With a few limited exceptions [see 13.39], a contract must have a sufficient cause or consideration [CC § 1550]. Unless the contract is in writing, the party bringing an action on contract must plead the existence of consideration in the complaint [Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n (1893) 100 C 429, 433, 34 P 1089 ; see Evid Code § 500]. If the action is based on a written contract, there is a presumption of consideration [CC § 1614].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

Generally speaking, attaching a copy of the contract to the complaint promotes efficiency and clarity. Those who believe that prosaic complaints are more persuasive can still quote liberally from the contract.

Distinguish--Contracts Fully Executed:

The requirement of consideration applies only to executory contracts. After the contract is fully executed on both sides, the question of consideration becomes immaterial [Schiffman v. Atlas Mill Supply, Inc. (1961) 193 CA2d 847, 851-853, 14 CR 708] .

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VII. DETERMINING EXISTENCE OF ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION

1-13 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 13.38

13.38 Party Seeking to Avoid Written Contract Must Overcome Presumption of Consideration.

13.38[1] Presumption May Be Rebutted by Evidence Showing Lack of Consideration. A written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration [CC § 1614]. The presumption does not apply to ordinary letters, but only to more formal legal documents [Michaelian v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1996) 50 CA4th 1093, 1112, 58 CR2d 133] .

The presumption may be rebutted by evidence that shows a lack of consideration [Glickman v. Collins (1975) 13 C3d 852, 861, 120 CR 76, 533 P2d 204]. Extrinsic evidence is always admissible to show that there was no consideration for an agreement [Simmons v. California Inst. of Tech. (1949) 34 C2d 264, 272, 209 P2d 581 ; Star Pac. Invs., Inc. v. Oro Hills Ranch, Inc. (1981) 121 CA3d 447, 456, 176 CR 546] .

13.38[2] Presumption May Affect Burden of Producing Evidence, Not Burden of Proof. The party seeking to invalidate or avoid a written contract has the burden of showing the insufficiency or lack of consideration [CC § 1615]. However, it is not clear whether the presumption of consideration raised by CC § 1614 and the burden placed on the opposing party by CC § 1615 concern the burden of proof or the burden of producing evidence. At least one court has held that the presumption of consideration goes to the burden of producing evidence, not the burden of proof [Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy, Inc. v. Seyfert (1990) 219 CA3d 875, 884, 268 CR 505] .

Under this analysis, the presumption is triggered when the party seeking to enforce the contract produces the written contract. When the party against whom the presumption operates produces some quantum of evidence casting doubt on the truth of the presumed fact, the other party is no longer aided by the presumption. The presumption disappears, leaving it to the party in whose favor it initially worked to prove the fact in question [Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy, Inc. v. Seyfert (1990) 219 CA3d 875, 882, 268 CR 505] .

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VII. DETERMINING EXISTENCE OF ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION

1-13 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 13.39

13.39 Specified Contracts Are Exempted by Statute From Consideration Requirement.

13.39[1] Written Release of Debtor Does Not Require Consideration. A creditor's written release of the debtor from an obligation does not require new consideration to be effective [CC § 1541].

13.39[2] Written Acceptance of Part Performance in Satisfaction of Obligation Does Not Require Consideration. Part performance of an obligation, either before or after a breach of that obligation, is effective to extinguish the obligation, without new consideration when [CC § 1524]:

- The part performance is expressly accepted by the creditor, in writing, in satisfaction; or
- The part performance is rendered pursuant to an agreement in writing for that purpose.

13.39[3] Written Modification of Oral Contract Does Not Require Consideration. A contract not in writing may be modified in any respect by consent of the parties, in writing, without a new consideration [CC § 1697].

Distinguish--Oral Modification of Written Contract Requires Consideration:

Unless the contract otherwise expressly provides, a contract in writing may be modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration. The statute of frauds must be satisfied if the contract as modified is within its provisions [CC § 1698(c)].

Jury Instructions:

Consideration for Modification of Contract Not in Writing, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3A, Instr. MB 300A.45 (Matthew Bender).

Consideration Required for Modification of Written Contract by Oral Agreement, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3A, Instr. MB 300A.46 (Matthew Bender).

Oral Modification of Written Contract Dependent on Waiver or Estoppel, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3A, Instr. MB 300A.47 (Matthew Bender).

13.39[4] Authorization of Agent Does Not Require Consideration. The authorization of an agent to act on behalf of the principal does not require consideration to be binding on the principal [CC § 2308].

13.39[5] Some Surety Obligations Do Not Require Consideration. When a suretyship obligation is entered into at the same time as the original obligation, or with the acceptance of the original obligation by the creditor, and forms with that obligation a part of the consideration to the creditor, no other consideration is required [CC § 2792]. In all other cases, there must be a consideration distinct from that of the original obligation [CC § 2792].

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VII. DETERMINING EXISTENCE OF ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION

1-13 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 13.40

13.40 Consideration May Be Benefit to Promisor or Detriment to Promisee.

Consideration is an act or return promise, bargained for and given in exchange for a promise, which either gives a benefit to the promisor or imposes a burden on the promisee [CC § 1605; Steiner v. Thexton (2010) 48 CA4th 411, 420-421, 106 CR3d 252, 226 P3d 359 (buyer's effort to obtain parcel split conferred benefit on seller and constituted prejudice suffered by buyer)].

Example--Detriment to Promisee:

A closely held corporation brought a declaratory relief action to have certain of its commitments under a reorganization agreement declared unenforceable for a lack of consideration. The corporation's original owner transferred ownership and control of the corporation to a new owner, to whom the corporation owed a large debt. Although the corporation agreed to make royalty payments to the original owner, the corporation argued in the declaratory relief action that the promise to make those payments was not supported by consideration. The consideration for the promise to pay royalties to the original owner was the detriment to the promisee, that is, the transfer of stock by the original owner to the new owner [Flojo Int'l, Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 CA4th 713, 719, 6 CR2d 99] .

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VII. DETERMINING EXISTENCE OF ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION

13.41 Consideration Must Be Part of Bargain or Agreed Exchange.

The consideration for a promise must be bargained for and given in exchange for the promise for the purported contract to be valid [Steiner v. Thexton (2010) 48 C4th 411, 422, 106 CR3d 252, 226 P3d 359 (buyer's promise to obtain parcel split was bargained for and induced seller to grant the option)].

Example--Promise Not Bargained for Not Enforceable:

An attorney who arranged a loan could not enforce a subsequent promise by the grateful borrower to transfer stock to the attorney because the promise of transfer was not bargained for prior to the arranging of the loan. The promise was merely an unenforceable promise to make a gift [Passante v. McWilliam (1997) 53 CA4th 1240, 1247-1249, 62 CR2d 298] .

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VII. DETERMINING EXISTENCE OF ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION

1-13 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 13.42

13.42 Consideration Must Be Sufficient.

13.42[1] Existing Legal or Moral Obligation of Promisor May Constitute Consideration Only in Limited Circumstances.

13.42[1][a] Existing Obligation May Constitute Consideration Only to Extent of Obligation. An existing legal obligation of the promisor, or a moral obligation originating in a benefit conferred on the promisor or a detriment to the promisee, is a good consideration for a promise [CC § 1606]. However, each of these obligations constitutes good consideration only to the extent of the obligation [CC § 1606].

Past consideration will not support a promise that is in excess of the promisor's existing debt or duty [Leonard v. Gallagher (1965) 235 CA2d 362, 373, 45 CR 211] .

Example--Past Obligation As Consideration:

The promisor's own past debt, on which the statute of limitations had run, was sufficient consideration for the promisor's promise to assign commissions to the creditor to pay that debt, but the promisor's past debt was not consideration for the promisor's promise to pay his mother's debt to the same creditor [Leonard v. Gallagher (1965) 235 CA2d 362, 372-374, 45 CR 211] .

13.42[1][b] Moral Consideration Is Sufficient Only If Enforceable Obligation Once Existed. A moral consideration will support an express promise only if an enforceable obligation once existed [Estate of McConnell (1936) 6 C2d 493, 498, 58 P2d 639] .

Example--Moral Consideration Insufficient:

A decedent had given a promissory note to his former partner in lieu of making a devise in his will. No consideration had been given for the note. The promise to pay the amount of the note was not supported by an existing moral obligation, enforceable against the decedent's estate, because the note itself was never an enforceable obligation [Estate of McConnell (1936) 6 C2d 493, 498, 58 P2d 639] .

Example--Moral Consideration Sufficient:

An ex-husband's moral obligation to provide support for his ex-wife was sufficient consideration for his promise to continue making monthly payments, when that moral obligation arose out of his failure to pay a lump sum, required by the parties' property settlement agreement, which was intended as a substitute for previous monthly support [Wilson v. Wilson (1960) 54 C2d 264, 272, 5 CR 317, 352 P2d 725] .

13.42[2] Promises Mutual in Obligation Constitute Consideration. A promise is good consideration for a return promise [CC § 1605; Porporato v. Devincenzi (1968) 261 CA2d 670, 675, 68 CR 210] . To create an enforceable contract, the promises must be mutual in obligation [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 C2d 119, 122, 330 P2d 625] .

Example:

Plaintiff signed a document agreeing to dismiss its claim against defendants in exchange for the payment of money. Defendants neither signed the document nor made any promise in exchange for plaintiff's promise. No contract was formed because there was no mutuality of obligation. Plaintiff's promise constituted a unilateral offer that was revocable until accepted by defendants by the tender of payment [Sully-Miller Contracting Co. v. Gledson/Cashman Constr., Inc. (2002) 103 CA4th 30, 36, 126 CR2d 400] .

Exception:

An agreement that is otherwise illusory may be enforced when the promisor has rendered at least part performance [Steiner v. Thexton (2010) 48 C4th 411, 423, 106 CR3d 252, 226 P3d 359 (buyer's part performance of bargained-for promise to seek a parcel split cured the initially illusory nature of the promise)].

Cross Reference:

Memorandum for party attacking existence of contract, see 13.61.

13.42[3] Sufficiency of Consideration Does Not Depend on Intrinsic Value. "Good consideration" means a valuable consideration [Horton v. Kyburz (1959) 53 C2d 59, 65, 346 P2d 399] . However, the sufficiency of the consideration does not depend on its market value [see Horton v. Kyburz (1959) 53 C2d 59, 66, 346 P2d 399 ; Huong Que, Inc. v. Luu (2007) 150 CA4th 400, 415 (quantum of consideration is generally irrelevant as long as it has some value)].

The court determines the sufficiency of the consideration as of the time the parties entered in to the contract [Crail v. Blakely (1973) 8 C3d 744, 753, 106 CR 187, 505 P2d 1027] . If there was sufficient consideration at the time the parties made the agreement, the fact that it subsequently diminished in value or became of no value does not relieve the promisor from liability on the promise [Riverside Water Co. v. Jurupa Ditch Co. (1960) 187 CA2d 538, 542, 9 CR 742] .

Jury Instructions:

Consideration--Thing of Value, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3A, Instr. MB 300A.40 (Matthew Bender).

13.42[4] Consideration Must Not Violate Law or Public Policy. The consideration for a contract must be lawful [CC § 1607], which means that it must comport with express provisions of law, policies of expressed law, and public policy [see CC §§ 1607, 1667].

Example--Contract Unenforceable When Consideration Was Legal Impossibility.

A contract between two United States citizens was held to be for the purchase and sale, rather than the lease, of land located in Mexico, and therefore was unenforceable for lack of consideration because Mexican law expressly prohibited anyone other than citizens of Mexico from owning the land in question. Plaintiff therefore was legally incapable of conveying the property to defendant [Losson v. Blodgett (1934) 1 CA2d 13, 18, 36 P2d 147] .

 Cross Reference:

Detailed discussion of contracts violating law, public policy, or prohibition on unconscionability, see Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

13.42[5] Amount of Consideration Need Not Be Specified.

13.42[5][a] Amount May Be Determined by Third Party or According to Specified Standard. A consideration may be executed or executory [CC § 1609]. When a consideration is executory, the contract need not specify its amount or the means of determining it [CC § 1610]. The amount may be left to the decision of a third person, or regulated by any specified standard [CC § 1610].

13.42[5][b] Amount Otherwise Must Be What Object of Contract Is Reasonably Worth. The consideration for a contract must be the amount of money that the object of the contract is reasonably worth if [CC § 1611]:

- The contract does not determine the amount of the consideration or the method by which it is to be determined; or
- The contract leaves the amount of the consideration to the discretion of an interested party.

13.42[5][c] Contract Is Void If Method for Ascertaining Consideration Is Impossible. When a contract provides an exclusive method for determining its consideration, and that method is on its face impossible of execution, the entire contract is void [CC § 1612].

If the exclusive method for determining consideration appears possible on its face, but in fact is, or becomes, impossible of execution, only the provision containing the method for determining consideration is void [CC § 1613].

13.42[6] Promise to Perform Existing Duty Is Not Adequate Consideration. A promise to perform what the promisor is already legally bound to do does not constitute adequate consideration for the counter promise, because there is no exchange of value [Grant v. The Aerodraulics Co. (1949) 91 CA2d 68, 75, 204 P2d 683] .

Examples:

- Borrowers' promise to make monthly loan payments, plus interest and late fees, was not adequate consideration for lender's promise to postpone a foreclosure sale, because borrowers promised to do nothing more than what they were already legally obligated to do [Garcia v. World Savings, FSB (2010) 183 CA4th 1031, 1040, 107 CR3d 683] .

- A corporation operating a low-level radioactive waste disposal facility for the State Department of Health Services brought an action for breach of contract based on a memorandum of understanding between the parties. The memorandum could not be the basis for a breach of contract claim because it lacked consideration. The corporation promised in the memorandum that it would maintain the promised schedule set forth in its licensee-designee application and, if it did not, it would be subject to forfeiture of its performance bond. However, the promise did not constitute consideration because the corporation was already bound to perform those obligations on the same schedule, or lose its bond, under governing regulations [US Ecology, Inc. v. State of California (2001) 92 CA4th 113, 128-129, 111 CR2d 689] .

- Defendant bought an automobile from plaintiff. The agreement provided that if defendant defaulted on the installment payments, plaintiff was entitled to repossess the automobile. When defendant defaulted on the payments, plaintiff repossessed the automobile and resold it for a sum less than defendant owed. Plaintiff then sued defendant to recover the deficiency. Defendant claimed that plaintiff's agent waived defendant's obligation to pay the entire purchase price when he repossessed the car. There was no consideration for the waiver of the obligation because the defendant merely relinquished possession, which he was legally bound to do under the express terms of the contract [General Motors Acceptance Corp. v. Brown (1934) 2 CA2d 646, 650, 38 P2d 482] .

Jury Instructions:

Existing Obligation and Compromise of Existing Claim, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3A, Instr. MB 300A.42 (Matthew Bender).

13.42[7] Relinquishment of Claimed Right May Constitute Adequate Consideration. Waiver or relinquishment of a purported right constitutes adequate consideration if the purported right was one the promisee could have urged in good faith and which presented some bona fide question of validity [Walters v. Calderon (1972) 25 CA3d 863, 873-874, 102 CR 89] .

Waiver or relinquishment of a claimed right that may constitute consideration include the following [Booth v. Bond (1942) 56 CA2d 153, 157, 132 P2d 520] :

- Cancellation of an existing debt.
- Release of security.
- Forbearance to sue.

If the right waived and relinquished was obviously worthless and ineffective, a promise to relinquish it would not constitute valid consideration [Walters v. Calderon (1972) 25 CA3d 863, 873-874, 102 CR 89] .

If a buyer agrees to buy what he or she needs or requires of a certain product, and the seller absolutely promises to sell, the resulting contract is not void for lack of consideration [Ross v. Frank W. Dunne Co. (1953) 119 CA2d 690, 698, 260 P2d 104] . The resulting contract imposes on the buyer the duty of buying what the buyer requires from the seller and on the seller the obligation to sell to the buyer at the contract price [*Ross v. Frank W. VII. DETERMINING EXISTENCE OF ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION

13.44 Contracts Containing Satisfaction Clauses Do Not Lack Consideration.

Two types of contracts that make the duty of performance of one of the parties conditional on that party's satisfaction are enforceable [see Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 C2d 119, 122-123, 126, 330 P2d 625] :

- Contracts in which the condition calls for satisfaction as to commercial value or quality, operative fitness, or mechanical utility, because dissatisfaction cannot be claimed arbitrarily, unreasonably, or capriciously.
- Contracts containing satisfaction clauses involving fancy, taste, or judgment, because, even though the satisfaction is dependent on a subjective standard, the party's determination of dissatisfaction must be made in good faith.

Example:

An agreement to sell real property for a fixed price payable in full on a specified date contained a provision making the purchaser's obligation to pay dependent on him obtaining satisfactory leases for the premises. The agreement did not lack mutuality of obligation because the purchaser had a duty to exercise his judgment in good faith [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 C2d 119, 122-124, 126, 330 P2d 625] .

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VII. DETERMINING EXISTENCE OF ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION

1-13 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 13.45

13.45 Promissory Estoppel May Substitute for Consideration.

13.45[1] Promise Without Consideration May Be Binding to Avoid Injustice. A promise may be binding and enforceable, without consideration, under the doctrine of promissory estoppel if [C & K Eng'g Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 C3d 1, 6, 151 CR 323, 587 P2d 1136] :

- The promise was one that the promisor should have reasonably expected to induce action or forbearance of a definite and substantial character on the part of the promisee.
- The promise induced that action or forbearance.
- Injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise.

Examples:

■ Plaintiff general contractor used a bid submitted by defendant subcontractor to submit its own bid for a project. Plaintiff was awarded the contract for the project. The next day, defendant told plaintiff that a mistake had been made in computing defendant's bid, and defendant refused to do the work for the bid amount. Defendant claimed that there was no enforceable contract between the parties because it revoked its offer before plaintiff communicated its acceptance to defendant. Because defendant had reason to expect that plaintiff would rely on defendant's bid to submit its own bid, and plaintiff had no reason to know that defendant had made a mistake in its bid, the defendant's promise to perform the work at the bid price was enforceable under the doctrine of promissory estoppel [Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 C2d 409, 413-416, 333 P2d 757] .

■ An insured injured in a single car accident sued his insurer, alleging that the insurer disposed of a defective tire after being informed of the importance of the tire to a case against the manufacturer. The trial court erred in granting nonsuit for the defendant insurer, because the insured's allegations that the insurer promised to preserve the tire, and the insured's reliance on that promise, set forth prima facie evidence of promissory estoppel [Cooper v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. (2009) 177 CA4th 876, 896, 99 CR3d 870] .

In order to recover on the basis of promissory estoppel, the promisee must prove that its reliance on the promise was reasonable [Diede Construction, Inc. v. Monterey Mechanical Co. (2004) 125 CA4th 380, 391-392 (remanding for determination whether general contractor's reliance on subcontractor's mistake bid was reasonable)].

Exception:

Promissory estoppel will not be applied against the government if to do so would effectively nullify a strong rule of policy, adopted for the benefit of the public. Courts will apply the rules of estoppel against a public agency only in those special cases in which the interests of justice clearly require it [Poway Royal Mobilehome Owners Assn. v. City of Poway (2007) 149 CA4th 1460, 1471, 58 CR3d 153].

Jury Instructions:

Promissory Estoppel, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3A, Instr. MB 300A.60 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Memorandum for party defending existence of contract, see 13.65.

Detailed discussion of promissory estoppel, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender).

13.45[2] Promise Must Be Clear and Unambiguous. To be enforceable, the promise must be clear and unambiguous [Lange v. TIG Ins. Co. (1998) 68 CA4th 1179, 1185, 81 CR2d 39] .

Examples:

- An insurer sent a letter to independent insurance brokers stating that the brokerage agreement would be terminated July 6, 1996. Before that date, the insurer exercised its right, under the agreement, to terminate the agreement immediately for cause. The letter did not constitute an enforceable promise not to terminate the brokerage agreement prior to July 6, 1996. The letter did not contain a promise of any sort, let alone a promise of sufficient definitiveness and clarity to justify applying promissory estoppel [Lange v. TIG Ins. Co. (1998) 68 CA4th 1179, 1185-1187, 81 CR2d 39] .

- A mortgage broker representing borrowers asked their lender for an extension of time to make delinquent loan payments until the first week in September, when a new pending loan was scheduled to close. The lender's representative responded by assuring the mortgage broker that he would extend the date of any foreclosure sale so long as the borrowers' new loan closed in the first week of September. The lender's representative's promise was sufficiently definite to support promissory estoppel [Garcia v. World Savings, FSB (2010) 183 CA4th 1031, 1045, 107 CR3d 683] .

13.45[3] If Reliance Was Part of Bargain, Doctrine Does Not Apply. If the promisee's reliance was bargained for, the law of consideration governs, and the doctrine of promissory estoppel does not apply [Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 C2d 240, 249, 74 CR 398, 449 P2d 462] .

Example:

Plaintiff employee alleged that his employer made an express oral promise that he would be granted a merit step increase in wages every year. Plaintiff also alleged that he relied on that promise by accepting employment with the employer, continuing in its employ, and refraining from accepting another job. Based on these allegations, the promise of a merit increase was part of the bargain under which the plaintiff entered employment and remained in his position. The promise was bargained for, and the plaintiff rendered the consideration called for by the employment contract by accepting employment, remaining in his position, and performing his job satisfactorily. The doctrine of promissory estoppel therefore did not apply [Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 C2d 240, 249-250, 74 CR 398, 449 P2d 462] .

13.45[4] Plaintiff Must Prove That Defendant Caused Plaintiff's Damages. A plaintiff seeking recovery on a promissory estoppel theory must prove, as in an ordinary contract action, that the defendant's breach was a substantial factor in causing the plaintiff's damages [US Ecology, Inc. v. State of California (2005) 129 CA4th 887, 891]. In addition, because promissory estoppel is an equitable remedy, courts have the discretion to deny relief when the plaintiff cannot demonstrate that the defendant's actions caused the plaintiff's damages [US Ecology, Inc. v. State of California (2005) 129 CA4th 887, 891].

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VIII. DETERMINING EFFECT OF ABSENCE OF A CONTRACT TERM

13.47 Contract Need Not Set Forth Every Term and Condition to Be Enforceable.

13.47[1] Contract Must Evidence Agreement on Essential Items. A contract is void and unenforceable if it is so uncertain and indefinite that the intention of the parties in material particulars cannot be ascertained [California Lettuce Growers, Inc. v. Union Sugar Co. (1955) 45 C2d 474, 481, 289 P2d 785]. However, neither law nor equity requires that every term and condition of an agreement be set forth in the contract [Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 C4th 344, 349, 86 CR3d 366, 197 P3d 177 ; King v. Stanley (1948) 32 C2d 584, 588, 197 P2d 321].

A court may not consider the parties' conduct subsequent to the formation of a contract, including the dispute that arises and the remedy sought, in determining whether there was a meeting of the minds on essential terms [Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 C4th 344, 351-352, 86 CR3d 366, 197 P3d 177 (few contracts would be enforceable if the existence of subsequent disputes were taken as evidence that an agreement was never reached).]

Although the terms of a contract need not be stated in the minutest detail, the scope of the duty and limits of acceptable performance must be at least sufficiently defined to provide a rational basis for the assessment of damages in the case of breach [Robinson & Wilson, Inc. v. Stone (1973) 35 CA3d 396, 407, 110 CR 675].

Distinguish--Sales of Goods:

The Commercial Code provides that a meeting of the minds on all the essential terms is not required; a contract can be formed even though the parties do not agree on such terms as price, terms of payment, time and place of performance, or quantity [Com Code § 2204(3)].

Cross References:

Liberal contract formation standards under Commercial Code applicable to contracts for sale of goods, see Ch. 27, Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 27.09[1][c].

13.47[2] Law Disfavors Holding Contracts Unenforceable. The law favors carrying out the parties' intention through the enforcement of contracts and disfavors holding them unenforceable because of uncertainty [Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 C4th 344, 349, 86 CR3d 366, 197 P3d 177 ; Burrow v. Timmsen (1963) 223 CA2d 283, 288, 35 CR 668]. The defense of uncertainty precludes enforcement only when the uncertainty or incompleteness of the contract prevents the court from knowing what to enforce [Hennefer v. Butcher (1986) 182 CA3d 492, 500, 227 CR 318] .

13.47[3] Inferences From Contract and Extrinsic Evidence May Supply Missing Terms. The usual and reasonable terms found in similar contracts can be looked to, unexpressed provisions of the contract may be inferred from the writing, external facts may be relied upon, and custom and usage may be resorted to in an effort to supply a deficiency if it does not alter or vary the terms of the agreement [Hennefer v. Butcher (1986) 182 CA3d 492, 500-501, 227 CR 318] .

Example:

Buyers signed contracts to purchase homes to be built by a developer. When the buyers sought specific performance of the agreements, the developer claimed that the contracts were unenforceable because no legal description for the properties existed at the time the agreements were executed, there was no "metes and bounds" description, and the square footage and precise location of the lot lines could not be determined. However, properly admitted extrinsic evidence, including standard features sheets, site plans, floor plans, elevation plans, and tract map, rendered the description of the lots conveyed by the purchase agreements sufficiently definite for enforcement [Blackburn v. Charnley (2004) 117 CA4th 758, 766-767].

Cross References:

Memorandum for party defending existence of contract, see 13.66.

Asserting a particular construction of a contract term, see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract.

13.47[4] Uncertainty May Be Resolved by Rules of Contract Interpretation. The rules of contract interpretation [CC § 1635 et seq.] also may be applied to resolve an alleged uncertainty in a contract [see Roy v. Salisbury (1942) 21 C2d 176, 184, 130 P2d 706] .

VIII. DETERMINING EFFECT OF ABSENCE OF A CONTRACT TERM

13.48 Failure to Specify Price Does Not Necessarily Void Contract.

A contract need not specify price if it can be objectively determined [California Lettuce Growers, Inc. v. Union Sugar Co. (1955) 45 C2d 474, 482, 289 P2d 785]. However, in the absence of internal or external indicia of what the parties would have agreed upon, a court cannot supply the omitted provision [Roberts v. Adams (1958) 164 CA2d 312, 315, 330 P2d 900] .

Example:

Plaintiff buyer signed a contract to purchase land to be developed as a residential subdivision. Under the terms of the agreement, the purchase price was to be calculated after certain improvement costs were determined. The price calculation and method to be used to obtain improvement costs were specified in the agreement. Because the agreement contained an objective method to determine improvement costs, which would be used to calculate the price according to a formula specified in the agreement, the agreement was enforceable [Larwin-Southern Cal., Inc. v. JGB Inv. Co. (1979) 101 CA3d 626, 641-644, 162 CR 52] .

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VIII. DETERMINING EFFECT OF ABSENCE OF A CONTRACT TERM

1-13 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 13.49

13.49 Time for Performance or Duration of Contract May Be Implied.

13.49[1] Time for Performance May Be Deemed to Be Within Reasonable Time. If no time is specified for the performance of an act required to be performed under a contract, a reasonable time is allowed [CC § 1657; Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 C4th 344, 351, 86 CR3d 366, 197 P3d 177]. The question of what constitutes a reasonable time is a question of fact [Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 CA2d 171, 177, 317 P2d 182]. In determining what period of time would be reasonable, the situation of the parties, the nature of the transaction, and the facts of the particular case should be considered [Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 CA2d 171, 177, 317 P2d 182].

Examples:

- The parties entered into an option contract for the purchase of a condominium. The contract did not specify the length of the escrow period. After the buyer exercised the option, the parties disagreed on the length of escrow. The buyer brought an action for specific performance of the option contract. The trial court ruled for the buyer and implied an escrow period of 60 days. The Court of Appeal reversed, holding that the contract was too uncertain to enforce because it did not specify the time or manner of payment. The California Supreme Court disagreed, concluding that there was no substantial dispute over the manner of payment; the only term missing from the contract was the length of escrow. The court held that the escrow period is not a necessary term in a contract of sale, and that a reasonable time may be supplied by implication [Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 C4th 344, 351, 86 CR3d 366, 197 P3d 177].

- A member of a health maintenance organization brought a breach of contract claim against the HMO, alleging that the HMO had breached its subscriber agreement by unreasonably delaying authorization for the member's referral to a specialist. Given the history of the member's Lyme disease, his condition, and the palliative failure of the care already provided by the HMO, a six-week wait for an appointment with an infectious disease specialist could well be found unreasonable [Kotler v. PacifiCare of California (2005) 126 CA4th 950, 956].

- A construction company contracted with a roofer to provide roofing on 936 houses the company planned to build. The company made numerous representations about the project at the time the contract was signed, including representations that construction would begin approximately three weeks after the contract was signed, at a rate of approximately 10 houses per day, and that each house would be ready for roofing about three weeks after it was started. Under the circumstances, the trier of fact could properly conclude that a reasonable time for starting construction expired on a date more than two months after the contract was signed [Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 CA2d 171, 177, 317 P2d 182] .

Cross Reference:

Memorandum for party defending existence of contract, see 13.66.

13.49[2] Payment Is Deemed to Be Due Immediately. If an act to be performed is in its nature capable of being done instantly, as, for example, if it consists in the payment of money only, it must be performed immediately when the thing to be done is exactly ascertained [CC § 1657].

13.49[3] Duration of Contract May Be Implied. A contract is not fatally uncertain or indefinite merely because it omits a time for its duration. The effect of the omission of the time of the contract's duration is generally determined by a construction of the contract, and may be implied from the nature of the contract or from the circumstances surrounding it [Haggerty v. Warner (1953) 115 CA2d 468, 473, 252 P2d 373] .

Example:

Defendants manufactured a mechanism, called "units," for talking dolls and other toys. Defendants hired plaintiff to promote the units for them. Their agreement stated that defendants would pay plaintiff five percent of all their billings on sales of the units. The contract was not void because it made no provision for its termination. The contract was subject to the construction, among others, that it was to continue as long as billings for the units were made by defendants [Haggerty v. Warner (1953) 115 CA2d 468, 471-473, 252 P2d 373] .

13.50 Failure to Specify Quantity Does Not Render Requirements Contract Unenforceable.

A contract that reserves in either party an option to deliver or to accept personal property, or which contracts for future delivery of personal property, with the quantity of the delivery being dependent on the will, wish, want, or desire of the other party, is void for lack of consideration and mutuality [California Ref. Co. v. Producers Ref. Corp. (1938) 25 CA2d 104, 108, 76 P2d 553] .

However, if a buyer agrees to buy what he or she needs or requires of a particular product, and the seller absolutely promises to sell, the resulting contract is enforceable [Ross v. Frank W. Dunne Co. (1953) 119 CA2d 690, 698, 260 P2d 104] .

VIII. DETERMINING EFFECT OF ABSENCE OF A CONTRACT TERM

13.51 Conduct of Parties May Render Contract Enforceable Despite Uncertainty.

Although an agreement may be indefinite or uncertain in its inception, subsequent performance by the parties under the agreement cures the defect and renders the contract enforceable [Bohman v. Berg (1960) 54 C2d 787, 794-795, 8 CR 441, 356 P2d 185] . When one party performs under the contract, and the other party accepts that performance without objection, it is assumed that the performance was that contemplated by the agreement [Bohman v. Berg (1960) 54 C2d 787, 795, 8 CR 441, 356 P2d 185] .

Example:

Plaintiff, a custom auto body builder and metal fabricator, entered into an agreement to convert defendant's bus into a luxurious "land yacht." The contract price was $25,000. Plaintiff completed the work, but it was more complex and difficult than anticipated. Although defendant paid the contract price, plaintiff brought an action seeking the reasonable value of services, labor and materials furnished. The reasonable value was an amount in excess of the agreed-upon price. Defendant contended that he was obligated to pay no more than the contract price for the work specified in that agreement. Plaintiff claimed that the contract was too uncertain to be enforceable because it did not include all the details of the work to be done. However, the conduct of the plaintiff in performing the work specified in the agreement indicated that the contract was not too indefinite to be performed. Plaintiff accepted the risk that the nature of the project might result in unexpected cost to him. Plaintiff was not entitled to receive more than the contract price because the risk materialized. Plaintiff was bound by the terms of the contract, including the agreed-upon price [Bohman v. Berg (1960) 54 C2d 787, 795, 8 CR 441, 356 P2d 185] .

Chapter 13 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element
VIII. DETERMINING EFFECT OF ABSENCE OF A CONTRACT TERM

1-13 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 13.52

13.52 Specific Contract Terms May Be Required by Statute.

13.52[1] Many Types of Contracts Are Governed by Statute. Various types of contracts, particularly consumer contracts, are governed by statute.

Examples:

- Home improvement contracts [B&P Code § 7150 et seq.].
- Dance studio contracts [CC § 1812.50 et seq.].
- Home solicitation contracts [CC § 1689.5 et seq.].
- Dating service contracts [CC § 1694 et seq.].
- Employment agency and employment counseling services contracts [CC § 1812.500 et seq.].

➡ Cross Reference:

Detailed discussion of issues relating to statutory requirements for contracts, see Ch. 15, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities.

13.52[2] Particular Contract Terms May Be Specified. When a contract is governed by a statutory scheme, specific contract terms may be required by statute, such as:

- Specific language notifying the purchaser of a right to cancel.

Examples:

- Home solicitation contracts [CC § 1689.7].

- Dating service contracts [CC § 1694.2].
- Seminar sales solicitation contracts [CC § 1689.21].
- Weight loss program or center contracts [CC § 1694.7].
- Mandatory contents of the contract.

Examples:

- Retail installment sales contracts [CC § 1803.3].
- Home equity sales contracts [CC § 1695.3].
- Credit services contracts [CC § 1789.16].
- Discount buying services contracts [CC § 1812.107].
- Dance studio lessons contracts [CC § 1812.54].
- Contracts with auctioneers for sale of goods at auction [CC § 1812.608(d)].
- Contingency fee contracts [B&P Code § 6147].
- Required language for an arbitration provision, if one is to be included in the contract.

Examples:

- Medical services contracts [CCP § 1295].
- Contract with contractors for work on residential property [B&P Code § 7191].
- A clause providing for refund in the case of death, disability, or relocation of the residence of the purchaser.

Examples:

- Dating service contracts [CC § 1694.3].
- Dance studio lessons contracts [CC § 1812.57].
- Health studio service contracts [CC § 1812.89].

13.52[3] Particular Contract Terms May Be Prohibited. In addition to requiring particular contract provisions, a statute governing the contract may also specifically prohibit particular provisions.

Examples:

- Term of contract cannot be measured by life of purchaser [CC §§ 1694.2(d) (dating services), 1812.53 (dance studio lessons), 1694.7(d) (weight loss program or center)].
- Provisions affecting the rights of the buyer that cannot be included in retail installment sales contracts [CC § 1804.1].

13.52[4] Failure to Comply May Render Contract Void or Voidable. The effect of failing to comply with a statute requiring or prohibiting particular contract terms depends on the specific statutory scheme. Failing to comply may:

- Render the contract void;

Examples:

- Dating service contracts [CC § 1694.4].
- Health studio services contracts [CC § 1812.91].
- Invention development service contracts [B&P Code § 22383].

- Render the contract voidable by the buyer; or

Example:

Discount buying services contracts [CC § 1812.119(a)].

- Render the prohibited provisions void, while the rest of the contract remains valid.

Example:

Retail installment sales contracts [CC § 1804.4].

 Cross Reference:

Detailed discussion of failure to comply with statutory formalities, see Ch. 15, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities.

13.52[5] Statute May Provide Remedies for Violation. When a statute mandates specific terms, notice provisions, or other requirements for a contract, remedies for violation of the statute may also be specified, such as treble damages and attorney's fees.

Examples:

- Employment agency and employment counseling contracts [CC § 1812.523].
- Discount buying services contracts [CC § 1812.107].
- Health studio services contracts [CC § 1812.94].

- Invention development service contracts [B&P Code § 22386].

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(No Valid Offer)

5. No valid contract was formed between Plaintiff and Defendant because Defendant did not make any offer to contract with Plaintiff that Plaintiff could have accepted to form the purported contract alleged in Plaintiff's complaint.

[AND/OR, if that no contract exists because defendant's offer was revoked prior to acceptance by defendant]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Offer Revoked Prior to Acceptance)

6. No valid contract was formed between Plaintiff and Defendant because Defendant revoked his/her/its offer to contract with Plaintiff before Plaintiff had communicated his/her/its acceptance of that offer.

[AND/OR, if alleging that contract is unenforceable because its terms were not sufficiently certain]

SIXTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Terms of Contract Uncertain)

7. No valid contract was formed between Plaintiff and Defendant because the terms of the purported contract alleged in Plaintiff's complaint are not sufficiently definite and certain to provide a basis for determining the existence of a breach and for giving an appropriate remedy.

[AND/OR, if alleging that contract is unenforceable because of lack of consideration]

SEVENTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Lack of Consideration)

8. No valid contract was formed between Plaintiff and Defendant because the terms of the purported contract alleged in Plaintiff's complaint lack sufficient cause or consideration for the formation of a valid contract.

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., the Defendant in the above-entitled action or other statement as appropriate].

[EITHER, if contract is not enforceable because of lack of mutual consent to contract]

2. _____ [Here and in subsequent paragraphs state evidentiary facts with particularity, to establish that there was no enforceable contract between the parties because there was no mutual consent to the contract, e.g., The purported settlement agreement was imposed on the parties by the mediator, over Defendant's protests, and Defendant never agreed to its terms].

[AND/OR, if contract is not enforceable because there was no valid offer]

2. _____ [Here and in subsequent paragraphs state evidentiary facts with particularity, to establish that there was no enforceable contract between the parties because there was no valid offer, e.g., The Defendant revoked the offer on March 1, 2005, before receiving an acceptance from Plaintiff. The notice of revocation, which was sent by certified mail, was received by Plaintiff on March 3, 2005. When Plaintiff mailed his acceptance on March 5, 2005, there was no longer a valid offer to contract].

[AND/OR, if contract is not enforceable because there was no valid acceptance]

2. _____ [Here and in subsequent paragraphs state evidentiary facts with particularity, to establish that there was no enforceable contract between the parties because there was no valid acceptance, e.g., The offer sent by Defendant to Plaintiff contained a signature line to indicate acceptance. [AND/OR, if contract is not enforceable because of the absence of an essential contract term]

2. _____ [Here and in subsequent paragraphs state evidentiary facts with particularity, to establish that there was no enforceable contract between the parties because of the absence of an essential contract term, e.g., The contract between the parties was an agreement for dance studio lessons. Civil Code Section 1812.54(c) requires that the contract contain a written statement of the hourly rate for each type of lesson for which the student has contracted. The contract between the parties does not contain a statement of the hourly rate. Under Civil Code Section 1812.59, the contract is void and unenforceable because of the absence of the hourly rate provision].

Memorandum for Party Attacking Existence of Contract--Lack of Mutual Consent.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party attacking the existence of a contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

NO CONTRACT WAS FORMED BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE OF THE LACK OF MUTUAL CONSENT TO CONTRACT

A. Mutual Consent Is Essential Element of Contract. The mutual consent of the parties is required for a valid contract (Civ. Code §§ 1550, 1565). Consent is not mutual unless the parties agree on the same thing in the same sense (Civ. Code § 1580).

B. Mutuality Is Judged by Objective Standard. The test to determine mutual consent is whether a reasonable person would conclude, from the conduct of the parties, that there was mutual agreement (Beard v. Goodrich (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1040, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 160).

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party attacking the existence of a contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

NO CONTRACT WAS FORMED BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE THE OFFER WAS REVOKED BEFORE ACCEPTANCE

A. Offer May Be Revoked Before Acceptance. An offer may be revoked at any time before its acceptance is communicated to the offeror (Civ. Code § 1586). An offer is revoked if the offeror communicates a notice of revocation to the offeree before the offeree communicates acceptance to the offeror (Civ. Code § 1587(1)).

B. Communication Is Effective When Put in Course of Transmission to Other Party. The communication of either the revocation or acceptance of an offer becomes effective when the revocation or acceptance is put in the course of transmission to the other party (Civ. Code §§ 1583, 1587(1)).

C. Communication by Mail Is Effective Upon Posting. Communication of an acceptance or revocation by mail, properly addressed and with correct postage, is effective when the letter is posted (Palo Alto Town & Country Vill., Inc. v. BBTC Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 494, 500-501, 113 Cal. Rptr. 705, 521 P.2d 1097 ; see Civ. Code §§ 1583, 1587(1)).

NO CONTRACT WAS FORMED BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE THE OFFER WAS NOT ACCEPTED

A. Acceptance Must Be Unqualified. An acceptance must be absolute and unqualified (Civ. Code § 1585).

B. A Qualified Acceptance Constitutes Rejection of the Offer and Proposal of Counteroffer. A qualified acceptance is a new proposal (Civ. Code § 1585). The qualified acceptance constitutes a rejection of the original offer and the making of a counteroffer to the original offeror (Panagotacos v. Bank of Am. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 851, 855-856, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 595 ; Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 750, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335).

NO CONTRACT WAS FORMED BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE A FORMAL AGREEMENT WAS NEVER SIGNED

Agreement to Contract Is Not Enforceable if Parties Did Not Intend to Be Bound Before Agreement Was Formalized. If an agreement to agree shows a manifest intention that the parties not be bound until a final, formal agreement is executed, there is no enforceable contract (Beck v. American Health Group Int'l, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1555, 1562-1563, 260 Cal. Rptr. 237).

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party attacking the existence of a contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

NO CONTRACT WAS FORMED BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE THERE WAS A LACK OF CONSIDERATION

A. Consideration Is Required for Valid Contract. A contract must have a sufficient cause or consideration (Civ. Code § 1550).

B. Consideration Must Be Part of Bargain or Agreed Exchange. The consideration for a promise must be bargained for and given in exchange for the promise for the purported contract to be valid (Passante v. McWilliam (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1247-1249, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 298).

C. Promises Must Be Mutual in Obligation to Constitute Consideration. When promises are exchanged as consideration, the promises must be mutual in obligation (Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 122, 330 P.2d 625).

Memorandum for Party Defending Existence of Contract--Signing Agreement Communicates Consent.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party defending the existence of a contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

THE PARTIES CONSENTED TO THE CONTRACT BY SIGNING THE AGREEMENT

A. Signing Contract Communicates Consent. Consent may be communicated between the parties by signing a contract (Banner Entm't, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 348, 357-358, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 598).

B. Failing to Read Contract Before Signing Does Not Negate Consent. A party cannot avoid the terms of a contract on the ground that he or she failed to read it before signing (Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting & Eng'g, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1049, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645).

C. Party's Undisclosed Intentions Do Not Negate Consent. A party who signs a contract may be bound by the terms of the contract even if he or she had a different, undisclosed intention (Palmquist v. Mercer (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 92, 98, 272 P.2d 26 ; Myers v. Carter (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 238, 241, 30 Cal. Rptr. 91).

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party defending the existence of a contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

THE OFFER WAS NOT EFFECTIVELY REVOKED BECAUSE REVOCATION WAS NOT COMMUNICATED TO THE OFFEREE BEFORE ACCEPTANCE

A. Notice of Revocation of Offer Must Be Communicated Before Acceptance by Offeree. To revoke an offer to contract, the offeror must communicate a notice of revocation to the offeree before the offeree accepts the offer (Civ. Code § 1587(1)).

B. Communication Is Effective When Put in Course of Transmission to Other Party. The communication of either the revocation or acceptance of an offer becomes effective when the revocation or acceptance is put in the course of transmission to the other party (Civ. Code §§ 1583, 1587(1)).

C. Communication to Offeror's Own Agent Does Not Put Revocation in Course of Transmission. Communication of the revocation of an offer to the offeror's own agent is not effective to revoke the offer before acceptance by the offeree (CPI Builders, Inc. v. Impco Techs., Inc. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1173-1174, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 851 ; Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 622-623, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288).

Memorandum for Party Defending Existence of Contract--Oral Contract Enforceable Without Signed Agreement.

THE PARTIES HAVE AN ENFORCEABLE ORAL CONTRACT EVEN THOUGH A FORMAL AGREEMENT WAS NOT SIGNED

Failure to Reduce Agreement to Writing Does Not Render Contract Unenforceable. If the parties orally agree on all of the terms and conditions of a proposed written agreement with the mutual intention that the oral agreement should be binding, the mere fact that a formal written agreement to the same effect has not yet been signed does not alter the binding validity of the oral agreement (Elyaoudayan v. Hoffman (2003) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1421, 1430, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 41 ; Banner Entm't, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 348, 358, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 598).

Memorandum for Party Defending Existence of Contract--Promise Enforceable Without Consideration Under Doctrine of Promissory Estoppel.

CONSIDERATION IS NOT REQUIRED BECAUSE THE PROMISE IS ENFORCEABLE UNDER THE DOCTRINE OF PROMISSORY ESTOPPEL

A. Promise May Be Binding Without Consideration Under Doctrine of Promissory Estoppel. The doctrine of promissory estoppel makes a promise binding even though there is no consideration in the sense of something that is bargained for and given in exchange (Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 333 P.2d 757).

B. Doctrine of Promissory Estoppel Requires Three Elements. The doctrine of promissory applies if (1) the promise was one that the promisor should have reasonably expected to induce action or forbearance of a definite and substantial character on the part of the promisee; (2) the promise induced that action or forbearance; and (3) injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise (C & K Eng'g Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 151 Cal. Rptr. 323, 587 P.2d 1136).

Memorandum for Party Defending Existence of Contract--Contract Enforceable Despite Absence of Missing Term.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party defending the existence of a contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

THE ABSENCE OF [specify missing contract term(s), e.g., A SPECIFIED PRICE] DOES NOT RENDER THE CONTRACT UNENFORCEABLE

A. Statement of Every Term or Condition Is Not Required. Neither law nor equity requires that every term and condition of an agreement be set forth in the contract (King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 588, 197 P.2d 321).

B. Inferences and Extrinsic Evidence May Supply Missing Terms. The usual and reasonable terms found in similar contracts can be looked to, unexpressed provisions of the contract may be inferred from the writing, external facts may be relied upon, and custom and usage may be resorted to in an effort to supply a deficiency if it does not alter or vary the terms of the agreement (Hennefer v. Butcher (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 492, 500-501, 227 Cal. Rptr. 318).

[ADD, if appropriate]

C. Price May Be Objectively Determined. A contract need not specify price if it can be objectively determined (California Lettuce Growers, Inc. v. Union Sugar Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 474, 482, 289 P.2d 785).

[ADD, if appropriate]

C. Reasonable Time for Performance Is Allowed, if Time Is Not Specified. If no time is specified for the performance of an act required to be performed under a contract, a reasonable time is allowed (Civ. Code § 1657).

[ADD, if appropriate]

C. Duration of Contract May Be Implied. If not stated, the duration of a contract may be implied from the nature of the contract or from the circumstances surrounding it (Haggerty v. Warner (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 468, 473, 252 P.2d 373).

[ADD, if appropriate]

C. Requirements Contracts Are Enforceable. If a buyer agrees to buy what he or she needs or requires of a particular product, and the seller absolutely promises to sell, the resulting contract is enforceable (Ross v. Frank W. Dunne Co. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 690, 698, 260 P.2d 104).

[ADD, if appropriate]

C. Parties' Conduct May Render Contract Enforceable Despite Uncertainty. Although an agreement may be indefinite or uncertain in its inception, subsequent performance by the parties under the agreement cures the defect and renders the contract enforceable (Bohman v. Berg (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 787, 794-795, 8 Cal. Rptr. 441, 356 P.2d 185).

Memorandum for Party Defending Existence of Contract--Implied Contract Enforceable Without Express Statement of Terms.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party defending the existence of a contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case]

THE PARTIES HAVE AN ENFORCEABLE IMPLIED CONTRACT EVEN THOUGH THE TERMS NEVER WERE EXPRESSLY STATED

A. Implied Contract Is Manifested by Conduct Rather Than Words. Unlike an express contract, in which the terms are stated in words, an implied contract is one whose terms are manifested by conduct (CC § 1621; Silva v. Providence Hospital of Oakland (1939) 14 C2d 762, 773, 97 P2d 798 ; Division of Labor Law Enforcement v. Transpacific Transportation Co. (1977) 69 CA 3d 268, 275, 137 CR 855).

B. Promise to Pay May Be Implied. The parties' conduct may create an implied contract requiring one party to pay the other, even though payment was never expressly demanded or promised either orally or in writing (Gunther-Wahl Productions, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc. (2002) 104 CA4th 27, 42-43, 128 CR2d 50).

C. Terms of Implied Contract Must Be Determined From Parties' Conduct. In interpreting an implied contract, the court must determine the contract's terms by examining the parties' course of conduct (Varni Bros. Corp. v. Wine World, Inc. (1995) 35 CA4th 880, 889, 41 CR2d 740).

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
I. STRATEGY

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.01

14.01 Scope.

This chapter covers the basics rules and issues relating to capacity to contract, including:

- The capacity of minors to contract [see 14.05].
- The capacity of incompetent persons to contract [see 14.06, 14.07].
- The capacity of business entities and fiduciaries such as trustees, guardians, and conservators to contract [see 14.10 -14.12].
- The effects of a lack of capacity to contract [discussed throughout the chapter].
- The ways to plead lack of capacity to contract [see 14.14 -14.17].

This chapter does not address attacks on a party's capacity to sue or be sued.

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
I. STRATEGY

*1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.0214.02 Objective and Strategy.

Capacity to contract goes to the core of contract formation. A contract in which one of the parties lacks the capacity to contract may be automatically void, or subject to rescission by the party lacking capacity. Of primary importance is the ability to recognize the various reasons for incapacity and the consequences of incapacity.

Consider:

The capacity to contract is very seldom litigated in the modern commercial world. There are a number of possible reasons. Conservatorship now makes a bright line in the case of mental defect, and the lowering of the age of majority to 18 eliminates the vast majority of cases involving minors. Title insurance deters minors from entering into contracts for real property. Consumer protection laws have provided preferred remedies that have preempted the need to attack general contract capacity.

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
II. DETERMINING WHETHER PARTY HAS CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.03

14.03 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Party Has Capacity to Contract.

☐ Determine whether party falls within categories of persons who lack capacity to contract:

- ☐ Minors, meaning persons under the age of 18.
- ☐ Persons of unsound mind.
- ☐ Persons deprived of civil rights.

Authority:

CC §§ 38-40, 1556; Fam Code § 6500; Pen Code §§ 2600-2601

Discussion:

See 14.04

Form:

See 14.20 (affirmative defense: lack of capacity to contract)

☐ If party is a minor, determine whether minor is emancipated or unemancipated.

- ☐ Emancipated minors may contract in same manner as adults.
- ☐ Unemancipated minors have limited capacity to contract.

Authority:

Fam Code §§ 6700, 7002

Discussion:

See 14.05[4]

☐ If party is an unemancipated minor, determine whether law permits minor to enter into type of contract in question.

Authority:

Fam Code §§ 6700, 6701

Discussion:

See 14.05[1], [3]

Form:

See 14.20 (affirmative defense: contract void)

☐ If law permits minor to enter into type of contract involved, determine whether contract may be disaffirmed by minor.

Authority:

Fam Code §§ 6700, 6710-6713

Discussion:

See 14.05[1], [2]

Form:

See 14.20 (affirmative defense: minor disaffirmed contract)

☐ Determine whether person has been adjudged to be of unsound mind and therefore lacks capacity to contract.

- ☐ Contracts entered into by persons adjudged to be of unsound mind are void.
- ☐ Conservatorship is process by which person is adjudged to be of unsound mind.

Authority:

CC § 40; Prob Code § 1800 et seq.; Gibson v. Westoby (1953) 115 CA2d 273, 276, 251 P2d 1003

Discussion:

See 14.06

Forms:

See 14.19 (complaint by conservator to void contract), 14.20 (affirmative defense: contract after conservatorship established)

☐ If person has not been judicially determined to be of unsound mind, determine whether person lacks capacity to contract because he or she is entirely without understanding.

Authority:

CC § 38; San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 CA 212, 215, 122 P 964

Discussion:

See 14.07[1]

Form:

See 14.20 (affirmative defense: defendant entirely without understanding)

☐ If person has not been judicially determined to be of unsound mind, nor is completely without understanding, determine if contract can be rescinded.

☐ Party seeking to rescind must be of unsound mind, but need not be entirely lacking in understanding.

☐ Party seeking rescission must have been incompetent at the time the contract was made.

☐ Rescission must be prompt and must include restoration of all consideration received.

Authority:

CC § 39; Burgess v. Security-First Nat'l Bank (1941) 44 CA2d 808, 820, 113 P2d 298

Discussion:

See 14.07[2]

Forms:

See 14.18 (complaint to rescind contract), 14.20 (affirmative defense: contract rescinded)

☐ Determine standards for judicial determination of whether person is completely without understanding or of unsound mind under Due Process in Competence Determinations Act.

☐ Rebuttable presumption that all persons have capacity to make decisions.

☐ Specific evidentiary standards set forth to rebut presumption.

Authority:

Prob Code §§ 810, 811

Discussion:

See 14.07[3]

☐ Determine whether person was intoxicated at time of contracting.

☐ Contracts entered into by intoxicated persons may be rescinded if intoxication is shown to have deprived the person of reason and understanding.

Authority:

Walton v. Bank of Cal., Nat'l Ass'n (1963) 218 CA2d 527, 541, 32 CR 856 ; Guidici v. Guidici (1935) 2 C2d 497, 502, 41 P2d 932

Discussion:

See 14.08

Form:

See 14.20 (affirmative defense: defendant intoxicated)

- ☐ Determine whether person was deprived of civil rights at time of contracting.

Authority:*CC § 1556; Pen Code §§ 2600-2601Discussion:

See 14.09

- ☐ Determine whether contract made in name of a business entity was entered into by person or persons with statutory authority to bind entity or person to whom such authority has been delegated.

Authority:*Corp Code §§ 207, 15509(1), 16201, 16301, 17003, 18105, 18110, 18115; R&T Code §§ 19001 et seq., 23001 et seq.Discussion:

See 14.10

- ☐ Determine if contract was made by guardian, conservator, trustee on behalf of ward, conservatee, or beneficiary.

Authority:*Prob Code §§ 2401, 2405, 2406, 2462, 2507, 850 et seq., 2540 et seq., 2550 et seq., 2570 et seq., 2580 et seq.Discussion:

See 14.11

- ☐ Determine whether contract was for minor's or incompetent's "necessities."

Authority:*CC § 38; Fam Code § 6712Discussion:

See 14.12

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
II. DETERMINING WHETHER PARTY HAS CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.04

14.04 Capacity Is Presumed to Exist Except As to Minors, Persons of Unsound Mind, and Persons Deprived of Civil Rights.

Under California law, all persons are capable of contracting except [CC § 1556]:

- Minors [see 14.05, 14.12].
- Persons of unsound mind [see 14.06 -14.08,].
- Persons deprived of civil rights [see 14.09].

A minor under California law is any person under the age of 18 [Fam Code § 6500; see CC § 1557(a) (capacity of minors governed by Fam Code § 6500 et seq.)].

A person of "unsound mind" may or may not be "entirely without understanding," and may or may not have been previously adjudged as such [see CC §§ 38-40; see also CC § 1557(b) (capacity of person of unsound mind to contract governed by CC § 38 et seq.)]. Persons deprived of civil rights include any person who is serving a sentence in state prison for commission of a crime during the period of confinement [Pen Code §§ 2600-2601].

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
II. DETERMINING WHETHER PARTY HAS CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.05

14.05 Minors Have Limited Capacity to Contract.

14.05[1] Minors May Contract, but May Disaffirm Most Types of Contracts. Minors have the ability to contract in the same manner as adults, subject to the minor's right to disaffirm most types of contracts [Fam Code § 6700]. In order to disaffirm a contract, the minor must act before turning 18 or within a reasonable time afterwards [Fam Code § 6710]. A minor cannot select portions of the contract to keep and disaffirm others; the entire contract must be disaffirmed [Holland v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co. (1969) 270 CA2d 417, 421, 75 CR 669].

Warning:

A disaffirmance of an agreement by a minor does not operate to terminate the contractual obligations of a parent who signed the agreement [Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 CA4th 809, 822, 56 CR3d 140] .

Jury Instructions:

Minor's Right to Disaffirm, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.71 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Voidable contracts subject to disaffirmance, see California Family Law Practice and Procedure (2d ed.), § 30.44 (Matthew Bender); or California Legal Forms, § 100B.22 (Matthew Bender).

14.05[2] Minors Cannot Disaffirm Specified Types of Contracts. A minor may not disaffirm the following types of contracts [Fam Code §§ 6711, 6712]:

- An obligation entered into under the express authority or direction of a statute.
- Contracts for "necessaries."

A contract will be considered to be contract for necessities only if all three of the following requirements are met [Fam Code § 6712]:

- The contract is to pay for items necessary for the support of the minor or minor's family;
- The items are actually furnished to the minor or the minor's family; and
- The contract is entered into at a time when the minor is not under the care of a parent or guardian able to provide for the minor or the minor's family.

In interpreting Fam Code § 6712 (and its predecessor sections), the California courts have identified some specific types of contracts that may not be disaffirmed by a minor:

- Fees owed to attorneys for legal representation are considered to be contracts for necessities and may not be disaffirmed [Leonard v. Alexander (1942) 50 CA2d 385, 387-388, 122 P2d 984].
- Contracts for employment in art, entertainment, or professional sports, which must be approved by the court, may not be disaffirmed [Fam Code § 6751; see Fam Code § 6750; Morgan v. Morgan (1963) 220 CA2d 665, 672, 34 CR 82].

Distinguish:

A contract to secure personal management services for the purpose of advancing a minor's acting career is not a contract for necessities under Fam Code § 6712 [Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 CA4th 809, 820, 56 CR3d 140] .

14.05[3] Minors Are Prohibited by Law From Entering Into Specified Types of Contracts. By statute, minors may not do any of the following [Fam Code § 6701]:

- Give a delegation of power.
- Make a contract relating to real property or any interest in real property.
- Make a contract relating to personal property not in the immediate possession or control of the minor.

If a minor does enter into contract that falls within one of these three categories, the contract is automatically void and the minor need not disaffirm the contract [Burnand v. Irigoyen (1947) 30 C2d 861, 865, 186 P2d 417].

14.05[4] Emancipated Minors May Contract in Same Manner As Adults. An emancipated minor is a person under the age of 18 who meets any of the following conditions:

- The person has entered into a valid marriage, whether or not the marriage has been dissolved.
- The person is on active duty with the United States armed forces.
- The person has received a declaration of emancipation under Fam Code § 7122 [Fam Code § 7002].

An emancipated minor is treated as an adult for a variety of purposes, including entering into contracts that would be prohibited transactions for an unemancipated minor, such as contracts for real property or a delegation of authority [Fam Code § 7050(e)(2)]. Emancipated minors also are permitted to enter into insurance contracts in the same way as adults [Fam Code § 7051], and to handle the rights and responsibilities associated with ownership of shares of stock in a corporation [Fam Code § 7052].

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
 II. DETERMINING WHETHER PARTY HAS CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

14.06 Person Adjudged Incompetent Lacks Capacity to Contract.

14.06[1] Person Judicially Determined to Be of Unsound Mind Lacks Capacity to Contract. After his or her incapacity has been judicially determined, a person of unsound mind can make no conveyance or other contract until his or her restoration to capacity, subject to Prob Code § 1871, relating to the rights of conservatees [see 14.06[3]], and the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [CC § 40(a); see W&I Code § 5000 et seq.]. Any contract entered into by a person who has been adjudged incompetent is void, not merely voidable [Gibson v. Westoby (1953) 115 CA2d 273, 276, 251 P2d 1003].

A party who enters into a contract with a person adjudged incompetent need not have any direct knowledge of the adjudication. The adjudication of incompetency serves as constructive notice to all parties who may seek to contract with an incompetent person [Gibson v. Westoby (1953) 115 CA2d 273, 276, 251 P2d 1003].

14.06[2] Establishment of Conservatorship Constitutes Adjudication of Incapacity. The establishment of a conservatorship under Prob Code § 1400 et seq. is a judicial determination of the incapacity of the conservatee, except as provided in Prob Code §§ 1873-1876 relating to the legal capacity of conservatee [CC § 40(b); see 14.06[4]]. The appointment of a conservator of the estate is an adjudication that the conservatee lacks the legal capacity to enter into any transaction that binds to conservatorship estate [Prob Code § 1872]. The incapacity attaches on the establishment of a temporary conservatorship [O'Brien v. Dudenhoeffer (1993) 16 CA4th 327, 330, 19 CR2d 826]. It does not attach on the appointment of a limited conservator unless the order of appointment so provides [Prob Code § 1872(b)].

Consider:

No authority has been found under current California law that anything other than a conservatorship constitutes a judicial determination of incapacity for purposes of CC § 40. Older cases construing prior law were hesitant to equate other proceedings as a determination under CC § 40 [see Carroll v. Carroll (1940) 16 C2d 761, 766, 108 P2d 420 (commitment in insanity proceedings to custody of probation officer is not a judicial determination of insanity or incapacity within the meaning of CC § 40); California Bank v. Bell (1940) 38 CA2d 533, 538, 101 P2d 724 (fact that decedent was once inmate of asylum and that she was not formally discharged, or that her guardian who was then appointed had not been discharged, furnished no substantial evidence of judicial determination of incompetence that would render her execution of note and mortgage six years before her commitment void); In re Guardianship of Carniglia (1934) 139 CA 629, 631, 34 P2d 752 (proceeding under former Political Code § 2168 et seq. was not a conclusive judicial determination of incapacity or insanity); Hitch v. Superior Court (1934) 2 CA2d 406, 410, 38 P2d 190 (order committing woman to asylum is not judicial determination that she is insane so as to make her incompetent to make contracts within meaning of CC § 40)].

Prob Code § 810 refers to a judicial determination that a person is totally without understanding or is of unsound mind [see Prob Code § 810(c) (discussed in 14.07[3][b])]. However, this provision appears to apply only to rebut the presumption of capacity should incapacity be raised as an affirmative defense or become an issue in some other kind of proceeding, such as an action for breach of contract [see Prob Code § 810(a) (discussed in 14.07[3][b])]. There is no suggestion that this statute establishes a separate proceeding for the determination of legal capacity under CC § 40.

14.06[3] Conservatee Retains Right to Provide for Necessities. A conservatee retains the right to enter into transactions to the extent reasonable to provide the necessities of life to the conservatee, and to the spouse and minor children of the conservatee, and to provide the basic living expenses to any domestic partner of the conservatee [Prob Code § 1871(d)].

14.06[4] Court May Modify Legal Capacity of Conservatee. In the order appointing the conservator or on a petition, the court may authorize the conservatee to enter into transactions as may be appropriate in the circumstances of the particular conservatee and conservatorship estate. The court may modify the legal capacity of the conservatee by broadening or restricting the power of the conservatee to enter into transactions as may be appropriate in the circumstances of the particular conservatee and conservatorship estate [Prob Code § 1873(a)]. A petition may be filed by the conservator, the conservatee, or a spouse, domestic partner, relative, or friend of the conservatee, but not by one in a commercial relationship with the conservatee who might want to establish the conservatee's capacity [Prob Code § 1874].

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
II. DETERMINING WHETHER PARTY HAS CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

14.07 Person Not Adjudged Incompetent May Lack Capacity to Contract.

14.07[1] Contract Entered Into by Person Entirely Without Understanding Is Void but Person Is Liable for Necessaries. A person who is entirely without understanding cannot make any kind of contract, although the person remains liable for the reasonable value of things furnished to the person for the support of the person or the person's family [CC § 38]. A contract entered into by a person meeting the criteria of CC § 38 is absolutely void [Maionchi v. Nicholini (1905) 1 CA 690, 693, 82 P 1052].

Only the party claiming incapacity may rely on CC § 38; it cannot be used by a person who has contracted with the person lacking capacity to avoid the contract [San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 CA 212, 215, 122 P 964].

➤ Cross Reference:

Form for affirmative defense: defendant entirely without understanding, see 14.20.

14.07[2] Contract Entered Into by Person Not Entirely Without Understanding Is Voidable and May Be Rescinded.

14.07[2][a] Party Seeking to Rescind Must Be of Unsound Mind, but Need Not Be Entirely Lacking in Understanding. A conveyance or other contract of a person of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding, made before the incapacity of the person has been judicially determined, is voidable and subject to rescission [CC § 39(a); see Mills v. Kopf (1963) 216 CA2d 780, 783-784, 31 CR 80]. The rescission must conform to the requirements of CC § 1688 et seq. [CC § 1689(b)(7)].

There is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that a person is of unsound mind if the person is substantially unable to manage his or her own financial resources or resist fraud or undue influence. Substantial inability may not be proved solely by isolated incidents of negligence or improvidence [CC § 39(b)]. Only the party claiming incapacity may rely on CC § 39; it cannot be used by a person who has contracted with the person lacking capacity to avoid the contract [Burgess v. Security-First Nat'l Bank (1941) 44 CA2d 808, 820, 113 P2d 298].

14.07[2][b] Capacity of Party Seeking Rescission Is Determined As of Time Contract Was Made. In order to rescind under CC § 39, the person seeking rescission must have met the standard of the statute at the time the contract in question was made. However, there is no requirement to show fraud or knowledge of the incompetency on the part of the other party to the contract [Weseman v. Latham (1957) 153 CA2d 841, 846-847, 315 P2d 364].

Example:

Despite expert medical testimony that the debtor would not have had the mental capacity to conduct business affairs at the time of the negotiations due to his subsequent diagnosis of cerebral aneurysm and stroke, the court did not err in finding the debtor mentally competent to enter into a settlement agreement. Witnesses who personally observed the debtor during the negotiations reported that he participated actively and appeared to have a full understanding of what was transpiring and of the terms of the settlement [Rains v. Flinn (9th Cir. 2005) 428 F3d 893, 901-902] .

14.07[2][c] Rescission Must Be Prompt and Must Include Restoration of All Consideration Received.

Rescission under CC § 39 must be made promptly on discovery of facts supporting the right to rescind [CC § 1691; Burgess v. Security-First Nat'l Bank (1941) 44 CA2d 808, 820, 113 P2d 298]. The incapacitated party must restore, or offer to restore, any consideration received under the contract [CC § 1691(b); Mills v. Kopf (1963) 216 CA2d 780, 783, 31 CR 80]. There is no right to rescind if the party accepts and retains benefits accruing under the contract [Saret-Cook v. Gilbert, Kelly, Crowley & Jennett (1999) 74 CA4th 1211, 1226, 88 CR2d 732].

Jury Instructions:

Lack of Understanding as to Nature of Transaction, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.69 (Matthew Bender).

14.07[3] Evidentiary Requirements for Lack of Capacity Must Be Met.

14.07[3][a] Due Process in Competence Determinations Act Establishes Standards for Judicial Determination of Capacity. The Due Process in Competence Determinations Act addresses the standards that a court is to use in determining that a person lacks the capacity to contract [see Stats 1995 ch 842, § 12 enacting CC § 39(b) and Prob Code §§ 810-813]. The Act affirms that a person who has a mental disorder still may be capable of contracting [Prob Code § 810(b)]. It establishes a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that all persons have the capacity to make decisions and to be responsible for their acts or decisions [Prob Code § 810(a)].

14.07[3][b] Determination That Person Lacks Capacity Must Be Based on Evidence of Defect in Mental Function. A judicial determination that a person is totally without understanding, or is of unsound mind, or suffers from one or more mental deficits so substantial that, under the circumstances, the person should be deemed to lack the legal capacity to perform a specific act, should be based on evidence of a deficit in one or more of the person's mental functions, rather than on a diagnosis of a person's mental or physical disorder [Prob Code § 810(c)].

A determination that a person lacks the capacity to contract must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one of the following mental functions [Prob Code § 811(a)]:

- Alertness and attention, including but not limited to:

- ☐ Level of arousal or consciousness.
- ☐ Orientation to time, place, person, and situation.

- ☐ Ability to attend and concentrate.
- Information processing, including but not limited to:
 - ☐ Short- and long-term memory, including immediate recall.
 - ☐ Ability to understand or communicate with others, either verbally or otherwise.
 - ☐ Recognition of familiar objects and familiar persons.
 - ☐ Ability to understand and appreciate quantities.
 - ☐ Ability to reason using abstract concepts.
 - ☐ Ability to plan, organize, and carry out actions in one's own rational self-interest.
 - ☐ Ability to reason logically.
- Thought processes as demonstrated by the presence of the following:
 - ☐ Severely disorganized thinking.
 - ☐ Hallucinations.
 - ☐ Delusions.
 - ☐ Uncontrollable, repetitive, or intrusive thoughts.
- Ability to modulate mood and effect, as demonstrated by the presence of a pervasive and persistent or recurrent state of euphoria, anger, anxiety, fear, panic, depression, hopelessness or despair, helplessness, apathy or indifference, that is inappropriate in degree to the individual's circumstances.

A deficit in one of these mental functions may be considered only if the deficit, by itself, or in combination with one or more other mental function deficits, significantly impairs the person's ability to understand and appreciate the consequences of his or her actions with regard to the type of act or decision in question [Prob Code § 811(b)]. In determining whether a person suffers from a deficit in mental function so substantial that the person lacks the capacity to do a certain act, the court may take into consideration the frequency, severity, and duration of periods of impairment [Prob Code § 811(c)]. The mere diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder is insufficient in and of itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract [Prob Code § 811(d)].

Consider:

Many old cases set forth standards for determining whether one is totally without understanding or of unsound mind and therefore lacks the capacity to contract under CC §§ 38 and 39. These cases probably should not be relied on. The very specific standards set forth by the Due Process in Competence Determinations Act in Prob Code § 811 would seem to render these old cases and standards of historical interest only.

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.08

14.08 Contracts Entered Into by Intoxicated Persons May Be Rescinded If Intoxication Is Shown to Have Deprived Person of Reason and Understanding.

Intoxication that is severe enough to deprive a person of reason and understanding may be sufficient to deprive a person of contractual capacity on a temporary basis [Walton v. Bank of Cal., Nat'l Ass'n (1963) 218 CA2d 527, 541, 32 CR 856]. One deprived of reason and understanding by reason of drunkenness is, for the time, unable to consent to the terms of a contract. A person who at the time of making a contract is completely intoxicated may avoid the contract notwithstanding the fact that the intoxicated condition may have been caused by the person's voluntary act and not by the contrivance of the other party to the contract [Guidici v. Guidici (1935) 2 C2d 497, 502, 41 P2d 932].

The right of a prisoner to sell or convey real or personal property while confined is specifically affirmed by statute. However, the Department of Corrections may restrict or prohibit sales or conveyances that are made for business purposes [Pen Code § 2601(a)].

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
II. DETERMINING WHETHER PARTY HAS CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.10

14.10 Business Entities Have Capacity to Contract.

14.10[1] Corporations.

14.10[1][a] Corporations Have General Capacity to Contract. A corporation has the powers of a natural person in the conduct of the corporation's business [Corp Code § 207]. Accordingly, a corporation has legal capacity to enter into contracts on its own behalf, separate and distinct from its individual owners [Corp Code § 207(g)].

14.10[1][b] Corporation's Powers May Be Suspended for Failure to File Annual Statement or to Pay Taxes. A corporation's right to conduct business, and therefore to enter into contracts, may be suspended for failure to pay taxes, including penalties and interest. A corporation's authority may be suspended if the corporation fails to pay taxes due and payable to the Franchise Tax Board, under the Corporation Tax Law [R&T Code § 23001] or under the administrative provisions of the California tax laws [R&T Code § 19001 et seq.].

A corporation also may be suspended for failure to file the corporation's annual statement of information. In order for a corporation's powers to be suspended on this ground, the corporation must have failed to file a statement for 24 months and must have been assessed a penalty during that time [Corp Code § 2205(a)].

On suspension, the corporation may take no action other than to file the statement or to amend its articles of incorporation to change its name [Corp Code §§ 2205(c), (d)]. Thus, the capacity to contract is lost while suspended. A suspended corporation may be revived by curing the cause of the suspension [Corp Code §§ 2205(d) (filing of statement), 23305 (payment of taxes)].

14.10[1][c] Corporate Officials May Contract on Corporation's Behalf. Any contract or conveyance made in the name of a corporation binds the corporation if [Corp Code § 208(b)]:

- It is authorized or ratified by the board of directors; or
- It is done within the scope of authority, actual or apparent, conferred by the board of directors (except as the board's authority is limited by law) or within the agency power of the officer executing it.

Officers are not personally liable on contracts signed by them in the course and scope of employment, for and on behalf of the corporation, unless they purport to bind themselves individually [United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 C3d 586, 595, 83 CR 418, 463 P2d 770].

Jury Instructions:

Corporation Acts Through Officers and Employees, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.06 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Discussion of principles of agency in a noncorporate context, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions, 20.07.

Authority of corporate officers, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 5, § 89 (Matthew Bender).

14.10[1][d] Corporate Officers May Have Actual Authority to Bind Corporation. Actual authority to bind a corporation is conferred on corporate officers by either an express or implied grant. An express grant of authority may assume any of three common forms:

- The articles and bylaws may provide for and limit the authority of the corporate officers [Corp Code §§ 204(d), 212(b)(6), 312(a), (b)];
- The directors of the corporation may expressly grant authority to the officers by resolution [Corp Code § 312(a), (b)]; or
- Authority may be derived from statute.

Authority also may arise from an implied grant. Implied authority refers to those actual powers an officer has that are incidental to and reasonably proper in the performance of express powers [Garber v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1962) 203 CA2d 693, 701, 22 CR 123]. Implied authority may be established by showing the transaction to have been appropriate in the ordinary course of business [Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, Inc. (1966) 246 CA2d 242, 253, 54 CR 786], the usages of the company, or the knowledge of the officers' activities by the board [see Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co., Inc. (1949) 34 C2d 11, 15, 206 P2d 847 (informal meeting of directors, of which no minutes were kept, authorized president to sell all assets of a corporation that had been organized do dispose of a decedent's assets)].

14.10[1][e] Corporate Officers May Have Ostensible or Apparent Authority to Contract for Corporation.

Ostensible authority is authority that a principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care, causes or allows a third person to believe the agent to possess [CC § 2317]. A principal is bound by the acts of an agent acting with ostensible authority to persons who have relied on the agency in good faith and with no want of ordinary care [CC § 2334].

Ostensible authority requires the existence of facts sufficient to raise an estoppel. Its essential elements are [Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, Inc. (1966) 246 CA2d 242, 262, 54 CR 786 ; see Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 CA2d 942, 960, 72 CR 722 ; Meyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 CA2d 90, 102, 79 CR 816]:

- A representation by the principal (in other words, in the corporate context, a representation or other act by the corporation indicating that a particular officer or other employee has authority to act as the corporation's agent);
- Justifiable reliance by the third party; and
- Change of position or injury resulting from that reliance.

► Cross Reference:

Showing elements of estoppel to establish ostensible authority, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions, 20.14[2][c].

The existence of ostensible authority is predicated on the facts and circumstances of the transaction. It cannot be established merely by the representations and conduct of the officer whose authority is at issue, but requires statements or acts of the corporation that cause third parties to believe that the officer has authority [Lee v. Helmco, Inc. (1962) 199 CA2d 820, 834, 19 CR 413].

Examples:

- An officer has ostensible authority to act on behalf of a corporation if the corporation, whether intentionally or by want of ordinary care, actively holds out the person as fully authorized to represent the corporation [see Pasadena Medi-Center Assocs. v. Superior Court (1973) 9 C3d 773, 777-780, 108 CR 828, 511 P2d 1180].
- Providing an officer with corporate stationery and contract forms with the corporation's name on its letterhead, as well as advertising that the officer is representing the corporation, are sufficient to constitute a "holding out" of the officer [see Lee v. Helmco, Inc. (1962) 199 CA2d 820, 834, 19 CR 413].
- An officer will be deemed to have the authority to act if a corporation knowingly permits the officer to make contracts or otherwise transact business on behalf of the corporation and acquiesces in his or her conduct [Huber v. New York Life Ins. Co. (1937) 18 CA2d 269, 274, 63 P2d 318].

14.10[1][f] Presumption Exists That Documents Signed by Two Specified Officers Were Signed on Behalf of Corporation. A statutory presumption exists that contracts and other specified documents, when signed by at least two specified corporate officers, were validly signed on the corporation's behalf. This presumption applies unless there is a showing that the other person had actual knowledge that the signing officers had no authority to execute the instrument [Corp Code § 313]. The presumption applies to contracts signed by the chair of the board, the president, or any vice president, and any of the following officers [Corp Code § 313]:

- Secretary.
- Any assistant secretary.
- Chief financial officer.
- Any assistant treasurer.

The statute provides a conclusive, rather than a merely rebuttable, evidentiary presumption of authority on the part of the specified corporate officers to enter into the agreement [Snukal v. Flightways Mfg., Inc. (2000) 23 C4th 754, 782, 98 CR2d 1, 3 P3d 286].

The signature of one person is sufficient to bind the corporation if that person holds corporate offices in each of the two groups listed above, even if the instrument lists only one of his or her offices [Snukal v. Flightways Mfg., Inc. (2000) 23 C4th 754, 784, 786-787, 98 CR2d 1, 3 P3d 286].

14.10[1][g] Corporation May Ratify Contract. A contract made in the name of a corporation is valid if ratified by the board of directors [Corp Code § 208(b)]. Ratification may be express, as in a formal board resolution approving a contract. Ratification also may be implied; ratifying conduct may consist of affirmative acts, or of mere failure to discharge the agent when the challenged act comes to the principal's attention [Holland v. Nelson (1970) 5 CA3d 308, 314, 85 CR 117].

Example:

A dance studio operator's failure to discharge an agent who entered into a contract that violated the Dance Act, and the operator's request for confirmation of the fact that sums from the illegal contract were on deposit, constituted a ratification of the agent's acts in entering into the illegal contract and rendered the operator liable for treble damages imposed for violation of the statute [Holland v. Nelson (1970) 5 CA3d 308, 85 CR 117].

Distinguish--Equal Dignities Rule Inapplicable to Ratification by Corporations:

Under California agency law, a ratification can be made only in the manner that would have been necessary to confer an original authority for the act [CC § 2310]. Thus, for example, because an agent is required to have written authority to sell or lease real property [see CC § 2309], ratification of the agent's unauthorized sale or lease must also be in writing [CC § 2310]. However, corporations can act only through the agency of natural persons, and the requirement that ratification be made in the same manner necessary to confer an original authority for the act is inapplicable to the executive officer of the corporation, who is more than an agent and acts and speaks directly for the corporation in conducting its activities and objects [Monteleone v. Southern California Vending Corp. (1968) 264 CA2d 798, 806, 70 CR 703].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of equal dignities rule, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions, 20.08[3].

14.10[2] Limited Liability Companies. A limited liability company, like a corporation, has the same powers as a natural person in carrying out the company's business, including the express power to enter into contracts [Corp Code § 17003(d)]. Unless the LLC articles of organization vest management of the LLC in a manager or managers, the LLC's business affairs are managed by the members, subject to any restrictions in the articles of organization or operating agreement [Corp Code § 17150]. In a member-managed LLC, the act of any member for the apparent purpose of carrying on the normal business or affairs of the LLC is sufficient to bind the LLC, unless the member lacks authority to act and the other party knows that fact [Corp Code § 17157(a)].

If the LLC has managers, the managers are responsible for the LLC's business and affairs [Corp Code § 17151(b)] and have the power to bind the LLC and execute instruments in its name for the apparent purpose of carrying on the normal business or affairs of the LLC [Corp Code § 17157(b)(2)], unless that authority is otherwise restricted. However, no act of a manager in contravention of a restriction on authority will bind the LLC to persons having actual knowledge of the restriction [Corp Code § 17157(b), (c)]. When management of an LLC is vested in managers, members are not agents of the LLC and cannot execute instruments on its behalf [Corp Code § 17157(b)(1)].

A provision virtually identical to Corp Code § 313, discussed in 14.10[1][f], creates a presumption of validity for instruments that are signed by two specified officers of the LLC. This presumption applies unless there is a showing that the other person had actual knowledge that the signing officers had no authority to execute the instrument [Corp Code § 17154(c)].

14.10[3] General Partnerships. A partnership is a separate entity from its partners [Corp Code § 16201]. However, each partner is an agent of the partnership for the purpose of its business [Corp Code § 16301(1)]. An act of a partner, including the execution of an instrument in the partnership name, for the apparent purpose of carrying on in the ordinary course the partnership business or business of the kind carried on by the partnership, binds the partnership, unless [Corp Code § 16301(1)]:

- The partner had no authority to act for the partnership in the particular matter; and
- The person with whom the partner was dealing knew or had received a notification that the partner lacked authority.

An act of a partner that is not apparently for carrying on in the ordinary course the partnership business or business of the kind carried on by the partnership binds the partnership only if the act was authorized by the other partners [Corp Code § 16301(2)]; see Owens v. Palos Verdes Monaco (1983) 142 CA3d 855, 864, 191 CR 381, overruled on other grounds by Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 C4th 503, 521, 28 CR2d 475, 869 P2d 454].

14.10[4] Limited Partnerships. The general partner of a limited partnership has the same rights and powers as a partner in a general partnership [Corp Code § 15643(a)]. Accordingly, the general partner of a limited partnership may enter into contracts in the partnership's name [Corp Code § 16301(1)].

Limited partners, as passive investors in the partnership, do not have the authority to contract on the partnership's behalf. As a condition of maintaining limited liability for the partnership's obligations, they are not permitted to participate in the control of its business [Corp Code § 15632(a)]. Although limited partners are permitted to perform specified activities without being deemed to participate in the control of the business [see Corp Code § 15632(b)], contracting on behalf of the partnership is not one of those activities. However, a limited partner who participated in the control of the business without being named as a general partner may be held liable as a general partner to persons who transact business with the limited partnership with actual knowledge of that partner's participation in control and with the reasonable belief, based on the limited partner's conduct, that the partner is a general partner at the time of transaction [Corp Code § 15632(a)]. The statute does not specify whether the partnership itself could also be bound by the acts of such a limited partner, but it is logical to assume that the question would be decided on agency law principles; in other words, whether or not the limited partner had actual or ostensible authority to act on the partnership's behalf.

Actual and ostensible authority, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions, 20.09[1], [2].

14.10[5] Unincorporated Associations. An unincorporated association may acquire, manage, encumber, or transfer interests in real or personal property in the name of the association [Corp Code § 18105]. Property acquired by or for the association is the property of the association and not its members [Corp Code § 18110]. Any acquisition, transfer or encumbrance of real property must be executed by the association's president, secretary, other comparable officers, or some other party authorized by resolution to execute the agreement in question [Corp Code § 18115].

14.11 Guardians, Conservators, and Trustees Have Capacity to Contract on Behalf of Wards, Conservatees, and Beneficiaries.

A conservator or guardian has management and control of the estate of the ward or conservatee, subject to any limitations set forth in the order from the appointing court [Prob Code § 2401(a)]. In order to carry out their responsibilities, guardians and conservators are granted specific powers relating to the support of the ward or conservatee [see Prob Code § 2420], including:

- The maintenance and management of estate assets [see Prob Code §§ 2405-2406, 2462, 2500-2507].
- The power to sell, encumber, convey, exchange, invest, purchase, and otherwise dispose of estate property [see Prob Code §§ 850 et seq., 2540 et seq., 2550 et seq., 2570 et seq., 2580 et seq.].
- The power to request authorization to exercise powers independent of direct court supervision and approval [see Prob Code § 2590 et seq.], including a general right to contract, without obtaining prior authorization from the appointing court [see Prob Code § 2451.5(a)].

A trustee's authority over trust assets is governed by Prob Code § 16220 et seq. Trustees are given express authority to execute and deliver all instruments needed to accomplish or facilitate the exercise of the powers vested in the trustee [Prob Code § 16248].

II. DETERMINING WHETHER PARTY HAS CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.12

14.12 Persons Who Lack Capacity Remain Obligated to Pay for Necessities.

Both minors and persons found to be entirely without understanding must pay for necessities, even if they are otherwise unable to contract. A person entirely without understanding is liable for the reasonable value of things furnished to the person necessary for the support of the person or the person's family [CC § 38]. Similarly, minors are prohibited from disaffirming a contract for necessities when all of the following requirements are met:

- The contract is to pay the reasonable value of things necessary for the support of the minor or the minor's family;
- These things have been actually furnished to the minor or to the minor's family; and
- The contract is entered into by the minor when not under the care of a parent or guardian able to provide for the minor or the minor's family [Fam Code § 6712].

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
 III. RAISING ABSENCE OF CAPACITY TO CONTRACT IN PLEADINGS

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.14

14.14 Lack of Capacity to Contract May Be Raised As Affirmative Defense.

A defendant who lacks capacity to contract may raise incapacity as an affirmative defense to a complaint seeking to enforce the contract [CCP § 430.30(b); see, e.g., San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 CA 212, 217, 122 P 964]. The presumption that all persons have the capacity to make decisions and to be responsible for their acts or decisions places the burden of proof on the person alleging incapacity [Prob Code § 810(a)]. The person claiming incapacity due to insanity has the burden of proof on that issue [Evid Code § 522].

Consider:

In the case of a contract involving a minor, raising minority alone as an affirmative defense should be sufficient only if the contract is one that a minor is totally disabled by law from entering into, such as a contract regarding an interest in real property [see Fam Code § 6701 (discussed in 14.05[3])]. In most cases, the minor must take the affirmative step of disaffirming the contract [see Fam Code § 6710 (discussed in 14.05[1])]. Thus, the fact of a sufficient disaffirmance would have to be pled as an affirmative defense [see, e.g., Deason v. Jones (1935) 7 CA2d 482, 483, 45 P2d 1025 ; form, see 14.20].

III. RAISING ABSENCE OF CAPACITY TO CONTRACT IN PLEADINGS

14.15 Person Lacking Capacity May Bring Action Alleging Invalidity of Contract.

A minor or other person lacking the capacity to contract may bring an action for rescission or to recover amounts paid on the contract [see, e.g., LeBaron v. Berryessa Cattle Co. (1926) 78 CA 536, 544, 248 P 779]. The complaint must allege facts that establish the grounds for the plaintiff's incapacity. The complaint also must allege that the plaintiff was incapacitated at the time the contract was made. If the plaintiff fails to include these allegations, a defendant's demurrer to the complaint will be sustained [Fetterley v. Randall (1928) 92 CA 411, 416-417, 268 P 434].

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
III. RAISING ABSENCE OF CAPACITY TO CONTRACT IN PLEADINGS

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.16

14.16 Lack of Capacity May Be Raised by Demurrer or Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings If Incapacity Appears in Pleading.

If the incapacity of the defendant appears on the face of the complaint to enforce a contract, the defendant may file a demurrer to the complaint [CCP §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] or a motion for judgment on the pleadings [CCP § 438(c)(1)(B)(ii)].

Example:

A complaint alleges that the defendant had a conservator of the estate at the time that the contract was entered into. The contract is attached and shows the conservatee's signature, but not the conservator's. The complaint may be attacked by demurrer or motion for judgment on the pleadings. [see CC § 40 (discussed in 14.06[1])].

Similarly, in an action by the incapacitated person alleging the invalidity of a contract, if the incapacity is established on the face of the answer, the answer may be attacked by demurrer [CCP §§ 430.20, 430.30(a)] or the plaintiff may move for judgment on the pleadings [CCP § 438(c)(1)(A)].

Chapter 14 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity
III. RAISING ABSENCE OF CAPACITY TO CONTRACT IN PLEADINGS

1-14 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 14.17

14.17 Lack of Capacity May Be Raised by Summary Judgment If Incapacity Is Established by Indisputable Evidence.

If the incapacity of a party does not appear from the face of the pleading but can be established by indisputable evidence, the action may be resolved by a motion for summary judgment [see CCP § 437c]. The motion must be granted if the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact, and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law [CCP § 437c(c)].

Example:

Plaintiff sues for damages resulting from defendant's breach of contract for the purchase of real property. The defendant's declarations and offers of proof show conclusively that the defendant was a minor at the time the contract was entered into. Summary judgment for the minor defendant should be granted [see Fam Code § 1601 (discussed in 14.05[3])].

[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]
Judge:

Department:

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's Complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege any affirmative defenses, e.g.,]

[EITHER, if alleging that defendant generally lacked capacity to contract]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Lack of Capacity to Contract)

2. Defendant alleges that at the time when the contract alleged in the Complaint was entered into, he/she did not have the legal capacity to contract because, at that time, he/she was a _____ [minor or person of unsound mind or person deprived of civil rights].

[OR, if alleging that defendant was an incompetent]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Defendant Incompetent to Contract)

2. Defendant alleges that at the time when the contract alleged in the Complaint was entered into, he/she was a person entirely without understanding and was not competent to make a contract of any kind.

[OR, if alleging that defendant was of unsound mind but not entirely without understanding, and has rescinded the contract]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Defendant Is of Unsound Mind and Has Rescinded Contract)

2. Defendant alleges that at the time when the contract alleged in the Complaint was entered into, he/she was a person of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding, substantially unable to manage his/her own financial resources or resist fraud or undue influence, and that he/she has rescinded the contract.

[OR, if alleging that contract was void because it was made after a conservator had been appointed for defendant]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Defendant Was Conservatee At Time Contract Was Entered Into)

2. Defendant alleges that at the time when the contract alleged in the Complaint was entered into, he/she had been judicially determined to be a person of unsound mind and lacking the capacity to contract, and

_____ [name] had been appointed his/her conservator of the estate by order of the _____ Court of

_____, Case No.

_____.

[OR, if alleging that contract was void because it was made while defendant was a minor]

(Contract Void Because Defendant Was Minor)

2. Defendant alleges that at the time when the contract alleged in the Complaint was entered into, he/she was a minor under the age of 18 years, and the contract was one relating to _____ [real property or personal property not in the immediate possession or control of the Defendant].

[OR, if alleging that no contract exists because defendant was a minor when contract was entered into and subsequently disaffirmed the contract]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Contract Disaffirmed After Defendant Reached Age of Majority)

2. Defendant alleges that at the time when the contract alleged in the Complaint was entered into, he/she was a minor under the age of 18 years, and on _____ [date], Defendant expressly disaffirmed the contract [in writing]. [A copy of Defendant's written disaffirmance is attached as Exhibit _____ to this Answer.]

[OR, if alleging that no contract exists because defendant was intoxicated at the time of entering into the contract]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Defendant Intoxicated At Time of Entering Into Contract)

2. Defendant alleges that at the time when the contract alleged in the Complaint was entered into, he/she was intoxicated so severely that he/she was totally deprived of reason and understanding with regard to the transaction and was unable to consent to the terms of a contract.

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

15.06[6][a] Agreement to Pay Secured Indebtedness Ordinarily Must Be in Writing.

15.06[6][b] Exception When Agreement to Pay Secured Indebtedness Is Contained in Conveyance.

15.06[7] Contract for Commercial Loan or Extension of Credit of More Than $100,000.

15.07 Sufficiency of Writing Required by Statute of Frauds.

15.07[1] Writings Must Satisfy Basic Criteria of Statute.

15.07[2] Party to Be Charged Must Sign Writing.

15.07[2][a] Party to Be Charged Generally Must Authenticate Writing.

15.07[2][b] Party May Direct Another Person to Sign.

15.07[3] Writing Is Sufficient If Agent of Party to Be Charged Signed Writing.

15.07[3][a] Agent's Signature May Satisfy Statute of Frauds.

15.07[3][b] Agent Must Have Authority to Sign Contract.

15.07[3][c] Unauthorized Agent's Signature May Subsequently Be Ratified.

15.07[4] Handwritten Signature Is Not Required for Authentication.

15.07[5] Contract May Be Proved by One Writing or Series of Related Writings.

15.07[5][a] Separate Documents That Relate to Subject Matter May Be Combined.

15.07[5][b] Separate Documents Must Be Connected to Same Transaction.

15.07[6] Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Explain Terms of Agreement.

15.07[7] Documents Should Be Gathered Early to Determine If Writing Requirement of Statute of Frauds Can Be Met.

15.08 Exceptions to Writing Requirement of Statute of Frauds.

15.08[2][b] Types of Qualified Financial Contract Subject to Exception.

15.08[2][c] Proof Necessary to Establish That Qualified Financial Contract Was Made.

15.08[3] Oral Modification of Written Contract May Satisfy Statute If Supported by New Consideration.

15.08[4] Equitable Estoppel Doctrine May Preclude Party From Asserting Statute of Frauds.

15.08[4][a] Application of Estoppel Principles Is Consistent With Purpose of Statute of Frauds.

15.08[4][b] Estoppel May Be Applied When Plaintiff Would Suffer Unconscionable Injury.

15.08[4][c] Estoppel May Be Applied When Defendant Would Be Unjustly Enriched by Plaintiff's Performance.

15.08[5] Statute of Frauds Inapplicable If Fraud Was Used to Prevent Writing.

15.08[6] Statute of Frauds Inapplicable to Oral Settlement Agreement Made on Record Before Court.

15.08[7] Statute of Frauds Inapplicable to Executed Contract.

15.09 Oral Agreement Failing to Comply With Statute of Frauds Is Voidable.

15.10 CHECKLIST: Raising Statute of Frauds Issues.

15.10[1] Checklist for Plaintiff.

15.10[2] Checklist for Defendant.

15.11 Complaint Should Allege Sufficient Facts to Bring Contract Within Statute of Frauds.

15.11[1] Complaint Must State Whether It Is Written, Oral, or Implied by Contract.

15.11[2] Written Contract Should Be Attached to Complaint.

15.11[3] When Contract Is Formed by Series of Writings, Complaint Should Allege and Incorporate Them.

15.11[4] If Signed by Someone Other than Plaintiff, Signer's Authority Should Be Alleged.

15.11[5] Complaint Should Allege Facts Bringing Oral Contract Within Statute of Frauds Exceptions.

15.11[6] Facts Taking Oral Contract Out of Statute Should Be Alleged If Applicable.

15.12 Defendant Must Raise Statute of Frauds at Earliest Opportunity.

15.12[1] Failure to Comply With Statute of Frauds Is Affirmative Defense.

15.12[2] Defense Is Waived If Not Asserted by Defendant.

15.12[3] Defendant Has Burden of Proving Application of Statute.

15.13 Defendant May Demur to Complaint That Fails to Specify Whether Asserted Contract Is Written, Oral, or Implied.

15.13[1] Complaint for Breach of Contract Must Specify Basis of Complaint.

15.13[2] Failure of Complaint to Specify Basis of Complaint Is Grounds for Demurrer.

15.14 Defendant May Demur to Complaint If Invalidity of Contract Under Statute of Frauds Appears on Face of Complaint.

15.15 Defendant May Raise Failure to Comply With Statute of Frauds by Answer to Complaint.

15.16 Defendant May Raise Failure to Comply With Statute of Frauds by Motion.

15.16[1] Defendant May Raise Issue by Motion Once Answer Has Been Filed.

15.16[2] Defendant May Raise Statute in Evidentiary Context by Motion to Exclude or Strike Evidence of Oral Agreement.

15.17 Defendant May Raise Issue by Request for Jury Instruction.

15.18 Plaintiff May Respond to Statute of Frauds Defense by Motion.

15.18[1] Plaintiff May Assert That Oral Agreement Is Not Within Statute of Frauds.

15.18[2] Plaintiff May Assert That There Is Sufficient Memorandum of Agreement to Satisfy Statute of Frauds.

15.18[3] Plaintiff May Assert That Defendant Is Equitably Estopped From Asserting Statute of Frauds.

15.19 Plaintiff May Raise Statute of Frauds Issue by Request for Jury Instruction.

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
I. STRATEGY

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.01

15.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Objectives and strategy for a party defending [see 15.02] or asserting [see 15.03] that a contract fails to meet the requirements of the statute of frauds.
- The nature and purpose of the statute of frauds writing requirement [see 15.04, 15.05].
- Types of agreements required by the statute of frauds to be in writing [see 15.06].
- Exceptions from the requirements of the statute of frauds for certain types of agreements [see 15.08].
- Determining whether a particular writing is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the statute of frauds, and whether appropriate documents can be produced [see 15.07].
- Enforceability of a contract that fails to satisfy the statute of frauds [see 15.09].
- What the plaintiff should include in a complaint to avoid statute of frauds issues [see 15.13; Form: see 15.34].
- Raising the statute of limitations of frauds as an affirmative defense [see 15.12; Form: see 15.37].
- The procedural mechanisms for a party defending against a contract claim to raise the statute of frauds and other formality issues [see 15.13, 15.16, 15.17; Forms: see 15.36 -15.38].
- The procedural mechanisms for a party asserting a contract claim to counter an assertion of failure to comply with the statute of frauds and other formality requirements, including a motion [see 15.18; Form: see 15.39] and request for jury instructions [see 15.19].
- Formalities required by other statutes regarding writings, signatures, translations, and particular required contract disclosures [see 15.20 -15.33].

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
I. STRATEGY

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.02

15.02 Objective and Strategy for Attacking Existence of Contract Based on Lack of Formalities.

The statute of frauds requires that certain types of contracts must be in writing and signed by the parties to be enforceable [see 15.05]. Other statutes also require some type of writing and authentication of the contract, such as a signature, and some statutes require translation or disclosures of information by one party to the other for the protection of the less knowledgeable party [see 15.20 -15.33].

The statute of frauds and other statutes requiring contract formalities are designed to protect the parties to a contract. They do so by providing that the contract will not be enforced, for example, when a party might have to resort to obtaining perjured testimony or fraud to prove the contract, because there has been no written contract executed as a record of the transaction. Consequently, the statutes require that certain types of contracts must be evidenced by a writing [see 15.05].

The party raising a statute of frauds issue usually is the defendant, who typically is filing an answer to a breach of contract claim, particularly when the contract is based on an asserted oral agreement. The defendant may be trying to avoid unfavorable consequences of the contract and may do so with the assertion of the statute of frauds, because failure to comply with the statute makes the contract unenforceable at the option of the party who has not signed the writing [see 15.09].

Consider:

Before pleading that a contract is unenforceable for failure to comply with the statute of frauds, the defendant must ask itself whether it can live without the contract. In other words, does the plaintiff have remaining obligations that the defendant needs the plaintiff to perform? Once the defendant has taken the position that the contract is unenforceable, the plaintiff may refuse to perform further obligations under the contract. Alternatively, it is perfectly acceptable for the defendant to plead that the contract has not been breached and that, even if it was breached, the contract is unenforceable for failure to comply with the statute of frauds. This duality can continue through trial, as long as the defendant takes care to avoid self-contradiction, and the appearance of trying to have it both ways.

Strategic Point--Defendant:

A party should raise the issue of the statute of frauds at the earliest possible time. Failure to raise the affirmative defense of the statute of frauds results in a waiver of the defense. Ordinarily, the earliest opportunity is when a defendant demurs or files an answer to a complaint.

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
I. STRATEGY

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.03

15.03 Objective and Strategy for Countering Claim That Contract Lacks Necessary Formalities.

The party resisting a statute of frauds defense usually is the plaintiff, who typically is filing a breach of contract claim and wants to enforce the contract.

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

The best way to defend against a statute of frauds defense is to anticipate it and respond to it before the defense is even raised. The plaintiff's attorney usually will identify the issues during the pre-filing investigation, because the lack of a written contract will be as obvious to the plaintiff as it is to the defendant once the complaint is filed and served.

The plaintiff's possible responses to a statute of frauds defense may include:

- Showing that the contract in question is not one that the statute of frauds requires to be in writing [see 15.06]; or
- Showing that memoranda or other written evidence of the contract satisfies the writing requirement [see 15.07].

Another common way to meet a statute of frauds defense is to allege that the promisee detrimentally relied on the promisor's representation, or that the promisor has been unjustly enriched by the promisee's performance. These matters should be the subject of early discovery and should be pleaded in the complaint to avoid an unnecessary, expensive, and time-consuming demurrer [see 15.08].

The plaintiff may also be able to enforce a contract even without showing the existence of a writing or signature when equitable circumstances of estoppel or partial performance are appropriate [see 15.08[4]].

Consider:

An important point to keep in mind in for a plaintiff resisting the defense of the statute of frauds is what the plaintiff's position will be if the court finds there is no contract. A plaintiff who has based his or her entire strategy on the assumption of an enforceable contract may be caught without options if enforcement becomes impossible.

II. DETERMINING WHETHER CONTRACT COMPLIES WITH STATUTE OF FRAUDS

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.04

15.04 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Contract Complies With Statute of Frauds.

15.04[1] Determining Whether Statute of Frauds Requires Writing.

- ☐ Determine if agreement cannot possibly be performed in one year.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(1)

Discussion:

See 15.06[1]

- ☐ Determine if:

☐ Agreement contains promise of promisor to answer for debt, default, or miscarriage of another; and ☐ Agreement does not constitute an original obligation of promisor.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(2)

Discussion:

See 15.06[2]

- ☐ Determine if agreement is for either:

☐ Sale of real property; or

- ☐ Lease of interest in real property for longer than one year.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(3)

Discussion:

See 15.06[3]

- ☐ Determine if agreement authorizes or employs agent or other person either to:

- ☐ Purchase or sell real estate; or

- ☐ Lease real estate for longer than one year.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(4)

Discussion:

See 15.06[4]

- ☐ Determine if agreement cannot be performed within lifetime of promisor.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(5)

Discussion:

See 15.06[5]

- ☐ Determine whether agreement is by purchaser of real property to pay indebtedness secured by a mortgage or deed of trust.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(6)

Discussion:

See 15.06[6][a]

- ☐ Determine whether agreement is by purchaser of real property to pay indebtedness secured by a mortgage or deed of trust, unless agreement to pay secured indebtedness is contained in conveyance itself.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(6)

Discussion:

See 15.06[6][b]

- ☐ Determine whether agreement is for commercial loan or extension of credit of more than $100,000.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)(7)

Discussion:

See 15.06[7]

15.04[2] Determining Whether Particular Evidence of Contract Is Sufficient to Satisfy Statute of Frauds.

- ☐ Conduct early formal and informal discovery to determine what documents exist to prove or disprove whether writing satisfies statute of frauds.

Discussion:

See 15.07[7]

- ☐ If agreement is memorialized by one writing, determine whether the writing:
- ☐ Reasonably identifies the subject matter of an agreement;
 - ☐ Establishes that an agreement concerning that subject matter has been made between particular parties; and
 - ☐ States with reasonable certainty the essential terms of the unperformed promises of the agreement.

Authority:

Gaggero v. Yura (2003) 108 CA4th 884, 894, 134 CR2d 313

Discussion:

See 15.07[1]

- ☐ Determine whether party to be charged has signed the writing, either by:
- ☐ Personally signing the writing; or
 - ☐ Expressly directing another person to sign the writing, and that person has signed.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)

Discussion:

See 15.07[2]

- ☐ If party to be charged has not signed the writing, determine whether agent of party:
- ☐ Personally signed the writing; and

- ☐ Had actual authority to sign.

Authority:

CC § 1624(a)

Discussion:

15.07[3][a], [b]

- ☐ If agent who signed the writing lacked actual authority, determine whether party to be charged subsequently ratified the agent's actions.

Authority:

Behniwal v. Mix (2005) 133 CA4th 1027, 1039 ; CC §§ 2309-2310

Discussion:

15.07[3][c]

- ☐ If party to be charged has not signed writing, determine whether party has somehow indicated in the writing the intent to authenticate it.

Authority:

Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 277-278, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702

Discussion:

See 15.07[4]

- ☐ If one writing does not contain all elements required by statute of frauds, including signature by party or agent, determine if:

- ☐ Other writings relate to agreement;
- ☐ Those other writings constitute part of a single connected transaction; and
- ☐ All writings together contain all required elements of statute of frauds, including signature by party to be charged or party's agent.

Authority:

Goodman v. Community Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1966) 246 CA2d 13, 22, 54 CR 456

Discussion:

See 15.07[5]

- ☐ If no writings satisfy statute of fraud requirements, determine whether an exception to the statute applies, such as:

- ☐ Agreement is personal property lease covered by Commercial Code.

Authority:

CC § 1624(c)

Discussion:

See 15.08[1]

☐ Agreement is "qualified financial contract" which is exempt even though not to be performed in one year, in that:

- ☐ Neither party to the agreement is a natural person.
- ☐ Agreement is any of following types:
 - ☐ Purchase, sale, or exchange of certain currencies or exchanges.
 - ☐ Purchase, sale, or transfer of a commodity.
 - ☐ A commodity swap or commodity option.
 - ☐ A rate swap, basis swap, forward rate transaction, or interest rate option.
 - ☐ A security swap.
 - ☐ A price or index transaction of any of above transactions.
 - ☐ An option for any of above transactions.

☐ Agreement is evidenced by any of following types of proof:

- ☐ Electronic communication.
- ☐ Written confirmation.
- ☐ Admission by party who is subject of enforcement.
- ☐ Note or memorandum of existence of agreement.

Authority:

CC § 1624(b)

Discussion:

See 15.08[2]

☐ Agreement is an oral agreement modifying a written contract, and is:

☐ Supported by new consideration; or ☐ Agreement as modified does not fall within statute of frauds.

Authority:

CC § 1698

Discussion:

See 15.08[3]

☐ Court will refuse to apply statute of frauds based on estoppel principles because:

☐ Promisee has detrimentally relied on oral agreement and would suffer unconscionable injury if oral agreement was not enforced; or ☐ Promisor would receive unjust enrichment if allowed to retain benefit of any performance by promisee without court requiring performance of promisor's obligations under oral agreement.

Authority:

Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 359, 65 CR2d 628

Discussion:

See 15.08[4]

☐ Court will refuse to apply statute of frauds because fraud was used to prevent writing.

Authority:

CC § 1623

Discussion:

See 15.08[5]

☐ Agreement is oral settlement agreement made on record before court.

Authority:

Kohn v. Jaymar-Ruby, Inc. (1994) 23 CA4th 1530, 1534-1535, 28 CR2d 780

Discussion:

See 15.08[6]

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
II. DETERMINING WHETHER CONTRACT COMPLIES WITH STATUTE OF FRAUDS

15.05 Statute of Frauds Imposes Writing Requirement.

15.05[1] Writing Requirement Applies to Specified Types of Contracts. The primary statute of frauds, contained in CC § 1624, provides that the following contracts are invalid, unless they, or some note or memorandum, are in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged or by the party's agent [CC § 1624(a)]:

- An agreement that by its terms is not to be performed within a year from its making [see 15.06[1]].
- A special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person, except in the cases provided for in CC § 2794 [see 15.06[2]].
- An agreement for the leasing for a longer period than one year, or for the sale, of real property, or of an interest in the property. Such an agreement, if made by an agent of the party sought to be charged, is invalid, unless the authority of the agent is in writing, subscribed by the party sought to be charged [see 15.06[3]].
- An agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or any other person to purchase or sell real estate, or to lease real estate for a longer period than one year, or to procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller of real estate or a lessee or lessor of real estate if the lease is for a longer period than one year, for compensation or a commission [see 15.06[4]].
- An agreement that by its terms is not to be performed during the lifetime of the promisor [see 15.06[5]].
- An agreement by a purchaser of real property to pay an indebtedness secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on the property purchased, unless assumption of the indebtedness by the purchaser is specifically provided for in the conveyance of the property [see 15.06[6]].
- A contract, promise, undertaking, or commitment to loan money or to grant or extend credit, in an amount greater than $100,000, not primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, made by a person engaged in the business of lending or arranging for the lending of money or extending credit. A contract, promise, undertaking, or commitment to loan money secured solely by residential property consisting of one to four dwelling units will be deemed to be for personal, family, or household purposes [see 15.06[7]].

15.05[2] Exceptions to Writing Requirement Exist. There are several major exceptions to the statute of frauds' requirement for a writing:

■ The statute is inapplicable if the agreement is a personal property lease covered by the Commercial Code [CC § 1624(c); see Com Code § 10101 et seq.; see 15.08[1]].

■ The statute is inapplicable if the agreement is a "qualified financial contract" even if it is not to be performed in one year, provided (1) there is sufficient evidence to indicate that a contract has been made, or (2) the parties, by means of a prior or subsequent written contract, have agreed to be bound by the terms of the qualified financial contract from the time they reached agreement on those terms [CC § 1624(b); see 15.08[2]].

■ An oral agreement is valid if it modifies a written contract but is supported by new consideration, or the agreement as modified does not fall within the statute of frauds [CC § 1698; see 15.08[3]].

■ Based on estoppel principles, the statute of frauds will not be applied based because of the promisor's detrimental reliance or the promisor's unjust enrichment [Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 359, 65 CR2d 628 ; see 15.08[4]].

■ The statute of frauds will not be applied when one party prevented the contract from being reduced to writing through the use of fraud [CC § 1623; see 15.08[5]].

► Cross Reference:

Detailed discussion of exceptions to statute of frauds, see 15.08.

15.05[3] Statute of Frauds Applies Only to Types of Contracts Specified in Statute. The written proof requirement of the statute of frauds applies only to the particular types of contracts specified in the statute [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 345, 83 P3d 497].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of the types of contracts subject to writing requirement of statute of frauds, see 15.06.

15.05[4] Statute of Frauds Is Designed to Prevent False Contract Claims. The statute of frauds is intended to prevent perjured testimony and false claims when a party is presenting proof of a purported contract covered by the statute [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 345, 83 P3d 497].

Example--Real Estate Sale Services:

One of the primary purposes of the statute of frauds requiring a written contract for the employment of an agent to purchase or sell real estate [see CC § 1624(a)(4)] is to protect real estate sellers and purchasers from the assertion of false claims by brokers for commissions [Hoar v. Tuley (1970) 12 CA3d 344, 348, 90 CR 559 ; Toomy v. Dunphy (1890) 86 C 639, 642, 25 P 130].

15.05[5] Statute of Frauds Is Defensive Evidentiary Rule. The statute of frauds does not determine the terms of a purported agreement. It is not a rule of substantive law [In re Marriage of Shaban (2001) 88 CA4th 398, 404-405, 105 CR2d 863]. Rather, the statute of frauds is an evidentiary rule or procedural defense that controls whether a party is permitted to use oral testimony to prove whether the agreement exists at all [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 346, 83 P3d 497].

Cross References:

Discussion of pleading statute of frauds as affirmative defense, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts; see also Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions (Matthew Bender).

15.05[6] Statute of Frauds Is Subject to Equitable Principles. In some circumstances, a court may apply equitable principles to estop a promisor from relying on a statute of frauds to avoid an otherwise valid oral agreement. For example, equitable estoppel may apply if a promisor, by being allowed to involve the statute of frauds, would be unjustly enriched by receiving the benefit of the promisee's performance. Furthermore, because the statute of frauds was enacted for the purpose of preventing fraud, it may not be used to protect or aid a party relying on it to perpetuate a fraud [Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 351-353, 65 CR2d 628] .

Consider:

The ability of courts to hold that parties are equitably estopped from asserting the statute of frauds is another reason to assert the statute as a defense as early in the case as possible. Doing so reduces the chance that the asserting party will appear to be acting secretly, and it may present an opportunity to assess the statute of fraud's viability in the particular case, with the particular opponent and the particular court.

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
II. DETERMINING WHETHER CONTRACT COMPLIES WITH STATUTE OF FRAUDS

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.06

15.06 Specific Rules Apply to Each Category for Which Statute Requires Writing.15.06[1] Contract That Cannot Be Performed Within One Year.

15.06[1][a] Any Possibility of Performance in One Year Exempts Contract From Statute. An agreement that by its terms cannot be performed within a year from its making is invalid unless it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged or by the party's agent [CC § 1624(a)(1)]. This provision covers contracts of definite duration that cannot possibly be performed in less than one year [White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 C2d 336, 343, 66 CR 697, 438 P2d 345 ; Abeyta v. Superior Court (1993) 17 CA4th 1037, 1042, 1044, 21 CR2d 680].

➤ Cross Reference:

Discussion of contracts subject to statute of frauds, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds (Matthew Bender).

15.06[1][b] Contract of Indefinite Duration Is Not Covered by Statute Unless Terms of Contract Foreclose Performance Within One Year. The statute of frauds does not apply to a contract of indefinite duration unless its terms absolutely foreclose completion of the performance of the contract within one year [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 C3d 654, 672, 254 CR 211, 765 P2d 373]. This means that an agreement is not subject to the statute of frauds and is valid, even if oral, if there is any possibility of performance within one year from its making [Abeyta v. Superior Court (1993) 17 CA4th 1037, 1043, 21 CR2d 680].

Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. makes clear that the key question is whether the contract can possibly be terminated under any contingency within one year, not the length of time it is contemplated performance may continue beyond the one year. If performance under a contract could be terminated within one year under some contingency, it makes no difference whether the contract has a definite outside term of several years, or whether it is for the employee's lifetime or some other indefinite period [Abeyta v. Superior Court (1993) 17 CA4th 1037, 1043, 21 CR2d 680 ; see Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 C3d 654, 672-675, 254 CR 211, 765 P2d 373].

Examples--Contract Is Not Within Statute If It Allows Termination Within Year:

■ An employment contract of indefinite duration is not within the statute unless its terms absolutely require at least a year of performance by the employee. Thus, if a condition terminating an employment contract could occur within one year of its making, the contract does not fall within the scope of the statute of frauds even if performance of the contract would extend for longer than one year if the condition does not occur [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 C3d 654, 673, 254 CR 211, 765 P2d 373].

■ A lease agreement is not within the statute of frauds, unless its terms absolutely require at least a year of performance by both the lessor and the lessee. Thus, if a condition allows the lessor or lessee to terminate the lease within one year of its making, the lease does not fall within the scope of the statute of frauds [Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Vill. Square Venture (1997) 52 CA4th 867, 877, 60 CR2d 830].

Jury Instructions:

Statute of Frauds--Affirmative Defense, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 24A, Instr. MB 2400A.30 (Matthew Bender).

15.06[1][c] One-Year Period Begins on Date After Parties Make Contract. In computing the one-year period under CC § 1624, the date on which the agreement is made is excluded [see CC § 1624(a)(1)]. The period begins on the following day and ends at the close of the anniversary of the day on which the agreement was made [Columbia Pictures Corp. v. De Toth (1945) 26 C2d 753, 759, 161 P2d 217]. The duration of performance under the contract is irrelevant in determining whether the contract is within the statute. Thus, if a contract is limited to less than a one-year period, but that period is to begin in the future and full performance cannot occur until later than the anniversary of the making of the contract, it is within the statute and must be in writing [American Trust Co. v. Kindsfater (1960) 187 CA2d 735, 737-739, 9 CR 840].

Jury Instructions:

Statute of Frauds, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.40 (Matthew Bender).

Statute of Frauds--Reasonable Time, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.41 (Matthew Bender).

15.06[2] Contract That Promises to Answer for Debt, Default, or Miscarriage of Another.

15.06[2][a] Promise to Answer for Obligation of Another Ordinarily Must Be in Writing. A special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, including a suretyship obligation, is invalid unless the promise is in writing and signed by the party to be charged or by his or her agent [CC §§ 1624(a)(2), 2793].

15.06[2][b] Exception When Promise to Answer for Obligation of Another Actually Constitutes Original Obligation of Promisor. A special promise to answer for the obligation of another person is enforceable, in particular circumstances, even if it is not in writing, if the special promise actually constitutes an original obligation of the promisor [CC §§ 1624(a)(2), 2794]. Whether an oral promise to answer for obligation of another person is excluded from statute of frauds because it is actually an original obligation of the promisor depends on the main purpose or leading object of the promisor [Michael Distrib. Co. v. Tobin (1964) 225 CA2d 655, 664-665, 37 CR 518 ; see Schumm v. Berg (1951) 37 C2d 174, 187, 231 P2d 39]. Whenever the leading and main object of the promisor is not to become surety or guarantor of another person, but to subserve some purpose or interest of his or her own, the promise is not within the statute of frauds, although the effect of the promise may be to pay the debt or discharge the obligation of another person [Greenfield v. Sudden Lumber Co. (1937) 18 CA2d 709, 717, 64 P2d 1007].

Example--Main Purpose of Promisor:

A builder's oral promise to pay for lumber and supplies to be used by a subcontractor had the main purpose of benefitting the builder, and was supported by the consideration of suppliers continuing to make deliveries; hence, the oral promise was not covered by the statute of frauds and was valid [Michael Distrib. Co. v. Tobin (1964) 225 CA2d 655, 666, 37 CR 518].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of types of promises to answer for obligation of another that do not fall within statute of frauds, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds (Matthew Bender).

15.06[3] Contract for Sale or Lease of Interest in Real Property for Longer Than One Year.

15.06[3][a] Contract for Sale of Interest in Real Property Must Be in Writing. An agreement for the sale of any interest in real property is invalid unless it is in writing [CC § 1624(a)(3); see Alameda Belt Line v. City of Alameda (2003) 113 CA4th 15, 20-21]. If made by an agent of the party sought to be charged, an agreement for the sale of real property is invalid unless the authority of the agent is in writing and is signed by the party to be charged [CC § 1624(a)(3)].

 Cross Reference:

Statute of frauds in real estate litigation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 528, Specific Performance (Matthew Bender).

15.06[3][b] Contract for Real Property Lease Longer Than One Year Must Be in Writing. An agreement for the lease of real property for longer than one year is invalid unless it is in writing. If made by an agent of the party sought to be charged, an agreement to lease real property for longer than one year is invalid unless the authority of the agent is in writing and is signed by the party to be charged [CC § 1624(a)(3)].

Distinguish--Term of Lease Controls:

It is the duration of the term of the lease agreement that controls whether the statute of frauds is applicable, not whether the lease could possibly be terminated within one year [Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Vill. Square Venture (1997) 52 CA4th 867, 877, 60 CR2d 830].

15.06[4] Contract That Authorizes or Employs Agent or Other Person to Purchase or Sell Real Estate or to Lease Real Estate for Longer Than One Year. An agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or other person for compensation or a commission to purchase or sell real estate, lease real estate for a period longer than one year, or procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller or a lessee or lessor of real estate for a period longer than one year is invalid unless the agreement, or some note or memorandum of it, is in writing and signed by the party to be charged, or by his or her agent [CC § 1624(a)(4)].

Example:

A broker hired to modify an existing lease relating to oil drilling rights (which are personal property, not real property), not to procure an initial lease, could not rely on this provision of the statute of frauds because the contract did not relate to a sale or lease of real property [Shell v. Darneille (1984) 162 CA3d 957, 962, 209 CR 68].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of agency, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions.

Warning--Theory of Quantum Meruit Unavailable to Real Estate Broker:

A licensed real estate broker may not assert equitable estoppel against a statute of frauds defense in an action by the broker to recover a real estate commission except when the broker can show actual fraud.

The mere failure of a principal to pay for a broker's services pursuant to an unenforceable oral contract is not unjust enrichment sufficient to give rise to a valid claim of equitable estoppel. A licensed broker assumes the risk of relying on an oral agreement, and therefore there is no unconscionable injury. Licensed brokers are not permitted to circumvent the statute of frauds by claiming broker's fees on a theory of quantum meruit [Margolin v. Shemaria (2000) 85 CA4th 891, 899-900, 102 CR2d 502].

Cross References:

Discussion of licensed brokers and quantum meruit, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 31, Brokers and Salespersons (Matthew Bender).

Quantum meruit recovery in contract actions generally, see Ch. 9, Seeking or Opposing Quantum Meruit or Quantum Valebant Recovery in Contract Actions.

15.06[5] Contract That Cannot Be Performed Within Lifetime of Promisor. An agreement that by its terms cannot be performed during the lifetime of the promisor is invalid unless the agreement, or some note or memorandum of it, is in writing and signed by the party to be charged or by the party's agent [CC § 1624(a)(5)]. As with contracts that cannot be performed within a year, this provision requires written evidence of a contract only if there is no possibility that the performance could occur during the promisor's lifetime [see Kassianov v. Raissis (1962) 200 CA2d 573, 576, 19 CR 614].

Example--Contract Condition Providing for Termination Prior to Death:

An oral contract allegedly provided that the plaintiff was to be employed by a decedent for at least 10 years following a decedent's death, but the contract was subject to an exception that would have allowed the contract to be terminated in the event plaintiff failed to comply with a specified condition. Since the possibility existed that the contract would be terminated by virtue of this condition prior to the decedent's death--and, hence, fully performed prior to that time--the oral contract was not subject to the statute of frauds [Plumlee v. Poag (1984) 150 CA3d 541, 552, 198 CR 66].

Jury Instructions:

Statute of Frauds--Reasonable Time, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.41 (Matthew Bender).

15.06[6] Contract by Purchaser of Real Property to Pay Indebtedness Secured by Mortgage or Deed of Trust.

15.06[6][a] Agreement to Pay Secured Indebtedness Ordinarily Must Be in Writing. An agreement by a purchaser of real property to pay an indebtedness secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on the property purchased generally is invalid unless the agreement, or some note or memorandum of it, is in writing and signed by the party to be charged or by the party's agent [CC § 1624(a)(6)]. Only true contracts to pay an indebtedness are covered by the statute of frauds, and a purported "indebtedness" based on unjust enrichment does not come within the statute of frauds [First Nationwide Sav. v. Perry (1993) 11 CA4th 1657, 1670, 15 CR2d 173].

Example:

An action for unjust enrichment by the beneficiary of a deed of trust that had secured a purchase money loan, and that had been accidentally reconveyed, against the former owner of the property who sold the property without satisfying the loan, was not barred by CC § 1624(a)(6) [First Nationwide Sav. v. Perry (1993) 11 CA4th 1657, 1670, 15 CR2d 173].

15.06[6][b] Exception When Agreement to Pay Secured Indebtedness Is Contained in Conveyance. An agreement by a purchaser of real property to pay an indebtedness secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on the property purchased need not be set forth in an independent writing if the conveyance specifically provides for the assumption of the indebtedness by the purchaser [CC § 1624(a)(6)].

15.06[7] Contract for Commercial Loan or Extension of Credit of More Than $100,000. A contract, promise, undertaking, or commitment to loan money or to grant or extend credit, in an amount greater than $100,000, must be in writing when made by a person engaged in the business of lending or arranging for the lending of money or extending credit unless it is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. For purposes of this provision, a contract, promise, undertaking or commitment to loan money secured solely by residential property consisting of one to four dwelling units is deemed to be for personal, family, or household purposes [CC § 1624(a)(7)].

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
II. DETERMINING WHETHER CONTRACT COMPLIES WITH STATUTE OF FRAUDS

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.07

15.07 Sufficiency of Writing Required by Statute of Frauds.

15.07[1] Writings Must Satisfy Basic Criteria of Statute. A writing (or writings) satisfies the statute of frauds only if the writing does all of the following [see Seaman's Direct Buying Serv., Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 C3d 752, 762-763, 206 CR 354, 686 P2d 1158, overruled in part on other grounds by Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 87, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669]:

- Reasonably identifies the subject matter of the agreement;
- Establishes that an agreement with respect to the subject matter has been made between particular parties; and
- States with reasonable certainty the essential terms of the unperformed promises of the contract.

Example--Contract for Sale of Real Estate:

In real estate sales contracts, a writing must identify the seller and the buyer, the price to be paid, the time of payment, the manner of payment, and the property to be transferred [Gaggero v. Yura (2003) 108 CA4th 884, 894, 134 CR2d 313].

Jury Instructions:

Statute of Frauds Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.30 (Matthew Bender).

Judge's Perspective:

Gaggero v. Yura involves an interesting twist on the statute of frauds. When the performance of a contract requires the parties to reach a collateral agreement, the fact that the other agreement is not yet in writing does not give rise to a statute of frauds defense. "[A] contract requiring an approval or agreement subject to the statute of frauds may be enforceable irrespective of the status of that agreement or approval." In Gaggero, the parties had a contract for the purchase and sale of land, but had not yet completed the CC & Rs for the property [Gaggero v. Yura (2003) 108 CA4th 884, 895, 134 CR2d 313].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of the essential terms required for a contract, see Ch. 13, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element.

15.07[2] Party to Be Charged Must Sign Writing.

15.07[2][a] Party to Be Charged Generally Must Authenticate Writing. An agreement that is covered by the statute of frauds is not enforceable unless the agreement or a note or memorandum of the agreement is signed by the party to be charged, or by the party's agent [CC § 1624(a); see 15.07[3]].

Distinguish:

Under CC § 1624, "party to be charged" means "the party to be charged in court with the performance of the obligation, i.e., the defendant in the action brought to enforce the contract." Thus, a plaintiff's failure to sign a contract is immaterial to the statute of frauds [Ulloa v. McMillin Real Estate & Mortgage, Inc. (2007) 149 CA4th 333, 339, 57 CR3d 1] .

15.07[2][b] Party May Direct Another Person to Sign. Under the "amanuensis rule," one person may expressly direct another person to sign the directing person's name, and in such a case, the signing person is not considered the directing person's agent. Rather, the person signing the name is instead regarded as a mere instrument or "amanuensis" of the directing person, and that signature is deemed to be the directing person's original signature, which is valid under the statute of frauds [Estate of Stephens (2002) 28 C4th 665, 670-671, 122 CR2d 358, 49 P3d 1093].

15.07[3] Writing Is Sufficient If Agent of Party to Be Charged Signed Writing.

15.07[3][a] Agent's Signature May Satisfy Statute of Frauds. Ordinarily, the party to be charged must sign a writing for the writing to satisfy the statute of frauds [see 15.07[2]]. However, the statute expressly allows an agent of the party to be charged to sign the writing [CC § 1624(a)].

15.07[3][b] Agent Must Have Authority to Sign Contract. An agent's signature is sufficient to satisfy the writing requirement of the statute of frauds if the agent has actual authority to sign the contract [CC § 1624(a); see Colbough v. Hartline (1994) 29 CA4th 1516, 1524, 35 CR2d 213]. It has also been held that under the equal dignities rule [see CC § 2309], authority to enter into a contract required by law to be in writing can itself only be given by an instrument in writing [Kerner v. Hughes Tool Co. (1976) 56 CA3d 924, 934, 128 CR 839].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of agent's actual authority, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions, 20.09.

15.07[3][c] Unauthorized Agent's Signature May Subsequently Be Ratified. Although an agent's signature does not satisfy the writing requirement of the statute of frauds if the agent lacks authority to sign the contract, the party to be charged may subsequently ratify the agent's actions in entering into the contract, thus treating the agent's signature as if originally authorized [Behniwal v. Mix (2005) 133 CA4th 1027, 1039]. To satisfy the statute of frauds, the ratification must itself be in writing [Behniwal v. Mix (2005) 133 CA4th 1027, 1039 ; CC §§ 2309-2310].

Example:

Condominium sellers' signatures on disclosure statements ratified the actions of their real estate agent, who previously (without authority) signed the sellers' names on an offer, counteroffer and addendum to the counteroffer. The sellers' ratification of their agent's actions created an enforceable contract binding on the sellers [Behniwal v. Mix (2005) 133 CA4th 1027, 1039-1042].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of principal's ratification of agent's acts, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract

Actions, 20.09.

15.07[4] Handwritten Signature Is Not Required for Authentication. Although the statute requires that the contract has been "signed," a handwritten signature is not required; all that is necessary is that the party indicate in some manner in the writing that the party intends the authentication of the writing [Poag v. Winston (1987) 195 CA3d 1161, 1179, 241 CR 330].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of signature requirements, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 530.14[3] (Matthew Bender).

Example--Advertisement Operating As Authenticated Writing:

An automobile dealer's printed name in a printed newspaper advertisement to sell a vehicle evidences an intention to authenticate the advertisement as an offer, and therefore constitutes a "signature" satisfying the statute of frauds [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 277-278, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 (offeror's intent to authenticate offeror's name as signature can be established from face of advertisement)].

15.07[5] Contract May Be Proved by One Writing or Series of Related Writings.

15.07[5][a] Separate Documents That Relate to Subject Matter May Be Combined. If the parties have sent or exchanged a series of numerous writings that have a relation to the same subject matter, the series of writings together may satisfy the statute of frauds if the series otherwise satisfies the statute, and one of the writings is signed by the party to be charged [Searles v. Gonzalez (1923) 191 C 426, 431, 216 P 1003 ; see Gaggero v. Yura (2003) 108 CA4th 884, 895-896, 134 CR2d 313].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of essential contract terms, see Ch. 13, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element.

15.07[5][b] Separate Documents Must Be Connected to Same Transaction. Under the "multiple writings" exception to the statute of frauds, a signature on one document may be grafted onto another document only if the writings relate to the same matter and constitute several parts of one connected transaction [Goodman v. Community Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1966) 246 CA2d 13, 22, 54 CR 456].

Jury Instructions:

Several Documents Interpreted Together, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3B, Instr. MB 300B.06 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of separate documents, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 530.14[2] (Matthew Bender).

15.07[6] Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Explain Terms of Agreement. When ambiguous terms in a memorandum are disputed, extrinsic evidence is admissible to resolve the uncertainty [Sterling v. Taylor (2007) 40 C4th 757, 767, 55 CR3d 116, 152 P3d 420 (disapproving statements in California cases barring consideration of extrinsic evidence to determine sufficiency of memorandum under statute of frauds)].

Distinguish:

Because the memorandum itself must include the essential contractual terms, extrinsic evidence cannot supply those required terms. It can only be used to explain essential terms that were understood by the parties but otherwise would be unintelligible to others [Sterling v. Taylor (2007) 40 C4th 757, 767, 55 CR3d 116, 152 P3d 420] . Extrinsic evidence cannot be employed to prove an agreement at odds with the terms of the memorandum [Sterling v. Taylor (2007) 40 C4th 757, 771, 55 CR3d 116, 152 P3d 420] .

Example:

Buyers sought to enforce a memorandum concerning the sale of several apartment buildings. The handwritten memorandum contained the estimated rental income, a multiplier, and a purchase price. After the sellers sent the buyers formal purchase agreements with escrow instructions, the buyers refused to sign the purchase agreements on the ground that after reviewing the rent rolls, they determined the actual rental income from the buildings was less than the estimate, and therefore the purchase price in the memorandum was unacceptable. Buyers argued the purchase price should be adjusted based on the actual rental income figure and the multiplier contained in the memorandum. The California Supreme Court held that although it was appropriate to consider extrinsic evidence to clarify the terms of the written memorandum, the extrinsic evidence offered by the buyers was at odds with the writing, which stated a specific price and did not indicate that the parties contemplated any change based on actual rental income. Therefore, the evidence was insufficient to show with reasonable certainty that the parties understood and agreed to the price alleged by plaintiffs, and the statute of frauds was not satisfied [Sterling v. Taylor (2007) 40 C4th 757, 772-776, 55 CR3d 116, 152 P3d 420] .

15.07[7] Documents Should Be Gathered Early to Determine If Writing Requirement of Statute of Frauds Can Be Met. As with any proceeding in which documents will be an important component of the evidence of trial, counsel should gather evidence as early as possible to establish--or disprove--that there is a memorandum sufficient to defeat the statute of frauds. Because the document in question by definition is not a complete, fully executed contract, it may take many forms: a memorandum, an invoice, an exchange of sales correspondence, and so forth. Thus, counsel should conduct not only formal discovery designed to uncover whatever documents the opposing party has in its files, but also a thorough, early internal investigation to determine what documents the attorney's own client has. Without this information in hand, counsel cannot give appropriate advice to the client about the likelihood of prevailing at trial, the other discovery that needs to be conducted, or the reasonable value of settlement.

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
II. DETERMINING WHETHER CONTRACT COMPLIES WITH STATUTE OF FRAUDS

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.08

15.08 Exceptions to Writing Requirement of Statute of Frauds.

15.08[1] Personal Property Leases Are Governed by Separate Statute. The writing requirements for personal property leases generally are covered by Division 10 of the Commercial Code and not by the primary statute of frauds [CC § 1624(c); see Com Code § 10101 et seq.; see also 15.23].

15.08[2] Qualified Financial Contracts Are Excepted From Writing Requirement.

15.08[2][a] Qualified Financial Contracts Need Not Be in Writing. Despite the writing requirement that generally applies to an agreement that cannot be performed within one year [see CC § 1624(a)(1); see also 15.06[1]], a qualified financial contract that is otherwise valid and enforceable is not invalid merely for lack of a writing and is enforceable by way of action or defense, if either there is sufficient evidence to establish that a contract has been made [see 15.08[2][c]] or the parties have agreed by means of a prior or subsequent written contract to be bound by the terms of the qualified financial contract [CC § 1624(b)(1)].

15.08[2][b] Types of Qualified Financial Contract Subject to Exception. A "qualified financial contract" is any of the following types of agreements in which neither party is a natural person [CC § 1624(b)(2)]:

- The purchase and sale of certain currencies or exchanges.
- Certain purchases, sales, or transfer of any commodity or similar good.
- A commodity swap or commodity option.
- A rate swap, basis swap, forward rate transaction, or interest rate option.
- A security-index swap or option, or security or securities price swap or option.
- Any transaction relating to a price or index involving any combination of the agreements listed above.
- An option for any agreement listed above.

Cross Reference:

Discussion of types of agreements that constitute qualified financial contracts, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds (Matthew Bender).

15.08[2][c] Proof Necessary to Establish That Qualified Financial Contract Was Made. In the following situations, a qualified financial contract need not be in writing to prove that the agreement exists:

- Evidence of an electronic communication, such as the recording of a telephone call or tangible written text produced by computer retrieval, is sufficient that a contract has been made if it indicates in the communication that a contract was made between the parties [CC § 1624(b)(3)(A)].
- A written confirmation indicating that a contract has been made between the parties is sufficient, provided the confirmation is received by the party against whom enforcement is sought no later than the fifth business day after the date the contract is made, and the sender does not receive, on or before the third business day after receipt, a written objection to a material term of the confirmation [CC § 1624(b)(3)(B)].
- There is sufficient evidence that a contract has been made if the party against whom enforcement is sought admits in its pleading, testimony, or otherwise in court that a contract was made [CC § 1624(b)(3)(C)].
- A note, memorandum, or other writing that indicates that a contract has been made constitutes sufficient evidence of the contract when it has been signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought or by its authorized agent or broker or amanuensis [CC § 1624(b)(3)(D)].

For purposes of determining the existence of an agreement, the tangible written text produced by telex, fax, computer retrieval, or other process by which electronic signals are transmitted by telephone or otherwise constitutes a "writing," and any symbol executed or adopted by a party with the present intention to authenticate a writing constitutes a "signing" [CC § 1624(b)(4)].

15.08[3] Oral Modification of Written Contract May Satisfy Statute If Supported by New Consideration.

Generally, a contract in writing may be modified only by a written modification [see CC § 1698(a); Secrest v. Security National Mortgage Loan Trust 2002-2 (2008) 167 CA4th 544, 553, 84 CR3d 275 (forbearance agreement attempted to modify note and deed of trust and was subject to the statute of frauds)]. However, a written contract may be modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration unless the written original contract expressly provides otherwise, and unless the contract, as modified, is itself within the provisions of the statute of frauds [CC § 1698(c); see Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 1020, 1038 n11, 135 CR2d 736].

Example:

An employee leasing agreement provided that the contract may be altered or amended only by written amendment signed by both parties [Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 1020, 1038, 135 CR2d 736].

15.08[4] Equitable Estoppel Doctrine May Preclude Party From Asserting Statute of Frauds.

15.08[4][a] Application of Estoppel Principles Is Consistent With Purpose of Statute of Frauds. The purpose of the statute of frauds is to prevent false claims or perjured testimony when a party is attempting to establish the existence of a purported contract. Therefore, the statute of frauds may not be used to further the very type of wrong it was designed to prevent, and the courts will not refuse to enforce a contract when to do so would shield, protect, or aid a party who relies on the statute to perpetrate a fraud [Estate of Brenzikofer v. Schwarz (1996) 49 CA4th 1461, 1469 n4, 57 CR2d 401]. Thus, the court may apply equitable estoppel principles to prevent unfair assertions of a statute of frauds [Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 357, 65 CR2d 628].

The doctrine of estoppel to assert the statute of frauds has been consistently applied by California courts to prevent the fraud that would result from refusal to enforce oral contracts when either or both of the following conditions exist [Monarco v. Lo Greco (1950) 35 C2d 621, 623-624, 220 P2d 737]:

- One party has so seriously changed position in reliance upon, or in performance of, the contract that he or she would suffer an unconscionable injury if it were not enforced [see 15.08[4][b)]; or
- The other party has reaped the benefits of the contract and would be unjustly enriched if allowed to escape its obligations [see 15.08[4][c)].

15.08[4][b] Estoppel May Be Applied When Plaintiff Would Suffer Unconscionable Injury. A court may apply equitable estoppel to avoid the statute of frauds, and to make an oral agreement enforceable, when the promisee has detrimentally relied on the agreement and would suffer an unconscionable injury if the oral agreement were not enforced [Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 359, 65 CR2d 628]. This change in the position of the promisee may be based either on the fraudulent or erroneous assertion that the agreement would be reduced to writing, or on the representation that the promisor would perform under the oral agreement [Byrne v. Laura (1997) 52 CA4th 1054, 1069, 60 CR2d 908].

The payment of money is not sufficient part performance to take an oral agreement out of the statute of frauds, because the party paying money under an invalid contract has an adequate remedy at law [Secrest v. Security National Mortgage Loan Trust 2002-2 (2008) 167 CA4th 544, 555, 84 CR3d 275].

Jury Instructions:

Estoppel to Assert the Statute of Frauds, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.42 (Matthew Bender).

15.08[4][c] Estoppel May Be Applied When Defendant Would Be Unjustly Enriched by Plaintiff's Performance. A court may apply equitable estoppel to make an oral agreement enforceable notwithstanding the statute of frauds if the promisor would receive unjust enrichment by being allowed to retain the benefit of any performance by the promisee without any performance of the promisor's obligations under the oral agreement [Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 359, 65 CR2d 628]. To constitute part performance, the relevant acts either must unequivocally refer to the contract or clearly relate to its terms. Such conduct satisfies the evidentiary function of the statute of frauds by confirming that a bargain was in fact reached [In re Marriage of Benson (2005) 36 C4th 1096, 1109].

Consider:

Note that the leading cases on equitable estoppel in the context of contract law usually involve variations on the basic theme of oral promises to perform services in return for testamentary dispositions of property [see, e.g., Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 359, 65 CR2d 628]. A separate line of cases exists holding that merely rendering services is not usually such a part performance of an oral agreement as will relieve the contract from the operation of the statute of frauds, unless the services are of such a peculiar character that it is impossible to estimate their value and the plaintiff, after performing the services, could not be restored to the situation in which he or she was prior to rendering the services [see Kobus v. San Diego Trust & Sav. Bank (1959) 172 CA2d 574, 579, 342 P2d 468]. One case has distinguished these cases by drawing a distinction between complete and partial performance of an oral contract, arguing that partial performance of an oral contract by one or both parties ordinarily is insufficient to remove a contract from the operation of the statute of frauds, but full performance of the contract by one party will do so [Nesson v. Moes (1963) 215 CA2d 655, 657-658, 30 CR 428]. These issues, however, seem to be largely ignored in the leading cases applying equitable estoppel to enforce contracts that otherwise would be invalid under the statute of frauds. Instead, the leading cases have focused on the components of unconscionable injury and unjust enrichment [see, e.g., Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 359, 65 CR2d 628 ; Monarco v. Lo Greco (1950) 35 C2d 621, 623-624, 220 P2d 737].

Jury Instructions:

Effect of Part Performance on Statute of Frauds, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.43 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Form for allegation of partial performance, see 15.35.

15.08[5] Statute of Frauds Inapplicable If Fraud Was Used to Prevent Writing. When a party to a contract uses fraud to prevent the contract from being reduced to writing, the defrauded party may enforce the contract against the party perpetrating the fraud even if the contract is subject to the statute of frauds and therefore is required by law to be in writing [CC § 1623; see also Wilk v. Vencill (1947) 30 C2d 104, 108-109, 180 P2d 351 (representation that one intends to sign agreement in future is basis for estoppel)].

Example:

A lessor who proposed and drafted a new lease that the lessee signed, admitted the lease existed, and accepted rent under it for an extended period, could not later claim the lease actually was an invalid modification of an earlier lease, and therefore within the statute of frauds, to prevent the lessee's recovery [Keller v. Richbart (1933) 130 CA 296, 298-299, 20 P2d 55].

15.08[6] Statute of Frauds Inapplicable to Oral Settlement Agreement Made on Record Before Court. The statute of frauds does not apply to an oral settlement agreement to which the parties stipulated before the court following a judicially mandated and supervised settlement conference. The concern addressed by the statute of frauds is not present when a neutral court participates in the settlement process [Kohn v. Jaymar-Ruby, Inc. (1994) 23 CA4th 1530, 1534-1535, 28 CR2d 780] .

Example:

The parties entered into a settlement of their lawsuit in open court, agreeing to a stipulated judgment to be paid by the defendant over a two-year period. Counsel for the defendant reduced the stipulation to writing and delivered it to the plaintiff for signature. The plaintiff signed the agreement, but the defendant did not. When the defendant stopped making payments, the plaintiff sued to enforce the agreement. The defendant asserted the statute of frauds as an affirmative defense, claiming the contract was not to be performed within one year, was not in writing, and was not signed by the defendant. The Court of Appeal ruled that the statute of frauds was inapplicable to a judicially supervised settlement agreement made orally on the record before the court [Pietrobon v. Libarle (2006) 137 CA4th 992, 998-999, 40 CR3d 718] .

15.08[7] Statute of Frauds Inapplicable to Executed Contract. The statute of frauds does not apply to an executed, as opposed to executory, contract [Kirkpatrick v. Tapo Oil Co. (1956) 144 CA2d 404, 414, 301 P2d 274 ; Lee v. Lee (2009) 175 CA4th 1553, 1557, 97 CR3d 516] .

Example:

Statute of frauds did not apply to transfer of real estate when oral contract was followed four years later by executed and delivered quitclaim deed [Lee v. Lee (2009) 175 CA4th 1553, 1557, 97 CR3d 516] .

15.09 Oral Agreement Failing to Comply With Statute of Frauds Is Voidable.

If an agreement is not supported by a writing sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds, the agreement is not enforceable. In other words, an oral agreement within the statute of frauds is voidable at the option of either party [see House of Prayer v. Evangelical Assn. for India (2003) 113 CA4th 48, 53].

An oral agreement that is within the statute of frauds is not automatically void, but merely voidable [Masin v. Drain (1984) 150 CA3d 714, 717, 198 CR 367].

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.10

15.10 CHECKLIST: Raising Statute of Frauds Issues.

15.10[1] Checklist for Plaintiff.

- ☐ Ensure that any complaint based on a contract:
 - ☐ States whether contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct.
 - ☐ Alleges facts that show writing is in compliance with statute of frauds, if necessary.

Authority:

CCP § 430.10(g)

Discussion:

See 15.11[1]

Form:

See 15.34

- ☐ Ensure that any complaint based on a breach of a written contract:
 - ☐ Sets out terms of contract in body of complaint; or
 - ☐ Attaches a copy of written contract document and incorporates the contract by reference.

Authority:

Otworth v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1985) 166 CA3d 452, 459, 212 CR 743

Discussion:

See 15.11[2]

Form:

See 15.34

☐ If defendant may assert that agreement does not comply with writing requirement of statute of frauds, allege any of following issues in complaint, as appropriate:

☐ A writing exists that constitutes a memorandum of the agreement sufficient to satisfy statute of frauds.

Authority:

Alameda Belt Line v. City of Alameda (2003) 113 CA4th 15, 20-21

Discussion:

See 15.11[2] -[4], 15.18[2]

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
III. RAISING STATUTE OF FRAUDS ISSUES

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.11

15.11 Complaint Should Allege Sufficient Facts to Bring Contract Within Statute of Frauds.

15.11[1] Complaint Must State Whether It Is Written, Oral, or Implied by Contract. A complaint based on breach of an asserted contract must indicate on its face whether the contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct [CCP § 430.10(g)].

Warning:

Failure to satisfy this pleading requirement renders the complaint subject to objection by way of demurrer or answer [CCP § 430.10(g)].

Cross Reference:

Filing demurrer if contract fails to state whether contract is written, oral, or implied by contract, see 15.15.

15.11[2] Written Contract Should Be Attached to Complaint. A complaint alleging a breach of a written contract must set out the terms of the contract verbatim in the body of the complaint, or must attach a copy of the written instrument and incorporate it by reference [Otworth v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1985) 166 CA3d 452, 458-459, 212 CR 743].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

Unless there is some special reason not to do so, the plaintiff should always attach a copy of the contract to the complaint. This avoids ambiguity and generally promotes convenience later in the case.

Cross Reference:

Pleading breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract, 22.12.

15.11[3] When Contract Is Formed by Series of Writings, Complaint Should Allege and Incorporate Them. If contract is formed by series of writings that collectively satisfy the statute of frauds, the complaint should describe the writings and their relation to the subject matter, and allege that the defendant signed at least one of them [see Searles v.

Gonzalez (1923) 191 C 426, 431, 216 P 1003].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

All of the relevant memoranda should be attached to the complaint and incorporated by reference.

Cross Reference:

Proving contract by a series of writings, see 15.07[5].

15.11[4] If Signed by Someone Other than Plaintiff, Signer's Authority Should Be Alleged. If a contract was signed by someone other than the plaintiff, the complaint should allege that fact and one of the following, as appropriate:

- That party signing the contract was plaintiff's agent and had authority to sign the contract [see CC § 1624(a)]; or
- If another person signed the plaintiff's name, that the person who signed the name was acting as plaintiff's instrument or "amanuensis" [Estate of Stephens (2002) 28 C4th 665, 670-671, 122 CR2d 358, 49 P3d 1093].

Cross References:

Agent's signature will satisfy statute of frauds, see 15.07[3][a], [b].

Signature at person's express direction is deemed to be directing person's signature, see 15.07[2][b].

15.11[5] Complaint Should Allege Facts Bringing Oral Contract Within Statute of Frauds Exceptions. If the contract is oral, the complaint should allege sufficient facts to bring it within the applicable exception(s) to the statute of frauds, such as:

- The term of the contract or the time frame within which performance is due, in such a way that on the face of the complaint, the contract can or must be performed within a year from the date of making [see CC § 1624(a)(1)].
- The fact that the contract involves personal property, services, or other subject matter for which a writing is not required [see CC § 1624(a)(3)].

Warning:

Although there is no express statutory requirement that the complaint allege facts sufficient to bring an oral contract within the statute of frauds, failure to do so may subject the complaint to a demurrer if it appears from the face of the complaint that the underlying contract does not satisfy the statute [see, e.g., Gressley v. Williams (1961) 193 CA2d 636, 640-641, 14 CR 496, discussed in 15.14], thereby forcing the plaintiff to amend the complaint (assuming it can be amended). To avoid this possibility, the best practice is to make sure that the complaint on its face alleges sufficient facts that indicate that the oral contract is valid.

15.11[6] Facts Taking Oral Contract Out of Statute Should Be Alleged If Applicable. If an oral contract would be invalid under the statute of frauds, but the plaintiff is relying on facts that will take the contract out of the statute of frauds, such as new consideration [see 15.08[3]] or estoppel based on performance resulting in unconscionable injury or unjust enrichment [see 15.08[4]], the complaint should allege those facts sufficiently to withstand a demurrer.

Example:

When the underlying oral contract was for a term in excess of one year, the plaintiff's attempt to anticipate a statute of frauds defense simply by alleging in the complaint, without more, that the defendant was estopped to raise the statute of frauds, was inadequate to withstand a demurrer based on the statute of frauds because the allegation was merely a conclusion of the pleader. The pleader was required to allege facts sufficient to plead all the essential elements of estoppel [Gressley v. Williams (1961) 193 CA2d 636, 640-641, 14 CR 496].

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
III. RAISING STATUTE OF FRAUDS ISSUES

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.12

15.12 Defendant Must Raise Statute of Frauds at Earliest Opportunity.

15.12[1] Failure to Comply With Statute of Frauds Is Affirmative Defense. The claim that a contract is unenforceable for failure to comply with the statute of frauds must be raised as an affirmative defense [Walton v. City of Red Bluff (1991) 2 CA4th 117, 131, 3 CR2d 275].

15.12[2] Defense Is Waived If Not Asserted by Defendant. The failure to raise the affirmative defense of the statute of frauds at the earliest possible time results in a waiver of the defense [see California Concrete Co. v. Beverly Hills Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1989) 215 CA3d 260, 272-273]. Ordinarily, the earliest opportunity is when the defendant demurs or files an answer to a complaint. However, a defendant may raise the issue at trial or even in jury instructions if it is not apparent until that time that the claimant is relying on an oral contract [Isaac v. A & B Loan Co. (1988) 201 CA3d 307, 311-312, 247 CR 104 ; see Secrest v. Security National Mortgage Loan Trust 2002-2 (2008) 167 CA4th 544, 552, 84 CR3d 275 (plaintiffs first produced agreement with reply brief in support of motion for preliminary injunction; defendant adequately raised statute of limitations defense by stipulating that the only issue to be tried was whether the agreement was enforceable)].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

The statute of frauds is most often raised as an affirmative defense in the answer. It can also be raised in a demurrer, especially if the judge is receptive to demurrers and the issue is case-dispositive. Generally, unless a demurrer can be sustained without leave to amend, it is better to raise the statute in the answer and then attempt to dispose of the case in a motion for summary judgment or a motion for summary adjudication of issues.

Jury Instructions:

Statute of Frauds--Reasonable Time, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.41 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Raising statute of frauds in answer, see 15.15.

Raising statute of frauds by demurrer or motion, see 15.16.

15.12[3] Defendant Has Burden of Proving Application of Statute. In general, a defendant asserting new matter as an affirmative defense, including the statute of frauds, has the burden of pleading and proving the affirmative defense [Waller v. Truck Ins. Exch., Inc. (1995) 11 C4th 1, 33, 44 CR2d 370, 900 P2d 619]. "New matter" refers to a new issue the defendant has introduced into the case, rather than the negation of an element of the plaintiff's cause of action [Erler v. Five Points Motors, Inc. (1967) 249 CA2d 560, 565-566, 57 CR 516 (noting that law on burden of proof as to affirmative defenses is somewhat unclear)].

III. RAISING STATUTE OF FRAUDS ISSUES

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.13

15.13 Defendant May Demur to Complaint That Fails to Specify Whether Asserted Contract Is Written, Oral, or Implied.

15.13[1] Complaint for Breach of Contract Must Specify Basis of Complaint. When a complaint is based on breach of an asserted contract, the complaint must indicate on its face whether the contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct [CCP § 430.10(g); see 15.11[1]]. A complaint alleging a breach of a written contract must set out the terms verbatim in the body of the complaint or must attach a copy of the written instrument and incorporate it by reference [Otworth v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1985) 166 CA3d 452, 458-459, 212 CR 743].

➡ Cross Reference:

Pleading breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract, 22.12.

15.13[2] Failure of Complaint to Specify Basis of Complaint Is Grounds for Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may demur on the grounds that it cannot be ascertained from the complaint whether the contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct [CCP §§ 430.10(g), 430.30(a)].

When such a failure does not appear from the face of the complaint or cross-complaint, an objection on that ground must be taken by filing an answer to the pleading [CCP § 430.30(b); see 15.15].

Judge's Perspective:

Defendants often file demurrers when the point can be resolved informally. For example, if the plaintiff fails to specify whether a contract is oral or written, a simple phone call or letter to the plaintiff's counsel inviting an amendment to the complaint usually is all that will be required.

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
III. RAISING STATUTE OF FRAUDS ISSUES

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.14

15.14 Defendant May Demur to Complaint If Invalidity of Contract Under Statute of Frauds Appears on Face of Complaint.

The statute of frauds may be raised by a demurrer if it clearly appears from the face of the complaint that the contract is invalid under the statute [see, e.g., Gressley v. Williams (1961) 193 CA2d 636, 640-641, 14 CR 496].

A complaint is subject to demurrer if it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action [CCP § 430.10(e)]. A complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action if it shows on its face or it appears from judicially noticed matter that the action is barred by an affirmative defense [see, e.g., Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 CA4th 1383, 1391, 77 CR2d 383 (defense to intentional interference with contractual relations appeared on face of complaint)]. The affirmative defense must clearly appear on the face of the complaint to support a demurrer; it cannot be sustained if the complaint might be barred, but is not necessarily barred [CrossTalk Prods., Inc. v. Jacobson (1998) 65 CA4th 631, 635, 76 CR2d 615 (dismissal of unclean hands defense was inappropriate when factual ambiguity existed)].

Example:

A complaint alleging that the defendants entered into an oral agreement to employ plaintiff as an auto sales manager during the period between April 1, 1957, and December 1, 1958, pleaded a contract that on its face was invalid and unenforceable under the statute of frauds, and therefore was subject to demurrer [Gressley v. Williams (1961) 193 CA2d 636, 640-641, 14 CR 496].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

Raising the statute of frauds by way of a demurrer may be advantageous if the defense counsel knows or strongly suspects that the plaintiff cannot fix the problem simply by amending the complaint. In some cases, failure to comply with the statute of frauds is a pleading defect that is not easily fixed by amendment. In this situation, defense counsel may be able to dispose of the case at an earlier point in the proceedings that would be possible by answering the complaint and then moving for summary judgment at a later time. On the other hand, if it appears likely that the plaintiff could fix the problem by amending the complaint, the extra effort and expense of filing a demurrer may not be worthwhile, and answering the complaint and raising the statute of frauds as a defense may be preferable.

15.15 Defendant May Raise Failure to Comply With Statute of Frauds by Answer to Complaint.

A defendant may raise the issue of the statute of frauds as an affirmative defense in its answer to a breach of contract complaint. It is appropriate to raise the defense by answer when the failure to comply with the writing requirement is not apparent from the face of the complaint [CCP § 430.30(b); see Kaljjan v. Menezes (1995) 36 CA4th 573, 582, 42 CR2d 510].

15.16 Defendant May Raise Failure to Comply With Statute of Frauds by Motion.

15.16[1] Defendant May Raise Issue by Motion Once Answer Has Been Filed. The typical manner for a defendant to raise the issue of the statute of frauds after it has filed an answer is by pretrial motion such as a motion for summary judgment, motion for summary adjudication of issues, or motion for nonsuit [see, e.g., Alameda Belt Line v. City of Alameda (2003) 113 CA4th 15, 20]. This issue can also be raised in a motion for judgment on the pleadings [CCP § 438(c)(1)(A)].

15.16[2] Defendant May Raise Statute in Evidentiary Context by Motion to Exclude or Strike Evidence of Oral Agreement. If the plaintiff has attempted to introduce evidence at trial that an oral agreement is an enforceable contract, the defendant may make a motion to have the evidence stricken as a violation of the statute of frauds. Such a motion may be made at any time during the trial [McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 CA3d 246, 252, 115 CR 902].

15.17 Defendant May Raise Issue by Request for Jury Instruction.

If the court has already allowed properly introduced evidence of an oral agreement (such as to prove that an oral contract is not subject to the statute of frauds), the defendant may request a jury instruction on the issue of the statute of frauds. Such a request is sufficient to preserve the statute as an affirmative defense. The erroneous failure to give a statute of frauds jury instruction is grounds for a new trial, unless the error is harmless [Kaljia v. Menezes (1995) 37 CA4th 87a].

III. RAISING STATUTE OF FRAUDS ISSUES

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.18

15.18 Plaintiff May Respond to Statute of Frauds Defense by Motion.

15.18[1] Plaintiff May Assert That Oral Agreement Is Not Within Statute of Frauds. If a defending party has asserted a statute of frauds defense in an action based on contract, the plaintiff may raise by motion, such as a motion in opposition to a motion for nonsuit, that the agreement is not covered by the statute of frauds because it does not fall in any category specified in the statute [CC § 1624; see Abeyta v. Superior Court (1993) 17 CA4th 1037, 1040, 21 CR2d 680].

15.18[2] Plaintiff May Assert That There Is Sufficient Memorandum of Agreement to Satisfy Statute of Frauds. If a defending party has asserted a statute of frauds defense in an action based on contract, the plaintiff may raise by motion, such as a motion in opposition to summary judgment, that a writing exists that is a memorandum of the agreement sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds [Alameda Belt Line v. City of Alameda (2003) 113 CA4th 15, 20-21].

➡ Cross Reference:

15.18[3] Plaintiff May Assert That Defendant Is Equitably Estopped From Asserting Statute of Frauds. If a defending party has asserted a statute of frauds defense in an action based on contract, the plaintiff may assert, by motion in opposition, that the principles of equitable estoppel should prevent the defendant from relying on the statute of frauds [Estate of Housley (1997) 56 CA4th 342, 349, 65 CR2d 628].

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities

III. RAISING STATUTE OF FRAUDS ISSUES

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.19

15.19 Plaintiff May Raise Statute of Frauds Issue by Request for Jury Instruction.

Just as a defendant is entitled to a jury instruction [see 15.17], the plaintiff is entitled to a jury instruction when it has presented evidence that the statute should not be applicable, for example, if the plaintiff asserts that the defendant should be estopped from relying on the statute [Tomlins v. American Ins. Co. (1968) 258 CA2d 525, 528, 66 CR 92].

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
 IV. DETERMINING WHETHER OTHER STATUTES REQUIRE WRITTEN CONTRACT, PARTICULAR
 CONTRACT PROVISIONS, OR OTHER FORMALITIES

1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.21

15.21 Premarital Agreements Must Be in Writing.

15.21[1] Premarital Agreement Must Be in Writing and Signed by Parties. The California Uniform Premarital Agreement Act [see Fam Code § 1500 et seq.] provides that a premarital agreement must be in writing and signed by both parties [Fam Code § 1611]. The Act also specifies such matters as the type of property subject to such agreements and the requirements for amendments to a premarital agreement [see In re Marriage of Bonds (2000) 24 C4th 1, 14-15, 99 CR2d 252, 5 P3d 815].

Distinguish--Premarital Agreements Are Viewed More Strictly Than Ordinary Agreements:

The policy considerations behind the statute of frauds apply with even more force to prenuptial agreements than to ordinary contracts, so that the requirements of certainty of terms of a writing are even more strict [In re Marriage of Shaban (2001) 88 CA4th 398, 406, 105 CR2d 863].

However, even though the Act does not specifically make reference to any of the traditional exceptions to the statute of frauds, such as equitable estoppel, it appears that courts may be receptive to such arguments [see Hall v. Hall (1990) 222 CA3d 578, 587, 271 CR 773].

Distinguish:

Courts will not apply equitable estoppel to avoid application of the statute of frauds in the case of a transmutation (an interspousal transaction changing the character of community or separate property) [In re Marriage of Benson (2005) 36 C4th 1096, 1110-1111 ; see Fam Code § 852(a)].

15.21[2] Effect of Failure to Comply With Writing Requirement. The legislature intended the premarital agreement writing requirement to be a statute of frauds, so that a failure to comply means that the agreement is not enforceable [Hall v. Hall (1990) 222 CA3d 578, 586, 271 CR 773].

Judge's Perspective:

As the court noted in Hall, a premarital agreement subject to the statute of frauds can be enforced based on the same exceptions that apply to other contracts. For example, in that case the court of appeal enforced an oral premarital agreement when it was shown that the wife had substantially detrimentally relied on the husband's promise to grant her a life estate in his separate property [Hall v. Hall (1990)].

222 CA3d 578, 586-587, 271 CR 773].

Cross Reference:

Detailed discussion of writing requirement for premarital agreements, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 530.12[3] (Matthew Bender).

15.21[3] Premarital Agreements Are Subject to Additional Scrutiny by Courts. A premarital agreement is not enforceable if the party against whom enforcement is sought proves that that party did not execute the agreement voluntarily [Fam Code § 1615(a)(1), (c) (circumstances under which court may deem execution not to be voluntary); see In re Marriage of Bonds (2000) 24 C4th 1, 13, 99 CR2d 252, 5 P3d 815].

Judge's Perspective:

This rule is consistent with a long-established public policy, set forth in both statute and numerous reported decisions, that spouses have a fiduciary obligation to each other. Thus, premarital agreements are treated differently from ordinary contracts because the parties have duties to each other, and might potentially give up rights, which ordinary contracting parties do not have. The litigation of premarital agreements is a specialized area requiring a thorough understanding of the law.

15.22 Sale of Personal Property for More Than $5,000 Requires Written Contract.

15.22[1] Written Contract Is Necessary to Enforce Sale of Personal Property for Amount Greater Than $5,000. With listed exceptions [see 15.22[2]], a contract for the sale of personal property other than "goods" is not enforceable through court action or defense in an amount greater than $5,000 unless evidenced by a writing that meets the following requirements [Civ Code § 1624.5(a)]:

- It establishes that a contract for sale has been made between the parties at a specific price;
- It reasonably identifies the personal property; and
- It is signed by the party who is the object of enforcement or by his or her authorized agent.

➡ Cross Reference:

Detailed discussion of writing requirements for sale of personal property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 530.12[11] (Matthew Bender).

15.22[2] Writing Requirement for Sale of Personal Property Inapplicable to Specified Contracts. The personal property writing requirement [see 15.22[1]] does not apply to the following types of agreements [Civ Code § 1624.5(b), (c)]:

- Agreements for the sale of goods [see 15.24].
- Agreements for the sale of securities.
- Agreements establishing personal property as collateral.
- Qualified financial contracts [see 15.08[2]].

15.23 Some Personal Property Leases Must Be in Writing.

15.23[1] Ordinary Personal Property Lease in Amount Greater Than $1,000 Must Be in Writing. If a personal property lease agreement other than a consumer lease is for payments that total $1,000 or more, excluding payments for options to renew or buy, the lease is not enforceable by action or defense unless it is in writing [Com Code § 10201(a)(1); see Mitchell v. American Fair Credit Assn. (2002) 99 CA4th 1345, 1357, 122 CR2d 193].

15.23[2] All Consumer Leases of Personal Property Must Be in Writing. A personal property consumer lease is not enforceable by action or defense unless it is in writing [Com Code § 10201(a)(2)]. For these purposes, a "consumer lease" is a lease that a lessor regularly engaged in the business of leasing or selling makes to a lessee who is an individual, and who takes under the lease primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose [Com Code § 10103(a)(5)].

15.23[3] Writing Must Specify Lease Terms. To be sufficient, a writing required for a personal property lease must contain all of the following [Com Code § 10201(a)(2)]:

- The signature of the party against whom enforcement is sought or by that party's authorized agent.
- A showing that a personal property lease has been made between the parties.
- A description of the personal property leased.
- A statement of the lease term.

15.24 Sale of Goods for More Than $500 Requires Written Contract.

A contract for the sale of goods generally is not enforceable through court action or defense in an amount greater than $500 unless evidenced by a writing. The writing must meet the following requirements [Com Code § 2201(1)]:

- Establish that a contract for sale of goods has been made between the parties;
- Be authenticated by the party who is the object of enforcement, or by the party's authorized agent;
and
- Specify the quantity of goods.

15.25 Agreement Between Contractor and Owner or Tenant for Improvement to Structure Must Be in Writing and Contain Specific Information.

15.25[1] Home Improvement Contract Over $500 Must Be in Writing. Every home improvement contract that has an aggregate contract price over $500, and any changes to the contract, must be in writing and must be signed by the parties to the contract prior to the commencement of work covered by the contract or an applicable change order [B&P Code § 7159(d)].

15.25[2] Home Improvement Contract Over $500 Must Make Specific Disclosures. The writing evidencing a home improvement contract of more than $500 in labor, services, and materials must contain all of the following items:

- The name, business address, and license number of the contractor [B&P Code § 7159(d)(1)].
- If applicable, the name and registration number of the home improvement salesperson who solicited or negotiated the contract [B&P Code § 7159(d)(2)].
- The heading "Home Improvement" in at least 10-point boldface type [B&P Code § 7159(d)(3)].
- The following statement in at least 12-point boldface type: "You are entitled to a completely filled in copy of this agreement, signed by both you and the contractor, before any work may be started." [B&P Code § 7159(d)(4)].
- The contract price [B&P Code § 7159(d)(5)].
- Any finance charge, set out separately from the contract amount [B&P Code § 7159(d)(6)].
- A description of the project and a description of the significant materials to be used and equipment to be installed [B&P Code § 7159(d)(7)].
- The details of any downpayment, which may not exceed the lesser of $1,000 or 10 percent of the contract price [B&P Code § 7159(d)(8)].

- A schedule of progress payments, which must specifically describe each phase of work, including the type and amount of work or services scheduled to be supplied in each phase, along with the amount of each proposed progress payment [B&P Code § 7159(d)(9)].
- The approximate start date and a statement that describes what constitutes substantial commencement of work under the contract [B&P Code § 7159(d)(10)].
- The estimated completion date of the work [B&P Code § 7159(d)(11)].
- If applicable, a list of documents incorporated into the contract [B&P Code § 7159(d)(12)].
- The following statement entitled "Note about Extra Work and Change Orders": "Extra Work and Change Orders become part of the contract once the order is prepared in writing and signed by the parties prior to the commencement of any work covered by the new change order. The order must describe the scope of the extra work or change, the cost to be added or subtracted from the contract, and the effect the order will have on the schedule of progress payments." [B&P Code § 7159(d)(13)].

Exception:

A contractor who furnishes a performance and payment bond, lien and completion bond, or a bond equivalent is exempt from certain of these requirements [see B&P Code § 7159.5(a)(8)].

15.26 Contract Between Inventor and Invention Developer Must Be in Writing and Contain Specified Disclosures.

15.26[1] Invention Development Services Contract Must Be in Writing. Every contract for invention development services must be in writing, and a copy of the written contract must be given to the inventor at the time he or she signs the contract [B&P Code § 22372(a)]. If the invention developer plans one or more subsequent contracts with the inventor, a written statement of that intent must be supplied to the customer, and also a copy of the subsequent contract or a written summary of the general terms of every such subsequent contract, including the amount of fees required from the customer [B&P Code § 22372(b)].

15.26[2] Disclosures Required in Every Invention Development Services Contract. Every contract for invention development services is required to contain specific disclosures, including:

- The terms and conditions of payment [B&P Code § 22379(a)].
- The particular services that the invention developer will perform for the inventor [B&P Code § 22379(b)].
- A statement of whether the invention developer will construct one or more prototypes, models, or devices embodying the invention, and whether the developer will sell such items [B&P Code § 22379(c), (d)].
- The name of the person or firm of the invention developer and the invention developer's principal business address and the name and address of its agent authorized to receive service of process [B&P Code § 22379(e), (f)].
- A statement of all fees related to the invention development [B&P Code § 22379(h)].
- If any oral or written representation of estimated invention earnings is made, a statement of that estimate and the data on which it is based [B&P Code § 22379(j)].

■ A statement regarding potential patent rights and consequences of distribution [B&P Code § 22379(p)].

15.27 Agreement to Submit to Arbitration Must Be in Writing.

The California Arbitration Act [CCP § 1280 et seq.] is a comprehensive statutory scheme regulating arbitration by private parties in California. Under this detailed statutory scheme, the legislature has expressed a strong public policy in favor of arbitration as an expeditious and inexpensive means of dispute resolution [Aguilar v. Lerner (2004) 32 C4th 974, 983, 88 P3d 24]. However, for enforcement under the California Arbitration Act, an agreement to submit a potential future dispute to arbitration must be in writing [CCP § 1281; see St. Agnes Med. Ctr. v. PacifiCare of Cal. (2003) 31 C4th 1187, 1194]. The term "written agreement" under the arbitration statutes includes any written agreement that has been extended or renewed, even by an oral or implied agreement [CCP § 1280(f)].

15.28 Agreement to Toll or Waive Statute of Limitations Must Be in Writing.

15.28[1] Promise to Toll Statute of Limitations Must Be in Writing. Any acknowledgment or promise sufficient to take a case out of operation of the statute of limitations or to toll the statute of limitations must be in writing and signed by party to be charged [CCP § 360].

15.28[2] Waiver of Statute of Limitations Must Be in Writing. No waiver bars a defense to any action that the action was not commenced within a statute of limitations period unless the waiver is in writing and signed by the person obligated [CCP § 360.5].

15.29 Representation Regarding Third Person's Credit Must Be in Writing.

When a person makes a representation to another person to obtain credit for a third person, the person making the representation cannot be charged for the representation unless the representation or some memorandum of the representation is in writing, and either handwritten by or signed by the person to be charged [CCP § 1974]. This writing requirement applies only to representations in which the primary purpose is to procure credit for the third person [Seneca Communications, Inc. v. International Bank of Cal. (1980) 103 CA3d 541, 551, 163 CR 176].

15.30 Contract to Make Will or Not to Revoke Will or Other Instrument Must Comply With Formalities.

If made after December 31, 2000, a contract to make a will other instrument, or not to revoke a will or other instrument, or to die intestate, can be proved only by one of the following methods [Prob Code § 21700(a)]:

- Written terms of a will or other instrument stating the material provisions of the contract.
- A written reference in a will or other instrument to such a contract, and extrinsic evidence proving the terms of the contract.
- A writing signed by the decedent evidencing the contract.
- Clear and convincing evidence of an agreement between the decedent and the claimant, or a promise by the decedent to the claimant that is enforceable in equity.
- Clear and convincing evidence of an agreement between the decedent and another person for the benefit of the claimant, or a promise by the decedent to another person for the benefit of the claimant that is enforceable in equity.

If made before January 1, 2001, a contract to make a will or other instrument generally cannot be established by mere evidence of an agreement, but rather may be shown only by a writing signed by the decedent, an express reference to the contract in the will along with extrinsic evidence showing the terms of the contract, or will provisions stating the material provisions of the contract [see former Prob Code § 150(a)].

15.31 Translation Requirements Apply to Contracts Negotiated in Languages Other Than English.

15.31[1] Translation of Contract Must Be Provided. If a person engaged in a trade or business uses a language other than English as the primary language for certain contract negotiations with a consumer, the consumer must be provided a translation of the contract in that other language before the consumer executes the contract. The translation must include a translation of every term and condition in the contract. For contracts entered into before July 1, 2004, this requirement applied only to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish. On and after July 1, 2004, it is applicable to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese, or Korean [CC § 1632(b)].

15.31[2] Contracts Subject to Translation Requirement. The foreign language translation requirement applies to the following types of contracts [CC § 1632(b)]:

- A contract or agreement that is subject to the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act, the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicles Sales and Finance Act, or the Vehicle Leasing Act.
- A loan or extension of credit for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, when the loan or extension of credit is subject to the Industrial Loan Law or the California Finance Lenders Law.
- Any other loan or extension of credit secured otherwise than by real property, or unsecured, for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.
- A lease, sublease, rental contract or agreement, or other tenancy contract or agreement, for a period longer than one month, covering a dwelling, an apartment, a mobilehome, or any other dwelling unit normally occupied as a residence.
- A reverse mortgage.
- A contract or agreement containing a statement of fees or charges, entered into for the purpose of obtaining legal services, when the person with whom the consumer negotiates the contract or agreement is a California-licensed attorney.

- A foreclosure consulting contract subject to CC §§ 2945-2945.11 (as of July 1, 2009).

Certain types of contracts, and certain types of negotiations, are exempted from the translation requirement [see CC § 1632(g), (h)]. Certain exempted parts of the contract are not required to be translated [see CC § 1632(i)].

15.31[3] Notice of Right to Translation Must Be Posted. On entering into a contract that is subject to the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act, the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicles Sales and Finance Act, or the Vehicle Leasing Act, or that is for a loan or extension of credit secured otherwise than by real property, or unsecured, for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, a notice in the other language must be conspicuously displayed stating that the person with whom the consumer is negotiating must provide a contract, or a translation of the disclosures required by law, in the other language in which the contract or agreement was negotiated [CC § 1632(f)].

15.31[4] Consumer May Rescind Contract for Noncompliance. In the event of noncompliance with the requirements of CC § 1632, the consumer may rescind the contract. When a contract for a consumer credit sale or consumer lease that has been sold and assigned to a financial institution is rescinded, the consumer must make restitution to, and have restitution made by, the person with whom he or she made the contract, and must give notice of rescission to the assignee. Notwithstanding that the contract was assigned without recourse, the assignment must be deemed rescinded, and the assignor must promptly repurchase the contract from the assignee [CC § 1632(k)].

Chapter 15 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities
 IV. DETERMINING WHETHER OTHER STATUTES REQUIRE WRITTEN CONTRACT, PARTICULAR
 CONTRACT PROVISIONS, OR OTHER FORMALITIES

*1-15 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 15.3215.32 Transactions Conducted by Electronic Means Are Subject to Special Rules.

The Uniform Electronic Transactions Act ("UETA") [see CC § 1633.1 et seq.] generally validates electronic contracts and electronic signatures in transactions when each party has agreed to conduct the transaction by electronic means. Whether the parties have agreed to conduct a transaction by electronic means is determined from the context and surrounding circumstances, including the parties' conduct [CC § 1633(a)].

Under the UETA, a contract may be formed by the interaction of the parties' computer programs, even if no individual was aware of or reviewed the electronic agents' actions or the resulting terms and agreements, or by the interaction of a computer program and an individual [CC § 1633.14(a)(1), (2)]. A contract may not be denied legal effect or enforceability just because an electronic record was used in its formation [CC § 1633.7(b); see CC § 1633.2(g) ("electronic record" defined)].

If a law such as the statute of frauds requires that a contract be in writing, an electronic record satisfies the law [CC § 1633.7(c)]. If a signature is legally required, an electronic signature satisfies that requirement [CC § 1633.7(d)]. An electronic signature is a binding signature as long as the signature can be traced to an individual who took some affirmative action to agree to the contract [CC §§ 1633.7(d), 1633.9(a)], such as entering a password or clicking on an "I Agree" button.

Strategic Point:

The terms of an electronic contract are determined by the substantive law applicable to it [CC § 1633.14(b)]. Thus, internet contracts are subject to general contract law, including that pertaining to illegality, unconscionability, and construction of contract terms. Accordingly, internet contracts are subject to the same claims and defenses regarding formalities as other contracts, subject to proof.

Cross Reference:

Discussion of contracts under UETA, see California Legal Forms, § 57.34[4] (Matthew Bender).

Judge:

Department:

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's Complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege any affirmative defenses, e.g.,]

[EITHER, if alleging that contract not to be performed in one year is unenforceable under statute of frauds]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Statute of Frauds)

1. The contract alleged in the complaint is invalid under Civil Code Section 1624(a)(1) because the contract by its terms it not to be performed within a year from its making and neither the contract nor any note or memorandum thereof is in writing and subscribed to by Defendant or Defendant's agent.

[AND/OR, if alleging that no contract for sale of real property exists because it does not comply with statute of frauds]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Statute of Frauds)

2. The contract alleged in the complaint is invalid under Civil Code Section 1624(a)(3) because the contract is for the _____ [sale of real property or sale of an interest in real property or leasing of real property for longer than one year] and neither the contract nor any note or memorandum thereof is in writing and subscribed by Defendant or Defendant's agent.

[AND/OR, if alleging that no broker's commission contract exists because it does not comply with statute of frauds]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Statute of Frauds)

3. The contract alleged in the complaint is invalid under Civil Code Section 1624(a)(4) because the contract is one authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or other person to _____ [purchase or sell real estate or lease real estate for a longer period than one year or procure a purchaser or seller of real estate or procure a lessee or lessor of real estate for a lease that is for a longer period than one year] for a commission and neither the contract nor any note or memorandum thereof is in writing and subscribed by Defendant or Defendant's agent.

[AND/OR, if alleging that no contract for sale of goods over $500 exists because it does not comply with the Commercial Code statute of frauds]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Commercial Code Statute of Frauds)

4. The contract alleged in the complaint is invalid under Commercial Code Section 2201 because it is an oral contract for the sale of goods valued at $500 or more, and no written note or memorandum of the alleged contract signed by Defendant or Defendant's agent exists [add if parties are merchants:; nor did Defendant receive any written confirmation of the alleged contract from Plaintiff].

_____ [Defendant or Plaintiff] has neither accepted nor received any part of these goods, nor given anything in part payment of the alleged contract. [Add if plaintiff is seller: These goods were not specially manufactured for Defendant].

[AND/OR, to allege that the contract failed to comply with other statutory requirements:]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Noncompliance with Statutory Requirements for [type of contract])

5. The contract alleged in the complaint is void and unenforceable under

_____ [cite code section invalidating contract for noncompliance with statutory requirement, e.g., Civil Code Section 1812.59] because it fails to comply with _____ [cite code section imposing requirement that was violated, e.g., Civil Code Section 1812.54(c)], which requires that contracts for _____ [specify type of contract, e.g., dance studio lessons and other services] must _____ [specify requirement, e.g., contain a written statement of the hourly rate for which the student has contracted], in that the contract in question _____ [specify how contract fails to comply, e.g., stated only that lessons would be charged at Plaintiff's current standard rates and did not specify the amount of those rates as required by the statute].

[Add additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

I. STRATEGY

1-16 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 16.01

16.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Objectives and strategy for attacking and defending a contract based on a claim of mistake of law or fact [see 16.02].
- Determining the existence and nature of a mistake in a contract [see 16.03 -16.08].
- Mutual mistake and remedies [see 16.09 -16.12; Forms: 16.22 -16.23].
- Unilateral mistake and remedies [see 16.13 -16.16; Forms: 16.24 -16.25].

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

I. STRATEGY

1-16 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 16.02

16.02 Objective and Strategy.

The issue of mistake in a contract most commonly arises as a defense to a breach of contract action. Even as a defense, it is often accompanied by an affirmative request for relief, in the form of reformation or rescission of the contract. Less often mistake is raised by the plaintiff in a declaratory relief action, again seeking reformation or rescission.

Not every mistake merits relief. The courts generally will not intervene to rectify a party's error in judgment when that error consists of agreeing to unfavorable terms or entering into an agreement knowing that some facts were unknown [see, e.g., Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 CA3d 1, 5, 263 CR 373 ; Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 283, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702].

Although rescission and reformation are potentially available remedies, both are considered drastic measures, and courts will be reluctant to impose them except in a clear case.

Cross References:

Discussion of rescission and reformation, see Ch. 8, Seeking or Opposing Equitable Remedies in Contract Actions.

Detailed discussion/forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 215, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake (Matthew Bender).

Judge's Perspective:

Claims of mistake require that you not only understand (and be prepared to defend against) your opponent's interpretation of the contract, but also that you and your client must have a competing interpretation that will survive discovery and scrutiny by the court. You should be in a position to advance this competing interpretation early in the case, to shape discovery, obtain favorable pre-trial rulings, and position the case for trial. Thus, the same steps that are important in the preparation of any civil case are particularly important here:

- Perform thorough pre-trial investigation of your own client and likely witnesses. This will allow you to avoid taking positions regarding the parties' intentions and factual assumptions that are inconsistent with the evidence. If your client takes a position regarding the parties' intent, and later formal discovery is inconsistent with that position, the damage to your client's credibility will be difficult to cure.

- The preparation of any case should begin with applicable jury instructions. Here the relevant instructions are Affirmative Defense--Bilateral Mistake of Fact, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 331 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) and Affirmative Defense--Unilateral Mistake of Fact, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 330 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender). These instructions form an outline in your preparation of the case.

- Develop your theme early, and, if your mistake claim will be an important part of your case, make sure that every filing with the court reflects your theme.

- Finally, consider redrafting the contract to reflect your client's understanding of the facts more clearly. This will help focus your thinking on the elements of the law of mistake.

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

II. DETERMINING EXISTENCE AND NATURE OF MISTAKE

1-16 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 16.03

16.03 CHECKLIST: Determining Existence and Nature of Mistake.

☐ Determine whether mistake is of law or of fact.

☐ Is claimed mistake one of law?

☐ A mistake of law is only a "mistake" giving rise to relief when:

☐ All parties were under substantially the same mistaken belief about the law; or

☐ One party was under mistaken belief of which other parties are aware, and which they did not correct.

☐ Simple failure to understand terms of contract constitutes mistake of law.

☐ Mistake of foreign law, on the other hand, is mistake of fact.

Authority:

CC §§ 1577, 1578, 1579; Hedging Concepts, Inc. v. First Alliance Mortgage Co. (1996) 41 CA4th 1410, 1421, 49 CR2d 191

Discussion:

See 16.07

☐ Is claimed mistake a mistake of fact?

☐ Mistake of fact is either ignorance of past or existing fact, or incorrect belief as to past or existing fact.

- ☐ Incorrect belief as to facts that may occur in future is not mistake of fact.

Authority:

CC § 1577; Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 CA3d 1, 5, 263 CR 373

Discussion:

See 16.06[1][a]

- ☐ Was claimed mistake of fact material part of inducement for contract?

- ☐ Mistakes about matters incidental to contract do not merit relief.

Authority:

Walton v. Bank of Cal., Nat'l Ass'n (1963) 218 CA2d 527, 545-546, 32 CR 856

Discussion:

See 16.06[1][b]

- ☐ Was mistake of fact caused by neglect of legal duty on part of claimant?

- ☐ Failure to review contract is neglect of legal duty and bars relief.

- ☐ Ordinary negligence is not neglect of legal duty and does not bar relief.

- ☐ Even if claimant is under statutory obligation to perform a certain act, and claimant's failure to perform that act led to his or her mistake, failure to fulfill that obligation may not constitute "neglect of legal duty."

Authority:

CC § 1577; Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 CA2d 749, 765, 75 CR 533 ; White v. Berrenda Mesa Water Dist. of Kern County (1970) 7 CA3d 894, 901, 87 CR 338 ; Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702

Discussion:

See 16.06[2]

- ☐ Is claim of mistake of fact being made about matters that were known to be uncertain at time parties entered into agreement?

- ☐ If parties enter into contract knowing that their knowledge is incomplete, they bear risk of mistake.

- ☐ If one party bears risk of mistake under terms of agreement, that party may not obtain relief from that mistake.

Authority:

In re Marriage of Hahn (1990) 224 CA3d 1236, 1241, 273 CR 516 ; Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001)

26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 154(a)

Discussion:

See 16.06[3]

☐ Is claimed mistake mutual?

☐ If each party knows what it wants, but because of a misunderstanding they do not want or agree to the same thing, then there is "mutual mistake" that may prevent formation of contract for lack of consent.

☐ Have parties agreed on material terms, but erred in reducing those terms to writing?

Authority:

Balistreri v. Nevada Livestock Production Credit Assn. (1989) 214 CA3d 635, 641-642, 262 CR 862 ; Hess v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 27 C4th 516, 524, 117 CR2d 220, 41 P3d 46

Discussion:

See 16.08[1]

☐ Is claimed mistake unilateral?

☐ Unilateral mistake is one made by only one party to contract.

☐ Unilateral mistake may be remedied if other parties are aware of mistake at time of contracting, but fail to rectify it.

Authority:

CC § 3399

Discussion:

See 16.08[2]

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

II. DETERMINING EXISTENCE AND NATURE OF MISTAKE

1-16 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 16.04

16.04 Elements of Mistake.

16.04[1] Elements of Mistake of Fact. To merit relief, a mistake of fact:

- Must consist of one of the following [CC § 1577]:

- ☐ An unconscious ignorance or forgetfulness of a fact past or present, material to the contract [see 16.06[1]]; or

- ☐ A belief in the present existence of a thing material to the contract, which does not exist, or the past existence of a thing, which has not existed [see 16.06[1]].

- May not be caused by the neglect of the duty on the part of the person making the mistake [see 16.06[2]].

16.04[2] Elements of Mistake of Law. A mistake of law gives rise to relief only when it arises from [CC § 1578]:

- A misapprehension of the law by all parties, all supposing that they knew and understood it, and all making substantially the same mistake as to the law; or
- A misapprehension of the law by one party, of which the others are aware at the time of contracting, but which they do not rectify [see 16.07[1]].

Basic Statute of Limitations:

Four years for reformation [CCP § 337(1)].

Four years for rescission; time runs from the date on which the facts which entitle the aggrieved party to rescind occurred [CCP § 337(3)].

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake
II. DETERMINING EXISTENCE AND NATURE OF MISTAKE

16.05 Options and Strategies.

16.05[1] Attacking the Contract. The practitioner seeking to avoid a contract entirely, or modify it to terms more suitable to the client, must first determine what kind of mistake the client has made. The courts will be more amenable to modify or avoid a contract when the parties have all labored under a common misperception, whether of law or fact. The party claiming unilateral mistake has more obstacles to overcome in order to obtain relief [see Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 279-282, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702].

If the parties actually reached agreement on all material matters, but the contract as written does not accurately reflect the terms, then reformation is appropriate.

If a party wants to eliminate the contract, then rescission may be available.

Warning:

The practitioner must take care not to prove too much--if the client is happy with most of the deal, and wants to change only a part of it that is mistaken, there is a risk that proving a "mutual mistake" about a material matter could result in a ruling that no contract was ever formed.

16.05[2] Defending the Contract. Defending the contract begins with a careful evaluation of the attack against it.

Strategic Point--Defendant:

Since a claim of mutual mistake is more likely to justify relief than one of unilateral mistake, a good first step for the practitioner facing such a claim is to establish that any such mistake was not mutual. If possible, the client should obtain evidence and testimony establishing that the contract correctly expresses his or her own intentions, and that he or she made no mistake in its execution.

Transforming a claim of mutual mistake into one of unilateral mistake places additional burdens on the party attacking the contract, and thus makes the defense of the contract easier.

Even if the mistake was mutual, the contract is not necessarily unsalvageable. Only if the mutual mistake was about a "material matter" is the contract subject to reformation or rescission. If the matter about which parties were mistaken was not a deciding factor in reaching the agreement, then the contract stands despite the mistake [Walton v. Bank of Cal., Nat'l Ass'n (1963) 218 CA2d 527, 546, 32 CR 856].

Judge's Perspective:

Remember that mistake is an affirmative defense to breach as well as a basis for plaintiff to seek rescission [see 16.19]. Any preliminary investigation into the defense of the breach of contract case should explore whether the parties were mistaken about an important factual assumption. It may be that there is an interpretation under which your client did not breach the contract, but the interpretation is not consistent with the parties' factual assumptions. The preliminary investigation concerning the defense of any contract claim should focus on these assumptions so that the affirmative defense can be timely asserted.

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake
II. DETERMINING EXISTENCE AND NATURE OF MISTAKE

1-16 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 16.06

16.06 Mistake of Fact.

16.06[1] Mistake of Fact Must Be About Past or Present Material Facts to Justify Relief.

16.06[1][a] Must Be About Past or Present Facts. A mistake of fact is defined as [CC § 1577]:

- An unconscious ignorance or forgetfulness of a fact, past or present, material to the contract; or
- Belief in the present existence of a thing material to the contract, which does not exist, or in the past existence of such a thing, which has not existed.

A mistaken belief about events that may happen in the future is not a mistake giving rise to relief; rather it is an error in judgment that the court will not rectify [see Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 CA3d 1, 5, 263 CR 373 (mistake as to valuation; court found that claimed "mistake" involved events subsequent to the agreement and denied relief)].

Distinguish--Failure of Underlying Mutual Assumption:

If, from the nature of the contract, it is evident that the parties contracted on the basis of the continued existence of a person or thing, condition, or state of things, the subsequent perishing of the person or thing, or cessation of existence of the condition, will excuse the performance, a condition to that effect being implied, in spite of the fact that the promise may have been unqualified [Habitat Trust for Wildlife, Inc. v. City of Rancho Cucamonga (2009) 175 CA4th 1306, 1343, 96 CR3d 813] .

Example--Failure of Underlying Mutual Assumption:

A developer's agreement to transfer land to an organization to satisfy a mitigation condition required by an environmental impact report was made on the mistaken assumption that the organization would be approved as qualified entity, and the agreement could be rescinded due to mutual mistake [Habitat Trust for Wildlife, Inc. v. City of Rancho Cucamonga (2009) 175 CA4th 1306, 1343, 96 CR3d 813] .

16.06[1][b] Must Be Material. Mistakes that are merely incidental to the agreement and do not affect the nature of the bargain or the adequacy of consideration will not justify relief. To obtain relief, the party must show that the mistake was a deciding factor in reaching the agreement [Walton v. Bank of Cal., Nat'l Ass'n (1963) 218 CA2d 527, 546, 32 CR 856].

16.06[2] Must Not Have Been Caused by Neglect of Legal Duty. A party claiming mistake must not have caused that mistake by his or her own neglect of a legal duty [CC § 1577]. Failure to make reasonable inquiry as to the contract terms may be considered "neglect of a legal duty" and bar relief [Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 CA2d 749, 765, 75 CR 533]. However, a party's ordinary negligence generally is not considered "neglect of a legal duty" [White v. Berrenda Mesa Water Dist. of Kern County (1970) 7 CA3d 894, 901, 87 CR 338]. Even a party's failure to comply with a statutory obligation may not constitute a neglect of a legal duty in this context [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702].

16.06[3] Allocation of Risk of Mistake.

16.06[3][a] Party Seeking Relief Must Not Have Borne Risk of Mistake. When one party bears the risk of a mistake, that party may not seek to avoid or reform the contract based on a mistake [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 154(a)].

16.06[3][b] Unknown Facts Are Not Mistakes. Occasionally the parties to an agreement are aware that there are facts unknown to them. Under those circumstances, a party who enters into an agreement, knowing that his or her knowledge is limited, bears the risk of any mistake [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; In re Marriage of Hahn (1990) 224 CA3d 1236, 1241, 273 CR 516].

Example:

A party who signs an agreement without reading it cannot, absent fraud or knowledge of the alleged mistake by the other contracting party, later rescind the agreement on the basis that he or she was mistaken about its terms [Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 CA4th 1565, 1588-1589, 36 CR3d 901] .

16.06[3][c] One Party May Bear Risk by Agreement. The parties may agree between themselves that one of the contracting parties will bear the risk of unknown facts. Such agreements are valid, and the party who bears the risk by agreement cannot seek rescission or reformation based on a claim of mistake [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 154(a)].

16.06[3][d] One Party May Bear Risk Because of Surrounding Circumstances. Even if the parties did not enter into the contract knowing of the risk of doubtful facts, and did not allocate the risk of mistake by agreement, the courts still may place the risk of mistake on one party when "it is reasonable in the circumstances to do so" [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; 6 Angels, Inc. v. Stuart-Wright Mortgage, Inc. (2001) 85 CA4th 1279, 1287, 102 CR2d 711].

Examples:

- A person who died four months after purchasing an annuity was not entitled to rescission on the ground that she was unaware she was terminally ill. The court held that as a matter of law, an annuity purchaser bears the risk of mistake regarding health and life expectancy because such risks are an inherent part of life annuity contracts, which reflect, at their essence, a longevity wager measured by average life expectancy [Grenall v. United of Omaha Life Ins. Co. (2008) 165 CA4th 188, 193-194, 80 CR3d 609] .
- A trust deed beneficiary sued to set aside the deed at a foreclosure sale, claiming that it had mistakenly set the opening bid too low. The court refused to set aside the deed, citing the public policy in favor of finality at foreclosure sales as part of the reason to allocate the risk of such errors to the beneficiary [6 Angels, Inc. v. Stuart-Wright Mortgage, Inc. (2001) 85 CA4th 1279, 1287, 102 CR2d 711] .

Judge's Perspective:

As the 6 Angels case [6 Angels, Inc. v. Stuart-Wright Mortgage, Inc. (2001) 85 CA4th 1279, 1287, 102 CR2d 711] makes clear, it is important to understand the culture and law of the client's business before alleging mistake, in order to know whether one party bore the risk of mistake. In 6 Angels, the court upheld the foreclosure sale of a property for $10,001 that should have been listed for $100,000. The mortgage lender who listed the property was held to be responsible for its own clerical mistake, even though the net effect was a 90 percent reduction in the sales price. In contrast, in Donovan [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702], the court rescinded a contract for the sale of an automobile which was advertised for approximately $25,000 instead of the $37,000 it was worth. The court held that the dealer made a mistake in good faith and that enforcement would be unconscionable. The court did not allocate the risk of mistake to the dealer. One reason for the difference in the outcomes of these two cases is the presumption in favor of the regularity of a foreclosure sale, and settled precedent which prevents the setting aside of such a sale on grounds that the price was inadequate. The juxtaposition of these cases demonstrates the importance of knowing the business culture and the law that apply to your client's business, since these may have a substantial effect on the court's allocation of the risk of mistake. The mistake cannot be caused by "excessive carelessness."

16.07 Mistake of Law.

16.07[1] Relief Is Available Only When Both Parties Are Under Same Mistaken Belief or Other Parties Are Aware of Failure to Correct. A mistake of law is a "mistake" giving rise to relief only when it arises from [CC § 1578]:

- A misapprehension of the law by all parties, all supposing that they knew and understood it, and all making substantially the same mistake as to the law; or
- A misapprehension of the law by one party, of which the others are aware at the time of contracting, but which they do not rectify.

When the parties to a contract each place a different interpretation on its language, that will not constitute a mutual mistake--even if each different interpretation is mistaken. Only when both parties are under the same mistaken belief does the mistake become mutual [CC § 1578; see Hedging Concepts, Inc. v. First Alliance Mortgage Co. (1996) 41 CA4th 1410, 1421, 49 CR2d 191].

16.07[2] Misinterpretation of Contract Language Is Mistake of Law. Misinterpretation of contract language is a mistake of law [Hedging Concepts, Inc. v. First Alliance Mortgage Co. (1996) 41 CA4th 1410, 1421, 49 CR2d 191].

16.07[3] Mistake of Foreign Law Is Mistake of Fact. A mistake of foreign law is a mistake of fact [CC § 1579].

II. DETERMINING EXISTENCE AND NATURE OF MISTAKE

16.08 Mistake May Be Either Mutual or Unilateral.

16.08[1] Mutual Mistake. A "mutual mistake" may occur when both parties are under a mistaken belief as to the operative facts. If each party knows what it wants, but because of a misunderstanding the parties do not want or agree to the same thing, there is a "mutual mistake" that may prevent formation of a contract for lack of consent [Balistreri v. Nevada Livestock Production Credit Assn. (1989) 214 CA3d 635, 641-642, 262 CR 862].

A "mutual mistake" also may occur when the parties have agreed on the material terms, but have erred in reducing those terms to writing [Hess v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 27 C4th 516, 524, 117 CR2d 220, 41 P3d 46].

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

III. ATTACKING OR DEFENDING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT--MUTUAL MISTAKE

16.10 Options and Strategies.

16.10[1] Attacking the Contract. The party claiming a mutual mistake first must determine whether a contract exists at all. If the claimed mistake prevented the parties from reaching a "meeting of the minds," then no contract was ever formed [see Balistreri v. Nevada Livestock Production Credit Assn. (1989) 214 CA3d 635, 641-642, 262 CR 862]

Strategic Point:

If the parties do have an agreement, consider whether reformation or rescission of the contract is appropriate. The court may discard the agreement, and the client may have liked many of the terms in the now defunct contract. Careful consideration should be given before attempting to reform or rescind a contract.

If your client wishes to eliminate the contract completely, then rescission should be attempted. Rescission means the court will rule the contract to be null and void [Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 C4th 1, 6 n1, 96 CR2d 179, 999 P2d 71 ; see CC § 1688]. The parties can then start from the beginning with a new contract.

If there are terms in the agreement to which a party did not agree, then reformation may be possible. Reformation allows the court to "rewrite" an agreement to conform to the intent of the parties. This remedy also is available to affected third parties.

 Cross References:

Discussion of rescission, see 16.11.

Discussion of reformation, see 16.12.

Discussion of the parol evidence rule, see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract.

16.10[2] Defending the Contract. The attorney defending against a claim of mutual mistake ideally should have a ready answer--that the client made no such mistake and that any alleged mistake was unilateral at most. A claim of unilateral mistake must clear additional hurdles to prevail; the attorney defending the contract therefore is better off defending against a claim of unilateral mistake, rather than mutual mistake.

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of unilateral mistake, see 16.13 -16.16.

Alternatively, if the mistake truly was mutual, the contract still may be saved if the mistake either is not material, or not harmful to the party attacking the contract. Only a party actually harmed by a material mistake may seek to avoid or reform the contract.

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

III. ATTACKING OR DEFENDING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT--MUTUAL MISTAKE

16.11 Rescinding the Contract.

16.11[1] Mutual Mistake Regarding Material Matters May Prevent Formation of Contract. Consent is not mutual unless the parties all agree on the same thing in the same sense [CC § 1580]. When the parties are under a mistaken understanding as to the subject matter of their agreement, and they are equally at fault (or not at fault) with respect to that mistake, they have not agreed on the same thing in the same sense, and no contract has been formed [Balistreri v. Nevada Livestock Production Credit Assn. (1989) 214 CA3d 635, 641-642, 262 CR 862].

The mistake must materially affect an essential element of the contract, not merely a collateral matter [Bellwood Disc. Corp. v. Empire Steel Bldgs. Co. (1959) 175 CA2d 432, 435, 346 P2d 467]. Generally, material mistakes concern one or more of the following [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 130, 54 CR 533]:

- The nature of the transaction.
- The identity of the parties.
- The identity of thing to which the contract relates.
- The occurrence of collateral events.

Example:

Borrower, who owned property in both Sebastopol and Petaluma, sought a loan from Bank. Bank's loan agent prepared a deed of trust on Borrower's Petaluma home, but mistakenly described the property in the cover letter sent to Borrower as the "Sebastopol residence." Borrower signed the deed of trust believing that it referred to the Sebastopol property. In an action to foreclose on the deed of trust, Borrower sought to cancel the deed based on mutual mistake. Bank claimed that there was no mutual mistake, since Bank had intended all along to encumber the Petaluma property. The court held that mutual mistake had prevented any contract from being formed [Balistreri v. Nevada Livestock Production Credit Assn. (1989) 214 CA3d 635, 641-642, 262 CR 862].

Jury Instructions:

Contract Formation--Essential Factual Elements, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury

Instructions, CACI No. 302 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Affirmative Defense--Bilateral Mistake, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 331 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

16.11[2] Mutual Mistake May Support Rescission of Contract. Even if the mutual mistake does not prevent formation of the contract, it may be of such a serious character that it justifies rescission of the agreement [CC § 1689].

If consent to the agreement would not have been obtained but for the mutual mistake, rescission is appropriate [Harris v. Rudin, Richman & Appel (2002) 95 CA4th 1332, 1339, 116 CR2d 552].

Example:

Plaintiff sued his former attorneys for malpractice, claiming that their probate work had exposed him to substantial personal tax liability. The parties settled the malpractice claim. Shortly thereafter, the attorney defendants learned that a change in probate law, enacted two days before the settlement agreement and retroactive to the period of their representation of the plaintiff, would exonerate the plaintiff's tax liability and eliminate his damage claim. The attorney defendants were entitled to rescind the settlement agreement based on this mutual mistake of law [Harris v. Rudin, Richman & Appel (2002) 95 CA4th 1332, 1339, 116 CR2d 552].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of rescission for unilateral mistake, see 16.15.

16.11[3] Aggrieved Party Must Be Worse Off Because of Mistake. When a contract has actually been formed, it can be rescinded on the basis of mistake only if the mistake has harmed one of the parties. "A contract is voidable for mistake only if enforcement would be materially harmful or more onerous to the party seeking avoidance than it would have been had the law or the facts been as believed" [Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 CA3d 879, 886, 124 CR 577].

16.11[4] Rescission Is Unavailable If Third Party's Rights Are Adversely Affected. For rescission to be granted, it must not cause harm to the interests of innocent third parties, such as bona fide purchasers for value [Conservatorship of O'Connor (1996) 48 CA4th 1076, 1098-1099, 56 CR2d 386].

 Cross Reference:

Ch. 8, Seeking or Opposing Equitable Remedies in Contract Actions.

16.11[5] Stipulation Regarding Errors of Description May Be Ineffective to Prevent Rescission. Many contracts include a stipulation such as "The parties agree that errors of description contained in this document do not affect the terms of the agreement, and shall not operate to avoid the contract," or language to that effect. Similarly, the parties may stipulate in advance that errors of description may affect one party's compensation, but will not otherwise affect the terms of the agreement. Such stipulations may not be effective to prevent rescission of the contract based on a claim of mutual mistake, at least when the claimed mistake goes to an essential matter "and is not capable of exact and entire compensation" [CC § 1690].

16.11[6] Statute of Limitations Is Four Years From Discovery of Facts. The statute of limitations based on a rescission of a written contract is four years. When the ground for rescission is mistake, the time does not begin to run until the aggrieved party discovers the facts constituting the mistake [CCP § 337(3)].

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

III. ATTACKING OR DEFENDING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT--MUTUAL MISTAKE

16.12 Reforming the Contract.

16.12[1] Agreement May Be Reformed to Reflect Parties' Intentions. If the parties have reached agreement on all material matters, but because of an error, the writing does not accurately express the parties' intentions, the agreement may be reformed [CC § 3399].

Example:

A passenger in a Ford pickup truck was injured in a rollover collision. He settled his claim against the other driver in the accident, and signed a release. The form release, provided by counsel for the other driver, included "boilerplate" language releasing all potentially responsible parties from liability. Passenger then sued Ford for breach of warranty and products liability arising from the rollover. Ford attempted to interpose the earlier release in its own defense, arguing that the passenger had agreed to release any potentially responsible party in his settlement with the other driver. The passenger brought a separate action for reformation of the release agreement. In both the action for reformation, and the main action against Ford, undisputed evidence established the lack of any intent to include Ford in the general release. Ford was not entitled to rely on the release and reformation was granted [Hess v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 27 C4th 516, 525-526, 117 CR2d 220, 41 P3d 46].

Cross Reference:

See Ch. 8, Seeking or Opposing Equitable Remedies in Contract Actions.

16.12[2] Reformation May Supply Words As Well As Remove Them. If necessary to carry out the intention of a contract, words may be transposed, rejected, or supplied, to make its meaning more clear [Heidlebaugh v. Miller (1954) 126 CA2d 35, 38, 271 P2d 557 (words "with or with notice" appeared in a written agreement; on party's application, the court inserted the word "out" after the second "with" in order to make the clause conform both to the parties' intentions and to the clear intent of the agreement)].

16.12[3] Court May Not Create New Agreement. The courts have broad equity powers to reform agreements to reflect the parties' intentions. However, they cannot make a new agreement. Reformation is available only when the parties actually reached agreement on all material terms, and the court is simply expressing the parties' actual agreement. The court is not empowered to create a new contract not agreed to by the parties themselves [Lemoge Elec. v. County of San Mateo (1956) 46 C2d 659, 663-664, 297 P2d 638].

16.12[4] Party Who Drafted Agreement Nevertheless May Seek Reformation. Reformation in cases of mutual mistake is available even if the party seeking reformation is also the party who drafted the agreement. "[I]t makes no difference who wrote the instruments to be reformed so long as all parties were in common mistake as to what was contained therein" [Treadaway v. Camellia Convalescent Hosps., Inc. (1974) 43 CA3d 189, 202, 118 CR 341 (quoting Renshaw v. Happy Valley Water Co. (1952) 114 CA2d 521, 524-525, 250 P2d 612)].

16.12[5] Right to Reformation Is Not Restricted to Original Parties. CC § 3399 permits contracts to be reformed "on the application of a party aggrieved" by the mistake. The courts have consistently held that a "party aggrieved" is not limited to the original parties, but also "includes one who has suffered prejudice or pecuniary loss" because of the mistake [Watson v. Collins (1962) 204 CA2d 27, 32, 21 CR 832].

16.12[6] Reformation Is Not Available If Third Parties' Rights Will Be Adversely Affected. If the interests of third parties would be harmed by reformation of the contract, then reformation is unavailable [CC § 3399]. Reformation is available "only so far as it can be done without prejudice to rights acquired by third persons, in good faith and for value" [CC § 3399].

Cross References:

Discussion of rescission, see 16.11.

Discussion of other remedies, see Ch. 8, Seeking or Opposing Equitable Remedies in Contract Actions.

16.12[7] Scrivener's Errors in Written Contract May Be Disregarded. If the parties reach agreement on all material matters and all parties correctly understand the contract, but the writing simply contains a mistake, the court may simply disregard or rewrite the erroneous portion of the writing and give effect to the parties' intention [CC § 1640; see Stoneridge Parkway Partners, LLC v. MW Housing Partners III, L.P. (2007) 153 CA4th 1373, 1383, 64 CR3d 61 (trial court correctly disregarded provisions in loan agreement that did not comport with either party's intention or understanding of the transaction)].

16.12[8] Parties' Intentions Must Be Shown. Because the purpose of reformation is to express the parties' true intentions, those intentions must be proved to the satisfaction of the court, with the party claiming mistake bearing the burden of proof. Those intentions may be shown through any of the following; the parole evidence rule does not prevent a party from using such evidence to establish mistake [Hess v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 27 C4th 516, 525-526, 117 CR2d 220, 41 P3d 46] :

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

IV. ATTACKING OR DEFENDING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT--UNILATERAL MISTAKE

16.14 Options and Strategies for Obtaining Relief Based on Unilateral Mistake.

16.14[1] Attacking the Contract. The party claiming a unilateral mistake faces an uphill battle. Most such mistakes will not justify relief. Only under limited circumstances will the courts intervene to protect a party from the consequences of his or her own mistake [see Harris v. Rudin, Richman & Appel (2002) 95 CA4th 1332, 1339, 116 CR2d 552].

Strategic Point:

If the parties have an agreement, you should consider whether reformation or rescission of the contract is appropriate. The court may discard the agreement, and your client may have liked many of the terms in the now-defunct contract. Careful consideration should be given before attempting to reform or rescind a contract.

If the client wishes to eliminate the contract completely, then rescission should be attempted. Rescission means the court will rule the contract to be null and void [Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 C4th 1, 6 n1, 96 CR2d 179, 999 P2d 71 ; see CC § 1688]. The parties can then start from the beginning with a new contract.

If there are terms in the agreement to which a party did not agree, then reformation may be possible. Reformation allows the court to "rewrite" an agreement to conform to the intent of the parties [CC § 3399]. This remedy is also available to affected third parties [Shupe v. Nelson (1967) 254 CA2d 693, 698, 62 CR 352].

16.14[2] Defending the Contract.

16.14[2][a] Mistake of Law. If the party defending the contract did not induce the mistake, or know of it, and it is a mistake of law, the court will not provide a remedy [see CC § 3399].

16.14[2][b] Mistake of Fact. When there is a mistake of fact, there are several successive lines of defense that may preserve the contract. The contract will not be rescinded if [see Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 284-285, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702]:

- The alleged mistake is insufficiently "material;"
- It does not affect "a basic assumption" upon which the contract was made; or
- Enforcement would not be "unconscionable."

Strategic Point:

However, in many cases in which one party is willing to risk the expense and effort of litigation, the mistake will pass these thresholds. At that point, the party defending the contract should attempt to establish that the aggrieved party "bore the risk" of the mistake. That risk need not have been explicitly allocated, or even anticipated by the parties, in reaching the agreement (although of course such an allocation would be helpful). Under certain circumstances, the court will place the risk of mistake on one party simply because it is reasonable to do so. Public policy may support such placement of risk. Accordingly, the attorney should seek to establish that public policy, or a statutory scheme, or simple fairness requires that the aggrieved party bear the risk of his or her own mistake.

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

IV. ATTACKING OR DEFENDING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT--UNILATERAL MISTAKE

16.15 Rescinding the Contract.

16.15[1] Unilateral Mistake of Law. A unilateral mistake of law is a "mistake" which would allow the court to rescind the contract, only if one party knows of the other party's mistake and does nothing to correct it [CC § 1578].

16.15[2] Unilateral Mistake of Fact.

16.15[2][a] Rescission Is Available When Mistake of Fact Is Known to Other Party. When the other party to the contract either induces the mistake, or knows of it and keeps silent, the contract may be rescinded [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 280, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702].

Jury Instructions:

Affirmative Defense--Unilateral Mistake of Fact, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 330 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

16.15[2][b] Rescission May Be Available When Enforcement of Agreement Would Be Unconscionable.

Although CC § 1689 appears to support rescission under either mutual or unilateral mistake, the courts have severely restricted its application when the claimed mistake is unilateral [Harris v. Rudin, Richman & Appel (2002) 95 CA4th 1332, 1339, 116 CR2d 552]. If the mistake is a unilateral mistake of fact, and the other party neither induced the mistake nor knew of it, the courts are reluctant to intervene except under extraordinary circumstances. To avoid a contract on the ground of unilateral mistake not induced by, known to or suspected by the other party, the aggrieved party must show all of the following [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 280, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702]:

- He or she made a mistake regarding a basic assumption upon which the defendant made the contract.
- The mistake has a material effect upon the agreed exchange of performances that is adverse to the party aggrieved.
- He or she does not bear the risk of the mistake.
- The effect of the mistake is such that enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable.

Example:

An automobile dealer mistakenly advertised a vehicle for sale at a price significantly less than its own cost. A buyer accepted the advertised offer, and sued to enforce the resulting contract. The Supreme Court agreed with the automobile dealer that the contract should be rescinded as a result of the mistake [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 280, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702].

Judge's Perspective:

Proving unconscionability requires that the terms of the contract "shock the conscience." Unconscionability is a question of law [Jones v. Wells Fargo Bank (2003) 112 CA4th 1527, 1539]. However, many facts are considered in making the ruling [Flores v. Transamerica HomeFirst, Inc. (2001) 93 CA4th 846, 851, 113 CR2d 376]. Trial and appellate courts have reached different conclusions regarding unconscionability depending, in part, on the subject matter of the contract and, in part, on the contract culture of the particular judicial officer. Anyone raising this claim should thoroughly research the area of law of unconscionability and obtain as much information as possible about the prior rulings of the evaluating judge on this issue.

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of unconscionability, see Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

16.15[3] Aggrieved Party Must Be Worse Off Because of Mistake. When a contract has actually been formed, it can be rescinded on the basis of mistake only if the mistake has harmed one of the parties. "A contract is voidable for mistake only if enforcement would be materially harmful or more onerous to the party seeking avoidance than it would have been had the law or the facts been as believed" [Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 CA3d 879, 886, 124 CR 577].

16.15[4] Rescission Unavailable If a Third Party's Rights Would Be Adversely Affected. Rescission, in order to be granted, must not cause harm to the interests of innocent third parties, such as bona fide purchasers for value [Conservatorship of O'Connor (1996) 48 CA4th 1076, 1098-1099, 56 CR2d 386].

 Cross Reference:

Detailed discussion of rescission, see Ch. 8, Seeking or Opposing Equitable Remedies in Contract Actions.

16.15[5] Stipulation Regarding Errors of Description May Be Ineffective to Prevent Rescission. Many contracts include a stipulation such as "The parties agree that errors of description contained in this document do not affect the terms of the agreement, and shall not operate to avoid the contract," or language to that effect. Similarly, the parties may stipulate in advance that errors of description may affect one party's compensation, but will not otherwise affect the terms of the agreement. Such stipulations may not be effective to prevent rescission of the contract based on a claim of mutual mistake, at least when the claimed mistake goes to an essential matter "and is not capable of exact and entire compensation" [CC § 1690].

16.15[6] Statute of Limitations Is Four Years From Discovery of Facts. The statute of limitations based on a rescission of a written contract is four years. When the ground for rescission is mistake, the time does not begin to run until the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts constituting the mistake [CCP § 337(3)].

 Cross Reference:

Statutes of limitation in general, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statute of Limitations and Effect on Potential Action.

16.15[7] Special Rules for Government Bidding. A bidder for government contracts who makes a mistake in his bid must follow specific procedures to obtain relief. Such a bidder must give the public entity written notice within five working days, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and state holidays, after the opening of the bids of the mistake, specifying in the notice in detail how the mistake occurred. In order to justify relief, the mistake must have been clerical, rather than an error in judgment or a mistake in evaluating the work. Finally, the mistake must have made the bid "materially different" from the bidder's intended bid [PC Code § 5103; see Diede Construction, Inc. v. Monterey Mechanical Co. (2004) 125 CA4th 380, 386-388].

Warning:

Any action to set aside the bid must be filed and served on the appropriate party within 90 days after opening of the bid [PC Code § 5102].

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake

IV. ATTACKING OR DEFENDING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT--UNILATERAL MISTAKE

16.16 Reforming the Contract.

16.16[1] Unilateral Mistake of Law. A unilateral mistake of law is a "mistake" giving rise to relief only when one party knows of the other party's mistake and does nothing to correct it [CC § 1578].

16.16[2] Unilateral Mistake of Fact. When a party's mistaken belief is either induced by, or known to, the other party, the mistaken party is not limited to rescission as a remedy, but may be entitled to seek reformation of the agreement [CC § 3399].

16.16[3] Contract May Be Reformed to Reflect Aggrieved Party's Intent. When the mistake was induced by or known to the other party, the mistaken party may have the contract reformed in order to eliminate the "mistake"--in other words, to reflect what he or she had intended that the contract should provide. The courts have held that the party who kept silent about the mistake was in effect communicating his or her acceptance of the mistaken party's intentions, and is estopped to rely on his or her unspoken intentions. The time to speak out about those intentions was when the mistake became known [CC § 3399; Stare v. Tate (1971) 21 CA3d 432, 438-439, 98 CR 264].

Example:

The wife in a dissolution proceeding agreed to a property settlement based on a mathematical error by her attorney. Under the settlement, the wife believed that certain property was valued at $550,000, but the net payment to her reflected a value of about $100,000 less. After the settlement was finalized, the husband sent her a letter confirming the distribution with a taunting note: "PLEASE NOTE $100,000 MISTAKE IN YOUR FIGURES." The wife sought reformation of the agreement to reflect a value on that property of $550,000, with a resulting increase in the distribution to her. The husband resisted reformation, pointing out that he would not have agreed to a valuation of $550,000, and that he agreed to the settlement only on the basis of the final distribution amount. The court was unimpressed with the husband's argument. Having kept silent about the wife's error, the husband was estopped to claim any other value [Stare v. Tate (1971) 21 CA3d 432, 438-439, 98 CR 264].

16.16[4] Reformation Is Unavailable If a Third Party's Rights Will Be Adversely Affected. Like rescission, reformation on the grounds of mistake is subject to the same general rules applicable to reformation generally. If the interests of third parties would be harmed by reformation of the contract, then reformation is unavailable [CC § 3399]. Reformation is available "only so far as it can be done without prejudice to rights acquired by third persons, in good faith and for value" [CC § 3399].

 Cross References:

Discussion of rescission, see 16.15.

Discussion of other remedies, see Ch. 8, Seeking or Opposing Equitable Remedies in Contract Actions.

16.16[5] Parties' Intentions Must Be Shown. Because the purpose of reformation is to express the parties' true intentions, those intentions must be proved to the satisfaction of the court, with the party claiming mistake bearing the burden of proof. Such intentions may be shown through contemporaneous writings, discussions, or other surrounding circumstances. The parol evidence rule does not prevent a party from using such evidence to establish mistake [Hess v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 27 C4th 516, 525-526, 117 CR2d 220, 41 P3d 46].

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake
V. PLEADING AND PROVING MISTAKE

1-16 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 16.17

16.17 CHECKLIST: Pleading and Proving Mistake.

☐ If alleging mistake in complaint seeking relief:

☐ Allege sufficient facts to show factual basis of claim, including how, when, and why mistake occurred.

Authority:

Totten v. Underwriters at Lloyd's London (1959) 176 CA2d 440, 448, 1 CR 520 ;
Girard v. Miller (1963) 214 CA2d 266, 273, 29 CR 359 .

☐ Allege all essential elements for type of mistake that forms basis for claim.

☐ For mutual mistake, allege:

☐ That both parties were mistaken about a matter relevant to contract.

☐ That mistake was material.

☐ That plaintiff would not have entered contract if he/she was aware of mistake.

Discussion:

See 16.18[2]

☐ For unilateral mistake, allege:

☐ That plaintiff was mistaken about a particular matter.

☐ That defendant knew plaintiff was mistaken and used mistake to take advantage of plaintiff, or that effect of mistake is to make enforcement of contract unconscionable.

☐ That plaintiff's mistake was not caused by his/her own excessive carelessness.

☐ That mistake was material.

☐ That plaintiff would not have entered contract if he/she was aware of mistake.

Discussion:

See 16.18[3]

☐ Request type of relief required.

☐ Rescission; or ☐ Reformation.

Discussion:

See 16.11, 16.12, 16.15, 16.16

☐ If pleading mistake as defense to claim for breach of contract:

☐ Raise defense in answer to complaint.

☐ Allege mistake as affirmative defense to avoid waiving defense; general denial is not sufficient.

Authority:

California Acad. of Scis. v. County of Fresno (1987) 192 CA3d 1436, 1442, 238 CR 154
; G. W. Andersen Constr. Co. v. Mars Sales (1985) 164 CA3d 326, 339, 210 CR 409

Discussion:

See 16.19

☐ Be prepared to meet burden of proving each element of mistake.

Discussion:

See 16.20

Chapter 16 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake
V. PLEADING AND PROVING MISTAKE

16.18 Plaintiff May Assert Mistake in Complaint for Rescission or Reformation.

16.18[1] Complaint Must Show How, When, and Why Mistake Occurred. A complaint seeking relief on grounds of mistake must allege the existence and grounds for the claim of mistake, and the relief (rescission or reformation) requested [see CC §§ 1689, 3399]. For mutual mistake, the plaintiff must allege facts showing how the mistake was made, whose mistake it was, and what brought it about, so that the mutuality may appear. Similarly, if unilateral mistake is the basis of the claim, the facts showing a mistake of that character must likewise be alleged [Totten v. Underwriters at Lloyd's London (1959) 176 CA2d 440, 448, 1 CR 520]. In the absence of a clear recitation of facts showing how, when, and why the mistake occurred, a complaint is inadequate as against a general and special demurrer [Girard v. Miller (1963) 214 CA2d 266, 273, 29 CR 359 (deed reformation action based on mutual mistake)].

16.18[2] Essential Allegations for Complaint for Mutual Mistake. A complaint for mutual mistake must allege the following [see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 331 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (elements of mutual mistake as an affirmative defense)]:

- That both parties were mistaken about a matter relevant to the contract.
- That the mistake was material to the contract.
- That the plaintiff would not have agreed to enter into the contract if the plaintiff had known about the mistake.

Form for complaint for reformation--mutual mistake, see 16.23.

16.18[3] Essential Allegations for Claim of Unilateral Mistake. A complaint for unilateral mistake must allege all of the following [CC §§ 1577, 1578; Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 281-282, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702]:

- That the plaintiff was mistaken about a particular matter.

- That either:

- The defendant knew plaintiff was mistaken about the matter and used that mistake to take advantage of plaintiff [see Cypress v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. (1968) 259 CA2d 219, 225, 66 CR 357 (complaint for reformation based on unilateral mistake must allege that mistake of one party was known or suspected by other party at time document was executed; without such an allegation, no cause of action for reformation is stated)]; or

- If defendant has no reason to know of and does not cause plaintiff's unilateral mistake of fact, that effect of mistake is such that enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 281-282, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702].

- That plaintiff's mistake was not caused by his or her own excessive carelessness [see Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 CA2d 749, 756-766, 75 CR 533 (failure to make reasonable inquiry after having notice of sufficient facts to put party on inquiry was neglect of party's legal duty and party's mistake therefore was not mistake of fact within meaning of CC § 1577)].

- That the mistake was material to the contract.

- That plaintiff would not have agreed to enter into the contract if he or she had known about the mistake.

16.19 Defendant May Assert Mistake As Defense to Action on Contract.

A defendant may assert mistake as a defense to any action on a contract that would be defeated by showing that no valid contract exists [see CC §§ 1550 (consent is essential element of contract), 1567 (apparent consent not real or free when obtained through mistake)].

16.19[1] Mistake Is Affirmative Defense. Mistake is an affirmative defense [Commissioners to Manage Yosemite Valley v. Barnard (1893) 98 C 199, 201, 32 P 982]. It must be affirmatively alleged in the answer to the complaint [Eucalyptus Growers Ass'n v. Orange County Nursery & Land Co. (1917) 174 C 330, 335, 163 P 45].

Affirmative Defense--Bilateral Mistake, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 331 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Strategic Point--Defendant--Pleading Affirmative Defenses in General Terms:

Since California is a "notice pleading" state, affirmative defenses, like the allegations in the complaint itself, generally do not require much specificity. Most defense attorneys prefer to plead affirmative defenses, like denials, in general terms. At the outset of the case, the defense attorney often may not be confident enough of his or her knowledge of the facts to assert them with specificity, although he or she may well know enough to know that a particular defense may apply. Secondly, if an affirmative defense is spelled out too specifically in the answer, it opens the client up to examination at deposition as to the specific factual basis of the affirmative defense. When the affirmative defense is plead generally, few attorneys will examine a deponent about it, and if they do the deponent can simply say: "I don't know. That is a purely legal matter handled by the attorney."

If an affirmative defense is pled in very general terms, there is the possibility that the plaintiff may demur. However, the court is required to liberally construe the pleading with a view to substantial justice [CCP § 452]. At worst, defendant may be required to re-allege the defense with greater specificity. On the other hand, plaintiffs may forgo asserting such easily-cured objections, and failure to object will result in the objection being deemed waived [see Henderson v. Northam (1917) 176 C 493, 496, 168 P 1044 (plaintiff who treated answer that was "somewhat complex and artificially drawn" as sufficient to require proof of allegation of complaint was deemed to have waived all objections to sufficiency of denial)].

The affirmative defenses illustrated in 16.21 are stated in very general terms in accordance with the principles stated above, with additional language allowing greater specificity for specific allegations if desired.

16.19[2] Failure to Assert Mistake As Affirmative Defense May Result in Waiver. Generally, a party who fails to plead affirmative defenses waives them [California Acad. of Scis. v. County of Fresno (1987) 192 CA3d 1436, 1442, 238 CR 154]. Mistake is an affirmative defense that defendants are required to plead and prove [Marich v. MGM/UA Telecommunications, Inc. (2003) 113 CA4th 415, 424 (mistake as defense to privacy action)]. Failure to affirmatively allege mistake in the answer can result in a waiver of the defense [see, e.g., G. W. Andersen Constr. Co. v. Mars Sales (1985) 164 CA3d 326, 339, 210 CR 409].

The party asserting the existence of a mistake in the formation of a contract has the burden of proof regarding all the elements necessary for relief [*Roller v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. ANSWER OF _____[identify Defendant, e.g.,

DEFENDANT MARY JONES] TO COMPLAINT
OF_____[identify Plaintiff, e.g.,
PLAINTIFF JOHN SMITH]

[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Judge:

Department:

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[EITHER, if alleging a mutual mistake of fact]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Mutual Mistake of Fact)

2. Defendant is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that at all relevant times, the parties to the purported agreement were acting under a mutual mistake of fact as to one or more facts that were a material part of the inducement of the purported contract, and would not have entered into that contract had the true facts been known. [If greater specificity is desired with respect to one or more specific allegations, add: These mistakes of fact included, without limitation, a mistaken belief that

_____ (include details of the alleged mutual mistake, e.g., the subject property was suitable for development or the item to be sold was a genuine 1969 Fender Stratocaster guitar), when the true facts were that

_____ (include details, e.g., the subject property was protected wetlands or the item was an imitation or later model).]

[AND/OR, if alleging a mutual mistake of law]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Mutual Mistake of Law)

3. Defendant is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that at all relevant times, the parties to the purported agreement were acting under a mutual mistake or mistakes with respect to the law applicable to the subject matter of the purported contract, that their mistaken belief was a material part of the inducement for the purported contract, and that they would not have entered into that contract had they correctly understood the applicable law and the legal effect of the contract. [If greater specificity is desired with respect to one or more specific allegations, add: These mistakes of law included, without limitation, a mistaken belief that _____ (include details of the alleged mutual mistake, e.g., the Plaintiff's 1990 marriage was valid in California), when the applicable law provides that _____ (include details, e.g., California does not recognize the marriage of 17-year-olds without parental consent).]

[AND/OR, if alleging a unilateral mistake of fact, induced by or known to the other party]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Unilateral Mistake of Fact)

4. At the time of the alleged agreement set forth in the complaint, Defendant was acting under a mistaken belief as to one or more facts that were a material part of the inducement for the purported contract, and would not have entered into that contract had the true facts been known. Defendant

_____ [is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that Plaintiff was aware at all relevant times of Defendant's mistaken belief, and did nothing to correct it or further alleges that his/her/its mistaken belief was directly induced by Plaintiff's acts]. [If greater specificity is desired with respect to one or more specific allegations, add: These mistakes of fact included, without limitation, a mistaken belief that _____

_____ (include details of the alleged mutual mistake, e.g., the subject property had been appraised at $370,000), when the true facts were that _____ (include details, e.g., the property had not been appraised or had been appraised at a significantly lower value).]

[AND/OR, if alleging a unilateral mistake of law, known to or induced by the other party]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Unilateral Mistake of Law)

5. At the time of the alleged agreement set forth in the complaint, Defendant was acting under a mistake or mistakes with respect to the law applicable to the subject matter of the purported contract, that mistaken belief was a material part of the inducement for the purported contract, and Defendant would not have entered into that contract had he/she/it correctly understood the applicable law and the legal effect of the contract. Defendant

_____ [is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that Plaintiff was aware at all relevant times of Defendant's mistaken belief, and did nothing to correct it or further alleges that his/her/its mistaken belief was directly induced by Plaintiff's acts]. [If greater specificity is desired with respect to one or more specific allegations, add: These mistakes of law included, without limitation, a mistaken belief that _____

_____ (include details of the alleged mutual mistake, e.g., a personal services contract having an initial term of seven years, plus a series of five subsequent one-year options exercisable at the employer's discretion, was fully enforceable by an employer under California law), when the applicable law was that _____ (include details, e.g., personal services contracts in California cannot be enforced against an employee beyond seven years after the commencement of service).]

[AND/OR, if alleging a unilateral mistake of fact not known to or induced by other party]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Unilateral Mistake of Fact)

6. At the time of the alleged agreement set forth in the complaint, Defendant was acting under a mistaken belief as to one or more facts that were a material part of the inducement for the purported contract, and would not have entered into that contract had the true facts been known. Defendant's mistaken belief went to an essential term of the contract, and enforcement of the contract as written would be unconscionable and would work a severe and unjustified hardship on Defendant. [If greater specificity is desired with respect to one or more specific allegations, add: These mistakes of fact included, without limitation, a mistaken belief that

_____ (include details of the alleged mutual mistake, e.g., the subject property had been appraised at $370,000), when the true facts were that

_____ (include details, e.g., the property had been appraised at 370,000 yen, or about $3370 at the then-applicable rate of exchange).]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.syn

§ 17.syn Synopsis to Chapter 17: Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence

17.01 Scope.

17.02 Objective and Strategy.

17.03 CHECKLIST: Challenging Existence of Contract Based on Fraud, Duress, Menace, or Undue Influence.

17.04 Parties' Consent Is Essential Element of Valid Contract.

17.05 Fraud, Duress, Menace, or Undue Influence May Negate Consent.

17.06 Raising Issues of Fraud, Duress, Menace, or Undue Influence.

17.06[1] Facts Surrounding Challenging Party's Consent to Contract Should Be Carefully Reviewed.

17.06[2] More Than One Defense May Be Alleged Under Circumstances of Case.

17.06[3] Issues May Be Raised by Affirmative Defenses in Answer or in Action for Rescission.

17.06[4] Tort Cause of Action May Also Exist.

17.06[5] Facts Must Be Pled With Specificity.

17.06[6] Failure to Plead Affirmative Defenses Generally Waives Them.

17.07 CHECKLIST: Establishing Actual Fraud.

17.08 Elements of Actual Fraud.

17.09 Party Must Have Misrepresented or Concealed Material Fact.

17.09[1] Intentional or Negligent Misrepresentation of Fact, Concealment, or Promissory Fraud May Constitute Actual Fraud.

17.09[2] Claim of Fraud Generally Must Be Based on Misrepresentation of Fact, Not Opinion.

17.09[2][a] Opinions Generally Are Deemed Not Actionable.

17.09[2][b] Statement of Opinion by Party With Superior Knowledge May Be Basis for Fraud.

17.09[2][c] Whether Statement Constitutes Opinion or Misrepresentation of Fact Generally Is Question of Fact.

17.09[3] Misrepresented Fact Is Material If Likely to Affect Conduct of Reasonable Person.

17.09[4] Concealment of Material Fact Constitutes Fraud Only When Duty to Disclose Exists.

17.09[5] Misrepresentation of Fact Is Implied When Promise Is Made Without Intention to Perform.

17.10 Misrepresentation Must Have Been Made With Knowledge of Falsity or Without Sufficient Information to Warrant Representation.

17.11 Party Must Have Intended to Induce Action of Other Party.

17.12 Party Alleging Fraud Must Have Justifiably Relied on Misrepresentation.

17.12[1] Reliance Is Essential Element of Fraud or Misrepresentation.

17.12[2] Reliance Occurs When, Absent Misrepresentation, Party Alleging Fraud Would Not Have Consented to Contract.

17.12[3] Reliance Is Presumed If Misrepresentation Was Material.

17.12[4] Reliance Must Have Been Justified.

17.12[5] Party Alleging Fraud Was Not Necessarily Required to Investigate Other Party's Representations.

17.12[6] Investigation by Claimant May Affect Claim of Reliance.

17.13 Misrepresentation Must Have Resulted in Injury.

17.13[1] Damage or Injury Is Required for Action or Defense Based on Fraud.

17.13[2] Pecuniary Damages Are Not Required for Rescission.

17.14 CHECKLIST: Establishing Constructive Fraud.

17.15 Elements of Constructive Fraud.

17.16 Constructive Fraud Usually Involves Taking Advantage of Confidential Relationship.

17.17 Confidential or Fiduciary Relationship Is Required.

17.17[1] Existence of Confidential Relationship Distinguishes Constructive Fraud From Actual Fraud.

17.17[2] Fiduciary Relationship Is Confidential.

17.17[3] Other Relationships Are Confidential When Trust and Confidence Is Found.

17.17[4] Existence of Confidential Relationship Is Question of Fact.

17.18 Party Claiming Constructive Fraud Must Show Breach of Duty by Other Party.

17.18[1] Breach of Duty Must Be Alleged.

17.18[2] Nondisclosure May Constitute Breach of Duty.

17.18[3] Fraudulent Intent Is Not Required.

17.18[4] Element of Reliance Is "Relaxed."

17.19 Party in Whom Confidence Was Placed Must Have Gained Advantage.

17.19[1] Improved Position, Favorable Opportunity, or Other Benefit or Gain Constitute Advantage.

17.19[2] Causation and Injury Must Be Shown.

17.19[3] Party Alleged to Have Gained Advantage Must Prove Fairness of Transaction.

17.20 CHECKLIST: Establishing Duress or Menace.

17.21 Types of Duress or Menace.

17.22 Wrongful Acts, Threats, or Coercion Constitute Duress.

17.22[1] Unlawful Acts Specified in CC § 1569 Constitute Duress.

17.22[2] Duress Has Been Expanded by Case Law to Include Intentional Threats or Pressure.

17.22[3] "Menace" Is Defined by CC § 1570, but Often Used Interchangeably With "Duress."

17.22[4] Threat to Do What One Has Legal Right to Do Is Not Duress or Menace.

17.23 Threats to Economic Interests May Constitute Duress.

17.24 Standard for Determining Duress.

17.24[1] Traditional Duress Is Evaluated Under Subjective Standard.

17.24[2] Economic Duress Is Evaluated Under Objective Standard.

17.25 CHECKLIST: Establishing Undue Influence.

17.26 Conduct That Constitutes Undue Influence.

17.27 Undue Influence May Be Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship or Authority.

17.27[1] Misrepresentations or Concealment Are Not Required.

17.27[2] Advantage to Party in Position of Confidence or Authority Raises Presumption of Undue Influence.

17.27[3] Party in Position of Confidence or Authority Has Burden of Proving Free Consent and Understanding.

17.28 Undue Influence May Exist When No Confidential Relationship Exists.

17.28[1] Undue Influence May Consist of Undue Susceptibility of Victim, Use of Excessive Pressure, or Both.

17.28[2] Undue Susceptibility Need Not Be Wholly Incapacitating.

17.28[3] Use of Excessive Pressure Results in "Overpersuasion."

17.28[3][a] Overpersuasion Approaches Coercion.

17.28[3][b] Indicators of Overpersuasion Must Be Present.

17.28[4] Existence of Undue Influence Is Question of Fact.

17.29 Answer to Complaint for Breach of Contract With Affirmative Defense(s) Based on Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence.

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence

I. STRATEGY

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.01

17.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Objective and strategy for attacking or defending the existence of a contract, based on fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence [see 17.02].
- Determining which of these defenses to enforcement of the contract may be present [see 17.03 -17.06].
- Determining if actual fraud can be established [see 17.07 -17.13; Form: see 17.29].
- Determining whether constructive fraud can be established [see 17.14 -17.19; Form: see 17.29].
- Determining whether duress or menace can be established [see 17.20 -17.24; Form: see 17.29].
- Determining whether undue influence can be established [see 17.25 -17.28; Form: see 17.29].

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence
I. STRATEGY

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.02

17.02 Objective and Strategy.

Mutual consent, freely given, is essential for a valid contract [CC § 1565; see 17.04]. A contract may be unenforceable, and subject to rescission, if the consent of one of the parties was obtained through fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence [CC § 1567; see 17.05]. By asserting one or more of these grounds, a party is claiming that no valid consent existed and the contract is therefore unenforceable.

One important objective of claims of fraud, duress, menace and undue influence is to avoid performance of the challenging party's obligations under the contract. These claims can be asserted either as affirmative defenses to an action for breach of contract, or by a plaintiff in an action for rescission of the contract [see 17.06].

The other important objective is for the challenging party to obtain damages for or reimbursement of consideration given to the party because of fraud, duress, menace or undue influence. Therefore, counsel should also determine whether the conduct giving rise to these defenses also gives rise to a cause of action in tort for damages [see 17.06[4]].

Strategic Point:

Asserting fraud, duress, menace or undue influence in defense (or anticipation) of a breach of contract claim has potential benefits and drawbacks that should be considered. Among the potential benefits are recovery of punitive damages and access to broader discovery. Among the potential drawbacks are taking on the burden of proof, being subjected to broader discovery and perhaps spoiling the relationship between the contracting parties [see 17.06].

Judge's Perspective--Attacking the Validity of Consent:

When the client's consent to a contract was not validly obtained because of fraud, duress, menace or undue influence, the temptation will be simply to wait to see if the other party to the contract files suit. This strategy makes sense when the financial benefit of the claim outweighs the litigation cost. For example, if the client has not yet performed the contract, the other party has not yet demanded performance and seems unlikely to bring a claim, the most cost-effective route may be to send a notice of rescission, if the circumstances warrant it, and then see if the other party files suit.

On the other hand, if there is a reasonable possibility the other party to the contract will file suit, it will usually make sense to bring the matter to court. If your client was taken advantage of in the transaction, it is better to adopt the role of plaintiff. Otherwise, your client's defense might look like an afterthought or a claim asserted in furtherance of a "best defense is a good offense" strategy.

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence
II. CHALLENGING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT BASED ON FRAUD, DURESS, MENACE, OR UNDUE INFLUENCE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.03

17.03 CHECKLIST: Challenging Existence of Contract Based on Fraud, Duress, Menace, or Undue Influence.

- ☐ Carefully examine circumstances under which party seeking to challenge contract originally gave his or her consent to contract terms.

Authority:

CC §§ 1565-1568

Discussion:

See 17.06[1]

- ☐ Determine which of defenses of fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence may potentially be alleged, in light of facts of the case, such as:

- ☐ Whether a confidential relationship existed between parties.
- ☐ Whether other party was in a position of authority over aggrieved party.
- ☐ Whether other party intentionally or negligently misrepresented a material fact.
- ☐ Whether other party concealed a material fact.
- ☐ Whether other party made a promise without intention of performing.
- ☐ Whether other party used threats or pressure to obtain consent.

- ☐ Whether aggrieved party had any particular susceptibility.

Authority:

CC §§ 1569-1575

Discussion:

See 17.06[2]

- ☐ Determine appropriate method of raising issue(s) of fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence, under circumstances of case, such as:

- ☐ Asserting affirmative defenses in answer, if opposing party has filed action to enforce contract or recover damages for its breach.
- ☐ Filing complaint seeking rescission of contract, if no action is pending.
- ☐ Filing complaint or cross-complaint alleging tort causes of action arising out of conduct constituting fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence.

Authority:

CC §§ 1689(b)(1), 1692; CCP § 431.30(b)(2)

Discussion:

See 17.06[3] -[5]

Form:

*1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.0517.05 Fraud, Duress, Menace, or Undue Influence May Negate Consent.

An apparent consent is not real or free when obtained through duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, or mistake [CC § 1567]. Consent is deemed to have been obtained through one of these causes only when it would not have been given had that cause not existed [CC § 1568].

A consent that is not free nevertheless is not absolutely void, but is voidable and may be rescinded by the parties [CC § 1566].

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence
 II. CHALLENGING EXISTENCE OF CONTRACT BASED ON FRAUD, DURESS, MENACE, OR UNDUE INFLUENCE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.06

17.06 Raising Issues of Fraud, Duress, Menace, or Undue Influence.

17.06[1] Facts Surrounding Challenging Party's Consent to Contract Should Be Carefully Reviewed.

Because claims of fraud, duress, menace, and undue influence attack the validity of the challenging party's consent to the contract [see 17.04, 17.05], an analysis of potential grounds for contesting the validity of a contract should include particular attention to the circumstances under which the challenging party originally gave his or her consent to the contract. The following circumstances, in particular, should be carefully examined:

- The nature of the relationship between the party seeking to challenge the contract and the other parties to the contract.
- The key factual assumptions on which the challenging party relied in entering into the contract, and the source of those assumptions.
- The representations made by the other party.
- Facts not disclosed by the other party prior to entering into the agreement.
- The advantage, if any, gained by the other party as a result of the contract.
- The familiarity and sophistication of the party challenging the contract with legal and business matters in general, and with the subject matter of the contract in particular.
- The mental faculties of the party seeking to challenge the contract.
- The circumstances under which the party challenging the contract gave his or her consent to the agreement.
- The mental state of the party seeking to challenge the contract at the time that party consented to the contract, and the external factors that may have contributed to the party's mental state at the time.

- Any weakness or vulnerability on the part of the party challenging the contract.
- Any pressure or coercion used by the other party to obtain consent to the agreement.

17.06[2] More Than One Defense May Be Alleged Under Circumstances of Case. A party challenging the contract may be able to allege more than one of the defenses of fraud, duress, menace, and undue influence under the circumstances of the case. After carefully reviewing the facts of the case, counsel should determine which of the following elements are present, and consider as many of the defenses as appropriate:

Facts of Case	Potential Defense(s) to Contract
Confidential relationship between the parties	Constructive fraud [see 17.14-17.19]; undue influence [see 17.25-17.28]
One party in position of authority over other party	Undue influence [see 17.25-17.28]
Intentional misrepresentation of fact	Actual fraud [see 17.07-17.13]
Negligent misrepresentation of fact	Actual fraud [see 17.07-17.13]
Failure to disclose material fact	Actual fraud [see 17.07-17.13]
Promise without intention of performing	Actual fraud [see 17.07-17.13]
Threats or pressure to obtain consent	Duress or menace [see 17.20-17.24]; undue influence [see 17.25-17.28]
Particular susceptibility of party	Undue influence [see 17.25-17.28]

17.06[3] Issues May Be Raised by Affirmative Defenses in Answer or in Action for Rescission. If the opposing party has filed an action seeking to enforce a contract or recover damages for its breach, the party challenging the validity of the contract may assert fraud, duress, menace, and/or undue influence as affirmative defenses in an answer to the complaint [see CCP § 431.30(b)(2)].

If the opposing party has not filed an action on the contract, the party challenging the validity of the contract may file an action for rescission [see CC §§ 1689(b)(1), 1692]. However, a party claiming that a contract was fraudulently induced is not required to seek rescission; the party may retain the benefits of the contract and sue for damages for the fraud [Denevi v. LGCC, LLC (2004) 121 CA4th 1211, 1220]. This is true even if the fraudulently induced contract contains a mutual release. A court has the equitable power to set aside a release in a contract induced by fraud, allowing the defrauded party to retain the benefits of the contract while simultaneously pursuing a fraud claim [Persson v. Smart

Inventions, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 1141, 1152-1156].

17.06[4] Tort Cause of Action May Also Exist. Conduct constituting fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence may also give rise to a cause of action in tort, such as an action for deceit or breach of fiduciary duty [see, e.g., CC § 1710 (elements of actionable fraud)]. Bringing an action in tort allows the aggrieved party to seek a greater range of damages, including punitive damages [Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 CA4th 596, 605].

Counsel for the aggrieved party should consider alleging tort causes of action in a complaint or cross-complaint to recover tort damages, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in light of the injury suffered by the aggrieved party.

Strategic Point:

Adding tort claims to a contract case will broaden it on many levels: scope of discovery, issues relevant at trial, and relief available. It will also make dismissal on summary judgment more unlikely. When considering whether to pursue tort damages along with the contract claim, counsel must be sure the claim, if in a non-insurance context, contains a "violation of an independent duty arising from principles of tort law other than the bad faith denial of the existence of, or liability under, the breached contract" [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 102, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669].

Judge's Perspective--Filing a Tort Claim:

Sometimes the other party to the contract will have committed a tort by, for example, defrauding your client in the course of negotiating the contract [see 17.06]. Make sure to consider this possibility in drafting the complaint. Factors to consider in bringing such a claim include not only the relief you might expect to gain for your client, which might include punitive damages, but whether a tort claim will change other important aspects of the trial. For example, if your client seeks only rescission, and the other party to the contract does not file a breach of contract claim, the claim would only be tried only to the court. A tort claim, however, entitles your client to a jury.

Strategic Point--Party Alleging Fraud:

If the fraudulently induced contract contains a mutual release purporting to bar a claim for fraud, and your client does not wish to rescind the contract and return the benefits received under it, request that the court exercise its equitable power to set aside a release contained in a contract induced by fraud [see Persson v. Smart Inventions, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 1141, 1152-1156].

Cross References:

Discussion of determining causes of action, see Ch. 2, Determining What Causes of Action Exist.

Tort actions for fraud, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

17.06[5] Facts Must Be Pled With Specificity. The rules for pleading fraud are different from the rules for other claims that allow generalized allegations. A complaint or defense alleging fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence should be pled with specificity [see Small v. Fritz Cos., Inc. (2003) 30 C4th 167, 184, 132 CR2d 490, 65 P3d 1255 (fraud)].

The claim must also "provide the defendants with the fullest possible details of the charge so they are able to prepare a defense to this serious attack. To withstand demurrer, the facts constituting every element of the fraud must be alleged with particularity, and the claim cannot be salvaged by references as to the general policy favoring liberal construction of the pleadings" [Goldrich v. Natural Y Surgical Specialties (1994) 25 CA4th 772, 782-783, 31 CR2d 162 (citation omitted) (emphasis in original)].

The same rules apply to the pleading of a fraud affirmative defense to a breach of contract claim, or a claim for rescission based on fraud. Thus, the charging party must set out "(1) a representation, (2) that is false, (3) made with knowledge of its falsity, and (4) with an intent to deceive, coupled with (5) actual detrimental reliance and (6) resulting damage [Lim v. The TV Corp. Internat. (2002) 99 CA4th 684, 694, 121 CR2d 333]." A complaint that alleges fraud in a conclusory fashion may provide grounds for the opposing party to demur to the complaint or defense [see CCP §§ 430.10, 430.20].

Example:

A demurrer to a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation was properly sustained because the plaintiff failed to allege that any positive assertions were made by the defendant. Such positive assertions are required for a claim of negligent misrepresentation [Vega v. Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue (2004) 121 CA4th 282, 291].

Consider:

While counsel is required to plead fraud with a certain specificity, the general rules permitting liberal amendment of pleadings essentially encourages plaintiffs to start with a complaint that might be initially too broad, requiring an amended complaint, rather than so specific that plaintiff is later constricted in discovery requests, proof at trial, or damages.

17.06[6] Failure to Plead Affirmative Defenses Generally Waives Them. A party who fails to plead affirmative defenses generally waives them [California Acad. of Scis. v. County of Fresno (1987) 192 CA3d 1436, 1442, 238 CR 154 (failure to plead affirmative defenses of waiver and estoppel)].

Consider:

It is clearly best practice to add all applicable affirmative defenses at the outset, but new affirmative defenses can be added just as new causes of action can be added on a motion to amend, as long as they are not considered dilatory.

III. ESTABLISHING ACTUAL FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.07

17.07 CHECKLIST: Establishing Actual Fraud.

☐ Determine whether other party to contract committed any of the following types of actual fraud:

- ☐ Intentional misrepresentation of a fact.
- ☐ Negligent misrepresentation of a fact.
- ☐ Concealment of a fact.
- ☐ A promise made without intention of performing it.

Authority:

CC § 1572; Hale v. George A. Hormel & Co. (1975) 48 CA3d 73, 84, 121 CR 144 (CC § 1572(2) gives statutory recognition to negligent misrepresentation of a fact as a form of deceit)

Discussion:

See 17.09[1]

☐ Determine whether representation made was:

- ☐ An assertion of fact, which may be basis of a claim or defense of actual fraud; or
- ☐ An opinion, which is not actionable unless:

☐ Other party possessed or held himself or herself out as possessing superior knowledge or special information or expertise regarding subject matter; and ☐ Party alleging fraud was so situated that he or she could reasonably rely on that supposed knowledge, information, or expertise.

Authority:

Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche LLP (1997) 56 CA4th 1468, 1476-1477, 66 CR2d 512 ;
Nibbi Bros., Inc. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1988) 205 CA3d 1415, 1423, 253 CR 289

Discussion:

See 17.09[2]

☐ Determine whether misrepresented fact was material--that is, likely to affect conduct of a reasonable person with reference to transaction.

Authority:

Wood v. Kalbaugh (1974) 39 CA3d 926, 930, 114 CR 673

Discussion:

See 17.09[3]

☐ If claim of fraud is based on concealment of a material fact:

☐ Determine whether confidential relationship or fiduciary relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose exists.

☐ If no such relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose exists, determine whether there was a duty to disclose because:

☐ Other party made representations that were likely to mislead for want of disclosures;

☐ Other party actively concealed undisclosed matters; or ☐ Other party had sole knowledge or access to material facts and knew that those facts were not known to or reasonably discoverable by party alleging fraud.

Authority:

Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 C3d 335, 347, 134 CR 375, 556 P2d 737 ; Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 C3d 285, 294, 85 CR 444, 466 P2d 996

Discussion:

See 17.09[4]

Form:

See 17.30 (memorandum for party attacking contract)

- ☐ If claim of fraud is based on promise without intention of performing, determine if evidence, besides fact of nonperformance, exists to prove other party's intention not to perform.

Authority:

Discussion:

See 17.09[5]

- ☐ Determine whether misrepresentation on which claim of fraud is based was made:

- ☐ With knowledge of falsity of representation; or
- ☐ Without sufficient information to warrant representation.

Authority:

CC § 1572; Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 974, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903 ; Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche LLP (1997) 56 CA4th 1468, 1476, 66 CR2d 512

Discussion:

See 17.10

- ☐ Determine whether other party intended to either:

- ☐ Deceive party alleging fraud; or
- ☐ Induce party alleging fraud to enter into contract in reliance on false representation.

Authority:

CC § 1572

Discussion:

See 17.11

- ☐ Determine whether:

- ☐ Party alleging fraud relied on misrepresentation; and

Authority:

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.08

17.08 Elements of Actual Fraud.

The following elements must be present to constitute actual fraud:

- There must be a false representation or concealment of a material fact [see 17.09].
- The representation must be made with knowledge of its falsity or without sufficient knowledge on the subject to warrant a representation [see 17.10].
- The representation must be made with the intent to induce the person to whom it is made to act upon it [see 17.11].
- The person to whom it is made must act in justifiable reliance upon the representation [see 17.12].
- There must be an injury to the party acting upon the representation [see 17.13].

III. ESTABLISHING ACTUAL FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.09

17.09 Party Must Have Misrepresented or Concealed Material Fact.

17.09[1] Intentional or Negligent Misrepresentation of Fact, Concealment, or Promissory Fraud May Constitute Actual Fraud. Fraud is either actual or constructive [CC § 1571]. When determining the parties' consent to contract, any of the following acts may constitute actual fraud [CC § 1572]:

- The suggestion, as a fact, of something that is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true.
- The positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, though that person believes it to be true.
- The suppression of that which is true, by one having knowledge or belief of the fact.
- A promise made without any intention of performing it.
- Any other act intended to deceive.

Thus, intentional or negligent misrepresentation of facts, concealment of facts, and promissory fraud, are all specifically recognized by statute as "actual fraud" which may be raised to attack the existence of a contract.

Jury Instructions:

Affirmative Defense--Fraud, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 335 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Affirmative Misrepresentation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.40 (Matthew Bender).

17.09[2] Claim of Fraud Generally Must Be Based on Misrepresentation of Fact, Not Opinion.

17.09[2][a] Opinions Generally Are Deemed Not Actionable. A representation ordinarily will give rise to a cause of action for fraud only if it is a representation of fact rather than opinion [Nibbi Bros., Inc. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1988) 205 CA3d 1415, 1423, 253 CR 289].

Statements regarding future events or future action by some third party generally are deemed opinions and therefore are not actionable [Nibbi Bros., Inc. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1988) 205 CA3d 1415, 1423, 253 CR 289].

17.09[2][b] Statement of Opinion by Party With Superior Knowledge May Be Basis for Fraud. If a party possesses or holds himself or herself out as possessing superior knowledge or special information or expertise regarding the subject matter, and the other party is so situated that he or she may reasonably rely on that supposed knowledge, information, or expertise, a statement that would otherwise be considered an opinion may be considered a misrepresentation of material fact [Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche LLP (1997) 56 CA4th 1468, 1477, 66 CR2d 512 ; Harazim v. Lynam (1968) 267 CA2d 127, 131, 72 CR 670].

Example--Opinion Constituted Actionable Assertion of Fact:

Investors in a failed limited partnership could maintain a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation against accountants who prepared financial projections for the confidential offering memoranda for the partnerships. Those expressions of professional opinion, if made without examining or acquiring the necessary information to support the opinion, could constitute misrepresentations of material fact [Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche LLP (1997) 56 CA4th 1468, 1476-1477, 66 CR2d 512].

Example--Opinion Not Actionable:

Developers of an ice and roller hockey arena project brought an action against an accounting firm and one of its principals, alleging that the defendants negligently represented the value of the property. However, the principal had merely predicted what value an appraiser would place on the property, and had indicated that a professional appraisal would be necessary to secure a loan. The developers knew that the principal was not a professional appraiser, and one of the developers had a graduate business degree and experience as a financial analyst. The defendants did not possess any superior knowledge. Under the circumstances, the statement regarding property value was merely an expression of opinion [Neu-Visions Sports, Inc. v. Soren (2000) 86 CA4th 303, 310-311, 103 CR2d 159].

Jury Instructions:

Statement of Opinion or Statement About the Law, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.41 (Matthew Bender).

17.09[2][c] Whether Statement Constitutes Opinion or Misrepresentation of Fact Generally Is Question of Fact. It is a question of fact whether a statement is an opinion or a representation of fact [Sime v. Malouf (1949) 95 CA2d 82, 101, 212 P2d 946].

17.09[3] Misrepresented Fact Is Material If Likely to Affect Conduct of Reasonable Person. A misrepresented fact is material if it would be likely to affect the conduct of a reasonable person with reference to the transaction [Wood v. Kalbaugh (1974) 39 CA3d 926, 930, 114 CR 673].

Materiality generally is a question of fact unless the fact misrepresented is so obviously unimportant that the jury could not reasonably find that a reasonable person would have been influenced by it [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 977, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903].

Jury Instructions:

Materiality of Misrepresentation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.49 (Matthew Bender).

17.09[4] Concealment of Material Fact Constitutes Fraud Only When Duty to Disclose Exists. Nondisclosure of a material fact is not actionable fraud unless there is a duty to disclose [Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 C3d 335, 347, 134 CR 375, 556 P2d 737]. The intentional failure to disclose a material fact is actionable fraud if there is a fiduciary relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose it [Black v. Shearson, Hammill & Co. (1968) 266 CA2d 362, 367, 72 CR 157 ; see CC § 1710(3)].

Warning:

Even when a fiduciary relationship exists, no concealment occurs when one party makes information available for review by the other party, but the other party fails to review the information [In re Marriage of Burkle (2006) 139 CA4th 712, 740-744, 43 CR3d 181] .

Absent a fiduciary relationship, a duty to disclose only exists in the following situations [Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 C3d 335, 347, 134 CR 375, 556 P2d 737 ; Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 C3d 285, 294, 85 CR 444, 466 P2d 996]:

- When a party has made representations that were likely to mislead for want of the disclosures;
- When a party has actively concealed undisclosed matters; or
- When a party has sole knowledge or access to material facts and knows that these facts are not known to or reasonably discoverable by the other party.

Example:

The law firm for the acquiring company in a merger provided a disclosure schedule to the shareholders of the acquired company in the consent form. The disclosure schedule did not include the material terms of a financing transaction between the acquiring company and a third party. Although the law firm did not have a professional duty of care to the adverse parties in the merger transaction, it did have a duty not to defraud others. Because the law firm specifically undertook to disclose the financing transaction, it was not at liberty to conceal a material term [Vega v. Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue (2004) 121 CA4th 282, 292].

Active Prevention of Investigation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.45 (Matthew Bender).

17.09[5] Misrepresentation of Fact Is Implied When Promise Is Made Without Intention to Perform.

Promissory fraud is a form of actual fraud that occurs when a party makes a promise without any intention of performing [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 973, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903 ; see CC § 1572(4)]. Because a promise to do something necessarily implies the intention to perform, if a promise is made without the intention to perform, there is an implied misrepresentation of fact [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 973, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903].

Strategic Point--Party Alleging Fraud:

Proof that a promise was made and that it was not fulfilled is not sufficient to prove fraud. Something more than nonperformance is required to prove the nonperforming party's intent not to perform his or her promise [Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 C3d 18, 30, 216 CR 130, 702 P2d 212]. Fraudulent intent not to perform often must be established by circumstantial evidence [Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 C3d 18, 30, 216 CR 130, 702 P2d 212].

Judge's Perspective:

Promissory fraud can be difficult to establish, because it requires proof of the defendant's state of mind. Although a defendant will sometimes make statements concerning his or her intention not to perform, circumstantial evidence is more common.

Consider:

The party alleging fraud might establish an intent not to perform through:

- Admissions in documents, depositions, or other discovery.
- Statements by third parties.
- Proof that the defrauding party did not have, or never obtained, the financial ability to perform.
- A promise to employ the plaintiff in a particular job while simultaneously planning to eliminate the position [see Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 49 CR2d 377, 909 P2d 981].

Promise Without Intent to Perform, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.48 (Matthew Bender).

III. ESTABLISHING ACTUAL FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.10

17.10 Misrepresentation Must Have Been Made With Knowledge of Falsity or Without Sufficient Information to Warrant Representation.

The statutory definition of actual fraud, for purposes of consent to contract, includes not only intentional misrepresentation of fact, but also negligent misrepresentation of fact, concealment, and promissory fraud [see CC § 1572]. Thus, broad statements that "scienter," or knowledge of falsity, is an element of every fraud claim are untrue [Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche LLP (1997) 56 CA4th 1468, 1476, 66 CR2d 512 ; see also Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 C2d 481, 487 (because CC § 1710 has made cause of action for negligent misrepresentation a form of deceit, statement that scienter is essential for deceit is erroneous)].

The assertion of a false statement, honestly made in the belief it is true, but without reasonable ground for that belief, constitutes a negligent misrepresentation of fact, a form of actual fraud [see Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche LLP (1997) 56 CA4th 1468, 1476, 66 CR2d 512].

Similarly, false representations made recklessly and without regard for their truth in order to induce action by another are the equivalent of misrepresentations knowingly and intentionally uttered [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 974, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903].

III. ESTABLISHING ACTUAL FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.11

17.11 Party Must Have Intended to Induce Action of Other Party.

Although "intent" is an essential element of actual fraud, the intent need not be an intent to deceive [see Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche LLP (1997) 56 CA4th 1468, 1476, 66 CR2d 512]. The intent required to establish actual fraud, for purposes of consent to contract, can be either an intent to deceive or an intent to induce the other party to enter into the contract in reliance on the false representation [CC § 1572; see Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare (1963) 216 CA2d 50, 58, 30 CR 629 (intent required is intent to induce action); see also Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 C2d 481, 488 n5, 275 P2d 15 (intent to induce action, rather than intent to deceive, is essential to cause of action for deceit under CC § 1710)].

III. ESTABLISHING ACTUAL FRAUD

17.12 Party Alleging Fraud Must Have Justifiably Relied on Misrepresentation.

17.12[1] Reliance Is Essential Element of Fraud or Misrepresentation. Consent is deemed to have been obtained through fraud only when the consent would not have been given had the fraud not existed [CC § 1568]. In other words, in order to prove a claim of actual fraud, the party asserting the fraud must show that he or she reasonably relied on the other party's misrepresentation [Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 335, Paragraph 3 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender)].

17.12[2] Reliance Occurs When, Absent Misrepresentation, Party Alleging Fraud Would Not Have Consented to Contract. Reliance occurs when a misrepresentation is an immediate cause of the other party's conduct, which alters his or her legal relations, and when, absent that representation, he or she would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 976, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903]. However, that reliance on the truth of the fraudulent representation need not be the sole or even the predominant or decisive factor in influencing his or her conduct. It is enough if the representation plays a substantial part, and so is a substantial factor, in influencing his or her decision [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 976-977, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903].

17.12[3] Reliance Is Presumed If Misrepresentation Was Material. A presumption, or at least an inference, of reliance arises whenever there is a showing that a misrepresentation was material [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 977, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of materiality, see 17.09[3].

17.12[4] Reliance Must Have Been Justified. The party alleging fraud must have been justified in relying on the misrepresentation [Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 C2d 409, 414, 115 P2d 977]. In determining whether reliance was justified, the party alleging fraud is not held to the standard of precaution or minimum knowledge of a reasonable person [Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 C2d 409, 415, 115 P2d 977]. The party alleging fraud is denied recovery only if his or her conduct was manifestly unreasonable in light of his or her own intelligence and information [Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 C2d 409, 415, 115 P2d 977].

Contract provisions disclaiming any fraudulent misrepresentations neither bar fraud claims nor establish as a matter of law that reliance on the defendant's misrepresentations was unjustifiable [McClain v. Octagon Plaza, LLC (2008) 159 CA4th 784, 795, 71 CR3d 885] .

Example:

Lease provision stating that any statement in the lease of the size of the leased property was an approximation, and that rental payments based on that approximation were not subject to revision, did not insulate the landlord from liability for fraud or establish that the tenant's reliance on the landlord's alleged misrepresentations regarding the size of the leased property was unjustifiable as a matter of law [McClain v. Octagon Plaza, LLC (2008) 159 CA4th 784, 795, 71 CR3d 885] .

17.12[5] Party Alleging Fraud Was Not Necessarily Required to Investigate Other Party's Representations.

Negligence on the part of the party seeking rescission based on fraud is no defense to the fraud when the misrepresentation was intentional rather than negligent [Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 C2d 409, 414, 115 P2d 977]. The fact that an investigation would have revealed the falsity of a misrepresentation does not bar recovery for fraud, unless the failure to investigate was manifestly unreasonable in light of the rescinding party's own intelligence and information [Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 C2d 588, 593-594, 297 P2d 644 ; Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 C2d 409, 415, 115 P2d 977].

Example:

Buyers of real estate alleged that sellers' broker misrepresented that a plot of land could be subdivided. After closing, buyers discovered that it could not, and sued brokers for intentional misrepresentation. Brokers argued that buyers could not justifiably rely on brokers' alleged misrepresentations as a matter of law because buyers would have discovered through a more diligent investigation that splitting the property was not permitted. The court of appeal held that buyers' negligence was no defense to the brokers' alleged intentional misrepresentations, and the contract gave buyers a contractual right, but not a contractual obligation, to conduct such an investigation [Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc., 146 CA4th 1486, 1502-1503, 55 CR3d 59] .

Jury Instructions:

Effect of Defrauded Party's Failure to Investigate, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.47 (Matthew Bender).

17.12[6] Investigation by Claimant May Affect Claim of Reliance. If the party seeking rescission conducts an independent investigation, that party cannot claim reliance on the other party's representations unless the falsity of the statements is not apparent from an inspection, the person making the representations has superior knowledge, or the party relying on the representations is not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance [Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 C2d 744, 748, 192 P2d 935].

Consider:

Note that certain contracts are so complex that the failure to conduct due diligence is unreasonable. Conversely, the failure to learn what could have been learned in a reasonable due diligence will preclude a claim of reasonable reliance.

III. ESTABLISHING ACTUAL FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.13

17.13 Misrepresentation Must Have Resulted in Injury.

17.13[1] Damage or Injury Is Required for Action or Defense Based on Fraud. Generally, fraud without damage furnishes no ground for an action, nor is fraud without damage a defense [South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 CA3d 750, 765, 102 CR 286].

Example:

Defendants real estate developers contracted with plaintiff utility for a gas main extension into a tract they were developing. Although the contract per-foot rate for the extension was acknowledged to be illegal, the trial court properly concluded that the utility was entitled to recover the legal per-foot rate for the work. Defendants were not relieved of payment because of the utility's alleged fraud in misrepresenting the legal per-foot rate. Under the trial court's judgment, the utility was not receiving more than the legal rate, while the defendants had received all of the benefits for which they contracted and had not sought rescission of the contract. Because there were no damages resulting from the alleged fraud, the alleged fraud was not a defense to the action on contract [South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 CA3d 750, 763-765, 102 CR 286].

17.13[2] Pecuniary Damages Are Not Required for Rescission. Although damage or injury is an element of fraud, it is not necessary to plead or prove pecuniary damages as a result of the fraud to obtain rescission of a contract [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 979, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903 ; Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 C2d 602, 611, 226 P2d 340]. Even without pecuniary damages, the aggrieved party is injured by the fraud, because a contracting party has a right to receive what he or she has contracted for, and so has the right to rescind if he or she obtains something substantially different from that which he or she was lead to expect [Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group, Inc. (1997) 15 C4th 951, 979, 64 CR2d 843, 938 P2d 903].

17.15 Elements of Constructive Fraud.

Unless the law specifically declares an act or omission to be fraudulent, without respect to actual fraud [see 17.16], the following elements must be present to constitute constructive fraud:

- There must be a fiduciary or other confidential relationship [see 17.16, 17.17].
- There must be the breach of a duty arising out of the fiduciary or confidential relationship [see 17.18].
- The breach must result in an advantage to the party at fault, to the prejudice of the other party [see 17.19].

IV. ESTABLISHING CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.16

17.16 Constructive Fraud Usually Involves Taking Advantage of Confidential Relationship.

Constructive fraud generally arises from a breach of duty by a party who is in a confidential or fiduciary relationship with the other party to the transaction [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 CA3d 926, 937-938, 268 CR 609]. Constructive fraud consists of either:

- A breach of duty, without an actual fraudulent intent, whereby the person at fault, or anyone claiming under him or her, gains an advantage by misleading another person to that person's prejudice or the prejudice of anyone claiming under that person [CC § 1573(1)]; or
- An act or omission that the law specifically declares to be fraudulent, without respect to actual fraud [CC § 1573(2)].

IV. ESTABLISHING CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.17

17.17 Confidential or Fiduciary Relationship Is Required.

17.17[1] Existence of Confidential Relationship Distinguishes Constructive Fraud From Actual Fraud. Fraud is either actual or constructive [CC § 1571]. The existence of a confidential relationship is one of the defining elements of constructive fraud [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 CA3d 926, 937, 268 CR 609]. The existence of a confidential relationship distinguishes constructive fraud from actual fraud, including negligent representation, which may occur in any type of relationship [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 CA3d 926, 938, 268 CR 609].

Jury Instructions:

Existence of Confidential Relationship, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.61 (Matthew Bender).

17.17[2] Fiduciary Relationship Is Confidential. A confidential or fiduciary relationship exists when one person reposes trust and confidence in another [In re Estate of Cover (1922) 188 C 133, 143, 204 P 583]. The term "fiduciary" denotes a person occupying a specific position in which trust and confidence is placed, such as:

- An attorney [Sodikoff v. State Bar of Cal. (1975) 14 C3d 422, 429, 121 CR 467, 535 P2d 331];
 - A real estate broker [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 C2d 662, 674-675, 68 CR 589, 441 P2d 101];
- or
- A trustee [Prob Code § 16004].

When an individual acting in a fiduciary capacity gains an advantage in a transaction, a rebuttable presumption of undue influence arises [Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 C2d 147, 151, 272 P2d 11 ; Boyd v. Bevilacqua (1966) 247 CA2d 272, 290-291, 55 CR 610].

Strategic Point:

Although a formal fiduciary relationship is not a prerequisite to the finding of a confidential relationship, the party alleging constructive fraud should specifically plead the existence of a formal fiduciary relationship, if one exists, because a fiduciary relationship is deemed confidential, and because the jury instructions for breach of fiduciary duty are so favorable.

Jury Instructions:

Fiduciary Relationship Is Confidential, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.62 (Matthew Bender).

17.17[3] Other Relationships Are Confidential When Trust and Confidence Is Found. Relationships other than formal fiduciary relationships may be deemed confidential if actual trust and confidence is shown to exist [see Steinberger v. Steinberger (1943) 60 CA2d 116, 122-123, 140 P2d 31].

Confidential relationships often exist when there is a family relationship between the parties, but a family relationship is not required [see Steinberger v. Steinberger (1943) 60 CA2d 116, 122-123, 140 P2d 31].

The mere fact that a relationship is friendly and intimate does not necessarily amount to a confidential relationship, unless one party places his or her trust and confidence in the integrity and fidelity of the other [O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 CA3d 147, 153, 119 CR 245].

17.17[4] Existence of Confidential Relationship Is Question of Fact. The existence of a confidential relationship is a question of fact. Each case turns on its own facts [O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 CA3d 147, 153, 119 CR 245].

Examples:

- Two women had a friendship of long duration, dating back to a friendship between one of them and the other's mother. Their close relationship continued throughout childhood and after one woman's marriage. One party sought rescission of a conveyance of real property she had made to the other party and the other party's husband. The party seeking rescission had been considered a member of the other's family, had attended family events, and had given generous gifts to the other party's children. The relationship intensified after party seeking rescission lost her sister. She then relied more heavily on the other party and other party's husband, and enlisted their help in finding an attorney to draft her will. Under the circumstances, the evidence supported a finding of a confidential relationship [O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 CA3d 147, 153, 119 CR 245].

- A fiduciary relationship existed between a bank and its elderly customers, even before the customers had executed a brokerage agreement, when (1) for six months prior to the execution of the brokerage agreement, a bank vice president/stockbroker had been the customers' relationship manager at the bank; (2) the stockbroker knew that one of the customers had limited vision and that his declining health rendered him a "little slow"; (3) the stockbroker worked biweekly at the customers' home office; (4) the stockbroker was provided with access to all of the customers' financial information, and managed their significant financial paperwork; (5) the stockbroker introduced the customers to an estate attorney and an accountant; (6) the stockbroker gave the customers investment advice; and (7) the stockbroker insisted and repeatedly urged the customers to retain another bank stockbroker to handle their stock portfolio [Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 CA4th 938, 960-961, 85 CR3d 817].

IV. ESTABLISHING CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.18

17.18 Party Claiming Constructive Fraud Must Show Breach of Duty by Other Party.

17.18[1] Breach of Duty Must Be Alleged. The party claiming constructive fraud must allege not only the existence of a confidential relationship, but the breach of a duty arising from that relationship [Crocker-Anglo Nat'l Bank v. Kuchman (1964) 224 CA2d 490, 494, 36 CR 806].

17.18[2] Nondisclosure May Constitute Breach of Duty. If a confidential or fiduciary relationship exists, the fiduciary or person in whom confidence is placed must make a full and complete disclosure of all material facts within his or her knowledge relating to the transaction in question [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 CA3d 57, 64-65, 221 CR 353 ; Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 CA4th 938, 961-962, 85 CR3d 817 (when an investment professional has previously voluntarily induced a vulnerable individual to repose trust and confidence in the professional, creating a fiduciary relationship, the professional may be required to fully disclose, in a manner the individual understands, the material terms of a contract between them)]. A failure to disclose material facts may be grounds for constructive fraud [see Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 CA3d 57, 64-65, 221 CR 353].

► Cross Reference:

Memorandum concerning duty to disclose, see 17.30.

Jury Instructions:

Full Disclosure Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.64 (Matthew Bender).

Constructive Fraud of Agent, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.65 (Matthew Bender).

17.18[3] Fraudulent Intent Is Not Required. Fraudulent intent is not required to establish constructive fraud as a defense to enforcement of a contract [CC § 1573(1)].

Distinguish--Lack of Intent When No Confidential Relationship Exists:

If no confidential relationship exists, an innocent misrepresentation cannot constitute constructive fraud [see CC § 1573(1)]. However, an innocent misrepresentation, if material, may provide grounds for rescission of a contract on the basis of mistake [Crocker-Anglo Nat'l Bank v. Kuchman (1964) 224

CA2d 490, 495, 36 CR 806].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of mistake as a defense to enforcement of a contract, see Ch. 16, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Mistake.

17.18[4] Element of Reliance Is "Relaxed." The reliance element in constructive fraud has been deemed to be "relaxed" to the extent that reliance on one in a position of trust and confidence is presumed absent direct evidence of a lack of reliance [see Estate of Gump (1991) 1 CA4th 582, 601, 2 CR2d 269].

Judge's Perspective--Warning As to "Relaxed" Standard:

Although there is authority to the effect that the reliance requirement is "relaxed" in a constructive fraud claim, the same authority often repeats the requirement that plaintiffs still must show evidence of reliance [see Estate of Gump (1991) 1 CA4th 582, 602, 2 CR2d 269 ("we have found no case nor has any been cited to us in which trustee misconduct has been found fraudulent in the absence of some reliance by and injury to the beneficiary, however attenuated")].

Strategic Point--Party Alleging Constructive Fraud:

Because the existence of a confidential relationship is required for a claim of constructive fraud, the party claiming constructive fraud must allege facts concerning his or her trust and confidence in the other party. Allegations concerning such trust and confidence with respect to the contract at issue should be included and will, in effect, be allegations of reliance [see Jones v. Wagner (2001) 90 CA4th 466, 474 (reliance and causation must be shown)].

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence
IV. ESTABLISHING CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.19

17.19 Party in Whom Confidence Was Placed Must Have Gained Advantage.

17.19[1] Improved Position, Favorable Opportunity, or Other Benefit or Gain Constitute Advantage. The party claiming constructive fraud must allege facts showing an advantage gained by the party in whom confidence was placed [Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 C2d 244, 250, 18 CR 736, 368 P2d 360]. An advantage is obtained if [Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 C2d 244, 250, 18 CR 736, 368 P2d 360]:

- The position of the fiduciary or person in whom confidence is placed is improved;
- The fiduciary or person in whom confidence is placed obtains a favorable opportunity; or
- The fiduciary or person in whom confidence is placed otherwise gains, benefits, or profits.

Jury Instructions:

Advantage Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.63 (Matthew Bender).

17.19[2] Causation and Injury Must Be Shown. The party challenging the existence of a contract should allege facts indicating that consent to the contract would not have been given had constructive fraud not existed [see CC § 1568; Jones v. Wagner (2001) 90 CA4th 466, 474 n3, 108 CR2d 669 (reliance and causation must be shown)].

Constructive fraud involves not only an advantage to the party at fault, but also prejudice to the other party [see CC § 1573(1)]. The party claiming constructive fraud therefore should also allege facts indicating the injury or prejudice suffered because of the fraud [Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 CA3d 879, 890, 124 CR 577].

Strategic Points--Party Alleging Constructive Fraud:

Although a presumption of fraud arises once a confidential relationship and an advantage are shown [see 17.19[3]], a claim of constructive fraud must still comply with the rule that fraud must be alleged with particularity [Feeney v. Howard (1889) 79 C 525, 529, 21 P 984]. Facts indicating the causal connection between one party's breach of duty and the resulting injury to the other party therefore should be alleged, even though the party at fault will then have the burden of proving the fairness of the transaction [see 17.19[3]]. As in cases of actual fraud, when rescission of a contract is sought, the injury may be interference with the defrauded party's interest in making a free choice, so that pecuniary damage is not required [see 17.13].

17.19[3] Party Alleged to Have Gained Advantage Must Prove Fairness of Transaction. If a fiduciary or confidential relationship exists between the parties, and there is a showing of an advantage to one of them in a joint transaction, the transaction is presumptively fraudulent, and the burden shifts to the party gaining the advantage to show good faith and fairness in all regards [Solon v. Lichtenstein (1952) 39 C2d 75, 82, 244 P2d 907 ; Boyd v. Bevilacqua (1966) 247 CA2d 272, 290, 55 CR 610].

V. ESTABLISHING DURESS OR MENACE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.20

17.20 CHECKLIST: Establishing Duress or Menace.

☐ Determine whether party's consent to contract can be challenged on basis of duress or menace due to existence of any of following:

☐ Unlawful acts constituting duress, as specified in CC § 1569:

☐ Unlawful confinement of party, or relative of party;

☐ Unlawful detention of property of party or of a relative of party; or ☐ Confinement of party or relative of party, lawful in form, but fraudulently obtained, or fraudulently made unjustly harassing or oppressive.

Authority:

CC § 1569

Discussion:

See 17.22[1]

☐ Threats or pressure that destroyed party's free agency and constrained party to consent to contract against his or her will.

Authority:

Discussion:

See 17.22[2], [4]

Forms:

See 17.31 (memorandum for party attacking contract), 17.34 (memorandum for party seeking to enforce contract)

☐ Threats, as specified in CC § 1570:

- ☐ Threat of duress, as specified in CC § 1569(1), (3);
- ☐ Threat of unlawful and violent injury to person or property of party or party's relative; or
- ☐ Threat of injury to the character of party or party's relative.

Authority:

CC § 1570

Discussion:

See 17.22[3]

☐ Threats to party's economic interests.

Authority:

Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 C2d 195, 203, 1 CR 12, 347 P2d 12

Discussion:

See 17.23

☐ Determine whether circumstances of case will support an allegation of duress under appropriate standard below:

☐ In cases of duress against person or person's property, duress exists if alleged victim was bereft of free exercise of his or her will in making the contract, in light of means used to produce that state of mind and victim's age, sex, state of health, and mental characteristics.

Authority:

In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1976) 57 CA3d 736, 744, 129 CR 566

Discussion:

See 17.24[1]

☐ In cases of economic duress, duress exists if wrongful act or threat is sufficiently coercive to cause a reasonably prudent person, faced with no reasonable alternative, to agree to an unfavorable contract.

Authority:

Perez v. Uline, Inc. (2007) 157 CA4th 953, 959, 68 CR3d 872

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.21

17.21 Types of Duress or Menace.

Duress or menace consist of any of the following:

- Unlawful acts or threats against a person or person's property, as specified in CC §§ 1569, 1570 [see 17.22[1], [3]].
- Intentional threats or pressure that destroy a person's free agency and constrain that person to do something against his or her will [see 17.22[2]].
- Threats to a person's economic interests [see 17.23].

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence
V. ESTABLISHING DURESS OR MENACE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.22

17.22 Wrongful Acts, Threats, or Coercion Constitute Duress.

17.22[1] Unlawful Acts Specified in CC § 1569 Constitute Duress. The Civil Code defines duress as [CC § 1569]:

- The unlawful confinement of the person of a party, or of a party's husband, wife, ancestor, descendant, or adopted child, or of the ancestor, descendant, or adopted child of the party's husband or wife;
- The unlawful detention of the property of any such person; or
- The confinement of such a person, lawful in form, but fraudulently obtained, or fraudulently made unjustly harassing or oppressive.

17.22[2] Duress Has Been Expanded by Case Law to Include Intentional Threats or Pressure. The courts have expanded the concept of what constitutes duress beyond the limited definition in CC § 1569 [In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1976) 57 CA3d 736, 743, 129 CR 566]. Duress now includes whatever destroys a person's free agency and constrains that person to do something against his or her will [In re Marriage of Baltins (1989) 212 CA3d 66, 84, 260 CR 403]. Duress may be exercised by threats, importunity, or any species of mental coercion [Gross v. Needham (1960) 184 CA2d 446, 461, 7 CR 664].

Examples:

- A husband threatened bankruptcy, actively interfered with the wife obtaining legal counsel, made misrepresentations, and threatened not to see their child to get wife to sign a grossly unfair marital settlement agreement [In re Marriage of Baltins (1989) 212 CA3d 66, 85-86, 260 CR 403].
- A husband threatened and intimidated his wife that, unless she signed a marital settlement agreement, she would lose the children and end up in the street with nothing [In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1976) 57 CA3d 736, 741, 129 CR 566].

- A brother pressured his half sister to execute a deed conveying an interest in her deceased father's property to the brother by falsely representing that she would lose the property if she did not sign the deed [Gross v. Needham (1960) 184 CA2d 446, 461, 7 CR 664].

Jury Instructions:

Affirmative Defense--Duress, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 332 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Traditional Duress or Menace, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.80 (Matthew Bender).

17.22[3] "Menace" Is Defined by CC § 1570, but Often Used Interchangeably With "Duress." The Civil Code defines menace as [CC § 1570]:

- The threat of duress as specified in CC § 1569(1), (3);
- The threat of unlawful and violent injury to the person or property of any person specified in CC § 1569(1); or
- The threat of injury to the character of any person specified in CC § 1569(1).

Although technically different than duress, the term "menace" is often used interchangeably with duress in California [see Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 128, 54 CR 533].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of acts constituting duress under CC § 1569, see 17.22[1].

17.22[4] Threat to Do What One Has Legal Right to Do Is Not Duress or Menace. Threatening to do what one has a legal right to do does not constitute duress or menace [U.S. Hertz, Inc. v. Niobrara Farms (1974) 41 CA3d 68, 81, 116 CR 44]. Therefore, it is not duress to [London Homes, Inc. v. Korn (1965) 234 CA2d 233, 240, 44 CR 262]:

- Take a different, but mistaken, view of one's contractual rights.
- Refuse, in good faith, to proceed with a contract, even though the refusal might later be found to be wrong.
- Take, or threaten to take, legal action. The threat of a civil legal action may constitute duress only if the claims asserted are known to be false [Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 C2d 195, 203-204, 1 CR 12, 347 P2d 12].

Exception--Threat of Criminal Prosecution:

As a matter of public policy, an agreement is obtained under duress if it was obtained under threat of criminal prosecution [Bayscene Resident Negotiators v. Bayscene Mobilehome Park (1993) 15 CA4th 119, 127, 18 CR2d 626]. An attorney negotiating an settlement agreement with opposing counsel must be particularly cautious about mentioning criminal acts during the course of settlement discussions.

Strategic Point--Possible Undue Influence:

Even if party has a right to threaten a civil action, his or her conduct in making such threats nonetheless may constitute undue influence under the circumstances of the case [see Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 135, 54 CR 533].

Example:

A school district threatened to initiate suspension and dismissal proceedings against a teacher because of an arrest if he did not resign. Because the school district was entitled to initiate such proceedings, the threat to do so did not constitute duress. However, because the school district obtained the resignation through overpersuasion and imposition, the teacher could state a claim that his consent to the resignation had been obtained through the use of undue influence [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 135, 54 CR 533].

V. ESTABLISHING DURESS OR MENACE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.23

17.23 Threats to Economic Interests May Constitute Duress.

Under modern case law, duress is not limited to threats against a person or acts of mental coercion. Threats to business or property interests also may constitute duress [Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 C2d 195, 203, 1 CR 12, 347 P2d 12]. The question of duress is a factual question; the existence of duress always depends upon the circumstances [Krantz v. BT Visual Images, L.L.C. (2001) 89 CA4th 164, 176, 107 CR2d 209].

Examples:

- Defendant employer terminated plaintiff's employment and offered him a severance agreement that provided six weeks' salary in exchange for a release of all claims against defendant. Plaintiff signed the agreement but later claimed that his agreement was obtained through economic duress because defendant knew, but failed to tell him, that the reason for his termination was wrongful, and because he was in the position of receiving no money if he did not accept the agreement or only a small amount if he did accept, without knowing why he was being discharged. The court held that the plaintiff had not shown economic duress. There was no evidence the defendant knew it owed plaintiff money in addition to what was paid and used the agreement to avoid paying an acknowledged debt. Nor was there evidence plaintiff was on the verge of bankruptcy, the six weeks' salary was inequitably low, or plaintiff was forced to accept the settlement amount to stave off financial disaster [Perez v. Uline, Inc. (2007) 157 CA4th 953, 959-960, 68 CR3d 872].

- Defendants hired plaintiff to perform grading and excavating work at a building site. Although defendants paid several invoices submitted by plaintiff as the work progressed, they refused to pay the final invoice. Defendants knew that plaintiff was a new company, and that it would be unable to pay its subcontractors if it did not receive the final payment. Defendants presented plaintiff with an agreement and release to comprise the final payment for a lesser amount. Plaintiff signed the agreement, which it characterized as "blackmail," received the lesser payment, and filed an action for breach of contract. Because plaintiff had signed the agreement and release only to avoid bankruptcy, the agreement and release were products of economic duress and not enforceable against the plaintiff [Rich & Whillock, Inc. v. Ashton Dev., Inc. (1984) 157 CA3d 1154, 1160-1161, 204 CR 86].

● The defendant city refused to grant plaintiffs a building permit unless they purchased easements for light, air, and access over a plaza constructed by the city, or revised their plans. To obtain the permit and expedite the building process, plaintiffs purchased the easements. However, the plaza constituted a street over which plaintiffs' lot was entitled to easements by operation of law. The contract for purchase of the easements therefore was entered into under economic duress. Plaintiffs were entitled to rescission and a refund of the purchase price [Short Line Assocs. v. City & County of San Francisco (1978) 78 CA3d 50, 59, 143 CR 921].

V. ESTABLISHING DURESS OR MENACE

17.24 Standard for Determining Duress.

17.24[1] Traditional Duress Is Evaluated Under Subjective Standard. Although case law has been divided regarding the appropriate test for duress, traditional duress generally is tested not by the nature of the threats, but by the state of mind induced in the victim [In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1976) 57 CA3d 736, 744, 129 CR 566]. The means used to produce that state of mind and the age, sex, state of health, and mental characteristics of the alleged victim are all considered to determine whether the alleged victim was bereft of the free exercise of his or her will in making the contract [In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1976) 57 CA3d 736, 744, 129 CR 566].

17.24[2] Economic Duress Is Evaluated Under Objective Standard. Economic duress exists if a wrongful act or threat is sufficiently coercive to cause a reasonably prudent person, faced with no reasonable alternative, to agree to an unfavorable contract [Perez v. Uline, Inc. (2007) 157 CA4th 953, 959, 68 CR3d 872]. The nonexistence of a "reasonable alternative" is a question of fact [CrossTalk Prods., Inc. v. Jacobson (1998) 65 CA4th 631, 644, 76 CR2d 615]. If there is insufficient evidence to create a triable issue of fact as to economic duress, the court may decide the issue on summary judgment [see Myerchin v. Family Benefits, Inc. (2008) 162 CA4th 1526, 1539, 76 CR3d 816 (mere fact that plaintiff felt he needed to be paid on his disputed claim as soon as possible, and chose to take less in settlement than he might have ultimately recovered in litigation, does not create a triable issue of economic duress)].

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence
VI. ESTABLISHING UNDUE INFLUENCE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.26

17.26 Conduct That Constitutes Undue Influence.

Undue influence consists of any of the following:

- Use, by one in whom a confidence is reposed by another, or who holds a real or apparent authority over another, of that confidence or authority for the purpose of obtaining an unfair advantage [CC § 1575(1)].
- Taking advantage of another's weakness of mind [CC § 1575(2)].
- Taking a grossly oppressive and unfair advantage of another's necessities or distress [CC § 1575(3)].

Strategic Point--Party Claiming Undue Influence:

The three types of undue influence specified in CC § 1575 are not mutually exclusive. The party claiming undue influence should allege all types of undue influence indicated by the facts of the particular case.

Example:

Two women had a friendship of long duration. Over time, one woman came to rely heavily on the other woman and her husband, enlisted their help in finding an attorney to draft her will, and executed a deed giving them an interest in her real property. The evidence supported a finding of a confidential relationship between the grantor and the grantees. The evidence also indicated that the grantor was susceptible to imposition because of her age and mental infirmity. Undue influence existed in the transaction both because of the misuse of the confidential relationship and the unfair advantage taken of the grantor's weakness of mind [O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 CA3d 147, 153, 119 CR 245].

VI. ESTABLISHING UNDUE INFLUENCE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.27

17.27 Undue Influence May Be Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship or Authority.

17.27[1] Misrepresentations or Concealment Are Not Required. Undue influence based on the misuse of a confidential relationship or authority to obtain an advantage over another has been characterized as a species of constructive fraud [O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 CA3d 147, 158, 119 CR 245]. However, unlike constructive fraud, it does not require any misrepresentations or concealment [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 130, 54 CR 533].

Discussion of the existence of a confidential relationship between the parties, see 17.17.

17.27[2] Advantage to Party in Position of Confidence or Authority Raises Presumption of Undue Influence.

If a substantial benefit has been obtained by a person in a position of confidence or authority over another, a presumption arises that there was undue influence in the transaction [Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 C2d 147, 151, 272 P2d 11].

An advantage exists if, because of the transaction, the party in a position of confidence or authority [Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 C2d 244, 250, 18 CR 736, 368 P2d 360]:

- Has an improvement in position;
- Obtains a favorable opportunity; or

- Otherwise gains, benefits, or profits.

Distinguish:

In interspousal transactions, which are governed by Fam C § 721(b), the presumption of undue influence arises only when one spouse obtains an unfair advantage over the other [In re Marriage of Burkle (2006) 139 CA4th 712, 733-734, 43 CR3d 181] .

17.27[3] Party in Position of Confidence or Authority Has Burden of Proving Free Consent and Understanding. If one party is shown to be in a position of confidence and authority, and an advantage to that party is shown, the burden shifts to the benefitted party to show that the contract was made freely, voluntarily, with full knowledge of all facts, and with perfect understanding of the effect of the contract [Wilbur v. Wilbur (1925) 197 C 1, 15, 239 P 332 ; Webb v. Saunders (1949) 89 CA2d 732, 735, 201 P2d 816].

Generally, proof that the party claiming undue influence had independent advice before entering into the contract is not required, but the presence or lack of independent advice is a circumstance to be considered [Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 C2d 147, 153, 272 P2d 11 ; Nagle v. Valadez (1962) 202 CA2d 51, 55, 20 CR 548].

Chapter 17 Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Fraud, Duress, Menace, and Undue Influence
VI. ESTABLISHING UNDUE INFLUENCE

1-17 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 17.28

17.28 Undue Influence May Exist When No Confidential Relationship Exists.

17.28[1] Undue Influence May Consist of Undue Susceptibility of Victim, Use of Excessive Pressure, or Both. Undue influence may consist of either or both of the following [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 131-132, 54 CR 533]:

- The undue susceptibility to influence of the party challenging the contract; or
- The use of excessive pressure by the other party.

Strategic Point--Party Claiming Undue Influence:

Undue influence based on the victim's susceptibility or the other party's use of excessive pressure may be alleged when a confidential relationship exists, even though such a relationship is not required. However, if a confidential relationship does in fact exist, undue influence based on misuse of that relationship should be alleged, if appropriate, to raise the presumption of undue influence and to shift the burden of showing the fairness of the transaction to the other party [see 17.27[3]]. The presumption does not arise in cases not involving a confidential relationship, and in those cases the victim bears the burden of proving undue influence.

Cross Reference:

Discussion of presumption of undue influence when confidential relationship exists, and burden of proving fairness, see 17.27[2], [3].

Jury Instructions:

Affirmative Defense--Undue Influence, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 334 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Undue Influence Absent Confidential Relationship, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.67 (Matthew Bender).

17.28[2] Undue Susceptibility Need Not Be Wholly Incapacitating. Undue susceptibility may consist of any of the following [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 131, 54 CR 533]:

- Total weakness of mind that leaves a person entirely without understanding [CC § 38].
- A lesser weakness that destroys the capacity of a person to make a contract, even though he or she is not totally incapacitated [CC § 39].
- A still lesser weakness that provides sufficient grounds to rescind the contract [CC § 1575(2), (3)], such as a lack of full vigor due to age, physical condition, emotional anguish, or a combination of those factors.

Such a lesser weakness need not be long-lasting nor wholly incapacitating [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 131, 54 CR 533].

Example:

A teacher sought to rescind his resignation, which the school district had requested shortly after he was arrested on criminal charges of homosexual activity. He alleged that when he signed the resignation, he had just completed the process of arrest, questioning, booking, and release on bail, and had been without sleep for forty hours. His allegations were sufficient to state a claim of undue influence because exhaustion and emotional turmoil may have incapacitated him from exercising his judgment [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 131-132, 54 CR 533].

Strategic Point--Party Challenging Contract:

Total incapacity to make a contract renders a contract void [CC § 38]. An unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding, renders a contract rescindable without proof of undue influence [CC § 39]. Neither of those circumstances require the party challenging the contract to show that the other party took an unfair advantage of his or her condition. In contrast, if a party seeks to rescind the contract on the basis of undue influence, an unfair advantage taken by the opposing party also must be shown [see CC § 1575(2), (3)]. Counsel should consider pleading lack of capacity and undue influence in the alternative.

Cross Reference:

Discussion of challenging a contract because of lack of capacity, see Ch. 14, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity.

Jury Instructions:

Weakness of Mind Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.68 (Matthew Bender).

Lack of Understanding as to Nature of Transaction, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.69 (Matthew Bender).

17.28[3] Use of Excessive Pressure Results in "Overpersuasion."

17.28[3][a] Overpersuasion Approaches Coercion. The use of excessive pressure results in "overpersuasion," which tends to be coercive in nature [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 130, 54 CR 533]. The use of excessive pressure by one party over the other overcomes the will without convincing the judgment [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 130, 54 CR 533]. The weaker party may also have an undue susceptibility to such pressure because of physical or emotional exhaustion or anguish which results in an inability to act with unencumbered volition [Odorizzi v. Bloomfield Sch. Dist. (1966) 246 CA2d 123, 131, 54 CR 533].

17.28[3][b] Indicators of Overpersuasion Must Be Present. Overpersuasion is generally accompanied by certain characteristic elements which, when simultaneously present in a significant number, characterize the persuasion as excessive. These elements are [Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 CA3d 443, 452, 89 CR 809]:

- Discussion of the transaction at an unusual or inappropriate time.
- Consummation of the transaction in an unusual place.
- Insistent demand that the business be finished at once.
- Extreme emphasis on untoward consequences of delay.
- The use of multiple persuaders by the dominant side against a single servient party.
- Absence of third-party advisers to the servient party.
- Statements that there is no time to consult financial advisers or attorneys.

Example:

A police officer's resignation following rape charges against him was found to be coerced because of undue influence by a superior officer. The facts indicated, among other things, that the resignation was the result of overpersuasion. The officer was called to police headquarters for three consecutive days, was kept waiting for long periods of time, was interrogated by more than one person, and was repeatedly asked what he was going to do, without being given any time to consider what he was going to do [Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 CA3d 443, 452, 89 CR 809].

 Cross Reference:

Memorandum concerning characteristic elements of excessive pressure, see 17.32.

17.28[4] Existence of Undue Influence Is Question of Fact. The existence of undue influence depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular case [Sparks v. Sparks (1950) 101 CA2d 129, 135, 225 P2d 238]. Direct evidence of undue influence is rarely obtainable; a court normally determines the issue from the totality of the circumstances [Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 CA3d 443, 451, 89 CR 809].

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant denies each and every allegation of the Complaint, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege affirmative defenses as appropriate, e.g.,]

[EITHER, if alleging actual fraud based on intentional or negligent misrepresentations of fact]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Actual Fraud-- _____ [Intentional or Negligent] Misrepresentation)

2. The apparent consent of Defendant _____ [name] to the contract referred to in the complaint was not real, mutual, or free in that it was obtained through fraud, as herein alleged.

3. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [name] falsely and fraudulently represented to Defendant _____ [name] that _____ [specify with particularity statements made by Plaintiff].

4. The representations made by Plaintiff _____ [name] were false. The true facts were as follows: _____ [specify].

5. When Plaintiff _____ [name] made these representations, he/she _____ [knew them to be false or had no reasonable grounds for believing them to be true].

6. Plaintiff _____ [name] made these representations with the intent [to deceive and] to induce Defendant _____ [name] to enter into the contract.

7. Defendant _____ [name] relied on the truth of the representations in entering into the contract. Defendant _____ [name] would not have given his/her apparent consent to the contract had it not been for the fraud. The reliance of Defendant _____ [name] was justified because _____ [specify].

8. As a result of the fraud, Defendant _____ [name] was injured in that _____ [specify injury].

[AND/OR, if alleging actual fraud based on concealment of material fact:]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Actual Fraud--Concealment of Material Fact)

2. The apparent consent of Defendant _____ [name] to the contract referred to in the complaint was not real, mutual, or free in that it was obtained through fraud, as herein alleged.

3. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [name] _____ [intentionally concealed a material fact from Defendant or failed to disclose a material fact to Defendant], thereby creating a false representation, in that _____ [specify with particularity the fact concealed by Plaintiff and the resulting false representation].

4. Plaintiff _____ [name] had a duty to disclose the concealed fact because _____ [the parties were in a fiduciary relationship or the failure to disclose that fact made other representations made by Plaintiff misleading or Plaintiff actively concealed the undisclosed fact or the undisclosed fact was known only to Plaintiff and was not discoverable by Defendant].

5. Plaintiff _____ [name] concealed this fact with the intent [to deceive and] to induce Defendant _____ [name] to enter into the contract.

6. Defendant _____ [name] was unaware of the undisclosed fact and reasonably relied on Plaintiff's deception in entering into the contract. Defendant _____ [name] would not have given his/her apparent consent to the contract had it not been for the fraud. The reliance of Defendant _____ [name] was justified because _____ [specify].

7. As a result of the fraud, Defendant _____ [name] was injured in that _____ [specify injury].

[AND/OR, if alleging actual fraud based on a promise made without intention of performing it]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Actual Fraud--Promise Without Intention to Perform)

2. The apparent consent of Defendant _____ [name] to the contract referred to in the complaint was not real, mutual, or free in that it was obtained through fraud, as herein alleged.

3. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [name] falsely and fraudulently promised Defendant _____ [name] that _____ [specify with particularity the promise made by Plaintiff].

4. Defendant _____ [name] is informed and believes, and thereon alleges that the promise made by

Plaintiff _____ [name] was made without any intention of performing it, in that _____ [specify facts indicating intention not to perform, other than fact of nonperformance].

5. Defendant _____ [name] is informed and believes, and thereon alleges that Plaintiff _____ [name] made this promise with the intent [to deceive and] to induce Defendant _____ [name] to enter into the contract.

6. Defendant _____ [name] relied on the promise in entering into the contract. Defendant _____ [name] would not have given his/her apparent consent to the contract had it not been for the fraud. The reliance of Defendant _____ [name] was justified because _____ [specify].

7. As a result of the fraud, Defendant _____ [name] was injured in that _____ [specify injury].

[AND/OR, if alleging constructive fraud based on the existence of a fiduciary or confidential relationship between the parties]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Constructive Fraud)

2. The apparent consent of Defendant _____ [name] to the contract referred to in the complaint was not real, mutual, or free in that it was obtained through constructive fraud, as herein alleged.

3. A _____ [fiduciary or confidential] relationship existed between Plaintiff _____ [name] and Defendant _____ [name] in that _____ [specify nature of fiduciary relationship or facts indicating existence of confidential relationship].

4. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [specify with particularity the facts of the transaction, including trust and confidence placed in Plaintiff by Defendant concerning transaction, and Plaintiff's breach of duty, such as failing to fully disclose facts of transaction].

5. Plaintiff _____ [name] gained an advantage from the contract between the parties by misleading Defendant _____ [name] to his/her prejudice in that _____ [specify advantage gained by Plaintiff and prejudice to Defendant].

6. Defendant _____ [name] would not have given his/her apparent consent to the contract had it not been for the fraud.

[AND/OR, if alleging duress or menace]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Duress)

2. The apparent consent of Defendant _____ [name] to the contract referred to in the complaint was not real, mutual, or free in that it was obtained through duress, as herein alleged.

3. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [name] _____ [specify facts indicating unlawful acts or threats made by Plaintiff that deprived Defendant of the exercise of his/her free will].

4. Such _____ [unlawful acts or threats] deprived Defendant _____ [name] of his/her free will, and he/she would not have given his/her consent to the contract had it not been for the duress.

[AND/OR, if alleging undue influence in a confidential relationship]

SIXTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Undue Influence Based on Confidential Relationship)

2. The apparent consent of Defendant _____ [name] to the contract referred to in the complaint was not real, mutual, or free in that it was obtained through undue influence, as herein alleged.

3. A _____ [fiduciary or confidential] relationship existed between Plaintiff _____ [name] and Defendant _____ [name] in that _____ [specify nature of fiduciary relationship or facts indicating existence of confidential relationship].

4. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [specify with particularity facts of transaction, including trust and confidence placed in Plaintiff by Defendant concerning transaction, and Plaintiff's use of that confidence in effecting the transaction].

5. Plaintiff _____ [name] gained an unfair advantage over Defendant _____ [name] from the contract in that _____ [specify advantage gained by Plaintiff].

6. Defendant _____ [name] would not have given his/her apparent consent to the contract had it not been for the undue influence of Plaintiff.

[AND/OR, if alleging undue influence because of Defendant's weakness of mind or distress and Plaintiff's use of excess pressure]

SEVENTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Undue Influence--Excess Pressure)

2. The apparent consent of Defendant _____ [name] to the contract referred to in the complaint was not real, mutual, or free in that it was obtained through undue influence, as herein alleged.

3. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [name] and Defendant _____ [name] _____ [describe transaction].

4. At the time of the transaction, Defendant _____ [name] _____ [specify facts indicating weakness of mind or distress, such as age, infirmity, emotional strain].

5. While Defendant _____[name] was in this condition and unable to think clearly, _____[specify circumstances indicating excessive pressure resulting in "overpersuasion," such as insistent demand that business be finished at one or absence of third-party advisers] .

6. Plaintiff _____[name] took an unfair advantage of Defendant's _____[weakness of mind or distress] in that _____[specify facts concerning unfair advantage].

7. Defendant _____[name] would not have given his/her apparent consent to the contract had it not been for the undue influence of Plaintiff.

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party attacking the contract]

[EITHER]

_____[PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S]
INTENTIONAL FAILURE TO DISCLOSE A MATERIAL FACT CONSTITUTED FRAUD BECAUSE OF THE FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE PARTIES

Fiduciary Has Duty of Disclosure. The intentional failure to disclose a material fact is actionable fraud if there is a fiduciary relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose it (Black v. Shearson, Hammill & Co. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 362, 367, 72 Cal. Rptr. 157).

[OR]

_____[PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S]
INTENTIONAL FAILURE TO DISCLOSE A MATERIAL FACT CONSTITUTED FRAUD

Duty to Disclose Exists When Nondisclosure Is Misleading. A duty to disclose exists, absent a fiduciary relationship, when a party has made representations that were likely to mislead for want of the disclosures (Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 346-347, 134 Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737).

[OR]

_____[PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S]

INTENTIONAL FAILURE TO DISCLOSE A MATERIAL FACT CONSTITUTED FRAUD

Active Concealment Gives Rise to Actionable Fraud. A duty to disclose exists, absent a fiduciary relationship, and failure to do so gives rise to actionable fraud, when a party has actively concealed undisclosed matters (Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 346-347, 134 Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737).

[OR]

_____[PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S]

INTENTIONAL FAILURE TO DISCLOSE A MATERIAL FACT CONSTITUTED FRAUD

Duty to Disclose Exists When Party Has Sole Knowledge or Access. A duty to disclose exists, absent a fiduciary relationship, when a party has sole knowledge or access to material facts and knows that these facts are not known to or reasonably discoverable by the other party (Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 347, 134 Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737).

[EITHER]

_____[PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S]
THREAT OF A CIVIL ACTION CONSTITUTED DURESS BECAUSE HE/SHE KNEW THE CLAIMS ASSERTED WERE FALSE

Party Has No Right to Make False Claims. The threat of a civil legal action constitutes duress if the claims asserted are known to be false (Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 203-204, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12).

[OR]

_____[PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S]

_____ DEFENDANT'S] [THREAT TO EXERCISE or EXERCISE OF] A LEGAL RIGHT CANNOT CONSTITUTE DURESS

A. Threat or Exercise of Legal Right Is Not Duress. Threatening to do what one has a legal right to do does not constitute duress or menace (U.S. Hertz, Inc. v. Niobrara Farms (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 68, 81, 116 Cal. Rptr. 44).

[ADD, if appropriate]

B. Right to Different View of Contractual Rights. It is not duress to take a different view of one's contractual rights, even if that view was mistaken (London Homes, Inc. v. Korn (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 240, 44 Cal. Rptr. 262).

[ADD, if appropriate]

C. Right to Refuse to Proceed With Contract. It is not duress to refuse, in good faith, to proceed with a contract, even though the refusal might later be found to be wrong (London Homes, Inc. v. Korn (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 240, 44 Cal. Rptr. 262).

[ADD, if appropriate]

D. Right to Take Legal Action. It is not duress to take, or threaten to take, legal action one is entitled to take (London Homes, Inc. v. Korn (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 240, 44 Cal. Rptr. 262).

18.06[7] Agreements Calling for Usurious Rate of Interest Are Voidable.

18.06[8] Agreements Providing for Excessive Penalties or Limitations on Damages May Be Invalid.

18.06[9] Agreements Providing for Pre-Dispute Waiver of Jury Trial Are Invalid.

18.07 CHECKLIST: Asserting or Defending Invalidity of Contract or Contract Provision Violates Public Policy.

18.08 Options and Strategies.

18.09 Elements of Claim for Invalidity on Public Policy Grounds.

18.10 Contracts Contrary to Public Policy Harm Moral or Social Imperative in Society.

18.11 Contracts Violating Public Policy Generally Are Void, Not Voidable.

18.12 Contract Provision Contrary to Public Policy May Be Severable.

18.13 CHECKLIST: Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract or Provision Is Unconscionable.

18.14 Options and Strategies.

18.15 Elements of Claim of Unconscionability.

18.15[1] Unconscionability Is Determined As of Time Contract Is Made.

18.15[2] Unconscionability Is Question of Law.

18.15[3] Both Procedural and Substantive Unconscionability Must Exist.

18.15[4] Procedural Unconscionability Is Established by Showing Contract of Adhesion, Use of Surprise, or Unequal Bargaining Power.

18.15[4][a] Adhesion Contract Usually Has At Least a Minimum Degree of Procedural Unconscionability.

18.15[4][b] Surprise or Oppression Also May Cause Procedural Unconscionability.

18.15[4][c] Courts Can Infer Procedural Unconscionability From Substantive Unconscionability.

18.15[5] Substantive Unconscionability Generally Is Shown Through Presence of Wholly One-Sided Term.

18.15[5][a] Wholly One-Sided Term Generally Sufficient to Show Substantive Unconscionability.

18.15[5][b] Courts Sometimes Require That Substantive Unconscionability Must "Shock the Conscience."

18.15[5][c] Substantive Unconscionability Generally Is Not Inferred From Procedural Unconscionability.

18.16 Agreements Providing for Arbitration or Referee Are Scrutinized Under Special Criteria.

18.16[1] Agreements That Are Not One-Sided Will Likely Be Enforced With Possible Procedural Guarantees.

18.16[2] Arbitration Cases Are Governed by Federal Arbitration Act.

18.16[3] Arbitration Agreements Are Likely Subject to Procedural Requirements in Cases of Public or Statutory Rights.

18.16[4] Particular Terms of Agreement May Be Held Invalid.

18.16[4][a] Arbitration of Only One Party's Claims Are Invalid.

18.16[4][b] Requiring Sharing of Arbitration Costs May Be Invalid.

18.16[4][c] Arbitral Appeal or Review of Award Exceeding Specific Amount Probably Is Invalid.

18.16[4][d] Provisions for Non-Neutral Arbitrators Are Invalid.

18.16[4][e] Some Provisions Limiting Discovery May Be Voidable.

18.16[4][f] Courts Will Deny Arbitration As to Injunctive Relief Relating to Public Statutory Rights.

18.16[4][g] Limitations on Amount or Type of Damages Recoverable May Be Invalid.

18.16[4][h] Shortened Statute of Limitations May Be Invalid.

18.17 Forum Selection Provisions May Be Held Invalid.

18.18 Provisions Prohibiting Maintenance of Class Actions Are Likely Invalid.

18.19 Courts Will Seek to Sever Unconscionable Contract Terms.

18.20 CHECKLIST: Determining Enforceability Based Upon Severability and Public Policy Considerations.

18.21 Options and Strategies.

18.22 Severability May Determine Whether Other Provisions of Contract May Be Enforceable.

18.22[1] Contract Is Void If Sole Object of Contract Is Illegal.

18.22[2] If Contract Has Multiple Objects, Court May Sever Illegal Parts and Respective Consideration.

18.22[3] Policy Regarding Severability Is Followed in Unconscionable Contracts and Contracts Violating Public Policy.

18.23 Consequences of Impermissible Contract or Term Depend on Equities.

18.23[1] Contract May Be Void If Parties Are Equally at Fault.

18.23[2] Contract May Be Voidable at Option of Less Responsible Party.

18.23[2][a] Malum in Se Is Contrary to Morals and Is Always Void.

18.23[2][b] Malum Prohibitum Is Contrary to Statute Only.

18.23[3] If Illegality, Unconscionability, or Public Policy Preclude Enforcement of Contract, Quantum Meruit Recovery May Still Be Available.

18.24 CHECKLIST: Evaluating Strategy for Asserting or Defending Claims of Illegality, Violation of Public Policy, or Unconscionability.

18.25 Options and Strategies.

18.26 Party Seeking to Affirm or Deny Validity of Contract or Contract Provision May Seek Declaratory Judgment.

18.26[1] Affirming or Denying Validity of Contract or Contract Provision in General.

18.26[2] Moving to Set Aside or Define Terms of Arbitration or Challenging Arbitral Award on Grounds of Illegality, Violation of Public Policy, or Unconscionability.

18.27 Validity Should Be Challenged in Answer or on Demurrer.

18.28 Summary Judgment Appropriate If Issue Is One of Law.

18.29 Complaint for Declaratory Judgment That Contract or Contract Term Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

Complaint for Declaratory Judgment That Contract or Contract Term Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

I. STRATEGY

2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.01

AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley

18.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Objective and strategy for asserting or defending a claim that a contract or term is illegal, contrary to public policy, or unconscionable [see 18.02].
- Asserting or defending a claim that a contract or contract provision is illegal [see 18.03 -18.06].
- Categories of contracts in which legality issues frequently arise [see 18.06].
- Asserting or defending a claim that a contract or term is invalid because it is contrary to public policy [see 18.07 -18.12].
- Asserting or defending a claim that a contract or contract term is unconscionable [see 18.13 -18.19].
- Determining enforceability based on severability and public policy considerations [see 18.20 -18.23].
- Procedural aspects of asserting or defending claims of illegality, violation of public policy, or unconscionability [see 18.24 -18.28].

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
I. STRATEGY

*2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.02AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley18.02 Objective and Strategy.

When a court finds that a contract is contrary to law or public policy, or is unconscionable, it may choose not to enforce the contract. An illegal contract is void or voidable [see 18.05[1]].

Thus, a party seeking to avoid a contract will want to examine carefully whether a contract or provision of a contract is contrary to a law or policy [see 18.03 -18.06], or contrary to a broader set of "public policies" [see 18.07 -18.12]. Because case law regarding illegality of contract is often stronger than case law on public policy, reliance on the doctrine of illegality usually is preferable. A party will want to determine if cases prohibiting exculpatory clauses under CC §§ 1668 and 3513 may be applicable [see 18.06[1]].

A party opposing a contract also will want to examine whether a contract or provision is so unfairly one-sided as to be unconscionable [see generally 18.13 -18.19]. Although unconscionability often is asserted by the weaker contracting party in the context of a "contract of adhesion," this is not always the case [see 18.15[4]]. Agreements to arbitrate are often subject to particular scrutiny under this doctrine [see 18.16].

A party seeking to enforce a contract will want to challenge any assertion that all or any part of the contract is illegal. Such a party should point to cases in which courts have asserted that unconscionability is limited to contracts or provisions that "shock the conscience" [see 18.15[5][b]]. Such a party also may want to rely on case law in which contracts were enforced despite their illegality [see 18.23], and on the significant body of precedent severing portions of contracts as unenforceable but giving effect to the remaining terms [see 18.22].

18.03 CHECKLIST: Asserting or Defending Claim of Illegality of Contract or Contract Provision.

☐ Determine whether claim of illegality may exist because:

☐ Either an object, or some or all of consideration for contract, was unlawful.

Authority:

CC §§ 1596, 1607

Discussion:

See 18.05[1]

☐ Contract or term was contrary to either:

☐ Statute.

☐ Policy of statute.

☐ Good morals.

Authority:

CC § 1667

Discussion:

See 18.05[2], 18.07

☐ If illegality is present, assess remedies based on whether illegality existed at time contract was made.

☐ Contract that was illegal at time of making is void or voidable.

Authority:

CC §§ 1596, 1550(3)

Discussion:

See 18.05[4]

☐ If opposing contract made illegal by subsequent events, argue that performance is excused and, if appropriate, that public policy precludes enforcement of contract.

Authority:

CC § 1511(1)

Discussion:

See 18.05[4]

☐ Assess whether illegal term may be severable.

Authority:

CC §§ 1598, 1599

Discussion:

See 18.05[5]

☐ Evaluate whether contract or term falls within recurring categories of cases in which illegality has been identified.

☐ Does contract attempt to exempt a party from responsibility for fraud, willful injury to person or property, or violation of law?

☐ Is right being waived a "public" right?

Authority:

CC § 3513; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 100

Discussion:

See 18.06[1][a]

- ☐ Assess whether any exculpatory clause is specifically prohibited by any statute.

Authority:

CC §§ 1751, 2782, 2784.5; Ins Code § 533

Discussion:

See 18.06[1][f]

- ☐ Determine if contract contemplates or condones illegal activity.

- ☐ Review whether agreement calls for performance of contract in California by party not properly licensed in California.

Authority:

B&P Code §§ 143, 7031; Hydrotech Sys., Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 C3d 988, 998-999; MW Erectors, Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental & Metal Works Co., Inc. (2005) 36 C4th 412, 419

Discussion:

See 18.06[2][a]

- ☐ Examine whether agreement improperly requires that party not disclose illegal behavior.

Authority:

Cariveau v. Halferty (2000) 83 CA4th 126, 135

Discussion:

See 18.06[2][b]

- ☐ Consider whether agreement improperly restrains trade.

Discussion:

See 18.06[3][a] -[d]

☐ In appropriate circumstances, review whether agreement clearly prevents a possible marriage or tends to cause dissolution of an existing marriage.

☐ If agreement contains cohabitation agreement, decide if it is expressly based on illicit consideration.

Authority:

Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 C3d 660, 672

Discussion:

See 18.06[4][a]

☐ If agreement may tend to dissolve a marriage or lead to divorce, determine if it facilitates or encourages that result.

Authority:

In re Marriage of Pendleton & Fireman (2000) 24 C4th 39, 46

Discussion:

See 18.06[4][b]

☐ Review whether agreement may lead to obstruction of justice by affecting testimony, barring prosecution, or improperly constraining settlement.

Authority:

☐ If agreement is with public body, evaluate if it was properly authorized and prepare appropriate argument regarding remedies if necessary.

☐ Review whether public body generally had authority to enter into agreement under statutes and state constitution.

Authority:

Cal Const, art XVI, §§ 1, 18(a); Gov Code §§ 1090, 1091, 1091.5; G.L. Mezzetta, Inc. v. City of American Canyon (2000) 78 CA4th 1087, 1093-1094, 93 CR2d 292

Discussion:

See 18.06[6]

☐ In cases involving debt limitation, determine whether nonpublic client wishes to establish legal rights without seeking monetary recovery in excess of limitation.

Authority:

Barkley v. City of Blue Lake (1996) 47 CA4th 309, 314, 54 CR2d 679

Discussion:

See 18.06[6][c]

☐ Assess availability of argument that nonperforming party receiving benefit of other's performance has been unjustly enriched.

Authority:

Thomson v. Call (1985) 38 C3d 633, 647, 214 CR 139, 699 P2d 316

Discussion:

See 18.06[6][a]

☐ If agreement was for high rate of interest, assess whether it may be challenged as usurious or unconscionable.

☐ If agreement's interest rate was usurious, determine if it was exempted under state constitution or by statute.

Authority:

Cal Const, art XVI, 1

Discussion:

See 18.06[7]

☐ If interest rate is excepted by state constitution or statute, determine if it nevertheless may be unconscionable.

Authority:

Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 CA4th 76, 83-84, 2 CR2d 845

Discussion:

See 18.15[5][a]

☐ If agreement provides for liquidated damages, assess whether liquidated damages provision may be invalidated.

☐ Determine whether special statute provides standard for evaluating validity of provision.

Authority:

CC § 1671(a)

Discussion:

See 18.06[8]

☐ If not, determine whether contract was "consumer contract" or residential lease.

Authority:

CC § 1671(c); Hitz v. First Interstate Bank (1995) 38 CA4th 274, 278

Discussion:

See 18.06[8]

If contract is one of these, argue that proponent has burden of showing that clause was warranted because it would have been impracticable or unreasonable to ascertain actual damages.

Authority:

CC § 1671(d); Orozco v. Casimiro (2004) 121 CA4th Supp 7, 12

Discussion:

See 18.06[8]

If contract is not residential lease, consumer contract, or governed by specific law to the contrary, argue that opponent bears burden of proving clause was unreasonable when made.

Authority:

CC § 1671(b)

Discussion:

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
 II. ASSERTING OR DEFENDING CLAIM OF ILLEGALITY OF CONTRACT OR CONTRACT PROVISION

*2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.04AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley18.04 Options and Strategies.

To be enforceable, a contract in California must have a legal object [CC § 1596]. Without a lawful object, the contract lacks an essential element [CC § 1550(3)]. Thus, to make a claim under a contract, it is essential show that the contract is lawful. Conversely, it sometimes may be essential to a party seeking to avoid performance under a contract to be able to show that it is not.

Strategic Point:

Because a party bears the burden of proof as to each element of a claim [Evid Code § 500], a party refusing to perform on grounds of illegality may have some incentive to wait until the proponent of the contract seeks enforcement. However, this incentive must be balanced against the benefits of certainty.

Judge's Perspective:

Although it is true that the party asserting illegality bears the burden of proof, in most cases illegality will be a legal issue that can be resolved on the face of the contract. In addition, in exchange for the chance that the other side might not seek enforcement, the party asserting illegality accepts the risk of a lawsuit in which (1) it has to prove illegality anyway, as it would if it had filed for declaratory relief, and (2) it now finds itself in the position of defendant, where its illegality claim looks defensive and potentially less persuasive.

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
 II. ASSERTING OR DEFENDING CLAIM OF ILLEGALITY OF CONTRACT OR CONTRACT PROVISION

*2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.05AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley18.05 Illegal Contract Is Unenforceable.

18.05[1] Contract Must Have Lawful Object and Lawful Consideration. To be enforceable under California law, a contract must have a legal object [CC § 1550(3)]. Both the object of a contract [CC § 1596] and its consideration [CC § 1607] must be lawful for a contract to be enforced [Howell v. City of Hamburg Co. (1913) 165 C 172, 176, 131 P 130 (lease of land void when it was premised on construction of structure on land in question and city charter prohibited such construction)]. The object of the contract must be lawful at the time the contract was made [CC § 1596]. An illegal contract is void and cannot be ratified by any subsequent act [Black Hills Investments, Inc. v. Albertson's, Inc. (2007) 146 CA4th 883, 896, 53 CR3d 263].

Exceptions:

When a party who is equally at fault seeks to disaffirm a void contract contrary to good morals and there is no strong public interest in voiding the contract, it may be enforced despite its illegality [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 347]. Moreover, when a contract has multiple objects, and not all of them are illegal, the court may sever the offending provision and corresponding consideration [CC § 1608].

 Cross References:

Discussion of illegal consideration and other types of illegal contracts held invalid, see 18.06.

Discussion of party in pari delicto not being permitted to disaffirm a contract contrary to good morals, see 18.23[2].

18.05[2] When Contract Is Unlawful. A contract is illegal if it is [CC § 1667]:

- Contrary to an express provision of law;
- Contrary to the policy of express law, even though not expressly prohibited; or
- Contrary to good morals.

Examples:

- An agreement providing for liquidated damages in the event of infidelity in a marriage has been held unenforceable as contrary to the policy of the state's law of no-fault divorce [Diosdado v. Diosdado (2002) 97 CA4th 470, 474, 118 CR2d 494].
- A contract between a sperm donor and a sperm bank to keep the donor's identity secret under all circumstances violates the policy of family law statutes that records regarding artificial insemination be reviewable pursuant to court order on good cause shown [Johnson v. Superior Court (2000) 80 CA4th 1050, 1065-1067, 95 CR2d 864].
- An agreement to build a plant in Iran for manufacturing computer products to be sold in Iran was held illegal because it violated United States presidential executive orders prohibiting United States citizens from doing business in Iran [Kashani v. Tsann Kuen China Enter. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 531, 536-537].
- Contracts for sale of real estate were void because they violated Subdivision Map Act [Gov C § 66499.30(b)], which prohibits the sale of real property for which a parcel map is required until a parcel map is recorded [Black Hills Investments, Inc. v. Albertson's, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 883, 886-887, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 263 ; Sixelles, LLC v. Cannery Business Park (2008) 170 CA4th 648, 653-654, 88 CR3d 235] .
- Consulting agreements for matchmaking services were void and unenforceable because they violated express requirements of the dating service statutes, CC § 1694 et seq. [Duffens v. Valenti (2008) 161 CA4th 434, 441, 74 CR3d 311] .
- A lease was an illegal contract when the premises lacked a certificate of occupancy in violation of the local building code, and as a result, the landlord was not entitled to recover past due rent [Espinoza v. Calva (2008) 169 CA4th 1393, 1400, 87 CR3d 492] .

Consider:

A contract is void if it is contrary to good morals, regardless of whether it is also prohibited by statute [see Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 CA3d 1104, 1109, 260 CR 6]. A contract is voidable at the option of the less responsible party if it is contrary to a statute but not contrary to good morals [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 344 n10, 347] .

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of contracts contrary to "good morals" as those violating public policy, see 18.07 -18.12.

18.05[3] Legality Usually Is Question of Law. The issue of whether a contract is legal or contrary to public policy is one of law, and therefore generally is not presented to a jury [Jackson v. Rogers & Wells (1989) 210 CA3d 336, 350, 258 CR 454]. However, when the illegality of the contract raises questions of fact, it may be submitted to the jury [Redke v. Silvertrust (1971) 6 C3d 94, 103, 98 CR 293, 490 P2d 805].

Jury Instructions:

Interpretation in Favor of Contract, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3B, Instr. MB 300B.07 (Matthew Bender).

18.05[4] Subsequent Illegality Excuses Performance. While CC § 1596 provides that a contract must be lawful when made, this does not mean that when a subsequent law makes an object unlawful, the contract nevertheless must be performed. CC § 1511(1) provides that lack of performance of an obligation is excused when performance is prevented by operation of law.

Example:

A foreign jurisdiction's adoption of a building code precluding issuance of a permit to construct a building "prevented" performance of the contract within the meaning of CC § 1511 [Baird v. Wendt Enterprises, Inc. (1967) 248 CA2d 52, 55, 56 CR 118].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of the defense of excuse and its limitations, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract, 22.65.

Strategic Point:

If performance subsequently becomes illegal, a party seeking to avoid the contract also may be able to argue that the contract is invalid and unenforceable on public policy grounds [see Bovard v. American Horse Enters., Inc. (1988) 201 CA3d 832, 841, 247 CR 340].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of asserting or defending claim that contract or contract term violates public policy, see 18.07-18.12.

18.05[5] Illegality May Invalidate Whole Contract or Require Severance. If the main object of a contract is unlawful in whole or in part, the entire contract is void [CC § 1598].

In contrast, if a contract has several distinct objects, of which one at least is lawful, the contract may be voided in relevant part [CC § 1599].

However, if both the lawful and unlawful objects are provided in exchange for a single consideration, the entire contract is void [CC § 1608].

Examples:

- Severance was impossible because the contract provided for single fee in exchange for illegal attorney referral services as well as other lawful services [Selten v. Hyon (2007) 152 CA4th 463, 471, 60 CR3d 896] .

- A city's support for a tribe's trust acquisition was the sole consideration for the tribe entering into municipal services agreement, and because that support was illegal for failure to comply with CEQA, the contract was void [County of Amador v. City of Plymouth (2007) 149 CA4th 1089, 1114, 57 CR3d 704] .

In general, whether a court should seek to sever offending terms of a contract or declare it entirely invalid should be informed by which of these actions will further the interests of justice, and whether the court has the capacity to cure the unlawful contract through severance [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 124, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of determining severability of terms in contracts found illegal, contrary to public policy, or unconscionable, see 18.22.

Courts particularly will seek to enforce agreements by severing improper terms in two situations [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 123-124, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669]:

- If enforcing at least a portion of the agreement will prevent the inequitable results of voiding a partially performed contract.
- To preserve an otherwise legal contractual relationship.

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of enforcement based on severability, see 18.20 -18.23.

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
 II. ASSERTING OR DEFENDING CLAIM OF ILLEGALITY OF CONTRACT OR CONTRACT PROVISION

2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.06

AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley18.06 Illegality Issues Recur in Specific Types of Contracts.*18.06[1] Some Agreements Limiting Remedies Are Invalid.

18.06[1][a] Private Agreement May Not Contravene Public Law. Although anyone may waive the advantage of a law intended solely for his or her own benefit, a law established for a public reason cannot be contravened by a private agreement [CC § 3513]. In essence, courts will not uphold an agreement in which a party seeks to waive a "public" right [see, e.g., Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 100, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

Warning:

Although one court of appeal stated in dicta that clauses seeking exculpation from liability imposed by any statute or regulation are invalid regardless of whether the public interest is involved [Health Net of Cal., Inc. v. Department of Health Servs. (2003) 113 CA4th 224, 235], this conclusion is questionable in light of CC § 3513.

Judge's Perspective:

CC § 3513 provides in part that "a law established for a public reason cannot be contravened by a private agreement." Of course, as the courts have recognized, "it is difficult to conceive of a statutory right enacted solely for the benefit of private individuals that does not also have an incidental public benefit" [Bickel v. City of Piedmont (1997) 16 C4th 1040, 1049 n4, 68 CR2d 758, 946 P2d 427 (emphasis in original)]. Thus, the question is not merely whether the contract waives a statutory right, but whether the public benefit of the statute is one of the statute's primary purposes [Azteca Constr., Inc. v. ADR Consulting, Inc. (2004) 121 CA4th 1156, 1166 (quoting DeBerard Props., Ltd. v. Lim (1999) 20 C4th 659, 669, 85 CR2d 292, 976 P2d 843)]. Notwithstanding the qualified nature of this language, however, the courts frequently have determined that statutes do have a public purpose and invalidated contracts that waived their protection [see, e.g., Azteca Constr., Inc. v. ADR Consulting, Inc. (2004) 121 CA4th 1156, 1166 (listing courts that have annulled or restricted contractual arbitration provisions that impaired statutory rights benefitting the public)].

18.06[1][b] Exculpatory Provision Involving Public Interest Will Exhibit Particular Characteristics.

Although there is no exact formula for determining whether a contract involves the public interest to the extent that an exculpatory clause will be invalidated, such a contract will exhibit some or all of the following characteristics [Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1963) 60 C2d 92, 98-99, 32 CR 33, 383 P2d 441]:

- It concerns a business of a type generally thought suitable for public regulation.
- The party seeking exculpation is engaged in performing a service of great importance to the public, which is often a matter of practical necessity for some members of the public.
- The party holds himself or herself out as willing to perform this service for any member of the public who seeks it, or at least for any member coming within certain established standards.
- As a result of the essential nature of the service, in the economic setting of the transaction, the party invoking exculpation possesses a decisive advantage of bargaining strength against any member of the public who seeks that party's services.
- In exercising a superior bargaining power the party confronts the public with a standardized adhesion contract of exculpation, and makes no provision whereby a purchaser may pay additional reasonable fees and obtain protection against negligence.
- As a result of the transaction, the person or property of the purchaser is placed under the control of the seller, subject to the risk of carelessness by the seller or the seller's agents.

Examples:

- A party's waiver of its fiduciary duties is invalid [Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 CA4th 47, 55-56, 133 CR2d 218].
- A clause exempting a child care provider from its own negligence is not valid [Gavin W. v. YMCA of Metro. L.A. (2003) 106 CA4th 662, 666, 131 CR2d 168].
- An agreement barring suit against a hospital by a doctor for denial of staff privileges is not enforceable [Westlake Cmty. Hosp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 C3d 465, 480, 131 CR 90, 551 P2d 410].
- An agreement releasing a landlord from liability for negligence related to a tenant's injury in the common areas of the premises will not be enforced [Henriouille v. Marin Ventures, Inc. (1978) 20 C3d 512, 518-520, 143 CR 247, 573 P2d 465].
- A waiver of the right to bring a class action is unenforceable in a consumer contract of adhesion when disputes between the parties predictably will involve small amounts of damages allegedly due large numbers of consumers [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 C4th 148, 162-163].

18.06[1][c] Some Exculpatory Provisions Do Not Involve Public Interest. Courts have upheld exculpatory clauses that do not sufficiently involve the public interest in a number of contexts.

Examples:

- A telephone book advertising contract was not voidable under Tunkl because plaintiff might have negotiated different terms [McCarn v. Pacific Bell Directory (1992) 3 CA4th 173, 182, 4 CR2d 109].

- Exculpatory provisions in an oil drilling contract did not implicate the public interest because the drilling contractor did not hold itself out as performing services for the public, but only for the small number of entities that happened to be oil field operators, and the drilling of a particular oil well is generally only important to the party who will profit from it. The contractor did not seek or obtain complete exemption from culpability on account of its potential negligence or violation of any applicable regulations; it merely sought to limit its liability for economic harm suffered by the oil field operator [CAZA Drilling (California), Inc. v. TEG Oil & Gas U.S.A., Inc. (2006) 142 CA4th 453, 469, 475, 48 CR3d 271] .

Consider:

Even if an exculpatory clause is not ruled invalid, a court is likely to construe it strictly against the released party [Queen Villas Homeowners Assn. v. TCB Property Management (2007) 149 CA4th 1, 6, 56 R3d 528].

Numerous cases have held that exculpatory clauses in contracts relating to recreational or sports activities do not involve the public interest.

Examples:

- A release signed by passengers before boarding an aerial sightseeing tour did not affect the public interest [Booth v. Santa Barbara Biplane Tours, LLC (2008) 158 CA4th 1173, 1179, 70 CR3d 660] .

- A release of a ski company was held to include liability for injury from a chair lift accident during ski lessons [Platzer v. Mammoth Mountain Ski Area (2002) 104 CA4th 1253, 1259, 128 CR2d 885].

- A release of a gym was held to eliminate the gym's liability for injury due to use of weightlifting equipment even though it might not have extended to personal trainers [Lund v. Bally's Aerobic Plus, Inc. (2000) 78 CA4th 733, 738-740, 93 CR2d 169].

Distinguish--Negligence Per Se:

One court has held that although a release in a health club's membership agreement bars an ordinary negligence claim against it by a member who slipped and fell on a swimming pool deck, it does not protect the health club from a claim of negligence per se based on violations of regulatory statutes governing public swimming pools [Capri v. L.A. Fitness International, LLC (2006) 136 CA4th 1078, 1085-1087, 39 CR3d 425] .

Distinguish--Gross Negligence:

A release of liability for gross negligence generally is invalid [see 18.06[1][d]].

18.06[1][d] Release of Liability for Gross Negligence Is Invalid. An agreement made in the context of sports or recreational programs or services, purporting to release liability for future gross negligence, generally is unenforceable as a matter of public policy [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 C4th 747, 750, 62 CR3d 527, 161 P3d 1095] . Public policy generally precludes enforcement of an agreement that would remove an obligation to adhere to even a minimal standard of care [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 C4th 747, 776-777, 62 CR3d 527, 161 P3d 1095].

Consider:

An exculpatory clause in a contract relating to sports or recreational programs may be enforceable to the extent it releases liability for ordinary negligence, if it does not involve the public interest [see 18.06 [1][c]], but still unenforceable to the extent it purports to release liability for gross negligence.

18.06[1][e] Contract May Not Exculpate Person for Fraud or Willful Injury. All contracts that intend, either directly or indirectly, to exempt a person from responsibility for that person's own fraud, willful injury to person or property, or violation of law (willful or negligent) are "against the policy of the law" [CC § 1668].

Example:

Exculpatory clauses in a standardized form used in the purchase and sale of real estate did not bar a claim for intentional misrepresentation brought by buyers against the sellers' brokers. The fact that the brokers were not parties to the agreement between the buyers and sellers does not preclude application of CC § 1668, which applies to "all contracts" the object of which is to directly or indirectly exempt "anyone" from responsibility for his or her "own fraud" [Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc. (2007) 146 CA4th 1486, 1489, 1501, 55 CR3d 59].

18.06[1][f] Some Exculpatory Provisions Are Expressly Prohibited. Some statutes specifically prohibit exculpatory clauses in specific instances. Thus, the following waivers are void:

- Consumers' waivers of their rights under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act [CC § 1751].
- Most waivers by mortgagors [CC § 2953].
- Waivers by tenants as to landlords [CC § 1953].
- Waivers by employees regarding particular rights [see, e.g., Lab Code § 2804; UI Code § 1342; Elec Code § 14350].
- Certain waivers of liability for injury relating to construction [CC § 2782], hauling, or trucking contracts [CC § 2784.5].

Additionally, an insurer is not liable for a loss "caused by the willful act of the insured" [Ins Code § 533]. The California Supreme Court held this statute precluded coverage for child sexual molestation on the ground that it is always intentional, wrongful, and harmful [J.C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M.K. (1991) 52 C3d 1009, 1025, 278 CR 64, 804 P2d 689]. The Court has since clarified that other conduct in the same context by an insured may be covered if the act is not clearly wilful [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 C4th 1076, 1082, 17 CR2d 210, 846 P2d 792]. A "willful act" under Ins Code § 533 is an act deliberately done for the express purpose of causing damage or intentionally performed with knowledge that damage is highly probable [Shell Oil Co. v. Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co. (1993) 12 CA4th 715, 742, 15 CR2d 815].

18.06[2] Agreements Contemplating or Supporting Illegal Behavior Are Invalid.

18.06[2][a] Performance by Unlicensed Persons or Firms. A party not licensed to do business in California under the Business and Professions Code may not sue to collect on a contract to perform work in California if that work requires a license [B&P Code §§ 143 (persons licensed under Business and Professions Code), 7031 (contractors)].

Example:

A licensed contractor who was president of an unlicensed corporation could not sue to recover compensation for work performed on a contract. Even though the contractor's individual license number appeared on documents relating to the contract, the unlicensed corporation was the contracting party [Opp v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2007) 154 CA4th 71, 76, 64 CR3d 260] .

Exceptions:

- Contractors may be entitled to the benefit of the doctrine of substantial compliance if they were formerly licensed in California and meet certain other tests [B&P Code § 7031(e)], but other licensed persons may not rely on substantial compliance [B&P Code § 143(b)]. However, the substantial compliance doctrine is unavailable to a contractor who has not been duly licensed at some point before beginning performance of the contract [Great West Contractors, Inc. v. WSS Industrial Construction, Inc. (2008) 162 CA4th 581, 596, 76 CR3d 8 ; Goldstein v. Barak Construction (2008) 164 CA4th 845, 855, 79 CR3d 603 (contractor who obtained license three months after beginning performance was not entitled to compensation for post-license work); Alatrisme v. Cesar's Exterior Designs, Inc. (2010) 183 CA4th 656, 660, 672, 108 CR3d 277 (homeowner was entitled to reimbursement from contractor of total amount homeowner had paid for job, even though homeowner had prior knowledge of contractor's unlicensed status and contractor was licensed during portion of work); see Oceguera v. Cohen (2009) 172 CA4th 783, 794, 91 CR3d 443 (partnership was not in substantial compliance with the licensing requirement when the only licensed partner had executed a disassociation before the partnership entered into the contract, and the remaining partners failed to prove that they did not know or should not have known the partnership was unlicensed).].

- A contractor's license is not required for those who only furnish materials or supplies without fabricating them into, or consuming them in the performance of, the work of the contractor [B&P Code § 7052; Banis Restaurant Design, Inc. v. Serrano (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1035, 1046, 36 CR3d 532] .

- An entity that provides construction management services to a private owner developing commercial real property is not required to have a contractor's license [The Fifth Day, LLC v. Bolotin (2009) 172 CA4th 939, 947, 91 CR3d 633] .

The prohibition on recovery by unlicensed persons also precludes actions in tort for damages for the price or value of the work or materials furnished [Hydrotech Sys., Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 C3d 988, 998-999, 277 CR 517, 803 P2d 370], and actions for quantum meruit [Castillo v. Barrera (2007) 146 CA4th 1317, 53 CR3d 494 (denying quantum meruit recovery to boxing manager who lacked license and written contract required by Boxing Act, B&P Code § 18600 et seq.); but see Selten v. Hyon (2007) 152 CA4th 463, 471-472, 60 CR3d 896 (contract authorizing litigation service provider to retain counsel and provide other litigation support services was illegal in part, because provider was not licensed as an attorney referral service under B&P Code § 6155, but provider was permitted to pursue common count for reasonable value of any lawful services rendered)].

A person who uses the services of an unlicensed contractor may recover all compensation paid to the unlicensed contractor [B&P Code § 7039(b)]. An unlicensed contractor may not reduce this recovery by asserting claims of offset arising out of the unlicensed work [White v. Cridlebaugh (2009) 178 CA4th 506, 522, 100 CR3d 434 ; Alatrisme v. Cesar's Exterior Designs, Inc. (2010) 183 CA4th 656, 672, 108 CR3d 277 (unlicensed contractor is not entitled to offset for amounts paid for materials)].

A contractor who was unlicensed at any time during contractual performance is barred from recovering compensation, even for individual acts performed while the contractor was duly licensed. However, a contractor who was fully licensed at all times during contractual performance is not barred from recovering compensation for the work solely because he or she was unlicensed when the contract was executed [MW Erectors, Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental &

Metal Works Co., Inc. (2005) 36 C4th 412, 419, 115 P3d 41].

A party is entitled to reimbursement for amounts paid to an unlicensed contractor even if the party knew the contractor was unlicensed [Alatrisme v. Cesar's Exterior Designs, Inc. (2010) 183 CA4th 656, 668, 108 CR3d 277].

The rule prohibiting the enforcement of contracts by unlicensed persons has been applied outside the context of persons licensed under the Business and Professions Code [see, e.g., Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 CA4th 1089, 1093-1094 ; Waisbren v. Peppercorn Prods., Inc. (1995) 41 CA4th 246, 261, 48 CR2d 437 (agreement with party not licensed under Talent Agencies Act as required under Lab Code §§ 1700-1700.47 held void); Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v. Superior Court (1998) 17 C4th 119, 138-139, 70 CR2d 304, 949 P2d 1 (holding enforcement of agreement with attorneys not licensed in California void without reference to B&P Code § 143)].

Judge's Perspective:

What makes these statutes so powerful is that they not only invalidate any contract for work performed by someone without the required license, but also bar recovery of any kind [see, e.g., B&P Code § 7031 (such a party may not "recover in law or equity in any action, in any court of this state for the collection of compensation for the performance of any act") (emphasis added)]. This would seem to include quantum meruit claims.

Strategic Point--Defendant:

If some of the services were performed outside California, the doctrine of severability may apply [see Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v. Superior Court (1998) 17 C4th 119, 138-139, 70 CR2d 304, 949 P2d 1].

18.06[2][b] Agreements Not to Disclose Illegal Behavior Are Unenforceable. Several courts have held that agreements not to disclose illegal behavior are not enforceable.

Examples:

- A nondisclosure provision in a settlement agreement between a customer and a securities broker is unenforceable because it violates the policies of disclosure for misconduct in the rules of the National Association of Securities Dealers rules [Cariveau v. Halferty (2000) 83 CA4th 126, 135, 99 CR2d 417].

- A school district may report a student's withdrawn complaint of rape against a teacher to the Commission on Teacher Credentialing in violation of a confidentiality provision in a settlement agreement between the district and the teacher, because the school district has a legal duty to report the reason for its disciplinary actions and the teacher's resignation to the Commission [Picton v. Anderson Union High Sch. Dist. (1996) 50 CA4th 726, 736, 57 CR2d 829].

18.06[3] Agreements Improperly Restraining Trade Are Invalid.

18.06[3][a] Federal Laws May Invalidate Agreements. A number of federal statutes govern restraint of trade [see, e.g., 15 USC §§ 1 et seq. (Sherman Antitrust Act), 13 et seq. (Clayton Act), 45(a)(1) (Federal Trade Commission Act); 18 USC § 1961 et seq. (the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act)]. Agreements in violation of these statutes are invalid.

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of federal antitrust laws, see von Kalinowski, Antitrust Laws and Trade Regulation (Matthew Bender).

18.06[3][b] Agreements Preventing or Limiting Practice of Lawful Profession May Be Invalid. A contract by which a person is restrained from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business of any kind is to that extent void [B&P Code § 16600; Kelton v. Stravinski (2006) 138 CA4th 941, 946-947, 41 CR3d 877]. The statute prohibits employee noncompetition agreements unless the agreement falls within a statutory exception [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 C4th 937, 942, 81 CR3d 282, 189 P3d 285]

Exceptions:

- A person selling the goodwill of a business can make such an agreement relating to a specified geographic area encompassing the location of the business which is sold [B&P Code § 16601].

- A partner of a business, on departure from the partnership or on its dissolution, can covenant not to compete in a specified geographic area as long as a former partner is doing business there. A member of a dissolving limited liability company may enter into an agreement in similar circumstances [B&P Code §§ 16602, 16602.5].

Although B&P Code § 16601 permits nonsolicitation covenants barring the seller from soliciting the employees and customers of the sold business in the area where the sold company carried on business, a covenant barring a seller from soliciting the buyer's employees and customers is unenforceable [Strategix, Ltd. v. Infocrossing West, Inc. (2006) 142 CA4th 1068, 1073-1074, 48 CR3d 614 (court declined to rewrite overbroad covenant to make it enforceable)].

B&P Code § 16600 has been held to void covenants by employees not to work for companies that compete with their former employer, and thus to permit competing companies to solicit such employees [Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 CA4th 853, 859, 27 CR2d 573]. There may be issues regarding the enforceability of such contracts in California even when made under another state's law [see Advanced Bionics Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc. (2002) 29 C4th 697, 706-707, 128 CR2d 172, 59 P3d 231].

Examples:

- A noncompetition agreement that prohibited a certified public accountant (1) for an 18-month period, from performing professional services of the type he had provided while working for his former employer, for any client on whose account he had worked during 18 months prior to his termination, and (2) for a year after termination, from providing professional services to any client of the former employer was invalid because it restrained his ability to practice his profession [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 C4th 937, 948, 81 CR3d 282, 189 P3d 285] .

- A computer consulting contract that prohibited customers from hiring any of the consultant's employees for 12 months after the contract's termination, regardless of whether the employees worked for the customer or were even employed by the consultant at the time, was unenforceable [VL Systems, Inc. v. Unisen, Inc. (2007) 152 CA4th 708, 718, 61 CR3d 818] .

- A termination agreement that prevented a former employee from "raiding the former employer's employees" was enforceable because it did not prevent employees from seeking employment with the new employer; it only restrained the former employee from contacting the employees first [Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 CA3d 268, 279, 219 CR 836] .

- An injunction barring defendant investment advisors from directly or indirectly soliciting any current customers of the plaintiff securities firm for whom defendants previously worked was unenforceable [The Retirement Group v. Galante (2009) 176 CA4th 1226, 1238-1239, 98 CR3d 585] .

Exceptions:

- B&P Code § 16600 does not prohibit agreements for the protection of trade secrets [Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 CA4th 853, 859, 27 CR2d 573], such as, for example, a customer list [Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 CA4th 402, 408, 75 CR2d 257] .

- Outside the strict situation of a covenant not to compete, such as exclusivity contracts, B&P Code § 16600 merely mandates a balancing test [see, e.g., Centeno v. Roseville Cmty. Hosp. (1979) 107 CA3d 62, 71-72, 167 CR 183] .

18.06[3][c] Agreements Regarding Improper Combinations of Capital May Be Invalid Under Cartwright Act. In general, the Cartwright Act provides that combinations of capital to "carry out restrictions in trade or commerce," or fix prices are unlawful [B&P Code §§ 16702, 16720, 16726]. The Act may not reach purely interstate activity, but has been held to reach "transactions that have interstate aspects but significantly affect state interests" [Younger v. Jensen (1980) 26 C3d 397, 405, 161 CR 905, 605 P2d 813]. There is a great deal of case law independently evaluating the Cartwright Act, although federal case law is useful in interpreting its reach [see, e.g., Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson (1976) 16 C3d 920, 925, 130 CR 1, 549 P2d 833] .

Jury Instructions:

Horizontal and Vertical Restraints Essential Elements, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3405 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

18.06[3][d] Unfair Business Practices Are Invalid. The Unfair Practices Act generally prohibits giving away or selling articles below cost, or granting rebates or special privileges, when those actions have as their purpose or intended effect the injury of competitors or destroying competition [see generally B&P Code § 17000 et seq.]. The Unfair Competition Law prohibits "unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice and unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising" [see B&P Code § 17200; see also B&P Code § 17200 et seq.]. False and misleading advertising also is specifically prohibited by [B&P Code § 17500 et seq.].

18.06[4] Agreements Clearly Preventing or Harming a Marriage Are Invalid.

18.06[4][a] Agreement Directly Barring Marriage Is Likely Invalid. Contracts restraining marriage, other than of a minor, are void [CC § 1669]. This statute is interpreted not to prohibit cohabitation agreements unless they are "expressly and inseparably based upon an illicit consideration of sexual services" [see Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 C3d 660, 672, 134 CR 815, 557 P2d 106].

18.06[4][b] Agreement Promoting Dissolution or Divorce May Be Invalid. Contracts that facilitate, encourage, or promote divorce or dissolution are contrary to California's policy favoring marriage [In re Marriage of Dawley (1976) 17 C3d 342, 350, 131 CR 3, 551 P2d 323].

Examples:

- An agreement providing for one of the parties to receive a substantial amount of property only upon dissolution or divorce is illegal [In re Marriage of Noghrey (1985) 169 CA3d 326, 331, 215 CR 153].

- A contract under the law of another jurisdiction to the same effect will not be enforced [In re Marriage of Dajani (1988) 204 CA3d 1387, 1389-1390, 251 CR 871].

18.06[5] Agreements Tending to Obstruct Justice Are Invalid.

18.06[5][a] Agreements Tampering With Evidence or Witnesses Are Invalid. Threats or bribes in an attempt to influence a witness's testimony are felonies [Pen Code §§ 136-139]. In addition, a witness who accepts a bribe to testify or to change testimony is guilty of a felony [Pen Code § 138(b)].

Strategic Point:

Even when an agreement does not reach the level of a bribe, a party should consider challenging its validity if its effect is to prevent a witness from testifying. Thus, a foreign state's judgment entering a settlement agreement including a permanent injunction barring a witness from providing relevant testimony has been held invalid [Smith v. Superior Court (1996) 41 CA4th 1014, 1025-1026, 49 CR2d 20].

18.06[5][b] Agreement to Refrain From Prosecution Is a Crime. Unless otherwise excepted by law, a person with knowledge of a crime who enters into an agreement for some kind of reward in return for concealing that crime or refraining from prosecution of it is guilty of a crime [Pen Code § 153].

Exception:

A prosecutor's agreement to dismiss a charge in return for the prospective defendant's agreement not to civilly prosecute is not void as against public policy [Hoines v. Barney's Club, Inc. (1980) 28 C3d 603, 610, 170 CR 42, 620 P2d 628].

18.06[5][c] Agreement Unjustly Discriminating Among Joint Tortfeasors Is Invalid. If one or more, but not all, defendants enter into a "sliding scale" settlement agreement with the plaintiff whereby the plaintiff may return some of its recovery from the remaining defendant or defendants, the parties must immediately inform the court of the agreement, or the agreement is invalid [CCP § 877.5]. The governing statute requires that the court must inform the jury of the agreement and its relevant terms if the defendant is called to testify at trial [CCP § 877.5(a)(2)]. Such agreements are not presumptively invalid [Abbott Ford, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 43 C3d 858, 870, 239 CR 626, 741 P2d 124].

Strategic Point:

Any party may seek a determination from the court as to whether such a settlement was entered into in "good faith" and may be enforced [see Abbott Ford, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 43 C3d 858, 875, 239 CR 626, 741 P2d 124 (citing CCP § 877.6)].

18.06[5][d] Agreement With Attorney Not to Settle Case Is Invalid. At least outside the class action context, a provision in a contingency agreement between a client and an attorney whereby the client agrees not to settle a case has been held void as against public policy [see Calvert v. Stoner (1948) 33 C2d 97, 103-104, 199 P2d 297]. Moreover, in a contingency fee case involving a potential statutory fee award, the attorney must inform the client that the fees belong to the client and can be bargained away in exchange for other settlement terms even though this may result in the attorney not being compensated [State Bar Formal Opinion No 1989-114 (citing Evans v. Jeff D. (1986) 475 US 717, 727-728, 106 S Ct 1531, 89 L Ed2d 747)]. However, an attorney may contract for the right to the statutory attorney's fees in advance in the retainer agreement, as long as the attorney complies with Cal Rules Prof Conduct, Rules 3-100 and 3-300 requiring, among other things, notice and informed consent in writing [State Bar Formal Opinion No 1994-136].

18.06[6] Agreements With Public Agencies or Officers Violating Their Duties Are Void.

18.06[6][a] Agreements Generally Are Void, Not Voidable. A contract in which a public officer is interested is void, not merely voidable [Marin Healthcare Dist. v. Sutter Health (2002) 103 CA4th 861, 871, 127 CR2d 113 (quoting Thomson v. Call (1985) 38 C3d 633, 646 n15, 214 CR 139, 699 P2d 316)]. Moreover, at least with regard to contracts violating the conflict of interest provisions set forth in Gov Code § 1090 et seq., the government agency is entitled to recover any sums expended while retaining any benefits bestowed as a result of contract performance [Thomson v. Call (1985) 38 C3d 633, 647, 214 CR 139, 699 P2d 316 ; Carson Redevelopment Agency v. Padilla (2006) 140 CA4th 1323, 1329, 44 CR3d 881]. Although such a harsh remedy may not be available with regard to all contracts voided for lack of authority by the public agency, it is clear that such contracts are "unenforceable" [Midway Orchards v. County of Butte (1990) 220 CA3d 765, 783, 269 CR 796].

18.06[6][b] Agreements May Be Invalid for Lack of Proper Authorization. A city or county cannot enter into a contract beyond its delegated powers to do so, and any resulting contract is void [G.L. Mezzetta, Inc. v. City of American Canyon (2000) 78 CA4th 1087, 1093-1094, 93 CR2d 292].

Examples:

- An oral contract entered into by a city employee who lacked authority under the city's charter to execute oral contracts was void [Katsura v. City of San Buenaventura (2007) 155 CA4th 104, 109, 65 CR3d 762].
- An agreement with a "general law" city, not signed by the mayor as required by Gov Code § 40602, is invalid [see, e.g., Authority for California Cities Excess Liability v. City of Los Altos (2006) 136 CA4th 1207, 1212, 39 CR3d 571].
- An agreement entered into in violation of competitive bidding statutes is not valid [see, e.g., Miller

v. McKinnon (1942) 20 C2d 83, 87, 124 P2d 34].

- A development agreement in violation of a county's general plan is void [Midway Orchards v. County of Butte (1990) 220 CA3d 765, 773, 269 CR 796].

Similarly, a state agency may not contract in excess of its statutory powers [California League of Senior Citizens, Inc. v. Brian (1973) 35 CA3d 443, 456, 110 CR 809].

Examples:

- A state agency cannot contract to limit its powers [Air Quality Prods., Inc. v. State of California (1979) 96 CA3d 340, 349-350, 157 CR 791].

- All contracts entered into by state agencies must be authorized by statute [California League of Senior Citizens, Inc. v. Brian (1973) 35 CA3d 443, 456, 110 CR 809].

18.06[6][c] Agreements Calling for Excessive Public Indebtedness Are Void. The California Constitution bars agreements calling for excessive indebtedness by counties, municipalities, school districts, or the State Legislature when those agreements are not approved by the voters. [Cal Const, art XVI, §§ 1, 18(a)].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

A party that has contracted with a public entity in excess of its debt limitation nevertheless should consider suing on the agreement, because the constitutional provisions only limit its right to payment as relief [Barkley v. City of Blue Lake (1996) 47 CA4th 309, 314, 54 CR2d 679].

18.06[6][d] Agreements Leading to Conflict of Interest Are Void. Members of the legislature and state, county, district, judicial district, and city officers or employees are not permitted to be financially interested in any contract made by them in their official capacity, or by any body or board of which they are members [Gov Code § 1090]. "Financial interest" can be either a direct interest [Thomson v. Call (1985) 38 C3d 633, 645, 214 CR 139, 699 P2d 316] or an indirect interest [People v. Honig (1996) 48 CA4th 289, 314, 55 CR2d 555].

Exceptions:

If an official has a "remote" interest, as defined by [Gov Code § 1091], the agency may enter into the contract as long as the official abstains from participating in the decision in any way. Certain putative interests also are classified as "non-interests" and are excluded altogether [see Gov Code § 1091.5; Lexin v. Superior Court (2010) 47 C4th 1050, 103 CR3d 767, 222 P3d 214 (Gov Code § 1091.5(a)(3) excludes retirement board trustees' approval of contracts in which their only financial interest is an interest in benefits shared generally with their constituency at large)].

Warning:

Contracts subject to Gov Code § 1090 are void, not voidable, and the public agency may retain the benefit of an interested party's performance without providing anything in return [Marin Healthcare Dist. v. Sutter Health (2002) 103 CA4th 861, 871, 127 CR2d 113 (quoting Thomson v. Call (1985) 38 C3d 633, 646 n15, 647, 214 CR 139, 699 P2d 316); see also County of San Bernardino v. Walsh (2007) 158 CA4th 533, 549-552, 69 CR3d 848 (defendants in bribery scheme were required to disgorge to the county profits they realized from selling contract they received through bribing county official)].

18.06[7] Agreements Calling for Usurious Rate of Interest Are Voidable. Cal Const, art XV, § 1 limits rates at which loans are permitted in different situations. Exceptions apply to real estate brokers, building and loan associations, banks, other types of institutional creditors, and parties specifically exempted from the provision by the Legislature [Cal Const, art XV, § 1].

Jury Instructions:

Usury Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.92 (Matthew Bender).

18.06[8] Agreements Providing for Excessive Penalties or Limitations on Damages May Be Invalid. A provision in a contract for liquidated damages is valid unless the party opposing it establishes that the provision was unreasonable at the time it was made [CC § 1671]. This general rule does not apply in situations when special statutes govern [CC § 1671(a)], such as consumer contracts, or leases of residential property [CC § 1671(c)].

With regard to consumer contracts or leases of residential property, the party relying upon the provision must show that it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to show the actual damage [CC § 1671(d); see Orozco v. Casimiro (2004) 121 CA4th Supp 7, 12]. CC § 1671(d) has been held applicable to credit card and bank contracts with customers [Beasley v. Wells Fargo Bank (1991) 235 CA3d 1383, 1390, 1 CR2d 446].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of liquidated damages, see Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions.

18.06[9] Agreements Providing for Pre-Dispute Waiver of Jury Trial Are Invalid. A pre-dispute agreement that any lawsuit between two parties will be adjudicated in a court trial, and not by jury trial, is unenforceable because it violates CC § 631, which specifies the only six means by which parties to a civil lawsuit may waive their right to have their disputes adjudicated in a jury trial rather than in a court trial [Grafton Partners L.P. v. Superior Court (2005) 36 C4th 944, 961, 967].

 III. ASSERTING OR DEFENDING CLAIM THAT CONTRACT OR CONTRACT PROVISION VIOLATES PUBLIC POLICY

*2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.08AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley18.08 Options and Strategies.

Courts are reluctant to invalidate contracts on public policy grounds because of the difficulty in the standard imposed and the lack of case law in this area [see 18.09]. If possible, therefore, a party trying to invalidate a contract should seek to show that a contract is illegal rather than contrary to public policy. Conversely, a party seeking to uphold a contract will want to argue that the more stringent public policy standard applies.

Strategic Point:

Proving that a contract or term is contrary to public policy may be less difficult than showing that it is unconscionable, because the party does not have to demonstrate that it is procedurally unconscionable. To state a public policy challenge, counsel must show that the conduct at issue violated wider social norms that the court should not condone.

18.09 Elements of Claim for Invalidity on Public Policy Grounds.

A court may decline to enforce a contract on policy grounds expressed or implied in a statute or the rules of a voluntary regulatory entity [Cariveau v. Halferty (2000) 83 CA4th 126, 132, 99 CR2d 417]. Because it is a social imperative to encourage contracts among competent parties, a court will not find a contract invalid unless it is "entirely plain" that the contract is contrary to sound public policy [Bovard v. American Horse Enters., Inc. (1988) 201 CA3d 832, 839, 247 CR 340 ; see Sanchez v. County of San Bernardino (2009) 176 CA4th 516, 527, 98 CR3d 96 (county's agreement not to disclose facts giving rise to employee's severance agreement did not violate public policy); Myerchin v. Family Benefits, Inc. (2008) 162 CA4th 1526, 1538-1539, 76 CR3d 816 (rejecting claim that enforcing settlement agreement violated public policy because opposing counsel continued negotiating it with plaintiff directly even after becoming aware plaintiff had retained counsel)]. The burden is on the party seeking to avoid the contract to show that it violates public policy in this manner [Bovard v. American Horse Enters., Inc. (1988) 201 CA3d 832, 839, 247 CR 340].

A court will consider these factors in deciding whether a contract violates public policy [Dunkin v. Boskey (2000) 82 CA4th 171, 183, 98 CR2d 44]:

- The nature of the conduct.
- The extent of public harm that may be involved.
- The moral quality of the conduct of the parties in light of the prevailing standards in the community.

18.10 Contracts Contrary to Public Policy Harm Moral or Social Imperative in Society.

Although not strictly illegal, contracts contrary to public policy are not enforced, because courts do not wish to condone such conduct [see, e.g., Scolinos v. Kolts (1995) 37 CA4th 635, 640, 44 CR2d 31]. Courts often describe contracts as contrary to public policy when they contain exculpatory provisions that violate some or all of the factors listed in Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1963) 60 C2d 92, 99, 32 CR 33, 383 P2d 441 [see 18.06[1][b]].

Examples:

- Contracts contemplating or supporting illegal conduct are void, even if the contracts themselves are not illegal [Bovard v. American Horse Enters., Inc. (1988) 201 CA3d 832, 841, 247 CR 340 (agreement for sale of company that primarily manufactured drug paraphernalia was not itself illegal, but would not be enforced because company's purpose was to support illegal behavior)].
- An agreement providing spousal support to an abusive spouse violated the public policy embodied in Fam C § 4325, which provides a rebuttable presumption against awarding spousal support to a spouse convicted of domestic violence against the other spouse [In re Marriage of Cauley (2006) 138 CA4th 1100, 1106, 41 CR3d 902].
- An agreement to forego familial rights such as child support is void [In re Marriage of Ayo (1987) 190 CA3d 442, 451-452, 235 CR 458], as is an agreement by one spouse to pay the other spouse for nursing services that should be rendered in the usual course of a marriage [Borelli v. Brusseau (1993) 12 CA4th 647, 652-653, 16 CR2d 16].

Judge's Perspective:

Contracts involving family matters also usually implicate family law, which is a specialized area requiring particular expertise. Thus, for example, the provisions of an agreement between parents for child support are automatically severable from any provisions involving property or support [Fam Code § 3585]. Moreover, the state has a guideline for determining child support based on the incomes of the parents, the amount of time the child spends with each parent, and other factors [Fam Code § 4055]. The parents may agree to set child support in a different amount, but only after declaring that certain facts are true [Fam Code § 4065]. Even then, an agreement for support less than guideline amount may be modified at any time with or without a change in circumstances [Fam Code § 4065]. The policy behind these statutes is that such contracts implicate the rights of children, whose right to support trumps the right of adults to freely contract.

- An agreement obtained based on a threat of criminal prosecution is contrary to public policy and will not be enforced [Bayscene Resident Negotiators v. Bayscene Mobilehome Park (1993) 15 CA4th 119, 127, 18 CR2d 626].
- Contracts to enforce debts incurred for the purpose of gambling are void [Metropolitan Creditors Serv. v. Sadri (1993) 15 CA4th 1821, 1828, 19 CR2d 646], although a court will enforce a foreign judgment on such a cause of action [Crockford's Club, Ltd. v. Si-Ahmed (1988) 203 CA3d 1402, 1406, 250 CR 728].
- Heir hunting contracts authorizing the heir hunter to select and pay for an attorney and control the litigation are void as against public policy [Estate of Molino (2008) 165 CA4th 913, 923, 81 CR3d 512].
- A contract that purports to allow a deduction from a person's wages for the cost of emigrating and transporting that person to the United States is void as against public policy [CC § 1670.7].

Strategic Point:

A party need not rely solely on a public policy rationale if the gambling contract is illegal where it is made [see Kelly v. First Astri Corp. (1999) 72 CA4th 462, 495-496, 84 CR2d 810].

Distinguish--Unconscionability Versus Public Policy:

A contract violative of public policy differs from one that is unconscionable in that unconscionable contracts are invalid due to the disproportionate burden they place on a particular party, rather than larger social concerns. Thus, a party seeking to prove that a contract is unconscionable must demonstrate that the contract or term was unfair to that party in particular. For example, the party could demonstrate surprise at a particular contract provision [see McCarn v. Pacific Bell Directory (1992) 3 CA4th 173, 183, 4 CR2d 109]. In contrast, contracts contrary to public policy violate wider social norms.

18.11 Contracts Violating Public Policy Generally Are Void, Not Voidable.

A successful claim that a contract or contract term violates public policy usually will mean that the contract is void, and the court will not enforce it [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 99, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669]. Such contracts are almost always void, so that a court is unlikely to uphold them for the benefit of either party [see, e.g., Kelly v. First Astri Corp. (1999) 72 CA4th 462, 465, 84 CR2d 810].

Strategic Point:

If only certain remedies would violate public policy, a party seeking to enforce a contract should argue for the imposition of other remedies that do not present this problem.

Example:

A male former domestic partner who contracted with a female domestic partner to bear and raise a child could not sue for specific performance or for emotional distress related to her noncompliance with the contract, but could sue to recover the money spent on their agreement to raise the child [Dunkin v. Boskey (2000) 82 CA4th 171, 197, 98 CR2d 44].

A contract that is contrary to public policy may be enforced if the offending term is severable [Whorton v. Dillingham (1988) 202 CA3d 447, 454, 248 CR 405].

AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley

18.13 CHECKLIST: Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract or Provision Is Unconscionable.

☐ Assess whether contract was unconscionable when made, both:

- ☐ Procedurally unconscionable; and
- ☐ Substantively unconscionable.

Authority:

Coast Plaza Doctors Hosp. v. Blue Cross of Cal. (2000) 83 CA4th 677, 688-689, 99 CR2d 809 ; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 114, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669

Discussion:

See 18.15[1], [3]

☐ Determine procedural unconscionability by showing:

- ☐ Contract or term in question was one of adhesion;
- ☐ Contract or term involved surprise or oppression; or
- ☐ Procedural unconscionability should be inferred from one-sided substantive terms.

Authority:

Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 113, 99

CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 ; Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 291, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702

Discussion:

See 18.15[4]

☐ In case of arbitration agreement, determine if contract is unenforceable or subject to procedural safeguards.

☐ As party seeking to uphold agreement, determine if any state provision imposing requirements is preempted by Federal Arbitration Act.

Authority:

Mitchell v. American Fair Credit Assn. (2002) 99 CA4th 1345, 1355, 122 CR2d 193 ; Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Casarotto (1996) 517 US 681, 687, 116 S Ct 1652, 134 L Ed2d 902

Discussion:

See 18.16[2]

☐ As party seeking to challenge agreement, assess whether agreement is entirely invalid for imposing arbitration only on one party's claims.

Authority:

Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 117-118, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669

Discussion:

See 18.16[4][a]

☐ If agreement is generally enforceable, assess whether claims for injunctive relief on behalf of general public are triable to a court and should be severed.

☐ As party opposing injunctive relief, argue that court action should be stayed pending outcome of arbitration on other claims.

Authority:

Cruz v. PacifiCare Health Sys., Inc. (2003) 30 C4th 303, 320, 133 CR2d 58, 66 P3d 1157

Discussion:

See 18.16[4][f]

☐ If agreement is generally enforceable, assess whether procedural protections should be required for enforcement of state public or statutory rights.

Authority:

Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1076, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979

Discussion:

See 18.16[3]

- ☐ Assuming procedural guarantees are available, assess whether they have been adequately provided in arbitral forum.

Authority:

Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1080-1081, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979

Discussion:

See 18.16[4][b], [c]

- ☐ Assess whether provision for arbitral appeal or trial de novo is invalid as one-sided.

Authority:

Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1071-1074, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979

Discussion:

See 18.16[4][c]

- ☐ Assess whether provision for non-neutral arbitrator is invalid.

Authority:

Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 C3d 807, 821, 825-827

Discussion:

18.16[4][d]

- ☐ Assess whether provision limiting discovery is invalid.

Authority:

Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 105-106 ; Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1081]

Discussion:

18.16[4][e]

- ☐ Assess whether limitations on the amount or type of damages recoverable are invalid.

Authority:

Suh v. Superior Court (2010) 181 CA4th 1504, 1515, 105 CR3d 585

Discussion:

18.16[4][g]

- ☐ Assess whether any shortened statute of limitations is invalid.

Authority:

Martinez v. Master Prot. Corp. (2004) 118 CA4th 107, 117, 12 CR3d 663

Discussion:

See 18.16[4][h]

- ☐ Assess whether provision prohibiting the maintenance of a class action is invalid.

Authority:

Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 C4th 148, 162-163

Discussion:

18.18

- ☐ Determine whether unconscionable provision is severable from remainder of agreement.

Authority:

CC § 1670.5(a); Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 122, 124, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 ; Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1074-1075, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979

IV. ASSERTING OR DEFENDING CLAIM THAT CONTRACT OR PROVISION IS UNCONSCIONABLE

18.14 Options and Strategies.

To prevail on an argument that a contract is unconscionable, a party must demonstrate that the contract was unconscionable when made [see 18.15[1]], and must show that it is both procedurally and substantively unconscionable [see 18.15[3]]. A party challenging such an agreement will want to focus on substantive unconscionability rather than procedural unconscionability, since courts will sometimes infer procedural unfairness from a substantively unconscionable term, but the reverse is not true [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 292, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; see 18.15[4][c], 18.15[5][c]].

Courts have enunciated different standards for when an agreement is substantively unconscionable [see 18.15[5]]. A party seeking to uphold an agreement will wish to point to cases concluding that a contract must shock the conscience. A party challenging an agreement will want to point to California Supreme Court precedent suggesting that a lesser standard applies [see 18.15[5][b]].

Many cases on unconscionability deal with arbitration agreements [see 18.16]. The law in the area is not fully settled and is evolving rapidly. Discussion in this chapter is limited to the leading California Supreme Court cases, and counsel handling such a case should conduct additional research. Counsel should also seek to exploit differences between state and federal precedent in this area and should consider the most recent case law in choosing a forum to litigate issues relating to the enforcement of an arbitration agreement.

A party asserting that a contract is unconscionable also may be able to assert that it is contrary to public policy, because the elements of proof are related, and because it may be possible to obtain a more sweeping remedy under one doctrine than under the other [see 18.10].

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
IV. ASSERTING OR DEFENDING CLAIM THAT CONTRACT OR PROVISION IS UNCONSCIONABLE

18.15 Elements of Claim of Unconscionability.

18.15[1] Unconscionability Is Determined As of Time Contract Is Made. A contract or term must have been unconscionable at the time it was made [CC § 1670.5(a)]. Thus, subsequent evidence of unconscionability is not considered [Coast Plaza Doctors Hosp. v. Blue Cross of Cal. (2000) 83 CA4th 677, 688-689, 99 CR2d 809].

18.15[2] Unconscionability Is Question of Law. Like illegality and public policy claims, the issue of unconscionability is a question of law [Flores v. Transamerica HomeFirst, Inc. (2001) 93 CA4th 846, 851, 113 CR2d 376].

18.15[3] Both Procedural and Substantive Unconscionability Must Exist. An unconscionable contract or term ordinarily will involve both a procedural and substantive element [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 114, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 ; see Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 CA4th 938, 955, 85 CR3d 817 (both procedural and substantive unconscionability must be present for a contract to be found unconscionable)]. Procedural unconscionability is established by oppression or surprise due to unequal bargaining power; substantive unconscionability is demonstrated by overly harsh or one-sided results [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 291, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702]. However, the two types exist on a sliding scale, so that if a contract's negotiation shows little surprise or inappropriate disparity of bargaining power, it may still be inappropriate if it creates overly harsh results [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 292, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; Nagrampa v. MailCoups, Inc. (9th Cir 2006) 469 F3d 1257, 1293 (although evidence of procedural unconscionability was slight, evidence of substantive unconscionability was strong enough to tip scale and render arbitration provision unconscionable)].

18.15[4] Procedural Unconscionability Is Established by Showing Contract of Adhesion, Use of Surprise, or Unequal Bargaining Power.

18.15[4][a] Adhesion Contract Usually Has At Least a Minimum Degree of Procedural Unconscionability. An adhesion contract is a form contract in which one party cannot negotiate terms. A party opposing a contract or term may demonstrate that it was procedurally unconscionable by showing that it was a contract of adhesion [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1071, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979].

A contract of adhesion typically is drafted by the party having superior bargaining strength and relegates to the subscribing party only the opportunity to adhere to the contract or reject it [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 113, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

Absent unusual circumstances, use of a contract of adhesion establishes a minimal degree of procedural unconscionability notwithstanding the availability of market alternatives [Gatton v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. (2007) 152 CA4th 571, 585, 61 CR3d 344] .

Strategic Point:

While the adhesive nature of a contract can be sufficient to establish a minimal degree of procedural unconscionability, under the sliding scale approach plaintiffs must make a strong showing of substantive unconscionability to render the provision unenforceable. Thus, if the challenged provision does not have a high degree of substantive unconscionability, it still will be enforced [Gatton v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. (2007) 152 CA4th 571, 585-586, 61 CR3d 344 (arbitration provision in cellular phone service contract)].

Examples--Adhesion Contract:

- A work authorization contract presented by contractor like an invoice at the end of each day's work, which contained small printing on the reverse side including an exculpatory clause and other provisions, was a contract of adhesion [Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting & Eng'g, Inc. (2001) 89 CA4th 1042, 1053-1054, 107 CR2d 645].

- A booking agency's contract with a concert promoter that required union pay and work provisions generally used throughout the industry was adhesive despite the promoter's significant bargaining strength because he was forced to accept the primary terms offered or not agree to the contract at all [Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 C3d 807, 818-819, 171 CR 604, 623 P2d 165].

- An agreement for Digital Subscriber Line (DSL) service that was presented to the customer on a "take it or leave it" basis, either through installation of software or through materials included in a package mailed with the software, with no opportunity to opt out, demonstrated quintessential procedural unconscionability [Aral v. Earthlink, Inc. (2005) 134 CA4th 544, 557, 36 CR3d 229] .

- An arbitration agreement covering all current and future employees of a large law firm was procedurally unconscionable because it was "take it or leave it." Although the agreement's terms took effect three months after they were announced, an employee's only option was to leave and work somewhere else [Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir 2007) 485 F3d 1066, 1073-1075] .

- An arbitration agreement signed by an employee was procedurally unconscionable notwithstanding that employee had 30 days to opt out; employee would not likely have felt free to opt out, and the explanation of the benefits of arbitration was markedly one-sided, failing to mention any of the additional significant disadvantages of this particular arbitration agreement compared to litigation [Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 C4th 443, 470-472, 64 CR3d 773, 165 P3d 556] .

- A home warranty agreement containing arbitration provisions was a contract of adhesion. The arbitration provisions took up one page in a 30-page booklet that was in single-spaced, 10-point type, and the booklet was buried in a voluminous stack of purchase and sale documents. In addition, the home buyers were never asked to sign or initial the booklet, much less the arbitration provisions [Bruni v. Didion (2008) 160 CA4th 1272, 1293, 73 CR3d 395] .

- An arbitration agreement contained in a "Title 7 Master Declaration" given to homebuyers was part of a contract adhesion. It was contained in a preprinted form contract signed solely by the builders and brokers more than two years before any plaintiff closed escrow on a home, and plaintiffs had to accept the arbitration provisions if they wanted to buy a house [Thompson v. Toll Dublin, LLC (2008) 165 CA4th 1360, 1372, 81 CR3d 736] .

Example--No Adhesion Contract:

Home buyers did not meet their burden of showing that a purchase contract was an adhesion contract when they offered no evidence that they attempted to negotiate the provision and were rebuffed, no evidence the provision was included in every purchase agreement within the development or that the home builder denied any buyer's request to strike the provision, and no evidence that they lacked the education, experience, or sophistication necessary to understand the contracts. In addition, the home buyers did not state that they had insufficient time to read the provision, were pressured to sign it without reading it carefully, or were not afforded the opportunity to consult with anyone else, such as an attorney, before signing the agreement [Trend Homes, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 CA4th 950, 958-959, 32 CR3d 411] .

18.15[4][b] Surprise or Oppression Also May Cause Procedural Unconscionability. Although proof of procedural unconscionability generally takes the form of a contract of adhesion [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1071, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979], a contract can be procedurally unconscionable without being a contract of adhesion [Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 CA4th 1402, 1409, 7 CR3d 418]. A contract is procedurally unconscionable if it contains elements of surprise (in which supposedly agreed terms are hidden in a contract's other terms) or oppression (in which an inequality of bargaining power results in an absence of meaningful choice) for the weaker party [Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 CA4th 1519, 1532, 60 CR2d 138 ; Morris v. Redwood Empire Bancorp (2005) 128 CA4th 1305, 1319-1322, 27 CR3d 797].

Examples--Surprise:

- Arbitration provision that appeared in one of 12 numbered paragraphs in a section entitled "MISCELLANEOUS" near the end of a lengthy, single-spaced document was procedurally unconscionable. In contrast to several other paragraphs, no text in the arbitration provision was printed in bold letters or larger font or capitalized. Although plaintiffs were required to place their initials in boxes adjacent to six other paragraphs, no box appeared next to the arbitration provision [Higgins v. Superior Court (2006) 140 CA4th 1238, 1252-1253, 45 CR3d 293] .

- In action brought by homeowner against builder, an arbitration provision was procedurally unconscionable because it was not included in the terms of any contract between the homeowners and the builder, but was instead included in a document that purported to be an application by the builder to obtain a warranty from a third party, and the terms of the arbitration agreement were contained in additional documents that were not presented to the homeowners when they signed the builder application [Baker v. Osborne Development Corp. (2008) 159 CA4th 884, 894-895, 71 CR3d 854] .

- An arbitration agreement included in approximately 800 pages of documents given to homebuyers, which together comprised the purchase agreement, was procedurally unconscionable [Thompson v. Toll Dublin, LLC (2008) 165 CA4th 1360, 1372-1373, 81 CR3d 736] .

- An employee arbitration agreement was procedurally unconscionable because (1) the inequality in bargaining power between the low-wage employees and their employer made it likely that the employees felt at least some pressure to sign the arbitration agreement, and (2) the arbitration agreement falsely suggested that there were multiple arbitrators to choose from when in fact the designated arbitration provider included only one arbitrator, rendering the arbitrator selection process illusory and creating a significant risk that the employer as a "repeat player" before the same arbitrator would reap a significant advantage [Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 CA4th 154, 174-175, 90 CR3d 818] .

- Although arbitration provision in precious metal dealer's account agreement was not beyond a customer's reasonable expectation, a customer would not reasonably expect any dispute arising under the account agreement to be arbitrated before a panel of three private arbitrators, the fees for whom were not expressly set forth in the agreement [Parada v. Superior Court (2009) 176 CA4th 1554, 1571, 98 CR3d 743] .

- Arbitration provision in employment agreement was procedurally unconscionable because a description of the new dispute resolution policy in explanatory materials given to employees in English and Spanish misleadingly described the policy as requiring mediation rather than arbitration, and the policy itself appeared in much smaller type than the explanatory materials, and in English only [Olvera v. El Pollo Loco, Inc. (2009) 173 CA4th 447, 455-456, 93 CR3d 65] .

- Arbitration clause was procedurally unconscionable because it was contained on page 13 of an agreement in the same typeface as the balance of the agreement, and employees were required to sign a printed form "Waiver and Agreement" binding them to the agreement without having the opportunity to see it [Suh v. Superior Court (2010) 181 CA4th 1504, 1516, 105 CR3d 585] .

Examples--No Surprise:

- Judicial reference provision in a home purchase contract contained no element of surprise when the provision was clearly written, entirely capitalized and initialed by the buyer and seller. Nor was the provision so complicated or subtle for the ordinary person to understand that it required the home builder to explain the provision [Trend Homes, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 CA4th 950, 959-960, 32 CR3d 411] .

- An arbitration provision in an employment agreement was not procedurally unconscionable when it was not buried in a long document, but was contained on the last page of a seven-page employment application underneath the heading "Please Read Carefully, Initial Each Paragraph and Sign Below," and set forth in a separate, four-sentence paragraph that the plaintiff initialed, affirming she had seen it [Roman v. Superior Court (2009) 172 CA4th 1462, 1470-1471, 92 CR3d 153] .

Examples--Oppression:

- An arbitration provision in an employment agreement was procedurally unconscionable because inequality in bargaining power between low-wage employees and their employer made it likely that employees felt pressure to agree to the new dispute resolution policy, whatever they understood that policy to be [Olvera v. El Pollo Loco, Inc. (2009) 173 CA4th 447, 455, 93 CR3d 65] .

- An arbitration agreement contained in a hiking expedition company's release form was procedurally unconscionable because the company presented its terms both as nonnegotiable and no different than what plaintiffs would find with any other provider [Lhotka v. Geographic Expeditions, Inc. (2010) 181 CA4th 816, 824, 104 CR3d 844] .

Example--No Oppression:

Provisions for refueling charges in a truck rental contract were not oppressive because customers could choose to rent from another truck rental company [Aron v. U-Haul Co. of California (2006) 143 CA4th 796, 809, 49 CR3d 555] .

18.15[4][c] Courts Can Infer Procedural Unconscionability From Substantive Unconscionability. Because procedural and substantive unconscionability are evaluated on a sliding scale (on which a lack in one can be compensated by an excess in the other), a party may prevail by showing that a contract or term is substantively unconscionable [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 292, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702] .

18.15[5] Substantive Unconscionability Generally Is Shown Through Presence of Wholly One-Sided Term.

18.15[5][a] Wholly One-Sided Term Generally Sufficient to Show Substantive Unconscionability. A substantively unconscionable agreement or term may take various forms, but generally is unfairly one-sided [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 C4th 148, 161, CR3d 76, P3d]. Although a significant number of cases on unconscionability deal with arbitration clauses, substantive agreements relating to a number of issues other than dispute resolution also may be found unconscionable.

Examples--Substantively Unconscionable:

- An agreement providing for 200 percent interest per annum is substantively unconscionable regardless of whether it is subject to the limits of the usury law [Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 CA4th 76, 83-84, 2 CR2d 845] .
- A contract for the sale of a car based on an advertisement that misprinted the price as $12,000 below the intended price was substantively unconscionable despite the generally greater bargaining strength of the seller [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 292, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702] .
- An exculpatory clause in a contract for the sale for farm equipment was substantively unconscionable when the parties were of unequal experience and the stronger party attempted to limit its liability [A&M Produce Co. v. FMC Corp. (1982) 135 CA3d 473, 492, 186 CR 114] .
- Arbitration clause in franchise agreement giving franchisor access to a judicial forum to obtain provisional remedies to protect its intellectual property, while providing franchisee with only an arbitral forum to resolve her claims, lacked mutuality and was substantively unconscionable [Nagrampa v. MailCoups, Inc. (9th Cir 2006) 469 F3d 1257, 1285] .
- Terms in a law firm's employee arbitration agreement providing a one-year statute of limitations for claims, an overly broad confidentiality provision, and a provision exempting the law firm from arbitration for attorney-client privilege claims were substantively unconscionable [Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir 2007) 485 F3d 1066, 1076-1081] .
- Arbitration agreement contained in home warranty application was unfairly one-sided because it required homeowners to arbitrate virtually every claim they might raise against the builder and others involved in the construction of plaintiffs' homes, while the homebuilder would have no conceivable reason to institute legal proceedings against a homeowner after escrow closed [Baker v. Osborne Development Corp. (2008) 159 CA4th 884, 896, 71 CR3d 854] .

- An arbitrator selection provision in an employee arbitration agreement was substantively unconscionable because its designation of a "panel" of arbitrators consisting of a single arbitrator selected by the employer created a false appearance of mutuality in the selection of an arbitrator and created a significant risk that the employer would reap a significant advantage as a "repeat player" before the same arbitrator [Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 CA4th 154, 177-178, 90 CR3d 818] .

- A precious metal dealer's account agreement requiring a three-arbitrator panel and prohibiting consolidation or joinder was substantively unconscionable; the cost to each investor for a four-day arbitration would be at least $20,800, which was prohibitive for losses ranging from $44,000 to $130,000 [Parada v. Superior Court (2009) 176 CA4th 1554, 1581, 98 CR3d 743] .

- An arbitration agreement contained in a hiking expedition company's release form was so one-sided as to be substantively unconscionable because it limited plaintiffs' recovery to the amount they paid the company for their trip, required them to arbitrate in a distant forum, and required them to indemnify the company for its costs and attorney fees for defending any claims covered by the release of liability form [Lhotka v. Geographic Expeditions, Inc. (2010) 181 CA4th 816, 825, 104 CR3d 844] .

Examples--Not Substantively Unconscionable:

- A merchant agreement imposing a one-time fee of $150 when a merchant terminated a credit card merchant account was not substantively unconscionable [Morris v. Redwood Empire Bancorp (2005) 128 CA4th 1305, 1322-1324] .

- Authorized shipping outlet's insurance charge of $0.70 per $100 of declared value over $100--a 100 percent markup--did not shock the conscience as a matter of law and was not substantively unconscionable [Wayne v. Staples, Inc. (2006) 135 CA4th 466, 483, 37 CR3d 544] .

- Truck rental company's $20 fueling fee, additional charges for fuel used but not replaced, and allegedly illegal measuring system, did not shock the conscience as a matter of law [Aron v. U-Haul Co. of California (2006) 143 CA4th 796, 809, 49 CR3d 555] .

- The absence of express provisions requiring a written arbitration award and allowing discovery did not render an employee arbitration agreement substantively unconscionable; rather, those terms were implied as a matter of law as part of the agreement. Nor was a small claims provision applicable to claims under $50,000 allowing the arbitrator to apply "relaxed rules of evidence, the use of broad principles of equity in place of strict application of law, telephonic hearings, and such other economic procedures as the Arbitrator deems appropriate" unconscionable [Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 CA4th 154, 177, 90 CR3d 818] .

- National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. (NASD) rules for arbitration of investors' claims, which did not require an arbitration award to include factual findings or legal reasoning, provided for limited appeals, allowed a minority of arbitrators to be affiliated with the securities industry, and discouraged depositions, were not substantively unconscionable [Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 CA4th 938, 956-957, 85 CR3d 817] .

18.15[5][b] Courts Sometimes Require That Substantive Unconscionability Must "Shock the Conscience." A number of courts require that, to be substantively unconscionable, a contract or term must "shock the conscience" [see, e.g., California Grocers Ass'n v. Bank of Am. (1994) 22 CA4th 205, 214, 27 CR2d 396 ; Coast Plaza Doctors Hosp. v. Blue Cross of Cal. (2000) 83 CA4th 677, 689, 99 CR2d 809 ; Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting & Eng'g, Inc. (2001) 89 CA4th 1042, 1055, 107 CR2d 645]. However, other precedent, including decisions from the California Supreme Court, suggests that the standard may be considerably less severe [see, e.g., Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 292, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702 ; Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1072-1074, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979 ; see also Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 CA4th 1402, 1407].

18.15[5][c] Substantive Unconscionability Generally Is Not Inferred From Procedural Unconscionability. Although procedural unconscionability may be inferred if a contract or term is sufficiently substantively unconscionable, the reverse is not the case. Thus, even if a party demonstrates that a contract was one of adhesion between parties of unequal bargaining strength, a court will not invalidate the agreement if its substantive requirements are not substantively unconscionable [Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting & Eng'g, Inc. (2001) 89 CA4th 1042, 1054-1055, 107 CR2d 645 ; Jones v. Humanscale Corp. (2005) 130 CA4th 401, 415-416].

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
 IV. ASSERTING OR DEFENDING CLAIM THAT CONTRACT OR PROVISION IS UNCONSCIONABLE

*2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.16AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley18.16 Agreements Providing for Arbitration or Referee Are Scrutinized Under Special Criteria.

18.16[1] Agreements That Are Not One-Sided Will Likely Be Enforced With Possible Procedural Guarantees. As in all cases involving claims of unconscionability, in a challenge to an arbitration provision the court will look for evidence that the agreement was both procedurally and substantively unconscionable. A major factor in that analysis is the relative bargaining strength of the parties [see, e.g., Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1071, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979]. Contracts of adhesion likely will be found in preemployment arbitration agreements for all but the most sought-after employees [see Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 115, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

Although there are cases in which arbitration agreements have been held entirely invalid [see, e.g., Pardee Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (2002) 100 CA4th 1081, 1092, 123 CR2d 288 ; Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 CA4th 1402, 1411], the California Supreme Court generally has upheld them (except as to actions for injunctive relief), subject to procedural guarantees in cases involving public or statutory state law rights, unless they provide for arbitration of only one party's claims [see Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 122, 124, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 ; see also 18.19].

Strategic Point--All Parties:

The perceived bargaining power of the parties to an arbitration agreement may influence its enforceability [see 18.15[4]]. Arbitration agreements between employers and employees, mass retailers and consumers, and other parties to potential adhesion relationships seem to receive more scrutiny and be held unenforceable more often than agreements between parties of perceived equal bargaining power, such as two similarly sized commercial enterprises.

18.16[2] Arbitration Cases Are Governed by Federal Arbitration Act. Generally applicable contract defenses such as fraud, duress, and unconscionability, escape the preemptive force of Section 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act (general national policy in favor of arbitration) [Mitchell v. American Fair Credit Assn. (2002) 99 CA4th 1345, 1356-1357, 122 CR2d 193 ; see 9 USC § 2]. However, state law applicable only to arbitration provisions will be preempted by the FAA [see Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Casarotto (1996) 517 US 681, 687, 116 S Ct 1652, 134 L Ed2d 902 ; see also Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 98, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669], as will provisions prohibiting waiver of rights under specific statutes [Ting v. AT&T (9th Cir 2003) 319 F3d 1126, 1148 (discussing anti-waiver provision of Consumer Legal Remedies Act)]. The FAA applies to essentially all agreements to arbitrate in connection with contracts evidencing a transaction involving commerce [Citizens Bank v. Alafabco, Inc. (2003) 539 US 52, 55, 123 S Ct 2037, 156 L Ed2d 46], including most employment contracts [Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 US 105, 115, 121 S Ct 1302, 149 L Ed2d 234].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

California Supreme Court case law importing procedural protections into arbitration agreements affecting statutory or public rights is potentially vulnerable based on Supreme Court precedent under the FAA to the effect that states may not decide that a contract is fair enough to enforce all its basic terms (price, service, credit), but not fair enough to enforce its arbitration clause [Allied-Bruce Terminix Cos. v. Dobson (1995) 513 US 265, 281, 115 S Ct 834, 130 L Ed2d 753]. Counsel for a party seeking to enforce an arbitration agreement and any procedural provisions within such an agreement should consider making this argument [see Ting v. AT&T (9th Cir 2003) 319 F3d 1126, 1148].

18.16[3] Arbitration Agreements Are Likely Subject to Procedural Requirements in Cases of Public or Statutory Rights. Claims regarding virtually unwaivable rights that are based on a state statute [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 103, 106, 113, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669] or public policy [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1076-1077, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979] may be arbitrable subject to certain procedural requirements, at least in the preemployment agreement context before a dispute has arisen. They are subject to the following requirements [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 103, 106, 113, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 ; Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1076, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979]:

- The arbitration agreement may not limit the damages available.
- There must be discovery sufficient to adequately arbitrate the claim [see 18.16[4][e]].
- There must be a written decision and judicial review sufficient to ensure that the arbitrator(s) comply with the law.
- The employer must pay all types of costs unique to arbitration [see 18.16[4][b]].

Example:

In a FEHA case, the arbitrator's written decision did not satisfy the third Armendariz requirement because it did not explain, even briefly, the reason for the arbitrator's conclusion that the plaintiff's claim did not benefit from a statutory tolling period [Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 C4th 665, 679, 108 CR3d 171, 229 P3d 83] .

Distinguish:

The California Supreme Court has declined to extend the Armendariz/Little protections to an arbitration of a bad faith insurance claim [Boghos v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2005) 36 C4th 495, 30 CR3d 787, 115 P3d 68]. The court cautioned that these protections have been applied only to statutory claims (such as the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, Gov Code § 12900 et seq.), as in Armendariz, and to claims of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy, as in Little [Boghos v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2005) 36 C4th 495, 507-508]. Claims of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy, although not statutory, "seek to enforce public policies that are carefully tethered to fundamental policies delineated in constitutional or statutory provisions" [Boghos v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2005) 36 C4th 495, 507, 30 CR3d 787, 115 P3d 68]. The court suggested that the Armendariz/Little protections could conceivably be extended beyond the employment context, but only to other types of unwaivable claims based on or tethered to statutes, and not generally to common law claims [Boghos v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2005) 36 C4th 495, 507-508, 30 CR3d 787, 115 P3d 68]. Following Boghos, one court has held that a franchisee-franchisor relationship is sufficiently factually similar to the employee-employer relationship to require the trial court to consider shifting costs of arbitration to the franchisor when a franchisee asserts unwaivable statutory claims against a franchisor [Independent Ass'n of Mailbox Ctr. Owners, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 133 CA4th 396, 416-417, 34 CR3d 659 ; see also Giuliano v. Inland Empire Personnel, Inc. (2007) 149 CA4th 1276, 1290, 58 CR3d 5 (employee's claim against former employer did not arise from unwaivable public rights, even though the employee asserted a wage claim under Lab Code § 229, because the employee sought a multimillion-dollar bonus and severance payment, not minimum wage or overtime payments)].

Strategic Point--All Parties:

A plaintiff filing an action in the face of an arbitration agreement will want to consider carefully whether to file the action in state or federal court. A defendant seeking to compel arbitration will need to decide whether it is worthwhile to remove to federal court before seeking to compel arbitration. Counsel for plaintiffs should note that the Ninth Circuit has suggested that a number of the procedural protections apply to the arbitration of statutory claims in general [Ting v. AT&T (9th Cir 2003) 319 F3d 1126, 1151]. Counsel for plaintiffs should consider the uncertainty regarding arbitral cost-sharing under federal law, and counsel for defendants should consider removal for this reason.

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

To the extent possible, plaintiffs' counsel should seek to characterize their non-statutory claims as involving public policies tethered to statutes or constitutional provisions, in order to invoke the Armendariz/Little protections.

Strategic Point--Defendant:

Recent decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court have expanded the scope of claims subject to the FAA [see, e.g., Citizens Bank v. Alafabco, Inc. (2003) 539 US 52, 57-58, 123 S Ct 2037, 156 L Ed2d 46 ; Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 US 105, 119, 121 S Ct 1302, 149 L Ed2d 234]. Counsel seeking to enforce arbitration provisions should continue to argue that state laws limiting arbitration are not generally applicable, and are thus preempted by Section 2 of the FAA [9 USC § 2].

 Cross Reference:

18.16[4] Particular Terms of Agreement May Be Held Invalid.

18.16[4][a] Arbitration of Only One Party's Claims Are Invalid. When there is unequal bargaining strength, an agreement to arbitrate only the weaker party's claims is likely to be invalid [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 117-118, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 (employment arbitration context); Higgins v. Superior Court (2006) 140 CA4th 1238, 1253-1254, 45 CR3d 293 (arbitration clause in agreement for appearance on reality television show); Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 CA4th 1267, 1282-1283, 16 CR3d 296]. Parties may justify an "asymmetrical" arbitration agreement if there is a legitimate commercial need, but that need must be something other than the employer's desire to maximize its advantage in the arbitration [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1073, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979 ; Jones v. Humanscale Corp. (2005) 130 CA4th 401, 411-412, 29 CR3d 881].

18.16[4][b] Requiring Sharing of Arbitration Costs May Be Invalid. Provisions requiring the sharing of costs of arbitration have been ruled invalid under state law in the context of preemployment arbitration agreements [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1080-1081, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979 ; Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 CA4th 494, 510-511, 79 CR3d 471] and elsewhere [Gutierrez v. Autowest, Inc. (2003) 114 CA4th 77, 91-92, 7 CF3d 267 (lending challenge); Ting v. AT&T (9th Cir 2003) 319 F3d 1126, 1151 (challenge under Consumer Legal Remedies Act); Independent Ass'n of Mailbox Ctr. Owners, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 133 CA4th 396, 416-417 (directing trial court to conduct proceedings regarding franchisees' request to shift costs to franchisor); Higgins v. Superior Court (2006) 140 CA4th 1238, 1254, 45 CR3d 293 (agreement for appearance on reality television show)].

Under California law, a court will interpret an arbitration agreement that is silent as to costs to impose those costs on the employer [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 113, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669]. Under federal law, a court may refuse to do so on the grounds that the inquiry would be premature at the stage of a motion to compel arbitration [Green Tree Fin. Corp. v. Randolph (2000) 531 US 79, 89-91, 121 S Ct 513, 148 L Ed2d 373]. Moreover, the federal standard as to cost-sharing may be more lenient [compare Green Tree Fin. Corp. v. Randolph (2000) 531 US 79, 91-92, 121 S Ct 513, 148 L Ed2d 373 , with Cole v. Burns Int'l Sec. Servs. (DC Cir 1997) 105 F3d 1465, 1485 , and Ting v. AT&T (9th Cir 2003) 319 F3d 1126, 1151 (citing Cole)].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

A party seeking to enforce cost-sharing in an arbitration agreement when the issues being arbitrated include federal statutory rights should consider arguing that the federal standard governs.

18.16[4][c] Arbitral Appeal or Review of Award Exceeding Specific Amount Probably Is Invalid. Provisions allowing an arbitral appeal or trial de novo if a party wins an award in excess of a specific amount repeatedly have been rejected as unconscionable [see Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1071-1074, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979]. These rulings are founded on the general prohibition against one-sided arbitration agreements [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1073, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979].

Strategic Point:

A party seeking enforcement of an arbitration agreement providing for appeal or de novo review should argue that these rulings do not apply if the parties had equal bargaining power. In any event, if such a provision is invalid, the party should argue that it is severable [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1074-1075, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979].

18.16[4][d] Provisions for Non-Neutral Arbitrators Are Invalid. Agreements to arbitrate are invalid if they provide for an arbitral body or referee that is likely to favor one of the parties [Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 C3d 807, 821, 825-827, 171 CR 604, 623 P2d 165 ; Sehulster Tunnels v. Traylor Bros., Inc. (2003) 111 CA4th 1328, 1340-1342, 4 CR3d 655]. However, the agreement to arbitrate may be enforced if the court severs the provision specifying a non-neutral arbitrator [Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 C3d 807, 831, 825-827, 171 CR 604, 623 P2d 165 ; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 126, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 (citing cases)].

18.16[4][e] Some Provisions Limiting Discovery May Be Voidable. In general, there is no entitlement to discovery in arbitration proceedings [CCP § 1283.05(e)]. However, in specified situations in which discovery is allowed in arbitration, limitations on discovery have been held inappropriate in the arbitration of claims by employees under the Fair Employment and Housing Act [Gov Code § 12900 et seq.; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 105-106, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 ; Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 CA4th 494, 511-514, 79 CR3d 471] , and claims of wrongful termination in violation of public policy [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1081, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979]. Curtailment of each party to two depositions has been held sufficient to invalidate an employment arbitration agreement in its entirety [Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 CA4th 702, 717, 13 CR3d 88]. However, a limitation to 30 unspecified discovery requests including three depositions in a similar context was found not to be facially invalid [Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 CA4th 167, 183, 116 CR2d 671 ; see Roman v. Superior Court (2009) 172 CA4th 1462, 1475-1476, 92 CR3d 153 (AAA's employment dispute rules authorizing the arbitrator to order "such discovery, by way of deposition, interrogatory, document production, or otherwise, as the arbitrator considers necessary to a full and fair exploration of the issues in dispute, consistent with the expedited nature of arbitration" were not unconscionable)].

Warning:

Counsel should carefully assess the adequacy of discovery guarantees in the preemployment arbitration context given the fine distinctions between the cases.

Strategic Point:

Counsel for a party seeking to uphold or challenge arbitration agreements on discovery grounds outside the employment context should note statements by the California Supreme Court suggesting more extensive discovery is appropriate in the context of employment arbitration when the employer is in possession of most of the evidence [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 105-106, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669], and should consider whether the same argument is present in their case.

18.16[4][f] Courts Will Deny Arbitration As to Injunctive Relief Relating to Public Statutory Rights. The California Supreme Court has made clear that injunctions on behalf of the public--at least under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act [CC § 1770] or B&P Code §§ 17200 and 17500--are not subject to arbitration, because the relief is on behalf of the public generally and an arbitrator will not have the power to enforce that relief [Cruz v. PacifiCare Health Sys., Inc. (2003) 30 C4th 303, 314-316, 133 CR2d 58, 66 P3d 1157]. For the same reason, an arbitration provision prohibiting the filing of administrative claims is void [Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir 2007) 485 F3d 1066, 1082-1084] . However, a stay of litigation regarding injunctions until the arbitration regarding other relief is complete may be appropriate [Cruz v. PacifiCare Health Sys., Inc. (2003) 30 C4th 303, 320, 133 CR2d 58, 66 P3d 1157].

Warning:

California's Proposition 64 amended B&P Code § 17204 to require that a plaintiff asserting a cause of action under B&P Code § 17200 must have suffered injury in fact and lost money or property as a result of the alleged violation.

Cross Reference:

Actions under B&P Code § 17200 and discussion of effect of Proposition 64, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Unfair Competition and Business Torts, Ch. 2, Unfair Competition.

18.16[4][g] Limitations on Amount or Type of Damages Recoverable May Be Invalid. Arbitration clauses that prohibit and arbitrator from awarding punitive, consequential, or limited damages, and limited the total amount of monetary damages that could be recovered by one party, have been rejected as unconscionable [Suh v. Superior Court (2010) 181 CA4th 1504, 1515, 105 CR3d 585 (absolute prohibition of consequential, punitive, incidental, or special damages in employment-related cases was substantively unconscionable); Independent Ass'n of Mailbox Ctr. Owners, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 133 CA4th 396, 411-413, 34 CR3d 659 (trial court should have stricken arbitration clauses that purported to deprive franchisees of remedies available by statute)].

18.16[4][h] Shortened Statute of Limitations May Be Invalid. A shortened limitation period may be so short that it would be unconscionable to enforce it [see Ingle v. Circuit City Stores, Inc. (9th Cir 2003) 328 F3d 1165, 1175 (one-year limitation period); Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir 2007) 485 F3d 1066, 1076-1078 (one year); Martinez v. Master Prot. Corp. (2004) 118 CA4th 107, 117, 12 CR3d 663 (six months)].

18.17 Forum Selection Provisions May Be Held Invalid.

An agreement by a party of superior bargaining strength that requires the weaker party to bring an action in the stronger party's forum, when the stronger party has its choice, may be unconscionable [Bolter v. Superior Court (2001) 87 CA4th 900, 908-910, 104 CR2d 888]. However, if both parties agree to the forum of the stronger party's choice, it will likely be upheld [Intershop Communications AG v. Superior Court (2002) 104 CA4th 191, 201-202, 127 CR2d 847].

18.18 Provisions Prohibiting Maintenance of Class Actions Are Likely Invalid.

A contractual provision waiving a party's right to bring a class action is unenforceable in a consumer contract of adhesion when disputes between the parties predictably will involve small amounts of damages allegedly due to large numbers of consumers [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 C4th 148, 162-163 ; see Klussman v. Cross Country Bank (2005) 134 CA4th 1283, 1298, 36 CR3d 728 (class action waiver contained in National Arbitration Forum website referenced in cardholder agreement is unconscionable)]. Such a provision creates virtual immunity for the stronger party, because few customers will bother to seek redress for relatively small amounts of money [Szetela v. Discover Bank (2002) 97 CA4th 1094, 1101]. However, although a prohibition on such claims may be unconscionable, they are most likely arbitrable [Cruz v. Pacificare Health Sys., Inc. (2003) 30 C4th 303, 318-319, 133 CR2d 58, 66 P3d 1157].

Examples:

- A group of franchisees brought action against a franchisor. All of the franchisees' franchise agreements contained arbitration clauses; some, but not all, prohibited class wide arbitration. Because the franchisees made an adequate showing under CCP § 1281.3 that there were common issues of law and fact, the trial court erred by refusing to strike the ban on group arbitration contained in some of the franchise agreements [Independent Ass'n of Mailbox Ctr. Owners, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 133 CA4th 396, 410, 411, 34 CR3d 659].
- A consumer brought a class action against an Internet service provider, alleging that the defendant charged fees to customers for Digital Subscriber Line (DSL) service for a period prior to providing customers with the equipment necessary to utilize the service. The defendant moved to compel arbitration, relying on its DSL service agreement, which contained an arbitration clause and a class action waiver. Because the gravamen of the complaint was that numerous consumers were cheated out of small sums of money through deliberate behavior, the class action waiver was unconscionable under California law [Aral v. Earthlink, Inc. (2005) 134 CA4th 544, 556-557, 36 CR3d 229] .
- A class action waiver in a satellite television company's customer agreement was unconscionable because it appeared in a consumer contract of adhesion presented on a take it or leave it basis; the waiver was indisputably one-sided, as the company would have no occasion to use the class action device in disputes with its customers; and the sums involved were sufficiently small that a class action was likely the only effective way to redress the alleged wrongdoing by the company [Cohen v. DIRECTV Inc. (2006) 142 CA4th 1442, 1455, 48 CR3d 813] .

- In a class action against a cellular telephone provider challenging the early termination fee charged subscribers, a class action waiver contained in the service agreement's arbitration clause was substantively unconscionable under Discover Bank because many consumers would view the largest monetary damage claim of $200 as insufficient to warrant individual litigation [Gatton v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. (2007) 152 CA4th 571, 587-588, 61 CR3d 344] .

- In a class action against a cellular telephone service provider, a class arbitration waiver in the defendant's standard contract for cellular phone service was unconscionable under Discover Bank because it was found in a consumer contract of adhesion, class members suffered individual damages in the hundreds of dollars, and the complaint alleged that the defendant induced thousands of customers to enter into agreements by misrepresenting to customers that their services would be improved only if they entered into contract extensions [Shroyer v. New Cingular Wireless Servs. (9th Cir 2007) 498 F3d 976, 983-984] .

- In a class action against a lender challenging its vehicle repossession practices, plaintiffs failed to establish that the individual amounts at issue were so small that a class action was the only viable remedy when the amount at issue exceeded $16,000 [Arguelles-Romero v. Superior Court (2010) 184 CA4th 825, 844, 109 CR3d 289].

- A class action waiver in a contract for the purchase of a computer was unconscionable under Discover Bank because the agreement was an adhesion contract, the $1200 to $1500 purchase price was a small enough amount to prevent consumers from pursuing their individual claims, and plaintiffs alleged a deliberate practice to deprive consumers of money by selling products the manufacturer was aware were defective [Omstead v. Dell, Inc. (9th Cir 2010) 594 F3d 1081, 1086-1087] .

Similarly, a class arbitration waiver in an employment agreement may be unenforceable in a class action alleging overtime pay or other Labor Code violations. In determining whether to enforce the class arbitration waiver, the court must consider the size of potential individual recoveries, the potential for retaliation against members of the class, the fact that absent members of the class may be poorly informed about their rights, and other real-world obstacles to the vindication of class members' rights to overtime pay through individual arbitration [Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 C4th 443, 463, 64 CR3d 773, 165 P3d 556 ; see also Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 CA4th 138, 148, 67 CR3d 120 (in wage and hour case, class action waiver was unconscionable; evidence showed that class members would have difficulty securing legal representation for individual cases because of the relatively small sums involved); Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 CA4th 154, 170-171, 90 CR3d 818 (individual recovery in wage case was likely to be modest, the potential for retaliation against members of the class who litigated or arbitrated individually was significant, and most employees were immigrants with limited English language skills who were likely to be unaware of their legal rights); Franco v. Athens Disposal Co., Inc. (2009) 171 CA4th 1277, 1298, 90 CR3d 539 (in case alleging employer systematically denied employees meal and rest periods, the size of the potential individual recovery was small, the possibility of retaliation against an employee who filed an individual suit existed, and absent members of the class may have been ill-informed about their rights)].

In addition, a provision in an employee arbitration agreement prohibiting an employee from recovering civil penalties on behalf of others as a "private attorney general" may be invalid if it impedes Gentry's goal of ensuring comprehensive enforcement of a statutory scheme [Franco v. Athens Disposal Co., Inc. (2009) 171 CA4th 1277, 1298, 90 CR3d 539] .

Distinguish:

Under the law of other states, such as Delaware, class action waivers are enforceable [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 134 CA4th 886, 891-893, 36 CR3d 456 (enforcing parties' choice-of-law provision and applying Delaware law)].

18.19 Courts Will Seek to Sever Unconscionable Contract Terms.

CC § 1670.5(a) provides that if a court finds that a contract or term was unconscionable when made, the court may refuse to enforce the contract, may enforce the remainder of the contract without the unconscionable clause, or may limit the application of an unconscionable clause to avoid an unconscionable result. The statute allows a court to refuse enforcement of a contract as a whole only when the agreement is permeated with unconscionability. A court may analogize to the case law regarding severability relating to illegal contracts or terms in this regard [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 122, 124, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

Examples:

- A court generally will not sever a provision allowing for the arbitration of only one party's claims, even if the excepted party subsequently is willing to make the terms of the agreement mutual [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 124-125, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].
- A court will sever an appellate arbitration provision working to only one party's benefit, as it must sever only one term to achieve this result [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1074-1075, 130 CR2d 892, 63 P3d 979].
- A court will limit the applicability of an arbitration agreement to claims other than those for injunctive relief as to public rights [Cruz v. PacifiCare Health Sys., Inc. (2003) 30 C4th 303, 320, 133 CR2d 58, 66 P3d 1157].
- A court acts within its discretion in refusing to enforce entire agreement when it contains more than one unconscionable term [Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 CA4th 138, 139, 67 CR3d 120] .
- A court acts within its discretion in refusing to enforce an entire arbitration agreement when at least three provisions are substantively unconscionable, including a provision for arbitrator determinations of enforceability issues, a provision requiring that the employee pay a portion of the arbitration-related costs, and a provision severely limiting discovery [Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 CA4th 494, 515, 79 CR3d 471] .

- The court acted within its discretion in refusing to sever a class arbitration waiver that was contrary to public policy and an unconscionable arbitrator selection clause; those provisions considered together indicated an effort to impose on an employee a forum with distinct advantages for the employer, creating an arbitration agreement permeated by an unlawful purpose [Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 CA4th 154, 181, 90 CR3d 818] .

- The court refused to sever provisions in a precious metal dealer's account agreement requiring investors to arbitrate disputes before a panel of three arbitrators from JAMS and prohibiting consolidation or joinder of claims; the precious metal dealer's failure to offer a justification or explanation for requiring three arbitrators instead of one demonstrated that it included these provisions deliberately to increase the cost of arbitration for the improper purpose of discouraging or preventing its customers from vindicating their rights [Parada v. Superior Court (2009) 176 CA4th 1554, 1586-1587, 98 CR3d 743] .

- The court acted within its discretion in refusing to sever an arbitration agreement contained in a hiking expedition company's release form that limited plaintiffs' recovery to the amount they paid the company for their trip, required them to arbitrate in a distant forum, and required them to indemnify the company for its costs and attorney fees for defending any claims covered by the release agreement [Lhotka v. Geographic Expeditions, Inc. (2010) 181 CA4th 816, 826, 104 CR3d 844] .

V. DETERMINING ENFORCEABILITY BASED UPON SEVERABILITY AND PUBLIC POLICY
CONSIDERATIONS

2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.21

AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley

18.21 Options and Strategies.

Whether a contract is found to be illegal, unconscionable, or contrary to public policy, the general standard for defining a remedy is the same: the question is whether the offending term is severable or whether it permeates the entire agreement [see 18.22]. Parties seeking to uphold agreements and parties seeking to invalidate them often will differ on this question, and should analogize to cases supporting their view.

A party seeking to uphold an agreement can appeal to the general policies in favor of enforcing agreements and prohibiting unjust results, particularly in the case of partially performed contracts, and should refer to the doctrine that when a contract is merely contrary to statute and both parties are equally to blame, a court should enforce the agreement despite its illegality [see 18.23].

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
V. DETERMINING ENFORCEABILITY BASED UPON SEVERABILITY AND PUBLIC POLICY
CONSIDERATIONS

2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.22

AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley

18.22 Severability May Determine Whether Other Provisions of Contract May Be Enforceable.

18.22[1] Contract Is Void If Sole Object of Contract Is Illegal. If the main object of a contract is unlawful in whole or in part, the entire contract is void [CC § 1598]. Whether a contract's object is entire or severable depends on its language and subject matter as intended by the parties [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 122, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669]. Although there are strong policy reasons for severing a term that is illegal, unconscionable, or contrary to public policy, a court will refuse to do so if the central purpose of the contract is tainted with illegality, is contrary to public policy, or is unconscionable [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 124, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

Examples:

- A contract providing for the procurement of performance engagements by a personal manager not licensed as a talent agent violated the Talent Agencies Act and was void and unenforceable; in order to further the public policy of deterrence underlying the Act, the court refused to sever the illegal portions of the contract from the legal, denying the unlicensed personal manager recovery even for activities that did not require a talent agency license [Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 CA4th 1089, 1105, 24 CR3d 740].
- The trial court did not err in declining to sever a lawful cohabitation agreement from an unlawful agreement to perform recording management services without the required talent agency license, because the lawful and unlawful objects were inextricably intertwined considerations [Chiba v. Greenwald (2007) 156 CA4th 71, 81-82, 67 CR3d 86].
- An agreement that provides only for the employee's arbitration of claims against the employer, but not the reverse, cannot be reformed [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 124-125, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

- An agreement to sell 2 million board-feet of lumber at a certain price to a particular buyer and not to sell lumber to any other buyer cannot be reformed because the main object of the agreement is the restraint of trade [Santa Clara Valley Mill & Lumber Co. v. Hayes (1888) 76 C 387, 393, 18 P 391].

- A contract for the purchase of a liquor license, a lease, and the sale of alcoholic beverages was unenforceable because the sale of the license was illegal and was integral to the agreement [Teachout v. Bogy (1917) 175 C 481, 488, 166 P 319].

Jury Instructions:

Object of Contract Must Be Legal, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Instr. MB 300F.90 (Matthew Bender).

18.22[2] If Contract Has Multiple Objects, Court May Sever Illegal Parts and Respective Consideration. If a contract has several distinct objects, at least one of which is lawful, the contract may be voided in part [CC § 1599]. Although CC § 1599 authorizes a court to sever the illegal object of a contract from the legal, it does not require the court to do so. The decision whether to sever the illegal term of a contract is informed by equitable considerations [Marathon Entertainment, Inc. v. Blasi (2008) 42 C4th 974, 996, 70 CR3d 727, 174 P3d 741 (when Talent Agencies Act is violated, full voiding of parties' contract is available, but not mandatory; likewise, severance is available, but not mandatory); Chiba v. Greenwald (2007) 156 CA4th 71, 81, 67 CR3d 86] . Courts particularly will seek to enforce agreements by severing improper terms in two situations [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 123-124, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669 (citing cases)]:

- If enforcing at least a portion of the agreement will prevent the inequitable results of voiding a partially performed contract.

- In order to preserve an otherwise legal contractual relationship.

Examples:

- In an action brought to recover compensation under a property management agreement, the trial court erred in concluding that, as a matter of law, the lawful parts of the agreement could not be severed from the unlawful portions. Although a real estate broker's license (which the property management company did not have) was required for some of the activities covered by the agreement, it was not required for other management duties such as causing repairs to be made, decorating, and general maintenance [MKB Management, Inc. v. Melikian (2010) 184 CA4th 796, 804-805, 108 CR3d 899] .

- In an action against an actress brought by her personal manager seeking to recover commissions, the actress was not entitled to summary judgment on the ground that the manager had violated the Talent Agencies Act. Because the parties' agreement had the lawful purpose of providing personal management services that were unregulated by the Act, the possibility existed that the actress's obligation to pay the manager a commission could be severed from any unlawful parts of the parties' management agreement [Marathon Entertainment, Inc. v. Blasi (2008) 42 C4th 974, 982, 70 CR3d 727, 174 P3d 741] .

- An insurance contract issued by an unlicensed insurer is enforceable by an innocent consumer when the only taint of illegality is the unlicensed status of the insurer itself [Medina v. Safe-Guard Products, Internat., Inc. (2008) 164 CA4th 105, 112, 78 CR3d 672] .

- In an action brought by attorneys seeking to recover settlement proceeds, charging liens that violated Cal Rules Prof Conduct, Rule 3-300, could be severed from valid, enforceable contingent fee agreements

[Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 CA4th 1489, 1525, 85 CR3d 268] .

- A trial court properly severed a portion of a collective bargaining agreement between teachers and a school district that violated the Education Code from the valid portion [Adair v. Stockton Unified School Dist. (2008) 162 CA4th 1436, 1450, 77 CR3d 62] .

- In a subcontract agreement between a contractor and a subcontractor, a provision requiring that mediation take place in Nevada, which violated CCP § 410.42, was severed from the remainder of the provisions dealing with mediation [Templeton Development Corp. v. Superior Court (2006) 144 CA4th 1073, 1084-1085, 51 CR3d 19] .

- In a contract for the sale of machines, a number of which were illegal gambling machines, the provision for sale of those machines was severed from remainder of contract because separate consideration for those machines could be identified [Keene v. Harling (1964) 61 C2d 318, 322-323, 38 CR 513, 392 P2d 273] .

- An agreement for performance of legal services by attorneys not admitted to practice in California was upheld to the extent the agreement provided for legal services outside of state [Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v. Superior Court (1998) 17 C4th 119, 137-139, 70 CR2d 304, 949 P2d 1] .

- An overbroad covenant not to compete may be limited to an appropriate geographic area [General Paint Corp. v. Seymour (1932) 124 CA 611, 614-615, 12 P2d 990] .

When an agreement contains more than one unlawful provision of importance, courts sometimes have refused to sever the unlawful provisions on the grounds that the agreement is permeated by an unlawful purpose [see Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 CA4th 154, 181, 90 CR3d 818 (court refused to sever a class arbitration waiver that was contrary to public policy and an unconscionable arbitrator selection clause because those provisions considered together indicated an effort to impose on an employee a forum with distinct advantages for the employer, creating an arbitration agreement permeated by an unlawful purpose); Franco v. Athens Disposal Co., Inc. (2009) 171 CA4th 1277, 1298, 90 CR3d 539 (employee arbitration agreement containing a class arbitration waiver and also precluding an employee from seeking civil penalties on behalf of other employees as a private attorney general was tainted with illegality and unenforceable)].

18.22[3] Policy Regarding Severability Is Followed in Unconscionable Contracts and Contracts Violating Public Policy. While CC §§ 1598 and 1599 specifically address severability in the context of illegal contracts, their provisions generally will be followed so as to save contracts in which terms have been found unconscionable or contrary to public policy [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 122, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669] .

Chapter 18 Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable
V. DETERMINING ENFORCEABILITY BASED UPON SEVERABILITY AND PUBLIC POLICY
CONSIDERATIONS

2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.23

AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley

18.23 Consequences of Impermissible Contract or Term Depend on Equities.

18.23[1] Contract May Be Void If Parties Are Equally at Fault. If the parties are equally at fault, a court will likely treat a contract as void and unenforceable by either of them, regardless of whether the contract is contrary to public policy [Bovard v. American Horse Enters., Inc. (1988) 201 CA3d 832, 841, 247 CR 340] or illegal [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 347-351, 17 CR3d 66].

Example:

Trial court erred in awarding partial rescission to buyer of business because both parties were aware that business was substantially involved in the sale of counterfeit goods, rendering the object of the business purchase agreement illegal and the agreement unenforceable [Yoo v. Jho (2007) 147 CA4th 1249, 1254-1255, 55 CR3d 243].

18.23[2] Contract May Be Voidable at Option of Less Responsible Party.

18.23[2][a] Malum in Se Is Contrary to Morals and Is Always Void. A contract is "malum in se" when it is contrary to good morals. Such contracts are void regardless of the relative culpability of the parties [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 344, 17 CR3d 66].

18.23[2][b] Malum Prohibitum Is Contrary to Statute Only. Despite language in some cases suggesting that contracts contrary to statute are always "malum prohibitum" rather than malum in se [see, e.g., McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 344], a contract is malum in se if it is contrary to good morals, regardless of whether it is also prohibited by statute [see Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 CA3d 1104, 1109, 260 CR 6 ; Asdourian v. Araj (1985) 38 C3d 276, 293, 211 CR 703, 696 P2d 95]. If a contract is simply malum prohibitum, the contract is voidable at the option of the less responsible party [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 347, 17 CR3d 66].

Examples:

● Voidable malum prohibitum contracts include contracts involving the violation of the contractor licensing law [Asdourian v. Araj (1985) 38 C3d 276, 293, 211 CR 703, 696 P2d 95 ; Holland v. Morse Diesel Int'l, Inc. (2001) 86 CA4th 1443, 1453, 104 CR2d 239] or the violation of the prohibition on attorney fee-splitting [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 344, 17 CR3d 66], contingency fee contracts that lack the disclosures required by B&P Code § 6147 [Fergus v. Songer (2007) 150 CA4th 552, 558, 59 CR3d 273], insurance contracts issued by unlicensed insurers [Medina v. Safe-Guard Products, Int'l, Inc. (2008) 164 CA4th 105, 111-112, 78 CR3d 672], and contracts between health care service plans and health care providers illegally organized as nonprofit corporations instead of professional medical corporations or partnerships [California Physicians' Service v. Aoki Diabetes Research Institute (2008) 163 CA4th 1506, 1517, 78 CR3d 646] .

● Void malum in se contracts include contracts for the illegal manufacture of drug paraphernalia [Bovard v. American Horse Enters., Inc. (1988) 201 CA3d 832, 841, 247 CR 340] and to circumvent federal law [Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 CA3d 1104, 1110-1111, 260 CR 6], including schemes to evade income taxes [Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 CA3d 1104, 1112, 260 CR 6] .

When neither party is guilty of great moral fault, however, and the aggrieved party is seeking potential lost profits rather than restitution, equity does not require enforcement of a malum prohibitum contract [Kelton v. Stravinski (2006) 138 CA4th 941, 949, 41 CR3d 877 (refusing to enforce illegal covenant not to compete)].

Even a contract that has as its goal the unlawful evasion of taxes is enforceable by a party who is less at fault and who has fully performed his side of the transaction, if failure to enforce the agreement would result in a substantial forfeiture by the less guilty party [Maudlin v. Pac. Decision Scis. Corp. (2006) 137 CA4th 1001, 1015-1016, 40 CR3d 724] .

18.23[3] If Illegality, Unconscionability, or Public Policy Preclude Enforcement of Contract, Quantum Meruit Recovery May Still Be Available. As long as the circumstances disclose that the services were rendered with an understanding that payment would be made, recovery may be available even if a contract is found to be illegal, unconscionable, or contrary to public policy, if those requirements do not proscribe the conduct for which compensation is sought [see Huskinson & Brown, LLP v. Wolf (2004) 32 C4th 453, 458, 463, 9 CR3d 693, 84 P3d 379 (although fee-sharing agreement between law firms without client's consent was unenforceable under Cal Rules Prof Conduct, Rule 2-200, law firm nonetheless could recover reasonable value of legal services it rendered on client's behalf); Cohen v. Brown (2009) 173 CA4th 302, 320, 93 CR3d 24 (same); Selten v. Hyon (2007) 152 CA4th 463, 471-472, 60 CR3d 896 (although litigation service provider's contract was illegal in part, because provider was not licensed as an attorney referral service under B&P Code § 6155, provider was permitted to pursue common count for reasonable value of any lawful services rendered); MKB Management, Inc. v. Melikian (2010) 184 CA4th 796, 804-805, 108 CR3d 899 (unlicensed real estate broker could bring claim in quantum meruit for services provided under property management agreement that did not require a real estate broker license); but see Strong v. Beydoun (2008) 166 CA4th 1398, 1404, 83 CR3d 632 (attorney cannot recover from the client the reasonable value of the attorney's services when those services were performed pursuant to an unenforceable fee-sharing agreement with another attorney to which the client did not consent)].

Distinguish:

When regulatory statutes require written agreements or licensure, a party generally may not recover in quantum meruit for that which cannot be recovered on the unenforceable contract [see Castillo v. Barrera (2007) 146 CA4th 1317, 1328, 53 CR3d 494 (denying quantum meruit recovery to boxing manager who lacked license and written contract required by Boxing Act, B&P Code § 18600 et seq.)].

18.25 Options and Strategies.

A party seeking to avoid performance of a contract believed to be contrary to law or public policy or unconscionable may be in a better position procedurally by declining to perform the contract and waiting for an enforcement action by the other party [see 18.04]. This tactic must be balanced against the possibility that a court will sever an offending term [see 18.22] or will choose to enforce an entire agreement on the ground that the contract is merely voidable, and both parties are equally at fault [see 18.23]. In the case of a partially performed contract, a party asserting illegality also should be aware that such a claim may be subject to a statute of limitation [see 18.26[1][a]], although a party may assert such a claim as a defense in an enforcement action at any time if it seeks no affirmative relief.

In the case of an arbitration agreement, the general incentives are reversed because the party seeking relief will want to invalidate the arbitration provision or assure that it includes certain procedural protections. Thus, the party opposed to arbitration will want to seek declaratory or other relief in court unless it is simply seeking procedural protections in the arbitration and can obtain a stipulation from opposing counsel guaranteeing those protections [see 18.26[2]].

18.26 Party Seeking to Affirm or Deny Validity of Contract or Contract Provision May Seek Declaratory Judgment.

18.26[1] Affirming or Denying Validity of Contract or Contract Provision in General. An interested party may seek declaratory relief to determine the validity of a contract or contract provision [CCP § 1060].

Timing:

Actions to void contracts on grounds of illegality (and likely those for unconscionability or contrary to public policy) are subject to a statute of limitations [Marin Healthcare Dist. v. Sutter Health (2002) 103 CA4th 861, 873, 127 CR2d 113]. Although a determination of the appropriate limitations period is case-specific, potential limitations periods are those for an action based on statute [CCP § 338(a)], an action based on statute for penalty or forfeiture [CCP § 340(a)], or the four year catch-all statute found in CCP § 343 [see Marin Healthcare Dist. v. Sutter Health (2002) 103 CA4th 861, 877, 127 CR2d 113].

18.26[2] Moving to Set Aside or Define Terms of Arbitration or Challenging Arbitral Award on Grounds of Illegality, Violation of Public Policy, or Unconscionability. A party challenging an arbitration agreement as unconscionable may do so by means of a declaratory relief action. For arbitrations other than those involving collective bargaining governed by the California Arbitration Act, an arbitration award may be set aside, or an arbitration challenged, if the arbitrator fails to disclose certain grounds for disqualification [CCP § 1281.9]. If there is evidence that the contract itself was illegal, an arbitrator's award may not be upheld [Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 C2d 603, 610, 204 P2d 23]. A party also may challenge an arbitration agreement as unconscionable in its response to a petition to compel arbitration.

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

A party seeking to challenge an arbitration may do so in an action before the fact on ground of unconscionability, or later if there is evidence that gives the party the opportunity to attack the award. Given the unsettled nature of the law in this area, it is preferable to challenge the arbitration at the first opportunity.

 OF PUBLIC POLICY, OR UNCONSCIONABILITY

*2-18 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 18.27AUTHOR: Hannah Bentley18.27 Validity Should Be Challenged in Answer or on Demurrer.

It is preferable to raise the question of illegality either in an action for declaratory judgment or in an answer or demurrer. If a party neglects to do so, the court is not precluded from considering the question later on the motion of a party or on its own [Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 CA4th 1089, 1103]. If the question of illegality develops during the course of a trial, a court must consider it whether pleaded or not. When a court learns that a contract may be illegal, it must start an inquiry [Russell v. Solderinger (1976) 59 CA3d 633, 642, 131 CR 145].

Strategic Point:

A party not seeking affirmative relief may defend against an enforcement action based on illegality without having to comply with the statute of limitations [Styne v. Stevens (2001) 26 C4th 42, 51-52, 109 CR2d 14, 26 P3d 343].

18.28 Summary Judgment Appropriate If Issue Is One of Law.

If facts relating to illegality, public policy, or unconscionability are not sufficiently developed in a complaint to permit a demurrer, a defendant may challenge a contract on these grounds on summary judgment [see Arya Group, Inc. v. Cher (2000) 77 CA4th 610, 615-616, 91 CR2d 815]. A plaintiff who files suit challenging the validity of an agreement generally bears the burden to show specifically that it is unconscionable, contrary to public policy, or illegal. The defendant can rely on the existence of the agreement in filing for summary judgment [Williams v. California Physicians' Serv. (1999) 72 CA4th 722, 742, 85 CR2d 497].

		Judge:

Department:

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant denies each and every allegation of the Complaint, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

2. The contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable because it is contrary to _____ [an express provision of law and/or the policy of express law and/or good morals] under Civil Code Section 1667 in that _____ [describe with specificity, e.g., Plaintiff entered into the claimed contract without the appropriate license required by the Talent Agencies Act, Labor Code Sections 1700-1700.47, and accordingly the contract is not enforceable and/or describe with specificity why the contract is unconscionable, e.g., the contract, while not usurious under the provisions of the California Constitution or statutes, nevertheless specifies a rate of interest that is so excessive as to shock the conscience, and the contract therefore is unconscionable].

WHEREFORE, defendant prays as follows:

1. That the plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract

I. STRATEGY

*2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.0219.02 Objective and Strategy.

Many contracts confer direct or indirect benefits on persons who are not actually parties to the contract. When those persons do not receive the benefits they anticipated under the contract, they may seek to recover damages or otherwise enforce their expectations as beneficiaries of the contract, even though they are not parties to it. Under limited circumstances, the law allows such persons to recover as third party beneficiaries of the contract.

At the core of any third party beneficiary claim is the issue of whether or not the contracting parties expressly intended to benefit the third party. If a contract does not show an express intent to benefit a third party, that party cannot enforce the contract [see 19.06]. Whether or not the contracting parties had an express intention is a question of fact, unless there is no conflicting evidence [see 19.19]. Therefore, disputes over a third party's rights to enforce a contract often hinge on convincing a judge or a jury that the contracting parties did or did not "expressly" intend to benefit the third party when forming the contract. Express intent is determined on a case-by-case basis, but a good definition is "an intent that the obligation created by the contract inure to the third party's benefit." The definition of "express" is "the negation of incidental" [Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 CA4th 1225, 1232-1233].

If the third party's status can be determined as a matter of law because of an absence of conflicting evidence, the dispute will hinge on the nature of the third party's rights in the contract. A third party owed a legal obligation by the promisee will have a better chance of recovering damages for breach than a third party trying to enforce a gift contract; a promisee trying to enforce a gift contract is limited to specific performance [see 19.12].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
 II. DETERMINING WHETHER PERSON IS THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY OF CONTRACT

19.04 Options and Strategies.

The first step for a third party seeking to enforce a contract is proving that the contracting parties had an express intention to benefit the third party. Proof of express intention is not limited to the face of the contract, and the third party need not be named or even specifically contemplated when the contract is entered into [Harper v. Wausau Ins. Co. (1997) 56 CA4th 1079, 1086, 66 CR2d 64 ; see 19.06[2][b]].

Strategic Point--All Parties:

The concept of "express intention" is subject to a relatively broad test: the practitioner must convince the fact finder that, in light of the circumstances of the creation of the contract, the third party is not merely an incidental beneficiary [Neverkovec v. Fredericks (1999) 74 CA4th 337, 349, 87 CR2d 856 ; see 19.06[2][a]]. Although there is ample case law illustrating both express and incidental beneficiaries, there is no "bright line" rule or definition; the final analysis will be determined by the facts of the particular case.

Examples:

Common instances in which express intention is found even though the third party is not named on the face include situations in which:

- The third party is a member of a class of expressly intended beneficiaries, such as in an insurance policy's promise not to recover liability payments [Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 1020, 1042, 135 CR2d 736 ; see 19.06[2][c]].
- The third party becomes an express beneficiary after the formation of the contract by entering a "role" or serving a function essential to the contract, such as the case of an outdoor advertising sign company benefitting from an agreement for advertising between an advertising agency and a product maker [Outdoor Servs., Inc. v. Pabagold, Inc. (1986) 185 CA3d 676, 681-684, 230 CR 73 ; see 19.06[2][c]].

Search California Published Cases:

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
II. DETERMINING WHETHER PERSON IS THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY OF CONTRACT

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.05

19.05 Contracting Parties Must Have Express Intent to Benefit Third Party.

A contract, made expressly for the benefit of a third person, may be enforced by that person at any time before the parties rescind it [CC § 1559]. The word "expressly," by judicial interpretation, means the negative of "incidentally," i.e. an "express intent to benefit" means only "conferring a benefit not incidentally" [Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 CA4th 1225, 1232-1233].

It must appear to have been the intention of the parties to secure to the third party personally the benefit of its provisions. Whether the third party is an intended beneficiary or merely an incidental beneficiary involves construction of the intention of the parties, gathered from reading the contract as a whole in light of the circumstances under which it was entered [Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 CA4th 1225, 1233].

Because an "express intent to benefit" cannot have an exact universal definition, a finding of whether the contracting parties had an express intent to benefit a third party often is a factual determination made by the jury or the court [Vahle v. Barwick (2001) 93 CA4th 1323, 1332, 113 CR2d 793].

Jury Instructions:

Third Party Beneficiaries, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.90 (Matthew Bender).

Example:

A common situation involving third party beneficiaries arises when a debtor and creditor agree that a debt is to be paid to the creditor's creditor, such as when a business seeks third party financing [Business Title Corp. v. United States (1978) 21 C3d 710, 713-716, 147 CR 622, 581 P2d 627].

➡ Cross References:

Discussion of determining beneficiary status by fact and by law, see 19.19.
Complaint for damages for breach of written contract--by third party beneficiary, see 19.31.

Consider:

"Express" intent does not mean an intent merely appearing on the face of the contract, but rather the intent gleaned from reading the contract as a whole in light of the circumstances of the case [see 19.06[2]].

Exception:

CC § 1559 does not apply to a trust beneficiary. A trust beneficiary may not sue the trustee, an agent of the trustee, or one with whom the trustee contracted for the benefit of the trust. The express trust beneficiary's rights are governed by the Probate Code provisions applicable to trusts [Saks v. Damon Raiké & Co. (1992) 7 CA4th 419, 430-431, 8 CR2d 869 ; see, e.g., Prob Code §§ 16401, 16420, 16421, 17000, 17200].

II. DETERMINING WHETHER PERSON IS THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY OF CONTRACT

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.06

19.06 Express Intent to Benefit Third Party Must Appear in Contract or From Surrounding Circumstances.

19.06[1] Express Intent to Benefit Can Be Directly Manifested in Contract. A third party is an intended beneficiary when the express intent of the contracting parties to benefit the third party appears from the terms of the agreement [Brinton v. Bankers Pension Servs., Inc. (1999) 76 CA4th 550, 558, 90 CR2d 469].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of determining beneficiary status as a matter of law, see 19.19[2].

19.06[2] Express Intent to Benefit Can Appear From Circumstances.

19.06[2][a] Parties' Express Intent Can Be Determined in Light of Circumstances. Whether or not a third party is an intended beneficiary to the contract involves construction of the parties' intent, gleaned from reading the contract as a whole in light of the circumstances under which it was entered [Neverkovec v. Fredericks (1999) 74 CA4th 337, 349, 87 CR2d 856].

Examples:

- In determining whether an employee was an intended beneficiary of a lease entered into by her employer for an apartment to house temporary staff, the court could consider the relevant circumstances surrounding the formation of the lease, including the execution of a letter of responsibility, an employment agreement, and a lease extension [Spinks v. Equity Residential Briarwood Apartments (2009) 171 CA4th 1004, 1029, 90 CR3d 453].
- An excess insurer was a third party beneficiary of a claims administration contract between the insured and its workers' compensation claims administrator because one purpose of the contract was to minimize the insured's liability for workers' compensation claims, which conferred on the excess insurer the benefit of reducing its exposure. In addition, the claims administration contract provided that the claims administrator was to administer all of the insured's workers' compensation claims, including those that exceeded the self-insurance limit and became the responsibility of the excess insurer [National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, PA v. Cambridge Integrated Services Group, Inc. (2009) 171 CA4th

35, 51-52, 89 CR3d 473] .

19.06[2][b] Third Party Need Not Be Named or Be Exclusive Beneficiary. The third party beneficiary does not need to be named and identified in the contract or be the exclusive recipient of its benefits [Harper v. Wausau Ins. Co. (1997) 56 CA4th 1079, 1086, 66 CR2d 64 ; COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Eng'rs (1977) 67 CA3d 916, 920, 136 CR 890].

Example:

A company engaged in the business of purchasing advertising space for clients was a third party beneficiary of a contract between the manufacturer and the manufacturer's advertising agent that specifically provided for an agent to contract with third persons for media time and space [Outdoor Servs., Inc. v. Pabagold, Inc. (1986) 185 CA3d 676, 681-684, 230 CR 73].

19.06[2][c] Third Party Can Be Part of Intended Class of Beneficiaries. A third party beneficiary can be one of the class of persons for whose benefit the contract was expressly made [Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 1020, 1042, 135 CR2d 736].

Examples:

- Although an automobile manufacturer was not named in a release agreement in an automobile accident settlement, the release was applicable to all tortfeasors, and therefore the manufacturer was included in that group and immune from liability [General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 12 CA4th 435, 444, 15 CR2d 622].
- Employees who worked on city contracts were intended third party beneficiaries of municipal contract provision requiring compliance with city's Living Wage Ordinance [Amaral v. Cintas Corp. No. 2 (2008) 163 CA4th 1157, 1194, 78 CR3d 572] .
- Summary judgment was improper because issues of fact existed as to whether an employee was among a class of intended beneficiaries of a lease entered into by her employer for an apartment to house temporary staff [Spinks v. Equity Residential Briarwood Apartments (2009) 171 CA4th 1004, 1027, 90 CR3d 453] .

19.06[3] Promisor Must Know of Promisee's Intent to Benefit. The promisor must have understood that the promisee intended to benefit the third party, but the promisor's specific intent to benefit the third party is not required [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 C2d 583, 591, 15 CR 821, 364 P2d 685].

Examples:

- A plaintiff who was only an incidental beneficiary of a title insurance policy issued to buyers was not an intended third party beneficiary and had no ground for recovery on a contract against the title insurer when the title abstracter had no knowledge of plaintiff's interest in the property at the time the contract was performed [Stagen v. Stewart-West Coast Title Co. (1983) 149 CA3d 114, 119, 196 CR 732].
- Even though a contract between a supplier and a seller was executed after the seller's agreement to assign the franchise to the plaintiff, the plaintiff was not a third party beneficiary entitled to enforce the agreement with the supplier because the supplier had no knowledge of the assignment and no intention to benefit the third party [Don Rose Oil Co., Inc. v. Lindsley (1984) 160 CA3d 752, 756-758, 206 CR 670].

- A plaintiff was an intended third party beneficiary of a contract to purchase an engagement ring because the jeweler knew that she and her fiancée had shopped for the ring together and that she had chosen the ring [Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 949, 957-958].

19.06[4] Incidental Beneficiaries Cannot Recover on Contract. A third person may not recover on a contract that incidentally benefits the person, but was not expressly made for his or her benefit [Shurpin v. Elmhirst (1983) 148 CA3d 94, 103, 195 CR 737].

Examples:

- A subcontractor was not an intended third party beneficiary of a contract between a city department and a primary contractor and therefore could not bring an action for the department's alleged breach of contract [Lundeen Coatings Corp. v. Department of Water & Power (1991) 232 CA3d 816, 834, 283 CR 551].

- An insured was not a third party beneficiary of a contract between an insurer and an independent adjuster hired by the insurer to investigate the cause and validity of the insured's claim [Thompson v. Cannon (1990) 224 CA3d 1413, 1416-1417, 274 CR 608].

- A vocational school was not an intended third party beneficiary of an arbitration provision in a student loan agreement between a student and a lender [Smith v. Microskills San Diego L.P. (2007) 153 CA4th 892, 899, 63 CR3d 608].

- A reinsurer was not an intended beneficiary of a contract for legal representation between the ceding insurer and the ceding insurer's attorney. Because of the potential conflict of interest between the ceding insurer and the reinsurer, it was impossible to conclude that either the ceding insurer or the attorney ever intended to confer on the reinsurer status as a beneficiary of the legal services the attorney performed for the ceding insurer [Zenith Ins. Co. v. O'Connor (2007) 148 CA4th 998, 1008, 55 CR3d 911].

- Occupants of a home in a planned development community were not intended third party beneficiaries of a lot line agreement between the owners and a homeowners association; nothing in the agreement clearly manifested an intent by the homeowners association or the owners to make the homeowners association's obligation inure to the benefit of the occupants [Martin v. Bridgeport Community Assn., Inc. (2009) 173 CA4th 1024, 1034, 93 CR3d 405].

- A developer was not an intended beneficiary of a contract between a county and a consultant hired to prepare an environmental impact report on the developer's development application; therefore, the consultant was not liable to the developer for damages due to the consultant's failure to prepare the report in a timely fashion [Lake Almanor Associates L.P. v. Huffman-Broadway Group, Inc. (2009) 178 CA4th 1194, 1199-1204, 101 CR3d 71].

III. DETERMINING WHAT REMEDIES ARE AVAILABLE

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.07

19.07 CHECKLIST: Determining What Remedies Are Available.

☐ Determine whether promisee owes third party beneficiary a legal obligation (making third party a creditor beneficiary):

Authority:

COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Eng'rs (1977) 67 CA3d 916, 919-920, 136 CR 890

Discussion:

See 19.11[1]

☐ Third party creditor beneficiary can recover damages for breach of contract against promisee and promisor.

Authority:

Kraus v. Willow Park Pub. Golf Course (1977) 73 CA3d 354, 372, 140 CR 744

Discussion:

See 19.11[2]

☐ Determine whether promisee intended to make a gift to third party beneficiary (making third party a donee beneficiary):

Authority:

In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 108, 26 CR2d 133

Discussion:

See 19.12[1]

- ☐ Donee beneficiary may recover for economic interest in gift only against promisor.

Authority:

In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 107, 26 CR2d 133

Discussion:

See 19.12[2]

- ☐ Determine if promisee is seeking to enforce contract on beneficiary's behalf:

- ☐ Promisee may recover damages for promisor's breach of creditor beneficiary contract.

Authority:

In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 106-108, 26 CR2d 133

Discussion:

See 19.13

- ☐ Promisee is limited to specific performance for donee beneficiary contract.

Authority:

In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 106-108, 26 CR2d 133

Discussion:

See 19.13

- ☐ Determine if third party has cause of action for damages sounding in tort:

- ☐ Third party was not in privity of contract, but parties intended contract to benefit third party to some extent.

- ☐ Express or implied duty of contract was breached.

- ☐ Third party was harmed by breach of duty.

- ☐ Harm resulting from breach was foreseeable.

Authority:

Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C3d 868, 891, 2 CR2d 79, 820 P2d 181 ; but see Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 88, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669

Discussion:

See 19.14[2]

- ☐ Determine if contract provides for recovery of attorney's fees and costs by prevailing party.

Authority:

CC § 1717; CCP § 1021

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract

III. DETERMINING WHAT REMEDIES ARE AVAILABLE

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.08

19.08 Options and Strategies.

After the plaintiff has demonstrated the contracting parties' express intention to benefit a third party, the next step is to establish the kind of enforceable rights the third party and/or the plaintiff have in the contract. The third party is bound by the conditions of the contract. The third party has the right to enforce the contract, but not to rescind it [Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 949, 959-960 ; see 19.10A].

A creditor beneficiary (a beneficiary owed a legal obligation by the promisee) may recover damages from either the promisor or the promisee for breach [Kraus v. Willow Park Pub. Golf Course (1977) 73 CA3d 354, 371, 140 CR 744 ; see 19.11[2]]. Double recovery is not allowed [Kraus v. Willow Park Pub. Golf Course (1977) 73 CA3d 354, 372, 140 CR 744 ; see 19.11[3]]. A donee beneficiary (a beneficiary who is receiving a gift) may recover only to the extent permitted by the standard contract rules applying to gifts [see In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 108, 26 CR2d 133 ; see also 19.12].

If the promisee is seeking to enforce the contract, he or she can recover damages for a creditor beneficiary, but is limited to specific performance when enforcing on behalf of a donee beneficiary [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 106-108, 26 CR2d 133 ; see 19.13]. The third party beneficiary also may be able to bring a tort action, depending on the circumstances [Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C3d 868, 891, 2 CR2d 79, 820 P2d 181 ; see 19.14]. Attorney's fees and costs are recoverable by the prevailing party if the contract so provides [see Sessions Payroll Mgmt., Inc. v. Noble Constr. Co. (2001) 84 CA4th 671, 680-681, 101 CR2d 127 ; see also 19.15].

19.09 Elements of Claim for Breach of Third Party Beneficiary Contract.

A claim for breach of a third party beneficiary contract requires proof that [see Brinton v. Bankers Pension Servs., Inc. (1999) 76 CA4th 550, 558, 90 CR2d 469]:

- There is a valid contract, the performance of which will result in a benefit to the third party [see 19.20].
- The contracting parties had the express intent to benefit the third party [see 19.06].
- The third party accepted or acted on the contract before the contracting parties rescinded [see 19.27].
- The promisor breached the contract [see 19.22].

III. DETERMINING WHAT REMEDIES ARE AVAILABLE

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.10

19.10 Third Party's Rights and Remedies May Be Limited by Contract.

A third party beneficiary's rights under a contract are subject to any conditions and limitations imposed by the contract [Mercury Cas. Co. v. Maloney (2003) 113 CA4th 799, 802-803].

Example:

An injured passenger who received medical payments from a driver's excess insurer was obligated to reimburse the insurer pursuant to an insurance policy provision requiring reimbursement on settlement with the responsible party [Mercury Cas. Co. v. Maloney (2003) 113 CA4th 799, 802-803].

A third party beneficiary cannot assert greater rights than those of the promisee under the contract [*Doe v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F3d 677, 2009 US App. LEXIS 15279, 8]. When a plaintiff seeks to secure benefits under a contract to which he or she is a third party beneficiary, the plaintiff must take the contract as is; the plaintiff may not select only the favorable parts while rejecting the unfavorable parts [Souza v. Westlands Water Dist. (2006) 135 CA4th 879, 895, 38 CR3d 78].

If the promisee breaches the contract, and the damages to the promisor equal or exceed the amount of the benefit that the promisor was to confer on the third party, the third party cannot recover [Souza v. Westlands Water Dist. (2006) 135 CA4th 879, 895, 38 CR3d 78].

A third party beneficiary has the right to enforce a contract, but not to rescind it. Only the parties to the contract may rescind it [Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 949, 959-960].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
III. DETERMINING WHAT REMEDIES ARE AVAILABLE

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.11

19.11 Creditor Beneficiary Can Sue Promisor and Promisee for Standard Contractual Remedies.

19.11[1] Third Party Is Creditor Beneficiary If Contract Discharges Promisee's Obligation to Third Party.

A third party is a creditor beneficiary if the contract will discharge some form of legal duty owed to the beneficiary by the promisee [COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Eng'rs (1977) 67 CA3d 916, 919-920, 136 CR 890].

Consider:

The promisee's obligation that the promisor agrees to perform is not limited to payment of a financial debt. For example, a sublessee's assumption of duties contained in a lease is such an obligation [Hartman Ranch Co. v. Associated Oil Co. (1937) 10 C2d 232, 244, 73 P2d 1163].

19.11[2] Creditor Beneficiary Can Seek Standard Remedies for Breach From Both Promisor and Promisee.

A third party creditor beneficiary, because he or she is owed a legal obligation, can enforce the contract against the promisor or the promisee, or may join them and obtain judgment against both [Kraus v. Willow Park Pub. Golf Course (1977) 73 CA3d 354, 371, 140 CR 744].

➤ Cross References:

Form for complaint for damages by third party beneficiary, see 19.31.

Discussion of remedies for breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

19.11[3] Double Recovery Is Not Allowed. Although the creditor beneficiary may enforce the original obligation against either the promisor or the promisee, the creditor beneficiary may not collect more than the total rightful damages. Satisfaction in whole or in part from one party will operate to that extent as satisfaction of the liability of the other [Kraus v. Willow Park Pub. Golf Course (1977) 73 CA3d 354, 372, 140 CR 744].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
III. DETERMINING WHAT REMEDIES ARE AVAILABLE

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.12

19.12 Donee Beneficiary Is Limited to Contractual Remedies for Gifts.

19.12[1] Third Party Is Donee Beneficiary If Contract Does Not Discharge Legal Obligation of Promisee to Third Party. A third party is a donee beneficiary if the promisee intends to make a gift or confer a right against the promisor [Martinez v. Socoma Cos., Inc. (1974) 11 C3d 394, 400-401, 113 CR 585, 521 P2d 841].

Example:

A son attending college was the donee beneficiary of his parents' marital separation agreement, which provided that the father would pay for his son's college expenses if the father was financially able [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 108, 26 CR2d 133].

Judge's Perspective:

The distinction between the terms "creditor beneficiaries" and "donee beneficiaries" is beginning to fade. "[T]he creditor-donee dichotomy as applied to third party beneficiaries is beginning to vanish. Although the two concepts are still viable, the specific descriptive words are being dropped by the courts and academicians to permit broader application of the doctrine" [Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 CA4th 1225, 1236 (quoting Gilbert Fin. Corp. v. Steelform Contracting Co. (1978) 82 CA3d 65, 71, 145 CR 448)]. The Restatement Second of Contracts eliminated the creditor/donee classifications in favor of the broader term of "intended beneficiaries" because the older classifications carry overtones of obsolete doctrinal difficulties [Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 CA4th 1225, 1236 (quoting Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 302)].

Warning:

Following general third party beneficiary rules, the donee beneficiary may recover only if the promisor must have understood the donative intent from the nature of the contract and the circumstances accompanying its execution [Martinez v. Socoma Cos., Inc. (1974) 11 C3d 394, 400-401, 113 CR 585, 521 P2d 841].

Distinguish:

A promisor contracting with a government entity to render a service to some or all of the members of the public is not liable to the public, either as creditors or donees, unless a contrary intention is manifested in the contract [Martinez v. Socoma Cos., Inc. (1974) 11 C3d 394, 401-402, 113 CR 585, 521 P2d 841].

19.12[2] Donee Beneficiary May Recover for Economic Interest in Performance. A third party donee beneficiary ordinarily has an economic interest in the performance of the contract, as drafted with the third party beneficiary in mind, but the promisee does not [see generally In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 107, 26 CR2d 133]. A donee beneficiary's remedies therefore are governed by the rules of contract applicable to gifts [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 108, 26 CR2d 133].

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.13

19.13 Promisee May Recover for Benefit of Third Party Beneficiary.

The promisee can enforce a third party contract for the benefit of the third party [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 106-108, 26 CR2d 133]. For a creditor beneficiary, the promisee may bring an action for damages or specific performance for the promisor's breach of a legal obligation. However, a promisee has no economic interest in the contractual gift to a donee beneficiary. Therefore, in gift cases, only specific performance is appropriate as a remedy [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 106-108, 26 CR2d 133].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
 III. DETERMINING WHAT REMEDIES ARE AVAILABLE

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.14

19.14 Third Party Beneficiary May Have Action Sounding in Tort.

19.14[1] No Privity Required for Third Party Beneficiary. A third party beneficiary may be able to recover in tort for breach of a duty arising out of a contract, despite lack of privity, when some negligent act has occurred [Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C3d 868, 891, 2 CR2d 79, 820 P2d 181]. Whether the defendant will be held liable to a third person not in privity is a matter of policy and involves balancing certain factors [Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C3d 868, 891, 2 CR2d 79, 820 P2d 181 ; Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 C2d 647, 650, 320 P2d 16 ; see 19.14[2]; but see Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 88, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669 (general rule precludes tort recovery for noninsurance contract breach in absence of independent duty arising from tort law)].

Example:

Family members present at a funeral service who later learned of the mishandling of the corpse were allowed to recover damages in tort for emotional distress. The mishandling breached the duty implied by the funeral contract between the promisor and promisee; therefore, the family members recovered as third party beneficiaries and not as mere bystanders [Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C3d 868, 890-891, 2 CR2d 79, 820 P2d 181].

Warning:

Under Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 88, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669], the general rule precludes tort recovery for a noninsurance contract breach in the absence of an independent duty arising from tort law. Although this reasoning has not yet been applied in the context of third party beneficiary contract breaches, it is likely to be only a matter of time before the Belcher Oil reasoning is applied in these cases, precluding tort recovery absent some tort independent of the breach of contract [see Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 88, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of combining contract and tort actions arising from single occurrence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.56[2][b] (Matthew Bender).

19.14[2] Transaction Must Be to Benefit Third Party and Involve Foreseeable Harm. The determination of whether a defendant will be held liable in tort to a third person not in privity is a matter of policy and involves the balancing of various factors, including [Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C3d 868, 891, 2 CR2d 79, 820 P2d 181 ; but see Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 88, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669 (general rule precludes tort recovery for noninsurance contract breach in absence of independent duty arising from tort law)]:

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff.
- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff.
- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury.
- The closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered.
- The moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct.
- The policy of preventing future harm.

Distinguish:

There can be no tort liability when the only injury is purely financial loss [Stop Loss Ins. Brokers, Inc. v. Brown & Toland Medical Group (2006) 143 CA4th 1036, 1042-1043, 49 CR3d 609] .

Judge's Perspective:

Keep in mind that, as with any tort action, to be liable the defendant must have owed a duty of care to the plaintiff [Boranian v. Clark (2004) 123 CA4th 1012, 1017 (in action for professional negligence arising from attorney's preparation of will, attorney had no liability to beneficiaries who challenged decedent's testamentary capacity because attorney owed beneficiaries no duty of care)].

III. DETERMINING WHAT REMEDIES ARE AVAILABLE

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.15

19.15 Attorney's Fees Are Available to Prevailing Party If Contract Contains Attorney's Fees Clause.

Recovery of attorney's fees and costs in third party beneficiary contract cases is treated the same as in other contract actions. An appropriate provision in the contract will support an award of attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party under CC § 1717(a) [see Sessions Payroll Mgmt., Inc. v. Noble Constr. Co. (2000) 84 CA4th 671, 680-681, 101 CR2d 127]. Attorney's fees and costs can also be recovered under CCP § 1021 for related tort causes of action arising under the contract [Xuereb v. Marcus & Millichap, Inc. (1992) 3 CA4th 1338, 1342-1345, 5 CR2d 154].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
IV. SEEKING RECOVERY AS THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.17

19.17 Options and Strategies.

To recover as a third party beneficiary, the plaintiff must:

- Establish his or her status as an intended beneficiary [Alling v. Universal Mfg. Corp. (1992) 5 CA4th 1412, 1439, 7 CR2d 718 ; see 19.20[2]];
- Prove the existence of the contract [Sessions Payroll Mgmt., Inc. v. Noble Constr. Co. (2000) 84 CA4th 671, 680-681, 101 CR2d 127 ; see 19.20[1]];
- Prove breach of that contract [Armstrong Petroleum Corp. v. Tri-Valley Oil & Gas Co. (2004) 116 CA4th 1375, 1391 ; see 19.22]; and
- Prove resulting damages [Armstrong Petroleum Corp. v. Tri-Valley Oil & Gas Co. (2004) 116 CA4th 1375, 1391 ; see 19.22].

Whether or not a third party was an expressly intended beneficiary ultimately is determined by the fact finder [Vahle v. Barwick (2001) 93 CA4th 1323, 1332, 113 CR2d 793 ; see 19.19[1]], although in some cases that status can be decided as a matter of law [Kalmanovitz v. Bitting (1996) 43 CA4th 311, 315, 50 CR2d 332 ; see 19.19[2]].

The plaintiff must bring the action within four years on a written contract [CCP § 337(1)] or two years on an oral contract [CCP § 339; see 19.18].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
IV. SEEKING RECOVERY AS THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.18

19.18 Four-Year Statute of Limitations Generally Applies.

19.18[1] Four-Year Limitation Period Applies to Third Party Beneficiary Claims on Written Contracts.

Contract claims by third party beneficiaries on written contracts are subject to the four year statute of limitation for written obligations [CCP § 337(1); Skylawn & Skyview Mem'l Lawn v. Superior Court (1979) 88 CA3d 316, 320, 151 CR 793]. Most third party beneficiary contracts will fall in this category.

Jury Instructions:

Statute of Limitations Against Third Party Beneficiary, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.53 (Matthew Bender).

➤ Cross References:

Statutes of limitations in contract actions generally, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statute of Limitations and Effect on Potential Action.

Discussion of application of limitation statutes in third party beneficiary cases, see California Points and Authorities, § 50.132[3][c] (Matthew Bender).

19.18[2] Two-Year Limitation Period Applies to Third Party Beneficiary Claims on Oral Contracts.

Contract claims by third party beneficiaries on oral contracts are subject to the two-year statute of limitation for other than written obligations [CCP § 339; Skylawn & Skyview Mem'l Lawn v. Superior Court (1979) 88 CA3d 316, 320, 151 CR 793].

Jury Instructions:

Statute of Limitations Against Third Party Beneficiary, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.53 (Matthew Bender).

Consider:

The statute of frauds will apply to third party beneficiary oral contracts, just as it does with any other oral contract.

Judge's Perspective:

In most third party beneficiary cases, the promisee's interests are aligned with those of the third party beneficiary, the promisee will have (or feel) an obligation to the beneficiary, or they will have something else in common. Accordingly, proof in such cases will not be more difficult than in other oral contract cases, and the promisee is likely to testify at trial on the third party beneficiary's behalf as to what the promisor said or did.

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
IV. SEEKING RECOVERY AS THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.19

19.19 Beneficiary Status May Be Question for Jury.

19.19[1] Whether Plaintiff Was Intended Beneficiary Can Be Triable Issue of Fact. Whether or not a contract is expressly for the benefit of a third party can be a triable issue of fact [Vahle v. Barwick (2001) 93 CA4th 1323, 1332, 113 CR2d 793]. In determining the meaning of an alleged third party beneficiary contract, evidence of the surrounding circumstances and negotiations of the parties in making the contract is admissible. In the absence of grounds for estoppel, the contracting parties should be allowed to testify as to their actual intention [Neverkovec v. Fredericks (1999) 74 CA4th 337, 349, 87 CR2d 856].

Example:

Whether a defendant attorney who was sued for malpractice in handling a personal injury case against a country club was the intended third party beneficiary of a release agreement between the plaintiffs and the country club was a triable issue of fact. Thus, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the attorney on the basis that the language in the release agreement was unambiguous and benefitted the attorney [Vahle v. Barwick (2001) 93 CA4th 1323, 1332, 113 CR2d 793].

19.19[2] Status Can Be Determined As Matter of Law in Absence of Conflicting Extrinsic Evidence. Third party beneficiary status may be determined as a matter of law if there is no conflicting extrinsic evidence [Kalmanovitz v. Bitting (1996) 43 CA4th 311, 315, 50 CR2d 332]. When there is no conflicting extrinsic evidence, the reviewing court is not bound by the rulings of the trial court, but rather must make an independent interpretation of the written contract [Coopers & Lybrand v. Superior Court (1989) 212 CA3d 524, 529, 260 CR 713].

Example:

When the evidence in a dispute over the rights under a partnership agreement was entirely based on the documents themselves, there was no extrinsic evidence and the court decided the third party beneficiary status [Milazo v. Gulf Ins. Co. (1990) 224 CA3d 1528, 1534, 274 CR 632].

IV. SEEKING RECOVERY AS THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.20

19.20 Plaintiff Has Burden of Pleading and Proving Existence of Contract and Intended Beneficiary Status.

19.20[1] Plaintiff Has Burden of Pleading and Proving Existence of Third Party Beneficiary Contract. The party claiming to be, or bringing an action on behalf of, a third party beneficiary must allege in the original complaint that the contracting parties formed a valid contract [CC § 1812.10]. The plaintiff also bears the burden of proving that the contracting parties actually promised the performance that the third party beneficiary seeks [Sessions Payroll Mgmt., Inc. v. Noble Constr. Co. (2000) 84 CA4th 671, 680-681, 101 CR2d 127]. Although evidence of surrounding circumstances is admissible [see 19.06[2][a]], this remains largely a question of interpreting the written contract [Sessions Payroll Mgmt., Inc. v. Noble Constr. Co. (2000) 84 CA4th 671, 681, 101 CR2d 127].

➡ Cross References:

Form for complaint for damages by third party beneficiary, see 19.31.

Contract interpretation rules, see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract.

19.20[2] Plaintiff Has Burden of Pleading and Proving Intended Beneficiary Status. A party claiming third party beneficiary status must also include the relevant factual allegations of that status in the initial complaint [CC § 1812.10]. At trial, the plaintiff has the burden of proving that the contracting parties expressly intended to confer a benefit on the alleged third party beneficiary [Alling v. Universal Mfg. Corp. (1992) 5 CA4th 1412, 1439, 7 CR2d 718]. The third party's right to enforce covenants of a contract is predicated on the contracting parties' intent to benefit the third party. It is not enough that a literal interpretation of the contract would result in a benefit to the third party [Vahle v. Barwick (2001) 93 CA4th 1323, 1328, 113 CR2d 793].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
V. OPPOSING THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY CLAIM

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.24

19.24 Options and Strategies.

The most important defense in a third party beneficiary case often is a refutation of the third party's claim to intended beneficiary status [see 19.25]. The burden is on the plaintiff to prove intended beneficiary status. Therefore, the defense is advised to devote substantial resources to casting as much doubt on the third party's status as possible. This can include showing that the third party is a donee beneficiary not entitled to recover damages [see In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 108, 26 CR2d 133 ; see also 19.26].

Other affirmative defenses also may be available to a party defending against a third party's action. In appropriate cases, the defense can assert that:

- The contract was rescinded [CC § 1559; see 19.27].
- The third party waived its rights [Bass v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1974) 10 C3d 792, 796, 112 CR 195, 518 P2d 1147 ; see 19.28].
- The third party is bound by an arbitration clause [Benasra v. Marciano (2001) 92 CA4th 987, 992, 112 CR2d 358 ; see 19.29].
- The third party is claiming rights through a party guilty of fraud on the contract [Pearsall v. Townsend (1935) 7 CA2d 162, 166, 45 P2d 824 ; see 19.30].
- The action is barred by the statute of limitations [see 19.18].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

If the defendant can establish facts demonstrating plaintiff is not an express beneficiary by one of the methods discussed in this part [see 19.25 -19.30], the defendant can raise an affirmative defense in the answer, an objection in a demurrer, or both at the same time, alleging that the plaintiff failed to state facts essential to the cause of action [CCP §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(c)]. Failure to raise the defense or objection in the initial answer or demurrer does not constitute waiver [CCP § 430.80(a)]; the objection can later be made by motion for judgment on the pleadings, by motion for summary judgment, by an objection at trial to the introduction of evidence, or on appeal [CCP § 438].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
V. OPPOSING THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY CLAIM

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.25

19.25 Defendant Can Prove Plaintiff Is Not Intended Beneficiary.

Because the plaintiff has the burden of proving third party beneficiary status [see 19.20], the defendant can defeat the plaintiff's claim by demurring if the plaintiff did not establish the intended beneficiary status, or alternatively by presenting evidence that disproves the plaintiff's beneficiary status [see Vahle v. Barwick (2001) 93 CA4th 1323, 1332, 113 CR2d 793].

Example:

An excess insurer who was not a party to a settlement agreement related to defective condominium construction was an incidental beneficiary, not an express third party beneficiary, of plaintiff primary insurer's policy to recover voluntary payments it had made [Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1994) 21 CA4th 1586, 1600, 26 CR2d 762].

At a fundamental level, CC § 1559 precludes enforcement of a contract by persons only incidentally or remotely benefitted by it [Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 CA3d 444, 455, 238 CR 339].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
V. OPPOSING THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY CLAIM

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.26

19.26 In Action by Promisee, Defendant Can Show Third Party Is Merely Donee Beneficiary Not Entitled to Damages.

If the promisee is bringing an action for damages on the third party beneficiary's behalf, the defendant can successfully demur if the third party beneficiary is a donee beneficiary rather than an intended beneficiary, because donee beneficiaries are not entitled to damages. The promisee still can bring an action for specific performance, because although the donee beneficiary is entitled to the promised performance, he or she has no economic interest in the performance [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 108, 26 CR2d 133 ; see 19.12, 19.22].

Distinguish:

Note that for a creditor beneficiary, the promisee may bring an action for damages or specific performance, because the promisor has a legal obligation to pay the debt [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 CA4th 100, 108, 26 CR2d 133].

Consider:

The distinction between the terms "creditor beneficiaries" and "donee beneficiaries" is beginning to fade. The Restatement Second of Contracts eliminated the creditor/donee classifications in favor of the broader term of "intended beneficiaries" because the older classifications carry overtones of obsolete doctrinal difficulties [see Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 CA4th 1225, 1236 (quoting Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 302)].

V. OPPOSING THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY CLAIM

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.27

19.27 Defendant Can Prove Contract Was Rescinded Before Third Party Accepted, Adopted, or Acted on Contract.

The parties to a third party beneficiary contract may rescind it, even unilaterally, without the assent of a third party beneficiary at any time before the contract is accepted, adopted, or acted on by that third person [CC § 1559; see Mitchell v. Marklund (1965) 238 CA2d 398, 406, 47 CR 756].

Jury Instructions:

Rescission of Third Party Beneficiary Contract, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3G, Instr. MB 300G.04 (Matthew Bender).

Rescission of Contract as Defense to Contractor's Action as Third Party Beneficiary of Owner's Contract, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3I, Instr. MB 300I.58 (Matthew Bender).

➡ Cross Reference:

Exception:

Estoppel may work to prevent rescission of a third party creditor beneficiary contract [R. J. Cardinal Co. v. Ritchie (1963) 218 CA2d 124, 136, 32 CR 545].

V. OPPOSING THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY CLAIM

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.28

19.28 Defendant Can Prove Waiver With Clear and Convincing Evidence.

A third party beneficiary can voluntarily waive or disclaim his or her rights on the contract [Bass v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1974) 10 C3d 792, 796, 112 CR 195, 518 P2d 1147]. The defendant must prove the affirmative defense of waiver by clear and convincing evidence in the answer, as an objection in a demurrer, or at trial [CCP §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(c)]. Failure to raise the defense or objection in the initial answer or general demurrer does not constitute waiver [CCP § 430.80(a)]. In doubtful cases, the court should preserve rights by finding no waiver [Bass v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1974) 10 C3d 792, 796, 112 CR 195, 518 P2d 1147].

Jury Instructions:

Waiver of Rights as Third Party Beneficiary, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.25 (Matthew Bender).

V. OPPOSING THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY CLAIM

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.29

19.29 Third Party Must Comply With Arbitration Clause in Original Contract.

An intended third party beneficiary can be compelled, as agreed by the contracting parties in the initial contract, to adhere to an arbitration provision in a contract executed for the third party's benefit [Benasra v. Marciano (2001) 92 CA4th 987, 992, 112 CR2d 358].

Chapter 19 Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract
V. OPPOSING THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY CLAIM

2-19 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 19.30

19.30 Third Party Cannot Recover Through Party Guilty of Fraud on Contract.

A third party cannot enforce a contract made in part for the third party's benefit if the promisee or promisor is guilty of fraud in the procurement of the contract [Pearsall v. Townsend (1935) 7 CA2d 162, 166, 45 P2d 824]. A third party also cannot recover on a contract if the party through which he or she seeks to recover is guilty of fraud in the execution of the contract [see, e.g., Reese v. Administrative Comm. of Profit Sharing Trust (1963) 218 CA2d 646, 650, 32 CR 818].

Examples:

- The wife and son of an employee who embezzled money from his employer did not have a claim to the deceased employee's pension fund because the employee's fraud vitiated any vested rights in the money and plaintiffs could claim no better right than that possessed by the deceased employee [Reese v. Administrative Comm. of Profit Sharing Trust (1963) 218 CA2d 646, 650, 32 CR 818].

- A third party beneficiary contractor was entitled to enforce the terms of a contract, procured fraudulently by a broker, to subdivide a company's land because the company and its shareholder had not rescinded the contract and had retained the benefits [Pearsall v. Townsend (1935) 7 CA2d 162, 166, 45 P2d 824].

Exception:

A third party beneficiary can enforce the contract involving fraud in the procurement if, after discovery of the fraud, the aggrieved party does not rescind the contract and retains the consideration and benefits [Pearsall v. Townsend (1935) 7 CA2d 162, 166, 45 P2d 824].

 Judge:

 Department:

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's Complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege any affirmative defenses, e.g.,]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Action is Barred by Statute of Limitations)

2. Plaintiff's action is barred by limitations because it was not brought within the _____ [two or four]-year period required by Code of Civil Procedure Section _____.
[337 or 339].

[AND/OR, if alleging that plaintiff was incidental third party beneficiary]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Plaintiff is Incidental Third Party Beneficiary)

3. Plaintiff does not have standing to enforce the contract because Plaintiff is not a party to the contract and the complaint does not identify the contract as being for the express benefit of Plaintiff.

[AND/OR, if alleging that contract was rescinded before third party plaintiff accepted it]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Plaintiff is Donee Beneficiary Not Entitled to Damages)

4. Plaintiff is not entitled to recover damages under the contract because Plaintiff is a donee beneficiary.

[AND/OR, if alleging that contract was rescinded before third party plaintiff accepted it]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Parties to Contract Rescinded Before Third Party Plaintiff Accepted)

5. Plaintiff cannot enforce the contract alleged in Plaintiff's complaint because that contract was rescinded before Plaintiff acted on it.

[AND/OR, if alleging that plaintiff waived rights to enforce contract]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Plaintiff Waived Rights to Enforce Contract)

6. Plaintiff waived all rights to the contract and therefore is no longer entitled to enforce it.

[AND/OR, if alleging that plaintiff must arbitrate the dispute]

SIXTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Plaintiff Is Obligated to Arbitrate Dispute Under Contract)

7. Plaintiff is subject to the arbitration clause contained in the contract and therefore is not entitled to bring this action.

20.06[3] Agent Acts As Fiduciary of Principal.

20.06[3][a] Agent Owes Principal Duty of Loyalty.

20.06[3][b] Agent's Fiduciary Role Controls Agent's Behavior.

20.06[4] Principal Must Have Right to Control Agent's Actions.

20.07 Requirements for Creation of Agency Relationship Must Be Met.

20.07[1] Any Person Having Capacity to Contract May Appoint Agent.

20.07[2] Agency Relationship May Be Established by Words or Actions.

20.07[2][a] Agency Relationship May Be Created Informally.

20.07[2][b] Conduct of Parties May Be Sufficient to Create Agency.

20.07[2][c] Courts Will Look to Intentions of Parties.

20.07[3] Creation of Agency Must Comply With Equal Dignities Rule.

20.07[3][a] Equal Dignities Rule Applies When Underlying Contract Must Be in Writing.

20.07[3][b] Courts Have Established Exceptions to Equal Dignities Rule.

20.08 CHECKLIST: Determining If Principal Is Bound by Agent's Acts.

20.09 Agent Must Have Acted Within Scope of Authority.

20.09[1] Principal May Confer Actual Authority on Agent.

20.09[1][a] Actual Authority Is Authority That Principal Intends Agent to Have.

20.09[1][b] Actual Authority Need Not Be Express and May Be Proved by Circumstantial Evidence.

20.09[1][c] Grant of Actual Authority Includes Implied Authority to Act in Furtherance of Purpose of Agency.

20.09[1][d] Scope of Express Authority Is Defined by Principal's Instructions.

20.09[2] Conduct of Principal May Confer Ostensible Authority on Agent.

20.09[2][a] Ostensible Authority Must Be Based on Acts or Omissions of Principal, Not Agent.

20.09[2][b] Explicit Representations to Third Party Regarding Agent's Authority Are Not Required.

20.09[2][c] Elements of Estoppel Must Be Proven to Hold Principal Liable for Agent's Acts.

20.09[2][d] Wrongdoing or Receipt of Benefit Is Not Required to Hold Principal Liable.

20.09[2][e] Scope of Ostensible Authority Is Determined by Reasonable Person Standard.

20.09[3] Principal May Subsequently Ratify Agent's Acts.

20.09[3][a] Valid Ratification Is Equivalent of Original Grant of Authority.

20.09[3][b] Ratification Must Meet Any Requirements That Would Have Applied to Advance Authorization of Agent's Acts.

20.09[3][c] Principal Must Have Full Knowledge of Transaction.

20.09[3][d] Principal Must Have Power to Confer Authority on Agent at Time of Ratification.

20.09[3][e] Ratification Cannot Adversely Affect Third Parties Without Their Consent.

20.09[3][f] Principal Must Ratify Entire Transaction.

20.10 Acts Within Scope of Agent's Authority Are Considered Acts of Principal.

20.10[1] Third Party May Proceed Directly Against Principal.

20.10[2] Information Known to Agent May Be Imputed to Principal.

20.10[2][a] Presumption Is That Agent Will Communicate All Relevant Information.

20.10[2][b] Information Must Relate to Purpose of Agency.

20.10[2][c] Agent's Failure to Communicate Does Not Automatically Defeat Presumption of Communication.

20.10[2][d] Agent's Knowledge Will Not Be Imputed to Principal in Some Situations.

20.11 Principal May Not Be Bound If Agent Acted Without Authority.

20.11[1] Principal Not Liable If Agent Lacked Good Faith Belief in Authority to Act.

20.11[2] Principal Liable Only for Authorized Acts That Can Be "Plainly Separated" From Unauthorized Acts.

20.12 Third Party May Be Able to Recover From Agent If Principal Is Not Bound by Agent's Acts.

20.12[1] Agent May Be Liable for Breach of Warranty of Authority.

20.12[2] Agent May Be Liable in Other Situations.

20.13 Both Agent and Principal May Be Liable If Agency Is Undisclosed.

20.13[1] Agent Must Disclose Existence of Agency and Identity of Principal to Avoid Liability.

20.13[2] Undisclosed Principal May Claim Benefits of Agent's Transactions.

20.13[3] Third Party May Sue Undisclosed Principal or Agent, or Both.

20.13[3][a] Third Party May Sue Either Undisclosed Principal or Agent.

20.13[3][b] Plaintiff Must Elect Between Recovery Against Undisclosed Principal or Against Agent.

20.13[3][c] Recovery Against Agent Discharges Principal.

20.14 CHECKLIST: Procedure for Raising Agency Issues.

20.15 Plaintiff Third Party Should Allege Agency in Complaint Against Agent, Principal, or Both.

Chapter 20 Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions

I. STRATEGY

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.01

20.01 Scope.

This chapter covers the basic rules of agency law as it relates to contract litigation. The primary focus is on contract disputes between a stranger to the agency relationship, i.e., the third party, on the one hand, and an agent, a principal, or both on the other. This chapter covers:

- Determining whether an agency relationship exists [see 20.03 -20.07; Forms: see 20.19, 20.22].
- Determining whether a principal is bound by the agent's acts [see 20.08 -20.13; Form: see 20.19].
- How and when to raise agency issues [see 20.14 -20.18; Forms: see 20.20, 20.22].

Chapter 20 Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions

I. STRATEGY

*2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.0220.02 Objective and Strategy.

From a plaintiff's perspective, the law of agency allows a claimant who entered into a contract with an agent to extend liability to the principal on whose behalf the agent acted. When an agent is named as a defendant, the law will protect the agent from personal liability, provided the agent acted within the scope of its authority [see 20.10]. If an agent acts beyond the scope of its authority, or without any authority at all, the law allows the alleged principal to avoid liability for the agent's unauthorized acts [see 20.11].

Depending on the case, there may be strategic advantages to defendants as well as plaintiffs arising out of the existence of an agency relationship. For an agent-defendant, for example, liability can be passed on to the principal [see CC §§ 2330, 2334, 2337]. For a principal-defendant, on the other hand, an agency agreement may help by limiting the scope of the principal's liability to acts within the agent's authority [see CC §§ 2330, 2333, 2334].

Consider:

Contract cases in which agency issues arise sometimes will involve an ongoing business relationship between the attorney's client, the opposing party, and/or a third party. Often the client, the opposing party, or both, will have a business relationship with the entity that is being identified as the "principal" in the transaction. It is important to understand this business relationship before joining the third party to the litigation. It is equally important to bear the parties' business relationship and objectives in mind in determining litigation strategy and settlement prospects.

20.04 Agent Represents Principal in Dealings With Third Parties.

An agency relationship is defined as one in which one party--the agent--represents another party--the principal--in dealings with third persons [CC § 2295; see also L. Byron Culver & Assocs. v. Jaoudi Indus. & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 CA4th 300, 304, 1 CR2d 680 (agency is relation that results from act of one person, the principal, who authorizes another, the agent, to conduct one or more transactions with one or more third persons and to exercise a degree of discretion in achieving principal's purpose)].

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.05

20.05 Existence of Agency Is Question of Fact That Party Seeking to Establish Agency Must Prove.

20.05[1] Existence of Agency Relationship Is Question of Fact. The existence of an agency relationship is a question of fact [Inglewood Teachers Assn. v. Public Employment Relations Bd. (1991) 227 CA3d 767, 780, 278 CR 228 ; Rubens v. Texam Oil Corp. (1965) 239 CA2d 78, 82, 48 CR 411 , and is for the jury to decide unless the evidence is susceptible of only a single inference [Dorsic v. Kurtin (1971) 19 CA3d 226, 238, 96 CR 528]. The court may examine the circumstances of the case and the conduct of the parties in determining whether an agency relationship existed and whether an agent acted within the scope of his or her authority [Inglewood Teachers Assn. v. Public Employment Relations Bd. (1991) 227 CA3d 767, 780, 278 CR 228 ; Rubens v. Texam Oil Corp. (1965) 239 CA2d 78, 82, 48 CR 411].

20.05[2] Party Seeking to Prove Existence of Agency Has Burden of Proof. The party seeking to establish the existence of an agency relationship bears the burden of proof [Inglewood Teachers Assn. v. Public Employment Relations Bd. (1991) 227 CA3d 767, 780, 278 CR 228].

Chapter 20 Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions
II. DETERMINING IF AGENCY RELATIONSHIP EXISTS

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.06

20.06 Integral Features of Agency Relationship.

20.06[1] Essential Elements of Agency Relationship. California courts have identified three major features that are integral to any agency relationship [Alvarez v. Felker Mfg. Co. (1964) 230 CA2d 987, 999, 41 CR 514 (no agency relationship found); see also Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. (2007) 148 CA4th 937, 964, 56 CR3d 177] :

- The agent has the power to alter legal relationships between the principal and third parties [see 20.06[2]].
- The agent generally acts as a fiduciary of the principal [see 20.06[3]].
- The principal has the right to control the agent's actions [see 20.06[4]].

Strategic Point:

An important thing to keep in mind when examining agency issues is that the nature of the parties' relationship (i.e. whether or not it is an agency) cannot always be determined based on the parties' agreement or their acts. As a result, reviewing the parties' agreement (if any) is not the end of the inquiry. Even if an agreement states that no agency has been created, an agency in fact may be created by the agent's ostensible authority [see 20.09[2]]; and even if an agreement spells out an agency, if the parties' relationship as a whole does not reflect an agency, none exists [see 20.07[2][c]].

Consider:

In deciding whether a person is another person's agent, as opposed to being merely an independent contractor, California courts often have applied to agency law the factors used to determine whether a person is an employee as opposed to an independent contractor; usually in the context of determining the alleged principal's liability for torts committed by the alleged agent [see, e.g., Flores v. Brown (1952) 39 C2d 622, 628-629, 248 P2d 922 ; Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 C2d 356, 370-372, 232 P2d 241].

Cross References:

Discussion of court's review of parties' intentions, see 20.07[2][c].

Further discussion of agency relationship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 427, Principal and Agent (Matthew Bender).

List of factors which are considered in determining whether an employment or independent contractor relationship exists, see Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220.

20.06[2] Agent Has Power to Alter Legal Relationships Between Principal and Third Parties. An agent may alter legal relationships between the principal and third parties in a variety of ways. The agent's ability to negotiate and enter into contracts on behalf of the principal is of key importance. When an agent executes a contract on behalf of a principal, the law regards the principal as the contracting party if both of the following requirements are met:

- It must be clear that the agent executed the contract as an agent and not as a principal [Lippert v. Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 382, 50 CR 478 ; see also CPI Builders, Inc. v. Impco Techs., Inc. (2001) 94 CA4th 1167, 1174, 114 CR2d 851].
- The agent must have acted within the agent's scope of authority [CC § 2330; CPI Builders, Inc. v. Impco Techs., Inc. (2001) 94 CA4th 1167, 1174, 114 CR2d 851].

Cross Reference:

Discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 427, Principal and Agent (Matthew Bender).

20.06[3] Agent Acts As Fiduciary of Principal.

20.06[3][a] Agent Owes Principal Duty of Loyalty. CC § 2322 provides that an agent is held to the same duties of loyalty and good faith that bind a trustee under Prob Code § 16002, 16004, 16005, or 16009 [CC § 2322; see also Fischer v. Machado (1996) 50 CA4th 1069, 1072, 58 CR2d 213 ; Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 CA3d 931, 940, 175 CR 81]. While the agency relationship exists, the agent is prohibited from competing with the principal or acting on behalf of any party whose interests are adverse to the principal's interests [L. Byron Culver & Assocs. v. Jaoudi Indus. & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 CA4th 300, 304, 1 CR2d 680 ; Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 CA3d 931, 940, 175 CR 81 ; Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 C2d 662, 674-675, 68 CR 589, 441 P2d 101]. The duty of loyalty remains paramount regardless of whether or not the agent is compensated in any way for duties performed as an agent [Zalk v. General Exploration Co. (1980) 105 CA3d 786, 793, 164 CR 647].

Warning:

The prohibition against competing with the principal will be enforced regardless of whether the principal was actually injured by the agent's behavior, or whether the agent intended any wrongdoing [Rezos v. Zahm & Nagel Co. (1926) 78 CA 728, 731, 246 P 564].

20.06[3][b] Agent's Fiduciary Role Controls Agent's Behavior. The agent's role as a fiduciary both mandates certain actions on the agent's part and restricts the agent's permitted activities:

- The agent is obligated to disclose to the principal all material information regarding the subject matter of the agency [Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 CA3d 931, 940, 175 CR 81 ; L. Byron Culver & Assocs. v. Jaoudi Indus. & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 CA4th 300, 304, 1 CR2d 680].
- The agent must use reasonable care, skill and diligence in the performance of the object of the agency [Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 CA3d 931, 940, 175 CR 81].

■ The agent is also bound not to disclose any information the principal provided to the agent in confidence or otherwise acquired by the agent in the course of the agency [Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 CA3d 1060, 1072, 283 CR 917].

20.06[4] Principal Must Have Right to Control Agent's Actions. The primary factor in determining the existence of an agency relationship is the extent of the alleged principal's right to control the manner and means of accomplishing the result desired [Dorsic v. Kurtin (1971) 19 CA3d 226, 238-239, 96 CR 528]--in other words, whether or not the alleged principal controlled or had the legal right to control the activities of the alleged agent [Flores v. Brown (1952) 39 C2d 622, 628, 248 P2d 922]. This factor has been judicially characterized as "determinative" [Flores v. Brown (1952) 39 C2d 622, 628, 248 P2d 922] and "decisive" [St. Paul Ins. Co. v. Industrial Underwriters Ins. Co. (1989) 214 CA3d 117, 122, 262 CR 490] on the issue of whether or not an agency relationship exists. In the absence of the essential characteristic of the right of control, there is no true agency [van't Rood v. County of Santa Clara (2003) 113 CA4th 549, 572 ; Edwards v. Freeman (1949) 34 C2d 589, 592, 212 P2d 883].

It is not essential that the right of control be exercised or that there be actual supervision of the work of the agent. The existence of the right of control and supervision establishes the existence of an agency relationship [Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 C2d 356, 370-372, 232 P2d 241].

Distinguish--Independent Contractor Relationship:

An independent contractor is one who renders service in the course of independent employment or occupation following the employer's desires only as to the results of the work, not as to the means whereby it is to be accomplished [Dorsic v. Kurtin (1971) 19 CA3d 226, 238, 96 CR 528].

Example--No Agency Created:

The fact that a financial institution provided credit, computer services, forms, and/or financing to another vendor (such as a car dealer) normally is not sufficient to establish that the vendor is the agent of the financial institution [Bescos v. Bank of America (2003) 105 CA4th 378, 395-397, 129 CR2d 423].

Chapter 20 Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions
II. DETERMINING IF AGENCY RELATIONSHIP EXISTS

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.07

20.07 Requirements for Creation of Agency Relationship Must Be Met.

20.07[1] Any Person Having Capacity to Contract May Appoint Agent. Any person having capacity to contract may appoint an agent, and any person may be an agent [CC § 2296].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of capacity to contract, see Ch. 14, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Lack of Capacity.

20.07[2] Agency Relationship May Be Established by Words or Actions.

20.07[2][a] Agency Relationship May Be Created Informally. Unlike many other legal relationships, an agency relationship may be created informally. In most cases, there is no requirement that either a written or oral agreement or that there be any consideration be given [Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 C2d 356, 372, 232 P2d 241 ; Frank Pisano & Assocs. v. Taggart (1972) 29 CA3d 1, 15, 105 CR 414].

Jury Instructions:

Creation of Agency Relationship, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.52 (Matthew Bender).

► Cross Reference:

Methods for conferring authority on agent, see 20.09.

20.07[2][b] Conduct of Parties May Be Sufficient to Create Agency. The conduct of each party "manifesting acceptance of a relationship whereby one of them is to perform work for the other under the latter's direction" can be sufficient to create an agency relationship [Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 C2d 356, 372, 232 P2d 241 ; see also Edwards v. Freeman (1949) 34 C2d 589, 592, 212 P2d 883 ; Rezos v. Zahm & Nagel Co. (1926) 78 CA 728, 731, 246 P 564]. Even so, merely doing a favor for another will not create an agency relationship. There must be some legal duty owed by the agent to the principal [Violette v. Shoup (1993) 16 CA4th 611, 620, 20 CR2d 358], or the principal must have acted, either intentionally or through lack of ordinary care, in a way that led a third party to reasonably believe that the principal had employed an agent [Pagarigan v. Libby Care Ctr., Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 298, 301-302, 120 CR2d 892].

An agency relationship cannot be created by the conduct of the agent alone. Conduct by both principal and agent are necessary to create the agency [Flores v. Evergreen at San Diego, LLC (2007) 148 CA4th 581, 587-588, 55 CR3d 823] . Nor can an agency relationship be implied from a marriage relationship alone [Warfield v. Summerville Senior Living, Inc. (2007) 158 CA4th 443, 449, 69 CR3d 783] .

Cross References:

Conduct of principal creating express authority, see 20.09[1][b].

Conduct of principal creating ostensible authority, see 20.09[2].

20.07[2][c] Courts Will Look to Intentions of Parties. Even if there is a written agreement between a purported principal and agent, the agreement is not controlling as to the nature of the relationship between the parties [Nichols v. Arthur Murray, Inc. (1967) 248 CA2d 610, 613, 56 CR 728]. The courts will examine the intention of the parties as well as their conduct in determining whether an agency relationship has been created. Merely using the terms "principal" and "agent" in a contract will not serve to create an agency relationship if the contract as a whole shows that the relationship does not meet the definition of an agency relationship or is for a different purpose altogether [Anderson v. Badger (1948) 84 CA2d 736, 742, 191 P2d 768].

This is not to say that contractual recitations are meaningless. A principal that has signed an agreement reciting an agency will be hard-pressed to disavow its existence [see Woolley v. Embassy Suites, Inc. (1991) 227 CA3d 1520, 1531, 278 CR 719 ("[t]he management contracts themselves eloquently confirm that the relationship is one of agency")].

Cross Reference:

Discussion and forms regarding creation of agency relationship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 427, Principal and Agent (Matthew Bender).

20.07[3] Creation of Agency Must Comply With Equal Dignities Rule.

20.07[3][a] Equal Dignities Rule Applies When Underlying Contract Must Be in Writing. In California, the equal dignities rule provides that an oral authorization is sufficient for any purpose, except that an authority to enter into a contract required by law to be in writing can only be given by an instrument in writing [CC § 2309]. In other words, if a principal wishes its agent to enter into an agreement that is required by law to be in writing, the agent's authorization to enter into that agreement also must be in writing.

The equal dignities rule applies only when the requirement that an agreement be in writing is imposed by law or statute. The rule does not apply to a mere agreement between the parties that a right must be exercised in writing [Ripani v. Liberty Loan Corp. (1979) 95 CA3d 603, 610, 157 CR 272].

20.07[3][b] Courts Have Established Exceptions to Equal Dignities Rule. In interpreting the equal dignities rule, the courts have established a number of situations in which the rule will not be applied:

- A principal who, by its own conduct, leads a third party to believe that the agent has written authority will be estopped from raising the equal dignities rule against a third party [Kerner v. Hughes Tool Co. (1976) 56 CA3d 924, 934, 128 CR 839]. Similarly, the equal dignities rule will not be applied to prohibit enforcement of the agreement between the principal and the agent [Sunset-Sternau Food Co. v. Bonzi (1964) 60 C2d 834, 842-843, 36 CR 741, 389 P2d 133].
- When an agent performs a purely mechanical act without exercise of any discretion, such as signing a document on behalf of the principal, the agent's authorization to sign for the principal need not be in writing [Ellis v. Mihelis (1963) 60 C2d 206, 214, 32 CR 415, 384 P2d 7].

- Authorization need not be in writing when an executive officer of a corporation signs on behalf of the corporation. This exception is based on the precept that an executive officer of a corporation is not merely an agent, but rather is the representative of the corporation itself [Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co., Inc. (1949) 34 C2d 11, 16-17, 206 P2d 847].

Discussion:

See 20.09[1]

☐ If agent did not have actual authority, did agent have ostensible authority to bind principal, based of satisfaction of all of following requirements:

☐ Did third party dealing with agent reasonably believe that agent was authorized to act for principal?

☐ Would a reasonable person think that agent's act would be within scope of agent's ostensible authority?

☐ Did principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care, cause or allow third party to believe that agent had authority?

☐ Did third party, acting with ordinary care, suffer some change of position or injury as a result of reliance on agent's authority?

☐ Was third party free from negligence in relying on agent's apparent authority?

Authority:

CC § 2317; Reusche v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1965) 231 CA2d 731, 736, 42 CR 262 ; Mejia v. Community Hosp. of San Bernardino (2002) 99 CA4th 1448, 1456-1457, 122 CR2d 233 ; Associated Creditors' Agency v. Davis (1975) 13 C3d 374, 399-400, 118 CR 772, 530 P2d 1084

Discussion:

See 20.09[2]

☐ If agent did not have either actual or ostensible authority, did principal subsequently ratify agent's action?

☐ Did manner of ratification satisfy one of following requirements?:

☐ Was ratification made in same manner that would have been necessary to confer original authority for the act ratified?

☐ If an oral authorization would have sufficed, did principal ratify by accepting or retaining benefit of agent's act, with notice of that fact?

Authority:

CC § 2310; Los Angeles Dredging Co. v. City of Long Beach (1930) 210 C 348, 360, 291 P 839 ; Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 C3d 67, 73, 104 CR 57, 500 P2d 1401

Discussion:

See 20.09[3][b]

☐ Did principal have full knowledge of material facts of transaction at time of ratification?

Authority:

CC § 2314; Estate of Fletcher (1940) 36 CA2d 567, 573, 97 P2d 1039

Discussion:

See 20.09[3][c]

☐ Did principal have power to confer authority for act at time act was performed?

Authority:

CC § 2312; Lindsay-Field v. Friendly (1995) 36 CA4th 1728, 1736, 43 CR2d 71

Discussion:

See 20.09[3][d]

- ☐ Does ratification affect rights of any third party?

Authority:

CC § 2313

Discussion:

See 20.09[3][e]

- ☐ Can knowledge of information known to agent be imputed to principal?

- ☐ Should agent, in good faith and exercise of ordinary care and diligence, have communicated information to principal?

Authority:

CC § 2332; Kelley v. British Commercial Ins. Co. Ltd. (1963) 221 CA2d 554, 561, 34 CR 564

Discussion:

See 20.10[2][a]

- ☐ With respect to information in question:

- ☐ Was it obtained in course of agent's acts within scope of agent's authority; and

- ☐ Did it relate to subject matter of agency?

Authority:

Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1948) 87 CA2d 620, 630, 197 P2d 580

Discussion:

See 20.10[2][b]

- ☐ Is presumption imputing agent's knowledge to principal rebuttable under facts of case, due to existence of any of following:

- ☐ Does any law specifically require actual notice to principal?

Authority:

Herman v. Los Angeles County Metro. Transp. Auth. (1999) 71 CA4th 819, 830, 84 CR2d 144

Discussion:

See 20.10[2]

☐ Does third party have knowledge of circumstances that clearly indicate that agent will not inform principal?

Authority:

Wagner v. Benson (1980) 101 CA3d 27, 35, 161 CR 516 ; Sands v. Eagle Oil & Ref. Co., Inc. (1948) 83 CA2d 312, 319, 188 P2d 782

Discussion:

See 20.10[2][d]

☐ Was agent acting adversely to interests of principal?

Authority:

Sands v. Eagle Oil & Ref. Co., Inc. (1948) 83 CA2d 312, 319, 188 P2d 782 ; People v. Park (1978) 87 CA3d 550, 566, 151 CR 146 ; Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, Inc. (1966) 246 CA2d 242, 264, 54 CR 786

Discussion:

☐ Was a criminal action involved?

Authority:

Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 C2d 533, 538, 282 P2d 857

Discussion:

See 20.10[2]

☐ Based on determinations made above, are agent's acts in question legally deemed to be acts of principal, so that party seeking to enforce agent's acts can proceed against principal directly?

Authority:

Lippert v. Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 382, 50 CR 478

Discussion:

See 20.10[1]

☐ If agent's acts were outside grant of agent's authority, can principal avoid liability for agent's acts by demonstrating all of following:

- ☐ Agent did not have a good faith belief in his or her authority to act.
- ☐ Principal's conduct did not create an ostensible agency.
- ☐ Principal had no knowledge of agent's acts that exceeded agent's authority.

Authority:

Pagarigan v. Libby Care Ctr., Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 298, 301-302, 120 CR2d 892 ;

Discussion:

See 20.11[1]

☐ For purposes of imposing liability on principal, can agent's authorized acts be "plainly separated" from any unauthorized acts?

Authority:

CC § 2333

Discussion:

See 20.11[2]

☐ If third party cannot seek recovery from principal, can recovery be sought from agent?

☐ Can agent be liable for breach of warranty of authority?

☐ Did agent misrepresent scope of his or her authority?

☐ Was third party aware of the misrepresentation?

Authority:

CC § 2342

Discussion:

See 20.12[1]

☐ Was credit given, with agent's consent, to agent personally?

☐ Did agent enter into written contract in principal's name without believing, in good faith, that agent had authority to do so?

☐ Were agent's acts "wrongful in their nature?"

Authority:

CC § 2343

Discussion:

See 20.12[2]

☐ If principal was undisclosed, determine whether to sue agent or principal.

☐ Third party who discovers existence of an undisclosed principal may pursue claim against either principal or agent.

Chapter 20 Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions
III. DETERMINING IF PRINCIPAL IS BOUND BY AGENT'S ACTS

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.09

20.09 Agent Must Have Acted Within Scope of Authority.

20.09[1] Principal May Confer Actual Authority on Agent.

20.09[1][a] Actual Authority Is Authority That Principal Intends Agent to Have. Actual authority is the authority that a principal "intentionally confers upon the agent, or intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, allows the agent to believe himself to possess" [CC § 2316]. In other words, actual authority is based on conduct of the principal that leads the agent reasonably to believe that the principal consents to the agent's acts [Tomerlin v. Canadian Indem. Co. (1964) 61 C2d 638, 643, 39 CR 731, 394 P2d 571 ; Mannion v. Campbell Soup Co. (1966) 243 CA2d 317, 320, 52 CR 246].

Distinguish:

In contrast, ostensible authority arises as a result of conduct of the principal that leads the third party reasonably to believe that the agent possesses the authority to act on the principal's behalf [Tomerlin v. Canadian Indem. Co. (1964) 61 C2d 638, 643, 39 CR 731, 394 P2d 571 ; see 20.09[2]].

Warning:

A single agent may have actual authority for certain acts and ostensible authority for others [Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 CA2d 942, 960, 72 CR 722].

Jury Instructions:

Actual Authority of Agent, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.53 (Matthew Bender).

20.09[1][b] Actual Authority Need Not Be Express and May Be Proved by Circumstantial Evidence. The principal's consent need not be express (i.e., actually granted to the agent by the principal orally or in writing) in order to establish actual authority. Agency may be implied from the facts, and if a principal by his or her acts has led others to believe that he or she has conferred authority upon an agent, the principal may not assert, as against third parties who have relied thereon in good faith, that the principal did not intend to confer such authority. An agent's authority may be proved by circumstantial evidence [Tomerlin v. Canadian Indem. Co. (1964) 61 C2d 638, 643, 39 CR 731, 394 P2d 571].

20.09[1][c] Grant of Actual Authority Includes Implied Authority to Act in Furtherance of Purpose of Agency. In addition to the agent's express authority, a grant of actual authority to an agent by a principal gives the agent implied authority to "do everything necessary or proper and usual, in the ordinary course of business, for effecting the purpose of his agency" [CC § 2319; Garber v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1962) 203 CA2d 693, 701-702, 22 CR 123 ; Leavens v. Pinkham & McKevitt (1912) 164 C 242, 248, 128 P 399]. An agent's exercise of implied authority still must be reasonably appropriate and serve to further the principal's purpose [Garber v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1962) 203 CA2d 693, 702-703, 22 CR 123].

20.09[1][d] Scope of Express Authority Is Defined by Principal's Instructions. If the agent has actual authority from the principal, the scope of the agent's authority will be limited to the express terms established by the principal, whether written or oral, together with implied authority to use all reasonable and necessary means to accomplish the purpose of the agency [CC § 2319; Garber v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1962) 203 CA2d 693, 701-702, 22 CR 123].

20.09[2] Conduct of Principal May Confer Ostensible Authority on Agent.

20.09[2][a] Ostensible Authority Must Be Based on Acts or Omissions of Principal, Not Agent. Ostensible authority is "such as a principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care, causes or allows a third person to believe the agent to possess" [CC § 2317].

Any claim of ostensible authority must be based upon statements or conduct of the principal, rather than on the acts or representations by the agent [Petersen v. Securities Settlement Corp. (1991) 226 CA3d 1445, 1452, 277 CR 468 ; Lindsay-Field v. Friendly (1995) 36 CA4th 1728, 1734, 43 CR2d 71 ; Mannion v. Campbell Soup Co. (1966) 243 CA2d 317, 320, 52 CR 246].

Distinguish:

In contrast, actual authority arises as a result of conduct of the principal that leads the agent reasonably to believe that the principal consents to the agent's acts [Tomerlin v. Canadian Indem. Co. (1964) 61 C2d 638, 643, 39 CR 731, 394 P2d 571 ; see 20.09[1][a]].

Example:

An attorney, merely by virtue of his or her employment as such, has no apparent authority to bind a client to an agreement for arbitration [Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 CA4th 1208, 1221, 101 CR3d 97 (client is bound by arbitration agreement signed by his or her counsel only if client consented to or ratified agreement)].

Warning:

A single agent may have actual authority for certain acts and ostensible authority for others [Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 CA2d 942, 960, 72 CR 722].

Jury Instructions:

Actual Authority of Agent, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.53 (Matthew Bender).

Ostensible Authority, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.55 (Matthew Bender).

Ostensible Agent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3709 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

20.09[2][b] Explicit Representations to Third Party Regarding Agent's Authority Are Not Required. The principal does not have to make explicit representations regarding the agent's authority to the third party before ostensible authority can be found [C.A.R. Transp. Brokerage Co., Inc. v. Darden Rests., Inc. (9th Cir 2000) 213 F3d 474, 480 ; Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 CA2d 942, 960, 72 CR 722]. Ostensible authority may be proven by means such as the following [C.A.R. Transp. Brokerage Co., Inc. v. Darden Rests., Inc. (9th Cir 2000) 213 F3d 474, 480 ; Meyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 CA2d 90, 102, 79 CR 816]:

- The principal remaining silent with respect to the agent's authority.
- The principal's representations to the general public.
- The principal appointing an agent to a particular position.
- The customs and usages of a particular trade.

20.09[2][c] Elements of Estoppel Must Be Proven to Hold Principal Liable for Agent's Acts. If an agent is acting under ostensible authority, a principal will be bound by the acts of the agent to any third persons who, in good faith and without want of ordinary care, incur a liability or part with value in reliance upon the agent's authority [CC § 2334]. Under CC §§ 2317 and 2334, the liability of the principal for the agent's acts is based on the doctrine of estoppel. In essence, a principal who allows an agent to act under ostensible authority has facilitated the commission of a fraud on a third party and, provided that the third party had no notice of the fraud, the principal will be held liable for the agent's fraud [Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 CA2d 942, 960, 72 CR 722 ; Meyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 CA2d 90, 102, 79 CR 816].

Three elements must be proven in order to establish a principal's liability for the acts of an agent clothed with ostensible authority [Reusche v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1965) 231 CA2d 731, 736, 42 CR 262 ; Mejia v. Community Hosp. of San Bernardino (2002) 99 CA4th 1448, 1456-1457, 122 CR2d 233 ; Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 CA2d 942, 960, 72 CR 722]:

- The person dealing with the agent must reasonably believe that the agent is authorized to act for the principal.
- The third party's belief must be the result of some act or neglect on the part of the principal.
- The third party, acting with ordinary care, must have suffered some change of position or injury as a result of relying on the agent's authority.

An alternative formulation of this three-part test states the third element to be that the third person, in relying on the agent's apparent authority, must not be guilty of negligence [see, e.g., Associated Creditors' Agency v. Davis (1975) 13 C3d 374, 399-400, 118 CR 772, 530 P2d 1084 (citing cases); Seneca Ins. Co. v. County of Orange (2004) 117 CA4th 611, 620].

Judge's Perspective:

The best evidence of whether it was reasonable for the plaintiff to believe that the agent had the authority to act for the principal is whether the agent had done so before [Snukal v. Flightways Mfg., Inc. (2000) 23 C4th 754, 779, 98 CR2d 1, 3 P3d 286 (a corporate officer may have ostensible authority to enter into an agreement on behalf of the corporation if he or she "assumed and exercised the power in the past" with the apparent consent and acquiescence of the corporation)]. However, the fact that the agent acted on the principal's behalf must have been known to third parties to make the reliance justifiable [Snukal v. Flightways Mfg., Inc. (2000) 23 C4th 754, 779, 98 CR2d 1, 3 P3d 286].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

Given the factual questions involved in an ostensible authority determination, it is unlikely that an agency relationship of this nature can be established on pretrial motion (although it is possible that one could be disproved, when, for example the purported agent was found to have understood and/or disclosed to third parties that no agency existed). Plaintiffs should keep this in mind when pleading the existence (and basis) of an agency relationship.

Jury Instructions:

Ostensible Agent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3709 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Ostensible Authority, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.55 (Matthew Bender)

20.09[2][d] Wrongdoing or Receipt of Benefit Is Not Required to Hold Principal Liable. When an agent acts under ostensible authority, the principal will be subject to liability regardless of whether the principal is innocent of any wrongdoing or received any benefit from the transaction [Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 CA2d 942, 960, 72 CR 722].

20.09[2][e] Scope of Ostensible Authority Is Determined by Reasonable Person Standard. If the agent is acting under ostensible authority, the scope of the agent's authority will be established based on what a reasonable person would find to be the scope of the agent's authority [Tomerlin v. Canadian Indem. Co. (1964) 61 C2d 638, 643, 39 CR 731, 394 P2d 571 ; Columbia Outfitting Co. v. Freeman (1950) 36 C2d 216, 220, 223 P2d 21].

20.09[3] Principal May Subsequently Ratify Agent's Acts.

20.09[3][a] Valid Ratification Is Equivalent of Original Grant of Authority. If a principal properly ratifies an act performed by a purported agent, the ratification will relate back to the time of the agent's act and the act will be treated as if it had been approved originally [Los Angeles Dredging Co. v. City of Long Beach (1930) 210 C 348, 360, 291 P 839 ; Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 C3d 67, 73, 104 CR 57, 500 P2d 1401].

Example:

Condominium sellers' signatures on disclosure statements ratified the actions of their real estate agent, who previously (without authority) signed the sellers' names on an offer, counteroffer and addendum to the counteroffer. The sellers' ratification of their agent's actions created an enforceable contract binding on the sellers [Behniwal v. Mix (2005) 133 CA4th 1027, 1039-1042, 35 CR3d 320].

Exception:

There can be no ratification if [Pacific Bone Coal & Fertilizer Co. v. Bleakmore (1927) 81 CA 659, 666, 254 P 618 ; Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 C3d 67, 73, 104 CR 57, 500 P2d 1401]:

- The principal's purpose in adopting the agent's actions is minimizing the principal's losses; or
- The ratification is due to duress or misrepresentation on the part of the agent.

Jury Instructions:

Ratification, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3710 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Ratification by Acceptance of Benefits, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.56 (Matthew Bender).

20.09[3][b] Ratification Must Meet Any Requirements That Would Have Applied to Advance Authorization of Agent's Acts. A ratification can be made only in the manner that would have been necessary to confer an original authority for the act ratified, or, if an oral authorization would suffice, by accepting or retaining the benefit of the act, with notice thereof [CC § 2310].

Ratification need not always be express. It may be implied based on conduct of the principal that [Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 C3d 67, 73, 104 CR 57, 500 P2d 1401 ; Union Trust & Realty Co. v. Best (1911) 160 C 263, 267, 116 P 737]:

- Shows an intention to ratify the acts of the purported agent; or
- Is inconsistent with any conclusion other than that the principal is adopting and approving the agent's acts, such as not objecting to a transaction entered into by a purported agent.

Conduct by the principal that will constitute ratification includes bringing legal action to secure the benefits of the alleged agency transaction [Price v. McConnell (1960) 184 CA2d 660, 666, 7 CR 695].

20.09[3][c] Principal Must Have Full Knowledge of Transaction. A ratification by a principal will not be effective if the principal does not have full and complete knowledge of the material facts of the transaction at the time of ratification [CC § 2314; Estate of Fletcher (1940) 36 CA2d 567, 573, 97 P2d 1039]. The principal's knowledge of the material facts encompasses both knowledge of the agent's acts and the legal effect of those acts [Estate of Fletcher (1940) 36 CA2d 567, 573, 97 P2d 1039]. In essence, the principal's decision to adopt the agent's actions must be truly voluntary [Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 C3d 67, 73, 104 CR 57, 500 P2d 1401]. Thus, the mere fact that the principal accepts the benefits of an agent's unauthorized acts generally will not constitute a ratification if the principal acted in ignorance of the relevant facts [Pacific Bone Coal & Fertilizer Co. v. Bleakmore (1927) 81 CA 659, 666, 254 P 618].

Exception:

If the principal's ignorance of the facts is due to the principal's own failure to investigate and if the circumstances are such as to put a reasonable person on inquiry, the principal may be held to have ratified the agent's acts despite lack of full knowledge [Volandri v. Hlobil (1959) 170 CA2d 656, 659, 339 P2d 218 ; Reusche v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1965) 231 CA2d 731, 736, 42 CR 262].

Jury Instructions:

Ratification, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3710 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Ratification by Acceptance of Benefits, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.56 (Matthew Bender).

20.09[3][d] Principal Must Have Power to Confer Authority on Agent at Time of Ratification. A ratification will not be valid unless, at the time the principal ratifies the act, the principal has power to confer authority for such an act [CC § 2312; Lindsay-Field v. Friendly (1995) 36 CA4th 1728, 1736, 43 CR2d 71].

20.09[3][e] Ratification Cannot Adversely Affect Third Parties Without Their Consent. No unauthorized act by an agent can be made valid retroactively if ratification would prejudice any third parties without their consent [CC § 2313].

20.09[3][f] Principal Must Ratify Entire Transaction. Ratification of part of an indivisible transaction is a ratification of the whole [CC § 2311; Volandri v. Hlobil (1959) 170 CA2d 656, 659, 339 P2d 218]. The purpose of this rule is to prevent a principal from accepting the benefits of a transaction without the burdens [Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 C3d 698, 704, 97 CR 309, 488 P2d 637 ; Price v. McConnell (1960) 184 CA2d 660, 666, 7 CR 695]. Since a ratification occurs after a transaction has taken place, this rule ensures that the principal may approve the transaction only as it is actually structured, and may not alter it to suit the principal's interests [Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 C3d 698, 704, 97 CR 309, 488 P2d 637].

Chapter 20 Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions
III. DETERMINING IF PRINCIPAL IS BOUND BY AGENT'S ACTS

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.10

20.10 Acts Within Scope of Agent's Authority Are Considered Acts of Principal.

20.10[1] Third Party May Proceed Directly Against Principal. Once a third party has proved the existence of an actual or ostensible agency, the agent's acts within the scope of the agent's authority are deemed to be those of the principal [CC §§ 2330, 2336, Lippert v. Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 382, 50 CR 478 ; Spahn v. Guild Indus. Corp. (1979) 94 CA3d 143, 156, 156 CR 375]. Accordingly, a third party may seek to enforce directly against the principal any transaction entered into with the agent [Lippert v. Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 382, 50 CR 478].

20.10[2] Information Known to Agent May Be Imputed to Principal.

20.10[2][a] Presumption Is That Agent Will Communicate All Relevant Information. Both principal and agent are deemed to have notice of whatever either has notice of, and ought, in good faith and the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, to communicate to the other [CC § 2332]. The rule of imputed knowledge is based upon the presumption that the agent will perform his or her duty to the principal and will communicate all knowledge that the agent has gained relative to the subject matter of the agency [Kelley v. British Commercial Ins. Co. Ltd. (1963) 221 CA2d 554, 561, 34 CR 564 ; Maron v. Swig (1952) 115 CA2d 87, 90, 251 P2d 770].

This presumption includes allowance for a reasonable lapse of time for communication by the agent to the principal [Kelley v. British Commercial Ins. Co. Ltd. (1963) 221 CA2d 554, 561, 34 CR 564].

Judge's Perspective:

The principal is chargeable with the agent's knowledge of facts acquired by the agent prior to the commencement of the agency "when that knowledge can reasonably be said to be in the mind of the agent when acting for the principal" [Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1948) 87 CA2d 620, 631, 197 P2d 580 (knowledge regarding standard form contracts gained prior to meeting plaintiff)].

Jury Instructions:

Notice to Either Agent or Principal Is Notice to Other, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.59 (Matthew Bender).

An agent who is acting for the principal but has an opposing personal interest in the transaction is nevertheless required to communicate to the principal all material facts regarding the transaction, and the law will presume that the agent has done so [Maron v. Swig (1952) 115 CA2d 87, 91, 251 P2d 770 ; McKenney v. Ellsworth (1913) 165 C 326, 329, 132 P 75].

20.10[2][b] Information Must Relate to Purpose of Agency. The information to be communicated must be information obtained in the course of the agent's acts within the scope of the agent's authority and must relate to the subject matter of the agency [Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1948) 87 CA2d 620, 630, 197 P2d 580].

20.10[2][c] Agent's Failure to Communicate Does Not Automatically Defeat Presumption of Communication. The fact that the agent failed to communicate with the principal, or provided the principal with incomplete or incorrect information, will not defeat application of the rule [Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1948) 87 CA2d 620, 630, 197 P2d 580 ; Kelley v. British Commercial Ins. Co. Ltd. (1963) 221 CA2d 554, 562, 34 CR 564]. The agent's failure to communicate information to the principal may constitute a breach of the agent's duty owed to the principal but will not operate to relieve the principal of liability towards innocent third parties [Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1948) 87 CA2d 620, 630, 197 P2d 580 ; Kelley v. British Commercial Ins. Co. Ltd. (1963) 221 CA2d 554, 562, 34 CR 564].

20.10[2][d] Agent's Knowledge Will Not Be Imputed to Principal in Some Situations. California courts have established several exceptions and limitations to the rule that the agent's knowledge is imputed to the principal:

- When a law expressly requires actual notice to a principal, serving notice on the agent will be insufficient to impute knowledge of that service to the principal [Herman v. Los Angeles County Metro. Transp. Auth. (1999) 71 CA4th 819, 830, 84 CR2d 144].
- When the third party has knowledge of circumstances that clearly indicate that the agent will not inform the principal, the agent's knowledge is not imputed to the principal [Wagner v. Benson (1980) 101 CA3d 27, 35, 161 CR 516 ; Sands v. Eagle Oil & Ref. Co., Inc. (1948) 83 CA2d 312, 319, 188 P2d 782].
- When the agent is acting adversely to the interests of the principal, the principal's knowledge of the agent's acts will not be imputed [Sands v. Eagle Oil & Ref. Co., Inc. (1948) 83 CA2d 312, 319, 188 P2d 782 ; People v. Park (1978) 87 CA3d 550, 566, 151 CR 146 ; Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, Inc. (1966) 246 CA2d 242, 264, 54 CR 786].
- The rule imputing the agent's knowledge to the principal cannot be used to protect bystanders who are not involved in any transaction with the agent or principal [Lucas v. Pollock (1992) 7 CA4th 668, 674-675, 8 CR2d 918 ; Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 CA3d 448, 454, 152 CR 42].

20.11 Principal May Not Be Bound If Agent Acted Without Authority.

20.11[1] Principal Not Liable If Agent Lacked Good Faith Belief in Authority to Act. If a purported agent acts without the grant of any authority by the purported principal, the principal may be able to avoid liability for the agent's acts if:

- The principal can defeat any claims that the principal, through the principal's acts or conduct, allowed the creation of an ostensible agency [Pagarigan v. Libby Care Ctr., Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 298, 301-302, 120 CR2d 892 ; Grasslands Water Ass'n, Inc. v. Lucky Leven Land & Cattle Co. (1952) 112 CA2d 776, 779-780, 247 P2d 380]; and
- The agent did not have had a good faith belief in his or her authority to act [Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co., Inc. (1949) 34 C2d 11, 18-19, 206 P2d 847].

Jury Instructions:

Liability of Agent for Breach of Contract Executed in Name of Principal, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.57 (Matthew Bender).

In order to avoid liability altogether, the agent's acts must be obviously outside the scope of the agent's authority and there must be no basis for a claim of ostensible authority [Torrance Nat'l Bank v. Enesco Fed. Credit Union (1955) 134 CA2d 316, 328, 285 P2d 737]. In addition, the principal must not have had knowledge of the agent's acts that exceeded the agent's authority [Montgomery v. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n (1948) 85 CA2d 559, 564, 193 P2d 475].

20.11[2] Principal Liable Only for Authorized Acts That Can Be "Plainly Separated" From Unauthorized Acts. A principal may not be liable for an agent's acts that exceed the agent's scope of authority. In this regard, CC § 2333 provides that "[w]hen an agent exceeds his authority, his principal is bound by his authorized acts so far only as they can be plainly separated from those which are unauthorized."

III. DETERMINING IF PRINCIPAL IS BOUND BY AGENT'S ACTS

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.12

20.12 Third Party May Be Able to Recover From Agent If Principal Is Not Bound by Agent's Acts.

20.12[1] Agent May Be Liable for Breach of Warranty of Authority. Any person who acts as an agent warrants "to all who deal with him in that capacity, that he has the authority which he assumes" [CC § 2342]. Thus, an agent who misrepresents the scope of his or her authority to innocent third parties will be liable for his or her breach of the warranty of authority [Cheda v. Grandi (1950) 97 CA2d 513, 518, 218 P2d 97].

The agent will not be liable if the complaining third party knew of the misrepresentation as to the agent's authority [Yoakum v. Tarver (1967) 256 CA2d 202, 206, 64 CR 7].

An agent may shift the burden of liability to the third party with whom the agent is dealing by alerting the third party to the source and scope of the agent's authority. By taking such an action, the third party is put on notice of the need to determine the exact extent of the agent's authority before concluding any transaction with the agent [Yoakum v. Tarver (1967) 256 CA2d 202, 207, 64 CR 7].

Jury Instructions:

➡ Cross Reference:

Complaint for breach of warranty of authority, see 20.22.

20.12[2] Agent May Be Liable in Other Situations. An agent may be liable to third parties as a principal in the following situations [CC § 2343]:

- When, with the agent's consent, credit is given to the agent personally in a transaction.
- When the agent enters into a written contract in the name of the principal, without believing, in good faith, that the agent has authority to do so.
- When the agent's acts are wrongful in their nature.

An agent who engages in any of the above acts will be unable to claim immunity for liability by relying on the general rule that an agent is not liable when both the existence of the agency and the identity of the principal are disclosed [Bayuk v. Edson (1965) 236 CA2d 309, 319-320, 46 CR 49]. The California courts have held that the rule protecting agents from liability merely creates an inference of nonliability that may be refuted by other facts relating to the transaction [Midwest Television, Inc. v. Scott, Lancaster, Mills & Atha, Inc. (1988) 205 CA3d 442, 451, 252 CR 573].

III. DETERMINING IF PRINCIPAL IS BOUND BY AGENT'S ACTS

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.13

20.13 Both Agent and Principal May Be Liable If Agency Is Undisclosed.

20.13[1] Agent Must Disclose Existence of Agency and Identity of Principal to Avoid Liability. An agent who wishes to avoid personal liability for a transaction must disclose, at the time of contracting, both [W.W. Leasing Unlimited v. Commercial Standard Title Ins. Co. (1983) 149 CA3d 792, 795, 197 CR 118]:

- The existence of the agency relationship; and
- The identity of the principal.

In order for the disclosure of an agency to be complete, the agent must provide the true name of the principal. In most cases, merely providing the trade name of the principal is not sufficient [G.W. Andersen Constr. Co. v. Mars Sales (1985) 164 CA3d 326, 332, 210 CR 409 ; W.W. Leasing Unlimited v. Commercial Standard Title Ins. Co. (1983) 149 CA3d 792, 796, 197 CR 118].

There is no requirement that a third party dealing with an agent investigate the identity of the principal; the duty rests solely with the agent [W.W. Leasing Unlimited v. Commercial Standard Title Ins. Co. (1983) 149 CA3d 792, 795, 197 CR 118].

20.13[2] Undisclosed Principal May Claim Benefits of Agent's Transactions. An undisclosed principal generally may choose to accept the benefits of any transaction entered into by the agent and may sue or be sued in connection with such a transaction [American Builder's Assn. v. Au-Yang (1990) 226 CA3d 170, 176, 276 CR 262 ; Buckley v. Shell Chem. Co. (1939) 32 CA2d 209, 214, 89 P2d 453]. However, the principal may not claim the benefits of a contract if doing so would cause injury to the other party to the contract [Wood Bldg. Corp. v. Griffiths (1958) 164 CA2d 559, 565, 330 P2d 847 ; Buckley v. Shell Chem. Co. (1939) 32 CA2d 209, 215, 89 P2d 453]. Furthermore, an undisclosed principal may avoid liability for a transaction entered into by the agent if it is shown that the third party gives exclusive credit to the agent, without any intention to impose liability on another person [CC § 2335; Rigney v. De La Salle Inst. (1935) 10 CA2d 492, 498-499, 52 P2d 579 ; Walton v. Davis (1913) 22 CA 456, 459-460, 134 P 795].

20.13[3] Third Party May Sue Undisclosed Principal or Agent, or Both.

20.13[3][a] Third Party May Sue Either Undisclosed Principal or Agent. When there is an undisclosed principal, once a third party discovers the existence of the principal, the third party has the option to pursue a claim against either the principal or the agent [J & J Builders Supply v. Caffin (1967) 248 CA2d 292, 295, 56 CR 365 ; Rigney v. De La Salle Inst. (1935) 10 CA2d 492, 496, 52 P2d 579].

 Cross Reference:

Filing agency suit, see 20.14 -20.15.

Form, see 20.19.

20.13[3][b] Plaintiff Must Elect Between Recovery Against Undisclosed Principal or Against Agent. The third party may name both the agent and the undisclosed principal in an action in order to determine the facts of the agency relationship [Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 CA2d 608, 613, 13 CR 749 ; Klinger v. Modesto Fruit Co., Inc. (1930) 107 CA 97, 101, 290 P 127]. However, the third party may be required to elect which of the two the third party will hold liable for the transaction [Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 CA2d 608, 612, 13 CR 749 ; Klinger v. Modesto Fruit Co., Inc. (1930) 107 CA 97, 101, 290 P 127].

Warning:

Note that if neither the agent nor the principal demands that the third party make such an election, the agent and principal will be deemed to have waived their right to require the election [Klinger v. Modesto Fruit Co., Inc. (1930) 107 CA 97, 105, 290 P 127].

 Cross Reference:

Filing third party agency suit, see 20.15.

Form, see 20.22.

20.13[3][c] Recovery Against Agent Discharges Principal. If the third party, with knowledge of the identity of the principal, recovers a judgment against the agent, the undisclosed principal is discharged from liability [Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 CA2d 608, 613, 13 CR 749].

20.14 CHECKLIST: Procedure for Raising Agency Issues.

- ☐ Determine if an agency issue exists.
 - ☐ If there is, and you are representing plaintiff, raise issue in initial complaint.
- ☐ Determine if agency is disputed.
 - ☐ If undisputed, name only principal as defendant.

Authority:

CC § 2330; Lippert v. Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 382, 50 CR 478

Discussion:

See 20.15[1]

- ☐ If agency is disputed, name both agent and principal as defendants.
- ☐ Determine if separate claim exists against agent for personal liability.
 - ☐ If so, name agent as defendant.

Authority:

Chapter 20 Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions
IV. PROCEDURE FOR RAISING AGENCY ISSUES

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.15

20.15 Plaintiff Third Party Should Allege Agency in Complaint Against Agent, Principal, or Both.

20.15[1] Only Principal Need Be Named If Agency Is Undisputed. A party seeking to recover from an agent or principal, or both, should allege the agency relationship in the initial complaint. If the existence of the agency relationship is undisputed, only the principal must be a named defendant, because the agent's acts within the scope of his authority are considered the acts of the principal [CC § 2330; Lippert v. Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 382, 50 CR 478].

Exception:

If there is any evidence that the agent acted beyond the scope of authority, or without any authority, plaintiff may have a separate claim against the agent and may name the agent as a defendant [Clifton Cattle Co., Inc. v. Thompson (1974) 43 CA3d 11, 16-17, 117 CR 500].

Drawback:

If the agent, alone, is a party to the contract, the agent will be deemed to be acting as surety for the principal, and any recovery obtained from the agent will act to bar later direct recovery from the principal [Zingheim v. Marshall (1967) 249 CA2d 736, 747-748, 57 CR 809 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency § 184].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

To avoid excluding any source of potential liability, it is common practice to name all relevant parties as defendants and sort out their exact relationships during discovery and at trial [see 20.15[2]].

Cross Reference:

Recovery against agent personally, see 20.12.

20.15[2] Agent Should Be Named Individually If Agency Is in Question. In most cases, the agent should be named only if plaintiff has a separate claim that would establish the agent's personal liability or if the existence of an agency relationship is in question [Zingheim v. Marshall (1967) 249 CA2d 736, 747-748, 57 CR 809 , cert. denied sub nom. Rogers v. Zingheim (1967) 389 US 83], .

Strategic Pointss--Plaintiff:

- If the existence of the agency is at issue, plaintiff should name both principal and agent, because the issue ordinarily is a question of fact [Universal Bank v. Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. (1997) 62 CA4th 1062, 1066, 73 CR2d 196]. As a factual question, the issue may augment the scope of discovery and help defeat a motion for summary judgment.

- As a practical matter, potential agency questions virtually always exist, because there usually is no way for the plaintiff to know the precise relationship among a number of potential defendants at the time the complaint is filed. Because it may not be possible to sort these issues out before discovery is conducted and the facts of the case become clearer, the standard practice is to include a boilerplate agency allegation in virtually every complaint. All of the standard complaints in this publication contain agency allegations designed to accommodate any possible set of relationships among the defendants that might ultimately be proved at trial. More detailed alternatives are illustrated in 20.19.

Liability of Principal for Acts of Agent--Agency Not Disputed, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.51 (Matthew Bender).

20.16 Agent Named As Defendant May Raise Agency Status As Defense.

An agent who is named as a defendant in a complaint can assert his or her agency status as a defense in the answer. To put forth a valid defense, the agent must establish the following [Yoakum v. Tarver (1967) 256 CA2d 202, 207, 64 CR 7; W. W. Leasing Unlimited v. Commercial Standard Title Ins. Co. (1983) 149 CA3d 792, 795, 197 CR 118]:

- That the agent disclosed the existence of the agency relationship and the identity of the principal to the plaintiff third party at the time of contracting; and
- That the agent acted within the scope of its authority, whether actual or ostensible.

Strategic Point--Defendant:

Because fact issues usually exist as to the existence of the agency and/or the scope of the agent's authority, and because indemnity claims and cross-claims often will exist among co-defendants, a defendant's agency claim usually is not a subject for summary resolution. Exceptions may occur, however, if (1) the agency relationship is established by statute; or (2) the defendant agent and the co-defendant principal stipulate to the existence of the agency relationship, and the plaintiff is unable to raise a genuine dispute about the matter. In these situations, summary judgment might be obtainable.

20.17 Principal May Enforce Contract Entered Into by Agent on Principal's Behalf.

Any agreement entered into by an agent who is acting within the scope of the agent's authority will be deemed to be an agreement of the principal [Lippert v. Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 382, 50 CR 478 ; Spahn v. Guild Indus. Corp. (1979) 94 CA3d 143, 156, 156 CR 375]. The principal has the right to enforce such an agreement and to receive all rights and benefits associated with it. Accordingly, if a third party enters into an agreement with the agent, the principal has the right to sue the third party with respect to any matters arising out of the agreement [American Builder's Assn. v. Au-Yang (1990) 226 CA3d 170, 176, 276 CR 262].

Since the principal's ability to enforce the contract is predicated on the existence of the agency relationship, the complaint should allege that the agent:

- Was the plaintiff's agent; and
- Was acting within the scope of the agent's authority in executing the contract.

IV. PROCEDURE FOR RAISING AGENCY ISSUES

2-20 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 20.18

20.18 Principal Named As Defendant May Raise Agent's Lack of Authority As Defense.

A defendant sued based on the acts of a purported agent may raise the lack of an agency relationship as a defense in the answer. In order for a principal to avoid liability for its agent's acts, the principal must be able to show one or more of the following set of facts:

- That the agent lacked both actual and ostensible authority to perform the act in dispute and, with regard to ostensible authority, that the plaintiff third party was not justified in relying on the agent's purported authority [Pagarigan v. Libby Care Ctr., Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 298, 301-302, 120 CR2d 892 ; Grasslands Water Ass'n, Inc. v. Lucky Leven Land & Cattle Co. (1952) 112 CA2d 776, 779-780, 247 P2d 380].
- That the agent was acting for the agent's own account rather than on the principal's behalf [CC § 2333; Bayuk v. Edson (1965) 236 CA2d 309, 319-320, 46 CR 49].
- That the principal is relieved from liability because the third party relied on the exclusive credit of the purported agent [CC § 2335; Rigney v. De La Salle Inst. (1935) 10 CA2d 492, 498-499, 52 P2d 579 ; Walton v. Davis (1913) 22 CA 456, 459-460, 134 P 795].

COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES

[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

[Amount Demanded

_____(Exceeds or Does Not Exceed) $10,000]

Plaintiff _____[name] alleges:

1. _____[state capacity and residence of plaintiff; see, e.g., 20.15, 20.13].

2. _____ [state capacity and residence of defendant; see, e.g., 20.15, 20.13].

3. _____ [include allegation of fictitious defendants; see, e.g., 20.13, 20.15].

[To allege that defendant was expressly authorized to act as co-defendant's agent:]

4. [Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that] [D]efendant _____ [first defendant's name] intentionally conferred on Defendant _____ [second defendant's name] the authority to act as the agent of _____ [first defendant] with respect to _____ [specify subject matter of authority, e.g., the employment of persons to manage Defendant _____'s business affairs], including the authority to execute contracts in furtherance of that purpose on Defendant _____'s behalf. [A true copy of the written agreement between (first defendant) _____ and (second defendant) _____ conferring this authority on Defendant (second defendant) _____ is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference]. Plaintiff is further informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that at all times and in all matters described in this complaint, Defendant _____ [second defendant's name] was acting as the agent of _____ [first defendant's name] and within the scope of the authority as such granted by _____ [first defendant's name].

[OR, to allege that agent had actual authority by virtue of principal's want of ordinary care:]

4. [Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that] [D]efendant _____ [first defendant's name] _____ [intentionally or by want of ordinary care] allowed Defendant _____ [second defendant's name] to believe that he/she had the authority to act as the agent of _____ [first defendant] with respect to _____ [specify subject matter of authority, e.g., the employment of persons to manage Defendant _____'s business affairs] at all times and in all matters described in this complaint, including the authority to execute contracts in furtherance of that purpose on Defendant _____'s behalf. The belief of _____ [second defendant] in his/her authority was based on the conduct of _____ [first defendant] in _____ [specify, e.g., previously accepting employment contracts executed by Defendant (second defendant) _____ without comment as to authority].

[OR, to allege that agent had ostensible authority by virtue of principal's conduct:]

4. Plaintiff was led to believe, by the acts of Defendant _____ [first defendant's name], that Defendant _____ [second defendant's name] had the authority to act as the duly authorized agent of Defendant _____ [first defendant] with respect to _____ [specify subject matter of authority, e.g., the employment of persons to manage Defendant _____].

_____ 's business affairs] at all times and in all matters described in this complaint, including the authority to execute contracts in furtherance of that purpose on Defendant _____ 's behalf. Plaintiff's belief was reasonable under the circumstances because _____ [specify principal's acts that induced plaintiff reasonably to believe that agent was acting under principal's authority, e.g., Defendant (first defendant) _____ had appointed (second defendant) _____ to the position of general manager and had previously accepted as binding contracts that were negotiated with Plaintiff by (second defendant) _____].

[OR, to include simple generic agency allegation]

4. [Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that] [D]efendant _____ [first defendant's name] was acting as the agent of Defendant _____ [second defendant's name] at all times and in all matters described in this complaint.

[CONTINUE]

5. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of the Defendants sued herein as Does 1 through _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these Defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this Complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that each of the fictitiously named Defendants are jointly and severally liable for the acts complained of herein. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that Defendants Does 1 through 50 are the agents, servants and/or employees of each and every other Defendant, and at all times herein mentioned were acting within the course or scope of their agency and employment, and the acts of each Defendant were ratified by the others.

6. On _____ [date], Defendant _____ [agent's name], acting as the agent of Defendant _____ [principal's name] as described above, entered into _____ [a written or an oral] contract with _____ [name of third party], by which _____ [specify relevant terms of contract].

7. _____ [Specify defendant's acts constituting breach of contract].

8. _____ [Specify plaintiff's damages or other injury incurred as a result of defendant's breach of contract].

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For compensatory damages in the sum of $ _____;

2. For interest on the sum of $ _____ from and after _____ [date];

[3. For reasonable attorney's fees _____ (of $ _____ or according to proof);]

4. For costs of suit; and
5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

3. _____ [include allegation of fictitious defendants; see, e.g., 20.13, 20.15].

4. On or about _____ [date], Defendant _____ [name of purported agent] entered into _____ [a written or an oral] contract with Plaintiff. In inducing Plaintiff to enter into that contract, Defendant _____ [repeatedly] represented to Plaintiff that Defendant was the authorized agent of _____ [name of purported principal] and that Defendant was acting in his/her capacity as an agent, and within the scope of his/her authority as an agent, and was entering into the contract on _____ [name of purported principal]'s behalf. Plaintiff had no knowledge of any limitation on Defendant's authority relied on these representations by Defendant in entering into the contract.

5. The terms of the above contract provided that _____ [specify relevant terms of contract].

6. _____ [if breach occurred, specify how contract was breached].

7. When Plaintiff attempted to enforce the above-described contract, Plaintiff discovered that Defendant _____ [was not in fact an agent of (name of purported principal) _____ and did not have any authority to act on (name of purported principal) _____'s behalf or exceeded Defendant's authority by entering into the contract with Defendant]. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that Defendant had no reasonable basis for believing that he/or she [was an agent of (name of purported principal) _____ or] had authority to enter into the contract with on behalf of _____ [name of purported principal].

8. [By assuming to act as agent for (name of purported principal) _____ and] [B]y _____ [expressly and/or impliedly] representing to Plaintiff that Defendant had the authority to enter into the above-described contract with Plaintiff on behalf of _____ [name of purported principal], without any reasonable basis for doing so, Defendant breached his/her warranty of authority and is liable for all damages incurred by Plaintiff as a result of that breach.

[Include if plaintiff had previously expended money in unsuccessful attempt to enforce contract or recover from purported principal]

9. Plaintiff has expended the sum of $ _____, including attorney's fees, in legal proceedings against _____ [name of purported principal] in an unsuccessful attempt to enforce the contract against _____ [name of purported principal] in the action entitled _____ [case name] Case No. _____, in the _____ Superior Court].

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.syn

§ 21.syn Synopsis to Chapter 21: Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

21.01 Scope.

21.02 Objective and Strategy.

21.03 CHECKLIST: Raising Contract Interpretation Issues in Litigation.

21.04 Procedural Context for Raising Interpretation Issue Depends on Circumstances.

21.04[1] Plaintiff Must Allege Meaning of Ambiguous Contract.

21.04[2] Defendant Must Raise Interpretation Issue in Manner Responsive to Plaintiff's Pleadings.

21.04[2][a] Defendant May Object to Complaint by Demurrer or Answer.

21.04[2][b] On Demurrer, Court Must Accept Plaintiff's Construction of Disputed Term.

21.04[2][c] Failure to Object to Complaint Generally Is Deemed Waiver.

21.04[2][d] Answer May Deny Complaint's Interpretation of Contract.

21.04[2][e] Affirmative Defense May Raise New Interpretation Issue.

21.04[2][f] Failure to Plead Affirmative Defenses Generally Waives Them.

21.04[2][g] Interpretation Issue May Be Resolved on Summary Judgment If Facts Are Undisputed.

21.04[2][h] Interpretation Dispute Based on Controverted Facts Presents Jury Question.

21.04[2][i] Interpretation Issue May Be Raised in Action for Declaratory Relief.

21.04[2][j] Failure to Object to Extrinsic Evidence Does Not Bar Challenge to Judgment.

21.04[2][k] Stranger to Contract May Invoke Parol Evidence Rule.

21.05 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Contract Interpretation Issue Is Question of Law or Fact.

21.06 Courts Disagree on Whether Integration Is Question of Law or Fact.

21.07 Existence or Nonexistence of Ambiguity Is Question of Law.

21.08 Meaning of Unambiguous Contract Is Question of Law.

21.09 If Facts Are Disputed, Meaning of Ambiguous Contract Is Question of Fact.

21.10 Conflicting Inferences From Undisputed Evidence Do Not Create Fact Question.

21.11 Erroneous Trial Court Interpretation Does Not Bind Appeals Court.

21.12 CHECKLIST: Applying Rules of Interpretation to Determine Meaning of Contract Term.

21.13 Options and Strategy.

21.14 Parties' Intention at Time of Contracting Governs Interpretation.

21.14[1] Court Looks for Objective Manifestations of Intent.

21.14[2] Court Interprets Disputed Terms As Promisor Supposed That Promisee Understood Them.

21.15 Court Construes Uncertain Term Against Party Causing Uncertainty.

21.16 Between Two Interpretations, Court Applies Interpretation in Favor of Natural Right.

21.17 Court Ascertains Parties' Intent From Writing Alone If Possible.

21.18 Statutory Rules Apply If Parties' Intent Is Doubtful.

21.19 Court Considers Contract As Whole.

21.19[1] Court Gives Effect to Every Provision If Possible.

21.19[2] Court Considers Related Writings Together.

21.20 Words Are Given Their Ordinary Meanings.

21.21 Court Applies Local Meanings Used in Place Where Contract Is Performed or Made.

21.22 Technical Words Are Interpreted As Understood by Specialists in Field.

21.23 Court May Look at Circumstances of Contract Formation.

21.24 Terms May Be Explained by Course of Dealing, Trade Usage, and Course of Performance.

21.24[1] Evidence of Trade Usage Is Admissible, Whether or Not Pleaded.

21.24[2] Usage or Custom May Be Used to Explain or to Imply Term.

21.24[3] Contract Terms Implied by Custom Are No Longer Implied When Custom Ceases.

21.24[4] Custom and Trade Usage Cannot Change Law.

21.24[5] Court May Look to Parties' Conduct Before Controversy Arose.

21.25 Contract Is Construed to Avoid Internal Conflict.

21.25[1] Consistent Provisions Are Given Effect.

21.25[2] Specific Provision Controls Over Inconsistent General Provision.

21.25[3] Words Are Given Same Meaning in Different Parts of Contract.

21.25[4] Handwritten Provisions Control Preprinted Terms.

21.26 General Words Following List Apply to That List Only.

21.27 Courts Favor Interpretation That Renders Contract Enforceable.

21.28 Bilateral Promises Are Construed As Mutually Dependent and Concurrent.

21.29 Contract Is Construed to Avoid Forfeiture.

21.30 Contract Is Construed to Be Performed Within Reasonable Time.

21.31 Same Interpretation Rules Apply to Government and Private Contracts.

21.32 CHECKLIST: Alleging and Proving Ambiguities in Contract.

21.33 Options and Strategy.

21.34 "Ambiguous" Means Reasonably Susceptible to Two Interpretations.

21.35 California Does Not Apply "Plain Meaning Rule" for Determining Ambiguity.

21.36 Extrinsic Evidence Must Be Provisionally Received.

21.37 If Contract Is Ambiguous, Court Interprets in Light of Evidence, Applying Canons of Construction.

21.38 CHECKLIST: Opposing Admission of Extrinsic Evidence.

21.39 CHECKLIST: Moving for Admission of Extrinsic Evidence.

21.40 Options and Strategy.

21.41 Parol Evidence Rule Bars Some Extrinsic Evidence Affecting Written Contracts.

21.42 Parol Evidence Rule Is Substantive Law, Not Evidentiary Rule.

21.43 Parol Evidence Rule Requires Analysis of Integration and Ambiguity.

21.44 If Writing Fully Integrates Parties' Agreement, Extrinsic Evidence May Not Be Admitted to Contradict, Explain, or Supplement It.

I. STRATEGY

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.01

21.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Objectives and strategy for raising contract interpretation issues in business litigation [see 21.02].
- Determining procedurally how to raise an interpretation issue [see 21.03, 21.04].
- Determining whether a contract interpretation issue is a question of law or fact [see 21.05 -21.11].
- Applying rules of interpretation to determine the meaning of a contract term [see 21.12 -21.31].
- Alleging and proving ambiguities in a contract [see 21.32 -21.37].
- Asserting or opposing the use of extrinsic evidence to interpret a contract [see 21.38 -21.58].
- Asserting or opposing construction of a contract term against the drafter [see 21.59 -21.66].
- Supplying missing terms or asserting implied terms [see 21.67 -21.79].

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract
I. STRATEGY

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.02

21.02 Objective and Strategy.

Contract interpretation issues arise in various ways. Typically, a defendant will raise the issue in response to a complaint alleging breach of contract. If a contract is ambiguous, the plaintiff must go beyond attaching a copy of the contract and incorporating it in the complaint; the plaintiff must specifically aver in the complaint the meaning the plaintiff ascribes to the ambiguous provisions [Evid Code § 500; see 21.04[1]]. For purposes of ruling on a demurrer, the court will accept the plaintiff's interpretation if it is not clearly erroneous [Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 17, 22 CR2d 229 ; see 21.04[2][b]]. The defendant may raise the interpretation issue in its answer by denying the complaint's allegations generally or specifically, or may assert it as part of an affirmative defense [CCP § 431.30(b)(1); see 21.04[2][d]]. When no extrinsic evidence is introduced or the competent evidence is not disputed, the court may interpret the contract as a matter of law on a motion for summary judgment [CCP § 437c; see 21.04[2][g], 21.08]. However, if extrinsic evidence of the contract's meaning is disputed, the interpretation question will be a question of fact, and summary judgment will not be available [Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 CA4th 1343, 1351 ; see 21.04[2][h], 21.09]. The interpretation of a contract also is a proper subject of declaratory relief.

In interpreting a contract, the court's goal is to ascertain the parties' original intentions at the time of contract formation, to the extent that they can be objectively determined [CC § 1636; see 21.14]. California law applies traditional rules of contract interpretation, considering the agreement together with the circumstances surrounding its execution [CCP § 1860; see 21.23]. The court seeks to dispel ambiguity or uncertainty in the terms by fair inference from the other terms of a written instrument. When two clauses conflict, the court seeks to reconcile the conflicting clauses so as to give effect to the whole of the instrument, if it can reach a reasonable interpretation consistent with the agreement's predominant purpose [CC §§ 1650, 1652, 1653; see 21.25]. When these rules do not resolve the question, the agreement may be construed against the party who caused the uncertainty, i.e., the drafter [CC § 1654; see 21.61].

With respect to written agreements, the parol evidence rule applies to bar use of extrinsic evidence to contradict the terms of a partially integrated agreement [CCP § 1856(a); see 21.45] or to contradict, add to, or modify the terms of a fully integrated agreement [CCP § 1856(b); see 21.44].

The state's courts have been accused of inconsistency in distinguishing between the use of extrinsic evidence to vary or add to an integrated agreement and its use to explain ambiguous terms. With respect to the latter, the California Supreme Court has largely abandoned the plain meaning rule, which asserts that if the language of an agreement appears on its face to be plain and unambiguous, the court must not look beyond the four corners of the writing to determine its meaning [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 37-40,

69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641 ; see 21.35]. Extrinsic evidence must be received at least provisionally to determine in the first instance whether an agreement is ambiguous [Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 CA4th 375, 386 ; see 21.36]. If the disputed language is reasonably susceptible to more than one interpretation, then extrinsic evidence is admissible to shed light on its meaning [see 21.37, 21.38 et seq.].

Strategic Point:

Because extrinsic evidence remains admissible for a wide variety of purposes regardless of whether or not an agreement is integrated [see 21.47 -21.55], counsel's decisions about how to frame the issues can be dispositive. Framing an issue not as one of adding an oral term to a written agreement but as merely using prior discussions to demonstrate and explain an extrinsic ambiguity can make the difference between getting key evidence admitted and having it excluded.

Judge's Perspective:

As the foregoing discussion illustrates, the issue of contract interpretation is raised immediately at the beginning of the litigation. Therefore, informal discovery and internal investigation of a lawyer's own client is at least as important as the formal discovery conducted of the other side. For example, a lawyer whose client alleges that a contract has only one meaning and is not ambiguous must determine quickly whether all of the material witnesses within the client's control have the same interpretation of the agreement. Similarly, the lawyer must develop a single, clear interpretation of the contract. Doing so will not only shape the lawyer's investigation and discovery efforts, but also will ensure that the lawyer takes consistent positions with the court throughout the litigation. Sometimes, failure of effort on the lawyer's part--or lack of complete disclosure on the client's part--will force the lawyer to modify or abandon a construction of the contract advanced early in the litigation. It can be difficult for the lawyer to regain his or her credibility once an opponent highlights these inconsistencies for the court.

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract
II. RAISING CONTRACT INTERPRETATION ISSUES IN LITIGATION

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.04

21.04 Procedural Context for Raising Interpretation Issue Depends on Circumstances.

21.04[1] Plaintiff Must Allege Meaning of Ambiguous Contract. The pleader has the burden of proof as to each fact the existence or nonexistence of which is essential to the claim for relief or defense asserted [Evid Code § 500].

If a written instrument is ambiguous, the pleader must allege the meaning he or she ascribes to it. If the contract is merely attached and incorporated and the complaint does not allege any special meaning, the court construes the language on its face. Failure to plead exactly what extrinsic evidence will be offered does not constitute a waiver [see Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 18, 22 CR2d 229].

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Interpretation--Disputed Term, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 314 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

21.04[2] Defendant Must Raise Interpretation Issue in Manner Responsive to Plaintiff's Pleadings.

21.04[2][a] Defendant May Object to Complaint by Demurrer or Answer. An interpretation issue may be raised in a demurrer or answer by an objection that the complaint or cross-complaint does not state facts sufficient to plead a cause of action or defense. In addition, the demurrer or answer may argue that [see CCP § 430.10(e), (g)]:

- The pleading is uncertain; or
- That it cannot be ascertained from the pleading whether the contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct.

21.04[2][b] On Demurrer, Court Must Accept Plaintiff's Construction of Disputed Term. For purposes of ruling on a demurrer, the court assumes the truth of the complaint's factual allegations. The demurrer tests the pleading alone, not the evidence to be offered to interpret the contract. Objections not appearing on the face of the pleading are raised by answer [Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 17, 22 CR2d 229].

If a complaint is based on a written contract that it sets out in full, a general demurrer admits not only the contents of the instrument but also any pleaded meaning to which the instrument is reasonably susceptible. While the plaintiff's interpretation ultimately may prove invalid, it is improper to resolve the issue solely on the pleading [Aragon-Haas v. Family Sec. Ins. Servs., Inc. (1991) 231 CA3d 232, 239, 282 CR 233 ; L.B. Research & Ed. Found. v. UCLA Found. (2005) 130 CA4th 171, 178-179].

Consider:

A court ruling on a demurrer cannot take judicial notice of the proper interpretation of a document submitted in support of the demurrer. Although the existence of a document may be judicially noticeable, the truth of statements contained in the document and its proper interpretation are not subject to judicial notice if those matters are reasonably disputable [Fremont Indemnity Co. v. Fremont General Corp. (2007) 148 CA4th 97, 114-115, 55 CR3d 621 (court erred in taking judicial notice of enforceability and proper interpretation of contract and deciding those questions in ruling on demurrer)].

Judge's Perspective:

The defendant should be careful to avoid saying more than necessary about its interpretation of the contract at the demurrer stage of the litigation. An interpretation that seems well-founded based on counsel's initial reading of the contract and early investigation may not seem as solid after further reading and formal discovery.

21.04[2][c] Failure to Object to Complaint Generally Is Deemed Waiver. A defendant's failure to object to the complaint, or a plaintiff's failure to object to a cross-complaint, by demurrer or answer generally is deemed to waive the objection. Exceptions include objections to subject matter jurisdiction and failure to state facts constituting a cause of action or defense [see CCP § 430.80(a)].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of burden of proof, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 551, Trial (Matthew Bender).

21.04[2][d] Answer May Deny Complaint's Interpretation of Contract. The defendant's answer can raise the issue of contract interpretation in either a general denial or specific denials of the material allegations of the complaint that plead the essential elements for creation of a contract [see CCP § 431.30(b)(1)].

In a breach of contract case, a general denial denies that there is a contract, that the plaintiff performed or had an excuse for nonperformance, that the defendant did not perform, or that the plaintiff was damaged. A general denial allows the denying party to present evidence to refute the complaint's allegations [Walsh v. West Valley Mission Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1998) 66 CA4th 1532, 1545, 78 CR2d 725].

► Cross References:

Discussion of denials in answers, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 14, Answers; or California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 26, Answers (Matthew Bender).

21.04[2][e] Affirmative Defense May Raise New Interpretation Issue. If the complaint does not put the contract interpretation dispute into issue, the issue may constitute "new matter" that the defendant must raise by pleading an affirmative defense [see CCP § 431.30(b)(2)]. "New matter" is something relied on by a defendant that is not put in issue by the complaint [Walsh v. West Valley Mission Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1998) 66 CA4th 1532, 1546, 78 CR2d 725].

Discussion of pleading affirmative defenses in an answer, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 14, Answers; or California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 26, Answers (Matthew Bender).

21.04[2][f] Failure to Plead Affirmative Defenses Generally Waives Them. A party who fails to plead affirmative defenses generally waives them [California Acad. of Scis. v. County of Fresno (1987) 192 CA3d 1436, 1442, 238 CR 154].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of failure to object to complaint, see 21.04[2][c].

21.04[2][g] Interpretation Issue May Be Resolved on Summary Judgment If Facts Are Undisputed. The defendant may be able to move for summary judgment (or summary adjudication of causes of action) if interpretation of the contract is a question of law [see CCP § 437c].

► Cross References:

Discussion of motions for summary judgment, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 38, Summary Judgment; or California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

21.04[2][h] Interpretation Dispute Based on Controverted Facts Presents Jury Question. When two interpretations of contract language are advanced, to which the language is reasonably susceptible, extrinsic evidence is admissible to aid in interpreting the agreement. If the extrinsic evidence is in dispute, the interpretation becomes a question of fact that precludes summary judgment [Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 CA4th 1343, 1351].

Examples:

- In a dispute between an employee and employer over unpaid wages, the parties submitted conflicting parol evidence as to the period of the employee's employment, thereby creating a question of fact precluding summary judgment [Leep v. American Ship Management (2005) 126 CA4th 1028, 1041].

- Because ascertaining the intent of the parties at the time the contract was executed depended on the credibility of extrinsic evidence, that credibility determination and the interpretation of the contract were questions of fact that were properly resolved by the jury [City of Hope National Medical Center v. Genentech, Inc. (2008) 43 C4th 375, 395, 75 CR3d 333, 181 P3d 142] .

■ In a dispute between a city and a contractor over interpretation of a public works contract, given the patent ambiguity of the contract provision at issue and the extrinsic evidence offered by the contractor, the contractor was entitled to have disputed issues of contract interpretation submitted to the jury [Dillingham-Ray Wilson v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 182 CA4th 1396, 1405, 106 CR3d 691] .

Jury Instructions:

Conflict in Evidence--Preliminary Instruction When Interpretation Is Jury Question, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3B, Instr. MB 300B.02 (Matthew Bender).

Warning--Remember to Ask for Special Verdict or Statement of Decision:

To preserve the jury's conclusions of fact on an ambiguity question, counsel should request a special verdict [see CCP § 624]. Similarly, in a bench trial, counsel should request a statement of decision addressing the issue [see CCP § 632].

Judge's Perspective:

The question for the court is whether the party offering the evidence is advancing an interpretation of the contract to which it is "reasonably susceptible." If so, the evidence must be admitted. If not, the evidence is extrinsic to the contract and must be excluded by the parol evidence rule. "While extrinsic evidence may be considered by a court as an aid in the interpretation of a written contract when it is relevant to prove a meaning to which the language of the instrument is reasonably susceptible, [if] the evidence offered would not persuade a reasonable man that the instrument meant anything other than the ordinary meaning of its words, it is useless" [Producers Dairy Delivery Co. v. Sentry Ins. Co. (1986) 41 C3d 903, 913, 226 CR 558, 718 P2d 920].

Cross References:

Discussion of motions for summary judgment, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 38, Summary Judgment; or California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

21.04[2][i] Interpretation Issue May Be Raised in Action for Declaratory Relief. Interpretation of a contract is a proper subject of declaratory relief [CCP § 1060; Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 CA4th 839, 846-847, 44 CR2d 227].

Even before any contract breach occurs, if an actual controversy exists relating to parties' legal rights and duties under a contract, a party may bring a declaratory relief action in superior court. This action may seek determination of any question of construction or validity of the contract. Such relief is in addition to any other available relief [see CCP § 1060].

Cross References:

Discussion of actions for declaratory relief, see Ch. 11, Seeking or Opposing Declaratory Relief in Contract Matters.

21.04[2][j] Failure to Object to Extrinsic Evidence Does Not Bar Challenge to Judgment. A party who has not objected to the introduction of extrinsic evidence cannot complain if the trier of fact considers that evidence. In determining whether substantial evidence supports a judgment, extrinsic evidence inconsistent with any plausible interpretation is irrelevant as a matter of substantive law [Tahoe Nat'l Bank v. Phillips (1971) 4 C3d 11, 23, 92 CR 704, 480 P2d 320].

A motion in limine should be made before or at trial to exclude irrelevant extrinsic evidence. A motion in limine is normally sufficient to preserve an issue for review, without a renewed objection when the evidence is offered, unless the evidence at trial differs substantially from that presented at the motion hearing or included in an offer of proof [Summers v. A. L. Gilbert Co. (1999) 69 CA4th 1155, 1184, 82 CR2d 162].

Cross References:

Discussion of motions in limine, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 373, Motions in Limine (Matthew Bender).

21.04[2][k] Stranger to Contract May Invoke Parol Evidence Rule. CCP § 1856 applies not only in actions between contract parties, but also in actions between a contract party and a stranger to the contract [Neverkovec v. Fredericks (1999) 74 CA4th 337, 350 n8].

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.05

21.05 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Contract Interpretation Issue Is Question of Law or Fact.

- ☐ Determine if written contract is integrated; that is, meant to be a complete, final, exclusive expression of parties' agreement.

Authority:

Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 13, 22 CR2d 229

Discussion:

See 21.06, 21.43 -21.46

- ☐ Determine if contract is ambiguous; that is, whether it is reasonably susceptible to two meanings.

Authority:

Oceanside 84, Ltd. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank (1997) 56 CA4th 1441, 1448, 66 CR2d 487

Discussion:

See 21.07, 21.34 -21.36

- ☐ Determine whether extrinsic evidence relevant to resolving ambiguity is in dispute.

Authority:

ASP Props. Group, L.P. v. Fard, Inc. (2005) 133 CA4th 1257, 1275

Discussion:

See 21.08, 21.09, 21.34 -21.37

- ☐ Determine if issue involves conflicting inferences drawn from undisputed evidence that are not enough to create question of fact.

Authority:

McCrary Constr. Co. v. Metal Deck Specialists, Inc. (2005) 133 CA4th 1528, 1536

Discussion:

See 21.10

☐ On appeal, determine whether extrinsic evidence used by trial court to reach erroneous interpretation was inadmissible.

Authority:

Tahoe Nat'l Bank v. Phillips (1971) 4 C3d 11, 23, 92 CR 704, 480 P2d 320

Discussion:

III. DETERMINING WHETHER CONTRACT INTERPRETATION ISSUE IS QUESTION OF LAW OR FACT

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.06

21.06 Courts Disagree on Whether Integration Is Question of Law or Fact.

For purposes of the parol evidence rule, the court must determine whether the parties intended the written agreement as a final, complete, and exclusive expression of their agreement [CCP § 1856(d)]. Courts have taken different positions on integration, variously holding that it is one of the following:

- A question of fact [see, e.g., Heller v. Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (1996) 50 CA4th 1367, 1382, 58 CR2d 336].
- A question of law [see, e.g., Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 14, 22 CR2d 229 ; cf. Founding Members of the Newport Beach Country Club v. Newport Beach Country Club, Inc. (2003) 109 CA4th 944, 954, 135 CR2d 505 (when evidence of integration is not in dispute)].
- A mixed question of law and fact [see, e.g., FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 391-392, 282 CR 508].

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.07

21.07 Existence or Nonexistence of Ambiguity Is Question of Law.

The trial court's ruling on the threshold determination of "ambiguity" (i.e., whether the proffered evidence is relevant to prove a meaning to which the language is reasonably susceptible) is a question of law [Winet v. Price (1992) 4 CA4th 1159, 1165, 6 CR2d 554].

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.13

21.13 Options and Strategy.

In all cases a party will of course strive to have the contract interpreted in its favor. When the party can reasonably argue that the contract language is clear and explicit [see CC §§ 1638, 1639] and in the party's favor, the party will want to have the contract interpreted as written without further analysis [see 21.17]. A party in this situation will want to oppose any suggestion that the contract is ambiguous, and that there is any need to interpret its terms further, look to the parties' original intent, or examine the parties prior conduct or the circumstances surrounding the transaction [see 21.19, 21.20].

Conversely, if a party stands to benefit by having the court interpret the meaning of the language of the contract and the original intention of the parties, that party will seek to establish that the contract language is ambiguous, thus requiring further analysis by the court of the parties' intentions, the language of the contract, and the surrounding circumstances [see 21.20 -21.31].

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.14

21.14 Parties' Intention at Time of Contracting Governs Interpretation.

21.14[1] Court Looks for Objective Manifestations of Intent. A contract must be interpreted to give effect to the parties' mutual intention as it existed at the time of contracting, as far as it is ascertainable and lawful [CC § 1636; TRB Investments, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2006) 40 C4th 19, 27, 50 CR3d 597, 145 P3d 472 ; see CCP § 1859]. This is to protect the objectively reasonable expectations of the promisee [Building Industry Assn. of Central California v. City of Patterson (2009) 171 CA4th 886, 896, 90 CR3d 63 (in development agreement between real estate developer and city, an objectively reasonable person would expect a "reasonably justified" increase in the affordable housing in-lieu fee to mean an increase that conformed to existing law)]. Cases decided or events occurring after the parties entered into the contract are irrelevant to the court's determination of the mutual intention of the parties at the time the contract was formed [London Market Insurers v. Superior Court (2007) 146 CA4th 648, 666, 53 CR3d 154] . It is the outward expression of the agreement, rather than a party's unexpressed intention, that a court will enforce [Reigelsperger v. Siller (2007) 40 C4th 574, 579-580, 53 CR3d 887, 150 P3d 764 ; Cedars-Sinai Med. Ctr. v. Shewry (2006) 137 CA4th 964, 982-983].

Distinguish:

Course of dealing, course of performance, and usage of trade may be used to explain or imply contract terms [see 21.24], as can the law and usage of the place where the contract was made [see 21.21].

However broad the terms of a contract may be, it extends only to those things concerning which it appears that the parties intended to contract [CC § 1648]. Particular clauses of a contract are subordinate to its general intent [CC § 1650].

Judge's Perspective:

The Civil Code and Code of Civil Procedure contain numerous maxims of contract interpretation that lawyers often overlook. Although some lawyers discount these rules as anachronistic, they remain a vital part of the canon of contract interpretation.

21.14[2] Court Interprets Disputed Terms As Promisor Supposed That Promisee Understood Them. If the terms of a promise are ambiguous or uncertain, the promise must be interpreted in the sense in which the promisor believed, at the time of making it, that the promisee understood it [CCP § 1864; see also CC § 1649; Safeco Ins. Co. v. Robert S. (2001) 26 C4th 758, 763, 110 CR2d 844, 28 P3d 889 ; Kashmiri v. Regents of University of California (2007) 156 CA4th 809, 842-843, 67 CR3d 635] .

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.15

21.15 Court Construes Uncertain Term Against Party Causing Uncertainty.

In cases of uncertainty not removed by other rules of contract construction, the language of a contract should be interpreted most strongly against the party who caused the uncertainty to exist [CC § 1654].

In most cases, this will result in construing the agreement against the drafting party [see, e.g., Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 15 CA4th 576, 596, 19 CR2d 295, disapproved on other grounds, Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 C4th 362, 376-377, 36 CR2d 581, 885 P2d 994 (agreement as to the distribution of proceeds from a trust, which was drafted by the plaintiff's attorney)]. However, the rule also applies to contracts that were the result of negotiations [City of Hope National Medical Center v. Genentech, Inc. (2008) 43 C4th 375, 397-398, 75 CR3d 333, 181 P3d 142] . "It may well be that in a particular situation the discussions and exchanges between the parties in the negotiation process may make it difficult or even impossible for the jury to determine which party caused a particular contractual ambiguity to exist, but this added complexity does not make the underlying rule irrelevant or inappropriate for a jury instruction" [City of Hope National Medical Center v. Genentech, Inc. (2008) 43 C4th 375, 398, 75 CR3d 333, 181 P3d 142] .

Distinguish:

CC § 1654 refers to uncertainty caused by the drafter of the agreement, not by a party's actions after execution of the contract [California National Bank v. Woodbridge Plaza LLC (2008) 164 CA4th 137, 145, 78 CR3d 561] .

21.16 Between Two Interpretations, Court Applies Interpretation in Favor of Natural Right.

When a statute or instrument is equally susceptible to two interpretations, one in favor of a natural right, and the other against a natural right, the interpretation favoring a natural right is to be adopted [CCP § 1866].

Example:

The right to inherit from a family member under the laws of intestate succession is an example of a "natural right" [Journeyman Butchers' Protective & Benevolent Assoc. v. Bristol (1911) 17 CA 576, 578-579, 120 P 787].

21.17 Court Ascertains Parties' Intent From Writing Alone If Possible.

When a contract is in writing, the parties' intention is to be ascertained from the writing alone if possible [Powerine Oil Co., Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 C4th 377, 396, 33 CR3d 562, 118 P3d 589]. This rule is subject to other provisions of Civil Code Title 3 on contract interpretation [CC § 1639; but see CCP § 1856; Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 226, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561 ; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 37-40, 69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641]. The language of a contract is to govern its interpretation if the language is clear and explicit and does not involve an absurdity [CC § 1638; see Falkowski v. Imation Corp. (2005) 132 CA4th 499, 513, 33 CR3d 724]. Whatever interpretation is adopted must be reasonable [CC § 3542].

Example:

A negotiated agreement between the Department of Industrial Relations and an employer about disputed reimbursement costs for uniforms, which did not fall neatly into statutory "wage" and "monetary benefit" categories, required application of contract interpretation rules [*Department of Indus. IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.19

21.19 Court Considers Contract As Whole.

21.19[1] Court Gives Effect to Every Provision If Possible. The whole of a contract is to be taken together, so as to give effect to every part, if reasonably practicable, each clause helping to interpret the other [CC § 1641; see Boghos v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2005) 36 C4th 495, 503 , 30 CR3d 787 , 115 P3d 68 ; London Market Insurers v. Superior Court (2007) 146 CA4th 648, 662, 53 CR3d 154 (contract must be construed in way that avoids rendering provision superfluous)].

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Interpretation--Construction of Contract as a Whole, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 317 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

21.19[2] Court Considers Related Writings Together. Several contracts relating to the same matters, between the same parties, and made as parts of substantially one transaction, are to be taken together [CC § 1642; see Reigelsperger v. Siller (2007) 40 C4th 574, 580, 53 CR3d 887, 150 P3d 764 (construing informed consent agreement and arbitration agreement signed by patient at same time); Peterson Dev. Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 CA3d 103, 284 CR 367 ("contract" can refer to any instrument)]. Whether the parties intended different documents to constitute a single contract is determined in the first instance by the contract language, but in this determination the court may also consider extrinsic evidence without violating the parol evidence rule [Versaci v. Superior Court (2005) 127 CA4th 805, 814-815, 26 CR3d 92].

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.20

21.20 Words Are Given Their Ordinary Meanings.

The words of a contract are to be understood in their ordinary and popular sense, rather than according to their strict legal meaning. This is true unless words are used by the parties in a technical sense, or unless a special meaning is given to them by usage [CC § 1644]. Evidence is admissible that terms of a writing have a local, technical, or otherwise peculiar signification, and were so used and understood [CCP § 1861]. To determine a word's common meaning, the court typically will look to a dictionary [People ex rel. Lockyer v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (2004) 116 CA4th 1253, 1263, 11 CR3d 317 ; see TRB Investments, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2006) 40 C4th 19, 28, 50 CR3d 597, 145 P3d 472 (interpreting property insurance policy's "under construction" clause of the vacancy exclusion, court consulted several dictionaries to determine meaning of "under construction")]. However, expert witnesses also may be used.

Examples:

- An indemnity contract required a subcontractor both to indemnify a contractor against certain claims, and "at [its] own expense to defend" the contractor against "any suit or action ... founded upon" those claims. Interpreting this language, the court concluded that the duty to defend arose as soon as a "suit or action" was brought against the contractor that was "founded upon" a covered claim, and was not dependent on whether the very litigation to be defended later established the subcontractor's obligation to pay indemnity [Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg., Inc. (2008) 44 C4th 541, 553, 79 CR3d 721, 187 P3d 424].

- In an insurance coverage dispute centered on an exclusion for damage caused by "[w]ater that backs up from a sewer or drain," the court concluded that the common sense interpretation of that language includes the sewage that inevitably accompanies the water in a sewer; thus the exclusion applied even though the insured's damage was caused by the pollutants contained in the water that backed up from the sewer, and not the water itself [Penn-America Ins. Co. v. Mike's Tailoring (2005) 125 CA4th 884, 889-891, 22 CR3d 918].

- In an insurance coverage dispute concerning a policy excluding coverage for vacant premises but specifying that buildings "under construction" are not considered vacant, the court concluded that the proper inquiry for determining whether a building falls within the "under construction" exception to the vacancy exclusion is whether the building project results in substantial continuing activities by persons associated with the project at the premises, rather than a test turning upon technical distinctions between "construction" on one hand and "renovation" or "remodeling" on the other [TRB Investments, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2006) 40 C4th 19, 30, 50 CR3d 597, 145 P3d 472] .

■ In a dispute over the interpretation of a real estate purchase agreement excluding from arbitration "actions for bodily injury," the court concluded that the parties would not reasonably expect that, as used in the agreement, "bodily injury" would include diabetes caused by emotional distress which, in turn, is caused by learning about termite damage [Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (2006) 143 CA4th 761, 782, 49 CR3d 531] .

■ Interpreting the scope of a release of claims based "in whole or in part upon any matters occurring at any time prior to the date of the release," the court concluded that the parties did not intend "matters" to be interpreted in the strictly legal sense of "actionable conduct," but rather in its broader, ordinary and popular sense. Thus, the plaintiff's copyright claims were barred by the release [Marder v. Lopez (9th Cir 2006) 450 F3d 445, 450-451] .

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.21

21.21 Court Applies Local Meanings Used in Place Where Contract Is Performed or Made.

A contract is to be interpreted according to the law and usage of the place where it is to be performed or, if not indicated, the place where it is made [CC § 1646].

Example:

In a case involving overtime pay for tugboat captains hired in California but working in Saudi Arabia, the court looked for evidence of overtime pay customs in Saudi Arabia in the absence of a specific provision in the contract providing for overtime pay [Sharpe v. Arabian Am. Oil Co. (1952) 111 CA2d 99, 104-105, 244 P2d 83].

Strategic Point:

The use of expert witnesses is appropriate to establish local meanings and technical meanings, as well as course of dealing, trade usage, and course of performance.

In certain transactions of $250,000 or more, including transaction subject to choice of law provisions under the UCC [see Com Code § 1301], the parties may elect to be governed by California law irrespective of any relationship between the transaction and the state [see CC § 1646.5].

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.22

21.22 Technical Words Are Interpreted As Understood by Specialists in Field.

Technical words are interpreted as usually understood by people in the profession or business to which the word relate, unless clearly used in a different sense [CC § 1645]. Technical meanings and special meanings from usage will be applied only if both contracting parties intended the same special or technical meaning; the key to interpretation is the mutual intention of the parties [Weil v. Federal Kemper Life Assurance Co. (1994) 7 C4th 125, 152, 27 CR2d 316, 866 P2d 774 ; see CC § 1638]. However, the circumstances surrounding and leading to the execution of a contract cannot be considered for the purpose of creating undertakings contrary to the specific terms of the writing [Kashmiri v. Regents of University of California (2007) 156 CA4th 809, 838, 67 CR3d 635] .

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.23

21.23 Court May Look at Circumstances of Contract Formation.

In interpreting a contract, a court will consider the circumstances under which it was made and the matter to which it relates [CCP § 1860]. The parties' intention is determined by objective manifestations, including the words used in the agreement and extrinsic evidence of such objective matters as the circumstances surrounding negotiation and execution of the contract; the object, nature, and subject matter of the contract; and the parties' subsequent conduct [CC § 1647; CCP § 1856(g); Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 CA4th 1343, 1356, 8 CR3d 649 ; see California National Bank v. Woodbridge Plaza LLC (2008) 164 CA4th 137, 144-145, 78 CR3d 561 (evidence of circumstances surrounding execution of lease indicated that the parties' intention was to tie bank tenant's rent to comparable rent for bank space)].

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.24

21.24 Terms May Be Explained by Course of Dealing, Trade Usage, and Course of Performance.

21.24[1] Evidence of Trade Usage Is Admissible, Whether or Not Pleaded. Evidence of usage of trade is admissible [see CCP § 1856(c)], whether or not pleaded, on the theory that it must be presumed that the parties, being specialists in the field, knew of the trade usage or custom [Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 16, 22 CR2d 229].

At least a preliminary consideration of parol evidence is necessary to avoid giving a meaning to a document not intended by the parties--irrespective of whether the contract is ambiguous to the court [Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 17, 22 CR2d 229].

Jury Instructions:

Interpretation of Words, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3B, Instr. MB 300B.05 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Form for allegation--custom and usage applicable to construction of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.111 (Matthew Bender).

Parol evidence rule, see 21.38 et seq.

21.24[2] Usage or Custom May Be Used to Explain or to Imply Term. Generally, usage of trade or custom can be invoked only to interpret, not to create contractual terms, but a reasonable usage may supply an omitted term or otherwise supplement an agreement when the evidence establishes that the parties did not discuss the disputed term [see Varni Bros. Corp. v. Wine World, Inc. (1995) 35 CA4th 880, 889, 41 CR2d 740].

When a written contract states a term clearly and unambiguously, usage or custom that would vary or contradict it is inadmissible. If the parties contradict each other on whether a certain term was part of a contract based on their pre-contract discussions, usage or custom is not admissible to prove either party's version [see Varni Bros. Corp. v. Wine World, Inc. (1995) 35 CA4th 880, 889-890, 41 CR2d 740].

Cross Reference:

Parol evidence rule, see 21.38 et seq.

21.24[3] Contract Terms Implied by Custom Are No Longer Implied When Custom Ceases. When a contract is formed by implication from trade usage and custom at the time of formation, the contract is deemed modified when that trade usage ceases [see Varni Bros. Corp. v. Wine World, Inc. (1995) 35 CA4th 880, 891, 41 CR2d 740].

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Interpretation--Construction by Conduct, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 318 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

21.24[4] Custom and Trade Usage Cannot Change Law. Custom and usage cannot overcome positive provisions of statutes [Van de Kamp v. Bank of Am. (1988) 204 CA3d 819, 835, 251 CR 530] .

Example:

The plaintiff's assertion that it was customary in the loan brokering business for limited partners to be liable for the partnership's obligation was in direct conflict with an express provision to the contrary in Corp Code § 15501, which was controlling [Hayward Tamkin & Co. v. Carpenteria Inv. Co. (1968) 265 CA2d 617, 624-625, 71 CR 462].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of when laws are implied into contract, see 21.76, 21.77.

21.24[5] Court May Look to Parties' Conduct Before Controversy Arose. In construction of the terms of a contract, the construction given it by the acts and conduct of the parties with knowledge of its terms, and before any controversy has arisen as to its meaning, is admissible on the issue of the parties' intent. This rule is not limited to the joint conduct of the parties in the course of performance of the contract [Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 CA4th 839, 851, 44 CR2d 227].

Examples:

- An arbitration provision in a collective bargaining agreement between a community college district and its faculty association was ambiguous as to whether the district could unilaterally decide that a faculty grievance should be resolved by a process other than arbitration. Relying on undisputed extrinsic evidence that prior to the grievances at issue, the district had never refused to arbitrate a faculty grievance on the ground that the grievance could be redressed by another process such as collective bargaining, the court concluded that the parties intended to provide for arbitration of grievances upon the request of the faculty member [Hartnell Community College Dist. v. Superior Court (2004) 124 CA4th 1443, 1449-1451, 22 CR3d 410].

- In a dispute over how a contractor was to be paid for change orders to a public works contract, the trial court should not have excluded some of the contractor's claims on the theory that the contractor could not document its actual costs as required by contract. Evidence offered by the contractor of the parties' course of dealings indicated that the city had not directed the contractor to keep track of the cost of the work as it was being performed [Dillingham-Ray Wilson v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 182 CA4th 1396, 1404-1405, 106 CR3d 691] .

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.25

21.25 Contract Is Construed to Avoid Internal Conflict.

21.25[1] Consistent Provisions Are Given Effect. Words wholly inconsistent with a contract's nature or the parties' main intention should be rejected [CC § 1653; see also CC § 1650].

Example:

In a case involving an accidental shooting, if the illegal act exclusion in a homeowner's insurance policy could not reasonably be given meaning under established rules of construction of a contract, it had to be rejected as invalid [Safeco Ins. Co. v. Robert S. (2001) 26 C4th 758, 765-766, 110 CR2d 844, 28 P3d 889].

21.25[2] Specific Provision Controls Over Inconsistent General Provision. When a general and particular provision are inconsistent, the more particular provision controls over the more general provision [CCP § 1859; see Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 CA4th 1225, 1235, 18 CR3d 178 (specific provision as to retention of employees for specified period in stock purchase agreement controlled over more general provision not making terminated employees third-party beneficiaries)].

Repugnancy in a contract must be reconciled, if possible, by such an interpretation as will give some effect to the repugnant clauses [CC § 1652].

Examples:

- Specific statements in university's catalogues and website that professional degree fee would not be raised for continuing students controlled over general statement that fees could change at any time [Kashmiri v. Regents of University of California (2007) 156 CA4th 809, 835, 67 CR3d 635] .

- In a dispute between a homeowner's association and an individual homeowner over who was responsible for maintenance of a portion of a drainage channel crossing the homeowner's lot, the association's covenants, conditions, and restrictions provided that the association was responsible for maintaining landscaping areas, while homeowners were responsible for maintaining drainage devices on their lots. The court held that the specific provision governing the owners' obligations to maintain drainage devices controlled over the association's more general duty to maintain landscaping areas. This conclusion was strengthened by undisputed evidence that for years the association had consistently assigned responsibility for maintenance of drainage ditches to individual property owners [Starlight Ridge South Homeowners Assn. v. Hunter-Bloor (2009) 177 CA4th 440, 452, 99 CR3d 20] .

Consider:

CC § 1650, which provides that particular clauses of a contract are subordinate to its general intent, appears to be in conflict with CCP § 1859 [but see United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1968) 263 CA2d 531, 69 CR 373] . The court in Haidinger-Hayes said that CC § 1650, the "main purpose" rule (as well as CC § 1653), must be read together with CC § 1641, which provides that the whole of a contract is to be taken together, so as to give effect to every part, if reasonably practicable, each clause helping to interpret the other [United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1968) 263 CA2d 531, 69 CR 373].

21.25[3] Words Are Given Same Meaning in Different Parts of Contract. The whole of a contract is to be taken together, so as to give effect to every part, if reasonably practicable, each clause helping to interpret other clauses [see Falkowski v. Imation Corp. (2005) 132 CA4th 499, 509, 33 CR3d 724] .

Example:

In insurance coverage dispute, because the word "person" as used elsewhere in the policy clearly meant a natural person, and not an organization, the court was required to give "person" the same meaning in the disputed clause of the policy [Mirpad v. California Ins. Guar. Ass'n (2005) 132 CA4th 1058, 1063, 34 CR3d 136] .

21.25[4] Handwritten Provisions Control Preprinted Terms. When a contract is partly written and partly printed, or partly specially drafted and partly composed of preprinted "boilerplate," the written parts control the printed parts, and the original parts control parts copied from a form [CC § 1651; CCP § 1862]. The term "written" includes typewritten text [Gutzi Assocs. v. Switzer (1989) 215 CA3d 1636, 1642-1643, 264 CR 538] .

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.26

21.26 General Words Following List Apply to That List Only.

The doctrine of ejusdem generis (also known as Lord Tenterden's rule) states that when general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of persons or things, the general words will be construed as applicable only to persons or things of the same general nature or class as those enumerated [Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 CA3d 1501, 1506, 256 CR 6] .

Examples:

- A plaintiff signed a retainer agreement with the defendant attorneys. The retainer agreement contained an arbitration clause that stated: "In the event of a dispute between us regarding fees, costs or any other aspect of our attorney-client relationship, the dispute shall be resolved by binding arbitration." When the plaintiff filed a malpractice claim against her attorneys, the attorneys invoked this arbitration claim. The court held that the rule of ejusdem generis precluded arbitration. Because the agreement specifically listed fees and costs in its arbitration clause, the court held that "any other aspect of our attorney-client relationship" applied only to financial matters similar to disputes regarding fees and costs, and not to the plaintiff's malpractice claim [Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 CA3d 1501, 1506, 256 CR 6] .

- Provision in former employee's employment agreement prohibiting from disclosing any of the company's information, knowledge, or data must be construed in light of the kinds of protected information enumerated in the sentence that followed, all of which were examples of proprietary information or trade secrets. Therefore, former employee did not breach employment agreement by disclosing information concerning his alleged working conditions and his employer's lifestyle and guests [Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2008) 159 CA4th 1027, 1046, 72 CR3d 210] .

However broad the terms of a contract are, they extend only to the things it appears that the parties intended to contract for [CC § 1648; see also Badie v. Bank of Am. (1998) 67 CA4th 779, 800, 79 CR2d 273] .

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.27

21.27 Courts Favor Interpretation That Renders Contract Enforceable.

A contract must receive an interpretation that will make it lawful, operative, definite, reasonable, and capable of being carried into effect, if this can be done without violating the intention of the parties [CC §§ 1643, 3541; see Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 C4th 937, 953-954, 81 CR3d 282, 189 P3d 285 (interpreting a contract provision releasing "any and all" claims not to encompass nonwaivable statutory protections, such as the employee indemnity protection of Lab Code § 2802); Julian v. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 C4th 747, 756-757, 27 CR3d 648, 110 P3d 903].

Example:

- Plaintiff employee argued that language in a mandatory employment arbitration agreement, stating that the parties intended "to avoid the inconvenience, cost, and risk that accompany formal administrative or judicial proceedings," unlawfully restricted an employee from seeking administrative remedies for violations of FEHA. The California Supreme Court rejected that argument, construing that language as stating an intention to lawfully preclude or restrict the parties to the arbitration agreement from submitting their claims for adjudication to an administrative entity such as the Labor Commissioner, at least to the extent permitted by law [Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 C4th 665, 682, 108 CR3d 171, 229 P3d 83] .

Jury Instructions:

Interpretation in Favor of Contract, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3B, Instr. MB 300B.07 (Matthew Bender).

Stipulations necessary to make a contract reasonable, or conformable to usage, are implied if the contract does not manifest any contrary intention [CC § 1655]. All things in law or usage that are considered incidental to a contract, or necessary to carry it into effect, are implied from the contract, unless some are expressly mentioned, in which case all other things of the same class are deemed to be excluded [CC § 1656].

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.28

21.28 Bilateral Promises Are Construed As Mutually Dependent and Concurrent.

Whenever possible, courts will construe promises in a bilateral contract as mutually dependent and concurrent. Conditions precedent generally are not favored in contract law [Frankel v. Board of Dental Exam'rs (1996) 46 CA4th 534, 550, 54 CR2d 128] , and provisions of a contract will not be construed as conditions precedent in the absence of language plainly requiring such a construction [Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Sizzler USA Real Property, Inc. (2008) 169 CA4th 415, 421, 86 CR3d 715] . The phrase "subject to" is generally construed to impose a condition precedent [Rubin v. Fuchs (1969) 1 C3d 50, 53-54, 81 CR 373, 459 P2d 925] .

A condition that a third party must take some action should be construed against the party relying on it. When possible, the condition should be construed as a promise, rather than a condition [Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 CA2d 488, 504, 8 CR 379] .

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.29

21.29 Contract Is Construed to Avoid Forfeiture.

A condition involving a forfeiture must be strictly interpreted against the party for whose benefit it is created [CC § 1442]. Forfeiture can never take place by implication, but must be effected by express, unambiguous language. Unless no other interpretation is reasonably possible, a contract should not be construed so as to effect or provide for forfeiture. The party claiming a forfeiture has the burden of showing that forfeiture was the unmistakable intention of the instrument [ABI, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1984) 153 CA3d 669, 681-682, 200 CR 563 ; Alpha Beta Food Mkts., Inc. v. Retail Clerks Union (1955) 45 C2d 764, 291 P2d 433] . When nonoccurrence of a condition precedent would work a forfeiture, the court has the power to equitably excuse the nonoccurrence [Root v. American Equity Specialty Ins. Co. (2005) 130 CA4th 926, 939, 30 CR3d 631].

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.30

21.30 Contract Is Construed to Be Performed Within Reasonable Time.

If a contract does not state a specific time for performance, a reasonable time is allowed. If an act by its nature can be done instantly, such as the payment of money, it must be done immediately [CC § 1657; see Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 C4th 344, 351, 86 CR3d 366, 197 P3d 177 (court implied reasonable time for length of escrow)]. This rule applies when the contract is silent as to the time for performance. The reasonableness of time for performance is a question of fact that depends of the circumstances of the case, which include the situation of the parties, the nature of the transaction, and the specific facts of the case [Sawday v. Vista Irrigation Dist. (1966) 64 C2d 833, 836, 52 CR 1, 415 P2d 816] .

IV. APPLYING RULES OF INTERPRETATION TO DETERMINE MEANING OF CONTRACT TERM

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.31

21.31 Same Interpretation Rules Apply to Government and Private Contracts.

All contracts, whether public or private, are to be interpreted by the same rules, except as otherwise provided [CC § 1635; Hawley v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1963) 211 CA2d 708, 713, 27 CR 478] .

Exception:

In tax sale contracts, the state and county governments are not subject to contractual liability; purchasers in these cases are limited to statutory remedies [Craland, Inc. v. State of Cal. (1989) 214 CA3d 1400, 1405, 1407-1408, 263 CR 255] .

21.33 Options and Strategy.

A party seeking to show ambiguities in contract language must show that the language itself is reasonably susceptible to more than one interpretation [see 21.34]. This requires the party to produce all credible evidence bearing on the disputed language, in an attempt to demonstrate the original intention of the parties, not properly expressed in the written contract [see 21.36].

Strategic Point:

This approach has its drawbacks, because language susceptible to more than one meaning may be interpreted in a way the party does not expect. Further, to suggest language is ambiguous can "open the floodgates" to all kinds of unexpected evidence and interpretation of the contract language. Accordingly, a party should carefully consider its options and strategy, and what evidence the opposing party might introduce, before urging that contract language is ambiguous.

The party opposing the contention that the contract is ambiguous will want to show that the contract as drafted is clear, explicit, and complete, and thus not subject to the introduction of evidence of the meaning of the contract and the circumstances surrounding its making.

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.34

21.34 "Ambiguous" Means Reasonably Susceptible to Two Interpretations.

When the parties dispute the meaning of a contract term, the trial court's first step is to determine whether the term is ambiguous. A contract that is "ambiguous" is reasonably susceptible to either of the meanings urged by the parties [Curry v. Moody (1995) 40 CA4th 1547, 1552, 48 CR2d 627].

V. ALLEGING AND PROVING AMBIGUITIES IN CONTRACT

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.35

21.35 California Does Not Apply "Plain Meaning Rule" for Determining Ambiguity.

The California Supreme Court rejected the traditional "plain meaning" rule, which required a judge to find that contract terms were ambiguous on their face before admitting extrinsic evidence to explain them [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 37-40, 69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641]. The applicable test is not facial ambiguity, but rather whether the offered evidence is relevant to prove a meaning to which the language of the instrument is reasonably susceptible [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 37-40, 69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641 ; Wagner v. Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc. (2007) 146 CA4th 586, 589-590, 52 CR3d 898 ; CCP § 1856(c), (g); see also CCP § 1859; CC § 1636].

Example:

A license agreement required the licensee to build its product according to specifications that the licensor would later provide. Extrinsic evidence showed that the parties intended that the licensee would receive technical specifications applicable to its device but would not be given specifications that would allow it to build another type of device. The license agreement was not reasonably susceptible to the licensee's interpretation that general specifications applicable to all devices were excluded [DVD Copy Control Assn., Inc. v. Kaleidescape, Inc. (2009) 176 CA4th 697, 714, 97 CR3d 856] .

Warning:

Despite the California Supreme Court's holding in Pacific Gas & Electric Co. [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 37-40, 69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641], trial courts sometimes still apply the traditional plain meaning rule when interpreting contract terms [see, e.g., Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 C4th 459, 468, 11 CR2d 330, 834 P2d 1148].

Consider:

In a concurring opinion, California Supreme Court Justice Baxter suggested that the court should reexamine the holding of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and clarify the parol evidence rule in California [see Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 C4th 384, 395-396, 46 CR3d 668, 139 P3d 56 (Baxter, J., concurring)].

Judge's Perspective:

As the text makes clear, different courts have applied Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and its progeny differently. Some courts will not accept extrinsic evidence, even provisionally, if the contract is not "reasonably susceptible" to the proffered interpretation. Unless the court has already ruled that it will provisionally admit such evidence, a party seeking to exclude it should move to exclude it in limine.

If the contract language is not reasonably susceptible to the interpretation urged by party propounding the evidence, that party cannot prevail in the case. If the court decides the language is reasonably susceptible to the interpretation urged, the next query is what the parties intended the language to mean [Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 CA4th 839, 847-848, 44 CR2d 227 ; see 21.37].

21.36 Extrinsic Evidence Must Be Provisionally Received.

To determine ambiguity, the court provisionally receives (without actually admitting) all credible evidence concerning the parties' intentions [Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 CA4th 375, 386]. The court performs a limited weighing of the evidence to keep evidence that is not credible from the jury [FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 391, 282 CR 508] .

Jury Instructions:

Conflict in Evidence--Preliminary Instruction When Interpretation Is Jury Question, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3B, Instr. MB 300B.02 (Matthew Bender).

Rational interpretation requires at least a preliminary consideration of all credible evidence offered to prove the intention of the parties [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 39-40, 69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641] . Even if a contract appears unambiguous on its face, a latent ambiguity may be exposed by extrinsic evidence that reveals more than one possible meaning to which the language of the contract is reasonably susceptible [Circle Star Center Associates, L.P. v. Liberate Technologies (2007) 147 CA4th 1203, 1211, 55 CR3d 232] . Contract language must be construed in context and cannot be found to be ambiguous in the abstract [La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1994) 9 C4th 27, 37, 36 CR2d 100, 884 P2d 1048] .

Example:

An employment contract stating that the employment was "at will" and terminable "at any time" unambiguously created an at-will employment relationship, despite its failure to state that termination could be without cause. Extrinsic evidence that the employee was told his role would be critical, that the employer wanted the employee to build a relationship with an important new client, and that the company had a family atmosphere did not render the employment contract ambiguous concerning whether the employee could be terminated only for cause [Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 C4th 384, 392-393, 46 CR3d 668, 139 P3d 56] .

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.37

21.37 If Contract Is Ambiguous, Court Interprets in Light of Evidence, Applying Canons of Construction.

If the evidence is relevant to prove a meaning to which the contract language is reasonably susceptible, the court moves to the second question: what the parties intended the language to mean [Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 CA4th 839, 848, 44 CR2d 227] . The court must ascertain and give effect to the parties' intention by determining what they meant by the words they used [CC § 1636; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 37-40, 69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641 ; see CCP § 1856(c)].

The evidence is admitted to aid in the second step of interpreting the contract: what the parties meant by the language [Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 CA4th 375, 386 ; see also CCP §§ 1856(g), 1859].

The generally accepted canons of construction in CC §§ 1635-1654 guide the court in interpreting the contract [Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 CA4th 839, 852, 44 CR2d 227].

Example:

Because both parties' proposed interpretations of language in a company's stock option plans were facially reasonable, the plans were ambiguous. Relying on canons of construction, the court concluded that the defendants' interpretation embodied the intention of the parties because it was in better accord with the language of the option plans and was more consistent with the articulated purposes of those plans [Falkowski v. Imation Corp. (2005) 132 CA4th 499, 508-510].

21.40 Options and Strategy.

A party who wishes to have the contract enforced other than as indicated by its written language must seek to have parol evidence relating to the contract admitted. The parol evidence rule prohibits the introduction of evidence to vary, alter, or modify the terms of a fully integrated written agreement [see CC § 1625; CCP § 1856]. Accordingly, the party seeking to introduce parol evidence must show that the contract is not fully integrated, or that if it is fully integrated, it needs to be further explained or supplemented [see 21.43, 21.44]. The issue of integration is normally the first one tackled by the court.

The court will look beyond the four corners of the writing, and consider evidence on these points [see 21.43, 21.46]:

- Whether the written agreement appear to state a complete agreement.
- Whether an alleged oral agreement directly contradicts the writing.
- Whether a collateral agreement is one that might naturally have been made as a separate agreement.
- Whether the jury would be misled by the introduction of the parol testimony.

The party seeking to introduce parol evidence has a variety of bases on which to bring in the evidence, including [see 21.47 -21.56]:

- To rebut implied terms;
- To prove consistent oral terms;
- To prove custom or trade usage, course of dealing, and course of performance;
- To prove the circumstances of the contract's formation;
- To prove fraud, duress, illegality, accident, or mistake;

- To prove imperfection of a writing;
- To prove lack of consideration.

Evidence of contemporaneous written agreements and subsequent changes to a written agreement can also be admitted [see 21.57, 21.58].

Strategic Point:

A party has a better chance of getting parol evidence admitted by framing the relevant issue as one of interpretation, fraud, or unmet oral precondition, if possible, rather than as a straightforward contract claim involving an additional term [see CCP § 1856].

The party opposing the admission of extrinsic evidence will need to show that the contract, any other writings, and any related oral agreements all create a completely integrated whole that is not subject to further interpretation. This can best be done by showing that all of these agreements relate to, and fully cover, the topics involved in the litigation. Because the court normally will consider the issue of integration first, if the party opposing the admission of extrinsic evidence can prevail on this point, further proceedings will not be required, and the contract will be interpreted as written [see Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 228, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] .

21.41 Parol Evidence Rule Bars Some Extrinsic Evidence Affecting Written Contracts.

The parol evidence rule is codified in CC § 1625 and CCP § 1856. The rule generally prohibits the introduction of any extrinsic evidence, oral or written, to vary, alter, or add to the terms of an integrated written instrument [CC § 1625; CCP § 1856; Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 343, 83 P3d 497 ; see Com Code § 2202 (UCC version of parol evidence rule, applicable to contracts for sales of goods)].

Distinguish--Statute of Frauds:

The statute of frauds and the parol evidence rule have similar evidentiary consequences, but the parol evidence rule is substantive, whereas the statute of frauds is merely evidentiary. The statute of frauds prevents a contract from being unenforceable, but it does not necessarily establish the terms of the contract. The parol evidence rule determines the enforceable and incontrovertible terms of an integrated written agreement. Unlike the statute of frauds, the parol evidence rule cannot consistently be subjugated to the principles of objection and waiver in the Evidence Code or the doctrine of estoppel [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 345-346, 83 P3d 497 ; see CC § 1624 (statute of frauds)].

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.42

21.42 Parol Evidence Rule Is Substantive Law, Not Evidentiary Rule.

The parol evidence rule is not merely a rule of evidence excluding pre-contractual discussions due to lack of credibility or reliability [Banco do Brasil, S.A., v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 973, 1000, 285 CR 870] . Under the parol evidence rule, as a matter of law, when parties embody the complete terms of their agreement in a writing (making the writing "integrated") [see 21.43 -21.46], the writing becomes the agreement. Extrinsic evidence then is inadmissible to prove the terms of the agreement, because the evidence is legally irrelevant [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 344, 83 P3d 497].

21.43 Parol Evidence Rule Requires Analysis of Integration and Ambiguity.

When parol evidence is offered to explain a written agreement, a court must answer two questions:

- Whether the writing was intended to be an integration [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 225-226, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] ; and
- Whether the agreement is reasonably susceptible to the meaning contended for by the party offering the evidence [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 37, 69 CR 561, 442 P2d 641 ; Wang v. Massey Chevrolet (2002) 97 CA4th 856, 873, 118 CR2d 770] .

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.44

21.44 If Writing Fully Integrates Parties' Agreement, Extrinsic Evidence May Not Be Admitted to Contradict, Explain, or Supplement It.

When parties to a written contract intend the writing to be the final and complete expression of their understanding, it is deemed "integrated" and may not be contradicted by evidence of any prior agreement or of a contemporaneous oral agreement [see CCP § 1856(b); Banco do Brasil, S.A. v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 973, 1000, 285 CR 870] .

Execution of a written contract supersedes all negotiations or stipulations concerning its matter [CC § 1625]. If a written contract is integrated, the presumption that it supersedes prior or contemporaneous oral agreements cannot be overcome [Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Med. Ctr. (1989) 216 CA3d 1379, 1385, 265 CR 412] .

21.45 If Written Agreement Is Partially Integrated, Extrinsic Evidence May Be Admitted to Explain or Supplement but Not to Contradict It.

Parties may intend a writing to finally and completely express only certain terms of their agreement, resulting in partial integration. When only part of the agreement is integrated, the parol evidence rule applies to that part. Extrinsic evidence may be used to prove elements of the agreement not reduced to writing [see CCP § 1856(a); Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 14, 22 CR2d 229].

Chapter 21 Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract

VI. ASSERTING OR OPPOSING USE OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO ESTABLISH TERMS OF OR TO INTERPRET CONTRACT

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.46

21.46 Court Looks Beyond Four Corners of Document to Ascertain Integration.

21.46[1] Court Examines Writing and Extrinsic Evidence. In addition to the writing itself, the court must consider the proffered collateral agreement. The circumstances surrounding contract formation may also help in determining the parties' intent. Evidence of oral collateral agreements should be excluded only when the fact finder is likely to be misled [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 225-227, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] .

Cross References:

Provisional receipt of extrinsic evidence, see 21.36.

Judicial inconsistency on whether integration is question of law or of fact, see 21.06.

21.46[2] California Does Not Employ Facial Completeness Test of Integration. The California Supreme Court has rejected the facial completeness test for determining whether a writing is an integrated agreement. Instead, the Court adopted a standard based on whether the parties intended their writing to serve as the exclusive embodiment of their agreement [see Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] . This standard is codified in CCP § 1856 [see 21.45].

The writing need not appear incomplete on its face. Parol evidence may be admitted to prove a separate oral agreement as to any matter on which the document is silent and which is not inconsistent with its terms [see Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 225-226, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] .

Cross Reference:

Rejection of plain meaning rule, see 21.35.

21.46[3] Court Applies Four-Factor Test in Deciding Whether Extrinsic Evidence Should Go to Jury. In deciding whether extrinsic evidence should go to the jury, trial courts should ask questions such as the following [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 349, 83 P3d 497 ; Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 228-229, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] :

- Does the written agreement appear to state a complete agreement?
- Does the alleged oral agreement directly contradict the writing?
- Is the collateral agreement one that might naturally have been made as a separate agreement? Is it one that the parties would certainly have included in the writing?
- Would the jury be misled by the introduction of the parol testimony?

Courts disagree on whether a conflict between the oral and written agreements is a factor tending to show that the written agreement is not integrated [compare Esbensen v. Userware Int'l, Inc. (1992) 11 CA4th 631, 637 n3, 14 CR2d 93, with Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care, Inc. (1995) 39 CA4th 508, 518, 46 CR2d 16].

21.46[4] Contradictory Evidence Is Evidence That Cannot Be Reconciled Semantically With Language of Writing. A contradiction is a juxtaposition of two statements that cannot be reconciled as a semantically permissible use of language; for example, a proffered oral agreement that does not satisfactorily account for the language used in the writing. The question of semantic conflict merges subtly with the question of credibility [FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 395, 282 CR 508].

Example:

Plaintiffs attempting to prove that television series contract entitled them to share in the net profits from all sources (including subsequent motion pictures) introduced extrinsic evidence regarding a previous agreement between the parties. The Court of Appeal concluded that plaintiffs' extrinsic evidence did not explain the contract language, but rather contradicted it. The contract at issue did not say that plaintiffs would share in the net profits "from all sources," as did the previous contract; instead, it said that plaintiffs would share in profits of movie rights only if those rights were exploited by the producer as ancillary or subsidiary rights of its primary "right to exhibit photoplays of the series"; but not if those rights were acquired by the producer independently from its right to exhibit photoplays [Wagner v. Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc. (2007) 146 CA4th 586, 592-593, 52 CR3d 898].

Strategic Point--Determining Scope of Written Agreement and Its Integration Clause:

Whether extrinsic evidence is deemed to supplement terms of a written agreement or explain an ambiguity depends on how a court defines the scope of the written agreement and its terms. The word "term," as used in CCP § 1856(a), (b), is borrowed in effect from Com Code § 1201(40) and means a portion of an agreement that relates to a particular matter [FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 387 n6, 282 CR 508 (interpreting former Com Code § 1201(42))].

Cross Reference:

U. L. Rev. 1, 36-42 (1995) (criticizing logical inconsistencies of California's parol evidence rule with respect to identifying terms of agreement).

21.46[5] Parties' Legal Sophistication and Use of Lawyers May Suggest Integrative Intent. Courts have considered the parties' legal sophistication and whether they had the advice of counsel as indications of the likelihood that they intended a writing to be integrated [see, e.g., Esbensen v. Userware Int'l, Inc. (1992) 11 CA4th 631, 637-638, 14 CR2d 93].

Example:

In a wrongful discharge case involving an employee under a series of one-year employment contracts, the small business entrepreneur defendant and computer programmer plaintiff were both relatively unsophisticated in legal matters, and both unadvised by lawyers, leading to the conclusion that it was proper to admit parol evidence [Esbensen v. Userware Int'l, Inc. (1992) 11 CA4th 631, 638, 14 CR2d 93] .

21.46[6] Signatures on Writing May Suggest Integrative Intent. Courts have noted the fact that a party signed the writing as evidence of integrative intent [see, e.g., Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care, Inc. (1995) 39 CA4th 508, 518-519, 46 CR2d 16] .

21.46[7] To Determine Integration, Court Must Interpret Writing. To ascertain whether a proposed additional term is consistent with a written agreement, the court must interpret the writing. The interpretation must be made in the light of all the circumstances, including evidence of the additional term. For this purpose, the meaning of the writing includes not only the terms explicitly stated, but also the terms fairly implied as part of the parties' bargain in fact [FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 396, 282 CR 508] .

Cross Reference:

Judicial inconsistency on whether integration is question of law or of fact, see 21.06.

21.46[8] Noncontractual and Incomplete Writings Are Not Integrations. Neither a noncontractual writing, such as a receipt or a mere memorandum, nor an incomplete writing, is an integration [Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Med. Ctr. (1989) 216 CA3d 1379, 1385, 265 CR 412 ; but see Slivinsky v. Watkins-Johnson Co. (1990) 221 CA3d 799, 805, 270 CR 585 (quoting Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 209, and stating that no particular form is required for an integrated agreement)]. California courts have sometimes disagreed, however, on what constitutes a contractual writing [compare McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1989) 208 CA3d 1476, 1485, 256 CR 863 (employment application was agreement, but not integrated agreement), with Harden v. Maybelline Sales Corp. (1991) 230 CA3d 1550, 1555, 282 CR 96 (employment application was not agreement, but rather mere solicitation of offer)].

21.46[9] Inclusion or Exclusion of Merger Clause Is Significant but Not Conclusive. Inclusion of an express integration, or merger, clause is very persuasive evidence of integration [Banco do Brasil, S.A., v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 973, 1001-1003, 285 CR 870] , but not conclusive as to whether the parties intended a writing to integrate their entire agreement. Integration may be partial as well as complete [Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 CA4th 625, 638 n10, 68 CR2d 167] .

In addition, the exclusion of a merger clause is not conclusive. The parties' integrative intent may be manifested without an explicit statement to that effect [Heller v. Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (1996) 50 CA4th 1367, 1382, 58 CR2d 336] .

The specific wording of an integration clause can be key to a court's analysis.

Example:

An integration clause stating that an employment agreement "contains the entire understanding of the parties hereto with respect to the subject matter contained herein" did not preclude evidence of a previously signed arbitration agreement, when the employment agreement did not address dispute resolution [see Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 CA4th 625, 637-639, 68 CR2d 167] .

21.46[10] Negotiations Suggest Integration; Preprinted Forms Do Not. The use of a preprinted (standard) form agreement often suggests that the written contract did not integrate all of the parties' agreement [see, e.g., McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1989) 208 CA3d 1476, 1485, 256 CR 863] .

When parties execute a written agreement after a series of negotiations, the agreement is at least "partially" integrated, as to the matters covered in the negotiations [Esbensen v. Userware Int'l, Inc. (1992) 11 CA4th 631, 637, 14 CR2d 93 ; see also Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 CA3d 263, 272, 235 CR 279 (noting that plaintiff had helped draft the written agreement, evidence of integration)].

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Oral or Written Contract Terms, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 304 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Discussion of incomplete writings, see 21.46[8].

21.46[11] Language Regarding Subsequent Modification May Bear on Integration Question. Although the parol evidence rule does not limit subsequent modification of a written agreement, the language of an agreement's modification clause may help determine whether the agreement was intended as a complete, exclusive, and final expression of the parties' agreement [compare McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1989) 208 CA3d 1476, 1485, 256 CR 863 (holding that language providing for subsequent changes suggested lack of integration), with Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care, Inc. (1995) 39 CA4th 508, 520-521, 46 CR2d 16 (finding integration despite language providing for subsequent changes, when clause prohibited oral modification), and Anderson v. Savin Corp. (1988) 206 CA3d 356, 363, 254 CR 627 (provision that agreement could not be modified without higher approval supported finding of integration)].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of contract modifications, see 21.58.

21.46[12] If Extrinsic Evidence Is Not in Conflict, Court Interprets Contract. When no extrinsic evidence has been presented, or when the extrinsic evidence is presented but uncontroverted (if there is no opposing or conflicting extrinsic evidence), interpretations of the fully integrated contract are questions of law for the court [Parsons v. Bristol Dev. Co. (1965) 62 C2d 861, 865-866 &n2, 44 CR 767, 402 P2d 839 ; Wolf v. Walt Disney Pictures & Television (2008) 162 CA4th 1107, 1127-1128, 76 CR3d 585] .

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.48

21.48 Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Prove Consistent Oral Condition.

The parol evidence rule does not bar evidence of a condition precedent to a written contract unless the writing contains inconsistent express provisions [Banco do Brasil, S.A., v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 973, 1003 n43, 285 CR 870] .

An oral agreement establishing an unmet condition to a party's performance under a written agreement does not inherently contradict the written agreement that is silent about any conditions. A court must look at the writing, including its implied terms, and the alleged oral agreement and evaluate the credibility, or plausibility, that the condition was part of the parties' arrangement. If the oral agreement leaves the written obligation some area of potential applicability, there is no necessary contradiction [see FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 396, 282 CR 508] .

Exception:

The court in Banco do Brasil, S.A., v. Latian, Inc., held that when a written agreement contains an express term in which the parties asserting the oral condition acknowledge that their obligations were unconditional, the alleged oral term cannot be reconciled with the written agreement [Banco do Brasil, S.A., v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 973, 1003-1005, 285 CR 870] .

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.49

21.49 Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Prove Custom or Trade Usage, Course of Dealing, or Course of Performance.

21.49[1] Course of Prior Dealings and Trade Usage Become Part of Contract. "Usage of trade" is a uniform practice or course of conduct followed in certain lines of business or professions, or in some procedure or phase of a business or profession. When an established usage of trade is known to the parties to a transaction, it becomes a rule of law the courts will recognize in determining the rights of parties whose relations come within the usage, absent a controlling statute [Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 CA4th 1, 15-16, 21, 22 CR2d 229 ; see Com Code § 1303 ("course of performance," "course of dealing," and "usage of trade" defined)]. Even an integrated writing may be explained or supplemented by extrinsic evidence of course of dealing, trade usage, or by course of performance [see CCP § 1856(c)].

21.49[2] Parties' Performance of Their Contract Reflects Their Understanding of Terms. A court seeks to give effect to the parties' mutual intention as objectively manifest in the words in the agreement, as well as in extrinsic evidence of [Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 CA4th 1343, 1356, 3 CR3d 649]:

- The circumstances under which the parties negotiated or entered into the contract;
- The object, nature and subject matter of the contract; and
- The subsequent conduct of the parties.

Consistent prior interpretation of a contract can reflect the intent of the contracting parties, and therefore govern the meaning to be attributed to the contract [Turlock Irrigation Dist. v. Zanker (2006) 140 CA4th 1047, 1056, 45 CR 3d 167 ; see also Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 318 (Lexis Nexis Matthew Bender) ("[i]n deciding what the words in a contract meant to the parties, you may consider how the parties acted after the contract was created but before any disagreement between the parties arose").

21.50 Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Prove Circumstances of Formation.

A court may consider parol evidence of the circumstances of the making of an agreement, including the object, nature, and subject matter of the writing so the court can place itself, for evaluation purposes, in the same situation in which the parties found themselves at the time of contracting [Winet v. Price (1992) 4 CA4th 1159, 1168, 6 CR2d 554].

VI. ASSERTING OR OPPOSING USE OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO ESTABLISH TERMS OF OR TO INTERPRET CONTRACT

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.51

21.51 Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Prove Fraud, Duress, Illegality, Undue Influence, and Other Invalidating Causes.

Even when a writing is integrated, parol evidence is admissible to prove that the instrument is void or voidable for mistake, fraud, duress, undue influence, illegality, alteration, lack of consideration, or other invalidating causes, such as that the writing is a forgery, joke, or sham. Most of these types of problems typically do not appear on the face of the writing, and so parol evidence is needed to evaluate them [see CCP § 1856(e)-(g); Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 CA4th 375, 387 ; see also CC § 1640].

Judge's Perspective:

It is important to remember that the rules allowing extrinsic evidence to show false promise, fraud, mistake, or illegality are unqualified [see CCP § 1856]. Unlike the admission of extrinsic evidence to show a varying interpretation of the contract, which requires the court first to determine that the contract is "reasonably susceptible" of that interpretation, extrinsic evidence is always admissible to show these infirmities.

VI. ASSERTING OR OPPOSING USE OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO ESTABLISH TERMS OF OR TO INTERPRET CONTRACT

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.52

21.52 Fraud Exception to Parol Evidence Rule Does Not Apply to False Promises That Contradict Contract Itself.

The fraud exception to the parol evidence rule [see CCP § 1856(g)] allows extrinsic evidence to establish the invalidity of a written agreement by an independent fact or representation, fraud in the procurement of the instrument, or a breach of confidence concerning its use. However, the fraud exception does not allow evidence of promissory fraud involving a promise directly at variance with the promise of the writing [see Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. Pendergrass (1935) 4 C2d 258, 263, 48 P2d 659]. "Promissory fraud" is a false promise made without any intention of performing it [Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 CA4th 375, 390].

The "Pendergrass exception" to the fraud exception [see above] effectively provides absolute protection from liability for prior or contemporaneous statements at variance with the terms of a written integrated agreement [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 343, 83 P3d 497].

Examples:

- In a suit by an employee against his employer for misrepresentation and fraudulent inducement of contract, the court held that the parol evidence rule did not bar the plaintiff's tort claims based on the employer's alleged false promises concerning compensation. The employer allegedly made promises about both the length of employment and compensation, which induced the employee to leave a high-paying job to work for the employer. The employer had the plaintiff sign an at-will employment agreement on starting, then reneged on the pay plan and fired the plaintiff after he complained about it. The court held that the written at-will agreement precluded parol evidence of an implied contract allowing termination only for cause. However, the court allowed evidence that the employer had never intended to honor the promises he made about compensation. The plaintiff was entitled to recover for the loss of security and income from his previous job, which was unrelated to his discharge [Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 CA4th 596, 605-607].
- The Pendergrass exception does not apply to misrepresentations of fact over the content of an agreement at the time of execution. Such evidence may be admitted under CCP § 1856(f), (g) to invalidate an agreement [Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 CA4th 375, 392].

21.54 Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Prove Accident or Mistake.

When, through mistake, a writing does not express the parties' intention and therefore does not contain their real contract, extrinsic evidence is necessary for the court to determine the parties' true intentions, and to determine whether the written agreement accurately represents those intentions [*Hess v. 21.55 Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible to Prove Imperfection or Invalidity of Writing.

When the validity of a written agreement is the fact in dispute, the parol evidence rule does not exclude introduction of evidence relevant to that issue [CCP § 1856(e), (f)]. Even when a writing is integrated, parol evidence is admissible to prove that the instrument is void or voidable for alteration or forgery [Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 CA4th 375, 387 ; see CC § 1640].

Judge's Perspective:

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.58

21.58 Parol Evidence Rule Does Not Bar Evidence of Subsequent Changes to Written Agreement.

21.58[1] Evidence May Show Modification by Executed Oral Agreement. The parol evidence rule restricts evidence of prior and contemporaneous agreements only [see CCP § 1856]. Parties to a written agreement may modify the agreement by an executed oral agreement [see CC § 1698(b); see also Com Code § 2209 (applicable to contracts for sale of goods)]. The written contract remains in effect to the extent that it has not been modified [Conley v. Matthes (1997) 56 CA4th 1453, 1465, 66 CR2d 518]. An oral agreement that is not fully performed is unexecuted and therefore cannot modify a written contract under CC § 1698(b) [Fanucchi & Limi Farms v. United Agri Prods. (9th Cir 2005) 414 F3d 1075, 1080-1081].

If there is sufficient consideration for an oral modification agreement, full performance by the promisee suffices to render the agreement executed and therefore enforceable under CC § 1698 [Raedeke v. Gibraltar Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1974) 10 C3d 665, 673, 111 CR 693, 517 P2d 1157].

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Modification, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 313 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

21.58[2] Evidence May Show Modification by Oral Agreement Supported by New Consideration. A written contract may be modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration, unless the contract provides otherwise [CC § 1698(c); see Com Code § 2209 (applicable to contracts for sale of goods)]. The parol evidence rule restricts evidence of prior and contemporaneous agreements only [see CCP § 1856].

Example:

A written loan agreement providing that it "may not be contradicted by evidence of any prior, contemporaneous, or subsequent oral agreements or understandings of the parties" could not be modified by an oral agreement [Fanucchi & Limi Farms v. United Agri Prods. (9th Cir 2005) 414 F3d 1075, 1081].

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Modification, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 313

(LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

21.58[3] Evidence May Show Novation. The parol evidence rule does not invalidate a new oral agreement (a novation) made after a written contract has been orally abrogated [Santa Clara Sand & Gravel Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1964) 225 CA2d 676, 680, 37 CR 506].

Although there is language in the cases stating that a novation must be proved by clear and convincing evidence [see, e.g., Fanucchi & Limi Farms v. United Agri Prods. (9th Cir 2005) 414 F3d 1075, 1081-1082 ; Alexander v. Angel (1951) 37 C 856, 860-861,,], the California Judicial Council Commentary to CACI No. 337 takes the position that the original use of the term "clear and convincing" simply meant that a "novation must clearly be shown and may not be presumed" [Directions for Use, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 337 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender); see Columbia Casualty Co. v. Lewis (1936) 14 C2d 64, 72,,]. "Thus, a party alleging novation must prove that the facts supporting the novation are more likely to be true than not true" [Directions for Use, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 337 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender)].

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Affirmative Defense--Novation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 337 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

21.58[4] Evidence May Show Discharge or Release. Parol evidence is admissible in determining the intention of the parties in giving and accepting a discharge or release [Jack v. Wood (1968) 258 CA2d 639, 648, 65 CR 856 ; cf. CC § 1541 (general release does not extend to claims creditor does not know of or suspect at time of executing release)]. The parol evidence rule does not preclude future negotiations; any contract, however made or evidenced, can be discharged or modified by subsequent agreement of the parties [Chohon v. Kersey Kinsey Co. (1959) 173 CA2d 548, 552, 343 P2d 614] .

VII. ASSERTING OR OPPOSING CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT TERM AGAINST DRAFTER

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.60

21.60 Options and Strategy.

When other contract interpretations do not fully remove uncertainty regarding a contract's terms, CC § 1654 provides that a contract is to be construed against the drafting party [see 21.61]. This is especially true if the contract was drafted by a lawyer [see 21.62]. In these cases, the party who did not draft the contract has the most leverage. Typically this will be a consumer or other private person, asserting this rule against a business or lawyer.

If applicable, a private party will want to urge that the contract was a contract of adhesion (that is, not subject to negotiation on any point), and that further it was both procedurally and substantively unconscionable, resulting in the contract's nonenforcement [see 21.64, 21.65]. Special rules apply to insurance contracts [see 21.66].

The party alleged to have drafted the contract, and against whom it would otherwise be construed, will want to argue that the parties were on equal footing (such as two businesses of equal bargaining power), and the contract was freely negotiated and jointly drafted, this rule of interpretation is inapplicable [see 21.63].

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.61

21.61 Agreement Is Construed Against Drafter When Other Canons Fail.

In cases of uncertainty not removed by the other interpretation rules, the language of a contract should be interpreted most strongly against the party who caused the uncertainty to exist [CC § 1654; see also Sweat v. Big Time Auto Racing, Inc. (2004) 117 CA4th 1301, 1306 ; Oceanside 84, Ltd. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank (1997) 56 CA4th 1441, 1448]. This rule applies only when there is no extrinsic evidence available to aid in the interpretation of the contract, or when the uncertainty cannot be remedied by other rules of interpretation [Rainier Credit Co. v. Western Alliance Corp. (1985) 171 CA3d 255, 264, 217 CR 291] .

21.62 Principle Applies With Greater Force When Drafter Is Lawyer.

The doctrine of construing ambiguous agreements against the drafter applies with even greater force when the person who prepared the writing is a lawyer, especially if the contract is between the lawyer and the client [Mayhew v. Benninghoff (1997) 53 CA4th 1365, 1370, 62 CR2d 27] . In Mayhew v. Benninghoff, which involved the fiduciary duty of a lawyer in a side business transaction with a client, the court stated that "[a]ttorneys wear different hats when they perform legal services on behalf of their clients and when they conduct business with them. As to the latter, the law presumes the hat they wear is a black one" [Mayhew v. Benninghoff (1997) 53 CA4th 1365, 1369, 62 CR2d 27] .

21.64 Adhesion Contract Outside Weaker Party's Reasonable Expectations Will Not Be Enforced.

Contracts of adhesion generally are enforceable according to their terms, but a provision in such a contract cannot be enforced if it does not fall within the reasonable expectations of the weaker or "adhering" party [Fischer v. First Int'l Bank (2003) 109 CA4th 1433, 1446].

The term "contract of adhesion" refers to a standardized contract prepared entirely by one party for acceptance by the other party. Because of a great disparity in bargaining power between the parties, a contract of adhesion embodies an offer the second party must accept or reject on a "take it or leave it" basis without an opportunity to bargain and under such conditions that the party accepting (or adhering to) the offer cannot obtain the product or service except by acquiescing to the form agreement [Steven v. Fidelity & Cas. Co. (1962) 58 C2d 862, 882, 27 CR 172, 377 P2d 284] .

Distinguish:

Adhesion contracts are usually procedurally unconscionable, but are not necessarily substantively unconscionable [Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst Inc. (2001) 93 CA4th 846, 852-853, 113 CR2d 376 ; see 21.65 (analysis of unconscionable contracts)].

21.65 Unconscionable Contract Will Not Be Enforced.

A contract or provision, including an adhesion contract, even if consistent with the parties' reasonable expectations, will not be enforced if, considered in its context, it is unduly oppressive or unconscionable [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 83, 113, 99 CR2d 745, 6 P3d 669].

Determining whether a particular contractual provision is unconscionable has both a procedural and a substantive element. The procedural element focuses on oppression or surprise. "Oppression" arises from an inequality of bargaining power that results in no real negotiation and an absence of meaningful choice. "Surprise" involves the extent to which the supposedly agreed-on terms are hidden in a prolix printed form drafted by the party seeking to enforce them. The substantive element has to do with the effects of the contractual terms and whether they are overly harsh or one-sided [Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst Inc. (2001) 93 CA4th 846, 852-853, 113 CR2d 376 ; see A & M Produce Co. v. FMC Corp. (1982) 135 CA3d 473, 486-491, 186 CR 114] .

Analysis of unconscionability begins with an inquiry into whether the contract was a contract of adhesion--a standardized contract, imposed on the subscribing party without an opportunity to negotiate the terms. A finding of a contract of adhesion is essentially a finding of procedural unconscionability. However, this does not mean that an adhesion contracts will necessarily involve substantive unconscionability, which depends on the terms of the particular contract [Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst Inc. (2001) 93 CA4th 846, 853, 113 CR2d 376 ; see 21.64 (adhesion contracts)].

VIII. SUPPLYING MISSING TERMS OR ASSERTING IMPLIED TERMS

21.68 Options and Strategy.

To avoid asking the court explicitly to fill a gap in a contract, a concerned party should consider whether to propound a broad reading of the contract's express terms [see 21.69]. If this method is not successful, then, although implied covenants are disfavored, contract terms may be implied by statutes of public policy, and accordingly may be asserted [see 21.70, 21.71]. The general rule provides that existing laws (as of the time of formation) are implied in a contract, not laws later enacted [see 21.72, 21.73]. Note that implied terms cannot alter express terms [see 21.78]. A party wishing to clarify or expand the terms in the contract can assert any of these matters to complete the coverage of the contract.

Strategic Point:

A party challenging any such clarification or expansion will want to assert, as in other cases, that the contract is clear, complete, and fully integrated and not subject to further interpretation. Such a party may argue that there are no missing terms, and no terms need to be implied to complete the contract. Further, such a party can challenge that any provision of implied or missing terms amounts to an improper judicial rewriting of the contract, altering the express terms of the contract [see 21.78].

Both parties are subject to a duty of good faith and fair dealing, and a party that has discretion to fill in contract terms must do so in good faith. Either party may readily assert that the other party has not met the standard of good faith and fair dealing [see 21.75, 21.79].

VIII. SUPPLYING MISSING TERMS OR ASSERTING IMPLIED TERMS

2-21 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 21.70

21.70 Implied Covenants Are Disfavored.

Before a court will imply a covenant in an agreement, all of the following conditions must exist [Third Story Music, Inc. v. Waits (1995) 41 CA4th 798, 804, 48 CR2d 747 ; CC §§ 1655, 1656]:

- The implication must arise from the language used or it must be indispensable to effectuate the intention of the parties;
- It must appear from the language used that it was so clearly within the contemplation of the parties that they deemed it unnecessary to express it;
- Inclusion of the covenants is justified only on the grounds of legal necessity; and
- It can be rightfully assumed that the covenant would have been made if attention had been called to it.

A court will not imply a covenant simply because the proposed implied provision is necessary to make the contract fair or that without such covenant, the contract will operate unjustly [In re Marriage of Corona (2009) 172 CA4th 1205, 1223, 92 CR3d 17 (rejecting husband's claim that marital settlement agreement requiring the husband to pay half of the wife's income tax obligation should be interpreted to include an implied requirement that the wife select a tax filing status that minimized her tax liability)].

There can be no implied covenant when the subject is completely covered by the contract [Third Story Music, Inc. v. Waits (1995) 41 CA4th 798, 804, 48 CR2d 747] .

21.71 Term May Be Implied by Statute or Policy.

When a contract is governed by a statutory scheme, specific contract terms may be required by statute [see CC §§ 1655, 1656].

Example:

Contracts for the sale of goods are governed by an extensive body of law in Division 2 of the Uniform Commercial Code [see, e.g., Com Code § 2101 et seq.].

21.72 Court May Choose Among Conflicting Meanings and Fill Gaps in Contract.

In an effort to supply a deficiency in an agreement, the following may be used as a source of missing terms if they do not alter or vary the terms of the agreement [see Binder v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. (1999) 75 CA4th 832, 852, 89 CR2d 540 ; see also Okun v. Morton (1988) 203 CA3d 805, 817, 250 CR 220]:

- The usual and reasonable terms found in similar contracts.
- Unexpressed provisions may be inferred from the writing.
- Relevant external facts.
- Custom and usage of trade.

Stipulations necessary to make a contract reasonable or conformable to usage are implied if the contract manifests no contrary intention [CC § 1655]. All things that in law or usage are considered incidental to a contract or necessary to carry it into effect are implied from the contract unless some are expressly mentioned, in which case all other things of the same class are deemed to be excluded [CC § 1656].

21.73 Contract Interpretation Rules May Resolve Uncertainty.

The rules of interpretation of written contracts [see CC §§ 1635-1663; CCP §§ 1856-1866] are for the purpose of ascertaining the meaning of the words used in the contracts. Evidence cannot be admitted to show any intention independent of the contract instrument [Department of Indus. Relations v. UI Video Stores, Inc. (1997) 55 CA4th 1084, 1094, 64 CR2d 457].

21.75 Party With Discretion to Fill in Terms Must Do So in Good Faith.

If an agreement permits one party to unilaterally determine a term of the contract, that party must exercise its discretion in good faith in an objectively reasonable way [Perdue v. Crocker Nat'l Bank (1985) 38 C3d 913, 923-924, 216 CR 345, 702 P2d 503 ; cf. *Third Story Music, Inc. v. 21.76 Laws in Existence at Execution Are Implied Into Contract.

Ordinarily, all applicable laws in existence when an agreement is made enter into the contract and form a part of it, without any stipulation to that effect [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 C4th 937, 954, 81 CR3d 282, 189 P3d 285 (interpreting a contract provision releasing "any and all" claims not to encompass nonwaivable statutory protections, such as the employee indemnity protection of Lab Code § 2802)]. [EITHER, if alleging affirmative defense that contract is too ambiguous to be enforced]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Ambiguity of Contract)

2. The [alleged] contract referenced in Plaintiff's complaint is so ambiguous as to be unenforceable in whole or in part [in that (specify nature of ambiguity) _____].

[OR, if asserting particular construction of contract and asking court to act pursuant to its terms]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Plaintiff Not Entitled to Recovery Under Terms of Contract [or specify another, more specific description of defense])

2. Paragraph [or Section] _____ [number] of the [alleged] _____ contract referenced in Plaintiff's complaint provides that _____ [state what contract provides, e.g., that all disputes arising out of Plaintiff's employment are subject to mandatory arbitration in accordance with the Commercial Arbitration Rules of the American Arbitration Association as modified by the employment agreement]. _____ [State defendant's interpretation of contract term in light of the relevant facts, and specify how that interpretation negates plaintiff's right to recover; e.g., Plaintiff's claim is one "arising out of" Plaintiff's employment, and this court therefore lacks jurisdiction over Plaintiff's claim].

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

21.83 Memorandum--Contract Is Ambiguous.

Memorandum--Contract Is Ambiguous.

[Include following, if appropriate under circumstances of case, in memorandum by party proffering extrinsic evidence.]

WHEN A CONTRACT IS AMBIGUOUS OR UNCERTAIN, THE PARTIES MUST HAVE A FULL OPPORTUNITY TO PRODUCE EVIDENCE OF THE FACTS, CIRCUMSTANCES, AND CONDITIONS SURROUNDING ITS EXECUTION AND THE PARTIES' CONDUCT.

A. Contract Is Ambiguous When Susceptible to Two Different Meanings. When parties dispute the meaning of a contract term, the trial court's first step is to determine whether the term is ambiguous; that is, whether it is "reasonably susceptible" to either of the meanings urged by the parties [Curry v. Moody (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1552, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627].

B. Right to Introduce Evidence Concerning Ambiguous Contract. If the language of a contract is reasonably susceptible to more than one interpretation, parol evidence is admissible to aid in interpreting the agreement, thereby presenting a question of fact that precludes summary judgment if the evidence is contradictory [Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1343, 1351, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 649].

Memorandum--Contract Is Not Ambiguous.

[Include following, if appropriate under circumstances of case, in memorandum in support of summary judgment.]

_____. SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR
THE [PLAINTIFF or _____ DEFENDANT] IS PROPER WHEN THERE IS NO CONFLICT AS TO THE TERMS OF THE CONTRACT AND ITS PROVISIONS ARE NOT UNCERTAIN OR AMBIGUOUS, THERE IS OTHERWISE NO TRIABLE ISSUE OF FACT AS TO WHETHER THE DEFENDANT BREACHED THE CONTRACT, AND AS A MATTER OF LAW, JUDGMENT SHOULD BE RENDERED IN FAVOR OF THE [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT].

A. Meaning of Unambiguous Contract Is Question of Law. The resolution of an ambiguity is a question of law if no parol evidence is admitted or if the parol evidence is not in conflict [Beard v. Goodrich (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1037, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 160] .

B. Interpretation Issue May be Resolved on Summary Judgment if Facts Are Undisputed. The defendant may move for summary judgment provided that the evidence is undisputed and interpretation of the contract is a question of law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

Plaintiff Must Allege Meaning of Ambiguous Contract in Complaint. The pleader has the burden of proof as to each fact the existence or nonexistence of which is essential to the claim for relief or defense asserted [Evid Code § 500]. If a written instrument is ambiguous, the pleader must allege the meaning he or she ascribes to it [*see Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1, 18, 22 Cal. Memorandum--On Demurrer, Plaintiff's Interpretation of Ambiguous Terms Must Be Accepted.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party proffering extrinsic evidence.]

IF AN INSTRUMENT PLEADED IN A COMPLAINT IS AMBIGUOUS, THE CONSTRUCTION, IF REASONABLE, THAT IS ADOPTED IN THE COMPLAINT MUST BE ACCEPTED BY THE COURT IN RULING ON A GENERAL DEMURRER.

A. Demurrer Tests Pleading, Not Evidence. When a complaint is based on a written contract that it sets out in full, a general demurrer admits not only the contents of the instrument but also any pleaded meaning to which the instrument is reasonably susceptible. While the plaintiff's interpretation ultimately may prove invalid, it is improper to resolve the issue solely on the pleading [Aragon-Haas v. Family Sec. Ins. Servs., Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233].

B. On Demurrer, Court Assumes Truth of Factual Allegations in the Complaint. A demurrer tests the pleading alone, not the evidence that will be offered to interpret the contract. Objections not appearing on the face of the pleading are raised by answer [Hayter Trucking, Inc. v. Shell W. E&P, Inc. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1, 17, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229].

Memorandum--Contract Stipulations Generally Are Interpreted As Covenants, Not Conditions.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum.]

STIPULATIONS IN A CONTRACT ARE TO BE CONSTRUED AS COVENANTS, NOT AS CONDITIONS PRECEDENT; AND PERFORMANCE, OR AN EXCUSE FOR NONPERFORMANCE, MUST BE ALLEGED, UNLESS A CONSTRUCTION AS CONDITIONS PRECEDENT IS REQUIRED BY CLEAR, UNAMBIGUOUS LANGUAGE.

A. Stipulations Must Be Construed As Covenants When Possible. Conditions precedent are not favored in the law, and courts may not construe a contract term so as to establish a condition precedent absent plain and unambiguous contract language to that effect [Frankel v. Board of Dental Exams (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 534, 550, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128] Instead, whenever possible the courts will construe promises in a bilateral contract as mutually dependent and concurrent [Rubin v. Fuchs (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 50, 53, 81 Cal. Rptr. 373, 459 P.2d 925] .

[Optional] B. Condition That Third Party Must Take Action Is Construed As Covenant. A condition that a third party must take some action should be construed against the party relying upon it. When possible, it should be construed as a covenant, rather than a condition [Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 488, 504, 8 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

[Optional] C. Stipulations Are Covenants When Forfeiture or Inequitable Consequences Are Involved. A condition involving a forfeiture must be strictly interpreted against the party for whose benefit it is created [Civ. Code § 1442]. A forfeiture can never take place by implication, but must be effected by express, unambiguous language [ABI, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 669, 681-682, 200 Cal. Rptr. 563] .

Memorandum--Evidence Is Barred by Parol Evidence Rule.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum opposing admission of extrinsic evidence.]

THE PAROL EVIDENCE RULE PROHIBITS INTRODUCTION OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO VARY, ALTER OR ADD TO THE TERMS OF AN INTEGRATED WRITTEN INSTRUMENT.

A. The Extrinsic Evidence Is Irrelevant and Incompetent. As a matter of law, when parties embody the complete terms of their agreement in a writing (the "integration"), the writing becomes the agreement [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 C4th 336, 344, 9 CR3d 97, 83 P3d 497] .

B. Written Contract Supersedes Prior and Contemporaneous Agreements. The execution of a contract in writing, whether the law requires it to be written or not, supersedes all the negotiations or stipulations concerning its matter which preceded or accompanied the execution of the instrument [Civ. Code § 1625]. If a written contract is integrated, the presumption that it supersedes prior or contemporaneous oral agreements cannot be overcome [Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Med. Ctr. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1379, 1385, 265 Cal. Rptr. 412].

Memorandum--Evidence Is Not Barred by Parol Evidence Rule.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum supporting admission of extrinsic evidence.]

THE PAROL EVIDENCE RULE DOES NOT PROHIBIT INTRODUCTION OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO EXPLAIN THE MEANING OF A WRITTEN CONTRACT IF THE MEANING URGED IS ONE TO WHICH THE WRITTEN CONTRACT TERMS ARE REASONABLY SUSCEPTIBLE.

A. Extrinsic Evidence Is Admissible To Interpret Agreement. The parol evidence rule does not exclude evidence to explain an extrinsic ambiguity or otherwise interpret the terms of an agreement. [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856(g)]. Rational interpretation requires at least a preliminary consideration of all credible evidence offered to prove the intention of the parties [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 39-40, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641] .

B. Several Exceptions to Rule Allow Admission of Extrinsic Evidence. Even if a written agreement is fully integrated, extrinsic evidence is admissible of the parties' course of dealing or course of performance, trade usage, the parties' mistake, an imperfection of the writing, the validity or invalidity of the agreement, the circumstances of its formation, illegality, or fraud. [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856(g)].

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum.]

THE WRITTEN CONTRACT WAS MODIFIED BY AN EXECUTED ORAL AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES, AND THE DEFENDANT HAS FULFILLED HIS/HER OBLIGATIONS UNDER THE CONTRACT AS MODIFIED.

A. Modification Defined. A modification of a contract is a change in one or more respects that introduces new elements into the details of the contract, or cancels some of them but leaves the general purpose and effect of the contract undisturbed [Grant v. The Aerodraulics Co. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 68, 74, 204 P.2d 683] .

[AND/OR]

B. Modification of Written Contract by Executed Oral Agreement. A contract in writing may be modified by an oral agreement to the extent that the oral agreement is executed by the parties [Civ. Code § 1698(b)].

C. Executed Oral Agreement Is Sufficient to Modify Written Contract Without Consideration. The parties to a written agreement may modify it by an executed oral agreement. The written contract remains in effect to the extent it has not been modified [Civ. Code § 1698(b); Conley v. Matthes (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1453, 1465, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518] .

[Optional] D. Performance by Promisee Alone Is Sufficient When Oral Modification Is Supported by Consideration. If there exists sufficient consideration for an oral modification agreement, then full performance by the promisee alone suffices to render the agreement executed and therefore enforceable under Civ. Code § 1698 [Raedeke v. Gibraltar Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 665, 111 Cal. Rptr. 693].

[Optional] E. Effect of Contract Provision Requiring Written Modification. An executed oral agreement may alter a written contract, even though the original contract provides that all changes must be in writing Miller v. Brown (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 763, 775, 289 P.2d 572 ; but see Civ. Code § 1698(c); Marani v. Jackson (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 695, 228 Cal. Rptr. 518] .

[Optional] F. Nonperformance Is Execution of Oral Agreement Not to Perform. When the parties orally modify a written contract by agreeing that a certain act contemplated by the contract will not be performed, the modification is to be deemed executed, within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1698, when the party who was to perform the act does not perform it and the other party does not demand performance [Sanders Construction Co. v. San Joaquin First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1982) 136 CA3d 387, 396, 186 CR 218].

[Optional] G. Burden of Proof. An oral modification of a written contract, to be sustained, need be proved only by a preponderance of the evidence, and it is prejudicial error to instruct the jury that the elements of an oral modification must be proved by clear and convincing evidence [Barrett v. Bank of Am. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1362, 1370-1371, 229 Cal. Rptr. 16] .

22.04 Options and Strategy.

22.05 Elements of Cause of Action for Breach of Contract.

22.06 Basic Statute of Limitations.

22.07 Plaintiff Must Show Existence of Contract Between Parties.

22.08 Plaintiff Must Show Tender, Performance, or Excuse From Performance of Obligations Under Contract.

22.08[1] Plaintiff Must Plead and Prove Performance or Ability to Perform.

22.08[2] Substantial Performance Satisfies Requirement of Performance.

22.08[2][a] Plaintiff Must Establish No Willful Departure From Contract Terms and That Defects Are Easily Remedied.

22.08[2][b] Substantial Performance Is Question of Fact.

22.08[2][c] Substantial Performance Is Enough to Support Plaintiff's Recovery.

22.08[3] Tender of Performance Satisfies Performance Requirement.

22.08[3][a] Tender Extinguishes Obligation to Perform.

22.08[3][b] Tender Must Not Contain New Conditions.

22.08[3][c] Proper Persons Must Be Party to Tender.

22.08[3][d] Tender Must Be in Proper Place.

22.08[3][e] Tender Must Be at Proper Time.

22.08[4] Defendant's Prevention of Performance May Excuse Performance.

22.08[5] Inducement Not to Perform May Excuse Performance.

22.08[5][a] Acts to Induce Plaintiff Not to Perform Excuse Performance.

22.08[5][b] Waiver May Excuse Performance of Condition.

22.09 Breach Occurred If Defendant Failed to Perform or Prevented Plaintiff From Performing.

22.10 Demand for Defendant's Performance May Be Required.

22.11 Damages Must Be Proximately Caused by Defendant's Breach.

22.12 Pleading Requirements for Breach of Contract.

22.12[1] Pleading Must Specify Whether Contract Is Written, Oral, or Implied.

22.12[2] Pleading for Written Contract Must Include Essential Terms.

22.12[3] Pleading for Oral Contract Must Allege Legal Effect, Consideration, and Nature of Contract.

22.12[4] Pleading for Implied-in-Fact Contract Must Include Allegations of Conduct.

22.12[5] Pleading for Ambiguous Contract Must Include Ascribed Meaning.

22.12[6] Pleading Must Include Allegation of Performance of Conditions Precedent.

22.12[6][a] General Allegation of Conditional Act Is Adequate.

22.12[6][b] Specific Allegation of Conditional Event Is Required.

22.12[7] Pleading Must Include Allegation of Plaintiff's Performance or Specific Allegation of Plaintiff's Excuse From Performance.

22.12[8] Unequivocal Breach Must Be Alleged.

22.12[9] Facts Establishing Damages Caused by Breach Must Be Alleged.

22.13 CHECKLIST: Establishing Nonperformance of Contract.

22.14 Options and Strategy.

22.15 Elements of Nonperformance of Contract.

22.16 Nonperformance Constitutes Breach of Contract.

22.16[1] Plaintiff May Show That Defendant Failed to Fully Perform Contractual Obligation.

22.16[2] Substantial Performance Does Not Constitute Breach.

22.16[3] Performance by Unauthorized Party That Was Tendered, but Not Accepted, Constitutes Nonperformance.

22.16[4] Failure to Fully Perform Is Partial Breach.

22.16[5] Performance Must Be Accepted.

22.16[6] Performance Must Be Made to Proper Party.

22.16[7] Performance Must Be Made in Proper Place.

22.17 No Demand for Performance Is Necessary.

22.18 Debtor's Failure to Perform Obligation in Manner Specified by Creditor Constitutes Breach of Contract.

22.19 Nonoccurrence of Condition Precedent May Give Rise to Breach.

22.19[1] Condition Precedent Is Occurrence of Event That Triggers Duty to Perform.

22.19[2] Plaintiff Has Burden to Show Occurrence of Condition Precedent.

22.19[3] Defendant's Failure to Fulfill Promise to Perform Condition Precedent Is Ground for Breach.

22.19[4] Defendant's Prevention of Happening of Condition Precedent Is Breach.

22.20 Defendant's Failure or Inability to Perform Condition Concurrent Is Ground for Breach.

22.20[1] Conditions Concurrent Must Be Tendered or Performed Concurrently.

22.20[2] Defendant's Failure to Perform Condition Concurrent Is Ground for Breach.

22.21 Plaintiff May Sue for Breach When Plaintiff's Failure to Perform Is Excused, but Defendant's Nonperformance Is Not Excused.

22.21[1] Plaintiff's Performance Is Excused When Defendant Repudiates Contract.

22.21[2] Plaintiff May Sue When Nonperformed Condition Was Solely for Plaintiff's Benefit.

22.21[3] Plaintiff May Sue When Defendant Waives Condition Precedent.

22.22 Plaintiff May Establish Breach by Nonperformance When Performance Was Only Temporarily Impossible or Unlawful.

22.23 Plaintiff May Sue Based on Defendant's Anticipatory Breach.

22.23[1] Plaintiff Must Show Definite and Unconditional Repudiation of Contract Before Performance Is Due.

- 22.23[1][a] Anticipatory Breach Occurs Before Time Performance Is Due.
- 22.23[1][b] Repudiation May Be Express.
- 22.23[1][c] Repudiation May Be Implied.
- 22.23[1][d] Notice of Repudiation Excuses Plaintiff From Further Performance Unless Repudiation Is Retracted.
- 22.23[1][e] Repudiation Is Question of Fact.
- 22.23[2] Plaintiff May Sue for Breach Immediately on Receiving Notice of Anticipatory Breach.
- 22.23[3] Plaintiff May Ignore Repudiation and Wait to Sue Until Promised Performance Is Due.
- 22.23[4] If Defendant Retracted Repudiation Before Defendant's Performance Is Due, Plaintiff Must Show Detrimental Change in Position Due to Repudiation.
- 22.23[5] Repudiation Does Not Alter Statute of Limitations.
- 22.24 CHECKLIST: Determining Materiality of Breach.
- 22.25 Options and Strategies.
- 22.26 Mechanics of Material Breach.
- 22.27 Breach Must Be Total to Constitute Material Breach.
- 22.28 Materiality of Breach Is Primarily Question of Fact.
- 22.29 Importance or Seriousness of Breach Determines Materiality.
- 22.29[1] Court Considers Circumstances of Breach in Determining Whether It Is Material.
- 22.29[2] Slight Breach at Outset May Be Material Breach.
- 22.29[3] Slight Breach After Considerable Performance That Does Not Materially Impact Contract Is Not Material.
- 22.29[4] Partial Breach Combined With Repudiation Is Material Breach.
- 22.30 CHECKLIST: Establishing Partial Breach of Contract.
- 22.31 Failure to Fully Perform Indivisible Obligation Is Partial Breach of Contract.
- 22.32 Injured Party May Treat Total Breach As Partial.
- 22.33 Injured Party Need Not Wait Indefinitely for Unfinished Performance.
- 22.34 Plaintiff May Recover Damages for Defendant's Partial, Nonmaterial Breach.
- 22.35 Partial Performance of Severable Contract Does Not Bar Action for Defendant's Breach of Severable Part.

22.35[1] Contract With Separate Consideration for Separate Obligations Is Severable.

22.35[2] Plaintiff May Recover for Partial Performance of Severable Part of Contract.

22.35[3] Party Who Induced Part of Divisible Contract by Fraud May Not Enforce Any Part of Contract.

22.36 CHECKLIST: Establishing Breach Due to Performance Not in Accord With Contract Terms.

22.37 Plaintiff May Recover If Defendant's Performance Was Substantial but Not in Strict Compliance With Contract Terms.

22.37[1] Substantial Performance Occurs When Variance From Specifications Is Minimal and Object of Contract Is Achieved.

22.37[2] Plaintiff May Recover for Damages Associated With Lack of Strict Compliance.

22.38 Improper Termination, Cancellation, or Rescission Constitutes Breach.

22.39 Defendant's Performance in Different Location May Constitute Breach.

22.40 Plaintiff May Establish Breach for Defective Performance Based on Implicit Duty.

22.41 If Contract Provides for Alternative Means of Performance, Defendant's Failure to Perform Alternative Constitutes Breach.

22.41[1] Failure to Perform Entire Alternative Constitutes Breach.

22.41[2] Defendant's Failure to Give Timely Notice of Selection of Alternative Performance Gives Plaintiff Right to Make Selection.

22.41[3] If One Alternative Is Unlawful or Impossible to Perform, Defendant Breaches by Failing to Perform Other Alternative.

22.42 CHECKLIST: Establishing Timeliness of Performance.

22.43 Failure to Perform at Time Specified in Contract Is Breach.

22.44 Party Can Waive Timeliness Requirement.

22.45 Breach Generally Occurs at Time Performance Is Due.

22.46 Reasonable Time Is Allowed When Contract Does Not Specify Time of Performance.

22.47 "Reasonable" Amount of Time Is Question Fact When Facts Are Disputed.

22.48 Payment of Money Normally Must Be Made Immediately.

22.48[1] Absent Specified Time in Contract, Payment Is Due Immediately.

22.48[2] Contract Requiring Immediate Payment Permits Reasonable Time for Processing Payment.

22.48[3] Statutory Extension for Holidays.

22.48[4] Statutory Exceptions May Alter Terms of Obligations.

22.49 Delayed Performance May Cause Material Breach When Harm From Delay Cannot Be Compensated.

22.50 Delayed Performance Is Material Breach When Contract Explicitly Provides "Time Is of the Essence."

22.51 CHECKLIST: Recovering for Improper Assignment.

22.52 Elements of Improper Assignment.

22.53 Assignment Consists of Transferring Title, Contractual Right, or Chose in Action to Another Person.

22.53[1] Transfer of Title, Contractual Right, or Chose in Action Is Assignment.

22.53[2] Assignment Transfers Incidents of Thing Assigned.

22.53[3] Absent Prohibition on Assignment, Assignment May Be Made With or Without Consideration.

22.53[4] Assignment Made With Consideration Is Subject to Contract Law.

22.54 Contractual Rights May Be Assigned Unless Prohibited by Law or Contract.

22.54[1] Contractual Rights Presumptively May Be Assigned.

22.54[2] Assignment May Be Oral or Written.

22.54[3] Contract May Expressly or Implicitly Prohibit Assignment.

22.54[4] Authorization to Assign Tenant's Lease May Not Be Unreasonably Withheld.

22.54[5] No Enforcement of Assignment of Contract for Performance Based on Personal Qualities.

22.54[6] Statutes Prohibit Certain Assignments.

22.54[7] Rights on Personal Property May Be Assigned.

22.54[8] Rights on Personal Torts and Legal Malpractice Claims May Not Be Assigned.

22.54[9] Rights to Recover Statutory Penalties May Not Be Assigned.

22.55 Improper Assignment Renders Contract Voidable.

22.56 Nonassigning Party May Waive Breach by Assignment.

22.56[1] Party to Whom Benefit of Nonassignment Runs May Object to Assignment.

22.56[2] Waiver May Be Implied When Nonassigning Party Either Performs or Accepts Performance by Assignee.

22.57 Assignor Remains Liable to Nonassigning Party.

22.58 Assignor May Be Liable to Assignee.

22.58[1] Assignor May Explicitly Warrant Rights Assigned.

22.58[2] Statutes Impose Warranties on Assignment.

22.58[3] Assignment Contains Implied Warranty of Valid and Existing Rights.

22.59 Nonassigning Party May Be Liable to Assignee.

22.59[1] After Notice of Assignment, Assignee May Sue for Obligor's Failure to Confer Performance to Assignee.

22.59[2] Absent Notice of Assignment, Obligor's Performance to Assignor Discharges Performance.

22.60 Assignee May Be Liable for Breach of Contract.

22.60[1] Assignee Generally Does Not Assume Obligations of Contract.

22.60[2] Assignee Becomes Liable to Obligor on Acceptance of Obligor's Performance.

22.60[3] Assignee Is Liable on Assumption of Obligation.

22.61 CHECKLIST: Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

22.62 Options and Strategy.

22.62[1] Asserting Appropriate Response Including Applicable Affirmative Defenses.

22.62[2] Refuting Nonperformance or Materiality of Breach With Substantial Performance.

22.62[3] Asserting Nonperformance of Condition Precedent.

22.62[4] Establishing Justification, Excuse, and Other Affirmative Defenses for Nonperformance.

22.63 No Liability When Plaintiff Fails to Establish Elements of Breach.

22.64 No Liability When Nonperformance Is Justified by Failure of Consideration.

22.65 No Liability When Nonperformance Is Excused.

22.65[1] Impossible or Impracticable Performance May Be Excused.

22.65[1][a] Complete Impossibility Excuses Performance.

22.65[1][b] Impracticability Excuses Performance.

22.65[1][c] Temporary Impossibility or Impracticability Suspends Duty to Perform.

22.65[2] Frustration of Purpose May Excuse Performance.

22.65[3] Unlawful Performance May Be Excused.

22.65[4] Unconscionable Performance May Be Excused.

22.65[5] Waiver May Excuse Performance of Condition.

22.65[6] Release May Excuse Performance.

22.65[7] Plaintiff's Prevention of Defendant's Performance Excuses Defendant's Performance.

22.65[8] Defendant Has Burden of Proof to Establish Excuse.

22.66 Nonoccurrence of Condition Precedent Precludes Liability for Nonperformance.

22.66[1] Failure to Satisfy Condition Precedent Precludes Liability.

22.66[2] Unmet Condition of Satisfaction Precludes Liability.

22.66[2][a] "Reasonable Person" Standard Applies to Commercial Value, Mechanical Ability, or Operational Fitness.

22.66[2][b] Good-Faith Subjective Standard Applies When Satisfaction Involves Fancy, Taste, or Judgment.

22.67 Occurrence of Condition Subsequent Before Performance Precludes Liability.

22.67[1] Condition Subsequent Is Future Event That Relieves Obligation.

22.67[2] No Liability When Occurrence of Condition Subsequent Precedes Time Performance Is Due.

22.68 Party May Waive Breach.

22.68[1] Conduct That Induces Reasonable Person to Conclude Aggrieved Party Has Relinquished Right Constitutes Waiver.

22.68[2] Continued Performance With Knowledge of Breach and Acceptance of Further Performance Constitutes Implied Waiver.

22.68[3] Implied Waiver Is Question of Fact.

22.68[4] Burden of Proof Is on Party Asserting Waiver.

22.68[5] Plaintiff's Waiver of Right to Rescission Restricts Claim of Damages to Those Caused by Breach.

22.68[6] No Waiver When Delay in Seeking Remedy Made at Breaching Party's Request.

22.68[7] No Waiver When Breaching Party Has Continuing Covenant.

22.68[8] No Waiver When Breach Is Latent.

22.69 Substantial Performance Is Defense to Claim of Breach.

22.70 Statute of Limitations Bars Relief When Action Is Not Filed Within Limitations Period.

22.70[1] Action on Written Contract Must Be Filed Within Four Years.

22.70[2] Action on Oral or Implied Contract Must Be Filed Within Two Years.

22.70[3] Action Accrues at Time Performance Was Due but Not Delivered.

22.70[4] Limitation Period Begins to Run at Time of Breach.

22.70[5] Absence From State Tolls Limitations Period.

22.71 Defendant May Object to Complaint by Answer or Demurrer.

22.72 Pleading Denials and Affirmative Defenses.

22.72[1] General Denial Refutes Breach in Answer to Unverified Complaint.

22.72[2] Specific Denial Refutes Breach in Answer to Verified Complaint.

22.72[3] Pleading of Affirmative Defenses Is Necessary to Assert Excuse, Waiver, and Release.

22.72[3][a] Defendant Must Allege Affirmative Defenses in Answer.

22.72[3][b] Excuse for Nonperformance Must Be Affirmatively Pleaded.

22.72[3][c] Waiver of Breach Must Be Affirmatively Pleaded.

22.72[3][d] Release Must Be Affirmatively Pleaded.

22.72[4] Advisable to Affirmatively Allege Defense Based on Payment.

22.72[5] Statute of Limitations Must Be Affirmatively Pleaded.

22.72[6] Failure to Mitigate Damages Is Affirmative Defense.

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract

I. STRATEGY

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.01

22.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Objectives and strategy for suing for breach of contract [see 22.02].
- Determining the basic elements of a cause of action for breach of contract [see 22.05 -22.12], including:
 - ☐ The existence of a contract between the parties [see 22.07].
 - ☐ That plaintiff fully performed, substantially performed, tendered performance, or was excused from performing, a plaintiff's obligations under the contract [see 22.08].
 - ☐ That defendant failed to perform, or prevented plaintiff from performing, obligations under the contract [see 22.09].
 - ☐ Damages proximately caused by the breach [see 22.11].
 - ☐ Identifying matters necessary to include in pleading a breach of contract claim [see 22.12].
- Determining whether grounds exist to sue for nonperformance of the contract [see 22.15 -22.23].
- Determining whether a breach of contract is material [see 22.24 -22.29].
- Determining whether a breach is only partial, and the consequences of a partial breach [see 22.30 -22.35].
- Determining whether a breach resulted from performance not in accord with contract terms [see 22.36 -22.41].

- Determining timeliness of performance, and whether a breach resulted from untimeliness [see 22.42 -22.50].
- Determining whether a breach of contract claim may be brought based on improper assignment [see 22.51 -22.60].
- Identifying defenses to a claim for breach of contract [see 22.61 -22.72].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract

I. STRATEGY

*2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.0222.02 Objective and Strategy.

The purpose of a breach of contract action is to allow a party who has not received the benefit of a bargain to recover compensation for the other party's failure to fully perform. Because of the bilateral nature of most contracts, many breach-of-contract plaintiffs may also become cross-defendants, and may have grounds to assert cross-complaints. In particular, when one party fails to perform a contractual obligation, that party is very likely to contend that the failure to perform was justified or excused because of the other party's failure to satisfy some other contractual duty. For example, a builder may sue a homeowner for failure to pay for construction on the home [see 22.16]. The homeowner typically will defend the claim on the ground that the performance rendered was defective [see 22.63], but may also have grounds to cross-complain for damages associated with the builder's breach due to performance not in accord with contract specifications [see 22.37, 22.40]. The builder in turn may defend the cross-complaint on the grounds of substantial performance [see 22.69].

Strategic Point:

Counsel should keep in mind that once the plaintiff sues for breach of contract, the defendant is unlikely to continue any further performance. Accordingly, before filing suit, it is worth determining whether any further performance by the defendant can be expected, absent suit, and if so, whether that performance can be sacrificed without harm.

Strategic Point--Analyze All Aspects of Case:

Counsel must fully analyze both the offensive and defensive postures of the client's case, whether the client seeks representation initially as a plaintiff or defendant. This chapter sets forth the considerations for asserting both breach of contract claims and defenses. If the contract involves more than two parties, or if there are multiple contracts involving more than two parties, counsel must perform the same analysis for each of the parties who might participate in the litigation. In the hypothetical example given above, for example, after having been sued by the homeowner, the builder might cross-claim against the architect on the grounds that the architect prevented the builder from fully performing, and so on.

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.04

22.04 Options and Strategy.

When a client comes to discuss the possibility of a breach of contract, the first consideration must be to determine whether a valid contract exists [see Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 CA3d 887, 913, 92 CR 723].

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of existence or validity of contract, see Ch. 13, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element; and
Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

If there is some defect that calls into questions the existence of the contract, counsel should consider whether quantum meruit (or quantum valebant) is available as an alternate basis for recovery.

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of quantum meruit (and quantum valebant), see Ch. 9, Seeking or Opposing Quantum Meruit or Quantum Valebant Recovery in Contract Actions.

Once counsel establishes that a valid contract exists, the next step is to determine whether conditions precedent or concurrent have been satisfied [see 22.12[6], 22.19]. If the contract contains any such conditions, and one or more were not satisfied, counsel must determine whether the failure to satisfy them is excused for some reason [see 22.21]. If not, no liability attaches, unless the condition was waived or substantially performed, or it was solely for plaintiff's benefit [see 22.21[2], [3]]. Counsel also must determine whether the contract contains any conditions subsequent. If the breach occurred after a condition subsequent extinguished the other contracting party's obligations, then there can be no recovery under the contract [see 22.67].

If counsel determines that the contract is valid and that conditions precedent or concurrent have been met or waived, the next inquiry is whether the client performed and, if not, the reason for the client's failure to perform [see 22.09]. If the client performed or was excused from performing, the extent, if any, of the other contracting party's performance must be determined. If the other party failed to perform partly or entirely, the extent to which that party may claim to be excused from performing must be assessed [see 22.65]. If that party's likely arguments for excuse do not seem convincing, counsel should determine the materiality of the breach; that is, the importance or seriousness of the breach [see 22.24 -22.29]. If the breach arguably is material, counsel should determine the extent of damages to the client proximately caused by the breach [see 22.11; Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions]. The client then may elect a remedy, including specific performance, rescission and restitution, damages, injunction, declaratory relief, or ejectment or quiet title. In some circumstances, tort remedies may be available.

Declaratory relief, see Ch. 11, Seeking or Opposing Declaratory Relief in Contract Matters.

If the client cannot establish that the breach is material, the client may still seek recovery for damages resulting from a partial, nonmaterial breach [see 22.30 -22.35].

Because attorneys' fees ordinarily are not provided for by statute in contract cases, the existence (or nonexistence) of an attorney's fees provision in a contract factors heavily in many cases, especially cases with strong liability and causation but relatively small damages.

To establish breach of contract, there must be a contract in existence [Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 CA3d 887, 913, 92 CR 723]. This requires a showing that the contracting parties were capable of contracting, achieved mutual consent, provided adequate consideration, and that the contract had a lawful objective [CC § 1550].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.08

22.08 Plaintiff Must Show Tender, Performance, or Excuse From Performance of Obligations Under Contract.

22.08[1] Plaintiff Must Plead and Prove Performance or Ability to Perform. Absent an excuse for performance, the plaintiff must establish that he or she performed or had the ability to perform under the contract [see CC § 1495]. A plaintiff's failure to establish this element bars relief [see Cockrill v. Boas (1931) 213 C 490, 492, 2 P2d 774].

Example--Specific Performance:

A court denied specific performance to a land purchaser who failed to plead or prove that he had performed or was able to perform or had made payment, and whose testimony indicated that he was unable to pay [Cockrill v. Boas (1931) 213 C 490, 492, 2 P2d 774].

Warning:

A complaint must include an allegation that the plaintiff duly performed all the conditions on the plaintiff's part or was excused from performing [CCP § 457]. If counsel pleads specific allegations that do not constitute due performance, the complaint is subject to demurrer [Willis v. Page (1937) 19 CA2d 508, 512, 65 P2d 944]. It is safer to confine the pleading to a general allegation when the plaintiff alleges that the conditions were met. If the plaintiff is asserting that the conditions were excused, the plaintiff must include a specific allegation to that effect [Careau & Co. v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 CA3d 1371, 1391, 272 CR 387].

22.08[2] Substantial Performance Satisfies Requirement of Performance.

22.08[2][a] Plaintiff Must Establish No Willful Departure From Contract Terms and That Defects Are Easily Remedied. To bring an action notwithstanding a lack of strict compliance with one's obligations, the plaintiff may show he or she has "substantially performed." To establish substantial performance, the plaintiff must show that there was no willful departure from the terms of the contract and that any defects can be easily remedied or compensated for, so that the other party practically got what was contracted for [Posner v. Grunwald-Marx, Inc. (1961) 56 C2d 169, 186-187, 14 CR 297, 363 P2d 313; Murray's Iron Works, Inc. v. Boyce (2008) 158 CA4th 1279, 1291-1293, 71 CR3d 317].

Example:

A construction company completed 98 percent of construction on a project, and was prevented by the other contracting party from completing the project. The court held that the construction company had substantially performed and was entitled to recover for the other party's breach of the payment obligation [Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 C2d 87, 92-93, 60 CR 225, 429 P2d 577].

Jury Instructions:

Substantial Performance, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 312 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Waiver of Defects in Offer of Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.23 (Matthew Bender).

22.08[2][b] Substantial Performance Is Question of Fact. Whether a party has substantially performed an obligation is a question of fact [Posner v. Grunwald-Marx, Inc. (1961) 56 C2d 169, 187, 14 CR 297, 363 P2d 313].

22.08[2][c] Substantial Performance Is Enough to Support Plaintiff's Recovery. Despite the lack of strict performance of a contractual obligations, the plaintiff's showing of substantial performance renders the defendant's breach actionable, although recovery is reduced by the amount necessary to compensate the defendant either for the lack of strict compliance [Posner v. Grunwald-Marx, Inc. (1961) 56 C2d 169, 186-187, 14 CR 297, 363 P2d 313] or for the reduced value of the partial but substantial performance.

 Cross References:

Discussion of substantial performance in context of recovery for performance not in accord with contract terms, see 22.37.

Discussion of substantial performance as a defense to claim for breach, see 22.69.

22.08[3] Tender of Performance Satisfies Performance Requirement.

22.08[3][a] Tender Extinguishes Obligation to Perform. The plaintiff may satisfy the requirement of performance by establishing tender of performance. Tender of performance is a good-faith offer of performance with the intent to extinguish the obligation. The offer extinguishes the obligation when made in conformity with the other requirements of the Civil Code [CC §§ 1485, 1493, 1500]. The offer must have been for full performance; an offer of partial (not substantial) performance has no effect [CC § 1486]. In addition, the party making the tender must have been able and willing to perform according to the offer [CC § 1494]. It is not necessary that the thing to be delivered, if any, was actually produced, unless the offer was accepted [CC § 1496].

Example--Valid Tender:

Purchaser contracted with seller to purchase 10,000 cases of peach pulp, or fewer in the event of short supply. Seller offered to deliver 8,727 cases because of short supply, and offered the sale on a pro rata basis as provided in the contract. The purchaser refused delivery, claiming substandard quality. The court held that a finding that the quality was standard was supported by the evidence, and that the partial tender, in the circumstances, was proper [Harbor City Canning Co. v. Dant (1927) 201 C 79, 83-85, 255 P 795].

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Tender, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.50 (Matthew Bender).

Offer of Full Performance Required, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.51 (Matthew Bender).

22.08[3][b] Tender Must Not Contain New Conditions. The offer to perform must not contain any conditions to which the defendant was not already bound [CC § 1494]. If the plaintiff offers performance on additional conditions, the offer does not constitute a tender and does not satisfy the performance element of the cause of action. However, if the defendant is entitled to the performance of a condition precedent to or concurrent with performance, the plaintiff can properly make the offer dependent on the performance of that condition [CC § 1498].

Example--Invalid Tender:

A purchaser of land agreed to pay the unpaid part of the purchase price over 35 months at a specified amount per month. At the end of that time and after full payment, the seller was to deliver title. The purchaser offered to pay the lump sum remaining due early in exchange for the title. The seller refused to accept the tender of performance. The court held that the tender was invalid, noting that the demand for the seller's performance in advance of the time specified in the contract was at variance with the contract term that title be delivered at the end of the 35 months [Hanson v. Fox (1909) 155 C 106, 107, 99 P 489].

Jury Instructions:

Unwarranted Conditions, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.54 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of conditions precedent and concurrent, see 22.19, 22.20, 22.66.

22.08[3][c] Proper Persons Must Be Party to Tender. To be effective as a tender, the offer of performance must be made by the party required to perform or someone authorized to make the offer on that party's behalf [CC § 1487]. In addition, the offer must be made to the party entitled to performance, to any of joint parties entitled to performance, or to a person authorized by one of them to receive what is due under the obligation [CC § 1488].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of persons who may act on behalf of contracting parties, see Ch. 20, Asserting Agency Issues in Contract Actions.

22.08[3][d] Tender Must Be in Proper Place. Absent an express provision in the contract to the contrary, the offer of performance must be made at one of the following places [CC § 1489]:

- Any place appointed by the defendant.
- Wherever the defendant can be found.
- At the residence or place of business of the defendant, if that person cannot, with reasonable diligence, be found in California, and within a reasonable distance from the defendant's residence or place of business, if the defendant evades the plaintiff.
- Any place in California, if the tender cannot be made at the residence or place of business of the defendant.

22.08[3][e] Tender Must Be at Proper Time. If the contract sets a time for performance, the tender must be made at the specified time, within reasonable hours [CC § 1490]. If no time is specified, the tender can be made any time before the defendant, on a reasonable demand, has refused to perform [CC § 1492].

22.08[4] Defendant's Prevention of Performance May Excuse Performance. The requirement that plaintiff perform is excused when the defendant's conduct prevents the plaintiff from performing [CC § 1511(1)]. When this occurs, the plaintiff is entitled to all the benefits of the contract had it been performed by both parties [CC § 1512]. Plaintiff's performance is thereby excused even when the parties have stipulated that defendant's prevention of performance will not excuse plaintiff's performance [CC § 1511(1)].

Example--Defendant's Prevention of Performance:

A plaintiff had contracted to cut timber on the defendant's property. Thereafter, the defendant instructed the plaintiff to stop cutting trees until further notice. The court held that the plaintiff was excused from performing because the defendant's instruction prevented the plaintiff from entering defendant's land to perform the obligation [Crawford v. Pioneer Box & Lumber Co. (1930) 105 CA 760, 768, 288 P 694].

Warning:

A contract may expressly provide that a party who relies on CC § 1511 must give written notice within a reasonable time to the other party of an intent to claim an extension of time, bring suit, or other related acts [see CC § 1511(1)]. If the contract includes such a provision, the plaintiff must comply with its requirements. If the plaintiff fails to provide notice, the plaintiff may avoid this provision only by establishing that the notice requirement is not "reasonable and just" [see CC § 1511(1)].

22.08[5] Inducement Not to Perform May Excuse Performance.

22.08[5][a] Acts to Induce Plaintiff Not to Perform Excuse Performance. If a defendant does some act naturally tending to induce the plaintiff not to perform, the plaintiff's failure to perform is excused [CC § 1511(3)]. To be excused, the inducement must be made at or before the time performance was due [CC § 1511(3)].

Example:

A borrower, who had pledged a mink coat as security for a loan, was told by the lender that she could repay the loan within a week. Within the week, she returned to repay the loan and redeem her coat, but was told that the coat was sold and the account closed. The court held that the borrower was excused from tendering the amount of loan, and that she was properly awarded damages (for conversion) [Wade v. Markwell & Co. (1953) 118 CA2d 410, 420, 430, 258 P2d 497].

22.08[5][b] Waiver May Excuse Performance of Condition. A party claiming breach may be excused from performance of a condition of the contract if the other party either expressly or implicitly waived that condition [see, e.g., Atkinson v. Pacific Fire Extinguisher Co. (1953) 40 C2d 192, 194-195, 253 P2d 18 (plaintiff excused from timely performance of payments when defendant waived right by accepting late payment)].

In attempting to recover for breach, a plaintiff may not claim waiver for failing to perform a material part of the contract [see CC § 1541 (requiring either new consideration or writing to extinguish contractual obligation)].

Jury Instructions:

Waiver of Condition Precedent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 323 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

22.09 Breach Occurred If Defendant Failed to Perform or Prevented Plaintiff From Performing.

The plaintiff may establish a breach by showing that the defendant failed to perform an obligation under the contract without justification or excuse [see, e.g., Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 CA2d 220, 227, 56 CR 435]. Alternatively, the plaintiff may show that the defendant prevented the plaintiff from performing under the contract [see, e.g., Jacobs v. Tenneco W., Inc. (1986) 186 CA3d 1413, 1417, 231 CR 351]. The plaintiff may also establish breach by showing defendant's repudiation of the contract [see, e.g., Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 29, 142 P2d 22].

22.10 Demand for Defendant's Performance May Be Required.

When the defendant had an unconditional duty to perform, the plaintiff has no obligation to demand performance before bringing suit [McDonald v. Filice (1967) 252 CA2d 613, 623, 60 CR 832]. On the other hand, if the defendant had a conditional duty to perform and the contract did not specify the time for performance, a demand for performance generally must be made within a reasonable time before a suit may be brought [Woollomes v. Gomes (1938) 26 CA2d 461, 465, 79 P2d 728].

II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.11

22.11 Damages Must Be Proximately Caused by Defendant's Breach.

Damages are an essential element of the cause of action for breach of contract [Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 CA3d 887, 913, 92 CR 723]. The measure of damages is the amount that will compensate the nonbreaching party for the harm proximately caused by, or likely to result from, the breach [CC § 3300].

Jury Instructions:

Breach of Contract--Essential Factual Elements, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 303 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Judge's Perspective:

The party to a breach of contract case should focus on damages right away in trial preparation and discovery, and avoid the temptation to focus disproportionately on issues of formation or performance. For one thing, it will not be possible to value the case for settlement purposes until both sides can confidently predict the range of damages the plaintiff will receive at trial. For another, in many cases there will be no doubt that the defendant has breached the contract, but it can be shown that the plaintiff suffered no damages, or that the damages are speculative.

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.12

22.12 Pleading Requirements for Breach of Contract.

22.12[1] Pleading Must Specify Whether Contract Is Written, Oral, or Implied. The complaint must make clear whether the contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct [CCP § 430.10(g)].

 Cross Reference:

Demurrer to complaint on grounds that contract does not specify whether it is written, oral, or implied, see Ch. 15, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities, 15.13.

Form for demurrer on ground that contract fails to specify whether it is written, oral, or implied, see Ch. 15, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities, 15.36.

22.12[2] Pleading for Written Contract Must Include Essential Terms. A complaint alleging breach of a written contract must include allegations of the essential terms of the contract, or, if done carefully, by alleging the import of the terms [International Billing Servs., Inc. v. Emigh (2000) 84 CA4th 1175, 1187, 101 CR2d 532]. It is customary to attach a copy of a written contract to the complaint. Typically this is done by attaching a complete copy and incorporating it in the complaint by reference [International Billing Servs., Inc. v. Emigh (2000) 84 CA4th 1175, 1187, 101 CR2d 532].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

The better practice is to attach a copy of the written contract, whether or not the relevant parts of the contract are described with certainty in the complaint. Attaching the contract to the complaint will make life easier throughout the course of the litigation if the plaintiff does so (and if the defendant does not challenge its authenticity). Otherwise, hearings, depositions, meeting and other events can get bogged down looking for an authentic copy of the contract. If the plaintiff does not do so, the defendant may choose to attach the contract to the answer. Note that all operative addenda, modifying documents, and the like, should be included. In addition, a complaint that does not attach the written contract and does not sufficiently describe the provisions at issue is subject to demurrer for uncertainty. Further, failure to attach the contract means the plaintiff must plead the relevant terms verbatim or plead the "import" of the terms (which must be "done cautiously") [International Billing Servs., Inc. v. Emigh (2000) 84 CA4th 1175, 1187, 101 CR2d 532]. Attaching a copy leaves no doubt as to what the terms are, and allows the pleader to include only the terms deemed relevant in the complaint.

The consideration for the contract need not be alleged [CC § 1614].

Cross References:

Form for complaint for written contract, see 22.73.

Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 7, Complaints.

Discussion of pleading written contracts, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.100 (Matthew Bender).

22.12[3] Pleading for Oral Contract Must Allege Legal Effect, Consideration, and Nature of Contract.

Because of the difficulty in recalling verbatim an oral contract, a plaintiff must instead allege the legal effect, the consideration, and the nature of an oral contract [see, e.g., Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 C2d 778, 780, 792, 256 P2d 947].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

Although the terms of an oral contract need not be pleaded verbatim, plaintiff's counsel should conduct thorough pre-filing discovery to determine the plaintiff's best recollection of exactly what the parties said in forming the contract, so that the complaint will be consistent with the facts as they unfold during pre-trial discovery.

Discussion of pleading oral contracts, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.104 (Matthew Bender).

22.12[4] Pleading for Implied-in-Fact Contract Must Include Allegations of Conduct. A pleading for an implied-in-fact contract must include allegations depicting the conduct and circumstances from which a finder of fact could conclude the existence of an implied agreement [see, e.g., Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 C2d 240, 247, 74 CR 398, 449 P2d 462].

The plaintiff must show conduct by both parties that is intentional and that both parties know, or have reason to know, that the other would interpret as an agreement to enter into a contract [Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 C3d 660, 678 n16, 134 CR 815, 557 P2d 106].

Jury Instructions:

Implied-in-Fact Contract, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 305 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Discussion of pleading implied in fact contracts, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.110 (Matthew Bender).

Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 7, Complaints.

22.12[5] Pleading for Ambiguous Contract Must Include Ascribed Meaning. When the terms of a contract are ambiguous, the plaintiff must allege in the complaint the meaning of the ambiguous terms, including particular customs or usages of a trade or geographic area [see, e.g., Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v. City & Suburban Mortgage Co. (1970) 10 CA3d 206, 217, 88 CR 858].

Warning:

Counsel should keep in mind that alleging that a contract contains ambiguous terms opens the door to parol evidence.

Cross Reference:

Discussion of interpretation of ambiguous terms, see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract.

22.12[6] Pleading Must Include Allegation of Performance of Conditions Precedent.

22.12[6][a] General Allegation of Conditional Act Is Adequate. A party must fulfill all conditions precedent, and be able and offer to fulfill all conditions concurrent, before demanding performance by the other party [CC § 1439]. Thus, the plaintiff must include allegations of performance of these conditions in the complaint [Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 CA2d 283, 287, 39 CR 443]. However, when the conditions require performance by the plaintiff, the complaint need only state generally that the party "duly performed all the conditions on his [or her] part" [CCP § 457]. Only if the defendant controverts this allegation does the plaintiff need to establish at trial the facts showing performance of the conditions [CCP § 457; but see 22.12[6][b] (conditional event must be specifically alleged)].

Warning:

Specific allegations control over general allegations. If the plaintiff alleges due performance of all conditions but includes specific allegations that controvert that performance, the specific allegations control and the complaint is subject to demurrer [Careau & Co. v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 CA3d 1371, 1389-1390, 272 CR 387].

Distinguish--Condition Subsequent:

The plaintiff need not allege performance of a condition subsequent, because that condition is an affirmative defense for the defendant [see Blasingame v. Home Ins. Co. (1888) 75 C 633, 635, 17 P 925]. Nevertheless, when a condition subsequent is present, the plaintiff must allege that performance became due before occurrence of the condition subsequent [see Rizzuto v. National Reserve Ins. Co. (1949) 92 CA2d 143, 146, 206 P2d 431] or that the condition was satisfied in a timely manner.

22.12[6][b] Specific Allegation of Conditional Event Is Required. Although the plaintiff may include a general allegation regarding a conditional act [see 22.12[6][a]], the plaintiff must include specific allegations when the condition precedent required the occurrence of an event [Careau & Co. v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 CA3d 1371, 1389, 272 CR 387].

22.12[7] Pleading Must Include Allegation of Plaintiff's Performance or Specific Allegation of Plaintiff's Excuse From Performance. Absent an excuse from performance, the plaintiff must allege performance or tender of performance [see CC § 1495]. When the plaintiff did not perform because of some excuse, the plaintiff must specifically allege the facts establishing excuse from performance [see, e.g., Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 CA2d

283, 287-289, 39 CR 443 (allowing amended complaint when plaintiff included specific allegations of anticipatory breach as excuse for plaintiff's nonperformance)].

22.12[8] Unequivocal Breach Must Be Alleged. The plaintiff must allege facts constituting the unequivocal breach [Gautier v. General Tel. Co. (1965) 234 CA2d 302, 305, 44 CR 404]. The allegations must specify the particular conduct that violated the specific obligations under the contract [Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1963) 223 CA2d 50, 60, 35 CR 652 , overruled on other grounds by Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 C4th 503, 510, 28 CR2d 475, 869 P2d 454].

Judge's Perspective:

It is difficult to identify this standard precisely, because in many of the reported cases the plaintiffs failed to meet it by such a wide mark. In the Gautier case, the plaintiff failed to allege any facts that would constitute a breach of contract. Thus, the court was left in the dark as to whether any breach at all occurred [see Gautier v. General Tel. Co. (1965) 234 CA2d 302, 305, 44 CR 404]. Other cases are to similar effect [see, e.g., Otworth v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1985) 166 CA3d 452, 459, 212 CR 743 ("Otworth's complaint makes no mention of whether the contract is written or oral, sets forth none of the alleged contract's terms, and includes no assertion that Otworth has either performed the contract or is excused from performing")]. The drafter of the complaint should ask, "Do these allegations leave the reader certain that the contract has been breached?" If so, the allegations in the complaint are probably adequate. Thus, for example, the plaintiff might allege that the defendant agreed to pay 30 cents per pound for all the tomatoes the plaintiff could produce, provided that the tomatoes were of a certain quality and that they were tendered to the defendant's weighing facility by May 1; that the plaintiff tendered four tons of tomatoes to the proper facility on April 10; that the tomatoes were of the required quality; that the plaintiff demanded $2,400 pursuant to the terms of the contract; and that the defendant refused to pay that amount or any amount.

22.12[9] Facts Establishing Damages Caused by Breach Must Be Alleged. The complaint must contain facts that establish the damages proximately caused by the breach [CC § 3300; Gautier v. General Tel. Co. (1965) 234 CA2d 302, 305, 44 CR 404]. Damages recoverable are limited to those that are clearly ascertainable in their nature and origin [CC § 3301].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

Ordinarily, damages do not have to be quantified or even estimated in the complaint. It is common to state merely that damages are "subject to proof at trial." All that is required to avoid ambiguity is a general description of the manner in which damages were caused and the general nature of them.

III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.14

22.14 Options and Strategy.

It is crucial for the plaintiff in a breach of contract action to establish that the plaintiff performed, tendered performance, or was excused from performance, and that the defendant did not perform as required in the contract [see 22.21]. Nonperformance is the linchpin of breach of contract, including partial performance or a failure to make payment [see 22.16, 22.31, 22.18]. The plaintiff need not make any particular demand for performance [see 22.17]. The plaintiff also should strive to show that conditions precedent or concurrent were not fulfilled [see 22.19, 22.20]. In appropriate circumstances, the plaintiff can prevail by showing that the defendant was guilty of anticipatory repudiation (that is, breaching in advance of the time for performance) [see 22.23].

III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.15

22.15 Elements of Nonperformance of Contract.

When a contract is entire, as opposed to severable, nonperformance occurs when a party unjustifiably fails to perform a material promise or obligation under the contract [Woodard v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1915) 171 C 513, 522, 153 P 951].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.16

22.16 Nonperformance Constitutes Breach of Contract.

22.16[1] Plaintiff May Show That Defendant Failed to Fully Perform Contractual Obligation. The first element of nonperformance is the failure to fully perform a material promise or obligation under the contract [CC § 1473]. At common law, full performance was required before the obligor was entitled to be paid [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 C 285, 288-289, 197 P 105]. This requirement has been relaxed by the doctrine of substantial performance [see 22.16[2]].

22.16[2] Substantial Performance Does Not Constitute Breach. To mitigate the harshness of common-law requirement of strict compliance with full performance, the courts developed the doctrine of substantial performance, allowing a party who substantially performs in good faith to recover the contract price, less the amount allowed as damages for the failure of strict performance [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 C 285, 289, 197 P 105] .

Jury Instructions:

Substantial Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.02 (Matthew Bender).

➤ Cross References:

Discussion of substantial performance as element of claim for breach, see 22.08[2].

22.16[3] Performance by Unauthorized Party That Was Tendered, but Not Accepted, Constitutes Nonperformance. Nonperformance may be established when an unauthorized party tenders performance, unless the promisee accepts the performance by the unauthorized party [CC § 1473].

Jury Instructions:

Person Required to Make Offer, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.52 (Matthew Bender).

Performance by Another, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.15 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of tendering performance, see 22.08[3].

22.16[4] Failure to Fully Perform Is Partial Breach. When a promisor performs part of an indivisible obligation, a corresponding part of the obligation is extinguished if the promisee voluntarily retains the benefit of the performance [CC § 1477]. The failure to perform the remaining part of the obligation is a partial breach [see Linden Partners v. Wilshire Linden Assocs. (1998) 62 CA4th 508, 531, 73 CR2d 708].

 Cross Reference:

Complete discussion of breach of indivisible obligation, see 22.31.

22.16[5] Performance Must Be Accepted. The performance must be accepted by the promisee to extinguish the obligation [CC § 1473]. However, acceptance may be made by one of joint promisee, even though the remaining joint parties do not receive the benefit of the performance [see CC § 1475; Cober v. Connolly (1942) 20 C2d 741, 744, 128 P2d 519]. Similarly, the promisee need not necessarily be a party to the contract. For example, the performance may be owed to a third party beneficiary, who would then be the promisee.

Jury Instructions:

Performance to Satisfaction of Third Party, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.14 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of issues relating to third-party beneficiaries, see Ch. 19, Seeking or Opposing Recovery As Third Party Beneficiary of Contract.

22.16[6] Performance Must Be Made to Proper Party. In general, when an obligation runs in favor of joint parties, performance rendered to any one party extinguishes the obligation [CC § 1475]. This provision does not apply in cases involving deposits made by owners in common, or in joint ownership, which is regulated by the law relating to deposits [CC § 1475].

Jury Instructions:

Person to Whom Offer Must Be Made, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.53 (Matthew Bender).

22.16[7] Performance Must Be Made in Proper Place. Performance must be made in the place specified in the contract or a place reasonably inferred from the contract [Burr v. Western States Life Ins. Co. (1931) 211 C 568, 575, 296 P 273]. If it is unclear where the performance is to be made, the promisor normally must seek out the other party for performance [Burr v. Western States Life Ins. Co. (1931) 211 C 568, 575, 296 P 273]. The place for performance is a question of fact [Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 C2d 458, 466, 241 P2d 4].

Jury Instructions:

Place of Offer, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.56 (Matthew Bender).

22.17 No Demand for Performance Is Necessary.

Unless the contract specifies that a demand for performance must be made before a party is in breach, no demand is necessary [McDonald v. Filice (1967) 252 CA2d 613, 623, 60 CR 832]. III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.18

22.18 Debtor's Failure to Perform Obligation in Manner Specified by Creditor Constitutes Breach of Contract.

If a creditor directs a debtor to perform an obligation in a particular manner, the debtor must perform in the specified manner in order to extinguish the obligation [CC § 1476]. This requirement applies specifically to the payment of debt, rather than all types of performance [see, e.g., Cornwell v. Bank of Am. (1990) 224 CA3d 995, 998, 999, 274 CR 322]. If performed in the specified manner, the obligation is extinguished, even if the creditor does not receive the benefit of performance [CC § 1476].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.19

22.19 Nonoccurrence of Condition Precedent May Give Rise to Breach.

22.19[1] Condition Precedent Is Occurrence of Event That Triggers Duty to Perform. A condition precedent is an uncertain event that must be performed, or must occur, before some right accrues or some act must be performed [CC §§ 1434, 1436]. The condition may be expressed in or implied by the contract [Sosin v. Richardson (1962) 210 CA2d 258, 264, 26 CR 610].

Example--Conditional Act:

A provision in an installment contract that requires all payments to be made at specified times before transfer of the title is a conditional act [see, e.g., Major-Blakeney Corp. v. Jenkins (1953) 121 CA2d 325, 331, 263 P2d 655]. The condition precedent is the act of making all payments at the specified times. The right that accrues is the right to obtain transfer of the title [see 22.12[6][a]].

Example--Conditional Event:

A provision in an employment contract that requires an employee to be on "active employment" on a certain date to be entitled to vacation is a conditional event [see, e.g., Division of Labor Law Enforcement v. Standard Coil Prods. Co. (1955) 136 CA2d Supp 919, 923, 288 P2d 637]. The conditional event is that the employee be on active employment on a certain date. The right that accrues is the right to take vacation [see 22.12[6][b]].

Jury Instructions:

Occurrence of Agreed Condition Precedent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 322 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Condition Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.30 (Matthew Bender).

Due Diligence in Seeking to Cause Condition Precedent to Occur, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.31 (Matthew Bender).

22.19[2] Plaintiff Has Burden to Show Occurrence of Condition Precedent. When a promisor's duty to perform is conditioned on the occurrence of an event, the promisee has the burden to prove the occurrence of the event [

Consolidated World Invs., Inc. v. Lido Preferred, Ltd. (1992) 9 CA4th 373, 380, 11 CR2d 524].

The promisee need not prove the occurrence of the event unless the promisor first comes forth with evidence that the condition did not occur. Further, when the existence of the condition is in dispute, the promisor has the burden to show the parties agreed to the condition [see Consolidated World Invs., Inc. v. Lido Preferred Ltd. (1992) 9 CA4th 373, 380, 11 CR2d 524].

Jury Instructions:

Occurrence of Agreed Condition Precedent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 322 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Existence of Condition Precedent Disputed, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 321 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

22.19[3] Defendant's Failure to Fulfill Promise to Perform Condition Precedent Is Ground for Breach.

When a party to the contract promises to make a condition precedent occur, the condition precedent is a covenant, the breach of which gives rise to an action for nonperformance [Kulawitz v. Pacific Woodenware & Paper Co. (1944) 25 C2d 664, 669, 155 P2d 24].

Example:

A commercial furniture store lease included a covenant that the lessor would not lease other space in the same building for another furniture store. The court held that this covenant was a condition precedent to the lessee's beneficial enjoyment of the property. The lessor's violation of the condition precedent resulted in a constructive eviction of the lessee, and relieved the lessee of the duty to make rental payments after the violation of the restrictive covenant [Kulawitz v. Pacific Woodenware & Paper Co. (1944) 25 C2d 664, 669, 670, 155 P2d 24].

Strategic Point--Both Parties:

Courts avoid, if possible, interpreting parts of contracts as conditions precedent, unless the terms are unambiguous and the intention of the parties clear [see Frankel v. Board of Dental Exam'rs (1996) 46 CA4th 534, 550, 54 CR2d 128]. In the absence of clarity, the court examines the whole document to determine the purpose and intention of the parties [Pacific Allied v. Century Steel Prods., Inc. (1958) 162 CA2d 70, 80, 327 P2d 547]. If the purpose and intention remain unclear, the court will interpret the provision as a covenant, rather than strictly a condition precedent, to avoid destroying all rights under the contract [Division of Labor Law Enforcement v. Ryan Aeronautical Co. (1951) 106 CA2d Supp 833, 836, 236 P2d 236 ; see RC Royal Development and Realty Corp. v. Standard Pacific Corp. (2009) 177 CA4th 1410, 1422, 100 CR3d 115 (language in real estate brokerage agreement referring to "escrow" set time in which commission was to be paid and did not make escrow a condition precedent to earning of commission itself)]. The party seeking enforcement or damages from breach therefore should argue that the condition is a covenant, or at a minimum is ambiguous. The opposing party must argue that both parties understood the provision as a condition precedent.

Jury Instructions:

Due Diligence in Seeking to Cause Condition Precedent to Occur, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.31 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Discussion of condition precedent as defense to breach of contract, see 22.66.

22.19[4] Defendant's Prevention of Happening of Condition Precedent Is Breach. A party who prevents or makes impossible the fulfillment of a condition precedent cannot claim to have been excused from performing, and cannot rely on the nonoccurrence of the condition to defeat liability [Jacobs v. Tenneco W., Inc. (1986) 186 CA3d 1413, 1418, 231 CR 351].

Example:

Buyers of agricultural land sued for specific performance for sale of the land. The sellers argued that approval by the seller's board of directors was a condition precedent to the sale, and that the board did not approve it. The court held that the seller's failure to submit the sale to the board barred the seller from using that condition precedent to preclude liability, absent proof that the board would not have approved the sale [Jacobs v. Tenneco W., Inc. (1986) 186 CA3d 1413, 1418-1419, 231 CR 351].

Warning--Defendant:

Excuse for nonperformance of a condition precedent is an affirmative defense, so that the burden of proof is on the party in breach [Jacobs v. Tenneco W., Inc. (1986) 186 CA3d 1413, 1417, 231 CR 351]. Accordingly, the defendant should plead excuse and marshal appropriate evidence to support this defense.

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
 III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.20

22.20 Defendant's Failure or Inability to Perform Condition Concurrent Is Ground for Breach.

22.20[1] Conditions Concurrent Must Be Tendered or Performed Concurrently. Conditions concurrent are conditions that are mutually dependent, and are to be performed at the same time [CC § 1437]. Tender of performance (that is, an offer of performance) by one party is sufficient to satisfy a condition concurrent [Diamond v. Huenergardt (1959) 175 CA2d 214, 220, 346 P2d 37].

Example:

In the sale of real property, the obligation of the buyer to put money in the escrow account and the obligation of the seller to deliver the deed into escrow are conditions concurrent [Diamond v. Huenergardt (1959) 175 CA2d 214, 220, 346 P2d 37].

Jury Instructions:

Condition Concurrent, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.32 (Matthew Bender).

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of tender of performance, see 22.08[3].

22.20[2] Defendant's Failure to Perform Condition Concurrent Is Ground for Breach. A party to a contract with conditions concurrent must be fully able to perform or tender performance to put the other party in default [Katemis v. Westerlind (1953) 120 CA2d 537, 546, 261 P2d 553]. Once a party fails to perform or tender performance of the other condition concurrent, the other party may put the first party in default if the other party is able to perform [Groobman v. Kirk (1958) 159 CA2d 117, 123, 126, 323 P2d 867].

Example:

A contract for the sale of land contained conditions concurrent to place funds and the deed in escrow. The buyer placed a part of the payment amount in escrow. A preliminary title report indicated that the property had a 10-year lease on it. When the buyer demanded that clear title be tendered and that the buyer was tendering the balance of the purchase price, the seller was unable to provide the deed. The court held that the buyer had the right to specific performance and damages for defect in title due to the seller's failure to perform on the buyer's tender of performance [Groobman v. Kirk (1958) 159 CA2d

117, 123, 323 P2d 867].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
 III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.21

22.21 Plaintiff May Sue for Breach When Plaintiff's Failure to Perform Is Excused, but Defendant's Nonperformance Is Not Excused.

22.21[1] Plaintiff's Performance Is Excused When Defendant Repudiates Contract. A party is excused from performing conditions and may sue for nonperformance if the other party to a contract notifies the first party of an intention not to perform, and does not retract the notice of repudiation before the time performance is due [CC § 1440]. Under these circumstances, the party to whom notice was given may sue for nonperformance without having previously performed or offered to perform any conditions [CC § 1440; see Tatum v. Ackerman (1905) 148 C 357, 360, 83 P 151].

Jury Instructions:

Notice of Refusal or Inability to Perform, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.72 (Matthew Bender).

Warning:

The repudiating party may retract the notice before the time performance is due [CC § 1440]. If a retraction is made, the other party is no longer excused from performance and must proceed under the contract.

Cross Reference:

Discussion of anticipatory repudiation, see 22.23.

22.21[2] Plaintiff May Sue When Nonperformed Condition Was Solely for Plaintiff's Benefit. If a condition is included in a contract that is solely for the benefit of one party and that party attempts in good faith to perform the condition, that party may waive the condition and sue for nonperformance by the opposing party [Crescenta Valley Moose Lodge v. Bunt (1970) 8 CA3d 682, 687, 87 CR 428].

Example:

A buyer contracted to purchase real property, fixtures, and a liquor license from a seller. The buyer's state application for transfer of the liquor license was denied. The court held that the buyer could sue, because the condition was solely for the buyer's benefit and the buyer therefore could waive this condition [O'Connell v. Zimmerman (1958) 157 CA2d 330, 336, 321 P2d 161].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

Whether a condition is solely for the benefit of one party is a question of fact [Crescenta Valley Moose Lodge v. Bunt (1970) 8 CA3d 682, 687, 87 CR 428]. Any slight benefit to the defendant from the condition prevents the plaintiff from waiving the condition.

22.21[3] Plaintiff May Sue When Defendant Waives Condition Precedent. A party is excused from performing a condition precedent included for the benefit of the opposing party when the opposing party waives the need for its performance [Kellogg v. Snell (1928) 93 CA 717, 721, 270 P 232]. A party therefore may sue even when that party fails to perform a condition precedent if the other party waives that requirement.

The plaintiff bears the burden of proof in establishing defendant's waiver of the condition precedent [Roseleaf Corp. v. Radis (1953) 122 CA2d 196, 206, 264 P2d 964].

Example:

A buyer agreed to purchase shares of stock in a bank in exchange for the bank's agreement to hire him as a cashier or manager. The contract allowed the parties to sever the buyer's employment on condition that the buyer provide 60 days written notice. The bank hired the buyer as a teller, but failed to offer him a job as a cashier or manager. The buyer left after giving five days notice, and the bank's president expressly waived the requirement that the buyer stay with the bank for the full 60 days. The court held that the president's waiver of this condition precluded him from asserting that the buyer failed to fulfill the conditions of the contract, and allowed the buyer's recovery on the contract [Kellogg v. Snell (1928) 93 CA 717, 719-721, 270 P 232].

Warning:

A party may retract a waiver before the other party materially changes his or her position in reliance on it [see Tas-T-Nut Co. v. Continental Nut Co. (1954) 125 CA2d 351, 358, 270 P2d 43 (plaintiff's failure to bring suit during period following defendant's waiver of right to arbitrate permitted defendant to retract waiver and insist on arbitration)].

III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.22

22.22 Plaintiff May Establish Breach by Nonperformance When Performance Was Only Temporarily Impossible or Unlawful.

When the obligations due under a contract are temporarily rendered impossible or unlawful, the obligations are generally suspended during the period of impossibility or legal prohibition, and are reinstated following that period [Bergin v. van der Steen (1951) 107 CA2d 8, 16, 236 P2d 613 (operation of concession stand suspended during period of war)]. Failure to perform following termination of period of impossibility or legal prohibition thereafter may result in breach by nonperformance.

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
III. ESTABLISHING NONPERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.23

22.23 Plaintiff May Sue Based on Defendant's Anticipatory Breach.

22.23[1] Plaintiff Must Show Definite and Unconditional Repudiation of Contract Before Performance Is Due.

22.23[1][a] Anticipatory Breach Occurs Before Time Performance Is Due. Anticipatory breach is the repudiation of a bilateral contract before the time performance is due [Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 29, 142 P2d 22]. There can be no anticipatory breach of a unilateral contract [Harris v. Time, Inc. (1987) 191 CA3d 449, 457, 237 CR 584]. Nor may a party anticipate the breach of a contract made unilateral by one party's complete performance [Maudlin v. Pac. Decision Scis. Corp. (2006) 137 CA4th 1001, 1018, 40 CR3d 724] .

Jury Instructions:

Clear and Definite Notice, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.76 (Matthew Bender).

Refusal in Advance to Accept Offer of Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.74 (Matthew Bender).

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of anticipatory breach in sale of goods, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 28.45.

22.23[1][b] Repudiation May Be Express. The anticipatory repudiation may be an express statement that the party will not or cannot substantially perform the obligations under the contract [Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 29, 142 P2d 22]. The repudiation must be a clear, positive, and unequivocal refusal to perform [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 C3d 130, 137, 123 CR 641, 539 P2d 425].

Examples:

- A landowner entered a joint venture agreement with the defendant to develop his land. A year later, after the defendant expended resources to develop the land, the landowner notified the defendant that he was rescinding the agreement, and his estate sued to quiet title against claims by the defendant. The court held that the owner's notice of rescission and the following suit constituted a repudiation of the contract [Mayo v. Pacific Project Consultants, Inc. (1969) 1 CA3d 1013, 1017, 82 CR 117].

■ A construction company entered into an agreement with the defendant for construction work. Several months after the construction company began work on the project, the defendant informed the construction company that it had no ability or intent to make any more payments on the contract. This communication demonstrated anticipatory breach [Howard S. Wright Constr. Co. v. BBIC Investors, LLC (2006) 136 CA4th 228, 243, 38 CR3d 769] .

Jury Instructions:

Anticipatory Breach, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 324 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Clear and Definite Notice, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.76 (Matthew Bender).

22.23[1][c] Repudiation May Be Implied. The anticipatory repudiation may be implied when the promisor voluntarily puts the ability to perform out of its power so as to make substantial performance impossible [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 C3d 130, 137, 123 CR 641, 539 P2d 425].

Example--Implied Repudiation:

A partnership issued a promissory note to a creditor. Before the note was due, the partners liquidated the business without going through bankruptcy, and the funds were paid to other creditors. The court held that the liquidation was voluntary, resulted in the partnership's inability to perform the contract, and rendered the duty to perform the obligations under the contract absolute [Zogarts v. Smith (1948) 86 CA2d 165, 172, 194 P2d 143].

Example--No Implied Repudiation:

A contract to breed the plaintiff's horses was not repudiated by conduct when postponing the date for breeding made the contract difficult, but not impossible, to perform [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 C3d 130, 139, 123 CR 641, 539 P2d 425].

Jury Instructions:

Anticipatory Breach, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 324 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Implied Repudiation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.77 (Matthew Bender).

22.23[1][d] Notice of Repudiation Excuses Plaintiff From Further Performance Unless Repudiation Is Retracted. A party who has received notice of repudiation is excused from further performance unless the repudiation is retracted [CC § 1440; Guerrieri v. Severini (1958) 51 C2d 12, 18-19, 330 P2d 635].

Example:

Wife unequivocally repudiated postmarital agreement when she stated in her petition for dissolution and her verified responses to interrogatories that the agreement was void and unenforceable. As a result, the husband was excused from making any further payment under the agreement [In re Marriage of Burkle (2006) 139 CA4th 712, 749-751, 43 CR3d 181] .

Jury Instructions:

Performance Excused by Material Breach, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.78 (Matthew Bender).

22.23[1][e] Repudiation Is Question of Fact. Whether a party has repudiated a contract ordinarily is a question of fact and intent, which must be separately determined in each case [Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 28, 142 P2d 22].

Distinguish:

A notice of rescission establishes rescission of the contract as a matter of law. Evidence of a subsequent act designed to prevent performance on the contract constitutes a factual basis to establish repudiation [Mayo v. Pacific Project Consultants, Inc. (1969) 1 CA3d 1013, 1017, 82 CR 117].

 Cross References:

Discussion of rescission, see Ch. 8, Seeking or Opposing Equitable Remedies in Contract Actions.

Discussion of rescission of sale of goods contract, see Ch. 26, Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code.

22.23[2] Plaintiff May Sue for Breach Immediately on Receiving Notice of Anticipatory Breach. On receipt of a notice of repudiation, the plaintiff may sue for breach immediately, even if the plaintiff has not yet performed [CC § 1440; Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 CA2d 283, 287, 39 CR 443].

22.23[3] Plaintiff May Ignore Repudiation and Wait to Sue Until Promised Performance Is Due. A party who has received notice of an anticipatory breach may ignore a notice of repudiation and wait until the time for performance is due before bringing suit [April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 CA3d 805, 824 n10, 195 CR 421].

The injured party retains the right to treat a repudiation as an anticipatory breach until the repudiation is nullified. A repudiation is nullified if the injured party disregards the repudiation and treats the contract as still in force, and the repudiation is retracted prior to the time of performance [Central Valley General Hospital v. Smith (2008) 162 CA4th 501, 517, 75 CR3d 771].

Jury Instructions:

Waiver of Right to Treat Breach as Repudiation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.26 (Matthew Bender).

22.23[4] If Defendant Retracted Repudiation Before Defendant's Performance Is Due, Plaintiff Must Show Detrimental Change in Position Due to Repudiation. A repudiating party may retract the repudiation before the time for performance is due. If a repudiation is retracted, the plaintiff can obtain relief for breach only on a showing that the plaintiff's position was detrimentally changed in reliance on the repudiation [Guerrieri v. Severini (1958) 51 C2d 12, 19, 330 P2d 635 ; see 22.23[4] (plaintiff may wait until performance is due to sue, or see if defendant retracts repudiation and performs)].

Jury Instructions:

Change of Position Based on Notice of Refusal to Perform, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.75 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of repudiation in sale of goods, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code.

22.23[5] Repudiation Does Not Alter Statute of Limitations. Even when a party commits an anticipatory breach, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until the time performance is due under the contract [Ross v. Tabor (1921) 53 CA 605, 613, 200 P 971]. However, the statute of limitations is tolled following the giving of a notice of anticipatory breach until the time performance is due [April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 CA3d 805, 824 n10, 195 CR 421].

IV. DETERMINING MATERIALITY OF BREACH

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.24

22.24 CHECKLIST: Determining Materiality of Breach.

☐ Determine if partial breach is a material breach based on following considerations:

- ☐ What benefit, if any, nonbreaching party actually received.
- ☐ Whether nonbreaching party can be adequately compensated in damages for lack of complete performance.
- ☐ Whether party in breach has failed to perform or made preparations for performing.
- ☐ Any hardship on party failing to perform, if court terminates contract.
- ☐ Willful, negligent, or innocent behavior of party failing to perform.
- ☐ Likelihood that breaching party will perform remainder of contract.
- ☐ Timing of breach.

Authority:

Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 CA2d 220, 229, 56 CR 435

Discussion:

See 22.29[1]

☐ Determine whether slight breach is a material breach based on following considerations:

- ☐ Slight breach at outset of contract is more likely to be total.

Authority:

Discussion:

See 22.29[2]

- ☐ Slight breach that follows considerable performance and does not go to the root of contract is likely not to be material.

Authority:

Karz v. Department of Prof'l & Vocational Standards (1936) 11 CA2d 554, 557, 54 P2d 35

IV. DETERMINING MATERIALITY OF BREACH

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.25

22.25 Options and Strategies.

Whether a breach is material determines the type and extent of recovery to which the nonbreaching party is entitled. If the breach is material, the nonbreaching party may elect to sue for a variety of remedies, including damages [CC § 3300], depending on the circumstances.

If a breach is partial, the nonbreaching party must consider whether the breach is sufficiently important or serious to be considered a material breach [see Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 CA2d 594, 601-602, 78 CR 302]. In making this determination, the nonbreaching party should consider the nature of the relationship with the breaching party, and whether attempts to continue performance under the contract may be preferable to immediate termination. Even if a breach is not material, a nonbreaching party still may seek damages to compensate for the effects of the partial breach. However, in this instance the nonbreaching party must establish his or her own performance before seeking damages for the partial breach [see CC § 3300; see also Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 241].

22.26 Mechanics of Material Breach.

The total failure to perform under a contract constitutes a failure of consideration, and automatically makes the nonbreaching party eligible for the full range of remedies available for breach of contract. When a party only partially performed, the failure to fully perform may still be material if the breach is sufficiently important to the main object of the contract and indicates a probability that the nonbreaching party is unlikely to obtain substantial performance [see Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 26-27, 142 P2d 22 ; Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 CA2d 594, 601-602, 78 CR 302].

22.27 Breach Must Be Total to Constitute Material Breach.

To constitute a material breach, the breach must be considered total. A total breach may result from an anticipatory breach before any performance was made, or a partial breach in conjunction with repudiation [see Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 29, 142 P2d 22].

Whether a breach is material is primarily a question of fact to be determined from all the facts and circumstances in evidence [Associated Lathing & Plastering Co. v. Louis C. Dunn, Inc. (1955) 135 CA2d 40, 49, 286 P2d 825].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IV. DETERMINING MATERIALITY OF BREACH

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.29

22.29 Importance or Seriousness of Breach Determines Materiality.

22.29[1] Court Considers Circumstances of Breach in Determining Whether It Is Material. To determine whether a breach is material, a court considers the following factors [Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 CA2d 220, 229, 56 CR 435]:

- Whether the aggrieved party will obtain the substantial benefit that could reasonably be anticipated from the bargain.
- Whether the aggrieved party can be adequately compensated by damages for the lack of complete performance.
- Whether the party in breach failed to perform or made preparations for performing.
- The hardship on the party failing to perform if the court terminates the contract.
- The willful, negligent, or innocent behavior of the party failing to perform.
- The degree of certainty that the breaching party will perform the remainder of the contract.
- The timing of the breach; a slight breach at the outset is more likely to justify termination than a similar breach later in performance, which may be insubstantial.

Jury Instructions:

Substantial Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.02 (Matthew Bender).

► Cross References:

Form for memorandum supporting materiality of breach, see 22.78.

22.29[2] Slight Breach at Outset May Be Material Breach. If a party breaches a contract slightly at the outset of performance, a court may determine that the breach is material. This determination will be made if the court determines that the breach indicates that the party in breach is likely to breach other obligations during the course of the contract [Associated Lathing & Plastering Co. v. Louis C. Dunn, Inc. (1955) 135 CA2d 40, 50, 286 P2d 825].

Example:

A subcontractor contracted with a general contractor to provide lathing and plastering for the construction of a hospital. The general contractor had problems with the subcontractor from the outset, including obtaining the subcontractor's signature on the contract, obtaining pricing and federally required information from the subcontractor, and getting the subcontractor to install wire hangers. The court held that the general contractor was not required to endure the uncertainty of the subcontractor's performance and was justified in treating the initial nonperformance as a total breach [Associated Lathing & Plastering Co. v. Louis C. Dunn, Inc. (1955) 135 CA2d 40, 42-43, 51, 286 P2d 825].

22.29[3] Slight Breach After Considerable Performance That Does Not Materially Impact Contract Is Not Material. Once considerable performance has been made, a slight breach that does not go to the root of the contract is not material [Karz v. Department of Prof'l & Vocational Standards (1936) 11 CA2d 554, 557, 54 P2d 35].

22.29[4] Partial Breach Combined With Repudiation Is Material Breach. A party who has partially performed, but then repudiates the contract, is in total breach of the contract [Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 29, 142 P2d 22].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
V. ESTABLISHING PARTIAL BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.31

22.31 Failure to Fully Perform Indivisible Obligation Is Partial Breach of Contract.

Any failure to perform a duty under a contract when it is due is a breach [Linden Partners v. Wilshire Linden Assocs. (1998) 62 CA4th 508, 531, 73 CR2d 708]. When a promisor performs part of an indivisible obligation, a corresponding part of the obligation is extinguished if the promisee voluntarily retains the benefit of the performance [CC § 1477]. The failure to perform the remaining part of the obligation is a partial breach [see Linden Partners v. Wilshire Linden Assocs. (1998) 62 CA4th 508, 531, 73 CR2d 708].

An obligation is "indivisible" when the acts to be performed are connected, and the thing to be accomplished under the contract is an entirety [Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 30, 142 P2d 22].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

When a promisor performs part of an indivisible obligation, but the promisee does not voluntarily accept the performance, no part of the obligation to perform is extinguished [see CC § 1477]. The nonbreaching party then may sue for nonperformance.

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
V. ESTABLISHING PARTIAL BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.32

22.32 Injured Party May Treat Total Breach As Partial.

Unless the breaching party repudiates the contract, the nonbreaching party can treat a breach of an indivisible obligation as a partial breach [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 C2d 587, 598-599, 262 P2d 305]. Similarly, if the injured party to a bilateral contract has fully performed, the court is likely to treat the breach as partial unless it appears that performance of the obligation is unlikely and the injured party may only be protected by recovery for full value of the promise [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 C2d 587, 599, 262 P2d 305].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

In deciding whether to seek relief for total or partial breach, plaintiffs must balance their need to mitigate, their desire to get as much performance as possible from the defendant, and their inclination to rid themselves of a breaching defendant and move on. This will be determined individually under the particular facts of each case.

If the nonbreaching party treats the breach as partial, the contract remains in force, and the party in breach remains obligated to perform the remaining obligations under the contract [see McCowen v. Pew (1905) 147 C 299, 304, 81 P 958 (party may seek specific performance for unperformed part of contract and seek damages for other part of same contract that had been partially breached)]. The plaintiff must determine whether additional performance is likely. If not, remedies for total breach may be justified and desirable.

22.33 Injured Party Need Not Wait Indefinitely for Unfinished Performance.

Because a contract remains in effect after a partial breach, the injured party can continue to urge performance. After a reasonable period of time, if further performance is not forthcoming, the injured party can treat a partial breach as a total breach, even in the absence of repudiation [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 C2d 587, 599-600, 262 P2d 305].

22.34 Plaintiff May Recover Damages for Defendant's Partial, Nonmaterial Breach.

A party may recover the amount that will compensate that party for all the detriment proximately caused by a partial, nonmaterial breach [see CC § 3300]. A plaintiff seeking recovery for partial breach may recover only for damages incurred up to the time of trial. No recovery is available for future nonperformance [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 C2d 587, 598, 262 P2d 305].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
V. ESTABLISHING PARTIAL BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.35

22.35 Partial Performance of Severable Contract Does Not Bar Action for Defendant's Breach of Severable Part.

22.35[1] Contract With Separate Consideration for Separate Obligations Is Severable. If a contract, by its terms, is divided into multiple parts, so that the number of parts due from each party is the same and the performance of each part by one party is the agreed exchange for a corresponding part by the other party, the contract is severable [Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 C2d 87, 91-92, 60 CR 225, 429 P2d 577].

Consider:

In terms of analysis, it is helpful to think of a severable contract as separate, non-integrated contracts. Each part must be analyzed on its own terms, and the remedies (except the right to offset) applicable to one part of the severable contract are independent of the remedies applicable to the other parts.

Example--Severable Contract:

Landowners contracted with a construction company to perform excavation, grading, and street improvement within a subdivision. The contract provided a computational method to determine payment for street improvements, but excluded payment for grading from that computation. The contract then provided payment for grading in a lump sum. The court held that this was a severable contract [see Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 C2d 87, 91-92, 60 CR 225, 429 P2d 577].

The fact that payments are made in installments does not of itself mean that a contract is severable [Jozovich v. Central Cal. Berry Growers Ass'n (1960) 183 CA2d 216, 223-224, 6 CR 617]. If a contract contains multiple performances that are interrelated, a material breach of one part is a material breach of the entire contract [Jozovich v. Central Cal. Berry Growers Ass'n (1960) 183 CA2d 216, 224, 6 CR 617].

Example--Entire Contract:

A manufacturer's contract with a company to make improvements to a machine it built called for installment payments during the time improvements were to be made. The court rejected severability of the contract, noting that the parties did not equate two partial payments with the installation of particular parts, and that the parties bargained for the performance of the whole mechanism [Jozovich v. Central Cal. Berry Growers Ass'n (1960) 183 CA2d 216, 222, 6 CR 617].

Jury Instructions:

Waiver of Timely Payments, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.22 (Matthew Bender).

Waiver of Right to Installment Payment on Indivisible Contract, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.09 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of contract interpretation to determine severability, see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract.

22.35[2] Plaintiff May Recover for Partial Performance of Severable Part of Contract. When a contract is severable, a party who partially performs a severable part may recover for the corresponding unperformed obligation even if that party fails to perform the other severable parts [Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 C2d 87, 92, 60 CR 225, 429 P2d 577].

Example:

In a severable construction contract, the construction company delivered substantial performance of excavation and grading, but failed to perform the severable promise of making street improvements. The court held that the construction company was entitled to recover for the substantial performance of the grading, even though it had breached the severable part of the contract for street improvement [Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 C2d 87, 92, 60 CR 225, 429 P2d 577].

Discussion of substantial performance, see 22.08[2], 22.37[1], 22.69.

22.35[3] Party Who Induced Part of Divisible Contract by Fraud May Not Enforce Any Part of Contract. When one party has defrauded another party into entering a part of a divisible contract by fraud, the inducing party may not enforce any part of the contract--even parts not so induced [Filet Menu, Inc. v. C.C.L. & G., Inc. (2000) 79 CA4th 852, 861, 94 CR2d 438].

VI. ESTABLISHING BREACH DUE TO PERFORMANCE NOT IN ACCORD WITH CONTRACT TERMS

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.36

22.36 CHECKLIST: Establishing Breach Due to Performance Not in Accord With Contract Terms.

☐ Determine whether defendant substantially performed obligation, based on following considerations [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 C 285, 290, 197 P 105]:

☐ Variance of defendant's performance from contract specifications either:

☐ Does not impair object of contract; or

☐ Is so slight as not to impair value of object of contract.

☐ Object of contract can be used for its intended purpose.

☐ Defendant acted in good faith to do what was required.

Authority:

Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 C 285, 290, 197 P 105

Discussion:

Discussion:

See 22.38

- ☐ If defendant failed to perform at location specified by contract, calculate resulting damages, if any.

Authority:

Blumer v. Kirkman Corp. (1952) 38 C2d 480, 485, 241 P2d 17

Discussion:

See 22.39

- ☐ Determine if defendant's performance is defective due to failure to satisfy implicit duty.

Authority:

Jonathan Neil & Assoc., Inc. v. Jones (2004) 33 C4th 917, 937

Discussion:

See 22.40

- ☐ If contract provided for alternative performances:

- ☐ Determine if defendant notified plaintiff of which one of alternative performances defendant intended to perform.

Authority:

CC § 1448

Discussion:

See 22.41[2]

- ☐ If defendant failed to notify plaintiff of alternatives, determine if plaintiff selected an alternative performance.

Authority:

CC § 1449

Discussion:

See 22.41[2]

- ☐ Determine whether any alternatives are unlawful or otherwise unenforceable.

Authority:

CC § 1451

Discussion:

See 22.41[3]

☐ Determine whether defendant fully performed alternative that was selected or that remained enforceable.

Authority:

VI. ESTABLISHING BREACH DUE TO PERFORMANCE NOT IN ACCORD WITH CONTRACT TERMS

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.37

22.37 Plaintiff May Recover If Defendant's Performance Was Substantial but Not in Strict Compliance With Contract Terms.

22.37[1] Substantial Performance Occurs When Variance From Specifications Is Minimal and Object of Contract Is Achieved. A defendant "substantially performs" when [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 C 285, 290, 197 P 105]:

- The variance from the contract specifications is minimal;
- The variance does not impair the object of the contract; and
- The object can be used for its intended purpose.

The omission in performance must be so slight that it will not impair the value of the object of the contract, and the defendant acted in good faith to do all that was required [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 C 285, 290, 197 P 105].

Substantial Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.02 (Matthew Bender).

VI. ESTABLISHING BREACH DUE TO PERFORMANCE NOT IN ACCORD WITH CONTRACT TERMS

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.38

22.38 Improper Termination, Cancellation, or Rescission Constitutes Breach.

A contract may be properly terminated, canceled, or rescinded in accordance with contract terms, governing statutes, or subsequent agreement [see Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Founders' Ins. Co. (1962) 209 CA2d 157, 168, 25 CR 753]. However, failure to follow the relevant contractual terms, statutes, or subsequent agreement results in a breach of the contract [see JRS Prods., Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. of Am. (2004) 115 CA4th 168, 173, 177-178].

Example--Breach of Implied Contractual Term:

A franchisor and franchisee entered into a contract that could be terminated without cause on 90 days' written notice. The franchisor gave a 90-day written notice without good cause and without opportunity to cure. The California Franchise Relations Act forbids termination of a franchise agreement without good cause and without an opportunity to cure. The court held that the contract term conflicting with the statute was void, that the statutory requirements applied to the contract, and that the franchisor's failure to terminate the contract in accordance with those terms gave rise to a claim for breach of contract [JRS Prods., Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. of Am. (2004) 115 CA4th 168, 173, 177-178].

VI. ESTABLISHING BREACH DUE TO PERFORMANCE NOT IN ACCORD WITH CONTRACT TERMS

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.39

22.39 Defendant's Performance in Different Location May Constitute Breach.

A contract may specify, expressly or implicitly, the location where performance must be made. If the defendant performs in a different location, the plaintiff may establish breach [Blumer v. Kirkman Corp. (1952) 38 C2d 480, 485, 241 P2d 17]. When a contract is silent on the location for performance, the place for performance is the location of the creditor or the creditor's place of business [see CC §§ 1488, 1489].

Strategic Point:

Place of performance issues often arise in the context of whether venue is proper for the filing of the complaint [see Blumer v. Kirkman Corp. (1952) 38 C2d 480, 482, 241 P2d 17 ; Burr v. Western States Life Ins. Co. (1931) 211 C 568, 576, 296 P 273]. Plaintiff's counsel should review the contract and relevant venue statutes to determine the appropriate place for filing. Defense counsel should do the same to determine whether a motion for change of venue is appropriate.

Jury Instructions:

Place of Offer, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.56 (Matthew Bender).

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract

VI. ESTABLISHING BREACH DUE TO PERFORMANCE NOT IN ACCORD WITH CONTRACT TERMS

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.40

22.40 Plaintiff May Establish Breach for Defective Performance Based on Implicit Duty.

Every contract contains implied duties, such as the covenant of good faith and fair dealings [see, e.g., Jonathan Neil & Assoc., Inc. v. Jones (2004) 33 C4th 917, 937]. Breach of this implied duty gives rise to contract damages [Jonathan Neil & Assoc., Inc. v. Jones (2004) 33 C4th 917, 937].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

Breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing typically is made as a back-up argument to plain-vanilla breach of contract claims, especially when the contract in dispute is vague, so that technical breach under the letter of the contract is less than obvious.

Jury Instructions:

Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing--Essential Factual Elements, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 325 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract

VI. ESTABLISHING BREACH DUE TO PERFORMANCE NOT IN ACCORD WITH CONTRACT TERMS

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.41

22.41 If Contract Provides for Alternative Means of Performance, Defendant's Failure to Perform Alternative Constitutes Breach.

22.41[1] Failure to Perform Entire Alternative Constitutes Breach. A contract may provide that a party must perform only one of various acts. Once the party selects an alternative, the promisor must fully perform that alternative, and not perform parts of more than one alternative without the consent of the other party [CC § 1450]. Unsatisfactory performance of one alternative does not satisfy performance, and the promisee may recover on an alternative obligation [Conner v. Conner (1999) 76 CA4th 646, 651, 90 CR2d 687].

Example:

Two brothers owned stock in a business. One brother purchased shares in the business from the other brother by way of a promissory note executed by the business, secured by the purchasing brother's personal guarantee. The business filed for bankruptcy, and sought to satisfy the promissory note through the bankruptcy court. The selling brother rejected the alternative offered through the bankruptcy court, insisting on satisfaction of the personal guarantee. The court ruled in favor of the selling brother, holding that he was entitled to the alternative to recover the guaranteed amount from the guarantor [Conner v. Conner (1999) 76 CA4th 646, 652, 90 CR2d 687].

Distinguish:

If the selling owner had accepted the manner of performance determined by the bankruptcy court, he could not later seek enforcement of the personal guarantee [see Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 C2d 81, 89, 65 CR 158, 436 P2d 70]. This is because the principal would have performed the obligation, and the surety would then be exonerated [see CC § 2839].

Strategic Point:

This type of claim is difficult to bring as a stand-alone claim. Typically it is alleged as a backup claim.

Jury Instructions:

Performance of Alternative Duty, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.06 (Matthew Bender).

22.41[2] Defendant's Failure to Give Timely Notice of Selection of Alternative Performance Gives Plaintiff Right to Make Selection. Unless the contract dictates which alternative must be performed, the party required to perform has the right of selection [CC § 1448]. If that party fails to give notice within the time specified in the contract or, if no time is specified before the performance is due, the other party has the right to make the selection [CC § 1449].

Jury Instructions:

Performing Party's Right to Select Alternative Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.04 (Matthew Bender).

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.43

22.43 Failure to Perform at Time Specified in Contract Is Breach.

When a contract specifies a time for performance, that time normally is the expected time of performance, and failure to perform within that time is technically a breach [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 C3d 130, 137, 123 CR 641, 539 P2d 425]. However, delay in performance generally is a material breach only if "time is of the essence" of the contract [Johnson v. Alexander (1976) 63 CA3d 806, 813, 134 CR 101 ; see 22.50]. A material breach also occurs if the harm from the delay cannot be compensated [see CC § 1492; Becker v. Becker (1950) 36 C2d 324, 326-327, 223 P2d 479 ; see 22.49].

22.44 Party Can Waive Timeliness Requirement.

Whether the timeliness requirement is implied by law or contained explicitly in the contract, a party can waive this requirement by words or conduct [Galdjie v. Darwish (2003) 113 CA4th 1331, 1339].

Example--Waiver by Conduct:

A real estate contract included a "time is of the essence" clause, which required closing by a specific date on the satisfaction of certain conditions, including obtaining financing. The purchaser was unable to obtain financing by the closing date, but the agent for the seller continued to assist the seller in finding financing after the closing date. The court held that the seller's assistance constituted a waiver of the timeliness requirement [Galdjie v. Darwish (2003) 113 CA4th 1331, 1341].

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.45

22.45 Breach Generally Occurs at Time Performance Is Due.

When performance has not been tendered or delivered at the time the performance is due, an actual breach occurs at that time [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 C3d 130, 137, 123 CR 641, 539 P2d 425].

Distinguish:

An actual breach occurs at the time performance is due, and not rendered, whereas an anticipatory breach occurs before performance is due, communicated by the breaching party or implied by conduct [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 C3d 130, 137, 123 CR 641, 539 P2d 425 ; see 22.23[1]].

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.47

22.47 "Reasonable" Amount of Time Is Question Fact When Facts Are Disputed.

The amount of time that is reasonable is a question of fact that depends on the situation of the parties, the nature of the transaction, and the facts of the particular case [Sawday v. Vista Irrigation Dist. (1966) 64 C2d 833, 836, 52 CR 1, 415 P2d 816].

Example--Reasonable Time:

A buyer contracted to purchase an exotic sports car from a dealer under a contract that contained no specified date for delivery. When the car was not delivered several weeks after the contract was executed, the buyer tried to rescind. The car was eventually delivered six months after the contract was executed. In holding that six months was a reasonable time for delivery, the court considered the facts that the car manufacturer was a small firm with limited production and distribution capabilities, that it had its own manner of doing things, and that the buyer and dealer had negotiated for two and a half years before execution of the contract [see Eidsmore v. RBB, Inc. (1994) 25 CA4th 189, 198, 30 CR2d 357].

Exception--Undisputed Facts:

When the facts are not in dispute, the court may determine the amount of time that is reasonable as a matter of law [Jozovich v. Central Cal. Berry Growers Ass'n (1960) 183 CA2d 216, 228, 6 CR 617].

Consider:

What constitutes a "reasonable amount of time" may be different from industry to industry and place to place. Parties asserting unconventional definitions of "reasonable" should be prepared to supply expert testimony to support their assertions.

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.48

22.48 Payment of Money Normally Must Be Made Immediately.

22.48[1] Absent Specified Time in Contract, Payment Is Due Immediately. When a contract is silent as to the time for performance, and is capable of being performed instantly, such as for payment of money, the performance must be done immediately on ascertaining the exact amount due [see CC § 1657; Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 C4th 344, 351, 86 CR3d 366, 197 P3d 177] .

Exception:

The general rule regarding immediate payment of money does not apply when the contract allows the debtor to pay "when able." Under these circumstances, performance is not "capable of being done instantly" because the obligor is not necessarily able to pay immediately [see Van Buskirk v. Kuhns (1913) 164 C 472, 474, 129 P 587] .

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of time for payment in contract for sale of goods, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code.

22.48[2] Contract Requiring Immediate Payment Permits Reasonable Time for Processing Payment. When a contract requires payment "immediately," the contract necessarily allows a reasonable time to process the payment [Integrated, Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Elec. Contractor (1967) 250 CA2d 287, 295, 58 CR 503] .

22.48[3] Statutory Extension for Holidays. Generally, if an act to be performed under a contract falls due on a holiday, the obligor may perform on the next business day without being untimely [CC § 11]. This statutory extension applies only to acts of a secular nature and those that are "other than a work of necessity or mercy" [CC § 11]. Holidays subject to this statute include Sundays and holidays specified in the Government Code [see CC § 7]. Optional bank holidays normally do not permit the extension of time to perform under a contract [CC § 9].

22.48[4] Statutory Exceptions May Alter Terms of Obligations. State and federal laws may allow judicial and administrative agencies to stay civil liability proceedings, including contract actions, particularly as to people on active military duty [see, e.g., 50 USC app § 501 et seq. (Servicemembers Civil Relief Act); M&V Code § 400 et seq.].

Be sure to check the applicable statutes in relevant cases.

22.49 Delayed Performance May Cause Material Breach When Harm From Delay Cannot Be Compensated.

When the contract is silent as to time, the plaintiff may establish that delayed performance is a material breach on a showing that the harm from the delay cannot be fully compensated [see CC § 1492; Becker v. Becker (1950) 36 C2d 324, 326-327, 223 P2d 479].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
VII. ESTABLISHING TIMELINESS OF PERFORMANCE

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.50

22.50 Delayed Performance Is Material Breach When Contract Explicitly Provides "Time Is of the Essence."

A delay in performance normally constitutes a material breach when the contract provides that "time is of the essence"; that is, by the express language of the contract or by its very nature, prompt performance is a vital matter [Johnson v. Alexander (1976) 63 CA3d 806, 813, 134 CR 101].

Example:

Time is normally of the essence in an option contract [see Holiday Inns of Am., Inc. v. Knight (1969) 70 C2d 327, 330, 74 CR 722, 450 P2d 42].

Jury Instructions:

Time for Performance: Time Is of the Essence, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.34 (Matthew Bender).

Time is not of the essence of a contract unless it is so declared [Baypoint Mortgage Corp. v. Crest Premium Real Estate Invs. Ret. Trust (1985) 168 CA3d 818, 825-826, 214 CR 531], or unless it clearly appears from the terms of the contract, in the light of all the circumstances, that it was the intention of the parties [Henck v. Lake Hemet Water Co. (1937) 9 C2d 136, 143, 69 P2d 849].

Strategic Point:

Parties can elevate the materiality of otherwise trivial or at least secondary concerns--such as timing--by stipulating to their importance. A defendant who has so stipulated that time is of the essence, then performs late, would seem to be contractually estopped from arguing that timing was immaterial.

One case has held that a "time is of the essence" clause is not definitive on whether delayed performance is a material breach, but that the inclusion of this clause highly suggests that such conduct is a material breach [see Nash v. Superior Court (1978) 86 CA3d 690, 696-697, 150 CR 394 , overruled on other grounds, Malcolm v. Superior Court (1981) 29 C3d 518, 528, 174 CR 694, 629 P2d 495]. Nash requires a determination of the intent of the parties based on what is expressly said and on the surrounding circumstances [Nash v. Superior Court (1978) 86 CA3d 690, 696, 150 CR 394 , overruled on other grounds, Malcolm v. Superior Court (1981) 29 C3d 518, 528, 174 CR 694, 629 P2d 495].

Example:

Buyers failed to deposit funds into escrow by the date provided in an executory contract for the sale of land. The sellers agreed to extend the date for the deposit until a specified date, expressly providing that the failure to make the deposit by that date would terminate the buyer's right to purchase. The court determined that the parties made a binding agreement that the right to purchase would terminate if the payment was not made by the time indicated [Nash v. Superior Court (1978) 86 CA3d 690, 697-698, 150 CR 394 , overruled on other grounds, Malcolm v. Superior Court (1981) 29 C3d 518, 528, 174 CR 694, 629 P2d 495].

Exception--Installment Land Sale Contract:

A buyer made several installment payments for the purchase of land pursuant to a contract that contained a "time is of the essence" clause. The buyer then refused to make additional payments, claiming she was owed credit for the removal of natural resources from the land. The court held that this type of contract is the functional equivalent of a security device to which the law provides an opportunity to cure, notwithstanding that the cure is tardy [MacFadden v. Walker (1971) 5 C3d 809, 816, 97 CR 537, 488 P2d 1353].

VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.52

22.52 Elements of Improper Assignment.

The transfer of a thing in action or an obligee's right is brought about by an assignment (from the assignor to the assignee), which is governed by contract law if consideration is involved [Commercial Disc. Co. v. Cowen (1941) 18 C2d 610, 614, 116 P2d 599 ; see 22.53]. Some contracts may not be assigned either because of a contractual or legal prohibition of assignment of rights. If a party assigns the rights notwithstanding a contractual prohibition, the other party may establish a breach by showing that the nonassignment clause was included for the benefit of the nonbreaching party, and that the nonbreaching party properly terminated the contract as a result of the improper assignment [Guerin v. Blair (1949) 33 C2d 744, 747, 204 P2d 884].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

An action also may be brought against the assignee of a contract that was subject to a nonassignment clause. To establish a claim against the assignee, the plaintiff must show that the assignee, either expressly or implicitly, intended to be bound by the assignor's obligations under the contract [Enterprise Leasing Corp. v. Shugart Corp. (1991) 231 CA3d 737, 745-746, 282 CR 620].

If a party assigns a contract notwithstanding a contractual or legal prohibition on assignment, the assignment is voidable, and the nonassigning party may properly defend against an assignee's suit to recover on the contract [Ginsberg v. Butler (1933) 217 C 467, 470-471, 19 P2d 790].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.53

22.53 Assignment Consists of Transferring Title, Contractual Right, or Chose in Action to Another Person.

22.53[1] Transfer of Title, Contractual Right, or Chose in Action Is Assignment. A right to recover money or other personal property by judicial proceeding is a so-called "chose in action" and is assignable when it arises out of an obligation or a violation of a property right [CC §§ 953, 954]. Similarly, title to property may be assigned by conveying the title from one person to another [CC § 1040].

Jury Instructions:

Assignment of Rights, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.74 (Matthew Bender).

22.53[2] Assignment Transfers Incidents of Thing Assigned. An assignment transfers all incidents of the thing assigned, unless expressly excepted from the transfer [CC § 1084]. For example, if a party assigns a debt secured by a mortgage, the assignment includes both the debt and the mortgage [CC § 2936].

22.53[3] Absent Prohibition on Assignment, Assignment May Be Made With or Without Consideration. A party may assign his or her interest in a contract with or without consideration. For example, an assignment may be a gift [see, e.g., Ballinger v. Ballinger (1937) 9 C2d 330, 333-334, 70 P2d 629]. An assignment also may constitute the consideration for another contract [see, e.g., Johnston v. Landucci (1942) 21 C2d 63, 67, 71, 130 P2d 405].

➤ Cross Reference:

Discussion of law applicable to assignments, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 60, Assignments (Matthew Bender).

22.53[4] Assignment Made With Consideration Is Subject to Contract Law. When a party assigns a contract to another party in exchange for consideration, the assignment itself is a contract, subject to the law governing contracts [see Johnston v. Landucci (1942) 21 C2d 63, 66-67, 130 P2d 405].

Example:

A landowner sought to purchase land from a neighbor, who purchased the neighboring land on an installment contract from a third party. The neighbor agreed to assign his installment purchase contract to the landowner in exchange for a promissory note secured by an assignment of the landowner's interest in his own land. The court held that the assignment of the installment purchase contract was valid consideration for the contract to sell the neighbor's land, so that the judgment to foreclose on the lien could be enforced [Johnston v. Landucci (1942) 21 C2d 63, 67, 71, 130 P2d 405].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.54

22.54 Contractual Rights May Be Assigned Unless Prohibited by Law or Contract.

22.54[1] Contractual Rights Presumptively May Be Assigned. In the absence of an express or implied intent to prohibit assignment, contractual rights may be assigned [El Escorial Owners' Assn. v. DLC Plastering, Inc. (2007) 154 CA4th 1337, 1360, 65 CR3d 524] . For example, an option contract is presumed to be assignable if it contains no provision forbidding assignment and does not require performance based on personal qualities of the contracting party [see Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 229, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] .

22.54[2] Assignment May Be Oral or Written. A transfer or assignment of a right may be made without a writing, whenever a writing is not expressly required by statute [CC § 1052]. All that is required is evidence that the owner manifested an intention to transfer the right to the person to whom the intention was manifested [Cockerell v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1954) 42 C2d 284, 291, 267 P2d 16] .

Jury Instructions:

Contracts--Assignment Contested, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 326 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

22.54[3] Contract May Expressly or Implicitly Prohibit Assignment. Contracting parties may expressly or implicitly prohibit assignment in the contract [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 230, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561 ; see CC § 1995.230 (restriction on transfer of tenant's interest in lease)].

Example--Implied Nonassignment:

In a transfer of land between family members, an option clause to repurchase the land contained in the deed was silent as to whether the option could be assigned. Notwithstanding the presumption in favor of assignability [see 22.54[1]], the court noted that even when there is no written or oral agreement that contract duties will be personal, the court must effectuate the presumed intent of the parties. The court therefore considered the family circumstances and parole evidence to determine that the parties intended that the contract not be assigned [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 228-230, 65 CR 545, 436 P2d 561] .

Exception:

General assignment clauses prohibiting a party from assigning its rights and obligations under a contract do not preclude assignments that occur by operation of law [National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, PA v. Cambridge Integrated Services Group, Inc. (2009) 171 CA4th 35, 55, 89 CR3d 473 (because subrogation is effectively an assignment by operation of law, a general assignment clause in a claims administration contract between a claims administrator and an insured did not preclude an insurer's equitable subrogation rights against the claims administrator)].

22.54[4] Authorization to Assign Tenant's Lease May Not Be Unreasonably Withheld. When a tenant's lease contains a clause that prohibits assignment absent the landlord's consent but is silent as to the conditions for refusing consent, the landlord may not withhold consent unreasonably [CC § 1995.260]. Whether consent was withheld unreasonably is a question of fact for the tenant to prove [CC § 1995.260]. The tenant may meet this burden with proof of a written request for a statement of reasons for withholding consent, and that the landlord failed to provide a written response within a reasonable time [CC § 1995.260].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of landlord-tenant issues, including assignments, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Landlord-Tenant Litigation.

22.54[5] No Enforcement of Assignment of Contract for Performance Based on Personal Qualities. When a contractual obligation requires the particular skill, credit or other personal quality of a particular contracting party, assignment of the right to performance of that obligation cannot be enforced [Teel v. Bank of Eureka (1941) 42 CA2d 807, 809, 110 P2d 78].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

Even when the contract contains an explicit contractual statement that the contract is binding on assigns, the court must consider the terms and tenor of the entire contract, and sometimes additional facts and circumstances, to determine whether the parties intended that the contract be personal and not assignable [see Davis v. Basalt Rock Co. (1951) 107 CA2d 436, 444, 237 P2d 338]. If the client did not confer performance to the assignee, counsel should examine whether the terms of the entire contract and circumstances indicate that the parties intended the contract to be personal.

22.54[6] Statutes Prohibit Certain Assignments. Assignments may be prohibited by statute. For example, the following may not be assigned:

- Wages earned by an employee, except under specified conditions [see Lab Code § 300(b)].
- Specified actions under commercial rent control ordinances [see CC § 1954.25 et seq.].
- Specified actions relating to consumer credit contracts [see CC § 1799.91].
- Actions against an enrollee or subscriber of a health care service plan [see H&S Code § 1379].
- Claims under California's unfair competition law [B&P Code §§ 17200 et seq.], which requires the plaintiff to be one "who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition" [Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2009) 46 C4th 993, 1003, 95 CR3d 605, 209 P3d 937] .

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of statutory limitations on assignments, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch.

60, Assignments (Matthew Bender).

22.54[7] Rights on Personal Property May Be Assigned. A chose in action, or right to recover money or other personal property, may be assigned when it arises out of an obligation or property right [CC §§ 953, 954, 1458].

Distinguish:

A right to recover an ownership interest in real property is not assignable [Martin v. Bridgeport Community Assn., Inc. (2009) 173 CA4th 1024, 1033, 93 CR3d 405] .

22.54[8] Rights on Personal Torts and Legal Malpractice Claims May Not Be Assigned. A chose in action that arises out of a personal tort, such as personal injury or damage to reputation, may not be assigned [see Goodley v. Wank & Wank, Inc. (1976) 62 CA3d 389, 393-394, 133 CR 83].

Claims for legal malpractice may not be assigned because of the uniquely personal and confidential attorney-client relationship [Goodley v. Wank & Wank, Inc. (1976) 62 CA3d 389, 395, 133 CR 83]. The prohibition of assignments for legal malpractice claims extends to claims of attorney fraud [Jackson v. Rogers & Wells (1989) 210 CA3d 336, 348, 258 CR 454].

22.54[9] Rights to Recover Statutory Penalties May Not Be Assigned. The right to recover a statutory penalty may not be assigned [Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2009) 46 C4th 993, 1004, 95 CR3d 605, 209 P3d 937 (aggrieved employee cannot assign claim for statutory penalties under Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004, Lab Code § 2698 et seq.)].

22.55 Improper Assignment Renders Contract Voidable.

Whether it is a contractual provision or a statute that imposes a prohibition on contract assignment, this renders the contract voidable by the party intended to benefit from the prohibition of assignment [see, e.g., Ginsberg v. Butler (1933) 217 C 467, 470-471, 19 P2d 790].

Example:

Beneficiaries of a death benefit issued by a fraternal society had assigned their interest in the benefits as security for a loan. The society's bylaws and the contract for death benefits stated that any assignment of the benefits was void. The Tennessee statute governing the fraternal society provided that benefits to be paid by the society could not be paid on the debt or liability of a member. Because the society was the party benefitting from the prohibition on assignment, the contract was voidable by the society [Ginsberg v. Butler (1933) 217 C 467, 472-473, 19 P2d 790].

VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.56

22.56 Nonassigning Party May Waive Breach by Assignment.

22.56[1] Party to Whom Benefit of Nonassignment Runs May Object to Assignment. A nonassignment clause generally runs in favor of a particular contracting party. If the party not benefitted by the assignment assigns the contract, that party is bound by the assignment, and may not later claim that the assignment is invalid because of the nonassignment clause [E-P Constructors, Inc. v. Peterson Tractor Co. (1961) 192 CA2d 518, 523, 13 CR 569].

22.56[2] Waiver May Be Implied When Nonassigning Party Either Performs or Accepts Performance by Assignee. When a party assigns a contract notwithstanding a prohibition on assignment, the other party may waive the prohibition on assignment. In particular, if the nonassigning party knows about the assignment and subsequently deals with the assignee, the nonassigning party waives the objection to the assignment [Trubowitch v. Riverbank Canning Co. (1947) 30 C2d 335, 342, 182 P2d 182].

VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.57

22.57 Assignor Remains Liable to Nonassigning Party.

When a party assigns a bilateral contract, that party assigns only the benefits [CC § 1458]. The obligations cannot be assigned without consent from the party benefitting from the obligation [CC § 1457]. Thus, when a party assigns a contract and the assignee assumes the contractual obligations, the nonassigning party still may seek recovery from the assignor absent consent from the nonassigning party [see AICCO, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (2001) 90 CA4th 579, 588, 109 CR2d 359].

Example:

An insurance company sought to stop selling insurance, assign its obligations to a reinsurer, and be released from its obligations to its insureds. Although the reinsurer became primarily liable under the assignment and assumption contract, the insurance company remained liable to its insureds, absent their consent to the assignment [Travelers Indem. Co. v. Gillespie (1990) 50 C3d 82, 95-96, 266 CR 117, 785 P2d 500].

VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.58

22.58 Assignor May Be Liable to Assignee.

22.58[1] Assignor May Explicitly Warrant Rights Assigned. On assignment, the assignor typically guarantees performance of the contract and warrants the existence of the rights assigned [see, e.g., Budget Fin. Plan v. Sav-On Food Club, Inc. (1955) 44 C2d 565, 567, 570, 283 P2d 694]. These guarantees and warranties provide the basis for liability against the assignor if the assignee does not receive the benefit of the matters assigned [see Budget Fin. Plan v. Sav-On Food Club, Inc. (1955) 44 C2d 565, 567, 570, 283 P2d 694].

22.58[2] Statutes Impose Warranties on Assignment. Statutory warranties may form the basis of assignor liability [see, e.g., Com Code §§ 3417, 4207 (pertaining to banking transfers)].

Example:

A person who assigns a securities certificate warrants that the certificate is genuine, that the assignor has the capacity to transfer the certificate, and that the certificate is in the amount the issuer is authorized to issue [Com Code § 8202].

Discussion of assignee's claims and assignor's defenses, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 60, Assignments (Matthew Bender).

22.58[3] Assignment Contains Implied Warranty of Valid and Existing Rights. In assignments, the common law implies a warranty that the rights assigned are valid and existing [see Mary Pickford Co. v. Bayly Bros., Inc. (1939) 12 C2d 501, 518, 86 P2d 102 (sale of securities)].

VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.59

22.59 Nonassigning Party May Be Liable to Assignee.

22.59[1] After Notice of Assignment, Assignee May Sue for Obligor's Failure to Confer Performance to Assignee. When there is no prohibition on assignment, once the nonassigning party receives notice of assignment of an executory contract, the obligor must confer performance to the assignee [Fricker v. Uddo & Taormina Co. (1957) 48 C2d 696, 701, 312 P2d 1085 ; but see Producers Cotton Oil Co. v. Amstar Corp. (1988) 197 CA3d 638, 657, 242 CR 914 (contending that Fricker is no longer the law in California with respect to secured creditors)]. Failure of the nonassigning party with notice to do so is grounds to assert a claim for breach of contract against the assignor [see Fricker v. Uddo & Taormina Co. (1957) 48 C2d 696, 701, 312 P2d 1085].

Jury Instructions:

When Assignment of Benefits Includes Assumption of Obligations, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.93 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of assignee's claims, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 60, Assignments (Matthew Bender).

22.59[2] Absent Notice of Assignment, Obligor's Performance to Assignor Discharges Performance. If the nonassigning party receives no notice of the assignment, performance to the assignor discharges the nonassigning party's performance, and the assignee cannot recover from the nonassigning party [Mutual Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Corum (1936) 16 CA2d 212, 215, 60 P2d 316].

Strategic Point--Assignee:

If performance was rendered to the assignor, the assignee should seek recovery on the assignment from the assignor. Counsel should examine the assignment to determine whether the assignor breached a requirement to give notice to the obligor. Counsel also should consider a cause of action based on breach of warranty or guarantee of rights assigned [see Budget Fin. Plan v. Sav-On Food Club, Inc. (1955) 44 C2d 565, 567, 570, 283 P2d 694].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
VIII. RECOVERING FOR IMPROPER ASSIGNMENT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.60

22.60 Assignee May Be Liable for Breach of Contract.

22.60[1] Assignee Generally Does Not Assume Obligations of Contract. Generally, an assignee does not assume the obligations of a contract when accepting an assignment [Melchior v. New Line Prods., Inc. (2003) 106 CA4th 779, 789, 131 CR2d 347].

22.60[2] Assignee Becomes Liable to Obligor on Acceptance of Obligor's Performance. An exception from the general rule regarding assignee liability occurs when a party voluntarily accepts the benefit of a transaction. When this occurs, the party also consents to the obligations to the extent the facts are known or ought to be known to the person accepting the benefit [CC § 1589]. The nonassigning party then has grounds to sue the assignee for nonperformance, even when the assignment agreement explicitly rejects assumption of the obligation to perform under the original contract [Melchior v. New Line Prods., Inc. (2003) 106 CA4th 779, 790, 131 CR2d 347].

Example--Assignee Liable:

An author and a film production company entered a release agreement in which the company agreed to pay the author a percentage of a film's gross receipts, if it was produced. The company assigned the release agreement to a second production company, who agreed only to pay a certain percentage of the first company's gross receipts from a participation fee to be paid by the second company. The second company then made the film, but failed to pay the author the percentage of gross receipts. The court held that the second company received the benefits of the original contract, and therefore assumed the first company's obligation to pay the author the percentage of gross receipts [Melchior v. New Line Prods., Inc. (2003) 106 CA4th 779, 790, 131 CR2d 347].

Examples--No Assignee Liability:

- A film producer contracted with a film distributor for a 70/30 split of profits from home videos of a film. The distributor then contracted with a subdistributor for a 50/50 split of the profits from the home videos. The subdistributor was not aware of the contract between the film producer and the film distributor. The film producer sued the sub-distributor for recovery of 70 percent of the profits. The court held that the subdistributor was not liable, because the subdistributor did not receive the benefit of the original contract and did not have constructive knowledge of the terms of the original contract [

Recorded Picture Co. (Prods.) v. Nelson Entm't, Inc. (1997) 53 CA4th 350, 363, 366-367, 61 CR2d 742].

■ Assuming that beverage manufacturer had agreed to continue to use plaintiff as its exclusive distributor unless it had good cause for terminating the relationship, manufacturer's assignee did not assume that obligation because there was no evidence the assignee even knew of the assignor's supposed obligation not to terminate its relationship with plaintiff without good cause [Unterberger v. Red Bull North America, Inc. (2008) 162 CA4th 414, 421, 75 CR3d 368] .

Jury Instructions:

When Assignment of Benefits Includes Assumption of Obligations, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3C, Instr. MB 300C.93 (Matthew Bender).

22.60[3] Assignee Is Liable on Assumption of Obligation. When an assignee expressly assumes the obligations of a contract, the assignee is bound to perform them for the benefit of the nonassigning party [Bruce v. Mieir (1932) 120 CA 287, 290, 7 P2d 1037]. The nonassigning client then may sue the assignee for breach of contract if full performance is not rendered.

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.62

22.62 Options and Strategy.

22.62[1] Asserting Appropriate Response Including Applicable Affirmative Defenses. When presented with a complaint for breach of contract, the first analysis must be to determine whether the complaint includes all of the necessary allegations to state a cause of action [see 22.63]. If it does not, then a demurrer may be proper [see 22.71]. If the complaint appears complete, a general denial in the answer is appropriate [see 22.71], if the complaint is not verified [see 22.72[1]]. If the complaint is verified, then the answer also must be verified, and a general denial is not appropriate. In preparing a defense, counsel must assess whether an element of the claim can be negated, so that the plaintiff will be unable to establish a basis for recovery [see 22.03 -22.12]. Counsel also must assess the facts to determine the relevant affirmative defenses to include in the answer [see 22.72[3] -[6]].

Discussion of preparing an answer, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 14, Answers.

22.62[2] Refuting Nonperformance or Materiality of Breach With Substantial Performance. Negating the element of nonperformance is central to defeating a claim for breach of contract. Although the common law required strict performance, modern case law allows a party to defeat the element of nonperformance by establishing substantial performance [see 22.69]. Similarly, if the plaintiff asserts that the breach was material, the defendant may counter that:

- Defendant substantially performed [see 22.08[2]];
- That the lack of strict performance accordingly was not a material breach [see 22.24 -22.29, 22.69];
and
- That the plaintiff should be limited to recovering the minimal costs associated with the lack of strict performance [see 22.34].

Discussion of substantial performance as basis for recovery for breach, see 22.16[2].

Discussion of substantial performance in context of recovery for performance not in accord with contract terms, see 22.37.

22.62[3] Asserting Nonperformance of Condition Precedent. The defendant may establish that there was no duty to perform, because a condition precedent was not met [see 22.66], or because a condition subsequent occurred [see 22.67]. Although the plaintiff has the burden of proof on the occurrence of a condition precedent, the defendant must first come forward with evidence that the condition did not occur [Consolidated World Invs., Inc. v. Lido Preferred, Ltd. (1992) 9 CA4th 373, 380, 11 CR2d 524 ; see 22.19[2]].

22.62[4] Establishing Justification, Excuse, and Other Affirmative Defenses for Nonperformance. Counsel must determine if there is evidence to support any appropriate affirmative defenses. There are many affirmative defenses, including, among others:

- Justification or excuse for nonperformance [see 22.64, 22.65].
- That the plaintiff waived the breach [see 22.65[5]].
- Failure to mitigate damages [see 22.72[6]], and the statute of limitations [see 22.72[5]].

Of course, the facts of each case will determine the applicability of various affirmative defenses.

IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.63

22.63 No Liability When Plaintiff Fails to Establish Elements of Breach.

The most basic defense to a breach of contract action is that the plaintiff failed to plead or establish all of the elements of the cause of action for breach of contract, including the existence of a contract, plaintiff's performance or excuse from performance, defendant's breach, and damages proximately caused by the breach [see Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 CA3d 887, 913, 92 CR 723]. The defendant should refute any of these elements in an answer or demurrer, as appropriate, to defeat the plaintiff's claim.

22.64 No Liability When Nonperformance Is Justified by Failure of Consideration.

A plaintiff may not recover for a defendant's breach if the defendant's failure to perform is justified, such as when the consideration due to defendant fails [see CC § 1689(b)(4)].

Example--Justified Failure to Perform:

A machine shop issued a promissory note representing the unpaid amount on the purchase of a press from a third party. A finance company was to pay the third party for the press. The finance company's check to the seller was dishonored, and the press was not delivered to the machine shop. The finance company sued the machine shop for payment on the promissory note. The machine shop could assert failure of consideration as a defense against its failure to perform payment on the promissory note [Commercial Credit Corp. v. Orange County Mach. Works (1950) 34 C2d 766, 771, 214 P2d 819].

Example--Unjustified Failure to Perform:

An irrigation district sued a landowner for failing to make payments to provide water to the land pursuant to a contract that released the irrigation district from liability for insufficient water supplies. The landowner argued that the failure to pay was justified because the irrigation district did not provide the water. Because of the release, the irrigation district's failure to deliver water for part of the term of the contract was not a failure of consideration, and the landowner's failure to pay was neither excused nor justified [Consolidated Irrigation Dist. v. Crawshaw (1933) 130 CA 455, 460-461, 20 P2d 119].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.65

22.65 No Liability When Nonperformance Is Excused.

22.65[1] Impossible or Impracticable Performance May Be Excused.

22.65[1][a] Complete Impossibility Excuses Performance. Unless the parties expressly agree to the contrary, the defendant's performance may be excused when the defendant is prevented by "an irresistible, superhuman cause" or by the act of public enemies of California or the United States [CC § 1511(2)]. Under these circumstances, the court considers the lack of performance a failure of consideration, rather than a breach, and rescission is the appropriate remedy [see Riff v. Mayhew (1949) 90 CA2d 712, 717, 203 P2d 812 ; see also CC § 1689(b)(3), (4)].

Example--Impossibility:

A contract that calls for the unique personal services of the contracting party is rendered impossible by the death of that party [Charles B. Webster Real Estate v. Rickard (1971) 21 CA3d 612, 618, 98 CR 559]. The defendant's estate is excused from performance, and is not in breach.

Jury Instructions:

Impossibility, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.70 (Matthew Bender).

Requirement of Objective Impossibility, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.72 (Matthew Bender).

22.65[1][b] Impracticability Excuses Performance. When performance under a contract has become impracticable due to excessive or unreasonable expense or difficulty, it may be excused due to impracticability, a form of legal impossibility [Mineral Park Land Co. v. Howard (1916) 172 C 289, 293, 156 P 458].

Example--Impracticability:

A builder contracted to excavate gravel from plaintiff's land, but during the course of excavation, the builder ceased excavation because the remaining gravel was under water. The court held that the defendant builder was excused because of the extraordinarily increased difficulty of excavation [Mineral Park Land Co. v. Howard (1916) 172 C 289, 293, 156 P 458].

Judge's Perspective:

Impracticability is a large topic, and it is beyond the scope of this treatise to address it fully. It is important to note that impracticability, like impossibility and frustration of purpose, are questions of law to be decided by the court, not questions of fact [for related jury instruction, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 300 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender)]. The circumstances that might make performance "impracticable" are numerous and varied. The Restatement Second of Contracts states that when, after a contract is made, a party's performance is made impracticable without his or her fault by the occurrence of an event the non-occurrence of which was a basic assumption on which the contract was made, the duty to render that performance is discharged, unless the language or the circumstances indicate the contrary [Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 261].

Impracticability does not mean impossibility; the defendant can usually still perform the contract, albeit at a substantially higher price. Generally, the mere fact of increased cost or difficulty is insufficient to release a party from that party's contractual obligations [see Oosten v. Hay Haulers Dairy Employees & Helpers Union (1955) 45 C2d 784, 789, 291 P2d 17 ("labor trouble" on part of milk farmer did not excuse milk processor from accepting deliveries of farmer's milk); see also Corbin on Contracts § 74.7 (discovery of facts that make promised performance more difficult or expensive, or occurrence of subsequent events having this effect, has usually been held not to discharge contractor from duty, at least when facts or events are reasonably foreseeable or within reasonable contemplation of parties at time of contracting)]. At some point, the increase will rise to the level of impracticability [see, e.g., City of Vernon v. City of Los Angeles (1955) 45 C2d 710, 719, 290 P2d 841 (defendant's costs increased dramatically when it was required to handle plaintiff's sewage in manner other than originally contemplated)]. When this point is reached is fact specific, and will be determined not only by reference to existing case law, but also to the customs and expectations of the relevant industry.

Jury Instructions:

Impracticability, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.71 (Matthew Bender).

22.65[1][c] Temporary Impossibility or Impracticability Suspends Duty to Perform. When the conditions rendering performance impossible or impracticable are temporary, the defendant is excused from performing during the period of impossibility or impracticability [see Bergin v. Van Der Steen (1951) 107 CA2d 8, 16]. The defendant may also establish that performance following the temporary impossibility is so burdensome due to the period of impossibility that the duty to perform should be permanently excused [see Bergin v. Van Der Steen (1951) 107 CA2d 8, 16].

Jury Instructions:

Partial Impossibility, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.78 (Matthew Bender).

22.65[2] Frustration of Purpose May Excuse Performance. Performance may be excused when the value of the performance (that is, the purpose of the contract) has been destroyed by a supervening and unforeseen event [Dorn v. Goetz (1948) 85 CA2d 407, 410, 193 P2d 121]. The court may reject this defense if it determines that the loss is so severe that it cannot fairly be determined to be within the risk assumed by the plaintiff [see FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 399, 282 CR 508].

Examples:

- A developer agreed to transfer land to an organization to satisfy a mitigation condition required by an environmental impact report. On its motion for summary judgment, the developer made an adequate showing to shift the burden to show a triable issue to the plaintiff by arguing that because the organization had been found unqualified to hold the mitigation land, the developer's performance was excused under the doctrine of commercial frustration [Habitat Trust for Wildlife, Inc. v. City of Rancho Cucamonga (2009) 175 CA4th 1306, 1336, 96 CR3d 813 .

■ A business contracted to lease an electrical lighting display, for which the defendant built a neon sign. The government subsequently banned outside lighting at night due to wartime lighting restrictions, and the business refused to make payments on the leased display. The court held that the purpose of the contract was to advertise the business at night, that the purpose was frustrated by the government's ban, and that the business was therefore excused from performing under the contract. Although the government lifted the ban 14 months later, the court rejected the notion that the obligation was only temporarily suspended, because the ban was indefinite in duration at the time it was imposed [20th Century Lites, Inc. v. Goodman (1944) 64 CA2d Supp 938, 943-945].

Jury Instructions:

Frustration of Purpose, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.76 (Matthew Bender).

Destruction of Value Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.77 (Matthew Bender).

22.65[3] Unlawful Performance May Be Excused. When a contract calls for performance of an unlawful act, or performance that is contrary to the policy of express law or otherwise contrary to good morals, the court may excuse the nonperformance of the act [see CC § 1667].

Exception:

Under certain circumstances, the plaintiff may recover for breach even when the contract calls for unlawful performance, such as to avert subversion of the particular law at issue [see, e.g., South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 CA3d 750, 760, 102 CR 286].

Jury Instructions:

Object of Contract Must Be Legal, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.90 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Discussion of unlawful contract terms, see Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

22.65[4] Unconscionable Performance May Be Excused. A court may refuse to enforce a contract, enforce only part of it, or limit the application of a part of the contract if it determines as a matter of law that the contract or any clause of it was unconscionable at the time the contract was entered into [CC § 1670.5].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of unconscionable contract terms, see Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

22.65[5] Waiver May Excuse Performance of Condition. The defendant may be excused from performing a condition of the contract if the plaintiff either expressly or implicitly waives that condition [see, e.g., Noel v. Dumont Builders, Inc. (1960) 178 CA2d 691, 696, 3 CR 220].

Example--Implied Waiver:

Homeowners contracted to build a new house conditioned on the sale of their current house. The court determined that the homeowners waived the condition after approving building plans, authorizing construction, and making changes to the plans [Noel v. Dumont Builders, Inc. (1960) 178 CA2d 691,

696, 3 CR 220].

Jury Instructions:

Waiver Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.20 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Discussion of performance of conditions to a contract, see 22.21[2], [3], 22.66, 22.67.

Discussion of different possible meanings of term "waiver," see 22.68[3].

22.65[6] Release May Excuse Performance. An obligation is extinguished by a release if the obligor gives consideration to the obligee for the release or if the obligee provides a written release, with or without consideration [CC § 1541]. Accordingly, if the defendant secured a valid release from the contract, the defendant is excused from performance.

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

The Restatement (Second) of Contracts indicates that the plaintiff may prevent the defendant from asserting a release to excuse performance on a showing that the plaintiff retracted the release before the defendant detrimentally relied it. If the plaintiff has evidence of a timely retraction, the plaintiff may cite this to defeat release as a basis for excuse from performance [Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 84(2)].

Consider--Plaintiff:

If a release is obtained with additional consideration, the release agreement itself is subject to the law of contracts. If the defendant fails to supply the additional consideration under the release agreement, the release agreement may be rescinded [see CC § 1989(b)(2)-(4)] and the defendant is in breach of the underlying contract.

22.65[7] Plaintiff's Prevention of Defendant's Performance Excuses Defendant's Performance. If the plaintiff prevents the defendant from performing the defendant's obligation, the plaintiff cannot establish breach by the defendant [CC § 1512; Pacific Venture Corp. v. Huey (1940) 15 C2d 711, 717, 104 P2d 641].

22.65[8] Defendant Has Burden of Proof to Establish Excuse. An excuse for nonperformance is an affirmative defense. Accordingly, the defendant has the burden of proof of establishing that the defendant's nonperformance is excused [see Jacobs v. Tenneco W., Inc. (1986) 186 CA3d 1413, 1417, 231 CR 351].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.66

22.66 Nonoccurrence of Condition Precedent Precludes Liability for Nonperformance.

22.66[1] Failure to Satisfy Condition Precedent Precludes Liability. Absent contract language imposing a duty to fulfill a condition precedent, the failure of a condition precedent to occur excuses performance, and no basis for damages arises [Britschgi v. McCall (1953) 41 C2d 138, 144, 257 P2d 977 ; American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees v. Metropolitan Water District (2005) 126 CA4th 247, 264-265].

Examples:

- A developer agreed to transfer land to an organization to satisfy a mitigation condition required by an environmental impact report. Because approval of the organization as an entity qualified to receive the transfer was necessary to fulfill the purpose of the agreement, approval of the organization was an implied condition of the contract. When the city determined that the organization was not a proper entity to receive the mitigation land, the developer had no duty to perform under the agreement [Habitat Trust for Wildlife, Inc. v. City of Rancho Cucamonga (2009) 175 CA4th 1306, 1335, 96 CR3d 813].

- A building contract requiring a party to request alternative dispute resolution before a specified time created a condition precedent to the use of alternative dispute resolution. The construction company's failure to request arbitration before the specified time precluded the construction company from compelling the use of arbitration [Platt Pac., Inc. v. Andelson (1993) 6 C4th 307, 313-314, 24 CR2d 597, 862 P2d 158].

Exception:

Nonoccurrence of a condition precedent may be equitably excused when the nonoccurrence would work a forfeiture [Root v. American Equity Specialty Ins. Co. (2005) 130 CA4th 926, 939].

The defendant must prove that the parties agreed to the condition precedent, while the plaintiff must prove that the condition occurred. If the plaintiff cannot meet the burden of proof, the defendant is not required to perform the duty [Consolidated World Invs., Inc. v. Lido Preferred, Ltd. (1992) 9 CA4th 373, 380, 11 CR2d 524].

Jury Instructions:

Existence of Condition Precedent Disputed, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 321 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Occurrence of Agreed Condition Precedent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 322 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

22.66[2] Unmet Condition of Satisfaction Precludes Liability.

22.66[2][a] "Reasonable Person" Standard Applies to Commercial Value, Mechanical Ability, or Operational Fitness. Some contracts provide that one party's performance must be satisfactory to the other party before liability for performance attaches. This type of provision constitutes a condition precedent to performance by the party who must be satisfied [LeBoire v. Royce (1960) 53 C2d 659, 672, 2 CR 745, 349 P2d 513]. Absent contractual language governing the test for satisfaction, courts generally interpret this kind of condition as requiring performance that would be satisfactory to a reasonable person, especially when the contract is for commercial value, mechanical ability, or operational fitness [see LeBoire v. Royce (1960) 53 C2d 659, 672, 2 CR 745, 349 P2d 513]. The assertion of arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable dissatisfaction does not excuse the condition, and no liability may attach [Collins v. Vickter Manor, Inc. (1957) 47 C2d 875, 882, 306 P2d 783].

Example:

A contract for the purchase of elevators and controlling devices gave the buyer sole discretion to determine satisfactory working order of the elevators and devices. The court applied the "reasonable person" standard, and found that the buyer acted reasonably in rejecting the defective devices, but did not act reasonably in rejecting the operational elevators. The contractor was entitled to recover for the construction and installation of the elevators, less damages [Bryan Elevator Co. v. Law (1916) 31 CA 204, 215-216, 160 P 170].

Jury Instructions:

Reasonable Satisfaction Requirement, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.11 (Matthew Bender).

22.66[2][b] Good-Faith Subjective Standard Applies When Satisfaction Involves Fancy, Taste, or Judgment.

Contracts that involve personal fancy, taste, or judgment may have satisfaction provisions. In these circumstances, the courts require only that the party determine satisfaction in good faith [see Tiffany v. Pacific Sewer Pipe Co. (1919) 180 C 700, 702, 182 P 428]. Absent explicit direction in the contract or implied from the subject matter of the contract, courts prefer to apply the "reasonable person" test [Guntert v. City of Stockton (1974) 43 CA3d 203, 209, 117 CR 601].

Example:

An employee was hired to produce enameled and glazed brick in certain quantities and to the satisfaction of the employer. The employer terminated the employee. Noting that there was no evidence that the employer was satisfied with the work, the court held that the employer's stated dissatisfaction was conclusive and the employer could not recover for wrongful termination [Tiffany v. Pacific Sewer Pipe Co. (1919) 180 C 700, 702, 182 P 428].

Jury Instructions:

Performance to Satisfaction of Other Party's Taste, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.12 (Matthew Bender).

IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.67

22.67 Occurrence of Condition Subsequent Before Performance Precludes Liability.

22.67[1] Condition Subsequent Is Future Event That Relieves Obligation. A condition subsequent is a possible future event that, if it occurs, relieves a party from an obligation, if the party chooses to be so relieved [CC § 1438]. A court determines whether a condition is subsequent or precedent based on the circumstances [see, e.g., Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 C2d 420, 425, 274 P2d 633]. A condition subsequent may be expressed or implied [Lowe v. Copeland (1932) 125 CA 315, 321, 13 P2d 522].

Jury Instructions:

Condition Subsequent, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3D, Instr. MB 300D.33 (Matthew Bender).

22.67[2] No Liability When Occurrence of Condition Subsequent Precedes Time Performance Is Due. An interpretation of a condition as being subsequent, rather than precedent, means that the obligations of the contract must be performed until the condition subsequent occurs [CC § 1438]. On the occurrence of the condition, the defendant is relieved of the obligation to perform.

Consider--Plaintiff:

The failure of a party to perform before the occurrence of the condition subsequent will render that party in breach [see Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 C2d 420, 425, 274 P2d 633].

Example--Condition Construed As Condition Subsequent:

A man applied for, and paid the first premium on, a life insurance policy. The policy application indicated that the policy would cover the applicant following payment of the first premium, provided the insurance company was satisfied of the insured's acceptability at the date of the application. The man died pending the results of an additional medical examination. The court held that the contract arose at the time the application and premium payment was received. Because of the ambiguous language and to avoid an unconscionable result, the insurer's satisfaction was construed as a condition subsequent that would have entitled the insurer to terminate the insurance contract after additional risk might become known [Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 C2d 420, 425, 274 P2d 633].

22.68 Party May Waive Breach.

22.68[1] Conduct That Induces Reasonable Person to Conclude Aggrieved Party Has Relinquished Right Constitutes Waiver. A party may assert that the opposing party waived the contract breach entirely. To establish waiver, the party in breach may show evidence of an express waiver or evidence of conduct that would induce a reasonable person to conclude that the nonbreaching party relinquished the right [CC § 1511(3); Rubin v. Los Angeles Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1984) 159 CA3d 292, 298, 205 CR 455].

Distinguish:

The term "waiver" is susceptible of different meanings. "Waiver" may refer to the voluntary relinquishment of a known right [see Platt Pac., Inc. v. Andelson (1993) 6 C4th 307, 314, 24 CR2d 597, 862 P2d 158], and may also refer to the loss of an opportunity or right as a result of a party's failure to perform, regardless of whether the party knowingly or voluntarily relinquished the right [see Platt Pac., Inc. v. Andelson (1993) 6 C4th 307, 315, 24 CR2d 597, 862 P2d 158]. This section discusses the voluntary relinquishment of a known right.

Jury Instructions:

Waiver Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.20 (Matthew Bender).

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of waiver in contract for sale of goods, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code.

22.68[2] Continued Performance With Knowledge of Breach and Acceptance of Further Performance Constitutes Implied Waiver. A breaching party may establish waiver by showing that the nonbreaching party continued to perform under the contract without claiming breach, thereby indicating acceptance [A.B.C. Distrib. Corp. v. Distillers Distrib. Co. (1957) 154 CA2d 175, 187, 316 P2d 71].

Jury Instructions:

Waiver of Defects in Offer of Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.23 (Matthew Bender).

22.68[3] Implied Waiver Is Question of Fact. The determination of whether a nonbreaching party waived a breach of the contract is a question of fact [Banducci v. Frank T. Hickey, Inc. (1949) 93 CA2d 658, 663, 209 P2d 398].

22.68[4] Burden of Proof Is on Party Asserting Waiver. The burden of proving waiver of a breach is on the party alleging reliance on it [Mayer v. Northwood Textile Mills, Inc. (1951) 105 CA2d 406, 409, 233 P2d 657].

22.68[5] Plaintiff's Waiver of Right to Rescission Restricts Claim of Damages to Those Caused by Breach. If a nonbreaching party waives the right to rescind the contract and continues to perform under the contract, the party's remedy is restricted to damages from the breach [McMillan Process Co. v. Brown (1939) 33 CA2d 279, 285, 91 P2d 613].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of damages, see Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions.

22.68[6] No Waiver When Delay in Seeking Remedy Made at Breaching Party's Request. Although the nonbreaching party may waive a breach by continued performance, a court will not recognize a waiver when the nonbreaching party's continued performance was an accommodation to the breaching party's request [Woodard v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1915) 171 C 513, 523, 153 P 951].

22.68[7] No Waiver When Breaching Party Has Continuing Covenant. When the contract provides for continuing performance, the nonbreaching party's waiver of an earlier breach does not waive subsequent breaches [Woodard v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1915) 171 C 513, 523, 153 P 951].

Example:

A lumber company contracted to cut down trees, process them into lumber, and ship the lumber in exchange for payment to a landowner. The contract gave the lumber company possession of the property for 10 years with an option to purchase at the end of the period. The lumber company ceased performance, but the landowner did not seek rescission of the contract until two years later. The court held that the lumber company had a continuing covenant to perform, so that even though the landowner waived the initial breach, the landowner could sue for the subsequent breaches [Woodard v. Glenwood Lumber Co. (1915) 171 C 513, 516-517, 523, 153 P 951].

22.68[8] No Waiver When Breach Is Latent. When a defective performance is latent, that is, when the nonbreaching party had no reasonable means of ascertaining that the breaching party's performance was defective, the nonbreaching party does not affect a waiver by continuing performance [Banducci v. Frank T. Hickey, Inc. (1949) 93 CA2d 658, 662, 209 P2d 398]. However, the nonbreaching party must give timely notice when the defect does become apparent [Banducci v. Frank T. Hickey, Inc. (1949) 93 CA2d 658, 662, 209 P2d 398].

Jury Instructions:

Hidden Defects, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3F, Instr. MB 300F.24 (Matthew Bender).

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.69

22.69 Substantial Performance Is Defense to Claim of Breach.

The defendant may refute the element of breach by establishing that the defendant completed substantial performance [see Barkis v. Scott (1949) 34 C2d 116, 123, 208 P2d 367]. To establish substantial performance, the defendant must show that there was no willful departure from the terms of the contract and that any defects can be easily remedied or compensated for, so that the other party practically got what was contracted for [Posner v. Grunwald-Marx, Inc. (1961) 56 C2d 169, 186-187, 14 CR 297, 363 P2d 313].

Example--Substantial Performance:

A builder contracted to have plumbing, heating, and ventilation installed in a four-story building. The contractor used materials that did not meet the contract specifications, but the evidence indicated that the substitutions did not affect the usefulness of the systems or impair the efficiency, durability, or serviceability. Noting that the amount of damages due to the alterations was trivial compared to the extent and magnitude of the work contemplated by the contract, the court held that the contractor substantially performed, and that the builder was entitled to recover only damages [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 C 285, 294, 197 P 105].

Example--No Substantial Performance:

Homeowners refused to pay their contractor for the installation of a new roof, which leaked. The contractor claimed substantial performance entitled it to payment less damages for defect. The court rejected this argument, citing evidence that the roof had no value because of the difficulty in repairing the leak [Williams v. Elliott (1954) 127 CA2d 357, 364, 273 P2d 953].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.70

22.70 Statute of Limitations Bars Relief When Action Is Not Filed Within Limitations Period.

22.70[1] Action on Written Contract Must Be Filed Within Four Years. An action based on the breach of most written contracts must be brought within four years from the time the cause of action accrues [CCP § 337(1)].

Exception--Corporate Obligations, Notes, Deeds of Trust:

An action on publicly held bonds, notes debentures, issued by a corporation, or coupons issued therewith, must be brought within six years from the time the cause of action accrues [CCP § 336a(1)]. An action on a mortgage, deed of trust, or other agreement pursuant to which bonds, notes, or debentures were issued must be filed within six years [CCP § 336a(2)]. This limitations period does not apply to public district or corporation bonds or indebtedness [CCP § 336a(2)].

► Cross References:

Discussion of accrual of cause of action, see 22.70[3].

Discussion of statute of limitations for breach of contract, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statute of Limitations and Effect on Potential Action.

22.70[2] Action on Oral or Implied Contract Must Be Filed Within Two Years. An action for breach of an oral or implied contract must be filed within two years from the time the cause of action accrues [CCP § 339(1)].

► Cross References:

Discussion of accrual of cause of action, see 22.70[3].

Discussion of statute of limitations for breach of contract, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statute of Limitations and Effect on Potential Action.

22.70[3] Action Accrues at Time Performance Was Due but Not Delivered. The cause of action for breach of contract accrues when the promisor fails to perform at the time and in the manner specified by the contract [Waxman v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1954) 123 CA2d 145, 149, 266 P2d 48].

22.70[4] Limitation Period Begins to Run at Time of Breach. The period of time within which an action must be brought normally begins at the time of breach [Barlow v. Collins (1958) 166 CA2d 274, 278-279, 333 P2d 64].

In installment contracts, the limitations period begins to run at the time each payment becomes due [Tillson v. Peters (1940) 41 CA2d 671, 676, 107 P2d 434].

Exception--Anticipatory Breach:

Although an anticipatory breach occurs at the time of repudiation, the limitations period does not begin to run until the time performance is due under the contract [Brewer v. Simpson (1960) 53 C2d 567, 593, 2 CR 609, 349 P2d 289].

 Cross References:

Discussion of anticipatory breach, see 22.23.

Further discussion of statute of limitations for breach of contract, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statute of Limitations and Effect on Potential Action.

Discussion of anticipatory breach in contract for sale of goods, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code.

22.70[5] Absence From State Tolls Limitations Period. The limitations period is tolled for the period of time a defendant is out of California following the accrual of the cause of action, if the out-of-state travel is unrelated to interstate commerce [CCP § 351; Filet Menu, Inc. v. Cheng (1999) 71 CA4th 1276, 1284, 84 CR2d 384].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.71

22.71 Defendant May Object to Complaint by Answer or Demurrer.

An objection to a complaint for breach of contract may be raised in an answer or demurrer. The defendant can object that the complaint or cross-complaint does not state facts sufficient to plead a cause of action or defense. In addition, the demurrer or answer can argue that the pleading is uncertain or that it cannot be ascertained from the pleading whether the contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct [see CCP § 430.10(e), (g)].

If the defendant can make an objection on any ground that appears on the face of the complaint, use of a demurrer is appropriate. If the ground for the objection does not appear on the face of the complaint, the defendant must object by use of an answer [see CCP § 430.30(a), (b)].

Chapter 22 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract
IX. DEFENDING ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-22 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 22.72

22.72 Pleading Denials and Affirmative Defenses.

22.72[1] General Denial Refutes Breach in Answer to Unverified Complaint. In response to an unverified complaint, a general denial is sufficient to put at issue the material allegations of the complaint [CCP § 431.30(d)]. Because the allegations in the complaint regarding breach are material allegations [see CCP § 431.10(a)], a general denial is sufficient to put the allegations regarding breach at issue.

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of preparing an answer to an unverified complaint, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 14, Answers.

22.72[2] Specific Denial Refutes Breach in Answer to Verified Complaint. If the complaint is verified, the defendant must deny the allegations of breach either positively (specifically) or according to information and belief [see CCP § 431.30(d)].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of preparing an answer to a verified complaint, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 14, Answers.

22.72[3] Pleading of Affirmative Defenses Is Necessary to Assert Excuse, Waiver, and Release.

22.72[3][a] Defendant Must Allege Affirmative Defenses in Answer. To the extent a defendant intends to raise any new matter constituting a defense (in other words, an affirmative defense), the defendant must include allegations of that new matter in the answer [CCP § 431.30(c)]. Each affirmative defense must be separately pleaded [CCP § 431.30(g)].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of preparing affirmative defenses in an answer, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 14, Answers.

22.72[3][b] Excuse for Nonperformance Must Be Affirmatively Pled. If the defendant's failure to perform is excused, the defendant must include allegations to support the excuse as an affirmative defense in the answer [Eucalyptus Growers Ass'n v. Orange County Nursery & Land Co. (1917) 174 C 330, 335, 163 P 45].

Exception:

If the excuse for nonperformance is apparent from the face of the contract, that excuse need not be affirmatively pleaded in the answer [Corson v. Brown Motel Invs., Inc. (1978) 87 CA3d 422, 425, 151 CR 385]. For example, a contract required defendant to pay a sum if plaintiff "did not receive a leasehold." Although the defendant did not affirmatively plead that it was excused from performance because plaintiff did procure the leasehold, such an allegation was not necessary because the defense was expressly stated in the contract [Corson v. Brown Motel Invs., Inc. (1978) 87 CA3d 422, 425, 151 CR 385].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of excuses for nonperformance, see 22.65.

22.72[3][c] Waiver of Breach Must Be Affirmatively Pled. Waiver is an affirmative defense, and must be affirmatively pleaded in the answer to be preserved as a defense [Williams v. Marshall (1951) 37 C2d 445, 456, 235 P2d 372].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of waiver as defense to breach of contract, see 22.65[5], 22.68.

22.72[3][d] Release Must Be Affirmatively Pled. If the defendant obtained a release of liability from the plaintiff, the existence of the release must be affirmatively alleged in the answer [Hildebrand v. Stonecrest Corp. (1959) 174 CA2d 158, 165, 344 P2d 378].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of release, see 22.65[6].

22.72[4] Advisable to Affirmatively Allege Defense Based on Payment. Reported California opinions indicate uncertainty as to whether the issue of payment can be raised by denial in the answer or whether it must be pleaded as an affirmative defense [compare Snodgrass v. Snodgrass (1927) 81 CA 360, 363, 253 P 755, with Pastene v. Pardini (1902) 135 C 431, 434, 67 P 681]. To be cautious, therefore, defense counsel should include an affirmative allegation regarding payment.

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of payment as performance, see 22.18.

22.72[5] Statute of Limitations Must Be Affirmatively Pled. The defense of the statute of limitations must be affirmatively pleaded in the answer. The defendant may also file a demurrer on the ground of statute of limitations [Union Sugar Co. v. Hollister Estate Co. (1935) 3 C2d 740, 744, 47 P2d 273].

22.72[6] Failure to Mitigate Damages Is Affirmative Defense. To assert the defense of the plaintiff's failure to mitigate damages, the defendant must allege it in the answer [Mass v. Board of Educ. (1964) 61 C2d 612, 616, 39 CR 739, 394 P2d 579].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of mitigation of damages, see Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions.

[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Judge:

Department:

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[OR, include specific denial if answering verified complaint:]

1. Defendant _____ [name] admits all statements in the complaint except as follows:
 _____ [specify].

[CONTINUE]

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege any affirmative defenses, e.g.,]

[EITHER, if alleging that plaintiff waived defendant's breach of contract]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Plaintiff Waived Breach of Contract)

1. On _____ [date], Plaintiff had full knowledge that Defendant had not _____ [specify performance or lack of performance constituting breach], and Plaintiff waived the right to performance on that date, in that Plaintiff elected to treat the contract as still in effect, viable, and binding, and Plaintiff accepted further performance of the contract from Defendant in that _____ [specify performance that plaintiff accepted].

[AND/OR, if alleging that defendant's performance was made impossible]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Impossibility of Performance)

[EITHER]

2. The _____ [specify condition or object] of the contract alleged in the complaint was impossible to _____ [fulfill or perform] at the time Defendant was to have _____ [fulfilled or performed] it, in that _____ [specify basis for impossibility].

[OR]

2. Defendant's performance of the obligation to _____ [specify nature of obligation] was prevented by _____ [an irresistible, superhuman cause or the act of public enemies], in that _____ [specify the cause act that rendered performance impossible].

[AND/OR, if alleging that defendant already made payment due payment]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Payment of Obligation)

3. On or about _____ [date], the obligation set forth in the complaint was fully discharged by Defendant's payment to Plaintiff of the sum of $ _____ [set forth amount paid], which was the full amount due and was accepted by Plaintiff in full payment of the obligation.

[AND/OR, if alleging that defendant made tender of payment to plaintiff, include Paragraphs 4 through 6, below]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Tender of Payment by Deposit and Notice)

4. On or about _____ [date], Defendant tendered to Plaintiff at _____ [city], California, $ _____ [amount tendered] in full payment of the alleged claim set forth in the complaint. Plaintiff refused, and continues to refuse, to accept the sum tendered.

5. On that date, Defendant deposited to the credit of Plaintiff in _____ [name of bank or savings and loan association], a _____ [specify type of entity, e.g., federal savings and loan association] located at _____ [specify address], California, the sum of $ _____ [specify amount deposited] in accordance with Civil Code Section 1500.

6. On _____ [date], Defendant notified Plaintiff of the deposit, in writing by _____ [specify method of delivery of notice, e.g., certified mail, return receipt requested] addressed to _____ [give address to which notice was mailed or at which it was served]. A copy of the notice is attached as Exhibit _____ [specify which exhibit] and incorporated by reference.

[AND/OR, if alleging that plaintiff prevented defendant's performance, include Paragraphs 7 through 9, below]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Prevention of Performance)

7. Defendant has performed all of the conditions of the contract on his/her/its part to be performed except _____ [specify condition not performed]. Defendant failed to perform the condition of _____ [specify condition] because Plaintiff prevented Defendant's performance by _____ [specify plaintiff's acts preventing defendant's performance, e.g., barring Defendant from the premises where Defendant was supposed to do the work required by the terms of the contract].

8. At all times mentioned Defendant was and is ready, willing, and able to perform the condition, but Plaintiff has prevented and continues to prevent Defendant's performance.

9. On _____ [date], Defendant gave notice to Plaintiff that _____ [specify contents of notice, e.g., Defendant intended to claim an extension of time to complete performance of the contract].

[AND/OR, if alleging failure of consideration by plaintiff, include Paragraphs 10 and 11, below]

SIXTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Failure of Consideration)

10. Defendant admits failing to perform the obligation described in the complaint but alleges that the failure resulted from Plaintiff's failure to _____ [specify], as required by the terms of the contract, and that performance on Plaintiff's part was a _____ [condition precedent to or concurrent condition with] the performance of Defendant's obligation.

11. Because of Plaintiff's failure and refusal to perform the obligation on Plaintiff's part to be performed, Defendant, on or about _____ [date], rescinded the contract by _____ [specify manner of rescission] and _____ [restored or offered to restore] to Plaintiff everything of value that Defendant had received under the contract.

[AND/OR, if alleging action is barred by statute of limitations]

SEVENTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Statute of Limitations)

12. The alleged breach described in Plaintiff's complaint occurred on or about _____ [date], while the complaint was filed on _____ [date]. Because the contract at issue is _____ [written or oral], the complaint is barred by the statute of limitations under _____ [Code of Civil Procedure Section 337(1) or Code of Civil Procedure Section 339(1)].

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

Wherefore, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

THE DEFENDANT IS LIABLE UNDER THE CONTRACT BECAUSE THE DEFENDANT COMMITTED ANTICIPATORY BREACH OF THE CONTRACT

Obligor's Statement of Intended Breach Constitutes Repudiation. An obligor's statement to the obligee indicating that the obligor will breach an important contractual promise, thereby substantially impairing the value of the contract, constitutes repudiation of the contract (Mobil Oil Exploration & Producing Southeast, Inc. v. United States (2000) 530 U.S. 604, 622-624, 120 S. Ct. 2423, 147 L. Ed.2d 528).

[Include the following argument, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party denying the existence of an anticipatory breach of contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case]

THE DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE UNDER THE CONTRACT BECAUSE THE DEFENDANT DID NOT COMMIT ANTICIPATORY BREACH OF THE CONTRACT

Obligor's Statement Was Not Unequivocal Refusal to Perform Amounting to Anticipatory Breach. Because repudiation of a contract requires a finding of clear, positive, and unequivocal refusal to perform, when the court finds that there was no clear, positive, and unequivocal refusal there is no anticipatory breach of the contract (*Taylor v. Memorandum for Party Asserting Material Breach of Contract.

[Include the following argument, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party asserting material breach of contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case]

THE DEFENDANT HAS NOT SUBSTANTIALLY PERFORMED THE CONTRACT IN THAT DEFENDANT HAS NOT FULLY PERFORMED HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATIONS UNDER THE CONTRACT AND THE DEVIATIONS FROM FULL PERFORMANCE SUBSTANTIALLY AFFECT THE USEFULNESS OF THE CONSIDERATION

A. General Rule Requiring Full Performance. When a person agrees to do a thing for another for a specified sum of money to be paid on full performance, he or she is not entitled to any part of the sum until he or she has done the thing as agreed, unless full performance has been excused, prevented, or delayed by the act of the other party, by operation of law, or by an act of God or a public enemy (Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 87, 92, 60 Cal. Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 288-289, 197 P. 105).

B. Substantial Performance Is Question of Fact. What constitutes substantial performance is always a question of fact, a matter of degree, and a question that must be determined relative to all of the other factors that exist (Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 291, 197 P. 105 ; Tolstoy Constr. Co. v. Minter (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 665, 672, 143 Cal. Rptr. 570).

[Optional] C. No Substantial Performance When Usefulness of Consideration Is Substantially Affected. The doctrine of substantial performance cannot be applied when the deviations from full performance substantially affect the usefulness of the consideration for which the nonbreaching party bargained (Tolstoy Constr. Co. v. Minter (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 665, 672-673, 143 Cal. Rptr. 570 ; Williams v. Elliott (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 357, 364, 273 P.2d 953).

[Optional] D. Substantial Performance Exists Only When Deviations Are Inadvertent. The doctrine of substantial performance is available only when the omissions or deviations from full performance are the result of mistake or inadvertence, not when the omissions or deviations are intentional or fraudulent (Perry v. Quackenbush (1894) 105 Cal. 299, 309, 38 P. 740 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 350, 365-366, 330 P.2d 817).

[Optional] E. Substantial Performance Exists Only When Damages Can Compensate for Deviations. The doctrine of substantial performance can be applied only if the failure to make full performance can be compensated in damages to be deducted from the price or allowed on a cross-complaint (Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 87, 92-93, 60 Cal. Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 289, 197 P. 105).

[Optional] F. Accumulation of Trivial Defects Negates Substantial Performance. Performance rendered under a contract may be held to be less than substantial by reason of the accumulation of many defects, although any one of them standing alone would be minor in character (Tolstoy Constr. Co. v. Minter (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 665, 673, 143 Cal. Rptr. 570).

NOTES.

Authority:

[Include the following argument, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum by the party denying material breach of contract, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case]

THE DEFENDANT HAS SUBSTANTIALLY PERFORMED HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATIONS UNDER THE CONTRACT, AND THE DEFENDANT MAY NOT BE DENIED THE BENEFIT OF THE BARGAIN BECAUSE OF MINOR DEPARTURES FROM COMPLETE PERFORMANCE OF THE CONTRACT

Substantial Performance of Contract. When the party who is bound to make payment has enjoyed the fruits of the other party's good faith substantial performance of the contract, if the failure to make full performance can be reflected in damages to be deducted from the price, and if the omissions or deviations from complete performance were not willful or fraudulent and do not substantially affect the purpose for which the paying party made the contract, the performing party, in an action on the contract, may recover the amount of the contract price that remains unpaid, less the amount allowed as damages for the failure to strictly perform (Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 87, 92-93, 60 Cal. Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 289-291, 197 P. 105).

Chapter 23 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
I. STRATEGY

2-23 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 23.01

23.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Objective and strategy for suing or defending an action for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing [see 23.02].
- The elements of a claim of breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing in a contract action [see 23.04].
- The duty imposed by the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing [see 23.05].
- Determining the nature and extent of that duty, based on express contractual relationship of parties [see 23.06, 23.07].
- Asserting or opposing a claim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing in a contract action [see 23.03, 23.08; Forms: see 23.10 -23.15], including:
 - Allegations required to state a cause of action distinct from ordinary breach of contract [see 23.08[1]]; and
 - Applicable statute of limitations [see 23.08[2]].
- Determining remedies for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing in a contract action [see 23.09], including the availability of tort damages only in an insurance context [see 23.09[1]].

Core Cases:

Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669 ; Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 C2d 654, 328 P2d 198

Chapter 23 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
I. STRATEGY

2-23 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 23.02

23.02 Objective and Strategy.

23.02[1] Suing for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing. The parties to a contract are bound not only by the express covenants of the agreement, but also by the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing [see 23.05]. The covenant of good faith and fair dealing is implied in every contract to prevent one party from unfairly frustrating the other party's rights to the benefits of the agreement [see 23.05].

Consider:

The precise nature and extent of the parties' duty of good faith and fair dealing depends on the express agreement [see 23.07]. Although the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is implied to assure compliance with the express provisions of the contract, the covenant cannot be used to create obligations not contemplated by the contract, or to vary the express terms of the parties' agreement [see 23.07].

Strategic Point--When to Sue for Breach of Covenant:

A party to a contract should consider suing for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing when the other party's conduct frustrates his or her rights to the benefits contemplated by the agreement, but technically does not transgress the express provisions of the contract [Love v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 CA3d 1136, 1153, 271 CR 246 ; see 23.07[1]].

Strategic Point--Use in Conjunction With Breach of Contract Claim:

A party to a contract should also consider suing for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing as a back-up to a breach of contract claim. To be successful, this supplementary use of the covenant must be accompanied by factual allegations over and above--but not inconsistent with--those alleged as the basis of the breach; for example, a typical successful use of the covenant involves allegations that defendant prevented plaintiff from performing under the contract. Thus, pleading a breach of the covenant in addition to a breach of contract may be useful when a defendant can be expected to mount a technical defense based on defendant's strict interpretation of the contract; that is, not denying the alleged misconduct, but merely denying that it was a breach of the parties' contract as properly interpreted.

Judge's Perspective:

A claim for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is most often presented when the defendant had the discretion to act in more than one way, and exercised that discretion in a way that frustrated plaintiff's ability to enjoy the benefits of the contract. Often, the defendant's conduct will not have violated the contract per se, but will be inconsistent with the parties' expressed purpose as described by the terms of that contract. Because the covenant may require conduct that is not specifically set forth in the contract, it can be a matter of serious dispute as to what conduct it actually requires. The purpose of the covenant is not to protect the general interests of the parties, nor to require them to act fairly for its own sake. The purpose is to protect the promises made in the contract itself [Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Dev. Cal., Inc. (1992) 2 C4th 342, 373, 6 CR2d 467, 826 P2d 710]. Thus, the plaintiff will most often bring a claim for breach of the covenant when plaintiff feels that the defendant's conduct (or omission) has prevented the plaintiff from getting everything he or she expected from the contract, and the defendant will most often claim that the plaintiff is seeking to add terms to the contract.

Detailed Discussion/Forms: California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts; Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender).

California Points and Authorities, Ch. 50, Contracts; Ch. 65, Damages (Matthew Bender).

23.02[2] Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing. The party defending an action for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing should scrutinize the express terms of the agreement to determine whether the plaintiff is attempting to create obligations not contemplated by the contract or at variance with the contract's express terms [see 23.07]. The party defending the action also should consider whether the validity or existence of the alleged contract between the parties can be attacked. The existence of a contractual relationship between the parties is a prerequisite for the action [see 23.06].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

The defendant also should determine whether the plaintiff's claim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing is merely a reiteration of an accompanying claim for breach of contract. If the plaintiff alleges both a breach of contract and a breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, the claim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing must allege conduct by the defendant beyond that directly actionable as a breach of contract in order to constitute a separate cause of action [see 23.07[2]].

As with any claim, the action must be brought in a timely manner. An action for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing is subject to the same statute of limitations as any action for breach of the underlying contract [see 23.08[2]].

In the context of insurance policies, a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may be the basis for recovery of tort damages [see 23.09[1]]. However, outside the insurance context, recovery is limited to contract damages [see 23.09[2]]. The defendant therefore should determine whether the plaintiff is seeking an unavailable or inappropriate measure of damages [see 23.09].

The defendant should oppose the claim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing with a demurrer or answer [see CCP §§ 430.10(e), 430.30, 431.30], as appropriate. If the plaintiff is improperly seeking tort damages in the contract action, defendant should consider a motion to strike the claim for such damages [see CCP §§ 435-437].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

Although the issue of breach generally is a question of fact, a claim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing may be subject to summary judgment or summary adjudication [see CCP § 437c] when there are no issues of triable fact [see 23.08[3]].

23.04 Elements of Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing.

All of the following elements must be satisfied to state a claim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing in a contract action:

- There must be a contractual relationship between the parties [Smith v. City & County of San Francisco (1990) 225 CA3d 38, 49, 275 CR 17 ; see 23.06].
- Plaintiff must have performed, or have been excused from performing, his or her obligations under the contract [see CC § 1439].
- Defendant must have unfairly prevented plaintiff from receiving the benefits that plaintiff was entitled to receive under the contract [Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 CA4th 1026, 1031, 14 CR2d 335 ; see 23.05, 23.07].
- Defendant's conduct must have resulted in harm to plaintiff [CC § 3300; Cates Constr., Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 C4th 28, 60-61, 86 CR2d 855, 980 P2d 407 ; see 23.09[2]].

Chapter 23 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF DUTY OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

2-23 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 23.05

23.05 Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Is Implied in Every Contract.

There is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract that neither party will do anything to injure the right of the other party to receive the benefits of the agreement [Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 C2d 654, 658, 328 P2d 198].

The covenant of good faith and fair dealing not only imposes on each contracting party the duty to refrain from doing anything that would render performance of the contract impossible by any act of his or her own, but also the duty to do everything that the contract presupposes that he or she will do to accomplish its purpose [Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 CA2d 405, 417, 5 CR 367].

Example:

An event producer agreed to pay for improvements to an amphitheater owned by a city. The city agreed to give the producer credit, equal to the amount paid for the improvements, to be applied against license fees that the producer would otherwise be charged for producing events in the amphitheater. The parties' agreement contemplated that the producer would submit applications for approval of events that it intended to produce in 2000 and 2001. Although the city did not guarantee that any of the applications would be approved, the city was required, under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, to consider proposals submitted by the producer. When the city barred the producer from submitting any proposals in 2001, the producer could allege a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing [Pasadena Live, LLC v. City of Pasadena (2004) 114 CA4th 1089, 1092-1093].

Chapter 23 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF DUTY OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

2-23 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 23.06

23.06 Express Contractual Relationship Is Required.

23.06[1] Existence of Contract Is Prerequisite to Action. The prerequisite for any action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is the existence of a contractual relationship between the parties, because the covenant is an implied term in the contract [Smith v. City & County of San Francisco (1990) 225 CA3d 38, 49, 275 CR 17].

Example:

After working for a public university for over 25 years, plaintiff was transferred, allegedly forced to work overtime, and terminated. Plaintiff could not state a claim for breach of contract or breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing because public employment in California is held by statute, rather than by contract [Kim v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2000) 80 CA4th 160, 164-165, 95 CR2d 10].

Warning:

The alleged breach of the covenant must have occurred after the contract took effect, not during negotiations [see Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 CA4th 1026, 1034, 14 CR2d 335 ("the fact that parties commence negotiations looking to a contract, or to the amendment of an existing contract, does not by itself impose any duty on either party not to be unreasonable or not to break off negotiation, for any reason or for no reason")].

23.06[2] Breach of Express Contract Provision Is Not Required. Although the parties must have an express contractual relationship, breach of a specific provision of the contract is not a prerequisite for an action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing [Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Dev. Cal., Inc. (1992) 2 C4th 342, 373, 6 CR2d 467, 826 P2d 710].

Example:

An event producer agreed to pay for improvements to an amphitheater owned by a city. The city agreed to give the producer credit, in the amount paid for the improvements, for license fees that the producer would otherwise be charged for producing events in the amphitheater. The parties' agreement contemplated that the producer would submit applications for approval of events that it intended to produce in 2000 and 2001. Although the city did not guarantee that any of the applications would be approved, the city was required, under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, to consider proposals submitted by the producer. When the city barred the producer from submitting any proposals in 2001, the producer could allege a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The alleged breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing constituted a breach of contract for which the producer could recover damages [Pasadena Live, LLC v. City of Pasadena (2004) 114 CA4th 1089, 1090, 1092-1093].

Chapter 23 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF DUTY OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

2-23 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 23.07

23.07 Nature and Extent of Duty Depends on Contract Purpose.

23.07[1] Covenant Assures Compliance With Express Terms of Contract. The covenant of good faith and fair dealing is read into contracts to protect the express covenants or promises of the contract [Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 CA4th 1026, 1031, 14 CR2d 335]. The covenant is implied as a supplement to the express contractual covenants, to prevent a contracting party from engaging in conduct that, while not technically transgressing the express covenants, frustrates the other party's rights to the benefits of the contract [Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 CA4th 1026, 1031-1032, 14 CR2d 335].

Example--Breach:

When benefits are due an insured under an insurance policy, delayed payment based on inadequate or tardy investigations, oppressive conduct by claims adjusters, seeking to reduce the amounts legitimately payable, and other similar tactics, while not technically breaching the express covenants of the policy, may breach the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing because such conduct frustrates the insured's right to receive prompt compensation for losses [Love v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 CA3d 1136, 1153, 271 CR 246].

Example--No Breach:

An insured's allegations that an insurer did not properly investigate her claim for theft loss did not support a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Because it was undisputed that the policy at issue provided absolutely no coverage for theft loss, there was nothing that an investigation could have revealed to the insured's benefit [Rios v. Scottsdale Ins. Co. (2004) 119 CA4th 1020, 1028].

➡ Cross Reference:

Form for points and authorities for party claiming breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing, see 23.12, 23.13.

23.07[2] Covenant Does Not Create Obligations Not Contemplated by Contract. The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is limited to assuring compliance with the express terms of the contract and cannot be extended to create obligations not contemplated in the contract [Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 CA4th 1026, 1032, 14 CR2d 335].

Examples:

■ A concessionaire operated a tobacco shop and wine tasting facility in a state park under a contract with the Department of Parks and Recreation. The concessionaire sought to modify the existing and unexpired concession contract to allow the operation of a restaurant and the on-premises sale of alcoholic beverages. When negotiations to modify the contract broke down, the concessionaire sued the Department, alleging, among other things, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Because there was no express contractual obligation to negotiate a modification of the existing contract, there was no implied obligation to bargain for a new or amended contract in good faith [Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 CA4th 1026, 1032-1034, 14 CR2d 335].

■ The former sales manager for two radio stations sued the owner of the stations upon termination of his employment alleging, among other things, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The employment agreement specifically stated that the manager's employment was "at-will." Because the implied covenant cannot impose substantive duties or limits on the contracting parties beyond those incorporated in the specific terms of the agreement, the implied covenant did not impose a duty on the owner to terminate the employment only for good cause [Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 CA4th 596, 607-608].

 Cross References:

Form for answer with affirmative defense(s), see 23.11.

Forms for points and authorities for party defending claim of breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing, see 23.14, 23.15.

23.07[3] Covenant Does Not Supersede Specific Contractual Provisions. The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing cannot be used to vary the express terms of a contract [Wolf v. Walt Disney Pictures & Television (2008) 162 CA4th 1107, 1120, 76 CR3d 585] .

Thus, the parties, by express provisions of the contract, may grant the right to engage in the very acts and conduct that would otherwise have been forbidden by an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing [Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Dev. Cal., Inc. (1992) 2 C4th 342, 374, 6 CR2d 467, 826 P2d 710].

Example:

A sales representative agreement provided that the agreement would be effective until 30 days after notice of termination given by either party. The agreement also expressly provided that notice of termination could be given at any time and for any reason. The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing could not be used to impose a requirement of good cause for termination, contrary to the express contract provision. No obligation could be implied that would result in the obliteration of a right expressly given under the written contract [Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 CA3d 263, 277, 235 CR 279].

Parties who are not acting with undue influence or unconscionability may agree to a contract containing terms that would violate the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. If they have bargained for those terms, then the court may not imply a term that deviates from it. To do so would be unfair to the party who bargained for the unfair provision [Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 CA3d 263, 277, 235 CR 279].

Distinguish:

Although the rights granted by the covenant of good faith and fair dealing can be specifically bargained away, the covenant of good faith and fair dealing cannot be waived [see Milton v. Hudson Sales Corp. (1957) 152 CA2d 418, 432, 313 P2d 936].

Form for answer with affirmative defense(s), see 23.11.

Forms for points and authorities for party defending claim for breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing, see 23.14, 23.15.

23.07[4] Covenant Requires That Discretion Be Exercised in Good Faith. The covenant of good faith and fair dealing particularly applies if one party is invested with a discretionary power affecting the rights of another. Such a power must be exercised in good faith [Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Dev. Cal., Inc. (1992) 2 C4th 342, 372, 6 CR2d 467, 826 P2d 710]. The standard for judging whether a party acted in good faith is one of objective reasonableness rather than subjective fancy, taste or judgment [Peak-Las Positas Partners v. Bollag (2009) 172 CA4th 101, 106, 90 CR3d 775 (seller of real property acted unreasonably in refusing to extend escrow period)].

Example:

Plaintiff entered into a development agreement with defendant. Under the terms of the agreement, defendant guaranteed plaintiff a certain amount of compensation over a period of three years, and plaintiff agreed to submit her proposals for motion pictures to defendant. Although defendant paid plaintiff the full amount of the guaranteed compensation, defendant did not develop any of plaintiff's proposed projects or hire her to direct any films. Although defendant was entitled to reject plaintiff's proposals based on its subjective dissatisfaction, the evidence raised a triable issue of material fact as to whether the defendant breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by categorically refusing to work with plaintiff without regard to the merits of her proposed projects [Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc. (1997) 57 CA4th 354, 364-367, 66 CR2d 921].

Jury Instructions:

Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Requires Party to Act Reasonably in Exercising Discretionary Power, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3B, Instr. MB 300B.09 (Matthew Bender).

23.07[5] Conduct May Constitute Breach of Covenant Regardless of Actor's Motive. The opposing party's conduct allegedly constituting a breach of good faith and fair dealing need not have been dishonest; the covenant of good faith and fair dealing can be breached through objectively unreasonable conduct, regardless of the actor's motive [Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Dev. Cal., Inc. (1992) 2 C4th 342, 373, 6 CR2d 467, 826 P2d 710].

Chapter 23 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF DUTY OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

2-23 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 23.08

23.08 Asserting Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing in Contract Action.

23.08[1] Allegations Must Go Beyond Mere Contract Breach. A plaintiff alleging breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing must plead and prove each fact that is essential to the claim [see Evid Code § 500].

Warning:

If the plaintiff's allegations of breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing do not go beyond the statement of a mere contract breach, and simply rely on the same acts alleged in a companion breach of contract cause of action, the allegations may be disregarded as superfluous [Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 C4th 317, 352, 100 CR2d 352, 8 P3d 1089 ; Careau & Co. v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 CA3d 1371, 1395, 272 CR 387].

Example:

A water district terminated its contract with a company that provided the district with temporary employees, in accordance with the termination provision of the contract. The company sued for breach of contract, claiming that good cause was required for termination and alleging breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Because the unambiguous language of the contract did not require good cause for termination, the water district was entitled to summary adjudication on the claim for breach of contract. Because the claim for breach of the implied covenant relied on the same acts and sought the same damages as the breach of contract claim, defendant was also entitled to summary adjudication on that claim [Bionghi v. Metropolitan Water Dist. (1999) 70 CA4th 1358, 1363, 1370, 83 CR2d 388].

Strategic Point--Party Alleging Breach of Covenant:

The plaintiff should take particular care to allege facts indicating that defendant's conduct that constituted a breach of the implied covenant was distinct from any alleged breach of an express covenant of the contract, yet prevented plaintiff from receiving benefits to which he or she was entitled under the contract.

► Cross References:

Form for complaint for breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing in contract action, see 23.10.
Form for answer with affirmative defenses, see 23.11.

23.08[2] Statute of Limitations for Breach of Contract Action Applies. Because a claim for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing in a contract action is based on an implied contractual promise, the claim is subject to the same statute of limitations as any action for breach of the underlying contract [Love v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 CA3d 1136, 1144 n4, 271 CR 246]:

- When the parties have a written contract, a claim for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is subject to the four-year limitation of CCP § 337(1) [Love v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 CA3d 1136, 1144 n4, 271 CR 246].

- If the claim is based on the existence of an oral contract, the claim is subject to the two-year statute of limitations in CCP § 339(1) [see Mullins v. Rockwell Int'l Corp. (1997) 15 C4th 731, 736, 63 CR2d 636, 936 P2d 1246].

Strategic Point:

If the claim of breach of the implied covenant is based on an alleged oral contract, defendant also should consider whether the claim is subject to a defense based on the statute of frauds [see CC § 1624].

► Cross References:

Form for answer with affirmative defense of statute of limitations, see 23.11.

Discussion of statute of frauds issues, see Ch. 15, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities.

23.08[3] Issue of Breach Is Generally Question of Fact. The issue of whether the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing has been breached ordinarily is a question of fact, unless only one inference can be drawn from the evidence [Hicks v. E.T. Legg & Assocs. (2001) 89 CA4th 496, 509, 108 CR2d 10].

Judge's Perspective:

Because the covenant of good faith and fair dealing looks to the parties' reasonable expectations regarding the performance of the contract's terms, preparing to assert or defend a claim for breach of the covenant is similar to preparing a claim for breach of the contract itself when the terms are ambiguous. In either case, the question is what the parties reasonably expected each other to do to satisfy their contractual obligations. In defending a claim for breach of the covenant, however, practitioners also must make sure to pin down:

- What benefit the parties each expected to receive from the contract.
- What term of the contract was expected to produce that benefit.
- How the alleged violation of the covenant frustrated the plaintiff's receipt of the expected benefit.

Example--Issue of Fact:

Plaintiff entered into a development agreement with defendant. Under the terms of the agreement, defendant guaranteed plaintiff a certain amount of compensation over a period of three years, and plaintiff agreed to submit her proposals for motion pictures to defendant. Although defendant paid plaintiff the full amount of the guaranteed compensation, defendant did not develop any of plaintiff's proposed projects or hire her to direct any films. Although defendant was entitled to reject plaintiff's proposals based on its subjective dissatisfaction, the evidence raised a triable issue of material fact as to whether the defendant breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by categorically refusing to work with plaintiff without regard to the merits of her proposed projects [Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc. (1997) 57 CA4th 354, 364-367, 66 CR2d 921].

Examples--No Issue of Fact:

- The former sales manager for two radio stations sued the owner of the stations upon termination of his employment alleging, among other things, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The employment agreement specifically stated that the manager's employment was "at-will." Because the implied covenant cannot impose substantive duties or limits on the contracting parties beyond those incorporated in the specific terms of the agreement, the implied covenant did not impose a duty on the owner to terminate the employment only for good cause. The owner was entitled to summary adjudication in his favor on the cause of action for breach of the implied covenant [Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 CA4th 596, 607-608].

- A mobilehome owners association alleged that the city breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing when it announced that it planned to sell the mobilehome park to a nonprofit housing corporation using tax exempt bond financing, rather than sell the park to the owners. The court observed that it was undisputed that the city had notified the owners association in a timely manner of its intent to sell the park, as required by the leases between the city and tenants of the park. Although the owners alleged that the notice was a sham because the city had no intent to sell the park to the owners, the court concluded that neither the lease nor CC § 798.80(a), which was incorporated into the lease, required the city to offer the park to the residents under any particular terms. Moreover, the court held that the allegation that the notice the city gave was a "sham" was an unsupported conclusion of fact or law the court was not bound to accept as true. Accordingly, the court properly sustained the city's demurrer [Poway Royal Mobilehome Owners Assn. v. City of Poway (2007) 149 CA4th 1460, 1477-1478, 58 CR3d 153].

- An author sued a production company, alleging the production company had failed to fully compensate the author for its exploitation of the cartoon characters depicted in the author's novel. The author argued that the production company breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by purposefully orchestrating promotional agreements for which it received no monetary consideration. The trial court properly directed a verdict for the production company because there were no disputed factual issues for the jury to decide. Because the parties' agreement gave the production company unfettered discretion to license or not license the characters as it "saw fit," recognizing an implied term limiting that discretion would be at odds with the express terms of the agreement [Wolf v. Walt Disney Pictures & Television (2008) 162 CA4th 1107, 1121-1123, 76 CR3d 585].

Consider:

Since breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is a question of fact, an assertion that a breach has occurred, if properly pled, is unlikely to be decided one way or the other on summary judgment.

Chapter 23 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
II. ESTABLISHING BREACH OF DUTY OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

2-23 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 23.09

23.09 Determining Remedies for Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing in Contract Action.

23.09[1] Tort Damages Are Available Only for Breach of Duty in Insurance Context. In the context of insurance policies, a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may be the basis for recovery of tort damages [see Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 C2d 654, 658, 328 P2d 198]. Because the breach may be the basis for tort liability, punitive damages may also be available in insurance cases [see CC § 3294].

Warning:

Although tort damages may be available in an insurance context, tort remedies are not necessarily available for all disputes arising in the insurance context [see, e.g., Jonathan Neil & Assocs., Inc. v. Jones (2004) 33 C4th 917, 941 (retroactive overcharging of premium insurer knew was not owed was not basis for tort action for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing)].

Breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing in a noninsurance contract does not give rise to tort liability in the absence of violation of an independent duty arising from tort law other than the bad faith denial of the existence of, or liability under, the breached contract [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 102, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669].

Search Current California Case Law:

Use lexis.com to search for current cases on damages for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing:

● Legal > States Legal--U.S. > California > Find Cases > CA Published Cases, Combined

Sample Search: For current California case law regarding the availability of damages for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, try: damage! /5 breach! /5 duty OR oblig! /5 good faith fair dealing.

Strategic Point--Defendant:

If plaintiff has improperly made a claim for tort damages for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, consider filing a demurrer or motion to strike the claim for such damages [see CCP §§ 435-437].

Cross References:

Forms for points and authorities for party defending claim of breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing, see 23.14, 23.15.

Detailed discussion of motions to strike, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 12, Motions to Strike.

Discussion of the unavailability of tort damages for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing in an employment context, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline (Matthew Bender).

Detailed discussion of breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing in insurance context and availability of tort remedies, see California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.03 (Matthew Bender).

23.09[2] Only Contract Damages Are Recoverable in Noninsurance Context. Tort remedies are unavailable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing outside the insurance context [Cates Constr., Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 C4th 28, 60-61, 86 CR2d 855, 980 P2d 407 ; see Spinks v. Equity Residential Briarwood Apartments (2009) 171 CA4th 1004, 1054-1055, 90 CR3d 453 (no punitive damages for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in noninsurance cases)].

A party claiming breach of the implied covenant in a noninsurance context is therefore limited to contract damages [Cates Constr., Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 C4th 28, 60-61, 86 CR2d 855, 980 P2d 407]. Unless otherwise expressly provided by statute, the measure of damages for breach of an obligation arising from contract is the amount that will compensate the aggrieved party for all the detriment proximately caused by the breach, or which, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result from the breach [CC § 3300].

Search California Forms of Pleading and Practice:

Use lexis.com to search for documents on remedies and breach of contract actions:

■ Legal > States Legal--U.S. > California > Search Analytical & CLE Materials > CA Treatises & Analytical Materials > Matthew Bender(R) > California Forms of Pleading and Practice

Sample Search: To find general, secondary material on remedies and breach of contract actions, try: remedy /5 breach! /5 contract!.

Consider:

Although the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in a noninsurance context does not give rise to tort liability, if the defendant's conduct also violates an independent duty arising from principles of tort law, the plaintiff may be able to allege both contract and tort causes of action [see Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 C4th 503, 515, 28 CR2d 475, 869 P2d 454 ; Spinks v. Equity Residential Briarwood Apartments (2009) 171 CA4th 1004, 1055, 90 CR3d 453] .

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's Complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege any affirmative defenses, e.g.,]

[EITHER, if alleging that no contract exists because defendant is not identified as a party]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Statute of Limitations)

2. Plaintiff's cause of action for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing is barred by the statute of limitations.

[AND/OR, if alleging that there is no contractual relationship between the parties]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (No Contract Between Parties)

3. There is no contractual relationship between the parties, and therefore no duty of good faith and fair dealing existed between the parties on which Plaintiff's claim can be based.

[AND/OR, if alleging that purported breach did not deprive plaintiff of any benefits of the contract to which he/she was entitled]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Plaintiff Not Deprived of Benefits of Contract)

4. Defendant's alleged breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing did not deprive Plaintiff of any benefits to which Plaintiff was entitled under the contract.

[AND/OR, if alleging that plaintiff's claim of breach attempts to create obligations not contemplated by the contract]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (Plaintiff's Claim Attempts to Create Obligations Not Contemplated by Contract)

5. By alleging that Defendant breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, Plaintiff is attempting to impose on Defendant an obligation that was not contemplated by the contract, in that _____ [ summarize, e.g., the contract did not require or obligate Defendant to authorize Plaintiff to produce any events at the theater].

[AND/OR, if alleging that plaintiff's claim attempts to vary express terms of the contract]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Plaintiff's Claim Attempts to Vary Express Terms of Contract)

6. Plaintiff's claim of an alleged breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing attempts to vary or contradict the express terms of the contract in that _____ [summarize, e.g., the contract expressly permitted Defendant to deny Plaintiff authorization to produce any event at the theater if, in Defendant's judgment, the event failed to satisfy the usual and customary criteria applied by Defendant in determining whether or not to authorize such events, and Defendant did apply those criteria in refusing to authorize Plaintiff to produce events at the theater].

Points and Authorities for Party Claiming Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing in Contract Action--Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Protects Party's Rights to Benefits of Contract.

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum of points and authorities by the party claiming breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case]

DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT BREACHED THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BECAUSE IT PREVENTED PLAINTIFF FROM RECEIVING THE BENEFITS OF THE CONTRACT

A. Covenant Is Implied in Every Contract. There is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract that neither party will do anything to injure the right of the other party to receive the benefits of the agreement (Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 658, 328 P.2d 198).

B. Covenant Imposes Duty to Do Everything Required to Accomplish Contract's Purpose. The covenant of good faith and fair dealing not only imposes on each contracting party the duty to refrain from doing anything that would render performance of the contract impossible by any act of his or her own, but also the duty to do everything that the contract presupposes that he or she will do to accomplish its purpose (Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 405, 417, 5 Cal. Rptr. 367).

C. Covenant Prohibits Conduct That Frustrates Other Party's Rights to Benefits of Contract. The covenant of good faith and fair dealing is implied as a supplement to the express contractual covenants, to prevent a contracting party from engaging in conduct that, while not technically transgressing the express covenants, frustrates the other party's rights to the benefits of the contract (Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1026, 1031-1032, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335).

PLAINTIFF CANNOT USE THE COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING TO IMPOSE OBLIGATIONS ON DEFENDANT THAT WERE NOT CONTEMPLATED BY THE CONTRACT

A. Covenant Is Limited to Assuring Compliance With Express Terms of Contract. The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is limited to assuring compliance with the express terms of the contract and cannot be extended to create obligations not contemplated in the contract (Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1026, 1032, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335).

[Include the following, if appropriate under the circumstances of the case, in a memorandum of points and authorities by the party claiming breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case]

PLAINTIFF CANNOT RECOVER TORT DAMAGES FOR THE ALLEGED BREACH OF THE COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

A. Breach of Covenant Does Not Give Rise to Tort Liability in Noninsurance Context. Breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing in a noninsurance contract does not give rise to tort liability in the absence of violation of an independent duty arising from tort law other than the bad faith denial of the existence of, or liability under, the breached contract (Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 102, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669).

B. Party Claiming Breach of Covenant in Noninsurance Context Is Limited to Contract Damages. A party claiming breach of the implied covenant in a noninsurance context is limited to contract damages (Cates Constr., Inc. v. Talbot Partners (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 28, 60-61, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 855, 980 P.2d 407). Unless otherwise expressly provided by statute, the measure of damages is the amount that will compensate the aggrieved party for all the detriment proximately caused by the breach, or which, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result from the breach (CC § 3300).

24.03 CHECKLIST: Reviewing Application of California Warranty Statutes.

24.04 Commercial Code Provides Foundation for California Commercial Warranty Law.

24.04[1] Commercial Code Warranties Apply to Transactions in Goods.

24.04[2] Commercial Code Is Inapplicable to Warranties for Services.

24.05 Song-Beverly Act Governs Warranties in Consumer Transactions.

24.05[1] Song-Beverly Act Provides Additional Consumer Warranty Rules.

24.05[2] Song-Beverly Act Warranties Apply to Sales of New Consumer Goods.

24.05[3] Limited Application to Sales of Used Goods.

24.05[4] Song-Beverly Act Imposes Repair and Service Obligations on Consumer Warrantors.

24.06 Federal Magnuson-Moss Act Provides Additional Warranty Protection.

24.07 Consumer Goods Must Be Installed in Good and Workmanlike Manner.

24.08 Warranties Can Apply to Construction Projects.

24.09 Other Specialized Warranty Schemes Exist.

24.10 CHECKLIST: Determining If Warranty Exists.

24.11 Options and Strategy.

24.12 Express Warranties Are Created by Contract and Seller's Actions.

24.12[1] Any Affirmation of Fact or Promise Creates Express Warranty.

24.12[2] Use of Formal Words Is Not Necessary to Create Express Warranty.

24.12[3] Specific Intent to Create Express Warranty Is Not Necessary.

24.12[4] Creation of Express Warranty Is Not Limited to Contract Language.

24.12[4][a] Any Affirmation of Fact or Promise Will Suffice.

24.12[4][b] Description of Goods May Create Express Warranty.

24.12[4][c] Technical Specifications May Create Express Warranty.

24.12[4][d] Sample or Model May Create Express Warranty.

24.12[4][e] Offer of Examination May Create Express Warranty.

24.12[4][f] Advertisements May Create Express Warranty.

24.12[4][g] Course of Dealing May Create Express Warranty.

24.12[5] Statements of Seller's Opinion or Commendation Do Not Create Express Warranty.

24.12[6] Seller's Statements During Negotiation Are Presumed to Be Affirmations of Fact.

24.12[7] Express Warranty Does Not Require Privity of Contract.

24.13 Implied Warranties May Be Imposed by Statute.

24.13[1] Implied Warranty of Merchantability Exists If Seller Is Merchant With Respect to Goods Sold.

24.13[2] Implied Warranty of Merchantability Exists for All Consumer Goods Sold at Retail.

24.13[3] Implied Warranty of Fitness Exists If Seller Knows Goods Are for Particular Purpose and That Buyer Is Relying on Seller's Skill and Judgment.

24.13[4] Implied Warranty of Fitness Exists for All Consumer Goods Sold at Retail for Particular Purpose.

24.13[5] Vertical Privity of Contract Is Required for Implied Warranties of Fitness and Merchantability.

24.14 Contract for Sale of Goods Includes Warranties of Title.

24.14[1] Sale of Goods Includes Warranty of Good Title.

24.14[2] Sale of Goods Includes Warranty That Goods Are Free From Liens or Encumbrances.

24.14[3] Warranties May Be Modified Only by Express Language or Special Circumstances.

24.14[4] Warranty Is Inapplicable If Seller's Compliance With Buyer's Specifications Causes "Breach."

24.14[5] Warranty of Title Is Not Considered an "Implied" Warranty.

24.14[6] Warranties of Title Apply to Sales of Consumer Goods.

24.15 Commercial Code Warranties May Be Disclaimed or Limited.

24.15[1] Words or Conduct Creating and Negating Express Warranties Will Be Construed As Consistent.

24.15[2] Implied Warranty of Merchantability May Be Disclaimed or Limited by Conspicuous Language.

24.15[3] Implied Warranty of Fitness May Be Disclaimed by Conspicuous Language.

24.15[4] "As Is" or Similar Language Is Sufficient to Disclaim All Implied Warranties.

24.15[5] Examination of Sample or Model Defeats Implied Warranties.

24.15[6] Implied Warranties May Be Excluded or Modified by Trade Usage or Course of Dealing.

24.15[7] Buyer Must Be Placed on Fair Notice of and Agree to Any Disclaimer or Modification.

24.15[8] "Conspicuous" Means Written So Reasonable Person Ought to Notice It.

24.16 Implied Warranties in Consumer Transactions Generally Cannot Be Disclaimed.

24.16[1] Song-Beverly Act Generally Prohibits Disclaimers.

24.16[2] Express Warranties May Not Limit Implied Warranties.

24.16[3] Exception Exists for "As Is" Sales.

24.17 Commercial Code Warranties Are Construed As Consistent With Each Other.

24.17[1] Warranties Are Construed As Consistent and Cumulative When Possible.

24.17[2] If Multiple Warranties Contradict Each Other, Parties' Intention Determines Dominant Warranty.

24.17[3] Rules of Construction for Determining Parties' Intent May Be Disproved by Evidence That Conditions Made Them Unreasonable.

24.18 CHECKLIST: Determining If Warranty Has Been Breached.

24.19 Options and Strategy.

24.20 Breach Occurs When Goods Do Not Conform to Warranty Terms.

24.21 Breach May Be Question of Law or Fact.

24.22 Compliance With Implied Warranty of Merchantability Is Determined With Reference to Statutory Criteria.

24.22[1] Commercial Code Specifies Attributes of Merchantable Goods.

24.22[2] Goods Must Pass Without Objection in Trade.

24.22[3] Fungible Goods Must Be Fair Average Quality.

24.22[4] Goods Must Be Fit for Ordinary Purposes.

24.22[5] Goods Must Be of Even Kind, Quality, and Quantity.

24.22[6] Goods Must Be Adequately Contained, Packaged, and Labeled.

24.22[7] Goods Must Conform to Promises or Affirmations of Fact on Label.

24.23 Breach of Warranty of Fitness Is Determined With Reference to Seller's Particular Use.

24.24 Warranty of Title Is Breached by Seller's Failure to Deliver Clear Title to Goods.

24.25 Warranty Must Be in Effect At Time Breach Occurs.

24.25[1] Breach Normally Occurs When Tender of Delivery Is Made.

24.25[2] Exception Exists for Warranties Relating to Future Performance.

24.25[3] Implied Warranties in Consumer Contracts Are Subject to Special Rules.

24.25[3][a] Duration of Implied Warranties Is Determined With Reference to Express Warranties.

24.25[3][b] Duration of Implied Warranty Is Set by Statute in Absence of Express Warranty.

24.26 CHECKLIST: Determining Remedies for Breach of Warranty

24.27 Options and Strategy.

24.28 General Measure of Damages Is Difference Between Value of Goods Accepted and Value of Goods Complying With Warranty.

24.28[1] Value Is Measured at Time and Place of Acceptance.

24.28[2] Buyer May Recover Incidental and Consequential Damages.

24.28[3] Buyer Who Rejects Goods May Cover and Recover Damages.

24.28[4] If Nonconformity Would Have Justified Revocation, Time and Place of Acceptance Is Determined As of Buyer's Decision Not to Revoke.

24.28[5] Strict Liability Governs Personal and Property Damage.

24.29 Equitable Remedies Are Available.

- 24.30 Seller Liable for Injury If Buyer Reasonably Used Goods Without Inspection.
- 24.31 Contract May Limit Remedies for Breach of Warranty.
- 24.32 Special Remedies Provisions Apply to Warranty Actions Involving Consumer Goods.
 - 24.32[1] Consumer May Seek Damages and Equitable Relief.
 - 24.32[2] Measure of Damages Includes Replacement or Reimbursement.
 - 24.32[3] Consumer May Recover Additional Civil Penalties in Specified Cases.
 - 24.32[4] Consumer May Recover Attorney's Fees.
- 24.33 CHECKLIST: Asserting Claim for Breach of Express or Implied Warranty.
- 24.34 Options and Strategy.
- 24.35 Commercial Code Requires That Buyer Must First Give Seller Timely Notice of Breach.
 - 24.35[1] Notice Must Be Given Within Reasonable Time After Discovery of Breach.
 - 24.35[2] Time of Notification Is Determined by Applying Commercial Standards.
 - 24.35[3] Content of Notification Must Be Sufficient to Let Seller Know That Buyer Claims Breach.
- 24.36 Complaint Under Commercial Code Must Plead Essential Elements of Breach of Warranty.
 - 24.36[1] Plaintiff Must Prove Elements of Warranty.
 - 24.36[2] Complaint for Breach of Warranty Must Allege Essential Elements of Claim.
 - 24.36[3] Plaintiff Need Not Plead Breach of Contract.
 - 24.36[4] Seller Has Burden of Proving Representation Did Not Form Basis of Bargain.
- 24.37 Complaint for Breach of Warranty for Consumer Goods Must Plead Essential Elements Under Song-Beverly Act.
- 24.38 Statute of Limitations Is Four Years Unless Shortened by Contract.
 - 24.38[1] Four-Year Period Generally Applies.
 - 24.38[2] Commercial Code Statute of Limitations Applies to Actions Under Song-Beverly Act.
 - 24.38[3] Contract May Shorten Period to Not Less Than One Year, but May Not Extend It Past Four Years.
 - 24.38[4] Limitations Period Runs From Time of Breach.
 - 24.38[5] Action for Warranty As to Future Performance Accrues When Breach Is Discovered.

24.38[6] Attempt to Cure Tolls Limitations Period.

24.38[7] Limitation Period Does Not Apply in Action Against Manufacturer.

24.39 CHECKLIST: Opposing Claim for Breach of Express or Implied Warranty.

24.40 Options and Strategy.

24.41 Defendant Can Demur If Clear Contractual Language of Waiver or Modification Is Attached to Complaint.

24.42 Numerous Potential Affirmative Defenses Exist.

24.42[1] Loss May Have Resulted From Action or Event Following Delivery of Goods.

24.42[2] Agreement Between Parties May Have Limited Available Remedies.

24.42[3] Express Warranty May Have Been Negated by Words or Conduct.

24.42[4] All Implied Warranties May Have Been Excluded by "As Is" Contract Language.

24.42[5] Implied Warranty of Merchantability May Have Been Excluded or Modified by Conspicuous Language Mentioning Merchantability.

24.42[6] Implied Warranty of Fitness May Have Been Excluded by Conspicuous Writing.

24.42[7] Implied Warranty May Have Been Excluded or Modified by Course of Dealing or Trade Usage.

24.42[8] Warranty May Have Been Excluded by Plaintiff's Opportunity to Examine Goods Prior to Forming Contract.

24.42[9] Buyer May Have Had Reason to Know Seller Did Not Claim Title.

24.42[10] Goods May Have Complied With Specifications Supplied by Buyer.

24.42[11] Buyer Cannot Claim Benefit of Express Warranty That Buyer Did Not Know About at Time of Contracting.

24.42[12] Seller May Have Made No Affirmation of Fact or Promise.

24.43 Buyer Sued by Third Party May Give Seller Opportunity to Defend ("Vouch In").

I. STRATEGY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.01

24.01 Scope.

This chapter covers:

- Reviewing and applying the California statutes that govern warranty law [see 24.03 -24.09].
- Determining if a contract contains express or implied warranties [see 24.10 -24.13].
- Determining if contractual warranties have been validly limited or disclaimed [see 24.15 -24.17].
- Determining if warranties have been breached [see 24.18 -24.25].
- Determining the available remedies for breach of warranty [see 24.26 -24.32].
- Asserting a claim for breach of warranty [see 24.33 -24.37; complaints with allegations, see 24.44, 24.45].
- Statute of limitations for actions based on a breach of warranty [see 24.38].
- Opposing a breach of warranty action with a demurrer or affirmative defense [see 24.41, 24.42; answers with affirmative defenses, see 24.46, 24.47].

Core Statutes:

Com Code §§ 2312-2317; CC § 1790 et seq. (Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act)

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty

I. STRATEGY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.02

24.02 Objective and Strategy.

A purchaser who is dissatisfied with the quality or suitability of goods received under a contract may look to a breach of warranty action to recoup damages or obtain other relief. When a contract relates to the sale of goods, it may contain both express and implied promises that the goods will conform to specified standards. These promises are known as warranties, and may provide an alternate or additional basis for seeking recovery on a contract, especially when it is unclear whether or not a breach in the seller's performance would otherwise exist.

Strategic Point--Plaintiff/Purchaser:

A purchaser who is dissatisfied with the goods typically will attempt to assert that:

- Warranties exist by virtue of either the language of the contract, the conduct of the seller, or the applicable law;
- One or more of those warranties was breached; and
- The dissatisfied party is entitled to damages or other relief for the breach.

Strategic Point--Defendant/Seller:

Conversely, the seller typically will contend that:

- No implied warranties arise from the contract;
- Representations by the seller did not rise to the level of an enforceable warranty; and/or
- Any warranties imposed by law were either modified by the terms of the contract or were inapplicable in the situation in question.

- The goods in question conformed to the requirements of any express or implied warranties.

The attorney may find warranty law confusing because it is governed by a number of overlapping statutes. Generally, California transactions among manufacturers, distributors, retailers, and nonconsumer purchasers (i.e., businesses and other entities) are governed by Division 2 of the California Commercial Code [see Com Code § 2102], whereas warranties in consumer sales are governed primarily by the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act, as amplified by nonconflicting Commercial Code provisions [CC §§ 1790.2 (Song-Beverly prevails over Commercial Code to extent of any conflict), 1791(a) (definition of "consumer goods"); see CC § 1790 et seq.]. Other statutes also can have an impact on warranties. Although there is nothing to restrict parties from warranting services as well as goods, the principal statutes mentioned above generally are inapplicable to warranties for services [see CC § 1791(a); Com Code § 2102], with the significant exception that service contracts relating to consumer goods are governed by very specific and detailed Song-Beverly Act provisions [see, e.g., CC §§ 1793.6, 1794.4, 1794.41].

This chapter focuses on warranties under the Commercial Code and, to a lesser extent, to the consumer warranty requirements of the Song-Beverly Act, since those two statutes govern the majority of warranty transactions. This chapter does not cover in detail the extensive warranty requirements of the Song-Beverly Act relating to repair or replacement of defective or damaged goods. Other specialized statutes also may impose warranty requirements in specific situations. Cross References to some of these specific warranty statutes are included for reference.

Conduct giving constituting a breach of warranty also may result in personal injuries. Breach of warranty in the products liability context is beyond the scope of this publication but should of course be considered in appropriate situations.

II. REVIEWING APPLICATION OF CALIFORNIA WARRANTY STATUTES

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.03

24.03 CHECKLIST: Reviewing Application of California Warranty Statutes.

☐ Determine whether Commercial Code warranty provisions apply to contract.

☐ Does contract involve transaction in goods?

☐ Is seller "merchant" for purposes of implied warranty of merchantability?

Authority:

Com Code §§ 2102, 2105, 2314(1)

Discussion:

See 24.04

☐ Determine whether Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act applies to contract.

☐ Is contract one for sale of new consumer goods?

☐ Do goods consist of either:

☐ New product or part thereof that is used, bought, or leased for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, except for clothing and consumables; or

☐ New and used assistive devices (that is, items used to assist persons with disabilities) sold at retail.

Authority:

CC §§ 1790.3, 1791(a), 1792-1792.2

Discussion:

See 24.05[1], [2]

- ☐ Is contract one for sale of used consumer goods for which an express warranty is given?

Authority:

CC § 1795.5

Discussion:

See 24.05[3]

- ☐ Determine whether federal Magnuson-Moss Act applies to transaction.

Authority:

15 USC § 2301 et seq

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
II. REVIEWING APPLICATION OF CALIFORNIA WARRANTY STATUTES

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.04

24.04 Commercial Code Provides Foundation for California Commercial Warranty Law.

24.04[1] Commercial Code Warranties Apply to Transactions in Goods. Division 2 of the Commercial Code, including its warranty provisions, apply to "transactions in goods" [Com Code § 2102]--that is, all things that are moveable at the time of identification to the contract other than money, investment securities, and things in action [Com Code § 2105]. This generally includes all transactions involving sales of goods, regardless of whether or not the parties are dealers or merchants, except that the implied warranty of merchantability applies only when the seller is a merchant with respect to goods of that kind [Com Code § 2314(1); see 24.13[1]]. Division 2 applies to both new and used goods.

The Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [CC § 1790 et seq.; see 24.05] preempts the Commercial Code only to the extent that the rights under the Song-Beverly Act to buyers of consumer goods conflict with the provisions of the Commercial Code [CC § 1790.3].

► Cross References:

Warranties under Division 2 of the Commercial Code, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, §§ 502.20 -502.28 (Matthew Bender).

Discussion of Song-Beverly Act, see 24.05; see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties (Matthew Bender).

24.04[2] Commercial Code Is Inapplicable to Warranties for Services. The Commercial Code controls the sale of goods and affiliated warranties, and its warranty law is rarely applied outside of the sales context or to the sale of services [see Gautier v. General Tel. Co. (1965) 234 CA2d 302, 306, 44 CR 404].

Example:

Plaintiffs filed suit against a telephone company for defective telephone service, alleging several theories of liability, including breach of the implied warranty of merchantability. The trial court dismissed the action after sustaining defendants' demurrer. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there is no liability for breach of implied warranty based on a transaction that is construed as the furnishing of services, rather than a sale of chattels [Gautier v. General Tel. Co. (1965) 234 CA2d 302, 306, 44 CR 404].

II. REVIEWING APPLICATION OF CALIFORNIA WARRANTY STATUTES

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.05

24.05 Song-Beverly Act Governs Warranties in Consumer Transactions.

24.05[1] Song-Beverly Act Provides Additional Consumer Warranty Rules. The basic warranty law as codified in the Commercial Code is amplified for consumer sales (and related wholesale transactions) by the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [CC § 1790 et seq.]. The provisions of the Song-Beverly Act do not affect rights and obligations under the Commercial Code except when the two conflict; in that case, the Song-Beverly Act prevails [CC § 1790.3]. The remedies provided by the Song-Beverly Act are cumulative and do not restrict any remedy that is otherwise available [CC § 1790.3].

24.05[2] Song-Beverly Act Warranties Apply to Sales of New Consumer Goods. The Song-Beverly warranty provisions apply to sales of consumer goods [see, e.g., CC §§ 1792-1792.2; see also CC § 1791(n) (definition of "sale")]. For purposes of the Song-Beverly Act requirements, consumer goods are [CC § 1791(a)]:

- Any new product or part thereof that is used, bought, or leased for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, except for clothing and consumables.
- New and used assistive devices (that is, items used to assist persons with medical conditions and disabilities [see CC § 1791(p) (definition)]) sold at retail.

Forms for memoranda relating to the Song-Beverly Act, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 206, Sales (Matthew Bender).

24.05[3] Limited Application to Sales of Used Goods. Song-Beverly Act warranty provisions also apply to transactions in used goods in which an express warranty is given, with limitations. Although the Song-Beverly Act provisions governing the implied warranties of fitness and merchantability apply by their express terms to "every sale of consumer goods" [see CC §§ 1792-1792.2], which is defined to mean new goods, CC § 1795.5(c) nevertheless places limits on the implied warranties [CC § 1791.1] of fitness and merchantability when express warranties are given in a sale of used goods. The effect of this provision on claims that the implied warranties of fitness and/or merchantability apply to used goods when express warranties are not present is not entirely clear.

 Cross References:

Discussion of implied warranty of merchantability in Song-Beverly transactions, see 24.13[1], [2], [5].

Discussion of implied warranty of fitness in Song-Beverly transactions, see 24.13[3] -[5].

24.05[4] Song-Beverly Act Imposes Repair and Service Obligations on Consumer Warrantors.

The Song-Beverly Act contains extensive provisions dealing with the obligations of manufacturers, distributors, and retailers who make express remedies with respect to the repair and replacement of consumer goods [see CC §§ 1793.03-1795.7], including the well-known "lemon law" relating to repair and replacement of motor vehicles [see CC § 1793.22]. Basically, every manufacturer of consumer goods sold with express warranties in California must maintain service and repair facilities reasonably close to all areas where the consumer goods are sold [CC § 1793.3(c)]. Alternatively, the manufacturer may designate independent repair or service facilities [CC § 1793.3(c)]. Detailed coverage of these requirements is beyond the scope of this publication, but attorneys should be aware of their importance and the fact that they affect the availability of judicial remedies arising out of breaches of express warranties under the Song-Beverly Act.

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.06

24.06 Federal Magnuson-Moss Act Provides Additional Warranty Protection.

Consumer protection with respect to warranties in the sale of goods is further extended, primarily through disclosure requirements, and otherwise given support concurrent with or residual to the state scheme, through the federal Magnuson-Moss Warranty--Federal Trade Commission Improvement Act [15 USC § 2301 et seq.]. The Magnuson-Moss Act applies to consumer products "distributed in commerce" [15 USC § 2301(13); see 15 USC § 2301(14) ("commerce" defined)]. Although the Magnuson-Moss Act, as a federal statute, is beyond the scope of this publication, attorneys should be aware that the Magnuson-Moss Act compares with the Song-Beverly Act and Division 2 of the Commercial Code as follows:

- A written warranty may be made by a "supplier," which includes anyone in the business of making the goods available to consumers [see 15 USC § 2301(4)] and is at least as comprehensive as the group of marketing parties listed under the Song-Beverly Act [see CC § 1791(e), (j), (l)], while the Commercial Code is confined to the acts of sellers [see Com Code § 2103(1)(d)].
- The federal act's provisions extend only to a "written" warranty [see 15 USC § 2301(6)], which is similar to an express warranty regulated under the Song-Beverly Act and contained in a written statement arising in a sale [see CC § 1791.2(a)(1)].
- Although the federal law refers to affirmations of fact and promises as giving rise to one type of warranty subject to the law's provisions, similar to the Commercial Code [see Com Code § 2313(1)(a)] but not the Song-Beverly Act, the law restricts covered affirmations to those without inherent faults or that meet a specified level of performance for a specified duration [see 15 USC § 2301(6)(A)]--neither of which is directly designated under California consumer warranty law.
- The type of warranty subject to the provision of the federal law when an undertaking is made to carry out some remedial action (including recompense) if the product does not live up to its specifications [see 15 USC § 2301(6)(B)] is similar to, but broader than, the type of warranty under the Song-Beverly Act consisting of an undertaking to keep up utility or performance, or to make payment otherwise.
- The federal law requires that the warranty be part of the basis of the bargain, an element present under the Commercial Code [see Com Code § 2313(1)] but absent from the Song-Beverly Act [see CC § 1791.2(a)].

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.07

24.07 Consumer Goods Must Be Installed in Good and Workmanlike Manner.

A statutory standard of performance by service personnel applies with respect to installation of new or used consumer goods [see CC § 1796]. Any individual, partnership, corporation, association, or other legal entity that engages in the business of installing new or used consumer goods has a duty to the buyer to install them in a "good and workmanlike" manner [CC § 1796]. If the entity engages in the business of providing service or repair to new or used consumer goods, it has a duty to the purchaser to perform those services in a "good and workmanlike" manner [CC § 1796.5]. Note that while these provisions complement California's consumer warranty legislation, they are not part of the Song-Beverly Act.

Consider:

These provisions do not provide a specific remedy for violation.

II. REVIEWING APPLICATION OF CALIFORNIA WARRANTY STATUTES

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.08

24.08 Warranties Can Apply to Construction Projects.

The essence of a warranty in the context of construction is a material promise or a material affirmation of fact by the builder from which a contractual or quasi-contractual obligation may be implied [Corporation of Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 CA2d 492, 504, 32 CR 144]. Representations that merely express an opinion, belief, judgment, or estimate do not constitute a warranty [Corporation of Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 CA2d 492, 504, 32 CR 144].

When the work is done according to plans and specifications drawn up by the owner's architect, a query by the owner as to the merits of specified materials is merely a request for an opinion, and the builder's reply does not constitute a warranty [Corporation of Presiding Bishop v. Cavanaugh (1963) 217 CA2d 492, 504-505, 32 CR 144].

In limited circumstances, the Commercial Code provisions on express warranty can apply to the construction of real property [see Com Code § 2313].

Example:

When the manufacturer of a one-ply roofing product sold that product as a roofing system to be installed under the supervision of the manufacturer's representative, the transaction was a sale of goods and was covered by the Uniform Commercial Code. The promises made in the roofing manufacturer's brochures and advertisements therefore were express contractual warranties governed by Com Code § 2313 [see Mennonite Deaconess Home & Hosp., Inc. v. Gates Eng'g Co. (1985) 219 Neb 303, 311-312, 363 NW2d 155].

24.09 Other Specialized Warranty Schemes Exist.

Warranty rules in other areas are governed by specific statutory provisions and case law outside of the UCC and consumer protection laws. These include:

- Auctions and auctioneers [Com Code § 2328; see CC § 1812.605].
- Automobiles [see CC §§ 1793.22 (lemon law provisions of Song-Beverly Act)].
- Electrical contractors [see Smith v. Shasta Elec. Co. (1961) 190 CA2d 728, 730, 12 CR 167].
- Insurance contracts [see Ins Code § 440 et seq.].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
III. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY EXISTS

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.11

24.11 Options and Strategy.

In order to determine whether or not a client can recover from another party for breach of warranty, it must first be determined whether or not any warranty in fact exists. Assuming that there is a written contract, the first step is to examine the contract itself to determine if the contract contains any express warranties. Often express warranties are clearly identified as such, but it is possible that contract language may operate to create such a warranty even if it is not clearly denominated as one. If the attorney is satisfied that the written contract itself does not create any language that might be construed to create a warranty, the next step is to consider whether other acts, representations, or conduct of the other party has operated to create an express warranty [see 24.12]. In the case of an oral contract, a similar determination must be made.

Whether or not the contract or the attendant activities create any express warranties, the attorney should next consider whether or not any warranties are implied by law. To do this, the attorney must determine what laws govern the transaction, examine the applicable statutes to determine what implied warranties, if any, those statutes provide, and then ascertain whether or not those warranties apply to the particular agreement of the parties [see 24.13, 24.14 -24.17].

Finally, the attorney must determine how any express warranties in the contract interact with any implied warranties imposed by law, and determine what, ultimately, is the warranty available to the client [see 24.15].

Consider:

In determining whether a warranty has been created, courts tend to implement a policy generally favoring protection for buyers, and thus resolving doubt in favor of creation of a warranty, unless there has been a clear disclaimer or waiver.

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
III. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY EXISTS

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.12

24.12 Express Warranties Are Created by Contract and Seller's Actions.

24.12[1] Any Affirmation of Fact or Promise Creates Express Warranty. Under the Commercial Code, any affirmation of fact or promise made by the seller to the buyer which relates to the goods and becomes part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the goods will conform to the affirmation or promise [Com Code § 2313(1)(a)].

To be a basis of the bargain, a statement constituting an express warranty need be only one factor or consideration in inducing the buyer to enter the bargain [Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 23, 220 CR 392].

Distinguish--Consumer Warranties:

Under the Song-Beverly Act, an express warranty is a written statement arising out of the sale of a consumer good to a consumer, under which the seller undertakes to preserve or maintain the utility or performance of the consumer good or provide compensation if there is a failure in utility or performance [CC § 1791.2(a)]. Although this definition is somewhat more limited than the Commercial Code rule, it appears to prevail over the Commercial Code definition in actions to which the Song-Beverly Act applies [see CC § 1790.3]. However, there are statements in the case law that the Song-Beverly Act is intended to broaden the remedies set out in the Commercial Code, not restrict them [see Mocek v. Alfa Leisure, Inc. (2003) 114 CA4th 402, 407-408 (implied warranty case)]. Since the Song-Beverly Act definition of express warranty is more restrictive in some circumstances, an argument can be made that it should not be construed to preempt the Commercial Code provision [but see Mocek v. Alfa Leisure, Inc. (2003) 114 CA4th 402, 408 (rejecting argument that Commercial Code provision takes precedence over Song-Beverly under Com Code § 1104, which provides that no part of Commercial Code "shall be deemed to be impliedly repealed by subsequent legislation if such construction can reasonably be avoided," on grounds that two statutes in question simply dealt with different subjects)].

Example--No Warranty:

In an action for damages for delay resulting from defendants' failure to deliver a purchased truck scale on the agreed date, only breach of the contract provision for delivery by a certain date was actionable, and theories of warranty were inapplicable because the delivery date was not a basis for entering into the contract [A.A. Baxter Corp. v. Colt Indus., Inc. (1970) 10 CA3d 144, 153, 88 CR 842].

24.12[2] Use of Formal Words Is Not Necessary to Create Express Warranty. Although an express warranty can be (and generally is) created by the use of formal words like "warranty" or "guarantee" [see CC § 1791.2(b)], use of those words is not necessary to create an express warranty [CC § 1791.2(b); Com Code § 2313(2); Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 19, 220 CR 392].

24.12[3] Specific Intent to Create Express Warranty Is Not Necessary. It is not necessary that the seller have a specific intention to create an express warranty under the Commercial Code [Com Code § 2313(2)]. No specific intention to make a warranty is necessary if seller's affirmation of fact, description or sample is made part of the basis of the bargain [Com Code § 2313(1)].

24.12[4] Creation of Express Warranty Is Not Limited to Contract Language.

24.12[4][a] Any Affirmation of Fact or Promise Will Suffice. The creation of an express warranty is not limited to the language of the written contract [see Com Code § 2313(1) ("any affirmation" will suffice)]. Outside sources such as the seller's literature, statements of fact by seller's agents, and anything else that forms a basis for the bargain between buyer and seller can create an express warranty by making an affirmation of fact [see Com Code § 2313(1)].

Distinguish--Consumer Warranties:

The Song-Beverly Act definition of "express warranty" is more limited. It requires that the statement be written, and that there be an undertaking to preserve or maintain the utility or performance of the consumer good, or provide compensation if there is a failure in utility [CC § 1791.2(a)(1)].

24.12[4][b] Description of Goods May Create Express Warranty. Any description of the goods that is made part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the goods will conform to the description [Com Code § 2313(1)(a)].

Examples:

- Failure of the content of seed bags to conform to the description of the percentage of seed variety on the label was a breach of an express warranty [Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co. (1988) 200 CA3d 1518, 1532, 246 CR 823].

- Defendant made no oral or written representations that tubing was fit for a particular surgical procedure, although it stated that the tubing was useful for moving fluids into and from body cavities, and the surgeon inferred from that the tubing was suitable for a particular operation. The court held that questions of fact existed regarding whether defendant made an express warranty, and whether defendant breached the warranty; that is, whether the tubing was reasonably fit for the purpose intended [Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 CA3d 1062, 1079-1080, 91 CR 319].

24.12[4][c] Technical Specifications May Create Express Warranty. Technical specifications, blueprints, and the like can provide a more exact description than mere language. If these descriptions are made part of the basis of the bargain, the goods must conform to them [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 5].

24.12[4][d] Sample or Model May Create Express Warranty. Under both the Commercial Code and the Song-Beverly Act, any sample or model that is made part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the whole of the goods will conform to the sample or model [CC § 1791.2(a)(2); Com Code § 2313(1)(c)]. For purposes of the Commercial Code warranty provisions, if the sample has been drawn from an existing bulk supply, unless it is accompanied by a disclaimer, the sample must be regarded as describing values of the goods contracted for. However, if a model of the desired merchandise is shown to the buyer during negotiations, the presumption that the model is a literal description of the subject matter is not as strong. This is particularly true if the sample is modified at the request of the buyer, and the modification impairs any feature of the model [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 6].

Example:

When a retailer of mobile homes stated that a mobile home contained the same one-quarter inch plywood sheathing as the model shown to the purchaser, the purchaser had a cause of action against the retailer for breach of express warranty under the UCC when there was delivery of a non-conforming mobile home [see Town & Country Mobile Homes, Inc. v. Benfer (1975) 527 SW2d 523, 525].

24.12[4][e] Offer of Examination May Create Express Warranty. If an offer of examination by the seller is accompanied by words concerning the merchantability of specific attributes of the goods, and the buyer clearly indicates reliance on those words rather than on the examination, the words give rise to an express warranty under the Commercial Code. The question then is whether or not a warranty of merchantability has been expressly incorporated in the agreement [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

24.12[4][f] Advertisements May Create Express Warranty. Product advertisements may create an express warranty under the Commercial Code [Thomas v. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp. (1967) 255 CA2d 806, 811, 63 CR 454].

Example:

A trial court was not entitled to conclude, without a trial, that class action plaintiffs could not maintain a breach of warranty action against a manufacturer based on defective wheels, when manufacturer's nationwide advertisements extolled the excellence and reliability of its products and a plate attached to each truck referred to a user's manual which asserted that the wheels, if loaded within stated limits, were safe and adequate for loads in question [Anthony v. General Motors Corp. (1973) 33 CA3d 699, 706-707, 109 CR 254].

24.12[4][g] Course of Dealing May Create Express Warranty. Under the Commercial Code, an express warranty can be created by a prior course of dealing if the buyer has an expectation that goods will conform to the quality of prior shipments [see Com Code § 2313(1)(a), UCC § 2-313, official cmt 5].

Past deliveries may set the description of quality, either expressly, impliedly, or by course of dealing. All descriptions by merchants must be read against applicable trade usages, with the general rules as to merchantability resolving any doubts [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 5].

Warning:

Even if an agreement contains an express warranty, the parties can modify that warranty by course of dealing or trade practice [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 7].

Jury Instructions:

Express Warranties Arising From a Course of Dealing or Usage of Trade, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.147 (Matthew Bender).

24.12[5] Statements of Seller's Opinion or Commendation Do Not Create Express Warranty. An affirmation of the value of goods, or a statement purporting to be merely the seller's opinion or commendation of the goods, does not create an express warranty [Com Code § 2313(2)].

The determination of whether a particular statement is an expression of opinion or an affirmation of a fact forming the basis for an express warranty is dependent upon the facts and circumstances existing at the time the statement is made [Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 21, 220 CR 392]. Courts have noted several factors that indicate an opinion statement [Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 21, 220 CR 392]:

- A lack of specificity in the statement made.
- A statement that is made in an equivocal manner.
- A statement revealing that the goods are experimental in nature.

Example--Affirmation of Fact:

The court concluded that representations in the sales brochure describing a vessel as "a picture of sure-footed seaworthiness" and "a carefully well-equipped and very seaworthy vessel" were affirmations of fact relating to the quality or condition of the boat [see Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 21, 220 CR 392].

Example--Expression of Opinion:

Merely depicting young people sitting or standing in the cargo bed of pickup trucks in an advertisement did not constitute an express warranty that riding in the back of the trucks was safe [see Chambliss v. GMC (9th Cir 1997) 108 F3d 1176].

Strategic Point:

Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 21, 220 CR 392 , noted above, demonstrates the advisability of arguing that statements that might appear to be mere "puffery" are actually factual affirmations. Contrary to the finding of the Keith court, many would probably conclude that the description of any ship as "sure-footed" is mere sales banter.

Distinguish:

Seller's statements during negotiation are presumptively considered to be affirmations of fact [see 24.12[6]].

Jury Instructions:

Statement of Fact Distinguished From Expression of Opinion, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.146 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Discussion of "puffery" not forming express warranty under Song-Beverly Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.42[3] (Matthew Bender).

24.12[6] Seller's Statements During Negotiation Are Presumed to Be Affirmations of Fact. Statements made by a seller during the course of negotiation over a contract presumptively are affirmations of fact unless it can be demonstrated that the buyer could only have reasonably considered the statement to be the seller's opinion [Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 21, 220 CR 392]. Affirmations of fact by the seller about the goods, made during a bargain, are regarded as part of their description [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 3], and thereby create an express warranty that the goods will conform to the description [Com Code § 2313(1)(b)].

Facts intended to remove the affirmations from the agreement require clear, affirmative proof. The issue normally is one of fact [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 3].

Conversely, no particular reliance on the seller's statements during negotiation needs to be shown to integrate them into the agreement [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 3].

24.12[7] Express Warranty Does Not Require Privity of Contract. Privity of contract is not required for an action based on express warranty [Rodrigues v. Campbell Indus. (1978) 87 CA3d 494, 500-501, 151 CR 90].

Example:

In an action for damages for personal injuries brought by a patient against a manufacturer of tubing used in a heart catheterization undergone by the patient, any express warranties as to the tubing made to the hospital or the physician who performed the procedure would inure to the benefit of the patient, even though the patient was not a buyer of the tubing, because the hospital and the physician were acting as agents of the patient in the use of the tubing upon her person in conjunction with the procedure [Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 CA3d 1062, 1079, 91 CR 319].

Distinguish:

Vertical privity between the plaintiff and defendant is a requirement for actions based on the implied warranty of merchantability or the implied warranty of fitness [All West Elecs., Inc. v. M-B-W, Inc. (1998) 64 CA4th 717, 725-727, 75 CR2d 509].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
III. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY EXISTS

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.13

24.13 Implied Warranties May Be Imposed by Statute.

24.13[1] Implied Warranty of Merchantability Exists If Seller Is Merchant With Respect to Goods Sold.

Under the Commercial Code, an implied warranty that the goods are "merchantable" exists in a contract for the sale of goods if the seller is a merchant with respect to goods of that kind, unless the parties have excluded or modified the warranty [Com Code § 2314(1)]. A person is a "merchant" if the person deals in goods of that kind or otherwise by occupation holds himself or herself out as having knowledge or skill peculiar to the practices or goods involved, or to whom such knowledge or skill may be attributed by employment of an agent, broker, or other intermediary who by occupation holds himself or herself out as having such knowledge or skill [Com Code § 2104(1)].

Warning:

The parties can modify or exclude the implied warranty of merchantability by agreement [see 24.15[2]].

Distinguish:

Merchantability pertains to whether or not goods are fit for their ordinary purpose. This is distinct from fitness for a particular purpose. Thus, the purpose for which goods are intended distinguishes the warranties of fitness and merchantability [see Com Code § 2315, UCC § 2-315, official cmt 2].

Exception:

There is no implied warranty of merchantability in a finance lease [Com Code § 10212(a); Arriaga v. CitiCapital Commercial Corp. (2008) 167 CA4th 1527, 1542, 85 CR3d 143].

24.13[2] Implied Warranty of Merchantability Exists for All Consumer Goods Sold at Retail. Under the Song-Beverly Act, every sale of consumer goods sold at retail in California is deemed to be accompanied by the manufacturer and retail seller's implied warranty that the goods are merchantable [CC § 1792]. The Song-Beverly Act definition of the warranty is almost identical to that used in the Commercial Code [see CC § 1791.1 (definition of "implied warranty of merchantability"); compare Com Code § 2314(2)]. The retail seller has a right of indemnity against the manufacturer for the amount of any liability under such a warranty [CC § 1792].

The duration of the implied warranty of fitness is coextensive with any express warranty accompanying the goods, provided the term is reasonable and has a duration of not less than 60 days nor more than one year. If there is no express warranty, the duration of the implied warranty is one year [CC § 1791.1(c)].

Implied warranties of merchantability under the Song-Beverly Act cannot be waived by the parties, except in the case of a sale of consumer goods on an "as is" or "with all faults" basis [CC § 1792.3], in which the sale must comply with the special provisions applicable to such sales [see CC § 1792.4].

24.13[3] Implied Warranty of Fitness Exists If Seller Knows Goods Are for Particular Purpose and That Buyer Is Relying on Seller's Skill and Judgment. Under the Commercial Code, if the seller at the time of contracting had reason to know any particular purpose for which the goods are required and that the buyer was relying on the seller's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods, there is an implied warranty that the goods will be fit for that purpose [Com Code § 2315].

Warning:

The parties can modify or exclude the implied warranty of fitness by their agreement [see 24.15[2]].

Example:

In an action arising from the failure of steel tubing used in radiant heating systems installed in several homes, implied warranties of fitness and merchantability bound the sellers of the tubing. The contractors relied on the sellers' skill and judgment, and the tubing, bought by description from the sellers, was manufactured, among other purposes, for use in concrete slab radiant heating systems, and was not suitable for that purpose [Eichler Homes, Inc. v. Anderson (1970) 9 CA3d 224, 231, 87 CR 893].

Distinguish:

While goods are warranted to be fit for a particular purpose, merchantability pertains to fitness for an ordinary purpose. Thus, the purpose for which goods are intended distinguishes the warranties of fitness and merchantability [see Com Code § 2315, UCC § 2-315, official cmt 2].

24.13[4] Implied Warranty of Fitness Exists for All Consumer Goods Sold at Retail for Particular Purpose.

Under the Song-Beverly Act, every sale of consumer goods sold at retail in California by a manufacturer, retailer, or distributor who has reason to know at the time of the sale that the goods are required for a particular purpose and that the buyer is relying on the manufacturer's, retailer's, or distributor's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods, is deemed to be accompanied by the manufacturer's, retailer's, or distributor's implied warranty of fitness [CC §§ 1792.1 (manufacturers), 1792.2 (retailers and distributors); see CC § 1791.1(b) ("implied warranty of fitness" defined)]. Sales of assistive devices [see CC § 1791(p) (definition)] are deemed to be accompanied by the retail seller's implied warranty that the device is specially fit for the particular needs of the buyer [CC § 1792.2(b)].

The duration of the implied warranty of fitness is coextensive with any express warranty accompanying the goods, provided the term is reasonable and has a duration of not less than 60 days nor more than one year. If there is no express warranty, the duration of the implied warranty is one year [CC § 1791.1(c)].

Implied warranties of fitness under the Song-Beverly Act cannot be waived by the parties, except in the case of a sale of consumer goods on an "as is" or "with all faults" basis [CC § 1792.3], in which the sale must comply with the special provisions applicable to such sales [see CC § 1792.4].

24.13[5] Vertical Privity of Contract Is Required for Implied Warranties of Fitness and Merchantability.

Vertical privity between the plaintiff and defendant is a requirement for actions based on the implied warranty of merchantability or the implied warranty of fitness when only economic damages are claimed [All West Elecs., Inc. v. M-B-W, Inc. (1998) 64 CA4th 717, 725-727, 75 CR2d 509 ; see Blanco v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1059, 70 CR3d 566 (no privity of contract between patient and manufacturer of medical device)].

Distinguish:

- This is not true for actions involving personal injury, in which members of the buyer's family and the buyer's employees can sue for breach of the implied warranties of fitness and merchantability [Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 C3d 104, 114 n8, 120 CR 681, 534 P2d 377 ; Peterson v. Lamb Rubber Co. (1960) 54 C2d 339, 347, 5 CR 863, 353 P2d 575].

- Privity is not required for an action based on express warranty [Rodrigues v. Campbell Indus. (1978) 87 CA3d 494, 500-501, 151 CR 90].

- Whether there is privity between the manufacturer and the lessee in a financing lease arrangement under which the manufacturer sold to finance lessor, which then leased to plaintiff, it is a question of fact to be determined from the totality of the circumstances, not just from the "paper transaction" [see U.S. Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 CA3d 1431, 1441-1442, 1445, 279 CR 533].

- When a manufacturer or supplier affirmatively engages in conduct directly with the purchaser that functionally places the party in the position of the direct seller, an implied warranty claim may be upheld despite an absence of privity [Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 CA4th 116, 134-137, 87 CR3d 5] .

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
III. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY EXISTS

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.14

24.14 Contract for Sale of Goods Includes Warranties of Title.

24.14[1] Sale of Goods Includes Warranty of Good Title. A contract for sale of goods includes a warranty that the seller is conveying good title and the transfer is rightful [Com Code § 2312(1)(a)]. The warranty extends to a buyer whether or not the seller was in possession of the goods at the time the sale or contract to sell was made [Com Code § 2312, UCC § 2-312, official cmt 1].

Jury Instructions:

Terms of Warranty of Title, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.141 (Matthew Bender).

➤ Cross Reference:

Discussion of warranty of title, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.24[4] (Matthew Bender).

24.14[2] Sale of Goods Includes Warranty That Goods Are Free From Liens or Encumbrances. A contract for sale includes the warranty of title that the goods are free from any security interest or other lien or encumbrance of which the buyer at the time of contracting has no knowledge [Com Code § 2312(1)(b)].

Jury Instructions:

Terms of Warranty of Title, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.141 (Matthew Bender).

24.14[3] Warranties May Be Modified Only by Express Language or Special Circumstances. A warranty of title can be excluded or modified only by specific language or by circumstances that give the buyer reason to know that the person selling does not claim title in himself or herself, or that the seller is purporting to sell only such right or title as the seller or a third person may have [Com Code § 2312(2)].

Jury Instructions:

Terms of Warranty of Title, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.141 (Matthew Bender).

Exclusion or Modification of Warranty of Title, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.141 (Matthew Bender).

24.14[4] Warranty Is Inapplicable If Seller's Compliance With Buyer's Specifications Causes "Breach." A buyer who furnishes specifications to the seller must hold the seller harmless against any breaches of warranty of title, and any resulting claims, which arise out of compliance with the buyer's specifications [Com Code § 2312(3)].

24.14[5] Warranty of Title Is Not Considered an "Implied" Warranty. The warranty of title has not been designated an "implied" warranty, and thus it is not subject to the restrictions applicable to implied warranties [Com Code § 2312, UCC § 2-312, official cmt 6], nor is it excluded in the manner described specifically for implied warranties [Com Code § 2316].

Warning:

Because it is neither an express nor an implied warranty, it is doubtful that a contract of sale that excludes "all warranties, express or implied" necessarily excludes the warranty of title as well [Com Code § 2312, UCC § 2-312, official cmt 6; Com Code § 2316].

Cross References:

Discussion of exclusion of implied warranties, see 24.15[2] -[6].

Discussion of negation of express warranties, see 24.15[1].

24.14[6] Warranties of Title Apply to Sales of Consumer Goods. The Song-Beverly Act does not contain any provision granting or denying any warranties of title. Therefore, it appears that the Commercial Code provisions governing warranty of title do not conflict with the Song-Beverly Act, and are not preempted by the latter statute [see CC § 1790.3].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
III. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY EXISTS

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.15

24.15 Commercial Code Warranties May Be Disclaimed or Limited.

24.15[1] Words or Conduct Creating and Negating Express Warranties Will Be Construed As Consistent.

Since express warranties are, by definition, created by the words and conduct of the parties, and the parties, if they desire, may create no express warranties at all, the parties clearly are free to structure or limit any such warranties in whatever manner they desire. However, issues can arise when some words or conduct would create express warranties, while other words or conduct would negate them. In this situation, words or conduct relevant to the creation of a warranty and words or conduct tending to limit a warranty will be construed whenever reasonable as consistent with one another [Com Code § 2316(1)].

If they cannot reasonably be construed as consistent, negation or limitation is inoperable to the extent that such a construction is unreasonable [Com Code § 2316(1)]. Because a disclaimer or modification is inconsistent with an express warranty, words of disclaimer or modification give way to words of warranty unless some clear agreement between the parties dictates the contrary [Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 C3d 104, 119, 120 CR 681, 534 P2d 377].

Consider:

The rules on construction of express warranties are subject to the Commercial Code rules on parol evidence [Com Code § 2316(1)]. Under these rules, parol evidence cannot be used to contradict the terms of a writing intended by the parties as a final expression of their agreement, but may be explained or supplemented by the course of dealing or usage of trade, or by evidence of consistent additional terms unless the court finds the writing to have been intended as a complete and exclusive statement of the terms of the agreement [Com Code § 2202].

Example:

The scope of an express warranty that a golfer training device was completely safe was held not to be limited by reference to a picture in an instruction manual showing the correct use of the device or the general understanding that golf is a dangerous game [Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 C3d 104, 118, 120, 120 CR 681, 534 P2d 377].

Jury Instructions:

Disclaimer of Express Warranties, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.157 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Use of parol evidence in Commercial Code contracts, see Ch. 27, Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 27.14.

24.15[2] Implied Warranty of Merchantability May Be Disclaimed or Limited by Conspicuous Language. In order to exclude or modify the implied warranty of merchantability, the language must mention merchantability and, in the case of a writing, must be conspicuous [Com Code § 2316(2)].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

Note that the Song-Beverly Act does not permit waiver of the implied warranty of merchantability in sales of consumer goods, with the limited exception of "as is" sales [CC § 1792.3].

Jury Instructions:

Disclaimer of Implied Warranties, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.156 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross References:

No exclusion of implied warranty of fitness in sales of consumer goods under the Song-Beverly Act, see 24.16[1].

24.15[3] Implied Warranty of Fitness May Be Disclaimed by Conspicuous Language. The implied warranty of fitness may be excluded only by a writing, and the exclusion must be conspicuous. Language excluding all implied warranties of fitness is sufficient if it states "there are no warranties which extend beyond the description on the face hereof," or language of similar import [Com Code § 2316(2)].

Distinguish:

- Unlike the implied warranty of merchantability, implied warranties of fitness for a particular purpose may be excluded by general language, but only if it is in writing and conspicuous [see Com Code § 2316(2); Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 4].

- Note that the Song-Beverly Act does not permit waiver of the implied warranty of fitness in sales of consumer goods, with the limited exception of "as is" sales [CC § 1792.3].

Jury Instructions:

Disclaimer of Implied Warranties, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.156 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross References:

Discussion of exclusion or modification of implied warranties, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.24[8] -[10] (Matthew Bender).

No exclusion of implied warranty of fitness in sales of consumer goods under the Song-Beverly Act, see 24.16[1].

24.15[4] "As Is" or Similar Language Is Sufficient to Disclaim All Implied Warranties. Unless the circumstances indicate otherwise, all implied warranties are excluded by expressions like "as is," "with all faults," or other language that calls the buyer's attention to the exclusion of warranties and makes it plain that there is no implied warranty [Com Code § 2316(3)(a)].

Exception:

General language of exclusion such as "as is" does not operate to exclude the warranty of title [see 24.14[3]].

Distinguish:

The Song-Beverly Act also permits "as is" sales, but under different and specific criteria [see CC §§ 1791.3, 1792.3-1792.5].

 Cross Reference:

"As is" sales of consumer goods under the Song-Beverly Act, see 24.16[3].

24.15[5] Examination of Sample or Model Defeats Implied Warranties. If the buyer, before entering into the contract, has examined the goods or the sample or model as fully as desired, or has refused to examine the goods, there is no implied warranty with regard to defects that an examination should have revealed [Com Code § 2316(3)(b)].

It is not sufficient that the goods are simply available for inspection. The seller must demand that the buyer examine them fully. The demand puts the buyer on notice that the seller is assuming the risk of defects that the examination ought to reveal [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

The buyer's skill and the normal method of examining goods in the circumstances determine what defects are excluded by the examination. Latent defects are not included. [Com Code 2316, UCC 2-316, official cmt 8; Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. (2007) 148 CA4th 937, 950, 56 CR3d 177]. A professional buyer will be held to have assumed the risk as to all defects that a professional in the field ought to observe, while a nonprofessional buyer will be held to have assumed the risk only for such defects as a layman might be expected to observe [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

Distinguish:

- If the seller's offer of examination is accompanied by words as to their merchantability or specific attributes, and the buyer indicates clearly that he or she is relying on those words rather than on his examination, they give rise to an express warranty. In such cases it is a question of fact whether a warranty of merchantability has been expressly incorporated in the agreement [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

- The buyer's inspection of the goods before purchase does not necessarily waive the express warranties for those goods [see Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 21, 220 CR 392]. However, a failure to inspect when it would have been reasonable to do so may prevent the buyer from asserting applicable warranties [see Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

Example--Examination Did Not Defeat Implied Warranty of Merchantability When Latent Defect Existed.

The implied warranty of merchantability was not excluded under Com Code § 2316(3)(b) when the latent abrasive characteristic of oil seals was not a defect that was, or ought to have been, revealed to the buyer under the circumstances or prevailing testing methodologies [Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. (2007) 148 CA4th 937, 950, 56 CR3d 177].

24.15[6] Implied Warranties May Be Excluded or Modified by Trade Usage or Course of Dealing. An implied warranty also can be excluded or modified by course of dealing, course of performance, or usage of trade [Com Code § 2316(3)(c)].

24.15[7] Buyer Must Be Placed on Fair Notice of and Agree to Any Disclaimer or Modification. The purchaser must be placed on fair notice of any disclaimer or modification of a warranty and must freely agree to the seller's terms [Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 C3d 104, 119-120, 120 CR 681, 534 P2d 377]. If a contract has been completed containing a warranty, a unilateral non-warranty cannot be given thereafter [Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 C3d 104, 119-120, 120 CR 681, 534 P2d 377].

Example:

A disclaimer of consequential damages, not specifically bargained for and given to the buyer after signing the contract, was not binding [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 CA3d 11, 19-20, 120 CR 516].

24.15[8] "Conspicuous" Means Written So Reasonable Person Ought to Notice It. "Conspicuous" means that the language is so written, displayed, or presented that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. Conspicuous terms include the following [Com Code § 1201(10)]:

- A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size.
- Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

A disclaimer should be in clear and distinct language prominently set forth in large, bold print, in such a position as to compel notice [Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 CA3d 11, 18-19, 120 CR 516].

Example:

A disclaimer provision was held unenforceable because it only slightly contrasted with the rest of the contract, failed to have a heading, was not accompanied by the express warranty provided by the seller, and emphasized words which implied that the excluded implied warranties might actually be available [Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 CA3d 11, 18-19, 120 CR 516].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
III. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY EXISTS

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.16

24.16 Implied Warranties in Consumer Transactions Generally Cannot Be Disclaimed.

24.16[1] Song-Beverly Act Generally Prohibits Disclaimers. The Song-Beverly Act, unlike the Commercial Code, generally prohibits waiver of the implied warranties of merchantability and fitness in consumer transactions [CC § 1792.3].

Cross References:

Discussion of contracts subject to Song-Beverly Act, see 24.05.

Discussion of exclusion or modification of implied warranties under the Song-Beverly Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.51[7] -[9] (Matthew Bender).

24.16[2] Express Warranties May Not Limit Implied Warranties. The Song-Beverly Act, like the Commercial Code, permits manufacturers, distributors, and sellers to make express warranties. However, unlike the Commercial Code, these express warranties cannot be used to limit, modify, or disclaim the implied warranties provided by the Act [CC § 1792.3].

Distinguish:

In contrast, the Commercial Code permits the parties to modify any express or implied warranty in accordance with the applicable standards for modification [see Com Code § 2316(2)].

Exception:

While the scope of the Song-Beverly Act implied warranties cannot be limited in scope, they can be restricted in duration. In the absence of any limitation, the implied warranties of merchantability and fitness have a duration of one year. However, if the contract contains an express warranty, that warranty may be limited in duration to as little as 60 days, providing the limitation period is reasonable. The limitation period in the express warranty operates to limit the implied warranties as well [CC § 1791.1(c)].

Cross Reference:

Modification of Commercial Code warranties, see 24.15.

24.16[3] Exception Exists for "As Is" Sales. An exception to the general rule of nondisclaimer of implied warranties in sales of consumer goods exists when the sale is on an "as is" or "with all faults" basis [CC §§ 1792.3, 1792.5; see CC § 1791.3]. For this exception to apply, strict compliance with the Song-Beverly Act provisions governing such sales is required [CC § 1792.3]. A conspicuous written notice must be attached to the goods prior to the sale [see CC § 1792.4(a) (content of notice)], or included in the description of goods in any mail order catalog if the goods are sold by mail [CC § 1792.4(b)].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
III. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY EXISTS

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.17

24.17 Commercial Code Warranties Are Construed As Consistent With Each Other.

24.17[1] Warranties Are Construed As Consistent and Cumulative When Possible. When multiple warranties apply to a single Commercial Code transaction, they will be construed as consistent with each other, and as cumulative. This is true whether the warranties are express or implied [Com Code § 2317].

Distinguish--Consumer Contracts:

Because the implied warranties of merchantability and fitness ordinarily cannot be waived or limited in transactions involving the sale of consumer goods under the Song-Beverly Act, any express warranty in such a contract would be void to the extent it operated to limit, modify, or negate those implied warranties [CC § 1793]-regardless of the parties' actual intent.

24.17[2] If Multiple Warranties Contradict Each Other, Parties' Intention Determines Dominant Warranty.

If construction of warranties as consistent and cumulative would produce an unreasonable result, the parties' intention determines which warranty is dominant [Com Code § 2317; see 24.16[2]]. The following rules apply in making this determination [Com Code § 2317(a)-(c)]:

- Exact or technical specifications displace an inconsistent sample or model or general language of description.
- A sample from an existing bulk displaces inconsistent general language of description.
- Express warranties displace inconsistent implied warranties other than an implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose.

Consider--Reconciling Implied Warranties of Merchantability and Fitness:

A contract often will contain implied warranties of both fitness and merchantability. When this is the case, the Commercial Code rules governing inconsistency control, and any question of fact as to which warranty was intended by the parties to apply must be resolved in favor of the implied warranty of fitness as against all other warranties, except when the buyer has furnished the technical specifications [Com Code § 2315, UCC § 2-315, official cmt 2].

 Cross References:

Discussion of rules for compatibility among warranties, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.27 (Matthew Bender).

24.17[3] Rules of Construction for Determining Parties' Intent May Be Disproved by Evidence That Conditions Made Them Unreasonable. The rules of construction in Com Code § 2317 [see 24.16[1]] are not absolute and may be changed by evidence showing that the conditions which existed during the contractual period make those rules of construction inconsistent or unreasonable [Com Code § 2317, UCC § 2-317, official cmt 3].

Strategic Point--Buyer:

A seller who has led the buyer to believe that all warranties can be performed is estopped from setting up any essential inconsistency as a defense [Com Code § 2317, UCC § 2-317, official cmt 2].

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.19

24.19 Options and Strategy.

After the attorney has determined whether or not a warranty exists, the next step is to determine if the warranty has been breached. Breach is established by proving that the sale item's nonconformity to the warranty, express or implied, was the proximate cause of the plaintiff's alleged damages.

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
IV. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY HAS BEEN BREACHED

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.20

24.20 Breach Occurs When Goods Do Not Conform to Warranty Terms.

In an action based on breach of warranty, it is necessary to show [Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 13]:

- The existence of the warranty.
- The fact that the warranty was broken.
- That the breach of the warranty was the proximate cause of the loss sustained.

An express or implied warranty is broken, i.e., breached, when the sale item does not conform to the promises made in the warranty [see Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 CA3d 1062, 1079-1080, 91 CR 319].

Strategic Point--Seller:

An affirmative showing by the seller that the loss resulted from some action or event following the seller's own delivery of the goods can operate as a defense. Evidence indicating that the seller exercised care in the manufacture, processing or selection of the goods is relevant to the issue of whether the warranty was in fact broken. Action by the buyer following an examination of the goods which ought to have indicated the defect complained of can be shown as matter bearing on whether the breach itself was the cause of the injury [Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 13].

Distiguish--Express Warranties in Contracts for Consumer Goods:

The Song-Beverly Act contains extensive provisions dealing with the obligations of manufacturers, distributors, and retailers who make express warranties with respect to the repair and replacement of consumer goods [see CC §§ 1793.03-1795.7], including the well-known "lemon law" relating to repair and replacement of motor vehicles [see CC § 1793.22]. Detailed coverage of these requirements is beyond the scope of this publication, but attorneys should be aware that they affect the availability of judicial remedies arising out of breaches of express warranties.

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
IV. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY HAS BEEN BREACHED

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.21

24.21 Breach May Be Question of Law or Fact.

Whether the item conforms to the warranty terms can be either a question of fact or law [see Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 CA3d 1062, 1079-1080, 91 CR 319].

Example:

A heart patient brought an action against a surgical tubing manufacturer and others, based on injuries incurred when the surgical tubing kinked during a heart operation. The court held that questions of fact existed regarding whether defendant made an express warranty, and whether defendant breached the warranty, that is, whether the tubing was reasonably fit for the purpose intended [see Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 CA3d 1062, 1079-1080, 91 CR 319].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
IV. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY HAS BEEN BREACHED

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.22

24.22 Compliance With Implied Warranty of Merchantability Is Determined With Reference to Statutory Criteria.

24.22[1] Commercial Code Specifies Attributes of Merchantable Goods. The Commercial Code specifies particular minimum attributes that determine whether goods are merchantable [see Com Code § 2314(2)]. Thus, whether or not the Commercial Code's implied warranty of merchantability has been breached must be determined by whether or not the goods satisfy these criteria. However, these criteria do not exhaust the meaning of "merchantable," nor do they negate any of its attributes arising by usage of trade or through case law [Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 6]. Thus, if appropriate, the parties can raise other attributes that may be relevant to the question of whether or not the goods are "merchantable."

To be merchantable, the goods, at a minimum, must [Com Code § 2314(2)]:

- Pass without objection in the trade under the contract description [see 24.22[2]].
- In the case of fungible goods, be of fair average quality within the description [see 24.22[3]].
- Be fit for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used [see 24.22[4]].
- Run, within the variations permitted by the agreement, of even kind, quality and quantity within each unit and among all units involved [see 24.22[5]].
- Be adequately contained, packaged, and labeled as the agreement may require [see 24.22[6]].
- Conform to any promises or affirmations of fact made on the container or label [see 24.22[7]].

Distinguish:

Merchantability pertains to whether goods are fit for their ordinary purpose. This is distinguished from fitness for a particular purpose. Thus, the purpose for which goods are intended distinguishes the warranties of fitness and merchantability [see Com Code § 2315, UCC § 2-315, official cmt 2].

Distinguish--Contracts for Consumer Goods:

If the contract is one for the sale of consumer goods governed by the Song-Beverly Act, the criteria for determining merchantable goods is essentially identical to the list above, except that the second requirement relating to quality of fungible goods, and the fourth requirement regarding evenness of kind and quality among units, are inapplicable when the Song-Beverly Act applies [see CC § 1791.1(a)].

Jury Instructions:

Implied Warranty of Merchantability Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.153 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Merchant and Transactions Between Merchants, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.06 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Discussion of implied warranty of merchantability, see 24.13[2].

Discussion of California lemon law, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 91.10 (Matthew Bender).

24.22[2] Goods Must Pass Without Objection in Trade. In order to be merchantable, goods must "pass without objection in the trade under the description in the contract," meaning that the goods must be of a quality comparable to what is usually acceptable in the relevant trade [see Com Code § 2314(2)(a)].

Example--No Warranty:

A patron injured by a one-inch chicken bone in a chicken enchilada served by the restaurant could not bring an action for breach of the implied warranty of merchantability against the restaurant because a patron who eats a meat dish ought to anticipate the presence of bones which are naturally occurring substances in meat, and the patron can be expected to be on guard against such an occurrence [Mexicali Rose v. Superior Court (1992) 1 C4th 617, 633, 4 CR2d 145, 822 P2d 1292].

24.22[3] Fungible Goods Must Be Fair Average Quality. Merchantable fungible goods are implied to be of fair average quality within the contract description [Com Code § 2314(2)(b)].

"Fair average" means goods centering around the middle belt of quality, not the least or the worst that can be understood in the particular trade by the designation, but such as can pass "without objection." The term has particular relevance to agricultural products. A fair percentage of the least quality is permissible, but the goods are not "fair average" if they are all of the least or worst quality possible under the description [see Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 7].

Example:

Seller of walnut trees breached implied warranty of merchantability by selling trees that were infected with crown gall disease; although walnut trees are highly susceptible to the disease, the degree of the disease in the trees sold by the seller was much higher than that reasonably found in trees of this type [Brittalia Ventures v. Stuke Nursery Co., Inc. (2007) 153 CA4th 17, 27, 62 CR3d 467].

Strategic Point:

In cases of doubt as to what quality is intended, the price at which a merchant closes a contract is an excellent index of the nature and scope of the obligation [see Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 7].

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Merchant and Transactions Between Merchants, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.06 (Matthew Bender).

Implied Warranty of Merchantability Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.153 (Matthew Bender).

24.22[4] Goods Must Be Fit for Ordinary Purposes. Merchantable goods are implied to be fit for the ordinary purposes for which those goods are used [Com Code § 2314(2)(c); see Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. (2007) 148 CA4th 937, 953-954, 56 CR3d 177]. This means that merchantable goods must be "honestly" resalable in the normal course of business [see Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 8].

Example:

A vehicle that smells, lurches, clanks, and emits smoke over an extended period of time is not fit for its intended purpose; it is not sufficient for the implied warranty of merchantability that a vehicle merely provides transportation from point A to point B [Isip v. Mercedes-Benz USA, LLC (2007) 155 CA4th 19, 27, 65 CR3d 695] .

Jury Instructions:

24.22[5] Goods Must Be of Even Kind, Quality, and Quantity. Merchantable goods are implied to run, within the variations permitted by the agreement, of even kind, quality, and quantity within each unit and among all units involved [Com Code § 2314(2)(d)]. However, usage of trade may permit substantial variations both with and without an allowance or an obligation to replace the varying units [see Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 9].

24.22[6] Goods Must Be Adequately Contained, Packaged, and Labeled. Merchantable goods are implied to be adequately contained, packaged, and labeled as the agreement may require [Com Code § 2314(2)(e)]. This requirement applies only when the nature of the goods and of the transaction require a certain type of container, package or label [see Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 10].

24.22[7] Goods Must Conform to Promises or Affirmations of Fact on Label. Merchantable goods are implied to conform to the promises or affirmations of fact made on the container or label, if any [Com Code § 2314(2)(f)].

Distinguish:

Unlike the requirement that the goods be packaged or labeled [see 24.22[6]], this requirement applies wherever there is a label or container on which representations are made, even if the original contract, either by express terms or usage of trade, may not have required either the labeling or the representation [see Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 10].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
IV. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY HAS BEEN BREACHED

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.23

24.23 Breach of Warranty of Fitness Is Determined With Reference to Seller's Particular Use.

The Commercial Code warranty of fitness is determined with reference to whether or not the goods in question are suitable for the seller's particular use, as opposed to the more general requirements of the implied warranty of merchantability [Com Code § 2315]. A "particular purpose" differs from the ordinary purpose for which the goods are used in that it envisages a specific use by the buyer which is peculiar to the nature of the buyer's business, whereas the ordinary purposes for which goods are used are those envisaged in the concept of merchantability and go to uses which are customarily made of the goods in question [Com Code § 2315, UCC § 2-315, official cmt 2].

Example:

Shoes are generally used for the purpose of walking on ordinary ground, but a seller may know that a particular pair was selected to be used for climbing mountains [Com Code § 2315, UCC § 2-315, official cmt 2].

Distinguish--Contracts for Consumer Goods:

If the contract is one for the sale of consumer goods governed by the Song-Beverly Act, the criteria for determining whether the warranty of fitness has been breached is essentially identical to that used under the Commercial Code [see CC § 1791.1(b) (note that a special rule applies to manufacturers of assistive devices)].

24.24 Warranty of Title Is Breached by Seller's Failure to Deliver Clear Title to Goods.

The Commercial Code's warranty of title is breached if the seller fails to do either of the following [see Com Code § 2312(1)]:

- Convey good title to the goods, by a rightful transfer.
- Deliver the goods free from any security interest, lien, or encumbrance that the buyer did not know about at the time of entering into the contract. The buyer must have actual knowledge, as distinct from notice [Com Code § 2312, UCC § 2-312, official cmt 1].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
IV. DETERMINING IF WARRANTY HAS BEEN BREACHED

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.25

24.25 Warranty Must Be in Effect At Time Breach Occurs.

24.25[1] Breach Normally Occurs When Tender of Delivery Is Made. The Commercial Code does not specify time period during which warranties will remain in effect. However, a breach of a Commercial Code warranty ordinarily is deemed to occur when tender of delivery is made, unless the warranty extends to future performance of the goods [Com Code § 2725(2)]. The cause of action accrues at that time, regardless of whether or not the aggrieved party knows of the breach. The plaintiff then must bring suit within the applicable statute of limitations, which can be from one to four years [see Com Code § 2725(1)].

Consider:

The accrual statutes effectively define the duration of the warranty by measuring any breach from the time of tender of performance (rather than discovery), thereby precluding claims that the goods were nonconforming after the fact, except with respect to warranties of future performance [see 24.25[2]]. Thus, a party cannot base a claim on the failure of goods to conform to the warranty at some point after delivery has occurred, since the breach by definition occurs on tender of delivery [see Com Code § 2725(2)]. Warranties affecting future performance, of course, are the major exception to this rule [see Com Code § 2725(2); see also 24.25[2]].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of statute of limitations for breach of Commercial Code warranty, see 24.38.

24.25[2] Exception Exists for Warranties Relating to Future Performance. If a warranty relates to future performance of goods, a breach of warranty occurs when the time of that performance occurs and the breach is or should have been discovered [Com Code § 2725(2)]. Thus, as to warranties affecting future performance, the duration of the warranty is not defined with reference to the time of performance. The statute does not specify what the duration of a warranty of future performance is in the absence of any limitation in the warranty itself. However, the parties are permitted to limit the period by contract [see Com Code § 1302(b) (general powers of parties to vary Commercial Code provisions by agreement)], and express warranties guaranteeing future performance typically will limit the time during which future performance is guaranteed.

24.25[3] Implied Warranties in Consumer Contracts Are Subject to Special Rules.

24.25[3][a] Duration of Implied Warranties Is Determined With Reference to Express Warranties. If a contract for consumer goods contains an express warranty, the duration of the implied warranties of merchantability and fitness are coextensive with the period of the express warranty [CC §§ 1791.1(c), 1795.5(c)], provided that the terms of the implied warranties must be:

- For new goods, at least 60 days and a maximum of one year following sale to a retail buyer [CC § 1791.1(c); see Atkinson v. Elk Corporation of Texas (2006) 142 CA4th 212, 231, 48 CR3d 247] .
- For used goods, at least 30 days and a maximum of three months following sale to a retail buyer [CC § 1795.5(c)].

24.25[3][b] Duration of Implied Warranty Is Set by Statute in Absence of Express Warranty. If a contract for sale of consumer goods does not contain an express warranty that provides a specific duration, the implied warranties of fitness and merchantability in contracts have a one-year duration for new goods and a three-month duration for used goods [CC §§ 1791.1(c), 1795.5(c)].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
V. DETERMINING REMEDIES FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.28

24.28 General Measure of Damages Is Difference Between Value of Goods Accepted and Value of Goods Complying With Warranty.

24.28[1] Value Is Measured at Time and Place of Acceptance. The measure of damages for breach of warranty is the difference, at the time and place of acceptance, between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted, unless special circumstances show proximate damages of a different amount [Com Code § 2714(2); see 24.28[5], 24.30 for discussions of damages for injuries]. The value of the goods had they been as warranted may or may not be the contract price, and the cost of repairing defective goods may be accepted as the measure of damages [see City of New York v. Pullman, Inc. (2d Cir 1981) 662 F2d 910, 918 ; Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 CA4th 116, 150-153, 87 CR3d 5 (in an action by plaintiff healthcare products company against a parts manufacturer for supplying defective parts, the cost of replacing the part in all machines that had a one percent failure rate was a proper damage measure, but the evidence did not support an award of future damages because there was no evidence as to the percentage of parts that were likely to fail during the useful life of the product)].

Examples:

- A computer system, had it been as warranted, was worth over four times the contract price [see Chatlos Sys., Inc. v. National Cash Register Corp. (3d Cir 1982) 670 F2d 1304, 1305-1306].
- The value of a computer system, if it had been as warranted, was the contract price [see Schatz Distrib. Co. Inc. v. Olivetti Corp. of Am. (Kan 1982) 7 KA2d 676, 681, 647 P2d 820].

Consider:

- Remedies available to the buyer after revocation of acceptance and rejection of goods are based on an action for breach of contract, not breach of warranty. Therefore, recovery of costs for "covering," for example, technically are not available for a breach of warranty action--although a breach of warranty does provide grounds for a breach of contract action and associated remedies.

- Despite the absence of an express provision precluding the recovery of losses that the buyer could have prevented, a buyer's general obligation to mitigate damages may apply [Com Code § 2714, UCC § 2-714, official cmt 2].

24.28[2] Buyer May Recover Incidental and Consequential Damages. Incidental and consequential damages may also be recovered in a proper case [Com Code § 2714(3)]. Incidental damages include expenses reasonably incurred in inspection, receipt, transportation and care and custody of goods rightfully rejected, any commercially reasonable charges, expenses or commissions in connection with effecting cover, and any other reasonable expense incident to the delay or other breach [Com Code § 2715(1)]. Consequential damages include [Com Code § 2715(2)]:

- Any loss resulting from general or particular requirements and needs of which the seller at the time of contracting had reason to know and which could not reasonably be prevented by cover or otherwise.
- Injury to person or property proximately resulting from any breach of warranty.

The above requirement that the seller "had reason to know" of the buyer's needs is an objective rather than a subjective standard. Actual knowledge by the seller of the buyer's requirements is not required. The only requirement is that the seller reasonably should have been expected to know of the buyer's exposure to loss [Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. (2007) 148 CA4th 937, 957, 56 CR3d 177] .

24.28[3] Buyer Who Rejects Goods May Cover and Recover Damages. A buyer who rightfully rejects the goods may cancel the contract, recover any part of the price already paid, and may also either [Com Code § 2711(1)]:

- "Cover" (obtain substitute goods) and recover damages for the difference between the cost of cover and the contract price [Com Code § 2712(2)]; or
- Obtain damages for nondelivery or repudiation, consisting of the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time when the buyer learned of the breach [see Com Code § 2713(1)].

24.28[4] If Nonconformity Would Have Justified Revocation, Time and Place of Acceptance Is Determined As of Buyer's Decision Not to Revoke. If the nonconformity of the goods would have justified revocation of acceptance, the time and place of acceptance is determined as the buyer's decision not to revoke [Com Code § 2714, UCC § 2-714, official cmt 3].

Jury Instructions:

Buyer's Damages for Accepted Goods and for Breach of Warranty, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.258 (Matthew Bender).

24.28[5] Strict Liability Governs Personal and Property Damage. Consequential damages resulting from the seller's breach include injury to person or property proximately resulting from any breach of warranty [Com Code § 2715(2)(b)]. However, with the introduction of the doctrine of strict liability in tort for injuries resulting from defective products, warranty law was relegated to governing the consensual economic relationship between the parties, while strict liability governs both personal injury and physical injury to property based on duties imposed by law [Greenman v. Yuba Power Prods., Inc. (1963) 59 C2d 57, 63, 27 CR 697, 377 P2d 897; see Seely v. White Motor Co. (1965) 63 C2d 9, 15-16, 18-19, 45 CR 17, 403 P2d 145].

V. DETERMINING REMEDIES FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.32

24.32 Special Remedies Provisions Apply to Warranty Actions Involving Consumer Goods.

24.32[1] Consumer May Seek Damages and Equitable Relief. A buyer of consumer goods who is damaged by a failure to comply with any obligation under the Song-Beverly Act under an implied or express warranty or service contract may bring an action for damages and legal and equitable relief.

If the buyer has rightfully rejected or justifiably revoked acceptance of the goods, he or she can "cover" (obtain substitute goods) and recover damages for repudiation under the Commercial Code [CC § 1794(b)(1); see Com Code §§ 2711, 2712, 2713]. If the buyer has accepted the goods, the Commercial Code measure of damages applies, and the measure of damages includes the cost of repairs necessary to make the goods conform [CC § 1794(b)(2); see Com Code §§ 2714, 2715].

➡ Cross References:

Measure of damages for accepted goods under the Commercial Code, see 24.28[1].

Measure of damages for rejected goods under the Commercial Code, see 24.28[3].

24.32[2] Measure of Damages Includes Replacement or Reimbursement. The measure of the buyer's damages in an action under the Song-Beverly Act include the rights of replacement or reimbursement [CC § 1794(b); see CC § 1793.2(d)].

24.32[3] Consumer May Recover Additional Civil Penalties in Specified Cases. If the buyer establishes that the seller's failure to comply with an express warranty was willful, the judgment may include a civil penalty of up to twice the actual damages, in addition to damages otherwise recovered. This penalty is not available if the claim is based solely on a breach of an implied warranty [CC § 1794(c)].

A similar penalty exists for violation of the "lemon law" requirements relating to the repair or replacement of motor vehicles [CC § 1794(e)(1); see CC § 1793.2(d)(2); but see CC § 1794(e)(2) (inapplicability if manufacturer maintains qualified third-party resolution process)], provided the buyer gives the manufacturer written notice requesting that the manufacturer comply with those requirements and the manufacturer does not comply within 30 days thereafter [CC §§ 1794, (4)]. No showing of willfulness is required in this case [see CC § 1794(e)]. This penalty is available only if the vehicle was purchased in California [Cummins, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 36 C4th 478, 483, 115 P3d 98].

24.32[4] Consumer May Recover Attorney's Fees. A prevailing buyer in an action under the Song-Beverly Act is entitled to recover his or her aggregate amount of costs and expenses, including attorney's fees based on actual time expended, determined by the court to have been reasonably incurred by the buyer in connection with the commencement and prosecution of the action [CC § 1794(d)].

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.34

24.34 Options and Strategy.

The focus of most warranty disputes is whether the seller's words or actions actually created a warranty, whether the goods conformed to the warranty, and whether the warranty was effectively modified or negated. However, in asserting a claim for breach of warranty, proof of notice and proof of the existence of the warranty as described by the plaintiff can be equally important. The Commercial Code provides detailed notice requirements that the buyer must adhere to before bringing suit, primarily so the seller is given an opportunity to remedy the breach.

24.35 Commercial Code Requires That Buyer Must First Give Seller Timely Notice of Breach.

24.35[1] Notice Must Be Given Within Reasonable Time After Discovery of Breach. If the buyer has accepted tender of the goods, the buyer must notify the seller of the breach within a reasonable time after he or she discovers or should have discovered it, or be barred from any remedy [Com Code § 2607(3)(a); Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 CA4th 116, 135-137, 87 CR3d 5] .

Warning:

If the breach was not discovered on a timely basis, the time for giving notice begins running when the breach should have been discovered [Com Code § 2607(3)(a)].

Jury Instructions:

Notice of Breach of Warranty, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.155 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Discussion of notice requirement, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.28[4] (Matthew Bender).

24.35[2] Time of Notification Is Determined by Applying Commercial Standards. The time of notification is to be determined by applying commercial standards to a merchant buyer [see Com Code § 2607, UCC § 2-607, official cmt 4; see Britalia Ventures v. Stuke Nursery Co., Inc. (2007) 153 CA4th 17, 28, 62 CR3d 467 (buyer of walnut trees gave adequate notice to seller by several times bringing problem to the attention of the seller, who refused to discuss the problem)]. The question of what constitutes a reasonable time under Com Code § 2607(3)(a) for giving notice usually is a question of fact for the jury [Los Angeles Nut House v. Holiday Hardware Corp. (9th Cir 1987) 825 F2d 1351, 1354].

Distinguish:

A reasonable time for notification from a retail consumer is to be judged by different standards than those used for a merchant buyer, and may be extended [see Com Code § 2607, UCC § 2-607, official cmt 4].

Jury Instructions:

Notice of Breach of Warranty, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.155 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Merchant and Transactions Between Merchants, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.06 (Matthew Bender).

24.35[3] Content of Notification Must Be Sufficient to Let Seller Know That Buyer Claims Breach. The notice merely needs to let the seller know that the transaction is claimed to involve a breach. It does not need to contain a clear statement of all the objections that will be relied on by the buyer, and it need not be a claim for damages, nor to threaten litigation or other resort to remedy [Com Code § 2607, UCC § 2-607, official cmt 4].

Jury Instructions:

Notice of Breach of Warranty, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.155 (Matthew Bender).

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
VI. ASSERTING CLAIM FOR BREACH OF EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.36

24.36 Complaint Under Commercial Code Must Plead Essential Elements of Breach of Warranty.

24.36[1] Plaintiff Must Prove Elements of Warranty. In an action based on breach of warranty under the Commercial Code, it is necessary to show not only the existence of the warranty, but also the fact that the warranty was broken and that the breach of the warranty was the proximate cause of the loss sustained [Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 13]. The burden is on the buyer to show any breach [Com Code § 2607(4)].

24.36[2] Complaint for Breach of Warranty Must Allege Essential Elements of Claim. In general, a complaint for breach of an express or implied warranty under the Commercial Code should allege the following elements:

- The sale of goods to which the warranty relates [Com Code § 2204].
- For an express warranty, the seller's affirmation of fact or promise that became a part of the basis of the bargain [Com Code § 2313], such as:
 - ☐ Allegation that contract contained warranty language.
 - ☐ Allegation that a specified description of the goods in or outside the written contract, such as a product manual, inventory list, package, or advertisement, was relied on by the buyer and became part of the basis of the bargain.
 - ☐ Allegation that buyer relied on a sample or model.
- For the implied warranty of merchantability [Com Code § 2314(1)]:
 - ☐ That the seller is a merchant with respect to goods of the kind at issue in the contract; and
 - ☐ That the implied warranty of merchantability therefore existed with respect to the goods.

- For the implied warranty of fitness [Com Code § 2315]:

☐ That the seller, at the time of selling, had reason to know of the particular purpose for which the buyer required the goods;

☐ That the buyer was relying on the seller's skill and judgment to furnish suitable goods; and

☐ That the implied warranty of fitness therefore existed with respect to the goods.

- That the goods did not conform to the requirements of the warranty, and that the nonconformity constituted a breach [Com Code § 2607(4)].

- Plaintiff's notification of the breach, and the defendant's inability or unwillingness to correct it [Com Code § 2607(3)(A)].

- Damages from the breach [Com Code § 2714(2)].

- Incidental and consequential damages [Com Code §§ 2714(3), 2715].

Cross References:

Forms for complaint alleging breach of express and implied warranties, see 24.44, 24.45.

Discussion of elements of breach of warranty claim, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.28[1] (Matthew Bender).

Strategic Point--All Parties:

Affirmations of fact by the seller about the goods, made during a bargain, are regarded as part of their description, and no particular reliance on the statements needs to be shown to integrate them into the agreement [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 3]. Facts intended to remove the affirmations from the agreement require clear, affirmative proof. The issue normally is one of fact [Com Code § 2313, UCC § 2-313, official cmt 3].

Jury Instructions:

Breach of Express Warranty--Burden of Proof, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.148 (Matthew Bender).

Breach of Implied Warranty of Fitness, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.152 (Matthew Bender).

Breach of Implied Warranty of Merchantability, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.154 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Discussion of reliance in warranty actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.23[1] (Matthew Bender).

24.36[3] Plaintiff Need Not Plead Breach of Contract. While a claim for breach of warranty under the Commercial Code requires the existence of a contract for sale [see 24.04[1]], it does not require pleading that the primary contract has also been breached [see Com Code §§ 2313, 2607(3)(a), (4), 2714; Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 20, 220 CR 392]. Hence, it is unnecessary to include the standard allegations usually included in a traditional breach of contract claim.

Strategic Point:

When an expression in or part of a contract is capable of being interpreted as a warranty or as an integral element or condition of the primary contract of sale, the plaintiff likely has a cause of action for both breach of warranty and breach of the sales contract [see Com Code § 2701 (Commercial Code does not impair remedies for breach of collateral or ancillary obligation)]. If a breach of contract action is included, the plaintiff, of course, then must plead all the necessary elements to state a cause of action for breach of contract.

Cross References:

Discussion of nature of warranty action and choice between breach of contract and warranty, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.12 (Matthew Bender).

24.36[4] Seller Has Burden of Proving Representation Did Not Form Basis of Bargain. A warranty statement made by the seller is presumptively is part of the basis of the bargain and the burden rests on the seller to prove that the resulting bargain does not rest at all on the representation [Keith v. Buchanan (1985) 173 CA3d 13, 23, 220 CR 392]. Therefore, it should not be essential to allege that the representation became a basis of the bargain. Nevertheless, good practice suggests alleging this, for clarity and because it is done with only a few additional words.

VI. ASSERTING CLAIM FOR BREACH OF EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.37

24.37 Complaint for Breach of Warranty for Consumer Goods Must Plead Essential Elements Under Song-Beverly Act.

In an action for breach of warranty under the Song-Beverly Act, the plaintiff must allege the following elements:

- That plaintiff was a buyer of consumer goods; that is:
 - ☐ Any new product or part thereof that is used, bought, or leased for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, except for clothing and consumables, or any assistive device [see CC §§ 1791(a) ("consumer goods"), (b) ("buyer"), ("clothing"), (d) ("consumables"), (p)("assistive device"), 1794 (buyer's right to recovery)]; or
 - ☐ Any used consumer goods in a sale in which an express warranty is given.
- That defendant is engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, or selling consumer goods at retail [see CC § 1791(b)].
- The sale of goods to which the warranty relates, including fact that they were sold at retail in California [see CC §§ 1792, 1792.1, 1792.2].
- For an express warranty [CC § 1791.2]:
 - ☐ Either:
 - That manufacturer, distributor, or retailer provided a written statement undertaking to preserve or maintain the utility or performance of the consumer good or provide compensation if there was a failure of utility or performance; or
 - That buyer relied on a sample or model.
 - ☐ Terms of express warranty.

■ For the implied warranty of merchantability [CC § 1792], fact that the implied warranty of merchantability existed with respect to the goods.

■ For the implied warranty of fitness:

☐ That the manufacturer, and/or dealer, and/or distributor, as appropriate, had reason to know at the time of the sale that [see CC §§ 1792.1, 1792.2]:

☐ The goods were required for a particular purpose; and

☐ The buyer was relying on the seller's skill and judgment to furnish suitable goods.

☐ That an implied warranty of fitness therefore existed with respect to the goods [see CC §§ 1792.1, 1792.2].

■ That the goods did not conform to the requirements of the warranty, and that the nonconformity constituted a breach.

■ Plaintiff's compliance with the terms of any express warranty, including:

☐ Notification to defendant of breach.

☐ Compliance with warranty provisions relating to service and repair of goods [see CC §§ 1793.02-1793.5].

■ Ineffectiveness of any repair attempts to correct problem with the goods.

■ Plaintiff's damages from the breach [see CC § 1794].

■ Any other relief requested by plaintiff [see CC § 1794].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
VI. ASSERTING CLAIM FOR BREACH OF EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.38

24.38 Statute of Limitations Is Four Years Unless Shortened by Contract.

24.38[1] Four-Year Period Generally Applies. An action for breach of a Commercial Code warranty must be commenced within four years after the cause of action accrued [Com Code § 2725(1)].

► Cross Reference:

General discussion of statute of limitations issues in contract actions, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statute of Limitations and Effect on Potential Action.

24.38[2] Commercial Code Statute of Limitations Applies to Actions Under Song-Beverly Act. The four-year period of Com Code § 2725 also governs actions under the Song-Beverly Act [Krieger v. Nick Alexander Imps., Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 205, 215, 285 CR 717 ; see CC § 1790.3].

24.38[3] Contract May Shorten Period to Not Less Than One Year, but May Not Extend It Past Four Years. By the original agreement, the parties can reduce the statute of limitations period on a breach of warranty action under the Commercial Code to not less than one year. The parties may not extend the limitations period beyond the statutory four year period [Com Code § 2725(1)].

► Cross Reference:

Discussion of contractual reduction of statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.28[6][a] (Matthew Bender).

24.38[4] Limitations Period Runs From Time of Breach. A breach of warranty occurs, and the statute of limitations begins to run, when tender of delivery is made by the seller, regardless of whether or not the aggrieved party knew about the breach [Com Code § 2725(2)]. An exception exists for warranties relating to future performance [see 24.38[5]].

24.38[5] Action for Warranty As to Future Performance Accrues When Breach Is Discovered. When a warranty explicitly extends to future performance of the goods, and discovery of the breach must await the time of that performance, the cause of action accrues when the breach is, or should have been, discovered [Com Code § 2725(2)].

Example-Future Performance Exception Applies:

Defendant car retailer represented that it would repair plaintiff's vehicle for 36 months or 36,000 miles. This was a warranty of future performance, which extended the limitations period for an additional four years. Causes of action under the Commercial Code and the Song-Beverly Act accrued when the plaintiff determined that the first dealership could not fix the car, and plaintiff had four years thereafter to file suit [Krieger v. Nick Alexander Imps., Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 205, 218-219, 285 CR 717].

Examples-Future Performance Exception Does Not Apply:

- A promise by a manufacturer that a part would work for 50,000 cycles did not bring the warranty within the "future performance" exception because it did not specify a date or time in the future [Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 CA4th 116, 131-132, 87 CR3d 5] .

- Generalized assertions in advertisements and literature do not rise to the level of a warranty explicitly extending to "future performance" [Carrau v. Marvin Lumber & Cedar Co. (2001) 93 CA4th 281, 290-292, 112 CR2d 869].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of statute of limitations for warranties under Song-Beverly Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.52 (Matthew Bender).

24.38[6] Attempt to Cure Tolls Limitations Period. The statute of limitations adopted for sales contracts and breaches of warranty does not alter the law on the tolling of the statute [Com Code § 2725(4)]. Whenever the breaching party claims that the defect can be repaired, then the limitation period is tolled while he or she attempts to make repairs [Krieger v. Nick Alexander Imps., Inc. (1991) 234 CA3d 205, 218-219, 285 CR 717].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of tolling of statute of limitations, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statute of Limitations and Effect on Potential Action, 4.21.

24.38[7] Limitation Period Does Not Apply in Action Against Manufacturer. The Commercial Code limitations period applies only when a contract of sale exists between a buyer and the seller. It does not apply to actions brought by the buyer against the manufacturer of the unsatisfactory product [Fundin v. Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. (1984) 152 CA3d 951, 960, 199 CR 789].

VII. OPPOSING CLAIM FOR BREACH OF EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.39

24.39 CHECKLIST: Opposing Claim for Breach of Express or Implied Warranty.

☐ Determine if demurrer can be filed on ground of failure to state cause of action because complaint contains clear contractual language modifying or excluding warranty.

Authority:

CCP § 430.10(e)

Discussion:

See 24.41

☐ Determine whether any of following affirmative defenses are available:

☐ Defect in goods is due to action by seller.

Authority:

Com Code § 2314(e); see CC §§ 1791.1, 1791.2, 1792, 1792.1

Discussion:

See 24.42[1]

☐ Agreement between parties limited available remedy.

Authority:

Com Code § 2316(4); see CC § 1792.3

Discussion:

See 24.42[2]

☐ Express warranty was negated by seller's words or conduct.

Authority:

Com Code § 2316(1); but see CC § 1791.2(a)(1), (2)

Discussion:

See 24.42[3]

- ☐ Implied warranties were excluded by "as is" language.

Authority:

Com Code § 2316(3); but see CC §§ 1792.3, 1792.4

Discussion:

See 24.42[4]

- ☐ Implied warranty of merchantability was waived by appropriate contract language.

Authority:

Com Code § 2316(2); but see CC § 1792.3

Discussion:

See 24.42[5]

- ☐ Implied warranty of fitness was waived by appropriate contract language.

Authority:

Com Code § 2316(2); but see CC § 1792.3

Discussion:

See 24.42[6]

- ☐ Implied warranties were excluded or modified by course of dealing or trade usage.

Authority:

Com Code § 2316(3)(c); but see CC § 1792.3

Discussion:

See 24.42[7]

- ☐ Implied warranties were excluded by plaintiff's opportunity to examine goods prior to forming contract.

Authority:

Com Code § 2316(3)(b); but see CC § 1792.3

Discussion:

See 24.42[8]

- ☐ Warranty of title was waived by virtue of fact that buyer had reason to know that seller did not claim title.

Authority:

Com Code § 2312(2)

Discussion:

See 24.42[9]

☐ Warranty of title is inapplicable because claim resulted from seller's compliance with buyer's specifications.

Authority:

Com Code § 2312(3)

Discussion:

See 24.42[10]

☐ Buyer was unaware of warranty at time of contracting.

Authority:

Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 CA3d 1, 34, 262 CR 716
; but see CC §§ 1791.1, 1791.2

Discussion:

See 24.42[11]

☐ Seller made no affirmation of fact or promise.

Authority:

Pisano v. American Leasing (1983) 146 CA3d 194, 197-198, 194 CR 77

Discussion:

See 24.42[12]

☐ If defendant bought goods from manufacturer or other third party, determine whether defendant should "vouch in" seller and give seller opportunity to defend.

Authority:

Com Code § 2607(5)(a)

Discussion:

VII. OPPOSING CLAIM FOR BREACH OF EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.40

24.40 Options and Strategy.

The essential inquiry in many breach of warranty cases is not whether the warranty was breached, but whether the warranty actually exists. Therefore, many of the seller's possibilities for defense come in the form of a demurrer or affirmative defense asserting, on various grounds, that the agreement either did not include the warranty [see 24.12, 24.13] or effectively modified or negated it [see 24.15, 24.16]. It also may be necessary to present evidence demonstrating that statements or actions did not create an express warranty, or that custom and usage has modified or eliminated an implied warranty [see 24.15[6]].

24.41 Defendant Can Demur If Clear Contractual Language of Waiver or Modification Is Attached to Complaint.

If the warranty alleged to have been breached is contained in a written contract of sale that has been appended to the complaint and that contains specific language excluding or modifying the warranty, defendant may demur on the ground that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action [see CCP § 430.10(e)]

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
VII. OPPOSING CLAIM FOR BREACH OF EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.42

24.42 Numerous Potential Affirmative Defenses Exist.

24.42[1] Loss May Have Resulted From Action or Event Following Delivery of Goods. An affirmative showing by the seller that the loss resulted from some action or event following the seller's own delivery of the goods can operate as a defense [Com Code § 2314, UCC § 2-314, official cmt 13].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

This defense also is available under the Song-Beverly Act if the defendant can show that the action in question was covered neither by any express warranty of the seller, nor by the implied warranties of merchantability and fitness [see CC §§ 1791.1, 1791.2, 1792, 1792.1].

► Cross Reference:

Forms for answer with affirmative defenses to complaint alleging breach of express and implied warranties, see 24.46, 24.47.

24.42[2] Agreement Between Parties May Have Limited Available Remedies. If the contract for the sale of goods contains provisions limiting the remedies available for the breach of warranty, the defendant can raise those provisions as an affirmative defense if the plaintiff is seeking more than was allowed by the contract [Com Code § 2316(4)].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

The Song-Beverly Act does not permit waiver of the implied warranties of merchantability or fitness, except in the case of "as is" sales [CC § 1792.3].

► Cross References:

Forms for answer to complaint alleging breach of express and implied warranties, see 24.46, 24.47.

Discussion, checklists and forms relating to remedies under the Commercial Code, see Ch. 26, Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code.

24.42[3] Express Warranty May Have Been Negated by Words or Conduct. If seller negated or limited any express warranty by words or conduct, he or she can raise the negation or limitation as an affirmative defense in an action for breach of express warranty [see Com Code § 2316(1)].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

Since the Song-Beverly Act provides that express warranties must either be written [CC § 1791.2(a)(1)] or consist of a sample of model [CC § 1791.2(a)(2)], they cannot be negated by words or conduct

Form for answer to complaint alleging breach of express warranty, see 24.46.

Discussion of negation of express warranty, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.23[6] (Matthew Bender).

24.42[4] All Implied Warranties May Have Been Excluded by "As Is" Contract Language. All implied warranties (including the implied warranty of merchantability) are excluded by expressions such as "as is," "with all faults," or other language which in common understanding calls the buyer's attention to the exclusion of warranties and makes plain that there is no implied warranty [Com Code § 2316(3)]. If such language was included in the agreement, defendant may raise it as an affirmative defense or by a demurrer [see 24.41].

 Warning:

A warranty of title is not designated an implied warranty [Com Code § 2312, UCC § 2-312, official cmts 1, 6], and therefore most likely will not be excluded by language excluding implied warranties in general [see 24.14[5]].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

This defense is also available under the Song-Beverly Act, provided the applicable notice requirements have been met [see CC §§ 1792.3, 1792.4].

Jury Instructions:

Disclaimer of Implied Warranties, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.156 (Matthew Bender).

Detailed discussion of exclusion or modification of implied warranties, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 502.24[8] -[10] (Matthew Bender).

24.42[5] Implied Warranty of Merchantability May Have Been Excluded or Modified by Conspicuous Language Mentioning Merchantability. To exclude or modify the implied warranty of merchantability, in the absence of a general negation of implied warranties [see 24.42[4]], the language must specifically mention merchantability. In the case of a writing, that language must be conspicuous [Com Code § 2316(2)]. However, even if the word "merchantability" is not used, a seller may limit the scope of the implied warranty by specifying that the product should be used with caution or in a certain prescribed manner [see Harris v. Belton (1968) 258 CA2d 595, 605-607, 65 CR 808]. If any such language was included in the agreement, defendant may raise it as an affirmative defense or a demurrer [see 24.41].

Example:

There was no breach of the implied warranty of merchantability when a customer developed a skin irritation after the application of a product which advertised itself as appropriate for use on the skin but cautioned that certain skin might be sensitive to the product and that sample testing should be tried and its use discontinued if any irritation developed [Harris v. Belton (1968) 258 CA2d 595, 606-607, 65 CR 808].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

Except in the case of "as is" sales [see 24.42[4]], the implied warranty of merchantability under the Song-Beverly Act may not be disclaimed [CC § 1792.3].

Jury Instructions:

Disclaimer of Implied Warranties, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.156 (Matthew Bender).

24.42[6] Implied Warranty of Fitness May Have Been Excluded by Conspicuous Writing. To exclude or modify the implied warranty of fitness, in the absence of a general negation of implied warranties [see 24.42[4]], the exclusion must be in writing in a conspicuous fashion. Language to exclude all implied warranties of fitness is sufficient if it states, for example, that "there are no warranties which extend beyond the description on the face hereof" [Com Code § 2316(2)]. If such language was included in the agreement, defendant may raise it as an affirmative defense or a demurrer [see 24.41].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

Except in the case of "as is" sales [see 24.42[4]], the implied warranty of fitness under the Song-Beverly Act may not be disclaimed [CC § 1792.3].

24.42[7] Implied Warranty May Have Been Excluded or Modified by Course of Dealing or Trade Usage.

The seller may raise as an affirmative defense to any action on an implied warranty that the implied warranty was excluded or modified by course of dealing or course of performance or by usage of trade [Com Code § 2316(3)]. These rules take precedence over the special provisions for exclusion of the individual types of implied warranties [Com Code § 2316(3); see 24.42[4] -[7]].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

Except in the case of "as is" sales, the implied warranties of merchantability and fitness cannot be waived [CC § 1792.3]. Nothing in the Song-Beverly Act permits trade usage to be a basis for claiming exclusion or modification of implied warranties.

Jury Instructions:

Disclaimer of Implied Warranties, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.156 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross References:

24.42[8] Warranty May Have Been Excluded by Plaintiff's Opportunity to Examine Goods Prior to Forming Contract. When the buyer, before entering into the contract, has examined the goods, or the sample or model, as fully as he or she desired, or has refused to examine them, there is no implied warranty with regard to defects which an examination would have revealed [Com Code § 2316(3)]. If the buyer discovers the defect and uses the goods anyway, or if the buyer unreasonably fails to examine the goods before using them, any injuries that occur will be considered to result from the buyer's own action, rather than proximately from a breach of warranty [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

Although the Song-Beverly Act provides that a sample or model may be the basis for formation of an express warranty [CC § 1791.2(a)(2)], a refusal to examine the sample or model is not classified as a waiver. Implied warranties can be waived only in the case of an "as is" sale complying with the applicable notice requirements [CC § 1792.3; see CC § 1792.4 (notice requirements)].

Strategic Point--All Parties:

A buyer is deemed to have refused to examine goods only if the seller first demands that the buyer examine the goods fully, thereby putting the buyer on notice that he or she assumes the risk of defects which the examination ought to reveal [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8]. The particular buyer's skill and the normal method of examining goods under the circumstances determine which defects are excluded by the examination [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

Distinguish:

Examination by the buyer is not synonymous with inspection before acceptance or at any other time after the contract has been made [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8]. Rather, examination signifies the nature of the responsibility assumed by the seller at the time of making the contract. Thus, if the buyer discovers the defect and uses the goods anyway, or unreasonably fails to examine the goods before using them, any injuries that occur may be found to result from the buyer's own action rather than proximately from a breach of warranty [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8]. However, a buyer is deemed to have refused to examine goods only if the seller first demands that the buyer examine the goods fully, thereby putting the buyer on notice that he or she assumes the risk of defects which the examination ought to reveal, and the buyer thereafter fails to examine the goods [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

 Cross References:

Discussion of inspection by buyer, see 24.30.

Form for answer to complaint alleging breach of implied warranty, see 24.47.

Example:

A failure to notice defects that are obvious cannot excuse the buyer. However, an examination under circumstances that do not permit chemical or other testing of the goods would not exclude defects which could be ascertained only by that testing. Latent defects are not excluded by a simple examination. A professional buyer examining a product in his or her field of expertise is held to have assumed the risk as to all defects that a professional ought to observe. A nonprofessional buyer is held only to the standard of what a layperson might have found to be defects [Com Code § 2316, UCC § 2-316, official cmt 8].

Jury Instructions:

Disclaimer of Implied Warranties, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.156 (Matthew Bender).

24.42[9] Buyer May Have Had Reason to Know Seller Did Not Claim Title. The seller may raise as an affirmative defense the fact that buyer had reason to know that the seller did not claim title [Com Code § 2312(2)].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

The Song-Beverly Act does not cover warranties of title. Since there is no conflict between the Song-Beverly Act and the Commercial Code in this regard, the Commercial Code provisions governing warranties of title apparently apply to consumer sales as well [see CC § 1790.3].

Jury Instructions:

Exclusion or Modification of Warranty of Title, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.142 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross References:

Discussion of warranty of title, see 24.14.

Form for answer to complaint alleging breach of implied warranty, see 24.47.

24.42[10] Goods May Have Complied With Specifications Supplied by Buyer. A buyer who furnishes specifications to the seller must hold the seller harmless against any breaches of warranty of title, and any resulting claims, which arise out of compliance with the buyer's specifications [Com Code § 2312(3)]. The seller can raise compliance with the buyer's specifications as an affirmative defense.

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

The Song-Beverly Act does not cover warranties of title. Since there is no conflict between the Song-Beverly Act and the Commercial Code in this regard, the Commercial Code provisions governing warranties of title apparently apply to consumer sales as well [see CC § 1790.3].

Jury Instructions:

Warranty Against Infringement, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.143 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross References:

Buyer specifications--warranty of title, see 24.14[4].

Form for answer to complaint alleging breach of implied warranty, see 24.47.

24.42[11] Buyer Cannot Claim Benefit of Express Warranty That Buyer Did Not Know About at Time of Contracting. A buyer cannot claim the benefit of an express warranty of which it had no knowledge at the time of contracting [Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 CA3d 1, 34, 262 CR 716].

Example:

An express warranty in a contract between a seller and one of the seller's subcontractors was not discovered by the buyer until after the primary contract, which contained a warranty disclaimer, was executed. The buyer was not entitled to avail itself of a warranty of which it was not aware at the time of contracting, and the disclaimer barred the buyer's claim [see Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 CA3d 1, 34-35, 262 CR 716].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

The Song-Beverly Act, unlike the Commercial Code, applies whether or not the consumer was aware of the warranties [see CC §§ 1791.1, 1791.2 (definitions of express and implied warranties)]. Therefore, this defense is inapplicable in a consumer warranty action.

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of express warranty, see 24.12.

24.42[12] Seller May Have Made No Affirmation of Fact or Promise. A buyer cannot recover damages under the theory of breach of express warranty in the absence of any affirmations of fact or promises made by defendants to plaintiff [Pisano v. American Leasing (1983) 146 CA3d 194, 197-198, 194 CR 77].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

Since the Song-Beverly Act does not actually require the seller to provide express warranties, this defense presumably could be raised if a buyer in a consumer sale claimed breach of an express warranty that the seller never made. In such a case, however, the buyer might well have a claim for breach of implied warranties, which exist without regard to any express actions by the seller and cannot be waived (except in the case of an "as is" sale) [CC §§ 1792, 1792.1, 1792.3].

Chapter 24 Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty
VII. OPPOSING CLAIM FOR BREACH OF EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTY

2-24 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 24.43

24.43 Buyer Sued by Third Party May Give Seller Opportunity to Defend ("Vouch In").

A buyer who is being sued in connection with a product furnished by a manufacturer/seller may "vouch in" the manufacturer by giving the manufacturer written notice of the litigation [Com Code § 2607(5)(A)]. The notice should state that [see Com Code § 2607(5)(A)]:

- Litigation is occurring which concerns a product sold or manufactured by the seller/manufacture;
- The seller may come in and defend; and
- If the seller does not do so, the seller/manufacture will be bound in any action the buyer brings against the seller/manufacture by any determination of fact common to the two litigations.

Strategic Point--Buyer:

This "vouching in" procedure has a collateral estoppel effect against the manufacturer if the buyer and manufacturer are both liable but the manufacturer is not joined as a defendant, as when the manufacturer is in a different jurisdiction and thus, is not able to be joined [see Com Code § 2607[5][A]].

Trap--Buyer:

If the buyer is sued for breach of a warranty or other obligation for which the seller is answerable, and the claim is one for infringement or the like, the original seller may demand in writing that the buyer turn over control of the litigation or else be barred from any remedy [Com Code § 2607(5)(B)]. If the seller also agrees to bear all expense and to satisfy any adverse judgment, then unless the buyer, after receipt of the demand, does turn over control, the buyer is barred from any remedy [Com Code § 2607(5)(B)].

Warning:

In most cases, one letter from the buyer to the seller cannot double as both a breach of warranty letter under Com Code § 2607(3)(a) and a "vouching in" letter under Com Code

§ 2607(5)(A). The vouching in letter must meet far more stringent statutory requirements. If a litigant is to be bound by application of Com Code § 2607(5)(A), due process demands that the literal requirements be strictly obeyed [Bendix-Westinghouse Auto. Air Brake Co. v. Swan Rubber Co. (1976) 55 CA3d 256, 261-262, 127 CR 571].

Distinguish--Consumer Sales:

The Song-Beverly Act does not contain any "vouch-in" provisions. Since there is no conflict between the Song-Beverly Act and the Commercial Code in this regard, the Commercial Code provisions governing "vouching in" of sellers appear to apply to consumer sales as well [see CC § 1790.3], although this is less likely to be significant in consumer sales transactions.

Prior to entering into that contract, in the course of the negotiations, Defendant _____ represented and warranted to Plaintiff, _____ [orally and/or in writing] that _____ [describe representation relating to goods, e.g., the outer cases were made of high quality stainless steel]. That _____ [affirmation or promise] became part of the basis of the bargain between the parties and therefore constituted an express warranty [if appropriate, add; and was incorporated into the written contract between the parties]. [Add, if appropriate: A copy of the _____ (contract or writing) is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.]

[OR, use for allegation of breach of express warranty based on sample or model]

5. On or about _____ [date], at _____, California, Plaintiff and Defendant entered into _____ [an oral or a written] contract under which Plaintiff agreed to buy, and Defendant agreed to sell, _____ [description and quantity of goods, e.g., 750 Model KHB12 carrying cases for digital cameras], for the price of $ _____ [or describe other relevant terms of sale]. Prior to entering into that contract, in the course of the negotiations, Defendant exhibited to Plaintiff a _____ [sample or model] of the goods and warranted and represented to Plaintiff that the goods delivered under the contract would conform to the features of the sample of model. Among other features, this _____ [sample or model] had _____ [describe feature or features forming basis of warranty claim; e.g., an outer case made of high quality stainless steel]. Plaintiff inspected the _____ [sample or model], and agreed on the basis of that inspection to purchase the goods from Defendant. An express warranty that the goods would conform to the _____ [sample or model] therefore became part of the basis of the bargain between the parties.

[OR, use for allegation of breach of express warranty based on description of goods]

5. On or about _____ [date], at _____, California, Plaintiff and Defendant entered into _____ [an oral or a written] contract under which Plaintiff agreed to buy, and Defendant agreed to sell, _____ [description and quantity of goods, e.g., 750 Model KHB12 carrying cases for digital cameras], for the price of $ _____ [or describe other relevant terms of sale]. Prior to entering into that contract, in the course of the negotiations, Plaintiff referred to a description of goods _____ [specify source of description, e. g., in the manufacturer's sales brochure for the product or on the back of a package for the item or in the technical specifications for the particular model which are posted on the manufacturer's website]. [Add, if appropriate: A true copy of the description is attached as Exhibit _____ and incorporated by reference]. This description stated, among other things, that the goods had _____ [describe feature or features forming basis of warranty claim; e.g., an outer case made of high quality stainless steel]. On the basis of this description, Plaintiff agreed to purchase the goods from Defendant. An express warranty that the goods would conform to the description therefore became part of the basis of the bargain between the parties.

6. Plaintiff has performed all conditions, covenants, and promises required on his/her/its part to be performed in accordance with the terms and conditions of the contract [except (specify conditions not performed) _____]. Plaintiff did not perform _____ (this or these) condition (s) because (specify facts showing excuse for nonperformance) _____].

7. The goods Plaintiff received from Defendant under the above contract did not conform to the express warranty of Defendant as alleged above, in that _____ [specify how goods did not conform to warranty, e.g., the outer of cases were not made of high quality stainless steel as Defendant warranted, but in fact were made of thin plastic that cracks, scratches, and chips easily].

8. Plaintiff discovered Defendant's breach of warranty on or about _____ [date]. On or about _____ [date], Plaintiff notified Defendant of this breach by _____ [manner of notice, e.g., registered mail] that the goods supplied by Defendant did not conform to Defendant's express warranty as specified above. [A copy of that _____ (letter or other form of notice) is attached to this complaint as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference].

9. Defendant failed and refused, and still fails and refuses, to replace the nonconforming goods with goods conforming to Defendant's express warranty, or to compensate Plaintiff in any way for the diminished value of the goods Defendant supplied.

[Use for allegation of damages without special circumstances]

10. As a proximate result of Defendant's breach of warranty, Plaintiff has been damaged in the amount of $ _____, representing _____ [specify basis of damages, e.g., the difference between the retail value of the good had they conformed to Defendant's express warranty and the retail value of the goods actually delivered to Plaintiff].

[OR, use to allege damages with special circumstances]

10. As a proximate result of Defendant's breach of warranty, Plaintiff has been damaged [in the amount of $ _____] as a result of special circumstances in that _____ [describe circumstances, e.g., Plaintiff, in reliance on Defendant's express warranty, represented to potential buyers that the goods were as Defendant warranted them to be, and as a result received advance orders for approximately 500 units from buyers who, relying on Plaintiff, believed that the goods conformed to Defendant's warranty. As a result, Plaintiff has incurred harm to his/her business reputation and goodwill, as well as damages resulting from returned goods, storage of the nonconforming goods, costs of advertisement and publicity relating to Plaintiff's sales campaign for the goods, and other expenses]. These damages are not all assessable at this time, but Plaintiff will amend this complaint to state the damages when Plaintiff becomes able to determine them.

[CONTINUE]

11. Plaintiff has been further damaged as a result of this breach in that _____ [describe incidental or consequential damages, e.g., Plaintiff was required to transport the goods to an overseas retailer for sale outside the United States, at a cost of $ _____. Defendant also knew that Plaintiff needed the goods as demonstration wares, and Plaintiff was forced to arrange to procure replacement goods for these purposes through travel and negotiations, in the total amount of $ _____].

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $ _____;
2. For damages for _____ [specify incidental or consequential damages, e.g., transportation of goods, and travel expenses] in the sum of $ _____;
3. For costs of suit herein incurred, including attorney's fees, if appropriate; and
4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named Defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that Plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those Defendants.]

4. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at all times material to this complaint, _____ [identify defendants to whom agency allegation applies, e.g., each of the Defendants or each of the individual Defendants or Defendant Harry Jones], [and each of the Defendants fictitiously named in this complaint,] in addition to acting for himself, herself, or itself and on his, her, or its own behalf individually, is and was acting as the agent, servant, employee and representative of, and with the knowledge, consent and permission of, and in conspiracy with, each and all of the Defendants and within the course, scope and authority of that agency, service, employment, representation, and conspiracy. Plaintiff further alleges on information and belief that the acts of each of the Defendants were fully ratified by each and all of the Defendants. Specifically, and without limitation, Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that the actions, failures to act, breaches, conspiracy, and misrepresentations alleged herein and attributed to one or more of the specific Defendants were approved, ratified, and done with the cooperation and knowledge of each and all of the Defendants.

5. On or about _____ [date], at _____, California, Defendant sold to Plaintiff certain goods, consisting of _____ [describe quantity and nature of goods, e.g., 10,000 rolls of 35 millimeter camera film], and Plaintiff bought those goods from Defendant for the total amount of $_____ [or describe other consideration]. [The contract of sale between the parties was oral (if sale price was $500 or more, add: and a true copy of a memorandum of the sale is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference) or A true copy of the contract of sale is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.]

[If plaintiff is claiming breach of implied warranty of merchantability, use the following Paragraphs 6 and 7]

6. Defendant was and is a merchant with respect to goods of the kind that Defendant sold to Plaintiff, and there was in the sale to Plaintiff an implied warranty that those goods were merchantable.

7. Defendant breached the implied warranty of merchantability with respect to the above described goods in that those goods _____ [describe legal basis of breach, e.g., could not pass without objection in the trade under the contract description or, if fungible goods: were not of fair average quality within the description or were not fit for the ordinary purposes for which those goods are used or did not run, within the variations permitted by the agreement, of even kind, quality, and quantity within each unit and among all units involved or were not adequately contained, packaged, and labeled as the agreement required or did not conform to the _____ (promises or affirmations of fact) made on the _____ (container or label)] [if appropriate, add specifics of defects in goods, e.g., because the manufacturer's expiration date on all 10,000 rolls of film was less than six months after the date of Defendant's sale to Plaintiff, thereby making them too old for normal retail sale]. As a result, Plaintiff did not receive goods as impliedly warranted by Defendant to be merchantable.

[OR, if plaintiff is claiming breach of the implied warranty of fitness, use the following paragraphs 6, and 7]

6. At the time Plaintiff and Defendant entered into the contract for the goods, Plaintiff required the goods for the particular purpose of _____ [specify, e.g., low-light photography of concerts and theatrical events promoted by Plaintiff]. Defendant had reason to know of Plaintiff's particular purpose for acquiring the goods, by virtue of the fact that

_____. [state how defendant knew, e.g., Plaintiff expressly communicated this purpose to Defendant in requesting the goods]. In entering into the contract with Defendant, Plaintiff relied on Defendant's

_____ [skill or judgment or both] to _____ [select or furnish or both] suitable goods for Plaintiff's purpose. Defendant had reason to know of Plaintiff's reliance by virtue of the fact that

_____. [e.g., Plaintiff told Defendant that Plaintiff was not an expert in photography and was relying on Defendant to recommend a film that was suitable for the specialized use that Plaintiff intended]. As a result, an implied warranty of fitness arose with respect to the goods that they were fit for Plaintiff's intended use.

7. Defendant breached the implied warranty of fitness because the goods Plaintiff received were not fit for the particular purpose (s) for which they were required, in that _____ [specify, e.g., the film Defendant sold Plaintiff was not sufficiently sensitive to allow suitable quality low-light photography of Plaintiff's events].

[OR, if plaintiff is claiming breach of the warranty of title, use the following paragraphs 6, and 7]

6. Under Commercial Code Section 2312, the sale was subject to a warranty that Defendant would convey good and rightful title to the goods to Plaintiff, and that the goods would be delivered free from any security interest or other lien or encumbrance not known to Plaintiff. At the time of sale of the goods by Defendant to Plaintiff, Plaintiff was unaware of any security interest, lien, or encumbrance on the goods.

7. Defendant breached the warranty of title specified above, in that _____ [describe breach, e.g., a third party, (name of third party) _____, was actually the true and lawful owner of the goods at the time of their sale to Plaintiff, and at the time of the sale the goods were not a lawful part of Defendant's inventory for sale and Defendant had no true or lawful title to them to rightfully transfer to Plaintiff]. As a result, Plaintiff in fact did not receive good title to these goods from Defendant nor a rightful transfer of title.

[CONTINUE]

8. Plaintiff discovered Defendant's breach of warranty on or about _____ [date]. On or about

_____ [date], Plaintiff notified Defendant by _____ [manner of notice, e.g., registered mail] that the goods supplied by Defendant did not conform to the warranty of _____ [merchantability or fitness or title] as specified above. [A copy of that _____ (letter or other form of notice) is attached to this complaint as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference].

9. Defendant failed and refused, and still fails and refuses, to replace the nonconforming goods with goods conforming to Defendant's warranty of _____ [merchantability or fitness or title], [or to compensate Plaintiff in any way for the diminished value of the goods Defendant supplied.]

[Use for allegation of damages without special circumstances]

10. As a proximate result of Defendant's breach of warranty, Plaintiff has been damaged in the amount of $_____.

[OR, use to allege damages with special circumstances]

10. As a proximate result of Defendant's breach of warranty, Plaintiff has been damaged [in the amount of $_____] as a result of special circumstances in which _____ [describe circumstances, e.g., Plaintiff, in reliance on Defendant's warranty, resold the goods to other retailers in the belief that the goods would be of good and merchantable quality. As a result, Plaintiff has incurred harm to his/her business reputation and goodwill, as well as damages resulting from returned goods and storage of the nonconforming goods]. These damages are not all assessable at this time, but Plaintiff will amend this complaint to state the damages when Plaintiff becomes able to determine them.

[CONTINUE]

11. Plaintiff has been further damaged as a result of this breach in that _____ [describe incidental or consequential damages, e.g., Plaintiff was required to transport the goods to an overseas retailer for sale outside the United States, at a cost of $_____].

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $_____;
2. For damages for _____ [specify incidental or consequential damages, e.g., transportation of goods, and travel expenses] in the sum of $_____;
3. For costs of suit herein incurred, including attorney's fees, if appropriate; and
4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [excluded or modified] any warranty of title in the goods by _____ [describe, e.g., expressly stating to Plaintiff that Defendant could guarantee good title to the goods only as of _____ (date) or handing Plaintiff a printed statement at the time of closing, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference, explaining that Defendant would convey to Plaintiff only such title as may have attached to the goods when they came into Defendant's possession or calling Plaintiff's attention to signs posted prominently at Defendant's sales counter explaining the lack of a warranty of title in these goods by stating "NO
 WARRANTY OF TITLE IS CONTAINED IN ANY CONTRACT OF SALE FOR GOODS AT THIS ESTABLISHMENT"].

[AND/OR, to allege that the implied warranty of title is inapplicable because the plaintiff had reason to know that the defendant was not warranting unencumbered title to the goods:]

SEVENTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Buyer Had Reason to Know of Lack or Limitation of Title)

8. Defendant is not liable for breach of the warranty of title with respect to the sale of goods alleged in Plaintiff's complaint because the circumstances existing at the time of sale gave Plaintiff reason to know that Defendant _____ [did not claim title personally to or was purporting to sell only what right or title Defendant or any third person might have in] the goods, in that _____ [describe circumstances, e.g., Defendant informed Plaintiff that he/she was selling the goods in a private sale in order to foreclose his/her security interest in the goods and collect on an obligation that a third-party debtor owed to Defendant].

[AND/OR, if defendant alleges that action was not filed within the applicable statute of limitations:]

EIGHTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE
(Action Barred by Statute of Limitations)

9. Plaintiff's claim for breach of the _____ [implied warranty of _____ (merchantability or fitness) or warranty of title] is barred by Plaintiff's failure to file this action within the applicable statute of limitations.

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information

I. STRATEGY

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.01

25.01 Scope.

This chapter covers the violation of contractual provisions respecting the confidentiality of information disclosed by one party to another in the course of performing the contract; specifically:

- Objectives and strategy for recovery for unauthorized disclosure of confidential information [see 25.02].
- Determining what causes of action exist for the unauthorized disclosure of confidential or proprietary information [see 25.03 -25.08], including:
 - ☐ Cause of action for breach of contract [see 25.04];
 - ☐ Cause of action for misappropriation of trade secret [see 25.05];
 - ☐ Cause of action for unfair competition [see 25.06];
 - ☐ Cause of action for breach of confidence [see 25.07]; and
 - ☐ Multiple causes of action [see 25.08].
- Determining the enforceability of agreements and contract provisions governing confidentiality [see 25.09 -25.11].
- Establishing the obligation of confidentiality and proving disclosure [see 25.12 -25.17].
- Determining appropriate remedies for breach of contract due to unauthorized disclosure of confidential information, including money damages and injunctive relief [see 25.18 -25.20].
- Filing a breach of contract action for unauthorized disclosure of confidential information [see 25.21, 25.22].

■ Responding to a breach of contract action for disclosure of confidential information [see 25.23-25.26], including:

- ☐ Responding to a complaint [see 25.24];
- ☐ Failure to allege essential elements as basis for attacking complaint [see 25.25]; and
- ☐ Unconscionability and violation of public policy as affirmative defenses to complaint [see 25.26].

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information

I. STRATEGY

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.02

25.02 Objective and Strategy.

Contracts or contract provisions specifically prohibiting the disclosure of information that is confidential, proprietary, and/or a trade secret, are frequently encountered in a variety of situations. Common situations in which nondisclosure and confidentiality provisions are used in contracts include the following:

- Sales, distribution, or marketing agreements in which one party needs access to another's customer lists and related information in order to perform the terms of the agreement.
- Agreements relating to research and development in which processes and/or technology are at issue.
- Employment agreements, usually but not always in conjunction with noncompetition clauses. This category has been a frequent source of litigation because the right to restrict competition is very limited under California law [see generally B&P Code § 16600 et seq.].

An action for the unauthorized disclosure of confidential information may be founded on a number of causes of action, including breach of contract and tort causes of action such as misappropriation of trade secret, unfair competition, and breach of confidence [see 25.03 -25.08]. This chapter provides an overview of all these relevant causes of action, but its main focus is on recovering for unauthorized disclosure under a breach of contract theory. For extensive discussion of tort theories of recovery for disclosure of confidential information, see the companion publication to this one, Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Unfair Competition and Business Torts, Ch. 2, Unfair Competition, and Ch. 8, Trade Secrets.

In practice, breach of contract claims based on the disclosure of confidential information usually are combined with tort claims, sometimes seemingly more or less as an afterthought [see 25.08]. The majority of reported opinions dealing with issues relating to disclosure of confidential information fall into the tort category. However, some of the substantive issues considered in the misappropriation or unfair competition context--especially with respect to what is or is not confidential information [see 25.16] or whether disclosure occurred [see 25.17]--are relevant to the resolution of breach of contract issues as well.

On the other hand, nondisclosure agreements are governed by the same basic contract principles that apply to all contracts. A cause of action for breach of a nondisclosure agreement must be proven under basic contract principles, and when reported decisions dealing specifically with breach of nondisclosure agreements are lacking, resort must be made to general principles of contract law. Thus, many of the authorities cited in this chapter deal with general principles of contract law that apply to all contracts, rather than specifically to nondisclosure and confidentiality agreements.

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

A party bringing a disclosure action based on breach of contract must plead and prove the parties had a valid contract [see Evid Code § 500], and all the essential elements for a breach of contract action [CC § 1550; see 25.21, 25.22]. The plaintiff must establish the existence of a valid nondisclosure or confidentiality agreement [see 25.09 -25.11], and must show that the information disclosed to the defendant is within the realm of "confidential" information as defined in the agreement or determined by law [see 25.16]. It is also beneficial for the plaintiff to show that the confidential information in question does not fall within any exclusion provided for in the agreement [see 25.12 -25.17]. The plaintiff also must show that the defendant disclosed the information in an unauthorized manner that was not contemplated by the agreement, and that as a result of the disclosure, the plaintiff suffered damage.

Strategic Point--Defendant:

In opposing an action for unauthorized disclosure of confidential information, the defendant should try to attack the existence of a valid contract, argue that no breach occurred because the information was not confidential or the disclosure was made in accordance with the agreement, or try to show that any disclosure did not proximately cause damage to the plaintiff [see 25.23 -25.26]. The defendant should determine if the disclosed information falls within an exclusion that may be in the agreement, or provided by law, and whether the information was disclosed in a manner not contemplated under the agreement. If the plaintiff successfully alleged a breach of contract action, the defendant may assert any applicable affirmative defense, such as unconscionability or violation of public policy in response [see 25.26].

Strategic Point--Defendant:

It is a common practice in trade secret cases for the defendant to argue that the plaintiff's identification of its trade secrets does not comply with the "reasonable particularity" requirement of CCP § 2019.210 [see, e.g., Neothermia Corp. v. Rubicor Med., Inc. (ND Cal 2004) 345 F Supp2d 1042, 1044-1045]. This can have the dual advantage of postponing the defendant's discovery obligations and forcing a more precise description of the trade secret. In effect, this gets the defendant more early discovery from the plaintiff.

25.03 CHECKLIST: Determining What Causes of Action Exist for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information.

- ☐ Determine whether cause of action for breach of contract exists:
- ☐ Did plaintiff and defendant enter into valid contract for nondisclosure of confidential or proprietary information?
 - ☐ Did plaintiff disclose information to defendant that is defined as "confidential" in the agreement?
 - ☐ Does confidential information fall within any exclusions provided by agreement?
 - ☐ Did defendant disclose confidential information in an unauthorized manner?
 - ☐ Did plaintiff suffer harm from defendant's unauthorized disclosure?

Authority:

CC § 1549 et seq.

Discussion:

See 25.04, 25.22

Form:

See 25.27

- ☐ Determine whether action for misappropriation of trade secret exists:

- ☐ Was plaintiff owner of trade secret?
- ☐ Did defendant use or disclose trade secret without plaintiff's express or implied consent?
- ☐ Did defendant do any of following?
 - ☐ Use improper means to acquire knowledge of trade secret?
 - ☐ With respect to manner in which trade secret was acquired, did defendant do any of following:
 - ☐ Know or have reason to know that its knowledge of trade secret was derived from or through person who had used improper means to acquire it;
 - ☐ Acquire trade secret under circumstances giving rise to duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or
 - ☐ Derive trade secret from or through person who owed duty to person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use?
 - ☐ Before material change of defendant's position, did defendant:
 - ☐ Know or have reason to know that information was trade secret; and
 - ☐ Acquire knowledge of trade secret by accident or mistake?

Authority:*CC § 3426.1(b)(1)Discussion:

 CONFIDENTIAL OR PROPRIETARY INFORMATION

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.04

25.04 Cause of Action May Be Based on Breach of Contract.

Unauthorized disclosure of confidential information may give rise to breach of contract claim if the basic requirements for a breach of contract claim exist. In the context of an action for breach of contract based on unauthorized disclosure of confidential or proprietary information requires, the plaintiff must prove all the following elements [CC § 1550]:

- Plaintiff and defendant entered into a valid contract for the nondisclosure of confidential or proprietary information.
- Plaintiff performed or substantially performed his or her obligations.
- All conditions required for the defendant's performance of nondisclosure occurred.
- Defendant disclosed confidential or proprietary information in an unauthorized manner.
- The plaintiff suffered harm from the unauthorized disclosure.

Basic Statute of Limitations:

Four years for written contract; two years for oral or implied contract [CCP §§ 337(1), 339(1)].

Strategic Point--All Parties:

A breach of contract action for unauthorized disclosure of confidential information may be used when the information disclosed cannot be classified as a trade secret and no action for misappropriation of trade secret is available.

25.05 Cause of Action May Be Based on Misappropriation of Trade Secret.

A cause of action for misappropriation based on unauthorized disclosure of a trade secret requires proof of all of the following elements [see CC § 3426.1(b)(1)]:

- That the plaintiff owns a trade secret.
- That the defendant used or disclosed the trade secret without the plaintiff's express or implied consent.
- That the defendant either:
 - ☐ Used improper means to acquire knowledge of the trade secret; or
 - ☐ Did one or more of the following:
 - Knew or had reason to know that knowledge of the trade secret was derived from or through a person who had used improper means to acquire it;
 - Acquired it under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use, or derived it from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or
 - Before a material change of defendant's position, knew or had reason to know that the information was a trade secret, and the defendant acquired knowledge of it by accident or mistake.

Basic Statute of Limitations:

Three years [CC § 3426.6].

25.06 Cause of Action May Be Based on Unfair Competition Claim.

An action for unauthorized disclosure of confidential information may be brought as a tort claim for unfair competition under B&P Code § 17200 et seq. To be actionable, the statute requires that defendant have engaged in [B&P Code § 17200]:

- An unlawful business act or practice.
- A fraudulent business act or practice.
- An unfair business act or practice.
- Unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising.

Basic Statute of Limitations:

25.07 Cause of Action May Be Based on Breach of Confidence Claim.

Secret information that does not fall within the definition of a trade secret, such as an idea, may still be protected against misappropriation under the cause of action for breach of confidence [see Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 CA3d 455, 463, 214 CR 276].

An action for breach of confidence exists when [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 CA3d 455, 463, 214 CR 276 ; Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 CA3d 309, 323, 158 CR 704]:

- A protectable idea is offered to another person in confidence.
- The idea is voluntarily received by the offeree in confidence with the understanding that it is not to be disclosed to others.
- The person had an opportunity to decline the disclosure.
- The idea is not to be used by the offeree for the purposes beyond the limits of the confidence without the offeror's permission.

Judge's Perspective:

The tort of breach of confidence is not well defined in the cases. The tort is taken from the Restatement (First) of Torts, which provides, "One who discloses or uses another's trade secret, without a privilege to do so, is liable to the other if (a) he discovered the secret by improper means, or (b) his disclosure or use constitutes a breach of confidence reposed in him by the other in disclosing the secret to him, or (c) he learned the secret from a third person with notice of the facts that it was a secret and that the third person discovered it by improper means or that the third person's disclosure of it was otherwise a breach of his duty to the other, or (d) he learned the secret with notice of the facts that it was a secret and that its disclosure was made to him by mistake" [Restatement (First) of Torts § 757]. In the Thompson case, the court followed the Restatement analysis but determined that "under appropriate circumstances these principles apply to information which is not a trade secret ..." [Thompson v. California Brewing Co. (1957) 150 CA2d 469, 476, 310 P2d 436]. Thus, information may still be "confidential" without rising to a level of trade secret.

Although the tort of breach of confidence is based on the idea of an implied obligation, it is not an obligation arising from the apparent intentions of the parties, but rather is created by law for reasons of justice [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 CA3d 455, 464, 214 CR 276]. The underlying premise of this cause of action is an understanding between the parties that an idea was offered on a condition of confidence.

To prevent the unwarranted creation or extension of a monopoly and restraint on progress in art, a confidential relationship will not be created from the mere submission of an idea to another person. There must be evidence of the communication of the confidentiality of the submission or evidence from which a confidential relationship can be inferred [Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 CA3d 309, 323, 158 CR 704].

The California Supreme Court has expressly left open the issue of whether a cause of action for breach of confidence exists [see Davies v. Krasna (1975) 14 C3d 502, 506-508, 121 CR 705, 535 P2d 1161], but a number of appellate courts have concluded that a cause of action does exist [see Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 CA3d 455, 461-466, 214 CR 276 ; Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 CA3d 309, 321, 158 CR 704 ; see also Self Directed Placement Corp. v. Control Data Corp. (9th Cir 1990) 908 F2d 462, 467 (relying on Tele-Count and Faris to hold that complaint stated causes of action for breach of confidential relationship and common-law misappropriation)].

It is not clear what statute of limitations applies to a breach of confidence claim. A claim for misappropriation of a trade secret must be brought within three years [CC § 3426.6], while a claim for breach of an implied contract must be brought within two years [CCP § 339(1)].

Distinguish:

Although the two actions are related, the tort of breach of confidence, which rests in part on the existence of an implied contract, should be distinguished from an action for breach of an implied-in-fact contract [see Thompson v. California Brewing Co. (1957) 150 CA2d 469, 474-476, 310 P2d 436].

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information
 II. DETERMINING WHAT CAUSES OF ACTION EXIST FOR UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE OF CONFIDENTIAL OR PROPRIETARY INFORMATION

*2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.0825.08 Complaint May Consist of Multiple Causes of Action.

A plaintiff may want to allege multiple causes of action in a complaint for breach of contract for unauthorized disclosure, because recovery under one cause of action will not necessarily be limited by recovery under another cause of action, and this approach increases the possible counts on which to base remedies. In addition, different burdens of proof may apply depending on the nature of the cause of action, which may give a plaintiff a cause of action in tort if a contract cause of action does not exist.

Examples:

- An action under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act for trade secret misappropriation does not limit other contractual, civil, or criminal remedies that may be available to an aggrieved party [CC § 3426.7(b)].
- Information that does not fall within the definition of a "trade secret" may still be protected against misappropriation under a breach of confidence action [Tele-Count Eng'rs, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 CA3d 455, 463, 214 CR 276 ; see 25.07].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

Trade secret claims generally are regarded as the most powerful, and yield the most potential for extraordinary relief such as punitive damages and injunctions, but are the most difficult claims to prove. The statutory burdens are rigorous and the available defenses (plaintiff's failure to maintain secrecy, independent availability of the information) are numerous. Breach of contract claims generally are the easiest claims to prove, assuming admissible proof of the contract, because they avoid the "he said, she said" difficulties of proving breach of confidence cases. Breach of confidence claims are the last resort among the three causes of action. However, generally speaking it is advisable to plead at least two, if not all three, and see what discovery bears out.

 III. DETERMINING ENFORCEABILITY OF AGREEMENTS AND CONTRACT PROVISIONS GOVERNING CONFIDENTIALITY

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.10

25.10 Contract Provisions Governing Treatment of Confidential Information Are Enforceable to Protect Trade Secrets.

Contract provisions and nondisclosure agreements that prohibit disclosure of confidential or proprietary information can be valid if they relate to trade secrets and do not unduly restrain people from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business [Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 C2d 690, 694, 321 P2d 456 ; see Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc. (2003) 113 CA4th 1425, 1428-1432 (analyzing cases dealing with validity of noncompetition agreements); see also Zahodnick v. IBM (4th Cir 1997) 135 F3d 911, 915].

Consider:

The use of an express nondisclosure or confidentiality agreement provides a firm written basis for traditional contract remedies and informs the parties of their obligations not to divulge the confidential or proprietary information.

Warning:

A preexisting nondisclosure agreement between the parties is extinguished on incorporation into a court order. Once the agreement is merged into the order, the parties no longer have a right of action based on that agreement. The obligations are no longer imposed by the agreement, but rather by the court order, and are enforceable through contempt and other sanctions available to the court [Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v. Newman & Holtzinger, P.C. (1995) 39 CA4th 1194, 1205, 46 CR2d 151].

 CONFIDENTIALITY

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.11

25.11 Confidentiality Agreements May Be Invalid If They Are Unconscionable or Violate Public Policy.

25.11[1] Confidentiality Agreement May Be Held Unconscionable. A court may refuse to enforce a contract or provision that is unconscionable [CC § 1670.5; see Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1984) 28 C3d 807, 821-828, 171 CR 604, 623 P2d 165]. Unconscionability in the context of nondisclosure agreements may arise when nondisclosure provisions are included in noncompetition agreements with employees.

A confidentiality agreement or provision is more likely to be held unconscionable if it is coupled with a noncompetition agreement or other agreement that places restraints on trade [see 25.11[1]]. This is because B&P Code § 16600 precludes the enforceability of nondisclosure and noncompetition agreements beyond the protection of confidential information [Rigging Int'l Maint. Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 CA3d 594, 614, 180 CR 451 ; see 25.11[2]].

If a court finds a contract to have been unconscionable, it may do any of the following [CC § 1670.5(a)]:

- Refuse to enforce the contract [Abramson v. Juniper Networks, Inc. (2004) 115 CA4th 638, 668].
- Enforce the remainder of the contract without the unconscionable clause [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 C4th 1064, 1072-1074, 1076].
- Limit the application of any unconscionable clause so as to avoid an unconscionable result.

Cross References:

Discussion of unconscionable contracts generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, §§ 140.25, 140.64 (Matthew Bender).

25.11[2] Confidentiality Agreement May Violate Public Policy. Confidentiality or nondisclosure agreements may be unenforceable if they violate public policy. For example, a provision in a settlement agreement prohibiting a securities customer from discussing an agent's misconduct with regulatory authorities has been invalidated on public policy grounds [Cariveau v. Hafferty (2000) 83 CA4th 126, 138, 99 CR2d 417]. Not all confidentiality provisions violate public policy, however [see Sanchez v. County of San Bernardino (2009) 176 CA4th 516, 527, 98 CR3d 96 (county's agreement not to disclose facts giving rise to employee's severance agreement did not violate public policy)].

Public policy issues also may arise when a nondisclosure clause is part of a noncompetition agreement. A contract that restrains any person from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business of any kind is void to that extent [B&P Code § 16600]. Any attempt to restrict competition by a former employee by contract is likely to be doomed under B&P Code § 16600 unless the restriction is carefully limited and the agreement protects merely a proprietary or property right of the employer recognized as entitled to protection under the general principles of unfair competition [Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 CA4th 853, 861, 27 CR2d 573].

In determining whether a confidentiality agreement violates public policy, a distinction may be made between confidentiality agreements with a noncompetition clause--which, subject to certain exceptions, violate public policy under B&P Code § 16600--and confidentiality agreements that seek to prohibit a party from disclosing confidential information and trade secrets, which do not violate B&P Code § 16600 [see Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 C2d 690, 321 P2d 456 ; The Retirement Group v. Galante (2009) 176 CA4th 1226, 1239-1240, 98 CR3d 585 (unfair competition or misuse of trade secret information may be enjoined, but solicitation of customers may not)]. California courts generally will not enforce noncompetition agreements that violate California's definition of reasonable scope and time limitations, even if another state's law is chosen under the agreement and it is part of an otherwise enforceable agreement [see, e.g., Application Group, Inc. v. Hunter Group, Inc. (1998) 61 CA4th 881, 899-902, 72 CR2d 73].

25.12 CHECKLIST: Establishing Obligation of Confidentiality and Proving Disclosure.

- ☐ Determine whether plaintiff and defendant signed express agreement for nondisclosure of confidential or proprietary information.

Authority:

Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 CA4th 1443, 1454, 125 CR2d 277

Discussion:

See 25.13

- ☐ In absence of written agreement, determine whether implied contract exists because acts, conduct, and relationship of parties suggest existence of implied contract to protect confidential or proprietary information.

Authority:

CC §§ 1619-1621; Del E. Webb Corp. v. Structural Materials Co. (1981) 123 CA3d 593, 611, 176 CR 824

Discussion:

See 25.14

- ☐ In absence of written or implied nondisclosure agreement, is action for unauthorized disclosure available under tort theory of misappropriation of trade secrets or breach of confidence?

Authority:

Discussion:

See 25.15

- ☐ Determine whether information disclosed was confidential or proprietary.

- ☐ Did agreement define which information was considered confidential or proprietary?
- ☐ Was information marked as confidential and/or proprietary?
- ☐ Was there implication of confidentiality in absence of clear definition or marking of confidentiality?
- ☐ Did information fall within exclusion that may be stated in agreement?
- ☐ Was information disclosed actually confidential or proprietary, or a trade secret, regardless of how characterized in agreement?

Authority:

See Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc. (2003) 113 CA4th 1425, 1434, ; CC § 3426.1

Discussion:

See 25.16

- ☐ Determine if plaintiff showed facts to indicate cause of action for breach of contract due to unauthorized disclosure.

- ☐ Was there a valid agreement?
- ☐ Did plaintiff disclose confidential information to defendant?
- ☐ Did defendant disclose confidential information in unauthorized manner?
- ☐ Did plaintiff suffer damage as result of unauthorized disclosure?

IV. ESTABLISHING OBLIGATION OF CONFIDENTIALITY AND PROVING DISCLOSURE

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.13

25.13 Confidentiality Agreements Have Been Characterized as Reasonable Step to Ensure Secrecy of Information.

Confidentiality agreements have been judicially characterized as a "reasonable step" to ensure secrecy of information [Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 CA4th 1443, 1454, 125 CR2d 277 ; MAI Sys. Corp. v. Peak Computer, Inc. (9th Cir 1993) 991 F2d 511, 521 (requiring employees to sign agreements was a reasonable step to insure secrecy of agreements)].

Consider:

It is common for a nondisclosure agreement to specify the actual obligation of confidentiality. For example, a typical agreement may require a party not to disclose the information to third parties, to use it only for stated purpose, and not to use it for a recipient's own benefit [see 25.16].

IV. ESTABLISHING OBLIGATION OF CONFIDENTIALITY AND PROVING DISCLOSURE

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.14

25.14 Implied Obligation Can Exist in Absence of Contractual Provision.

Contracts can be created by the conduct of the parties, depending on all the surrounding circumstances [see CC §§ 1619-1621; Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 C3d 660, 678 n16, 134 CR 815, 557 P2d 106; Del E. Webb Corp. v. Structural Materials Co. (1981) 123 CA3d 593, 611, 176 CR 824].

If an implied contract of confidentiality is not established, recovery for unauthorized disclosure of confidential information may be found under theories of trade secret misappropriation, unfair competition, and breach of confidence [Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 CA3d 268, 275, 219 CR 836; see 25.05 -25.08].

IV. ESTABLISHING OBLIGATION OF CONFIDENTIALITY AND PROVING DISCLOSURE

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.15

25.15 Obligation of Confidentiality May Affect Agents of Party to Contract.

The acts of an agent within the scope of the agent's authority are considered the acts of the principal, even if not specifically authorized by or known to the principal, and third parties with whom an agent deals are entitled to enforce contracts entered into by the agent on behalf of the principal [see Madden v. Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1976) 17 C3d 699, 707-709, 131 CR 882, 552 P2d 1178]. Most confidentiality and nondisclosure agreements contain a provision specifying that the agreement will apply to employees, contracts, and affiliates, if there is a need to know the confidential information. It is common for this type of provision to be included in an agency agreement. The provisions typically included require agents to execute nondisclosure agreements that are similar in terms to the primary agreement executed by the principal.

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information
IV. ESTABLISHING OBLIGATION OF CONFIDENTIALITY AND PROVING DISCLOSURE

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.16

25.16 Information Disclosed Must Be Confidential or Proprietary.

25.16[1] "Confidential Information" Is Often Defined by Agreement. In many instances, the information to be considered confidential or proprietary is clearly defined in the nondisclosure or confidentiality agreement. Confidential information typically is defined in confidentiality agreements to mean any technical, business, financial, contractual terms and conditions, or other information or data furnished by one party to the other party that is either marked or identified as "confidential" [see Glue-Fold, Inc. v. Slautterback Corp. (2000) 82 CA4th 1018, 1022 n2, 98 CR2d 661 (agreement defined "confidential information" as information, technical data, or know-how, including but not limited to research, products, software, services, development, inventions, ideas, processes, designs, drawings, engineering, marketing, or finances, disclosed either directly or indirectly in writing, orally or by drawings or inspection of parts or equipment; it was not limited to materials marked "confidential information")].

Information defined as confidential typically may include, but is not necessarily limited to, the following:

- Patents.
- Patent applications.
- Trade secrets.
- Trademark applications.
- Mask works.
- Ideas.
- Samples.
- Drawings.
- Inventions.

- Know-how.
- Processes.
- Equipment.
- Software.
- Financial information.
- Employee lists.
- Customer lists.

Customer lists and similar records generally are recognized as trade secrets if they are truly confidential [see Courtesy Temp. Serv., Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 CA3d 1278, 1289-1290 (customer list held to be trade secret under UTSA); ReadyLink Healthcare v. Cotton (2005) 126 CA4th 1006, 1017-1021 (UTSA and unfair competition); Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 CA3d 458, 466, 151 CR 118 (unfair competition); Greenly v. Cooper (1978) 77 CA3d 382, 392, 143 CR 514 (unfair competition); but see American Paper & Packaging Prods., Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 CA3d 1318, 1324, 1326, 228 CR 713 (customer lists can be protectable under UTSA, but list at issue was not protectable under circumstances)]. In addition, customer lists of telephone answering services and employment agencies are specifically recognized by statute as trade secrets [B&P §§ 16606, 16607].

25.16[2] Uniform Trade Secrets Act Provides Statutory Definition. The Uniform Trade Secrets Act (UTSA) [CC § 3426 et seq.] authorizes damages and injunctive relief for misappropriation of trade secrets [see CC §§ 3426.2, 3426.3]. Although UTSA authorizes a tort cause of action and hence is not directly applicable to an action for breach of contract, breach of contract actions are often if not usually brought in connection with misappropriation and unfair competition claims, and so the UTSA definition of "trade secrets" is useful in defining the scope of information that is confidential for purposes of a nondisclosure agreement. The Act defines "trade secret" as information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that [CC § 3426.1(d); see ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 CA3d 1, 18, 286 CR 528]:

- Derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use; and
- Is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.

25.16[3] Confidentiality of Information Ultimately Is Question of Fact. Regardless of whether or not an agreement characterizes information as confidential, its confidentiality is a fact question. The issue of whether information constitutes a trade secret is a question of fact. Labeling information as a trade secret or as confidential information does not conclusively establish that the information fits this description [Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc. (2003) 113 CA4th 1425, 1430]. However, it is an important factor in establishing the value that was placed on the information and that it could not be readily derived from publicly available sources [Morlife, Inc. v. Perry (1997) 56 CA4th 1514, 1522, 66 CR2d 731].

Consider:

A nondisclosure agreement or provision typically will provide that the information covered must be marked as confidential or proprietary. The marking of confidential information is intended to show the intent of the parties to consider the marked information as being protected. Some nondisclosure agreements provide that if confidential or proprietary information is disclosed orally, it must be summarized in writing within a certain time frame.

25.16[4] Agreement May Provide Exceptions Specifying When Disclosure Is Permissible. A nondisclosure agreement may permit disclosure of otherwise-confidential information under specified circumstances. Whether or not these circumstances exist is a question of fact for a court to determine [see Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 CA4th 853, 860-862, 27 CR2d 573].

Consider:

Nondisclosure and confidentiality agreements typically provide that the obligation of confidentiality is excluded for specific classes of information, which may include, but is not limited to, the following:

- Information already known to the recipient at the time of disclosure.
- Information rightfully received from a third party without restriction on disclosure.
- Information that becomes publicly known through no wrongful act of recipient.
- Information that has been independently developed by the recipient, without breach of the nondisclosure agreement.
- Information that has been given by the originally disclosing party to others without a restriction on disclosure.
- Information not marked or identified as confidential as required by the nondisclosure agreement.
- The disclosure of the information was granted written approval for disclosure by the originally disclosing party.
- Information that was required to be disclosed pursuant to court order.

25.17 Proving Disclosure of Confidential and Proprietary Information.

As in all cases, the plaintiff must present sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case on the cause of action [Schroeder v. Irvine City Council (2002) 97 CA4th 174, 184, 118 CR2d 330]. In a cause of action for breach of contract relating to confidential or proprietary information, the plaintiff must plead and prove the existence of the contract [see Walsh v. West Valley Mission Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1998) 66 CA4th 1532, 1545, 78 CR2d 725 ; see also Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 CA4th 853, 860-862, 27 CR2d 573].

 V. DETERMINING REMEDIES FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT ACTION FOR UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE
 OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.19

25.19 Remedies for Breach of Contract Action May Differ Depending on Determination of Material Breach.

25.19[1] Determining Appropriate Response on Material Breach. To constitute a material breach of contract, the breach must be considered total. A total breach may result from an anticipatory breach before any performance was made, or a partial breach in conjunction with repudiation [see Gold Mining & Water Co. v. Swinerton (1943) 23 C2d 19, 29, 142 P2d 22]. An aggrieved party who has the option of rescission has the choice of the following remedies [April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 CA3d 805, 824, 195 CR 421]:

- An action for damages.
- An action in equity for specific performance.
- An action for rescission and restitution.

Consider:

It is common for nondisclosure confidentiality agreements to provide that unauthorized disclosure will cause irreparable harm to the nondisclosing party, bolstering in advance a request for injunctive relief preventing threatened disclosure.

➡ Cross Reference:

Materiality of breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract, 22.24-22.29.

25.19[2] Factors Court Considers in Assessing Materiality of Breach. In determining the materiality of a failure to perform under a contract, the court may consider the following factors [Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 CA2d 594, 602, 78 CR 302 ; Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 CA2d 220, 229, 56 CR 435]:

- Whether the aggrieved party will obtain the substantial benefit of the contract.
- Whether the aggrieved party can be adequately compensated by damages.

- Whether the defaulting party has partly performed.
- The hardship on the defaulting party if the court terminates the contract.
- The willfulness of defaulting party's failure to perform.
- The likelihood that the defaulting party will perform the remainder of the contract.
- The timing of the breach.

Consider:

It is common for a nondisclosure or confidentiality agreement to contain a provision providing that any unauthorized disclosure of information under the agreement will be deemed a material breach of the agreement.

Cross References:

Discussion of factors to determine material breach in contract actions generally, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

Discussion of material breach generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.52 (Matthew Bender).

25.19[3] Materiality of Breach Is Primarily Question of Fact. Whether a breach is material is primarily a question of fact to be determined from all the facts and circumstances [Associated Lathing & Plastering Co. v. Louis C. Dunn, Inc. (1955) 135 CA2d 40, 49, 286 P2d 825 ; see 25.19[2]].

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information
 V. DETERMINING REMEDIES FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT ACTION FOR UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE
 OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.20

25.20 Remedies for Breach of Contract May Include Damages and Injunctive Relief.

25.20[1] Monetary Damages May Be Awarded for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential Information.

25.20[1][a] Pleading Damages in General. A complaint for damages for breach of contract based on unauthorized disclosure of confidential information sufficiently avers general damages if the plaintiff alleges facts that show the existence of injury and a prayer for a specific sum, even if there is no specific allegation of damages in a stated sum, or the pleading states facts invoking an inapplicable measure of recovery [Domino v. Mobley (1956) 144 CA2d 24, 29-30, 300 P2d 324]. The complaint should allege a violation of the plaintiff's legal right by the defendant and the fact of damages; detail is not required in the complaint [Colvig v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1965) 232 CA2d 56, 69, 42 CR 473].

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of available damages in contract actions, see Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions.

25.20[1][b] Amount of Damages Recoverable. The measure of damages for the breach of a contract is the amount that will compensate the plaintiff for the harm proximately caused by the breach or an amount that would normally result from the breach [CC § 3300]. Damages must be reasonable. If an obligation of any kind appears to create a right to unconscionable and grossly oppressive damages, contrary to substantial justice, no more than reasonable damages may be recovered [CC § 3359]. Generally, the measure of damages for breach of contract includes only lost profits and prejudgment interest [Burnett & Doty Dev. Co. v. Phillips (1978) 84 CA3d 384, 389-392, 148 CR 569].

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of amount of damages available in contract actions, see Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions.

25.20[1][c] Damages Limited to Amount From Full Performance. Except as expressly provided by statute, a plaintiff may not recover a greater amount in damages for the breach of an obligation than that plaintiff could have gained by full performance on both sides [CC § 3358].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of limitation on damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.56 (Matthew Bender).

25.20[1][d] Punitive Damages Not Available in Contract Actions. A plaintiff may not recover punitive or exemplary damages in an action for breach of contract [CC § 3294].

Strategic Point:

A plaintiff may recover punitive damages under a tort cause of action, if such a cause of action is justified by the circumstances [see 25.08]. Punitive damages are available, on proper proof, for trade secret misappropriation [see CC § 3426.3(c)].

Cross References:

Discussion of available damages in contract actions, see Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions.

Discussion of remedies for trade secret misappropriation, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Unfair Competition and Business Torts, Ch. 8, Trade Secrets.

25.20[1][e] Plaintiff Must Mitigate Damages. A plaintiff must do everything reasonably possible to mitigate the loss and reduce the damages for which the defendant is liable. The plaintiff may not recover damages for detriment that could have been avoided by reasonable effort and without undue expense [Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 CA2d 220, 238-239, 56 CR 435].

Cross References:

Discussion of mitigating damages, see Ch. 7, Seeking or Opposing Damages in Contract Actions, 7.15.

Discussion of mitigation generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.56 (Matthew Bender).

25.20[2] Injunctive Relief May Be Appropriate Remedy in Addition to or in Lieu of Monetary Damages.

Injunctions in the area of trade secrets are governed by the principles applicable to injunctions in general [Hilb, Rogal & Hamilton Ins. Servs. v. Robb (1995) 33 CA4th 1812, 1819-1820, 39 CR2d 887]. If a contract would be specifically enforceable, the aggrieved party may bring suit for an injunction [CC § 3423(e); CCP § 526(a)(1)]. CCP § 526 specifies the circumstances in which an injunction may be granted.

Consider:

It is common for nondisclosure confidentiality agreements to provide that unauthorized disclosure will cause irreparable harm to the nondisclosing party, bolstering a request for injunctive relief preventing threatened disclosure.

In deciding whether to issue a preliminary injunction, a court weighs two factors [Hunt v. Superior Court (1999) 21 CA4th 984, 999, 90 CR2d 236, 987 P2d 705]:

- The likelihood the moving party ultimately will prevail on the merits; and
- The relative interim harm to the parties from the issuance or nonissuance of the injunction.

Actual or threatened misappropriation can also be enjoined under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act [CC § 3426.2; see Central Valley General Hospital v. Smith (2008) 162 CA4th 501, 523-524, 75 CR3d 771 ; see also 25.05].

Example:

A nurse staffing company was entitled to a preliminary injunction prohibiting a former employee from soliciting its employees, nurses, healthcare providers, and others under contract with it [ReadyLink Healthcare v. Cotton (2005) 126 CA4th 1006, 1011].

In addition, CC § 3426.2(c) allows a court to compel affirmative acts to protect trade secrets in appropriate circumstances [Central Valley General Hospital v. Smith (2008) 162 CA4th 501, 531, 75 CR3d 771 (upholding injunction requiring plaintiff to return confidential materials it obtained from defendant during due diligence for planned acquisition)].

An action for injunction does not waive the plaintiff's right to assert a claim for damages in a subsequent action [Ahlers v. Smiley (1912) 163 C 200, 206, 124 P 827].

Consider:

Most nondisclosure agreements and confidentiality agreements specifically grant an aggrieved party the right to apply for injunctive relief in the event of a breach of the agreement.

Strategic Point:

Advantages of seeking an injunction include all of the following:

- Being able to obtain early discovery (it can be requested and is often granted in support of or more often in opposition to a motion for an injunction).
- Catching your opponent off guard and scoring an early victory that may often lead to immediate settlement favorable to your client.
- Getting the judge's mind set and perhaps obtaining useful findings or law of the case established early.

Downsides of injunctive relief include the risk of loss, which may lead to unfavorable judicial views, findings, and/or law of the case early. Preliminary injunctions are often sought before any meaningful discovery has been done, so the risk of unpleasant surprises can be high.

Warning:

The use of an injunction should not be a stunt. It should be sought only when the plaintiff is concerned about immediate and/or irrevocable harm for which damages cannot compensate. Remember that if the plaintiff prevails, the court will require the plaintiff to post a bond, which can be considerable.

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information
VI. FILING CONTRACT ACTION FOR DISCLOSURE OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.22

25.22 Allegations Necessary for Complaint for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential Information.

25.22[1] Required Contents of Complaint for Breach of Contract. A complaint states a cause of action for breach of contract if it alleges the following [CC § 1550; Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1963) 223 CA2d 50, 59, 35 CR 652]:

- The existence of a valid contract [see 25.22[2]]--in this context, an agreement not to make unauthorized disclosures of confidential information.
- Whether the contract was oral, written, or implied [see CCP § 430.10(g)].
- The plaintiff's performance of all terms of the contract, or excuse for nonperformance [see 25.22[3]].
- The defendant's breach [see 25.22[4]]--in this context, unauthorized disclosure of the confidential information.
- Resulting damages to the plaintiff [see 25.22[5]].

Strategic Point--Plaintiff:

It is always a good idea to attach the contract to the complaint and incorporate it by reference. This dispenses with the need to quote extensively from the contract, and does not pin the plaintiff's position down to just the quoted contract provisions.

Cross References:

Form for complaint for breach of contract based on disclosure of confidential information, see 25.27.

Discussion of contents of complaint for breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

Discussion of summary judgment motions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

25.22[2] Plaintiff Must Allege Valid Agreement. The plaintiff must allege that the parties entered into a valid contract for the nondisclosure of confidential or proprietary information. The essential elements for a valid agreement for both an express agreement and an implied contract are the same: mutual assent and consideration [Chandler v. Roach (1957) 156 CA2d 435, 440, 319 P2d 776].

Cross References:

Discussion of attacking or defending existence of contract, see Ch. 13, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element.

Discussion of suing for breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

25.22[3] Plaintiff Must Allege Performance or Ability to Perform. Absent an excuse for performance, the plaintiff must establish that he or she performed, or had the ability and willingness to perform, his or her own obligations under the contract [see CC § 1495]. A plaintiff's failure to establish this element bars relief [see Cockrill v. Boas (1931) 213 C 490, 492, 2 P2d 774].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of alleging plaintiff's performance, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract, 22.08 -22.10, 22.13 -22.23, 22.36 -22.50.

25.22[4] Plaintiff Must Allege That Defendant Breached Contract. In pleading breach of the contract by the defendant, the plaintiff must allege sufficient facts to apprise the defendant of the specific conduct that the plaintiff claims violated the contract [Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1963) 223 CA2d 50, 60 n6, 35 CR 652]. In the context of an action for unauthorized disclosure, this means that the plaintiff must allege that defendant disclosed confidential information in violation of the contract; in other words, that:

- Defendant received the information;
- The information was confidential;
- The defendant disclosed the information to a third party; and
- The disclosure was unauthorized--that is, it was not permitted by the agreement.

Strategic Pointss--Plaintiff:

- To avoid a claim by the defendant that the plaintiff's identification of its trade secrets does not comply with the "reasonable particularity" requirement of CCP § 2019.210, the plaintiff should be sure to sufficiently describe the trade secret [see, e.g., Neothermia Corp. v. Rubicor Med., Inc. (ND Cal 2004) 345 F Supp2d 1042, 1044-1045].

- The plaintiff should plead that the information disclosed did not fall within common exceptions typically addressed by confidentiality provisions, such as:

- ☐ Disclosures allowed for "need to know" situations.
- ☐ Disclosure of material within the public domain.
- ☐ Disclosures after a certain date.
- ☐ Material developed independently.
- ☐ Material disclosed in accordance with a court order.

Discussion of alleging defendant's breach, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

Discussion of attacking or defending existence of contract, see Ch. 13, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element.

25.22[5] Plaintiff Must Allege That Plaintiff Suffered Damage From Unauthorized Disclosure. A complaint for breach of contract must allege that the plaintiff suffered harm as a result of the defendant's breach [CC § 1550]. The plaintiff also must establish the causal connection between the defendant's breach and the damages sought [see CC § 3300].

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information
VII. RESPONDING TO ACTION FOR DISCLOSURE OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.24

25.24 Response to Complaint for Unauthorized Disclosure May Be by Answer, Demurrer, or Summary Judgment Motion.

25.24[1] Defendant May Respond by Filing Answer. The defendant may respond to the plaintiff's complaint by an answer [see CCP §§ 422.10, 431.30(a), (b)] to apprise the other party to the of the defendant's position as to the allegations in the complaint. An answer may also admit the truth of material allegations, thereby establishing them as fact and removing them from the issues to be tried [see CCP § 431.20(a)].

Fundamental grounds to object to a complaint by answer in a contract action include the following for an objection that does not appear on the face of the complaint [CCP §§ 430.10(e)-(g), 430.30(b)]:

- The pleading does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.
- The pleading is uncertain.
- It cannot be determined from the pleading whether the contract is written, oral, or implied.

An answer may include affirmative defenses [see California Acad. of Scis. v. County of Fresno (1987) 192 CA3d 1436, 1442, 238 CR 154 ; see also 25.26].

Cross References:

Discussion on defending action for breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

Discussion of answers, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 14, Answers.

25.24[2] Defendant May Respond by Filing Demurrer. A defendant may object to a complaint for breach of contract for unauthorized disclosure of confidential information by filing a demurrer, if grounds for a demurrer can be shown [CCP § 430.10].

Fundamental grounds to object to a complaint by demurrer in a contract action include the following for an objection that appears on the face of the complaint [CCP §§ 430.10(e)-(g), 430.30(a)]:

- The pleading does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.
- The pleading is uncertain.
- It cannot be determined from the pleading whether the contract is written, oral, or implied.

A demurrer does not allege or deny facts, but objects to the pleading on the ground that it contains a defect that appears from examination of the pleading itself or from examination of the pleading together with judicially noticed facts [see CCP § 430.30]. A demurrer raises issues of law to be tried by the court [see CCP §§ 589(a), 591; Pescosolido v. Maddock (1985) 172 CA3d 230, 232, 218 CR 165].

Cross References:

Discussion on defending action for breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

Discussion of demurrers, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 11, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.

25.24[3] Defendant May Respond by Filing Motion for Summary Judgment or Summary Adjudication. A defendant may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding by contending that the action has no merit [CCP § 437c(a)]. A cause of action "has no merit" if [CCP § 437c(g)]:

- One or more of the elements of the cause of action cannot be separately established, even if that element is separately pleaded; or
- The defendant establishes an affirmative defense to the cause of action.

A motion for summary adjudication may be made by itself or as an alternative to a motion for summary judgment, and may proceed in all procedural respects as a motion for summary judgment [CCP § 437c(f)(2)].

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information
VII. RESPONDING TO ACTION FOR DISCLOSURE OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.25

25.25 Attacking Complaint for Failure to Allege Essential Element.

25.25[1] No Valid Agreement Existed for Nondisclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information. A confidentiality or nondisclosure agreement, like any other contract, must include the essential elements required for all contracts [see CC § 1550]:

- Parties capable of contracting;
- Consent;
- A lawful object; and
- Sufficient cause or consideration.

If one of these items is missing, no contract exists [CC § 1550] and no action may be maintained.

Cross References:

Discussion of determining obligation of confidentiality, see 25.13 -25.15.

Discussion of attacking existence of contract, see Ch. 13, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element.

Discussion of defending action for breach of contract, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

25.25[2] Defendant Did Not Breach Contract. As with any other contract, the defendant may defeat a breach of contract claim simply by showing that no breach occurred [see Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 CA3d 887, 913, 92 CR 723 (general requirements for proving breach of contract)]. In the context of breach of a nondisclosure agreement or provision, the following lines of defense should be considered:

- Defendant did not disclose to third parties any information received from plaintiff.
- The information disclosed was not confidential or proprietary [see 25.16[1] -[3]].
- The disclosure did not occur in an unauthorized manner--in other words, it was permitted, or at least was not prohibited, by the terms of agreement [see 25.16[4]].

A negative answer to any of the above questions may form the basis for a successful defense to a breach of contract claim.

Cross References:

Answer with affirmative defense that information was not confidential or proprietary or was excepted from nondisclosure requirement by terms of agreement, see 25.28.

Determining whether information is confidential or proprietary, see 25.16

Proving or disproving breach of contract in general, see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract.

25.25[3] Plaintiff Suffered No Harm From Disclosure. Damages are an essential element of the cause of action for breach of any contract [Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 CA3d 887, 913, 92 CR 723], and any damages must be proximately caused by, or likely to result from, the breach of contract in order for plaintiff to recover [CC § 3300]. In the context of a nondisclosure agreement, potential lines of defense to a breach of contract claim include:

- Plaintiff's inability to prove that any damage occurred as a result of the disclosure of the information;
or
- Plaintiff's inability to show that damages suffered were the result of the disclosure or misuse of confidential information. In the case of customer lists or processes, for example, plaintiff may have difficulty proving that the alleged damages actually were caused by the defendant's disclosure of the confidential information, as opposed to competition in the market or other external factors.

Example:

In a tort action based on allegedly improper solicitation of plaintiff's employees by two of its employees who were defecting to a competitor, plaintiff's allegations that the solicitation "deprived [plaintiff] of the patronage of many customers who otherwise would have patronized plaintiff, all to plaintiff's damage in amounts unknown to plaintiff" failed to allege any facts showing any connection between the purported damage and the defendants' solicitation of plaintiff's employees, and dismissal was proper since there was no obvious causal relationship between plaintiff's loss of some of its employees and a loss of its customers [Diodes, Inc. v. Franzen (1968) 260 CA2d 244, 257, 67 CR 19].

Chapter 25 Seeking Recovery for Unauthorized Disclosure of Confidential or Proprietary Information
VII. RESPONDING TO ACTION FOR DISCLOSURE OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

2-25 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 25.26

25.26 Defendant Should Assert Any Appropriate Affirmative Defenses.

25.26[1] Defendant Can Assert Unconscionability As Affirmative Defense. If the confidentiality or nondisclosure agreement was executed in connection with a noncompetition agreement that arguably places restraints on trade [see B&P Code § 16600], or in other appropriate cases, the defendant should analyze the agreement to determine whether a defense of unconscionability may be appropriate [see 25.11[1]]. B&P Code § 16600 precludes the enforceability of nondisclosure and noncompetition agreements beyond the protection of confidential information [see Rigging Int'l Maint. Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 CA3d 594, 614, 180 CR 451].

➤ Cross References:

Discussion of unconscionability generally, see Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

Defendant's checklist of affirmative defenses, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 140.91 (Matthew Bender).

25.26[2] Defendant Can Assert Public Policy As Affirmative Defense. If a limitation on disclosure of information arguably would violate public policy [see, e.g., Cariveau v. Hafferty (2000) 83 CA4th 126, 138 (prohibition on disclosure to a government agency)], or if it is part of a noncompetition agreement that operates as a restraint of trade [see B&P Code § 16600], defendant should consider asserting that the provision or agreement is contrary to public policy [see 25.11[2]]. In the latter case, however, defendant should bear in mind that confidentiality agreements that merely prohibit a party from disclosing confidential information and trade secrets but do not seek to restrict competition do not come within the ambit of B&P Code § 16600 and generally are valid [Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 C2d 690, 321 P2d 456 ; see Winston Research Corp. v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir 1965) 350 F2d 134, 140-141].

➤ Cross References:

Further discussion of public policy and its affect on nondisclosure and confidentiality agreements, see 25.11.

Discussion of unconscionability and public policy, see Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable, 18.13 et seq.

25.26[3] Defendant Can Assert Statute of Limitations As Affirmative Defense. If the plaintiff does not bring the action with the appropriate statutory period, the action can be barred by the statute of limitations. Statutes of limitation applicable in disclosure of confidential information cases include the following:

- Four years for a written contract [CCP § 337(1); see 25.04].
- Two years for an oral or implied contract [CCP § 339(1); see 25.04].
- Three years for misappropriation of a trade secret [CC § 3426.6; see 25.05].
- Four years for unfair competition [B&P Code § 17208; see 25.06].
- Three years [CC § 3426.6 (tort of misappropriation)] or two years [CCP § 339(1) (implied contract)] for breach of confidence. It is uncertain whether this action is tort-based or contract-based [see 25.07].

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of statutes of limitation in contract actions, see Ch. 4, Determining Applicable Statutes of Limitation and Effect on Potential Action.

25.26[4] Defendant Can Assert Failure to Mitigate Damages As Affirmative Defense. A plaintiff must do everything reasonably possible to mitigate the loss and reduce the damages for which the defendant is liable [Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 CA2d 220, 238, 56 CR 435]. Damages that the plaintiff could have avoided by making reasonable efforts or expenditures are not recoverable [Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 CA2d 220, 239-239, 56 CR 435]. A claim that the plaintiff should have mitigated damages but failed to do so must be pled as an affirmative defense (although, if the issue simply is one of computation, the court may admit evidence on that issue without an affirmative pleading) [Erler v. Five Points Motors, Inc. (1967) 249 CA2d 560, 568, 57 CR 516 (employment contract case); see Carlotto, Ltd. v. County of Ventura (1975) 47 CA3d 931, 937, 121 CR 171 (explaining Erler holding)].

[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Judge:

Department: _____

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege any affirmative defenses, e.g.,]

[EITHER, if alleging that no contract of confidentiality exists because defendant is not identified as a party]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Defendant Not Party to Alleged Contract)

2. Defendant was not a party to the contract alleged by Plaintiff and therefore is not subject to the provisions of that contract, including any provisions relating to confidentiality or nondisclosure of information received from Plaintiff.

[AND/OR, if alleging that the information received from defendant cannot be considered confidential or proprietary]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Information Received by Defendant Is Not Confidential or Proprietary)

3. The information Defendant allegedly received from Plaintiff and disclosed to others cannot be considered confidential or proprietary because _____ [reason, e.g. it falls outside the definition of confidential information as provided in the agreement or it is widely known in the trade and is readily available from other sources to anyone who wishes to know it].

[AND/OR, if alleging that the confidential information received falls within an exclusion contained in the agreement]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Defendant Received Information That Is Excluded by Agreement)

4. The confidential information Defendant allegedly received from Plaintiff and disclosed to others is specifically excluded from nondisclosure under the terms of the agreement.

[AND/OR, if alleging that terms of nondisclosure agreement are unconscionable]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE
(Contract Is Unconscionable)

5. The _____ [contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable because it was unconscionable at the time the contract was made or construction and application of (a provision of) the contract should be limited to avoid an unconscionable result], in that _____ [specify facts, e.g., the contract was a form contract that was presented to Defendant for signature without opportunity for negotiation, and the nondisclosure requirement was only one component of a noncompetition provision the terms of which would effectively bar Defendant from employment in his/her usual occupation with anyone other than Plaintiff for an indefinite period].

[AND/OR, if alleging that agreement is unenforceable because it is contrary to public policy]

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE
(Contract Is Contrary to Public Policy)

6. The contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable because it is contrary to _____ [the policy of express law or good morals], in that _____ [specify facts, e.g., the contract requires Defendant not to disclose information that Defendant was obligated by law to disclose].

[AND/OR, if alleging that agreement is unenforceable because it is barred by the statute of limitations]

SIXTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE
(Claim Is Barred by Statute of Limitations)

7. Plaintiff's cause of action is barred by the statute of limitation of _____ [specify, e.g., four] years pursuant to _____ [cite specific code section, e.g., Code of Civil Procedure Section 337(1)].

[AND/OR, if alleging that plaintiff failed to mitigate damages]

SEVENTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE
(Plaintiff Failed to Mitigate Damages)

8. Plaintiff is not entitled to recover damages from Defendant because Plaintiff has failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to exercise a reasonable effort to mitigate damages, in that _____ [specify].

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;
2. For costs of suit; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
I. STRATEGY

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.02

26.02 Objective and Strategy.

26.02[1] Objective and Strategy of Seller. In determining a remedy for the seller, counsel should first assess the nature of the buyer's breach. The available remedies will vary according to the nature of the buyer's breach, which therefore provides a starting point for reviewing all the available options and then choosing the most useful option.

Example:

For instance, if the seller delivered some of the goods according to the contract, and the buyer failed to make a payment when due, then the seller has several options (and can choose all of them) [see Com Code § 2703]:

- Cancel the contract [see 26.08].
- Withhold the remaining goods from shipment [see 26.11].
- Stop delivery of goods in transit and reclaim them [see 26.12].
- Resell any of the goods withheld or reclaimed [see 26.13].
- Sue for the price of goods delivered and not paid for and for the price differential on resold goods [see 26.19].

The seller's first reaction might be to stop any goods in transit. If that is accomplished in a timely manner, then the seller may resell those goods if another buyer is readily available. When the goods are perishable or are rapidly declining in value for some other reason, the seller's repossession of the goods and resale would be more pressing than bringing an action for the price, although that option could be pursued at a later time [see Com Code §§ 2703, 2705, 2706].

26.02[2] Objective and Strategy of Buyer. In determining a remedy for the buyer, counsel should first assess the nature of the seller's breach. The available remedies will vary according to the nature of the seller's breach, which therefore provides a starting point for reviewing all the options available, then choosing the most useful option.

Example:

For instance, if the seller has failed to deliver the goods in a timely manner, then the buyer has a choice of remedies:

- Effect "cover" for the goods [see 26.24], and sue for damages [see 26.28].
- Sue for damages for nondelivery [see 26.29].
- Recover goods that were identified to the contract [see 26.30, 26.31].
- Sue for specific performance [see 26.32].

The choice may be narrowed depending on the nature of goods (for example, if they are unique, that is a ground for specific performance), whether the buyer has already paid some of the price, and whether the goods have been identified to the contract. The buyer may need to cover for the goods in a timely manner so as to fulfill a contract for sale to a subsequent buyer. In that case, the buyer's most exigent remedy would be to find another seller that can provide substitute goods. The buyer would have to keep in mind that this remedy must be pursued in good faith, accomplished without undue delay; and the goods bought as cover must be substitute goods [see Com Code § 2712]. The buyer then may recover from the seller the costs resulting from covering [see 26.28].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
I. STRATEGY

*2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.0326.03 Contract Can Limit or Modify Remedies.

26.03[1] Parties May Add or Substitute Remedies. The agreement may provide for remedies in addition to or in substitution for those provided in Division 2 of the Commercial Code [Com Code § 2719(1)(a)]. However, in that case, the following code provisions will apply nevertheless:

- Com Code § 2718 on liquidation and general limitation of damages [see 26.03[4]].
- Com Code § 2719(2) on failure of a limited or exclusive remedy [see 26.03[6]].
- Com Code § 2719(3) on limitation of consequential damages [see 26.03[5]].

Example:

The buyer's remedy may be limited to either or both of the following, for example [Com Code § 2719(1)(a)]:

- Returning the goods and receiving a refund of the price.
- Returning nonconforming goods or parts for repair or replacement.

In addition, certain fundamental obligations (such as the obligation to act in good faith) cannot be excluded [see 26.03[7]].

Strategic Point:

Any right or obligation declared by the Commercial Code is enforceable by action unless the provision declaring it specifies a different and limited effect [Com Code § 1305(b)].

Cross Reference:

Procedural guide to drafting contract for sale of goods, see California Legal Forms, § 52.132 (Matthew Bender).

26.03[2] Contract Remedy Generally Is Optional Rather Than Exclusive. Resort to a remedy provided by the contract is optional unless the remedy is expressly agreed to be exclusive, in which case it is the sole remedy [Com Code § 2719(1)(b)].

Exception--Agreed Exclusive Remedy:

If the contract remedy is expressly agreed to be exclusive, then it is the sole remedy [Com Code § 2719(1)(b)].

Consider--Contractual and Statutory Remedies Presumed Cumulative:

Com Code § 2719(1)(b) creates a presumption that clauses prescribing remedies are cumulative rather than exclusive. If the parties intend the term to describe the sole remedy under the contract, this must be clearly expressed [see Com Code § 2719, UCC § 2-719, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Strategic Point--Some Code Provisions Prevail:

Even if the contract remedy is the sole remedy, the following code provisions will apply nevertheless [Com Code § 2719(1)(a)]:

- Com Code § 2718 on liquidation and general limitation of damages [see 26.03[4]].
- Com Code § 2719(2) on failure of a limited or exclusive remedy [see 26.03[6]].
- Com Code § 2719(3) on limitation of consequential damages [see 26.03[5]].

26.03[3] Parties May Limit or Alter Measure of Damages. The agreement may limit or alter the measure of damages recoverable under Division 2 [Com Code § 2719(1)(a)].

Strategic Point--Some Code Provisions Prevail:

Even if the contract remedy limits or alters the measure of damages, the following code provisions will apply nevertheless [Com Code § 2719(1)(a)]:

- Com Code § 2718 on liquidation and general limitation of damages [see 26.03[4]];
- Com Code § 2719(2) on failure of a limited or exclusive remedy [see 26.03[6]]; and
- Com Code § 2719(3) on limitation of consequential damages [see 26.03[5]].

Cross Reference:

Discussion and form for clause limiting damages or remedies, see California Legal Forms, § 52.353 (Matthew Bender).

26.03[4] Liquidated Damages Provision Must Meet Legal Standards. Damages for breach by either party may be liquidated in the agreement, subject to and in compliance with CC § 1671 [Com Code § 2718(1)].

Strategic Point--Division 2 Supplants Noncompliant Provision:

If the agreement provides for liquidation of damages, and the provision does not comply with CC § 1671, a party may pursue a remedy as provided in Division 2 of the Commercial Code [Com Code § 2718(1)].

Liquidated damages, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.259 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Discussion of liquidated damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.71 (Matthew Bender).

Discussion and form for liquidated damages provision, see California Legal Forms, § 52.357 (Matthew Bender).

26.03[5] Parties May Limit or Exclude Consequential Damages.

26.03[5][a] Consequential Damages Provision Must Not Be Unconscionable. Consequential damages may be limited or excluded unless the limitation or exclusion is unconscionable [Com Code § 2719(3)].

Strategic Point:

Unconscionability generally has been recognized to include an absence of meaningful choice on the part of one of the parties together with contract terms that are unreasonably favorable to the other party [Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co., Inc. (1988) 200 CA3d 1518, 1534, 246 CR 823].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of Unconscionability in Contract Actions, see Ch. 18, Asserting or Defending Claim That Contract Is Illegal, Contrary to Public Policy, or Unconscionable.

26.03[5][b] Limitation Respecting Commercial Loss Is Presumptively Valid. Limitation of consequential damages when the loss is commercial is valid unless it is proved that the limitation is unconscionable [Com Code § 2719(3)].

Example--Valid Limitation of Seller's Damages:

A seed package label limited the seller's "liability of any kind on account of any negligence whatsoever" to the purchase price. The limitation was valid as against a sod grower whose crops were damaged by contaminated seed purchased from the seller, a seed supplier with which the grower had done business for 20 years [see Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co., Inc. (1988) 200 CA3d 1518, 1536, 246 CR 823].

Distinguish--Seller's Disclaimer of Warranties:

The seller in all cases is free to disclaim warranties in the manner provided in Com Code § 2316 [see Com Code § 2719, UCC § 2-719, official cmt 3 (1962)].

Cross References:

Discussion of contractual limitations on remedies, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, §

Sample Search: For information regarding remedies where either the buyer or seller is a business entity, use: heading(business) AND buyer /5 remedy OR recover! OR damage! /30 sale OR sold OR sell! /5 goods.

26.03[5][c] Limitation on Consumer's Personal Injury Damages Is Presumptively Invalid. Limitation of consequential damages for injury to the person, in the case of consumer goods, is invalid unless it is proved that the limitation is not unconscionable [Com Code § 2719(3)].

26.03[6] Code Remedy Supplants Failed Contract Remedy. If circumstances cause an exclusive or limited contract remedy to fail in its essential purpose, a party may pursue a remedy provided in the Commercial Code [Com Code § 2719(2); see Airlift Int'l, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (9th Cir 1982) 685 F2d 267, 270 (Com Code § 2719(2) applies only when party is deprived of contract remedy)].

Consider:

Contracts modifying or limiting Commercial Code remedies must provide fair remedies for breach of the obligations or duties outlined in the contract. Thus, any unconscionable contract provision is subject to deletion. Commercial Code remedies would then apply as if the deleted clause had never existed [see Com Code § 2719, UCC § 2-719, official cmt 1 (1962)].

Strategic Point--Failure of Essential Purpose:

A contract remedy fails of its essential purpose if the circumstances existing at the time of the agreement have changed so that a party forced to pursue the contract remedy would essentially have no remedy at all [National Rural Telecomms. Coop. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (CD Cal 2003) 319 F Supp2d 1040, 1055].

Example--Valid Clause Limiting Express Warranty:

In an action by a company that purchased a defective airplane, which exploded during maintenance procedures, the parties' agreement contained a valid exculpatory clause limiting the express warranty of the manufacturer. The contract remedy did not fail of its essential purpose and was available to the buyer during the warranty period [Airlift Int'l, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (9th Cir 1982) 685 F2d 267, 270].

26.03[7] Fundamental Obligations May Not Be Excluded. The effect of provisions of the Commercial Code may be varied by agreement, except as otherwise provided in the Commercial Code; but the obligations of good faith, diligence, reasonableness, and care prescribed by the Commercial Code may not be disclaimed by agreement. However, the parties may determine, by agreement, the standards by which the performance of the obligations is to be measured, if the standards are not manifestly unreasonable [Com Code § 1302(b)].

I. STRATEGY

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.05

26.05 Compensatory Damages Are Limited by Commercial Code.

The remedies provided by the Commercial Code are to be liberally administered to the end that the aggrieved party may be put in as good a position as if the other party had fully performed [Com Code § 1305(a)].

Strategic Point:

Neither consequential, special, nor penal damages are available, except as specifically provided in the Commercial Code or by other rule of law [Com Code § 1305(a)].

Consider:

Com Code § 1305(a) makes it clear that compensatory damages are limited to compensation. They do not include consequential or special damages, or penal damages. Moreover, the Commercial Code elsewhere makes it clear that damages must be minimized [see Com Code §§ 1304, 2706(1), 2712(2)] (obligation of good faith; seller's damages recoverable after good faith resale of rejected goods; buyer's damages recoverable after good faith attempt to "cover" for undelivered or nonconforming goods). Com Code § 1305(a) also rejects any doctrine that damages must be calculable with mathematical accuracy. Compensatory damages often are approximate at best--they have to be proved with whatever definiteness and accuracy the facts permit, but no more [former Com Code § 1106 (now see Com Code § 1305), official cmt 1 (1962); cf. Com Code § 2204(3) (contract does not fail for indefiniteness just because parties left several terms open, as long as contract provides reasonably certain basis for giving appropriate remedy)].

Example:

A raisin producer contracted to sell raisins to a company that in turn contracted to resell the raisins to third parties. When bad weather ruined the crop, the producer repudiated the contract. The buyer did not cover or make any deliveries of raisins to the third parties; and the third parties did not insist on delivery, nor did they sue for nondelivery. The buyer sued the producer, however, seeking damages pursuant to Com Code § 2713 for the difference between the market price (which was unusually high because of the bad-weather-induced shortage of raisins) and the contract price. The profit that the buyer would have received on the resale contracts would have been $4,400. The damages represented by the market price differential would have been $150,000. Former Com Code § 1106 (now see Com Code § 1305) limited the noncovering buyer's damages to the actual loss, $4,400, since (1) the seller knew that the buyer had a resale contract; (2) the buyer could not show liability to the third parties--one had released the buyer; the other did not sue, and the limitation period had expired at time of litigation; and (3) the producer did not commit bad faith [Allied Cannery & Packers, Inc. v. Victor Packing Co. (1984) 162 CA3d 905, 915, 209 CR 60].

Exception:

However, that formula may not apply if the seller was guilty of bad faith [see KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 CA4th 376, 388 n7, 42 CR2d 286]. Moreover, that formula may not apply if the court takes into account whether the seller's breach adversely affected the buyer's goodwill among customers with whom the buyer had contracted for resale, and whether the buyer suffered the potential loss of future contracts because of the seller's breach [see KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 CA4th 376, 387 n5, 42 CR2d 286].

II. PURSUING SELLER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.06

26.06 CHECKLIST: Pursuing Seller's Self-Help Remedies for Buyer's Breach.

- ☐ Determine whether contract limits or modifies seller's Commercial Code self-help remedies.

Authority:

Com Code § 2719

Discussion:

See 26.03

- ☐ If buyer repudiated contract, or wrongfully rejected goods or revoked acceptance, or failed to make payment when due, decide which of the following remedies seller should pursue:

- ☐ Cancel contract.

Authority:

Com Code § 2703(f)

Discussion:

See 26.08

- ☐ With respect to unfinished goods being manufactured for buyer, either:

☐ Treat them as resaleable as-is (and resell them) or finish them (and identify them to contract); or ☐ Sell them for scrap or salvage value.

Authority:

Com Code §§ 2703(c), 2704(2)

Discussion:

See 26.09

☐ With respect to finished goods produced or procured for buyer, identify them to contract (and then withhold them from shipment).

Authority:

Com Code §§ 2703(c), 2704(1)

Discussion:

See 26.10

☐ Withhold goods not yet in transit to buyer.

Authority:

Com Code § 2703(a)

Discussion:

See 26.11

☐ Stop delivery of goods in transit to buyer and reclaim them.

Authority:

Com Code §§ 2703(b), 2705

Discussion:

See 26.12

☐ Decide whether seller will resell goods that have been identified to contract and that seller has either withheld from shipment or reclaimed after they were shipped.

Authority:

Com Code §§ 2703(d), 2706

Discussion:

See 26.13

☐ If some person is in position of seller (such as buyer's agent after paying for goods or becoming responsible to pay for them), decide whether that person should withhold goods, stop delivery, and resell, in same manner as seller.

Authority:

Com Code § 2707

Discussion:

See 26.14

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
II. PURSUING SELLER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.07

26.07 Options and Strategies.

On the buyer's breach of the contract--whether the buyer wrongfully rejected goods or revoked acceptance, or repudiated the contract, or failed to make a payment when due--the seller's self-help options depend on the seller still having, or being able to regain, possession of the goods.

Distinguish:

In addition to the typical case of refusal to pay or default in payment, the buyer "fails to make a payment due" [see Com Code § 2703] when the buyer's check is dishonored on due presentment, or the buyer's draft is not accepted, and a letter of credit is not furnished as agreed [see Com Code § 2703, UCC § 2-703, official cmt 3 (1962)].

One option is to cancel the contract [Com Code § 2703(f); see 26.08].

If the goods are being manufactured for the buyer, then unfinished goods can either be finished and identified to the contract (but then would be withheld from shipment; see below), or treated as resalable as-is, or sold for scrap or salvage value [Com Code §§ 2703(c), 2704; see 26.09].

Finished goods that have been produced or procured for the buyer can be identified to the contract (but then would be withheld from shipment) [Com Code §§ 2703(c), 2704; see 26.10].

Goods that are ready for shipment to the buyer can be withheld from shipment [Com Code § 2703(a); see 26.11]. Goods in transit to the buyer can be stopped, and the seller can reclaim them (except in some cases) [Com Code § 2703(b), 2705; see 26.12].

The seller may resell goods that have been withheld or reclaimed [Com Code § 2703(d); see 26.13], thus mitigating (if not obviating) damages. However, the seller may elect not to resell the goods. In that case the seller would have to rely exclusively on a judicial remedy [see 26.15 (checklist for seller's judicial remedy)], taking the risk of being found not to have mitigated damages.

Strategic Point--Cumulative Remedies:

The seller's remedies listed in Com Code § 2703 are essentially cumulative in nature and include all of the available remedies for breach. Whether the pursuit of one remedy bars another depends entirely on the facts of the individual case. Moreover, the remedies under Com Code § 2703 apply irrespective of the situs of the title of the goods [see Com Code § 2703, UCC § 2-703, official cmt 1 (1962)].

A person in the position of a seller (for instance, a buyer's agent that has paid the price for the goods) has the same remedies as the seller. The person may withhold the goods from shipment, stop delivery of any goods in transit and reclaim them, and resell goods withheld or reclaimed [Com Code § 2707; see 26.14].

II. PURSUING SELLER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.08

26.08 Contract Can Be Canceled.

The seller may cancel the contract with respect to any goods directly affected by the buyer's breach after the buyer has done any of the following [Com Code § 2703(f)]:

- Wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of the goods.
- Failed to make a payment due on or before delivery.
- Repudiated with respect to a part or the whole.

If the breach is of the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], then the seller may cancel with respect to the whole undelivered balance [Com Code § 2703(f)].

Strategic Point--Cancellation Does Not Affect Right to Damages:

Unless the contrary intention clearly appears, expressions of "cancellation" or "rescission" of the contract, or the like, are not construed as a renunciation or discharge of any claim in damages for an antecedent breach [Com Code § 2720].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
II. PURSUING SELLER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.09

26.09 Goods Being Manufactured for Buyer Can Be Resold, Finished, or Scrapped.

26.09[1] Seller's Options With Respect to Unfinished Goods. When goods are being manufactured for the buyer, the manufacturer has two options for handling unfinished goods directly affected by the buyer's breach after the buyer has done any of the following [Com Code § 2703(c)]:

- Wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of the goods.
- Failed to make a payment due on or before delivery.
- Repudiated with respect to a part or the whole.

The manufacturer may either:

- Treat the unfinished goods as resalable in spite of being unfinished [Com Code § 2704(1)(b)]; see 26.09[2]; or
- Use reasonable commercial judgment about whether to complete manufacture of the unfinished goods or sell them for scrap or salvage value [Com Code § 2704(2)]; see 26.09[3].

If the breach is of the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], then the seller may act with respect to the whole undelivered balance [Com Code § 2703(c)].

Cross Reference:

Identifying finished goods to contract, see 26.10.

26.09[2] Unfinished Goods Can Be Treated As Resalable. The seller may treat as the subject of resale any unfinished goods that have demonstrably been intended for the particular contract, even though those goods are unfinished [Com Code § 2704(1)(b)].

Cross Reference:

Reselling goods not delivered in consequence of buyer's breach, see 26.13.

26.09[3] Unfinished Goods Can Be Finished or Scrapped. The seller, in the exercise of reasonable commercial judgment, for the purposes of loss-avoidance and effective realization, may do any of the following with respect to the unfinished goods [Com Code § 2704(2)]:

- Complete the manufacture and wholly identify the goods to the contract.
- Cease manufacture and resell for scrap or salvage value.
- Proceed in any other reasonable manner.

Thus, Com Code § 2704(2) makes the goods available for resale (the seller's primary self-help remedy) after, or without, being finished and, in a special case in which resale is not practicable, lets the seller commence a civil action for the price, which would then be necessary to give the seller the value of the contract [Com Code § 2704, UCC § 2-704, official cmt 1 (1962)].

Warning:

The seller should not complete manufacture of unfinished goods or procure goods for the contract if, in the exercise of reasonable commercial judgment, when the seller learns of the breach, that action will result in a material increase in damages. The burden is on the buyer to show the commercially unreasonable nature of the seller's action in completing manufacture [see Com Code § 2704, UCC § 2-704, official cmt 2 (1962)].

26.10 Goods Produced or Procured for Buyer Can Be Identified to Contract.

When the seller has produced or procured goods for the buyer but has not yet identified them to the contract, the seller may identify to the contract any such conforming goods directly affected by the buyer's breach after the buyer has done any of the following [Com Code §§ 2703(c), 2704(1)(a)]:

- Wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of the goods.
- Failed to make a payment due on or before delivery.
- Repudiated with respect to a part or the whole.

If the breach is of the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], the seller may act with respect to the whole undelivered balance [Com Code § 2703(c)].

- Failed to make a payment due on or before delivery.
- Repudiated with respect to a part or the whole.

If the breach is of the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], the seller may withhold delivery of the whole undelivered balance [Com Code § 2703(a)].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
II. PURSUING SELLER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.12

26.12 Goods in Transit Can Be Reclaimed.

26.12[1] Seller May Elect to Stop Delivery. If the buyer wrongfully rejects or revokes acceptance of goods, fails to make a payment due on or before delivery, or repudiates with respect to a part or the whole, then with respect to any goods directly affected and, if the breach is of the whole contract, then with respect to the whole undelivered balance, the aggrieved seller may stop delivery of goods in transit, as provided in Com Code § 2705 [Com Code § 2703(b); see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)].

Strategic Point:

After an effective stoppage under Com Code § 2705, the seller's rights in the goods are the same as if the seller had never made a delivery [see Com Code § 2705, UCC § 2-705, official cmt 6 (1962)].

Warning:

Improper stoppage is a breach by the seller if it effectively interferes with the buyer's right to due tender under Com Code § 2503, regarding the manner of tender of delivery [see Com Code § 2705, UCC § 2-705, official cmt 1 (1962)].

Cross References:

Reselling goods undelivered in consequence of buyer's breach, see 26.13.

Tender of delivery, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 28.09.

Discussion of seller's remedy of stopping delivery, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.75 (Matthew Bender).

26.12[2] Stoppage Right Is Limited.

26.12[2][a] Only Carload (or Like Shipment) Can Be Stopped Unless Buyer Is Insolvent. The seller normally is limited to stopping delivery of carload, truckload, or planeload (or larger) shipments, but if the seller elects to stop delivery because of discovering the buyer to be insolvent, then the seller may stop delivery of any shipment [see Com Code § 2705(1)].

Consider:

Because stoppage is a burden in any case to carriers, and might be a very heavy burden to them if it covered all small shipments in all these situations, the right to stop for reasons other than insolvency is limited to carload, truckload, planeload or larger shipments. A seller shipping to a buyer of doubtful credit can have protection by shipping C.O.D. [see Com Code § 2705, UCC § 2-705, official cmt 1 (1962)].

26.12[2][b] Goods in Buyer's Actual or Constructive Custody Cannot Be Stopped. As against the buyer, the seller may stop delivery until one of the following occurs:

- The buyer receives the goods [Com Code § 2705(2)(a)].
- Any bailee other than a carrier acknowledges to the buyer that the bailee holds the goods for the buyer [Com Code § 2705(2)(b)].
- A carrier acknowledges to the buyer by reshipment or as a warehouse [Com Code § 2705(2)(c)].
- Negotiation to the buyer of any negotiable document of title covering the goods [Com Code § 2705(2)(d)].

Consider:

The purpose of Com Code § 2705(2)(c) is to protect a transaction between a buyer-for-resale and that buyer's customer. It protects the ultimate customer from being affected by a dispute between the buyer and the buyer's supplier, by ensuring that the goods the customer has ordered will be delivered regardless of the financial condition of the reseller/buyer [see Butts v. Glendale Plywood Co. (9th Cir 1983) 710 F2d 504, 505].

Example--Reshipment:

When the original buyer of two railroad cars of lumber sold the lumber while in transit to a subpurchaser, ordering the railroad to change the destination to the subpurchaser's location, and the seller, learning of its buyer's possible insolvency, ordered the railroad to stop the cars, then sold the lumber directly to the subpurchaser, the buyer's rerouting of the shipment constituted a "reshipment," which prevented the seller from stopping delivery [Butts v. Glendale Plywood Co. (9th Cir 1983) 710 F2d 504, 505-506 (applying Oregon version of UCC)].

26.12[3] Delivery Must Be Suspended on Seller's Notice.

26.12[3][a] Seller Must Give Sufficient Notice. To stop delivery of goods in transit, the seller must give sufficient notice to enable a carrier or warehouse operator, by reasonable diligence, to prevent delivery of the goods [Com Code § 2705(3)(a); see Com Code § 2705, UCC § 2-705, official cmt 1 (1962) (statutory reference to carrier "or other bailee" makes clear that stoppage principle applies to other bailees as well as carriers)].

26.12[3][b] Goods Must Be Handled As Seller Directs. After the seller has given proper notice to enable the carrier or warehouse operator to stop delivery, the goods generally must be held and delivered according to the seller's directions [Com Code § 2705(3)(b)].

Prerequisite--Surrender of Title Document:

If a negotiable document of title has been issued for the goods, then the carrier or warehouse operator is not obliged to obey a stop notice until possession or control of the document is surrendered [Com Code § 2705(3)(c)].

Strategic Point:

A carrier or warehouse operator that has issued a nonnegotiable bill of lading is not obliged to obey a stop notice received from a person other than the consignor [Com Code § 2705(3)(d)].

Strategic Point:

The seller's right as against the buyer to stop delivery persists whether or not the carrier or warehouse operator is obliged to recognize the stop notice [see Com Code § 2705, UCC § 2-705, official cmt 2 (1962)].

26.12[3][c] Seller Is Liable for Ensuing Costs and Damages. When the carrier or warehouse operator holds and delivers the goods in accordance with the seller's directions, the seller is liable for any ensuing charges or damages [Com Code § 2705(3)(b)].

Strategic Point:

A carrier or warehouse operator that obeys an unjustified stop notice could become liable to the buyer [see Com Code § 7303]. Com Code § 2705(3)(b) therefore gives the carrier or warehouse operator a right of indemnity as against the seller in such a case [Com Code § 2705, UCC § 2-705, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
II. PURSUING SELLER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.13

26.13 Goods Not Delivered Can Be Resold.

26.13[1] Seller May Resell Goods and Sue for Damages. The seller may resell the undelivered goods identified to the contract--then sue for damages if necessary to be made whole--and after the seller has taken any of the following steps in consequence of the buyer's breach [see Com Code §§ 2703(d), 2706(1)]:

- Canceled the contract [see 26.08].
- Made a commercially reasonable election, with respect to any unfinished goods being manufactured for the buyer, either [see 26.09]:
 - ☐ To finish the goods and identify them to the contract; or
 - ☐ To treat the goods as being resalable even though unfinished.
- Identified to the contract any goods specially produced or procured for the buyer [see 26.10].
- Withheld goods not yet shipped [see 26.11].
- Stopped delivery of goods in transit to the buyer [see 26.12].
- Reclaimed goods shipped on credit, after discovering the buyer to be insolvent [see 26.37].

Strategic Point--Good Faith and Reasonableness Required:

If the resale is made in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner, the seller may recover the difference between the resale price and the contract price, together with any incidental damages allowed under Division 2 [see Com Code § 2710], less expenses saved in consequence of the buyer's breach [Com Code § 2706(1); see Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 CA3d 432, 445-446, 249 CR 872 (resale to affiliated company is not prohibited and is not inherently commercially unreasonable)].

Distinguish--Different Measure of Damages When Resale Is Improper:

If the seller fails to conduct the resale in a proper manner, the seller is not entitled to the measure of damages under Com Code § 2706(1) but is relegated to the measure of damages provided in Com Code § 2708 [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 2 (1962); 26.17].

Jury Instructions:

Seller's Damages Recoverable After Resale, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.251 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross References:

Checklist for pursuing seller's judicial remedy, see 26.15.

Discussion of resale after buyer's breach, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.75 (Matthew Bender); or California Legal Forms, § 52.351 (Matthew Bender).

26.13[2] Goods Must Be Sold in Commercially Reasonable Manner.

26.13[2][a] Sale Can Be Public Auction or Private Sale. Resale of goods may be at public auction or private sale, including sale by way of one or more contracts to sell or of identification to an existing contract of the seller [Com Code § 2706(2)].

Strategic Points:

- A private sale would still require a limited notice to the defaulted buyer [see 26.13[3]].
- The parties' agreement could contain an overriding provision concerning a resale [Com Code § 2706(2); see 26.03[3]].
- In choosing between a public auction and private sale, the seller should consider the character of the goods, and comply with the relevant trade practices and usages [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 4 (1962)].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion and forms for contract clauses specifying method of resale after buyer's breach, see California Legal Forms, § 52.351 (Matthew Bender).

26.13[2][b] Any Time, Place, and Manner Could Be Reasonable. Sale may be as a unit or in parcels, and at any time and place, and on any terms. However, every aspect of the sale including the method, manner, time, place and terms must be commercially reasonable [Com Code § 2706(2)].

Timing:

A reasonable time cannot be measured by any legal yardstick or divided into degrees, but rather depends on factors such as the following [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 5 (1962)]:

- Nature of the goods.
- Condition of the market.
- Other circumstances of the case.

Strategic Point:

When a seller contemplating resale receives a demand from the buyer for inspection related to preserving evidence of goods in dispute [see Com Code § 2515], the time for resale may be appropriately lengthened [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 5 (1962)].

26.13[2][c] Resale Must Be Referenced to Broken Contract. The resale must be reasonably identified as referring to the broken contract [Com Code § 2706(2)].

26.13[3] Notice to Defaulted Buyer Could Be Required.

26.13[3][a] Private Sale Requires Notice of Intent to Sell. A seller entitled to resell the goods must give the defaulted buyer reasonable notice of the intention to resell at a private sale [Com Code § 2706(3)].

Distinguish:

The seller need not notify the defaulted buyer of the time and place of the private sale, whereas such notice may be required for a public sale [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 8 (1962)].

➡ Cross References:

Notification requirement for public sale, see 26.13[3][b].

Discussion and form for notice of resale, see California Legal Forms, § 52.482 (Matthew Bender).

26.13[3][b] Public Sale Normally Requires Notice of Time and Place. A seller entitled to resell the goods must give the defaulted buyer reasonable notice of the time and place of a public resale [Com Code § 2706(4)(b)]; that is, a sale by auction [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 8 (1962)].

Exception--Perishable Goods or Declining Value:

The seller need not give the notice if the goods are perishable or threaten to decline in value speedily [Com Code § 2706(4)(b)].

➡ Cross Reference:

Notice of resale, see California Legal Forms, § 52.482 (Matthew Bender).

26.13[3][c] Public Sale Notice Must State Off-Site Location of Goods. If the goods are not to be within the view of those attending the sale at the place stated in the notice, the notice must state the place where the goods are located and provide for their reasonable inspection by prospective bidders [Com Code § 2706(4)(c)].

26.13[4] Public Sale Is Subject to Special Rules.

26.13[4][a] Only Identified Goods Can Be Sold. Normally only identified goods can be sold at public sale [Com Code § 2706(4)(a)].

Exception--Futures Market Exists:

If there is a recognized market for a public sale of futures in goods of the kind, then the goods can be sold in that market [see Com Code § 2706(4)(a)].

Strategic Point--Seller:

The seller may use this remedy when the buyer is guilty of anticipatory repudiation of a contract for future goods, before the goods or some of them have come into existence. The seller may then exercise the right of resale, and so fix damages, by "one or more contracts to sell" [see Com Code § 2706(2); see also 26.13[2][a]] the quantity of conforming future goods affected by the repudiation. If the buyer is guilty of anticipatory breach after the goods have come into existence, and the goods conform to the contract, their resale will fix the seller's damages as satisfactorily as if they had been identified before the breach [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 7 (1962)].

26.13[4][b] Sale Must Be at Usual Place or Market. A public sale of goods must be made at a usual place or market for public sale if one is reasonably available [Com Code § 2706(4)(b)].

26.13[4][c] Seller May Buy. The seller may buy goods sold at a public sale [Com Code § 2706(4)(d)].

Strategic Point--Buyer:

The seller's purchase of the goods benefits the defaulted buyer by tending to increase the resale price and thus decreasing the damages the buyer will have to pay [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 9 (1962)].

26.13[5] Good Faith Buyer Gets Clear Title. A buyer who buys in good faith at the resale takes the goods free of any rights of the defaulted buyer, even if the seller failed to comply with any of the requirements of Com Code § 2706 [Com Code § 2706(5)].

26.13[6] Seller Keeps Any Profit From Resale. The seller is not accountable to the buyer for any profit made on the resale [Com Code § 2706(6)].

Consider:

The seller retains any profit from the resale, without distinction based on whether or not the seller had a lien. Therefore, if a person "in the position of a seller" [see Com Code § 2707] or a buyer pursuing the buyer's remedies [see Com Code § 2711] exercises the right of resale under Com Code § 2706, the resale is only for the limited purpose of obtaining cash for a security interest in the goods. Once that purpose has been accomplished, any excess in the resale price belongs to the seller, to whom an accounting must be made [see Com Code § 2706, UCC § 2-706, official cmt 11 (1962)].

26.14 Third Person in Position of Seller Has Similar Remedies.

26.14[1] Remedies Protect Person With Interest Similar to Seller's. A "person in the position of a seller" is any person that holds a security interest in the goods or has some other right in the goods similar to that of a seller. As against a principal, an agent who has paid or become responsible for the price of the goods on behalf of the principal is a person in the position of a seller [Com Code § 2707(1)].

26.14[2] Person May Withhold Goods, Stop Delivery, Resell, and Recover Damages. A person in the position of a seller may withhold or stop delivery, resell, and recover incidental damages, as provided in Division 2 of the Commercial Code [Com Code § 2707(2); see Com Code §§ 2705, 2706, 2710 (withholding and stopping delivery; reselling; recovering incidental damages)].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
III. PURSUING SELLER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.16

26.16 Options and Strategies.

The seller's choice of judicial remedy will depend on whether the seller retained, and resold, any of the goods after the buyer's breach [see 26.13].

If all of the goods were delivered, and the buyer's breach consists merely of nonpayment, then the seller's remedy usually is an action for the contract price [see 26.19[2]]. That remedy is not available in all cases, however; and the seller might instead have to sue for damages for nonacceptance [see 26.19[3]].

In a case of the buyer's nonacceptance of goods, or repudiation of the contract, the seller's judicial remedy depends on whether the seller resold any of the goods:

- As to goods that were resold, the seller's remedy is to recover the difference between the resale price and the contract price [see 26.19[1]].
- As to goods that the seller could not resell, or elected not to resell, the seller's remedy is to recover the market-price differential--that is, the difference between the market price of the goods (at the time and place for tender) and the contract price [see 26.17].
- However, if recovery of the market-price differential would not put the seller in as good a position as if the buyer had performed, the seller may be entitled to recover lost profit instead [see 26.18].

In all cases, the seller may recover incidental damages [see 26.20].

 III. PURSUING SELLER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.17

26.17 Market Can Determine Damages for Buyer's Nonacceptance or Repudiation.

26.17[1] Seller Is Entitled to Market-Price Differential. If the buyer wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of the goods, or repudiated with respect to a part or the whole, then with respect to any goods directly affected and, if the breach was of the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], then with respect to the whole undelivered balance, the seller may recover [Com Code §§ 2703(e), 2708(1)]:

- The difference between the market price at the time and place for tender and the unpaid contract price; and
- Any incidental damages provided in Division 2 of the Commercial Code [see Com Code § 2710], less expenses saved in consequence of the buyer's breach.

Exception:

This measure of damages is appropriate insofar as the seller was not able, or elected not to try, to resell the goods [see Com Code § 2703(d), (e)]. If the seller resold any of the goods [see 26.13], then the seller's damages, with respect to those goods, will be measured by the contract price [Com Code § 2706(1); see 26.19[1]].

Strategic Point:

If the market-price differential measure of damages would be inadequate, then damages could be measured instead by the seller's lost profit [see Com Code § 2708(2); see also 26.18].

Jury Instructions:

Seller's Damages for Buyer's Nonacceptance or Repudiation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.252 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Seller's incidental damages, see 26.20.

26.17[2] Proof of Market Price Depends on Facts.

26.17[2][a] Market Price at Time of Repudiation May Be Relevant. If the action is based on anticipatory repudiation and comes to trial before the time for performance with respect to some or all of the goods, then the seller's damages based on market price [see Com Code § 2708] must be determined according to the price of the goods prevailing when the seller learned of the repudiation [Com Code § 2723(1)].

26.17[2][b] Market Price at Any Reasonable Time and Place May Be Relevant. If evidence of a price prevailing at the times and places that otherwise would be applicable is not readily available, the price prevailing within any reasonable time before or after the time described, or at any other place that in commercial judgment or under usage of trade would serve as a reasonable substitute for the one described may be used, making any proper allowance for the cost of transporting the goods to or from that other place [Com Code § 2723(2)].

Prerequisite--Notice of Evidence of Market Price:

Evidence of a relevant price prevailing at a time or place other than the one that otherwise would be applicable is not admissible unless and until the party offering the evidence has given the other party such notice as the court finds sufficient to prevent unfair surprise [Com Code § 2723(3)].

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of proof of price, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.77 (Matthew Bender).

26.17[2][c] Published Market Quotations Are Admissible. Whenever the prevailing price or value of any goods regularly bought and sold in any established commodity market is in issue, reports in official publications or trade journals or in newspapers or periodicals of general circulation published as the reports of the market are admissible in evidence. The circumstances of the preparation of the report may be shown to affect its weight but not its admissibility [Com Code § 2724].

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.18

26.18 Lost Profit Fixes Damages When Market-Price Differential Fails.

If the seller would be entitled to the market price measure of damages [see Com Code § 2708(1); see also 26.17], but it would be inadequate to put the seller in as good a position as performance would have done, the seller may recover [Com Code §§ 2703(e), 2708(2)]:

- The profit (including reasonable overhead) that the seller would have made from full performance by the buyer; and
- Any incidental damages provided in Division 2 of the Commercial Code [see Com Code § 2710], with:
 - ☐ Due allowance to the seller for costs reasonably incurred; and
 - ☐ Due credit to the buyer for payments or proceeds of resale.

Exception--Lost-Volume Seller Need Not Account for Resale:

When the seller is a so-called lost-volume seller, Com Code § 2708 permits the recovery of lost profits without an offsetting credit for the proceeds of a resale. A lost-volume seller is a seller whose "resale" of the affected goods would have been made regardless of the buyer's breach [National Controls, Inc. v. Commodore Bus. Machs., Inc. (1985) 163 CA3d 688, 697, 209 CR 636]. In other words, if the defaulted buyer had performed, the seller would have realized a profit from two sales.

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
III. PURSUING SELLER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR BUYER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.19

26.19 Contract Price Is Measure of Damages in Other Cases.

26.19[1] Seller Can Recover Contract-Price Differential After Reselling Goods. If the seller elected to resell any of the goods after the buyer's breach [see Com Code § 2703(d)], and the resale was made in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner [see 26.13], then with respect to the goods resold, the seller may recover [Com Code § 2706(1)]:

- The difference between the resale price and the contract price; and
- Any incidental damages allowed under Division 2 of the Commercial Code [see Com Code § 2710], less expenses saved in consequence of the buyer's breach.

Jury Instructions:

Seller's Damages Recoverable After Resale, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.251 (Matthew Bender).

► Cross Reference:

Seller's incidental damages, see 26.20.

26.19[2] Seller Can Recover Contract Price After Buyer's Nonpayment.

26.19[2][a] Price Is Recoverable in Specified Circumstances. If the buyer failed to make a payment due on or before delivery, then with respect to any goods directly affected and, if the breach is of the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], then with respect to the whole undelivered balance, the seller may recover all of the following [Com Code § 2703(e)]:

- The price of goods accepted [Com Code § 2709(1)(a); see 26.19[2][b]]; and
- The price of conforming goods lost or damaged within a commercially reasonable time after risk of their loss passed to the buyer [Com Code § 2709(1)(a)]; and
- The price of goods identified to the contract, if either [Com Code § 2709(1)(b)]:

- ☐ The seller was unable after reasonable effort to resell them at a reasonable price; or
- ☐ The circumstances reasonably indicate that an effort to do so would have been unavailing.

The seller also may recover any incidental damages provided in Division 2 of the Commercial Code [Com Code §§ 2709, 2710].

Warning--Exclusive List:

In the list of circumstances entitling the seller to recover the contract price, Com Code § 2709 is exhaustive with respect to when an action for the price lies [see Com Code § 2709, UCC § 2-709, official cmt 6 (1962)].

Example:

Damages under Com Code § 2709(1)(b) were appropriate in a suit by a manufacturer of shipping containers. On receipt of the first part of the order, the buyer returned the containers as defective and refused to pay. The seller unsuccessfully attempted to resell the containers. The jury found that the containers were not defective, and the buyer was liable for the full purchase price [Ultralite Container Corp. v. American President Lines, Ltd. (7th Cir 1999) 170 F3d 784, 787 (applying California law)].

Distinguish:

An action for the price generally is limited to those cases in which resale of the goods is impracticable, except when the buyer accepted the goods, or when they were destroyed after the risk of loss passed to the buyer [see Com Code § 2709, UCC § 2-709, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Strategic Point:

If the action for the price fails, the seller may nevertheless have proved a case for damages for nonacceptance, which could be recovered in the same action [see Com Code § 2709(3); Com Code § 2709, UCC § 2-709, official cmt 7 (1962); see also 26.19[3]].

Jury Instructions:

Seller's Action for Contract Price, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.250 (Matthew Bender).

26.19[2][b] Price Is Recoverable for Goods Accepted. Goods "accepted" by the buyer, for the purpose of fixing the seller's damages [see Com Code § 2709(1)(a); see also 26.19[2][a]], include only goods as to which there has been no justified revocation of acceptance, because revocation means that there has been a default by the seller, which would bar the seller's right to damages under Com Code § 2709 [see Com Code § 2709, UCC § 2-709, official cmt 5 (1962)].

26.19[2][c] Seller Must Hold Undelivered Goods for Buyer. When the seller sues for the price, the seller must hold for the buyer any goods that have been identified to the contract and are still in the seller's control [Com Code § 2709(2)].

Exception:

If resale becomes possible, the seller may resell the goods at any time before collecting a judgment. The net proceeds of that resale must be credited to the buyer. Payment of the judgment entitles the buyer to any goods not resold [Com Code § 2709(2)].

26.19[3] Seller May Instead Recover Damages for Nonacceptance. After the buyer has wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of the goods, or has failed to make a payment due, or has repudiated [see Com Code § 2610], if the seller is held not entitled to the price under Com Code § 2709, the seller nevertheless must be awarded damages for nonacceptance under Com Code § 2708 [Com Code § 2709(3)].

Cross Reference:

Seller's damages for nonacceptance, see 26.17, 26.18.

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.20

26.20 Seller Recovers Incidental Damages.

The seller is entitled to recover incidental damages in every case [see Com Code §§ 2703, 2706(1), 2708, 2709(1)]. Incidental damages to the seller include any commercially reasonable charges, expenses, and commissions resulting from the buyer's breach, including such amounts incurred in [Com Code § 2710]:

- Stopping of delivery of the goods.
- Transportation, care, and custody of the goods after the buyers' breach.
- Return or resale of the goods.

IV. PURSUING BUYER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.22

26.22 Options and Strategies.

The buyer's self-help options under the Commercial Code are limited.

One option is to cancel the contract [see 26.23].

If substitute goods can be obtained elsewhere, the buyer may try to effect "cover"; however, the buyer is not required to do so, but may, instead, simply sue for damages [Com Code § 2711(1)(a), 2712(1); see 26.24].

If the buyer has possession of any goods after rightful rejection or revocation of acceptance, the buyer has a security interest in those goods, to the extent necessary to recoup payments made and incidental expenses; and the buyer may resell those goods in order to cash out that security interest [Com Code § 2711(3); see 26.25[1]].

In any case, the buyer is entitled to deduct damages, resulting from the seller's breach, from any payments still due under the same contract [Com Code § 2717; see 26.25[2]].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
IV. PURSUING BUYER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.23

26.23 Contract Can Be Canceled.

26.23[1] Buyer May Cancel for Any Breach by Seller. The buyer may cancel the contract with respect to any goods involved, and with respect to the whole if the breach of the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)] if any of the following occur [Com Code § 2711(1)]:

- The seller fails to make delivery.
- The seller repudiates the contract.
- The buyer rightfully rejects or justifiably revokes acceptance.

Example:

When a seller breaches the implied warranty of merchantability under the Song-Beverly Credit Card Act of 1971 [see CC § 1794(b)(1)], the buyer is entitled to cancel the contract and recover as much of the price as has been paid. The seller is not entitled to require the buyer to allow repairs to be made in lieu of that remedy [Mocek v. Alfa Leisure, Inc. (2003) 114 CA4th 402, 407-408].

➡ Cross Reference:

Breach of warranty under the Commercial Code and the Song-Beverly Act, see Ch. 24, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Warranty.

26.23[2] Buyer Does Not Renounce Claim for Damages. Unless the contrary intention clearly appears, expressions of "cancellation" or "rescission" of the contract or the like are not construed as a renunciation or discharge of the buyer's claim for damages for the seller's breach [Com Code § 2720].

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.24

26.24 Buyer May Obtain "Cover" Goods Elsewhere.

26.24[1] Buyer May Cover by Finding Substitute Goods. If the seller fails to make delivery or repudiates the contract, the buyer may "cover" by making, in good faith and without unreasonable delay, any reasonable acquisition of, or contract to buy, goods in substitution for the goods due and undelivered from the seller [Com Code §§ 2711(1)(a), 2712(1)].

Distinguish--Merchant and Consumer:

Com Code § 2712 applies not only to merchants but also to the consumer buyer. The domestic or nonmerchant consumer is required only to act in normal good faith, while the merchant buyer also must observe all reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing in the trade [see Com Code § 2712, UCC § 2-712, official cmt 4 (1962)].

Strategic Point:

The buyer need not necessarily use the cheapest or most effective method of cover. The test of proper cover is whether, at the time and place, the buyer acted in good faith and in a reasonable manner [see Com Code § 2712, UCC § 2-712, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Timing:

The buyer is entitled to spend sufficient time to discover the best method for cover. The requirement that the buyer must cover "without unreasonable delay" is not intended to limit the time necessary to do so [see Com Code § 2712, UCC § 2-712, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of buyer's remedy by covering, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.76 (Matthew Bender); or California Legal Forms, § 52.352 (Matthew Bender).

26.24[2] Cover May Entail Different Terms, Multiple Contracts, and Similar Goods. "Cover" includes all of the following [see Com Code § 2712, UCC § 2-712, official cmt 2 (1962)]:

- A series of contracts or sales, or a single contract or sale.
- Goods not identical with those involved but commercially usable as reasonable substitutes under the circumstances of the particular case.
- Contracts on credit or delivery terms differing from the contract in breach, but reasonable under the circumstances.

26.24[3] Buyer Need Not First Cover Before Using Other Remedies. Failure of the buyer to effect cover within the provisions of Com Code § 2712 does not bar the buyer from any other remedy [Com Code § 2712(3)].

Warning:

The recovery of consequential damages [see Com Code § 2715(2)(a)] is limited by the damages that could have been obviated by effecting cover under Com Code § 2712 [see Com Code § 2712, UCC § 2-712, official cmt 3 (1962)].

Cross Reference:

Consequential damages, see 26.34.

26.24[4] Buyer May Replevy Goods on Failing to Cover. The buyer may replevy the undelivered goods if, after reasonable effort, the buyer was unable to effect cover [see Com Code § 2716(3)].

Cross Reference:

Buyer's judicial remedy of replevin, see 26.30.

IV. PURSUING BUYER'S SELF-HELP REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.25

26.25 Payments and Incidental Damages Can Be Recouped.

26.25[1] Buyer Has Security Interest in Goods in Possession. On rightful rejection or justifiable revocation of acceptance, the buyer has a security interest in goods in the buyer's possession or control, for any payments made on the price and any expenses reasonably incurred in inspection, receipt, transportation, care, and custody of the goods [Com Code § 2711(3)].

Strategic Point:

The buyer then is in the same position as the seller when the seller has withheld delivery, and the buyer has the same right to resell the goods. However, because the buyer's interest in the goods is limited, the buyer must account for any excess resale proceeds, over the amount of the buyer's security interest [see Com Code §§ 2706(6), 2711(3)].

Cross Reference:

Seller's resale of goods withheld from delivery, see 26.13.

26.25[2] Buyer May Deduct Damages From Payments Due.

26.25[2][a] Notice to Seller Is Required. The buyer, on notifying the seller of the buyer's intention to do so, may deduct all or any part of the buyer's damages resulting from the seller's breach of the contract from any part of the price still due under the same contract [Com Code § 2717].

Warning--Notice Required to Avoid Default:

The notice is required in order to avoid a default within the meaning of Com Code § 2609, regarding insecurity and the right to assurances [see Com Code § 2717, UCC § 2-717, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Example:

An aircraft manufacturing company sold a helicopter and spraying equipment to a seed company, which experienced problems with the helicopter that resulted in its loss in a fire. The buyer promptly notified the seller of the incident, then stopped payment on the balance of the promissory note for the purchase price and sent a written notice of breach of express and implied warranties. The seller sued for the balance on the note, and the buyer counter-complained for product liability, breach of warranty, and negligence. The trial court rendered judgment in favor of both parties on their claims, setting off the buyer's recovery from the seller's, which resulted in a $5,000 judgment for the seller, including interest from the date of default to the date of judgment. The appellate court stated that under Com Code § 2717, a buyer, on notification to the seller, may deduct from the amount still owing under the contract the amount of damages flowing from the seller's breach. The buyer was entitled to deduct damages from the amount owing on the balance of the purchase price on the date the helicopter was destroyed. Inasmuch as the helicopter and spray equipment were completely destroyed, the buyer was deprived of the usual remedy of using the goods and discounting the price to the extent the goods did not live up to expectations. The buyer therefore acted reasonably in refusing to make payments on the note pending a judicial determination of the parties' rights and liabilities. The seller was not entitled to interest from the date of default to the date of judgment. Having breached the contract by selling a defective product, the seller was not entitled to recover more than the original purchase price merely because substantial time elapsed between date of breach and date of judgment [Hughes Tool Co. v. Max Hinrichs Seed Co. (1980) 112 CA3d 194, 202-203, 169 CR 160].

26.25[2][b] Notice Need Not Be Formal. No formality of notice is required under Com Code § 2717. Any language that reasonably indicates the buyer's reason for withholding payment is sufficient [see Com Code § 2717, UCC § 2-717, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

*2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.2726.27 Options and Strategies.

A buyer's options for a judicial remedy are determined by the nature of the seller's breach and what the buyer did.

If the buyer did not receive all goods according to the contract--whether because the seller failed to make delivery or repudiated, or because the buyer rightfully rejected goods or revoked acceptance--the buyer has these options:

- An action to recover any payments made, together with either:
 - ☐ The cost of effecting cover [see 26.28]; or
 - ☐ Damages for nondelivery, if the buyer elected not to cover [see 26.29].
- An action to replevy the goods, because it was not possible to effect cover [see 26.30].
- An action to recover goods identified to the contract, without any attempt to effect cover (a special case) [see 26.31].
- An action for specific performance, in an appropriate case [see 26.32].

If the buyer accepted goods under a nonconforming tender, the buyer may sue for damages resulting from the nonconformity of tender [see 26.33].

In all cases, unless the contract effectively provides otherwise [see 26.03], the buyer may also recover incidental and consequential damages [see 26.34].

Strategic Point:

Once the seller has breached the contract by tendering nonconforming goods, the seller nevertheless could make a timely tender of conforming goods [see Com Code § 2508], which would effectively preclude the buyer's remedies under Com Code § 2711, except for any delay involved [see Com Code § 2711, UCC § 2-711, official cmt 1 (1962)].

Timing:

The buyer's action must be commenced within four years of the accrual of the cause of action [Com Code § 2725; see 26.04].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.28

26.28 Buyer Can Recover Costs for "Cover" Goods.

26.28[1] Buyer Can Cover and Have Damages. If the buyer rightfully rejects the goods or justifiably revokes acceptance, then with respect to any goods involved, and with respect to the whole if the breach goes to the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], the buyer may recover as much of the price as has been paid, and may also cover and have damages under Com Code § 2712 as to all of the goods affected, whether or not they have been identified to the contract [Com Code § 2711(1)(a)].

26.28[2] Cost of Cover Fixes Damages. The buyer may recover from the seller as damages [Com Code § 2712(2)]:

- The difference between the cost of cover and the contract price; and
- Any incidental or consequential damages [see Com Code § 2715], less expenses saved in consequence of the seller's breach.

Consider:

This measure of damages is appropriate even when the buyer ultimately is able to pass any additional costs to other persons. However, in the typical case, a timely covering purchase by the buyer will preclude incidental and consequential damages [KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 CA4th 376, 383-384, 42 CR2d 286].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.29

26.29 Market Fixes Damages When Buyer Sues Without Covering.

26.29[1] Buyer Is Entitled to Market-Price Differential. If the seller fails to make delivery or repudiates, or the buyer rightfully rejects the goods or justifiably revokes acceptance, then with respect to any goods involved, and with respect to the whole if the breach goes to the whole contract [see Com Code § 2612 (breach of installment contract)], the buyer need not try to effect cover, but instead may sue and recover any or all of the following [Com Code §§ 2711(1)(b), 2712(3), 2713(1)]:

- As much of the price as has been paid.
- The difference between the market price at the time the buyer learned of the breach and the contract price.
- Incidental and consequential damages provided in Com Code § 2715 [see 26.34], less expenses saved in consequence of the seller's breach.

Strategic Points:

■ Com Code § 2713 provides a remedy that is completely alternative to the cover-and-sue remedy under Com Code § 2712 [see 26.24, 26.28]. This remedy applies only when and to the extent that the buyer has not covered [see Com Code § 2713, UCC § 2-713, official cmt 5 (1962)].

■ Whereas the cover-and-sue remedy under Com Code § 2712 will often put the buyer in the same economic position that performance would have, the market-price differential under Com Code § 2713 bears no necessary relation to the change in the buyer's position that the breach caused. It is possible that this differential might yield the buyer a handsome sum even though the breach actually saved the buyer money in the long run (for instance, when a middleman buyer's resale markets dried up after the breach). It is also possible that the buyer's lost profit from resale or consumption would be greater than the cost of cover plus incidental damages [see KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 CA4th 376, 386,

42 CR2d 286].

Exception:

Com Code § 1305(a) (former Com Code § 1106(1)) could limit the buyer's recovery to the actual loss if the following conditions exist [Allied Canners & Packers, Inc. v. Victor Packing Co. (1984) 162 CA3d 905, 915, 209 CR 60]:

- The seller knew that the buyer had a resale contract;
- The buyer was not liable to the resale buyers; and
- The seller did not act in bad faith.

Jury Instructions:

Buyer's Damages for Seller's Nondelivery or Repudiation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.257 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of buyer's measure of damages for nondelivery, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.76 (Matthew Bender); or California Legal Forms, § 52.18 (Matthew Bender).

26.29[2] Proof of Market Price Depends on Facts.

26.29[2][a] Market Price at Time of Repudiation May Be Relevant. If the action is based on anticipatory repudiation and comes to trial before the time for performance with respect to some or all of the goods, then the buyer's damages based on market price [see Com Code § 2713] must be determined according to the price of the goods prevailing when the buyer learned of the repudiation [Com Code § 2723(1)].

26.29[2][b] Market Price at Place for Tender or Place of Arrival May Be Relevant. For the purpose of determining the buyer's damages, the market price is to be determined as of the place for tender or, in a case of rejection after arrival or revocation of acceptance, as of the place of arrival [Com Code § 2713(2)].

26.29[2][c] Market Price at Any Reasonable Time and Place May Be Relevant. If evidence of a price prevailing at the times and places that otherwise would be applicable is not readily available, the price prevailing within any reasonable time before or after the time described, or at any other place that in commercial judgment or under usage of trade would serve as a reasonable substitute for the one described may be used, making any proper allowance for the cost of transporting the goods to or from that other place [Com Code § 2723(2)].

Prerequisite--Notice of Evidence of Market Price:

Evidence of a relevant price prevailing at a time or place other than the one that otherwise would be applicable is not admissible unless and until the party offering the evidence has given the other party such notice as the court finds sufficient to prevent unfair surprise [Com Code § 2723(3)].

Strategic Point:

When no market price is available, evidence of spot-sale prices is proper. When there is no available market price because of a scarcity of goods of the type involved, a good case normally is made for specific performance [see Com Code § 2716; see also 26.32]. Alternatively, scarcity would indicate that the price has risen, and under Com Code § 1305(a), which provides for liberal administration of remedies, opinion evidence as to the value of the goods should be admissible in the absence of a market price. Moreover, a liberal construction of allowable consequential damages should result [see Com Code § 2713, UCC § 2-713, official cmt 3 (1962)].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of proof of price, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.77 (Matthew Bender).

26.29[2][d] Published Market Quotations Are Admissible. Whenever the prevailing price or value of any goods regularly bought and sold in any established commodity market is in issue, reports in official publications, trade journals, or in newspapers or periodicals of general circulation published as the reports of the market, are admissible in evidence. The circumstances of the preparation of the report may be shown to affect its weight, but not its admissibility [Com Code § 2724].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.30

26.30 Buyer Unable to Cover Can Replevy Goods.

26.30[1] Goods Must Be Identified to Contract. When the seller failed to deliver or repudiated, the buyer has a right of replevin [see generally CCP § 511.010 et seq. (claim and delivery)]--that is, the right to obtain possession of the property--for goods identified to the contract if any of the following circumstances exist [Com Code §§ 2711(2)(b), 2716(3)]:

- After reasonable effort, the buyer was unable to effect cover for those goods.
- The circumstances reasonably indicate that such an effort would have been unavailing.
- The goods were shipped under reservation, and satisfaction of the security interest in them was made or tendered.

Prerequisite:

The buyer must be able to prove that effecting cover was impossible, or that the attempt would have been unsuccessful, or that satisfaction of a security interest was made or tendered. However, the buyer's right of replevin does not depend on the buyer tendering any unpaid balance of the price [In re G. Paoletti, Inc. (ND Cal 1997) 205 BR 251, 260].

Strategic Point:

The buyer may replevy the goods irrespective of the situs of title [see Com Code § 2716, UCC § 2-716, official cmt 3 (1962)].

Distinguish--Negotiable Document of Title Outstanding:

If a negotiable document of title is outstanding [see generally Com Code § 7602], the buyer's right of replevin relates to the document, rather than directly to the goods [see Com Code § 2716, UCC § 2-716, official cmt 5 (1962)].

Cross References:

Effecting cover as buyer's self-help remedy, see 26.24.

Discussion of action for claim and delivery, see Matthew Bender[(R)] Practice Guide: California Pretrial Civil Procedure, Ch. 20, Claim and Delivery; or California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery (Matthew Bender).

26.30[2] Buyer of Consumer Goods Has Special Right. In the case of goods bought for personal, family, or household purposes, the buyer's right of replevin vests on acquisition of a special property by identification of the goods to the contract [see 26.31[2] (acquisition of special property in goods)], even if the seller had not then repudiated or failed to deliver [Com Code § 2716(3)].

Strategic Point:

The buyer in the above case might then recover the goods under Com Code § 2502 [see Com Code § 2716, UCC § 2-716, official cmt 3 (1962); see also 26.31].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.31

26.31 Buyer Can Recover "Identified" Goods If They Are Consumer Goods or Seller Became Insolvent.

26.31[1] Buyer's Right Dependent on Satisfaction of Statutory Conditions. If the seller failed to deliver or repudiated the contract, the buyer can recover the goods from the seller if all of the following conditions are satisfied [see Com Code § 2711(2)(a)]:

- The buyer either [Com Code § 2502(1)]:
 - ☐ Paid all of the price; or
 - ☐ Paid part of the price and made and kept good a tender of the unpaid portion of the price.
- Either [Com Code § 2502(1)]:
 - ☐ The goods are consumer goods (that is, they were bought for personal, family, or household purposes); or
 - ☐ The seller became insolvent within 10 days after receipt of the first installment on the price.
- The goods conform to the contract [Com Code § 2502(3)].
- The buyer acquired a special property in the goods by identification of existing goods to the contract [Com Code § 2502(1); see 26.31[2]].

26.31[2] Buyer Obtains Special Property by Identifying Existing Goods. The buyer obtains a special property in goods by identifying existing goods as goods to which the contract refers, even if the identified goods are nonconforming and the buyer has an option to reject them. The identification that is necessary and sufficient to create the buyer's special property in the goods can be made at any time and in any manner explicitly agreed to by the parties.

In the absence of explicit agreement, identification occurs at the following times [Com Code § 2501(1)]:

- If the contract is for the sale of goods already existing and identified, identification occurs when the contract is made.
- If the contract is for the sale of unborn young or future crops, identification occurs when the crops are planted or otherwise become growing crops or the young are conceived.
- If the contract is for the sale of any other kind of future goods, identification occurs when the goods are shipped, marked, or otherwise designated by the seller as goods to which the contract refers.

Strategic Point:

If the goods are consumer goods, the buyer's right to recover the goods vests on acquisition of the buyer's special property in the goods, even if the seller has not then repudiated or failed to deliver [Com Code § 2502(2)].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of recovery of identified goods, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.76 (Matthew Bender).

V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.32

26.32 Buyer Can Obtain Specific Performance in Proper Case.

If the seller failed to deliver or repudiated the contract, specific performance may be decreed either [Com Code §§ 2711(2)(b), 2716(1)]:

- When the goods are unique; or
- In other proper circumstances.

Example--Unique Goods:

Output and requirements contracts involving a particular or peculiarly available source or market are examples of the typical commercial specific performance situation for unique goods. The test of uniqueness must be made in terms of the total situation that characterizes the contract [see Com Code § 2716, UCC § 2-716, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Example--Other Proper Circumstances:

The buyer's inability to cover is strong evidence of other proper circumstances that would support specific performance [see Com Code § 2716, UCC § 2-716, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Strategic Point--Damages and Other Relief:

The decree for specific performance may include any terms and conditions as to payment of the price, damages, or other relief that the court deems just [Com Code § 2716(2)].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.33

26.33 Buyer Can Recover Damages for Nonconformity of Tender.

26.33[1] Notice of Nonconformity Is Required. If the buyer accepted goods and gave sufficient notice to the seller [see Com Code § 2607(3)(A)], the buyer may recover the following for any "nonconformity of tender" [Com Code § 2714(1), (3); see Com Code § 2714, UCC § 2-714, official cmt 1 (1962) (it is assumed that time for revocation of acceptance passed)]:

- The loss resulting in the ordinary course of events from the seller's breach, as determined in any manner that is reasonable; and
- In a proper case, any incidental and consequential damages under Com Code § 2715 [see 26.34].

Prerequisite--Notice:

Once the buyer has accepted tender of the goods, the buyer, within a reasonable time after the buyer discovers or should have discovered the seller's breach, must notify the seller of the breach; otherwise, the buyer is barred from any remedy [Com Code § 2607(3)(A)].

Timing:

The time of notification is determined by applying commercial standards to a merchant buyer. A reasonable time for notification from a retail consumer is judged by different standards, so that in the consumer's case it will be extended. The rule of requiring notification is designed to defeat commercial bad faith, not to deprive a good faith consumer of a remedy [Com Code § 2607, UCC § 2-607, official cmt 4 (1962)].

Strategic Point:

The content of the notice need merely be sufficient to let the seller know that the transaction is still troublesome and must be watched. It is not necessary that there be a clear statement of all the buyer's objections, nor that there be a claim for damages or notice of any threatened litigation or other resort to a remedy. The notice is sufficient if it informs the seller that the transaction is claimed to involve a breach [Com Code § 2607, UCC § 2-607, official cmt 4 (1962)].

Judge's Perspective:

The reason the buyer is required to give timely notice of breach is to avoid unnecessary damages and unnecessary litigation. Moreover, if the claim must be litigated, timely notice will allow the seller to gather evidence to support his or her position while the evidence is still fresh. "The requirement of notice of breach is based on a sound commercial rule designed to allow the defendant opportunity for repairing the defective item, reducing damages, avoiding defective products in the future, and negotiating settlements. The notice requirement also protects against stale claims" [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 C3d 374, 380, 115 CR 648, 525 P2d 88].

Consider:

"Nonconformity of tender" includes not only breaches of warranties (that is, nonconforming goods) but also any other failure of the seller to perform obligations according to the contract [see Com Code § 2714, UCC § 2-714, official cmt 2 (1962)].

Strategic Point:

If the buyer still owes part of the purchase price, the buyer could deduct some or all of the damages from the amount still owed [see Com Code § 2717; see also 26.25]. That self-help remedy can be used in conjunction with a suit for the damages [see Com Code § 2714, UCC § 2-714, official cmt 1 (1962)].

Jury Instructions:

Buyer's Damages for Accepted Goods and for Breach of Warranty, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.258 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Discussion of buyer's measure of damages for nonconforming goods, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.76 (Matthew Bender).

Discussion and form for notice of breach discovered after acceptance, see California Legal Forms, § 52.386 (Matthew Bender).

26.33[2] Value of Goods Fixes Damages for Breach of Warranty. The measure of the buyer's damages for breach of warranty is the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted [Com Code § 2714(2)].

Exception:

This formula does not apply if special circumstances show proximate damages of a different amount [Com Code § 2714(2)].

Strategic Point:

Although this difference-in-value standard is the usual method, and is a reasonable method, of ascertaining damages for breach of warranty, it is not exclusive [see Com Code § 2714, UCC § 2-714, official cmt 3 (1962)].

Examples:

■ A consumer bought a $24,000 piano from a retail store, using an installment sale contract with a finance company. The buyer attempted to cancel the contract after a protracted attempt to have serious defects repaired. The contract stated: "Any holder of this consumer credit contract is subject to all claims and defenses which the debtor [buyer] could assert against the seller of goods or services obtained pursuant hereto, or with the proceeds hereof." The seller and manufacturer offered to replace the piano but refused to cancel the contract and refund the amount the buyer had already paid. The buyer sold the piano for $7,000 and stopped making payments. The finance company sued the buyer for breach of contract; and the buyer cross-complained for breach of warranty. The buyer was entitled to cancel the contract and recover specified damages in addition to recovering any amounts paid toward the purchase price [see CC §§ 1791.1(d), 1794(b); Com Code § 2711]. The jury found breaches of warranty, including the implied warranty of merchantability; therefore, the finance company could not recover the unpaid balance on the loan because it stood in the same position as the seller [Music Acceptance Corp. v. Lofing (1995) 32 CA4th 610, 622, 39 CR2d 159].

■ The measure of a grower's damages for breach of warranty based on nonconforming fruit trees that were diseased when purchased was not limited to the difference between the value of the land as planted with the trees actually delivered and the value the land would have had if the warranted trees had been planted. Rather, the damages could be determined in any manner that is reasonable, and so damages could be based on lost profits from the nonconforming goods [Serian Bros., Inc. v. Agri-Sun Nursery (1994) 25 CA4th 306, 315, 30 CR2d 382].

Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
V. PURSUING BUYER'S JUDICIAL REMEDIES FOR SELLER'S BREACH

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.34

26.34 Buyer Can Recover Incidental and Consequential Damages.

26.34[1] Damages May Be Recoverable in Any Case.

26.34[1][a] Recoverable When Seller Did Not Tender Goods or Buyer Did Not Accept Tender. The buyer is entitled to recover incidental and consequential damages (in addition to compensatory damages), less expenses saved in consequence of the seller's breach, when the seller failed to make delivery or repudiated, or the buyer rightfully rejected or justifiably revoked acceptance, and the buyer either:

- Covered and now sues for resulting damages [Com Code §§ 2711(1)(a), 2712(2)]; or
- Did not cover and now sues for damages for nondelivery [Com Code §§ 2711(1)(b), 2713(1)].

► Cross References:

Compensatory damages after effecting cover, see 26.28.

Compensatory damages for nondelivery or repudiation without effecting cover, see 26.29.

Contract provision limiting or excluding consequential damages, see 26.03[5].

26.34[1][b] Recoverable When Buyer Accepted Goods After Nonconforming Tender. When the buyer accepted the goods and gave a sufficient notice of nonconformity of tender [see Com Code § 2607(3)(A)], the buyer is entitled, in a proper case, to recover incidental and consequential damages (in addition to compensatory damages) [Com Code § 2714(1), (3)].

► Cross References:

Meaning of, compensatory damages for, and requisite notice of, nonconformity of tender, see 26.33.

Contract provision limiting or excluding consequential damages, see 26.03[5].

26.34[2] Additional Expenses Generate Incidental Damages. Incidental damages resulting from the seller's breach include any reasonable expenses incident to the delay or other breach [Com Code § 2715(1)], such as [see Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 1 (1962) (list is illustrative, not exhaustive)]:

- If the buyer rightfully rejected the goods: any expenses reasonably incurred in inspection, receipt, transportation, and care and custody of the goods.

- If the buyer effected cover: any commercially reasonable charges, expenses, or commissions in connection with effecting cover.

Consider:

Incidental damages are intended to provide reimbursement if the buyer incurred reasonable expenses in connection with the handling of rightfully rejected goods or goods whose acceptance the buyer justifiably revoked, or in connection with effecting cover when the seller's breach lay in nonconformity of tender or nondelivery of the goods [Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 1 (1962)].

Jury Instructions:

Incidental Damages, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3242 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Reimbursement Damages--Consumer Goods, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3240 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Seller's Incidental Damages, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.254 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of buyer's incidental damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.76 (Matthew Bender); or California Legal Forms, § 52.353 (Matthew Bender).

26.34[3] Additional Foreseeable Losses Generate Consequential Damages.

26.34[3][a] Recoverable When Buyer Had Foreseeable Needs or Requirements. Consequential damages resulting from the seller's breach include any loss resulting from general or particular requirements and needs of which the seller at the time of contracting had reason to know, which could not reasonably be prevented by cover or otherwise [Com Code § 2715(2)(a)].

Prerequisite:

The buyer must make particular needs known to the seller, but the buyer usually does not have to make general needs known in order to charge the seller with knowledge [see Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 3 (1962)].

Example:

Amounts paid or owed to the buyer's financier have been held to be recoverable as consequential damages, when the seller knew of the loan [U.S. Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 CA3d 1431, 1454, 279 CR 533].

Strategic Points:

- A seller unwilling to take the risk of consequential damages can limit or exclude such damages by a contract provision [Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 3 (1962); see 26.03[5]]. Limitation of consequential damages when the loss is commercial is valid unless it is proved that the limitation is unconscionable [Com Code § 2719(3)].

- To recover consequential damages, the buyer must demonstrate that the buyer effected cover or reasonably tried to effect cover but failed [see R.B. Matthews, Inc. v. Transamerica Transp. Servs., Inc. (9th Cir 1991) 945 F2d 269, 275].

Jury Instructions:

Consequential Damages, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3243 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender).

Buyer's Consequential Damages, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.255 (Matthew Bender).

26.34[3][b] Buyer Must Show Extent of Loss. The buyer has the burden of proving the extent of loss to be covered by consequential damages, while the seller has the burden of proving the inadequacy of the buyer's efforts to mitigate consequential damages [Carnation Co. v. Olivet Egg Ranch (1986) 189 CA3d 809, 818, 229 CR 261].

Distinguish:

Although the burden of proving the extent of loss is on the buyer, Com Code § 1103(b) rejects any doctrine of certainty that would require mathematical precision in the proof of loss. Loss may be determined in any manner that is reasonable under the circumstances [see Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 4 (1962)].

Warning:

The reference in Com Code § 2715(2)(a) to "any loss" means a monetary loss that the buyer actually incurred [Bishop v. Hyundai Motor Am. (1996) 44 CA4th 750, 756, 52 CR2d 134 (rejecting recovery by consumer for loss of use of car that was subject of lawsuit under Song-Beverly Credit Card Act, which references Com Code § 2715)].

26.34[3][c] Lost Profit on Resale Is Recoverable. If the seller knew that the buyer was in the business of reselling the goods, the seller is charged with knowledge that the buyer would be selling the goods in anticipation of a profit. Absent a contractual provision against consequential damages, a seller in breach therefore will always be liable for the buyer's resulting loss of profit [Sun Maid Raisin Growers v. Victor Packing Co. (1983) 146 CA3d 787, 791-792, 194 CR 612 ; see Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 6 (1962)].

Example:

A raisin producer repudiated a contract to sell 610 tons of raisins to the buyer after rains damaged the raisin-grape crop. The buyer attempted to cover but was able to obtain only 200 tons of comparable raisins. For the remaining 410 tons, the buyer had to purchase inferior raisins and recondition them at a substantial cost. The total cost of purchasing the 200 tons of high-quality raisins and purchasing and reconditioning the remaining 410 tons was $377,000 over the contract price. The trial court properly awarded the buyer, as consequential damages under Com Code § 2715, $295,000 for lost profits. The possibility of disastrous rains affecting the raisin-grape crop was foreseeable, and the producer knew that the buyer was buying the raisins for resale [see Sun Maid Raisin Growers v. Victor Packing Co. (1983) 146 CA3d 787, 791-792, 194 CR 612 ; see also Green Wood Industrial Co. v. Forceman Int'l Development Group, Inc. (2007) 156 CA4th 766, 774, 67 CR3d 624 (buyer who introduced substantial evidence of its purchase and resale prices was entitled to damages for lost profits)].

26.34[4] Injury to Person or Property From Breach of Warranty Generates Consequential Damages.

Consequential damages resulting from the seller's breach include injury to person or property proximately resulting from any breach of warranty [Com Code § 2715(2)(b)].

Consider:

If the injury followed the use of goods without discovery of the defect causing the harm, the question of proximate cause turns on whether or not it was reasonable for the buyer to use the goods without an inspection that would have revealed the defects. If it was not reasonable, or if the buyer did discover the defect before use, the injury would not proximately result from the breach of warranty [see Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 5 (1962)].

Example:

A buyer that accepted fruit trees that were diseased when purchased could properly recover lost profits as consequential damages for breach of an express warranty [see Serian Bros., Inc. v. Agri-Sun Nursery (1994) 25 CA4th 306, 315, 30 CR2d 382].

Distinguish:

Emotional distress damages are not available to a buyer in an action based on breach of a contract for the sale of an automobile, such as an action under the Song-Beverly Credit Card Act for violation of the refund-or-replace requirement [Kwan v. Mercedes-Benz of N. Am., Inc. (1994) 23 CA4th 174, 187-190, 28 CR2d 371 (referring to Com Code §§ 2711-2715)].

Strategic Point:

While the seller could raise the protection of a contract provision limiting or excluding consequential damages [see Com Code § 2719(3); Com Code § 2715, UCC § 2-715, official cmt 3 (1962); see also 26.03[5]], a limitation of consequential damages for injury to the person in the case of consumer goods is invalid unless it is proved that the limitation is not unconscionable [Com Code § 2719(3)].

VI. REDRESSING GRIEVANCES OTHER THAN BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.36

26.36 Options and Strategies.

The seller and buyer may pursue remedies apart from those for breach of contract. For example, an action for fraud is available in an appropriate case, which encompasses all remedies set forth in Com Code § 2701 et seq. (the chapter on remedies) [see Com Code § 2721]. Therefore, counsel for either the seller or the buyer should determine whether a fraud cause of action exists. Similarly, either party may bring an action against a third person that has dealt with the goods in such a way as to injure either the seller or buyer [see Com Code § 2722].

If the buyer is insolvent, the seller might pursue remedies that are available irrespective of whether there has been a breach [see Com Code § 2722].

In addition, a buyer in breach may obtain restitution of excess payments, if the buyer made payments covering more of the goods than the buyer actually received [Com Code § 2718(2)-(4)].

VI. REDRESSING GRIEVANCES OTHER THAN BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.37

26.37 Seller Can Withhold or Reclaim Goods From Insolvent Buyer.

26.37[1] Seller May Refuse Delivery Except for Cash and Stop Delivery. If the seller discovers the buyer to be insolvent, the seller may refuse delivery except for cash, including payment for all goods previously delivered under the contract, and may stop delivery under Com Code § 2705 [Com Code § 2702(1)].

A buyer is insolvent if the buyer has generally ceased to pay debts in the ordinary course of business other than as a result of bona fide dispute, or is unable to pay debts as they become due, or is insolvent within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Code [Com Code § 1201(23)].

Strategic Points:

- The seller has the right to withhold the goods or stop delivery on discovering the buyer's insolvency, regardless of the passage of title [see Com Code § 2702, UCC § 2-702, official cmt 1 (1962)].
- If the buyer makes assurances of performance following the seller's stoppage of delivery on the ground that the buyer is insolvent, the seller is not entitled to resell or divert the goods. Stoppage in this case is merely a suspension of performance [see Com Code § 2705, UCC § 2-705, official cmt 1 (1962)].

Judge's Perspective:

If the seller knows about the buyer's financial difficulties at the time the agreement is made, the seller cannot later use those same difficulties as an excuse to avoid performance, because the seller has waived that right [Kyocera Corp. v. Prudential-Bache Trade Servs., Inc. (2002) 299 F3d 769, 785-786 , vacated on other grounds, 341 F3d 987 (2003)]. Moreover, if the seller's own failure to perform the contract is the cause of the buyer's insolvency, the seller may not assert that insolvency as a reason to avoid further performance [Kyocera Corp. v. Prudential-Bache Trade Servs., Inc. (2002) 299 F3d 769, 785-786 , vacated on other grounds, 341 F3d 987 (2003)].

Discussion of effect of insolvency, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.74 (Matthew Bender).

26.37[2] Seller May Reclaim Goods Sold on Credit.

26.37[2][a] Insolvent Buyer's Receipt of Goods on Credit Constitutes Fraud. Any receipt of goods on credit amounts to a tacit business representation of solvency; therefore, receipt of goods on credit by an insolvent buyer is fraudulent as against the seller [see Com Code § 2702, UCC § 2-702, official cmt 2 (1962)].

26.37[2][b] Seller Must Reclaim Goods Within 10 Days. A seller who discovers that the buyer has received goods on credit while insolvent normally may reclaim the goods on demand made within 10 days after the buyer's receipt of the goods [Com Code § 2702(2)].

Exceptions:

- If a misrepresentation of solvency was made to the seller in writing within three months before delivery, the 10-day limitation does not apply [Com Code § 2702(2)].

- Except as provided in Com Code § 2702(2), the seller may not base a right to reclaim goods on the buyer's fraudulent or innocent misrepresentation of solvency or of intent to pay [Com Code § 2702(2)].

Distinguish:

The 10-day limitation does not apply to a reclaiming cash seller under Com Code §§ 2507(2) and 2511(3) (concerning delivery on condition and payment by check). The seller in that case is subject only to a reasonable-time standard [Citizens Bank v. Taggart (1983) 143 CA3d 318, 321, 191 CR 729 (reclamation of car purchased with NSF check)].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion and form for seller's demand for goods, see California Legal Forms, § 52.477 (Matthew Bender).

26.37[2][c] Rights of Good Faith Buyer Prevail. The seller's right to reclaim the goods under Com Code § 2702(2) is subject to the rights of a buyer in ordinary course, or a good faith buyer under Com Code § 2403 [Com Code § 2702(3)].

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of rights of buyer in ordinary course or other good faith buyer, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.76 (Matthew Bender); or California Legal Forms, § 52.17 (Matthew Bender).

26.37[2][d] Reclamation Precludes Other Remedies. Successful reclamation of the goods precludes all other remedies for the seller with respect to them [Com Code § 2702(3)].

VI. REDRESSING GRIEVANCES OTHER THAN BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.38

26.38 Buyer in Breach Can Obtain Restitution.

26.38[1] Seller Must Restore "Excess" Payments. If the seller justifiably withholds delivery of goods because of the buyer's breach, the buyer is entitled to restitution of any amount by which the sum of the buyer's payments exceeds either of the following [Com Code § 2718(2)]:

- The amount to which the seller is entitled by virtue of terms liquidating the seller's damages in accordance with Com Code § 2718(1).
- In the absence of terms liquidating the seller's damages, the lesser of:
 - ☐ Twenty percent of the value of the total performance for which the buyer is obligated under the contract; or
 - ☐ $500.

The right of restitution applies to any amount the buyer paid as a deposit or downpayment or partial payment. In the case of a deposit or trade-in of goods resold before the breach, the amount actually received on the resale is viewed as the deposit rather than the amount allowed the buyer for the trade-in. However, the seller, if knowing of the breach before the resale of the traded-in goods, must make reasonable efforts to realize their true value. This is assured by requiring the seller to comply with the conditions set forth in Com Code § 2706, regarding the seller's remedy of resale [see Com Code § 2718, UCC § 2-718, official cmt 2 (1962)].

➡ Cross References:

Seller's remedy of resale, see 26.13.

Discussion of restitution, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution (Matthew Bender).

26.38[2] Seller Has Right of Setoff. The buyer's right to restitution under Com Code § 2718(2) is subject to an offset to the extent that the seller establishes both of the following [Com Code § 2718(3)]:

- A right to recover damages under the provisions of Com Code § 2701 et seq. (the chapter on remedies) other than Com Code § 2718(1); and
- The amount or value of any benefits received by the buyer directly or indirectly by reason of the contract.

26.38[3] Payment in Goods Need Not Be Restored in Kind. If the seller has received payment in goods, their reasonable value or the proceeds of their resale must be treated as payments for the purposes of determining a buyer's restitution following the seller's justifiable withholding of the sold goods under Com Code § 2718(2) [Com Code § 2718(4)].

Distinguish:

However, if the seller has notice of the buyer's breach before reselling goods received in part performance, the seller's resale is subject to the conditions set forth in Com Code § 2706 with respect to resale by an aggrieved seller [Com Code § 2718(4)].

26.40 Party Can Have Remedy for Fraud.

Unless displaced by the particular provisions of the Commercial Code, principles of law and equity supplement the Commercial Code, including fraud [Com Code § 1103(b)]. Remedies for material misrepresentation or fraud include all remedies available under Division 2 of the Commercial Code for nonfraudulent breach [*Com Code § 2721 see Green Wood Industrial Co. v. Chapter 26 Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code
VI. REDRESSING GRIEVANCES OTHER THAN BREACH OF CONTRACT

2-26 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 26.41

26.41 Party Can Recover Damages for Third Person's Interference.

When goods have been identified to a contract for sale, and a third person deals with the goods so as to cause actionable injury to a party to the contract, a right of action against the third person exists in favor of whichever party to the contract for sale has title to or a security interest or a special property of an insurable interest in the goods [Com Code § 2722(a); see Com Code § 2501 (special property in goods)].

Consider:

If the goods were destroyed or converted, a right of action also exists in favor the party that either bore the risk of loss under the contract for sale or, since the injury, assumed that risk as against the other [Com Code § 2722(a)].

Strategic Points:

- If, at the time of the injury, the plaintiff did not bear the risk of loss as against the other party to the contract for sale, and there is no arrangement between them for disposition of the recovery, then the suit or settlement is, subject to the plaintiff's own interest, pursued as a fiduciary for the other party to the contract [Com Code § 2722(b)].

- Either party, with the consent of the other, may sue for the benefit of whomever it may concern [Com Code § 2722(c)].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

I. STRATEGY

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.01

27.01 Scope.

This chapter covers attacking and defending a contract for the sale of goods under Division 2 of the Commercial Code. It specifically discusses the Division 2 rules for:

- Disproving the existence of a contract for the sale of goods [see 27.04, 27.05].
- Avoiding a contract for the sale of goods by invoking the Division 2 statute of frauds [see 27.06].
- Establishing that a contract for the sale of goods was made even though the parties acted in an unconventional manner, by applying the liberal Division 2 rules governing formation of contracts [see 27.09].
- Proving that a contract for the sale of goods was modified by the parties' agreement [see 27.10] or that a purported waiver was retracted [see 27.11].
- Proving that the Division 2 statute of frauds was satisfied [see 27.12].
- Preventing application of the Division 2 statute of frauds [see 27.13].
- Using parol evidence under Division 2 to explain or supplement (without contradicting) the written terms of the contract [see 27.14].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

I. STRATEGY

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.02

27.02 Objective and Strategy.

27.02[1] Liberalized Contract Formation Rules. The goal of Com Code §§ 2201-2209 is to validate contracts and facilitate legitimate transactions in goods that might otherwise be void under conventional contract law. Thus, Com Code § 2204 expresses "the basic policy of recognizing any manner of expression of agreement, oral, written or otherwise" [Com Code § 2204, UCC § 2-204, official cmt; see 27.09[1]]. Therefore, when faced with a contract for the sale of goods, an attorney may find it more difficult to attack the contract than would be the case if the same contract were governed exclusively by the Civil Code.

The contract must be examined, and any challenges made, on the basis of the Commercial Code rules governing formation of contract. However, the principles of law and equity supplement the provisions of the Commercial Code unless displaced by its provisions [Com Code § 1103]. In the context of contract formation, this specifically means that issues of capacity, agency, estoppel, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, coercion, or mistake continue to be determined by traditional contract principles [Com Code § 1103].

27.02[2] Offer and Acceptance. Any reasonable manner of acceptance is available unless the offeror has clearly indicated that only a specific type of communication constitutes an acceptance [see Com Code § 2206]. Technical rules as to acceptance are rejected, and a criterion that the acceptance may be in any manner and by any medium reasonable under the circumstances is substituted. Com Code § 2206 is intended to remain flexible, and its applicability is to be enlarged as new means of communication develop or as more time saving existing means come into general use [Com Code § 2206, UCC § 2-206, official cmt 1; see 27.09[4]].

27.02[3] Merchant's Firm Offer. The Commercial Code modifies the common law rule that a so-called firm offer (an offer not subject to revocation for a limited period) be sustained by consideration in order to bind the offeror. Instead, Com Code § 2205 requires that a firm offer by a merchant must be characterized as such and be expressed in a signed writing. The primary purpose of Com Code § 2205 is to give effect to the deliberate intention of a merchant to make a current firm offer that is binding [Com Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 2; see 27.09[2]].

27.02[4] Counteroffer. Division 2 of the Commercial Code recognizes as a contract a proposed deal that in commercial understanding has in fact been closed. Therefore, when the offeror sends a written confirmation or a definite and seasonable expression of acceptance, any additional matter contained in it (which would, at common law and under the Civil Code, make it a counteroffer rather than an acceptance) does not invalidate the agreement but instead will be treated as a proposal for an added term, unless the counteroffer is expressly made conditional on the other party's acceptance of the added or different terms [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 2; see 27.09[5], [6]]. Com Code § 2207 requires courts to put aside the formal and academic stereotypes of the traditional doctrine of offer and acceptance and to analyze instead what really happens [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 100, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751 (court must not refuse to enforce contract until court looks below surface of parties' disagreement as to contract terms and determines whether parties undertook to close their deal)].

27.02[5] Written Agreements and Parol Evidence. Division 2 of the Commercial Code does not assume that because a writing is final on some matters, it is to be taken as including all of the matters agreed on. Interpretation of the parties' agreement starts from the premise that the parties' language has the meaning that arises out of the commercial context in which it was used. There is no requirement that, as a condition precedent to the admissibility of relevant parol evidence, the court first must determine that the language used is ambiguous [Com Code § 2202, UCC § 2-202, official cmt 1; see 27.14].

27.02[6] Course of Performance. When it is difficult to determine whether a particular act by a party merely sheds light on the meaning of an agreement [see Com Code § 1303] or represents a waiver of a term of the agreement, the preference is in favor of waiver whenever that construction, plus the application of the provisions on the reinstatement of rights waived [see Com Code § 2209], is needed to preserve the flexible character of commercial contracts and to prevent surprise or other hardship [Com Code § 2208, UCC § 2-208, official cmt 3; see 27.14[5]].

27.02[7] Modification, Rescission, and Waiver. Com Code § 2209 protects and makes effective all necessary and desirable modifications of sales contracts without regard to the technicalities that otherwise might hamper those adjustments [Com Code § 2209, UCC § 2-209, official cmt 1; see 27.10, 27.11].

27.02[8] Statute of Frauds. Strict adherence to the statute of frauds has been abandoned in favor of certain limited exceptions to promote equity and fair dealing between the parties [Distribu-Dor, Inc. v. Karadanis (1970) 11 CA3d 463, 469, 90 CR 231; see Com Code § 2201; see also 7.13].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

II. DISPROVING OR AVOIDING CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

*2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.0427.04 No Contract Exists If Merchant's Offer Was Revoked Before Acceptance.

27.04[1] Offer Is Revocable Unless It Is a "Firm Offer." Generally, an offer may be revoked at any time before its acceptance is communicated to the offeror [CC § 1586]. An offer by a merchant to buy or sell goods in a signed writing that by its terms gives assurance that it will be held open is not revocable, for lack of consideration, during the time stated [see 27.09[2]]. However, if the term of assurance is on a form supplied by the offeree, it must be separately signed by the merchant [Com Code § 2205(a)].

Strategic Point:

To protect the merchant against inadvertently signing a firm offer that is contained in a form prepared by the offeree, Com Code § 2205(a) requires that such a clause be separately authenticated. Thus, if the firm offer clause in the offeree's form is called to the merchant's attention, and the merchant separately authenticates it, the merchant will be bound [Com Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 4]. Therefore, whenever the separate signature requirement applied and was not met, the merchant may be able to establish that no contract was made, as long as the merchant effectively revoked the offer.

Warning--Not Restricted to Dealings Between Merchants:

Com Code § 2205(a) applies to "[a]n offer by a merchant to buy or sell goods," but the statute is not limited in application to dealings between merchants. The statute can apply in any case in which the offeror is a merchant, whether or not the offeree is also a merchant.

Distinguish--Firm Offer With No Stated Time:

If an offer gives assurance that it will be held open, but no time is stated, then the offer is not revocable, for lack of consideration, for a reasonable time, but in no event will the period of irrevocability exceed three months [Com Code § 2205(a)]. The three-month period need not be stated by days or by date. If the offer states that it is "guaranteed" or "firm" until the happening of a contingency that will occur within the three-month period, it will remain irrevocable until that event. A promise made for a longer period will operate to bind the offeror only for the first three months of the period but may be renewed [Com

Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 3].

Distinguish--Firm Offer With Consideration:

If a firm offer is supported by consideration, it may remain irrevocable for as long as the parties specify. Com Code § 2205(a) deals only with an offer that is not supported by consideration [Com Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 3].

27.04[2] Oral Offer to Supply Construction Contractor May Be Irrevocable for Limited Period. When a merchant renders an offer to supply goods to a licensed construction contractor, the offer may be irrevocable for a limited period, notwithstanding lack of consideration [see 27.09[3] for discussion]. However, such an offer is not irrevocable if all of the following conditions are satisfied [Com Code § 2205(b)]:

- The merchant's offer is oral.
- The price is $2,500 or more.
- The offer is not confirmed in writing by the contractor or the contractor's agent within 48 hours after it is rendered.

If a contract satisfies the above criteria, the contractor's failure to confirm the offer in writing releases the merchant from the offer [Com Code § 2205(b)].

Strategic Point:

When a construction contractor sues a merchant for breach of an alleged contract to furnish construction supplies, and the specified conditions can be proved, the supplier may be able to establish that no contract was made, as long as the supplier effectively revoked the offer. An offer may be revoked at any time before its acceptance is communicated to the offeror [CC § 1586].

Warning:

Com Code § 2205(b), which is not a uniform provision in the Commercial Code, uses the undefined verb "render" instead of a defined term such as "send" [see Com Code § 1201(36) (definition)], and it is not clear what constitutes the "rendering" of an offer by a merchant, or when an offer is "rendered," in the context of the statute.

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

II. DISPROVING OR AVOIDING CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.05

27.05 Merchant's Requirement for Written Rescission or Modification Is Not Enforceable.

When the contract is on a form supplied by a merchant and provides that modification or rescission of the contract may be effected only by a signed writing, the provision embodying that requirement generally must be separately signed by the other party [Com Code § 2209(2)].

Exception--Between Merchants:

Between merchants, the separate signature requirement does not apply [see Com Code §§ 2209(2), 2104(3) (definition of "between merchants")].

Strategic Point:

If the separate signature requirement applies and is not met, the merchant will be unable to enforce the contract by relying on noncompliance with the requirement that modification or rescission can be effected only in a signed writing. Consequently, the other party may either:

- Enforce a modification of the contract that was effected in some manner other than by a signed writing (thus the other party could avoid the original contract); or
- Invalidate the contract if rescission was effected in some manner other than by a signed writing.

Jury Instructions:

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

II. DISPROVING OR AVOIDING CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.06

27.06 Statute of Frauds Applies to Contract for $500 or More.

27.06[1] Signed Memorandum Is Required. Generally, a contract for the sale of goods for the price of $500 or more is not enforceable by way of action or defense unless both of the following conditions are satisfied [Com Code § 2201(1)]:

- There is some writing sufficient to indicate that a contract for sale has been made between the parties [see Com Code § 1201(43) ("writing" defined)].
- It is signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought or by that party's authorized agent or broker [see Com Code § 1201(37) ("signed" defined)].

Exceptions:

A contract that is valid in other respects does not have to satisfy the requirements above if it meets any of the following criteria [Com Code § 2201(3)]:

- The goods are to be specially manufactured for the buyer [see 27.13[1]].
- The party against whom enforcement is sought admits the existence of the contract [see 27.13[2]].
- The seller has accepted any payment [see 27.13[3]].
- The buyer has accepted any of the goods [see 27.13[4]].

Strategic Point:

There are only three definite and invariable requirements for the anti-fraud memorandum [Com Code § 2201(1); Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 1]:

- First, it must evince a contract for the sale of goods [see, e.g., In re Financial Computer Sys., Inc. (9th Cir 1973) 474 F2d 1258, 1259-1260 (document in form of lease for air conditioning units, which did not mention alleged option to purchase and did not otherwise reference any sale of units, could not be taken as indicating that contract for sale of goods had been made)].
- Second, it must be "signed"--a term that includes any symbol identifying the party to be charged [see Com Code § 1201(37)].
- Third, it must specify a quantity of goods.

Strategic Point--Output Contract or Requirements Contract:

A writing does not fail to specify a quantity of goods when the contract in question is an output contract or a requirements contract. Since a written contract for output or requirements is binding [see Com Code § 2306(1)], it follows that a writing is sufficient if it indicates that there has been a real transaction for the sale of output or for the purchase of requirements [Seaman's Direct Buying Serv., Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 C3d 752, 764, 206 CR 354, 686 P2d 1158 , disapproved on another issue, Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 C4th 376, 393, 45 CR2d 436, 902 P2d 740 , overruled on another issue, Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 C4th 85, 87, 44 CR2d 420, 900 P2d 669].

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Contract and Contract for Sale, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.08 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of a Writing and Written, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.21 (Matthew Bender).

Statute of Frauds Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.30 (Matthew Bender).

Agreement in Signed Writing, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.31 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Statute of frauds can be minimally satisfied, see 27.12.

Equitable estoppel to prevent application of statute of frauds, see 27.13[5].

27.06[2] Complete Signature Is Not Necessary. "Signed" for purposes of the Commercial Code includes using any symbol executed or adopted with present intention to adopt or accept a writing [Com Code § 1201(37)]. A complete signature is not necessary. The symbol may be printed, stamped, or written. It may be by initials or by thumbprint. It may be on any part of the document and in appropriate cases may be found in a billhead or letterhead. No catalog of possible situations can be complete, and a court must use common sense and commercial experience in passing on these matters. The question always is whether the symbol was executed or adopted by the party with present intention to adopt or accept the writing [Com Code § 1201, UCC § 1-201, official cmt 37].

Example--Newspaper Advertisement Can Be Signed Writing:

When an advertisement constitutes an offer by a merchant, the printed name of the merchant is intended to authenticate the advertisement as that of the merchant. In other words, when the advertisement reasonably justifies the recipient's understanding that the communication was intended as an offer, the offeror's intent to authenticate the offeror's name as a signature can be established from the face of the advertisement [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 C4th 261, 277-278, 109 CR2d 807, 27 P3d 702].

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Signed, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.20 (Matthew Bender).

27.06[3] Noncompliance Does Not Render Contract Void. Failure to satisfy the requirements of Com Code § 2201(1) does not render the contract void for all purposes, but merely prevents it from being judicially enforced in favor of a party to the contract. For example, a buyer who takes possession of goods as provided in an oral contract, which the seller has not meanwhile repudiated, is not a trespasser. Nor would the statute of frauds be a defense to a third person who wrongfully induces a party to refuse to perform an oral contract, even if the injured party cannot maintain an action for damages against the party refusing to perform [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 4].

27.06[4] Contract Related to Commodity Futures Trading Is Not Covered. If a contract for the sale of goods meets the definition of "qualified financial contract" in CC § 1624(b)(2)--which defines certain contracts that are related to commodity futures trading--then it is subject to the special statute of frauds in CC § 1624(b) and would not be subject to Com Code § 2201(1) unless specified conditions for the application of CC § 1624(b) did not exist [Com Code § 2201(4)].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

III. ESTABLISHING VALIDITY OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.08

27.08 Options and Strategies.

The party who stands on the contract has the burden of proving the existence of the contract, but this may be more easily done under the Commercial Code for contracts for the sale of goods than in other cases because:

- Numerous rules in Com Code §§ 2204-2207 will support a finding that a valid contract exists when the contract was made in an unconventional manner [see 27.09; see also 27.02 (general purpose and effect of those rules)].
- A party needing to prove either a modification [see 27.10] or the retraction of a waiver [see 27.11] has the benefit of the facilitating rules of Com Code § 2209.
- Issues of interpretation can be resolved under the relatively relaxed parol evidence rules of Com Code § 2202 [see 27.14].

When the statute of frauds has been asserted as an affirmative defense, the plaintiff is entitled to present any relevant evidence to show either compliance [see 27.12] or an exception [see 27.13], and no pleading by the plaintiff is necessary to support the introduction of such evidence [see Siam Numhong Prods. Co. v. Eastimpex (ND Cal 1994) 866 F Supp 445, 448 n5 (plaintiff was entitled to prove facts showing equitable estoppel as exception to statute of frauds defense)].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

III. ESTABLISHING VALIDITY OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.09

27.09 Contract Can Be Made in Unconventional Manner.

27.09[1] Proof of Agreement Is Sufficient.

27.09[1][a] Parties Must Manifest Agreement. A contract for the sale of goods may be made in any manner sufficient to show agreement, including conduct by both parties that recognizes the existence of such a contract [Com Code § 2204(1)].

Jury Instructions:

Formation of Contracts for the Sale of Goods, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.40 (Matthew Bender).

Offer and Acceptance Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.41 (Matthew Bender).

Offer Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.42 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Parties' conduct can establish contract, see 27.09[7].

27.09[1][b] Time of Agreement Is Not Determinative. An agreement sufficient to constitute a contract for the sale of goods may be found even though the moment of its making is undetermined [Com Code § 2204(2)].

Consider:

This rule is directed primarily to the situation in which the communications between the parties do not disclose the exact point at which their deal was closed, but the actions of the parties indicate that a binding obligation has been undertaken [Com Code § 2204, UCC § 2-204, official cmt].

27.09[1][c] Some Terms May Be Left Open. Even if the parties have left one or more of the terms open, a contract for the sale of goods does not fail for indefiniteness if both of the following conditions are satisfied [Com Code § 2204(3)]:

- The parties have intended to make a contract.
- There is a reasonably certain basis for giving an appropriate remedy.

Strategic Point--All Parties:

Under the rules noted above, the parties to a contract for a sale of goods need not assent to all essential terms. A court may enforce a contract for the sale of goods if the court reaches two essential conclusions [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 104, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751]:

- Initially, the court must find some basis for concluding that the parties engaged in a process of offer and acceptance rather than inconclusive negotiations.
- The court then must conclude that it has sufficient information about the parties' incomplete transaction that it can apply the provisions of the Commercial Code that fill the gaps in the parties' contract.

Those gap filling provisions include Com Code § 2207 (acceptance that varies from the offer) [see 27.09[1][c], [5] -[7]] as well as, for example, Com Code §§ 2305 (open price terms), 2307 (open delivery provisions), and 2309 (duration for otherwise indefinite contracts).

Consider--Meeting of Minds Is Not Entirely Necessary:

Com Code § 2204(3) establishes that a meeting of the minds on the essential features of the agreement is not required. The parties, if they so intend, can conclude a contract for the sale of goods even though they do not agree as to, for example [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 104-105, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751 ; Com Code § 2305(1); Com Code § 2204, UCC § 2-204, official cmt]:

- The price;
- The terms of payment;
- The time or place for performance; or
- The quantity of the goods sold.

Warning--Absence of Agreement on "Important" Terms Could Be Significant:

While the "serious nature" of a contract provision in dispute would not necessarily preclude a finding that the parties intended to make a contract (bearing in mind that the parties' negotiating procedure should reveal their intent), in some cases, in which negotiations are not well organized, the importance of a term that the parties left open may very well be a decisive measure of whether the parties intended to enter into a contract [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 106 n8, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

Warning--Absence of Agreement on Numerous Terms Could Be Significant:

The number of terms that the parties left open also may be significant. The more terms the parties leave open, the less likely it is that they have intended to conclude a binding agreement. However, the parties' actions may be conclusive on the matter despite the omissions [Com Code § 2204, UCC § 2-204, official cmt]. The ultimate inquiry must be whether the parties' conduct indicates a consummated process of offer and acceptance, and thus the intent to contract, or mere negotiations that have not culminated in an agreement [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 106 n8, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

Cross Reference:

Open price terms, open delivery provisions, and duration of indefinite contracts, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 28.05[1][a], 28.28, 28.38.

27.09[2] Merchant Can Make Irrevocable Offer.

27.09[2][a] Written Offer Can Be Expressly Irrevocable. An offer by a merchant to buy or sell goods in a signed writing that by its terms gives assurance that it will be held open is not revocable, for lack of consideration, during the time stated [Com Code § 2205(a)].

Warning--Not Restricted to Dealings Between Merchants:

Com Code § 2205(a) applies to "[a]n offer by a merchant to buy or sell goods," but the statute is not limited in application to dealings between merchants. The statute can apply in any case in which the offeror is a merchant, whether or not the offeree also is a merchant.

Strategic Point--"Signed Writing" Need Not Be Actually Signed:

"Signed" includes authentication, but the reasonableness of the authentication must be determined in view of the purpose of the rule (which is to give effect to the deliberate intention of a merchant to be bound by a current firm offer). The circumstances surrounding the signing may justify something less than a formal signature or initialing, but typically the kind of authentication involved in this situation would consist at least in initialing the clause involved. A handwritten memorandum on the writer's letterhead purporting in its terms to "confirm" a firm offer already made would be enough to satisfy the requirement even though the memorandum is not subscribed, since under the circumstances it could not be considered a memorandum of mere negotiation and would adequately show its own authenticity. Similarly, an authorized telegram will suffice, even if the original draft contained only a typewritten signature [Com Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 2].

Strategic Point--Course of Dealing or Trade Usage Cannot Excuse Absence of Authentication:

Notwithstanding any applicable settled course of dealing or usage of the trade allowing a firm offer to be made by oral communication and to be relied on without more evidence, such an offer will remain revocable under Division 2 of the Commercial Code, since authentication by a writing is the essence of Com Code § 2205(a) [Com Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 2].

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Merchant and Transactions Between Merchants, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.06 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of a Writing and Written, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.21 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Signed, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.20 (Matthew Bender).

Revocable and Irrevocable Offers, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.43 (Matthew Bender).

27.09[2][b] No Stated Time Implies Reasonable Period. If no time is stated during which the offer will be held open, then the offer is not revocable, for lack of consideration, for a reasonable time, but in no event may such a period of irrevocability exceed three months [Com Code § 2205(a)].

Strategic Point:

The three-month period need not be stated by days or by date. If the offer states that it is "guaranteed" or "firm" until the happening of a contingency that will occur within the three-month period, it will remain irrevocable until that event. A promise made for a longer period will operate to bind the offeror only for the first three months of the period but may be renewed [Com Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 3].

Distinguish--Firm Offer With Consideration:

If a firm offer is supported by consideration, it may remain irrevocable for as long as the parties specify. Com Code § 2205(a) deals only with an offer that is not supported by consideration [Com Code § 2205, UCC § 2-205, official cmt 3].

27.09[2][c] Separate Signature May Be Required. Any term agreeing to hold an offer open that is on a form supplied by the offeree must be separately signed by the offeror [Com Code § 2205(a)].

Cross Reference:

Invalidation of alleged contract when offeror did not sign term of assurance in form supplied by offeree, see 27.04[1].

27.09[3] Offer to Supply Contractor May Be Irrevocable.

27.09[3][a] Offer Must Be by Merchant. When a merchant renders an offer, oral or written, to supply goods to a licensed construction contractor, the offer usually is irrevocable, notwithstanding lack of consideration, if all of the following conditions are satisfied [Com Code § 2205(b)]:

- The contractor is licensed in California or in another state.
- The merchant has actual or imputed knowledge that the contractor is licensed.
- The merchant has actual or imputed knowledge that the offer will be relied on by the contractor in the submission of a bid for a construction contract with a third person.

Timing:

The offer remains irrevocable for 10 days after the awarding of the contract to the prime contractor (the offeree), but in no event for more than 90 days after the date the offer was rendered by the merchant [Com Code § 2205(b)].

Exception:

The merchant may provide in the offer that it will remain open for a period shorter than the statutory period [Com Code § 2205(b)].

Warning:

Com Code § 2205(b), which is not a uniform provision in the Commercial Code, uses the undefined verb "render" instead of a defined term such as "send" [see Com Code § 1201(36) (definition)], and it is not clear what constitutes the "rendering" of an offer by a merchant, or when an offer is "rendered," in the context of the statute.

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Merchant and Transactions Between Merchants, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.06 (Matthew Bender).

Firm Offer by Merchant to Construction Contractor, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.44 (Matthew Bender).

Revocable and Irrevocable Offers, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.43 (Matthew Bender).

27.09[3][b] Oral Offer of $2,500 or More Must Be Confirmed. A merchant's oral offer to supply a construction contractor for a price of $2,500 or more is irrevocable only if confirmed in writing by the contractor or the contractor's agent within 48 hours after it is rendered. The contractor's failure to confirm the offer in writing releases the merchant from the offer [Com Code § 2205(b)].

Cross Reference:

Invalidation of alleged contract when oral offer at $2,500 or more is not confirmed in writing, see 27.04[2].

27.09[4] Acceptance of Offer Can Take Any Form.

27.09[4][a] Offer Can Dictate Form of Acceptance. Unless otherwise unambiguously indicated by the language or circumstances, an offer to make a contract will be construed as inviting acceptance in any manner and by any medium reasonable in the circumstances [Com Code § 2206(1)(a)].

Jury Instructions:

Acceptance Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.45 (Matthew Bender).

27.09[4][b] Seller's Shipment of Goods Can Be Acceptance of Offer to Buy. Unless otherwise unambiguously indicated by the language or circumstances, an order or other offer to buy goods for prompt or current shipment will be construed as inviting acceptance by either of two means [Com Code § 2206(1)(b)]:

- A prompt promise to ship; or
- The prompt or current shipment [see Com Code § 2504 (what constitutes shipment)] of conforming or nonconforming goods.

Exception--No Acceptance by Accommodation Shipment:

A shipment of nonconforming goods does not constitute an acceptance if the seller seasonably notifies the buyer that the shipment is offered only as an accommodation to the buyer [Com Code § 2206(1)(b)].

Distinguish--Shipment of Nonconforming Goods:

Com Code § 2206(1)(b) deals with the situation of a shipment made following an order, when the shipment is shown by a notification to the buyer to be referable to that order but has a defect. Such a nonconforming shipment normally is to be understood as intended to close the bargain, even though it proves to have been at the same time a breach. However, the seller, by stating that the shipment is nonconforming and is offered only as an accommodation to the buyer, keeps the shipment or notification from operating as an acceptance [Com Code § 2206, UCC § 2-206, official cmt 4].

Jury Instructions:

Acceptance by Shipment, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.46 (Matthew Bender).

27.09[4][c] Acceptance by Performance Requires Notice to Offeror. When the beginning of a requested performance is a reasonable mode of acceptance, and the offeror is not notified of acceptance within a reasonable time, the offeror may treat the offer as having lapsed before acceptance [Com Code § 2206(2); Harris v. Time, Inc. (1987) 191 CA3d 449, 456-457, 237 CR 584].

Consider:

The beginning of performance by the offeree can be effective as acceptance so as to bind the offeror only if the beginning of performance is followed within a reasonable time by notice to the offeror. Such a beginning of performance must unambiguously express the offeree's intention to accept the offer. For the protection of both parties, it is essential that notice follow in due course to constitute acceptance. Nothing in Com Code § 2206(2), however, bars the possibility that under the common law, performance begun may have an intermediate effect of temporarily barring revocation of the offer or, at the offeror's option, final effect in constituting acceptance [Com Code § 2204, UCC § 2-206, official cmt 3].

27.09[5] Counteroffer Can Be Acceptance.

27.09[5][a] Rejection of Offer Is Not Implicit in Making of Counteroffer. A definite and seasonable expression of acceptance or a written confirmation that is sent within a reasonable time operates as an acceptance even though it states terms additional to or different from those offered or agreed on [Com Code § 2207(1); e.g., Lockheed Elecs. Co. v. Keronix, Inc. (1981) 114 CA3d 304, 311-312, 170 CR 591 (seller's acceptance of purchase order was not expressly conditional on buyer's assent to additional terms stated in acceptance; therefore seller's acceptance created contract even though buyer did not assent to those additional terms)].

Distinguish--Acceptance Need Not Be Definite:

In Com Code § 2207(1), "definite" modifies "expression," not "acceptance," and refers to the process of offer and acceptance, not to the terms of the acceptance [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 107, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

Example:

Plaintiff, contemplating the purchase of a service station, offered to enter into a 10-year dealer contract with defendant oil company only if defendant, among other things, agreed to advance plaintiff $30,000 and to give plaintiff a 1.4-cents-per-gallon competitive discount on the price of defendant's gasoline for the duration of the contract. When plaintiff phoned defendant's employee with whom plaintiff had negotiated, to inquire as to the fate of his offer, the employee told plaintiff that defendant had a check for him, that he should open an escrow account, and that he should go ahead with the purchase of the service station property--in context, a clear statement that defendant had approved the deal. Defendant thus provided a "definite and seasonable expression of acceptance" under Com Code § 2207(1). Through a different employee, defendant sent to plaintiff various executed documents in an envelope unaccompanied by any cover letter. The documents provided written confirmation of the deal but also stated that defendant could reduce or cancel plaintiff's competitive discount at will. The fact that defendant returned the documents without in any way calling plaintiff's attention to them was further evidence that defendant regarded the process of negotiation as over and the deal as complete. Despite the fact that the terms of defendant's acceptance departed partially from the terms of plaintiff's offer, defendant and plaintiff did form a contract [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 100-101, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

27.09[5][b] Conditional Acceptance Expressly Requiring Offeror's Assent to Additional or Different Terms Does Not Operate As Acceptance Unless Offeror Assents. If the offeree's acceptance is expressly made conditional on the offeror's assent to additional or different terms, there is no acceptance of the original offer unless that condition is satisfied [see Com Code § 2207(1)], and the conditional acceptance in that case necessarily must operate only as a counteroffer. Conditional acceptance by the offeree requires nothing more than a clear expression, in a manner sufficient to notify the offeror, that the offeree is unwilling to proceed with the transaction unless the additional or different terms are included in the contract [PMC, Inc. v. Porthole Yachts, Ltd. (1998) 65 CA4th 882, 888, 76 CR2d 832 (cover letter, prepared by offeree's agent, accompanying proposed addendum was sufficient expression; offer was not accepted because offeror did not assent to addendum)].

Distinguish--Condition Must Be Expressed:

A "conditional" acceptance does not amount to a counteroffer unless the acceptance is "expressly made conditional" on assent to the additional or different terms [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 107, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

Example:

Acceptance of a purchase order (that is, an offer to buy) was expressly conditioned on the buyer's assent to additional limitation of liability terms contained in the seller's invoice, when the seller stated that the purchase order was accepted "only on the express condition that you assent to the terms" contained in the seller's invoice [Transwestern Pipeline Co. v. Monsanto Co. (1996) 46 CA4th 502, 514, 53 CR2d 887].

Consider--Offeror's Assent May Be Implied:

When acceptance is expressly made conditional on the offeror's assent to additional or different terms, the offeror's assent need not be expressed. It could be implied, as in a course of dealing [see Transwestern Pipeline Co. v. Monsanto Co. (1996) 46 CA4th 502, 514-519, 53 CR2d 887 (evidence failed to establish course of dealing by which offeree's limitation of liability conditions could have become part of parties' contract)].

Jury Instructions:

Acceptance or Confirmation Stating Additional Terms, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.47 (Matthew Bender).

27.09[5][c] Additional Terms Must Be Separately Accepted. The additional terms are to be construed as proposals for addition to the contract [Com Code § 2207(2)].

Exception:

Between merchants, the additional terms normally become part of the contract (but not in all cases) [see 27.09[6]].

Jury Instructions:

Added Terms in Non-Merchant's Acceptance or Confirmation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.63 (Matthew Bender).

27.09[6] Exchange of Offer and Acceptance Between Merchants Is Special Case.

27.09[6][a] New Terms Typically Are Added to Contract. Between merchants, additional terms stated in an acceptance or a written confirmation normally become part of the contract [Com Code § 2207(2); see Com Code § 2104(3) (definition of "between merchants")].

Distinguish:

Com Code § 2207(2) deals with a typical situation between merchants, in which a wire or letter expressed and intended as an acceptance or the closing of an agreement adds further minor suggestions or proposals such as "ship by Tuesday," "rush," "ship draft against bill of lading inspection allowed," or the like. If no answer is received within a reasonable time after additional terms are proposed between merchants, it is both fair and commercially sound to assume that their inclusion in the parties' contract has been assented to [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 1]. However, the added terms are not to be incorporated in the contract if they materially alter the original bargain [see 27.09[6][c]]--unless the other party expressly agrees to the terms--or if notice of objection to them has already been given or is given within a reasonable time [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 3; see 27.09[6][d]].

Exceptions:

Additional terms are not automatically added to the contract between merchants in the following situations [Com Code § 2207(2)]:

- The offer expressly limits acceptance to the terms of the offer [see 27.09[6][b]].
- Adding the terms would materially alter the contract [see 27.09[6][c]].
- Objection to the additional terms is duly given [see 27.09[6][d]].

These three exceptional situations are stated as alternatives. If one of these situations is shown to exist, it is immaterial whether either or both of the others can be negated [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 102, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

Example--Typical Transaction:

A frequent example is the exchange of a printed purchase order form and a printed acceptance form (sometimes called an acknowledgment). Because each form is oriented to the thinking of the drafting party, usually the seller's form contains terms different from or additional to the terms stated in the buyer's form. Nevertheless, the parties proceed with the transaction [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 1].

Examples--Terms to Be Incorporated:

Examples of added terms that normally would not materially affect the contract and, therefore, could be incorporated in a contract between merchants, unless notice of objection were seasonably given [see 27.09[6][d]], are:

- Terms setting forth and perhaps enlarging slightly on the seller's exemption because of supervening causes beyond the seller's control, similar to those covered by the Commercial Code's provision on a merchant's excuse by failure of presupposed conditions [see Com Code § 2615], or terms fixing in advance any reasonable formula of proration under such circumstances [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 5].
- Terms fixing a reasonable time for complaints within customary limits; or in the case of a purchase for subsequent sale, terms providing for inspection by the subsequent purchaser [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 5].
- Terms providing for interest on overdue invoices [e.g., Kawasho Int'l, U.S.A., Inc. v. Lakewood Pipe Serv., Inc. (1983) 152 CA3d 785, 792, 201 CR 640] or fixing the seller's standard credit terms when they are within the range of trade practice and do not limit any credit bargained-for [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 5; see, e.g., Southwest Concrete Prods. v. Gosh Constr. Corp. (1990) 51 C3d 701, 709, 274 CR 404, 798 P2d 1247 (late charge to be imposed on overdue payment; fact that charge was expressed in seller's invoice form in terms of specified percentage and described as "interest per month" on late payments was not relevant); O'Connor v. Televideo Sys., Inc. (1990) 218 CA3d 709, 719, 267 CR 237 (percentage charge per month for late payment constituted valid liquidated damages provision)].
- Terms limiting the right of rejection for defects falling within the customary trade tolerances for acceptance "with adjustment" or otherwise limiting a remedy in a reasonable manner [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 5].
- A provision for attorney's fees [see Boyd v. Oscar Fisher Co. (1989) 210 CA3d 368, 379]--which, by application of CC § 1717, regardless of what the provision actually says, could be equally advantageous to either party [see Frank M. Booth, Inc. v. Reynolds Metals Co. (ED Cal 1991) 754 F Supp 1441, 1448].
- A provision shortening the limitation period for suit on the contract (normally four years) to one year [Therma-Coustics Mfg., Inc. v. Borden, Inc. (1985) 167 CA3d 282, 295-296, 213 CR 611 ; see Com Code § 2725(1) (normal period is four years, but parties may agree to shorten it to not less than one year)].

27.09[6][b] New Terms Are Not Added When Offer Is Expressly Limited. Between merchants, additional terms stated in an acceptance or a written confirmation do not become part of the contract when the offer expressly limits acceptance to the terms of the offer [Com Code § 2207(2)(a)].

Examples--Offer Expressly Limits Acceptance:

- A purchase order (that is, an offer to buy) expressly limited acceptance to the terms of the offer in these words: "This order expressly limits acceptance to the terms stated herein, and any additional or different terms proposed by the Seller are rejected unless expressly assented to in writing by Buyer" [Lockheed Elecs. Co. v. Keronix, Inc. (1981) 114 CA3d 304, 311, 170 CR 591].

- A purchase order expressly limited acceptance to the terms of the offer in these words: "This order may not be varied or changed, nor any of its provisions waived except in writing, signed by an authorized representative of the Purchaser Terms of Seller's order, shipment or approval which are not identical with the terms of this order are not a part of the contract between Seller and Purchaser" [Lounge-A-Round, Inc. v. GCM Mills, Inc. (1980) 109 CA3d 190, 195, 166 CR 920].

- In negotiating a 10-year service station dealer's contract with an oil company, the dealer said that he needed a firm competitive per-gallon discount on gasoline for the term of the agreement. This was agreed, but subsequently the oil company presented a standard form stating that the discount would be revocable at will. The dealer promptly informed the oil company that he would not go ahead with the deal if the oil company could revoke the discount at any time, and demanded assurance that no such revocation would occur. This was forthcoming in a letter from the oil company's negotiator stating, "The ten year Retail Dealer Contract dated December 15, 1971, effective January 1, 1972, is signed by you on the basis that Mobil grant a $30,000 Prepaid Competitive Allowance, and a $.014 [per gallon] Competitive Allowance at time of delivery. If Mobil management does not accept in full the above conditions outlined in your competitive offer, the above mentioned contract will be void." Thus, the evidence showed that the dealer made (and the oil company accepted) an offer expressly limiting acceptance to the terms of the offer [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 95-96, 101, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

Distinguish--Acceptance With Other Terms Is Counteroffer:

When the offer is expressly limited, an acceptance that includes additional or different terms necessarily operates only as a counteroffer. There can be no contract unless either [Textile Unlimited, Inc. v. A..BMH & Co. (9th Cir 2001) 240 F3d 781, 787 ; see 27.09[5][b]]:

- The counteroffer is duly accepted; or
- The parties' conduct establishes the existence of a contract [see Com Code § 2207(3); see also 27.09[7]].

Strategic Point--Objection to Terms Is Not Required:

If an expressly limiting offer is proved, it is immaterial if the offeror did not object to the additional or different terms stated in the acceptance [see 27.09[6][d]], as no objection was necessary [Lockheed Elecs. Co. v. Keronix, Inc. (1981) 114 CA3d 304, 313, 170 CR 591].

27.09[6][c] New Terms Are Not Added When They Materially Alter Contract. Between merchants, additional terms stated in an acceptance or a written confirmation do not become part of the contract when they would materially alter the parties' contract [Com Code § 2207(2)(b)]--unless the other party expressly agrees [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 3]. An alteration is material if it would result in surprise or hardship if incorporated without express awareness by the other party [Steiner v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1977) 20 C3d 90, 102, 141 CR 157, 569 P2d 751].

Examples--Terms That Could Materially Alter Contract:

Examples of typical terms that could materially alter the contract, because the result would be surprise or hardship if they were incorporated without express awareness by the other party, are terms and provisions that:

- Negate a standard warranty such as the warranty of merchantability or the warranty of fitness for a particular purpose, in circumstances in which the warranty normally attaches [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 4].
- Require a guaranty of 90 percent or 100 percent deliveries in a case (such as a contract by a cannery) in which usage of the trade allows more leeway [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 4].
- Reserve to the seller a power to cancel on the buyer's failure to pay any invoice when due [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 4].
- Require that complaints be made within a period materially shorter than what is customary or reasonable [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 4].
- Require arbitration [Windsor Mills, Inc. v. Collins & Aikman Corp. (1972) 25 CA3d 987, 995, 101 CR 347].

27.09[6][d] New Terms Are Not Added When Objection Is Made. Between merchants, additional terms stated in an acceptance or a written confirmation do not become part of the contract when notification of objection to them has already been given or is given within a reasonable time after notice of them is received [Com Code § 2207(2)(c); see Com Code § 1201(26)-(27) (giving and receiving notice or notification)].

When terms on confirming forms sent by both parties conflict, each party must be assumed to object to the conflicting terms of the other. As a result, the requirement that notice of objection has "already been given" is satisfied in such a case, and the conflicting terms do not become a part of the contract [see, e.g., Transwestern Pipeline Co. v. Monsanto Co. (1996) 46 CA4th 502, 516, 53 CR2d 887]. The contract then consists of the terms originally expressly agreed to, terms on which the exchanged confirmations agree, and terms supplied by the Commercial Code [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 6].

When the offer is not expressly limited, and the additional terms would not materially alter the contract, a failure to object will result in incorporation of the additional terms [Kawasho Int'l, U.S.A., Inc. v. Lakewood Pipe Serv., Inc. (1983) 152 CA3d 785, 792, 201 CR 640 (seller's form for sale contract added that "interest will be charged ... from due date to actual date of payment"; in absence of buyer's timely objection, that became part of parties' contract)].

Jury Instructions:

Giving Notice or Notification, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.17 (Matthew Bender).

Receiving Notice, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.18 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Reasonable Time, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.14 (Matthew Bender).

27.09[7] Parties' Conduct Can Establish Contract. Conduct by both parties that recognizes the existence of a contract is sufficient to establish a contract for sale even if the writings of the parties do not otherwise establish a contract. In such a case, the terms of the contract consist of [Com Code § 2207(3)]:

- Those terms on which the writings of the parties agree; and
- Any supplementary terms incorporated under the Commercial Code.

Thus, even if the offeree's acceptance is expressly made conditional on the offeror's assent to the offeree's additional terms [see 27.09[6][b]], but no such assent is given, the existence of a contract and its terms may be inferred if the parties' conduct recognizes the existence of a contract [Transwestern Pipeline Co. v. Monsanto Co. (1996) 46 CA4th 502, 514, 53 CR2d 887].

Example:

A buyer sent a purchase order (an offer to buy) for switchboard gear to a seller. The seller's invoice contained materially differing terms from the purchase order in that, while the purchase order imposed broad warranty coverage, the invoice disclaimed all warranties. The parties nonetheless, by their conduct, manifested an agreement, since the seller supplied and the buyer accepted the switchboard gear. Hence, under Com Code § 2207(3), there was a contract, which consisted of the terms on which the purchase order and the invoice agreed, supplemented by the applicable provisions of the Commercial Code. The Code imposes a warranty of merchantability by operation of law absent contractual modification or disclaimer, including a warranty of fitness, absent contractual exclusion or modification, if the seller knows the buyer's purpose for the goods and knows that the buyer is relying on the seller's judgment to furnish suitable goods [see Com Code § 2314]. If the seller did not wish to supply the equipment on the terms specified in the purchase order, then the seller was free to withhold the equipment unless and until the buyer agreed to the seller's terms [Steiny & Co., Inc. v. California Elec. Supply Co. (2000) 79 CA4th 285, 295, 93 CR2d 920].

Strategic Point--Supplementary Terms:

The "supplementary terms" incorporated under any provision of the Commercial Code may include terms incorporated as a result of usage of the trade [see 27.14[3]] or the parties' course of dealing [Transwestern Pipeline Co. v. Monsanto Co. (1996) 46 CA4th 502, 516, 53 CR2d 887 ; see 27.14[4]] or course of performance [see 27.14[5]].

Strategic Point--Disputed Terms:

All of the terms on which the parties' writings do not agree drop out, and the Commercial Code supplies any missing terms [Transwestern Pipeline Co. v. Monsanto Co. (1996) 46 CA4th 502, 515, 53 CR2d

887]. If there is no basis in the Commercial Code for incorporating a disputed term, it remains out of the contract [Textile Unlimited, Inc. v. A..BMH & Co. (9th Cir 2001) 240 F3d 781, 788 (Commercial Code contains no provision supporting inclusion of arbitration requirement)].

Strategic Point--Apparently Conflicting Terms Can Be Reconciled:

It is possible that terms on which the parties' writings do not agree can be brought into agreement, for purposes of fleshing out the parties' contract under Com Code § 2207(3), by application of a reconciling rule. For instance, if the seller's form provided for attorney's fees to the seller, while the buyer's form provided for attorney's fees to the buyer, then the parties' writings would not be in agreement regarding the right to attorney's fees. However, those conflicting provisions need not be dropped. CC § 1717 brings the two provisions into agreement by converting such provisions into clauses permitting the prevailing party to recover attorney's fees for any dispute on the contract [Frank M. Booth, Inc. v. Reynolds Metals Co. (ED Cal 1991) 754 F Supp 1441, 1448 ; see Com Code § 1201(12) ("contract" as used in Commercial Code means "the total legal obligation which results from the parties' agreement as affected by this code and any other applicable rules of law"; emphasis added); see also Com Code § 1201(3) (definition of "agreement")].

Distinguish--Goods Shipped, Accepted, and Paid For:

In many cases, and typically when goods are shipped, accepted, and paid for before any dispute arises, there is no question whether a contract has been made. In such a case, if the writings of the parties do not establish a contract, it is not necessary to determine which act or document constituted the offer and which the acceptance. The only question is what terms are included in the contract. Com Code § 2207(3) furnishes the governing rule [Com Code § 2207, UCC § 2-207, official cmt 7].

III. ESTABLISHING VALIDITY OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.10

27.10 Contract Can Be Readily Modified.

27.10[1] Consideration Is Not Required for Modification. An agreement modifying a contract within Division 2 of the Commercial Code needs no consideration to be binding [Com Code § 2209(1)].

Warning--Statute of Frauds Can Apply:

The requirements of the statute of frauds in Com Code § 2201 must be satisfied [see 27.06[1]] if the contract as modified is within its provisions [Com Code § 2209(3)].

Distinguish--Noncompliance Amounting to Waiver:

If an attempt at modification does not satisfy the requirements of the statute of frauds (when the contract as modified would be within its provisions), it can nevertheless operate as a waiver [Com Code § 2209(4)].

Strategic Point--Other Contract Elements:

While Com Code § 2209(1) dispenses with the requirement of consideration, a valid modification nevertheless requires proof of the other elements essential to the validity of a contract [PMC, Inc. v. Porthole Yachts, Ltd. (1998) 65 CA4th 882, 887, 76 CR2d 832 (mutual assent must be shown)].

Cross Reference:

Elements of contract, see Ch. 13, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Absence of Essential Element, 13.04.

27.10[2] Contract May Require Written Modification or Rescission. A signed agreement that excludes modification or rescission except by a signed writing cannot be otherwise modified or rescinded [Com Code § 2209(2)].

Warning--Merchant's Form Contract:

Except between merchants, such a requirement on a form supplied by a merchant must be separately signed by the other party [Com Code § 2209(2); see Com Code § 2104(3) (definition of "between merchants")].

Strategic Point:

When the contract contains such a requirement and it is enforceable, the party standing on the contract may assert a failure to comply with the requirement if the other party asserts modification or rescission by way of avoidance.

Distinguish--Noncompliance Amounting to Waiver:

If an attempt at modification or rescission does not satisfy the statutory requirements (as applicable), it can nevertheless operate as a waiver [see Com Code § 2209(4)].

27.11 Waiver Can Be Retracted.

A party who has made a waiver affecting an executory portion of the contract may retract the waiver by reasonable notification, received by the other party, that strict performance will be required of any term waived [Com Code § 2209(5)].

Exception--Detrimental Reliance:

An attempted retraction will not be effective if it would be unjust in view of a material change of position in reliance on the waiver [Com Code § 2209(5)].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

III. ESTABLISHING VALIDITY OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.12

27.12 Statute of Frauds Can Be Minimally Satisfied.

27.12[1] Deficient Writing Is Not Insufficient.

27.12[1][a] Terms Can Be Omitted or Misstated. A writing is not insufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds because it omits or incorrectly states a term agreed on, but the contract is not enforceable beyond the quantity of goods shown in the writing [Com Code § 2201(1)].

Strategic Point:

The required writing need not contain all of the material terms of the contract. Such material terms as are stated need not be precisely stated. All that is required is a writing that affords a basis for believing that the offered oral evidence rests on a real transaction--it may be written in lead pencil on a scratch pad, for example. Nor is it necessary to indicate which party is the buyer and which the seller. The only term that must appear is the quantity term, which need not be accurately stated (but recovery is limited to the amount stated). The price, the time and place of payment or delivery, the general quality of the goods, and any particular warranties all may be omitted [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 1].

Cross References:

Memorandum for party seeking to prove contract, see 27.18.

Compliance with general statute of frauds, see Ch. 15, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities, 15.07, 15.08.

27.12[1][b] Price Can Be Omitted. One of the terms that may be omitted in the anti-fraud memorandum is the price--unless the price happens to reference a quantity of goods rather than money, in which case that quantity of goods must be stated [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 1].

Strategic Point:

In many valid contracts for sale the parties do not mention the price in express terms, the buyer being bound to pay and the seller bound to accept a reasonable price, which the trier of the fact may be trusted to determine. Often the price is not mentioned because the parties have based their agreement on a price list or catalogue known to both of them, which serves as an efficient safeguard against perjury. In addition, any market prices and valuations that are current in the vicinity would constitute a similar check. Thus if the price is not stated in the anti-fraud memorandum, it can normally be supplied without danger of fraud [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 1].

27.12[1][c] Writing Need Not Be Signed by Both Parties or Delivered. The anti-fraud memorandum need not be signed or authenticated by both parties (but it is not sufficient against one who has not signed it), and need not be delivered to anyone. Until a dispute arises, no one can determine which party's signing of the memorandum will be necessary; but from the time of contracting, each party's interest is that a sufficient memorandum has been signed by the other party [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 6].

27.12[2] Confirmation of Contract Between Merchants Is Sufficient.

27.12[2][a] Timely Written Confirmation Is Required. A writing sent and received between merchants satisfies the statute of frauds against the party receiving it if all of the following requirements are met [Com Code § 2201(2)]:

- The writing is "in confirmation of the contract" [see 27.12[2][b]].
- The writing is "sufficient against the sender" [see 27.12[2][c]].
- The writing is received within a reasonable time.
- The party receiving it has reason to know its contents.
- The party receiving it does not give written notice of objection to its contents within 10 days after it is received.

There must be evidence that the writing in question was sent by one party and received by the other party [see Dairyman's Cooperative Creamery Assn. v. Leipold (1973) 34 CA3d 184, 187, 109 CR 753 (Com Code § 2201(2)) could not be applied in absence of evidence that seller sent and buyer received shipping order and invoice)].

Strategic Point:

If the evidence will not support the application of Com Code § 2201(2) so as to find that the statute of frauds was satisfied, it may nevertheless be adequate to support application of one of the provisions in Com Code § 2201(3), describing exceptional situations in which the statute of frauds does not apply [see, e.g., Dairyman's Cooperative Creamery Assn. v. Leipold (1973) 34 CA3d 184, 188, 109 CR 753 (evidence brought case within Com Code § 2201(3)(c)); see also 27.13].

Compliance with general statute of frauds, see Ch. 15, Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract--Failure to Comply With Applicable Formalities, 15.07, 15.08.

27.12[2][b] Writing Must Confirm Contract. A writing that references the future making of an agreement, without recognizing the present existence of an agreement between the parties, or that acknowledges the other party's stated intention not to be bound by certain terms, is not a writing "in confirmation of the contract" as required by Com Code § 2201(2) [C.R. Fedrick, Inc. v. Borg-Warner Corp. (9th Cir 1977) 552 F2d 852, 855-856].

Example--Invoice or Purchase Order Confirms Contract:

The typical example of a writing that confirms a contract between merchants is a seller's invoice (which would be sufficient against the seller) [e.g., Debruyne Produce Co. v. Richmond Produce Co. (Bankr ND Cal 1990) 112 BR 364, 374]. A buyer's purchase order (which would be sufficient against the buyer) would likewise confirm a contract.

27.12[2][c] Unsigned Writing Can Be Sufficient. Com Code § 2201(2) requires a "writing in confirmation of the contract and sufficient against the sender." It does not specify that the writing must be signed. Interpreting "sufficient against the sender" to include the requirement of a signature would defeat the goal of quick, informal confirmation of business deals and lacks support in the Commercial Code [Procyon Corp. v. Components Direct, Inc. (1988) 203 CA3d 409, 412, 249 CR 813].

Example--Letter of Credit Is Sufficient Writing:

A buyer sued a seller for breach of contract after the seller failed to deliver goods under an oral agreement supported by an irrevocable letter of credit. The trial court correctly concluded that the buyer's irrevocable letter of credit satisfied Com Code § 2201(2). Since the irrevocable letter of credit fully bound the buyer to the terms of the contract, the document more than satisfied the writing requirement of Com Code § 2201(2) (in fact, the letter went a step further, not only memorializing the oral contract terms but also guaranteeing payment on delivery of the goods). It was "sufficient against the sender" because the buyer directed its bank to issue the letter and supplied the relevant contract terms for incorporation in the document, and in this limited sense, the bank was acting as the buyer's agent when it sent the letter. The bank's signature was thus "adopted by [the buyer] with present intention to authenticate" the letter of credit [Procyon Corp. v. Components Direct, Inc. (1988) 203 CA3d 409, 413, 249 CR 813 ; (interpreting former Com Code § 1201(39) (definition of "signed"); now see Com Code § 1201(37))].

27.12[2][d] Oral Contract Still Must Be Proved. Between merchants, failure to answer a written confirmation of a contract within 10 days of receipt is tantamount to a writing [Com Code § 2201(2)] that is sufficient against both parties [Com Code § 2201(1)]. The only effect, however, is to take away from the defaulting merchant the defense of the statute of frauds. The burden of persuading the trier of fact that a contract was in fact made orally, prior to the sending of the written confirmation, is unaffected [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 3].

27.12[2][e] Oral Offer Is Revocable Before Confirmation. Until the offeror receives a sufficient written confirmation from the offeree within a reasonable time after making an oral offer (and has reason to know the contents of the writing), the offer is revocable. If, in that time frame, the offeror changes the offer (for instance, in view of the parties' further negotiation as to the price or some other term), that change in position by the offeror is in effect a revocation of the original offer [C.R. Fedrick, Inc. v. Borg-Warner Corp. (9th Cir 1977) 552 F2d 852, 855]. It follows that a subsequently received written confirmation of the original (now revoked) offer would have no effect under Com Code § 2201(2).

Exception:

In a departure from the uniform provisions of the Commercial Code, Com Code § 2205(b) provides a special rule of limited irrevocability for an offer by a merchant to provide construction materials or supplies, when the merchant knows that the construction contractor will rely on the offer in submitting a bid for a job [see 27.09[3]].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

III. ESTABLISHING VALIDITY OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.13

27.13 Statute of Frauds Does Not Apply in Special Cases.

27.13[1] Statute Is Inapplicable If Goods Were to Be Specially Manufactured for Buyer. A contract that does not meet the writing requirement of Com Code § 2201(1) [see 27.06[1]] but is valid in other respects is enforceable if all of the following conditions are satisfied [Com Code § 2201(3)(a)]:

- The goods are to be specially manufactured for the buyer.
- The goods are not suitable for sale to others in the ordinary course of the seller's business.
- The seller, before notice of repudiation is received and under circumstances reasonably indicating that the goods are for the buyer, has made either a substantial beginning of their manufacture or commitments for their procurement.

Strategic Point--Contract Covering Both Unique Goods and Common Goods:

When an oral contract is enforceable under this rule, and the contract calls for the seller to deliver not only goods specially manufactured for the buyer (such as mirrors made and cut so as to fit into particular wall spaces) but also goods that are commonly obtainable and readily saleable to others in the ordinary course of the seller's business (such as ordinary bathroom fixtures), there is no reason to enforce the contract only with respect to the unique goods and not also with respect to the common goods [Distribu-Dor, Inc. v. Karadanis (1970) 11 CA3d 463, 468, 90 CR 231]. Enforcement of the contract as to the common goods could be justified under the equitable estoppel doctrine [see 27.13[5]] when the seller can claim lost profit damages as a volume seller or a middleman. Com Code § 2201(3)(a) clearly is a codification of one aspect of the general rule that does not permit a party to plead the bar of the statute of frauds if that party represented to the other an intention to make an oral contract, and the other party changed position in reliance on that representation [Distribu-Dor, Inc. v. Karadanis (1970) 11 CA3d 463, 469, 90 CR 231].

Jury Instructions:

Confirmation of Contract by Seller's Performance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.33 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Memorandum for party seeking to prove contract, see 27.20.

27.13[2] Statute Is Inapplicable If Party Admits Existence of Contract. A contract that does not meet the writing requirement of Com Code § 2201(1) [see 27.06[1]] but is valid in other respects is enforceable if the party against whom enforcement is sought admits in his or her pleading or testimony, or otherwise in court, that a contract for sale was made [Com Code § 2201(3)(b)].

Distinguish:

The contract is not enforceable beyond the quantity of goods admitted [Com Code § 2201(3)(b)].

Strategic Point:

If the making of a contract is admitted in court, whether in a written pleading, by stipulation, or by oral statement before the court, no additional writing is necessary for protection against fraud. Therefore, it is not possible to admit the contract in court and still plead the statute of frauds as a defense. However, the contract is not conclusively established by such an admission. The party's admission is evidence against that party of the truth of the facts admitted and nothing more; and as against the other party, the admission is not evidence at all [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 7].

Jury Instructions:

Admission That Contract Was Made, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.35 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Memorandum for party seeking to prove contract, see 27.21.

27.13[3] Statute Is Inapplicable If Seller Accepted Payment. A contract that does not meet the writing requirement of Com Code § 2201(1) [see 27.06[1]] but is valid in other respects is enforceable with respect to goods for which payment has been made and accepted [Com Code § 2201(3)(c)].

Strategic Point:

Partial performance as a substitute for the required anti-fraud memorandum can validate the contract only for the goods for which payment has been made and accepted. Part performance by the buyer requires the delivery of something that is accepted by the seller as performance. Thus, part payment may be made by money or check, accepted by the seller. If the agreed price consists of goods or services, then they must have been delivered and accepted. Receipt and acceptance of the price constitutes an unambiguous overt admission by both parties that a contract actually exists. If the court can make a just apportionment, therefore, the price having been paid, the seller can be forced to deliver an apportionable part of the goods. The overt actions of the parties justify admitting evidence of the other terms of the contract necessary to make a just apportionment. This is true even though the actions of the parties are not in themselves inconsistent with a different transaction such as a consignment for resale or a mere loan of money [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 2].

Distinguish--Partial Payment for Sale of Single Item:

When there is a partial payment instead of a memorandum, the partial payment evinces the existence of a contract and identifies the party to be charged, namely, the seller who received the money. There can be no dispute over quantity when only one item is involved [Lockwood v. Smigel (1971) 18 CA3d 800, 802-804, 96 CR 289 (oral contract to sell 1967 Rolls Royce Silver Shadow for $11,400; buyer paid and seller accepted $100 when deal was made, and seller's acceptance of that amount proved existence of contract)].

Jury Instructions:

Confirmation of Contract by Acceptance of Payment or Delivery, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.34 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Memorandum for party seeking to prove contract, see 27.22.

27.13[4] Statute Is Inapplicable If Buyer Accepted Goods.

27.13[4][a] Contract Is Enforceable As to Goods Accepted. A contract that does not meet the writing requirement of Com Code § 2201(1) [see 27.06[1]] but is valid in other respects is enforceable with respect to goods that have been received and accepted [Com Code § 2201(3)(c)]. The buyer must pay at the contract rate for the goods accepted [Com Code § 2207(1)]. Acceptance could have occurred in any of the following ways [see Com Code § 2606(1)]:

- The buyer signified that the goods were conforming or that any nonconformity would be disregarded [see 27.13[4][b]].
- The buyer failed to reject the goods [see 27.13[4][c]].
- The buyer acted in contravention of the seller's ownership of the goods [see 27.13[4][d]].

Strategic Point:

Partial performance as a substitute for the required anti-fraud memorandum can validate the contract only for the goods that have been received and accepted [Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 CA3d 432, 443, 249 CR 872]. Receipt and acceptance of goods constitutes an unambiguous overt admission by both parties that a contract actually exists. If the court can make a just apportionment, therefore, the agreed price of any goods actually delivered can be recovered without a writing. The overt actions of the parties justify admitting evidence of the other terms of the contract necessary to make a just apportionment. This is true even though the actions of the parties are not in themselves inconsistent with a different transaction such as a consignment for resale or a mere loan of money [Com Code § 2201, UCC § 2-201, official cmt 2].

Strategic Point--Goods Delivered to Third Person:

The seller's delivery of the goods to a third person at the direction of the buyer, and the third person's acceptance of the goods, will be sufficient for invoking Com Code § 2201(3)(c). It is not necessary that the buyer directly (or through an authorized agent) receive and accept the goods [Dairymen's Cooperative Creamery Assn. v. Leipold (1973) 34 CA3d 184, 188, 109 CR 753].

Distinguish:

Acceptance of the goods by the buyer does not of itself impair any remedy provided by Division 2 of the Commercial Code for nonconformity [Com Code § 2607(2)].

Jury Instructions:

Confirmation of Contract by Acceptance of Payment or Delivery, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.34 (Matthew Bender).

Acceptance and Rejection Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.220 (Matthew Bender).

Acceptance by Buyer, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.221 (Matthew Bender).

Memorandum for party seeking to prove contract, see 27.23.

What constitutes acceptance of goods, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 28.19[3].

27.13[4][b] Contract Is Enforceable If Buyer Indicated No Objection As to Conformity of Goods. Acceptance of goods, sufficient to validate a contract to the extent of the accepted goods [see 27.13[4][a]], occurred if the buyer signified to the seller that the goods were conforming or that the buyer would take or retain them in spite of their nonconformity [Com Code § 2606(1)(a)].

Prerequisite:

The buyer must have had a reasonable opportunity to inspect the goods before signifying either fact to the seller [Com Code § 2606(1)(a)].

Distinguish:

Acceptance of goods by the buyer, if made with knowledge of a nonconformity, cannot be revoked because of the nonconformity unless the acceptance was on the reasonable assumption that the nonconformity would be seasonably cured [Com Code § 2207(2); see Com Code § 2608 (revocation of acceptance of lot or commercial unit whose nonconformity substantially impairs its value); see also Com Code § 2105(5), (6) (definitions of "lot" and "commercial unit")].

Jury Instructions:

 Cross Reference:

Revocation of acceptance, see Ch. 28, Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 28.23, 28.40.

27.13[4][c] Contract Is Enforceable If Buyer Failed to Reject Goods. Acceptance of goods, sufficient to validate a contract to the extent of the accepted goods [see 27.13[4][a]], occurred if the buyer failed to make an effective rejection [Com Code § 2606(1)(b); see Com Code §§ 2602-2605 (rejection of goods)].

Prerequisite:

The buyer's failure to make an effective rejection must have occurred after the buyer had a reasonable opportunity to inspect the goods [Com Code § 2606(1)(b)].

Warning:

Rejection of goods must have occurred within a reasonable time after their delivery or tender. It is ineffective unless the buyer seasonably notifies the seller [Com Code § 2602(1)].

Strategic Point:

Acceptance of goods by the buyer generally precludes rejection of the goods accepted, unless the acceptance was on the reasonable assumption that the nonconformity would be cured [Com Code § 2607(2)].

Jury Instructions:

Requirements of an Effective Rejection, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.224 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Reasonable Time, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.14 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Seasonably, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.15 (Matthew Bender).

Giving Notice or Notification, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.17 (Matthew Bender).

27.13[4][d] Contract Is Enforceable If Buyer Acted in Contravention of Seller's Ownership. Acceptance of goods, sufficient to validate a contract to the extent of the accepted goods [see 27.13[4][a]], occurred if the buyer did any act inconsistent with the seller's ownership of the goods [Com Code § 2606(1)(c)].

Distinguish--Act Wrongful As to Seller:

If the act was wrongful as against the seller, it was an acceptance only if ratified by the seller [Com Code § 2606(1)(c)].

27.13[4][e] Contract Is Enforceable If Buyer Accepted Part of Commercial Unit. Acceptance of a part of any commercial unit is acceptance of that entire unit [Com Code § 2606(2); see Com Code § 2105(6) (definition of "commercial unit")].

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Commercial Unit, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.03 (Matthew Bender).

27.13[5] Equitable Estoppel Can Prevent Application of Statute. Generally, when a party would suffer an unconscionable injury if a statute of frauds were applied to prevent enforcement of an oral contract, that party may invoke the doctrine of equitable estoppel to overcome a failure to meet the writing requirement [Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 CA3d 432, 444, 249 CR 872 ; see Siam Numhong Prods. Co. v. Eastimpex (ND Cal 1994) 866 F Supp 445, 448 n5 (equitable estoppel is additional exception to statute of frauds defense); Com Code § 1103 (principles of law and equity, including estoppel, supplement provisions of Commercial Code); see also Com Code § 1304 (any contract subject to Commercial Code imposes obligation of good faith in its performance)].

Strategic Point--Proof Supporting Equitable Estoppel:

In California, the doctrine of estoppel is applicable when one party would suffer an unconscionable injury if the statute of frauds were asserted to prevent enforcement of an oral contract. Proof of the unconscionable injury that would result from denying enforcement of the contract depends on evidence either that one party was induced by the other party to seriously change position by relying on the oral agreement or that the other party would be unjustly enriched if the contract were not enforced [Monarco v. Lo Greco (1950) 35 C2d 621, 623-624, 220 P2d 737 ; Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 CA3d 432, 444, 249 CR 872].

Distinguish--Buyer's Loss of Profit Is Not Unconscionable Injury:

The fact that the buyer will lose a profit due to being unable to resell goods that the buyer expected to obtain under the oral contract, is not alone sufficient to show that an unconscionable injury would result to the buyer unless the contract were enforced [C.R. Fedrick, Inc. v. Borg-Warner Corp. (9th Cir 1977) 552 F2d 852, 857-858 ; Caplan v. Roberts (9th Cir 1974) 506 F2d 1039, 1041].

Chapter 27 Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code

III. ESTABLISHING VALIDITY OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-27 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 27.14

27.14 Parol Evidence Can Be Used.

27.14[1] Written Agreement Cannot Be Contradicted. No evidence of any prior agreement or of a contemporaneous oral agreement may contradict either of the following [Com Code § 2202]:

- Terms with respect to which the confirmatory memoranda of the parties agree; or
- Terms that are otherwise set forth in a writing intended by the parties as a final expression of their agreement with respect to the terms included in it.

Distinguish--Usage of Trade, Course of Dealing, and Course of Performance:

Written terms that cannot be contradicted by parol evidence may be explained or supplemented by evidence of a usage of trade [see 27.14[3]], evidence of a course of dealing [see 27.14[4]], or evidence of a course of performance [see 27.14[5]]. The hierarchy of evidence is:

- Express terms of the parties' agreement control the other three forms of evidence [Com Code § 1303(e)(1)].
- Course of performance controls both course of dealing and usage of trade [Com Code § 1303(e)(2)].
- Course of dealing controls usage of trade [Com Code § 1303(e)(3)].

Strategic Point:

The rule in Com Code § 2202 is identical in all material respects to the general parol evidence rule in CCP § 1856(a) [see Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 CA3d 388, 418 n17, 264 CR 779]. Therefore, cases applying that general rule may be relevant in a case governed by Division 2 of the Commercial Code.

Jury Instructions:

Contract Terms--General Instruction, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.60 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Agreement, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.07 (Matthew Bender).

Definition of Contract Terms, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.09 (Matthew Bender).

Evidence Supplementing and Explaining Terms, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.61 (Matthew Bender).

Interpretation of Contract Terms, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.90 (Matthew Bender).

➡ Cross Reference:

Parol evidence rule of CCP § 1856(a), see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract, 21.41 -21.43, 21.53, 21.57, 21.58.

27.14[2] Additional Terms Can Be Proved. Written terms that cannot be contradicted by parol evidence [see 27.14[1]] may be explained or supplemented by evidence of consistent additional terms [Com Code § 2202(b)].

Exception:

Evidence of consistent additional terms is not admissible if the court finds that the parties intended the writing to be a complete and exclusive statement of the terms of their agreement [Com Code § 2202(b)]. In other words, when the additional terms are such that, if agreed on, they would certainly have been included in the parties' written agreement in the view of the court, evidence of their alleged making must be kept from a jury [Com Code § 2202, UCC § 2-202, official cmt 3].

Consider:

Rather than assuming that the parties intended a fully integrated agreement, Com Code § 2202(b) assumes that a written contract for the sale of goods does not express the full agreement of the parties unless the court expressly so finds [Balfour, Guthrie & Co., Ltd. v. Gourmet Farms (1980) 108 CA3d 181, 188, 166 CR 422 ; see In re Pacific Sunwest Printing (Bankr SD Cal 1980) 6 BR 408, 413 (whether written contract for sale of goods is intended by parties as final expression of their agreement is question of fact to be determined by court after reviewing all evidence, extrinsic or otherwise)].

Example--Finding of Integrated Agreement:

A seller sold a machine to a buyer pursuant to a written contract stating that it superseded "all prior oral or written agreements or representations" and excluded all warranties "not set forth in a writing signed by an authorized representative" of the seller. The trial court correctly found that the parties meant what they said in their contract. Therefore, the seller was not bound by a representation (that proved to be materially inaccurate) about what the machine could do, which was stated in a separate letter signed on the seller's behalf by someone other than "an authorized representative" of the seller [S.M. Wilson & Co. v. Smith Int'l, Inc. (9th Cir 1978) 587 F2d 1363, 1370-1371].

Strategic Point:

The rule in Com Code § 2202(b) is comparable to the general parol evidence rule in CCP § 1856(b) [see FPI Dev., Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 CA3d 367, 387, 282 CR 508 ; Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 CA3d 388, 418 n18, 264 CR 779 (essentially same provision)]. Therefore, cases applying that general rule may be relevant in a case governed by Division 2 of the Commercial Code.

Jury Instructions:

Evidence of Consistent Additional Terms, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.62 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Parol evidence rule of CCP § 1856(b), see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract, 21.41 -21.43, 21.53, 21.57, 21.58.

27.14[3] Usage of Trade Is Relevant.

27.14[3][a] Trade Usage May Explain or Supplement Express Terms. Written terms that cannot be contradicted by parol evidence [see 27.14[1]] may be explained or supplemented by evidence of usage of trade [Com Code § 2202(a)].

Any usage of trade in the vocation or trade in which the parties are engaged or of which they are or should be aware is relevant in ascertaining the meaning of the parties' agreement, may give particular meaning to specific terms of the agreement, and may supplement or qualify the terms of the agreement. A usage of trade applicable in the place in which part of the performance under the agreement is to occur may be so utilized as to that part of the performance [Com Code § 1303(d)].

Strategic Point--Ambiguity Is Not Required:

Com Code § 2202(a) permits a trade usage to be put in evidence in aid of interpretation without requiring proof of ambiguity [Balfour, Guthrie & Co., Ltd. v. Gourmet Farms (1980) 108 CA3d 181, 190, 166 CR 422 (trial court properly admitted testimony of expert on subject of custom and usage in grain brokerage industry in aid of interpreting pricing mechanism in contract to buy and sell wheat, even though pricing terms were complete and unambiguous)]. The parties' writings are to be read on the assumption that the usages of trade were taken for granted when the writings were phrased. Therefore, unless carefully negated, the usages of trade have become an element of the meaning of the words used [Hegglblade-Marguleas-Tenneco, Inc. v. Sunshine Biscuit, Inc. (1976) 59 CA3d 948, 954-955, 131 CR 183 ; Com Code § 2202, UCC § 2-202, official cmt 2].

Examples:

- A written "sales and marketing agreement" between strawberry growers and a broker of fresh strawberries contained provisions, the meaning of which the parties disputed, concerning loans by the broker to assist the growers in producing their crops. In upholding a trial court's conclusion about the meaning of that agreement, an appellate court first pointed out the parties' course of performance [see 27.14[5]] then observed, "Furthermore, when considered together with the circumstances of its execution--including the [separate] financing statement, the past relationship between [the broker] and the growers, and general practice in the strawberry production industry--this document should be read to encompass the growers' obligation to repay loans made by [the broker] to assist them in financing production of their strawberry crop" [New W. Fruit Corp. v. Coastal Berry Corp. (1991) 1 CA4th 92, 100, 1 CR2d 664, 11 CR2d 664 (emphasis added)].

■ A food product company contracted to buy 100,000 sacks of potatoes from a grower, whereupon the grower undertook to plant the potatoes. By the time the potatoes were grown, the food product company's requirements had declined, and it needed only 60,000 sacks. The grower sued for damages. At trial the food product company offered testimony as to the custom and usage of the potato processing industry, to the effect that the quantity specified in such a contract is only an estimate and that the buyer would not be obligated to take more than the buyer's actual requirements. On appeal the grower contended that the quantity terms in the contract were definite and unambiguous, hence it was error to admit into evidence the custom of the industry to regard the amounts specified as reasonable estimates. The appellate court held that contention to be without merit [Heggblade-Marguleas-Tenneco, Inc. v. Sunshine Biscuit, Inc. (1976) 59 CA3d 948, 954, 131 CR 183].

Prerequisite:

Evidence of a relevant usage of trade offered by one party is not admissible unless that party has given the other party notice that the court finds sufficient to prevent unfair surprise to the other party [Com Code § 1303(g)].

Strategic Point:

The rule in Com Code § 2202(a) is comparable to the general parol evidence rule in CCP § 1856(c). Therefore, cases applying that general rule may be relevant in a case governed by Division 2 of the Commercial Code.

Cross Reference:

Parol evidence rule of CCP § 1856(c), see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract, 21.41 -21.43, 21.53, 21.57, 21.58.

27.14[3][b] Trade Usage Is Any Standard Practice or Method. A usage of trade is any practice or method of dealing having such regularity of observance in a place, vocation, or trade as to justify an expectation that it will be observed with respect to the transaction in question [Com Code § 1303(c)].

Strategic Point--Proof of Trade Usage:

The existence and scope of a usage of trade are to be proved as facts [Com Code § 1303(c); Board of Trade v. Swiss Credit Bank (9th Cir 1979) 597 F2d 146, 149 (evidence concerning usage of trade was admissible and created triable issue of fact as to meaning intended by parties for phrase "full set clean on board bills of lading")].

Strategic Point--Knowledge of Trade Usage Assumed:

Persons carrying on a particular trade are deemed to be aware of prominent trade customs applicable to their industry. The knowledge may be actual or constructive. It is constructive if the custom is of such general and universal application that the party must be presumed to know of it. The party to be bound by constructive knowledge is not required to have been engaged in the industry for any length of time [Heggblade-Marguleas-Tenneco, Inc. v. Sunshine Biscuit, Inc. (1976) 59 CA3d 948, 956-957, 131 CR 183].

Strategic Point--Legal Issue:

If it is established that a usage of trade is embodied in a trade code or similar record, the interpretation of the record is a question of law [Com Code § 1303(c)].

Jury Instructions:

Usage of Trade Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.12 (Matthew Bender).

27.14[3][c] Trade Usage Can Be Localized. A usage of trade applicable in the place in which part of the performance under the agreement is to occur may be so utilized as to that part of the performance [Com Code § 1303(d)].

27.14[3][d] Written Terms, Course of Performance, and Course of Dealing Supersede Trade Usage. The express terms of an agreement and any applicable usage of trade must be construed whenever reasonable as consistent with each other. However, if such a construction is unreasonable, the following rules apply [Com Code § 1303(e)]:

- Express terms prevail over course of performance [see 27.14[5]], course of dealing [see 27.14[4]], and usage of trade.
- Course of performance prevails over course of dealing and usage of trade.
- Course of dealing prevails over usage of trade.

27.14[4] Course of Dealing Is Relevant.

27.14[4][a] Course of Dealing May Explain or Supplement Express Terms. Written terms that cannot be contradicted by parol evidence [see 27.14[1]] may be explained or supplemented by evidence of a course of dealing [Com Code § 2202(a)]. A course of dealing is relevant in ascertaining the meaning of the parties' agreement, may give particular meaning to specific terms of the agreement, and may supplement or qualify the terms of the agreement [Com Code § 1303(d)].

Consider:

The parties' writings are to be read on the assumption that prior dealings between the parties were taken for granted when the writings were phrased. Therefore, unless carefully negated, the course of dealing has become an element of the meaning of the words used [Com Code § 2202, UCC § 2-202, official cmt 2].

Example:

A written "sales and marketing agreement" between strawberry growers and a broker of fresh strawberries contained provisions, the meaning of which the parties disputed, concerning loans by the broker to assist the growers in producing their crops. In upholding a trial court's conclusion about the meaning of that agreement, an appellate court first pointed out the parties' course of performance [see 27.14[5]] then observed, "Furthermore, when considered together with the circumstances of its execution--including the [separate] financing statement, the past relationship between [the broker] and the growers, and general practice in the strawberry production industry--this document should be read to encompass the growers' obligation to repay loans made by [the broker] to assist them in financing production of their strawberry crop" [New W. Fruit Corp. v. Coastal Berry Corp. (1991) 1 CA4th 92, 100, 1 CR2d 664, 11 CR2d 664 (emphasis added)].

Strategic Point:

The rule in Com Code § 2202(a) is comparable to the general parol evidence rule in CCP § 1856(c). Therefore, cases applying that general rule may be relevant in a case governed by Division 2 of the Commercial Code.

Cross Reference:

Parol evidence rule of CCP § 1856(c), see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract, 21.41 -21.43, 21.53, 21.57, 21.58.

27.14[4][b] Course of Dealing Is Sequence of Previous Conduct Between Parties. A course of dealing is a sequence of conduct concerning previous transactions between the parties to a particular transaction that is fairly to be regarded as establishing a common basis of understanding for interpreting their expressions and other conduct [Com Code § 1303(b)].

Jury Instructions:

Course of Dealing Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.11 (Matthew Bender).

27.14[4][c] Written Terms and Course of Performance Supersede Course of Dealing. The express terms of an agreement and an applicable course of dealing must be construed wherever reasonable as consistent with each other; but when such a construction is unreasonable, the following rules apply [Com Code § 1303(e)]:

- Express terms prevail over course of performance [see 27.14[5]], course of dealing, and usage of trade [see 27.14[3]].
- Course of performance prevails over course of dealing and usage of trade.
- Course of dealing prevails over usage of trade.

27.14[5] Course of Performance Is Relevant.

27.14[5][a] Course of Performance May Explain or Supplement Express Terms. Written terms that cannot be contradicted by parol evidence [see 27.14[1]] may be explained or supplemented by evidence of a course of performance [Com Code § 2202(a)]. If the contract for sale involves repeated occasions for performance by either party with knowledge of the nature of the performance and opportunity for objection to it by the other, any course of performance accepted or acquiesced in without objection will be relevant to determine the meaning of the agreement [Com Code § 1303(d)].

Example:

A written "sales and marketing agreement" between strawberry growers and a broker of fresh strawberries contained provisions, the meaning of which the parties disputed, concerning loans by the broker to assist the growers in producing their crops. In upholding a trial court's conclusion about the meaning of that agreement, an appellate court observed, "Finally, the record indicates that after the agreement was executed, [the broker] continued making loans to the growers and deducting the amounts they owed from the proceeds of strawberry sales; the growers' acquiescence in this course of performance indicates this exchange was mutually understood to be within the scope of the ongoing relationship between the growers and [the broker]" [New W. Fruit Corp. v. Coastal Berry Corp. (1991) 1 CA4th 92, 100, 1 CR2d 664, 11 CR2d 664 (emphasis added)].

Strategic Point:

The rule in Com Code § 2202(a) is comparable to the general parol evidence rule in CCP § 1856(c). Therefore, cases applying that general rule may be relevant in a case governed by Division 2 of the Commercial Code.

Jury Instructions:

Course of Performance Defined, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.13 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Parol evidence rule of CCP § 1856(c), see Ch. 21, Asserting a Particular Construction of Contract, 21.41 -21.43, 21.53, 21.57, 21.58.

27.14[5][b] Written Terms Supersede Course of Performance. The express terms of an agreement and any course of performance, as well as any course of dealing [see 27.14[4]] and usage of trade [see 27.14[3]], must be construed whenever reasonable as consistent with each other; but when such a construction is unreasonable, the following rules apply [Com Code § 1303(e)]:

- Express terms prevail over course of performance [see 27.14[5]], course of dealing, and usage of trade [see 27.14[3]].
- Course of performance prevails over course of dealing and usage of trade.
- Course of dealing prevails over usage of trade.

27.14[5][c] Course of Performance Can Show Modification or Waiver of Inconsistent Terms. Subject to the provisions of Com Code § 2209 on modification [see 27.10] and waiver [see 27.11], a course of performance is relevant to show a waiver or modification of any term inconsistent with that course of performance [Com Code § 1303(f)].

Memorandum--No Contract by Merchant Because Offer Was Revoked and Defendant Did Not Sign Assurance in Plaintiff's Form.

[Include the following, if appropriate, in a memorandum by a merchant seeking, as defendant, to prove the absence of a contract for the sale of goods, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

NO CONTRACT EXISTED BECAUSE DEFENDANT REVOKED THE OFFER BEFORE PLAINTIFF'S ACCEPTANCE WAS COMMUNICATED TO DEFENDANT. THE OFFER WAS NOT IRREVOCABLE EVEN THOUGH IT WAS IN A SIGNED WRITING THAT BY ITS TERMS GAVE ASSURANCE THAT IT WOULD BE HELD OPEN, BECAUSE THAT ASSURANCE WAS IN A FORM SUPPLIED BY PLAINTIFF, AND DEFENDANT DID NOT SEPARATELY SIGN IT.

Merchant Must Sign Assurance in Offeree's Form. An offer by a merchant to buy or sell goods in a signed writing that by its terms gives assurance that it will be held open is not revocable, for lack of consideration, during the time stated or, if no time is stated, for a reasonable time not exceeding three months; but any such term of assurance on a form supplied by the offeree must be separately signed by the offeror (Com. Code § 2205(a)).

[Include the following, if appropriate, in a memorandum by a merchant seeking, as defendant, to prove the absence of a contract for the sale of goods, along with factual discussion demonstrating how the principles of law stated below are applicable to the particular case.]

NO CONTRACT EXISTED BECAUSE DEFENDANT REVOKED THE OFFER BEFORE PLAINTIFF'S ACCEPTANCE WAS COMMUNICATED TO DEFENDANT. THE OFFER WAS NOT IRREVOCABLE BECAUSE IT WAS AN ORAL OFFER TO SUPPLY GOODS TO A LICENSED CONTRACTOR FOR A PRICE OF $2,500 OR MORE, AND IT WAS NOT CONFIRMED IN WRITING BY PLAINTIFF OR PLAINTIFF'S AGENT WITHIN 48 HOURS AFTER IT WAS RENDERED.

Oral Offer to Supply Contractor Must Be Confirmed in Writing. When a merchant renders an offer to supply goods to a licensed contractor, and the merchant has knowledge that the contractor is duly licensed and that the offer will be relied on by the contractor in the submission of a bid for a construction contract with a third person, the offer is irrevocable, notwithstanding lack of consideration, for 10 days after the awarding of the contract to the prime contractor but in no event more than 90 days after the date the bid or offer was rendered by the merchant, except that an oral offer for a price of $2,500 or more must be confirmed in writing by the contractor or his or her agent within 48 hours after it is rendered. Failure by the contractor to confirm such an offer in writing releases the merchant from the offer (Com. Code § 2205(b)).

1. IT IS VALID IN OTHER RESPECTS.
2. IT REQUIRES THAT THE GOODS BE SPECIALLY MANUFACTURED FOR THE BUYER.
3. THE GOODS ARE NOT SUITABLE FOR SALE TO OTHERS IN THE ORDINARY COURSE OF THE SELLER'S BUSINESS.
4. THE SELLER MADE _____ [A SUBSTANTIAL BEGINNING OF THEIR MANUFACTURE or COMMITMENTS FOR THEIR PROCUREMENT].
5. THE SELLER MADE _____ [THAT BEGINNING or THOSE COMMITMENTS BEFORE NOTICE OF REPUDIATION WAS RECEIVED AND UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH REASONABLY INDICATED THAT THE GOODS WERE FOR THE BUYER.

Contract Is Enforceable If Goods Are Specially Manufactured for Buyer. A contract that does not satisfy the requirements of Commercial Code Section 2201(1), but that is valid in other respects, is enforceable if the goods are to be specially manufactured for the buyer and are not suitable for sale to others in the ordinary course of the seller's business and the seller, before notice of repudiation is received and under circumstances that reasonably indicate that the goods are for the buyer, has made either a substantial beginning of their manufacture or commitments for their procurement (*Com. _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF]

HAS ACCEPTED [SOME OF] THE GOODS.

A. Contract Is Enforceable When Buyer Accepted Goods. A contract that does not satisfy the requirements of Commercial Code Section 2201(1), but that is valid in other respects, is enforceable with respect to goods that have been received and accepted (Com. Code § 2201(3)(c)).

[EITHER, if buyer has affirmatively accepted goods]

B. Buyer Accepted Goods. For purposes of Commercial Code Section 2201(3), acceptance of goods occurs when the buyer, after a reasonable opportunity to inspect the goods, signifies to the seller that the goods are conforming or that the buyer will take or retain them in spite of their nonconformity (Com. Code §§ 2201(3)(c), 2606(1)(a)).

[OR, or buyer failed to reject goods after reasonable opportunity to inspect them]

B. Buyer Accepted Goods By Failure to Reject Them. For purposes of Commercial Code Section 2201(3), acceptance of goods occurs when the buyer fails to make an effective rejection, but such an acceptance does not occur until the buyer has had a reasonable opportunity to inspect them (Com. Code §§ 2201(3)(c), 2606(1)(b)).

[OR, if buyer has performed an act that is inconsistent with seller's ownership of goods]

B. Buyer Accepted Goods by Action. For purposes of Commercial Code Section 2201(3), acceptance of goods occurs when the buyer does any act inconsistent with the seller's ownership; but if that act is wrongful as against the seller, it is an acceptance only if ratified by the seller (Com. Code §§ 2201(3)(c), 2606(1)(c)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Acceptance of Part of Commercial Unit Is Acceptance of Entire Unit. For purposes of Commercial Code Section 2201(3), acceptance of a part of any commercial unit is acceptance of that entire unit (Com. Code §§ 2201(3)(c), 2606(2)).

Chapter 28 Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California
Commercial Code
I. STRATEGY

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.01

28.01 Scope.

This chapter covers breach of contract actions under Division 2 of the Commercial Code, including:

- Objective and strategy when suing for breach of contract under the Commercial Code [see 28.02].
- Determining shipping obligations created by the parties' agreement [see 28.05].
- Identifying risk-of-loss obligations created by the agreement [see 28.08].
- Identifying proper tender of the goods [see 28.09].
- Determining fulfillment of delivery obligations [see 28.10, 28.11].
- Determining conformity of the goods to the contract [see 28.14].
- Applying rules for rejecting nonconforming goods [see 28.19].
- Assessing whether rejection of goods has been precluded by acceptance [see 28.19[2], [3]].
- Taking into account the buyer's inspection of the goods [see 28.20, 28.21].
- Avoiding the contract after casualty to the goods [see 28.22].
- Revoking acceptance of nonconforming goods [see 28.23].
- Establishing whether a "sale on approval" or "sale or return" agreement allows the return of conforming goods [see 28.24].
- Determining the parties' obligations regarding payment of the contract price [see 28.25 -28.29].
- Properly pleading a breach of contract action [see 28.30 -28.32].

- Assessing available affirmative defenses [see 28.33], including:
 - ☐ Compliance with usage of trade [see 28.37];
 - ☐ Specific intent not to be bound while a price term is open [see 28.38];
 - ☐ Defendant's status as a nonmerchant [see 28.39];
 - ☐ The buyer's ineffectual attempt to revoke acceptance [see 28.40]; and
 - ☐ Improper rejection of the goods [see 28.41].
- Availability of substitute performance [see 28.42].
- Determining whether performance is excused [see 28.43].
- Determining whether a party can demand assurances from the other party [see 28.44].
- Evaluating each party's options after anticipatory repudiation [see 28.45]

Chapter 28 Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California
Commercial Code
I. STRATEGY

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.02

28.02 Objective and Strategy.

The general and residual rule of the Commercial Code is that the parties may agree to vary the effect of almost all code provisions. The phrase "unless otherwise agreed" does not imply that the effect of other provisions may not be varied by agreement [Com Code § 1302(c)]. Any divergence from the standard rules in the Commercial Code can be the result of an express agreement or the attending circumstances [Com Code § 2303, UCC § 2-303, official cmt 2]. Therefore all aspects of the agreement, not simply the governing Commercial Code provisions, must be considered. While the obligations of good faith, diligence, reasonableness, and care may not be disclaimed by agreement, the parties may determine by agreement the standards by which the performance of those obligations will be measured, provided those standards are not manifestly unreasonable [Com Code § 1302(b)]. The conduct of the parties may be sufficient to show such an agreement [see Com Code §§ 1201(3), 1303(e), 2204(1), 2207(3)].

In order to promote the continued expansion of commerce, the formation of contracts is construed liberally under the Commercial Code. The fact that parties more easily find themselves bound to vague contracts for the sale of goods is tempered by the duties of cooperation, good faith, and fair dealing, as well as a body of procedural requirements relating to difficulties and disputes in the execution of a contract [see Com Code § 2311]. Therefore, when evaluating whether or not to sue for breach, a party's attorney must make sure that the client has first taken all of the steps required by the Code.

Chapter 28 Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California Commercial Code

II. IDENTIFYING SELLER'S BREACH--SHIPMENT AND DELIVERY PROBLEMS

*2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.0428.04 Options and Strategies.

Breach of a contract for the sale of goods may occur when a party has not met shipment or risk-of-loss obligations. Risk of loss often is established by the use of standard shipping terms, although, as in most matters governed by the Division 2 of the Commercial Code, the parties are free to create an alternative arrangement. A party's attorney must first establish the obligations of the agreement, including those created by course of performance and usage of trade, and then determine whether the parties met their respective shipping obligations and, in the event of loss, whether the party bearing the risk has paid for the loss.

When the seller makes the goods available to the buyer in the manner prescribed by the Commercial Code or the agreement--that is, when the seller "tenders" the goods--the buyer generally must accept conforming goods [Com Code § 2503]. Whether a party has properly performed, as well as who bears the risk of loss, frequently will hinge on whether or not the goods were properly tendered.

Chapter 28 Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California
Commercial Code

II. IDENTIFYING SELLER'S BREACH--SHIPMENT AND DELIVERY PROBLEMS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.05

28.05 Contract Can Control Shipping and Risk of Loss.

28.05[1] Seller Makes Shipping Choices When Contract Is Silent.

28.05[1][a] Shipping Terms Can Be Left Open. The parties may leave shipping requirements to be specified later without invalidating their original agreement [Com Code § 2311(1)].

Cross Reference:

Commercial Code's liberal approach to contract formation, see Ch. 27, Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 27.02.

28.05[1][b] Seller Arranges for Shipment. Unless otherwise agreed, the shipping specifications are left up to the seller [Com Code § 2311(2)]. The seller's specifications must be in good faith and commercially reasonable [Com Code § 2311(1)].

Jury Instructions:

Performance to Be Specified by a Party, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.124 (Matthew Bender).

Did Parties "Otherwise Agree," see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.126 (Matthew Bender).

28.05[2] Buyer Bears Risk of Loss Under "Shipment" Agreement.

28.05[2][a] No Destination Is Specified. Under a "shipment" agreement, the seller is required or authorized to ship the goods to the buyer, but not to a particular destination [Com Code § 2504]. Once the goods are delivered to the carrier, the buyer bears the risk of loss during transit [Com Code § 2509(1)(a)].

The standard indicia of a "shipment" agreement are [Com Code § 2504]:

- The seller must put the goods in the possession of a carrier that is a reasonable choice in view of the nature of the goods and other circumstances of the case [see 28.05[2][b]].

- The seller must make a contract for transportation of the goods that is reasonable in view of the nature of the goods and other circumstances of the case [see 28.05[2][b]].
- The seller must obtain and promptly deliver or tender in due form any document necessary to enable the buyer to obtain possession of the goods or otherwise required by the agreement or by usage of trade.
- The seller must promptly notify the buyer of the shipment.

28.05[2][b] Seller Chooses Carrier and Makes Transportation Contract. The seller must choose a carrier and make a contract for transportation of the goods. Both the carrier and the contract must be reasonable in view of the nature of the goods and other circumstances [Com Code § 2504].

In the absence of a controlling agreement, the Commercial Code provisions on options and cooperation respecting performance give the seller the choice of any reasonable carrier, routing, and other arrangements. Whether or not the shipment is at the buyer's expense, the seller must see to any arrangements reasonable under the circumstances--such as refrigeration, the watering of livestock, protection against cold, sending along any necessary help, selection of specialized cars, and the like. Com Code § 2504(a) is intended to cover all necessary arrangements, whether made by contract with the carrier or otherwise [Com Code § 2504, UCC § 2-504, official cmt 3].

Exception:

These requirements are relaxed if the buyer is in a position to make the appropriate arrangements and the seller gives reasonable notice that the buyer needs to do so [Com Code § 2504, UCC § 2-504, official cmt 3].

Warning:

When the contract between the buyer and seller places the risk of shipment on the seller, an agreement between the seller and the carrier to a valuation below the true value of the goods--thereby cutting of the buyer's opportunity to recover from the carrier in the event of loss--is an improper contract under Com Code § 2504(a) [Com Code § 2504, UCC § 2-504, official cmt 3].

28.05[2][c] Material Delay or Loss Entitles Buyer to Reject Goods. The seller's failure to notify the buyer of the shipment or to make a proper contract for transportation is a ground for the buyer's rejection of the goods only if material delay or loss ensued [Com Code § 2504].

Example:

Frequently an agreement expressly requires prompt notification, such as by wire or cable (or e-mail). Such a term may be of the essence, and Com Code § 2504(c) does not prevent the parties from making this a particular ground for rejection. To have this vital and irreparable effect on the seller's duties, such a term should be part of the "dickered" terms written in any "form," or should otherwise be called seasonably (that is, at or within the time agreed or, if no time is agreed, at or within a reasonable time [Com Code § 1205(b)]) and sharply to the seller's attention [Com Code § 2504, UCC § 2-504, official cmt 5].

Jury Instructions:

Tender by Seller Under Shipment and Destination Contracts, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.211 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Discussion and form for general shipping agreement, see California Legal Forms, § 52.124 (Matthew Bender).

28.05[3] Seller Bears Risk of Loss Under "Destination" Agreement. Under a "destination" agreement, the seller is required to deliver the goods to a particular destination [Com Code § 2503(3)]. The risk of loss is on the seller until the goods are tendered for the buyer's possession at the destination [Com Code § 2509(1)(b)].

Jury Instructions:

Tender by Seller Under Shipment and Destination Contracts, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.211 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion and form for general shipping agreement, see California Legal Forms, § 52.124 (Matthew Bender).

28.05[4] Standard Shipping Terms Can Establish Obligations.

28.05[4][a] F.O.B. at Place of Shipment Means Seller Delivers Goods to Carrier. Under an agreement specifying F.O.B. ("free on board") at the place of shipment, the seller bears the expense and risk of putting the goods into possession of the carrier [Com Code § 2319(1)(a)].

Jury Instructions:

28.05[4][b] F.O.B. by Specified Vessel Means Seller Loads Goods. Under an agreement specifying F.O.B. at the place of shipment and also specifying "vessel" (that is, a vessel, car, or other mode of transport), the seller bears the expense and risk of putting the goods into the carrier's possession and the expense and risk of loading the goods on the shipping vessel [Com Code § 2319(1)(c)]. If the shipment is to be F.O.B. vessel, and overseas shipment is contemplated, then the seller must obtain a negotiable bill of lading [Com Code §§ 2319(1)(c), 2323(1)].

Distinguish:

Com Code § 2319(1)(c) not only specifies the duties of a seller who engages to deliver F.O.B. vessel, or the like, but should make clear to attorneys that an agreement is not soundly drawn when, for instance, it looks to reshipment from San Francisco or New York, but speaks merely of "F.O.B." and specifies the place [Com Code § 2319, UCC § 2-319, official cmt 2].

28.05[4][c] F.A.S. Means Seller Delivers Goods Alongside Vessel. Under an agreement specifying F.A.S. ("free alongside"), the seller delivers the goods alongside the vessel at the seller's risk and expense in the manner usual in the port or on the dock designated and provided by the buyer [Com Code § 2319(2)(a)]. The seller must obtain and tender a receipt for the goods, in exchange for which the carrier is under a duty to issue a bill of lading [Com Code § 2319(2)(b)].

Jury Instructions:

General Shipping Terms Definition, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.170 (Matthew Bender).

 Cross Reference:

Discussion of delivery F.A.S., see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.52[5][a] (Matthew Bender).

28.05[4][d] Buyer Provides F.A.S. and F.O.B. Instructions. Unless otherwise agreed, under F.A.S. and F.O.B. agreements the buyer must seasonably (that is, at or within the time agreed or, if no time is agreed, at or within a reasonable time [Com Code § 1205(b)]), give any needed instructions for making delivery, the loading berth of the vessel, and in an appropriate case its name and sailing date [Com Code § 2319(3)]. The seller may treat the failure of needed instructions as a failure of cooperation [Com Code § 2319(3); see Com Code § 2311 (duty to cooperate)]. The seller also may move the goods in any reasonable manner preparatory to delivery or shipment [Com Code § 2319(3)].

28.05[4][e] "Ex-Ship" Means Seller Delivers From Vessel. Under an agreement specifying "ex-ship" as the delivery method, the seller must deliver from a carrying vessel that has reached a place at the named port of destination where goods of the kind are usually discharged [Com Code § 2322(1)]. The seller must discharge all liens arising out of the carriage and furnish the buyer with a direction that puts the carrier under a duty to deliver the goods [Com Code § 2322(2)(a)].

28.05[4][f] "No Arrival, No Sale" Means Seller Ships and Tenders Without Promising Goods Arrival. Under an agreement specifying "no arrival, no sale," the seller ships conforming goods and, if they arrive by any means, tenders them on arrival, without assuming any obligation to ensure that the goods will arrive [Com Code § 2324(a)].

Jury Instructions:

General Shipping Terms Definition, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.170 (Matthew Bender).

No Arrival; No Sale, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.175 (Matthew Bender).

28.05[4][g] C.I.F. and C. & F. Mean Price Includes Insurance and Freight. The term "C.I.F." means that the price includes in a lump sum the cost of the goods and insurance and freight to the named destination. The term "C. & F." (or "C.F.") means that the price includes the cost of the goods and freight to the named destination, but not insurance [Com Code § 2320(1)]. Unless otherwise agreed, and even though used only in connection with the stated price and destination, the term "C.I.F. destination" or its equivalent requires the seller, at the seller's expense and risk, to do all of the following [Com Code § 2320(2)(a)-(e)]:

- Put the goods into the possession of a carrier at the port for shipment and obtain negotiable bills of lading covering the entire transportation to the named destination.
- Load the goods and obtain a receipt from the carrier (which may be contained in a bill of lading) showing that the freight has been paid or provided for.
- Obtain a policy or certificate of insurance, including any war risk insurance, of a kind and on terms then current at the port of shipment, in the usual amount, in the currency of the contract, shown to cover the same goods covered by the bills of lading and providing for payment of loss to the order of the buyer or for the account of whomever it may concern (but the seller may add to the price the amount of the premium for any such war risk insurance). The statute does not specify whether this requirement requires force majeure coverage other than war risk; it would seem that whether or not such coverage is required would depend on the terms then current at the port of shipment.
- Prepare an invoice of the goods and procure any other documents required to effect shipment or to comply with the contract.
- Forward and tender with commercial promptness all of the documents in due form and with any indorsement necessary to perfect the buyer's rights.

Under both C.I.F. and C. & F. contracts, unless otherwise agreed, the buyer must make payment against tender of the required documents, and the seller may not tender, nor may the buyer demand, delivery of the goods in substitution for the documents [Com Code § 2320(4)].

Distinguish:

The insurance stipulated by the C.I.F. term is for the buyer's benefit, to protect against the risk of loss or damage to the goods in transit. A clause in a C.I.F. contract such as "insurance for the account of sellers" should be viewed in its ordinary mercantile meaning: that the seller must pay for the insurance, not that the insurance is intended to run to the seller's benefit [Com Code § 2320, UCC § 2-320, official cmt 3].

Example:

Mail order company did not bear the risk of loss of goods in transit when nothing in the company's conduct, and nothing in the delivery or insurance terms of the company's mail order forms, suggested that it was offering anything other than a standard, C.I.F.-type shipment contract, which its customers agreed to when they used the company's mail order form to purchase goods [Wilson v. Brawn of Cal., Inc. (2005) 132 CA4th 549, 557].

When, without fault of either party, the agreed berthing, loading, or unloading facilities fail, or an agreed type of carrier becomes unavailable, or the agreed manner of delivery otherwise becomes commercially impractical but a commercially reasonable substitute is available, the substitute performance must be tendered and accepted [Com Code § 2614(1)], in the absence of specific agreement to the contrary [Com Code § 2614, UCC § 2-614, official cmt 1].

28.07 Seller May Ship Under Reservation.

In the absence of a controlling agreement, a seller authorized to ship goods may ship under reservation and tender documents of title, although the buyer may inspect before payment unless inspection is inconsistent with the terms of the contract [Com Code § 2310(b)].

Distinguish:

Shipment under reservation allows the buyer to inspect the goods before paying for them, but does not require the seller to give up possession of the goods until the buyer has paid for them, unless the contract allows the buyer to buy on credit [Com Code § 2310, UCC § 2-310, official cmt 2; see Com Code § 2513(3) (times when buyer is not entitled to inspect before payment)].

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.08

28.08 Party in Breach Assumes Risk of Loss.

28.08[1] Seller Who Makes Nonconforming Tender Assumes Risk. If the buyer has a right of rejection because of the seller's nonconforming tender or delivery, the risk of loss remains on the seller until either [Com Code § 2510(1)]:

- The nonconformity is cured; or
- The buyer accepts despite the nonconformity.

Cross References:

Nonconforming goods, see 28.14.

Discussion of risk of loss in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.50 (Matthew Bender).

28.08[2] Buyer's Rightful Revocation of Acceptance Places Risk on Seller. On rightfully revoking acceptance, the buyer may treat the risk of loss as resting on the seller from the outset, to the extent of any deficiency in the buyer's effective insurance coverage [Com Code § 2510(2)].

Consider:

The word "effective" as applied to insurance coverage is used to meet the case of supervening insolvency of the insurer [Com Code § 2510, UCC § 2-510, official cmt 3]. "Deficiency" means such deficiency in the insurance coverage as exists without subrogation. This rule merely distributes the risk of loss as stated and is not intended to be disturbed by any subrogation of an insurer [Com Code § 2510, UCC § 2-510, official cmt 3].

Cross Reference:

Revocation of acceptance, see 28.23

28.08[3] Buyer in Breach Bears Risk.

28.08[3][a] Seller May Treat Risk of Loss As Resting on Buyer. If the buyer repudiates or otherwise breaches the contract before the risk of loss has passed to the buyer, the seller may treat the risk of loss as having rested on the buyer for a commercially reasonable time [Com Code § 2510(3)].

28.08[3][b] Conforming Goods Must Have Been Identified to Contract. In order for the risk of loss to pass to a buyer in breach, the conforming goods must already be identified to the contract at the time of breach [Com Code § 2510(3)].

28.08[3][c] Buyer Is Liable for Seller's Insurance Deficit. A buyer guilty of breach is liable for the risk of loss to the extent that the seller's effective insurance coverage is deficient [Com Code § 2510(3)].

Consider:

The word "effective" as applied to insurance coverage is used to meet the case of supervening insolvency of the insurer [Com Code § 2510, UCC § 2-510, official cmt 3]. "Deficiency" means such deficiency in the insurance coverage as exists without subrogation. This rule merely distributes the risk of loss as stated and is not intended to be disturbed by any subrogation of an insurer [Com Code § 2510, UCC § 2-510, official cmt 3].

28.08[3][d] Parties May Agree Otherwise. The parties may create an alternative agreement governing the risk of loss in the event of a breach [Com Code § 2303].

II. IDENTIFYING SELLER'S BREACH--SHIPMENT AND DELIVERY PROBLEMS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.09

28.09 Manner of Delivery Is Determined by Contract and Commercial Code.

28.09[1] "Tender" Requires Due Performance. "Tender" connotes such performance by the tendering party as puts the other party in default if the other party fails to proceed in some appropriate manner. However, the term "tender" is used in the Commercial Code in two different senses [Com Code § 2503, UCC § 2-503, official cmt 1]:

- In one sense it refers to "due tender," which contemplates an offer coupled with a present ability to fulfill all conditions resting on the tendering party and must be followed by actual performance if the other party is evidently ready to proceed. Unless the context unmistakably indicates otherwise, this is the meaning of "tender" in the Commercial Code, and the occasional addition of the word "due" is only for clarity and emphasis.
- At other times "tender" is used to refer to an offer of goods or documents under a contract as if in fulfillment of its conditions even though there is a defect when measured against the contract obligation.

Jury Instructions:

Tender of goods generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.210 (Matthew Bender).

➤ Cross References:

Discussion of tender of goods, see California Legal Forms, § 52.262 (Matthew Bender).

28.09[2] Seller Must Put Goods at Buyer's Disposition. To complete tender of delivery, the seller must put and hold conforming goods at the buyer's disposition in accordance with the agreement [Com Code § 2503(1)].

28.09[3] Seller Must Notify Buyer of Tender. On tender of delivery, the seller must give the buyer any notification reasonably necessary to enable the buyer to take delivery [Com Code § 2503(1)].

28.09[4] Tender Must Be at Reasonable Hour. Tender must be at a reasonable hour, and the goods must be kept available for the period reasonably necessary to enable the buyer to take possession [Com Code § 2503(1)(a)]. Usage of the trade and the attending circumstances will determine what is a reasonable hour for tender and what constitutes a reasonable period of holding the goods available [Com Code § 2503, UCC § 2-503, official cmt 3].

28.09[5] Destination Contract Requires Tender Documents. If the seller is required to deliver to a particular destination (a "destination contract"), tender requires that the seller follow the provisions of Com Code §§ 2503(1) and 2503(4), (5):

- If the goods are in the possession of a bailee, the seller must either tender a negotiable document of title covering the goods or procure acknowledgment by the bailee of the buyer's right to possession of the goods.
- If the contract requires the seller to deliver documents, the seller must tender all such documents in correct form. Tender through customary banking channels is sufficient and dishonor of a draft accompanying or associated with the documents constitutes nonacceptance or rejection. Documents are never "required" except when there is an express contract term or it is plainly implicit in the peculiar circumstances of the case or in a usage of trade [Com Code § 2503, UCC § 2-503, official cmt 7].

Jury Instructions:

Tender by Seller Under Shipment and Destination Contracts, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.211 (Matthew Bender).

28.09[6] Buyer Must Provide Facilities for Receipt. Unless otherwise agreed, the buyer must provide the proper facilities for receipt of the goods [Com Code § 2503(1)(b)].

II. IDENTIFYING SELLER'S BREACH--SHIPMENT AND DELIVERY PROBLEMS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.10

28.10 Place for Delivery Is Seller's Place of Business or Location of Identified Goods.

Absent an alternative arrangement, the place for delivery of goods is the seller's place of business (or residence, if the seller has no place of business) [Com Code § 2308(a)]. If the goods are already identified when the contract is made, the place for delivery is the location of those identified goods, unless otherwise agreed [Com Code § 2308].

II. IDENTIFYING SELLER'S BREACH--SHIPMENT AND DELIVERY PROBLEMS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.11

28.11 Time for Shipment or Delivery Must Be Reasonable.

If the parties do not agree to a specific time for shipment or delivery, the goods are to be delivered at a reasonable time [Com Code § 2309(1)].

Strategic Point:

Reasonableness in this context depends on what constitutes acceptable commercial conduct in view of the nature, purpose, and circumstances of the action to be taken. Agreement as to a definite time, however, may be found in a term implied in the contractual circumstances, usage of trade, or course of dealing or performance, as well as in an express term. Such cases fall outside Com Code § 2309(1) since in them the time for action is "agreed" by usage [Com Code § 2309, UCC § 2-309, official cmt 1].

Consider:

When the time for delivery is left open, unreasonably early offers of or demands for delivery are intended to be read under the Commercial Code as expressions of desire or intention, requesting the assent or acquiescence of the other party, not as final positions that may amount, without more, to breach, or may create breach by the other side [Com Code § 2309, UCC § 2-309, official cmt 4].

28.13 Options and Strategies.

The seller's primary obligation regarding the goods is that they must conform to the contract. However, as with all contracts under Division 2 of the Commercial Code, usage of trade and course of dealing can determine the degree to which the goods must conform exactly to the contract.

III. IDENTIFYING SELLER'S BREACH--NONCONFORMING GOODS

*2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.1428.14 Conforming Goods Must Meet Contract Requirements.

Goods are "conforming" or conform to the contract when they are in accordance with the obligations under the contract [Com Code § 2106(2)].

Strategic Point--Seller:

The general policy of Division 2 of the Commercial Code requires exact performance of the seller's obligations as a condition to the right to require acceptance by the buyer [Com Code § 2106, UCC § 2-106, official cmt 2]. Note that nothing in Division 2 specifically requires that a nonconformity be "material" as that term generally is used in contract law [but see Com Code § 1103 (general principles of law supplement commercial code provisions); see Ch. 22, Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract, 22.24 et seq.]. However, the seller is in part safeguarded against surprise as a result of sudden technicality on the buyer's part by Com Code § 2508, which allows the seller to cure improper tender or delivery [Com Code § 2106, UCC § 2-106, official cmt 2; see 28.14, 28.16]. Moreover, usage of trade frequently permits commercial leeways in performance, and the language of the agreement must be read in the light of such custom or usage and also any prior course of dealing and, in a long-term contract, the course of performance [Com Code § 2106, UCC § 2-106, official cmt 2].

IV. IDENTIFYING BUYER'S BREACH--IMPROPER REJECTION OF GOODS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.18

28.18 Options and Strategies.

To further the expansion of commerce and preserve the contract whenever possible, Division 2 of the Commercial Code provides guidelines for dealing with nonconforming goods. Counsel for both parties should carefully examine whether the buyer properly rejected nonconforming goods. Whether or not there has been proper grounds for any rejection may determine who is liable for any breach of the contract that occurred. The threshold issue for both parties, of course, is whether or not the goods were in fact nonconforming [see 28.12 -28.16]. If they are arguably nonconforming, the seller will want to show either:

- That the buyer, by words or conduct, accepted the goods, and that any subsequent revocation of that acceptance was ineffective; or
- That the buyer's rejection of the goods was unjustified and will not excuse the buyer from liability under the contract.

Conversely, the buyer will want to show either:

- That buyer rejected the goods, or that any acceptance of the goods was subsequently revoked; and/or
- That any rejection of the goods was effective and did not constitute a breach of the contract on the buyer's part.

Commercial Code

IV. IDENTIFYING BUYER'S BREACH--IMPROPER REJECTION OF GOODS

*2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.1928.19 Nonconforming Goods Can Be Accepted or Rejected.

28.19[1] Buyer May Reject Nonconforming Goods. Unless otherwise agreed by contractual limitation of remedy, if the goods or the tender of delivery fail in any respect to conform to the contract, the buyer may either [Com Code § 2601]:

- Reject the whole;
- Accept the whole; or
- Accept any commercial unit or units and reject the rest.

Timing:

The buyer may reject nonconforming goods within a reasonable time after tender or delivery [Com Code § 2602(1)].

Strategic Point:

Rejection is ineffective unless the buyer seasonably notifies the seller [Com Code § 2602(1)].

Warning:

A tender or delivery of goods made pursuant to a contract of sale, even though wholly nonconforming, requires affirmative action by the buyer to avoid acceptance [Com Code § 2602, UCC § 2-602, official cmt 1].

Jury Instructions:

Acceptance and Rejection Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.220 (Matthew Bender).

Requirements of an Effective Rejection, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.224 (Matthew Bender).

Did Parties "Otherwise Agree"?, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.126 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Discussion of buyer's rejection of goods, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.60[1] (Matthew Bender).

28.19[2] Acceptance of Goods Precludes Rejection. The buyer's acceptance of goods precludes rejection of those goods [Com Code § 2607(2)].

Strategic Pointss--All Parties:

- If the buyer accepts with knowledge of a nonconformity, the acceptance cannot be revoked later because of the nonconformity, unless the acceptance was on the reasonable assumption that the nonconformity would be seasonably cured [Com Code § 2607(2)]. However, the goods still can be returned thereafter if the buyer revokes the acceptance under Com Code § 2608 [Com Code § 2608, UCC § 2-608, official cmt 2], which allows for revocation under limited circumstances.

- Acceptance does not of itself impair any other remedies for nonconformity [Com Code § 2607(2)].

Cross References:

Revocation of acceptance, see 28.23.

Discussion of acceptance of nonconforming goods, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.76[4][b] (Matthew Bender).

28.19[3] Acceptance May Occur by Acts or Conduct.

28.19[3][a] Acceptance Occurs If Buyer Signifies Retention of Goods. Acceptance results if, after a reasonable opportunity to inspect goods, the buyer signifies to the seller that the goods are conforming or that the buyer will take or retain them despite a nonconformity [Com Code § 2606(1)(a)].

For purposes of Division 2 of the Commercial Code, "acceptance" as applied to goods means that the buyer, pursuant to the contract, takes particular goods that have been appropriated to the contract as being the buyer's own, whether or not the buyer is obligated to do so, and whether the buyer does so by words, action, or silence when it is time to speak [Com Code § 2606, UCC § 2-606, official cmt 1].

Strategic Points:

- Despite the buyer's initial communication of rejection, a subsequent communication of acceptance will be binding [Com Code § 2606, UCC § 2-606, official cmt 4].

- Payment made after tender is always one circumstance tending to signify acceptance of the goods, but in itself it can never be more than one circumstance and is not conclusive. Furthermore, a conditional communication of acceptance always remains subject to its expressed conditions [Com Code § 2606, UCC § 2-606, official cmt 3].

Jury Instructions:

Acceptance and Rejection Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.220 (Matthew Bender).

Acceptance by Buyer, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.221 (Matthew Bender).

28.19[3][b] Acceptance Occurs If Buyer Fails to Reject Goods After Inspection. The buyer has accepted the goods if, after a reasonable opportunity to inspect the goods, the buyer fails to make an effective rejection [Com Code § 2606(1)(b)].

Jury Instructions:

Acceptance and Rejection Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.220 (Matthew Bender).

Acceptance by Buyer, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.221 (Matthew Bender).

28.19[3][c] Acceptance Occurs If Buyer Does Anything Inconsistent With Seller's Ownership. If the buyer does any act inconsistent with the seller's ownership of the goods, that act constitutes acceptance, even if the buyer communicated a rejection before the act [Com Code § 2606, UCC § 2-606, official cmt 4].

Distinguish:

If the act is wrongful as against the seller, it constitutes an acceptance by the buyer only if ratified by the seller [Com Code § 2606(1)(c)].

Jury Instructions:

Acceptance and Rejection Generally, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.220 (Matthew Bender).

Acceptance by Buyer, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.221 (Matthew Bender).

28.19[4] Buyer Must Pay at Contract Rate for Accepted Goods. The buyer must pay the contract rate for goods accepted [Com Code § 2607(1)].

28.19[5] Buyer Must Notify Seller of Breach After Acceptance. The buyer, within a reasonable time after discovering (or after the buyer should have discovered) any breach, must notify the seller of the breach or be barred from any remedy [Com Code § 2607(3)(a)].

Strategic Point:

The content of the notification need be sufficient merely to let the seller know that the transaction is still troublesome and must be watched. There is no reason to require that the notification include a clear statement of all the objections that will be relied on by the buyer to preserve the buyer's rights [Com Code § 2607, UCC § 2-607, official cmt 4].

Timing:

The time of notification is to be determined by applying commercial standards to a merchant buyer. A reasonable time for notification for a nonmerchant buyer (that is, a consumer) is extended depending on the case. The rule requiring notification is designed to defeat commercial bad faith, not to deprive a good faith consumer of his or her remedy [Com Code § 2607, UCC § 2-607, official cmt 4].

Jury Instructions:

Giving Notice or Notification, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.17 (Matthew Bender).

Notice of Breach as to Accepted Goods, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.222 (Matthew Bender).

Discussion of notification of breach, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.60[2][b] (Matthew Bender).

Discussion and form for notice of breach, see California Legal Forms, § 52.386 (Matthew Bender).

28.19[6] Buyer Must Take Appropriate Steps to Return or Dispose of Rejected Goods.

28.19[6][a] Merchant Buyer Must Follow Seller's Reasonable Instructions After Rejection. When the seller has no agent or place of business at the market of rejection, a merchant buyer is under a duty, after rejection of goods in the buyer's possession or control, to follow any reasonable instructions received from the seller with respect to the goods [Com Code § 2603(1)].

Distinguish:

Instructions are not reasonable if, on demand, indemnity for expenses is not forthcoming [Com Code § 2603(1)].

28.19[6][b] Buyer Must Make Effort to Sell Perishable Goods. If the seller does not provide instructions, a merchant buyer must make reasonable efforts to sell the goods for the seller's account if they are perishable or threaten to decline in value speedily [Com Code § 2603(1)].

Distinguish:

The duty to resell covers only goods in the buyer's "possession or control," but those are intended as words of wide, rather than narrow, import. In effect, the measure of "control" is whether the buyer can practicably effect control without undue commercial burden [Com Code § 2603, UCC § 2-603, official cmt].

Warning:

A buyer that fails to make a salvage sale when the duty to do so has arisen is subject to damages for the value of the goods [Com Code § 2603, UCC § 2-603, official cmt 2].

Jury Instructions:

Definition of Merchant and Transactions Between Merchants, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.06 (Matthew Bender).

28.19[6][c] Buyer May Store, Reship, or Sell Rejected Goods. If the seller gives no instructions within a reasonable time after notification of rejection, the buyer may store the rejected goods for the seller's account or reship them to the seller or resell them for the seller's account with reimbursement for costs [Com Code § 2604].

28.19[7] Buyer Can Reject Single Installment Under Installment Contract.

28.19[7][a] Installment Contract Authorizes Delivery in Separate Lots. An "installment contract" is one that requires or authorizes the delivery of goods in separate lots to be separately accepted, even if the contract contains a clause such as "each delivery is a separate contract" or its equivalent [Com Code § 2612(1)].

28.19[7][b] Buyer Can Reject Installment With Uncurable Nonconformity. The buyer may reject any nonconforming installment under an installment contract if the nonconformity either [Com Code § 2612(2)]:

- Substantially impairs the value of that installment and cannot be cured; or
- Is a defect in the required documents.

Example--Substantial Impairment:

Substantial impairment of the value of an installment can turn not only on the quality of the goods but also on such factors as time, quantity, assortment, and the like. It must be judged in terms of the normal or specifically known purposes of the contract [Com Code § 2612, UCC § 2-612, official cmt 4].

Example--Defect in Required Documents:

A defect in required documents could consist of such matters as the absence of insurance documents under a C.I.F. contract, falsity of a bill of lading, or one failing to show shipment within the contract period or to the contract destination. Even in such cases, however, the provisions on cure of tender apply if appropriate documents are readily procurable [Com Code § 2612, UCC § 2-612, official cmt 4].

Strategic Point:

An installment agreement may require accurate conformity in quality as a condition to the right to acceptance if it is made clear either by express provision or by the circumstances. The effect of such an agreement is to define explicitly what amounts to a substantial impairment of value that is impossible to cure. A clause requiring accurate compliance as a condition to the right to acceptance, however, must have some basis in reason, must avoid imposing hardship by surprise, and is subject to waiver or to displacement by practical construction [Com Code § 2612, UCC § 2-612, official cmt 4].

28.19[7][c] Buyer Must Accept Installment on Adequate Assurance of Cure. If the seller gives adequate assurance of cure, the buyer must accept the installment, unless the nonconformity impairs the value of the whole contract [Com Code § 2612(2)].

28.19[7][d] Nonconformity Impairing Whole Contract Is Breach of the Whole. Whenever the nonconformity or default of one or more of the installments substantially impairs the value of the whole contract, there is a breach of the whole. The contract is reinstated, however, if the buyer accepts a nonconforming installment without seasonably notifying of cancellation or if the buyer brings an action only for past installments or demands performance of future installments [Com Code § 2612(3)].

Commercial Code

IV. IDENTIFYING BUYER'S BREACH--IMPROPER REJECTION OF GOODS

*2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.2028.20 Buyer Has Right to Inspect Goods.

28.20[1] Buyer Can Inspect When Goods Are Tendered, Delivered, or Identified. When goods are tendered or delivered or identified to the contract for sale, the buyer has a right before payment or acceptance to inspect them at any reasonable place and time and in any reasonable manner [Com Code § 2513(1)]. When the seller is required or authorized to send the goods to the buyer, the inspection may be made after their arrival [Com Code § 2513(1)].

No agreement by the parties can displace the entire right of inspection except when the contract is simply for the sale of "this thing." Even in a sale of boxed goods sold "as is," inspection is a right of the buyer, since if the boxes prove to contain some other merchandise altogether, the price can be recovered [Com Code § 2513, UCC § 2-513, official cmt 1].

Strategic Point:

It is not necessary that the buyer select the most appropriate time, place, or manner to inspect or that buyer's selection be the customary one in the trade or locality. Reasonableness will be determined by trade usage, past practices between the parties, and the other circumstances of the case [Com Code § 2513, UCC § 2-513, official cmt 3].

Example:

The buyer needed to replace its standard 18-tooth gear assembly with a 36-tooth gear to perform a subcontract for precision lathe work. The buyer's employee submitted a written purchase order when he picked up the specialized gear but did not count the teeth before installing it. The buyer did not discover that the seller had provided the wrong assembly until after the lathe had incorrectly threaded screws for 15 days. The seller argued that the buyer failed in its duty to examine the gear to determine whether it filled the contract. The court reasoned that the seller could not be insulated from liability simply because the buyer's messenger had an opportunity to make a cursory, over-the-counter inspection before he accepted the incorrect merchandise for delivery to his employer [Square Deal Mach. Co. v. Garret Corp. (1954) 128 CA2d 286, 275 P2d 46].

Jury Instructions:

Did Parties "Otherwise Agree"?, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.126 (Matthew Bender).

28.20[2] Buyer Pays Expenses Subject to Reimbursement. Expenses of inspection must be borne by the buyer but may be recovered from the seller if the goods do not conform and are rejected [Com Code § 2513(2)]. Demonstrable and reasonable costs of the inspection are part of the buyer's incidental damages after the seller's breach [Com Code § 2513, UCC § 2-513, official cmt 4].

28.20[3] Buyer May Not Inspect Before Payment Against Documents or for C.O.D. Delivery. Unless otherwise agreed, the buyer is not entitled to inspect the goods before payment of the price when the contract provides for either [Com Code § 2513(3)]:

- Delivery C.O.D. or on other like terms; or
- Payment against documents of title (except when payment is due only after the goods become available for inspection).

28.20[4] Agreed Place and Method of Inspection Are Exclusive. A place or method of inspection fixed by the parties is presumed to be exclusive, but unless otherwise expressly agreed that does not postpone identification to the contract or shift the place for delivery or for passing the risk of loss. If compliance becomes impossible, inspection will be as provided in the governing code provisions [see 28.20[1]] unless the place or method fixed was clearly intended as an indispensable condition, failure of which avoids the contract [Com Code § 2513(4)].

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.21

28.21 Contract Can Require Payment Before Inspection.

When the contract requires payment before inspection, nonconformity of the goods does not excuse the buyer from making payment unless either [Com Code § 2512(1)]:

- The nonconformity appears without inspection in the mere taking of delivery; or
- Despite tender of the required documents, the circumstances would justify injunction against honoring the instrument, due to fraud or the like [see Com Code § 5109(b)].

Payment under such a contract does not constitute an acceptance of goods or impair the buyer's right to inspect or any of the buyer's remedies [Com Code § 2512(2)].

28.22 Buyer May Avoid Contract or Modify Price After Identified Goods Suffer Casualty.

If the contract requires goods identified when the contract was made, and the goods suffered casualty without the fault of either party before the risk of loss passed to the buyer, or in a proper case under a "no arrival, no sale" term [see 28.05[4][f]], then the buyer has the following options [Com Code § 2613]:

- If the loss is total, the contract is avoided.
- If the loss is partial or the goods have so deteriorated as no longer to conform to the contract, the buyer may nevertheless demand inspection and either:
 - ☐ Treat the contract as avoided; or
 - ☐ Accept the goods with due allowance from the contract price for the deterioration or the deficiency in quantity but without further right against the seller.

Example:

A casualty to goods can be a physical change, or can be a delay when the contract is a "no arrival, no sale" agreement [Com Code § 2613, UCC § 2-613, official cmt 3].

Chapter 28 Contract for Sale of Goods--Suing or Defending Action for Breach of Contract Under California
Commercial Code

IV. IDENTIFYING BUYER'S BREACH--IMPROPER REJECTION OF GOODS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.23

28.23 Buyer May Revoke Acceptance of Nonconforming Lot or Commercial Unit.

28.23[1] Acceptance Revocable When Nonconformity Substantially Impairs Value of Goods. The buyer may revoke acceptance of a lot or commercial unit whose nonconformity substantially impairs its value to the buyer [Com Code § 2608(1)].

Example:

When a financing lessor validly disclaimed all warranties and the goods conformed to the lease, the lessee could not revoke acceptance as to the lessor but could revoke as to the manufacturer [U.S. Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 CA3d 1431, 1459-1453, 279 CR 533].

Jury Instructions:

Substantial Impairment, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.191 (Matthew Bender).

28.23[2] Acceptance Revocable When It Was Predicated on Cure. The buyer may revoke if the buyer accepted the goods on the reasonable assumption that the nonconformity would be cured, and it was not seasonably cured [Com Code § 2608(1)(a)].

28.23[3] Acceptance Revocable When Induced by Seller or Circumstances. The buyer may revoke if the buyer did not discover the nonconformity because acceptance was reasonably induced either by the difficulty of discovery before acceptance or by the seller's assurances [Com Code § 2608(1)(b)].

Jury Instructions:

Grounds for Revocation of Acceptance, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.223 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

General discussion of revocation of acceptance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.60[2][c] (Matthew Bender).

28.23[4] Revocation Must Be Timely and With Notice to Seller. Revocation of acceptance must occur within a reasonable time after the buyer discovers or should have discovered the nonconformity and before any substantial change in condition of the goods not caused by their own defects. Revocation is not effective until the buyer notifies the seller of it [Com Code § 2608(2)].

Jury Instructions:

Giving Notice or Notification, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.17 (Matthew Bender).

28.23[5] Revocation Equates to Rejection. When the buyer revokes, the buyer has the same rights and duties with regard to the goods involved as if the buyer had rejected them [Com Code § 2608(3)].

IV. IDENTIFYING BUYER'S BREACH--IMPROPER REJECTION OF GOODS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.24

28.24 Sale on Approval and Sale-or-Return Contract Allow Return of Conforming Goods.

28.24[1] Sale on Approval Covers Goods Primarily for Buyer's Use.

28.24[1][a] Goods Must Be for Buyer's Use. A transaction is a "sale on approval" if the goods are delivered primarily for use. Unless otherwise agreed, they may be returned by the buyer even if they conform to the contract [Com Code § 2326(1)(a)]. The buyer's willingness to receive and test the goods is the consideration for the seller's engagement to deliver and sell [Com Code § 2326, UCC § 2-326, official cmt 1].

Distinguish:

The fact that a company permitted a customer to return goods for a refund was a benefit to the customer, but did not in and of itself suggest that the parties intended the seller to retain an interest in the goods until some time after they were delivered to the customer, and did not convert a routine sale with a right to return into a sale on approval [Wilson v. Brawn of Cal., Inc. (2005) 132 CA4th 549, 559-560].

Jury Instructions:

Did Parties "Otherwise Agree"?, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.126 (Matthew Bender).

28.24[1][b] Use of Goods to Try Them Does Not Constitute Acceptance. Use of the goods consistent with the purpose of trying is not acceptance, but failure seasonably to notify the seller of election to return the goods is acceptance. If the goods conform to the contract, acceptance of any part is acceptance of the whole [Com Code § 2327(1)(b)].

28.24[1][c] Risk of Loss and Title Pass to Buyer on Acceptance. Under a sale on approval, unless otherwise agreed, although the goods are identified to the contract, the risk of loss and the title do not pass to the buyer until acceptance [Com Code § 2327(1)(a)].

Example--Parties Otherwise Agreed:

Contract that specifically and expressly called for the buyer to pay for shipping and insurance could not be a sale on approval because it placed the risk of loss in transit on the buyer goods [Wilson v. Brawn of Cal., Inc. (2005) 132 CA4th 549, 557-558].

After due notification of election to return, the return is at the seller's risk and expense, but a merchant buyer must follow any reasonable instructions [Com Code § 2327(1)(c)].

Jury Instructions:

Did Parties "Otherwise Agree"?, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.126 (Matthew Bender).

Cross Reference:

Identifying goods to contract, see 26.10.

28.24[1][d] Buyer's Creditors Cannot Claim Goods. If the buyer is holding the goods under a sale on approval, the buyer's creditors cannot claim the goods until acceptance [Com Code § 2326(2)].

Cross References:

Discussion and form for sale-on-approval or sale-or-return agreement, see California Legal Forms, § 52.282 (Matthew Bender).

28.24[2] Sale-or-Return Contract Covers Goods for Resale.

28.24[2][a] Goods Must Be for Resale. Under a sale-or-return contract, the goods are delivered primarily for resale, and unless otherwise agreed, they may be returned by the buyer even though they conform to the contract [Com Code § 2326(1)(b)].

Jury Instructions:

Did Parties "Otherwise Agree"?, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.126 (Matthew Bender).

28.24[2][b] Return Is at Buyer's Risk and Expense. If the buyer elects to return the goods under a sale-or-return contract, the return is at the buyer's risk and expense [Com Code § 2327(2)(b)].

28.24[2][c] Creditor Can Claim Goods in Buyer's Possession. Goods held by the buyer under a sale-or-return contract are subject to claims of the buyer's creditors while in the buyer's possession [Com Code § 2326(2)].

Example:

A trial court order holding that a third party claimant's title to and possession of a car it sold to the defendant was superior to the creditor-plaintiff's was reversed, because the conclusive presumption under the Commercial Code was that the car had been transferred to the defendant as a sale-or-return item, and plaintiff's right as an attaching creditor was superior to that of the claimant [Minor v. Stevenson (1991) 227 CA3d 1613, 278 CR 558].

28.27 Price Can Be Made Payable in Money, Goods, Real Estate, or Anything Else of Value.

The price can be made payable in money or otherwise. If it is payable in whole or in part in goods, each party is a seller of the goods that party is to transfer [Com Code § 2304(1)].

Distinguish:

Even if all or part of the price is payable in an interest in real estate, the transfer of the goods and the seller's obligations with reference to them are subject to the Commercial Code, but the transfer of the interest in real estate and the transferor's connected obligations are not subject to the Code [Com Code § 2304(2)].

V. IDENTIFYING BUYER'S BREACH--PAYMENT PROBLEMS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.28

28.28 Price Can Be Left Open.

28.28[1] Open Price Will Be Set at Reasonable Price. The parties can conclude a contract for sale even if the price is not settled. If the price is not settled, the price is a reasonable price at the time for delivery if any of the following applies [Com Code § 2305(1)(a)-(c)]:

- Nothing is said as to price;
- The price is left to be agreed by the parties and they fail to agree; or
- The price is to be fixed in terms of some agreed market or other standard as set or recorded by a third person or agency, and it is not so set or recorded.

Example:

There may be cases in which a particular person's judgment is not chosen merely as a barometer or index of a fair price, but rather is an essential condition to the parties' intent to make a contract. For example, the case in which a known and trusted expert is to "value" a particular painting for which there is no market standard differs sharply from the situation in which a named expert is to determine the grade of cotton. The difference would support a finding that in the one case the parties did not intend to make a binding agreement if that expert were unavailable whereas in the other they did so intend. Other circumstances would of course affect the validity of such a finding [Com Code § 2305, UCC § 2-305, official cmt 4].

➡ Cross Reference:

Discussion of enforceability of contract with open price term, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, §§ 500.20[1], 500.33[2] (Matthew Bender).

28.28[2] Price May Be Fixed in Good Faith by One Party. A price to be fixed by the seller alone or by the buyer alone must be fixed in good faith [Com Code § 2305(2)].

Consider:

Good faith includes observance of reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing in the trade if the party is a merchant. In the normal case a "posted price" or a future seller's or buyer's "given price," "price in effect," "market price," or the like, satisfies the good faith requirement [Com Code § 2305, UCC § 2-305, official cmt 3].

Jury Instructions:

One Party to Set Price, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.111 (Matthew Bender).

28.28[3] Party Without Fault May Cancel Contract or Fix Price. When a price left to be fixed otherwise than by agreement of the parties fails to be fixed through the fault of one party, the other party may either [Com Code § 2305(3)]:

- Treat the contract as canceled; or
- Fix a reasonable price.

Jury Instructions:

Open Price Term: Reasonable Price, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.110 (Matthew Bender).

Failure to Cooperate in Setting a Price, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.112 (Matthew Bender).

28.28[4] Parties Can Agree Not to Be Bound If Price Is Not Fixed. When the parties intend not to be bound unless the price is fixed or agreed, and it is not fixed or agreed, there is no contract. In such a case the buyer must return any goods already received--or if unable to do so, the buyer must pay the reasonable value of the goods at the time of delivery--and the seller must return any portion of the price paid on account [Com Code § 2305(4)].

Strategic Point:

Under some circumstances the postponement of agreement on price will mean that no deal has really been concluded. Whether this is so is, in most cases, a question to be determined by the trier of fact [Com Code § 2305, UCC § 2-305, official cmt 2].

Jury Instructions:

Open Price Term: Reasonable Price, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.110 (Matthew Bender).

Cross References:

Price can be omitted from Commercial Code contract, see Ch. 27, Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code, 27.12[1][b].

V. IDENTIFYING BUYER'S BREACH--PAYMENT PROBLEMS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.29

28.29 Price May Be Demanded for Each Lot.

Unless otherwise agreed, all goods called for by a contract for sale must be tendered in a single delivery, and payment is due only on such tender. When the circumstances give either party the right to make or demand delivery in lots, the price, if it can be apportioned, may be demanded for each lot [Com Code § 2307].

Example:

It is not commercially feasible to deliver or to receive the goods in a single lot when the contract calls for the shipment of, for example, 10 carloads of coal, but only three cars are available at a given time.

Similarly, in a contract involving brick necessary to build a building, the buyer's storage space may be limited so that it would be impossible to receive the entire amount of brick at once, or it may be necessary to assemble the goods as in the case of cattle on the range, or to mine them. In such cases the undelivered balance of goods under the contract must be forthcoming within a reasonable time and in a reasonable manner [Com Code § 2307, UCC § 2-307, official cmt 3].

Number of Deliveries and Payments, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.116 (Matthew Bender).

VI. PLEADING BREACH OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.31

28.31 Options and Strategies.

Once a dispute over a contract for the sale of goods has reached the pleading stage, the standard rules governing contract actions apply. Where an action under the Commercial Code differs from other contract actions is in proving the existence of the contract. The Commercial Code provides liberal rules under which proof of the making of a contract for the sale of goods is comparatively easy [see Com Code § 2201 et seq.].

Example:

A general contractor was sued by an aircraft company after the explosion of an electric switchboard. The contractor settled the action and then sued the subcontractor that installed the switchboard, seeking indemnity. The evidence concerning the contract included the subcontractor's purchase order and the seller's invoice, which contained conflicting provisions concerning warranties. Neither party signed the other party's document, and the evidence was in conflict regarding which party's document was first tendered to the other. The court held that the parties manifested an agreement by their conduct: the seller supplied the switchboard gear, and the subcontractor accepted it. Under Com Code § 2207(3) there was a contract, which consisted of the terms on which the two writings agreed, supplemented by the provisions of the code [Steiny & Co., Inc. v. California Elec. Supply Co., Inc. (2000) 79 CA4th 285, 93 CR2d 920].

VI. PLEADING BREACH OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.32

28.32 Complaint Must Allege Breach and Damages.

The complaint in an action under Division 2 of the Commercial Code should conform to the pleading requirements that apply in any conventional action for breach of contract. Thus, the complaint must allege the following:

- The facts leading to the legal conclusion that the parties made a contract [see Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 CA3d 887, 913, 92 CR 723]. These facts must show all of the following elements [CC § 1550]:

- ☐ Parties capable of contracting.

- ☐ Mutual consent.

- ☐ Adequate consideration.

- ☐ A lawful purpose.

- Whether the contract is written, oral, or implied [see CCP § 430.10(g)].

- ☐ For a written contract, include the essential terms [International Billing Servs., Inc. v. Emigh (2000) 84 CA4th 1175, 1187, 101 CR2d 532] and attach a copy of the contract (or all documents collectively comprising the contract) to be incorporated by reference.

- ☐ For an oral contract, allege the legal effect, consideration, and the nature of the contract [Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 C2d 778, 780, 792, 256 P2d 947].

- ☐ For an implied-in-fact contract, include allegations of the conduct from which the contract can be inferred [Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 C2d 240, 247, 74 CR 398, 449 P2d 462].

- For an ambiguous contract, the meaning that the plaintiff ascribes to the parties' language [Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v. City & Suburban Mortgage Co. (1970) 10 CA3d 206, 211, 215, 217, 88 CR 858].
- The satisfaction of any conditions precedent [see CC § 1439].
 - ☐ A general allegation of the performance of conditional acts (for instance, that the plaintiff "duly performed all the conditions on his part") is adequate [CCP § 457].
 - ☐ A specific allegation of the occurrence of a conditional event is required [Careau & Co. v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 CA3d 1371, 1389, 272 CR 387].
- The plaintiff's performance, or a specific allegation of the plaintiff's excuse for nonperformance [CC § 1495; Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 CA2d 283, 287, 289, 39 CR 443].
- The defendant's breach, which must be alleged with certainty [Gautier v. General Tel. Co. (1965) 234 CA2d 302, 305, 44 CR 404].
- Facts establishing the damages caused by the breach [Gautier v. General Tel. Co. (1965) 234 CA2d 302, 305, 44 CR 404].

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.34

28.34 Options and Strategies.

In examining potential defenses in an action for the sale of goods, counsel first should consider the defenses that are available under contract law generally. A number of these "traditional" defenses are specifically made applicable to contracts governed by Division 2 of the Commercial Code [Com Code § 1103; see 28.35]. Note that other "traditional" defenses, such as those involving formation and terms of a contract and performance-related issues, may be governed by the Commercial Code rather than the Civil Code provisions and so may have to be tailored to accommodate the Commercial Code's rules regarding contract formation (as discussed in Ch. 27, Contract for Sale of Goods--Attacking or Defending Existence of Contract Under California Commercial Code) and performance (as discussed in this chapter).

In addition to the traditional contract defenses noted above, counsel should consider defenses framed by the terms of the Commercial Code. These defenses generally are performance-related and involve the specific obligations with respect to performance, acceptance, rejection and so on, imposed by Division 2. Such defenses usually are based on allegations that the plaintiff did not meet obligations directly affecting the alleged breach. This is so because the Commercial Code generally does not allow for the abandonment of contractual obligations merely because the other party's performance appears to be nonconforming.

28.35 Many Traditional Affirmative Defenses Are Available Under Commercial Code.

Many defenses generally available to other contract claims are specifically made applicable to actions under the Commercial Code by Com Code § 1103, which generally provides that the principles of law and equity will supplement the Commercial Code unless displaced by its provisions. Such "traditional" defenses specifically made applicable to contracts governed by Division 2 of the Commercial Code include [Com Code § 1103 (general principles of law and equity supplement Commercial Code)]:

- Capacity to contract.
- Agency issues.
- Fraud and misrepresentation.
- Duress and coercion.
- Mistake.
- Bankruptcy.
- Other invalidating causes.

28.36 Plaintiff's Nonperformance or Defective Performance Can Be Defense.

As with any other contract action, the plaintiff's own nonperformance or defective performance of his or her own part of the bargain can be a defense to an action.

Distinguish:

The Commercial Code avoids use of the familiar term "condition precedent," but the framework of reciprocal and interdependent rights and duties it creates among the parties has an analogous effect. For example, unless otherwise agreed, the seller's tender of delivery is a condition to the buyer's duty to accept the goods and, unless otherwise agreed, to the duty to pay for them [Com Code § 2507(1)]. Conversely, unless otherwise agreed, tender of payment is a condition to the seller's duty to tender and complete any delivery [Com Code § 2511(1)].

Whether and to what extent a plaintiff's violation of his or her own duties under Division 2 creates an affirmative defense must be analyzed in the context of the rules governing the specific aspect of performance involved. The obligations of the parties in this regard are discussed throughout this chapter and can be categorized as follows:

- If defendant is the buyer, defenses may be afforded by plaintiff seller's:

- ☐ Failure to ship or deliver the goods in the manner required by the contract.
- ☐ Failure to provide goods that conform to the contract specifications.

- If defendant is the seller, a defense may be afforded by the plaintiff buyer's failure to pay for the goods in the amount and/or manner required by the contract.

28.37 Usage of Trade Is Defense.

The defense of custom and usage is appropriate in any action under the Commercial Code based on an agreement [see Com Code § 1303(d) (usage of trade supplements agreement)] unless the parties have specifically agreed that usage of trade should not be construed as a part of the agreement [Heggblade-Marguleas-Tenneco, Inc. v. Sunshine Biscuit, Inc. (1976) 59 CA3d 948, 955, 131 CR 183].

Examples:

- The contracts in question were silent about the applicability of trade usage and custom. Evidence of trade usage and custom was admissible to explain the meaning of quantity figures in the contracts. Because the credibility of the witnesses and the meaning to be given to contradictory inferences arising from evidence extrinsic to the terms of a written contract were for the trier of fact, a factual question arose as to whether the parties intended to exclude the custom from the contract. The trial court properly admitted the evidence of usage and custom to explain the meaning of the quantity figures in the contracts [Heggblade-Marguleas-Tenneco, Inc. v. Sunshine Biscuit, Inc. (1976) 59 CA3d 948, 131 CR 183].

- The buyer was a corporate grain broker; the seller was a wheat grower. They contracted in writing for wheat to be delivered as it was harvested. The price of the wheat was to be set in the future according to a contract-specified formula, and the seller accepted the risk of price fluctuation. A dispute arose, and the buyer was awarded a money judgment. Trade usage was properly put into evidence as an instrument of interpretation, and an expert's evidence of custom and usage to explain and supplement the pricing term of the contract was proper [Balfour, Guthrie & Co., Ltd. v. Gourmet Farms (1980) 108 CA3d 181, 166 CR 422].

28.38 Intent Not to Be Bound by Open-Price Term Is Defense.

The defense of no intention to be bound unless the price term has been agreed on is appropriate when the agreement contains an open price term and either [Com Code § 2305(4)]:

- The parties have failed to agree on a price; or
- A price has not been fixed as agreed, and the parties did not intend to be bound unless the price was set according to the terms of the agreement.

28.39 Status As Nonmerchant Can Be Defense.

The defense that a party is not a merchant is available in any action in which the defendant is inappropriately being:

- Charged with having knowledge or skill peculiar to the practices or goods involved in the transaction [see Com Code § 2104(1)]; or

- Held to a standard of performance required of merchants in certain situations, such as those involving any of the following:

- ☐ Good faith [see Com Code § 1201(20)].
- ☐ Firm offers [see Com Code § 2205].
- ☐ Rejected goods [see Com Code §§ 2603, 2605(1)(b)].

Revocation of acceptance is not effective until the buyer notifies the seller of it. VII. PLEADING DEFENSES TO COMPLAINT FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT FOR SALE OF GOODS

*2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.4128.41 Buyer's Improper Attempt to Reject Goods Is Defense.

28.41[1] Rejection Without Seasonable Notice Is Ineffective. A rejection of goods must be made within a reasonable time after their delivery or tender. Rejection is ineffective unless the buyer seasonably (that is, at or within the time agreed or, if no time is agreed, at or within a reasonable time [Com Code § 1205(b)]) notifies the seller [Com Code § 2602(1)]. After rejection, any exercise of ownership by the buyer with respect to any commercial unit is wrongful against the seller [Com Code § 2602(2)(a)]. If the buyer has taken physical possession of the goods before rejecting them, and the buyer does not have a security interest, the buyer is under a duty after rejection to hold the goods with reasonable care at the seller's disposition for a time sufficient to permit the seller to remove them [Com Code § 2602(2)(b)]. A nonmerchant buyer has no further obligations with regard to goods rightfully rejected [Com Code § 2602(2)(c)].

➤ Cross Reference:

Merchant buyer's duties on rejection of goods, see 28.19[6].

28.41[2] Failure to Identify Curable Defect Makes Rejection Ineffectual. The buyer's failure to state, in connection with rejection, a particular defect that is ascertainable by reasonable inspection precludes the buyer from relying on the unstated defect to justify rejection or to establish breach if [Com Code § 2605(1)(a), (b)]:

- The seller could have cured it if stated seasonably; or
- Between merchants, the seller has after rejection made a request in writing for a full and final written statement of all defects on which the buyer proposes to rely.

Jury Instructions:

Buyer's Failure to Specify Defects, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.225 (Matthew Bender).

➤ Cross References:

Buyer's inspection of goods, see 28.20.

Answer alleging affirmative defense based on ineffectual rejection, see 28.52.

28.41[3] Buyer's Payment Without Reservation of Rights Is Waiver of Defect in Documents. Payment against documents made without reservation of rights precludes recovery of the payment for defects apparent in the documents [Com Code § 2605(2)].

28.42 Substitute Performance Can Replace Agreed Means of Shipment or Payment.

28.42[1] Parties Must Accept Commercially Reasonable Substitute. When, without fault of either party, the agreed berthing, loading, or unloading facilities fail, or an agreed type of carrier becomes unavailable, or the agreed manner of delivery otherwise becomes commercially impracticable, but a commercially reasonable substitute is available, the substitute performance must be tendered and accepted [Com Code § 2614(1)].

28.42[2] Seller May Stop Delivery When Government Regulation Blocks Payment.

28.42[2][a] Seller Must Accept Equivalent Means of Payment. If the agreed means or manner of payment fails because of domestic or foreign governmental regulation, the seller may withhold or stop delivery unless the buyer provides a means or manner of payment that is commercially a substantial equivalent [Com Code § 2614(2)].

Cross Reference:

Discussion of substitute performance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.32[4] (Matthew Bender).

28.42[2][b] Seller Must Accept Payment According to Regulation. If delivery has already been taken, payment by the means or in the manner sanctioned under applicable regulation discharges the buyer's obligation unless the regulation is discriminatory, oppressive, or predatory [Com Code § 2614(2)].

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.43

28.43 Performance Is Excused by Failure of Presupposed Conditions.

28.43[1] Seller's Performance Is Impracticable. Delay in delivery or nondelivery in whole or in part by a seller who complies with Com Code § 2615(b) and (c) [see 28.43[2], [3]] is not a breach of the seller's duty under a contract for sale if performance as agreed has been made impracticable by either of the following [Com Code § 2615(a)]:

- The occurrence of a contingency the nonoccurrence of which was a basic assumption on which the contract was made; or
- Compliance in good faith with any applicable foreign or domestic governmental regulation or order, whether or not it later proves to be invalid.

Examples:

- Increased cost alone does not excuse nonperformance unless the rise in cost is due to some unforeseen contingency that alters the essential nature of the performance [Com Code § 2615, UCC § 2-615, official cmt 4].
- A rise or collapse in the market in itself is not a justification, because that is exactly the type of business risk that business contracts made at fixed prices are intended to cover [Com Code § 2615, UCC § 2-615, official cmt 4].
- A severe shortage of raw materials or supplies because of a contingency such as war, embargo, local crop failure, unforeseen shutdown of major sources of supply, or the like, which either causes a marked increase in cost or prevents the seller from obtaining supplies necessary to the seller's performance, is within the contemplation of this rule [Com Code § 2615, UCC § 2-615, official cmt 4].

Jury Instructions:

Excuse of Performance--Special Findings, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB

Discussion of impossibility of performance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, § 500.63 (Matthew Bender).

28.43[2] Seller Must Allocate Available Production and Deliveries. When only a part of the seller's capacity to perform has been adversely affected by a specified cause [see 28.43[1]], the seller must allocate production and deliveries among customers, but may include regular customers not then under contract and also may meet the seller's own requirements for further manufacture. The seller may allocate in any manner that is fair and reasonable [Com Code § 2615(b)].

Jury Instructions:

Seller's Duty to Allocate Supply, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.242 (Matthew Bender).

28.43[3] Seller Must Notify Buyer. The seller must notify the buyer seasonably (that is, at or within the time agreed or, if no time is agreed, at or within a reasonable time [Com Code § 1205(b)]) that there will be a delay or nondelivery and, when allocation is required [see 28.43[2]], notify the buyer of the estimated quota thus made available for the buyer [Com Code § 2615(c)].

*2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.4428.44 Party May Demand Assurances.

When reasonable grounds for insecurity arise with respect to the performance of either party, the other party, in writing, may demand adequate assurance of due performance; and until that assurance is received, the demanding party may suspend, if commercially reasonable, any performance for which the party has not already received the agreed return [Com Code § 2609(1)].

Between merchants the reasonableness of grounds for insecurity and the adequacy of any assurance offered will be determined according to commercial standards [Com Code § 2609(2)].

Consider:

A contract for sale imposes an obligation on each party that the other's expectation of receiving due performance will not be impaired [Com Code § 2609(1)].

Strategic Point:

Acceptance of any improper delivery or payment does not prejudice the aggrieved party's right to demand adequate assurance of future performance [Com Code § 2609(3)].

Warning:

Failure to provide assurance of due performance that is adequate under the circumstances of the particular case, within a reasonable time (not exceeding 30 days) after the receipt of a justified demand for such assurance, is a repudiation of the contract [Com Code § 2609(4)].

2-28 MB Practice Guide: CA Contract Litigation 28.45

28.45 Anticipatory Repudiation Invites Defensive Tactics.

28.45[1] Aggrieved Party Has Options. When either party has repudiated the contract with respect to a performance not yet due, and the loss of that performance will substantially impair the value of the contract to the other party, the aggrieved party may make the following elections [Com Code § 2610]:

- For a commercially reasonable time, await performance by the repudiating party; or
- Resort to any remedy for breach [see Com Code §§ 2703, 2711], even after urging retraction [see 28.45[2]] and giving notice to the repudiating party that the aggrieved party would await performance; and
- In either case, suspend performance.

If the buyer is the repudiating party, the seller also has the option of exercising the seller's right to identify goods to the contract notwithstanding breach, or to salvage unfinished goods [Com Code § 2610(c); see Com Code § 2704 (seller's rights); see Ch. 26, Contract for Sale of Goods--Seeking Remedies Under California Commercial Code, 26.09, 26.10].

Repudiation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.190 (Matthew Bender).

28.45[2] Repudiation Can Be Retracted. Until the repudiating party's next performance is due, that party can retract the repudiation, unless the aggrieved party, since the repudiation, has canceled the contract, or materially changed position, or otherwise indicated that the repudiation is treated as final [Com Code § 2611(1)].

Jury Instructions:

Retraction of Repudiation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 3H, Instr. MB 300H.192 (Matthew Bender).

Discussion and form for notice retraction of repudiation, see California Legal Forms, § 52.451 (Matthew Bender).

28.45[3] Retraction Must Indicate Intent to Perform. Retraction may be made by any method that clearly indicates to the aggrieved party that the repudiating party intends to perform, but in every case it must include any assurance justifiably demanded under Com Code § 2609 [Com Code § 2611(2)].

 Cross Reference:

Demanding assurance, see 28.44.

28.45[4] Contract Is Reinstated With Due Excuses and Allowances for Delay. Retraction reinstates the repudiating party's rights under the contract, with due excuse and allowance to the aggrieved party for any delay occasioned by the repudiation [Com Code § 2611(3)].

Plaintiff has duly complied in all respects with the requirements of Business and Professions Code Sections 17910 through 17917 with respect to this fictitious business name].

[OR, for a foreign corporation or foreign limited liability company]

1. Plaintiff _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a _____ [corporation or limited liability company] organized and existing under the laws of _____ [state or foreign country], and _____ [for foreign corporation authorized to do business and doing business in California or, for foreign limited liability company maintaining action or intrastate business, and registered to transact intrastate business in California], with its principal place of business in California in _____ [city, if any, and county], California [in the (name of judicial district, if any) _____].

[OR, for a general or limited partnership or an unincorporated association]

1. Plaintiff _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a _____ [partnership or unincorporated association] with its principal place of business in _____ [city, if any, and county], California [in the (name of judicial district, if any) _____] [, and therein doing business under the fictitious business name of _____]. Plaintiff has duly complied in all respects with the requirements of Business and Professions Code Sections 17910 through 17917 with respect to this fictitious business name].

[CONTINUE]

[For an individual defendant]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is an individual residing in _____ [city, if any, and county], California [in the (name of judicial district, if any) _____] [and doing business therein under the fictitious business name of _____].

[OR, for a domestic corporation or domestic limited liability company]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a _____ [corporation or limited liability company] organized and existing under the laws of California [, with its principal place of business in _____ (city, if any, and county), California (, in the _____ [name of judicial district, if any])].

[OR, for a foreign corporation or foreign limited liability company]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a _____ [corporation or limited liability company] organized and existing under the laws of _____ [state or foreign country][, with its principal place of business in _____ (city, if any, and county), California (, in the _____ [name of judicial district, if any])].

[OR, for a general or limited partnership or an unincorporated association]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [a partnership or an unincorporated association] sued herein under the name _____ [it has assumed or by which it is known][, with its principal place of business in _____ (city, if any, and county), California (, in the _____ [name of judicial district, if any])]. [Defendants (names of individual partners or members) _____ are, and at all times herein mentioned were, members of that _____ (partnership or unincorporated association) (and are, and at all times herein mentioned were, residents of _____ County, California)].

[CONTINUE]

3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of Defendants sued herein as DOES 1 through _____ [numeral, e.g., 50], inclusive, and therefore sues these Defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named Defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that Plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those Defendants.]

4. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at all times material to this complaint, _____ [identify defendants to whom agency

allegation applies, e.g., each of the Defendants or each of the individual Defendants or Defendant Harry Jones], [and each of the Defendants fictitiously named in this complaint,] in addition to acting for himself, herself, or itself and on his, her, or its own behalf individually, is and was acting as the agent, servant, employee and representative of, and with the knowledge, consent and permission of, and in conspiracy with, each and all of the Defendants and within the course, scope and authority of that agency, service, employment, representation, and conspiracy. Plaintiff further alleges on information and belief that the acts of each of the Defendants were fully ratified by each and all of the Defendants. Specifically, and without limitation, Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that the actions, failures to act, breaches, conspiracy, and misrepresentations alleged herein and attributed to one or more of the specific Defendants were approved, ratified, and done with the cooperation and knowledge of each and all of the Defendants.

[Include if plaintiff is a merchant:]

5. Plaintiff is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[Include if defendant is a merchant:]

6. Defendant is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[CONTINUE]

[EITHER, if agreement is evidenced by written contract]

7. On _____ [date], Plaintiff and Defendant executed a contract for the purchase of goods. The contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference, provides that _____ [describe essential terms of contract, e.g., Plaintiff would sell 5,000 widgets to Plaintiff, and obligated Defendant to pay Plaintiff the sum of $_____ on delivery].

[OR, if no written contract is in existence]

7. _____ [Allege facts showing making and substance of agreement, e.g., On January 1, 2005, at the special instance and request of Defendant, and in consideration of Defendant's promise to pay the purchase price, Plaintiff shipped and delivered to Defendant the goods, wares and merchandise shown on the attached Exhibit B, which is incorporated by reference].

[CONTINUE]

8. Plaintiff fully performed Plaintiff's part of the agreement described in Paragraph 7, in that, on _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [delivered or tendered delivery of] the goods to Defendant in the time and manner and at the place required by the agreement.

9. Defendant, in violation of Defendant's promises and obligations under the agreement described in Paragraph 7, _____ [describe Defendant's breach, e.g., wrongfully refused to accept delivery of the goods or wrongfully revoked acceptance of the goods or wrongfully fails and refuses to make payment due for the goods].

[EITHER, if resale was at public sale]

10. _____ [Set forth plaintiff's actions in response to defendant's breach, e.g., Following Defendant's breach of the contract as described in Paragraph 9, Plaintiff attempted to locate another party willing to purchase the goods. After giving Defendant reasonable notice of the time and place of the resale of the goods, Plaintiff sold the goods to the highest bidder for cash in a public sale conducted in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner].

[OR, if resale was at private sale]

10. _____ [Set forth plaintiff's actions in response to defendant's breach, e.g., Following Defendant's breach of the contract as described in Paragraph 9, Plaintiff attempted to locate another party willing to purchase the goods. After giving Defendant reasonable notice of his/her/its intention to resell the goods, Plaintiff sold the goods in a commercially reasonable manner and in good faith to (name of buyer) _____. The resale contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference, provides for the sale by Plaintiff to (name of buyer) _____ on the following terms: (in general terms, state contract price, delivery terms, etc., of resale contract) _____].

[CONTINUE]

[EITHER, if damages are based on resale]

11. _____ [Set forth claim for damages, e.g., The price received by Plaintiff from the resale of the goods described in Paragraph 10 is $ _____. The price Defendant contracted and agreed to pay for these goods, as described in Paragraph 7, is $ _____. As a direct and proximate result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $ (difference between contract price and actual resale price) _____].

[OR, if resale damages are not sought, and claim is for lost profits for completed goods]

11. _____ [Set forth claim for damages for lost profits, e.g., The price Defendant contracted and agreed to pay for the goods, as described in Paragraph 7, is $ _____. Plaintiff's costs directly attributable to the manufacture of these goods are $ (specify variable costs only, not fixed costs) _____. The damages specified in Commercial Code Section 2708(1) would be inadequate to put Plaintiff in as good a position as performance would have done, because Plaintiff was operating at less than full capacity at the time of Defendant's breach, and Plaintiff's volume of sales was decreased by Defendant's breach. Thus, as a direct and proximate result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $_____].

[OR, if resale damages are not sought, and claim is for lost profits as "lost volume seller"]

11. _____ [Set forth claim for damages for lost profits, e.g., The price Defendant contracted and agreed to pay for the goods, as described in Paragraph 7, is $_____. Plaintiff's costs directly attributable to the manufacture of these goods are $ (specify variable costs only, not fixed costs) _____. The damages specified in Commercial Code Section 2708(1) would be inadequate to put Plaintiff in as good a position as performance would have done, because Plaintiff would have made the sale referred to in Paragraph 10 even if Defendant had not breached the contract described in Paragraph 7. Thus, if Defendant had not breached the contract described in Paragraph 7, Plaintiff would have earned the profits from both the sale to Defendant and the sale described in Paragraph 10. The damages specified in Commercial Code Section 2708(1) therefore are inadequate because they would compensate Plaintiff only for the loss of profits on one sale. Thus, as a direct and proximate result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $_____].

[OR, if resale damages are not sought, and claim is for lost profit for incomplete goods]

11. _____ [If goods were incomplete at time of breach and manufacture of goods was not completed following breach, set forth claim for lost profits, e.g., The price Defendant contracted and agreed to pay for the goods, as described in Paragraph 7, is $_____. Plaintiff's costs incurred in the manufacture of the goods up to the time of Defendant's breach, including fixed expenses attributable to the contract, are $_____. However, Plaintiff saved expenses in the amount of $_____ by not being required to complete manufacture because of Defendant's breach, and Plaintiff was able to recoup $_____ of the expenses incurred by selling the partially manufactured goods. It was not commercially reasonable to complete manufacture of the goods under the contract. As a direct and proximate result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $_____].

[CONTINUE]

[OPTIONAL PROVISIONS]

[EITHER, if contract included liquidated damages provision]

12. The parties agreed in paragraph _____ of the contract that _____ [specify conditions under which liquidated damages provision would apply, e.g., in the event of a breach by either party,] Plaintiff would be entitled to recover _____ [specify amount of damages and/or formula for determining amount].

[OR, if defendant has made deposit that will be treated as liquidated damages in event of breach]

12. On entering into the contract with Plaintiff, Defendant provided a deposit of $_____ as security for the performance of Defendant's contractual obligations. The contract provided that this deposit would be liquidated damages in the event of a breach of the contract. Since Defendant has breached the contract as herein alleged, Plaintiff is entitled to the sum of $_____ as damages.

[CONTINUE]

13. As a further direct result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff was caused to incur the following commercially reasonable charges, expenses, and commissions:

_____ [state incidental damages, e.g.,

Transportation costs to and from Defendant's warehouse:

$_____

Storage for _____ (describe storage period, e.g., 14 days): $_____

Auctioneer's commission: $_____

Total: $_____]

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant as follows:

[EITHER]

1. For damages in the sum of $_____;

[OR, if agreement provides for liquidated damages]

1. For liquidated damages according to the agreement of the parties in the sum of $_____;

[CONTINUE]

2. For incidental damages in the sum of $_____;

3. For interest on the sum of $_____ from and after _____ [date amount of damages was capable of being made certain or date action was filed];

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other further relief as the court may deem proper.

allegation applies, e.g., each of the Defendants or each of the individual Defendants or Defendant Harry Jones], [and each of the Defendants fictitiously named in this complaint,] in addition to acting for himself, herself, or itself and on his, her, or its own behalf individually, is and was acting as the agent, servant, employee and representative of, and with the knowledge, consent and permission of, and in conspiracy with, each and all of the Defendants and within the course, scope and authority of that agency, service, employment, representation, and conspiracy. Plaintiff further alleges on information and belief that the acts of each of the Defendants were fully ratified by each and all of the Defendants. Specifically, and without limitation, Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that the actions, failures to act, breaches, conspiracy, and misrepresentations alleged herein and attributed to one or more of the specific Defendants were approved, ratified, and done with the cooperation and knowledge of each and all of the Defendants.

[Include if plaintiff is a merchant:]

5. Plaintiff is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[Include if defendant is a merchant:]

6. Defendant is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[CONTINUE]

7. On _____ [date], Plaintiff and Defendant executed a contract for the purchase of goods. The contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference, provides that _____ [describe essential terms of contract, e.g., Plaintiff will specially manufacture for Defendant, and Defendant agrees to purchase, widgets, and obligates Defendant to purchase these widgets in such quantity as Defendant, in good faith, requires for its manufacturing needs. Defendant agreed to pay $ _____ per unit with certain discounts that would depend on the size of orders placed from time to time. The contract also provides that delivery will be made from time to time as ordered and required by Defendant].

8. _____ [Allege defendant's estimation of its anticipated requirements, if any, e.g., Defendant's requirements were estimated by the Defendant to be at least (number) _____ units, and further units would be required depending on the demand for the goods by Defendant's dealers].

9. Plaintiff fully performed Plaintiff's part of the agreement described in Paragraph 7, in that Plaintiff proceeded to specially manufacture for Defendant _____ [number] units of the goods described in Paragraph 7, and notified Defendant that at all times Plaintiff was ready and able to deliver those goods.

10. _____ [Allege any additional facts relevant to history of dealings between parties, e.g., On May 1, 2005, Plaintiff delivered (number) _____ units of the goods described in Paragraph 7 to the Defendant at $ _____ each, for which Defendant paid the sum of _____]

$_____].

11. Defendant was obligated under its agreement with Plaintiff to

_____ [allege defendant's breach of contract, e.g., make the subject goods available to its dealers and in good faith to ascertain from all of its dealers in the United States which of those dealers desired to distribute the subject goods. Defendant, in violation of its promises and obligations described in Paragraph 7, failed to acquaint all of its dealers with Plaintiff's goods, did not request its division managers to make the subject goods available to its dealers, and did not give all of its dealers an opportunity to order the subject goods. Defendant advised Plaintiff on (date) _____ that Defendant rejected any further purchase of the goods described in Paragraph 7, because the majority of its divisions did not feel that they could distribute them to its dealers in sufficient quantities].

12. The price Defendant contracted and agreed to pay for the goods, as described in Paragraph 7, is $_____ per unit. Defendant was obligated to purchase its good faith requirements for the goods described in Paragraph 7 from Plaintiff under the subject agreement. The number of units of goods that the Defendant would have required in good faith was easily ascertainable by Defendant and would not have been below _____ [number] units. Thus, as a direct and proximate result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $_____ [aggregate price of number of units of goods that defendant would have required in good faith].

13. As a further direct result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff was caused to incur the following commercially reasonable charges, expenses, and commissions:

_____ [state incidental damages, e.g.,

Transportation costs to and from Defendant's warehouse:

$_____

Storage for _____ (describe storage period, e.g., 14 days): $_____

Auctioneer's commission: $_____

Total: $_____]

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant as follows:

1. For the price of the goods in the sum of $_____ [state either contract price or, if contract had open price term, reasonable price of goods];

2. For incidental damages in the sum of $_____;

3. For interest on the sum of $_____ from and after _____ [date amount of damages was capable of being made certain or date action was filed];

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[CONTINUE]

3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of Defendants sued herein as DOES 1 through _____ [numeral, e.g., 50], inclusive, and therefore sues these Defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named Defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that Plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those Defendants.]

4. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at all times material to this complaint, _____ [identify defendants to whom agency allegation applies, e.g., each of the Defendants or each of the individual Defendants or Defendant Harry Jones], [and each of the Defendants fictitiously named in this complaint,] in addition to acting for himself, herself, or itself and on his, her, or its own behalf individually, is and was acting as the agent, servant, employee and representative of, and with the knowledge, consent and permission of, and in conspiracy with, each and all of the Defendants and within the course, scope and authority of that agency, service, employment, representation, and conspiracy. Plaintiff further alleges on information and belief that the acts of each of the Defendants were fully ratified by each and all of the Defendants. Specifically, and without limitation, Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that the actions, failures to act, breaches, conspiracy, and misrepresentations alleged herein and attributed to one or more of the specific Defendants were approved, ratified, and done with the cooperation and knowledge of each and all of the Defendants.

[Include if plaintiff is a merchant:]

5. Plaintiff is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[Include if defendant is a merchant:]

6. Defendant is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[CONTINUE]

7. On _____ [date], Plaintiff requested Defendant to submit an offer to supply _____ [describe goods, e.g., widgets], for purchase by Plaintiff.

8. By a writing dated _____ [date], a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference, Defendant offered to supply the goods described in Paragraph 7 to Plaintiff for the total price of $ _____.

9. Plaintiff advised Defendant that Plaintiff would accept Defendant's offer for the goods described in Paragraph 7 [add any relevant conditions, e.g., provided Plaintiff received orders for the goods from Plaintiff's distributors within two weeks from the date of the offer].

10. _____ [Allege facts showing defendant's assurance to hold offer open, e.g., Defendant assured Plaintiff that Defendant would hold the offer open for a period of 20 days and, at Plaintiff's request, Defendant reduced that assurance to a separate writing dated _____, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference].

11. _____ [Allege facts showing plaintiff's reliance on defendant's firm offer, e.g., Relying on Defendant's firm offer described in Paragraph 8, Plaintiff quoted a firm price to Plaintiff's distributors for the goods described in Paragraph 7, which was accepted by them on (date) _____].

_____].

12. Subsequent to Plaintiff's acts in reliance on Defendant's firm offer, as described in Paragraph 11, _____ [allege defendant's revocation of offer, e.g., on (date) _____, and before (date firm offer became revocable under terms of writing described in Paragraph 10) _____], Defendant withdrew the firm offer to supply the goods described in Paragraph 7, which were necessary for Plaintiff to complete numerous contracts with Plaintiff's distributors, as described in Paragraph 11].

13. _____ [Set forth plaintiff's actions in response to defendant's breach, e.g., On (date) _____], in good faith and without unreasonable delay, Plaintiff entered into another contract with a different supplier, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit C and incorporated by reference, for the purchase of an equal quantity of the goods described in Paragraph 7].

[EITHER, if damages are based on cover]

14. The cover price that Plaintiff paid for the goods sold to Plaintiff by the other supplier, as described in Paragraph 13, was $ _____ per unit, for a total of $ _____. The price for which Defendant offered to sell these goods to Plaintiff, as described in Paragraph 8, is $ _____. As a direct and proximate result of Defendant's revocation of the firm offer, Plaintiff has been compelled to expend an additional $ _____ to obtain substitute goods and has suffered damages in the sum of $ _____. Defendant's breach of contract did not result in any saving of expenses to Plaintiff.

[OR, if damages based on cover are not sought]

14. The price for which the Defendant made a firm offer to sell the goods, as described in Paragraph 8, is $ _____. The market price of the goods described in Paragraph 8 on _____ [date plaintiff learned of defendant's revocation of firm offer] was $ _____. Thus, as a direct and proximate result of Defendant's revocation of the firm offer, Plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $ _____. Defendant's breach of contract did not result in any saving of expenses to Plaintiff.

[CONTINUE]

15. As a further direct result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff was caused to incur the following commercially reasonable charges, expenses, and commissions:

_____ [state incidental damages, e.g.,

Transportation costs to and from Defendant's warehouse:

$ _____

Storage for _____ (describe storage period, e.g., 14 days): $ _____

Auctioneer's commission: $ _____

Total: $ _____]

16. As a further result of Defendant's revocation of the firm offer, Plaintiff suffered the following consequential loss and damage in the sum of $ _____. This sum is the discount that Plaintiff was required to give to distributors when Plaintiff was unable to deliver the goods described in Paragraph 7 on the date promised. _____

[Allege defendant's knowledge of circumstances giving rise to consequential damages claim, e.g., Defendant knew of Plaintiff's commitment to furnish these goods to Plaintiff's distributors at the time of the making of the contract between Plaintiff and Defendant].

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $ _____;

2. For incidental damages in the sum of $ _____;

3. For consequential damages in the sum of $ _____;

4. For interest on the sum of $ _____ from and after _____ [date amount of damages was capable of being made certain or date action was filed];

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[Defendants (names of individual partners or members) _____ are, and at all times herein mentioned were, members of that _____ (partnership or unincorporated association) (and are, and at all times herein mentioned were, residents of _____ County, California)].

[CONTINUE]

3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of Defendants sued herein as DOES 1 through _____ [numeral, e.g., 50], inclusive, and therefore sues these Defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named Defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that Plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those Defendants.]

4. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at all times material to this complaint, _____ [identify defendants to whom agency

allegation applies, e.g., each of the Defendants or each of the individual Defendants or Defendant Harry Jones], [and each of the Defendants fictitiously named in this complaint,] in addition to acting for himself, herself, or itself and on his, her, or its own behalf individually, is and was acting as the agent, servant, employee and representative of, and with the knowledge, consent and permission of, and in conspiracy with, each and all of the Defendants and within the course, scope and authority of that agency, service, employment, representation, and conspiracy. Plaintiff further alleges on information and belief that the acts of each of the Defendants were fully ratified by each and all of the Defendants. Specifically, and without limitation, Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that the actions, failures to act, breaches, conspiracy, and misrepresentations alleged herein and attributed to one or more of the specific Defendants were approved, ratified, and done with the cooperation and knowledge of each and all of the Defendants.

[Include if plaintiff is a merchant:]

5. Plaintiff is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[Include if defendant is a merchant:]

6. Defendant is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[CONTINUE]

7. On _____ [date], Plaintiff and Defendant executed a contract for the purchase of goods. The contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference, provides that _____ [describe essential terms of contract, e.g., Plaintiff would sell 5,000 widgets to Plaintiff, and obligated Defendant to pay Plaintiff the sum of $_____ on delivery].

8. Plaintiff fully performed Plaintiff's part of the agreement described in Paragraph 7, in that, on _____ [date], Plaintiff _____ [delivered or tendered delivery of] the goods to Defendant in the time and manner and at the place required by the agreement.

9. Defendant, in violation of Defendant's promises and obligations under the agreement described in Paragraph 7, _____ [describe defendant's breach, e.g., wrongfully refused to accept delivery of the goods or wrongfully revoked acceptance of the goods or wrongfully fails and refuses to make payment due for the goods].

10. At all times referred to herein, Defendant was, and now is, the owner and in possession of the goods described in Paragraph 7.

11. The goods described in Paragraph 7 are unique in character in that _____ [describe why goods are unique, e.g., Defendant is the only manufacturer of goods of that type whose products are recognized around the world as being the best and most reliable products of the kind, and Plaintiff's customers have come to expect that Plaintiff will supply them with such goods from no other producer, with the result that unless Plaintiff can obtain and distribute the very same goods described in the contract, Plaintiff's business will almost certainly go into bankruptcy]. Therefore, Plaintiff has no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, and damages, if awarded, cannot be properly ascertained and would be inadequate to compensate Plaintiff for the detriment suffered as a result of Defendant's breach.

12. At the time the agreement described in Paragraph 7 was entered into, on _____ [date], the goods described therein were reasonably worth $ _____; accordingly, that agreement is just, fair, and reasonable as to Defendant, and the consideration therefor accruing to Defendant is adequate.

13. As a further result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff suffered the following consequential loss and damage in the sum of $ _____.
 _____ [Describe loss, e.g., This sum is the penalty Plaintiff was required to pay to (name) _____ when Plaintiff was unable to forward to (name) _____ on schedule the goods Defendant failed to deliver to Plaintiff. Defendant knew of Plaintiff's commitment to furnish these unique goods to (name) _____ at the time of the making of the contract between Plaintiff and Defendant.] This consequential loss to Plaintiff could not reasonably be prevented by cover or otherwise.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant as follows:

1. That the court decree specific performance of the agreement described in Paragraph 7;
2. That Defendant be specifically ordered to deliver to Plaintiff the goods described in Paragraph 7;
3. For consequential damages in the sum of $ _____;

[4. For interest on the sum of $ _____ from _____ and after (date amount of consequential damages was capable of being made certain or date action was filed) _____;]

Plaintiff has duly complied in all respects with the requirements of Business and Professions Code Sections 17910 through 17917 with respect to this fictitious business name].

[CONTINUE]

[For an individual defendant]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is an individual residing in _____ [city, if any, and county], California [in the (name of judicial district, if any) _____] [and doing business therein under the fictitious business name of _____].

[OR, for a domestic corporation or domestic limited liability company]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a _____ [corporation or limited liability company] organized and existing under the laws of California [, with its principal place of business in _____ (city, if any, and county), California (, in the _____ [name of judicial district, if any])].

[OR, for a foreign corporation or foreign limited liability company]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a _____ [corporation or limited liability company] organized and existing under the laws of _____ [state or foreign country][, with its principal place of business in _____ (city, if any, and county), California (, in the _____ [name of judicial district, if any])].

[OR, for a general or limited partnership or an unincorporated association]

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [a partnership or an unincorporated association] sued herein under the name _____ [it has assumed or by which it is known][, with its principal place of business in _____ (city, if any, and county), California (, in the _____ [name of judicial district, if any])]. [Defendants (names of individual partners or members) _____ are, and at all times herein mentioned were, members of that _____ (partnership or unincorporated association) (and are, and at all times herein mentioned were, residents of _____ County, California)].

[CONTINUE]

3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of Defendants sued herein as DOES 1 through _____ [numeral, e.g., 50], inclusive, and therefore sues these Defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named Defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that Plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those Defendants.]

4. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at all times material to this complaint, _____ [identify defendants to whom agency allegation applies, e.g., each of the Defendants or each of the individual Defendants or Defendant Harry Jones], [and each of the Defendants fictitiously named in this complaint,] in addition to acting for himself, herself, or itself and on his, her, or its own behalf individually, is and was acting as the agent, servant, employee and representative of, and with the knowledge, consent and permission of, and in conspiracy with, each and all of the Defendants and within the course, scope and authority of that agency, service, employment, representation, and conspiracy. Plaintiff further alleges on information and belief that the acts of each of the Defendants were fully ratified by each and all of the Defendants. Specifically, and without limitation, Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that the actions, failures to act, breaches, conspiracy, and misrepresentations alleged herein and attributed to one or more of the specific Defendants were approved, ratified, and done with the cooperation and knowledge of each and all of the Defendants.

[Include if plaintiff is a merchant:]

5. Plaintiff is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[Include if defendant is a merchant:]

6. Defendant is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[CONTINUE]

7. On _____ [date], Plaintiff and Defendant executed a contract for the purchase of goods. The contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference, provides that _____ [describe essential terms of contract, e.g., Defendant would sell 5,000 widgets to Plaintiff, obligates Plaintiff to pay Defendant the sum of $ _____ on delivery of the goods, and further provides that there would be no acceptance of the goods unless they remained free of defects for _____ (specify period, e.g., three months)].

8. Plaintiff fully and in all things performed Plaintiff's part of the agreement described in Paragraph 7, in that on _____ [date], Plaintiff paid the purchase price to Defendant on delivery of the goods].

9. _____ [Allege facts showing grounds for Plaintiff's rightful rejection of goods, e.g., Approximately _____ (specify period, e.g., three months) after delivery of the goods described in Paragraph 7, on (date) _____, Plaintiff discovered substantial defects in those goods in that _____ (describe all defects), which resulted in Plaintiff's inability to use those goods for the purpose for which they were purchased].

10. _____ [Allege facts showing plaintiff's seasonable notification of Defendant of grounds for rejection, e.g., Plaintiff notified Defendant that Plaintiff had discovered the defects described in Paragraph 8, by sending a letter dated _____,

_____, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference].

11. Defendant breached the agreement described in Paragraph 7, in that _____

_____ [allege defendant's breach of contract, e.g., Defendant acknowledged that the defects described in Paragraph 9 existed but failed to cure them or to make any attempt to cure them within a reasonable time].

12. _____ [Allege plaintiff's seasonable notification to defendant of plaintiff's rightful rejection, within reasonable time, e.g., By letter dated _____,

_____, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit C and incorporated by reference, Plaintiff notified Defendant that Plaintiff was invoking the right to reject the goods described in Paragraph 7 on the basis of the defects described in Paragraph 9 and Defendant's failure to cure those defects, as alleged in Paragraph 11].

13. _____ [If plaintiff is merchant, allege plaintiff's compliance with duties as to rightfully rejected goods pursuant to Com. Code § 2603(1), e.g., Plaintiff received no instructions from Defendant with respect to the rejected goods in Plaintiff's possession, and Plaintiff had no good faith duty to attempt resale of those goods for Defendant's account because those goods are not perishable and do not threaten to decline in value speedily].

14. On _____ [date], in good faith and without unreasonable delay, Plaintiff entered into another contract with a different supplier, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit C and incorporated by reference, for the purchase of an equal quantity of the goods described in Paragraph 7.

[EITHER, if damages are based on cover]

15. The cover price paid by Plaintiff for the goods sold by the other supplier, as described in Paragraph 14, was

$ _____ per unit, for a total of $ _____. The price for which Defendant sold these goods to Plaintiff, as described in Paragraph 7, was

$ _____. As a direct and proximate result of Defendant's breach, Plaintiff has been compelled to expend an additional

$ _____ to obtain substitute goods and has suffered damages in the sum of $ _____.

Defendant's breach of contract did not result in any saving of expenses to Plaintiff.

[OR, if damages based on cover are not sought]

16. The price for which the Defendant sold the goods to Plaintiff, as described in Paragraph 7, is

$ _____. The market price of the goods described in Paragraph 7 on _____ [date Plaintiff learned of breach] was

$ _____. Thus, as a direct and proximate result of Defendant's breach, Plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $ _____. Defendant's breach of contract did not result in any saving of expenses to Plaintiff.

[CONTINUE]

17. As a further direct result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff was caused to incur the following commercially reasonable charges, expenses, and commissions:

_____ [state incidental damages, e.g.,

Transportation costs to and from Defendant's warehouse:

$ _____

Storage for _____ (describe storage period, e.g., 14 days): $ _____

Auctioneer's commission: $ _____

Total: $ _____]

18. As a further result of Defendant's breach of contract, Plaintiff suffered consequential loss and damages in the sum of $ _____, consisting of

_____ [set forth consequential damages, e.g., the commission that Plaintiff would have collected from (name) _____ for supplying the nondefective goods that Defendant failed to deliver to Plaintiff. Defendant knew of Plaintiff's commitment to furnish these goods to (name) _____ at the time of the making of the contract between Plaintiff and Defendant]. This consequential loss to Plaintiff could not reasonably be prevented by cover or otherwise.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays judgment against Defendant as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $ _____;

2. For incidental damages in the sum of $ _____;

3. For consequential damages in the sum of $ _____;

4. For interest on the sum of $ _____ from and after _____ [date amount of damages was capable of being made certain or date action was filed];

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

Department:

Defendant answers the complaint as follows:

[Include general denial below, or set forth, in numbered paragraphs, specific denials, admissions, and allegations in response to those in complaint, in the order in which they are alleged in complaint:]

1. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 431.30(b)(1), Defendant generally denies each and every allegation of Plaintiff's Complaint, including all the purported causes of action contained therein, and further denies that Plaintiff is entitled to any equitable or legal relief, or any damages whatsoever.

[Defendant asserts the following affirmative defenses. By doing so, Defendant shall not be deemed to have assumed the burden of proving any matters that otherwise would be Plaintiff's burden.]

[Allege any affirmative defenses, e.g.,]

[EITHER, to allege that defendant acted in accordance with an established custom and usage in the trade, include Paragraphs 2 and 3, below]

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Custom and Usage of Trade)

2. At all times mentioned in Plaintiff's complaint herein, there existed and still exists, in the _____ [describe type of business in which parties are engaged] business, a well-established and well-understood custom and usage in _____ [set out locality, e.g., the state of California] to the effect that _____ [describe custom and usage]. Plaintiff had notice of that custom and usage, and the contract referred to in Plaintiff's complaint was made by the parties with reference to, and with knowledge of, that custom and usage.

3. In accordance with custom and usage, Defendant _____ [set forth actions under custom and usage that Defendant relies on to constitute defense].

[AND/OR, to allege that the parties did not intend to be bound by an open price term under the circumstances, include Paragraphs 4 through 7, below]

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Specific Intent Not to Be Bound to Open Price Term)

4. The terms of the transaction described in Paragraph _____ of the complaint provided that the price of the subject _____ [describe in general terms goods, wares, or merchandise made subject of agreement] was to be determined _____ [by mutual agreement of the parties or by (set forth agreed market or other standard by which price was to be fixed)] no later than _____ [date].

5. Plaintiff and Defendant did not intend to be bound to the agreement described in Paragraph _____ of the complaint unless a price for the subject goods was _____ [agreed on by mutual consent of the parties or fixed according to the method described].

6. _____ Plaintiff and Defendant were unable to agree on a price for the subject goods before _____ [date], and _____ [have never agreed on a price or a price has never been set according to the method described] before the service of the complaint herein, on _____ [date].

7. The transaction described in Paragraph _____ of the complaint herein did not, therefore, result in a binding agreement, and Defendant has no further duties thereunder.

[AND/OR, to allege that the defendant was not a merchant, include paragraphs 8 through 10, below]

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Defendant Not a Merchant)

8. Defendant is an inexperienced _____ [buyer or seller] of _____ [describe goods, wares or merchandise involved in contract].

9. Defendant is not a merchant of _____ [describe goods, wares, or merchandise made subject of contract] as defined by Commercial Code Section 2104(1) and has no knowledge of the customs and practices peculiar to the _____ [selling or marketing] of those goods.

10. Defendant is a _____ [describe Defendant's business or profession].

[AND/OR, to allege that plaintiff's revocation of acceptance was ineffective, include paragraphs 11 through 17, below]

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

(Ineffective Revocation of Acceptance)

[Include if plaintiff is a merchant:]

11. Plaintiff is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

[Include if plaintiff is a merchant:]

12. Defendant is a merchant engaged in the [retail or wholesale or other description] sale of _____ [specify products or product lines, e.g., widgets].

13. On _____ [date], Defendant delivered _____ [describe goods, wares or merchandise made subject of agreement] to Plaintiff [in accordance with the specifications contained in the contract between Plaintiff and Defendant, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference].

14. _____ [Set forth facts showing plaintiff's alleged revocation, e.g., On May 1, 2005, Plaintiff notified Defendant by letter, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference, that Plaintiff was dissatisfied with the subject goods and was placing them in storage. That notification was not made within a reasonable time after Plaintiff should have discovered any defects in the subject goods].

15. _____ [Allege facts showing defendant's response to plaintiff's alleged revocation, e.g., By letter dated _____, a true copy of which is attached as Exhibit C and incorporated by reference, Defendant requested that Plaintiff particularize Plaintiff's dissatisfaction with the accepted goods, but Defendant received no further communication from Plaintiff until the service of the complaint in this action on (date) _____].

[16. Before the filing of the complaint herein, Plaintiff never asserted to Defendant that the alleged nonconformity in (describe subject goods) _____ substantially impaired the value of those goods.]

17. _____ [Allege grounds for defense of ineffective revocation, e.g., Plaintiff's failure to particularize any alleged defects in the subject goods, and thus the failure to allow Defendant an opportunity to cure them, and Plaintiff's failure to notify Defendant of any alleged nonconformity in the subject goods within a reasonable time after Plaintiff should have discovered any defects, precludes Plaintiff from recovering from Defendant any damages resulting from any alleged breach by Defendant].

[ADD additional affirmative defenses, if any]

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays as follows:

1. That Plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint herein;

2. For costs of suit; and

3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.
