchaser in a real estate venture is a question of fact to be considered in every case. The purchase of an apartment building from a property management firm with the expectation that the seller will continue to manage the building is not the purchase of a security where the purchasers possess ultimate authority over the management function. n335 Condominiums sold with a rental pooling arrangement are not securities in which the management company and the promoter are unaffiliated and the rental pool is under the exclusive control of the homeowners' association. n336 On the other hand, investors in syndicates formed to develop and operate real estate could be purchasers of securities despite the fact that governing agreements conveyed substantial control over the properties to them but where, as a practical matter, the investors were incapable of exercising the powers. n337

These examples underscore the contemporary emphasis on the economic reality underlying Howey. To find an investment contract in the real estate setting is to find that "ownership" is secondary to the significant value determinants. If a fee simple interest in real property depends for its expected real value upon a common enterprise with others to share in the fruits of others' efforts and abilities, a security is present. One state Blue Sky administrator, for example, has cautioned that real estate "tenancies in common" may be considered investment contracts. Generally, a tenancy in common is a form of property ownership in which multiple persons own an undivided fractional interest in the entire property. But the form of ownership makes no difference if in the tenancy in common individual "owners" commit their assets to what is in fact a pooling of funds to acquire real estate with the expectation of making profits from the entrepreneurial or managerial efforts of others. n338

Modern Howey cases teach only that in assessing a given situation, one must pay close attention to reasonable expectations, promotional characteristics, essential managerial efforts, and, the sum of it all, the nature of the risk presented to the purchaser. n339

[vi] Pooled Funds and Collective Investment Vehicles. Traditional collective investment vehicles such as mutual funds, unit investment trusts, or other "managed" fund investment programs built around the pooling of funds, and which involve the issuance and distribution of their own securities, are subject not only to the Securities Act, but, quite likely, the Investment Company Act of 1940 as well. n340

The contemporary financial services market has prompted a different look at mechanisms for pooling of funds for investment or investment-related purposes. Investment management services have proliferated, as have new collective investment vehicles designed to provide opportunities for public participation in response to general economic developments. High interest rates, for example, spawned the creation of certificates of interest for fractional interests in portfolios of large denomination, short-term certificates of deposit issued by commercial banks. These instruments created opportunities for persons who could not otherwise do so to share in the available high rates of return. While the underlying instruments were bank-issued certificates of deposit, the sponsors of the program performed significant functions, and the program was deemed to involve the sale of securities. n341

Bank-sponsored services built around asset management and the desirability of providing collective investment mechanisms for accounts administered by banks raise questions of securities law coverage, as have plans for custodial accounts and collective trust funds for the assets of employee benefit plans. n342 Purely service-oriented bank programs for collective investment of trust funds are generally not deemed to involve the creation of securities. n343 Similarly, depository and other services related to investment programs of others will not be deemed to be the creation of a separate security where the actual "investment" is separate from the services provided. n344 However, commingled funds received for investment, particularly where promotional characteristics and solicitation are in evidence, are likely to be securities where a common enterprise among participants is clearly shown. n345

[vii] Employee Benefit Plans.

The specific reference in Section 2(1) to "participation in any profit-sharing agreement" calls to mind stock option, stock purchase, and other types of employee benefit plans built around the distribution of stock of an employer. These kinds of conventional plans generally do not create any security independent of the stock involved. n346

There is no question, of course, that the "stock" offered through such a plan is a security, n347 and where the distribution process involves the "sale" of that stock, it is subject to regulation under the Securities Act. n348 In these situations, the focal point of securities law concern is the stock being distributed and not the nature of the plan itself. n349

The distinction is critically important and is illustrated by the Second Circuit decision in Yoder v. Orthomolecular Nutrition Institute, Inc. n350 In Yoder, the court opined that a claim under the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws was stated in a complaint alleging that a company had knowingly misrepresented its financial condition when it undertook to issue stock to a person who, in reliance thereon, became an employee and transferred certain assets to the company. The court observed that stock is "the paradigm of a security" and that: "We see no reason why 'the context requires' us to hold that an individual who commits herself to employment by a corporation in return for stock or promise of stock should not be considered an investor." n351 In the Yoder context, stock is not incidentally involved as part of a benefit plan but is rather the focal point of a decision. Because the value of the stock being offered as an inducement to become employed is the issue, a protected investment decision may be said to be involved. The same is true in circumstances in which an existing employee, through a voluntary wage reduction program, is allocated shares through an ESOP. Each employee who elects to participate gives up a portion of wages as specific consideration, and thus makes an investment decision. n352 This stands in contrast, however, to compulsory, non-contributory stock ownership plans, which do not involve a person giving up any specific consideration for a separable financial interest in the company. In these situations, participation in a plan is only an incident of employment and not an investment decision. n353

Where employee benefit plans n354 are involved, participations in the plans may evidence investment characteristics and may be deemed to be investment contracts, certificates of interest, or participation in a profit-sharing agreement. n355 Even where stock is involved, the indirect character of ownership, as with an ESOP, suggests a separate investment contract where the attributes of the plan are such that the employee-beneficiary is divested of control over his or her interest in the plan. n356 The SEC has identified the key factors for evaluating such a plan under investment contract principles as follows:

- (1) whether there are limitations on employee rights to withdraw from the plan, or to withdraw securities;
- (2) whether management discretion is granted to someone other than plan participants;
- (3) whether substantial sums of money are accumulated by the plan manager for material periods of time before investment;
- (4) whether participants pay any special fees or charges; and
- (5) whether plan participation involves diminution of an employee's rights or privileges as a shareholder.

n357

It is International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Daniel n358 that has focused the greatest amount of attention on employee benefit plans, particularly retirement plans, under the securities laws. In Daniel, the Supreme Court held that interests in noncontributory, compulsory pension plans are not securities. The case has broad ramifications not only for the definition of "security" and the scope of federal securities law protection in general but for the key notion of "sale" as well. n359

Daniel, a retired truck driver, had worked 22 years for employers covered by the Teamsters' pension plan. The plan required a 20-year vesting period with no break in service. However, because of an involuntary three month layoff during his years of service, Daniel was denied benefits under the plan. In a suit alleging violations of the antifraud provisions of the Exchange Act, Daniel asserted that interests in the pension plan were securities and that the union had misrepresented the requirements of the plan. The interests were said to be investment contracts, a "sale" of which had been made when Daniel voted on collective bargaining agreements and opted for employer contributions to the plan in lieu of other wages or benefits.

Daniel's securities law contentions were upheld against a motion to dismiss, and the Seventh Circuit affirmed. n360 However, the Supreme Court unanimously reversed. It did so on three fundamental grounds. In the first place, Daniel made no "investment of money." The Court opined that to equate employer contributions with an "investment" by the employee would be to ignore economic reality. n361 Secondly, Daniel had no expectation of profits from a common enterprise. The plan, said the Court, was part of a total compensation package. The earnings of the fund were not significant to the employee -- only the length of service mattered. Neither did the financial health or results of the fund matter. Finally, other regulation provided adequate, and intended, protection to persons in Daniel's position. As the Court declared: "The existence of comprehensive legislation governing the use and terms of employee pension plans [ERISA] severely undercuts all arguments for extending the Securities Act to noncontributory, compulsory pension plans." n362

The "economic realities" of Daniel centered on the absence of any genuine investment decision. "[I]t seems clear that an employee is selling his labor primarily to obtain a livelihood, not making an investment." n363 The Court was not inclined to convert millions of workers into security holders on the contentions presented in the case. It did, however, leave certain questions unanswered concerning the possible application of the Securities Act to other types of employee benefit and retirement plans, particularly those that are voluntary and involve employee contributions. n364

Most such plans have been examined in terms of investment risk and the expectations of participants. Coward v. Colgate-Palmolive Co. n365 illustrates the clear weight of authority: "After examining the economic substance of plaintiff's interest in the pension fund, we conclude that there is no real risk to the capital representing the participants' contributions as to make plaintiffs, in any meaningful sense, 'sharer[s] in the investment experience' of the enterprise." n366 These decisions, like Daniel, emphasize that the participant's expectations, and the plan benefits, are determined by an applicable formula and not by the investment success of the plan managers. n367

Three common factors emerge in judicial assessments that benefit plan interests are not securities:

- (1) The existence of a comprehensive scheme of other regulation, i.e., ERISA, which filled a Congressionally acknowledged regulatory void;
- (2) The fact that any profits resulting from investment of plan assets become an indivisible part of the plan and are not attributed to the individual interests of participants in a way that could be said to yield an investment return to the participant; and
- (3) The benefits that plan participants expect to receive are not linked to the success of plan investments, i.e., benefits are a function of compensation, length of service and other factors unrelated to investment performance. n368

In two post-Daniel releases, the staff of the SEC expressed the view that interests in employee benefit plans that are not both voluntary and contributory are not securities. n369 Those few situations that have been viewed by the Staff as creating securities illustrate the distinction. In Diasonics, Inc., n370 for example, a profit-sharing plan built around elective salary reductions by employees was considered to involve a security. Also, in Analog Devices, Inc., n371 a voluntary "salary conversion" plan in which employee's funds were invested according to their wishes was considered to involve creation of a security in light of the employee election to contribute a portion of compensation to the plan.

The post-Daniel releases emphasize that whether interests in an employee benefit plan are securities will not be determined solely by the form of the plan, that is, whether it is defined benefit or defined contribution. Rather, the particular aspects of the plan--for example, whether it is voluntary or involuntary, or whether it is contributory or non-contributory--must be examined. Voluntary, contributory plans are clearly most susceptible to investment contract analysis in the post-Daniel era, and as seen below, these types of plans continue to be scrutinized under the Securities Act.

[A] Corporate Plans. Of the four possible combinations of corporate plans--(a) involuntary, noncontributory; (b) involuntary, contributory; (c) voluntary, noncontributory; and (d) voluntary, contributory--the SEC has taken the position that only interests of employees in voluntary, contributory pension and profit-sharing plans may be securities within the contemplation of the Securities Act. n372 Following this lead, in Dubin v. E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., n373 the court held that interests in a company "Equity Ownership Plan" were securities. Under the plan, certain executives of the company were "eligible to participate," but participation was neither required nor guaranteed. In effect, executives were invited to participate and were expected to make some contribution to the company in return for the stock or stock options made available to them under the plan. Plaintiff claimed that the plan had a direct bearing upon his willingness to accept employment and asserted that he was deceived concerning vesting rights in the plan. The court allowed his claim under the antifraud provisions to stand. In doing so, the court found that the interests in the plan were consistent with the SEC releases and that, while the distinctions between the particular plan and the plan in Daniel were not "crystalline," the interests were appropriately characterized as securities.

[B] Keogh Plans. In the view of the Staff, interests or participations in Keogh plans (also known as "H.R. 10 plans"), n374 which include (1) interests in collective funding vehicles arising from investments made by the plan and (2) interests of employee participants in the plans themselves, are securities. However, registration of interest in Keogh plans is not required even if no exemption is readily available. n375

[C] IRAs and Simplified Employee Pension Plans. Individual retirement accounts that involve the placement of an individual's funds in the hands of another person, with reliance on that person to produce profits have been treated by the SEC Staff as investment contracts. The use of pooled investment media and the role of an employer or other sponsor in the investment process triggers investment contract analysis. In determining whether plans that permit participants to direct the investment of their funds through the sponsor involve separate employee interests that constitute investment contracts, the Staff will take the following into consideration:

- (1) whether the sponsor of the plan acts as a mere custodian of the participant's account and the participants have complete discretion and control over the account; or
 - (2) whether the sponsor actively manages plan funds and the participants rely on him to produce profits.
- n376

The inference in this view is that funds are contributed by the individual for investment through a collective medium or managed vehicle as to which a requisite common enterprise can be found. On the other hand, IRAs that involve direct investment by an individual, or "self direction," are not themselves securities. n377 In these settings the Staff has focused attention on the role of the sponsor/promoter. The sponsor usually limits its own involvement to establishing the plan and setting up separate accounts for each participant. Commingling of account assets is not permitted, and it is the individual participant who exercises investment discretion.

An argument often made is that interests in these types of plans do not constitute securities within the meaning of Section 2(1). The theory underlying this view is that each individual relies on his own efforts to earn a profit in his account, rather than the efforts of others, and therefore one of the key elements of an investment contract is missing. Although in practice this theory does not apply where an IRA or Keogh plan is funded through the use of a pooled investment medium, it has more validity where the sponsor acts as a mere custodian for a participant's separate account (the assets of which are not commingled) and the participant retains complete investment power or control over his account. Recognizing that the existence of an investment contract in such circumstances may be open to question, the SEC Staff generally has taken a no-action position regarding the registration of such interests. n378 Key elements in investment contract analysis are obviously missing in these situations.

[D] 401(k) Plans. Section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code exempts certain nondiscriminatory profit-sharing or stock bonus plans from taxation. n379 These immensely popular plans allow employees to elect annually either to receive immediate payment of their employer's contribution to the plan or to defer receipt of, and not be subject to, income tax on the contribution but, instead, have it invested in a trust where it will accumulate for later payment. The SEC Staff has taken the position that any cash or deferred arrangements qualifying under Section 401(k) that do not involve out-of-pocket investments by employees of their own funds but are instead funded entirely by employer contributions are not voluntary contribution plans and, as such, do not constitute securities. n380

[E] Miscellaneous Plans. Employee interests in stock purchase plans that acquire the employer's stock in the open market may be deemed to be securities where there are substantial differences between the manner of acquiring stock under the plan and the manner of acquiring stock through ordinary brokerage transactions. Other variations as might result in open market stock purchase plan interests themselves being deemed to be securities. n381 The inquiry is whether there are factors that tend to place the employee in a position of reliance upon the plan managers to maintain or protect his or her investment. n382

Other benefit plans such as Employee Stock Ownership Plans (ESOPs), Stock Appreciation Rights (SARs), and similar plans involve securities -- the stock itself -- but interests themselves in the plans will not create separate, additional securities unless factors evidencing investment risk are shown. n383 The key consideration is whether the person claiming to be an "investor" through such a plan has chosen to give up a specific consideration in return for a separable financial interest with the characteristics of a security rather than simply participating in a plan as an incident of employment. Thus, in Childers v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., n384 the court declared that despite the fact that an ESOP was a "common venture" and that it was comprised of stock of the former company involved, plaintiff's participation in the plan was an incident of employment and not the purchase of a separate security. The plan was compulsory and did not involve an affirmative decision to give up a particular consideration in return for a financial interest. The plaintiff employee's participation could not have been based on any reasonable expectation of profits from management of the ESOP.

[F] Interests of Plans in Collective Investment Media. The investment of contributions made to employee benefit plans in pools of assets (such as bank collective trust funds or insurance company separate accounts) managed by other entities has previously been considered. n385 These vehicles for collective investments of funds may involve the creation of securities where they are marketed as investment vehicles and where the focus is on investment rather than a fiduciary service. n386

Whether interests in plans themselves, or interests in the vehicles in which the plans invest, are securities are separate issues. However, where there is a basis for finding a security somewhere in either the plan or the investment medium, where the employee participant makes a decision concerning the investment, securities law protections are most likely to be available. n387

[G] Workout and Reorganization Participations. "Workout" scenarios, involving employee agreements or participation in programs intended to save distressed companies, could involve the creation of securities where the elements of an investment contract or a form promissory future obligation is involved. However, in In re Tucker Freight Lines, Inc.,ⁿ³⁸⁸ wage deferral contracts entered into between employees and their company were held not to be securities. Under the agreement, employees deferred part of their current wages as a "contribution" in support of the company, which would be paid without interest in the future contingent on the company attaining certain levels of profitability. After the ultimate bankruptcy of the company, ex-employees claimed the contracts were securities that had been sold to them by means of false or deceptive representations concerning future profitability. Asserted investment contract status of the agreements was premised upon the anticipated future participation in earnings. Dismissing the claim, the court held that future wages are not a participation in earnings because they are received for work, rather than passively as investments. The opportunity to earn wages, said the court, "[i]s merely something to be used to earn profit rather than profit itself."ⁿ³⁸⁹ The court also dismissed the employees' contention that the agreements constituted securities in the form of notes or other evidences of indebtedness. The agreements were characterized as "promissory obligations," and although the court found no Reves specific family resemblance to a class of non-security notes, the four factors to be generally applied resulted in a conclusion that no security was involved. There was no "profit" motivation presented.ⁿ³⁹⁰

[viii] Pyramid Sales Schemes, Multilevel Distributorships, and Franchises. The three elements of an "investment contract" must combine for that form of security to exist. Common enterprise and an expectation of profits from the efforts of others transform an "investment of money" into a security. But where a purchaser must make some significant effort toward the success of an enterprise, and as a result possesses some significant control over the profit potential of that enterprise, no investment contract can exist. The existence of an investment contract is premised upon the fact that profits of an enterprise will be derived from the seller's, or some third party's, entrepreneurial or managerial efforts.ⁿ³⁹¹ Strict application of the tripartite Howey test, with its requirement that an investor be led to expect profits "solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party," has historically precluded the existence of an investment contract where a purchaser is required to make some significant effort toward the success of an enterprise. To be involved in the operation of the enterprise in this fashion is to retain some control over profit potential. Thus, attempts to characterize franchises as investment contracts have generally succumbed to this element of the Howey test.

A true franchise represents a business opportunity, a right to a name, perhaps a right to advertising and support services, but most fundamentally a right to engage in an enterprise. A franchisee is not presumed to be a "passive" investor and typically must work to make the franchise succeed. A franchisee may not claim a legitimate expectation of profits to come from the efforts of others, and federal courts are virtually unanimous in rejecting application of the securities laws to conventional franchise arrangements.ⁿ³⁹² The cases focus on the relative roles of franchisee and franchisor in the economic success of the enterprise. Where the success of the franchise operation is primarily dependent on factors controlled by the franchisee, no investment contract will be found.

A traditional franchise is built around the involvement of the franchisee in the operation of the enterprise. Non-traditional, or differently structured, schemes labeled as franchises, but which actually involve investments by persons who do not participate in the enterprise and who do not expect to do so, may nevertheless be considered investment contracts. This is so despite the fact that an investor may participate to some extent in the enterprise. However, the controlling consideration is always the degree to which an expected return is dependent upon the managerial/entrepreneurial efforts of the "franchisee." In SEC v. Galaxy Foods, Inc.,ⁿ³⁹³ for example, franchises in a home delivery service for supermarket items were held to be securities. The "franchisees" were required to invest substantial funds in exchange for only the opportunity to profit from the efforts of the franchisor company's management. The franchisee had no practical control over the success or failure of the enterprise. On the other hand, where "master franchise agreements" clearly held out the promise of profits from success of other franchisees recruited to engage in the business, no investment contract was found because profits "at least in large part" depended upon the master franchise holders' own successful first step to recruit successful franchisees in a territory.ⁿ³⁹⁴

The evolution of the Howey test in the courts has led to a focus on "undeniably significant" efforts as the key to application of investment contract analysis in these situations.ⁿ³⁹⁵ The "undeniably significant" characterization, also referred to in terms of "those essential managerial efforts which affect the failure or success of the enterprise," n396 has received most thorough consideration in the pyramid sales and multilevel distributorship cases. The typical form of multilevel distributorship is established through "pyramid" promotions in which a company represents its intention to manufacture or sell, under its own trade name, a line of products. The company purports to offer franchises or distributorships for those products that ostensibly appear to follow established forms of franchise-distributorships. Normally, several types of distributorship agreements are said to be available to the public. At the lowest level, for a relatively small fee, the participant is provided with a sample inventory and will be authorized only to make retail sales to the public. For a larger fee, the participant is entitled to receive a wholesale inventory that he or she in turn supplies to salespeople whom he or she supervises. This participant may also be authorized to make retail sales. For an even larger fee, a more substantial wholesale inventory is obtained and responsibility is assumed for supervision of lower level participants. At the highest level of distribution, for a very substantial fee, a purported right to be the link between the company and the distribution chain is acquired. n397

Most prominent among the multilevel distributorship and pyramid scheme cases are SEC v. Glen W. Turner Enterprises, Inc. n398 and SEC v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., n399 which together paved a way for application of securities laws to these schemes by identifying the presence of both investment contracts and "instruments[s] commonly known as a security." Both cases involved the promise and expectation of profits for purchasers that would come with the entry of new purchasers into the programs.

The lower levels of these plans, involving the actual marketing of a line of products, have never been the focus of securities law concerns. As the court observed in Koscot: "The SEC does not contend that the distribution of cosmetics is amenable to regulation under the federal securities laws. Rather, it maintains that the marketing of cosmetics and the recruitment aspects of Koscot's enterprise are separable and that only the latter are within the definition of a security. ..." n400 In its pronouncements, the SEC has emphasized the real "sales pitch" involved in these programs, stressing the amount of money a participant can make on the recruitment of others as the common element of pyramid promotions and the underlying "inherently fraudulent" nature of the programs: n401

Under these programs, various cash fees and percentage incentives are offered to those willing to participate as an inducement for the recruitment of additional participants. This aspect of the promotion is often given great emphasis ... [by] concentrating on the allegedly unlimited potential to make money in a relatively short period of time by recruiting others into the program. Since there are a finite number of prospective participants in any area, however, those induced to participate at later stages have little or no opportunity for recruitment of further persons. The promoters make significant efforts in bringing this about by inducing others whom existing purchasers attract to meetings to invest in the programs. n402 Courts viewed the promoters' efforts in these circumstances to be managerial, versus the ministerial acts of the investor/distributors. n403

The fact that in these types of schemes some effort on the part of the purchasers was required for the enterprise to be successful, called for confrontation of the "solely" from the efforts of others language of the Howey definition. However, viewing a "literal" application of Howey as frustrating the remedial purposes of the Securities Act, both the Turner and Koscot courts endorsed a "functional" approach to the issue of an investor's involvement in the enterprise. Under this approach, the critical inquiry is whether the efforts made by those other than the investor are the undeniably significant ones, those essential managerial efforts that affect the failure or success of the enterprise. In Koscot, the court opined that the salutary purposes of the federal securities laws can only be furthered by a functional approach to the role of an investor under the Howey test rather than its literal application. Concerning Howey, the court observed: "Nowhere in the opinion does the Supreme Court characterize the nature of the 'efforts' that would render a promotional scheme beyond the pale of the definition of an investment contract. Clearly the facts presented no issue of how to assess a scheme in which an investor performed mere perfunctory tasks." n404

The role played by investors in Koscot was recruitment of others to attend meetings and to participate in the consummation of sales by following a carefully scripted program as a part of the sales format thrust upon prospects by the promoter. The orchestrated sales format was deemed to be the key to success: "An investor's sole contribution in following the script is a nominal one. Without the scenario created by the Opportunity Meetings and Go-Tours, an investor would invariably be powerless to realize any return. ..." n405 This represents a significant refinement of the Howey test but one grounded in economic reality. On the other hand, where one must engage in significant efforts as a distributor or supervisor, in order to realize any profit from that position in the hierarchical structure of a multi-level distributorship program, a security is much less likely to be found.

Although the focus of investment contract analysis here is primarily on the managerial element of Howey, there must also be a resolution of the "common enterprise" requirement in pyramid and multi-level programs. In U.S. v. Holtzclaw, n406 for example, the court rejected the argument that a pyramid program was an investment contract where the structure of the program was such that the fortunes of the participant were not tied to the fortunes of others. That is to say, investment contract status was denied for want of horizontal commonality. In the program, the individual participant was enticed by the opportunity to earn commissions from the sale of gold coin contracts to others through the promoter. Each participant represented that it was responsible for its own sales efforts. The scheme was structured so that when a sale was made, the profits were split between the participant and the promoter. The promoter was central to the transaction, and the emphasis was on selling contracts to others in order to pay one's own purchase obligation.

Although the court easily concluded that the scheme was a pyramid, and that vertical commonality between the participant and the promoter was presented, there was no intertwining of fortunes with other participants. A contextual reading of Howey, said the court, compels a conclusion that "a common enterprise exists only when the transaction contemplates a multiplicity of investors contemporaneously holding equipotential interests in the enterprise." n407 The "vertical" versus "horizontal" commonality conundrum in investment contract analysis has been previously examined. n408 In the pyramid context, however, the Holtzclaw assessment shows that it can be meaningful. The court distinguished the Glenn W. Turner and Koscot scenarios on the basic point that the numerous participants shared dependence on the promoters, which was not the case in Holtzclaw. n409

Conventional distributorships, like conventional franchises, are not deemed to be securities where the distributor is in control of his own business. n410 However, a license agreement to distribute certain devices was deemed to be a security where a companion agreement provided for the promoter to undertake substantially all significant sales efforts, and the licenses were marketed primarily to persons who were unlikely to sell the product themselves. n411 The induced expectation of a purchaser is extremely important. If the economic attraction and viability of a distributorship, license, or other form of "franchise" is the service to be provided by the seller, the likelihood of an investment contract being present is high.

[ix] Insurance and Annuities. Is "insurance" a security? It is certain that the drafters of the Securities Act were sufficiently concerned with the point to provide for the specific exemption from coverage provided in Section 3(a)(8) for "[a]ny insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract, issued by a corporation subject to the supervision of the insurance commissioner, bank commissioner, or any agency or officer performing like functions. ..." Legislative history indicates that insurance policies should not be regarded as securities and that, even without the exemption, they would be excluded. That view was premised upon the notion that insurance policies are not considered in the commercial world as investment securities. The exemption was included to make misinterpretation of this impossible. n412 The exemption is founded upon the existence of other regulation of the industry, but the fact that there is such an exemption does not preclude examination of insurance-related products and the application of securities law protections where the product involved is not clearly only an "insurance" or an "annuity contract" but, instead, has the elements of an investment contract or other form of security. n413 The treatment of variable annuity contracts in the courts brings the distinction into sharp focus.

In simplest terms, a variable annuity contract provides for deferred income for a holder based upon investment "sub-account" options chosen by the purchaser in which premium payments are invested by the issuing company. The investment options for a variable annuity are typically mutual funds that invest in stocks, bonds, money market instruments or some combination of all three. Investment options may be defined in terms of asset allocation along with investment objective and risk tolerance, and normally the owner is permitted to transfer sub-accounts from one investment option to another. The key features of variable annuities are, first, that they are contracts providing for periodic payments for the rest of the purchaser's or a designated beneficiary's life. Second, variable annuities have a death benefit which guarantees that the beneficiary will receive a specified amount, most often at least the total amount of premiums paid, at the time of the purchaser's death if the account value is less than the guaranteed amount. Third, variable annuities are tax-deferred. No taxes are paid on the income and investment gains from the annuity until money is withdrawn.

With a variable annuity, during a pay-in, or "accumulation," period, the purchaser makes premium payments, which are allocated to or among the available investment options. The value of the variable annuity, as its name implies, is not stable. It fluctuates in accordance with the value of the investment subaccounts. At retirement, or whatever predetermined point, the holder becomes entitled to a stream of payments (or a lump-sum payment if elected) based upon the value of his or her interest at that time (the "payout phase"). There are often choices of how long periodic payments will last, and the particular variable annuity may also provide for election to receive a fixed period payment amount, or payments that vary based upon continuing performance of the investment sub-accounts.

The investment characteristics of this type of contract are obvious. The purchaser assumes all investment risk concerning the value of his or her interest and the success of the issuing company's investment management. The chief characteristic of a variable annuity is the direct correlation between investments and the payouts to annuitants. n414 In SEC v. Variable Life Insurance Co. n415 (VALIC), the Supreme Court held a variable annuity contract to be a security in the form of either an investment contract, a certificate of interest, or participation in a profit-sharing agreement.

VALIC underscores the nature and importance of investment risk. Justice Douglas observed: "[T]he variable annuity places all the investment risks on the annuitant, none on the company. The holder gets only a pro rata share of what the portfolio of equity interest reflects -- which may be a lot, a little, or nothing." n416 He explained by contrast that insurance involves risk-taking on the part of the issuing company. It involves a contractual guarantee of the benefit to the insured or its representatives. n417 VALIC guaranteed nothing but an interest in an investment portfolio -- "an interest that has a ceiling but no floor." n418

The allocation of investment risk was further underscored in the subsequent attempt to avoid the VALIC result by creation of the so-called "flexible fund," considered by the Supreme Court in SEC v. United Benefit Life Insurance Co. n419 In an effort to shift some risk to the issuing company yet preserve the "variable" feature of the product, the "flexible fund" annuity included a guarantee of cash value based upon the net premiums paid by an annuitant. Like VALIC, however, the thrust of the program was not accumulation of funds to a fixed amount but, rather, the opportunity to share in the investment experience of the company's portfolio, a point that was "pitched" to prospective purchasers. n420

The Supreme Court held the "flexible fund" to be an investment contract:

"[W]hile the guarantee of cash value ... reduces substantially the investment risk of the contract holder, the assumption of an investment risk cannot by itself create an insurance provision under the federal definition. ... The basic difference between a contract which to some degree is insured and a contract of insurance must be recognized." n421

The focal point is when, and to what degree, risk is transferred from the insurance company to the buyer. Framing the question in terms of how much risk is too much, the Seventh Circuit examined the evolution of the critical point in this manner:

No annuity transfers all of the risk to the seller. Any fixed annuity places on the buyer the risk that the seller's portfolio will perform too poorly to finance the promised payments. Section 3(a)(8) therefore necessarily exempts annuities that leave purchasers with some investment risk. If on the other hand a seller just pins the label "annuity" on a mutual fund, in which the buyer bears all of the risk, § 3(a)(8) is inapplicable. [VALIC] holds that a contract providing for variable payments based on the investors' stakes in a special investment portfolio is not an "annuity contract." The Court reasoned that because there was no guarantee of any return, the entire investment risk was borne by the purchaser of the annuity. Where there is no transfer of risk, the exemption does not apply. [United Benefit] extended "no" to "slight," holding that § 3(a)(8) does not apply to an instrument permitting purchasers to share in the performance of an investment portfolio with a guaranteed but low minimum rate of return. These guaranteed rates were well below what would be provided in a conventional annuity, so that the purchaser relied on the investment skills of the issuer to maintain earnings in excess of the contractual minimum. The Court thought that the dominant aspect of the instrument was that the seller acted as an "investment agency." n422

It is the uncertainty of "excess" earnings, i.e., those over and above any guaranteed rate of return that makes the difference. n423 The decision to purchase a fixed annuity is not an investment decision.

Distinctions between insurance-related products in the contemporary legal environment are often made as between investment annuities and conventional annuities. The latter do not result in the creation of a security. n424 For "variable" annuities, which do create securities, dual regulation under both securities and insurance laws is the norm. n425 What is actually "insurance" will not be deemed to be a security within the meaning of the Securities Act, but the focus in all cases is upon the actual characteristics of the product, particularly including the manner of its marketing. n426

New products continue to pose challenges. In Malone v. Addison Insurance Marketing, Inc., n427 for example, the plaintiff purchased an "indexed deferred annuity," which guaranteed a fixed payment at a later date subject to an increase based on the performance of a stock index. The differences between fixed and variable annuities were not clearly apparent for this type of product, but the court ultimately determined that because a minimum rate of return was guaranteed without regard to the future value of the stock index, the insurance company and not the purchaser assumed the risk. Moreover, the court concluded, as a structural matter, that the contract did not operate like a variable annuity because there was no "separate account" through which the plaintiff's payments were invested. Finally, because of the guaranteed payment requirement there was no element of uncertainty and risk. Plaintiff's risk, said the court, was not that she would lose the value of her initial investment, but rather the risk that had she chosen a different contract her money might have become worth more. This, said the court, is not the type of risk central to determining whether a security exists. n428

The type of annuity contract involved in Malone is today commonly referred to as an "equity indexed annuity" (EIA). Most life insurance companies issuing this product link the rate of return paid on the annuity to the S & P 500 equity index. Some insurance companies may, however, use a different stock market index as the performance link for the annuity. EIAs have characteristics of both fixed and variable annuities. Their return varies more than a fixed annuity, but not as much as a variable annuity. EIAs place more risk on the purchaser (with more potential return) than a fixed annuity, but less risk (and less potential return) than a variable annuity. EIAs often offer a minimum guaranteed interest rate combined with an interest rate linked to a market index. Because of the guaranteed interest rate, EIAs have less market risk than variable annuities. EIAs also have the potential to earn returns better than traditional fixed annuities when the stock market is rising. Depending on the mix of features, an EIA may or may not be a security. Malone illustrates one approach that found no security. On the other hand, in Holding v. Cook n429 the court was unwilling to dismiss federal securities law claims relating to the offer and sale of an EIA on the face of a contract, and concluded that a developed factual record after discovery was necessary to determine whether the EIA qualified for exemption under the federal Securities Act.

The evolution of insurance products involving investment features, and uncertainty concerning the proper application of securities regulation to such products, led in 1986 to adoption of Rule 151 under the Securities Act. The rule is intended to provide a "safe harbor" for issuers of such products by defining more precisely what constitutes sufficient risk-taking by the insurance company to avoid the contract being deemed a security. It declares that any annuity contract or "optional" annuity contract shall be deemed to fall within Section 3(a)(8) of the Securities Act, and thus be exempt from Securities Act coverage if certain conditions are met.

As a general matter, the safe harbor is available where the insurer assumes sufficient investment risk, and the contract is not marketed primarily as an investment. In determining whether sufficient investment risk has been assumed by the insurer, several criteria must be met:

- (1) the value of the contract must not vary according to the investment experience of any separate investment account;
- (2) the insurer, for the life of the contract, guarantees the principal amount of the purchase payment and interest, and credits a specified rate of interest to net purchase payments and interest credits; and
- (3) the insurer guarantees that the rate of any interest paid in excess of the guaranteed minimum will not be modified more than once per year.

As discussed above, the 2002 decision in Malone v. Addison Insurance Marketing, Inc. n430 illustrates the fact that not all questions were answered by Rule 151, although in that case the court also went on to analyze the facts under Rule 151, coming to the independent conclusion that the safe harbor applied as well. In another case, Otto v. Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co., n431 the court found no sufficient retention of investment risk by the insurer where there was no meaningful control on the power of the insurer to vary "interest bands" for excess interest on the subject policies and the insurer could eliminate excess interest payments entirely at any time. This power, said the court, left the purchaser with an investment risk significant enough to cast doubt on the insurer's proposition that its "guaranteed" rate of interest, which was in excess of what would be required by Rule 151, should be the focal point. n432

"Charitable Gift Annuities" (CGAs) are widely used by non-profit or charitable organizations as part of their development programs and are attractive to donors as part of an overall estate plan. They may also be offered as investments by foundations and other organizations with no substantial or recognizable charitable track record. In any CGA a purchaser pays money to the sponsoring organization through an irrevocable gift of cash, securities or other assets. In return, the organization pools the money for investment, and promises to pay the donor/purchaser a fixed sum of money on a periodic basis, for life. In addition to an income stream for life, the donor/purchaser enjoys significant tax benefits resulting from the purchase of the CGA. Although the return is fixed over the life of the purchaser/donor, CGAs have characteristics of an investment contract under traditional Howey analysis. As such, they may be deemed to be securities subject to registration requirements under federal and state securities laws unless an exemption is available.

[x] Insurance Premium Funding Plans. Creative approaches to funding insurance programs through the use of securities and loans collateralized by securities (most often mutual fund shares) prompted securities law concerns. Such plans, often referred to as "life funding" or "secured funding" involve the purchase of securities, the pledge of those securities as collateral for a loan, the proceeds of which are used to pay premiums on life insurance.

The SEC has opined that these funding programs are themselves investment contracts:

The purchaser of the plan depends upon the promoters of the program to perform for him such services as formulating an overall program suitable to his individual needs; acting as a dealer in purchasing the mutual fund securities; securing and renewing loans annually on the plan; holding the securities pledged to secure such loans; acting as agent in purchasing the insurance policy; and paying the annual insurance premiums as they fall due. ... The several components should thus be considered realistically, as a single investment medium in which the purchaser invests his money and depends upon the efforts of the promoters or other third persons to garner for him the benefits of the enterprise. n433

This "bundled" approach to the components of the program is key to identifying its investment character. Funding programs of more recent vintage have likewise been analyzed under the securities laws as unitary investment vehicles rather than separable services associated with insurance. n434

[xi] Viatical Settlements. Further attention to the possible presence of investment contracts related to insurance has come in the area of viatical settlements. These are transactions or arrangements whereby one or more persons acquire an interest in the future death benefit of the life insurance policy of a terminally ill person in exchange for current payment of some discounted percentage of the future benefit. n435 As investment opportunities, viatical settlements have been offered by promoters who acquire policies, package interests in them, and re-sell them to third parties. The promoters offering interests in viatical settlements undertake to determine life expectancy of the insureds whose policies are purchased, and to provide various post-sale services such as continuing premium payments, tracking the status of the insured, and obtaining payment of death benefits. "Investor" funds are used to maintain the policies in force, and to pay fees and commissions of the offering companies, salespersons, and escrow agents. There are variations in programs, and in the types of services undertaken or offered by promoters. In the main, however, purchasers of interests in viatical settlements expect significant percentage returns on their investments representing the spread between what is currently paid and the death benefit eventually collected.

In SEC v. Life Partners, Inc., n436 a sharply divided federal appeals court held that viatical settlements, or fractional interests in them, are not securities subject to regulation under the federal securities laws. Applying investment contract analysis a majority of the court concluded that pre-purchase services of the promoting company in the evaluation of life expectancy, and largely ministerial post-purchase services were not sufficient to establish that investor profits would flow predominantly from the efforts of others. On the other hand, although the death benefit of each life insurance policy involved in a viatical settlement is fixed, and the investor has no control over the eventual date of death of any insured, actual return to a completely passive investor may be seen as tied to efforts of the promoter company in making evaluations, reviewing policies, negotiating the actual purchase of policies and drafting necessary documents. These are managerial or entrepreneurial efforts that are not insubstantial. Moreover, viatical settlements may be offered and sold as investments, advertising high rates of return and thus inviting investor protection expectations.

The Life Partners decision turned on the court's assessment that there was no "venture" associated with the ownership of an insurance contract from which the profit depended entirely upon the mortality of the insured. The court concluded that there was no significant post-purchase activity associated with the purchase of a viatical contract. This view applied generally to viaticals has not fared well in subsequent federal court analyses. In SEC v. Mutual Benefits Corp. n437 for example, the Eleventh Circuit rejected any notion that the investment contract elements established by the Supreme Court in Howey and Edwards "[r]equire such a clean distinction between a promoter's activities prior to his having use of an investor's money and his activities thereafter." n438 The court opined that there is no basis for excluding pre-purchase managerial activities from investment contract analysis. Significant pre-purchase managerial activities undertaken to insure the success of the investment, said the court, may also satisfy Howey. The court explained:

[T]he investors' expectations of profits in this case relied heavily on the pre- and post-payment efforts of the promoters in making investments in viatical settlement contracts profitable. The investors selected the "term" of their investment, and submitted completed agreement forms and money. Thereafter, MBC selected the insurance policies in which the investors' money would be placed. MBC bid on the policies and negotiated purchase prices with the insureds. MBC determined how much money would be placed in escrow to cover payment of future premiums. MBC undertook to evaluate the life expectancy of the insureds--evaluations critical to the success of the venture. If MBC underestimated the insureds' life expectancy, the chances increased that the investors would realize less of a profit, or no profit at all... . There were important post-purchase managerial efforts of MBC as well. Often, life expectancy evaluations were not completed until after closing on a policy. And, after closing on a policy, MBC assumed the responsibility of making premium payments. n439

All of this, said the court, amounted to a classic investment contract. Another federal court rejected Life Partners on the same grounds, concluding that economic realities dictate against a narrow approach to the "efforts of others" element of Howey, and that viatical settlement contracts represent an opportunity to contribute or invest money into a common enterprise, and to share profits, with the critical aspects of a successful investment riding on the efforts of the promoter. n440

Moreover, many state regulators and legislatures have responded to the offer and sale of viatical settlements, and to the potential for fraud or abuse that exists by reason of risks of which investors may not be aware, and the potential for unscrupulous promoters to misrepresent them, by subjecting viatical settlements to regulation as securities under Blue Sky laws. Any consideration of viatical programs must take the continuing role of state securities regulation into account. n441 And state courts almost uniformly apply investment contract analysis to conclude that viatical settlements contracts are securities within the ambit of Blue Sky laws. n442

[xii] Bank and Thrift Deposit Relationships. In Marine Bank v. Weaver, n443 the Supreme Court held that a six-year certificate of deposit issued by a federally regulated and insured bank was not a security. Chief among the reasons for so holding was that the holders of such certificates are "abundantly protected" under the federal banking laws. As previously seen, n444 a certificate of deposit is an "evidence of indebtedness" within the definition in Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, just as a savings account passbook is an evidence of indebtedness. Yet, neither is a security. n445 It is the character of the transaction and the commercial relationship between the institution and the depositor that controls. The commercial relationship between a depositor and a bank or thrift institution can be altered to create investment risk. For example, "certificates of deposit" offered and sold through a brokerage firm program that emphasized liquidity through a secondary trading market were held to be securities in Gary Plastic Packaging Corp. v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. n446 The court found that purchasers were buying something more than certificates of deposit and that the opportunity to participate in a secondary trading market made by the sponsor was the key consideration since it created liquidity that would not otherwise exist.

An investment program tied to a Mexican bank account was held to be an investment contract in SEC v. Deyon. n447 Investors required to make minimum $25,000 deposits were induced to leave their funds on deposit to earn a 25% per month interest return. The bank account program was plainly promoted as a security, but the promised fixed rate of return was argued in contravention of any "common enterprise" assertion. The court rejected the assertion, however, noting that investors faced the possibility that the interest rate could fall significantly and imperil their expected return. Vertical commonality was present, said the court, because the promoters not only stood to gain more as more investors made deposits, but also could also be left without any profits. The determination that securities law protections were needed was no doubt colored by pervasive misrepresentations and underlying questions concerning the legitimacy of the bank account. However, the case illustrates that unorthodox deposit relationships can be transformed into circumstances fully demonstrating the need for "investor" protection.

In the usual depositor relationship, there are no genuine "investment" characteristics if for no other reason than the presence of federal deposit insurance, which eliminates any possible investment risk. n448 The federal securities laws do not regulate insured bank deposits. In recognition of the comprehensive scheme of other regulation of these financial institutions under federal and state laws, even conventional securities issued by banks and most thrift institutions are specifically exempt from coverage under the Securities Act. n449

Tcherepnin v. Knight, n450 perhaps best illustrates that as circumstances vary from a conventional banking relationship, so may the investment characteristics of a deposit instrument. In Tcherepnin, the Supreme Court held that

"withdrawable capital shares" in a state-chartered savings and loan association were securities for purposes of the antifraud provisions of the Exchange Act. Depositors were "members" of the association; they received no fixed rate of interest but, rather, received dividends in amounts dependent upon earnings of the association. The Court principally applied investment contract analysis in reaching the conclusion that the shares were securities but noted that they "fit well" within several of the terms contained in the corresponding Exchange Act definitional provision. n451 In the end, the essential reality of the Tcherepnin situation was this: "Petitioners are participants in a common enterprise -- a money lending operation dependent for its success upon the skill and efforts of the management of City Savings in making sound loans." n452

In Marine Bank, the Supreme Court specifically distinguished conventional deposit relationships from Tcherepnin, where investment risk is clearly in evidence. n453 There are few objective criteria for use in the analysis apart from the fixed versus variable rate of return and, now, post-Marine Bank, the extent of "other" protection. What is certain is that context will either establish or preclude requisite investment risk in a deposit relationship. The modern phenomena of "brokered" deposits and publicly offered programs for sharing in pools of "jumbo" certificates of deposit, for example, must be examined for characteristics separate and apart from the underlying instruments. Where a separate security is found, it will be as a result of factually distinguishing Marine Bank. n454

[xiii] Investment Programs in Personal Property. Sales of items of personal property touted in marketing campaigns as investments and coupled with some "repurchase guarantee" or other mechanism for enhancement of investment potential have often been deemed to be sales of securities. With the focus on the induced expectation of purchasers and the coupled mechanisms or "services," investment contract analysis may be applied. n455 Without question, the 2004 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in SEC v. Edwards n456 has cemented the role of the federal securities laws in these circumstances. Edwards is discussed in more detail below. At the outset, however, certain essential elements of an investment contract must be reviewed.

In the application of investment contract analysis to these programs two considerations predominate: (1) What is the real impact of the coupled mechanism or services, i.e., are they truly value determinative or merely promotional; and (2) Is there a common enterprise? It is the absence of a common enterprise that most often precludes securities law protection in this setting. Purchasers of items of personal property may well expect to profit from their purchase, as with appreciation in value of precious metals or gemstones, and their profit potential may in fact be linked in a facilitative way to the anticipated efforts of the seller to do something. The relationship between the purchaser and seller, however, is often a unitary one in which the fortunes of other purchasers of the same or other items are not intertwined and in which there is no pooling among the "investors." n457

The unitary nature of a purchaser/seller relationship may be viewed differently in circumstances of a large-scale marketing effort built around "investment" potential and where the item of property involved has no special or unique character. If a promoter of such a program sells services and expertise as a main ingredient of profit potential to purchasers, common interests of those purchasers emerge despite the fact that there is no pooling among them. Precious metals or gemstones have often formed the bases of such programs that have been deemed to create securities as a matter of both state and federal securities laws. n458 The critical consideration in these situations is whether the value of the thing involved depends on market fluctuations or the managerial effort of the promoter. n459

Repurchase guarantees, standing alone, may or may not convert the sale of personal property into the sale of a security. Such an arrangement at a price unrelated to market value is likely to result in a security where promotional materials utilize the repurchase feature to tout investment potential. n460 Programs built upon the sale and "leaseback" of personal property have been found to create securities in various factual settings, n461 and it is here that the most recent pronouncement of the U.S. Supreme Court has its greatest impact.

In SEC v. Edwards n462 the Defendant was the chairman, chief executive officer and sole shareholder of ETS Payphones, Inc., which offered and sold pay telephones to the public through independent distributors. The payphones were offered with an agreement under which ETS leased back each payphone from the purchaser for a fixed monthly payment, thereby providing the purchasers a fixed 14% annual return on their investment. The payphone package included a site lease, a five year leaseback and management agreement, and a repurchase agreement. Although other package options were offered, all but a tiny fraction of purchasers chose this package. Under it, purchasers were not involved in the day-to-day operation of the payphones. ETS selected the site, installed the equipment, arranged for connection and long distance service, collected coin revenues and repaired the telephones. Under the repurchase agreement ETS promised to refund the full purchase price of the package at the end of the lease or within 180 days of a purchaser's request.

The ETS payphones did not generate enough revenue for ETS to make monthly lease payments, and the company ultimately filed bankruptcy. The SEC brought an enforcement action against Edwards alleging, among other things, that ETS had sold unregistered securities and violated antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws. The ultimate question before the Supreme Court was whether the sale and leaseback program, which provided a fixed rate of return, created an investment contract. The Court concluded that it did. Applying long-standing Howey principles, the Court opined that there is no reason to distinguish between promises of fixed returns and promises of variable returns when assessing the "profits" from the efforts of others element of Howey. The fact that investors have bargained for a return on their investment, said the Court, does not mean that the return is not also expected to come solely from the efforts of others. Any other conclusion would allow unscrupulous marketers of investments to evade the securities laws by picking a rate of return to promise. n463

It was significant in Edwards that ETS had aggressively marketed pay telephones as an exciting business opportunity, in which the investing public was invited to "watch the profits add up." n464 Promotional characteristics and induced investment expectations are important in identifying an investment contract and determining the need for securities law protection. The Edwards Court noted in particular that investments pitched as low risk, such as those offering a "guaranteed" fixed return are attractive to persons more vulnerable to investment fraud, including older and less sophisticated investors. Not every business opportunity involving a fixed rate of return will be deemed to be an investment contract after Edwards, but those in which a passive purchaser/lessor is induced to buy in the context of a packaged plan tied to the success of the seller/lessor will evoke securities law concerns. n465

Animal "syndications" or breeding programs have likewise triggered securities law concerns. n466 A major factor in all of these findings is the manner of marketing and the vitality of the observation decades ago that "[i]n the enforcement of an act such as this it is not inappropriate that promoters' offerings be judged as being what they were represented to be." n467

[xiv] Management "Services" Generally. Whether programs involving the sale of personal property constitute securities is entirely dependent upon the nature of management or services tied to the sale. Where the "service" becomes the prime value determinant, a security is likely to be found. "Services" generally merit closer attention, as a service itself may be deemed to be a security. In usual service or "management" scenarios, the relationship between the service provider and the "purchaser" is unitary. Pooling arrangements, as with the condominium cases, can alter that relationship. n468 But, for the most part, one-on-one, service, or asset management relationships do not suggest the existence of a security for want of "horizontal" commonality among a group of investors. Deckebach v. La Vida Charters, Inc. n469 illustrates the point. Plaintiffs purchased a yacht, entering into a management relationship with the seller whereby seller would produce income from charters. Affirming dismissal of securities law claims, the court of appeals characterized the relationship involved as follows:

[T]he Deckebachs had to know from the outset that their relationship with La Vida was essentially a one-one vertical relationship and constituted essentially the hiring of an independent contractor to perform services for them to produce rental income to permit ultimate payment and retention of the yacht for personal use. The Deckebachs were not required to use La Vida, and once choosing La Vida, they were not required to remain with it if dissatisfied. The Deckebachs also offered insufficient evidence to support their burden to show that the choice of another management company was not practical or economically feasible; that it was a de facto "tie-in." We find no error in the district court's conclusion that this purchase/management arrangement was not demonstrated by plaintiffs to rise to the level of a contribution or pooling of venture capital by a number of investors for a common and joint enterprise. n470

Outside the asset purchase setting, "services" may have a plain "investment" connection but, nevertheless, not trigger securities law concerns. Investment management services, for example, have typically not involved the creation of a separate security. n471 Services in the administration of dividend reinvestment programs and other shareholder programs such as fractional share repurchase programs have likewise escaped security status where the sponsor of such programs performs only ministerial services as agent for participants. n472 Structured litigation settlement services or claims settlement programs, in which specific interests in a fund are anticipated, and there is some investment aspect to the fund, have also been viewed as not creating securities where interests in the funds are not related to fund earnings. n473 On the other hand, "funding" or prepayment programs for educational expenses may well create a security. n474

Investment services in the establishment or maintenance of discretionary trading accounts for securities or commodity futures require closer scrutiny for investment contract elements and are considered in more detail below. The issue of services or management generally, however, is one usually resolved by the degree of correlation between the service and the value or expected value of an asset purchased, or committed, and the power of the purchaser to control the relationship.

[xv] Securities and Commodity Trading Accounts: "Horizontal" vs. "Vertical" Commonality. The significance of common enterprise as an element of an investment contract is well illustrated in the line of cases that consider whether discretionary trading accounts in securities or commodity futures are themselves securities. Most cases hold that such accounts are not securities for want of "horizontal commonality," that is, a pooling of multiple customer accounts or some other interrelationship among them that ties the separate accounts to some common program. n475

The typical broker/customer relationship, whether or not involving discretionary trading authority, is a unitary one. The relationship is one of "vertical commonality" to the extent of a shared interest in successful trading but not necessarily in an economic sense. A minority of courts recognizes vertical commonality as sufficient common enterprise for investment contract analysis. n476 But even those courts recognize that the relationship must still be tied to an enterprise. In a broker/customer relationship, the broker will be compensated through commissions despite trading losses suffered by the customer. It is only where the broker and customer are truly engaged in a common enterprise that either form of commonality can be found. n477 Where, for example, an investment manager had a bonus arrangement with a brokerage firm that was directly tied to the success of accounts controlled by him, vertical commonality was shown. n478 Where a broker or investment manager controls multiple accounts invested uniformly pursuant to a specific model or trading program, horizontal commonality among the investors may be shown. n479

Whichever view of requisite commonality is accepted, the essence of the relationship must be a shared economic fate. A security is not created in the engagement of an agent to provide a service, even though the service is intended to achieve a profitable result. The discretionary trading account cases teach that common enterprise means just that, and that a "security," for all of its other characteristics, is first and foremost an economic relationship. n480

[12] The "Risk Capital" Alternative in Determining the Existence of a Security.

Among the federal courts, the tripartite Howey "test" for determining the existence of a security in the form of an investment contract is a talisman. However, unshackled from the required adherence to Howey, state courts have enjoyed greater flexibility in approaching the definition of a security. Howey has been a dominant influence in the state courts, but as a creative departure from controlling emphasis that is placed on "common enterprise" and efforts "solely" by others in the federal cases, the "risk capital" definition has emerged. The "risk capital" approach focuses upon the solicitation of venture capital and the subjection of an investor's money to the risks of an enterprise without regard to these traditional investment contract elements.

In State of Hawaii v. Hawaii Market Center, Inc., n481 the elements of the "risk capital" approach were identified as follows:

- (1) an offeree furnishes initial value to an offeror;
- (2) a portion of this initial value is subjected to the risks of the enterprise;
- (3) the furnishing of the initial value is induced by the offeror's promises or representations that give rise to a reasonable understanding that a valuable benefit of some kind, over and above the initial value, will accrue to the offeree as a result of the operation of the enterprise; and
- (4) the offeree does not receive the right to exercise practical and actual control over the managerial decisions of the enterprise.

The "Risk Capital" approach was first articulated in Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, n482 in which the California Supreme Court applied it:

[T]o protect the public against spurious schemes, however ingeniously devised, to attract risk capital ... [and] to afford those who risk their capital at least a fair chance of realizing their objectives in legitimate ventures whether or not they expect a return on their capital in one form or another. n483

The Howey "common enterprise" requirement at least implicitly requires that the buyer receive a proprietary interest in the subject matter of the enterprise. The "risk capital" approach, on the other hand, departs from that notion and only looks to an induced expectation of "benefit" -- not necessarily traditional profit -- from the conduct of an enterprise over which no managerial control is exercised. The critical element of "risk capital" analysis is that a security is created if the capital paid into a business by investors, in order to derive income from the use of that capital in the business, is put at risk in the event the business venture fails. The Hawaii Supreme Court, which has provided the greatest insight into application of risk capital analysis, imparted further guidance in TriVectra v Ushijima, n484 in which the Court upheld a determination by the state Securities Commissioner that interests in "online shopping malls" ("OSMs") were securities. Purchasers of interests in OSMs were entitled to host a customized website containing links to brand name retailers such as Disney and Warner Brothers. Members paid $79.00 for three months of service, which included server hosting and assistance with web design. Terms of the agreements under which "mall" owners operated allowed them to make money either through commissions earned from sales through their site, or by recruiting other people to purchase OSMs. The opportunity to recruit new OSM owners was the primary emphasis. The ability to earn the commissions, however, depended upon TriVectra remaining able to perform, regardless of the fact that individual purchasers had a role to play in their success. The Court explained that under TriVectra's program:

The payment of initial value was required for an individual to participate in the OSM commission program... . While, in order to earn commissions it was necessary that a member make actual sales, by requiring the initial investment payment, TriVectra transformed garden variety sales representatives into equity holders in the enterprise. As such, the members could only realize a return if TriVectra remained viable and sufficiently capitalized to honor its OSM commitments. Accordingly, the commission was not wrong in concluding that the member's initial value investments were subject to the risks of the enterprise. n485

A "risk capital" gloss applied by state courts has played a helpful role in formulating the baseline characteristics of all securities. In Grand Prairie Savings and Loan Ass'n v. Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A. n486, for example, the Arkansas Supreme Court identified five "significant common factors" of any security: (1) the investment of money or money's worth; (2) investment in a venture; (3) the expectation of some benefit to the investor as a result of the investment; (4) a contribution towards the risk capital of the venture; and (5) the absence of direct control over the investment or policy decisions concerning the venture. n487 This amalgam of risk capital and Howey investment contract elements was expressly endorsed by a Tennessee criminal appeals court as the "Howey-risk capital test, as stated in Hawaii Market," and as best effectuating the remedial purpose of Blue Sky laws to protect the public from fraud. n488 The Tennessee court characterized the combined approach as being slightly more liberal than that which federal authorities standing alone would apply, and as allowing for more explicit statements of elements, in layman's terms, that are important in the instruction of juries.

Though not specifically adopted as the sole basis of decision by any federal court, n489 "risk capital" analysis has been influential in several cases that, like Hawaii Market Center and TriVectra, involved pyramid sales programs in which some involvement by the purchaser was attached to the success of the enterprise. For example, in SEC v. Glen W. Turner Enterprises, Inc., the prominent multilevel distributorship decision of the Ninth Circuit discussed earlier, the court held, in effect, that if someone other than the investor is responsible for the managerial efforts that determine the success or failure of a venture, a security may be found even though the investor plays a role and is not solely dependent on the efforts of others for profits. n490

The state law antecedents of the "risk capital" approach to defining a security teach that investment risk is risk to initial value as capital for an enterprise rather than the risk of the future operation of that enterprise. The expectation of future profit gives way to only an expectation of some valuable benefit, with initial risk to invested capital being paramount.

The "membership" case that first enunciated the approach focused entirely upon capital formation. n491 Where one provides the risk capital that is to be used to form and develop an enterprise, it is the initial risk that is meaningful, and it is only because of that risk that there is any chance that there will be a future enterprise capable of producing any benefit. Rather than focusing on the expected future return, the concern in risk capital analysis is for the original value given by the buyer that could be lost because of the failure of an enterprise over which he exercises no managerial control.

"Risk capital" may be a more fluid and flexible approach, but its emphasis on "managerial" control can be misapplied. A virtue of the Howey investment contract "test" is that it is an analytical tool capable of consistent application. It produces a conclusion that investment risk is present rather than starting from that point. "Risk capital" works well in the initial capital formation setting, where "risk" is identifiable; however, not every risk to capital gives rise to the need for special protection under the securities laws. As the "economic realities" of a security transaction continue to evolve, there is surely a place for the "risk capital" view. As a matter of federal law, it at least augments Howey analysis by tempering any perceived rigidity of the elements of the "test" for an investment contract. In state court applications, it clearly allows for broader enforcement initiatives under Blue Sky laws that are consistent with the traditional state role in securities regulation.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Section 2(1), of the Securities Act, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B, 15 U.S.C. § 77(b)(1) provides:

[U]nless the context otherwise requires--

[T]he term "security" means any note, stock, treasury stock, bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, certificate of interest or participation in any profit-sharing agreement, collateral-trust certificate, preorganization certificate or subscription, transferable share, investment contract, voting-trust certificate, certificate of deposit for a security, fractional undivided interest in oil, gas, or other mineral rights, any put, call, straddle, option or privilege on any security, certificate of deposit, or group or index of securities (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof), or any put, call, straddle, option, or privilege entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currency, or, in general, any interest or instrument commonly known as a "security," or any certificate of interest or participation in, temporary or interim certificate for, receipt for, guarantee of, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase, any of the foregoing.

1-2 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 2.01

The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act" or "1934 Act") contains its own definition of "security" in Section 3(a)(10), 15 U.S.C. § 78c(10), which is virtually identical to that in the Securities Act as to enumerated instruments and categories. The Exchange Act definition differs, however, in its express exclusion from the definition of security of certain financial instruments generally described under the heading of short term "commercial paper." The Securities Act deals with such instruments in its classification of exempt securities in § 3, specifically § 3(a)(3) (any "note, draft, bill of exchange, or bankers' acceptance which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which has a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding nine months..."). The practical effect of the differing approaches of the two acts is the same. The treatment of short term commercial paper under the securities laws generally is considered further in § 2.01[1][d] infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. H.R. Rep. No. 85, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section E of the 1933 Act, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 11 (1933). "The Securities Act of 1933 describes 'security' very much more broadly than had been the previous interpretation of that term." SEC v. Starmont, 31 F. Supp. 264, 266 (E.D. Wa. 1940).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Reves v. Ernst & Young, 494 U.S. 56, 60-61, 110 S. Ct. 945, 948, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47, 57 (1990) (citations omitted) (footnote omitted).

(n4)Footnote 4. Coffey, The Economic Realities of a "Security": Is There a More Meaningful Formula?, 18 W. Reserve L. Rev. 367, 373 (1967). "A 'security' is a transaction whose characteristics distinguish it from the generality of transactions so as to create a need for the special fraud procedures, protections, and remedies provided by the securities laws." This is necessarily so because the special prohibitions and protections of the securities laws represent a liberalization of remedies available at common law and are meant to apply only when special policy justifications for invoking them are present.

(n5)Footnote 5. Reves v. Ernst & Young, 494 U.S. 56, 61 (1990).

(n6)Footnote 6. 346 U.S. 427, 435, 74 S. Ct. 182, 186-87, 98 L. Ed. 168, 175 (1953). Despite the broad remedial purpose of the federal securities laws that is evident in such pronouncements, it is important to recognize that the securities laws were not intended to provide a remedy for all fraud or misconduct arising out of financial transactions or relationships. See Marine Bank v. Weaver, 455 U.S. 551, 556, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 1223, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409, 414-15 (1982). The task is to identify those situations in which the need for specialized protection is manifest.

(n7)Footnote 7. To find a "security" is to subject a transaction to regulation governing: (1) the process of the security's creation and distribution; (2) the process of trading in the security; and (3) matters associated with holding the security. The "full disclosure" mechanisms of the 1933 Act assure the availability of adequate information on which to make an investment decision, and further provide for an opportunity to use that information and for liberalized antifraud remedies if it is false or deceptive. The general antifraud provisions of both the 1933 and 1934 Acts protect trading in securities, and the 1934 Act mechanisms for market regulation and control over processes associated with other investment decisions, e.g., the proxy solicitation process, cover the remaining areas of concern. Not every security transaction is subjected to the full range of federal securities law processes and protections. Where, for example, exemptions from 1933 Act registration and prospectus-delivery procedures are provided, it is because the protections are not needed in particular circumstances.

(n8)Footnote 8. By definition a general partnership is an "association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners, a business for profit." Uniform Partnership Act Section 18(e). Unless otherwise agreed, all general partners have an equal voice in management and control, regardless of their financial interests. Id. Moreover, as a matter of law, each general partner is a principal for himself and an agent for his partners. Uniform Partnership Act § 9(1), (2). In the absence of a contrary agreement, profits are shared equally by the partners regardless of the differences in amounts contributed, and losses are shared in the same proportion as profits. Because of the agency relationship between partners, each is jointly and severally liable for damages caused by an act of a partner within the scope of the partnership business, and general partners are jointly liable for other partnership obligations. Id. § 15.

A "joint venture" is defined as a partnership for a single project. It is distinguished from a partnership only in scope and duration. The essential characteristics of a joint venture which are antithetical to a security are the "community of interest" among the participants, the agreement to share gains and losses, and the mutual right of control. See Sparks v. Baxter, 854 F.2d 110 (5th Cir. 1988) . Partnerships and joint venture interests as securities are discussed in § 2.01[11][c][ii] infra.

(n9)Footnote 9. Williamson v. Tucker, 645 F.2d 404, 423-24 (5th Cir.) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 897 (1981) ; see also Goodwin v. Elkins & Co., 730 F.2d 99 (3d Cir. 1984) ("General partners, no matter how many or few they may be, are still as a group, legally responsible for the management of the firm.").

(n10)Footnote 10. See Youmans v. Simon, 791 F.2d 341 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Santiago Berrios-Bones v. Nexidis, LLC, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80283 (D. Utah 2007) (Joint Venture" and "General Partner" agreements actually gave the defendants sole discretion over key elements of property management and financial success, and would be examined under investment contract analysis to determine if the transactions in reality were investments).

The critical presumption of the partnership relation is rebutted where an agreement among the parties leaves little meaningful power in the hands of one who is ostensibly a "general partner." Likewise, where it is shown that a partner is incapable of exercising power, or is dependent upon the unique managerial ability of another, there can be no true general partner or joint venture relationship. SEC v. Shiner, No. 03-60175-CIV, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15607 (S.D. Fla. 2003) ; Kline Hotel Partners v. Aircoa Equity Interests, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 740 (D. Colo. 1989) .

(n12)Footnote 12. In Caldwell v. State, 95 S.W.3d 563, 2002 Tex. App. LEXIS 8866 (Ct. App. Tex., 1st Dist., 2002) , a Texas appellate court applying federal investment contract principles affirmed a securities fraud conviction based upon "joint venture" agreements that were held to be investment contracts. The court opined:

Although the joint venture agreements between TDH and its investors did allot certain powers to investors, those powers can hardly be described as "essential managerial efforts which affect the failure or success of the enterprise..." Teams did conduct meetings, elect leaders, perform tax planning, and pool new monies for additional investment. However, these acts were ministerial in light of TDH's exclusive contractual authority to "manage, coordinate, invest, sell, buy, host, and coordinate meetings, arrange meeting places, set goals, advisors, counselors, make deposits, disburse funds, and do all things that are reasonable and necessary to manage the affairs of the TEAM... ." Furthermore, TDH expressly agreed to use prudent reliable methods and reasonable care for the safekeeping and proper management of each team's funds and assets. TDH made all of the investment decisions and that investors were not required to do anything more than invest their money. Additionally, many team members neither met nor corresponded with other members of their team. Thus, the "economic reality" is that investors maintained a passive involvement with their investment while expecting profits to be derived solely from the efforts of TDH. 95 S.W.3d at 567 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Much remains to be said of the fact that their "stock" is literally a security as defined in § 2(1) and the presence of traditional corporate stock presumptively triggers securities law protection. See § 2.01[2] infra. Indeed, the Supreme Court has held that corporate stock having "traditional" attributes such as voting rights, negotiability, and the ability to appreciate in value is a security by definition. See Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985); Gould v. Ruefenacht, 471 U.S. 701, 105 S. Ct. 2308, 85 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1985) (both cases rejecting the "Sale of Business" doctrine, which had denied securities law protections to purchasers of all or substantially all stock of a corporation). The principal inquiry concerning corporate "stock" is whether it truly answers to the label and is present in a setting in which securities law protections legitimately may be expected. The "literal" definition of stock as a security, and the Supreme Court analyses on point, are considered in § 2.01[2] infra.

(n14)Footnote 14. 15 U.S.C. § 77(b)(1); n.1 supra.

(n15)Footnote 15. An exclusion from the definition of security for promissory notes utilized in certain settings in which context is defined by a "family resemblance" test -- that is, a comparison of a particular instrument and its object with a group or "family" of instruments and settings universally recognized as not involving securities -- is considered in detail in § 2.01[1][b] infra.

(n16)Footnote 16. 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943).

(n17)Footnote 17. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. at 348, 64 S. Ct. at 122, 88 L. Ed. at 92.

(n18)Footnote 18. As the Court found in Joiner, "[i]t is clear that an economic interest in this [enterprise] ... was what brought into being the instruments that defendants were selling and gave to the instruments most of their value and all of their lure." Id. at 349, 64 S. Ct. at 122-23, 88 L. Ed. at 92.

(n19)Footnote 19. 449 U.S. 424, 101 S. Ct. 698, 66 L. Ed. 2d 633 (1981).

(n20)Footnote 20. Rubin, 449 U.S. at 431, 101 S. Ct. at 702, 66 L. Ed. 2d at 639.

(n21)Footnote 21. 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244 (1946).

(n22)Footnote 22. Tcherepnin v. Knight, 389 U.S. 332, 336, 88 S. Ct. 548, 553, 19 L. Ed. 2d 564, 569 (1967) (withdrawable capital shares in a state chartered savings and loan association held to be securities).

(n23)Footnote 23. 540 U.S. 389., 124 S. Ct. 892, 157 L. Ed. 2d 813 (2004).

(n24)Footnote 24. On remand to the Eleventh Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals, the extent to which investors in the ETS pay telephone program relied on the promoter for success was a focal point. ETS investors retained minimal control over the telephones. The managerial control and efforts of the promoter included sole discretion over where to place telephones. This, coupled with the Supreme Court's guidance that investments with a fixed rate of return could constitute investment contracts, led the court on remand to conclude that all elements of an investment contract were present. SEC v. ETS Payphones, 408 F.3d 727 (11th Cir. 2005). All of the elements addressed in these most recent analyses of the meaning of "investment contract" in the ETS Payphones litigation, and the elements of an investment contract generally, are considered further in § 2.01[11][b] infra.

(n25)Footnote 25. See § 2.01[11][c][x] infra.

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Wuliger v. Anstaett, 363 F. Supp. 2d 917 (N.D. Ohio 2005), dismissed, Wuliger v. Ardan Group, Ltd., 504 F. Supp. 2d 282, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 95991; SEC v. Mutual Benefits Corp., 408 F.3d 737 (11th Cir. 2005).

(n27)Footnote 27. See SEC v. ETS Payphones, Inc., 408 F.3d 727, 732 (11th Cir. 2005).

(n28)Footnote 28. The broader vertical commonality approach is illustrated in Hays v. Adam, 512 F. Supp. 2d 1330 (N.D. Ga. 2007), in which the court observed: "to show a common enterprise under this test, it must be established that 'the fortunes of the investor are interwoven with and dependent upon the efforts and success of those seeking the investment or of third parties.' "

In Hays mobile billboard investments were sold in what was ultimately discovered to be a Ponzi Scheme. Purchasers paid promoters to acquire mobile billboard frames that were to be mounted on the sides of large trucks. The purchase agreements purported to provide participants with several options regarding their billboards. All of them, however, leased the billboards back to the promoter on representations that the promoter would arrange for placement, and make monthly lease payments to the investor, resulting in a fixed return of approximately 13.49% annually. The defendants argued that the billboard purchasers were provided training and information that enabled them to rely on their own expertise, rather than those of a third party, when leasing the billboards. They further asserted that the purchasers were free to lease the billboards to whomever they wanted. However, despite whatever options were theoretically presented to purchasers in the Offering Circular or other materials provided to them, the court concluded that the defendants had not shown any evidence to dispute the realities of the Ponzi scheme's actual operation. Specifically, 100 percent of the purchasers in the Ponzi scheme actually leased their billboards back to a shell company controlled by the promoters, and were dependent on the promoters to manage the billboards and generate their lease payments. Further, the very nature of the Ponzi scheme meant that it was dependent on the promoters attracting newer investors to cover the payments to earlier investors. Thus, according to the court, "the defendants cannot dispute that 'the fortunes of the billboard purchasers were interwoven with and dependent upon the efforts and success' of Outdoor Media and MBA." Hays., at 1337.

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g., 8 Del. Code Ann. § 341 et seq. (1983) (close corporation law); Ohio Rev. Code § 1705.01 et seq. (1994) (limited liability companies).

The potential impact of "close corporation" agreements in determining whether traditional corporate "stock" is a security is considered further in § 2.01[2][a] infra, and membership interests in limited liability companies as securities in § 2.01[11][c][iii] infra.

(n30)Footnote 30. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975).

(n31)Footnote 31. United Housing Foundation, 421 U.S. at 851, 95 S. Ct. at 2060, 44 L. Ed. at 631. At the same time, however, the Court noted that while the label affixed to an instrument is not dispositive, neither is it irrelevant to the inquiry: "There may be occasions when the use of a traditional name such as 'stocks' or 'bonds' will lead a purchaser justifiably to assume that the federal securities laws apply. This would clearly be the case when the underlying transaction embodies some of the significant characteristics typically associated with the named instrument." Id. at 850-51, 95 S. Ct. at 2059-60, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 631 (emphasis added).

(n32)Footnote 32. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985).

(n33)Footnote 33. 471 U.S. 701, 105 S. Ct. 2308, 85 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1985).

(n34)Footnote 34. See SEC v. National Presto Industries, Inc., 486 F.3d 305, 310 (7th Cir. 2007), in which Chief Judge Easterbrook explained the basis of the former sale-of-business doctrine as being "X has the same economic attributes as Y, so X must have the same legal attributes as Y." For purposes of the federal securities laws, however, after Landreth form can trump substance when the form makes sense in the context of the statute.

(n35)Footnote 35. Landreth, 471 U.S. at 693, 105 S. Ct. at 2305, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 702; Gould, 471 U.S. at 704, 105 S. Ct. at 2310, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 711.

See also Fong v. Oh, 116 Haw. 187, 172 P.3d 499 (2007) . In Fong the Hawaii Supreme Court rejected the argument that the "Risk Capital" approach to defining a security should be applied in a "sale-of-the-business" context to defeat securities law claims over the U.S. Supreme Court's straightforward approach to defining "stock" as a security when its characteristics bear out the label. Because reliance on "risk capital" analysis when the plain focus was on a stock purchase agreement would be incorrect unless it were demonstrated that the stock involved did not have traditional characteristics under Landreth, and Gould, the Hawaii court reversed summary judgment and sent the case back for determination of whether the instrument qualifies as stock.

(n36)Footnote 36. See § 2.01[2], infra.

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g., Handy Hardware Wholesale, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (June 29, 2006) (Common stock issued in connection with reincorporation as a business cooperative did not have the characteristics of securities).

(n38)Footnote 38. The "stock" at issue in Forman was offered via an informational brochure--a "bulletin." The nature and content of the bulletin was meaningful in the analysis, as the Court found no doubt that "investors" were attracted solely by the prospect of acquiring a place to live, and not by financial returns on an investment:

Nowhere does the Bulletin seek to attract investors by the prospect of profits resulting from the efforts of the promoters or third parties. On the contrary, the bulletin repeatedly emphasizes the 'non-profit' nature of the endeavor. It explains that if rental charges exceed expenses the difference will be returned as a rebate, not invested for profit. It also informs purchasers that they will be unable to resell their apartments at a profit... .

421 U.S. at 853-54, 95 S. Ct. at 2061, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 633 .

See also Rapp, The Role of Promotional Characteristics in Determining the Existence of a Security, 9 Sec. Reg. L.J. 26 (1981).

(n39)Footnote 39. 494 U.S. at 62, 110 S. Ct. at 949, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 58 (emphasis added).

(n40)Footnote 40. 494 U.S. 56, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1990) .

(n41)Footnote 41. Reves is considered further in § 2.01[1] infra .

(n42)Footnote 42. 320 U.S. 344, 353, 64 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 88, 94 (1943) .

(n43)Footnote 43. Landreth and Gould also firmly dispose of the notion that "stock" which demonstrates traditional characteristics, and which thus falls within the letter of § 2(1), may yet be excluded from the definition as not being within the "spirit" of the federal securities laws. Leoni v. Rogers, 719 F. Supp. 555 (E.D. Mich. 1989) ("Those opinions clearly establish that stock which bears the usual characteristics of stock is a security for purposes of the 1933 and 1934 Acts").

(n44)Footnote 44. 494 U.S. 56, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1990) .

(n45)Footnote 45. Danner v. Himmelfarb, 858 F.2d 515, 518 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n46)Footnote 46. 494 U.S. at 66-67, 110 S. Ct. at 951-52, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 60-61 .

See, e.g., Keith v. Black Diamond Investors, 48 F. Supp. 2d 326 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) , in which the court concluded that ownership interests in a mortgage company acquired by one joint venturer from another in settlement of a lawsuit between them were not securities. Although the interests represented shares of a company, the court characterized them as "unusual instruments." They were not designed to be traded; were not sold to multiple investors; and were not sold on an "impersonal" public market, such that anyone might warrant protection of the securities laws. The purchaser was not a passive investor, and the transaction was privately negotiated, face-to-face. The court agreed with the Defendants' argument that where "unusual instruments" are involved, circumstantial factors evidencing the proper application of the securities laws must be shown.

(n47)Footnote 47. Wilko v. Swan, 346 U.S. 427, 74 S. Ct. 182 (1953); Rubin v. United States, 449 U.S. 424, 101 S. Ct. 698, 66 L. Ed. 2d 633 (1981) .

(n48)Footnote 48. The absence of circumstances evidencing the need for special protection is also the key to understanding and applying the scheme of exemptions set forth in §§ 3 and 4 of the Securities Act. An exemption is provided if the objectives of the Securities Act to assure adequate information on which to make investment decisions, and the opportunity to use that information, are achieved through other means, or the circumstances are such that other regulation offers protection. However, while some types of securities and some transactions may be exempt from the registration provisions, virtually none are exempted from coverage of the anti-fraud provisions.

(n49)Footnote 49. Types of notes recognized as being excluded from the definition of security include those given in consumer financing; notes secured by residential mortgages; short term notes secured by a lien on a small business or some of its assets; notes involved in "character" loans to bank customers; notes secured by an assignment of receivables; or notes arising out of open account relationships incurred in the ordinary course of business. These types of settings are simply not sensibly described as involving securities.

(n50)Footnote 50. As Rubin v. United States, makes clear, a pledge of securities to secure a loan brings the transaction within the ambit of the securities laws because the pledge is deemed to be a "sale" of the pledged securities by the pledgor to the pledgee. 449 U.S. 424, 101 S. Ct. 698, 66 L. Ed. 2d 633 (1981) . It is important to recognize, however, that the presence of a pledge of securities does not operate to convert the underlying loan transaction or the note involved in it into a security. The ultimate disposition of the collateral pledged as security for the loan is what matters in the invocation of securities laws protections, since the lender may properly be viewed as a purchaser of the collateral. The security transaction is not the underlying loan but, rather, the acceptance and disposition of the security that collateralizes it. Pledges of securities and their impact in triggering securities laws protections are considered further in § 2.02[3] infra .

(n51)Footnote 51. SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. 344, 351, 64 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 88, 93 .

(n52)Footnote 52. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051 (1975) .

(n53)Footnote 53. 439 U.S. 551, 99 S. Ct. 790, 58 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1979) . In Daniel, the Court held that an interest in an involuntary, non-contributory pension plan is not a security. The matter of interests in employee benefit plans as securities generally is considered in § 2.01[11][c][vi] infra .

(n54)Footnote 54. 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982) .

(n55)Footnote 55. 494 U.S. 56, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1990) . To be sure, the Supreme Court has not retreated from expansive decisions of the past, but it has focused attention on the words and the sense of the statutes. In a related definitional matter, for example, the Court, in Securities Indus. Ass'n v. Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, 468 U.S. 137, 104 S. Ct. 2979, 82 L. Ed. 2d 107 (1984) , held "commercial paper" to be a security for purposes of the former Glass-Steagall Act prohibition on bank underwriting activities. In Rubin v. United States, 449 U.S. 424, 101 S. Ct. 698, 66 L. Ed. 2d 633 (1981) , the Court held that a pledge of securities was a disposition of the securities "for value," i.e., a sale, so as to trigger antifraud protections. Also, in United States v. Naftalin, 441 U.S. 768, 99 S. Ct. 2077, 60 L. Ed. 2d 624 (1979) , the Court extended the antifraud protections of the Securities Act to aftermarket trading frauds. These cases are all grounded in statutory language and assessments of purpose, and, indeed, there is room for thoughtful expansions of securities law protections. Herman & MacLean v. Huddleston, 459 U.S. 375, 103 S. Ct. 683, 74 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1983), holding that remedies under the securities laws are cumulative, demonstrates the willingness of the Court to act in this regard. But see Gustafson v. Alloyd Co., 115 S. Ct. 1061 (1995), in which the Court determined the scope of the Securities Act Section 12(2) purchasers' remedy for information failures to be limited to public offerings.

(n56)Footnote 56. The Securities Act § 3(a)(3) exemption and the corresponding exclusion from the Exchange Act definition of "security" contained in Section 3(a)(10) of the Exchange Act are considered further in § 2.01[1][d] infra.

Courts have made clear that this exemption is intended to apply only short term, high quality instruments issued to fund current operations, and sold only to highly sophisticated investors, see, e.g., SEC v. J.T. Wallenbrock and Associates, 313 F.3d. 532 (9th Cir. 2002).

(n57)Footnote 57. 494 U.S. at 56.

(n58)Footnote 58. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985).

(n59)Footnote 59. Landreth, 471 U.S. at 694, 105 S. Ct. at 2306, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 703.

(n60)Footnote 60. 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982).

(n61)Footnote 61. See United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 849, 95 S. Ct 2051, 2059, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621, 630 (1975); Danner v. Himmelfarb, 858 F.2d 515, 520 (9th Cir. 1988) ("[Plaintiff] sold an asset in exchange for a promissory note secured by a deed of trust. [He] did not 'invest' his money in Empire or in Empire's planned Mexican venture. He did not expect 'profits' in the sense of either capital appreciation or a share of the earnings from a business venture formed with the borrowed capital.").

(n62)Footnote 62. See Marine Bank v. Weaver, 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982) (other regulation); see also Wolf v. Banco Nacional de Mexico, 739 F.2d 1458 (9th Cir. 1984); Brockton Sav. Bank v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 577 F. Supp. 1281 (D. Mass. 1983).

(n63)Footnote 63. See Kaye v. Pawnee Constr. Co., Inc. 680 F.2d 1360 (11th Cir. 1982); Union Planters Nat'l Bank of Memphis v. Commercial Credit Business Loans, Inc., 651 F.2d 1174 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1124 (1981); Manchester Bank v. Connecticut Bank & Trust Co., 497 F. Supp. 1304 (D.N.H. 1980); but see First Fin. Sav. Bank, Inc. v. American Bankers Ins. Co. of Florida, Inc., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16404 (E.D.N.C. 1989) (fixed rate debentures held to be securities where the underlying debt was unsecured and heavily subordinated to other creditor claims).

(n64)Footnote 64. See Great Western Bank & Trust v. Kotz, 532 F.2d 1252 (9th Cir. 1976). "Demand" notes, though generally thought of as being highly liquid, a characteristic inconsistent with investment risk, have nevertheless been brought within the purview of the Securities Act after Reves unless "family resemblance" to a recognized class of non-security notes is shown. See also Bachmeier v. Bank of Ravenswood, 663 F. Supp. 1207 (N.D. Ill. 1987) (short term, fixed rate instruments held to be securities where the financial context distinguished the transaction from commercial situations, and the deception involved mandated securities law protection).

Term and other risk-reducing attributes of some notes in a post-Reves environment are considered further in § 2.01[1][c] infra.

(n65)Footnote 65. See Great Western Bank & Trust v. Kotz, 532 F.2d at 1258-59; see also Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 655 F. Supp. 1225, 1238-39 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) (insurance company lender imposed significant documentation and control over the business operations of the borrower); Old Security Life Ins. Co. v. Waugeneux, 484 F. Supp. 1302 (S.D. Fla. 1980) (retained power to direct investment of note proceeds).

(n66)Footnote 66. See Hunssinger v. Rockford Business Credits, Inc., 745 F.2d 484 (7th Cir. 1984) ; Sanders v. John Nuveen & Co., Inc., 463 F.2d 1075 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1009 (1972) ; Van Kampen Merritt, Inc. v. Avondale Properties Partnership, 702 F. Supp. 1412 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (plan to resell revenue bonds to the general public operated to bring a real estate loan transaction within the ambit of the securities laws).

(n67)Footnote 67. 494 U.S. 56, 68, 110 S. Ct. 945, 953, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47, 92 (1990) .

Other factors that have impacted the determination that a particular instrument is or is not a security, and which bear upon the ascertaining a "family resemblance" in a post-Reves environment, include: (a) its terminology, Bauer v. Planning Group, Inc., 669 F.2d 770, 778 (D.C. Cir. 1981) ; (b) its form, Floyd v. First Penn Corp., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19502 (W.D. Okla. Feb. 4, 1983) ; (c) its relative size, American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Wallace, 702 F.2d 93 (6th Cir. 1983) ; or (d) its character as a "cash substitute," C.N.S. Enters., Inc. v. G & G Enters., Inc., 508 F. 2d 1354 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 423 U.S. 825 (1975) .

(n68)Footnote 68. 544 F.2d 1126 (2d Cir. 1976) .

(n69)Footnote 69. 494 U.S. at 68, 110 S. Ct. at 953, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 62 .

(n70)Footnote 70. Reves, 494 U.S. at 63 .

(n71)Footnote 71. 494 U.S. at 67, 110 S. Ct. at 952, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 61 .

See also Stoiber v. SEC, 161 F.3d 745 (D.C. Cir. 1998) , in which the court explained that the presumption that every note is a security may fall away under either step of a two-tiered analysis. The first step is comparison with the Exchange National Bank list; the second is also a comparison, but with the Reves four factors.

(n72)Footnote 72. 544 F.2d at 1138 ; see also Chemical Bank v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 726 F.2d 930 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n73)Footnote 73. 494 U.S. at 66, 110 S. Ct. at 951, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 60 .

(n74)Footnote 74. Reves, 494 U.S. at 66-67, 110 S. Ct. at 951-52, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 60-61 .

(n75)Footnote 75. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) .

(n76)Footnote 76. 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943) .

(n77)Footnote 77. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985) .

(n78)Footnote 78. 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982) .

(n79)Footnote 79. Since the Reves standards summarily restate virtually all that has ever been determinative of the question, they will surely be broadly applied in the assessment of any supposed security. In Iacobucci v. Universal Bank of Maryland, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15179 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) , for example, the court concluded that the Reves factors indicated that no security was involved in a plan to secure the issuance of credit cards through savings deposits.

(n80)Footnote 80. See Rayman v. People Sav. Corp., 735 F. Supp. 842 (N.D. Ill. 1990) (purchase money notes used in connection with the acquisition of a savings and loan institution and guaranteed by significant shareholders were not securities when viewed under the Reves "lens"); Singer v. Livoti, 741 F.Supp. 1040 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) (notes secured by a mortgage on residential property match a Reves excluded category and are not securities).

(n81)Footnote 81. 494 U.S. at 65, 110 S. Ct. at 951, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 60 (quoting Chemical Bank v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 726 F.2d 930, 939 (2d Cir. 1984) .

But see Pollack v. Laidlaw Holdings, Inc., 27 F.3d 808 (2d Cir. 1994) ("notes" representing participations in home mortgages did not sufficiently resemble a traditional note secured by a mortgage to be excluded from coverage of the securities laws).

(n82)Footnote 82. 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982) .

(n83)Footnote 83. Marine Bank, 455 U.S. at 560, n.11 .

(n84)Footnote 84. 389 U.S. 332, 88 S. Ct. 548, 19 L. Ed. 2d 564 (1967) .

(n85)Footnote 85. 455 U.S. at 556, 102 S. Ct. at 1223, 71 L. Ed. 2d at 415 .

(n86)Footnote 86. See Bradford v. Moench, 670 F. Supp. 920 (D. Utah 1987) .

(n87)Footnote 87. 900 F.2d 1485 (10th Cir.) , cert. denied, 111 S. Ct. 386 (1990) .

(n88)Footnote 88. A thorough review of the transaction setting appears in Holloway v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., vacated by the Supreme Court and remanded for further consideration in light of Reves. 879 F.2d 772 (10th Cir. 1989) , cert. granted and judgment vacated,, 494 U. S. 1014 (1990) , aff'd, 900 F.2d 1485 (10th Cir.) , cert. denied, 111 S. Ct. 386 (1990) . The Holloway court, in both its pre- and post-Reves evaluations, did not find the existence of a state regulatory scheme sufficient to displace the preeminent protective concerns of the federal securities laws.

(n89)Footnote 89. "Profit" in this context was defined by the Court to mean "a valuable return on an investment." This definition of the term, the Court pointed out, is less restrictive than that used in other settings in which the question is whether an "investment contract" form of security is present. In those analyses, grounded in SEC v. W.J. Howey Co., 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244 (1946) and United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) , "profit" means either capital appreciation or a participation in earnings. In Reves, the Court opined that such a restrictive notion applied to a note would eliminate notes paying interest not keyed to earnings of the borrower's enterprise from the definition of a security. Thus, the Court limited the Howey and Forman definition of "profit" to application in the investment contract setting. Reves, 494 U.S. at 68 n.4, 110 S. Ct. at 952 n.4, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 61 .

(n90)Footnote 90. Id.

Assessment of motivation may in many cases result in what one court has called a "washout," in that motivation prompting as transaction on one end may be typical in commercial loan transactions, that is, an effort to raise interim funds to launch a new enterprise. From the other perspective, however, the transaction may well look like one for profit. Bass v. Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc., 210 F.3d. 577 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n91)Footnote 91. Stoiber, 161 F.3d 745 . In Stoiber the D.C. Circuit held that promissory notes given for personal loans to finance personal commodity investments by a broker were securities. Among other things, the court found that the purchase of commodities was at the "core" of the defendant's business of trading in them, and that the his use of the money to buy them was thus appropriately viewed as a general business enterprise use which Reves distinguished from the kind of commercial purposes which would defeat the presumption that notes are securities. The defendant, said the court, was funding his entire endeavor, not just getting past a cash crunch.

(n92)Footnote 92. Reves, 494 U.S. at 67-68, 110 S. Ct. at 952, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 61-62 (footnote omitted).

But see Resolution Trust Corp. v. Stone, 998 F.2d 1534 (10th Cir. 1993) , in which packages of consumer automobile loans offered and sold to financial institutions were held not to be securities under the Reves family resemblance test. The motivation of both parties, said the court, was a commercial transaction. The seller was engaged in selling its "stock in trade" in a normal, on-going business activity. The buyer's expected profit was unrelated to the profitability of the seller. Moreover, the purchasers were sophisticated financial institutions and insurance companies who did not purchase for any potential speculative or trading value.

(n93)Footnote 93. Singer v. Livoti, 741 F. Supp. 1040 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) (six-month note and a refinanced note secured by a mortgage on residential real estate under development held not to be a security where the purpose was a temporary loan to solve cash flow difficulties).

See also Bass v. Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc., supra, 210 F.3d 577 (6th Cir. 2000).

(n94)Footnote 94. See Trust Co. of Louisiana v. N.N.P., Inc., 104 F.3d 1478 (W.D. La. 1997) ("LCE's purported purpose in selling the notes was to raise money for the general use of a nonexistent long distance phone company and TCL's purpose in purchasing them was the 16% return promised").

See also Deal v. Asset Management Group, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13011 (N.D. Ill. 1992) (security motivation present where defendant was alleged to have been raising substantial sums to finance the renovation of a historic property he intended to sell, and the "buyer" of the note was interested in a promised 18 to 20 percent rate of return); Premier Microwave Corp. v. Comtech Telecommunications Corp., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 846 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) ($1 million 7-year note given as a portion of the purchase price for the acquisition of the assets of a division of the defendant company did not have an investment motivation); Prochaska & Assocs., Inc. v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 798 F. Supp. 1427 (D. Neb. 1992) (three-month note, secured by inventory and other assets would not support an "investment" purpose despite allegation that the buyer's interest was a 10% expected return); Singer v. Livoti, 741 F. Supp. 1040 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) (transaction showed "all of the economic context of a temporary loan to solve cash flow difficulties"); Rayman v. Peoples Sav. Corp., 735 F. Supp. 842 (N.D. Ill. 1990) (purpose for the note was to temporarily finance a deal that had originally been planned as all cash).

(n95)Footnote 95. 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943) . Joiner, and its focus on not only the manner in which an instrument is offered or characterized but also its fundamental statement concerning the essence of a security transaction, is discussed in § 2.01 supra.

(n96)Footnote 96. 494 U.S. at 66, 110 S. Ct. at 952, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 61 (citation omitted).

(n97)Footnote 97. See note 58, and accompanying text supra.

(n98)Footnote 98. See, e.g., Singer v. Livoti, 741 F. Supp 1040 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) . In Singer, which held that a short-term note and a refinanced note given in a loan obtained to relieve cash flow difficulties were not securities, the Court made the following observation regarding plan of distribution: "The second factor in the Reves analysis ... need not detain us. There was no such plan [T]he borrower followed the traditional process of the market in private, non-institutional, conventional mortgage loans; he went through his lawyer." Id.

(n99)Footnote 99. See also SEC v. R.G. Reynolds Enters., Inc., 952 F.2d 1125 (9th Cir. 1991) (promissory notes offered and sold to at least 148 investors in several states in connection with a managed investment program were securities).

(n100)Footnote 100. See Sotereanos v. Passodelis, 203 F.3d 818 (3d Cir. 1999) (Loans made on a one-to-one basis between longstanding friends did not involve securities. The notes were not viewed by the parties as "trading or speculation vehicles," but rather only as an indication on paper of oral transactions).

This is surely the message of Marine Bank v. Weaver, 455 U.S. 551, 560, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 1225, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409, 417 (1982) as well. Although the Court in Reves did not specifically describe distinguishing criteria with the language of Marine Bank, it appears certain that the observations the Court made there will best guide applications of the "plan of distribution" factor.

But see SEC v. Great Lakes Equities Co., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19819 (E.D. Mich. 1990) , aff'd, 12 F.3d 214 (table) (6th Cir. 1993) (Notes were publicly offered by representatives of the issuer to various individuals in five states, and thus appeared to be instruments in which there was common trading for investment).

(n101)Footnote 101. See, e.g. Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985) ; National Bank of Yugoslavia v. Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc., 768 F. Supp. 1010 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) ("A debt instrument may be distributed to but one investor, yet be a 'security' "); Vicente v. Obenauer, 736 F. Supp. 679 (E.D. Va. 1990) .

(n102)Footnote 102. See Roer v. Oxbridge, Inc., 198 F.Supp. 2d 212 (E.D.N.Y. 2001) ; see also Bass, 210 F.3d 577 (Unique transaction, negotiated term by term, rather than being offered in a wholesale or potentially wholesale fashion plainly militates against finding a security).

(n103)Footnote 103. 494 U.S. at 66, 110 S. Ct. at 952, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 61 .

(n104)Footnote 104. Reves, 494 U.S. at 66 . In these circumstances, said the Court, "it would be reasonable for a prospective purchaser to take the Co-Op at its word." Id. at 69, 110 S. Ct. at 953, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 62 .

See also Deal v. Asset Management Group, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13011 (N.D. Ill.1992) , where a written project summary characterized the rate of return as an "investors rate of return," and there was nothing alleged which would lead a reasonable investor to question the characterization.

(n105)Footnote 105. SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. 344, 353, 64 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 88, 94 (1943) ; see also Gomez v. Leonzo, 788 F. Supp. 604 (D.D.C. 1992) . The significance of "holding out" could not be any clearer than as presented in Gomez: LIC held itself out as an investment concern, as its middle name indicates, and advertised in the phone book as "Latin Investments and Savings." In actual practice as well, LIC functioned as an investment business. Its customers were guaranteed a rate of return higher than that offered by banks and savings and loan companies; and even more tellingly, LIC offered its customers the prospect of earning dividends from investment of their pooled funds. LIC customers were also given the opportunity of placing their funds in accounts that would be invested in local Hispanic-owned businesses. All of these factors suggest that LIC was issuing its customers securities.

See also Stas v. Pennsylvania Sec. Comm., 910 A. 2d 125 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2006) (Rejecting the assertion that only "personal loans" were involved where "private placement investment agreements" and "private tax-free agreements" paying interest rates ranging from nine to twenty percent over terms of six months to five years were offered).

(n106)Footnote 106. See Mercer v. Jaffe, Snider, Raitt & Heuer, P.C., 736 F. Supp. 764 (W.D. Mich. 1990) . In Mercer, mortgage-backed notes were held to be securities because they were offered and sold on a mass market basis. The court viewed Reves as holding that such notes are excluded from the definition of security only in the context of a "traditional face-to-face loan transaction between a borrower and a commercial or consumer lender, not in the present context of a transaction between an individual investor and a broker/dealer selling the notes on a mass market basis." Id. at 769 .

(n107)Footnote 107. 741 F. Supp. 1040 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n108)Footnote 108. 27 F.3d 808 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n109)Footnote 109. See also Roer, 198 F.Supp. 2d 212 , in which Plaintiffs entered into notes under the belief that they would receive fixed returns of fifty to seventy-five percent return on their "investment," as well as an interest in net profits. The fixed interest rate did not alter reasonable expectations of the investors pursuing what was believed to be an investment.

But see Jeanne Piaubert, S.A. v. Sefrioui, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 2462 (9th Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1073, 121 S. Ct. 765, 148 L. Ed. 2d 666 (2001) (Promissory note was not a security when the note was issued by a high risk venture, but [paid a below market rate of interest, and the purchaser apparently took the note for commercial reasons rather than for investment purposes).

(n110)Footnote 110. Leemon v. Burns, 175 F.Supp. 2d 551 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) .

(n111)Footnote 111. See generally § 2.01 supra; see also National Bank of Yugoslavia v. Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc., 768 F. Supp. 1010 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) , in which the court could only speculate what the "investing public" would expect about notes evidencing $71 million of time deposits placed with the Drexel firm by a foreign central bank for a fixed-rate, short term investment; however, the court concluded the bank "might reasonably view" this as involving a security. The court observed:

[T]he Bank placed its funds with Drexel, at the time a major investment banking and securities underwriting firm, in return for a fixed rate of interest. The funds were to be invested in particular, safe securities. Thus the transactions (if accurately described in the complaint), were investment instruments, rather than consumer or commercial bank loans or financing.

Id. at 1016 .

(n112)Footnote 112. 439 U.S. 551, 99 S. Ct. 790, 58 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1979) . Daniel and the status of employee benefit plans as securities generally are discussed in § 2.01[11][c][vi] infra.

(n113)Footnote 113. 900 F.2d 1485 (10th Cir.) , cert. denied, 111 S. Ct. 386 (1990) .

(n114)Footnote 114. But see Wolf v. Banco Nacional de Mexico, 739 F.2d 1458 (9th Cir. 1984) (holder of certificate of deposit issued by a Mexican bank was "virtually guaranteed" repayment by reason of the Mexican banking regulatory structure).

(n115)Footnote 115. Decisions since Reves have focused primarily on the impact of other regulation instead of the broader notion of a risk-reducing factor. However, in Reves, the Supreme Court spoke of another regulatory scheme only as an example of a factor that could significantly reduce the risk of the instrument: "[W]e examine whether some factor such as the existence of another regulatory scheme significantly reduces the risk of the instrument, thereby rendering application of the Securities Acts unnecessary." 494 U.S. at 67, 110 S. Ct. at 952, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 61 (emphasis added).

(n116)Footnote 116. See, e.g., Resolution Trust Corp. v. Stone, 998 F.2d 1534 (10th Cir. 1993) , in which the court considered the existence of collateral to be a risk-reducing factor, which favored a finding that automobile loan packages sold to financial institutions are not securities.

See also Bass v. Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc., 210 F.3d 577 (6th Cir. 2000) (The existence of collateral is significant as a risk-reducing factor, and the notes were heavily secured).

But see SEC v. J.T. Wallenbrock and Associates, 313 F.3d. 532 (9th Cir. 2002) , in which promissory notes that were purportedly secured by accounts receivable of a manufacturer were nevertheless held to be securities. The court found the purported collateralization to be a fiction.

(n117)Footnote 117. See, e.g., Great Western Bank & Trust v. Kotz, 532 F.2d 1252 (9th Cir. 1976) . When considering bargained-for protections as risk-reducing factors it is well to keep in mind, however, the observation in Exchange National Bank v. Touche Ross & Co., 544 F.2d 1126 (2d Cir. 1976) , which is now implicit in Reves, that:

"While banks are in a favored position to obtain disclosure, the target [of the antifraud provisions] ... is fraud, which a bank's ability to obtain disclosure cannot always prevent." 544 F.2d at 1137 .

(n118)Footnote 118. See, e.g., Holloway v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 900 F.2d 1485 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 111 S. Ct. 386 (1990) (the exception for short term notes is limited to "prime quality negotiable commercial paper" of a type not ordinarily purchased by the general public); Mishkin v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 744 F. Supp. 531 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) (bankers' acceptances with maturities not exceeding nine months are exempted from the definition of securities under Exchange Act § 3(a)(10)); see also Sec. Act Rel. No. 4412, 1961 SEC LEXIS 72 (Sept. 20, 1961) .

The differing treatment of commercial paper between the two acts has little practical impact in determining the existence of a security. However, the exemption/exclusion distinction between the two does impact application of antifraud provisions. The scheme of the Securities Act is such that short-term commercial paper is exempted from registration requirements of the Securities Act but not the main antifraud remedy in § 12(a)(2). The Exchange Act, on the other hand, excludes these instruments from the definition of a security and, thus, from coverage of the Securities Act, including the available Exchange Act antifraud remedies.

(n119)Footnote 119. "In light of Congress' broader purpose in the Acts of insuring that investments of all descriptions be regulated to prevent fraud and abuse, we interpret the exception not to cover the demand notes at issue here. Although the result might be different if the design of the transaction suggested that both parties contemplated that demand would be made within the statutory period, that is not the case before us." 494 U.S. at 73, 110 S. Ct. at 955, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 65 .

(n120)Footnote 120. Reves, 494 U.S. at 75, 110 S. Ct. at 956, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 66 (Stevens, J., concurring).

(n121)Footnote 121. 266 Va. 170, 580 S.E.2d 850 (Va. 2003) .

(n122)Footnote 122. Other debt instruments, such as debentures, included in § 2(1) historically have been evaluated under the same tests or criteria applicable to notes. See, e.g., First Fin. Sav. Bank, Inc. v. American Bankers Ins. Co. of Florida, Inc., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16404 (E.D.N.C. 1989) (fixed rate debentures held to be securities under commercial/investment and investment contract tests).

(n123)Footnote 123. The form of an instrument has always been a part of the transactional setting. However, terminology used in an instrument may evidence the character of a transaction. See, e.g. B.K. Medical Systems, Inc. v. Clesh, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17460 (W.D. Pa. April 19, 1984) (language on certificate referred to note and debenture, the form and substance of which embodied characteristics commonly associated with securities); Bauer v. Planning Group, Inc., 669 F.2d 770, 778 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (existence of a security was conclusively shown on the face of the instrument); Ohio v. Crofters, Inc., 525 F. Supp. 1133 (S.D. Ohio 1981) (form of note imposed no financial obligation on the maker and could only be viewed as evidencing a "risk capital" investment transaction).

(n124)Footnote 124. See Banco Espanol de Credito v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank, 973 F.2d 51 (2d Cir. 1992) (short-term loan participations arranged by a commercial lender to increase the line of credit available to a borrower to facilitate current operations held not to be a security where each participant made its own credit analysis, had its own responsibility for "due diligence," and where no fundamental "investment" characteristics were evident); Developer's Mortgage Co. v. TransOhio Sav. Bank, 706 F. Supp. 570 (S.D. Ohio 1989) (participation interests in bank loans were not securities because, among other reasons, the contingencies for return to the participant were those associated with any normal commercial loan); First State Bank of Wheatland v. American Nat'l Bank, 690 F. Supp. 967 (D. Wyo. 1988) (certificates of participation represented only a commercial loan transaction).

See also Signature Bank v. Marshall Bank, CCH Blue Sky L.Rep. P74,599, at 79,045 (Minn. App. 2006). As to the particular loan participation agreement the Court observed:

The overall motivation of the parties was to finance the borrowers' commercial purposes of acquiring one hockey team and refinancing debts relating to another; the participation agreement was offered to financial and commercial institutions, and not to the general public; appellant received ample notice that the participation agreement was a participation in a loan and not an investment in a business; and, as appellant acknowledges, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has issued policy guidelines that address the sale of loan participations. Signature Bank., at 79,048.

(n125)Footnote 125. Commercial Discount Corp. v. Lincoln First Commercial Corp., 445 F. Supp. 1263, 1267 (S.D.N.Y. 1978) .

(n126)Footnote 126. 455 U.S. 551, 560 n.11, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 1225 n.11, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409, 417, n.11 (1982) .

(n127)Footnote 127. But see First Citizens Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A., 919 F.2d 510 (9th Cir. 1990) (if the underlying note is not a security, a loan participation involving it should not be one either unless "investment contract" criteria are demonstrated).

(n128)Footnote 128. This distinction was critical to the district court's determination, affirmed by the Second Circuit, in Banco Espanol, that no security was present. The district court observed: "[B]ecause the Plaintiffs here did not receive an undivided interest in a pool of loans, but rather purchased participations in a specific, identifiable, short-term ... loan, the loan participation did not have an identity separate from the underlying loan. Since the underlying loan is not a security, neither is the participation therein." 763 F. Supp. 36, 42 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) , aff'd, 973 F.2d 51 (2d Cir. 1992) .

See also Gary Plastic Packaging Corp. v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 756 F.2d 230 (2d Cir. 1985) (undivided interest in a pool of certificates of deposit held to be a security).

(n129)Footnote 129. Fulton Bank v. McKittrick & Briggs Sec., Inc., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11371 (E.D. Pa. 1990) .

(n130)Footnote 130. 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 834 (July 10, 1989) .

(n131)Footnote 131. Id. at 79,210.

(n132)Footnote 132. Zolfaghari v. Sheikholeslami, 943 F.2d 451 (4th Cir. 1991) .

A separate definition of "mortgaged related security" appears in Section 3(a)(41) of the Exchange Act. This definition, adopted in connection with other federal legislation aimed at facilitating the burgeoning secondary market in "securitized" mortgages, is designed to establish a particular status for interests in pools of mortgages comprised of notes that are secured in a particular manner. The status as a "mortgage related security" has significance for other regulation and laws, but has no impact on the fundamental status of such pools or participations as securities under the basic definition provisions of either the Securities Act or the Exchange Act.

(n133)Footnote 133. But see Steinhardt Group, Inc. v. Citicorp, 126 F.3d 144 (3d Cir. 1997) . In Steinhardt, the court concluded that the securitization of a pool of delinquent residential mortgage loans and real estate owned by Citicorp as a result of foreclosures did not result in the creation of an investment contract. The limited partnership vehicle by which the plaintiff acquired its interest in the pool allowed the purchaser to exercise considerable powers over the business plan, to the extent that the court concluded that the plaintiff had pervasive control over the management of the partnership. 126 F.3d at 154 . The plaintiff's involvement was deemed significant enough to place it outside the role of a passive investor.

(n134)Footnote 134. See also First Fin. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. E.F. Hutton Mortgage Corp., 652 F. Supp. 471

(W.D. Ark.) , aff'd, 834 F.2d 685 (8th Cir. 1987) (purchaser of specific mortgages, among other things, retained the right to on-site inspection and to reject any loan that did not meet its conditions).

(n135)Footnote 135. The use of notes or other instruments as a "cash substitute," as when given as an earnest money deposit, or as given to a broker in satisfaction of a deficiency upon liquidation of an account does not involve the creation of a security. See C.N.S. Enters., Inc. v. G & G Enters., Inc., 508 F.2d 1354 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 423 U.S. 825 (1975) (earnest money note was merely a cash equivalent); Seagrave Corp. v. Vista Resources, Inc., 534 F. Supp. 378 (S.D.N.Y.) , rev'd on other grounds, 696 F.2d 227 (2nd Cir. 1982) ("purchase money" note secured by letter of credit and given for the purchase of business assets was not a security). In circumstances like these, the use of cash is considered to be the norm, and the introduction of a note does nothing to alter the character of the transaction.

(n136)Footnote 136. Guidry v. Bank of LaPlace, 740 F. Supp. 1208 (E.D. La. 1990) ; see also Reeder v. Succession of Palmer, 736 F. Supp. 128 (E.D. La. 1990) .

(n137)Footnote 137. Crim v. E.F. Hutton, Inc., 381 S.E.2d 492 (S.C. 1989) .

See also Chavin v. Cole Taylor Bank, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10483 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (Social security checks are not securities under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as they fall within the exclusion for any currency, note or draft with a maturity of not more than nine months).

(n138)Footnote 138. See Tafflin v. Levitt, 865 F.2d 595 (4th Cir. 1989) , aff'd on other grounds, 493 U.S. 455 (1990) (certificates of deposit issued by a state-chartered savings and loan association were not securities in light of a comprehensive regulatory and insurance system).

(n139)Footnote 139. Taken together, Securities Act §§ 3(a)(2) and 3(a)(5) identify as exempt securities any security issued by a bank or a savings and loan association or similar institution that is supervised and examined by state or federal regulatory authorities.

(n140)Footnote 140. Dubach v. Weitzel, 135 F.3d 590 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n141)Footnote 141. This view has extended to programs or plans involving the use of deposit relationships to secure other credit relationships. See Iacobucci v. Universal Bank of Maryland, [1991 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,075 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) ("cash management account" opened by individuals to secure credit cards issued to them held not to be securities under Reves factors).

Certificates of deposit insured by the FDIC have also been excluded from the definition of "security" by the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS). OTS supervises, examines and regulates federal savings associations. Under OTS regulations, "security" does not include an account insured in whole or part by the FDIC, see 12 C.F.R. § 561.44. In State Farm Bank v. Burke , 445 F.Supp. 2d 207 (D. Conn. 2006) , the court recognized that the OTS exclusion is consistent with federal securities laws, as interpreted in Marine Bank v. Weaver, supra. The court thus concluded that the OTS exclusion trumped a state law definition of "security" that included jumbo certificates of deposit that were only partially insured by FDIC within the definition. Apart from the preemptive impact of the OTS regulations, the court concluded that while the existence of FDIC insurance was a factor in the Supreme Court's assessment in Marine Bank that a certificate of deposit was not a security, it was not the determinative factor, and that partial FDIC insurance is sufficient to exclude a bank certificate of deposit from the definition of security.

See also Reiswig v. Dept. of Corporations, 144 Cal. App. 4th 327, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 386 (4th App. Dist. 2006) (CD-plus-bonus package was not a security because investor funds were used to purchase, virtually risk free, federally insured certificates of deposit, and the package did have requisite elements of an investment contract).

(n142)Footnote 142. 900 F.2d 1485 (10th Cir.) , cert. denied, 111 S. Ct. 386 (1990) .

(n143)Footnote 143. The court incorporated its discussion and findings in pre-Reves opinion in the same case, see Holloway v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 879 F.2d 772 (10th Cir. 1989) , cert. granted and judgment vacated, 494 U.S. 1014 (1990) , aff'd, 900 F.2d 1485 (10th Cir.) , cert denied, 111 S. Ct. 386 (1990) . It must also be remembered that in Tcherepnin v. Knight, 389 U.S. 332, 88 S. Ct. 548, 19 L. Ed. 2d 564 (1967) , the Supreme Court held that "withdrawable capital shares" issued by a savings and loan institution were securities for purposes of the antifraud provisions of the Exchange Act. In doing so, the Court found that the instruments were akin to stock in all meaningful characteristics

(n144)Footnote 144. 977 F. Supp. 510 (D. Me. 1997) .

(n145)Footnote 145. Levine v. Diamantheset, Inc., 722 F. Supp. 579 (N.D. Cal. 1989) , rev'd on other grounds, 950 F.2d 1478 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n146)Footnote 146. "Guarantees" as one of the specifically enumerated securities in § 2(1) of the Securities Act are considered further in § 2.01[6] infra .

(n147)Footnote 147. Diaz Vicente v. Obenauer, 736 F. Supp. 679 (E.D. Va. 1990) (separate letter guaranteeing an obligation represented by a note was a security where it represented the obligation involved in a transaction where there was a clear investment purpose).

(n148)Footnote 148. Daily v. Morgan, 701 F.2d 496, 500 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n149)Footnote 149. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) .

(n150)Footnote 150. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985) .

(n151)Footnote 151. But see Seger v. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Omaha, 850 F.2d 468 (8th Cir. 1988) (lender's class B stock, purchased by borrowers as a condition to obtaining a loan, held not to be a security); Dau v. Federal Land Bank of Oklahoma, 627 F. Supp. 346 (N.D. Iowa 1985) ("stock" purchased in connection with obtaining a bank loan evidenced no characteristics of stock under a Forman analysis). There will be situations in which the involvement of "stock" is entirely incidental to the main purpose of a transaction, as in Forman. Additionally, it is unclear what impact, if any, negotiated stockholder relationships, e.g., "close corporation" agreements, which alter the premises underlying stock as the paradigmatic security, will have.

(n152)Footnote 152. United Housing Foundation, 421 U.S. at 851, 95 S. Ct. at 2060, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 631-32 .

(n153)Footnote 153. United Housing Foundation, 421 U.S. at 850, 95 S. Ct. at 2059-60, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 631 .

Shares denominated "common stock," and which create the right to receive dividends dependent upon profits, have voting rights, are transferable, and carry the capacity to appreciate in value bear out the usual characteristics of stock and produce a justifiable expectation that the federal securities laws apply. Mercer v. Jaffe, Snider, Raitt & Heuer, P.C., 736 F. Supp. 764 (W.D. Mich. 1990) .

See also Nelson v. Stahl, 173 F. Supp. 2d 153 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (Ordinary common stock, whether in a publicly held company or a closely held corporation, constitutes a security governed by the federal securities laws).

(n154)Footnote 154. 421 U.S. at 858, 95 S. Ct. at 2063, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 635 .

The reasoning in Forman was subsequently extended to "stock" involved in private housing cooperatives as well. See Grenader v. Spitz, 537 F.2d 612 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1009 (1976) ; Shichman v. 40 Schenck Owners, Inc., [1992 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,924 (E.D.N.Y. June 12, 1992) ; Heese v. DeMatteis Dev. Corp., 417 F. Supp. 864 (S.D.N.Y. 1976) . Of course, none of this is to say that transactions anchored in real estate can never involve securities. Quite the contrary, "investment contracts" arising out of real estate settings are common. See § 2.01[11][c] infra. However, the essential investment character of a transaction must be shown. Where the principal motivation is obtaining a place to live, that requirement will not be met.

(n155)Footnote 155. "[I]n searching for the meaning and scope of the word 'security' in the Act, form should be disregarded for substance and the emphasis should be on economic reality." Tcherepnin, 389 U.S. at 336, 88 S. Ct. at 553, 19 L. Ed. at 569 .

In Forman, the Court drew upon this caveat to emphasize that the essential attribute of a security--the "touchstone" for all of the Court's decisions defining a security--is the presence of an investment in a common venture premised on a reasonable expectation of profits to be derived from the entrepreneurial or managerial efforts of others. See 421 U.S. at 852, 95 S. Ct. at 2060, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 632 .

See also Beber v. Kanarick, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 258 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (purchase of stock involved a security as a matter of economic reality.)

(n156)Footnote 156. See, e.g., Jeanne Piaubert, S.A. v. Sefrioui, (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (Complaint sufficiently alleged that stock possessed all of the characteristics usually associated with common stock).

(n157)Footnote 157. Walsh v. Emerson, [1989-1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 94,962 (D. Ore. 1990).

(n158)Footnote 158. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985) .

(n159)Footnote 159. 471 U. S. 701, 105 S. Ct. 2308, 85 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1985) .

(n160)Footnote 160. Landreth, 471 U.S. at 687, 105 S. Ct. at 2302, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 698 ("[I]t is undisputed that the stock involved here possesses all of the characteristics we identified in Forman as traditionally associated with common stock. ... Moreover, unlike in Forman, the context of the transaction involved here--the sale of stock in a corporation--is typical of the kind of context to which the Acts normally apply.") (citation omitted).

(n161)Footnote 161. Landreth, 471 U.S. at 687-88, 105 S. Ct. at 2302, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 698 (citations omitted). After Landreth, an investment in common stock is presumed to be an investment in a security. Jabend, Inc. v. Four-Phase Systems, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 1339 (W.D. Wash. 1986) .

(n162)Footnote 162. See Seeger v. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Omaha, 850 F.2d at 468 (8th Cir. 1988) .

See also American Re Corp., SEC No Action Letter (May 15, 1998), in which shares of preferred stock of a holding company were to be purchased in order to secure insurance coverage at reduced rates, and involved no traditional attributes. The SEC Staff agreed that Securities Act compliance in the offer and sale of the shares would not be required because, among other things, any dividends distributed to policy holders would be allocated pursuant to a predetermined formula based upon the policy holder's loss experience.

(n163)Footnote 163. Contrasting Forman, in which purchasers of "stock" could not reasonably believe they had acquired an investment security, the Court in Landreth found that it was "much more likely" that a purchaser of actual corporate stock would expect the securities laws to apply. "[P]ersons trading in traditional stock have a high expectation that their activities are governed by the Acts." 471 U.S. at 693, 105 S. Ct. at 2305, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 702 . The Court embraced Professor Loss's view that save for stock involving the "residential wrinkle," the instrument is so "quintessentially a security as to foreclose further analysis." Id. at 694, 105 S. Ct. at 2306, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 702 (quoting L. Loss, Fundamentals of Securities Regulation 212 (1983)).

(n164)Footnote 164. Front Street Supermarket, Inc., 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3000 (Nov. 15, 1982) .

See also Share Loan Serv. Corp., 1984 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2737 (Oct. 18, 1984) ("stock" of a loan service company formed to make loans to housing cooperatives was not a security because the only purchasers were housing cooperatives, no dividends would be paid, shares were non-transferable and were redeemable only at par value at the option of the board of directors); California Ammonia Co., 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2395 (May 27, 1983) (shares of a fertilizer cooperative were not securities where ownership was limited to users and suppliers of the cooperative's products, transfer was limited and restricted to qualified purchasers, the shares carried no dividend rights, and share price appreciation merely reflected a discounted present value of the cost savings associated with ownership of the cooperative); Attorneys' Title Guaranty Fund, Inc., 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2269 (Apr 29, 1983) .

But see Rochester Drug Coop., Inc., 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1107 (Sept. 20, 1991) (common stock may be a security where shares were transferable to persons not involved in the pharmacy business, and which could be resold at a profit); Mutual Serv. Coop., SEC No-Action Letter, [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,033 (June 25, 1982), in which the SEC staff determined that stock in a cooperative of insurance companies that acted as a fiscal agent and as a general agency to place insurance not written by members may be a security, noting that:

- (1) payment of shareholder dividends was permitted, although represented as unlikely;
- (2) the stock was transferable upon approval of the cooperative's board of directors; and
- (3) the stock could be resold at a profit.

See also Associated Grocers of Florida, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 16 Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. (BNA) 215 (1984) (co-op stock possessed many indicia of a security).

(n165)Footnote 165. 198 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 1999) .

See also Hackford v. First Sec. Bank of Utah, N.A., 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 30924 (10th Cir. Jan. 31, 1983) (shares of stock in a range corporation that entitled holders to grazing rights were not securities since there were no investment expectations, the only benefit was the use of property, any enhancement in value was purely incidental, and there were no promotional characteristics).

(n166)Footnote 166. Great Rivers Cooperative of Southeastern Iowa supra, 198 F.3d at 699 .

(n167)Footnote 167. Great Rivers Cooperative at 700.

See also Erica Enders Racing, LLC., SEC No-Action Letter (Nov. 21, 2006) (Non-equity memberships in a fan club evidenced by a "stock" certificate that entitled each new member certain benefits was not a security where the stock was non-transferable, non-redeemable and could not appreciate in value due to the prospective issuance of millions of certificates).

(n168)Footnote 168. See Goodman v. DeAzoulay, 554 F. Supp. 1029 (E.D. Pa. 1983) .

Whether joint venture or partnership interests may themselves be deemed to be securities is considered in § 2.01[11][c][ii] infra .

(n169)Footnote 169. See, e.g., Doherty v. Kahn, 289 Ill. App.3d 544, 682 N.E.2d 163 (Ill. App. 1997) . These approaches involve application of a joint venture gloss in particular settings, and are discussed further in 1 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.02 (Matthew Bender 1999).

(n170)Footnote 170. 807 F.2d 33 (2d Cir. 1986) . See also One-O-One Enterprises, Inc. v. Caruso, 848 F.2d 1283 (D.D.C. 1988) (option to purchase stock of a closely held corporation held to be a security).

(n171)Footnote 171. See, e.g., 8 Del. Code Ann. § 351 (1983); see also Ohio Rev. Code § 1701.591 (Page, 1992).

(n172)Footnote 172. Many of the same considerations of flexibility in structure and management of an enterprise are also involved in assessments of membership units or interests in a "limited liability company." Also creations of state law, limited liability companies allow "members" to enjoy limited liability associated with the corporate form of organization, while at the same time permitting taxation as a partnership. Limited liability company statutes, and "operating agreements" among members which prescribe management roles or rights, clearly impact the status of membership interests in them as securities, all of which is considered further in § 2.01[11][c][iii] infra .

(n173)Footnote 173. 320 U.S. 344, 352-53, 64 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943) .

(n174)Footnote 174. Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 690, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 2304, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692, 700 (1985) .

(n175)Footnote 175. Joiner, 320 U.S. at 351, 64 S. Ct. at 123, 88 L. Ed. at 93 .

(n176)Footnote 176. 471 U.S. 701, 704, 105 S. Ct. 2308, 2310, 85 L. Ed. 2d 708, 711 (1985) .

(n177)Footnote 177. 471 U.S. at 693, 105 S. Ct. at 2305 ,, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 702 (citation omitted). The Landreth focus on the name and "usual characteristics" of an instrument has been extended beyond stock to application to the Securities Act Section 2(1) category of "fractional undivided interest ... in mineral rights." In Cascade Energy & Metals Corp. v. Banks, 896 F.2d 1557 (10th Cir. 1990) , the court applied Landreth in concluding that there was no evidence that working interests in a mining claim were anything other than what they purported to be, and as such were plainly within the statutory definition. Fractional undivided interests in mineral rights as securities are considered further in § 2.01[11] infra .

(n178)Footnote 178. See, e.g., Cohen v. William Goldberg & Co., 262 Ga. 606, 423 S.E.2d 231, 233 (1992) ("The appropriate test to be employed is whether the ... stock bears such characteristics usually associated with common stock that a purchaser justifiably may assume that appropriate security laws apply").

See also Carver v. Blanford, 288 S.C. 309, 342 S.E.2d 406 (1986) ; but see Anderson v. Heck, 554 So. 2d 695 (La. App. 1989) (whether stock is a security depends upon circumstances that evidence need for protection of investors who are not in a position to protect themselves from fraud).

(n179)Footnote 179. Forman dictates that the fact that instruments bear the label "stock" is not sufficient to invoke coverage. The task, said the Court, is to determine whether the instruments bearing the label possess some of the significant characteristics typically associated with stock. Forman, said the Court, does not foreclose the possibility that "stock" can be held to be a security "simply because it is what it purports to be." The ultimate inquiry is whether the actual characteristics of the instrument make it so, and where that is shown, the inquiry ends. See, e.g. Schaafsma v. Morin Vermont Corp., 802 F.2d 629 (2d Cir. 1986) (stock with traditional characteristics held to be a security "as a matter of law").

(n180)Footnote 180. But see Robinson v. Glynn, 349 F.3d 166 (4th Cir. 2003) , in which the court held that a plaintiff's interest in a telecommunications company was not "stock" when it was not called stock, and did not evidence certain characteristics of stock, namely, negotiability and proportional participation in company profits. Courts clearly will engage in transaction-specific assessments where the instrument does not on its face claim or answer to the name.

(n181)Footnote 181. 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982) .

(n182)Footnote 182. Id. at 556, 102 S. Ct. at 1223, 71 L. Ed. 2d at 414-15 .

(n183)Footnote 183. These instruments are discussed in § 2.01[1] supra.

Debentures, a separate § 2(1) category of securities, are often imprecisely characterized as bonds. Their more varied usages, however, may lead to more substantive analysis on the question of their status as securities. See, e.g., First Fin. Sav. Bank, Inc. v. American Bankers Ins. Co. of Florida, Inc., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16404 (E.D.N.C. 1989) .

(n184)Footnote 184. [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 94,038 (S.D. Tex. 1988) .

(n185)Footnote 185. First Fin. Sav. Bank, Inc. v. American Bankers Ins. Co. of Florida, Inc., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16404 (E.D.N.C. 1989) (unsecured and transferable, fixed-rate "debentures" purchased as a condition to obtaining business were securities and not merely evidence of a commercial loan relationship).

(n186)Footnote 186. See § 3(a)(2), discussed in § 3.03 infra. Exchange Act §§ 3(a)(12) and (29) similarly exempt federal, state, and municipal bonds from certain Exchange Act provisions.

Outside the traditional corporate and government bond areas, forms of "church bonds" have often been used for financing construction of facilities by religious groups or congregations. Under both state and federal securities laws, exemptions from statutory coverage may be available under certain circumstances. See, e.g., Securities Act § 3(a)(4), discussed in § 3.05 infra (exempting securities issued by a "person" organized and operated exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, charitable or reformatory purposes).

But see SEC v. World Radio Mission, Inc., 544 F.2d 535 (1st Cir. 1976) (religious organization offering of interest bearing notes through a general public solicitation held to have violated antifraud provisions).

(n187)Footnote 187. Section 12(a)(2), a general antifraud provision that creates an express right of action for purchasers of securities to obtain rescission or damages for misrepresentations, contains an exception for government and bank securities exempt from the registration provisions under § 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act. Section 12(a)(2) is discussed in § 9.04 infra.

See SEC v. Capital Counselors, Inc., 332 F. Supp. 291 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) (enjoining the operation of an unregistered plan for trading in exempt federal government securities. The plan, designed to take profitable advantage of fluctuations in interest rates was, was held to be an investment contract); Imperial Bank, SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982) ("pass through certificates" offered by a bank as evidencing fractional undivided interests in a pool of tax exempt obligations issued by states, political subdivisions and public instrumentalities were deemed to be separate securities).

(n188)Footnote 188. 421 U.S. 837, 850-51, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 2059-60, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621, 631 (1975) .

(n189)Footnote 189. In a bond "workout" situation, rights and arrangements regarding the underlying instruments may, as a matter of economic reality, also trigger Securities Act concerns. See, e.g., Green-Wood Assocs., SEC No-Action Letter, [1990- 1991 Transfer Binder] 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1099 (Sept. 12, 1990) ("deferred payment rights" issued in connection with the redemption of bonds appeared to be an evidence of indebtedness issued in exchange for the bonds, and could constitute a security in its own right).

(n190)Footnote 190. Sec. Act Rel. No. 97, 1933 SEC LEXIS 101 (December 28, 1933) .

(n191)Footnote 191. Corporation Trust Co. v. Logan, 52 F. Supp. 999 (D. Del. 1943) .

See also Kinsey v. Knapp, 154 F. Supp. 263 (E.D. Mich.) , vacated and remanded on other grounds, 249 F.2d 797 (6th Cir. 1957) , cert. denied, 356 U.S. 935 (1958) .

(n192)Footnote 192. See Dewing, The Financial Policy of Corporations 211-13 (5th ed. 1953).

(n193)Footnote 193. As provided in Section 2(4) of the 1934 Act, the term "issuer" includes every "person" who issues or proposes to issue any security. "Person" is defined in § 2(2) specifically to include a trust, to the extent that the "interest or interests of the beneficiary or beneficiaries are evidenced by a security."

(n194)Footnote 194. 731 F.2d 349 (6th Cir. 1984) .

(n195)Footnote 195. Professional Associates, 731 F.2d at 355 . The court found that promotional materials concerning the "trust accounts" gave rise to an implication that the investors' funds were to be pooled and generated reasonable expectations of profit to be derived from the efforts of others. Classification of the investments as a trust did not prevent them from being securities when the evidence supported the finding.

See also Melton v. Unterreiner, 575 F.2d 204 (8th Cir. 1978) (inter vivos trust was a security); SEC v. Heritage Trust Co., 402 F. Supp. 744 (D. Ariz. 1975) (revocable inter vivos trusts that conferred absolute investment discretion on the trustee to be governed by none of the "usual and ordinary regard for safety" that lies at the heart of a fiduciary relationship were securities).

(n196)Footnote 196. See Merrill Lynch Capital Mkts. Structured Invs. Group, 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1009 (June 16, 1989) (interests in litigation settlement trusts would not be securities where no "investment" considerations were present and trustee would perform purely ministerial function of distributing income from Treasury securities to beneficiaries).

See also Investment Co. Inst. v. Conover, 596 F. Supp. 1496 (D.D.C. 1984) , holding that a trust fund established for the purpose of collective investment of IRA trust assets and administered by a bank was not a security since it was not intended to be an "investment vehicle." The court emphasized that trust assets received for a true fiduciary purpose rather than for investment are not securities, and this despite the promotional and marketing efforts for the service that were pursued by the bank. See also DYR Liquidating Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. (BNA) 429 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1987) (interests in a liquidating trust would not be deemed to be securities).

(n197)Footnote 197. SEC v. Professional Assocs., 731 F.2d 349 (6th Cir. 1984) .

See also Investment Co. Inst. v. Camp, 274 F. Supp. 624 (D.D.C. 1967) (units of participation in a commingled account for collective investment management by a bank with the objective of capital appreciation and income are securities).

(n198)Footnote 198. 885 F.2d 1034 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n199)Footnote 199. See Republic Supply Co. of California v. Richfield Oil Co. of California, 74 F.2d 907 (9th Cir. 1935) (depository certificates issued by a reorganization committee were securities).

(n200)Footnote 200. "Receipts" issued in connection with security-holders' protective committee activities in the reorganization setting have not been deemed to be certificates of deposit for securities. Suppose, for example, that a bondholders' protective committee solicits voluntary contributions from holders for committee expenses. All bondholders, whether contributing or not, will share in the fruits of the committee's efforts. Receipts given to the contributing bondholders evidencing their contributions would not be securities within § 2(1). To be a security, the "receipt" must represent, or evidence, an interest in a security. Cf. Newport Metals Co., Inc., 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 816 (Mar. 11, 1976) (depository certificates for precious metals are not securities).

(n201)Footnote 201. 1986 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1978 (April 6, 1986) .

(n202)Footnote 202. 756 F.2d 230 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n203)Footnote 203. The SEC has defined a "depository share" as "a security, evidenced by an American Depository Share, that represents a foreign security or a multiple of or fraction thereof deposited with a depository." Sec. Act Rel. No. 6459, 48 FR 12346 (Mar. 24, 1983) .

(n204)Footnote 204. Such situations are disposed of upon consideration of the focus of securities law protection--an investment decision. The mere deposit of securities for handling manifests no investment decision and no concern for special protection.

It should also be noted that the principles analyzed in the discussion of receipts and certificates of deposit for securities are equally applicable to the term "temporary or interim certificate for [a security]" as used in § 2(1).

(n205)Footnote 205. Note, however, that "guaranty" is not included in the definition of security under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, see Exchange Act § 3(a)(10), 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(10). Thus, in Financial Security Assurance, Inc. v. Stephens, Inc., 500 F.3d 1276 (11th Cir. 2007) , the Court rejected a fraud claim under Exchange Act § 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 that was premised on the argument that a guaranty qualified as a security.

(n206)Footnote 206. In Johns Hopkins Univ. v. Hutton, 422 F.2d 1124, 1128 (4th Cir.) , cert. denied, 416 U.S. 916 (1974) , the court characterized the Securities Act's inclusion of any guarantee of a security as a security itself in this manner:

The definition of a security expressly includes a guarantee of any of the other devices enumerated in Section 2(1) Therefore, a guarantee cannot have the effect of denying coverage to an instrument that otherwise satisfies the Act's definition of security. Whether the guarantee is part of the production payment or collateral to it is immaterial. In either event the entire transaction, including the guarantee, falls within the statutory definition of security.

(n207)Footnote 207. See James v. Meinke, 778 F.2d 200 (5th Cir. 1985) (guarantee agreements executed by investors in consideration for the promise of additional stock of a corporation were not separate securities where the guarantee involved was only an agreement to repay a loan and not an investment of money in a common enterprise).

(n208)Footnote 208. When considering "guarantees" under the Securities Act it is important to distinguish a guarantee of a security from a commercial guarantee representing a security device with respect to an obligation of another. For example, in Crabtree Invs., Inc. v. Aztec Enters., Inc., 479 F. Supp. 448 (M.D. La. 1979) , a guaranty agreement represented a security device but was held not to be a security within the meaning of the federal securities laws.

Compare Ahrendt v. Palmetto Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 680 F. Supp. 1125 (S.D. Ohio 1987) , in which loan guarantees signed by individuals for a real estate project were accompanied by payment of additional capital for the project. While the court acknowledged the argument that the guarantees were intended only as security for commercial loans, the payment of additional capital made it possible for the guarantees to be deemed separate securities, and a motion to dismiss securities law claims was denied.

See also Diaz Vicente v. Obenauer, 736 F. Supp. 679 (E.D. Va. 1990) (letter guarantee deemed to be a security either independently or as merged with underlying note that was deemed to be a security).

(n209)Footnote 209. The scope of the phrase "right to subscribe to or purchase" any security extends Securities Act coverage not only to warrants and rights as such, but also to such instruments as "repurchase agreements." See Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. v. Drysdale Sec. Corp., 801 F.2d 13 (2d Cir. 1986) (extending antifraud protections under corresponding Exchange Act definition).

(n210)Footnote 210. 485 F. Supp. 462 (E.D. Pa. 1980) .

(n211)Footnote 211. See also United California Bank v. THC Fin. Corp., 557 F.2d 1351 (9th Cir. 1977) (demand notes coupled with a right to purchase future notes were not securities because no "risk capital" was committed).

(n212)Footnote 212. In the critical definition of the term "sale" for purposes of the Securities Act, § 2(3) operates to render the issuance of a presently exercisable right or privilege to subscribe to another security the sale of the other security as well. An issuance of rights without consideration, or "value," may not involve a sale of the right but may nevertheless constitute a sale of the underlying security. Complete consideration of the elements of a "sale" is undertaken in § 2.02 infra .

(n213)Footnote 213. Warrants and rights became popular devices in the defense against unwanted takeover bids. So-called "poison pill" or "springing" warrants distributed to shareholders that convey the right to acquire other securities--even shares of a hostile bidder--on specified terms and upon the happening of a particular event have been allowed as a matter of federal and state law. See, e.g., Moran v. Household Int'l Corp., 500 A.2d 1346 (Del. 1985) ; Gearheart Indus., Inc. v. Smith Int'l, Inc., 741 F.2d 707 (5th Cir. 1984) . However novel their features, these instruments are securities. Because they have generally been distributed to shareholders as stock dividends rather than by "sale," registration under the Securities Act is not required. See § 2.02[b][4] infra.

(n214)Footnote 214. These interests are to be distinguished from the stock, units or other interests issued upon the organization of the enterprise. Since the words "certificate" and "subscription" are used in § 2(1), it appears that the definition was intended to embrace both written and oral preorganization interests.

(n215)Footnote 215. See Stevens v. Vowell, 343 F.2d 374 (10th Cir. 1965) ("agreement to form a corporation" is a contract to buy shares of stock in a corporation to be formed and, as such, is a preorganization certificate or subscription); Getchell v. United States, 282 F.2d 681 (5th Cir. 1960) (alleged criminal violation of Securities Act antifraud provisions in a scheme to sell preorganization subscriptions).

(n216)Footnote 216. Joint venture and partnership interests in § 2.01[11][c][ii] infra .

In many pre-formation settings involving small numbers of people, the private offering exemption in § 4(2) of the Securities Act would be relied upon to exempt certificates or subscriptions from registration (but not the antifraud provisions). The private offering exemption is discussed in § 4.02 infra. Other exemptions may also be available.

(n217)Footnote 217. A put or call option relates to 100 shares of the underlying stock. Options are structured and traded according to quarterly expiration cycles, i.e., the contracts are available for trading with three quarterly expiration months so that, for example, options listed in January will expire in equal numbers in April, July and October. The technical "issuer" of option contracts is the Options Clearing Corporation, which is responsible for Securities Act registration processes. Options trade on national securities exchanges, and to much more limited degree, over-the-counter.

(n218)Footnote 218. See Report of the Special Study of the Options Markets to the Securities and Exchange Commission, (Dec. 22, 1978).

(n219)Footnote 219. See Commodity Exchange Act § 2(a)(1)(B)(ii).

(n220)Footnote 220. Chicago Mercantile Exch. v. SEC, 883 F.2d 537 (7th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied sub nom. American Stock Exch., Inc. v. Chicago Mercantile Exch., 496 U.S. 936 (1990) ; see also Messer v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc., 847 F.2d 673 (11th Cir. 1988) (although Treasury Bonds are government securities, futures contracts on Treasury Bonds are commodities and are subject to regulation under the commodities laws); Mallen v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 605 F. Supp. 1105 (N.D. Ga. 1985) (stock index futures are not securities).

(n221)Footnote 221. One-O-One Enterprises, Inc. v. Caruso, 848 F.2d 1283 (D.C. Cir 1988) (option to purchase stock of a restaurant franchise was a "right to purchase" and hence a security).

(n222)Footnote 222. Well before the specific statutory inclusion, call options offered to the public were deemed to be securities under the Securities Act. See Dean Witter & Co., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 126 (Jan. 5, 1972) .

(n223)Footnote 223. See e.g., Taylor v. Bear Stearns & Co., 572 F. Supp. 667 (N.D. Ga. 1983) ; Westlake v. Abrahams, 565 F. Supp. 1330 (N.D. Ga. 1983) . The consequences of such accounts being deemed to be securities are meaningful. Absent an exemption, the accounts themselves would be subject to the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of the Securities Act. The general antifraud provisions would apply with a considerably broader focus, and further regulation under the Investment Company Act of 1940 could also result.

But see Xaphes v. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 597 F. Supp. 213 (D. Me. 1984) (whether an option trading account is an investment contract is entirely a function of the Howey test and, in particular, the element of "common enterprise").

The elements of an "investment contract" as applied to discretionary securities and commodities accounts are discussed in § 2.01[11][c][xiii] infra.

(n224)Footnote 224. 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10995 (N.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n225)Footnote 225. See also SEC v. Currency Trading International, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24992 (C.D. Cal. 2004) (Foreign currency options are securities pursuant to section 2(1) of the Securities Act of 1933).

(n226)Footnote 226. 295 F.3d. 312 (2d. Cir. 2002) .

(n227)Footnote 227. In reaching its conclusion, the Second Circuit distinguished, and rejected in part, Proctor & Gamble Co. v. Bankers Trust Co., 925 F. Supp. 1270 (S.D. Ohio 1996) , in which a district court opined that an arrangement involving an interest rate swap with "option-like features" was not a security. The transaction in Proctor & Gamble involved swaps linked to the price of Treasury notes. The case did not address whether a cash-settled over-the-counter option on a stock is an option, and thus a security. In Caiola the Second Circuit also emphasized that there is no textual basis in the definition of security to define "option" as including only transactions that give the holder the right to receive the underlying securities.

(n228)Footnote 228. Even in Proctor & Gamble the court emphasized:

It is important to point out that the holdings in this case are narrow; I do not determine that all leveraged derivative transactions are not securities, or that all swaps are not securities. Some of these derivative instruments, because of their structure, may be securities. 925 F.Supp. at 1283 .

See also Sanderson v. H.I.G.P-XI Holding, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10893 ; (E.D. La. 2000) ("Stock appreciation rights" could be considered securities despite the fact that they were not transferable and were the product of a negotiated agreement).

(n229)Footnote 229. Sec. Act Rel. No. 185 (1934). As also indicated in this release, if the whole royalty interest of the landowner (or an entire lease) is sold, there is no sale of a "fractional undivided interest" within the meaning of § 2(1). Thus, for the sale of an entire lease to involve the sale of a "security," it would have to be labeled an "investment contract." The House Committee Report observed: "It is also intended to apply the Act to interests commonly known as 'securities' whether or not such interests are represented by any document or not. [I]ts provisions cannot be evaded by simply refraining from issuing to the subscriber any documentary evidence of his interest." H.R. Rep. No. 1838, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section D of the 1933 Act, 73d Cong., 2d Sess. 39 (1934)

(emphasis added).

(n230)Footnote 230. 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943) .

(n231)Footnote 231. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. at 348, 64 S. Ct. at 122, 88 L. Ed. at 92 .

(n232)Footnote 232. See Fund of Funds, Ltd. v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 545 F. Supp. 1314 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) , in which interests in natural resource assets were held to be securities in the form of either fractional interests or investment contracts. The court characterized the plaintiff in the following manner: "[FOF] was not an oil, gas and mineral developer any more than it was a business participant in the various industries in which it purchased common stocks, bonds or notes. FOF's investments were not ordinary commercial financings between knowledgeable industry participants."

See also Southwest Inv. I v. Midland Energy Co., 596 F. Supp. 219 (E.D. Mo. 1984) ; Ferland v. Orange Groves of Florida, Inc., 377 F. Supp. 690 (M.D. Fla. 1974) .

But see Ratner v. Sioux Nat'l Gas Corp., 770 F.2d 512 (5th Cir. 1985) (purchase of 100% working interest in property, subject only to an existing royalty interest, was not the purchase of a security); Fearneyhough v. McElvain, 598 F. Supp. 905 (C.D. Ill. 1984) (transfer of an entire oil and gas lease was neither a fractional undivided interest nor an investment contract); Robertson v. Humphries, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9196 (10th Cir. 1978) (sale of entire leasehold is not the sale of a security despite the retention of an overriding royalty).

(n233)Footnote 233. Vale Natural Gas Am. Corp. v. Carrollton Resources 1990, Ltd., 795 F. Supp. 795 (E.D. La. 1992) . The distinction between "vertical" and "horizontal commonality" for purposes of defining the existence of a security in the form of an investment contract is considered further in § 2.01[11][b] infra .

(n234)Footnote 234. 515 F. Supp. 1062 (D. Colo. 1981) . See also SEC v. Goldfield Deep Mines Co. of Nevada, 758 F.2d 459 (9th Cir. 1985) (ore purchase program was based on common enterprise involving a unique ore processing technique, and interests in the program were securities).

(n235)Footnote 235. 551 F. Supp. 281 (C.D. Cal. 1982) . While the fractional interests were, by definition, securities, the turnkey contracts were deemed to be investment contracts. The court so held even though the working interest purchasers retained ultimate control over the leasehold and could determine whether to drill and who the driller would be.

(n236)Footnote 236. Courts have had little difficulty in holding the Securities Act applicable where interests involved are clearly "fractional undivided interests," regardless of the form they assumed. However, the Supreme Court left no doubt in Joiner that the fact that oil, gas, or mineral promotions and financing schemes do not answer to the designation does not mean exclusion from statutory coverage. As the Court stated:

It is urged that because the definition mentions "fractional undivided interests in oil, gas or other mineral rights" it excludes sales of leasehold subdivisions by parcels. Oil and gas rights posed a difficult problem to the legislative draftsman. Such rights were notorious subjects of speculation and fraud, but leases and assignments were also indispensable instruments of legitimate oil exploration and production. To include leases and assignments by name might easily burden the oil industry by controls that were designed only for the traffic in securities. This was avoided by including specifically only that form of splitting up of mineral interests which had been most utilized for speculative purposes. We do not think the draftsmen thereby immunized other forms of contracts and offerings which are proved as a matter of fact to answer such descriptive terms as "investment contracts" and "securities".

320 U.S. at 352, 64 S. Ct. at 124, 88 L. Ed. at 93-94 .

(n237)Footnote 237. Cascade Energy & Metals Corp. v. Banks, 896 F.2d 1557 (10th Cir. 1990) . See also SEC v. Profit Enters., Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17906 (D.D.C. Nov. 16, 1992) ("fractional interest in oil well leases is easily encompassed in Exchange Act definition of security).

(n238)Footnote 238. Penturelli v. Spector Cohen Gadon & Rosen, P.C., 779 F.2d 160 (3d Cir. 1985) . Plaintiff purchased 28 of 60 undivided fractional interests in a coal mine development program. In doing so, plaintiff became a co-owner of the development, was an active participant, and was found to have had considerable means of protecting his investment. Such means included the power to block any major action concerning the development project and the power to sell coal for his own account. This active role precluded any finding of an investment contract.

See also Sparks v. Baxter, 854 F.2d 110 (5th Cir. 1988) ; Power Petroleum, Inc. v. P & G Mining Co., 682 F. Supp. 492 (D. Colo. 1988) (interest in a mining partnership was not a security where the investor had substantial managerial powers as a general partner); Deutch Energy Co. v. Mazur, 813 F.2d 1567 (9th Cir. 1987) (general partnership's purchase of oil well leases did not involve the purchase of securities since the partners had significant managerial powers and general business expertise); Ballard & Cordell Corp. v. Zoller & Dannenberg Exploration Ltd., 544 F.2d 1059 (10th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 431 U.S. 965 (1977) .

(n239)Footnote 239. However, the precise characteristics of "fractional undivided interest[s] in oil, gas or other mineral rights" may not be so well established as to mandate security status in the post-Landreth environment. Other approaches may be necessary or desirable. See, e.g., Simon Oil Co. v. Norman, 789 F.2d 780 (9th Cir. 1986) ("risk capital" analysis applied to fractional interests in oil and gas rights).

(n240)Footnote 240. 93 F.2d 844 (7th Cir. 1937) .

(n241)Footnote 241. See also Parvin v. Davis Oil Co., 524 F.2d 112 (9th Cir. 1975) ; The Johns Hopkins Univ. v. Hutton, 422 F.2d 1124 (4th Cir. 1970) ; Nor-Tex Agencies, Inc. v. Jones, 482 F.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1973) , cert. denied, 415 U.S. 977 (1974) ; Nicewarner v. Bleavins, 244 F. Supp. 261 (D. Colo. 1965) ; SEC v. MacElvain, 299 F. Supp. 1352 (D. Ala.) , aff'd, 417 F.2d 1134 (5th Cir. 1969) , cert. denied, 397 U.S. 972 (1970) ; Mansfield v. United States, 155 F.2d 952 (5th Cir. 1946) .

(n242)Footnote 242. See Feldberg v. O'Connell, 338 F. Supp. 744 (D. Mass. 1972) .

(n243)Footnote 243. SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. 344, 351, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88, 93 (1943) .

(n244)Footnote 244. To a lesser extent the "catchall" characterization could also be applied to "transferable shares," "evidence of indebtedness," and "any interest or instrument commonly known as a security" as these terms appear in Section 2(1).

(n245)Footnote 245. But see SEC v. Addison, 194 F. Supp. 709, 722 (N.D. Tex. 1961) ("The legislative history of the Securities Act of 1933 makes it clear that this statute cannot be circumvented by simply refraining from issuing a written instrument evidencing the security transaction. The statute applies regardless of whether such securities are represented by any document.").

(n246)Footnote 246. 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 890 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 10, 1987)

(n247)Footnote 247. But see Aiena v. Olsen, 69 F. Supp. 2d 521 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (Ten year certificates given in connection with a non-compete/consulting agreement by retired directors, given in exchange for stock previously owned by the directors, and which conferred the right to receive installment payments based upon the company's future dividend stream were investment contract securities and not "personal service contracts").

(n248)Footnote 248. 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244 (1946) .

(n249)Footnote 249. W.J. Howey, 328 U.S. at 298-99, 66 S. Ct. at 1102-03, 90 L. Ed. at 1249 . The Court's definition of "investment contract" was expressly recognized as reflecting economic reality. The Court observed:

"[The term 'investment contract'] was common in many state 'blue sky' laws in existence prior to the adoption of the federal statute and, although the term was also undefined by the state laws, it had been broadly construed by state courts so as to afford the investing public a full measure of protection. Form was disregarded for substance and the emphasis was placed upon economic reality." Id. at 298, 66 S. Ct. at 1102, 90 L. Ed. at 1249 .

(n250)Footnote 250. Indeed, the U.S. Supreme Court has stated: In defining the scope of the market that it wished to regulate, Congress painted with a broad brush. It recognized the virtually limitless scope of human ingenuity, especially in the creation of "countless and variable schemes devised by those who seek the use of the money of others on the promise of profits," and determined that the best way to achieve its goal of protecting investors was "to define the term 'security' in sufficiently broad and general terms so as to include within that definition the many types of instruments that in our commercial world fall within the ordinary concept of a 'security.'" Congress therefore did not attempt precisely to cabin the scope of the Securities Act. Rather, it enacted a definition of "security" sufficiently broad to encompass virtually any instrument that might be sold as an investment. Reves, 494 U.S. 56, 60-61, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1990) (citations omitted).

See also SEC v. SG Ltd, 265 F.3d. 42 (1st Cir. 2001) (The notion of a security encompasses the total universe of financial instruments available to investors).

(n251)Footnote 251. The definition of "investment contract" under Howey is not impermissibly vague for application in state criminal prosecutions, see Digman v. Quartermain, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62726 (W.D. Tex. 2006) . In Digman the court rejected the contention that the Howey definition of a security was intended for "regulatory purposes" and is too vague for application to a Texas criminal prosecution. The court observed: "An effective regulatory scheme includes imposing and enforcing penalties to uphold the law." The petitioner's activity plainly qualified for creation of an investment contract under Howey. It would be reasonable for a state court to use the definition where the penalties of the state securities law are specific enough to give notice of what is considered criminal conduct, without producing a chilling effect.

(n252)Footnote 252. W.J. Howey, 328 U.S. at 299-300, 66 S. Ct. at 1103, 90 L. Ed. at 1250 (emphasis added).

See also United Housing Foundation Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 90 L. Ed. at 1250 (1975) .

(n253)Footnote 253. See 421 U.S. at 852, 95 S. Ct. at 2060, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 632 .

(n254)Footnote 254. See Heine v. Colton, Hertnick, Yemin & Sheresky, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2825 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 9, 1992) (no business underlying the purported investment of money); Wabash Valley Power Ass'n, v. Public Serv. Co. of Indiana, Inc., 678 F. Supp. 757 (S.D. Ind. 1988) (purchase of percentage interest in project to construct a nuclear power plant was motivated by desire to consume the energy to be produced, and success in sale of other energy output would not be due solely to efforts of others); Stowell v. Ted S. Finkel Inv. Serv., Inc., 489 F. Supp. 1209 (S.D. Fla. 1980) .

See also C.N.S. Enters., Inc. v. G & G Enters., Inc., 508 F.2d 1354, 1359 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 423 U.S. 825 (1975) ; Ticket Reserve, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin., Sept. 11, 2003) (No "investment medium" involved--a seat ticket or right to acquire a seat ticket to an event is a commodity purchased for use or consumption).

It also means that there must be an actual investment decision. If, for example, participation in an Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP) is mandatory, there is no voluntary investment choice, see Matassarin v. Lynch, Trustee, 174

F.3d 549 (5th Cir. 1999) (Mandatory employer-funded ESOP did not involve any voluntary investment choice and the first Howey element could not be met).

(n255)Footnote 255. 438 F. Supp. 2d 1122 (C.D. Cal. 2006) . The application of investment contract analysis to employee benefit plans generally, and the investment decision element in particular, are considered in detail in § 2.01[11][c][vii], infra.

(n256)Footnote 256. 540 U.S. 389, 124 S. Ct. 892 (2004) .

(n257)Footnote 257. Edwards and the investment contract analysis applicable to investment schemes involving personal property generally, are discussed specifically in § 2.01[11][c][xii] infra .

(n258)Footnote 258. 320 U.S. 344, 348, 64 S. Ct. 120, 122, 88 L. Ed. 88, 92 (1943) .

(n259)Footnote 259. See SEC v. The Infinity Group, 212 F.3d. 180 (3d Cir. 2000) ; Wagman v. FSC Sec. Corp., 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17610 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 1985) . Heine v. Colton, Hertnick, Yemin & Sheresky, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2825 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 9, 1992) .

See also SEC v. U.S. Funding Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24789 (D.N.J. 2006) ("Accounts Receivable Purchase Agreements" promising 20% to 25% returns involved pooling of funds into a single bank account to purchase new accounts receivable on which profits would be generated wholly by the efforts of the promoter); SEC v. Global Express Capital Real Estate Investment Fund I, LLC, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96477 (D. Nev. 2006) (Investor funds pooled to enable investors to diversify their investments over a number of mortgage loans, and distributions were derived from income generated by the pooled Fund assets).

(n260)Footnote 260. Broadview Fin., Inc. v. Entech Management Servs. Corp., 859 F. Supp. 444 (D. Colo. 1994) .

See also Mace Neufield Prods., Inc., v. Orion Pictures Corp., 860 F.2d 944 (9th Cir. 1988) (a private television series production agreement, negotiated directly by the parties, was an agreement that could not ordinarily or commonly be thought to be a security); Stenger v. R.H. Love Galleries, Inc., 741 F.2d 144 (7th Cir. 1984) ; Hart v. Pulte Homes of Michigan Corp., 735 F.2d 1001 (6th Cir. 1984) ; Dahl v. English, 578 F. Supp. 17, 20 (N.D. Ill. 1983) ("[M]ost indicative of the unitary nature of the instant transactions is that each purchaser's success depends on the marketability and public acceptance of his particular art work and not on the success of any other purchaser's artwork"); First Nat'l Bank & Trust of Oklahoma City v. Thoele, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15626 (W.D. Okla. 1982) ; Deckebach v. LaVida Charters, Inc., 867 F.2d 278 (6th Cir. 1989) (purchase/management arrangement was a one-on-one vertical relationship which did not rise to the level of a contribution or pooling of venture capital).

But see Aiena v. Olsen, 69 F. Supp. 2d 521 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (Personal consulting agreement did not negate investment contract determination for an associated certificate entitling former directors to receive future "shadow dividend" payments).

(n261)Footnote 261. Wals v. Fox Hills Dev. Corp., 24 F.3d 1016, 1018 (7th Cir. 1994) (citations omitted).

(n262)Footnote 262. See SEC v. Professional Assocs., 731 F.2d 349 (6th Cir. 1984) ; Hirk v. Agri-Research Council, Inc., 561 F.2d 96 (7th Cir. 1977) ; First Nat'l Bank & Trust of Oklahoma City v. Thoele, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15626 (W.D. Okla. 1982) ; Barry v. Ceres Land Co., 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16356 (D. Minn. 1978) ; Wasnowic v. Chicago Bd. of Trade, 352 F. Supp. 1066 (M.D. Pa. 1972) , aff'd, 491 F.2d 752 (3d Cir. 1973) ; Milnarik v. M-S Commodities, Inc., 457 F.2d 274 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 887 (1972) ; Commercial Iron & Metal Co. v. Bache & Co., 478 F.2d 39 (10th Cir. 1973) .

(n263)Footnote 263. 864 F. Supp. 784 (N.D. Ill. 1994) .

(n264)Footnote 264. See also SEC v. Banner Fund International, 211 F.3d 602 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (Simply placing investors' funds into individual trusts did not change the pooled nature of the program, the very premise of which was that funds from small investors would be combined).

(n265)Footnote 265. SEC v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., 497 F.2d 473, 478 (5th Cir. 1974) .

See also Vale Natural Gas Am. Corp. v. Carrollton Resources, Inc., 795 F. Supp 795 (E.D. La. 1992) ; Long v. Schultz Cattle Co., 881 F.2d 129 (5th Cir. 1989) , reh'g denied, 896 F.2d 85 (5th Cir. 1990) ; Brodt v. Bache & Co., 595 F.2d 459 (9th Cir. 1978) ; Booth v. Peavey & Co. Commodities Servs., 430 F.2d 132 (8th Cir. 1970) ; SEC v. Continental Commodities Corp., 497 F.2d 516 (5th Cir. 1974) ; Hector v. Wiens, 533 F.2d 429 (9th Cir. 1976) ; Westlake v. Abrahams, 504 F. Supp. 337 (N.D. Ga. 1980) .

(n266)Footnote 266. See Kaplan v. Shapiro, 655 F. Supp. 336 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n267)Footnote 267. SEC v. Eurobond Exch., Ltd., 13 F.3d 1334 (9th Cir. 1994) ; see also SEC v. Comcoa Ltd., 855 F. Supp. 1258 (S.D. Fla. 1994) (each investor dependent upon the success of the defendant in preparing, filing, and obtaining licenses in application service program for certain FCC licenses and in post-licensing marketing activities); Long v. Schultz Cattle Co., 881 F.2d 129 (5th Cir. 1989) , reh'g denied, 896 F.2d 85 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n268)Footnote 268. See Kline Hotel Partners v. Aircoa Equity Interests, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 740 (D. Colo. 1989) (existence of a federal security requires the presence of "passivity-in-fact"--an investor who is unable to exert any significant or essential managerial efforts).

(n269)Footnote 269. United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 852, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 2060, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621, 632 (1975) .

See also Odom v. Slavik, 703 F.2d 212 (6th Cir. 1983) (minority partner voluntarily entered into a partnership with the power to participate in affairs of the enterprise and the kind of leverage and ability to protect himself that precludes a security); Perry v. Gammon, 583 F. Supp. 1230 (N.D. Ga. 1984) (delegation of management over real estate properties did not alter ability to control); Great W. Bank & Trust v. Kotz, 532 F.2d 1252, 1260-61 (9th Cir. 1976) (Wright, J., concurring).

(n270)Footnote 270. See SEC v. Glenn W. Turner Enters., Inc., 474 F.2d 476 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 821 (1973) ; SEC v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., 497 F.2d 473, 478 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n271)Footnote 271. Teague v. Bakker, 35 F.3d 978 (4th Cir. 1994) .

(n272)Footnote 272. 320 U.S. 344, 353, 64 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 88, 94 (1943) .

(n273)Footnote 273. See Aldrich v. McCulloch Properties, Inc., 627 F.2d 1036 (10th Cir. 1980) (promotional emphasis by the developer of a real estate project was central to the inquiry, whether lot sales were securities).

(n274)Footnote 274. In re Gardner, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,757 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1979) .

(n275)Footnote 275. SEC v. SG Ltd., 265 F.3d. 42 (1st Cir. 2001) .

See also In re Professional Fin. Management, Ltd., 692 F. Supp. 1057 (D. Minn. 1988) (argument that subject transactions were arms-length between prudent business people was not reasonable in light of prospectus and promotional materials which created investment expectations). In an otherwise close case, the manner of promotion may be determinative. See generally Rapp, The Role of Promotional Characteristics In Determining the Existence of a Security, 9 Sec. Reg. L.J. (1981).

(n276)Footnote 276. 993 F.Supp. 321 (E.D. Pa. 1998) , aff'd, 212 F.3d 180 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n277)Footnote 277. See DeWitt v. Firststar Corp., 879 F. Supp. 947 (N.D. Iowa 1995) (no dependence on promoter to make decisions essential to success of cattle program); Villeneuve v. Advance Business Concepts Corp., 698 F.2d 1121 (11th Cir. 1983) , aff'd en banc, 730 F.2d 1403 (11th Cir. 1984) (purchaser required to make "substantial efforts" toward achieving desired profit); Christy v. Cambron, 710 F.2d 669 (10th Cir. 1983) (purchaser actively involved in operation and management of the enterprise); Darrah v. Garrett, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18649 (N.D. Ohio 1984) (purchaser performed significant managerial duties and had extensive control over the profit and loss potential of the investment); Coffin v. Tricoli, 470 F. Supp. 7 (E.D. Va. 1977) (individual with 50% management control could not claim reliance on the managerial efforts of others); Frazier v. Manson, 651 F.2d 1078 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n278)Footnote 278. See Meyer v. Dans un Jardin, S.A., 816 F.2d 533 (10th Cir. 1987) ; Mr. Steak, Inc. v. River City Steak, Inc., 324 F. Supp. 640 (D. Colo.1970) , aff'd, 460 F.2d 666 (10th Cir. 1972) ; Nash & Assocs., Inc. v. Lum's of Ohio, Inc., 484 F.2d 392 (6th Cir. 1973) ; Bitter v. Hoby's Int'l, Inc., 498 F.2d 183 (9th Cir. 1974) ; Crowley v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 570 F.2d 877 (11th Cir. 1978) ; The Plum Tree, Inc. v. Frasz, 433 F. Supp. 537 (E.D. Pa. 1977) ; Higbie v. Kopy-Kat, Inc., 391 F. Supp. 808 (E.D. Pa. 1975) ; Schuler v. Better Equip. Laundry Ctr., Inc., 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12690 (D. Mass. 1973); Wieboldt v. Metz, 355 F. Supp. 255 (S.D.N.Y. 1973) .

(n279)Footnote 279. SEC v. Friendly Power Co., L.L.C., 49 F.Supp. 2d 1363 (S.D. Fla. 1999) .

See also SEC v. Aqua-Sonic Prods. Corp., 687 F.2d 577 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied sub nom. Hecht v. SEC, 459 U.S. 1086 (1982) (license to sell dental products with the seller of the license available as an "optional" sales agent was a security since the typical investor would be expected to accept the option, and thus remain passive).

(n280)Footnote 280. See Miltland Raleigh-Durham v. Myers, 807 F. Supp. 1025 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; SEC v. Interlink Data Network of Los Angeles, Inc., 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20163 (C.D. Cal. 1993) (by definition, limited partnership interests are investment contracts); Sommer v. PMEC Assocs. & Co., 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12749 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; Henkind v. Brauser, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5344 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) ("Virtually by definition... because of their restrictions on participation, limited partnership interests usually qualify as securities for purposes of the federal securities laws"); Dooner v. NMI Ltd., 725 F. Supp. 153 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (limited partnership with only a single limited partner was a security).

(n281)Footnote 281. Uniform Partnership Act § 18(e).

(n282)Footnote 282. Uniform Partnership Act § 18(a), (e). Unlimited and unconditional liability was considered determinative in rejecting an attempt to characterize additional capital contributions to a partnership as the purchase of securities. See Klaers v. St. Peter, (8th Cir. Aug. 22, 1991)).

(n283)Footnote 283. Uniform Partnership Act §§ 9(1), 9(2) and 15.

(n284)Footnote 284. A joint venture is defined as a partnership for a particular purpose. It has also been defined as a partnership for a single transaction or project. In other words, features that most distinguish a partnership from a joint venture are scope and duration. It has long been recognized that partnership law governs joint venture relationships.

For analyses of joint venture relationships under the Howey test, see Sparks v. Baxter, 854 F.2d 110 (5th Cir. 1988) (parties were involved in a joint effort in which the expectation of profits was a result of joint work efforts, and it was manifest from the evidence that no investment contract existed); Youmans v. Simon, 791 F.2d 341 (5th Cir. 1986) (joint venture agreement permitted investors too much power to satisfy Howey test); Sleven v. Pedersen Assocs., Inc., 540 F. Supp. 437 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) (if there is no written statement that delineates the intent of the parties at the time an investment is made, the intent becomes clear from the relationship the parties accepted thereafter; thus, a plaintiff who felt free to work directly in a project to develop prefabricated homes in which he invested, and who rendered his services freely, purchased an interest in a joint venture and not a security); Goodman v. DeAzoulay, 539 F. Supp. 10 (E.D. Pa. 1982) (plaintiff's interest in a corporation, although evidenced by "stock" was in fact a joint venture interest since plaintiff was an active participant in the venture); McLish v. Harris Farms, Inc., 507 F. Supp. 1075 (S.D. Cal. 1980) (investment in a joint venture involving cattle was a security where essential managerial efforts came from the promoter who exercised daily control over the cattle and who had absolute control over the removal of the cattle from his custody); Oxford Fin. Cos. v. Harvey, 385 F. Supp. 431 (E.D. Pa. 1974) (joint venture interest not a security where the investor had substantial managerial control coupled with the power to control disbursement of funds); Polikoff v. Levy, 55 Ill. App. 2d 229, 204 N.E.2d 807 (Ill. App. Ct.) , cert. denied, 382 U.S. 903 (1965) (unit interests in joint venture were not securities).

(n285)Footnote 285. See Casablanca Prods., Inc. v. Pace Int'l, Inc., 697 F. Supp. 1563 (D. Ore. 1988) (plaintiff may have been a passive general partner but one who nevertheless had significant managerial powers); Reeves v. Teuscher, 881 F.2d 1495 (9th Cir. 1989) (general partners had equal rights to manage and control); Matek v. Murat, 862 F.2d 720 (9th Cir. 1988) (general partnership agreement gave all partners access to information and the ability to protect their investments); Stone v. Millstein, 804 F.2d 1434 (November 24, 1986) (no security where plaintiffs had an equal partnership interest and participated fully in the formation of the partnership, the acquisition of the partnership property, and the partnership's management); Rivanna Trawlers Unlimited v. Thompson Trawlers, Inc., 650 F. Supp. 1378 (W.D.Va. 1986) (plaintiffs retained significant powers to control the partnership venture and were capable of exercising their powers).

But see McGill v. American Land & Exploration Co., 776 F.2d 923 (10th Cir. 1985) (investment in a joint venture held to be a security where economic reality mandated a conclusion that Howey criteria were met).

(n286)Footnote 286. 126 F.3d 144 (3d Cir. 1997) .

(n287)Footnote 287. Id., at 155 .

See also Bamco 18 v. Reeves, 675 F. Supp. 826 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) , in which a limited partnership interest was not a security where the investor was, in effect, the sole limited partner and played a role in operation and management of the partnership enterprise.

(n288)Footnote 288. "A limited partner shall not become liable as a general partner unless, in addition to the exercise of his rights and powers as a limited partner, he takes part in the control of the business." Uniform Limited Partnership Act § 7.

(n289)Footnote 289. See Goodman v. Epstein, 582 F.2d 388 (7th Cir. 1978) (limited partnership interest held to be a security as a matter of law); Dooner v. NMI Ltd., 725 F. Supp. 153 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) ; Henkind v. Brauser, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5344 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (limited partnership interests were securities even though two limited partners held 99% ownership interest).

See also L & B Hospital Ventures, Inc. v. Healthcare Int'l, Inc., 894 F.2d 150 (5th Cir. 1990) ; Ethanol Partners v. Weiner, Zuckerbrot, Weiss & Brecher, 635 F. Supp. 18 (E.D. Pa. 1985) ; Felkay v. ZB Ltd. Partnership No.1, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16172 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) ; Mayer v. Oil Field Sys. Corp., 721 F.2d 59 (2d Cir. 1983) ; Murphy v. Gutfreund, 583 F. Supp. 957 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) .

The fact that a limited partner holds an option to buy out the general partners, thus terminating the partnership and changing his relationship to the real estate that forms the basis for the partnership enterprise, does not represent sufficient control to prevent the limited partnership interest from being a security. Rodeo v. Gillman, 787 F.2d 1175 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n290)Footnote 290. Tcherepnin v. Knight, 389 U.S. 332, 336, 88 S. Ct. 548, 553, 19 L. Ed. 2d 564, 569 (1967) .

(n291)Footnote 291. Goodwin v. Elkins & Co., 730 F.2d 99 (3rd Cir.) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 831 (1984) .

(n292)Footnote 292. Williamson v. Tucker, 645 F.2d 404, 424 (5th Cir.) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 897 (1981) .

See also SEC v. Telecom Marketing, Inc., (N.D. Ga. 1995) (Pro forma evidence that partners possessed real powers was overcome by the fact that investors were targeted for their ignorance of the industry and applicable law and accounting); Bergsma v. Wood, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16014 (W.D. Mich. 1989) (general partnership could be a security where the partner's interest involved little power and left him totally dependent upon the managerial skill and integrity of the managing general partner); Kline Hotel Partners v. Aircoa Equity Interests Inc., 729 F. Supp. 740 (D. Colo. 1989) ; McConnell v. Frank, Howard & Allen Co., 574 F. Supp. 781 (N.D. Cal. 1983) (general partnership interest held to be a security where the partnership agreement left little control in the hands of non-managing partners and investors were unsophisticated with respect to exercise of the powers they did have); Koppel v. Wien, 575 F. Supp. 960 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) (participations in a hotel partnership were securities despite alleged "fundamental" powers reserved to investors); Wagner v. Bear, Stearns & Co., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16813 (N.D. Ill. 1982) (general partnership interest held to be a security).

(n293)Footnote 293. See, e.g., SEC v. Shiner, No. 03-60175-CIV, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15607 (S.D. Fla. 2003) (Any power the investors exercised was illusory).

See also SEC v. Shreveport Wireless Cable Television Partnership, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23086 (D.D.C. 1998) (Partners' power and interests were significantly diluted, and agreements conferred no managerial power beyond that of a limited partner); Holden v. Hagopian, 978 F.2d 1115 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n294)Footnote 294. Pfohl v. Pelican Landing, 567 F. Supp. 134 (N.D. Ill. 1983) (under Williamson, whether a general partnership interest is a security is a factual question); see also Cohen v. Goodfriend, 642 F. Supp. 95 (E.D.N.Y. 1986) (general partner believed he was a limited partner, and economic reality was that in fact he was sold a limited partnership interest); Stewart v. Germany, 631 F. Supp. 236 (S.D. Miss. 1986) .

(n295)Footnote 295. Rivanna Trawlers Unlimited v. Thompson Trawlers, Inc., 650 F. Supp. 1378, 1383-84 (W.D. Va. 1986) ; see also Casablanca Productions, Inc. v. Pace Int'l, Inc., 697 F. Supp. 1563 (D. Or. 1988) .

For a thorough analysis of the various approaches to general partnership interests as securities and persuasive reasoning against any "bright line" rule, see Matek v. Murat, 862 F.2d 720 (9th Cir. 1988) . See also Gordon v. Terry, 684 F.2d 736 (11th Cir. 1982) (although the written agreements for real estate partnerships gave an investor control through voting power over the fate of his investment, the defendant's represented unique knowledge and expertise on which the investor relied created a factual question concerning the existence of a security); Morrison v. Pelican Land Dev. Co., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15843 (N.D. Ill. 1982) (an interest in a general partnership could be deemed to be a security since the plaintiff-partner alleged that he was too inexperienced to participate in the partnership's affairs, that he relied totally on the unique talents of the managing partners, and that he was incapable of exercising meaningful partners); Pawgan v. Silverstein, 265 F. Supp 898 (S.D.N.Y. 1967) ("It is obvious that this venture was not a general partnership in the accepted sense, and calling it one does not properly reflect its business form").

But see Odom v. Slavik, 703 F.2d 212 (6th Cir. 1983) , in which the court held that despite the fact that the plaintiff had no opportunity to exercise any power normally accorded a general partner, he was an experienced professional who knowingly entered into the partnership agreement and a minority position; hence, his general partnership interest would not be deemed to be a security.

See also Darrah v. Garrett, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18649 (N.D. Ohio 1984) (purchasers of limited partnership interests in fact had extensive control over profit and loss potential of the investment, and their interests were not securities).

(n296)Footnote 296. 483 F. 3d 747 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n297)Footnote 297. N. 284, supra.

(n298)Footnote 298. See also Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002) . In Toothman the defendants organized and sold interests in 53 limited liability partnerships to some 5000 investors. The court opined that application of investment contract principles would defeat any presumption that limited liability partnerships are not securities. The relevant inquiry, said the court, is whether the "partners" expected profits from the essential managerial efforts of someone else, and whether the partners had any substantial power to affect the success of the enterprise.

(n299)Footnote 299. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 7-80-401(1).

(n300)Footnote 300. "Close corporation agreements" and their potential impact in the determination whether corporate stock should be deemed to be a security, are discussed in § 2,01[2][a], supra.

(n301)Footnote 301. See, e.g., Burnett v. Rowzee, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 74275 (C.D. Cal. 2007) . In Burnett the operating agreement in an LLC delegated all management authority to the managing member and left no right of control over the LLC's investments in the hands of individual members. Plaintiffs expected profits from their investment to come from their managing member's efforts and not their own. They were the functional equivalent of limited partners, i.e., passive investors in the scheme who relied upon another's managerial efforts.

See also Days Inn Worldwide, Inc. v. Sonia Investments LLC, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80118 (N.D. Tex. 2006) (Investment in LLC with the expectation of being a passive investor with no operational role was sufficient to demonstrate the existence of a genuine issue with the LLC membership qualified as an investment contract).

(n302)Footnote 302. 48 F. Supp. 2d 326 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n303)Footnote 303. 48 F.Supp. 2d at 333 . The same conclusion was reached in Endico v. Fonte, 485 F.Supp. 2d 411 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) , in which a member of a limited liability company unsuccessfully claimed protection of the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws in connection with the inducement to sell his two-thirds membership interest in the LLC. The plaintiff seller was not a passive investor, as he exercised financial control in the operation of the enterprise. While the LLC operating agreement designated the defendants as the Managing Members, with power and authority to manage the business, it also included a significant limitation on the exercise of that authority by requiring unanimous consent of the members, including the plaintiff, to sell or mortgage company property. This, coupled with the fact that the plaintiff exercised sole signatory authority for disbursement of company funds, ran directly contrary to the claim that plaintiff was a passive member.

See also Great Lakes Chemical Corp. v. Monsanto Co., 96 F.Supp. 2d 376 (D. Del. 2000) (Powers held by members, including the power to remove managers without cause, vested in the members the power to directly affect the profits received, and precluded finding a security); Robinson v. Glynn, 349 F.3d. 166 (4th Cir. 2003) (No security where members were active participants in the business); Nelson v. Stahl, 173 F. Supp. 2d 153 (S.D.N.Y 2001) (LLC agreement granted members direct authority over management).

(n304)Footnote 304. See In re Express Communications, Inc., Ga. Comm'r of Sec., No. 50-93-0095 (Apr. 14, 1994).

(n305)Footnote 305. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.01(B); Mich. Comp. Laws § 450.5103; New Mexico Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-2(V) ("unless the context otherwise requires"); Wis. Stat. § 551.02(13)(b)-(c) (presumption in certain circumstances).

North Carolina, by rulemaking, has established a rebuttable presumption of security status, see Blue Sky Regulations, Rule.1510; and Indiana, while including LLCs within the statutory definition, provides an exclusion where all members are actively engaged in management, Ind. Code § 23-2-1-1(k).

(n306)Footnote 306. 1 L. Ribstein and R. Keatinge, Ribstein and Keatinge on Limited Liability Companies, § 14.02, at 14-5 (McGraw-Hill 1994).

(n307)Footnote 307. See SEC v. Universal Serv. Ass'n, 106 F.2d 232 (7th Cir. 1939) , cert. denied, 308 U.S. 622 (1940) (memberships in the "Universal Order of Plenocrats," touted as offering a 30% annual return); Davenport v. United States, 260 F.2d 591 (9th Cir. 1958) , cert. denied, 359 U.S. 909 (1959) (memberships in a plywood cooperative); United States v. Davis, 40 F. Supp. 246 (N.D. Ill. 1941) .

See also United States v. Monjar, 47 F. Supp. 421 (D. Del. 1942) , aff'd, 147 F.2d 916 (3d Cir. 1946) , cert. denied, 325 U.S. 859, 89 L. Ed. 1979 (1945) (receipts issued to club members for personal loans held to be investment contracts and evidences of indebtedness within § 2(1)).

(n308)Footnote 308. Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, 55 Cal. 2d 811, 361 P.2d 906 (Cal. 1961) . Country Club memberships were sold, and the proceeds were used by the promoter to finance completion of the club facilities. Purchasers of memberships received no interest in the assets or financial success of the club, only the right to use its facilities when opened. While future "profits" could not be the focus of the purchasers' decision, the risk to capital being furnished was apparent. This risk was isolated by the court as the most important aspect of the transaction, and the memberships were held to be securities under the state Blue Sky Law.

(n309)Footnote 309. American Stock Exchange, Inc., SEC No Action Letter, [1998 Transfer Binder] Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CCH) [par] 77,472 (Sept. 15, 1998).

See also Marine Preservation Ass'n, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1085 (Sept. 16, 1991) (memberships in non-profit corporation formed to promote welfare of petroleum and energy industries in regard to oil spills); Front Street Supermarket, Inc., 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3000 (Nov. 15, 1982) (membership interests in a worker cooperative organized to operate a supermarket); Attorneys' Title Guar. Fund, Inc., 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2269 (Mar 31, 1983) (stock sales as a requirement for membership in a title insurance company comprised solely of attorneys; Home Mortgage Access Holding Corp., 1984 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1968 (Feb. 22, 1984) (company formed to provide member builders with access to mortgage funds); American Hardware Supply Co., 1984 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1521 (Jan. 4, 1984) (nontransferable membership shares in a business cooperative for hardware and lumber dealers were not securities).

(n310)Footnote 310. 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 7829, 238 N.Y.L.J. 95 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. County 2007) .

(n311)Footnote 311. Boca Lago Country Club, Inc., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4200 (Oct. 14,1981) .

But see Diamond Dealers Club, Inc., 1984 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2342 (Div. Corp. Fin., July 9,1984) (bonds sold to members of a non-profit organization on a mandatory basis to finance a 20 year lease on facilities would be deemed to be sale of securities).

(n312)Footnote 312. See SEC v. International Loan Network, Inc., 968 F.2d 1304 (D.C. Cir. 1991) ("Memberships" that entitled the purchaser to discounts and other services did not constitute securities themselves, but the linked program in which members earned profits through recruiting of new members and subsequent fees paid by new members constituted an investment contract).

(n313)Footnote 313. Investment clubs have raised such issues. See Investors Fin. Servs., Inc. SEC No-Action Letter, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,357 (July 28, 1986) ("Small Savers Investment Group" sponsored by an investment adviser would result in the creation of a security); see also Sharp Inv. Club, SEC No-Action Letter, [1981 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,803 (Dec. 4, 1980) (whether investment club membership is a security depends in large measure on the manner in which investment decisions are made); TGI Friday's, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, [1981 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,841 (Feb. 17, 1981) (interests in a club formed to pool savings to invest in large denomination certificates of deposit could be deemed to be securities depending upon the level of participation by group members in operations).

See also Caldwell v. State, 95 S.W.3d 563 (Tex. App. 2002) (Defendant recruited people to join an "investment club" by paying an annual fee, joining a team and giving the team money for investment, with an expectation of profits from 100 to 300 percent).

(n314)Footnote 314. United Housing Foundation, 421 U.S. 837 .

(n315)Footnote 315. See also Field v. 104-108 Reade Street Assocs., 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3450 (S.D.N.Y. May 4, 1987) (shares in a partnership whose purpose was to acquire title to property, in which the four partners had occupancy rights and shared management responsibilities, did not involve a security).

The approach has been extended to residential leases. See Waldo v. Central Indiana Lutheran Retirement Home, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8516 (S.D. Ind. 1979) (lifetime lease of apartment in a retirement health care facility was not a security); Aschenbach v. Covenant Living Centers-North, Inc., 482 F. Supp. 1241 (E.D. Wis. 1980) (residency contract not a security).

Expectations which defeat security status in these circumstances need not be confined to "residence." See, e.g., Weiss v. Lehman, 713 F. Supp. 489 (D.D.C. 1989) (motives for purchasing real estate included tax benefits and expected appreciation from development in which purchasers would be involved; see also Westchester Corp. v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 626 F.2d 1212 (5th Cir. 1980) (sale of developed property in fixed intervals at fixed prices was "merely a contract for purchase of land in phases" and not a security); Lopez v. Richards, 594 F. Supp. 488 (S.D. Miss. 1984) (sale of an interest in a land purchase option as part of a venture to profitably resell the option was not a security).

(n316)Footnote 316. Gordon v. Terry, 684 F.2d 736, 741, n.4 (11th Cir. 1982) ; see also McCown v. Heidler, 527 F.2d 204, 208 (10th Cir. 1975) (Simply because a purchaser expects or hopes that the value of land purchased under a land contract will increase does not convert the transaction into a security).

But see Santiago Berrios-Bones v. Nexidis, LLC, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80283 (D. Utah 2007) (Investments in real estate by means of "Joint Venture" or General Partner" agreements could be deemed to be securities where defendants had sole control over key elements of the real estate purchases and the success of the enterprise).

(n317)Footnote 317. See SEC v. Kirkland , 521 F.Supp. 2d 1281 (M.D. Fla. 2007) .

(n318)Footnote 318. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5347, 1973 SEC LEXIS 2120 (Jan. 4, 1973) . Distinguishing situations in which no investment oriented promotion is involved, the Commission would in those situations permit a non-pooled rental arrangement with an agent not designated or required to be used as a condition of the purchase.

See also Bhatla v. Resort Dev. Corp., 701 F. Supp. 501 (W.D. Pa. 1989) ; Hocking v. Dubois, 885 F.2d 1449 (9th Cir. 1989) , (en banc) cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990) (each case requires an analysis of how the condominium was promoted in order to determine whether an optional rental pool creates a security); Wooldridge Homes, Inc. v. Bronze Tree, Inc., 558 F. Supp. 1085 (D. Colo. 1983) (investment in a condominium held to be an investment contract, with emphasis on defendant's construction financing initiatives and expected managerial services).

For consideration of other resort/leisure real estate under the Securities Act, see Cameron v. Outdoor Resorts of Am., Inc., 608 F.2d 187 (5th Cir. 1979) (condominium campsite units held to be securities); Jenne v. Amrep Corp., [1978

Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,343 (D.N.J. 1978).

(n319)Footnote 319. Id.

(n320)Footnote 320. 838 F. Supp. 676 (D. Mass. 1993) .

(n321)Footnote 321. [1] But see Garcia v. Santa Maria Resort, Inc., CCH Fed. Sec.L.Rep. 94,541, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 86193 (S.D. Fla. 2007), where condominium purchase contracts did not emphasize investment value, and each plaintiff specifically confirmed that s/he was purchasing the condominium for "personal use," and there was no expectation of profit other than that which would be realized from the plaintiffs' own actions and from appreciation in market value wholly outside of defendants' control.

(n322)Footnote 322. Revak v. SEC Realty Corp., 18 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1994) .

See also Pliskin v. Bruno, 838 F. Supp. 658 (D. Me. 1993) (fixed rental and buyback payments were not dependent upon developer's success or managerial expertise); Lavery v. Kearns, 792 F. Supp. 847 (D. Me. 1992) (no indication of either vertical or horizontal commonality).

(n323)Footnote 323. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 4877, 1967 SEC LEXIS 32 (Aug. 8, 1967) .

(n324)Footnote 324. See Horowitz v. AGS Columbia Assocs., 700 F. Supp. 712 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (while land which was the subject of the transaction was not a security, limited partnership units were investment contracts by reason of the purchasers reliance on the seller to realize a return on the real estate project).

(n325)Footnote 325. 558 F. Supp. 1085 (D. Colo. 1983) .

(n326)Footnote 326. See Adams v. Cavanagh Communities Corp., 847 F. Supp. 1390 (N.D. Ill. 1994) ("The success of Plaintiffs' investments rested on the common improvement of the properties through Defendants' promised provision of infrastructure, golf courses, and other amenities").

(n327)Footnote 327. 990 F.2d 7 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n328)Footnote 328. With respect to interval ownership--"time sharing" plans--the SEC has declined to take no-action positions. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6253, 1980 SEC LEXIS 443 (Oct. 28, 1980) ; see also The Innisfree Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2252 (Apr. 5, 1973) ; The Innisfree Corp., 1974 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2425 (June 12, 1974) .

(n329)Footnote 329. Interests in pools of mortgages, often represented by "pass-through certificates" or "mortgaged-backed" certificates, which are collateralized by underlying properties, insured, and are offered and sold to financial institutions, have been held not to be securities. See, e.g., National Mortgage Equity Corp. Sec. Litig., 723 F. Supp. 497 (C.D. Ca. 1989) ; EPIC Mortgage Ins. Litig., 710 F. Supp. 1192 (E.D. Va. 1989) ; but see Securities Indus. Ass'n v. Clarke, 885 F.2d 1034 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (private mortgage-backed pass-through certificates issued by a bank represent an investment within the Howey and Forman parameters).

In contrast, publicly offered pass-throughs or other participations in huge mortgage pools through FNMA or GNMA programs, or privately sponsored mortgage investment programs, unquestionably do involve securities and are subject to the full range of securities law protections. See SEC v. G. Weeks Sec., Inc., 483 F. Supp. 1239 (W.D. Tenn. 1980) , aff'd in part, 678 F.2d 649 (6th Cir. 1982) ; Abrams v. Oppenheimer Gov't. Sec., Inc., 737 F.2d 582 (7th Cir. 1983) . Exchange Act § 3(a)(41) prescribes a definition for "mortgage-related securities" which impacts offerings of certain types of such securities, primarily by qualifying them for "shelf registration" under the Securities Act. See, e.g., Comfed Fed. Bank, SEC No-Action Letter, [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,876 (Sept. 29, 1988).

(n330)Footnote 330. See Elson v. Geiger, 506 F. Supp. 238 (E.D. Mich. 1980) (sale and leaseback arrangement did not create an investment contract where the purchaser's return consisted of a lessee's fixed rental payment and was independent of the lessee's profits or management expertise).

See also Sire Plan Portfolios, Inc. v. Carpentier, 8 Ill. App. 2d 354, 132 N.E.2d 78 (1956) (issuer of undivided fractional interests in property, taken back under lease, who agreed to manage the property for a percentage of rental income and distribute profits to interest holders sold investment contracts under Illinois securities law); Fritz Scharenberg, SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983) (sales of condominiums with mandatory 15-year leaseback arrangement were securities); Sunshine Kitchens v. Althaus Corp., 403 F. Supp. 719 (S.D. Fla. 1975) (sale and leaseback arrangement not a security).

(n331)Footnote 331. Other types of programs and offerings involving real estate mortgages or related services have also come under securities law scrutiny. See, e.g., SEC v. Lake Havasu Estates, 340 F. Supp. 1318 (D. Minn. 1972) (sale of notes and land contracts of land purchasers to public investors); United States v. Farris, 614 F.2d 634 (9th Cir. 1980) (sale of mortgage notes to the public under a plan in which the seller acted as a collection service and made certain guarantees of principal); Wright v. Schock, 571 F. Supp. 642 (N.D. Cal. 1983), aff'd, 742 F.2d 541 (9th Cir. 1984) (promissory notes secured by deeds of trust, for which the seller provided collection services).

(n332)Footnote 332. 24 F.3d 1016 (7th Cir. 1994) .

See also FDIC v. Eagle Properties, Ltd., 664 F. Supp. 1027 (W.D. Tex. 1985) (sale and leaseback of real estate did not constitute the sale of security since the purchaser partnership retained ultimate control over the property and contributed essential efforts affecting the success or failure of the enterprise).

(n333)Footnote 333. Lopez v. Richards, 594 F. Supp. 488, 492-93 (S.D. Miss. 1984) .

(n334)Footnote 334. As an alternative argument for securities law protection, the plaintiffs in Forman urged that "stock" in the housing cooperative was an investment contract. The assertion was based upon the possibility of "net income" from leasing by the co-op of commercial space for offices, for parking, and from the operation of laundry facilities. The Supreme Court rejected this possibility of income as an "expectation of profit" within the contemplation of investment contract analysis: "The short of the matter is that the stores and services in question were established not as a means of returning profits to tenants, but for the purpose of making essential services available... . [T]he possibility of some rental income is not an 'expectation of profit' in the sense found necessary in Howey." 421 U.S. 837, 856-57, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 2062-63, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621, 635 (1975) .

(n335)Footnote 335. Perry v. Gammon, 583 F. Supp. 1230 (N.D. Ga. 1984) .

(n336)Footnote 336. Terrace Hill Condominiums, SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983).

(n337)Footnote 337. Gordon v. Terry, 684 F.2d 736 (11th Cir. 1982) (articulating a "forced reliance" exception to the principle that investor control precludes a security).

See also Williamson v. Tucker, 645 F.2d 404 (5th Cir.) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 897 (1981) ; Alexandria Assocs., Ltd. v. Mitchell Co., (S.D. Miss. July 9, 1992) . The practical aspects of "control" as a factor in determining whether partnership interests are securities is discussed in § 2.01[c][ii] infra.

(n338)Footnote 338. Alert, "Tenancy-in-Common Interests as Securities," Wash. Dept. of Fin Institutions Sec. Div. (Sept. 8, 2005).

(n339)Footnote 339. See, e.g., Triple Net Leasing, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter Denied (Aug. 23, 2000). The SEC staff disagreed with a conclusion that exchanges of replacement properties through master leases in transactions structured to qualify for tax deferral under Section 1031 of the Internal Revenue Code would not involve a security.

Sponsors of the program claimed that in an exchange transaction there was no "profit" as contemplated in investment contract analysis, and that there is no "development"--only the exchange of improved commercial real estate subject to a long-term master lease. Based upon the staff's disagreement with this proposition, no-action relief was denied. Although not articulated, the basis for the staff's disagreement necessarily was grounded in the fact that replacement properties would be separately managed, and that exchangers relied upon that management as a value determinant associated with the property.

(n340)Footnote 340. See, e.g., United States v. Faulhaber, (1st Cir. Mar. 21, 1991) (mutual funds); Investors Fin. Servs., Inc., 1986 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2715 (July 28, 1986) (collective investment program sponsored by an investment adviser would not only involve creation of a security but an investment company as well).

Other regulation may also apply. The capital formation aspects of a commodity pool are subject to the Securities Act, while the operation of the pool and its promoters are subject to regulation under the Commodity Exchange Act. See Commodity Exchange Act § 4m.

But see In re Federal Bank & Trust Co., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16185 (D. Or. June 4, 1984) (managed trading accounts for investments in treasury bills and GNMA certificates organized as a tax sheltered investment program were not securities for want of a common enterprise under either the vertical or horizontal commonality approach).

For a security to be present in any pooled fund arrangement, there must actually be "pooling." In Perez-Rubio v. Wyckoff, 718 F. Supp. 217 (S.D.N.Y. 1989), investments in off-shore companies formed for the purpose of investing in American securities were held not to be securities where no actual pooling was shown. No interdependence between the investor and the promoter was present. However, the pooling of assets of several off-shore companies in which individual investments were made, for the purpose of then investing the pooled assets, did involve a security.

(n341)Footnote 341. See Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3036 (Oct. 28, 1982). In determining that such a program would involve issuance of securities, the Staff noted that the sponsors of the program: (1) created the opportunity for investors to share in higher rates of return available on the large denomination certificates; (2) selected the banks in whose certificates of deposit the funds would be placed; and (3) selected the custodian to whom investors would look for payment. An additional factor was the intention of the sponsors to make a secondary market in the interests.

See also Management Corp. of America, SEC No-Action Letter, [1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,210 (Mar.8, 1982) (participation in a fund of monies pooled to purchase "jumbo" certificates of deposit could involve creation of a security).

(n342)Footnote 342. See Shawmut Worcester County Nat'l Bank, SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982) (collective investment plan for IRA and Keogh plans would not create a security); Republic Nat'l Bank of New York, SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982) (bank-sponsored IRA investment plan would create a separate security and an investment company); Florida Nat'l Banks of Florida, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2240 (Mar. 23, 1983); First Commerce Trust Co., 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1879 (Jan. 28, 1983) (collective trust fund for investment of self-directed IRA assets would involve the sale of a security); Lincoln First Bank, N.A., SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983) (collective trust fund for investments by employee pension and profit-sharing plans would not create a security).

See also Walker Bank & Trust Co., 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3291 (offer and sale of individual retirement accounts in which participants would determine investments to be made for each account within the range of elections established by the plan would not involve creation of a security).

Common trust funds organized by banks for the collective investment of trust assets are exempted from Securities Act via § 3(a)(2) (interest or participation in a common trust fund or similar fund maintained by a bank solely for the collective investment and reinvestment of assets received as trustee, executor, administrator or guardian), discussed in § 3.03 infra.

With respect to bank involvement in the promotion of collective investment accounts as a matter of federal banking law, and the lines between banking and securities activities, see Investment Co. Inst. v. Camp, 401 U.S. 617, 91 S. Ct. 1091 (1971) .

(n343)Footnote 343. Investment Co. Inst. v. Conover, 790 F.2d 925 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (bank-sponsored program for commingling and collective investment of IRA trust assets did not involve the creation of a security for purposes of Glass-Steagall Act prohibitions); see also Morgan Shareholder Servs. Trust Co., 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 869 (May 6, 1988) (package of services for dividend reinvestment programs and other investment programs for shareholders of participating issuers, and shareholder interest in any programs offered, would not be securities).

(n344)Footnote 344. Levine v. Diamantheset, Inc., 722 F. Supp. 579 (N.D. Cal. 1989) (confirmations of demand deposits in depository banks were not securities where services were pursuant to a separate contract and banks were not involved in an actual investment or promise of profits).

(n345)Footnote 345. SEC v. Professional Assocs., 731 F.2d 349 (6th Cir. 1984) (monies commingled in an "escrow account" for investment in a money market fund deemed to be a security where promotional characteristics supported the conclusion that horizontal commonality existed among investors).

Professional Associates highlights the manner of promotion as a factor in characterizing a collective investment mechanism as a security. Much earlier, in Sec. Act Rel. No. 4589, 1963 SEC LEXIS 141 (Mar. 11, 1963) , the Commission cautioned that both the Securities Act and the Investment Company Act would be applicable to any contemplated "merchandising" of interests in collective investment funds by banks. If the principal distinction is "true fiduciary" services versus the establishment of an "investment vehicle," the role of promotional characteristics is easily seen.

Investment management programs that involve only individualized services and advice, and which do not involve commingling or custody of client funds, are not likely to raise securities law concerns. See Scudder Fund Management Serv., 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1054 (Aug. 17, 1988) .

(n346)Footnote 346. But see Feret v. Corestates Financial Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11512 (E.D. Pa. 1998) , in which the court determined that interests of officers and other "key employees" in a long term discretionary incentive stock option plan gave participants the characteristics of investors. The plan, said the court, was specifically designed to provide incentives and rewards that associated the participants more closely with stockholders of the company. The plan was not governed by ERISA, and could not, on a motion to dismiss, be said not to be a security.

(n347)Footnote 347. Walsh v. Emerson, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19921 (D. Ore. 1990) .

(n348)Footnote 348. For analysis of whether a "sale" is involved in the distribution of stock through various forms of employee benefit or participation plans, see § 2.02[6] infra.

See also Peyton v. Morrow Elec. Corp., 587 F.2d 413 (9th Cir. 1978) (an employment contract granting employee the right to purchase stock from an employee plan, if created, held not to be an investment contract).

(n349)Footnote 349. In a hybrid situation, however, interests in an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) denominated as "stock" were held to the label and considered securities. Hood v. Smith's Transfer Corp., 762 F. Supp. 1274 (W.D. Ky. 1991) . The interests in the plan were prominently and repeatedly referred to as "stock," and were indicated to have traditional characteristics of stock, namely, assigned par value, future possibility of dividends, the capacity to appreciate, and voting rights. The Court viewed the company and the ESOP as "[p]lainly creating expectations in participants that their interests were securities."

See also Walsh v. Emerson, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19921 (D. Ore. 1990) (a company's stock in its retirement plan is a security).

(n350)Footnote 350. 751 F.2d 555 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n351)Footnote 351. Id. at 559-60 .

(n352)Footnote 352. Uselton v. Commercial Lovelace Motor Freight, 940 F.2d 564 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n353)Footnote 353. Matassarin v. Lynch, 174 F.3d 549 (5th Cir. 1999) ; Childers v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 688 F. Supp. 1357 (D. Minn. 1988) .

See also In re Cendent Corp. Sec. Lit., 76 F. Supp. 2d 539 (D.N.J. 1999) (No purchase involved in a compulsory, non-contributory plan). The "no sale" doctrine applied in benefit plan scenarios, and the definition of "sale" for purposes of Securities Act coverage generally in this context, are examined more closely in § 2.02[6] infra .

(n354)Footnote 354. The term "employee benefit plan" means a pension, profit-sharing, thrift or similar plan. It does not include welfare or related plans that provide for hospitalization or disability benefits, funeral expenses, or social or cultural pursuits. These latter plans historically have raised no question or concern under the federal securities laws because they do not resemble an "investment" and do not involve any expectation of financial return by the employee. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

(n355)Footnote 355. But see Simon v. Fribourg, 650 F. Supp. 319 (D. Minn. 1986) . An employee's interest in a company profit-sharing plan was neither a certificate of participation in a profit-sharing agreement nor an investment contract. A profit-sharing plan, according to the court, is not an example of a profit-sharing "agreement" within the contemplation of the securities laws. Moreover, said the court, the employee could have no Howey expectation of profit through the efforts of others that would be necessary to find an investment contract.

(n356)Footnote 356. See Uselton v. Commercial Lovelace Motor Freight, Inc., 940 F.2d 564 (10th Cir. 1991) (employee interests in a voluntary, contributory ESOP held to be investment contracts).

(n357)Footnote 357. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4790, 1965 SEC LEXIS 17 (July 13, 1965) . Subsequently, in Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) , the Commission reiterated its view that the presence of all or some of these characteristics may create an investment contract. The Commission reasoned that such factors tend to place the employee in a position where he or she is relying on the plan managers to maintain or protect the employee's investment.

Where plan participations are deemed to be securities, they are subject to the registration provisions of the Securities Act in the absence of an available exemption. By reason of the exemption provided in § 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act, these securities generally must be registered only where the plan invests in the employer's securities an amount greater than that contributed to the plan by the employer. See discussion of § 3(a)(2) in § 3.03 infra . Whether or not registration is required, the antifraud provisions will always apply.

(n358)Footnote 358. 439 U.S. 551, 99 S. Ct. 790, 58 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1979) .

(n359)Footnote 359. See § 2.02[6] infra.

(n360)Footnote 360. 561 F.2d 1223 (7th Cir. 1977) , rev'd, 439 U.S. 551, 99 S. Ct. 790, 58 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1979) .

(n361)Footnote 361. The Court observed: "In every decision of this Court recognizing the presence of a 'security' under the Securities Act, the person found to have been an investor chose to give up a specific consideration in return for a separable financial interest with the characteristics of a security. ... Looking at the economic realities, it seems clear that an employee is selling his labor to obtain a livelihood, not making an investment." 439 U.S. at 559-60, 99 S. Ct. at 796-97, 58 L. Ed. 2d at 816-17 .

(n362)Footnote 362. Id. at 569-70, 99 S. Ct. at 802, 58 L. Ed. 2d at 822-23 .

(n363)Footnote 363. Id. at 560, 99 S. Ct. at 797, 58 L. Ed. 2d 17 .

(n364)Footnote 364. The holding in Daniel was specifically limited to interests in a non-contributory, compulsory pension plan. Id. at 570, 99 S. Ct. at 802, 58 L. Ed. 2d at 823 .

See also Matassarini v. Lynch, Trustee, 174 F.3d 549 (5th Cir. 1999) (A mandatory employer-funded ESOP did not involve any voluntary investment choice by participants).

(n365)Footnote 365. 686 F.2d 1230 (7th Cir. 1982) .

(n366)Footnote 366. Id. at 1237 .

(n367)Footnote 367. See also O'Neil v. Marriott Corp., 538 F. Supp. 1026 (D. Md. 1982) (interests in a voluntary, contributory plan are not securities since no investment was made on the expectation of profit from the efforts of others and the only real determinant of return was an employee's length of participation); Cunha v. Ward Foods, Inc., 545 F. Supp. 94 (D. Haw. 1982) (voluntary, contributory plan had no attributes of an investment contract and ERISA provided all needed regulation); Black v. Payne, 591 F.2d 83 (9th Cir. 1979) (interest in a contributory, compulsory plan was not a security since employee had no reasonable expectation of profit from the efforts of others and plan benefits were determined by a statutory formula rather than by income or profit of the plan); Tanuggi v. Grolier, Inc., 471 F. Supp. 1209 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) (interests in a contributory, non-compulsory plan are not securities); Newkirk v. General Elec. Co., (N.D. Cal. 1979) (interests in a contributory, non-compulsory plan are not securities).

(n368)Footnote 368. See also Peoria Union Stock Yards Co. v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 518 F. Supp. 1302 (C.D. Ill. 1981) . Since a non-contributory, compulsory pension plan is not a security, a contract pursuant to which an employer deposited funds with an insurance company for accumulation of interest for the purpose of funding an employee retirement plan was held not to be a security.

(n369)Footnote 369. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) ; Sec. Act Rel. No. 6281, 1981 SEC LEXIS 2260 (Jan. 15, 1981) . In Release No. 6281, the Commission Staff clarified the meaning of "voluntary and contributory" for purposes of its position on Securities Act coverage:

Generally it is the Staff's view that the determination of whether a plan is a voluntary contributory one rests solely on whether the participating employees can decide at some point whether to contribute their own funds to the plan. Thus, for example, each of the following types of plans would be considered voluntary and contributory because each permits employees to make a determination, either at the time they join the plan or later, whether they will invest their own money: (1) a plan which is voluntary as to participation and then mandatory as to the amount of contributions, (2) a plan which is voluntary as to participation and which permits employees to make contributions at their option, and (3) a plan which is mandatory as to participation but provides employees with a choice whether or not to invest their own funds.

(n370)Footnote 370. Diasonics, Inc., 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3286 (Nov. 29, 1982) . Interests in a company-sponsored profit sharing plan built around the mechanism of salary reductions to make contributions to the plan could create a security. Salary reduction plans do not represent a bonus from the employer, and the contribution is in actuality an out-of-pocket contribution by the employee which suggests an investment decision.

(n371)Footnote 371. SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983).

(n372)Footnote 372. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6281, 1981 SEC LEXIS 2260 (Jan. 15, 1981) .

(n373)Footnote 373. 695 F. Supp. 138 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n374)Footnote 374. Keogh plans are tax deferred retirement plans established by self-employed individuals for the benefit of themselves and their employees. Keogh plans were authorized by Congress in 1962 to permit such individuals to share in the favorable tax benefits previously available only in connection with certain corporate plans.

(n375)Footnote 375. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) . Interests of Keogh plans in collective funding vehicles are seen as "clearly" securities. However, the interests of the Keogh plan participants in their plan are characterized only as "appearing" to be securities where participants make voluntary contributions. For Keogh plans that are deemed to create securities, and for which no exemption is readily available, the staff, as a matter of administrative discretion, will not require registration. Id.

(n376)Footnote 376. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

(n377)Footnote 377. IRAs that involve a direct investment by an individual in an exempt security (such as one issued or guaranteed by a bank) or in a medium not considered to be a security (such as a traditional fixed annuity) need not be registered, and only the former would be subject to the antifraud provisions. In addition, registration is unnecessary for (1) IRAs funded solely by specific mutual fund shares registered under the Securities Act so long as the shares are offered pursuant to current prospectuses that contain appropriate disclosure of the IRAs to which they may be offered; and (2) master trust or prototype plan arrangements used to market IRAs and Keogh plans. Id.

(n378)Footnote 378. Id.

(n379)Footnote 379. 26 U.S.C. § 401(k).

(n380)Footnote 380. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6281, 1981 SEC LEXIS 2260 (Jan. 15, 1981) .

The Internal Revenue Service has also taken the position that § 401(k) plans are not contributory under the Internal Revenue Code. See Rev. Rul. 80-16, 1980-1 C.B. 82 .

(n381)Footnote 381. See Merrill Lynch Special Prototype Profit-Sharing Plan, 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1773 (Dec. 4, 1987) (profit-sharing plan for independent contractors providing services or leased equipment to a motor carrier under which contractors could designate a percentage of amounts paid by carrier for investment in one of three alternatives, including stock of the carrier purchased in open market transactions would not require registration under the Securities Act).

(n382)Footnote 382. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

Open market stock purchase programs providing for employer contributions that match or exceed employee contributions, and that otherwise satisfy the conditions set forth in Sec. Act Rel. No. 4790, 1965 SEC LEXIS 17 (July 13, 1965) , relating to participation by an employer, will not be subject to registration under the Securities Act. The Release limits participation by an employer, or an affiliate of an employer, to only ministerial functions in the operation of the program. The principal regulatory concern is to preclude any "solicitation of an offer to buy" the employer's securities. These programs and the impact of the definition of "sale" in § 2(3) of the Securities Act are considered further in § 2.02[6] infra .

The Commission's position on open market stock purchase programs does not extend to such plans under which employer contributions fail to match or exceed employee's contributions. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

(n383)Footnote 383. See Bauman v. Bish, 571 F. Supp. 1054 (N.D. W. Va. 1983) . Employees' involuntary participation in employee stock ownership plans cannot be characterized as the purchase of securities. Each participant who meets certain minimum hours would have stock allocated to his or her account. However, there is no investment decision in this process. The securities laws should not be extended to an area extensively regulated by ERISA and within the "sphere of labor relations."

The absence of a "sale" in the context of such plans is also a meaningful consideration. As the court observed in Bauman: "There is no furnishing of 'value' by participating employees. ... Instead of giving up some tangible and definable consideration, participants earn stock through labor for the employer. The notion that the exchange of labor will suffice to constitute the type of investment which the Securities Acts were intended to regulate was rejected in Daniel. ... [T]he proposed ESOP is a method of deferring income, not reducing wages or paying for stock." Id. at 1056 ; compare Diasonics, Inc., 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3286 (Nov. 29, 1982) .

But see Foltz v. U.S. News & World Report, Inc., 627 F. Supp. 1143 (D.D.C. 1986) , in which the court found that where an employee stock plan is not covered by ERISA, "extension to it of coverage under the securities laws would do violence to no Congressional purpose." Id. at 1159 . The court found that the ESOP at issue involved a "hoped for increase" in the value of stock holdings and allowed the plaintiff's antifraud claim to stand. At the same time, however, the court declined to hold that interest in a non-contributory profit-sharing plan were securities.

The Commission generally has not required that stock involved in these plans be registered where the nature of the plan is a bonus and the stock is made available to a broad class of employees. However, if stock is awarded to, or acquired by, employees pursuant to individual employment arrangements, the arrangements are usually deemed by the staff to involve separately bargained consideration and thereby constitute a sale of the stock. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

(n384)Footnote 384. 688 F. Supp. 1357 (D. Minn. 1988) .

(n385)Footnote 385. See § 2.01[11][v], supra.

Pools of assets managed by others as collective investment vehicles are also generally considered to be "investment companies" subject to regulation under the Investment Company Act of 1940.

(n386)Footnote 386. See Investment Co. Inst. v. Conover, 790 F.2d 925 (D.C. Cir 1986) .

(n387)Footnote 387. See Carter v. Signode Industries, Inc., 694 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ill. 1988) (employees' decision to exchange general investment fund accounts in a company profit-sharing plan for "guaranteed income contracts" constituted the purchase of a security).

(n388)Footnote 388. 789 F. Supp. 884 (W.D. Mich. 1991) .

(n389)Footnote 389. Id. at 888 .

(n390)Footnote 390. But see Harris v. Republic Airlines, Inc., 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9460 (D.D.C. May 8, 1988) (plaintiff employees believed they would realize profit as a result of the wages they agreed to defer).

(n391)Footnote 391. United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 853-54, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 2061, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621, 632-33 (1975) .

(n392)Footnote 392. The application of investment contract analysis in franchise situations generally is discussed in § 2.01[11][a], supra.

See also Villanueva v. Advanced Business Concepts Corp., 730 F.2d 1403 (11th Cir. 1984) (en banc).

(n393)Footnote 393. 417 F. Supp. 1225 (E.D.N.Y. 1976) .

(n394)Footnote 394. Gotham Print, Inc. v. American Speedy Printing Ctrs, Inc., 863 F. Supp. 447 (E.D. Mich. 1994) .

(n395)Footnote 395. See SEC v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., 497 F.2d 473, 485 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n396)Footnote 396. Id.

(n397)Footnote 397. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 5211, 1971 SEC LEXIS 1933 (Nov. 30, 1971) (applicability of the securities laws to multilevel distributorship and pyramid sales plans).

(n398)Footnote 398. 474 F.2d 476 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 821 (1973) .

(n399)Footnote 399. 497 F.2d 473 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n400)Footnote 400. Id., at 475 .

(n401)Footnote 401. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5211, 1971 SEC LEXIS 1933 (Nov. 30, 1971) .

(n402)Footnote 402. See, e.g., Koscot, 497 F.2d at 476 .

(n403)Footnote 403. Compare Martin v. T.V. Tempo, Inc., 628 F.2d 887 (5th Cir. 1980) and Villeneuve v. Advance Business Concepts Corp., 698 F.2d 1121 (11th Cir. 1983) , aff'd en banc, 730 F.2d 1403 (11th Cir. 1984) . In distributorships where the purchaser must make a significant effort toward any profit, an agreement will not be deemed to be an investment contract.

(n404)Footnote 404. 497 F.2d at 480 .

(n405)Footnote 405. Id. See also SEC v. International Loan Network, Inc., 297 U.S. App. D.C. 22 (D.C. Cir. July 10, 1992) (pyramid sales program in which profits would primarily be derived from fees paid by "downline" members who recruited additional members); SEC v. Bull Inv. Group, Inc., 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13449 (D. Mass. 1975) (franchise agreement entitling "dealers" to recruit prospective franchisees to attend promotional meetings run by franchisors constituted an investment contract).

(n406)Footnote 406. 950 F.Supp. 1306 (S.D. W.Va. 1997) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 33599 (4th Cir. 1997) .

(n407)Footnote 407. Holtzclaw, 950 F.Supp. at 1316 .

(n408)Footnote 408. See § 2.01[11][b][ii], supra.

(n409)Footnote 409. See also, Omnitron Int'l Inc., [1994-1995 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 98,425 (N.D. Ca. 1994) (distributors and supervisors required to engage in retail selling in order to qualify for bonuses and overrides on lower level participants' activities).

(n410)Footnote 410. See Wilkins v. M & H Fin., Inc., 476 F. Supp. 212 (E.D. Ark. 1979) (retail grocer's investment was in his own enterprise over which he had exclusive control); Gowdish v. Eaton Corp., 1981 U.S. Dist.

LEXIS 11470 (M.D. N.C. 1981) (conventional franchise arrangement was not a security); Howard v. Chrysler Corp., [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 98,306 (D. Colo. 1977) (automobile dealer franchise was not a security).

(n411)Footnote 411. SEC v. Aqua-Sonic Prods. Corp., 687 F.2d 577, (2d Cir.) , cert. denied sub nom. Hecht v. SEC, 459 U.S. 1086 (1982) .

(n412)Footnote 412. See H.R. Rep. No. 85, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section E of the 1933 Act, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1933).

However, the Commission expressed this caveat concerning the scope of the § 3(a)(8) exemption: "[The] provision was intended only to exempt an insurance policy or contract under which a policyholder has a fixed benefit and does not share in the investment experience of an equity portfolio and as to which the insurance company assumes the risk of loss." Sec. Act Rel. No. 5360, 1973 SEC LEXIS 3258 (Jan. 31, 1973) .

(n413)Footnote 413. Where the focal point of the purchase is entirely upon obtaining insurance there is little, if any, likelihood of a security being found. See, e.g., Dryden v. Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, 737 F. Supp. 1058 (S.D. Ill. 1988) (Whole life insurance policies held not to be securities where a "true underwriting of risks" was present). This is so even where, for example, obtaining the insurance involves contributing capital to a "captive" insurance company. See also Investment Company Institute, 1987 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 38 (Div. Inv. Management/Div. Corp. Fin. 1987) (purpose of a capital contribution was to obtain insurance and not to obtain an investment return); AAI Holdings Corp., 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 845 (Div. Corp. Fin. July 1, 1991) (Deposit and debenture interests were part of an insurance program and not securities).

(n414)Footnote 414. See Malone v. Addison Insurance Marketing, Inc., 225 F. Supp. 2d 743, 749 (W.D. Ky. 2002) :

A variable annuitant thus assumes much greater risk than the holder of a fixed annuity who is provided with a guarantee. The holder of a variable annuity cannot look forward to a fixed monthly or yearly amount... [I]t may be greater or less depending on the wisdom of the investment policy.

See also Gilmore v. MONY Life Insurance Co. of America, 165 F. Supp. 2d 1276 (M.D. Ala. 2001).

(n415)Footnote 415. 359 U.S. 65, 79 S. Ct. 618, 3 L. Ed. 2d 640 (1959) .

(n416)Footnote 416. Id. at 71-72, 79 S. Ct. at 621-22, 3 L. Ed. 2d at 644-45 .

(n417)Footnote 417. In Luzerne County Retirement Board v. Markowski, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 87246 (M.D. Pa. 2007) , the court distinguished between annuity contracts in which funds could be allocated by the purchaser to guaranteed funds and/or variable pooled funds. Assets placed in a guaranteed fund were held by the insurance company in its general account. Pooled funds, on the other hand, were invested through separate accounts and were subject to the risk of the particular fund's investment experience rather than being a fixed annuity contract obligation of the insurance company.

(n418)Footnote 418. Id.

The decision in VALIC prompted further skirmishing with respect to the applicability of the Investment Company Act of 1940 to variable annuities. In a 1963 confrontation with Prudential Insurance Company of America over the sale of variable annuity contracts to the public, the SEC determined that the Securities Act would apply. Inv. Co. Act Rel. No. 3620, [1961-1964 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,891 (Jan. 22, 1963). The determination was upheld in Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. SEC, 326 F.2d 383, (3d Cir. 1964) . In so holding, the court observed that the fund created by the sale of annuities, which was used for investment purposes, gave rise to a separate investment company that was the issuer of the securities (variable annuities) for purposes of the Investment Company Act. Id. at 388. The Supreme Court denied certiorari. 377 U.S. 953 (1964).

In 1970, the Investment Company Act was amended to exempt certain variable annuities issued before the VALIC decision from the operation of both the Securities Act and the Investment Company Act. The exemption, § 29 of the Investment Company Act, is limited to funds issued prior to March 23, 1959, to which (1) the form of the contract was approved by a state insurance commissioner; and (2) not more than 49% of premiums are allocated to a separate account or fund. The amendments also granted insurance companies an exemption from the Investment Company Act for "separate accounts" established for management of certain employee benefit plans as well as Keogh plans.

(n419)Footnote 419. 387 U.S. 202, 87 S. Ct. 1557, 18 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1967).

(n420)Footnote 420. The manner of marketing played a meaningful role in the Court's rationale. Justice Harlan (who had dissented in VALIC) spoke for the majority in United Benefit. He drew upon the caveat in SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943), that promoters' offerings should be judged by what they are represented to be and concluded: "Contracts such as the 'Flexible Fund' offer important competition to mutual funds and are pitched to the same consumer interest in growth through professionally managed investment. It seems eminently fair that a purchaser of such a plan be afforded the same advantages of disclosure which inure to a mutual fund purchaser under § 5 of the Securities Act." 387 U.S. at 211, 87 S. Ct. at 1562, 18 L. Ed. 2d at 680 (citation omitted).

See also SEC v. National Sec., Inc., 393 U.S. 453, 89 S. Ct. 564, 21 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1969) (regulation of the relationship between a stockholder and an insurance company in which he holds stock is not insurance regulation but securities regulation).

(n421)Footnote 421. Id. at 211, 87 S. Ct. at 1562, 18 L. Ed. 2d at 680.

(n422)Footnote 422. Associates in Adolescent Psychiatry, S.C. v. Home Life Ins. Co., 941 F.2d 561, 566 (7th Cir. 1991), aff'd 729 F. Supp. 1162 (N.D. Ill. 1989), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1099, 112 S. Ct. 1182 (1992) (citations omitted) ("Flexible Annuity" involving a guaranteed annual interest rate declared at the beginning of each policy year was not a security).

(n423)Footnote 423. Id. The court observed: "The Flexible Annuity... resembled nothing so much as a series of fixed annuities, each one year in duration, with the purchaser having an option to renew. That the return is fixed for such a short period does not make the instrument less an annuity." 941 F.2d at 567.

(n424)Footnote 424. "Other regulation" is often a key consideration, as "insurance" is entirely a matter of state regulation and the § 3(a)(8) exemption is dependent upon it. The Supreme Court observed in VALIC: "While the term 'security' as defined by the Securities Act is broad enough to include any 'annuity' contract ... the scheme of exemptions lifts pro tanto the requirements to the extent that respondents are actually regulated by the States as insurance companies" 359 U.S. at 67-68, 79 S. Ct. at 620, 3 L. Ed. 2d at 642-43 (footnotes omitted). However, the distinction may be difficult to make. See Otto v. Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co., 814 F.2d 1127 (7th Cir. 1987).

(n425)Footnote 425. Although the National Securities Market Improvements Act of 1996 (NSMIA) fundamentally re-ordered securities regulatory roles of the SEC and the states, and largely preempted the latter from regulation of mutual funds, it remains that as to the insurance aspects of such products as variable annuities, the regulatory responsibility lies with the states by virtue of the McCarran-Ferguson Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1012(b).

(n426)Footnote 426. See SKJ Commodities Corp., 1987 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2827 (Nov. 13, 1987) (staff unwilling to grant no action advice where an annuity program would be publicly offered and incorporated a discretionary commodities futures account as a feature).

(n427)Footnote 427. 225 F. Supp. 2d 743 (W.D. Ky. 2002) .

(n428)Footnote 428. Malone, 225 F.Supp. 2d at 751 ("Because the Defendants assumed a much greater risk, Plaintiff's investment seems a lot more like insurance and less like an investment for Plaintiff").

(n429)Footnote 429. CCH Fed. Sec.L.Rep. 94,512, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91522 (C.D. Ill. 2007).

(n430)Footnote 430. Malone, 225 F.Supp. 2d 743 .

(n431)Footnote 431. 814 F.2d 1127 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n432)Footnote 432. But see Associates in Adolescent Psychiatry S.C. v. Home Life Ins. Co., 729 F. Supp. 1162 (N.D. Ill. 1989) , aff'd, 941 F.2d 561 (7th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 112 S. Ct. 1182 (1992) (flexible annuity contract purchased by a pension plan to fund benefit guarantees was not a security by reason of qualification under Rule 151).

(n433)Footnote 433. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4491, 1962 SEC LEXIS 112 (May 22, 1962) . The Commission further noted that such programs "may result in the creation of an investment company as defined in the Investment Company Act of 1940. Accordingly, the requirements of that Securities Act, including particularly §§ 7, 26 and 27 thereof should be considered by the sponsors of these plans." Id.

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 5209, 1971 SEC LEXIS 1934 (Nov. 8, 1971) (guide to preparation of registration statements relating to insurance premium funding programs); Zenith American Funding Corp., SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1974) (Securities Act requires that each participant in an insurance premium funding plan receive a current prospectus when the offer is annually renewed).

(n434)Footnote 434. See Inv. Co. Act Rel. No. 13,632, [1983-1984 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 83,454 (Nov. 23, 1983)

(n435)Footnote 435. Evolving variants on viatical settlements include such things as "senior settlements," based on the purchase life insurance contracts held by elderly persons and marketing of interests in them in the same manner as viatical settlements.

(n436)Footnote 436. 87 F.3d 536 (D.C.Cir. 1996) , reh'g denied, 102 F.3d. 587 (D.C. Cir. 1996) , mot. for leave to amend denied, 986 F.Supp. 644 (D.D.C. 1997) .

(n437)Footnote 437. 408 F.3d. 737 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n438)Footnote 438. Mutual Benefits Corp., 408 F.3d at 743 .

(n439)Footnote 439. Mutual Benefits Corp., 408 F.3d at 743-44 .

(n440)Footnote 440. Wuliger v. Anstaett, 363 F. Supp. 2d 917, 921-22 (N.D. Ohio 2005) ; see also Wuliger v. Mann, CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep. P 93,284, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13021 (N.D. Ohio 2005)

(n441)Footnote 441. For a thorough examination of the extent of state securities regulatory attention to viatical settlements see Miriam R. Albert, "The Future of Death Futures: Why Viatical Settlements Must be Classified Securities," 19 Pace L. Rev. 345 (Spring 1999).

(n442)Footnote 442. See, e.g., Siporin v. Carrington, 200 Ariz. 97, 23 P.3d 92 (Ariz. App. 2001) ; Rumbaugh v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, 155 Ohio App. 3d 288, 800 N.E. 2d 780 (10th Dist. App. 2003) ; Accelerated Benefits Corp. v. Peaslee, 818 N.E.2d 73, 2004 Ind. App. LEXIS 2317 (Ind. App. 2004) .

(n443)Footnote 443. 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982) .

(n444)Footnote 444. See § 2.01[1] supra.

(n445)Footnote 445. But see Holloway v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 900 F.2d 1485 (10th Cir.) , cert. denied, 111 S. Ct. 386 (1990) (passbook savings certificates issued by finance and trust subsidiaries of a bank holding company held to be securities under Reves v. Ernst & Young criteria).

(n446)Footnote 446. 756 F.2d 230 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n447)Footnote 447. 977 F. Supp. 510 (D. Me. 1997) .

(n448)Footnote 448. Ayala v. Jamaica Sav. Bank, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17994 (E.D.N.Y. 1981) (time certificate of deposit issued by a savings bank and federally insured was not a security).

See also Tafflin v. Levitt, 865 F.2d 595 (4th Cir. 1989) (certificates of deposit issued by a state-chartered savings and loan association held not to be securities by reason of comprehensive state regulation of the insurance system); Sanderson v. Roethenmund, 682 F. Supp. 205 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (unregulated international certificates of deposit offered and sold to more than 1000 persons held to be securities); but see West v. Multibanco Comerex S.A., 807 F.2d 820 (9th Cir. 1987) (certificates of deposit issued by a Mexican bank and purchased by U.S. investors held not to be securities since Mexican banking laws and regulation provided protections equivalent to those for regulated U.S. banks).

(n449)Footnote 449. Section 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C exempts securities issued or guaranteed by any bank, and, with certain limited exceptions, § 3(a)(5) provides a similar exemption for securities issued by a savings and loan association or similar institution supervised and examined by state or federal authorities having supervisory jurisdiction over them. These exemptions are discussed in §§ 3.03 and 3.06 infra .

See also Hamblett v. Board of Sav. & Loan Ass'ns, 472 F. Supp. 158 (N.D. Miss. 1979) (passbook or time deposit on which a fixed rate of interest is paid and which gave holder no voice in management of the issuing association is not a security); Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce Trust Co. v. Fingland, 615 F.2d 465 (7th Cir. 1980) ; Hendrickson v. Buchbinder, 465 F. Supp. 1250 (S.D. Fla. 1979) (time deposits and passbooks issued by off-shore banks are not securities).

But see SEC v. First American Bank & Trust Co., 481 F.2d 673 (8th Cir. 1973) (passbook savings accounts, notes and "investment" certificates held to be sale of securities).

(n450)Footnote 450. 389 U.S. 332, 88 S. Ct. 548, 19 L. Ed. 2d 564 (1967) .

(n451)Footnote 451. While applying the Howey test with no difficulty, the Court went on to observe: "Clearly, then, the petitioners' withdrawable capital shares have the essential attributes of investment contracts as that term is used in Section 3(a)(10) and as it was defined in Howey. But we need not rest our decision on that conclusion alone. ... For example, the petitioners' shares can be viewed as 'certificates of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement.' " 389 U.S. at 339-40, 88 S. Ct. at 554-55, 19 L. Ed. 2d at 571 .

(n452)Footnote 452. Id.

(n453)Footnote 453. In Marine Bank, the Court characterized the capital shares in Tcherepnin as much more like "the ordinary concept of a security" because they paid dividends based on the profits of the savings and loan association, rather than a fixed rate of interest, and carried voting rights. Marine Bank, 455 U.S. at 557, 102 S. Ct. at 1224, 71 L. Ed. 2d at 415 .

(n454)Footnote 454. In Gary Plastic Packaging Corp. v. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 756 F.2d 230 (2d Cir. 1985), the Second Circuit emphasized that in Marine Bank, the Supreme Court specifically left open the possibility that in other circumstances a certificate of deposit might be deemed to be a security. In holding the certificates of deposit offered under the brokerage firm program to be securities, the Second Circuit distinguished Marine Bank as focusing upon a "conventional" certificate of deposit as to which an investor's risk of loss was eliminated through banking regulation and deposit insurance.

(n455)Footnote 455. There is a fundamental caution that applies in all of this:

The expansion of the scope of the securities laws sought by plaintiff herein seems to be unwarranted and perhaps even detrimental to the common good. In our mercantile economy, we should not try to turn every "thing" which might be purchased and sold into a security. If we did, every commercial contract would end up being enforced in the Federal Courts in what some plaintiffs and their attorneys would turn into class actions. Clearly this is not what was intended by Congress in passing the securities laws.

Mechigian v. Art Capital Corp., 612 F. Supp. 1421, 1428 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (sale of lithographic plate or original artwork was not the sale of a security despite alleged fraudulent inducement and the purchaser's expectation of profit on resale); see also Faircloth v. Jackie Fine Arts, Inc., 682 F. Supp. 837 (D.S.C. 1988) (purchase of art master did not involve an investment contract).

(n456)Footnote 456. 540 U.S. 389, 124 S. Ct. 892, 157 L. Ed. 2d 813 (2004).

(n457)Footnote 457. But see Newmeyer v. Philatelic Leasing, Ltd., 888 F.2d 385 (6th Cir. 1989), in which standard form lease end security agreements for interests in postage stamp printing plates were seen as presenting the elements of an investment contract. Commonality could be established through distribution and marketing arrangements benefiting individual lessees. The divergent approaches to requisite commonality are discussed in § 2.01[11][b] supra.

(n458)Footnote 458. See, e.g., SEC v. Goldfield Deep Mines Co. of Nevada, 758 F.2d 459 (9th Cir. 1985) (ore purchase program involving promotional literature which evinced a clear expectation of profit was an investment contract); In re Gardner, [1979 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,757 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1979) (diamond sales program involving "investment" promotion was the sale of securities); SEC v. Western Pac. Gold & Silver Exch., 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14083 (Corp., D. Nev. 1975) (sale of gold coins and silver bars involved the sale of securities); SEC v. Brigadoon Scotch Distribs., Ltd., 388 F. Supp. 1288 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) (sale of rare coin portfolios coupled with services was the sale of securities).

(n459)Footnote 459. As illustrated in SEC v. Belmont Reid & Co., Inc., 794 F.2d 1388 (9th Cir. 1986), the focus is on whether profits depend on fluctuations in the market rather than the managerial efforts of others. As the court observed:

[T]he purchasers were speculating in the world gold market. Admittedly, one can do much the same thing by buying a share in a company mining gold. However, that is not what was done here. To the extent the purchasers relied on the managerial skill of CMC they did so as an ordinary buyer, having advanced the purchase price, relies on an ordinary seller.

See also Svets v. Osborne Precious Metals, Co., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15266 (10th Cir. June 5, 1992) (profits depended upon fluctuations of the market).

But see In re Application of Frank W. Leonesio, Exch. Act Rel. No. 23,524, 1986 SEC LEXIS 1009 (Aug. 11, 1986) (program whereby investors would provide funds to a company ostensibly for contracts to purchase gold but would actually be advancing funds for the company to speculate in the precious metals markets would involve a security); see also Connors v. Lexington Ins. Co., 666 F. Supp. 434 (E.D.N.Y. 1987) (a "buy-back, redelivery, rebate program" in which the promoter purchased and stored precious metals was an investment contract).

(n460)Footnote 460. Longines Symphonette Soc'y, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4252 (Nov. 10, 1972) . A program offering gold and silver commemorative medallions was deemed to be the sale of securities. The medallions were offered and sold with a "repurchase guarantee" at the sale price plus 10% in a mass merchandising effort using literature that characterized the program as an "investment plan" and that emphasized the profit potential of purchases.

But see Noa v. Key Futures, Inc. 638 F.2d 77 (9th Cir. 1980) (sale of silver bars with a repurchase guarantee at the spot market price at the time of repurchase was not the sale of securities); accord Dept. of Commerce v. DeBeers Diamond Inv., Ltd., 280 N.W.2d 547 (Mich. App. 1979) (no security present in a program involving sale of diamonds with a repurchase guarantee at market price).

(n461)Footnote 461. See En Yun Hsu v. Leaseway Transp. Corp., [1984-1985 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 92,043 (N.D. Cal. 1985) (program for truck purchase, leasing, and management agreement constituted a security); United States v. Jones, 712 F.2d 1316 (9th Cir. 1983) . A sale and leaseback program involving the purchase of trailers and leaseback to a trucking company was the sale of securities. Purchaser/lessors were dependent upon the fortunes of the promoter/lessee.

See also Cruise America, Inc., 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 736 (May 2, 1990) (sale and leaseback program for recreational vehicles could be deemed to involve a security); International, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1977) (sale and leaseback program for modular motel units involved the sale of securities); Financial Analytics Corp., 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3347 (July 16, 1973) (program for sale and leaseback of electronic data processing equipment was the sale of securities since purchaser/lessors relied solely on the efforts of the promoter/lessee for their return).

(n462)Footnote 462. 124 S. Ct. 892 .

(n463)Footnote 463. On remand of Edwards to the Eleventh Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals, the court of appeals completed the Howey analysis, concluding that investors in the ETS pay telephone program retained minimal control over the telephones. Once an investor leased the telephone back to the promoter, the investor relied on the promoter for profits. SEC v. ETS Payphones, Inc., 408 F.3d. 727 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n464)Footnote 464. See 124 S. Ct. at 897 .

(n465)Footnote 465. See also Albanese v. Florida Nat'l Bank of Orlando, 823 F.2d 408 (11th Cir. 1987) (sale of ice machines coupled with a leaseback arrangement and management agreement left purchasers with "illusory" control); David K. Lindemuth Co. v. Shannon Fin. Corp., 660 F. Supp. 261 (N.D. Cal. 1987) (sale and leaseback arrangement for oil pipeline inspection equipment in which profits depended on seller's management skills). See also Dove Publishing Co., 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3968 (Oct. 20, 1980) (sale of gift plaques at wholesale prices coupled with seller's program to form organization and assist in marketing may involve the sale of securities because of the "related" services).

(n466)Footnote 466. See, e.g., Long v. Shultz Cattle Co., 881 F.2d 129 (5th Cir. 1990) (cattle feeding "consulting" agreements held to be securities); Eberhardt v. Watters, 901 F.2d 1578 (11th Cir. 1990) (sale of cattle embryos as part of a breeding and maintenance program); Sheets v. Dziabis, 738 F. Supp. 307 (N.D. Ind. 1990) (syndication interests in Thoroughbred stallions were securities); Seale v. Miller, 698 F. Supp. 883 (N.D. Ga. 1988) (cattle feeding program); Smith v. Gross, 604 F.2d 639 (9th Cir. 1979) (earthworm program); Miller v. Central Chinchilla Group, Inc., 494 F.2d 414 (8th Cir. 1974) .

But see Kefalas v. Bonnie Brae Farms, Inc., 630 F. Supp. 6 (E.D. Ky. 1985) (horse syndication agreement was not a security where each purchase of a fractional interest was unitary and the syndicate manager did not provide significant service); Tanenbaum v. Agri-Capital, Inc., 885 F.2d 464 (8th Cir. 1989) (reasonable minds could find that investor possessed such requisite business experience to enable him not to be dependent upon seller to manage cattle embryos and breeding program).

(n467)Footnote 467. SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. 344, 353, 64 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 88, 94 (1943) .

The manner of presentation clearly works both ways. In Nakagawa v. Ellis & Ellis Assocs., Inc., 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25540 (D. Haw. May 13, 1986) , for example, the content of an "information memo" unambiguously made clear the fact that profits from the lease of a stamp master device that allowed plaintiffs to print and market postage stamps would come solely from their own efforts during the term of the lease. It was clear from the document that the plaintiff lessees had the power to decide how to produce their own profits without any involvement of the lessor, and the presentation of this fact defeated any claim that a security was involved.

(n468)Footnote 468. See also SEC v. Alliance Leasing Corp., 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 153 (9th Cir. 2002) (Equipment leasing program involved pooling of investors' interests and sharing in profits).

(n469)Footnote 469. 867 F.2d 278 (6th Cir. 1989) .

(n470)Footnote 470. Deckebach, 867 F.2d 278 .

(n471)Footnote 471. See Qualivest Capital Management, Inc., 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1035 (July 30, 1990) ; Scudder Fund Management Serv., 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1054 (Aug. 17, 1988) .

(n472)Footnote 472. See Morgan Shareholder Servs. Trust Co., 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 869 (Apr. 28, 1988) (dividend reinvestment program); Fractional Share Repurchase Program, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 908 (Aug. 24, 1992) .

(n473)Footnote 473. See Fibreboard Corp., 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1169 (Aug. 31, 1988) ; Merrill Lynch Capital Mkts. Structured Invs. Group, 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1009 (June 16, 1989) .

(n474)Footnote 474. See, e.g., First American Collegiate Fund, Inc., 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1410 (Dec. 30, 1991) .

(n475)Footnote 475. See Lenczycki v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12924 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 29, 1990) ; Poindexter v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 684 F. Supp. 478 (E.D. Mich. 1988) ; Mordaunt v. Incomco, 686 F.2d 815 (9th Cir. 1982) ; Meyer v. Thomson & McKinnon Auchincloss Kohlmeyer, Inc., 686 F.2d 818 (9th Cir. 1982) ; Salcer v. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 682 F.2d 459 (3d Cir. 1982) ; Holtzman v. Proctor, Cook & Co., 528 F. Supp. 9 (D. Mass. 1981) ; Gonzalez v. Paine, Webber, Jackson Curtis, Inc., 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15844 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) ; Sennett v. Oppenheimer & Co., 502 F. Supp. 939 (N.D. Ill. 1980) ; Darrell v. Goodson, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10947 (S.D.N.Y. 1980) ; Hirk v. Agri-Research Council, Inc., 561 F.2d 96, (7th Cir. 1977) ; Meredith v. Conticommodity Servs., Inc., 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15193 (D.D.C. 1980) ; Milnarik v. M-S Commodities, Inc., 457 F.2d 274 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 887 (1972) .

Where commodities futures accounts are involved, another dimension was added in Burton v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 646 F. Supp. 360 (E.D. Va. 1986) , in which the court held that no security was present not only for want of requisite commonality but also because other regulation--the federal commodities laws--controlled, and provided whatever protection was available to the plaintiffs.

(n476)Footnote 476. SEC v. R.G. Reynolds Enters., Inc., (9th Cir. Dec. 30, 1991) ("managed account" for stock and future trading); see Levine v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 639 F. Supp. 1391 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) ("A discretionary stock option account, where the investment is made by one person and complete discretion over the management of the account is in the hands of someone else, is an investment contract"); SEC v. Continental Commodities Corp., 497 F.2d 516 (5th Cir. 1974) ; Marshall v. Lamson Bros. & Co., 368 F. Supp. 486 (D. Iowa 1974) ; Taylor v. Bear Stearns & Co., 572 F. Supp. 667 (N.D. Ga. 1983) ; Christensen Hatch Farms, Inc. v. Peavey Co., 505 F. Supp. 903 (D. Minn. 1981) ; Troyer v. Karcagi, 476 F. Supp. 1142 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) .

(n477)Footnote 477. In Silverstein v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 618 F. Supp. 436 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) , the court held that a discretionary commodities futures account was not a security for want of horizontal or vertical commonality. The court reasoned that under any formulation of common enterprise the fortunes of participants must be related to each other. There can be no common enterprise in a broker/customer relationship where the only financial interest of the broker is in earning commissions. On the other hand, in SEC v. R.G. Reynolds Enters., Inc., (9th Cir. Dec. 30, 1991) , compensation of the promoter/manager was based on a percentage of profits.

(n478)Footnote 478. Savino v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc., 507 F. Supp. 1225 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) .

(n479)Footnote 479. The Commission has taken the position that mass marketing of discretionary accounts by investment advisers or broker-dealers can create an investment contract. See SEC v. First Nat'l City Bank, [1969-1970 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 92,952 (S.D.N.Y. 1970); Robert W. Baird & Co., 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1565 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1971) . The key consideration is the uniformity of advice and treatment of accounts, that is, the selection of the same securities for all, or all identifiable groups of, accounts. Where, for example, multiple investors' accounts are maintained and traded according to a model account designed to achieve a particular objective, an investment contract is created. Jacobs, Persinger & Parker, 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2612 (Feb. 4, 1971) .

(n480)Footnote 480. An Illinois state appeals court held that the opportunity to participate in investments in cash foreign currencies traded on the interbank foreign exchange market (the "Forex" market) created an investment contract, despite the fact the currencies themselves are not securities. The transactions involved discretionary trading accounts in which the broker's commission was a percentage of profits realized by investors rather than a flat fee for services. This, said the court, created vertical commonality, established a common enterprise, and thus satisfied the second prong of the Howey test for an investment contract. As for the control element, the court found that the success of the enterprise depended primarily on the investment decisions made by the company offering the program. See Integrated Research Services, Inc. v. Illinois Secretary of State, 201 Ill.2d 570, 786 N.E.2d 184 (Ill App. 2002) .

(n481)Footnote 481. 52 Haw. 642, 485 P.2d 105 (1971) .

(n482)Footnote 482. 55 Cal. 2d 811, 361 P.2d 906 (Cal. 1961) .

(n483)Footnote 483. The test has been adopted as such in several states. See Mazza v. Kozel, 591 F. Supp. 432 (N.D. Ohio 1984) (applying Ohio law and the four-point test of Hawaii Market Center to hold that undivided interests in a joint venture were investment contracts); State v. George, 50 Ohio App. 2d 297, 362 N.E.2d 1223 (Ohio Ct. App. 1975) ; State ex rel. Healy v. Consumer Business Sys., Inc., 5 Or. App. 19, 482 P.2d 549 (Or. Ct. App. 1971) ; Frye v. Taylor, 263 So.2d 835 (Fla. App. 1972) ; Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, 55 Cal. 2d 811, 361 P.2d 906 (Cal. 1961) .

It has also met with approval by the SEC. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 5211, 1971 SEC LEXIS 1933 (Nov. 30, 1971) (the conclusion in Hawaii Market Center is "fully consistent with the remedial approach" of the federal securities laws).

(n484)Footnote 484. 112 Haw. 90, 144 P.3d 1 (2006) .

(n485)Footnote 485. TriVectra, 112 Haw. at 100.

(n486)Footnote 486. 298 Ark. 542, 769 S.W. 2d 20 (1989) .

(n487)Footnote 487. Grand Prairie, 769 S.W. 2d at 20.

(n488)Footnote 488. State v. Brewer, 932 S.W. 2d 1 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1996) .

(n489)Footnote 489. But see American Bank & Trust Co. v. Wallace, 702 F.2d 93 (6th Cir. 1983) ("Application of the risk capital test substantiates the District Court's conclusion that the Wallace's promissory note evidenced a loan and not an investment, a commercial note and not a security"); Union Planters Nat'l Bank of Memphis v. Commercial Credit Business Loans, Inc., 651 F.2d 1174 (6th Cir.) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1124 (1981) (risk capital criteria applied to find no security); Home Guar. Ins. Corp. v. Third Fin. Servs., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 577 (M.D. Tenn. 1987) (risk capital analysis applied in holding "mortgage packages" to be securities).

See also Keys v. Wolfe, 709 F.2d 413 (5th Cir. 1983) (landowners purchased a security by making tracts of land part of a water district under which they became subject to new risks of loss of the property).

(n490)Footnote 490. 348 F. Supp. 766 (D. Or. 1972) , aff'd, 474 F.2d 476 (9th Cir. 1973) . The Ninth Circuit declined to adopt the risk capital approach taken by the district court. Rather, the court was careful to point out: "Nor does our holding represent any real departure from the Supreme Court's definition of an investment contract in Howey. We hold only that the requirement that profits come 'solely' from the efforts of others would, in circumstances such as these, lead to unrealistic results if applied dogmatically, and that a more flexible approach is appropriate." Id. at 483 .

But see Great Western Bank & Trust v. Kotz, 532 F.2d 1252 (9th Cir. 1976) (risk capital test applied in examining whether a note may be deemed to be a security). The risk capital approach as utilized in note cases is discussed in § 2.01[1][c] supra.

(n491)Footnote 491. Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, 55 Cal. 2d 811, 361 P.2d 906 (Cal. 1961) .

Later "membership" cases have focused principally on the expectations of purchasers where the issue is not clearly capital formation. See, e.g., Riviera Operating Co., SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1978) (country club membership may be deemed to be a security if it is freely transferable and evidences an expectation of profit); LaSalle Club, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (Div. Corp. Fin. 1984) (golf club membership is not a security where it represents only a right to use facilities, is not transferable and precludes any profit motive).

27 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Applicability of the Act: "Security" and "Sale"

1-2 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 2.02

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp This chapter was prepared by Robert N. Rapp (A.B., 1969, J.D., 1972, Case Western Reserve University; M.B.A., 1989, Cleveland State University), partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation, Second Edition (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, 2003).

§ 2.02 The Meaning of "Sale" -- Section 2(3)

To engage in the "sale" of a security is to undertake any attempt to dispose of the security for value. To offer a security for sale is to confront another with an investment decision. The Securities Act protects investment decisions by assuring the availability of adequate information upon which to make an informed judgment, the opportunity to use that information, and by liberalized antifraud remedies where the information is deficient or fraudulent. n1 The Supreme Court of Washington perhaps most cogently made the point in Kinney v. Cook, n2 by stating that absent "a sale, or offer to sell, there is no investment and thus no investors to protect." Although Kinney addressed the meaning of "sale" in the state securities law context, there are no elements unique to state law. Plaintiffs in Kinney paid a promissory note they had signed years before to borrow money to contribute in exchange for a 50% ownership interest in a business, for which they received 50% of the stock. Years later, after litigation left the plaintiffs still holding the stock and owing on the note, they paid the note and then brought a claim under the Washington Securities Act, alleging that their payment had been wrongfully induced, and that it represented payment of the purchase price for the stock representing the 50% ownership interest in a business for which they had borrowed the money from the co-owner years earlier. Their argument that payment of the note was the equivalent of a purchase of the stock was rejected by the Washington Supreme Court:

The Kinneys paid Cook because they were bound by the terms of a promissory note they signed in 1993, not as consideration for an investment made in 2000. As a result of the judgment they owned the stock before they made the payment. The payment satisfied a debt the Kinneys were legally obligated to pay as a result of a litigation they initiated and a judgment they had helped craft; there was no offer, no contract, no bargain, and no sale of a security. Nor was the payment of the note a purchase or sale of the note itself. n3

Kinney well illustrates that the essence of any "sale," and the setting in which securities law protections operate, is an actual attempt to dispose of a security, and conversely, an actual choice to part with value to acquire it. "Sale," and its related terms are defined terms in the Securities Act. Section 2(3) states in part:

The term "sale" shall include every contract of sale or disposition of a security or interest in a security for value. The term "offer to sell," "offer for sale," or "offer" shall include every attempt or offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to buy, a security or interest in a security for value. ... n4

The principal characteristic of a sale is the presence of "value" -- something given up either for or in connection with the receipt of a security. The presence of value is not determined by consideration in the traditional contract sense, but rather in a manner consistent with the intended protections of the Securities Act. First and foremost is the presence of an investment decision brought about by any set of circumstances in which a purchaser meaningfully alters an economic position or interest in reliance upon the value of the security received. This may occur with the payment of money, but it may as easily occur with an exchange of securities. It may occur with "bonus" distributions of stock, or indeed, even with the "free" distribution of stock, warrants or rights.

On-line "free" stock promotions, and regulatory responses to them illustrate the breadth of the meaning of sale in the application of securities law protections. In a series of no-action letters the SEC cautioned that the distribution of "free" stock to individuals who visit or register on Internet sites constitutes a sale of those shares within the purview of Section 2(3) where there is in fact something given up in order to obtain them, or when a valuable benefit accrues to the issuer in the distribution. Requiring cash payments to defray the cost of processing "free" shares, or requiring the purchase of a product or service, n5 or even the simple requirement that an individual register on a company web site may create an event of sale. n6 Gifts, bonuses and "free" distributions of securities generally are considered in more detail later. n7 What must be clear at the outset is that this and all definitions must be applied so as to achieve the fundamental protective goals of the Securities Act in the setting in which it was intended to operate.

The object of securities law protection is an investment decision. Securities Act provisions for full disclosure of material information through the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of Section 5, for regulation of the selling process, and for liberalized antifraud remedies are all targeted at that event. The presence of a "security" is an essential predicate to securities law protection, but it is the offer to sell or the sale of that security that is the triggering event--that which presents an investment decision or is the prelude to one. n8 Where no investment decision is presented, the Securities Act has no mission. However, because the focus of the Securities Act is on circumstances in which such a decision is presented, rather than where an actual transaction occurs, the meaning of "sale" under Section 2(3) necessarily transcends an ordinary understanding of the term. It will be seen, for example, that the essential element of "value" involved in a sale may be that obtained by the "seller," whether or not it is represented by anything tangible actually given up by the buyer. This is particularly well illustrated in "free" stock and other "bonus" promotions involving the distribution of shares.

There are two important, and independent, aspects to "sale" analysis under the Securities Act. The first is that which identifies the event itself, for that event is the trigger for statutory protections. The second aspect, the scope of liability under the Securities Act, flows from the event but is a separate consideration. Civil liability prescribed under Sections 12(a)(1) and 12(a)(2) of the Securities Act for violations of Section 5, or for an information failure in the offer or sale of a security, respectively, turns on the question of who may be deemed to be a "seller" in the fact setting of a particular transaction. The general antifraud prohibitions of Section 17(a) of the Securities Act likewise involve assessments of individual acts and conduct in a transactional setting. Case law notions about "seller" status and the scope of liability under the Securities Act often complement analyses of the triggering events themselves, but broader analysis of roles in the sale process for purposes of liability determinations is undertaken elsewhere in this treatise. n9

The statutory definition of "sale" illuminates two constituent considerations: (1) the process leading up to or bringing about an investment decision; and (2) an actual disposition of the security for value. In the analysis of each, it is essential to recognize that the terms "sell" and "sale" are intended to be used in a broad sense. As the U.S. Supreme Court observed in United States v. Naftalin: n10 "The statutory terms ["offer" and "sell"], which Congress expressly intended to define broadly, are expansive enough to encompass the entire selling process ..." Thus, courts will look to any attempt to dispose a security, and to find "value," in ways that will best effectuate investor protection by requiring Securities Act compliance and by allowing operation of liberalized antifraud protections. n11

Though intentionally expansive, there is insight into identification of the contours of the definition to be found in considering what is either expressly excluded from, or presumptively included within it. Situations expressly declared not to involve a sale or offer to sell are:

- (1) Preliminary negotiations or agreements between an issuer and underwriter, or among underwriters who are or are to be in privity of contract with an issuer; and
- (2) The issue or transfer of a right or privilege, when originally issued or transferred with a security, giving the holder of such security the right to convert it into another security of the same issuer or of another person, or giving a right to subscribe to another security of the same issuer or of another person, which right cannot be exercised until some future date.

On the other hand, a sale will occur at the time of actual issuance or transfer of such a security pursuant to the exercise of a right, conversion, or subscription in the future. Moreover, as for the present, 'Section 2(3) declares: '[a]ny security given or delivered with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities or any other thing, shall be conclusively presumed to constitute a part of the subject of such purchase and to have been offered and sold for value."

The statutory exclusions plainly evidence an intended scope of coverage encompassing an actual investment decision by one so situated as to need the protection of the Securities Act. Preliminary negotiations and agreements among underwriters who will engage or participate in the distribution of securities only serve to create the process by which persons will ultimately be offered the opportunity to consider and to make an actual investment decision. The practical effect of giving a present right to make a future decision is no different. It is only when the ultimate decision is made by one so situated as to need special protection that the Securities Act should apply.

An investment decision connotes a change of position or, more precisely, the conscious acceptance of, or change in, an investment risk. The essential point is best illustrated in cases involving significant modifications in the rights of existing security holders in an enterprise, which, if amounting to the "sale" of a new security, impact both Securities Act and Exchange Act rights and remedies. In Ingenito v. Bermac Corp., n12 plaintiff investors alleged that modification of their underlying investment contracts constituted the sale of a new security. The modifications involved the creation of fresh rights or obligations in regard to increasing equity and investment risk. The court held that a substantial modification impacting the rights and obligations, for which an investor gives some consideration either in the form of a promise to make future payments or the relinquishment of a significant right, is a new investment decision and, hence, the sale of a security. n13 On the other hand, modifying a partnership agreement to permit the addition of more partners and the expansion of its enterprise was held not to involve the kind of change in the investment or its risk as to amount to a sale in Abrahamson v. Fleschner. n14

As will be seen below, the "for value" element of the definition implies the same notion. Committing to an investment risk means subjecting some value to the risks of an enterprise. A transaction need not involve cash consideration to constitute a sale under Section 2(3). However, there must be some identifiable economic change of position in relation to investment risk or what the security represents. Thus, a stock split that simply distributes two or more pieces of paper for one cannot be deemed to be a "sale." n15 But it will also be seen that for purposes of Section 2(3), "value" may be related to induced expectations of the putative purchaser or to value on the other side of the transaction, that is, value that comes as consequence of or is generated for the benefit of one inducing a decision. "Value" is a two-sided concept. The disposition or attempted disposition of a security may be for value that is substantially, if not entirely, meaningful only to the seller, as, for example, in the creation of a trading market for shares distributed to the public through a stock dividend to holders of shares of a shell corporation where the intent is to avoid compliance with provisions of the

Securities Act. n16

Where the focus is on an actual investment decision, the question of when the decision is made, i.e., when the sale occurs, is often meaningful in the application of antifraud remedies that require proof of some causal connection between an information failure and that investment decision. After Pinter v. Dahl, n17 civil liability of a "seller" under Section 12 of the Securities Act, and under other general antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws, requires some meaningful causal involvement in the selling process. n18 When a sale actually occurs may dictate the scope of such liability. Thus, courts have determined for purposes of the antifraud provisions that a "sale" occurs when the parties to a transaction become committed to one another or when there occurs "[a] meeting of the minds of the parties ... mark[ing] the point at which the parties obligated themselves to perform what they had agreed to perform even if the formal performance of their agreement is to be after a lapse of time." n19 At the same time, civil liability for violating the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of Section 5 of the Securities Act, as prescribed in Section 12(a)(1), may key on an act at "any integral stage" of a sale. The time at which a "sale" occurs in the context of civil liability analysis is considered later. n20

Against this backdrop, the meaning of "sale" in a variety of contexts in which it has important consequences may be considered further. In all of it, the constant key to application, as with the critical definition of "security" in Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, is identification of those circumstances in which the need for specialized securities law protection is manifest.

[1] Gifts, Bonuses and Free Stock Distributions

Consider the following: Smith, a successful alumnus of X University, donates 1000 shares of ABC Corporation common stock to the University in grateful recognition of his educational experience and training. Has Smith "sold" the securities to the university? Plainly, she has made a gift of the shares and, absent other considerations, no concerns for investor protection under the federal securities laws are present. A bona fide gift of a security is not a sale of that security because there is no disposition for value: no investment decision is presented. n21

"Value" is not defined in the Securities Act, yet it is clearly a fundamental point for determining the reach of the Securities Act's protections. There may be value in a transaction in the traditional contract consideration sense. There may also be intangibles. In the above hypothetical, however, whatever intangible "value" may be involved for Smith, it is clear that the educational institution, merely the recipient of Smith's beneficence, has parted with nothing in exchange. In these and similar circumstances, the SEC has agreed that a true gift of securities to an educational or charitable institution or a family trust does not involve a sale of securities within the meaning of the Securities Act. n22

Although a fundamental characteristic of a "sale" is that a "purchaser" parts with something in exchange for a security, an ostensible "gift" of securities can plainly be seen as a sale for value when other considerations are involved. For example, the "gift" is effected with payment of "administrative fees" or "transfer fees" that exceed the actual cost of the transfer, and actually represent payment for the securities, or that are part of an inducement program for the purchase of further shares. n23 Similarly, "promotional" gifts of stock, in exchange for visiting a resort development, have been deemed to be sales. n24 Additionally, the distribution of gift shares by a privately held shell corporation without remuneration has been held to be the sale of those shares where economic benefits were obtained by the seller, even though the benefits flowed indirectly from the marketplace rather than directly from the recipients of the stock. In Capital Gen. Corp. v. Utah n25 the court rejected an assertion that a "good faith gift" was involved in these circumstances, and agreed with an administrative determination that: "CGC's veiled but fairly obvious purpose was to advance its own economic objectives rather than to make a gift for reasons of simple generosity." In an administrative proceeding arising out of the same situation, the SEC concluded that the distribution of "gift" shares was a sale within the meaning of the Securities Act because of the value which accrued to the issuer by virtue of creating a public market for its securities. n26

These practical "value" assessments are at the heart of determinations involving distributions of "free" stock in on-line Internet promotions or programs. Issuers involved in such programs normally receive some valuable benefit, despite the ostensibly "free" distribution of shares to on-line recipients. Free stock programs or promotions might, for example, be utilized to generate valuable customer databases where recipients of shares are required to register on a web site and provide personal information as a condition to receiving shares. Free stock issuers may in fact be devices to generate interest in a planned public offering, or as a mechanism to set up investments in another enterprise. n27

"Free" stock programs associated with Internet web site registrations and linked purchases of merchandise have been discussed earlier. n28 These promotions may also be touted as free "investment" opportunities, promoting an expectation of financial gain and inducing a perception of value on the basis of false or misleading information. The unbounded potential of the Internet for dissemination of such offerings to millions of people as vehicles designed to benefit issuers, if only to create publicity and increase web site traffic, will attract increasing regulatory scrutiny. Traditional "value" assessments involved in identifying a sale for purposes of securities law protections will be given new meaning through the emphasis placed on value obtained in a distribution process rather than a transaction supported by particular consideration. n29

Although policing impersonal Internet promotions and programs involving "free" stock requires an evolving notion of value, gifts or bonuses of stock in an employment setting are more focused on orthodox considerations. For example, a "gift" of company stock to employees whose compensation has been reduced in such an amount as to indicate a relationship between the reduction and the stock is indicative of a "sale" rather than a bona fide gift. n30

"Bonus" dispositions of securities are expressly addressed in Section 2(3):

"[A]ny security given or delivered with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities or any other thing, shall be conclusively presumed to constitute a part of the subject of such purchase and to have been offered and sold for value." The focus here is plainly upon the value given up in the context of the transaction and, as with "gift" securities transferred in connection with promotional campaigns, inducements, or purchases of something else, the presence of value is a function of the entire transactional context. n31 The objective is to identify those settings in which Securities Act protection is necessary and appropriate. A parent company plan to issue American Depositary Receipts (ADRs) for its stock to a broad class of employees of the company and its subsidiaries, at no direct cost to such individuals (but subject to a vesting schedule) as an additional incentive to make their maximum contribution to the growth and development of the company, was viewed as not triggering investor protection concerns and not involving a sale within the ambit of Section 2(3). n32 As will be seen, however, other employment-related situations could involve an investment-oriented election to receive shares, and trigger concern for protection. In Feret v. Corestates Financial Corp., n33 for example, company employees who voluntarily entered into agreements under which they received incentive stock options in exchange for continuing services were deemed to be purchasers for purposes of asserting antifraud claims despite the fact that they did not make any direct payment to obtain the options. The court was satisfied that an employment agreement containing stock options constitutes a sale. n34

In the general corporate environment, bonus or other forms of dispositions of securities involving employees or existing shareholders also raise important questions concerning "value," only some of which are addressed by Section 2(3). The statutory definition further provides:

The issue or transfer of a right or privilege, when originally issued or transferred with a security, giving the holder of such security the right to convert such security into another security of the same issuer or of another person, or giving a right to subscribe to another security of the same issuer or of another person, which right cannot be exercised until some future date, shall not be deemed to be an offer or sale of such other security; but the issue or transfer of such other security upon the exercise of such right of conversion or subscription shall be deemed a sale of such other security.

While the definition addresses "bonus" shares and some forms of "rights" distributed to existing shareholders, there are numerous, and much more prevalent, forms of dispositions that have been left to the courts and the SEC to address. These are considered below.

[2] Stock Dividends and Related Distributions

An ordinary stock dividend, dividend "in kind" or stock split, is not a disposition for value. The recipient gives up nothing and remains in the same position vis-a-vis the issuing corporation. n35 This conclusion is the same even where the corporation makes the dividend payable in cash or securities at the election of the shareholder. In making the election, the shareholder neither gives up nor alters any vested right but merely elects the form of a distribution. This is so even though it is clear that the recipient shareholder is surrendering a claim to cash. As early as 1936 the General Counsel of the SEC articulated a "no sale theory" in these circumstances, as follows:

[E]ven though under ordinary circumstances the waiver of a right would in my opinion constitute "value", I do not believe that that term should be regarded as comprehending within its meaning the action of a stockholder to whom alternative rights have been granted without consideration, in electing to exercise one such right, even though under the terms of the grant, such election will have the effect of causing the lapse of the right not exercised. n36

A "sale" presumes a decision to give up something. If a dividend is first declared payable in cash and a shareholder is subsequently given the choice to take stock instead, value has been given. The shareholder has now altered a vested right. On this point the SEC General Counsel offered the further observation:

[I]t is well settled in general law that upon public declaration of a cash dividend out of surplus, the holders of the stock ... acquire immediately the rights of creditors of the corporation and cannot be divested of these rights by subsequent action of the board of directors. If therefore, there is declared a cash dividend payable to all stockholders, and if the board thereafter determines to grant to stockholders the opportunity to waive their pre-existing and vested rights to payment of the dividend in cash, and to receive the dividend in the form of securities, the stockholders electing to take securities would in my opinion be regarded as giving value for the securities so received. n37

Whatever the specific context, the central question for there to be a sale is whether one makes an investment decision that changes the nature of an asset or right and any risk associated with it. n38 The point is well illustrated by Isquith v. Caremark International, Inc., n39 in which the court held that no sale was involved in the spin-off of a corporate subsidiary, in which shareholders received one share of stock in the newly independent company for every four shares they held in the former parent. A recipient shareholder sought to maintain class action antifraud claims on allegations that the true purpose for the spin-off transaction had been misrepresented, and that overall shareholder value ultimately suffered. Plaintiff claimed that the distribution of shares in the spin-off amounted to a "forced" sale, and that shareholders had to buy the shares through payment of the alleged reduction in value of their continuing share ownership in the former parent. The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed dismissal of the claims on the simple point that no one was confronted with any choice. The plaintiff made no investment decision. The distribution of shares was no different than a stock dividend, and shareholders who received the shares no more "bought" the stock, said the court, than the recipient of a stock dividend buys the stock received as a dividend.

The court also rejected the argument that there was a fundamental change in the plaintiff's holdings by reason of the spin-off transaction such that a forced sale might be found. The court explained:

In a spin-off there is no exchange, no forced exit from the corporation, but merely the receipt by the corporation's shareholders of additional stock. Only the form in which members of the class owned

Baxter's assets was changed; it was changed from stock in one corporation to stock in two corporations. After the change the class members owned the same proportion, carrying the same rights, of the same pool of assets. Before, their ownership interest was denominated in shares of Baxter; after, in shares of Baxter and Caremark; the interest itself -- the amount of assets owned by the members of the class -- was unchanged. n40

Reconciling "no sale" conclusions where spin-offs and stock dividends are involved versus sale findings associated with "free" or "gift" share distributions discussed earlier is a matter of underlying motivation and economic consequences. Free stock distributed in response to a specific action by one who has no prior ownership interest involves a choice and a change of position, with value flowing directly to the distributing entity being the motivation for the "gift." Circumstances give rise to investor protection concerns where there is in fact a plan of distribution involving an invitation to tens of thousands of individuals to acquire shares for little or no orthodox consideration, but who may be led to expect future financial gain, and who may become pawns in other schemes. Existing shareholders in the circumstances of corporate transactions illustrated by Caremark make no choice of action in response to any inducement. Securities law protections are triggered where the opportunity to make a choice amounting to an investment decision is presented. An induced belief that one may receive stock for nothing by making a choice of action so simple as registering on an Internet website, and referring others who register, presents no less concern than if the stock were offered and sold in the same manner for cash without Securities Act compliance when in fact there is demonstrable value flowing to the distributor of the stock as a result of the induced actions of the public.

In other corporate settings there are hybrid situations in which programs for share distributions have been examined under Section 2(3). Many companies, for example, have instituted direct dividend reinvestment plans (DRIPs) open to all record holders of their stock. These plans typically provide that participating shareholders, instead of receiving cash dividends, are credited with stock of the company purchased for them by a trustee or an unaffiliated agent. Some plans further provide for the addition of cash payments by the shareholder to increase the amount of the investment. Clearly, there is an election to participate in the program, and in so doing an election to forego cash dividend payments. In considering these plans, however, whether there is a "sale" within the meaning of Section 2(3) turns on the extent of involvement by the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer in the operation of the plan. The concern in this context is whether there is such conduct as to amount to a solicitation of an offer to buy the securities. In two interpretive releases, the SEC has provided some guidance on the permissible role of an issuer or affiliate. Minor administrative and communication activity does not indicate any solicitation, and, as further clarified, if only "bookkeeping and similar administrative functions" were involved, it is likely that no "sale" will be found. n41

The approach here clearly illustrates the scope of Section 2(3), and the intended scope of Securities Act protection, to encompass a "selling process." The SEC has taken the position that these plans do involve sales if they provide that the shares may be purchased by the trustee from the issuing company or its affiliates. Where this is the case, the issuer is deemed to have solicited an offer to buy and is engaged in the distribution of its shares through the trustee, who becomes a statutory underwriter. n42 Where the plan provides that the trustee may not purchase shares from the issuer or an affiliate, there is no "sale" by the issuer. n43 Attempts to modify dividend reinvestment plans to allow for non-shareholders to become shareholders through the plan have met with mixed results. n44

[3] Reorganization Distributions

Closely related to spin-offs and other types of corporate transactions in which there is no "value" element necessary to find a sale for purposes of the Securities Act are liquidating or other reorganization-related distributions of securities. Where there is no disposition for value as, for example, in the case of a liquidating distribution to shareholders who merely receive in liquidation that which they already own as part of a reorganization, and the distributing entity receives no value in making the distribution, no "sale" will be found. n45 The SEC Staff has recognized that no offer or sale is involved when a reorganizing transaction involves no meaningful change in the nature or amount of the securities in which the shareholders are invested. n46 These conclusions are based on the fact that where there is no meaningful change in the underlying beneficial ownership of securities, no new investment decision, and no meaningful change in those bearing the economic risk of the securities, there is no essential "value" element for finding a sale. Where stockholders are asked to make a new investment decision regarding a new or different security, or must give up value as consideration for acquiring a new security, the circumstances are clearly different. However, reorganizing transactions that have no economic significance to the stockholder present no need for Securities Act protection through registration. n47

[4] Pledges

In Rubin v. United States, n48 the Supreme Court held that a pledge of stock as collateral for a bank loan was a disposition of an interest in the stock and, hence, an "offer" or "sale" of the stock for purposes of Section 17(a) of the Securities Act. n49 Despite the fact that the pledge of stock conveyed only a conditional, defeasible right to ownership in the event of a default by the borrower, the Court saw no meaningful difference in the positions of a pledgee and an actual purchaser. As the Court observed: "The economic considerations and realities present when a lender parts with value and accepts securities as collateral for a loan are similar in important respects to the risk an investor undertakes when purchasing shares. Both are relying on the value of the securities themselves, and both must be able to depend on the representations made by the transferor of the securities. ..." n50 In this the pledgee of securities stands on equal footing with a normal investor who purchases shares outright.

Although in the past, a pledge of securities, under some circumstances been deemed to constitute a "sale" of the securities for purposes of other provisions of the Securities Act, most notably for the definition of an "underwriter" and in the examination of securities distributions carried out through pledgees in violation of the registration and prospectus delivery provisions, n51 Rubin focused entirely upon the status of a pledgee as one seeking to invoke special protection. The pledge of stock was viewed as "unmistakably" being a disposition for value, not only because of the language of Section 2(3) but also because the pledgee was entitled to protection in making an investment decision.

A vital aspect of Rubin is the Court's recognition that characterizing a pledge as an "offer" or "sale" under the Securities Act is consistent with the purposes of the Securities Act to protect against fraud and promote the free flow of information. n52 For the pledgee in Rubin, investment risk of mis-valued securities was present. This is the investment risk faced by any purchaser of securities, and the nature of the ownership "interest" acquired does not alter it. Analysis in the post-Rubin environment also applies to hold that a defaulting pledgor of stock is a seller of the securities when the pledgor's stock is sold to pay off the loan against which the stock was pledged. n53 Thus, where a pledge is induced by fraud or information failure, the subsequent foreclosure sale of the stock will support invocation of antifraud remedies. However, the foreclosure sale is not a separate sale from the pledge itself. The foreclosure is the execution of the sale imbedded in the pledge, and, thus, applicable limitations on remedies are keyed to the event of the pledge. n54

The result in Rubin has met some resistance. One lower court decision asserts that the Supreme Court ignored the economic "context" of a pledge transaction in favor of an inappropriately "literal" approach. n55 On balance, however, post-Rubin decisions underscore the element of investment risk present in pledge transactions and the appropriateness of extending securities law protections to them. n56

[5] Changes in Securities Provisions; Exchanges of Securities

A modification in the terms of a security that makes a fundamental change in the nature of the investment it represents is a disposition of the modified security for value and a resultant "sale" of that security. Such modifications may involve terms (as with the interest rate on a debenture), appurtenant rights (voting rights, for example), or any other alteration in the character of the security held. There need not be a transaction, i.e., an actual exchange of instruments, for a "sale" to occur by reason of a change in the provisions of a security. n57 However, when issuance of a new security is effected by an actual exchange of instruments, a sale will be found if there is any form of value given in the transaction. n58

"Value" in the exchange or modification setting comes with a change in the investment. If two economically equivalent securities are exchanged, or if the holder's investment position in the issuer is the same following an exchange, it can be said that no value has been given up by the holder. Consider the following possible transactions:

- (1) A parent corporation issues its securities in exchange for those of its wholly-owned subsidiary; or
- (2) A corporation offers to exchange its par value shares for shares having no par value; or
- (3) A corporation effects a 2:1 stock split; or
- (4) In a merger, X Corporation common shares are exchanged for Y Corporation common shares on a 1:1 basis; or
- (5) A corporation exchanges voting common stock for a new class of non-voting preferred stock.

In these and other situations, the inquiry is whether something of value is given up by a security holder. Stock splits, changes in name or par value, or exchanges between a parent and subsidiary that is only a transfer between corporate pockets do not constitute material alterations in the nature of the investment. n59 Even if such corporate actions are submitted to a shareholder vote, the holder parts with no value since the residual claim to underlying assets of the corporation has not changed. This is so even when it occurs in the context of a significant corporate restructuring.

In Gelles v. TDA Industries, Inc., n60 plaintiff sought to recover under Exchange Act Section 10(b) and SEC Rule 10b-5 for alleged deception in connection with exchanges of shares with a shell corporation to effectuate a change of control as part of a "going private" scenario. Plaintiff alleged he was induced to agree to the transactions in reliance upon misrepresentations and claimed that the exchanges of shares amount to sales so as to confer standing to sue under the Exchange Act antifraud provisions. Affirming dismissal of plaintiff's claims, the Second Circuit found, among other things:

Neither of these exchanges modified the underlying assets upon which Gelles relied for the residual claim to which he was entitled through his shares. The only effect of the exchanges was to alter the insiders' voting power with respect to TDA Gelles held literally the exact same shares before and after the transaction... . n61

As a general matter, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that an exchange of shares in a merger qualifies as a purchase or sale of the securities for purposes of securities law antifraud provisions when shareholders become shareholders in a new company. n62 The essential question in exchange scenarios, however, is whether there has been a fundamental change in the nature of the investment or in the investment risks.

Where a shareholder vote for approval of a transaction involving an exchange of securities is required, one may speak of an investment decision being made. n63 However, it is the effect of the transaction that ultimately controls. If a security that is originally purchased by an investor provides for modification of its terms, the later modification would not constitute a "sale" since no alteration of rights occurs. However, if the provision for subsequent modification is made subject to a vote of holders, the situation takes on the attributes of a sale in the decision to make the modification. n64 Once again, the notion of a "vested" or contract right emerges. An agreement providing for the conversion of preferred stock to common stock, for example, has been held to be a purchase or sale of the common shares by reason of the contract right to acquire them. n65

In any event, where holders are asked to surrender a right or privilege by way of a charter amendment or otherwise, a "sale" will be found. Suppose, for example, that X Corporation purchases the assets of Y Corporation and guarantees the bonds of Y Corporation in consideration for a reduction in the interest rate of the bonds. The alteration in terms of the bonds, effectively, would create a new security in the hands of Y Corporation holders. The newly guaranteed bonds would be exchanged for the old ones. Similarly, if the terms of a class of preferred stock are modified to eliminate the right to accumulated dividends or the right to elect a majority of the board of directors, the reality is that holders have a new class of stock and a "sale" occurs. In this context, the notion of "value" in Section 2(3) appears to be akin to consideration. Thus, in United States v. Riedel, the court observed: "[O]ne may sell a security and be paid therefor in cash, or in another security, or in any other object of value such as a house, a horse, etc." n66

If an exchange of securities is deemed to be a "sale," it may nevertheless be exempted from the registration (but not antifraud) provisions of the Securities Act. Of particular importance in this connection is the exemption afforded by Section 3(a)(9) of the Securities Act n67 and, to a lesser extent, that in Section 3(a)(10). n68

[6] Warrants and Rights; Conversion Privileges

By definition, warrants and rights, which represent the right to acquire a security, are themselves securities. A convertible security is one convertible into another, usually on set terms, as, for example, with debentures convertible into common stock at a fixed "conversion" price.

Under Section 2(3), the distribution of warrants or rights will not constitute a "sale" unless there is a disposition for value. However, any examination of rights must also include the related or underlying security. If a form of right is immediately exercisable or, in the case of a convertible security, the conversion privilege is immediately exercisable, the distribution of the right or convertible security constitutes an "offer" or "sale" of the underlying security. n69 The fact that the distribution of the right was not itself a disposition for value is of no consequence. In the absence of an exemption, the distribution of the underlying security brought about by the distribution of rights or another convertible security must be carried out in compliance with the registration provisions of the Securities Act. n70

Where a form of right, or a convertibility feature, is not exercisable until a future date, the entire regulatory focus is on the right itself for determining the presence of "value." Obviously, if shareholders pay to acquire the right, as in the familiar "rights offering" context, there is a sale. On the other hand, if warrants or rights are distributed as a "bonus" or dividend to existing shareholders, there is no disposition for value, and thus no sale. n71

As a caveat on "no value" distributions of warrants or rights to acquire securities, Diskin v. Lomasney & Co. n72 makes clear that the exclusion from the Section 2(3) definition of sale will not be applied to allow circumvention of the protections of the Securities Act in circumstances where those protections are intended to apply:

Manifestly, Congress did not intend that a sale of a few shares of a registered security ... should enable a dealer to offer the purchaser the "right to subscribe" to thousands of shares of some gamy unregistered issue without conforming with the requirements of the statute -- thereby opening not a mere hole but a large sluice in the protection the Securities Act was intended to afford. The exclusion must be read as limited to rights or privileges embodied in or annexed to the security itself. For example, if a corporation issued bonds together with rights, not immediately exercisable, for common stock of the corporation. ... n73

[7] Employee Benefit Plans and Related Distributions

International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Daniel n74 set the stage for determining not only when an interest in an employee benefit plan may itself be deemed to be a security but also for assessing the investment characteristics of benefit plans generally, including those providing for employee stock ownership. These plans take many forms, but all involve the distribution of shares of the employer's stock either directly to an employee or indirectly for the employee's account or benefit. If such a distribution of stock constitutes a "sale," the regulatory mechanisms of the Securities Act are brought to bear on the plan.

A significant aspect of the Supreme Court's analysis in Daniel was the assessment of whether any "tangible and definable consideration" had been given for the interest in the non-contributory pension plan that was alleged in the case to be a security. The employee contended that, in effect, he had given his labor as "value" in exchange for his interest in the plan. But the Court observed: "Only in the most abstract sense may it be said that an employee exchanges some portion of his labor in return for the possible benefits. He surrenders his labor as a whole, and in return receives a compensation package that is substantially devoid of aspects resembling a security." n75

The principle enunciated in Daniel is extremely important in the assessment of stock distributions to employees. For purposes of defining "sale," it is clear after Daniel that an employee does not by her labor alone give value in exchange for stock distributed by the employer. Thus, where stock is distributed as a bonus, no "sale" takes place. n76 However, where the focus of stock distributions to employees changes from a bonus plan to incentive compensation, the result can be different.

Stock distributed to certain employees in lieu of a cash payment may be deemed to be a sale of the stock. n77 Provision for an investment-oriented "election" by an employee to receive shares is not unlike providing for a previously declared cash dividend to subsequently be taken in stock, the essential point being that the recipient has seen a pre-existing right altered. n78

Moreover, if a stock bonus is awarded only to certain individuals, the transactions suggest individual bargaining and, thus, the possibility of individual consideration. An employment agreement explicitly exchanging one's services for stock options constitutes a sale of those options so as to trigger antifraud remedies. n79 And even though incentive stock options are granted to employees for no direct payments, exchanging services in return for them constitutes a sale within the meaning of securities law definitions, and standing requirements imposed as a matter of law. n80

Decisions holding that a security is sold in these circumstances are based on the notion that a quid pro quo is offered to induce one to enter into employment, or to change employment status in return for bargained-for individually compensation. However, an existing employee, who remains as an at-will employee with the same responsibilities and compensation, is not a purchaser. n81 For a sale to be present in any of these circumstances there must be some investment decision. The "no sale" doctrine applied by courts presumes that employees give up no specific consideration or added value in return for a separable financial interest with the characteristics of a security. n82

Employee purchase plans, by definition, involve a sale of stock and necessitate compliance with the registration mechanisms of the Securities Act in the absence of an exemption if the employer/issuer is deemed to be soliciting or making the "sale." Payroll deduction plans for the purchase of a company's stock may not be deemed to be a sale by the company where the focus of the plan is open market acquisition of shares, the company has only ministerial involvement in the operation of the plan, and purchases are handled by an independent broker or other agent of the employees. n83

Employee Stock Ownership Plans ("ESOPs") and other benefit plans built around contributions of the employer's stock or, in some instances, cash used to purchase the company's stock generally do not involve "sales" given the absence of any investment decision by the employee beneficiaries. n84 If the plan is contributory, or if employees otherwise must make an investment decision in the conversion of another plan into an ESOP, a "sale" will occur. The process of converting a non-contributory plan in which employees are given a choice between investing their funds in a new plan or receiving the funds or benefits from the old one has been deemed to involve a sale. In these circumstances, where employees are given a choice in the matter, they have the opportunity to make an investment decision and the essential element of a sale is presented. n85

Consideration of employee benefit plans illustrates the breadth of the Section 2(3) definition. Securities Act protections are triggered by any attempt to dispose of a security for value. A solicitation of an offer to buy a security is an "offer for sale" under Section 2(3). The establishment of a "benefit" plan, and the manner of its operation, may be deemed to be that solicitation, and it is important from the employer's perspective to disengage from any role in the operation of a plan that is anything more than ministerial. Recognizing that some participation by the employer company or an affiliate will exist in almost every such plan, the SEC Staff has instructed that whether or not a sale is involved will turn upon the degree and type of participation by such persons in the particular program. Circumstances under which an employer's involvement in a stock purchase plan would be considered sufficiently limited so as not to trigger the registration requirement by reason of a solicitation of an offer to buy have been articulated as follows:

- (1) The employer company or an affiliate announces the existence of the plan.
- (2) The employer company makes payroll deductions at the request of employees for the purpose of participating in the plan.
- (3) The names and addresses of employees are made available to the broker or other agent for direct communications by it to such employees regarding the plan. This may take the form of addressing the communication to be sent by the broker or other agent, the inclusion of the broker's communication with the announcement by the employer company, or the holding of an initial meeting of employees at the company's premises.
- (4) The employer company or an affiliate pays no more than its expenses of payroll deductions and the reasonable fees and charges of the broker or other agent for brokerage commissions and bookkeeping and custodial expenses. n86 To these prescriptions, the SEC subsequently added two more:
- (5) The plan should be limited solely to employees, franchisees, and independent sales representatives who have essentially the same degree of access to information regarding the company as do its employees; and
- (6) The employer must not make contributions to the plan to defray the cost of the stock or lend money to employees to facilitate the stock purchase, except where an employee elects to supplement his personal contributions to the plan with his portion of profits distributable from the employer's profit-sharing plan. n87

In the post-Daniel era, the principal regulatory focus under the Securities Act relating to distributions of employer stock is upon the contributory or noncontributory form of a plan. Where an employee is offered the opportunity to purchase stock and that employee gives value to make the purchase, the concerns for investor protection which underlie the Securities Act are no less than in any other setting. Daniel has simply brought about a more precise focus on what it is that the Securities Act protects, that is, an investment decision. An involuntary and noncontributory plan does not involve that investment decision. Daniel teaches that the securities laws have a role that is limited, at best, in the field of employee benefits. A pension plan can involve an "investment" decision but not necessarily the type of decision the securities laws are intended to protect. n88 On the other hand, stock ownership programs present a true investment setting.

Equity-Based Compensation. Equity-based compensation awards by employer-issuers have also been evaluated in the context of Securities Act section 2(a)(3) as to whether a sale or an offer to sell securities is involved. In No-Action Letters the SEC Staff has confirmed "no sale" in connection with equity-based awards to employees in the form of restricted stock units when no investment decision is required by the employee recipient. n89 In Verint Systems, Inc., n90 for example, the Staff agreed not to recommend enforcement action if an issuer awarded restricted stock units and deferred stock to its non-management employees without registration. The company proposed to award these grants to a broad group of employees for compensatory purposes. No employee was required to surrender cash, securities or any other property in exchange for the award, or to enter into any agreement or covenant in exchange for the award. There was, however, a forfeiture provision relating to continued employment. The grants would vest based on the passage of time. In granting no-action advice, the Staff agreed with the company's view that recipients of the grants would not be making any investment decision, would not be providing any value to the company in return, and would have no control over vesting other than in connection with termination of employment. n91

For any plans that do involve "sales" of employer stock, one or more exemptions from registration under the Securities Act may be available under Sections 3 and 4. n92 Regardless of whether registration is required, the antifraud provisions will apply.

[8] Spin-offs and the "Shell" Game: The Instant Public Market

The occurrence of a "sale" is a trigger for Securities Act compliance responsibilities. The registration and prospectus delivery mechanisms of Section 5 of the Securities Act assure the availability of information on which investment decisions may be made and the opportunity to use that information in making them. The public distribution of securities may not take place without compliance with Section 5 unless the circumstances demonstrate that there is no need for the registration procedures, in which case an exemption would be available. Where required, the burden of compliance with Section 5 is substantial.

Since the applicability of the Securities Act is not triggered except by an attempt to dispose of a security for value, efforts to publicly distribute securities, i.e., create a public market, have involved utilization of what are ostensibly no-value distributions of stock to shareholders of dormant or "shell" corporations. The process has most often involved the acquisition of a controlling interest in such a shell corporation (having "public" shareholders) followed by a merger of a privately-held company into a subsidiary of the shell. The shell then distributes the shares of the subsidiary to its shareholders as a dividend in kind, thus "spinning-off" the shares and placing them in the hands of the investing public without Securities Act compliance. Control of the newly "public" company remains with those in control of the shell by virtue of the prior controlling interest in the private company.

The key to the so-called "shell game" is the disposition of shares, via the dividend, for no value. A corporate spin-off through the use of a stock dividend or dividend in kind does not, ordinarily, constitute a "sale" of the securities involved. There is no transfer of value by the recipient shareholder. However, use of the dividend as a device for circumvention of the Securities Act in circumstances unquestionably demonstrating the need for investor protection prompted strong regulatory and judicial responses that added a new dimension to the concept of "value" for purposes of Section 2(3).

In SEC v. Harwyn Industries Corp., n93 a company spun-off four subsidiaries in consummation of arrangements under which individuals had acquired control of the subsidiaries. The stock of the subsidiaries was all spun-off to "public" shareholders of Harwyn, a corporate "shell." The result was a public trading market in the shares of each of the former privately-held companies. Similarly, in SEC v. Datronics Engineers Inc., n94 the spin-off of nine newly created subsidiaries of a shell corporation resulted in the formerly private companies becoming public ones entirely outside the mechanisms of the Securities Act. In both cases, the results were defended as involving only stock dividends -- a "change in the form of ownership." It was clear in both cases that the recipient shareholders had not themselves given anything in exchange for what they received. It was also clear that there was no independent business purpose for the spin-offs and that they were undertaken solely as devices to create public trading markets for the stock of the spun-off companies.

The nature of the stock dividends notwithstanding, the courts in both cases found requisite value to hold the distributions to be unlawful sales of securities. The value flowed to those distributing the securities, and came not from the recipient shareholders, as the result of the scheme by: (1) creating a trading market for securities where none existed; (2) by making it easier for those retaining control to have access to and obtain financing; and (3) by saving the expense associated with Securities Act compliance. In short, these courts found value somewhere in the setting to be sufficient for making a disposition of securities into a "sale."

In a 1969 release addressing the concerns for investor protection in spin-off distributions of securities through inactive or shell corporations, the SEC warned that such devices contravene the purpose and specific provisions of the Securities Act. n95 The Commission emphasized that the focus in these transactions must be upon the entire process; that is, beyond the distribution of the securities to recipients of the "dividend" lies the redistribution in the trading markets that is the real objective of the plan. It is this point that destroys supposed reasoning that no investment decision, and no consequent need for protection, is involved. The Commission observed:

This reasoning fails ... to take into account that there is a sale by the issuer and the distribution thereafter does not cease at the point of receipt by the initial distributees of the shares but continues into the trading market involving sales to the investing public at large. Moreover, it ignores what appears to be primarily the purpose of the spin-off in numerous circumstances which is to create quickly, and without the disclosure required by registration, a trading market in the shares of the issuer. n96

The motivation for the spin-off takes on much importance. The Commission made it clear that "conventional" spin-offs, which "do not involve a process of purchase of securities by a publicly-owned company followed by their spin-off and redistribution in the trading markets," are not the focus of concern. n97

The role of market professionals was emphasized as a principal line of defense against improper spin-off distributions:

The activities discussed above generally can only be successfully accomplished through the efforts of brokers and dealers. Accordingly, brokers and dealers are cautioned to be particularly mindful of their obligations under the registration and antifraud provisions of the Federal securities laws with respect to effecting transactions in such securities. In this connection, where a broker or dealer receives an order to sell securities of a little-known, inactive issuer, or one with respect to which there is no current information available except possibly unfounded rumors, care must be taken to obtain sufficient information about the issuer and the person desirous of effecting the trade in order to be reasonably assured that the proposed transaction complies with the applicable requirements. Moreover, before a broker or dealer induces or solicits a transaction he should make diligent inquiry concerning the issuer, in order to form a reasonable belief for his recommendation, and fully inform his customers of the information so obtained. ... n98

[9] When a "Sale" Occurs

In the context of Securities Act Section 5 compliance issues, the question of when an actual sale occurs is not particularly meaningful. Compliance responsibilities under the registration and prospectus delivery provisions of the Securities Act are triggered by an "attempt to dispose," or a disposition, of a security for value, whenever that may be. However, for purposes of civil liability to purchasers under Section 12(a)(1) of the Securities Act for violations of the registration and prospectus delivery provisions of Section 5, and Section 12(a)(2), the general antifraud provision, determination of when a sale occurs often becomes critical in assessing the scope of liability. In Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. "21" International Holdings, Inc., n99 for example, asserted liability under former Section 12(2) for information failures was countered with the contention that disclosures or omissions on which the claims were based occurred after the securities were "sold." Defining sale in terms of the "commitment theory," defendants in the case urged that no liability could attach to alleged misstatements and omissions made after the plaintiff's investment decision and irrevocable commitment to the transaction. Plaintiff argued that the "sale" did not occur until closing, until which time it had the opportunity to back out of the transaction. On a motion for summary judgment, plaintiffs persuaded the court that there was sufficient evidence of an opportunity to "re-commit" to the transaction based upon a later disclosure document; thus, the Section 12(2) claim was deemed viable for trial. The case illustrates the fundamental role played by the Section 2(3) definition in setting parameters for liability wholly apart from the Section 5 registration and prospectus delivery compliance environment. n100

As noted earlier, the "sale" definition also operates to control the scope of civil liability under both Sections 12(a)(1) and 12(a)(2) through the express statute of limitations for those private rights of action prescribed by Section 13, which is keyed to the "violation." n101 In that analysis, the definition of a sale has been interpreted to mean "any integral stage" of the sale including, for example, the remittance of funds for the purchase or the mailing of a confirmation of purchase. n102

In all Securities Act liability and compliance analyses, the nature and scope of a "sale" must be evaluated in varying contexts involving such things as "conditional" sales, installment payments of purchase consideration, continuing capital contributions, capital "calls," "stand-by" commitments, or deferred payments pursuant to notes. In these analyses, the question generally is not whether a sale has occurred but, rather, whether it is completed or whether any new transaction has occurred. n103 There is no clear guidance in the case law. However, it is certain that the scope of the term is interpreted no less broadly than in the basic definitional context and that courts look to applications that will best effectuate investor protection by looking to determine whether any new investment decision is involved.

It is clear that a contract or agreement to purchase a security constitutes a sale of that security under the statutory definition. An agreement to make an investment by purchasing stock to be issued involves no less an investment decision than the transaction itself. n104 However, in the context of negotiations for a transaction, a letter of intent is not an agreement or contract for a sale within the ambit of the Securities Act where it does not bind a party to a proposed transaction. n105

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. As discussed further below, liability under antifraud provisions and civil remedies of the Securities Act is generally dependent upon one being characterized as a "seller" of securities in a transaction involving an information failure. The definition of "seller" for purposes of civil liability has evolved through case law, and is considered in detail in Chapter 9--Civil Liabilities infra. However, the elements of a "sale," as discussed here, are extremely useful in understanding the scope of "seller" liability generally.

(n2)Footnote 2. 159 Wn 2d 837, 154 P.3d 206 (2007) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Id., 159 Wn. 2d at 845 (emphasis by the Court).

(n4)Footnote 4. The definition of "sale" under the Exchange Act, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B § 3(a)(14) does not include the "for value" qualifier, nor does it include "offer to sell," "offer," or "offer for sale" expressly within the definition, leading some courts to conclude that the definition is more liberal and that no consideration is necessary for either a purchase or sale to occur. See, e.g., Rathborne v. Rathborne, 683 F.2d 914, 920 (5th Cir. 1982) ; Frigitemp Corp. v. Financial Dynamics Fund, Inc., 524 F.2d 275, 281 (2d Cir. 1975) ; but see Lawrence v. SEC, 398 F.2d 276 (1st Cir. 1968) (no reason to believe that Congress intended to dilute the meaning of the term in the Exchange Act). Still, where standing to invoke Exchange Act antifraud protections is predicated on one being either a purchaser or seller, a "value" focus is inescapable. See Blue Chip Stamps v. Manor Drug Stores, 421 U.S. 723, 95 S. Ct. 1917, 44 L. Ed. 2d 539 (1975) . See, e.g., Carter v. Signode Indus., Inc., 694 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ill. 1988) (plaintiff's standing to sue predicated upon giving up "something of appraisable value" to participate in a general investment fund or purchase a guaranteed investment contract).

(n5)Footnote 5. American Brewing Co., 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 87 (Jan.27, 1999) ("Free" share of non-voting common stock for each case of issuer's beer purchased at retail would constitute a sale).

(n6)Footnote 6. In Vanderkam & Sanders, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 96 (Jan. 27, 1999) , for example, a company proposal to operate and maintain an internet-based auto referral service in which shares of the company's common stock would be issued to any person who registered on the site was viewed by the SEC staff as an event of sale. There was no cash, property or services required to receive shares of the stock, which, when issued, would have been uncertificated and non-transferable. However, the company proposed to issue additional shares in exchange for referrals of others to its web site. The SEC staff was satisfied that the issuance of the shares in consideration of registration on or visit to the web site constituted a sale, and declined no-action advice that the company could proceed without compliance with the registration provisions of the Securities Act.

See also Andrew Jones, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 555 (June 8, 1999) (Issuance of non-transferable free shares of common stock to the first one million people registering on a linked web site, and additional shares to persons who refer others to the web site would constitute an event of sale whether or not the distribution was through the issuer's web site).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Section 2.02[1] infra.

(n8)Footnote 8. Even assuming the existence of a "sale" or "offer to sell," the security in question may be exempted from the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of Section 5 of the Securities Act, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B under § 3 ("Exempted Securities"), or the transaction may be one exempted from coverage under § 4 ("Exempted Transactions"). These exemptions are considered elsewhere in the text. See § 3.01 infra and § 4.01 infra . In addition, the definition of "sale" and "offer to sell" for purposes of specific Securities Act § 5 considerations and processes (prefiling period, "waiting period," etc.), is given separate and detailed treatment in that part of the text dealing with the registration process. See §§ 7A.03 and 7A.04 infra .

(n9)Footnote 9. See §§ 9.03[5] and 9.04[5] infra for discussion of the scope of "seller" liability under §§ 12(1) and 12(2) of the Securities Act. Section 17(a) is considered further in § 9.06 infra .

(n10)Footnote 10. 441 U.S. 768, 773, 99 S. Ct. 2077, 2081, 60 L. Ed. 2d 624, 629 (1979) (citations omitted); see also Pinter v. Dahl, 486 U.S. 622, 108 S. Ct. 2063, 100 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1988) . In Pinter, the Supreme Court considered the scope of "seller" liability under Securities Act § 12 as including persons who actively solicit a buyer.

(n11)Footnote 11. Cook v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 726 F. Supp. 151 (S.D. Tex. 1989) ; Hocking v. DuBois, 885 F.2d 1449 (9th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990) (the term "offer" has a far different and far broader meaning in securities law than in contract law); Raiford v. BusLease, Inc., 825 F.2d 351 (11th Cir. 1987) . See also Pinter v. Dahl, 486 U.S. 622, 108 S. Ct. 2063, 100 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1988) . In Pinter, the Supreme Court observed that the statutory definitions of "sale" and "sell" are expansive and intended to encompass the entire selling process.

For consideration of what constitutes an "attempt to dispose" of a security in the specific context of registration statement and prospectus delivery requirements of § 5 of the Securities Act, particularly as related to the prefiling period of the registration process, and the problem of "gunjumping" generally, see § 7A.02[2] infra.

(n12)Footnote 12. 376 F. Supp. 1154 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Id. at 1179-82 ; see also Gelles v. TDA Indus., Inc., (2d Cir. 1994) (court must decide whether there has occurred such a significant change in the nature of the investment or in the investment risks as to amount to a new investment).

(n14)Footnote 14. 568 F.2d 862 (2d Cir. 1977) . See also Panos v. Island Gem Enterprises, Ltd., N.V., 880 F. Supp. 169 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (amendments to rental pool disbursement terms did not significantly change the nature of the investment).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Gurvitz v. Bregman & Co., 379 F. Supp. 1283 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See § 2.02[7] infra.

(n17)Footnote 17. 486 U.S. 622, 108 S. Ct. 2063, 100 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1988) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See also SEC v. Follick, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24112 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (Evidence showed that broker participated in a fraudulent scheme and acted with scienter even though he did not actually solicit any of the subject transactions).

See also Daniels v. Blount Parrish & Company, Inc., 308 F.Supp. 2d 886 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (Underwriter sold securities only to dealers and not to plaintiffs); Starr v. They, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8698 (N.D. Ill. 2003) , (Corporate officers did not engage in solicitation or sale of securities to plaintiffs); Rosenzweig v. Azurix Corp., 332 F.3d 854 (5th Cir. 2003) (Corporate officers who signed a registration statement but did not solicit sales were not sellers).

(n19)Footnote 19. Radiation Dynamics, Inc. v. Goldmuntz, 464 F.2d 876, 890 (2d Cir. 1972) ; see also Goodman v. Epstein, 582 F.2d 388, 410-14 (7th Cir. 1978) ; Adams v. Cavanaugh Communities Corp., 847 F. Supp. 1390, 1402 (N.D. Ill. 1994) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See § 2.02[8] infra.

(n21)Footnote 21. Portnoy v. Memorex Corp., 667 F.2d 1281 (9th Cir. 1982) ; Pollution Research & Control Corp., 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3687 (Oct. 5, 1971) .

A bona fide gift presumes that nothing has been given up by the recipient. Stock "given" to automobile dealers would be deemed to constitute a sale of the stock where it was issued as an inducement by an insurance company to dealers to sell insurance policies that are reinsured through the insurance company. Gulf Capital Life Ins. Co., 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2639 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982) .

See also Ocean Express Seafood Restaurants, Inc., 19 Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. (BNA) 537 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1987) (issuer's one time gift of stock to friends and business associates of the issuer's founder would not be a sale triggering registration requirements of the Securities Act).

(n22)Footnote 22. Mundy Gen. Inc., 1978 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1367 (May 11, 1978) .

(n23)Footnote 23. In re Offering of Securities by Wade Bruce Cook, Ariz. Corp. Comm. Dec. No. 56492, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,976 (1989).

(n24)Footnote 24. In re Strack Sec. Serv. Corp., Pa. Sec. Comm. Dkt. No. 8812-25, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,979 (1989).

The transfer of shares of stock as either "boot" or a commission for a real estate transaction has been held to be the sale of the securities for value where they were given or delivered with the purchase of another thing offered and sold for value. Dean v. Humphries, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,026 (Idaho 1989).

(n25)Footnote 25. 777 P.2d 494 (Utah App. 1989) .

(n26)Footnote 26. In re Capital General Corp., Sec. Act Rel. No. 7008, 1993 SEC LEXIS 1880 (1993) .

Ostensibly valueless dispositions of stock for the purpose of establishing a body of public shareholders, and thus creating a trading market, are considered further in § 2.02[7] infra .

(n27)Footnote 27. See, e.g., In re Joe Loofbourrow, Sec. Act Rel. No. 7700, 1999 SEC LEXIS 1419 (July 21, 1999) ; In re Web Works Marketing.Com, Inc., Sec. Act Rel. No. 7703, 1999 SEC LEXIS 1424 (July 21, 1999) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See notes 3-4, supra.

See also Simplystocks.com, SEC No Action Letter (Feb. 4, 1999); WowAuction.com, Inc., Sec. Act Rel. No.7702, 1999 SEC LEXIS 1420 (July 21, 1999) ; Sotirakis, Sec. Act Rel. No. 7701, 1999 SEC LEXIS 1414 (July 21, 1999) .

(n29)Footnote 29. The SEC has raised no objection to issuance of "free" shares to persons who register on web sites, or who refer others to register, where the stock involved is distributed pursuant to a registration statement filed under the Securities Act. See DoctorSurf.com, Inc., registration statement filed on EDGAR, available on the Internet at HYPERLINK <http://www.sec.gov> and YouNetwork Corp. registration statement, filed on EDGAR, and available at the same web site.

(n30)Footnote 30. Solid State Scientific Devices Corp., 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3082 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1971) .

(n31)Footnote 31. "This [bonus portion of § 2(3)] means, for example, that a package transaction which includes the sale of a horse for $100 and a gift of a security to the purchaser nevertheless constitutes an offer and sale of the security for value within the meaning of the Securities Act of 1933." SEC v. Addison, 194 F. Supp. 709, 722 (N.D. Tex. 1961) . But stock given as a bonus to employees may or may not involve a "sale." See discussion under "Employee Participation Plans," § 2.02[b][6] infra .

See also Lawrence v. SEC, 398 F.2d 276, 280 (1st Cir. 1968) ; Diskin v. Lomasney & Co., 452 F.2d 871 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n32)Footnote 32. MCA Inc., 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 678 (May 26, 1992) .

(n33)Footnote 33. 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11512 (E.D. Pa. 1998) .

(n34)Footnote 34. But see Beebe v. Compaq Computer Corp., 940 S.W.2d 304 (Tex. App. 1997) (No investment decision, and thus no sale, possible when plaintiffs' employment terminated with them holding options that never vested).

(n35)Footnote 35. "The House provision exempting stock dividends ... is omitted from the substitute [bill], since stock dividends are exempt without express provision, as they do not constitute a sale, not being given for value." H.R. Rep. No. 152, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section E of the 1933 Act, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 25 (1933).

Gurvitz v. Bregman & Co., 379 F. Supp. 1283 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) (a stock split is simply the distribution of two more pieces of paper for one, and does not involve a "sale" under the Securities Act).

(n36)Footnote 36. Sec. Act Rel. No. 929, 1936 SEC LEXIS 395 (July 29, 1936) .

See also J DN Realty Corp., 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 858 (Oct. 26, 1999) (Dividend declaration allowing election of payment in securities or cash does not constitute a sale).

A stock dividend undertaken to effect a "spin-off" of a subsidiary by a parent corporation of the stock of a subsidiary does not constitute a sale of the stock. See, e.g., Employers Ins. Co., SEC No-Action Letter, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,782 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982). However, spin-offs designed to create a public market in securities in circumvention of the protections of the Securities Act are treated much differently. These "Shell-game" transactions are discussed in § 2.02[7] infra.

(n37)Footnote 37. Sec. Act Rel. No. 929 , supra.

See also CNA Income Shares Inc., 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2978 (Oct. 31, 1977) ; Harwood Cos., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2024 (Feb. 15, 1983) . No "sale" would occur in corporate action offering shareholders alternative rights, after a merger transaction, to tender their shares for cash or to retain their shares and receive additional shares. The decision put to shareholders was not whether to buy a security but rather a decision to sell. The waiver of a right to receive cash by electing to remain a shareholder does not represent value.

(n38)Footnote 38. See Ahern v. Gaussoin, 611 F. Supp. 1465, 1478 (D.Or. 1985) .

(n39)Footnote 39. 136 F.3d 531 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 920 (1998) .

(n40)Footnote 40. 136 F.3d at 534 .

(n41)Footnote 41. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 4790, 1965 SEC LEXIS 17 (July 13, 1965) ; Sec. Act Rel. No. 5515, 1974 SEC LEXIS 2946 (Aug. 8, 1974) .

See also Fractional Shares Repurchase Program, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 908 (Aug. 24, 1992) (sales of stock on behalf of participants in a fractional share repurchase program would not constitute a "sale" by the issuer for purposes of § 5 of the Securities Act where the issuer's role is de minimis and the program is conducted by an outside manager acting as agent for the shareholders).

See also First Arkansas Bankstock Corp., 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2481 (Div. Corp. Fin 1971) (degree of participation or administration by the corporation is a key consideration).

(n42)Footnote 42. General Motors Corp., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4492 (May 10, 1972) . A statutory "underwriter" is defined in § 2(11) of the Securities Act as including any person who "participates or has a direct or indirect participation" in the distribution of a security, as well as any person who offers or sells for an issuer in connection with any distribution of a security. The presence of an "underwriter" is indicative of a distribution of securities and triggers the registration and prospectus delivery process under § 5. The concept of a statutory "underwriter" and its impact are discussed in § 7A.01[2][c] infra.

(n43)Footnote 43. J.P. Morgan & Co., Inc., 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3535 (Sept. 22, 1971) .

See also J.P. Morgan & Co., Inc., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2426 (June 22, 1972) (addition to plan of cash contribution feature not subject to registration).

(n44)Footnote 44. See Walt Disney Prods., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2796 (Dec. 3, 1980) (a dividend reinvestment plan modified to allow non-shareholders to become shareholders through the plan by delivering funds to purchase shares would be an "offer to sell").

But see Hannaford Bros. Co., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4396 (Nov. 16, 1981) (plan to allow non-shareholder employees to become shareholders through limited purchases of shares through the company's dividend reinvestment plan would not constitute a "sale" under § 2(3)); McDonalds Corp., 1985 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2684 4 (Aug. 13, 1985) (corporation plan could include franchisees, their employees, and proposed IRA accounts).

(n45)Footnote 45. See, e.g., Triad Guaranty, Inc., 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 686 (Aug. 22, 2005) (Liquidation of a subsidiary followed by pro rata distribution of new shares in the reorganized company would not constitute a sale of the new shares).

(n46)Footnote 46. See Jaymark, Inc., 2000 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 747 (Available July 21, 2000) ; TB & C BancShares, Inc., 2001 SEC No-Act LEXIS 664 (Available July 25, 2001) .

(n47)Footnote 47. "Value" considerations in additional types of reorganizing transactions or exchanges of securities are discussed further in § 2.02[5], "Changes in Securities Provisions; Exchanges of Securities," infra.

(n48)Footnote 48. 449 U.S. 424, 101 S. Ct. 698, 66 L. Ed. 2d 633 (1981) .

(n49)Footnote 49. Section 17(a), a general antifraud provision, is discussed in § 10.01[2] infra. In Rubin, the Government asserted violations of § 10(b) of the Exchange Act, along with SEC Rule 10b-5, and § 17(a). A "sale" is a necessary element of all of the antifraud provisions.

(n50)Footnote 50. 449 U.S. at 431, 101 S. Ct. at 702, 66 L. Ed. 2d at 639 .

See also Chemical Bank v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 726 F.2d 930 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 884 (1984) (pledge of stock as guarantee for a loan was a sale); Harmsen v. Smith, 693 F.2d 932 (9th Cir. 1982) (pledge of shares held to be a sale); Oakhill Cemetery of Hammond, Inc. v. Tri-State Bank, 513 F. Supp. 885 (N.D. Ill. 1981) (note secured by one-half of company stock involved a sale).

In United States v. Kendrick, 692 F.2d 1262 (9th Cir. 1982) , the pledge of securities to a broker-dealer as collateral for margin borrowing by a customer was held to be a sale of the securities. The court analyzed the "value" element of the situation as follows:

It was not the fact that the securities were in the possession of Dean Witter that gave Dean Witter an interest in them. It was the fact that they were subjected as collateral to the new loans and that Dean Witter thereby acquired an interest in them in an amount equal to the amounts loaned. There was testimony ... that in issuing the checks drawn on the margin accounts Dean Witter engaged in an investment decision as to whether the stocks it already held were sufficient to cover its loss should the borrower default. Dean Witter gained an additional interest in the collateral as a result of the loans. When that interest was created, the "sale" occurred.

The issue of whether a pledge of securities to secure a loan is a security is separate from the question of whether a note given in a loan transaction may be deemed to be a security. Notes given for loans may be deemed to be securities, and the giving of a note in such a transaction is a "sale." See SEC v. Addison, 194 F. Supp. 709 (N.D. Tex. 1961) ("The giving of personal loan notes ... constitutes sales of securities because ... it amounts to a disposition or giving of a security for value"). Similarly, the exchange of securities in satisfaction of a debt is a sale. The release of the obligation represents "value" given. See Llanos v. United States, 206 F.2d 852 (9th Cir. 1955) .

(n51)Footnote 51. See SEC v. Guild Films Co., Inc., 279 F.2d 485 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 364 U.S. 819 (1960) (bank "purchased" the stock pledged to secure a loan).

(n52)Footnote 52. The Court characterized the economic considerations and realities of a pledge transaction as similar in important respects to the risk faced by any investor when evaluating a purchase of securities. "Both are relying on the value of the securities themselves, and both must be able to depend on the representations made by the transferor of the securities, regardless of whether the transferor passes full title or only a conditional and defeasible interest to secure repayment of a loan." 449 U.S. at 431, 101 S. Ct. at 702, 66 L. Ed. 2d at 639 .

(n53)Footnote 53. See Madison Consultants v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 710 F.2d 57 (2d Cir. 1983) ; Eastwood v. National Bank of Commerce, 673 F. Supp. 1068 (W.D. Okla. 1987) .

(n54)Footnote 54. TCF Banking & Sav., F.A. v. Arthur Young & Co., 706 F. Supp. 1408 (D. Minn. 1988) .

(n55)Footnote 55. Shelter Mutual Ins. Co. v. Water Supply District No.7, 569 F. Supp. 310 (E.D. Mo. 1983) ("Whether a pledgee can ever acquire the pledged securities is solely dependent on default by the pledgor of the commercial loan, not on any decision to invest.").

(n56)Footnote 56. See Trust Co. of Louisiana v. N.N.P., Inc., 103 F.3d 1478 (5th Cir. 1997) (obtaining funds secured by a pledge of securities involves a "contract to buy, purchase or otherwise acquire" a security and the pledgee is, therefore, within the definition of purchaser for purposes of invoking antifraud remedies).

(n57)Footnote 57. SEC v. Associated Gas & Elec. Co., 99 F.2d 795 (2d Cir. 1938) (decided under the Public Utility Holding Company Act's similar definition of "sale").

(n58)Footnote 58. Carter v. Signode Indus., Inc., 694 F. Supp 493 (N.D. Ill 1988) (relinquishment of retirees general investment fund accounts in exchange for "guaranteed income contracts" represented a fundamental change in the nature of the investment and the risk involved).

In some cases involving exchanges of securities, the issue arises in a reverse manner, i.e., whether a purchase has occurred, such that the purchaser may invoke protections under the Securities Act. See, e.g., Ahern v. Gaussoin, 611 F. Supp. 1465 (D. Or. 1985). The analysis is no different, except that the examination of the transaction for value focuses heavily on whether the putative purchaser has made an investment decision and whether there is a significant change in the nature of the investment or in the investment risk.

(n59)Footnote 59. See Rathborne v. Rathborne, 683 F.2d 914 (5th Cir. 1982). In the context of allegations under the antifraud provisions, a transfer of securities from a wholly controlled subsidiary to its parent or between two corporations wholly owned by a third does not constitute a sale (or purchase) of the securities. A stock-for-assets "trade" between the corporate entities represented a mere "transfer between corporate pockets."

See also Worldwide Energy Co., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 811 (Jan. 24, 1972) (exchange of shares pursuant to a plan of reorganization effecting a change of domicile is one of form and not substance); Gurvitz v. Bregman & Co., 379 F. Supp. 1283 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) (stock split does not qualify as a sale); cf. Sacks v. Reynolds Sec., Inc., 593 F.2d 1234 (D.C. Cir. 1978) (a sale involves a change in the nature of an investment); Garner v. Enright, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14848 (E.D.N.Y. 1977) (a sale means a "fundamental change" in the interest of a party).

(n60)Footnote 60. (2d Cir. 1994).

(n61)Footnote 61. Id. at 91,333.

(n62)Footnote 62. SEC v. National Securities, Inc., 393 U.S. 453, 89 S. Ct. 564, 21 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1969).

(n63)Footnote 63. Where certain forms of corporate reclassifications or reorganization transactions are involved and are submitted for shareholder approval, the former "no sale" theory of Rule 133 under the Securities Act has been discarded. Rule 145 under the Securities Act of 1933, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C, now recognizes such transactions, and the shareholder vote on which they are based involves a sale of securities for purposes of the registration provisions.

(n64)Footnote 64. See Securities Act Rule 145, discussed in § 7.04 infra.

(n65)Footnote 65. FS Photo, Inc. v. Picturevision, Inc., 61 F.Supp. 2d 473 (E.D. Va. 1999).

(n66)Footnote 66. 126 F.2d 81, 83 (7th Cir. 1942).

Changes in the rights of a security holder will qualify as a sale and, conversely, a purchase by the holder, where there is such a significant change in the nature of the investment or in the investment risks as to amount to a new investment. See Perez-Rubio v. Wyckoff, 718 F. Supp. 217 (S.D.N.Y. 1989). However, modifications in the rights of an investor that have been anticipated by the parties have been held not to amount to a sale. Department of Economic Dev. v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 683 F. Supp. 1463 (S.D.N.Y. 1988).

See also United States v. Wernes, 157 F.2d 797 (7th Cir. 1946) (offer to exchange beneficial trust certificates for limited partnership trust certificates in oil leases held to constitute a sale). Cf., generally, Hayes v. Sampson, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15034 (S.D.N.Y. 1980). In an action under § 16(b) of the Exchange Act, an exchange of an issuer's "old" debentures for new ones bearing a higher rate of return and longer term was not a sale in the absence of evidence that the new debentures were materially more valuable, or that the continuous investment represented by the debentures had been interrupted.

(n67)Footnote 67. See § 3.09 infra.

(n68)Footnote 68. See § 3.10 infra.

(n69)Footnote 69. Section 2(3) provides in pertinent part:

[T]he issue or transfer of a right or privilege, when originally issued or transferred with a security, giving the holder of such security the right to convert such security into another security... or giving a right to subscribe to another security of the same issuer or of another person, which right cannot be exercised until some future date, shall not be deemed to be an offer or sale of such other security. ... (emphasis added).

The legislative history of this portion of § 2(3) demonstrates the intention of Congress to avoid requiring registration of securities prior to the time they are actually offered to the public. It is at the time that warrants or rights become exercisable that any investment decision--the decision to exercise a right--is made. See H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 11 (1933).

Where warrants are immediately exercisable but, for tax or other reasons, will not be exercised for a specified period of time, the Commission has taken the position that both the warrants and the underlying shares must be registered. Sec. Act Rel. No. 3210, 1947 SEC LEXIS 1422 (Apr. 9, 1947) .

(n70)Footnote 70. Sec. Act Rel. No. 3210, 1947 SEC LEXIS 1422 (Apr. 9, 1947) . Immediately exercisable transferable warrants and the underlying stock must be registered. Usually, the registration statement includes the rights to provide for the sale of those rights by controlling persons and others.

It should also be kept in mind that all of these principles apply with equal force to conversion privileges. Thus, an offering of preferred shares that are immediately convertible into common shares constitutes an offering of the common. Where any security is immediately convertible into another, both must be registered at the time of the offering. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4162, 1959 SEC LEXIS 353 (1959) . "A security which is immediately convertible consists of the convertible security and a right to acquire the underlying security, thus involving a continuous offering by the issuer of the underlying security. ..." Id. Where a conversion cannot be effected until a date subsequent to the offering of the convertible security, there is no sale until that time. Whether registration is required at the time of conversion is considered in § 6B.02[4][d][ii] infra .

(n71)Footnote 71. See Registration of Rights Issuable Pursuant to Stockholder Rights Plans, SEC Interpretive Letter, [1987 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,411 (Jan. 7, 1987). The staff opined that rights issued to shareholders which involve substantially "out-of-the money" exercise prices, little likelihood of exercise, and which relate to stock that would be the subject of a registration statement in any event, would not be a "sale" of the rights or an "offer to sell" the underlying stock.

(n72)Footnote 72. 452 F.2d 871 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n73)Footnote 73. Diskin, 452 F.2d at 874 .

(n74)Footnote 74. 439 U.S. 551, 99 S. Ct. 790, 58 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1979) .

(n75)Footnote 75. Id. at 560, 99 S. Ct. at 797, 58 L. Ed. 2d at 817 (footnote omitted).

See also Bauman v. Bish, 571 F. Supp. 1054 (N.D. W. Va. 1983) (no sale of securities in involuntary participation in an employee stock ownership plan).

(n76)Footnote 76. Even before Daniel, the Commission took the position that stock bonus plans involving no "cash option" feature do not involve sales. See Howmedica, Inc., 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4084 (Oct. 27, 1971) (issuance of shares as bonuses to reward outstanding service was not a sale).

See also MCA Inc., 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 678 (May 26, 1992) (non-contributory stock bonus plan does not involve a sale); Midwest Grain Prods., Inc., 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1272 (Dec. 19, 1989) (non-contributory, involuntary stock bonus plan does not involve a sale); Frank B. Hall & Co., 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3583 (July 30, 1980) (distribution of shares pursuant to an executive incentive plan as "performance share awards" could be made without registration); PPG Indus., Inc., 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3850 (Sept. 19, 1980) (distribution of shares as awards for company growth and profitability would not involve a sale).

(n77)Footnote 77. Missouri Research Lab., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3513 (Aug. 29, 1972) .

(n78)Footnote 78. See discussion of stock dividends in § 2.02[2] supra .

In an early published opinion of the Assistant General Counsel, the Commission underscored the importance of the volitional act that evidences an investment decision, and thus a sale:

As to the question of finding a "sale" within the meaning of Section 2(3) of the Securities Act, it is our position that, wherever a plan involves an investment contract, or a certificate of interest or participation in a profit-sharing agreement and the employees have a choice whether or not to make contributions, there is obviously an "attempt or offer to dispose of ... a security ... for value." On the other hand, it is because of the language of Section 2(3) that we have taken the position in the past that no "offer" or "sale" is involved in the case of a non-contributory plan, where the employees are not requested to make any contributions, or in the case of a compulsory plan, where there is no element of volition on the part of employees whether or not to participate and to make contributions.

Op. Asst. Gen. Counsel, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 75,195 (1941).

(n79)Footnote 79. Yoder v. Orthomolecular Nutrition Institute, 751 F.2d 555, 559 (2d Cir. 1985) ; Rudinger v. Insurance Data Processing, Inc., 778 F. Supp. 1334 (E.D.Pa. 1991) .

(n80)Footnote 80. Feret v. Corestates Financial Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11512 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (employees who received incentive stock options satisfied purchaser/seller requirement for asserting claims under Exchange Act Section 10(b) and SEC Rule 10b-5 where agreement provided for exchange of services in return for options).

See also Rudinger v. Insurance Data Processing, Inc., 778 F.Supp. 1334 (E.D. Pa. 1991) ; Collins v. Rukin, 342 F.Supp. 1282 (D. Mass. 1972) .

(n81)Footnote 81. In re Cendant Corp. Sec. Lit., 76 F.Supp. 2d 539 (D.N.J. 1999) .

(n82)Footnote 82. See, e.g., Folz v. U.S. News & World Report, Inc., 627 F.Supp. 1143, 1157-58 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) ; Compass Group PLC, SEC No Action Letter (May 13, 1997).

See also In re Cendant Corp. Sec. Lit., 81 F. Supp. 2d 550 (D.N.J. 2000) (Employee's decision to accept or reject option modifications is not a voluntary investment decision to trade particular consideration in return for a financial interest).

The SEC has opined that a "sale" occurs in benefit plans where there is both an investment decision and the furnishing of value by a participating employee. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) . In most instances, stock bonus and similar plans evidence neither. The Commission noted, however, that to avoid "sale" determinations, a stock bonus plan should be directed to a relatively broad class of employees.

(n83)Footnote 83. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4790, 1965 SEC LEXIS 17 (July 13, 1965) . The Commission's position is equally relevant to the question of whether such plans create separate securities. Both issues turn on the extent of participation by the employer/issuer. In the area of employee benefit plans there is significant overlap between the issues of "security" and "sale." Most of the factors viewed as determinative of whether interests in a plan are securities also determine the existence of a sale. See, e.g., Diasonics, Inc., 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3286 (Nov. 29, 1982) . To find a "sale" in this context is to find an investment decision; see, e.g., Carter v. Signode Indus., Inc., 694 F. Supp 493 (N.D. Ill 1988) . Whether interests of employees in benefit plans are "securities" under the Securities Act is discussed in § 2.01[c][5] supra.

(n84)Footnote 84. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

But see Lubbock Radio Paging Services, Inc., 2000 SEC No-Act LEXIS 268 (Feb. 9, 2000) (Conversion of Company Contribution Accounts to Profit-Sharing Plan accounts pursuant to a special one-time election does not constitute the offer or sale of a security when participants in the profit-sharing plan will not be given the right to choose between receiving a distribution of the corporate contributions held in plan accounts or having them invested in company stock under the ESOP).

(n85)Footnote 85. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6281, 1981 SEC LEXIS 2260 (Jan. 15, 1981) .

(n86)Footnote 86. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4790, 1965 SEC LEXIS 17 (July 13, 1965) .

(n87)Footnote 87. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

See also Clifton Forge-Waynesboro Tel. Co., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4403 (Nov. 18, 1981) (customer stock purchase plan operated in accordance with Rel. No. 4790 parameters, except that customers rather than employees would be given the opportunity to participate, would not involve an "offer for sale" under § 2(3)); Hannaford Bros. Co., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4396 (Nov. 16, 1981) (dividend reinvestment and cash stock purchase plan operated in compliance with Rel. No. 4790 could be amended to allow for limited participation by non-shareholder employees without registration).

But see Dranetz Engineering Labs., 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2701 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983) , in which an issuer's plan to reimburse employees with a portion of the purchase price of company common stock acquired in the open market was viewed by the Staff as constituting a solicitation of an offer to buy. However, the Staff did opine that the issuer could give each employee ten shares of company stock to introduce the employees to the notion of stock ownership and that such a disposition of shares would be considered a bonus.

(n88)Footnote 88. See Bauman v. Bish, 571 F. Supp. 1054 (W. D. Va, 1983) . On allegations by union members of deception in connection with the presentation of a proposed employee stock ownership plan (a leveraged ESOP) formed for the purpose of acquiring stock of a new employee-owned company, the court made this observation in dismissing the claims:

In light of the extensive regulation of ESOPs under ERISA, the Court is not inclined to endorse a theory extending Securities Act coverage to the plans considered here. ... [T]o the extent that the instant issue involves a Union leadership recommendation to membership and an election proposed to modify an existing collective bargaining agreement, the Court believes that comprehensive legislation governing such activities limits the extension of the applicability of the Securities Acts to this sphere of labor relations.

571 F. Supp. at 1064-65 .

(n89)Footnote 89. See, e.g., Goldman Sachs Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1998 SEC N-Act LEXIS 852 (Aug. 24, 1998).

(n90)Footnote 90. SEC No-Action Letter, CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep P79,622 (May 24, 2007).

(n91)Footnote 91. See also MCA, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act LEXIS 678 (May 26, 1992) (Registration not required for American Depository Receipts issued under a voluntary, non-contributory bonus plan offered to a broad class of employees who did not bargain to contribute cash or other definable consideration); Farmers Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1995 SEC No-Act LEXIS 678 (Dec. 1, 1995) (Registration not required where a grant is made to employees who do not individually negotiate or bargain to contribute cash or other definable consideration).

(n92)Footnote 92. Principal exemptions for plans instituted in the typical setting include: § 3(a)(2) for certain single employer and self-employed plans (see § 3.03 infra); § 3(a)(8) for certain types of insured plans (see § 3.09 infra); § 3(a)(11) for plans which are limited to employees residing in the state in which the issuer is a resident or is incorporated or doing business (see § 3.12 infra); § 3(b) and Regulation A thereunder (see ch. 5 infra) where the maximum potential employees' contributions do not exceed $1,500,000 each year, or under provisions of Regulation D (see § 4.02A infra) for amounts up to $5,000,000, under controlled circumstances; and § 4(2) for plans that are offered privately to a limited number of qualified employees, also under controlled circumstances (see § 4.02 infra).

(n93)Footnote 93. 326 F. Supp. 943 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) .

(n94)Footnote 94. 490 F.2d 250 (4th Cir.) , cert. denied, 416 U.S. 937 (1973) .

See also Lowther v. United States, 455 F.2d 657 (10th Cir. 1972) (criminal action stemming from shell situation).

(n95)Footnote 95. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4982, 1969 SEC LEXIS 703 (1969) .

(n96)Footnote 96. Id.

(n97)Footnote 97. "This release does not attempt to deal with any problems attributable to more conventional spin-offs, which do not involve a process of purchase of securities by a publicly-owned company followed by their spin off and redistribution in the trading markets." Id. (emphasis added).

See also CACI, Inc., 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2688 (Oct. 12, 1977) (merger and spin-off deemed to constitute a registrable distribution); Fansteel, Inc; H.K.Porter, Co., Inc., 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2348 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983) (spin-off of 96% of equity interest in a 1934 Act reporting company, and utilizing a disclosure document, would not require registration); Mountain States Overthrust Oil & Gas, Inc., 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2768 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983) (proposed transfer of oil and gas properties to a newly formed corporation in exchange for the new corporation's common stock, 40% of which would then be distributed as a stock dividend to shareholders, could be carried out without registration since the distribution would be made pursuant to a disclosure document and the shares distributed would be registered under § 12 of the Exchange Act); Peoples Energy Corp., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3989 (Aug. 10, 1981) (spin-off of shares to create a new subsidiary could be carried out without registration).

(n98)Footnote 98. Id.

Focusing on market professionals as the first-line defense against the "shell game, the Commission adopted Rule 15c2-11 under the Exchange Act in 1971. Sec. Exch. Act Rel. No. 9310 (1971), as amended in Sec. Exch. Act Rel. No. 21470, effective Jan. 15, 1985, 1984 SEC LEXIS 2511 (1984) . The rule generally prohibits a broker-dealer from entering quotations for the purchase or sale of an over-the-counter security that has not previously been the subject of continuous quotations, unless (1) the issuer has filed a registration statement under the Securities Act or has a class of securities registered under the Exchange Act, and is current in filing reports required under the Exchange Act; or (2) the broker-dealer has obtained and makes available to any person on request certain relatively current financial information, and other information relating to the issuer. The rule requires, as a condition to entering quotes, that the broker-dealer have no reasonable basis for believing that information concerning the issuer of the securities is not true and correct, and that it was obtained from sources reasonably believed to be reliable.

(n99)Footnote 99. 821 F. Supp. 212 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n100)Footnote 100. See also Pell v. Weinstein, 759 F. Supp. 1107 (M.D. Pa. 1991) , aff'd, 961 F.2d 1568 (3d Cir. 1992) . Central to analyzing the impact of defining when a "sale" occurs for Section 12(2) of the Securities Act, reprinted in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B, liability determinations is the principal of causal connection between an information failure and a purchaser's decision. Although Section 12(2) of the Securities Act contains no express reliance requirement, Section 12(b) requires proof of loss causation. This and other critical aspects of liability under Section 12(a)(2) are discussed in § 9.04[4] infra.

(n101)Footnote 101. Section 13 is discussed more thoroughly in § 9.05 infra .

(n102)Footnote 102. Raiford v. BusLease, Inc., 825 F.2d 351, 352, 354-55 (11th Cir. 1987) . The "last integral act" interpretation on the scope of sale for purposes of Section 12(1) actions differs from the "commitment" principle articulated in Radiation Dynamics, Inc. v. Goldmuntz, 464 F.2d 876 (2d Cir. 1972) , with the latter being construed as more appropriate to limitations on antifraud remedies. Considering a registration-related (§ 5) violations as carrying strict liability under § 12(1), the Raiford court concluded that the definition of "sale" should be given its broadest interpretation, so as to cover all sales activity, including that which occurs after the date of contract or commitment.

(n103)Footnote 103. See, e.g., LaSee v. Johnson, 991 F.2d 801 (8th Cir. 1993) (outstanding offer to repurchase securities did not alter the fact that a security sale is complete when title transfers to the purchaser); Holloway v. Combined Equities, Inc., 628 F. Supp. 59 (M.D. La. 1986) (sale took place on the date of agreement between the parties on the object and price, and not when final payment was made on a note given for the purchase price).

The notion of "continuing" offers or sales may be advanced as the basis for tolling the running of the § 13 limitations period. But see Davis v. Whatley, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19175 (N.D. Ga. 1985) .

(n104)Footnote 104. Cook v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 726 F. Supp. 151 (S.D.Tex. 1989) ; but see Kagan v. Edison Bros. Stores, Inc., 907 F.2d 690 (7th Cir. 1990) (Unenforceable oral agreement to purchase securities is not a "contract" within the definition of sale for purposes of the Exchange Act antifraud provisions).

(n105)Footnote 105. Southwest Realty Ltd. v. Daske, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9497 (N.D. Tex. May 9, 1990) .

28 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 3.syn

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.syn Synopsis to Chapter 3: Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

§ 3.01 Introduction

§ 3.02 Availability of Exemption; Burden of Proof

§ 3.03 Securities of Governments, Banks, and Employee Benefit Plans--Section 3(a)(2)

[1] Government Securities

[a] Federal Government.

[b] State and Local Governments.

[2] Industrial Development Bonds

[3] Bank Securities

[a] Bank Issued Securities.

[b] Common Trust Funds.

[c] Foreign Banks.

[d] International Development Banks.

[4] Employee Benefit Plans

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 3.syn

[a] Keogh Plans.

§ 3.04 Short-Term Commercial Paper--Section 3(a)(3)

§ 3.05 Securities of Charitable Organizations--Section 3(a)(4)

§ 3.06 Securities of Savings and Loan Associations and Similar Institutions--Section 3(a)(5)

§ 3.07 Securities of Railroad (Common Carrier) Equipment Trusts--Section 3(a)(6)

§ 3.08 Certificates of Receivers and Trustees--Section 3(a)(7)

§ 3.09 Insurance Policies and Annuity Contracts--Section 3(a)(8)

§ 3.10 Voluntary Exchanges Between Issuer and Security Holders--Section 3(a)(9)

[1] In General

[2] Statutory Requirements

[a] Single Issuer.

[b] Exchange of Securities.

[c] Existing Security Holders Exclusively.

[d] No Commission or other Remuneration for Soliciting the Exchange.

[e] Good Faith Exchange.

[3] Resales

§ 3.11 Securities Issued in Judicially or Administratively Approved Exchanges--Section 3(a)(10)

[1] In General

[2] Statutory Requirements

[a] Approval Authority.

[b] Fairness Hearing.

[3] Resales

§ 3.12 Intrastate Offerings--Section 3(a)(11)

[1] In General

[2] Statutory/Rule 147 Requirements

[a] Part of an Issue.

[b] Offers and Sales to Residents Only.

[c] Issuer Residence.

[d] Issuer Doing Business Within.

[e] Use of Proceeds.

[3] Precautionary Measures

[4] Resales

[5] Location of Underwriters and Brokers

§ 3.13 Securities Issued in Connection with Certain Bank Holding Company Acquisitions -- Section 3(a)(12)

§ 3.14 Securities Issued by Church Plans, Companies or Accounts that are Excluded from the Definition of an Investment Company

§ 3.15 Security Futures Products and Standardized Options

§ 3.16 Section 3(b) General Exemption Authority

§ 3.17 Section 3(c) Exemption Authority

Robert N. Rapp, Esq. n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *.

This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

29 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.01

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.01 Introduction

Exemptions from registration requirements of the Securities Act of 1933 ("Securities Act") are available for certain classes of securities and certain transactions in securities as defined in the statutes and rules. Although an exemption may be available under the Securities Act, other securities laws may apply to aspects of a proposed transaction. For example, the Trust Indenture Act or the Investment Company Act may apply. If so, a determination must be made as to whether an exemption is available under such other laws. More commonly, counsel must consider whether similar exemptions also exist under state Blue Sky laws. n1 Although much state authority to require registration and qualification of securities offerings deemed national in character was preempted by the National Securities Market Improvements Act of 1996 (NSMIA), n2 the availability of a federal exemption for securities or transactions under the Securities Act does not provide any exemption under state securities laws for securities or offerings that remain subject to state authority.

In the scheme of exemptions under the Securities, Section 3(a) of the Act exempts certain securities from the provisions of the Securities Act, while Section 4 exempts certain securities transactions, but not the securities themselves. n3 This distinction is important because the exempt status of a particular security remains with that security as long as it exists, whereas the exemption of a transaction applies only to the qualifying transaction and not automatically to any subsequent transaction. The distinction is also important because certain exemptions under Section 3 are actually transaction exemptions.

Also, in the exemptive scheme only Sections 3(a)(2) through 3(a)(8) and Sections 3(a)(12) through 3(a)(14) provide exemptions based on the nature of the securities themselves and, thus, afford so-called permanent exemptions. Subsections 3(a)(9), 3(a)(10), 3(a)(11), 3(b), and 3(c) on the other hand provide exemptions for transactions and belong more properly in Section 4 because it is clear that Congressional focus was on transaction circumstances rather than particular characteristics of securities themselves. n4 The Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC" or "Commission") early on took the position that only Sections 3(a)(2) through 3(a)(8) are actual securities exemptions. In an early release, the General Counsel of the Commission stated: n5

[T]he fact that the securities in question fall within section 3(a) does not necessarily preclude consideration of the necessity of their registration before certain transactions therein can be effected. Sections 3(a)(2) to 3(a)(8) inclusive describe classes of securities which are of such an intrinsic nature that Congress felt that, regardless of the character of the transaction in which they have been or are to be issued or publicly offered, their registration was not necessary for the protection of investors... [T]here is nothing in the intrinsic nature of securities falling within Section 3(a)(1) or Section 3(a)(9) which justifies their permanent exemption from registration.

Although the General Counsel referred to sections 3(a)(1) n6 and 3(a)(9), these remarks apply equally to the sections 3(a)(10) and 3(a)(11) exemptions n7 as well as sections 3(b) and 3(c).

There is an important caveat here. Qualification for any security exemption established under section 3 of the Securities Act may require an assessment of transactional circumstances. Section 3(a)(3), for example, exempts commercial paper and is considered to be a permanent exemption that is controlled by the characteristics of the security itself. Nevertheless, widespread abuse of the exemption for the offer and sale of short term, high risk promissory notes and other evidences of indebtedness possessing none of the quality characteristics implicit in section 3(a)(3) led courts and regulators to construe the exemption as applying narrowly to high grade commercial paper. n8 Now, as a matter of case law and regulatory interpretations, there are decidedly transactional characteristics that are applied in determining the availability of the exemption, as well as an examination of particular characteristics of the instrument involved. Section 3(a)(4), the exemption for securities issued by charitable and other eleemosynary institutions or organizations, is not a blanket exemption. The qualifying characteristics of an issuer may be much in issue, and particular circumstances in which an offering is made may control its availability. n9 Securities exemptions are based on the notion that certain instruments have risk-reducing or other characteristics that eliminate the need for investor protections created by the securities laws. Where those characteristics are altered, or are indeed not to be found at all, an ostensible exemption for the security will give way to the reality of the instrument itself and the circumstances in which it is used.

In any case, if the securities themselves are exempt, whether the transaction in which they are offered or sold is exempt is immaterial. However, if a transaction is exempt but the securities are not, each future transaction involving the securities must also qualify as an exempt transaction if registration is to be avoided. For example, if securities are sold under the section 3(a)(11) intrastate exemption, future sales of those securities are not exempt unless they also qualify as exempt transactions. This is because the exemption does not rely on the nature of the security, but rather on the circumstances of the particular transaction. If the securities in the intrastate sale were themselves considered to be exempt (as they might appear to be since the exemption is authorized by section 3(a), which is entitled "Exempted Securities"), any purchaser could immediately resell to a resident of another state without registration or other limitation, a result clearly contrary to the intent of the Securities Act and the Section 3(a)(11) exemption.

An important limitation on the exemptions under Section 3 is that, with one exception, the exemptions do not extend to the civil liability and fraud sections of the Securities Act. Section 12(a)(2), the civil liability section, is applicable to all securities except those exempt under section 3(a)(2), which exempts the securities of governments, banks, and certain employee benefit plans, and section 3(a)(14), covering qualified security futures products. n10 Section 17, the general antifraud provision of the Securities Act, is applicable to all securities, regardless of their exempt status. n11 Because the language of Section 3(a) specifically provides an exemption only from the provisions of the Securities Act, except as otherwise provided in Sections 12(a)(2) and 17, exempt securities under Section 3(a) are also subject to Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "Exchange Act"), and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder. n12 Accordingly, where an exemption applies, counsel must give consideration to what disclosures should be made to purchasers in order to protect against claims under the civil liability and antifraud provisions.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation, Chs. 7-9 (Matthew Bender 2003) for a detailed discussion of securities and transactions exempt under state securities laws.

(n2)Footnote 2. Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (codified as amended in scattered sections of 15 U.S.C.).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Ch. 4 infra for an analysis of exempt transactions under § 4 of the Act. The Securities Act is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

(n4)Footnote 4. H.R. Rep. No. 1838, 73d Cong., 2d Sess. 40 (1934).

(n5)Footnote 5. Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-646, 1936 SEC LEXIS 484 (Feb. 3, 1936) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Section 3(a)(1) was deleted by Pub. L. No. 100-181, § 203, 101 Stat. 1249 (1987) because it applied to pending offers of securities at the time of the enactment of the 1933 Act and no longer had any relevance.

(n7)Footnote 7. Sections 3(a)(9) and 3(a)(10) were originally contained in § 4(3); § 3(a)(11) was originally § 5(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. The § 3(a)(3) exemption for commercial paper, and the extent to which it has been limited, is discussed in detail in § 3.04 infra.

(n9)Footnote 9. Section 3(a)(4) and the exemption for securities of eleemosynary institutions and organizations is discussed in § 3.05 infra.

(n10)Footnote 10. Section 12(a)(2) provides: "Any person who... offers or sells a security (whether or not exempted by the provisions of section 3, other than paragraphs (2) and (14) of subsection (a) thereof)... ."

(n11)Footnote 11. Section 17(c) states: "The exemptions provided in section 3 shall not apply to the provisions of this section."

(n12)Footnote 12. Section 3(a) provides: Except as hereinafter expressly provided, the provisions of this title [Securities Act of 1933] shall not apply to any of the following classes of securities.

See Leoni v. Rogers, 719 F. Supp. 555 (E.D.Mich. 1989) , in which the court rejected the argument that a purely intrastate transaction was not governed by federal securities laws and concluded that Section 3(a)(11) only exempts securities from the registration and prospectus requirements of the Securities Act and not from Section 10(b) or Rule 10b-5; Kelly v. West Printing Co., 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9199 (E.D. Mich. 1974) , in which the court stated that the plaintiff was correct that the Section 3(a) exemption could not possibly bar a Section 10(b) claim under the Exchange Act, because, under the language of the statute, the exemption is only from the provisions of the Securities Act.

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1974 SEC LEXIS 3579 (Jan. 7, 1974) : "Section 3(a)(11) is not an exemption from the civil liability provision of Section 12(2) or the antifraud provisions of Section 17 of the Act or of Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934."

30 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.02

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.02 Availability of Exemption; Burden of Proof

Prior to the offer or sale of an interest to the public, however made, counsel must ascertain whether such interests proposed to be offered or sold qualify for an exemption under the provisions of Section 3. If there is any doubt as to whether a specific interest qualifies as an exempt security, counsel may consider presenting the facts and circumstances to the SEC Division of Corporation Finance for an informal interpretation. The Commission has indicated that in some, but not necessarily all cases, the staff will respond to counsel's request for a "no-action" letter. Under this procedure, counsel presents the facts and circumstances in written form, gives an opinion that, based upon the information supplied, the exemption in question is available, and requests the staff to confirm that no enforcement action would be recommended if the transaction as described proceeds. If the staff of the Commission agrees, it will issue a no-action letter stating that, on the basis of the facts presented and in reliance on the opinion of counsel for the issuer (or other seller), the staff will not recommend that the Commission take enforcement action if the offer and sale of the securities proceed without registration under the Securities Act. Note, however, that this determination is not a conclusion of law and the Commission is not necessarily bound by it. n1

In all cases, the person who claims an exemption has the burden of proving its availability. A general rule of statutory construction requires that the one who claims the benefits of an exception from the provisions of a statute must prove its availability as to the particular facts and circumstances. n2 In deciding the availability of a Section 4 exemption, the United States Supreme Court stated in SEC v. Ralston Purina: n3 "Keeping in mind the broadly remedial purposes of federal securities legislation, imposition of the burden of proof on an issuer who would plead the exemption seems to us fair and reasonable." n4 Thus, once a plaintiff has introduced evidence that the registration provisions of the Securities Act have been violated, the burden then shifts to the defendant to show entitlement to an exemption. n5 Of course, this result applies not just to issuers, but to all those who claim an exemption under the Act. n6

FOOTNOTES:

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.02

(n1)Footnote 1. The Staff will not issue no-action letters with respect to certain transactions. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6253, 45 FR 72644 (Oct. 28, 1980) . For example, the Staff will not express any view on the availability of the § 3(a)(4) non-profit security exemption unless an issuer can demonstrate that it has received a favorable ruling from the Internal Revenue Service that it qualifies as a tax exempt organization. The Commission also announced in 1986 that it will no longer issue No-Action letters with respect to the § 3(a)(2) exemption for securities of branches or agencies of foreign banks. See § 3.03[3] infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See F.T.C. v. Morton Salt, 334 U.S. 37, 44-45, 68 S. Ct. 822, 92 L. Ed. 1196 (1948) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Ralston Purina, 346 U.S. at 126, 73 S. Ct. at 985, 97 L.Ed. at 1499 .

(n5)Footnote 5. SEC v. Murphy, 626 F.2d 633, 641 (9th Cir. 1980) .

See also SEC v. Cavanagh, 445 F.3d 105, 111, n.13 (2d Cir. 2006) ("Once a prima facie case has been made, the defendant bears the burden of proving the applicability of an exemption"); In re NBW Commercial Paper Litigation, 813 F.Supp. 7, 17 (D.D.C. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Gilligan, Will & Co. v. S.E.C., 267 F. 2d 461, 466 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896, 80 S. Ct. 200 (1959) . The court found that the burden of proof was on the broker-dealer who claimed a transaction exemption under § 4(1).

31 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.03

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.03 Securities of Governments, Banks, and Employee Benefit Plans--Section 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act is a complex, multi-part exemption from registration provisions of the act for securities that have special quality characteristics by reason of the issuer involved, and a presumption that protection of investors through the imposition of registration requirements is not needed. Securities issued or guaranteed by banks, for example, are within the protective umbrella of another regulatory scheme. Securities issued in connection with certain types of employee benefit plans involving a single trust fund or collective trust fund maintained by a bank likewise fall within the exemption. The most common focus under section 3(a)(2) is on "government securities," which encompass a considerable range of federal, state and local government issuers or guarantors, which are discussed in further detail in subpart [1] below.

[1] Government Securities

Section 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act provides an exemption from registration requirements for securities issued or guaranteed by federal and state governments, and their political subdivisions, agencies or instrumentalities. Section 3(a)(2) n1 exempts

Any security issued or guaranteed by the United States or any territory thereof, or by the District of Columbia, or by any State of the United States, or by any political subdivision of a State or Territory, or by any public instrumentality of one or more States or Territories, or by any person controlled or supervised by and acting as an instrumentality of the Government of the United States pursuant to authority granted by the Congress of the United States; or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing... n2

The section 3(a)(2) exemption is based on the presumed creditworthiness of government issuers or government guarantors, and a recognition that the protections afforded by registration of such securities are not needed given the quality of the securities themselves. Events associated with the world financial markets crisis, particularly in regard to

"government sponsored enterprises" discussed further below, have challenged the validity of that presumption. Additionally, unlike other securities exempt from registration under section 3(a) of the Act, securities covered by section 3(a)(2) are excluded from the private antifraud remedy prescribed in section 12(a)(2) of the Act. n3 However, there is no exclusion from other general antifraud provisions applicable to these securities. Section 17(a) of the Act n4 expressly makes clear that exemption from registration under any part of section 3 of the Act does not exempt the security from coverage of the antifraud prohibition. n5 And the private right of action implied under section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act, and SEC Rule 10b-5, is available to purchasers and sellers without regard to any exemption from registration provided in the Securities Act.

[a] Federal Government. The exemption applying to securities issued or guaranteed by the federal government includes all agencies and instrumentalities of the government. n6 Thus, for example, the securities issued or guaranteed by the Government National Mortgage Association and the Federal National Mortgage Association are exempt, even though the latter is a government sponsored private corporation (government sponsored enterprise), and the securities of which are not "guaranteed" as such by the United States government. n7 The scope of the exemption under section 3(a)(2) for securities which are guaranteed by the U.S. government is illustrated by the no-action response in Postal Square Limited Partnership, n8 in which the SEC staff confirmed that the exemption would apply to non-recourse bonds issued to finance the renovation of a U.S. Post Office facility. n9

This exemption for securities issued or guaranteed by the federal government has been broadened by provisions of other federal legislation that specifically add to the exemption under Section 3(a)(2). These additional exemptions have been carved out because of other legislative provisions that, in effect, guarantee the payment of the principal and interest on a debt security. Section 304(a)(5) of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, in effect, adds to the language of Section 3(a)(2) by exempting securities issued pursuant to a mortgage indenture to which a contract of insurance under the National Housing Act exists. n10 Likewise, section 304(a)(10) of The Trust Indenture Act exempts any mortgage or trust deed indenture as to which a contract of insurance under title XI of the National Housing Act is in effect. n11

[b] State and Local Governments. The exemption for securities of states and their political subdivisions also includes the authorities and districts created by or under the power of the states. n12 These securities are generally grouped under the term "municipal securities." Congress intended for the exemption to be broadly available, as indicated in the House Committee Report:

The term "political subdivision" carries with it the exemption of such securities as county, town, or municipal obligations, as well as school district, drainage district, and levee district, and other similar bonds. The line drawn by the expression "political subdivision" corresponds generally with the line drawn by the courts as to what obligations of States, their units and instrumentalities created by them, are exempted from Federal taxation. n13

Municipal securities are generally classified into two categories: general obligation bonds, which are backed by the full faith and credit of the governmental body; and revenue bonds, which are backed by the revenues of the project for which the bonds are sold. In the latter case, the terms of the bond indenture generally limit recourse specifically to the revenues generated by the project. n14

In general, a municipal bond exempt under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Internal Revenue Code"), will also be exempt under Section 3(a)(2). The Commission has taken the position that the exemption is available where the municipal guarantee is absolute and unconditional. n15 The Securities Acts Amendments of 1975 n16 subjected municipal bond dealers to registration and other regulation under the Exchange Act. n17 In addition, those amendments also created a new self regulatory organization, the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board, which has created rules for the municipal securities industry, but which is expressly prohibited by the Exchange Act from requiring issuers of municipal securities to file pre-offering documents with the Commission. n18 In 1984, the Government Accounting Standards Board (GASB) was created to establish and improve standards of state and local governmental accounting and financial reporting that will result in useful information for users of financial reports and guide and educate the public, including issuers, auditors, and users of those financial reports. The GASB promulgates generally accepted accounting principles for municipalities, although compliance with its principles is voluntary. Compliance with GASB's standards, however, is enforced through the laws of some individual states and through the audit process, when auditors render opinions on the fairness of financial statement presentations in conformity with GAAP.

[2] Industrial Development Bonds

Industrial development bonds, one type of municipal revenue bond, are usually issued by a political subdivision of a state to finance a specific industrial project owned by the municipality, which is then leased to one or more private companies. The bonds are amortized by the application of lease payments received from the private companies. Importantly, however, SEC Rule 131 under the Securities Act n19 provides that any part of an obligation evidenced by any bond, note, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness issued by any governmental unit specified in section 3(a)(2) of the Act which is payable from payments to be made in respect of property or money which is or will be used, under a lease, sale, or loan arrangement, by or for industrial or commercial enterprise, is deemed to be a separate security issued by the lessee or obligor under the lease, sale or loan arrangement. In general, Rule 131 results in the section 3(a)(2) exemption being unavailable to cover the separate security. The issuer of the separate security is the private party who is the lessee or obligor under the lease, sale, or loan arrangement. n20

However, Rule 131 deems obligations not to be separate securities where the obligation is payable from the general revenues of a governmental entity that has other resources for such payment, the governmental entity has ownership and control of the project, or where a private enterprise is a lessee with control over a facility but the governmental entity has ownership and control of the project as a whole. n21

Subsequent to the promulgation of Rule 131, small issues of industrial development bonds were exempted by separate language within Section 3(a)(2), added by Section 401 of the Employment Security Amendments of 1970: n22

[A]ny security which is an industrial development bond (as defined in section 103(c)(2) of Title 26 [Internal Revenue Code of 1954]) the interest on which is excludable from gross income under section 103(a)(1) of such Code if, by reason of the application of paragraph (4) or (6) of section 103(c) of such Code (determined as if paragraphs (4)(A), (5), and (7) were not included in such section 103(c)), paragraph (1) of such section 103(c) does not apply to such security... .

This portion of Section 3(a)(2), in effect, exempts certain small issue industrial revenue bonds, which under the current provisions of the Internal Revenue Code cannot exceed $10 million. Generally, for such small issues, if the interest on the bonds is excludable from gross income under the Internal Revenue Code, the issue itself will be exempt from the registration requirements of the Securities Act. n23 However, a guarantee of an exempt industrial development bond has been viewed as a separate security. n24 Also, where an obligor under a lease securing exempt industrial development bonds intended to solicit the bondholders for an assignment of the obligations, it was found that the solicitation could be deemed to involve the offer of a security. n25

[3] Bank Securities

[a] Bank Issued Securities. Section 3(a)(2) provides an exemption for "[A]ny security issued or guaranteed by any bank..." n26 The term "bank," except as used in connection with common n27 and collective trust funds, n28 is defined as follows:

For the purposes of this paragraph [Section 3(a)(2)], a security issued or guaranteed by a bank shall not include any interest or participation in any collective trust fund maintained by a bank; and the term "bank" means any national bank, or any banking institution organized under the laws of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, the business of which is substantially confined to banking and is supervised by the State or territorial banking commission or similar official... .

This exemption is based on the fact that banks are subject to extensive government regulation, both federal and state. n29 However, since there are many institutions that engage in financing activities that are not so heavily regulated, the limiting language in the above definition has been fairly strictly construed. n30 The question as to what institutions are entitled to the exemption is partially answered by the limiting language in the above definition, "the business of which is substantially confined to banking." Securities of finance companies, small loan companies, investment banks, and bank holding companies are outside the definition for the reason that such institutions are not in the strict sense primarily engaged in the banking business and, in most cases, cannot use the word "bank" in their names. n31 The exemption for securities guaranteed by a bank has been interpreted to include irrevocable letters of credit, without regard to whether a technical guaranty relationship exists. n32 However, the Commission has refused to issue a No-Action Letter in a situation where a county proposed to issue industrial development bonds where the principal of and interest on such bonds was guaranteed by a private business corporation. n33 Travelers checks, which are guaranteed as to payment by a bank, are also exempted securities under Section 3(a)(2). n34

It is noted that, even though the securities of a banking institution are exempt from registration under Section 3(a)(2), certain bank activities relating to securities may not be exempt from the definition of a "broker" or a "dealer" under the Exchange Act. n35

[b] Common Trust Funds. Section 3(a)(2) describes common trust funds of banks which are exempt as follows:

any interest or participation in any common trust fund or similar fund maintained by a bank exclusively for the collective investment and reinvestment of assets contributed thereto by such bank in its capacity as trustee, executor, administrator or guardian

Section 3(a)(2) further defines the term "bank" as it pertains to common trust funds as follows:

[I]n the case of a common trust fund or similar fund, or a collective trust fund, the term "bank" has the same meaning as in the Investment Company Act of 1940.

The definition of a bank in Section 2(a)(5) of the Investment Company Act is broader than that contained within Section 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act in that it includes trust companies that are subject to the same regulatory oversight as banks. n36

A common trust fund is maintained by a bank as an investment vehicle solely for trusts, estates, or similar entities for which the bank acts in a bona fide fiduciary capacity. n37 The exemption for common trust funds clearly exists in recognition of the fiduciary activities of banks and trust companies as trustees, executors, administrators, and guardians. In all such cases, the institutions are exercising investment discretion, although they may employ an investment adviser so long as the final decisions are made by the institution. This exemption does not and need not extend to the custodial accounts of such institutions because, with respect to those accounts, investment discretion remains with the account owner and the institution's actions are limited to safekeeping and clerical tasks. Under Rule 132, the Commission has expanded the meaning of "common trust fund" to include those funds that are maintained for the collective investment of banks that are part of an affiliated group, as defined in Section 1504(a) of the Internal Revenue Code. n38

The Commission has provided no-action letters in connection with various savings trusts designed to be qualified state tuition programs within the meaning of Section 529 of the Internal Revenue Code. A state university organizes the trust plan, the university, as trustee for the savings trust, enters into participation agreements with participants in the program for the benefit of designated beneficiaries and the participants retain ownership of contributions made to the program for investment by the trustee. The Commission has issued several no action letters allowing such trusts an exemption

pursuant to Section 3(a)(2). n39

[c] Foreign Banks. Because of the increasing activity of foreign banks in the United States and the steadily increasing demand for No-Action Letters, the Commission issued a release in 1986 addressing the question whether the securities of such institutions can qualify for the banking exemption under Section 3(a)(2). n40 The question derives from the fact that foreign banks are doing business in the United States, under a license, as branches and agencies of foreign banks, not as separate legal entities. They are not national banks or banks organized under the laws of any state and, therefore, technically do not fall within the definition of a bank under Section 3(a)(2). However, favorable No-Action letters had been issued prior to the 1986 release where, in the opinion of counsel, the nature and extent of federal and state regulation and supervision of a foreign bank were substantially equivalent to that applicable to domestic banks doing business in the same jurisdiction.

In the 1986 release, the Commission specifically adopted the position that it deems a branch or agency of a foreign bank located in the United States to be a national bank or a banking institution organized under the laws of any state, territory, or the District of Columbia provided that there is substantially equivalent regulation. The Commission no longer issues No-Action Letters on this question; banks must rely on the opinion of counsel as to whether they meet the criteria set forth in their lease.

[d] International Development Banks. Congress has specifically added securities issued or guaranteed by certain international development banks to the list of securities exempted under Section 3(a)(2). These international development banks are: the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, n41 the Inter-American Development Bank, n42 the Asian Development Bank, n43 the African Development Bank, n44 the International Finance Corporation, n45 and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. n46 However, each of these entities is subject to special reporting requirements, which are contained in Regulations BW, n47 IA, n48 AD, n49 AFDB, n50 IFC, n51 and EBRD. n52

[4] Employee Benefit Plans

The portion of Section 3(a)(2) that exempts participations in employee benefit plans includes three different vehicles for such plans: single trust funds, n53 collective trust funds maintained by a bank, n54 and insurance company contracts. n55 Keogh Plans are specifically excluded, as they are addressed in separate language under Section 3(a)(2). The statutory language in Section 3(a)(2) exempting employee benefit plans is as follows: n56

[A]ny interest or participation in a single trust fund, or in a collective trust fund maintained by a bank, or any security arising out of a contract issued by an insurance company, which interest, participation, or security is issued in connection with

(A) a stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan which meets the requirements for qualification under section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954... ,

(B) an annuity plan which meets the requirements for the deduction of the employer's contributions under section 404(a)(2) of such Code or

(C) a governmental plan as defined in section 414(d) of such Code which has been established by an employer for the exclusive benefit of its employees or their beneficiaries for the purpose of distributing to such employees or their beneficiaries the corpus and income of the funds accumulated under such plan, if under such plan it is impossible, prior to the satisfaction of all liabilities with respect to such employees and their beneficiaries, for any part of the corpus or income to be used for, or diverted to, purposes other than the exclusive benefit of such employees or their beneficiaries, other than any plan described in clause (A), (B), or (C) of this paragraph:

(i) the contributions under which are held in a single trust fund or in a separate account maintained by an insurance company for a single employer and under which an amount in excess of the employer's contribution is allocated to the purchase of securities (other than interests or participations in the trust or separate account itself) issued by the employer or any company directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the employer,

(ii) which covers employees some or all of whom are employees within the meaning of section 401(c)(1) of such Code [Keogh Plans], or

(iii) which is a plan funded by an annuity contract described in section 403(b) of such Code [Annuity Plans of IRC § 501(c)(3) tax exempt organizations].

With respect to most employee benefit plans, two types of interests are distinguishable: the interests of the plans themselves in investment vehicles; n57 and the interests of the employees in the plans. As to the latter, the initial question is whether employee interests or participations in such plans are securities within the meaning of Section 2(1) of the Securities Act. n58 If not, they are outside the purview of the Securities Act and even the anti-fraud provisions of the securities laws are inapplicable. The Commission has indicated that interests in Employee Stock Ownership Plans ("ESOPs") are securities exempted under Section 3(a)(2). n59 In International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Daniel, n60 the Supreme Court held that the federal securities laws did not apply to employee interests in a noncontributory, compulsory pension plan. Subsequent to Daniel, the Commission expressed the view that employee interests in an employee benefit plan are securities only when the interests in the plan are both voluntary and contributory. n61

Section 3(a)(2), as it was amended in 1970, codified in part the Commission's long standing administrative position that interests or participations issued in connection with employee benefit plans need not be registered unless employee-contributed funds are used to purchase employer securities. n62 Although the statutory language does not address whether interests of participants in plans covered by Section 3(a)(2) are exempt from registration, the staff of the Commission continues to view the exemption as applying to both the employee benefit plan's interest in a funding vehicle and the interests of participants in the plan itself, in spite of dictum in Daniel disapproving such a broad view of the exemption. n63

The term "bank" in the clause "a collective trust fund maintained by a bank" is a bank as defined in Section 2(a)(5) of the Investment Company Act and therefore, includes trust companies. n64 The term "insurance company" is defined in Section 2(13) of the Act to mean a company organized as an insurance company, subject to the supervision of an insurance commissioner of a state or territory, and whose primary activity is the writing of insurance or reinsurance. n65

The Section 3(a)(2) exemption contains three exclusions: the first relates to interests in plans, contributions to which are held in a single trust fund or separate account for a "single employer" and which permit amounts in excess of the employer's contribution to be used to purchase securities of the employer or its affiliates; the second relates to interests in Keogh plans; n66 and the third relates to annuity plans of charitable organizations that are tax exempt under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

[a] Keogh Plans. Separate language within Section 3(a)(2) allows the Commission to exempt Keogh Plans, also known as H.R. 10 plans, to the extent that it finds it necessary or appropriate. This portion of Section 3(a)(2) is as follows:

The Commission, by rules and regulations or order, shall exempt from the provisions of section 5 of this title any interest or participation issued in connection with a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan which covers employees some or all of whom are employees within the meaning of section 401(c) (1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, if and to the extent that the Commission determines this to be necessary or appropriate in the public interest and consistent with the protection of investors and the purposes fairly intended by the policy and provisions of this title.

The Commission has made exemptions for Keogh Plans available under Rule 180. The rule exempts from the registration requirements of Section 5 plans that are "qualified plans" under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 n67 and unqualified plans that meet certain criteria. The Rule includes a provision that the employer or its financial adviser have sufficient expertise to adequately represent the interests of the employer and its employees in the plan. n68 When Rule 180 was adopted, the Commission stated that the exemption applied both to the interest of the plan in an investment account and the employee's voluntary contributions to the plan. n69

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. §77c(a)(2) (2000).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter (Nov. 24, 2008). As an example of the application of section 3(a)(2), the SEC Staff granted no-action advice to the FDIC to confirm the section 3(a)(2) exempt status of certain senior unsecured debt to be issued by eligible entities pursuant to the Debt Guaranty Program component of the Temporary Liquidity Guarantee Program of the FDIC. Confirming the exemption, the Staff observed:

The Final Rule provides that the FDIC will fully and unconditionally guarantee Senior Unsecured Debt issued between October 14, 2008 and June 30, 2009 by eligible entities pursuant to the Debt Guarantee Program component of the Temporary Liquidity Guarantee Program, through the earlier of the maturity of such Senior Unsecured Debt or June 30, 2012 and on the terms and conditions set forth in the Final Rule. The Division concurs that such Senior Unsecured Debt that is fully and unconditionally guaranteed by the FDIC under the Debt Guarantee Program component of the Temporary Liquidity Guarantee Program and has a maturity that ends on or before June 30, 2012 will be considered guaranteed by an instrumentality of the United States for purposes of Section 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act of 1933.

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. §77k(a)(2) (2000). Subject to certain conditions, Section 12(a)(2) creates an express private right of action for a purchaser to obtain rescission or damages as a rescission equivalent from a person who offers or sells a security by means of a prospectus or oral communication, which includes an untrue statement of a material fact or omits to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading. However, section 12(a)(2) expressly excludes securities exempted by Section 3(a)(2) of the Act from coverage.

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. §77p(a) (2000).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Securities Act §17(c), 15 U.S.C. §77p(c) (2000) ("The exemptions provided in S shall not apply to the provisions of this section").

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Dau v. Federal Land Bank of Omaha, 627 F. Supp. 346 (N.D. Iowa. 1985) (Stock issued by a federal land bank association is exempt from registration under sSection 3(a)(2) because the association is an instrumentality of the United States).

See also Creech v. Federal Land Bank of Wichita, 647 F. Supp. 1097 (D. Colo. 1986) (Banks in the federal Farm Credit System have federal agency status).

(n7)Footnote 7. 12 U.S.C.A. § 1717(c)(1) (1989).

See Bache Halsey Stuart, Inc. v. Affiliated Mortgage Investment, Inc., 445 F. Supp. 644 (N.D. Ga. 1977) (future delivery of mortgage-backed certificates guaranteed by GNMA is within the 3(a)(2) exemption because the delivery does not constitute a separate contract); E.F. Hutton Co., 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 990 (May 3, 1976) (portions of loans guaranteed by Farmers Home Administration are exempt from the registration requirements both when the loans are made and when they are marketed); IDS Mortgage Corporation, 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4090 (Nov. 29, 1971) (both GNMA certificates and the bank accounts in which deposited funds could be automatically used to purchase such certificates were exempt).

(n8)Footnote 8. SEC No_Action Letter (May 24, 1990).

(n9)Footnote 9. See also DOE Guaranteed Loans, SEC No-Action Letter (June 26, 1979) (Portions of loans sold by private lenders that were guaranteed by the U.S. Department of Energy would qualify for the section 3(a)(2) exemption).

But see SBA Guaranteed Loans, SEC No-Action Letter (Nov. 8, 1974) (The guaranteed portion of Small Business Administration Loans made by non-bank lenders to business borrowers would not qualify under section 3(a)(2) because the SBA guarantee did not protect borrowers in all circumstances).

(n10)Footnote 10. Section 304(a)(5), 15 U.S.C. § 77ddd(a)(5) (2000), provides:

[A]ny security issued under a mortgage indenture as to which a contract of insurance under the National Housing Act is in effect; and any such security shall be deemed to be exempt from the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 to the same extent as though such security were specifically enumerated in section 3(a)(2) of such Act...

(n11)Footnote 11. Section 304(a)(10), 15 U.S.C. § 77ddd(a)(10) (2000), provides:

[A]ny security issued under a mortgage or trust deed indenture as to which a contract of insurance under title XI of the National Housing Act is in effect; and any such security shall be deemed to be exempt from the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 to the same extent as though such security were specifically enumerated in section 3(a)(2), as amended, of the Securities Act of 1933.

(n12)Footnote 12. The text of this portion of § 3(a) of the Act (see § 3.03[1] supra) includes securities issued or guaranteed by the District of Columbia, as well as political subdivisions and public instrumentalities of states and territories. Territories are defined in § 2(6) of the Securities Act to include Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the insular possessions of the United States.

(n13)Footnote 13. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1933).

See, e.g., Newman & Associates, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (July 16, 1987) (Bonds issued by a city, country, public agency, authority, or non-profit corporation to finance construction of a multi-family housing project would qualify for the section 3(a)(2) exemption).

See also Finance Authority of Maine, SEC No-Action Letter (Feb. 4, 1994) (Portions of loans or certificates evidencing fractional undivided interests in pools of loans insured guaranteed by state finance authority would qualify for section 3(a)(2) exemption).

(n14)Footnote 14. Industrial development bonds are a particular type of revenue bonds involving the participation of private parties. Because their exemption depends on separate language within Section 3(a)(2), they are discussed separately in § 3.03[2] infra .

(n15)Footnote 15. State of New Jersey, 1984 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1480 (May 21, 1984) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Pub. L. No. 94-29, 89 Stat. 97 (1975).

(n17)Footnote 17. Exchange Act § 15B(b).

(n18)Footnote 18. Exchange Act § 15B(d).

(n19)Footnote 19. 17 C.F.R. §230.131.

(n20)Footnote 20. Rule 131(a) provides:

Any part of an obligation evidenced by any bond, note, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness issued by any governmental unit specified in section 3(a)(2) of the Act which is payable from payments to be made in respect of property or money which is or will be used, under a lease, sale, or loan arrangement, by or for industrial or commercial enterprise, shall be deemed to be a separate "security" within the meaning of section 2(1) of the Act, issued by the lessee or obligor under the lease, sale or loan arrangement.

(n21)Footnote 21. Rule 131(b) provides:

An obligation shall not be deemed a separate "security" as defined in paragraph (a) of this section if, (1) the obligation is payable from the general revenues of a governmental unit, specified in section 3(a)(2) of the Act, having other resources which may be used for payment of the obligation, or (2) the obligation relates to a public project or facility owned and operated by or on behalf of and under the control of a governmental unit specified in such section, or (3) the obligation relates to a facility which is leased to and under the control of an industrial or commercial enterprise but is a part of public project which, as a whole, is owned by and under the general control of a governmental unit specified in such section, or an instrumentality thereof.

(n22)Footnote 22. Employment Security Amendments of 1970, Pub. L. No. 91-373, 84 Stat. 695 (1970).

(n23)Footnote 23. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5103, 1970 SEC LEXIS 655 (Nov. 6, 1970) . Several changes have been made to the Internal Revenue Code since 1970. Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, § 103 excludes interest on state and local bonds from gross income, except for private activity bonds that are not qualified within the meaning of § 141. § 144(a) defines qualified small issue bonds.

(n24)Footnote 24. County of Yellowstone, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1692 (Aug. 16, 1976) .

(n25)Footnote 25. ICI Am., Inc., 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3003 (June 21, 1979) . A significant factor in this matter was that the bonds, although exempt because they were issued prior to the adoption of Rule 131, would not qualify for an exemption if they were being issued currently.

(n26)Footnote 26. Section 3(a)(2) contains a separate clause for "any security issued by or representing an interest in or a direct obligation of a Federal Reserve bank." Understandably, there appears not to have been any interpretative questions with respect to this clause.

(n27)Footnote 27. See § 3.03[3][b] infra.

(n28)Footnote 28. See § 3.03[4] infra.

(n29)Footnote 29. For additional analysis of exemptions for banks, see generally, DiLorenzo, et al., Banking Law, Ch. 99, Regulation and Reporting Requirements of the 1933 Securities Act, (Matthew Bender).

(n30)Footnote 30. Capital Funds, Inc. v. SEC, 348 F. 2d 582 (8th Cir. 1965). The fact that a loan institution performed some banking functions and was subject to the supervision of the state bank commissioner did not entitle it to the exemption afforded by § 3(a)(2). The institution was organized under a state statute that created a clear distinction between industrial loan companies and banks and denied to the former the use of the word "bank" in their names.

(n31)Footnote 31. Id.

(n32)Footnote 32. Frontier Gas Storage Co., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2797 (Jan. 5, 1981) .

Although no longer currently in use, retail repurchase agreements issued by banks have qualified for exemption under Section 3(a)(2). Retail repurchase agreements are debt obligations of banks or savings and loans issued to the general public, with maturities of less than 90 days, that are collateralized by an interest in a security that is a direct obligation of, or guaranteed by, the federal government or one of its agencies.

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6351, 1981 SEC LEXIS 669 (Sept. 25, 1981) .

(n33)Footnote 33. County of Muskingham, Ohio, SEC No-Action Letter (April 11, 1974).

(n34)Footnote 34. See American Bankers Club, Inc., 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3427 (May 7, 1980).

(n35)Footnote 35. The Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (the "GLB") (Rule Law 106-102, 113 Stat. 1338 (1999)) amended the definitions of the terms "broker" and "dealer" in sections 3(a)(4) and 3(a)(5), respectively, of the Exchange Act. These amendments are effective May 12, 2001. Section 3(a)(4) and 3(a)(5) previously provided that banks were specifically excluded from these definitions. However, both Section 3(a)(4) and 3(a)(5) have been amended to provide that only certain specified activities are not included as either broker or dealer activities.

The amendment to Section 3(a)(4) provides an exception to the definition of broker for certain bank activities that include third party brokerage arrangements, trust activities, certain permissible securities transactions and certain stock purchase plans. The activities that will be permissible securities transactions include transactions effected by a bank in commercial paper, bankers acceptance or commercial bills, and exempted securities, as defined in the Exchange Act.

The definition of exempted securities under the Exchange Act is different from the definition of exempted securities in Section 3 of the Securities Act. The Exchange Act definition includes most government securities and municipal securities, interests or participation in common trust funds or single trust funds and securities of pooled income funds, collective trust funds, collective investment funds or similar funds excluded from the definition of any investment company under the Investment Company Act of 1940.

The amendment to Section 3(a)(5) provides an exception to the definition of dealer for certain bank activities which include certain permissible securities transactions, investment, trustee and fiduciary transactions, asset backed transactions, and activities in certain identified banking products. The activities which will be permissible securities transactions include transactions affected by a bank in commercial paper, bankers acceptances or commercial bills, and exempted securities.

(n36)Footnote 36. The full text of Section 2(a)(5) reads as follows:

"Bank" means (A) a depository institution (as defined in Section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) or a branch or agency of a foreign bank (as such terms are defined in Section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978) organized under the laws of the United States, (B) a member bank of the Federal Reserve System, (C) any other banking institution or trust company, whether incorporated or not, doing business under the laws of any State or of the United States, a substantial portion of the business of which consists of receiving deposits or exercising fiduciary powers similar to those permitted to national banks under the authority of the Comptroller of the Currency, and which is supervised and examined by State or Federal authority having supervision over banks, and which is not operated for the purpose of evading the provisions of this title, and (D) a receiver, conservator, or other liquidating agent of any institution or firm included in clauses (A), (B), or (C) of this paragraph.

(n37)Footnote 37. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

(n38)Footnote 38. Rule 132 provides:

The term "common trust fund" as used in section 3(a)(2) of the Act shall include a common trust fund which is maintained by a bank which is a member of an affiliated group, as defined in section 1504(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and which is maintained exclusively for the collective investment and reinvestment of monies contributed thereto by one or more bank members of such affiliated group in the capacity of trustee, executor, administrator, or guardian, provided that:

(a) the common trust fund is operated in compliance with the same state and federal regulatory requirements as would apply if the bank maintaining such fund and any other contributing banks were the same entity; and

(b) the rights of persons for whose benefit a contributing bank acts as trustee, executor, administrator, or guardian would not be diminished by reason of the maintenance of such common trust fund by another bank member of the affiliated group.

(n39)Footnote 39. No-Action Letters, Alaska Higher Education Savings Trust, March 8, 2001, College SAVE Trust, August 2, 2001 and Commonwealth Postsecondary Education Prepaid Tuition Trust Fund, September 24, 2001.

(n40)Footnote 40. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6661, 1986 SEC LEXIS 729 (Sept. 23, 1986) .

(n41)Footnote 41. Bretton Woods Agreement Act § 15(a), 22 U.S.C. § 286k-1(a) (2000). The exemption for the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development was the first for banks of this type and served as a model for similar subsequent exemptions.

§ 286k-1(a) provides:

Any securities issued by International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (including any guaranty by the bank, whether or not limited in scope), and any securities guaranteed by the bank as to both principal and interest, shall be deemed to be exempted securities within the meaning of subsection (a)(2) of section 77c of Title 15 [3(a)(2)]... .

(n42)Footnote 42. 22 U.S.C. § 283h(a) (2000).

(n43)Footnote 43. 22 U.S.C. § 285h(a) (2000).

(n44)Footnote 44. 22 U.S.C. § 290i-9 (2000).

(n45)Footnote 45. 22 U.S.C. § 282k (2000).

(n46)Footnote 46. 22 U.S.C. § 290 l-7 (2000).

(n47)Footnote 47. 17 C.F.R. § 285 (1993).

(n48)Footnote 48. 17 C.F.R. § 286 (1993).

(n49)Footnote 49. 17 C.F.R. § 287 (1993).

(n50)Footnote 50. 17 C.F.R. § 288 (1993).

(n51)Footnote 51. 17 C.F.R. § 289 (1993).

(n52)Footnote 52. 17 C.F.R. § 290 (1993).

(n53)Footnote 53. A single trust fund is a non-collective trust fund, i.e., a fund which is not established at the instance of, or by, a financial intermediary for the use of separate employers. Under this definition, a single trust fund would include those: (1) for employees of a single employer, (2) for employees of employers so closely related as to be regarded as a single employer e.g., a parent and its subsidiaries; and (3) established and controlled by employers and/or a union representing the employees of such employers. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

(n54)Footnote 54. A collective trust fund is a trust fund maintained by a bank as an investment vehicle solely for corporate stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plans (other than Keogh plans) that meet the requirements for qualification under Section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code. Id.

"Maintained" means that the bank must exercise substantial investment responsibility, and not function in a mere custodial or similar capacity. Id. at 2073-22.

The Commission's Division of Investment Management, in a major 1992 study of the Investment Company Act, has recommended that § 3(a)(2) be amended to remove the exception for interests in collective trust funds and separate accounts in which participant-directed defined contribution plans invest. The Staff prefaced its recommendation with the observation that, for many, choosing where to invest their retirement plan assets is the most important investment decision they will ever make. "Protecting Investors: A Half-Century of Investment Company Regulation" at 179 (1992). The Division's recommendation was not adopted.

(n55)Footnote 55. An insurance company is specifically defined in § 2(13) of the Act:

The term "insurance company" means a company which is organized as an insurance company whose primary and predominant business activity is the writing of insurance or the reinsuring of risks underwritten by insurance companies, and which is subject to supervision by the insurance commissioner, or a similar official or agency, of a State or territory or the District of Columbia; or any receiver or similar official or any liquidating agent for such company, in his capacity as such.

(n56)Footnote 56. Because of the length and complexity of this portion of § 3(a)(2), paragraphs indents have been added to the statutory language to aid comprehension.

(n57)Footnote 57. Note that Investment Company Act § 3(a)(11) excludes from the definition of an investment company specified stock bonus, pension, and profit-sharing trusts and plans described therein.

(n58)Footnote 58. For a discussion of whether employee interests in benefit plans constitute securities, see § 2.01[11][c][v] supra.

(n59)Footnote 59. GC International, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (Sept. 19, 1975).

(n60)Footnote 60. 439 U.S. 551, 99 S.Ct. 790, 58 L. Ed.2d 808 (1979) .

(n61)Footnote 61. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) .

(n62)Footnote 62. Op. Asst. Gen. Counsel, [1941-44 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L.Rep. (CCH) P75,195 (1941).

See Leonard v. Drug Fair, Inc., 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (D.D.C. 1979) , in which interests in a voluntary, contributory profit-sharing and retirement plan maintained by a bank were exempt from registration under Section 3(a)(2). The plan qualified under Section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code and the employer invested less than the total amount of its contributions in employer securities (i.e., employee funds were not used to purchase employer securities).

(n63)Footnote 63. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6281, 46 FR 8446 (Jan. 15, 1981) .

In Daniel, n.53 supra , the Supreme Court stated that the purpose of the exemption was to relieve banks and insurance companies of certain registration obligations and that the amendment recognized a pension plan's interest or participation in a fund, not prospective beneficiaries' interests in the plan or the plan's assets. 439 U.S. at 565, 99 S. Ct. at 799, 58 L. Ed. 2d at 819 .

(n64)Footnote 64. See n.48, supra., for a discussion of single trust funds.

(n65)Footnote 65. See n.48, supra.

(n66)Footnote 66. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6188, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2141 (Feb. 1, 1980) as to the reasons for these first two exclusions from the exemption. This Release also provides interpretations as to availability of the Section 3(a)(2) exemption for employee benefit plans.

(n67)Footnote 67. "Qualified plans" must be pension or profit-sharing plans under § 401 or annuity plans that meet the criteria of § 404(a)(2) and § 401(c)(1).

(n68)Footnote 68. For the full text of Rule 180 see Federal Securities Act of 1933 (A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor) Part 2, § 3 (Matthew Bender).

(n69)Footnote 69. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6363, 1981 SEC LEXIS 265 (Nov. 24, 1981) .

32 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.04

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.04 Short-Term Commercial Paper--Section 3(a)(3)

Section 3(a)(3) exempts:

Any note, draft, bill of exchange, or banker's acceptance which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which has a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding nine months, exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal there of the maturity of which is likewise limited.

The exemption covers only "prime quality negotiable commercial paper" n1 -- short term, high quality instruments issued to fund current operations and sold only to highly sophisticated investors. n2 As indicated, the exemption generally refers to an unsecured debt instrument with a maturity date not exceeding nine months that is usually backed by a bank line of credit. The legislative history for the exemption makes clear that the drafters were cognizant of the fact that commercial paper is seldom offered or sold to the general public. n3 The Senate Report on the exemption contains the following explanation:

Notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and bankers' acceptances which are commercial paper and arise out of current commercial, agricultural, or industrial transactions, and which are not intended to be marketed to the public, are exempted... It is not intended under the bill to require the registration of short-term commercial paper which, as is the usual practice, is made to mature in a few months and ordinarily is not advertised for sale to the general public. n4

The House Report adds that "Paragraph (3) exempts short-term paper of the type available for discount at a Federal Reserve bank and of a type which is rarely bought by private investors." n5 The requirement "available for discount at a Federal Reserve bank" was based on the then standard practice by member banks of the Federal Reserve system to discount commercial paper to meet reserve requirements. In its 1961 interpretative release on the subject, the Commission, relying on the legislative history, stated that commercial paper must be "eligible" for discounting by Federal Reserve banks. n6 Both the practice and the requirement have long been abandoned. n7 Because the exemption was meant for securities "rarely bought by private investors," the courts have had no difficulty in finding that the exemption did not apply in situations where notes have been made available primarily to the general public. n8

The U.S. Supreme Court itself has made clear that in the interpretation of the commercial paper exemption in the Securities Act, and the corollary exclusion from the definition of security provided in section 3(a)(10) of the Exchange Act, n9 courts must guard against manipulation to investors' detriment. In Reves v. Ernst & Young, n10 the Court held that demand notes issued by a farmers' cooperative were securities, and thus subject to antifraud provisions of the Exchange Act. In doing so, the Court rejected the proposition that because "demand" notes were involved, their maturity should be interpreted as falling within the nine month period provided in section 3(a)(10) of the Exchange Act. The Court looked to legislative history of the Securities Act section 3(a)(3) exemption to point out that economic reality must be considered in assessing the plain words and intended scope of exceptions or exemptions. On the narrower point of "maturity" of an instrument for purposes of the commercial paper exemption or exclusions, the Court concluded that "demand" notes do not necessarily have short terms. In light of Congress' broader purpose in the federal securities laws to ensure that investments of all descriptions be regulated to prevent fraud and abuse, the Court refused to interpret the nine month maturity element of the commercial paper exemption or exclusion to cover the demand notes involved in the case. n11

It is certain in Reves that even if the subject notes had a specific nine month or less maturity, the Exchange Act exclusion and the Securities Act exemption would not apply. The notes were offered as investments, to significant numbers of people, pursuant to a plan of distribution. They were not "commercial paper" within the actual contemplation of either provision. Although the Reves Court did not have to address directly the question whether short term notes offered on a large scale to unsophisticated members of the public could ever be eligible for either the Securities Act exemption or the Exchange Act exclusion, the message seems clear enough. It is an increasingly important message, as the use of short term promissory notes offered and sold to unsophisticated individuals to raise risk capital for less than creditworthy enterprises in purported reliance on the section 3(a)(3) federal exemption became rampant, and abuses multiplied. n12

There should be no uncertainty regarding the intended scope of section 3(a)(3). In the leading interpretative release on the topic, the SEC stated that, in order to be exempt, the notes must be "prime quality negotiable commercial paper of a type not ordinarily purchased by the general public, that is, paper used to facilitate well recognized types of current operational business requirements." n13 The staff of the Commission has indicated that notes issued in small denominations ($10,000) may make the notes accessible to the general public and, therefore, inconsistent with the Section 3(a)(3) exemption. n14 The requirement for prime quality is not capable of precise interpretation. The courts have held that companies that are either insolvent or experiencing liquidity problems cannot avail themselves of the 3(a)(3) exemption. n15 The difficulty comes with companies that are either not highly rated or unrated, for which favorable No-Action Letters are unlikely. n16

Some difficulty with respect to interpretation of this section has also centered on the term "current transaction." In a 1935 release, the Commission stated that this requirement must be determined in light of the particular facts and business practices of each case. n17 The Commission also stated: n18

In general, it would seem that the proceeds of notes having a maturity of not more than nine months, of the type normally issued by finance companies, may be regarded as used for current transactions if the following conditions are satisfied:

1. The issuer of notes for which exemption is claimed is in the business of making loans on or purchasing notes, installment contracts, or other evidences of indebtedness.
2. The proceeds of the notes for which exemption is claimed are used for current transactions, which may properly include either (a) the making of loans upon or the purchasing of such notes, installment contracts, or other evidences of indebtedness in the usual course of business, or (b) the payment of outstanding notes exempt under Section 3(a)(3).

No further releases threw any light on the meaning of "current transactions" until a release in 1961, at which time the Commission stated that the 1935 release referred to items composed of assets easily convertible into cash and comparable to liquid inventories of an industrial or mercantile company. n19

The Commission stated in the 1961 release that the staff had interpreted the Section 3(a)(3) exemption requirement of a maturity not to exceed nine months as not being met where there is an automatic rollover in effect. In addition, the Commission specified certain situations which it considered did not satisfy the "current transactions or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions" standard: n20

[T]he current transactions standard is not satisfied where the proceeds are to be used for the discharge of existing indebtedness unless such indebtedness is itself exempt under Section 3(a)(3); the purchase or construction of a plant; the purchase of durable machinery or equipment; the funding of commercial real estate development or financing; the purchase of real estate mortgages or other securities; the financing of mobile homes or home improvements; or the purchase or establishment of a business enterprise.

However, the Commission's staff has issued favorable No-Action Letters in connection with short term notes issued to finance leases of non-permanent equipment with original terms of up to nine years. n21

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Sanders v. John Nuveen & Co., 463 F.2d 1075, 1079 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1009, 93 S.Ct. 443, 34 L.Ed.2d 302 (1972) .

(n2)Footnote 2. The SEC Staff has relied on several factors to determine whether commercial paper is of "prime" quality, including the financial strength of the issuer, support of the commercial paper by a form of credit enhancement, or rating of the commercial paper by a national rating agency. See Mercury Finance Co., SEC No-Action Letter (Jan. 20, 1989).

(n3)Footnote 3. An additional reason for the exemption may be the relative safety of commercial paper and the fact that risk ratings are readily available for most issuers.

(n4)Footnote 4. S. Rep. No. 47, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 3-4 (1933).

Although qualifying commercial paper would not be offered to the public as such, issuers may engage in limited advertising, published from time to time, relating to the company's commercial paper programs. General Electric Capital Corp., SEC No-Action Letter (Jul. 13, 1994) (limited advertising of commercial paper programs available only to sophisticated institutional investors).

(n5)Footnote 5. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. (1933).

(n6)Footnote 6. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4412, 1961 SEC LEXIS 72 (Sept. 20, 1961) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 3 Loss and Seligman, Securities Regulation 1190 (3d ed. 1989), quoting SEC, Div. of Corp. Fin. Training Manual, Securities Act of 1933 234 n. 69 (1982), which states that the discounting practice by member banks of the Federal Reserve System had ceased by 1960. The "eligible" requirement apparently lingered, since release 4412 , n.4 supra, was issued in 1961.

In Nomura Securities Int'l, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2389 (Nov. 8, 1976) , the Commission Staff declined to issue a favorable response where Nomura proposed to sell to institutional investors, under a 3(a)(3) exemption, certain Foreign Exchange Bills issued as direct unconditional notes of Japan, the proceeds of which were to be used for current transactions in foreign currencies and with maturities within the nine-month requirement. The letter of inquiry addressed the 'eligible for discounting by Federal Reserve banks' as the only criterion at issue, claiming that the language was illustrative and not a restriction. The Staff gave no indication as to the reason for its unfavorable reply.

(n8)Footnote 8. See United States v. Hill, 298 F. Supp. 1221 (D. Conn. 1969) (exemption not available where six month notes with rights attached to apply the principal amounts to the purchase of common stock were sold solely to members of the public and neither parent nor subsidiary had assets easily convertible into cash to support the notes).

See also S.E.C. v. M.A. Lundy Assoc., 362 F. Supp. 226 (D.R.I. 1973) (certificates of beneficial interest in trusts advertised in newspapers of wide general circulation were not exempt under 3(a)(3) because they were issued for sale to the general public); UBS Asset Management (New York) Inc. v. Wood Gundy Corp., 914 F. Supp. 66 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (Exemption is available only for prime quality commercial paper).

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(10). Section 3(a)(10) of the Exchange Act creates an exception from the definition of security for "any note...which has a maturity at the time of issuance not exceeding nine months." The effect of the exclusion in the Exchange Act versus the exemption in the Securities Act is that qualifying instruments under the Exchange Act are outside the ambit of antifraud provisions of that act. The exemption under section 3(a)(3) of the Securities Act, on the other hand, is from registration provisions of the act, but not its antifraud provisions.

(n10)Footnote 10. 494 U.S. 56, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed 2d 47 (1990) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Reves, 494 U.S. at 73 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Allen R. Asker, Init. Decision No. 26, Admin. Proc. File No. 3-7401 (SEC, Feb. 14, 1992) (It is the character of the note, not its maturity date, which determines coverage under the registration provisions of the securities laws).

(n13)Footnote 13. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4412, 1961 SEC LEXIS 72 (Sept. 20, 1961) .

(n14)Footnote 14. 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2025, Spokane Mortgage Co., October 3, 1975 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Welch Foods, Inc. v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 398 F. Supp. 1393, 1398 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) . Despite a rating of "prime quality" by a national rating service, the court interpreted the word "prime" in Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4412 supra, in its generic usage as meaning excellent quality. The Penn Central commercial paper at issue could not be considered prime because of evidence to the contrary at the time of sale, with the issuer becoming insolvent shortly thereafter.

In Sanders v. John Nuveen & Co., 463 F.2d 1075 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1009, 93 S. Ct. 443, 34 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1972) , the Court found that the company's insolvency made it highly unlikely that paper at issue was either prime quality or issued to facilitate current transactions.

(n16)Footnote 16. Significant factors are likely to be the amount of relevant financial information available to the investors and their financial sophistication.

(n17)Footnote 17. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-401, 1935 SEC LEXIS 614 (June 18, 1935) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Id.

(n19)Footnote 19. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4412, 1961 SEC LEXIS 72 (Sept. 20, 1961) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Id.

(n21)Footnote 21. No-Action Letter, GATX Leasing Corporation, May 20, 1980.

33 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.05

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.05 Securities of Charitable Organizations--Section 3(a)(4)

Section 3(a)(4) provides an exemption from registration for certain non-profit organizations as follows:

Any security issued by a person organized and operated exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, charitable, or reformatory purposes and not for pecuniary profit, and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any person, private stockholder, or individual; or any security of a fund that is excluded from the definition of an investment company under section 3(c)(10)(B) of the Investment Company Act of 1940.

The legislative history with respect to this section makes it clear that Section 3(a)(4) exempts "securities of a noncommercial character issued by eleemosynary institutions." n1

As stated in SEC v. Children's Hospital, n2 the exemption is not available when the issuing institution is either organized or operated for a substantially non-charitable purpose. This opinion is often cited because of its analysis of the key language in Section 3(a)(4). n3 First, with respect to the word "exclusively," the court referred to prior decisions concerning similar exemptions in other federal laws and held that, if a substantial non-charitable purpose is being served in connection with either an organization or the operation of an issuer of securities, the exemption is not available for the securities of the issuer. n4 With respect to the word "organized," the court pointed out that corporate charter and by-laws are not the sole determinants as to whether a corporation is organized for charitable purposes and that the court can determine the true corporate objective from all available facts.

With respect to "charitable... purposes," the court observed that the term requires dedication to a general public purpose for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons who are not required to give adequate consideration for benefits received, but that, as in this case, a hospital not conducted for the profit of anyone connected therewith can be a charitable institution irrespective of whether patients are required to pay for services rendered. Finally, "pecuniary profit" was construed to encompass profit, not only from net earnings, but from any source, arrangement, or manipulation, whether such profit inures to anyone directly or indirectly connected with the corporation. Thus, in the case at bar, "pecuniary profit" encompassed the promoters' anticipated profit from the organization and promotion of the institution and from the construction of the facilities.

In Children's Hospital, the facts and circumstances furnished a fairly obvious basis for the court's finding of a substantial non-charitable purpose. In S.E.C. v. Shreveport Medical Hospital,ⁿ⁵ a subsequent case not involving any allegations of fraud, the promoter of a proprietary hospital had his debts assumed by a charitable organization that took over the venture and issued bonds to pay for the project. Even though the promoter had no role in the bond issue, the part of the proceeds from the bonds to be used to pay off the promoter's debt was interpreted by the court to constitute a substantial non-charitable purpose that made the Section 3(a)(4) exemption unavailable. Therefore, it is clear that, no matter how noble the goal of a nonprofit institution, the criteria for the exemption will be strictly applied.ⁿ⁶ The meaning of the word "fraternal" in the statutory language appears to be analogous to its interpretation in similar situations under federal tax law, and the position of the Commission is that the exemption is not available for securities of nonprofit organizations that are organized primarily for social, athletic, or recreational purposes.ⁿ⁷

The Commission has stated in an interpretative release that pooled income funds of public charities will be exempt provided certain criteria are met.ⁿ⁸ Pooled income funds are trusts through which a person transfers property to a public charity, giving an irrevocable remainder interest to the charity and retaining an income interest for one or more beneficiaries living at the time of transfer. Among the requirements under federal tax law, the fund must be maintained by the charity and the properties transferred to it must be commingled. The Staff of the Commission will not recommend any enforcement action if the following three criteria are met:

- (1) the fund must qualify as a recipient of the deductible contributions under section 642(c)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code;
- (2) each prospective donor must be furnished written disclosures that fully and fairly describe the operation of the fund; and
- (3) each person soliciting gifts by means of the fund must be either a volunteer, or a person who is employed in the public charity's overall fundraising activities who receives no commissions or other special compensation based on the amount of gifts transferred to the pooled income fund.ⁿ⁹

Section 3(a)(4) was amended by the Philanthropy Protection Act of 1995, to incorporate any security of a fund that is excluded from the definition of an investment company under section 3(c)(10)(B) of the Investment Company Act of 1940. Without an exemption from the Investment Company Act, common investment pools formed for the purpose of investing and reinvesting in securities could be subject to registration requirements under the Investment Company Act, and the particular regulatory provisions applicable to investment companies. Section 3(c)(10) excludes from the definition of investment company, among others, "any company organized and operated exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, charitable or reformatory purposes no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual." The incorporation of section 3(c)(10) of the investment Company Act into section 3(a)(4) of the Securities Act is central to the ability of charitable entities to pool assets in common investment pools in order to benefit from greater economies of scale and the possibility of access to better investment managers.

As it has addressed considerations specifically under section 3(a)(4) of the Securities Act for charitable pooled funds, the SEC staff has often granted no-action advice under applicable provisions of the Investment Company Act.ⁿ¹⁰ No action advice under the Investment Company Act is premised on representations by charitable entities that they will not assign, encumber, or otherwise transfer any part of their interests in common investment pools. These "Charitable Pooling Representations" are intended to ensure that the fundamental characteristics of the common investment pools remain charitable in nature. The Charitable Pooling Representations made for purposes of the Investment Company Act exemption track and expand criteria articulated by the SEC staff discussed above. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1933). Securities to be issued by a social or recreational organization, such as a golf and country club or a skeet shooting organization, even if no member expects to make a profit on the ownership of that security, do not fit within this exemption. See SEC No-Action Letters, Western American Communities (March 3, 1981) and National Skeet Shooting Association (June 5, 1979).

See also In re Calozza Litig., 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22470 (W.D. Wash. 1995) ("Sons of Norway" fraternal benefit society organized to provide insurance benefits to its member-owners was not organized or operated for pecuniary profit, and its securities would be exempt from registration under section 3(a)(4)).

(n2)Footnote 2. 214 F. Supp. 883 (D. Ariz. 1963) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Children's Hospital, 214 F. Supp. 883 . The promoters of a children's hospital had offered and sold unregistered first mortgage bonds to residents of several states through advertisements, brochures, and sales letters containing untrue, deceptive and misleading statements of material facts and omitting facts of material significance. The promoters each received monthly salaries and planned to set aside 10 percent of the total proceeds of the bond issue for overhead, promotion and cost of sales. The portion of the 10 percent not so expended was to be retained by the promoters as compensation for their services. The compensation was increased to allow for a contractor's profit when the promoters, without bidding, assumed the contract for construction of the hospital. A permanent injunction was granted after a default by the defendants who had not filed an answer to the complaint.

(n4)Footnote 4. The court cited to Better Business Bureau of Washington, D.C. v. United States, 326 U.S. 279, 283, 66 S. Ct. 112, 114, 90 L. Ed. 67, 71 (1945) : "[T]he presence of a single non-educational purpose, if substantial in nature, will destroy the exemption regardless of the number or importance of truly educational purposes." 214 F. Supp. at 888 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Litig. Rel. 2498, 1963 SEC LEXIS 819 ; 2514, 1963 SEC LEXIS 835 (W.D. La. 1963) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See S.E.C. v. American Foundation for Advanced Education of Arkansas, 222 F. Supp. 828 (W.D. La. 1963) in which a nonprofit organization, organized essentially to provide a means for assisting parents to pay for higher education, was found to be not operating exclusively for educational purposes because it returned its profits to its members, whose principle motivation in purchasing the organization's securities was the element of profit.

See also Topeka Chamber Industrial Development Corporation, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3008 (July 12, 1979) in which a tax exempt business league utilized fund raising to improve and develop industrial property for the betterment of the community. A proposed issue of debentures to sophisticated business entities under the 3(a)(4) exemption did not receive a favorable response from the Commission Staff because the purposes of the league did not appear to be exclusively charitable in nature.

(n7)Footnote 7. Western American Communities, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3500 (Apr. 30, 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Securities Act Rel. No. 33-6175, 1980 SEC LEXIS 2285 (Jan. 10, 1980) . See also National Association of Congregational Christian Churches of the United States, SEC No-Action Letter (Aug. 11, 1995).

(n9)Footnote 9. Id.

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Mercy Investment Programs, Inc., 2003 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 587 (June 12, 2003) .

(n11)Footnote 11. As part of the Charitable Pooling Representations, charitable entities represent that: (1) the common investment pool must be organized and operated at all times exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, charitable, or reformatory purposes; (2) no part of the common investment pool's net earnings may inure to the benefit of a private shareholder or individual; (3) the common investment pool and each participant must be exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code; and (4) each participant may invest only funds over which it has immediate, unrestricted, and exclusive use, benefit and enjoyment; (5) participants will not invest assets that are attributable to a retirement plan providing for employee contributions or variable benefits; (6) certified public accountants annually will prepare a written report on the common investment pool, and will send the report to participants; and (7) each participant will be informed that the common investment pool is not an investment company under the Investment Company Act of 1940. See Mercy Investment Programs, Inc. , supra.

34 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.06

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.06 Securities of Savings and Loan Associations and Similar Institutions--Section 3(a)(5)

Section 3(a)(5) of the 1933 Act exempts securities issued by savings and loan and similar associations and by farm cooperatives and related organizations. The Section states:

Any security issued (A) by a savings and loan association, building and loan association, cooperative bank, homestead association, or similar institution, which is supervised and examined by State or Federal authority having supervision over any such institution; or (B) by (i) a farmer's cooperative organization exempt from tax under section 521 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, (ii) a corporation described in section 501(c)(16) [Crop Operations Financing Corporation] of such Code and exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code, or (iii) a corporation described in section 501(c)(2) [Title-Holding Corporation] of such Code which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code and is organized for the exclusive purpose of holding title to property, collecting income therefrom, and turning over the entire amount thereof, less expenses, to an organization or corporation described in clause (i) or (ii).

The House Committee Report states: "[This provision] exempts the securities of building and loan institutions and similar institutions, but insists that such institutions, as a condition to being exempted from the Act, must do a true building and loan business by confining their business to the making of loans to their members." n1 As pointed out in an opinion by the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, which at that time had jurisdiction over the Securities Act: "[O]ne of the reasons for the exemption contained in Section 3(a)(5) of the Act was 'a belief that persons joining in such cooperative projects were less likely to need the protection from each other afforded by registration than persons dealing with issuers of the usual type.'" n2

The key requirement as it applies to savings and loan and other associations under Section 3(a)(5)(A) is that they be institutions that are supervised and examined by the federal or state authorities appropriate for this type of organization. Thus, a credit union was able to receive a favorable No-Action Letter where supervision by a state finance department was similar to the supervision given to savings and loan associations and the general purpose and operation of the credit union was to maintain share accounts for its members and to issue loans to members on approved credit. n3

In one of the few cases to construe Section 3(a)(5), SEC v. American International Savings & Loan Association, n4 the court found that the institution was not a savings and loan association within the meaning of the relevant state statute and could not meet the requirement, which was then part of the statutory language for the exemption, n5 that substantially all of its business be confined to the making of loans to members. The court noted that the association was not issuing stock to raise capital for its regular business, only two loans had ever been made by the association, and the indispensable attribute of mutuality was lacking. n6

The securities to be issued by the association must, under the statutory language, represent interests in the association itself. Therefore, an association was able to obtain a favorable No-Action Letter where it proposed to issue retail repurchase agreements as its own securities, not as pass-through certificates or participations in the related government securities purchased by the association. n7 Under the proposed arrangement, purchasers would obtain none of the economic characteristics of ownership of the government securities, including no risk of loss or opportunity for gain from capital value fluctuation, and the interest rate for the agreements was not dependent on the interest rate earned by the government securities. n8 In contradistinction, where an association proposed to make investments in state and local tax exempt bonds available to investors through participation interests in a fiduciary account, whereby the owner of an interest would receive, on a pass-through basis, the owner's pro rata share of principal and interest payments made on collective holdings, the Staff of the Commission was unable to conclude that the participation interests would be deemed securities issued by a savings and loan association. n9 Likewise, if securities are issued without recourse by an association, they very likely fall outside the exemption. n10

If members of an association transfer their securities to a voting trust controlled by the Board of Directors of the association, the Board, not the association, will be considered the issuer of the certificates and the 3(a)(5) exemption will, therefore, not be available. n11 This result is mandated by the definition of "issuer" in Section 2(4) of the 1933 Act: "[W]ith respect to...voting-trust certificates... the term issuer means the person or persons performing the acts and assuming the duties of depositor or manager pursuant to the provisions of the trust or other agreement or instrument under which such securities are issued..." n12

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2 H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1933).

(n2)Footnote 2. Opinion of F.T.C. Chairman, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2065 (Dec. 16, 1933)

(n3)Footnote 3. Idaho Central Credit Union, 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 286 (Feb. 14, 1977) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 199 F. Supp. 341 (D. Md. 1961) .

(n5)Footnote 5. At the time that this case was decided, § 3(a)(5) contained the additional language that an association under (A) must be an association "substantially all the business of which is confined to the making of loans to members." This language derived from the Internal Revenue Code and was deleted from § 3(a)(5) after it was deleted from the Code.

(n6)Footnote 6. 199 F. Supp. at 349-50 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Home Federal Savings and Loan Association, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4138 (Oct. 26, 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Id. The way in which securities are marketed may offer some insight into whether a proposed security is exempt. In Home Federal Savings, the fact that the advertisements for the Agreements would state that they were uninsured obligations of the association with no mention of a security interest in government securities was likely of some significance in the favorable No-Action letter.

(n9)Footnote 9. Central West End Savings and Loan Association, 1984 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2390 (July 19, 1984)

(n10)Footnote 10. See Security Federal Savings and Loan Association of Albuquerque, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1046 (Aug. 17, 1990) , in which the association proposed to sell participations in promissory notes evidencing short-term construction loans to institutional investors. In the event of a default on a loan, the association would foreclose on the mortgage securing the note and pay the investors a pro rata amount of funds realized in the foreclosure action. An unfavorable response to this arrangement by the Staff of the Commission was at least in part due to the fact that the participation interests would be issued without recourse to the association.

(n11)Footnote 11. Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Association, and Niles Federal Savings and Loan Association, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2717 (Aug. 30, 1982) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-86, 1933 SEC LEXIS 90 (Dec. 13, 1933) , in which the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission expressed the opinion that securities of a mortgage loan company fell within the meaning of "similar institutions" as used in the section if the stock of the company were issued only to borrowers or if the stock issued to borrowers carried voting rights in the same proportion to their investment as that issued to the organizers, but that voting certificates issued in return for such exempt stock are subject to the registration requirements of the Act.

35 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.07

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.07 Securities of Railroad (Common Carrier) Equipment Trusts--Section 3(a)(6)

Section 3(a)(6) exempts the securities of railroad equipment trusts, which are defined to include common carrier equipment trusts. The exemption covers:

Any interest in a railroad equipment trust. For purposes of this paragraph any "interest in a railroad equipment trust" means any interest in an equipment trust, lease, conditional sales contract, or other similar arrangement entered into, issued, assumed, guaranteed by or for the benefit of, a common carrier to finance the acquisition of rolling stock, including motive power.

The scope of the 3(a)(6) exemption has been severely curtailed since its original enactment. In the wake of the collapse of Penn Central and other railroads in the 1970s, Congress enacted the Railway Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976. n1 As part of this legislation, protection of the federal securities laws was extended to investors in securities of railroads by repealing certain exemptions previously afforded to such securities in the securities laws. n2 There remained an exemption for the securities of motor carriers that were subject to Section 214 of the Interstate Commerce Act. n3 However, that portion of the section 3(a)(6) exemption was repealed in 1982, at which time the securities of common carriers became subject to the full requirements of federal securities laws.

All that remains of the section 3(a)(6) exemption today is any interest in a "railroad equipment trust," defined to include equipment trusts of common carriers. The Interstate Commerce Commission ("ICC") is empowered to determine that a railroad equipment trust interest is an exempt security under 3(a)(6). n4 The ICC is also authorized to exempt from Section 5 of the Securities Act securities issued by committees in proceedings under the Interstate Commerce Act. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 94-210, 90 Stat. 31 (1976).

(n2)Footnote 2. S. Conf. Rep. No. 94-595, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. at 168-69 (1976).

(n3)Footnote 3. 49 U.S.C.A. § 314 (1963) (repealed). The section was succeeded in 1978 by 49 U.S.C.A. § 11302, which was repealed in 1982.

(n4)Footnote 4. 49 U.S.C.A. § 11367(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Id.

36 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.08

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.08 Certificates of Receivers and Trustees--Section 3(a)(7)

Section 3(a)(7) exempts:

Certificates issued by a receiver or by a trustee or debtor in possession in a case under title 11 of the United States Code, with the approval of the court.

Section 3(a)(7) was amended by Section 306(a) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, n1 to reflect the exemption provided under that Act for the issuance of non-equity securities. To qualify under Section 3(a)(7), a security must be issued with the approval of a court. n2 If qualified, the security will be an exempt security and may be sold or resold without registering under the 1933 Act.

The exemption should be considered in conjunction with the exemption in Section 364(f) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act for any debt security issued by a trustee to obtain credit. That section provides as follows: n3

(f) Except with respect to an entity that is an underwriter as defined in section 1145(b) of this title, section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77e), the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 (15 U.S.C. 77aaa et seq.), and any State or local law requiring registration for offer or sale of a security or registration or licensing of an issuer of, underwriter of, or broker or dealer in, a security does not apply to the offer or sale under this section of a security that is not an equity security.

By its terms, Section 364(f) applies only to non-equity securities that are offered or sold under this Section. Thus, unlike securities that qualify as exempt securities under Section 3(a)(7), the Section 364(f) exemption only applies to transactions occurring under this section and, therefore, does not apply to subsequent sales outside this section.

Section 364(f) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act also offers advantages over the provision in Section 3(a)(7). Unlike the Securities Act, Section 364(f) preempts state and local law. Also, securities exempted under Section 364(f) include those issued without the approval of a court under Section 367(a).

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 95-598, 92 Stat. 2674 (1978).

See 8 Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 4(a) (Matthew Bender 15th ed.).

(n2)Footnote 2. In order to come within the requirements of the 3(a)(7) exemption, the certificates must be issued by a receiver, trustee, or debtor in possession, not by a third party under an agreement with them. See O'Neill Bondholders Committee, 1974 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 107 (Aug. 9, 1974) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 11 U.S.C.A. § 364(f) (1993).

See 8 Collier on Bankruptcy, Ch. 1145 (Matthew Bender 15th ed.) for a complete discussion of the exemption from the securities laws provided by § 1145 of the Bankruptcy Code.

37 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.09

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.09 Insurance Policies and Annuity Contracts--Section 3(a)(8)

Section 3(a)(8) exempts insurance policies and certain annuity contracts as follows:

Any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract or optional annuity contract, issued by a corporation subject to the supervision of the insurance commissioner, bank commissioner, or any agency or officer performing like functions, of any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia.

The House Report on this section of the Act explains that: n1

Paragraph (8) makes clear what is already implied in the Act, namely, that insurance policies are not to be regarded as securities subject to the provisions of the Act. The insurance policy and like contracts are not regarded in the commercial world as securities offered to the public for investment purposes. The entire tenor of the act would lead, even without this specific exemption, to the exclusion of insurance policies from the provisions of the Act, but the specific exemption is included to make misinterpretation impossible.

In light of the legislative history, the Supreme Court and the SEC have acknowledged that insurance policies are excluded from the coverage of the Securities Act. n2 The Section 3(a)(8) exemption has been referred to by a leading authority to be an example of supererogation, meaning that it goes beyond what was necessary to exclude insurance policies from the Securities Act. n3 Indeed, Congress itself explained that section 3(a)(8) "makes clear what is already implied in the act, namely that insurance policies are not to be regarded as securities subject to provisions of the act." n4

Insurance, as such, is not a security. Nevertheless, because modern non-traditional insurance products have "investment" characteristics and are marketed with emphasis on those features, courts have analyzed these products as "investment contracts" under the definition of "security" in section 2 of the Act as well as under the exemption provided in section 3(a)(8). This is particularly the case with variable annuities. Historically, the assessment as to whether a life insurance policy or annuity contract constitutes an "investment contract," and thus a security, turned on the extent to which there was a significant assumption of both mortality and investment risks by the issuer. In the landmark case of S.E.C. v. Variable Annuity Life Insurance Company,ⁿ⁵ the Supreme Court held that a variable annuity under which the purchaser assumes all investment risk concerning both the value of the investor's interest in the annuity and the success of the issuer's investment management was not insurance. The Court found that the issuer of a variable annuity that has no element of a fixed return assumes no true risk in the insurance sense and that the concept of insurance involves some investment risk taking on the part of the company.ⁿ⁶

In S.E.C. v. United Benefit Life Insurance,ⁿ⁷ the Supreme Court expanded on the notion of "investment risk" associated with annuity products in determining whether a security is involved rather than insurance. In United Benefit, the issuer provided a low, guaranteed minimum rate of return. The issuer pooled purchasers' premium payments in a separate fund for investment but guaranteed a low minimum rate of return. Whether a purchaser could receive payments in excess of the guaranteed rate depended upon the fund's investment success, and could not be determined until after the purchaser's right of recovery matured. In holding that the flexible fund annuity constituted an investment contract despite the guaranteed minimum return, the Court stated that because the guaranteed rate of return was substantially lower than returns guaranteed by conventional annuities, purchasers necessarily relied upon the investment skills of the issuer to provide the bulk of the return. This product, said the Court, was intended to appeal to the purchaser not on the usual insurance basis of stability and security, but rather on the prospect of growth.ⁿ⁸ The guarantee of cash value was an insufficient investment risk on the part of the insurance company; it only reduced the investment risk of the contract holder.ⁿ⁹

Exposing insurance and annuity products to regulation under the federal securities laws through investment contract analysis brought new attention to the section 3(a)(8) exemption. Approaches to the application of section 3(a)(8) likewise turned on the extent to which the issuer of an "insurance" product significantly assumed both mortality and investment risks.ⁿ¹⁰

In 1986, the Commission adopted Rule 151 under the Securities Act.ⁿ¹¹ Rule 151 creates a safe harbor for annuity and "optional" annuity contracts as exempt securities under section 3(a)(8). Under rule 151, an annuity contract issued by a state-regulated insurance company is deemed to be within Section 3(a)(8) of the Securities Act if (1) the insurer assumes the investment risk under the contract in the manner prescribed in the rule; and (2) the contract is not marketed primarily as an investment. The issuing corporation must be supervised by the insurance or banking commissioner or other agency performing similar functions in a state, territory, or the District of Columbia.ⁿ¹² The contract must not be marketed primarily as an investment and the insurer must assume the investment risk with respect to it. The rule specifies the conjunctive criteria under which the insurer will be deemed to have assumed the investment risk, which are:ⁿ¹³

- (1) the value of the contract does not vary according to the investment experience of a separate account;
- (2) the insurer for the life of the contract, guarantees the principal amount of purchase payments and interest and credits a specified rate of interest to the net principal and interest accrued; and
- (3) the insurer guarantees that the rate of any interest paid in excess of the guaranteed minimum will not be modified more than once a year.ⁿ¹⁴

The extent to which the federal securities laws, and the scope of the section 3(a)(8) exemption apply to annuities, took on renewed prominence with the adoption of SEC Rule 151A,ⁿ¹⁵ which defines the terms "annuity contract" and "optional annuity contract" under the Securities Act. The rule, which is effective January 12, 2011, was spawned by marketing of "equity indexed" annuities is intended to clarify the status under the federal securities laws of indexed annuities, under which payments to the purchaser are dependent on the performance of a securities index. Section 3(a)(8) of the Securities Act provides an exemption for certain "annuity contracts," "optional annuity contracts," and other insurance contracts. Rule 151A prospectively defines certain indexed annuities as not being "annuity contracts" or "optional annuity contracts" under this exemption if the amounts payable by the insurer under the contract are more likely than not to exceed the amounts guaranteed under the contract.

The status of indexed annuities under the federal securities laws has been uncertain since their introduction in the mid-1990s. The central consideration in regard to them, however, is the constant in all assessments of the characteristics of insurance and annuity products--the allocation of risk. Regarding these particular products, the SEC explained:

Individuals who purchase indexed annuities are exposed to a significant investment risk--i.e., the volatility of the underlying securities index. Insurance companies have successfully utilized this investment feature, which appeals to purchasers not on the usual insurance basis of stability and security, but on the prospect of investment growth. Indexed annuities are attractive to purchasers because they offer the promise of market-related gains. Thus, purchasers obtain indexed annuity contracts for many of the same reasons that individuals purchase mutual funds and variable annuities, and open brokerage accounts.

When the amounts payable by an insurer under an indexed annuity are more likely than not to exceed the amounts guaranteed under the contract, this indicates that the majority of the investment risk for the fluctuating, securities-linked portion of the return is borne by the individual purchaser, not the insurer. The individual underwrites the effect of the underlying index's performance on his or her contract investment and assumes the majority of the investment risk for the securities-linked returns under the contract. n16

Rule 151A operates simply to define a class of indexed annuities that are outside the scope of Section 3(a)(8). If more often than not the purchaser of an indexed annuity will receive a guaranteed return like that of a traditional fixed annuity, then the instrument will be treated as insurance. On the other hand, if more often than not the purchaser will receive a return based on the value of a security, then the instrument will be treated as a non-exempt security. With respect to the latter group of indexed annuities, investors will be entitled to all the protections of the federal securities laws, including full and fair disclosure and antifraud and sales practice protections.

To be sure, the "business of insurance" is generally not a matter for federal regulation. The McCarran-Ferguson Act n17 provides that no federal law may impair or supersede any law enacted by a state for the purpose of regulating the business of insurance. n18 Insurance or insurance-based financial products such as variable annuities that may be considered "insurance," but which have investment characteristics to the extent that they may be subject to regulation as investment contract "securities" set the stage for a clash in many circumstances between the McCarran-Ferguson Act limitation on federal authority and the intended investor protection goals of the federal securities laws. This clash is no more clearly in evidence than in regard to the regulation of "viatical settlements."

A viatical settlement is a contract by which the purchaser acquires an interest in the life insurance policy of a terminally ill person at a discount of some significant percentage amount based upon the life expectancy of the insured. When the insured dies, the purchaser of the viatical settlement receives the full death benefit under the insurance policy, profiting by the difference between the discounted purchase price paid to the insured and the death benefit collected from the insurer, less transaction costs, premiums paid, and other administrative expenses. The treatment of viatical settlements as securities is beyond the scope of this chapter, and is considered specifically in Chapter 2. However, because a critical element of viatical settlements is an insurance policy, in SEC v. Life Partners, Inc., n19 the asserted regulation of the SEC over viaticals under federal securities laws was challenged as amounting to regulation of the business of insurance. Rejecting that challenge, the court opined that the viatical settlements involved did not evidence any risk pooling that is the essential characteristic of insurance. The fact that an insurance policy underlies a viatical settlement is of no consequence, said the court. The "business of insurance" within the ambit of the McCarran-Ferguson Act encompasses the relationship between an insured and an insurance company, not between a promoter and its investors.

Identifying what is or is not "insurance" or an annuity regulated by an appropriate state authority plays an obvious role in applications of the section 3(a)(8) exemption. More often, however, the question will be whether insurance is involved at all.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. (1933).

(n2)Footnote 2. S.E.C. v. Variable Annuity Life Insurance Co., 359 U.S. 65, 73-74, 79 S.Ct. 618, 623, 3 L. Ed. 2d 640, 646 (1959) (Brennan, J., concurring); Tcherepnin v. Knight, 389 U.S. 332, 342 n. 25, 88 S. Ct. 548, 555 n. 25, 19 L. Ed. 2d 564, 572 n. 25 (1967) .

Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6558 1984 SEC LEXIS 258 (Nov. 21, 1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 2 Loss and Seligman, Securities Regulation 1001 (3d ed. 1989).

(n4)Footnote 4. H.R. Rep. No. 73-85, 73rd Cong., 2d Sess., 15 (1933)

(n5)Footnote 5. 359 U.S. 65, 79 S. Ct. 618, 3 L. Ed. 2d 640 (1959) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Variable Annuity Life Insur. Co., 359 U.S. at 71 .

(n7)Footnote 7. 387 U.S. 202, 87 S. Ct. 1557, 18 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1967) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See United Benefit Life Insur., 387 U.S. at 210-211 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See United Benefit Life Insur., 387 U.S. at 210-211 .

But see Malone v. Addison Ins. Marketing, Inc., 225 F. Supp. 2d 743 (W.D. Ky. 2005) (Fixed, indexed, deferred annuity contracts that guaranteed a minimum 3% return held to be "fixed annuities" and therefore exempt under section 3(a)(8)).

For further discussion of whether annuities constitute a contract of insurance, see § 2.01[11][c][vii] supra.

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., In re Baldwin-United Corp., 55 B.R. 885 (S.D. Ohio 1985) , (Single premium deferred annuities were exempt securities since the insurance company underwriting them undertook both a significant investment risk and a meaningful mortality risk).

In a 1979 Release, the SEC issued a general statement of policy regarding the determination of the status under the federal securities laws of certain contracts issued by insurance companies. With the focus on section 3(a)(8), the Commission emphasized that a significant assumption of both mortality and investment risk was critical to the availability of the section 3(a)(8) exemption for insurance and annuity products that would otherwise be subject to regulation as investment contracts. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6051 (Apr. 5, 1979). This Release was withdrawn in 1986, coincident with the adoption of Rule 151 under the Securities Act, discussed further below.

(n11)Footnote 11. 17 C.F.R. § 230.151.

(n12)Footnote 12. Both Section 3(a)(8) and Rule 151 refer to "corporations" supervised by the insurance or banking commissioner or similar agency. With respect to pension and profit sharing plans, Section 3(a)(2) refers to a contract issued by an "insurance company," which is specifically defined in Section 2(13) of the Securities Act.

Rule 151 does not establish an all-inclusive definition purporting to encompass every annuity or insurance contract that falls within the section 3(a)(8) exemption. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6645 (June 4, 1986). Rather, the rule defines a class of instruments that the SEC believes to be clearly covered by section 3(a)(8). Consequently, a contract that does not fall squarely within the safe harbor of the rule may still be exempt under section 3(a)(8). Additionally, contracts or policies issued before prior to the adoption of Rule 151 are not eligible for consideration under the rule, and will be assessed on the basis of section 3(a)(8) and interpretive case law, see, e.g., Rothwell v. Chubb Life Ins. Co. of America, No. 96-83-B, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22630 (D.N.H. 1998) .

(n13)Footnote 13. For the full text of Rule 151, see Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

(n14)Footnote 14. In Berent v. Kemper Corp. 780 F. Supp. 431 (E.D. Mich. 1991) , the court applied Rule 151 to a life insurance policy, under which an insurer assumed the investment risk as required, guaranteed the principal amount of purchase payments and interest less any deductions, and agreed to pay a specified rate of interest under the contract. With these characteristics, the court concluded that the product was an exempt security, since it met the safe harbor requirements of Rule 151..

(n15)Footnote 15. 17 C.F.R. § 230.151A.

(n16)Footnote 16. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8996, at 4-5 (Jan. 8, 2009).

(n17)Footnote 17. 15. U.S.C. § 1012(b).

(n18)Footnote 18. See SEC v. National Securities, Inc., 393 U.S. 453, 89 S. Ct. 564, 21 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1969) (Statute governing sale and advertising of insurance policies regulates the "business of insurance").

(n19)Footnote 19. 87 F.3d 536 (D.C. Cir. 1996) .

38 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.10

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.10 Voluntary Exchanges Between Issuer and Security Holders--Section 3(a)(9)

[1] In General

Securities Act Section 3(a)(9) provides an exemption from registration for "any security exchanged by the issuer with its existing security holders exclusively where no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting such exchange." The Section 3(a)(9) exemption is used primarily for recapitalizations, in which an issuer exchanges one class of securities for another, n1 and for the issuance of new securities upon the exercise of conversion rights by the holders of convertible securities. It is also applicable to more subtle corporate financial transactions that may not initially appear to involve an exchange of securities. For example, a modification of the terms of an existing security, such as the extension of the maturity date on a debt instrument or the extension of the exercise period of warrants, may be considered a sale and exchange of securities that may qualify for an exemption under Section 3(a)(9). n2 The exemption also can be used for the exchange of existing common stock for new notes of the issuer. n3

The exemption under Section 3(a)(9) coexists with the provisions of Rule 145. Rule 145 deems an offer or sale to occur when security holders are asked to give their consent to a proposed transaction and, as a result, they receive a new or different security in exchange for their existing security, on the theory that this constitutes a new investment decision. The Preliminary Notes to the rule state that: n4

Transactions for which statutory exemptions under the Act, including those contained in sections 3(a)(9), (10), (11) and 4(2), are otherwise available are not affected by Rule 145.

...

A reclassification of securities covered by Rule 145 would be exempt from registration pursuant to section 3(a)(9) or(11) of the Act if the conditions of either of these sections are satisfied.

Rule 145 applies, inter alia, to reclassifications of securities, which are defined in Rule 145(a)(1) to include the substitution of one security for another, but to exclude a stock split, reverse stock split, or change in par value. Thus, to the extent that an exchange of securities does not qualify under the 3(a)(9) exemption, it is subject to Rule 145. n5

As with all exemptions, consideration should be given to what disclosures should be made in order to avoid violations of the civil liability and antifraud provisions of the Securities Act. In addition, although an exchange of shares may be exempt under Section 3(a)(9), the solicitation of the exchange must comply with the proxy provisions of Section 14(a) of the Exchange Act and the rules promulgated thereunder. n6 Likewise, the rules against market manipulation may come into play. n7

[2] Statutory Requirements

Section 3(a)(9) provides the following exemption: n8

Except with respect to a security exchanged in a case under title 11 of the United States Code, any security exchanged by the issuer with its existing security holders exclusively where no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting such exchange.

The statutory language of the Section 3(a)(9) exemption can be divided into four requirements. Availability of the exemption depends on: a single issuer; an exchange of securities; limitation of the exchange to existing security holders only; and no payment of commission or remuneration for solicitation of the exchange. The Commission has implied an additional requirement that the exchange be made in good faith and not as a step in a plan to avoid the registration requirements of the Act.

[a] Single Issuer. The Section 3(a)(9) exemption is by its terms available to single issuers only. The issuer of the securities to be given up must also be the issuer of the new securities. If the exchange is being undertaken to create a new entity, the exemption is not available where the new and old entities will be considered separate issuers. For example, the exemption is not available where general partnership interests are being exchanged for limited partnership interests, because the issuer of the limited partnership interests is a new entity that did not exist prior to the exchange, even though the same principal parties may be acting on behalf of both entities. n9

The continuation of a voting trust may be deemed to be the sale of a security and, unless the continuation is expressly provided for in the original trust instrument, will be considered to create a new trust and, therefore, involve a different issuer. In Reserve Life Insurance Company v. Provident Life Insurance Company, n10 the court held that, because a voting trust had an express provision for an extension of ten years beyond its initial period, the continuation of the trust qualified as an exchange under Section 3(a)(9). The continuation provision had been included to give the participants the flexibility to extend the trust for a period that might be reasonably necessary to carry out the trust's purpose of protecting against corporate raids. The trust, as extended, was not considered to be a new legal entity. Therefore, the transaction was considered to involve only a single issuer. n11

It appears that the Staff of the Commission will look beyond form to substance and economic reality in determining the identity of the issuer. Thus, a parent corporation may be considered to be a single issuer in a situation where the securities of one wholly owned subsidiary are exchanged for the securities of another wholly owned subsidiary and the subsidiaries have no economic substance or operations independent from the parent. n12 This is common where financing subsidiaries are involved in reorganizations in which an exchange offer is made between "old" and "new" entities that, as a matter of economic reality, are the same issuer from the perspective of the security holders. n13 However, the exemption is not available for the issuance of common stock by the parent of a subsidiary which issued convertible bonds, guaranteed by the parent, which were convertible into the parent company's common stock. n14

In certain circumstances, a substituted primary obligor of a security will be considered the issuer of that security. Thus, in a situation where a parent corporation became both the primary obligor with respect to a debt instrument and the issuer of the security resulting from the conversion of that debt obligation, the Commission considered the single issuer requirement to have been met. A significant fact was that the indenture for the debt securities provided for the substitution of the primary obligor without the consent of the security holders. n15 The "same issuer" conclusion in these circumstances is based on the fact that debt security holders of a subsidiary become security holders of the subsidiary's parent for purposes of section 3(a)(9) when the parent assumes joint and several liability with the subsidiary on the debt securities. Thus, when in the course of a reorganization or reclassification transaction, new securities are offered to the debt security holders in an exchange offer, the parent may be considered the same issuer with respect to the former and new securities. n16 However, where an issuer assumes the obligation to issue a substituted underlying security upon the conversion of a convertible debt security, but not the obligation to pay the existing debt obligations according to their terms, the issuer of the underlying security does not meet the single issuer requirement because it has not fully assumed the obligations of the original issuer. n17

A lack of complete identity of an issuer will not preclude the use of section 3(a)(9) where the securities involve substantially similar investments. For example, the SEC Staff has taken a no-action position with respect to an exchange of guaranteed debt securities of a subsidiary in exchange for the securities of the parent company guarantor. n18 This position reflects economic reality, which is further illustrated in a Staff No-Action letter on the use of Section 3(a)(9) where securities issued by a pre-merger entity were exchanged with securities issued by a post-merger entity which had become a joint obligor with respect to the old securities. n19

Where securities are exchanged due to a change in corporate domicile, the entity as incorporated in the new jurisdiction is arguably not the same issuer. n20 However, Rule 145 applies to this situation. Under Rule 145(a)(2), there is a specific exemption where the sole purpose of a transaction is to change an issuer's domicile within the United States. n21 In these situations it is plain that there is one issuer of both the issued and surrendered securities. This is true in most reclassifications as well. n22

[b] Exchange of Securities. The Commission has consistently interpreted the term "exclusively" in the statutory language to modify "any securities exchanged" in addition to modifying "existing security holders." However, this construction of the statutory language is subject to several exceptions, including the provisions of Rules 149 and 150. Greater latitude is given to what issuers may offer in exchange than to what security holders must give up in order to take advantage of the offer.

In general, nothing other than securities may be given up by the security holders in an exchange. If security holders must make a payment in cash in addition to giving up their securities, the requirement will not be met. However, where an exchange by the holders of convertible debentures involves the elimination of accrued interest on the debentures, the elimination of interest is not considered to be a cash payment by the security holders and therefore does not violate the requirement. n23 In addition, The Staff of the Commission has considered the requirement to be met where, as part of a restructuring plan, security holders execute releases that preclude potential litigation claims against the issuer that may arise as a result of the transaction. n24

However, the general rule of no cash payments by the security holders was modified by Rule 149. This rule allows security holders to make payments in cash which are necessary to effect equitable adjustments among security holders of the same class as to dividends or interest. n25

Although security holders are limited to making cash payments for equitable adjustments, Rule 150 allows the issuer to adopt an exempt Section 3(a)(9) plan of exchange under which payments are made to the security holders in connection with an exchange of securities. n26 The payment may be one that is paid directly in cash or indirectly, such as where an issuer reduces the conversion price on convertible securities. n27

An exchange of common shares for the right to receive, at the holders' option, either cash or securities was considered exempt where there was no intent to sell assets to repay indebtedness related to the exchange and, subsequent to the merger, the company's operations would be essentially the same in all material respects. n28 Also, an offer under which shareholders could exchange common stock for an obligation by the issuer (the new security) to make payments for it in future installments of principal and interest was considered exempt. n29

The characteristics of the security issued in the exchange need not be the same as those of the security surrendered. Therefore, a recapitalization that eliminates voting rights on common stock may qualify under Section 3(a)(9). n30

[c] Existing Security Holders Exclusively. The exchange must be with existing security holders exclusively. A public offering of the same issue of securities will destroy the exemption, because the public offering will be integrated with the exchange offer as one issue and thus involve persons who are not existing security holders. n31 The Commission will not consider securities of different classes as parts of a single issue. n32

The conversion of a security that had been issued with a delayed conversion provision is clearly a transaction with an existing security holder. However, if a security is issued with an immediate conversion privilege, it is likely to be considered to be an offering of both securities, even though the actual conversion of such a security may be within the Section 3(a)(9) exemption. n33

[d] No Commission or other Remuneration for Soliciting the Exchange. Section 3(a)(9) requires that no commission or other remuneration be paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting the exchange. The requirement is not violated if a company's directors and officers communicate with the security holders, provided there is no additional salary or other compensation being paid and the directors' and officers' activities are only incidental to their regular duties. n34 Such communications may involve the receipt of offering circulars, the security holders' understanding of the offer, the time span during which the exchange offer is available, answers to security holders' questions, and even comments on or affirmative representations on the merits of the exchange.

Companies may also employ investor relations organizations for a fixed fee to communicate with back office personnel at brokerages and banks and with other nominee security holders concerning details and understanding about the exchange. n35 Payments to financial advisers or investor relations firms in connection with an exchange offer will not constitute the payment of a commission or remuneration for purposes of section 3(a)(9) where the services to be rendered are merely administrative, the agent does not make any recommendations and the fee is not tied to the consummation of the exchange or the number of securities exchanged. n36 But a company's financial advisers and legal counsel who are being compensated for services in connection with an exchange offer must not solicit the exchange, nor can their compensation be contingent on consummation of the exchange. n37

Where more than one class of securities is voting on a recapitalization and only one class of securities would be involved in an exchange, it is not a violation of the no solicitation requirement to solicit the security holders of the classes of securities not being exchanged, as long as none of the holders so solicited are also holders of the class of securities being exchanged. n38

A brokerage's commissions paid under an independent clearing agreement with no additional fees to be paid for the exchange transactions will not violate the prohibition against commissions for soliciting. n39 However, the requirement will not be met where a brokerage gives an opinion of fairness with respect to an exchange and would communicate with shareholders and receive a fixed fee for the exchange. n40

Investment banking firms that participate in an exchange under a standby agreement n41 do not violate the requirement as long as they do not solicit the security holders. n42 However, because Section 3(a)(9) exempts only the exchange transactions, resales of securities acquired by an investment banker pursuant to a standby agreement cannot be Salomon Bothers, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3517 (Sept. 28, 1972) resold as part of that exemption. n43

[e] Good Faith Exchange. The Commission has implied an additional requirement under Section 3(a)(9) that the exchange be in good faith and not as part of plan to evade registration requirements. n44

[3] Resales

Because the exemption applies only to exchange transactions with an issuer, absent an available exemption, shares received in a Section 3(a)(9) transaction must be registered when they are resold. n45 A 1979 release announced that even though Rule 145(d) specifically states that it is applicable only to registered securities, the Staff will not recommend any enforcement action to the Commission if the requirements of Rule 145(d) are followed with respect to resales of securities that have been issued in a transaction covered by Rule 145 but not registered because of the availability of a Section 3(a)(9) exemption. n46

Under the safe harbor provision in Rule 145(d), n47 a seller will not be deemed to be an underwriter if the resale is in accordance with one of three alternative provisions of 145(d). n48 However, an additional problem may be presented where the securities surrendered or received in the exchange will be considered as having been issued in a transaction that did not constitute a public offering and are thus restricted securities. Also, special rules apply to resales of those securities if the securities issued in the exchange are received by an affiliate of the issuer. n49

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Grupo TMM, S.A. de C.V., SEC No-Action Letter (June 27, 2002) (Reclassification of one series into another in order to simplify corporate structure and establish one class of voting shares).

(n2)Footnote 2. Allied-Carson Corp., 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 585 (Feb. 12, 1976) . A proposal to extend the maturity date on outstanding debt securities at a higher interest rate was considered to be an offer to sell a new security, but also qualified as an exchange of securities that met the requirements for the 3(a)(9) exemption. However, the transaction had to comply with the requirements of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939.

(n3)Footnote 3. No-Action Letter, Genway Corporation, June 24, 1977.

(n4)Footnote 4. See the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A,, Section C, (Matthew Bender) for the full text of Rule 145.

(n5)Footnote 5. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5463, 1974 SEC LEXIS 3448 (Feb. 28, 1974) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See generally, Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Ch. 7 (Matthew Bender).

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 9(a)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Section F (Matthew Bender), (which has been applied to unregistered securities) and Rules 10b-13 and 10b-18 and Regulation M under the 1934 Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Section G (Matthew Bender).

See generally Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Ch. 6 (Matthew Bender).

(n8)Footnote 8. § 3(a)(9) was amended by § 306(b) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-598, 92 Stat. 2674 (1978) (effective October 1, 1979).

The amendments to Sections 3(a)(9) and 3(a)(10) by the Bankruptcy Reform Act removed the exemptions for bankruptcy securities from these Sections and made Section 1145 of the Bankruptcy Act the exclusive source of exemption for securities, other than certificates of indebtedness, issued in a Title 11 case.

(n9)Footnote 9. NEOKA Group 1987-I, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 76 (Jan. 19, 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 499 F.2d 715 (8th Cir. 1974) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Id. at 722 . The court found that the requirements of § 3(a)(9) were met under the circumstances presented because: only the holders of existing voting trust certificates were contacted; no new trust certificates were issued -- the old trust certificates were stamped to show the change in termination date; the voting trust was not materially changed, with the holders retaining the same equitable interests they had before the extension; and no commissions or other remuneration had been paid for soliciting the exchange.

The court also held that the voting trust, although composed of insurance company securities, did not qualify under the Exchange Act provision that exempts securities issued by an insurance company and that, therefore, the solicitations for the extension of the voting trust amounted to solicitations of proxies in violation of § 14(a) of that Act and the rules promulgated thereunder.

(n12)Footnote 12. IMCO Realty Services, Inc., 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 261 (Feb.6, 1990) . The debt securities of one wholly owned subsidiary were to be exchanged for the debt securities of another wholly owned subsidiary, both guaranteed by the parent. In issuing a favorable response, the Staff of the Commission noted inter alia that the notes surrendered and issued in the exchange had been unconditionally guaranteed as to principal and interest by the parent and that the wholly owned subsidiaries had no economic substance or operations independent from the parent and were formed exclusively to act as financing entities.

See also Grupo TMM, S.A. de C.V., 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 640 (June 27, 2002) . In Grupo TMM, the Commission staff agreed that interpositioning a CPO trust for ordinary participation certificates ("CPO") as a special purpose entity between the issuer of deposited securities and the holders of the related CPOs as part of a reclassification and exchange of securities to allow foreign investors to obtain economic rights in shares of the company would not change the identity of the issuer for purposes of the section 3(a)(9) exemption. The CPO Trust would not engage in any activities unrelated to this purpose, and would have no independent financial or economic activity. The same result was obtained in Pepsi-Gemex, S.A. de C.V., 2001 SEC No-Act LEXIS 608 (June 1, 2001) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., SunTrust Banks, Inc., 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 635 (July 16, 1999) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See National Can Company, SEC No-Action Letter (September 28, 1973).

(n15)Footnote 15. American General Corp., 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3689 (September 19, 1980) . Where an indenture for convertible debentures permitted the substitution of a successor corporation by a supplemental indenture without the consent of holders, provided the successor corporation assumed all of the obligations of the original issuer, and, upon the effective date of a merger, the surviving corporation and its parent assumed primary responsibility for the payment of principal, premium, if any, and interest on the convertible debentures of the merged corporation, the subsequent conversion of the debentures into parent company stock will meet the single issuer requirement.

See also Weatherford International, Inc., 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 612 (June 25, 2002) (Conversion or redemption of guaranteed debt securities for reorganized company's common shares would qualify for section 3(a)(9) exemption where the indenture under which the convertible securities are issued does not require any solicitation of consent of the holders of the convertible securities); Kerr-McGee Corporation, 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 677 (July 31, 2001) (Shares to be issued on conversion of company's convertible notes are eligible for section 3(a)(9) exemption when no consent of holders was required or would be solicited); BP Amoco p.l.c., 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 425 (March 27, 2001) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Petroleum Geo-Services ASA, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 562 (June 8, 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 17. PacWest Bancorp, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3623 (Oct. 24, 1979) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Echo Bay Mines, SEC NO-Action Letter (May 18, 1998).

(n19)Footnote 19. B.P. Amoco plc, SEC No-Action Letter (Mar. 27, 2001).

(n20)Footnote 20. Worldwide Energy Company Ltd., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 811 (Feb. 23, 1972) . A plan of reorganization and an exchange of shares due to a change of domicile received a favorable response from the Staff of the Commission. The letter of inquiry gave two grounds for an exemption from registration, i.e., exempt as not involving a public sale and exempt under Section 3(a)(9). The Staff gave no indication of whether it agreed with one or both grounds for exemption.

(n21)Footnote 21. Rule 145(a)(2) provides:

(2) Mergers or Consolidations. A statutory merger or consolidation or similar plan or acquisition in which securities of such corporation or other person held by such security holders will become or be exchanged for securities of any other person, unless the sole purpose of the transaction is to change an issuer's domicile solely within the United States.

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5463, 1974 SEC LEXIS 3448 (Feb. 28, 1974) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Grupo TMM, S.A. de C.V., SEC No-Action Letter (June 27, 2002).

See also Nabors Industries, Inc. and Nabors Industries Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter (Apr. 30, 2002) (Holders of the new securities had the same expectations).

(n23)Footnote 23. NJB Prime Investors, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1449 (May 14, 1976) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Seaman Furniture Company, Inc., 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1014 (Oct. 10, 1989) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Rule 149 provides the definition of "exchanged" in Section 3(a)(9) for certain transactions:

The term "exchanged" in Section 3(a)(9) shall be deemed to include the issuance of a security in consideration of the surrender, by the existing security holders of the issuer, of outstanding securities of the issuer, notwithstanding the fact that the surrender of the outstanding securities may be required by the terms of the plan of exchange to be accompanied by such payment in cash by the security holder as may be necessary to effect an equitable adjustment, in respect of dividends or interest paid or payable on the securities involved in the exchange, as between such security holder and other security holders of the same class accepting the offer of exchange.

(n26)Footnote 26. Rule 150 provides the definition of "commission or other remuneration" in Section 3(a)(9), for certain transactions:

The term "commission or other remuneration" in section 3(a)(9) shall not include payments made by the issuer, directly or indirectly, to its security holders in connection with an exchange of securities for outstanding securities, when such payments are part of the terms of the offer of exchange.

(n27)Footnote 27. Browning Debenture Holders' Committee v. DASA Corp., 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12838 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) . The court stated that, if plaintiff's theory was correct that a reduction in the conversion price of debentures was a payment by the issuer, the payment was within the terms of Rule 150.

(n28)Footnote 28. WestMarc Communications, Inc., 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1136 (Nov.10, 1989) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Rospatch, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4134 (Oct. 26, 1981) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Barber-Colman Co., 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3230 (May 5, 1980) . As part of a plan of recapitalization, an exchange of common stock with voting rights for common stock without voting rights and the issuance of two issues of preferred stock as a dividend were exempt under Section 3(a)(9).

(n31)Footnote 31. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, 1961 SEC LEXIS 90 (Dec. 6, 1961) addresses the integration issue as it applies to § 3(a)(11), the intrastate exemption. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4552, 1962 SEC LEXIS 166 (Nov. 6, 1962) addresses the integration issue as it applies to § 4(2), the private offering exemption. Under these exemptions, the Commission will look to whether the offerings (1) are part of a single plan of financing, (2) involve issuance of the same class of securities, (3) are made at or about the same time, (4) involve receipt of the same type of consideration, and (5) are made for the same general purpose.

Under Rule 147(b)(2), which applies to intrastate offerings, and Rule 502(a), which applies to Regulation D offerings, the Commission will consider offerings more than six months apart as not being made at or about the same time.

(n32)Footnote 32. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-2141, 1939 SEC LEXIS 629 (Aug. 8, 1939) . The General Counsel stated in this release that, although the Commission will not consider securities of different classes as part of a single issue, this did not mean that any difference in the incidents of two blocks of securities, however trivial, rendered them separate classes and therefore separate issues for the purposes of the Act.

(n33)Footnote 33. In re Crowell-Collier Publishing Co., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3825, 1957 SEC LEXIS 316 (Aug. 12, 1957) . The issuance of a security immediately convertible into another security constituted a continuing offer of the underlying security.

(n34)Footnote 34. Chris-Craft Industries, Inc., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4579 (Oct. 9, 1972) .

(n35)Footnote 35. Id.

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Petroleum GeoServices ASA, SEC No-Action Letter (June 8, 1999); Carton, Inc. and Subsidiaries, SEC No-Action Letter (Sept. 30, 1991); International Controls Corp., SEC No-Action Letter (Aug. 6, 1990).

In Exxon Mobil Corp., SEC No-Action Letter (June 28, 2002), the Staff granted no-action advice for a proposed exchange offer in which Exxon Mobil intended to engage a financial adviser for a flat fee to provide the following services:

- Advising and consulting on the structure and terms of, and procedures for, the exchange offer and the preparation of various communications to the holders of securities to be exchanged;
- Being named as financial adviser in the offering circular and letter of transmittal relating to the exchange offer;
- Advising on procedures to be used in connection with conversations with holders concerning the exchange offer;
- Notifying holders of the details of the exchange offer in communications limited to answering questions and resolving any confusion as to the mechanical and procedural aspects of the exchange offer;

- Confirming the accuracy of the addresses of the holders;
- Mailing or otherwise assisting in the distribution of exchange offer materials;
- Contacting holders to determine receipt of exchange offer materials and answering any questions regarding terms within the confines of the exchange offer materials;
- Contacting holders to determine what action they plan to take;
- Contacting holders to remind them of deadlines; and
- Ensuring that all information relating to the exchange offer is forwarded to beneficial owners by nominees.

(n37)Footnote 37. Seaman Furniture Company, Inc., 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1014 (Oct.10, 1989) .

(n38)Footnote 38. See Time, Inc., 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2664 (April 19, 1979) , in which a recapitalization involving an exchange of one class of securities for another was to be voted upon by all classes of securities outstanding and a proxy firm's solicitation of the two classes of shares other than the one being converted was found to not violate the no solicitation requirement where the proxy firm would ascertain prior to making a recommendation whether a holder of securities of the classes not being exchanged was also a record holder of the shares being exchanged and, if so, withholding any recommendation.

(n39)Footnote 39. In Boston Futures Management Corporation, 1984 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2756 (Nov. 21, 1984) , commodity brokerage commissions paid to a broker-dealer under an independent clearing agreement would not constitute a commission for soliciting where the commodity brokerage commissions arose out of the independent contractual relationship and no special or additional fee would be paid to the broker-dealer for its activities in connection with the transaction. The activities of the broker-dealer included having its representatives telephone those investors who had not voted within a given time period after receiving the proposal for the transaction and allowing the representatives to give an opinion on the merits of the proposal if investors asked for it.

See also Boston Futures Fund (II) and (IV), SEC No-Action Letter, 1987 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2407 (Sept. 14, 1987) .

(n40)Footnote 40. Dean-Witter & Co., 1974 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 997 (Dec. 23, 1974) (Where a broker-dealer would render an opinion of fairness for a proposed exchange and subsequently telephone shareholders to inquire whether they have received written materials and to answer any questions they might have, the Staff of the Commission gave an unfavorable response, despite assurances by the broker-dealer that answers would be confined to information contained in the materials.)

(n41)Footnote 41. Standby agreements are frequently entered into by issuers as a means of protecting their cash position when making a redemption call of a convertible security. A company may decide to make a redemption call when the underlying security to which the convertible security relates is selling at a price that is more attractive than the assigned redemption price and most security holders will thus be expected to exercise their conversion privilege. However, in order to guard against a drop in the market price of the underlying security during the period of the redemption, which could mean that many more shares will be redeemed at the assigned redemption price rather than converted, the issuer may enter into an agreement with one or more investment bankers. Under the terms of the agreement, the investment bank will receive a fee for redeeming shares, usually at a price somewhat in excess of the assigned redemption price. Shares redeemed by the investment bank are then converted to the underlying securities, which are then resold by the investment bank.

(n42)Footnote 42. Squibb, 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1234 (July 23, 1971) .

(n43)Footnote 43. Salomon Bothers, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3517 (Sept. 28, 1972) in which the Staff of the Commission acknowledged that in the past it had taken the position that standby agreements did not preclude the availability of the Section 3(a)(9) exemption, but stated that resales of securities so acquired must find a separate exemption in order to avoid the registration provisions of the Act.

(n44)Footnote 44. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-646, 1936 SEC LEXIS 484 (Feb. 3, 1936) . The General Counsel of the Commission gave the opinion that a court making a determination as to whether an exchange was made in good faith:

[w]ould take into account various factors such as the length of time during which the securities received by the issuer were outstanding prior to their surrender in exchange, the number of holders of the securities originally outstanding, the marketability of such securities, and also the question whether the exchange is one which was dictated by financial considerations of the issuer and not primarily in order to enable one or a few security holders to distribute their holdings to the public.

(n45)Footnote 45. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-646, 1936 SEC LEXIS 484 (Feb. 3, 1936) . This release responded affirmatively to the question whether securities received by a controlling stockholder in a § 3(a)(9) exempt transaction must be registered before being offered to the public.

(n46)Footnote 46. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, 1979 SEC LEXIS 968 (Aug. 2, 1979) . The Release took the same position with respect to resales of securities acquired in Section 3(a)(10) and Regulation A transactions, but specifically excluded resales under any other exemption.

See also PacWest Bancorp, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3623 (Oct. 24, 1979) , in which the court found that persons who are deemed to be underwriters under Rule 145(c) may resell in accordance with the provisions of Rule 145(d). In addition, persons who are deemed affiliates of the issuer may resell their shares in accordance with the volume and transaction provisions of Rule 144.

(n47)Footnote 47. Where acquirers receive an insubstantial amount of securities in proportion to the total amount issued, resales may generally be made in reliance on Section 4(1), which exempts persons who are not issuers, underwriters, or dealers, although there will be a greater burden of proof for challenged transactions than where the requirements of a safe harbor rule are met. See § 4.01 infra.

(n48)Footnote 48. The three alternative provisions refer to various sections of Rule 144, which provides a safe harbor for the sale of restricted and control securities. See , Ch. 6 infra for a discussion of Rule 144.

(n49)Footnote 49. Id.

See also PacWest Bancorp , n.39 supra.

39 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.11

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.11 Securities Issued in Judicially or Administratively Approved Exchanges--Section 3(a)(10)

[1] In General

Section 3(a)(10) provides an exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act for:

[A]ny security which is issued in exchange for one or more bona fide outstanding securities, claims or property interests... where the terms and conditions of such issuance and exchange are approved after a hearing upon the fairness of such terms and conditions at which all persons to whom it is proposed to issue securities in such exchange shall have the right to appear, by any court, or by any official or agency of the United States, or by any State or Territorial banking or insurance commission, or other governmental authority expressly authorized by law to grant such approval.

Originally, the exemption for securities issued in judicially or administratively approved exchanges was used sparingly, at least in part, because of similar provisions available under federal bankruptcy law. With the enactment of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, Section 3(a)(10) was amended specifically to exclude its applicability to securities exchanged in cases under title 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. n1 However, the exemption is significant for settlements n2 and business combinations. It may also be useful for financially troubled businesses whose reorganizations or rehabilitations are undertaken under laws other than the federal bankruptcy law. Under SEC Rule 145, for example, business combinations are subject to registration unless an exemption, such as the Section 3(a)(10) exemption, applies. n3

Rule 145 deems an offer or sale to occur when security holders are asked to give their consent to certain proposed transactions and, as a result, they receive a new or different security in exchange for their existing security, on the theory that this constitutes a new investment decision. Rule 145 specifically covers mergers, n4 consolidations, and exchanges of assets for securities. n5 The Preliminary Note to the Rule states that the exemption contained in Section 3(a)(10) is not affected by the Rule. n6 Thus, if a transaction defined by Rule 145 does not qualify for a Section 3(a)(10) or other permitted exemption, it will be subject to the requirements of the Rule. Also, if a combination or acquisition not covered by Rule 145, such as a stock for stock acquisition, does not qualify for a Section 3(a)(10) or other exemption, it will, of course, require registration.

The Section 3(a)(10) exemption may be useful where one or more requirements of the Section 3(a)(9) exemption, which exempts voluntary exchanges between an issuer and its security holders, n7 cannot be met. Thus, unlike Section 3(a)(9), under Section 3(a)(10), there need not be a single issuer, the security holders may make payments in cash, the exchange need not be confined to existing security holders only, and the issuer may make payments to solicit security holders to accept the exchange.

In all situations, the SEC Staff has identified the following conditions which must be met before the section 3(a)(10) exemption will be available: n8

- 1) The securities must be issued in exchange for securities, claims or property interests; they may not be offered for cash; n9
- 2) A court or authorized governmental entity must approve the fairness of the terms and conditions of the offering;
- 3) The reviewing court or authorized governmental entity must (a) find, before approving the transaction, that the terms and conditions of the exchange are fair to those to whom the securities will be issued, and (b) be advised before the hearing that the issuer will rely upon the section 3(a)(10) exemption based on the court's or authorized governmental entity's approval of the transaction;
- 4) The court or authorized governmental entity must hold a hearing before approving the fairness of the terms and conditions of the transaction;
- 5) A governmental entity must be expressly authorized by law to hold the hearing, although it is not necessary that the law require the hearing;
- 6) The fairness hearing must be open to everyone to whom the securities would be issued in the proposed exchange;
- 7) Adequate notice of the hearing must be given to all persons; and
- 8) There cannot be any improper impediments to the appearance by those persons at the hearing.

Two key considerations in applying the section 3(a)(10) exemption are: (1) that the appropriate court or authority will determine whether the terms and conditions of the securities to be offered and sold are fair to investors from both a substantive and procedural point of view; and (2) that all persons to whom it is proposed that the securities be issued receive notification and have an opportunity to be heard at the hearing at which the fairness of the offering is considered. n10 The authority of a court, agency or other governmental authority to make fairness determinations in this context must be clear, and standards to be applied in making the determination must focus on the fairness on terms and conditions of the proposed offering. In Orbital Sciences Corporation, n11 the Commission staff sought specific assurances and the advice of Canadian counsel concerning the nature of proceedings whereby the Supreme Court of British Columbia would consider and be asked to approve the fairness of terms and conditions of a proposed offering. The inclusion of "any court" in section 3(a)(10) necessarily includes a foreign court, and the SEC Staff has examined the fairness hearing procedures to be undertaken by foreign courts in no different light other than to require that the foreign court be advised prior to the hearing that its sanctioning of a plan will constitute the basis for issuance of securities under the section 3(a)(10) exemption from registration. n12

The ingenuity of the securities bar has led to persuasive but not always successful arguments for using the exemption in non-obvious circumstances. In one case, a debtor sought to exercise warrants that it owned and to distribute pro rata to its creditors the resulting shares under the Section 3(a)(10) exemption. Although the debtor would not be the issuer of the securities, it argued that it had a contractual control relationship with the issuer and would "cause the issuance" of the securities. The Commission staff was unable to agree and, in this context, stated that Section 3(a)(10) contemplated the issuance of new securities, not a distribution of portfolio securities, for bona fide claims against the issuer. n13

Although an exchange transaction may be exempt from registration under Section 3(a)(10), it is not exempt from the civil liability and antifraud provisions of the securities laws. Also, since the transaction, not the securities themselves, is the subject of the exemption under Section 3(a)(10), future sales of the securities must also qualify for an exemption or be subject to registration.

[2] Statutory Requirements

As indicated by the legislative history and a Release by the Commission, n14 the Section 3(a)(10) exemption is based on the premise that examination and approval of the fairness of the exchange by a competent authority, after a hearing with notice to affected parties, is a substitute for the protection afforded to the investor by the information which would otherwise be made available through registration. An example is a conversion of a company from a mutual insurance company to a stock life insurance company. n15

The statutory language of the exemption provides great latitude as to the elements of the exchange: any security may be issued for securities, claims, or other property interests and may be partly in exchange or partly in cash. Most of the questions with respect to the statutory requirements of the exemption have concerned two main issues: (1) the authority of a forum to approve an exchange and (2) issues concerning the fairness hearing, including the authority of state agencies to conduct a hearing.

[a] Approval Authority. The language of the exemption is clear that courts and federal agencies have the authority to approve an exchange. The authority granted to the courts is coextensive with the inherent authority of courts to decide the issues that are properly before them. The Commission has stated that approval by a foreign court may also satisfy the statutory requirement. n16 However, the issuer must provide the Division of Corporate Finance with an opinion from counsel licensed to practice in the foreign jurisdiction that says that prior to giving its approval, the foreign court must approve the fairness of the proposed exchange to persons receiving securities in the exchange. n17 Although a court may provide a fairness hearing and give its approval to an exchange, it will not rule on the validity of the use of the exemption itself unless the issue is specifically being litigated. n18

As regards state agencies, the grant of approval authority to the agency must be explicitly provided for. n19 Approval authority will not be valid unless its regulatory purpose includes assessing the transaction specifically from the viewpoint of its fairness to investors. n20

The exemption is not available until the point that a court or other forum has given its final approval. Prior to final approval, a solicitation or other offer in connection with an exchange would violate the Securities Act, because the securities in the exchange have neither been registered nor exempted. However, if an exchange transaction requires approval by shareholders entitled to vote on the matter, this must, in most instances, be done before a court or other forum can give its final approval. n21

The statutory authority of a government entity to approve the fairness of terms and conditions must require the entity to conclude affirmatively that the exchange is fair to the security holders participating in the exchange. That is to say, the statute must require the government entity to conclude that the terms and conditions of the exchange are "in the best interests of shareholders" or "fair" to shareholders, not that the exchange is "not unfair," "not unreasonable," "not prejudicial," or "not counter to the best interest of shareholders." n22 Also, the government entity must find the terms and conditions to be fair both proceduralkly and substantively.

[b] Fairness Hearing. The central requirement of the Section 3(a)(10) exemption is the fairness hearing, which is the functional equivalent of the full disclosure that would otherwise be provided in a prospectus and registration statement. n23 Courts are authorized to hold fairness hearings under the language of Section 3(a)(10). However, the authority of the courts to hold fairness hearings does not mean that the courts are obligated in all circumstances to do so. One court refused defendants' request for a fairness hearing under Section 3(a)(10), stating its reluctance to force unregistered securities on unwilling plaintiffs. The court found that the better remedy was rescission, which would allow plaintiffs to exercise a right that had previously been denied to them. Once the period for exercising the right had expired, defendants were then free to seek an exemption or file a registration statement, as warranted by the situation. n24

As a general matter, the fairness hearing must be open to everyone to whom securities would be issued in the proposed section 3(a)(10) exchange. The issuer must provide appropriate notice of the hearing in a timely manner, although section 3(a)(10) does not specify the information that must be contained in the required notice. The antifraud provisions of the federal securities govern disclosure. n25

The section 3(a)(10) exemption has often been used in connection with court-approved class action litigation settlements involving exchanges of securities, provided that the court approves the fairness of the terms and conditions of the exchange to those who will receive the securities. In its 1999 Staff Legal Bulletin discussing section 3(a)(10) conditions applicable generally, n26 the SEC Division of Corporate Finance identified these specific requirements for use of section 3(a)(10) in the litigation settlement context:

- (1) The court must be advised that the securities will be distributed in reliance upon the section 3(a)(10) exemption from registration based upon the court's approval of the transaction;
- (2) The court must hold a hearing open to everyone to whom the securities will be distributed;
- (3) Adequate notice must be provided to all persons to whom the securities will be distributed; and
- (4) There can be no improper impediments to the appearance by those persons at the hearing. n27

State governmental authorities and agencies must be explicitly authorized by law to hold fairness hearings. There need not be a provision under state law that a fairness hearing is mandatory; the Section 3(a)(10) requirement will be met where the state agency approving the transaction has explicit authority to hold a fairness hearing and does in fact hold a fairness hearing. n28

The requirement that the approving state agency have express authority to hold a fairness hearing is absolute. Thus, the authority to hold hearings other than fairness hearings coupled with the authority to approve the type of transaction that is the subject of an intended Section 3(a)(10) exemption will not meet this requirement. For example, a state securities commissioner's authority to hold an exemption hearing was found to be insufficient authority to hold a Section 3(a)(10) fairness hearing, despite the commissioner's additional authority to decide issues of fairness with respect to certain other securities transactions. n29

The Commission has stated that the hearing requirement implies that those who are to receive securities in the exchange be given adequate notice of the hearing and has also stated that the adequacy of various modes of notice will depend on particular facts and circumstances. n30 The protection afforded by the fairness hearing requires that the hearing be held prior to the finalization of the terms of an exchange. Thus, where a merger agreement was finalized prior to a fairness hearing, the exemption was not available. n31 Obviously, an offering will not be exempted where it is made to the general public, which could not and did not participate in the proceeding upon which the exemption was purportedly based. n32

The fairness hearing will not necessarily include a determination of the value of the securities to be issued in the exchange. In a fairness hearing for an exchange of securities as part of a settlement, the court, in SEC v. Blinder Robinson & Co., Inc., n33 stated that, because the underlying business was in a developmental state, the court had made no attempt to determine the value of the securities to be issued, which had to be considered speculative. The court stated:

I have made no attempt to determine value, now or in the future, because the fairness of the offer does not depend upon it. The factors which are to be considered include: (1) the recommendations of counsel; (2) the scope of the discovery record as an indicator of the adequacy of the investigation into the facts; (3) the apparent alternatives to the settlement; (4) the nature and volume of responses from those receiving notice of the hearing; and (5) the opportunity for direct participation in the process of obtaining full disclosure. n34

A minor change in the terms of the exchange, such as where an issuer wishes to be able to increase the number of shares to be issued in the event that the market price declines prior to the exchange date, will not require that a second fairness hearing be held. n35

In 1996, Congress adopted the National Securities Market Improvements Act ("NSMIA") n36 which included an amendment to Section 18 of the Securities Act to provide that no state law, rule, regulation or order "requiring, or with respect to, registration or qualification of securities, or registration or qualification of securities transactions, shall directly or indirectly apply" to any "covered security" or to a security that would be a covered security upon completion of the transaction. A covered security includes any security listed (or authorized for listing) on the New York Stock Exchange or the Nasdaq National Market System ("NMS"). The Commission issued interpretive letters which stated that states were prohibited from conducting fairness hearings concerning listed companies' securities. As a result, NSMIA initially preempted states' authority to conduct fairness hearings concerning the stock of such companies. However, Congress corrected this situation in 1998 with the adoption of the Securities Litigation Standards Act of 1998 ("SLUSA") n37 which contained a technical amendment to Section 18 of the Securities Act. This amendment provides that securities issued by listed companies in reliance upon the Section 3(a)(10) exemption are not covered securities for purposes of the federal preemption provisions of NSMIA. As a result of this amendment, the fairness hearing exemption under the Section 3(a)(10) exemption has been restored for public companies' securities, and issuers may rely on fairness hearings authorized and conducted by state authorities under state Blue Sky Laws.

[3] Resales

Resales of securities received in an exchange carried out in reliance on the section 3(a)(10) exemption from registration may be made to the extent that in doing so the seller is not deemed to be an underwriter or engaged in a distribution of the securities. "Affiliates" of an issuer n38 receiving securities in an exempt transaction face the prospect of presumptive underwriter status in resales of those securities. SEC Rule 144 n39 and its restrictions on resales of securities acquired in a transaction not involving a public offering has served as the principal avenue for a seller who is an affiliate of the issuer, and for others who would rely on its safe harbor from registration requirements. Rule 144 is available for resales of section 3(a)(10) exempt securities. n40

In many instances, section 3(a)(10) will be employed in connection with reclassifications or business combinations within the scope of SEC Rule 145 under the Securities Act. n41 Rule 145 subjects these types of transactions to registration requirements under the Act. The rule provides, however, that statutory exemptions under the Act, specifically including the section 3(a)(10) exemption, are available and are not affected. n42 A Rule 145 transaction may therefore be carried out without registration in reliance upon section 3(a)(10). However, the matter of resales remains an essential consideration. Rule 145 contains specific resale provisions which largely incorporate Rule 144 requirements by reference. n43

Prior to 2007, Rule 145 imposed presumptive underwriter status on any person who resold securities received in the transaction, thus subjecting them to Rule 144 restrictions in making resales. n44 In 2007, however, the SEC amended Rule 145 to eliminate the former "presumptive underwriter" provision in Rule 145(c), except for transactions involving a shell company. n45 As a result, if the recipient seller is not an affiliate of the issuer of the section 3(a)(10) securities, and has not been an affiliate within 90 days of the date of the exempt transaction, the securities may be resold without regard to Rule 144. This is because the securities would not constitute "restricted securities" within the meaning of Rule 144(a)(3). n46 If the securities are received by affiliates of the issuer, however, those holders may rely on Rule 144 in making resales. n47

Apart from the particular circumstances of a Rule 145 transaction, based on the responses by the Staff in several No Action Letters, n48 those who receive securities in the typical Section 3(a)(10) exempt transaction may generally resell according to their status as follows:

- (1) Shares issued will not be deemed restricted if issued in exchange for shares that are not restricted. n49
- (2) Shares acquired in exchange for restricted shares continue to be restricted, n50 but holders may tack the holding period of the exchanged in satisfying the holding requirement of Rule 144(d).
- (3) Persons who become affiliates of the entity whose shares are being issued must sell the shares under Rule 144, except that the holding period is applicable only to the extent that it applied to the shares given up in the exchange.

Finally, the Commission has stated that trading on a when-issued basis before final approval of a Section 3(a)(10) exchange would violate Section 5 of the Act. n51 Even where approval has been given by the appropriate court or agency, if the exchange is subject to further approval, when-issued trading cannot commence. n52 Thus, where an exchange plan had been approved by a court, but was subject to acceptance in writing by two-thirds of each class of creditors of each corporation participating in the plan, when-issued trading would violate Section 5 of the Act. n53 However, once approval is considered complete, an appeal and, in most circumstances, a stay of an order of a court would not appear to affect when-issued trading in most circumstances. n54

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. § 306(b), Pub. L. 95-598, 92 Stat. 2674 (Nov. 6, 1978) amended § 3(a)(10), effective October 1, 1979, by adding: "Except with respect to a security exchanged in a case under title 11 of the United State Code." The Securities Act of 1933 is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.11

For securities issued under the former Bankruptcy Act or under Section 3(a)(10) prior to its amendment, resales may be made in reliance on the safe harbor provided by Rule 148. For resale of securities under Rule 148 of the 1933 Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender), and of those issued under current § 1145 of the Bankruptcy Code, see 8 Collier on Bankruptcy, Ch. 1145 (15th ed. Matthew Bender).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Hanover Compressor Company, SEC No-Action Letter (Jan. 27, 2004) (Settlement of class action and derivative litigation involving issuance of "Settlement Shares," with terms and conditions of the settlement to be approved by a federal court).

See also Sprint Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter (Aug. 25, 2003) (Issuance of shares in exchange for the claim of fees payable by the company to the counsel representing plaintiffs in a shareholder derivative action).

(n3)Footnote 3. 17 C.F.R. § 230.145.

See also Ash, Reorganizations and Other Exchanges under Section 3(a)(10) of the Securities Act of 1933, 75 N.W. U. L. Rev. 1, 28-32 (1980).

(n4)Footnote 4. The Rule does not cover short form mergers because such mergers do not involve a vote or consent of all stockholders. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5463, 1974 SEC LEXIS 3448 (Feb. 28, 1974) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Under Rule 145(a)(2) and (3), the following transactions are defined as within the Rule:

(1) Reclassifications. ...

(2) Mergers or Consolidations. A statutory merger or consolidation, or similar plan or acquisition in which securities of such corporation or other person held by such security holders will become or be exchanged for securities of any other person, unless the sole purpose of the transaction is to change an issuer's domicile solely within the United States; or

(3) Transfers of Assets. A transfer of assets of such corporation or other person, to another person in consideration of the issuance of securities of such other person or any of its affiliates, if:

(i) Such plan or agreement provides for dissolution of the corporation or other person whose security holders are voting or consenting; or

(ii) Such plan or agreement provides for a pro rata or similar distribution of such securities to the security holders voting or consenting; or

(iii) The board of directors or similar representatives of such corporation or other person, adopts resolutions relative to paragraph (a)(3)(i) or (ii) of this section within one year after the taking of such vote or consent; or

(iv) The transfer of assets is a part of a preexisting plan for distribution of such securities, notwithstanding paragraph (a)(3)(i), (ii), or (iii) of this section.

(n6)Footnote 6. Rule 145, Preliminary Note states:

"Transactions for which statutory exemptions under the Act, including those contained in sections 3(a)(9), (10), and (11) and 4(2), are otherwise available are not affected by Rule 145."

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 3.10 supra.

(n8)Footnote 8. Rev. Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3 (Oct. 20, 1999). The Revised Staff Legal Bulletin was further revised in 2008, see Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3A (CF) (June 18, 2008), and is hereinafter referred to as the "June 2008 SLB."

(n9)Footnote 9. Although section 3(a)(10) will be available when options, warrants, or other convertible securities are issued in a qualifying transaction, section 3(a)(10) does not exempt the later exercise or conversion. See June 2008 SLB, paragraph 4(A).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Orbital Sciences Corp., 1995 SEC No-Act LEXIS 741 (Oct. 13, 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Orbital Sciences Corp., 1995 SEC No-Act LEXIS 741 , supra.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., SanDisk Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter (Sept. 21, 2006) (Israeli court to hold a fairness hearing on the terms and conditions of a plan).

See also AngloGold Limited, SEC No-Action Letter (Jan. 15, 2004) (High Court of Ghana to conduct fairness hearing).

The use of section 3(a)(1) in connection with foreign court proceedings and approval authority is discussed further in §3.11[2][a] below.

(n13)Footnote 13. Fox-Raff & Company, Inc., 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2980 (July 20, 1972) .

(n14)Footnote 14. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1934); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-312, 1935 SEC LEXIS 297 (March 15, 1935) .

(n15)Footnote 15. 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 590, Phoenix Home Life Mutual Insurance Co., May 31, 2001 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Hiram Walker Resources, Ltd., 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2855 (Jan.19, 1981) . The Commission staff's favorable response was conditioned on: (1) the foreign court (Supreme Court of Ontario, Canada) holding a hearing on the fairness of the terms and conditions of the issuance of such securities, (2) all persons to whom it was proposed to issue such securities receiving notification and having an opportunity to be heard at such hearing, (3) the court approving the fairness of the terms and conditions of the transaction described in the request for a No-Action Letter, and (4) the court being advised prior to the hearing that, if the terms and conditions of the transaction are approved, the shares to be issued will not be required to be registered under the 1933 Act by virtue of such court's approval.

See also Gilat Satellite Networks Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter, 2002 SEC No-Act LEXIS 844 (Dec.19,2002) (Israeli court fairness determination); Bio Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (September. 23, 1998) (Supreme Court of Queensland, Australia); Williams PLC, SEC No-Action Letter (Jan. 4, 2001 (High Court of Justice in England)); John Wood Group, SEC No-Action Letter (Mar.1, 2001 (Court of Sessions in Scotland) and IC/CI Bank Ltd., December 13, 2001 (High Courts of Bombay and Gujarat at Ahmedabad).

See also French Nationalization Law of 1982, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2391 (May 5, 1982) . The Commission staff's favorable response in this instance shows deference to the acts of a foreign government. The request for no action was premised on three grounds: (1) the bonds to be issued by agencies of, and guaranteed by, the French government did not involve a "sale" because of the lack of any element of choice or volition on the part of those to whom the securities were to be issued, (2) the number of bonds to be issued to U.S. residents was small and no secondary market was likely to develop, and (3) the extensive quasi-judicial review by governmental bodies that deliberated about the law prior to its passage bore a strong resemblance to the proceedings contemplated by § 3(a)(10), even though the shareholders were not afforded an opportunity to appear before them. In addition, the summary of the request to the staff stated that the situation was clearly distinguishable from those in which registration of securities issued by a foreign government agency is required because, in this case, no effort was being made to enter the U.S. capital markets for purposes of raising funds. Also, the issuance of the bonds to U.S. residents was but an incidental consequence of action taken by a foreign government for purely domestic considerations. Moreover, the issuance of bonds to limited number of U.S. residents would have at most an indirect, de minimis impact on U.S. investors and U.S. securities markets. In rendering its favorable reply, the staff merely stated that it did not necessarily agree that there was no "sale" within the meaning of the 1933 Act. Significantly, it did not reject the other two grounds for the exemption.

(n17)Footnote 17. June 2008 SLB, paragraph (B)(4).

(n18)Footnote 18. In Continental Assurance Co. v. MacLeod-Stedman, Inc., 694 F. Supp. 449, 467 (N.D. Ill. 1988), the court held that § 3(a)(10) only requires approval of the terms and conditions of the exchange and that, if the parties required further assurances, they could request a No-Action Letter from the SEC.

(n19)Footnote 19. See Opinion of General Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-312, 1935 SEC LEXIS 297 (March 15, 1935) :

In my opinion a State governmental authority (with the possible exception of a banking or insurance commission) must possess express authority of law to approve the fairness of the terms and conditions of the issuance and exchange of the securities in question... . The requisite express authorization of law to approve the fairness of such terms and conditions... to give effect to the words "express" and "by law," must be granted clearly and explicitly.

See also No-Action Letter, SC Acquisition Corp., July 13, 1996, where the requesting corporation was obtaining a finding of fairness by the California Commissioner of Corporations.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Peoples Mid-Illinois Corp.; Peoples Bank of Bloomington, 1971 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1921 (Aug. 16, 1971) . Exemption was not available where approval by the Federal Reserve Board was for the purpose of a bank becoming a bank holding company. It was the staff's view that a governmental authority must be expressly authorized by law to approve the fairness of an exchange from the standpoint of investors.

See also Rhinelander Tel. Co., 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 903 (Aug. 8, 1989) . Under the applicable Wisconsin statutes, the state Public Service Commission, whose approval for a proposed reorganization was necessary on two separate grounds, was authorized (1) to approve an issuance of securities where the agency found that the issuance would afford purchasers reasonable protection, and (2) could not approve a reorganization plan unless it was consistent with the public interest. The staff's unfavorable response stated that it did not view the terms "reasonable protection" and/or "consistent with the public interest" as analogous to a statutory mandate to determine the fairness of an exchange from the standpoint of shareholders.

(n21)Footnote 21. In Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-296, 1 Fed. Sec. L.Rep. (CCH) P 2245.17 (Feb. 15, 1936), the opinion of the General Counsel stated that deposit receipts issued prior to a court's confirmation of a reorganization plan under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act need not be registered if their legal effect was equivalent to approval or acceptance of the plan.

(n22)Footnote 22. June 2008 SLB, paragraph 4(B).

(n23)Footnote 23. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-312, 1935 SEC LEXIS 297 (March 15, 1935) .

[T]he whole justification for the exemption afforded by section 3(a)(10) is that the examination and approval by the body in question of the fairness of the issue in question is a substitute for the protection afforded to the investor by the information which would otherwise be made available to him through registration.

In S.E.C. v. Blinder Robinson & Co., Inc., 511 F. Supp. 799, 802 (D. Colo. 1981) , the court stated:

In summary, the approach to the determination of "fairness" and approval of this settlement agreement, invoking the exemption from registration provided by Section 3(a)(10), is consistent with recognition of the purpose of the Securities Act of 1933 to protect investors by promoting full disclosure of the information believed to be necessary to the making of informed investment decisions... The fairness hearing here has been the functional equivalent of the full disclosure which would be provided in an appropriate prospectus and registration statement.

(n24)Footnote 24. Pittsburg Terminal Corp. v. B & O Railroad Co., 586 F. Supp. 1297 (W.D. Pa. 1984) , aff'd without op., 760 F. 2d 260 (3d Cir.) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 919, 106 S. Ct. 247, 88 L. Ed. 2d 256 (1985) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See June 2008 SLB, paragraph 4(C).

(n26)Footnote 26. Rev. Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3.

(n27)Footnote 27. In all circumstances, the Staff has observed that an issuer that intends to rely on the section 3(a)(10) exemption should consider whether, as a practical matter, imposing prerequisites to appearance will prevent those persons from having a meaningful opportunity to appear at the hearing. The mere requirement to file a notice of intention to appear, however, would not be considered such an impediment. See ICICI Bank, SEC No-Action Letter (Dec. 13, 2001); Digicon, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (Aug. 19, 1996).

(n28)Footnote 28. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-312, 1935 SEC LEXIS 297 (March 15, 1935) , where the opinion of the General Counsel stated:

[I]f state law expressly authorizes the approving authority to hold a hearing on the fairness of the terms and conditions of the issuance and exchange of securities, and such a hearing is in fact held, this requirement of Section 3(a)(10) is satisfied.

As discussed further below, this is particularly meaningful in the context of fairness hearings conducted under state Blue Sky Laws. Securities offered and sold in reliance on section 3(a)(10) are not "covered securities" under NSMIA, and thus an issuer may rely on a fairness hearing conducted under state securities laws to perfect an exemption under section 3(a)(10) for securities that would otherwise be NSMIA covered securities. See June 2008 SLB, paragraph (B)(3).

(n29)Footnote 29. Rice Lake Bancorp, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, [1980 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep (CCH) P 76,385 (April 21, 1980). The Commissioner's additional authority to consider whether the sale or issuance of securities is or would be unfair or inequitable to purchasers in connection with the denial, suspension or revocation of a registration statement filed pursuant to the state statutes was found to be insufficient to hold a Section 3(a)(10) fairness hearing because it was applicable only to situations in which a registration statement had been filed, as opposed to situations where an exemption was being sought.

See also United Funeral System, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,965 (Jan. 25, 1989).

(n30)Footnote 30. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-312, 1935 SEC LEXIS 297 (March 15, 1935).

(n31)Footnote 31. Fidelity Financial Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter [1972 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,840 (June 1, 1972).

(n32)Footnote 32. S.E.C. v. Granco Products, 236 F. Supp. 968 (S.D.N.Y.1964) .

(n33)Footnote 33. 511 F. Supp. 799 (D. Colo. 1981) . The settlement in this case specifically provided that each offeree had the opportunity to evaluate the proposal on an individual basis and that those persons who did not wish to accept the offer were not foreclosed from pursuing private claims for relief.

But see Continental Assurance Co. v. MacLeod-Stedman, Inc., 694 F. Supp. 449, 468 (N.D. Ill. 1988) . The court found sufficient evidence that the settlement was of fair value and was reached after fair dealing, noting the different approach to fairness in Blinder Robinson.

(n34)Footnote 34. 511 F. Supp. at 801 .

(n35)Footnote 35. Parsons Corp/RMP Int'l, Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter [1981-82 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,006 (June 4, 1981). The staff's favorable response noted that the increase would result in the shareholders receiving more units than otherwise, the number of units representing the increase was small in relation to the amount outstanding, and the California Department of Corporations had agreed to permit the increase without the necessity of a second hearing.

(n36)Footnote 36. Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416.

(n37)Footnote 37. Pub. L. No. 105-353, 112 Stat. 3227.

(n38)Footnote 38. In this context, as in any other, an "affiliate" of an issuer is a person that directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls or is controlled by, or is under common control with, such issuer. See, e.g., Securities Act Rule 144(a)(1), 17 C.F.R. §230.144(a)(1).

(n39)Footnote 39. 17 C.F.R. §230.144.

(n40)Footnote 40. See § 6.03[5][c] infra for a discussion of restricted securities issued in a Section 3(a)(10) transaction and Ch.6 infra for a discussion of the resale of restricted and control securities.

(n41)Footnote 41. 17 C.F.R. §230.145.

(n42)Footnote 42. See Preliminary Note to Rule 145, 17 C.F.R. §230.145.

(n43)Footnote 43. See Rule 145(d), 17 C.F.R. §230.145(d).

(n44)Footnote 44. The holding period restriction under Rule 144 was modified specifically to address resales by recipients in Rule 145 transactions. See Rule 144(d)(3)(viii), 17 C.F.R. §144(d)(3)(viii).

(n45)Footnote 45. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869 (Dec. 6, 2007).

(n46)Footnote 46. June 2008 SLB, paragraph 5.

(n47)Footnote 47. Id.

(n48)Footnote 48. See Hiram Walker Resources, Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter [1981 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,796 (Jan. 19, 1981).

(n49)Footnote 49. But see St. Ives Holding Company, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1987 Transfer Binder] Fed.

Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,465 (August 24, 1987), in which the shares received in exchange for restricted shares in a § 3(a)(10) transaction, which was followed by a public offering of additional securities, would not be deemed restricted pursuant to Rule 144(a)(3) and could be resold in the manner provided for in Rule 145(d)(1).

(n50)Footnote 50. See Kasper Instruments, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (Feb. 26, 1976).

(n51)Footnote 51. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3000, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2185 (June 7, 1944).

(n52)Footnote 52. Id. The Opinion of the Chief Counsel to the Corporate Finance Division addressed the question of when-issued trading on the over-the-counter market where the terms of the Commission's order approving a voluntary exchange plan stated that the Commission's order was not operative until the appropriate District Court entered an order enforcing the plan. The Chief Counsel stated that the terms and conditions of the issuance and exchange of a security are not approved within the meaning of section 3(a)(10) until completion of the total process of approval required in the particular case.

(n53)Footnote 53. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3011, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2190 (August 28, 1944).

(n54)Footnote 54. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3343, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2197 (May 24, 1949). The Opinion of General Counsel stated:

40 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.12

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.12 Intrastate Offerings--Section 3(a)(11)

[1] In General

The exemption in section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act for securities offered and sold only to persons who are resident within a single state or territory rests on the notion that localized offers and sales of securities to finance local business are best left to localized regulation. Thus, state Blue Sky laws are presumed to be the most effective and efficient means of regulating such offerings which, by their essential characteristics, are not national in character.

As with several "securities" exemptions in section 3 of the federal Securities Act, the intrastate offering exemption is in every practical sense a transactional exemption. The securities involved in a qualifying section 3(a)(11) offering are exempt from Securities Act registration requirements. However, qualification for the exemption is dependent upon specific requirements applicable to the offer and sale of the securities, as well as qualifying conditions applicable to the issuer itself and the use of proceeds. Although historically the intrastate exemption appears to be well utilized, the nature and requirements of the exemption render it somewhat perilous. The adoption in 1974 of Rule 147, which provides a safe harbor for the intrastate exemption for those issuers who meet all the requirements of the Rule, alleviated some of the uncertainty with respect to such important aspects of the exemption as what constitutes an issue of securities and the period of time during which resales to nonresidents are prohibited. n1 Nevertheless, because a single sale to a non-resident of the state n2 of the offering will destroy the availability of the exemption for a particular issue, issuers and their counsel may wish to consider the availability of other exemptions. Offerings carried out under the safe harbor rules of Regulation D under the Securities Act, for example, may provide a more workable framework under a given set of circumstances.

Added to the uncertainty is the fact that the SEC staff will respond to requests for No-Action Letters under Section 3(a)(11) or Rule 147 in only the most compelling circumstances. n3 Nevertheless, the flexibility of section 3(a)(11) and Rule 147 offerings is evident in the fact that there is no maximum offering amount, and there are no sophistication or similar qualifying criteria applicable to offerees and purchasers. Although state Blue Sky laws and regulations may impose particular qualifying conditions, and indeed, subject intrastate offerings to "merit review" procedures and requirements, there are no other federal requirements.

A preliminary note to Rule 147 states that the rule does not raise any presumption that the exemption provided by Section 3(a)(11) is not available for transactions that do not satisfy all of the provisions of the rule. n4 By its terms, the Rule applies to use of the intrastate exemption by issuers only. However, because the Rule is not the exclusive means for use of the exemption, persons in control of the issuer can avail themselves of the Section 3(a)(11) exemption for secondary offerings, provided that the exemption would be available to the issuer for a primary offering. n5

Under the Investment Company Act of 1940, the intrastate exemption is not available for securities issued by companies that are required to be registered under that Act. n6 Also, the exemption is not available for intrastate Keogh and IRA plans whose assets are commingled with assets of nonresident plans. n7

As noted above, despite the fact that section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act exempts securities offered and sold under it from registration, section 3(a)(11) is in practice a transaction exemption, and the securities issued under the exemption are not forever exempt. Subsequent resales of securities received under the exemption must be registered unless an exemption applies. n8 As with other exemptions, Section 3(a)(11) is subject to the antifraud and civil liability provisions of the securities laws. n9 Consideration and care should therefore be given as to what disclosures should be made in order to avoid potential liability. n10

[2] Statutory/Rule 147 Requirements

Section 3(a)(11) exempts:

Any security which is a part of an issue offered and sold only to persons resident within a single State or Territory, where the issuer of such security is a person resident and doing business within or, if a corporation, incorporated by and doing business within, such State or Territory.

The legislative history provides almost no guidance as to the interpretation of the statutory language. As originally enacted, the exemption was an exception to the provisions in Section 5 regarding use of the mails. n11 As amended in 1934, the legislative history made clear that the exemption was not limited to the use of the mails and that, for example, the use of an advertisement in a newspaper that is distributed in interstate commerce does not invalidate an otherwise available exemption. n12 In a 1961 release, the Commission stated "[a]s appears from the legislative history, by amendment to the Act in 1934, this exemption was removed from Section 5(c) and inserted in Section 3, relating to "Exempted Securities," in order to relieve dealers of an unintended restriction on trading activity. This amendment was not intended to detract from its essential character as a transaction exemption." n13

In the first release with respect to the exemption, n14 the Federal Trade Commission, which then had responsibility for the administration and enforcement of the Securities Act, pointed out that, in order for the exemption to be available, the securities had to be exclusively in the hands of investors resident within a single state at the time of completion of their ultimate distribution. The Commission stated that ultimate distribution would include the disposition of securities by investors in any secondary distribution that might take place pursuant to arrangements by the issuer or underwriters. The Commission also stated that an early listing of the securities on an exchange might be a further indication that further distribution of securities was contemplated prior to completion of the securities' ultimate distribution.

Three years later, the Securities and Exchange Commission issued a release n15 that emphasized the limitations of the exemption. The Release stated that the requirements of Section 3(a)(11) would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to fulfill except with respect to issues that represent local financing by local industries carried out through local investment. n16 The Release also explained how a sale to a non-resident would destroy the exemption with respect to an entire issue, even if the sale were rescinded: n17

[S]ince under section 3(a)(11) the exemption is applicable only if the entire issue is distributed under the circumstances specified, any ... sales to a non-resident in connection with the distribution of the new issue would destroy the exemption as to all securities which are a part of that issue.

The single or entire "issue" concept is critical in the application of the intrastate offering exemption. It forces consideration of the prospect for "integration" of separate offerings or transactions into a single issue, such that an exemption like the intrastate offering exemption, when applied to the entire offering would destroy its applicability. Integration is a key consideration in all exempt transaction settings. Its specific application under Securities Act section 3(a)(11), however, is discussed below, as it is perhaps the most significant limiting factor in considering the availability of the exemption. Once the "single issue" element of intrastate offerings is explored, each other element of the exemption is discussed in detail.

[a] Part of an Issue. A significant limitation of the exemption is that, with respect to the same issue of securities, it cannot be combined with any other exemption that might apply for nonresidents. A single sale (or offer) to a nonresident, whether or not the sale would be exempt as an isolated transaction, would make the exemption unavailable for the entire issue. As stated by the Commission: n18

[I]t would... be immaterial that the sales might be made without use of the mails or instruments of interstate commerce, or by persons themselves exempt from registration and prospectus requirements, and might therefore, as isolated transactions, involve no violation of the Securities Act. Any such sales to non-residents, however few, and even though legal in themselves, would preclude compliance with the conditions of section 3(a)(11), and would render the exemption unavailable for that portion of the issue sold to residents through use of the mails.

In Hillsborough Investment Corporation v. SEC, n19 the court underscored the significance of what constitutes an issue and the taint with respect to any issue where one or more sales to nonresidents has occurred. In that case, after an issuer had been subjected to an injunction because of sales to nonresidents, the issuer made an attempt to again avail itself of the exemption through a recapitalization, by exchanging securities with resident security holders from the initial issue and selling additional shares only to residents. But the court perceived that, in reality, the newly authorized securities to be issued differed only in a small degree from the enjoined securities and that the recapitalization was an attempt at substitution for those securities, i.e. an attempt to cure the defects of the first offering. n20

The question of what constitutes an issue is one of fact. In one of the first decisions with respect to the exemption, Shaw v. U.S., n21 the court rejected the argument that shares that were the subject of a required state permit constituted an issue of securities, stating that a provision of state law cannot be determinative of the meaning of the term "issue" under Section 3(a)(11). In a 1961 Release on the intrastate exemption, the Commission enumerated several factors, any one or more of which may be determinative of whether offerings will be integrated, i.e., considered to be part of the same issue. The Commission listed the following factors: n22

- (1) are the offerings part of a single plan of financing;
- (2) do the offerings involve issuance of the same class of security;
- (3) are the offerings made at or about the same time;
- (4) is the same type of consideration to be received; and
- (5) are the offerings made for the same general purpose.

In addition, resales of securities will be considered part of the initial issue until the point that the securities have reached their ultimate distribution or have "come to rest." n23 In Brooklyn Manhattan Transit Corp., n24 the Commission, after stating that the point at which a distribution is completed is a question of fact to be determined in light of all the circumstances of an offering, applied a one year standard, subject to refutation upon a showing of fact that a distribution was completed in less than a year. n25

Under Rule 147(b), for purposes of the rule only, the same or similar classes of securities will be deemed not to be part of the same issue where offers and sales made other than pursuant to the Rule take place more than six months before or more than six months after offers and sales made pursuant to the rule. n26 In deciding an interpretative issue under Rule 147(b), the Commission staff stated that a deferred fee to a non-resident placement agent would not be deemed to be part of an issue for purposes of Rule 147(b). n27 The concern of the issuer arose from the fact that the deferred fee might be viewed as dependent on the efforts of the issuer and thus a security that was being issued to a non-resident.

With respect to debt securities, the payout periods, interest rates, and time intervals between offerings appear to be important factors. In S.E.C. v. Dunfee, n28 the defendant sold six per cent notes payable in 20 monthly installments, followed by a period of eight months in which it sold no securities, and then sold seven per cent notes payable in 36 months. The court held that the latter notes constituted a new issue of a separate and distinct security and that the intrastate exemption was available.

[b] Offers and Sales to Residents Only. Clearly, the terms of the exemption require that offers and sales be to residents of a single state or territory. A single offer or sale to a nonresident will make the exemption unavailable as to the entire issue of securities. n29 A seasonal or temporary residence, such as the assignment of military personnel to a base, is not considered "residency" for the purpose of Section 3(a)(11) and Rule 147. n30 Under Rule 147(d)(2), an individual is deemed to be a resident of a state or territory if such individual has, at the time of the offer and sale to him, his principal residence in the state or territory. Because the Commission has stated that mere representations of residence by offerees should not be relied on, prudence dictates that some independent verification of residence be obtained. n31

Because of the broad definition of "offer" in the Securities Act encompassing any attempt to dispose of a security for value, the strict limitation under section 3(a)(11) and Rule 147 that offers be made only to residents within a single state or territory poses a substantial risk to issuers who solicit purchasers by means of advertising in newspapers or through broadcast media and the Internet. Certainly with regard to Internet communications, the ability to control the dissemination of advertisements is severely limited, and even with newspapers or broadcast messages, the possibility exists that the advertisements will be seen or heard by persons in other states. Cross-border offers made intentionally by an issuer, without any attempt to limit their reach, violate section 3(a)(11). n32 However, the SEC staff granted a no-action request for an issuer intending to use newspaper or broadcast advertising media where the advertising and solicitation materials clearly and conspicuously stated that the offer was intended to be made only to bona fide residents of California, and that sales would be made only to California residents. n33 The same approach to controlling offers via the Internet would seem valid. Indeed, the methods by which Internet communications can be controlled so as to prevent any "offer" of securities outside a specific geographical limit is now well developed as a result of nearly uniform state Blue Sky law compliance procedures.

The one exception to the single state requirement appears to be sales to foreign investors. For example, a real estate investment trust issuing shares on a continuous basis to California residents in reliance on the intrastate exemption received a favorable response from the Commission staff to allow the trust to offer shares outside the United States to non-residents of the United States. n34 As part of its request for a No-Action Letter, the issuer stated that it would place a legend on all shares sold outside the United States to prevent resale to any resident of the United States other than residents of California. n35 The staff apparently agreed with the reasoning of the issuer that the Securities Act was not designed to protect foreign investors. It conditioned its favorable response on the issuer complying with Rule 147(e) and

(f). n36

Favorable SEC No-Action letters have also been issued in circumstances where a corporation with out of state shareholders has organized a holding company and has issued stock in connection with this transaction. In one example, a bank proposed to reorganize and create a one bank holding company by merger with the existing bank. The bank had over 275 shareholders, 20 of whom were out of state residents. The bank holding company proposed to offer stock to the resident shareholders and cash to non-resident shareholders for their shares of stock in the bank. The SEC staff agreed that the cash offering to non-resident shareholders would not effect an otherwise valid intrastate offering exemption. n37

Where an offering is made through an installment sale, the question of when the sale is completed will be critical in order to meet the purchasers' residency requirement. If the sale is considered to be completed at the time that the final payment is made and the certificate delivered, then the residency requirement cannot be met because there is no way to assure that some of the purchasers will not move during the period of the installments. n38 However, if an installment sale is structured so that it is final and complete at the time that a purchase agreement is signed, subject to cancellation and forfeiture of the security in the event of non-payment, the residency requirement may be able to be met.

Under Rule 147(d)(3), a corporation, partnership, trust, or other business organization that is organized for the specific purpose of acquiring part of an issue offered pursuant to the Rule will be deemed not to be a resident of the state or territory unless all of the beneficial owners of the organization are residents of the state or territory. n39 However, a non-resident trustee may acquire securities in an intrastate offering without destroying the availability of the Rule 147 safe harbor, where the life beneficiaries of the trust are residents of the state of the offering. n40

[c] Issuer Residence. Section 3(a)(11) requires that the issuer be resident within the state of the offer or sale and, if a corporation, that it be incorporated within the state. In addition, under Rule 147(c)(1), a limited partnership or business trust must be organized pursuant to the laws of the state. The Rule provides that a general partnership or other entity that is not formed under a specific state law must have its principal office within the state. n41 Therefore, the nonresidence of one or more general partners is not relevant to the residency requirement.

The formation of local business entities by a single multi-state business enterprise in order to meet the requirements of the exemption is invalid. In S.E.C. v. Freeman, n42 the court stated: "[t]he formal device of separate incorporation cannot shield what in reality is a single multiple state organization from the registration requirements of the Securities Act." In the Preliminary Notes to Rule 147, it is stated:

Finally, in view of the objectives of the rule and the purposes and policies underlying the Act, the rule shall not be available to any person with respect to any offering which, although in technical compliance with the rule, is part of a plan or scheme by such person to make interstate offers or sales of securities. In such cases registration pursuant to the Act is required.

Also, in the Release accompanying the adoption of Rule 147, the Commission stated: n43 "[A]ny plan or scheme that involves a series of offerings by affiliated organizations in various states, even if in technical compliance with the rule, may be outside the parameters of the rule and of Section 3(a)(11) if what is being financed is in effect a single business enterprise."

At least one No-Action Letter has been issued, without a discussion on the merits, where the Commission staff was apparently satisfied that a newly created local subsidiary was not part of a scheme to avoid registration for an interstate offering. In that case, although the parent had formerly transacted business within the locale without formally creating a separate subsidiary, the facts indicated that the offering would be for a local business that was significantly different from the parent's activities elsewhere. n44

Rule (c)(1) also provides that an individual who is deemed an issuer, such as a promoter issuing preincorporation certificates, will be deemed a resident if the individual's principal residence is within the state.

[d] Issuer Doing Business Within. The "doing business" requirement has presented the most questions of all the requirements for the exemption. The Commission stated in its 1961 Release on the intrastate exemption n45 that, in order to meet the doing business requirement, the issuer must be performing substantial operational activities within the state. Activities such as bookkeeping, stock record, and similar activities are clearly not sufficient to meet the requirement. n46 As an example of a business that would not meet the requirement, the Commission stated: n47

[T]he exemption would be unavailable to an offering by a company made in the State of its incorporation of undivided fractional oil and gas interests located in other States even though the company conducted other business in the State of its incorporation. While the person creating the fractional interests is technically the "issuer" as defined in section 2(4) of the Act, the purchaser of such security obtains no interest in the issuer's separate business within the State.

In the Release adopting Rule 147 in 1974, n48 the Commission stated with respect to the exemption that "not only should the business be located within the state, but the principal or predominant business must be carried on there." This Release follows the reasoning in Chapman v. Dunn, n49 in which the court stated that "doing business" in the context of Section 3(a)(11) means that an issuer must conduct a predominant amount of the income producing operations of a business within a state. n50 Also, as pointed out by the Iowa Supreme Court in Midwest Management Corp. v. Stephens, et al., n51 the critical issue is not the location of the parties who pay a company's income but the location of the company's income producing activity.

Rule 147 contains fixed percentages of assets and revenue criteria for determining whether an issuer is "doing business within" for purposes of the Rule. Under Rule 147(c)(2), an issuer will be deemed to "doing business within" a state if with respect to:

- (1) Revenues: at least 80 per cent of the gross revenues of the issuer and its subsidiaries on a consolidated basis are derived from the operation of a business or property located in, or the rendering of services within, the state; n52
- (2) Assets: at least 80 per cent of the issuer's assets and those of its subsidiaries on a consolidated basis at the end of the most recent fiscal semi-annual period prior to the first offer of any part of the issue are located within such state;
- (3) Use of Proceeds: at least 80 percent of the proceeds received in the offering must be used within the state; n53 and
- (4) Principal Office: the issuer's principal office is located in the state.

For purposes of the 80 per cent gross revenues test, if the first offer of any part of the issue is made during the first six months of the issuer's current fiscal year, the calculation should be made according to the most recent fiscal year. If the first offer of any part of the issue is made during the last six months of the issuer's current fiscal year, the calculation should be made according to either the subsequent six month period or the twelve months ended with that period. Rule 147(c)(2) also provides that an issuer that has not had gross revenues from the operation of its business in excess of $5,000 during its most recent twelve month period need not satisfy the revenues test. A company will not be disqualified from use of Rule 147 if more than 20% of the Company's gross revenues is interest and other payments received on a portfolio of loans made to out-of-state borrowers. n54

In the Release accompanying the adoption of Rule 147, the Commission set forth several illustrative examples to guide in the interpretation of the economic tests in 147(c)(2). n55 From the examples, it is clear that the sale of a company's products throughout the United States will not prevent an issuer from meeting the economic tests, n56 even where it purchases the products it sells from other companies that are also outside the state. n57 Further, on site visits to out-of-state clients or where less than 80 per cent of work hours are spent at the resident home office will not prevent compliance with the Rule. n58 However, if revenues derive from the out-of-state sale of products through nonresident employees or agents, those revenues will not be considered as deriving from company operations within a state. n59

If greater than 20 per cent of assets are represented by accounts receivable of clients located in other states, the issuer may nevertheless meet the assets standard because accounts receivable arising from a business conducted in a state would generally be considered to be located at the principal office of the issuer. n60 However, other intangibles may be more difficult to characterize. In the case of a business whose purpose was to invest in commodities futures and commodities futures contracts, trading on exchanges outside the state and the fact that the proceeds from the offering were maintained in margin accounts outside the state did not invalidate the use of Rule 147. However, the Commission staff, without discussion, would have deemed the "doing business" requirement not satisfied if proceeds from the sale of commodities or futures contracts, as distinguished from the proceeds of the offering, were used to maintain margin accounts outside the state. n61

Fundamental to application of the economic tests is the determination of precisely what the business of the issuer is. Thus, where a company's business is selling undeveloped land located in other states by means of mailing brochures from its in-state office, a determination cannot be made without more information as to the relationship of the land to the company, i.e., if the company owns an interest in the land, it may not meet the tests. n62 Conversely, it would appear that if the issuer is simply selling the land as a service to another separate party, it may meet the tests. Also of significance in this regard may be the nature of the involvement with another state. If the involvement is sufficiently indirect, such as an investment in a separate entity that invests in property located in another state, an issuer may still be able to meet the "doing business" requirement. n63 Where an issuer's principal function was to raise capital to fund business activities engaged in by its joint venturer and the issuer performed few if any operational activities independently and thus was dependent almost entirely on the joint venturer's efforts to produce a profit on its investment of the proceeds from the offering, the Commission staff concluded that the two entities should be treated as a single enterprise for determining the availability of Rule 147. n64

On the other hand, holding company structures may be utilized to accommodate expansion of a company's operations outside of a particular state without disqualifying the in-state subsidiary from using Rule 147. In United Finance Co., n65 the SEC staff confirmed a pre-existing view that a holding company subsidiary would be considered to be doing business within a single state when all of its offices are located in the state, 80% of its revenues are derived in the state, and substantially all of the proceeds from future offerings would be used in connection with operations in the state. The particular subsidiary was part of a restructured organization involving other subsidiaries in other states, but for purposes of Rule 147 and the section 3(a)(11) intrastate offering exemption, its essential operational functions were conducted independently.

[e] Use of Proceeds. If an offering meets the criteria for the intra-state exemption, then, at least by implication, there is a requirement that the proceeds from the offering be used intrastate. In SEC v. Truckee Showboat n66 the court held that the Section 3(a)(11) exemption was not available where a California corporation intended to use the proceeds of an offering to acquire an out of state hotel. Also, in SEC v. McDonald Investment Co., n67 where the proceeds would be invested in land development outside the state, the court found that, although the issuer would not own or control any of the operations, the successor failure of the endeavor depended on land developments outside that state that would not be subject to the jurisdiction of the court. n68

Rule 147(c)(2) addresses the use of proceeds as a "doing business within" requirement. The rule provides that at least 80 per cent of the net proceeds from sales made pursuant to the rule be intended to be and actually be used in connection with the operation of a business or property or the rendering of services within the state. Thus, where more than 20 per cent of the proceeds from an offering would have been used in connection with services provided outside the state, the issuer could not meet the requirements of the Rule. n69 However, the maintenance of more than 20 per cent of an offering's net proceeds in investment firm margin accounts outside the state was found to meet the "doing business" requirement of the Rule. n70

Even where the use of the proceeds will be to carry out a business purpose within the issuer's state, the purchase of a business that is organized to do business and subject to the laws of another state may preclude compliance with the Rule. Thus, where an issuer would apply the funds from an offering to purchase a nonresident insurance company to reinsure policies originating in the issuer's state, the Commission staff gave an unfavorable response, noting particularly that the insurance company would not be licensed to do business in the issuer's state at the time of the offering. n71

[3] Precautionary Measures

Because of the inherent risks of the use of the intrastate exemption, particularly the fact that one sale to a nonresident will disqualify the use of the exemption for the entire issue, it is essential that precautions be taken to ensure the appropriate residence of purchasers and transferees of the purchasers. This was long recognized prior to the adoption of Rule 147, which lists the steps that must be taken for offerings made in reliance on the Rule. Rule 147(f)(1) requires that the issuer:

- (1) place a legend on the certificate that states that the securities have not been registered under the Securities Act of 1933 and set forth the limitations on resale as provided in Rule 147(e); n72
- (2) issue appropriate stop transfer instructions to the transfer agent, if any, with respect to the securities, or, if the issuer transfers its own securities, make a notation in the appropriate records of the issuer; and
- (3) obtain a written representation from each purchaser as to the purchaser's residence.

Under Rule 147(f)(2), if any of the securities are presented for transfer, the issuer must follow the same precautions in (1) and (2) above with respect to the transfer. Further, with respect to any offers and sales, Rule 147(f)(3) requires that the issuer disclose the limitations on resale contained in Rule 147(e), the provisions contained in (1) and (2) of Rule 147(f)(1), and the provisions of Rule 147(f)(2).

Other precautions may be advised. For example, if the use of the exemption is challenged, the nature of the advertising for an offering may be a factor in determining the intent of the issuer. Thus, one court found that the solicitation of offerees by means of advertising in regional and national publications was inconsistent with the spirit of the claimed exemption. n73 However, an error on the part of the advertising medium, such as the omission of the phrase "for Missouri residents only" from an advertisement should not be determinative, n74 although the issuer should, of course, cure such defects that it knows about.

[4] Resales

Because the intrastate exemption is a transaction exemption, the securities issued in an intrastate offering are not themselves exempt. Unless an exemption is available, subsequent offers and sales of the securities are subject to registration. From the very first interpretative release with respect to the exemption, the limitations on resale were apparent, particularly since a resale to a nonresident could destroy the exemption with respect to an entire issue of securities. n75 In subsequent releases, the emphasis continued to focus on the effect of resales on the availability of the exemption. n76

With respect to offerings made in reliance on Rule 147, Rule 147(e) provides that, during the period of the offering and for a period of nine months from the date of the last sale by the issuer of any part of the issue, resales can only be made to persons resident within the state. The nine month period established by the Rule has alleviated a great deal of uncertainty with respect to the exemption for both issuers and purchasers. In one case, the Commission staff took the position that foreknowledge by an issuer that a proposed merger and subsequent liquidation would mean that a small number of shares to be issued would be distributed to nonresidents did not make Rule 147 unavailable because the distribution to nonresidents would take place nine months or more after completion of the offering. n77 It is doubtful that such a result would have obtained without the certainty afforded by the nine month period under the Rule.

Even though the Rule is not exclusive for use of the Section 3(a)(11) exemption, adherence to the nine month period would appear to be prudent. However, in at least one instance, a court has upheld use of the exemption where resales occurred in less than nine months. In Busch v. Carpenter, n78 the district court upheld use of the intrastate exemption where a resale occurred seven months after all the shares were initially sold. The court stated:

The statute by its literal language does not make the exemption dependent on not reselling the stock... . The court is of the opinion that the seven month period from time of initial sale to the time of resale is sufficient for the offering to come to rest... The court concludes that Rule 147 provides only a safe harbor; compliance with its provisions ensures that the S.E.C. will take no action. n79 It was no doubt of some significance to the outcome of this case that there had been no allegations of fraud, and no scheme or other plan to circumvent the policies of the exemption through a straw person sale, and that the court was able to conclude on the basis of the facts presented that the defendants were neither the sellers of the stock nor in privity with them. n80

The notes following Rule 147(e) have two additional provisions:

- (1) the limitations of Rule 147(e) apply to convertible securities and, if converted, to the underlying security (for purposes of the Rule, a conversion in reliance on Section 3(a)(9) does not begin a new period); n81 and
- (2) dealers must satisfy the requirements of Rule 15c2-11 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 prior to publishing, or submitting for publication, any quotation for a security issued in reliance on the Rule.

In the release announcing the adoption of Rule 147, n82 it is stated that persons who acquire securities from issuers or affiliates in transactions complying with the Rule acquire unregistered securities that can only be reoffered and resold pursuant to an exemption from the registration provisions of the Act. This statement is applicable to the intrastate exemption generally.

Purchasers may rely on the provisions of Rule 144 n83 and Section 4(1) n84 for resales. In United Virginia Bankshares, Inc., n85 the Staff stated that, following the satisfaction of all of the provisions of Rule 147, affiliates of the former entity who did not become affiliates of the surviving entity after a merger may resell the securities acquired in the transaction in compliance with Rule 144(c), (e), (f), and (g).

[5] Location of Underwriters and Brokers

Even though the Section 3(a)(11) exemption requires that issuers and investors be residents of the same state, there is no such requirement applicable to any underwriter or broker who may be involved in the transaction. The Commission has specifically stated that the non-residence of the underwriter or dealer is not pertinent so long as the ultimate distribution is solely to residents of the state. n86

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 17 C.F.R. § 230.147. As a "safe harbor," Rule 147 is available for use, but is not exclusive. Offers and sales of securities may be undertaken in compliance with section 3(a)(11) of the Act outside of Rule 147, but will always be subject to scrutiny for the same elements that are addressed in the Rule.

The Rules under the Securities Act of 1933 are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

(n2)Footnote 2. The exemption applies to offerings within a single state or territory of the United States, subject to fulfillment of the statutory requirements. Throughout this section of the text, the term state should be read to mean state or territory.

(n3)Footnote 3. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2340 at 2611-7 (Jan. 7, 1974). Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6253, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 373 at 1255 (Oct. 28, 1980).

The SEC will also not generally respond to requests for No-Action Letters with respect to integration questions, i.e., what constitutes a single "issue" of securities. Id.

(n4)Footnote 4. Rule 147, Preliminary Note 1.

(n5)Footnote 5. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33- 4434, 1 Fed.Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2274 (Dec. 6, 1961); Rule 147 Preliminary Note 4.

(n6)Footnote 6. Investment Company Act of 1940 § 24(d). Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4298, Inv. Co. Act Rel. No. 3140, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2765 (Nov. 18, 1960).

(n7)Footnote 7. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6281, 46 FR 8446 (Jan. 15, 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 4.11[4] infra for a discussion of resales.

(n9)Footnote 9. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2340 at 2611-2 (Jan. 7, 1974).

Neither Section 3(a)(11) nor Rule 147 provides an exemption from the civil liability provisions of Section 12(2) of the Act, the antifraud provisions of the Act or of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934... the registration and periodic reporting provisions of Section 12(g) and 13 of the Exchange Act of 1934, or any applicable state laws.

See also Leoni v. Rogers, 719 F. Supp. 555 (E.D. Mich. 1989) , in which the court rejected the argument that a purely intrastate transaction was not governed by federal securities laws and concluded that § 3(a)(11) only exempts securities from the registration and prospectus requirements of the Securities Act and not from § 10(b) or Rule 10b-5; Kelly v. West Printing Company, [1974-75 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 94,835 (E.D.Mich. 1974), in which the court stated that the plaintiff was correct that the exemption provisions of the Securities Act could not possibly bar a § 10(b) claim under the Exchange Act, because, under the language of § 3(a), the exemption is only from the provisions of the Securities Act.

(n10)Footnote 10. In Myer v. E.M. Adams & Co., 511 P. 2d 841 (Or. 1973) (en banc), the Supreme Court of Oregon rescinded a purchase of stock after defendant's representation that the stock would be "going interstate," which the purchasers understood and relied upon to mean that the stock would be subject to an interstate offering, although the defendant had meant that enough time had passed for the stock to be resold to plaintiffs.

(n11)Footnote 11. Pub. L.22, 48 Stat. 74, 77-78. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 7 (1933).

(n12)Footnote 12. H.R. Rep. No. 1838, 73d Cong., 2d Sess. 409-41 (1934).

(n13)Footnote 13. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4434, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2272 (Dec. 6, 1961).

(n14)Footnote 14. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-201, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2255 (July 20, 1934).

(n15)Footnote 15. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-1459, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2261 (May 29, 1937).

(n16)Footnote 16. See also Rule 147, Preliminary Note 3, which summarizes the local nature of the exemption.

(n17)Footnote 17. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-1459, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2261 (May 29, 1937).

(n18)Footnote 18. Id.

(n19)Footnote 19. 276 F. 2d 665 (1st Cir. 1960) . The court stated: "Under the statutory scheme as construed, an entire issue must be sold only to residents or the exemption is lost, and once the exemption is lost, the use of interstate facilities in any sale, to resident or non-resident without registering the security is a violation of the Act." Id. at 668 .

(n20)Footnote 20. See also, SEC v. Los Angeles Trust Deed & Mortgage Exchange, 186 F. Supp. 830 (SD Cal) , aff'd, 285 F.2d 162 (9th Cir. 1960) . The court held that an attempted separation of non-resident investor accounts by spinning them off to a subsidiary in order to claim the intrastate exemption was wholly ineffectual, because the component elements of both corporations' investment plans were not separate and distinct issues of securities.

(n21)Footnote 21. 131 F.2d 476, 480 (9th Cir. 1942) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, 1 Fed. Sec. L.Rep. (CCH) P 2272 (Dec. 6, 1961).

(n23)Footnote 23. Id.

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-1459, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2262 (May 29, 1937).

[S]ecurities which have actually come to rest in the hands of resident investors -- persons purchasing for investment and not with a view to further distribution or for purposes of resale -- may be resold by such persons, whether directly or through dealers or brokers, to non-residents without in any way affecting the exemption of the issuer.

Id. at 2606.

In Busch v. Carpenter, 827 F. 2d 653 (10th Cir. 1987) , after an issuer made a prima facie showing that its offering was consummated within a state, the court disagreed with the amicus position of the Commission that, in order to be entitled to summary judgment, the issuer should be required to disprove all the possible circumstances that might establish that its stock had not yet come to rest.

(n24)Footnote 24. 1 SEC 147, 162-63 (June 4,1935) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Id. The Commission stated:

[T]he Securities Act incorporates in Section 4(1) a presumption that sales by dealers within a period of one year from the first date upon which the security was bona fide offered to the public by the issuer or by or through an underwriter are a part of the distribution of the issue. That presumption which Congress adopted should be applied here, not however, as a conclusive presumption of law, as in the third clause of Section 4(1) of the Act, but as a presumption of fact subject to refutation upon a showing of fact that distribution was completed within less than one year.

(n26)Footnote 26. Rule 147(b).

(n27)Footnote 27. GHM/Massachusetts Health Care Partners-1 L.P., SEC No-Action Letter [1988-89 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,808 (May 31, 1988).

As previously stated, the Commission will accept No-Action Letter requests relating to Section 3(a)(11) and Rule 147 only in the most compelling circumstances.

(n28)Footnote 28. [1966-67 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 91,970 (W.D. Mo. 1966).

(n29)Footnote 29. See § 3.12[2][a] supra for an explanation of what constitutes an entire issue.

See SEC v. Spence & Green Chemical Co., 612 F.2d 896 (5th Cir. 1980) (Any part of an issue offered to a non-resident disqualifies the entire offering); but see Busch v. Carpenter, 827 F.2d 653 (10th Cir. 1987) (A prima facie showing that the exemption applies arises from a showing that the security was sold only to state residents).

(n30)Footnote 30. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2274 (Dec. 6, 1961); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2340 at 2611-6 (Jan. 7, 1974).

(n31)Footnote 31. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2274 at 2609 (Dec. 6, 1961).

(n32)Footnote 32. See SEC v. Spence & Green Chemical Co., 612 F.2d 896 (5th Cir. 1980).

(n33)Footnote 33. Master Financial, Inc. SEC No-Action Letter, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 544 (May 27, 1999).

(n34)Footnote 34. Commonwealth Equity Trust, SEC No-Action Letter [1987 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,412 (Feb. 21, 1987).

(n35)Footnote 35. The Commission staff expressed no opinion as to whether and under what circumstances the securities sold to investors who are not United States citizens or residents may be reoffered and resold in the United States, or reoffered and resold to citizens, residents, or nationals of the United States. Id.

(n36)Footnote 36. Rule 147(e) deals with limitations on resale and Rule 147(f) deals with precautions against interstate offers and sales. See § 3.12[4] and § 3.12[3] infra respectively.

(n37)Footnote 37. No-Action Letter, West Side National Bank of San Angelo, June 11, 1980.

(n38)Footnote 38. Opportunities Investment Associates of New London, Connecticut, SEC No-Action Letter [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,738 (July 14, 1978). Where purchasers would sign subscription agreements and pay for subscriptions in monthly installments with delivery of the securities after the last payment had been made, the Commission staff was unable to agree that the purchasers would meet the residency requirement because a purchaser may no longer be a bona fide resident at the time of completion of the sale.

(n39)Footnote 39. In SEC v. Geotek [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,520 (N.D. Cal. 1978), the court, in refusing to grant injunctive relief against an attorney, stated that there was no authority requiring consideration of the residence of individual investors of a corporate purchaser prior to the adoption of Rule 147 in 1974 and that the SEC implicitly regarded the requirement in Rule 147 as a change or at least a clarification of previous law. The court, therefore, regarded counsel's advice in connection with forming resident corporations with non-resident shareholders as at most a mistake of law and judgment short of intentional or negligent violation of the registration requirement of § 5 of the Act.

(n40)Footnote 40. Gold Coast Bancshares, SEC No-Action Letter [1982-83 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,347 (Oct. 21, 1982).

See also Holmes v. Bartlett, Civil No. 03-1176-AS, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10099 (D. Ore. 2004) (Although a trustee who purchases securities at the direction of beneficiaries and acts as a custodian is not a "purchaser" for the purpose of qualifying for the exemption provided by Securities Act section 3(a)(11) and Rule 147, a trustee may be deemed to be the purchaser for purposes of standing to assert claims for improper activities relating to the sale of the securities).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Grenader v. Spitz, [1974-75 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 95,008 (S.D.N.Y. 1975). In deciding that the issuer met the requirements of Section 3(a)(11), the court deemed the residence of a general partnership to be its principal place of business, pointing out the position under Rule 147.

See also GHM/Massachusetts Health Care Partners-1 Limited Partnership, SEC No-Action Letter [1988-89 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,808 (May 31, 1988), in which the staff expressed the view that, even though a corporate general partner was a wholly-owned subsidiary of a nonresident corporation and an individual general partner was a nonresident, such persons may act as general partners under Rule 147, provided the partnership entity itself is organized in the offering state, maintains its principal office in that state, and otherwise satisfies the requirements of the rule.

(n42)Footnote 42. [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,361 at 93,243 (N.D. Ill., 1978).

(n43)Footnote 43. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2340 at 2611-7 (Jan. 7, 1974).

(n44)Footnote 44. Levitt Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter [1984-85 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,886 (Jan. 11, 1985). In its request to the staff, the issuer stated that it had been a historical accident, for business and tax reasons, that its local operations had not always been operated under a separate subsidiary and also gave assurances that it had no intention of using the proceeds from the offering outside the territory.

(n45)Footnote 45. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2273 (Dec. 6, 1961).

(n46)Footnote 46. Id.

(n47)Footnote 47. Id.

(n48)Footnote 48. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2340 (Jan. 7, 1974).

(n49)Footnote 49. 414 F.2d 153 (6th Cir. 1969) .

(n50)Footnote 50. Chapman, 414 F.2d at 159 . The court stated:

The issuer operated and staffed an office in Michigan from which he offered and sold securities. While this can be viewed as "doing business" in Michigan for some purposes, such as State taxation and judicial process, we conclude that it is not doing business within the meaning contemplated by Congress in § 3(a)(11) of the Act. Id., at 157.

(n51)Footnote 51. 291 N.W. 2d 896, 910 (Iowa 1980) .

(n52)Footnote 52. The Commission does not permit this requirement to be met by rounding up to the next highest number. No-Action Letter, Berkley and Company, September 16, 1975.

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.12

(n53)Footnote 53. Rule 147(c)(2) contains as part of "deemed to be doing business within" criteria, a requirement as to the use of the proceeds from the offering, which is discussed in § 3.12[2][e] infra.

(n54)Footnote 54. Master Financial, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 544 (May 27, 1999).

See also Citizens Discount and Investment Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act LEXIS (Sept. 26, 1990) (Issuer would qualify to use Rule 147 for the offer and sale of investment certificates provided at least 80% of the proceeds not held in reserve to pay principal and interest on investment certificates as they became due would be used to fund insurance premium finance contracts to be sold to residents in the state).

But see First Commerce of America, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1121 (Sept. 30, 1991) (Issuer would not be considered to be doing business within the State of Oregon for purposes of Rule 147 compliance when more than 20% of the proceeds to be received from a proposed offering might be used in connection with services to be performed outside the state).

(n55)Footnote 55. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2340 at 2611-5 and 6 (Jan. 7, 1974).

(n56)Footnote 56. Id., Example 1.

See also, American Computer Communications Co., Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1976-77 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,686 (July 15, 1976), where revenues were and, after a merger, would be primarily from purchasers located outside the state, but counsel for the issuer was of the opinion, and the Commission staff apparently agreed, that the revenues were sufficiently derived from operations within the state.

(n57)Footnote 57. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, n.55 supra, Example 2.

In Bott & Associates, SEC No-Action Letter, [1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,996 (Jan. 25, 1989), a wholesaler making purchases and sales both within and without the state was deemed to be "doing business within" because the sales transactions were made at the wholesaler's principal office and all activities significant to the company's business and operations were located within the state.

(n58)Footnote 58. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, n. 55 supra, Example 4.

(n59)Footnote 59. Capitol Securities, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1987-88 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,516 (Oct. 2, 1987). In issuing its unfavorable response, the Commission staff noted that more than 20% of the company's consolidated revenues may come from insurance premiums on policies sold from outside the state and that more than 20% of the proceeds to be received from the offering might be used in connection with services provided outside Indiana.

In Interstate Securities Corp., SEC No-Action Letter [1982-83 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,358 (Nov. 15, 1982) the Commission staff's unfavorable response was due to the fact that more than 20 per cent of the firm's revenues were derived from branch office activities outside the state, including investment transactions by out-of-state employees that were the result of decision-making authority exercised outside the state.

(n60)Footnote 60. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, n.55 supra, Example 5.

(n61)Footnote 61. Michael Coleman and Lawrence Grenon, SEC No-Action Letter [1976-77 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,972 (Jan. 28, 1977).

(n62)Footnote 62. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, n.55 supra, Example 3.

(n63)Footnote 63. In California Dentists' Guild--Real Estate Equity Fund, SEC No-Action Letter [1984-85

Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,924 (March 1, 1985), where a real estate equity fund intended to invest in another real estate equity fund and the latter fund would purchase real estate located in other states, the investments were considered to be within the state for purposes of 147(c)(2) at least in part because of the indirect nature of the contact with other states.

(n64)Footnote 64. Film Festival'82, [1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,229 (June 25, 1982). When considered as a single enterprise, the joint venturer did not satisfy the "doing business within" requirements of Rule 147(c).

(n65)Footnote 65. SEC No-Action Letter, SEC No-Act LEXIS 774 (Sept. 24, 1999).

(n66)Footnote 66. 157 F. Supp. 824 (S.D. Cal. 1957) .

(n67)Footnote 67. 343 F. Supp. 343 (D. Minn.1972) .

(n68)Footnote 68. Compare California Dentists' Guild--Real Estate Equity Fund, SEC No-Action Letter [1984-85 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,924 (March 1, 1985), in which investments were considered to meet the requirements of Rule 147(c)(2) because the fund's purchase of interests in another fund that purchased real estate outside the state was only an indirect contact with other states.

(n69)Footnote 69. Capitol Securities, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1987-88 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,516 (Oct. 2, 1987).

(n70)Footnote 70. Michael Coleman and Lawrence Grenon, SEC No-Action Letter [1976-77 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,972 (Jan. 28, 1977).

(n71)Footnote 71. Constellation Holding Company, SEC No-Action Letter [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,725 (July 19, 1978).

(n72)Footnote 72. Concerning restrictive legends, § 8-204 of the Uniform Commercial Code provides:

A restriction on transfer of a security imposed by the issuer, even if otherwise lawful, is ineffective against any person without actual knowledge of it unless:

(a) the security is certificated and the restriction is noted conspicuously thereon; or

(b) the security is uncertificated and a notation of the restriction is contained in the initial transaction statement sent to the person or, if his interest is transferred to him other than by registration of transfer, pledge, or release, the initial transaction statement sent to the registered owner or the registered pledgee.

In Edina State Bank v. Mr. Steak, Inc., 487 F.2d 640 (10th Cir. 1973) , cert. denied, 419 U.S. 883, 95 S.Ct. 150, 42 L.Ed.2d 123 , the court stated that UCC § 8-204 clearly places a duty on the issuer to note a transfer restriction conspicuously on its certificate, which it had not done. The argument by the issuer and its transfer agent that a transfer would be likely to violate federal securities law provisions against transfer of unregistered stock was without merit since the court was not deciding whether the pledgee could specifically enforce a transfer, but only whether the pledgee was entitled to damages under § 8-204.

(n73)Footnote 73. S.E.C. v. Freeman [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,361 at 93,243 (N.D. Ill. 1978).

(n74)Footnote 74. SEC v. Dunfee, [1966-67 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 91,970 (W.D. Mo. 1966).

(n75)Footnote 75. Sec. Act Rel. No. 201, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2255 (July 20, 1934). In the opinion of the Federal Trade Commission, which then had responsibility for the 1933 Act, ultimate distribution consisted in the disposition of securities in the hands of investors in any secondary distribution which might take place pursuant to arrangements by the issuer or underwriters. The Commission further stated that an early listing of the securities on an exchange might contemplate further distribution of the securities prior to completion of their ultimate distribution.

(n76)Footnote 76. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-1459, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2262 (May 29, 1937). The release stated that securities that have actually come to rest in the hands of resident investors, i.e., where purchases are for investment and not with a view to further distribution or for purposes of resale, may be resold by such persons without affecting the exemption of the issuer.

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2275 (Dec. 6, 1961).

(n77)Footnote 77. BSD Bancorp, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,219 (May 10, 1982).

(n78)Footnote 78. SEC No-Action Letter [1984-85 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 91,810 (D. Utah 1984).

(n79)Footnote 79. Id. at 90,081-90,082.

(n80)Footnote 80. Id.

(n81)Footnote 81. Section 3(a)(9), which details the exemption provided for voluntary exchanges with an issuer, is discussed in § 3.10[2] supra.

(n82)Footnote 82. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5450, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2340 (Jan. 7, 1974).

(n83)Footnote 83. See Ch. 6. infra.

(n84)Footnote 84. See Ch 4.02 supra..

(n85)Footnote 85. SEC No-Action Letter [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,541 (Feb. 13, 1978).

(n86)Footnote 86. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 4434, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2272 (Dec. 6, 1961).

41 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.13

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.13 Securities Issued in Connection with Certain Bank Holding Company Acquisitions -- Section 3(a)(12)

Section 3(a)(12) was added to the Securities Act as part of the Community Development Banking and Financial Institutions Act of 1994. n1 This act was intended to reduce the costs of forming a bank holding company and assist small banks in converting to holding companies so that they can take advantage of the flexibility available to bank holding companies. n2

The section, which provides an exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act, is for the sole purpose of the formation of bank holding companies. The exemption is available for an offer or sale of equity securities made in connection with the formation of a bank holding company by a bank or savings institution under the simplified procedure established under the 1994 Act, provided:

- the transaction occurs solely as part a reorganization in which the resulting holding company does not have any significant assets other than securities of the former bank and its existing subsidiaries;
- the shareholders' proportional share interests remain substantially the same;
- the shareholders' rights and interests remain substantially the same; and
- the holding company has substantially the same assets and liabilities as the bank had prior to the transaction. n3

The acquisition applies to banks under Section 3(a) of the Bank Holding Company of 1956 and savings associations under Section 10(e) of the Home Owners' Loan Act. A savings association is further defined as one under Section 3(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, the deposits of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. n4

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.13

Under the limitations contained in Section 3(a)(12), the exemption does not apply to transactions where there is a transfer of corporate control or a substantial alteration in the proportional interests of shareholders. Likewise, it would not apply to a holding company formed in connection with a concurrent conversion from mutual to stock ownership. n5

The exemption applies to specified transactions, not to the securities that are issued in the transactions. Thus, absent the availability of another exemption, subsequent offerings of securities by a holding company would not be exempt from registration. n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. Law 103-325, 108 Stat. 2160, § 320 (Act of Sept. 23, 1994).

(n2)Footnote 2. S. Rep. No. 169, 103rd Cong., 2d Sess., at 54 (1994).

(n3)Footnote 3. The full text of Section 3(a)(12) is as follows:

Any equity security issued in connection with the acquisition by a holding company of a bank under section 3(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 or a savings association under section 10(e) of the Home Owners' Loan Act, if--

(A) the acquisition occurs solely as part of a reorganization in which security holders exchange their shares of a bank or savings association for shares of a newly formed holding company with no significant assets other than the securities of the bank or savings association and the existing subsidiaries of the bank or savings association;

(B) the security holders receive, after that reorganization, substantially the same proportional share interests in the holding company as they held in the bank or savings association, except for nominal changes in shareholders' interests and the exercise of dissenting shareholders' rights under State or Federal Law;

(C) the rights and interests of security holders in the holding company are substantially the same as those in the bank or savings association prior to the transaction, other than as may be required by law; and

(D) the holding company has substantially the same assets and liabilities, on a consolidated basis, as the bank or savings association had prior to the transaction.

For purposes of this paragraph, the term "savings association" means a savings association (as defined in Section 3(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) the deposits of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

(n4)Footnote 4. Id.

(n5)Footnote 5. H. Rep. No. 652, 103rd Cong., 2d Sess., at 175-76 (1994).

(n6)Footnote 6. Id.

42 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.14

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.14 Securities Issued by Church Plans, Companies or Accounts that are Excluded from the Definition of an Investment Company

Section 3(a)(13) was added to the Securities Act as part of NSMIA. n1 The purpose of NSMIA is, generally, to reduce states' ability to impose restrictions on the offer and sale of certain securities. This exemption was adopted under Title V of NSMIA which is entitled "Reducing the Cost of Saving and Investment." n2 The specific wording of this exemption is "Any security issued by or any interest or participation in any church plan, company or account that is excluded from the definition of an investment company under Section 3(c)(14) of the Investment Company Act of 1940." n3

The section 3(a)(13) exemption was adopted as a part of certain revisions to the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "1940 Act"), the Exchange Act and the Securities Act to remove church plans from excessive regulation. Church employee plans are exempted from the definition of "investment company" under the 1940 Act, and the Exchange Act was amended to mandate disclosure to church plan participants that (i) such plans are not subject to federal or state regulatory oversight and (ii) that plan participants and beneficiaries will, therefore, not be afforded the protections concomitant with such oversight. While the legislative history concerning this exemption is somewhat sketchy, it appears that Congress felt that there was no need for a great deal of regulation of church plans.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416.

(n2)Footnote 2. Id.

(n3)Footnote 3. Id.

43 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.15

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.15 Security Futures Products and Standardized Options

Section 3(a)(14) of the Securities Act was added in connection with enactment of the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000 ("CFMA"). n1 CFMA addressed the regulation of security futures, which are both securities and futures contracts. A "securities futures product" is now defined in the Securities Act as a security future or an option on a security future. n2 A framework for joint regulation of these products by the SEC and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission is established under CFMA.

CFMA permits national securities exchanges registered under section 6(a) of the Exchange Act n3 and national securities associations registered under section 15A(a) to trade futures on individual securities and on narrow-based security indices. To accommodate these products, CFMA amended provisions of the Securities Act to include a security future within the definition of "security," n4 and added section 3(a)(14) n5 to exempt from all provisions of the Securities Act (with the exception of section 17 antifraud provisions) any securities futures product that is traded on a national securities exchange or a registered national securities association, and which is cleared by a clearing agency that is registered under section 17A of the Exchange Act or which is exempt from registration. CFMA also amended section 2(a)(3) of the Securities Act to ensure that a securities futures product could not be used by an issuer, affiliate of an issuer or an underwriter to circumvent the registration requirements of section 5 of the Securities Act with respect to an issuer's securities underlying the security futures product. n6

In order to provide the same exemption for exchange-traded standardized security options as the Act now provides for security futures products, in 2003 the SEC adopted Rule 238 under the Securities Act, n7 to exempt standardized options that are issued by a registered clearing agency and traded on a registered national securities exchange or registered national securities association. By the rule, the treatment of standardized options and security futures products has been harmonized, and any unintended consequences from differing treatment of these two types of derivative securities is thus avoided. Rule 238 was adopted by the SEC pursuant to its general exemption authority prescribed in sections 3(b) and (c) of the Securities Act.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. 106-554, 114 Stat. 2763 (2000).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Securities Act § 2(a)(16), 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(16). A coordinate definition was also added to the Exchange Act and the Commodity Exchange Act.

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 78f(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Securities Act § 2(a)(1), 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(14).

(n6)Footnote 6. As amended, section 2(a)(3) of the Securities Act provides: "Any offer or sale of a security futures product by or on behalf of the issuer of the securities underlying the security futures product, an affiliate of the issuer, or an underwriter, shall constitute a contract for sale of, offer for sale, or offer to sell the underlying security." 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. 17 C.F.R. § 230.238.

44 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.16

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.16 Section 3(b) General Exemption Authority

As illustrated in the adoption by the SEC of Rule 238 under the Securities Act to harmonize treatment of security futures products and exchange-traded standard options on securities, the Commission has general rule-making authority under section 3(b) of the Securities Act to exempt securities when enforcement of the Act is not necessary in the public interest and investor protection is not compromised. Section 3(b) authority is most apparent as the basis for Regulation A under the Act, the conditional small issuer exemption that is now addressed through Rule 505 of Regulation D. n1 These are not exempt securities, as such, but rather are exempt from registration requirements when conditions regarding the offering are met. In this sense, Regulation A, and now Rule 505 of Regulation D, are more logically considered as transaction exemptions. They are addressed in Chapter 4, along with other transaction exemptions. However, as illustrated by Rule 238 under the Securities Act, the SEC does retain flexibility under section 3(b) to provide true securities exemptions.

Acting under the general exemption authority in section 3(b), the SEC has by rule established an exemption for shares of stock or similar securities offered to provide funds to be distributed to shareholders of the issuer of such securities in lieu of issuing fractional shares in connection with a stock dividend, stock split or certain other transactions when conditions are satisfied. n2 By another rule, an exemption under section 3(b) is established for offers and sales to certain Canadian Tax-Deferred Retirement Savings Accounts. n3 Other section 3(b) exemptions under the Securities Act include Rule 701, n4 which exempts offers and sales of securities pursuant to certain compensatory benefit plans and contracts relating to compensation. The purposes of Rule 701 is to provide an exemption from registration requirements of the Securities Act for securities issued in compensatory circumstances. The exemption covers offers and sales of securities under a written compensatory benefit plan or other written compensation contract established by the issuer, its parents, its majority-owned subsidiaries or majority-owned subsidiaries of the issuer's parent, for the participation of their employees, directors, general partners, trustees, officers, or consultants and advisers and their family members who acquire such securities through gifts or domestic relations orders. There are special requirements for securities issued to "consultants and advisers," and other general limitations and conditions apply for the exemption.

Under section 3(b) of the Securities Act, the SEC established exemptions for "cross-border" rights offerings, exchange offers and business combinations. n5 Finally, Regulation CE, adopted under section 3(b) of the Securities Act, addresses coordinated exemptions for certain issues of securities exempt under state law. Rule 1001 under this provision n6 specifically creates an exemption for securities offered and sold in transactions exempt from qualification under section 25102(n) of the California Corporations Code, subject to limitations on the size of an offering and resales.

Each of the Securities Act exemptions adopted by the SEC pursuant to the authority of Section 3(b) of the Act are separately addressed in Chapter 5 of this Treatise--"Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Regulation D also includes Rule 504, an exemption for limited offerings and sales of securities not exceeding $1 million. Rule 504 was adopted pursuant to section 3(b) exemption authority, and is also considered in detail with transaction exemptions in Chapter 4, infra .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Securities Act Rule 236, 17 C.F.R. § 230.236 ("Exemption of Shares Offered in Connection with Certain Transactions").

(n3)Footnote 3. Securities Act Rule 237, 17 C.F.R. § 230.237.

(n4)Footnote 4. 17 C.F.R. § 230.701.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Securities Act Rules 800 -- 802, 17 C.F.R. §§ 230.800 through 230.802.

(n6)Footnote 6. 17 C.F.R. § 230.1001.

45 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 Exempt Securities under Section 3 of the Securities Act

1-3 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 3.17

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp, Esq. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.), and is Adjunct Professor of Law ("Law, Theory and Practice in the Financial Markets") at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

§ 3.17 Section 3(c) Exemption Authority

Section 3(c) of the Securities Act grants authority to the SEC to provide an exemption from registration requirements for securities issued by small business investment companies (SBICs) formed in accordance with the Small Business Investment Act of 1958. Pursuant to this authority, the SEC adopted Regulation E under the Securities Act n1 for eligible SBICs. An SBIC is a company which is either licensed as such under the Small Business Investment Company Act of 1958, or has received preliminary approval from the Small Business Administration that it may submit a license application. n2 Securities of a "business development company" may also be eligible if the company has elected to be regulated as such under the Investment Company Act of 1940. n3

Although Section 3(c) sets no dollar limit on an exemption, Regulation E permits a maximum $5 million offering amount by qualified issuers. The aggregate offering price limit for securities offered and sold on behalf of any one person other than the issuer is $100,000. There are particular offering procedures built around the filing of the Form 1-E Notification, which must be filed with the SEC at least ten days prior to the date on which the initial offering or sale of securities under Regulation E is to be made. The rules provide for use of an offering circular containing specified information, and include the provision for use of a preliminary offering circular which may be used during a waiting period. n4 There is an exception to the Regulation E offering circular requirements in offerings not exceeding $100,000 which meet certain other conditions.

There are other requirements and qualifications applicable for the exemption under Regulation E. For example, the issuer in a Regulation E offering is subject to certain sales reporting requirements, and the exemption may not be available at all if certain "bad boy" criteria exists regarding persons who are to be involved in the issue and distribution of the securities. n5 Regulation E is separately discussed in detail in Section 5.07 of this Treatise.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 17 C.F.R. §§230.601-610A.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Regulation E, Rule 602(a), 17 C.F.R. § 602(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Id. A business development company is a closed-end investment company which meets the requirements of Section 2(a)(48)(A)-(B) of the Investment Company Act of 1940.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Regulation E, Rule 605(f), 17 C.F.R. §230.605(f).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Regulation E, Rule 602(b), 17 C.F.R. § 602(b).

46 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 4.syn

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.syn Synopsis to Chapter 4: Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

§ 4.01 Introduction

§ 4.02 Transactions by Persons Other Than Issuers, Underwriters, or Dealers--Section 4(1)

[1] Issuers

[2] Underwriters

[a] Section 2(a)(11) Issuers--Control

[i] Stock Ownership.

[ii] Power to Direct Management and Policies.

[iii] Officers and Directors as Controlling Persons.

[b] Purchasing From or Selling For an Issuer.

[i] Corporation Selling Its Own Shares.

[ii] Sales by Parents, Subsidiaries, and Affiliates.

[iii] Sale of Fractional Shares.

[iv] Pledges of Control Shares.

[c] "Participation In" an Underwriting.

[d] A View to Distribution

[e] Dealers Selling on Commission.

[3] Dealers

[4] An Introduction to Rule 144

§ 4.03 The Private Offering Exemption--Section 4(2)

[1] Perfecting the Section 4(2) Exemption

[a] The Offerees

[i] The Number of Offerees.

[ii] The Identity of the Offerees and Their Relationship to the Issuer.

[iii] The Sophistication of the Offerees.

[b] The Offering

[i] The Size of the Offering.

[ii] The Manner of the Offering.

[iii] Purchasers Must "Take For Investment."

[iv] The Offering Must Not be "Integrated."

[A] Interpretive Problems Regarding Integration.

[B] Numerous "Private" Sales by Issuers Prior to Registration.

[2] Section 4(2) and Rule 506 of Regulation D

§ 4.04 Private Sales by Non-Issuers: The "Section 4 (1 1/2)" Exemption and Rule 144A

[1] "Section 4 (1 1/2)"

[2] Securities Act Rule 144A

§ 4.05 Regulation D--Generally

[1] Definitions--Rule 501

[2] General Conditions--Rule 502

[a] Integration.

[b] Information Requirements.

[c] Limitations on Manner of Offering.

[d] Limitations on Resale.

[3] Notice of Sales--Rule 503

[4] Limited Offerings Not Exceeding $1,000,000--Rule 504

[5] Limited Offerings Not Exceeding $5,000,000--Rule 505

[6] Offerings to No More Than 35 Non-Accredited Investors--Rule 506

§ 4.06 The Dealer Exemption--Section 4(3)

§ 4.07 Broker Transactions--Section 4(4)

[1] Brokerage Transactions--Generally

[2] Sales by Controlling Persons in Brokerage Transactions

§ 4.08 Exempt Offers and Sales of Promissory Notes Secured by Certain Real Estate--Section 4(5)

§ 4.09 Exempt Offers and Sales to Accredited Investors--Section 4(6)

§ 4.10 Regulation S: Exempt Offers and Sales Made Outside the United States

Robert N. Rapp n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. This chapter was revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d ed., Matthew Bender & Co.).

47 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.01

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.01 Introduction

Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933 n1 ("the Securities Act"), makes it unlawful to offer or sell a security through the use of the mails or instruments of interstate commerce unless a registration statement is in effect as to that security. n2

Two types of exemptions provide relief from the provisions of Section 5. In general, Section 3(a) of the Securities Act exempts from registration certain securities based on the status of the issuer, while Section 4 exempts certain transactions. In all cases, exemptions provided in the Securities Act are strictly construed against the claimant of such an exemption, and the burden of proof is on the claimant. n3

Section 4 of the Act exempts:

- (1) Transactions by any person other than the issuer, underwriter, or dealer.
- (2) Transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering.
- (3) Transactions by a dealer (including an underwriter no longer acting as a underwriter in respect of the security involved in such transaction), except in certain circumstances and subject to certain requirements;
- (4) Brokers' transactions executed on customers' orders;
- (5) The offer and sale of promissory notes by qualifying issuers and which secured by real estate where certain conditions and requirements are met; and
- (6) Transactions involving offers or sales by an issuer solely to one or more accredited investors, if the aggregate offering price of an issue of securities offered in reliance on this paragraph does not exceed the amount allowed under section 3(b) of Act, and certain other conditions are satisfied. n4

The vast majority of securities sales are completed under a transactional exemption rather than by registration pursuant to Section 5. It is therefore important to understand the goals of the exemptions provided in Section 4. The Securities Act's essential structure of generally requiring registration but then carving out specific exemptions embodies a distinction between two types of securities activity: large distributions of securities, generally effected by professional investment bankers and brokers and aimed at the general public regardless of sophistication; and limited or isolated trading or transactions by issuers or individuals. Registration, with its goal of ensuring an adequate flow of accurate information to the investing public, is not deemed to be necessary for the latter. The exemptions of Section 4 thus hinge on either the "ordinary" nature of the seller (Section 4(1) and the broker and dealer exemptions of Sections 4(3) and 4(4)), or the presumably sophisticated nature of the purchaser (the private placement exemption of Section 4(2), the real estate exemption of Section 4(5) and the Section 4(6) exemption for sales to accredited investors).

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 77e.

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 5(a) of the Securities Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77e(a), provides that:

Unless a registration statement is in effect as to a security, it shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly--(1) to make use of any means or instruments of transportation or communication in interstate commerce or of the mails to sell such security through the use or medium of any prospectus or otherwise ...

Section 5(c), 15 U.S.C. § 77e(c), provides:

It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, to make use of any means or instruments of transportation or communication in interstate communication or of the mails to offer to sell or offer to buy through the use or medium of any prospectus or otherwise any security, unless a registration statement has been filed as to such security ...

(n3)Footnote 3. Gearhart & Otis, Inc., 42 S.E.C. 1, 4-5 (1964) , aff'd, 348 F.2d 798 (D.C. Cir. 1965) ; see also SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119 (1953) . Section 3 exemptions are presented in ch. 3 supra .

(n4)Footnote 4. The antifraud rules of Section 17(a) of the Securities Act and Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 of the Exchange Act apply to all offerings regardless of whether an exemption is perfected or the securities are registered. See § 9.06 infra and Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, §§ 5.04 (Matthew Bender).

48 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.02

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.02 Transactions by Persons Other Than Issuers, Underwriters, or Dealers--Section 4(1)

Section 4(1) provides an exemption from the registration requirements of Section 5 "transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer." n1 By thus allowing "ordinary" investors to resell their securities without registration, the Section 4(1) exemption emphasizes the distinction between trading by individual investors with respect to securities already issued and outstanding in the hands of the investing public, and a distribution of securities, which is the process by which a block of securities is dispersed and ultimately comes to rest in the hands of the investing public. n2 Since ordinary trading lacks the promotional pressure and thus the need for accurate information about the issuer that accompanies distributions of securities, there is no need to impose the registration requirements of Section 5 on individual investors. The critical consideration, however, is whether in any particular situation the elements of a distribution are in fact present, such that protection of the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of section 5 is needed. In this it is certain that the determination of whether a sale of stock constitutes a distribution is not dependent upon the number of shares involved. The sale of a small percentage of the total shares of a company that are outstanding may well constitute a distribution for purposes of section 5 depending upon characteristics of the transaction and the nature of the seller and those participating in the process. n3 "Distribution" for purposes of section 5 is generally considered to be tantamount to a "public offering." n4 But public offering is not defined in quantitative terms. Rather, the question in all circumstances is whether the offerees are in need of the protection which the Securities Act affords through registration. n5

Every offer or sale of securities involving use of the jurisdictional means is subject to the registration requirements of section 5 of the federal Securities Act unless an exemption is available. n6 A fundamental consideration in the application of federal registration requirements is that section 5 does not apply solely to initial distributions of securities. n7 Any offer and sale of securities may have the characteristics of a distribution, whether it is an initial offering or a subsequent sale by one holding securities. It is in that context that the exemption created by section 4(1) of the Act is critically important. By exempting transactions not involving an issuer, underwriter or dealer, section 4(1) is grounded in the absence of indicia of a distribution, not the least of which is the presence of an underwriter through which, or by which, a distribution is presumptively effected. Underwriter status connotes an intermediary function. That function is not limited to traditional underwriters in the public offering scenario, but is in fact a functional status that may be applied in the context of any sale of securities in which it may be said that the seller is not an investor with whom securities have come to rest, but is rather functioning in a process by which a distribution is either continuing or is newly initiated.

A critical notion in assessing whether a distribution is present for purposes of section 5, and the section 4(1) exemption, is the concept of "secondary distribution." Secondary distributions occur when controlling persons--"affiliates" n8--sell the issuer's securities in circumstances that raise the same considerations for investor protection as if the issuer itself were engaged in the distribution of its securities. By reason of a control relationship to the issuer, controlling persons have a different status than ordinary holders in the sale of their shares. The Securities Act imposes "issuer" status on control persons for purposes of determining whether a distribution subject to section 5 registration requirements occurs, and broadens the notion of "underwriter" in connection with transactions by such control person issuers.

Proper application of the Section 4(1) exemption thus rests on the identity of the transacting party and requires careful interpretation of the definitions of "issuer," "underwriter" and "dealer." These are defined terms in Section 2 of the Securities Act, and each is considered in detail below. There is, however, an important caveat in undertaking this analysis. Even if one is not an issuer, underwriter or dealer, he or she will not be protected by section 4(1) if the sale in question is a transaction by anyone in those categories and the person's activity bearing upon the sale, or involvement in it, is significant enough to impose responsibility as a participant in what amounts to the chain of a distribution. n9

[1] Issuers

Section 2(4) broadly defines an "issuer" as "every person who issues or proposes to issue any security." n10 Thus, the term would include, among others, corporations, n11 partnerships, limited partnerships, limited liability companies, business trusts, other unincorporated associations, governments, governmental agencies, and individuals under certain circumstances. n12 In this connection, it should be noted that the definition includes a person who "proposes to issue any security." n13 Thus, in the event that preorganization certificates are offered for sale, the "issuer" is the person or group of promoters acting as syndicate managers. In the same manner, the "issuer" of units of a limited partnership to be formed is the proposed general partner and the "issuer" of membership interests in a limited liability company to be formed is the proposed managing member.

The remainder of Section 2(4) deals in detail with specific types of business organizations and the persons associated therewith who are "issuers" for purposes of the Securities Act. In the application of the section 4(1) exemption from registration, however, the most significant definition of "issuer" is not found in section 2(4), but rather in section 2(11), which is the definition of "underwriter" under the Securities Act. One who is an underwriter may not rely on the section 4(1) exemption, and will be subject to registration requirements under the Act unless some other exemption is available. The critical impact of the underwriter definition in section 2a(11) of the Act is discussed below.

[2] Underwriters

Section 2(a)(11) of the Securities Act (formerly Section 2(11)) defines "underwriter" as

[A]ny person who has purchased from an issuer with a view to, or offers or sells for an issuer in connection with, the distribution of any security, or participates or has a direct or indirect participation in any such undertaking, or participates or has a participation in the direct or indirect underwriting of any such undertaking, but such term shall not include a person whose interest is limited to a commission from an underwriter or dealer not in excess of the usual and customary distributors' or sellers' commission. As used in this paragraph the term "issuer" shall include, in addition to an issuer, any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer, or any person under direct or indirect control with the issuer. n14

The term is not confined to those who engage in underwriting as a business. Anyone who engages in the activities in the definition can be an underwriter. Thus, for example, an individual who purchases a substantial amount of securities in an issue and then quickly sells them may be considered an underwriter, as would anyone who assists in the distribution in any way. As for the latter notion, it is important to remember that section 2(a)(11) defines underwriter to include any person who offers or sells for an issuer in connection with a distribution. As discussed in more detail below, "statutory" underwriter status is most often considered in the context of one who purchases from an issuer "with a view to distribution." However, section 2(a)(11) has a much broader scope, extending to anyone who in fact acts for an issuer in the process of a distribution of securities, or as a "link in the chain of distribution." n15 Because "issuer" is defined for purposes of section 2(a)(11) to include "any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer," it is at once apparent that the potential for inadvertently attaining underwriter status, and violating section 5 of the Securities Act, is meaningful.

The definition of an underwriter encompasses broker-dealers acting as firm commitment underwriters--those who purchase the security outright from the issuer or controlling person--and best efforts underwriters--those who agree to use best efforts to sell the securities but without liability for the unsold shares. n16 The definition also includes members of the underwriting syndicate or selling group. These are traditional underwriters, who perform a direct role in the distribution of securities from issuers to the investing public. In the application of Section 4(1), however, the presence a non-traditional underwriter is the primary concern. The Section 4(1) exemption excludes statutory underwriters as well as traditional underwriters. The determination of underwriter status depends on the actual role performed in a particular transaction. Section 2(a)(11) extends underwriter status to individuals who might otherwise be unconnected to the securities industry. Determining underwriter status for purposes of assessing the availability of the section 4(1) exemption requires analysis of the particular facts of each case. Any seller of securities may become a statutory underwriter.

A common example is when one makes a secondary distribution for the account of a person who is in a control relationship with the issuer of the securities. The one who distributes the controlling person's securities may be an "underwriter" within the Section 2(a)(11) definition regardless of occupation or lack of connection with any phase of the securities business. Moreover, a person who has no contractual arrangement with and no authorization from an issuer to distribute its securities, will be regarded as a statutory underwriter if his function is to obtain a purchaser for the securities. In SEC v. Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Ass'n, n17 the defendant was a volunteer who, for patriotic reasons and for no compensation solicited offers from United States citizens to buy unregistered Chinese government bonds. In holding that the defendant was an "underwriter," the court observed: "a person who solicits offers to buy securities is a seller within the statutory meaning whether he is in an ordinary legal sense acting for the issuer or the purchaser ... it was participating in a transaction with an issuer, to wit, the Chinese government." n18

Chinese Consolidated Benevolent cemented the principle that the section 4(1) exemption will not be available to those persons who have engaged in steps necessary to the distribution of the unregistered securities. Stated as a "necessary participant" test, the question is whether but for a person's participation, the sale transaction would not have taken place or, as has otherwise been stated, whether the person's acts were a "substantial factor" in the sale. n19

Many challenges in the application of section 4(1) and the scope of "underwriter" status have come in the context of Internet-based investor relations services designed to create investor awareness for public companies traded on the OTC "Bulletin Board" n20 in exchange for companies' stock or cash. In Loursin, Inc., n21 for example, a company hired to place press releases and company information on its Web site, and to launch a promotional campaign for its client company, was paid with client company stock. The investor relations firm then sold the client company stock in open market transactions without compliance with section 5 of the Securities Act. The evidence was clear that the firm and its principals took shares of client companies purely as compensation, with a view to selling them on the open market. The absence of any investment intent was sufficient to impose underwriter status on the seller, and with it the violation of section 5 of the Securities Act since the shares were not covered by a registration statement. The seller's belief that the shares received as compensation were freely tradable was of no consequence. n22

In other contemporary settings, the sale of large amounts of stock received as compensation for consulting or other services, or the exercise of options received in such circumstances followed by the sale of the option shares, also raise the question of whether the sell is a statutory underwriter without regard to the fact that bona fide consulting or other services may have been provided. In SEC v. Universal Express, Inc. n23 the court rejected the contention that an individual defendant was unaware that the circumstances of his acquisition and sale of millions of shares of unregistered stock as payment for consulting services constituted participation in a distribution, and that the individual had no intention of doing so. The underwriter inquiry is objective, said the court, and does no incorporate consideration of the actor's subjective understandings. n24 The court offered this further observation:

Disregard of such subjective evidence is sensible, as otherwise it would be easy enough for a Section 5 violator to claim non-underwriter exemption for massive sales of unregistered securities--defeating the purpose of the Securities Act--by swearing that he never meant to facilitate distributions of the issuer.
n25

Although evidence of subjective intent is not involved, it is also true in the critical assessment of underwriter status that determines the availability of the Section 4(1) exemption the result hinges largely on interpretations by the SEC and the courts of the specific language of Section 2(a)(11). In particular, the terms "issuer," "purchased from," "sells for," "participates in" and "with a view to ... distribution" must be properly understood in order to determine the availability of the exemption. Each is considered in more detail below.

[a] Section 2(a)(11) Issuers--Control

In order to be classified as an underwriter pursuant to Section 2(a)(11), a person must act in relation to an "issuer." As introduced above, however, section 2(a)(11) enlarges the standard definition of "issuer" contained in Section 2(a)(4) by providing that "[a]s used in this paragraph the term "issuer" shall include, in addition to an issuer, any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer, or any person under direct or indirect common control with the issuer." n26

No single factor determines control status and the term is not defined by the Securities Act. However, the term is defined in Rule 405 under the Securities Act as follows:

The term "control" (including the terms "controlling," "controlled by," and "under common control with") means the possession, direct or indirect, of the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a person, whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract, or otherwise. n27

Control is an issue to be determined from particular facts and circumstances. An individual who is not an officer or director of a company may nevertheless be a control person as demonstrated by particular activities and the ability to control or direct the affairs of the business. n28 The notion of control-in-fact is paramount in the analysis. n29 In the assessment of underwriter status for the purpose of the section 4(1) exemption from registration requirements there are two common settings. The first involves the existence of an actual or apparent distribution of securities and the question is whether the person or persons engaged in it may claim the section 4(1) exemption. These are discreet instances of large transactions or processes by which securities are sold by persons associated in some capacity with the true issuer and acting out of the normal course of business. The earmarks of a distribution, and the concerns for investor protection that are addressed by registration under the Act, are normally apparent. The other, more common setting involves the resale of unregistered ("restricted") securities held by an individual who is or may be deemed to be an "affiliate" of the issuer, but in circumstances in which there is no purposeful undertaking to carry out a distribution of securities into the hand of the investing public. Concerns for investor protection that registration would supply are no different, but the circumstances of the transaction may be quite different, and such that the protections of registration are not necessary.

In any case, application of the basic standard for determining control requires more than a cursory inquiry into a person's influence over the issuer. This can pose a particular challenge for market intermediaries. While a broker-dealer is always under an obligation to determine the availability of an exemption before attempting to sell unregistered securities, n30 the problem becomes acute when the request to sell comes from a person whose controlling interest in the issuer is not apparent. In Geiger v. SEC, n31 a salesperson and trader at a brokerage firm were deemed to be underwriters in the sale of unregistered securities for what was in fact a statutory issuer of the securities. There was no evidence that these statutory underwriters actually knew the shares were controlled by a statutory issuer. The share certificate bore no restrictive legend, and the two had been assured that the shares were "free trading." Nevertheless, the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed an administrative determination that section 4(1) did not cover the sales, and that the two intermediaries violated section 5 in effecting the sales. The problem, said the court, is that they failed to inquire sufficiently into the circumstances of the transaction. The court opined:

When a dealer is offered a substantial block of a little-known security, either by persons who appear reluctant to disclose exactly where the securities came from, or where the surrounding circumstances raise a question ... whether or not the ostensible sellers may be merely intermediaries for controlling persons or statutory underwriters, then search inquiry is called for." Even if, as Kirby argues, this sale was not substantial, all the other warning signs were present. Golden Eagle was little-known and lightly traded, and Geiger was reluctant to disclose the true party in interest. If Kirby had simply insisted on knowing the identity of the seller, he would have uncovered the illegal nature of the transaction. By giving Geiger a blank check, Kirby abandoned even the pretense of due diligence. n32

In practice, "affiliate" status is most commonly the focal point in assessing the availability of the section 4(1) exemption. Affiliate status is based upon a control relationship, but is more broadly defined in Rule 405 under the Securities Act n33 as "a person that directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls or is controlled by, or is under common control with" an issuer. In SEC v. Freiberg n34 the court explained that the affiliate inquiry is based on the totality of circumstances, including an appraisal of the influence upon management and policies of a company by the person involved. Affiliates, said the court, are most often officers, directors or majority shareholders--people who exercise control over the company's policies or finances. n35

The "affiliate" definition is carried into Rule 144 under the Securities Act, n36 where it is most prominent today. Rule 144 is the "safe harbor" provision for determining persons deemed not to be engaged in a distribution of securities, and who are not therefore underwriters. Affiliate or non-affiliate status determines the requirements under Rule 144 for the sale of "restricted securities" without registration or the availability of another exemption. Rule 144 is introduced later in this chapter, and discussed in depth in Chapter 6. Its significance is better understood first, however, by a closer examination of "control" relationships and other key elements of underwriter status for purposes of the section 4(1) exemption. The common indicia of control for purposes of underwriter status and the availability of the section 4(1) exemption are examined further below.

[i] Stock Ownership. While it is obvious that record or beneficial ownership of more than one-half of the voting securities of a company constitutes control, it is equally apparent that one (or a group) owning less than that amount may occupy the status of controlling person. n37 In this connection, Item 11(m) of Form S-1, the most generally used application form for registration, requires the registrant to list each person who owns more than 5 per cent of any class of voting securities. n38

Furthermore, this "minority control" can exist in numerous forms, including:

- Pyramiding through holding companies;
- Issuance of a larger class of nonvoting stock coupled with the issuance of a comparatively small amount of voting stock;

- The placement of comparatively few shares in the hands of one person or one group coupled with wide distribution of the remainder;
- Proxy control through committees; and
- Control through voting trusts or protective committees in reorganization or bankruptcy proceedings.

[ii] Power to Direct Management and Policies. A test frequently used in determining the existence of control concerns the ability of the person or group in question to direct the management and policies of the issuer. As the court observed in SEC v. Micro Moisture Controls, Inc., n39 "the defendants were in control because they possessed and exercised the power to direct the management and policies of Micro-Moisture... and particularly were in a position to obtain the required signatures of Micro-Moisture and its officers and directors on a registration statement." The requisite level of control is not determined by influence over day-to-day managerial functions, but rather over the company's management and policy. n40

This influence may stem from one or more of several sources. Domination of officers and members of the board of directors or executive committee is a common example. n41 Similarly, such control might arise from interlocking corporate directorships or, as indicated in Rule 405, from contractual arrangements. n42

[iii] Officers and Directors as Controlling Persons. The fact that a person is an officer or director does not in and of itself establish control. Indeed, the fact that an officer or director consistently opposed the policies of management or of those persons in mathematical control would tend to negate any indication of control status. n43 Similarly, a proxy contest or other evidence of dissatisfaction or conflict between the director or officer and management would indicate an absence of control, especially if large blocks of stock held by other persons or groups n44 have been used to outvote the officer or director.

On the other hand, certain factors tend to suggest the presence of a controlling officer or director:

- Participation in active management by the officer or director or a member of the officer or director's family;
- The necessity of the officer or director's stock, or that of the officer or director's family, to establish a quorum at annual stockholders' meetings;
- The officer or director consistently "going along" with management policies; and
- The officer or director's ownership, record or beneficial, of five percent or more of the outstanding voting securities.

Finally, the fact that an officer or director has resigned and thus has no official connection with the company does not necessarily terminate what otherwise would be a control status. The inquiry into control must focus on actual influence, and a former officer or director, whether through stockholding or some other formal or informal arrangement, such as a "consulting agreement," may be able to exert a very real influence on management policies. Control will always be determined from the particular circumstances of the case. n45

[b] Purchasing From or Selling For an Issuer.

As previously noted, the definition of "underwriter" under Section 2(11) includes broker-dealers acting as firm commitment underwriters, who purchase the securities outright, and best efforts underwriters, who simply agree to sell the securities for the issuer but without an obligation to pay for unsold shares. A "purchase" by an underwriter under this section includes both cash transactions and acquisitions by exchange. n46 In determining whether an entity has "purchased from" an issuer, courts and the Commission look beyond the parties' terminology and consider the essence of the transaction.

In Sweet's Steel Co., n47 for example, C had an option to purchase the registrant's shares but had no funds. C made an arrangement with O to provide the funds, but O, not wanting to be named as an underwriter, attempted to disguise the underwriting as a loan, some of the shares being taken as collateral. Part of the remaining shares were retained by C and O as compensation and the rest were sold to the public. In finding that the agreement between C and O was not a bona fide loan but actually an underwriting, the Commission observed: "Thus it is clear that the position of Ohstrom, Inc., and its syndicate was that of an underwriter as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(11) of the Act. ... It is our finding that Ohstrom, Inc., and members of the syndicate did purchase ... with a view to distribution. The nature of their interest is not compatible with that of a mere lender of money or a person performing a normal banking function. They were sharing the profits and risks of distribution." n48

Seeking to avoid statutory underwriter status in order to rely on the section 4(1) exemption for sales of securities, some sellers have attempted to rely on two-step or multi-stage transactions to negate the elements of section 2(a)(11). In SEC v. M & A West, Inc., n49 an intermediary assisted shareholders of private companies to identify and acquire public "shell" companies as a means of placing their shares in the hands of public holders through reverse merger transactions. For his services, the intermediary received shares of stock in the former shell company, which he later sold to the public in market transactions. For these sales he claimed exemption from registration under section 4(1), on the ground that he was not a statutory underwriter because he had not purchased the shares from control persons of an issuer with a view to distribution. Given his sales of the securities within a few months after receiving them, the court concluded that there was no doubt the requisite "view" was present. The larger question, however, was whether the intermediary had in fact purchased the shares from control persons who in fact had resigned their positions in the second stage of reorganization transactions that resulted in shares being conveyed to the intermediary. The court concluded that there was no question that contracts for the intermediary's acquisition of shares were formed at a time when the shareholder groups were undoubtedly control persons. The court construed "purchased" for purposes of section 2(a)(11) underwriter status to include contracts to purchase, and thus denied application of section 4(1) in the intermediary's sales of the stock. n50

A person may be deemed to have sold securities for the issuer, for purposes of Section 2(a)(11), in a variety of contexts. Some are considered further below.

[i] Corporation Selling Its Own Shares. When a corporation proposes to sell its own securities through its officers and directors, are such officers and directors "underwriters" within the definition of this section? In American Tung Grove Developments, Inc., n51 the officers spent the major portion of their time in attempts to sell the registrant's securities and received the same commission as that paid to investment bankers. Under this set of circumstances the Commission held that the officers were really acting as "underwriters" of the registrant's securities. n52 However, if the selling activities of officers and directors (or other corporate employees) may not involve special compensation and are only incidental to their ordinary functions, such selling activities do not make the sellers "underwriters." If persons are to engage in these kinds of selling activities in an offering by their company, the registrant might make appropriate disclosure in the "Underwriting" section of its prospectus in the following manner:

The Company has entered into an agreement with its president, Mr. W, whereby he will use his best efforts to sell shares of the stock offered hereby. Mr. W has the right to employ licensed securities dealers and salesmen to assist in the sale of the stock, to whom a commission of 10% for each share sold may be paid. Under no circumstances will Mr. W receive a commission in connection with the sale of such stock.

In addition, officers, directors and other employees of an issuer who fit within the safe harbor provisions of Rule 3a4-1 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "Exchange Act") will not be required to register as broker-dealers. One condition of Rule 3a4-1 is that such persons not receive compensation, directly or indirectly, for their selling efforts.

[ii] Sales by Parents, Subsidiaries, and Affiliates. Suppose that the major part of Corporation A's business consists of the purchase of securities of Corporation B, its affiliate, subsidiary, or parent, and that Corporation A finances such purchases by sales of its own securities. Will Corporation A be regarded as an underwriter? Rule 140 under the Securities Act n53 answers this question in the affirmative: Corporation A is regarded as engaging in a distribution of Corporation B's securities. This in turn would require registration of Corporation B's securities before Corporation A could legally sell its own securities. The real purpose in such cases usually is the indirect public financing of the subsidiary, parent, or affiliate, as the case may be, by means of another corporate entity.

[iii] Sale of Fractional Shares. The declaration of a stock dividend by a corporation to its stockholders may result in fractional interests or scrip which the issuer wishes to eliminate by combining such interest into whole shares. For example, suppose that X Corporation declares a 10 percent stock dividend. S, a holder of 12 shares, is entitled to 1.2 shares of X stock. Rather than issue fractional shares to S and other similarly situated shareholders, X Corporation may want to give them the right to purchase the additional fractions necessary to make up a full share. Is X Corporation (or a transfer agent or a bank employed by X Corporation) one who "sells for" when this rounding out process is followed? Prior to the adoption of a rule on this point, the Commission had taken the position that one who acted pursuant to instructions from the shareholders in performing these purely mechanical functions was not an underwriter. In line with that position, Rule 152a under the Securities Act n54 provides that such transactions are exempt from registration under Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. The rule is applicable to stock dividends, stock splits, reverse stock splits, conversions, mergers, and similar transactions which result in fractional interests. It also applies whether such transactions are effected on behalf of the shareholders by the issuer or by a bank or other independent agent. n55

[iv] Pledges of Control Shares. Does a public sale of control shares by a pledgee, (e.g., a bank) after default by the pledgor, qualify as an exempted transaction "by any person other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer?" Or, stated conversely, must the pledgee register the pledged shares before making a public sale? The pledgee situation not only calls into play the definitions of "purchased from" and "sells for," but also raises the question of whether the putative underwriter purchased "with a view to" a distribution. n56 Translated into terms of a typical illustration, X, a controlling shareholder of C Corporation, borrows money from B Bank, pledging his unregistered C shares as collateral for the loan. X's loan is now in default and B Bank forecloses and proposes to make a public sale of X's shares. Must there be prior registration? The answer to that question will depend upon whether B Bank is regarded as an "underwriter."

It is clear that, in the absence of a bona fide pledge, the exemption contained in Section 4(1) is not applicable to a subsequent foreclosure sale by the pledgee. In other words, if the pledge is a step in the process of distributing the pledged securities, the sale by the pledgee requires registration. The point is that the pledgee in such a case originally takes the collateral with a view to distribution and is therefore an underwriter. n57 Suppose, however, that the pledge is a bona fide one. Does the same result follow? This question caused concern in legal and banking circles, especially in the light of certain dicta contained in the Second Circuit's opinion in the seminal Guild Films case. n58

In Guild Films, a controlling shareholder pledged as collateral for a loan a substantial block of securities which bore a restrictive legend. After the pledgor defaulted on the loan, the pledgee bank sold some of the securities without filing a registration statement. In holding that the bank was an underwriter and therefore not entitled to the 4(1) exemption from registration, the Second Circuit stated that even though the bank took the securities as collateral and did not deal directly with the issuer, it knew that it had been given unregistered stock and that the issuer, through the restrictive legend, had specifically instructed that the stock not be sold.

Prior to Guild Films the SEC had adhered to the position with respect to a bona fide pledge situation that if the loan transaction is bona fide, in the sense that the pledgee has satisfied himself that in the absence of unforeseen circumstances the loan will be paid off and the collateral returned, the subsequent acquisition of title to the collateral by the pledgee is not considered the type of acquisition contemplated by Section 2(a)(11) since it is only incidental to the collection of indebtedness. In other words, no registration was necessary if the loan secured by the pledge was bona fide in the sense that it was expected to be paid and the transaction was not entered into with a view to distribution of the pledged securities.

The controversial part of the Guild Films decision, however, is the dictum added by the Second Circuit:

The exemption in 4(1) was intended to permit private sales of unregistered securities to investors who are likely to have, or are likely to obtain, such information as is ordinarily disclosed in registration statements... the good faith of banks is irrelevant to this purpose. It would be of little solace to purchasers of worthless stock to learn that the sellers had acted in "good faith." Regardless of good faith, the banks engaged in steps necessary to this public sale, and cannot be exempted. n59

Prior to the Second Circuit's opinion the view was widespread that a bona fide pledgee's foreclosure sale was entitled to the exemption contained in Section 4(1). n60 Guild Films obviously cast doubt on the availability of the 4(1) exemption for such a sale. n61

Guild Films, if it is confined to its facts and holding, represents nothing new or startling. Absent the controversial (and unnecessary) dictum contained in the Second Circuit's opinion, the case simply stands for the proposition that, in the absence of a bona fide pledge situation, the pledgee can make a public sale when the debt is in default only if the pledged securities have been registered. There is scant authority on the question whether registration is required in a bona fide pledge situation. n62 However, the Guild Films dictum requires careful consideration, for it has been widely interpreted to mean that pledges cannot, under any circumstances, make a public sale of control shares pledged as collateral without having effected a prior registration of those securities. Simply put, in the case of securities pledged for a loan, the pledgee should not assume that he is free to distribute without registration.

The adoption of Rule 144 modified the situation where the bona fide pledgee resells the pledged securities in a private placement. Rule 144 conditions such sales on, among other things, the availability of adequate current information with respect to the issuer of the securities. n63 The Rule 144 modification, however, includes principles of tacking and aggregation. Tacking of holding periods is permitted for bona fide pledgees, since it is considered that when they sell the securities they stand in the place of their pledgors. n64 However, securities sold by the pledgee must be aggregated with those sold by the pledgor in determining the quantitative limitations of Rule 144. n65

Accordingly, correct or not, one interpretation of the Guild Films dictum is still that under no circumstances may a pledgee make a public sale of collateral consisting of unregistered control securities. n66 That interpretation will continue to generate uncertainty with respect to the legality of any public sale of unregistered control shares even by a bona fide pledgee outside of the provisions of Rule 144.

[c] "Participation In" an Underwriting. The Section 2(a)(11) definition of underwriter also extends to persons that directly or indirectly participate in an underwriting without actually purchasing securities from, or selling them for, an issuer. The exact definition of "participation" becomes important, for example, in the case of finders. It is clear that the ordinary finder is not an underwriter for the reason that the finder does not make a distribution of the issuer's securities. In short, a finder that does no more than introduce the registrant to the investment banker is not an underwriter. n67 The fact that the finder is to receive a certain percentage of an underwriter's commission or that the finder advances the underwriter funds to enter into the underwriting contract does not necessarily make the finder an underwriter. n68 However, such compensation may make the finder a broker-dealer, requiring registration under the Exchange Act. n69 In addition, if the finder assumes part of the underwriting risk, or only furnishes funds to an underwriter and also takes a finder's fee based upon the number of shares sold, the finder will be regarded as having "participated in" the distribution and thus will be deemed an underwriter. "The test is one of participation in the underwriting rather than of a mere interest in it." n70

[d] A View to Distribution An underwriter under Section 2(a)(11) must purchase securities with a view to, or sell securities in connection with, a distribution. In this connection, the term "distribution," as used in Section 2(a)(11) defining an "underwriter," carries the same meaning as "public offering" in Section 4(2). In short, distribution implies an offering to a substantial number of persons. A person who buys securities for investment and not for resale, is therefore not an underwriter since no distribution has occurred. n71 Similarly, no distribution is involved where a person not affiliated with the issuer or an underwriter agrees with the underwriter to purchase for investment all or a portion of an issue that remains unsold. n72 "[A] person who does no more than agree with an underwriter to take over some or all of the undistributed portion of the issue, and who purchases for investment any securities which his commitment thus obliged him to take up, does not thereby subject himself to liability as an underwriter of the securities of the issue actually distributed to the public." n73

Ascertaining the requisite "view" for assigning underwriter status is not a simple matter. It is a factual question dependent upon a number of factors. In SEC v. iBIZ Technology Corp., n74 the SEC presented the following factors relevant to determining whether a person acted as an underwriter, i.e., with a view to distribution:

- Whether the shares were acquired for investment purposes;
- The number of shares;
- The length of time the individual held the securities;
- Whether there was an unforeseeable change in circumstances of the holder preceding the sales; and
- Whether the individual was, directly or indirectly, participating in the distribution of securities or raising capital for the issuer. n75

In iBIZ an individual defendant received stock and stock options from an issuer as compensation for his consulting services. The defendant exercised his options to purchase millions of shares, which he then sold in several transactions over a one year period. Thereafter he exercised more options and sold the shares a short time later. The defendant paid for the shares he purchased upon exercise of the options with a promissory note to the issuer, which he paid for in several payments. Although the securities issued to the consultant were covered by a registration statement filed by the issuer on Form S-8, the resale of those securities by the consultant without registration was not covered. n76 The SEC alleged that the consultant violated section 5 of the Securities Act in the resales without registration, and moved for summary judgment. The defendant, on the other hand, argued that the number of shares he sold was small in comparison to the mount of shares outstanding; that the sales were isolated and spread out in time; that he controlled the timing and amount of the sales; and that he did not exercise all of this options or act under any pressure from the issuer.

Although a "close call" in the opinion of the court, viewing the facts in a light most favorable to the defendant, the court denied the SEC motion for summary judgment. The court concluded that there were disputed issues of fact as to whether the consultant had purchased his stock with a view to distribution. These issues were to be resolved by the fact finder. As to another consultant involved in the case, the court likewise concluded that there were material fact issues whether he acted as a conduit to the public in order to raise money for the issuer. That consultant had taken on certain obligations to the issuer to pay for an advertising mailer by the issuer, and he used proceeds from the sale of stock received as compensation to fulfill his obligation to pay the issuer. Here again, the court concluded that there were material issues whether the individual took the shares as just compensation and used a portion of the proceeds to fulfill his obligation to the issuer, or whether he took the shares with a view to distribution to the public.

The court's assessment in iBIZ illustrates that ascertaining requisite "view to a distribution" will nearly always be a question of fact. The factors identified by the SEC in the case are the historical focal points. It is the uncertainty attendant to them, however, that argued so strongly for the creation of "safe harbor" criteria dealing with each of them, which resulted in the adoption of SEC Rule 144. As the SEC observed:

Since it is difficult to ascertain the mental state of the purchaser at the time of an acquisition of securities, prior to and since the adoption of Rule 144, subsequent acts and circumstances have been considered to determine whether the purchaser took the securities "with a view to distribution" at the time of the acquisition. Emphasis has been placed on factors such as the length of time the person held the securities and whether there has been an unforeseeable change in circumstances of the holder. Experience has shown, however, that reliance upon such factors alone has led to uncertainty in the application of the registration provisions of the Act.

Thus, said the Commission, Rule 144 was adopted:

[T]o establish specific criteria for determining whether a person is not engaged in a distribution. Rule 144 creates a safe harbor from the Section 2(a)(11) definition of "underwriter." A person satisfying the applicable conditions of the Rule 144 safe harbor is deemed not to be engaged in a distribution of the securities and therefore not an underwriter of the securities for purposes of Section 2(a)(11). Therefore, such a person is deemed not to be an underwriter when determining whether a sale is eligible for the Section 4(1) exemption for "transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer."

[e] Dealers Selling on Commission. Under Section 2(a)(11), "a person whose interest is limited to a commission from an underwriter or dealer not in excess of the usual and customary distributors' or sellers' commission" is excluded from the definition of "underwriter." Thus, although a dealer purchases at a price under the public offering price and resells to the public, he is not an underwriter unless his commission or spread exceeds the "usual and customary" dealer's commission. n77 Furthermore, although the "commission" must be received from an underwriter or dealer, that term is defined to include "commissions paid by an underwriter or dealer directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by, or under direct or indirect common control with the issuer." n78 However, the key words are "usual and customary distributors' or sellers' commission." The size of the commission is not defined in percentages. Rather, it is couched in general terms. But it specifically excludes syndicate members and "regular" underwriters even though they may receive only a "usual and customary" commission. n79

[3] Dealers

The definition of dealer leads to the conclusion that dealers can be key participants in distributions of securities. n80 Therefore, dealers are removed from the Section 4(1) exemption. However, the realities of the securities markets, i.e., countless daily transactions, and Congress' intended distinction between trading and distributing securities points to the need for the separate exemption for dealers provided in Section 4(3). n81 It is important to note that dealers are excluded from the Section 2(a)(11) definition of underwriter, as long as their commissions are not in excess of the "usual and customary" distributors' or sellers' commissions. n82

[4] An Introduction to Rule 144

Rule 144 under the Securities Act n83 creates a safe harbor for the sale of securities under the section 4(1) exemption. The SEC adopted Rule 144 in 1972 to provide a safe harbor from the definition of underwriter contained in section 2(11) of the Securities Act as applied to affiliates or controlling persons of an issuer. Compliance with Rule 144 requirements precludes any finding that the seller is a person who acquired the securities with a view to their distribution. The Rule addresses resales of "restricted securities," which are securities acquired in unregistered, private sales from the issuer or from an affiliate of the issuer, n84 and sales of control securities--those held by an affiliate of the issuing company. A person selling restricted securities, or a person selling restricted or other securities on behalf of or for the account of an affiliate, who satisfies all of Rule 144's applicable conditions in connection with the transaction, is deemed not to be an underwriter as defined in Section 2(11), and therefore may rely on the Section 4(1) exemption for the resale of the securities.

Rule 144 is addressed in detail in Chapter 6 of this Treatise. For a complete understanding of the Section 4(1) exemption, however, it is important to understand here that the conditions of Rule 144 which assure availability of the exemption are:

- A holding period; n85
- Adequate current information about the issuer; n86
- A trading volume formula which limits the amount of securities to be sold; n87
- Manner of sale requirements; n88 and
- A notice filing requirement. n89

If a sale of securities complies with all of the applicable conditions of Rule 144:

- (1) Any affiliate or other person who sells restricted securities will be deemed not to be engaged in a distribution and therefore not an underwriter for that transaction;
- (2) Any person who sells restricted or other securities on behalf of an affiliate of the issuer will be deemed not to be engaged in a distribution and therefore not an underwriter for that transaction; and
- (3) The purchaser in such transaction will receive securities that are not restricted securities.

The purpose of Rule 144 is to provide objective criteria for determining that a person selling securities to the public has not acquired the securities from the issuer for distribution. The Rule 144 inquiry does not encompass evidence of an individual's subjective intent, but rather focuses on the objective circumstances of a sale. A holding period, for example, is one criterion established to demonstrate that the selling security holder did not acquire the securities to be sold under Rule 144 with distributive intent, and has assumed the economic risk of investment in the securities to be resold. Further resale restrictions imposed by the rule are designed to meet the concerns in a distribution that registration under Section 5 is intended address. The availability of current information, amount of sale limitations and limitations on the manner of sale to ordinary brokerage transactions with no general solicitation permitted all operate to largely eliminate the need for protection that would be afforded by registration, and negate any concern that the seller is in fact engaged in a distribution. In this context Rule 144 also makes distinction among requirements between affiliate and non-affiliate sellers. In the holding period, for example,

Compliance with Rule 144 is not the exclusive means of achieving the Section 4(1) exemption from registration. As the Rule itself provides: "Rule 144 is not an exclusive safe harbor. A person who does not meet all of the applicable conditions of Rule 144 still may claim any other available exemption under the Act for the sale of the securities." n90 At the same time, however: "The Rule 144 safe harbor is not available to any person with respect to any transaction or series of transactions that, although in technical compliance with Rule 144, is part of a plan or scheme to evade the registration requirements of the Act. n91

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Section 4(1), as renumbered by the Securities Act Amendments of 1964.

(n2)Footnote 2. See H. R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1933), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section E (Matthew Bender). See also Hicks, The Concept of Transaction as a Restraint on Resale Limitations, 49 Ohio State L. J., 422-24 (1988) and Campbell, Resales of Securities Under the Securities Act of 1933, 52 Wash & Lee L. Rev., 1333 (1995).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Quinn & Company, Inv. v. SEC, 452 F.2d 943 (10th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 957 (1972) (Individual who sold 25,000 shares of stock violated section 5 even though the amount was a small percentage of the total shares outstanding).

See also Terry T. Steen, 53 S.E.C. 618 (1998) (Registration violation based on a sale of 300,000 shares where the issuer had in excess of 100 million shares outstanding).

(n4)Footnote 4. Ackerberg v. Johnson, 892 F.2d 1328, 1336 (8th Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Geiger v. SEC, 363 F.3d 481 (D.C. Cir. 2004) , in which the court observed:

Registration of securities protects "investors by promoting full disclosure of information thought necessary to informed investment decisions ..." To the purchaser of securities, the potential loss--and the need for disclosure--is the same regardless whether the securities represent one percent, five percent, or ten percent of the outstanding shares. The applicability of the § 4(1) exemption turns not on the percentage of shares involved, but "on whether the particular class of persons affected needs the protection of the Act ..." 363 F.3d at 484 [quoting SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 73 S.Ct. 981, 97 L.Ed. 1494 (1953)] .

(n6)Footnote 6. Berckley Inv. Group, Ltd. v. Colkitt, 455 F.3d 195, 212 (3d Cir. 2006) .

(n7)Footnote 7. SEC v. Phan, 500 F.3d 895, 902 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n8)Footnote 8. As defined in Rule 405 under the Securities Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.405, an affiliate is "a person that directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls or is controlled by, or is under common control with" an issuer. "Control" is defined as the "possession, direct or indirect, of the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a person whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract, or otherwise." Id. Affiliate status encompasses officers, directors and majority or otherwise controlling shareholders--people who exercise or have the ability to exercise control in governance, policies, strategies or decisions.

There is no presumption of control. Rather, the question will always be whether there is control-in-fact. Where is it clear, for example, that an individual cannot exert any significant influence in spite of owning a significant percentage of outstanding stock, the person is unlikely to be deemed to be an affiliate. See, e.g., SEC v. Freiberg, No. 2:05-CV-00233PGC, [2007 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep. P 94,388 (D. Utah 2007). The uncertainty in this assessment, however, underscores the importance of Rule 144 under the Securities Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.144, which creates a safe harbor for sales by persons who risk being held liable for failure to comply with registration requirements. The Rule 144 safe harbor is introduced later in this chapter, see § 4.02[4], infra.

(n9)Footnote 9. Owen v. Kane, 48 S.E.C. 617, 619 (1986) , aff'd, 842 F.2d 194 (8th Cir. 1988) .

See also Geiger v. SEC, 363 F.3d 481 (D.C. Cir. 2004) . In Geiger the court counseled that not everyone in the "chain of intermediaries" between a seller of securities and the ultimate buyer is sufficiently involved in the process to be deemed responsible for an unlawful distribution. However the court found that one who played a crucial role in finding the buyer, negotiating the terms, and facilitating the resale of the securities could not escape liability by avoiding direct involvement in the final act. See 363 F.3d at 487.

(n10)Footnote 10. The term "issuer" is defined in Section 2(4) to mean:

[E]very person who issues or proposes to issue any security; except that with respect to certificates of deposit, voting-trust certificates, or collateral-trust certificates, or with respect to certificates of interest or shares in an unincorporated investment trust not having a board of directors (or persons performing similar functions) or of the fixed, restricted management, or unit type, the term "issuer" means the person or persons performing the acts and assuming the duties of depositor or manager pursuant to the provisions of the trust or other agreement or instrument under which such securities are issued; except that in the case of an unincorporated association which provides by its articles for limited liability of any or all of its members, or in the case of a trust, committee, or other legal entity, the trustees or members thereof shall not be individually liable as issuers of any security issued by the association, trust, committee, or other legal entity; except that with respect to equipment-trust certificates or like securities, the term "issuer" means the person by whom the equipment or property is or is to be used; and except that with respect to fractional undivided interests in oil, gas, or other mineral rights, the term "issuer" means the owner of any such right or of any interest in such right (whether whole or fractional) who creates fractional interests therein for the purpose of public offering.

Section 2(a)(4) also contains narrower definitions of "issuer" as applied to particular types of securities. The definition of "issuer" may also vary depending on the context. For example, as discussed below, for purposes of defining who is an underwriter under Section 2(11), the term "issuer" includes any person in a control relationship with the issuer. See § 4.02[2][a] infra.

(n11)Footnote 11. A corporation that reacquires unregistered stock originally distributed pursuant to an exemption will be deemed an issuer of the stock for purposes of Section 4(1), and registration would be required, if the stock is redistributed. SEC v. Stanwood Oil Corp., 516 F. Supp. 1181, [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 98,202 (W.D. Pa. 1981).

Likewise, registered securities which are reacquired would have to be reregistered if redistributed in an offering requiring registration. "Registration" is not a condition, which once attained, permanently attaches to a security for the life of such security.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Section 2(a)(2). The Fifth Circuit held that a natural person (e.g., a corporate officer) may be an issuer under Section 2(a)(4) on the basis of acts done in a representative capacity for a corporate issuer. United States v. Rachal, 473 F.2d 1338, 1341 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 927 (1974).

(n13)Footnote 13. See SEC v. Asset Management Corp., [1979-1980 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 97,978 (S.D. Ind. 1979)(president/organizer of company formed to secure coal leases held to be an issuer because his activities were within the scope of one who issues or proposes to issue a security).

But see Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,376 (Div. Corp. Fin.1983)(Division of Corporation Finance takes no-action position on a firm's proposal to sell common stock ex-dividend at a time when ex-dividend trading on the New York Stock Exchange had not yet commenced, in response to the firm's concern that the transactions may be deemed a new security (e.g., a futures contract on the common stock) and that therefore the firm might be an "issuer" of securities under Section 2(a)(4)).

(n14)Footnote 14. 15 U.S.C. § 77b(11).

See SEC v. Poirier, 140 F.Supp. 2d 1033 (D. Ariz. 2001) (Statutory underwriters are individuals who purchase from an issuer intending to redistribute).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Charles F. Kirby, Admin. Proc. File No. 3-9602, Sec. Act Rel. No. 8174, 2003 SEC LEXIS 46 (Jan. 9, 2003).

See also SEC v. Kern, 425 F.3d 143 (2d Cir. 2005) ("Underwriters" include any person who is engaged in steps necessary to the distribution of securities); Ackerberg v. Johnson, 892 F.2d 1328, 1335-1336 (8th Cir. 1989) (Congress intended "to cover all persons who might operate as conduits for the transfer of securities to the public"); Zacharias v. SEC, 569 F.3d 458 (D.C. Cir. 2009) (Individuals' involvement in a complex plan resulting in the sale of unregistered shares to the public was a "necessary and critical step" in the scheme, such that as substantial factors and participants in the distribution they were underwriters for which the section 4(1) exemption was not available).

(n16)Footnote 16. The House Committee Report confirms the scope of the definition: "The term is defined broadly enough to include not only the ordinary underwriter, who for a commission promises to see that an issue is disposed of at a certain price, but also includes as an underwriter the person who purchases an issue outright with the idea of selling that issue to the public." H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess.13-14 (1933), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section E (Matthew Bender).

But see, Zicklin v. Breuer, 534 F. Supp. 745, [1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 98, 609 (S.D.N.Y. 1982), in which the court held that a bank that issued reports describing and recommending securities for customers who maintained investment advisory accounts with the bank, and that bought and sold securities for those accounts, was not an underwriter under Section 2(11). See also Securities Industry Association v. Federal Reserve Board, 468 U.S. 137, 104 S. Ct. 2979 (1984) where the Supreme Court allowed Bankers Trust Company to place commercial paper for several of its corporate customers (an activity quite similar to that of broker-dealers acting as underwriters), reasoning that the commercial paper placed was not a "security." The Court thus obviated the need to decide whether such activities constituted "underwriting."

(n17)Footnote 17. 120 F.2d 738 (2d Cir. 1941), cert. denied, 314 U.S. 618, 62 S. Ct. 106, 86 L. Ed.497 (1941).

"The term underwriter is not limited to its common definition, but rather is a word of art. An underwriter is one who purchases stock from the issuer with an intent to resell to the public." Quinn & Co. v. SEC, 452 F.2d 943, 946 (10th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 957, 92 S. Ct. 2059 (1972); Ingenito v. Bermec Corporation, 441 F. Supp. 525, 536 (S.D.N.Y. 1977).

(n18)Footnote 18. 120 F.2d at 740.

(n19)Footnote 19. SEC v. Murphy, 626 F.2d 633, 650-51 (9th Cir. 1980).

(n20)Footnote 20. The OTC Bulletin Board (OTCBB) is an electronic quotation system in the United States that displays real-time quotes, last-sale prices, and volume information for many over-the-counter (OTC) equity securities that are not listed on a national securities exchange or traded in the Nasdaq Stock Market. The OTC Bulletin Board is accessed by broker-dealer subscribers who post buy and sell quotes.

(n21)Footnote 21. SEC Admin. Proc. File No. 3-11310, Init. Dec. Rel. No. 250, 2004 SEC LEXIS 961 (May 11, 2004).

(n22)Footnote 22. But see In re OTC Live, Inc., SEC Admin. Proc. File No. 3-11309, Init. Dec. Rel. No. 261, 2004 SEC LEXIS 2244 (Sept. 30, 2004). In OTC Live, Inc. an Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent firm was not a statutory underwriter in connection with an agreement that, among other things, called for the firm to feature, link to the home page of, and create an advertising button for a client company, as well as circulate the client company's information by e-mail to the Internet firm's subscribers. The Internet firm had been established by a Russian immigrant who operated it from home, and who believed in good faith that the small amount of stock received as compensation for services could be freely sold. The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the OTC Live sites were a mere source of information, and that there was no touting or promotion of securities. Finding no "underwriter" status, she observed:

[I] cannot conclude that OTC Live and Mark Suleymanov were underwriters when they received 20,000 shares of First Capital from Genin and subsequently instructed their broker to sell them. At no time were Respondents attempting to circumvent the securities laws. Based on Genin's representations, the contract, and the advice of his broker, Suleymanov reasonably believed he was in full compliance and wanted merely to be compensated for advertising First Capital stock on OTC Live's Web site. At no time did he intend to act as a conduit for unregistered First Capital stock, nor was he providing an outlet for the stock. Because the shares were not in certificate form, there is no evidence that a restrictive legend accompanied the shares provided by Genin. 2004 SEC LEXIS 2244, at *29-30 .

(n23)Footnote 23. 475 F.Supp.2d 412 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Id., at 432 .

(n25)Footnote 25. Id., at 433 .

(n26)Footnote 26. It must not be overlooked that this expanded definition of "issuer" is only applicable "[a]s used in this paragraph [Section 2(a)(11)]." Thus, a controlling person is not an issuer for purposes of the Section 3(a)(11) or 4(2) exemptions. See § 4.02[1] supra for a discussion of the Section 2(a)(4) definition of "issuer."

(n27)Footnote 27. 17 C.F.R. § 230.405.

(n28)Footnote 28. SEC v. International Chemical Development Corp., 469 F.2d 20 (10th Cir. 1972) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g., Peck v. Pacifica CMA, Inc., No. 05-cv-00569, [2007 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed.Sec. L.Rep. P 94.349 (D. Colo. 2007). The court concluded that evidence showed two individuals to be control persons where:

[U]pon the initial purchase of the PMCA shares... the Plaintiffs both became directors and officers of PCMA. Further, Plaintiffs actively participated in the process of discovering and securing an operating company with which to reverse merge. The Plaintiffs were also active participants in gifting shares to family members in order to create a float or increase the shareholder base of PCMA. This is further evidence of the Plaintiffs' intent to attract an operating company to merge with PCMA. The Plaintiffs carried out PCMA's ultimate business plan. Id.

(n30)Footnote 30. See SEC v. Ralston Purina, 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n31)Footnote 31. 363 F.3d 481 (D.C. Cir. 2004) .

(n32)Footnote 32. 363 F.3d at 485 [quoting Wonsover v. SEC, 205 F.3d 408, 415 (D.C.Cir. 2001)] .

As long ago as 1962, the SEC recognized the issue for intermediaries in connection with sales of securities "of relatively obscure and unseasoned companies and where all of the circumstances surrounding the proposed distribution are not known to the broker-dealer":

[In order to claim a Section 4(1) exemption,] a dealer who offers to sell, or is asked to sell a substantial amount of [unregistered] securities must take whatever steps are necessary to be sure that this is a transaction not involving an issuer, person in a control relationship with an issuer or an underwriter. For this purpose, it is not sufficient for him merely to accept "self-serving statements of his sellers and their counsel without reasonably exploring the possibility of contrary facts."

The amount of inquiry called for necessarily varies with the circumstances of particular cases. A dealer who is offered a modest amount of a widely traded security by a responsible customer, whose lack of relationship to the issuer is well known to him, may ordinarily proceed with considerable confidence. On the other hand, when a dealer is offered a substantial block of a little-known security, either by persons who appear reluctant to disclose exactly where the securities came from, or where the surrounding circumstances raise a question as to whether or not the ostensible sellers may be merely intermediaries for controlling persons or statutory underwriters, then searching inquiry is needed.

Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4445, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 22,753 (1962) (citations omitted). See also SEC v. Culpepper, 270 F.2d 241 (2d Cir. 1959). The Commission took specific exception to the holding in U.S. v. Crosby, 294 F.2d 928 (2d Cir. 1961). In Crosby, the Second Circuit found that the Section 4(1) exemption was available to dealer-defendants who claimed that they were simply conducting "business as usual" when they sold large blocks of unregistered stock in reliance on a legal opinion based on incomplete facts. The Commission found that the circumstances surrounding the transactions made violations of Section 5 of the Securities Act highly likely. After the transfer of control of the issuing company, large blocks of unregistered stock began to appear on the market, accompanied by heavy publicity from management. In such situations, the Commission stated:

[R]esponsible dealers, aware that they have the burden of proving the availability of an exemption... proceed with far more caution than was displayed in the Texas-Adams case... it was up to these dealers to make an appropriate investigation as to who their seller was, and not simply to rely upon the opinion of the seller's attorney that no control relationship existed.

Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4445 [1962 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 22,753 (1962); see also In re A. L. Williamson & Co., 15 B.N.A. Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. 1471 (SEC. 1983) (broker-dealer who traded 10,000 shares of unregistered stock of shell corporation involved in a merger violated Section 5(a) where he had reason to believe the stock came from a controlling person of the issuer).

The problem becomes particularly acute where substantial amounts of a previously little-known security appear in the trading markets within a fairly short period of time and without the benefit of registration under the Act. In such situations, it must be assumed that these securities emanate from the issuer or from persons controlling the issuer, unless some other source is known and the fact that the certificates may be registered in the names of various individuals could merely indicate that those responsible for the distribution are attempting to cover their tracks.

(n33)Footnote 33. 17 C.F.R. § 230.405.

(n34)Footnote 34. [2007 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 94,388 (D. Utah 2007).

(n35)Footnote 35. Id., P 94,388 at 92,756.

(n36)Footnote 36. 17 C.F.R. §230.144.

(n37)Footnote 37. In Thompson Ross Securities Co., 6 SEC 1111, 1119 (1940), the Commission stated:

[T]he question of control is a factual question. "Control" is not synonymous with the ownership of 51 per cent of the voting stock of a corporation. Where power exists to direct the management and policies of a corporation, "control" within the meaning of Section 2(11) exists even though the persons who possess that power do not own a majority of the corporation's voting stock.

See also In re Caplan's Petition, 246 N.Y.S.2d 913, aff'd, 249 N.Y.S. 2d 877 (1964) (three per cent of outstanding shares able to deliver seven of ten board members in a sale of control); Essex Universal Corp. v. Yates, 305 F.2d 572 (2d Cir. 1962) (28.3% deemed "working control"); Drobbin v. Nicolet Instrument Corp., 631 F. Supp. 860 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (under proper circumstances, a person owning no stock can be a control person).

(n38)Footnote 38. Item 11(m) of Form S-1 requires the registrant to provide the information required by Item 403 of Regulation S-K. Regulation S-K is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume D, Section K (Matthew Bender). Item 403, requires information with respect to any person known to the registrant to be the beneficial owner of more than five percent of any class of the registrant's voting securities.

(n39)Footnote 39. 148 F. Supp. 558, 562 (S.D.N.Y. 1957), final injunction, 167 F. Supp. 716 (S.D.N.Y. 1958), aff'd sub nom. SEC v. Culpepper, 270 F.2d 241 (2d Cir.1959).

(n40)Footnote 40. As stated in Walston & Co., 7 SEC 937, 950 (1940), "It cannot be accepted that Walston believed that an employee driving an automobile controls that vehicle to the exclusion of his employer or that the officers of a corporation, in the exercise of their day-to-day and detailed managerial functions, control the corporation to the exclusion of the dominating financial interest." See also Thompson Ross Securities, n.17 supra, at 1121 (purchase from husband and wife with a view to distribution, where husband "could direct policies of issuer along whatever lines he deemed desirable," was a purchase from controlling person, making the exemption under Section 4(1) unavailable for subsequent sales to the public).

If, however, a person who does not exercise the power to control allows another person (one, for example who holds only a small amount of shares) to actively manage the company, the latter person is also a controlling person. North County Uranium & Minerals Ltd., 37 S.E.C. 608 (1957). Thus, "either the power to control or the actual exercise of control, even though by sufferance of another who possesses the ultimate power to control, is sufficient to make a person a controlling person." Sommer, Who's "In Control?" 21 Bus. Law. 559, 565 (1966)(emphasis in original).

See also, Annotation: Who is Person "Controlling or Controlled by" Issuer or Under "Direct or Indirect Control" with Issuer So As to Be Considered Issuer for Purpose of Defining Underwriters Under § 2(11) of Securities Act of 1933, 9 A.L.R. Fed. 639 (2001).

(n41)Footnote 41. SEC v. Zimmerman, 407 F. Supp. 623, 629 (D.D.C. 1976). See also Wool v. Tandem Computers, Inc., 818 F.2d 1433 (9th Cir. 1987).

(n42)Footnote 42. Canusa Gold Mines, Ltd., 2 S.E.C 548, 555 (1937) (underwriting agreement empowered underwriter to name a majority of the board of directors); Reiter-Foster Oil Co., 6 S.E.C 1028, 1044 (1940) (underwriter imposed condition precedent to underwriting that control of board be turned over to the underwriter).

(n43)Footnote 43. In United States v. Sherwood, 175 F. Supp. 480, 483 (S.D.N.Y. 1959), although defendant was not a director, the court held with respect to this point: "The evidence does not sustain the second charge that Sherwood was at the time of the sales a 'control person.' To the contrary, although Sherwood dominated 8% of the total issued stock, he was unable to secure a representation on the board of directors, he had a falling-out with... the dominant figure in the management..."

See also Metzger v. American Food Management, Inc., 389 F. Supp. 469, 471 (W.D. Pa. 1975).

(n44)Footnote 44. As one commentator has observed: "There are innumerable instances in which a single person does not appear to have actual operating control or the power to control. Then the problem is to identify the group which is in control and those which and those who constitute the group." Sommer, Who's "In Control?" S.E.C., 21 Bus. Law. 559, 576 (1966). The same commentator suggests that more than mere association on the board or ability to control by random combination of votes is necessary to constitute a "group," and that acting in concert as well as whether the individuals are "associates" may be relevant. Id. at 578. See also Kemmerer v. Weaver, 445 F.2d 76 (7th Cir. 1976); Harriman v. E.I. Du Pont Nemours & Co., 372 F. Supp. 101 (D. Del. 1974).

(n45)Footnote 45. See, e.g., Peck v. Pacific CMA, Inc., [2007 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep. P 94,349 (D. Colo. 2007).

See also Wheaten v. Matthews Holmquist & Associates, Inc., 858 F. Supp. 753, 757 (N.D. Ill. 1994); Leiter v. Kuntz, 655 F. Supp. 725, 728 (D. Utah 1987).

(n46)Footnote 46. See SEC v. American International Savings and Loan Assoc., 199 F. Supp. 341 (D. Md. 1961) (issuance of stock in exchange for junior mortgage interest in real estate and its subsequent public sale amounted to a distribution within the meaning of "underwriter" under Section 2(a)(11)); Hayes Mfg. Co., 23 S.E.C. 574, 576-77 (1946).

(n47)Footnote 47. 4 S.E.C. 589 (1939).

(n48)Footnote 48. 4 S.E.C. at 594, supra.

(n49)Footnote 49. CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 93,321, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22452 (N.D.Cal. 2005).

(n50)Footnote 50. The intermediary also claimed that he was entitled to act in reliance on SEC Rule 144 under the Securities Act, which specifies concrete conditions under which a person will not be deemed to be engaged in a distribution, and therefore deemed not to be a statutory underwriter. The court rejected availability of Rule 144 because of its conclusion that the intermediary had in fact purchased the securities from section 2(a)(11) issuers with a view to distribution, and that Rule 144 would provide no safe harbor.

See also SEC v. Kern, 425 F.3d 143 (2d Cir. 2005); Geiger v. SEC, 363 F.3d 481 (D.C. Cir. 2004); SEC v. Cavanaugh, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 92,866, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13372 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

(n51)Footnote 51. 8 S.E.C. 51 (1940).

(n52)Footnote 52. See also American Gyro Co., 1 S.E.C. 83 (1935) (salesmen on commission); Callahan Zinc-Lead Co., 5 SEC 1009 (1939) (directors acquired shares with intention to effect public distribution).

(n53)Footnote 53. 17 C.F.R. § 230.140. Rule 140 provides:

A person, the chief part of whose business consists of the purchase of the securities of one issuer, or of two or more affiliated issuers, and the sale of its own securities, including the levying of assessments on its assessable stock and the resale of such stock upon the failure of the holder thereof to pay any assessment levied thereon, to furnish the proceeds with which to acquire the securities of such issuer or affiliated issuers, is to be regarded as engaged in the distribution of the securities of such issuer or affiliated issuers within the meaning of section 2(a)(11) of the Act.

(n54)Footnote 54. 17 C.F.R. § 230.152a.

(n55)Footnote 55. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4470 (1962). A companion rule, Rule 236, exempts from registration shares of stock (or other securities) which are publicly offered to provide funds to be distributed to shareholders in lieu of issuing fractional shares, scrip certificates, or other evidences of fractional interest resulting from stock dividends, stock splits, reverse stock splits, conversions, mergers, or similar transactions. However, the issuer must file reports with the Commission, pursuant to Section 13 or 15 (d) of the Exchange Act, and the aggregate gross proceeds from the sale of the shares must not exceed $300,000. In addition, the issuer must furnish certain information to the Commission at least ten days prior to the offering of the shares. Id.

Rule 236 requires a nonrefundable filing fee at the time of filing this information.

(n56)Footnote 56. See § 4.02[2][d] infra for a discussion of the distribution requirement.

(n57)Footnote 57. SEC v. Micro-Moisture Controls, Inc., 148 F. Supp. 558, 562 (S.D.N.Y. 1957), aff'd sub nom. SEC v. Culpepper, 270 F.2d 241 (2d Cir. 1959) (controlling shareholders' attempted public distribution of unregistered shares after borrowing money and pledging shares as collateral, enjoined on ground that pledge and loan not bona fide).

(n58)Footnote 58. SEC v. Guild Films Co., Inc., 178 F. Supp. 418 (S.D.N.Y. 1959), aff'd, 279 F.2d 485 (2d Cir. 1960), cert. denied sub nom. Santa Monica Bank v. SEC, 364 U.S. 819, 81 S. Ct. 52 (1960).

(n59)Footnote 59. 178 F. Supp. at 423.

(n60)Footnote 60. Although the definition of the term "underwriter," if torn from its context, is admittedly broad enough to include the pledgee who, although not in a position to compel registration, finds it necessary in the collection of his debt to utilize the usual channels of distribution, consideration of the definition from a functional point of view would without doubt lead a court to conclude that a bona fide pledgee in such a situation is not to be regarded as an underwriter ... The Securities Act, as proposed to Congress and as originally passed by the Senate, expressly exempted sales "by or for the account of a pledge holder or mortgagee selling or offering for sale or delivery in the ordinary course of business and not for the purpose of avoiding the provision of this Securities Act, to liquidate a bona fide debt, a security pledged in good faith as collateral for such debt." H.R. 4314, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. (1963) § 12(b); S. 875, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. § 12(b) (1933).

See also Throop and Lane, Some Problems of Exemption Under the Securities Act of 1933, 4 Law & Contemp. Prob. 89, 124, n.103 (1937):

On first impression, it might appear that the elimination of this section in the Act as passed is indicative of a legislative intent to require registration in the situation suggested. On the other hand, the Act, as originally introduced contained no concept of 'underwriter' comparable to that subsequently adopted by the House and retained in the Act in its final form; and the exemption which the original bill afforded to isolated transactions by non-dealers ... would in many instances not have extended to transactions of liquidation by a pledgee. ... The silence of the Conference Report [regarding the omission of the section] is indicative of the fact that the exemption provisions of the bill as reported out of the conference rendered unnecessary the retention of the earlier specific exemption of pledges' and fiduciaries' transactions." But the Second Circuit interpreted this legislative history differently, apparently regarding the elimination of this provision from the Act to require registration.

(n61)Footnote 61. But see In re OTC Live, Inc., et al, Admin. Proc. File No. 3-11309 (Initial Dec., Sept. 30, 2004), in which the Administrative Law Judge opined:

I find inapposite Guild Films, wherein the court found persuasive that the banks as pledgees were well aware of the restrictions on the stock when they accepted the stock as collateral. Accord McClure v. First Nat'l Bank of Lubbock, Tex., 497 F.2d 490 (5th Cir. 1974); SEC v. Nat'l Bankers Life Ins. Co., 334 F. Supp. 444 (N.D. Tex. 1971). Other cases rely on similar grounds for deeming sellers of securities underwriters. See Geiger v. SEC, 363 F.3d 481, 486 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (seller aware affiliate had not paid for shares and therefore did not qualify for exemption); United States v. Lindo, 18 F.3d 353, 355 (6th Cir. 1994) (sellers fraudulently instructed banks to remove restrictive legends to satisfy loans); Charles F. Kirby, 79 SEC Docket 1081, 1091 (Jan. 9, 2003) (substantial block of a little-known security provided sufficient warning for the trader); Leigh, 50 S.E.C. at 195 ("customer's delivery of a large block of an obscure stock in restricted form ... provided obvious 'red flags'" for inexperienced broker dealer). The Respondents in the instant proceeding, however, were not afforded the luxury of such ample warnings.

(n62)Footnote 62. See A.D.M. Corp. v. Thomson, 707 F.2d 25 (1st Cir. 1983), in which the court, avoiding a decision as to whether a good faith pledgee's sale of unregistered stock at a foreclosure sale violated Section 5 of the Securities Act, enforced the sale since it did not offend public policy. In support of its holding, the court noted that the pledge had no intention of reselling the stock to the public, and in fact ended up purchasing the stock itself; the parties relied on the validity of the pledge contract; the investing public would not be damaged by the contract's enforcement or otherwise prejudiced by the lack of a registration statement; and a court should not void such a sale at the pledgor's request.

In Skiatron Electronics & Television Corp., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4282, 40 S.E.C. 236 (1960), registrant had sold shares to its licensee. The licensee immediately pledged the shares and the pledgee resold to the public. A stop order was issued suspending the effectiveness of the registration statement. But, as in the Guild Films case, no bona fide pledge was involved.

In a long list of no-action letters, the SEC staff has stated that registration is not required (i.e., Section 4(1) is available for the transaction) when a pledgee offers and sells pledged shares, otherwise restricted as to transfer, under certain conditions which generally include: notice of an auction foreclosure sale (usually pursuant to the Uniform Commercial Code); the notice states that the pledgee can be a bidder at the sale; the securities are sold only as a block to a single purchaser; the purchaser makes representations of the kind made in a Section 4(2) or Regulation D private offering; the certificate evidencing the securities bears a restrictive legend; and bidders are advised that they will be furnished information concerning the issuer, upon request. See, e.g., Capital Meat Co., Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. March 22, 1996); Russell Ranch, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Aug. 11, 1995); Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Dec. 2, 1993); General Electric Capital Corp., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Nov. 19, 1993); One Fine Corp., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. April 1, 1993); Oak Park Bank, SEC No-Action Letter (April 3, 1992); and Pittsburgh Nat'l Bank, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Feb. 6, 1990).

(n63)Footnote 63. For a thorough discussion of Rule 144, see ch.6 infra; see also Nimkin, The Pledgee and Rule 144, Rev. Secs. Reg., 925 (May 10, 1972), (n64)Footnote 64. Rule 144 (d)(3)(iv).

(n65)Footnote 65. Rule 144 (e)(3)(ii).

(n66)Footnote 66. Thus far it has been assumed that the pledgor is in a control relationship with the issuer and thus himself an issuer for purposes of making one who takes from him with a view to distribution an underwriter. If, however, the pledgor is not in a control relationship with the issuer, neither he nor the pledgee is an underwriter, unless the collateral is stock restricted because it was purchased pursuant to a non public offering exemption under the Securities Act. See § 4.02[2] infra. If the pledgee, by virtue of ownership of securities, is in a control relationship with the issuer whose securities are pledged, a person selling for the pledgee would be an underwriter. Similarly, the sale by an issuer of its own stock acquired in a pledge transaction would not be exempt from registration.

In A.D.M. Corp. v. Thomson, 707 F.2d 25 (1st Cir. 1983), the district court held that in a bona fide pledge, the pledgee does not become an underwriter by making a foreclosure sale of unregistered securities. The court of appeals stated that there was substantial support for the district court's ruling on the underwriter issue, but affirmed the case instead on other grounds.

(n67)Footnote 67. See Lipton, Broker-Dealer Regulation, § 1.04[3][b][ii][A] at 1-53-1-54 (1999 Ed.).

See also Umpqua Mining Co., 3 SEC 233 (1938) ; Russell R. Miller and Company, Inc., SEC No Action Letter [1977-1978 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep P 81,324 (April 15, 1997); Wesco Equity Funding, SEC No Action Letter (Aug. 10, 1985); and Davenport Management, Inc., SEC No Action Letter [1933 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 76,643 (April 13, 1993).

(n68)Footnote 68. H.R. Rep. No. 152, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 24 (1938).

(n69)Footnote 69. Often, an issuer will use a finder to assist in locating potential investors in the issuer's securities. As long as the finder limits itself to simply introducing investors to the issuer, it generally is not considered to be acting as either a broker, dealer, or underwriter. See Bamberger, Sales of Businesses--When Are Business Brokers Securities Brokers? 71 Marq. L.Rev. 309 (1988); Polanin, The Finder's Exception From Federal Broker-Dealer Registration, 40 Catholic U. L. Rev. 787 (1991).

See also Dominion Resources, Inc., SEC No Action Letter (March 7, 2000), in which the SEC staff rescinded a previous no action position and materially reduced the kind of activities in which persons could participate and not be required to register as broker-dealers.

(n70)Footnote 70. Puget Sound Distillery, Inc., 3 S.E.C. 355 (1938) . Registrant contended that X was not an underwriter because X acted solely as a finder in bringing registrant into contact with underwriters. The record showed, however, that X was to receive from registrant $1,500 cash plus a percentage of the proceeds to be derived from any financing X obtained from registrant. X was otherwise active in the proposed distribution of registrant's securities. Held, that X was an underwriter.

See also Reiter-Foster Oil Corp., 6 SEC 1028 (1940) (outsiders who actively participated in distribution of securities held to be underwriters).

(n71)Footnote 71. One court has emphasized that § 4(1) exempts transactions, not classes, and that one who purchases for his own account is not an underwriter. United States v. Bruce, 488 F.2d 1224, 1230 (5th Cir. 1973) , cert. denied, 419 U.S. 825 (1975) .

See, e.g., Seattle-First National Bank v. Carlstedt, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 91, 499 (W.D. Okla. 1984) , in which the court held that a claim that a bank which took an ordinary participation in loans used to purchase allegedly fraudulent partnership interests was an underwriter of the interests within the Securities Act was inadequate for failure to allege that the bank took any of the interests with a view to public resale or otherwise participated to any extent in distribution of the interests. The participation did not take place until two weeks after the loans had been made, and there was no allegation of direct contact between the participating bank and the borrowers until nearly two years later when the bank first attempted to collect on their obligations.

But see, e.g., McDaniel v. Compania Minera Mar De Cortes, Sociedad Anonimo, Inc., 528 F. Supp. 152(D. Ariz.1981) (acquisition from the issuer and resale of stock on the same date clearly indicates that the securities were acquired with a view to distribution and that sellers were underwriters for the purposes of Section 4(1)).

The Division of Corporation Finance has taken the position that a purchaser of securities in a registered public offering ordinarily would not be considered an underwriter merely for writing exchange-traded call options or buying exchange-traded put options on securities of the same class as those that are the subject of the offering since the purchaser is not using the options for the purpose of selling the underlying securities. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6297, CCH

Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 22,765 (1981). Investors generally write call options to reduce the risk of a price decline, and purchase put options with respect to securities they hold or are acquiring to protect themselves against a price decline, in the underlying securities. In addition, an investor can also be distinguished from an underwriter by the absence of an agreement with, or compensation from, the issuer which could indicate that the purchase of the underlying securities was not made with a view to distribution. The Division indicated, however, that there are situations in which the purchaser may be considered to be an underwriter: an express or implied agreement between the purchaser and the issuer or underwriter to write or buy options to facilitate the distribution; receipt by the purchaser of compensation for these activities; or a purchase by the investor of a significant portion of an offering (e.g., more than 5%) and the writing of a large number of call options or the purchase of a large number of put options in proximity to the effective date of the offering.

The Division of Corporation Finance also presented its views on whether the recommendations of an underwriter to write call options before the effective date of the registration statement constituted "gun jumping;" the Division of Market Regulation set forth its position regarding the application of Rule 101 of Regulation M under the Exchange Act (formerly Rule 10b-6) to option and option-related transactions during underwritten offerings. Id.

See also Schneider, Section 4(1-1/2), 49 Ohio St. L.J. 501 (1988) and Campbell, Resales of Securities Under the Securities Act of 1933, 52 Wash & Lee L. Rev. 1333 (1995).

The "Section 4(11/2)" exemption for private offers and sales of securities by control persons and affiliates is discussed in detail in Chapter 4.04[1], infra.

(n72)Footnote 72. Rule 142. This type of transaction is sometimes referred to as "old-fashioned underwriting."

(n73)Footnote 73. Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-1862, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 1531 (1938). But this release and applicable Rule 142 are couched in language that prevents actual distributions by controlling persons and others. In addition, Rule 141 excludes from the definition of "underwriter" in Section 2(11) one who receives an ordinary seller's commission or "spread." But if more than a "usual and customary commission" is received, or if the one who receives the commission is in reality a manager "of the distribution of all or a substantial part of the particular issue" or "performs the functions normally performed by an underwriter or underwriting syndicate," that person is an underwriter within the meaning of Section 2(11). Rule 141 (c). Thus, the managing underwriter and the "purchase group" would be included within the definition of "underwriter," but the selling-group dealers would be excluded.

(n74)Footnote 74. [2008 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep. P 94, 783 (D. Ariz. 2008).

(n75)Footnote 75. Id., P 94,783 at 95,089.

(n76)Footnote 76. The Form S-8 registration statement, most commonly used in connection with employee stock option plans is available to cover sales of securities to bona fide consultants, see SEC v. Phan, 500 F.3d 895, 902 (9th Cir. 2007), companies cannot use consultants who receive Form S-8 registered stock as conduits to the public market. Id. A Form S-8 registration statement does not cover resales by the recipient.

(n77)Footnote 77. Rule 141(a).

(n78)Footnote 78. Rule 141(b).

(n79)Footnote 79. Rule 141(c) provides:

The term "usual and customary distributors' or sellers' commission" in Section 2(11) shall mean a commission or remuneration, commonly known as a spread, paid to or received by any person selling either for his own account or for the account of others, which is not in excess of the amount usual and customary in the distribution and sale of issues of similar types and size, and not in excess of the amount allowed to other persons, if any, for comparable service in the distribution of the particular issue; but such term shall not include amounts paid to any person whose function is the management of the distribution of all or a substantial part of the particular issue, or who performs the functions normally performed by an underwriter or underwriting syndicate.

(n80)Footnote 80. Section 2(12) defines "dealer" as: "any person who engages either for all or part of his time, directly or indirectly, as agent, broker, or principal, in the business of offering, buying, selling, or otherwise dealing or trading in securities issued by another person."

(n81)Footnote 81. Section 4(3) is discussed in detail in § 4.05 infra.

(n82)Footnote 82. See § 4.02[2] supra for a discussion of the Section 2(11) definition of "underwriter."

(n83)Footnote 83. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144.

(n84)Footnote 84. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(a)(3).

(n85)Footnote 85. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(d).

(n86)Footnote 86. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(c).

(n87)Footnote 87. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(e).

(n88)Footnote 88. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(f) and (g).

(n89)Footnote 89. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(h).

(n90)Footnote 90. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144 (Preliminary Note).

(n91)Footnote 91. Id.

49 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.03

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.03 The Private Offering Exemption--Section 4(2)

Section 4(2) of the Securities Act exempts from its registration requirements "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering." n1 There is no limit to the amount of funds that can be raised in reliance on the exemption. The exemption permits issuers to make sales of securities to a limited number of purchasers without the burdens imposed by the registration process. n2 Literally billions of dollars of securities have been sold to institutional and individual investors. As one of the drafters of the Securities Act has observed: "The sale of an issue of securities to insurance companies or to a limited group of experienced investors was certainly not a matter of concern to the federal government. That bureaucracy, untrained in these matters as it was, could hardly equal these investors for sophistication, provided only it was their own money that they were spending." n3

The exemption soon became controversial. Grave doubts have arisen since the passage of the Securities Act as to what constitutes a "private offering" within the meaning of the exemption.

The starting point for determining whether a proposed offering is public or private has almost invariably been a 1935 opinion issued by the General Counsel of the Commission in which the scope of the exemption was interpreted. The 1935 release delineated four "principal factors" to be considered:

- 1) The number of offerees and their relationship to each other and to the issuer;
- 2) the number of units offered;
- 3) the size of the offering; and
- 4) the manner of the offering. n4

However, 20 years later the Supreme Court granted certiorari in SEC v. Ralston Purina & Co. n5 because of "an apparent need to define the scope of the private offering exemption." Nearly 30 years after passage of the Securities Act, the Commission, apparently discerning a need to reinterpret the scope of the exemption in light of Ralston Purina, remarked: "an increasing tendency to rely upon the exemption for offerings of speculative issues to unrelated and uninformed persons prompts this statement to point out the limitations upon its availability." n6

The Commission adopted Rule 506 (and deleted its predecessor, Rule 146) in 1982. Rule 506 is a "safe harbor" for issuers, which defines with some certainty when transactions are deemed to come within the exemption and which can be used as an alternate method to perfecting the Section 4(2) exemption. The objective standards provided in Rule 506 overcome the vagueness of the judicial and Commission interpretations of the exemption. n7

In effect, the availability of the exemption turns on whether the offerees need the protection of the Securities Act. The exemption requires that all offerees have or are provided with access to the same kind of information that would be contained in a registration statement. This requirement can be fulfilled by providing disclosure of such information or by ensuring that offerees have effective access to the information. n8

[1] Perfecting the Section 4(2) Exemption

Factors to be considered in determining whether a particular offering qualifies for the private offering exemption are discussed in the 1935 Release, and interpreted in subsequent releases and judicial decisions. All of the surrounding circumstances must be considered.

Consideration of the factors detailed in the 1935 Release requires analysis of the number and identity of the offerees as well as their relationship to the issuer. In addition to the debate over the importance of the number of offerees, subsequent releases and case law make clear that the availability of the private offering exemption depends upon the basic question of whether the class of persons to whom the offering is made needs the protection of the Securities Act. Furthermore, the determination of whether the private offering exemption applies to a particular offering depends upon consideration of the characteristics of the offering, including the size of the offering, and the manner in which the offering is structured.

[a] The Offerees

[i] The Number of Offerees. In the 1935 release it was stated that "under ordinary circumstances an offering to not more than approximately twenty-five persons is not an offer to a substantial number and presumably does not involve a public offering." n9 Perhaps this statement was an unfortunate one. In spite of the words "under ordinary circumstances" and "presumably," instances were legion where attorneys relying on the release, advised clients that any offering to less than 25 persons was a private one. n10 But the Commission has never taken this flat position. Indeed, the 1935 release contained the warning that: "In no sense is the question to be determined exclusively by the number of prospective offerees." n11 Moreover, in 1953, the United States Supreme Court in the Ralston Purina case observed that "the statute would seem to apply to a 'public offering' whether to few or to many." n12 In the 1962 Release the Commission stated that the number of offerees is not a conclusive yardstick in determining whether an offering is private. Instead, it is one factor, to be considered in conjunction with the other factors. n13

This point was brought into sharp focus in two cases decided in the Fourth and Fifth Circuits. In Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., n14 there were eight offerees, "a total that would be entirely consistent with a finding that the offering was private." n15 Nevertheless, the case was remanded, for the trial court to determine whether the offerees had access to that type of information that registration would disclose. In Lawler v. Gilliam, n16 the Fourth Circuit ruled that the sale of a security to a single financially sophisticated investor did not necessarily qualify as a private offering with Section 4(2).

It should be noted, however, that in Ralston Purina the Court was careful to point out that "nothing prevents the Commission in enforcing the statute, from using some kind of numerical test in deciding when to investigate particular exemption claims." n17 To sum up, although there is no magic number of offerees that spells availability or loss of the exemption, the Commission has made it a practice not to challenge an offering to a limited number of persons, such as 20 or 25 if the other factors are present. In other words, the number of offerees is "relevant only to the question whether they have the requisite association with and knowledge of the issuer which make the exemption available."

Suppose, for example, that ABC, Inc. sold common stock at $20 per share in three states to a total of 15 unsophisticated persons, none of whom knew anything about ABC, Inc. or its financial affairs. Suppose further that the Commission took no steps to enjoin the sales, either because there was no knowledge of the offering or because it was assumed that the limited number of persons involved were sophisticated investors. Shortly thereafter the price of ABC, Inc. common stock declines in price to $1.00 per share. P, one of the 15 purchasers, now brings an action for rescission against ABC, Inc., alleging that the offering should have been registered. P's chances of success in such an action may be good. n18 Moreover, this administrative practice in no way precludes a subsequent civil action under Section 12 of the Securities Act by a purchaser on the ground that the exemption was not available.

[ii] The Identity of the Offerees and Their Relationship to the Issuer. The identity of the offerees may weigh heavier than their number in determining the availability of the Section 4(2) exemption. It has been aptly stated that "An offering to 100 commercial banks is probably not public but an offering to 10 individuals including one old lady unversed in financial matters probably is." n19

Ralston Purina n20 does much to shift the emphasis from the number of offerees to their identity and relationship to the issuer and to each other. Ralston Purina had 7,000 employees and a policy of encouraging employee stock ownership. During a four-year period it sold nearly $2,000,000 worth of its stock to over 400 employees without registration. Among the purchasers were such low salary bracket employees as foremen, stenographers, and production trainees.

An earlier pronouncement by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals had made it fairly clear that an offering to all employees (at least if the number was large) would not be entitled to the exemption: "an offering of securities to all redheaded men, to all residents of Chicago, or San Francisco, to all existing stockholders of General Motors Corporation or the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is no less 'public,' in every realistic sense of the word, than an unrestricted offering to the world at large." n21 Thus Ralston Purina could hardly do less than concede that an offering to all its employees would be public. But its argument that the offering was to "key employees" only was unsuccessful:

[T]he applicability of § 4(1) [now § 4(2)] should turn on whether the particular class of persons affected need the protection of the Act. An offering to those shown to be able to fend for themselves is a transaction "not involving any public offering."... The exemption, as we construe it, does not deprive corporate employees, as a class, of the safeguards of the Act. We agree that some employee offerings may come within Section 4(1) [4(2)], e.g., one made to executive personnel who because of their position have access to the same kind of information that the Act would make available in the form of a registration statement. n22 Absent such a showing of special circumstances, employees are just as much members of the investing "public" as any of their neighbors in the community." n23

This much is clear from the reported judicial decisions and Commission releases: The fact that an offering is restricted to a particular class of persons, e.g., stockholders n24 or employees, n25 does not prevent its having the character of a public offering.

Key phrases in the Ralston Purina opinion are: "access to the same kind of information that the Act would make available in the form of a registration statement" and "able to fend for themselves." n26 Certainly these words would include large institutional investors such as insurance companies, banks, and other financial institutions. Presumably they would also encompass executive personnel and true key employees who are familiar with the financial affairs of the issuer. Beyond these fairly well-defined situations, however, the area is a cloudy one. What of individual investors?

Generally speaking, if they are few in number, are financially sophisticated ("able to fend for themselves"), and have access to that type of information that would appear in a registration statement, the exemption is available.

It is now fairly clear that availability of information can consist of either disclosure of or effective access to the relevant information. n27 It is also clear that all offerees must have the information available. "Even the offeree-plaintiff's 20-20 vision with respect to the facts underlying the security would not save the exemption if any one of his fellow offerees was in a blind." n28

One may quarrel with the requirement that there be an actual showing of effective access to establish the affirmative defense of Section 4(2). Granting that the burden of proving entitlement to the exemption is on the one claiming it, it is difficult to visualize a lack of effective access where the issuer is seeking capital from one or even from a small number of offerees. As the Commission itself has stated: "[A]ccess can only exist by reason of the offeree's position with respect to the issuer. Position means an employment or family relationship or economic bargaining power that enables an offeree to obtain information from the issuer in order to evaluate the merits and risks of the investment ..." n29 The same "position" exists when an issuer seeks to raise funds on a one-on-one basis from one offeree or from a small number of offerees.

It is equally clear that the exemption is not available when the class of offerees is unrestricted, even though all offerees are voluntarily furnished information concerning the issuer. As the Commission has observed: "Negotiations or conversations with or general solicitations of an unrestricted and unrelated group of prospective purchasers for the purpose of ascertaining who would be willing to accept an offer of securities is inconsistent with a claim that the transaction does not involve a public offering even though ultimately there may only be a few knowledgeable purchasers." n30 Similarly, the "sale of stock to promoters who take the initiative in founding or organizing the business would come within the exemption. On the other hand, the transaction tends to become public when the promoters begin to bring in a diverse group of uninformed friends, neighbors and associates." n31

[iii] The Sophistication of the Offerees. The availability of the Section 4(2) exemption also depends on the ability of the persons to whom the offering is made to "fend for themselves." This seems to require that the offerees possess some amount of financial sophistication.

This requirement is illustrated in SEC v. International Scanning Devices, Inc., n32 in which the court rejected a defendant's reliance on the Section 4(2) exemption. The purchasers of defendant's securities included a retired teacher and farmer, a carpenter, a maintenance supervisor and a retired comparison shopper. Most of the purchasers had no more than a high school education and none received any detailed information about the issuer. In holding the exemption unavailable, the court observed:

[A] brief review of the ISD indenture buyers' testimony is sufficient to demonstrate the paucity of "sophistication" possessed by these people.[Even] the most sophisticated of these investors ... lacked essential knowledge of many simple points, such as even a rudimentary acquaintance with the parlance of buying and selling securities. None of these individuals examined ISD's financial status before the purchase ... it is evident that each relied heavily on the apparent expertise and experience of the broker he or she dealt with to lead him or her to a sound investment. n33

However, even if all of the offerees are highly sophisticated, "[s]ophistication is not a substitute for access to the information that registration would disclose." n34 Issuers seeking to raise funds under Section 4(2) should ensure that all offerees are both sophisticated and have access to the relevant information or have actually been furnished with such information. In Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp. the court, discussing effective access to information about the issuer, stated:

[T]he investment sophistication of the offeree assumes added importance, for it is important that

[the investor] could have been expected to ask the right questions and seek out the relevant information. In sum, both the relationship between the issuer and offeree and investment sophistication are critical when the issuer or another relies on the offeree's "access" rather than the issuer's "disclosure" to come within the exemption. n35

[b] The Offering

[i] The Size of the Offering. It is obvious that the larger the offering, the more "public" it tends to become. The Commission has expressed the opinion that: "An offering of millions of dollars to non-institutional investors and non-affiliated investors or one divided, or convertible into many units would suggest that a public offering may be involved." n36 With respect to the number of units offered, if such units are offered in large denominations and are not convertible, the offering assumes a status more consonant with a private offering than if a substantial number of units are offered in small denominations, or are convertible into small denominations. n37

A special word of caution at this point is in order on convertible securities and warrants. Suppose that ABC, Inc. issues debentures convertible into common stock which is to be offered to the public. If these debentures are immediately convertible, there is deemed to be an offering of both the debentures and the common stock. Put another way, the issuer is regarded as making a continuing offer of the underlying securities. It follows that, unless the sales of ABC, Inc.'s common stock by the persons converting its debentures are exempt, both ABC, Inc. and the sellers are in violation of the Securities Act as having made public offerings without registration. n38 Moreover, the registration statement should cover both securities.

[ii] The Manner of the Offering. Shortly after the passage of the Securities Act, the Commission's General Counsel expressed the opinion that "transactions which are effected by direct negotiation by the issuer are much more likely to be non-public than those effected by the use of the machinery of public distribution." n39 In addition, close questions may arise where the issuer affects a private placement of its securities by utilizing the services of an investment banker. In the 1962 Release the Commission warned that the exemption may be lost where an investment banker places the securities with discretionary accounts without regard to the tests implicit in Ralston Purina. n40 Public advertising and general solicitation of the offering are, by definition, incompatible with a claim of a private offering.

[iii] Purchasers Must "Take For Investment." Despite the fact that the preceding requirements relating to the number of offerees, their identity, access to information, and the size, type, and manner of the offering have been met, the exemption is lost if any purchaser takes "with a view to distribution." This is so because the Securities Act defines an "underwriter" as a "person who has purchased ... with a view to, or sells for an issuer in connection with the distribution of any security." n41 Issuers therefore must take steps to ensure that purchasers take with investment intent to prevent purchasers from acting as "conduits for a wider distribution." n42 That situation arose in the seminal Crowell-Collier case. n43

Crowell-Collier privately placed approximately $3,000,000 of debentures, immediately convertible into common stock, through a broker-dealer, the latter also obtaining warrants. Relying upon legal advice that the private offering exemption was available if the offering was limited to approximately 25 offerees, the debentures were sold to 27 persons, including four broker-dealers. Investment letters were obtained with respect to the debentures only, from all purchasers, stating, in effect, that they were purchasing for investment and not with a view to distribution. But at least nine of these purchasers had already induced other persons to join with them in purchasing. The following year another million dollars of debentures were disposed of in much the same manner to 22 persons, three of whom immediately resold to 15 other "investment" purchasers. The end result was that these securities reached the hands of at least 79 purchasers, many of whom converted the debentures and sold the common stock in less than one year from the date of acquisition. n44

In holding that the private offering exemption was not available, the Commission stressed certain factors: that the conversion price ($5.00 per share) was below the then market price of the common (51/2 -61/4); that investment letters were obtained only for the debentures; that the debentures were issued in bearer form and in small denominations; that the debentures were convertible immediately; that participation in the offering by dealers made the "investment representations" questionable. The Commission's findings were upheld by the Second Circuit. n45

Several practical lessons can be learned from Crowell-Collier:

First, when an "investment purchaser" is in reality one who takes with the intention of reselling and does resell the security within a short time despite the fact that he has signed an investment letter, the issuer of those securities may be subjected to criminal penalties under Section 17 of the Securities Act. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that Section 12(a)(2), which allows a successful plaintiff to either rescind a securities purchase or have returned to him the amount of the purchase price if he does not own the securities, applies only to registered public offerings of securities and not to non-public offerings or secondary market transactions. n46

Second the mere collection of investment letters from purchasers does not insulate the issuer from liability. "Counsel and their issuer and underwriter clients cannot base a claim to exemption from registration under the Securities Act upon the mere acceptance at face value of representations by purchasers that they take for investment and disclaim responsibility for investigation and consideration of all relevant facts and circumstances pertinent to a determination that the transactions do not involve a public offering. A representation by a purchaser that he is taking for 'investment' when in fact he concurrently is dividing a participation among others or reselling a portion of a commitment to others is worthless." n47

Counsel for the issuer making a private offering should advise that two additional steps be taken:

- A restrictive legend should be made to appear on the face of the issued securities along the following lines:

These securities may not be sold, transferred, pledged or hypothecated unless they have first been registered under the Securities Act of 1933 or unless Company counsel has given an opinion that registration under said Act is not required.

- The transfer agent should be directed to place a stop-transfer order against the shares.

The foregoing precautionary measures are legal n48 and effective techniques for preventing illegal distributions. It should be emphasized, however, that none of these precautions will insulate the issuer from liability: "The additional precautions of placing a legend on the security and issuing stop-transfer orders have proved in many cases to be an effective means of preventing illegal distributions. Nevertheless, these are only precautions and are not to be regarded as a basis for exemption from registration." n49

Suppose that the holder of investment stock obtains a no-action letter from the Commission with respect to a proposed transfer. May he or she now sell the securities despite the refusal of the issuing company and the transfer agent to effect the transfer? Under common law principles, the general rule is to the effect that a corporation, acting in good faith, may refuse a transfer of securities, but it must have reasonable grounds for refusal. n50 Notice of an adverse claim to the securities sought to be transferred constitutes a reasonable ground for refusal. n51 But both at the common law and under governing provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code, adopted in all states, in the absence of an adverse claim (and under certain other conditions) the issuing company is under a duty to register the transfer. n52

With respect to investment letters, as previously pointed out, the actual intent to take for investment and not with a view to distribution is all-important. Accordingly, no matter how strongly the letter is worded, the substance of the transaction rather than the form of the letter will control. But, from the standpoint of counsel for the issuer, the primary purpose of obtaining such letters should be to impress purchasers that signing the letter is not a mere formality. Thus, a statement that the purchaser represents that he or she is not taking with a view to distribution and that the purchaser will not sell, transfer, or otherwise dispose of the shares in the absence of an effective registration statement under the Securities Act or an opinion of company counsel that registration is not required under the Securities Act, should suffice. n53

Finally, the Commission has taken the position that it is a deceptive practice, which might activate the antifraud provisions of the securities acts, for an issuer, a control person, or any other person to sell unregistered securities in a private transaction without fully informing the purchaser as to the applicable limitations upon the resale of the securities by that purchaser. n54

[iv] The Offering Must Not be "Integrated."

The private offering exemption is available only to transactions "not involving any public offering." The exemption is therefore considered unavailable to privately offered securities if any securities comprised in the same transaction are made the subject of a public offering, or included with any other offering which in combination would disqualify the issuer from relying on the exemption. Pursuant to the principle of integration, multiple transactions are examined to determine whether they should be treated as a single, unitary transaction or offering. The concept of integrating offerings is intended to prevent an issuer from avoiding registration by structuring a transaction in two or more apparently exempt offerings (or one exempt and one nonexempt offering) when they actually should be considered a single nonexempt offering. The Securities and Exchange Commission has identified, and courts apply, five factors to determine whether a particular offering should be integrated with any other offerings:

- The different offerings are part of a single plan of financing;
- The offerings involve issuance of the same class of security;
- The offerings are made at or about the same time;
- The same type of consideration is to be received;
- The offerings are made for the same general purpose. n55

[A] Interpretive Problems Regarding Integration. Two situations may present special interpretive problems on integration: offshore offerings and voting trust certificates.

With respect to offshore offerings, generally no public offering is involved within the meaning of the term "public offering" in Section 4(2) if they are made exclusively abroad, even though the mails or facilities of interstate commerce are used. However, if foreign dealers or purchasers take with a view to reselling in the United States, exemption is lost. n56

In determining whether a public offering is involved in an offering addressed partly to persons in the United States and partly to persons abroad, must the number of persons addressed abroad be considered? For many years the Commission took the position that the total number of offerees had to be considered in determining the availability of the Section 4(2) private offering exemption, whether the offering originated in this country or in a foreign country: n57

Where a New York corporation offered securities to its existing security holders, consisting of 29 Americans and 106 English security holders, a public offering was involved. Where a Canadian corporation proposed to issue $2,000,000 of bonds of one-half the amount in Canada or England and the offering of the other half to a group of not more than 25 in this country, who would purchase for investment, it was necessary to register. The so-called private offering in this country was a part of a single offering, which would, as a whole, be public. n58

It appears that Commission policy on the matter has been further codified in Regulation S and may be even further revised in light of the increasingly inter-related nature of the world's securities markets. n59

Corporate codes in some states provide that all shareholders of a corporation are entitled to deposit their shares under the terms of a voting trust agreement. Accordingly, even when only a few major shareholders enter into a voting trust agreement, if the total number of shareholders is large, there is a public offering of the voting trust certificates to all shareholders. Thus, the exemption contained in Section 4(2) is not available. n60

[B] Numerous "Private" Sales by Issuers Prior to Registration. When an issuer makes a public offering and uses Form S-1 to register the securities offered, the issuer must disclose all unregistered sales of its securities within the three years preceding the public offering. n61 Unless an exemption is available for the unregistered sales, the registrant is exposed to contingent liability under Section 12, n62 and under applicable state law. That contingency must be disclosed, both in the prospectus, and in a note to the registrant's financial statements setting forth the contingent liability. n63 Where the issuer has made repeated sales of its securities to individuals, do such sales constitute private offerings or will they be "integrated"? Put another way, how many times can the issuer "go to the well" without creating a contingent liability problem?

The answer does not come easily, but, as previously indicated, if the "private" offerings are too numerous or are really part of a larger offering, integration and attendant registration violations may result. Counsel who prepares the registration statement may well encounter this problem. In that event any future course of action other than full disclosure is unthinkable. But counsel for the issuer is in somewhat of a dilemma. When the issuer does make disclosure of past sales in its filing, it may be publicly exposed to civil liability by the "private" purchasers. Moreover, if the past sales appear to constitute willful violations the Commission, as well as state regulatory agencies, may take formal action. With this in mind, it may be advisable for the issuer to make a rescission offer (in compliance with governing federal and state regulations) prior to the filing date. The following prospectus language is illustrative of such a procedure:

The 140,000 shares of Class B Common Stock which were sold by the Company were sold without compliance by the Company with the provisions of the Massachusetts Sale of Securities Act which require the filing of a notice of intention before a security may be sold. In order to eliminate any contingent liability under the Massachusetts statute on account of such sales, the Company, in April and May 1968 offered to take back the shares which were sold in nonexempt transactions and to refund the full amount paid for such shares. The Company's offer was accepted with respect to 6,200 shares of Class B Common Stock, and the Company repurchased such shares at a price of $2.50 per share, together with interest on such amount, from the date of payment to the Company for such shares to the date of repayment therefor by the Company, at the rate of six per cent per annum. n64

However, the limitations of the rescission offer should be considered before deciding whether to make it. Suppose that the offer is accepted, and the persons to whom it is made simultaneously release the issuer from liability. Would such releases be effective in relation to federal securities laws? In all probability, the answer is no. In any event, the staff of the Commission may insist upon inclusion in the prospectus of a statement that the issuer has received from shareholders the release of any claims or causes of action arising from the fact that the issuer did not register the offering of shares.

[2] Section 4(2) and Rule 506 of Regulation D

Regulation D under the Securities Act provides for certain limited offerings which are exempt from registration and also provides a "safe harbor" for issuers seeking to rely on the Section 4(2) exemption. n65 Compliance with Rule 506 is an alternative to attempting to satisfy the criteria of the SEC Releases and the subsequent judicial interpretations relating to a non-public offering exemption from registration. Rule 506 provides objective standards for issuers to determine with some certainty when transactions will be deemed to meet the exemption.

Rule 506 provides an exemption from registration if the terms and conditions of Rules 501 through 503 under Regulation D n66 have been satisfied, and the issuer reasonably believes that there are no more than thirty-five non accredited purchases of securities from the issuer in any offering under Rule 506. n67 There is no dollar limit on the size of an offering which may made under Rule 506. All of the requirements of Regulation D, and Rule 506 in particular, are discussed in § 4.05 below. However, Rule 506, and Regulation D generally, do not prescribe an exclusive means of carrying out a compliant offering under Section 4(2) of the Act. An issuer remains free to rely solely on Section 4(2), and to meet the burden of proving the availability of the exemption wholly outside of Rule 506 and Regulation D.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Private offering transactions are not exempt from the anti-fraud provisions of the securities acts, and the exemption does not apply to public resale of the securities by the purchasers. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5226, [1972 Transfer Binding] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78, 483 (1972).

See also SEC v. Cal-Am Corporation, 445 F. Supp. 1329, 1333 (C.D. Cal. 1978) .

Who is an issuer under Section 4(2)? See SEC v. Murphy, 626 F.2d 633, 644 (9th Cir. 1980) (a person organizing or sponsoring the organization of limited partnerships and who was primarily responsible for the success or failure of the venture for which the limited partnerships were formed was deemed an issuer to determine the availability of the private offering exemption). [Author's note: Many attorneys practicing in the area of securities law believe that this case is an aberration and would be decided differently if brought today. The author is under the impression that the SEC staff also shares this opinion.] See Why Limited Liability Company Membership Interests Should Not Be Treated as Securities and Possible Steps to Encourage This Result, 45 Hastings L. J. 1223 (1994).

Rule 152 provides that the phrase "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering" shall be deemed to apply to transactions not involving any public offering at the time of those transactions although subsequently the issuer decides to make a public offering and/or files a registration statement.

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 4(2) of the Securities Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section B, (Matthew Bender) has traditionally been regarded as providing an exemption from registration for bank loans, private placements with institutional investors, and promotion of business ventures by closely related persons. See Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2770 (1962).

(n3)Footnote 3. Landis, The Legislative History of the Securities Act of 1933, 28 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 29, 37 (1959).

(n4)Footnote 4. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-285, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2740 (1935).

(n5)Footnote 5. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 47,341.14 (1962).

Much of the controversy over the scope of the exemption revolved around the issue of whether a numerical test regarding the number of offerees controls the availability of the exemption. This issue is discussed in detail in § 4.03[1][a] infra.

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.03

(n7)Footnote 7. Rule 506 of the Securities Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section C, (Matthew Bender) is discussed in detail at § 4.03[2] infra.

(n8)Footnote 8. See SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 124-27 (1953) ; Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2770 (1962).

(n9)Footnote 9. Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-285, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2740 (Jan. 24, 1935).

(n10)Footnote 10. This reliance is understandable. For example, in 1954 a House Committee Report observed: "There is no limit to the amount which thus may be offered, provided it is not 'publicly' but 'privately' offered, which the Commission by rule of thumb construes as being no more than some 25 offerees." H.R. Rep. No. 1542, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. 19 (1954), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section E (Matthew Bender).

Similarly, in 1957, the Commission "considered that an offering made to not more than 25 or 30 persons who take the securities for investment and not for distribution is generally a private transaction not requiring registration." Orrick, Some Observations on the Administration of the Securities Laws, 32 Minn. L. Rev. 25, 33 (1957).

There was a day when many lawyers thought that any offering involving less than 25 persons could safely be regarded as private. That rule of thumb is no longer sacrosanct, and the more important question now seems to be what kind of persons are involved.

Victor & Bedrick, Private Offering: Hazards for the Unwary, 45 Va. L. Rev. 869, 871 (1959). Donahue, Regulation D; A Primer For The Practitioner, 8 Del. J. Corp. L. 495 (1984).

(n11)Footnote 11. Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-285, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2740 (Jan. 24, 1935).

(n12)Footnote 12. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 125, 73 S. Ct. 981, 985, 97 L. Ed. 1494, 1499, (1959) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2770 (1962). The word "offerees" is important, for the availability of the exemption is related to the total number of offerees, not the number of actual purchasers. See Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-285, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2740 (Jan. 24, 1935).

(n14)Footnote 14. 545 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1977) .

(n15)Footnote 15. 545 F.2d at 901 , supra.

(n16)Footnote 16. 569 F.2d 1283 (4th Cir.1978) . Plaintiff sued for damages under § 12(1) of the Securities Act. Defendants alleged as an affirmative defense that their transactions with plaintiff were exempt under § 4(2). The district court found no public offering, for the reason that plaintiff was experienced and able to fend for himself, and that the issuance of securities to plaintiff were isolated transactions. But the Fourth Circuit, in reversing, noted that plaintiff's "business acumen ... and his continued eagerness to invest do not supplant his lack of access to the information that a registration statement would show."

(n17)Footnote 17. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 125 , supra.

(n18)Footnote 18. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552 (1962). In a suspension proceeding in 1958, the Commission had this to say:

Respondents seek to escape this conclusion by asserting that even after the Ralston Purina decision it was generally understood that any offering to a small group of 25 or less could safely be assumed not to be a public offering. ... There are several reasons why we cannot accept these contentions. In the first place, the assertion that an offering to a small group is without more a private offering ignores the Supreme Court's statement that the Securities Act "would seem to apply to a public offering whether to few or to many." Moreover, even if we were to accept the general validity of the view that an offering to a group of about 25 persons is without more a private offering, respondents' position that registrant was free to resell its allotment of unregistered securities to a limited group of not more than 25 would if carried to its logical conclusion mean that every member of an original group of about 25 to whom unregistered securities are sold in reliance on a private offering exemption could in turn resell to a further group of approximately 25 each, without registration, ... and public distributions of securities could be readily effected without compliance with the registration, prospectus and other protective provisions of the Securities Act.

Dempsey & Co., Sec. Exch. Act Rel. No. 33-5690, [1964-1966 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 76, 585 (1958). (Italics added.)

See also SEC v. Tax Services, Inc., 357 F.2d 143 (4th Cir. 1966) (offering in nearly all states to a total of approximately 800 purchasers was a public offering); Chapman v. Dunn, 414 F.2d 153, 160 (6th Cir. 1969) (exemption unavailable where defendant sold to seventy-eight individuals and firms, knew only six of them, and record indicated that "securities were sold to anyone who had money to purchase them--housewives, physicians and businessmen"); Henderson v. Hayden Stone, Inc., 461 F.2d 1069 (5th Cir. 1972); SEC v. Continental Tobacco Co. of South Carolina, 326 F. Supp. 588 (S.D. Fla. 1971), rev'd, 463 F.2d 137 (5th Cir. 1972) (offering to 38 persons held not public); United States v. Custer Channel Wing Corp., 247 F. Supp. 481 (D. Md. 1965), aff'd, 376 F.2d 675, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 850 (1967) (initial purchasers mere conduits for wider distribution); Barrett v. Triangle Mining Corp., [1975-1976 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 95, 438 (S.D.N.Y. 1976).

(n19)Footnote 19. Victor & Bedrick, Private Offering: Hazards for the Unwary, 45 Va. L. Rev. at 871 (1959).

(n20)Footnote 20. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 125, supra.

(n21)Footnote 21. SEC v. Sunbeam Gold Mines Co., 95 F.2d 699, 701 (9th Cir. 1938).

(n22)Footnote 22. The 1935 advisory opinion of the Commission's General Counsel had also emphasized this relationship factor: "I also regard as significant the relationship between the issuer and the offerees. Thus, an offering to the members of a class who should have special knowledge of the issuer is less likely to be a public offering than is an offering to the members of a class of the same size who do not have this advantage. This factor would be particularly important in offerings to employees, where a class of high executive officers would have a special relationship to the issuer which subordinate employees would not enjoy." Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-285, CCH Fed Sec. L. Rep. P 2740 (Jan. 24, 1935).

(n23)Footnote 23. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. at 125, 73 S. Ct. at 985, 97 L. Ed. at 1499 (1953), supra. See also In the Matter of Gilligan, Will & Co., Sec. Exch. Act Rel. 34-5689, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 76,584 (1958), aff'd sub nom. Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC, 267 F.2d 461 (2d Cir. 1959), cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896.

See also Lively v. Hirschfeld, 440 F.2d 631, 633 (10th Cir. 1971) (25 friends, educated persons and business associates of president held not to qualify under Purina test); Hill York Corp. v. American International Franchises, Inc., 448 F.2d 680, 690 (5th Cir. 1971) ("the level of sophistication will not carry the point"); Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., 545 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1977) (fact that investor is sophisticated is not sufficient, since even sophisticated investors who have neither necessary disclosure nor access to relevant information cannot use their sophisticated knowledge in deciding whether to invest); Woolf v. S.D. Cohn & Co., 515 F.2d 591, 611 (5th Cir.1975), (discussing Section 4(2) and Rule 146), on rehearing, 521 F.2d 225 (5th Cir.1975) (discussing in pari delicto defense); Koehler v. Pulvers, 606 F. Supp. 164 (S.D. Cal. 1985) .

(n24)Footnote 24. SEC v. Sunbeam Gold Mines Co., 95 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1938) (offering to 530 stockholders of a company involved a public offering). But compare SEC v. Federal Compress & Warehouse Co. (W.D. Tenn. Nov. 13, 1936) (unreported): "There was absolutely no machinery for distribution in this case, and ... intent to make a public offering of the stock. There was no advertising or prospectus issued, and no solicitation to the public, because no offer was made to it, ... the entire transaction was handled exclusively within the family group of stockholders ... to whom the offer was made exclusively." See also S.E.C. v. La Vey, 1 S.E.C. Jud. Dec. 369 (E.D. Wash. 1937) ; In re Henry Friedlander, 2 S.E.C. 531 (1937) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Shortly after the Ralston Purina decision the Commission adopted Form S-8 for registration of securities offered pursuant to certain types of employees' stock purchase and savings plans. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3480 (1953).

(n26)Footnote 26. See also McDaniel v. Compania Minera Mar De Cortes, Sociedad Anonimo Inc., 528 F. Supp.152(D. Ariz.1981) (the primary focus of Section 4(2) is the nature and extent of the offerees' knowledge about the issuer). Consideration of offerees' ability to fend for themselves raises the issue of their sophistication in financial matters, discussed in § 4.03[1][a][iii] infra.

(n27)Footnote 27. Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., 545 F.2d 893, 904 (5th Cir. 1977) ; Woolf v. S. D. Cohn & Co., 515 F.2d 591, 612(5th Cir. 1975) , vacated on other grounds, 426 U.S. 944 (1976) ; SEC v. Tax Service, Inc., 357 F.2d 143, 144 (4th Cir. 1966) .

Regarding the difference between disclosing and ensuring access to registration-type information, one commentator stated:

[I]t would seem wise for counsel to review the investment experience of each prospective offeree and to make sure that all offerees actually receive appropriate financial data... to the extent that financial statements, reports, or other written material is relied upon to establish "access," the writer prefers to see it actually transmitted to the several purchasers, rather than a record that it was made or kept "available" to them.

Israels, Some Commercial Overtones of Private Placement, 45 Va. L. Rev. 851, 860 (1959).

(n28)Footnote 28. Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., 545 F.2d 893, 902(5th Cir. 1977) ; Hill York Corp. v. American International Franchise, Inc., 448 F.2d 680, 689 (5th Cir. 1971) ; SEC v. Continental Tobacco Co., 463 F.2d 137, 158 (5th Cir. 1972) . After the decision in the Continental Tobacco case, especially because of certain language in the Commission's appellate brief, many securities attorneys believed the Commission's view was to preclude a private offering to individuals unless those individuals were also insiders. However, the Fifth Circuit later stated: "... the court's language in Continental should not be read as requiring in addition to full disclosure to all offerees a demonstration of the offerees' insider status ... We think that any such requirement would inhibit the ability of business to raise capital ..." Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., 545 F.2d 893, 907-908 (5th Cir.1977) .

See also Fletcher, Sophisticated Investors Under the Federal Securities Laws, Duke Law Journal 1081 (1988).

(n29)Footnote 29. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5487, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2710 (Apr. 23, 1974)(adopting Rule 146). See also Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., 545 F.2d 893, 903-905 (5th Cir. 1977) . See also Van Dyke v. Coburn Enterprises, [1989 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 94,404 (8th Cir. 1989)(offering to 12 offerees deemed to be a private offering; six offerees were operators of the business, the remaining six had economic bargaining power to demand the necessary information).

(n30)Footnote 30. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2770 (1962).

Reference is made to the so-called 'investment clubs' which have been organized under claim of an exemption from the registration provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 as well as the Investment Company Act of 1940. It should not be assumed that so long as the investment club, which is an investment company within the meaning of the latter Act, does not obtain more than 100 members, a public offering of its securities, namely the memberships, will not be involved. An investment company may be exempt from the provisions of the Investment Company Act if its securities are owned by not more than 100 persons and it is not making and does not presently propose to make a public offering of its securities. (Section 3 (c)(1).) Both elements must be considered in determining whether the exemption is available.

See also National Lithium Corp., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4376 [1957-1961 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 76,775 (July 6, 1961).

(n31)Footnote 31. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2774 (Nov. 6, 1962).

(n32)Footnote 32. [1977-1978 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 96,147 (W.D.N.Y. 1977)

(n33)Footnote 33. CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 96,147 at 92,169 , supra.

(n34)Footnote 34. Doran v. Petroleum Management, 545 F.2d 893, 902, 56 O.&G.R. 591 (5th Cir. 1977) ; SEC v. Continental Tobacco, 463 F.2d 137, 158 (5th Cir. 1972) ; Hill York Corp. v. American International Franchise, Inc., 448 F.2d 680, 689 (5th Cir. 1971) .

(n35)Footnote 35. Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., 545 F.2d 893, 905 (5th Cir.1977) . See also U.S. v. Custer Channel Wing Corp., 376 F.2d 675 (4th Cir. 1967).

(n36)Footnote 36. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2770 (1962).

(n37)Footnote 37. Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-285, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2740 (1935).

(n38)Footnote 38. Crowell-Collier Publishing Co., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3825, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2850.25 (1957): "It has long been a matter of common knowledge based on the clear meaning of the statute that an offering of a security convertible immediately into another security involves a simultaneous offer of both securities." Similarly, resales of such convertible securities or warrants by original purchasers at any time may be construed as a public offering of those securities.

See also Keller, Practising Law Institute Corporate Law and Practice Course Handbook Series--Current Issues in Private Placements: the Metaphysics of Integration of Public and Private Offerings (2000).

(n39)Footnote 39. Op. Gen. Counsel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-285, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2740 (1935).

(n40)Footnote 40. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2770 (1962).

(n41)Footnote 41. Section 2(11), 15 U.S.C. § 77b (11) (1952).

(n42)Footnote 42. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2777 (1962).

(n43)Footnote 43. Crowell-Collier Publishing Co., Sec. Act Rel. No. 3825, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2850.25 (1957). See also In the Matter of Elliot & Co., 38 S.E.C. 381 (1958); Gilligan, Will & Co., 267 F.2d 461 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896 (1959) .

(n44)Footnote 44. The facilities of the American Stock Exchange were used to dispose of some of these securities.

(n45)Footnote 45. Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC, 267 F.2d 461 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896 (1959) .

(n46)Footnote 46. Gustafson v. Alloyd Co., 513 U.S. 561 (1995) .

(n47)Footnote 47. Crowell-Collier Publishing Co., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3825, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2850.25 (1957). See also Hazel Bishop, Inc., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4371, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 76,772 (1961); United States v. Custer Channel Wing Corp., 247 F. Supp. 481 (D. Md. 1965) , aff'd, 376 F.2d 675 (4th Cir. 1967) , cert. denied, 389 U.S. 850 ; Cf. Stoppelman v. Owens, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 91,511 (D.D.C. 1984) (exemption not violated where sophisticated and suitable investor acknowledged that he had access to information, although he did not review it); United States v. Hill, 298 F. Supp. 1221, 1231 (D. Conn. 1969) .

See also Edina State Bank v. Mr. Steak, Inc., 487 F.2d 640 (10th Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 419 U.S. 883 (1975) ; DeWitt v. American Stock Transfer Co., 433 F. Supp. 994 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) , modified, 440 F. Supp. 1084 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) .

(n48)Footnote 48. See Edgar v. Camera Corp. of Am., [1976-1977 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 91,802 (1966).

(n49)Footnote 49. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 47, 341.14 (1962).

The Commission strongly recommends the use of restrictive legends on stock certificates and stop-transfer instructions to transfer agents as a means of preventing the illegal sale of privately placed securities (see Securities Act Release 5121), and the purchaser should be informed prior to being committed to purchase the securities whether such a legend will be placed on the certificate or such instructions will be issued. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5226, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,483 (1972).

See also Cameron Industries, Inc., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4159 (1959); Silver Shield Mining & Milling Co., Sec. Exch. Act Rel. No. 33-6214, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 82,615 (1960).

(n50)Footnote 50. See 12 Fletcher, Cyclopedia Corporation § 5527 (1957 rev.).

(n51)Footnote 51. See Holmes v. Birtman Elec. Co., 18 Ill. 2d 554, 165 N. E. 2d 261 (1961) ; Note, 75 A.L.R. 2d 735 (1960).

(n52)Footnote 52. Uniform Commercial Code § 8-401. In the event of an adverse claim the company must make inquiry if written notice is received at a time and in a manner which permits the company to act on it before issuing a new certificate. The issuer may fulfill this requirement by any reasonable means, including notifying the adverse claimant by mail that the security has been presented for transfer and that the transfer will be registered, unless within thirty days either a proper restraining order issues from a court of competent jurisdiction or an indemnity bond is filed with the issuing company sufficient in amount to protect it from any loss or damages it may sustain by reason of compliance with the adverse claim. Uniform Commercial Code § 8-403. Thereafter the company must register the transfer.

See also Kenler v. Canal National Bank, 489 F.2d 482, 486 (1st Cir.1973) (SEC "No-Action" letter held not to constitute "opinion of counsel" required by legend on stock certificate, thus relieving transfer agent from liability to shareholder for refusal to transfer); Gasarch v. Ormand Industries, Inc., 346 F. Supp. 550 (S.D.N.Y. 1972) ; Melville v. Wantschek, 403 F. Supp. 439 (E.D.N.Y. 1975) .

In Kanton v. U.S. Plastics, Inc., 248 F. Supp. 353 (D. N.J. 1965) , the plaintiff had obtained a favorable opinion letter and a no-action letter from the Commission, but the issuing company refused to transfer his shares on the ground that it was obliged to take reasonable steps to satisfy itself that it was not participating in a criminal act in permitting the transfer. The court found no merit in this contention and held by way of mandatory injunction that the plaintiff was entitled to have his shares transferred on the corporation's books. See also Riskin v. National Computer Analysts, Inc., 308 N.Y.S.2d 985 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970) , modified, 326 N.Y.S.2d 419 (N.Y. App. Div. 1971) .

(n53)Footnote 53. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-1862, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 1531 (1938). Of course, from the standpoint of the purchaser, it is desirable to obtain some form of an agreement on the part of the issuer to register or effect a Regulation A filing at some definite time or under certain conditions, i.e., when a certain percentage of the securities sold privately request registration.

See also KDI Corp. v. Former Shareholders of Labtron of America, 536 F.2d 1146, 1148 (6th Cir. 1976) (necessity of investment letter to preserve private offering exemption).

(n54)Footnote 54. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5226, [1971-1972 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 78,483 (1972). Such information should include: that the securities are unregistered and must not be resold unless they are registered or an exemption is available; that resales under Rule 144 (discussed in ch.6 infra) can be made only in limited amounts; that if Rule 144 is not available, compliance with Regulation A or some other exemption will be required. Furthermore, the Commission observed that if there is a representation that an attempt will be made to register the securities or that a Regulation A filing will be made, the purchaser should be informed as to specific times. Similarly, if the issuer is not obligated to register or file under Regulation A, that fact should be made clear to the purchaser. The purchaser should also be informed whether the seller will furnish him with information necessary to enable him to effect sales under Rule 144. Id.

In Vohs v. Dickson, 495 F.2d 607 (5th Cir. 1974) , the court, although noting the position taken by the SEC in Sec. Act Rel. 5226, supra, had this to say: "Rule 10b-5 cannot be construed to require a prospective seller of securities to give his prospective buyers legal advice on technical matters arising under the federal securities law. If the buyer is aware of the material facts--e.g., that the stock he is to buy was issued in an unregistered transaction--he should be as aware of the legal consequences of those facts as his seller." Id. at 625 .

See also Keller, Practicing Law Institute Corporate Law and Practice Course Handbook Series--Current Issues in Private Placements: the Metaphysics of Integration of Public and Private Offerings (2000).

(n55)Footnote 55. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 47,341.14 (1962).

See also SEC v. Cavanaugh, 445 F.3d 105, 112 (2d Cir. 2006) ; JIC Drilling Companies, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Sept. 23, 1976); Thomas H. Chambers, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. June 28, 1976).

In SEC v. Ishopnomarkup.com, Inc., [2007 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec.L.Rep. P 94,397 (E.D.N.Y. 2007), the court concluded that three separate offerings carried out in reliance on exemptions from registration available under Regulation D of the Securities Act should be integrated. Applying the five integration factors, the court reasoned:

It is undisputed that Ishop conducted the three offerings as part of a single, continuous plan to provide financing for Ishop. Further, Defendants do not dispute that all investors bought the same class of security (common stock), at or about the same time (essentially continuously from September 1999 through July 2000), for the same type of consideration (cash). Finally, it is undisputed that the offerings were made for the same general purpose, viz. to develop a shopping mall on the internet.

But see In Verticom, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Feb. 12, 1986), the staff took the position that a private offering to a limited number of venture capital firms for the purpose of meeting the issuer's requirements for "start-up" capital, need not be integrated with a subsequent public offering intended to finance the expansion of the issuer's business. The staff declined to base its position on Securities Act Release No. 33-4552, however, relying instead on Rule 152. Rule 152 provides that the phrase "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering" shall be deemed to apply to transactions not involving any public offering at the time of those transactions, although subsequently the issuer decides to make a public offering and/or files a registration statement.

On Rule 152, see also Black Box Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. June 26, 1990), where the company was not required to integrate a private placement executed pursuant to a recapitalization agreement with the subsequent filing of a registration statement relating to an initial public offering.

See also Harcourt General, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. November 5, 1993); Surgical Care Affiliates, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. September 23, 1993); Quad City Holdings, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. April 8, 1993); Adolph Coors Company, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. December 9, 1992); and Santa Fe Pacific Corp., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. September 11, 1990).

(n56)Footnote 56. "It is clear that no exemption from registration under the Securities Act is available in a situation where unregistered securities are sold to purchasers in Europe who intend to resell the securities in the United States." Morris M. Schwebel, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4304, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,728 (1960).

Although "interstate commerce" is defined in Section 2(7) of the Securities Act to include "trade or commerce in securities or any transportation or communication relating thereto ... between any foreign country and any state, territory, or the District of Columbia," it is the Commission's position that the "registration requirements of Section 5 of the Act are primarily intended to protect American investors. Accordingly, the Commission has not taken any action for failure to register securities of United States corporations distributed abroad to foreign nationals." Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4708, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. Ps 1361-1363 (1964). However, the release makes two conditions:

- (1) the distribution must be made in such a manner that the securities must "come to rest" abroad; and
- (2) the offering must not be directed toward American nationals abroad, including servicemen.

It should also be noted that, although the foreign offering may be exempt from the Securities Act's registration requirements, foreign purchasers may have the protection of the antifraud provisions of the Securities Act. See, e.g., Continental Grain (Australia) Pty. Ltd. v. Pacific Oilseeds, Inc., 592 F.2d 409 (8th Cir. 1979).

The Commission has taken a contrary position with respect to sales by United States mutual funds of their shares to foreign nationals, on the ground that "disclosure at the point of sale helps protect the United States securities markets as a whole by insuring that foreign investors will not seek redemption's because of later realization that they had been inadequately informed about their investment. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5068, [1969-1970 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,828 (1970).

(n57)Footnote 57. SEC, Instructional Manual, p. 89. In April 1990, the Commission adopted Regulation S under the Securities Act, which essentially codified the position taken in Securities Act Release No. 33-4708 and subsequent no-action and interpretive letters. Regulation S requires that, for the exemption to be available, all purchasers must be located outside of the United States. In addition, Regulation S contains significant restrictions on reselling the securities in the United States.

(n58)Footnote 58. SEC, Instructional Manual, p. 89.

(n59)Footnote 59. In 1998, the Commission amended Regulation S to provide that the period during which off-shore purchasers would be restricted in selling common stock of non-reporting companies was increased to one year from the date of purchase. One of the principal reasons for this change was to close what appeared to the Commission to be an abuse of Regulation S whereby unregistered securities were returning to the United States within periods as short as 90 days from the date of purchase. The one year holding period now mandated by Regulation S coincides with the one year holding period set forth in Rule 144(d) under the Securities Act. Securities Act Release No. 33-7505 CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep P 86,006.

(n60)Footnote 60. Corporation Trust Co. v. Logan, 52 F. Supp. 999 (D. Del. 1943) (voting trust agreement constituted offer to all shareholders and, in absence of registration of voting trust certificates, certificate holders entitled to rescind).

(n61)Footnote 61. Item 15, Part II, Form S-1. The Forms issued by the SEC under the Securities Act of 1933 are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section D (Matthew Bender).

In furnishing information with respect to its sales of unregistered securities, the registrant must provide the information set forth in Item 701 of Regulation S-K, discussed in § 7.03[3][c] infra, and reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume D, Section K (Matthew Bender).

(n62)Footnote 62. Section 12 is discussed in §§ 9.03 and 9.04 infra.

(n63)Footnote 63. An example of such a disclosure is as follows:

The Company may be contingently liable for issuing securities without compliance with the Securities Act of 1933.

Since February 1968 Griffen has made 15 acquisitions and has issued 1,037,670 shares of its Common Stock in connection with such acquisitions to 77 persons. ... The shares listed above, as well as the shares issued to stockholders of companies acquired in 1968 ... may have been sold in violation of Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and if so, the Company may have a contingent liability of $32,000,000 in the aggregate. ... Based upon the opinion of counsel for the Company, which counsel are named under 'Legal Opinions,' the Company believes that no such violation has occurred and that, accordingly, it has no such liability.

Prospectus of Prelude Corporation, File No.2-29722, pp. 4, 27, 34 (eff. Feb. 18, 1969).

(n64)Footnote 64. Prospectus of Giffen Industries, Inc., File No. 2-30297, pp. 4, 27 (eff. Feb. 6, 1969).

See Bromberg, Curing Securities' Violations: Rescission Offers and Other Techniques, 1 J. Corp. L. 1 (1975); Prospectus of First Banc shares of Florida, Inc., Regis. No.2-53354 (eff. June 28, 1976).

In view of the above discussion, one may quarrel with the wisdom of making a rescission offer, especially when the short one-year statute of limitations of Section 5 is applicable. In sum, it may be preferable to disclose the issuer's contingent liability and dispense with any offer of rescission. In this connection, it is extremely unlikely that the Commission will compel a rescission offer unless it is obvious that fraud rather than an unintentional violation occurred with respect to prior sales in violation of the Securities Act's registration provisions.

(n65)Footnote 65. Regulation D is comprised of Rules 501-508 under the Securities Act, and is discussed in § 4.05, infra. Certain exempt offerings under Regulation D are also discussed in Chapter 5, §§ 5.03 and 5.02.

(n66)Footnote 66. Rules 501, 502, and 503 are discussed in §§ 4.05[1], [2], and [3], respectively infra.

(n67)Footnote 67. If there are in fact 35 or fewer non accredited purchasers, then the issuer's reasonable belief is not relevant. Rule 506(b)(2)(i). See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6825 (1989). See § 4.05[5] infra for discussion of calculation of the number of purchasers under Rules 506 and Rule 505.

The staff of the Commission has taken the position that a Rule 506 offering may be deemed nonpublic for purposes of Section 3 (c)(1) of the Investment Company Act of 1940. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6389, [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 83,106 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982); San Jose Capital Corp., 15 Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. (BNA) 434 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983).

50 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.04

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.04 Private Sales by Non-Issuers: The "Section 4 (1 1/2)" Exemption and Rule 144A

[1] "Section 4 (1 1/2)"

Although there is no exemption as such provided in the Securities Act, principles underlying sections 4(1) and 4(2) of the Securities Act have been cobbled to establish a hybrid exemption for transactions by non-issuers that do not involve a public offering. The so-called "section 4 (1 1/2)" exemption addresses private resales of securities by affiliates who might otherwise be precluded from reliance on section 4(1) by reason of an affiliate/control relationship with the issuer. Non-issuers in these relationships may be deemed to be engaging in a secondary distribution of securities that is subject to section 5 registration, and additionally be deemed to be section 2(11) issuers, such that persons purchasing from them with a requisite view to distribution would be underwriters, and thus also denied the availability of section 4(1) for their own resales. As discussed earlier, section 4(2)--the "private offering" exemption in the Securities Act--as well as Regulation D, are available only to actual issuers. They do not encompass section 2(11) issuers, who are defined as such only for purposes of determining the presence of an underwriter. Holders of restricted or control securities may not, therefore, make "private" sales of their securities under section 4(2) despite structuring such sales in conformity with section 4(2) principles and limitations.

As an essentially made up provision, the section 4 (1 1/2) exemption rests on sound logic that there is no meaningful difference between issuer and non-issuer transactions that meet all of the criteria for the section 4(2) private offering exemption. Sophisticated parties are able to structure and carry out privately negotiated transactions that satisfy all criteria developed under section 4(2), but for the fact that it is an "issuer" exemption. To be sure, Rule 144 under the Securities Act was adopted to create a safe harbor for any holder of "restricted securities" to sell those securities in transactions meeting requirements of the rule, which include a significant holding period. n1 However, for sales of restricted securities that do not, or are not intended to, fit into the safe harbor of Rule 144, the combined principles underlying sections 4(1) and 4(2) provide the basis for permitting non-issuers to sell in privately negotiated transactions. Thus, relying on a claimed section 4 (1 1/2) exemption, non-issuer holders may be able to sell all their securities much sooner than would otherwise be permitted in reliance on the Rule 144 safe harbor.

In 1980 the SEC recognized the emergence of a hybrid exemption, not specifically provided for in the Securities Act, "but clearly within its intended purpose," provided that established criteria for sales under both section 4(1) and section 4(2) are satisfied. n2 Particular conditions have never been specifically identified, and over the years the SEC staff has generally declined requests to provide interpretive guidance. Nevertheless, "section 4 (1 1/2)" has by conventional wisdom been claimed as an available means to effect unregistered private secondary sales under circumstances in which the holder could not make public sales.

The key consideration in its application, however, is that recognized indicia of private placements generally be present. In U.S. v. Lindo, n3 the Sixth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals rejected the availability of a claimed section 4 (1 1/2) exemption where the defendant's private placement transaction did not present such indicia. The court observed, for example, that there was no evidence of any restrictive legends being placed on reissued stock certificates, and no standard private placement contracts were used in the sales at issue. In addition, said the court, exempt private offerings are based upon buyers having access to the kind of information contained in a registration statement. In Lindo, numerous buyers of the stock did not have access to this type of information. Thus, the court concluded that a section 4 (1 1/2) exemption could not apply to the sales. n4

To demonstrate the indicia of a private placement for purposes of reliance on a section 4 (1 1/2) exemption it is clear that a seller must be concerned with limitations on the number of purchasers, manner of sale limitations, disclosure of information, qualifications of offerees and purchasers, and other limitations that may apply to resales. These elements of a "private" placement are no different in the context of a non-issuer sale than as applied in assessing any private transaction. The caveat in all of this, however, is that "section 4 (1 1/2)," despite its evolution as conventional wisdom, remains a theoretical exemption, the conditions of which have never been specifically articulated or explained. n5 Truly private placements between sophisticated sellers and buyers do not suggest the need for the protection of registration any more than qualifying issuer private placements carried out in conformity with long established principles. Nevertheless, reliance on "section 4 (1 1/2)" to sell securities outside of Rule 144 will always entail uncertainty. Some of that uncertainty is today ameliorated by Rule 144A under the Securities Act, which addresses private resales of securities to institutions, and is discussed below.

[2] Securities Act Rule 144A

Rule 144A under the Securities Act n6 Rule 144A does not address the broad range of section 4 (1 1/2) issues, but it does establish an exemption from section 5 of the Securities Act for sales by non-issuers (and dealers) made to a "qualified institutional buyer," and which meet other conditions. By selling in conformity with the rule non-issuers and dealers will not be deemed to be engaging in a distribution, and will not be deemed to be underwriters of the securities within the meaning of sections 2(a)(11) and 4(1) of the Securities Act.

Like Rule 144, Rule 144A is a safe harbor provision. A seller may claim availability of any other applicable exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act. However, availability of the safe harbor under Rule 144A is conditioned on meeting its specific requirements. Conditions to be met under Rule 144A are:

- (1) Securities must be offered and sold only to a "qualified institutional buyer" or to an offeree or purchaser that the seller and any person acting on behalf of the seller reasonably believe is a qualified institutional buyer. Rule 144A defines "qualified institutional buyer"(QIB) to include insurance companies, registered investment companies, employee benefit plans, banks and other institutional investors meeting size or other business criteria. n7 The rule prescribes such bases and sources of information on which a purchaser may rely in making its determination that a prospective purchaser meets QIB criteria.
- (2) The seller and any person acting on its behalf must take reasonable steps to ensure that the purchaser is aware that the seller may rely on Rule 144A in making the sale.
- (3) The securities offered and sold may not be of the same class as securities listed by the issuer on a national securities exchange or the Nasdaq Stock Market, although some provision is made for securities that are convertible into listed securities, and may not be securities of an open-end investment company, unit investment trust or a face-amount certificate company that is or is required to be registered under the Investment Company Act.

(4) If the issuer is not a reporting company under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, prospective purchasers must have the opportunity to obtain from the issuer, seller, or any person acting on behalf of the issuer or seller, specified reasonably current business and financial information about the issuer. n8

Securities acquired in a transaction carried out in reliance on Rule 144A are deemed to be "restricted securities" within the meaning of Rule 144. n9 Thus, QIBs who take the securities become subject to Rule 144 resale limitations unless another exemption is available. In the Rule 144A transaction itself, however, there are no amount or manner of sale conditions, and Rule 144A has no seller holding period condition. Non-issuers who purchase securities from an issuer may do so fully intending ("with a view to") reselling the securities pursuant to Rule 144A. The fact that they do take with that view does not impact the availability of section 4(2) or Regulation D for the issuer, nor does it affect the availability of any exemption for a prior or subsequent holder. n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Rule 144, 17 C.F.R. § 230.144, permits the public sale in ordinary transactions of limited amounts of securities owned by persons controlling, controlled by or under common control with the issuer, and by persons who have acquired restricted securities of the issuer. "Restricted securities" are generally defined as securities acquired directly or indirectly from the issuer, or from an affiliate of the issuer, in a transaction or chain of transactions not involving any public offering. Key conditions for the operation of Rule 144 include adequate current information concerning the issuer being available to the public. A holding period is also central to the Rule, as are limitations on the amount of securities that may be sold and the manner of sales. Rule 144 is discussed in more detail in Chapter 6, infra. See also K&L Gates, Securities Practice Guide § 3.04[2] (2009 Edition)

(n2)Footnote 2. Securities Act Rel. No. 33-6188 (Feb. 1, 1980).

(n3)Footnote 3. 18 F.3d 353 (6th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. It is also certain that that the Section 4(1 1/2) exemption will not be available in any circumstances where an underwriter is present. As explained in Zacharias v. SEC, 569 F.3d 458 464 (D.D.C. 2009) :

[A]lthough the term "4(1 1/2) exemption" adequately expresses [the relationship between § 4(1) and § 4(2)], the actual basis "for private resales of restricted securities is § 4(1)". Ackerberg v. Johnson, 892 F.2d 1328, 1225 n. 6 (8th Cir. 1989). Section 4(1), in turn. Exempts "transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer." 15 U.S.C. § 77(d)(1) (emphasis added). Thus, if an underwriter is present, the § 4(1) exemption, and by extension the 4(1 1/2) exemption, cannot apply.

(n5)Footnote 5. It is certain, however, that as in the case of an issuer claiming an exemption for a private sale under section 4(2) of the Securities Act, an affiliate claiming a section 4 (1 1/2) exemption has the burden of establishing that such sales do not constitute a disguised public distribution. SEC v. Cavanaugh, 1 F. Supp. 2d 337, 368-69 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144A.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Rule 144A(a)(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.144A(A)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Rule 144A(d)(4)(i) prescribes such information as consisting of:

[A] very brief statement of the nature of the business of the issuer and the products and services it offers; and the issuer's most recent balance sheet and profit and loss and retained earnings statements, and similar financial statements for such part of the two preceding fiscal years as the issuer has been in operation (the financial statements should be audited to the extent reasonably available).

(n9)Footnote 9. Rule 144A, Prelim. Note 6.

(n10)Footnote 10. Rule 144A, Prelim. Note 7; see also Rule 144A(e).

51 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.05

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.05 Regulation D--Generally

The SEC adopted Regulation D (Rules 501-508) in 1982 to assist small business capital formation and to reduce the burdens imposed by the federal securities laws as applied to small business. Regulation D coordinates several of the various limited offering and small offering exemptions from Securities Act registration and eases the requirements for private offers and sales of securities under the Securities Act. n1 Rules 504 through 506 under Regulation D replaced the limited offering and small offering exemptions from registration contained in former Rules 146, 240, and 242. n2 Rule 504 is applicable to offerings not exceeding $1,000,000. Rule 505 applies to offerings not exceeding $5,000,000. Rule 506 applies to offerings without regard to the dollar amount. n3

Regulation D is also comprised of:

- Rule 501, which defines common terms used in Regulation D;
- Rule 502, which sets forth the general requirements relating to integration, information requirements, limitations on manner of offering, and limitations on resale that apply to offers and sales under Regulation D;
- Rule 503, which provides for a uniform notice of sales, Form D, for offerings under Regulation D and Section 4(6); n4
- Rule 507 which provides that no exemption under Rules 504, 505 or 506 shall be available for an issuer if such issuer, or any of its predecessors or affiliates have been subject to any order, judgment, or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction temporarily, preliminarily or permanently enjoining such person for failure to comply with Rule 503; however, the Commission, for good cause, may waive such disabilities; and
- Rule 508 which provides that a failure to comply with a term, condition or requirement of Rules 504, 505 or 506 will not result in the loss of the exemption under certain circumstances, one of which is if the failure to comply was insignificant with respect to the offering as a whole.

An issuer's reliance on the rules under Regulation D does not act as an election; the issuer may still claim the availability of any other exemption from registration. n5 Regulation D, however, is available only to the issuer and not to the issuer's affiliates or to secondary sellers of the issuer's securities. n6

The rules under Regulation D do not provide an exemption:

- (1) For the securities themselves, but rather only for the transaction in which the securities are offered or sold by the issuer; n7
- (2) From any provisions of the federal securities laws other than the registration provisions of Section 5; n8 and
- (3) From any applicable state law relating to the offer and sale of securities. n9

In addition, Regulation D is not available to an issuer for a transaction that, although in technical compliance with these rules, is part of a plan or scheme to evade the registration provisions of the Securities Act although the issuer technically complies with the requirements of Regulation D. n10

Only offerings carried out under Rule 506 of Regulation D are exempt under Section 4 of the Securities Act. Regulation D exemptions under Rule 504 and 505 were created by the SEC pursuant to statutory authority contained in Section 3(b) of the Securities Act, which provides generally for exemptions by rulemaking for offerings in an aggregate amount up to $5 million based on a determination that requiring registration is not necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors. Rule 506, on the other hand, is a "safe harbor" provision with which issuers may comply to be certain of the Section 4(2) exemption. Nevertheless, the general conditions of Regulation D are applicable to all offerings made under it, and thus Regulation D as a whole is considered further below, although more particular consideration of offerings made pursuant to Rules 504 and 505 is undertaken in Chapter 5--Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act.

[1] Definitions--Rule 501

Rule 501 of Regulation D defines important terms used in Regulation D.

Accredited Investor. For purposes of Regulation D, the term "accredited investor" includes any person who comes within, or whom the issuer reasonably believes n11 comes within, certain categories of investors at the time of the sale of the issuer's securities to that person. n12 The categories include: n13

- Various institutional investors (banks, savings and loan associations, licensed brokers or dealers, insurance companies, investment companies, certain business development companies, small business investment companies, any plan established and maintained by a state, its political subdivisions, or any agency or instrumentality of a state or its political subdivisions, for the benefit of its employees if such plan has total assets in excess of 5 million dollars, n14 other employee benefit plans if the investment decision is made by a plan fiduciary which is a bank, savings and loan, insurance company or registered investment advisor or if the plan has assets in excess of 5 million dollars, or self-directed plans with investment decisions made solely by accredited investors); n15
- Any private business development company as defined in Section 202(a)(22) of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940; n16

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.05

- Any Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3) exempt organization, corporation, Massachusetts or similar business trust or partnership with total assets in excess of 5 million dollars, not formed for the specific purpose of acquiring the securities offered; n17
- Any director, executive officer, or general partner of the issuer of the securities being offered or sold, or any director, executive officer, or general partner of a general partner of that issuer; n18
- Any natural person whose individual net worth, or joint net worth with the person's spouse, at the time of the purchase exceeds $1 million;
- Any natural person who had an individual income in each of the two most recent years in excess of $200,000, or joint income with that person's spouse in excess of $300,000 in each of these years and has a reasonable expectation of reaching the same income level in the current year; n19
- Any trust, with total assets in excess of $5 million, not formed for the specific purpose of acquiring the securities offered, and whose purchases of securities are directed by a sophisticated person as described in Rule 506(b)(2)(ii) of Regulation D; and
- Any entity in which all of the equity owners are accredited investors. n20

Rule 501 also defines the following terms: "affiliate," "aggregate offering price," "business combination," "calculation of number of purchasers," "executive officer," "issuer," and "purchaser representative."

[2] General Conditions--Rule 502

Rule 502 sets forth the general conditions relating to integration, information requirements, limitations on manner of offering, and limitations on resale that apply to all exempt offers and sales effected pursuant to Rules 504, 505, and 506. n21

[a] Integration. Rule 502(a) requires integration of all sales that are part of the same Regulation D offering. The doctrine of integration prevents issuers from circumventing the Securities Act registration requirements by claiming a separate exemption for one or more parts of a transaction that comprise a single plan of financing. Accordingly, integration is a means for identifying the scope of an offering by considering the relationship between multiple transactions; it is premised on the recognition that, although the Securities Act addresses discrete offerings, not every offering is in fact a discrete transaction.

The factors listed in Rule 502 to be considered in determining whether offers and sales of securities should be integrated for purposes of a rule under Regulation D are:

- Whether the sales are part of a single plan of financing;
- whether the sales involve issuance of the same class of securities;
- whether the sales have been made at or about the same time;
- whether the same type of consideration is received; and
- whether the sales are made for the same general purpose.

These factors have also been made applicable to intrastate offerings and private offerings. n22 A safe harbor is provided in Rule 502(a) for all offers and sales that take place at least six months before the start of, or six months after, the termination of the Regulation D offerings, if during the six month periods there are no offers or sales of securities by or for the issuer of the same or a similar class as those offered or sold under Regulation D. n23

[b] Information Requirements. An issuer that sells securities pursuant to Rule 504 or only to accredited investors pursuant to Rules 505 or 506 is not required to furnish specific information to purchasers. n24 If, however, an offering of securities pursuant to Rule 505 or 506 involves sales to non accredited investors, the issuer must furnish specified information to purchasers during the offering and before sale. n25 The specified information must be furnished a reasonable time prior to sale. n26

The issuer must also furnish the non accredited investor with a brief written description of any material written information about the offering which was previously provided by the issuer to any accredited investor but not to the non accredited investor. n27 The written information itself must be provided to the non accredited investor upon the investor's written request. n28

Finally, at a reasonable time prior to the sale of securities to any non accredited investor in a Rule 505 or Rule 506 transaction, the issuer must advise such purchaser in writing of the limitations on resale of the securities. n29

If the issuer is required to furnish specified information, and the issuer is subject to the periodic reporting requirements of the Exchange Act, the issuer must furnish prospective purchasers with the most recent annual report to shareholders, the definitive proxy statement filed in connection with that report, and the most recent annual report to the Commission on Exchange Act Form 10-K or 10-KSB upon the purchaser's request in writing. n30 Alternatively, the issuer may furnish the information contained in a registration statement on Form S-1 n31 or Form 10 or 10-KB under the Exchange Act or its annual report on Form 10-K or 10-KSB under the Exchange act, whichever is the most recently required filing, and the information contained in any subsequent reports or documents filed pursuant to the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act. n32 The issuer must also provide a brief description of the securities being offered, the use of the proceeds from the offering, and any material changes in the issuer's affairs not disclosed in the documents furnished. n33

If the issuer is required to furnish specified information but is not subject to the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act (i.e., the issuer is a non-reporting company), the level of non-financial disclosure is either (i) that required in Part II of Form 1-A in situations where the issuer is eligible to use Regulation A, or (ii) the information required in Part I of a registration statement filed under the Securities Act on the form that the issuer would be entitled to use. n34 The financial disclosure required is dependent upon the size of the offering:

- For offerings up to $2,000,000, the issuer must furnish the information required in Item 310 of Regulation S-B, except that only the issuer's balance sheet, which shall be dated within 120 days of the start of the offering, must be audited. n35
- For offerings up to $7,500,000, the issuer must provide the financial statement information required in Form SB-2, except that if the issuer, other than a limited partnership, cannot obtain audited financial statements without unreasonable effort or expense, then only the issuer's balance sheet, which shall be dated within 120 days of the start of the offering, must be audited. n36
- For offerings over $7,500,000, the issuer must provide the same financial statements as would be required in a registration statement filed under the Securities Act on the form that the issuer would be entitled to use, except that if the issuer, other than a limited partnership, cannot obtain audited financial statements without unreasonable effort or expense, then only the issuer's balance sheet, which shall be dated within 120 days of the start of the offering, must be audited. n37

A non-reporting issuer must furnish the specified information to the extent the information is material to an understanding of the issuer, its business, and securities being offered. n38

Issuers required to furnish specific information do not, however, have to provide purchasers with exhibits required to be filed with the Commission as part of a registration statement or report (other than an annual report to shareholders or parts thereof incorporated by reference in a Form 10-K or Form 10-KSB report), if the contents of the exhibits are identified and the exhibits are made available to the purchaser, upon written request before purchase. n39

[c] Limitations on Manner of Offering. Rule 502(c), applicable to all transactions under Regulation D except certain offers and sales made pursuant to Rule 504, n40 prohibits the issuer or any person acting on the issuer's behalf from offering or selling securities by any form of general solicitation or general advertising. n41

[d] Limitations on Resale. Rule 502(d), applicable to all transactions under Regulation D except certain offers and sales made pursuant to Rule 504, n42 provides that securities acquired in a transaction under Regulation D have the status of securities acquired in a transaction under Section 4(2) n43 and cannot be resold without registration or an exemption from registration.

The issuer must exercise reasonable care to assure that the purchasers of the securities are not underwriters within the meaning of Section 2(11). n44 Reasonable care includes, but is not limited to:

- Reasonable inquiry to determine if the purchaser is acquiring the securities for himself or for other persons;
- written disclosure to each purchaser before sale that the securities have not been registered under the Act and cannot be resold unless they are registered under the Act or unless an exemption from registration is available; and
- placement of a legend on the certificate or other document that evidences the securities stating that the securities have not been registered under the Act and setting forth or referring to the restrictions on transferability and sale of the securities. n45

[3] Notice of Sales--Rule 503

Rule 503 provides one uniform notice of sales, Form D, n46 for offerings pursuant to Regulation D and Section 4(6), n47 the statutory exemption for offers or sales of not more than $5 million of securities only to accredited investors. Rule 503 and Rule 507 together obligate issuers to file under Rule 503 but do not make filing a condition of the availability of a Regulation D exemption. Instead, the failure to timely file a Form D serves as the basis for disqualifying the issuer, subject to waiver by the Commission, from future use of the Regulation D exemptions. n48 The issuer must file Form D with the Commission no later than fifteen days after the first sale of securities in an offering under Regulation D. n49

In 2008 the SEC adopted rule amendments mandating electronic filing of Form D through the Internet. n50 Revisions to the Form and to Regulation D were also adopted to simplify and restructure Form D and to update and revise its information requirements. The information required by Form D is now filed with the SEC electronically through an online filing system that is accessible from any computer with Internet access. The data filed is available on the Web site and is interactive and searchable. n51 The Form D filing is still required within 15 days of the issuer's first sale in reliance on a Regulation D exemption, However, paper filings have been eliminated. The new Form D for electronic filing generally carries over the requirements from the former Form D for basic identifying and contact information about related persons, but modifies or omits some of these types of requirements. Certain additional information about issuers is now required and, in general, information requirements are updated. The requirements carried over are restructured to reflect the electronic character of the filing. Also, consistent with the constraints of the Regulation D safe harbor, issuers are permitted to engage in a limited amount of "free writing" as necessary to clarify responses.

[4] Limited Offerings Not Exceeding $1,000,000--Rule 504

Rule 504 provides an exemption for offers and sales of securities by an issuer not subject to the reporting provisions of the Exchange Act that do not exceed an aggregate offering price of $1,000,000, less the aggregate offering price for all securities sold within the twelve months before the start of the offering and during the offering under Rule 504 in reliance on any exemption under Section 3(b) n52 or in violation of Section 5 (a). n53

Rule 504 is not available for offers and sales of securities by issuers that are investment companies, are subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15 (d) of the Exchange Act, or are development stage companies that either have no specific business plan or purpose or have indicated that their business plan is to engage in a merger or acquisition with an unidentified company. n54 Because of a presumption that the remedial provisions of the securities laws and state regulation are sufficient protection for small offerings, no specific information disclosure requirements apply to Rule 504 offerings and there is no limit on the number of offerees and purchasers.

For purposes of Regulation D, the term "aggregate offering price" includes the sum of all cash, services, property, notes, cancellation of debt, or other consideration received by an issuer for the issuance of its securities. n55 If securities are offered for both cash and non cash consideration, the aggregate offering price is based on the price at which the securities are offered for cash. n56 If the securities are not offered for cash, the aggregate offering price is based on the value of the consideration as established by bona fide sales of that consideration made within a reasonable time, or, in the absence of sales, on the fair value as determined by an accepted standard which must be reasonable at the time made. n57

The securities purchased in a Rule 504 transaction ordinarily will be subject to limitations upon resale pursuant to Rule 502(d), as are the securities purchased in Rule 505 and 506 transactions. However, as a result of amendments to Rule 504 in April 1999, the Rule 502(d) resale limitations, as well as the 502(c) limitation on general solicitation and advertising, will not apply to offers and sales of securities made: (i) exclusively in one or more states that provide for the registration of the securities, and require the public filing and delivery to investors of a substantive disclosure document before sale, and are made in accordance with those state provisions; (ii) in one or more states that have no provision for registration of the securities or the public offering or delivery of a disclosure document before sale, if the securities have been registered in at least one state that provides for such registration, public filing and delivery before sale, offers and sales are made in that state in accordance with such provisions, and the disclosure document is delivered before sale to all purchasers (including those in the states that have no such procedure); or (iii) exclusively according to state law exemptions from registration that permit general solicitation and general advertising so long as sales are made only to "accredited investors." In addition, an issuer in a Rule 504 transaction must satisfy applicable portions of Rules 501 through 503. n58

[5] Limited Offerings Not Exceeding $5,000,000--Rule 505

Rule 505 of Regulation D was adopted by the SEC pursuant to authority in Section 3(b) of the Securities Act n59 for offers and sales of securities not exceeding an aggregate offering price of $5 million. The main conditions of Rule 505 offerings are:

- The total offering price of each issue of securities may not exceed $5 million, less the aggregate offering price for all securities sold within the twelve months before the start of the offering and during the offering under Rule 505 in reliance on any exemption under Section 3(b) or in violation of Section 5 (a). n60

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.05

- The offering may not be made by means of general solicitation or general advertising.
- The issuer may sell the securities to an unlimited number of "accredited investors" and to 35 non-accredited persons. There are no requirements of "sophistication" or "wealth" for persons to whom the securities are sold.
- A company must take any necessary steps to ensure that the purchasers are acquiring securities for investment only, not for resale. The securities are thus "restricted" and investors must be informed that they may not be able to sell except pursuant to a registration statement or exemption from registration.
- The issuer is not required to file any offering materials with the Commission. Fifteen days after the first sale in the offering, the issuer must electronically file a notice of sales on Form D. The notice also contains an undertaking under the Rule for the issuer to furnish the Commission, upon its staff's request, any information given to non-accredited purchasers in connection with the offering.
- Rule 505 does not provide an exemption from state securities laws.

For purposes of calculating the number of purchasers under Rule 505 and Rule 506 discussed below, the following purchasers are excluded:

- (1) any relative, spouse, or relative of the spouse of a purchaser who has the same principal residence as the purchaser;
- (2) any trust or estate in which a purchaser and any of the persons related to the purchaser (as specified in paragraph (1) above or (3) below) collectively have more than 50 percent of the beneficial interest (excluding contingent interests);
- (3) any corporation or other organization of which a purchaser and any of the persons related to the purchaser (as specified in paragraphs (1) or (2) above) collectively are beneficial owners of more than 50 percent of the equity securities (excluding directors' qualifying shares) or equity interests; and
- (4) any accredited investor. n61

An exemption from registration under Rule 505 is not available for the securities of any issuer that is subject to a disqualification under Regulation A, n62 unless the Commission determines, upon a showing of good cause, that it is not necessary under the circumstances that the Rule 505 exemption be denied. n63 Securities offered pursuant to Rule 505 are "restricted" securities, and any resale must be in conformity with Rule 144 or another available exemption.

[6] Offerings to No More Than 35 Non-Accredited Investors--Rule 506

Rule 506 of Regulation D n64 is the "safe harbor" for offerings made under Section 4(2) of the Securities Act. A company using the Rule 506 exemption can raise an unlimited amount of money, and can be assured it is within the Section 4(2) exemption by satisfying the following standards:

- The company cannot use general solicitation or advertising to market the securities;
- The company may sell its securities to an unlimited number of "accredited investors" and up to 35 other purchases. Unlike Rule 505, all non-accredited investors, either alone or with a "purchaser representative," n65 must be sophisticated--that is, they must have sufficient knowledge and experience in financial and business matters to make them capable of evaluating the merits and risks of the prospective investment;

- Companies must decide what information to give to accredited investors, so long as it does not violate the antifraud prohibitions of the federal securities laws. But companies must give non-accredited investors disclosure documents that are generally the same as those used in registered offerings. If a company provides information to accredited investors, it must make this information available to non-accredited investors as well;
- The company must be available to answer questions by prospective purchasers;
- The company must electronically file Form D;
- Purchasers receive "restricted" securities, meaning that the securities cannot be sold without registration or in compliance with Rule 144 or an available exemption.

Rule 506 is the principal means by which "private" offerings are carried out today, as few issuers opt for reliance on Section 4(2) given its uncertainties and consequences of non-compliance outside the Rule 506 safe harbor. The utility of Rule 506 lies in its availability for offerings of unlimited amounts to an unlimited number of accredited investors. Up to 35 non-accredited investors may be involved, but consistent with a fundamental premise of the Section 4(2) exemption, for these purchasers there is a specific sophistication requirement to be met by each non-accredited purchaser either or alone or with a purchaser representative as discussed above.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6389, [1982 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 83,106 (1982). 17 C.F.R. §§ 230.501-508. The Rules under the Securities Act of 1933 are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

The Commission, in conjunction with the proposal and adoption of Regulation D and in coordination with the North American Securities Administrators Association ("NASAA") has made efforts to achieve a uniform system of federal-state limited offering exemptions that facilitates capital formation consistent with the protection of investors. Regulation D is intended to be the principal element of this system. Id.

On March 3, 1983, the Commission issued an interpretive release setting forth responses to questions frequently received by the Division of Corporation Finance concerning the definitions, disclosure requirements, operational conditions, notice of sale requirements, and exemptions contained in Regulation D. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2380 (1983). The responses are intended to serve as guidance for any person who wishes to make an offering reliant upon the Regulation D exemptions.

(n2)Footnote 2. Rules 146, 240, and 242 and Forms 146, 240, 242 were rescinded on June 30, 1982. The Commission took the position that no registration was required for any offerings made in compliance with Rules 146, 240, or 242 that commenced before April 15, 1982, the effective date of Regulation D, and continued past June 30, 1982. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6389, [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 83,106 (1982).

(n3)Footnote 3. Rule 506, a "safe harbor" for issuers attempting to perfect the Section 4(2) private offering exemption, is discussed in § 4.03[2] supra.

(n4)Footnote 4. Section 4(6) of the 1933 Act, which provides an exemption from registration for offers or sales of securities to accredited investors, is discussed in § 4.09 infra, and is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

(n5)Footnote 5. Preliminary Note 3, Regulation D.

(n6)Footnote 6. Preliminary Note 4, Regulation D.

For example, an underwriter for the sale of securities acquired in a firm commitment offering could not rely upon Regulation D. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 76.

(n7)Footnote 7. Preliminary Note 4, Regulation D.

(n8)Footnote 8. Preliminary Note 1, Regulation D. An issuer must therefore provide any further material information that may be necessary to make the information required under Regulation D not misleading. Id.

(n9)Footnote 9. Preliminary Note 2, Regulation D.

All state securities law regulators however, have adopted changes in their state laws which essentially duplicate the Regulation D exemption, including the requirement to file a Form D, in order to ease state securities law registration requirements. See Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation, § 5.02 (2d Ed. Matthew Bender).

After enactment of the National Securities Market Improvements Act of 1996, states are prohibited from imposing any conditions, based on merit, on offerings that are exempt from registration pursuant to Commission rules or regulations issued under Section 4(2) of the Securities Act, namely Rule 506. However, notice filing requirements substantially similar to those required by Commission rule or regulation are permitted. Also, states continue to exercise authority to determine the validity of a Rule 506 exemption as a condition to NSMIA preemption of state regulation. See R. Rapp and F. Berckmueller, "Testing the Limits of NSMIA Preemption: State Authority to Determine the Validity of Covered Securities and to Regulate Disclosure," 63 Bus. Lawyer 809 (May 2008).

(n10)Footnote 10. Preliminary Note 6, Regulation D.

Preliminary Note 7 to Regulation D provides that offers and sales of securities to foreign persons made outside the United States that will result in the securities coming to rest abroad generally need not be registered although coincident offers and sales are made under Regulation D within the United States. Therefore:

(1) purchasers who are not U.S. citizens or U.S. residents need not be included in the calculation of the number of purchasers; and

(2) proceeds from sales to foreign purchasers need not be included in the aggregate offering price.

Preliminary Note 7, however, does not apply if the issuer relies solely on Regulation D for offers or sales to foreign persons. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6437, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 72,407 (1982).

(n11)Footnote 11. Since the factors that constitute reasonable belief will depend upon the facts of each case, the staff of the Commission is not in a position to express its views on, or to endorse any method for the determination of, whether an investor is accredited. Sec. Act Rel. 6455, supra, Part I.A.

(n12)Footnote 12. The interpretations regarding the definition of "accredited investor" in Regulation D also apply to the definition of "accredited investor" under Section 4(6), discussed in § 4.08 infra. Id., n. 2.

(n13)Footnote 13. 17. C.F.R. § 230.501(a) (reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

(n14)Footnote 14. This addition to the list of "accredited investors" was adopted in Sec. Act Rel. No. 6825, [1989 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 84, 404 (1989).

(n15)Footnote 15. Although a trust having assets of less than $5 million is not one of the entities defined as an accredited investor, if a bank, which, when acting in its individual or fiduciary capacity, is defined as an accredited investor, serves as trustee and makes the investment on behalf of the trust, the trust can be accredited. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, n.1 supra, Question 26.

See also NEMO Capital Partners L.P., SEC No-Action Letter [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 78,506 (Div. Corp. Fin. April 11, 1987), in which the staff took the position that a trust having a bank as a co-trustee is an accredited investor under Rule 501(a)(1) as long as the bank acts in its fiduciary capacity on behalf of the trust, i.e., in reference to the investment decision, and the trust follows the bank's direction.

(n16)Footnote 16. See 15 U.S.C. § 80b-2(a)(22).

Business development companies as defined under Section 2(a)(48) of the Investment Company Act of 1940, 15 U.S.C. § 80a-2(a)(48), are included in the list of accredited investors pursuant to Section 2(15), discussed in § 4.08 infra.

(n17)Footnote 17. See 26 U.S.C. § (c)(3).

Since a state-run, nonprofit hospital falls within the substantive description of an organization within Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, it is an accredited investor under Rule 501(a)(3) although, as a state agency, it is exempt from federal income taxation. Rule 501(a)(3) does not require the investor to have received a ruling on its tax status under Section 501(c)(3). Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, n.1 supra, Question 4.

Also included as an accredited investor under the definition is a limited liability company if it meets the other requirements as to asset size and purpose of formation. See Wolf, Block, Schor and Soles-Cohen, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Dec. 11, 1996).

In computing whether the total amount of assets has exceeded $5 million, the assets of a subsidiary may be added to those of the parent-investor if, under generally accepted accounting principles, the parent may combine its financial statements with those of its subsidiary. Id., Question 5.

See also Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Feb. 1, 1986), in which the Commission staff took the position that a charitable corporation may be deemed an "accredited investor" under Rule 501(a)(3) of Regulation D even if it has not received a determination letter from the Internal Revenue Service with respect to its tax exempt status, as long as it meets all the substantive criteria of Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code and has total assets in excess of $5 million.

(n18)Footnote 18. An executive officer of a parent of the corporate general partner of an issuer who invests in a Regulation D offering is not an accredited investor under Rule 501(a)(4) unless the executive officer of the parent can be deemed an executive officer of the subsidiary, e.g., if the executive officer performs a policy making function for the subsidiary. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Questions 6 and 37.

Since an investor is accredited if he or she falls into one of the enumerated categories of Rule 501(a) "at the time of the sale of securities to that person," a director of a corporate issuer who, two weeks after purchasing securities in a Regulation D offering and before completion of the offering, resigns due to sudden illness, would be an accredited investor since he or she had that status at the time of sale (unless the resignation was part of a plan to evade the registration requirements, see text at n.9 supra). Id., Question 1.

If a corporation implements an employee stock option plan for its key employees, an issuer can rely upon Regulation D for the issuance of the stock underlying the options; the offering of the stock generally will commence when the options become exercisable and will continue until the options are exercised or otherwise terminated. If the key employees are directors or officers, and they purchase securities through the exercise of their options, they will be accredited investors under § 501(a)(4). Id., Question 78.

(n19)Footnote 19. In calculating individual income, a purchaser may not include the income of his or her spouse on unrealized capital appreciation. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33- 6455, supra, Questions 22 and 23.

In calculating the net worth of a natural person, the estimated fair market value of the investor's principal residence may be included. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 21.

Rule 501(a)(6) is inapplicable to purchases by a corporation, Id., Question 20, and by the trustee of a trust, since, except where a bank is a trustee, the trust (which is not a "natural person") is deemed the purchaser, not the trustee. Id., Question 29.

(n20)Footnote 20. The equity owners of a limited partnership are the limited partners, and the equity owners of a limited liability company are its members. Sec. Act Rel. 6455, supra, Question 25.

Thus, for example, if all but one of the shareholders of a corporate investor are accredited investors and the unaccredited shareholder is a director who purchased one share of stock to comply with a requirement that all directors be shareholders of the corporation, the corporation would not be accredited because the director, as an equity owner, is unaccredited. Id., Question 24. The director cannot be accredited under Rule 501(a)(4) because he or she is a director of the investor, not the issuer.

The staff of the Commission does not consider the beneficiaries of a conventional trust to be "equity owners." The result may be different, however, in the case of certain non-conventional trusts where, as a result of powers retained by the grantors, a trust as a legal entity would be deemed not to exist. Thus, where each grantor of a revocable trust is an accredited investor and the trust may be amended or revoked at any time by the grantors, the trust can be accredited because the grantors will be deemed the equity owners of the trust's assets. Lawrence B. Rabkin, Esq., [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,341 (1982); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 30.

Similarly, where an Individual Retirement Account ("IRA") purchases Regulation D securities and the participant in the IRA is an accredited investor, the IRA can be accredited. Id., Question 30.

A trust may also be accredited if all its beneficiaries are accredited investors in the case of a business trust, real estate investment trust, or other similar entities. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra.

In Herbert S. Wander, 15 Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. (BNA) 2252(Div. Corp. Fin. 1983), the staff of the Division of Corporation Finance took the position that a trust may be an accredited investor when the grantor is accredited, and when, due to the nature of the trust, the grantor is deemed the equity owner of the trust's assets. In the staff's opinion, where a trust is designed for a family with certain unique tax and investment goals, it has special trust characteristics that qualify it as an accredited investor.

(n21)Footnote 21. Rule 508 excuses certain "insignificant" deviations in a good faith effort to comply with the requirements of Regulation D. Under Rule 508 the failure to comply with a Regulation D requirement not designed to protect specifically the complaining person or a failure to comply that is insignificant to the offering as a whole are insignificant deviations. See Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6825, [1989 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 84,404

(1989).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. PP 2270-77 (1961), and Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. Ps 2270-83 (1962). The intrastate offering exemption is discussed in § 3.12 supra. The private offering exemption is discussed in § 4.03 supra.

In Sonnenblick, Parker & Selvers, SEC No-Action Letter, (pub. avail. Jan. 1, 1986), the staff took the position that a securities offering to an issuer's officers and directors under Rule 504 must be integrated with a public offering to take place within six months of the Rule 504 offering, since both offerings were part of a single plan of financing to provide initial working capital to the issuer.

See also State Street Mortgage Company, SEC No-Action Letter, Fed. Sec. L. Rep (CCH) P 78, 415 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1987), in which the staff could not agree that a proposed offering of subordinated debentures under Section 4(6) to company officers and directors and the offering of negotiable notes to outside investors under Rule 506 of Regulation D should not be integrated. In the staff's view, the proposed offerings were a single plan for financing the Company's mortgage making activities.

In Pacific Physician's Services, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail 1985) the staff advised that an equity offering under Rule 505 of Regulation D to raise capital for the operation of the issuer's business need not be integrated with a Rule 504 offering of stock to employees and independent contractors made to give them a proprietary interest in the issuer and encourage them to continue their employment or service, since the offerings were not made for the same general purpose or as part of a single plan of financing.

In Laser Fax, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1985-86 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 78,136 (1985) the staff stated that a proposed debenture offering under Regulation D must be integrated with a prior Regulation D offering of the issuer's common stock and with a planned public offering of common stock to be made after the debenture offering where:

- (a) the debentures were convertible into common stock of the company;
- (b) the funds to be raised from the offering of the debentures and the planned public offering of common stock were part of a single plan of financing;
- (c) the funds received from all three offerings were to be used for business operations; and
- (d) the debentures were to be offered less than six months after the termination of the first offering and the public offering of common stock was to take place less than six months after termination of the offering of debentures.

But see SEC v. Dunfee [1966-1967 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 91,970 (W.D. Mo. 1966) where the defendant sold 6% notes payable in 20 month installments, followed by a period of eight months in which it sold no securities, and then sold 7% notes payable in 36 months. The court held that the latter notes constituted a new issue and that the two offerings should not be integrated.

(n23)Footnote 23. Rule 502(a) Regulation D.

Offers and sales of securities under an employee benefit plan, which is defined in Securities Act Rule 405 as any purchase, savings, option, bonus, appreciation, profit sharing, thrift, incentive, pension, or similar plan solely for employees, directors, trustees, or officers, are permitted during the six month periods. Id. Thus, if an issuer commences an offering in reliance on Rule 506 seven months after completing a Rule 504 offering, and during the seven month period the issuer only offered and sold securities under an employee benefit plan, the issuer would not be required to integrate the separate offerings. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 53.

Transactions otherwise meeting the requirements of an exemption will not be integrated with simultaneous offerings being made outside the United States effected in a manner that would result in the securities coming to rest abroad. Note, Rule 502(a), Regulation D. See also Rules 901-904 (Regulation S).

In Tallgrass Technologies Corp., 18 Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. 578 (BNA) (Div. Corp. Fin. 1986), the staff took the position that securities issued under an issuer's employee stock option plan that provides that options are exercisable during exercise periods set more than six months apart, need not be integrated under Rule 502(a) with other offerings of the employer made between the exercise periods.

See also California Casualty Management Co., SEC No-Action Letter [1984-1985 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep P 77, 941 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1985).

(n24)Footnote 24. Note, however, that in certain cases Rule 504 investors must be advised in writing of the limitations on resale of the securities. Rule 502(b)(2)(vii), Regulation D.

(n25)Footnote 25. Rule 502(b)(2).

In offerings up to $2 million, the offeror must furnish the same kind of information as required in Item 310 of Regulation S-B (17 C.F.R. § 239.10) except that the issuer's balance sheet must be dated within 120 days of the start of the offering and be audited. Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(B), as amended in Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6758, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 84, 221 (1988).

An issuer may furnish prospective investors a short form offering memorandum containing a fair and adequate summary of the specified information followed by a complete disclosure document provided all required information is delivered before sale and disclosure in this manner does not obscure material information. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 40.

An issuer making an offering in reliance on Rule 505 may change an offering originally limited to accredited investors to include sales to non accredited purchasers before completion of the offering without being precluded from relying on Rule 505 for the earlier sales to accredited investors, if the issuer furnishes the accredited investors a complete disclosure document and agrees to promptly refund their funds unless they elect to remain in the program. Id., Question 41.

Regulation D does not provide for a review by the Commission staff of disclosure documents to be used in connection with a Regulation D offering or for consideration by the staff of requests for waiver of disclosure documents. Walnut Valley Special Cable TV Fund, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter [1982 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,237 (1982).

Regulation D sets forth information requirements specifically applicable to foreign private issuers eligible to use Exchange Act Form 20-F. See Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(C) and 502(b)(2)(ii)(D), Regulation D.

(n26)Footnote 26. Rule 502(b)(1). See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6825, [1989 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 84,404 (1989).

Issuers should consider providing information that is furnished to non accredited investors to accredited investors as well, in view of the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws.

(n27)Footnote 27. Rule 502(b)(2)(vii).

(n28)Footnote 28. Rule 502(b)(2)(iv).

(n29)Footnote 29. Rule 502(b)(2)(vii) and Rule 502(d). See § 4.05[2][d] infra. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6825, [1989 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 84, 404 (1989).

(n30)Footnote 30. Rule 502(b)(2)(ii)(A), Regulation D.

(n31)Footnote 31. Form S-11, SB-1, or SB-2, or information may be furnished where applicable. Form S-11 is used for securities of certain real estate companies and Form SB-1 is an optional form for public offerings by an issuer for an aggregate cash price not exceeding $10,000,000. Form SB-2 is a form used to register securities to be sold for cash by "small business issuers."

The requirement to "furnish the information contained in a registration statement on Form S-1" should be construed to mean Part 1 of Form S-1. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 50.

As part of its program of integrated disclosure under the Securities Act and Exchange Act, the Commission adopted a three-tier system of registration under the Securities Act. Form S-1 represents the third tier and is available for issuers in the Exchange Act reporting system for less than three years, such as new issuers, or for issuers for which no other form is authorized or prescribed. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6383, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 956 (1982). For detailed discussion of the Commission's integrated disclosure program, including Form S-1, see ch.7 infra. The Forms issued by the SEC under the Securities Act are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section D (Matthew Bender).

(n32)Footnote 32. Rule 502(b)(2)(ii)(B), Regulation D.

Although the requirement under subparagraph (B) refers to specific documents, it does not mandate delivery of the actual documents.

(n33)Footnote 33. Id., Rule 502(b)(2)(ii)(C).

In determining what is the appropriate form of disclosure under Regulation D for a reporting issuer whose last registration statement was filed more than two years ago and that does not have an annual report to shareholders or related proxy statement or a Form 10-K for its most recent fiscal year (e.g., the issuer has December 31 fiscal year and the offering is being made the following February), the issuer may base its disclosure on the most recently completed fiscal year for which an annual report to security holders or Form 10-K was timely distributed or filed. The issuer should supplement the information in the report used with information contained in any reports required to be filed under the Exchange Act since the distribution or filing of that reported and briefly describe the securities being offered, the use of the proceeds from the offering, and any material changes in the issuer's affairs not disclosed in the documents furnished. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 51.

(n34)Footnote 34. Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(A). Regulation A and Form 1-A are discussed in ch.5 infra.

(n35)Footnote 35. Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(B)(1). Regulation S-B, the counterpart of Regulation S-X for "small business issuers" is discussed in § 7.04[3] infra, and is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume D, Section J (Matthew Bender).

(n36)Footnote 36. Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(B)(2). Form SB-2, for the registration of securities to be sold to the public for cash by "small business issuers," is discussed in § 7.04[3] infra.

(n37)Footnote 37. Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(B)(3). In all offerings in excess of $2,000,000, if the issuer is a limited partnership and cannot obtain the required financial statements without unreasonable effort or expense, it may furnish financial statements that have been prepared on the basis of Federal income tax requirements and examined and reported on in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards by an independent public or certified accountant. Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(B)(2) and (3).

(n38)Footnote 38. Rule 502(b)(2)(i), Regulation D.

See Acorn Property Partners II Limited Partnership, SEC No-Action Letter, (pub. avail.1983), in which the staff took the position that the operating history of property being purchased by a real estate partnership and occupied by the seller under a net lease from the partnership was immaterial to offerees of partnership interests and therefore could be excluded from the partnership's offering material under Rule 502(b)(2)(i).The staff stated that since the tenant would operate the building and pay a fixed rent to the partnership regardless of the building's profitability, the operating history of the property would shed no light into the partnership's business or financial status and would be irrelevant; Peter I. Mason, Esq., SEC No-Action Letter, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,405 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983) (financial statement disclosure requirement of Rule 505 may be satisfied by furnishing an audited balance sheet as of the issuer's most recently completed fiscal year end).

(n39)Footnote 39. Rule 502(b)(2)(iii), Regulation D.

The issuer must also provide to each purchaser the opportunity to ask questions and to receive answers concerning the terms and conditions of the offering.

Among the exhibits that must be listed in the Regulation D offering material as exhibits that will be made available to purchasers on request are an opinion by counsel concerning the legality of the securities and a tax opinion if the tax consequences of the investment are material; presumably the tax consequences in an oil and gas offering will be material. Hopper, Kanouff, Smith and Peryam, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,300 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982); Sec. Act Rel. 6445, supra, Question 52.

See also Peter I. Mason Esq., SEC No-Action Letter [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,405 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983)(in the context of promotional entities raising capital to develop oil and gas leases by selling fractional undivided interests in leases, the Rule 502(b)(2)(iii) identification of exhibits requirement is satisfied by the industry practice of providing an opinion of counsel stating that the promotional entity is duly organized and has the power to convey title to any oil and gas lease in which it has an interest).

(n40)Footnote 40. See § 4.04 [4] infra for discussion of Rule 504, the exemption from registration for limited offerings and sales of securities not exceeding $1,000,000.

(n41)Footnote 41. See, e.g., Woodtrails-Seattle, Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter, (pub. avail. August 1, 1982)(although Rule 502(c) ordinarily prohibits the offer or sale of securities by general solicitation or advertising, a partnership may mail an offering statement to about 330 persons who have invested in other limited partnerships sponsored by the same general partner over the past three years without registration since each prospective offeree had a pre-existing business relationship with the general partner and the general partner believed that each prospective offeree had adequate financial and business experience to evaluate the investment). In Tax Investment Information Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,379 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1983) the staff refused to agree that a Louisiana company formed to analyze private placement offerings and provide the issuer analyses solely to accounting and legal professionals within the state would not be engaged in activities constituting general solicitation or advertising of offerings being sold in contemplation of a Regulation D exemption, although the publisher was independent from the issuers and offerings being analyzed.

See Nancy H. Blasberg, SEC No-Action Letter, (pub. avail.1986), in which the staff took the position that publication of a guide containing information about certain privately placed and closely held preferred stocks, that would be sold to institutional investors and investment banking firms, would not violate the prohibition against advertising in Rule 502(c) provided that the publisher was not employed by or acting as agent for any issuer mentioned in the guide, and the guide will only contain certain limited information on completed offerings.

In Webster Management Assured Return Equity Management Group Trust, SEC No- Action Letter, (pub. avail. Feb. 7, 1987), the staff refused to take a no action position with respect to the proposed sale by a broker-dealer of interests in a commingled trust to certain employee benefit plans in reliance on the Regulation D exemption. The staff noted that since the broker-dealer has no preexisting relationship with some of the plans that it proposed to solicit, and since some of the plans may not be accredited investors, the offering may be deemed a "general solicitation" for purposes of Rule 502(c), making the Regulation D exemption unavailable.

In H. B. Shaine & Co., Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. May 1, 1987), the staff took the position that a broker-dealer would not violate Section 502(c) in offering securities under Regulation D to investors whose sophistication and financial circumstances were determined by their responses to a questionnaire circulated by the broker-dealer to its established customers.

Although a solicitation is directed only to accredited investors, it will not necessarily be deemed in compliance with Rule 502(c). Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6445, n.1 supra, Question 60. In the same release, the staff declined to express an opinion on a proposed tombstone advertisement that would announce the completion of an offering since the requesting letter did not describe the proposed use of the announcement. The staff reasoned that the announcement of the completion of one offering could be an indirect solicitation for a new offering. Id. Volume 3.C.

In Texas Capital Network, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. February 23, 1994), the staff informed a service which matched business ventures with potential investors that its activities would not involve general solicitation or advertising pursuant to Rule 502(c), even though the service was publicized through articles prepared by business magazines and newspapers. All potential investors were required to represent that they were accredited or sophisticated investors and entrepreneurs did not receive lists of potential investors. See also Michigan Growth Capital Symposium, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. May 4, 1995); and The Colorado Capital Alliance, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. May 4, 1995). Concerning a rather unique set of circumstances, the SEC staff stated in Circle Creek Aqua Culture V, L.P., SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. March 26, 1993) that the issuer's previous public offering for a "blind pool," later deregistered without any sales, would constitute a "general solicitation" under Rule 502(c). The issuer had used public solicitation in connection with its aborted public offering and intended to use the services of the same broker/dealers in the proposed private offering who had worked in the previous public offering. The staff of the SEC stated in Pennsylvania Securities Commission, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. January 16, 1990) that a cold mass marketing to a minimum of 200 persons summarizing a private placement memorandum under Rules 505 and 506, even though made only to broker/dealers, investment advisers, accountants and attorneys, would constitute "general solicitation" under Rule 502(c).

(n42)Footnote 42. See § 4.05[4] infra for discussion of Rule 504, the exemption from registration for limited offers and sales of securities not exceeding $1,000,000.

(n43)Footnote 43. Section 4(2), the private offering exemption from registration, is discussed in § 4.03 supra.

(n44)Footnote 44. Section 2(11) is discussed in § 4.02 [2] supra.

In WCRS Group, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. Jan. 8, 1987), the staff expressed the view that the resale restrictions of Rule 502(d) would be satisfied if holders of unregistered shares acquired under Regulation D in an exchange offer resold those shares only to non-United States citizens or non-United States residents, particularly since there was no market for the shares in the United States and no reasonable likelihood that a market will develop.

(n45)Footnote 45. Rule 502(d)(1)-(3), Regulation D.

These three steps, while sufficient in themselves to satisfy the reasonable care standards, are not exclusive, and other actions by the issuer may satisfy this provision. Rule 502(d).

(n46)Footnote 46. Copies of Form D may be obtained from the Public Reference Branch of the Commission's main office or any of the Commission's regional or branch offices. There is no filing fee.

(n47)Footnote 47. Section 4(6), the exemption from registration for offers or sales to accredited investors, is discussed in § 4.08 supra.

(n48)Footnote 48. See Sec. Exch. Act Rel. No. 34-6825, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 84,404 (1989).

(n49)Footnote 49. Rule 503(a), Regulation D. Since the "first sale" in a minimum-maximum Rule 503 offering where subscription funds are held in escrow pending receipt of minimum subscriptions occurs upon receipt of the first subscription agreement and the deposit of the first funds into escrow, the issuer must file its first Form D within 15 days after the receipt of the first subscription agreement. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 82. As to an employee stock option plan, the first Form D should be filed within 15 days after the exercise of the first option. Id., Question 84.

Form D may be signed on behalf of the issuer by any duly authorized person, including the issuer's attorney. Id., Question 92.

(n50)Footnote 50. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8891 (Feb. 27, 2008), amending 17 C.F.R. § 230.503 and other rules.

(n51)Footnote 51. Mandated electronic filing of Form D became effective March 16, 2009.

(n52)Footnote 52. Section 3(b), which gives the Commission the authority to exempt from registration a securities offering with an aggregate offering price not exceeding $5 million, is discussed in ch.5 infra.

In Pacific Physician Services, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, (pub. avail. August 20, 1985), the staff took the position that a Rule 504 offering could be made during the 12 month period either preceding or following a Rule 506 offering without the offering price of securities sold pursuant to Rule 506 being aggregated to determine the amount of securities sold in the Rule 504 offering, since the Rule 506 offering was not pursuant to an exemption under Section 3(b). Rule 506 was enacted under Section 4(2).

(n53)Footnote 53. Section 5 (a) prohibits the sale of securities unless a registration statement is in effect.

If seven months before a proposed Rule 504 offering the issuer conducted a rescission offer under Rule 504 for securities sold in violation of Section 5 more than twelve months before the proposed offering, the aggregate offering price of the proposed offering should not be reduced by the amount of the rescission offer or the earlier offering in violation of Section 5. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 69. The staff of the Commission took the position that the rescission offer relates back to the offering in violation of Section 5 and, therefore, should not be deducted from the aggregate offering price for the proposed Rule 504 offering. See also the questions concerning the calculation of aggregate price under Rule 505 infra.

(n54)Footnote 54. Rule 504(a), Regulation D. The Division of Corporation Finance, however, has taken the position that the restriction as to investment companies should be construed to mean an investment company as that term is used in Section 3 of the Investment Company Act of 1940. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra. See Foley & Lardner, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. 1982) in which the Division opined that the availability of Rule 504 to an exempt investment company under Section 3 (c) of the Investment Company Act is dependent upon whether the individual offering is deemed public or private.

Rule 504 is available to a foreign private issuer that is not subject to the reporting requirements of Section 15 (d) of the Exchange Act and the securities of which are exempt from registration under Exchange Act Rule 12g3-2. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 62.

(n55)Footnote 55. Rule 501(c), Regulation D.

If the sole general partner of a real estate limited partnership contributes property to a program, the property need not be valued and included in the proceeds of the offering as part of the aggregate offering price if the property is contributed in exchange for a general partnership interest. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 31. If the owner of a mining or oil and gas property sells interests in the property to investors for cash and retains a royalty interest in the property, any subsequent royalty payments to the issuer need not be included in the aggregate offering price of the property interests, since the royalty payments are treated as operating expenses, not capitalized costs, for the property and are, therefore, not deemed to be part of the consideration received by the issuer for issuance of the securities. Id., Question 32.

Interest payments are not deemed to be consideration for the issuance of securities and need not be included in the aggregate offering price for securities acquired by installment payments. Id., Question 33.

Additional voluntary assessments that are undetermined at the time of the offering of interests in an oil and gas limited partnership and that may be called by the general partner for developmental drilling activities should not be included in the aggregate offering price of the original issuance unless they are required to be integrated with that issuance since the assessments may never be called, and if called, it is uncertain at what level they may be called. Id., Question 34. Mandatory, non contingent assessments for interests in an oil and gas limited partnership for which investors are personally liable, however, must be included in the aggregate offering price. Id., Question 35; Kim R. Clark, Esq., SEC No-Action Letter, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77, 359 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982).

An investor's irrevocable letter of credit delivered as part of its purchase of securities must be considered part of the aggregate offering price if the letter of credit is drawn against. In planning the transaction, the full amount of the letter of credit should be included in determining the aggregate offering price. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 36.

Proceeds from sales to foreign purchasers need not be included in the aggregate offering price. Preliminary Note 7 to Regulation D.

A capital call to be made by the controlling partner of a limited partnership need not be included in the calculation of the aggregate offering price for purposes of the dollar limitation of Rule 504. United States Cellular Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. June 22, 1990).

(n56)Footnote 56. Rule 501(c), Regulation D.

(n57)Footnote 57. Rule 501(c), Regulation D.

In Uptown Federal Savings & Loan Association SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. August 30, 1982), the Division of Corporation Finance took the position that voting trust certificates offered in exchange for the common shares of a savings and loan association resulting from a merger would not qualify for the exemption provided by Rule 504 since the post merger net worth of the resulting association was expected to exceed $500,000 (the maximum aggregate offering price in effect at the time), although the premerger book value of the shares exchanged was less than $500,000.

(n58)Footnote 58. Sec. Act Rel No 33-7644 [1999 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 86,114.

(n59)Footnote 59. Section 3(b), which gives the Commission the authority to exempt from registration a securities offering with an aggregate price not exceeding $5 million, and the particular exemptions adopted pursuant to the authority are discussed further in ch.5 infra.

(n60)Footnote 60. Section 5 (a) prohibits the sale of securities unless a registration statement is in effect.

If an issuer that proposes to conduct an equity offering under Rule 505 raised $2 million from the sale of debt instruments under Rule 505 during the eight months preceding the proposed equity offering, the $2 million must be deducted from the $5 million ceiling so that the issuer may raise up to $3 million in the proposed offering. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 67. If an issuer planning a Rule 505 offering conducted a Rule 506 offering ten months prior to the Rule 506 offering, the Rule 506 offering should not be counted in calculating the allowable aggregate offering price for the proposed Rule 505 offering since Rule 506 was issued under Section 4(2) rather than Section 3(b). Id., Question 68. However, the offering amounts in Rule 504 and Rule 505 offerings will be aggregated since both fall under Section 3(b) of the Securities Act. See In re Pacific Physician Services, Inc., 17 Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. (BNA) 1630 (1985).

The general principle on limiting the aggregate offering price set forth in Note 2 to Rule 504 is applicable to Rule 505 although it is not specifically restated in Rule 505. Note 2 to Rule 504 provides that if, as a result of one offering, an issuer exceeds the allowed aggregate offering price in a subsequent nonintegrated offering, the exemption for the first offering will not be affected. Id., Question 71.

(n61)Footnote 61. Rule 501(e), Regulation D.

Relatives of purchasers who are accredited investors need not be included in the calculation of the number of purchasers in a Rule 505 or 506 offering. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 59.

(n62)Footnote 62. So-called "bad boy" disqualifications from the use of SEC Regulation A are set out in Securities Act Rule 262, 17 C.F.R. § 230.262, and include such things as prior criminal convictions or enforcement proceedings.

An issuer that was censured as a broker pursuant to a Commission order is not prohibited from using Rule 505, since only issuers subject to the disqualifications for use of Regulation A would not be able to use Rule 505. Although one such disqualification occurs when the issuer is subject to a Commission order under Exchange Act Section 15(b), since a censure has no continuing force, the issuer would not be deemed to be subject to a Commission "order." Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6455, supra, Question 66.

(n63)Footnote 63. Rule 505(b)(iii), Regulation D.

The Commission has delegated authority to the Division of Corporation Finance to grant applications for relief from the issuer disqualification provisions of Rule 505. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6644, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 84, 002 (1986).

(n64)Footnote 64. 17 C.F.R. § 230.506.

(n65)Footnote 65. For purposes of Rule 506, the term "purchaser representative" is defined to be any person, or any person the issuer reasonably believes, that:

(1) is not an affiliate, director, officer, or other employee of the issuer, or beneficial owner of 10 percent or more of any class of the equity securities or 10 percent or more of the equity interest in the issuer, except where the purchaser is:

(a) a relative of the purchaser representative by blood, marriage, or adoption and not more remote than a first cousin;

(b) a trust or estate in which the purchaser representative and any persons related to him (as specified in paragraphs (a) above or (c) below) collectively have more than 50 percent of the beneficial interest (excluding contingent interest) or of which the purchaser representative serves as trustee, executor, or in any similar capacity; or

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.05

(c) a corporation or other organization of which the purchaser representative and persons related to him (as specified in paragraphs (a) or (b) above) collectively are the beneficial owners of more than 50 percent of the equity securities (excluding directors' qualifying shares) or equity interests;

(2) has such knowledge and experience in financial and business matters that he is capable of evaluating alone, or together with other purchaser representatives of the purchaser, or together with the purchaser, the merits and risks of the prospective investment;

(3) is acknowledged by the purchaser in writing, during the course of the transaction, to be his purchaser representative in connection with evaluating the merits and risks of the prospective investment; and

(4) discloses to the purchaser in writing, a reasonable time prior to the sale of securities to that purchaser any material relationship between himself or his affiliates and the issuer or its affiliates that then exists, that is mutually understood to be contemplated, or that has existed at any time during the previous two years, and any compensation received or to be received as a result of such relationship.

52 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.06

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.06 The Dealer Exemption--Section 4(3)

As previously discussed, Section 4(1) of the Securities Act exempts transactions by persons other than issuers, underwriters, or dealers. Specifically including dealers along with underwriters and issuers as persons ineligible to rely on section 4(1) clearly recognizes the key role that dealers play in the selling process that is a key aspect of distributions of securities. Indeed, Section 2(12) of the Securities Act defines dealer as "any person who engaged either for all or part of his time, directly, or indirectly, as agent, broker, or principal, in the business of offering, buying, selling or otherwise dealing or trading in securities issued by another person." n1 Nevertheless, in recognition of the fact that dealers engage in countless transactions every day as market participants involving securities that are not part of any distribution, and for which there is no reason to require compliance with registration and prospectus delivery requirements of section 5 of the Securities Act, section 4(3) provides a specific exemption from section 5 for transactions by dealers.

Section 4(3) is not, however, a simple exemption. Because of the key role of dealers as intermediaries in securities markets, section 4(3) prescribes its own set of exceptions to the exemption it creates, all of which are based on the key role that dealers play in the distribution of securities, and which are designed to assure that in that context the prospectus delivery requirements of Section 5 of the Act will be met. These exceptions operate to require all dealers to comply with section 5 prospectus delivery requirements n2 for certain periods of time for transactions in any security that is part of a public offering by an issuer or by or through an underwriter. The section 4(3) exceptions to the exemption are for:

(A) transactions taking place prior to the expiration of forty days after the first date upon which the security was bona fide first offered to the public by the issuer or by or through an underwriter,

(B) transactions in a security as to which a registration statement has been filed taking place prior to the expiration of forty days from the effective date of such registration statement or prior to the expiration of forty days after the first date upon which the security was bona fide offered to the public by the issuer or by or through an underwriter after such effective date, whichever is later (excluding in the computation of such forty days any time during which a stop order issued under section 8 is in effect as to the security), or such shorter period as the Commission may specify by rules and regulations or order, and

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.06

(C) transactions as to securities constituting the whole or part of an unsold allotment to or subscription by such dealer as a participant in the distribution of such securities by the issuer or by or through an underwriter. n3

The forty day prospectus delivery period for dealers is extended to ninety days after effective date or the bona fide public offering date with respect to transactions in securities that are included in a registration statement filed by an issuer when securities of that issuer have not previously been sold pursuant to an earlier effective registration statement. n4 As exception (C) also makes clear, dealers who are part of a selling group or syndicate, and who thus are direct participants in the offering, are subject to section 5 prospectus delivery when selling any part of an allotment of the securities, without regard to time periods. n5

The construction of section 4(3) is such that in the case of registered securities, the dealer exemption will not be available to any dealer participating in the distribution so long as it has an unsold allotment or subscription. However, dealers who are merely trading and are not participants in the distribution will be subject to the provisions of Section 5 of the Securities Act only during the applicable forty or ninety day period. n6

Further complicating Section 4(3), the exceptions to the exemptions are themselves modified further by SEC Rule 174 under the Securities Act. n7 Rule 174 identifies numerous exceptions to the forty or ninety prospectus delivery requirements for dealers. Rule 174(b), for example, provides that no prospectus need be delivered under section 4(3) if the issuer is a reporting company under the Exchange Act immediately prior to the filing of a registration statement. This exception is particularly meaningful for distributions of securities in connection with corporate merger or reorganization transactions. n8 Rule 174 eliminates the statutory period with respect to delivery of a prospectus on resales of securities of an issuer which, immediately prior to the time of filing the registration statement, was subject to the reporting requirements under the Exchange Act, no matter how soon after the public offering the resale occurs. Rule 174 shortens the statutory period to 25 days with respect to the security of an issuer that is not subject to the Exchange Act reporting requirements immediately prior to the time of filing the registration statement, if, as of the offering date, the security is listed on a national securities exchange or the Nasdaq Stock Market. Rule 174 also provides relief for qualifying "shelf" registered offerings. n9 Nevertheless, Rule 174 also makes clear:

Nothing in this section shall affect the obligation to deliver a prospectus pursuant to the provisions of section 5 of the Act by a dealer who is acting as an underwriter with respect to the securities involved or who is engaged in a transaction as to securities constituting the whole or a part of an unsold allotment to or subscription by such dealer as a participant in the distribution of such securities by the issuer or by or through an underwriter. n10

In 2005, Rule 174 was modified to accommodate newly adopted Rule 172 under the Securities Act. Rule 172 n11 Under Rule 172, a prospectus meeting the requirements of Section 10(a) will be deemed to accompany or precede the delivery of a security sold under a registration statement if such a prospectus is timely filed in EDGAR, the SEC's electronic filing system. Compliance with the Section 4(3) dealer exemption requirements for prospectus delivery may now be met by compliance with the provisions of Rule 172. n12

The construction of section 4(3) creates a dilemma for dealers in circumstances involving registration and distribution of securities by issuers with securities already issued and outstanding. Dealers may trade in the outstanding securities without complying with the prospectus requirements. The SEC has stated that it is unlawful for a dealer to effect transactions in unregistered securities which are about to be registered, but that dealers may ordinarily trade in other outstanding securities of the same class which are not being registered or involved in a distribution or public offering. n13 There is no guidance, however, for the dealer in distinguishing between the outstanding shares and the newly offered shares. Thus, despite the fact that certain securities in which the dealer may propose to trade are already outstanding, the dealer, in order to insure compliance with the Securities Act, should observe the prospectus requirements for the statutory period in connection with all transactions in securities of the class in question. n14

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The word "broker" was included in this definition to "subject brokers to the same advertising restrictions that are imposed upon dealers, so as to prevent the broker from being used as a cloak for the sale of securities." H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1933), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section E (Matthew Bender).

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 5(b) provides:

It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly--

(1) to make use of any means or instruments of transportation or communication in interstate commerce or of the mails to carry or transmit any prospectus relating to any security with respect to which a registration statement has been filed under this title, unless such prospectus meets the requirements of section 10; or

(2) to carry or cause to be carried through the mails or in interstate commerce any such security for the purpose of sale or for delivery after sale, unless accompanied or preceded by a prospectus that meets the requirements of subsection (a) of section 10.

The Securities Act is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

(n3)Footnote 3. Securities Act § 4(3)(A)-(C), 15 U.S.C. §§ 77c(3)(A)-(C).

(n4)Footnote 4. This extension of the statutory prospectus delivery period was added to section 4(3) as part of amendments in 1964 designed to address "hot issue" problems, and to make information available to investors during the course of active solicitation and trading of new issues in the aftermarket. A period of ninety days was seen as a more realistic appraisal of the time during which the distribution process continues in the case of many new issues. See S. Rep. No. 739, 88th Cong., 1st Sess. 28 (1963); see also H.R. Rep. No. 1418, 88th Cong., 1st Sess. 31 (1964), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section E (Matthew Bender).

See also Securities Act Rel. No. 33-4725, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,127 (1964).

(n5)Footnote 5. The availability of section 4(3) thus depends upon an examination of the timing of sales in relation to a bona fide public offering date. In UBS Asset Management (New York), Inc. v. Wood-Gundy Corp., 914 F. Supp. 66 (S.D.N.Y. 1966), a defendant dealer argued that section 4(3) applied to transactions in debt securities that took place more than forty days after the first date upon which the securities were offered to the public. The complaint, however, alleged that the subject securities were sold on various dates and had different maturity dates. Plaintiffs claimed that the securities were actually offered to the public on various dates in separate offerings. The court concluded that whether the sales were separate offerings, and thus subject to separate scrutiny under section 4(3), is a question of fact, and denied the defendant dealer's motion to dismiss.

For the purpose of determining a dealer's exemption under Section 4(3), a "bona fide" offer to the public may occur when the stock first appears in the "pink sheets" even though the stock may be unregistered, and thus illegally offered. Kubik v. Goldfield, 479 F.2d 472, 475 (3d Cir. 1973).

See also Lustgarten v. Teller, 304 F. Supp. 771 (E.D. Pa. 1969); SEC v. North American Research & Development

Corp., 280 F. Supp. 106, 125 (S.D.N.Y. 1968) , aff'd in part, modified in part, 424 F.2d 63 (2d Cir.1970) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See S. Rep. No. 1036, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. 14 (1954), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section E (Matthew Bender).

(n7)Footnote 7. 17 C.F.R. § 230.174.

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Friedman, Billings, Ramsay Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2003 SEC No-Act LEXIS 459 (Mar. 25, 2003).

To facilitate reliance on section 4(3) by allowing the Rule 174(b) exception to prospectus delivery requirements that would otherwise apply, the SEC has often granted no-action advice allowing a successor entity in such reorganization transactions to be treated as an issuer subject to Exchange Act reporting requirements for purposes of Rule 174. See, e.g., Weatherford International, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2002 SEC No-Act LEXIS 612 (June 25, 2002); ConocoPhillips, SEC No-Action Letter, 2002 SEC No-Act LEXIS 688 (Aug. 23, 2002).

(n9)Footnote 9. Additionally, Rule 174 modifies or eliminates the statutory period with respect to certain other offerings. See Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2862. The rules under the Securities Act are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender). Item 502(e) of Regulation S-K is designed to insure that dealers will be apprised of their obligations to deliver a prospectus by requiring a statement to be included in the prospectus stating the date on which the relevant 40- or 90-day period will expire.

If a post-effective amendment is filed after the expiration of the prospectus delivery period for the initial public offering, the statement specified in Item 502(e) of Regulation S-K is not required to be set forth in the post-amendment prospectus, since a new forty or ninety day period does not begin. However, if the post-effective amendment is filed before the end of the prospectus delivery period, the specified statement must be included. In such a case the period specified would begin with the effective date of the registration statement or the commencement of the public offering, whichever is later. Regulation S-K is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume D, Section K (Matthew Bender).

(n10)Footnote 10. Rule 174(f), 17 C.F.R. § 230.174(f).

See also SEC v. Great Lakes Equities Co., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19819 (E.D. Mich. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 11. 17 C.F.R. § 230.172.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Sec. Act Rule 174(h), 17 C.F.R. § 174(h), which provides:

Any obligation pursuant to Section 4(3) of the Act and this section to deliver a prospectus, other than pursuant to paragraph (g) of this section, may be satisfied by compliance with the provisions of Rule 172.

Paragraph (g) of Rule 174 applies to offerings of securities by a "blank check company," for which the statutory period for prospectus delivery specified in Section 4(3) will not terminate until 90 days after the date funds and securities are released from the escrow or trust account.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Sec. Act. Rel. No. 6383, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 77,328 (1982).

(n14)Footnote 14. The exemption provided by Section 4(3) is expressly limited to transactions by a dealer. In some circumstances a broker-dealer may not qualify as a dealer within the definition contained in Section 2(12) of the Securities Act. In Bank of America Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter (June 11, 2009), and J.P. Morgan Securities, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (June 5, 2007), complex transactions in "baskets" of securities by customers were addressed in circumstances in which the basket of securities sold by a dealer includes securities of an affiliate. Section 2(12) of the Securities Act limits the definition of "dealer" to a person in the business of dealing or trading "securities issued by another person." When a broker-dealer offers or sells securities issued by its affiliate, those securities are not considered as being "issued by another person," and thus a broker-dealer selling those affiliate securities would not be deemed to be a dealer under Section 2(12) and the Section 4(3) exemption would not be available. In these no-action letters the SEC staff addressed the concern, confirming that the Section 4(3) dealer exemption would be available for sales of affiliate stock in order to facilitate customer transactions in particular "baskets" of stocks, and under certain conditions.

53 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.07

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.07 Broker Transactions--Section 4(4)

[1] Brokerage Transactions--Generally

Securities Act section 4(4) n1 provides an exemption from the registration requirements of section 5 of the Securities Act for "brokers' transactions executed upon customers' orders on any exchange or in the over-the-counter market but not the solicitation of such orders." Ordinary brokerage transactions in the context of a normal trading environment bear no indicia of a distribution of securities. On the other hand, particular circumstances may be such that a "brokerage" transaction is in fact part of a secondary distribution of securities in which the broker plays a facilitating role. A broker who is aware of circumstances indicating that the person for whose account securities are being sold is an underwriter with respect to the securities, or that the transaction is part of a distribution of securities of the issuer, does not effect an "ordinary" brokerage transaction and may not rely on section 4(4). n2 The greatest attention to section 4(4) of the Securities Act has been devoted to these circumstances, in which a broker, acting as agent, may in fact be a link in the chain of a distribution and thus precluded from relying on the exemption for brokers' transactions in effecting a sale.

In modern analyses and applications, the section 4(4) exemption has evolved alongside SEC Rule 144, which creates a safe harbor for sales of securities by control persons and others in circumstances that could otherwise force compliance with the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of section 5 of the Securities Act. n3 Assuring the availability of the section 4(4) exemption for brokerage transactions is an important aspect of the Rule 144 safe harbor, and doing so requires assurance that the broker effecting transactions is not deemed to be acting as or for an underwriter. Bona fide "brokers' transactions" are thus an essential element of Rule 144. Rule 144 provides that the term "brokers transactions" set out in Section 4(4) of the Act includes any transaction in which the broker:

- (a) does no more than execute customers' orders to sell securities on an agency basis;
- (b) receives no more than the customary broker's commission; and
- (c) does not solicit customers' order to buy the securities.

Rule 144 further provides that the broker must be satisfied, based on reasonable inquiry, that the person for whose account the securities are sold is not an underwriter with respect to the securities. n4 Transactions must also conform to the manner-of-sale requirements set out in the Rule.

As a general principle involved in all section 4(4) considerations, however, a broker relying on the exemption must make whatever inquiries are necessary to determine that the transaction is not part of an unlawful distribution. Indeed, as early as 1962 the SEC offered guidance on what is required generally by brokers who rely on section 4(4):

The amount of inquiry called for necessarily varies with the circumstances of particular cases. A dealer who is offered a modest amount of a widely traded security by a responsible customer, whose lack of relationship to the issuer is well known to him, may ordinarily proceed with considerable confidence. On the other hand, when a dealer is offered a substantial block of a little-known security, either by persons who appear reluctant to disclose exactly where the securities came from, or where the surrounding circumstances raise a question as to whether or not the ostensible sellers may be merely intermediaries for controlling persons or statutory underwriters, then searching inquiry is called for. n5

Thus far the language and purpose of the section appear plain and simple. But, as so often happens, through interpretation the meaning of the section became vague. For example, assume that X, a controlling person, wishes to sell securities through a broker. Assuming that X complies with the quantitative and other limitations of Rule 144, is it not reasonable to assume that such a transaction is entitled to the Section 4(4) exemption? After all, the section does exempt "brokers' transactions." But the position was taken at an early date that the exemption applies only to the broker's part of the transaction and does not extend to the selling customer, who must find a separate exemption. n6 Consequently, what appeared to be a transaction exemption has become a "brokers' exemption," even though the broker is acting as the seller's agent. n7 In practical effect, the ordinary seller may rely on Section 4(1) which exempts "transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer," for "seller" falls within none of these categories. n8 But the problem is intensified when a person in a control relationship with the issuer wishes to sell securities through a broker. The point is that the exemption contained in Section 4(1) may not be available to the control person for the reason that the control person is an "issuer" or an "underwriter," as defined in the last sentence of Section 2(a)(11) of the Securities Act. n9

[2] Sales by Controlling Persons in Brokerage Transactions

The registration requirements of Section 5 apply both to the distribution of a new issue and to a redistribution of outstanding securities which "takes on all the characteristics of a new offering by reason of the control of the issuer possessed by those responsible for the offering." n10 Thus, secondary distributions by controlling shareholders must be registered unless an exemption for particular sales is available to cover all aspects of the transaction. If a broker is selling for a controlling person in connection with a distribution, that broker is acting as an underwriter rather than as a broker. Consequently, the sales on behalf of the controlling person are not "brokers' transactions" and are not exempt under Section 4(4). If the securities are not registered, the broker will have violated section 5, and the controlling person will likewise be exposed to liability as participating in or aiding and abetting the Section 5 violation. n11 It is obvious, then, that the terms "underwriter" and "distribution" are of prime importance for the purpose of determining the availability of an exemption for sales by controlling persons.

As discussed previously, n12 the last sentence of Section 2(11) defines a controlling person as an "issuer" for the purpose of determining whether the person who sells for him is an "underwriter." The purpose of that last sentence is to require registration of secondary distributions through underwriters by controlling stockholders. n13 A common example occurs when one makes a secondary distribution of securities for the account of a person who is in a control relationship with the issuer of the securities. Accordingly, when Section 2(11) is read in conjunction with Section 4(1)("transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer") and Section 4(4), the following principles emerge:

- If X is in control of ABC, Inc., she is an "issuer" for the purpose of making any person who purchases from him or sells for him in connection with a public distribution of his securities an underwriter.
- If X, the controlling person, purchases her securities with a view to distribution, she herself is an "underwriter," making the exemption under Section 4(1) unavailable to her. n14

It should be stressed, however, that in the foregoing examples or in similar situations involving controlling persons, the Section 4(1) exemption is unavailable to the seller and the Section 4(4) exemption is unavailable to the broker only if the "underwriter" takes from the "issuer" with a view to distribution. Put another way, all underwriting involves distribution. Thus if B a broker, sells securities for X, a controlling person, and the transaction does not involve a "distribution," B is acting as a broker rather than as an underwriter, thus making the Section 4(4) exemption available to him and the Section 4(1) exemption available to X, assuming that X is also not engaged in a distribution.

Prior to the Haupt case, n15 the position of the Commission was to the effect that even "an underwriter selling for a controlling person over the exchange might conceivably be entitled to the exemption under Section 4(4) if his activities were confined strictly to the usual brokerage functions, but that as a practical matter, his activities could not be so confined in connection with a distribution of any substantial block of securities." n16 The Commission went on to state, however, that such an interpretation was given before it realized that "large blocks can frequently be sold without solicitations or other sales activity." (Approximately 93,000 unregistered shares had been distributed in such a manner by Ira Haupt & Co. for the Schulte interests, controlling shareholders in Park & Tilford). Accordingly, against the background of a "very different market," the pre-1946 interpretation, to some extent at least, was "overruled."

The actual holding in the Haupt case was that a broker making a distribution for a controlling shareholder acts as an underwriter and may not rely on the exemption in Section 4(4) for brokers' transactions. The opinion took the position that Section 4(4) was intended to distinguish between "trading" (exempt) and "distribution" (nonexempt) transactions. Much was made of this distinction; but the opinion caused confusion among brokers because of the absence of any concrete definitions of "trading" and "distribution." In short, the Haupt case left open the question of when a broker was acting as a broker rather than as an underwriter. Today, however, Rule 144 provides objective standards for persons other than the issuer for selling restricted and control securities without Section 5 registration. The rule establishes conditions under which persons will not be deemed to be engaged in a distribution and therefore no underwriters will be involved. n17

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. The section 4(4) exemption is not available to a registered representative acting as an agent who has reasonable grounds to believe that his or her principal is an underwriter with respect to the securities being sold. In re Carly, Admin. Proc. File No. 3-11626, Init. Dec. Rel. No. 292, 2005 SEC LEXIS 1745, *108 (July 18, 2005).

(n3)Footnote 3. Rule 144, previously introduced in § 4.02[4], is discussed in detail in ch.6 infra. The rules under the Securities Act are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

(n4)Footnote 4. Rule 144(g)(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(g)(3).

See also Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, SEC No-Action Letter (May 30, 2001) (Where the receives an unsolicited customer order relating to securities for which it is not a market-maker, the broker's execution of the order with an affiliated broker-dealer that is a market-maker in the security would still qualify as a broker's transaction as defined in Rule 144 notwithstanding the affiliated market-maker).

(n5)Footnote 5. "Distribution by Broker-Dealers of Unregistered Securities," Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4445 (Feb. 2, 1962).

See also Wonsover v. SEC, 205 F.3d 408 (D.C. Cir. 2000) .

In Wonsover, although it was not disputed that the accounts and sales involved a statutory underwriter, the broker claimed he had made a reasonable inquiry and was ignorant of that fact at the time of the transactions. The court disagreed. The broker effected transactions in a substantial block of a little known and thinly-traded security under circumstances raising questions not only as to whether the sellers may have been intermediaries for controlling persons or statutory underwriters, but also whether they even existed. The broker's inquiry was deemed insufficient, and his petition to overturn an SEC determination that he had violated section 5 was rejected.

(n6)Footnote 6. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-131, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 1551.04 (1934); Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33- 4669, CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2920 (1964).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Sommer, Who's "In Control?" S.E.C., 21 Bus. Law. 559 (1966); Enstam & Kamen, Control and the Institutional Investor, 23 Bus. Law. 289 (1968). See also SEC v. American Beryllium Corp., 303 F. Supp. 912, 915 (S.D.N.Y. 1969) ; Pennaluna Ltd. v. SEC, 410 F.2d 861 (9th Cir. 1969) , cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1007 (1970) ; Myzel v. Fields, 386 F.2d 718 (8th Cir. 1967) , cert. denied, 390 U.S. 951 (1968) ; Anderson v. Francis I. DuPont & Co., 291 F. Supp. 705 (D. Minn. 1968) ; Klapmeier v. Telecheck Int'l, Inc., 315 F. Supp. 1360 (D. Minn. 1970) , rev'd on damages, 482 F.2d 247 (8th Cir. 1973) , SEC v. International Development Corp., 469 F.2d 20, 28 (10th Cir. 1972) ; Note, 3 ALR Fed. 645 (1971) . See also Sennott v. Rodman & Renshaw, 414 U.S. 926, 94 S. Ct. 224, 226, 38 L. Ed.2d 160, 162 (1973) ; Ayers v. Wolfenbarger, 491 F.2d 8, 15 (5th Cir. 1974) ; Drier v. Tarpon Oil Company, 522 F.2d 199 (5th Cir. 1975) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Of course, even a non-controlling person may become a statutory underwriter, e.g., where the securities are purchased as part of a private placement and immediately resold. See § 4.02[2] supra.

(n9)Footnote 9. The concept of "control" is discussed in detail in § 4.02[2][b] supra..

(n10)Footnote 10. Ira Haupt & Co., 23 SEC 589, 604 (1946) . See also H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 13-14 (1933).

(n11)Footnote 11. Apparently the only case where it may make a difference whether the controlling person has violated section 5 herself or has aided and abetted its violation is where unusual circumstances make it more advantageous to proceed against the controlling person alone without joining the broker-underwriter.

The aiding and abetting concept applies to securities transactions, SEC v. North American Research and Development Corp., 424 F.2d 63 (2d Cir. 1970) . However, the Supreme Court held in Central Bank v. First Interstate Bank, N.A., 511 U.S. 164, 114 S. Ct. 1439 (1994) , that there is no private right of action for aiding and abetting violations under Section 10 (b) of the Exchange Act.

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 4.02[2] supra.

(n13)Footnote 13. "It is clear from Section 4(1), read in conjunction with Section 2(11), that public distributions by controlling persons through underwriters, are intended generally to be subject to the registration and prospectus requirements of the Act." Ira Haupt & Co., 23 SEC at 601 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Similarly, the exemption under Section 4(1) is not available to the original (corporate) issuer and that in Section 4(4) is not available to a dealer making a distribution of its securities. Stadia Oil & Uranium Co. v. Wheelis, 251 F.2d 269 (10th Cir. 1957) .

In one of the earliest cases imposing criminal penalties for the sale of unregistered securities by control persons, one defendant, Louis Wolfson, was sentenced to one year in prison and a $100,000 fine. Another defendant, Elkin Gerbert, received a sentence of six months and a $50,000 fine. United States v. Wolfson, 405 F.2d 779 (2d Cir. 1968) , cert. denied, 394 U.S. 946 (1969) .

Wolfson later sued his stockbroker and other persons for failure to inform him that registration was required, but the claim was rejected on the ground that his prior conviction in a criminal proceeding stopped him from relitigating questions directly determined in that criminal prosecution. Wolfson v. Baker, 444 F. Supp. 1124, 1130 (M.D. Fla. 1978) . See also Rachal v. Hill, 435 F.2d 59, 62 (5th Cir. 1970) , cert. denied, 403 U.S. 904 (1971) ; Shore v. Parklane Hosiery Company, 565 F.2d 815 (2d Cir. 1977) , aff'd, 99 S. Ct. 645 (1979) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Ira Haupt & Co., 23 SEC at 604 .

(n16)Footnote 16. 23 SEC at 605 , supra. (Emphasis added.)

(n17)Footnote 17. Rule 144 is discussed in detail in ch.6 infra.

54 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.08

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.08 Exempt Offers and Sales of Promissory Notes Secured by Certain Real Estate--Section 4(5)

As part of the Securities Acts Amendments of 1975, Congress added a new subsection (5) to Section 4. n1 Section 4(5) exempts transactions involving offers or sales of promissory notes directly secured by either a first lien on a single parcel of real estate upon which is located a dwelling or other residential or commercial structure, or by participation interest in such a note. If these securities are originated by a state or federal supervised savings and loan association, savings bank or commercial bank, n2 they must be offered and sold subject to the following conditions:

- the minimum aggregate sales price per purchaser must not be less than $250,000;
- the purchaser must pay cash either at the time of sale or within 60 days; and
- each purchaser shall buy for his own account only. n3

If these securities are issued by a mortgagee approved by the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the mortgagor must comply with the three criteria set forth in the previous paragraph and the securities must be offered or sold only to savings and loan associations, savings banks, commercial banks or similarly regulated banking institutions, or to regulated insurance companies.

As stated in the Congressional Record:

The objective of this amendment is to aid the development of a liquid secondary mortgage market in an effort to generate funds for the housing industry and other real estate needs. To accomplish this objective the amendment would exempt from the registration requirements of the Securities Act certain transactions involving mortgage related securities. The exemption is narrowly drafted and would apply only with respect to investors of very substantial resources. ... n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Securities Acts Amendments of 1975, § 30, 89 Stat. 169 (1975).

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 4(5)(A)(i). The Securities Act is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

Section 4(5)(A)(ii) provides that such securities may also be originated by a mortgagee approved by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development if they are offered or sold to a savings and loan association, commercial bank, state regulated insurance company, "or the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, the Federal National Mortgage Association, or the Government National Mortgage Association."

See also Institutional Securities Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter (pub. avail. June 11, 1976).

(n3)Footnote 3. Section 4(5)(C).

(n4)Footnote 4. Cong. Rec., S6188 (daily ed. April 17, 1975).

55 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.09

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.09 Exempt Offers and Sales to Accredited Investors--Section 4(6)

As Title VI of the Small Business Investment Incentive Act of 1980, Congress enacted the "Small Business Issuers' Simplification Act of 1980" that added subsection (6) to Section 4 of the Securities Act. n1 Section 4(6) is an exemption available to cover sales by issuers to "accredited persons." As discussed below, accredited persons are defined in Section 2(15) of the Securities Act, and SEC Rule 215, and generally include persons and entities which possess financial sophistication and substantial economic strength. Section 4(6) restricts the manner of sales (no advertising or public solicitation) but does not limit the number of accredited persons who may be purchasers. There is a $5 million dollar limitation on the offering, and the issuer must file a notice of sales with the SEC on Form D

Section 2(15) of the Securities Act, defines "accredited investor" to mean:

[A] bank as defined in section 3(a)(2) whether acting in its individual or fiduciary capacity; an insurance company as defined in paragraph (13) of this subsection; an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 or a business development company as defined in section 2(a)(48) of that Act; a Small Business Investment Company licensed by the Small Business Administration; or an employee benefit plan, including an individual retirement account, which is subject to the provisions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, if the investment decision is made by a plan fiduciary, as defined in section 3(21) of such Act, which is either a bank, insurance company, or registered investment adviser. n2

The term "accredited investor" is also defined to include any person who qualifies as an accredited investor under whatever rules and regulations the Commission may prescribe, based upon such factors as financial sophistication, net worth, knowledge, and experience in financial matters or amount of assets under management. The SEC adopted Rule 215 under the Securities Act to broaden the scope of accredited investors eligible under section 4(6). n3 The Rule 215 array of eligible accredited investors conforms to the eligibility requirements prescribed in Rule 501(a) of Regulation D under the Securities Act.

Since the rationale underlying the adoption of Section 4(6) is that sophisticated investors can "fend for themselves" when purchasing securities in a small private offering, Section 4(6) does not specify information required to be furnished by the issuer to accredited investors. n4 However, Form D, the uniform notice-of-sales form for offerings made in reliance on Regulation D must also be filed by issuers who sell securities under Section 4(6). n5 Form D must be filed by the issuer within fifteen days after the first sale of securities is made in reliance on the exemption. n6

For the section 4(6) exemption to be available a purchaser must be an accredited investor at the time of the transaction. In Butler v. Phlo Corporation, n7 a defendant seller sought to avoid civil liability under section 12(a)(1) of the Securities Act on the ground that the plaintiff purchaser should be considered an accredited investor because he was previously a director and executive officer of the company. Accredited investors include persons who are directors, executive officers or general partners of the issuer. However, it was undisputed in Butler that the plaintiff was no longer an officer or director of the defendant issuer at the time he exercised an option to purchase 20,000 shares of the company's stock, or at the time he received those shares. Accredited investor status is not granted to former directors and officers, and thus the court ruled that no exemption under section 4(6) was available.

In practical terms, the utility of relying on section 4(6) to effect an offering solely to accredited investors is limited relative to the safe harbor provided for offerings pursuant to Rule 506 under Regulation D of the Securities Act. As illustrated in Butler, discussed above, there is no room for error. Offers and sales must be made solely to accredited investors, and there is no reasonable belief standard as to investor accreditation. n8 Moreover, the $5 million limit on section 4(6) offerings may be unworkable. On the other hand, Rule 506 under Regulation D permits offering to include up to 35 non-accredited purchasers when certain conditions are met, and there is no amount limitation. Potential integration of offerings under section 4(6) versus those carried out under Rule 506 is another meaningful consideration. In James F. Glaza, n9 although all purchasers in a series of offerings were accredited investors, section 4(6) was not available for one of those offerings which, when integrated with the others, pushed the aggregate offering over the $5 million limit. Section 4(6) is not a safe harbor, and established integration criteria will be applied to determine whether several offerings are in fact part of a single offering. In Glaza, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that although section 4(6) would not cover all of the offerings, the seller could nevertheless bring the disqualifying offering into compliance under Rule 506 of Regulation D because all investors were accredited and there was no general advertising or solicitation.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Small Business Investment Incentive Act of 1980, Pub. L. No. 96-477, 94 Stat. 2294, Section 602 (Act of October 21, 1980).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 77b(15).

(n3)Footnote 3. Rule 215, 17 C.F.R. § 230.215, was adopted in Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-9, [1981-1982 Transfer] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 83,106 (1981). It defines the term "accredited investor" to include:

- (1) any savings and loan association or other institution specified in section 3(a)(5)(A) of the Act whether such institution is acting in its individual or fiduciary capacity;
- (2) any broker or dealer registered pursuant to section 15 of the Exchange Act;
- (3) any employee benefit plan established and maintained by a state or its political subdivisions or any agency or instrumentality of a state or its political subdivisions if such plan has total assets in excess of $5 million;

(4) any employee benefit plan under ERISA, if the investment decision is made by a plan fiduciary, as defined under ERISA, which is a savings and loan association, or if the employee benefit plan has total assets in excess of $5,000,000 or, if a self-directed plan, with investment decisions made solely by persons that are accredited investors;

(5) any private business development company as defined in section 202(c)(22) of the Investment Advisors Act of 1940;

(6) any organization described in section 501(a)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, corporation, Massachusetts or similar trust, or partnership, not formed for the specific purpose of acquiring the securities offered, with total assets in excess of $5,000,000;

(7) any director, executive officer, or general partner of the issuer of the securities being offered or sold, or any director, executive officer, or general partner of a general partner of that issuer;

(8) any natural person whose individual net worth, or joint net worth with that person's spouse, at the time of his purchase exceeds $1,000,000;

(9) any natural person who had an individual income in excess of $200,000 in each of the two most recent years or joint income with that person's spouse in excess of $300,000 in each of those years and has a reasonable expectation of reaching the same income level in the current year;

(10) any trust which holds assets in excess of $5,000,000, not formed for the specific purpose of acquiring the securities offered, whose purchase is directed by a sophisticated person as described in Rule 506(b)(2)(ii); and

(11) any entity in which all of the equity owners are accredited investors.

(n4)Footnote 4. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6256, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 82,686 (1980).

(n5)Footnote 5. Form D under the Securities Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section D, (Matthew Bender), was adopted in final form in Sec. Act. Rel. 33-6389, [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 83, 106 (1982). See 1933 Act rule 503, Regulation D, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

(n6)Footnote 6. General Instructions, Form D.

(n7)Footnote 7. CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 91,499, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10809 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

(n8)Footnote 8. Rule 508 of Regulation D, 17 C.F.R. § 230.508, provides that an issuer will not lose the exemption when there is a "good faith and reasonable attempt" to comply with the accredited investor provisions of Regulation D.

See also Faye L. Roth Revocable Trust v. UBS PaineWebber, Inc., 323 F.Supp.2d 1279 (S.D. Fla. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Admin. Proc. File No 3-11012, Init. Dec. Rel. No. 293, 2005 SEC LEXIS 1798 (July 21, 2005) .

56 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 Exempt Transactions Under Section 4 of the Securities Act

1-4 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 4.10

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 4.10 Regulation S: Exempt Offers and Sales Made Outside the United States

Although not an exemption under section 4 of the Securities Act as such, Regulation S under the Actⁿ¹ establishes two "safe harbor" exemptions from registration for offers and sales of securities that occur outside the United States. One safe harbor in Regulation S applies to offers and sales by issuers, securities professionals involved in the distribution process pursuant to contract, their respective affiliates, and persons acting on behalf of any of them (the "issuer safe harbor"). The other (the "resale safe harbor") applies to resales by persons other than the issuer, securities professionals involved in the distribution process, their respective affiliates, and persons acting on their behalf. Regulation S operates to exempt offers and sales of securities that are deemed to be made outside the United States. An offer, sale or resale that satisfies all conditions of the applicable safe harbor in Regulation S is deemed to be outside the U.S., and thus not subject to registration requirements of section 5.

Regulation S is based on a territorial approach to section 5 of the Securities Act. In its adopting Release, the SEC observed that registration of securities is intended to protect the U.S. capital markets and investors purchasing in U.S. markets, whether U.S. or foreign nationals. Principles of comity and the reasonable expectations of participants in global markets justify reliance on laws applicable in jurisdictions outside the United States to define requirements for transactions effected in those jurisdictions. Thus, the SEC concluded, the territorial approach recognizes the primacy of the laws in which a market is located.ⁿ² This in turn facilitates capital formation by companies abroad, and recognizes the development of international trading markets and the significant participation by U.S. investors in foreign markets.

The availability of either safe harbor in Regulation S is subject to two principal conditions, which are themselves controlled by key definitions. First, the offer or sale of securities must take place in an "offshore transaction." An offshore transaction is one in which the offer is not made to a person in the U.S., and the purchaser is, or is reasonably believed to be, outside the U.S. at the time of the sale or is made through the facilities of an established foreign securities exchange or a "designated offshore securities market."ⁿ³ Second, to qualify under Regulation S no "directed selling efforts" may be made in the U.S. in connection with the transaction. "Directed selling efforts" means any activity undertaken for the purpose of, or that could reasonably be expected to have the effect of, conditioning the market in the United States for any of the securities being offered under Regulation S.ⁿ⁴ Such activity includes advertising in a publication having a general circulation in the U.S. that refers to the offering of securities being made in reliance on Regulation S.ⁿ⁵

In a March 1998 Interpretive Release the SEC addressed considerations involved with Internet communications, and whether an offering of securities made on the Internet to non-U.S. investors could be considered to be an offer of the securities in the U.S., such that "directed selling efforts" in the U.S. would disqualify reliance on Regulation S. In the Release the SEC counseled that an issuer that undertakes to effect an overseas offering via the Internet will remain eligible for Regulation S provided that the Web pages contain prominent statements indicating that the offering is made only outside the U.S., and that the issuer also implements precautionary procedures reasonably designed to guard against sales to persons in the United States. n6

General conditions being satisfied, the particular safe harbors of Regulation S can be addressed. For issuers, distributors n7 and their respective affiliates and others acting on their behalf, the Regulation S safe harbor classifies securities into three categories in order to determine whether additional conditions must be met. The categories distinguish securities based upon: (1) the issuer's home jurisdiction; (2) the issuer's reporting status under the Exchange Act; and (3) the degree of "U.S. market interest" in the class of securities being offered and sold. n8 As to each category the concern, and particular requirements imposed, are based on the probability of the securities flowing back into the United States after being offered and sold abroad. In the first category, offerings by qualifying foreign issuers face no additional requirements. As to the second, category, however, offerings by issuers that are reporting companies under the Exchange Act are considered more likely to flow back to the U.S. Thus, participants in the distribution must implement offering restrictions, n9 and a "distribution compliance period" (DCP) is imposed. n10 The DCP is either a 40 day or one year period, depending on the type of security involved, during which the securities are considered "restricted securities" and may not be resold except in accordance with certain limitations and requirements. The third category of securities under these provisions encompasses everything not covered by the first two. For these securities similar additional conditions are imposed, also depending on the type of security involved.

The "resale safe harbor" under Regulation S covers resales by persons other than those eligible to utilize the issuer safe harbor. These parties must comply with the general Regulation conditions--"offshore transaction" and "no directed selling efforts" already discussed. Additionally, dealers are prohibited from knowingly selling Regulation S securities to U.S. purchasers during the applicable DCP. In circumstances in which the purchaser is also a dealer, the selling dealer must notify the purchaser that the purchaser is subject to the same resale restrictions as the seller. There are also limits on the extent of selling commissions or fees that may be paid when the offer or sale is made by certain affiliates. n11

The principal effect of 1998 amendments to Regulation S was to align resale compliance requirements with those applicable under SEC Rule 144 to stock issued by U.S. companies generally. There are, however, no manner of sale or other offeree limitations under Regulation S that are central to Rule 144 and other exemptions from registration, and Regulation S clearly defines the availability of an exemption from registration requirements for offerings effected outside the United States.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 17 C.F.R. §§ 230.901 - 230.905, adopted in Sec. Act. Rel No. 33-6863 (Apr. 23, 1990), as amended.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Sec. Act Rel. No, 33-6863, 1990 SEC LEXIS 740, at *14 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Regulation S, Rule 902(h), 17 C.F.R. § 902(h)(i)-(ii). Note, however, that under the controlling definition, offers and sales of securities specifically targeted at identifiable groups of U.S. citizens abroad, such as members of the armed forces serving overseas, are not deemed to be made in "offshore transactions."

(n4)Footnote 4. Regulation S, Rule 902(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Regulation S, Rule 902(c)(1). Certain types of advertising are, however, permitted. Advertisements required to be published under U.S. or foreign law, for example, are permitted provided the advertisement contains no more information than is legally required. "Tombstone" advertisements meeting strict content requirements are likewise permitted, as are several other types of communications.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Statement of the Commission Regarding Use of Internet Web Sites to Offer Securities. Solicit Securities Transactions or Advertise Investment Services Offshore, Sec. Act. Rel. No.33-7516, 1998 SEC LEXIS 488 (March 23, 1998) .

In Europrospectus.com limited, SEC No-Action Letter, 2004 SEC No-Act LEXIS 596 (Apr. 28, 2004) the SEC Staff gave no-action advice on the Internet dissemination of prospectuses for international offerings by an online database provider of information obtained from international markets. On a continual basis, the provider made available prospectuses and related documents for international offerings to subscribers. Although the prospectuses were available on the Internet to subscribers in the United States, the Staff agreed that such availability would not constitute directed selling efforts in the U.S. within the meaning of Regulation S as to any offering in light of various steps taken by the service provider. These steps included a detailed cautionary screen legend making clear that documents relate to securities that are not registered in the United States and may not be offered or sold in the United States. The database provider also entered into agreements with all subscribers restricting the users from distributing any prospectus obtained from the database to any parties outside their own respective organizations, and did not otherwise act in any manner that could be deemed inconsistent with Regulation S in the creation and dissemination of the database to subscribers. Although the SEC Staff was satisfied that in these circumstances the Internet distribution of prospectuses would not constitute directed selling efforts in the U.S., the Staff declined to express any view whether the database provider could be deemed to be a "distributor" or whether it could be considered an affiliate or as acting on behalf of entities depositing prospectuses in the database. Nor would the Staff express any view whether providing prospectuses to the database, and the availability of the database to subscribers would constitute conditioning the market in the U.S.

(n7)Footnote 7. "Distributor" in this context includes all underwriters, dealers and other persons who are participating in a distribution of securities pursuant to a contractual arrangement, such as sub-underwriters, but does not include persons participating pursuant to contract only in ancillary positions, such as fiscal agents or persons hired to perform clearing services. *Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6863, 1990 SEC LEXIS 740, at 18 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Regulation S, Rule 903(b), 17 C.F.R. § 230.903(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. "Offering restrictions" require each distributor to agree in writing that all offers and sales of securities prior to the expiration of the distribution compliance period (DCP) shall be made only in accordance with safe harbor requirements unless the securities are registered or an applicable exemption is available. Offering restrictions also require that all offering materials and documents used in connection with offers and sales of the securities prior to the end of the DCP must include statements to the effect that the securities have not been registered under the Securities Act and may not be offered and sold in the United States or to U.S. persons without registration or an available exemption.

(n10)Footnote 10. Amendments to Regulation S adopted in 1998 in an effort to curb abusive practices in connection with sales of domestic equity securities. The SEC found that Regulation S had been used as a means of perpetrating fraudulent and manipulative schemes involving thinly capitalized or "microcap" companies. With the 1998 amendments the Commission added the "distribution compliance period" (DCP) to replace the prior "restricted period" in Regulation S, and for equity securities placed offshore by domestic issuers lengthened the compliance period from 40 days to one year. See Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-7505, [1998 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 86,006 (Feb. 17, 1998).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Regulation S, Rule 904 (Offshore Resales), 17 C.F.R. § 230.904.

57 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 5.syn

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.syn Synopsis to Chapter 5: Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

§ 5.01 Small Issues Exemptions--Generally

§ 5.02 Securities Act § 3(b) -Regulation A

[1] Testing the Waters

[2] The Offering Statement

[3] SCOR Offerings under Regulation A

[4] Regulation A Procedures: Filing and Qualification

[5] Pre-Qualification Offers

[a] Preliminary Offering Circular

[b] Other Pre-Qualification Offers

[6] Manner of Offering

[7] Post-Qualification Amendments and Reporting

[8] Insignificant Deviations from Requirements

[9] Integration with other Offerings

[10] Withdrawal or Abandonment of Offerings

[11] SEC Enforcement Authority

§ 5.03 Regulation D: Rule 505 Offerings

§ 5.04 Regulation D: Rule 504 Offerings

§ 5.05 Section 3(b) Offerings -Special Considerations

[1] Angel Capital Electronic Network

[2] Revised Form D and Electronic Filing

[3] Integration of Offerings

[4] Substantial Compliance

[5] Relief from Disqualifications

[6] Intermediary Regulation

§ 5.06 Other Section 3(b) Offerings

[1] Rule 701: Compensatory Benefit Plans

[2] Securities Act Rule 236 Offerings

§ 5.07 Securities Act § 3(c): SEC Regulation E

[1] Regulation E--Generally

[2] Filing and Offering Procedures

[3] Electronic Filing

[4] SEC Enforcement Authority under Regulation E

§ 5.08 Regulation CE--Coordinated Exemption for Certain Issues of Securities Exempt under State Law

§ 5.09 The Impact of Blue Sky Laws

[1] Securities Act § 3(b) Exemptions

[2] Section 3(c) - Regulation E Offerings

Robert N. Rapp n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. This chapter has been revised and updated by Robert N. Rapp, partner in Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. He is the author of Blue Sky Regulation (2d. ed., Matthew Bender & Co.)

58 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.01

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.01 Small Issues Exemptions--Generally

In chapters 3 and 4 the exemptions from registration requirements for securities and transactions contained in sections 3 and 4 of the Securities Act of 1933 are presented in detail. None of the statutory Securities Act exemptions is expressly constructed to facilitate small issues of securities, although several are sufficiently broad to encompass offerings of any size that meet applicable requirements. n1 It is only in sections 3(b) and (c) of the Act n2 that Congress specifically considered small issues. Section 3(b) empowers the SEC to issue rules and regulations exempting classes of securities if it finds that enforcement of the Securities Act with respect to such securities is not necessary in the public interest or for the protection of investors because of the small amount of securities involved or the limited character of the offering, but subject to a maximum dollar limit. Section 3(b) provides:

The Commission may from time to time by its rules and regulations, and subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed therein, add any class of securities to the securities exempted as provided in this section, if it finds that the enforcement of this title with respect to such securities is not necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors by reason of the small amount involved or the limited character of the public offering; but no issue of securities shall be exempted under this subsection where the aggregate amount at which such issue is offered to the public exceeds $5,000,000. n3

Section 3(c) of the Securities Act, added much later, authorizes the SEC to adopt rules and regulations providing for the exemption of securities issued by "small business investment companies" from registration requirements. The authority in section 3(c) of the Securities Act led to the adoption of Regulation E by the SEC, which permits offerings up to $5 million by qualifying "Small Business Investment Companies" and "Business Development Companies." n4 Regulation E is not an exemption from all registration requirements. Certain filing requirements remain, and use of a disclosure document is mandated.

For small issues, section 3(b) has taken on the greatest significance as a result of the adoption of SEC Regulation D under the Securities Act, n5 which, by a series of rules, establishes certain "safe harbor" exemptions from registration adopted specifically under the authority of section 3(b). Rule 504 under Regulation D n6 provides an exemption from federal registration for limited offerings and sales of securities not exceeding $1,000,000. Rule 505, also adopted under the authority of section 3(b), does likewise for limited offerings up to $5,000,000 which satisfy qualifying conditions. n7 Importantly, although these qualifying offerings are exempt from federal registration requirements, each remains subject to registration requirements under individual state Blue Sky laws if no state exemption is available. n8

Historically, Securities Act section 3(b) is most commonly linked with Regulation A under the Act. Although not an exemption from registration requirements as such, Regulation A permits an issuer to make a public offering of securities in an amount up to $5 million with substantially less burden and procedures. Regulation A offerings share a number of characteristics with registered offerings. Use of an "offering circular" that is similar in content to a prospectus is required, for example. Also, like registered offerings, securities offered and sold under Regulation A are publicly offered, and become freely tradable in the secondary market after the offering. Principal advantages of Regulation A over full registration of securities are:

- Required financial statements are simpler, and need not be audited;
- There are no on-going Exchange Act reporting obligations after the offering unless the issuer meets certain assets and number of shareholder tests;
- Issuers may choose among three formats to prepare the offering circular, one of which is a simplified question-and-answer document; and
- Issuers may "test the waters" to determine if there is adequate interest in the securities prior to incurring the expense of filing with the SEC.

Prior to the adoption of Regulation D, short of full compliance with section 5 of the Act, small public offerings could be carried out only through Regulation A unless the offering was sufficiently restricted to qualify for the intrastate offering exemption provided in section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act. Although Regulation A remains an alternative to full blown federal registration of securities for small offerings, its use has dwindled in the changed regulatory landscape brought on by the adoption of Regulation D under the Securities Act and its alternatives for small offerings that are true exemptions from federal registration requirements. Today, for example, Rule 505 under Regulation D permits offerings by an issuer of less than $5 million in any twelve month period to an unlimited number of accredited investors plus 35 additional persons. The compliance burden under Rule 505 is considerably less than under Regulation A, as there are no formal filing and review processes. On the other hand, there are no qualifying requirements or limitations on offerees or purchasers in a Regulation A offering, and under Regulation A "testing the waters" is permitted. Under Regulation A an issuer may publish factual information about its business or proposed business before incurring legal, accounting and other costs, in order to gauge potential investor interest in a possible securities offering.

Rule 505 offerings are considered in detail elsewhere in this Treatise as part of the presentation of Regulation D generally. n9 In this chapter Rule 505 is addressed only in comparison to Regulation A, and with regard to the impact of state securities laws on the efficacy of both. In the same manner, Rule 504, which establishes an exemption from federal registration for limited offerings and sales of securities in an amount not exceeding $1,000,000, and which was also adopted by the SEC pursuant to section 3(b) of the Securities Act, is examined in detail elsewhere as part of an analysis of Regulation D generally. n10 In this chapter it too is considered only in the context of Regulation D alternatives to a Regulation A offering, and also with specific regard to state law considerations and the factors to be considered in electing to proceed under one of those alternatives to Regulation A.

Acting under the general authority of section 3(b) of the Securities Act, the SEC has adopted other rules facilitating small issues in particular settings. Rules adopted relating to offerings by compensatory benefit plans, n11 for example, and for securities offered to provide funds for distribution to shareholders in lieu of issuing fractional shares in connection with certain corporate transactions n12 are also encompassed within the general authority of section 3(b).

Today, the practical value of small issue "exemptions" created as a result of Securities Act section 3(b) must be analyzed in the context of the full array of federal exemptions afforded in Regulation D. Rule 506 of Regulation D, for example, n13 which was not adopted under the authority of section 3(b), and which has no limitation on the amount of an offering, also permits sales to as many as 35 non-accredited investors and an unlimited number of accredited investors. For non-accredited investors there are information requirements, and there are manner of sale restrictions applicable generally in Rule 506 offerings. However, the requirements are considerably more attractive to issuers when compared to the specific disclosure document and financial statement requirements of Rule 505. Moreover, and most significantly, a compliant Rule 506 offering makes the securities involved "covered securities" under the National Securities Market Improvements Act ("NSMIA") n14 such that state regulation beyond notice filing and fee requirements is preempted. n15

Going forward the efficacy of exemptions provided under the authority of sections 3(b) and (c) of the Securities Act will also be considered in light of the general power of the SEC established by NSMIA in section 28 of the Securities Act n16 to exempt, by rulemaking, any person, security or transaction from the registration provisions of the Securities Act to the extent that such exemption is appropriate in the public interest and is consistent with the protection of investors. n17 After the enactment of section 28, the authority of the SEC to exempt transactions from registration requirements is no longer subject to the $5 million limit specified by section 3(b) of the Act. To date, the SEC has not adopted any new rules or modified any existing provision pursuant to the authority granted in section 28 that impact any of the Securities Act section 3(b) exemptions. n18

In this chapter the elements and processes of offerings pursuant to Regulation A and other federal exemptions adopted under Securities Act section 3(b) are discussed with an emphasis on practicality. As part of that analysis Rule 505 is addressed in terms of its efficacy as the Regulation D analog to Regulation A, and with particular regard to whether either Regulation A or Rule 505 make sense today for small issues when the full scope of federal and state regulation is taken into consideration and the federal Rule 506 alternative is assessed. As for other section 3(b) exemptions, Rule 504 of Regulation D is examined in the same light.

In other particular contexts not involving capital formation section 3(b) has supported exemptions meaningful for small issuers in the context of certain corporate transactions with shareholders, and to support the distribution of securities pursuant to compensatory and benefit plans. These exemptions, set out in SEC Rules 236 n19 and 701, n20 are rooted in Securities Act section 3(b), although Rule 701 offerings are no longer strictly constrained by the $5,000,000 offering limitation in section 3(b). Each is examined in this chapter with a view to their particular utility for small issuers.

Securities Act section 3(c) exemptions, most prominently Regulation E, applicable to Small Business Investment Companies, are examined as to focus and mechanics. Likewise, Regulation CE, n21 a coordinated exemption for certain issuers of securities specifically in the State of California is addressed to round out an understanding of complete the range of small issue exemptions that are the results of Securities Act authority granted under section 3 of the Act.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Section 4(2) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77d(2), provides an exemption from the registration provisions of the Securities Act for "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering." This "private offering" exemption has been developed over years of interpretations by the SEC and the courts, and is available for any offering in which persons faced with an investment decision are considered able to fend for themselves, and the protection that registration under the Act would provide is not needed. The Section 4(2) exemption is discussed in Chapter 4.03, supra.

Section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act provides an exemption from the registration requirements for any offer or sale of securities to residents of a single state by an issuer located in or which is incorporated in the same state and does business in that state. The "intrastate offering exemption" has certain qualification components, but is also an exemption available for any size offering. Like the section 4(2) private offering exemption, the contours of the section 3(a)(11) exemption have been developed over the years through SEC interpretations and court decisions. However, SEC Rule 147 under the Securities Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.147, was adopted to provide a safe harbor. The section 3(a)(11) exemption is discussed in detail in Chapter 3.12, supra .

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(b), (c).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 77c.

(n4)Footnote 4. The term "small business investment company" means any company that is licensed as such by the U.S. Small Business Administration under the Small Business Incentive Act of 1958. A "Business Development Company" is a form of closed-end investment company which meets definitional requirements in the Investment Company Act of 1940. Section 3(c) of the Securities Act, and Regulation E in particular, are discussed in § 5.07, infra.

(n5)Footnote 5. 17 C.F.R. § 230.501 -.508.

(n6)Footnote 6. 17 C.F.R. § 230.504.

(n7)Footnote 7. 17 C.F.R. § 230.505

(n8)Footnote 8. Regulation D Rule 504 offerings are fully subject to registration by "qualification" under state securities laws, and to "merit" in those states that continue to make it a part of the qualification process. Rule 505 offerings are for the most part exempt from registration under state laws by reason of the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption ("ULOE") adopted in most states, or a specific exemption analog. For an analysis of the treatment of these offerings at the state level see Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation §§ 8.06 -.07 (2d ed. Matthew Bender & Co.). Each is also discussed in sections 5.03 and 5.05, infra .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Ch 4.04, supra .

(n10)Footnote 10. Id.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Securities Act Rule 701, 17 C.F.R. § 230.701. Rule 701 is discussed in more detail in § 5.06[1], infra.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Securities Act Rule 236, 17 C.F.R. § 230.236. Rule 236 is discussed in more detail in § 5.06[2], infra.

(n13)Footnote 13. 17 C.F.R. § 230.506. Rule 506 of Regulation D was adopted under the authority of, and to provide a "safe harbor" for compliance under, Securities Act section 4(2), 15 U.S.C. § 77(d)(2), the so-called "private offering" exemption. For closer analysis of Rule 506 and its utility, see Ch [], infra.

(n14)Footnote 14. Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996) (Referred to throughout this chapter as "NSMIA").

(n15)Footnote 15. See Securities Act section 18(b)(4)(D), 15 U.S.C. § 78r(b)(4)(D). The comparative advantages and disadvantages for small issues under Regulation A, and Rules 505 and 506 of Regulation D are considered further in § 5.03, infra .

(n16)Footnote 16. 15 U.S.C. § 77cc.

(n17)Footnote 17. Section 28 added to the Securities Act "general exemptive authority" as follows:

The Commission, by rule or regulation, may conditionally or unconditionally exempt any person, security, or transaction, or any class or classes of persons, securities or transactions, from any provision or provisions of this title or of any rule or regulation issued under this title, to the extent that such exemption is necessary or appropriate in the public interest, and is consistent with the protection of investors.

Any of the exemptions adopted under section 3(b) of the Securities Act, namely Regulation A and Rules 504, 505 under Regulation D, and Rule 701 could now be adopted pursuant to Securities Act section 28 with no dollar limitation. Because the dollar limitation on SBIC offerings under section 3(c) is established by rule rather than prescribed in the statute, the general exemptive authority established in section 28 of the Securities Act has no impact. However, as to any section 3(b) exemption, the SEC is now empowered to establish dollar limitations at any level deemed to be appropriate, as well as to adopt new exemptions without any dollar limitations.

(n18)Footnote 18. In 2007 the SEC proposed to act under the authority of section 28 to create a new exemption as proposed Rule 507 under Regulation D for offers and sales of securities to "large accredited investors." The proposed definition of large accredited investor would be based on the "accredited investor" definition in Rule 502 of Regulation D, but with higher and somewhat different dollar-amount thresholds. Large accredited investors that participate in these exempt offerings would be considered "qualified purchasers" under Securities Act section 18(b)(3), thereby providing NSMIA "covered security" status and the resulting preemption of state regulation. See Securities Act Reel. No. 33-8828 (Revisions of Limited Offering Exemptions in Regulation D) (Aug. 3, 2007).

(n19)Footnote 19. 17 C.F.R. § 230.236.

(n20)Footnote 20. 17 C.F.R. § 230.701.

(n21)Footnote 21. 17 C.F.R. § 230.1001.

59 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.02

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.02 Securities Act § 3(b) -Regulation A

In the capital formation setting, under section 3(b) the SEC adopted Regulation A and, much later, Rule 505 of Regulation D under the Securities Act. Although on its face, Regulation A creates a "conditional small issues exemption" from registration, it is in fact a mechanism for a public offer or sale of securities that meets the conditions. n1 In a Regulation A offering there are no limitations on the number or qualifications of offerees or purchasers. Only the aggregate dollar amount limitation applies, with the maximum amount permitted to be offered depending upon whether the offering is by an issuer ($5,000,000) or by selling security holders ($1,500,000). n2 Regulation A is available to U.S. and Canadian companies that are not (a) reporting companies under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; (b) investment companies registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940; (c) development stage companies; or (d) issuers of fractional undivided interests in oil or gas rights. n3 There are also certain "bad boy" disqualifying criteria, n4 and Regulation A may not be used by so-called "blank check" companies, or-those with an unspecified business. n5

The aggregate offering price for a Regulation A offering may not exceed $5 million. If the offering is made by or includes selling security holders, the maximum permitted by those selling security holders is $ 1.5 million. n6 In either case, the maximum permitted is based on the offering price of all securities for all securities sold pursuant to Regulation A within 12 months before the start of and during the offering. Otherwise, Regulation A offerings are not integrated with other prior offerings, or subsequent offerings meeting certain criteria. n7 Regulation A is generally not available for an offering in which there is uncertainty involved in ascertaining the maximum dollar value of securities which may be offered under the Section 3(b) statutory limitation. In corporate spin-offs, for example, the price at which spun off securities may be resold in the market after the initial distribution by persons who may be deemed to be statutory underwriters cannot be known until such sales are actually executed. n8 The same is true for distribution of shares of a subsidiary company as a liquidating dividend. n9

Key considerations in the use of Regulation A are that there are no qualifications on offerees and purchaser, and that securities offered and sold under Regulation A may be freely traded in the aftermarket. For small business issuers, other important considerations in utilizing Regulation A are that: (1) "testing the waters," that is, soliciting interest in the offering through the use of a document is permitted prior to incurring the expense and burden of preparing and filing an offering statement; (2) required financial statements are simpler and need not be audited; and (3) there are no periodic reporting requirements unless the issuer meets certain total assets and number of shareholder criteria. n10

[1] Testing the Waters

Perhaps the most important consideration for small issuers is that Regulation A makes specific provision for solicitation of interest ("testing the waters") to determine whether there is any interest in a contemplated securities offering. Rule 254(a) under Regulation A provides:

An issuer may publish or deliver to prospective purchasers a written document or make scripted radio or television broadcasts to determine whether there is any interest in a contemplated securities offering. Following submission of the written document or script of the broadcast to the Commission, as required by paragraph (b) of this section, oral communications with prospective investors and other broadcasts are permitted. The written documents, broadcasts and oral communications are each subject to the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws. No solicitation or acceptance of money or any other consideration, nor any commitment, binding or otherwise, from any prospective investor is permitted. No sale may be made until qualification of the offering statement. n11

Written solicitation of interest materials submitted to the SEC and used in compliance with the testing the waters provision of Regulation A are not deemed to be a prospectus as defined in section 2(10)(a) of the Securities Act. n12 To be compliant, a written document or script of a broadcast intended for use in testing the waters must include statements, among others, that no money or other consideration may be accepted and that an indication of interest made by a prospective investor involves no obligation or commitment of any kind. n13 These written documents are subject to the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws.

Specific content restrictions for a testing-the-waters document or script are imposed only to the extent of requiring that the document or script features no money or other consideration being solicited, and if sent in response, will not be accepted; and that no sales of the securities will be made, or any commitment to purchase accepted, until delivery of an offering circular that includes complete information about the issuer and the offering. n14 Additionally it must be stated that an indication of interest made by a prospective investor involves no obligation or commitment of any kind. n15 Content of a written document or script is limited to identifying the chief executive officer of the issuer, and briefly and in general its business and products. n16

Once an offering statement is filed, solicitations of interest may no longer be made. n17 At that point the formal Regulation A process is begun, and the preliminary offering circular becomes the basis for written pre-qualification contact with prospective investors. Additionally, no sales pursuant to a filed offering statement under Regulation A may be made until 20 calendar days after the last publication or delivery of a testing the waters document or broadcast.

Although the provision in Regulation A for testing the waters is very attractive for small business issuers, as a practical matter it may not be available. Securities offered and sold pursuant to federal Regulation A are not NSMIA "covered securities." These offerings remain subject to registration and qualification requirements under state securities laws, including merit review where applicable. The offer and sale of the securities is prohibited under state law without registration or an available exemption. The majority of states do not have an exemption or other procedure for testing the waters, and thus the federal provision is meaningless in those states that prohibit any non-exempt "offers" except in compliance with registration provisions. n18

[2] The Offering Statement

The Regulation A analog to a registration statement under the Securities Act of 1933 is Form 1-A, an "Offering Statement," filed with the SEC. The offering statement consists of three parts. Part I, a "notification," section, is essentially an information statement used to determine eligibility of the issuer to use Regulation A. Part II is the offering circular, and Part III consists of exhibits that satisfy supplemental information requirements. n19 Parts I, II and III must be addressed by all issuers. Part II of the form, which relates to the content of the required offering circular, provides two alternate formats depending upon the nature and/or business of the issuer. Only one format needs to be followed and provided in the offering statement. General information regarding the preparation, format, and content of the Regulation A Offering Statement is contained in Securities Act Rule 252. n20 Requirements relating to the offering circular itself are contained in Rules 253 and 255. n21 As the functional equivalent of a prospectus, the offering circular in a Regulation A offering must be supplied to each purchaser.

Every Regulation A offering circular must contain the narrative and financial information prescribed by the form. The financial portions of the offering circular will not vary. n22 However, there are choices in the way a corporate issuer may present the non-financial portions of its offering circular. "Model A" of Form 1-A is available for all corporate issuers, and is a question-and-answer format that essentially adopts Form U-7, developed by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) for corporate issuers qualifying for Small Corporate Offering Registration (SCOR) under state Blue Sky laws. n23 Model A is available to all issuers utilizing Regulation A. "Model B" of Form 1-A is the original Regulation A format, and prescribes content and categories of information in much the same manner as Form S-1, the basic form of registration statement under the Securities Act. n24

[3] SCOR Offerings under Regulation A

The North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) adopted Form U-7 -the Small Corporate Offering Registration Form--to provide for the uniform treatment of registrations of small company offerings which are exempt from federal registration under Rule 504 of Regulation D, n25 Rule 147 of the Securities Act of 1933, n26 and Regulation A. Form U-7 -the SCOR form--is a simplified question and answer and fill-in-the-blank form of offering circular that is designed to lead an issuer through the process of creating an offering circular (or prospectus) that adequately discloses the features and risks of the offering. In addition to the form itself, the NASAA created a "Small Company Offering Registration Manual" that explains each question on the SCOR form, points out common pitfalls, and provides sample responses to certain questions. Form U-7 permits small corporate issuers to register securities by qualification under state Blue Sky laws. The utility of Form U-7 to comply with both federal Regulation A and state registration requirements is thus clear.

To be eligible for SCOR, the issuer must:

- Be a corporation or centrally managed limited liability company organized under the laws of the United States or Canada, or any state, province, or territory or possess, or the District of Columbia, and have its principal place of business in one of the foregoing;
- Not be subject to reporting requirements of section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;
- Not be an investment company registered or required to be registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940;
- Not be engaged in or propose to be engaged in petroleum exploration and production, mining or other extractive industries;
- Not be a development stage company that either has no specific business plan or purpose or has indicated that its business plan is to engage in merger or acquisition with an unidentified company or companies or other entity or person; and
- Not be disqualified under any of several "bad boy" criteria. n27

For a SCOR offering, the offering price of the securities offered must be at least US $1.00 per share or unit of interest, and the issuer must agree that it will not split its common stock, or declare a stock dividend for two years after the effective date of the registration if such action has the effect of lowering the price below US $1.00. Commissions, fees or other remuneration for soliciting any prospective purchaser in connection with the offering in any state may only be paid to persons who the issuer believes, and has reason to believe, are appropriately registered or licensed in the state. n28

Financial statements for a SCOR offering must be prepared in accordance with either U.S. or Canadian generally accepted accounting principles, and must be audited unless each of the following conditions is satisfied:

- The company has not previously sold securities through an offering involving the general solicitation of prospective investors by means of advertising, mass mailing, public meetings, "cold call" telephone solicitation or any other method directed toward the public;
- The company has not been previously required under federal, state, provincial or territorial securities laws to provide audited financial statements in connection with any sale of its securities;
- The aggregate amount of all previous sales of securities by the company (exclusive of debt financing with banks and similar commercial lenders) does not exceed US $1,000,000; and
- The amount of the current offering does not exceed US $1,000,000. n29

The utility of SCOR and Form U-7 is limited to the extent that they are available only for corporate or limited liability company issuers. Form U-7 may not be used by partnerships, or to register securities for resale on behalf of anyone other than the corporation itself. The Model A offering circular under federal Regulation A is likewise limited to corporate issuers. Other issuers, and any issuer that chooses, use the Model B form of offering circular, which is a traditional form of prospectus. Also, although Regulation A permits an issuer to raise up to $5 million in a 12-month period, because state SCOR registration has a $1 million limit, Regulation A effectively is limited to this same amount when it is combined with a SCOR registration in each state. n30

[4] Regulation A Procedures: Filing and Qualification

Regulation A Offering Statements are filed with the SEC at its main office in Washington, D.C. If there is no "delaying notation" made as part of the offering statement, and the offering has not been suspended, n31 an offering statement automatically becomes qualified, without Commission action, on the 20th calendar day after its filing. n32 By including a "delaying notation" in the filing, the offering can be qualified only by order of the SEC. The prescribed form of delaying notation to be included in an offering statement reads:

"this offering statement shall only be qualified upon order of the Commission, unless a subsequent amendment is filed indicating the intention to become qualified by operation of the terms of Regulation A." n33

The delaying notation itself can only be removed by an amendment to the Offering Statement that contains the following language,

"this offering statement shall become qualified on the 20[th] day following the filing of this amendment." n34

A delaying notation provides an opportunity for SEC staff review of the offering statement, and for comments. Comments become the basis for amendments to the offering statement, and obviously lessen the possibility of a suspension of the exemption by the SEC. n35 When the comment and amendment process is satisfactorily concluded, an order qualifying the offering by the SEC will be issued. Because Regulation A offerings are subject to regulation under state Blue Sky laws, those procedures run in tandem with the SEC qualification procedure. n36

[5] Pre-Qualification Offers

[a] Preliminary Offering Circular

In addition to allowing solicitations of interest prior to an offering statement being filed, Regulation A also permits the use of a "preliminary" offering circular to make written offers of the securities once the required offering statement is filed. n37 The preliminary offering circular is filed as part of the Offering Statement, and must contain substantially the same information required in the offering circular prescribed by SEC Form 1-A, except that certain information as to offering price, underwriting discounts and commissions or other things that are dependent on the offering price may be omitted. A prescribed legend must appear on the front cover, n38 and no sales of securities may be made until the issuer's Offering Statement has been qualified.

[b] Other Pre-Qualification Offers

In addition to the use of a preliminary offering circular, after the Form 1-A offering statement has been filed, but prior to its qualification, oral offer may be made. n39 Additionally, printed advertisements may be used (or radio and television broadcasts made) if they state from whom a preliminary offering circular or final offering circular may be obtained, and contain no more than the following information:

- The name of the issuer;
- The title of the security, amount being offered, and per unit offering price;
- The general type of the issuer's business; and
- A brief statement as to the general character and location of its property. n40

[6] Manner of Offering

Regulation A requires that either a preliminary or final offering circular must be furnished to a prospective purchaser at least 48 hours prior to the mailing of a confirmation of sale. A final offering circular must be delivered with the confirmation of sale, if it has not been delivered at an earlier time. n41 Additionally, sales by a dealer (including an underwriter no longer acting in that capacity for the security involved in the offering) that take place within 90 days after qualification of the Regulation A offering statement may be made only if the dealer delivers a copy of the current offering circular to the purchaser before or with the confirmation of sale. n42

Once a Regulation A offering statement is qualified, there are no restrictions on the use of advertising or sales material. Advertising and sales material are subject to the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws. Although it is not a condition to the Regulation A exemption, advertising or sales material are to be filed with the SEC. n43 Here again, as with the use of "testing-the-waters" material, submitting advertising or sales material for review significantly reduces the possibility of a subsequent suspension of the offering based on inaccurate or misleading materials. Regulation A specifically empowers the SEC at any time to enter an order temporarily suspending the exemption if it has reason to believe that any sales or solicitation of interest material contains any false or misleading statement. n44

[7] Post-Qualification Amendments and Reporting

Once an offering statement is qualified, the offering circular must be revised during the course of the offering whenever the information it contains has become inaccurate; when material developments have occurred; or when there has been a fundamental change in the information initially presented. n45 Additionally, an offering circular for a continuous offering must be updated to include updated financial statements 12 months after the date the offering statement was qualified. n46 Every revised or updated offering circular must be filed as a post-qualification amendment to the offering statement and re-qualified in accordance with the procedures established for initial qualification of the offering statement. n47

The issuer is required to file a Report of Sales on Form 2A containing the information required by that form every six months following the qualification of the offering statement by the SEC. Additionally, the issuer is required to file a final Report of Sales within 30 days after the termination, completion or final sales of securities in the offering. n48

[8] Insignificant Deviations from Requirements

A degree of flexibility is built into Regulation A with the express recognition that insignificant deviations from a term condition or requirement will not result in the loss of the exemption for any offer or sale to a particular individual or entity, provided the issuer or person relying on the exemption establishes:

- The failure to comply did not pertain to a term, condition or requirement directly intended to protect that particular individual or entity;
- The failure to comply was insignificant with respect to the offering as a whole; and
- A good faith and reasonable attempt was made to comply with all applicable, terms, conditions and requirements. n49

However, any failure to comply with the issuer qualification requirement, amount of offering limitation, offer provisions, and requirements applicable to delayed or continuous offerings are deemed to be significant. n50 Additionally, the failure to comply with any term, condition or requirement of Regulation A does not affect the exercise of SEC enforcement authority under section 20 of the Securities Act. n51

[9] Integration with other Offerings

In order to prevent loss of the Regulation A exemption by reason of combining it with such other offerings by the issuer that would together result in exceeding the $5,000,000 amount limitation or, Regulation A n52 provides that offers and sales made in reliance on it will not be integrated with any prior offers of securities, or any subsequent offers or sales of securities that are:

- Registered under the Securities Act, except under certain circumstances in which the registration results from a change of intention by the issuer formerly relying on Regulation, in which case offers and sales will not be integrated with the registered offering if at least 30 calendar days have elapsed between the last solicitation of interest and the filing of the registration statement with the SEC; n53
- Made in reliance upon Rule 701 of Regulation D under the Securities Act, which is an exemption for offers and sales of securities pursuant to certain compensatory benefit plans and contracts relating to compensation; n54
- Made pursuant to an employee benefit plan generally;
- Made in reliance upon Regulation S under the Securities Act; n55 and

- Made more than six months after completion of the Regulation A offering. n56

[10] Withdrawal or Abandonment of Offerings

An issuer may, with consent of the SEC, withdraw an offering statement provided that none of the securities which are the subject of the offering statement have been sold, and the offering statement is not the subject of a suspension proceeding. n57 An application for withdrawal must be made, and must state the reason the offering statement is being withdrawn.

When either the originally filed offering statement or any amendment to it has been on file with the Commission for more than nine months and the offering has not commenced, the Commission may, in its discretion, proceed to have that filing declared involuntarily abandoned. Any such abandonment proceeding can only take place after the issuer and its counsel first have been notified of the Commission's intention to declare the offering abandoned, and there has been no response by way of a substantive amendment or a satisfactory explanation. n58

[11] SEC Enforcement Authority

As with any offering, Regulation A offerings are subject to general SEC enforcement authority under the federal securities laws. n59 A specific provision is contained in Regulation A, however, to provide the Commission with authority to temporarily suspend the exemption and, following prescribed procedures, to make a suspension permanent. n60 Under Regulation A, the SEC may at any time enter an order temporarily suspending the Regulation A exemption if it has reason to believe:

- The exemption is not available, or any of the terms, conditions or requirements have not been complied with;
- The offering statement, any sales or solicitation of interest material contains any false or misleading statement of a material fact;
- The offering is being made or would be made in violation of the general antifraud prohibitions in section 17 of the Securities Act;
- An event has occurred after the initial filing of the offering statement which would have rendered the exemption unavailable if it had occurred prior to the filing;
- Criminal proceedings or a civil injunction action have been initiated against certain persons associated with the issuer; or
- The issuer or any promoter, officer, director or underwriter has failed to cooperate, or has obstructed or refused to permit an investigation by the Commission in connection with any offering made or proposed to be made in reliance upon Regulation A. n61

Prompt notice to the issuer, any underwriter and any selling security is required, including the opportunity to request a hearing. If no hearing is requested, and none is ordered by the Commission, the temporary suspension becomes permanent 30 days after entry. If a hearing is requested or ordered, after that hearing the Commission may either vacate the suspension or make it permanent. n62

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For an in-depth discussion of securities offerings under Regulation A see O'Boyle, "Offerings of Securities Pursuant to Regulation A," § 3 in A.A. Sommer, Jr., gen. ed., Securities Law Techniques (Matthew Bender).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Rule 251(b), 17 C.F.R. § 230.51(b). However, in determining the maximum amount that may be offered, Rule 251 requires that the aggregate offering price for all securities sold within the twelve months before the start of and during the offering of securities in reliance upon Regulation A is to be subtracted. Id.

Where a mixture of cash and non-cash consideration is to be received, the aggregate offering price under Regulation A is to be based on the offering price at which the securities are offered for cash. If the securities are not offered for cash, the aggregate offering price is based on the value of the consideration as is established by bona fide sales of that consideration made within a reasonable time, or, in the absence of sales, on the fair value as determined by an accepted standard. Id.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Rule 251(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251(a).

Although Regulation A is not available for the outright sale of fractional interests in oil or gas properties, if the offering is made by a limited partnership which will drill for oil or gas, then Regulation A is available. Once the issuer decides to use the limited partnership form of business, there is no limit to the number of wells that a specific limited partnership may drill.

(n4)Footnote 4. Although an issuer may otherwise qualify for the Regulation A, there are several circumstances under which such qualification will not be permitted. Those circumstances may involve the issuer itself or persons presently or formerly associated with the issuer or the underwriter of its securities. For example, issuers who have been sanctioned for past violations of the securities laws. Specifically, Rule 262, 17 C.F.R. § 230.262, provides that if an issuer, a predecessor or an affiliated issuer has been subject to a governmental enforcement action resulting in an injunction or criminal conviction, or has received an SEC administrative sanction within the previous five years, the issuer may not avail itself of the Regulation A exemption. This rule also applies to predecessors and affiliated issuers in order to prevent issuers who would otherwise be ineligible to use the exemption from avoiding the disability provisions. Regulation A is also not available to an issuer if any of certain specified individuals have committed specified securities law violations within five years of the filing of an offering statement. Included in this category are individuals who could have significant influence on an issuer's activities. Id.

Disqualifications from using Regulation A may be waived by the SEC. This process is discussed specifically in § 5.05[5], infra .

(n5)Footnote 5. Rule 251(a)(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251(a)(3) (Regulation A may not be used by a "development stage company that either has no specific business plan or purpose, or has indicated that its business plan is to merge with an unidentified company or companies").

(n6)Footnote 6. See Rule 251(b), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251(b).

If the market value of the securities is not determinable and the securities are offered in exchange for outstanding securities, claims, property, or services, the aggregate offering price shall be:

- If a mixture of cash and non-cash consideration is to be received, the public cash offering price of the same class of securities;
- If no public cash offering is being made, then the value of whatever is exchanged, established by bona fide sales made within a reasonable time prior to the Regulation A offering; or
- If no such sales exist, then the fair value as determined by some other accepted standard. Id.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Rule 251 (c), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251(c). Integration of Regulation A offerings with other offerings is discussed in more detail in § 5.02 [9], infra.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Entron, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 65 1 (Mar. 19. 1976).

(n9)Footnote 9. Strategic Automated Systems International, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1476 (Feb 6, 1973) (Regulation A was not available because price at which the securities may be resold in the market could not be known).

(n10)Footnote 10. There are no Exchange Act reporting obligations after a Regulation A offering unless the company has more than $10 million in total assets and more than 500 shareholders. Issuers become subject to periodic reporting requirements by reason of section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. § 78l (g)(1), which requires registration under the Exchange Act of securities of an issuer which is engaged in interstate commerce, or in a business affecting interstate commerce, or whose securities are traded by use of the mails or any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce. However, Rule 12h-3 under the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 240.12h-3 suspends Exchange registration requirements, and thus periodic reporting requirements, for any class of equity securities held by less than 500 persons, when the total assets of the issuer have not exceeded $10 million on the last day of each of the issuer's three most recent fiscal years See Exchange Act Rule 12h-3(b)(ii), 17 C.F.R. § 240.12h-3(b)(ii).

(n11)Footnote 11. 17 C.F.R. § 230.254(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. 15 U.S.C. § 77b(10)(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. Rule 254(b)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.254(b)(2).

(n14)Footnote 14. Rule 254(b)(2)(i)-(ii), 17 C.F.R. § 230.254(b)(2)(i)-(ii).

(n15)Footnote 15. Id., Rule 254(b)(2)(iii).

(n16)Footnote 16. Id., Rule 252(b)(2)(iv).

(n17)Footnote 17. Id., Rule 252(b)(3).

(n18)Footnote 18. The impact of state Blue Sky Laws on Regulation A offerings, and the Securities Act section 3(b) exemptions in general is discussed in section 5.09, infra.

See also Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation § 4.02 (2d ed. Matthew Bender & Co.).

(n19)Footnote 19. As appropriate, the following documents are filed as exhibits to the offering statement:

- Underwriting Agreement
- Charter and by-laws
- Instruments defining the rights of security holders
- Subscription agreement
- Voting trust agreement
- Material contracts
- Material foreign patents

- Plan of acquisition, reorganization, arrangement, liquidation, or succession
- Escrow agreements
- Consents of experts and underwriters

See Securities Act Form 1-A, Part III.

(n20)Footnote 20. 17 C.F.R. § 230.252.

(n21)Footnote 21. 17 C.F.R. § § 230.253,.255.

(n22)Footnote 22. In the preparation of Regulation A offering circulars the SEC encourages the use of management's projections of future economic performance that have a reasonable basis and are presented in an appropriate format, see Form 1-A, Part II - Offering Circular. The "safe harbor" provision relating to projections that is provided in Securities Act Rule 175, 17 C.F.R. § 230.175, is applicable. Id.

For helpful guidance in the preparation and presentation of forward-looking information, see AICPA, Guide for Prospective Financial Information. A Statement of Position (SOP) (1986).

(n23)Footnote 23. See § 5.03, infra.

(n24)Footnote 24. An option formerly available for corporate issuers to satisfy the Regulation A narrative disclosure requirements by furnishing the information required by Part I of former SEC Form SB-2 was eliminated in 2007 in connection with changes to the disclosure requirements of Securities Act Regulation S-B. The former "SB" Forms were eliminated, and Regulation A thus no longer provides this third option for a compliant offering circular format. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8876 (Dec. 19, 2007). Changes applicable to Form 1-A became effective February 4, 2008.

(n25)Footnote 25. 17 C.F.R. § 230.504.

(n26)Footnote 26. 17 C.F.R. § 230.147. Rule 147 is the "safe harbor" provision for meeting requirements for federal exemption from registration under section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act -the "intrastate offering" exemption. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11).

(n27)Footnote 27. See NASAA "Statement of Policy Regarding Small Company Offering Registrations" (Apr. 28, 1996), NASAA Reports (CCH), [Middle dot] 413, at 409.

SCOR, and Form U-7 are generally not be available for the securities of any company if the company or any of its officers, directors, 10 percent stockholders, promoters or any selling agents of the securities to be offered, or any officer, director or partner of such selling agent: (i) has filed a registration statement which is the subject of a currently effective registration stop order entered pursuant to any federal or state securities law within 5 years prior to the filing of the application for registration; (ii) has been convicted within five years prior to the filing of the application for registration of any felony or misdemeanor in connection with the offer, purchase or sale of any securities or any felony involving fraud or deceit, including, but not limited to, forgery, embezzlement, obtaining money under false pretenses, larceny, or conspiracy to defraud; (iii) is currently subject to any state administrative enforcement order or judgment entered by that state's securities administrator or the Securities and Exchange Commission within five years prior to the filing of the application for SCOR registration or is subject to any state's administrative enforcement order or judgment in which fraud or deceit, including but not limited to making untrue statements of material facts and omitting to state material facts, was found and the order or judgment was entered within 5 years prior to the filing of the application for registration; (iv) is subject to any state's administrative enforcement order or judgment which prohibits, denies, or revokes the use of any exemption from registration in connection with the offer, purchase, or sale of securities; or (v) is currently subject to any order, judgment, or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction temporarily or preliminarily restricting or enjoining, or is subject to any order, judgment or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction, permanently restraining or enjoining, such party from engaging in or continuing any conduct of practice in connection with the purchase or sale of any security or involving the making of any false filing with the state entered within five years prior to the filing of the application for registration.

(n28)Footnote 28. Id.

(n29)Footnote 29. Id. When audited financial statements are not required, SCOR nevertheless requires that they be "reviewed"

(n30)Footnote 30. The majority of states include specific provisions for SCOR offerings, or otherwise accommodate SCOR, in their laws or regulations. For a discussion for SCOR offerings under state securities laws generally, see Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation § 10.04[2] (2d. ed. Matthew Bender & Co.).

(n31)Footnote 31. The SEC may at any time enter an order temporarily suspending the Regulation A exemption based upon certain findings, see Rule 258(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.258(a). Upon entry of an order, with notice and the opportunity for a hearing, a temporary suspension may become permanent. Id., Rule 258(b)-(d). Suspension of the Regulation A exemption is discussed further in § 5.02[11], infra .

(n32)Footnote 32. Rule 252(g), 17 C.F.R. § 230.252(e).

(n33)Footnote 33. Rule 252(g)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.252(g)(2).

(n34)Footnote 34. Rule 252(g)(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.252(g)(3).

(n35)Footnote 35. See Rule 258, 17 C.F.R. § 230.258. Specific SEC authority in regard to Regulation A offerings is discussed in § 5.02[11], infra.

(n36)Footnote 36. The operation and impact of state Blue Sky laws on Regulation A offerings is discussed specifically in § 5.09, infra .

(n37)Footnote 37. Rule 255, 17 C.F.R. § 230.255.

(n38)Footnote 38. See Rule 255(a)(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.255(a)(1).

(n39)Footnote 39. Rule 251(d)(1)(ii)(A), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251.252(d)(1)(ii)(A).

(n40)Footnote 40. Id., Rule 251(d)(1)(ii)(c).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Rule 251(d)(2)(i)(B)-(C).

(n42)Footnote 42. Rule 251(d)(2)(ii), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251(d)(2)(ii)

(n43)Footnote 43. See Rule 256, 17 C.F.R. § 230.256.

For further guidance in regard to advertising, see Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-3844, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) 3250-3256 (1957); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5009, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot] 1465 and [Middle dot] 77,744 (1969); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5092, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot] 23,120A and [Middle dot] 77,915 (1970); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5101, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot] 77,929 (1970); and Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5180, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot] 3056 and [Middle dot] 78,192 (1971).

These releases allow the use of newspaper advertisements and sales presentations made by the use of other literature so long as it is clearly understood that the actual offer and sale of the securities will be made only through the offering circular. Any additional offering documents or oral or written presentations should clearly state that the offering will be made only through the offering circular (n44)Footnote 44. Rule 258(a)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.258(a)(2). The authority of the SEC in regard to suspension of the Regulation A exemption generally is discussed in § 5.02[11], infra.

(n45)Footnote 45. Rule 253(e)(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.253(e)(1).

(n46)Footnote 46. Rule 253(e)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.253(e)(2).

Continuous or delayed offerings may be made under Regulation A when permitted by and carried out in accordance with Rule 415 under the Securities Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.415 ("Delayed or Continuous Offering and Sale of Securities"), see Rule 251(d)(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.252(d)(3).

(n47)Footnote 47. Rule 253(e)(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.253(e)(3).

(n48)Footnote 48. Rule 257, 17 C.F.R. § 230.257.

(n49)Footnote 49. Rule 260(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.260(a).

(n50)Footnote 50. Id., Rule 260(a)(2).

(n51)Footnote 51. 15 U.S.C. § 77s (Injunctions and Prosecution of Offenses).

(n52)Footnote 52. Integration as applicable to section 3(b) offerings generally, is discussed further in § 5.05[2], infra.

(n53)Footnote 53. See Rule 254(d), 17 C.F.R. § 230.254(d).

(n54)Footnote 54. 17 C.F.R. § 230.701.

(n55)Footnote 55. 17 C.F.R. § 230.901-904. Regulation S exempts qualifying offers and sales of securities occurring outside the United States.

(n56)Footnote 56. Rule 251(c), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251(c).

For discussion of the general criteria used to determine whether offerings should be integrated, see Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4434, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot][Middle dot] 2270-2277 (1961); and Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-4552, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot][Middle dot] 2770-2783 (1962). Integration of small issue offerings generally is considered further in § 5.05[2], infra.

(n57)Footnote 57. Rule 259(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.259(a).

(n58)Footnote 58. Rule 259(b), 17 C.F.R. § 230.259(b).

(n59)Footnote 59. But see SEC v. Blazon Corporation, 609 F.2d 960 (9th Cir. 1979), in which the court concluded that use of a Regulation A offering circular which becomes false or misleading by reason of the issuer's failure to amend does not result in loss of the section 3(b) exemption from full registration under the Securities Act. Regulation A, said the court, provides the SEC with the mechanism to deal with such problems through suspension of the exemption. To allow the SEC to invalidate the exemption entirely would circumvent the suspension procedure designed to deal with false and misleading Regulation A documents, see 609 F.2d at 968-69 .

(n60)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Santana International, Inc., Admin. Proc. File No.3-6666, Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6736 (Sept. 2, 1987); Tanzeer Management Corp., Admin. Proc. File No. 3-6665, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6735 (Sept. 2, 1987).

(n61)Footnote 61. Rule 258(a)(1)-(7), 17 C.F.R. § 230.258(a)(1)-(7).

See, e.g., Brian V. Hanson Enterprises, Inc., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6668, 1986 SEC LEXIS 503 (Oct. 20, 1986) (Order permanently suspending Regulation A exemption where there were material omissions from the notification and offering circular, and the promoter and principal shareholder failed to cooperate with the inquiry regarding the offering circular); see also Silkaro Capital Corp., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6734, 1987 SEC LEXIS 3812 (Sept. 2, 1987) (Permanent suspension based on omission of material facts in offering circular concerning the identity of an additional promoter and affiliate of the issuer).

(n62)Footnote 62. Id., Rule 258(b)-(c).

Under Rule 258, the SEC may at any time after notice and an opportunity for hearing, enter an order permanently suspending a Regulation A exemption for any reason on which it could have entered a temporary order. Id.

60 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.03

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.03 Regulation D: Rule 505 Offerings

Rule 505 under the Securities Act n1 was adopted as part of Regulation D of the Securities Act under the authority of section 3(b), and is an exemption alternative for issuers who offer and sell up to $5,000,000 of securities in any 12 month period. n2 Unlike Regulation A, Rule 505 is a true exemption from registration requirements. There is no offering statement filing, and no SEC qualification process. n3 On the other hand, there are important restrictions. Issuers relying on Rule 505 may sell to an unlimited number of "accredited investors," but only up to 35 other persons who do not satisfy the standards used to determine accredited investor status. n4 Also unlike Regulation A, purchasers in a Rule 505 offering receive "restricted" securities, meaning they are not freely tradable and may not be sold without registration or an available exemption. n5 Moreover, the issuer in a Rule 505 offering must take reasonable care to assure that purchasers of securities in the offering are not deemed to be statutory "underwriters" as that term is defined in section 2(11) of the Securities Act n6 if there are resales of the securities. Issuers are able to demonstrate reasonable care by:

- Making a reasonable inquiry to determine that the purchaser is acquiring the securities for himself, herself, or for other persons;
- Making written disclosure to each purchaser prior to sale that the securities have not been registered under the Securities Act, and cannot be resold unless they are registered under the Act or there is an available exemption from registration; and
- Placing a legend on the certificate or other document that evidences the securities stating that the securities have not been registered under the Act and setting forth or referring to the restrictions on transferability and sale of the securities. n7

Purchasers themselves may effect resales only in transactions and circumstances in which they would not be deemed underwriters, and therefore entitled to rely upon the exemption in section 4(1) of the Securities Act, n8 which provides that the registration requirements do not apply to transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer. Rule 144 under the Act n9 provides a safe harbor for resales of restricted securities, but imposes significant limitations and requirements, including up to a one year holding period. n10

Rule 505 offerings are subject to other general conditions applicable to Regulation D offerings. Thus, for example, no general solicitation or advertising is permitted. n11 General conditions in Regulation D also impose information requirements regarding sales to persons who are not accredited investors. While no offering circular, as such, is required for an offering pursuant to Rule 505, Regulation D specifically requires that the issuer must furnish non-accredited investors information that is the same kind as would be required in Part II of Regulation A -the offering circular. n12 Required financial statement information is prescribed based on the size of the offering. n13

On its face it appears that if a Rule 505 offering will include non-accredited investors there is no advantage in proceeding under it rather than Regulation A itself. In fact, there are significant advantages to proceeding under Regulation A since there is no restriction on the number of purchasers, the securities sold are freely tradable, and there may be general solicitation and advertising in the offering. There is, however, an important consideration for issuers deciding to rely on Rule 505 over Regulation A. Rule 505 has a significant advantage over Regulation A when state securities regulation is taken into account. All states have adopted some version of the NASAA Uniform Limited Offering Exemption ("ULOE"), or an equivalent, to facilitate offerings under Regulation D Rules 505 and 506. n14 In contrast to Regulation A offerings, which are fully subject to state registration and qualification requirements, compliance with ULOE conditions means that a Rule 505 offering will be exempt from those registration and qualification requirements. n15 Thus, for small business capital formation Rule 505, in conjunction with the ULOE or its equivalent does present a practical alternative to Regulation A. n16

The utility of either Regulation A or Rule 505 may be seen as significantly diminished today in comparison to offerings made pursuant Rule 506 of Regulation D. n17 Rule 506 was not adopted under the authority of Securities Act section 3(b), but rather section 4(2) of the Act, n18 which exempts "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering" from federal registration requirements. Because it was not adopted under section 3(b) of the Act, Rule 506 provides an exemption without regard to the dollar amount of an offering. And like Rule 505, an offering under Rule 506 may be made to an unlimited number of accredited investors and up to 35 non-accredited investors. n19 The general conditions of Regulation D apply to Rule 506 offerings in the same manner as for Rule 505 offerings. A significant difference, however, is that Rule 506 includes a specific purchaser sophistication requirement for non-accredited investors. Under Rule 506, each purchaser who is not an accredited investor must, either alone or with a purchaser representative, have such knowledge and experience in financial and business matters to be capable of evaluating the merits and risks of the prospective investment. n20 This is in addition to the information requirements applicable under Regulation D generally. n21 And Rule 506 offerings are likewise subject to the manner of offering limitations prohibiting general solicitation or advertising. n22

In addition to the unlimited amount of an offering permitted under Rule 506, the major difference between Rule 506 and offerings under either Rule 505 or Regulation D is that securities offered and sold pursuant to a valid Rule 506 exemption are "covered securities" under NSMIA. n23 As such, they are not subject to state registration or qualification requirements. n24

In the context of Securities Act section 3(b) small issue exemptions, because a Rule 506 offering is not constrained by the $5 million section 3(b) amount limitation that is applicable to Rule 505, and because state authority to require registration or qualification of a compliant Rule 506 offering is preempted by NSMIA, n25 the relative utility of both Regulation A and Rule 505 is significantly diminished. Accepting the amount limitation, however, Rule 505 remains as a viable alternative for small business issuers because there is no purchaser sophistication requirement. For Regulation A the important consideration is that, subject to the amount limitation, it permits a truly "public" offering. There is no distinction between accredited and non-accredited purchasers, and no limitation on the number of purchasers. Rule 505 and Regulation A may be much less utilized than Rule 506, but each retains a specific application niche that is meaningful for small business capital formation. A further alternative adopted under Securities Act section 3(b) is considered below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 17 C.F.R. § 230.505.

(n2)Footnote 2. In determining the actual amount limitation for a particular offering the aggregate offering price for all securities sold within the twelve months before the start of and during the Rule 505 offering in reliance on any other exemption under section 3(b) of the Securities Act must be subtracted. See Rule 505(b)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.505(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Companies using the Rule 505 exemption are required to file Form D -Notice of Sales--with the SEC no later than 15 days after the first sale of the securities. Specifically as to Rule 505 offerings, the Form D notice must contain an undertaking by the issuer to furnish to the Commission, upon the written request of its staff, the information furnished by the issuer any purchaser that is not an accredited investor. See Regulation D, Rule 503(a), (c), 17 C.F.R. § 230.503(a), (c). Form D requirements, as applicable to all offerings made pursuant to Regulation, and as amended in February 2008, are specifically discussed in § 5.05[2], infra. For an in-depth discussion of how to perform a Rule 505 offering see Loo, "The Regulation D Exemption," § 2.04 in A.A. Sommer, Jr., gen. ed., Securities Law Techniques (Matthew Bender).

(n4)Footnote 4. "Accredited investor" is defined in Rule 501(a) of Regulation D, 17 C.F.R. § 230.501(a), as:

- A bank, insurance company, registered investment company, business development company, or small business investment company;
- An employee benefit plan, within the meaning of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, if a bank, insurance company, or registered investment adviser makes the investment decisions, or if the plan has total assets in excess of $5 million;
- A charitable organization, corporation or partnership with assets exceeding $5 million;
- A director, executive officer, or general partner of the company selling the securities;
- A business in which all the equity owners are accredited investors;
- A natural person with a net worth of at least $1 million;
- A natural person with income exceeding $200,000 in each of the two most recent years or joint income with a spouse exceeding $300,000 for those years and a reasonable expectation of the same income level in the current year; or
- A trust with assets of at least $5 million, not formed to acquire the securities offered, and whose purchases are directed by a sophisticated person.

In determining the 35 non-accredited purchaser limitation Rule 505 incorporates the counting methodology set out in Rule 501(e) of Regulation D, 17 C.F.R. § 230.501(e). Under that rule, certain persons are excluded from the count, including any relative, spouse or relative of the spouse of a purchaser who has the same principal residence as the purchaser. Id., 17 C.F.R. § 230.501(e)(1)(i).

(n5)Footnote 5. Rule 502(d), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 77b(11) (2000).

(n7)Footnote 7. 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(d)(1)-(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(1) (2000).

(n9)Footnote 9. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144.

(n10)Footnote 10. Id., Rule 144(d). The holding period under Rule 144 is either six months or one year depending upon whether the issuer is a reporting company under sections 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act. If the issuer of the securities is not, or has not been for a period of at least 90 days immediately before the sale, subject to the reporting requirements of section 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act, a minimum of one year must elapse between the later of the date of the acquisition of the securities from the issuer, or from an affiliate of the issuer, and any resale of such securities in reliance on this section for the account of either the acquirer or any subsequent holder of those securities.

(n11)Footnote 11. Id., Rule 502(c).

Regulation D does provide, however, that publication by an issuer of a notice made in accordance with Securities Act Rule 135c, 17 C.F.R. § 230.135c, will not be considered to be general solicitation or general advertising, see Rule 502(c)(2). Securities Act Rule 135c permits an issuer that is subject to reporting requirements under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to give notice of a proposed offering in the form of a published statement that states that securities to be offered will not be or have not been registered under the Securities Act and may not be offered or sold in the United States absent registration or an available exemption from registration, and which contains no more than the following additional information:

- The name of the issuer;
- The title, amount and basic terms of the securities offered, the amount of the offering, if any, made by selling security holders, the time of the offering and a brief statement of the manner and purpose of the offering without naming the underwriters; and
- Any statement or legend required by state or foreign law, or administrative authority.

For rights or exchange offerings certain additional information is permitted. Rule 135c(a)(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.135c(a)(3). Rule 135c provides for a "notice," and although the rule references a proposed offering, it does not include any provision for solicitation of interest or a response to the notice.

(n12)Footnote 12. Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(A), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(b)(2)(i)(A).

There are no requirements or restriction as to what information is given to accredited investors, although antifraud prohibitions always apply. However, Rule 502 of Regulation D does mandate that if an issuer provides information to accredited investors, it must make the same information available to non-accredited investors as well, see Rule 502(b)(2)(iv). The issuer must also be available to answer questions by prospective purchasers. Id., Rule 502(b)(2)(v).

(n13)Footnote 13. Id., Rule 502(b)(2)(i)(B).

(n14)Footnote 14. See NASAA Reports (CCH) [Middle dot]6201, at 6101 - 6105.

(n15)Footnote 15. The impact of state securities regulation generally on offerings made pursuant to the federal small issue exemptions is discussed in § 5.09, infra.

(n16)Footnote 16. However, the ULOE has its own set of conditions. For example, there is a suitability requirement for non-accredited investors. For a discussion of the interface between Rule 505 and the ULOE at the state level, see Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation § 10.04[1] (2d ed. Matthew Bender & Co.).

(n17)Footnote 17. 17 C.F.R. § 230.506.

Rule 506 and all elements of Regulation D is discussed further in § 4.04 [2]-[5], supra.

(n18)Footnote 18. 15 U.S.C. § 77(d)(2) (2000).

(n19)Footnote 19. Rule 506(b)(2)(i), 17 C.F.R. § 230.506(b)(2)(i).

(n20)Footnote 20. Rule 506(b)(2)(ii), 17 C.F.R. § 230.506(b)(2)(ii).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Rule 502(b), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(b).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Rule 502(c), 17 C.F.R. § 502(c).

(n23)Footnote 23. Section 18(b)(4)(D) of the Securities Act of 1933, added by NSMIA, includes within the definition of "covered security" any security with respect to a transaction that is exempt from registration under the Securities Act pursuant to:

Commission rules or regulations issued under section 4(2), except that this subparagraph does not prohibit a State from imposing notice filing requirements that are substantially similar to those required by rule or regulation under section 4(2) that are in effect on September 1, 1996. 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(D).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Securities Act section 18(a)(1)(A), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(a)(1)(A). However, NSMIA expressly preserved state antifraud enforcement authority. Id., § 77r(c).

(n25)Footnote 25. The critical factor in assessing the scope of preemption under NSMIA is the presence of a NSMIA "covered security." While the classes of covered securities are spelled out in NSMIA, Congress made no provision for any determination as to the actual validity of covered security status claimed for any particular security involved in an offering. This is an important notion where, as with offerings made in reliance upon Rule 506 of SEC Regulation D, there are conditions to be met for an issuer to avail itself of the exemption. Whether covered security status for purposes of federal preemption rests on a determination of actual validity versus simple reliance on a NSMIA-recognized federal exemption is critical in assessing the permitted scope of state authority to regulate offerings. In fact, state regulators and state courts are today openly testing, if not outright challenging, the limits of NSMIA preemption based upon the actual validity of covered security status. See Robert N. Rapp & Fritz E. Berckmueller, "Testing the Limits of NSMIA Preemption: State Authority to Determine the Validity of Covered Securities and to Regulate Disclosure" 63 Bus. Lawyer 809 (May 2008).

61 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.04

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.04 Regulation D: Rule 504 Offerings

As a further small issue exemption adopted by the SEC under the authority of section 3(b), Rule 504 of Regulation D n1 creates an exemption from federal registration requirements for offerings not exceeding $1million. n2 There are issuer qualifications that are consistent with those applicable to Regulation A and Rule 505 offerings. To be eligible to use Rule 504 the issuer may not be a reporting company under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or a registered investment company, or a development stage company with no specific business plan, or if it has a business plan to engage in an unidentified merger or acquisition. n3 Subject to the $1 million amount limitation, there are no limitations on the number of purchasers, or their qualifications. Although a compliant Rule 504 offering is exempt from federal registration requirements, they are fully subject to registration and qualification requirements under state Blue Sky laws. n4 Securities offered and sold pursuant to Rule 504 are not federal covered securities for NSMIA preemption of state authority, and the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption ("ULOE") or its equivalent adopted by states does not encompass Rule 504 offerings.

Although Rule 504 offerings must comply with registration requirements under state Blue Sky laws, and be subject to registration by "qualification" in those states providing for merit review of offerings, in some cases special provision has been made to lessen the burden on small corporate offerings. A number of states, for example have implemented the Uniform Limited Offering Registration ("ULOR") protocol, designed specifically to facilitate offerings up to $1 million pursuant to federal Rule 504. n5 The ULOR and SCOR n6 may be referenced interchangeably, and both are based upon use of Form U-7, the SCOR registration statement.

Rule 504 mandates that offers and sale satisfy the general Regulation D terms and conditions regarding integration of offerings, manner of offering, and limitations on resale. n7 However, the role of state securities laws in regard to Rule 504 offerings is significant because the applicability of and compliance with certain state requirements eliminates the need for issuer compliance with general conditions of federal Regulation D regarding the manner of offering and limitations on resale. n8 These conditions are excused for offerings that are made:

- Exclusively in one or more states that provide for the registration of the securities, and require the public filing and delivery to investors of a substantive disclosure document before sale, and are made in accordance with those provisions;

- In one or more states that have no provision for the registration of the securities or the public filing or delivery of a disclosure document before sale, if the securities have been registered in at least one state that provides for such registration, public filings and delivery before sale, offers and sales are made in that state in accordance with such provisions, and the disclosure document is delivered before sale to all purchasers (including those in the states that have no such procedure; or
- Exclusively according to state law exemptions from registration that permit general solicitation and general advertising so long as sales are made only to "accredited investors" as defined in Regulation D.

n9

As with all offerings conducted pursuant to Securities Act Regulation D, an issuer must file with the SEC a notice on Form D no later than 15 days after the first sale of securities. n10

Rule 504 is most commonly used by start-up companies to raise seed capital. Although it permits a "public" offering, as a practical matter the small amount involved is not likely to lead to any widespread distribution of the securities. The Securities Act section 3(b) exemptions are premised on the conclusion that enforcement of federal registration requirements is not necessary in the public interest and for protection of investors by reason of the small amount involved or the limited character of the offering. n11 Rule 504 fits well with that premise, and with the further premise that state regulation will provide necessary protection in the limited or localized context of the offering. That is clearly the import of the state registration-related alternatives for excusing manner of offering and resale limitations discussed above. It is because of that, however, that the real utility of Rule 504 as a federal safe harbor for small issues depends entirely upon the manner in which state securities regulation burdens the process. That, in turn, is a function of the extent to which those states that continue "merit review" of offerings allow the process to be cost effective for small business issuers. Fortunately, meaningful efforts have been made to minimize the burden without compromising investor protection.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 17 C.F.R. § 230.504.

Rule 504 and all elements of Regulation D is discussed further in § 4.04 [2]-[5], supra. For an in-depth discussion of how to perform a Rule 504 offering see Loo, "Offerings of Securities Pursuant to Regulation A," § 2.03 in A.A. Sommer, Jr., gen. ed., Securities Law Techniques (Matthew Bender).

(n2)Footnote 2. The $1 million maximum offering limitation under Rule 504 must be reduced by the aggregate offering price for all securities sold within the twelve months before the start of and during the offering in reliance on any exemption under section 3(b) of the Securities Act. Rule 504(b)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.504(b)(2). Integration of section 3(b) offerings generally is discussed in § 5.05[3], infra. Rule 504 itself is discussed in greater detail in § 5.04, supra.

(n3)Footnote 3. Rule 504(a)(1)-(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.504(a)(1)-(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. For an examination of the application of state Blue Sky laws to Rule 504 offerings, see Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation § 10.05 (2d Ed., Matthew Bender & Co.).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. § 421-B-15-a ("Uniform Limited Offering Registration").

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 5.02[3], supra, for a discussion of SCOR offerings in the context of Regulation A under the federal Securities Act.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Rule 504(b)(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.504(b)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Id.

(n9)Footnote 9. Rule 504(b)(1)(i)-(iii).

Rule 504 offerings are excluded from the "information requirements" general condition of Securities Act Regulation D, see Rule 502(b)(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(b)(1) ("The issuer is not required to furnish the specified information to purchasers when it sells securities under § 230.504, or to any accredited investor"). However, compliance with state securities laws will in most cases require use of a prospectus or offering circular. And as seen here, use of a state law mandated disclosure document is a specific condition under Rule 504 if there is to be general solicitation or advertising in the offering, and if purchasers are to receive freely tradable securities rather than restricted securities.

(n10)Footnote 10. Rule 503(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.503(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(b).

62 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.05

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.05 Section 3(b) Offerings -Special Considerations

[1] Angel Capital Electronic Network

Specifically designed for small companies, the Angel Capital Electronic Network ("ACE-Net") was established by the Office of Advocacy of the U.S. Small Business Administration ("SBA") as an Internet site where companies may list their Regulation A and Regulation D Rule 504/SCOR offerings. ACE-Net is a cooperative effort between the SBA, nine universities, and other non-profit organizations to provide a listing service where small companies may list their stock offerings for review by accredited investors, who are pre-qualified to have access to the site and the listings. In addition to the listing service for Regulation A and Rule 504 offerings, ACE-Net provides mentoring and educational services for small companies needing business planning and securities information. n1

[2] Revised Form D and Electronic Filing

As provided in Rule 503 of Regulation D, Form D is the notice that issuers must file with the SEC no later than 15 days after the first sale of securities in an offering made under any of the provisions of Regulation D. Form D is also used for notice filing with state securities administrators in connection with offerings under federal Rules 505 and 506. n2 In February 2008, the SEC amended Form D and its content requirements in order to: (1) obtain information regarding continuous offerings, such as the date of the first offering and the expected length of the offering; (2) clarify when amendments are required for Form D; (3) require annual amendments of Form D for continuing offerings regardless of when the initial filing was made; and (4) require the electronic filing of Form D on a new online filing system. Beginning September 15, 2008 issuers may elect to file Form D electronically, or continue to make paper filings until March 16, 2009, when they are required to make electronic filings using the revised version of the form. n3

Revised Form D includes the following additional information:

- The date of first sale of securities in the offering;
- The Central Registration Depository ("CRD") number, if applicable, for each person who has acted as a promoter of the issuer's securities within the past five years;

- Whether the offering is expected to last more than one year;
- The revenue range for the most recently completed fiscal year or the net asset value as of the most reasonably practicable date (the issuer may elect not to provide this information);
- The minimum offering amount;
- The provision of Regulation D on which the issuer is relying for the offering;
- Expenses relating to sales commissions or any amounts paid to officers, directors or promoters out of the proceeds of the offering;
- Information for multiple issuers, if applicable, if engaging in a combined offering; and
- The type of business carried on by the issuer. n4

Rule 503 and the instructions to Form D were also amended to clarify requirements for amending a previously filed Form D particularly in regard to continuing offerings. Issuers in continuing offerings must file updating amendments every year during the continuation of the offering. Amended Rule 503 further requires that an amendment to Form D must be made as soon as practicable after (1) discovery of a material mistake or error; or (2) a change in the information provided in the previously filed Form D. n5

[3] Integration of Offerings

Because each of the offerings authorized under Securities Act section 3(b) is subject to a maximum amount limitation, the extent to which separate offerings are integrated so as to be considered part of the same offering is critical in assuring the availability of the particular exemption. There are safe harbors available to avoid integration.

Offers and sales made in reliance on Regulation A will not be integrated with: (1) prior offers or sales of securities; or (2) subsequent offers or sales of securities that are:

- a) registered under the Securities Act, except as provided in Rule 254(d) regarding "testing the waters;"
- b) made in reliance on Rule 701 (which provides an exemption for certain offerings made to the issuer's employees);
- c) made pursuant to an employee benefit plan;
- d) made in reliance on Regulation S (which exempts from registration certain offerings made outside of the United States); or
- e) made more than six months after the completion of the Regulation A offering (however, deductions from the amount available under the Regulation A ceiling for the second offering may be required). n6

These specific integration criteria are "safe harbor" provisions. However, Regulation A also expressly recognizes that if an issuer offers or sells securities for which the safe harbor rules are not available, such offers and sales may still not be integrated with the Regulation A offering, depending upon the particular facts and circumstances, and the application of general integration factors articulated by the SEC that have long been in place. n7 The factors are:

- Whether the sales are part of a single plan of financing;

- Whether the sales involve issuance of the same class of securities;
- Whether the sales have been made at or about the same time;
- Whether the same type of consideration is received; and
- Whether the sales are made for the same general purpose. n8

For Rule 504 and 505 offerings under Securities Act Regulation D, there is also a non-integration safe harbor. Offers and sales that are made more than six months before the start or six months after the completion of the Regulation D offering will not be integrated with that Regulation D offering, so long as during those six month periods there are no offers or sales of securities that are of the same or a similar class as those offered under Regulation D. n9 As with Regulation A, if the issuer offers or sells securities for which the Regulation D safe harbor is not available, the determination whether separate sales of securities should be treated as part of the same offering depends on the particular facts and circumstances. In making that determination the SEC integration factors discussed above apply with equal force. n10

[4] Substantial Compliance

Regulation A and Regulation D share an identical provision providing relief from insignificant deviations from a term, condition or requirement. n11 For Regulation A, Rule 504 and Rule 505 offerings the failure to comply with a term, condition or requirement will not result in the loss of the exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act for any offer or sale to a particular individual or entity, provided that the issuer or person relying on the exemption establishes:

- The failure to comply did not pertain to a term, condition or requirement directly intended to protect that particular individual or entity;
- The failure to comply was insignificant with respect to the offering as a whole, recognizing, however, that the failure to comply with certain requirements shall be deemed to be significant with respect to the offering as a whole; n12 and
- A good faith and reasonable attempt was made to comply with all applicable terms, conditions and requirements.

These provisions operate to avoid the calamitous result of loss of an exemption for an entire offering by reason of a single violation, as for example, the sale in a Rule 505 offering to a person reasonably believed to be an accredited investor who in fact fails to meet the requisite net worth criterion. Reference to an insignificant deviation from a term, condition or requirement fairly implies an isolated failure in the context of a good faith undertaking to comply. It is certain that multiple failures in the same offering, however insignificant, would not support invocation of Rule 508 in defense. A key condition to relief under Rule 508 is that the failure to comply does not relate to something directly intended to protect the purchaser. Thus, for example, the offering circular requirement of Regulation A and the information requirement for non-accredited investors under Regulation D are plainly intended to protect individual purchasers, and would not qualify for relief under the insignificant deviation provisions.

[5] Relief from Disqualifications

Rule 262 of Regulation A n13 and Rule 505 of Regulation D n14 provide that neither exemption is available for the securities of an issuer that is subject to any of the disqualification provisions set out in Rule 262 of Regulation A.

Disqualifications apply to the issuer itself as well as persons presently or formerly associated with the issuer or the underwriter of its securities. The main focus of the disqualification relating to specified individuals is on whether they have committed specified securities law violations within five years of the filing of an offering statement. Included in this category are individuals who could have significant influence on an issuer's activities. As for issuers, those which have been sanctioned for past violations of the securities laws, or have been subject to a governmental enforcement action resulting in an injunction or criminal conviction within the previous five years, disqualify the issuer from using the Regulation A exemption. This rule also applies to predecessors and affiliated issuers in order to prevent issuers who would otherwise be ineligible to use the exemption from avoiding the disability provisions. n15

Although a disqualifying criterion may apply, Regulation A also provides a means for seeking relief from the disqualification. Rule 262 provides that a disqualified issuer or person can request that the SEC waive the disqualification upon a showing of good cause and without prejudice to any other action the Commission may take. n16 Rule 505 of Regulation D, which incorporates the Rule 262 disqualifying criteria by reference, likewise provides that the disqualification will not be applied if the Commission determines, upon a showing of good cause, "that it is not necessary under the circumstances that the exemption be denied. n17 "Good cause" is approached subjectively, and may include an assessment of the fairness of the penalty of disqualification in particular circumstances in which the disqualified entity, particularly one disqualified as an affiliate, is actually remote from any conduct that formed the basis of disqualification. n18

[6] Intermediary Regulation

The small issue exemptions established under Securities Act section 3(b) generally have no impact on the regulation of intermediaries that undertake those offerings with or on behalf of the issuer. Broker-dealers and agents engaged in underwriting activities, or sales generally, remain subject to licensing requirements under state Blue Sky laws.

Small business issuers may in many cases undertake to offer and sell securities directly. Most states accommodate direct issuer capital formation activities by specifically excluding issuers from the definitions of "broker" or "dealer" in their Blue Sky Laws. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act, for example, provides that the term "broker-dealer" means a person engaged in the business of effecting transactions in securities for the account of others or for the person's own account, but the term expressly does not include an issuer. n19 States without an express exclusion of issuers from the key definition incorporate one into an exemption from the broker-dealer registration requirement itself. Some others, however, impose notice requirements on issuers who engage in the offer and sale of their own securities. "Issuer agents," "finders," and other agents acting on behalf of the issuer may be subject to licensing or registration requirements at the state level. n20

The Regulation A offering process is subject to all state law provisions for licensing or registration of intermediaries that are a part of it. Because these requirements are not entirely uniform, the issuer's consideration of Rule 504 and 505 of Regulation D and Regulation A alternatives may be impacted by the extent to which state Blue Sky laws permit involvement by intermediaries not required to be licensed or registered as broker-dealers or agents. Because Rule 505 of Regulation D interfaces with the ULOE, or a ULOE analog, at the state level, a state exemption from licensing requirements for intermediaries engaged exclusively in the offer and sale of exempt securities would be significant, as there is no securities exemption in Blue Sky laws that is designed to interface with Regulation A.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. ACE-Net is available at <http://www.ace-net.org>.

(n2)Footnote 2. Although securities offered and sold in a Rule 506 compliant offering are federal covered securities under NSMIA, and for state registration and qualification requirements are thus preempted, NSMIA expressly preserved the right of state securities administrators to require notice filings, and to assess fees, see 15 U.S.C. § 77r(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Securities Act Rel. No. 33-8891, "Electronic Filing and Revision of Form D" (Feb. 6, 2008).

(n4)Footnote 4. Id.

(n5)Footnote 5. Id.

(n6)Footnote 6. Rule 251(c), 17 C.F.R. § 230.251(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Securities Act Rel. No. 4552 (Nov. 6, 1962).

(n8)Footnote 8. Rule 502(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(a).

The SEC staff will not issue interpretations on integration questions generally, and in connection with Regulation A offerings specifically, see Suburban Bankshares, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act LEXIS 2465 (June 17, 1983).

(n9)Footnote 9. Rule 502(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. Id. ("Note").

(n11)Footnote 11. See Regulation A: Rule 260(a)(1)-(3), 17 C.F.R. § 230.260(a)(1)-(3); Regulation D: Rule 508(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.508(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. For Regulation A offerings, the failure to comply with the eligibility rule, the amount limitation, offer restrictions, and conditions applicable to continuous or delayed offerings will not be excused, see Rule 260(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.260(a)(2). Under Regulation D, the failure to comply with manner of offering limitations, and the integration provision applicable to both Rule 504 and 505 offerings is deemed to be significant, see Rule 508(a)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. 17 C.F.R. § 230.262.

(n14)Footnote 14. 17 C.F.R. § 230.505(b)(2)(iii).

(n15)Footnote 15. For all disqualifications, which are applicable to Regulation A offerings and also, by incorporation, to offerings under Rule 505 of Regulation D, see Regulation A Rule 262(a)-(c), 17 C.F.R. § 230.262(a)-(c).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp., SEC No Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act LEXIS 934 (Sept. 22, 1992) (Disqualification waived where conduct related to a single, isolated underwriting, and did not involve reckless, negligent or deficient practices).

(n17)Footnote 17. Rule 505(b)(2)(iii)(C). As with Regulation A Rule 262, Rule 505 also provides that any determination made by the SEC is without prejudice to any other action by the Commission in any other proceeding or matter with respect to the issuer or any other person.

(n18)Footnote 18. See General Electric Company, SEC No-Action Letter, 1988 SEC No-Act LEXIS 754 (May 24, 1988) (Activities which formed the basis of disqualification occurred at an acquired company and prior to the time of the acquisition, and none of the persons directly or indirectly controlling the acquiring company were the subject of disqualifying actions).

(n19)Footnote 19. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 104(4)(B).

(n20)Footnote 20. See generally Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation § 10.02[3] (2d ed. Matthew Bender & Co.)

63 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.06

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.06 Other Section 3(b) Offerings

Although Regulation A and Rules 504 and 505 of Regulation D under the Securities Act are most closely identified with Securities Act section 3(b), there are two special purpose exemptions established by SEC rules that fall within the prescribed limits of section 3(b). Rule 701 under the Securities Act n1 creates an exemption from Securities Act registration requirements for offers and sales of securities pursuant to certain compensatory benefit plans and contracts relating to compensation. Rule 236 under the Securities Act n2 is an exemption available for issuers that sell securities to provide funds for distribution to shareholders in lieu of issuing fractional shares or scrip certificates in connection with a stock split, reverse stock split, conversion, merger, or like transaction. Neither of these exemptions is focused on capital formation, and they are not relevant for "small issues" in that setting. Nevertheless, both are products of section 3(b) exemption authority and are part of the complete picture of section 3(b) in operation. Each is discussed further below.

[1] Rule 701: Compensatory Benefit Plans

Rule 701 under the Securities Act creates a small offering exemption from registration requirements for issuers that are not subject to the reporting requirements of sections 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act that offer and sell securities under a written compensatory benefit plan or written compensation contract. The rule makes clear that its purpose is to provide an exemption from registration requirements for securities issued in compensatory circumstances. It is not available for plans or schemes designed to circumvent that purpose, such as to raise capital. n3

For purposes of the exemption, a compensatory benefit plan means any purchase, savings, option, bonus, stock appreciation, profit-sharing, thrift, incentive, deferred compensation, pension or similar plan n4 established by the issuer, its parents, its majority-owned subsidiaries or majority-owned subsidiaries of the issuer's parent, for the participation of employees, directors, general partners, trustees, officers, or consultants and advisers. n5 The maximum aggregate sale price or amount of securities sold in reliance on Rule 701 during any consecutive 12 month period is the greater of $1 million or 15 percent of the total assets of the issuer, and 15 percent of the outstanding amount of the class of securities being offered. n6

Rule 701 imposes specific disclosure requirements. The issuer must deliver a copy of the compensatory benefit plan to investors and, if the aggregate sales price or amount of securities sold during any consecutive 12 month period exceeds $5,000,000, the following additional disclosures:

- A summary of the material terms of the plan;
- Information about the risks associated with an investment in the company; and
- Financial statements, including a balance sheet as of a date within 180 days, along with statements of income, cash flows, and stockholders' equity for two complete fiscal years and any interim period from the end of the last fiscal year to the balance sheet date. n7

Offerings made in conformity with Rule 701 will not be integrated with any other offering by the issuer. Offers and sales under Rule 701 are deemed to be part of a single, discrete offering and are not subject to integration with any other offers or sales, whether registered under the Securities Act or otherwise exempt from registration requirements. n8 However, securities issued pursuant to Rule 701 are considered "restricted securities" as defined in Rule 144 of the Securities Act. Any resales, therefore, must be registered or carried out in compliance with Rule 144 if no other exemption is available. n9

In 2007 the Securities and Exchange Commission amended Rule 701, along with Rule 12h-1 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, n10 with a view to expanding the ability of foreign private issuers n11 that are not U.S. reporting companies to provide stock-based compensation to their U.S. employees. n12 Those amendments are as follows:

- Effective March 4, 2008, the financial statements delivered to employee stock plan participants to satisfy Rule 701 may be prepared in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards ("IFRS") as issued by the International Accounting Standards Board ("IASB").
- Effective December 7, 2007, compensatory stock options that meet certain criteria will no longer independently trigger reporting requirements under the Exchange Act..

Previously, stock options were viewed as a separate class of equity securities of an issuer. If there were more than 300 U.S. option holders and more than 500 worldwide, the issuer could be subjected to Exchange Act reporting requirements. The 2007 amendment to Rule 12h-1 under the Exchange Act now exempts options from triggering Exchange Act reporting requirements, provided the following conditions are met:

- The company is not already a reporting company;
- The stock options are issued under a written compensatory plan;
- Stock options are held only by employees and other individuals eligible to participate in a Rule 701 plan, and their permitted transferees;
- Stock options and, prior to exercise, the underlying shares are not transferable other than to family members, through gifts or domestic relations orders, or to an executor or guardian upon the death or disability of the holder (or to the issuer in the event of a change in control);
- The stock options and, prior to exercise, the shares issuable upon exercise are restricted as to any pledge; and
- The company agrees in the written plan (or a stock option or other agreement) to provide certain information to option holders for as long as the issuer is relying on the exemption from reporting. n13

[2] Securities Act Rule 236 Offerings

Rule 236 n14 exempts from registration under the Securities Act, under certain conditions, shares of stock or similar security which are publicly offered to provide funds to be distributed to security holders in lieu of issuing fractional shares, scrip certificates, order forms, or other evidences of such fractional interest, in connection with a stock dividend, stock split, reverse stock split, conversion, merger or similar transaction. The conditions of the exemption are that the issuer is required to file and has filed reports with the Commission pursuant to Section 13 or 15 (d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, that the aggregate gross proceeds from the sale of the shares do not exceed $300,000 and that the issuer furnish information to the Commission at least 10 days prior to the offering of the shares, as follows:

- Notice that it proposes to offer shares in reliance on Rule 236;
- The estimated number of shares to be offered;
- The aggregate market value of the shares to be offered as of the latest practicable date; and
- A brief description of the transaction in connection with which the shares are being offered. n15

The information required by Rule 236 is needed to provide public notice that an issuer is relying on the exemption.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 17 C.F.R. § 230.701.

(n2)Footnote 2. 17 C.F.R. § 230.236.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Rule 701, Preliminary Note 5.

(n4)Footnote 4. Rule 701(c)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.701(c)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Rule 701(c)(1) sets out special requirements for sales of shares to "consultants and advisors." The critical condition is that these persons provide bona fide services to the issuer, its parents, its majority-owned subsidiaries or majority-owned subsidiaries of the issuer's parent; and those services are not in connection with the offer or sale of securities in a capital raising transaction. Similarly, the services may not directly or indirectly promote or maintain a market for the issuer's securities. See generally, Talbert Medical Management Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 887 (Sept. 16, 1997) (Professionals closely associated with the company in the administration and management of the company, and in providing important services, qualify as "consultants or advisers" under Rule 701(b)(1)); Princeton Medical Management Resources, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 888 (Sept. 12, 1997) (Physicians participating in the company's primary care delivery network are sufficiently closely associated with the company to qualify under Rule 701).

(n6)Footnote 6. Rule 701(d)(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.701(d)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. Rule 701(e), 17 C.F.R. § 230.701(e). Rule 701 does not itself require that the financial statements be audited. However, if the issuer's financial statements are audited for any other reason, then it must provided the audited financial statements for purposes of Rule 701 disclosure.

(n8)Footnote 8. Rule 701(f), 17 C.F.R. § 230.701(f).

(n9)Footnote 9. Rule 701(g), 17 C.F.R. § 230.701(g).

(n10)Footnote 10. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8879 (Dec. 21, 2007, eff. March 4, 2008).

Securities Exchange Act Rule 12h-1, 17 C.F.R. § 240.12h-1, was amended effective December 7, 2007, see Exchange Act Rel. No. 34-56887 (Dec. 3, 2007).

(n11)Footnote 11. A "foreign private issuer" for purposes of Rule 701 is defined in Rule 405 under the Securities Act as any foreign issuer other than a foreign government, but not including an issuer meeting the following conditions:

(1) More than 50 percent of the issuer's outstanding voting securities are directly or indirectly held of record by residents of the United States; and

(2) Any of the following:

a) The majority of the executive officers or directors are United States citizens or residents;

b) More than 50 percent of the assets of the issuer are located in the United States; or

c) The business of the issuer is administered principally in the United States.

See Securities Act Rule 405 ("Definition of Terms"), 17 C.F.R. § 230.405.

(n12)Footnote 12. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8879, N. 147, supra.

(n13)Footnote 13. Rule 12h-1(f), 17 C.F.R. § 240.12h-1(f).

(n14)Footnote 14. 17 C.F.R. § 230.236.

Provided the aggregate gross proceeds from the sale of all shares of stock offered in connection with a covered transaction and other conditions are met, Rule 236 establishes an exemption from Securities Act registration for:

Shares of stock or similar security offered to provide funds to be distributed to shareholders of the issuer of such securities in lieu of issuing fractional shares, scrip certificates or order forms, in connection with a stock dividend, stock split, reverse stock split, conversion, merger or similar transaction.

(n15)Footnote 15. Rule 236(c)(1)-(4), 17 C.F.R. § 230.236(c)(1)-(4).

64 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.07

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.07 Securities Act § 3(c): SEC Regulation E

[1] Regulation E--Generally

In section 3(c) of the Securities Act, n1 Congress authorized the SEC to adopt rules and regulations for the exemption securities offered and sold by a "small business investment company" organized under the Small Business Incentive Act of 1958. n2 The Commission responded in 1958 with the adoption of Regulation E under the Securities Act, n3 which provides an exemption from registration provisions of the Securities Act for securities issued:

by any small business investment company which is registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, or any closed-end investment company that has elected to be regulated as a business development company under the Investment Company Act of 1940 or has notified the Commission that it intends to elect to be regulated as a business development company pursuant to section 54 of the Investment Company Act of 1940... n4

As defined in Regulation E under the Securities Act, the term "small business investment company" means any company:

which is licensed as a small business investment company under the Small Business Investment Company Act of 1958 or which has received the preliminary approval of the Small Business Administration and has been notified by the Administration that it may submit a license application. n5

As with offerings made under exemptions adopted under section 3(b) of the Securities Act, the aggregate offering price of securities offered and sold under Regulation E is also $5 million. This limitation, however, is prescribed by Regulation E itself rather than section 3(c) of the Securities Act, which contains no limitation.

Small Business Investment Companies ("SBICs") are financial institutions which provide equity capital and long-term debt to the small business community. n6 SBICs are licensed by the U.S. Small Business Administration ("SBA"), but are privately-managed firms. In return for pledging to finance only small businesses, SBICs qualify for long-term financing from the SBA. SBICs make only long-term loans or equity investments; therefore, the interest of the small business owner and the SBIC coincide as both want the firm to grow and prosper. Most SBICs make their profit by owning equity in the borrower or by having an option to own equity in the small business. Securities Act section 3(c) and Regulation E, provide an avenue for SBICs in raising capital used to provide equity capital, long-term loans, debt equity investments and management assistance to qualifying small businesses. While most SBICs consider a wide variety of investment opportunities, others may elect to specialize in a certain business.

Regulation E is also available for offerings by a closed-end investment company that has elected to be regulated under the Investment Company Act of 1940 as a "Business Development Company ("BDC"). As used in Regulation E, the term "business development company" means: "Any closed-end investment company which meets the definitional requirements of section 2(a)(48)(A) and (B) of the Investment Company Act of 1940." n7 Business Development Companies operate as closed-end funds that make investments in private companies and thinly traded public companies through the use of senior debt, mezzanine financing, and equity funding. Equity capital provided by public shareholders, financial institutions, and debt capital from various sources may be used to make investments in growing small businesses and to acquire and value enhance existing shells. BDC investors can potentially enjoy the total return of capital appreciation and dividend yield offered, as well as an opportunity to participate in the growth of privately owned companies.

Regulation E requires SBICs and BDCs, when making an offering of securities pursuant to Regulation E, to notify the Commission of the offering by filing Form 1-E. n8 Filing of this form is mandatory, and must be made at least ten business days prior to the date on which the initial offering of securities is to be made. n9 The Commission staff uses the information to monitor usage of and compliance with Regulation E. The information collected on Form 1-E is publicly available, and includes information concerning:

- The issuer;
- Affiliates and principal security holders;
- Directors and officers;
- Counsel for the issuer and underwriters;
- Jurisdictions in which the securities are to be offered;
- Other unregistered securities issued or sold within one year;
- Other present or proposed offerings. n10

In operation, Regulation E parallels Regulation A in several ways. In calculating the maximum amount limitation, for example, all securities previously sold pursuant to a Regulation E offering that commenced within one year of the commencement of the proposed offering must be included. As with Regulation A, filing of an offering circular is required. The offering circular for a Small Business Investment Company is much like that used under Regulation A. Financial statements are to be included, although they need not be certified unless the issuer is otherwise required to file certified statements. Regulation E also contains requirements relating to the filing of sales materials. There are "bad boy" disqualifying criteria, and procedures for suspension of the exemption. These elements of Regulation E are discussed further below.

[2] Filing and Offering Procedures

The central elements of the Regulation E offering process are: (1) filing "notification" on Form 1-E at least 10 business days prior to the date on which the initial offering or sale of securities is to be made; n11 and (2) filing and using an Offering Circular. Upon written request, the SEC may permit a Regulation E offering to be commenced prior to the expiration of the 10 day Form 1-E notification filing. The offering circular, prepared in accordance with either Schedule A or B of Regulation E, as appropriate, n12 must be filed with the issuer's Form 1-E notification. If the offering circular is thereafter amended, a new 10 day period for review begins, unless a shorter time is allowed.

No written offer of securities by the issuer may be made unless the offering circular is concurrently given or has previously been given to the person to whom the offer is made, or has been sent to such person under such circumstances that it would normally have been received by the person at or prior to the time of such written offer. n13 No securities may be sold unless such an offering circular is given to the person to whom the securities are sold, or is sent to such person under such circumstances that it would normally be received by that person, with or prior to any confirmation of the sale, or prior to the payment of all or any part of the purchase price of the securities, whichever first occurs. n14

Although the SEC reviews offering circulars filed under Regulation E, as with Regulation A, no approval or "effectiveness" is involved. Moreover, an offering circular filed under Regulation E may be distributed prior to expiration of the 10 day waiting period provided it is labeled as a "Preliminary Offering Circular," and that it meets specific requirements for content and contains a prescribed legend. n15 Oral offers may be made in connection with use of the Preliminary Offering Circular. However, if any changes are made in the final offering circular the revised form must be provided to all persons to whom the securities are to be sold at least 48 hours prior to mailing a confirmation of sale. In any event, an offering circular which contains all of the information required by Schedule A or B of Regulation E and which is not designated as a Preliminary Offering Circular must be furnished with or prior to delivery of a confirmation of sale to any person who has been furnished with a Preliminary Offering Circular.

Prior to sending or giving an offering circular, Regulation E also permits a limited form of advertising or communication which states from whom an offering circular may be obtained, and contains no more than the following information:

- The name of the issuer of such security;
- The title of the security, the amount being offered, and the per-unit offering price to the public; and
- The identity of the general type of business of the issuer. n16

The Regulation E offering circular requirement does not apply to an offering for which the aggregate offering price of all securities of the issuer offered or sold without the use of an offering circular does not exceed $100,000, provided certain conditions are satisfied. n17 Those conditions require submission of Regulation E Schedule A or B information (with the exception of financial statements) along with the issuer's notification. Additionally, any advertisement must be limited solely to provide information regarding the name of the issuer; the title of the security being offered and the per unit offering price to the public; the identity of the general type of business of the issuer; and by whom orders will be filled or from whom further information may be obtained. n18

For Regulation E offerings generally, certain sales materials must be filed with the SEC at least five business days prior to being used, unless a shorter time is allowed. The specific sales materials to be filed are:

- Every advertisement, article or other communication proposed to be published in any newspaper, magazine or other periodical;
- The script of every radio or television broadcast; and
- Every letter, circular or other written communication proposed to be sent, given or otherwise communicated to more than 10 persons. n19

Reports of sales pursuant to Regulation E must be filed within 30 days after the end of each six month period following the date of the original offering circular or submission of the statement required for an offering under $100,000. SEC Form 2-E is prescribed for this purpose. A final report of sales must be made upon completion or termination of the offering. n20

As with Regulation A, compliance with Regulation E permits unrestricted offers and sales of the securities to an unlimited number or people. Likewise, there are no resale or other post-offering restrictions on securities sold pursuant to Regulation E. In all of this, however, and as with Regulation A offerings, there is no universal interface with exemptions in state Blue Sky laws. A Regulation E offering will be subject to state registration or qualification requirements unless there is an exemption for securities issued by small business investment companies or business development companies, or the offering is eligible for another exemption. n21

[3] Electronic Filing

Currently, Securities Act Regulation S-T--General Rules and Regulations for Electronic Filings n22--requires paper filings with the SEC in connection with offerings under Regulation E. However, in order to facilitate the efficient submission of filings, and to enable the public to access them more quickly and search them more easily, in 2007 the SEC proposed to make mandatory the electronic submission of Regulation E filings by small business investment companies and business development companies through EDGAR--the Electronic Data Gathering, Analysis, and Retrieval System. n23 The EDGAR Filer Manual (Volume II) n24 has been updated to describe the EDGAR electronic submission types that filers would use for electronic submission if and when the Commission adopts the proposal. Those submission types in connection with Regulation E filings are as follows:

- 1-E: Notification under Regulation E by small business investment companies and business development companies;
- 1-E/A: Amendment to a notification under Regulation E by small business investment companies and business development companies;
- 2-E: Report of sales of securities pursuant to Rule 609 under Regulation E;
- 2-E/A: Amendment to a report of sales of securities pursuant to Rule 609 under Regulation E;
- 1-E AD: Sales material filed pursuant to Rule 607 under Regulation E;
- 1-E AD/A: Amendment to sales material filed pursuant to Rule 607 under Regulation E.

Forms 1-E AD and 1-E AD/A above are new paper submission types that were added to the EDGAR Filer Manual. n25

[4] SEC Enforcement Authority under Regulation E

Under Regulation E the SEC is authorized to temporarily suspend the exemption and, following prescribed procedures, to make a suspension permanent. n26 By this authority the SEC may at any time enter an order temporarily suspending the Regulation A exemption if it has reason to believe:

- The exemption is not available, or any of the terms, conditions or requirements have not been complied with;
- The offering statement, any sales or solicitation of interest material contains any false or misleading statement of a material fact;

- The offering is being made or would be made in violation of the general antifraud prohibitions in section 17 of the Securities Act;
- An event has occurred after the initial filing of the offering statement which would have rendered the exemption unavailable if it had occurred prior to the filing;
- Criminal proceedings or a civil injunction action have been initiated against certain persons associated with the issuer; or
- The issuer or any promoter, officer, director or underwriter has failed to cooperate, or has obstructed or refused to permit an investigation by the Commission in connection with any offering made or proposed to be made in reliance upon Regulation E. n27

The order for a temporary suspension of the exemption becomes permanent thirty days after its entry, unless a hearing requested after the issuer is notified of the order and the reasons for it being issued. n28 Also, without issuing a temporary suspension, the Commission may at any time after notice and an opportunity for hearing permanently suspend the exemption. n29

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 661, et seq. The Small Business Investment Act ("SBIA") was designed to improve and stimulate the flow of private equity capital and long term loan funds to small businesses for financing expansion and growth. Under the SBIA the U.S. Small Business Administration is authorized, among other things, to license and provide funding to Small Business Investment Companies. Id. Section 3(c) of the Securities Act provides:

The Commission may from time to time by its rules and regulations and subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed therein, add to the securities exempted ... any class of securities issued by a small business investment company under the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 if it finds, having regard to the purposes of that Act, that the enforcement of this Act with respect to such securities is not necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Regulation E is comprised of Rules 601 through 610a under the Securities Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.601 - 610a. Regulation E is reprinted in its entirety in the Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C of the Securities Act (Matthew Bender).

(n4)Footnote 4. Rule 602(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.602(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Id.

Rule 602(b)(4) makes the Regulation E exemption unavailable to an issuer if, among other things, such issuer or any of its affiliates is subject to any "order, judgment, or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction, entered within five years prior to the filing of such [Regulation E] notification, temporarily or permanently restraining or enjoining such person from engaging in or continuing any conduct or practice in connection with the purchase or sale of securities." Rule 602(c)(2) also makes the exemption unavailable to an issuer if, among other things, any investment adviser or underwriter of the securities to be issued is "temporarily or permanently restrained or enjoined by any court from engaging in or continuing any conduct or practice in connection with the purchase or sale of any security or arising out of such person's conduct as an underwriter, broker, dealer or investment adviser." Rule 602(e) provides, however, that the disqualification shall not apply "if the Commission determines, upon a showing of good cause, that it is not necessary under the circumstances that the exemption be denied." See, e.g., First Southwest Co., Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8920 (May 27, 2008); Thomas Weisel Partners, LLC, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8494 (Sept. 24, 2004).

(n6)Footnote 6. Rule 602(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.602(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 80a-2(a)(48). A BDC is defined in section 2(a)(48) of the Investment Company Act as a closed-end company which:

- Is organized or has its principal place of business in any state;
- Is operated for the purpose of making investments as permitted under the Act, and makes available significant managerial assistance to its portfolio companies that meet certain criteria; and
- Elects to be subject to the provisions of sections 55 through 65 of the investment Company Act. Id.

(n8)Footnote 8. Rule 604, 17 C.F.R. § 230.604.

(n9)Footnote 9. Rule 604a, 17 C.F.R. § 230.604a

(n10)Footnote 10. See Form 1-E, 17 C.F.R. § 239.200.

(n11)Footnote 11. Rule 604a, 17 C.F.R. § 604a.

(n12)Footnote 12. Schedule A of Regulation E prescribes the contents of offering circulars for Small Business Investment Companies; and Schedule B does the same for Business Development Companies, see Rule 610a, 17. C.F.R. § 230.610a

(n13)Footnote 13. Rule 605a(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.605a-1.

(n14)Footnote 14. Rule 605a(2), 17 C.F.R. § 230.605a-2.

(n15)Footnote 15. Rule 605f, 17 C.F.R. § 230.605f.

(n16)Footnote 16. Rule 605b, 17 C.F.R. § 230.605b

(n17)Footnote 17. Rule 606, 17 C.F.R. § 230.606.

(n18)Footnote 18. Rule 606b, 17 C.F.R. § 230.606b.

(n19)Footnote 19. Rule 607, 17 C.F.R. § 230.607.

(n20)Footnote 20. Rule 609, 17 C.F.R. § 230.609.

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 5.09[2], infra.

(n22)Footnote 22. 17 C.F.R. § 232.

(n23)Footnote 23. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8859 (November 1, 2007) (Rulemaking for EDGAR System; Mandatory Electronic Submission of Applications for Orders under the Investment Company Act and Filings Made Pursuant to Regulation E--proposing release).

(n24)Footnote 24. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8922 (May 30, 2008) (Adoption of Updated EDGAR Filer Manual).

(n25)Footnote 25. Rel. No. 33-8922, supra.

(n26)Footnote 26. Rule 610a-b, 17 C.F.R. § 230.610a-b.

(n27)Footnote 27. Rule 610(a)(1)-(7).

(n28)Footnote 28. Rule 610(b).

(n29)Footnote 29. Rule 610(c).

65 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.08

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.08 Regulation CE--Coordinated Exemption for Certain Issues of Securities Exempt under State Law

In 1996, acting pursuant to its authority to provide exemptions for small offerings under section 3(b) of the Securities Act, the SEC created a federal exemption for offerings up to $5 million that meet the qualifications of a particular California state exemption--Section 25102(n) of the California Corporations Code (the "California Code"). n1 Regulation CE was created, and consists entirely of Rule 1001 under the Securities Act. n2 It exempts from the registration provisions of the federal Securities Act the offer and sale of securities that satisfy the conditions of paragraph (n) of section 25102 of the California Code and subsection (b) of Rule 1001. The Rule only addresses the California exemption. In its adopting Release, the SEC proposed to provide the same exemption for any state that enacts a transaction exemption incorporating the same standards used by California. n3 The Commission also made clear that separate consideration for a federal exemption would be given to states that adopt other similar exemptions that protect the public interest. n4 However, no other states have requested their own exemption.

Rule 1001 provides that the sum or all cash and other consideration to be received for the securities sold shall not exceed $5,000,000, less the aggregate offering price for all other securities sold in the same offering of securities, whether pursuant to Regulation CE or another exemption from registration. All securities offered pursuant to Regulation CE are considered "restricted securities" as defined in Rule 144 under the Securities Act, and any resales of such securities must be made in compliance with the registration requirements of the Securities Act or pursuant to an available exemption.

The California exemption generally is limited to issuers that are California corporations or other forms of business entities organized under California law, including partnerships and trusts. Sales of securities made pursuant to Section 25102(n) must be made only to qualified purchasers or other persons the issuer believes, after reasonable inquiry, to be qualified purchasers. n5 A corporation, partnership, or other organization specifically formed for the purpose of acquiring the securities offered by the issuer in reliance upon the exemption may be a qualified purchaser if each of the equity owners of such entity is a qualified purchaser. Qualified purchasers include the following:

- any person so designated in Section 260.102.13 of the California Code of regulations;
- a bank, savings and loan association, trust company, insurance company, investment company

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.08

registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, certain pension or profit sharing trusts, an institutional investor or governmental agency or instrumentality designated by the California Corporation Commission, any corporation without standing securities registered under Section 12 of the Exchange Act or any wholly owned subsidiary thereof or any other person designated by rule of the California Corporation Commission;

- a pension or profit-sharing trust of the issuer, a self-employed individual retirement plan or an individual retirement account if the investment decisions made on behalf of the trust, plan or account are made solely by persons who are qualified purchasers;

- a not-for-profit organization under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, a corporation, a Massachusetts or similar business trust or a partnership, with total assets in excess of $5 million; and

- with respect to the offer and sale of one class of voting common stock of an issuer or a preferred stock of an issuer entitling the holder thereof to at least the same voting rights as the issuer's one class of voting common stock, provided that the issuer has only one class voting common stock outstanding upon consummation of the offer and sale, an actual person who either individually or jointly with the person's spouse, (1) has a minimum net worth of $250,000 and had, during the immediately preceding tax year, gross income in excess of $100,000 and reasonably expects gross income in excess of $100,000 during the current tax year or (2) has a minimum net worth of $500,000, which net worth is determined exclusive of home, home furnishings, and automobiles.

Each such natural person by reason of his or her business or financial experience or the business or financial experience of his or her professional adviser, who is unaffiliated with and who is not compensated, directly or indirectly, by the issuer of any affiliate or selling agent of the issuer, can be reasonably assumed to have the capacity to protect his or her own interests in connection with this transaction. The amount of investment of each natural person in such investment shall not exceed 10 percent of the net worth of such person.

Each person in a Rule 1001 California transaction must represent that he or she is purchasing for the purchaser's own account and not with a view to or for sale in connection with a distribution of this security. n6 The issuer must provide to each natural person purchaser, at least five business days before securities are sold to or a commitment to purchase is accepted from such purchaser, a written offering disclosure statement which satisfies the requirements of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act. n7 The issuer is allowed to make a general announcement of its proposed offering under Rule 25102(n) by publishing a written document which provides "tombstone" type information. This announcement must contain the following information:

- the name of the issuer;
- the full title of the security to be issued;
- the anticipated suitability standards for prospective purchasers;
- a statement that no money order or other consideration is being solicited or will be accepted, an indication of interest made by a prospective purchaser involves no obligation or commitment of any kind, and, if the issuer is required to deliver a disclosure statement to prospective purchasers, that no sales will be made or commitment to purchase accepted until five business days after delivery of such disclosure statement; and
- an address where a purchaser can obtain more information about the issuer. n8

The following information may be included in such an announcement:

- a brief description of the issuer's business;
- the geographic location of the issuer and its business; and
- the price of the security to be issued or, if the price is not known, the method of its determination or the probable price range as specified by the issuer and the aggregate offering price. n9

Section 25102(n) prohibits the issuer from making telephone solicitations until the issuer has determined that the prospective purchaser is a qualified purchaser. n10 The issuer is also required to file a notice of a Section 25102(n) transaction concurrent with the publication of a general announcement of a proposed offering or at the time of the initial offer of the securities, whichever occurs first, accompanied by the filing fee, and within ten business days following the close or abandonment of the offering, but in no case more than 210 days from the date of filing the first notice. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7285, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot] 85,803 (May 1, 1996)

(n2)Footnote 2. 17 C.F.R. § 230.1001.

(n3)Footnote 3. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7285, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [Middle dot] 85,803 (May 1, 1996).

(n4)Footnote 4. Id.

(n5)Footnote 5. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(n)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(n)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. Cal.Corp. Code § 25102(n)(4).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(n)(5)(A).

(n9)Footnote 9. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(n)(5)(B).

(n10)Footnote 10. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(n)(6).

(n11)Footnote 11. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(n)(7).

66 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Small Issue Exemptions under Sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Securities Act

1-5 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 5.09

AUTHOR: Robert N. Rapp

§ 5.09 The Impact of Blue Sky Laws

The dual system of federal and state securities regulation means that unless state regulation has been preempted, offerings made in reliance on a federal exemption must also qualify as exempt from registration requirements under state Blue Sky laws. To interface smoothly with federal Regulation D, states adopted, in one form or another, a coordinate exemption. In most states that coordinate exemption is the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption ("ULOE") developed by the North American Securities Administrators Association ("NASAA"). n1 After NSMIA, a Rule 506 offering is a federal "covered security" for which state registration and qualification requirements are preempted. n2 However, with the ULOE in place, offerings made in compliance with Rule 505 of federal Regulation D will also be exempt under Blue Sky laws, provided ULOE requirements applicable to non-accredited investors are met. n3

[1] Securities Act § 3(b) Exemptions

Regulation A does not interface with state law exemptions under the ULOE or otherwise. Thus, for example, in states making no provision for "testing the waters" by solicitations of interest, use of that procedure specifically authorized under Regulation A will violate the applicable Blue Sky law unless some exemption is available to cover what, by definition, will be defined as an offer to sell. In the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, for example, "offer to sell" is defined to include "every attempt or offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to purchase a security or interest in a security for value." n4 Only a handful of state securities laws allow testing the waters. The states that do are not entirely uniform, and in some instances impose conditions that differ in some respects from those imposed under Regulation A. n5

Because there is no coordinate state law exemption for Regulation A offerings, and because securities offered under Regulation A are not federal covered securities for purposes of NSMIA preemption, these offerings will be subject to state registration requirements. At the state level it is, therefore, more desirable to rely on Rule 505 of Regulation D, which does coordinate with the ULOE. n6 The ultimate determination, however, may rest on the fact that Regulation A imposes no restriction on purchasers, and expressly permits testing the waters, which is meaningful in those states that also permit the process. The ability to engage in general solicitation and advertising, which is not permitted under Rule 505 of Regulation D, is another important consideration in determining the choice of action.

Also, the ULOE has its own set of conditions. For example, while non-accredited investors are not required to meet a sophistication standard, there is a suitability requirement imposed on the issuer if the non-accredited investor lacks sufficient knowledge and experience. n7 The interface of Rule 505 and state law ULOE provisions also means that qualified offerings must meet the information requirements of Rule 502(b) for sales to non-accredited investors. For offerings by small issuers that are not subject to the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act, this means supplying to non-accredited investors the non-financial information equivalent to that which would be contained in Part II of Form 1-A of Regulation A. n8 Thus, while each small issue must be considered individually in terms of proceeding under Regulation A or Rule 505 of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act, it is certain that state Blue Sky laws will play an important role in evaluating the alternatives.

Regulation D Rule 504 offerings remain fully subject to state regulation. Neither the ULOE, nor state analogs for the most part, n9 encompass Rule 504 offerings. As discussed earlier, however, states have made accommodations to ease the compliance burden on small business issuers through SCOR and other alternatives.

Outside the capital formation setting state securities laws impact Securities Act section 3(b) exemptions by reason of non-uniformity. State exemptions applicable to compensatory benefit plans are not uniform, and issuers relying on the federal exemption from registration provided by Securities Act Rule 701 n10 face considerable uncertainty. The original (1956) Uniform Securities Act, on which the majority of state securities laws are based, includes no exemption relating to compensatory benefit plans, and states have thus approached exemptions independently and non-uniformly. Only the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, adopted in several states and under consideration in others, currently contains an exemption that may be applied consistently with federal Rule 701. n11

Although particular state securities laws may complicate the small issue offerings established under federal Securities Act section 3(b), it is also important to recognize that many states have their own small or limited offering exemptions that provide workable alternatives for small business issuers, particularly those seeking to raise seed capital. n12 There are conditions, and any such exemption is applicable only as to offers and sales of securities in that state. However, in many cases they present a better practical alternative to an offering exempt under federal law but nevertheless subject to state registration and qualification, as is the case absolutely with offerings pursuant to Rule 504 of Regulation D and pursuant to Regulation A.

The impact of state regulation of public offerings made in accordance with either federal Regulation A or pursuant to Rule 504 of Regulation D has been addressed by state level initiatives for coordinated procedures to streamline the process for registration of securities. Perhaps most notable among these initiatives is the "CR--SCOR--Mid-Atlantic Review" Program that is available to companies seeking to raise capital in Delaware, the District of Columbia, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia. The program, which includes a "Small Business Offering Mid-Atlantic Regional Review Protocol," provides an issuer with much greater efficiencies in completing the registration process. Each participating state has agreed to apply certain standards when reviewing registration applications. In particular, the Protocol adopts Form U-7 as the accepted form of registration statement for small business offerings, and also incorporates the NASAA Small Company Offering Registrations (SCOR) Issuer's Manual. n13 A lead jurisdiction is designated to coordinate the registration with each participating state, and the issuer deals only with the lead examiner. There is also an agreed time-line for the review process. Programs for coordinated review on a regional basis have been established in other areas of the country as a means of facilitating the registration and offering process in a manner that particularly benefits small business issuers who rely on either Regulation A or Rule 504 of Regulation D. n14

[2] Section 3(c) - Regulation E Offerings

Securities offered and sold under Regulation D are not federal covered securities under NSMIA. States do not exempt offerings by Small Business Investment Companies (SBICs) or Business Development Companies (BDCs) made under federal Regulation E from registration requirements. A number of states do provide an exemption for securities of local economic development or venture capital enterprises. n15 Such individual state exemptions may be useful alternatives, although they are for the most part limited to particular state sponsors and conditioned as to purpose. Absent some other exemption, as, for example, relying on an available accredited investor exemption, Regulation E offerings must comply with state registration requirements. For that reason, as a practical matter, Regulation E offerings are often made only to accredited investors. However, an alternative may be available through a state registration by "coordination."

Registration by coordination is generally available only in regard to an offering for which a "registration statement" has been filed under the Securities Act of 1933. n16 However, two states--Maryland and Montana--have expressly incorporated Regulation E into their provisions for registration by coordination. n17 Outside of these two states, and in the absence of a available state law exemption, Regulation E offerings must be registered and, where applicable, subjected to merit review.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See CCH NASAA Reports [Middle dot]6201, at 6101.

States that have not adopted the ULOE include specific transaction exemptions for offers and sales of securities made in conformity Regulation D Rule 505 or 506, although the latter is no longer necessary. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code §§ 1707.03(W), (X). The 2002 Uniform Securities Act, adopted in several states and under active consideration in others, includes a blanket exemption for all federal covered securities but no ULOE analog for federal Rule 505 offerings, see 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § § 201-202. State adopting the 2002 Uniform Act have by rule provided for a continuing coordinated limited offering exemption, either in the form of the ULOE or otherwise, see, e.g., S.C. Sec. Comm'r Rule 13-204 ("Regulation D Offerings").

(n2)Footnote 2. But see Rapp & Berckmueller, supra, at 815-827.

(n3)Footnote 3. The ULOE does not impose any qualification requirements on accredited investors beyond the accreditation criteria. Non-accredited investors, however, must meet either a suitability or a sophistication standard. For a discussion of these standards, and the ULOE or its equivalents in general, see Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation § 8.06[2] (2d ed. Matthew Bender & Co.)

(n4)Footnote 4. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(26).

(n5)Footnote 5. In Illinois, for example, one condition to testing the waters is that the solicitor intends to register the security, see 14 Ill. Admin. Code § 130.212, in contrast to Regulation A Rule 254(a), which speaks of a "contemplated" securities offering.

In the states providing for testing the waters, conditions typically focus on the type of issuer involved, the absence of disqualifying criteria, the proper qualification of agents making the solicitation, minimum information requirements, and the manner of making solicitations, see, e.g., Ariz. Admin. Code § R14-2-141. Some form of advance filing with the administrator is required, and a uniform form (SOI) is in most case used for this purpose.

(n6)Footnote 6. An additional consideration in weighing advantages and disadvantages between Regulation A and Rule 505 offerings is that Rule 508 of Regulation D, 17 C.F.R. § 230.508, provides that a Rule 505 exemption will not be lost if there is a good faith insignificant deviation or failure to comply with a particular requirement. Under Rule 508 the burden is on the issuer to show that the failure to comply did not pertain to a term, condition or requirement intended to protect a particular individual or entity, and that the failure to comply was insignificant in relation to the offering taken as a whole. See also § 5.05[3] ("Substantial Compliance"), supra.

(n7)Footnote 7. In Massachusetts, for example, in all sales to non-accredited investor made in reliance upon that state's ULOE, the issuer must be satisfied, or the issuer and any person acting on behalf of the issuer shall have grounds to believe, after making reasonable inquiry, that purchaser suitability requirements relating to financial profile or knowledge and experience in financial and business matters (either alone or with a purchaser representative) are met. See 950 Code Mass. Regs. § 14.402(B0(13)).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Reg. D, Rule 502(b), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. But see Okla. Sec. Commission Admin. Rule § 660:11-11-43 (Coordinated limited offering exemption includes offers and sales made under Rule 504 of Regulation D provided certain additional state requirements are met).

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 5.06[1], supra.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(21).

(n12)Footnote 12. These include various "private" offering exemptions or procedures that were in place prior to federal Regulation D and the ULOE. Several states simply exempt "small" offerings, usually up to $500,000, when certain conditions are met, see, e.g., Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. § 292.410(i). As reflected in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, all states make some meaningful provision for facilitation of small business capital formation either through outright exemptions or limited offering procedures. The 2002 Uniform Act itself provides an exemption for sales to no more than 25 non-institutional purchasers during and 12 consecutive months when certain conditions are satisfied, see 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(14). State specific alternatives are discussed further in Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation, supra. § § 8.06 and 10.04, and summarized as to each state in the State Guides that are a part of that Treatise.

(n13)Footnote 13. SCOR Offerings under Regulation A are discussed in § 5.02[3], supra.

(n14)Footnote 14. In addition to the Mid-Atlantic program, regional review programs are available in the New England, Midwest and Western regions.

(n15)Footnote 15. See generally Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation § 8.04[3] (2d ed. Matthew Bender & Co.).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 303 ("A security for which a registration statement has been filed under the Securities Act of 1933 in connection with the same offering may be registered by coordination under this section").

(n17)Footnote 17. In Maryland, registration by coordination is available for:

Any security for which the documents required by any regulation adopted by the Securities and Exchange Commission under § 3(b) or § 3(c) of the Securities Act of 1933 have been filed with the Commission in connection with the same offering may be registered by coordination... . Md. Corp. & Associations. Code Ann. § 11-503

See also Montana Code Ann. § 30-10-204.

67 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 6.syn

§ 6.syn Synopsis to Chapter 6: Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

Scope

§ 6.01 Introduction

§ 6.02 Why it Matters that Securities Are Restricted or Control Securities: Limitations on Disposition

[1] General Availability of the Resale Exemption

[2] Limitations on Availability of Resale Exemption for Public Sales of Restricted Securities

[a] Legal Limitations.

[b] Other Limitations on Public Sales of Restricted Securities.

[3] Limitations on Availability of Resale Exemption for Public Sales of Control Securities

[4] Limitations on Availability of Resale Exemption for Public Sales of Unrestricted Securities by Non-affiliates

[a] Underwriters' Compensation Securities.

[b] Holders of Substantial Amounts of Securities.

[c] Underwriters as Result of Rule 145(d) Reorganizations or Similar Transactions.

[d] Resale of Certain Securities Acquired Overseas.

§ 6.03 Definition of Restricted Securities

[1] Rule 144 Definition

[2] Scope of Rule 144 Definition

[a] Securities.

[b] Method of Acquisition.

[3] Sources of Restricted Securities

[a] Status of Securities Acquired from the Issuer.

[i] In a Public Offering.

[ii] In a Private Offering.

[b] Status of Securities Acquired from an Affiliate.

[c] Status of Securities Acquired from Another Holder.

[d] Special Categories of Securities.

[i] Underwriters' Compensation and Similar Securities.

[ii] Securities Acquired Through Employee Benefit Plans.

[iii] Section 3(a)(10) Securities.

[iv] Section 3(a)(9) Securities.

[v] Section 3(a)(11) Securities.

[vi] Securities Acquired as Stock Dividends or in Stock Splits.

[vii] Securities Acquired as Spin-Offs or Liquidating Distributions.

[viii] Rule 145 Securities.

[ix] Securities Acquired Overseas.

[x] Securities Acquired by "Underwriters" in Bankruptcy Code Section 1145 Transactions.

[xi] Securities Acquired Pursuant to Regulation CE

[xii] Securities Offered in Rule 801 or 802 Transactions.

[4] Duration of Restricted Status

§ 6.04 Definition of Control Securities

[1] Rule 144 Definition of an Affiliate

[2] Controlling Persons of the Issuer

[3] Other Types of Affiliates

[a] Persons Controlled by the Issuer.

[b] Persons under Common Control with the Issuer.

[c] Persons Otherwise Deemed Affiliates.

[4] Duration of Control Securities Status

§ 6.05 Public Resales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities under Rule 144

[1] Nature of Rule 144

[a] Approach of Rule 144.

[b] Construction of Rule 144.

[c] Nonexclusivity of Rule 144.

[d] Amendments to Rule 144.

[2] Availability of Rule 144

[a] Resale of Restricted Securities.

[b] Sales of Control Securities.

[c] Limitations on Availability for Sales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities.

[i] Sales of Securities Subject to Registration Rights.

[ii] Sales of Restricted Securities to be Followed by Purchases of Unrestricted Securities.

[iii] Short Sales Against the Box.

[iv] Listed Call and Put Options.

[v] Sales by Broker-Dealers.

[vi] Sales by Subsidiaries of the Issuer.

[d] Sales of Unrestricted Securities by Non-affiliates.

[3] Adequate Current Public Information Requirement--Rule 144(c)

[a] Basis for Conditions of Rule 144(c).

[b] Requirements for Reporting Issuers.

[i] Ninety-Day Waiting Period.

[ii] Adequate Current Filings.

[c] Requirements for Non-reporting Issuers.

[i] Adequate Current Information.

[ii] Public Availability of Information.

[d] Exemption from Provisions of Rule 144(c).

[4] Holding Period Requirement--Rule 144(d)

[a] Basis for Condition of Rule 144(d).

[b] Commencement of Holding Period.

[i] Beneficial Ownership.

[ii] Full Payment of Purchase Price.

[c] Tacking Provisions.

[i] Securities Acquired as Stock Dividends, in Stock Splits or in Recapitalizations.

[ii] Securities Acquired in Conversions.

[iii] Securities Acquired through Contingent Payment Provisions.

[iv] Pledged Securities.

[v] Securities Acquired as Gifts.

[vi] Securities Acquired by Trusts.

[vii] Securities Acquired by Estates.

[viii] Securities Acquired upon Reclassifications, Mergers and Sales of Assets.

[ix] Securities Acquired in Divorce Settlements.

[x] Securities Acquired from Closely Related Persons.

[xi] Securities Acquired in Spin-offs or Liquidating Distributions.

[xii] Cashless Exercise of Options and Warrants

[xiii] Section 3(a)(10) Securities.

[xiv] Other Securities Subject to Tacking Provisions.

[5] Volume Limitation Requirement--Rule 144(e)

[a] Basis for Conditions of Rule 144(e).

[b] Amount of Limitations-Equity Securities.

[c] Amount of Limitations -- Debt Securities.

[d] Aggregation Provisions.

[i] Aggregation through Definition of "Person".

[ii] Pledged Securities.

[iii] Securities Acquired as Gifts.

[iv] Securities Acquired by Trusts.

[v] Securities Acquired by Estates.

[vi] Securities Sold by Persons Acting in Concert.

[vii] Securities Acquired in Divorce Settlements.

[viii] Securities Acquired from Closely Related Persons.

[ix] Securities Acquired in Spin-offs or Liquidating Distributions.

[e] Exemptions from Provisions of Rule 144(e).

[6] Manner of Sale Requirement--Rule 144(f)

[a] Basis for Conditions of Rule 144(f).

[b] Brokers' Transactions.

[c] Transactions with a Market Maker.

[d] Exemptions from Provisions of Rule 144(f).

[7] Notice of Proposed Sale Requirement--Rule 144(h)

[8] Unavailability to Securities of Issuers with No or Nominal Operations and No or Nominal Non-Cash Assets

[9] Procedures for Sales under Rule 144

[a] Responsibilities of Sellers.

[b] Responsibilities of Sellers' Brokers.

[c] Responsibilities of Issuers.

[d] Responsibilities of Transfer Agents.

[10] Effects of Compliance with Rule 144

§ 6.06 Public Resales of Restricted Securities and "Control Securities" Outside Rule 144

[1] Availability of Resale Exemption

[2] Availability of Other Exemptions

§ 6.07 Private Resales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities to Qualified Institutional Buyers under Rule 144A

[1] Nature and Philosophy of Rule 144A

[2] Conditions of the Rule 144A Exemption

[a] Reasonable Belief Buyer is a QIB

[i] Definition of QIB.

[ii] Basis for Reasonable Belief.

[b] Notice to Buyer of Reliance on Rule 144A.

[c] Eligible Securities; Fungibility Prohibition.

[i] Not of the Same Class.

[ii] Not Convertible or Exchangeable for Same Class.

[iii] When Issued.

[iv] Not Issued by an Investment Company.

[d] Information Requirement.

[i] How Right May be Ensured.

[ii] What Information Must be Available.

[3] Rule 144A Trading Markets

§ 6.08 Private Resales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities Outside Rule 144A

[1] Section 4(11/2) Phenomenon

[a] Availability of Exemption.

[b] Effects of Use of Exemption.

[2] Non-4(11/2) Resales

§ 6.09 Resales Overseas

68 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 Scope

Scope

This chapter was revised and updated by Sara Hanks, a partner in Clifford Chance US LLP, New York and Washington D.C.. Ms. Hanks is a graduate of the School of Jurisprudence of Oxford University, a Solicitor of the Supreme Court of England and Wales, and is admitted to the New York and D.C. Bars.

69 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933

SUMMARY OF THIS CHAPTER

Whether a security is a "restricted" or a "control" security is important because such securities cannot be freely resold. Restrictions on the resale of securities mainly arise where the security holder is in a control relationship with the issuer (in which case the securities are termed "control securities"); where the holder acquired the securities in a manner that involved or resulted in limitations on the availability of the Section 4(1) exemption from registration that is available for most resales (in which case the securities are termed "restricted securities"); or where both of these circumstances exist.

Holders of restricted securities and control securities who generally do not qualify for the Section 4(1) resale exemption from registration may rely on Rule 144 to effect a sale of those securities publicly. They may also resell those securities privately. See § 6.01 infra.

Section 4(1) exempts from the Securities Act's registration and prospectus delivery requirements all transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer. This is the exemption from registration relied upon (whether they realize it or not) by most persons reselling securities in the secondary market. Most ordinary investors are not underwriters, but in certain circumstances their status or activities result in their being treated as underwriters, with the result that they cannot rely on Section 4(1) for resale of their securities and therefore must register the transaction or seek another exemption. Sales of restricted securities or control securities in public offerings are generally deemed to involve an underwriter and therefore are not exempt under Section 4(1). There are even a few limitations on the availability of the Section 4(1) resale exemption for public sales of unrestricted securities by non-affiliates. See § 6.02 infra.

The term "restricted securities" is defined in Rule 144(a)(3) to include all securities acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer in a transaction or series of transactions not involving any public offering. All securities acquired from the issuer in a private offering are restricted. However, whether securities acquired from an affiliate in a private offering are restricted may depend on whether those securities were acquired in a "sale" or in a transaction not involving a sale. In the former case, the securities are restricted. In the latter case, the securities are restricted in the hands of the holder only if they were restricted in the hands of the affiliate. Securities acquired from a holder other than an issuer are restricted only if they were restricted in the hands of the transferor. Certain unregistered securities are not easily characterized as privately or publicly offered. See § 6.03 infra.

While not "restricted," "control securities" are also subject to certain limitations, including the non-availability of the Section 4(1) resale exemption. Securities obtained from a person other than an issuer or affiliate can become subject to limitations if sold to a person to whom restrictions apply (e.g. an officer or director). See § 6.04 infra.

Rule 144 provides that resales of restricted and control securities by the issuer and affiliates of the issuer will not be deemed a "distribution" if certain specified conditions are met. While Rule 144 is not the exclusive lawful method of effecting sales of restricted and control securities, for some transactions (such as the public resale of control securities) other methods may not be available. Those relying on the resale exemption under Section 4(1) for public resales in the absence of compliance with Rule 144 must meet a substantial burden of proof to sustain that exemption. Rule 144 is also available for resales of those few categories of unrestricted securities that are not freely tradeable by non-affiliates. Rule 144 imposes different conditions on resales depending whether the seller is an affiliate or non-affiliate of the issuer.

Rule 144(c) requires that there be adequate current information available about the issuer. This requirement is satisfied if the issuer is subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act for at least ninety days prior to the time of the proposed sale and has filed all reports required to be filed during the preceding twelve months. If the issuer is a non-reporting issuer, it may meet the adequate current information requirement by voluntarily filing reports or by making publicly available the information specified in clauses (1) through (14) and (16) of Rule 15c-2-11(a)(4) under the Exchange Act.

Rule 144(d) imposes a six month holding period for restricted securities when the issuer is a reporting company under the Exchange Act and one year holding period when the issuer is not a reporting company under the Exchange Act and does not make public information specified under Rule 15c-2-11(a)(4) under the Exchange Act. This time period generally commences on the day the securities are acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer. Where restricted securities are purchased the holding period will not commence until the purchaser becomes the beneficial owner and the entire purchase price is paid. In transactions not involving a purchase, the time when economic risk commences must be determined from the nature of the transaction. In general, holders of restricted securities may "tack" the period for which they held the securities to the period for which the securities were held by a previous holder unaffiliated to the issuer. Under certain circumstances, securities may even be deemed to have been acquired by a non-affiliate as of a date when the securities were actually held by an affiliate. In addition, under certain circumstances, the holder of restricted securities may tack on to the applicable holding period the period during which securities that were economically equivalent to the restricted securities proposed to be sold were held.

Rule 144(e) imposes volume limitations for sales by affiliates. The amount of securities to be sold pursuant to Rule 144 together with the amount of the securities already sold during the three month period preceding the date of the proposed sale must be limited to the greater of one percent of the outstanding securities of the class being sold or the average weekly trading volume for the class during the four week period preceding the date of the proposed sale.

Rule 144(f) requires that sales of securities by affiliates under Rule 144 be made either in brokers' transactions, in transactions directly with a market maker, or in certain riskless principal transactions. Except in the case of riskless principal transactions, the seller is precluded from soliciting or arranging for the solicitation of orders to buy the securities proposed to be sold and from making any payments respecting the proposed sale to anyone other than the broker executing the order to sell the securities. See § 6.05[6] infra. Under Rule 144(h), prior to any sale of restricted or control securities under Rule 144 above a specified threshold, a notice on Form 144 must be filed in connection with sales by affiliates with the Commission and with the principal exchange on which the securities proposed to be sold are admitted to trading.

If the seller is unfamiliar with the rule's requirements and does not have counsel, an experienced broker can assist in compliance with the rule. Although compliance with Rule 144 is the seller's primary responsibility, it is also the issuer's responsibility to guard against unauthorized sales of restricted securities by obtaining investment representations from the purchaser, placing legends on the stock certificates, and placing stop transfer instructions with its transfer agent. See § 6.05[9] infra.

In theory, public sales of restricted securities may take place outside Rule 144 in reliance on the resale exemption under Section 4(1) and exemptions under Sections 3(a)(10) and 3(a)(11), and Regulation A. The Commission has warned that those selling outside Rule 144 in reliance on the resale exemption will have a heavy burden of proving the availability of the exemption. See § 6.06 infra.

Rule 144A provides an exemption from registration for resales of restricted securities made in accordance with its conditions. Any holder of restricted securities other than the issuer may resell securities to a "qualified institutional buyer" as defined in Rule 144A. Such a resale will be deemed not part of a distribution and the seller, whether an ordinary investor or dealer, will be deemed not an underwriter. See § 6.07 infra.

Outside Rule 144A, restricted and control securities may be resold privately in transactions not amounting to "distributions" and thus entitled to the resale exemption. An exemption for private resales is more readily available when the prospective purchasers are a limited number of sophisticated investors who have access to information about the issuer. Industry practice has established so-called "Rule 4(11/2)" for private resales. See § 6.08 infra.

Restricted and control securities may also be resold outside the United States in reliance on Regulation S. Restricted securities of U.S. issuers resold in this manner remain restricted. See § 6.09 infra.

70 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.01

§ 6.01 Introduction

The Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 generally permit members of the investing public to resell their securities in reasonable amounts in ordinary trading transactions without registering the offering of those securities under the Securities Act. Most such sales rely on the exemption from registration provided by Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n1 Accordingly, most publicly held outstanding securities are freely tradeable in the marketplace.

Certain resales of outstanding securities, however, may not be made routinely in reliance upon the exemption from registration contained in Section 4(1) (the "resale exemption"). n2 Most of those resales fall into two categories. n3 The first includes all resales of the large number of presently outstanding restricted securities. n4 The second category includes all resales of any outstanding securities, restricted or unrestricted, by a person who is in a control relationship with the issuer of those securities. n5

In the case of restricted securities, the limitations on resale derive generally from the manner in which the securities were acquired (and typically result in their value being substantially less than that of unrestricted securities of the same class and issuer). n6 In the case of securities held by a person in a control relationship with the issuer, known as "control securities," the limitations on resale result only from the relationship between the existing security holder and the issuer and exist only as long as the securities are held by that controlling security holder. n7 Certain securities are subject to restrictions on resale on both counts because they are restricted securities held by a controlling person. As a matter of the federal securities laws, the difference, an important one as will be seen, between restricted securities and control securities, on the one hand, and all other outstanding securities, so-called "free-trading securities," on the other hand, is that restricted securities and control securities are not freely tradeable. n8

With limited exceptions, resales of restricted securities and control securities, at least outside Rule 144, are not routine trading transactions. Accordingly, the Section 4(1) resale exemption is frequently unavailable for their public resale. n9

The general unavailability of the resale exemption for the public resale of restricted securities and control securities, however, does not mean that the large number of outstanding restricted securities n10 and the unknown, but presumably lesser, number of control securities n11 cannot be lawfully resold under the federal securities laws. Their resale is simply made more difficult by being subject to special conditions. The difficulty is substantially mitigated by the broad availability of the Rule 144 exemption for certain public resales of securities that were previously not considered freely tradeable under Section 4(1). n12

Alternatively, such securities may be easily sold privately in reliance on Rule 144A. n13 Where Rule 144 or Rule 144A is not available, it may still be possible to resell restricted or control securities privately (through so-called "Section 4(1/2)" transactions, for example) or publicly, although the conditions for such resales are more limited and less certain. n14

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally § 6.02 infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 4(1) is also discussed in § 4.01 supra. See also § 6.02[1] infra. Section 4(1) of the 1933 Act is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

(n3)Footnote 3. The third, if less common, circumstance under which securities are often restricted occurs when the parties anticipate that securities will not be resold publicly. Often these securities are restricted through buy-back arrangements or with a restriction that they can be sold only to others active in the business. A fourth circumstance occurs when securities can only be held by licensed professionals, and holding by others is prohibited by law, for example doctors in a medical professional corporation. A fifth instance is found where regulatory restrictions place a limitation on the amount of securities which can be held prior to triggering a requirement for regulatory filings, as is sometimes the case with early stage insurance companies and banks.

(n4)Footnote 4. According to the NASDAQ Stock Market, the value of new private placements of unregistered stock or Rule 144A transactions reached $162 billion in 2006, surpassing the $154 billion raised in initial and secondary public offerings. Secondary private transactions for unregistered securities in U.S. private companies increased to $3 billion (approximately up 140 PERCENT) according to a 2007 NYPPEX Private Markets report. See Business & Finance Week, Expanded Reporting Section, pg. 267, July 14, 2008.

(n5)Footnote 5. Rule 144(a)(1) labels such a person an "affiliate"; regarding such definition, see § 6.04[1] infra. 1933 Act Rule 144 is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

(n6)Footnote 6. John H. Butala, Jr., Estate Planning for Securities Burdened with Securities Law Restrictions, 1981 U. Miami L. Center 15 Inst. on Est. Plan. P 900, P 903, at 9-13 (1981) and tax cases cited therein. See also Rev. Rul. 77-287, 1977-2 C.B. 319 (there is no general valuation formula; lists factors to be considered); Investment Co. Act Rel. No. 5847, [1937-1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,135 (1970) (value of restricted securities in investment company portfolio to be determined in good faith judgment by company's board).

(n7)Footnote 7. But see the exception described in § 6.04[4] infra .

(n8)Footnote 8. But see § 6.02[4] infra for exceptions to the freely tradeable nature of unrestricted securities held by other than a controlling person of the issuer.

(n9)Footnote 9. For an extensive analysis of this difference, see § 6.02[1], [2] and [3] infra.

(n10)Footnote 10. Regarding the number of outstanding restricted securities, see § 6.01 n.4 supra.

(n11)Footnote 11. The number of control securities is whatever the aggregate amount of securities held by all affiliates of all issuers happens to be at a particular time. The author has located no pertinent statistics.

(n12)Footnote 12. For an extensive analysis of Rule 144, see § 6.05 infra.

(n13)Footnote 13. See § 6.07 infra.

(n14)Footnote 14. See §§ 6.06, 6.08, and 6.09 infra .

71 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.02

§ 6.02 Why it Matters that Securities Are Restricted or Control Securities: Limitations on Disposition

Both the antifraud provisions of the Securities Act and the Exchange Actⁿ¹ and, unless an exemption applies, the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of the Securities Actⁿ² apply to all sales of all securities, including all resales of outstanding securities of a restricted or an unrestricted nature, provided that some means of interstate commerce is involved.ⁿ³ Every investor proposing to sell any securities of whatever nature must therefore make such disclosures as are required to not fall foul of the antifraud provisions of both Acts or risk liability thereunder.ⁿ⁴ In the case of any offering of restricted securities, the required disclosures must therefore include both a statement that the securities are restricted within the meaning of Rule 144(a)(3) and information regarding the consequent limitations on their public resale under the Securities Act. As to compliance with the antifraud provisions of the Securities Act and the Exchange Act, the sale of restricted securities is otherwise no different than the sale of unrestricted securities, although these provisions may impact the sale of restricted and unrestricted securities differently (increasing the disclosure obligations of a controlling person, for example).

In addition to complying with the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws, every investor proposing to sell any securities of whatever nature in the United States must also either sell them pursuant to an effective registration statement or in proper reliance on an available exemption from the registration requirements of Section 5 of the Securities Act.ⁿ⁵ Unless the investor has a "control" relationship with the issuer of these securities, it will normally be unable to insist on the registration of those securities, except where registration rights were contracted for as a part of an earlier private offering by the issuer.ⁿ⁶ Accordingly, most members of the investing public desiring to lawfully sell securities must rely on a statutory exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act. The exemption customarily relied on for most resales of outstanding securities is that contained in the Section 4(1) resale exemption.ⁿ⁷ Since the availability of the resale exemption frequently determines whether particular securities may legitimately be publicly sold in the United States, the extent to which Section 4(1) is less available for proposed resale of restricted securities than for a proposed resale of unrestricted securities is a particularly significant limitation.

[1] General Availability of the Resale Exemption

Section 4(1) exempts from the Securities Act's registration and prospectus delivery requirements all "transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer."ⁿ⁸ Those terms are defined in Sections 2(4),ⁿ⁹ 2(11),ⁿ¹⁰ and 2(12)ⁿ¹¹ of the Securities Act, respectively. As becomes obvious from reviewing those definitions, the resale exemption is designed to allow ordinary holders of outstanding securities who are not acting for the issuer or for a controlling person of the issuer and who are not involved in the securities industry to sell their securities without concern for the registration provisions of the Securities Act. The ordinary investor, in other words, being neither the issuer of the securities to be sold nor a dealer as that term is defined in the Securities Act, n12 is permitted to sell securities without concern for the Securities Act's registration requirements, provided that neither the selling investor n13 nor any other participant in the transaction is an underwriter within the meaning of Section 2(11) of the Securities Act. Section 2(11) provides in pertinent part that an underwriter is:

[A]ny person who has purchased from an issuer with a view to, or offers or sells for an issuer in connection with, the distribution of any security, or participates or has a direct or indirect participation in any such undertaking, or participates or has participation in the direct or indirect underwriting of any such undertaking ... As used in this paragraph the term "issuer" shall include, in addition to an issuer, any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer, or any person under direct or indirect common control with the issuer. n14

The result of this definition, as discussed more fully below, is that the Section 4(1) resale exemption is available for all private resales of outstanding securities by any person other than the issuer or a dealer, but for only some public resales of some outstanding securities by some investors, including those amounting to routine trading transactions.

Upon close scrutiny of the language of Section 2(11), it becomes clear that only where the transaction itself amounts to or is a part of a "distribution of any security" may the investor be found to be an underwriter. Since a distribution requires a public offering, n15 it is simply not possible for the selling investor, its agent, or any other participant in the sale to be a statutory underwriter where the transaction as a matter of all the relevant factors is itself a private rather than a public offering and does not constitute, together with certain other sales, a public offering. n16 Accordingly, the resale exemption is available for all private resales of any outstanding securities by any investor. It is available to the investor even if a broker is used to effect the private sale; n17 the selling investor is an affiliate of the issuer of the securities; n18 or the securities involved are restricted securities. n19 Thus, private resales of restricted securities are always entitled to the resale exemption. n20

A public resale of outstanding securities will often, but not always, involve a "distribution" within the meaning of Section 2(11), which generally means that an underwriter is involved and the transaction cannot rely on the resale exemption. The term "distribution," though crucial to the issue of whether a selling investor or any broker or other person involved in the transaction is a statutory underwriter rendering the resale exemption unavailable, is not defined in the Securities Act, although various differing definitions have been endorsed for differing circumstances. n21 The courts and the Commission appear to view particular cases in light of the purposes of the resale exemption. There is no question that the resale exemption's primary purpose is to permit routine trading transactions. n22 It is also clear, however, that the resale exemption was not intended to permit large secondary distributions by affiliates of the issuer or others that would be substantially equivalent to a primary distribution from the perspective of the purchasing members of the investing public. n23 Neither was it intended to provide a way around the registration requirements for an issuer by allowing the immediate resale of securities privately placed by the issuer with affiliates or others committed or likely to resell them to members of the investing public. The vehicle Congress relied upon to separate permissible trading transactions from secondary distributions and two-step primary distributions was the concept of the "statutory underwriter," that is, underwriter as defined in Section 2(11). It follows that the courts and the Commission are likely to interpret the critical term "distribution" and the other key phrases contained in the definition of underwriter with this legislative intent in mind.

A public resale of outstanding securities will constitute or be a part of such a secondary or two-step primary distribution rather than an exempt resale transaction only if an underwriter is involved. Either the selling investor or any broker or other participant in the transaction could conceivably be a statutory underwriter and cause the loss of the resale exemption. If the selling investor is an affiliate of the issuer and uses a broker to effect a public resale, then the broker would be a statutory underwriter. n24 Accordingly, the resale exemption is ordinarily unavailable for the public resale of "control securities" through a brokers' transaction.

If the selling investor is not an affiliate of the issuer, the resale exemption is lost only if it or someone it uses to effect the sale falls within the category of a statutory underwriter. An ordinary investor or its agent may become a statutory underwriter in one of the following ways:

- by purchasing from the issuer or controlling person, albeit through others, with a view to distribution, rather than with investment intent; n25
- by offering or selling securities "for the issuer" or a controlling person in connection with a distribution, whether or not pursuant to an actual agreement; n26 or
- by simply participating in a distribution involving the issuer or a controlling person. n27

While an investor's intent at the time of the purchase is in theory determinative of whether he falls within the category of an underwriter, it has proved an unworkable standard. In reality, the best evidence of investment intent is the absence of any sale or attempted sale of the securities in question for a substantial period of time. Of course, the longer the period of time during which the investor holds the securities, the more persuasive is the evidence that the investor is not a statutory underwriter.

It is, of course, ultimately a question of fact whether a particular seller is a statutory underwriter. The availability of the exemption, however, must be proved by the investor seeking to rely on it, n28 a tough burden particularly in the context of an enforcement proceeding brought by the Commission. In light of the risk of enforcement by the Commission or of a suit by a purchaser and the severity of the remedies available in either case, n29 the resale exemption should not be relied upon casually for other than ordinary trading transactions in the absence of a no-action letter from the staff of the Commission.

Given the purposes of the resale exemption, which are to allow private resales and ordinary trading transactions, but not to permit secondary or two-step distributions without registration, it is not surprising that the resale exemption, as interpreted by the courts and the Commission, is broadly available for the resale of unrestricted securities by non-affiliates of the issuer. In general, only in the case of an attempted sale of a substantial amount of securities held for less than the holding period specified by Rule 144(d) or in a few other limited circumstances is the Commission likely to deem or presume that a non-affiliate holder of unrestricted securities is an underwriter and therefore unable to rely on Section 4(1) for the public resale of those securities. It is also not surprising that an investor holding restricted securities is generally regarded by the Commission as an underwriter and therefore unable to rely on Section 4(1) except pursuant to Rule 144 when it makes a public resale of those securities, at least until the securities become freely tradeable under Rule 144. n30 As discussed below, the resale exemption is normally also unavailable for the public resale of control securities because of the involvement of a statutory underwriter, whether the affiliate itself or the broker acting for the affiliate. n31

If the resale exemption is not available to an investor for the sale of outstanding securities because it falls within the category of an underwriter, that investor may not lawfully resell its securities unless the transaction is registered under the Securities Act or some other exemption from registration is available. Often the staff will permit such a holder of unrestricted securities to sell limited amounts of securities immediately in compliance with certain of the conditions of Rule 144. n32

A second effect of a proposed seller of securities being an underwriter is that any broker used for the sale will be unable to rely on either Section 4(3) n33 or 4(4) n34 of the Securities Act to exempt its part of the transaction. n35 In light of the rather substantial penalties for a broker that sells securities in violation of Section 5, n36 a seller who is, or even may be regarded by the staff as, an underwriter may encounter difficulty finding a reputable broker willing to publicly sell his securities.

[2] Limitations on Availability of Resale Exemption for Public Sales of Restricted Securities

As a matter of the federal securities laws, the sole, but critical, n37 difference between restricted securities n38 and unrestricted securities is that unrestricted securities may be freely traded by ordinary investors in reliance on the resale exemption, n39 whereas restricted securities are not freely tradeable. The non-availability of the Section 4(1) exemption for the public resale of restricted securities is the source of that difference. This non-availability derives from the application of a broader interpretation of the term "underwriter" when restricted securities rather than unrestricted securities are involved. In short, dealings in restricted securities are treated differently from ordinary trading transactions for securities regulation purposes. n40 That difference in treatment is based upon both the purpose of the Securities Act, which is to protect investors through disclosure in the form of a registration statement and the resulting periodic reports, n41 and the purposes of the resale exemption. n42

An ordinary investor may resell securities in reliance upon Section 4(1) of the Securities Act provided that neither that investor nor any broker involved in the transaction is an underwriter within the meaning of Section 2(11) of the Securities Act. n43 Since an investor cannot become an underwriter unless it is involved in a distribution, a private sale even of restricted securities by any investor may lawfully be made in reliance upon the resale exemption. n44 It is, therefore, only in the context of a proposed public sale that the holder of restricted securities is in a different position from a counterpart holder of unrestricted securities.

[a] Legal Limitations. By definition, restricted securities were acquired, directly or indirectly in a series of transactions, from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer without a public offering. n45 In fact, no current information about the issuer may be available. n46 A significant aspect of a lawful private offering is that the purchasers are likely to have been not ordinary investors, but rather sophisticated investors who had no need for the protection afforded by a registration statement and who did not purchase "with a view" to distribution. n47 If substantial public resales of the restricted securities were to occur pursuant to the resale exemption soon after the private offering, then the result would be the same as an unregistered primary distribution by the issuer or secondary distribution by an affiliate, though in two steps, pursuant to the Section 4(2) and 4(1) exemptions, respectively. Because of the very real risk that the registration provisions of the Securities Act would be frequently circumvented by this two-step distribution, virtually every public resale of any restricted securities, at least for a material period of time following the relevant private offering, n48 is regarded separately as a distribution in itself n49 or, together with the initial private offering and perhaps other resales, as a part of "the entire process by which in the course of a public offering the block of securities is dispersed and ultimately comes to rest in the hands of the investing public." n50 Accordingly, only private resales of restricted securities are clearly not distributions for at least six months or a year following the private placement. n51

Since most public resales of restricted securities appear to involve a distribution within the meaning of Section 2(11), n52 the investor may rely on the resale exemption for such a sale only if it can establish that:

- the original purchase was with investment and not distributive intent;
- the resale is other than a sale for the issuer or for a controlling person; and
- the resale does not amount to a participation in a two-step distribution. n53

As discussed above, if the investor is an affiliate of the issuer, the public resale will usually involve an underwriter and the resale exemption will be therefore unavailable regardless of the restricted or unrestricted character of the securities. n54

Unlike a routine resale of unrestricted securities by an ordinary investor, an attempted public resale of restricted securities is itself strong evidence that the non-affiliate investor is a statutory underwriter. The attempted sale is generally regarded as a strong contradiction of an investment intent, n55 making it virtually impossible for an investor to argue that he or she did not take with a view to a distribution. Even if the investor could convince the Commission of original non-distributive intent, the Commission may still view the investor as an underwriter. At the time it adopted Rule 144, the Commission made clear that in its view "it is insufficient to conclude that a person is not an underwriter solely because he did not purchase securities from an issuer with a view to a distribution" n56 Rather, the Commission indicated that the presence of a distribution is, in the case of restricted securities, synonymous with underwriter status. n57 In other words, despite the express language of Section 2(11), the Commission apparently believes that all resales prior to the expiration of the holding period n58 are deemed to be "for the issuer" or the "controlling person" and therefore render the selling investor a statutory underwriter unable to rely on the resale exemption. In light of that view and the refusal of the staff of the Commission to issue no-action letters regarding the availability of the Section 4(1) exemption outside Rule 144 for securities acquired since April 15, 1972, n59 it is extremely difficult for any holder of restricted securities to resell them publicly in reliance upon the resale exemption outside the rule a year (or six months, depending on the nature of the issuer) of the private placement without risking a violation of the registration requirements of the Securities Act. n60

The public resale of outstanding securities is usually possible only with the assistance of a broker. As explained above, the broker will violate the Securities Act unless its part of the transaction is exempt from the registration requirements. Typically, the broker relies on the dealer's exemption contained in Section 4(3) or the exemption for brokers' transactions contained in Section 4(4) of the Securities Act. Neither of those exemptions is available to the broker if the selling investor is an underwriter. n61 Accordingly, because, as discussed above, any investor attempting to publicly sell restricted securities is also most certainly an underwriter at least in the Commission's view, reputable brokers are likely to refuse to effect the transaction except where all of the conditions for a resale under Rule 144 can and will be satisfied.

In 1962, the Commission issued a release providing detailed guidance as to the expected standards of conduct for broker-dealers. Under the Commission's guidelines, broker-dealers involved in the sale of large quantities of securities must ensure that they are not participating in an illegal distribution. The broker-dealer must take affirmative steps to verify the identity of the seller and any claimed registration exemptions, and cannot rely on the statements of the seller or seller's counsel. The thoroughness of the investigation expected of a broker-dealer increases with the quantity of securities involved in the sale. Failure to conduct a sufficient investigation may lead to liability under the anti-fraud provisions of the securities laws if as a result the broker-dealer makes recommendations without adequate basis or fails to disclose material information. n62

[b] Other Limitations on Public Sales of Restricted Securities. An investor seeking to publicly resell restricted securities that believes that it falls outside the category of a statutory underwriter and is therefore entitled to rely on the resale exemption or that wishes to risk a possible violation of the Securities Act may find that the resale will be difficult to complete because of limitations from sources other than the possible unavailability of the Section 4(1) resale exemption.

All restricted securities were acquired from the issuer of those securities or from an affiliate of the issuer in a private offering that was exempt from registration under the Securities Act by reason of one of the private offering exemptions. n63 Normally those securities, if certificated, will bear a legend indicating that they may not be transferred in the absence of registration or an available exemption from registration. In addition, stop transfer instructions will generally have been issued to the transfer agent. These precautions against resale will exist where explicitly required by regulation for reliance upon a particular exemption. They are also typically utilized by an issuer selling securities in reliance upon the statutory "private placement" exemption contained in Section 4(2) of the Securities Act to ensure the viability of that exemption. The reason is that while neither the legend nor the stop transfer instructions are necessary for the perfection of that exemption, n64 (and may well be ignored by issuers in smaller offerings), they assist in preventing resales to non-qualifying investors that could at least in theory cause the loss of the exemption for the earlier offering and subject the issuer to liability for a violation of the Securities Act. n65 As a result, the transfer agent will not effect the transfer of the restricted securities without direction from the issuer. The issuer is not likely either to direct the removal of the legends or the stop transfer instructions or to authorize the transfer of the securities until expiration of the holding period without an opinion of its or other counsel n66 experienced in securities law that either Section 4(1) or some other exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act is available for the proposed resale and that all of the requirements of that exemption have been or will be complied with by the selling parties. n67

[3] Limitations on Availability of Resale Exemption for Public Sales of Control Securities

Section 4(1) exempts from the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of the Securities Act any transactions by a person "other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer." n68 As discussed above in connection with the resale of securities other than "control securities," n69 the availability of the resale exemption depends upon the lack of involvement of anyone who falls within the category of a statutory underwriter. If none of the selling security holder, the participating broker, or any other person involved in the transaction is an underwriter, the seller may rely on the resale exemption; and the broker, despite being a dealer, may rely on either the dealer exemption or the exemption for brokers' transactions contained in Sections 4(3) and 4(4) of the Securities Act, respectively, without depriving the seller of the resale exemption. n70

The resale exemption contains no language regarding an affiliate or a control person. Yet the exemption (except pursuant to Rule 144) is almost never available for the public resale of "control securities" because the transaction ordinarily involves an underwriter within the meaning of the Securities Act. Section 2(11) defines an underwriter to include a person "who sells for an issuer in connection with" a distribution. n71 A public resale of securities by an affiliate normally involves a distribution except when made in compliance with Rule 144. n72 Section 2(11) goes on to specify that for purposes of defining an underwriter only, the term "issuer" shall include "any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer, or any person under direct or indirect common control with the issuer." n73 In other words, an affiliate of the issuer is, as a result of that language, an issuer for purposes of determining whether another person is an underwriter. When an affiliate attempts to effect a public sale of securities, he will generally engage a broker. The broker, because the affiliate is an issuer under Section 2(11), will be selling "for an issuer" in connection with a distribution and therefore become an underwriter. Since an underwriter, i.e., the broker, is involved in the transaction, the transaction falls outside the resale exemption, rendering that exemption unavailable to the affiliate. n74 Accordingly, regardless of whether the affiliate is itself an underwriter for purposes of Section 2(11), it may almost never publicly sell "control securities" in reliance upon Section 4(1) of the Securities Act except pursuant to Rule 144. n75

The primary effect of that result on the affiliate of the issuer is that the affiliate may not lawfully resell any securities of the issuer publicly without causing a registration statement to be filed and to become effective or finding another available exemption. Another effect of that result is that even a holder of securities who either believes that he is not an affiliate of the issuer or desires to risk possible liability for a violation of the registration requirements of the Securities Act will find it virtually impossible to complete the contemplated sale of securities.

Unlike restricted securities, control securities usually contain no legend and are generally not subject to stop transfer instructions. While technically the issuer has no securities law obligation or reasons to prevent their resale it does have a general interest in not participating in a violation of any of the securities laws and needs insiders to disclose accurate information about their holdings in order to make accurate disclosure itself. The affiliate then will often not encounter any difficulty from the issuer's transfer agent although many reputable brokers will be alert to the problems posed by control securities.

[4] Limitations on Availability of Resale Exemption for Public Sales of Unrestricted Securities by Non-affiliates

While a non-affiliate holder of unrestricted securities generally may sell those securities freely in reliance upon Section 4(1) of the Securities Act, there are a few exceptions to this rule.

[a] Underwriters' Compensation Securities. As discussed further below, n76 underwriters' compensation securities, at least those acquired in a registered public offering, are regarded by the staff of the Commission as unrestricted securities, because of their acquisition in a transaction involving a registered public offering. Unlike most other unrestricted securities, including even such atypical categories of unrestricted securities as those acquired through employee benefit plans, n77 underwriters' compensation securities are not freely tradeable. The holders of these securities are literally underwriters and, as such, are in the staff's view forever excluded from relying upon any Section 4 exemption. As a result, underwriters' compensation securities, at least until 1975, could not be sold unless they were registered by the issuer. n78 Since 1975, however, the staff has allowed the resale of certain underwriters' compensation securities in conformity with most of the requirements of Rule 144, even though the rule is technically not applicable to unrestricted securities. n79

[b] Holders of Substantial Amounts of Securities. As mentioned above, Section 4(1) was intended to exempt routine trading transactions, but not secondary distributions, from the registration requirements of the Securities Act. To protect investors from the market effect of resales of substantial amounts of unrestricted securities by non-affiliates, the staff of the Commission developed the informal "presumptive underwriter doctrine" to prevent resales by purchasers of large blocks of securities in reliance upon the resale exemption. Under this doctrine the staff would presume a person:

to be an underwriter, within the meaning of section 2(11) of the Securities Act, if such person purchases or acquires a significant percentage of the securities offered pursuant to a registered distribution, except that such purchaser is not deemed to be an underwriter if he resells such securities in limited quantities. n80

The result was that a recipient of securities who on the basis of such traditional standards as motivation and relationship to the issuer would be considered a member of the general investing public would be presumed an underwriter solely by virtue of having acquired a relatively large amount of securities in a public offering. n81 This presumption, of course, was subject to rebuttal. n82 The doctrine has been applied to both registered securities and securities offered in reliance upon one of the public offering exemptions from the registration requirements of the Securities Act. n83 Although the percentage of outstanding securities of the issuer that needed to be offered to trigger the presumption of underwriter status was initially 10 percent of the amount offered, n84 the staff's no-action letters establish that it later regarded the doctrine to be applicable whenever the amount of securities offered exceeded the volume limitations contained in Rule 144(e), n85 which at the time was essentially a 1 percent test. n86

The presumptive underwriter doctrine was obviously inconsistent with the express statutory language of Section 2(11). It was never officially adopted by the Commission or considered by any court. It appears to have been applied in practice by the staff frequently, but haphazardly. n87 For some time the doctrine was regarded as largely obsolete and, as a result of the 1983 amendment to Rule 144 that added Rule 144(k), n88 there is little question that it is dead. n89 In 2007 the Commission finally eliminated the presumptive underwriter provision of Rule 145, except for transactions involving a shell company. n90

Once Rule 144(k) was adopted, even restricted securities could be sold freely by a non-affiliate two years after the securities were last held by the issuer or an affiliate pursuant (the 2007 amendments shortened this period) and a non-affiliate seller of unrestricted securities should be in no worse a position. Thus, a non-affiliate purchaser of a substantial amount of unrestricted securities may establish that it did not purchase them with a view to distribution n91 by holding them for the applicable holding period and thus be entitled to rely on the resale exemption. n92

[c] Underwriters as Result of Rule 145(d) n93 Reorganizations or Similar Transactions.

Where the surviving party to a business combination uses securities as all or part of the consideration for the business deal, security holders in the acquired company could be deemed to be underwriters if they publicly offered the securities acquired in such a transaction. Rule 145(a) specifies that an "offer" or "sale" will be deemed to occur with exchanges of securities in connection with certain reclassifications, mergers, consolidations and transfers of assets that are submitted for the vote or consent of the security holders of a corporation. Accordingly, the "sale" must be registered unless an exemption is available.

Under Rule 145(c), or the presumptive underwriter provision, any party to any transaction of the type set forth in Rule 145(a) (other than the issuer) or an affiliate of such party who publicly offers the securities acquired in such transaction is an "underwriter", but only where any party to a Rule 145(a) transaction is a shell company, other than a business combination related shell company. n94

Any party to a transaction of the type set forth in Rule 145(a) involving a shell company, other than the issuer, may resell the securities acquired in the transaction only in compliance with the resale restrictions of Rule 145(d), which follow the requirements of Rule 144. n95 If a person has expressly acknowledged or agreed in writing to be subject to, and bound by, the previous provisions of Rule 145 with respect to securities acquired in a transaction, such persons will presumably remain bound by those terms. A holder currently subject to such restrictions may wish to seek a waiver or modification of such writing to reflect the amendments to Rule 145.

[d] Resale of Certain Securities Acquired Overseas. Securities of U.S. issuers sold overseas in reliance on Regulation S are restricted. n96 Generally, securities of non-U.S. issuers acquired overseas in reliance on Regulation S, at least once any applicable distribution compliance period has expired, are unrestricted. n97 This does not automatically mean, however, that securities acquired overseas can be resold back into the United States at the end of the distribution compliance period in reliance on the resale exemption. n98 The statutory definition of underwriter includes one who has purchased from an issuer (including affiliates) "with a view to ... distribution." n99 Thus, a person that purchases securities overseas with the intention of selling them back into the U.S. public markets at the end of any applicable distribution compliance period may be deemed to be an underwriter and thus unable to rely on the resale exemption. Although it may be difficult to prove that a public resale in these circumstances amounted to a public offering or distribution, such transactions should be examined carefully.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Ch. 9 infra, and Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Ch. 5 (Matthew Bender).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Sections 5 and 10 of the 1933 Act, discussed in § 7.02 infra, and reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Section 2(7), discussed in § 4.03 supra. In addition to federal regulation of interstate security sales, individual states often place restrictions on securities offered privately within the state. See, e.g., Uniform Securities Act of 1956 § 402(b)(9), which imposes registration and filing requirements on securities offered to more than ten people during a twelve-month period, and which has been adopted in whole or in part by several states.

(n4)Footnote 4. Section 12(a)(2) of the Act provides the purchaser of securities in a public transaction with an express remedy against the seller amounting to rescission of the transaction. Section 12(a)(2) is discussed in § 9.04 infra. In addition, the purchaser in both public and private transactions has an implied private right of action against the seller for a violation of Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act of 1934, Superintendent of Insurance of the State of New York v. Bankers Life and Casualty Co., 404 U.S. 6, 13 n.9 (1971). Finally, the seller risks enforcement action by the Commission.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ch. 7 infra.

(n6)Footnote 6. Frequently, the purchasers of securities from the issuer in a private placement under Section 4(2) of the Act or one of the related rules (see § 4.02 supra) will require the issuer to register the privately placed securities upon the request of a specified percentage of the holders within a particular time frame. In other cases, the purchasers of privately placed securities will be satisfied with "piggy-back" registration rights. In the latter case, the holders of the privately placed securities will be able to cause their securities to be registered only if the issuer happens to be preparing a registration statement in connection with an unrelated offering. In light of the difficulty of lawfully selling restricted securities other than through a restricted offering or pursuant to Rule 144 or Rule 144A, see § 6.06 and § 6.08 infra, investors should consider registration rights if they do not wish to risk the need to hold restricted securities for the § applicable holding period.

(n7)Footnote 7. Section 4(2), which exempts non-public transactions from registration, is available to the issuer only, and not for resale. Section 4(1) is also discussed in § 4.01 supra.

(n8)Footnote 8. Section 4(1). With respect to resales generally, see R. Campbell, Jr., Resales of Securities Under the Securities Act of 1933, 52 Wash. & Lee L. Rev. 1333 (1995).

(n9)Footnote 9. Section 2(4), discussed in § 4.02[1] supra, defines the term "issuer" as a "person who issues or proposes to issue any security." The definition is straightforward. It clearly means a corporation and includes other persons such as promoters, for example, involved in the issuance of securities. It does not include, however, ordinary investors.

(n10)Footnote 10. See the text accompanying n.28 infra.

(n11)Footnote 11. The Section 2(12) definition of a dealer is discussed in § 4.02[3], and § 4.05 supra.

(n12)Footnote 12. The term "dealer" includes persons who act as agents for investors in buying and selling transactions, as well as persons who buy and sell for their own accounts. In other words, persons who function as brokers in a selling or purchasing transaction fall within the definition of dealer for purposes of Section 4(1) of the Act.

(n13)Footnote 13. The term "investor" will be used throughout this chapter to refer to a holder of outstanding securities who is not a dealer within the meaning of Section 2(12).

(n14)Footnote 14. Section 2(11) is discussed further in § 4.02[2] supra.

(n15)Footnote 15. See § 4.02 supra.

(n16)Footnote 16. See § 4.03 supra regarding the meaning of the term "public offering."

(n17)Footnote 17. Value Line Income Funds, Inc. v. Marcus, [1964-1966 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 91,523, at P 94,972 (S.D.N.Y. 1965).

(n18)Footnote 18. Id.

(n19)Footnote 19. Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC, 267 F.2d 461 (2d Cir. 1959), cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896 (1959); Value Line Income Fund, Inc. v. Marcus, n.31 supra, at P 94,972.

(n20)Footnote 20. For a discussion of the various methods of resale under Section 4(1), see §§ 6.05- 6.09 infra.

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 4.02 supra. One court has equated the term "distribution" with "public offering," at least in the context of an attempted sale of restricted securities. Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC, n.23 supra. In a case before the Commission involving a series of sales of unrestricted securities by affiliates of the issuer, the Commission found that a distribution is "the entire process by which in the course of a public offering the block of securities is dispersed and ultimately comes to rest in the hands of the investing public." In the Matter of Ira Haupt & Co., 23 S.E.C. 589, 597, [1945 -1947 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 75,690 at P 77,559 (1946), citing Oklahoma-Texas Trust, 2 S.E.C. 764, 769 (1937), aff'd, 100 F.2d 888 (10th Cir. 1939). More recently the Commission has indirectly defined a distribution at least in the context of attempted resales of restricted securities and of "control securities" by deeming no distribution to exist if all of the conditions contained in Rule 144 or Rule 144A are satisfied. See generally §§ 6.05 and 6.07 infra for a discussion of those conditions. In the context of "pump and dump" schemes, Judge Easterbrook held that a plan to "move securities from the issuer to the public, where they would trade freely" is a plan to engage in distribution. SEC v. McNamee, 481 F.3d 451, 455 (7th Cir. 2007).

(n22)Footnote 22. In the Matter of Ira Haupt & Co., n.35 supra, at 602; H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess., 13-14 (1933).

(n23)Footnote 23. Id.

(n24)Footnote 24. See discussion in § 6.02[2] infra.

(n25)Footnote 25. See text accompanying n.21 supra.

(n26)Footnote 26. Id.; see also SEC v. Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Ass'n., 120 F.2d 738, 740 (2d Cir. 1941), cert. denied, 314 U.S. 618 (1941).

(n27)Footnote 27. See text accompanying n.21 supra; see also SEC v. Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Assn., n.26 supra, at 741.

(n28)Footnote 28. SEC v. Continental Tobacco Company of South Carolina, 463 F.2d 137, 156 (5th Cir. 1972); SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 126 (1953).

(n29)Footnote 29. See n.15 supra and Chs. 9-11 infra.

(n30)Footnote 30. See "Resales of Restricted Securities under Revised Rules 144 and 145 and Section 4(1/2)". Davidson, Gordon K. Practising Law Institute Corporate Law and Practice Handbook Series PLI Order No. 13990, New York City, April 10-11, 2008. Private Placements.

(n31)Footnote 31. See § 6.02[3] infra.

(n32)Footnote 32. See Rule 144 and discussion in § 6.05[2][d] infra.

(n33)Footnote 33. Section 4(3) is discussed in § 4.05 supra.

(n34)Footnote 34. A broker's transaction is limited to a transaction where the broker, among other things, "after reasonable inquiry is not aware of circumstances indicating that the person for whose account the securities are sold is an underwriter" Rule 144(g)(3), discussed in § 6.05[6][b] infra. See also In the Matter of Ira Haupt & Co., n.35 supra, at 598.

(n35)Footnote 35. Unlike the presence of an underwriter, the presence of a broker does not render the resale exemption unavailable to the selling investor despite the reference to dealers contained in Section 4(1). Ruder, Federal Restrictions on the Sale of Securities, 67 Nw. U. L. Rev. 1, 36-37 (Supp. 1972). The broker, however, will violate Section 5 of the Act unless it relies on some other available exemption. Normally, the broker will look to the exemption for brokers' transaction contained Section 4(4) of the Act for the broker's part of the transaction. Section 4(4) of the Act is discussed § 4.04 supra.

Another option sometimes available for the broker is the dealer's exemption contained in Section 4(3), discussed in § 4.03 supra. In that regard, see Resale by Institutional Investors of Debt Securities Acquired in Private Placements, 34 Bus. Law. 1927, 1945-46 (1979).

(n36)Footnote 36. In addition to the possible liabilities as described in n.415 supra and in Chapters 9-11 infra, the Commission may see fit to revoke the broker's registration as a broker-dealer or suspend it from membership in Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ("FINRA"). See Section 15(b)(4)(D) (which permits the Commission to impose a sanction upon a broker-dealer who has willfully violated the Securities Act) and Section 15A(g)(2) (which permits a national securities association upon direction by the Commission to deny membership or association with a member to any broker-dealer subject to a statutory disqualification); see, e.g., In the Matter of Ira Haupt & Co., n.34 supra.

(n37)Footnote 37. The difference is critical primarily because of the difference in value. See § 6.01, n.6 and accompanying text supra.

(n38)Footnote 38. See § 6.03 infra for the definition of the term "restricted securities" and an extended analysis thereof.

(n39)Footnote 39. See § 6.02[1] supra; but see § 6.02[4] infra, for the limited exceptions to that general rule.

(n40)Footnote 40. Alan J. Bowton, Public Resales of Restricted Securities in Reliance upon Section 4(1) of the Securities Act, in Sales and Resales of Restricted Securities 1979, at 385, 388 (PLI Corporate L. & Practice Course Handbook Series No. 314, 1979).

(n41)Footnote 41. Preamble of the Securities Act; see also the message of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, S. Rep. No. 47, 73d Cong., 1st Sess., 6-7 (1933) and H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess., 1-2 (1933).

(n42)Footnote 42. See § 6.02[1] supra.

(n43)Footnote 43. See § 6.02[1] supra.

(n44)Footnote 44. See § 6.02[1][a] supra.

(n45)Footnote 45. Rule 144(a)(3), discussed in § 6.03[1] infra.

(N46)Footnote 46. Current information would not be available unless voluntarily made so by the issuer or unless required by Section 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act. The Section 13 reporting of information requirements are triggered by the registration of securities under the Securities Act or the Exchange Act. Those reporting requirements are not triggered by a private offering of securities.

(n47)Footnote 47. Prior to 1990, such purchasers were generally required to show that they were purchasing with "investment intent" and not with a view to resale. Since the adoption of Rule 144A in 1990, however, and in view of Rule 144A's objective of increasing secondary market liquidity for restricted securities, it is not necessary that investors in private placements not purchase with a view to resale. It is merely necessary that they not take with a view to public resale, or "distribution." See the discussion of Rule 144A at § 6.07.

(n48)Footnote 48. See § 6.05[4] infra.

(n49)Footnote 49. Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC, n.19 supra, at 466-67.

(n50)Footnote 50. In re Ira Haupt & Co., n.34 supra, at 590, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) at P 77,5597.

(n51)Footnote 51. See § 6.05[4] infra and discussion of "Section 4(11/2)", § 6.08 infra.

(n52)Footnote 52. See text accompanying nn.35 supra.

(n53)Footnote 53. SEC v. Ralston Purina, 346 U.S. 119, n. 28 supra.

(n54)Footnote 54. See n.31 and accompanying text supra; § 6.04[1] infra.

(n55)Footnote 55. PLI, Sales and Resales of Restricted Securities, n.40 supra, at 392. But see n.61 supra. Since the adoption of Rule 144A, the phrase "investment intent" should generally be replaced with "non-distributive intent."

(n56)Footnote 56. Preliminary note to Rule 144.

(n57)Footnote 57. Id.

(n58)Footnote 58. Rule 144(d).

(n59)Footnote 59. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6253, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 134A at P 1017-6 (1980).

(n60)Footnote 60. But see § 6.06 infra.

(n61)Footnote 61. See ns.21-27 and accompanying text supra.

(n62)Footnote 62. Securities Act Release No. 4445, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,820 (February 2, 1962).

(n63)Footnote 63. See § 4.02 supra.

(n64)Footnote 64. C. Schneider, Developments in Definition of a "Security"--1983/ 84 Update, 17 Rev. Sec. Reg. 851, at 880 (1984).

(n65)Footnote 65. Ruder, Federal Restrictions on the Sale of Securities, n.35 supra, at 45.

(n66)Footnote 66. There have been recent cases where attorneys were sanctioned for inappropriately issuing Rule 144 "clean" letters. In Packetport, the attorney issued an opinion letter to the transfer agent stating that the transferor was a non-affiliate and had held the securities for two years. In response, the transfer agent removed the restrictive legends from the shares. The attorney knew that this information was false. The SEC charged the attorney and his accomplices with fraud and registration violations. See SEC v. Packetport.com, Inc., Civ. No. 3:05-CV-1747 (D. Conn. 2005).

(n67)Footnote 67. In this regard the Commission is of little help. The staff takes the position that the placement and removal of restrictive legends on securities is completely within the discretion of the issuer, that the Commission has no authority to require the imposition or removal of those legends, and that the staff will take no view respecting any right or duty of removal. See, e.g., Buck-Man Electronics Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3170, (March 4, 1981). But see Limited Stores, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3070 (December 7, 1983), in which the Division suggests that the removal of legends after three years (the holding period mandated by then Rule 144(k)) seems appropriate because of then applicable Rule 144(k).

(n68)Footnote 68. Section 4(1), discussed in § 4.02 supra.

(n69)Footnote 69. See § 6.02[1] supra.

(n70)Footnote 70. See ns. 24-27 and accompanying text supra.

(n71)Footnote 71. See text accompanying n.21 supra.

(n72)Footnote 72. The Commission's view was originally that Rule 144 provided the exclusive method for publicly selling "control securities" under the Section 4(1) resale exemption. That position is dependent upon the view that every public resale of securities by an affiliate outside of Rule 144 constitutes a distribution within the meaning of Section

2(11) of the Act. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5306, [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,000 (1972); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5223, [1971-1972 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78, 487 (1972). In 1979, the Commission declared that Rule 144 was non-exclusive, with the addition of then Rule 144(j). Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6032 (1979). If one were able to determine (in the case, for example, of the sale of an insignificant amount of securities) that no distribution were involved, then it is possible that the sale of unrestricted securities by an affiliate might be able to rely on the resale exemption. See § 6.06 infra.

See § 6.05 infra for detailed discussion of Rule 144.

(n73)Footnote 73. Section 2(11), discussed in § 4.06 supra in connection with controlling persons.

(n74)Footnote 74. United States v. Wolfson, 405 F.2d 779, 782 (2d Cir. 1968) , cert. denied, 394 U.S. 946 (1969)

(n75)Footnote 75. Id.

(n76)Footnote 76. See § 6.03[3][d][i] infra.

(n77)Footnote 77. See, e.g., Allied Technology, Inc. SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2909 (March 3, 1980), allowing resales of such securities by non-affiliates in reliance upon Section 4(1).

(n78)Footnote 78. D. Goldwasser, A Guide to Rule 144 at 125-27 (2d ed. 1978).

(n79)Footnote 79. The Division of Corporation Finance now generally allows holders of underwriters' compensation securities acquired in a public offering who are not affiliates of the issuer to resell those securities to members of the public in compliance with all of the requirements of Rule 144 (other than the filing of Form 144), provided certain other conditions are satisfied. Those other conditions are that the securities were originally registered as part of the public offering and that at least six months has elapsed from the date of the last sale of any of the securities offered under the registration statement pursuant to which the underwriters' compensation securities were issued. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2705H (1979), at Section II(A), Question 10 n.8; Communications Properties, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1978 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1000 (April 13, 1978), Paulson Investment Company, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 994 (November 10, 1997). This policy exception to the Division's previous rule that underwriters' compensation securities could never be resold pursuant to the exemption contained in Rule 144 has been extended to underwriters' compensation shares issued in connection with a Regulation A offering, Florafax International, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2209 (February 12, 1979), but not to such securities inadvertently not included in the original registration statement, Dicomed Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4086 (October 5, 1981). It has also been extended to permit the resale of stock acquired upon exercise of warrants issued as underwriters' compensation, provided that the stock so acquired has been held for a full two years from the date of exercise of the warrants. American Growth Fund Sponsors, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2720 (May 26, 1981). It has been extended to allow a broker-dealer liquidating in bankruptcy to sell securities acquired by an underwriter in connection with registered offerings but which admittedly were not underwriter's compensation. Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 989 (July 25, 1990).

See § 6.03[3][d] infra for a discussion of underwriters' compensation securities acquired in a private offering.

(n80)Footnote 80. R. Ahrenholz and W. Van Valkenberg, The Presumptive Underwriter Doctrine: Statutory Underwriter Status for Investors Purchasing a Specified Portion of a registered Offering, 1973 Utah L. Rev. 773, 775-776.

(n81)Footnote 81. Charles Nathan, Presumptive Underwriters, 8 Rev. Sec. Reg. 881, 883 (1975).

(n82)Footnote 82. R. Jennings & H. Marsh, Securities Regulation 355 (5th ed. 1982).

(n83)Footnote 83. Nathan, n.81 supra, at 884-86.

(n84)Footnote 84. Ahrenholz and Van Valkenberg, n.78 supra, at 774.

(n85)Footnote 85. See, e.g., Daylin, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2205 (October 13, 1976) [1976-1977 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,787; Amco Energy Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1079 (April 15, 1977).

(n86)Footnote 86. See Rule 144(e) and the analysis in § 6.05[5] infra.

(n87)Footnote 87. An analysis of the vast number of no-action letters relating to proposed resales of Section 3(a)(10) securities (prior to the adoption of Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3 in 1997 (revised in 1997)) indicates that the staff, whenever given the opportunity, would almost always apply the presumptive underwriter doctrine to prevent any resales of those securities in excess of the Rule 144(e) volume limits. See generally Barbara A. Ash, Reorganizations and Other Exchanges Under Section 3(a)(10) of the Securities Act of 1933, 75 Nw. U.L. Rev. 1, 82-85 (1980).

For additional evidence of the staff's approach to unrestricted securities that were publicly offered without registration, see American Pacific State Bank, SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4357 (December 7, 1981), in which resales of unrestricted Section 3(a)(10) securities were limited to the amount specified in Rule 144(e); Ascot Petroleum Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4398 (December 17, 1981), in which resales of unrestricted Section 3(a)(10) securities by persons receiving more than one percent of the issued and outstanding shares were permitted only in accordance with all of the conditions of Rule 144 except the holding period and filing of notice requirements; and Bell Canada, SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2636 (August 2, 1982), one of several letters in which the staff allowed public resales of unrestricted Section 3(a)(10) securities presumably in unlimited amounts in reliance upon Section 4(1) only because of the presence of the following three conditions:

- the transaction was governed by Rule 145 though also eligible for Section 3(a)(10);
- the securities were registered under Section 12 of the Exchange Act; and
- the issuer was subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 of the Exchange Act.

It is obvious that a crucial factor related to the application of the presumptive underwriter doctrine by the staff has been the availability of prospectus-like information about the issuer. Where such information was available, which was always the case if the securities were registered under Section 5 of the Securities Act, see Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act, resales were more likely to be permitted subject to one or more of the conditions contained in Rule 144, exclusive of the holding period and filing of notice requirements.

(n88)Footnote 88. See former Rule 144(k), which is discussed in § 6.05[4] infra.

(n89)Footnote 89. Barron, Control and Restricted Securities-- The SEC Staff Finally Abandons the 'Presumptive Underwriter Doctrine, 15 Sec. Reg. L.J. 296 (1987).

(n90)Footnote 90. See Release No. 33-8869, December 6, 2007. pg. 2647,2657.

(n91)Footnote 91. See n.75 supra.

(n92)Footnote 92. Other means by which the prospective reseller may establish that he or she is not involved in a distribution are discussed in §§ 6.05- 6.09 infra.

(n93)Footnote 93. The Commission has proposed elimination of this provision (which embodies the presumptive underwriter concept) and the resale provisions of Rule 145(c) and (d). Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7391 [current decisions] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 85,908 (1997).

(n94)Footnote 94. Rule 145(c), prior to the 2007 amendments to Rule 144, defined any party to any transaction of the type set forth in Rule 145(a) (other than the issuer) or an affiliate of such party who publicly offers the securities acquired in such transaction as an "underwriter" (and did not limit the designation to transactions involving shell companies). Prior to the amendments, such a "presumptive underwriter" would be required to comply with Rule 145(d) in connection with resales of the acquired securities even if the person, following the transaction, were no longer an affiliate of the combined entity and even if such person received registered securities in the business combination. The 2007 amendments, in short, eliminated the presumptive underwriter provision of Rule 145(c), except with respect to transactions involving a shell company.

(n95)Footnote 95. Prior to 2007, the Commission had taken the position that Rule 145(d) applied to securities acquired pursuant to exempt exchanges under Section 3(a)(10). The adopting release, Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007), stated that the Commission intends to address the treatment of parties to a transaction and their affiliates that have acquired securities in a transaction exempt from registration pursuant to Section 3(a)(10) of the Securities Act in a revised Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3. See § 6.03[3][d][iii] infra (n96)Footnote 96. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7505 (1998); see also Chapter 4, supra.

(n97)Footnote 97. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6863, [1989-1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,524 (1990), at n.110. See § 6.03[3][d][ix] infra.

(n98)Footnote 98. The purpose of the distribution compliance period in Regulation S is to ensure that during the offering period and in the subsequent aftermarket trading that takes place offshore, the persons complying with the Rule 903 safe harbor (issuers, distributors and their affiliates) are not engaged in an unregistered, non-exempt distribution of securities into the U.S. capital markets. In connection with the 2007 amendments to Rule 144, the Commission amended Regulation S to conform the distribution compliance period in Rule 903(b)(3)(iii) for Category 3 reporting issuers to the amendments to the Rule 144 holding period. Accordingly, U.S. reporting issuers will be subject to a distribution compliance period of six months under Regulation S (as opposed to the previous one-year distribution compliance period).

(n99)Footnote 99. See n.21 supra and accompanying text.

72 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.03

§ 6.03 Definition of Restricted Securities

The term "restricted securities" cannot be found in the text of the Securities Act or indeed in any of the federal securities laws. Over the years, the term was applied by securities lawyers and other members of the securities industry to all securities that were not freely tradeable because of restrictions resulting from the Securities Act. As time went on and more specificity became desirable, the term was used more narrowly to refer to only that category of restricted securities commonly referred to as "letter" securities or privately placed securities, as opposed to the other category of restricted securities commonly called "control securities." In 1972, the Securities and Exchange Commission promulgated Rule 144, which codified that narrower usage by expressly defining restricted securities to include only privately placed securities n1, although that definition has been expanded by subsequent amendments to Rule 144.

[1] Rule 144 Definition

Paragraph (a)(3) of Rule 144 presently defines the term "restricted securities" to include:

- securities acquired directly or indirectly from the issuer, or from an affiliate of the issuer, in a transaction or chain of transactions not involving any public offering;
- securities acquired from the issuer that are subject to the resale limitations of Rule 502(d) under Regulation D or Rule 701(c) under the Securities Act;
- securities that are acquired in a transaction or chain of transactions meeting the requirements of Rule 144A;
- securities acquired from the issuer in a transaction subject to the conditions of Regulation CE (Rule 1001);
- equity securities of domestic issuers acquired in a transaction or chain of transactions subject to the conditions of Rule 901 or 903 under Regulation S; n2
- securities acquired in a transaction made under Rule 801 under the Securities Act to the same extent and proportion that the securities held by the security holder of the class with respect to which the rights offering was made were, as of the record date for the rights offering, "restricted securities" within the meaning of this paragraph (a)(3);

- securities acquired in a transaction made under Rule 802 under the Securities Act to the same extent and proportion that the securities that were tendered or exchanged in the exchange offer or business combination were "restricted securities" within the meaning of this paragraph (a)(3);

- securities acquired from the issuer in a transaction subject to an exemption under section 4(6) of the Securities Act.

Securities that fall outside the rule's definition are normally unrestricted securities for purposes of the federal securities laws, regardless of any limitations on their disposition imposed by agreement, by any state statute, or otherwise. n3 In other words, the lawful resale of unrestricted securities under the Securities Act is not limited as a result of the manner of their acquisition, n4 though their resale may be restricted because they are held by a controlling person of the issuer n5 or because of other circumstances. n6

[2] Scope of Rule 144 Definition

The definition of the term restricted securities contained in Rule 144(a)(3) is the standard by which all securities are classified as either restricted securities or unrestricted securities with the consequent effects on their resalability without registration under the Securities Act. Although the definition is relatively precise as compared with past usage of the term, certain aspects require some clarification to ensure the proper identification of all restricted securities.

[a] Securities. Any outstanding security of whatever nature, for example, stock, debenture, or investment contract, may be a restricted security, provided, of course, that the so-called security is in fact a security within the meaning of Section 2(1) of the Securities Act. n7 The form of a security is never determinative of whether that security is a restricted security.

Certain securities, apparently either because of their intrinsic nature or because of the protection that results from regulation other than through the securities laws, n8 are completely exempt from the Securities Act's registration requirements by one of Sections 3(a)(2) through 3(a)(8), regardless of the nature of the transactions in which they are involved. n9 These so-called exempt securities, therefore, are regulated only by the antifraud provisions of the securities acts. Since neither the initial sale nor any resale of exempt securities is subject to the registration requirements, they are generally freely tradeable. The manner of any offering is not relevant to the application of the Securities Act's registration requirements, and the concept of restricted or unrestricted as applied to an exempt security is generally without meaning. n10 Exempt securities, therefore, are outside the scope of this chapter.

[b] Method of Acquisition. A security takes on its restricted or unrestricted character primarily as a result of the private or public manner of its acquisition by a person other than the issuer. The actual method of acquisition, n11 whether by purchase, gift, bequest or pledge, is unimportant. Any outstanding security, no matter how acquired, generally will be restricted if it was acquired from either the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer in a transaction or chain of transactions not involving any public offering. n12

[3] Sources of Restricted Securities

There are only two sources of all restricted securities: the issuer of those securities n13 or an affiliate of the issuer. n14 In either case, the securities must have been acquired in a transaction or series of transactions not involving any public offering. n15 While no other person can create a restricted security from an unrestricted security, whatever the manner of the transaction, any person can render a restricted security unrestricted by transferring it in a transaction involving a public offering or, generally only in the case of foreign securities, outside the United States. n16 Otherwise, the security remains restricted whether held by a single holder or transferred any number of times in transactions not involving a public offering. n17

[a] Status of Securities Acquired from the Issuer.

If the holder of particular securities acquired them directly from the issuer in a private offering, the securities became restricted as a result of that transaction, are restricted in the holder's hands, and will remain restricted until transferred publicly. n18 An issuer may create restricted securities by privately offering authorized but previously unissued securities, in a typical capital-raising transaction. An issuer may also create restricted securities by purchasing any of its outstanding securities, restricted or unrestricted, in a private or public transaction and by privately reoffering them. Their restricted character is determined by the non-public nature of the offering by the issuer. Other circumstances are simply not relevant to that classification. n19

Since the existence of a public offering is in most cases the basis for separating restricted securities from unrestricted securities, the meaning of the term "public offering" is crucial. Although Section 4(2) of the Securities Act exempts from its registration and prospectus delivery requirements "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering," n20 the Securities Act contains no definition of the term "public offering." n21 At least for purposes of determining the availability of the so-called private placement exemption from registration contained in Section 4(2), the term has been interpreted by numerous courts, n22 and less directly by the Commission, in connection with the promulgation of various rules under Section 4(2) and related sections of the Securities Act. n23 Ultimately, the determination of whether a particular transaction was a public offering must be made after considering such factors as the number of persons to whom the securities were offered and sold, the amount of securities acquired, the manner of sale, the adequacy of the then available information about the issuer and the needs of the offerees at that time for the protection afforded by the registration requirements of the Securities Act. n24

While many transactions must be individually examined and measured in light of the existing judicial and administrative standards for public offering, two types of sale transactions are clearly public offerings for purposes of the definition of restricted securities. The first is the rather obvious case of an offering of securities by or through a securities broker in an open market transaction. n25 The second involves an offering that is registered under the Securities Act. Since registration of the securities can be accomplished by the issuer only by complying with the rather costly and otherwise burdensome procedures required by the Securities Act and since private offerings may take place in the absence of registration, n26 securities offerings are registered only if there is to be a public offering, and the securities sold under the registration statement are unrestricted. n27 In addition, a public offering probably occurs whenever securities are offered or distributed to all the holders of a class of securities which is required to be registered under the Exchange Act, even if Securities Act registration of the securities is not required either because no sale or offer to sell is involved n28 or because the transaction is explicitly exempted from the registration requirement. n29

[i] In a Public Offering. Public offerings are generally registered under the Securities Act because they cannot meet the specific requirements of any of the rather specialized exemptions available for those offerings. Certain public transactions, however, may take place without registration if all of the requirements of an applicable exemption can be satisfied. Where one of these exemptions is relied upon, the resulting unregistered securities are in most cases unrestricted. n30

The Securities Act, together with certain related rules, provides several possible transaction exemptions for an issuer proposing to sell securities in a public offering. If the aggregate offering price of the securities to be offered does not exceed $5,000,000, the issuer may be able to rely on the exemption for certain small offerings contained in Regulation A promulgated by the Commission under Section 3(b) of the Securities Act. Most states require that the securities from such an offering be legended, even though the Commission does not require it, although certain intra-state legending exemptions are available n31. If the offering will be made only to residents of a single state by an issuer that is also a resident of and doing business primarily in that state, the issuer may be able to meet the requirements of the intrastate offering exemption contained in Section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act or in the related Rule 147. n32 Securities sold pursuant to 3(a)(11) are restricted from transfer outside the applicable state for nine months. In addition, securities sold in such transactions, unless registered under the state laws, must rely on a state exemption from securities registration which almost invariably contains a requirement that the security be registered, and the states will look to Rule 144 as a means for lifting the restriction. The remaining two alternatives available to the issuer are contained in Sections 3(a)(10) n33 and 3(a)(9) n34 of the Securities Act and are limited to certain qualifying transactions that involve exchanges of securities.

Pursuant to Rule 701 of the Securities Act, an issuer who is not yet subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act may offer and sell limited amounts of its securities pursuant to certain compensatory benefit plans and written compensation agreements. Although the Rule 701 exemption is available for public as well as private qualifying offerings, the rule expressly provides that all securities issued pursuant to it are restricted. n35

Rules 801 and 802 under the Securities Act provide exemptions from registration for rights offerings and exchange offers made by non-U.S. issuers where a limited number of shareholders of the subject class of securities are located in the United States. The restricted status of the securities offered depends on the status of the subject securities. n36

The Bankruptcy Code provides an exemption from registration for reorganizations pursuant to Section 1145. Since such transactions are public offerings, persons acquiring securities thereby (other than those persons deemed "underwriters" by the Bankruptcy Code) acquire unrestricted securities. n37

[ii] In a Private Offering. Since 1933 the traditional private placement by the issuer has been exempted from registration by Section 4(2) of the Securities Act, which exempts all "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering." n38 The scope of this so-called private placement exemption turns on the meaning of the term "public offering," which, as stated above, is a factual determination for the issuer (and counsel) after consideration of the relevant factors. n39 Securities offered in this way are restricted.

A holder of securities offered in this way will generally be aware of their restricted nature because of actual knowledge that the issuer relied on Section 4(2). Normally there is no question that the issuer relied on the Section 4(2) exemption. Usually, but not always, the issuer will place a conspicuous legend on the face of the privately offered securities in an attempt to assure the availability of the exemption and consequently avoid possible liability under Section 12(1) for violating Section 5 of the Securities Act. Typically, this restrictive legend would state that the securities were not registered under the Securities Act and that they may not be resold or otherwise transferred in the absence of registration or compliance with the requirements of an available exemption from registration. Often the issuer will indicate in the legend that any transfer of the securities will require an opinion of its or other counsel respecting the availability of a claimed exemption from registration. Finally, the issuer will commonly give stop transfer instructions to the transfer agent, a fact that can be easily discovered by contacting the transfer agent before attempting a sale.

In addition, at least the first holder of privately placed securities will probably be expressly informed by the issuer that the securities are restricted and that they may be resold only in certain limited circumstances. n40 Since the failure of the issuer to so inform the purchasers of privately placed securities constitutes a material omission in violation of the antifraud provisions of the Securities Acts, n41 it is unlikely that the issuer will fail to make this disclosure. Where the previous reliance on the private offering exemption by the issuer is suspected but not obvious, however, the holder of the suspect securities (or counsel) must confirm the use of Section 4(2) or another exemption through appropriate investigation.

Five other private offering exemptions from registration are available to the issuer. First, Section 4(6) of the Securities Act provides an exemption for up to $5,000,000 of securities privately offered only to institutional investors and certain other wealthy investors. n42 As in the case of reliance on Section 4(2), an issuer relying on Section 4(6) will normally include a legend on the certificates, issue stop transfer instructions to the transfer agent, and inform the purchasers of the restricted nature of the securities and the consequent limitations on the resale of those securities under the Securities

Act. The 2007 amendments codified the Commission's position that securities acquired under Section 4(6) are restricted. n43

In addition to the statutory exemptions under Sections 4(2) and 4(6), the issuer may sell unregistered securities privately in reliance upon one of the three exemptions contained in Regulation D, promulgated by the Commission under both Sections 4(2) and 3(b) of the Securities Act. n44 Although Rules 504 and 505 provide exemptions pursuant to Section 3(b) of the Securities Act and only Rule 506 provides an exemption under Section 4(2), n45 the resulting securities are normally restricted securities. n46 Regulation D expressly requires that the purchaser be informed of the restricted status of the securities and the resulting limitations on their resale and that the certificates contain a legend to that effect. n47 Accordingly, the restricted nature of Regulation D securities is almost never in doubt. n48

As a result of the Rule 701 exemption adopted by the Commission in 1988 pursuant to Section 3(b) of the Securities Act, n49 an issuer who is not yet subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act may offer and sell limited amounts n50 of its securities pursuant to certain compensatory benefit plans and written compensation agreements. n51 Although the Rule 701 exemption is available for public as well as private qualifying offerings, n52 the rule expressly provides that all securities issued pursuant to it are restricted. n53 Securities issued pursuant to Rule 701 maybe resold as freely unrestricted securities ninety days following the issuer's becoming subject to the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act. n54 Again, since recipients of Rule 701 securities must be provided with a copy of the underlying plan or arrangement, the restricted nature of their securities should be clear to them. n55

In some cases the investor is perfectly well aware that securities acquired privately from the issuer are restricted, but does not desire restricted securities. Through arrangements with existing stockholders the investor acquires shares that are unrestricted or are eligible for sale under Rule 144 and the existing shareholder is issued new shares by the issuer. The Commission disapproves of these "gypsy swaps" and holds that the new investor has acquired restricted securities with a holding period commencing at the time it acquired the shares from the existing stockholder. According to the SEC staff, a "public resale of the shares acquired from the stockholder without regard to the conditions of Rule 144 would raise serious issues under Section 5 of the Securities Act for all parties to the transaction." n56

[b] Status of Securities Acquired from an Affiliate. If the holder of securities acquired them directly from an affiliate of the issuer in a private transaction, the securities are not always restricted, despite the literal language of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition. Unlike the case where the securities were acquired from the issuer, n57 the restricted or unrestricted status of the securities acquired from the affiliate may sometimes depend upon whether that private acquisition was through a sale or through a transaction not involving a sale under the Securities Act.

In the light of the importance of the sale versus the nonsale nature of the transaction in determining the character of securities acquired privately from an affiliate, the scope of the term "sale" is crucial. Section 2(3) of the Securities Act broadly defines "sale" to mean "every ... disposition ... for value"; n58 and the courts, usually in the context of determining the applicability of the registration requirements of the Securities Act, have construed that definition broadly. For example, a pledge of securities as collateral for the repayment of a loan has been determined to be a sale. n59 Only where no value is given is it clear that the transfer involves no sale for purposes of the Securities Act generally.

If particular securities were acquired from an affiliate in a private transaction n60 involving a sale, then the securities are always, in accordance with the language of Rule 144(a)(3), restricted securities. As in the case of securities acquired from the issuer, the securities sold by the affiliate to the holder in a private transaction are now restricted in the holder's hands even if they were unrestricted in the affiliate's hands because they had been acquired by that affiliate in a public offering. n61

Where, however, the securities were acquired from an affiliate in certain transactions not involving a sale, they are restricted securities in the hands of the holder only if they were restricted securities in the hands of the affiliate, as would be the case if the affiliate acquired them from the issuer in a transaction, or series of transactions, not involving a public offering. The securities will not become restricted securities, however, despite the express language of Rule 144(a)(3), if they were unrestricted in the hands of the affiliate (because they were purchased by the affiliate in a transaction involving a public offering) and then transferred in a private transaction not involving a sale. n62 The reason that the Commission has taken this position presumably is one of equity. If restricted securities were to become restricted as a result of a gift of them by an affiliate, the donee would be in a worse position than their donor. Instead, the donee is deemed to stand in the shoes of the donor. n63 Although the donee-holder would have unrestricted securities, it would be treated, nevertheless, as an affiliate for purposes of resale, at least until the donor ceased to be an affiliate and could freely trade the securities if it still owned them. n64

In sum, an affiliate creates restricted securities by selling any securities in a private transaction. In a non-sale disposition, the affiliate simply passes on the existing restrictions of restricted securities or control securities, n65 as the case may be, and does not cause unrestricted securities to become restricted by privately transferring them in a non-sale transaction. Non-sale transactions for purposes of determining the restricted or unrestricted character of securities acquired from an affiliate would include gifts n66 and bequests n67 and presumably certain distributions. n68

As is always the case, any transfer of securities by an affiliate in a public transaction of any nature (sale or non-sale) would not result in restricted securities. n69

An affiliate proposing to sell securities in a public offering may rely on one of four possible exemptions from registration, provided all of the requirements for perfection of one of these exemption can be satisfied. The affiliate may rely on Regulation A for an offering of up to $5,000,000 (for selling security holders), n70 on the intrastate offering exemption contained in Section 3(a)(11) (but not on Rule 147), n71 on the exchange exemption contained in Section 3(a)(10), or on Rule 144. n72 The resale exemption contained in Section 4(1) outside Rule 144 is normally not available for a public offering by an affiliate because the transaction would ordinarily involve an underwriter within the meaning of the Securities Act. n73

[c] Status of Securities Acquired from Another Holder. If the holder of securities acquired them from a person other than the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer in a transaction not involving a public offering, they are restricted if, and only if, they were restricted in the hands of the transferor. The chain of transactions n74 would have to be examined until the transferor was the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer. If, when the securities were first acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer, they were restricted securities in the hands of the transferee and if the chain of transactions from that first holder to the present holder of the securities involved no public resale, then the securities are restricted. n75 Otherwise, they are unrestricted securities and may be traded freely in the marketplace.

[d] Special Categories of Securities.

The dichotomy between public offering and private offering exemptions from registration is generally determinative of the unrestricted or restricted status of the securities so offered. There are, however, several significant categories of securities that cannot be so easily labeled under that dichotomy. Since these securities have proved troublesome both to the Commission and to securities lawyers, they warrant special mention.

[i] Underwriters' Compensation and Similar Securities. Frequently, the underwriters of an issuer's first public offering are given the opportunity to purchase an equity interest in the issuer at a price well below the public offering price as partial compensation for their services. Although these underwriters' compensation securities, or so-called "cheap" securities, were arguably offered privately to the underwriters, the staff of the Commission views them as securities acquired in a transaction or chain of transactions involving a public offering and therefore as unrestricted securities. n76 Notwithstanding this position, however, the staff has permitted resale of such securities pursuant to Rule 144. Otherwise, sale of such securities would be even more difficult than for restricted securities. n77 If the securities were issued as compensation for arranging a private offering, on the other hand, then they would not have been acquired in connection with a public offering and would therefore be restricted securities as defined by Rule 144(a)(3). n78

Similarly, an issuer will often issue securities, usually contemporaneously with its public offering, to various other persons who rendered services in connection with that public offering. Any securities so issued to finders or financial consultants are normally viewed by the staff as unrestricted securities on the ground that they were issued in connection with the related public offering. n79 Securities acquired by lawyers and accountants for their services in connection with a public offering, however, are usually, but not always, regarded by the staff as privately placed by the issuer and therefore restricted. n80

[ii] Securities Acquired Through Employee Benefit Plans. Securities are frequently sold or distributed to employees by employee benefit plans that are established by the employer. n81 These employee stock option, stock purchase, stock bonus and various other benefit plans vary widely in form, n82 but all are designed to provide employees with some equity interest in the employer. Commonly, the plan, which may be an affiliate of the employer, n83 will acquire the securities of the employer directly from the employer in a private transaction and subsequently distribute them to the beneficiaries of the plan. Alternatively, the plan may purchase the securities to be distributed in the marketplace. In either case, the distribution of those securities to a number of employees will usually constitute a "public offering" within the meaning of the Securities Act and the Rule 144(a)(3) definition of restricted securities. n84 Accordingly, under the literal analysis set forth above, n85 the securities acquired from the plan would usually be unrestricted securities because they were acquired in a public offering, regardless of whether the plan was an affiliate for, or merely an agent for, the issuer of those securities.

The Division of Corporation Finance of the Commission, however, has taken a different approach toward securities of an employer acquired by the participants of an employee benefit plan. In the case where these securities were registered, they are of course deemed unrestricted in the hands of the participants. n86 Frequently, the securities distributed pursuant to an employee benefit plan were not registered because no sale was involved, n87 because a transaction exemption was available, n88 or because the staff of the Division took a no-action position regarding the need for registration, presumably on the ground that since the employees never make any investment decision regarding their participation in the plan, they would not benefit in any way from registration of the plan or of the underlying securities. n89 Prior to 1976, the Commission took the position that, despite the literal language of Rule 144(a)(3), all unregistered securities of the issuer distributed pursuant to a stock bonus or other employee benefit plan were restricted securities in the hands of the participants regardless of the public or private nature of the particular offering. n90

In 1976, the Commission reversed that rigid position and adopted a limited policy exception to its earlier rule. n91 That exception is now incorporated in Securities Act Releases Nos. 6188 n92 and 6281 n93 and reflected in literally dozens of no-action letters involving a wide variety of employee benefit plans. n94 Under this policy exception, securities of the employer issued under most employee benefit and similar plans will not be treated by the Commission as restricted securities and may be freely traded if, and only if, the following three conditions are satisfied:

- the issuer of the securities is subject to the periodic reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act; n95
- the stock being distributed under the plan is actively traded in the open market; and
- the number of shares being distributed under the plan is relatively small in relation to the number of shares of that class issued and outstanding. n96

If any one of the three conditions is not strictly satisfied, then the securities issued by the plan fall outside the Commission's exception and, according to the staff, are restricted securities in the hands of the participants. n97 For example, where the issuer's reporting obligations pursuant to Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act were suspended, the staff took the position that the unregistered securities distributed pursuant to a stock bonus or option plan were restricted securities. n98 Similarly, where the number of securities expected to be issued to certain employees during 1983 would exceed one percent of the total number of those securities outstanding in March of 1982, the Division found that the amount to be distributed was not "relatively small" within the meaning of the third condition above and that the securities, therefore, should be treated as restricted securities. n99

Although the staff has elaborated on only a few occasions on the "actively traded" requirement, presumably it would require evidence of regular trading of a number of shares large enough to ensure that resales of the securities distributed pursuant to the plan would have no measurable effect on the trading market. n100 Accordingly, securities acquired from employee benefit plans should not be treated as unrestricted securities in the absence of a favorable interpretive letter from the staff where the number of securities distributed in any one year may have exceeded one percent of the outstanding securities of the same class, or where the volume of shares traded on an exchange or over the counter is not clearly substantial, or indeed where the plan, the issuer, or the participants are in any other way different from the cases clearly falling within the Commission's policy exception. In addition, it must be kept in mind that securities issued pursuant to an employee benefit plan to an affiliate of the issuer will be "control securities" regardless of whether they are restricted or unrestricted under the above analysis. n101

[iii] Section 3(a)(10) Securities. Section 3(a)(10) of the Securities Act provides an exemption from registration for securities that are issued in exchange for outstanding securities, claims (including legal fees) or other property, or partly in such exchange, provided that a court or authorized governmental authority has approved the transaction on the basis of a suitable fairness hearing. n102 Typically, this exchange exemption is relied upon for securities issued in court approved settlements of litigation n103 and for securities issued in reorganizations found to be fair by authorized state securities commissions n104 or by courts with proper jurisdiction. n105 As noted above, it is an exemption available to both the issuer of the securities being exchanged and to affiliates of the issuer, n106 the two sources of restricted securities. Since the availability of the Section 3(a)(10) exchange exemption is not limited by the amount of securities issued, the number of recipients of the Section 3(a)(10) securities, or the manner of offering, it is generally regarded as an exemption available for public offerings. Accordingly, the securities issued in proper reliance upon the Section 3(a)(10) exemption from registration would normally be unrestricted securities because they were acquired in a public offering.

The staff now views even securities issued in exchange for restricted securities pursuant to Section 3(a)(10) as being unrestricted, reversing its earlier position that securities issued in a Section 3(a)(10) exchange for restricted securities were restricted themselves. n107 Now persons who were affiliates of an acquired company but are not affiliates of the issuer after a transaction can resell the securities received in the exchange in the manner permitted by Rule 145(d)(1) without regard to the holding period required by Rule 144(d). n108 Persons who are or become affiliates of the issuer after the transaction may resell the securities of the issuer only in accordance with the provisions of Rule 144 other than the holding period requirement of Rule 144(d). n109 Non-affiliates of the issuer and the acquired company, including those who relinquished restricted securities, are free to resell the unrestricted securities received in the exchange without regard to the limitations of Rules 144 or 145(c) and (d). n110 The St. Ives Holding Co., Inc. letter also covers Section 3(a)(10) business reorganizations involving foreign issuers; the same interpretations apply where Section 3(a)(10) exempts the issuance of unregistered securities in settlement of litigation. n111 Any party to a Section 3(a)(10) involving a shell company, other than the issuer, must resell the securities acquired in the transaction only in compliance with the resale restrictions of Rule 145(d), which follow the requirements of Rule 144. n112

[iv] Section 3(a)(9) Securities. Section 3(a)(9) provides an exemption from registration for issuers in the case of certain recapitalizations. n113 Although the number of outstanding securities that were issued in reliance upon Section 3(a)(9) is relatively small because of the fairly limited scope of the exemption, n114 it cannot be ignored because certain Section 3(a)(9) securities are restricted securities in the view of the staff of the Commission. In contrast to the situation under 3(a)(10) exchanges discussed above, perhaps because of the nature of judicial review involved in such transactions, securities exchanged by the issuer without registration in reliance upon Section 3(a)(9) of the Securities Act are considered restricted securities if they were issued in exchange for restricted securities and unrestricted if issued in exchange for unrestricted securities. n115 Again, the staff has taken the position that the securities are restricted if the exchange transaction was "private" rather than public in nature. n116

[v] Section 3(a)(11) Securities. The Section 3(a)(11) intrastate offering exemption from registration under the Securities Act is available for sales of securities by the issuer of those securities or by an affiliate of the issuer where the transaction is in every respect intrastate in nature. n117 Like the exchange exemptions contained in Sections 3(a)(10) and 3(a)(9) of the Securities Act, the intrastate offering exemption is available regardless of the amount of securities offered, the number of offerees involved, or the manner of the offering. Accordingly, Section 3(a)(11) is available for all intrastate offerings, including public offerings; and the securities once issued are therefore normally regarded as unrestricted securities. n118 Once again, the staff of the Commission has taken the position that while most securities sold in reliance upon the Section 3(a)(11) (or the related Rule 147) intrastate offering exemption are unrestricted as to resale, those issued in a "private" Section 3(a)(11) or Rule 147 transaction are restricted securities within the meaning of Rule 144(a)(3). n119

[vi] Securities Acquired as Stock Dividends or in Stock Splits. Normally, securities of the issuer distributed by it to its own shareholders as stock dividends or as a result of a stock split are not registered under the Securities Act because no sale is involved. n120 As set forth above, under the literal analysis of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition of restricted securities, those securities would be restricted in the hands of the recipient shareholders only if the distribution did not involve a public offering within the meaning of the rule. n121 Once again, the approach of the staff of the Commission is different. In the staff's view, the public or private nature of the transaction is not the deciding factor. Instead, the staff deems unregistered securities distributed as stock dividends or as a result of a stock split as restricted if they were distributed in respect of restricted securities. n122 Otherwise, they are regarded as unrestricted securities. n123 As is always the case, any of these securities distributed to an affiliate of the issuer will be "control securities" regardless of their restricted or unrestricted character. n124

One effect of this approach is that frequently some of the securities distributed as a stock dividend will be restricted securities in the hands of the recipients while others of the same issue will be unrestricted securities. n125 In fact, any particular shareholder may receive some restricted securities and some unrestricted securities in the same distribution because he received them in respect of both types of securities. Though perhaps illogical in light of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition of restricted securities, these effects also exist in the case of those Section 3(a)(9) securities that are issued in a public offering, but are deemed restricted by the staff of the Commission on the ground that they were issued in exchange for restricted securities. n126

As noted above, the Division of Corporation Finance has taken a more flexible approach as to securities acquired through certain employee benefit programs. n127 As a result, those securities are often deemed unrestricted and therefore freely tradeable by most employee participants who receive them. n128 The staff also appears to be moving in a similar direction as to certain securities acquired in spin-offs or liquidating distributions. n129 Given these trends and the effects of the staff's approach to securities acquired as stock dividends or in stock splits, a shift by the staff to a more literal analysis of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition of restricted securities would not be startling. Meanwhile, securities received in respect of restricted securities in a public offering should not be regarded as unrestricted and freely tradeable in the absence of a favorable interpretive letter.

[vii] Securities Acquired as Spin-Offs or Liquidating Distributions. A spin-off is a free distribution of the securities of an issuer other than the distributing entity to the distributing entity's own security holders. As in the case of an ordinary stock dividend, the securities, albeit those of a different issuer, are received in respect of the outstanding securities of the distributing entity. A liquidating distribution is similar to a spin-off, except that the distribution is incident to the liquidation and dissolution of the distributing entity. n130 In effect, then the security holders of that liquidating entity receive the securities of a different issuer in exchange for their securities of the liquidating entity that become valueless as a result of the liquidation. Frequently, the liquidation is the final step in a reorganization that involved the sale of all of the assets of the distributing entity in exchange for the securities that are thereafter distributed as a liquidating dividend.

In the case of both a spin-off and a liquidating distribution, the securities that are distributed by the distributing entity may have been either restricted securities or unrestricted securities in the hands of that distributing entity. In the case of either transaction, the distribution may or may not constitute a public offering within the meaning of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition of restricted securities. Finally, the distributing entity may be unrelated to the issuer of the securities distributed (as is often the case where an investment company is divesting itself of some or all of the securities in its portfolio), or the distributing entity may be an affiliate, or even the parent, of the issuer of the securities distributed. In 1997, the staff of the Commission issued a Staff Legal Bulletin outlining the circumstances in which spin-off transactions are not required to be registered under the Securities Act. n131 Based on a "no-sale" theory, and taking into account the policy concern that adequate information be available about the issuer of the spun-off securities, the staff's position is that a subsidiary does not have to register a spin-off if the following conditions are met:

- the parent shareholders do not provide consideration for the spun-off shares;
- the spin-off is pro rata to the parent shareholders;
- the parent provides adequate information about the spin-off and the subsidiary to its shareholders and to the trading markets;
- the parent has a valid business purpose for the spin-off; and
- if the parent spins off "restricted securities," it has held those securities for at least two years. n132 Presumably the two year requirement would now be one year or six months pursuant to the 2007 amendments to Rule 144.

By issuing the Bulletin, the staff hoped to decrease the considerable number of no-action letters it received on the subject of spin-offs. n133

Securities that are acquired in a registered spin-off or liquidating distribution, like all securities acquired in any other registered offering, are unrestricted securities in the hands of the distributees regardless of whether they were distributed in respect of restricted securities or whether the distributing entity was an affiliate of the issuer of those securities. n134

In the case of unregistered spin-offs or liquidating distributions, however, the restricted or unrestricted character of the securities in the hands of the distributees was, until issuance of Staff Legal Bulletin No. 4, less clear. If the literal analysis of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition of restricted securities were applied, the securities acquired in a spin-off or liquidating distribution would be restricted securities in the hands of the distributees only if the distribution were a private rather than a public transaction, and either the securities were restricted securities in the hands of the distributing entity or the distributing entity were an affiliate of the issuer. n135 The Bulletin states that it is the view of the Division of Corporation Finance that securities received by shareholders in a spin-off that meets the conditions set out in the Bulletin are generally not restricted securities. n136 Sales by the spun-off company's affiliates, however, would be subject to Rule 144(d), absent registration or another appropriate exemption. n137 The staff states that in rare situations, a large shareholder so controls the parent that the shareholder essentially decides whether to do the spin-off, in which case the staff would view the spin-off as a privately negotiated transaction, with that shareholder getting restricted securities (and other shareholders receiving unrestricted securities). n138

It would seem from these statements that the staff has returned to a more literal interpretation of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition. Previously, the staff had regarded all such securities as restricted securities, n139 then later viewed securities acquired in a spin-off or liquidating distribution as restricted securities in the hands of the distributees whenever they had been restricted securities in the hands of the distributing entity prior to the distribution. n140 This was the case even where the transaction appeared more public than private in nature. n141 A later view of the staff appeared to depend first upon whether the distributing entity was an affiliate of the issuer of the distributed securities at the time of the transaction. In the case of the non-affiliate distributing entity, the public or private nature of the spin-off or liquidating distribution was neither the determining nor even a relevant factor in determining the securities' character. The securities so acquired were viewed as restricted securities in the hands of the distributees if they had been such in the hands of the non-affiliate distributing entity. n142

The staff's current position is consistent both with the express language of Rule 144(a)(3) and the stated purpose of Rule 144 "to prohibit the creation of public markets in securities of issuers concerning which adequate current information is not available to the public." n143 It is unlikely, despite the wording of Rule 144(a)(3), that the staff will extend its position to any public spin-offs or liquidating distributions of restricted securities that fail to conform to the disclosure requirements mentioned above because such distributions do create a public market without ensuring the availability of adequate public information. The securities acquired in such nonconforming transactions, therefore, should continue to be viewed as restricted securities with all of the accompanying restrictions on their trade ability in the marketplace.

[viii] Rule 145 Securities. Rule 145 provides that certain business combinations, such as mergers, consolidations and acquisitions of assets, are subject to the registration requirements of the Securities Act. n144 Rule 145(a) specifies that an "offer" or "sale" will be deemed to occur with exchanges of securities in connection with certain reclassifications, mergers, consolidations and transfers of assets that are submitted for the vote or consent of the security holders of a corporation. Accordingly, the "sale" must be registered unless an exemption is available. Under Rule 145(c), or the presumptive underwriter provision, any party to any transaction of the type set forth in Rule 145(a) (other than the issuer) or an affiliate of such party who publicly offers the securities acquired in that transaction is an "underwriter" if any party to a Rule 145(a) transaction is a shell company, other than a business combination related shell company. n145

[ix] Securities Acquired Overseas. In 1990, the Commission promulgated Regulation S, which provides that offers and sales of securities made outside the United States are not subject to the registration requirements of the Securities Act. n146 The release adopting Regulation S stated that securities sold overseas in reliance on Regulation S were not "restricted securities." n147 It would be logical to suppose that securities acquired overseas otherwise than in reliance on Regulation S were similarly not restricted, although the Regulation S adopting release makes no reference to such transactions. n148

After the adoption of Regulation S, however, there were reports of its misuse for offerings by U.S. companies which purported to be made overseas in reliance on the Regulation, but where the securities so offered were intended to be sold back into the United States in an unregistered public offering. n149 In view of these perceived abuses, in 1995, the Commission issued a Concept Release expressing concerns about such practices, n150 and in 1998 adopted Rule 905, which stated that equity securities offered overseas by U.S. companies were restricted securities and would remain restricted notwithstanding any resales overseas. n151 Such securities are permitted to be resold under Rule 144.

[x] Securities Acquired by "Underwriters" in Bankruptcy Code Section 1145 Transactions. Section 1145(c) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that transactions that take place pursuant to Section 1145(a) are public offerings, and thus, securities issued pursuant to that section are unrestricted, so long as the sellers are not deemed "underwriters" by that section. n152 Underwriters for that purpose include those offering to sell securities received under the plan or offering to buy such securities with a view to distribution. Such underwriters may resell their securities in "ordinary trading transactions" so long as there are no concerted selling efforts of recipients of the securities pursuant to the reorganization, no use of offering documents other than that used for the reorganization and special compensation to brokers. n153

[xi] Securities Acquired Pursuant to Regulation CE Under Regulation CE (Rule 1001), offers and sales of securities that satisfy the conditions of California Corporations Code paragraph (n), Sec. 25102 shall be exempt from Section 5 of the Securities Act, provided that the sum of all cash and other consideration to be received shall not exceed

$5,000,000, less the aggregate offering price for all other securities sold in the same offering, whether pursuant to this or another exemption. n154 Securities issued under this rule are "restricted securities" as defined by paragraph (a)(3) of Rule 144 and accordingly resales of such securities must be made in compliance with the Securities Act registration requirements or an exemption therefrom. n155

[xii] Securities Offered in Rule 801 or 802 Transactions. In 1999, the Commission adopted new rules to make it easier for non-U.S. companies to make rights offerings into the United States and for persons (U.S. or non-U.S.) to extend into the United States tender offers and exchange offers for securities of non-U.S. companies that are made primarily outside the United States. n156 The rules exempt exchange offers and tender offers from registration under the Securities Act (and provide other regulatory relief) when 10% or less of the subject class of securities is owned by U.S. holders, and other procedural requirements are met. New securities issued in rights offerings under Rule 801 are unrestricted if the subject securities were unrestricted, and restricted only if the subject securities were restricted. The same principles apply in exchange offers under Rule 802.

[4] Duration of Restricted Status

Particular securities are unrestricted in any of the following four situations:

- where the security holder acquired those securities in a public offering, whether registered under the Securities Act n157 or exempt from n158 or not subject to the Securities Act's registration requirements; n159
- where the security holder's transferor (provided that the transferor was not then an affiliate of the issuer) acquired those securities in a public offering; n160
- where a previous security holder acquired those securities in a public offering; or
- where the securities are of a non-U.S. issuer and were acquired by the security holder or a previous security holder outside the United States in a transaction complying with Regulation S. n161

Thus, involvement of securities in a public offering, n162 at any time after they were last held by the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer normally renders them unrestricted. n163 It is important to realize that while registered securities are normally unrestricted securities, unregistered securities are not restricted securities if they meet the above tests.

As mentioned above, once restricted securities have been created, they remain restricted throughout any number of sales, donations or other transfer until they are transferred in a public offering n164 or overseas n165 or the expiration of the applicable holding period since the securities were last held by the issuer or any affiliate of the issuer. n166 At that point, they become essentially unrestricted securities and may therefore be freely traded under the resale exemption contained in Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n167

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5223, [1971-1972 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,487 (1972).

(n2)Footnote 2. Rule 144(a)(3) of the 1933 Act, reprinted in the Analysis of Key SEC No-Action Letters. Haft, Robert and Michele Hudson. § 7:4. (Thomson Reuters/West 2008).

(n3)Footnote 3. Certain securities, frequently those of private or close corporations, are subject to various share transfer restrictions imposed through shareholders' agreements or otherwise. These restrictions on resale are governed by the applicable state corporation law. The sale of securities is also, of course, normally subject to the relevant state securities law or laws and to the Uniform Commercial Code, Article 8, in the form adopted by the relevant state or states. All of these limitations, although matters of concern for counsel representing the potential seller of securities, are outside the scope of this chapter.

(n4)Footnote 4. For discussion of such limitations, see § 6.02[2] supra.

(n5)Footnote 5. For discussion of the limitations on the resale of securities by affiliates, see § 6.02[3] supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 6.02[4] supra, and see n3.

(n7)Footnote 7. Section 2(1) of the 1933 Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender), is discussed in § 2.01 supra. It is not always easy to determine whether a particular interest falls within that definition of a security. In that regard, see generally Schneider, The Elusive Definition of a Security, 14 Rev. Sec. Reg. 981 (1981), and its updates; Schneider Developments in Defining a "Security", 16 Rev. Sec. Reg. 985 (1983); Schneider, Definition of a "Security"--1983/ 84 Update, 17 Rev. Sec. Reg. 851 (1984); and Schneider, The Elusive Definition "Security"-- 1990 Update, 24 Rev. Sec. Reg. 13 (1991) for summaries of the elusiveness of the definition of the terms under the Act. See also M. Steinberg & W. Kaulbach, The Supreme Court and the Definition of a Security, 40 Vand. L. Rev. 489 (1987).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Allen E. Throop & Chester T. Lane, Some Problems of Exemption under the Securities Act of 1933, 4 Law & Contemp. Prob. 89 (1937).

(n9)Footnote 9. Sections 3(a)(2) through 3(a)(8) are discussed in §§ 3.03- 3.09 supra .

(n10)Footnote 10. But see Consolidated Freightways, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3110 (November 27, 1982), in which the staff states that Section 3(a)(6) securities "are not 'restricted securities' within the meaning of Rule 144(a)(3)."

(n11)Footnote 11. In perhaps only one instance has it been argued that a transfer fell short of being an acquisition for purposes of Rule 144(a)(3). In the no-action letter Equimark Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 279 (February 16, 1988), counsel argued that the distribution of unrestricted securities by a partnership that was an affiliate of the issuer to its individual partners was not an acquisition and that therefore the securities should remain unrestricted in the hands of those distributee partners. While the staff concurred in counsel's conclusion, it did not address the acquisition analysis, and its concurrence could well be based on the non-sale nature of the transaction. Regarding no-action letters generally, see n.17 infra.

(n12)Footnote 12. But see § 6.03[3][a] and § 6.03[3][d] infra for certain exceptions.

(n13)Footnote 13. The term "issuer" is precisely defined by Section 2(4) and is discussed in § 4.01[1] supra.

(n14)Footnote 14. See § 6.03[3][d][ix] infra with regard to the definition of the term "affiliate."

(n15)Footnote 15. See § 6.03[3][a][i] infra with regard to the meaning of the term "public offering." If the securities were acquired from the issuer in a Rule 504 or 701 transaction, see § 6.03[3][a][ii] infra, they are restricted even though a prior distribution of the same securities by the issuer could have been public rather than private.

(n16)Footnote 16. See § 6.03[3][d][ix] infra for a discussion of transactions outside the United States pursuant to Regulation S.

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Analysis & Technology, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2208 (February 12, 1979). This letter is an interpretive letter issued by the staff of the Division of Corporate Finance of the Commission. "An interpretive letter is one in which the staff provides an interpretation of a specific statute, rule or regulation in the context of an actual fact situation." Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6253, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 134A (1980). Similarly, no-action letter is one in which a member of the staff "indicates that the staff will not recommend any enforcement action to the Commission if the proposed transaction described in the incoming correspondence is consummated. In some instances, the staff will state in response to a no-action request that it is unable to assure the writer that it will not recommend" such enforcement action if the transaction occurs as described. Id. Since December 1, 1970, these interpretive and no-action letters have been made available to the public and are widely regarded, particularly in the aggregate, as some evidence of the views of the Commission's staff on the subject of the inquiries involved. The Division has indicated that "[m]embers of the public are entitled to rely on no-action and interpretive letters as representing the views of the Division. Such letters, however, set forth staff positions only and do not constitute an official expression of the Commission's views." Id. All of the letters cited in this chapter are available through LexisNexis, and the cites within this chapter to each letter cite to the relevant electronic database where the letter can be located.

(n18)Footnote 18. With respect to the status of restricted securities sold overseas, see § 6.09 infra.

(n19)Footnote 19. But see § 6.03[3][a][i] infra for limited exceptions.

(n20)Footnote 20. Section 4(2) is discussed in § 4.03 supra.

(n21)Footnote 21. By contrast, Section 1145(c) of the federal Bankruptcy Code specifically states that securities received pursuant to court-approved reorganization plans in bankruptcy proceedings are deemed to be received in a public offering. Accordingly, they are unrestricted and outside the scope of this chapter. See, e.g., Northeast Utilities, SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 264 (February 11, 1991); Zenith Laboratories, Inc., SEC No-Action Letters 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 37 (January 12, 1990); Cyclops Industries, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 626 (June 2, 1988).

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g., SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., n.28 supra.

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g., Regulation D, discussed in § 4.04 supra and Rule 144A, discussed in § 6.07 infra.

(n24)Footnote 24. See generally C. Schneider, The Statutory Law of Private Placements, 14 Rev. Sec. Reg. 869 (1981).

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Rio Grande Industries, Inc., 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 490 (April 5, 1989).

(n26)Footnote 26. See Ch. 4 supra.

(n27)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Hechinger Co., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 771 (May 8, 1990) (merger shares acquired in registered offering are not restricted); Nathan Golden, [1987 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,409 (1987). In fact, registered securities are unrestricted even if they were acquired in exchange for restricted securities. Vitro, Sociedad Anonima, SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1278 (November 19, 1991); Kaneb Services, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3195 (March 9, 1981). But see R. B. Jones Corp., SEC No-Action 1974 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2209 (May 27, 1974) in which the staff of the Commission deemed the shares issued in connection with the acquisition of a privately held company restricted despite their inclusion in a registration statement prepared for other purposes; Kaiser Industries Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2138 (August 25, 1977), in which the staff deemed shares included in a registration statement to be restricted securities even though an integral part of a public offering, because the cover page stated that those shares were being purchased by a particular individual and were not being publicly offered.

(n28)Footnote 28. See § 6.03[3][b] infra.

(n29)Footnote 29. See §§ 6.03[3][a][i] and [b] infra.

(n30)Footnote 30. But see § 6.03[3][d] infra.

(n31)Footnote 31. Regulation A is discussed in Ch. 5 supra.

(n32)Footnote 32. Section 3(a)(11) and Rule 147 are discussed in § 3.12 supra.

For information regarding the scope of the intrastate offering exemption, see J. Hicks, Exempted Securities Transactions Under the Securities Act of 1933, § 4.01 through § 4.09 (1933).

(n33)Footnote 33. Section 3(a)(10) is discussed in § 3.11 supra. For information regarding the scope of the exchange exemption contained in that section, see Loo & Soderbeck, The "Fairness Hearing" Exemption, 18 Rev. Sec. & Comm. Reg. 73 (1985); Kreutz & Margiotta, Section 3(a)(10) of the Securities Act of 1933, A Practical Alternative to the Private Offering Exemption in Mergers and Acquisitions, 635 PLI Corp. 505 (1989); Ash, Reorganizations and Other Exchanges Under Section 3(a)(10) of the Securities Act of 1933, 75 Nw. U. L. Rev. 1 (1980). See also Staff Legal Bulletin No. 4 (CF), September 16, 1997.

(n34)Footnote 34. Section 3(a)(9) is discussed in § 3.10 supra. For information regarding the more limited scope of that exemption, see Campbell, Mergers, Acquisitions and Recapitalizations Under Section 3(a)(9) of the Securities Act of 1933, 61 Va. L. Rev. 1957 (1975). See also Note, Distress Contingent Convertible Bonds, 104 Harv. L. Rev. 1857, 1871 n.77 (1991); Is Corporate Law Trivial?: A Political and Economic Analysis, 84 Nw. U. L. Rev. 5452 n.135 (1990).

(n35)Footnote 35. See Rule 701 and see 6.03[3][a][ii] infra.

(n36)Footnote 36. See Rules 801 and 802 and see § 6.03[3]d infra.

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g., I.C.H. Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 528 (April 14, 1997).

(n38)Footnote 38. Section 4(2) is discussed in § 4.02 supra.

(n39)Footnote 39. See § 6.03[2] supra.

(n40)Footnote 40. It is important to note that restrictions on resale of privately placed securities may be imposed both by applicable securities laws and by the terms of the offering. Since privately placed securities are restricted, they may not be freely resold and must be sold pursuant to a registration statement or in accordance with exemptions such as Rule 144, see § 6.02 supra, or Rule 144A, see § 6.07 infra. They could also be resold outside the United States in reliance on Regulation S, see § 6.09 infra, or resold in reliance on the "exemption" under so-called "Section 4(11/2)," see § 6.08[1] infra. The terms of the offering, however, may restrict resale to only certain of these options. The permitted resale options should be clearly indicated to investors.

(n41)Footnote 41. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5226, [1971-1972 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,483, at P 81,037 (1972).

(n42)Footnote 42. Section 4(6) is discussed in § 4.06 supra.

(n43)Footnote 43. See § 6.03[1] supra.

(n44)Footnote 44. See Regulation D, discussed in § 4.04 supra. Regulation D's Rules 504, 505 and 506 replaced former Rules 240, 242 and 146, respectively. Rules 240, 242 and 146 were repealed effective June 30, 1982. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6389, [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 83,106 (1982).

(n45)Footnote 45. Section 3(b) provides an exemption for securities placed in offerings not exceeding $5,000,000 and encompasses public offerings. An offering under Rule 504 or 505, therefore, may or may not involve a public offering depending upon all the facts and circumstances of the case. San Jose Capital Corp., [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,391 (1983).

(n46)Footnote 46. Despite the fact that securities sold publicly in reliance on Section 3(b) might otherwise be unrestricted securities (see discussion of status of securities sold in reliance on Regulation A at § 5.02[6] supra), both Regulation D and Rule 144 deem such securities to be restricted. Rule 502(d), discussed in § 4.04 supra. See also Rule 144(a)(3).

But see Rule 504(b)(1), discussed in § 4.04 supra, for a very limited exception. Rule 504(b)(1) provides that intrastate offerings complying with its requirements and made in accordance with state securities laws may be made publicly without implicating restrictions on transfer under federal securities law, but nearly all states impose their own resale restrictions.

(n47)Footnote 47. Rule 502(d), discussed in § 4.04 supra.

(n48)Footnote 48. See NASAA Guidelines for Cover Legends, October 2, 2004.

(n49)Footnote 49. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6768, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,231 (1988).

(n50)Footnote 50. While the maximum amount of securities that may be offered annually under Rule 701 depends upon the total assets and the number of outstanding securities of the same class of the issuer (essentially 15% tests), it may in no event exceed $5,000,000 worth of securities. Rule 701(b)(5).

(n51)Footnote 51. Rule 701(a) and (b). See also Jackson, Tufts, Cole & Black, SEC No-Action Letter 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 757 (May 25, 1988).

(n52)Footnote 52. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6768, n.45 supra, at 89,064.

(n53)Footnote 53. Rule 701(g)(1). Securities Act Rule 701(g)(3) outlines the resale limitations for securities issued under Rule 701. The limitations for resales by non-affiliates includes references to paragraphs (e) and (h) of Rule 144, which under the 2007 amendments to Rule 144 are no longer apply to resales by non-affiliates. Accordingly, the resale restrictions of securities acquired pursuant to employee benefit plans under Rule 701 of the Securities Act have been conformed to the 2007 amendments to Rule 144 by removing references to Rule 144(e) and (h) from Rule 701.

(n54)Footnote 54. Rule 701(g)(3).

(n55)Footnote 55. Rule 701(b)(3).

(n56)Footnote 56. Current issues and Rulemaking Projects, SEC Division of Corporation Finance, November 14, 2000, at 56. Where the issuer controls the shareholder who purportedly transfers unrestricted shares in return for restricted shares, the recipient is acquiring shares from an affiliate in a non=public transaction and, therefore, is acquiring restricted shares. See, e.g. In the Matter of Energy & Enginge Technology Corporation, Securities Release No. 8311 (October 23, 2003).

(n57)Footnote 57. See § 6.03[3] supra.

(n58)Footnote 58. Emphasis added. Section 2(3) is also discussed in § 2.02 supra.

(n59)Footnote 59. Rubin v. United States, 449 U.S. 424 (1981); SEC v. Guild Films Co., Inc., 279 F.2d 485 (2d Cir. 1960), cert. denied sub nom. Santa Monica Bank v. SEC, 364 U.S. 819 (1960).

(n60)Footnote 60. As discussed in § 6.02[3] above, an affiliate may not generally rely on the Section 4(1) resale exemption for public resales because the transaction will be deemed to be part of a distribution and the affiliate will thus be an underwriter.

(n61)Footnote 61. Rule 144(a)(3); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2705H (1979) at Section II(A), Question 9.

(n62)Footnote 62. Id.

(n63)Footnote 63. Id.

(n64)Footnote 64. Id. at Section II(b), Question 12.

(n65)Footnote 65. See § 6.02 supra and § 6.04 infra for the meaning of "control securities" and the restrictions on their resale.

(n66)Footnote 66. Rite Aid Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 949 (October 20, 1997).

(n67)Footnote 67. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, n.61 supra, at Section II(a), Question 9(b), in which the Commission indicates that such a transfer is simply not a transaction at all.

(n68)Footnote 68. Equimark Corp., n.11 supra. For further analysis of other special cases of apparently non-sale transactions by affiliates, see § 6.03[3][d] infra.

(n69)Footnote 69. But see § 6.03[3][d] infra for certain exceptions.

(n70)Footnote 70. Rule 254(a)(1)(i).

(n71)Footnote 71. The "safe harbor" provided by Rule 147 is available only to the issuer. See Rule 147(a).

(n72)Footnote 72. See § 6.05[2][b] supra.

(n73)Footnote 73. See § 6.02[3] supra.

(n74)Footnote 74. See "chain of transactions" language of Rule 144(a)(3). It must be noted that such "chain of transactions" language does not cover securities acquired in a Rule 701 transaction, discussed in § 6.03[1] supra and § 6.03[3][a][i] infra, an apparent oversight that does allow the conclusion, however, that a holder who acquires those securities from the original transferee even in a private transaction holds unrestricted securities. The more logical view is that Rule 701 securities were intended to be and should be treated like Rule 504 securities.

(n75)Footnote 75. Arguably a resale overseas, as well as a public resale, results in the securities becoming restricted. But see § 6.09 infra.

(n76)Footnote 76. See, e.g., Kleinberg, Bensley, Kaplan & Wolff, SEC No-Action Letter 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1474 (April 12, 1972).

(n77)Footnote 77. See § 6.02[4][a] supra.

(n78)Footnote 78. MetPath, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1607 (August 6, 1975).

(n79)Footnote 79. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, n.56 supra at Section II(A), Question 10.

(n80)Footnote 80. John C. Shaw, SEC No-Action Letter 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1376 (October 12, 1988). See

Newbery Energy Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1840 (August 29, 1975); but see Hosposable Products, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 397 (February 24, 1977) (shares received by attorney who drafted registration statement treated like underwriter's compensation shares).

(n81)Footnote 81. See § 6.03[3][a][ii] supra, for a discussion of offerings to employees pursuant to Rule 701.

(n82)Footnote 82. See generally D. Goldwasser, § 6.02, n.78, supra, 141-143.

(n83)Footnote 83. As an affiliate, the plan may sell securities to the participants in reliance on Rule 144. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6281, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 1052 (1981), at Section IIIA infra.

(n84)Footnote 84. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., n.28 supra.

(n85)Footnote 85. See § 6.03[2] supra.

(n86)Footnote 86. See, e.g., Itel Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3808 (October 15, 1980); see also Sec. Act Rel. 33-6188, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH)P 1051 (1980), at Section VI(A).

(n87)Footnote 87. See, e.g., Peninsular & Oriental Steam Navigation Company, SEC No-Action Letter 2004 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 724 (August 30, 2004); Peoples Bancorporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2266 (April 25, 1983).

(n88)Footnote 88. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6188, n.86 supra, at Section IV (describing available exemptions).

(n89)Footnote 89. See, e.g., id., at Section III(B)(2).

(n90)Footnote 90. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5243, [Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,701 (1972). It appears that the Commission took and continues to take the same position with respect to all unrestricted securities of issuers other than the employer that are distributed by the employer pursuant to an employee stock plan. Catalyst Stock Plan I, Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1765 (February 14, 1983).

(n91)Footnote 91. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5750, [1976-1977 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,766 (1976).

(n92)Footnote 92. 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 1051 (1980) at Section VI(B).

(n93)Footnote 93. 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 1052 (1981) at Section III(B)

(n94)Footnote 94. See, e.g., Norfolk Southern Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1058 (November 20, 1992); Westinghouse Electric Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1067 (September 12, 1991) (one-time free stock bonus to all employees of a division); Intelligent Electronics, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1024 (August 20, 1991) (bonus shares distributed in relatively broad class of employees); Total Assets Protection, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 612 (March 30, 1990) (one-time free stock bonus to all non-management employees); UJB Financial Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 118 (January 30, 1990) (long-term performance stock plan); Pioneer Hi-Bred International Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1881 (February 24, 1983) (involving a typical plan). Based on the policy exception, securities were also deemed unrestricted where the plan participants were entitled to elect cash in lieu of some or all of the securities available to them, Alexander & Baldwin, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2186 (April 11, 1983); and where the "plan" was in fact a series of door prize programs rather than a traditional employee benefit plan, Coca-Cola Company, SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1612 (January 7, 1983). However, the policy exception was not applicable to the securities of issuers other than the employer even though distributed as part of an employee benefit plan, see Catalyst Stock Plan I, Ltd., n.90 supra.

(n95)Footnote 95. Or, although the issuer is not subject to the periodic reporting requirements of the Exchange Act, it submits to the Commission information as required under Section 12(f)(1)(A) of the Exchange Act. See B.A.T. Industries p.l.c., SEC No-Action Letter 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 671 (May 20, 1992).

(n96)Footnote 96. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6281, n.83 supra, at Section III(B). The number of securities distributed pursuant to the plan and available for resale during a fiscal year generally must not exceed 1% of the total of the number of shares outstanding. See, e.g., Norfolk Southern Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1058 (November 20, 1992). The exception also appears to apply to securities issued to foreign participants of employee benefit plans, Tandy Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3809 (July 24, 1981), though perhaps with additional requirements to accord with the requirements of foreign law. See [E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., SEC No-Action Letter (letter available September 25, 1982),] where the securities were deemed unrestricted based on the usual three requirements and the further condition that the shares be held by the plan participants for at least two years as required by the applicable local law. The exception also applies to securities issued to non-employee directors. Pacific Telesis Group, SEC No-Action Letter 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 766 (June 30, 1992).

(n97)Footnote 97. Hach Co. Employee Stock Ownership Plan, SEC No-Action Letter (January 21, 1983); Lamb Technicon Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2608 (July 8, 1982).

(n98)Footnote 98. Marline Oil Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2011 (January 4, 1979); see also Sulpetro Limited, SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2609 (July 8, 1982).

(n99)Footnote 99. Braniff International Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2434 (May 31, 1982); Intergraph Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 583 (May 15, 2002).

(n100)Footnote 100. Aristek Communities, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2878 (October 1, 1983) (average monthly trading of 1.7% of outstanding was enough). See also two instances where average monthly trading volume of less than 1% of the outstanding shares was enough, Rose's Stores, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1617 (January 7, 1983 (0.5%)) and American Agronomics Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2810 (January 12, 1981) (0.8%).

(n101)Footnote 101. See generally § 6.04 infra.

(n102)Footnote 102. Section 3(a)(10) is discussed in § 3.11 supra. The conditions for availability of Section 3(a)(10) and the consequent status of the securities so issued are now codified in the Commission's Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3 (CF), July 25, 1997, as revised by Revised Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3 (CF), October 20, 1999.

(n103)Footnote 103. See, e.g., Sprint Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 2003 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 681 (August 25, 2003); Carolco Pictures, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 89 (January 23, 1991); see also Ash, n.33 supra, at 37-40.

(n104)Footnote 104. See, e.g., Microlog Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1263 (November 23, 1990); see also Ash, n.33 supra, at 37-40.

(n105)Footnote 105. See, e.g., Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp., Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 93 (January 23, 1991); International Mahogany Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1223 (October 25, 1990). In Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3 as originally released, the SEC Staff expressed the view that the National Securities Markets Improvements Act of 1996 precluded reliance on a fairness hearing conducted under states securities law as the basis for a claim of exemption pursuant to Section 3(a)(10) for any security that was a "covered security" (i.e., as to which state jurisdiction was pre-exempted by federal law) prior to the hearing. Revised Staff Legal Bulletin No. 3 provides that since the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 adds Section 3(a)(10) securities to the definition of "covered securities," an issuer may now rely on a fairness hearing conducted under state securities law.

(n106)Footnote 106. See §§ 6.03[3][d][viii] supra.

(n107)Footnote 107. St. Ives Holding Co., Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1987 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2250 (July 22, 1987).

(n108)Footnote 108. Id. at 77,540.

(n109)Footnote 109. 1st United Bancorp, SEC No-Action Letter 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 928 (August 20, 1993).

(n110)Footnote 110. See, e.g., EIG Mutual Holding Company, SEC No-Action Letter 2006 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 652 (October 25, 2006); EquiServe Trust Company, N.A., SEC No-Action Letter 2000 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 121 (February 2, 2000).

(n111)Footnote 111. See, e.g., Transocean inc. SEC No-Action Letter 2007 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 596 (September 26, 2007); SanDisk Corporation SEC No-Action Letter 2006 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 621 (September 21, 2006); Ashanti Goldfields Company Limited, SEC No-Action Letter 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 609 (June 19, 2002).

(n112)Footnote 112. See §§ 6.03[3][a] and [b] supra.

(n113)Footnote 113. Section 3(a)(9) of the 1933 Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender), is discussed in § 3.10 supra.

(n114)Footnote 114. See Ash, n.33 supra, at 33-34 (1980).

(n115)Footnote 115. Mr. Coffee, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 766 (June 6, 1991).

(n116)Footnote 116. See Auto Finance Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1313 (December 3, 1991); Terminal Data Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1260 (November 19, 1990); Delta Drilling Company, SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2373 (April 29, 1982).

(n117)Footnote 117. See § 6.03[3] supra.

(n118)Footnote 118. John F. Davis, SEC No-Action Letter 1983, SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1693 (January 18, 1973).

(n119)Footnote 119. Electronic Data Systems Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 918 (May 14, 1975).

(n120)Footnote 120. See § 6.03[3][d] supra.

(n121)Footnote 121. See § 6.03[3] supra.

(n122)Footnote 122. Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1987 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1480 (January 5, 1987); Associated Communications Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2710 (August 18, 1983); Teleflex Incorporated, SEC No-Action Letter 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2149 (May 31, 1972); Mini Mart Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2450 (June 29, 1972).

(n123)Footnote 123. Associated Communications Corporation, n.118 supra; Teleflex Incorporated, n.118 supra; Mini Mart Corporation, n.118 supra.

(n124)Footnote 124. See generally § 6.02 supra.

(n125)Footnote 125. This effect is significant given the difference in actual value between restricted securities and unrestricted securities of the same class of the same issuer. See § 6.01, n.5 and accompanying text supra.

(n126)Footnote 126. See § 6.03[4][d] supra.

(n127)Footnote 127. See § 6.03[3][d][ii] supra.

(n128)Footnote 128. See § 6.02 supra.

(n129)Footnote 129. See § 6.03[3][d][vii] infra

(n130)Footnote 130. The distribution is of course a liquidating distribution when the securities being distributed are the only assets of the liquidating entity.

(n131)Footnote 131. Staff Legal Bulletin No. 4 (CF), September 16, 1997.

(n132)Footnote 132. Id. The Bulletin discusses each of these conditions in detail.

(n133)Footnote 133. For a transaction in which the staff took a no-action position on spin-offs of U.S. domestic affiliates of the distributing entity without registration, see PepsiCo, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 873 (September 15, 1997).

With respect to no-action positions on spin-offs of affiliates involving non-U.S. distributing entities, see AB Electrolux, SEC No-Action Letter 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 569 (April 28, 1997).

See also Chugai Pharmaceutical Co., Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 456, (April 30, 2002), which covers the spin-off of a U.S. subsidiary by a non-U.S. parent, a situation not covered by the Bulletin, but granting no-action relief on essentially the same grounds as set forth in the Bulletin.

(n134)Footnote 134. Midwestern Financial Corporation; First Golden Bancorporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2946 (June 25, 1973).

(n135)Footnote 135. See § 6.03[3][b] and § 6.03[4] supra .

(n136)Footnote 136. See Staff Legal Bulletin No. 4, n.127 supra.

(n137)Footnote 137. Id.

(n138)Footnote 138. Id.

(n139)Footnote 139. Goldwasser, § 6.02, n.78 supra , at 151-153.

(n140)Footnote 140. See, e.g., Virginia Real Estate Investment Trust, SEC No-Action Letter 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2858 (May 29, 1979).

(n141)Footnote 141. 20th Century Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2631 (November 7, 1977), involving a distribution to approximately 33 shareholders. Where the distributed securities had been unrestricted securities in the hands of the distributing entity, the staff reversed its earlier position and regarded them as unrestricted securities in the hands of the distributees. Kaiser Industries Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 95 (January 21, 1977).

(n142)Footnote 142. Huntington Bancshares, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3691 (September 21, 1980).

(n143)Footnote 143. See Preliminary Note to Rule 144.

(n144)Footnote 144. See § 6.02[4][c] supra.

(n145)Footnote 145. Rule 145(c), prior to the 2007 amendments to Rule 144, defined any party to any transaction of the type set forth in Rule 145(a) (other than the issuer) or an affiliate of such party who publicly offers the securities acquired in such transaction as an "underwriter" (and did not limit the designation to transactions involving shell companies). Prior to the amendments, such a "presumptive underwriter" would be required to comply with Rule 145(d) in connection with resales of the acquired securities even if the person, following the transaction, were no longer an affiliate of the combined entity and even if such person received registered securities in the business combination. The 2007 amendments, in short, eliminated the presumptive underwriter provision of Rule 145(c), except with respect to transactions involving a shell company.

(n146)Footnote 146. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6863 [1989-1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,524 (April 24,1990).

(n147)Footnote 147. At least once any "distribution compliance period" (imposed on certain types of offerings to limit the chances of unregistered distributions in the United States) had expired. Id., at n.112. See, however, § 6.02[4][d] supra .

(n148)Footnote 148. But see International Income Property, SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4064 (December 12, 1980) in which the staff permitted reliance on Rule 144 to resell securities acquired overseas.

(n149)Footnote 149. See Hanks, Direct Regulation S Offerings and the SEC's "Problematic Practices" Release, Stanford J.L. Bus & Fin. Vol. 2 No. 2, 303, at n.2 (1996).

(n150)Footnote 150. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7190, 1 Fed Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 3059 (1995).

(n151)Footnote 151. Sec. Act Rel. No. 7505 (1998).

(n152)Footnote 152. For an example of a situation where the Staff declined to agree that Section 1145(a) was available, see XO Communications, Inc. (publicly available June 1, 2004).

(n153)Footnote 153. I.C.H. Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 528 (April 14, 1997).

(n154)Footnote 154. See 17 CFR 230.1001 (Regulation CE)

(n155)Footnote 155. Id.

(n156)Footnote 156. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7759 (1999).

(n157)Footnote 157. In certain circumstances securities held by "innocent persons" who purchased such securities in an unregistered chain of transactions which constituted an unrestricted public offering made in ignorance of, with disregard for, or under a misinterpretation of the Securities Act's registration requirements have been permitted to be resold pursuant to Rule 144 in compliance with Rule 144's requirements other than the holding period and the filing of notice requirement, despite the fact that they are not technically restricted securities. The availability of Rule 144 protects such persons from being deemed to be involved themselves in an unregistered public offering. See, e.g., Fluid Power Pump Company, SEC No-Action Letter 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2667 (December 16, 1976); Hadron Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3836 (available July 31, 1981).

(n158)Footnote 158. See § 6.03[3][a] supra for a list of the possible public offering exemptions from registration under the Act.

(n159)Footnote 159. Regulation S under the Act provides that offers and sales made outside the United States are not subject to (as opposed to exempt from) the Act's registration provisions. See discussion of status of Regulation S securities in § 6.03[3][ix] supra .

(n160)Footnote 160. If the security holder's transferor was an affiliate, then the securities could nevertheless be restricted again at least in the hands of a purchaser from the security holder. See § 6.03[3][b] supra for further explanation.

(n161)Footnote 161. See § 6.03[3][d][ix] infra for discussion of securities acquired overseas.

(n162)Footnote 162. See § 6.05[2][d] supra with respect to the implications of a public offering being registered.

(n163)Footnote 163. But see §§ 6.03[3][d] supra.

(n164)Footnote 164. See n.17 and accompanying text supra.

(n165)Footnote 165. See n.16 and accompanying text supra.

(n166)Footnote 166. See discussion in § 6.05[4] infra.

(n167)Footnote 167. In fact such securities remain by definition restricted securities in the hands of the seller but may be sold freely under Rule 144's safe harbor within Section 4(1). See Republic Resources Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 188 (February 15, 1988) and analysis in §§ 6.02[1] supra and 6.05[8] infra .

73 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.04

§ 6.04 Definition of Control Securities

The second of the two major categories of resales limited by the general unavailability of the Section 4(1) resale exemption (the first being restricted securities) includes, if an underwriter is involved, any resale of any outstanding securities by a person who at the time of the resale is in a control relationship with the issuer of the securities. n1 These securities, commonly referred to over the years as "control securities," are restricted as to their public resale only for as long as they are held by a person who is in a control relationship with, or in the terminology of Rule 144, is an affiliate of the issuer. n2

The Securities Act contains no definition of the term "control securities," nor indeed any reference whatever to this category of securities. Unlike the case of restricted securities, n3 the limitations on the resale of control securities derive from nothing other than the affiliate status of the holder. Simply put, control securities are securities that are owned by an affiliate of the issuer. To determine then whether securities that are proposed to be sold are control securities, it is necessary only to ascertain the affiliate or non-affiliate status of the holder.

[1] Rule 144 Definition of an Affiliate

Paragraph (a)(1) of Rule 144 defines the term "affiliate" of an issuer to mean "a person that directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls, or is controlled by, or is under common control with, such issuer." Three categories of persons n4 are, under this definition, affiliates of the issuer:

- persons who control the issuer,
- persons who are controlled by the issuer, and
- persons who are under common control with the issuer.

It is, therefore, the concept of control that is determinative of affiliate status.

[2] Controlling Persons of the Issuer

While the concept of control runs throughout the federal securities laws, n5 neither the Securities Act nor the Exchange Act contains a statutory definition of control. Rule 405, however, relating to registration under the Securities Act specifies that:

[t]he term "control" (including the terms "controlling," "controlled by" and "under common control with") means the possession, direct or indirect, of the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a person, whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract, or otherwise (emphasis added).

As that definition makes clear, each of those persons who either actually controls or has the power to control the policies of the issuer is a controlling person and therefore an affiliate of the issuer. When Rule 144 was adopted, the Commission considered, n6 but did not adopt, more objective standards for determining control status. Control status remains therefore, a question of fact and indeed a question of fact that must be resolved in most cases by either counsel for the proposed seller or counsel for the issuer. n7

Because there is no mathematical or other objective test, the determination of control status is often difficult or uncertain. As a practical matter, the staff of the Commission appears rather consistently to presume that persons who fall within certain categories are affiliates. Those categories include, in addition to persons able to cause the issuer to file a registration statement, n8 the following persons:

- executive officers and directors of the issuer, n9 including those who perform the functions of such persons; n10
- persons who own more than 10 percent of the voting securities of the issuer; n11
- close family relatives of any of the above persons; n12 and
- creditors of the issuer who have control by reason of negative covenants in the relevant underlying loan agreements. n13

The presumption of affiliate status is rebuttable by any of those persons, but the burden of proving that the person does not, even in conjunction with others, control or possess the power to control the issuer is substantial. n14 The staff, on the other hand, has not suggested categories of persons who will be presumed not to be affiliates.

The term controlling person not only refers to an individual person, but also includes each of the members of a controlling group. n15 Again, the concept of a control group has never been defined. Paragraph (a)(2) of Rule 144, however, does define the term "person" when used with reference to a person whose securities are to be sold to include, in addition to the actual person, all of the following persons:

- relatives and spouses sharing the same home (a relative or spouse sharing the same home with an affiliate is always an affiliate and the affiliate status of a relative of a control person is rebuttable only when that relative does not share a residence with the control person); n16
- trusts or estates in which the person and those in paragraph (1) above together have a 10 percent or more beneficial interest or of which one of those persons is a fiduciary; n17 and
- any corporation or other organization in which the person and any relative or spouse sharing the same home own at least 10 percent of an equity interest. n18

Though the staff does not limit the pool of possible affiliates to the persons specified in Rule 144(a)(2), n19 the staff assumes that at least those persons are affiliates. n20 In addition, in certain cases, each different from the next and therefore of little general precedential value, the staff has also assumed that certain persons outside of the Rule 144(a)(2) categories are affiliates of the issuer. n21 Accordingly, the issue of whether a person is, alone or as a member of a controlling group, a controlling person and therefore an affiliate of the issuer must be resolved on a case-by-case basis by appropriate counsel with limited guidance.

[3] Other Types of Affiliates

As the Rule 144(a)(1) definition makes clear, a controlling person of the issuer is only one of the possible types of affiliates, though the most common type. In addition, a person may be an affiliate because that person is controlled by the issuer or is under common control with the issuer or even for reasons outside of the rule's definition. n22

[a] Persons Controlled by the Issuer. The most obvious example of a person who is an affiliate because it is controlled by the issuer is a subsidiary of a corporate issuer. n23 Other common examples of these types of affiliates of an issuer include an employee benefit plan n24 and corporations of which the issuer is a creditor empowered to exercise control through the lending instruments. n25 Again, these represent only the more common examples of such affiliates.

[b] Persons under Common Control with the Issuer. The definition of affiliate contained in Rule 144(a)(1), clearly includes persons under common control with the issuer. The history of the common control concept makes sense because the idea, presumably, was to prevent a controlling person from accomplishing a prohibited action through an affiliated entity such as a sister corporation. In the context of defining control securities, however, it may be too broad. If one of the controlling persons of the issuer, such as a director, happens to also be a director of a second corporation, the two corporations could be viewed as affiliates of each other even if neither corporation owns any significant amount of the securities of the other or the two corporations are in no other respect related. It is doubtful that the staff would assume the two corporations to be affiliates of each other without more for purposes of imposing the sale restrictions on "control securities," n26 but the possibility of an expansive approach should be kept in mind by counsel faced with opining as to these circumstances.

The application of the "under common control" test for rendering a person an affiliate of the issuer is particularly troublesome in the case of trusts and estates that are related to an issuer through an affiliate of that issuer. Where the trust or estate owns an amount of voting securities of the issuer sufficient to constitute control, it is obviously an affiliate of the issuer because it is a controlling person in its own right. n27 Where, however, the only relationship between the trust or estate and the issuer is that the trustee or executor is an affiliate of the issuer, the affiliate status of the trust or estate is less certain. Arguably, the relationship is simply too remote and the trust or estate would be found to have inadequate control over the issuer through its fiduciary.

The staff's view, however, at least as yet is unclear. The status of the fiduciary will not be automatically attributed to the trust or estate or to the respective beneficiaries. n28 In fact, the staff will not view a trust or estate as an affiliate of the issuer where the only basis is that a person who is an affiliate of the issuer is the trustee or executor or a beneficiary of that trust or estate. n29 Apparently, though, it will view the trust or estate as an affiliate of the issuer if a person who is an affiliate of the issuer is both the fiduciary and a beneficiary of the trust or estate. n30 Certainly, however, in that case the issue of affiliate status for the trust or estate will be affected by the extent of that affiliate's interest in that estate or trust and perhaps by the amount of securities of the issuer held by the estate or trust. If the trust or estate owns no securities that might be rendered "control securities" by virtue of its affiliate status, the question of its affiliate status is irrelevant in the context of this chapter.

[c] Persons Otherwise Deemed Affiliates. In light of the history of the controlling person concept n31 and the express definition of the term "affiliate" contained in Rule 144(a)(1) for the purpose of defining "control securities" and of subjecting all affiliates to Rule 144, it would be logical to conclude that any holder of securities who is not a controlling person of, a person controlled by, or a person under common control with the issuer of those securities is not an affiliate of the issuer. However, as mentioned above, a security holder who receives previously unrestricted securities from an affiliate of the issuer in a private nonsale transaction does not acquire restricted securities despite the literal wording of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition. n32 Instead, the security holder is deemed to stand in the shoes of the transferor, not in a worse, but also not in a better position. The security holder holds, therefore, unrestricted rather than restricted securities. But the security holder, like the affiliate transferor, is viewed as a holder of "control securities."

[4] Duration of Control Securities Status

Securities become "control securities" immediately upon their acquisition by an affiliate of the issuer of those securities or upon their holder becoming an affiliate of the issuer even if those securities were previously free trading. Once in that category with the consequent limitations on their resale, "control securities" remain such until they are sold to a non-affiliate of the issuer or until their affiliate holder loses his affiliate status. n33 As mentioned above, however, if a non-affiliate acquires "control securities" in a private nonsale transaction, those securities continue to be viewed as "control securities" (as opposed to restricted securities) in the hands of the recipient until the transferor is no longer an affiliate or until they are disposed of by the non-affiliate recipient. If the nonsale transaction is a bequest or spin-off or liquidating distribution and the transferor by reason of the transferring event is no longer an affiliate of the issuer, the securities lose their "control securities" status just as if they had been sold. In the case of a private gift of securities by an affiliate, however, they may continue to have the limitations as to resale that attach to "control securities," while the donor remains an affiliate. Whether or not the limitations continue depends on the relationship of the donee to the donor. If the donee is deemed to be a "separate person" from the donor pursuant to Rule 144(a)(2), then the donee may sell the securities freely after the applicable holding period. Otherwise, the donee may resell the securities only as if it were an affiliate until such time as the transferor is no longer an affiliate of the issuer. n34

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 6.02[1] supra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 6.04[4] supra.

(n3)Footnote 3. In the case of restricted securities, the limitations on their resale derive from the private manner of the acquisition from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer and continue until the restricted taint is removed. See §§ 6.03[3] and [4] supra.

(n4)Footnote 4. Section 2(2) of the 1933 Act, and reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender), defines the term "person" as:

an individual, a corporation, a partnership, an association, a joint stock company, a trust, any unincorporated organization, or a government or political subdivision thereof.

See Rule 144(a)(2) of the 1933 Act reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender).

(n5)Footnote 5. See A. Sommer, Who's "In Control?", 21 Bus. Law. 559, 559-62 (1966); see, e.g., SEC v. Tuchinsky [1992 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96, 917 at 93,805 (S.D. Fla. 1992).

(n6)Footnote 6. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5223, [1971-1972 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,487 (1972); D. Goldwasser, A Guide to Rule 144, at 91-92 (2d ed. 1978).

(n7)Footnote 7. The staff has repeatedly stated that it no longer makes determinations of affiliate status. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6253, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 134A (1980). Its position is that affiliate status is a factual question best resolved by the parties involved in the transaction and their counsel. See, e.g., Hoedeman and Christy, P.A., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1165 (October 10, 1991); Gulf Energy Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4156 (October 30, 1981).

(n8)Footnote 8. C. Israels, SEC Problems of Controlling Stockholders and in Underwritings 21 (1962), quoting Commissioner Manuel F. Cohen.

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Servo Systems, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1172 (April 27, 1977); see generally Sommer, n.6 supra, at 573. Some guidance regarding at least directors and officers who have been nominees for the position of director is provided by the issuer's proxy statements since the control status of such persons must be indicated. Item 6(b), Exchange Act of 1934 Schedule 14A.

(n10)Footnote 10. Section 16 of the Exchange Act of 1934, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Section F (Matthew Bender), provides a practical guideline for determining which persons other than directors are control persons. If a person under the regulations and case law interpreting that section is required to make regular filings of his stock ownership under Exchange Act of 1934 Section 16(a), then that person would probably also be a control person for purposes of determining the availability of Securities Act Section 4(1) and Rule 144.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Del Electronics Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3473 (July 21, 1980) (holder of 13.43% of outstanding shares presumed affiliate).

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Jesse M. Brill, Esq., SEC No-Action Letter 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3489 (September 24, 1979), in which the staff viewed all family members of an affiliate living in the same household as affiliates; Radiation Technology, Inc., SEC No-Action Letters 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1092 (December 26, 1973).

(n13)Footnote 13. Sommer, n.5 supra, at 573; D. Goldwasser, n.6 supra, at 92; but see Mangel Stores Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2429 (December 5, 1975).

(n14)Footnote 14. D. Goldwasser, n.6 supra, at 94-95.

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Carnation Co., SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2742 (February 3, 1980); Comtech Laboratories, Inc., [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,231 (1973).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Carolina Securities Corp., [1979-1980 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,373, SEC No-Action Letter 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3766 (November 23, 1979).

(n17)Footnote 17. But see text accompanying ns.28-31 infra.

(n18)Footnote 18. Rule 144(a)(2); it should be noted that while this paragraph is primarily for the purpose of the rule's aggregation requirements, see § 6.05[5][c][i] infra, it is also relevant to the definition of control.

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g., the interpretive letters listed in D. Goldwasser, n.6 supra, at 97-99.

(n20)Footnote 20. Id. at 100.

(n21)Footnote 21. Id. at 97-99.

(n22)Footnote 22. See § 6.04[3][c] infra for discussion of persons otherwise deemed affiliates.

(n23)Footnote 23. A subsidiary of the issuer, however, may not rely on Rule 144 for the sale of the securities of the issuer that it owns. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, [Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 2705H (1979), at Section II(H), Question 83.

(n24)Footnote 24. Winkelman Stores, Inc., [Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,771 (1972); see generally § 6.03[3][d][ii] supra.

(n25)Footnote 25. D. Goldwasser, n.6 supra, at 101.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Kaiser Industries Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 95 (January 21, 1977) for an example of a fact situation involving related corporations that caused the Division of Corporation Finance to conclude that one was the affiliate of the other through their common control.

(n27)Footnote 27. Rule 144(a)(2)(ii); Butala, P§ 6.01 n. 6 supra at 9-5.

(n28)Footnote 28. Id.

(n29)Footnote 29. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, n.24 supra, at Section II(A), Question 9(c); Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., SEC No-Action Letter 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1998 (September 29, 1975).

(n30)Footnote 30. Jesse M. Brill, Esq., n.12 supra.

(n31)Footnote 31. See generally Sommer, n.5 supra.

(n32)Footnote 32. See § 6.03[3][b] supra.

(n33)Footnote 33. Sec. Act Rel. No.33-6099, n.24 supra, at Section II(B), Question 11: see also Rule 144(a)(1) and (b) and D. Goldwasser, n.6 supra, at 104-05.

(n34)Footnote 34. Rule 144(a)(3); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, n.23 supra, at Section 11(A), Question 9. The donee holder of securities privately acquired from an affiliate may resell those securities freely three (now one) years after the securities were acquired from the affiliate as long as the donee is not itself an affiliate. See Rule 144 and discussion in § 6.05[8] infra. See P. Michael Coleman and The Coleman Charitable Foundation, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1994 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 860 (December 29, 1994); R.E. Turner and The Turner Foundation, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 489 (March 19, 1993); The Gap, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 928 (September 16, 1992); The Moores Foundation, SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 991 (August 14, 1991).

74 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.05

§ 6.05 Public Resales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities under Rule 144

The Commission, after a lengthy period of study and consideration of several variations of proposed rules, n1 promulgated Rule 144 in 1972. n2 The Commission's purpose was to clarify for the benefit of investors and members of the securities industry and their counsel when and under what circumstances a holder of restricted securities or control securities may lawfully resell those securities in reliance upon the resale exemption contained in Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n3 As a result of the adoption of Rule 144, a more objective and more certain exemption from the Securities Act's registration requirements became and remains available to allow the public resale of both restricted securities and control securities whenever all of the specific requirements pertaining to the potential seller can be satisfied. As a practical matter, the rule frequently provides the only reasonably available exemption for the public resale of these two categories of securities, restricted and control securities, that are not otherwise publicly tradeable under the Securities Act.

[1] Nature of Rule 144

During the several years prior to the adoption of Rule 144, considerable confusion had developed regarding the resale of the two common categories of restricted securities: those securities that had been privately placed by the issuer, then known as "letter securities," and those securities that had been acquired by a person in a control relationship with the issuer, known as "control securities." The rule was expressly made applicable to resales of these two types of securities only, n4 thereby formally setting them apart from all other outstanding securities.

In addition, Rule 144 codified the distinction between these two categories of securities. First, it formally defined restricted securities to include only those outstanding securities that had been privately offered and sold and had never been the subject of a public distribution. n5 Second, it confirmed that the term "control securities" includes only that category of outstanding securities, whether restricted or unrestricted under the Rule 144(a)(3) definition, that are owned by an affiliate of the issuer. Rule 144 then went on to formally define that critical person, the "affiliate." n6 In effect, much of the rule's accomplishments amounted to substantial clarification of, but no real change in, the then existing law regarding the two categories of outstanding securities whose resale had been restricted under the Securities Act. In its approach to the actual resale of both restricted securities and control securities, however, the rule represented a radical departure from the subjective standards preceding its adoption.

[a] Approach of Rule 144. The Section 4(1) resale exemption n7 is available for resales by investors, n8 whether or not a broker is involved, n9 only if neither the investor nor any participating broker is an underwriter as that term is defined in Section 2(11) of the Securities Act. n10 At the time of Rule 144's adoption, a non-affiliate investor wishing to publicly resell restricted securities could rely upon the resale exemption only if he or she could establish that:

- the original purchase was not "with a view to" a distribution of those securities; and
- he or she was not selling for the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer in connection with a distribution or otherwise participating in that distribution. n11

Despite the other aspects of the Section 2(11) definition, the focus had been on the factual issue of intent. n12 As a result, the proposed seller of restricted securities could rarely be certain of the availability of the resale exemption until he or she had owned those securities for a substantial, but indefinite, period of time. n13 If the proposed seller was an affiliate of the issuer, the participating broker would be a statutory underwriter because it would be selling for a control person of the issuer in connection with a distribution. n14 Accordingly, the resale exemption could be relied upon by an affiliate of the issuer only if no distribution were involved, that is, only for private resales of securities. n15

Rule 144 introduced an entirely new objective set of standards for the public resale of both restricted and control securities. Conceptually, its approach is definitional. Focusing perhaps more on the disclosure purposes of the securities laws and less on the statutory language of Section 2(11), the Commission defined the term "distribution" to exclude those resales of restricted securities and those resales of any securities by affiliates that are completed in compliance with the applicable requirements of the rule. n16 Under the current incarnation of Rule 144, for all resales of restricted securities, no distribution is involved: n17

If reselling equity securities:

Resales by affiliates of the issuer:

- if selling securities of a reporting company, a minimum of a six months has elapsed between the acquisition of the securities from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer; n18
- if selling securities of a non-reporting company, a minimum of one year has elapsed between the acquisition of the securities from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer; n19
- adequate current public information is available about the issuer; n20
- the amount of securities to be sold during any three month period is less than basically the greater of one percent of the total number of shares outstanding or the average weekly trading volume in those securities over a four week period; n21
- the sales effected are in brokers' transactions, with a market maker or in riskless principal transactions; n22
- a notice of the proposed sale is timely filed; n23 and
- the person filing the notice has a bona fide intention to sell the securities referred to in the notice within a reasonable period of time. n24

Resales by non-affiliates of the issuer:

- if selling securities of a reporting company, a minimum of a six months has elapsed between the acquisition of the securities from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer; n25

- if selling securities of a non-reporting company, a minimum of one year has elapsed between the acquisition of the securities from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer, n26 and
- adequate current public information is available about the issuer between the dates six months and one year after the acquisition of the securities from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer. n27

If reselling debt securities:

Resales by affiliates of the issuer:

- all of the above requirements for resales by affiliates of equity securities apply except that there are no manner of sale requirements regarding resales of debt securities by affiliates; n28 and
- in addition to the above volume limitations pertaining to resales of equity securities by affiliates, there is an additional volume limitation imposed on resales of debt securities such that 10 percent of the principal amount of the tranche attributable to the securities sold, if the amount sold during any three month period is less than the greater of one percent of the total shares outstanding or the average weekly trading volume in those securities over a four week period. n29

Resales by non-affiliates of the issuer:

- all of the same requirements above for resales by non-affiliates of equity securities apply.

As to resales of unrestricted securities by affiliates, or control securities, no distribution is involved provided all of the same conditions, other than the holding period requirements set forth above, n30 are satisfied. Resales that comply with all of the applicable Rule 144 requirements are simply deemed not to involve a distribution. In the absence of a distribution, neither the selling investor nor any broker selling for an affiliate (or a market maker who purchases from an affiliate or purchases restricted securities from a non-affiliate or securities sold in riskless principal transactions) or a non-affiliate selling restricted securities can be an underwriter under the Securities Act. n31 Where no underwriter is involved, the transaction may be completed in reliance upon the resale exemption. In effect, through its definitional approach, the rule provides a safe harbor for the resale of both restricted securities and control securities under Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n32

[b] Construction of Rule 144. The adoption of Rule 144 by the Commission was initially on an experimental basis. n33 While the Commission selected the above-described approach to the statutory underwriter concept in an effort to achieve the certainty of more objective standards, n34 it also feared that the rule might provide a means for massive distributions of unregistered securities into the hands of unprotected members of the investing public. n35 In light of that fear and consistent with its policy of encouraging the registration of securities by construing all exemptions from registration narrowly, the Commission warned that the rule was to be strictly construed. n36

Although the staff of the Commission now appears to view Rule 144 with a more flexible attitude, especially in light of the most recent 2007 amendments to Rule 144, n37 it still takes the position that persons seeking to rely upon the rule's exemption from the Securities Act's registration requirements must sustain the burden of proving both that:

- the rule is available for the proposed resale; and
- every one of the applicable requirements has been or will be timely and fully satisfied. n38

In other words, substantial compliance with the conditions of the rule will normally not suffice. n39 Initially, the Commission took the position that even technical compliance with all the rule's requirements would not perfect the exemption where the proposed resale was in fact apart of an unregistered distribution. n40 Subsequently, however, the staff appeared to agree that where all of the rule's specific requirements are fully complied with, the proposed resale does indeed fall within the rule's safe harbor. n41

Rule 144 is intended to be self-operating. n42 In other words, the proposed seller of restricted securities or of control securities and his counsel must determine for themselves whether the rule is available for the proposed transaction, and comply with each of the rule's applicable conditions. n43 The staff will generally not issue no-action letters or otherwise furnish advisory opinions regarding proposed sales in reliance upon Rule 144. n44 As indicated in the release promulgating the rule, however, the staff will issue interpretive letters to assist persons in complying with all of the provisions of Rule 144. n45 Since its adoption, several thousand interpretive letters relating to Rule 144 have been issued and are publicly available. n46 Indeed, those letters, particularly in the aggregate, constitute the major source of guidance as to the staff's current interpretation of those aspects of the rule on which it will comment. n47

[c] Nonexclusivity of Rule 144. While Rule 144 provides an exemption for the public resale both of restricted securities and of control securities, it is not the exclusive lawful method of effecting resales of those two types of outstanding securities without registration under the Securities Act. n48 Both restricted securities and control securities may always be lawfully sold in private transactions, i.e., those not involving any public offering, in reliance upon the Section 4(1) resale exemption. n49 In addition, both restricted securities and control securities may be sold publicly outside Rule 144 under some conditions. Both restricted securities and control securities may be resold in reliance upon one of the narrow Section 3 transaction exemptions from registration, n50 and while until 1979 it was the Commission's position that the Section 4(1) exemption outside Rule 144 was never available for the public resale of control securities, n51 this is no longer the case. n52

As to restricted securities held by non-affiliates, however, Rule 144 provides a non-exclusive safe harbor for their public resale pursuant to the resale exemption. While the Commission chose not to make Rule 144 exclusive as to restricted securities, it nevertheless emphasized in the promulgating release that persons choosing to rely upon Section 4(1) outside the rule for the sale of restricted securities will have a substantial burden of proof in establishing the availability of that exemption from registration and, further, that brokers who participate in those sales will do so at their own risk. n53 To further discourage resales of restricted securities by non-affiliates outside of Rule 144, the Commission put all persons on notice that it would no longer consider a change in circumstances as evidence of a person's being other than an underwriter and therefore able to rely upon Section 4(1). n54 Finally, it indicated that no particular holding period in itself would be sufficient to establish the availability of the resale exemption outside of the rule. n55

As a result of those pronouncements by the Commission in 1972, reliance upon Section 4(1) outside Rule 144, because of its substantial uncertainty, is normally avoided, particularly by reputable brokers concerned about the risk of being suspended from trading because of a sale in violation of the Securities Act. n56 In other words, the Commission's attempts to prohibit the creation of public information was available by discouraging the sale of restricted securities outside the rule were largely successful. Presently, however, perhaps in light of the success of Rule 144 and the general lack of abuse surrounding reliance upon the Section 4(1) exemption for the resale of restricted securities, the Commission appears less concerned with prohibiting public resale of these securities outside of the rule. n57

[d] Amendments to Rule 144. The Commission has amended Rule 144 on numerous occasions since its adoption. n58 While many of the changes effected by those amendments simply clarified existing interpretations of the rule n59 or conformed the rule's provisions to related changes in other rules under the Securities Act, n60 some of the changes broadened the rule's safe harbor to provide a Section 4(1) exemption for an ever greater variety of sales transactions by affiliates and transactions involving restricted securities. Gradually, the rule's conditions became easier to satisfy. First, the requirement that the securities be sold in brokers' transactions was eased by permitting certain inquiries to be made without jeopardizing the requirement that there be no solicitations of buy orders. n61 Then the rule's volume limitations were modified to allow a larger amount of securities to be sold in a shorter period of time. n62 In addition, the manner of sale requirement was subsequently eased by an amendment permitting the securities to be sold in transactions directly with a market maker as well as in brokers' transactions. n63 In 1983 the Commission added paragraph (k) to the rule, which permitted the resale of restricted securities by non-affiliates without compliance with any of the rule's requirements provided that at least two years (three years at the time of adoption of Rule 144(k)) had elapsed since the securities were acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer. n64 In 1990, the Commission revised Rule 144 to permit the tacking of holding periods so that the holding period would commence at the time securities were initially acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer and would continue throughout subsequent transfers, instead of commencing anew for each holder at the time that holder acquired the securities. n65 In 1997, the Commission amended the rule to permit limited volume resales to commence after a holding period of one year (previously two years) and to permit unlimited resales in reliance on Rule 144(k) after two years (previously three years). n66

On November 15, 2007, the Commission adopted the first amendments to Rule 144 since 1997. n67 These amendments, effective February 15, 2008, are applicable to securities acquired before or after the aforementioned effective date. n68 The Commission amended Rule 144 to "make it easier to understand and apply" n69 and stated that it believed that the new amendments will increase the liquidity of privately issued securities, enabling companies to raise private capital more efficiently. n70

The 2007 amendments adopted major changes to Rule 144, n71 codified several of the Commission's interpretations and substantially reduced the Rule 144 compliance obligations for resales by non-affiliates of an issuer. n72 Prior to the adoption of the 2007 amendments to Rule 144, both affiliates and non-affiliates were subject to all of the requirements of Rule 144, with the exception that pursuant to Rule 144(k) a non-affiliate who had not been an affiliate during the three months prior to the sales could sell their restricted securities (and remove the restricted legends if the issuer permitted) after a two year holding period without complying with any of the other requirements of Rule 144. Now, given the amendments adopted to paragraph (d), paragraph (k) is moot and no longer part of Rule 144.

The 2007 amendments shortened the paragraph (d) holding period requirements, relaxed the requirements for sales of debt securities, and eliminated the necessity for non-affiliates to comply with any paragraph but the paragraph (d) holding periods, in that the only paragraph of Rule 144 that now applies to a non-affiliate seller is paragraph (d). When selling securities of a reporting issuer, a non-affiliate can sell securities after six months has elapsed (instead of the previous one year) and freely after one year has elapsed, while when selling securities of a non-reporting issuer a non-affiliate may sell securities after one year has elapsed. An affiliate seller is still subject to all of the requirements of Rule 144, but can take advantage of the shortened holding periods as well as the other modifications to Rule 144 provided by the 2007 amendments, all of which are discussed in this chapter, where applicable.

The following diagram, included in the 2007 Final Rule Release No. 8869 (the "Final Rule Release"), details the revisions to Rule 144 adopted by the 2007 amendments for restricted securities:

	Affiliate or Person Selling on Behalf of an Affiliate	Non-Affiliate (and Has Not Been an Affiliate During the Prior Three Months)
Restricted Securities of Reporting Issuers	During six-month holding period - no resales under Rule 144 permitted.	During six-month holding period - no resales under Rule 144 permitted.
	After six-month holding period but before one year -- unlimited public resales under Rule 144 except that the current public information requirement still applies.
	After six-month holding period but before one year -- unlimited public resales under Rule 144 except that the current public information requirement still applies.

144 requirements including:

- current public information, After one-year holding period - unlimited public resales under Rule 144; need not comply with any other Rule 144 requirements.

- volume limitations,

- manner of sale requirements for equity securities, and

- filing of Form 144.

Restricted Securities of Non-Reporting Issuers	During one-year holding period - no resales under Rule 144 permitted.	During one-year holding period - no resales under Rule 144 permitted.

After one-year holding period - may resell in accordance with all Rule 144 requirements, including:	After one-year holding period - unlimited public resales under Rule 144; need not comply with any other Rule 144 requirements.

- current public information,

- volume limitations,

- manner of sale requirements for equity securities, and

- filing of Form 144.

[2] Availability of Rule 144

As explained above, n73 Rule 144 provides a safe harbor for the resale of certain categories of outstanding securities under the resale exemption contained in Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n74 Provided that the rule is available for the transaction proposed by the investor, any investor, n75 including an affiliate of the issuer of the securities involved, may rely upon Rule 144 exemption from the Securities Act's registration provisions by complying with all of the rule's applicable conditions. The two transactions that expressly fall within the scope of the rule are resales of restricted securities and resales of control securities. It should be borne in mind that some securities held by affiliates are both restricted and control securities. In addition, the rule may frequently be relied upon by a non-affiliate of the issuer for the resale of certain unrestricted securities that are not otherwise freely tradeable under Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n76

[a] Resale of Restricted Securities. Paragraph (b) of Rule 144 provides that the rule is available for the resale of restricted securities by both affiliates and non-affiliates of the issuer of those securities. n77 The scope of the rule for resales of restricted securities, therefore, is dependent upon the scope of the term "restricted securities." n78

[b] Sales of Control Securities. Paragraph (b) of Rule 144 also provides that the rule may be relied upon for the sale of "any other securities" by an affiliate of the issuer of those securities. n79 In other words, all sales of control securities appear to come within the scope of Rule 144. n80 As in the case of transactions in restricted securities, the scope of the rule for resales of control securities turns on the scope of the phrase "affiliate of the issuer." As explained above, any investor who, directly or indirectly, controls, or is controlled by, or is under common control with, the issuer of the securities involved falls within the Rule 144(a)(1) definition of an affiliate and may therefore rely upon the rule for the sale of any securities of the issuer owned by the investor. n81

[c] Limitations on Availability for Sales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities.

On its face, Rule 144 appears available for all resales of restricted securities and all resales of control securities, provided only that the several applicable requirements can be satisfied. n82 In interpreting the scope of the rule, however, the Commission has added several substantial limitations on its apparent broad availability. Certain of those limitations on the rule's use have been softened or even abandoned in more recent interpretations. Nevertheless, even as presently interpreted, the rule may not be used for certain resales of restricted securities or control securities.

Additionally, the use of equity swaps and other derivative instruments have given rise to a number of issues with respect to the availability of Rule 144. In 1995, the Commission stated that it was examining Rule 144 to address new trading strategies by which holders of restricted and control securities sold interests in their shares while retaining legal ownership of the "underlying" securities. The Commission asked whether it was appropriate to treat securities as held in the private markets when the economic risk of the investment was shifted to the public markets, and whether "tolling" of the holding period or other revisions should be introduced to reflect risk shifting transactions. n83 Some commenters on this concept expressed concern at the potential re-introduction of the concept of "fungibility" if tolling of the restricted period were to be introduced for risk--shifting transactions. n84

The Commission gave further consideration to whether hedging arrangements are inconsistent with the principles underlying registration under the Securities Act and the Rule 144 safe harbor. In 1997, it stated that:

The Commission recognizes that arguments can be made in favor of treating "short against the box" transactions and equity swaps as sales of the underlying restricted securities since these transactions typically hedge fully a holder of restricted securities against any economic risk. Without risk, there is arguably no investment intent, suggesting the holder is more of an underwriter than an investor. At the same time, it can be argued that hedging transactions do not raise Section 5 issues because the restricted securities are not being sold into the open marketplace. Instead, only freely tradeable securities are actually redistributed to the public. Proponents of this view argue that the two types of securities are not fungible or interchangeable.

The economic substance of the transactions, however, gives rise to concern. n85

The Commission suggested several alternative methods of dealing with this concern, including again, making Rule 144 unavailable for risk-shifting transactions.

Recently, the Commission took up the discussion again in the Proposing Release to the 2007 amendments to Rule 144 (the "2007 Proposing Release"), recognizing the effect the proposed alteration of 144(d) from a one year holding period to a six month holding period could potentially have on hedging activities. n86 The Commission proposed to reintroduce the Rule 144 "tolling" provision while a security holder engaged in certain hedging activities, with the caveat that the suspension of the holding period caused by the tolling provision could not extend the holding period for more than one year. n87 The "tolling" provision as proposed would also have ramifications on the tacking of holding periods, as the individual wishing to sell securities would have to first determine if the securities had been hedged n88 when calculating the holding period in advance of a sale. Subsequent to the 2007 Proposing Release, the Commission received several comments objecting to the reintroduction of the "tolling" provision. For example, one commentator noted that "hedging transactions involve costs and risks for the security holder and do not entirely transfer the risk of the economic investment of the securities," n89 while another commentator suggested that the tolling provision was moot as there is not a lot of hedging activity with restricted securities because the amount of restricted securities is limited. n90 The Commission decided not to adopt the "tolling" provision after receiving and considering the comments received and stated in the Final Rule Release that:

We note, in particular, the comments asserting that, in the current environment, the tolling provision would unduly complicate Rule 144 and could require security holders or brokers to incur significant costs to monitor hedging positions for purposes of determining whether they have met the holding period requirement. This would frustrate our primary objectives to streamline Rule 144 and reduce the costs of capital for issuers. We will revisit the issue if we observe abuse relating to the hedging activities of holders of restricted securities. n91

Therefore, as the Commission has indicated the "tolling" provision will be reassessed if abuses occur in conjunction with hedging activities.

[i] Sales of Securities Subject to Registration Rights. Initially, the staff of the Commission, presumably because of its strong bias in favor of registration over reliance upon any exemption from registration, n92 took the position that Rule 144 could not be used for the sale of securities that were or would be registered through the exercise of registration rights or otherwise. Now, however, securities may be sold under Rule 144 if the seller has contractual or other registration rights, n93 or even if the securities proposed to be sold are covered by an effective registration statement expressly providing that the securities being offered may be sold either in compliance with the registration requirements or pursuant to the rule. n94 Although disclosure in the registration statement of an alternative method of resale is encouraged, the absence of such disclosure would not preclude the availability of Rule 144, or another available exemption for such resales. n95 Finally, the holder of restricted securities may sell some of them pursuant to Rule 144 even if it sells others of them pursuant to an effective registration statement or pursuant to another of the available exemptions from the Securities Act's registration requirements. n96

The 2007 amendments may impact registration rights with respect to private offerings of non-convertible debt securities. The change in the holding period to six months for reporting companies and one year for non-reporting companies as well as the elimination of the majority of the Rule 144 requirements for non-affiliates may have eliminated, in some cases, the need for registration rights in these types of offerings (which typically gave non-reporting registrants up to a year to register resales of the privately placed securities) because the securities will already be freely tradable no later than one year from issuance.

[ii] Sales of Restricted Securities to be Followed by Purchases of Unrestricted Securities. Shortly after the rule's promulgation, the staff of the Commission faced the issue of whether Rule 144 could be used to implement a plan for changing the character of portfolio securities. That plan would involve the sale of the portfolio's restricted securities pursuant to Rule 144 and the contemporaneous repurchase of the same number of unrestricted securities of the same class of the same issuer. While such a use of the rule is permissible, in 1972, the staff suggested that the investor should avoid possible violations of the antimanipulation rules by waiting a period of at least thirty days after selling securities under Rule 144 before commencing repurchases in the open market and waiting an additional period of at least thirty days from the last repurchase before effecting additional sales pursuant to Rule 144. n97 That position was reversed in 1994. n98

[iii] Short Sales Against the Box. A "short sale against the box" is a sale in which the seller owns an amount of securities equivalent to the amount he sells short, but nevertheless asks the broker to borrow the necessary securities to deliver to the broker for the purchaser. n99 The seller's securities are normally held by the broker and used subsequently to replace the borrowed securities. Once again, the staff's early responses to requests that such sales be permitted under Rule 144 were generally negative. n100 Presently, however, the Commission permits the rule to be relied upon by affiliates or holders of restricted securities for short sales against the box, provided that all of the applicable requirements of the rule are satisfied at the time of the short sale rather than at the time the short position is covered. n101 Indeed, the seller may actually cover a Rule 144 short sale against the box with either the securities held in the box or with securities acquired in the open market. n102 If a holder of restricted securities actually covers his short position with unrestricted securities acquired later in the open market, however, the restricted securities that were placed in the box would continue to be restricted securities despite the earlier compliance with all of the rule's requirements for their public sale. n103

In contrast, however, restricted or control securities eligible for sale under Rule 144 and lent to a counterparty in a forward contract and sold in a manner complying with Rule 144 will not be restricted securities when returned to the lender. n104

[iv] Listed Call and Put Options. A "call option" is a contract that gives its holder the right to purchase a specified amount of the underlying securities at a specified price within a specified period of time. n105 In other words, it is an offer to sell the underlying securities that obligates the offeror to complete the sale if and when the option is exercised within the option period. Presently Rule 144 may be relied upon by an affiliate desiring to write call options on his securities of the issuer, provided that all of the rule's applicable conditions are complied with at the time the option is written. n106

Rule 144 may also be used by a non-affiliate holder of restricted securities who desires to write a call option and use the restricted securities either to cover the option position or to meet his margin obligation. n107 Because the writing of a call option by a non-affiliate will not be subject to Rule 144 until the non-affiliate either segregates restricted securities to cover or to meet the margin obligation for that option position or delivers the restricted securities upon exercise of that call option, the non-affiliate need not comply with all of the requirements of the rule until the time of the segregation or delivery of the restricted securities. n108 In addition, only the amount of those restricted securities actually segregated or delivered rather than the total amount of securities underlying the option must be considered in complying with the volume limitations requirement of the rule. n109

A "put option" gives the person who buys it (the holder) the right to sell a specified amount of the underlying securities at a specified price within a specified period of time. The person selling the put (the writer of the option) is obligated to buy the specified underlying securities on the specified terms if the option is exercised before it expires.

The Commission staff has taken the position that, subject to certain conditions, restricted and control securities may be sold through the exercise of a put option which is listed on a national securities exchange upon compliance with the conditions of Rule 144. n110 The staff stated that in general the conditions of the rule must be satisfied both at the time the put option is purchased and at the time it is exercised. n111 The notice required by Rule 144(h) is to be filed with the Commission at the time the put option is purchased, n112 The staff was of the view that exercise of an over-the-counter put option could not be made under the rule because the sale would not comply with the manner of sale conditions of Rule 144(f). n113

[v] Sales by Broker-Dealers. Rule 144 provides a safe harbor for the resale of restricted securities and of control securities under the Section 4(1) resale exemption. n114 The rule accomplishes that result by removing both the proposed seller and any participating broker from the category of underwriters, a category of persons for whom the resale exemption is by its express terms never available. n115 Section 4(1) is also never available for a broker-dealer that is selling the securities for the account of the seller. n116 Accordingly, Rule 144 does not and cannot provide an exemption for that broker-dealer. Normally, however, the broker-dealer may act for the seller without rendering Rule 144 unavailable to the seller and may itself rely upon the companion exemption for brokers transactions contained in Section 4(4) of the Securities Act. n117

Rule 144 is available to broker-dealers that are the owners of restricted securities or control securities and proposes to sell those securities, despite the language of Section 4(1), provided that all of the rule's applicable requirements can and will be satisfied. n118 That availability, however, is subject to two limitations. First, the selling broker-dealer may not effect the sale itself, but rather must engage another broker to execute the trade. n119 Second, the selling broker-dealer may not be making a market in any securities of the issuer of the securities that it proposes to sell pursuant to the rule. n120

[vi] Sales by Subsidiaries of the Issuer. Although a subsidiary of the issuer clearly falls within the definition of an affiliate contained in paragraph (a)(1) of Rule 144, n121 the Commission has taken and continues to take the position that generally the rule may not be relied upon by a subsidiary for the sale of either restricted or unrestricted securities issued by its parent. n122 The stated basis for this position is that since the rule is unavailable to the issuer for the sale of its securities and since the issuer is in control of the subsidiary, the parent issuer should not be permitted to do indirectly through the subsidiary what it may not do directly. n123 Although the Commission's general position with respect to subsidiaries of the issuer has a reasonable basis, it is troublesome because the staff has allowed numerous exceptions that add a considerable measure of uncertainty respecting the availability of the rule for a sale of securities by a seller that is or may be a subsidiary of the issuer.

The staff has permitted some subsidiaries to rely upon the rule for the sale of securities issued by the parent, apparently because the circumstances involved suggested that the subsidiary's proposed sale was other than for the benefit of or at the direction of that issuer. For example, the staff permitted an insurance company to rely on the rule for the sale of securities issued by its parent for the following three reasons:

- the securities were purchased by the insurance company before it became a subsidiary of the issuer;
- the securities were purchased by the insurance company in the ordinary course of its investment activities; and
- the decision to sell the securities was made by the insurance company in the ordinary course of its investment activities without consulting the parent issuer. n124

The staff has permitted a wholly-owned subsidiary acting as trustee for an employee benefit plan to sell the plan's securities of the parent issuer apparently because the sales were required to fund benefit payments to or withdrawals by employees. n125

The staff has on several occasions permitted a bank to sell securities issued by its parent where the bank was acting solely in its capacity as a fiduciary of a trust or estate and where the bank acquired the parent's securities:

- through an exercise of preemptive rights;

- pursuant to a rights offering;
- through the exercise of stock options acquired by the settlor or deceased; or
- otherwise in a manner not involving the exercise of any investment discretion. n126

The staff has also allowed a wholly-owned broker-dealer subsidiary to use Rule 144 to sell securities of its parent that were acquired from an individual affiliate of the broker-dealer and the parent upon default by the affiliate on an obligation that was secured by a bona fide pledge of the securities. The broker-dealer represented that the situation could arise in the ordinary course of its business where individual affiliates maintained margin accounts and the broker-dealer would only be doing what the individual affiliate could do directly, that is, sell pledged securities to satisfy obligations under a margin agreement. n127

In light of the Commission's stated position and the staff's frequent exceptions to that position, it is often difficult for a subsidiary proposing to sell securities issued by its parent to determine whether it may rely upon Rule 144 for the proposed sale. The uncertainty increases when the proposed seller is not a wholly-owned subsidiary but is under the control of the issuer to some lesser degree. Nowhere has the Commission suggested at what level of control an affiliate of the issuer will be considered a subsidiary for purposes of applying this limitation on the rule's availability. Accordingly, an affiliate that is wholly-owned by or, because of a somewhat lesser degree of control by the issuer, may otherwise be considered a subsidiary of an issuer of securities, should refrain from relying upon Rule 144 for sales of that issuer's securities in the absence of a favorable interpretive letter.

[d] Sales of Unrestricted Securities by Non-affiliates. The safe harbor provided by Rule 144 is available to exempt from the Securities Act's registration requirements sales of restricted securities and control securities only. n128 It is technically not available for holders of other securities that are not freely tradeable under the Securities Act.

Although unrestricted securities are generally freely tradeable by ordinary investors under the Securities Act, there are, as explained above, a few relatively common exceptions to that statement. n129 The resale exemption contained in Section 4(1) may in some cases not be available to:

- holders of underwriters' compensation and similar unrestricted securities; n130
- holders of substantial amounts of unrestricted securities; n131 or
- holders of unrestricted securities that are deemed to be underwriters as a result of receiving the securities in a Rule 145 reorganization or similar transaction relating to certain issuers. n132

Similarly, holders of securities who received them in an unregistered offering to foreign nationals outside the United States prior to 1990 were often unable to resell them in reliance upon the resale exemption. n133 The availability of the resale exemption for the resale of securities acquired overseas in reliance on Regulation S, which was adopted in 1990, n134 has not been clearly stated, although since the Commission decided in 1998 to treat the equity securities of U.S. issuers sold overseas in reliance on Regulation S as restricted (and thus the Section 4(1) resale exemption is clearly unavailable), the staff would treat such resales in the same way as those occurring prior to the adoption of Regulation S. n135

Although Rule 144 is not available to any of the above-listed persons proposing to sell their securities, frequently the staff will permit their resales under Section 4(1) of the Securities Act based on the seller's compliance with certain of the rule's conditions. As to underwriters' compensation and similar securities, the staff presently permits resales by non-affiliates in compliance with all of the rule's conditions except the filing of notice requirements and upon satisfaction of certain other additional requirements. n136 As to proposed resales of unrestricted securities by non-affiliates who are presumed or deemed to be underwriters, the staff regularly allows them to be made in compliance with all of the rule's conditions other than the holding period and filing of notice requirements. n137 Similarly, the staff has permitted the resale of securities acquired in an unregistered public distribution, for which the availability of the resale exemption would be doubtful, in accordance with certain of the rule's conditions. n138 Finally, the staff has permitted foreign holders of unregistered securities to resell them in compliance with all of the rule's conditions except the filing of notice requirement. n139

[3] Adequate Current Public Information Requirement--Rule 144(c)

The first requirement that must be satisfied before a sale of restricted securities or a sale by an affiliate of control securities may be made under Rule 144, for both reporting issuers and non-reporting issuers, is that there be available "adequate current public information" about the issuer of those securities. n140

[a] Basis for Conditions of Rule 144(c). Prior to the promulgation of Rule 144, the availability of the resale exemption was not conditioned upon the existence of public information. Indeed, nothing in the statutory language of Section 4(1) or in the crucial Section 2(11) definition of the term "underwriter" suggests such a condition. n141 The requirement that adequate current public information about the issuer of outstanding securities be available prior to their lawful resale was first suggested in the Wheat Report. n142 In adopting that suggestion, the Commission introduced a new factor into the determination of when a person will be deemed not to be engaged in a distribution. In doing so, it relied upon the purposes and the underlying policy of the Securities Act to protect investors through the full and fair disclosure of information regarding securities sold in interstate commerce. n143 In effect, the availability of information requirement in Rule 144 makes the rule consistent with and in fact an implementing part of the Commission's overall continuous disclosure philosophy. In addition, and also consistent with the recommendations contained in the Wheat Report, the Commission fashioned the information requirement of the rule to distinguish between reporting issuers and those issuers not subject to the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act. n144

[b] Requirements for Reporting Issuers.

Paragraph (c)(1) of Rule 144 provides that where the issuer of the securities proposed to be sold has been subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 of the Exchange Act, n145 or has had securities registered pursuant to the Securities Act, and is therefore subject to the reporting requirements of Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act, n146 adequate current information is available, provided that:

- at the time of the proposed sale, the issuer has been subject to the reporting requirements for at least ninety days immediately before the sale; and
- the issuer has filed all reports required to be filed during the preceding twelve months, other than Form 8-K reports.

The Note to paragraph (c)(1) also provides that a proposed seller of securities under Rule 144 is entitled to rely upon the issuer's statements in its most recent report, annual or quarterly, or elsewhere as to whether it has filed all reports that were required to be filed during the last twelve months and as to whether it has been subject to those requirements for at least ninety days unless the proposed seller knows or has reason to believe that those statements are incorrect. n147

[i] Ninety-Day Waiting Period. Rule 144 may not be relied upon for the sale of any securities of an issuer that has not been subject to the reporting requirements for at least ninety days. In other words, where an issuer files a registration statement under either the Securities Act or the Exchange Act, sales pursuant to Rule 144 may not begin until the 91st day following the day on which the registration statement becomes effective. n148 However, where an issuer has been subject to the reporting requirements for more than ninety days prior to filing a registration statement, the current public information requirement is considered satisfied throughout the ninety days following effectiveness of that registration statement. n149 There is no need for another waiting period since adequate information has been continuously available.

Similarly, there is no waiting period imposed in the case of an issuer that becomes subject to the reporting requirements as a result of either a registered reorganization or a reorganization that is exempt from registration, provided that the other party to that reorganization has been subject to the reporting requirements for over ninety days and is deemed a predecessor of the issuer. A company is generally deemed a predecessor where it had substantially the same assets, liabilities, business and management as the issuer. This is often the case when a company forms a holding company n150 or reincorporates in a different jurisdiction, n151 without otherwise changing its assets, liabilities and operations. In the case of spin-offs and liquidating distributions, shareholders may use the Exchange Act reporting history of the distributing entity to determine compliance with Rule 144(c)(1) requirement only if the spun-off entity has substantially all the assets, liabilities and operations of the distributing entity n152 or the distributing entity reported the spin-off operations as a separate identifiable unit in its previous Exchange Act filings. n153 A company formed in a merger of Exchange Act reporting companies may use the reporting history of the constituent corporations for Rule 144(c)(1) compliance. n154 A company that has reorganized pursuant to Section 1145 of the Bankruptcy Code is treated as the same company for purposes of Rule 144(c)(1). n155 Additionally, the staff has permitted a holding company that had been subject to the relevant reporting requirements for ninety days, to issue debt securities guaranteed by subsidiaries that were not subject to reporting requirements of either the Securities Act or the Exchange Act. n156

[ii] Adequate Current Filings. With respect to a reporting issuer, adequate current public information is available if all the filings required to be made for the twelve months preceding the proposed sale have been made in a timely manner. It is not necessary that reports for the full twelve months preceding the sale be available unless the issuer has been subject to the reporting requirements for that entire time. n157 If the issuer has been subject to those requirements for a shorter period of time, then only the reports required to be filed during that shorter period of time are necessary. n158 Where the issuer has failed to make a timely filing of a required report, the available information is not current for purposes of the Rule 144(c) requirement. n159 In that type of case, however, the information will become current upon the late actual filing of the report. n160

Although Rule 144 is never available for sales of securities of a reporting issuer unless it or a predecessor has been a reporting issuer for at least ninety days and unless every required report has been filed, n161 the staff rarely questions the accuracy of the reports provided that they contain all the information specified by the respective forms. For example, where an issuer's counsel refused to opine that the issuer had satisfied all of its disclosure obligations, perhaps because the issuer was subject to an inactive private investigation that was never formally terminated by the Commission, the staff nevertheless permitted a proposed seller of restricted securities of that issuer to rely upon the rule. n162 Generally, neither does an outstanding letter of comment on a particular report n163 nor an accountant's disclaimer of an opinion respecting the financial statements in a report n164 render the information inadequate. Indeed, the staff has even allowed the rule to be relied upon by non-affiliates, but not by affiliates, where certain of the issuer's financial statements failed to meet the financial requirements of the respective forms. n165 Although the staff is unlikely to object to the use of Rule 144 by a non-affiliate holder of restricted securities because of a deficiency in a filed report that the holder would normally not be aware of, an affiliate, or a proposed seller who is actually aware of the deficiency, should not risk reliance upon Rule 144 in the absence of an interpretive letter from the staff of the Commission.

Issuers that are reorganizing or liquidating under the provisions of the United States Bankruptcy Code are permitted to file modified Exchange Act reports. Such issuers are not considered "current" in their reporting obligations. n166

[c] Requirements for Non-reporting Issuers.

If the issuer of the securities proposed to be sold under Rule 144 is not required to file periodic reports by Section 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act, adequate current public information about that issuer may not be available. In such a case Rule 144 would not be an alternative to registration for proposed sellers of restricted securities or control securities of that non-reporting issuer unless that issuer chose to or was contractually required to satisfy the rule's disclosure requirement. n167

The non-reporting issuer may satisfy the rule's requirement of adequate current information by voluntarily registering a class of its equity securities under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act (even if it has less than 300 shareholders in the United States and has thus not triggered the Section 12(g) registration requirement) n168 thereby causing itself to be subject to that Act's reporting requirements. Following a waiting period of ninety days from the effective date of the registration statement and upon completion of all required filing during that period, the rule would become available for proposed sellers of that issuer's restricted securities and for its affiliates. n169 Where an issuer discovers that it is no longer required to file reports under Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act because the number of its shareholders has decreased to less than 300, it may voluntarily continue to file reports with no hiatus in the availability of Rule 144 for its affiliates and for the holders of its restricted securities. n170

[i] Adequate Current Information. In addition to voluntary filings, paragraph (c)(2) of Rule 144 allows any non-reporting issuer to satisfy the rule's disclosure requirement simply by making certain specified information "publicly available." The information deemed adequate under paragraph (c)(2) of Rule 144 is that information concerning the issuer specified in clauses (1) through (14) and clause (16) of paragraph (a)(4) of Rule 15c2-11 under the Exchange Act. n171 If a non-reporting issuer is an insurance company, the information specified in Section 12(g)(2)(G)(i) of the Act will constitute compliance with the rule's requirement if current and publicly available. n172

Although the rule provides that all of that enumerated information is required for compliance with Rule 144(c)(2), n173 it prescribes no particular form for that information. Frequently, the information is provided in annual and quarterly reports or proxy statements, press releases, or any combination of those documents. n174 It is not necessary, however, that any of the commonplace documents be utilized or that all of the information be contained in a single rather than two or more documents. n175 Similarly, while the financial information provided is often audited or audited in part, n176 unaudited financial statements are adequate under Rule 15c2-11(a)(4) under the Exchange Act and, in most cases, for purposes of complying with Rule 144(c)(2). n177

The required information must be current as well as complete. For purposes of Rule 144(c)(2), the information is satisfactory only if "reasonably current" as that term is defined in Rule 15c2-11(g) under the Exchange Act. n178 Under that rule, financial information will be presumed to be "reasonably current" only if it is less than six months old, and all other information will be so presumed only if it is less than twelve months old. n179 In the absence of meeting these presumptions, the staff will not consider the rule's requirement satisfied. n180

Persons wishing to rely on Rule 144 must currently make their own determination whether the issuer of the securities has complied with Rule 144(c)(2), because the Commission staff has indicated it will no longer provide interpretive advice about either whether particular reports contain the required information or whether such reports have been made to the generally investing public. n181

[ii] Public Availability of Information. In addition to preparing adequate current information, the non-reporting issuer must ensure that the information is "publicly available" to fully comply with Rule 144(c)(2). Compliance with that standard is a factual matter and must be decided on a case-by-case basis. In general, information about an issuer is "publicly available" if it is made available on "an ongoing and continuous basis ... to security holders, market makers, brokers, financial statistical services, and any other interested persons." n182 Normally, this requirement of regular dissemination is satisfied by regular mailings to a mailing list that includes all of those persons. n183 It is not sufficient if the information is provided only to the broker through whom the seller proposes to sell the securities, n184 though it is apparently permissible to provide the necessary information to the issuer's sole market maker, when that information is also provided to the issuer's shareholders, the press, and other interested persons. n185 Furthermore, the staff takes the position that the required information is not publicly available where the issuer fails to routinely provide it in response to all requests from all interested persons. n186

While the rule is not available to a proposed seller of securities of a reporting issuer until that issuer has been subject to those reporting requirements for at least ninety days, n187 there is no specified minimum period prior to a sale under Rule 144 during which the information required for a non-reporting issuer must be available. n188 Of course, the information will not be considered publicly available for purposes of Rule 144(c)(2) until enough time has passed since dissemination for the public to become aware of it. Presumably, by analogy to the Rule 144(c)(1) ninety day waiting period, information widely disseminated ninety days previous to the date of a proposed sale of securities would be considered "publicly available" on the date of actual sale.

An investor proposing to sell restricted securities or control securities of a non-reporting issuer is not entitled to rely upon a statement from the issuer that the required information is publicly available, unlike the proposed seller of such securities of a reporting issuer. The investor in that case takes the risk that Rule 144 is unavailable and that the sale will be in violation of the Securities Act. Accordingly, any investor proposing to rely upon Rule 144 for the sale of any securities of a non-reporting issuer should make a diligent investigation to determine whether all the information called for by Rule 144(c)(2) is indeed publicly available. Furthermore, in many cases, a broker-dealer will require a legal opinion of counsel authorized to write opinions on behalf of the issuer and accepted by the issuer's transfer agent, that all of the requirements of Rule 15c2-11 have been met prior to selling the securities.

[d] Exemption from Provisions of Rule 144(c). The requirement that there be adequate current public information about the issuer of the securities to be sold need not be complied with by a non-affiliate holder of restricted securities that have not been held by the issuer or any affiliate of the issuer during the one year prior to the date of the proposed sale pursuant to Rule 144. n189

The 2007 amendments removed the requirement from paragraph (c)(1) that the issuer of the securities proposed to be sold have securities registered pursuant to Section 12 of the Exchange Act. n190 The 2007 amendments also made (c)(1) applicable to reporting issuers within six months to one year for resales by non-affiliates and from six months onward for resales by affiliates. n191

[4] Holding Period Requirement--Rule 144(d)

The second requirement that must be satisfied before a sale of restricted securities may be made pursuant to Rule 144 is that a period of at least six months must have elapsed for a reporting company and a period of at least one year must have elapsed for a non-reporting company since those particular restricted securities were acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer and, if they were acquired by purchase from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer, since the full purchase price was paid. n192 Unlike all of the other five conditions that must be complied with to ensure the availability of the Rule 144 exemption, the holding period requirement is applicable only to sales of restricted securities. Affiliates proposing to sell unrestricted securities pursuant to the rule may simply ignore it. n193

[a] Basis for Condition of Rule 144(d). At the time of the adoption of Rule 144, the length of time an investor had held restricted securities was regarded as the best evidence of investment intent at the time of the purchase. n194 Accordingly, after the passage of a substantial period of time, the investor was regarded as having purchased the securities without a view to their distribution and, therefore, as not being an underwriter within the meaning of the Section 4(1) resale exemption. n195 Although the rule seemed to codify that thinking and is consistent with the statutory language, the Commission's stated purpose for the holding period requirement was broader, in that it was also intended to assure that investors who purchased restricted securities indeed "have assumed the economic risks of investment and therefore are not acting as conduits" for the sale of unregistered securities to the public by the issuer. n196 This concept was modified in 1988, when the Commission proposed changes to Rule 144 that would start the holding period from the time the securities were acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer, as opposed to restarting the holding period each time the securities changed hands. The Commission stated: "[a] single period running from the date of the purchase from the issuer or its affiliate would appear sufficient to prevent the distribution of restricted securities to the public." n197 The "at risk" concept is now relevant in more limited circumstances.

[b] Commencement of Holding Period.

The holding period for restricted securities, that is, six months for securities of a reporting issuer and one year for securities of non-reporting issuers, with certain exceptions commences on the day that a person who is not the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer becomes the beneficial owner of those securities. If the restricted securities were acquired by purchase, the holding period will not commence until the purchaser becomes the beneficial owner and the entire purchase price or other consideration has been paid or given. n198

[i] Beneficial Ownership. Although beneficial ownership of securities is often defined in terms of voting or dividend rights, n199 for purposes of the commencement of the Rule 144(d) holding period, a holder of restricted securities becomes the beneficial owner when he assumes the full economic risks of loss. n200 In an ordinary purchase of securities, the purchaser would become the beneficial owner upon the payment of the purchase price and the receipt of the securities, normally contemporaneous events.

A purchaser of restricted securities, however, can sometimes become the beneficial owner before the actual delivery of those securities. For example, where a securities purchase agreement is executed, the purchaser may become the beneficial owner of the securities on the effective date of the agreement only if the purchaser will be deemed to have paid for the securities by execution of the agreement and therefore to have assumed the full risk of loss prior to the delivery of the securities. n201 However, the period commences when the right to receive securities without further consideration matures, not the date of execution of the agreement. n202 If the securities are to be issued pursuant to a merger agreement or other plan of reorganization, beneficial ownership will commence when there is no question that the full economic risk has been assumed by the recipients. n203 Where securities are held in an escrow account subsequent to a reorganization pending adjustments provided for in the plan of reorganization, the holding period will commence on the closing date of the reorganization, providing no further consideration is required for the issuance of the securities. n204 Finally, where the alleged purchaser of securities is litigating his right to those securities, the holding period will normally commence on the date of the ratification or execution of the settlement agreement or court order settling the litigation, n205 unless the agreement or order is persuasive evidence that the purchaser did, in fact, assume the economic risk of loss at an earlier date. n206

When restricted securities are acquired in a private nonsale transaction, it is often more difficult to determine when the holder becomes the beneficial owner for purposes of the commencement of the holding period. Again, in some circumstances, the recipient will become the beneficial owner prior to the actual delivery of the securities, but only if all risk of economic loss has shifted from the transferor to that recipient. If restricted securities are acquired through an employee benefit plan, the employee usually becomes the beneficial owner on the date the securities are credited to his or her account, n207 even if they are subject to forfeiture upon the employee's failure to provide additional service or otherwise, n208 and even if they are subject to restrictions on resale for a period longer than the Rule 144 holding period. n209 Where restricted securities are transferred to individual donees, controlled corporations, trusts, or similar persons, the facts must be carefully scrutinized to determine if and when the transferee becomes the beneficial owner of those securities in order to ascertain the date of commencement of the one year holding period for those securities.

[ii] Full Payment of Purchase Price. If the restricted securities are purchased from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer, then the holding period will not commence until the purchaser is the beneficial owner and the full purchase price has been paid. n210 Often securities are paid for by delivering to the seller a promissory note of another written obligation to pay. n211 In that case, the full purchase price is unpaid for purpose of Rule 144(d)(1) and the holding period will not commence on the date of the purchase transaction unless the note or the obligation provides for full recourse against the purchaser of the securities, is secured by collateral having a market value at least equal to the amount of the note or obligation and is discharged by full payment before the date of the sale made in reliance on Rule 144. n212 Acceptable collateral for purpose of causing the holding period to commence includes securities other than those purchased with the note or other obligation n213 as well as unconditional guarantees of the note or other obligation by a bank or other financial institution unrelated to the issuer. n214 Upon satisfaction of these conditions, the holding period will commence, but it will stop running for any period in which the collateral has a fair market value of less than the amount of the outstanding note or obligation. To prevent this tolling of the holding period, collateral may be added. n215 If the collateral becomes worth more than the note or obligation, that portion of it worth more than the obligation may be withdrawn without any tolling of the holding period. n216

Frequently, the purchaser will pay for the securities with an installment obligation. In that case the securities will become fully paid on a staggered basis as payments are made. n217 If the securities are to be paid for by an employee with future services, the holding period will not commence until those services allocatable to those particular securities have been fully rendered. n218 Finally, when an investor acquires restricted securities from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer upon exercise of an option, those securities are not acquired for purposes of the commencement of the holding period until the exercise price is paid. n219 Only then is that holder of the option to purchase restricted securities actually at risk with respect to the underlying securities, and only then does the six-month or one-year holding period, as applicable, begin to run. Additionally, the seller may only sell those securities whose specific acquisition date satisfies the holding period requirement. n220 Securities sold pursuant to Rule 144 are not fungible with respect to the required holding period. n221

[c] Tacking Provisions.

As discussed above, Rule 144 generally requires that a six months or one year, as applicable, elapse since the restricted securities proposed to be sold were acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer. Prior to its amendment in 1990, Rule 144 required that each holder hold for two years (then the holding period) before any securities can be sold, and only permitted the "tacking" of previous holders' holding periods in certain circumstances. Now, however, tacking is the rule rather than the exception.

Whether tacking of previous holding periods is permitted is now most relevant in transactions that would otherwise seem to require the holding period to start running again, such as recapitalizations or conversions, where new securities are acquired from the issuer or where securities are acquired from an affiliate of the issuer.

[i] Securities Acquired as Stock Dividends, in Stock Splits or in Recapitalizations. Paragraph (d)(3)(i) of Rule 144 permits an investor who is proposing to sell restricted securities received as a dividend or in a stock split to consider them held from the time the securities with respect to which they were issued were acquired from the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer. n222 The staff has also allowed holders of restricted debentures who received restricted common stock from the same issuer as one-time payment of interest contingent upon a net income formula as required by the provisions of the debentures n223 or stock received in lieu of accumulated cash dividends n224 to treat the stock as acquired at the time the debentures were acquired for purposes of satisfying the holding period requirement.

Similarly, restricted securities acquired from the issuer in exchange for other restricted securities are considered as having been acquired at the time the original securities were acquired, provided that the exchange constitutes a recapitalization. n225 Most exchanges with the issuer, either through adoption of a plan or recapitalization (including one to change par value) or by means of an exchange offer, are regarded as recapitalizations. n226 The 2007 amendments, discussed further in section (ii) below, also codified the Commission's position that, if the securities to be sold were acquired from the issuer solely in exchange for other securities of the same issuer, the newly acquired securities are deemed to have been acquired at the same time as the securities surrendered for conversion or exchange, even if the securities surrendered were not convertible or exchangeable by their terms. n227

Until recently, the term did not include exchange offers where significant numbers of the offerees did not participate, a situation which occurred primarily in negotiated exchange offers where holders decided on an individual basis whether to accept the exchange offer. n228 More recent no-action responses indicate that the staff will now consider such negotiated exchanges to be recapitalizations under Rule 144(d)(3)(i). n229

Any exchange transaction involving the payment of any consideration other than the securities of the issuer, or an entity that is substantially the same as the issuer, n230 falls outside the scope of the term recapitalization for purposes of the rule's tacking provision. n231

A merger is a recapitalization if there is "no change in the nature of the business or control of the management" of the company. n232 The 1997 amendments to Rule 144 proposed to codify the Commission's previous interpretive position that holders of restricted securities may tack the Rule 144 holding period in connection with transactions made solely to form a holding company but did not codify the interpretation at that time. n233 The Commission proposed to codify the aforementioned interpretive position in the 2007 Proposing Release, n234 and adopted the position in the 2007 amendments in new Rule 144(d)(3)(ix), which provides for tacking if:

- the newly formed holding company's securities were issued solely in exchange for the securities of the predecessor company as part of a reorganization of the predecessor company into a holding company structure;
- holders received securities of the same class evidencing the same proportional interest in the holding company as they held in the predecessor company, and the rights and interests of the holders of such securities are substantially the same as those they possessed as holders of the predecessor company's securities; and
- immediately following the transaction, the holding company had no significant assets other than securities of the predecessor and its existing subsidiaries and had substantially the same assets and liabilities on consolidated basis as the predecessor had before the transaction. n235

The Commission went on to say that tacking is permissible if the above are satisfied because there is no significant change in economic risk of the investment in restricted securities and the securities being exchanged are substantially equivalent. n236

Reincorporation in a different jurisdiction is a recapitalization provided that "the substance of the corporation (that is, the nature of its business and management) remains the same as before." n237 The 2007 amendments did not change this interpretive position, permitting tacking in connection with the reincorporation of the issuer in a different state in certain situations. n238 However, a transaction is not a recapitalization if other changes in capitalization and percentage ownership are accomplished at the same time such that the difference between the successor company and the predecessor company amounts to a new investment decision for the investor. n239 One of the primary considerations of the staff in permitting tacking is that the investor continues to bear the economic risk of its initial investment. n240

The concept of continuing to bear economic risk in the same enterprise means that where partnership interests are exchanged for shares in a new corporation formed to conduct the business formerly conducted by the partnership, the holding period applicable to the partnership interests could be tacked to that of the share where the partnership agreements contemplated that a transfer of the business to a corporation may take place, n241 but where the partnership had not initially contemplated such a transfer, the holding period for the shares did not commence until the exchange took place, or until the partnership agreement was so amended. n242

[ii] Securities Acquired in Conversions.

Prior to the 2007 amendments, an investor who acquired securities upon voluntary surrender of other securities of the same issuer could tack the holding period of the converted securities to that of the newly acquired securities for the purpose of satisfying the holding period requirement of Rule 144, n243 provided that the conversion involved no additional consideration. n244 Where, however, stock was received partly in exchange for convertible notes and partly in exchange for the interest owed on the notes, the staff had permitted tacking only for those shares of stock received for the notes and had commenced the holding period for those shares received on account of the interest on the date of issuance. n245 It had also not been necessary that the surrendered securities be convertible by their terms. n246 The 1997 Proposing Release had previously proposed codifying the Commission's aforementioned positions. The Commission again proposed such codification in the 2007 Proposing Release. n247 The 2007 amendments codified the aforementioned amendment to Rule 144(d)(3)(ii) and added the following clarifying note:

If the surrendered securities originally did not provide for cashless conversion or exchange by their terms and the holder provided consideration, other than solely securities of the same issuer, in connection with the amendment of the surrendered securities to permit cashless conversion or exchange, then the newly acquired securities shall be deemed to have been acquired at the same time as such amendment to the surrendered securities, so long as, in the conversion or exchange, the securities sold were acquired from the issuer solely in exchange for other securities of the same issuer.

Finally, if the conversion takes place in a manner involving no investment decision by the holders of the convertible securities, the staff will sometimes permit tacking for policy reasons even though the securities received are those of an affiliate of the issuer of the convertible securities, n248 or even where some additional consideration is paid to effect the conversion. n249 The staff will permit tacking where the securities surrendered in exchange are issued by a wholly-owned subsidiary of the issuer of the new securities, but only if the parent has fully guaranteed payment by the subsidiary of the exchanged obligations of the subsidiary. n250 The staff has also permitted tacking where debt securities that were issued by a predecessor corporation were assumed by the issuer of new securities in a merger by operation of law. n251 Because the staff has not often permitted tacking in cases where one or more of the express requirements of this tacking provision is not satisfied, an investor should assume that it may not tack in a similar situation in the absence of a favorable interpretive letter.

[iii] Securities Acquired through Contingent Payment Provisions.

If a person sells an equity interest in a business or all of the assets of a business and agrees to accept as part of the consideration for that business restricted securities of the purchaser on a later date if certain conditions later occur, those securities later received will be considered to have been held since the date of the sale of the interest or assets, as long as the conditions triggering the delivery of the securities were other than the payment of further consideration. n252

[iv] Pledged Securities.

Paragraph (d)(3)(iv) of Rule 144 is the first of the rule's four express tacking provisions that allow non-affiliates under certain conditions to deem restricted securities not to have been held by the issuer or any affiliate of the issuer during a period in which the issuer or an affiliate in fact held the securities. n253 Specifically, Rule 144(d)(3)(iv) provides that a holder of restricted securities, who acquired them from an affiliate of the issuer n254 as security for the repayment of a loan or other obligation, n255 may tack to his holding period the holding period of the pledgor of those securities provided that the pledge was both with recourse and bona fide. n256 Although the bona fide requirement has been the subject of almost no comment, n257 it was apparently intended to prohibit the tacking of holding periods where either party to the loan transaction intended that the pledged securities would be the primary source of repayment of the loan rather than merely the security for the repayment from other sources. n258 Regarding the "with recourse" requirement, paragraph (d)(3)(iv) further provides that if the restricted securities are pledged without full recourse, the pledgee's holding period will commence at the time of the pledge transaction or, in the case of a person acquiring pledged securities upon a default of the obligation secured by the pledge, at the time of purchase. n259

It should be noted that the language of paragraph (d)(3)(iv) extends the full benefit of this tacking provision to a nonpledgee purchaser of securities pledged with recourse. In other words, the purchaser may tack his holding period to both the pledgee's holding period and the pledgor's holding period, provided that the non-pledgee purchaser purchased the securities in a sale pursuant to a default in the underlying obligation. n260 This extended tacking benefit does not, however, accrue to a purchaser of the restricted securities from a pledgee who has himself purchased them following a default in the underlying obligation. n261 That purchaser and the purchaser following a default in the case of a pledge without recourse are treated in the same manner as any other purchaser in an ordinary purchase situation is treated. n262 In short, the purchaser's holding period commences upon his acquisition of beneficial ownership and payment of the purchase price, i.e., normally at the time of purchase. n263

This tacking provision and indeed the Rule 144 holding period requirement itself is relevant only where the pledged securities are restricted securities. If an investor, whether or not an affiliate of the issuer, transfers restricted securities in a private transaction to secure an obligation, those securities are also restricted in the hands of the pledgee. n264 If a non-affiliate so pledges unrestricted securities, they remain unrestricted and are freely tradeable by the pledgee on default. n265

Where, however, an affiliate of the issuer transfers unrestricted securities to a pledgee, the application of Rule 144(d) and the tacking provision is less clear. Since the pledgee acquired the securities from an affiliate of the issuer in a private transaction, under a literal interpretation of the Rule 144(a)(3) definition of restricted securities, those previously unrestricted securities would become restricted in the hands of the pledgee. n266 Although unrestricted securities that are acquired from affiliates in nonsale transactions are not considered restricted securities because the transferees are regarded as simply standing in the shoes of the respective transferor affiliates, n267 a pledge is viewed as a sale rather than a nonsale transaction. n268 As a result, it is difficult to argue that the pledged securities are unrestricted for purposes of free trade ability under Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. On its face, the language of paragraph (d)(3)(iv) would seem to allow a pledgee in such circumstances to tack the affiliate's holding period (even though the concept of a holding period is foreign to a holder of unrestricted securities). However, the SEC has stated that such sales may take place without regard to the Rule 144 holding period. n269

[v] Securities Acquired as Gifts.

Paragraph (d)(3)(v) of Rule 144 permits a proposed seller of restricted securities n270 who received them as a gift from an affiliate of the issuer n271 to tack to his holding period the holding period of the donor for the purpose of satisfying the rule's holding period requirement. n272 The availability of this tacking provision depends solely upon the securities having been acquired in a gift rather than a sale transaction. n273 A gift is simply a transfer for no consideration. The existence of consideration, money, services, or anything of value, is a factual issue. In general, transfers between entities with a business relationship are presumed to be for consideration of some sort rather than gifts. n274

[vi] Securities Acquired by Trusts. Paragraph (d)(3)(vi) of Rule 144 permits a trust proposing to sell restricted securities that were donated to it by a settlor of the trust who is an affiliate of the issuer to tack to its holding period the holding period of the settlor for purposes of satisfying the rule's holding period requirement. n275 However, the staff has taken the view that the tacking benefit is not available for restricted securities purchased by the trust from the settlor, n276 from a beneficiary of the trust, n277 or indeed from the issuer or any other holder of restricted securities, n278 because that purchase would result from an investment decision on the part of the trustee. n279 The tacking benefit available to the trust is also available to any beneficiary of the trust who may regard any restricted securities distributed to him as acquired on the date of their acquisition by the settlor of the trust. n280

[vii] Securities Acquired by Estates. Rule 144's express tacking provisions also provide that securities held by the estate of an affiliate of the issuer are deemed to be acquired when acquired by the deceased. n281 This is a unique provision in that it exempts the sales of those restricted securities by an estate that is not an affiliate of the issuer (even if one or more of the estate's beneficiaries is an affiliate) from the holding period and volume limitations requirements of Rule 144 altogether. n282 Similarly, paragraph (d)(3)(vii) of Rule 144 also exempts any sales of those restricted securities by any distributee beneficiaries who are non-affiliates from the rule's holding period and volume limitations requirement. n283 As to an estate and any beneficiaries that are affiliates of the issuer n284 of the restricted securities proposed to be sold, the provision allows the estate to tack to its holding period the holding period of the decedent. It further allows the beneficiaries to tack to their holding periods the holding periods of both the estate and the decedent, in each case to satisfy the six-month or one-year holding period requirement of the rule, as applicable. n285

The benefits of paragraph (d)(3)(vii) are available only for restricted securities that are acquired from the decedent, either directly through descent or bequest or indirectly through a partnership agreement or otherwise not involving any investment decision by the executor of the estate. n286 Accordingly, those benefits are not available for the sale by the estate of restricted securities acquired by it through the exercise of options to purchase the same that it received from the decedent, n287 through an exchange for securities that it received from the decedent, n288 or otherwise in a manner involving an investment decision by the executor of the estate. The 2007 amendments removed paragraph (i) from the note to paragraph (d)(3)(vii), as paragraph (i) now pertains to shell companies, described later in this chapter.

[viii] Securities Acquired upon Reclassifications, Mergers and Sales of Assets. Rule 144(d)(3)(viii), added in 1990 and amended in 2007, provides that a new holding period will apply to restricted securities that are acquired in the case of any of the corporate transactions described in Rule 145(a), except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (d)(3)(ii) and (ix) of Rule 144. n289 Rule 145(a) applies to transactions in which, pursuant to applicable law or the charter documents of an issuer, the security holders are called upon to vote or give their consent for one of the following:

- a reclassification of securities other than a stock split, reverse stock split, or change in par value, which involves the substitution of a security for another security;
- a statutory merger or consolidation (unless the sole purpose is to change the issuer's domicile within the United States); or
- certain transfers of assets of the issuer in exchange for securities of another person.

Such transactions have historically been treated as purchases of new securities. Therefore, the Commission takes the position that the new securities are not mere economic equivalents of the surrendered securities, and a new holding period is needed to prevent an unregistered two-step distribution of securities.

However, a transaction that is effected only to create a holding company, where the former security holders of an operating company become security holders of the new holding company, is not treated as the creation of a new restricted security, but instead is analyzed as a recapitalization covered by new Rule 144(d)(3)(ix). n290 That means that the new securities of the holding company are deemed to have been acquired from the issuer or an affiliate on the date that the securities of the operating company were acquired, for purposes of determining when resales may be made in reliance on Rule 144. n291

Moreover, the staff has also agreed that the adoption of Rule 144(d)(3)(viii) did not prevent tacking in the cases where it has been allowed under paragraph (d)(3)(i) or (ii) of Rule 144, even if the transaction is of a type described in Rule 145(a). n292 The 2007 amendments codified the position with respect to paragraph (d)(3)(ii) relating to conversions and exchanges of securities discussed in Section 6.05[4][c][ii] on page 86 of this chapter.

[ix] Securities Acquired in Divorce Settlements. The staff occasionally permits tacking in nonsale situations perhaps not contemplated when the rule was adopted, often by interpreting beneficial ownership to have actually begun prior to the date on which the proposed seller of restricted securities actually acquired restricted securities. n293 One such situation involves marital separations or divorces. One effect of a separation or divorce is that each spouse is no longer the same person as the other under Rule 144(a)(2). n294 Arguably, however, the spouse who acquires restricted securities from the other who is an affiliate of the issuer pursuant to a divorce settlement agreement has really been a beneficial owner of those securities since they were acquired by the transferor spouse. Based on the view that the acquired restricted securities represent the acquiring spouse's beneficial interest in the total assets of the marriage, prior to the adoption of changes to Rule 144 in 1990, the staff normally allowed such a recipient of restricted securities to tack to his or her holding period the holding period of the transferor spouse. n295 There appears to be no reason why this position should not be continued. If the transfer of restricted securities to a former spouse involves the payment of consideration or otherwise appears to be a sale rather than a transfer pursuant to a divorce settlement agreement, however, tacking is not permitted because the former spouse's payment of consideration evidences that he or she in fact had no prior beneficial interest in those securities. n296

[x] Securities Acquired from Closely Related Persons. Similarly, a holder of restricted securities, who acquired such securities privately from an affiliate of the issuer who is also so closely related to that holder that there was no shift in the economic risk of the investment, may tack to his holding period the holding period of that closely related transferor for purposes of satisfying the Rule 144 holding period requirement. n297 For example, tacking is permitted where a corporation converts indirect ownership of restricted securities into direct ownership. n298 In addition, tacking has been permitted where an individual transfers restricted securities to a corporation in exchange for all of its outstanding stock because such a transaction would represent a change in form without any change in either control over, or risk of loss from, the restricted securities. n299 On the other hand, the staff has held that if an individual were to transfer restricted securities to a corporation in exchange for only some of its outstanding stock, there would be a shift in risk, resulting in a new holding period for the acquiring corporation without any tacking benefit. n300

In sum, whenever restricted securities are acquired by an entity which is either under the control of a transferor affiliated to the issuer or under the control of the same persons who control that transferor, and in the same proportions, there is no real change in beneficial ownership of, or risk of loss from, the securities. Hence, there is no justification for beginning a new holding period. Accordingly, any such entity, individual, partnership or corporation proposing to sell restricted securities acquired from such a transferor that is in a control relationship with it presumably may tack to its holding period the holding period of that transferor for purposes of satisfying the holding period requirement of Rule 144. In light of the absence of any express authority for the above analysis, however, and the fact that the need for such tacking now only exists where the transferor is an affiliate of the issuer, it is advisable for proposed sellers of restricted securities in these often unique fact situations to obtain an interpretive letter to avoid the risk of improper reliance on the rule. n301

[xi] Securities Acquired in Spin-offs or Liquidating Distributions. Frequently, a partnership or a corporation that has acquired the securities of other issuers for investment or otherwise will distribute those securities pro rata to its partners or shareholders. Often the distributing entity simply wishes to spin-off, that is divest itself of, a particular holding or holdings in its portfolio. On other occasions, the distributing entity is distributing all of its holdings incident to its own liquidation. n302 In either case, if the distributed securities were restricted securities in the hands of the distributing partnership or corporation, they may also be restricted securities in the hands of the partner or shareholder distributees. n303 Where restricted securities are acquired in such a spin-off or liquidating distribution from an affiliate of the issuer, the partner or shareholder recipient may normally tack to his holding period the holding period of the distributing partnership or corporation for the purpose of satisfying the Rule 144(d) holding period requirement. n304 Again, the basis for this implied tacking provision appears to be that these sorts of distributions that involve no additional consideration for the distributed securities involve no real change in their beneficial ownership. n305 In light of the analysis, it is not surprising that the staff allowed a shareholder of a close corporation who received his one-third share of the corporation's restricted securities of another issuer upon his termination of employment to tack to his holding period the holding period of the distributing close corporation, even though he was the only shareholder to be so cashed out. n306 Despite considerable evidence that the staff is now likely to permit tacking to persons who acquire restricted securities from affiliates in transactions similar to spin-offs or liquidating distributions that seem to involve no significant change in who bears the risk of economic loss, it is nevertheless advisable to secure an interpretive letter whenever the particular circumstances have not yet come before the staff of the Commission.

[xii] Cashless Exercise of Options and Warrants

The Commission received several comments to the 1997 Proposing Release asking for the codification of the position that the securities acquired from a cashless exercise of options or warrants be deemed to have been acquired when the options or warrants were granted, even if the options and warrants as initially granted did not permit cashless exercises. n307 The Commission proposed this revision in the 2007 Proposing Release and adopted new paragraph (d)(3)(x) in the final rule, as well as the two corresponding clarifying notes, which read as follows:

If the securities sold were acquired from the issuer solely upon cashless exercise of options or warrants issued by the issuer, the newly acquired securities shall be deemed to have been acquired at the same time as the exercised options or warrants, even if the options or warrants exercised originally did not provide for cashless exercise by their terms.

Note 1 to Rule 230.144(d)(3)(x). If the options or warrants originally did not provide for cashless exercise by their terms and the holder provided consideration, other than solely securities of the same issuer, in connection with the amendment of the options or warrants to permit cashless exercise, then the newly acquired securities shall be deemed to have been acquired at the same time as such amendment to the options or warrants so long as the exercise itself was cashless.

Note 2 to Rule 230.144(d)(3)(x). If the options or warrants are not purchased for cash or property and do not create any investment risk to the holder, as in the case of employee stock options, the newly acquired securities shall be deemed to have been acquired at the time the options or warrants are exercised, so long as the full purchase price or other consideration for the newly acquired securities has been paid or given by the person acquiring the securities from the issuer or from an affiliate of the issuer at the time of exercise.

[xiii] Section 3(a)(10) Securities. Securities that are acquired through an exchange transaction that is exempt from the registration requirements of the Securities Act by reason of the exemption contained in Section 3(a)(10) are normally not restricted securities, n308 even when the securities initially exchanged were restricted securities, n309 and thus tacking provisions are inapplicable.

[xiv] Other Securities Subject to Tacking Provisions. Although the staff of the Commission has stated that the only tacking provisions available to a proposed seller of restricted securities are those contained in paragraphs (d)(3)(i) through (vii) (now (x)) of Rule 144, it has regularly permitted tacking in certain other situations, as discussed above. n310 For example, as discussed in this chapter the Commission has codified additional positions with regard to tacking with the 2007 amendments. n311 Occasionally, the staff will allow a proposed seller of restricted securities to tack the holding period of other securities or of another holder to satisfy the Rule 144(d) holding period requirement just "because of special circumstances and policy reasons," even without the benefit of a reason necessarily deriving from the purpose of the holding period requirement n312 Accordingly, in a case involving unique circumstances or policy considerations, a proposed seller may obtain a favorable interpretive letter respecting the availability of tacking.

[5] Volume Limitation Requirement--Rule144(e)

The 2007 amendments revised paragraph (e) so that it now only applies to sales of restricted or control securities by affiliates and raised the volume limitation for debt securities. n313 The third requirement that must be complied with by an affiliate who proposes to sell restricted or control equity securities, is that the amount of securities to be sold pursuant to Rule 144, together with the amount of such securities already sold (by such affiliate or any person or entity that the affiliate aggregates with) during the three month period preceding the date of the proposed sale, must be limited to the greater of one percent of the outstanding securities of the class being sold or the average weekly trading volume for the class during the four week period preceding the date of the proposed sale. n314

The proposed affiliate seller must aggregate his sales of both restricted and unrestricted securities of the same class during the three-month period for purposes of determining the maximum amount of securities that may be sold within the rule's volume limitation requirement. n315 In either case, however, the proposed seller is not required to aggregate any sales of securities made pursuant to an effective registration statement or pursuant to the exemption provided by Regulation A or any private sales of securities made pursuant to Section 4 of the Securities Act or any sales made pursuant to Regulation S for purposes of determining compliance with the Rule 144 volume limitation requirement for the relevant three month period. n316

[a] Basis for Conditions of Rule 144(e). At the time of the promulgation of Rule 144, the availability of the resale exemption contained in Section 4(1) of the Securities Act depended on the proposed seller's not being a statutory underwriter, which in turn depended in part on whether the contemplated resale would constitute a distribution within the meaning of Section 2(11). n317 In the Commission's view, any transaction involving a substantial amount of securities, that is, an amount large enough to have an impact on the trading markets, did constitute a distribution, n318 and would likely cause the proposed seller to be an underwriter and therefore unable to rely on the resale exemption. n319 That interpretation of the statutory format was consistent with the fact that Section 4(1) was intended to exempt only routine trading transactions between individual investors as distinguished from distributions by issuers or others. n320 By including the volume limitation requirement in the version of Rule 144 that was adopted, the Commission simply reaffirmed its long standing view that a significant characteristic of a transaction that is not a distribution is that it involves an amount of securities that is limited enough to have little, if any, impact on the relevant trading markets. n321

[b] Amount of Limitations-Equity Securities. To comply with the rule's volume limitation requirement, an affiliate proposing to sell restricted or control equity securities pursuant to Rule 144 must first calculate the maximum amount of securities of the same class that he may sell in the three month period ending on the date of the proposed sale n322 and then subtract from that maximum amount the amount of any other such securities that he sold during that three month period. The maximum amount of securities that may be sold in the particular period is the greater of the two figures. The one percent is simply one percent of the number of shares of the same class that is shown to be outstanding by the most recent report or statement of the issuer. n323 Although that figure should not include treasury shares or issued shares that are held by a wholly-owned subsidiary of the issuer, n324 a proposed seller may rely on the issuer's most recent statement or report regarding the number of shares outstanding unless he is aware of an inaccuracy therein. n325 Where shares of a class of security are represented in the United States by depositary shares, the one percent figure is calculated on the basis of all shares of the underlying security outstanding on a worldwide basis, not on the number of depositary shares or the number of shares of the underlying security held in the United States. n326

The alternative maximum amount of securities that may be sold during the three month period is essentially the average weekly reported volume of trading in the securities of the same class for the four calendar weeks preceding the date on which the Form 144 is to be filed. n327 If no notice is required to be filed by Rule 144(h), then the measuring date is the date on which the broker receives the sell order or the date the transaction is executed by the market marker, as the case may be. n328 If the trading volume decreases subsequent to the filing of Form 144, but before the sale occurs, the proposed seller may nevertheless sell the amount "locked in" by that filing. n329 In the event the trading volume increases during that same period, the proposed seller may file a new Form 144 (not an amended Form 144) n330 to obtain the benefit of the larger figure. n331

After determining the maximum amount of securities that may be sold under the rule's volume limitation requirement for the three month period ending on the proposed sale date, the proposed seller must reduce that maximum amount by the amount of all securities of the same class that he has already sold during that period. n332 For this adjustment, securities that are of the same class as those proposed to be sold are those that do not differ significantly in voting and liquidation rights or in historic market price. n333 Although that determination is an issue of fact, it is apparently a proper subject for an interpretive letter. Finally, the amount of securities that a proposed seller may sell under the rule's volume limitations requirement is unaffected by the amount of securities, if any, sold by that person in any other three month period in that neither carry-forward nor accumulation is permitted. n334

While the amount of convertible securities that maybe sold pursuant to Rule 144 is determined exactly as explained above, the alternative procedure set forth in paragraph (e)(3)(i) of the rule would be used where both convertible securities and the securities into which they are convertible are sold during the same three month period. n335 In that case, the computation is made as if only the underlying securities are to be sold and the convertible securities are counted as the amount of underlying securities into which they are convertible. Where, however, the calculation made according to paragraph (e)(3)(i) would allow the seller to circumvent the volume limitations of Rule 144(e)(1) or (2), the alternative calculation is not applicable. n336

[c] Amount of Limitations -- Debt Securities.

While the 2007 amendments exempted non-affiliates from the volume requirements, as noted above, affiliates still remain subject to volume requirements for sales of equity securities and debt securities. For sales of debt securities, affiliates may use a new additional volume test adopted by the 2007 amendments in the form of revised paragraph (e)(2), which aims to rectify concerns that the previous volume limitations prevented sales of debt securities due to the fact that debt securities are usually issued in tranches. n337 New paragraph (e)(2) reads as follows:

If the securities sold are debt securities, then the amount of debt securities sold for the account of an affiliate of the issuer, regardless of whether those securities are restricted, shall not exceed the greater of the limitation set forth in paragraph (e)(1) of this section or, together with all sales of securities of the same tranche (or class when the securities are non-participatory preferred stock) sold for the account of such person within the preceding three months, ten percent of the principal amount of the tranche (or class when the securities are non-participatory preferred stock) attributable to the securities sold.

The Commission thinks that this additional volume limitation will allow for more trading of debt securities (including non-participatory preferred stock and asset-backed securities) than the one percent limitation had previously allowed. n338

[d] Aggregation Provisions.

As explained above, a proposed seller of restricted or control equity or debt securities will satisfy the Rule 144(e) volume limitation requirement only if the amount of the securities proposed to be sold when added to the amounts of all restricted securities or control securities sold by that seller during the three month period preceding the proposed sale do not exceed in the aggregate the maximum amount specified by paragraph (e)(2) or (e)(1), respectively. In other words, the proposed seller is required to aggregate the amount of all such securities that he sold with the amount proposed to be sold pursuant to the rule to determine whether the proposed sale will comply with the volume limitations requirement.

In addition, certain of the rule's provisions require that proposed seller to aggregate or count against the maximum amount that he may sell during the relevant three month period the amount of restricted securities or control securities sold during that period by specified other persons. Those aggregation rules, which are apparently designed to prohibit the proposed seller from circumventing the volume limitations requirement by selling through others, are contained in the Rule 144(a)(2) definition of "person" and in the provisions of paragraph (e)(3) of the rule that require aggregation of sales by persons having certain relationships with the proposed seller, which relationships generally led to the tacking of such persons' holding periods being permitted before tacking became the general rule. Finally, the staff of the Commission has implied other aggregation principles that go beyond the provisions of the rule. n339

[i] Aggregation through Definition of "Person". The Rule 144(e) volume limitation requirement is applicable to proposed sales of securities by persons who are affiliates of the issuer. For purposes of that requirement, Rule 144(a)(2) defines a person to include, in addition to the person for whose account securities are to be sold, the following:

- Any relative or spouse of such person, or any relative of such spouse, any one of whom has the same home as such person;
- Any trust or estate in which such person or any of the persons specified in paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section collectively own 10 percent or more of the total beneficial interest or of which any of such persons serve as trustee, executor or in any similar capacity; and
- Any corporation or other organization (other than the issuer) in which such person or any of the persons specified in paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section are the beneficial owners collectively of 10 percent or more of any class of equity securities or ten percent or more of the equity interest. n340

In general, all sales of restricted securities or control securities made or proposed to be made by any one included in the rule's definition of a person must be aggregated for purposes of the rule's volume limitation requirement. n341

The aggregation of sales required by paragraphs (e) and (a)(2) of Rule 144 is generally a two-way street. In other words, just as a mother must aggregate with her proposed sales any includable sales within the applicable three month period by her son residing in the same home, so must the son similarly aggregate her sales with his. n342 A significant exception to that rule involves the case of a non-affiliate trust or estate that is administered by an affiliate trustee or executor. In that circumstance, the affiliate trustee or executor is required to aggregate with his sales all sales made during the relevant period by the trust or estate. n343 Although Rule 144(a)(2)(ii) would also seem to require aggregation by a person who exercises responsibilities "in any other capacity" comparable to those of a trustee, the SEC interprets such "other capacity" narrowly, based on the similarity with a trustee or executor. n344 The trust or estate, of course, would be not subject to the volume restrictions. n345 In addition, while an entity that serves as trustee or executor for several trusts and estates must aggregate all sales by all of those trusts and estates with sales for its own account, n346 the trusts and estates are not required to aggregate with each other unless they are as a result of their common administration acting in concert for purposes of paragraph (e)(3)(vi) of Rule 144. n347

[iii] Pledged Securities. Paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of Rule 144 expressly requires that a pledgee proposing to sell pledged securities, or a purchaser of pledged securities after a default, n348 must aggregate with those securities proposed to be sold the amount of all restricted securities of the same class as those pledged that were sold for the account of the pledgor during the relevant three month period. n349 Such aggregation is required of the pledgee or purchaser for a period of six months for a reporting issuer and one year for non-reporting issuers from a default in the underlying obligation. n350

Since this aggregation provision is a two-way street, a pledgor proposing to sell restricted securities or control securities under the rule is also required to aggregate any sales of such pledged securities by the pledgee (or a purchaser from the pledgee) for as long as the aggregation provision is applicable. While the pledgor and the pledgee must aggregate all of their sales (including those of persons attributable to them under Rule 144(a)(2)), paragraph (e)(3)(ii) does not require horizontal aggregation, that is aggregation by pledgees with other pledgees of the same pledgor. n351 The 2007 amendments codified this position in a note to paragraph (e)(3)(ii), which reads as follows:

Sales by a pledgee of securities pledged by a borrower will not be aggregated under paragraph (e)(3)(ii) with sales of the securities of the same issuer by other pledgees of such borrower in the absence of concerted action by such pledgees. n352

Since a pledgor can render Rule 144 unavailable to a pledgee at any time simply by selling the maximum amount of securities of the type pledged that is permitted by the volume limitation requirement, a proposed pledgee is advised to consider contractually restricting, at the time the pledge transaction is negotiated, the pledgor's right to sell any such securities of the same class as those pledged while the pledge is outstanding.

[iii] Securities Acquired as Gifts.

Paragraph (e)(3)(iii) of Rule 144 requires a donee proposing to sell donated restricted securities or control securities pursuant to Rule 144 to aggregate those securities with any sales of such securities of the same class for the account of the donor during the relevant three month period for a period of six months for a reporting issuer and one year for non-reporting issuers. n353 The rule does not distinguish between gift securities acquired from an individual and gift securities acquired from a corporation or charitable institution. n354 Again, this aggregation provision is reversible. n355 The donor, however, is required to aggregate with all of his donees, whereas the donees are not required to aggregate with other of the donor's donees for compliance with the Rule 144 volume limitation requirement. n356

[iv] Securities Acquired by Trusts. Paragraph (e)(3)(iv) of Rule 144 requires affiliate trusts and their beneficiaries proposing to sell securities acquired from the settlor of the trust to aggregate those securities with any sales of such securities of the same class during the relevant three month period by the settlor. This aggregation provision, like those applicable to pledged and donated securities, is applicable until either six months or one year has elapsed (depending on the type of issuer as noted above) following the settlor's transfer. n357 Similarly, the provision is reversible, and while the settlor must aggregate with the trust and all beneficiaries while the provision is applicable, the beneficiaries are not required to aggregate with each other. n358 Where a proposed seller of restricted securities or of control securities subject to volume restrictions is a trust or a beneficiary of a trust, it should be kept in mind that the sales of such securities of the same class by other persons may be attributable to the seller under the aggregation provision deriving from the definition of persons for the purpose of the Rule 144(e) volume limitation requirement. n359

[v] Securities Acquired by Estates. Paragraph(e)(3)(v) of Rule 144 permits an estate to sell restricted securities that it acquired as a result solely of the decedent's death n360 without regard to the rule's volume limitation requirement, provided that the estate is not an affiliate of the issuer n361 even if one or more of the beneficiaries of the estate are such affiliates. n362 In addition, Rule 144(e)(3)(v) exempts non-affiliate beneficiaries proposing to sell such securities from the volume limitation requirement. n363 Therefore, an estate that is an affiliate of the issuer of the securities proposed to be sold is required to aggregate with the amount of the restricted securities received from the deceased the amount of any securities sold by the deceased during the three month period preceding the proposed sale.

Similarly, an affiliate beneficiary is required to aggregate with his proposed sale of such securities any sales of such securities of the same class by the estate or the deceased during the measuring period. Once again, even where the rule's aggregation provision is applicable to the estate or certain of the beneficiaries, horizontal aggregation is not required for compliance with the Rule 144(e) volume limitation requirement. n364 Finally, as with a trust, the executor of an estate or a beneficiary with a ten percent or more interest in that estate and his counsel should not overlook the possibility that aggregation may be required as a result of the Rule 144(a)(2) definition of the term "person" for purposes of the volume limitations requirement. n365

[vi] Securities Sold by Persons Acting in Concert. The last of Rule 144's express aggregation provisions neither derives from the rule's definition of a person nor relates to the Rule 144(d) tacking provisions. Apparently included as a catch-all provision to be used if necessary to deter attempts to circumvent the rule's volume limitation requirement, paragraph (e)(3)(vi) of Rule 144 simply requires that affiliate holders of restricted or control securities who agree to "act in concert for the purpose of selling securities of an issuer" must aggregate their sales during the relevant three month period to determine whether the Rule 144(e) volume limitation requirement has been met. n366

In general, simultaneous sales even by affiliates fall short of constituting acting in concert. n367 The critical requirement is that the proposed sellers have reached some agreement, written or oral, about selling their shares. In other words, aggregation is required whenever there are concerted activities by any persons as to resales of securities covered by Rule 144. Often, but not always, an agreement by persons who receive the securities in the same transaction to limit their resales will necessitate aggregation of their sales. n368

The determination of whether parties are acting in concert for the purpose of selling securities is determined on a case-by-case basis and depends upon the particular facts and circumstances involved, including the relationships among the parties. n369

Although the staff will frequently provide an interpretive letter, its view is generally that whether the activities of particular persons constitute "acting in concert" within the meaning of Rule 144(e)(3)(vi) is a factual matter best decided by the issuer, the proposed sellers and their counsel. n370

[vii] Securities Acquired in Divorce Settlements. Following a divorce, former spouses are no longer a single "person" for purposes of the Rule 144 aggregation provisions. n371 However, a spouse who receives restricted securities from the transferor spouse as part of a divorce settlement agreement was normally permitted to tack to his holding period the holding period of the transferor spouse for the purpose of satisfying the old Rule 144(d) (prior to the 1990 amendments) under which holding periods generally ran from the last sale of restricted securities, not from the last sale by the issuer or an affiliate. n372 That tacking benefit raises the question of whether there should be a corresponding aggregation rule applied to the sales of former spouses either on the theory that their sales constitute acting in concert or otherwise. The staff's current position is that sales by the transferee spouse of restricted securities received pursuant to a divorce settlement need not be aggregated with any other sales of restricted securities of the same class by the transferor spouse, provided the former spouses maintain independent homes and are not otherwise acting in concert. n373

[viii] Securities Acquired from Closely Related Persons. A person who acquired restricted securities in a private transaction from another person so closely related to the transferee that there was in fact no shift in the economic risk of the investment was generally permitted to tack to his or her holding period the holding period of the transferor closely related person for purposes of Rule 144(d) prior to the 1990 amendments as explained above. n374 Typically, the transferee is a corporation under the control of the transferor. n375 Just as the closely related entities were regarded as the same person (no change in beneficial ownership) under the Rule 144 holding period requirement, they should be and are still required to aggregate their sales of restricted securities or indeed control securities of the same class for purposes of the rule's volume limitations requirement. In virtually all cases, aggregation results because the closely related parties are considered the same person as defined by the rule. n376 Nevertheless, aggregation has on occasion been required on the ground that the securities were donated to the controlled corporation n377 and could, of course, also be required under the rule's acting in concert aggregation provision. n378

[ix] Securities Acquired in Spin-offs or Liquidating Distributions. Where restricted securities are received by the partners or the shareholders of a distributing partnership or corporation in a spin-off or liquidating distribution, the distributees could normally tack to their holding periods the holding period of the distributing entity for purpose of Rule 144(d) prior to the 1990 amendments, as explained above. n379 Predictably, the Commission takes the position that where partners who receive restricted securities in such a transaction from the partnership utilize that implied tacking benefit, then all of the partners must aggregate their sales of such securities for the purpose of the rule's volume limitations until two years (presumably now six months or one year, depending on the type of issuer) have elapsed since the distribution or the unlimited resale provision is available, whichever is earlier. n380

Where the distributing entity is a partnership, this horizontal aggregation requirement appears applicable regardless of the number of partner distributees. n381 Where the distributing entity is a corporation, however, the shareholders receiving restricted securities are subject to this horizontal aggregation requirement for up to six months or one year, depending on the type of issuer, only if the distributing corporation is or was closely held. n382 If the distributing corporation is or was other than closely held, then the distributee shareholders are required to aggregate with each other only if they are as a matter of fact facing in concert. n383

Presumably, the dichotomy between the case of a distributing partnership and that of a distributing corporation results only from the fact that most, if not all, of the partnership cases have involved closely held partnerships. To impose this rule on widely held corporations or indeed widely held partnerships would be both unreasonable and unworkable. Whenever the number of distributees is substantial, horizontal aggregation can be logically justified only where the distributees are in fact, or can be rebuttably presumed to be, acting in concert. In light of the uncertainty of the applicability of this implied aggregation provision, however, partners or shareholders proposing to rely on Rule 144 for the sale of restricted securities distributed by a partnership or corporation, as the case may be, are advised to comply with this horizontal aggregation rule for purpose of complying with the volume limitation requirement in the absence of a favorable interpretative letter from the staff.

[e] Exemptions from Provisions of Rule 144(e). As previously stated, since the 2007 amendments, the volume limitations requirement need not be complied with by a non-affiliate holder of restricted securities. n384 In addition, non-affiliate estates and non-affiliate beneficiaries of those estates who receive restricted securities as a result solely of the death of the decedent are completely exempt from the Rule 144(e) volume limitations requirement with respect to those securities. n385

[6] Manner of Sale Requirement--Rule 144(f)

The 2007 amendments to Rule 144 modified paragraphs (f) and (g), which were the first amendments to the manner of sale requirements since 1978. n386 The Commission stated that it had come to believe that it was time to alter the manner of sale requirements so that they could better reflect the present market. n387

Paragraphs (f) and (g) of Rule 144 detail the role of the broker in transactions effected in accordance with Rule 144. Specifically, paragraph (f) details the way in which securities must be sold while paragraph (g) sets forth transactions that are included within the definition of brokers transactions n388 for the purposes of Rule 144. The 2007 amendments amended paragraph (f) to permit sales in riskless principal transactions n389 and added a new subparagraph to paragraph (g) covering the posting of bid and ask quotations in alternative trading systems that will also be deemed not to be a solicitation. n390 Further, due to the 2007 amendments, the manner of sale requirements are now only applicable to sales by affiliates of equity securities. n391

After a proposed affiliate seller of restricted or control equity securities determines that the Rule 144 adequate current public information and volume limitations requirements and, if the securities proposed to be sold are restricted securities, the holding period requirement can be satisfied, then the proposed seller must arrange for the securities to be sold consistent with the rule's manner of sale requirement. The manner of sale requirement will be satisfied only if the securities are sold in brokers' transactions, in transactions directly with a market maker or in riskless principal transactions. n392 In all three of the preceding circumstances, the seller is precluded from soliciting or arranging for the solicitation of orders to buy the securities proposed to be sold and from making any payments respecting the proposed sale to anyone other than the broker executing the order to sell the securities. n393

[a] Basis for Conditions of Rule 144(f). At the time of the adoption of Rule 144, routine trading transactions were exempted from the Securities Act's registration provisions by Section 4(1) and 4(4). The seller relied upon Sections 4(1), n394 and the participating broker relied on Section 4(4), which exempts "brokers' transactions executed upon customer's orders ... but not the solicitation of such orders." n395 By 1972, transactions that qualified as "brokers' transactions" as that term had been interpreted were viewed as too limited to be considered distributions. n396 The Commission simply embodied that notion in Rule 144 by excluding from the term "distribution" only those sales that qualified as brokers' transactions. In 1978, after the Commission was apparently convinced that some relaxation of the rule's manner of sale requirement would be possible without abuse, it amended the rule to permit transactions directly with a market maker to also satisfy the Rule 144(f) requirement. n397 In 2007 as previously discussed, the Commission added riskless principal transactions as an additional method of satisfying the Rule 144(f) requirements. n398

[b] Brokers' Transactions. The Rule 144(f) manner of sale requirement is satisfied if the proposed sale is made through brokers' transactions within the meaning of Section 4(4) of the Securities Act. The only issue, therefore, is the scope of the term "brokers' transactions." Essentially, brokers' transactions are routine trading transactions in an established market rather than transfers that would serve to create, expand, disrupt or even significantly influence the market in the securities being sold. n399 The first requirement, therefore, for brokers' transactions is simply that there be an existing market that can be used by the broker to effect the sale.

A second requirement is that the transaction must be executed by a "broker," defined by Section 3(a)(4) of the Exchange Act as a person engaged in the business of effecting transactions in securities for the account of others. n400 Accordingly, a transaction executed by a bank trust department for its own account is not a brokers' transaction. n401 Neither is a transaction by a dealer n402 or any other person in the securities business that is not functioning in the transaction solely as an agent for a customer. n403 However, where the broker itself is not a market maker for the securities to be sold, it may execute the customer order with a market maker affiliated with the broker, and such transaction would still be treated as a brokers' transaction. n404 In addition, use of a foreign broker may well disqualify the transaction unless such broker either directly or through an affiliated entity, is registered with the Commission under the Exchange Act. n405

Where a proposed seller of securities under Rule 144 has engaged a qualified broker to sell those securities as his agent in the existing market, the sale or sales will constitute brokers' transactions, provided the broker limits its activities to those permitted by Rule 144(g), namely:

- it does no more than execute the order or orders to sell the securities as agent for the person for whose account the securities are sold; n406
- it receives no more than the usual and customary broker's commission n407, though it may act for both the seller and the buyer and receive the amount from each of those customers; n408
- Neither solicits nor arranges for the solicitation of customers' orders to buy the securities in anticipation of or in connection with the transaction. n409

Despite these prohibitions, the broker is nevertheless permitted to contact other brokers or dealers who have indicated an interest in the securities to be sold within the preceding sixty days n410 and the broker's customers who have indicated an unsolicited bona fide interest in those securities during the preceding ten business days. n411 Persons who have indicated such an interest in the securities proposed to be sold are customers for purpose of Rule 144(g) even if they have not previously effected transactions with the specific broker now selling the securities under the rule. n412 In addition, the broker will not be regarded as soliciting buy orders if it continues to issue its regular research reports containing information about the issuer of the securities proposed to be sold n413 or if it continues to make a two-way market in these securities, provided it had been doing so to the extent of publishing bona fide quotations in an inter-dealer quotation system on at least twelve of the preceding thirty days with no hiatus of more than four consecutive business days and such publication is incident to the maintenance of a bona fide inter-dealer market for the securities n414 or, as added by the 2007 amendments, the publication by the broker of bid and ask quotations for the security in an alternative trading system, provided that the broker has published bona fide bid and ask quotations for the security in the alternative trading system on each of the last twelve business days. n415 Previously, prior to the 2007 amendments, if a broker structures a riskless transaction such as a series of installment sales, on behalf of the seller, to customers who have expressed an interest in such securities then it could not be regarded as a solicitation. n416 The 2007 amendments added new paragraph (f)(1)(iii) to allow for the sale of securities through riskless principal transactions where trades are executed at the same price (without any commission equivalent, fees of any kind, markdown or markup), as the Commission believes riskless principal transactions to be the equivalent of agency trades. n417 The broker or dealer effecting the agency trade must meet all of the requirements of paragraph (g), except for paragraph (g)(1), as with agency trades. n418

The fourth brokers' transactions requirement, contained in paragraph (g)(4) of Rule 144, is that the selling broker must make a reasonable inquiry respecting, and be unaware thereafter of, any circumstances indicating that the proposed seller is an underwriter or that the proposed sale is part of a distribution. n419 A reasonable inquiry must include ascertaining at least the following information:

- the length of time the securities have been held by the person for whose account they are to be sold, and if practicable, the inquiry should include physical inspection of the securities;
- the nature of the transaction in which the securities were acquired by the proposed seller;
- the amount of securities of the same class sold during the past three months by all persons whose sales are required to be aggregated;
- whether the proposed seller intends to sell additional securities of the same class through any other means;
- whether the proposed seller has solicited or made any arrangement for the solicitation of buy orders in connection with the proposed sale of securities;
- whether the proposed seller has made any payment to any other person in connection with the proposed sale of the securities; and
- the number of shares or other units of the class outstanding or the relevant trading volume. n420

In addition, the broker is, of course, deemed to be aware of all the information contained in Form 144, n421 and in the report or other statement from the issuer respecting the adequate current public information requirement.

[c] Transactions with a Market Maker. As mentioned above, an alternative method by which a proposed seller of restricted securities or of control securities may presently comply with the Rule 144(f) manner of sale requirement is to sell those securities directly to a market maker. n422 Often the choice between this alternative, the brokers' transactions alternative, and the riskless principal alternative is irrelevant to the seller and becomes that of the broker that is involved. If the broker qualifies as a market maker, it may either limit its sale to that of an agent and proceed to comply with all of the rule's requirements applicable to brokers' transactions n423 or purchase the securities itself in compliance with all of the Rule 144(f) requirements applicable to a market maker, or sell the securities in a riskless principal transaction as permitted by the 2007 amendments. n424, n425

A broker qualifies as a market maker for purposes of Rule 144(f) only if it falls within one of the following three classes of persons specified in Section 3(a)(38) of the Exchange Act: n426

- any specialist that is permitted to act as a dealer;
- any dealer acting as a block positioner; and
- any dealer that holds itself out as willing to buy and sell a particular security on a regular and continuous basis. n427

Only in the case of a sale of securities directly to a specialist is the transaction clearly with a market maker within the meaning of Rule 144(f).

Since the term "block positioner" is not defined in the Exchange Act, it is not always obvious that a dealer is functioning as such and that its Rule 144 purchases will constitute qualifying transactions under Rule 144(f). In general, the Commission's view is that a dealer who qualifies as a block positioner for purposes of Exchange Act Rules 17a-17(b)(1) and (3) n428 will also be a block positioner for Rule 144 purposes, provided that:

- the Rule 144 transaction involves securities with the same type of trading characteristics as those the block positioner generally holds itself out as being ready and able to purchase; n429 and
- the amount of securities to be purchased by the block positioner from the Rule 144 seller constitutes a "block." n430

While the term "block" is also not defined in the Exchange Act, the Commission has indicated in the past that a block transaction is a transaction in which the dealer, by reason of the size of the order in relation to the conditions in the exchange market, reasonably concludes that it is in the customer's best interests to search and negotiate for a matching interest on the other side of the market rather than to attempt to execute the order in the ordinary course of the auction market. n431

Where a proposed seller desires to satisfy the Rule 144(f) manner of sale requirement by selling to a dealer that falls within the third category of qualifying market makers, the seller must confirm that the dealer is not a so-called "instant" market maker. In other words, a dealer cannot become a market maker through the Rule 144 transaction itself. n432 Rather, the dealer qualifies only if it has previously held itself out, and is currently holding itself out, as being willing to buy and sell the security being offered in the Rule 144 transaction. n433 Rule 144(g)(3)(iii) provides an objective guideline for whether a dealer is in fact a bona fide market maker for purposes of the rule, n434 a fact that the proposed seller should ascertain and document in his files. n435

Similar to a broker executing brokers' transactions for purposes of Rule 144(f), a market maker is also precluded from soliciting buy orders for the securities it intends to purchase in the Rule 144 transaction. n436 The normal activities of a market maker, however, will not constitute such an impermissible solicitation, provided they are not altered as part of a special campaign to generate interest in the securities that the market maker anticipates purchasing. n437 Once the Rule 144 transaction is completed, the securities are unrestricted in the hands of the market maker and maybe treated by the market maker as any other tradeable securities. n438 In other words, the market maker, unless it is an affiliate of the issuer, may solicit buy orders for the securities that it purchased in a Rule 144 transaction after its purchase from the holder is completed. n439

The rule against prior solicitations of buy orders for the securities that the market maker expects to purchase, however, has been somewhat relaxed for block positioners. Normally, a block positioner will attempt to cover its block by soliciting buy orders before it commits itself to purchase that block. It cannot do so in a Rule 144 transaction. If the securities to be purchased by the block positioner are listed or admitted to unlisted trading privileges on an exchange that has restrictions on the off-board trading of its members and the block positioner is a member of that exchange, the block positioner must execute the block on the exchange, causing a delay from the time the deal is made with the seller until its execution on an exchange. During that period the block positioner may solicit the buy side of the block as if the purchase were completed. n440

If a market maker purchases in a Rule 144 transaction an amount of securities in excess of the maximum amount permitted by Rule 144(f) prior to the 1978 amendments, n441 the market maker should consider whether the resale of those securities would constitute a distribution for purposes of Regulation M (which replaced Rule 10b-6) under the Exchange Act. n442 If so, then Regulation M may affect the market maker's purchase of any of the class of securities that are the subject of the distribution until the distribution is completed. n443 In determining whether the resales of securities purchased under Rule 144 will be viewed as a Regulation M distribution, the market maker should consider:

- the magnitude of the offering;

- the selling efforts required; and
- the selling methods to be used. n444

As to the magnitude of the offering, the market maker must aggregate with those Rule 144 securities to be resold all securities of the same class being offered by that market maker, including those not purchased by him in a Rule 144 transaction. n445 In light of the substantial uncertainty surrounding this determination, market makers should proceed cautiously with the resale of large amounts of securities purchased in Rule 144 transactions.

[d] Exemptions from Provisions of Rule 144(f).

As previously mentioned, a non-affiliate seller of debt securities need not comply with the manner of sale requirement. In addition, non-affiliate estates and non-affiliate beneficiaries of those estates who receive restricted securities solely as a result of the death of the decedent are completely exempt from the Rule 144(f) manner of sale requirement for those securities. n446

[7] Notice of Proposed Sale Requirement--Rule 144(h)

The final requirement that must be satisfied before a sale of restricted or control securities by an affiliate (since the 2007 amendments, Rule 144(h) no longer applies to sales by non-affiliates) may be made under Rule 144 is that three copies of a notice on Form 144 be filed with the Commission and one copy with the principal exchange, if any, on which the securities proposed to be sold are admitted to trading. n447 The notice must be placed in the mailer or otherwise transmitted not later than either the placing of the sell order with a broker or the execution of the Rule 144 sale with a market maker. n448 As specified by the form, certain information about the issuer, the securities to be sold, and the seller's other sales (including the sales of other persons required to be aggregated) of those securities during the three month period preceding the date of filing must be included. n449 The Form 144 must be signed by the person for whose account the securities are to be sold. n450 Finally, the proposed seller must have, at the time of filing, a bona fide intention of actually selling the securities referred to in the Form 144 within a reasonable time after the filing. n451 Any amendments to Form 144, whether to change the selling broker, n452 to increase the amount of securities to be sold in light of an increased trading volume n453 or for any other reasons, n454 are subject to the same requirements as the original notice. n455 The Commission also solicited comments in the 2007 Proposing Release as to whether the Form 144 and Form 4 filing requirements should be coordinated, in response to which they received many supporting comments. n456 However, while the Commission declined to adopt the changes in the 2007 amendments, the Commission did say that they expect to issue a separate release to address the coordination of these two filings in the future. n457 The 2007 amendments amended paragraph (h) to modify the filing thresholds for the first time since 1972. n458 The Commission raised the filing thresholds to $50,000 (to adjust for inflation since 1972) and 5,000 shares as the Commission believes this to be a suitable threshold for trades that do not reach the $50,000 threshold but nevertheless are worth notice to the market. n459 A proposed seller need not consider the sales of persons with whom he may be required to aggregate for purposes of the Rule 144 volume limitation requirement in determining whether a Form 144 must be filed, unless he is acting in concert with another such person. n460

Form 144 requires that a seller represent that as of the date that the Form 144 is signed that the seller "does not know any material adverse information in regards to the current and prospective operations of the issuer of the securities to be sold which has not been publicly disclosed." n461 This representation presents a problem when it comes to a seller that is selling the shares pursuant to a Rule 10b5-1 trading plan. The Commission had previously indicated that a seller with an effective 10b5-1 selling plan in place can modify the Form 144 representation indicating that as of the date on which the plan was adopted or the trading instructions were given, the seller had no knowledge of material adverse information pertaining to the issuer. n462 The Commission adopted this position in the 2007 amendments.

[8] Unavailability to Securities of Issuers with No or Nominal Operations and No or Nominal Non-Cash

Assets

The 2007 amendments replaced previous paragraph (i), n463 with language regarding the treatment of securities issued by reporting or non-reporting shell companies, n464 codifying a previous interpretation by the Commission. n465 Under new paragraph (i), Rule 144 is not available for resales of the securities of reporting and non-reporting shell companies, or for resales of the securities of blank check companies, n466 other than business combination related shell companies and asset-backed issuers. However, Rule 144 is available for sales of securities of a former shell company, provided that the shell company has been subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act during the preceding 12 months (or a shorter period that it was subject to the reporting requirements) and at least one year n467 has passed since the former shell company issuer filed the information known as "Form 10" information with the Commission demonstrating that it is no longer a shell company. n468 The Commission further noted that Form 10 information is deemed to have been filed when the initial filing is made with the Commission, rather than when the Commission's review is complete or the amended Form 10 is filed in response to comments from the Commission. n469

[9] Procedures for Sales under Rule 144

Although the promulgation of Rule 144 was intended in part to facilitate the sale of restricted securities and of control securities by basing the availability of the resale exemption on more objective standards, n470 it was initially avoided rather than embraced by prospective sellers because of the often cumbersome and nonuniform selling procedures imposed upon them by fearful issuers and brokers. As a result, delays in effecting the sales were common and the costs to the sellers sometimes prohibitive. n471 Despite numerous requests for guidance from the staff for acceptable procedures and documentation that would ensure compliance with the rule's requirements, the staff has consistently taken the position that these matters are the responsibilities of the parties involved. n472 After over two decades of working with sales pursuant to Rule 144, however, both brokers and issuers have gained considerable experience and are generally able to effect most Rule 144 sales with a minimum of expense and inconvenience for all concerned parties.

[a] Responsibilities of Sellers.

Rule 144 places the responsibility for complying with all of the rule's applicable requirements on the proposed seller of securities pursuant to the rule. The seller is presumably the person most familiar with the facts relating to his purchase and ownership of the securities proposed to be sold and to his affiliate or non-affiliate status under the rule. The seller is, however, often not qualified to ascertain whether the rule is available and to satisfy each of the rule's sometimes rather technical requirements, as well as to satisfy the issuer's conditions for the transfer of the securities proposed to be sold n473 and the broker's requirements for effecting the transaction in compliance with Rule 144(f). n474 Formerly, the seller was virtually required to rely on counsel to shepherd the transaction through all of the procedures required by the rule, by the broker, by the issuer, and by the transfer agent. n475 While a proposed seller may still wish to consult counsel, especially for an atypical transaction or at the point where a stumbling block is encountered, normally an experienced broker will be able to effect the transaction with an experienced and cooperative issuer.

[b] Responsibilities of Sellers' Brokers.

In the absence of counsel for the seller, the broker will assume the primary responsibility for effecting the proposed sale of restricted securities or of control securities pursuant to Rule 144. Assuming it is willing and able to participate, the broker will cause the proposed seller to complete its standard form cover representation letter designed to indicate:

- the nature of the seller's relationship, if any, with the issuer;
- the restricted character of the securities;

- the period since the shares were last held by the issuer of any affiliate of the issuer (giving effect to any applicable tacking provisions where these are necessary); and
- any sales of securities of the same class during the preceding three months by the seller (after giving effect to any aggregation provisions and excluding any securities not required to be included in the calculation). n476

If the representation letter demonstrates that the securities may be sold free of all of the rule's requirements, (i.e., non-affiliate selling shares after holding the shares for a period of one year), the broker should contact the issuer to ensure that the issuer, upon receipt of the seller's representation letter, will instruct the transfer agent to process the transfer after the sale has been made and the duly executed certificates have been delivered. Since the purchasers will demand unlegended certificates, n477 the broker should not actually effect the sale until the issuer either delivers clean certificates or agrees to issue them to the purchaser promptly following completion of the transaction.

If the results of the seller's representation letter to the broker indicate that Rule 144 is available for the proposed sale, the broker will make any further investigation it feels appropriate to satisfy its Rule 144(g) responsibility to make reasonable inquiry as to whether the proposed sale will involve a distribution. n478 Where the rule appears available for the proposed sale, the broker should next contact the issuer to ascertain whether the issuer is current in its Exchange Act filings n479 and to obtain the factual information necessary to assist the seller to complete and file Form 144. n480 At that time, the broker should also verify exactly what documentation the issuer will require to instruct its transfer agent to process the transfer and deliver clean certificates to the purchaser.

Normally, the issuer will require the following documentation:

- a completed and executed copy of Form 144 and representation that copies were timely filed with the Commission and any required exchange;
- an executed copy of the seller's representation letter to the broker;
- a letter from the broker representing that the sale was completed either through a brokers' transaction in transactions directly with a market maker or in a riskless principal transaction, in each case in compliance with Rule 144(f); n481 and
- duly executed certificates representing the securities to be transferred to the purchaser.

The broker should confirm that no opinion of seller's counsel will be required and that upon delivery of the required documentation, the transfer agent will be instructed to complete the transfer and deliver clean certificates promptly to the purchasers.

Finally, the broker will request a letter from the proposed seller to effect that he or she has made no attempts to solicit buy orders in violation of Rule 144(f). After having done all of the above, the broker will:

- file Form 144 as required for the seller;
- either execute the sell order or itself purchase the securities from the seller; and
- deliver the required documents to the issuer or its transfer agent for processing and delivery of the securities to the Rule 144 purchaser of purchasers.

[c] Responsibilities of Issuers. When an issuer sells securities pursuant to one of the private offering exemptions from registration under the Securities Act, it is required to take steps to prevent the public resale of those securities including;

- obtaining investment representations from the purchaser;
- legending the certificates; and
- issuing stop transfer instructions to the issuer's transfer agent. n482

Although the obligations are more explicit in the case of restricted securities, issuers are also concerned about aiding and abetting the unlawful resale of unrestricted securities by their affiliates. n483 Accordingly, in both cases the issuers of restricted securities and control securities shoulder the burden of policing resales of their securities made pursuant to Rule 144. Generally, the form of that policing is that counsel for the issuer will:

- set the requirements for documentation required from the seller and his broker;
- review all of the documentation; and
- issue instructions (usually in the form of an opinion letter) to the issuer's transfer agent to proceed with the transfer and issuance of clean certificates to the Rule 144 purchaser of purchasers.

Of course, if the availability of the rule is not clear, the issuer (and its counsel) may refuse to effect the transfer in the absence of either a favorable interpretive letter from the staff of the Commission or a favorable opinion letter from counsel of substantial reputation for the seller.

[d] Responsibilities of Transfer Agents. Although the Exchange Act regulates transfer agents, n484 a transfer agent is essentially just that, a person performing a ministerial function pursuant to the issuer instructions. Except in the egregious case of an issuer participating in an unlawful distribution under the federal securities laws, a seller of securities under Rule 144 and his broker (and counsel, if any) should be unconcerned about the issuer's transfer agent, provided that the issuer instructs or agrees to instruct the transfer agent to effect the Rule 144 transfer and deliver the certificates in unrestricted form to the purchasers.

[10] Effects of Compliance with Rule 144

Rule 144 offers a safe harbor for the public resale of restricted securities and control securities under the resale exemption from registration contained in Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. Accordingly, if all of the applicable requirements of the rule are complied with by the seller and broker, the transaction is exempt from the registration and prospectus delivery requirements of Securities Act. In other words, a Rule 144 seller is not in violation of Section 5 of the Securities Act, the issuer is not in danger of losing a private offering exemption, n485 the broker is not in violation of the Securities Act and the purchaser receives freely tradeable securities under the Securities Act, n486 unless of course, the purchaser is an affiliate of the issuer of those securities.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. On November 29, 1967, because of the increasing number of privately offered securities and the growing uncertainty regarding the resale of both "letter" securities and control securities under the prevailing subjective standards used to determine whether the transaction involved a statutory underwriter and was therefore outside the resale exemption, the Commission created a study group to consider the situation. In March of 1969, that group headed by Commissioner Francis M. Wheat, published its findings and recommendations in what came to be called "the Wheat Report," SEC, Disclosures to Investors--A Reappraisal of Federal Administrative Policies Under the '33 and '34 Acts (the Wheat Report) (March 27, 1969).

In essence the Wheat Report called for a completely new set of rules for the resale of both restricted securities and control securities to provide greater certainty and to better effect the continuous disclosure purposes of the Act and the Exchange Act of 1934. Id. at 155. The securities bar generally agreed, calling upon the Commission to provide "greater certainty, predictability and consistency in applying and interpreting the 1933 Act." Carl W. Schneider and Robert S. Kant, Uncertainty Under the Securities Acts, 26 Bus. Law 1623, 1623 (1971). Accordingly, the Commission proposed and considered a number of rules to cover resales of restricted securities and resales by affiliates prior to arriving at the form of Rule 144 finally adopted.

For a more detailed discussion of the origins of Rule 144, see Dan Goldwasser, A Guide to Rule 144, 47-64 (2d ed. 1978). 1933 Act Rule 144 is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Part C (Matthew Bender 2008).

(n2)Footnote 2. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, [1971-1972 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,487 (Jan. 11, 1972).

(n3)Footnote 3. The purpose of the Commission in adopting the rule was clearly not to facilitate the sale of larger amounts of restricted securities, an effect perhaps desired by numerous securities law practitioners. See Background and Purpose, Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2; PLI, The SEC Speaks 111 (1972) (comments of Alan B. Levenson, then Director of the Division of Corporation Finance of the Commission).

(n4)Footnote 4. Rule 144(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Rule 144(a)(3). The 2007 amendments discussed herein added a new subparagraph (viii) to Rule 144(a)(3), which states that securities acquired in a transaction subject to exemption under Section 4(6) of the Securities Act are now part of the definition of restricted securities. Section 4(6) provides for an exemption from registration for an offering that does not exceed $5,000,000 that is made only to accredited investors, that does not involve any advertising or public solicitation by the issuer or anyone acting on the issuer's behalf and for which a Form D has been filed. See 15 U.S.C. 77d(6). Section 4(6) is discussed in § 4.06 supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. Id.; Rule 144(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 4.02 supra.

(n8)Footnote 8. The term "investor" will be used throughout this chapter to refer to a holder of outstanding securities who is not a dealer within the meaning of Section 2(12).

(n9)Footnote 9. If Section 4(1) is available to the selling investor because he is not an underwriter or an affiliate of the issuer, then the broker may normally rely on the brokers' transactions exemption contained in Section 4(4) or the dealer's exemption contained in Section 4(3). See § 4.03 supra. The Securities Act of 1933 is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Part B (Matthew Bender 2008).

For a definition of the term "brokers' transactions," see Rule 144(g) and § 6.05[6][b] infra. Although the broker is a dealer as that term is defined by Section 2(12), discussed in § 9.04 infra, that fact does not render the resale exemption unavailable to the selling investor despite the language of Section 4(1). David S. Ruder, Federal Restrictions on the Sale of Securities, 67 Nw. U. L. Rev. 1, 36 (Supp. 1972).

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 6.02[1] supra.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Section 2(11), discussed in § 4.02[2] supra, and analysis contained in § 6.04[3] supra .

(n12)Footnote 12. Stephen R. Volk & Carl W. Schneider, The Sale of Restricted Securities Outside of Rule 144, 8 Inst. Sec. Reg. 135-48 (1977).

(n13)Footnote 13. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-5223, n.2 supra at 80,629.

See Martin Lipton, Rule 144 Updated, N.Y. Law Journal, October 11, 1972, at 6, col.6, in which a highly respected securities lawyer indicated that a holding period of approximately five years would be necessary for resales of restricted securities under Section 4(1) outside Rule 144 (the Rule 144 holding period at that time was three years).

See, e.g., Vicon Fiber Optics Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2961 (October 25, 1982), an interpretive letter in which the staff refused to allow the resale of restricted securities held for ten years by a non-affiliate of the issuer.

(n14)Footnote 14. See analysis contained in § 6.02[3] supra .

(n15)Footnote 15. See generally §§ 6.07 and 6.08 infra .

(n16)Footnote 16. Rule 144(b).

(n17)Footnote 17. This text describes Rule 144 as it exists after the 2007 amendments. See § 6.05[1][d] infra.

(n18)Footnote 18. For discussion of the holding period requirement of Rule 144(d), see § 6.05[4] infra.

(n19)Footnote 19. Id.

(n20)Footnote 20. For discussion of the adequate current public information requirement of Rule 144 (c), see § 6.05[3] infra.

(n21)Footnote 21. For discussion of the volume limitation requirement of Rule 144(e), see § 6.05[5] infra.

(n22)Footnote 22. For discussion of the manner of sale requirement of Rule 144(f), see § 6.05[6] infra.

(n23)Footnote 23. For discussion of the notice of proposed sale requirement of Rule 144(h), see § 6.05[7] infra.

(n24)Footnote 24. Id.

(n25)Footnote 25. For discussion of the holding period requirement of Rule 144(d), see § 6.05[4] infra.

(n26)Footnote 26. Id.

(n27)Footnote 27. For discussion of the adequate current public information requirement of Rule 144 (c), see § 6.05[3] infra.

(n28)Footnote 28. For discussion of the manner of sale requirement of Rule 144(f), see § 6.05[6] infra.

(n29)Footnote 29. For discussion of the volume limitation requirement of Rule 144(e), see § 6.05[5] infra.

(n30)Footnote 30. Rule 144(d).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Section 2(11), discussed in § 4.02[2] supra, and § 6.02[1] supra .

(n32)Footnote 32. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6488, supra n.24. Section 4(1), and its availability (or non-availability) for restricted and control securities, is discussed in § 4.02 supra.

(n33)Footnote 33. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

(n34)Footnote 34. See Richard B. Smith, Fungibility, Tacking, and Registration Covenants. 3 Inst. Sec. Reg. 55, 75 (1972) (comments of Commissioner Philip A. Loomis, Jr.).

(n35)Footnote 35. Id. See also PLI, The SEC Speaks, n.3 supra at 111 (comments of Alan B. Levenson, then Director of the Commission's Division of Corporation Finance).

(n36)Footnote 36. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2

(n37)Footnote 37. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n38)Footnote 38. Id.

(n39)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Wright Air Lines, Inc.; SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3393 (June 23, 1980).

(n40)Footnote 40. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

(n41)Footnote 41. WCS International, SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2028 (January 12, 1979), in which the staff agreed that the safe harbor of the rule was available despite the possible adverse impact on the trading market.

(n42)Footnote 42. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2705H, Section I, Question 2 (August 2, 1979).

See also Buck-Man Electronics, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3170 (March 4, 1981).

(n43)Footnote 43. The Lehigh Press, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2667 (August 5, 1983); Victor Kellering, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3939 (August 27, 1981).

(n44)Footnote 44. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

(n45)Footnote 45. Id.

(n46)Footnote 46. Rule 144 interpretive letters are available on Lexis and Westlaw.

(n47)Footnote 47. One aspect of Rule 144 on which the staff will normally not comment is the affiliate or control status of a proposed seller because that determination involves a question of fact which it believes it is not in a position to resolve. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6253, P21 SEC Docket 320 (October 28, 1980). In addition, the staff will not provide advice respecting the removal of restrictive legends or the availability of Section 4(1) outside Rule 144 for the sale of restricted securities except for those securities acquired prior to April 15, 1972. Id.

(n48)Footnote 48. Rule 144(j). Although paragraph (j) was added by an amendment to Rule 144 that became effective on March 12, 1979, see Sec. Act Rel. No. 6032, [Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,992 (March 5, 1979), it did not change, but only clarified, the position of the Commission at the time of the rule's adoption. Sec. Act

Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

(n49)Footnote 49. See §§ 6.07 and 6.08 infra .

(n50)Footnote 50. See § 6.06[2] infra.

(n51)Footnote 51. See PLI, The SEC Speaks, n.3 supra at 114 (comments of Neal S. McCoy, then Chief Counsel of the Commission's Division of Corporation Finance, regarding the exclusive nature of Rule 144 for public sales by affiliate). In that regard, Rule 144 continued the Commission's policy as to resales by affiliates that was formerly reflected in Rule 154. Rule 154 was rescinded effective April 15, 1972.

(n52)Footnote 52. Rule 144(j).

(n53)Footnote 53. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

(n54)Footnote 54. Id. But see G. Eugene England Foundation v. First Federal Corp., 663 F.2d 988 (10th Cir. 1973) , in which the court endorsed the change of circumstances doctrine.

(n55)Footnote 55. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

At present, however, there is no doubt that a specified holding period in itself establishes the availability of the Section 4(1) exemption both outside and pursuant to Rule 144. See discussion of the introduction of Rule 144(k) in § 6.05[1][d] supra .

(n56)Footnote 56. See A. A. Sommer, Considerations Leading to the Adoption of Rule 144, 67 Nw. L. Rev. 65, 74 (Supp. 1972) .; see also Robert A. Barron, Some Comments on the Gift of Non-Restricted Securities by an Affiliate of the Issuer to a Non-Affiliate Donee, 35 Sec. Reg. L. J. 4 at pg. 2 (2007).

(n57)Footnote 57. For a discussion of the availability of the Section 4(1) resale exemption for resales of restricted securities outside Rule 144, see generally § 6.06[1] infra.

(n58)Footnote 58. Those amendments were promulgated by the following releases; Sec. Act Rel. No. 5307, [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,001 (September 26, 1972); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5452, [1973-1974 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,633 (February 1, 1974); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5560, [1975 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,066 (January 24, 1975); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5613, [1975-1976 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,293 (September 11, 1975); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5717, [1976-1977 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 80,601 (June 8, 1976); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5979, [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,731 (September 19, 1978); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5995, [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,759 (November 8, 1978); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6032, n.41 supra; Sec. Act Rel. No. 6180, [1979-1980 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 82,246 (January 17, 1980); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6286, [1981 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 82,821 (February 6, 1981); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6389, [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 83,106 (March 8, 1982); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6488, n.24 supra; Sec. Act Rel. No. 6862, [1989-1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,523 (April 23, 1990); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6874, [1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,622 (September 24, 1990); Sec. Act Rel. No. 7035, [1993-1994 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 85,307 (December 15, 1993); Sec. Act Rel. No. 7390 [Current Decisions] Fed. Sec. L. Rep (CCH) P 85,907 (February 20, 1997); Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n59)Footnote 59. See, e.g., paragraph (j) of Rule 144, which simply provides that the rule is not the exclusive means for reselling restricted securities or control securities without registration under the Act. That paragraph, added to Rule 144 effective March 12, 1979, by the amendment promulgated by Sec. Act Rel. No. 6032, supra n.41, simply confirmed the position on nonexclusivity taken by the Commission at the time the rule was originally adopted.

(n60)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Sec. Act Rel. No. 6389, supra n.51, that amended the definition of restricted securities to take account of the adoption of Regulation D and the rescission of Rules 240, 242 and 146.

(n61)Footnote 61. See the amendment to Rule 144 (g) contained in Sec. Act Rel. No. 5452, supra n.51.

(n62)Footnote 62. See the amendments to Rule 144(e) contained in Sec. Act Rel. Nos. 5452, 5613, 5717 and 5979, supra n.51.

(n63)Footnote 63. See the amendment to Rule 144(f) contained in Sec. Act Rel. No. 5979, supra n.51.

(n64)Footnote 64. See Rule 144(k), as amended effective October 31, 1983§ .

(n65)Footnote 65. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6862 [1989-1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,523 (April 23, 1990).

(n66)Footnote 66. Sec. Act Rel. No. 7390 [Current Decisions] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 85,907 (February 20, 1997).

(n67)Footnote 67. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n68)Footnote 68. Id.

(n69)Footnote 69. Id. at 79.

(n70)Footnote 70. Id.

(n71)Footnote 71. See § 6.05[1][a] supra.

(N72)Footnote 72. Id.

(n73)Footnote 73. See § 6.02[1] supra.

(n74)Footnote 74. Rule 144 is, of course, never available for sales by the issuer because Section 4(1) is available only for "transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer" (emphasis added).

(n75)Footnote 75. Rule 144 is available to all investors including a broker-dealer that is selling its own securities through another broker (but not those as to which it is issuer) in compliance with all of the rule's requirements.

See § 6.05[2][c][v] infra for limitations on the availability of the rule for broker-dealers.

In the case of restricted securities held through an employee stock plan, the plan trustee may rely on Rule 144 for sales made at the direction of a plan participant as if it were the participant. See Intergraph Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 583 (May 15, 2002).

(n76)Footnote 76. See § 6.02[4] supra.

(n77)Footnote 77. Rule 144(b).

(n78)Footnote 78. For an analysis of the meaning of the term "restricted securities," including the treatment of securities that do not fall within the literal definition of restricted securities but are treated as such, see § 6.03 supra.

(n79)Footnote 79. Rule 144(b).

(n80)Footnote 80. For an analysis of the meaning of the term "control securities," see § 6.04 supra.

(n81)Footnote 81. Id.

(n82)Footnote 82. Rule 144(b).

(n83)Footnote 83. Sec. Act Rel. No. 7187, 59 S.E.C. Docket 1630 (June 27, 1995).

(n84)Footnote 84. See, e.g., comment letter of ABA Section of Business Law, September 6, 1995.

(n85)Footnote 85. Sec. Act Rel. No. 7391, 63 SEC Docket 2082-69 (February 20, 1997).

(n86)Footnote 86. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813, 72 Fed. Reg. 36822 (July 5, 2007) .

(n87)Footnote 87. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813, 72 Fed. Reg. 36822 (July 5, 2007) .

(n88)Footnote 88. For example, the holding period would have been tolled for any period where the previous owner of the particular securities had held a "short position" or a put equivalent position. According to the Final Rule Release, if the new owner reasonably believed that there was no hedging by the previous owner there would be no tolling of the holding period. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n89)Footnote 89. See, e.g., Feldman, Weinstein and Smith LLP, Comment on Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813 (July 19, 2007); Securities Industry and Financial Markets Association, Comment on Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813 (Sept. 21, 2007); Richardson and Patel LLP, Comment on Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813 (Sept. 4, 2007).

(n90)Footnote 90. See American Bar Association Section of Business Law, Comment on Sec. Act Rel. 8813 (Sept. 6, 2007).

(n91)Footnote 91. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n92)Footnote 92. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

(n93)Footnote 93. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5306, [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,000 (September 26, 1972), at Section I, Illustration 1.

(n94)Footnote 94. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2705H (August 2, 1979), Section II(H), Question 84.

(n95)Footnote 95. Goldman Sachs & Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1995 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 540 (June 9, 1995).

(n96)Footnote 96. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 6099, supra n.34 at Section II(E), Question 41. See also discussion of earlier election theory abandoned by the staff in 1973, D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 77-79.

(n97)Footnote 97. Bio-Medical Sciences, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4238 (November 29, 1972).

The staff was apparently concerned that the investor's purchases of unrestricted securities may constitute a violation of Rule 10b-6 under the Exchange Act (since superseded by Regulation M under the Exchange Act), which prohibits purchases of securities by a person who is participating in a "distribution" of those securities. Since sales of securities pursuant to Rule 144 do not involve a "distribution" for the purposes of Section 2(11) of the Act, the staff's concern indicates that in its view the term "distribution" was otherwise defined for purposes of Rule 10b-6 under the Exchange Act. Shortly thereafter the staff took the position that sales of securities pursuant to Rule 144 would not be viewed as distributions for purposes of Exchange Act Rule 10b-6. General Electric Company, SEC No-Action Letter, 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 966 (May 21, 1975). When the Commission amended the volume limitations requirement of the rule to permit larger amounts of securities to be sold, however, it once again suggested that sales of securities in the larger amounts could involve a distribution for purposes of Exchange Act Rule 10b-6. This view is reiterated in the context of sales that are not "distributions" under the Securities Act pursuant to Rule 144A. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6806, [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,335, (October 25, 1988) at n.145.

(n98)Footnote 98. Smith Barney Shearson, SEC No-action Letter, 1994 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 594 (July 8, 1994).

(n99)Footnote 99. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.34 at Section II(H), n.94

An ordinary short sale is a sale of securities that the seller does not own, but will borrow from his broker. The usual purpose is to profit in a declining market. In the case of a short sale against the box, the seller usually wishes to hedge against a price decline in securities that he owns but does not wish to sell for one reason or another.

(n100)Footnote 100. See generally D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 76-77.

(n101)Footnote 101. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.34 at Section II(H), Question 80. See also Goldman Sachs & Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 974 (December 20, 1999); Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 at n. 90 and accompanying text (Dec. 17, 2007); SEC Division of Corporate Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations for Rule 144, Section 201.03 (April 2, 2007).

(n102)Footnote 102. Id. at Question 81; Shearson Hayden Stone Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2080 (January 22, 1979).

(n103)Footnote 103. Jesse M. Brill, Esq., SEC No-Action Letter, [1979-1980 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 82,431 (September 24, 1979) at Item 6.

(n104)Footnote 104. Goldman Sachs, SEC No-Action Letter, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 974 (December 20, 1999).

(n105)Footnote 105. See, e.g., Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.34 at Section II(H), n.31. Note that the options under consideration are listed, not over-the-counter, options.

(n106)Footnote 106. Id. at Section II(H), Questions 69 and 71(a). It should be noted that the staff's earlier position that the conditions of Rule 144 must be complied with by the affiliate both at the time of writing the option and at the time of its exercise has been abandoned.

(n107)Footnote 107. Id. at Question 70.

(n108)Footnote 108. Id. at Questions 70(b), 70(c), 70(d), 71(b) and 72.

(n109)Footnote 109. Id. at Question 70(c).

(n110)Footnote 110. Bear, Stearns and Co., Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 567 (April 4, 1991).

(n111)Footnote 111. The staff stated:

More particularly, the public information condition must be observed both when the put is purchased and exercised. In the case of a restricted security, the two-year [now one-year for non-reporting companies and six months for reporting companies] holding period requirement of Rule 144(d) must have been completed not later than the date the put is purchased. When the put is purchased, the number of securities covered by the option must be taken into account in the calculation of available volume under Rule 144(e).

Id.

(n112)Footnote 112. Id.

(n113)Footnote 113. Id.

(n114)Footnote 114. See § 6.05[1][a] supra.

(n115)Footnote 115. Section 4(1), discussed in § 4.02 supra, exempts only "transactions by and person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer" (emphasis added).

(n116)Footnote 116. Section 2(12), discussed in § 9.04 infra, defines the term "dealer" for purposes of Section 4(1) to include the broker that is acting as an agent for the seller.

(n117)Footnote 117. For further explanation, see § 6.02[1] supra.

(n118)Footnote 118. D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 76-77.

It should be noted, however, that Rule 144 is not technically available for the sale of underwriters' compensation securities because they are not restricted securities within the meaning of Rule 144(a)(3). See § 6.03[3][d][i] supra. It should also be noted that the staff of the Commission, nevertheless, regularly permits those resales pursuant to most of the conditions of the rule under certain usually present circumstances. See § 6.02[4][a] infra.

(n119)Footnote 119. Insilco Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1974 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2176 (May 2, 1974); Unicapital Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4485 (December 22, 1972).

(n120)Footnote 120. National Environmental Controls, SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4486 (December 26, 1972).

(n121)Footnote 121. Rule 144(a)(1) defines the phrase "affiliate of an issuer" to include a person that is controlled by such issuer.

(n122)Footnote 122. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(H), Question 83. See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 5306, supra n.71 at Section IV.

(n123)Footnote 123. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(H), Question 83.

(n124)Footnote 124. CIT Financial Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1826 (February 21, 1983).

(n125)Footnote 125. First Pennsylvania Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2334 (March 5, 1979). See also CBT Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2030 (October 6, 1975) and Winkelman Stores, SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1589 (April 13, 1972), in which controlled plans of the respective issuers were allowed to rely on Rule 144 for the sale of securities of that issuer.

(n126)Footnote 126. See James Fogelson, Rule 144--A Summary review, 37 Bus. Law. 1519, 1522 n.22 (1982). See also D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 72-74.

(n127)Footnote 127. The broker-dealer represented that individual affiliates of itself and its corporate parent were required to purchase securities of the parent through it as part of the parent's securities law compliance program, thereby creating the need to give the broker-dealer a way to resell such securities which had been purchased on margin. See The Charles Schwab Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 764 (June 7, 1991).

(n128)Footnote 128. 1933 Act Rule 144(b), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Part C (Matthew Bender 2008).

(n129)Footnote 129. See generally § 6.02[4] supra.

(n130)Footnote 130. See § 6.02[4][a] supra.

(n131)Footnote 131. See § 6.02[4][b] supra.

(n132)Footnote 132. See § 6.02[4][c] supra. It is important to note that the 2007 amendments to Rule 145 eliminated the presumptive underwriter provision except for when a party to a Rule 145 transaction is a shell company. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) ; § 6.02[4][c] supra .

(n133)Footnote 133. These offerings were previously not registered in reliance upon Sec. Act Rel. No. 4708, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) PP 1361-1363 (July 9, 1964).

(n134)Footnote 134. See discussion of Regulation S, which superseded Rel. 4708, at § 6.03[3][d][ix] supra .

(n135)Footnote 135. Sec. Act Rel. No. 7505, 66 SEC Docket 1069-1 (February 17, 1998).

(n136)Footnote 136. See § 6.02[4][a] supra.

(n137)Footnote 137. See § 6.02[4][b] n.79 and accompanying text supra and § 6.04[3][c] supra .

(n138)Footnote 138. Tucker Drilling Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3774 (November 26, 1979); Fluid Power Pump Company, SEC No-Action Letter, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2667 (December 16, 1976).

(n139)Footnote 139. International Income Property, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4064 (December 12, 1980). But see Reynolds Diversified Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3112 (December 1, 1982).

(n140)Footnote 140. Rule 144(c).

(n141)Footnote 141. See Sections 4(1), discussed in § 4.02 supra, and 2(11), discussed in § 4.02 supra. The Securities Act of 1933 is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Part B (Matthew Bender 2008).

(n142)Footnote 142. Wheat Report, supra n.1 at 178.

(n143)Footnote 143. Preamble of the Securities Act. See also Preliminary Note to Rule 144. The 2007 amendments to Rule 144 simplified the text of the Preliminary Note. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n144)Footnote 144. Wheat Report, supra n.1 at 178.

(n145)Footnote 145. Section 13(a) of the Exchange Act requires that all issuers with securities registered under Section 12 of that Act file with the Commission the following periodic reports:

- an annual report on Form 10-K (20-F for foreign issuers, with different reporting deadlines than those for Form 10-K), discussed in Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934 § 4.02[1], containing considerable information about the business, management, properties and securities of the issuer among other things, plus financial statements, within 90 days following the end of the fiscal year covered by the report (accelerated reporting deadlines have been phased in for certain filers: the deadline for "accelerated filers" is 75 days, and the deadline for "large accelerated filers" is 60 days. See Sec. Act Rel.

No. 8644, 70 Fed. Reg. 76626 (December 21, 2005)) ;

- quarterly reports on Form 10-Q (not required for foreign issuers), discussed supra at § 4.02[2], for each of the issuer's first three quarters, containing primarily financial statements, within 45 days following the end of each quarter (accelerated reporting deadlines have been phased in for certain filers: the deadline for accelerated filers is 40 days after the end of the fiscal quarter for issuers. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 8644, 70 Fed. Reg. 76626 (December 21, 2005)) ; and

- current reports on Form 8-K (6-K for foreign issuers), discussed supra at § 4.02[3], generally within four business days of the occurrence of specified events. The Forms under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Part H (Matthew Bender 2008). For further discussion of the reporting requirements pursuant to Section 13(a) of the Exchange Act, see Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 4.02 (Matthew Bender 2008).

(n146)Footnote 146. Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act requires that all issuers that have filed a registration statement pursuant to the Securities Act, which has become effective, file those periodic reports required by Section 13 of the Exchange Act during the fiscal year within which the registration statement became effective and thereafter, for so long thereafter as there are 300 or more holders of record of those securities that were the subject of that registration statement under the Securities Act. The reporting requirements of Section 15(d), discussed supra at § 4.02 are inapplicable to issuers that already have securities registered under Section 12 of the Exchange Act.

(n147)Footnote 147. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Questions 14 and 16, especially the accompanying illustrations. At the time it adopted Rule 144, the Commission also adopted amendments to Forms 10-K and 10-Q requiring issuers to provide such information on the cover pages of those reports. See Sec. Exc. Act Rels. 9442 and 9443 [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,486 (January 10, 1972); See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n148)Footnote 148. Johnson, Swanson & Barbee, SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3962 (November 24, 1980), correcting Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Questions 14 and 15.

(n149)Footnote 149. Andros Analyzers, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2550 (July 1, 1983).

(n150)Footnote 150. See, e.g., Mentor Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 2008 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 565 (September 26, 2008); Shire Pharmaceuticals Group Plc and Shire Plc, SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 790 (November 17, 2005); Royal Dutch Shell, SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 604 (May 17, 2005); INDRESCO, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1995 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 789 (October 31, 1995). Par Pharmaceutical, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 803 (June 19, 1991); Adolph Coors Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 605 (March 30, 1990).

(n151)Footnote 151. See, e.g., Oncothyreon Inc. and Biomira Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (January 31, 2008); Southwestern Energy Company, SEC No-Action Letter, 2006 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 527 (June 29, 2006); Mercer International Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 832 (December 12, 2005); Varsity Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1190 (October 15, 1991); Clothestime Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 710 (May 16, 1991); International Movie Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 57 (January 14, 1991).

(n152)Footnote 152. See, e.g., Ashland Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 669 (August 8, 2005); Ramtrons Holdings Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1277 (November 19, 1991).

(n153)Footnote 153. See SEC Staff Legal Bulletin No. 4 (CF), Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P60,002, (September 16, 1997) (outlines the segment data that must be included). While Staff Legal Bulletin No. 4 specifically addresses spin-offs, the policy set out in the Bulletin also applies to separations of businesses effected by means other than spin-offs. United States Steel, SEC No-Action Letter, 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 853 (December 28, 2001). For transactions prior to issuance of that Bulletin in which the staff concluded that an 90-day waiting period was not required and in which the spun off operations had been separately reported as segments, see, e.g., Electronic Data Systems Holding Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1996 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 450 (April 29, 1996); Willcox & Gibbs, SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 904 (September 1, 1992); Johnson Controls, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1087 (September 13, 1991); Whitman Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 582 (April 4, 1991); Santa Fe Pacific Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1105 (September 11, 1990); Tyler Three, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 614 (March 30, 1990).

By contrast, the staff has imposed the 90-day waiting period where the distribution entity had not provided "extensive segment-like financial and narrative reporting" of the spun off operations. VWR Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 292 (February 7, 1990); see also Church Loans & Investment Trust, SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 544 (March 16, 1990).

(n154)Footnote 154. See The Walt Disney Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1996 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 176 (February 9, 1996); The Horn & Hardart Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 776 (June 18, 1993); Avantor Financial Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 575 (March 29, 1990).

(n155)Footnote 155. I.C.H. Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 528 (April 14, 1997). But see text accompanying n.166 infra (regarding whether filings by such companies are "current").

(n156)Footnote 156. See Del Webb Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 254 (February 26, 1992); Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 380 (March 5, 1993).

(n157)Footnote 157. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Question 16.

(n158)Footnote 158. Id.

(n159)Footnote 159. Equinox Solar, Inc., No-Action Letter, 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 550 (March 31, 1989); Tidal Marine International Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3128 (August 21, 1972).

(n160)Footnote 160. See Rule 12b-25 under the Exchange Act concerning a registrant's inability to timely file any required information, document, or report. See also SEC Division of Corporate Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations for Rule 144, Question 107.02 (April 2, 2007).

(n161)Footnote 161. A reporting issuer may not satisfy the adequate current public information requirement of Rule 144 by providing the information called for by paragraph (c)(2) of Rule 144. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Questions 15 and 18.

(n162)Footnote 162. Love Oil Co. Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1978 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2335 (December 14, 1978).

(n163)Footnote 163. American Nuclear Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2902 (July 31, 1972).

(n164)Footnote 164. See, e.g., Jetco, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1608 (August 11, 1975); Digital Information Devices, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1470 (April 12, 1972).

(n165)Footnote 165. Advanced Computer Techniques Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS

2836 (September 23, 1983). See also Minstar, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2797 (September 8, 1983).

(n166)Footnote 166. SEC Staff Legal Bulletin No. 2 (CF), Fed. Sec L. Rep. (CCH) P60,002, (April 15, 1997).

(n167)Footnote 167. Under the circumstances, it is now commonplace and certainly advisable for purchasers of securities in private offerings to require the issuer to agree to register under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act of 1934 and to timely file the required periodic reports in time to assure the availability of Rule 144 by the end of the six month holding period required by Rule 144(d).

(n168)Footnote 168. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Questions 17 and 18.

(n169)Footnote 169. See §§ 6.05[3][b][i] and [ii] supra.

(n170)Footnote 170. Anitec Image Technology Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1986 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1722 (February 10, 1986); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Question 17.

See also Andros Analyzers, Inc., supra n.149; Great American Management and Investment, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 878 (August 17, 1992).

It should be noted, however, that if an issuer, in compliance with paragraph (c)(2) of Rule 144 through voluntarily having made the specified information publicly available, subsequently files a registration statement, it may no longer rely upon paragraph (c)(2) of the Rule and must wait until the 91st day after the effective date of that registration statement. Johnson, Swanson & Barbee, supra n.148.

(n171)Footnote 171. See, e.g., Evergood Products Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2721 (November 21, 1977); Tender Care, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1760 10318 (September 8, 1975); Educational Technology, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1081 (May 17, 1976).

Paragraph (a)(4) of Exchange Act Rule 15c2-11 specifies the information:

(i) The exact name of the issuer and its predecessor (if any); (ii) the address of its principal executive offices; (iii) the state of incorporation, if it is a corporation; (iv) the exact title and class of security; (v) the par or stated value of the security; (vi) the number of shares or total amount of the securities outstanding as of the end of the issuer's most recent fiscal year; (vii) the name and address of the transfer agent; (viii) the nature of the issuer's business; (ix) the nature of products or services offered; (x) the nature and extent of the issuer's facilities; (xi) the name of the chief executive officer and members of the board of directors; (xii) the issuer's most recent balance sheet and profit and loss and retained earnings statements; (xiii) similar financial information for such part of the 2 preceding fiscal years as the issuer or its predecessor has been in existence; (xiv) whether the broker or dealer or any associated person is affiliated, directly or indirectly, with the issuer; ... and (xvi) whether the quotation is being submitted or published directly or indirectly on behalf of the issuer, or any director, officer or any person, directly or indirectly, the beneficial owner of more than 10 percent of the outstanding units or shares of any equity security of the issuer, and, if so, the name of such person, and the basis for any exemption under the federal securities laws for any sales of such securities on behalf of such person.

(n172)Footnote 172. Section 12(g)(2)(G)(i) of the Exchange Act, discussed in § 7.04 supra, specifies only an annual statement in the form required by the state agency regulating the particular insurance company.

(n173)Footnote 173. Rule 144(c)(2). See, e.g., Arlington TeleCommunications Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2372 (May 3, 1982) and Computel Systems, Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter, 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 82 (July 2, 1973).

But see Energy Minerals Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3377 (September 8, 1972), in which the staff deemed the requirements of Rule 144(c)(2) satisfied by substantially all, rather than all, of the specified information.

(n174)Footnote 174. See, e.g., FilmTec Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2605 (January 3, 1980).

(n175)Footnote 175. Unicorn Oil and Development, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2678 (August 15, 1983); Scientific Energy Systems Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2992 (July 2, 1973).

(n176)Footnote 176. See, e.g., Reeves Southeastern Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, z 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3596 (May 25, 1981) (five years of audited annual and quarterly reports); FilmTec Corp., supra n.174 (audited annual and unaudited quarterly reports).

(n177)Footnote 177. SEC Division of Corporate Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations for Rule 144, Section 108.02 (April 2, 2007). Unicorn Oil and Development, supra n.175; American Home Shield Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1907 (September 15, 1975). But see Donut Kastle, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2945 (June 25, 1973) and Lucky Friday Extension Mining Company, SEC No-Action Letter, 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1950 (April 5, 1973), two early instances in which the staff decided that unaudited financial statements were insufficient.

(n178)Footnote 178. Classic Mining Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3410 (April 16, 1981); American Home Shield Corp. supra n.177. Cf. the "reasonably current" information requirement of Rule 144A(d)(4)(ii), discussed at § 6.07 infra.

(n179)Footnote 179. See Rule 15c2-11(g)(1) and (2) under the Exchange Act concerning these presumptions.

(n180)Footnote 180. See, e.g., American Uranium Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3453 (April 27, 1981).

(n181)Footnote 181. See ANADAC, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 671 (March 15, 1990). Public availability of information is discussed in § 6.05[3][c][ii] infra.

(n182)Footnote 182. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Question 20.

(n183)Footnote 183. See, e.g., FilmTec Corp., supra n.174.

(n184)Footnote 184. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Question 20 (Illustration).

(n185)Footnote 185. Reeves Southeastern Corporation, supra n.176. It should be noted that a foreign issuer must provide the required information to United States market makers and financial services, as well as those in the country of its domicile. Grove Explorations Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3413 (April 20, 1981).

(n186)Footnote 186. The Cannon Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3852 (October 27, 1980).

(n187)Footnote 187. Rule 144(c)(1).

(n188)Footnote 188. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(C), Question 19.

But see American Home Shield Corp., supra n.177, representing a view now reversed by the Commission.

(n189)Footnote 189. Rule 144(§ b)(1)(i).

(n190)Footnote 190. Prior to the 2007 amendments, Section 12 of the Exchange Act, reprinted in The Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Section F (Matthew Bender), required the registration of all securities traded on a national securities exchange, Section 12(b) (discussed in § 7.04 infra), and all equity securities of issuers that had total assets exceeding three million dollars and five hundred or more holders of record of those equity securities, Section 12(g)(1), discussed in § 7.04 infra, and Rule 12g-1, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Section G (Matthew Bender).

(n191)Footnote 191. See § 6.05[4] infra.

(n192)Footnote 192. Rule 144(d)(1). The original holding period was two years, which was reduced in 1997 to one year. Sec. Act Rel. No. 7390 [current decisions] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 85,907 (February 20, 1997). Since the rule is available for specific restricted securities (they are no longer being regarded as fungible), an investor who acquired restricted securities at different times must be able to trace all of his securities to the date upon which each were last held by the issuer or an affiliate to ascertain whether two years have elapsed. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 21.

(n193)Footnote 193. As explained in § 6.04 supra, where an affiliate transfers unrestricted securities to donee or beneficiary in a private nonsale transaction, that donee or beneficiary may acquire unrestricted securities despite the language of Rule 144(a)(3). That donee or beneficiary, however, may be deemed an affiliate for purposes of any resale of those securities for as long as the affiliate transferor remains an affiliate. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), Question 9; § 6.03[3][b] ns.59-61 and accompanying text and § 6.04[4] n.42 and accompanying text supra. In such cases, the holding period requirement of Rule 144 is not applicable to the sale of those securities by a donee or beneficiary. Gannett Co., Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4042 (December 5, 1980). The SEC has also stated that the holding period requirement is not applicable to sale upon foreclosure by an affiliate pledgor, although on apparently different reasoning. First Bank System, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 777 (July 30, 1997) (discussed at n.269 infra).

(n194)Footnote 194. See § 6.02[1] supra.

(n195)Footnote 195. See language of Sections 2(11) and 4(1), discussed in § 4.02 supra.

(n196)Footnote 196. Preliminary Note to Rule 144.

(n197)Footnote 197. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6806, [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,355 (October 25, 1988).

(n198)Footnote 198. Rule 144(d)(1).

(n199)Footnote 199. See, e.g., the Commission's discussion of the term "beneficial ownership" for purposes of Section 16 of the Exchange Act, concerning the disclosure requirements of corporate insiders and short-swing trading, contained in Exch. Act Rel. No. 28,869, [1990-1991 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,709 (February 8, 1991).

(n200)Footnote 200. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 23. See also Digitech, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 693 (February 3, 1989).

(n201)Footnote 201. Id. See also Hadron, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2995 (November 12, 1982), where the holding period was deemed to commence on the date the securities should have been delivered, but were not because of an inadvertent error.

(n202)Footnote 202. See John D. Elliott SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 893 (June 11, 1990); Societe Generale, SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1219 (October 30, 1990).

(n203)Footnote 203. See, e.g., DNA Medical Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2783 (September 12, 1983) (effective date of merger agreement); Gearhart-Owen Industries, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3474 (July 18, 1980) (date disappearing corporation received securities to be distributed to its shareholders).

(n204)Footnote 204. General Maritime Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 606 (June 14, 2002), where the plan of reorganization provided for escrow accounts for various purposes, including indemnity and price adjustment.

(n205)Footnote 205. Hesse & Jones, SEC No-Action Letter, 1996 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 928 (December 13, 1996); International Institute of Applied Technology, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1827 (February 21, 1983).

(n206)Footnote 206. Vicon Fiber Optics, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 604 (March 30, 1990); Onyx-IMI, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2747 (September 6, 1982).

See also staff comments in Zenex Synthetic Lubricants, SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3172 (March 5, 1981).

(n207)Footnote 207. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 22. See also Intergraph Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 583 (May 15, 2002).

(n208)Footnote 208. Id.

(n209)Footnote 209. Monsanto Company, SEC No-Action Letter (July 8, 1983).

(n210)Footnote 210. Rule 144(d)(1).

(n211)Footnote 211. If the purchaser pays for the restricted securities with cash, they are fully paid for purposes of Rule 144(d)(2) even if that cash was borrowed from a bank or other person unrelated to the issuer and the securities are pledged as collateral for the repayment of the loan. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.35 at Section II(D), Question 25. Securities may not be deemed paid for where the purchase is financed by a person who is, or who becomes at the same time, an affiliate of the issuer. See Clinical Technologies Associates, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1355 (December 10, 1991); Psychomedics Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1259 (November 12, 1991).

(n212)Footnote 212. Rule 144(d)(2).

(n213)Footnote 213. See, e.g., Rollins, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3721 (September 26, 1980).

(n214)Footnote 214. See, e.g., MCI Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2617 (January 3, 1980).

(n215)Footnote 215. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 27.

(n216)Footnote 216. Id.

(n217)Footnote 217. Each time an installment payment is made a pro rata portion of the securities purchased is fully paid, as illustrated by Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 28 (Illustration);

Bio-Response, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4155 (October 29, 1981).

(n218)Footnote 218. Bourns, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1974 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1355 (January 28, 1974).

(n219)Footnote 219. Mosteck Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4297 (November 23, 1981).

(n220)Footnote 220. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Question 21.

(n221)Footnote 221. See, e.g., Ultrasystems, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4455 (December 30, 1981).

(n222)Footnote 222. Rule 144(d)(3)(i). See, e.g., Associated Communications Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2710 (August 18, 1983). For an analysis of when securities received as dividends or in stock splits are restricted securities, see § 6.03[3][d][vi] supra.

(n223)Footnote 223. Shearson Hayden Stone, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2335 (March 2, 1979). See also Elliott Associates, SEC No-Action Letter, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 43 (January 18, 1999).

(n224)Footnote 224. Warburg, Pincus Investors, L.P., SEC No-Action Letter, 1996 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 716 (September 4, 1996).

(n225)Footnote 225. Rule 144(d)(3)(i). See, e.g., Roper Industries, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2007 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 535 (July 19, 2007); Tele-communications, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2152 (April 11, 1983) and Universal Health Services, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2506 (June 12, 1982).

For an analysis of under what circumstances securities issued in unregistered recapitalizations are restricted securities, see generally §§ 6.03[3][d][iii], and [3][d][iv] supra.

(n226)Footnote 226. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 35; D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 245-47.

(n227)Footnote 227. Rule 144(d)(3)(ii).

(n228)Footnote 228. Shelter Resources Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2954 (October 29, 1982) (less than forty percent of the relevant securities were involved); Southeast SBIC, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1262 (May 16, 1977).

(n229)Footnote 229. See, e.g., M-Wave, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 886 (July 30, 1993).

(n230)Footnote 230. James River Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1985 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2678 (August 29, 1985).

(n231)Footnote 231. Nuclear Dynamics, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3621 (October 24, 1979).

(n232)Footnote 232. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 5306, [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,000 (September 26, 1972).

(n233)Footnote 233. See Roper Industries, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2007 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 535 (July 19, 2007); The Presley Companies, SEC No-Action Letter 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 475 (March 30, 1992); Equitable Resources, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2007 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 459 (April 25, 2007); Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6806, n.197 supra, (1988) at n.209; Morgan, Olmstead, Kennedy & Gardner Capital Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1988 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 6 (January 8, 1988). The Commission has proposed codifying its position on tacking with respect to the formation of holding companies in a new rule. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7391 [current decisions] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 85,908 (1997). See also Biospecifics Technology Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1036 (November 13, 1992) (Delaware holding company stock exchanged for substantially all shares of two operating companies, a New York corporation and a Netherlands Antilles corporation).

(n234)Footnote 234. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813, 72 Fed. Reg. 36822 (July 5, 2007) .

(n235)Footnote 235. Rule 144(d)(3)(ix)

(n236)Footnote 236. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n237)Footnote 237. Oncothyreon Inc. and Biomira Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2008 WL 310587 (January 31, 2008); Southwestern Energy Company, SEC No-Action Letter, 2006 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 527 (June 29, 2006); Agristar, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 250 (February 6, 1990); Sec. Act. Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Question 35.

(n238)Footnote 238. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n239)Footnote 239. See RehabClinics, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 411 (March 12, 1993) (tacking denied to holders of company, which was formed to avoid legal problems of predecessor company and which then merged with predecessor company, based on the differing levels of investment risk); Urcarco, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 278 (February 6, 1990) (notes exchanged for stock and private placement conducted simultaneously with holding company formation); New Golf Concepts, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 220 (February 6, 1990) (public offering conducted at same time); Pinnacle Environmental, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 34 (January 17, 1990) (holding company purchased real property by issuing stock before it acquired two operating companies); Costilla Energy, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 540 (April 18, 1997) (tacking denied upon conversion of limited liability company into a corporation). But see Biospecifics Technology Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1036 (November 13, 1992) (public offering contemplated before and commenced six months after exchange).

(n240)Footnote 240. See The ARA Group, SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1318 (December 19, 1990).

(n241)Footnote 241. Peapod, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 999 (November 10, 1997); Hygeia Sciences, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1986 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1897 (March 13, 1986); see also SEC Division of Corporate Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations for Rule 144, Section 112.01 (April 2, 2007). Where the partnership agreement grants the general partner the right to make the decision to convert into a corporation, the limited partners may tack their partnership interest holding period to their holding period for the corporation shares, but the general partner's holding period for the shares starts on the date of succession. Juno Online Services, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 906 (November 17, 1999). In the context of limited liability companies, see Cravath, Swaine, & Moore, 2000 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 141 (February 11, 2000); Texas Roadhouse, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 654 (July 28, 2005); Smart Move, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2007 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 479 (May 16, 2007) (staff rejected request to tack holding period of LLC ownership interests despite amended operating agreement arguably contemplating transfer to a corporation); Banc of America Investors, L.P., SEC No-Action Letter, 2004 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 376 (February 25, 2004).

(n242)Footnote 242. The Petersen Companies, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1998 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 892 (July 16, 1998); MarkWest Hydrocarbon, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 466 (March 25, 1997).

(n243)Footnote 243. 1933 Act Rule 144(d)(3)(ii), reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Part C

(Matthew Bender 2008).

(n244)Footnote 244. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 36; Technology funding Secured Investors II, SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 912 (July 23, 1991); Northrop Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 765 (June 6, 1991) (exercise of warrants); Radyne Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 227 (February 6, 1990) (exchange of old debentures for new debentures or new debentures plus stocks); Mr. Coffee, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 766 (June 6, 1991) (exchange of preferred stock for common); Sports/Leisure, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 922 (September 11, 1992).

Additional consideration of no value, however, will not cause a loss of the tacking benefit. Ford Foundation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2550 (June 25, 1982).

(n245)Footnote 245. Energy Exchange Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2838 (September 26, 1983).

(n246)Footnote 246. Sec. Act Rel. No. 7391 [current decisions] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 85,908 (February 20, 1997).

(n247)Footnote 247. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813, 72 Fed. Reg. 36822 (July 5, 2007) .

(n248)Footnote 248. Gentiva Health Services, Inc. and Gentiva Trust, SEC No-Action Letter, 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 672 (July 27, 2001); Bairnco Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2785 (July 27, 1981).

(n249)Footnote 249. Specialized Systems, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2267 (April 25, 1983).

(n250)Footnote 250. See, e.g., Vanguard Cellular Systems, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1017 (August 20, 1991); Attwoods plc, SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 150 (January 28, 1991). Holders may tack their holding periods for the exchanged obligations even if the guarantee was not established until after the issue date of the exchanged obligations. See Verio Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 551 (May 25, 1999). Tacking was denied where the obligations of the subsidiary were not guaranteed by the parent making the exchange offer. See Taro Vit Industries Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1219 (June 13, 1991).

(n251)Footnote 251. See Auto Finance Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1313 (December 3, 1991).

(n252)Footnote 252. Rule 144(d)(3)(iii). See, e.g., Medeva PLC, SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1145 (December 10, 1993); T-G Enterprises, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2231 (April 1, 1982); Electronic Data Technologies, SEC No-Action Letter, 1989 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 832 (July 13, 1989).

(n253)Footnote 253. The three others are paragraphs (d)(3)(v), (vi), and (vii) of Rule 144, discussed in § 6.05[4][c][v], [vi] and [vii] infra.

(n254)Footnote 254. If the pledgee accepts restricted securities from the issuer in a pledge transaction, the tacking benefit is not available, Rule 144(d)(3)(iv); and the pledgee's independent holding period will commence upon his assuming the full economic risk of loss, normally at the time funds equal to or greater than the value of the pledged securities are advanced, Tokyu Building, Inc., PSEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2505 (June 11, 1982). Since a subsidiary of an issuer is viewed as the issuer for purposes of the availability of Rule 144, see § 6.05[2][c][vi] supra, it is likely that a pledgee who acquires restricted securities from a subsidiary of their issuer will be treated as having received them from the issuer and therefore, unable to benefit from the Rule 144(d)(3)(iv) tacking provision.

(n255)Footnote 255. The method of acquisition need not be foreclosure; realization of shares pursuant to a workout agreement in lieu of foreclosure may also result in a pledgee-bank tacking its holding period with that of the pledgor. Bankers Trust New York Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1995 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 517 (May 16, 1995).

(n256)Footnote 256. Rule 144(d)(3)(iv).

(n257)Footnote 257. Puritan Investors Corp., [Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,920 (July 5, 1974). Cf. Internal Revenue Service, SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3125 (August 21, 1972).

(n258)Footnote 258. SEC v. Guild Films Co., 279 F.2d 485, 489 (2d Cir. 1960) , cert. denied subnom Santa Monica Bank v. SEC, 364 U.S. 819 (1960) .

(n259)Footnote 259. Rule 144(d)(3)(iv).

(n260)Footnote 260. Id.; Valicenti Leighton Reid & Pine, SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1604 (April 14, 1972). It should also be noted that where a pledgor pledged restricted securities to secure a note, and the securities were there after reacquired by the pledgor after paying the note, the pledgor was deemed to have held the securities since his original acquisition. He was not treated as a new purchaser. Chemex Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2998 (November 12, 1982).

(n261)Footnote 261. Jack H. Bookey, SEC No-Action Letter, 1973 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2644 (June 4, 1973).

(n262)Footnote 262. Id.

(n263)Footnote 263. See § 6.05[4][b] supra.

(n264)Footnote 264. See § 6.03[4] supra.

(n265)Footnote 265. See § 6.03[3] supra.

(n266)Footnote 266. See Rule 144(a)(3), discussed in § 6.03 supra.

(n267)Footnote 267. See § 6.03[3][a] supra.

(n268)Footnote 268. Rubin v. United States, 449 U.S. 424, (1981) ; SEC v. Guild Films Co., supra n.227 . See also SEC Division of Corporate Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations for Rule 144, Question 109.03 (April 2, 2007).

(n269)Footnote 269. First Bank System, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1997 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 777 (July 30, 1997).

(n270)Footnote 270. It should be noted that where an affiliate donates unrestricted securities in a private transaction, those securities do not become restricted securities in the hands of the donee despite the literal language of Rule 144(a)(3). See § 6.03[3][b] supra.

(n271)Footnote 271. If the donee receives restricted securities from the issuer, the tacking benefit is not available. Rule 144(d)(3)(v). That donee is in the same position, therefore, as a purchaser of restricted securities. Also, since a subsidiary of an issuer is viewed as that issuer for purposes of the availability of Rule 144, see § 6.05[2][c][vi] supra, it is likely that a donee who receives restricted securities from a subsidiary of the issuer will be treated as having received them from the issuer and therefore unable to benefit from the Rule 144(d)(3)(v) tacking provision.

(n272)Footnote 272. See, e.g., R. E. Turner and the Turner Foundation, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 489 (March 19, 1993); John J. Moores and the Moores Foundation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 991 (August 14, 1991).

(n273)Footnote 273. Rule 144(d)(3)(v).

(n274)Footnote 274. See, e.g., Chemed Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2204 (April 15, 1983). See generally D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 274-76.

(n275)Footnote 275. Rule 144(d)(3)(vi).

(n276)Footnote 276. Jesse M. Brill, supra n. 103 at Item 4; Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 31.

But see Chesapeake Corporation of Virginia, SEC No-Action Letter, 1978 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1964 (October 6, 1978).

(n277)Footnote 277. Schlumberger, Ltd., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2769 (February 11, 1980).

(n278)Footnote 278. Rule 144(d)(3)(vi) relates to restricted securities acquired from the settlor of that trust only.

(n279)Footnote 279. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 31.

(n280)Footnote 280. Rule 144(d)(3)(vi).

(n281)Footnote 281. Rule 144(d)(3)(vii).

(n282)Footnote 282. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 32.

(n283)Footnote 283. Id.

(n284)Footnote 284. See Rule 144(a)(1) for the definition of the term "affiliate of the issuer." For an analysis of when an estate is such an affiliate, see § 6.04 supra.

(n285)Footnote 285. Rule 144(d)(3)(vii).

(n286)Footnote 286. McDonald & Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2487 (June 24, 1983).

(n287)Footnote 287. SEC Division of Corporate Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations for Rule 144, Question 109.04 (April 2, 2007); Gemco National, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3128 (December 8, 1982).

(n288)Footnote 288. Virginia National Bank, SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3767 (October 2, 1980).

(n289)Footnote 289. Rule 144(d)(3)(viii); § 6.02[4][c] supra . But see JPMorgan Chase & Co., SEC No-Action Letter (March 17, 2008) (based on the "extraordinary circumstances" the staff did not recommend enforcement action if JPMorgan sold Bear Stearns securities prior to the execution of the merger agreement with JPMorgan without compliance with Rule 144 for a limited time). See discussion in § 6.02[4][c] supra.

(n290)Footnote 290. See discussion in &§ 6.05[4][c][i] supra .

(n291)Footnote 291. See § 6.05[4][c][i] supra.

(n292)Footnote 292. See The ARA Group, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1318 (December 19, 1990). See also Aether Systems, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 558 (April 26, 2005); J.P. Morgan Capital Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1087 (December 4, 1992).

(n293)Footnote 293. See Rule 144(d)(1) and § 6.05[4][b][i] supra .

(n294)Footnote 294. See Rule 144(a)(2)(i).

(n295)Footnote 295. Van Dusen Air Incorporated, SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4130 (October 26, 1981); Jesse E. Brill, supra n.103 at Item 7.

(n296)Footnote 296. Citizens and Southern Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 4257 (November 16, 1981).

(n297)Footnote 297. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 33.

(n298)Footnote 298. Physica B.V. and Solvay S.A., SEC No-Action Letter, 2003 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 525 (April 8, 2003); CompleTel Europe N.V., SEC No-Action Letter, 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 698 (August 20, 2001); Borg-Warner Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1251 (November 7, 1991).

(n299)Footnote 299. See, e.g., Worthington Industries, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3394 (June 23, 1980). Similarly, where no shift in the risk of loss respecting the restricted securities occurs, tacking is permitted where they are transferred:

- from one partnership to another, Robert R. Barker & Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2488 (June 20, 1983);
- from a partnership to a corporation, Convergent Technologies, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2211 (March 23, 1982); or
- from a corporation to a partnership, J. H. Foster & Co. Ltd. Partnership, SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3015 (March 17, 1980).

(n300)Footnote 300. Walnut Street Capital Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2489 (June 17, 1983); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 33(a).

(n301)Footnote 301. For examples of rather unique situations where the staff permitted tacking under this reasoning, see Micron Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1632 (January 17, 1983) and Concord Fabrics, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2203 (April 11, 1983).

(n302)Footnote 302. For a discussion of spin-offs and liquidating distributions, see generally § 6.03[3][d][vii] supra.

(n303)Footnote 303. Id.

(n304)Footnote 304. See, e.g., Triad Guaranty, Inc. and Collateral Investment Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 686 (August 12, 2005); Ashland Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2005 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 669 (August 08, 2005); TB&C Bancshares, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 664 (July 25, 2001) (shareholders receiving shares which were primarily asset of company permitted to tack); Hale & Dorr, SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 780 (June 12, 1991) (limited partners receiving distributions of restricted securities from partnership portfolio permitted to tack); First Southern Capital Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act.

LEXIS 2230 (April 1, 1982) (shareholder who acquired restricted securities in an ordinary spin-off permitted to tack) and Intercontinental Industries, Inc..

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 34(b).

(n305)Footnote 305. See Lee Data Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2834 (September 26, 1983).

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 34, n.11.

(n306)Footnote 306. International Clinical Laboratories, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2746 (August 20, 1982).

(n307)Footnote 307. See SEC Division of Corporation Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations on Rule 144 (Updated April 2, 2007), at Section 212 (Rule 144(d)(3)), Interpretation No. 212.01.

(n308)Footnote 308. See § 6.03[3][d][iii] supra.

(n309)Footnote 309. St. Ives Holding Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1987 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2250 (July 22, 1987).

(n310)Footnote 310. §§ 6.05[4][c][ix], [x] and [xi] supra.

(n311)Footnote 311. Rule 144(d)(3).

(n312)Footnote 312. Communications Investment Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3811 (October 14, 1980).

(n313)Footnote 313. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n314)Footnote 314. Rule 144(e).

(n315)Footnote 315. Rule 144(e)(1).

(n316)Footnote 316. Rule 144(e)(3)(vii); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), § Question 41.

(n317)Footnote 317. See Sections 4(1), discussed in § 4.02 supra, and 2(11), discussed in § 4.02[2] supra.

(n318)Footnote 318. Ira Haupt & Co., 23 S.E.C. 589, 597-98 , P(August 20, 1946). See also Rule 154, supra n.44.

(n319)Footnote 319. This interpretation is commonly referred to as the presumptive underwriter doctrine. For further information about that informal (and now defunct) doctrine, see § 6.02[4][b] supra.

(n320)Footnote 320. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, supra n.2.

(n321)Footnote 321. Preliminary note to previous Rule 144 prior.

(n322)Footnote 322. The relevant three month period is three full calendar months ending on the date of sale such as, for example, January 16 through April 15. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 37.

(n323)Footnote 323. Rule 144(e)(1)(i).

(n324)Footnote 324. Trust Company of Georgia, SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2027 (January 11, 1979).

(n325)Footnote 325. D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 300. Subsequent to the 2007 amendments, this is now only applicable to affiliates of the issuer.

(n326)Footnote 326. See Kyocera Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 662 (March 30, 1990).

(n327)Footnote 327. Rule 144(e)(1)(ii) and (iii); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 38.

As indicated by the rule, the reported volume used may be the national exchange volume, the NASDAQ volume, a combination of the two or when available the consolidated transaction reporting system volume. See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 5995, supra n.58.

(n328)Footnote 328. Rule 144(e)(1)(ii).

(n329)Footnote 329. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 40.

(n330)Footnote 330. SEC Division of Corporate Finance, Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations for Rule 144, Section 222.03 (April 2, 2007).

(n331)Footnote 331. Id. at Question 39; Jesse M. Brill, supra n.103 at Item 5.

(n332)Footnote 332. There is no need to include in the calculation of securities already sold securities sold pursuant to a registration statement under the Securities Act, see Chs. 7 and 7A infra, pursuant to the exemption provided by Regulation A, see Ch. 5 supra, or in an exempt transaction pursuant to Section 4 of the Act and not involving any public offering, see Ch. 4 supra or for sales effected pursuant to Regulation S, see § 6.09 . Rule 144(e)(3)(vii). It should be recalled that short sales against the box and call options must be included for purposes of calculating the volume limitation at the time the short sale is made or the call option is written, respectively. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(H), Questions 80 and 71(a), respectively. See also § 6.05[2][c][iii] and [iv] supra. Again, short sales against the box and call options must be included for purposes of calculating the volume limitation at the time the short sale is made or in the case of the call option at such time as the restricted securities are segregated to cover or are delivered. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(H), Question 80 and 70, 71(b), 72, 73 and 74, respectively.

(n333)Footnote 333. Revenue Properties Company Limited, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2745 (August 25, 1983). See also Gulf & Western Industries, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1177 (June 16, 1975). (Debentures treated as same class "considering the identity of terms, market price and market treatment.")

(n334)Footnote 334. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5980, [1978 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,732 (September 20, 1978); Sec. Act Rel. No. 5223, n.2 supra.

(n335)Footnote 335. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 46.

(n336)Footnote 336. Id.; Associated Dry Goods Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2679 (August 12, 1983).

(n337)Footnote 337. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n338)Footnote 338. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n339)Footnote 339. See §§ 6.05[5][d][viii] and [ix] infra and the corresponding tacking provisions described in §§ 6.05[4][c][x] and [xi] supra.

(n340)Footnote 340. Rule 144(a)(2).

(n341)Footnote 341. Sec. Act Rel. No.6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), Questions 3, 5 and 8; Fogelson, supra n.126 at 1532.

(n342)Footnote 342. Jesse M. Brill, supra n.103 at Item 3; Carolina Securities Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3766 (November 23, 1979).

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), question 8, indicating that aggregation of sales by a parent corporation and its subsidiary is also a two-way street.

(n343)Footnote 343. Jesse M. Brill, Esq., supra n.103 at Item 2. See also Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., SEC No-Action Letter 1975 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1998 (September 29, 1975), requiring aggregation with a trust by an affiliate ten percent beneficiary of the trust.

(n344)Footnote 344. See Sec. Act. Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at 2819-6 Question 7; Gap, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 928 (September 16, 1992); Turner Foundation, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 489 (March 19, 1993); BMC Software, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1991 SEC No-Act LEXIS 991 (August 14, 1991).

(n345)Footnote 345. Jesse M. Brill, Esq., supra n.103 at Item 2.

(n346)Footnote 346. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), Question 5. But see First Pennsylvania Corp., supra n.125, and NCA Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2996 (November 12, 1982). In addition, it should be noted that the directors of a charitable organization are not viewed as trustees or executors or in a similar capacity for purposes of the Rule 144(e) aggregation rules.

(n347)Footnote 347. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), Question 6; Wix Corp., SEC No-Action Letter, 1978 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 597 (February 20, 1978).

(n348)Footnote 348. A purchaser of pledged securities is required to aggregate his sales with those of the pledgee and the pledgor only if the securities were privately purchased rather than purchased in a Rule 144 sale by the pledgee, Valicenti, Leighton, Reid and Pine, supra n.260.

(n349)Footnote 349. Rule 144(e)(3)(ii).

(n350)Footnote 350. Id. See also Met-Pro Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1784 (August 22, 1976) (obligation in default for more than two years); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 47, relating to donated securities, but equally applicable to pledged securities. If the pledgee (or the purchaser) is an affiliate of the issuer of the securities proposed to be sold, the unlimited resale provision contained in Rule 144(k) will not be available. § It is important to note that Rule 144(k) no longer exists following the 2007 amendments to Rule 144, but that an affiliate must resell in accordance with the applicable paragraphs of Rule 144 which do not permit unlimited resales by affiliates in any circumstance. In other words sales by affiliates are always subject to the volume restrictions set forth in paragraph (e) of Rule 144.

(n351)Footnote 351. Frost National Bank of San Antonio, SEC No-Action Letter, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1182 (June 7, 1976).

(n352)Footnote 352. Rule 144(e)(3)(ii).

(n353)Footnote 353. Rule 144(e)(3)(iii); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 47.

(n354)Footnote 354. See, e.g., Turner Foundation, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1993 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 489 (March 19, 1993).

Since paragraph (e)(3)(iii) of Rule 144 is substantially the same as paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of the rule, see generally § 6.05[5][c][ii] supra.

(n355)Footnote 355. Rule 144(e)(3)(iii).

(n356)Footnote 356. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 48.

(n357)Footnote 357. Rule 144(e)(3)(iv).

(n358)Footnote 358. Equitable of Iowa Companies, SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2808 (February 19, 1980).

(n359)Footnote 359. See § 6.05[5][d][i] supra.

(n360)Footnote 360. See § 6.05[4][c][vii] supra regarding those securities that are covered by both paragraphs (d)(3)(vii) and (e)(3)(v) of Rule 144.

(n361)Footnote 361. For analysis of the meaning of the term "affiliate," see generally § 6.03 supra.

(n362)Footnote 362. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(E), Question 49.

(n363)Footnote 363. Since the codification of the 2007 amendments, Rule 144(c) is not applicable to non-affiliates anymore.

(n364)Footnote 364. See Equitable of Iowa Companies, supra n.358, containing a view equally applicable to estate beneficiaries.

(n365)Footnote 365. See § 6.05[5][d][i] supra.

(n366)Footnote 366. Rule 144(e)(3)(vi).

(n367)Footnote 367. Lewis D. Lowenfels, SEC No-Action Letter, 1972 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2147 (May 31, 1972).

(n368)Footnote 368. See, e.g., AMP Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3680 (June 22, 1981). But see Carnation Co., SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2742 (February 3, 1980), in which the staff viewed a shareholders agreement limiting the resale of shares distributed in a liquidation as applying individually to each shareholder and therefore not constituting an agreement to act in concert.

For other circumstances possibly indicative of acting in concert, see Carolina Securities Corp., supra n.342 (relatives not sharing the same home must aggregate if acting in concert); Fogelson, supra n.126 at 1530, n.87 (multiple pledgees, donees or beneficiaries required to aggregate horizontally if acting in concert).

(n369)Footnote 369. The Gap, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1992 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 928 (September 16, 1992).

(n370)Footnote 370. Lewis D. Lowenfels, supra n.367; Gap, Inc., supra n.344.

(n371)Footnote 371. § 6.05[4][c][ix] supra .

(n372)Footnote 372. Id.

(n373)Footnote 373. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), Question 4.

(n374)Footnote 374. § 6.05[4][c][x] supra .

(n375)Footnote 375. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), Question 8.

(n376)Footnote 376. Rule 144(a)(2)(iii); Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(A), Question 8.

(n377)Footnote 377. Continental Alliance Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter, 1974 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 126 (August 12, 1974).

(n378)Footnote 378. Rule 144(e)(3)(vi) and § 6.05[5][d][vi] supra .

(n379)Footnote 379. § 6.05[4][c][xi] supra .

(n380)Footnote 380. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 34 and Section II(E), Question 45; Sec. Act Rel. No. 5306, supra n.72 at Section VII(A).

(n381)Footnote 381. Convergent Technologies, SEC No-Action Letter 1983 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1876 (February 24, 1983). But see Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 34 and Section II(E), Question 45 (references to closely-held corporations).

(n382)Footnote 382. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(D), Question 34 and Section II(E), Question 45. See also Abacus Investments Limited, SEC No-Action Letter (October 5, 2007).

(n383)Footnote 383. Carnation Co., supra n.368 (76 shareholder distributees).

(n384)Footnote 384. § Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n385)Footnote 385. Rule 144(e)(3)(v). See discussion in § 6.05[5][d][vii] supra.

(n386)Footnote 386. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n387)Footnote 387. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n388)Footnote 388. That is, within the definition of "brokers' transactions" set forth in Section 4(4) of the Securities Act.

(n389)Footnote 389. See new Rule 144(f)(1)(iii). A "riskless principal transaction" is defined as a principal transaction where, after having received from a customer an order to buy, a broker or dealer purchases the security as principal in the market to satisfy the order to buy or, after having received from a customer an order to sell, sells the security as principal to the market to satisfy the order to sell; see also Note to Rule 144(f)(1).

(n390)Footnote 390. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n391)Footnote 391. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) . Rule 144(f) does not apply to sales by non-affiliates or sales of debt securities.

(n392)Footnote 392. Rule 144(f).

(n393)Footnote 393. Id.

(n394)Footnote 394. See analysis contained in § 6.02[1] supra .

(n395)Footnote 395. Section 4(4) of the Act is also discussed in § 4.06 supra.

(n396)Footnote 396. See Ira Haupt & Co., supra n.318 . See also Rule 154, supra n.51.

(n397)Footnote 397. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 5979, supra n.58.

(n398)Footnote 398. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n399)Footnote 399. Arthur M. Borden & Edward A. Fleischman, The Continuing Development of Rule 144: Significant SEC Staff Interpretations, 8 Inst. Sec. Reg. 91, 112 (1977).

(n400)Footnote 400. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 61, n.28.

(n401)Footnote 401. Id.

(n402)Footnote 402. A dealer acts as a principal rather than an agent. It buys for its own account and sells to customers from its own account, making a profit from the difference between the price it pays and the price it receives for the securities. In re Ryan, Exchange Act Release No. 18,617, 24 SEC Docket 1716 (April 15, 1982).

(n403)Footnote 403. Rule 144(g)(1).

(n404)Footnote 404. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, SEC No-Action Letter, 2001 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 586 (May 30, 2001).

(n405)Footnote 405. Revenue Properties, supra n.333.

(n406)Footnote 406. Rule 144(g)(1). Section 4(4) of the Act, discussed in § 4.06 supra.

(n407)Footnote 407. Rule 144(g)(2).

(n408)Footnote 408. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6099, n.42 supra, at Section II(F), Question 59.

(n409)Footnote 409. Rule 144(g)(3).

(n410)Footnote 410. Rule 144(g)(3)(i).

(n411)Footnote 411. Rule 144(g)(3)(ii). Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 60.

The broker should maintain written records of all the unsolicited indications of interest when received. See Note to Rule 144(g)(3)(ii).

(n412)Footnote 412. Investment Corp. of Virginia, SEC No-Action Letter, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1712 (August 16, 1976).

(n413)Footnote 413. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 62.

(n414)Footnote 414. Rule 144(g)(3)(iii).

(n415)Footnote 415. Rule 144(3)(iv).

(n416)Footnote 416. Jeffries & Company, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (November 29, 1982).

(n417)Footnote 417. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n418)Footnote 418. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n419)Footnote 419. Jeffries & Company, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (November 29, 1982). Rule 144(g)(4).

(n420)Footnote 420. Note (ii) to Rule 144(g)(4).

(n421)Footnote 421. Rule 144(g)(4) and Note (i) thereto.

(n422)Footnote 422. Rule 144(f).

(n423)Footnote 423. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 51.

(n424)Footnote 424. Id. A sale to the parent of a market maker, and in fact an installment sale, was viewed by the staff as a transaction directly with a market maker satisfying the requirement of Rule 144(f). SBHU Holdings, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter (October 18, 1981).

(n425)Footnote 425. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n426)Footnote 426. Rule 144(f).

(n427)Footnote 427. Section 3(a)(38) of the Exchange Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Part F (Matthew Bender 2008).

(n428)Footnote 428. Rule 17a-17(b) under the Exchange Act was rescinded in Exch. Act Rel. No. 20,121, [1983-1984 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 83,418 (August 26, 1983), effective September 1, 1983. At the same time, Exchange Act Rule 3b-8 was adopted that provides in pertinent part that a qualified block positioner is [a] dealer who is ... registered pursuant to Section 15 of the [Exchange] Act., ... is subject to and in compliance with Rule 15c3-1 ... has and maintains minimum net capital ... of $1,000,000 and ... meets all of the following conditions: (i) he engages in the activity of purchasing long or selling short, from time to time, from or to a customer ... a block of stock ... in a single transaction, or in several transactions at approximately the same time, from a single source to facilitate a sale or purchase by such customer ... (iii) he sells the shares comprising the block as rapidly as possible commensurate with the circumstances.

The adoption of Exchange Act Rule 3b-8 was announced in Exch. Act Rel. No. 34-20,121, [1983-1984 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 83,418 (August 26, 1983). The Rules under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 are reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Part G (Matthew Bender 2008).

(n429)Footnote 429. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 52.

(n430)Footnote 430. Id. at Question 53. The block may consist of securities subject to Rule 144 and securities of the same class not subject to the rule.

(n431)Footnote 431. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 54.

(n432)Footnote 432. In re Ryan, supra n.402.

(n433)Footnote 433. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 55.

(n434)Footnote 434. Id.

(n435)Footnote 435. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 55, n.20.

(n436)Footnote 436. See SEC v. Aaron, 605 F.2d 612 (2d Cir. 1979) .

(n437)Footnote 437. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 56.

(n438)Footnote 438. Id. at Question 50.

(n439)Footnote 439. Jim G. Rhodes, SEC No-Action Letter, 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3204 (January 17, 1980).

(n440)Footnote 440. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 56.

(n441)Footnote 441. Prior to the 1978 amendments, the maximum amount of securities that could be sold under Rule 144(e) was the lesser of one percent of the number outstanding or the average trading volume during a period of six rather than three months.

(n442)Footnote 442. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Question 57.

(n443)Footnote 443. See Rule 101, Regulation M under the Exchange Act.

(n444)Footnote 444. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(F), Questions 57 and 58.

(n445)Footnote 445. Id. at Question 58.

(n446)Footnote 446. Rule 144(f).

(n447)Footnote 447. Rule 144(h).

(n448)Footnote 448. Id.

(n449)Footnote 449. See Form 144. Regarding the proper time to file Form 144 in the case of call options, see Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(H), questions 76 through 79, and for put options, see § 6.05[2][c][iv] supra.

(n450)Footnote 450. Rule 144(h). In a proposed sale by a pledgee of securities following a default in the loan obligation, the pledgee may sign the Form 144. Securities Act Release No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(G), Question 64.

(n451)Footnote 451. Rule 144(i). Where a proposed seller filed a Form 144 but instructed his broker not to actually sell any of the securities for 65 days, the staff took the position that the proposed seller did not have the required bona fide intention to sell within a reasonable time. Flight Safety International, SEC No-Action Letter, 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1233 (May 31, 1976).

See also Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(H), Question 76, regarding the intent of a person who files a Form 144 for securities to be used to cover a call option, but then delivers other securities.

(n452)Footnote 452. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(G), Question 65.

(n453)Footnote 453. Id. at Section II(E), Question 39.

(n454)Footnote 454. See, e.g., Id. at Section II(G), Question 66.

(n455)Footnote 455. Sec. Act Rel. No. 5995, supra n.58.

(n456)Footnote 456. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813, 72 Fed. Reg. 36822 (July 5, 2007) .

(n457)Footnote 457. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n458)Footnote 458. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) . Prior to the 2007 amendments, 144(h) was not applicable to proposed sales that involved 500 or fewer shares or other units and an aggregate sale price of not more than $10,000.

(n459)Footnote 459. Sec. Act Rel. No.P 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n460)Footnote 460. See, e.g., Sec. Act Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section II(G), Questions 67 and 68.

(n461)Footnote 461. Form 144

(n462)Footnote 462. See SEC Division of Corporate Finance Manual of Publicly Available Telephone Interpretations, Fourth Supplement at Rule 10b5-1 (May 30, 2001); Form 144, Interpretation No.2.

(n463)Footnote 463. Previous to the 2007 amendments, paragraph (i) required a seller to have a bona fide intention to sell. Previous paragraph (i) is now contained in paragraph (h).

(n464)Footnote 464. Rule 144(i).

(n465)Footnote 465. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n466)Footnote 466. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) ; NASD Regulation, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 2000 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 42 (Jan. 21, 2000).

(n467)Footnote 467. The 2007 Proposing Release initially suggested a 90 day requirement for the filing of Form 10 information. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8813, 72 Fed. Reg. 36822 (July 5, 2007) .

(n468)Footnote 468. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) (" "Form 10" information is equivalent to information that a company would be required to file if it were registering a class of securities on Form 10 or Form 20-F under the Exchange Act"). It is important to note that both restricted and control securities are subject to the one year requirement regarding the filing of Form 10 information.

(n469)Footnote 469. Sec. Act Rel. No. 8869, 72 Fed. Reg. 71546 (Dec. 17, 2007) .

(n470)Footnote 470. See generally § 6.05[1][a] supra.

(n471)Footnote 471. See D. Goldwasser, supra n.1; Bernard Cedarbaum, Executing Rule 144 Sales, 5 Rev. Sec. Reg. 851 (October 19, 1972).

(n472)Footnote 472. See, e.g., Union Bank, SEC No-Action Letter, 1979 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2153 (February 5, 1979).

(n473)Footnote 473. See § 6.05[9][c] infra.

(n474)Footnote 474. See Rule 144(f) and (g) and § 6.05[9][b] infra .

(n475)Footnote 475. Cedarbaum, supra n.471 at 851.

(n476)Footnote 476. For examples of a typical representation letter, see Denis T. Rice and Charles P. Ortmeyer, 6 Securities Regulation Forms § 2:22 (Westlaw 2008); Fogelson, supra n.126 at 1547, Exhibit A; § 4.02[1] supra ; D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 381-97.

(n477)Footnote 477. Legended certificates are not deemed good delivery under the rules of the self-regulatory agencies. National Ass'n of Securities Dealers, Inc., [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 78,808 (April 21, 1972).

(n478)Footnote 478. See Rule 144(g)(3) and § 6.05[6][b] supra .

(n479)Footnote 479. If the issuer is not a reporting issuer under the Exchange Act, see § 6.05[3][c] supra.

(n480)Footnote 480. See § 6.05[7] supra.

(n481)Footnote 481. In view of the logistical difficulties involved in settling a Rule 144 transaction three days after the trade ("T+3"), as required by Rule 15c6-1(a), the SEC permits "future tense" representation letters from brokers. Smith Barney, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, 1995 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 549 (June 20, 1995).

(n482)Footnote 482. See the requirements of Rule 502(d) of Regulation D, discussed in § 4.04 supra.

(n483)Footnote 483. See D. Goldwasser, supra n.1 at 371.

(n484)Footnote 484. Registration and regulation of transfer agents under Section 17 of the Exchange Act is discussed in Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 2A.03 (Matthew Bender 2008).

(n485)Footnote 485. See § 6.02 n.65 and accompanying text supra.

(n486)Footnote 486. Grove Explorations, Ltd., supra n.185, Sec. Act. Rel. No. 6099, supra n.42 at Section I, Question 1.

75 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.06

§ 6.06 Public Resales of Restricted Securities and "Control Securities" Outside Rule 144

Although Rule 144 is the vehicle for most unregistered public resales of restricted securities and control securities that are sold today, it is nevertheless not the sole option for their lawful resale.

[1] Availability of Resale Exemption

As a result of the safe harbor provided by Rule 144, the resale exemption contained in Section 4(1) of the Securities Act is currently available for most resales of restricted securities and most resale of control securities that comply with all of the rule's applicable requirements. n1 By its own terms, however, Rule 144 is not the only means by which holders of restricted and control securities can rely on the resale exemption provided by Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n2 At least in theory, such proposed sellers may rely upon Section 4(1) outside of the Rule 144 safe harbor. In light of the Commission's warning, however, that a seller and any participating broker will have a heavy burden of proving the availability of the resale exemption outside of the rule, n3 such proposed sellers will most likely resort to this alternative only where one or more of the rule's requirements cannot be satisfied. The proposed sellers will almost certainly encounter reluctance on the part of most issuer and brokers to effect transfers of restricted securities and deliver clean certificates to the purchasers, absent convincing opinion letters from both the seller's and its own experienced counsel regarding the availability of the statutory exemption outside of Rule 144. n4

Since the unlimited resale provision contained in Rule 144 was broadened to permit non-affiliate holders of restricted securities that have not been held by the issuer or any affiliate of the issuer during the holding period to resell those securities, free of all restrictions, it is only in the case of restricted securities that have been held for less than the availability of the resale exemption outside of the rule is relevant. n5 In other words, where the specified holding period has elapsed since restricted securities were acquired from the issuer or an affiliate, those securities are now as freely tradeable under Rule 144 as unrestricted securities under the Section 4(1) resale exemption. n6 While Rule 144 in its present form has virtually eliminated the difference in tradeability between unrestricted securities and restricted securities that have been so owned for the applicable holding period, it is likely to cause Rule 144 to become, by implication, the nearly exclusive method by which restricted securities may be publicly sold under the Securities Act's resale exemption. n7

As explained above, the resale exemption was intended to permit only private resales and ordinary trading transactions without registration under the Securities Act. n8 Although most resales of unrestricted securities by non-affiliates in less than substantial amounts are regarded as ordinary trading transactions rather than unlawful distributions, public resales of restricted securities are always presumed to involve a distribution. n9 Accordingly, a proposed seller of restricted securities may not safely rely upon the resale exemption for public resales unless it can establish that:

- the original purchase was with investment intent rather than resale intent;
- the resale is other than a sale for the issuer; and
- the resale does not amount to a participation in a distribution. n10

These arguments are difficult to make until a substantial period of time, probably close to the applicable holding period has passed. Only where a proposed seller of restricted securities can convince the issuer, presumably through an opinion of counsel that the resale does not involve a distribution is the resale exemption outside of the rule a realistic possibility for the lawful resale of those securities without registration under the Securities Act.

In light the availability of the resale exemption outside Rule 144 for the sale of restricted securities is extremely limited. Accordingly, counsel is likely to feel comfortable rendering a favorable opinion letter respecting the resale of restricted securities only where there is substantial, though perhaps not literal, compliance with the rule's several requirements. n11 For example, a favorable opinion letter may be appropriate where a Form 144 was inadvertently filed late, n12 where public information has been available for only eighty days, n13 where a holder who has held the subject securities for one year has been a non-affiliate for only two months, n14 and where in each case where all of the rule's other requirements were or could be satisfied. In light of the disclosure philosophy underlying the whole of Securities Act and the staff's vigorous policy against taking a position on the availability of the resale exemption absent adequate current public information about the issuer, even for restricted securities acquired prior to the adoption of the rule, n15 it should be exceedingly difficult to justify a favorable Section 4(1) opinion letter in the absence of such adequate current public information.

In sum, the resale exemption outside Rule 144 is probably presently available for the public resale of restricted securities by non-affiliates only in circumstances that are substantially in compliance with all of the rule's requirements. n16 If a proposed sale of restricted securities would deviate substantially from meeting any of the rule's requirements, other than perhaps the notice of proposed sale requirement, the proposed seller should consider a private sale, or another available exemption from the Securities Act's registration requirements rather than the Section 4(1) resale exemption. n17

[2] Availability of Other Exemptions

As stated above, both restricted securities and control securities may also be publicly sold without registration under the Securities Act where the transaction meets the requirements of one of the limited number of rather narrow transaction exemptions contained in Section 3 of the Securities Act. Those possibilities include the exemption provided by Regulation A pursuant to Section 3(b) n18 and those contained in Sections 3(a)(10) n19 and 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act. n20

Also, the possibility has arisen that restricted securities that have "come to rest" and are no longer in distribution may be resold publicly or privately without registration reliance on Section 4(1). However, the circumstances in which such an exemption is available are more likely to be encountered in a private resale rather than a public one. n21

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. But see exceptions discussed in § 6.05[2][c] supra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Rule 144(j), under the Securities Act of 1933, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section C (Matthew Bender), and discussed in § 6.05[1][c] supra.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 6.05 ns.53-55 and accompanying text supra.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.05[9][b] and [c] supra.

(n5)Footnote 5. Rule 144. See analysis in §§ 6.05[4] supra .

(n6)Footnote 6. Indeed the restricted securities are perhaps more freely tradeable given the safe harbor protection of Rule 144 occurring without any affirmative action on the part of the seller, as well as the fact that there are some limitations on the tradeability of unrestricted securities by non-affiliates. See § 6.04[2] supra for discussion of those limitations.

(n7)Footnote 7. See, however, discussion of sale of securities that have "come to rest" in §§ 6.06[2] and 6.08[2] infra .

(n8)Footnote 8. See analysis in § 6.02[1] supra , the six month or one year holding peirod.

(n9)Footnote 9. See analysis in § 6.02[2] supra .

(n10)Footnote 10. Id.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Folgelson, § 6.05 n.126 supra , at 1541-42.

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 6.05[7] supra.

(n13)Footnote 13. See 6.05[3][b][i] supra .

(n14)Footnote 14. See § 6.05[4] supra.

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., American Uranium Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3804 (October 14, 1980).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., General Automation, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3783 (October 9, 1980).

Since the staff will generally not comment of the availability of Section 4(1) outside of Rule 144 for the sale of restricted securities acquired after April 15, 1972, guidance is limited, Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6253.

(n17)Footnote 17. An exemption might be made for the sale of large amounts of debt securities to institutional investors. In that regard, see generally Study Group on Resales of Debt Securities, ABA Committee on Developments in Business Financing, Resale by Institutional Investors of Debt Securities Acquired in Private Placements, 34 Bus. Law. 1927 (1979) (hereinafter "ABA Debt Report"). Even in that case, a private sale might be the more appropriate alternative to registration, see § 6.07 infra.

(n18)Footnote 18. See § 6.03[3][b] supra.

(n19)Footnote 19. See § 6.03[3][d][iii] supra.

(n20)Footnote 20. See § 6.03[3][d][v] supra. See also § 3.12 supra.

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 6.08[2] infra.

76 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.07

§ 6.07 Private Resales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities to Qualified Institutional Buyers under Rule 144A

[1] Nature and Philosophy of Rule 144A

During the 1980's, the market for privately placed securities in the U.S. grew faster than the public offering market and became increasingly important. n1 According to the NASDAQ Stock Market, the value of new private placements of unregistered securities, or 144A transactions reached $162 billion in 2006, surpassing the $154 billion raised in initial and secondary public offerings. Secondary private transactions for unregistered securities in U.S. private companies increased to $3 billion (approximately up 140%) according to a 2007 NYPPEX Private Markets report. n2 Issuers saved a substantial amount of money and minimized their information disclosure obligations by arranging placement of their securities with institutional investors without any public offering, thereby avoiding the need for registration under the Securities Act. Foreign issuers especially were attracted to private placements because those placements provided access to the U.S. capital market without making all the disclosures required for the registration of a public offering and periodic disclosure required thereafter under the Exchange Act.

The Commission decided to facilitate such private placements and encourage the participation of foreign issuers in the U.S. market by increasing the efficiency and liquidity of the secondary market for restricted securities. n3 It found that registration under the Securities Act was not intended to protect large institutional investors and that, given minimal procedural protections, such institutions were presumably able to fend for themselves in the securities market. It concluded that offering and selling to such institutions does not involve a distribution. n4

The Commission adopted Rule 144A on April 23, 1990. n5 The rule provides safe harbors under Sections 4(1) (for ordinary investors) and 4(3) (for dealers) of the Securities Act. If all the conditions of the rule are complied with, any holder of restricted securities other than the issuer may resell restricted securities at any time without registration in reliance on the rule. The rule provides that such sales will be deemed not part of a distribution, the seller will be deemed not as underwriter, and securities will be deemed not offered to the public. Thus, ordinary investors may rely on Section 4(1), which provides an exemption from registration for transactions by persons other than issuers, underwriters or dealers. n6 Dealers may rely on Section 4(3), which provides an exemption from registration for transactions by dealers except in circumstances involving a distribution or within forty days of a public offering. n7

Unlike Rule 144, Rule 144A requires no holding period. This facilitates firm underwriting of privately placed securities.

An issuer may sell to an underwriter (using the term underwriter in its factual, not its statutory sense) in a transaction to which the registration provisions of the Securities Act do not apply either because it involves no public offering (in reliance on Section 4(2) or Regulation D) n8 or is conducted outside the United States in compliance with Regulation S. n9 The underwriter may immediately resell the securities to institutional investors, provided the requirements of the rule are satisfied. The Commission has stated explicitly that purchasing securities from an issuer with a view to reselling under Rule 144A does not affect the availability of the Section 4(2) or Regulation D exemption for the issuer. n10

The rule also increases the opportunities for every holder of restricted securities to resell those securities at any time, albeit to a limited universe of potential buyers. There is no explicit limitation on the means that can be used to solicit such sales, provided that offers and sales are made only to "qualified institutional buyers" ("QIBs") in compliance with the rule. The nature of such solicitation may, however, affect the availability of the Section 4(2) exemption for the original private placement by the issuer, so all parties involved in reselling securities under Rule 144A should proceed on the basis that Section 4(2)'s prohibition on general solicitation n11 probably applies to the resales. n12 The Commission permits Rule 144A offers to be made by means of Internet roadshows whose attendees are limited to QIBs. n13

Like all other exemptions from registration, Rule 144A relates only to Section 5 of the Securities Act. It does not provide exemption from any other provision of the securities laws, including the antifraud provisions of the Securities Act and the Exchange Act.

[2] Conditions of the Rule 144A Exemption

The conditions of the exemption provided by Rule 144A are as follows:

- the seller must reasonably believe the buyer is a QIB;
- the seller must take reasonable steps to ensure that the buyer knows the sale may be made in reliance on Rule 144A;
- the securities resold may not be issued by certain investment companies, or be of the same class or convertible or exchangeable for securities of the same class as those listed on a U.S. securities exchange or quoted on NASDAQ; and
- prospective buyers must have a right to receive certain specified information about the issuer.

[a] Reasonable Belief Buyer is a QIB

[i] Definition of QIB. Rule 144A applies only if the seller reasonably believes that the buyer is a "qualified institutional buyer." The rule contains a very detailed and specific definition of "qualified institutional buyer." Generally, a QIB is an entity falling into one of the categories listed in the rule that owns and has investment power n14 over at least $100 million of securities not issued by the entity or any affiliate of the entity. If the entity is a bank or savings and loan association, it must additionally have an audited net worth of at least $25 million. A dealer registered as such under Section 15 of the Exchange Act need own only $10 million of securities. Dealers engaging in "riskless principal transactions" on behalf of QIBs and entities of which all the equity owners are QIBs are also defined as QIBs. Some types of securities, including certificates of deposit, swap contracts and securities subject to repurchase agreements are not counted as eligible "securities" for this test. n15 In 1992, the SEC amended Rule 144A to permit the inclusion of U.S. government and similar securities in calculations of the amount of securities owned or invested by a particular institutional investor. n16

In its adopting release, the Commission stated that it had considered including additional tiers of investors defined by less stringent criteria, but that it decided to begin with a narrow definition and consider changes in the future based on experience with the rule. n17

[ii] Basis for Reasonable Belief. The safe harbor of Rule 144A is available only if the buyer is a QIB or the seller and any person acting on behalf of the seller reasonably believe the buyer is a QIB. Although this is a question of fact, the rule provides that, with respect to the prospective purchaser's ownership of and investment power over securities, prospective sellers and persons acting on their behalf may rely on any of the following: a recent publicly available financial statement; any document filed by the issuer with government agency or self-regulatory organization either in the United States or elsewhere; the current edition of a "recognized securities manual"; n18 or a certification by the chief financial officer of the issuer. n19

[b] Notice to Buyer of Reliance on Rule 144A. The safe harbor of Rule 144A is available only if the seller takes reasonable steps to ensure that the buyer is aware the seller may be relying on the exemption provided by the rule. The rule does not elaborate what would constitute reasonable steps. Presumably, the notice of possible reliance on the rule would be included in the original offering documents for the securities. In subsequent resales, the seller should give a notice directly to the buyer or cause such a notice to be given.

This notice requirement is important because, although a legend is not required on securities sold in reliance on Rule 144A, such securities are deemed to be restricted securities n20 and purchasers need to be aware of that restricted status. Securities distributed through resales in reliance on Rule 144A frequently do contain a legend stating that the securities have not been registered under the Securities Act and that resales are limited to certain specified circumstances, including resales made in compliance with Rule 144A. However, whether such a legend by itself satisfies the notice requirement for a subsequent resale made in reliance on the rule is doubtful, especially in cases where the securities may not be seen by the purchaser (for example, where they are held in book-entry form).

[c] Eligible Securities; Fungibility Prohibition.

The safe harbor of Rule 144A is available only if the security being sold was not, when issued, fungible with any class of securities that are either listed on a U.S. securities exchange that is registered under Section 6 of the Exchange Act or quoted on an "automated inter-dealer quotation system." n21 The purpose of this requirement is to prevent unregistered offerings of securities that can readily flow into a public market. However, in the case of securities that are mandatorily exchangeable for securities of an unrelated issuer, and those underlying securities are themselves eligible to be traded in the public market (whether because they are not restricted securities or because they are restricted securities eligible to be resold under Rule 144), Rule 144A is available for the overlying securities. n22 Securities of an open-end investment company, unit investment trust or face-amount certificate company each of which is, or is required to be, registered under Section 8 of the Investment Company Act, may not be sold in reliance on the rule. n23 All other securities are eligible to be resold under the rule. n24

[i] Not of the Same Class. The adopting release states generally that securities should be considered of the same class if they entitle their holders to substantially similar rights and privileges, even if the securities have different names or designations. n25

Securities underlying American Depositary Shares ("ADSs") are treated as being the same class of securities as ADSs. n26 Thus, if ADSs are listed on a U.S. securities exchange, the underlying securities may not be offered pursuant to Rule 144A.

[ii] Not Convertible or Exchangeable for Same Class. A security that was, at the time of issuance, convertible into or exchangeable for another security is considered fungible with that other security unless it was subject to a conversion premium of at least 10 percent at the time of issuance. n27 Warrants are considered fungible with the security that can be purchased upon their exercise unless, at the time of issuance, the warrant had a life of at least three years and an effective exercise premium of at least 10 percent. n28 The adopting release contains an explanation of

"effective conversion premium" and "effective exercise premium." n29

[iii] When Issued. It should be noted that the prohibition on fungible securities applies at the time the securities are issued. If the securities were issued prior to a listing on a U.S. exchange or a NASDAQ quotation, the fungibility prohibition does not apply. Thus, where a private company issues shares to its founders, and subsequently becomes public and listed on a U.S. exchange, the founders may use Rule 144A to resell their securities privately. They may wish to do so, for example, to avoid adversely affecting the price of the publicly traded securities by a public resale pursuant to Rule 144.

[iv] Not Issued by an Investment Company. Rule 144A is not available for resales of securities issued by an open-end investment company, unit investment trust or face-amount certificate company that is or is required to be registered under Section 8 of the Investment Company Act. n30

[d] Information Requirement.

Rule 144A is available for resales of securities only when prospective purchasers have a right to obtain information about the issuer. The Commission has taken the position that even substantial institutional investors need to be protected by a right to obtain some information, although not necessarily all the information they would be able to obtain if the sale of securities were required to be registered under the Securities Act or the issuer were required to make periodic disclosure under the Exchange Act. The Commission intended to lighten the burden of traditional disclosure for Rule 144A issuers while retaining a limited right of prospective securities buyers to have information about the issuer's affairs.

The information requirement does not apply to securities issued by foreign government eligible to register securities under Schedule B of the Securities Act n31 28 nor to debt securities issued by an agency or instrumentality of a foreign government eligible to use Schedule B under the Securities Act, if such securities are fully and unconditionally guaranteed by such foreign government. n32 If prospective purchasers have a right to obtain the specified information about the parent of the issuer and the parent unconditionally guarantees the debt securities of its wholly-owned subsidiary, the information requirement of the rule is satisfied. n33

[i] How Right May be Ensured. The information requirement may be satisfied three ways:

- if the issuer is subject to periodic disclosure under Section 13 or Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act; n34
- if the issuer is entitled to the exemption from periodic reporting under Rule 12g3-2(b); n35 or
- if the prospective purchaser otherwise has a right to obtain, at or prior to the sale, certain basic information about the issuer that is reasonably current. n36

The Commission stated that the obligation to provide current basic information may arise by contract, by applicable corporate law or by a rule of an applicable self-regulatory organization. n37

[ii] What Information Must be Available. The information that must be available includes a very brief statement of the nature of the issuer's business, including the products and services it produces, and financial statements (balance sheet, profit and loss and retained earnings) for as much of the previous two fiscal years as the issuer has been in operation. With regard to timeliness, the financial statements must either meet the timing requirements of the issuer's home country or principal trading market or the following schedule. The balance sheet must be as of a date less than 16 months before the date of sale, the profit and loss and retained earnings statements must cover the 12 months preceding such balance sheet, and, if the balance sheet is as of a date more than 6 months prior to the resale, the profit and loss and retained earnings statements must be updated from the date of the balance sheet to a date no more than 6 months before the date of resale. n38

[3] Rule 144A Trading Markets

The Rule 144A exemption creates the opportunity for development of quasi-public trading markets in restricted securities, in which would-be sellers can freely offer restricted securities for sale, provided the universe of offerees is limited to institutions that are QIBs. Almost simultaneously with the adoption of the rule, the Commission gave the FINRA authority to establish what was then designated as the "Private Offering, Resale and Trading Through Automated Linkages" system, generally known as the PORTAL market. n39 The PORTAL rules as approved by the Commission permit a system in which QIBs and brokers acting as agents for QIBs can electronically post quotations and bids for restricted securities and execute trades with confidence that all offers and sales will be to QIBs or will otherwise be exempt transactions. All securities that can be sold in compliance with Rule 144A can be declared PORTAL-eligible and then can be entered PORTAL by depositing the securities in a PORTAL participant's specially designated account at a PORTAL depository institution. PORTAL also facilitates solicitation of offers to buy eligible securities that have not yet been issued. Restricted securities that have been declared PORTAL-eligible by FINRA may also be held and transferred, by book-entry, by the Depository Trust Company ("DTC") even if those transfers are not made through PORTAL.

Recently, alternative 144A trading systems have emerged, such as Goldman Sachs's GStrUE (GS Tradable Unregistered Equity OTC Market) which opened in 2007. GStrUE will live under the shadow of U.S. regulation, as in order to avoid triggering Exchange Act reporting requirements for any listed company, Goldman and any such listed U.S. entity will need to make sure that the company does not exceed more than 500 shareholders. n40

The market is run by a Goldman Sachs trading system, which allows the members of GStrUE to view bid and ask offers and recent sales. Because of the lack of disclosure in GStrUE, shares on the market are expected to trade at a discount to the equivalent price achievable if the shares were listed on a public market. It is expected that 144A trading platforms, such as GStrUE, will ultimately consolidate into a revised PORTAL.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6806, [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,335 (1988), at 89,526-89,528.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Business & Finance Week, Expanded Reporting Section, pg 267, July 14, 2008.

(n3)Footnote 3. Act Rel. No. 33-6806, [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,335 (1988), at 89,533.

(n4)Footnote 4. Id. at 89,539.

(n5)Footnote 5. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-6862 (1990).

(n6)Footnote 6. Rule 144A(b). See also Ch. 4 supra and discussion of Section 4(1) at § 6.02[2] supra. Section 4(1) i of the 1933 Act is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender).

(n7)Footnote 7. Rule 144A(c). See also Ch. 4 supra.

(n8)Footnote 8. See also Ch. 4 supra.

(n9)Footnote 9. See discussion of Regulation S at § 6.03[1] supra.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Preliminary Note 7 to Rule 144A.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Ch. 4 supra.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Hanks, Rule 144A: Another Cabbage in the Chop Suey, 24 G.W.J. Int'l Law and Ec. 305, 338-41 (1990).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Net Roadshow, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1998 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 107 (January 30, 1998). In 2005, the Commission adopted the Securities Offering Reform which has since expanded the scope of permitted communications relating to road shows in the registered offering context. See Securities Release No. 33-8591, § III(3)(b)(iii)(D)(4), 70 Fed. Reg. 44,722 (July 19, 2005) .

(n14)Footnote 14. While this provision may be read to imply that prospective QIB must have investment power over all the securities that it owns (thus disqualifying many large institutions whose assets are managed by other persons), current market practice is to read the provision as permitting prospective QIBs to aggregate assets over which they have investment power (but do not own) with those that they own (but do not have investment power over) in meeting the size test. There is, however, no written authority for this.

(n15)Footnote 15. Rule 144A(a)(1). Investments that are within the Securities Act definition of a security and are not specifically excluded by Rule 144A(a)(2) and which represent undivided interests in a pool of mortgages or receivables count in determining the amount of securities owned for determination of QIB status. See UNUM Life Insurance Co., SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1250 (November 21, 1990).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6393, [1992 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 83,202, adding Rule 144A(a)(1)(i)(F).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6862, [1989-1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,523 (1990) at II.A.

(n18)Footnote 18. "Recognized securities manuals" include Standard & Poor's Corporation Records, the Moody's manuals and Best's Insurance Reports. The staff has explicitly approved S&P's method of establishing and maintaining its list of QIBs. See Standard & Poor's Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1991 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 847 (July 8, 1991). See also CommScan LLC, SEC No-Action Letter 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 116 (February 3, 1999) and Communicator Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 2002 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 783 (September 20, 2002), approving similar commercially available lists of QIBs.

(n19)Footnote 19. Rule 144A(d)(1).

(n20)Footnote 20. Preliminary Note 6 to Rule 144A; § 6.03[1] supra .

(n21)Footnote 21. Rule 144(d)(3). "Automated inter-dealer quotation system" includes NASDAQ but not the "pink sheet" over-the-counter market. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6862.

(n22)Footnote 22. See Mandatorily Exchangeable Issuer Securities, SEC No-Action Letter 1999 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 854 (October 25, 1999).

(n23)Footnote 23. Rule 144A(d)(3)(ii). See Ch. 7B infra.

(n24)Footnote 24. Securities received without additional consideration upon exchange of securities that could be resold under the Rule may also be resold under the Rule. Debevoise & Plimpton, SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 992 (July 23, 1990).

(n25)Footnote 25. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6862, § 6.05, n.58, supra , text accompanying ns. 23-24.

(n26)Footnote 26. Id. at n.26 supra.

(n27)Footnote 27. Id. at n.25.

(n28)Footnote 28. Rule 144A(d)(3)(i).

(n29)Footnote 29. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6862, § 6.05, n.58 at n.25, supra. The Commission stated that this rule is intended not to interfere with "common financing activities" and that the power to designate other securities as "not fungible" with listed or quoted securities is delegated to the Director of the Division of Corporation Finance. Id.

(n30)Footnote 30. Rule 144A(d)(3)(ii). Note that Rule 144A would be available for resales of the securities of such entities not required to register under the Investment Company Act. See Ch. 7B infra.

(n31)Footnote 31. Rule 144(d)(4)(i).

(n32)Footnote 32. See Rule 144A, SEC No-Action Letter (May 30, 1990).

(n33)Footnote 33. See British Aerospace PLC, SEC No-Action Letter 1990 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 793 (May 9, 1990).

(n34)Footnote 34. See Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Ch. 4 (Matthew Bender). The Exchange Act is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume B, Section F (Matthew Bender).

(n35)Footnote 35. This exemption from reporting under the Exchange Act is available to a foreign private issuer makes available on its website the same information it furnishes to its home government or securities exchange (and which is made public) or to its securities holders.

(n36)Footnote 36. Rule 144(d)(4)(i).

(n37)Footnote 37. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6862, § 6.05 n.58, supra .

(n38)Footnote 38. Rule 144A(d)(4)(ii).

(n39)Footnote 39. Exch. Act Rel. No. 34-27,956, 55 F.R. 18781 (April 27, 1990) . The system was later renamed simply "PORTAL."

(n40)Footnote 40. See Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act.

77 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.08

§ 6.08 Private Resales of Restricted Securities and Control Securities Outside Rule 144A

The Securities Act was never intended to prohibit the private sale of securities in the absence of compliance with its registration requirements. n1 As stated above, literally billions of dollars of securities, have been offered by issuers to institutional and other sophisticated investors in reliance upon the private placement exemption contained in Section 4(2) of the Securities Act. n2 Similarly, private resales of both restricted securities and control securities in the absence of registration have always taken place with the tacit approval of the courts, the Commission and members of the securities industry and their counsel. n3

[1] Section 4(11/2) Phenomenon

Although even the staff of the Commission has on occasion implied that private resales of outstanding restricted securities are permitted by Section 4(2) of the Securities Act, n4 that exemption is available only to "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering" (emphasis added). n5 Instead, the proper statutory exemption for the private resale of all outstanding securities, including restricted securities and control securities, is once again the Section 4(1) resale exemption. In other words, it permits both routine trading transactions and private resales, in each case as distinguished from distributions that are subject to registration in the absence of an exemption other than that contained in Section 4(1).

As explained above, n6 Section 4(1) permits the resale of all outstanding securities, provided that neither the seller nor any other participant in the transaction is an underwriter within the meaning of Section 2(11) of the Securities Act. As the language of Section 2(11) makes clear, n7 it is never possible for the seller or any other participant in the transaction to fall into the category of statutory underwriter unless the transaction involves a distribution. In other words, if the transaction does not involve a distribution, neither the seller nor any other participant is an underwriter, and the resale exemption is available. Although the availability of the Section 4(1) exemption under this analysis turns on the meaning of the term "distribution," that term is not defined in the Securities Act and it has not been defined by the Commission other than in the context of Rule 144.

The so-called Section 4(11/2) phenomenon n8 is the result of judicial construction of the term distribution for purposes of defining the scope of Section 4(1) for private resales, particularly resales by holders of restricted securities and by affiliates of the issuer. Because of the relationship between Sections 4(1) and 4(2) of the Securities Act, i.e., that both Sections address private sales of securities, the courts have equated the Section 2(11) term "distribution" with the Section 4(2) term "public offering." n9 In other words, where a particular transaction would constitute a public offering for purposes of a Section 4(2) exemption, it would also constitute a distribution. If a distribution exists, a proposed seller may possibly be an underwriter and is therefore unable to rely upon the Section 4(1) exemption. n10 Accordingly, where the transaction does not amount to a distribution, that is, a public offering under Section 4(2) of the Securities Act, the restricted securities or control securities may be lawfully resold in reliance upon the Section 4(1) resale exemption.

[a] Availability of Exemption. Essentially, a proposed sale of securities is a private rather than a public offering whenever the offerees do not need the sort of protection provided by the registration process. n11 Based on the several decisions that have focused on the availability of Section 4(1) for private resales, a resale is clearly private where the persons purchasing the securities are

- few in number;
- sophisticated in investment matters;
- privy to (or have access to) the basic information relevant to the decision to purchase the offered securities; and
- purchasing with investment intent rather than resale intent. n12

Neither the amount of securities offered n13 nor the period of time during which the proposed seller has held the securities n14 is relevant to whether the transaction is other than a distribution and therefore permitted by the so-called Section 4(1/2) private offering exemption. n15

While the staff has responded to relatively few requests for no-action positions concerning proposed private sales of restricted securities or of "control securities," and has done so with little consistency, there is no question that it concurs that such resales are permissible under Section 4(1) of the Securities Act. n16 The staff is likely, however, to refuse to take a no-action position n17 except in those cases where all of the requirements for private offering under the safe harbor of Regulation D are satisfied. n18 Accordingly, in most cases, sellers proposing to effect private resales will be forced to secure a favorable opinion of counsel in order to cause the issuer to instruct its transfer agent to make the transfer to the purchaser of the securities sold.

As stated above, both affiliates and holders of restricted securities may sell their securities in private transactions under Section 4(1). For most non-affiliate holders of restricted securities, the private sale alternative to relying upon Rule 144 is attractive only where the holder has not owned the securities for the applicable holding period. The private sale alternative is also appealing to pledgees who cannot rely on Rule 144 for one or more reasons and who, following a default, are required to sell those securities in a commercially reasonable manner under the applicable state law. n19 In those cases, despite the fact that public notice of the forthcoming sale is given to a large number of offerees, the staff will normally take a no-action position provided that the final purchasers are few in number, sophisticated, provided with information, and purchasing for investment rather than for resale. n20

For affiliates of the issuer, on the other hand, the private resale option is tremendously appealing because it is normally the sole alternative to a sale that must be in compliance with the adequate current public information, the volume limitations, the manner of sale, the proposed notice of sale, and possibly the holding period requirements of Rule 144. As stated above, the unlimited resale provision even after the applicable holding periods is never available to affiliates, n21 and a public resale outside of Rule 144 under Section 4(1) is difficult for affiliates. n22 In light of the Commission's more restrictive attitude respecting the resale of control securities at a time when it appears more flexible with respect to the resale of restricted securities at least after a specified holding period, it is likely that the Commission would take a narrower view of the availability of Section 4(1) for a private resale by an affiliate than for a non-affiliate seller of restricted securities. n23 Accordingly, counsel for the affiliate sellers and counsel for the issuer of the securities proposed to be sold should give careful consideration to the availability of the exemption when rendering or reviewing favorable opinion letters.

[b] Effects of Use of Exemption. Where restricted securities or control securities are privately sold in proper reliance upon Section 4(1), the seller and any agent will not be in violation of the Securities Act's registration requirements. Neither should the issuer's exemption in the case of restricted securities be affected. The purchaser, however, will receive in either case, restricted securities with all of the consequent restrictions on their lawful resale under the Securities Act. n24

[2] Non-4(11/2) Resales

In view of the fact that the conditions for reliance on Section 4(11/2) are not clearly established, it may seem inconsistent to discuss resales "outside" Section 4(11/2). However, there is a school of thought that holds that if securities have "come to rest," i.e., if the holder can demonstrate that he did not buy with a view to distribution and was not making the resale for the issuer (which factors could best be established by a sufficiently long holding period), there should be no further restriction on the manner of sale. n25 This is not, of course, a private Section 4(11/2) sale, nor necessarily a Rule 144 sale, but rather a resale in reliance on the resale exemption of Section 4(1) because the securities are no longer in distribution, which is why the holding period, not deemed relevant to a Section 4(11/2) transaction, is so important.

The American Bar Association ("ABA") Committee on Federal Regulation of Securities also reached this conclusion—at least with respect to institutional resales. n26 The Committee's report recognized the existence of an active institutional market for the resale of privately placed debt securities. n27 The ABA Committee concluded that such resales could be made in reliance on Section 4(1). n28 The Committee noted that such sales were usually made on the basis of representations from the buyer as to investment intent, n29 and information was generally provided by the seller or dealer only where requested or where such information was not available to the purchaser from the issuer. n30 The type of information given generally varied according to the amount of information about the issuer that was available to the market. n31 The Committee closely examined Rule 144, which, as discussed above, provides that resales of restricted securities made in accordance with its conditions are not distributions. n32 The Committee noted that such institutional resales of privately placed debt securities met the four substantive conditions of Rule 144 n33 and consequently involved no distribution. Thus, where adequate current information concerning the issuer is available, where the securities have been held for long enough to ensure that the seller is not a conduit for an unregistered distribution (although not necessarily for a fixed period of time such as Rule 144's minimum applicable holding period), where the quantity of securities resold does not disrupt the market, and where the manner of sales similarly does not disrupt the market (although not limited to brokers' or market maker transactions as in Rule 144), n34 resales can be made without registration.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See The Section "4(1-1/2)" Phenomenon: Private Resales of "Restricted" Securities, 34 Bus. Law. 1961, 1963-65 (1979).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 6.01, n.4 supra; see also § 4.03 supra.

(n3)Footnote 3. The Section "4(1-1/2)" Phenomenon: Private Resales of "Restricted" Securities, n.1 supra. at 1962.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Whittaker Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1976 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 1002 (April 30, 1976).

(n5)Footnote 5. Section 4(2) of the 1933 Act, reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume A, Section B (Matthew Bender), is discussed in § 4.03 supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. See analysis contained in § 6.02[1] supra .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Section 2(11), discussed in § 4.02[2] supra.

(n8)Footnote 8. See generally The Section "4(1-1/2)" Phenomenon: Private Resales of "Restricted" Securities, n.1 supra.

(n9)Footnote 9. Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC, 267 F.2d 461, 466 (2d Cir. 1959) , cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896 (1959) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See discussion in §§ 6.02[1] and [3] supra.

(n11)Footnote 11. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119 (1953) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Neuwirth Investment Fund v. Swanton, 422 F. Supp. 1187 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) ; Fuller v. Dilbert, 32 F.R.D. 60 (S.D.N.Y. 1962) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Value Line Income Funds, Inc. v. Marcus, [1964-1966 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 91,523 (S.D.N.Y. 1965).

(n14)Footnote 14. Id.; Cf. discussion of securities that have "come to rest" at § 6.08[2] infra .

(n15)Footnote 15. For a summary of the elements that various commentators have found necessary for § 4(1-1/2) resale, see Hanks, § 6.07, n.12 supra , at n.75.

(n16)Footnote 16. Rule 144 (e)(3)(vii); Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6188, [Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 1051 (1980) at n.178.

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Hazel, Inc., SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3206 (April 25, 1980).

(n18)Footnote 18. But see McJunkin Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2866 (October 4, 1982) (all requirements met).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Hueter, The Plight of the Pledgee Under Rule 144, 3 Sec. Reg. L. J. 111 150-51 (1975).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Capital Facilities Corporation, SEC No-Action Letter 1982 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 2599 (July 8, 1982); American Security Bank, SEC No-Action Letter 1980 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3341 (May 29, 1980).

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 6.05[4] supra.

(n22)Footnote 22. See § 6.05[1][c] supra.

(n23)Footnote 23. See Hazel, Inc., n.17 supra.

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g., Bank of New Hampshire Corp., SEC No-Action Letter 1981 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 3179 (March 4, 1981). See also analysis contained in § 6.03[3] supra .

(n25)Footnote 25. The Section "4(11/2)" Phenomenon: Private Resales of "Restricted" Securities, n.1 supra, at 1975. The concept of coming to rest existed prior to the adoption of Rule 144 and the ABA Study Group and that produced this report felt it had continuing validity. Id. Louis Loss has discussed a similar idea:

It follows that, if the person who bought from an issuer (or affiliate) has held the securities long enough to make credible his assertion that he did not take them with a view to distribution--so that, as it used to be said, the securities have come to rest in his hands ... his later distribution should be exempted under § 4(1).

L. Loss, Fundamentals of Securities Regulation (Little, Brown & Co. 1988), at 375.

(n26)Footnote 26. ABA Debt Report, § 6.06, n.17 supra , at 1953; see also Schneider, Section 4(11/2)--Private Resales of Restricted or Control Securities, 49 Ohio St. L. J.501-510-11 (1988).

(n27)Footnote 27. ABA Debt Report, § 6.06, n.17 supra , 1931.

(n28)Footnote 28. Id. at 1958.

(n29)Footnote 29. Id. at 1930.

(n30)Footnote 30. Id. at 1935.

(n31)Footnote 31. Id. at 1949-50.

(n32)Footnote 32. Id. at 1953.

(n33)Footnote 33. In such circumstances, all the conditions of Rule 144, except the filing of a notice and the requirement that the seller have the intent to resell shortly after that filing, would be met. Id. at 1949-53.

(n34)Footnote 34. ABA Debt Report, § 6.06, n.17 supra . This type of market is generally not disrupted by resales of securities. Id. at 1932-33.

78 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Restricted and Control Securities under the Federal Securities Laws

1-6 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 6.09

§ 6.09 Resales Overseas

Restricted and control securities may also be resold overseas in reliance on Regulation S under the Securities Act. n1 Rule 904 of Regulation S permits securities of any kind to be resold outside the United States without registration provided that:

- The relevant offer or sale is made in an "offshore transaction"; n2 and
- No "directed selling efforts" are made. n3

Additional restrictions are imposed on certain persons reselling securities that were originally sold pursuant to Regulation S. n4 Equity securities of U.S. issuers sold pursuant to Regulation S are restricted, and the restricted securities of such issuers remain restricted even after resales pursuant to Regulation S. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion of Regulation S at § 6.03[3][d][ix] supra .

(n2)Footnote 2. Rule 904(a). An offshore transaction for this purpose requires that no offer be made to a person in the United States and that either the buyer be physically located outside the United States at the time the buy order is originated, or that the transaction is executed through a "designated offshore securities market" (there are currently 18 such markets), without being prearranged in the United States. Rule 902(i).

(n3)Footnote 3. Rule 904(b). Directed selling efforts means any activity undertaken for the purpose of, or that reasonably could have the effect of, conditioning the market in the United States for the securities offered overseas. Rule 902(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.03[3][d][ix].

(n5)Footnote 5. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-7505 (1998).

79 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 7

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933 SA.syn

§ SA.syn Synopsis to Chapter SA: Special Alert to Chapter 7

Special Alert to Chapter 7

80 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

SA Special Alert to Chapter 7

1-SA Federal Securities Act of 1933

Special Alert to Chapter 7

SEC ADOPTS SECURITIES OFFERING REFORM

On July 19, 2005, the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") adopted final rules (the "2005 Rules") that will significantly modify the registration, communications and offering processes under the Securities Act of 1933 (the "Securities Act"). The new rules are intended to modernize the offering process to recognize the evolution of the securities markets and the proliferation of new technologies, including the Internet. They are part of the continuing efforts by the SEC to integrate the disclosure and other processes under the Securities Act and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "Exchange Act"). The 2005 Rules became effective on December 1, 2005.

The rules, which are substantially similar to those proposed in November 2004, effect reforms in three main areas:

- communications related to registered securities offerings;
- registration and other procedures in the offering process, including the provision of a new automatic shelf registration process for large companies and a simplified shelf registration process for other companies; and
- delivery of information to investors, including "delivery" through access and notice, and the timeliness of that delivery.

Chapter 7, "Registration Forms," has been revised to reflect the changes made to existing registration forms and procedures by the 2005 Rules. The revised Chapter 7 will be published in the next release of the Securities Regulation Series.

Principal areas of reform that affect the registration forms and that will be discussed in the revised chapter include (1) changes to the eligibility requirements to register securities using Form S-3, (2) expansion of the use of incorporation by reference to previously filed reports, (3) liberalized prospectus requirements for shelf registration statements, (4) eliminating limits on the amount of securities registered in a primary offering, (5) revisions to issuer undertakings, (6) creation of an automatic shelf registration process for well-known seasoned issuers and (7) an "access equals delivery model" for delivery of a final prospectus.

81 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Registration Forms

1-7 Federal Securities Act of 1933 7.syn

AUTHOR: Cristopher Greer Melinda I. Wang Jeffery C. Fang Amanda M. Burke Andrew R. Meyerson

§ 7.syn Synopsis to Chapter 7: Registration Forms

§ 7.01 Introduction

§ 7.02 Preparation of the Registration Statement

[1] Introduction

[2] Drafting the Prospectus

[a] Guides for Preparation and Filing of Registration Statements.

[3] Integrated Disclosure

[a] Regulation S-K.

[b] Regulation C.

[c] Commission Policy on Projections.

[d] Commission Policy on Security Ratings

[4] EDGAR

§ 7.03 Form S-1--Registration of Securities of Issuers For Whom No Other Form is Authorized

[1] Facing Page

[a] Calculation of Registration Fee.

[2] The Prospectus

[a] Item 1. Forepart of the Registration Statement and Outside Front Cover Page of Prospectus.

[b] Item 2. Inside Front and Outside Back Cover Pages of Prospectus.

[c] Item 3. Summary Information, Risk Factors and Ratio of Earnings to Fixed Charges.

[i] Summary of Prospectus Information.

[ii] Address and Telephone Number.

[iii] Risk Factors.

[iv] Ratio of Earnings to Fixed Charges.

[d] Item 4. Use of Proceeds.

[e] Item 5. Determination of Offering Price.

[i] Common Equity.

[ii] Warrants, Rights and Convertible Securities.

[f] Item 6. Dilution.

[g] Item 7. Selling Security Holders.

[h] Item 8. Plan of Distribution.

[i] Underwriters and Underwriting Obligation.

[ii] New Underwriters.

[iii] Other Distributions.

[iv] Offerings on Exchange.

[v] Underwriter's Compensation.

[vi] Underwriter's Representative on Board of Directors.

[vii] Indemnification of Underwriters.

[viii] Dealers' Compensation.

[ix] Finders.

[x] Discretionary Accounts.

[xi] Passive Market Making.

[xii] Stabilization and Other Transactions.

[i] Item 9. Description of Securities to be Registered.

[i] Capital Stock.

[ii] Debt Securities.

[iii] Warrants and Rights.

[iv] Other Securities.

[v] Market Information for Securities Other Than Common Equity.

[vi] American Depositary Receipts.

[j] Item 10. Interests of Named Experts and Counsel.

[k] Item 11. Information With Respect to the Registrant.

[i] Business.

[A] General Development of Business.

[B] Financial Information About Segments.

[C] Narrative Description of Business.

[D] Financial Information About Geographic Areas.

[E] Available Information.

[F] Reports to Security Holders.

[G] Enforceability of Civil Liabilities Against Foreign Persons.

[H] Smaller Reporting Companies.

[ii] Property.

[A] Extractive Enterprises and Estimates of Reserves.

[B] Oil and Gas Producing Activities

[aa] Disclosures and Estimates of Reserves

[bb] Production Activities

[cc] Properties, Wells, Operations and Acreage

[iii] Legal Proceedings.

[iv] Common Equity.

[A] Market Information.

[B] Holders.

[C] Dividends.

[v] Financial Statements.

[vi] Selected Financial Data.

[vii] Supplementary Financial Information.

[A] Selected Quarterly Financial Data.

[B] Information About Oil and Gas Producing Activities.

[viii] Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations.

[A] Full Fiscal Years.

[B] Interim Periods.

[C] Safe Harbor.

[ix] Changes in and Disagreements with Accountants on Accounting and Financial Disclosure.

[x] Quantitative and Qualitative Disclosures About Market Risk.

[A] Quantitative Information About Market Risk.

[B] Qualitative Information About Market Risk.

[C] Interim Periods.

[D] Safe Harbor.

[xi] Directors, Executive Officers, Promoters and Control Persons.

[A] Identification of Directors.

[B] Identification of Executive Officers.

[C] Identification of Certain Significant Employees.

[D] Family Relationships.

- [E] Business Experience.
- [F] Involvement in Certain Legal Proceedings.
- [G] Promoters and Control Persons.
- [H] Audit Committee Financial Expert.
- [xii] Executive Compensation.
- [A] General.
- [B] Compensation Discussion and Analysis.
- [C] Summary Compensation Table.
- [D] Grants of Plan-Based Awards Table.
- [E] Narrative Disclosure to Summary Compensation Table and Grants of Plan-Based Awards Table.
- [F] Outstanding Equity Awards at Fiscal Year-End Table.
- [G] Option Exercises and Stock Vested Table.
- [H] Pension Benefits.
- [I] Nonqualified Defined Contribution and Other Nonqualified Deferred Compensation Plans.
- [J] Potential Payments Upon Termination or Change-in-Control.
- [K] Compensation of Directors.
- [L] Smaller Reporting Companies.
- [M] Smaller Reporting Companies--General.
- [N] Smaller Reporting Companies--Summary Compensation Table.
- [O] Smaller Reporting Companies--Narrative Disclosure to Summary Compensation Table.
- [P] Smaller Reporting Companies--Outstanding Equity Awards at Fiscal Year-End Table.
- [Q] Smaller Reporting Companies--Additional Narrative Disclosure.
- [R] Smaller Reporting Companies--Compensation of Directors.
- [xiii] Security Ownership of Certain Beneficial Owners and Management.
- [A] Security Ownership of Certain Beneficial Owners.

[B] Security Ownership of Management.

[C] Changes in Control.

[xiv] Certain Relationships and Related Transactions and Corporate Governance.

[A] Transactions With Related Persons.

[B] Review, Approval or Ratification of Transactions with Related Person.

[C] Promoters and Certain Control Persons.

[D] Smaller Reporting Companies.

[E] Director Independence.

[l] Item 11A. Material Changes.

[m] Item 12. Incorporation of Certain Information by Reference.

[n] Item 12A. Disclosure of Commission Position on Indemnification for Securities Act Liabilities.

[o] Summary Prospectus.

[3] Information Included in the Registration Statement But Not Required in Prospectus.

[a] Item 13. Other Expenses of Issuance and Distribution.

[b] Item 14. Indemnification of Directors and Officers.

[c] Item 15. Recent Sales of Unregistered Securities.

[d] Item 16. Exhibits and Financial Statement Schedules.

[i] Exhibits.

[ii] Financial Statements.

[e] Item 17. Undertakings.

[i] Rule 415 Offering.

[ii] Warrants and Rights Offerings.

[iii] Competitive Bids.

[iv] Equity Offerings of Nonreporting Registrants.

[v] Acceleration of Effective Date.

[vi] Rule 430A.

[vii] Qualification of Trust Indentures for Delayed Offerings.

[f] Signatures.

§ 7.04 Registration of Securities of Reporting Issuers--Form S-3

[1] Form S-3--Registration of Securities of Reporting Issuers Considered to be Widely Followed by Professional Securities Analysts

[a] Eligibility Standards.

[i] Registrant Requirements.

[A] Domestic Corporations.

[B] Successors.

[C] Foreign Private Issuers.

[D] Electronic Filings.

[ii] Transaction Requirements.

[A] Primary and Secondary Offerings By Certain Registrants.

[B] Primary Offerings of Non-convertible Preferred Securities.

[C] Transactions Involving Secondary Offerings.

[D] Rights Offerings, Dividend or Interest Reinvestment Plans and Conversions or Warrants.

[E] Offerings of Investment Grade Asset-backed Securities.

[F] Limited Primary Offerings by Certain Other Registrants.

[iii] Majority-Owned Subsidiaries.

[iv] Automatic Shelf Offerings by Well-Known Seasoned Issuers.

[b] Dividend or Interest Reinvestment Plans: Filing and Effectiveness of Registration Statement; Requests for Confidential Treatment.

[c] Facing Page.

[d] Registration of Additional Securities and Additional Classes of Securities.

[e] The Prospectus.

- [i] Item 1. Forepart of the Registration Statement and Outside Front Cover Page of Prospectus.
- [ii] Item 2. Inside Front and Outside Back Cover Pages of Prospectus.
- [iii] Items 3. Summary Information, 4. Use of Proceeds and 5. Determination of Offering Price.
- [iv] Item 6. Dilution.
- [v] Item 7. Selling Security Holders.
- [vi] Item 8. Plan of Distribution.
- [vii] Items 9. Description of Securities to be Registered and 10. Interests of Named Experts and Counsel.
- [viii] Item 11. Material Changes.
- [ix] Item 12. Incorporation of Certain Information by Reference.
- [x] Item 13. Disclosure of Commission Position on Indemnification for Securities Act Liabilities.
- [f] Information Included in the Registration Statement But Not Required in Prospectus.
 - [i] Items 14. Other Expenses of Issuance and Distribution; and 15 Indemnification of Directors and Officers.
 - [ii] Item 16. Exhibits.
 - [iii] Item 17. Undertakings.
 - [A] Rule 415 Offering.
 - [B] Filings Incorporating Subsequent Exchange Act Documents by Reference.
 - [C] Warrants and Rights Offerings and Competitive Bids.
 - [D] Incorporated Annual and Quarterly Reports.
 - [E] Acceleration of Effectiveness.
 - [F] Rule 430A.
- [iv] Signatures.

§ 7.05 Registration of Securities of Smaller Reporting Companies

- [1] New Category of "Smaller Reporting Companies"
- [2] Qualifications of a Smaller Reporting Company
- [3] Scaled Disclosure Requirements Applicable to Smaller Reporting Companies under Regulation S-K

- [a] Item 101. Description of Business.
- [b] Item 201. Market Price of and Dividends on Registrant's Common Equity and Related Stockholder Matters.
- [c] Item 301. Selected Financial Data.
- [d] Item 302. Supplementary Financial Information.
- [e] Item 303. Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations.
- [f] Item 305. Quantitative and Qualitative Disclosures About Market Risk.
- [g] Item 402. Executive Compensation.
- [h] Item 404. Transactions with Related Persons, Promoters and Certain Control Persons.
- [i] Item 503. Prospectus Summary, Risk Factors and Ratio of Earnings to Fixed Charges.
- [j] Item 504. Use of Proceeds.
- [k] Item 601. Exhibits.

§ 7.06 Registration of Certain Business Combinations

[1] Form S-4 Registration of Securities Issued in Business Combination Transactions

- [a] Facing Page.
- [b] The Prospectus.
 - [i] Information About the Transaction.
 - [A] Item 1. Forepart of Registration Statement and Outside Front Cover Page of Prospectus.
 - [B] Item 2. Inside Front and Outside Back Cover Pages of Prospectus.
 - [C] Item 3. Risk Factors, Ratio of Earnings to Fixed Charges and Other Information.
 - [D] Item 4. Terms of the Transaction.
 - [E] Item 5. Pro Forma Financial Information.
 - [F] Item 6. Material Contracts with the Company Being Acquired.
 - [G] Item 7. Additional Information Required for Reoffering by Persons and Parties Deemed to be Underwriters.
 - [H] Item 8. Interests of Named Experts and Counsel.
 - [I] Item 9. Disclosure of Commission Position on Indemnification for Securities Act Liabilities.

[ii] Information About the Registrant.

[A] Item 10. Information With Respect to S-3 Registrants.

[B] Item 11. Incorporation of Certain Information by Reference.

[C] Item 12. Information with Respect to S-3 Registrants.

[D] Item 13. Incorporation of Certain Information by Reference.

[E] Item 14. Information with Respect to Registrants Other Than S-3 Registrants.

[iii] Information About the Company Being Acquired.

[A] Item 15. Information With Respect to S-3 Companies.

[B] Item 16. Information With Respect to S-3 Companies.

[C] Item 17. Information With Respect to Companies Other Than S-3 Companies.

[iv] Voting and Management Information.

[A] Item 18. Information if Proxies, Consents or Authorizations are to be Solicited.

[B] Item 19. Information if Proxies, Consents or Authorizations Are Not to be Solicited or in an Exchange Offer.

[c] Information Included in the Registration Statement But Not Required in Prospectus.

[i] Item 20. Indemnification of Officers and Directors.

[ii] Item 21. Exhibits and Financial Statements Schedules.

[iii] Item 22. Undertakings.

[d] Roll-Up Transactions.

[i] Item 902. Individual Partnership Supplements.

[ii] Item 903. Summary.

[iii] Item 904. Risk Factors and Other Considerations.

[iv] Item 905. Comparative Information.

[v] Item 906. Allocation of Roll-Up Consideration.

[vi] Item 907. Background of the Roll-Up Transaction.

[vii] Item 908. Reasons for and Alternatives to the Roll-Up Transaction.

[viii] Item 909. Conflicts of Interest.

[ix] Item 910. Fairness of the Transaction.

[x] Item 911. Reports, Opinions and Appraisals.

[xi] Item 912. Source and Amount of Funds and Transaction Expenses.

[xii] Item 913. Other Provisions of the Transaction.

[xiii] Item 914. Pro Forma Financial Statements; Selected Financial Data.

[xiv] Item 915. Federal Income Tax Consequences.

§ 7.07 Foreign Registration Forms

[1] Form F-1--Registration of Securities of Foreign Private Issuers For Whom No Other Form is Authorized

[a] Eligibility Standards.

[b] Application of General Rules and Regulations.

[c] Exchange Offers.

[d] Roll-up Transactions.

[e] Registration of Additional Securities.

[f] Facing Page.

[g] The Prospectus.

[i] Items 1-3.

[ii] Item 4. Information with Respect to the Registrant and the Offering.

[A] Identity of Directors, Senior Management and Advisors.

[B] Offer Statistics and Expected Timetable.

[C] Key Information.

[D] Information on the Company.

[E] Operating and Financial Review and Prospects.

[F] Directors, Senior Management and Employees.

[G] Major Shareholders and Related Party Transactions.

[H] Financial Information.

[I] The Offer and Listing.

[J] Additional Information.

[K] Quantitative and Qualitative Disclosures About Market Risk.

[L] Description of Securities Other than Equity Securities.

[iii] Item 4A. Material Changes.

[iv] Item 5. Incorporation of Certain Information by Reference.

[v] Item 5. Disclosure of Commission Position on Indemnification for Securities Act Liabilities.

[h] Instructions as to Summary Prospectuses.

[i] Information Included in the Registration Statement but Not Required in the Prospectus.

[i] Items 6-9.

[j] Signatures.

[2] Form F-3--Registration of Securities of Reporting Issuers Widely Followed by Professional Securities Analysts.

[a] Eligibility Requirements.

[i] Registrant Requirements. All registrants must meet the following conditions in order to use Form F-3 for registration:

[ii] Transaction Requirements.

[b] Automatic Shelf Offerings by Well-Known Seasoned Issuers.

[c] Application of General Rules and Regulations.

[d] Dividend or Interest Reinvestment Plans.

[e] Registration of Additional Securities.

[f] Facing Page.

[g] The Prospectus.

[i] Items 1-3.

[ii] Item 4. Information About the Offering.

[iii] Item 5. Material Changes.

[iv] Item 6. Incorporation of Certain Information by Reference.

[v] Item 7. Disclosure of Commission Position on Indemnification for Securities Act Liabilities.

[h] Information Included in the Registration Statement but Not Required in the Prospectus.

[i] Items 8-10.

[i] Signatures.

Cristopher Greer
Melinda I. Wang
Jeffery C. Fang
Amanda M. Burke
Andrew R. Meyerson n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. This chapter was revised by Cristopher Greer (J.D., 1995, Fordham University School of Law), Melinda I. Wang (J.D., 2002, University of Pennsylvania Law School), Jeffery C. Fang (J.D., 2006, Georgetown University Law Center), Amanda M. Burke (J.D., 2009, Cornell Law School), and Andrew R. Meyerson (J.D., 2009, New York University School of Law; M.B.A., 2009, New York University Leonard N. Stern School of Business), all of whom are attorneys with the firm of Willkie Farr & Gallagher LLP, New York.

82 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Registration Forms

1-7 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 7.01

AUTHOR: Cristopher Greer Melinda I. Wang Jeffery C. Fang Amanda M. Burke Andrew R. Meyerson

§ 7.01 Introduction

Unless an exemption can be identified, securities that are not exempt must be registered and a prospectus must be given to purchasers, to satisfy the full and fair disclosure objective of the securities laws. The information included in the prospectus must be factually complete and correct, not misleading and presented in clear, concise and understandable language. Regulation S-K, a pattern of "integrated disclosure," sets forth the content requirements for disclosure documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended (the "Securities Act"), and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "Exchange Act"). Regulation S-K contains ten major sections: (1) General; (2) Business; (3) Securities of the Registrant; (4) Financial Information; (5) Management and Certain Security Holders; (6) Registration Statement and Prospectus Provisions; (7) Exhibits; (8) Miscellaneous; (9) List of Industry Guides and (10) Roll-Up Transactions. Regulation S-K requires that any projections contained in disclosure documents be accompanied by information with respect to the basis of the projections. Regulation S-K also sets forth requirements governing the use in disclosure documents of ratings of registrants' securities. n1 Regulation S-K's disclosure requirements are supplemented by other regulations, including Regulation S-X, which governs the requirements for financial statements under the Securities Act and the Exchange Act, and Regulation S-T, which governs the types of documents the Commission requires to be filed electronically.

In an effort to reform the regulation of capital formation, in July 2005 the Commission adopted rules (the "2005 Rules") significantly modifying the offering process under the Securities Act. n2 The 2005 Rules were intended to modernize and streamline the offering process and continue the evolution into a more integrated disclosure system. The 2005 Rules effect reforms in three main areas: (1) registration and other procedures in the offering process, including the provision of a new automatic shelf registration process for large companies and a simplified shelf registration process for other companies; (2) communications related to registered securities offerings; and (3) delivery of information to investors and the timeliness of that delivery. The 2005 Rules distinguish among four categories of issuers and create a new category of issuer, the "well-known seasoned issuer" (referred to as "WKSIs") that benefits from the most far-reaching reforms. Changes made to existing registration forms and procedures by the 2005 Rules will be addressed in the appropriate sections of this chapter. n3

WKSIs are generally defined as an issuer eligible to file on Form S-3 or Form F-3 with at least $700 million of worldwide common equity market capitalization held by non-affiliates or $1 billion aggregate amount of non-convertible (other than common equity) registered in primary offerings during the past three years. n4

Registration on Form S-1 is for use by registrants for whom no other form is prescribed. It is generally used by registrants who have never filed or who have been filing reports under the Exchange Act for less than one year. Form S-1 requires more extensive disclosure than any of the other forms used for registration of securities under the Securities Act, requiring that information relating to the offering and information concerning the registrant be included in the prospectus. In describing the offering on Form S-1, the registrant must provide information concerning: the risk factors present in the offering; the registrant's ratio of earnings to fixed charges; the use that the issuer will make of the proceeds of the offering; the plan of distribution of the offered securities, including any compensation to be paid or given to underwriters and dealers; a description of the securities being offered; and how the price of the securities was determined. In describing the registrant, Form S-1 must include the information specified by Regulation S-K, including information describing the registrant's business, properties and common equity securities; details with respect to legal proceedings to which the registrant is a party; the identity, business background and compensation of the registrant's directors and officers; n5 and an account of the security holdings of officers, directors and certain other beneficial owners of the registrant's securities and of certain transactions between the registrant and its management. In addition, Form S-1 must include the registrant's audited financial statements and management's discussion and analysis of the registrant's financial condition and the results of its operations. The 2005 Rules amended Form S-1 to expand the types of issuers that may incorporate information by reference, without requiring delivery of the incorporated documents (except on request). n6

Special registration forms, which provide for less extensive prospectus disclosure than Form S-1, are available for use by certain registrants. Generally, these forms are available to registrants that have been reporting companies under Section 13 or Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act. n7

Seasoned registrants may use Form S-3 to register their securities. Form S-3 relies on incorporation by reference of Exchange Act filings, and only requires disclosure in the prospectus of information concerning the offering and material facts not previously disclosed by the registrant in its Exchange Act filings. n8

Effective February 2008, registrants could no longer use Form SB-1 and Form SB-2 to offer securities to the public, as those forms were rescinded. n9 In an effort to further simplify and streamline the disclosure requirements for small issuers, the Commission adopted amendments that created a new designation, "smaller reporting company," to replace the "small business issuer" definition found in Regulation S-B. n10 Such companies must file on the appropriate Securities Act registration form without an "SB" designation.

Form S-4 is used to register securities issued in certain business combination transactions described in Rule 145. In general, Form S-4 requires information about the transaction including the terms of the transaction; the business of each of the parties; the percentage of voting shares required for approval; what state or federal regulatory requirements must be complied with to proceed with the transaction; and the tax consequences of the transaction. n11

Registration Forms F-1 and F-3 are available for use by foreign private issuers. n12 The forms are substantially similar to Forms S-1 and S-3, with certain notable exceptions. Perhaps most significantly, the financial statements can be prepared in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards ("IFRS") as issued by the International Accounting Standards Board (the "IASB"), without reconciliation to generally accepted accounting principles in the United States. n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 7.03[3] infra. Regulation S-K is reprinted in the Securities Primary Law Sourcebook, Volume D, Section K (Matthew Bender).

(n2)Footnote 2. Sec. Act. Rel. No. 33-8591 (2005).

(n3)Footnote 3. One way in which the 2005 Rules liberalized communications restrictions is by permitting written communications that constitute offers outside the statutory prospectus, under certain conditions. Such a written communication is defined as a "free writing prospectus." If the conditions of the rules are satisfied, a free writing prospectus can be used to communicate information about an offering outside of the statutory prospectus. Permitted free writing prospectuses are not deemed part of the registration statement (though certain free writing prospectuses must satisfy their own filing conditions). Because they are distinct from the registration forms and the statutory prospectus they have not been addressed further in this chapter.

Certain issuers and offerings will not be eligible to use free writing prospectuses or the other new communications safe harbors and exemptions. Ineligible issuers include reporting issuers that are not current in their Exchange Act reporting obligations, blank check issuers, shell companies and penny stock issuers. Ineligible offerings include offerings by registered investments companies or business development companies and offerings that are exchange offers or business combination transactions that are subject to Regulation M-A. See § 7.04[1] infra.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 7.04[1] infra. Whether an issuer satisfies the eligibility requirements of Form S-3 or F-3 and its status as an "eligible issuer" is determined at the time of filing of the relevant registration statement and thereafter at the time of the annual update of that registration statement pursuant to Section 10(a)(3) under the Securities Act upon the filing of the issuer's annual report on Form 10-K or 20-F. Issuers' non-affiliate equity market capitalization and the aggregate amount of their non-convertible securities issuances are measured within 60 days of such eligibility determination.

(n5)Footnote 5. Effective November 7, 2006, the Commission significantly amended the executive compensation disclosure requirements of Regulation S-K in an effort to provide investors with a clearer and more complete picture of compensation earned by a company's principal executive officer, principal financial officer and highest paid executive officers and members of its board of directors. See § 7.03[2][k][xii] infra; see also Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8732 (2006).

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 7.03 infra.

(n7)Footnote 7. Prior to the adoption of the 2005 Rules, Form S-2 was available for use by registrants to incorporate information about themselves from the registrant's annual report to security holders pursuant to Exchange Act Rules 14a-3 or 14c-3 and the registrant's latest quarterly report if copies of those reports were delivered together with the prospectus and contained the latest financial information specified by Form S-2. If the registrant's latest annual report was not delivered with the prospectus, Form S-2 required the registrant to include in the prospectus a description of its business and certain financial information. Further, a registrant filing on Form S-2 specifically incorporated by reference in the prospectus certain portions of the registrant's Exchange Act filings.

Form S-2 was meant to minimize duplicative reporting while providing for incorporated information to be delivered with the prospectus. The form was rendered superfluous by the expansion of the types of issuers that may incorporate information by reference using other forms and, therefore, was eliminated by the 2005 Rules.

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 7.04[1] infra. The 2005 Rules allow for additional Form S-3 or Form F-3 disclosures to be included through prospectus supplements and Exchange Act reports.

(n9)Footnote 9. See SEC Act Rel. No. 33-8876.

(n10)Footnote 10. For a discussion on how a registrant qualifies as a "smaller reporting company," see § 7.05 infra. The amendments also rescinded Regulation S-B and consolidated the scaled disclosure requirements applicable to smaller reporting companies into Regulation S-K. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-8876.

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 7.06 infra.

(n12)Footnote 12. Form F-2 was eliminated along with Form S-2 by the 2005 Rules, under the same rationale.

(n13)Footnote 13. See § 7.07 infra.

83 of 170 DOCUMENTS

Federal Securities Act of 1933

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Registration Forms

1-7 Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 7.02

AUTHOR: Cristopher Greer Melinda I. Wang Jeffery C. Fang Amanda M. Burke Andrew R. Meyerson

§ 7.02 Preparation of the Registration Statement

[1] Introduction

The basic objectives of the Securities Act are to provide full and fair disclosure with respect to securities sold in interstate commerce or through the mails and to prevent fraud in such sales. The registration provisions of the Securities Act also attempt to prevent fraud. n1 The objective of full and fair disclosure is accomplished by requiring registration. Broadly stated, before a public offering of securities may be made through the mails or in interstate commerce, a registration statement must be filed with the Commission. A prospectus based on the information in the registration statement must be provided to purchasers. Only when the registration statement has become effective may the securities be sold. n2

Section 7 of the Securities Act states that the information and documents that must be included in a registration statement are those specified in Schedule A or Schedule B:

- the registration statement for a security other than a security issued by a foreign government, or a political subdivision thereof, must contain the information and documents specified in Schedule A; n3 and
- the registration statement for a security issued by a foreign government or its political subdivision must include the information and documents specified in Schedule B.

Under certain circumstances, however, the Commission may provide that any of the information or documents specified in Schedule A or B need not be included in a registration statement for a class of issuers or securities. n4 The Commission also may, by rule or regulation, require the inclusion of additional information and documents as the Commission deems necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors. n5

The process of registration, from the standpoint of filing and processing procedures, is discussed in a later chapter. n6 This chapter is concerned with the actual preparation of a registration statement.

Form S-1 is the general form for registration of securities under the Securities Act. Form S-1 consists of Part I and Part II. n7 Part I, the prospectus, calls for 12 items of information, including financial statements. However, since the prospectus is written in narrative form, the information required need not be presented in the numerical order in which the items appear. n8

Part II calls for five items of information not required in the prospectus; it is prepared and filed in item-and-answer form. n9

[2] Drafting the Prospectus

Since the prospectus is usually the only document read by prospective investors and upon which those investors can base an informed judgment, great care must be exercised in its preparation.

