When there is only one applicant for appointment as class counsel, for example, the attorney for a named representative or an attorney who has been appointed as interim class counsel, the court may not automatically appoint that applicant. Rather, the court may appoint a sole applicant only after the court considers whether the applicant meets the qualifications specified in Rule 23(g)(1) and 23(g)(4). n1 If there is more than one applicant for appointment as class counsel, the court should first consider all of the applicants using the criteria specified in Rule 23(g)(1) and 23(g)(4) in the same manner as it would evaluate a single application. Then the court should select the most qualified of all the applicants that are qualified under the criteria. n2

[b] Procedure When There Are No Qualified Applicants

The court must appoint class counsel at the time of certification. n3 Consequently, if there are no qualified applicants, the court has the option of denying certification of the class, n4 decertifying a class in the event an unqualified counsel has already been appointed, n5 or provisional options, including the following:

- Inviting additional potential qualified applicants to submit applications for the position of class counsel and selecting the counsel best able to represent the class from among the qualified applicants. n6

- Appointing an applicant after the applicant modifies his or her rejected application, if modification can cure the court's objections. For example, if the court determines that an applicant is unqualified solely because the applicant lacks substantive expertise or experience in the particular class action, the applicant may cure by associating with counsel who has adequate expertise or experience. n7

- Making any other appropriate order regarding the selection and appointment of class counsel. n8 For example, the court may enter a stay in the proceedings for a limited amount of time to permit an otherwise qualified attorney to apply and be appointed as class counsel. n9

[3] Appointment After Competitive Bidding

Some courts have permitted appointment after a process of competitive bidding or "open auction." n1 Typically, the bidding process provides that the court will select class counsel after receiving in camera bids based on the percentage of the judgment they would require as a fee. The bid process must also include information that divulges all of counsel's qualifications. n2 It appears that the class counsel requirements under the current version of Rule 23 do not necessarily preclude such a bidding process, at least to the extent the bidding process ensures that the highest bidder is qualified under the Rule 23 requirement that the court select the counsel best able to represent the class from among the qualified applicants. n3 Commentators have noted that competitive bidding procedures are still in the experimental stage and should be used with caution. n4

[4] Court's Order of Appointment of Class Counsel

The court's order of appointment of class counsel should be set out in the certification order itself, n1 except for appointment of interim counsel. n2 In addition to its order of appointment, the court has discretion to make any other orders in connection with the appointment of class counsel that it deems necessary, n3 such as, any directives it has to the attorneys, or conditions that it is imposing on class counsel to ensure that class counsel provides the best representation for the interests of the class. n4

The order appointing class counsel may also include provisions about the award of attorney's fees or nontaxable costs under Rule 23(h). n5 The inclusion of such fee and cost provisions in the order itself may prevent later disputes on these matters, particularly with respect to any maximum for fee awards or the specification of the precise method for calculating attorney's fees. The court may also specify a mechanism by which it can monitor attorney's fees and costs as the case proceeds and provide guidance for class counsel to control fees. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.120 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(C).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(C), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Warnell v. Ford Motor Co. 205 F. Supp. 2d 956, 958-961 (N.D. Ill. 2002) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(C), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2); see Harrington v. City of Albuquerque, 222 F.R.D. 505, 521 (D.N.M. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2).

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1).

(n8)Footnote 4. Kurczi v. Eli Lilly & Co., 160 F.R.D. 667, 679 (N.D. Ohio 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 5. Key v. Gillette Co., 782 F.2d 5, 7 (1st Cir. 1986) .

(n10)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 7. See In re Ski Train Fire in Kaprun, 220 F.R.D. 195, 212 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) , rev'd on other grounds, 393 F.3d 120 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n12)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(E).

(n13)Footnote 9. Huston v. Imperial Credit Commercial Mortgage Inv. Corp., 179 F. Supp. 2d 1157, 1181-1182 (C.D. Cal. 2001) .

(n14)Footnote 1. In re Cendant Corp. Sec. Litig., 404 F.3d 173, 189 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 2. See, e.g., In re Lucent Techs., Inc., 194 F.R.D. 137, 156-158 (D.N.J. 2000) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2).

(n17)Footnote 4. See 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.122[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n18)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1).

(n19)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(3).

(n20)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(E).

(n21)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2); see In re Ski Train Fire in Kaprun, 220 F.R.D. 195, 212 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) , rev'd on other grounds, 393 F.3d 120 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n22)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(D); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h); § 14A.54.

(n23)Footnote 6. Gunter v. Ridgewood Energy Corp., 223 F.3d 190, 201 n.6 (3d Cir. 2000) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
B. APPOINTMENT OF CLASS COUNSEL AND AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES IN CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.54

§ 14A.54 Class Action Attorney's Fees and Costsn*

[1] Claims Must be Made by Motion at Time Set by Court

For a certified class action, Rule 23(h) provides the procedure for claims for attorney's fees and nontaxable costs. n1 Such claims must be made by motion under Rule 54(d)(2). n2 With respect to class actions, Rule 54(d)(2) is subject to the provisions of Rule 23(h), n3 and the two rules must be read in conjunction because Rule 54(d)(2) applies in all types of actions, and does not necessarily address issues that are peculiar to class actions. Therefore, Rule 54(d)(2) procedures must be supplemented by reference to the provisions of Rule 23. n4 For example, the general 14-day time limit from entry of judgment for a motion for attorney's fees under Rule 54(d)(2) does not apply to fee motions in class actions. By its terms, Rule 23(h) requires the court to set a time limit that is appropriate under the facts and circumstances of the case. n5 The court should set motion deadlines that will permit both reasonable notice to the class and prompt resolution of the fees motion. n6 For a discussion of Rule 54 motions, see Ch. 25, Judgment.

[2] Notice of Motion Claiming Fees and Costs Must Be Served on All Parties

An attorney making a motion for fees and costs in a class action must serve notice of the motion on all parties. If the motion is made by class counsel, it must be directed to class members in a reasonable manner. n1 Thus, service must be made on the attorney of record for every party represented by an attorney n2 by one of the means authorized for service of motions under Rule 5(b). n3 For a discussion of service of motions under Rule 5, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

The members of the class are also entitled to receive reasonable notice of any motion made by class counsel for an award of attorney's fees or for reimbursement of nontaxable costs. n4 The rule does not specify the method for providing the notice that class members must receive of fee motions made by class counsel. It need not be the same formal type of notice of motions that the moving attorney must serve on the parties. The court need only direct notice to the class in a reasonable manner. Counsel should ensure that notice is sent sufficiently in advance of the determination of the motion to permit class members to prepare and file meaningful objections to the claim. n5

[3] All Named Parties and Class Members Have Right to Object to Motion

All class members may object to a motion claiming attorney's fees or costs. In addition, all parties that are subject to a motion claiming payment of fees from the parties may object to the motion. n1 For example, class members would most probably object to a motion for fees when the asserted right to payment of fees arose from the creation of a common fund for the benefit of the class. Members of the class who have opted out of the class, or nonsettling defendants who will not be affected by any fees award made in connection with a settlement, do not have standing to object to a motion for fees. n2

Rule 23(h)(2) does not specify a time for filing objections. n3 However, the court should set a deadline for objections in the same manner that the court must set a deadline for making fees motions and providing notice of the motion. Without a deadline, the court cannot manage the rights of parties and class members to object and still resolve fee motions in a prompt and efficient manner. The objection deadline set by the court should provide the eligible parties with an adequate opportunity to review all of the materials that may have been submitted in support of the motion or, in an appropriate case, conduct discovery concerning the fees request. However, the court should not authorize discovery automatically, nor should the court permit discovery without limits. n4

[4] Amount of Fee Award in Class Action

[a] Substantive Grounds for Award of Fees

Rule 23(h) is procedural and does not provide an independent ground for an award of attorney's fees or reimbursement of nontaxable costs. The right to a fees award or costs reimbursement is a matter of the substantive law applicable to the case. n1

There are two general grounds under substantive law for an award of attorney's fees and reimbursement for nontaxable costs to a prevailing party or to that party's counsel:

1. Fee-shifting statutes. Although the general rule is that parties must pay their own attorney's fees, there are a number of fee-shifting statutes that change the general rule. These give a party wronged by conduct proscribed by the statutes the right to recover attorney's fees and costs from the defendant if the party prevails in a civil action for damages. n2

2. Common fund created for benefit of class. The second substantive ground for an award of attorney's fees and recovery of nontaxable costs is based on equitable principles. When a common fund is created through an attorney's efforts and there is no applicable fee-shifting statute, the attorney is entitled to an award of reasonable fees from the fund. n3

[b] Calculation of Reasonable Fees

There are two general methods for determining the amount of a reasonable award of attorney's fees. n4 Rule 23 does not affect the court's choice in a class action of one or the other of the two methods of setting a reasonable attorney's fee, which are:

1. Percentage of funds method. Under this method, the amount of the fee is awarded on the basis of a percentage of the value of the fund. The size of percentage is increased or decreased based on a number of factors discussed below to determine a reasonable fee. The percentage-of-funds approach is appropriate when the result of the action is the creation of a common fund for the benefit of the class. n5

2. Lodestar method. Under this method, the court determines the number of hours reasonably expended by counsel on the case and multiplies them by a reasonable hourly rate, to obtain an amount, which is increased or decreased based on a number of factors discussed below to determine a reasonable fee. The lodestar method is typically used in cases in which the class's right to recover damages is granted by a federal fee-shifting statute. n6

As an adjustment to either one of these bases for attorney's fees, the court may consider a number of factors, as follows:

- A fee agreement of the parties. The court may consider any agreements among the parties regarding the fee motion and agreements between class counsel and others about the fees requested in the motion.

- Value of non-monetary benefits conferred on class. The court should take into account any non-monetary benefits obtained for the class, such as injunctive or declaratory relief.

- Amount of fees charged by other attorneys in the case. The court may consider the fees charged by class counsel or other attorneys for representing individual claimants or objectors in the same case; there should be some fee equity among counsel representing the class and class members.

When the lodestar method is used, the lodestar figure may be adjusted upward or downward through the use of a multiplier. n7 The factors the courts should consider in determining whether to use a multiplier and the amount of the multiplier include the following: n8

- The time and labor that counsel spent on the case.

- The novelty and difficulty of the questions presented.

- The skill required to resolve the issues necessary to a successful conclusion for the class.

- The extent to which the matter precluded counsel from taking other employment.

- Whether counsel's representation in the matter was on a fixed or contingent fee basis.

- The deadline pressures of the case.

- The amount involved and results obtained.

- The experience, reputation and ability of counsel.

- The undesirability of the case.

- The nature and length of counsel's professional relationship with the client.

- The amount of awards made in similar cases.

The factors included in the above lists are not exhaustive of the criteria of reasonableness. Nor are they all necessarily applicable to all reasonableness determinations. The courts may consider any factor that is indicative of reasonableness and need not explicitly consider any listed factor that is not pertinent because of the peculiar circumstances of the case. n9

[c] Calculation of Attorney's Fees in Coupon Settlement Cases

[i] Coupon Settlements Subject to Attorney's Fees

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (the Act) n10 has set limitations and specified requirements for contingent fees and other attorney's fee awards based on coupon settlements in class actions. n11 The Act applies only to civil class actions commenced on or after the date of enactment of the Act, n12 which was February 18, 2005. For a discussion of the applicability of the Act, see § 14A.12[2].

The act does not precisely define the term "coupon settlement." n13 However, it uses the term in a general sense to cover situations when a proposed settlement in a class action provides for a recovery of coupons to a class member. n14 Case precedent indicates that a coupon settlement is a settlement in which class action plaintiffs receive coupons instead of cash for their recovery. In other words, the class action plaintiffs each receive coupons that they can redeem for merchandise or services with the settling party. n15

[ii] Limitations on Contingent Fees Related to Coupon Settlement

If a proposed settlement in a class action provides for a recovery of coupons to a class member, the portion of any attorney's fee award to class counsel that is attributable to the award of the coupons must be based on the value to class members of the coupons that are actually redeemed. n16 This limitation is designed to prevent abuses in coupon settlements when class counsel are awarded large fees, while leaving class members with coupons or other awards of little or no value. n17 The court, in its discretion and on motion of a party, may receive expert testimony from a witness qualified to provide information on the actual value to class members of the redeemed coupons. n18

[iii] Limitations on Other Attorney's Fees in Coupon Settlements

If a proposed settlement in a class action provides for a recovery of coupons to class members, and any portion of the attorney's fee to be paid to class counsel is not based on the recovery of coupons, the attorney's fee award for that portion must be based on the amount of time class counsel reasonably expended working on the action. n19 Such an award must include any appropriate attorney's fee for obtaining equitable relief, including an injunction. The Act does not prohibit such an award based on the lodestar with a multiplier method of determining attorney's fees. However, any fee award must be approved by the court. n20

[iv] Limitations on Attorney's Fees Calculated on Mixed Basis in Coupon Settlements

If a proposed settlement in a class action provides for an award of coupons to class members and also provides for equitable relief, including injunctive relief, that portion of the attorney's fee to be paid to class counsel which is based on the contingent fee percentage for recovery of coupons must be calculated on the amount of coupons actually redeemed. n21 That portion of the attorney's fee to be paid to class counsel that is not based a contingent fee must be calculated based on the amount of time class counsel reasonably expended working on the action. n22

[5] Discretionary Hearing on Fees Motion

The court has discretion to hold an evidentiary hearing on the motion for an award of fees n1 but need not necessarily hold a hearing. n2 Courts have indicated that there should be a hearing whenever a party disputes the reasonableness of a significant factor in the determination of the fee amount. n3 The type of hearing required depends on the circumstances of the case. n4

[6] Court Must State Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law on Fees Motion

Whenever a court makes a ruling on a motion claiming attorney's fees or nontaxable costs, the court must state the findings of fact and conclusions of law on which it based its decision. n1 The findings and conclusions must comply with the requirements of Rule 52(a). n2 Thus, after ruling on the fees and costs motion, the court must include on the record a description of the factors the court considered in making its reasonableness determination and an explanation of how each factor resulted in an upward or downward adjustment in the amounts requested in the calculation of any amount finally awarded by the court. n3

[7] Reference to Master or to Magistrate Judge of Determination of Fee and Cost Award

The court has discretion to refer issues related to an award of attorney's fees and nontaxable costs to a master or to a magistrate judge as provided in Rule 54(d)(2)(D), n1 which in turn permits the court to refer issues relating to the value of services to a master without regard to the normal prerequisites for appointment of a master that are contained in Rule 53(a)(1). n2 Therefore, fees motions may be directly referred to a master without the necessity of any preliminary finding of consent by the parties, the existence of an exceptional condition, the ministerial nature of the task, or the unavailability of a district judge or magistrate judge of the district to address the issue in a timely and effective manner. n3 For a discussion of such references, see Ch. 21, Masters and Magistrate Judges.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselFees

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.124 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2).

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

(n12)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(2).

(n14)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n15)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n16)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n17)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n18)Footnote 2. See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) (prevailing plaintiff in private suit for damages caused by violation of specified civil rights statutes may recover reasonable attorney's fees); see generally Derfner & Wolf, Court Awarded Attorney Fees (Matthew Bender).

(n19)Footnote 3. Mills v. Electric Auto-Lite Co., 396 U.S. 375, 392-394, 90 S. Ct. 616, 24 L. Ed. 2d 593 (1970) .

(n20)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h).

(n21)Footnote 5. In re Cendant Corp. Prides Litig., 243 F.3d 722, 732 (3d Cir. 2001) ; see [a], above.

(n22)Footnote 6. In re Rite Aid Corp. Sec. Litig., 396 F.3d 294, 300 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n23)Footnote 7. *In re HPL Techs., Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7244, at 20 (N.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n24)Footnote 8. Paschal v. Flagstar Bank, FSB, 297 F.3d 431, 435 (6th Cir. 2002) .

(n25)Footnote 9. See Yong Soon Oh v. AT&T Corp., 225 F.R.D. 142, 146 (D.N.J. 2005) .

(n26)Footnote 10. Pub. L. No. 109-2, 119 Stat. 4 (2005); see 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d).

(n27)Footnote 11. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(a).

(n28)Footnote 12. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 9; 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n29)Footnote 13. See 28 U.S.C. § 1711.

(n30)Footnote 14. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1712(a), 1712(b)(1).

(n31)Footnote 15. See In re Mexico Money Transfer Litig., 164 F. Supp. 2d 1002, 1018-1020 (N.D. Ill. 2000) .

(n32)Footnote 16. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(a).

(n33)Footnote 17. See Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 2(a)(3)(A) 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n34)Footnote 18. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(d).

(n35)Footnote 19. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(b)(1).

(n36)Footnote 20. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(b)(1).

(n37)Footnote 21. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(c)(1); see 28 U.S.C. § 1712(a).

(n38)Footnote 22. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(c)(2); see 28 U.S.C. § 1712(b)(1).

(n39)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(3).

(n40)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n41)Footnote 3. See Planned Parenthood v. Attorney General of N.J., 297 F.3d 253, 265 n.5 (3d Cir. 2002) .

(n42)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(D).

(n43)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(3).

(n44)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a) (Rule 52 requirements are discussed in Ch. 25, Judgment).

(n45)Footnote 3. Planned Parenthood v. Attorney General of N.J., 297 F.3d 253, 266 (3d Cir. 2002) (district court must provide clear and concise explanation of basis for its fee award).

(n46)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(3).

(n47)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(D).

(n48)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
B. APPOINTMENT OF CLASS COUNSEL AND AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES IN CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.55through 14A.59

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.55[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.60

§ 14A.60 Types of Orders Expressly Permitted by Rulen*

The court has the authority and broad discretion to make any appropriate orders necessary for the conduct of class action proceedings. n1 The class action rule also enumerates specific types of orders designed for use by the court, as listed below. These Rule 23(d) class action orders may be combined with a pretrial order under Rule 16, n2 which covers the complete range of orders that the court may use for case management, pretrial conferences, and scheduling. n3 The court also has discretion to alter or amend any Rule 23(d) order previously entered, so that the court can expeditiously and efficiently manage the case. n4 For example, the power to alter or amend orders permits a court to vacate a prior class action certification order when appropriate; this modification is known as decertification. n5 Rule 23(d) also gives the court power to change an order regarding notice. n6

The purpose of Rule 23(d) is to provide the court with considerable latitude to facilitate the fair and efficient conduct of a class action. n7 Therefore, while the rule lists some very specific types of orders that may be appropriate in particular circumstances, it also contains a general provision allowing the court to make any other orders necessary to handle procedural matters. n8 The courts liberally apply this catch-all provision to authorize any orders not otherwise listed in the rule that facilitate the fair and efficient conduct of the action. n9 The nonexhaustive list of orders specifically permitted by Rule 23(d) are as follows:

- Orders that determine the course of proceedings or prescribe measures to prevent undue repetition or complication in the presentation of evidence or an argument. n10

- Orders that require that notice be given to some or all class members regarding: any step in the action, the proposed extent of the judgment, the opportunity to signify whether the members consider the representation fair and adequate, or to intervene and present claims or defenses, or otherwise to come into the action. n11

- Orders imposing conditions on the representative parties or on intervenors. n12

- Orders that require that the pleadings be amended to eliminate allegations as to the representation of absent persons. n13

- Orders designed to handle similar procedural matters, the catch-all provision. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNotices

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.140 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d); see Hevesi v. Citigroup Inc., 366 F.3d 70, 83 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d).

(n6)Footnote 5. Armstrong v. Davis, 275 F.3d 849, 872 (9th Cir. 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 6. International Union v. Unisys Corp., 155 F.R.D. 41, 47 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Hevesi v. Citigroup Inc., 366 F.3d 70, 83 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(E).

(n10)Footnote 9. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1304 (2d Cir. 1990) ; see § 14A.65.

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(A); see § 14A.61.

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B); see § 14A.62.

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(C); see § 14A.63.

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(D); see § 14A.64.

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(E); see § 14A.65.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.61

§ 14A.61 Orders Regulating Course of Proceedings and Presentation of Evidence and Argumentn*

A court has authority in a class action to issue orders determining the course of the proceedings or prescribing measures to prevent undue repetition or complication in the presentation of evidence or argument. n1 For example, the court may use this authority to specify the sequence of a class action proceeding and to make orders to simplify the procedure regarding proof and argument. n2 Additionally, a court may use its discretion to order the sequence in which discovery materials must be submitted. n3 The court may also establish the sequence in which the lawyers will be allowed to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to present other evidence at trial, to state and respond to objections, and to make opening and closing arguments. n4

Rule 23(d)(1)(a) orders may also be used for pretrial case management. For example, the court may order a class action stayed based on the abstention doctrine, n5 and courts have ordered class actions separated into phases and defined the issues on which discovery and presentation of evidence may proceed in each phase. n6 Similarly, courts have also ordered separate trials of issues or claims not common among all plaintiffs or defendants. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.140 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(A); see DeLoach v. Philip Morris Cos., 206 F.R.D. 551, 567 (M.D.N.C. 2002) (court has power to order parties to comply with management of class action proceedings).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1), Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. Biben v. Card, 789 F. Supp. 1001, 1004 (W.D. Mo. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 4. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 710 F. Supp. 1422, 1425 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 5. *Klabo v. Easy Heat, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4459, at 10 (N.D. Ind. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Central Wesleyan College v. W.R. Grace & Co., 143 F.R.D. 628, 642 (D.S.C. 1992) .

(n8)Footnote 7. DeLoach v. Philip Morris Cos., 206 F.R.D. 551, 567 (M.D.N.C. 2002) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.62

§ 14A.62 Orders Controlling Notice Other than Certification and Settlementn*

[1] Types of Notice That Court Has Discretion to Require

The court has discretion to require that any notice be given to protect the members of the class or otherwise to facilitate the fair conduct of the action, n1 even in addition to the ordinary mandatory notice given after certification of the class, or to notify parties and members regarding settlement. n2

The class action rule also expressly provides that the court may require that notice be given about any of the following matters: n3

- Any step in the action;
- The proposed extent of the judgment;
- The opportunity of members to signify whether they consider the representation of the class fair and adequate;
- The opportunity to intervene and present claims or defenses; or
- The opportunity otherwise to come into the action.

[2] Discretion of Court to Require Notice

Notice under Rule 23 may be either mandatory or in the discretion of the court. Notice of certification of a class is generally mandatory only for Rule 23(b)(3) class actions, that is, when questions of law or fact common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, n1 and for certain Rule 23(b)(2) class actions when the claims are for monetary relief. In the latter instance, due process requires that some form of notice be given before the judgment may bar subsequent monetary claims of absent class members. n2 Rules 23(c)(2)(A) and Rule 23(d)(1)(B) make clear that the court has discretion to require certification notice to members of all types of class actions when the circumstances warrant notice. n3

Additionally, Rule 23(d)(1)(B) gives the court discretionary power to order that notice be given to some or all of the members of a class in a wide range of class action situations, which are specified in [1], above. Therefore, in any class action, regardless of its type, the court may order notice as it deems necessary to properly protect the members of the class or ensure the fair conduct of the action. n4 For example, the court may order the parties to confer and to draft a proposed notice to the potential class. n5 In another example, the court may order the establishment of a claims notice requirement in which the court orders notice to be given to proposed class plaintiffs that they must return a claim form by a certain date to participate in any distribution to the class. n6

[3] Options for Method of Notice

The court is not required to specify that notice must comply with the formalities for service of process; rather, the court has discretion to adapt the manner of giving notice to meet the particular purpose for the notice. n1 Thus, the court may order notice to go to all the class members or to some designated portion of the class. The sufficiency of Rule 23(d)(1)(B) notice is measured against the minimum standards of constitutional due process, rather than against Rule 23(c)(2), which requires the best notice practicable under the circumstances. n2 Due process requires that the notice be reasonably calculated under the circumstances to inform interested parties of the pending action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections. Courts have frequently held that first class mail and publication are sufficient to satisfy due process notice requirements of Rule 23(d)(1)(B). n3

A court also has discretion under Rule 23(d)(1)(B) to order one of the parties to perform the tasks necessary to send notice. As a general rule, the representative plaintiff, as the party who seeks to maintain the suit as a class action, must send notice to the class. However, district courts have the authority, when appropriate, to order a defendant, rather than a representative plaintiff, to provide and pay for the expense of notice. Rule 23(d) also authorizes district courts, in appropriate circumstances, to order defendants to cooperate in identifying the class members to whom notice must be sent and to draft a proposed notice for the potential class. n4 However, the court's discretion is more limited with respect to allocating the costs of responsibility for notice. A class action plaintiff is ordinarily expected to bear the cost of notice to the class. Only if the cost of the defendant's performance of a particular task is insubstantial may the district court in its discretion order that the cost be paid by the defendant. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsNotices

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.142 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2. See [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B)(i)-(iii).

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n6)Footnote 2. Johnson v. General Motors Corp., 598 F.2d 432, 437 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B).

(n8)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B)(i)-(iii); Cruz v. Am. Airlines, Inc., 356

F.3d 320, 331, (D.C. Cir. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 5. Amone v. Aveiro, 226 F.R.D. 677, 688 (D. Haw. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 6. Kyriazi v. Western Elec. Co., 647 F.2d 388, 396 (3d Cir. 1981) .

(n11)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d), Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B).

(n13)Footnote 3. Simmer Paper Prods., Inc. v. Berger & Montague, P.C., 758 F.2d 86, 90 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Amone v. Aveiro, 226 F.R.D. 677, 688 (D. Haw. 2005) .

(n15)Footnote 5. Barahona-Gomez v. Reno, 167 F.3d 1228, 1236-1237 (9th Cir. 1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.63

§ 14A.63 Orders Imposing Conditions on Representative Parties and Intervenorsn*

[1] Discretion of Court to Impose Conditions on Representative Parties

The court in a class action has considerable discretion to impose conditions on the representative parties. n1 This rule has been interpreted as permitting the court to issue appropriate orders governing the conduct of parties and counsel. For example, the court may condition the maintenance of the class action on the addition of representative parties to add strength to the representation of the class. n2 However, this authority is not unrestricted; both the federal rules and certain constitutional limitations may restrict the court's authority. n3

Rule 23(d)(1)(C) is normally used in the context of an order by the court which limits a class representative attorney's or a party's communications to potential class members. n4 The communication limitation is designed to prevent possible abuses associated with soliciting participation in the class proceeding. n5 For example, some courts have prohibited parties or attorneys opposing class treatment or settlement from soliciting class members to opt out of the litigation. n6 Furthermore, unapproved communications to class members may lead to confusion or an adverse effect on the administration of justice. Thus, a district court may abuse its discretion by authorizing communication prior to class certification if (1) the communication is widespread and clearly injurious, and (2) it is either unlikely the class will be certified, or a certification decision is not imminent. n7 However, the United States Supreme Court has cautioned against banning communications in class actions simply to avoid the possibility of abuse. A district court must draft the least burdensome condition appropriate under the circumstances. n8

[2] Discretion of Court to Impose Conditions on Intervenors

In a class action, the court has discretion to order that notice be given in such manner as the court may direct to some or all of the members of the class of the opportunity to intervene and present claims or defenses. Thus, a court may give absentee class members the opportunity to intervene and present claims or defenses or otherwise come into the action. n1 The primary purpose of intervention is to assure that the class is adequately represented within the meaning of Rule 23(a)(4). n2 In ruling on a motion for intervention, a court usually will undertake an analysis of the adequacy of the proposed representation and may impose conditions on the intervenors to protect that adequacy of the representation. n3 Another common condition imposed on intervenors is an order by the court limiting the extent of the intervenors' right to participate in the overall action. For example, in one case the court denied intervenors the right to participate in settlement negotiations. n4 Class members should be liberally allowed to intervene in class actions because members of the class are normally bound by the judgment. n5 For a discussion of the right of intervention, and of permissive intervention, see Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.143, 23.144 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(C).

(n3)Footnote 2. Robinson v. Metro-North Commuter R.R., 267 F.3d 147, 171 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Gulf Oil Co. v. Bernard, 452 U.S. 89, 100, 101 S. Ct. 2193, 68 L. Ed. 2d 693 (1981) (order restricting communications between counsel and parties exceeded authority granted in federal rules).

(n5)Footnote 4. *Wiginton v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16266, at 5 (N.D. Ill. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Cobell v. Norton, 212 F.R.D. 14, 19 (D.D.C. 2002) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Kleiner v. First Nat'l Bank, 751 F.2d 1193, 1203 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Jackson v. Motel 6 Multipurpose, Inc., 130 F.3d 999, 1004 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Gulf Oil Co. v. Bernard, 452 U.S. 89, 104, 101 S. Ct. 2193, 68 L. Ed. 2d 693 (1981) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B)(iii).

(n11)Footnote 2. Diduck v. Kaszycki & Sons Contractors, Inc., 149 F.R.D. 55, 57 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B)(iii); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(C).

(n13)Footnote 4. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 710 F. Supp. 1422, 1425 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a); see Diduck v. Kaszycki & Sons Contractors, Inc., 149 F.R.D. 55, 57 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

124 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.64

§ 14A.64 Orders Requiring Amendment of Pleadings to Eliminate Class Representationn*

The district court in a class action has authority to enter an order requiring that pleadings be amended to eliminate allegations regarding the representation of absent persons and to have the action proceed without representation of those persons. n1 In essence, this provision authorizes a court to strike class allegations from the complaint. For example, the court may order that certain allegations be stricken when class certification is denied with respect to certain claims, n2 or when class certification is denied for all claims. n3 Thus, the court may use Rule 23(d)(1)(D) to decertify a class if a court determines that the plaintiffs no longer satisfy all the requirements for maintaining a class action. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.145 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(D).

(n3)Footnote 2. Stubbs v. McDonald's Corp., 224 F.R.D. 668, 674, 677 (D. Kan. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Cohn v. Massachusetts Mutual Life Ins. Co., 189 F.R.D. 209, 219 (D. Conn. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Bresson v. Thomson McKinnon Sec., Inc., 118 F.R.D. 339, 342 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.65

§ 14A.65 Other Orders to Facilitate Class Action Proceduresn*

The district court in a class action has authority to make any orders appropriate to handle procedural matters similar to the others prescribed in Rule 23(d)(1). n1 The courts have liberally interpreted this provision, which is essentially a catch-all order provision, and have relied on the provision to find authority for almost any type of procedural order that facilitates the fair and efficient conduct of the action and protects the interests of the absent class members. Thus, Rule 23(d)(1)(E) may be used to require notice to members who would not ordinarily be entitled to mandatory notice under the class action rule. n2 In another example, Rule 23(d)(1)(E) has been used as authority for permitting class members to opt out of a mandatory class in a Rule 23(b)(2) injunctive relief type action. n3

The courts frequently cite this catch-all provision in conjunction with one or more of the other more specific provisions of Rule 23(d)(1)(A)-(D). In this regard, if a court order appears to be at the limits of one of these more specific grants of authority, the general power of Rule 23(d)(1)(A) provides a more substantial justification for the court's order. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.140[4] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(E).

(n3)Footnote 2. Evans v. Am. Credit Sys., 222 F.R.D. 388, 398 (D. Neb. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Veneman, 309 F.3d 789, 792-793 (D.C. Cir. 2002) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Gulf Oil Co. v. Bernard, 452 U.S. 89, 99-100, 101 S. Ct. 2193, 68 L. Ed. 2d 693 (1981) (citing Rule 23(d)(5) in conjunction with Rule 23(d)(3) as authority for orders placing limitations on communications by named plaintiffs and their counsel in class actions).

126 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.66

§ 14A.66 Immediate Appeal of Class Action Procedural Orders Generally Not Allowedn*

When a court enters an order under Rule 23(d), the order generally is not a final appealable order because it generally does not finally and entirely dispose of the rights of the parties in the action. n1 However, such an order is immediately appealable under the collateral-order doctrine if the order (1) conclusively determines claims or rights separable from, and collateral to, rights asserted in the action, (2) is too important to be denied review, and (3) is too independent of the cause itself to require that appellate review be deferred until the whole case is adjudicated. Appellate courts have used the collateral-order doctrine as a basis for reviewing orders restricting communications in class actions n2 and orders that allocate the cost of sending notice to class members. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsAppellate Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.146 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Cobell v. Norton, 225 F.R.D. 41, 43 (D.D.C. 2002) ; see also 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n3)Footnote 2. In re School Asbestos Litig., 842 F.2d 671, 677 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Southern Ute Indian Tribe v. Amoco Prod. Co., 2 F.3d 1023, 1028 (10th Cir. 1993) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
C. TRIAL COURT'S ORDERS REGULATING CONDUCT OF CLASS ACTION PROCEEDINGS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.67through 14A.79

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.67[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
D. JUDGMENT IN CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.80

§ 14A.80 Contents of Class Action Judgmentn*

In a class action, the judgment must correctly and completely identify the persons bound. Rule 23(c)(3) specifies how to make the description. n1 In a Rule 23(b)(1) (Type I) or Rule 23(b)(2) (Type II) class action, n2 the judgment must include and describe those whom the court finds to be members of the class, regardless of whether the judgment is favorable or unfavorable to the class. The judgment in a Rule 23(b)(3) (Type III) class action, regardless of whether it is favorable or unfavorable to the class, must include and specify or describe those members to whom the certification notice required by Rule 23(c)(2) was directed and who have not requested exclusion. n3 In other words, in a Rule 23(b)(1) or Rule 23(b)(2) action, the judgment must describe the members of the class, but need not specify the individual members; in a Rule 23(b)(3) action, the judgment must specify the individual members who have been identified and must describe those who have not been identified. n4

The purpose of these Rule 23(c)(3) requirements is to correctly and completely describe who is bound by the class action judgment. n5 If the judgment of a class action is incorrect in that it fails to correctly define the class that is to be bound by the judgment, the aggrieved party should make a motion under Rule 60(a) to correct the mistake or omission in the judgment. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.180 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Coleman v. GM Acceptance Corp., 220 F.R.D. 64, 80 (D. Tenn. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1), 23(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3).

(n6)Footnote 5. Coleman v. GM Acceptance Corp., 220 F.R.D. 64, 80 (D. Tenn. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Vaughter v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 817 F.2d 685, 690 (11th Cir. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
D. JUDGMENT IN CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.81

§ 14A.81 Preclusive Effects of Class Action Judgmentn*

A final judgment in a class action that has followed the procedures of Rule 23 is generally binding in subsequent litigation on all class members, including named representatives. Thus, the principles of claim preclusion and issue preclusion apply with respect to matters contained in the judgment. n1 Thus, for example, a judgment in a class action has preclusive effect if (1) there was clearly a final judgment on the merits; (2) the required notices were properly given and comported with due process requirements; (3) the identity of the parties' standard has been met because the court determined that the class was adequately represented; and (4) there were no matters outside the scope of the matters actually litigated, or that could have been litigated in the class action. n2

The only qualification to the general rule of preclusion for class actions is that the class action procedures used to reach the judgment must have comported with certain constitutional due process requirements. Due process requires that in Rule 23(b)(3) (Type III) class actions, cases in which a plaintiff class's predominant request for relief is for money damages, absent class members must be given the best practicable notice, an opportunity to be heard, an opportunity to opt out of the action, and adequate representation by the named plaintiff. n3 Any judgment entered in the class action will not have preclusive effect as to the class members affected by any due process deficiencies. By contrast, if the requirements of Rule 23(c)(2) have been satisfied, all Rule 23(b)(3) class members who were given proper notice and did not opt out are bound by the judgment. n4

Due process concerns are minimal with regard to the preclusive effects of final judgments in Rule 23(b)(1) (Type I) or Rule 23(b)(2) (Type II) classes. Members of those classes generally do not have the absolute right to notice and to opt out and, therefore, may be bound by the judgment reached in the action even though they did not receive individual notice or an opportunity to opt out. However, there is an exception for monetary claims. A class member's individual monetary claims are not precluded in an action subsequent to a class action judgment if the member had not received notice of the prior class action. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsEstoppelGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsFull Faith & CreditGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.181 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Cooper v. Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, 467 U.S. 867, 874, 104 S. Ct. 2794, 81 L. Ed. 2d 718 (1984) ; see Bentley v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., 223 F.R.D. 471, 483 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (claim preclusion applies to matters actually litigated).

(n3)Footnote 2. Reppert v. Marvin Lumber & Cedar Co., 359 F.3d 53, 58 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 176, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Pate v. United States, 328 F. Supp. 2d 62, 72-74 (D.D.C. 2004) ; see Bentley v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., 223 F.R.D. 471, 483 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (claim preclusion applies only to matters actually litigated or settled in prior class action).

130 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
D. JUDGMENT IN CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.82through 14A.89

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.82[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.90

§ 14A.90 Certified Class Action Settlement, Voluntary Dismissal, or Compromise Requires Court Approvaln*

[1] Requirement of Court Approval

[a] Review of Terms of Settlement, Dismissal, or Compromise

Once a court has ordered certification of a class action, the named representatives cease to completely control the prosecution of the action. In particular, the parties may not unilaterally or with consent of other parties settle, voluntarily dismiss, or compromise any part of the certified class action. n1 The court must approve any settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise of any claims, issues, or defenses of a certified class action. n2 Court approval is required despite the provisions of any other rule, including Rule 41, which governs voluntary dismissals. n3 The latest version of this rule resolves the ambiguity in prior versions: only class actions that have been formally certified strictly require court approval for a settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise. n4

[b] Review of Attorney's Fees

As part of its review of any settlement, voluntarily dismissal, or compromise of any class action, the court must also conduct a thorough review of the reasonableness of any attorney's fees associated with the judgment of settlement, dismissal, or compromise. n5 The court has an obligation to review the reasonableness of attorney's fees in class action settlements even in the absence of any objection to the settlement, and irrespective of the type of class action and whether the fees will be paid from a common fund or otherwise. n6 For a discussion of attorney's fee awards in class actions, see § 14A.50 et seq.

[2] Settlements are Favored by Court

The requirement that the court must review and approve proposed settlements and voluntary dismissals in certified class actions does not mean that they are disfavored. On the contrary, there is a strong judicial policy in favor of settlements, particularly in complex class action litigation. n1 Settlements are favored by the courts because they conserve considerable judicial resources by avoiding further litigation. The parties to a settlement also avoid the costs and risks of a potentially lengthy and complex trial. Furthermore, a settlement may represent the best method of distributing damage awards to plaintiffs, especially in the contest of a limited fund, in which piecemeal distribution might deplete the fund before all claimants receive awards. n2

Despite the judicial favor for settlements, the federal rules provide for the strict requirement of court approval for certified class action settlements for several reasons based on the unique nature of the class action. The primary reason is to protect the interests of the entire class, including absent members. n3 A class action settlement, like an agreement resolving any other legal claim, is essentially a private contract negotiated between the parties. Rule 23(e) requires the court to intercede in that private agreement to ensure that the agreement is not the result of fraud or collusion, and that taken as a whole it is fair, adequate, and reasonable to all concerned, particularly to the unnamed and absent class members. n4

[3] Use and Certification of Settlement Class

One or more persons may file a complaint with class allegations in the pleadings and prior to certification the parties may negotiate and settle the claims of the named parties on an individual basis and voluntarily dismiss the entire action without court interference or approval. However, if they do so the settlement or settlements are individual, rather than, class settlements. The claims of class members have not been litigated and the settlement or dismissal will not bind any persons other than the named parties who agree to the settlement or dismissal. n1 Parties may want to negotiate a settlement that will bind all of the class members and may do so prior to the time the court certifies the class. However, to have the settlement bind the absent class members, the parties who have reached agreement must move to have the class certified and, simultaneously, apply to have the court review and approve the settlement agreement. A class certified in this type of pre-settled action is called a "settlement class." n2 Use of settlement classes is not explicitly authorized in Rule 23. However, the Supreme Court has recognized and approved their use. n3

Attorneys should be cautious in the use of a settlement class because the expression "settlement class" has sometimes been used incorrectly by some courts to refer to a temporary class approved by the court on a conditional basis for the limited purpose of conducting settlement negotiations. However, Rule 23 does not allow conditional certification. Even for a settlement class, the court must review all of the usual certification requirements and order a formal certification. n4 The only unique significance of a "settlement class" is that, for convenience, certification occurs simultaneously with court approval. The proper use of a settlement class occurs when the parties reach a tentative settlement that they want to make binding on the entire proposed class, and they reach a provisional settlement prior to the certification of the class. Then, the parties should move the court for simultaneous class certification and approval of the settlement. The court may then order a combined notice of the proposed certification, opt-out rights, and the proposed settlement, and combine the fairness hearing with a hearing on class certification. If the settlement is approved and the class is certified, absent class members who do not opt out are bound by the settlement agreement. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.160, 23.161 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e); see In re Rite Aid Corp. Sec. Litig., 396 F.3d 294, 300 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a) (Rule 41, which authorizes voluntary dismissals and generally controls their procedure, is subject to provisions of Rule 23(e).

(n5)Footnote 4. Eckert v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc'y of the United States, 227 F.R.D. 60, 62 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Rite Aid Corp. Sec. Litig., 396 F.3d 294, 299 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Zucker v. Occidental Petroleum Corp., 192 F.3d 1323, 1328-29 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 1. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 116-117 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 2. In re Gen. Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 784 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 3. *Denney v. Jenkens & Gilchrist, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2507, at 32 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Holmes v. Continental Can Co., 706 F.2d 1144, 1147-1148 (11th Cir. 1983) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 176, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n13)Footnote 2. See In re Warfarin Sodium Antitrust Litig., 391 F.3d 516, 534 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 618, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 620-621, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) (only when it meets prerequisites of numerosity, commonality, typicality, predominance of class issues, and adequacy of representation, and fairness test under Rule 23(e), may court certify proposed settlement class as class action).

(n16)Footnote 5. See In re Gen. Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 777-778 (3d Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.91

§ 14A.91 Notice Requirementsn*

[1] Notice Is a Prerequisite to Settlement Approval

The court must direct that the parties send notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who are to be bound by a settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise. n1 The procedure for notice of a proposed settlement is not the same as for a notice of certification. While a court has discretion in some types of class actions to dispense with notice of certification, notice to class members of a proposed settlement or voluntary dismissal is mandatory for all types of classes. n2

[2] Contents and Method of Notice

The court must direct that the parties give notice in a reasonable manner to all class members. n1 Under the reasonable standard, the district court has considerable discretion in directing the form and manner of notice. However, the discretion is not unlimited. For the notice to be "reasonable" as required by Rule 23(e), the settlement notice must fairly inform the members of the class of the terms of the proposed settlement and o f the options that are available to them in connection with the proceedings; the notice must be capable of being understood by the average class member. n2 In particular, the notice of the proposed settlement or voluntary dismissal must at least provide the following information to the members of the certified class:

1. Time and place of fairness hearing. An important part of approval of a proposed settlement or dismissal is a hearing on the fairness of the proposed settlement or dismissal. Therefore, class members must be told when and where this hearing will be held. n3

2. Time and manner to object to settlement. Any class member may object to a proposed settlement or voluntary dismissal. At the fairness hearing on the proposed settlement or dismissal, the court must consider the objections made by class members. Therefore, there must be a deadline to make objections and specified methods for presenting objections to the court's attention in time for consideration at the hearing, and the notice must inform the class members of this information. n4

3. Sufficient information about the proposed settlement or dismissal to permit opposition to object. In order to determine whether to accept or object to the settlement proposal, a reasonable notice must contain some detailed information about the terms and conditions of the proposed settlement or dismissal. Usually, the party providing notice will attach a copy of the proposal to the notice, but no particular form is required. n5 A reasonable notice need not include all of the details of the proposed settlement or dismissal; the only requirement is that the notice fairly apprize the class members of the terms of the settlement or dismissal. n6 The notice should also inform the members of the location where copies of the entire settlement agreement are available for inspection. n7

While "reasonable notice" is sufficient for most proposals for settlement, dismissal, or compromise, the court has discretion to set a higher standard of certification notice when necessitated by the circumstances, for example, if the class members are required to file claim forms to participate in the settlement judgment, or if the court orders a second opt-out opportunity under Rule 23(e)(3). In such cases, the court may direct individual personal notice instead of notice by publication. n8

[3] Court Has Discretion to Apportion Expense of Notice

The United States Supreme Court has stated a general rule that the named representative plaintiffs should perform all tasks and pay all costs related to the sending notice of certification, n1 and several courts have applied the Supreme Court's reasoning to notices of settlement, dismissal, or compromise under Rule 23(e). n2 However, because the representative plaintiff is not always the sole party that seeks approval of a settlement, dismissal, or compromise, most courts have recognized that the district court may order the defendants to perform tasks and pay a portion of the expense associated with providing notice of a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise of the claims, issues, or defenses, of a certified class. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.162 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1); see Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 113-114 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1).

(n4)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1).

(n5)Footnote 2. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 113-114 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(5); *Lopez v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21970, at *6-7 (N.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(5).

(n8)Footnote 5. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 113-114 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Gottlieb v. Wiles, 11 F.3d 1004, 1013 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 7. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 710 F. Supp. 1422, 1424 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n11)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 1. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 349, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n14)Footnote 3. Kansas Hosp. Ass'n v. Whiteman, 167 F.R.D. 144, 146 (D. Kan. 1996) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.92

§ 14A.92 Parties Requesting Approval of Settlement Must File Statement of Any Agreements Made in Connection with Settlementn*

[1] Parties' Written Disclosure Statement Must Identify All Related Agreements

Any parties who file a motion for approval of a settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise of a certified class action under Rule 23(e)(1) must file a statement identifying any agreement made in connection with the proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise. n1 These agreements, known as "side agreements," must be available to the court for its in camera review. n2

The purpose of the requirement of identifying side agreements is full disclosure to the court of all agreements that may seem separate and apart from the agreement resulting in the settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise, but nevertheless may have influenced the parties or their counsel in reaching that agreement. To fulfill its obligation to evaluate the fairness, reasonableness, and adequacy of the proposed settlement, the court must obtain information regarding any agreement that might have involved negotiating away possible advantages for the class in return for advantages given to other parties. n3 However, these agreements are for the use of the court and are not subject to discovery by the parties or objectors to the settlement. n4

[2] Parties Must Make Complete Disclosure

The parties should not decide among themselves whether an agreement actually influenced the settlement and, therefore, should be disclosed or identified in the written statement filed with the court. If the side agreement possibly could have influenced the terms of the settlement, it should be disclosed, even if the parties believe that it did not. n1 In other words, doubts over whether an agreement meets the criteria for disclosure should be resolved in favor of disclosure. n2 Because the parties seeking court approval of a settlement, dismissal, or compromise need only file a written statement "identifying" such agreements, n3 the parties are not required, as an initial matter, to provide the court with copies or even summaries of any of the agreements made in connection with a proposed settlement. However, the court has authority to require the parties proposing the settlement to provide the court with a summary of any agreement identified in the required statement and, if further review is necessary, a copy of the actual complete terms of the agreement. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.163 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(3).

(n3)Footnote 2. In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 186, 204 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 186, 204 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 1. See In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 186, 204 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n7)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(3).

(n9)Footnote 4. See In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 186, 204 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.93

§ 14A.93 Factors Considered by Court in Determining Whether to Approve Settlementn*

[1] Court Should Approve Settlement Only if Settlement Is Fair, Reasonable, and Adequate

The court may approve a settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise that would bind class members only if the court finds that the settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise is fair, reasonable, and adequate. n1 The court must also determine that the terms of a settlement do not violate any applicable federal law n2 and is consistent with the public interest. n3

The court has considerable discretion whether to approve a particular settlement, so that the court need not give greater weight to any particular relevant factor and is not required to consider all factors. The standards requiring a "fair, adequate, and reasonable" disposition of a class action are somewhat general, n4 so courts have developed particular factors regarding the determination of approval. For a discussion of the primary factors a court should consider, see [2], below.

[2] Four Primary Factors for Court to Consider

[a] Settlement Is Based on Negotiation Rather Than Collusion

In assessing its fairness, adequacy, and reasonableness, the court should consider whether the settlement was the result of good faith bargaining at arms length by experienced counsel and whether there is any evidence of collusion. n1 Whether the agreement was the result of good faith bargaining rather than the result of fraud, overreaching, or collusion among the negotiating parties is one of the most significant factors that a court considers for approval. n2 Some courts have even stated that establishment of arms length bargaining merits a presumption of fairness of a proposed dismissal or settlement. n3 Indications of collusion include disparate treatment of class members and preferential treatment for the class representatives. The trial court must investigate whether the class representatives and their attorneys may be colluding with the defendants to increase their own recovery at the expense of absentee plaintiffs, and the extent of an investigation depends on the degree to which the settlement treats class members differently. n4

[b] Strength of Plaintiffs' Case Compared to Amount Offered in Settlement

Another important factor in evaluating the fairness, reasonableness, and adequacy of a settlement is the strength of the plaintiffs' case on the merits, balanced against the amount offered in the settlement. n5 In balancing these two criteria, the court must consider the probable amount the class would have obtained if the action had been prosecuted to its conclusion. The court must examine the risks of establishing liability and damages, and of maintaining the class action through trial. n6

However, the court may not adjudicate the merits of the dispute. n7 Furthermore, the court may not merely balance the amount of a proposed settlement against a speculative amount of what might be awarded in a judgment in favor of the class. The essence of a settlement is compromise, which considers not only the monetary amount but other benefits, such as avoiding the risks of trial. Therefore, a proposed settlement may be adequate even though it amounts to only a small fraction of the potential recovery in a fully litigated case. Finally, the court must balance the probable result at trial against the likely costs in time and expense of continued litigation. n8

[c] Input of Members of Class Regarding Settlement Proposal

The response of the members of a class to a proposed settlement is the third primary consideration for the district court in its determination whether to approve the settlement. Class members may either directly object or approve, or may show approval by their conduct in failing to object. n9 However, even though the court should consider class members' input, the mere fact that a large number of class members object is not determinative that the court should disapprove; rather, the input is one factor and the court should decide after weighing all the strengths and weaknesses of the case and the risks of litigation. n10 The court may also consider the opinions and observations of the parties' counsel. The more experience that class counsel possesses, the greater weight a court tends to give to counsel's opinions on fairness, adequacy, and reasonableness. n11

[d] Stage of Litigation

The further the litigation has progressed, the more likely the court will be to approve a settlement. For example, when more discovery and consultation with experts has been completed the court is more likely to give approval because it is more likely that the parties arrived at a compromise based on a full understanding of the legal and factual issues surrounding the case. n12 Thus, after the parties become well informed of the strengths and weaknesses of their claims by discovery, investigation, and analysis, and the proceedings are in the advanced stage of preparing for trial, the more likely the court will be to approve a settlement. n13

[3] Court Must Make Findings Regarding Approval of Settlement

When approving a settlement of a class action, the court must support with formal findings of fact and conclusions of law its determination that the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate. n1 The findings on approval or disapproval of a proposed settlement must be specified in sufficient detail to explain to class members and the appellate court, if necessary, the factors the court considered in its determination. n2 Without precise findings, it may be impossible for a court of appeals to evaluate a district court's decision because there are so many interests and factors that the court must consider in making the decision. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.164 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. In re Fleet/Norstar Sec. Litig., 935 F. Supp. 99, 105 (D. R.I. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Bailey v. Great Lakes Canning, Inc., 908 F.2d 38, 42 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Consol. Edison, Inc. v. Northeast Utils., 332 F. Supp. 2d 639, 651 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 621, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n7)Footnote 2. In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 186, 190-191 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 3. In re Sumitomo Copper Litig., 189 F.R.D. 274, 280-281 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n9)Footnote 4. Holmes v. Continental Can Co., 706 F.2d 1144, 1148 (11th Cir. 1983) .

(n10)Footnote 5. Schneider v. Citicorp Mortg., 324 F. Supp. 2d 372, 378 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n11)Footnote 6. Bailey v. Great Lakes Canning, Inc., 908 F.2d 38, 42 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n12)Footnote 7. See Carson v. American Brands, Inc., 450 U.S. 79, 88 n.14, 101 S. Ct. 993, 67 L. Ed. 2d 59 (1981) ; Murillo v. Texas A & M Univ. Sys., 921 F. Supp. 443, 445 (S.D. Tex. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 8. In re Marine Midland Motor Vehicle Leasing Litig., 155 F.R.D. 416, 420 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 9. Dillard v. City of Foley, 926 F. Supp. 1053, 1063 (M.D. Ala. 1995) (court assumed plaintiff class overwhelmingly supported proposed consent decree because no class members registered objections).

(n15)Footnote 10. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1304 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n16)Footnote 11. Dillard v. City of Foley, 926 F. Supp. 1053, 1063 (M.D. Ala. 1995) .

(n17)Footnote 12. *In re DJ Orthopedics, Inc. Secs. Litig., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11457, at *5-6 (S.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n18)Footnote 13. In re Sumitomo Copper Litig., 189 F.R.D. 274, 281-282 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n19)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2).

(n20)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n21)Footnote 3. Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 946 (9th Cir. 2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.94

§ 14A.94 Class Members Have Right to Object to Proposed Settlementn*

[1] Court Must Receive and Respond to Objections Made by Class Members

The court must generally give preliminary approval to a settlement, n1 known as a proposed settlement. n2 All class members have the right to object to any proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise of any of the class's claims, issues, or defenses. n3 The court frequently specifies in its notice of the proposed settlement and hearing a deadline by which class members must make objections and the manner for making objections. The class members should make objections as required in the notice; thus, a class member generally need not make a formal appearance or seek intervention at the fairness hearing to object to a proposed settlement. n4

The court must consider class members' timely objections before the court makes a determination whether a proposed settlement agreement is fair, reasonable, and adequate. Courts have consistently stated that one indicator of whether a proposed settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate is the number and strength of the objections made. The fewer the objections, the more likely that the settlement may be approved. n5

[2] Class Members May Withdraw Objections Only on Permission of Court

A class member who has made an objection to a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise of the class's claims, issues, or defenses may not withdraw the objection without the court's permission. n1 The objector should obtain permission by filing a motion for withdrawal of the objection n2 prior to the deadline for making objections and, in any event, before the fairness hearing. n3 If the objector attempts to make a withdrawal without the court's permission, the withdrawal is completely without effect unless and until the court gives permission, and the court must still consider the substance of the objection during its determination whether to approve the settlement agreement.

The purpose of requiring court permission for the withdrawal of an objection is to eliminate the possibility that an objection may be used for purposes of obstruction or delay, particularly if obstruction or delay is a means of procuring special treatment for the objector. Thus, a court may permit the withdrawal of an objection to a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise without elaborate inquiry or any great formality in situations in which there is no possibility for misuse of the objection. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromises

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.166 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. In re Relafen Antitrust Litig., 360 F. Supp. 2d 166, 192 (D. Mass. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(5).

(n5)Footnote 4. Devlin v. Scardelletti, 536 U.S. 1, 8, 122 S. Ct. 2005, 153 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Fleet/Norstar Secs. Litig., 935 F. Supp. 99, 107 (D.R.I. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(5).

(n8)Footnote 2. Brown v. Am. Home Prods. Corp., 226 F.R.D. 498 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 3. In re Lupron Mktg. & Sales Practices Litig., 228 F.R.D. 75, 96-97 (D. Mass. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(5), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.95

§ 14A.95 Court May Grant Final Approval to Settlement Only After Holding Hearingn*

[1] Rule Explicitly Requires Hearing

A court must hold a hearing to determine whether the binding settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise is fair, reasonable, and adequate. n1 The 2003 amendment to Rule 23(e) has removed any discretion the court might have previously had to approve a settlement without a hearing. Thus, the unequivocal language of Rule 23(e) now mandates the already common practice of conducting fairness hearings prior to approval of any settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise. n2

[2] Time of Hearing

The court must hold the formal fairness hearing for final approval after the members have received notice of the proposed settlement and of the hearing, and have had an opportunity to object to the proposed settlement. n1 The procedure for obtaining input from parties and class members other than those proposing the settlement, dismissal, or compromise also allows the court to hold multiple hearings in different locations, if necessary. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.165 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. *In re Wireless Tel. Fed. Cost Recovery Fees Litig., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23342, at 24 (W.D. Mo. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1); see In re Lupron Mktg. & Sales Practices Litig., 228 F.R.D. 75, 96-97 (D. Mass. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 2. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 710 F. Supp. 1422, 1424 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.96

§ 14A.96 Court Has Discretion to Withhold Approval Unless Second Opt Out Is Allowedn*

[1] Court Has Discretion to Provide for Second Opt Out

At the time of certification of any class action based on common questions of law and fact under Rule 23(b)(3), the court must provide each class member with notice and the opportunity to exclude the member from the class, known as an opt out. n1 Then, at the time of its consideration of a settlement in an action previously certified as a common question of law and fact class action under Rule 23(b)(3), the court may refuse to approve a settlement unless the settlement provides each member with a new opportunity to request exclusion of those members that at the certification stage had an opportunity to request exclusion but did not do so. n2 This is known as a "second opt out" opportunity or a "back end exclusion." The decision whether to grant the absent class members a second opportunity to opt out after the terms of a proposed settlement are known is in the court's discretion, n3 and no party or class member has a right to a second opt out. n4

[2] Court May Limit or Condition Second Opt Out

The court may have concerns that a second opportunity to opt out by class members may be the subject of abuse. For example, some class members with substantial potential claims may elect to opt out in the hope of coercing settling defendants to provide them with more lucrative settlement terms than are available to the balance of the class. Other class members may elect to opt out in the hope that they might be able, in subsequent class litigation, to avoid unfavorable rulings the court made in the case before the settlement agreement was reached. The court may circumvent many of those abuses by directing that any class members electing to opt out of the class in response to their second opportunity to do so are bound by any or all rulings the court entered before the settlement agreement was proposed for approval. n1

[3] Class Members Who Opt Out Are Not Bound by and May Not Share in Settlement

Because Rule 23(e)(3) specifies that a second opt out is a new opportunity to request exclusion from the class, the effect of exercising a second opt out is the same as the effect of exercising an original opt out at the time of certification. n1 In other words, class members who take advantage of their second opportunity to opt out of the class are not bound by the settlement, and their claims against the defendants survive the entry of judgment on the settlement agreement, except to the extent that the court ordered that class members remain bound by court rulings even if they opt out. n2 Those class members also have no right to participate in the settlement. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.167 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B); see § 14A.33[5][f].

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(4).

(n4)Footnote 3. See In re AMF Bowling Sec. Litig., 334 F. Supp. 2d 462, 466 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(4), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(4), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n7)Footnote 1. See In re Relafen Antitrust Litig., 360 F. Supp. 2d 166, 194-195 (D. Mass. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 2. See [2], above.

(n9)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(4), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.97

§ 14A.97 Settlement of Class Actions Subject to Class Action Fairness Actn*

[1] Actions That Are Subject to Class Action Fairness Act

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (the Act) n1 has established several requirements for court approval of settlements for class actions covered by the Act. n2 The Act applies only to civil class actions commenced on or after the date of its enactment, n3 February 18, 2005. n4 For further discussion of the applicability of the Act, see § 14A.12[2].

[2] Court Approval of Coupon Settlement

The Act does not precisely define the term "coupon settlement." n1 However, it uses the term to apply to situations when a proposed settlement in a class action provides for a recovery of coupons to a class member. n2 Case precedent indicates that a coupon settlement is a settlement in which class action plaintiffs receive coupons instead of cash for their recovery. In other words, the class action plaintiffs each receive coupons that they can redeem for merchandise or services with the settling party. n3

In any proposed settlement under which class members are awarded coupons, the court may approve the proposed settlement only after a hearing to determine whether the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate for class members. The court must make a written finding of its determination. The court also has discretion to require that a proposed settlement agreement provide for the distribution of a portion of the value of unclaimed coupons to one or more charitable or governmental organizations, as agreed to by the parties. n4 To assist it in the fairness determination, the court has discretion on motion of a party to receive expert testimony from a witness qualified to provide information on the actual value to the class members of the coupons that are redeemed. n5

[3] Court Approval of Net Loss Settlement

The court has discretion to approve a proposed settlement that would obligate a class member to pay sums to class counsel that would result in a net loss to the class member. However, to grant such an approval, the court must make a written finding that nonmonetary benefits to the class member substantially outweigh the monetary loss of the settlement. n1

[4] Prohibition Against Court Approval of Settlement Providing for Payment Based on Geographic Location

A court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of greater amounts to some class members than to others, when the difference is attributable solely to the fact some class members are located in closer geographic proximity to the court than others. n1

[5] Requirement That Defendants Must Notify Federal and State Officials of Proposed Settlement

[a] Defendants Must Give Notice Within 10 Days After Filing Proposed Settlement

Each defendant participating in a proposed settlement of a class action must serve appropriate state and federal officials with a notice of a proposed settlement not later than 10 days after a proposed settlement is filed with the court. Each defendant must serve notice on the appropriate state official for every state in which any single class member resides. n1 The appropriate federal official is usually the U.S. Attorney General or any federal and state regulators or licensing authorities that can be identified for each defendant. n2 The appropriate state official is either the state attorney general for each state in which class members might reside, as well as any state regulators or licensing authorities that can be identified for each defendant. n3 This notice requirement applies in any class action filed in federal court or removed to federal court from state court. n4

The court may not give final approval of a proposed settlement until at least 90 days have elapsed since the last date on which the last defendant completed serving notice on the appropriate federal official and the appropriate state officials. n5

[b] Required Contents of Notice

Each defendant's notice must include all the following: n6

- A copy of the complaint, any materials filed with the complaint, and any amended complaints. These materials may be omitted if they are made available through the Internet and the notice gives instruction on how to access them.
- Notice of any scheduled judicial hearing in the class action.
- Any proposed or final notice to class members informing them of any right to opt out or lack of right to opt out, and any proposed or final notice of a class settlement.
- Any proposed or final class settlement.
- Any settlement or other agreement contemporaneously made between class counsel and counsel for the defendants.
- Any final judgment or notice of dismissal.
- If feasible, the names of class members who reside in each state, which need be provided only to the appropriate state official for each respective state.
- Any written judicial opinion relating to the class concerning their opt-out rights or related settlements or relating to any final judgment.

[c] Effects of Failure to Comply

A class member may refuse to comply with and may choose not to be bound by any settlement agreement or consent decree in a class action if the class member establishes that each defendant has not provided the required notice. n7 These rights may be exercised only by class members or any person acting on a class member's behalf. n8

If all defendants have provided the required notice to the appropriate federal official and to either the state attorney general or the person that has primary regulatory, supervisory, or licensing authority over the defendant, a class member or class member's representative may not refuse to comply with or refuse to be bound by a settlement agreement or consent decree. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass Action Fairness ActCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.164[9] et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 109-2, 119 Stat. 4 (2005); see 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d).

(n3)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1712(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 9; 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n5)Footnote 4. Pritchett v. Office Depot, Inc., 404 F.3d 1232, 1233 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1711.

(n7)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1712(a), 1712(b)(1).

(n8)Footnote 3. See In re Mexico Money Transfer Litig., 164 F. Supp. 2d 1002, 1018-1020 (N.D. Ill. 2000) .

(n9)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(e).

(n10)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(e).

(n11)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1713.

(n12)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1714.

(n13)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b).

(n14)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(a)(1)(A).

(n15)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(a)(2).

(n16)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1711(2).

(n17)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(d).

(n18)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(1)-(8).

(n19)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(e)(1).

(n20)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(e)(2).

(n21)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(e)(2).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.98

§ 14A.98 Enforcement of Court Approved Settlement Agreementn*

Although Rule 23(e) requires court approval of any settlement agreement in a class action, n1 the rule does not expressly require or allow the district court to retain jurisdiction over an approved settlement agreement. As with a settlement agreement in any type of action, the district court has no inherent power to enforce settlement agreements entered into by parties litigating before them. n2 Thus, it is only if the district court explicitly retains jurisdiction over the settlement agreement, or incorporates the terms of the agreement in its dismissal order, that a breach of the agreement will constitute a violation of the order, so that the court may exercise its jurisdiction to enforce the agreement. n3 Consequently, in class actions courts often explicitly retain jurisdiction over settlement agreements and incorporate the terms of such agreements in dismissal orders. n4 A court is under no obligation, however, to reserve jurisdiction. Furthermore, a court is not bound by an agreement of the parties that the court should exercise continuing jurisdiction. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.170 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).

(n3)Footnote 2. Arata v. Nu Skin Int'l, Inc., 96 F.3d 1265, 1268-1269 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. Sales Practices Litig., 177 F.R.D. 216, 229 (D.N.J. 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Lessard v. City of Allen Park, 470 F. Supp. 2d 781, 782 (S.D. Mich. 2007) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Arata v. Nu Skin Int'l, Inc., 96 F.3d 1265, 1269 (9th Cir. 1996) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.99

§ 14A.99 Appellate Review of Court Approved Settlement Agreementn*

[1] Standard of Review

The trial court has considerable discretion whether to grant or deny approval to a settlement of the parties in a class action, and courts of appeal give considerable deference to the district court's determinations because the district court has unique exposure to the litigants and the litigation. Consequently, a court of appeals will reverse a district court's approval of a settlement only if an appellant establishes that the district court's decision was an abuse of discretion. n1 This standard means that the appellate court may not substitute its notions of fairness, reasonableness, and adequacy for those of the district judge and the parties to the settlement agreement. n2 An appellate court may find an abuse of discretion if the district court's decision depended on a clearly erroneous finding of fact, an errant conclusion of law, or an improper application of law to fact. A finding of fact is clearly erroneous if the appellate court reviews the entire record and concludes with firm conviction that the district court made a mistake, even though there may be some evidence to support the finding. n3

[2] Persons Entitled to Appeal Approved Settlement

A named class representative has standing to appeal the approval of any class action settlement. The United States Supreme Court has held that an unnamed class member may also appeal a class action settlement, even if the unnamed member has not attempted to formally intervene in the case, provided that the unnamed class member has objected during the fairness hearing on the settlement at the trial level. The Supreme Court thus has rejected the circuit cases that have held that an unnamed class member does not have standing to appeal an order approving a settlement when the named class representatives do not want to pursue an appeal. The Supreme Court reasoned that even though there is a general rule that only parties to a lawsuit may appeal an adverse judgment even when a nonparty has an interest that is affected by the trial court's judgment, unnamed members in a class action are "parties" to the case in the sense that they are bound by a settlement. n1

Because of the nature of class actions, an unnamed plaintiff who is dissatisfied with the class settlement has four alternative avenues of relief: (1) the objector may move to intervene as of right under Rule 24(a)(2); (2) the objector may collaterally attack the settlement by filing a separate suit challenging the adequacy of the class representation; (3) if the class has been certified under Rule 23(b)(3), the individual class member may opt out; n2 and (4) the unnamed class member may also appeal a class action settlement, provided that the unnamed class member objected to the settlement during the fairness hearing. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.169 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. In re Wireless Tel. Fed. Cost Recovery Fees Litig., 396 F.3d 922, 932 (8th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Class Plaintiffs v. City of Seattle, 955 F.2d 1268, 1276 (9th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 953 (1992) .

(n4)Footnote 3. In re General Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 783 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 1. Devlin v. Scardelletti, 536 U.S. 1, 10-12, 122 S. Ct. 2005, 153 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002) .

(n6)Footnote 2. Croyden Assocs. v. Alleco, Inc., 969 F.2d 675, 678 (8th Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 3. Devlin v. Scardelletti, 536 U.S. 1, 10, 122 S. Ct. 2005, 153 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VI. SETTLEMENT, VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL, OR COMPROMISE OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.100through 14A.109

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.100[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VII. DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.110

§ 14A.110 Function of Derivative Actionn*

[1] Nature of Derivative Action

A "derivative action" is an action that is filed by shareholders of a corporation based on a right of action belonging to the corporation itself, but which the corporation is unable or refuses to prosecute in its own right. n1 In other words, a derivative action allows a shareholder to step into the corporation's shoes and to seek in the corporation's right relief the shareholder could not demand in his or her own right; thus, the shareholder brings suit on the cause of action "derived" from the corporation. A derivative action, for example, may be a suit to enforce a corporate cause of action against officers, directors, and third parties. In other words, the term derivative action applies to actions in which the right claimed by the shareholder is one the corporation could itself have enforced in court. n2

Any recovery in a derivative action belongs to the corporation, not the individual shareholders who bring suit. In a derivative action, the allegations of injury to the corporation often involve direct participation by one or more persons in control of the corporation in the alleged act or omission causing the injury to the corporation. n3 Consequently, a derivative action has two important functions: first, it is the equivalent of a suit by the shareholders to compel the corporation to sue; second, it is a suit by the corporation, asserted by the shareholders on behalf of the corporation as an entity, against those liable to the corporation. n4

[2] Comparison With Direct Shareholder Action

The distinction between a derivative action and a direct shareholder action is that in a derivative action the claim for relief belongs to the corporation; in a direct action, the claim for relief belongs to the individual shareholder-claimants, independent of the rights of the corporation. Whether a claim is direct or derivative is determined by whether the injury to the individual claimant is separate and distinct from the injury to other shareholders in a similar situation as the claimant. n1 In diversity cases, state law governs the issue of whether a suit is derivative or direct. n2 Because of the nature of a derivative action, it is usually a more complicated form of action than a direct action and requires compliance with special procedural rules that govern its initiation and continuation. n3

An action is derivative only if the alleged wrong must affect all the shareholders based on their status as the collective owners of the corporation. For example, a derivative action may assert claims of fraud against the corporation by a third party n4 or claims against corporate officers or majority shareholders for mismanagement or waste. n5 In contrast to a derivative action, a direct shareholder action involves an injury against a shareholder individually that is distinct from that of the corporation. Therefore, in a direct action the shareholder plaintiff must demonstrate either that the defendant breached a duty owed directly to the plaintiff or that the plaintiff's injury is separate and distinct from that of other shareholders. n6 For example, a direct action may be brought on a claim for the fraudulent sale of stock to an individual shareholder. n7

[3] Comparison With Class Action

A shareholder derivative action and a class action are very similar in that each is a single action brought by a representative party purporting to represent its own interests and also the interests of a group of others similarly situated. n1 The procedures for the two types of action are also similar, n2 and the provisions for derivative actions were formerly contained in Rule 23, which governs class actions. However, a derivative action differs from a class action in that a derivative action is specifically brought on behalf of a corporation as an entity for a corporate right, in which the shareholders as a class have an interest, while a class action is brought on behalf of the class itself. n3 The specific procedures for the derivative action specified in Rule 23.1 are designed to facilitate the special requirements of the derivative action. n4

In some circumstances, the facts of the alleged injuries may support bringing either a class action or a derivative action. n5 Furthermore, plaintiffs occasionally may be permitted to join both class claims and derivative claims in the same action, in the absence of any conflicts of interest, because there is no per se restriction against shareholders bringing direct and derivative actions together. n6 Even when direct and derivative actions are not combined in a single action, direct class actions and derivative suits arising from the same transaction or course of conduct may be consolidated or coordinated for purposes of joint discovery, pretrial motions, trial of common issues, or settlement. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersActions Against CorporationsDerivative ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.1.02-23.1.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1; Hoffman v. Kramer, 362 F.3d 308, 317 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Daily Income Fund, Inc. v. Fox, 464 U.S. 523, 528-529, 104 S. Ct. 831, 78 L. Ed. 2d 645 (1984) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Ross v. Bernhard, 396 U.S. 531, 538, 90 S. Ct. 733, 24 L. Ed. 2d 729 (1970) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Daily Income Fund, Inc. v. Fox, 464 U.S. 523, 529 n.4, 104 S. Ct. 831, 78 L. Ed. 2d 645 (1984) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Popp Telecom, Inc. v. Am. Sharecom, Inc., 361 F.3d 482, 492 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 2. Bristol Res. 1994 Acquistion Ltd. P'ship v. NI Fuel Co., 333 F.3d 608, 610 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 3. Warden v. McLelland, 288 F.3d 105, 112 (3d Cir. 2002) (noting certain restrictions and defenses applicable only to derivative actions).

(n9)Footnote 4. Bagdon v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 916 F.2d 379, 383 (7th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 500 U.S. 952 (1991) .

(n10)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Popp Telecom, Inc. v. Am. Sharecom, Inc., 361 F.3d 482, 492 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n11)Footnote 6. Popp Telecom, Inc. v. Am. Sharecom, Inc., 361 F.3d 482, 492 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n12)Footnote 7. Simcox v. San Juan Shipyard, Inc., 754 F.2d 430, 438 (1st Cir. 1985) .

(n13)Footnote 1. See In re Amsted Indus. ERISA Litig. v. Amsted Indus., 263 F. Supp. 2d 1126, 1129 (N.D. Ill. 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Powers v. Eichen, 229 F.3d 1249, 1254 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n15)Footnote 3. See Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors for the Bankruptcy Estate of Boston Reg'l Med. Ctr., Inc. v. Ricks, 328 F. Supp. 2d 130, 143-144 (D. Mass. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 4. Powers v. Eichen, 229 F.3d 1249, 1254 (9th Cir. 2000) ; Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 728 n.7 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n17)Footnote 5. In re Amsted Indus. ERISA Litig. v. Amsted Indus., 263 F. Supp. 2d 1126, 1129 (N.D. Ill. 2003) .

(n18)Footnote 6. City P'ship Co. v. Jones Intercable, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 576, 584 (D. Colo. 2002) (noting that action included both class action claims and derivative claims).

(n19)Footnote 7. In re Oracle Securities Litig., 131 F.R.D. 688, 690-691 (N.D. Cal. 1990) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VII. DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.111

§ 14A.111 Federal Rules Govern Procedural Requirements for Derivative Actionsn*

[1] Federal Rule Applicable Only to Procedure

[a] Derivative Action Procedure Requires Compliance with Procedural Rule

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23.1 specifies pleading and other procedural requirements whenever a shareholder files a derivative action in federal court. n1 Rule 23.1 creates a procedural threshold over which one or more shareholders of a corporation, or one or more members of an unincorporated association, must pass before they may litigate the merits of a derivative action. Therefore, a complaint must satisfy the procedural requirements of the rule, and a court will not automatically treat an action as a derivative action. The party asserting a claim which is based on an entity's rights must plead the claim as such. n2

[b] Substantive Right to Derivative Claim Based on State Law

Even though Federal Rule 23.1 controls procedure, n3 the rule does not provide the substantive basis for a derivative action. n4 The right under substantive law to file a derivative action is governed by the state law that controls the particular corporation or entity. Rule 23.1 itself does not create any substantive rights or impose any substantive requirements, such as whether the demand requirement has been satisfied. n5 For example, while Rule 23.1 requires the complaint to plead facts that a demand has been made on the corporation to file suit, state law controls whether the pleaded facts show a sufficient demand to maintain a derivative action. n6

Rule 23.1 was promulgated pursuant to the Rules Enabling Act, which provides that the federal rules do not abridge, enlarge, or modify any substantive right. n7 While derivative suits are often coordinated with suits based on federal substantive law, such as the federal securities laws, unless a federal right creates the existence of the corporation or entity itself, a federal question is not involved. n8 Consequently, most derivative suits in federal court are diversity actions because they are based on the existence of a corporation or other entity under the substantive law of the state of incorporation or organization of the entity. Therefore, state law controls the substance of the derivative rights of the plaintiffs to sue on behalf of the corporation. n9 Under the Erie doctrine, federal courts in diversity cases must apply the substantive law of the forum state. n10

[2] Federal Rule Applicable Only to Actions Based on Derivative Claim

The requirements of Rule 23.1 apply only to derivative actions by shareholders or members of corporations or unincorporated associations, n1 and whether a claim is derivative does not necessarily depend on the characterization of a party. Therefore, if a shareholder brings a personal claim and does not seek to enforce a right of the corporation, the suit is direct and Rule 23.1 does not apply. This is true even if the plaintiff has characterized such a direct action as a derivative action. n2

The rule has not specified which particular types of entities constitute "unincorporated associations" under the rule. The question is determined on a case-by-case basis. For example, partnerships have been considered unincorporated associations within the meaning of Rule 23.1. n3 It is also arguable that a limited liability company is within the purview of Rule 23.1. Because derivative actions involving unincorporated associations are so infrequent, most of the discussion in this Part of the Chapter refers to shareholders and corporations. However, counsel should remember all discussions in this Part that refer to corporations and shareholders are equally applicable to unincorporated associations and members, respectively. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersActions Against CorporationsDerivative ActionsProceduresCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.1.03-23.1.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1.

(n3)Footnote 2. Int'l Ass'n of Fire Fighters, Local 2665 v. City of Clayton, 320 F.3d 849, 851 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See [a], above.

(n5)Footnote 4. First Hartford Corp. Pension Plan & Trust v. United States, 194 F.3d 1279, 1289 n.2 (Fed. Cir. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Dreiling v. Am. Express Travel Related Servs. Co., 351 F. Supp. 2d 1077, 1085 (W.D. Wash. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 6. *Halpert Enters. v. Harrison, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4929, at *7-9 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 7. First Hartford Corporation Pension Plan & Trust v. United States, 194 F.3d 1279, 1290 n.2 (Fed. Cir. 1999) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 2072(b); Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n9)Footnote 8. *Central Laborers' Pension Fund v. Chellgren, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6066, at *36-38 (E.D. Ky. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Zurich Capital Mkts., Inc. v. Coglianese, 332 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1115 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 79-80, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1.

(n13)Footnote 2. Simcox v. San Juan Shipyard, Inc., 754 F.2d 430, 438 (1st Cir. 1985) (designation of suit as derivative action did not alter direct nature of claims).

(n14)Footnote 3. Abeloff v. Barth, 119 F.R.D. 332, 333 (D. Mass. 1988) .

(n15)Footnote 4. See Gen. Tech. Applications, Inc. v. Exro Ltda, 388 F.3d 114, 120 (4th Cir. 2004) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b) (partnership or other unincorporated association).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VII. DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.112

§ 14A.112 Prerequisites for Derivative Actionsn*

[1] Stock Ownership Requirement

[a] Plaintiff Must Be Shareholder Throughout Litigation

The complaint in a derivative action must allege that the plaintiff was a shareholder at the time of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains or that the plaintiff acquired the shareholder interest by operation of law. n1 This contemporaneous ownership rule is based on the equitable principle that a plaintiff may not complain of acts of corporate mismanagement if the plaintiff acquired shares from those who participated or acquiesced in the allegedly wrongful transaction. Under the "continuous ownership requirement," the plaintiff must be a shareholder during the entire period of the maintenance of the derivative suit, n2 in addition to the time of the alleged wrong, because standing to bring a derivative action is justified by the indirect benefits the named plaintiff acquires as a shareholder of the corporation. n3

A person who wants to object to a proposed settlement of a derivative action must also be a current shareholder in order to have standing to object and appeal if his or her objection is overruled. n4 Courts have held that for purposes of the derivative action rule that the term "shareholder" refers to owners of equity securities in a corporation and not owners of debt securities. It appears that this determination must be made on a case-by-case basis. n5 For example, warrant holders in a corporation may have standing to sue as shareholders if the terms of the particular warrants render their interests very similar to traditional equity securities. n6

[b] Exception for Continuing Wrong

The "continuing wrong" doctrine is an exception to the general requirement that requires contemporaneous ownership by shareholders to maintain a derivative action. Under the continuing wrong doctrine, a shareholder may initiate a derivative action concerning an occurrence or omission which occurred prior to becoming a shareholder if the occurrence or omission was part of a course of conduct that continued during the time that the plaintiff was a shareholder. n7 In deciding whether a wrong is continuing, a court must determine when the specific acts of alleged wrongdoing occurred, rather than when the effects of those acts were perceived, because every wrongful transaction is a continuing wrong to the corporation until it is remedied. Thus, the shareholder ownership requirement is met if the "transaction" that is the subject of the complaint n8 continues to occur during the period of share ownership. n9

A shareholder who purchases shares with knowledge of an alleged wrong may not bring a derivative action even if the wrong continues after the purchase. n10 In such a situation, the plaintiff paid for the shares with knowledge of the corporation's injury and, therefore, is not entitled to recover. n11

[c] Substantive Law Generally Controls Ownership

The determination of whether a person has ownership of shares sufficient to bring a derivative suit is a matter of substantive law. Thus, in cases based on diversity jurisdiction, whether a person is a shareholder entitled to bring a derivative action is determined by substantive state law. n12 If the claims in the action are based on federal law and federal law creates the existence of the business entity, then federal law generally governs the substantive question of who is a shareholder; however, the Supreme Court has noted that if there is a gap in the federal securities laws controlling ownership, than federal courts should adopt the state law as the rule of decision, unless that would conflict with a specific federal policy. n13 On the other hand, attorneys should note that Rule 23.1's requirement that the plaintiff have continuous share ownership from the time of the injury through the maintenance of the suit is a procedural requirement and, therefore, applicable even in diversity actions when the state law has no such requirement. n14

[d] Double Derivative Suits

Because a parent corporation may own shares of a subsidiary, it has been held by most jurisdictions that a shareholder of the parent may bring a derivative suit on behalf of a wronged subsidiary; this type of suit is known as a double derivative action. n15 In a double derivative suit, the shareholder maintains the derivative action on behalf of the subsidiary through the parent corporation's derivative rights in the subsidiary. The shareholder in a double derivative suit is seeking to redress a wrong done to the subsidiary that indirectly harms both the parent corporation and the shareholder. n16 The double derivative rule does not extend to all types of ownership interests in a corporation. For example, the rule does not generally apply to owners of debt securities in the parent corporation. This determination is made on a case-by-case basis. n17

[e] Effect of Corporate Acquisition or Merger

When one corporation is merged into another corporation or acquired by another corporation, one of the corporations ceases to exist. In such a case, the former shareholders of the corporation that ceased to exist generally lose their right to pursue derivative actions of that corporation, even with respect to actions that were initiated prior to the merger. n18 At the time of the merger, the derivative rights pass to the surviving corporation, which thereafter has the right to prosecute any action that was owned by the acquired or merged corporation.

Additionally, if the shareholders receive a negotiated value for their shares, that value takes into account outstanding liabilities and contingencies, including the value of the derivative suit. Allowing the former shareholders of a merged corporation to recover in a subsequent derivative action would represent a windfall to the former shareholders. n19 There are two circumstances in which the general rule that a plaintiff loses standing as a result of an acquisition or merger does not apply: first, if the merger itself is the subject of the derivative action, for example, on a claim of fraud, n20 and second, if the merger is in reality a reorganization which does not affect the plaintiff's equity ownership in the business enterprise. n21

[2] Demand on Corporation to Enforce Corporate Right

[a] Requirement of Demand

The plaintiff in a derivative action must allege with particularity any efforts made by the plaintiff to demand action by the board of directors of the corporation or the members controlling the business n0.1 and the reasons for the failure to obtain the demanded corporate action or the reasons for not making such a demand. n1 In other words, before maintaining a derivative action, the plaintiff must either make a demand on the corporation or controlling members or must plead and establish that making a demand would be futile. n2 Note that the plaintiff may not both make a demand and claim that a demand was futile with respect to the same cause of action. n3

Whether a demand is required or excused and what constitutes a sufficient demand are substantive issues that generally must be determined by the law of incorporation or organization of the entity. n4 The pleading requirement is controlled by federal law, which strictly requires that the plaintiff particularly specify the demand made or why demand would be futile. n5 The purpose of the demand requirement is to acknowledge that the board of directors or other management of the company, and not individual shareholders, manage the affairs of the corporation. The demand requirement permits the board to correct the alleged wrong, encourages corporate dispute resolution within the corporation itself, and allows the board to use its expertise and resources to control litigation. n6

[b] Exceptions to Demand Requirement

The primary exception to the demand requirement is that a demand is unnecessary if it would be futile. n7 The determination of whether a demand is futile depends on the facts of a particular case and the applicable substantive law, which in a diversity case is the law of the state of incorporation or organization of the entity. n8 For example, if the plaintiff makes particularized allegations of self-dealing or bias on the part of the board of directors, a demand will be considered futile. n9 A district court's determination of futility is reviewed under the abuse of discretion standard. n10

In addition to the futility exception, some jurisdictions recognize other exceptions to the demand requirement. Thus, demand may be excused if there is threat of irreparable harm to the corporation. n11 Demand may also be excused after a showing of "extraordinary conditions." n12 For example, a demand is not necessary if the board of directors specifically evidences antagonism to the derivative action. n13 In another example, a demand is excused if the board of directors is controlled by one or more people or entities that have an interest in the challenged transaction. n14 On the other hand, a general allegation that the directors approved the challenged transaction does not excuse a demand. n15

[c] Contents of Demand

The demand made by a shareholder on the corporate managers must describe the factual basis of the asserted wrongful acts, the damage caused to the corporation, identify the asserted wrongdoers, n16 and request corporate action to remedy the wrong. n17 The demand must also identify the name of the shareholder making the demand and requesting the corporate action. n18 On the other hand, the demand need not specify the shareholder's legal theory, all of the facts supporting any theory that is advanced, or the exact amount of damages caused by the asserted wrong. n19

[d] Persons Who Must Receive Demand

The plaintiff in a derivative action must allege that the demand was made on an authority comparable to a board of directors. n20 This requirement reflects that, under the applicable substantive law, plaintiffs in certain situations need not or cannot make a demand on a board of directors, such as when the demand is made to a partnership or an unincorporated association. In such circumstances, Rule 23.1 permits a plaintiff to make a valid demand on an authority comparable to a board of directors of a corporation. n21 Any person or entity of a business entity that has the full legal authority to manage the entity's affairs meets the comparable authority status. n22 Thus, the term "comparable authority" would not include a single influential director or a controlling shareholder because that individual is not vested with the full legal authority of the board to act. n23

The demand rule also requires allegations of any demand made on the shareholders of a corporation or other members of an association or partnership, when necessary. n24 Whether demand on the shareholders is necessary in a particular case is a question of substantive law. Thus, the law of the state of incorporation or organization of the entity governs the question of whether a demand on shareholders is absolutely required. n25

[e] Timing of Demand

The shareholder derivative action originated as an equitable device. The courts consider such an action as a remedy of last resort and acknowledge that a corporation or other entity must be given every opportunity to bring suit on its own behalf. n26 Consequently, demand must be made on the board in control at the time the derivative action is filed. Even when demand is excused because of the probability of irreparable harm to the corporation, a demand must be made promptly after the commencement of the shareholder derivative action. n27 Additionally, whether a demand would be futile is determined as of the time the complaint is filed, not at the time of the transaction at issue or at any time after the filing of the complaint. n28

[f] Opportunity for Management to Respond

If a shareholder makes a demand that the corporation take action, the shareholder must give the board of directors or comparable authorities a reasonable period of time to investigate the alleged wrong and take remedial action. n29 If the plaintiff fails to give the board a reasonable amount of time to respond to the demand, and instead files suit, the plaintiff's actions are equivalent to a failure to make the demand, which may lead to dismissal of the derivative action when the court determines that a demand is required. n30 What constitutes a reasonable period for a response varies according to the complexity of the legal and factual issues raised by the demand. n31

[g] Refusal to Comply With Demand May Be Justified by Business Judgment

If the directors or comparable authorities of a business entity refuse to comply with a demand to pursue a claim on behalf of the entity, the shareholders may maintain a derivative action only when the shareholders can demonstrate that the board's refusal was not an exercise of proper business judgment. n32 The "business judgment rule" bars judicial inquiry into the actions of corporate directors that are made in good faith and in the honest exercise of business judgment. The precise content of the business judgment rule is provided by state law but, in general terms, provides that the courts refrain from second guessing business decisions made by corporate directors. n33

With respect to derivative actions, there is a presumption that a refusal of a demand represents a valid exercise of the business judgment of the board or other managing authority. Therefore, to maintain a derivative action, the plaintiff must demonstrate that the board's rejection of the demand was not the exercise of business judgment. For example, the plaintiff may demonstrate that the board acted in bad faith or fraudulently, or failed to make an informed decision as a result of gross negligence. n34 When the plaintiff makes a demand and files a derivative action, Rule 23.1 requires that the complaint state with particularity facts that create a reasonable doubt that the board's decision not to pursue the claim was protected by the business judgment rule. n35

[3] Adequacy of Representation

[a] Necessity of Adequate Representation

A plaintiff may prosecute a derivative action only if the plaintiff fairly and adequately represents the interests of similarly situated shareholders in enforcing a right of the corporation or business entity. n1 This rule is required by due process under the constitution; thus, absent shareholders may not be bound by a judgment in a derivative action unless the named plaintiff is a fair and adequate representative. n2 The representative shareholder in a derivative action must protect interests that are more comprehensive than his or her own stake in the corporation, n3 and therefore, the representative stands in a fiduciary relationship with the corporation and the other shareholders. n4

Although the adequacy requirement for a derivative action is similar to the requirement for a class action, the burden of proving the plaintiff's inadequacy in a derivative suit is on the defendant, while in a class action the plaintiff has the burden of demonstrating that the plaintiff is an adequate representative. n5 Furthermore, unlike the class action procedure of Rule 23, the district court in a derivative action under Rule 23.1 need not make a preliminary affirmative determination that the plaintiffs will fairly and adequately represent the interest of people similarly situated. n6 The district court's determination of adequacy of representation is reviewed for an abuse of discretion. n7

[b] Determination of Adequacy of Representation

A plaintiff qualifies as a fair and adequate representative only if the plaintiff has the capacity to vigorously and conscientiously prosecute the derivative suit and does not have interests that are antagonistic to those of the other shareholders who are similarly situated. n8 In addition, the plaintiff's attorney must be qualified, experienced, and generally capable to conduct the proposed litigation. n9 These general principles are applied to the facts and circumstances of each particular case. The following are numerous factors courts have considered to determine adequacy of representation, not in any particular order of importance: n10

- Indications whether the plaintiff is the true party in interest.
- The plaintiff's degree of familiarity with the litigation.
- The degree of control exercised by attorneys over the litigation.
- The degree of support received from other shareholders.
- Any lack of personal commitment to the action by the plaintiff.
- The remedy sought.
- The relative magnitude of plaintiff's personal interest as compared with the interest in the derivative action itself.
- Any vindictiveness of the plaintiff toward the defendants.
- The motivation of the plaintiff.
- Any economic conflicts between the representative and the class.
- Any other litigation pending between the plaintiff and the defendants.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsAdequate Representation RequirementCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsDemand FutilityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsDemand RequirementCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsDouble Derivative ActionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsOwnership Requirement

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.1.07-23.1.09 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(a), 23.1(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. In re Sagent Tech., 278 F. Supp. 2d 1079, 1096 (N.D. Cal. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. *In re OmniVision Techs., Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22215, at *14-16 (N.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Rosenbaum v. MacAllister, 64 F.3d 1439, 1443 n.2 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Brooks v. Weiser, 57 F.R.D. 491, 494 (S.D.N.Y. 1972) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Entel v. Guilden, 223 F. Supp. 129, 132 (S.D.N.Y. 1963) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Kaliski v. Bacot, 320 F.3d 291, 298 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 9. See Brambles USA, Inc. v. Blocker, 731 F. Supp. 643, 649 (D. Del. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 10. In re Bank of N.Y. Derivative Litig., 173 F. Supp. 2d 193, 198 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Noland v. Barton, 741 F.2d 315, 318 (10th Cir. 1984) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergenics Corporation v. Chinery, 330 F.3d 548, 556 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Kamen v. Kemper Fin. Servs., Inc., 500 U.S. 90, 108, 111 S. Ct. 1711, 114 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1991) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Kona Enterprises, Inc. v. Estate of Bishop, 179 F.3d 767, 769-770 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n16)Footnote 15. See Ace & Co. v. Balfour Beatty PLC, 148 F. Supp. 2d 418, 424-425 (D. Del. 2001) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Silver v. Allard, 16 F. Supp. 2d 966, 967 (N.D. Ill. 1998) .

(n18)Footnote 17. Brooks v. Weiser, 57 F.R.D. 491, 494 (S.D.N.Y. 1972) .

(n19)Footnote 18. APA Excelsior III, L.P. v. Windley, 329 F. Supp. 2d 1328, 1347 (N.D. Ga. 2004) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Lewis v. Chiles, 719 F.2d 1044, 1047 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Spielman v. Genzyme Corp., 251 F.3d 1, 9 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Blasband v. Rales, 971 F.2d 1034, 1041 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n23)Footnote 0.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(3)(A); see Forsythe v. Sun Life Fin., Inc., 417 F. Supp. 2d 100, 109 (D. Mass. 2006) (owners failed to either make demand required by Rule 23.1 or to adequately allege futility of such demand).

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(3)(B).

(n25)Footnote 2. In re Abbott Labs. Derivative S'Holders Litig., 325 F.3d 795, 804 (7th Cir. 2003) ; see [b], below.

(n26)Footnote 3. Stepak v. Addison, 20 F.3d 398, 412 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n27)Footnote 4. Kamen v. Kemper Fin. Servs., Inc., 500 U.S. 90, 92, 111 S. Ct. 1711, 114 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1991) .

(n28)Footnote 5. Zurich Capital Mkts., Inc. v. Coglianese, 332 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1115 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n29)Footnote 6. Hoffman v. Kramer, 362 F.3d 308, 317 (5th Cir. 2004) (business judgment rule provides that directors have discretion and judgment to pursue the best interests of the corporation and that they are presumed uniquely situated to make these decisions).

(n30)Footnote 7. *Felker v. Anderson, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4236, at *3-5 (W.D. Mo. 2005) .

(n31)Footnote 8. In re Abbott Labs. Derivative S'Holders Litig., 325 F.3d 795, 804 (7th Cir. 2003) ; Zurich Capital Mkts., Inc. v. Coglianese, 332 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1115 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n32)Footnote 9. RCM Sec. Fund, Inc. v. Stanton, 928 F.2d 1318, 1335 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n33)Footnote 10. See Janas v. McCracken, 183 F.3d 970, 989 (3d Cir. 1999) .

(n34)Footnote 11. Warden v. McLelland, 288 F.3d 105, 111 (3d Cir. 2002) .

(n35)Footnote 12. Kamen v. Kemper Fin. Servs., Inc., 500 U.S. 90, 92, 111 S. Ct. 1711, 114 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1991) .

(n36)Footnote 13. Nussbacher v. Continental Ill. Natl. Bank & Trust Co., 518 F.2d 873, 878-879 (7th Cir. 1975) , cert. denied, 424 U.S. 928 (1976) .

(n37)Footnote 14. Shamrock Assocs. v. Horizon Corp., 632 F. Supp. 566, 570 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n38)Footnote 15. Grossman v. Johnson, 674 F.2d 115, 125-126 (1st Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 838 (1982) .

(n39)Footnote 16. Allright Missouri, Inc. v. Billeter, 829 F.2d 631, 638-639 (8th Cir. 1987) .

(n40)Footnote 17. Scalisi v. Fund Asset Mgmt., L.P., 380 F.3d 133, 138 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n41)Footnote 18. Smachlo v. Birkelo, 576 F. Supp. 1439, 1444-1445 (D. Del. 1983) .

(n42)Footnote 19. General Motors Corp. v. General Motors Corp., 604 F. Supp. 1106, 1117 (D. Del. 1985) , aff'd on other grounds, 782 F.2d 1026 (3d Cir. 1985) .

(n43)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(3)(A).

(n44)Footnote 21. See Saunders v. Hankerson, 312 F. Supp. 2d 46, 67-68 (D.D.C. 2004) (board of trustees of unincorporated association).

(n45)Footnote 22. Kaster v. Modification Sys., Inc., 731 F.2d 1014, 1017 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n46)Footnote 23. Greenspun v. Del E. Webb Corp., 634 F.2d 1204, 1209 (9th Cir. 1980) .

(n47)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(3)(A).

(n48)Footnote 25. Scalisi v. Fund Asset Mgmt., L.P., 380 F.3d 133, 138 (2d Cir. 2004) ; Zurich Capital Mkts., Inc. v. Coglianese, 332 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1115 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n49)Footnote 26. See Hoffman v. Kramer, 362 F.3d 308, 317 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n50)Footnote 27. Warden v. McLelland, 288 F.3d 105, 111-112 (3d Cir. 2002) .

(n51)Footnote 28. Salsitz v. Nasser, 208 F.R.D. 589, 591-592 (E.D. Mich. 2002) ; see McCall v. Scott, 239 F.3d 808, 815 (6th Cir. 2001) .

(n52)Footnote 29. Scalisi v. Fund Asset Mgmt., L.P., 380 F.3d 133, 139 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n53)Footnote 30. Shaev v. Saper, 320 F.3d 373, 377-378 (3d Cir. 2003) .

(n54)Footnote 31. *Silverstein v. Larson, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2881, at *7-8 (D. Minn. 2005) .

(n55)Footnote 32. See Hoffman v. Kramer, 362 F.3d 308, 317 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n56)Footnote 33. See Hoffman v. Kramer, 362 F.3d 308, 317 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n57)Footnote 34. In re Abbott Labs. Derivative S'Holders Litig., 325 F.3d 795, 808 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n58)Footnote 35. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(a), 23.1(b)(3); Landy v. D'Alessandro, 316 F. Supp. 2d 49, 58-59 (D. Mass. 2004) ; see, e.g., Halpert Enters. v. Harrison, 362 F. Supp. 2d 426, 431 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (plaintiff may show by pleading of particularized facts that business judgment did not exist when majority of board has financial interest in transaction or are so dominated by proponent of transaction that their business discretion is sterilized).

(n59)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(a).

(n60)Footnote 2. See Nathan v. Rowan, 651 F.2d 1223, 1228 (6th Cir. 1981) .

(n61)Footnote 3. See State St. Bank & Trust Co. v. Salovaara, 326 F.3d 130, 140 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n62)Footnote 4. Smith v. Ayres, 977 F.2d 946, 949 (5th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 508 U.S. 910 (1993) .

(n63)Footnote 5. Daventree Ltd. v. Republic of Azer., 349 F. Supp. 2d 736, 753 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n64)Footnote 6. Powers v. Eichen, 229 F.3d 1249, 1254 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n65)Footnote 7. Saunders v. Hankerson, 312 F. Supp. 2d 46, 69 (D.D.C. 2004) .

(n66)Footnote 8. Saunders v. Hankerson, 312 F. Supp. 2d 46, 69 (D.D.C. 2004) ; see Ohio-Sealy Mattress Mfg. Co. v. Kaplan, 90 F.R.D. 21, 25 (N.D. Ill. 1980) ("similarly situated" shareholders do not include majority shareholders opposed to derivative action).

(n67)Footnote 9. Guenther v. Pacific Telecom, Inc., 123 F.R.D. 341, 346 (D. Ore. 1987) .

(n68)Footnote 10. Efron v. Embassy Suites (P.R.), Inc., 47 F. Supp. 2d 200, 209 (D.P.R. 1999) , aff'd on other grounds, 223 F.3d 12 (1st Cir. 2000) ; see Larson v. Dumke, 900 F.2d 1363, 1368 (9th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1012 (1990) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VII. DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.113

§ 14A.113 Pleading Requirements for Complaint in Derivative Actionn*

[1] Rule Does Not Have Substantive Requirements

Rule 23.1 imposes only pleading requirements which specify when and how facts must be alleged in the complaint in federal court, rather than substantive requirements needed for a plaintiff to prevail in a derivative suit. n1 Substantive requirements are controlled by the law of the state of the entity's incorporation or organization. n2 There is an important consequence to the procedural nature of the rule as a pleading requirement: the inquiry as to whether the requirements of the rule are satisfied does not go beyond the complaint. n3 For example, a plaintiff is generally not permitted to argue facts outside of the complaint in order to show futility of a demand. However, the court may consider documents outside of the complaint if the complaint specifically incorporates the documents by reference. n4

[2] Allegations Required in Complaint

The derivative action pleading rule requires that the plaintiff plead with particularity. Consequently, Rule 23.1 requires substantially more than the ordinary, minimal requirements of "notice pleading" under Rule 8, and "liberal pleading requirements" do not apply. The plaintiff must make particularized factual statements. n1 To satisfy Rule 23.1, the plaintiff must make specific factual allegations for each of the following items that is applicable to the circumstances of the case. n2

1. The plaintiff was a shareholder at the time of the transaction that is the subject of the plaintiff's complaint or that operation of law gave the plaintiff the status of shareholder. n3

2. The particular efforts made by the plaintiff to demand that the board of directors or comparable authority pursue the claim of the corporation and the reasons for the failure to obtain such pursuit of the claim or the reasons for not making such a demand. n4 If a complaint fails to allege the demand with particularity, the action may be dismissed. However, because Rule 23.1 imposes only a pleading requirement a court should generally grant a plaintiff's motion for leave to amend to cure the pleading defect. n5

3. The particular facts supporting the claim of futility of demand if a plaintiff shareholder claims that a demand to bring suit was not made on the board of directors because to do so would have been futile. n6 Thus, the complaint must particularly allege facts sufficient to create a reasonable doubt that the challenged transaction was the product of a valid exercise of sound business judgment. For example, the plaintiff must state with particularity any allegations of participation, self-dealing, bias, bad faith, or corrupt motive on the part of the board. n7

4. That the suit is not a collusive act between the parties to confer federal jurisdiction. n8 This requirement is viewed as a formality based on a perceived abuse that corporations would manipulate parties in order to bring a dispute based on state law into federal court. The Supreme Court has counteracted this perceived abuse by requiring that the pleadings in derivative actions allege that the suit is not a collusive one to confer federal jurisdiction. This follows a longstanding principle that diversity jurisdiction does not exist if parties were collusively joined. n9

[3] Verification of Complaint

The plaintiff in a derivative action must verify the complaint. n1 The verification requirement was designed to discourage "strike suits," in which complaints are filed in order to coerce corporate managers to make a large settlement, rather than benefitting the corporation or entity on behalf of which suit is theoretically brought. n2 This requirement is generally considered a technicality, even though the failure to verify a complaint is a ground for dismissal. The court has discretion to grant the plaintiff leave to file an amended complaint that contains a verification. n3 The plaintiff need not have direct knowledge of the facts on which the complaint is based to verify the complaint. For example, a plaintiff shareholder may verify a complaint by relying on factual statements of the case by others. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersActions Against CorporationsDerivative ActionsGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersActions Against CorporationsDerivative ActionsProceduresCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.1.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. *Amalgamated Bank v. Yost, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1280, at *25-26 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Zurich Capital Mkts., Inc. v. Coglianese, 332 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1115 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Symbol Techs. Sec. Litig., 762 F. Supp. 510, 515 (E.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See In re Cendant Corp. Derivative Action Litig., 96 F. Supp. 2d 394, 397-398 (D.N.J. 2000) ; Stoner v. Walsh, 772 F. Supp. 790, 797-798 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (plaintiff incorporated demand letters into complaint by reference).

(n6)Footnote 1. Grogan v. O'Neil, 307 F. Supp. 2d 1181, 1190 (D. Kan. 2004) (Rule 23.1 has heightened pleading standard).

(n7)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b).

(n8)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(1).

(n9)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(3)(A)-(B).

(n10)Footnote 5. *Halpert Enters. v. Harrison, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4929, at *7-9 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(3)(B).

(n12)Footnote 7. In re Abbott Labs. Derivative S'Holders Litig., 325 F.3d 795, 808 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n13)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(2).

(n14)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Kramer v. Caribbean Mills, Inc., 394 U.S. 823, 827-829, 89 S. Ct. 1487, 23 L. Ed. 2d 9 (1969) .

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b).

(n16)Footnote 2. Efron v. Embassy Suites (Puerto Rico), Inc., 47 F. Supp. 2d 200, 204 (D.P.R. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 3. Halsted Video, Inc. v. Guttillo, 115 F.R.D. 177, 180 (N.D. Ill. 1987) .

(n18)Footnote 4. Surowitz v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 383 U.S. 363, 370-371, 86 S. Ct. 845, 15 L. Ed. 2d 807 (1966) (verification requirement did not bar plaintiff shareholder who lacked education and expertise of legal and business relationships that formed basis for complaint from initiating derivative suit).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VII. DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.114

§ 14A.114 Procedural Considerationsn*

[1] Diversity Jurisdiction

[a] Amount in Controversy

Unless federal law controls the existence of the entity that holds the derivative claim, a derivative action in federal court must be based on diversity jurisdiction. n1 To obtain federal court jurisdiction based on diversity of the parties, the plaintiff must establish that the claims in the derivative action complaint satisfy the $75,000 amount in controversy requirement applicable in diversity actions. n2 To determine whether the suit meets the amount in controversy requirement, the court calculates the amount of the entire claim alleged due to injury to the corporation itself, rather than merely its individual shareholders. Because the shareholders in a derivative suit may pursue a claim only on behalf of the corporation, the jurisdictional amount is not limited to each individual shareholder's claim or interest in the action. However, if an action does not qualify under the rule as derivative, the individual amounts must exceed $75,000. n3

[b] Diversity of Citizenship

In addition to a claim for a minimum amount, n4 diversity jurisdiction for a derivative suit, as well as other suits, requires complete diversity between all claiming parties (plaintiffs) and all parties defending the claims (defendants). n5 Thus, diversity jurisdiction exists only when no plaintiff is a citizen of the same state as any defendant. In diversity actions, a corporate party or other entity is generally deemed to be a "citizen" of any state in which it has been incorporated or organized and of the state where its principal place of business is located. n6 In a derivative suit, the issue of diversity of citizenship may become more complex than in the usual situation because of the alignment of the corporation or association on the plaintiff side or the defense side. n7 For example, if the corporation is aligned as a plaintiff and citizenship of the corporation is the same as one or more defendant directors, then the alignment of the corporation as a plaintiff would destroy diversity jurisdiction. n8

The corporation may be named, with justification, as either a plaintiff or defendant. The corporation may be named as a defendant in order to ensure its presence as a party to the suit. Also, the corporation may be considered a defendant when it is opposed to the maintenance of the derivative action by the plaintiffs. On the other hand, because a derivative suit is prosecuted on behalf of the corporation and any recovery will accrue to it, the corporation may be deemed a plaintiff. Courts are not bound either by formalistic styling or by the alignment specified in the pleadings and should attempt to determine, to the extent practicable, the actual interests of the parties. Only after the parties have been realigned to match their actual interests can a decision be made as to whether complete diversity exists. The Supreme Court has held that when adverse to the plaintiff's derivative suit, the corporation should be aligned as a party defendant. A corporation is deemed adverse to a derivative suit when, regardless of the reason, the corporation's management opposes the maintenance of the action. n9

[2] Venue

A special venue statute applies to shareholder derivative actions, providing that any civil action by a shareholder on behalf of a corporation may be prosecuted in any judicial district where the corporation might have sued the same defendants. n1 The special venue statute was designed to supplement, rather than displace, the general venue statute in actions involving derivative claims. Consequently, the plaintiff in a derivative action may alternatively obtain venue under the general federal venue statute. n2 For example, venue would be proper in the district where the plaintiff resides and where plaintiffs and defendants transacted the business that was the subject matter of the suit. n3 If the corporation is deemed aligned as a defendant, venue is proper where the corporate defendant resides, which is in any judicial district in which it is subject to personal jurisdiction at the time the action is commenced. n4

[3] Service of Process

When shareholders or members file a derivative suit on behalf of a corporation or other business entity, the plaintiff may serve process on the corporation in any district where it is organized or licensed to do business or is doing business. n1 In essence, Section 1695 authorizes service of process on the beneficiary corporation outside of the district where the shareholders have brought the derivative action. n2 Although the language of section 1695 is broad enough to apply to all derivative suits, there is some authority for the proposition that it is only available if the plaintiff has chosen proper venue. n3 Otherwise, the court may require that service of process be made at a specific time and place. n4

[4] Attorney's Representation of Corporation

In a derivative action against corporate officers or association management, an attorney may in certain circumstances represent both the corporation and its officers provided that the representation does not create a conflict of interest. n1 Thus, an attorney for a corporation may defend a derivative suit that presents a routine legal controversy regarding the management of the corporation without creating a conflict of interest. n2 However, if the derivative action involves serious charges of corporate wrongdoing against management, the corporation and its directors must retain separate counsel. For example, actions that involve allegations of criminal wrongdoing, fraud, or a breach of the duty of loyalty typically require independent counsel. n3

[5] Privilege and Work Product

A shareholder derivative action creates unique issues with respect to discovery, especially matters of attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine, because of the competing and overlapping interests among the parties. Thus, as a shareholder the plaintiff may be entitled to access to corporate communications and may request communications between the corporation's management and its attorney. n1 However, unrestricted access to corporate communications conflicts with the goal of the attorney-client privilege to promote open communication between the corporate client and the attorney and the interest in protecting work product necessary to further litigation. Courts have developed a balancing test between these competing interests. Under the test, the shareholder plaintiff is entitled to obtain privileged or work product materials only on a showing of good cause. n2

The following are examples of the factors that the court may use to determine good cause: the number of plaintiff shareholders and the percentage of stock they represent; the nature of the shareholders' claims and whether they are clearly bona fide; the necessity of the shareholders having the information, and its availability from other sources; whether the claims are for a wrong that is criminal, illegal, or of doubtful legality; whether the existence of the communication is speculative; whether the communications relate to past or to prospective actions; whether the communications contain advice concerning the litigation itself; whether the shareholders are merely fishing; and the risk of revealing trade secrets or other confidential information or intellectual property. None of the factors is determinative. n3

[6] Right to Jury Trial

When legal and equitable claims are joined in the same action, either party has a right to a jury trial on the legal claims. Therefore, the right to a jury trial in a derivative action is determined as if the corporation itself had brought suit. n1 Because shareholders may obtain both legal and equitable remedies in a derivative action, the Seventh Amendment preserves to parties the same right to a jury trial that historically belonged to corporations for legal claims but not for purely equitable claims. n2

[7] Costs and Attorney's Fees

[a] Prevailing Party in Derivative Action Entitled to Costs and Attorney's Fees

Courts have developed the rule that because of the unique role of derivative suits in corporate management, the prevailing party in a derivative action may recover costs and attorney's fees. Thus, either the prevailing plaintiff shareholder or a prevailing corporation may recover its expenses and fees. n1 This rule is in contrast to the general American rule that each party bears its own costs and fees. n2 A prevailing plaintiff is entitled to fees because a meritorious derivative action benefits not only the plaintiff shareholder but also the corporation and the other shareholders. n3 The prevailing corporation may recover costs and fees because the corporation should not have to bear the burden of its own costs when it prevails. n4 This rule also assists in deterring "strike suits," in which complaints are filed by disgruntled shareholders in order to coerce corporate managers to make a large settlement, rather than to benefit the corporation. n5

[b] Determination of Amount of Attorney's Fees

A party may request attorney's fees by pleading or by motion under Rule 54. n6 The party requesting attorney's fees must generally present evidence establishing the legal services time expended on the litigation and the rates claimed. Thus, the plaintiff must show the attorney time and expenses spent on claims that represent the degree of success achieved by the prevailing party's attorney on benefits afforded to the corporation. n7 The opposition party may then make objections.

In making a determination whether to award fees, the court may conduct a hearing and take evidence regarding the legal services rendered. n8 In determining the amount of the fee, the court may consider the following factors: the amount recovered for the corporation; the time the attorneys reasonably spent on the case; the compensation rate of comparably skilled and experienced attorneys; the complexity of issues involved and the skill required for the prosecution of the case; any complexities in uncovering relevant facts; the skill and competency of opposing counsel; n9 any nonmonetary benefits derived from the action; and any contingent fee arrangements between the attorney and the party. n10 Any cost or fee award is an appealable final decision. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersActions Against CorporationsDerivative ActionsProceduresCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.1.12 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. *Central Laborers' Pension Fund v. Chellgren, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6066, at *36-38 (E.D. Ky. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332; see also Geer v. Cox, 216 F.R.D. 677, 678-679 (D. Kan. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. *Potter v. Janus Inv. Fund, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9181, at *9-10 (S.D. Ill 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See [a], above.

(n6)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c); see Gabriel v. Preble, 396 F.3d 10, 14 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Gabriel v. Preble, 396 F.3d 10, 14 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Trabucco v. Carlile, 57 F. Supp. 2d 1074, 1076 (D. Ore. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Gabriel v. Preble, 396 F.3d 10, 14-15 (1st Cir. 2005) (corporation should be aligned as a defendant if corporate management is antagonistic to plaintiff shareholder).

(n11)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1401; see Van Gelder v Taylor, 621 F. Supp. 613, 621 (N.D. Ill. 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 2. Salovaara v. Jackson National Life Ins. Co., 66 F. Supp. 2d 593, 604 (D.N.J. 1999) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n13)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391; Rubinstein v. Skyteller, Inc., 48 F. Supp. 2d 315, 324-325 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n14)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(c).

(n15)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1695.

(n16)Footnote 2. *Messinger v. United Canso Oil & Gas Ltd., 1979 U.S. Dist. Lexis 13772, at *13-14 (D. Conn. 1979) .

(n17)Footnote 3. Norte & Co. v. Huffines, 222 F. Supp. 90, 91-92 (S.D.N.Y. 1962) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see 28 U.S.C. § 1401.

(n18)Footnote 4. Trabucco v. Carlile, 57 F. Supp. 2d 1074, 1077 (D. Ore. 1999) .

(n19)Footnote 1. *Heim v. Signcraft Screenprint, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25890, at 6 (N.D. Ill. 2001) .

(n20)Footnote 2. See Musheno v. Gensemer, 897 F. Supp. 833, 836-837 (M.D. Pa. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 3. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Bolger, 2 F.3d 1304, 1317 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 1. See Ferko v. NASCAR, 219 F.R.D. 403, 406-407 (E.D. Tex. 2003) .

(n23)Footnote 2. Henry v. Champlain Enters., 212 F.R.D. 73, 83 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n24)Footnote 3. Henry v. Champlain Enters., 212 F.R.D. 73, 83-84 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n25)Footnote 1. Ross v. Bernhard, 396 U.S. 531, 538, 90 S. Ct. 733, 24 L. Ed. 2d 729 (1970) .

(n26)Footnote 2. See Green v. Fund Asset Mgmt., L.P., 245 F.3d 214, 227-228 (plaintiff in derivative action would have jury trial right on behalf of corporation in suit seeking damages for common law fraud or deceit).

(n27)Footnote 1. Tipton v. Mill Creek Gravel, Inc., 373 F.3d 913, 922-923 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n28)Footnote 2. Zucker v. Westinghouse Elec., 374 F.3d 221, 226-227 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n29)Footnote 3. Mills v. Electric Auto-Lite Co., 396 U.S. 375, 396-397, 90 S. Ct. 616, 24 L. Ed. 2d 593 (1970) .

(n30)Footnote 4. Cohen v. Beneficial Indus. Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 556, 69 S. Ct. 1221, 93 L. Ed. 1528 (1949) .

(n31)Footnote 5. City of Philadelphia v. Fleming Cos., 264 F.3d 1245, 1258 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n32)Footnote 6. Tipton v. Mill Creek Gravel, Inc., 373 F.3d 913, 922-923 (8th Cir. 2004) (plaintiff was not required to plead attorney's fees as special damages in complaint but could raise issue of attorney's fees by motion); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2).

(n33)Footnote 7. Tipton v. Mill Creek Gravel, Inc., 373 F.3d 913, 922-923 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n34)Footnote 8. Granada Invest., Inc. v. DWG Corp., 962 F.2d 1203, 1208 (6th Cir. 1992) .

(n35)Footnote 9. Wallace ex rel. Northeast Utils. v. Fox, 7 F. Supp. 2d 132, 141-142 (D. Conn. 1998) .

(n36)Footnote 10. Angoff v. Goldfine, 270 F.2d 185, 189 (1st Cir. 1959) .

(n37)Footnote 11. Swanson v. American Consumer Indus., Inc., 517 F.2d 555, 559-560 (7th Cir. 1975) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VII. DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.115

§ 14A.115 Compromise and Voluntary Dismissal of Derivative Actionn*

[1] Substantive Requirements

[a] Court Approval Required

A party or parties may not voluntarily dismiss or compromise a derivative action without the approval of the court. n1 For purposes of Rule 23.1, the terms "settlement" or "to settle" have an identical meaning to the terms "compromise" or "to compromise." n2 Court approval is also required for any voluntary dismissal by a party. n3 While settlement of derivative actions is generally favored because such actions are typically difficult and costly to litigate, n4 the court approval requirement means that the court must always weigh the interests of any nonparty shareholders in evaluating whether to approve a dismissal or settlement. Furthermore, if a court determines that a settlement proposal is not in the corporation's best interests, the court may reject the settlement even if vigorously proposed by all parties. n5 The proponents of a settlement have the burden of proving that the settlement protects absent shareholders and is in the best interests of the corporation. n6

[b] Factors Considered Before Court Approval

In making the determination of whether to approve a settlement, the district court may not simply substitute its judgment for that of the parties but has the obligation to use its discretion to ascertain whether the settlement is based on fairness, reasonableness, and adequacy. The court must also ensure that the settlement has not been reached through fraud or collusion. n7 In order to evaluate the fairness, adequacy, and reasonableness of the proposed settlement, the court should balance the likelihood of success in the derivative suit against the amount offered in settlement. Considering the settlement in the light most beneficial to the corporation, the court should analyze the potential benefit available to the corporation and weigh that potential benefit against the risks involved in establishing liability and proving damages and against the costs of prolonged litigation. n8 In particular, the court should consider the following factors, which were initially applied to class action settlement agreements and later to derivative actions: n9

- The complexity, expense, and likely duration of the litigation.
- The reaction of the other shareholders or members to the settlement.

- The stage of the proceedings and the amount of discovery completed.
- The risks of establishing liability.
- The risks of establishing damages.
- The risks of maintaining the class action through the trial.
- The ability of the defendants to withstand a greater judgment.
- The range of reasonableness of the settlement amount in light of the best possible recovery.
- The range of reasonableness of the settlement amount in light of all the associated risks of litigation.

[2] Procedural Requirements

[a] Notice to Shareholders Required

As part of its approval required for any voluntary dismissal or settlement of a derivative action, n1 the court must direct the manner in which notice will be given of the proposed dismissal or settlement to all shareholders. n2 This rule has been held to require notice whenever a settlement or dismissal is approved n3 but to leave the manner of notice to the discretion of the court. n4 It has also been held that if notice is not given in the manner specified by the court, a settlement or voluntary dismissal will not have claim preclusive effect. n5

[b] Manner of Giving Notice

The notice of settlement or voluntary dismissal must contain sufficient information to provide the shareholders with the opportunity to make an informed choice of whether to intervene or object to challenge the proposed settlement or dismissal of the litigation. n6 To accomplish this purpose, the court has discretion to determine the method and content of a notice of proposed dismissal or compromise of a derivative action. n7 Notice is sufficient if it is reasonable and the best notice practicable under the circumstances. Therefore, actual receipt is not required by all shareholders, and notice by publication may be sufficient in some circumstances when combined with notice by mail to all current shareholders. n8

[c] Opportunity of Shareholders to Contest Settlement

Even though not expressly stated in Rule 23.1, courts have universally held that the notice requirement means that shareholders must be given the opportunity to contest the proposed settlement. n9 However, there is no requirement that the court hold a hearing on the settlement. The courts have developed the requirement that the shareholders be given "meaningful participation" at a settlement hearing on a proposed compromise. Meaningful participation usually includes the opportunity for discover y and cross-examination on issues pertaining to the settlement n10 but does not include the opportunity to examine the merits of the case. n11

[3] Appeal of Settlement

The named parties in a derivative suit may appeal a trial court denial or grant of approval of a proposed settlement, n1 and due process requires that the trial court provide findings regarding its determination in order to facilitate this appellate review. n2

Some circuits require that a nonparty must formally become a party through intervention before the person has standing to appeal the approval of a settlement. n3 Such courts reason that because a shareholder derivative suit is brought in the corporation's name to rectify an injury suffered by the corporation, individual investors are not injured parties. n4 On the other hand, some circuits have held that any shareholder who has objected in response to a notice of proposed settlement may appeal an approved settlement. n5 These courts allow appeal by a nonparty, unlike the rule with regard to Rule 23 class actions, based on distinctions between Rule 23 and Rule 23.1. The courts reason that Rule 23.1 does not offer the same protective mechanisms that are given by Rule 23. Thus Rule 23.1 does not require a preliminary affirmative determination that the named plaintiffs will fairly and adequately represent the interests of the other class members, as required under Rule 23. Additionally, there is no opt-out provision in shareholder derivative suits; thus, all shareholders are bound by the outcome regardless of their objections. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersActions Against CorporationsDerivative ActionsProceduresCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.1.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. In re Cendant Corp. Derivative Action Litig., 232 F. Supp. 2d 327, 332 (D.N.J. 2002) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Burks v. Lasker, 441 U.S. 471, 485, n.16, 99 S. Ct. 1831, 1841 n.16, 60 L. Ed. 2d 404 (1979) .

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Xcel Energy, Inc., 364 F. Supp. 2d 980, 1003 (D. Minn. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Pittsburgh & L. E. R.R. Co. Sec. & Antitrust Litig., 543 F.2d 1058, 1070 (3d Cir. 1976) ; see Daily Income Fund v. Fox, 464 U.S. 523, 532 n.7, 104 S. Ct. 831, 78 L. Ed. 2d 645 (1984) (purpose of court approval requirement is to prevent shareholders from suing in place of corporation in circumstances where action would disserve legitimate interests of either company or its shareholders).

(n7)Footnote 6. Maher v. Zapata Corp., 714 F.2d 436, 454 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Clark v. Lomas & Nettleton Fin. Corp., 625 F.2d 49, 54 (5th Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1029 (1981) (if court finds there is evidence of fraud or collusion between parties to settlement, court may reject settlement despite its apparent fairness).

(n9)Footnote 8. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Bolger, 2 F.3d 1304, 1311-1314 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 9. In re Cendant Corp. Derivative Action Litig., 232 F. Supp. 2d 327, 332 (D.N.J. 2002) .

(N11)Footnote 1. See [1], above

(n12)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(c).

(n13)Footnote 3. Daily Income Fund v. Fox, 464 U.S. 523, 532 n.7, 104 S. Ct. 831, 78 L. Ed. 2d 645 (1984) ; Saylor v. Bastedo, 623 F.2d 230, 238, 239-240 (2d Cir. 1980) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(c).

(n15)Footnote 5. Maher v. Zapata Corp., 714 F.2d 436, 450-451 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n16)Footnote 6. Felzen v. Andreas, 134 F.3d 873, (7th Cir. 1998) (notice provides opportunity for other shareholders to contest faithfulness or honesty of self appointed plaintiffs).

(n17)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(c).

(n18)Footnote 8. In re Xcel Energy, Inc., 364 F. Supp. 2d 980, 996 (D. Minn. 2006) .

(n19)Footnote 9. Kaplan v. Rand, 192 F.3d 60, 67 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 10. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Bolger, 2 F.3d 1304, 1314-1315 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n21)Footnote 11. Mars Steel Corp. v. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 834 F.2d 677, 684 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n22)Footnote 1. Carson v. American Brands, Inc., 450 U.S. 79, 88-90, 101 S. Ct. 993, 67 L. Ed. 2d 59 (1981)) (order refusing entry of settlement was appealable prior to final judgment because parties otherwise would be denied right to compromise their dispute).

(n23)Footnote 2. In re Pacific Enterps. Sec. Litig., 47 F.3d 373, 377 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n24)Footnote 3. Shults v. Champion Int'l Corp., 35 F.3d 1056, 1060-1061 (6th Cir. 1994) (nonintervening shareholder had standing to appeal only if shareholder attempted to intervene).

(n25)Footnote 4. Felzen v. Andreas, 134 F.3d 873, 875-876 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n26)Footnote 5. Rosenbaum v. MacAllister, 64 F.3d 1439, 1442-1443 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n27)Footnote 6. Powers v. Eichen, 229 F.3d 1249, 1254-1255 (9th Cir. 2000) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VII. DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.116through 14A.129

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.116[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VIII. CLASS ACTION INVOLVING UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.130

§ 14A.130 Unincorporated Entities and Its Members as Party to Suitn*

The members of an unincorporated association may institute and maintain an action in federal court as a class by naming certain members as representative parties, provided that it appears that the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of both the association and its members. n1 This rule also applies to unincorporated association defendants. Thus, a plaintiff may institute and maintain an action against the members of an unincorporated association as a class by naming certain members as representative parties, provided that the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the association and its members. n2 It should also be noted that the general class action rule itself, Rule 23, provides for the certification of defendant classes, including classes comprised of the members of an unincorporated association or other group. n3 For example, if the purpose of an action is to reach the assets of the members of the association by obtaining judgment against the assets of the members of an existing or dissolved association, Rule 23's provision for a defendant class may be utilized. n4

An analysis of the class action rules and the joinder rules reveals that suits by or against unincorporated associations may be maintained using one of several possible procedural methods, provided that the requirements of the particular rule are satisfied: n5 (1) by bringing a class suit under either Rule 23 or Rule 23.2, with named representatives of the association as parties; (2) by an action in which the association itself is named as a formal party based on its existence as a jural entity having the capacity to institute or defend the suit, n6 or (3) by joining all of the members of the association in the suit. n7

The three procedures may have varying consequences in terms of service of process, venue, subject matter jurisdiction, and the enforceability of the judgment. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.2.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2; see, e.g., Corfield v. Dallas Glen Hills LP, 355 F.3d 853, 865 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2; see e.g., Indiana Gas Co. v. Home Ins. Co., 141 F.3d 314 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Alexander Grant & Co. Litig., 110 F.R.D. 528, 538 (S.D. Fla. 1986) (claims certified against defendant class of past and present partners of accounting firm under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)).

(n6)Footnote 5. Indiana Gas Company, Inc. v. Home Ins. Co., 141 F.3d 314, 317-319 (7th Cir. 1999) ; see Benn v. Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 304 F. Supp. 2d 716, 723-724 (D. Md. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17.

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19.

(n9)Footnote 8. See § 14A.135.

150 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VIII. CLASS ACTION INVOLVING UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.131

§ 14A.131 Status of Entity as Unincorporated Associationn*

Case precedent establishes that virtually any type of ongoing association qualifies as an "unincorporated association" within the meaning of Rule 23.2, provided that it has not been formed merely for the purpose of filing suit or defending against suit related to a particular occurrence. Thus, the rule is not available to associations formed after the events that created the cause of action occurred. To allow a class action suit in such circumstances would allow pervasive evasion of the diversity jurisdiction requirement because a group of litigants who otherwise would not be able to avail themselves of a federal forum could easily form an unincorporated association merely to create diversity jurisdiction through designated representatives. n1 Although a formal association such as a limited liability company or a limited partnership qualifies under the rule, n2 even informal associations, such as insurance associations, qualify under the rule. n3

At common law, an unincorporated association was not recognized as a legal entity, was not subject to suit in its own name, but only in the name of its members, had no existence separate from that of its individual members, and one member's personal liability could not be enforced against any other members unless they also expressly or impliedly assented to or authorized the event on which liability was predicated. Since that time, many states and the federal government have passed statutes that expressly or impliedly authorize suits by and against unincorporated associations. n4 An action by or against representatives of the membership of an unincorporated association has now been allowed under Rule 23.2 to give "entity treatment" to any unincorporated association when for formal reasons it may not sue or be sued as a jural person under Rule 17(b). n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.2.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Sembach v. McMahon College, Inc., 86 F.R.D. 188, 192 (S.D. Tex. 1980) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Gen. Tech. Applications, Inc. v. Exro Ltda, 388 F.3d 114, 121 (4th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Corfield v. Dallas Glen Hills LP, 355 F.3d 853, 865 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Tittle v. Enron Corp., 284 F. Supp. 2d 511, 614 (S.D. Tex. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Benn v. Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 304 F. Supp. 2d 716, 723-724 (D. Md. 2004) .

151 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VIII. CLASS ACTION INVOLVING UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.132

§ 14A.132 Status of Member of Unincorporated Association Determined by Ordinary Meaningn*

The courts use the common meaning of the term "member" to determine whether a particular person is a member of an unincorporated association within the meaning of Rule 23.2. For example, both the general and the limited partners of a limited partnership are members of an unincorporated association. n1 A labor organization is an unincorporated association under the rule, and persons who pay dues to the union are consequently deemed members of an unincorporated association within Rule 23.2. n2 Furthermore, a "member" could be one insurance company of an unincorporated association of insurance companies that insured a particular type of risk. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsAdequate Representation Requirement

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.2.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Indiana Gas Company, Inc. v. Home Ins. Co., 141 F.3d 314, 317-319 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 2. S. Ill. Carpenters Welfare Fund v. Carpenters Welfare Fund, 326 F.3d 919, 922 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Corfield v. Dallas Glen Hills LP, 355 F.3d 853, 865 (5th Cir. 2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VIII. CLASS ACTION INVOLVING UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.133

§ 14A.133 Requirements for Member as Representative of Classn*

[1] At Least One Member Must Be Named as Class Representative

An unincorporated association may not maintain or defend a class action under Rule 23.2 on behalf of its members unless members of the association are named as parties representative of the association. n1 Therefore, to use the Rule 23.2 procedure, the association itself may not function as a named representative. Another prohibition is that members of the association may not maintain a class action under Rule 23.2 if the class action is joined with a direct action in the name of the unincorporated association. n2 Courts have imposed this prohibition because a class action under Rule 23.2 may be analogized to a derivative action under Rule 23.1, which requires that the action be brought on behalf of a corporation rather than by a corporation. n3

[2] Named Members Must Adequately Represent Other Members and Association

Named representatives may not maintain a class action or defend as a class under Rule 23.2 unless the class representatives fairly and adequately protect the interests of both the association and its members. n1 This requirement of adequacy is similar to the provision in Rule 23(a)(4) that mandates that named representatives fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class. Unlike Rule 23, however, Rule 23.2 requires that the named parties fairly and adequately represent both the individual members and the entity of the association itself. The concern of Rule 23.2 with both the association and its members reflects the purpose of the rule to treat associations as distinct entities from their members. n2

The standards for evaluating fair and adequate representation under Rule 23.2 are analogous to, but not redundant of, those used for the parallel inquiry under Rule 23. n3 Therefore, to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the association and its members, the named representatives must have interests in common with the other class members and must vigorously prosecute the interests of the class and the association through qualified counsel. n4 The court may deny certification under Rule 23.2 if the named representatives completely abdicate the conduct of the case to their attorneys. n5 Furthermore, although courts generally hold that Rule 23.2 does not incorporate the requirements of Rule 23, n6 the factors in the typicality and commonality analysis of Rule 23(a) may be considered when determining whether the adequacy of representation standard under Rule 23.2 has been met. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsAdequate Representation Requirement

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.2.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2.

(n3)Footnote 2. Murray v. Scott, 176 F. Supp. 2d 1249, 1254 (D. Ala. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Patrician Towers Owners, Inc. v. Fairchild, 513 F.2d 216, 221 (4th Cir. 1975) .

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2.

(n6)Footnote 2. Gravenstein v. Campion, 96 F.R.D. 137, 139 (D. Alas. 1982) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n7)Footnote 3. Gravenstein v. Campion, 96 F.R.D. 137, 140 (D. Alas. 1982) .

(n8)Footnote 4. Murray v. Sevier, 156 F.R.D. 235, 257 (D. Kan. 1994) ; Resolution Trust Corp. v. Deloitte & Touche, 822 F. Supp. 1512, 1515 (D. Colo. 1993) .

(n9)Footnote 5. Murray v. Sevier, 156 F.R.D. 235, 257 (D. Kan. 1994) .

(n10)Footnote 6. Management TV Systems, Inc. v. National Football League, 52 F.R.D. 162, 163-164 (E.D. Pa. 1971) .

(n11)Footnote 7. See Management Television Sys., Inc. v. National Football League, 52 F.R.D. 162, 164 (E.D. Pa. 1971) .

153 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VIII. CLASS ACTION INVOLVING UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.134

§ 14A.134 Availability of Rule When Association Has Jural Capacity Under State Lawn*

Rule 17(b) requires that the jural capacity of an unincorporated association in a diversity case be determined under the law of the forum state. n1 However, there is a conflict among authorities as to whether, in a diversity jurisdiction case, Rule 23.2 may be actuated as an alternative procedure if an unincorporated association is granted juridical capacity under the law of the forum state. The Committee Note for Rule 23.2 states that even though an action by or against representatives of the membership of an unincorporated association has often been viewed as a class action, the real or main purpose of this characterization has been to give "entity treatment" to the association when for formal reasons it may not sue or be sued as a juridical person under Rule 17(b). n2 Some courts have concluded from such language that Rule 23.2 may be used only if an unincorporated association lacks jural capacity under the law of the forum state and, thus, is barred from suing or being sued under Rule 17(b). n3

On the other hand, some courts take a more permissive view of Rule 23.2 and hold that a class suit may be maintained even if the law of the forum state grants jural capacity to the association. It appears that the more permissive view of the availability of Rule 23.2 is supported by the plain language of the Rule, which does not impose any restrictions on its use other than that the named representatives fairly and adequately protect the interests of the association and its members. n4 Thus, those courts following the permissive view have concluded that the drafters of the rule found it necessary to grant advantageous procedures in states that did not recognize the juridical capacity of associations and made those procedures available in all district courts. n5

However, even courts that adopt the permissive view of Rule 23.2 have held that suits by or against members of an association may not be maintained in diversity cases if state law restricts association actions to entity suits. n6 To hold otherwise would conflict with Rule 17(b), which provides that in diversity cases juridical capacity is determined pursuant to state law. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.2.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. App. P. 17(b), Committee Note to 1966.

(n4)Footnote 3. Benn v. Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 304 F. Supp. 2d 716, 723-724 (D. Md. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Kerney v. Fort Griffin Fandangle Assn., Inc., 624 F.2d 717, 720 (5th Cir. 1980) (purpose of Rule 23.2 was clearly to enlarge, not contract, authorization for class actions against unincorporated associations).

(n6)Footnote 5. Murray v. Sevier, 156 F.R.D. 235, 255 (D. Kan. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Lumbermen's Underwriting Alliance v. Mobil Oil Corp., 612 F. Supp. 1166, 1172 (D. Idaho 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Lumbermen's Underwriting Alliance v. Mobil Oil Corp., 612 F. Supp. 1166, 1169-1170 (D. Idaho 1985) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VIII. CLASS ACTION INVOLVING UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.135

§ 14A.135 Procedural Considerations Regarding Unincorporated Association Class Suitsn*

[1] Citizenship of Parties for Diversity Purposes

When an unincorporated association sues or is sued as an entity in its own name, the citizenship of each of the association's members is relevant for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. n1 Therefore, because the diversity statute requires complete diversity between all defendants and all plaintiffs, diversity will normally not exist in an action involving a large multistate association or, in the alternative, all of its members. n2 However, as with class actions under Rule 23, only the citizenship of the named parties is considered in determining whether a class action under Rule 23.2 satisfies the diversity jurisdiction statute. n3 Naming only diverse parties as representatives of a class that includes nondiverse members is a generally an accepted method for creating diversity jurisdiction. n4 However, there is contrary authority which holds that the Supreme Court's cases treating unincorporated associations as citizens of every state of which any member is a citizen may not be avoided by suing one partner or member as a "representative" of the rest. n5

[2] Personal Jurisdiction

Rule 23.2 allows an action to proceed if the court has personal jurisdiction over the named representatives, whether or not it has personal jurisdiction over the other members. n1 Furthermore, provided that the court has personal jurisdiction over the named class representatives, the court's jurisdiction also extends to the association itself. n2 By contrast, in a suit in which all members of an association are joined, each member must be served with process in order to be brought within the personal jurisdiction of the court, and if the unincorporated association is sued as an entity in its own name, service must be made on an appropriate officer or agent of the association. n3

[3] Venue

Under the general venue statute, the plaintiff has the option to institute an action in a district in which all of the defendants reside. n1 If the plaintiff institutes an action by joining all of the individual members of an association as defendants, then the residence of each member must be considered in the venue determination, and if an association is large, it may be difficult to find a single district in which all of the defendants reside. n2 By contrast, if a suit is brought against the association in its common name, the association's residence is used for determining venue. An unincorporated association is treated as a corporation for venue purposes and, therefore, is a resident of any district in which it is subject to personal jurisdiction. n3

On the other hand, if the suit is brought as a class action, only the residences of the named representatives are relevant to determine whether a particular venue is proper. n4 Furthermore, plaintiffs using Rule 23.2 may choose their particular class representatives to sue in order to expand the number of districts in which venue is appropriate. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.2.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Carden v. Arkoma Assoc., 494 U.S. 185, 195-196, 110 S. Ct. 1015, 108 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1990) .

(n3)Footnote 2. E.R. Squibb & Sons, Inc. v. Accident & Cas. Ins. Co., 160 F.3d 925, 930-933 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Holman v. Cook, 879 F. Supp. 113, 114 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Shlomchik v. Richmond 103 Equities Co., 662 F. Supp. 365, 370 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Indiana Gas Company, Inc. v. Home Ins. Co., 141 F.3d 314, 317-319 (7th Cir. 1999) (citizenship of underwriting syndicates' "names" could not be ignored, for purposes of establishing diversity jurisdiction).

(n7)Footnote 1. Curley v. Brignoli, Curley & Roberts Assoc., 915 F.2d 81, 87 (2d Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 499 U.S. 955 (1991) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Fowler v. Brignoli, 765 F. Supp. 1202, 1204 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 3. See Murray v. Scott, 176 F. Supp. 2d 1249, 1256 (M.D. Ala. 2004) ; Local 15 of Independent Workers of Noble County, Inc. v. International Broth. of Elec. Workers, 273 F. Supp. 313, 315 (N.D. Ind. 1967) .

(n10)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1391.

(n11)Footnote 2. See Shell v. Shell Oil Co., 165 F. Supp. 2d 1096, 1107 (C.D. Cal. 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(c); see Denver & R.G.W.R. Co. v. Brotherhood of R.R. Trainmen, 387 U.S. 556, 562, 87 S. Ct. 1746, 18 L. Ed. 2d 954 (1967) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Shell v. Shell Oil Co., 165 F. Supp. 2d 1096, 1107 (C.D. Cal. 2001) (venue for entire class is proper if venue for named representatives is proper).

(n14)Footnote 5. Curley v. Brignoli, Curley & Roberts Assoc., 915 F.2d 81, 87 (2d Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 499 U.S. 955 (1991) (unincorporated class action device provides litigants with important procedural advantages, including larger number of districts in which venue is proper).

155 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART VIII. CLASS ACTION INVOLVING UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.136

§ 14A.136 Application of General Class Action Principles to Unincorporated Association Class Actionsn*

Rule 23.2 expressly incorporates two provisions of the general class action rule: n1 Rule 23(d), which controls court orders dealing with all procedural matters in the conduct of class actions, n2 and Rule 23(e), which controls court approval and disposition of the class action by dismissal or compromise. n3 The authorities are split as to whether all of the other Rule 23 requirements apply to Rule 23.2 actions. The majority of courts hold that Rule 23.2 does not incorporate other Rule 23 requirements and limitations, n4 because the express inclusion of 23(d) and 23(e) implies that other subsections or Rule 23 were intentionally not incorporated. n5

However, other courts hold that all of the provisions of Rule 23 apply because Rule 23.2 merely supplements Rule 23 and Rule 17 by allowing unincorporated associations the same legal status as a person or corporation. Consequently, Rule 23 remains unaffected by Rule 23.2, and an unincorprated association, or those representing the association's membership, must comply with all of Rule 23 provisions when bringing a class action suit, such as the numerosity, commonality, typicality, and representative requirements of Rule 23(a), in addition to the requirements specified in Rule 23.2. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsUnincorporated AssociationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.2.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).

(n5)Footnote 4. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Deloitte & Touche, 822 F. Supp. 1512, 1515 (D. Colo. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Management Television Systems, Inc. v. National Football League, 52 F.R.D. 162, 164 (E.D. Pa. 1971) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Stolz v. United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners, 620 F. Supp. 396, 403 (D. Nev. 1985) .

1 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 15.syn

§ 15.syn Synopsis to Chapter 15: DISCOVERY

§ 15.01 Principles Governing Discovery and Disclosures in Federal Court

[1] Purpose of Discovery and Disclosure Is to Specify and Limit Issues for Trial

[2] Parties to Civil Actions Entitled to Discovery from Opposition

[a] Types of Action Subject to Discovery Rules

[b] Status of Party Entitled to Discovery

[c] Parties Before International Tribunals

[3] Provisions Controlling Federal Discovery

[4] Appeal of Court Order Related to Discovery

[a] Most Discovery Orders are Not Appealable

[i] Discovery Order Typically is Not Final Order

[ii] Discovery Order Not Appealable as Injunction

[iii] Collateral Order Doctrine Generally Not Applicable

[iv] Extraordinary Writs

[b] Exceptions Which Provide for Immediate Appeal of Discovery Order

[i] Summary of Grounds for Immediate Appealability of Discovery Orders

[ii] Final Orders That Impose Sanctions

[iii] Interlocutory Orders That Involve Controlling Questions of Law

[iv] Proceedings Requesting Only Discovery or Perpetuation of Testimony

[v] Order of Contempt

[c] Standard of Review of Discovery Order

§ 15.02 Required Automatic Disclosures

[1] Initial Disclosures Required

[a] Duty to Make Initial Disclosures

[b] Subject Matter of Required Initial Disclosures

[i] Disclosures Are Generally Required Except By Court Direction or Parties' Stipulation

[ii] Disclosures Regarding Individuals with Information

[iii] Copy or Description of All Items Used to Support Claims or Defenses

[iv] Computations Regarding Damages Claims

[v] Insurance Agreements

[vi] Types of Proceedings Exempted From Initial Disclosure Requirements

[c] Timing of Initial Disclosures

[2] Required Disclosures of Expert Witnesses

[a] Duty to Make Expert Witness Disclosures

[b] Subject Matter of Expert Witness Disclosures

[i] Identity of Expert Witnesses

[ii] Written Report Required by Retained or Employed Expert

[iii] Disclosure Required by Expert Not Required to Provide Report

[c] Timing of Expert Witness Disclosures

[d] Exclusion of Expert's Testimony for Failure to Disclose

[3] Additional Required Pretrial Disclosures Concerning Evidence to Be Used at Trial

[a] Duty to Make Additional Pretrial Disclosures

[b] Subject Matter of Pretrial Disclosures

[c] Timing of Pretrial Disclosures

[4] Format and Filing of Automatic Disclosures

[5] Failure to Provide Required Automatic Disclosures

[a] Court Has Discretion to Impose Various Sanctions

[b] Exception for Supplementation of Electronically Stored Information

§ 15.03 Scope and Limits of Discovery

[1] Information Requested Must Be Relevant

[a] Liberal Standard of Relevance

[b] Information Need Not Be Admissible in Evidence

[c] Pleadings Are Guide to Relevance But Are Not Determinative

[d] Any Party to Action May Obtain Information Relevant to Claim or Defense of Any Party

[e] Party Opposing Discovery Has Burden to Show Lack of Relevance

[f] Good Cause to Discover Any Matter Relevant to Subject Matter of Action

[2] Discovery to Determine Existence of Documents and Other Tangible Things

[3] Discovery to Determine Identity and Location of Persons With Knowledge

[4] Limitation of Discovery Related to Experts

[a] Expert Expected to Testify at Trial

[b] Trial Preparation Protection for Drafts of Expert Reports or Disclosures

[c] Protection of Communications Between Expert and Attorney

[d] Non-Testifying Expert Employed Only for Trial Preparation

[e] Payment of Discovery Related Fees of Expert

[5] Court May Alter Limitations on Discovery

[a] Limitations on Depositions, Interrogatories, or Requests for Admission

[b] Limitations on Discovery of Electronically Stored Information

[c] Court Required to Limit Unnecessary Discovery

[6] Party Not Permitted to Discover Privileged Information

[a] Party Ordinarily Precluded from Discovery of Privileged Information

[b] State or Federal Law May Control Privileges

[c] Attorney-Client Privilege

[d] Other Privileges Arising from Professional Consultations

[e] Privilege for Marital Communications

[f] Constitutional Privilege Against Self-Incrimination

[g] Government Privileges

[h] Waived Privilege Ordinarily Subjects Material to Discovery

[7] Party Not Allowed to Discover Work Product

[a] Scope of Work Product Doctrine

[b] Disclosure of Prior Statement Despite Doctrine

[c] Comparison of Work Product Protection With Attorney-Client Privilege

[d] Items Must be Prepared in Anticipation of Litigation or for Trial

[e] Protection Continues After Litigation Ends

[f] Documents Must be Prepared by or for Party or Representative

[g] Doctrine Not Applicable on Certain Facts

[h] Work Product Protection May be Claimed by Client or Attorney

[i] Burdens Under Work Product Doctrine

[i] Party Asserting Work Product Protection

[ii] Party Seeking Disclosure

[j] Waiver of Work Product Protection

[8] Limitations on Waiver by Disclosure of Attorney-Client Privilege and Work Product Protection

[a] Scope of Limitations on Waiver

[b] Purpose of Limitations on Waiver

[c] Proceedings Which May Create Limitations on Waiver

[d] Subsequent Federal and State Proceedings Are Subject to Waiver Limitations

[e] Protected Material Subject to Waiver Limitations

[f] Disclosure of Protected Matter Does Not Generally Waive Similar Undisclosed Matter

[g] Waiver of Inadvertent Disclosures

[i] Disclosures Generally Waived

[ii] Three Factors Required for Nonwaiver of Inadvertent Disclosure

[h] Limitations on Waiver of Disclosures Made in State Court Proceeding

[i] Controlling Effect of Court Order on Waiver

[j] Controlling Effect of Party Agreement on Waiver

[9] Procedure for Asserting Claim for Protection of Material as Privileged or Work Product

[a] Withholding Otherwise Discoverable Material

[b] Claiming Privilege or Work Product for Documents Already Produced

[10] Discovery Implications of Freedom of Information Act

§ 15.04 Protective Order of Court to Prevent Discovery Abuse

[1] Purpose and Effect of Discovery Protective Order

[a] Court's Discretion to Limit Discovery to Prevent Abuse

[b] Availability of Protective Orders

[2] Procedure for Application for Protective Order

[a] Filing of Motion

[b] Timing of Motion

[c] Certification That Parties Have Attempted to Resolve Dispute

[3] Grounds for Protective Order

[a] Good Cause

[b] Stipulation by Parties

[4] Types of Protective Orders

[a] Any Order Required to Protect Movant

[b] Examples of Particular Restrictive Protective Orders

[c] Partial or Complete Denial of Protective Order

[d] Court Order Specifying Waiver Effect of Disclosure

[5] Modification of Protective Order

§ 15.05 Timing and Sequence of Discovery

[1] Timing in Absence of Exercise of Discretion by Court

[2] Each Party May Determine Sequence Unless Otherwise Ordered by Court

§ 15.06 Supplementation of Disclosures and Responses

[1] Obligation to Supplement Automatic Disclosures and Discovery Responses

[a] Supplementation Required For Disclosure and Written Responses

[b] Additional Supplementation Required for Expert Witness Disclosures

[2] Effect of Failure to Supplement

[a] Sanctions Available for Failure to Supplement As Required

[i] Court Has Discretion to Impose Various Sanctions

[ii] Exception for Supplementation of Electronically Stored Information

[b] Court's Determination of Appropriate Sanction

§ 15.07 Discovery Planning Conference

[1] Discovery Conference

[a] Function of Required Discovery Conference

[b] Discretion of Court to Alter Discovery Conference Requirements

[2] Discovery Plan

§ 15.08 Discovery Signature Requirements

[1] Required Signature Constitutes Certification

[2] Effect of Failure to Sign

[3] Effect of Improper Certification

§ 15.09 Stipulations Regarding Discovery

[1] Parties May Alter Discovery Procedures By Stipulation

[a] Agreement of Parties to Control Particular Aspect of Discovery

[b] Court Has Ultimate Control over Discovery

[2] Examples of Valid Stipulations

[3] Effect of a Stipulation

§§ 15.10-15.19 [Reserved]

§ 15.20 Perpetuation of Testimony By Deposition

[1] Purpose of Perpetuation Procedures

[a] Methods for Perpetuation of Testimony Other than Trial Testimony

[b] Special Perpetuation Procedures Not Substitute for Standard Discovery

[2] Depositions Before Action

[a] Petition is Required to Take Deposition Before Action

[b] Notice and Service of Petition

[c] Contents of Petition

[d] Court's Order to Perpetuate Testimony and Evidence

[e] Examination Perpetuating Testimony

[f] Use of Deposition Perpetuating Testimony

[3] Depositions Pending Appeal

[a] Purpose of Deposition to Perpetuate Testimony Pending Appeal of Judgment

[b] Motion Required to Take Deposition to Perpetuate Testimony Pending Appeal

[c] Order of Court to Perpetuate Testimony and Evidence

[d] Scope of Perpetuation Pending Appeal

[4] Independent Action to Perpetuate Testimony

§ 15.21 Depositions On Oral Examination

[1] Utility of Oral Depositions

[a] Nature and Purpose of Depositions

[b] Persons Subject to Depositions

[c] Persons Who May Preside Over Depositions

[d] Timing of Depositions

[e] When Deposition Requires Leave of Court

[2] Procedural Requirements for Oral Depositions

[a] Notice of Deposition Examination

[b] Compelling Attendance of Witness

[c] Production of Documents in Connection with Deposition

[d] Methods of Recording Testimony

[i] Permissible Methods

[ii] Court May Order Method of Recording

[iii] Deposition Taken by Remote Means

[3] Conduct of Deposition Examination

[a] Presiding Officer's Responsibilities

[b] Time Limitations on Deposition

[c] Oral Examination of Witnesses

[i] Rules of Evidence Generally Apply Except for Objections

[ii] Raising Objection During Deposition Examination

[d] Examination on Written Questions

[e] Conduct of Attorneys at Deposition

[f] Sanctions for Improper Objections of Attorney

[4] Procedures After Deposition Examination

[a] Review and Changes by Deponent

[b] Officer's Certification and Transcript Responsibilities

[i] Certification, Delivery, and Storage of Deposition

[ii] Documents and Tangible Things Related to Deposition

[iii] Copies of the Transcript or Recording of Deposition

[5] Avoidance of Deposition Examination

[a] Motion to Quash Deposition

[b] Motion to Terminate or Limit Depositions

[6] Costs of Deposition

[a] Each Party Initially Must Pay Its Own Expenses

[b] Award of Costs to Prevailing Party

[7] Sanctions Related to Deposition

[a] Sanctions for Noticing Party's Failure to Attend Deposition

[b] Sanctions for Noticing Party's Failure to Serve Subpoena on Nonparty Deponent

§ 15.22 Deposition on Written Questions

[1] Nature and Purpose

[a] Alternative to Oral Depositions

[b] Distinguished from Written Interrogatories

[2] Availability of Deposition on Written Question

[3] Persons Subject to Deposition on Written Question

[a] Adverse Party, Individuals, or Organizations

[b] Attorney Deposed As Fact Witness

[4] Procedure for Depositions On Written Questions

[a] Service and Notice

[b] Service of Cross Questions, Redirect Questions, and Recross Questions

[c] Officer Must Ask Deponent Questions

[d] Review, Certification, and Delivery of Completed Deposition

[e] Objections to Deposition Procedures and Questions; Protective Orders

§ 15.23 Officer's Control of Deposition Examination in United States and in Foreign Countries

[1] Persons Who May Take Deposition in United States

[2] Administration of Deposition in United States Must Be By Officer

[3] Depositions and Other Discovery in Foreign Countries

[a] Methods for Taking Depositions in Foreign Countries

[b] Foreign Deposition May be Taken By Means of Any Treaty or Convention

[c] Letter of Request

[d] Foreign Deposition by Notice

[e] Foreign Deposition by Commission

[4] Disqualification of Persons to Take Deposition

§ 15.24 Use of Depositions in Court Proceedings

[1] Deposition Admissible for Use in Court Proceeding Based on Three-Part Test

[2] Statement of Three-Part Test

[3] Elements of Three-Part Test

[a] Presence of Party at Deposition

[b] Admissibility Under Federal Rules of Evidence

[c] Criteria That Allow Use of Deposition

[4] Objections to Deposition When Taken or When Introduced in Court Proceeding

[a] Time Objection Must Be Made

[b] Objections Based on Failure to Qualify Deposition for Use at Hearing or Trial

[c] Objections to Notice of Deposition

[d] Objections to Officer

[e] Objections That Must be Made When Deposition is Taken

[f] Objections to Form of Written Questions Given at Deposition

[g] Objections to Completion and Return of Deposition

[5] Procedures for Use of Deposition in Court Proceeding

[a] Deposition Must Be Introduced in Evidence

[b] All or Part of Deposition May Be Used

[c] Form for Introduction of Deposition Testimony

§ 15.25 Interrogatories to Party

[1] Purpose and Use of Interrogatories

[a] Characteristics and Types of Interrogatories

[b] Purposes of Interrogatories

[c] Interrogatories May Be Used in Conjunction With Other Procedures

[d] Considerable Discretion of Court to Control Interrogatories

[2] Persons Subject to Interrogatories

[a] Only Parties May be Subject to Interrogatories

[b] Persons Considered Parties

[3] Limitation on Number of Interrogatories

[a] Total Limit of Interrogatories

[b] Numerical Maximum Includes Discrete Subparts

[c] Courts Have Discretion to Allow Additional Interrogatories

[d] Procedure When Maximum is Exceeded

[4] Scope and Content of Interrogatories

[a] Interrogatories Must Seek Discoverable Information

[b] Scope Does not Include Privileged Matter

[c] Work Product Doctrine May Limit Scope

[d] Trade Secrets or Confidential Information May Limit Scope

[5] Format of Interrogatories

[a] Interrogatories Must Be Clear and Concise

[b] Instructions, Definitions, and Forms

[6] Timing of Service of Interrogatories

[a] Party May Not Serve Interrogatories Until After Discovery Conference

[b] Party May Not Serve Interrogatories Until After Process Served

[c] Party May Not Serve Interrogatories Until After Automatic Disclosure Date

[d] Type of Interrogatories May Control Timing

[e] Effect of Discovery Cut-Off Dates or Trial Setting

[7] Method of Service of Interrogatories

[8] Obligations of Responding Party

[a] Responding Party Required to Answer, Object, or Move for Protective Order

[b] Responding Party Must Supply Separate, Complete, and Written Answer

[c] Incorporation by Reference Disfavored

[d] Duty to Sign, Verify, and Certify Responses

[i] Interrogatories Served on Individual

[ii] Interrogatories Directed to Business and Governmental Entities

[iii] Attorney for Party Always Required to Certify Responses

[e] Option to Produce Business Records Instead of Answer

[f] Continuing Duty to Supplement Answers

[g] Discretion of Court to Permit Withdrawal or Amendment of Answers

[9] Time For Response to Interrogatories

[a] Responding Party Generally Has 30 Days to Answer

[b] Court's Discretion to Order Shorter or Longer Time

[c] Parties May Stipulate to Shorter or Longer Time

[d] Effect of Removal

[10] Objections to Interrogatories

[a] Time for Objection

[b] Required Specificity

[c] Typical Grounds for Objection

[d] Waiver of Objection

[e] Resolution of Objection

[11] Effect of Failure to Respond to Interrogatory

[a] Order to Compel Answers

[b] Sanctions

[c] Attorney's Fees

[12] Use of Answers to Interrogatories

§ 15.26 Production of Documents, Electronically Stored Information, and Things, or Entry On Land

[1] Purpose and Use of Requests for Production and Inspection

[a] Types of Requests Permitted

[b] Effect of Mandatory Disclosure Requirements

[c] Request for Production or Entry Complements Use of Other Discovery Methods

[i] Use of Request for Production or Entry With Other Discovery

[ii] Use of Subpoena Duces Tecum

[iii] Use of Subpoena to Nonparty

[2] Availability of Requests for Production or Entry

[a] Available in Civil Actions in District Court

[b] Available Only During Discovery

[c] Persons Required to Respond to Requests

[3] Scope of Requests

[a] Discoverable Items

[b] Admissibility Not a Limitation

[c] Accessibility to Information from Another Source

[4] Timing of Request

[a] Generally After Discovery Conference

[b] Request May Be Premature If Served Before Disclosure Due

[5] Request Must Be Specific

[a] Writing Required

[b] Request Must Be Stated With Particularity

[c] Specification of Time, Place, and Manner for Inspection

[d] Specification of Format for Electronically Stored Information

[6] Response to Request

[a] Timing of Response

[b] Permissible Responses

[c] Objections Must Be Specific

[d] Objection to Request for Production of Electronically Stored Information

[e] Waiver of Objections

[f] Unintentional Production of Protected Items

[g] Availability of Protective Order to Avoid Production

[7] Manner of Production, Inspection, or Entry

[a] Production, Inspection, or Entry Not Restricted to Territorial Jurisdiction of Court

[b] Possession, Custody, or Control of Party

[c] Time, Place, and Manner of Production and Related Activities

[d] Costs of Production

[e] Testing or Sampling of Items Produced

[f] Entry on Premises

[8] Enforcement By Court

[a] Use of Motion to Compel by Requesting Party

[b] Sanctions for Noncompliance With Obligation to Produce or Allow Inspection

[c] Sanctions for Destruction of Potential Discovery Items

§ 15.27 Physical and Mental Examinations of Persons

[1] Requirements for Order of Physical and Mental Examination

[a] Party May Make Request for Examination in Any Civil Action

[b] Required Showing of Controversy Involving Mental or Physical Condition

[c] Good Cause for Examination

[d] Court Has Broad Discretion to Enter Order

[e] Order Must Specify Parameters of Examination

[2] Procedural Considerations

[a] Request Made By Motion

[b] Time for Filing Motion

[c] Parties May Stipulate to Examination

[3] Conduct of Examination

[a] Persons Subject to Examination

[b] Persons Allowed to Perform Examination

[c] Persons Who May Attend Examination

[d] Location of Examination

[4] Report of Examiner

[a] Requests for Report

[b] Contents of Report

[c] Exclusion of Examiner's Testimony for Failure to Deliver Report

[d] Request for Report Waives Privilege of Requester

[e] Discovery of Report Under Other Rules

[f] Transcription of Examination

[5] Enforcement of Order of Examination

§ 15.28 Requests For Admissions

[1] Purpose Is to Obtain Admissions by Opposition of Undisputed Facts

[a] Admissions Simplify Litigation and Save Expense

[b] Effect of Admissions

[2] Comparison With other Discovery Methods

[3] Requirements for Requests for Admissions

[a] Requests Must Relate to Facts, Application of Law to Fact, Opinions, or Genuineness of Documents

[b] Requests Must Be Simple and Direct

[c] Number of Requests May Be Limited by Local Rule or Court Order

[d] Signing and Service of Requests

[4] Requirements for Responses to Requests

[a] Responses Must Be Timely

[b] Content of Responses

[c] Authorized Types of Responses

[i] Admission

[ii] Denial

[iii] Objection

[iv] Lack of Information or Knowledge

[v] Motion for Protective Order

[5] Withdrawal and Amendment of Admissions

[6] Determination of Sufficiency by Court

[a] Challenge to Sufficiency of Responses

[b] Challenge to Sufficiency of Objection to Request for Admissions

[c] Challenge to Sufficiency of Denial or Statement of Inability to Respond

[7] Enforcement of Obligation to Admit

§§ 15.29-15.39 [Reserved]

§ 15.40 Motions to Compel Mandatory Disclosures or Discovery

[1] Failure to Make Mandatory Disclosures

[2] Failure to Comply With Discovery Requests

[3] Persons Who May File Motions to Compel

[4] Procedural Requirements

[a] Appropriate Court

[b] Required Certification of Attempt to Resolve Discovery Dispute

[c] Timing of Motion to Compel

[d] Notice of Hearing Required

§ 15.41 Court's Determination of and Order for Motions to Compel Discovery or Mandatory Disclosure

[1] Court Orders Available

[2] Factors Considered In Ruling on Motions to Compel

[a] Courts Apply Broader Standard for Discovery Requests Than for Mandatory Disclosures

[b] Standard Applicable for Discovery Request Only

[3] Court Order of Expense Shifting Sanctions

[a] Presumption in Favor of Imposition of Expense Shifting Sanctions

[b] No Sanctions if Unsuccessful Position Was Substantially Justified

[c] Other Circumstances Making Award of Expense Shifting Sanctions Unjust

[d] Persons Subject to Expense Shifting Sanctions

[e] Protective Order Available When Motion Denied or Granted in Part and Denied in Part

[f] Party May Not Be Sanctioned Without Opportunity to Be Heard

[g] Court Has Discretion to order Reasonable Expenses Incurred in Motion

§ 15.42 Sanctions for Failure to Comply with Discovery Order

[1] Nature of Sanction for Failure to Comply With Order Compelling Discovery

[2] Sanctionable Conduct

[3] Necessity of Existing Court Order

[a] Discovery Order Directed at Party

[b] Order Must Give Adequate Notice of Duty Imposed

[c] Propriety of Order

[4] Procedural Requirements

[a] Timeliness of Motion

[b] Form and Contents of Motion

[c] Proper Court for Motion

[5] Factors for Court to Consider in Determining Motion for Sanctions

[a] Sanction Must Further Purposes of Discovery

[b] Discretion of Court in Sanctions Determinations

[c] Additional Factors for Court to Consider Before Order of Dismissal or Default Sanctions

[6] Particular Sanctions That Court May Impose for Failure to Comply With Discovery Order

§ 15.43 Sanctions for Failure to Make Mandatory Disclosures or Supplements

[1] Sanction of Preclusion

[2] Other Sanctions Available for Failure to Make Mandatory Disclosures or Supplements

[3] Sanctions Not Permitted if Failure to Disclose Was Substantially Justified

[4] Sanction Prohibited if Failure to Disclose Harmless

[5] Sanctions Not Permitted for Good Faith Loss of Electronically Stored Information

§ 15.44 Sanctions for Unreasonable Failure to Admit

[1] Prerequisites for the Imposition of Sanctions

[2] Court Not Required to Impose Sanctions if Prerequisites Are Met

§ 15.45 Sanctions for Failure to Appear at Deposition, Respond to Interrogatories, or Requests for Production or Inspection

[1] Sanctionable Conduct

[2] Sanctions Not Permitted for Good Faith Loss of Electronically Stored Information

[3] Sanctions Not Permitted During Pending Motion for Protective Order

[4] Sanctions Not Permitted for Failure to Respond Unless Movant Has Attempted Conference With Adversary

[5] Types of Sanctions That May Be Imposed

[6] Court May Impose Expense Shifting Sanctions

[7] Procedural Considerations

[a] Motion Must be Filed in Court Where Action is Pending

[b] Time for Filing Motion

§ 15.46 Sanctions for Failure to Participate in Discovery Plan

[1] Court Has Discretion to Impose Sanctions for Failure to Participate

[2] Sanctionable Failure to Participate in Mandatory Discovery Planning

2 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.01

§ 15.01 Principles Governing Discovery and Disclosures in Federal Court

[1] Purpose of Discovery and Disclosure Is to Specify and Limit Issues for Trial n*

"Discovery" in federal litigation is the process parties use to gather information from an opposing claimant or defending party before trial for the purpose of narrowing and defining the disputed legal and factual issues. n1 Through the process of discovery, each party learns the evidentiary basis of the opposing party's case by exchanging information with the opposing party. n2 Discovery is characterized by a search for information, and this search is governed by the process specified by the local rules of the particular court and Rules 26-37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Discovery should be distinguished from a party's investigation of its own case, which is not governed by the federal rules. Thus, a party may continue its investigation even after the formal discovery deadline set by the court. Parties engage in discovery to obtain unknown information or to supplement or corroborate information that is already known by the party. n3

Another significant purpose of discovery is to remove surprise from trial preparation so that the parties may obtain the evidence necessary to evaluate and resolve their dispute. n4 Because discovery facilitates this evaluation on both sides of a case, it is a powerful tool to promote fair settlements. n5 The discovery process supplements the function of the simplified pleading practice in federal litigation, which merely notifies the opposing parties of the general nature of a party's claim or defense and does not set forth the underlying facts in detail. n6 Thus, discovery is the device for ascertaining before trial what facts are really in dispute by allowing the parties to obtain the fullest possible knowledge of the facts and issues, while providing privileges and exceptions based on public policy to protect the parties from having to divulge sensitive material, even if the material would otherwise be relevant to the claim in dispute. n7

[2] Parties to Civil Actions Entitled to Discovery from Opposition n*

[a] Types of Action Subject to Discovery Rules

A party is entitled as a matter of right to the discovery provided in Rules 26-37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in any pending "civil" action covered generally by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which includes all civil actions except for those specified in Rule 81. If an action is not a civil action, or is specified in Rule 81, the parties are not subject to the broad discovery provisions of Rules 26-37 as a matter of right, but are entitled to the discovery governing that type of action. n1 For example, in habeas corpus proceedings, the petitioner is not entitled to broad discovery as a matter of right because Rule 6(a) of the rules governing habeas corpus cases provides that a party is entitled to discovery in a habeas petition only by express permission of the court after the party states sufficient reasons for requesting discovery. n2 As another example, the right to discovery in bankruptcy cases is determined by the Bankruptcy Rules, which for adversary proceedings are analogous to but separate from Civil Procedure Rules 26 through 37. n3

[b] Status of Party Entitled to Discovery

The civil discovery rules are applicable in the specified types of civil actions n4 at the request of any party to the action, whether the party is an individual or a corporation, n5 and whether a claiming party or a defending party. n6 The discovery rules apply to actions by or against the United States as a party, n7 and may also be used to obtain discovery from the United States in civil actions in circumstances specified in the federal rules even if the United States is not a party to the action. n8

[c] Parties Before International Tribunals

Generally, the discovery provisions of Rules 26-37 do not apply to proceedings in tribunals in foreign countries or in international tribunals to obtain discovery from United States federal courts for use in those tribunals. n9 However, the United States Code contains a provision for limited discovery in United States federal courts by a party or a complainant in a foreign or international tribunal. Under the special provision, the United States district court where a person resides or is found has the discretion to order that person to give his or her testimony or statement or to produce a document or other thing for use in a proceeding in a foreign or international tribunal. n10 The order may be made pursuant to a letter rogatory issued, or request made, by a foreign or international tribunal, or on the application of any interested person. n11 The United States Supreme Court has construed Section 1782 in a liberal manner requiring district courts to implement Section 1782 in a manner that furthers its purposes of cooperation in multinational litigation. n12

[3] Provisions Controlling Federal Discovery n*

Discovery in a federal district court is governed primarily by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 26 through 37. n1 State statutes and rules relating to discovery procedures are not applicable in federal court, even if the substantive legal issues in the federal court are controlled by state law on the basis of diversity jurisdiction. n2 Furthermore, a federal district court may not consider state discovery law in determining how to interpret and apply a federal discovery rule. n3 However, if a discovery issue is not covered by a federal rule, a federal court may consider a state-law rule governing the issue. n4

As another source of rules governing the process of discovery, the parties themselves may make an agreement or may stipulate to discovery rules that control discovery, subject to court approval based on the court's inherent power to control the litigation. n5. Thus, the parties to a contract may agree to limit or provide discovery in a particular way in the event any future litigation arises regarding the contract, provided that they are on an equal in bargaining power. n6 After a suit has been filed, the parties may mutually stipulate to use procedures for discovery that vary from Rules 26 through 37. n7

[4] Appeal of Court Order Related to Discovery n*

[a] Most Discovery Orders are Not Appealable

[i] Discovery Order Typically is Not Final Order

In general, appeals are not permitted from an order of the district court which either grants or denies discovery because such an order by itself is not a "final" order as required by statute for appellate review. n1 For example, courts have held that the following types of orders are not appealable: (1) granting or denying a protective order precluding discovery; n2 (2) granting or denying a motion for an order to take or cease taking a deposition; n3 (3) directing a party or witness to produce documents; n4 and (4) requiring a party to submit to a physical examination. n5 However, a party does have the option to disobey the order and have sanctions imposed against the disobeying party. n6 A sanction order is final and immediately appealable, and on appeal, the party may then assert any legal errors in the underlying discovery order. n7

Some circuits have held that the principle is not the same for a nonparty, and take the position that a discovery order directed at a disinterested third party must be treated as an immediately appealable final order for two reasons. First, the nonparty may have no appellate remedy at the end of the litigation, so the nonparty should be entitled to an immediate appeal. n8 Second, a third party presumably lacks a sufficient stake in the proceeding to risk contempt or sanctions by refusing compliance with a discovery order and should be allowed an immediate appeal. n9

[ii] Discovery Order Not Appealable as Injunction

A discovery order does not constitute an injunction that is appealable under Section 1292. n10 The Supreme Court has stated that a discovery order is not appealable as an injunction because it does not provide some or all of the substantive relief sought by the complaint, as required by Section 1292(a)(1), in more than preliminary fashion. n11 Similarly, an order staying the proceedings is not an injunction for purposes of appealability because it merely has the effect of conditioning a party's right to proceed with compliance with a discovery order. n12 It should be noted that a discovery order is not appealable as an injunction whether the order is directed at a party or at non-parties. n13

[iii] Collateral Order Doctrine Generally Not Applicable

Courts as a general rule do not apply the "collateral order doctrine" to discovery orders n14 because the doctrine provides that a non-final order may be appealed only if the following three requirements are met: (1) the order determines a claim of right separable from and collateral to the rights asserted in the main action; (2) the order is too important to be denied review; and (3) review cannot be deferred until final disposition of the main action because certain rights may be lost in the interim. n15 Considering these three factors, the Supreme Court has held that the collateral order doctrine does not extend to disclosure orders adverse to the attorney client privilege because such orders are not unreviewable under part (3) of the test. The court noted that effective review of adverse attorney client privilege orders can be had without resort to the doctrine by direct appeal, in that appellate courts can remedy the improper disclosure of privileged material by vacating an adverse judgment and remanding for a new trial in which the protected material and its fruits are excluded from evidence. The Supreme Court also stated that the collateral order doctrine is not an individualized jurisdictional inquiry into the circumstances of a particular order, but is an analysis that should be applied only with respect to a class or type of order. n16 On the other hand, it has been held that orders which require a party's attorneys to testify can be appealed under the doctrine, because of the lack of an available and meaningful appeal to remedy a wrongful order. n17

[iv] Extraordinary Writs

Extraordinary writs such as mandamus and prohibition are drastic remedies that may be invoked only in extraordinary situations. Because these writs are disfavored and strictly limited, the writs may not generally be used to provide appellate review of discovery orders. n17.1 Consequently, to prevent piecemeal appellate litigation, the United States Supreme Court has narrowly delineated the scope of the use of extraordinary writs in discovery order controversies and has stated that the writs should not be used in anything less than extraordinary situations, determined by the facts of the each case. n18 Thus, the appellate courts have usually limited the issuance of the writ of mandamus regarding such orders to three situations: n19 (1) when the district court has clearly abused its discretion; (2) when the district court has usurped its power; and (3) when mandamus is necessary to resolve an important novel issue.

[b] Exceptions Which Provide for Immediate Appeal of Discovery Order

[i] Summary of Grounds for Immediate Appealability of Discovery Orders

Although discovery orders are generally not appealable, n20 there are exceptional circumstances in which such an order may be immediately appealable. n21 Thus, a discovery order is subject to immediate appellate review if it is a statutory "final decision," n22 if it comes within the statutory definition of an appealable interlocutory order, n23 or if the circumstances are proper for the issuance of an extraordinary writ. n24 Based on these grounds, discovery orders have been held to be appealable in several types of situations, as discussed in [ii] through [v]. below.

[ii] Final Orders That Impose Sanctions

The court may impose various sanctions on a party for the party's failure to comply with any type of discovery order made by the court. If a discovery order disposes of a case, such as an order dismissing an action or entering a default judgment, the order is appealable. n25 On the other hand, if a sanction order does not completely dispose of a case, it is generally not appealable. Thus, orders that are clearly interlocutory are not appealable, such as an order that a particular matter be taken as established, n26 an order prohibiting the disobedient party from supporting or opposing designated claims or defenses, or from introducing designated matters in evidence, n27 an order striking pleadings, n28 or an order staying proceedings. n29 An order that is conditional because it depends on the occurrence of events or acts of the parties is not final and is unappealable. n30 A refusal to impose sanctions under Rule 37 has also been held interlocutory and unappealable. n31

[iii] Interlocutory Orders That Involve Controlling Questions of Law

When a district court states in writing that an order involves a controlling question of law, n32 n33-34 that there is substantial difference of opinion on the question, and that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate conclusion of the action, the court of appeals has discretionary jurisdiction over the order even if it is interlocutory. n35 Discovery orders are not usually appealable under this rule n36 because either the issues involved do not present a controlling question of law n37 or resolution of the question would not advance the conclusion of the action. n38 However, if a particular discovery order satisfies the strict statutory requirements, the court may certify a discovery issue for appeal. n39

[iv] Proceedings Requesting Only Discovery or Perpetuation of Testimony

When the only relief that a party seeks in a particular proceeding is discovery, the court's decision in the proceeding is final for purposes of appeal, provided that the court disposes of every issue before it. n40 For example, even though proceedings under Rule 27(a) to perpetuate testimony may be considered ancillary or auxiliary, it has been held that an order authorizing the taking of depositions under Rule 27(a) n41 is final and appealable. n42 Similarly, an order denying the right to perpetuate testimony is appealable because of the possibility that the eventuality that made perpetuation of the testimony desirable might occur; postponement of the appeal until disposition of the action could potentially preclude all relief. n43 An order is also appealable when it concerns perpetuation of testimony pending appeal of an action, n44 or when the district court's jurisdiction is invoked in aid of litigation in another court system, whether the other court system is within n45 or outside of the United States. n46

[v] Order of Contempt

If an order of contempt against any party for refusal to comply with a discovery order is criminal in character, it is a final order and immediately appealable. n47 On the other hand, an order of civil contempt is not immediately appealable because it is not a final order. n48 The characterization of a contempt order as either criminal or civil depends on the nature of the penalty imposed. A criminal contempt order is punitive in nature because criminal contempt results in imposition of a sentence for a definite time or a definite imposition of a fine without the possibility of modification. On the other hand, civil contempt is a sanction to enforce compliance with an order of the court or to compensate for losses or damages sustained by reason of noncompliance. n49 The label a court puts on its contempt order does not necessarily make the order criminal or civil. n50 Furthermore, the mere imposition of a fine does not change a civil contempt to a criminal one. n51

[c] Standard of Review of Discovery Order

Any discovery order is reviewable on appeal or cross-appeal from the final judgment, and is subject to reversal when it has affected the correctness of the final judgment. n52 However, review after judgment often comes too late: if discovery is denied and the party goes to trial without the information sought, the party on appeal may have difficulty establishing that the discovery sought would have made a difference in the outcome. n53 On the other hand, if discovery is allowed and the information comes in at trial, a reversal on appeal of only the order itself may not erase the damage done by the information obtained through the order; n54 consequently, the court may have to order a new trial. n55

An appellate court's standard of review of discovery orders is very narrow; the appellate court will only reverse on a showing of gross abuse of discretion that results in fundamental unfairness in the case. n56 Thus, appellate courts defer the management of discovery to the sound discretion of the trial court. n57 However, if a district court clearly considers erroneous standards or principles in making its order, or the denial of discovery may have been responsible for the failure of a party to prove its case, n58 the discovery order will be reversed by the appellate court. n59

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. O2 Micro Int'l, Ltd. v. Monolithic Power Sys., 467 F.3d 1355, 1365 (Fed. Cir. 2006) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See NicSand, Inc. v. 3M Co., 507 F.3d 442, 462-463 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Williams v. McClain, 708 F. Supp. 1086, 1090 (W.D. Mo. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Erskine v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 814 F.2d 266, 272 (6th Cir. 1987) .

(n6)Footnote 5. City & County of San Francisco v. Tutor-Saliba Corp., 218 F.R.D. 219, 221 (N.D. Cal. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Rottlund Co. v. Pinnacle Corp., 222 F.R.D. 362, 374-375 (D. Minn. 2004) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Baldrige v. Shapiro, 455 U.S. 345, 360, 102 S. Ct. 1103, 71 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1982) .

(n9)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n10)Footnote 1. Green v. Artuz, 990 F. Supp. 267, 271 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a) (Rule 81 limits application of discovery rules in certain actions, such as admiralty actions, and specifies that in other actions the broad rules do not apply at all).

(n11)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. App., § 2254 Cases, R. 6(a).

(n12)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7026-7037; see Collier's Bankruptcy Practice Guide, Ch. 110, Discovery (Matthew Bender).

(n13)Footnote 4. See [a] above.

(n14)Footnote 5. See Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 654 (D. Kan. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 6. See O2 Micro Int'l, Ltd. v. Monolithic Power Sys., 467 F.3d 1355, 1365 (Fed. Cir. 2006) .

(n16)Footnote 7. United States v. Procter & Gamble Co., 356 U.S. 677, 681, 78 S. Ct. 983, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1958) .

(n17)Footnote 8. Exxon Shipping Co. v. United States Dep't of Interior, 34 F.3d 774 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n18)Footnote 9. Matter of Jenoptik AG, 109 F.3d 721, 723 (Fed. Cir. 1997) .

(n19)Footnote 10. See 28 U.S.C. § 1782; see also Metallgesellschaft AG v. Hodapp, 121 F.3d 77, 79 (2d Cir. 1997) (discretion of U.S. District Court to order discovery).

(n20)Footnote 11. Euromepa S.A. v. R. Esmerian, Inc., 51 F.3d 1095, 1099 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 12. Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc., 542 U.S. 241, 124 S. Ct. 2466, 159 L. Ed. 2d 355, 371-379 (2004) (holding that foreign "tribunal" for purposes of Section 1782 need not be "court," but may be any formally recognized body that acts in judicial or quasi-judicial manner as adjudicatory decision maker).

(n22)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n23)Footnote 1. Rottlund Co. v. Pinnacle Corp., 222 F.R.D. 362, 374 (D. Minn. 2004) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26 et seq.

(n24)Footnote 2. Bearint v. Dorell Juvenile, 389 F.3d 1339, 1353 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n25)Footnote 3. Sharon Steel Corp. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 26 F.R.D. 113, 116 (N.D. Ohio 1960) .

(n26)Footnote 4. Benally v. United States, 216 F.R.D. 478, 480 (D. Ariz 2003) .

(n27)Footnote 5. See In re Merck & Co. Sec., Derivative & ERISA Litig., 493 F.3d 393, 398 (3rd Cir. 2007) .

(n28)Footnote 6. Elliott-McGowan Productions v. Republic Productions, Inc., 145 F. Supp. 48, 50 (S.D.N.Y. 1956) .

(n29)Footnote 7. *Morrison v. Stephenson, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6512, at *13-15 (S.D. Ohio 2008) .

(n30)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n31)Footnote 1. Cunningham v. Hamilton County, 527 U.S. 198, 208-210, 119 S. Ct. 1915, 144 L. Ed. 2d 184 (1999) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n32)Footnote 2. Osband v. Woodford, 290 F.3d 1036, 1038-1039 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n33)Footnote 3. Merino v. Hocke, 289 F.2d 636, 638-639 (9th Cir. 1961) .

(n34)Footnote 4. In re Nat'l Mortgage Equity Corp. Mortgage Pool Certificates Litig., 857 F.2d 1238, 1239-1240 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n35)Footnote 5. Donnelly v. Parker, 486 F.2d 402, 408 (D.C. Cir. 1973) .

(n36)Footnote 6. See [b][ii], below.

(n37)Footnote 7. In re Minister Papandreou, 139 F.3d 247, 250-251 (D.C. Cir. 1998) .

(n38)Footnote 8. Burden-Meeks v. Welch, 319 F.3d 897, 901 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n39)Footnote 9. In re Sealed Case (Medical Records), 381 F.3d 1205, 1210 (D.C. Cir. 2004) .

(n40)Footnote 10. United States v. Pappas, 94 F.3d 795, 798 (2nd Cir. 1996) .

(n41)Footnote 11. Poyner v. Murray, 508 U.S. 931, 932, 113 S. Ct. 2397, 124 L. Ed. 2d 299 (1993) .

(n42)Footnote 12. United States v. Richardson, 204 F.2d 552, 556 (5th Cir. 1953) .

(n43)Footnote 13. Bennett v. City of Boston, 54 F.3d 18, 20-21 (1st Cir. 1995) .

(n44)Footnote 14. In re Minister Papandreou, 139 F.3d 247, 250-251 (D.C. Cir. 1998) .

(n45)Footnote 15. Will v. Hallock, 546 U.S. 345, 349-350, 126 S. Ct. 952, 163 L. Ed. 2d 836 (2006) .

(n46)Footnote 16. Mohawk Indus. v. Carpenter, 130 S. Ct. 599, 175 L. Ed. 2d 458, 465-467 (2009) .

(n47)Footnote 17. See Conkling v. Turner, 883 F.2d 431, 434 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n48)Footnote 17.1. Earley v. Braxton (In re Braxton), 258 F.3d 250, 261 (4th Cir. 2001) .

(n49)Footnote 18. Will v. United States, 389 U.S. 90, 108, 88 S. Ct. 269, 19 L. Ed. 2d 305 (1967) ; see United States ex rel. Chandler v. Cook County, 277 F.3d 969, 981 (7th Cir. 2002) (mandamus review would be appropriate if particular discovery order would result in violation of federal law or would seriously impair legal right of person subject to order).

(n50)Footnote 19. Schlagenhauf v. Holder, 379 U.S. 104, 110-112, 85 S. Ct. 234, 13 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1964) .

(n51)Footnote 20. See [a], above.

(n52)Footnote 21. For a complete discussion of appellate jurisdiction, see Chapter 27, General Principles of Appeal.

(n53)Footnote 22. See 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n54)Footnote 23. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292.

(n55)Footnote 24. See 28 U.S.C. § 1651.

(n56)Footnote 25. United States v. Procter & Gamble Co., 356 U.S. 677, 680-681, 78 S. Ct. 983, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1958) .

(n57)Footnote 26. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(i).

(n58)Footnote 27. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(ii).

(n59)Footnote 28. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(iii).

(n60)Footnote 29. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(iv); see also Cromaglass Corp. v. Ferm, 500 F.2d 601 (3d Cir. 1974) .

(n61)Footnote 30. Bache & Co., Inc. v. Taylor, 458 F.2d 395, 395-396 (5th Cir. 1972) .

(n62)Footnote 31. Alexander v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n, 332 F.2d 266, 267 (9th Cir. 1964) .

(n63)Footnote 32. Harrisonville Tel. Co. v. Ill. Commerce Comm'n, 472 F. Supp. 2d 1071, 1080-1081 (S.D. Ill. 2006) (difficulty in finding discovery order that will present controlling question of law).

(n64)Footnote 33-34. [Reserved]

(n65)Footnote 35. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b).

(n66)Footnote 36. See e.g., Joseph v. Lindsey, 212 B.R. 373, 374-375 (10th Cir. 1997) .

(n67)Footnote 37. United States v. Salter, 421 F.2d 1393, 1394 (1st Cir. 1970) ; Harrisonville Tel. Co. v. Ill. Commerce Comm'n, 472 F. Supp. 2d 1071, 1080-1081 (S.D. Ill. 2006) .

(n68)Footnote 38. Kockums Indus. Ltd. v. Salem Equip., Inc., 561 F. Supp. 168, 174 (D. Ore. 1983) (attorney-client privilege denied).

(n69)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Watson v. Lowcountry Red Cross, 974 F.2d 482, 484-485 (4th Cir. 1992) (question was properly certified when it concerned discovery of information about anonymous blood donor, raising important undecided constitutional issues).

(n70)Footnote 40. See, e.g., Cobbledick v. United States, 309 U.S. 323, 329, 60 S. Ct. 540, 84 L. Ed. 783 (1940) (after court has ordered witness to testify under subpoena before administrative agency, there is nothing remaining for court to accomplish, and therefore proceeding before district court is not ancillary to judicial proceeding, but complete in itself).

(n71)Footnote 41. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a).

(n72)Footnote 42. See Martin v. Reynolds Metal Corp., 297 F.2d 49, 54-55 (9th Cir. 1961) .

(n73)Footnote 43. Crateo, Inc. v. Intermark, Inc., 536 F.2d 862, 870 (9th Cir. 1976) (motion denied under Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)).

(n74)Footnote 44. Ash v. Cort, 512 F.2d 909, 911-912 (3d Cir. 1975) (order denying motion to perpetuate testimony, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n75)Footnote 45. Gibson v. United States, 403 F.2d 166, 167 (D.C. Cir. 1968) .

(n76)Footnote 46. In re Application of Aldunate, 3 F.3d 54, 57 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n77)Footnote 47. Union Tool Co. v. Wilson, 259 U.S. 107, 110-111, 42 S. Ct. 427, 66 L. Ed. 848 (1922) .

(n78)Footnote 48. Law v. National Collegiate Athletic Association, 134 F.3d 1438, 1440-1441 (10th Cir. 1998) .

(n79)Footnote 49. Cunningham v. Hamilton County, 527 U.S. 198, 207-208, 119 S. Ct. 1915, 144 L. Ed. 2d 184 (1999) .

(n80)Footnote 50. Southern Ry. Co. v. Lanham, 403 F.2d 119, 124 (5th Cir. 1968) .

(n81)Footnote 51. International Bus. Mach. Corp. v. United States, 493 F.2d 112, 115-116 (2d Cir. 1973) (order was coercive and contingent in nature and was therefore civil).

(n82)Footnote 52. Ahlberg v. Chrysler Corp., 481 F.3d 630, 637-638 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n83)Footnote 53. See Moore v. Armour Pharm. Co., 927 F.2d 1194, 1197 (11th Cir. 1991) (no abuse of discretion when overly-broad deposition subpoena was quashed).

(n84)Footnote 54. See Brooms v. Regal Tube Co., 881 F.2d 412, 422 (7th Cir. 1989) (no prejudice demonstrated from admission of investigator's findings in sexual discrimination claim).

(n85)Footnote 55. See Evans v. City of Chicago, 513 F.3d 735, 745-746 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n86)Footnote 56. Ahlberg v. Chrysler Corp., 481 F.3d 630, 637-638 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n87)Footnote 57. Matter of Missouri Department of Natural Resources, 105 F.3d 434, 435-436 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n88)Footnote 58. Shaklee Corp. v. Gunnell, 748 F.2d 548, 550 (10th Cir. 1984) .

(n89)Footnote 59. See Linder v. Department of Defense, 133 F.3d 17, 24 (D.C. Cir. 1998) .

3 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.02

§ 15.02 Required Automatic Disclosures

[1] Initial Disclosures Required n*

[a] Duty to Make Initial Disclosures

Each party has a duty to make initial disclosures of information that it has related to all claims in the case. n1 The duty to make these is automatic in that it does not arise from a discovery request from another party or from the court. n2 A party is not excused from making its disclosures because it has not fully investigated the case, as it must make the disclosures based on the information then reasonably available to it. Furthermore, a party may not withhold initial disclosures because it challenges the sufficiency of another party's disclosures, nor because another party has not made its required disclosures. n3

[b] Subject Matter of Required Initial Disclosures

[i] Disclosures Are Generally Required Except By Court Direction or Parties' Stipulation

Unless the court directs or the parties stipulate otherwise, and except in certain specified categories of proceedings, n4 all parties must make the following disclosures within 14 days after the discovery planning conference: n5

1. The names, addresses, and telephone numbers of individuals likely to have discoverable information, and the subject of that information. n6

2. A copy or a description of all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things in the possession, custody, or control of the disclosing party that the party may use to support its claims or defenses. n7

3. Computations regarding damages for which the disclosing party makes a claim, and documents or other evidence that form the basis of the computations. n8

4. Any insurance agreement under which any person carrying on an insurance business may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment that may be entered in the action. n9

A disclosing party must make its initial disclosures based on the information then reasonably available to it. n10 However, for its initial disclosures, a party need not conduct a thorough or exhaustive investigation of the case. Parties are required only to disclose matters that they know of, or should know of through reasonable investigation, at the time they make the disclosures. n11 The party must then supplement an initial disclosure if the party obtains additional information related to that initial disclosure. n12

The initial disclosure requirements are nationally uniform requirements in federal courts, and parties must ordinarily make the disclosures except in the types of proceedings that are specifically exempted from the initial disclosure requirements by the rules. n13 Consequently, a trial court does not have the option to disregard the initial disclosure requirements by adopting local rules or formal or informal standing orders. n14 However, the trial court does have the option to enter case-specific orders eliminating disclosure, or limiting or expanding the scope of disclosure required. n15

[ii] Disclosures Regarding Individuals with Information

As part of its initial disclosures, each party must provide the name and if known the address and telephone number of each individual likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless used solely for impeachment. The party must also identify the subjects of such information. n16 The ultimate result of these disclosures is to provide information about potential witnesses and the subject matter of their knowledge. The purpose of the requirement is to assist the other parties in deciding whom they wish to depose without the necessity of first serving multiple boilerplate interrogatories seeking this information. n17

The party must disclose each known individual's own addresses and telephone numbers. n18 It is not sufficient when an individual is an employee to merely provide the employer's general address and telephone number. n19 Furthermore, the possibility that opposing counsel could use the information to improperly contact a party's employees outside the party's presence does not justify noncompliance with the rule; n20 such objections must be raised at the discovery planning conference. n21 With respect to the subject matter of the information about which the witness will testify, the party need only make a brief disclosure of the general topics of each witness's knowledge, rather than details of particular topics. Thus, it is not necessary to provide a detailed narrative of all of the facts known to each witness the party anticipates calling. n22

[iii] Copy or Description of All Items Used to Support Claims or Defenses

In its initial disclosure, each party must provide other parties with a copy of, or description by category and location of, all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses. n23 This disclosure must describe and categorize the nature and location of the documents and records in a manner sufficient to enable opposing parties (1) to make an informed decision concerning which documents might need to be examined initially and (2) to frame their document requests in a manner likely to avoid disputes resulting from the wording of the requests. n24

A party need not provide this copy or description for items that the attorney intends to use solely for impeachment purposes. n25 However, if a party relies on this exception, the court will not permit the party to use the documents at trial for any purpose other than impeachment. n26

It is important to note that the disclosing party does not have to produce actual documents or items requested. It may comply fully with its initial disclosure obligation by providing a description by category and location of all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things it expects to use during the proceeding. n27 Furthermore, this provision is designed to facilitate early disclosure of discoverable information and does not require that all documents and items relevant to the issues in a law suit will be among the initial disclosures; consequently, the failure to make timely disclosures does not necessarily preclude a party's witnesses from relying on documents not included in the initial disclosures. n28 However, the best practice is to produce a description or copy of all items that the attorney anticipates he or she will use regarding any party's allegations, claims, or defenses or rebuttal to any allegations, claims, or defenses. n29

[iv] Computations Regarding Damages Claims

Each party in its initial disclosures must include a computation of any category of damages claimed by the disclosing party. The party must also make available for inspection and copying the documents or other evidentiary material on which such computation is based, including materials bearing on the nature and extent of injuries suffered. However, the party need not make available material that is privileged or protected from disclosure. n30 Documents or other evidentiary materials that are not required for damage computation need not be included in this disclosure, even if otherwise relevant to the case. n31

This provision is the functional equivalent of a standing request for production of documents under Rule 34. n32 Courts have stressed that there are two parts to this initial disclosure requirement. First, the party must disclose the method it used to calculate its claims for damages or other monetary relief; second the party must make available the documents supporting the calculations for inspection and copying, as if a request for such material had been made under Rule 34. n33 The disclosures must be sufficiently specific that opposing parties have some basis to calculate the damages claimed against them. Consequently, the party making the damage claim has the obligation in its initial disclosures to disclose to the other parties the best information available to the disclosing party related to the damages claim at the time of the disclosure, however limited and subject to change the information may be at that time. n34 Furthermore, if documents on which a party's claim of injury or damages is based are in the possession of a third person over whom the disclosing party has control, the disclosing party must make the third-person documents available to the other parties for their inspection and copying in connection with its initial disclosures. n35

[v] Insurance Agreements

As the last item a party must make in initial disclosures, the party must make available to the other parties for inspection and copying under Rule 34 any insurance agreement under which any insurance business may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment that may be entered in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment. n36 The purpose of this disclosure is to enable the opposition to realistically appraise the case by determining whether an insurer will be able to satisfy an expected judgment or settlement agreement, n37 based on knowledge of the size of the fund that is available for the satisfaction of any judgment obtained, rather than speculation. n38 Counsel should note that the discovery of insurance information pursuant to this provision does not render insurance information admissible in evidence. n39

In some circumstances, a party may properly refuse and object to production of insurance documents. When the party under the obligation to disclose has or is providing all of the information necessary to satisfy the purpose of the insurance coverage disclosure provision, the party has complied with the initial disclosure requirements. n40 In such circumstances, the initial insurance disclosures must be made unless the party objects during conference that initial disclosures are not appropriate in circumstances of the action, and states the objection in the Rule 26(f) proposed discovery plan. n41

[vi] Types of Proceedings Exempted From Initial Disclosure Requirements

The following categories of proceedings are exempt from the initial disclosure requirements specified in [ii] through [v], above: n42

1. An action for review on an administrative record;

2. A forfeiture action in rem arising from a federal statute;

3. A petition for habeas corpus or any other proceeding to challenge a criminal conviction or sentence;

4. An action brought without an attorney by a person in the custody of the United States, a state, or a state subdivision;

5. An action to enforce or quash an administrative summons or subpoena;

6. An action by the United States to recover benefit payments;

7. An action by the United States to collect on a student loan guaranteed by the United States;

8. A proceeding ancillary to a proceeding in another court; and

9. An action to enforce an arbitration award.

These descriptions of the exempted proceedings are generic and should be interpreted with flexibility. However, the enumeration of the exempt proceedings is exclusive, which means that only those proceedings actually listed are exempt from the initial disclosure requirements. n43 Thus, although the first exclusion, for an action for review on an administrative record, exempts a proceeding that is determined to be an "appeal" based solely on the administrative record, it does not exempt any proceeding that commonly permits admission of new evidence to supplement the administrative record, because such a proceeding does not constitute an "appeal." Furthermore, it should be noted that district courts are prohibited from adopting local rules or issuing standing orders that alter the enumerated list of exempted proceedings. n44

[c] Timing of Initial Disclosures

Unless the court directs or the parties stipulate otherwise, the initial disclosures must be made at or within 14 days of the discovery conference specified in Rule 26(f). n45 The timing of the Rule 26(f) conference is generally left to the agreement of the parties, provided that it must be held at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or before a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b). n46 If a defendant asserts that the plaintiff has not properly pleaded the complaint, and makes a motion that the complaint should be dismissed, the defendant may obtain a stay of the requirement of the initial disclosures pending resolution of the motion to dismiss, provided that the defendant makes a strong showing that the plaintiff's claim is without merit. n47

Any party joined after the Rule 26(f) conference has 30 days after being served or joined within which to make its initial disclosures. However, the parties may stipulate to a different time period for any subsequently joined party to make its initial disclosures, or the court may order a different time for such disclosures in the particular case. n48

[2] Required Disclosures of Expert Witnesses

[a] Duty to Make Expert Witness Disclosures

Each party must disclose the identity of any person whom the party may use at trial to present expert testimony n1 and information about the opinions that the expert will express in testimony and the factual basis of those opinions. n2 The purpose of this rule is to give parties a reasonable opportunity to prepare an effective cross-examination of the opposing party's expert witnesses and, if necessary, arrange for testimony from other experts. n3 The parties have the duty to supplement these disclosures when required under Rule 26(e). n4

[b] Subject Matter of Expert Witness Disclosures

[i] Identity of Expert Witnesses

Each party must disclose the identity of any person whom the party may use at trial to present evidence under Rules 702, 703, or 705 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, which pertain to expert witnesses. n5 This rule requires disclosure of any person who may testify as an expert witness under the specified Evidence Rules only, and therefore does not require a party to disclose the name of any lay witness who may be used at trial to present evidence under Rule 701 (opinion testimony by lay witnesses), even though the lay witness will be testifying regarding the witness's opinions. n6

[ii] Written Report Required by Retained or Employed Expert

If any witness is retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony in the case, or if any witness has duties as an employee of a party which regularly involve giving expert testimony, that witness must make a report unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court. n7 For purposes of the rule, "witnesses who are retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony" include any witness: who will receive some type of consideration, whether or not monetary consideration, and who will testify pursuant to Rule 702 of the Federal Rules of Evidence. n8 On the other hand, if an expert witness is not so retained or employed, the expert need only summarize the opinions of the expert, rather than make a full report. n9

Each required report must be prepared and signed by the expert, and must accompany the identification of the witness. n10 The report must contain all of the following items:

(1) A complete statement of all opinions the witness will express and the basis and reasons for them. n11 The report need not replicate every word that the expert might testify to. Rather, it must convey the substance of the expert's opinion so that the opponent will be ready to rebut, to cross-examine, and to offer a competing expert if necessary. n12

(2) The facts or data considered by the witness in forming the opinions. n13 The disclosure of "facts or data" means that it is limited disclosure to material of a factual nature; it excludes theories or mental impressions of counsel. On the other hand, "facts or data" requires disclosure of any material considered by the expert, from whatever source, that contains factual ingredients. The disclosure requirement extends to all facts or data "considered" by the expert, whether or not actually relied on by the expert. n14

(3) Any exhibits that will be used to summarize or support the opinions. n15

(4) The witness's qualifications, including a list of all publications authored in the previous 10 years. n16

(5) A list of all other cases in which, during the previous four years, the witness testified as an expert at trial or by deposition. n17

(6) A statement of the compensation to be paid for the study and testimony in the case. n18

[iii] Disclosure Required by Expert Not Required to Provide Report

If an expert witness is neither retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony in the case, nor has duties as an employee of a party that regularly involve giving expert testimony, and is therefore not required to file a written report, n19 the party must nevertheless provide a disclosure for the expert, which contains both of the following:

(1) The subject matter on which the witness is expected to present evidence under Federal Rule of Evidence 702, 703, or 705. n20

(2) A summary of the facts and opinions to which the witness is expected to testify. n21

These two disclosures are considerably less extensive than the full report required by Rule 26(a)(2)(B). Courts should not require extensive detail for these disclosures, noting that these witnesses have not been specially retained and may not be as responsive to counsel as those who have. Examples of these types of witness include physicians or other health care professionals and employees of a party who do not regularly provide expert testimony. n22

[c] Timing of Expert Witness Disclosures

A party must generally make its required expert witness disclosures either at the time ordered by the court or at the time stipulated to by the parties. n23 In the absence of such an order or stipulation, the disclosures must be made at least 90 days before the trial date or the date the case is to be ready for trial. n24 However, if the expert evidence is intended solely to contradict or rebut evidence on the same subject matter identified by another party under Rule 26(a)(2)(B) or (C), the disclosures must be made within 30 days after such other party's disclosure. n25

[d] Exclusion of Expert's Testimony for Failure to Disclose

If a party fails to comply with the disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a)(2)(C), the court may sanction the failure by ordering the exclusion of the proposed expert's testimony, unless the failure was substantially justified or harmless. n26 When a party has failed to comply with a discovery requirement, the district court has discretion n27 to exclude or strike expert testimony from the record after considering the importance of excluded testimony, an explanation of a party for its failure to comply, potential prejudice that would arise from allowing the testimony, and the availability of a continuance to cure such prejudice. n28 In the same way, a party that fails to supplement the expert disclosures as required by Rule 26(e)(2) n29 is also subject to the exclusion of its expert's testimony. n30

[3] Additional Required Pretrial Disclosures Concerning Evidence to Be Used at Trial

[a] Duty to Make Additional Pretrial Disclosures

At a specified time before trial, each party must make automatic disclosures about evidence that will be presented at trial, n1 in addition to the automatic initial disclosures, n2 and automatic disclosures regarding expert witnesses. n3 These required disclosures, referred to as the "pretrial disclosures," must be made to other parties and also be promptly filed with the court. n4 As is the case with non-expert witness disclosures under Rule 26(a)(1)(A) and (B), the pretrial disclosure, applies only to evidence that will be presented other than solely for impeachment purposes. n5 In other words, there is no duty to disclose evidence that the party intends to use solely to impeach the other party's evidence. n6

[b] Subject Matter of Pretrial Disclosures

The parties must make the following three types of "pretrial disclosures" within the specified time before trial:

1. The name and, if not previously disclosed, the address and telephone number of each witness, separately identifying those whom the party expects to present and those whom the party may call if the need arises. n7 It is important for a party to identify all prospective witnesses because Rule 37(c)(1) provides that only persons so listed may be used to present substantive evidence at trial, unless there was substantive justification for the omission or unless the failure to disclose was harmless. n8 "Substantial justification" means justification to a degree that would satisfy a reasonable person that parties could differ as to whether the party was required to comply with the disclosure request. n9 An example of a "substantial justification" for failure to disclose would be a trial development that could not have reasonably been anticipated. When a party does list a witness in its pretrial disclosure, the party is not necessarily obligated to secure that witness's attendance at trial, but the party is precluded from objecting if the person is called to testify by another party who did not list the person as a witness. n10

2. All witnesses whose testimony the party expects to present by deposition. The party must provide, if the deposition is not taken stenographically, a transcript of the pertinent portions of the deposition testimony. n11 The rule regarding nonstenographic depositions is intended to allow the opposing party time to verify a transcript made from an audio or video tape. n12 Under this provision, the court may by order or local rule require the parties to designate the particular portions of stenographic depositions to be used at trial. n13 When a deposition is recorded by videotape the opposition will be entitled to recover the costs of both videotaping and transcribing the deposition. n14

3. An identification of each document or other exhibit, including summaries of other evidence, separately identifying those that the party expects to offer and those that the party may offer if the need arises. n15 Although this rule requires each exhibit to be listed separately, voluminous items of a similar or standardized character may be described by purposeful categories. For example a consecutive series of invoice vouchers might be shown collectively as a single exhibit with their starting and ending dates. Under Rule 37(c)(1), a party may use an unlisted exhibit only if there was substantial justification for the omission, n16 such as a trial development that could not have been reasonably anticipated, or if the failure to disclose was harmless. n17

[c] Timing of Pretrial Disclosures

Unless the court specifies a different time, the pretrial disclosures under Rule 26(a)(3) must be made at least 30 days before trial and promptly filed with the court. Unless the court specifies a different time, the other parties have 14 days following the pretrial disclosures to file a list disclosing their objections to the use of a disclosed deposition witness under Rule 26(a)(3)(A)(ii) and any objections, and the reasons for the objections, to the admissibility of any materials disclosed under Rule 26(a)(3)(A)(iii). n18 A party who fails to list an objection to the admissibility of deposition testimony or an exhibit waives any objection to that evidence, except an objection under Rules 402 and 403 of the Federal Rules of Evidence. The purpose of this rule is to dispense with the need to provide foundation testimony for most documentary evidence. n19 However, listing an objection does not constitute an objection itself or obligate the court to rule on the objection; it merely preserves the party's right to object at trial. The court does have the option to deem the listing as a motion in limine and rule on the listed objection in advance of trial. n20

In addition to orders of court, compliance with the timing requirements of Rule 26(a)(3) may also be affected by a provision of the local rules of the particular district, and counsel should be familiar with such rules. For example, some local rules provide that a party need not file its list identifying trial witnesses until the calling party files a pretrial statement. n21

[4] Format and Filing of Automatic Disclosures

Unless the court orders otherwise, the disclosures under Rule 26 must be made in writing, signed, and served on all other parties. n1 Additionally, "pretrial disclosures' ' under Rule 26(a)(3) must be promptly filed with the court. n2 On the other hand, the mandatory initial disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1) and the expert witness disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(2) need not be filed with the court n3 until they are used in the proceeding or the court orders filing. n4

Initial disclosures made on behalf of a represented party must be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name, with the attorney's address stated. Initial disclosures made by an unrepresented party must be signed by the party, with the party's address stated. The signature of the attorney or the party constitutes a certification that to the best of the signer's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after a reasonable inquiry, the disclosure is complete and correct as of the time it was made. n5

[5] Failure to Provide Required Automatic Disclosures

[a] Court Has Discretion to Impose Various Sanctions

The rule governing discovery violation sanctions explicitly provides that a party is subject to sanctions if the party fails to make an automatic, mandatory disclosure as required under Rule 26(a) or as ordered by the court. n1 Specifically, if a party without substantial justification fails to disclose information as required by Rule 26(a), and the failure is not harmless, the party may be precluded from using that witness or information at trial, at a hearing, or on a motion. n2 In addition to or in lieu of this sanction, the court on motion and after affording an opportunity to be heard, may impose other appropriate sanctions, such as requiring payment of reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the violation of Rule 26(a), informing the jury of the failure to make the required supplementation, and may impose any of the actions authorized under Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi). n3

[b] Exception for Supplementation of Electronically Stored Information

There is an exception to the imposition of sanctions for cases involving disclosure of electronically stored information, n4 which includes but is not limited to, items such as data files, program files, and e-mail messages and files. n5 A court may not impose sanctions on a party for failing to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system, unless there are exceptional circumstances. n6 This provision applies to information lost due to the routine operation of an information system only if the operation was in good faith. Good faith in the routine operation of an information system may require a party to intervene to modify or suspend certain features of that routine operation to prevent the loss of information, if that information is subject to a preservation obligation. n7 A preservation obligation may arise from many sources, including common law, statutes, regulations, or a court order in the case. The good faith requirement of Rule 37(e) means that a party is not permitted to exploit the routine operation of an information system to avoid discovery obligations by allowing that operation to continue in order to destroy specific stored information that it is required to preserve. n8

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.22 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1); see [b], below (subject matter of initial disclosures).

(n3)Footnote 2. *United States v. Dunn, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27089, at 9 (N.D. Ill. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(E).

(n5)Footnote 4. See [vi], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A).

(n7)Footnote 6. See [iii], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See [iii], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. See [iv], below.

(n10)Footnote 9. See [v], below.

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(E).

(n12)Footnote 11. *Charles F. McAfee, FAIA, NOMA, P.A. v. U.S.D. 259, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47695, at *5-6 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(A).

(n14)Footnote 13. See [vi], below.

(n15)Footnote 14. Toth v. Grand Trunk R.R., 306 F.3d 335, 344 n.3 (6th Cir. 2002) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Jordan v. City of Cleveland, 464 F.3d 584, 600-601 (6th Cir. 2006) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A).

(n17)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n18)Footnote 17. Chalick v. Cooper Hosp./Univ. Med. Ctr., 192 F.R.D. 145, 150 (D.N.J. 2000) .

(n19)Footnote 18. *Biggars v. Romans, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30015, at *2-5 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Hernandez-Torres v. Intercontinental Trading, 158 F.3d 43, 49-50 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Dixon v. Certainteed Corp., 164 F.R.D. 685, 689 (D. Kan. 1996) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C).

(n23)Footnote 22. United States ex rel. Hunt v. Merck-Medco Managed Care, LLC, 223 F.R.D. 330, 332-333 (E.D. Pa. 2006) .

(n24)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n25)Footnote 24. See Lomascolo v. Otto Oldsmobile-Cadillac, Inc., 253 F. Supp. 2d 354, 360-361 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n26)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n27)Footnote 26. Lomascolo v. Otto Oldsmobile-Cadillac, Inc., 253 F. Supp. 2d 354, 360-361 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n28)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1), Committee Note to 2000 Amendments; see Watson v. United States, 485 F.3d 1100, 1108 (10th Cir. 2007) (disclosure required of actual item or its location).

(n29)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1), Committee Note to 2000 Amendments.

(n30)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1), Committee Note to 2000 Amendments.

(n31)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(iii); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n32)Footnote 31. Asia Strategic Investment Alliances, Ltd. v. General Electric Capital Services, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 305, 308 (D. Kan. 1997) .

(n33)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n34)Footnote 33. Design Strategy, Inc. v. Davis, 469 F.3d 284, 295 (2d Cir. 2006) (this disclosure requires explanation in form of "computation" supported by disclosed documents).

(n35)Footnote 34. See Stairmaster Sports/Med. Prods, Inc. v. Groupe Procycle, Inc., 25 F. Supp. 2d 270 (D. Del. 1998) .

(n36)Footnote 35. Arthur v. Atkinson Freight Lines Corp., 164 F.R.D. 19, 20 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n37)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(iv); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n38)Footnote 37. In re Delmarine, Inc., 535 F. Supp. 2d 318, 322 (E.D.N.Y. 2008) ; Suffolk Fed. Credit Union v.

CUMIS Ins. Soc'y, Inc., 270 F.R.D. 141, 143 (E.D.N.Y. 2010) .

(n39)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n40)Footnote 39. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n41)Footnote 40. Wegner by Wegner v. Cliff Viessman, Inc., 153 F.R.D. 154, 160-161 (N.D. Iowa 1994) .

(n42)Footnote 41. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C).

(n43)Footnote 42. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(B)(i)-(ix).

(n44)Footnote 43. Al Odah v. United States, 329 F. Supp. 2d 106, 109 (D.D.C. 2004) .

(n45)Footnote 44. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1), Committee Note to 2000 Amendments.

(n46)Footnote 45. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C).

(n47)Footnote 46. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1).

(n48)Footnote 47. Medhekar v. United States District Court, 99 F.3d 325, 328 (9th Cir. 1996) ; Catholic Order v. U.S. Bancorp Piper Jaffray, Inc., 337 F. Supp. 2d 1148, 1152 (N.D. Iowa 2004) .

(n49)Footnote 48. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(D).

(n50)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(A); see § 15.02[2][b][i], below.

(n51)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B), (C); see § 15.02[2][b][ii], [iii], below.

(n52)Footnote 3. See Metavante Corp. v. Emigrant Sav. Bank, 619 F.3d 748, 762 (7th Cir. 2010) ; Brandon v. Maywood, 179 F. Supp. 2d 847, 860 (N.D. Ill. 2001) .

(n53)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(E); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e), discussed in § 15.06[1][b].

(n54)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Evid. 702, 703, 705.

(n55)Footnote 6. Wilburn v. Maritrans GP Inc., 139 F.3d 350, 353-354 (3rd Cir. 1998) .

(n56)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B); see Meyers v. AMTRAK, 619 F.3d 729, 734 (7th Cir. 2010) (consequence of non-compliance with Rule 26(a)(2)(B) is exclusion of expert's testimony unless failure was substantially justified).

(n57)Footnote 8. Innogenetics, N.V. v. Abbott Labs., 512 F.3d 1363, 1375 (Fed. Cir. 2008) ; Smith v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 164 F.R.D. 49, 56 (S.D.W. Va. 1995) .

(n58)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(C); Watson v. United States, 485 F.3d 1100, 1107 (10th Cir. 2007) ; see also § 15.02[2][b][iii], below.

(n59)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B); see § 15.02[2][b][i], above.

(n60)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B)(i).

(n61)Footnote 12. Metavante Corp. v. Emigrant Sav. Bank, 619 F.3d 748, 762 (7th Cir. 2010) .

(n62)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B)(ii).

(n63)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B)(ii), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments.

(n64)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B)(iii).

(n65)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B)(iv).

(n66)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B)(v).

(n67)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B)(vi).

(n68)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B); see § 15.02[2][b][ii], above.

(n69)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(C)(i).

(n70)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(C)(ii).

(n71)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(C), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments.

(n72)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(C).

(n73)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(D)(i).

(n74)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(D)(ii).

(n75)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n76)Footnote 27. Design Strategy, Inc. v. Davis, 469 F.3d 284, 297 (2d Cir. 2006) (imposition of exclusion or other sanction is discretionary).

(n77)Footnote 28. Trilogy Communications, Inc. v. Times Fiber Communications, Inc., 109 F.3d 739, 744 (Fed. Cir. 1997) .

(n78)Footnote 29. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(2).

(n79)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1); Corwin v. Walt Disney World Co., 475 F.3d 1239, 1252 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n80)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A).

(n81)Footnote 2. See [2], above.

(n82)Footnote 3. See [3], above.

(n83)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A).

(n84)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3); see [c], below (required timing on pretrial disclosures).

(n85)Footnote 6. DeBiasio v. Illinois Cent. R.R., 52 F.3d 678, 686 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n86)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A)(i).

(n87)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n88)Footnote 9. Chapple v. Alabama, 174 F.R.D. 698, 701 (M.D. Ala. 1997) ; see Roe v. Nevada, 621 F. Supp. 2d 1039, 1060 (D. Nev. 2007) .

(n89)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n90)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A)(ii).

(n91)Footnote 12. See Little v. Mitsubishi Motors N. Am., Inc., 514 F.3d 699, 702 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n92)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n93)Footnote 14. Little v. Mitsubishi Motors N. Am., Inc., 514 F.3d 699, 702 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n94)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A)(iii).

(n95)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n96)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n97)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(B); see Trafton v. Sunbury Primary Care, P.A., 689 F. Supp. 2d 198, 205 (D. Me. 2010) (time limit also applies to obligation to supplement).

(n98)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n99)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3); see Fed. R. Evid. 402, 403.

(n100)Footnote 21. D'Onofrio v. Sfx Sports Group, Inc., 247 F.R.D. 43, 53 (D.D.C. 2008) .

(n101)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(4).

(n102)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A).

(n103)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A), 26(a)(2)(A).

(n104)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n105)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)(A); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(A) (duty to supplement disclosures).

(n106)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n107)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n108)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(A)-(C).

(n109)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e).

(n110)Footnote 5. See Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n111)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e).

(n112)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments; see Arista Records LLC v. Usenet.com, Inc., 608 F. Supp. 2d 409, 432 n.31 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (among factors that bear on party's good faith in routine operation of information system are any steps party took to comply with agreement requiring preservation of specific electronically stored information).

(n113)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.03

§ 15.03 Scope and Limits of Discovery

[1] Information Requested Must Be Relevant n*

[a] Liberal Standard of Relevance

The parties to an action may generally obtain discovery of any information that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party. n1 Whether an item is relevant for discovery purposes depends on the subject matter of the action. Relevance for discovery purposes is broadly and liberally construed n2 in order to further the purposes of discovery, which are to provide parties with information essential to the proper litigation of all relevant facts, to eliminate surprise, and to promote settlement. n3 Therefore, courts will resolve any doubt about relevancy in favor of permitting discovery. n4 Thus, trial courts exercise considerable discretion in handling discovery matters, and a district court's decision to permit or deny discovery is reviewable only for an abuse of discretion. Although it is rare for an appellate court to overturn a district court's decision to allow discovery, the appellate court will reverse when the requested material is not relevant to the issues or parties in the case. n5

[b] Information Need Not Be Admissible in Evidence

An important principle of civil discovery under the federal rules is that relevant information need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n6 Furthermore, because of the broad scope of discovery under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the scope of examination permitted under Rule 26(b) is broader than that permitted at trial. n7 The rule permitting discovery of information inadmissible at trial has been broadly construed to include almost any matter that will assist the examining party to discover admissible evidence. n8 For example, inadmissible hearsay evidence is discoverable if it will likely lead to discovery of admissible evidence. n9 On the other hand, if there is no reasonable likelihood that allowing discovery of documents or other information will lead to discovery of evidence relevant to the underlying action, it is not discoverable. n10

[c] Pleadings Are Guide to Relevance But Are Not Determinative

Under the federal rules of "notice pleading," pleadings are extremely skeletal factual statements which control the boundaries of the claims and defenses in a case. Discovery is also important in determining the claims and defenses that will be tried, as well as in discovering factual evidence concerning those claims and defenses. Therefore, the pleadings may be used as a guide to determine whether particular requested items are relevant to a claim or defense of any party, but are not determinative because of their general nature and because discovery may occur before full development and narrowing of the claims and defenses by the court and party has occurred. n11 When, for example, particular issues have been narrowed in a case, discovery not relevant to those issues may be refused. n12 Similarly, once a claim or defense of any party has been disposed of, a party may not discover information concerning the matter, n13 and a court may deny discovery of matters that are relevant only to claims or defenses that have been stricken, or to events that occurred before an applicable limitations period, unless the information sought is otherwise relevant to issues in the case. n14

[d] Any Party to Action May Obtain Information Relevant to Claim or Defense of Any Party

Any party may obtain discovery regarding any matter that is not privileged that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party. n15 This means that discovery requests do not have to relate to the requesting party's claim, but may relate to that party's defense, or to the claim or defense of another party. n16 Furthermore a party may obtain discovery relating to a claim even if that party is not directly involved in that particular claim, provided that the requested items are otherwise discoverable. n17 For example, a third-party defendant may seek discovery from the plaintiff even though the plaintiff has not asserted a claim against the third-party defendant. n18

Any party is also entitled to obtain discovery on foundational matters; for example, a challenge to a court's subject matter jurisdiction is considered a defense for which discovery may be obtained. n19 Similarly, discovery may be used to obtain information relating to the court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over the defendant, n20 or facts relating to venue. n21

[e] Party Opposing Discovery Has Burden to Show Lack of Relevance

Due to the liberal standard of relevance, the party resisting discovery generally has the burden of showing that the requested information is not relevant. n22 However, this burden may shift depending on the nature of the action or from whom the information is requested. n23 Furthermore, a person's status as a nonparty may be considered in weighing the burdens imposed by discovery. When a nonparty resists discovery, the standard of relevance is not as liberal as for parties. n24

[f] Good Cause to Discover Any Matter Relevant to Subject Matter of Action

On a showing of good cause, the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action, rather than merely relevant to a particular claim or defense. n25 Thus, when there is an objection to a discovery request on the ground that it goes beyond material relevant to the parties' claims and defenses, the court must (1) determine whether the request does exceed the bounds of the claims and defenses and, if so, (2) ascertain whether there is good cause to permit the discovery, provided that the material sought is relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Under this test, "good cause" means that the information requested is necessar y for the achievement of justice and a fair trial. n26 However, the moving party's burden of obtaining discovery beyond that directly pertinent to a particular claim or defense in the suit appears not be a heavy burden, because the good cause standard warranting broader discovery is meant to be flexible. n27

[2] Discovery to Determine Existence of Documents and Other Tangible Things

A party may use discovery to determine from other parties the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any books, documents, or other tangible things. n1 Thus, a party may discover the existence and location of books, documents, or other tangible things, even though the party is not entitled to discover the contents of the documents. n2 This provision permits discovery regarding books, documents, or other tangible things that would otherwise be inadmissible at trial. n3 For example, a party may discover whether certain documents exist that were prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial, even though production is barred from discovery by the work product rule. n4 This provision parallels the requirement that each party, as part of their initial disclosure, must provide a copy of, or a description by category and location of, all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things in the possession, custody, or control of the party that the party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless the use would be solely for impeachment. n5

[3] Discovery to Determine Identity and Location of Persons With Knowledge

A party may obtain discovery from another party of the identity and location of persons having knowledge of any discoverable matter. n1 This provision parallels the automatic disclosure requirement which mandates voluntary disclosure of the identity and location of persons likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses. n2 With respect to claims of privilege, the focus is on whether the items that are discoverable are privileged, and not whether the person who has knowledge has a privileged relationship with an attorney or party. Such a privileged relationship with a person with knowledge may not serve as the basis to withhold the identity of the person with knowledge. n3

The usual discovery limitations apply to this type of discovery, n4 and a party need not provide the identity and location of persons if the discovery request is cumulative or duplicative or obtainable from some other source, the requesting party has had other opportunity to obtain the information sought, or if answering the request would be unduly burdensome or expensive. n5 Similarly, a party need not provide information about a person with discoverable information if the party or attorney does not know the name, address, or phone number of the person with such knowledge. n6

[4] Limitation of Discovery Related to Experts n*

[a] Expert Expected to Testify at Trial

Any party may depose any expert witness who is expected to testify at trial. However, if a report is required from the expert witness under the discovery rules, n1 the deposition may not be conducted until after the report is provided. n2 When a party discloses documents or information to a testifying expert in connection with his or her testimony, those documents or information are discoverable by the opposing party, whether or not the expert relies on the documents or information in preparing the report; thus, the attorney-client privilege and any work product protection are waived by disclosure of confidential communications to expert witnesses. n3

[b] Trial Preparation Protection for Drafts of Expert Reports or Disclosures

A 2010 amendment to the Rules adds a provision specifically stating that n4 the trial preparation protection of Rules 26(b)(3)(A) and (B) n5 also protect drafts of any expert report required under Rule 26(a)(2)(B) n6 and any expert disclosure required under Rule 26(a)(2)(C). n7

This protection applies regardless of the form in which the draft is recorded, such as in hard copy or electronic digital storage on a disk or tape. n8 It also applies whether the draft is of an original or a supplemental submission. n9

[c] Protection of Communications Between Expert and Attorney

A 2010 amendment to the Rules adds a provision specifically stating that n10 the trial preparation protection of Rules 26(b)(3)(A) and (B) n11 also protect communications between any party's attorney and any witness required to provide an expert report required under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), n12 This protection applies regardless of the form in which the communication is made, n13 whether oral, written, electronic, or other form. This rule provision has been promulgated to protect counsel's work product and ensure that attorneys can interact with retained experts without fear of exposing those communications to searching discovery. The protection is limited to communications between an expert witness required to provide a report under Rule 26(a)(2)(B) and the attorney for the party on whose behalf the witness will be testifying, including any "preliminary" expert opinions. Protected "communications" include those between the party's attorney and assistants of the expert witness. Also, the rule does not exclude protection under other doctrines, such as privilege or independent development of the work-product doctrine. n14

However, there are three specific exceptions to this communication protection; the following three communications are not protected:

1. Any communication which relates to compensation for the expert's study or testimony. n15 The purpose of this exception is to permit full inquiry into potential sources of bias. Consequently, any communications about additional benefits to the expert, such as further work in the event of a successful result in the present case, are not protected, and neither are communications about compensation for work done by a person or organization associated with the expert. n16

2. Any communication which identifies facts or data that the party's attorney provided and that the expert considered in forming the opinions to be expressed. n17 This exception applies only to communications identifying the facts or data provided by counsel; further communications about the potential relevance of the facts or data are protected. n18

3. Any communication which identifies any assumptions that the party's attorney provided and that the expert relied on in forming the opinions to be expressed. n19 For example, the party's attorney may require the expert to assume the truth of certain testimony or evidence, or the correctness of another expert's conclusions. This exception is limited to those assumptions that the expert actually did rely on in forming the opinions to be expressed. n20

Under the amended rule, discovery regarding attorney and expert communications on subjects not included in these three exceptions in Rule 26(b)(4)(C) is permitted only in limited circumstances and by court order. A party seeking such discovery must make the showing specified in Rule 26(b)(3)(A)(ii), which requires that the party has a substantial need for the discovery and cannot obtain the substantial equivalent without undue hardship. n21

[d] Non-Testifying Expert Employed Only for Trial Preparation

A party may not generally use either interrogatories or depositions to discover facts known or opinions held by an expert that is not expected to be called as a witness but been specially retained by a party in anticipation of litigation or preparation for trial. n22 An expert is considered hired in anticipation of litigation if there is more than a remote possibility of litigation, even if a lawsuit has not actually been filed at the time of the hiring. n23 Discovery may be made regarding such an expert only under the following two circumstances:

1. As provided in Rule 35(b), n24 regarding reports on the physical and mental examinations of persons. n25

2. If the party requesting discovery shows exceptional circumstances under which it is impracticable for the party to obtain facts or opinions on the same subject by other means. n26 The party seeking discovery has a heavy burden of proving that the required exceptional circumstances exist. n27

The purpose of these restrictive provisions is to prevent a party from replacing the work of its own experts with that of its opponent, n28 and the provision is not applicable when the opposition party has allowed discovery of its expert without objection. n29 To trigger the restrictions, the party claiming "privilege" pursuant to Rule 26(b)(4)(B) has the burden to establish that the materials were prepared by a non-testimonial expert retained in anticipation of trial, and when that burden is met, the party requesting discovery has the burden to prove waiver of the privilege. n30

[e] Payment of Discovery Related Fees of Expert

Unless manifest injustice would result, the court will require the party seeking discovery to pay the expert a reasonable fee for the time spent in responding to any discovery demands. n31 The purpose of this provision is to calibrate the fee so that the parties will not be hampered in efforts to hire quality experts, while opposing parties will not be burdened by unfairly high fees preventing feasible discovery and resulting in windfalls to the expert. n32 "Reasonable fees" do not include those expenses that could have been avoided by the party that is responding to the expert discovery request. n33 In determining the reasonableness of a requested fee, the court should consider: the expert's area of expertise; the education and training required to provide the expertise that is sought; the prevailing rates for other comparably respected experts; the nature, quality and complexity of the information provided by the expert; the cost of living in the applicable geographic area; and any other factor that may assist the court in achieving the proper balance of interests implicated by Rule 26. n34

In situations in which a party is permitted to discover facts known or opinions held by a non-testifying expert employed only for trial preparation, n35 the court may require the party seeking discovery to pay the other party a fair portion of the cost of obtaining such discovery. n36

[5] Court May Alter Limitations on Discovery n*

[a] Limitations on Depositions, Interrogatories, or Requests for Admission

The Federal Rules give specific authority to the court to alter the limits specified in the Federal Rules on the number of depositions, on the length of time of oral depositions under Rule 30, and the number of interrogatories. The court also has broad authority by order or local rule to limit the number of requests for admission under Rule 36. n1 The purpose for providing the court with this broad authority is to enable the court to prevent the need for unnecessary and costly discovery, and accomplish the other goals of discovery to narrow the issues and streamline the presentation of evidence at trial. n2

[b] Limitations on Discovery of Electronically Stored Information

A responding party need not provide discovery of electronically stored information from sources that the party identifies as not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. However, if the requesting party moves to compel discovery or for a protective order to obtain that information, the responding party must show that the information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. n3 If that showing is made, the court may still order discovery from such sources if the requesting party shows good cause, considering the factors allowing limitation on discovery under Rule 26(b)(2)(C), n4 as stated in [c], below. The court may specify conditions for the discovery of such electronically stored information. n5

Before a motion to compel or protective order is made, the parties must confer to determine whether they can agree on the parameters of the discovery of electronically stored information, n6 which includes, but is not limited to, items such as data files, program files, backup and archival tapes, cache files, temporary files, system history files, voice mail messages and files, backup voice mail files, e-mail messages and files, backup e-mail files, deleted e-mails, and web site information. n7 If the parties cannot resolve the scope of electronically stored discovery, and the court must decide, the responding party must show that the identified sources of such information are not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost, based on the circumstances of the case, and the particular information systems involved. n8

[c] Court Required to Limit Unnecessary Discovery

There are four circumstances in which the court must limit the frequency or extent of use of the discovery methods otherwise permitted under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. In these circumstances, the court after reasonable notice must act to limit discovery on its own initiative and order, or pursuant to a motion for a protective order: n9

1. If the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, n10 considering the nature of the request. A court generally will not limit discovery simply because it may be slightly cumulative and duplicative. n11

2. If the discovery sought is available from another source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive. n12 For example, the court may limit discovery if the information is equally accessible to each party from a public source. n13 This analysis requires a determination as to whether the information should be discovered through the requesting party's chosen discovery source and discovery method. n14

3. If the party seeking discovery has already had ample opportunity to discover the information sought. n15 For example, the court may deny discovery of information from a third-party individual when the requesting party had prior opportunity to discover testimony from witnesses that were available to the requesting party. n16

4. If the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues. n17 This provision operates as a "proportionality test" n18 or "balancing test" which is designed to protect parties from unduly burdensome or expensive discovery requests. n19 Although the court may limit discovery on its own initiative, n20 the responding party may establish undue burden or expense by providing detailed affidavits or other evidence that illustrates the extent of the burden or expense. n21

[6] Party Not Permitted to Discover Privileged Information n*

[a] Party Ordinarily Precluded from Discovery of Privileged Information

Parties may not generally obtain discovery of privileged information. n1 The term "privilege," as used in the discovery rules, refers to the same matter as evidentiary privilege, n2 and the scope of privilege at the discovery stage of an action is the same as at the trial. n3 A "civil discovery privilege" is an exception to the ordinary rules of discovery to protect confidentiality based on a special relationship, such as an attorney-client communication. n4 For a discussion of the particular types of privilege, see [c] through [g], below.

There are two situations in which a party may make a claim of privilege or protection of trial-preparation materials. First, when a party wants to withhold information otherwise discoverable by claiming that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial-preparation material, the party must make the claim expressly and must describe the privileged or protected items in a manner that will reveal the nature of the privilege. n5 Second a party may claim privilege or trial-preparation protection in items already produced to another party by expressly notifying the other party of the claim and the basis of the claim. The receiving party must protect and return the documents, or have the court resolve the privilege or trial-preparation protection claim. n6

Because it is an exception to the ordinary rules, the doctrine of privilege is narrowly construed, in contrast to the doctrine of relevance, which is broadly construed. n7 Therefore, the burden of establishing that a privilege exists is on the party claiming the privilege. n8 The burden of establishing any exception to the claimed privilege then shifts to the party claiming the exception. n9 A party must support its assertion of privilege, and a blanket refusal to participate in discovery on the basis of a claimed privilege is not acceptable. n10 Rather, a party must make a claim of privilege at specific questions or documents, so that the trial court has a basis to rule on the privilege claim. n11

[b] State or Federal Law May Control Privileges

For any claim or defense governed by state law, any objections based on privilege related to that state law claim or defense are also governed by state law. n12 Thus, for diversity cases in federal court in which only state claims and defenses have been raised, all assertions of privilege are governed by state law. n13 If an action contains both federal question claims and state-law diversity claims, any asserted privileges relating to evidence relevant to both the state and federal claims are governed by federal common law. Similarly, in cases in which jurisdiction is based both on the federal common law and on diversity of citizenship state-law claims, federal common law controls any claims of privilege with respect to evidence relevant to both sets of claims. n14

[c] Attorney-Client Privilege

The federal common law recognizes an attorney-client privilege, which protects from discovery any communication from a client to an attorney for the purpose of obtaining legal advice, provided that the communication was intended to be confidential. n15 The purpose of the attorney-client privilege is to promote complete and open communication between attorneys and their clients by assuring clients that their disclosures will be held in confidence, n16 which in turn facilitates the proper functioning of the adversary system. n17 Under the doctrine, no distinction is drawn between communications made by the client to the attorney and those made by the attorney to the client, provided that the communications are for the purpose of securing legal advice. n18 Also, corporate in-house counsel are treated in the same manner as counsel retained from the outside. n19 The attorney-client privilege extends to consultations between attorneys and their prospective clients, even if the attorney decides not to take the case, or the client decides not to retain the attorney. n20

Another important aspect of the doctrine is that only the communication itself is privileged; the underlying facts, as well as the factual circumstances surrounding the attorney-client relationship, are discoverable. n21 Thus, the privilege does not extend to the fact of consultation, or to the identity of the client or the attorney. n22

The United States Supreme Court has held that the attorney-client privilege survives the client's death, based on the purposes of the privilege. The court noted that there are weighty reasons that favor the posthumous application of the attorney-client privilege. Knowing that communications will remain confidential even after death encourages the client to communicate fully and openly with counsel. Without assurance of the privilege's posthumous application, the client may very well not have made disclosures of these matters to his or her attorney at all. n23

The burden of establishing the attorney-client privilege is on the party asserting it. n24 Furthermore, when a privilege is claimed and the opponent alleges that it has been lost through disclosure, the burden of proof is on the claimant to show nondisclosure whenever that is material to the disposition of the claim. n25

[d] Other Privileges Arising from Professional Consultations

The federal courts recognize a psychotherapist-patient privilege. This privilege protects from compelled disclosure confidential communications between a licensed psychiatrist or psychologist and a patient made in the course of diagnosis or treatment. It also extends to confidential communications with licensed social workers in the course of psychotherapy. n26

Federal common law also recognizes a privilege between ordained clergy and their penitents, which protects confidential communications from discovery. n27 The privilege is restricted to confidential communications, including confessions, of a person seeking spiritual rehabilitation or guidance. Like the attorney-client and the psychotherapist-patient privileges, the clergy-penitent privilege is rooted in the imperative need for confidence and trust to preserve the relationship. n28 In federal cases in which a claim or defense is governed by state law, any claims of privilege pertaining to the state claim or defense are also governed by state law, and some states recognize a broader clergy-penitent privilege than that recognized under federal common law. n29

In contrast to the specific federal privilege for communications between psychotherapist and patient, federal courts do not recognize a general federal privilege between a physician and patient. n30 There is also no general accountant-client privilege recognized under federal statute or federal common law. n31 Furthermore, there is no federal banker-client privilege recognized under federal statute or federal common law, n32 nor does federal common law recognize a stockbroker-client privilege. n33 However, in federal cases in which a claim or defense is governed by state law, an asserted privilege pertaining to the state claim or defense are also governed by state law. Therefore, a state-law privilege may be recognized with respect to these professional relationships, provided that the substantive claim involved is not based on federal law. n34

[e] Privilege for Marital Communications

Federal courts recognize a privilege for confidential marital communications. n35 The marital communications privilege prohibits one spouse from testifying about communications with the other spouse made in confidence during their marriage. The marital communications privilege applies in both civil and criminal cases, is held by the non-testifying spouse, and survives the termination of the marital relationship, but may be waived by disclosure by the person claiming the privilege. In the context of discovery, the marital communications privilege may be asserted against the production of information when four prerequisites have been met: (1) there must have been a communication, (2) there must have been a valid marriage at the time of the communication, (3) the communication must have been made in confidence, and (4) the privilege must not have been waived. n36

[f] Constitutional Privilege Against Self-Incrimination

The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides that no person may be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself or herself. n37 The privilege against self-incrimination may also be applicable in a civil context, because courts may not compel a civil deponent to testify over a valid assertion of the Fifth Amendment privilege absent a grant of immunity. n38 To assert the privilege against self-incrimination in a civil context, the person need only demonstrate a continuing possibility of criminal prosecution, even if the possibility is remote. n39 On the other hand, the privilege is not available, unless the witness provides some credible reason why a discovery response would pose a real danger of incrimination. n40 Furthermore, any claim of privilege against self-incrimination must be directed to specific questions or documents. Thus, a deponent must appear for deposition, but may object to particular questions. n41 Only natural individuals may claim the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. Thus, the privilege may not be claimed by a corporation, unincorporated association, partnership, labor union, or other joint entity. n42

[g] Government Privileges

In the same manner as for other privileges, federal courts may prevent or restrict discovery when government privileges, such as the deliberative process privilege or state secrets privilege, are implicated by discovery requests. n43 The rule regarding discovery related to government privileges is a result of the axiom that general discovery rules apply to the United States as a party in the same manner that they apply to all other parties. n44 Therefore, the government must claim privileges in the same manner as any other party, has the burden of establishing the existence of the privilege, and must assert the privilege in the same way procedurally as would any other party. n45 However, because of the nature of government secrets, the Supreme Court has endorsed the practice of holding in camera proceedings for determining whether the government may withhold documents from discovery based on a claimed government privilege. n46

There are several privileges unique to the United States government that don't exist for other parties. These include:

1. State secrets. n47 The state secrets privilege is designed to protect against impairment of the nation's defense capabilities, disclosure of intelligence gathering methods or capabilities, and disruption of diplomatic relations with foreign governments. The state secrets privilege may be claimed solely for the benefit of the government; it may neither be claimed nor waived by a private party. n48

2. A qualified privilege for official information or records. The court determines whether this privilege exists based on a balancing of the party's need for the information against the government's interest in secrecy. In applying the balancing test, courts must examine the importance of the documents to the party's claim or defense, as well as any alternative sources for the information sought. n49

3. A qualified privilege for deliberative processes. n50 The deliberative process privilege protects communications that are part of the decision making process of a government agency. communications made as a part of an agency determination are protected from disclosure. n51

4. A qualified executive privilege, in which the president may protect official communications. n52

5. Federal statutory privileges, such as the statute prohibiting disclosure of federal tax return information; n53 and the statute providing that census reports are immune from legal process. n54

6. Other privileges, including an informer's privilege, a law enforcement evidentiary privilege, and a confidential report privilege. n55

[h] Waived Privilege Ordinarily Subjects Material to Discovery

If a party has waived a privilege, the party is not entitled to withhold it from discovery. n56 Most privileges n57 are waived either by disclosure of the confidential communication that is the basis of the privilege, n58 or by putting the subject matter of the privileged communication in issue on a claim or defense. n59

However, because of the complexity and volume of discovery in modern litigation, and discovery demands related to electronic information, an ever increasing number of federal courts have held that not every disclosure of information is a waiver of privilege. Most courts now apply a reasonableness test regarding waiver of a disclosure if the disclosure was inadvertent. n60 Under this test, the court may rule that a waiver of a privilege has not occurred by an inadvertent disclosure after considering: (1) the reasonableness of precautions taken to prevent disclosure; (2) the amount of time taken to remedy the error; (3) the scope of discovery; (4) the extent of the disclosure; and (5) the overriding issue of fairness. n61

Additionally, Congress has enacted Federal Rule of Evidence 502 n62 which limits the waiver consequences of certain disclosures of information protected by the attorney-client privilege. Specifically, Evidence Rule 502 establishes standards to determine whether a waiver of material protected by the attorney-client privilege occurs in two situations, when the waiver has been made in a federal context. n63

First, if a person does waive attorney-client privileged material by disclosure, that waiver generally does not apply to undisclosed material, even if the undisclosed material concerns the same subject matter. n64 Second, the rule provides that protection for attorney-client material contained in an inadvertent disclosure is not waived, provided that the disclosing party had reasonably attempted to prevent the disclosure, and reasonably attempted to correct the mistaken disclosure. n65 In its determination whether the party has taken reasonable steps under Rule 502 to prevent disclosure or correct the disclosure, courts have looked to inadvertent disclosure tests from their own jurisdictions. n66

For a complete discussion of waiver by disclosure under Rule 502, see [8], below.

[7] Party Not Allowed to Discover Work Product n*

[a] Scope of Work Product Doctrine

The federal work product doctrine protects trial preparation materials made by one party from discovery by other parties. n1 The doctrine provides that a party may not obtain discovery of documents or other tangible things prepared in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for another party or that other party's representative, unless: (1) they are otherwise discoverable under Rule 26(b)(1); n2 and (2) the party shows that it has substantial need for the materials to prepare its case and cannot, without undue hardship, obtain their substantial equivalent by other means. n3 If the court orders the discovery of work product materials after the party has made this required showing, the court must nevertheless protect to the extent possible against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation (known as "core work product"). n4 A federal court applies only federal law to work product claims, even in diversity cases, n5 whereas other types of privileges are governed by state law in diversity cases. n6

There is no precise definition of what constitutes a "document or other tangible thing" within the meaning of the work product doctrine, other than that the item was prepared in anticipation of the litigation between the parties to the current litigation. n7 Thus, documents protected under the doctrine include documents, records, reports, exhibits, and similar items, n8 such as letters n9 and surveillance tapes. n10 If a claim of work product applies to only a portion of a document or other matter containing the information that is the subject matter of the discovery request, the court may order redaction of the work product portions. n11 In this way, the opposition party receives only those portions of the item that are not protected by work product. n12

The work product privilege regarding a party's attorney protects both opinion and factual work product from discovery. n13 For example, an attorney's selection and compilation of a group of documents out of thousands gathered for litigation may fall within the purview of work product protection if it reveals the attorney's thought processes. n14 However, work product protection for the organization or selection of documents depends on the existence of a real, rather than speculative, concern that counsel's thought processes might be revealed. n15

The primary purpose of the work product doctrine is to establish a zone of privacy for strategic litigation planning and to prevent one party from unfairly taking advantage of an adversary's preparation. n16 Another purpose of the work product doctrine is to protect an attorney's mental processes so that the attorney can analyze and prepare for the client's case without interference from an opponent. n17 Thus, Rule 26(b)(3) attempts to strike a balance between the necessity of protecting an attorney's preparation under the adversary system, and the policy of full and open discovery underlying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n18

[b] Disclosure of Prior Statement Despite Doctrine

Regardless of the work product doctrine, a party may obtain a statement previously made by that party concerning the action or its subject matter without showing a substantial need or undue hardship. A nonparty is likewise entitled to obtain a statement previously made by that witness concerning the action or its subject matter without the required showing. n19 For purposes of Rule 26(b)(3), a "statement previously made" is either: (1) a written statement signed or otherwise adopted or approved by the person making it; n20 or (2) a stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording, or a transcript of such a recording, which is a substantially verbatim recital of an oral statement by the person making it and contemporaneously recorded. n21 Thus, for example, handwritten notes of a conversation between a prospective plaintiff and the defendant's agent, taken during the defendant's investigation of the claim, do not constitute a "statement previously made" for purposes of Rule 23(b)(3), because they have not been signed or approved by the maker, nor are they are verbatim. n22

[c] Comparison of Work Product Protection With Attorney-Client Privilege

Unlike the attorney-client privilege, n23 the work product doctrine is governed, even in diversity cases, by the uniform federal standard embodied in Rule 26(b)(3). n24 The work product doctrine is separate from and broader than the attorney-client privilege, and the law regarding third-party waiver of work product protection is completely different. While the attorney-client privilege exists to encourage the client to communicate with his lawyer, the work product protection exists to encourage an attorney to prepare effectively for litigation. n25 Thus, unlike the attorney-client privilege, the mere showing of a voluntary disclosure to a third person (which will generally suffice to show waiver of the attorney-client privilege) will not suffice in itself to prove waiver of the work product privilege. n26

[d] Items Must be Prepared in Anticipation of Litigation or for Trial

The work product doctrine applies only to documents or tangible items prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial. n27 However, litigation need not have actually commenced for the doctrine to apply. Courts have held that the anticipation of litigation must be reasonable based on the perception of the party that some past or future act or condition related to the party may precipitate litigation with another. n28 However, "anticipation of litigation" does not necessarily mean that any specific litigation assertions or claims have been made. n29 Other courts require that at the time the document is created, the party or its representative must have in mind a specific claim supported by concrete facts which would likely lead to litigation. n30

Because work product protection extends only to documents prepared in anticipation of litigation or trial, that protection does not extend to documents prepared in the regular course of a party's business. n31 The crucial factor in determining whether a document was prepared in the regular course of business or in anticipation of litigation is the party's purpose in preparing the document, or causing its preparation. n32 If there was an ordinary business purpose behind the document's preparation, it is unprotected, even if litigation was imminent. n33

[e] Protection Continues After Litigation Ends

Just as litigation need not have been commenced for work product protection to apply, a document or tangible item does not necessarily lose its protection when the litigation ends. n34 Most courts hold that a document remains protected by the work product doctrine in subsequent litigation, reasoning that the doctrine is designed to protect the attorney as much as the client, so that its application should not depend solely on how closely related the subsequent litigation is to the parties or issues involved in the prior case. n35

However, other courts will not extend the doctrine to subsequent litigation unless there is a close relationship between the parties or issues in the subsequent litigation. n36 The Supreme Court in dicta has stated that the literal language of a Freedom of Information Provision similar to Rule 26(b)(3) protects materials prepared for any litigation or trial as long as they were prepared by or for a party to the subsequent litigation. n37

[f] Documents Must be Prepared by or for Party or Representative

The work product doctrine provides protection only for documents or things prepared by or for a party or the party's representative. n38 The Supreme Court has acknowledged that this element of Rule 26 reflects the extremely practical nature of the work product doctrine, including the fact that parties and attorneys commonly rely on investigators and experts in preparing for trial. n39 Therefore, reports prepared by agents of the party or the party's attorney may be protected by the work product doctrine, provided they are prepared in anticipation of litigation. n40

For work product purposes, the term "representative" may include inside employees of the party or attorney, or outside contractors hired only for a particular project. n41 However, a party may not attempt to shield information from discovery by hiring as a litigation "consultant" a person who might otherwise be a witness in the case. n42 Additionally, if the document is prepared for a nonparty to the litigation, work product protection does not apply if the nonparty is not a representative of a party, even if the nonparty is a party to closely related litigation. n43

[g] Doctrine Not Applicable on Certain Facts

The purpose of the work product doctrine is to protect against disclosing an attorney's strategies and legal theories regarding litigation. Consequently, the work product doctrine provides that facts related to those matters need not be disclosed. If a document is covered by work product protection, a party generally need not disclose its factual contents regarding any matters. n44 However, the opposition may obtain discovery of facts from work product provided the opposition establishes substantial need and inability to obtain the facts elsewhere. n45 Similarly, facts are not protected from disclosure merely by virtue of having been gathered by an attorney. n46

[h] Work Product Protection May be Claimed by Client or Attorney

Work product protection may be claimed either by the client or the attorney. n47 Because the work product doctrine protects only materials that were prepared in anticipation of litigation, at the time a client seeks protection of the material, the client also must be a "party." n48 The person claiming work product may be either an individual or an organization, including the government. n49

[i] Burdens Under Work Product Doctrine

[i] Party Asserting Work Product Protection

The party asserting work product protection has the burden of establishing that the doctrine applies. In order to satisfy this burden, the party must show that the materials are: n50 (1) documents and tangible things; n51 (2) prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial; n52 and (3) prepared by or for the party or by or for that party's representative. n53 A party may not rely on a conclusory assertion of the work product doctrine to object to discovery requests, because that party has a heavy burden to establish the applicability of the doctrine. n54 Furthermore, a party may not utilize a blanket assertion of the work product doctrine to object to multiple discovery requests, because the party asserting the doctrine must generally establish applicability for each request that calls for production of work product. n55 Rather, the party asserting the rule must establish that each objectionable request calls for production of work product. If a party believes that an entire request for production would be prohibited by the work product doctrine, the party should seek a pre-discovery protective order from the district court. n56

[ii] Party Seeking Disclosure

Once a party claiming protection under the work product doctrine establishes that the doctrine applies, n57 the party seeking discovery has the burden to establish that (1) the items are otherwise discoverable, n58 (2) the party has substantial need of the materials in preparation of the party's case, and (3) the party is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means. n59

Even when the proponent of discovery has established these three elements, the court still must protect against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation, which are know as "core work product." n60 Accordingly, the substantial need and undue hardship test applies only to ordinary or fact work product, i.e., documents prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial, which do not contain the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation. n61

In making a determination of whether the requesting party has met the substantial need/undue burden test, the court will consider if any alternative means of acquiring the information are less intrusive to the attorney's work, and whether the information can be obtained in other ways. n62 A party may meet its burden to show a substantial need for material otherwise protected by the work product doctrine by establishing that the facts contained in the requested documents are essential elements of the requesting party's prima facie case. n63 A party may show undue hardship by showing impossibility, for example, when the only available witness can no longer recall the statements reflected in the documents. n64

[j] Waiver of Work Product Protection

A party may waive protection of the work product doctrine, n65 by, for example, failing to assert it in a timely manner.

n66 With respect to waiver by disclosure, however, the different policies behind the work product doctrine and the attorney-client privilege lead to different rules of waiver. Unlike the attorney-client privilege, which is designed to protect the client's confidences, the work product doctrine is designed to protect the adversary process. n67 Therefore, not every disclosure of work product waives the doctrine. n68 For example, a party does not waive work product protection by providing documents to those assisting in trial preparation. n69

In general, a party does make a waiver of work product protection for by disclosing the document to a third party, when the disclosure is intentional and, at the time of disclosure, there was a substantial likelihood that the material could be disclosed to an adversary. n70 However, if the disclosure to the third party is inadvertent, the court will consider (1) whether the party seeking discovery of the documents was misled by the disclosure, or relied on the disclosure to its detriment, (2) the reasonableness of the precautions the party claiming the privilege took to prevent accidental disclosure, (3) the amount of time it took the disclosing party to notice its error, and (4) the overriding interest of fairness and justice. n71

If information subject to a claim of protection as work product is actually produced in discovery, the protection is not necessarily lost or waived. Under Rule 26(b)(5)(B), the party claiming work product protection may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified, a party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and may not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved. If the claim of trial-preparation material is contested, the party that received the information may present the matter to the court for determination. n72

When a party asserts a work product claim as to material that has already been produced, the court will apply the usual principles developed for determining whether waiver resulted from an inadvertent disclosure, as discussed in the previous paragraph. In other words, Rule 26(b)(5)(B) does not control the determination of whether the work product doctrine has been waived for particular disclosed material. Rather, once a court has determined there is no waiver for inadvertently disclosed privileged material, the rule specifies a detailed procedure for parties to retrieve that material without allowing its use. n73

A new Federal Rule of Evidence enacted by Congress n74 also limits the waiver consequences of certain disclosures of information protected by the work product doctrine. n75 In particular, Evidence Rule 502 establishes standards to determine whether a waiver of protected material occurs in two situations when the waiver has been made in a federal context. n76 First, if a disclosure and waiver is made of particular material, that waiver generally does not apply to undisclosed material, even if the undisclosed material concerns the same subject matter. n77 Second, the rule provides that protection for material contained in an inadvertent disclosure is not waived, provided that the disclosing party had reasonably attempted to prevent the disclosure, and attempted to correct the mistake. n78 Courts may refer to prior case law in their own jurisdictions to determine what are "reasonable steps." Thus, Rule 502 is actually a set of non-determinative guidelines that vary from case to case. n79

For a complete discussion of waiver by disclosure under Rule 502, see [8], below.

A party may not use the work product doctrine as both a sword and a shield. n80 This means that a party impliedly waives work product protection if it places the substance of the documents for which the protection is claimed at issue, or uses the substance of the documents in testimony. n81

[8] Limitations on Waiver by Disclosure of Attorney-Client Privilege and Work Product Protection n*

[a] Scope of Limitations on Waiver

To ensure the predictability of the effects of waiver of attorney-client privilege and work product protection by disclosure, n1 and to protect against the forfeiture of privilege when a disclosure in discovery is the result of an innocent mistake, n2 Congress has enacted Federal Rule of Evidence 502. n3 Rule 502 controls the waiver effect for disclosures of materials subject to either to the attorney-client privilege n4 or the doctrine of protected work product. n5 Essentially, Rule 502 has two provisions that apply related to disclosures made in a federal proceeding or to a federal office or agency. n6 First, if a person does waive by disclosure, that waiver generally does not apply to undisclosed material, even if the undisclosed material concerns the same subject matter. n7 Second, the rule provides that protection for material contained in an inadvertent disclosure is not waived, provided that the disclosing party had reasonably attempted to prevent the disclosure, and attempted to correct the mistake. n8

[b] Purpose of Limitations on Waiver

Congress enacted Federal Rule of Evidence 502 n9 for several purposes: n10 (1) to provide a predictable, uniform set of standards under which parties can determine the consequences of a disclosure of information protected by either the attorney-client privilege or the work product doctrine; (2) to resolve court disputes about the effect of inadvertent disclosures and subject matter waiver; and (3) to control exorbitant litigation costs that have been recently brought about by the necessity for litigants to protect against waiver resulting from any disclosure, however innocent or minimal, especially in cases involving electronic discovery. n11

[c] Proceedings Which May Create Limitations on Waiver

The limitations on waiver under Rule 502 are generally created when a disclosure of attorney-client or work product is made in a federal proceeding or to a federal office or agency. n12

Additionally, a limitation on waiver may be created in a state court. Thus, if a disclosure is made in a state proceeding, and is not the subject of a state court order concerning waiver, the disclosure does not operate as a waiver in a federal proceeding if either the disclosure would not be a waiver under Rule 502 if it had been made in a federal proceeding, n13 or the disclosure is not a waiver according to the law of the state where the disclosure occurred. n14 Thus, whether a waiver occurs in a state court proceeding depends on an application of that law, state or federal, that is most protective of privilege and work product. n15

[d] Subsequent Federal and State Proceedings Are Subject to Waiver Limitations

To ensure the predictability of waiver by disclosure, the rule regulates the waiver consequences of disclosure of protected information at both the federal and state levels. n16 Therefore, notwithstanding the other Federal Rules of Evidence, n17 the waiver effect of disclosure of protected material is governed by Rule 502 in both federal and state courts. n18 Furthermore, the waiver effect of Rule 502 also controls even in diversity cases, n19 where state law ordinarily applies the rule of decision. n20 The costs of discovery can be equally high for state and federal claims, and the purpose of the rule is to limit those costs in all federal proceedings, regardless of whether the claim arises under state or federal law. Consequently, this federal rule applies to state law claims brought in federal court, even in diversity cases. n21

Because Rule 502 limitations apply in all federal court proceedings, the limitations also apply in court-annexed and court-ordered arbitrations, n22 without regard to any possible contrary provisions of Rules 101 and 1101. n23

[e] Protected Material Subject to Waiver Limitations

The provisions of Rule 502 apply only to disclosure of a communication or information covered by either the attorney-client privilege or work product protection. n24 For purposes of the rule, "attorney-client privilege" means the protection that applicable substantive law provides for confidential attorney-client communications; n25 and "work product protection" means the protection that applicable substantive law provides for tangible and intangible material prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial. n26

Rule 502 does not cover waiver of other types of privilege. Furthermore, the rule only covers waivers by disclosure, and not other methods of waiver, n27 such as when a party relies on attorney advice in either a claim or defense. n28

Rule 502 only applies to waiver of the attorney-client privilege and work product protection. Rule 502 does not in any way affect the federal or state law concerning whether a particular communication or information qualifies as protected material under the attorney-client privilege or work product immunity as an initial matter; n29 that determination is made according to the applicable substantive law. n30 Furthermore, while it does establish some exceptions to waiver, the rule does not modify or add to the applicable federal or state waiver doctrine generally. n31

[f] Disclosure of Protected Matter Does Not Generally Waive Similar Undisclosed Matter

If a disclosure is made in a federal proceeding or to a federal office or agency, and that disclosure waives the attorney-client privilege or work product protection, such waiver generally does not also extend to an undisclosed communication or information in a subsequent federal or state proceeding. n32 However, such undisclosed matters are waived if all three of the following factors apply:

1. The original disclosure must have been intentional. n33 Inadvertent disclosures do not waive similar, undisclosed information. n34

2. The disclosed and undisclosed communications or information must concern the same subject matter. n35 Thus, "subject matter waiver" applies only when both the disclosed and undisclosed material cover identical topics. n36

3. Both the disclosed and undisclosed matters ought in fairness to be considered together. n37 The effect of this provision is that subject matter waiver is limited to situations in which a party intentionally puts protected information into the litigation in a selective, misleading, and unfair manner. Thus, if a party makes a selective, misleading disclosure that is unfair to the adversary, the disclosing party waives protection of undisclosed information on the same topic, and opens itself to a more complete and accurate presentation of the material. n38

[g] Waiver of Inadvertent Disclosures

[i] Disclosures Generally Waived

A voluntary disclosure of protected matters is generally deemed waived in federal court. n39 Many courts hold that there is a waiver even if the disclosure was inadvertent. n40 However, when made in a federal proceeding or to a federal office or agency, a disclosure is deemed not waived in any federal or state proceeding provided that all three of the factors listed in [ii], below, apply. n41

[ii] Three Factors Required for Nonwaiver of Inadvertent Disclosure

1. The first prerequisite for nonwaiver is that the disclosure is inadvertent. n42 An inadvertent disclosure is one that is not intentional and that is not due to gross negligence. n43 Thus, an inadvertent disclosure unintentionally occurs, for example, when a third party transfers documents or information between two parties without the knowledge of either party. n44 An inadvertent disclosure also occurs when the party makes the disclosure by mistake. n45 Whether a disclosure is inadvertent depends on the facts of each case. n46 Thus, the court should consider factors such as the total number of documents reviewed, the procedures used to review the documents before they were produced, and the actions of the producing party after discovering that the documents had been produced. n47

2. The second prerequisite to nonwaiver is that the holder of the privilege or protection took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure of the matters not waived. n48 Whether steps are reasonable depends on the circumstances of each case, and include factors such as the nature of precautions taken, any delay in correcting the error, the extent and numbers of disclosures, the scope of discovery, and fairness to the party requesting discovery. n49

3. The third prerequisite to nonwaiver is that the disclosing party promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error after the disclosure, n50 including complying with any applicable requirements of Procedure Rule 26(b)(5)(B), which mandates notification of the opposition of the claim of protection and the basis for the claim, and preservation of the disclosed information until the claim is resolved. n51 How the disclosing party discovers and rectifies the disclosure is more important than when after the inadvertent disclosure the discovery occurs. n52

Once the producing party has shown minimal compliance with the three factors in Rule 502(b) listed above, but reasonableness is in dispute, the court should proceed to an analysis of the traditional five factors considered relevant on the issue of inadvertent disclosure of privileged material. n53 These five factors are: (1) the reasonableness of the precautions taken to prevent inadvertent disclosure in view of the extent of the document production; (2) the number of inadvertent disclosures; (3) the extent of the disclosure; (4) any delay and measures taken to rectify the disclosure; and (5) whether the overriding interests of justice would or would not be served by relieving the party of its disclosure errors. n54

[h] Limitations on Waiver of Disclosures Made in State Court Proceeding

If a disclosure is made in a state proceeding and is not the subject of a state court order concerning waiver, the disclosure does not operate as a waiver in a federal proceeding if either of the following is true:

(1) The disclosure would not be a waiver under Rule 502 if it had been made in a federal proceeding; n55 or

(2) The disclosure is not a waiver under the law of the state where the disclosure occurred. n56

Thus, whether a waiver occurs in a state court proceeding depends on an application of that law, state or federal, that is most protective of privilege and work product. Such a rule controls cases when (a) a disclosure of a protected communication or information is made in a state proceeding, (b) the communication or information is offered in a subsequent federal proceeding on the ground that there was a waiver by disclosure, and (c) the state and federal laws are in conflict on the question of waiver. n57

[i] Controlling Effect of Court Order on Waiver

Both federal and state courts may on motion, or on their own initiative, order that a disclosure of documents does or does not have the effect of waiver of attorney-client or work product protection. n58 Such an order is typically used in conjunction with a confidentiality order. n59 The effect of such orders are as follows:

1. A federal court may order that a privilege or protection is not waived by disclosure connected with the litigation pending before the court. The court may make this order after it has made a determination under the requirements of Evidence Rule 502(a) n60 or 502(b) n61 that the disclosure in question has not resulted in a waiver of privilege or protection for the particular items specified in the order. n62 Such an order has the effect that the disclosure is also not a waiver in any other subsequent federal or state proceeding. n63 This provision was enacted because tailored confidentiality orders are becoming increasingly necessary to limit the costs of privilege review and retention, especially in cases involving electronic discovery; however, such orders may not be effective unless the order provides for protection outside the particular litigation in which the order is entered. n64

2. A state court may enter an order concerning waiver of protected material, and if it makes such an order, the court in federal proceedings may give effect to that order. n65 Whether the federal court must give effect to the state court order depends on both statutory law and on the principles of federalism and comity n66 under the full faith and credit statute. n67

[j] Controlling Effect of Party Agreement on Waiver

If parties have made an agreement on the effect of disclosure in a federal proceeding, that agreement is binding only on the parties to the agreement, unless a court incorporates the agreement into a court order. n68 Therefore, if parties want protection against non-parties from a finding of waiver by disclosure, they must request the court to include the agreement in an order of the court. n69 The court may on its own initiative include such an agreement in its order. n70

[9] Procedure for Asserting Claim for Protection of Material as Privileged or Work Product

[a] Withholding Otherwise Discoverable Material

A party is entitled to withhold from discovery materials that would otherwise be discoverable if the materials are privileged or constitute work product. n1 To withhold materials under a claim of privilege or work product, the party must make the claim expressly, n2 and describe the nature of the information not produced in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged or protected, will enable other parties to assess the applicability of the claim. n3 The court will overlook slight imperfections in a party's efforts to comply with this rule to protect privileges or work product materials, provided that the imperfections do not prejudice the opposition. n4 However, a conclusory or blanket assertion of privilege is insufficient to make a claim. Rather, the party must include a description and grounds for the privilege or work product claimed for each document withheld. n5 The party asserting the privilege must supply enough information to enable the court to determine whether the asserted privilege is applicable. n6

Courts almost universally require a party claiming privilege or work product to produce what is referred to as a "privilege log," which is a detailed list describing all of the items that come under the privilege or work product claim. n7 The privilege log must contain sufficient detail to permit the court to determine whether each document or communication is potentially protected from disclosure. n8 For each document or communication, the log should contain: n9 (1) a brief description or summary of the contents of the document or communication; (2) the date the document was prepared; (3) the names of the persons who prepared the document; (4) the person to whom the document was directed, or for whom it was prepared; (5) the purpose for preparing the document or communication; (6) the privilege or privileges asserted for the document or communication; and (7) how the document or communication satisfies the asserted privilege or privileges.

[b] Claiming Privilege or Work Product for Documents Already Produced

If a party has made an inadvertent disclosure of privileged or work product material, the court may nevertheless find that the protection for the material has not been waived, as discussed in [6][h], [7][j], and [8], above. If the court has found no waiver for privileged or protected material that was inadvertently disclosed, Rule 26 specifies a detailed procedure for a party to obtain the return of that material, to maintain its protection, and to prevent its use by the opposition. n10 First, the party making the claim for privilege or work product must notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. The producing party must also preserve the information until the claim is resolved. n11 The notice of a claim should be in writing unless the circumstances preclude it, such as the assertion of the claim during a deposition. n12

After being notified of a claim of privilege or work product, a receiving party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has and may not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved. Alternatively, a receiving party may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a resolution of the claim. If the receiving party disclosed the information before being notified, it must take reasonable steps to retrieve it. n13 The receiving party may move the court to determine the issues of whether the information is privileged or protected as work product, and whether the privilege or protection has been waived. n14 If it makes such a motion it must provide the court with the grounds for the privilege or protection specified in the producing party's notice, and serve all parties. n15

Attorneys should also note that the parties are required as part of their pretrial conference obligations to discuss any issues relating to assertions of privilege or protection as trial-preparation materials, n16 including whether the parties can further discovery by agreeing on procedures for asserting claims of privilege or protection after production n17 and whether to ask the court to enter an order that includes any such agreement reached by the parties. n18

[10] Discovery Implications of Freedom of Information Act n*

The Freedom of Information Act n1 is a mechanism for obtaining government documents that is entirely independent and separate from the civil litigation discovery process. Furthermore, the Act does not create any duties or privileges in addition to the ones provided by the usual civil discovery rules, n2 and the disclosure provisions of the Act were not intended to displace general civil rules of discovery. n3 However, the Act may serve as an independent source of information for use in litigation. With several exceptions, the Act provides that unless published, federal agencies must disclose and make available for public inspection and copying final opinions, including concurring and dissenting opinions and orders made in the adjudication of cases, n4 statements of policy and interpretations adopted by the agency but not published in the Federal Register, n5 administrative staff manuals and instructions to staff that affect a member of the public, n6 and copies of all records, regardless of form or format, which have been released to any person and which, because of the nature of their subject matter, the agency determines have become or are likely to become the subject of subsequent requests for substantially the same records. n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 26.41-26.46 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Herbert v. Lando, 441 U.S. 153, 177, 99 S. Ct. 1635, 60 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Coker v. Duke & Company, Inc., 177 F.R.D. 682, 685 (M.D. Ala. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Jewish War Veterans of the United States of Am., Inc. v. Gates, 506 F. Supp. 2d 30, 42 (D.D.C. 2007) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Epstein v. MCA, Inc., 54 F.3d 1422, 1423 (9th Cir. 1995) (district court abused its discretion in allowing discovery of documents that would have no bearing on merits of case).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n8)Footnote 7. Lewis v. ACB Business Services, Inc., 135 F.3d 389, 403 (6th Cir. 1998) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Mellon v. Cooper-Jarrett, Inc., 424 F.2d 499, 500-501 (6th Cir. 1970) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n10)Footnote 9. Coleman v. American Red Cross, 23 F.3d 1091, 1097 (6th Cir. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n11)Footnote 10. Food Lion, Inc. v. United Food and Commercial Workers International Union, 103 F.3d 1007, 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1997) ; see Abels v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 233 F.R.D. 645, 647 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (attenuated and vague hearsay not discoverable because it did not appear reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); *PSEG Power N.Y., Inc. v. Alberici Constructors, Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 66767, at 21 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 7, 2007) ; *ICE Corp. v. Hamilton Sundstrand Corp., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38180, at 13 (D. Kan. May 24, 2007) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Epstein v. MCA, Inc., 54 F.3d 1422, 1424 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Jones v. Derosa, 238 F.R.D. 157, 163-164 (D.N.J. 2006) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Lewis v. ACB Business Services, Inc., 135 F.3d 389, 402 (6th Cir. 1998) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n17)Footnote 16. Kerr v. United States Dist. Court, 511 F.2d. 192, 197 (9th Cir. 1975) , aff'd on other grounds, 426 U.S. 394 (1976) .

(n18)Footnote 17. *Williams v. Sprint/United Mgmt. Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 69051, at *16-19 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Fruit Growers Co-op. v. California Pie & Baking Co., 3 F.R.D. 206, 208 (E.D.N.Y. 1942) .

(n20)Footnote 19. See Kamen v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 791 F.2d 1006, 1010 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Budde v. Ling-Temco-Vought, Inc., 511 F.2d 1033, 1034 (10th Cir. 1975) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Procacci v. Sigler, 61 F.R.D. 5, 7 (D.D.C. 1973) .

(n23)Footnote 22. In re Cooper Tire & Rubber Co., 568 F.3d 1180, 1196-1197 (10th Cir. 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n24)Footnote 23. Bruno & Stillman, Inc. v. Globe Newspaper Co., 633 F.2d 583, 597 (1st Cir. 1980) (because of limited privilege attaching to confidentiality of journalistic sources in defamation action, plaintiff seeking identity of sources was required to establish relevance of requested information).

(n25)Footnote 24. Katz v. Batavia Marine & Sporting Supplies, Inc., 984 F.2d 422, 424 (Fed. Cir. 1993) .

(n26)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); see In re Sealed Case (Medical Records), 381 F.3d 1205, 1215 n.11 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n27)Footnote 26. Klein v. AIG Trading Group, Inc., 228 F.R.D. 418, 422-424 (D. Conn. 2006) .

(n28)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1), Committee Note to 2000 Amendments.

(n29)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n30)Footnote 2. Cox v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., 38 F.R.D. 396, 398 (D.S.C. 1965) .

(n31)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); see Cotter v. Prudential Fin., 238 F.R.D. 567, 571 (N.D.W. Va. 2006) , vac. as to attorney's fees, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62893 (N.D.W. Va. Jan. 5, 2007) .

(n32)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n33)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n34)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n35)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n36)Footnote 3. *Corporate Express Office Prods. v. Gamache (In re Wagar), 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90345, at *48-49 (N.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n37)Footnote 4. *Apsley v. Boeing Co., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5144, at *11-14 (D. Kan. 2007) .

(n38)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i)-(iii).

(n39)Footnote 6. Vandervest v. Wisconsin Central, Ltd., 172 F.R.D. 401, 402 (E.D. Wis. 1997) .

(n40)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.80 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n41)Footnote 1. See § 15.02[2][b][ii].

(n42)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(A).

(n43)Footnote 3. In re Pioneer Hi-Bred Intl., Inc., 238 F.3d 1370, 1375 (Fed. Cir. 2001) .

(n44)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(B).

(n45)Footnote 5. See § 15.03[7], below.

(n46)Footnote 6. See § 15.02[2][b][ii].

(n47)Footnote 7. See § 15.02[2][b][iii].

(n48)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(B).

(n49)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(B), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments.

(n50)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C).

(n51)Footnote 11. See § 15.03[7], below.

(n52)Footnote 12. See § 15.02[2][b][ii].

(n53)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C).

(n54)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments.

(n55)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C)(i).

(n56)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C)(i), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments.

(n57)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C)(ii).

(n58)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C)(ii), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments.

(n59)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C)(iii).

(n60)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C)(iii), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments.

(n61)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(C)(iii), Committee Note to 2010 Amendments; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A)(ii), see § 15.03[7][a], below.

(n62)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(D).

(n63)Footnote 23. Spearman Indus., Inc. v. St. Paul Fire &Marine Ins. Co., 128 F. Supp. 2d 1148, 1151 (N.D. Ill. 2001) .

(n64)Footnote 24. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b).

(n65)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(D)(i).

(n66)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(D)(ii).

(n67)Footnote 27. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Pure Air on the Lake Ltd. Partnership, 154 F.R.D. 202, 208-209 (N.D. Ind. 1993) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n68)Footnote 28. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Pure Air on the Lake Ltd. Partnership, 154 F.R.D. 202, 207 (N.D. Ind. 1993) .

(n69)Footnote 29. Agron v. Trustees of Columbia Univ., 176 F.R.D. 445, 449 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n70)Footnote 30. Western Resources, Inc. v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1911 (D. Kan. 2002) .

(n71)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(E)(i).

(n72)Footnote 32. Mathis v. NYNEX, 165 F.R.D. 23, 24 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n73)Footnote 33. M. T. McBrian, Inc. v. Liebert Corporation, 173 F.R.D. 491, 493 (N.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n74)Footnote 34. Goldwater v. Postmaster Gen. of the United States, 136 F.R.D. 337, 340 (D. Conn. 1991) .

(n75)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(D)(i).

(n76)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(E)(ii).

(n77)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.60 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n78)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(A).

(n79)Footnote 2. *Static Control Components, Inc. v. Lexmark Int'l, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39788, at *21-23 (E.D. Ky. 2007) .

(n80)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B).

(n81)Footnote 4. *Baker v. Gerould, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28628, at 5 (W.D.N.Y. 2008) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n82)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B).

(n83)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n84)Footnote 7. See Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n85)Footnote 8. *See Petcou v. C.H. Robinson Worldwide, Inc., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13723, at *3-5 (N.D. Ga. 2008) (responding party has burden of showing that requested electronically stored information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost.); Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n86)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n87)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n88)Footnote 11. Aramburu v. Boeing Co., 885 F. Supp. 1434, 1444 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n89)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n90)Footnote 13. *FTC v. Think All Publ, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18623, at *5-6 (E.D. Tex. 2008) .

(n91)Footnote 14. Hall v. Sullivan, 231 F.R.D. 468, 475 (D. Md. 2005) .

(n92)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(ii).

(n93)Footnote 16. Seales v. Macomb County, 226 F.R.D. 572, 578 (E.D. Mich. 2005) .

(n94)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(iii).

(n95)Footnote 18. Am. Int'l Specialty Lines Ins. Co. v. NWI-I, Inc., 240 F.R.D. 401, 412 (N.D. Ill. 2007) .

(n96)Footnote 19. Surles v. Greyhound Lines, Inc., 474 F.3d 288, 305 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n97)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n98)Footnote 21. In re Urethane Antitrust Litig., 237 F.R.D. 454, 454 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n99)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 26.47-26.52 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n100)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n101)Footnote 2. United States v. Reynolds, 345 U.S. 1, 6, 73 S. Ct. 528, 97 L. Ed. 727 (1953) .

(n102)Footnote 3. Lincoln Am. Corp. v. Bryden, 375 F. Supp. 109, 111 (D. Kan. 1973) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n103)Footnote 4. Flathead Joint Bd. of Control v. United States DOI, 309 F. Supp. 2d 1217, 1224 (D. Mont. 2004) .

(n104)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A); see [8][a], below.

(n105)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B); see [8][b], below.

(n106)Footnote 7. See Matter of Subpoena Served Upon the Comptroller of the Currency, 967 F.2d. 630, 634 (D.C. Cir. 1992) .

(n107)Footnote 8. Davis v. Fendler, 650 F.2d 1154, 1160 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n108)Footnote 9. Ohio-Sealy Mattress Mfg. Co. v. Kaplan, 90 F.R.D. 21, 31 (N.D. Ill. 1980) (good cause exception to attorney-client privilege).

(n109)Footnote 10. Byers v. Burleson, 100 F.R.D. 436, 439 (D.D.C. 1983) (plaintiff's refusal to attend deposition unsupported, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n110)Footnote 11. North River Ins. Co. v. Stefanou, 831 F.2d 484, 486-487 (4th Cir. 1987) .

(n111)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Evid. 501.

(n112)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Evid. 501; see Frontier Refining Inc. v. Gorman-Rupp Company, Inc., 136 F.3d 695, 699 (10th Cir. 1998) .

(n113)Footnote 14. See Doe v. Special Investigations Agency, Inc., 779 F. Supp. 21, 23-24 (E.D. Pa. 1991) ; see also 3 Weinstein's Federal Evidence, Ch. 501, General Rule (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

(n114)Footnote 15. United States v. Rockwell Int'l, 897 F.2d 1255, 1264 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n115)Footnote 16. Hopson v. Mayor & City Council of Baltimore, 232 F.R.D. 228, 236 (D. Md. 2005) .

(n116)Footnote 17. Trammel v. United States, 445 U.S. 40, 47, 100 S. Ct. 906, 63 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1980) .

(n117)Footnote 18. Kelly v. Ford Motor Company, 110 F.3d 954, 965-966 (3d Cir. 1998) .

(n118)Footnote 19. Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 389, 101 S. Ct. 677, 66 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1981) .

(n119)Footnote 20. Montgomery v. Leftwich, Moore & Douglas, 161 F.R.D. 224, 225-226 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n120)Footnote 21. Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 395-396, 101 S. Ct. 677, 66 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1981) .

(n121)Footnote 22. See Howell v. Jones, 516 F.2d 53, 58 (5th Cir. 1975) .

(n122)Footnote 23. Swidler & Berlin v. United States, 524 U.S. 399, 407-408, 118 S. Ct. 2081, 141 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1998) .

(n123)Footnote 24. Smith v. Conway Org., Inc., 154 F.R.D. 73, 77 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n124)Footnote 25. United States v. Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 129 F.3d 681, 686 (1st Cir. 1997) .

(n125)Footnote 26. Jaffee v. Redmond, 518 U.S. 1, 15-18, 116 S. Ct. 1923, 1931, 135 L. Ed. 2d 337 (1996) .

(n126)Footnote 27. United States v. Gordon, 655 F.2d 478, 486 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n127)Footnote 28. See United States v. Wells, 446 F.2d 2, 4 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n128)Footnote 29. Cimijotti v. Paulsen, 219 F. Supp. 621, 624 (N.D. Iowa 1963) ; see Fed. R. Evid. 501.

(n129)Footnote 30. Patterson v. Caterpillar, Inc., 70 F.3d 503, 506-507 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n130)Footnote 31. In re Valley Forge Plaza Assocs., 109 B.R. 669, 675 (E.D. Pa. 1990) .

(n131)Footnote 32. Rosenblatt v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 54 F.R.D. 21, 22 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) .

(n132)Footnote 33. King v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 117 F.R.D. 2, 7 (D.D.C. 1987) .

(n133)Footnote 34. See United States v. Moore, 970 F.2d 48, 49-50 (5th Cir. 1992) (state law physician-patient privilege).

(n134)Footnote 35. Trammel v. United States, 445 U.S. 40, 51, 100 S. Ct. 906, 63 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1980) .

(n135)Footnote 36. Securities and Exchange Commission v. Lavin, 111 F.3d 921, 925-927 (D.C. Cir. 1997) .

(n136)Footnote 37. U.S. Const. Amend. V.

(n137)Footnote 38. Pillsbury Co. v. Conboy, 459 U.S. 248, 256-257, 103 S. Ct. 608, 74 L. Ed. 2d 430 (1983) .

(n138)Footnote 39. Andover Data Servs. v. Statistical Tabulating, 876 F.2d 1080, 1082 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n139)Footnote 40. Bear Sterns & Co. v. Wyler, 182 F. Supp. 2d 679, 684 (N.D. Ill. 2002) .

(n140)Footnote 41. See Hudson Tire Mart, Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 518 F.2d 671, 674 (2d Cir. 1975) .

(n141)Footnote 42. See Braswell v. United States, 487 U.S. 99, 105-110, 108 S. Ct. 2284, 101 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1988) .

(n142)Footnote 43. Leyh v. Modicon, Inc., 881 F. Supp. 420, 424-425 (S.D. Ind. 1995) .

(n143)Footnote 44. United States v. Procter & Gamble Co., 356 U.S. 677, 681, 78 S. Ct. 983, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1958) .

(n144)Footnote 45. Bank Line, Ltd. v. United States, 163 F.2d 133, 138 (2d Cir. 1947) (government has burden of establishing privilege).

(n145)Footnote 46. United States v. Smith, 123 F.3d 140, 151 (3rd Cir. 1997) .

(n146)Footnote 47. Leyh v. Modicon, Inc., 881 F. Supp. 420, 424-425 (S.D. Ind. 1995) .

(n147)Footnote 48. Kinoy v. Mitchell, 67 F.R.D. 1, 8 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) .

(n148)Footnote 49. See United States v. Leggett & Platt, Inc., 542 F.2d 655, 659 (6th Cir. 1976) .

(n149)Footnote 50. Leyh v. Modicon, Inc., 881 F. Supp. 420, 424-425 (S.D. Ind. 1995) .

(n150)Footnote 51. United States v. Farley, 11 F.3d 1385, 1389 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n151)Footnote 52. Dellums v. Powell, 561 F.2d 242, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1977) .

(n152)Footnote 53. See 26 U.S.C. § 6103.

(n153)Footnote 54. See 13 U.S.C. § 9(a); see also Baldrige v. Shapiro, 455 U.S. 345, 361, 102 S. Ct. 1103, 71 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1982) .

(n154)Footnote 55. See Association for Women in Science v. Califano, 566 F.2d 339, 343 (D.C. Cir. 1977) ; see also 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.52 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n155)Footnote 56. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) (party may only discover nonprivileged matter relevant to claim or defense); In re Seagate Tech., LLC, 497 F.3d 1360, 1375-1376 (Fed. Cir. 2007) .

(n156)Footnote 57. See [c]-[g], above.

(n157)Footnote 58. Maday v. Pub. Libraries, 480 F.3d 815, 821 (6th Cir. 2007) (waiver of attorney-client privilege).

(n158)Footnote 59. Sims v. Blot, 534 F.3d 117, 125 (2d Cir. 2008) (waiver of psychotherapist-patient privilege).

(n159)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Judson Atkinson Candies, Inc. v. Latini Hohberger Dhimantec, 529 F.3d 371, 387-389 (7th Cir. Ill. 2008) ; Cont'l Cas. Co. v. Under Armour, Inc., 537 F. Supp. 2d 761, 767 (D. Md. 2008) .

(n160)Footnote 61. Judson Atkinson Candies, Inc. v. Latini-Hohberger Dhimantec, 529 F.3d 371, 388-389 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n161)Footnote 62. See Fed. R. Evid. 502.

(n162)Footnote 63. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a), (b).

(n163)Footnote 64. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a).

(n164)Footnote 65. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b).

(n165)Footnote 66. *Grain v. Trinity Health, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 54299, at *14-15 (E.D. Mich. June 26, 2009) ; *Clarke v. J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30719, at *13-14 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 10, 2009) .

(n166)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.70 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n167)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n168)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A)(i).

(n169)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A)(ii).

(n170)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(B); see Kelly v. Ford Motor Company, 110 F.3d 954, 965-966 (3d Cir. 1997) ; [i][ii], below.

(n171)Footnote 5. PepsiCo, Inc. v. Baird, Kurtz & Dobson LLP, 305 F.3d 813, 816 (8th Cir. 2002) .

(n172)Footnote 6. Frontier Refining, Inc. v. Gorman-Rupp Company, Inc., 136 F.3d 695, 702 (10th Cir. 1998) .

(n173)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A); see ClearValue, Inc. v. Pearl River Polymers, Inc., 560 F.3d 1291, 1297 (Fed. Cir. 2009) (results of scientific tests could qualify as work product, but only if prepared for current litigation).

(n174)Footnote 8. In re Perrigo Company, 128 F.3d 430, 437 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n175)Footnote 9. Rail Intermodal Specialists, Inc. v. General Elec. Capital Corp., 154 F.R.D. 218, 219 (N.D. Iowa 1994) .

(n176)Footnote 10. Ford v. CSX Transp., Inc., 162 F.R.D. 108, 111-112 (E.D.N.C. 1995) .

(n177)Footnote 11. In re Qwest Communs. Int'l, 450 F.3d 1179, 1182 (10th Cir. 2006) ; United States v. Under Seal (In re Grand Jury Proceedings #5), 401 F.3d 247, 252 (4th Cir. 2005) .

(n178)Footnote 12. Pac. Fisheries, Inc. v. United States, 539 F.3d 1143, 1146 (9th Cir. 2008) (noting party requesting redaction must explain application of work product doctrine).

(n179)Footnote 13. Pac. Fisheries, Inc. v. United States, 539 F.3d 1143, 1148 (9th Cir. 2008) (if document is covered by work product privilege, party need not disclose its factual contents).

(n180)Footnote 14. United States v. Thompson, 562 F.3d 387, 393 (D.C. Cir. 2009) (attorney's work reflected in interviews, statements, memoranda, correspondence, briefs, mental impressions, personal theories, and other tangible and intangible ways qualifies as work product; generally citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n181)Footnote 15. Hendrick v. Avis Rent A Car Sys., 916 F. Supp. 256, 259 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n182)Footnote 16. Peterson v. Wallace Computer Services, Inc., 984 F. Supp. 821, 826 (D. Vt. 1997) .

(n183)Footnote 17. In re Perrigo Company, 128 F.3d 430, 437 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n184)Footnote 18. See Reg'l Airport Auth. v. LFG, LLC, 460 F.3d 697, 715-716 (6th Cir. 2006) .

(n185)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(C).

(n186)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(C)(i).

(n187)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(C)(ii).

(n188)Footnote 22. Hayden v. Acadian Gas Pipeline Sys., 173 F.R.D. 429, 430 (E.D. La. 1997) .

(n189)Footnote 23. In re Powerhouse Licensing, LLC, 441 F.3d 467, 472 (6th Cir. 2006) (in diversity cases, court applies federal law to resolve work product claims and state law to resolve attorney client claims).

(n190)Footnote 24. PepsiCo, Inc. v. Baird, Kurtz & Dobson LLP, 305 F.3d 813, 816 (8th Cir. 2002) ; Frontier Refining, Inc. v. Gorman-Rupp Company, Inc., 136 F.3d 695, 702 (10th Cir. 1998) .

(n191)Footnote 25. Tennessee Laborers Health & Welfare Fund v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare, 293 F.3d 289, 294 (6th Cir. 2002) (work product doctrine is distinct from and broader than attorney client privilege).

(n192)Footnote 26. Federal Election Commission v. Christian Coalition, 178 F.R.D. 61, 74 (E.D. Va. 1998) , aff'd on other grounds, 178 F.R.D. 456 (E.D. Va. 1998) .

(n193)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A).

(n194)Footnote 28. United States v. Roxworthy, 457 F.3d 590, 600 (6th Cir. 2006) ; see La. Mun. Police Emples. Ret. Sys. v. Sealed Air Corp., 253 F.R.D. 300, 308 (D.N.J. 2008) (anticipation of litigation was driving force behind legal work that was undertaken pre transaction).

(n195)Footnote 29. PepsiCo, Inc. v. Baird, Kurtz & Dobson LLP, 305 F.3d 813, 817 (8th Cir. 2002) .

(n196)Footnote 30. Linde Thomson Langworthy Kohn & Van Dyke v. Resolution Trust Co., 5 F.3d 1508, 1515 (D.C. Cir. 1993) .

(n197)Footnote 31. Me. v. United States DOI, 298 F.3d 60, 70 (1st Cir. 2002) (work product does not protect from disclosure documents that are prepared in ordinary course of business, even if documents ultimately could aid in preparation of litigation).

(n198)Footnote 32. See North Shore Gas Co. v. Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Ry. Co., 164 F.R.D. 59, 61 (N.D. Ill. 1995)

.

(n199)Footnote 33. United States v. Adlman, 134 F.3d 1194, 1202 (2nd Cir. 1998) .

(n200)Footnote 34. *Honda Lease Trust v. Middlesex Mut. Assur. Co., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72653, at 14 (D. Conn. Sept. 28, 2007) (quoting Moore's Federal Practice).

(n201)Footnote 35. Frontier Refining Inc. v. Gorman-Rupp Company, Inc., 136 F.3d 695, 703 (10th Cir. 1998) ; Duplan Corp. v. Moulinage et Retorderie de Chavanoz, 487 F.2d 480, 483-484 (4th Cir. 1973) .

(n202)Footnote 36. Midland Inv. Co. v. Van Alstyne, Noel & Co., 59 F.R.D. 134, 138 (S.D.N.Y. 1973) .

(n203)Footnote 37. FTC v. Grolier, Inc., 462 U.S. 19, 25, 103 S. Ct. 2209, 76 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1983) .

(n204)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A).

(n205)Footnote 39. United States v. Nobles, 422 U.S. 225, 238-239, 95 S. Ct. 2160, 45 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1975) .

(n206)Footnote 40. See, e.g., Sprague v. Director, Office of Workers' Compensation Programs, 688 F.2d 862, 869-870 (1st Cir. 1982) (opinion letter prepared by expert for attorney as part of attorney's preparation for imminent lawsuit was protected).

(n207)Footnote 41. United States v. Adlman, 134 F.3d 1194, 1203-1204 (2nd Cir. 1998) .

(n208)Footnote 42. State of New York v. Solvent Chem. Co., Inc., 166 F.R.D. 284, 291-292 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n209)Footnote 43. See In re California Public Util. Comm'n, 892 F.2d 778, 781 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n210)Footnote 44. Pac. Fisheries, Inc. v. United States, 539 F.3d 1143, 1148 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n211)Footnote 45. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 266 (10th Cir. 1995) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A)(ii).

(n212)Footnote 46. Audiotext Communications Network v. U.S. Telecom, Inc., 164 F.R.D. 250, 254 (D. Kan. 1996) .

(n213)Footnote 47. In re Sealed Case, 29 F.3d 715, 718 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (work product may be claimed by attorney or client); *U.S. Info. Sys. v. IBEW Local Union No. 3, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19363, at 3 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) .

(n214)Footnote 48. Lasalle Bank Nat'l Ass'n v. Lehman Bros. Holdings, Inc., 209 F.R.D. 112, 117 (D. Md. 2002) (person claiming protection under work product doctrine must be party or representative of party).

(n215)Footnote 49. See United States v. 266 Tonawanda Trail, 95 F.3d 422, 428 n.10 (6th Cir. 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n216)Footnote 50. Onwuka v. Federal Express Corp., 178 F.R.D. 508, 512 (D. Minn. 1997) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3); see also Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 266 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n217)Footnote 51. See [a], above.

(n218)Footnote 52. See [d], above.

(n219)Footnote 53. See [f], above.

(n220)Footnote 54. In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 510 F.3d 180, 184 (2d Cir. 2007) ; see United States v. Roxworthy, 457 F.3d 590, 597 (6th Cir. 2006) (party must present factual basis for its claims of work product protection).

(n221)Footnote 55. Cunningham v. SmithKline Beecham, 255 F.R.D. 474, 480-481 (N.D. Ind. 2009) .

(n222)Footnote 56. See Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 266 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n223)Footnote 57. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A); [i], above.

(n224)Footnote 58. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A)(i).

(n225)Footnote 59. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A)(ii); see, e.g., Hendrick v. Avis Rent A Car Sys., 916 F. Supp. 256, 261 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) (discovery of defendant's product testing results refused in automobile products liability action because plaintiff did not demonstrate impracticality or expense of conducting plaintiff's own testing).

(n226)Footnote 60. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(B); see Kelly v. Ford Motor Company, 110 F.3d 954, 965-966 (3d Cir. 1997) (core work product of attorney or other representative of party concerning litigation is generally afforded near absolute protection from discovery).

(n227)Footnote 61. See Pacamor Bearings, Inc. v. Minebea Co., 918 F. Supp. 491, 512 (D.N.H. 1996) (substantial need and hardship tests for ordinary rather than opinion work product).

(n228)Footnote 62. Toledo Edison Co. v. G A Techs., Inc., Torrey Pines Tech. Div., 847 F.2d 335, 340 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n229)Footnote 63. See Hendrick v. Avis Rent A Car Sys., 916 F. Supp. 256, 261 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n230)Footnote 64. See In re Int'l Sys. & Controls Corp. Sec. Litig., 693 F.2d 1235, 1240 (5th Cir. 1982) (faulty memory of witness must be substantiated to show undue hardship).

(n231)Footnote 65. United States v. Nobles, 422 U.S. 225, 239-240, 95 S. Ct. 2160, 45 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1975) .

(n232)Footnote 66. United States v. White, 970 F.2d 328, 334-335 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n233)Footnote 67. In re Seagate Tech., LLC, 497 F.3d 1360, 1375 (Fed. Cir. 2007) (because work product protection is designed to protect adversary trial process itself, it is applied with even greater force than attorney client privilege).

(n234)Footnote 68. In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 43 F.3d 966, 970 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n235)Footnote 69. Federal Election Commission v. Christian Coalition, 178 F.R.D. 61, 74 (E.D. Va. 1998) , aff'd on other grounds, 178 F.R.D. 456 (E.D. Va 1998) .

(n236)Footnote 70. In re Qwest Communs. Int'l, 450 F.3d 1179, 1186 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n237)Footnote 71. Scanlon v. Bricklayers & Allied Craftworkers, Local No. 3, 242 F.R.D. 238, 247 (W.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n238)Footnote 72. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B).

(n239)Footnote 73. In re Fannie Mae Secs. Litig., 552 F.3d 814, 824 (D.C. Cir. 2009) ; see [9][b], below.

(n240)Footnote 74. See Fed. R. Evid. 502.

(n241)Footnote 75. Coburn Group, LLC v. Whitecap Advisors LLC, 640 F. Supp. 2d 1032, 1037 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (Rule 502 creates new framework for managing disclosure issues in cost effective manner in age of large electronic document productions).

(n242)Footnote 76. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a), (b).

(n243)Footnote 77. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a).

(n244)Footnote 78. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b).

(n245)Footnote 79. Coburn Group, LLC v. Whitecap Advisors LLC, 640 F. Supp. 2d 1032, 1038-1039 (N.D. Ill. 2009) .

(n246)Footnote 80. Frontier Refining, Inc. v. Gorman-Rupp Company, Inc., 136 F.3d 695, 703 (10th Cir. 1998) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n247)Footnote 81. See Remington Arms Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 142 F.R.D. 408, 419-420 (D. Del. 1992) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n248)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.90 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n249)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(g); see [b], below.

(n250)Footnote 2. Coburn Group, LLC v. Whitecap Advisors LLC, 640 F. Supp. 2d 1032, 1038 (N.D. Ill. 2009) .

(n251)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Evid. 502.

(n252)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Bickler v. Senior Lifestyle Corp., 266 F.R.D. 379, 384 (D. Ariz. 2010) .

(n253)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Coburn Group, LLC v. Whitecap Advisors LLC, 640 F. Supp. 2d 1032, 1036-1037 (N.D. Ill. 2009) .

(n254)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a), (b).

(n255)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a).

(n256)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b); see [g], below.

(n257)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 502.

(n258)Footnote 10. Rhoads Indus. v. Bldg. Materials Corp. of Am., 254 F.R.D. 216, 226 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (Rule 502 sets well defined standards consistent with existing mainstream legal principles on topic of waiver by disclosure); see Eden Isle Marina, Inc. v. United States, 89 Fed. Cl. 480, 502 (Fed. Cl. 2009) (one of primary purposes of Rule 502 is to set uniform standards regarding inadvertent disclosure and subject matter waiver without altering substantive federal law on whether communication or information is protected).

(n259)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Evid. 502, Original Committee Notes.

(n260)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(a), (b).

(n261)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Evid. 502(c)(1).

(n262)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Evid. 502(c)(2).

(n263)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(c), Original Committee Notes.

(n264)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Evid. 502, Original Committee Notes.

(n265)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Evid. 101, 1101(a), (b).

(n266)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Evid. 502(f); see Fed. R. Evid. 502(a), 502(b).

(n267)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Evid. 502(f).

(n268)Footnote 20. See Fed. R. Evid. 501.

(n269)Footnote 21. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(f), Original Committee Notes.

(n270)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Evid. 502(f).

(n271)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Evid. 101, 1101(a), (b).

(n272)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Evid. 502.

(n273)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Evid. 502(g)(1); *see DJ Coleman, Inc. v. Nufarm Ams., Inc., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27552, at 3 (D.N.D. Feb. 25, 2010) (in diversity actions, state law determines existence and scope of attorney-client privilege); *Kumar v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 53387, at 2 (W.D. Tenn. June 16, 2009) (whether attorney client relationship exists depends on elements of substantive law of forum).

(n274)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Evid. 502(g)(2); see In re Cendant Corp. Sec. Litig., 343 F.3d 658, 662 (3d Cir. 2003) .

(n275)Footnote 27. See Fed. R. Evid. 502, Original Committee Notes.

(n276)Footnote 28. Pritchard v. County of Erie, (In re County of Erie), 546 F.3d 222, 228 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n277)Footnote 29. See Fed. R. Evid. 502, Original Committee Notes; Bickler v. Senior Lifestyle Corp., 266 F.R.D. 379, 384 (D. Ariz. 2010) (Rule 502 does supplant applicable waiver doctrine generally).

(n278)Footnote 30. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(g)(1); *see also DJ Coleman, Inc. v. Nufarm Ams., Inc., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27552, at 3 (D.N.D. Feb. 25, 2010) (in diversity actions, state law determines existence and scope of attorney-client privilege); *Kumar v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 53387, at 2 (W.D. Tenn. June 16, 2009) (whether attorney client relationship exists depends on elements of substantive law of forum).

(n279)Footnote 31. See Fed. R. Evid. 502, Original Committee Notes.

(n280)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a).

(n281)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a)(1).

(n282)Footnote 34. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(a), Original Committee Notes; Square D Co. v. E.I. Elecs., Inc., 264 F.R.D. 385, 394 (N.D. Ill. 2009) ; see also [g], below.

(n283)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a)(2); see Trs. of the Elec. Workers Local No. 26 Pension Trust Fund v. Trust Fund Advisors, Inc., 266 F.R.D. 1, 11 (D.D.C. 2010) .

(n284)Footnote 36. Fort James Corp. v. Solo Cup Co., 412 F.3d 1340, 1349-1350 (Fed. Cir. 2005) .

(n285)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Evid. 502(a)(3).

(n286)Footnote 38. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(a), Original Committee Notes; see also Fed. R. Evid. 106.

(n287)Footnote 39. See Maday v. Pub. Libraries, 480 F.3d 815, 821 (6th Cir. 2007) ; Fed. R. Evid. 502(b), Original Committee Notes (Rule 502 does not replace applicable waiver doctrine generally).

(n288)Footnote 40. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(b), Original Committee Notes.

(n289)Footnote 41. Coburn Group, LLC v. Whitecap Advisors LLC, 640 F. Supp. 2d 1032, 1038-1039 (N.D. Ill. 2009) ; Heriot v. Byrne, 257 F.R.D. 645, 654 (N.D. Ill. 2009) .

(n290)Footnote 42. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b)(1).

(n291)Footnote 43. Bensel v. Air Line Pilot Ass'n, 248 F.R.D. 177, 179-180 (D.N.J. 2008) .

(n292)Footnote 44. *See G. v. Hawaii, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48214, at 4 (D. Haw. June 9, 2009) .

(n293)Footnote 45. Amobi v. D.C. Dep't of Corr., 262 F.R.D. 45, 53 (D.D.C. 2009) .

(n294)Footnote 46. Judson Atkinson Candies, Inc. v. Latini-Hohberger Dhimantec, 529 F.3d 371, 388 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n295)Footnote 47. Amobi v. D.C. Dep't of Corr., 262 F.R.D. 45, 53 (D.D.C. 2009) ; Heriot v. Byrne, 257 F.R.D. 645, 658-659 (N.D. Ill. 2009) .

(n296)Footnote 48. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b)(2).

(n297)Footnote 49. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(b), Original Committee Notes; see also Heriot v. Byrne, 257 F.R.D. 645, 659 (N.D. Ill. 2009) ; Bus. Integration Servs. v. AT&T Corp., 251 F.R.D. 121, 129 (S.D.N.Y. 2008) .

(n298)Footnote 50. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b)(3).

(n299)Footnote 51. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B); see Fed. R. Evid. 502(b), Original Committee Notes (producing party is required to follow up on any obvious indications that protected communication or information has been produced inadvertently).

(n300)Footnote 52. See Heriot v. Byrne, 257 F.R.D. 645, 662 (N.D. Ill. 2009) .

(n301)Footnote 53. Rhoads Indus. v. Bldg. Materials Corp. of Am., 254 F.R.D. 216, 226 (E.D. Pa. 2008) .

(n302)Footnote 54. Alpert v. Riley, 267 F.R.D. 202, 209 (S.D. Tex. 2010) .

(n303)Footnote 55. Fed. R. Evid. 502(c)(1).

(n304)Footnote 56. Fed. R. Evid. 502(c)(2).

(n305)Footnote 57. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(c), Original Committee Notes.

(n306)Footnote 58. Fed. R. Evid. 502(c),(d); see Capitol Records, Inc, v. MP3tunes, LLC, 261 F.R.D. 44, 50-52 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) .

(n307)Footnote 59. See In re Qwest Communs. Int'l, 450 F.3d 1179, 1182 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n308)Footnote 60. See [f], above.

(n309)Footnote 61. See [g], above.

(n310)Footnote 62. See Capitol Records, Inc, v. MP3tunes, LLC, 261 F.R.D. 44, 51 n.6 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) ; *Whitaker Chalk Swindle & Sawyer, LLP v. Dart Oil & Gas Corp., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15901, at *10-22 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 23, 2009) .

(n311)Footnote 63. Fed. R. Evid. 502(d).

(n312)Footnote 64. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(d), Original Committee Notes.

(n313)Footnote 65. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(c); Fed. R. Evid. 502(d), Original Committee Notes.

(n314)Footnote 66. Fed. R. Evid. 502(d), Original Committee Notes.

(n315)Footnote 67. See 28 U.S.C. § 1738.

(n316)Footnote 68. Fed. R. Evid. 502(e).

(n317)Footnote 69. Fed. R. Evid. 502(e), Original Committee Notes.

(n318)Footnote 70. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(d); see also Capitol Records, Inc, v. MP3tunes, LLC, 261 F.R.D. 44, 51 n.6 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) .

(n319)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A); see also [7], above.

(n320)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A)(i).

(n321)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A)(i); see Alleyne v. N.Y. State Educ. Dep't, 248 F.R.D. 383, 386 (N.D.N.Y 2008) (part must state basis for its claim to withhold, and describe non-disclosed documents, communications, or things in manner that will allow its adversaries to assess claim).

(n322)Footnote 4. First Sav. Bank v. First Bank Sys., 902 F. Supp. 1356, 1361-1365 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n323)Footnote 5. Am. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc'y of the United States, 406 F.3d 867, 870 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n324)Footnote 6. Caplan v. Fellheimer Eichen Braverman & Kaskey, 162 F.R.D. 490, 492 (E.D. Pa. 1995) .

(n325)Footnote 7. Banks v. Office of the Senate Sergeant-At-Arms & Doorkeeper of the United States Senate, 471 F.3d 1341, 1343 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n326)Footnote 8. United States v. Construction Prod. Research, Inc., 73 F.3d 464, 473 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n327)Footnote 9. Burns v. Imagine Films Entertainment, Inc., 164 F.R.D. 589, 594 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) ; see Lightfoot v. Rosskopf, 374 F. Supp. 2d 69, 72 (D.D.C. 2005) (court should tailor information required in privilege log to circumstances of each case).

(n328)Footnote 10. In re Fannie Mae Secs. Litig., 552 F.3d 814, 824 (D.C. Cir. 2009) .

(n329)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B).

(n330)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n331)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B).

(n332)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Kandel v. Brother Int'l Corp., 683 F. Supp. 2d 1076 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (plaintiff filed motion for order declaring 28 documents produced by defendants to be not privileged).

(n333)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n334)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n335)Footnote 17. Alleyne v. N.Y. State Educ. Dep't, 248 F.R.D. 383, 386 (N.D.N.Y 2008) .

(n336)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments; Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n337)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.52[6] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n338)Footnote 1. See 5 U.S.C. § 552.

(n339)Footnote 2. John Doe Agency v. John Doe Corp., 493 U.S. 146, 153, 110 S. Ct. 471, 107 L. Ed. 2d 462 (1989) .

(n340)Footnote 3. NLRB v. Robbins Tire & Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 242, 98 S. Ct. 2311, 57 L. Ed. 2d 159 (1978) .

(n341)Footnote 4. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(2)(A).

(n342)Footnote 5. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(2)(B).

(n343)Footnote 6. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(2)(C).

(n344)Footnote 7. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(2)(D), (E).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.04

§ 15.04 Protective Order of Court to Prevent Discovery Abuse

[1] Purpose and Effect of Discovery Protective Order n*

[a] Court's Discretion to Limit Discovery to Prevent Abuse

The scope of discovery under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is extremely broad, in that parties may generally discover any material that is relevant to the subject matter involved in the action provided that it is not privileged. n1 However, to prevent a party from abusing even this liberal scope of discovery rules, n2 the federal rules gives the district court the power to issue an order to protect the opposition from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, if there is good cause for the order. n3 The purpose of the protective order as a whole is to facilitate liberal discovery between opposition parties without compromising the integrity of proprietary information. n4 Thus, Rule 26(c) authorizes the court to limit discovery even when the information sought is relevant when the conditions of the rule are met. n5

The district court has broad discretion to decide whether a protective order is appropriate in the circumstances, and what degree of protection is required in those circumstances when an order is appropriate. n6 However, the federal courts have adopted a balancing of interests test to guide decisions concerning protective orders. n7 Under the balancing standard, the district judge must compare the hardship to the party against whom discovery is sought against the probative value of the information to the other party. n8

[b] Availability of Protective Orders

Rule 26(c) applies to all types of discovery, including depositions and written discovery, such as interrogatories, requests for production of documents, requests for admissions, and depositions. n9 Furthermore, in a protective order the court may order the type of discovery that is to be used to obtain particular information. n10

A party responding to a discovery request may not seek a protective order asserting the rights of third parties to protect the third party's privileged or confidential information. n11 The affected third party must intervene directly to seek a protective order to protect that information. n12 A protective order may bind parties to the action and nonparty witnesses called in the action. n13 Likewise, a protective order made in private litigation is enforceable against third parties, including the government, absent a showing that the order was improper or that there is a compelling need or extraordinary circumstance for the material subject to the order. n14

[2] Procedure for Application for Protective Order n*

[a] Filing of Motion

A party or other person from whom discovery is sought must apply for a protective order by filing a motion in the district court, either the court in which the action is pending or in the case of a deposition, where the deposition is to occur. n1 Thus, Rule 26(c) contemplates that two district courts have the power to act on a motion for a protective order concerning a deposition. The court in the district where the deposition will be taken has the power to grant or deny the protective order and also has the discretion to defer to the judge handling the case on the merits. n2

The party seeking a protective order must make a request for a specific order and must articulate facts in support of the request. n3 The facts must show that a clearly defined and significant injury will result from the discovery sought. n4 It is not sufficient for a party to make conclusory or speculative statements about the need for a protective order. n5 The party should demonstrate injury through allegations of facts made by affidavits of knowledgeable persons. n6

Some courts have held that, as an alternative to filing a motion for a protective order, a deponent may decline to answer on a proper ground such as privilege, and then wait for the party taking the deposition to file a motion to compel; the deponent may then defend the motion to compel. In either scenario, the party resisting discovery has the burden to support its position. n7

[b] Timing of Motion

Rule 26(c) does not specify the time period within which a protective order must be made. However, at the least it must be made prior to the date set for producing the discovery. n8 In the case of a deposition, a party must file a motion for a Rule 26(c) protective order prior to the time the deposition is set to begin. n9 In making a determination of timeliness, a court should consider all of the circumstances facing the parties. A failure to request a protective order prior to the time set for producing the discovery may be excused for good cause. n10

Once a deposition has started, protection against annoyance, embarrassment, or oppression must be sought under Rule 30(d), n11 which allows a party or a deponent to seek protection at any time during a deposition on a showing that the examination is being conducted in bad faith or in such a manner as to unreasonably annoy, embarrass, or oppress the deponent or a party. n12 The court may order that the deposition be terminated or may limit the scope and manner of the taking of the deposition as provided in Rule 26(c). n13

[c] Certification That Parties Have Attempted to Resolve Dispute

A party that makes a motion for a protective order must also file a certification that the moving party has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with other affected parties in an effort to resolve the dispute without court action. n14 The court may deny a motion for a protective order solely for failure to comply with this requirement. n15 Rule 26(c) does not specify requirements for the conference. Therefore, the required conference may be held by telephone or in person. If the person seeking the protective order is unable to convince the opposing parties to discuss the matter, the party should describe for the court in the certificate the efforts made to confer. n16

[3] Grounds for Protective Order n*

[a] Good Cause

The court may issue a protective order only after the moving party has made a showing that good cause exists for the protection of the material. n1 The party moving for the protective order has the burden of demonstrating good cause. n2 Good cause is established when it is specifically demonstrated that disclosure will cause a clearly defined and serious injury. n3

In deciding whether good cause exists to issue a protective order, the district court must balance the interests involved, i.e., the harm to the party seeking the order against the importance of disclosure to public. The court must consider the facts and circumstances of each case in making the good cause determination. Some factors for the court to consider in balancing the interests are privacy interests, whether the information is important to public health and safety, whether the party benefitting from the confidentiality of protective order is a public official, n4 the danger of abuse if a protective order is granted, the good faith of the various parties' positions, the adequacy of the protective measures provided by a protective order, and the availability of other means of proof. n5 On the other hand, good cause is not established merely by showing that discovery may involve some inconvenience or expense. n6

[b] Stipulation by Parties

Although Rule 26(c) does not specifically provide for stipulated protective orders, litigants commonly agree to discovery orders, typically agreements to seal documents produced during discovery, and courts will enter a stipulated protective order to enforce the agreement. Such orders usually restrict access to particular discovery materials to parties and counsel, and limited their use solely for the litigation. The purpose of the protective order is to allow the parties to make full disclosure to the opposition without fear of publication of confidential or sensitive information. n7 The orders may also avoid the expense and delay of discovery disputes over each item of allegedly confidential information, and thus promote the ultimate goals of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. n8

Stipulated protective orders are subject to the "good cause" standard, which in this case means that even if the parties agree that a protective order should be entered, the court must still approve the order. The parties still must show that good cause exists for the issuance of that order; if good cause is not shown, the protective order should not be issued. Furthermore, in deciding whether to issue a stipulated protective order, the district court must independently determine if good cause exists, because the parties are in a non-adversarial position on the issue. n9 However, some courts take a less strict view of the "good cause" requirement for stipulated protective orders in complex litigation. Under this more liberal standard the party seeking a protective order need not make a document-by-document showing. Instead, the court may enter a broad "umbrella" protective order on a threshold showing of good cause. n10

[4] Types of Protective Orders n*

[a] Any Order Required to Protect Movant

Rule 26(c) explicitly provides that the district court may issue any discovery order required to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. n1 The rule then lists eight examples of particular types of protective orders, all of which limit or preclude discovery or regulate the disclosure of information obtained in discovery. n2 These specific examples are discussed in [b], below.

A district court is not limited to the examples listed in Rule 26(c)(1). Rather, a court has discretion for good cause to issue any order to protect a party from discovery excesses of an offending discovery request. The "good cause" standard of Rule 26(c) is highly flexible, and has been designed to accommodate all relevant considerations as they arise during discovery. n3 The district courts should use their discretion to restrict discovery in a tailored fashion to fit the facts and circumstances of each case. n4 An example of this other type of protective order is an order barring ex parte communications by the parties. n5

In conjunction with its order on the motion for protective order, the court may award expenses and attorney's fees to either the moving or the nonmoving party on the motion, depending on whether the motion was granted or denied, as specified in Rule 37(a)(5). n6

[b] Examples of Particular Restrictive Protective Orders

The following are examples of eight types of orders which Rule 26(c)(1) specifies the court may make to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense: n7

1. Forbidding a particular disclosure or discovery. n8 Courts rarely issue an order that discovery not be taken at all. n9 However, courts commonly issue orders that a particular type of discovery is prohibited. For example, the court may use a protective order to prohibit taking discovery from certain employees at a company, n10 or an order to prevent a party from taking the deposition of a particular person. n11

2. Specifying terms, including time and place, for the disclosure or discovery. n12 Courts commonly restrict the number of hours or days that a deposition may last. n13 Courts also typically issue protective orders that vary the sequence and timing of discovery. n14

3. Prescribing a discovery method other than the one selected by the party seeking discovery. n15 This provision of Rule 26(c) is most commonly used to order a deposition by written questions pursuant to Rule 31 rather than by verbal questioning. However, courts have cautioned that oral depositions should not routinely be replaced by depositions on written questions because written questioning does not permit investigative follow-up questions, does not allow the observation of the demeanor of the witness, nor the evaluation of credibility. n16

4. Forbidding inquiry into certain matters, or limiting the scope of disclosure or discovery to certain matters. n17 Courts often enter this type of order to limit the scope of discovery to only those issues that are left to be decided in case. n18

5. Designating the persons who may be present while the discovery is conducted. n19 For example, a court may order the sequestering of fact witnesses prior to their depositions and barring fact witnesses from attending depositions of other witnesses, provided that the party supports its motion for protective order with affidavits or other evidence that provides support that sequestration is necessary. n20

6. Requiring that a deposition be sealed and opened only on court order. n21 Although this provision specifies only depositions, the courts have often ordered other discovery materials under seal. n22 Rule 26(c)(1)(F) is frequently used to protect confidential or sensitive business information. n23

7. Requiring that a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information not be revealed or be revealed only in a specified way. n24 To demonstrate "good cause" under this provision, the party seeking the protective order must show that the information sought is a trade secret or other confidential information and that the harm caused by its disclosure outweighs the need of the party seeking disclosure. n25 Courts may also use Rule 26(c)(1)(G) to protect from disclosure material that would harm the disclosing party by placing it at a commercial disadvantage. n26

8. Requiring that the parties simultaneously file specified documents or information in sealed envelopes, to be opened as the court directs. n27 The purpose of Rule 26(c)(1)(H) is to protect the parties from fraud, and to prevent one party from acquiring an unfair advantage over the other. n28 This purpose can often be realized by a simultaneous exchange of sensitive information, so that neither party is privy to the other party's information first. n29

[c] Partial or Complete Denial of Protective Order

If a court partially or completely denies a protective order, the court may, on just terms, order that any party or person provide or permit discovery. n30 The court typically makes a partial denial of a protective order, and grants what is referred to as a "partial protective order," when a party is entitled to protection only with respect to particular issues, claims, or defenses, or when only some items of discovery are subject to protection. In cases when a court denies a motion for a protective order, or grants a partial protective order, the court will make an order compelling discovery to make clear precisely those items that must be produced or that are subject to discovery after the order. n31

[d] Court Order Specifying Waiver Effect of Disclosure

Although it is not technically a protective order, under Evidence Rule 502, a court may enter an order specifying that the attorney-client privilege or the work product doctrine is not waived by disclosure connected with the litigation pending before the court. When the court makes such an order, the disclosure that is subject of the order is also not a waiver in any other federal or state proceeding. n32 Such an order is typically used in conjunction with a confidentiality order, n33 and the court may incorporate into a confidentiality order any agreement of the parties with respect to the waiver effect of disclosure in a federal proceeding. n34

This provision was enacted because tailored confidentiality orders are becoming increasingly necessary to limit the costs of discovery privilege review and retention, especially in cases involving electronic discovery. Such an order would not be as effective if the order could not provide for protection outside the particular litigation in which the order is entered. n35

For a further discussion of limitations on waiver in cases of disclosures of protected material, see § 15.03[8].

[5] Modification of Protective Order n*

A court that has entered a protective order retains the power to modify it as long as the order remains in effect, n1 even if the underlying action or claim has been dismissed. n2 However, once an underlying action has ended, the court lacks power to impose any new, affirmative requirements on the parties relating to discovery. n3

The determination whether to modify a protective order is left to the sound discretion of the district court, like the original entry of the order. n4 In deciding whether to modify a protective order, courts may consider whether the person seeking the modification is a party seeking to modify the order for purely private reasons, a nonparty seeking to modify the order to gain access to matters of "public interest," a nonparty seeking access to discovery materials for use in collateral litigation to avoid duplicative discovery efforts, or a nonparty governmental entity seeking to gain access to information for purposes of a criminal investigation. When a party seeks modification, the court must balance the following factors: any good cause established for the modification; the nature of the protective order; the foreseeability of the requested modification; and whether any parties have relied on the protective order. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.101 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); see Herbert v. Lando, 441 U.S. 153, 177, 99 S. Ct. 1635, 60 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979) ; see also § 15.03[1].

(n3)Footnote 2. Seattle Times Co. v. Rhinehart, 467 U.S. 20, 34, 104 S. Ct. 2199, 81 L. Ed. 2d 17 (1984) (because of liberality of pretrial discovery, court must have authority to issue protective orders).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See UFCW Local 1776 & Participating Employers Health & Welfare Fund, 242 F.R.D. 29, 30-31 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Tisby v. Buffalo Gen. Hosp., 157 F.R.D. 157, 170 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 6. United States v. $9,041,598.68, 976 F. Supp. 654, 656 (S.D. Tex. 1997) (broad discretion conferred on trial court by Rule 26(c) is necessary because unique character of discovery process requires that trial court have substantial latitude to fashion protective orders).

(n8)Footnote 7. Farnsworth v. Proctor & Gamble Co., 758 F.2d 1545, 1547 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Brown v. City of Oneonta, 160 F.R.D. 18, 21 (N.D.N.Y. 1995) ; see In re Eli Lilly & Co., Prozac Prod. Liab. Litig., 142 F.R.D. 454, 460 (S.D. Ind. 1992) (courts also apply balancing of interests standard in determining whether "good cause" exists for issuance of protective order).

(n10)Footnote 9. Brittain v. Stroh Brewery Co., 136 F.R.D. 408, 413 (M.D.N.C. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(C).

(n12)Footnote 11. Bush Development Corp. v. Harbour Place Assocs., 632 F. Supp. 1359, 1364 (E.D. Va. 1986) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Blum v. Schlegel, 150 F.R.D. 38, 41-42 (W.D.N.Y. 1993) (nonparty permitted to intervene to protect confidential information sought from party in interrogatories and document requests, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n14)Footnote 13. Truswal Systems Corp. v. Hydro-Air Engineering, Inc., 813 F.2d 1207, 1210 (Fed. Cir. 1987) (standards of Rule 26(c) apply to both parties and nonparties equally).

(n15)Footnote 14. See In re Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum Dated April 19, 1991, 945 F.2d 1221, 1224 (2nd Cir. 1991) .

(n16)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 26.102, 26.103 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n17)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n18)Footnote 2. Matter of Orthopedic Bone Screw Prod. Liab. Litig., 79 F.3d 46, 48 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n19)Footnote 3. Brittain v. Stroh Brewery Co., 136 F.R.D. 408, 412 (M.D.N.C. 1991) (seeking protective order to deny discovery of particular confidential material).

(n20)Footnote 4. Federal Election Comm'n v. GOPAC, Inc., 897 F. Supp. 615, 617 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 5. See Glenmede Trust Co. v. Thompson, 56 F.3d 476, 483 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n22)Footnote 6. Johnson v. Jung, 242 F.R.D. 481, 483 (N.D. Ill. 2007) .

(n23)Footnote 7. Neuberger Herman Real Estate Income Fund, Inc. v. Lola Brown Trust No. 1B, 230 F.R.D. 398, 421-422 (D. Md. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n24)Footnote 8. In re Coordinated Pretrial Proceedings, Etc., 669 F.2d 620, 622 (10th Cir. 1982) (motion timely when made four days prior to date set for production).

(n25)Footnote 9. See BCI Communications Sys., Inc. v. Bell Atlanticom Sys., Inc., 112 F.R.D. 154, 159 (N.D. Ala. 1986) , aff'd without opinion, 995 F.2d 236 (1993) .

(n26)Footnote 10. Brittain v. Stroh Brewery Co., 136 F.R.D. 408, 414 (M.D.N.C. 1991) .

(n27)Footnote 11. Hearst/ABC-Viacom v. Goodway Mktg., 145 F.R.D. 59, 61 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (ruling on protective order under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)).

(n28)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(3)(A); Sica v. Connecticut, 331 F. Supp. 2d 82, 87-88 (D. Conn. 2004) .

(n29)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(3)(B).

(n30)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n31)Footnote 15. See Oleson v. Kmart Corporation, 175 F.R.D. 568, 569 (D. Kan. 1997) .

(n32)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n33)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.104 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n34)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1); see Public Citizen v. Liggett Group, Inc., 858 F.2d 775, 789 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n35)Footnote 2. In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 821 F.2d 139, 145 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n36)Footnote 3. Shingara v. Skiles, 420 F.3d 301, 306 (3d Cir. 2005) ; Glenmede Trust Co. v. Thompson, 56 F.3d 476, 483 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n37)Footnote 4. Wiggins v. Burge, 173 F.R.D. 226, 228-229 (N.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n38)Footnote 5. Brittain v. Stroh Brewery Co., 136 F.R.D. 408, 415 (M.D.N.C. 1991) .

(n39)Footnote 6. Lehnert v. Ferris Faculty Ass'n-MEA-NEA, 556 F. Supp. 316, 318 (W.D. Mich. 1983) .

(n40)Footnote 7. Kamakana v. City & County of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172, 1176-1177 (9th Cir. 2006) .

(n41)Footnote 8. See In re Alexander Grant & Co. Litig., 820 F.2d 352, 356-357 (11th Cir. 1987) (court refused to modify stipulated protective order to grant nonparties access to discovery materials).

(n42)Footnote 9. Jepson, Inc. v. Makita Elec. Works, Ltd., 30 F.3d 854, 858 (7th Cir. 1994) (good cause did not exist for issuance of parties' stipulated confidentiality order).

(n43)Footnote 10. See Citizens First Nat'l Bank v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 178 F.3d 943, 945-946 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n44)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.105 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n45)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n46)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A)-(H).

(n47)Footnote 3. Rohrbough v. Harris, 549 F.3d 1313, 1321 (10th Cir. 2008) .

(n48)Footnote 4. Regan-Touhy v. Walgreen Co., 526 F.3d 641, 648-649 (10th Cir. 2008) .

(n49)Footnote 5. M&M Med. Supplies v. Pleasant Valley Hosp., 981 F.2d 160, 163 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n50)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(3).

(n51)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n52)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A).

(n53)Footnote 9. Regan-Touhy v. Walgreen Co., 526 F.3d 641, 648 (10th Cir. 2008) (courts must be cautious about ordering entire contents of files disclosed willy-nilly).

(n54)Footnote 10. Kidd v. Taos Ski Valley, Inc., 88 F.3d 848, 853-854 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n55)Footnote 11. Atlanta Journal and Constitution v. City of Atlanta Department of Aviation, 175 F.R.D. 347, 348 (N.D. Ga. 1997) .

(n56)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(B).

(n57)Footnote 13. Johnston Dev. Group, Inc. v. Carpenters Local Union No. 1578, 130 F.R.D. 348, 356 (D.N.J. 1990) .

(n58)Footnote 14. Roberts v. Americable Int'l, Inc., 883 F. Supp. 499, 505 (E.D. Cal. 1995) .

(n59)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(C).

(n60)Footnote 16. Mill-Run Tours, Inc. v. Khashoggi, 124 F.R.D. 547, 549 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n61)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(D).

(n62)Footnote 18. See Johnson v. Mortham, 164 F.R.D. 571, 572 (N.D. Fla. 1996) .

(n63)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(E).

(n64)Footnote 20. In re Terra International, Inc., 134 F.3d 302, 306 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n65)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(F).

(n66)Footnote 22. See Empire Blue Cross & Blue Shield v. Janet Greeson's A Place For Us, Inc., 62 F.3d 1217, 1218 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n67)Footnote 23. See Foltz v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 331 F.3d 1122, 1130-1131 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n68)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(G).

(n69)Footnote 25. Diamond Ventures, LLC v. Barreto, 452 F.3d 892, 898 (D.C. Cir. 2007) .

(n70)Footnote 26. Nestle Foods Corp. v. Aetna Cas. and Sur. Co., 129 F.R.D. 483, 484 (D.N.J. 1990) .

(n71)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(H).

(n72)Footnote 28. *See, e.g., Member Servs. v. Sec. Mut. Life Ins., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17498, at *7-8 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 12, 2007) .

(n73)Footnote 29. Friction Div. Prod. v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours, 658 F. Supp. 998, 1003 (D. Del. 1987) , aff'd without opinion, 883 F.2d 1027 (1989) .

(n74)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(2).

(n75)Footnote 31. Sunshine Jr. Stores, Inc. v. Sunshine-Jr. Stores, Inc., 456 F.3d 1291, 1306-1307 (11th Cir.

2006) .

(n76)Footnote 32. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(d).

(n77)Footnote 33. See In re Qwest Communs. Int'l, 450 F.3d 1179, 1182 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n78)Footnote 34. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(d).

(n79)Footnote 35. See Fed. R. Evid. 502(d), Original Committee Notes.

(n80)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.106 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n81)Footnote 1. See In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 821 F.2d 139, 145 (2nd Cir. 1987) .

(n82)Footnote 2. Public Citizen v. Liggett Group, Inc., 858 F.2d 775, 781 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n83)Footnote 3. United Nuclear Corp, v. Cranford Ins. Co., 905 F.2d 1424, 1428 (10th Cir. 1990) .

(n84)Footnote 4. Abraham v. Intermountain Health Care, Inc., 461 F.3d 1249, 1269 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n85)Footnote 5. Bayer AG and Miles, Inc. v. Barr Lab., Inc., 162 F.R.D. 456, 459 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

6 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.05

§ 15.05 Timing and Sequence of Discovery

[1] Timing in Absence of Exercise of Discretion by Court n*

The Court has discretion over the exercise of discovery, and in its discretion may determine the timing of discovery. n1 Absent a controlling court order, discovery may not ordinarily take place until the parties confer as required by Rule 26(f). n2 Discovery may be conducted earlier, however, if any of the following are true: n3

1. The case is one of those proceedings exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26(a)(1)(E); n4

2. A specific Federal Rule of Civil Procedure authorizes early discovery; n5

3. The court has issued an order authorizing the discovery; n6 or

4. The parties have agreed or stipulated to earlier discovery.

The Rule 26(f) discovery planning conference must take place as soon as practicable, and in any event at least 21 days before the date of the scheduling conference under Rule 16(b) or the date a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b). n7 The court may ensure that discovery is not unduly delayed either by entering a special order or by setting the date for a scheduling conference. n8

[2] Each Party May Determine Sequence Unless Otherwise Ordered by Court n*

Each party may conduct discovery in any sequence, unless the court orders otherwise. n1 The court may issue an order prescribing the sequence of discovery on motion, in the interests of justice, and for the convenience of parties and witnesses. n2 Rule 26(a) specifies a schedule requiring mandatory automatic disclosure of specified information absent court order or stipulation. n3 If a party attempts to serve discovery demands seeking the information covered by automatic disclosures prior to the time that the disclosures are due, the court may strike the discovery demands as untimely. n4

Both parties may conduct discovery at the same time. Initiation of discovery by one party does not require any other party to delay its own discovery. n5 Consequently, a party may not unilaterally demand that they have priority in document production and need not produce documents to the other party until their own request is completed merely because they have served a discovery request on the other party first. n6 To establish any priority in discovery production, the party must file a motion for protective order. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.121 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Telecomm Technical Services, Inc. v. Siemens Rolm Communications, Inc., 172 F.R.D. 532, 541 (N.D. Ga. 1997) (nothing in Rule 26(d) withdraws discretion of court to order that discovery not begin, for example, until 30 days after the defendant's answer).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1); Thrower v. Barney, 849 F. Supp. 1445, 1446 (N.D. Ala. 1994) , aff'd without opinion, 43 F.3d 680 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 15.02[1][b][vi].

(n6)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(C) (deposition of person about to leave country may be noticed before Rule 26(f) conference).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Telecomm Technical Servs., Inc. v. Siemens Rolm Commun., Inc., 172 F.R.D. 532, 541 (N.D. Ga. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n10)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.122 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n11)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(A).

(n12)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2); see Cruden v. Bank of New York, 957 F.2d 961, 972 (2d Cir. 1992) (order regarding sequence of discovery is at discretion of trial judge).

(n13)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

(n14)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n15)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(B).

(n16)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(A).

(n17)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(B) (protective order may require that discovery be had only on specified terms and conditions, including designation of time).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.06

§ 15.06 Supplementation of Disclosures and Responses

[1] Obligation to Supplement Automatic Disclosures and Discovery Responses n*

[a] Supplementation Required For Disclosure and Written Responses

A party must supplement or correct automatic disclosures and written discovery responses the party has made whenever the party learns that the disclosures or responses are incomplete or incorrect. This supplementation duty extends to two types of discovery: n1 (1) the mandatory initial disclosures that a party is required to make prior to trial, and (2) the written responses a party makes in response to the opposition party's interrogatories, requests for production, and requests for admission. A party must also supplement or correct such disclosures or responses to include information that is acquired by the party after the disclosure or response when the court orders such supplementation or corrections. n2 The duty to supplement and correct applies both to attorneys as well as parties who discover corrective information. n3

Rule 26(e)(1)(A) imposes a duty on a party to supplement its mandatory automatic disclosures at appropriate intervals, when a party learns that the information in a mandatory disclosure is in some material respect incomplete or incorrect and if additional or correct information has not otherwise been made known to other parties during the discovery process or in writing. n4 Rule 26(e)(1)(A) also imposes a duty on a party to seasonably amend a prior response to an interrogatory, request for production, or request for admission if the party learns that the response is in some material respect incomplete or incorrect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the discovery process or in writing. n5

[b] Additional Supplementation Required for Expert Witness Disclosures

A party's duty to supplement and correct generally does not extend to disclosures made as part of deposition testimony. n6 However, with respect to experts for whom a disclosure report is required, n7 the duty extends both to information contained in the expert's report and to information provided through the expert's deposition. n8 The continuing duty to disclose typically arises in the context of the expert's report. Thus, a party is under a continuing duty to supplement the expert's report if there are any additions or changes to what has been previously disclosed. For example, if the expert states in the initial report that he or she will provide more complete or additional opinions, the party must amend the statement of opinions in the report. n9 Additionally, the continuing duty applies to the expert's deposition testimony. n10 An expert may change his or her opinions in preparation for trial and even during trial, n11 and to protect the opposition party's trial preparations, these changes must be Disclosed. n12

Any supplementation or other changes required with regard to the expert witness information must be disclosed by the time the party's pretrial disclosures are due under Rule 26(a)(3); n13 that is, at least 30 days before trial, unless otherwise directed by the court. n14 The pretrial disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(3) are commonly directed by the court, because they are contained in the court's pretrial order. Consequently, any supplementation of expert witness information then available should take place on or before the date of the pretrial order.

[2] Effect of Failure to Supplement n*

[a] Sanctions Available for Failure to Supplement As Required

[i] Court Has Discretion to Impose Various Sanctions

The rule governing discovery violation sanctions explicitly provides that a party is subject to sanctions if: n1 the party fails to supplement its automatic mandatory disclosures or discovery responses as required under Rule 26(e)(1)(A) or as ordered by the court under Rule 26(e)(1)(B), n2 or fails to amend a prior disclosure regarding an expert's report or information given during the expert's deposition as required under Rule 26(e)(2). n3 Specifically, if a party without substantial justification fails to supplement or to amend a prior response to discovery as required by Rule 26(e), and the failure is not harmless, the party may be precluded from using that witness or information at trial, at a hearing, or on a motion. n4 In addition to or in lieu of this sanction, the court on motion and after affording an opportunity to be heard, may impose other appropriate sanctions, such as requiring payment of reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the violation of Rule 26(e), informing the jury of the failure to make the required supplementation, and may impose any of the actions authorized under Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi). n5

[ii] Exception for Supplementation of Electronically Stored Information

There is an exception to the imposition of sanctions for cases involving supplementation of electronically stored information, n6 which includes but is not limited to items such as data files, program files, and e-mail messages and files. n7 A court may not impose sanctions on a party for failing to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system, unless there are exceptional circumstances. n8 This provision applies to information lost due to the routine operation of an information system only if the operation was in good faith. Good faith in the routine operation of an information system may require a party to intervene to modify or suspend certain features of that routine operation to prevent the loss of information, if that information is subject to a preservation obligation. A preservation obligation may arise from many sources, including common law, statutes, regulations, or a court order in the case. The good faith requirement of Rule 37(e) means that a party is not permitted to exploit the routine operation of an information system to avoid discovery obligations by allowing that operation to continue in order to destroy specific stored information that it is required to preserve. n9

[b] Court's Determination of Appropriate Sanction

When a court determines that there has been a violation by failure to supplement, the court has discretion to decline to impose sanctions if the failure was substantially justified or was harmless. n10 In determining whether a Rule 26(e) violation was justified or harmless, the court should consider the following factors, n11 which it should also consider in the determination of the nature and the monetary amount of any sanction to be imposed: n12

1. The importance of the testimony or evidence that may be subject to exclusion.

2. The prejudice to the opposing party arising from allowance of the testimony or evidence subject to exclusion.

3. The ability of the party to cure the prejudice.

4. The extent to which introducing such testimony would disrupt the trial.

5. The explanation, if any, for the party's failure to comply with the duty to supplement, including any bad faith or willfulness.

The rules do not require that a discovery order be violated before sanctions are imposed. n13 Therefore, a party need not make a motion to compel compliance with a discovery request for the court to impose sanctions under Rule 26(e). n14 A district court may sanction individual attorneys for violations of Rule 26(e), if the attorney is actually aware that the client's discovery responses were incorrect. On the other hand, a district court should not sanction an attorney who was unaware of his or her client's violation of the rule. n15

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.131 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(A); see Dotson v. Bravo, 321 F.3d 663, 667 (7th Cir. 2003) (duty applies whether through mistake in initial disclosure or through change in circumstance).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(A).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1); [a], above.

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(2); see Reed v. Smith & Nephew, Inc., 527 F. Supp. 2d 1336, 1349 (W.D. Okla. 2007) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Jacobsen v. Deseret Book Co., 287 F.3d 936, 951-952 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(2).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Newell Puerto Rico, Ltd. v. Rubbermaid Inc., 20 F.3d 15, 21, 22 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Macaulay v. Anas, 321 F.3d 45, 50 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(2).

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3).

(n16)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.132 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n17)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n18)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1).

(n19)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(2).

(n20)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n21)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(A)-(C).

(n22)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e).

(n23)Footnote 7. See Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n24)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e).

(n25)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n26)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n27)Footnote 11. Reed v. Smith & Nephew, Inc., 527 F. Supp. 2d 1336, 1350 (W.D. Okla. 2007) .

(n28)Footnote 12. See Bradley v. United States, 866 F.2d 120, 126-127 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n29)Footnote 13. Toth v. Grand Trunk R.R., 306 F.3d 335, 344 (6th Cir. 2002) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n30)Footnote 14. Alldread v. City of Grenada, 988 F.2d 1425, 1436 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n31)Footnote 15. Reed v. Iowa Marine and Repair Corp., 16 F.3d 82, 85 (5th Cir. 1994) .

8 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.07

§ 15.07 Discovery Planning Conferencen*

[1] Discovery Conference

[a] Function of Required Discovery Conference

All parties, as soon as practicable and in any event at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), n1 must confer to discuss the nature and the basis of their claims and defenses, the possibilities for a prompt settlement or resolution of the case, to make or arrange for the automatic initial disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1), to discuss any issues relating to preserving discoverable information, and to develop a proposed discovery plan. Attorneys of record and all unrepresented parties that have appeared in the case are jointly responsible for arranging for the conference, attempting in good faith to agree on the proposed discovery plan, and submitting to the court within 14 days after the conference a written report outlining the plan. n2 The Rule 26(f) conference is no longer required in those categories of proceedings that are exempted by Rule 26(a)(1)(B) from the mandatory initial disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a)(1)(A). n3

The primary purpose of the discovery conference is to refine and clarify disputes by requiring the parties to make basic disclosures and to set a schedule for future discovery. n4 The conference requirement contemplates that no discovery will take place until the parties have conferred. Although discovery may not be conducted prior to the conference, parties may file motions to dismiss or for summary judgment. n5 Under the rule, the parties no longer need to meet in person on a face-to-face basis, although the court may order that the parties or attorneys attend the conference in person. n6

Parties are required to make the initial disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1) within 14 days of the discovery planning conference. n7 The parties should use the Rule 26(f) conference to exchange, discuss, and clarify their respective automatic disclosures. Parties should also consider whether a stipulation extending the 14-day period would be appropriate, for example, when a defendant would have less than 60 days after being served in which to make its initial disclosures. n8

If necessary to comply with an expedited schedule for Rule 16(b) conferences, a court may by local rule require: (1) that the discovery conference between the parties occur fewer than 21 days before the scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), n9 and (2) that the written report outlining the discovery plan be filed fewer than 14 days after the discovery conference between the parties, or excuse the parties from submitting a written report and permit them to report orally on their discovery plan at the Rule 16(b) conference. n10

[b] Discretion of Court to Alter Discovery Conference Requirements

The district court has discretion to enter an order that modifies the conference requirements, or dispenses entirely with the requirement that the parties hold a discovery conference. n11 Such an order may be appropriate in cases that are exempted from the scheduling order requirement under Rule 16(b), n12 such as cases in which there will be no discovery, in which discovery is rarely required, or when a conference of the parties would be impracticable. n13

Rule 26(f) does not require that the discovery conference be held with direct participation by the court. n14 Nevertheless, district courts continue to exercise supervisory authority over discovery. In its scheduling order, for example, the court will set a time for the completion of discovery. n15 Furthermore, the court may issue other orders affecting the scope, timing, and extent of discovery and disclosures. n16 The court also retains control through the power to impose sanctions for discovery abuse. n17 For example, if a party is not ready for trial and requests a continuance, the court will deny the motion for continuance if the party fails to comply with the conference requirements of Rule 26(f). n18

[2] Discovery Plan

The attorneys of record and all unrepresented parties that have appeared in the case are jointly responsible to proceed in good faith, to agree on the proposed discovery plan, and to submit to the court within 14 days after the discovery conference a written report outlining the plan. n1 The discovery plan must state the parties' views and proposals concerning the following matters:

1. What changes should be made in the timing, form, or requirement for disclosures under Rule 26(a), including a statement of when initial disclosures were made or will be made; n2

2. The subjects on which discovery may be needed, when discovery should be completed, n3 and whether discovery should be conducted in phases or be limited to or focused on particular issues; n4

3. Any issues about disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information, including the form or forms in which it should be produced; n5

4. Any issues about claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation materials, and if the parties agree on a procedure to assert these claims after production, whether to ask the court to include their agreement in an order; n6

5. What changes should be made in the limitations on discovery imposed under these rules or by local rule, and what other limitations should be imposed; n7 and

6. Any other orders that the court should issue under Rule 26(c) (regarding limitations on discovery) or under Rule 16(b) (contents of scheduling order) and 16(c) (pretrial conference matters). n8

The parties must confer in good faith to reach agreement on the matters required to be included in the discovery plan. n9 However, if they cannot in good faith reach agreement on particular claims or defenses, the discovery plan should include each party's competing proposals, as well as a statement of the issues on which they were able to reach agreement. Any party that fails to cooperate in good faith respecting the scheduling and holding of the discovery conference and the generation of a joint discovery plan may be sanctioned under Rule 37(f). n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.141 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b); see also Carney v. K-Mart Corporation, 176 F.R.D. 227, 228-229 (S.D. W. Va. 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. Cablevision of Boston, Inc. v. Public Improvement Comm'n, 38 F. Supp. 2d 46, 62 (D. Mass. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Thrower v. Barney, 849 F. Supp. 1445, 1446 (N.D. Ala. 1994) , aff'd without opinion, 43 F.3d 680 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(4)(A).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(4)(B).

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f); Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b).

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n15)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n16)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n17)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(ii).

(n18)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(3), 37(c)(1), 37(f).

(n19)Footnote 18. Cook v. City of Pomona, 884 F. Supp. 1457, 1460 (C.D. Cal. 1995) .

(n20)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2); see Beecham v. Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, 424 F.3d 1109, 1111 (D.C. Cir. 2005) (burden of conferring and formulating discovery plan falls on attorneys for opposing sides).

(n21)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(A).

(n22)Footnote 3. See Walter Kidde Portable Equip., Inc. v. Universal Sec. Instruments, 479 F.3d 1330, 1333 (Fed. Cir. 2007) .

(n23)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(B).

(n24)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(C); see Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) (this information includes, for example, data files, program files, backup and archival tapes, cache files, temporary files, voice mail files, and e-mail messages and files).

(n25)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(D).

(n26)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(E).

(n27)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(F).

(n28)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2).

(n29)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(f).

9 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.08

§ 15.08 Discovery Signature Requirementsn*

[1] Required Signature Constitutes Certification

Every mandatory, automatic initial disclosure n1 and pretrial disclosure n2 and every discovery request, response, or objection must be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's own name (or by the party personally, if unrepresented) and must state the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. n3 A signature constitutes a certification of the following:

1. By signing an automatic disclosure, the attorney or party certifies that to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief formed after a reasonable inquiry, that the disclosure is complete and correct as of the time it is made. n4

2. By signing a discovery request, response, or objection, the attorney or party certifies that to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief formed after a reasonable inquiry, that the item is: n5

a. consistent with the Federal Rules and warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for extending, modifying, or reversing existing law, or for establishing new law; n6

b. not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass, cause unnecessary delay, or needlessly increase the cost of litigation; n7 and

c. neither unreasonable nor unduly burdensome or expensive, considering the needs of the case, prior discovery in the case, the amount in controversy, and the importance of the issues at stake in the action. n8

The certification requirement serves the purpose of deterring discovery abuse by requiring persons certifying disclosures, requests, responses, and objections to consider carefully the veracity and accuracy of the papers before signing them. n9

[2] Effect of Failure to Sign

If an attorney or party fails to sign a disclosure, request, response, or objection, other parties have no duty to act on the unsigned item until it is signed, and the court must strike it unless a signature is promptly supplied after the omission is called to the attorney's or party's attention. n1 A court that strikes a request, response, or objection because of a failure to sign may still subject the party or his or her attorney to sanctions if the request, response or disclosure violates discovery rules. Such sanctions, however, must be imposed under authority other than rule 26(g) (such as, Rule 16(f) or Rule 37, or 28 U.S.C. § 1927), because sanctions may not be applied under Rule 26(g) unless the request, response, or objection is signed. n2

[3] Effect of Improper Certification

If a certification violates Rule 26 without substantial justification, the court on a filed motion or its own initiative must impose an appropriate sanction on the signer, the party on whose behalf the signer was acting, or both. The sanction may include an order to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the violation. n1 The sanction provision is mandatory, in that it provides that the court must impose a sanction when there is a certification violation without substantial justification. For example, if discovery responses are for the improper purposes of causing unnecessary delay, increasing the other party's expenses, and preventing the other party from receiving discovery material, sanctions are required. n2 However, the court has discretion regarding the type of sanction to impose. n3

The imposition of sanctions does not require subjective bad faith by the signer. The imposition of sanctions under Rule 26(g) is proper when the signing of a discovery response is incomplete, evasive or objectively unreasonable under the circumstances. The "reasonable inquiry" standard is an objective standard. The most obvious situation where sanctions are appropriate occurs where a party or its attorney submits a false discovery document. n4 Similarly, the court is required to impose a sanction on the party and/or the party's attorney when the certification itself is false. n5

Even though subjective bad faith is not required for the imposition of sanctions, the converse is not true; therefore, if the certification process is completed in bad faith, the court may impose sanctions. n6 Thus, if a discovery request or response is made for the improper purpose of causing unnecessary delay or needlessly increasing the cost of litigation, the court may impose sanctions. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 26.151-26.154 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)(A).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)(A)(i).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)(A)(ii).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)(A)(iii).

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(2).

(n12)Footnote 2. See Wade v. Soo Line R.R. Corp., 500 F.3d 559, 565 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(3).

(n14)Footnote 2. Chudasama v. Mazda Motor Corp., 123 F.3d 1353, 1372 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n15)Footnote 3. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 51, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n16)Footnote 4. Books Are Fun, Ltd. v. Rosebrough, 239 F.R.D. 532, 550-551 (D. Iowa 2007) .

(n17)Footnote 5. Wade v. Soo Line R.R. Corp., 500 F.3d 559, 565 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n18)Footnote 6. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 268 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)(A)(ii).

10 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.09

§ 15.09 Stipulations Regarding Discoveryn*

[1] Parties May Alter Discovery Procedures By Stipulation

[a] Agreement of Parties to Control Particular Aspect of Discovery

Ordinarily, parties must conduct discovery in compliance with Rules 26 through 37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the local rules of the court. n1 However, unless the court directs otherwise, the parties may agree by stipulation to dispense with particular discovery requirements imposed by the federal rules, and may modify the discovery procedures that will apply to their particular claims and defenses. n2 In particular, the parties may stipulate that:

1. A deposition may be taken before any person, at any time or place, on any notice, and in the manner specified, and that such deposition may be used in the same way as any other deposition. n3

2. Any procedures other than depositions that govern or limit discovery be modified; however, a stipulation extending the time for any form of discovery must have court approval if it would interfere with the time set for completing discovery, for hearing a motion, or for trial. n4

Rule 29 applies only to stipulations relating to general discovery, not to stipulations concerning mandatory automatic disclosures, which are governed by Rule 26(a). n5

[b] Court Has Ultimate Control over Discovery

Although the parties may ordinarily control discovery by stipulation, n6 the court has ultimate power to order that discovery be accomplished in a manner other than stipulated. n7 This authority is based on the court's inherent authority to control discovery in the interests of justice. n8 Because the purpose of the discovery rules is to promote the open exchange of information, a court may refuse to approve stipulations that constrict discovery. On the other hand, a district court is more likely to approve a stipulation that expands discovery, even if there would not have been a basis under the Federal Rules for requiring the discovery. n9

With respect to any stipulation extending the time for any form of discovery, that stipulation must have prior court approval if it would conflict with the time set by the court for completing discovery, for hearing a motion, or for trial. n10 Additionally, by order or local rule, the court may direct that its approval be obtained prior to the time that specific types of stipulation take effect. n11

[2] Examples of Valid Stipulations

The following are examples of the types of enforceable stipulations that parties have made:

1. A stipulation to commence early discovery, that is, prior to the discovery planning conference required by Rule 26(f), n1 or to alter the deadlines for discovery. n2

2. A stipulation to the entry of a protective order to protect a party or other person against annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. n3

3. Stipulations relating to depositions, such as stipulations (1) regarding the number of depositions, n4 (2) allowing the party to take a deposition before a person other than an officer named under Rule 28, n5 or (3) allowing the parties to take depositions by telephone or other remote electronic means. n6

4. A stipulation permitting service of more than 25 interrogatories. n7

5. A stipulation to have service of a request for production and inspection take place before the discovery planning conference required by Rule 26(f). n8 Additionally, parties may stipulate that a written response to a request for production be served within a longer or shorter period than the 30 days normally required, provided that any extension does not interfere with a court-specified discovery cut-off date or scheduled hearing or trial. n9

6. Stipulations relating to requests for admissions, n10 including a stipulation that a written answer or objection to a request for admission must be served within a time other than the usual 30 days. n11

7. Stipulations related to subpoenas under Rule 45, when the subpoena is used related to discovery purposes. n12

[3] Effect of a Stipulation

The court will give full effect to unambiguous terms expressed in a stipulation. n1 When parties stipulate in writing how discovery will be conducted, they waive their rights under otherwise applicable federal rules. n2 However, the court will not give effect to a discovery stipulation that does not show binding intent. For example the court will not give effect to the parties' stipulation to a particular practice or procedure unless the stipulation makes clear it is applicable to the case at hand. n3

A stipulation controls discovery of the parties only to the terms actually agreed on. However, the court may consider circumstances surrounding a stipulation, so that rigid enforcement does not lead to injustice. n4 For example, a stipulation that a party will pay the reasonable costs of reproducing documents does not contemplate payment of attorney's fees, because attorney's fees are extraordinary costs of complying with the production of documents. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 29.02-29.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Boardman v. National Medical Enterprises, 106 F.3d 840, 842-843 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(a).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b); see [b], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a), discussed in § 15.02.

(n7)Footnote 6. See [a], above.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29.

(n9)Footnote 8. See Cowen v. Bank United of Texas, 70 F.3d 937, 944 (7th Cir. 1995) ; Feldman v. Flood, 176 F.R.D. 651, 653 (M.D. Fla. 1997) ; see also Federal Judicial Center, Manual for Complex Litigation § 11.422 (4th ed. 2004).

(n10)Footnote 9. See, e.g., In re Application of Sinclair Oil Corp., 881 F. Supp. 535, 539 (D. Wyo. 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 29, Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n14)Footnote 2. *Greenawalt v. Sun City W. Fire Dist., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40447, at *10-11 (D. Ariz. 2006) .

(n15)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n16)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A) (oral depositions); Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2)(A) (depositions on written questions).

(n17)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(a).

(n18)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a), 30(b)(4).

(n19)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 29, 33(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n20)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n21)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b), 34(b)(2)(A).

(n22)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n23)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b), 36(a)(3).

(n24)Footnote 12. See Angell v. Shawmut Bank Conn. Nat'l Ass'n, 153 F.R.D. 585, 589-590 (M.D.N.C. 1994) .

(n25)Footnote 1. Berkley v. Clark Equip. Co., 26 F.R.D. 153, 154 (E.D.N.Y. 1960) .

(n26)Footnote 2. See OMG Fid., Inc. v. Sirius Techs., Inc., 239 F.R.D. 300, 306 (N.D.N.Y. 2006) (when parties otherwise agree by stipulation entered into under Rule 29, discovery periods prescribed under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not control).

(n27)Footnote 3. Melton v. McCormick, 94 F.R.D. 344, 346 (W.D.N.Y. 1982) (party's agreement to pay deposition expenses in one action has no effect on different action).

(n28)Footnote 4. Rice v. Glad Hands, Inc., 750 F.2d 434, 438 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n29)Footnote 5. Angell v. Shawmut Bank Conn. Nat'l Ass'n, 153 F.R.D. 585, 590-591 (M.D.N.C. 1994) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
I. PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES GOVERNING ALL DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 15.10-15.19

[Reserved]

§§ 15.10-15.19[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.20

§ 15.20 Perpetuation of Testimony By Deposition

[1] Purpose of Perpetuation Procedures n*

[a] Methods for Perpetuation of Testimony Other than Trial Testimony

There are three methods for perpetuation of testimony outside of the trial of an action. These are (1) the taking of depositions before the action, n1 (2) the taking of depositions pending appeal, n2 and (3) the initiation of a separate action to perpetuate testimony: n3

1. Rule 27(a) provides a method for perpetuating testimony before the filing of a suit when there is an expectation of future litigation and a risk that the testimony could cease to exist if not preserved. n4 Rule 27(a) is intended to apply to situations in which testimony might be lost to a prospective litigant unless taken immediately, without having to wait for a lawsuit or other legal proceeding to commence. n5 Any person who desires to perpetuate testimony must file a verified petition in the United States District Court for the district where any expected adverse party resides. n6 A district court will order discovery if satisfied that the perpetuation of testimony may prevent a failure or delay of justice. n7 A Rule 27(a) petition is not a separate action and does not require a current independent basis of federal jurisdiction; n8 rather, it is an ancillary proceeding. n9 However, the petitioner must be able to show that subject matter jurisdiction will exist in federal court over the contemplated action for which the testimony is being perpetuated. n10

2. Rule 27(b) provides a procedure to use when perpetuating testimony may prevent a failure or delay of justice, when an appeal has been taken or will be taken, to avoid loss of testimony while the appeal is pending. n11 Unlike depositions in pending actions, a deposition pending appeal maybe taken only by leave of the court n12 and only to perpetuate testimony for use in the event of further proceedings in that court. n13 A party who wants to perpetuate testimony under Rule 27(b) must move for leave to take the deposition in the district court that rendered the judgment. n14

3. Rule 27(c) provides that the courts retain their inherent power to entertain an independent action to perpetuate testimony. n15 Rule 27 does not specify the procedures or requirements for filing such an action; however, Rule 27(c) was intended to preserve the right to use a separate action to perpetuate testimony under former Section 644 of Title 28 of the United States Code. Thus, the courts tend to follow the procedures and requirements established under that statute in a Rule 27(c) action to perpetuate testimony. n16

[b] Special Perpetuation Procedures Not Substitute for Standard Discovery

Rule 27 procedures are applicable only to preserve testimony from the imminent possibility of extinction; they are not a substitute for standard methods of discovery. n17 Thus, the scope of inquiry allowed under Rule 27 is narrower than that available under the general discovery provisions of Rule 26. n18 While Rule 26 permits discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action, n19 Rule 27 may not be used to investigate for possible claims, n20 or to inquire into facts related to an injury, unless a witness's testimony is in imminent danger of being lost. n21 However, Rule 27 may be used if the purpose is both to perpetuate testimony and discovery, n22 provided that the petition to perpetuate testimony sets forth in detail the substance of the testimony to be preserved. n23

[2] Depositions Before Action

[a] Petition is Required to Take Deposition Before Action

A person who wants to perpetuate testimony concerning any matter cognizable in a United States court must file a verified petition requesting an order authorizing the petitioner to depose the named persons in the district court for the district where any expected adverse party resides. n1 The term "United States court" refers to the Supreme Court of the United States, courts of appeals, district courts, bankruptcy courts, and the Court of International Trade. n2 Rule 27(a) must be invoked prior to the filing of a complaint, because after the contemplated action is filed, the general rules of discovery apply. n3 A prospective defending party may bring a Rule 27(a) petition, provided he or she alleges facts showing that there is a real likelihood that the expected adversary will bring an action. n4

Rule 27 does not define the phrase "cognizable in a United States court," but it has been generally acknowledged that there must be some potential basis for federal jurisdiction; in other words, the petitioner must show that the federal court of the contemplated action requiring the testimony to be perpetuated will have federal subject matter jurisdiction. n5 Therefore, for example, Rule 27(a) is not available to perpetuate testimony in a contemplated personal injury action which could present neither federal question jurisdiction nor diversity jurisdiction. n6

[b] Notice and Service of Petition

After filing the petition, and at least 21 days before the date of the hearing, the petitioner must serve a copy of the petition on each person named in the petition as an expected adverse party and a notice stating the time and place of the hearing. The notice may be served either inside or outside the district or state in the manner provided in Rule 4. n7 If that service cannot be made with reasonable diligence on an expected adverse party, the court may order service by publication or otherwise. The court must appoint an attorney to represent persons not served in the manner provided in Rule 4 and to cross-examine the deponent if an unserved person is not otherwise represented. If any expected adverse party is a minor or is incompetent, Rule 17(c) applies. n8

[c] Contents of Petition

A petition to perpetuate testimony under Rule 27(a) must be titled in the name of the petitioner and must show each of the following: n9

1. That the petitioner expects to be a party to an action cognizable in a United States court but cannot presently bring it or cause it to be brought. n10 The petitioner must show a present inability to bring the action in any court, state or federal, anywhere in the United States. n11

2. The subject matter of the expected action and the petitioner's interest. n12

3. The facts that the petitioner wants to establish by the proposed testimony and the reasons to perpetuate it. n13

4. The names or a description of the persons whom the petitioner expects to be adverse parties and their addresses, so far as known. n14

5. The name, address, and expected substance of the testimony of each deponent. n15

6. A statement that the petitioner asks for an order authorizing the petitioner to take the depositions of the persons named in the petition. n16

7. A verification. n17

General or conclusory allegations are insufficient in the petition. The petitioner must specifically state facts which establish all of the elements listed above. For example, the petitioner must state facts that the testimony will preserve. n18

[d] Court's Order to Perpetuate Testimony and Evidence

If satisfied that perpetuating the testimony may prevent a failure or delay of justice, the court must issue an order granting the petition. The court's order perpetuating testimony must: (1) designate or describe the persons whose depositions may be taken, (2) specify the subject matter of the examinations, and state whether the depositions will be taken orally or by written interrogatories. n19 The court also may order discovery of the type permitted in Rule 34, which provides for the production of documents and things and for entry on land for inspection and other purposes, n20 and may order discovery under Rule 35, which provides for the physical and mental examination of persons. n21 The overall purpose of Rule 27 is to perpetuate and preserve evidence for use in a prospective action, and to the extent that a use of Rules 34 and 35 will yield such evidence, the petitioner may use these rules, whether or not they are used in conjunction with the taking of a deposition. n22

Orders directing depositions to perpetuate testimony in advance of litigation are subject to immediate appellate review, under an abuse of discretion standard. n23

[e] Examination Perpetuating Testimony

After the court has issued an order to perpetuate testimony under Rule 27(a), n24 the depositions must proceed in the manner of other depositions as specified in the federal rules. A reference in these rules to the court where an action is pending means, for purposes of Rule 27, the court where the petition for the deposition was filed. n25 Rule 27(a)(3) does not specify the scope of the evidence permitted to be perpetuated under Rule 27. The case precedent indicates that the petitioners may perpetuate that testimony or evidence that would be discoverable under Rule 26, provided that the petitioner shows that the testimony or evidence requested is material and competent. n26

[f] Use of Deposition Perpetuating Testimony

Once testimony or evidence is perpetuated under Rule 27(a), the petitioner may use the deposition under Rule 32(a) in any later-filed district-court action involving the same subject matter if the deposition either was taken under the Federal Rules or, although not taken under the Federal Rules, would be admissible in evidence in the courts of the state where it was taken. n27

[3] Depositions Pending Appeal

[a] Purpose of Deposition to Perpetuate Testimony Pending Appeal of Judgment

After a court has rendered a judgment, and an appeal has been taken or may still be taken from that judgment, the rendering court may permit a party to depose witnesses to perpetuate the witnesses' testimony for use in the event of further proceedings in the rendering court. n1 The purpose of perpetuating testimony in the district court pending appeal of a judgment is to prevent injustice from the possible loss of testimony in any future proceedings in the district court after the appeal. n2 Rule 27(b) is intended for use only after entry of a final judgment. Rule 27(b) is not available in a pending suit merely because an interlocutory ruling is on appeal. n3

[b] Motion Required to Take Deposition to Perpetuate Testimony Pending Appeal

The party who wants to perpetuate testimony pending an appeal may move for leave to take the depositions, on the same notice and service as if the action were pending in the district court. n4

A motion to perpetuate testimony pending appeal must state each of the following:

1. The names and addresses of each deponent. n5

2. The substance of the testimony the moving party expects to elicit from each deponent. n6

3. The reasons for perpetuating the testimony, n7 including the risk that the testimony will be lost. n8

[c] Order of Court to Perpetuate Testimony and Evidence

If the court finds that perpetuating the testimony pending appeal may prevent a failure or delay of justice, the court may order the depositions to be taken, and the depositions may then be taken and used as any other deposition taken in a pending district-court action. n9 The court also may order discovery of the type permitted in Rule 34, which provides for the production of documents and things and for entry on land for inspection and other purposes, n10 and may order discovery under Rule 35, which provides for the physical and mental examination of persons. n11 Subpoenas under Rule 45 may also be used at this stage for discovery purposes. n12

The ruling of a district court on a request to perpetuate testimony by a district court under Rule 27(b) is a final order, and the appropriate court of appeals has jurisdiction to review it. n13 The order is appealable whether it grants or denies a Rule 27(b) request, n14 and the standard of review is abuse of discretion. n15

[d] Scope of Perpetuation Pending Appeal

The purpose of a deposition and further discovery pending appeal is to perpetuate testimony for use in the event of future district court proceedings. n16 Consequently, a party will not be permitted to use Rule 27(b) to obtain discovery to support an argument raised for the first time after judgment. Nor will a party be permitted to obtain discovery after judgment of matters that could have been obtained during discovery in the main action, n17 because in such circumstances, the movant is not actually attempting to avoid a failure or delay of justice, but is trying to relitigate the issues. n18 Similarly Rule 27(b) may not be used by a party to reopen a case after judgment by introducing a new theory or to correct tactical choices made the first time. n19

[4] Independent Action to Perpetuate Testimony

Rule 27(c) provides that the provisions of Rule 27(a) and 27(b) do not preclude exercise of the district court's power to entertain a separate action for the sole purpose of perpetuating testimony. n1 Because Rule 27(c) contemplates a true action rather than the ancillary proceeding before litigation created by Rule 27(a) or the perpetuation on appeal of an action, n2 a Rule 27(c) action must be brought in a manner that satisfies the venue requirements for an original action. Furthermore, the plaintiff must give service of process in the same manner as in the expected action in which the perpetuated testimony will be used. n3

The complaint in a Rule 27(c) action must allege facts similar to those required for a Rule 27(a) petition. Thus, the plaintiff is entitled to discovery under Rule 27(c) if he or she establishes all of the following: n4

1. That the records or testimony sought are competent and material to the matter in controversy;

2. That the information sought cannot be obtained in ordinary discovery because the plaintiff is not yet in a position to initiate such an action; and

3. That the testimony or records may be lost if the plaintiff cannot obtain them at the present time.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 27.02-27.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(c).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1); see [2], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. United States, 68 F.3d 1371, 1373 (D.C. Cir. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1).

(n9)Footnote 8. General Motors Corp. v. Gunn, 752 F. Supp. 729, 732 (N.D. Miss. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Shore v. Acands, Inc., 644 F.2d 386, 389 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Dresser Industries, Inc. v. U.S., 596 F.2d 1231 (5th Cir. 1979) ; In re Nabors Loffland Drilling Co., 142 F.R.D. 295, 296 (W.D. La. 1992) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(1); see [3], below.

(n13)Footnote 12. In re City of El Paso, 887 F.2d 1103, 1105 (D.C. Cir. 1989) .

(n14)Footnote 13. In re City of El Paso, 887 F.2d 1103, 1105 (D.C. Cir. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(2).

(n16)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(c); [4], below.

(n17)Footnote 16. Nevada v. O'Leary, 63 F.3d 932, 937 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 17. Deiulemar Compagnia di Navigazione S.P.A. v. M/V Allegra, 198 F.3d 473, 485 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n19)Footnote 18. In re Petition of Ford, 170 F.R.D. 504, 507 (M.D. Ala. 1997) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n21)Footnote 20. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. United States, 68 F.3d 1371, 1376 (D.C. Cir. 1995) .

(n22)Footnote 21. In re Petition of Ford, 170 F.R.D. 504, 506-507 (M.D. Ala. 1997) .

(n23)Footnote 22. See In re Gary Constr., Inc., 96 F.R.D. 432, 433 (D. Colo. 1983) .

(n24)Footnote 23. Application of Sitter, 167 F.R.D. 80, 82 (D. Minn. 1996) .

(n25)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1).

(n26)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 451.

(n27)Footnote 3. Shore v. Acands, Inc., 644 F.2d 386, 388 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n28)Footnote 4. See Martin v. Reynolds Metal Corp., 297 F.2d 49, 55 (9th Cir. 1961) .

(n29)Footnote 5. Dresser Industries, Inc. v. U.S., 596 F.2d 1231 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n30)Footnote 6. In re Nabors Loffland Drilling Co., 142 F.R.D. 295, 296 (W.D. La. 1992) .

(n31)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(2); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 4; see also In re Deiulemar di Navigazione S.p.A., 153 F.R.D. 592, 593 (E.D. La. 1994) (it appears that time limit may not be altered by court; construing former time limits).

(n32)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(2); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c).

(n33)Footnote 9. See Deiulemar Compagnia di Navigazione S.P.A. v. M/V Allegra, 198 F.3d 473, 484 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n34)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1)(A).

(n35)Footnote 11. Shore v. Acands, Inc., 644 F.2d 386, 388 (5th Cir. 1981) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n36)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1)(B).

(n37)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1)(C); see Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. United States, 68 F.3d 1371, 1375 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (particularized showing that testimony will be lost if not preserved).

(n38)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1)(D).

(n39)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1)(E); see In re Checkosky, 142 F.R.D. 4, 7 (D.D.C. 1992) , remanded on other grounds, Checkosky v. SEC, 23 F.3d 452 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (testimony must be known to petitioner)

(n40)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1).

(n41)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(1).

(n42)Footnote 18. In re Yamaha Motor Corp., 251 F.R.D. 97, 99-100 (N.D.N.Y. 2008) .

(n43)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3).

(n44)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n45)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a).

(n46)Footnote 22. In re Thomas, 155 F.R.D. 124, 126 (D. Md. 1994) (authorizing use of non-deposition discovery for perpetuation, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n47)Footnote 23. Deiulemar Compagnia di Navigazione S.P.A. v. M/V Allegra, 198 F.3d 473, 479 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n48)Footnote 24. See [d], above.

(n49)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3).

(n50)Footnote 26. Nissei Sangyo America, Ltd. v. United States, 31 F.3d 435, 440 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n51)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(4); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a) (using depositions in court proceedings); *see also Kimberly-Clark Corp. v. Cont'l Cas. Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60357, at *21-29 (N.D. Tex. 2006) (use of pre-suit deposition not allowed at trial under either federal or Texas law).

(n52)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(1).

(n53)Footnote 2. Central Bank of Tampa v. Transamerica Ins. Group, 128 F.R.D. 285, 286 (M.D. Fla. 1989) , aff'd without opinion, 959 F.2d 971 (11th Cir. 1992) (when passage of time or unavailability of witnesses would cause injustice, court may allow the perpetuation of testimony pending appeal, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n54)Footnote 3. Shore v. Acands, Inc., 644 F.2d 386, 389 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n55)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(1).

(n56)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(1)(A).

(n57)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(1)(A); see In re City of El Paso, 887 F.2d 1103, 1105 (D.C. Cir. 1989) .

(n58)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(1)(B).

(n59)Footnote 8. Lombard's, Inc. v. Prince Mfg., Inc., 753 F.2d 974, 976 (11th Cir. 1985) ; see In re Ramirez, 241 F.R.D. 595, 597 (W.D. Tex. 2006) (petitioner failed to adequately set forth factual basis showing that testimony sought would be lost if not preserved).

(n60)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(3).

(n61)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n62)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a).

(n63)Footnote 12. Okros v. Angelo Iafrate Constr. Co., 502 F. Supp. 2d 648, 651, 654 (E.D. Mich. 2007) .

(n64)Footnote 13. Shore v. Acands, Inc., 644 F.2d 386, 387-388 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n65)Footnote 14. Campbell v. Blodgett, 982 F.2d 1356, 1357-1358 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n66)Footnote 15. Shore v. Acands, Inc., 644 F.2d 386, 388 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n67)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b).

(n68)Footnote 17. See 19th St. Baptist Church v. St. Peters Episcopal Church, 190 F.R.D. 345, 348 (E.D. Pa. 2000) .

(n69)Footnote 18. See Schreier v. Weight Watchers Northeast Region, Inc., 872 F. Supp. 1, 5 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) , aff'd without opinion, 57 F.3d 1064 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n70)Footnote 19. Central Bank of Tampa v. Transamerica Ins. Group, 128 F.R.D. 285, 286 (M.D. Fla. 1989) .

(n71)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(c).

(n72)Footnote 2. General Motors Corp. v. Gunn, 752 F. Supp. 729, 732 (N.D. Miss. 1990) (Rule 27(c) independent action is in substance former bill in equity to perpetuate testimony material in determination of matter in controversy in expected action).

(n73)Footnote 3. Shore v. Acands, Inc., 644 F.2d 386, 389 (5th Cir. 1981) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n74)Footnote 4. Nissei Sangyo Am., Ltd. v. United States, 31 F.3d 435, 440 (7th Cir. 1994) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a).

13 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.21

§ 15.21 Depositions On Oral Examination

[1] Utility of Oral Depositions n*

[a] Nature and Purpose of Depositions

A deposition is a record of testimony taken outside the courtroom that has been certified in conformity with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure so that a court may regard it as equivalent to testimony delivered inside the courtroom under oath. n1 The purpose of a deposition is to determine information that a person might testify to at trial, such as what the witness observed or heard through a question and answer conversation between the deposing lawyer and the witness. n2 Unlike interrogatories or requests for admissions, which may not be addressed to nonparties, depositions of nonparties are permitted as of right. n3 Nonparties may also be required to produce documents through a deposition by service of a subpoena duces tecum pursuant to Rule 45. n4

Depositions are used most often for gathering information through discovery beyond that which can be obtained in the automatic disclosures. n5 The primary use of depositions at trial is in cross-examining witnesses and attempting to impeach their trial testimony to the extent it differs from testimony previously given at a deposition. Depositions are also used for a wide variety of other litigation purposes including preservation of information and establishment of facts crucial to settlement or rulings on pretrial motions. n6

[b] Persons Subject to Depositions

The testimony of any person may be taken by deposition. n7 The deposition Rule draws no distinction between the taking of the deposition of a party or of a nonparty witness. By contrast, interrogatories may be addressed only to a party. n8

Public officials, the United States government, and states and their subdivisions all are subject to deposition when warranted by the circumstances of the case. n9

The party to be deposed may be a natural person or any entity. When the deponent is a corporation, the person designated to be deposed on behalf of the corporation must be an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporate deponent. n10 If the individual designated in a notice of deposition is not an officer, director, or managing agent, the deposition must proceed as for an ordinary nonparty witness, and the deponent may not speak on behalf of the corporation. n11 If not deposed as a representative of the corporate party, a witness must be subpoenaed. Courts utilize a three-prong test for determining whether a person is a managing agent of a corporation: the individual must (1) possess general powers to exercise judgment and discretion in corporate matters; (2) be a person who can be relied on to give testimony, at the employer's request, in response to the demand of the examining party; and (3) be a person who can be expected to identify with the interests of the corporation. n12

The provision of Rule 30(a) that "any person" may be deposed may include even the attorney for a party; however, because questions to an attorney may give rise to objections based on work product doctrine and the attorney-client privilege, a request to depose opposing counsel is not allowed except in extraordinary circumstances. n13

[c] Persons Who May Preside Over Depositions

Unless the parties stipulate otherwise, a deposition must be conducted before an officer appointed or designated under Rule 28. n14 The officer must be authorized to administer oaths and take testimony. n15 Typically, a court reporter is the officer who conducts the deposition. n16 However, in rare instances, the court may order that a deposition take place in the presence of a discovery master, for example, if there have been discovery disputes. n17

[d] Timing of Depositions

Rule 30 provides that a party must obtain leave of court if, without the written stipulation of the parties, a party seeks to take a deposition before the time specified in Rule 26(d) or unless the party certifies in the notice with supporting facts that the deponent is expected to leave the United States and be unavailable for examination in this country after that time. n18 Rule 26(d) provides that, except in categories of proceedings exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26, or when authorized by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or by court order or agreement of the parties, a party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have met at a discovery conference as required by Rule 26(f). n19 The practical effect of the rules when read together is that parties must wait for the taking of any depositions until after a discovery plan has been agreed to by the parties, n20 absent leave of court or stipulation of the parties. n21

[e] When Deposition Requires Leave of Court

Ordinarily, a party does not need permission from the court to initiate and take a deposition. However, there are several situations in which leave of court is required, based on the principles stated in Rule 26(b)(2), n22 as follows:

1. If the proposed deposition would result in more than 10 depositions being taken by the plaintiffs, or by the defendants, or by third-party defendants. This limit of 10 depositions applies to each adverse "side" or "position" in litigation, and not to each party. Furthermore, both oral depositions and depositions on written questions under Rule 31 are included in determining the total number of depositions taken. Leave of court is not required to take more than 10 depositions if the parties stipulate to additional depositions. n23 A deposition of an entity or a governmental agency is counted as a single deposition for purposes of this limit, even if more than one person is designated to testify. n24

2. If the person has already been deposed in the case unless the parties stipulate to the second deposition. n25 Courts generally disfavor second depositions, and absent a showing of need or good reason, a court generally will not require a deponent to appear for a second deposition. However, second depositions may be justified in view of a subsequent disclosure or discovery occurring after the first deposition. n26

3. A party must obtain leave of court to take a deposition before the parties have met to plan discovery as required by Rules 26(d) and (f). n27 There are two exceptions to this requirement. First, the parties may stipulate to the taking of the deposition without leave of court. n28 Second, a deposition may be taken before the discovery planning meeting if the deposition notice contains a certification that the person to be examined is expected to leave the United States and be unavailable for examination in the United States unless deposed before the discovery conference. n29

4. A party must petition the district court to take a deposition to perpetuate testimony before the formal commencement of a civil action, n30 and must make a motion in the district court to take a deposition to perpetuate testimony pending appeal from a district court judgment. n31

5. When the person to be deposed is confined in prison. There is no provision for allowing the parties to stipulate to the deposition of an inmate without leave of court. n32

As noted above, when a party requests leave of court to take a deposition the court must generally grant permission to the extent that the deposition would be consistent with the principles stated in Rule 26(b)(2), n33 which gives the court discretion to limit the number and length of depositions, n34 and requires the court to limit depositions to the extent that (1) the deposition is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative or can be obtained from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; (2) the person taking the deposition has had ample opportunity already to obtain the information sought; or (3) the burden or expense of taking the deposition outweighs its likely benefit. n35

[2] Procedural Requirements for Oral Depositions n*

[a] Notice of Deposition Examination

A party that wants to depose a person by oral examination must give reasonable written notice to every other party to the action. n1

The notice must contain a statement of all of the following:

1. The time when the deposition will be taken. n2 A proper designation of the deposition time requires the deposing party to specify both the date and the hour at which the examination is to begin. Ordinarily, designation of any time during normal business hours is appropriate for a deposition. Therefore, it has been held improper to schedule a deposition for a Sunday. n3 However, there is no prohibition on counsel, the parties, and the deponent holding the deposition at their convenience, even if this results in a deposition at unusual hours. n4

2. The location of the deposition. n5 The party noticing the deposition usually has the right to choose the location. n6 If the party deposed is a plaintiff or the plaintiff's agent, the deposition is generally appropriate at the litigation forum. n7 The deposition of a defending party typically may be taken at its place of business. n8 However, the court has discretion to authorize that the deposition be taken in another location. n9 Unless the witness agrees otherwise, the deposition of a nonparty witness must take place within 100 miles of that witness's residence or place of employment. n10

3. The name and address of each person to be examined, if known. If the name of the deponent is not known, the notice must contain a general description sufficient to identify the person or the particular class or group to which the person belongs. n11 If the deponent is an organization or governmental agency and the party noticing the deposition is unsure of the name and address of the person with knowledge of the information sought, the notice may name the organization or governmental agency and describe with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested. Then, the organization or agency must designate a person to testify on its behalf. n12

4. If a subpoena duces tecum will be served on the person to be deposed, a designation of the materials to be produced. The party may do this by specifically identifying the materials in the notice or by attaching a copy of the subpoena. The notice to a party deponent may be accompanied by a request complying with Rule 34 to produce documents and tangible things at the deposition. n13

5. The method by which the testimony will be recorded. The party who notices the deposition must state in the notice the method for recording the testimony. Unless the court orders otherwise, testimony may be recorded by audio, audiovisual, or stenographic means. The noticing party bears the recording costs. Any party may arrange to transcribe a deposition. n14 With prior notice to the deponent and other parties, any party may designate another method for recording the testimony in addition to that specified in the original notice. That party bears the expense of the additional record or transcript unless the court orders otherwise. n15 The parties may stipulate, or the court may on motion order that a deposition be taken by telephone or other remote means. For the purpose of the federal rules, the deposition "takes place" where the deponent answers the questions. n16

[b] Compelling Attendance of Witness

If a witness is a party or party representative, the opposition need not subpoena the witness for deposition. Reasonable and proper deposition notice is sufficient to compel the party witness's attendance, n17 with sanctions available should the party fail to appear. n18 A party is responsible for ensuring that its representative attend the deposition. n19 However, a subpoena is necessary to compel someone who is not a party to appear for the taking of a deposition, n20 and subpoenas issued in connection with a deposition are governed by Rule 45. n21 There are two types of subpoenas under Rule 45 that may be used in connection with a deposition: (1) a subpoena ad testificandum, which compels the attendance of a witness to testify; n22 and (2) a subpoena duces tecum, which also requires the production of documents or things. n23

[c] Production of Documents in Connection with Deposition

The deposing party may require the deposition witness to bring documents and other materials to the deposition. This may be accomplished in one of two ways. If the deponent is not a party, the deposing party must serve a subpoena duces tecum on the deponent. n24 If the deponent is a party, the notice may be accompanied or preceded by a request made pursuant to Rule 34 for the production of documents and tangible things at the taking of the deposition. n25

A party may not use a document request in connection with a deposition in order to circumvent court-imposed discovery deadlines. For example, if the deadline for serving documentary discovery requests has passed, a party may not avoid the expiration of the deadline by serving an extensive document request in connection with a notice of deposition. n26

[d] Methods of Recording Testimony

[i] Permissible Methods

Unless the court orders otherwise, deposition testimony may be recorded by audio, audiovisual, or stenographic means. The noticing party bears the recording costs. n27 With prior notice to the deponent and other parties, any party may designate another method for recording the testimony in addition to that specified in the original notice. That party bears the expense of the additional record or transcript unless the court orders otherwise. n28 Also, any party may arrange to transcribe a deposition. n29 The parties may stipulate, or the court may on motion order that a deposition be taken by telephone or other remote means. For the purpose of the federal rules, the deposition "takes place" where the deponent answers the questions. n30

When a deposition is recorded other than stenographically, the person recording the deposition may not distort the appearance or demeanor of the deponent or attorneys through audio or visual recording techniques. n31 The rules do not require that a deposition be taken all in one method of recording and a deposing party may change techniques for a subsequent portion of a continued deposition. n32

Any party may arrange to transcribe a deposition. n33 Although Rule 30 does not generally require that a transcription be made, a transcript is required when the deposition will be used for the following purposes:

1. For pretrial disclosures under Rule 26(a)(3)(A)(2); n34

2. Under Rule 32(c) if the deposition is later to be offered as evidence at trial; n35 or

3. If the deposition is offered on a dispositive motion for summary judgment under Rule 56. n36

[ii] Court May Order Method of Recording

The court has the authority to designate the means by which a deposition will be recorded. n37 The court will typically use this discretion only when a party objects to the deposing party's choice of recording method. n38 However, the court may require, for example, a simultaneous stenographic recording of the deposition, if there is a legitimate concern about accuracy or distortion. n39

[iii] Deposition Taken by Remote Means

The parties may make a written stipulation or the court may order that a deposition be taken by telephone or other remote electronic means. A deposition taken by remote means is deemed taken in the district and at the place where the deponent answers the questions. n40 When the authorized officer administers the oath, the officer must be present with the witness at a telephonic deposition, rather than in the presence of the persons conducting the examination. n41

It is not necessary for a party to show extraordinary circumstances before the court will order a deposition by telephone, because there is no requirement in Rule 30(b)(4) of a showing of necessity, financial inability, or other hardship. Rather, the purpose of Rule 30(b)(4) is to reduce the cost of federal litigation by providing alternatives to traditional stenographic depositions. Therefore, leave to take a telephonic deposition should be liberally granted. Consequently, the burden is on the party opposing the deposition to establish why it should not be conducted by telephone, n42 once the party requesting to depose a witness by telephone presents a legitimate reason for its request. n43 The court must determine whether the use of telephonic means would reasonably ensure accuracy and trustworthiness and whether the opposing party would be prejudiced. n44

[3] Conduct of Deposition Examination

[a] Presiding Officer's Responsibilities

Before the deposition itself may begin, the presiding officer must satisfy the qualification and disqualification requirements of Rule 28. n1 The officer must make a statement on the record that includes the following: n2 (1) the officer's name and business address; (2) the date, time, and place of the deposition; (3) the name of the deponent; (4) the administration of the oath or affirmation to the deponent; and (5) an identification of all persons present. If the deposition is recorded other than stenographically, the officer must repeat the first three items at the beginning of each unit of recorded tape or other recording medium. n3

The Federal Rules do not contain any requirements regarding the form or content of the oath. n4 In general, any statement made by the deponent that demonstrates the deponent is impressed with the duty to tell the truth and is subject to the penalty of perjury for failure to do so is sufficient. n5 A solemn affirmation may be substituted in place of the oath. n6

The officer presiding over the deposition has the responsibility to record the testimony. This may be done by the officer personally, or by someone acting under his or her direction and in the officer's presence. The testimony must be taken stenographically or recorded by any other method authorized by Rule 30(b)(3)(A). All objections made at the deposition must be noted by the officer in the record. n7 At the end of the deposition, the officer must state on the record that the deposition is complete. The officer also must state any stipulations made by counsel concerning the custody of the transcript or recording and the exhibits, or concerning other pertinent matters. n8

[b] Time Limitations on Deposition

Unless otherwise ordered by the court or stipulated by the parties, a deposition is limited in duration to one day of seven hours. n9 The court may specify a longer or shorter limitation based on the factors stated in Rule 26(b)(2) n10 if a different time period is needed for a fair examination of a particular deponent, or if the deponent or another person, or other circumstance, impedes or delays the examination. n11 This provision, in effect, imposes a presumptive durational limitation of one day of seven hours for any deposition, and its purpose is to prevent undue costs and delays. For purposes of this durational limit, the deposition of each person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) should be considered a separate deposition. The presumptive duration may be extended, or otherwise altered, by agreement, and absent agreement, by court order. n12

[c] Oral Examination of Witnesses

[i] Rules of Evidence Generally Apply Except for Objections

Examination and cross-examination of witnesses at a deposition generally is held in the same manner as permitted at trial under the Federal Rules of Evidence, with two important exceptions. Under Rule 30(c), Federal Rules of Evidence 103 and 615 do not apply at a deposition. n13 Rule 103 governs objections and court rulings on the evidence. n14 Rule 615 governs sequestration of witnesses, generally allowing for automatic exclusion of trial witnesses, other than the parties or their designated agents, so that they cannot hear the testimony of other witnesses. n15 Although mandatory sequestration no longer applies at depositions, both party and nonparty witnesses may be excluded from a deposition for good cause under Rule 26(c). n16

Based on the incorporation of most of the Federal Rules of Evidence by Rule 30(c), the courts have applied Federal Rules of Evidence Rule 612 to permit an adverse party access to materials used by a deponent to refresh the witness's memory during or prior to the deposition. n17 Thus, while testifying, or in the discretion of court before the witness testifies, if a witness uses a writing to refresh his or her memory, the adverse party is entitled to have the writing produced, to inspect it, to cross-examine the witness about it, and to introduce into evidence those portions of the writing that relate to the testimony of the witness. n18

Examination and cross-examination of a deponent generally proceed as permitted at trial. n19 Based on this rule, several courts have held that a deponent and the deponent's attorney have no right to confer during a deposition, except for the purpose of determining whether a privilege should be asserted. n20 Instead of asking the deponent questions at a deposition, a party has the option to serve on the opponent written questions for the opposition to propound to the witness, who must deliver them to the officer. The deposition officer must present such questions to the witness verbatim during the deposition. n21

[ii] Raising Objection During Deposition Examination

During a deposition, the attorney must state objections concisely and in a non-argumentative and non-suggestive manner. An objection at the time of the examination, whether to evidence, to a party's conduct, to the officer's qualifications, to the manner of taking the deposition, or to any other aspect of the deposition, must be noted on the record. The examination still proceeds but the testimony is taken subject to any objection. Once an objection has been stated, the deponent must answer the question, unless there is a proper reason for instructing the witness not to answer. Counsel may instruct a deponent not to answer only in the following three situations: n22

1. When necessary to preserve a privilege;

2. To enforce a limitation on evidence directed by the court; or

3. To suspend a deposition in order to present a motion under Rule 30(d)(3) to terminate or limit the deposition.

Objections at depositions generally should be limited to those that would be waived under Rule 32(d)(3) if not made at the deposition. n23 Rule 32(d)(3) provides, in relevant part, that errors and irregularities in the manner of taking the deposition, in the form of the questions or answers, in the oath or affirmation, or in the conduct of the parties, and other matters that may have been correct at that time are waived if not objected to at the deposition. n24 All other objections, such as those grounded on competence, relevance, or materiality, are preserved for trial unless the grounds could have been corrected at the deposition. n25

If deposing counsel engages in irrelevant or repetitious questioning, the appropriate course for opposing counsel is to enter an objection. The witness may then answer the question. If the answer is offered at trial, opposing counsel may then renew the objection and obtain a ruling from the trial court. If deposing counsel persists in irrelevant or repetitious questioning after objection, opposing counsel may seek a protective order or sanctions from the court. However, counsel does not have the right to unilaterally instruct the witness not to answer. n26

[d] Examination on Written Questions

Instead of participating in the oral examination, parties may serve written questions in a sealed envelope on the party taking the deposition, who must deliver the questions to the officer who will preside over the deposition. The officer must ask the deponent the questions and record the answers verbatim. n27 This procedure, like participating by telephone or other remote electronic means pursuant to Rule 30(b)(4), enables a party with a relatively small interest in the action or with little interest in a particular deponent to protect its interests at minimum expense. n28

[e] Conduct of Attorneys at Deposition

As officers of the court, counsel are expected to conduct themselves in a professional manner during a deposition, which is essentially an extension of a legal proceeding in court. A deposition is intended to permit discovery of information in the possession of the deponent or to perpetuate the testimony of the deponent; the witness is placed under oath and a court reporter is present. Specifically, attorneys may not make implied or express accusations of wrongdoing against witnesses and attorneys or attempt to interrogate opposing counsel during the course of a deposition. In addition, because a judge is not present to rule on legal disputes, attorneys should not engage in argument about legal issues. n29

Additionally, attorneys should not engage in private conferences with the deponent during the deposition, interrupt the deposition testimony to make statements on the record, n30 or coach a witness through suggestive objections. n31 If an attorney engages in improper conduct, the proper course of action is to enter an objection on the record, and if necessary because improper conduct does not cease, suspend the deposition to request a protective order from the court. n32

[f] Sanctions for Improper Objections of Attorney

If, as a result of improper objections or instructions not to answer, a party is required to move for an order compelling disclosure, the moving party may be entitled to expenses and sanctions under Rules 30(d)(2) or 37(a)(5)(A). n33 The district court should consider a five-factor test for determining whether to impose sanctions under Rule 37 for improperly instructing a witness not to answer. These factors include: (1) the importance of the requested information to the issues in litigation that is, whether material to a claim or defense; (2) the number of times the attorney instructed the witness not to answer; (3) whether the question that prompted the instruction was proper and unobjectionable; (4) whether the instruction not to answer appears to have been made in a sincere, though misguided, effort to preserve a colorably valid objection, or, instead, for purposes of disrupting the deposition; and (5) whether the attorney instructing the deponent not to answer had advance notice of the likelihood that the deposing attorney would initiate questions in an area considered objectionable and could have sought a protective order in advance. n34

An attorney who improperly instructs a witness not to answer may also be sanctioned under 28 U.S.C. § 1927, n35 which authorizes costs, expenses, and attorney's fees incurred as a result of an attorney's unreasonable and vexatious conduct, or under the court's inherent power to impose sanctions to regulate its docket, promote judicial efficiency, and deter frivolous filings. n36

[4] Procedures After Deposition Examination n*

[a] Review and Changes by Deponent

Before the deposition is completed, the deponent or a party may request to review the transcript or recording. n1 If so requested, the deponent must be allowed 30 days after being notified by the officer that the transcript or recording is available: (1) to review the transcript or recording; n2 and (2) if there are changes in form or substance, to sign a statement listing the changes and the reasons for making them. n3

The officer who conducted the deposition must indicate in his or her certificate n4 whether a review was requested. If so, the officer must attach to the certificate any changes the deponent makes during the 30-day period. n5 Without such a certificate, the court will not accept any attempt by the witness to modify the deposition testimony. n6 Thus, if the deponent wishes to make changes in form or substance, the changes must be made in a timely, signed statement that recites the changes and the reasons given by the deponent for making them. n7 This statement is known as an "errata sheet," which is effective to make changes only if the deponent strictly follows the Rule 30(e) procedures. n8

Generally, a court does not have a duty to examine the sufficiency, reasonableness, or legitimacy of the reasons for the changes. n9 However, if the changes will alter the substance of the deposition testimony in such a way that the veracity of the changes come in question to the extent that they constitute a sham, the court may disregard the changes. Factors to be considered in determining whether a deposition change amounts to a sham include whether the deponent was cross-examined during his or her earlier testimony, whether the deponent had access to the pertinent evidence at the time of his or her earlier testimony or whether the change was based on newly discovered evidence, and whether the earlier testimony reflects confusion that the deponent attempts to explain. n10

[b] Officer's Certification and Transcript Responsibilities

[i] Certification, Delivery, and Storage of Deposition

The officer must certify in writing that the witness was duly sworn and that the deposition accurately records the witness's testimony. The certificate must accompany the record of the deposition. Unless the court orders otherwise, the officer must seal the original deposition in an envelope or package bearing the title of the action and marked "Deposition of _____ [witness's name]" and must promptly send it to the attorney who arranged for the transcript or recording. The attorney must store it under conditions that will protect it against loss, destruction, tampering, or deterioration. n11

The federal rules generally provide that discovery materials, including depositions and deposition copies, ordinarily must not be filed until used in the proceeding or unless directed by the court. n12 If a party does file the deposition, the party must give prompt notice of its filing to all other parties. n13

[ii] Documents and Tangible Things Related to Deposition

If requested by a party, documents and tangible things produced for inspection during a deposition must be marked for identification and attached to the deposition as originals. n14 Any party may inspect and copy the originals. But if the person who produced them wants to keep the originals, the person may either: (1) offer copies to be marked, attached to the deposition, and then used as originals, after giving all parties a fair opportunity to verify the copies by comparing them with the originals; n15 or (2) give all parties a fair opportunity to inspect and copy the originals after they are marked, in which event the originals may be used as if attached to the deposition. n16 Any party may move for an order that the originals be attached to the deposition pending final disposition of the case. n17

[iii] Copies of the Transcript or Recording of Deposition

Unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court, the officer must retain the stenographic notes of a deposition taken stenographically or a copy of the recording of a deposition taken by another method. The officer must furnish a copy of the transcript or recording to any party or the deponent if the party or deponent pays reasonable charges for the transcript or recording. n18 This means that each party and the deponent must pay for its own copy. No party is required to provide a free copy to another party. n19

[5] Avoidance of Deposition Examination n*

[a] Motion to Quash Deposition

If a person is not required to give deposition testimony because the testimony is not discoverable, or because deposition procedures have been violated, the person or party may prevent the depositing by filing a motion to quash the deposition n1 or a motion to quash a deposition subpoena. n2 The court has the power to grant a motion to quash a deposition through its general power to limit improper discovery. n3

Therefore, the court may quash a notice of deposition if it finds that the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative; is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; or if the party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by other discovery methods to obtain the information sought. n4 The court may also quash a notice of deposition when good cause is shown that the proposed deponent must be protected from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. n5

[b] Motion to Terminate or Limit Depositions

During the process of discovery, Rule 26(c) provides general authority for the issuance of orders protecting a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression or undue burden or expense. n6 However, once a deposition has already commenced, protection against abuse is provided under the more specific provisions of Rule 30(d)(3). At any time during a deposition, the deponent or a party may move to terminate or limit it on the ground that it is being conducted in bad faith or in a manner that unreasonably annoys, embarrasses, or oppresses the deponent or party. The motion may be filed in the court where the action is pending or the deposition is being taken. If the objecting deponent or party so demands, the deposition must be suspended for the time necessary to obtain an order. n7

If the court finds in favor of the moving party, the court may order that the deposition be terminated or may limit its scope and manner as provided in Rule 26(c). n8 If terminated, the deposition may be resumed only by order of the court where the action is pending. n9 Additionally, the court may award expenses, as specified in Rule 37(a)(5), which provides for an award either against the party whose conduct necessitated the motion if it is granted, n10 or if the motion is denied, against the moving party. n11

Whether to grant an order terminating a deposition is a matter within the discretion of the court. However, courts use the power to terminate or limit deposition examinations sparingly. n12 To obtain a protective order under Rule 30(d), the moving party has the burden of proving that the examination was being conducted in bad faith or in such a manner as to unreasonably annoy, embarrass, or oppress the deponent or a party. An objecting party who fails to meet this burden may be subjected to costs and reasonable expenses if the court finds that the motion has no substantial basis. n13

[6] Costs of Deposition n*

[a] Each Party Initially Must Pay Its Own Expenses

Generally, each party must initially pay its own costs and expenses incurred related to notices of deposition and deposition examinations for deposing the opposition party witnesses. n1 However, the district court, as part of its inherent equitable power to control discovery, may order that the parties divide the costs evenly, n2 or that one party must pay the deposition costs of another party. n3

Also as part of that inherent equitable power to control discovery, a district court may, under some circumstances, order an opposing party to pay for deposition expenses of an indigent litigant as a condition precedent to allowing that party to take the deposition. n4 However, there is no requirement that the United States provide free copies of deposition transcripts to indigent civil litigants under the in forma pauperis statute. n5

[b] Award of Costs to Prevailing Party

The court may award deposition expenses, including the costs of deposition transcripts, to the prevailing party provided that the court determines at the end of litigation that the transcripts were reasonably necessary for use in the case. n6 Whether a deposition is "reasonably necessary" is within the trial court's discretion. n7 The determination of reasonable necessity is based on a consideration of the facts known at the time of the deposition. n8 An appellate court will not reverse a deposition costs award unless there has been a clear abuse of discretion by the district court. n9

Courts may not tax the costs of transcripts of depositions provided for the convenience of the requesting party or attorney. n10 Similarly, the court should not routinely award the extra cost of "expedited" transcriptions, so that litigation costs are not unnecessarily increased; however, in some circumstances, the district court may award the cost of expedited transcripts when they are necessary because of the length and complexity of the case. n11 Courts usually require that the prevailing party itemize their expenses, including the names of the deponents and a description of the services in the invoices submitted. This enables the district court to determine whether the expenses were necessarily obtained for use in the case. n12

[7] Sanctions Related to Deposition n*

[a] Sanctions for Noticing Party's Failure to Attend Deposition

If a party is expecting a deposition to be taken that has been noticed by another party and attends that deposition in person or by an attorney, the attending party may recover reasonable expenses for attending, including attorney's fees, if the noticing party fails to attend and proceed with the deposition. n1 Under this provision, the noticing party may be sanctioned for either a failure to attend or a failure to proceed, as both actions are required to avoid sanctions. n2

Similarly, if a party who fails to appear as a witness when the party has been noticed for a deposition and properly served with the notice, the party is subject to sanctions under Rule 37(d). n3 Some courts have held that when a witness is designated by a corporate party to speak on its behalf pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6), if the corporation produces an uninformed or unprepared witness, that circumstance is equivalent to a "failure to appear," which is sanctionable under Rule 37(d). n4

[b] Sanctions for Noticing Party's Failure to Serve Subpoena on Nonparty Deponent

If a party is expecting a deposition to be taken that has been noticed by another party, and attends that deposition in person or by an attorney, the attending party may recover reasonable expenses for attending, including attorney's fees, if the noticing party fails to serve a subpoena on a nonparty deponent, and the nonparty deponent consequently does not attend. n5 One court has held that the court may impose sanctions if a nonparty witness appears for a deposition, but the witness has not been subpoenaed and refuses to be sworn or to testify. n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 30.02-30.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Windsor Shirt Co. v. New Jersey Nat'l Bank, 793 F. Supp. 589, 606 (E.D. Pa. 1992) , aff'd without op., 989 F.2d 490 (3d Cir. 1993) ; Hudson v. Spellman High Voltage, 178 F.R.D. 29, 32 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Ethicon Endo-Surgery v. United States Surgical Corp., 160 F.R.D. 98, 99 (S.D. Ohio 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(A)(iii).

(n6)Footnote 5. Martin v. CSX Transp., Inc., 215 F.R.D. 554, 557 (S.D. Ind. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Hall v. Clifton Precision, 150 F.R.D. 525, 526 (E.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a).

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fay v. United States, 22 F.R.D. 28, 32 (E.D.N.Y. 1958) (in tort action against United States, United States as Entity required to produce designated representative for deposition); Conneway v. City of New York, 32 F. Supp. 54, 55 (E.D.N.Y. 1940) (city employees with knowledge of facts must be produced for deposition in personal injury action).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6); see also In re Honda Am. Motor Co., Inc., 168 F.R.D. 535, 540 (D. Md. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Sugarhill Records, Ltd. v. Motown Record Corp., 105 F.R.D. 166, 169 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n13)Footnote 12. In re Honda Am. Motor Co., Inc., 168 F.R.D. 535, 540 (D. Md. 1996) .

(n14)Footnote 13. See Shelton v. American Motors Corp., 805 F.2d 1323, 1327 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 28; see also § 15.23.

(n16)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a).

(n17)Footnote 16. Travelers Indemnity Company of Illinois v. Hash Management, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 150, 155-156 (M.D.N.C. 1997) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Van Pilsum v. Iowa State Univ. of Science & Tech., 152 F.R.D. 179, 181 (S.D. Iowa 1993) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(iii).

(n20)Footnote 19. Garza v. Scott & White Mem. Hosp., 234 F.R.D. 617, 623 (W.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n21)Footnote 20. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3).

(n22)Footnote 21. Garza v. Scott & White Mem. Hosp., 234 F.R.D. 617, 623 (W.D. Tex. 2005) (federal rules tie opening of discovery to timing of Rule 26(f) conference).

(n23)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2).

(n24)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(i).

(n25)Footnote 24. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n26)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(ii).

(n27)Footnote 26. Dixon v. Certainteed Corp., 164 F.R.D. 685, 690 (D. Kan. 1996) .

(n28)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(iii).

(n29)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A).

(n30)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A)(iii).

(n31)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a); see § 15.20[2].

(n32)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b); see § 15.20[3].

(n33)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(B).

(n34)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2).

(n35)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(A).

(n36)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n37)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 30.20-30.25 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n38)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1).

(n39)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1).

(n40)Footnote 3. Shenker v. United States, 25 F.R.D. 96, 98 (E.D.N.Y. 1960) .

(n41)Footnote 4. See KeyBank National Assoc. v, Mann, 220 B.R. 351, 356 (N.D. Ohio 1998) .

(n42)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1).

(n43)Footnote 6. See Riley v. Murdock, 156 F.R.D. 130, 132 (E.D.N.C. 1994) .

(n44)Footnote 7. See Detweiler Bros., Inc. v. John Graham & Co., 412 F. Supp. 416, 422 (E.D. Wash. 1976) .

(n45)Footnote 8. See Zuckert v. Berkliff Corp., 96 F.R.D. 161, 162 (N.D. Ill. 1982) .

(n46)Footnote 9. See M & C Corp. v. Erwin Behr GmbH & Co., KG, 165 F.R.D. 65, 67 (E.D. Mich. 1996) .

(n47)Footnote 10. See Contardo v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 119 F.R.D. 622, 623 (D. Mass. 1988) .

(n48)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1).

(n49)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6).

(n50)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(2).

(n51)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(A).

(n52)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(B).

(n53)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(4).

(n54)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1).

(n55)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d).

(n56)Footnote 19. Martin Eng'g Co. v. Vibrators, Inc., 20 Fed. R. Serv. 2d 486, 487 (E.D. Ark. 1975) (corporation liable if former employee subject to its control fails to attend deposition).

(n57)Footnote 20. United States v. Santiago-Lugo, 904 F. Supp. 43, 47 (D.P.R. 1995) .

(n58)Footnote 21. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(1), 45.

(n59)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(B).

(n60)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C),(D); see also [c], below.

(n61)Footnote 24. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C),(D).

(n62)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(2).

(n63)Footnote 26. See Carter v. United States, 164 F.R.D. 131, 133 (D. Mass. 1995) .

(n64)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(A).

(n65)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(B).

(n66)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(A).

(n67)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(4).

(n68)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(B).

(n69)Footnote 32. Riley v. Murdock, 156 F.R.D. 130, 131 (E.D.N.C. 1994) .

(n70)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(A).

(n71)Footnote 34. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3)(A)(2).

(n72)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(c).

(n73)Footnote 36. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(1).

(n74)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(A).

(n75)Footnote 38. See, e.g., Riley v. Murdock, 156 F.R.D. 130, 131 (E.D.N.C. 1994) .

(n76)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Gillen v. Nissan Motor Corp., 156 F.R.D. 120, 122 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n77)Footnote 40. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(4).

(n78)Footnote 41. See Hudson v. Spellman High Voltage, 178 F.R.D. 29, 32 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) .

(n79)Footnote 42. See Rehau, Inc. v. Colortech, Inc., 145 F.R.D. 444, 446-447 (W.D. Mich. 1993) .

(n80)Footnote 43. Jahr v. IU Int'l Corp., 109 F.R.D. 429, 432 (M.D.N.C. 1986) .

(n81)Footnote 44. See Rehau, Inc. v. Colortech, Inc., 145 F.R.D. 444, 446-447 (W.D. Mich. 1993) .

(n82)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a), 28(c).

(n83)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(A)(i)-(v).

(n84)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(B); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(A)(i)-(v).

(n85)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(A)(iv), 30(c)(1).

(n86)Footnote 5. Gordon v. Idaho, 778 F.2d 1397, 1399-1400 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n87)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 43(d).

(n88)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(1).

(n89)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(5)(C).

(n90)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(1).

(n91)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2).

(n92)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(1).

(n93)Footnote 12. *Sabre v. First Dominion Capital, L.L.C., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20637, at *2-4 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(2), Committee Note to 2000 Amendments.

(n94)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(1).

(n95)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Evid. 103.

(n96)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Evid. 615.

(n97)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(E).

(n98)Footnote 17. See Sauer v. Burlington Northern R.R. Co., 169 F.R.D. 120, 123 (D. Minn. 1996) .

(n99)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Evid. 612.

(n100)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(1).

(n101)Footnote 20. See Hall v. Clifton Precision, 150 F.R.D. 525, 528-529 (E.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n102)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(3); see [d], below.

(n103)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(2).

(n104)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(B)(ii).

(n105)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(B)(i).

(n106)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(A).

(n107)Footnote 26. See Ethicon Endo-Surgery v. United States Surgical Corp., 160 F.R.D. 98, 99 (S.D. Ohio 1995) (court instructed counsel on proper conduct at deposition).

(n108)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(3).

(n109)Footnote 28. See Hudson v. Spellman High Voltage, 178 F.R.D. 29, 32 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) .

(n110)Footnote 29. Ethicon Endo-Surgery v. United States Surgical Corp., 160 F.R.D. 98, 99 (S.D. Ohio 1995) .

(n111)Footnote 30. See Hall v. Clifton Precision, 150 F.R.D. 525, 528-531 (E.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n112)Footnote 31. Damaj v. Farmers Ins. Co., 164 F.R.D. 559, 561 (N.D. Okla. 1995) .

(n113)Footnote 32. Ethicon Endo-Surgery v. United States Surgical Corp., 160 F.R.D. 98, 100 (S.D. Ohio 1995) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(2), 30(d)(3).

(n114)Footnote 33. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(2), 37(a)(5)(A).

(n115)Footnote 34. Boyd v. University of Md. Med. Sys., 173 F.R.D. 143, 147 (D. Md. 1997) .

(n116)Footnote 35. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 265-267 (10th Cir. 1995) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

(n117)Footnote 36. See Amlong & Amlong, P.A. v. Denny's, Inc., 500 F.3d 1230, 1239 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n118)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 30.60-30.64 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n119)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(e)(1).

(n120)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(e)(1)(A).

(n121)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(e)(1)(B).

(n122)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(1); [b], below.

(n123)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(e)(2).

(n124)Footnote 6. Rios v. Bigler, 67 F.3d 1543, 1551-1552 (10th Cir. 1995) (certificate is absolute prerequisite to amending or correcting deposition).

(n125)Footnote 7. See Duff v. Lobdell-Emery Mfg. Co., 926 F. Supp. 799, 804 (N.D. Ind. 1996) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(e)(1)(B).

(n126)Footnote 8. Agrizap, Inc. v. Woodstream Corp., 232 F.R.D. 491, 494 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (deponent was barred from changing his deposition because there was no request to review transcript before completion of deposition; also, deponent failed to submit changes within 30-day time limit).

(n127)Footnote 9. See Duff v. Lobdell-Emery Mfg. Co., 926 F. Supp. 799, 804 (N.D. Ind. 1996) .

(n128)Footnote 10. Burns v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 330 F.3d 1275, 1281-1282 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n129)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(1).

(n130)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n131)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(4).

(n132)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(2)(A).

(n133)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(2)(A)(i).

(n134)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(2)(A)(ii).

(n135)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(2)(B).

(n136)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(3).

(n137)Footnote 19. *Brown v. Castillo, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72621, at 5 (E.D. Cal. 2006) .

(n138)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 30.50-30.51 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n139)Footnote 1. Rahn v. Hawkins, 464 F.3d 813, 822 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n140)Footnote 2. United States ex rel. Pogue v. Diabetes Treatment Ctrs. of Am., Inc., 444 F.3d 462, 468-469 (6th Cir. 2006) (power to quash subpoena to depose nonparty witness resides with issuing court).

(n141)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C), 26(c)(1)(A).

(n142)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C); see Insituform Techs., Inc. v. Cat Contracting, Inc., 914 F. Supp. 286, 286 (287 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (court quashed notice of deposition of nonparty witness because plaintiffs could have obtained information sought directly from defendants).

(n143)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A); *see Burket v. Hyman Lippitt, P.C., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20703, at *9-13 (E.D. Mich. 2008) .

(n144)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A); see also [a], above (motion to quash).

(n145)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(3)(A).

(n146)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(3)(B); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A)-(H).

(n147)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(3)(B).

(n148)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A).

(n149)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A).

(n150)Footnote 12. *In re Omeprazole Patent Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6112, at *10-12 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n151)Footnote 13. See Hearst/ABC-Viacom Entertainment Servs. v. Goodway Mktg., Inc., 145 F.R.D. 59, 62

(E.D. Pa. 1992) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n152)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 30.70-30.71 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n153)Footnote 1. *Turning Point Found. v. Destefano, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90084, at 4 (D. Conn. 2007) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3)(A) (deposition testimony may be recorded by sound, sound-and-visual, or stenographic means, and party taking deposition must bear cost of recording).

(n154)Footnote 2. Dilley v. Acad. Credit, LLC, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14507 . at *4 (D. Utah 2008).

(n155)Footnote 3. Byrne v. Liquid Asphalt Sys., 250 F. Supp. 2d 84, 91 n.2 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n156)Footnote 4. See Tabron v. Grace, 6 F.3d 147, 159 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n157)Footnote 5. See Lewis v. Precision Optics, Inc., 612 F.2d 1074, 1075 (8th Cir. 1980) .

(n158)Footnote 6. Wirtz v. Kansas Farm Bureau Servs., Inc., 355 F. Supp. 2d 1190, 1208 (D. Kan. 2005) .

(n159)Footnote 7. Jensen v. Lawler, 338 F. Supp. 2d 739, 746 (S.D. Tex. 2004) .

(n160)Footnote 8. Sepulveda v. Matos, 306 F. Supp. 2d 100, 107 (D.P.R. 2004) .

(n161)Footnote 9. Maris Distrib. Co. v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., 302 F.3d 1207, 1225 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n162)Footnote 10. See Barber v. Ruth, 7 F.3d 636, 645 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n163)Footnote 11. Maris Distrib. Co. v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., 302 F.3d 1207, 1225 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n164)Footnote 12. Summit Technology, Inc. v. Nidek, Inc., Ltd., 435 F.3d 1371, 1380 (Fed. Cir. 2006) (convenience expense items may be excluded as not recoverable).

(n165)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 30.72-30.73 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n166)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(g)(1); Frazier v. Layne Christensen Co., 486 F. Supp. 2d 831, 846-847 (W.D. Wis. 2006) .

(n167)Footnote 2. Barrett v. Brian Bemis Auto World, 230 F.R.D. 535, 537 (N.D. Ill. 2005) (unprepared attorney could be sanctioned for failure to proceed, even though attorney attended).

(n168)Footnote 3. See, e.g., In re Selected Somersworth Bank Cases, 148 F.R.D. 1, 4 (D. Me. 1993) .

(n169)Footnote 4. In re Vitamins Antitrust Litig., 216 F.R.D. 168, 174 (D.D.C. 2003) .

(n170)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(g)(2).

(n171)Footnote 6. Greenwood v. Dittmer, 776 F.2d 785, 790 (791 (8th Cir. 1985).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.22

§ 15.22 Deposition on Written Questions

[1] Nature and Purpose n*

[a] Alternative to Oral Depositions

After an action has commenced, a party may take a deposition on written questions from any person that has discoverable information. n1 Depositions on written questions provide an affordable, alternative means of discovery for parties who need to conduct discovery based on deposition questions, but who do not want to or cannot incur the high cost of a full oral deposition. n2 The fundamental difference between oral and written question depositions is that rather than questioning the opponent in person orally, the attorney sends to the presiding officer a list of questions to be asked at the deposition, who asks the questions of the deponent. n3 Depositions on written questions also have the advantage of obtaining the testimony of nonparty witnesses, who are not subject to discovery by way of interrogatories and who may reside far from the forum. n4 They may also be used effectively before oral depositions, by stipulation or court order, to determine if a subsequent oral deposition is necessary. n5 Depositions on written questions are also an efficient method for obtaining discrete information from large numbers of persons, such as members of a class. n6

Even though depositions on written questions offer some advantages, they are used far less frequently than oral depositions, because there are some important limitations inherent in posing questions in written form, including the following: (1) the written question format does not permit probing follow-up questions; (2) because the attorney conducting the examination does not pose the questions in person, counsel cannot observe the demeanor of a witness who is being deposed; (3) because written questions are often provided in advance to the witness, counsel for the witness may assist the witness in providing answers so carefully tailored that they are not informative. n7

[b] Distinguished from Written Interrogatories

Depositions on written questions are often compared to interrogatories, which also involve the submission of written questions to the person from whom discovery is sought. n8 Even though interrogatories may generally be broader in scope, depositions on written questions can be potentially more useful than written interrogatories for several reasons:

1. A party may depose any person on written questions, n9 while party may propound written interrogatories only on other parties. n10

2. Without leave of court or written stipulation, written interrogatories are usually limited to 25 questions, including subparts. n11 The Federal Rules impose no analogous numerical limitation on the inquiries propounded at a deposition on written questions. n12 Note, however, that deposition questions may not be oppressive, and that courts may limit the length of depositions by order or local rule. n13

3. While the person who answers interrogatories must be identified, n14 anonymous depositions (depositions in which the identity of the deponent is to be kept confidential) may be conducted by depositions on written questions, when the court determines that the witness's identity must be kept confidential. n15

4. A party answering interrogatories does not have to appear before an officer, n16 as does a deponent who gives a deposition on written questions, n17 but both must provide answers under oath. n18

[2] Availability of Deposition on Written Question n*

In most cases, depositions on written questions may be taken at the time specified in Rule 26(d) without leave of court. n1 Thus, unless otherwise authorized by agreement of the parties, another federal rule, or a court order, the parties may conduct discovery after the discovery planning conference required by Rule 26(f). n2 In the following circumstances, however, Rule 31 requires leave of court to be granted in accordance with Rule 26(b)(2)(C): n3

1. If the proposed deposition would result in more than 10 depositions being taken by the plaintiffs, or by the defendants, or by third-party defendants. This limit of 10 depositions applies to each adverse "side" or "position" in litigation, and not to each party. Furthermore, both oral depositions and depositions on written questions under Rule 31 are included in determining the total number of depositions taken. Leave of court is not required to take more than 10 depositions if the parties stipulate to additional depositions. n4

2. If the person has already been deposed in the case unless the parties stipulate to the second deposition. n5 Courts generally disfavor second depositions, and absent a showing of need or good reason, a court generally will not require a deponent to appear for a second deposition. However, a second deposition may be justified in view of a subsequent disclosure or discovery occurring after the first deposition. n6

3. Before the parties have met to plan discovery as required by Rules 26(d) and (f). n7 There are two exceptions to this requirement. First, the parties may stipulate to the taking of the deposition without leave of court. n8 Second, a deposition may be taken before the discovery planning meeting if the deposition notice contains a certification that the person to be examined is expected to leave the United States and be unavailable for examination in the United States unless deposed before the discovery conference. n9

4. To perpetuate testimony before the formal commencement of a civil action. n10 A party must also make a motion in the district court to take a deposition to perpetuate testimony pending appeal from a district court judgment. n11

5. When the person to be deposed is confined in prison. There is no provision for allowing the parties to stipulate to the deposition of an inmate without leave of court. n12

As noted above, when a party requests leave of court to take a deposition the court must generally grant permission to the extent that the deposition would be consistent with the principles stated in Rule 26(b)(2), n13 which gives the court discretion to limit the number and length of depositions, n14 and requires the court to limit depositions to the extent that (1) the deposition is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative or can be obtained from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; (2) the person taking the deposition has had ample opportunity already to obtain the information sought; or (3) the burden or expense of taking the deposition outweighs its likely benefit. n15

[3] Persons Subject to Deposition on Written Question n*

[a] Adverse Party, Individuals, or Organizations

Rule 31 provides that a party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by means of a deposition on written questions. Thus, an adverse party or any witness may be deposed by written questions. n1 Furthermore, an organization may be deposed on written questions, in accordance with the provisions of Rule 30(b)(6), n2 which states that a party may name as a deponent in its notice or subpoena a public or private corporation, a partnership, an association, or a governmental agency without specifying a particular individual to be examined. In a subpoena or notice, the party noticing the deposition should describe with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested. n3 However, the notice or subpoena need not specify who will be present at the taking of the deposition. n4 The organization must designate one or more officers, directors, managing agents, or other persons to testify on the organization's behalf. The organization may also indicate the matters on which the designated persons will testify. If the person designated by the organization does not have personal knowledge of the matters known to the organization, the court may grant sanctions to the opposition, because the organization is obligated to prepare the deponent designee to give knowledgeable and binding answers under Rule 30(b)(6). n5 Nonparty organizations must be notified by subpoena of this duty, and a deponent in these circumstances must testify as to matters known or reasonably available to the organization. n6

[b] Attorney Deposed As Fact Witness

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not prohibit the obtaining discovery from a party's attorney, n7 provided that the party seeking discovery establishes that the information requested is relevant and explains why the information is crucial to preparation of its case and unavailable from another source. n8 The deposition of an attorney may be necessary and appropriate in certain cases, such as when the attorney is a fact witness or is the person with the best information concerning non-privileged matters relevant to the lawsuit. n9 However, because of the negative impact that deposing a party's attorney can have on the litigation process, the court may permit the taking of opposing counsel's deposition only in the limited circumstances when the party seeking to depose another party's attorney demonstrates the propriety and need for the deposition. n10

Most of the limitations imposed by courts on depositions of opposing counsel have been focused on oral depositions. Depositions on written questions, with their lower cost and lower potential for disruption, do not implicate the same degree of concern for courts, although relevance and privilege remain important issues. In this regard, courts have authorized depositions of counsel by written questions particularly when the attorney will serve as a fact witness. n11

[4] Procedure for Depositions On Written Questions n*

[a] Service and Notice

A party that wants to take a deposition on written questions must serve the questions and the notice of deposition on every other party. The notice must state the name and the address of the person who is to answer the questions, if the identity of that person is known. If the identity of the person who is to answer the deposition is not known, then the notice must contain a general description sufficient to identify the person who is to answer or the particular class or group to which that person belongs. The notice must also contain the name or descriptive title and address of the officer before whom the deposition is to be taken. The Rule does not require that the date and time of the deposition be stated in the notice. n1 That information is required, however, if a Rule 45 subpoena is issued to compel the witness's attendance at the deposition. n2

[b] Service of Cross Questions, Redirect Questions, and Recross Questions

Within 14 days after the party noticing the deposition first serves the questions and the notice on the parties, another party may serve cross questions on all other parties. Then, within seven days after being served with cross questions, the noticing party may serve redirect questions on all other parties, and within seven days of being served with redirect questions, a non-noticing party may serve recross questions on all other parties. The court may for good cause shorten or enlarge any element of this timetable. n3 Thus, the total time involved in service of deposition questions under Rule 31 is 28 days, with a potential extension of time pursuant to Rule 6(a) and (b), which provides for an extension based on a showing of good cause. n4

[c] Officer Must Ask Deponent Questions

The party that has noticed the deposition must deliver to the designated officer the notice of deposition and a copy of all questions to be asked. n5 After the deposition officer has been served with all of the questions and the notice of deposition, or at the designated time and place, if the notice so provides the officer must promptly take the deponent's testimony in response to the questions; n6 Thus, the officer must put the witness under oath and record verbatim the responses of the witness to the written questions, subject to any objections. n7 The testimony may be taken stenographically or recorded by audiotape or videotape. n8

[d] Review, Certification, and Delivery of Completed Deposition

If the deponent or a party makes a request before completion of the deposition, the officer must notify the deponent when the transcript or recording is available, and the deponent then has 30 days to note changes in form or substance. The deponent must sign a statement setting forth any changes and the reasons for them. n9 The officer must certify that the witness was duly sworn and that the deposition is a true record of the testimony given by the witness. The officer must also certify if any review was requested by the deponent and must attach any changes made by the deponent. Then, the officer must send the deposition to the attorney who arranged for the transcript or the recording. The attorney must store it under conditions that will protect it against loss, destruction, tampering, or deterioration. n10 The federal rules direct that depositions ordinarily should not be filed. Only if the deposition is used in a proceeding should the attorney file it with the court. n11 Unless otherwise ordered by court or agreed to by the parties, the officer must retain stenographic notes or a copy of the recording of any deposition. The officer must then supply copies of the deposition to any party or the deponent on payment of reasonable charges. n12 Lastly, the party taking the deposition must notify all parties promptly when the deposition is filed. n13

[e] Objections to Deposition Procedures and Questions; Protective Orders

Objections to deposition procedures and questions are controlled primarily by Rule 32. An objection to the form of a question prevents a waiver of that objection, n14 but it does not operate to prevent the witness from answering the question n15 or create a right to a hearing. Furthermore, an objection is not an appropriate means to attempt to quash the deposition. The appropriate vehicle for any such relief is a motion for a protective order. n16 Prior to the time of the taking of testimony, a party or a person from whom discovery is sought may make a motion for a protective order under Rule 26(c). The party may file this motion in the district where the action is pending or in the district in which the deposition is to take place. n17

Thus, the court has the power to make a protective order that an oral deposition be taken instead of a deposition on written questions. n18 Or, even if the district court does not require that the direct examination be taken orally, it may in its discretion grant the adverse party leave to cross-examine orally after the written question is asked. n19

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 31.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Mill-Run Tours, Inc. v. Khashoggi, 124 F.R.D. 547, 549 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See National Life Ins. Co. v. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co., 615 F.2d 595, 600 n.5 (3d Cir. 1980) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a) (interrogatories limited to parties); [b], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Winbourne v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 632 F.2d 219, 226 (2d Cir. 1980) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Henson v. East Lincoln Township, 814 F.2d 410, 412 (7th Cir. 1987) (deposition on written questions given to members of defendant class).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of Hechinger Inv. Co. of Delaware, Inc., 350 F.3d 65, 69 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 31, Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30, 31.

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2) (limitations on discovery); Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(A) (limit on number of people deposed is 10 people deposed per party).

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(5) (answers to interrogatories must be signed by person making them).

(n16)Footnote 15. Borzillieri v. American Nat'l Red Cross, 139 F.R.D. 284, 288-289 (W.D.N.Y. 1991) (proposed deponent was blood donor in AIDS injury case, and court ordered donor's identity would be divulged only to court and to donor's court-appointed attorney).

(n17)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(1), (3).

(n18)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b)(1).

(n19)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c), 31(b), 33(b)(3).

(n20)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 31.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n21)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(1).

(n22)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f) (discovery planning conference must generally be held 21 days before scheduling conference held or scheduling order due).

(n23)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2).

(n24)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2)(A)(i).

(n25)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2)(A)(ii).

(n26)Footnote 6. See Dixon v. Certainteed Corp., 164 F.R.D. 685, 690 (D. Kan. 1996) .

(n27)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2)(A)(iii).

(n28)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2)(A).

(n29)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2)(A)(iii).

(n30)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a); see § 15.20[2].

(n31)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b); see § 15.20[3].

(n32)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2)(B).

(n33)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(2).

(n34)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(A).

(n35)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n36)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 31.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n37)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(1); see Mill-Run Tours, Inc. v. Khashoggi, 124 F.R.D. 547, 549 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n38)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(4).

(n39)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6).

(n40)Footnote 4. Brant v. Principal Life & Disability Ins. Co., 195 F. Supp. 2d 1100, 1121 (N.D. Iowa 2002) .

(n41)Footnote 5. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co. v. Jafari, 206 F.R.D. 126, 127-128 (D. Md. 2002) .

(n42)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6).

(n43)Footnote 7. Dowd v. Calabrese, 101 F.R.D. 427, 439 (D.D.C. 1984) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n44)Footnote 8. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Home Ins. Co., 278 F.3d 621, 628-629 (6th Cir. 2002) ; Shelton v. American Motors Corp., 805 F.2d 1323, 1327 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n45)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n46)Footnote 10. Shelton v. American Motors Corp., 805 F.2d 1323, 1327 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n47)Footnote 11. See Vargas v. Peltz, 901 F. Supp. 1572, 1576 (S.D. Fla. 1995) .

(n48)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 31.10-31.17 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n49)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(3).

(n50)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(A)(iii).

(n51)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(5).

(n52)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a), 6(b); Ch. 9 Pleadings and Motions in General.

(n53)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b).

(n54)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c).

(n55)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c).

(n56)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3), 30(c); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b) (incorporating Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c), 30(e), and 30(f)).

(n57)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(e); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b)(2) (incorporating Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c), (e), and (f)).

(n58)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b)(3) (incorporating Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c), (e), and (f)).

(n59)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n60)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(b)(3) (incorporating Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c), (e), and (f)).

(n61)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(c).

(n62)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(C).

(n63)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(2).

(n64)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C), 26(c)(1)(A).

(n65)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n66)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(C).

(n67)Footnote 19. Winograd Bros, Inc. v. Chase Bank, 31 F. Supp. 91, 91 (S.D.N.Y. 1939) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.23

§ 15.23 Officer's Control of Deposition Examination in United States and in Foreign Countries

[1] Persons Who May Take Deposition in United States n*

Absent stipulation, only the following persons may take depositions within the United States, or within territories or insular possessions subject to the jurisdiction of the United States: n1

1. An officer authorized to administer oaths under United States laws. n2

2. An officer authorized to administer oaths under the laws of the place where the examination is held. n3

3. A person appointed by the court where the action is pending. A person appointed by the court has the power to administer oaths and take testimony. n4 The court will typically make this type of appointment in an isolated place where there is no one readily available with the power to administer oaths and take testimony. It also provides a more convenient method of securing depositions when state lines intervene between the location of various witnesses otherwise rather closely grouped. n5

The parties may stipulate that depositions may be taken before any person unless the court orders to the contrary. n6

[2] Administration of Deposition in United States Must Be By Officer n*

Rules 30, 31, and 32 use the term "officer" when referring to the person who has the duties to administer a deposition. As used in these deposition rules, the term "officer" includes: n1 a person appointed by the court n2 or designated by the parties under Rule 29(a). n3 The person before whom the deposition is "taken," is ordinarily the court reporter who swears the witness and stenographically transcribes the testimony. n4 If the deposition is also recorded by sound or sound-and-visual means, the person making the nonstenographic record is not the person "taking" the deposition because he or she does not administer the oath and is not responsible for certifying the accuracy of the record. n5 In these circumstances, the person making the nonstenographic record is not subject to disqualification for interest under Rule 28(c). If the deposition is not recorded stenographically but only by sound or sound-and-visual means, the person before whom the deposition is "taken" within the meaning of Rule 28(a) is the notary public or court reporter who administers the oath and who must certify the accuracy of the recording pursuant to Rule 30(f)(1). That person, who may or may not be the one making the recording, is the person subject to disqualification for interest; thus, he or she must be independent of the parties and counsel in the absence of a stipulation or court order to the contrary. n6

A deposition may also be taken over the telephone or other remote means. n7 Because Rule 28(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure states that a deposition must be taken before an officer authorized to administer oaths, Rule 30(c) states that the officer shall put the witness on oath and shall personally record the testimony of the witness, and Rule 30(b)(4) states that a telephonic or remote deposition is taken in the district and at the place where the deponent is to answer the questions, the applicable rules when read together require the notary public to be present with the witness, rather than in the presence of the persons remotely conducting the examination. n8

[3] Depositions and Other Discovery in Foreign Countries n*

[a] Methods for Taking Depositions in Foreign Countries

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provide four ways to take depositions in a foreign country:

1. Pursuant to a treaty such as the Hague Evidence Convention. n1

2. Pursuant to a letter of request seeking the voluntary assistance of the court or other agency of the foreign country to obtain evidence from the deponent. n2

3. On notice before a person authorized to administer oaths in the place in which the examination is held, either by the law of that place or by the law of the United States. n3

4. Before a person commissioned by the American court to administer any necessary oath and take testimony. n4

Each of the four methods is a separate means for taking a deposition in a foreign country, and any of the methods may be used independently of the other methods or in conjunction with another method, if appropriate. n5 In addition to providing for the four procedures for deposition, the Federal Rules also allow the parties to make a written stipulation providing for taking evidence in a foreign country. n6 Stipulated procedures are effective only if the witness is cooperative and the terms do not violate the law of the country where the deposition will take place. n7

[b] Foreign Deposition May be Taken By Means of Any Treaty or Convention

A party may take a deposition in a foreign country pursuant to any applicable treaty or convention and using the procedures specified in the treaty or convention itself. n8 Thus, the party taking the deposition is ordinarily obliged to conform to an applicable treaty or convention if an effective deposition can be taken by such internationally approved means, even though a verbatim transcript is not available or testimony cannot be taken under oath. n9 When a letter of request or any other device is used according to a treaty or convention, it must be captioned in the form prescribed by that treaty or convention. n10

The most commonly utilized treaty for international depositions is the Hague Convention on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters. n11 However, the procedures for taking depositions abroad of any similar treaty that the United States enters into in the future could also be used. n12 The Hague Evidence Convention authorizes three methods for pretrial discovery: a letter of request, which may be used to secure evidence from an uncooperative witness through the compulsory powers of a foreign court; notice to appear before a consular officer; and designation of a private commissioner. n13 However, the Hague Evidence Convention also itself contemplates that contracting states will employ methods for taking evidence not specified in the Convention, or permit less restrictive acts not expressed by the Convention's terms. n14 Thus, the Hague Evidence Convention does not prevent a signatory from using more liberal methods to render evidence than those expressly authorized. n15

[c] Letter of Request

The second method of deposition in a foreign country is by a letter of request. n16 A "letter of request" is essentially the same as the traditional "letter rogatory," which is a request by the district court to a court in the foreign country asking the latter court to cause to be examined a person who is within the jurisdiction of the foreign court. n17 Letters of request are a medium for one country to speak through its courts to another and to request assistance to administer justice in the former. Absent a treaty, the request is made and usually granted by reason of comity. n18 The term letter of request (rather than letter rogatory) is used in the current version of Rule 28(b) because the term is used to designate the primary method provided by the Hague Convention to obtain a deposition in a foreign country. n19 Generally, a party should use a letter of request when the deposition is to be taken in a non-common-law country that prohibits the execution of depositions through the notice or commission procedure, or where the witness is unwilling to appear and may be compelled only in aid of a letter of request. n20

The party seeking to take the deposition must apply to the district court, on notice to the other parties, for issuance of the letter of request. n21 The application need not show that taking the deposition in another manner is impracticable or inconvenient. n22 A party opposing the application must show good reason before a court will deny the application. Courts have inherent authority to issue letters of request, and a United States court may transmit them directly to the foreign tribunal. n23 The issuance of a letter of request, as in the case of the issuance of a commission, may be made on such terms as are "just and appropriate," and the issuance of a letter of request may be conditioned on such terms. n24 For example, the court may require a party to first attempt discovery by a less expensive method than oral depositions, such as by depositions by written questions under Rule 31. n25

If the court grants the application and issues a letter of request, it should be addressed "To the Appropriate Authority in _____ [name of country]." n26 Evidence obtained in response to a letter of request need not be excluded merely because it is not a verbatim transcript, because the testimony was not taken under oath, or because of any similar departure from the requirements for depositions taken within the United States. n27

[d] Foreign Deposition by Notice

The third method of deposition in a foreign country is by notice, with examination before a person authorized to administer oaths either by federal law or by the law in the place of examination. n28 Under the notice procedure, the party intending to take the deposition may serve a notice of the taking of the deposition on the other parties in the manner prescribed in Rule 30, or in the manner prescribed in Rule 31, if the deposition is to be taken on written interrogatories. The party taking the deposition must state in the notice the name or descriptive title of the person before whom the deposition will be taken. n29

It is not necessary under the notice procedure to apply to the court in order to take depositions in foreign countries. However, it should be noted that the notice procedure may appropriately be used only in countries where it is legal. n30 Unlike a letter of request, the notice of deposition does usually not provide compulsory process. The witness must appear voluntarily, unless the foreign state affords aid to the process. n31

[e] Foreign Deposition by Commission

The fourth method of taking a deposition in a foreign country is a "deposition by commission," before a person commissioned by the court to administer any necessary oath and take testimony. n32 A court will issue a commission on application and notice and on terms that are appropriate. n33 The court may issue a commission without a showing that taking the deposition in another manner is impracticable or inconvenient. n34 A commission must designate the person before whom the deposition is to be taken either by name or descriptive title. n35 The commission may provide that the deposition be taken on oral examination. In that case, the attorneys for the parties conduct the examination and cross-examination, on written interrogatories, or on a variation of these methods. n36 Rule 28(b) specifically requires that the witness testify "before" the commissioned official; consequently, the witness must be located in the same place as the official, and the official must be authorized to administer oaths where the examination is held. n37

[4] Disqualification of Persons to Take Deposition n*

A deposition must not be taken before any of the following persons as officer: n1

1. A party's relative, employee, or attorney.

2. A relative or employee of any party's attorney.

3. Any person who has any financial interested in the action.

However, this disqualification is waived if an objection is not made either before the deposition begins n2 or promptly after the basis for disqualification becomes known or, with reasonable diligence, could have been known. n3

The parties may stipulate that a deposition be taken before one of these persons listed above unless the court orders to the contrary. n4 An otherwise disqualified person may administer the oath to a deponent if the party seeking the deposition has no objection and no compelling need exists for an independent third person to perform the function. n5

If a deposition is recorded by audio visual means, the parties are not required to hire an independent person to operate the recording device because the deposing party bears the burden of insuring the absence of any distortion under Rule 30(b)(5)(B), and because the deposed party may choose an additional method of recording the deposition under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3). n6 Thus, because the rules governing depositions do not specifically prohibit a party's attorney from operating the video camera during the course of a video deposition that is otherwise conducted in compliance with the rules, it is not improper, although an attorney's operation of the video camera is not the preferred method of conducting a video deposition. n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 28.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a)(1)(A).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28, Committee Note.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a), 29(a).

(n8)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 28.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a)(2).

(n10)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(a)(1)(B).

(n11)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(a).

(n12)Footnote 4. Loughin v. Occidental Chem. Corp., 234 F.R.D. 75, 77 n.2 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(f)(1).

(n14)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(a).

(n15)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(4).

(n16)Footnote 8. Hudson v. Spellman High Voltage, 178 F.R.D. 29, 32 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) ; see Loughin v. Occidental Chem. Corp., 234 F.R.D. 75, 77 n.2 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n17)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 28.10-28.17 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n18)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(A); see [b], below.

(n19)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(B); see [c], below.

(n20)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(C); see [d], below.

(n21)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(D); see [e], below.

(n22)Footnote 5. Kreimerman v. Casa Veerkamp, 22 F.3d 634, 642 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n23)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 29; In re Anschuetz & Co., 754 F.2d 602, 609 (5th Cir. 1985) , vacated on other grounds, Anschuetz & Co. v. Mississippi River Bridge Auth., 483 U.S. 1002 (1987) .

(n24)Footnote 7. See Mead Digital Sys. Inc. v. A.B. Dick Co., 89 F.R.D. 318, 319 (S.D. Ohio 1980) (parties agreed to take deposition of Great Britain company in England without process of the British Courts).

(n25)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(A).

(n26)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n27)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(3).

(n28)Footnote 11. Ramirez de Arellano v. Starwood Hotels & Resorts Worldwide, 448 F. Supp. 2d 520, 529 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) ; see 23 U.S.T. 2555 , 847 U.N.T.S. 231 (1970), 28 U.S.C. § 1781, note.

(n29)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n30)Footnote 13. Hague Evidence Convention Arts. 1, 15-17.

(n31)Footnote 14. Hague Evidence Convention, Art. 27; In re Automotive Refinishing Paint Antitrust Litig., 358 F.3d 288, 300 (3d Cir. 2004) ; see International Society for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee, 105 F.R.D. 435, 441-442 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) (Article 27 establishes non-exclusive nature of the Hague Evidence Convention).

(n32)Footnote 15. Hague Evidence Convention, Art. 27; Societe Nationale Industrielle Aerospatiale v. United States Dist. Ct., 482 U.S. 522, 538, 107 S. Ct. 2542, 96 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1987) (treaty sets minimum standards for discovery).

(n33)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(B).

(n34)Footnote 17. Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc., 542 U.S. 241, 248 n.1, 124 S. Ct. 2466, 159 L.

Ed. 2d 355 (2004) .

(n35)Footnote 18. Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc., 542 U.S. 241, 260, 124 S. Ct. 2466, 159 L. Ed. 2d 355 (2004) .

(n36)Footnote 19. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n37)Footnote 20. See In re Automotive Refinishing Paint Antitrust Litig., 358 F.3d 288, 300 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n38)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(2)(A).

(n39)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(2)(B).

(n40)Footnote 23. DBMS Consultants Ltd. v. Computer Assoc. Int'l, 131 F.R.D. 367, 368 (D. Mass. 1990) .

(n41)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(2)(A).

(n42)Footnote 25. DBMS Consultants Ltd. v. Computer Assoc. Int'l, 131 F.R.D. 367, 369 (D. Mass. 1990) .

(n43)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(3).

(n44)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(4).

(n45)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(C).

(n46)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(3).

(n47)Footnote 30. See Mujica v. Occidental Petroleum Corp., 381 F. Supp. 2d 1134, 1150-1151 (C.D. Cal. 2005) .

(n48)Footnote 31. Zassenhaus v. Evening Star Newspaper Co., 404 F.2d 1361, 1362 fn.1 (D.C. Cir. 1968) (method has drawback in that it does not embrace compulsory process, citing Moore's Federal Practice); Estate of Ungar v. Palestinian Auth., 451 F. Supp. 2d 607, 612 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n49)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(1)(D).

(n50)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(2)(A).

(n51)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(2)(B).

(n52)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b)(3).

(n53)Footnote 36. See In Re Bankers Trust Co., 775 F.2d 545, 548 (3d Cir. 1985) .

(n54)Footnote 37. United States v. Ruiz-Castro, 92 F.3d 1519, 1532-33 (5th Cir.1996) .

(n55)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 28.30-28.32 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n56)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(c).

(n57)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(2)(A).

(n58)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(2)(B).

(n59)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(a) (if parties so stipulate, deposition taken before disqualified person may be used in the same way as any other deposition).

(n60)Footnote 5. United States v. Hargro, 104 F.R.D. 451, 452 (N.D. Ga. 1984) (counsel may administer oath when opponents do not object).

(n61)Footnote 6. *See Pioneer Drive, LLC v. Nissan Diesel Am., Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 117032, at *8-10 (D. Mont. 2009) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(3), (b)(5)(B).

(n62)Footnote 7. Ott v. Stripe Law Firm, 169 F.R.D. 380, 381 (E.D. Ok. 1996) .

16 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.24

§ 15.24 Use of Depositions in Court Proceedings

[1] Deposition Admissible for Use in Court Proceeding Based on Three-Part Test n*

In all trials, the testimony of witnesses generally must be taken orally in open court, unless otherwise provided by an Act of Congress, the Federal Rules of Evidence, or other rules adopted by the Supreme Court. n1 Deposition testimony, because it is taken outside the presence of court and jury, is generally hearsay within the meaning of Rule 801 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, even though an adverse party had the right to cross-examine. To the extent that it is hearsay, deposition testimony is not admissible except as provided by the Federal Rules of Evidence or by other rules prescribed by the Supreme Court pursuant to statutory authority or by Act of Congress. n2

However, despite the common-law preference for live testimony, Rule 32 was adopted to allow use of depositions at trial or other court proceedings, provided that the deposition qualifies under a three-part test, n3 as discussed in [2] and [3], below.

[2] Statement of Three-Part Test

At a hearing or trial, all or part of a deposition may be used against a party if it satisfies the following three conditions:

1. The party was present or represented at the taking of the deposition or had reasonable notice of it; n1

2. The deposition is used to the extent it would be admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence if the deponent were present and testifying; n2 and

3. The deposition use is allowed considering seven specified criteria. n3

[3] Elements of Three-Part Test

[a] Presence of Party at Deposition

All or part of a deposition is available for use against a party at a hearing or the trial only if that party was present or represented at the taking of the deposition or had reasonable notice of the deposition. n1 Thus, a deposition may not be used against a person who had no notice and who was not a party at the time the deposition was taken, because the party who later joined the action would not have had opportunity to cross examine the witness. n2 However, if the later-joined party was the deponent at the deposition, that deposition may be introduced against the witness in the action. n3

The rule does not specify what constitutes reasonable notice, and it is generally determined on the circumstances of the deposition. n4 However, if a party has received less than 14 days' notice of the deposition, and promptly files a motion for a protective order that is pending at the time the deposition is held, the deposition may not used against that party. n5

[b] Admissibility Under Federal Rules of Evidence

All or part of a deposition is available for use against a party at a hearing or the trial only to the extent it would be admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence if the deponent were present and testifying. n6 This means that, for example, deposition testimony may be used under the rules of evidence as an admission of a party-opponent under Federal Rule of Evidence 801. n7 On the other hand it also means that a deposition meeting the requirements under Rule 32 may nevertheless be excluded on other evidentiary grounds. For example, the deposition be excluded on the grounds that it is not relevant. n8

[c] Criteria That Allow Use of Deposition

All or part of a deposition is available for use against a party at a hearing or the trial only if the deposition is allowed based on the following criteria:

1. Impeachment or other use allowed by evidentiary rules. Any party may use a deposition to contradict or impeach the testimony given by the deponent as a witness, or for any other purpose allowed by the Federal Rules of Evidence. n9

2. Deposition of party, agent, or designated deponent for entity. An adverse party may use for any purpose the deposition of a party or anyone who, when deposed, was the party's officer, director, managing agent, or person designated as a deponent under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a)(4). n10

3. Unavailable witness. A party may use for any purpose the deposition of a witness, whether or not a party to the action, if the court finds any of the following:

a. that the witness is dead; n11

b. that the witness is more than 100 miles from the place of hearing or trial or is outside the United States, unless it appears that the witness's absence was procured by the party offering the deposition; n12

c. that the witness cannot attend or testify because of age, illness, infirmity, or imprisonment; n13

d. that the party offering the deposition could not procure the witness's attendance by subpoena; n14 or

e. on motion and notice, that exceptional circumstances make it desirable, considering the interest of justice and the importance of live testimony in open court, to permit the deposition to be used. n15 Whether exceptional circumstances exist is determined based on the circumstances of each case. n16

4. Deposition use precluded for certain depositions taken on short notice and for unavailable deponents when the party could not obtain an attorney. A deposition must not be used against a party who, having received less than 14 days' notice of the deposition, promptly moved for a protective order under Rule 26(c)(1)(B) requesting that it not be taken or be taken at a different time or place, and this motion was still pending when the deposition was taken. n17 A deposition taken without leave of court under the unavailability provision of Rule 30(a)(2)(A)(iii) must not be used against a party who shows that, when served with the notice, it could not obtain an attorney to represent it at the deposition, despite diligent efforts. n18

5. Using part of deposition. If a party offers in evidence only part of a deposition, an adverse party may require the offeror to introduce other parts that in fairness should be considered with the part introduced, and any party may itself introduce any other parts. n19

6. Substitution of party. If a party is substituted under Rule 25, the substitution does not affect the right to use a deposition previously taken. n20

7. Deposition taken in an earlier action. If a deposition has properly been taken and, if required, filed in any federal or state court action, the deposition may be used in a later action involving the same subject matter between the same parties, or their representatives or successors in interest, to the same extent as if taken in the later action. Such a deposition previously taken may also be used as allowed by the Federal Rules of Evidence. n21 Whether to admit a deposition from a prior lawsuit is a decision left to the district court's sound discretion. n22

[4] Objections to Deposition When Taken or When Introduced in Court Proceeding n*

[a] Time Objection Must Be Made

Certain objections to depositions must be made prior to or at the time the deposition is taken, or the objections are waived. n1 Other particular objections must be made at trial or other court proceeding, n2 including those based on a failure to satisfy the requirements to use the deposition in court under rule 32(a), n3 or for any reason that would require the exclusion of the evidence if the witness were then present and testifying, based in the Federal Rules of Evidence. n4

[b] Objections Based on Failure to Qualify Deposition for Use at Hearing or Trial

A deposition may generally be used in a civil case against any party in accordance with the provisions stated in Rule 32(a). n5 Those provisions specify the various conditions for use of the deposition at a civil hearing or trial. If a party introduces a deposition that does not comply with those provisions, a party who opposes use of the deposition may object to use of the deposition at a hearing or trial. n6 The proponent of the deposition may respond that the deposition does comply with Rule 32(a) or that the use is independently authorized by the Federal Rules of Evidence. On the other hand, even if a deposition satisfies all of the conditions of Rule 32(a) for admissibility, a party may, under Rule 32(b), object to use of the deposition for any reason that would require exclusion of the evidence if the person were testifying in person in court. n7

[c] Objections to Notice of Deposition

An objection to errors and irregularities in the notice for taking a deposition is waived unless it is made in writing and promptly served on the party giving notice. n8 This rule essentially requires that defects in the notice be pointed out promptly in order to give the erring party an opportunity to correct the mistake. n9

Even without regard to Rule 32(d), a deposition may be excluded if a party was given less than 11-days notice and has promptly made a motion for a protective order on that basis and the protective order is pending at the time of the deposition. n10

[d] Objections to Officer

An objection to taking a deposition because of disqualification of the officer before whom it is taken must be made before the taking of the deposition begins or as soon thereafter as the disqualification becomes known n11 or could be discovered with reasonable diligence. n12 A party waives the objection by failing to object within the required time. n13 A party may also waive his or her objection to a disqualified person if the party has stipulated that the person may act as deposition officer. n14

[e] Objections That Must be Made When Deposition is Taken

If certain errors or irregularities occur at the oral examination of a deposition, an objection to that must promptly be made at the time the deposition is taken. n15 Thus, waiver occurs if objections to the following errors or irregularities are not made during the deposition: n16

1. The manner of taking the deposition.

2. The form of the questions.

3. The oath or affirmation.

4. The conduct of parties.

5. Errors of any kind that might be removed or cured if promptly presented. n17

On the other hand, an objection to a deponent's competence, or to the competence, relevance, or materiality of testimony, is not waived by a failure to make the objection before or during the deposition, unless the ground for that objection might have been corrected at that time. n18

[f] Objections to Form of Written Questions Given at Deposition

If a deposition is given on written questions, n19 any objection to the form of a written question is waived if not served in writing in a timely manner on the party submitting the question. Such objections are timely only if served within the time allowed for serving the succeeding responsive questions, or, if the question is a recross question, within 7 days after being served with the question. n20

[g] Objections to Completion and Return of Deposition

Objections regarding errors and irregularities in the completion and return of a deposition must be made by motion to suppress the deposition, or some part of the deposition, when the errors and irregularities relate to:

1. The manner in which the testimony is transcribed.

2. The manner in which the deposition is prepared, signed, certified, sealed, indorsed, transmitted, filed, or otherwise administered by the officer under Rules 30 and 31.

A party waives such objections by failing make the motion to suppress promptly after the error or irregularity becomes known or, with reasonable diligence, could have been known. n21 However, the fact that a party has waived its right to attack a defective deposition, for example because it is not certified, does not compel the court to consider the deposition as evidence, and the court may properly exclude such deposition sua sponte on other grounds. n22

[5] Procedures for Use of Deposition in Court Proceeding n*

[a] Deposition Must Be Introduced in Evidence

A trial court may not use deposition testimony at trial if the deposition in question is not introduced into evidence. At the time the party introduces the deposition into evidence, the deposition is subject to whatever objections the law of evidence allows, pursuant to Rule 32(b), provided that objections have not been waived under Rule 32(d). n1 Even in a bench trial, the judge may not base his or her findings on depositions that are on file but that were not introduced into evidence, even though they could have been introduced. n2 The record on appeal should also include deposition evidence that has been admitted, to the extent the evidence is necessary to determine the issues in the case. n3

[b] All or Part of Deposition May Be Used

Provided that the requirements of Rule 32(a) are otherwise satisfied, a party may use all of a deposition at trial or other hearing. n4 However, because the trial court has discretion to control the manner in which deposition testimony is presented. n5 The court may exercise its discretion against admitting a full deposition when it is unnecessary or inadmissible, for example, when the testimony is cumulative of other evidence introduced in the proceedings. n6

Rather than an entire deposition, any party may offer in evidence a part of a deposition provided that the offered testimony is usable under Rule 32(a) or otherwise admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence. n7 An attempt to introduce a lengthy, complete deposition into evidence is not only tactically ineffective; it is also generally disfavored by trial judges. Repetitious or immaterial matter may be excluded, and the court may require identification of the germane portions of a deposition by specific order. n8

When only part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require the offeror to introduce any other part that ought in fairness to be considered with the part introduced, and any party may introduce any other parts. n9 Rule 32(a)(6) does not require introduction of the other salient excerpts of the deposition at that time, and trial courts have the discretion to require introduction either then or at a later stage in the proceedings. n10

[c] Form for Introduction of Deposition Testimony

Unless the court orders otherwise, a party must provide a transcript of any deposition testimony the party offers, but may provide the court with the testimony in nontranscript form as well. n11 This provision was added in 1993 in light of the increased availability for video recording and audio recording of depositions under Rule 30(b). n12

On any party's request, deposition testimony offered in a jury trial for any purpose other than impeachment must be presented in nontranscript form, if available, unless the court for good cause orders otherwise. n13 In other words, a party is free to use a nontranscript form for impeachment purposes, but if the deposition is used for purposes other than impeachment, the audio or visual form is preferred in front of a jury, because it most closely approximates live testimony. However, the court has discretion to decide that, in the circumstances, the use of a transcript is sufficient in front of a jury. n14

The court also has the discretion to require the use of deposition summaries, based on the court's inherent power to exercise reasonable control over the mode and order of presenting evidence under Rule 611(a) of the Federal Rules of Evidence. n15 Deposition summaries are especially useful in particularly complex large cases. n16

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 32.02-32.32 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 43(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid. 802.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a).

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(1)(A); see [3][a], below.

(n6)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(1)(B); see [3][b], below.

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2)-(8); see also [3][c], below.

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(1)(A).

(n9)Footnote 2. Hoover v. Switlik Parachute Co., 663 F.2d 964, 966 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n10)Footnote 3. See Codeiro v. Levasseau, 112 F.R.D. 209, 210-211 (D.R.I. 1986) .

(n11)Footnote 4. See In re Sulfuric Acid Antitrust Litig., 231 F.R.D. 320, 327 (N.D. Ill. 2005) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(5)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(B) (motion for protective order).

(n13)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(1)(B).

(n14)Footnote 7. See Shanklin v. Norfolk S. Ry. Co., 369 F.3d 978, 990 (th Cir. 2004).

(n15)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Evid. 401.

(n16)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2); see United States v. 23. 76 Acres of Land, 32 F.R.D. 593, 596 (D. Md. 1963) (one of many uses of deposition testimony is that of cross-examination, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n17)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6), 31(a)(4); see also Sure-Safe Indus., Inc. v. C & R Pier Mfg., 851 F. Supp. 1469, 1474 (S.D. Cal. 1993) .

(n18)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(4)(A); see In re Case No. 00-55792, 276 B.R. 214, 216 (S.D. Ohio 2002) (deposition may be used of deponent who dies prior to time deposition is offered at trial).

(n19)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(4)(B); see Garcia-Martinez v. City & County of Denver, 392 F.3d 1187, 1191 (10th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n20)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(4)(C); see, e.g., Griman v. Makousky, 76 F.3d 151, 154 (7th Cir. 1996) (attorney must ensure that witness's release date did not occur before deposition).

(n21)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(4)(D); see Thomas v. Cook County Sheriff's Dep't, 588 F.3d 445, 458 (7th Cir. 2009) (offeror must have used reasonable diligence to secure witness's presence).

(n22)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(4)(E).

(n23)Footnote 16. Banks v. Yokemick, 144 F. Supp. 2d 272, 288 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) .

(n24)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(5)(A).

(n25)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(5)(B).

(n26)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(6).

(n27)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(7).

(n28)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(8).

(n29)Footnote 22. Hub v. Sun Valley Co., 682 F.2d 776, 777-778 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n30)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 32.40-32.47 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n31)Footnote 1. See [c]-[f], below.

(n32)Footnote 2. See [b], below.

(n33)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(b); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a).

(n34)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(b); see Mark IV Properties, Inc. v. Club Dev. & Management Corp., 12 B.R. 854, 858 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1981) (objections regarding admissibility of any part of deposition evidence may be made at trial on same basis as if witness were actually in attendance, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n35)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a); [2][b], above.

(n36)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(b); Vecchio v. Schaefer, 245 F.R.D. 642, 643 (W.D. Mo. 2007) (such objections do not include objections to form of deposition).

(n37)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(1)(B).

(n38)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(1).

(n39)Footnote 9. Brown Badgett, Inc. v. Jennings, 842 F.2d 899, 901 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n40)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(5)(A).

(n41)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(2)(A).

(n42)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(2)(A).

(n43)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(2).

(n44)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(a).

(n45)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(B)(ii).

(n46)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(B)(i).

(n47)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(A).

(n48)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(A); Harris v. Bornhorst, 513 F.3d 503, 525 (6th Cir. 2008) .

(n49)Footnote 19. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 31.

(n50)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3)(C).

(n51)Footnote 21. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(4).

(n52)Footnote 22. Ullman v. Auto-Owners Mut. Ins. Co., 502 F. Supp. 2d 737, 744 (S.D. Ohio 2007) (court held uncertified deposition invalid as summary judgment evidence under Rule 56).

(n53)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 32.60-32.65 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n54)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(d)(3).

(N55)Footnote 2. See White v. Vathally, 732 F.2d 1037, 1042 (1st Cir. 1984) .

(n56)Footnote 3. See USX Corp. v. Tieco, Inc., 227 F.R.D. 680, 688 (N.D. Ala. 2004) .

(n57)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a).

(n58)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Evid. 611.

(n59)Footnote 6. See Grisom v. Logan, 334 F. Supp. 273, 279 (C.D. Cal. 1971) .

(n60)Footnote 7. Hupp v. City of Walnut Creek, 389 F. Supp. 2d 1229, 1231 n.2 (N.D. Cal. 2005) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(6).

(n61)Footnote 8. Fey v. Walston & Co., Inc., 493 F.2d 1036, 1046 (7th Cir. 1974) .

(n62)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(6).

(n63)Footnote 10. Fey v. Walston & Co., Inc., 493 F.2d 1036, 1046 (7th Cir. 1974) .

(n64)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(c).

(n65)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(c), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments; see also Little v. Mitsubishi Motors N. Am., Inc., 514 F.3d 699, 702 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n66)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(c).

(n67)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(c); see also Planned Parenthood of the Colombia/Willamette, Inc. v. Am. Coalition, 290 F.3d 1058, 1118 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n68)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Evid. 611(a); Oostendorp v. Khanna, 937 F.2d 1177, 1179-1180 (7th Cir. 1991) (it is within trial judge's discretion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 32 and Fed. R. Evid. 611(a) to require that deposition testimony be presented to jury in form of summary, rather than through reading of questions and answers).

(n69)Footnote 16. See Nigh v. Dow Chem. Co., 634 F. Supp. 1513, 1519 (W.D. Wis. 1986) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.25

§ 15.25 Interrogatories to Party

[1] Purpose and Use of Interrogatories n*

[a] Characteristics and Types of Interrogatories

Interrogatories are written questions propounded by one party to another. n1 The scope of issues that interrogatories may cover is coextensive with that of other forms of discovery. Thus, interrogatories may relate to any matter, not privileged, relevant to the subject matter of the action. n2 The party receiving interrogatories must either answer the interrogatories in writing and under oath or object to them. n3 An answer to an interrogatory essentially constitutes an admission of a party opponent for evidentiary purposes, n4 and are admissible at trial to the extent permitted by the rules of evidence. n5

The two general types of interrogatories may be described as identification interrogatories and contention interrogatories. "Identification interrogatories" call for factual information. They are questions that require the responding party to identify pertinent documents, tangible things, or the identity of persons with knowledge of facts relevant to the action. n6

On the other hand, "contention interrogatories" inquire into an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact. n7 Contention interrogatories may, among other things, ask a party to (1) state what it contends or whether it is making a certain contention, (2) explain the facts underlying its contention, (3) assert a position or explain that position with regard to how the law applies to the facts, or (4) articulate the legal or theoretical reason for a contention. n8 While an interrogatory is not objectionable merely because its answer involves the responding party's opinion or contention, the court may order that answers to contention interrogatories be deferred until after other designated discovery has been completed. n9

[b] Purposes of Interrogatories

Interrogatories serve the same general purpose as other forms of discovery: to further the rational and balanced search for accurate facts related to the claims and issues of the case and to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. More precisely, the function of interrogatories is to avoid unnecessary depositions, to minimize delay, and to narrow the issues at trial in an inexpensive fashion. n10 By narrowing the issues, interrogatories also reduce the possibility of the negative effects of surprise on all parties. n11

Much of the information that was previously requested by interrogatories must now be automatically disclosed by the parties at the outset of litigation without a formal discovery request under the mandatory disclosure provisions of Rule 26(a). However, interrogatories may still be used alone or in conjunction with other techniques to obtain additional information beyond that provided under the mandatory disclosure requirements. n12

[c] Interrogatories May Be Used in Conjunction With Other Procedures

A party may use interrogatories in conjunction with other methods of discovery, such as requests for production or depositions. n13 Although the various discovery methods share a common purpose of seeking information, they do so through different procedures. n14 In other words, the various discovery techniques are complementary; they may be used singly or in conjunction with each other, provided that the party seeking discovery is not attempting to harass or overburden the responding party. n15 They may be used in any sequence unless the court orders otherwise after motion by the opponent. n16

A party may also use interrogatories in conjunction with other procedural devices, such as a motion for a more definite statement. n17 Therefore, objections to interrogatories may not be sustained merely because a motion for a more definite statement seeking the same information has been denied. On the other hand, it is inappropriate to use a motion for a more definite statement as a substitute for discovery, such as to obtain information that could be elicited through interrogatories. A motion for more definite statement is designed to remedy unintelligibility in the pleadings, not investigate factual assertions. n18

[d] Considerable Discretion of Court to Control Interrogatories

The district courts have considerable discretion to manage discovery, including interrogatories. n19 Thus, the court may grant the parties leave to serve more than 25 interrogatories; n20 deny interrogatories by sustaining objections by the responding party; n21 grant protective orders; n22 and compel answers to interrogatories. n23 Furthermore, if measures to compel the parties to respond to interrogatories or otherwise to provide discovery are ineffective, the court may impose sanctions, such as entry of an order that facts requested by interrogatories are taken to be established. n24

[2] Persons Subject to Interrogatories n*

[a] Only Parties May be Subject to Interrogatories

A party may serve interrogatories on any other party to the action. n1 Parties subject to interrogatories include any person or entity named in a pleading such as the complaint or answer, including public and private corporations, partnerships, associations, or governmental agencies. n2 On the other hand, interrogatories may not be served on a person who is not a party. As a similar alternative discovery device available when a person is a nonparty, an attorney should consider the deposition on written questions. n3

A person is subject to interrogatories only if the person is a party at the time the person is served with the interrogatory and the time the answer to the interrogatories is due. Thus, if a party is dismissed from a case before the answers to interrogatories are due, that party is not required to answer interrogatories served before the dismissal. n4 A party may serve any other party with interrogatories, even if their interests are not adverse. For example, a plaintiff may require that a third-party defendant respond to the plaintiff's interrogatories, even though the plaintiff is not claiming against the third-party defendant. n5

[b] Persons Considered Parties

Any natural person or entity may be served with interrogatories; because a corporation, partnership, association, or other business may be a party to a proceeding, it is subject to discovery through interrogatories. n6 However, interrogatories may not be directed to a particular person within a corporation or business entity if that person is not a party, and they must be directed to the corporation or business itself, which must furnish the information available to the entity through any officer or agent. n7

If a person named in a pleading is challenging the jurisdiction of the court, the person is nevertheless considered a party for purposes of discovery and answering interrogatories, until the jurisdictional issues are determined. n8 Furthermore, a party's failure to respond to interrogatories pertaining to jurisdiction may even result in sanctions, including a determination that personal jurisdiction exists. n9

In a class action proceeding, named members of a class are parties and are thus subject to interrogatories. Plaintiffs whose actions are consolidated as a class action are also deemed as parties properly subject to discovery without any showing of special circumstances. n10 Although unnamed class members are not technically parties within the meaning of the rules governing class action suits, n11 the court has discretion in the interest of justice to permit submission of interrogatories to unnamed but identifiable members of a class on a sample basis. n12

On the other hand, persons who are nonparties are not subject to interrogatories, even if they have some relationship to the litigation. Thus, interrogatories may not be served on a party's attorney. n13 Furthermore, when an action is brought on behalf of a nonparty, that nonparty is not required to answer interrogatories. n14 Similarly, when an insurer brings an action as an assignee of its insured, the insured is not subject to interrogatories. However, when the insurer answers interrogatories, it is required to provide information about the insured. n15

[3] Limitation on Number of Interrogatories n*

[a] Total Limit of Interrogatories

Absent court order or written stipulation of the parties, a party may serve each other party a maximum of 25 written interrogatories, including discrete subparts. A court may modify that 25 interrogatory maximum by court order in a particular case; n1 however, courts may not do so by local rule. n2 A party may serve a total of 25 interrogatories on each other party involved. For example, if there are three parties in the case other than the defendant, the defendant may serve a total of 75 interrogatories, subject, however, to objections based on duplication. n3

When a case with more than 25 outstanding interrogatories is removed from state court to federal court, the propounding party has three choices. n4 It may (1) move the court to permit the additional interrogatories, (2) specify which 25 of the interrogatories are to be answered, or (3) resubmit 25 interrogatories. n5

[b] Numerical Maximum Includes Discrete Subparts

The limit on the number of interrogatories a party may serve includes "all discrete subparts." n6 In other words, a party may not avoid the numerical limits by asking questions about distinct subjects, but numbering the questions as subparts. n7 Rule 33 does not define "discrete subparts." However, courts agree generally that a discrete subpart is one that is not logically or factually subsumed within and necessarily related to the primary question. Therefore, even if a question is listed as a subpart, if it can be answered independently from the primary question, that subpart must be counted as a separate interrogatory. On the other hand, multiple interrelated questions in subparts constitute a single interrogatory. For example, a subpart is not a separate interrogatory if it requests that the time, place, persons present, and contents be stated separately. n8

[c] Courts Have Discretion to Allow Additional Interrogatories

To serve more than 25 interrogatories to another party, a party must secure a court order or a written stipulation from the responding party. n9 The court may grant leave to serve additional interrogatories, for example, when it issues a scheduling order before trial, n10 or at the pretrial conference. n11 The court may permit a party to serve additional interrogatories to the extent such additional discovery is consistent with Rule 26(b)(2)(C), which specifies factors governing limitations on discovery. The court should consider the following: whether the discovery would be cumulative or duplicative; whether the discovery may be obtained from some other source that would be more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; whether the propounding party has already had ample opportunity to obtain the information sought; and whether the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs the likelihood of resolving the issue at stake. n12

The propounding party bears the burden of persuading the court that the additional interrogatories are necessary under the circumstances of the case. Some jurisdictions require an express showing of "good cause" before they will grant a request to serve more interrogatories. n13 Courts typically find additional interrogatories appropriate in a cases involving complex and technical litigation. n14

As an alternative to seeking permission from the court to serve more than 25 interrogatories, the parties may stipulate in writing to a greater number. n15

[d] Procedure When Maximum is Exceeded

When a party is served with interrogatories in excess of the numerical limits, the responding party may generally answer the first 25, and object to the remainder. n16 However, some district courts require that, when a party is served with interrogatories that exceed the number allowed to be propounded, the responding party must object to the excess numbers before responding to any interrogatories. If the interrogated party responds to some of the interrogatories before objecting, it may waive any objection based on the excess numbers. n17

[4] Scope and Content of Interrogatories n*

[a] Interrogatories Must Seek Discoverable Information

Interrogatories, like other discovery tools, may only inquire about any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party, n1 as specified in Rule 26(b). n2 Therefore, the interrogatories may ask about any claim or defense of any party, including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any documents or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons who know of any discoverable matter. For good cause, the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n3

Relevant matters are not limited to the exact issues framed by the pleadings or to the merits of either party's case. Nor are interrogatories limited to matters that may be admitted in evidence, but to matters that may lead to admissible evidence. n4 Although it is broad, the scope of relevant discovery is not unlimited. Courts are charged with preventing discovery from becoming an instrument of harassment and oppression. They may limit the frequency and extent of discovery through application of the benefits versus burden analysis set forth in Rule 26(b). n5

[b] Scope Does not Include Privileged Matter

Interrogatories may not inquire about privileged matters; n6 privilege is a valid objection to interrogatories. n7 A party, however, may waive the objection of privilege by answering an interrogatory. n8

A claim of privilege may not be used as a blanket assertion to justify refusing to answer interrogatories; rather, the privilege must be examined in the context of the case, and the responding party has an obligation to expressly claim a particular privilege and must describe the privileged or protected items in a manner that will reveal the nature of the privilege. n9 Therefore, a responding party who wants to assert privilege should provide a responsive answer except for the specific items claimed to be privileged and should include a statement of the basis for the privilege. The party must describe the allegedly privileged material in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged, will enable other parties to assess the applicability of the privilege, n10 such as the attorney-client privilege. n11

When a party asserts a claim of privilege in response to an interrogatory, the court has discretion to respond in one of several ways. The court may choose to (1) compel discovery, n12 (2) impose sanctions for failure to comply with discovery, n13 (3) recognize the asserted privilege and issue a protective order, n14 or (4) order that modified interrogatories be served, that is, interrogatories that have been redrafted to avoid the privileged communication. n15

[c] Work Product Doctrine May Limit Scope

Work product is protected from discovery. n16 The work product doctrine provides two kinds of protection. The first is a qualified protection under which a party may not discover documents and tangible things prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for a party or the party's representative. A party may not discover these types of non-opinion work product unless the party can show that it (1) has a substantial need for the documents and (2) is unable to obtain the documents by other means without undue hardship. n17

The second type of work product is known as core or opinion work product. This type of work product benefits from an unqualified protection under which the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation may not be discovered. Even if the court ultimately permits discovery of documents and tangible things on the requisite showing of need and undue hardship, the court must, in any case, protect against disclosure of opinion work product. n18 In other words, an interrogatory normally may inquire about the existence, though not the contents, of written information gathered by an attorney in preparation for trial. n19

When a party withholds answers by claiming they are subject to protection as trial-preparation materials, the withholding party has an obligation to make the claim expressly, and must describe the materials claimed to be protected as trial preparation in a manner that will reveal the nature of the claim. n20

[d] Trade Secrets or Confidential Information May Limit Scope

A party may protect trade secrets or confidential business information from disclosure through interrogatories, unless the trade secrets or business information themselves are the subject of the claim or defense. n21 In such cases, the party must make a motion for an order limiting discovery or a protective order preventing discovery. n22 Courts may be reluctant to completely strike interrogatories that request confidential information because these kinds of interrogatories normally request information that is quite relevant to the issues. By granting a limiting or protective order, the court may provide the propounding party with the information it needs while still shielding the information from public disclosure. n23

[5] Format of Interrogatories n*

[a] Interrogatories Must Be Clear and Concise

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not prescribe any specific form for interrogatories. n1 However, interrogatories must be definite, clear, concise, and adequately inform the responding party of the information that is being requested. n2 To accomplish this purpose, the court may suggest the manner in which questions may be asked, although it may not substitute its own questions. n3 A party may ask detailed questions in complex cases if they may be reasonably expected to lead to the discovery of relevant information, and conform to the 25-question limit. n4 Before drafting interrogatories, the attorney should consult local rules. Most federal jurisdictions have rules that govern the format of interrogatories. For example, some federal district courts require that interrogatories must be numbered consecutively and provide space for the responding party's answer immediately following each interrogatory. n5

[b] Instructions, Definitions, and Forms

A party may include standard instructions on how to answer or may define certain terms at the beginning of its interrogatories, unless to do so would make the interrogatories unduly burdensome or unreasonable. n6 Local federal court rules should also be consulted because some specify the form of interrogatories. n7 Although form or pattern interrogatories are often criticized, they are not prohibited and, when they are tailored to the case and meet the standards discussed above, are not objectionable. n8 Furthermore, they may provide an inexpensive and efficient means of covering all aspects of a case. When pattern interrogatories are used, they must be used selectively as appropriate to the case, prepared by an attorney or under an attorney's direction. n9

[6] Timing of Service of Interrogatories n*

[a] Party May Not Serve Interrogatories Until After Discovery Conference

A party generally may not serve interrogatories until the parties have complied with the requirements of the discovery planning conference specified in Rule 26(f). n1 Rule 26(f) requires the parties to meet as soon as is practicable, and in any event at least 21 days before the scheduling conference occurs, to make an effort to settle the case and to develop a proposed discovery plan. n2

The various methods of discovery may be used in any sequence; thus, interrogatories may be served before or after any other discovery device has been employed by any party, unless the court orders otherwise for the convenience of the parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice. n3 Furthermore, the fact that a party is conducting a deposition or is in the midst of any other type of discovery does not operate to delay any other party's discovery. n4

[b] Party May Not Serve Interrogatories Until After Process Served

Because interrogatories only involve parties to an action, interrogatories may not be served before the summons and complaint have been served. n5 Interrogatories are treated differently in this respect than Rule 32 depositions, Rule 34 document and inspection requests, and Rule 35 physical examinations, all of which may be ordered prior to the commencement of suit, in the court's discretion. The court has no jurisdiction over the case or the parties prior to filing of the summons and complaint. Therefore, as one district court has held, a potential party who receives premature interrogatories has no duty to respond and no obligation to retain them in anticipation that they may become viable discovery requests in the future. n6

[c] Party May Not Serve Interrogatories Until After Automatic Disclosure Date

Rule 26(a) specifies a timetable which requires a party, absent court order or stipulation, to automatically disclose information. n7 Rule 26(a) contemplates that parties may use traditional discovery methods, including interrogatories, to obtain further information regarding these matters after the initial, automatic disclosures are made. To the extent that a party attempts to anticipate mandatory disclosures by serving interrogatories seeking the same information prior to the time that the disclosures are due, whether pursuant to the rule or court order, the interrogatories may be stricken as untimely. n8

[d] Type of Interrogatories May Control Timing

"Identification interrogatories," which are those that seek the identity of witnesses and the location of documents or other tangible things, may be served early in a case. n9 By contrast, "contention interrogatories" are those involving an opinion or a contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact. n10 If a party serves contention interrogatories early in the litigation, the court may order that answers to them be deferred until after designated discovery has been completed or until a pretrial conference or other later time. n11

The primary objection to early service of contention interrogatories is that the responding party will not have had time to take substantial documentary or testimonial discovery and therefore will have been unable to gather sufficient information with which to answer. n12 Furthermore, a party may be required to set forth tentative and incomplete theories of its case if it is compelled to answer contention interrogatories too early in a case. n13 The court has authority to defer answers to contention interrogatories because they usually involve mixed questions of law and fact, creating disputes between the parties that often may only be resolved after more discovery is completed. n14

[e] Effect of Discovery Cut-Off Dates or Trial Setting

Rule 33 contains no express limit or deadline on how late in the proceedings interrogatories may be served. However, the right to serve interrogatories is subject to reasonable limitations, depending on the facts in the case, the complexity of the interrogatories, the proximity to the trial date, hardship to the responding party, and the amount of time that previously was available to propound interrogatories. A court may sustain objections when interrogatories are served at such a late stage in the proceeding that their disposition may delay the trial. n15 Furthermore, once the court has established a discovery deadline, a party must serve interrogatories in sufficient time to permit the responding party the 30-day response time allowed under Rule 33 before the discovery cut-off date. n16 Accordingly, a party must serve its interrogatories at least 30 days before the discovery deadline. n17

[7] Method of Service of Interrogatories n*

When a party serves interrogatories on one party, the serving party must also serve copies on all other parties, even though responses are only sought from one party, unless the court orders otherwise. n1 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure also provide that interrogatories need not be filed with the court until they are used in the proceedings, unless the court orders filing. n2 Thus, interrogatories should only be filed if used, for example, in connection with a motion, a pretrial conference, or trial. Only those parts of interrogatories that are actually used should be filed, and a party should not file an entire set of interrogatories and responses when making reference to specific questions and responses. n3

[8] Obligations of Responding Party n*

[a] Responding Party Required to Answer, Object, or Move for Protective Order

A party that has received service of interrogatories must respond to each interrogatory, usually by answer or objection. n1 Under particular circumstances, an answer may take the form of production of business records. n2

If the responding party wishes to object to an interrogatory or to a portion of it, the party must state the reason for the objection, and must answer to the extent the interrogatory is not objectionable. This means that the responding party has a duty to answer any part of an interrogatory that is not objectionable. n3

In addition to answering or objecting, the responding party also has the option of moving for a protective order. n4 A party who simply ignores one or more interrogatories may be subject to sanctions for failing to answer or object, even though the party may be justified in not answering due to the opposing party's improper withholding of discovery. n5

[b] Responding Party Must Supply Separate, Complete, and Written Answer

The responding party must answer each interrogatory separately, completely, and in writing. n6 Answers must be responsive and not evasive. n7 Because responses to interrogatories must be verified under oath, if the answers are untrue the responding party will be subject to sanctions. n8

Answers to interrogatories must include sufficient detail to respond completely to the question. n9 A sufficient answer generally requires a conscientious and good faith effort to comprehend the question and to answer it explicitly. If the responding party is unable to give a complete answer by the time responses are due, but has access to the information, the party must give whatever incomplete information it can and move to extend the time for serving a complete answer, giving an approximation of how much time will be needed. n10

A party answering interrogatories has an affirmative duty to furnish any and all information available to the party and controlled by a party. n11 In the case of an organization, the duty to provide all information available refers to any information imputed to the organizational party itself, including information possessed by officers, employees, and former employees of the party, as well as the party's attorneys. n12 A corporate officer or agent must furnish whatever information is available to the corporation through reasonable efforts, except for personal information acquired by a corporate officer outside the scope of official duties. n13

If a party is unable to reply because it lacks knowledge or information, the party may not simply refuse to answer. n14 Rather, the party must respond in a way that indicates to the requesting party that the information is unavailable to the responding party. The response to the interrogatory must state the party's inability to provide the information sought, disclose any information the party does have, and set forth specific efforts made to obtain the rest of the information. n15

[c] Incorporation by Reference Disfavored

Responses to interrogatories generally should not incorporate outside material by reference. n16 Answers to interrogatories must be responsive to the question, complete in themselves, and should not refer to pleadings, n17 depositions, other documents, or other interrogatories, at least when a reference to another interrogatory makes it difficult to ascertain if the original interrogatory has been answered completely without a detailed comparison of answers. n18 However, the incorporation of outside material by reference in responses to interrogatories is evaluated on a case-by-case basis, and the judge has discretion to find such a response acceptable, for example, to avoid unnecessary repetition; in such cases the reference must be clear and precise. n19

[d] Duty to Sign, Verify, and Certify Responses

[i] Interrogatories Served on Individual

Interrogatories directed to an individual party must be answered in writing under oath and signed by that responding party. n20 Even though a party often will receive assistance from the attorney in the preparation of responses to interrogatories, particularly complex interrogatories or those requesting opinions or contentions, it is not proper or acceptable for the attorney alone to sign or verify the responses. This rule applies regardless of the party's purported unavailability or how far the party lives from the attorney's office or the place of trial. n21 However, the attorney must certify the interrogatory responses by signing them in addition to the client. n22

[ii] Interrogatories Directed to Business and Governmental Entities

When the party served with interrogatories is a corporation, partnership, or association, the answers to the interrogatories must be signed by an officer or agent of the business. n23 The officer or agent has a duty to provide all information available to the corporation, but may sign and verify the interrogatories on the basis of knowledge, information, and belief, without firsthand knowledge of the information in the responses. n24 However, the corporate representative must verify that the persons who provided the facts had stated them to be true. n25

When interrogatories are directed to a corporation, partnership, or association, the organization is required to designate its own officer or agent to answer them. n26 Thus, the propounding party is not entitled to select the person who will answer for the company by directing the interrogatories to a particular officer or agent; rather, the interrogatories must be directed to the company as a whole. n27 In selecting its agent to answer interrogatories, a corporation or business has an obligation to appoint someone who has the capability to furnish the requested information, n28 because it is the collected knowledge of the organization that is requested, and not the agent's personal knowledge. n29 A corporation is subject to sanctions if it abuses its powers of designation by selecting an agent who does not provide responsive answers. n30

An interrogatory addressed to a governmental agency must be answered by an officer or agent of the agency. n31 Governments and governmental agencies generally are governed by the same principles as corporate entities in designating agents to answer interrogatories, n32 as discussed above.

[iii] Attorney for Party Always Required to Certify Responses

In addition to being signed and verified by the party making them, responses to interrogatories must be signed by at least one attorney of record, and the attorney must include his or her address. An unrepresented party must certify the responses personally and state his or her address. n33 For discussion of the certification requirement under Rule 26(g)(1) and the sanctions that may be imposed for a violation of Rule 26(g)(1) in connection with the signing of discovery responses, see § 15.08.

[e] Option to Produce Business Records Instead of Answer

If the answer to an interrogatory may be determined by examining, auditing, compiling, abstracting, or summarizing a party's business records (including electronically stored information), and if the burden of deriving or ascertaining the answer will be substantially the same for either party, the responding party may answer by: n34

1. specifying the records that must be reviewed, in sufficient detail to enable the interrogating party to locate and identify them as readily as the responding party could; n35 and

2. giving the interrogating party a reasonable opportunity to examine and audit the records and to make copies, compilations, abstracts, or summaries. n36

Because of the complex nature of electronically stored business records, when a responding party uses the Rule 33(d) option for such records, the responding party may be required to provide some combination of technical support, information on application software, or other assistance, so that the interrogating party is enabled to derive or ascertain the answer from the electronically stored information as readily as the responding party. n37

[f] Continuing Duty to Supplement Answers

A responding party that has already served responses to interrogatories has a duty to supplement or correct its response:

1. in a timely manner if the party learns that in some material respect the disclosure or response is incomplete or incorrect, and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the discovery process or in writing; n38 or

2. as ordered by the court. n39

If a party fails to amend an interrogatory response under Rule 26(e), the party may not be permitted to use as evidence the information that was not disclosed in an amendment, unless the failure was harmless. n40

[g] Discretion of Court to Permit Withdrawal or Amendment of Answers

The district court has discretion to allow parties to withdraw or amend their answers to interrogatories, n41 which may be ordered on motion of the party to withdraw or amend its answers. Note that a party's need to change its answers may be obviated if the party has fulfilled it's duty to supplement incorrect or incomplete answers. n42 However, the trial court nevertheless has discretion to allow use of the original answer against the responding party as an evidentiary admission. n43

[9] Time For Response to Interrogatories n*

[a] Responding Party Generally Has 30 Days to Answer

A party that has been served with interrogatories must serve a copy of the answers, and objections, if any, on the propounding party within 30 days after service of the interrogatories, n1 subject to any extension pursuant to Rule 6. n2 The court has discretion to order a shorter or longer time for responses, n3 or the parties, in the absence of a court order, may stipulate to a shorter or longer time. n4

A party completes service of interrogatory responses when the responses are (1) hand delivered to an unrepresented party or the attorney for a party; n5 (2) mailed to an unrepresented party or the attorney for a party; n6 (3) delivered to the court clerk when the address of the served party is unknown; n7 or (4) delivered by electronic transmission or in some other manner with the consent of the party served. n8 A pro se prison inmate litigant completes service of interrogatory responses when he or she submits them to the prison authorities for mailing, not when they are actually placed in the mail. n9 A party who fails to comply with an interrogatory deadline is subject to sanctions. n10

[b] Court's Discretion to Order Shorter or Longer Time

The court may order a shorter or longer time to serve answers than the 30 days specified in Rule 33. n11 A motion for an order extending the time for responses should show good cause for the extension. n12 A party may also move the court to delay answers to contention interrogatories. The court has authority to order that contention interrogatories need not be answered until after other, designated discovery has been completed, until a pretrial conference, or until some other time specified by the court. n13

[c] Parties May Stipulate to Shorter or Longer Time

If the court does not make an order specifying the time for service of answers to interrogatories, the parties may stipulate to a shorter or longer time limit than the 30 days specified in Rule 33. n14 The stipulation must be in writing and is subject to the provisions of Rule 29, n15 which requires court approval for a stipulation extending the time for responses if it would interfere with any dates set by the court for completion of discovery, for the hearing of a motion, or for trial. n16 If the stipulation would not interfere with any dates set by the court, it does not require the approval of the court. n17

[d] Effect of Removal

If a case is removed from state court to federal court and outstanding interrogatories have been served before the time of removal, the time for responses to interrogatories is measured from the date of the parties' discovery planning conference. n18 The conference requirements provide that the parties must meet as soon as practicable, or at least 21 days before the scheduling conference or a scheduling order is due, n19 to attempt to settle the case and to plan discovery issues. n20 The time for response to interrogatories is measured in this manner in a removed case because, under the federal rules, a party may not seek discovery from any source until the parties have had their discovery planning conference. n21

[10] Objections to Interrogatories n*

[a] Time for Objection

A responding party must serve all objections, and all answers to each interrogatory not objected to, within 30 days of service of the interrogatories, n1 subject to any extension pursuant to Rule 6. n2 If a party asserts that an interrogatory is objectionable, the party may not simply refuse to answer; it must either answer or object. n3

The attorney for the responding party must sign the objections. n4 An objection to a specific interrogatory will only postpone the time to answer until the issue is determined by the court. However, if the objection is sustained, or a protective order is issued, no answer will be necessary. n5

[b] Required Specificity

An objection must specify which interrogatory is being challenged and must state each specific ground for the objection to that interrogatory. n6 Any ground not specifically stated in a timely objection is waived unless the party's failure to object is excused by the court for good cause shown. n7 The court may impose sanctions on a party and an attorney making an objection which was not substantially justified. n8

General or blanket objections are not acceptable. It is not sufficient merely to assert that one objects, that the interrogatories are burdensome, oppressive, duplicative, irrelevant, or that they require research. n9 The objecting party must explain why an interrogatory has any of these objectionable characteristics. n10

A party is entitled to withhold interrogatory answers that would otherwise be discoverable if the materials are privileged or constitute work product. To withhold materials under a claim of privilege or work product, the responding party must make the claim expressly n11 and must describe the nature of the things not answered in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged or protected, will enable the other parties to assess the applicability of the privilege or protection. n12

[c] Typical Grounds for Objection

A responding party may object to interrogatories on any of the following grounds:

1. The interrogatories request information outside of the permissible scope of discovery. Thus, interrogatories are objectionable on the grounds that they ask for: irrelevant information, information not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, privileged information, information protected as attorney work product, or purely legal conclusions. n13

2. The interrogatories exceed the limitations set forth in Rule 26(b)(2). Under the rule, interrogatories are objectionable when (1) they request information that is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; (2) they request information that the propounding party has had ample other opportunities to obtain; or (3) the burden or expense of the interrogatories outweighs their likely benefit, considering the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake, and the importance of the interrogatories in resolving the issues. n14

The determination of whether the nature and extent of the information requested entails an undue burden on the responding party is within the discretion of the court. n15 The responding party has the burden to specifically allege and show that an excessive burden will occur if relief is not granted. n16

3. The interrogatories are too broad, general, or all-inclusive. For example, the objecting party must show that an interrogatory is overbroad by specifically showing that it uses an omnibus term such as "relating to" or "concerning," and applies to a general category or group of documents or a broad range of information that could include nondiscoverable material. n17

[d] Waiver of Objection

A party may waive a valid interrogatory objection in two ways. The first way is by voluntarily answering an interrogatory. n18 Thus, a responding party objecting to the number of interrogatories must object to the court before responding or the objection is waived. n19 If the responding party both answers and objects to one particular interrogatory at the same time, the objection may be deemed waived, and a responsive answer will stand unless ordered otherwise by the court. n20

The second way to waive an objection is by failing to make the objection within 30 days of service of the interrogatory. n21 Any ground for objection not stated in a timely manner is waived unless the responding party seeks an extension of time to answer or object, or the party's failure to object is excused by the court for good cause shown. n22 If the responding party fails to seek an extension of time to answer or object, the party may be found to have waived all objections and be subject to sanctions for failure to answer. n23 Furthermore, regardless of the 30-day time limit for objections, an objection may not be made to an interrogatory after final judgment is entered. n24

[e] Resolution of Objection

If a responding party has made an objection, the parties must attempt to resolve the dispute without court action because an informal attempt at resolution is a prerequisite for a motion to compel answers. If the parties cannot resolve the dispute, the propounding party may move for an order to compel answers to the interrogatories. n25 If it fails to move to compel answers, the propounding party may waive the right to seek answers to interrogatories. n26 The burden falls on the objecting party to show why the interrogatory is objectionable. n27 In order to satisfy its burden, the objecting party must make a specific, detailed showing of how the interrogatory is objectionable. For example, if the objection is that it is burdensome, the party should detail the expense and time necessary to answer. n28 The court will rule on particular objections in the course of ruling on the motion to compel. n29

[11] Effect of Failure to Respond to Interrogatory n*

[a] Order to Compel Answers

If a responding party fails to answer an interrogatory, or answers evasively or incompletely, n1 the propounding party may, after conferring with the defaulting party, move for an order to compel discovery. n2 Rule 37 governs procedures for orders to compel discovery or sanctions when a party fails to make discovery. If a court has granted a motion to compel and has ordered a party to provide answers to interrogatories, Rule 37 also permits the court to impose sanctions for the failure to comply with that order. The court may impose such sanctions as are just. n3

[b] Sanctions

A court may generally impose immediate sanctions for the failure of a party to respond to an interrogatory. n4 However, a court may not impose sanctions on a party for failing to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system, unless there are exceptional circumstances. n5 This provision only restricts the imposition of "sanctions." It does not prevent a court from taking other action to manage discovery, for example, by ordering the responding party to respond to additional interrogatories. n6

The party propounding interrogatories may seek sanctions for failure to respond to the discovery request even without first filing a motion for an order to compel, n7 provided that the moving party includes a certification that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the party failing to answer interrogatories in an effort to obtain the answers without court action. n8 A party's failure to answer interrogatories as required need not be willful or in bad faith for sanctions to apply; n9 however, the court may consider such factors in its determination of the severity of the sanctions it will impose. n10

[c] Attorney's Fees

If the court grants a motion to compel, or if the requested discovery is provided after a motion to compel has been filed, the court must order the party whose conduct necessitated the motion, or the party's attorney, or both of them, to pay the propounding party's reasonable expenses incurred in making the motion, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds the propounding party failed to make a good faith effort at resolution, the opposing party's failure to respond to interrogatories was substantially justified, or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. n11

[12] Use of Answers to Interrogatories n*

A party that receives an answer to an interrogatory may use the answer to the extent allowed by the Federal Rules of Evidence. n1 Therefore, for example, the propounding party may use the answer for any of the following purposes:

1. As direct evidence at trial. n2 Note that an answer does not become evidence until it is offered at trial and admitted by the court. n3

2. As an admission of a party opponent. n4 An answer admitted as an admission, however, is not conclusive, and the answering party may introduce other evidence on the matter. n5

3. For purposes of impeaching a witness. n6

4. In support of or opposition to motions, such as a for summary judgment, n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 33.02-33.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1), 33(b)(3).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2); Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(1), (3), (4).

(n5)Footnote 4. *See Miroglio S.P.A. v. Conway Stores, Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8034, at 21 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) ; see also Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(c).

(n7)Footnote 6. Citibank (S.D.), N.A. v. Savage, 303 B.R. 766, 773-774 (D. Md. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Skaff v. Meridien N. Am. Beverly Hills, LLC, 506 F.3d 832, 842 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n9)Footnote 8. McCarthy v. Paine Webber Group, Inc., 168 F.R.D. 448, 450 (D. Conn. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2).

(n11)Footnote 10. In re Potash Antitrust Litig., 161 F.R.D. 405, 409 (D. Minn. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Burks v. City of Philadelphia, 904 F. Supp. 421, 424 (E.D. Pa. 1995) (interrogatories provide opportunity for each party to determine basis for other party's claim or defense and to delineate facts and issues in dispute).

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments; see former Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(5), Committee Note to 2007 Amendments.

(n14)Footnote 13. Purofied Down Products v. Royal Down Products, 87 F.R.D. 685, 691 (W.D. Mich. 1980) (plaintiff not precluded from noticing oral depositions of same parties defendant seeks to question by interrogatories, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n15)Footnote 14. See Babcock Swine, Inc. v. Shelbco, Inc., 126 F.R.D. 43, 45 (S.D. Ohio 1989) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Fischer & Porter Co. v. Tolson, 143 F.R.D. 93, 97 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (interrogatories and requests for production).

(n17)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(a).

(n18)Footnote 17. Robinson v. Tracy, 16 F.R.D. 113, 116 (W.D. Mo. 1954) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n19)Footnote 18. In re Argo Communications Corp., 134 B.R. 776, 798 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Sempier v. Johnson & Higgins, 45 F.3d 724, 734 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n22)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2).

(n23)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A),(C).

(n24)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(iii).

(n25)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(i).

(n26)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 33.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n27)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1), 33(b)(1).

(n28)Footnote 2. See Trane Co. v. Klutznick, 87 F.R.D. 473, 475-477 (W.D. Wis. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n29)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 31(a)(1).

(n30)Footnote 4. Ellison v. Runyan, 147 F.R.D. 186, 189 (S.D. Ind. 1993) .

(n31)Footnote 5. Andrulonis v. United States, 96 F.R.D. 43, 45 (N.D.N.Y. 1982) , citing Moore's Federal Practice); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n32)Footnote 6. See United States v. Kordel, 397 U.S. 1, 8, 90 S. Ct. 763, 25 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1970) .

(n33)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(1)(B).

(n34)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Provident Nat'l Bank v. California Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 819 F.2d 434, 438 (3d Cir. 1987) .

(n35)Footnote 9. See Insurance Corp. of Ir., Ltd. v. Compagnie des Bauxites de Guinee, 456 U.S. 694, 706, 102 S. Ct. 2099, 72 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1982) .

(n36)Footnote 10. In re Folding Carton Antitrust Litig., 83 F.R.D. 260, 264 (N.D. Ill. 1979) .

(n37)Footnote 11. See Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank v. Roper, 445 U.S. 326, 333-336, 100 S. Ct. 1166, 63 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n38)Footnote 12. Brennan v. Midwestern United Life Ins. Co., 450 F.2d 999, 1004 (7th Cir. 1971) (unnamed members must receive adequate notice so that they are completely informed of discovery order and potential consequences of noncompliance).

(n39)Footnote 13. Steelman v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co, 35 F.R.D. 120, 120-121 (W.D. Mo. 1964) .

(n40)Footnote 14. Wirtz v. I.C. Harris & Co., 36 F.R.D. 116, 117 (E.D. Mich. 1964) .

(n41)Footnote 15. Firemen's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Erie-Lackawanna R.R., 35 F.R.D. 297, 299-300 (N.D. Ohio 1964) .

(n42)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 33.30 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n43)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n44)Footnote 2. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Birch, Stewart, Kolasch & Birch, LLP, 217 F.R.D. 288, 289 (D. Mass. 2003) (local rule, which limited interrogatories to 25 per adverse side, was superseded by Rule 33); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(2)(A).

(n45)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(2)(A).

(n46)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(c) (federal civil procedure rules govern removed cases).

(n47)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n48)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n49)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments).

(n50)Footnote 8. Trevino v. ABC Am., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 612, 614 (N.D. Cal. 2006) ; see Banks v. Office of the Senate Sergeant-at-Arms, 222 F.R.D. 7, 10 (D.D.C. 2004) (whether one question is subsumed in and related to another or whether each question may stand alone and be answered irrespective of the answer to the others); Myers v. United States Paint Co., Div. of Grow Group, Inc., 116 F.R.D. 165, 165-166 (D. Mass. 1987) (subparts need not be counted as separate interrogatories if they are logical extension of basic interrogatory and seek specified additional information).

(n51)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n52)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n53)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n54)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i)-(iii).

(n55)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Lykins v. Attorney General, 86 F.R.D. 318, 318 (E.D. Va. 1980) .

(n56)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Roesberg v. Johns-Manville Corp., 85 F.R.D. 292, 297 (E.D. Pa. 1980) .

(n57)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

(n58)Footnote 16. Valdez v. Ford Motor Co., 134 F.R.D. 296, 297 (D. Nev. 1991) .

(n59)Footnote 17. See Herdlein Techs., Inc. v. Century Contractors, Inc., 147 F.R.D. 103, 104 (W.D.N.C. 1993) .

(n60)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 33.60-33.79 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n61)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2).

(n62)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b).

(n63)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n64)Footnote 4. Stabilus v. Haynsworth, Baldwin, Johnson & Greaves, 144 F.R.D. 258, 263 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n65)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n66)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n67)Footnote 7. Roesberg v. Johns-Manville Corp., 85 F.R.D. 292, 301 (E.D. Pa. 1980) ; 3 Weinstein's Federal Evidence, Article V, Privileges (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

(n68)Footnote 8. See, e.g., B. Braun Med. Inc. v. Abbott Lab., 155 F.R.D. 525, 528 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n69)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A).

(n70)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5); see Burns v. Imagine Films Entertainment, Inc., 164 F.R.D. 589, 594 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n71)Footnote 11. Hoffman v. United Telecomms., Inc., 117 F.R.D. 436, 439 (D. Kan. 1987) .

(n72)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a).

(n73)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b).

(n74)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n75)Footnote 15. See In re Dayco Corp. Derivative Sec. Litig., 102 F.R.D. 633, 636 (S.D. Ohio 1984) (court ordered plaintiff to draft less intrusive interrogatories on whether defendants consulted with counsel on relevant issues).

(n76)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A).

(n77)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(A)(ii).

(n78)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3)(B).

(n79)Footnote 19. Hoffman v. United Telecomms., Inc., 117 F.R.D. 436, 439 (D. Kan. 1987) .

(n80)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A).

(n81)Footnote 21. Triple Tee Golf, Inc. v. Nike, Inc., 485 F.3d 253, 257 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n82)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(G); see, e.g., Gelb v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 813 F. Supp. 1022, 1035 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n83)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(D),(G); Stillman v. Vassileff, 100 F.R.D. 467, 468 (S.D.N.Y. 1984)

(instead of protective order, court issued order limiting discovery).

(n84)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 33.31 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n85)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33.

(n86)Footnote 2. United States ex rel. Fago v. M & T Mortg. Corp., 235 F.R.D. 11, 20 (D. D.C. 2006) .

(n87)Footnote 3. Sempier v. Johnson & Higgins, 45 F.3d 724, 736 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n88)Footnote 4. United States ex rel. Fago v. M & T Mortg. Corp., 235 F.R.D. 11, 20 (D.D.C. 2006) .

(n89)Footnote 5. See, e.g., M.D. Fla., Rule 3.03(a).

(n90)Footnote 6. Diversified Prods. Corp. v. Sports Ctr. Co., 42 F.R.D. 3, 4 (D. Md. 1967) .

(n91)Footnote 7. See, e.g., S.D.N.Y. Rule 33.3.

(n92)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Robbins v. Camden City Bd. of Educ., 105 F.R.D. 49, 57 (D.N.J. 1985) .

(n93)Footnote 9. SCM Societa Commerciale S.P.A. v. Industrial & Commercial Research Corp., 72 F.R.D. 110, 113 n.5 (N.D. Tex. 1976) .

(n94)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 33.41 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n95)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1), 26(f).

(n96)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n97)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(A).

(n98)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2)(A).

(n99)Footnote 5. Venezia v. Robinson, 16 F.3d 209, 212 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n100)Footnote 6. Howard v. Heffron, 118 F.R.D. 590, 590 (W.D. Mich. 1988) .

(n101)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C), (D).

(n102)Footnote 8. B.C.F. Oil Refining Inc. v. Consolidated Edison Co., 168 F.R.D. 161, 166 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n103)Footnote 9. Fischer & Porter Co. v. Tolson, 143 F.R.D. 93, 95 (E.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n104)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2).

(n105)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2).

(n106)Footnote 12. See Fischer & Porter Co. v. Tolson, 143 F.R.D. 93, 95 (E.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n107)Footnote 13. Storie v. United States, 142 F.R.D. 317, 319 (E.D. Mo. 1992) .

(n108)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n109)Footnote 15. Oskar Tiedemann & Co. v. United States, 172 F. Supp. 609, 610 (D. Del. 1959) (sustaining objections to 42 sets of interrogatories filed five months after case set for trial, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n110)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2); Northern Ind. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Colorado Westmoreland, Inc., 112 F.R.D. 423, 424 (N.D. Ind.) , aff'd without opinion, 845 F.2d 1024 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n111)Footnote 17. Smith v. Principal Cas. Ins. Co., 131 F.R.D. 104, 105 (S.D. Miss. 1990) .

(n112)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 33.42, 33.43 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n113)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(C).

(n114)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n115)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d), Committee Note to 2000 Amendments.

(n116)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 33.100-33.107 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n117)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(1)(A), (3), (4).

(n118)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d); see [f], below.

(n119)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3).

(n120)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n121)Footnote 5. Mahoney v. Kempton, 142 F.R.D. 32, 33 (D. Mass. 1992) .

(n122)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3); see Sempier v. Johnson & Higgins, 45 F.3d 724, 734 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n123)Footnote 7. See Truck Treads, Inc. v. Armstrong Rubber Co., 818 F.2d 427, 429 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n124)Footnote 8. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. Natural Beverage Distrib., 69 F.3d 337, 350-354 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n125)Footnote 9. Chubb Integrated Sys., Ltd. v. Nat'l Bank of Wash., 103 F.R.D. 52, 60-61 (D.D.C. 1984) .

(n126)Footnote 10. Association of Am. Physicians & Surgeons, Inc. v. Clinton, 837 F. Supp. 454, 457 (D.D.C. 1993) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n127)Footnote 11. Trane Co. v. Klutznick, 87 F.R.D. 473, 476 (W.D. Wis. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n128)Footnote 12. General Dynamics Corp. v. Selb Mfg., 481 F.2d 1204, 1210 (8th Cir. 1973) .

(n129)Footnote 13. Gerling Int'l Ins. Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 839 F.2d 131, 137-139 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n130)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii) (party that does not answer nor object to each interrogatory subject to sanctions).

(n131)Footnote 15. Hansel v. Shell Oil Corp., 169 F.R.D. 303, 305-306 (E.D. Pa. 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n132)Footnote 16. Mahoney v. Kempton, 142 F.R.D. 32, 33 (D. Mass. 1992) (improper for defendants in civil action to respond to interrogatories by referring to their testimony in prior criminal trial arising from same occurrence).

(n133)Footnote 17. Scaife v. Boenne, 191 F.R.D. 590, 594 (N.D. In. 2000) .

(n134)Footnote 18. See Smith v. Logansport Community Sch. Corp., 139 F.R.D. 637, 650 (N.D. Ind. 1991) .

(n135)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Kenney v. Shaw Indus. Inc., 764 F. Supp. 1501, 1503 (N.D. Ga. 1991) .

(n136)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3),(5).

(n137)Footnote 21. McDougall v. Dunn, 468 F.2d 468, 472 (4th Cir. 1972) .

(n138)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1); see [iv], below.

(n139)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(1)(B), 33(b)(5).

(n140)Footnote 24. Law v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 167 F.R.D. 464, 476 (D. Kan. 1996) , vacated on other grounds, University of Texas v. Vratil, 96 F.3d 1337 (10th Cir. 1996) (answers must provide composite knowledge of organization, whether or not officer or agent has personal knowledge of facts, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n141)Footnote 25. Dial v. Travelers Indem. Co., 780 F.2d 520, 525 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n142)Footnote 26. United States v. Kordel, 397 U.S. 1, 8, 90 S. Ct. 763, 25 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1969) .

(n143)Footnote 27. Law v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 167 F.R.D. 464, 476 (D. Kan. 1996) , vacated on other grounds, University of Texas v. Vratil, 96 F.3d 1337 (10th Cir. 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n144)Footnote 28. United States v. Kordel, 397 U.S. 1, 8, 90 S. Ct. 763, 25 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1970) .

(n145)Footnote 29. Zenith Radio Corp. v. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., 505 F. Supp. 1190, 1257 (E.D. Pa. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n146)Footnote 30. Black Panther Party v. Smith, 661 F.2d 1243, 1257 (D.C. Cir. 1981) , vacated on other grounds, 458 U.S. 1118 (1982) .

(n147)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(1)(B).

(n148)Footnote 32. Trane Co. v. Klutznick, 87 F.R.D. 473, 476-477 (W.D. Wis. 1980) .

(n149)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n150)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d); see In re Fine Paper Antitrust Litig., 685 F.2d 810, 823 (3d Cir. 1982) (if propounding party would be more burdened, responding party may not use this option, and must instead obtain information itself and answer interrogatory).

(n151)Footnote 35. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d)(1); *see Ohio Mgmt., LLC v. James River Ins. Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47516, at 2 (E.D. La. 2006) (provided party furnishes records from which answer may readily be derived, there is no reason why that party need produce all documents that may refer or relate to information sought by interrogatory).

(n152)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d)(2).

(n153)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n154)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(A); see Colon-Millin v. Sears Roebuck de P.R., Inc., 455 F.3d 30, 38-39 (1st Cir. 2006) (it was clear violation of duty to supplement interrogatory when responding party failed to inform other party of new facts at time such facts were discovered).

(n155)Footnote 39. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)(B).

(n156)Footnote 40. Westefer v. Snyder, 422 F.3d 570, 584 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n157)Footnote 41. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n158)Footnote 42. See [f], above.

(n159)Footnote 43. Bollard v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 56 F.R.D. 569, 574 (W.D. Mo. 1971) (defendant's deliberate filing of different set of answers than those it served on propounding party constituted unauthorized amendment of answers); see Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2) (admission by party opponent).

(n160)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 33.120-33.124 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n161)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n162)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b); *Ruszkowski v. Kaleida Health Sys., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91683, at *6-7 (W.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n163)Footnote 3. See [b], below.

(n164)Footnote 4. See [c], below.

(n165)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

(n166)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

(n167)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C).

(n168)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C).

(n169)Footnote 9. Faile v. Upjohn Co., 988 F.2d 985, 988-989 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n170)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f); Geiserman v. MacDonald, 893 F.2d 787, 791-792 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n171)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n172)Footnote 12. See Geiserman v. MacDonald, 893 F.2d 787, 793 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n173)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(2); see [1][a], above.

(n174)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n175)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n176)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b).

(n177)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29, Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n178)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n179)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1).

(n180)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1).

(n181)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n182)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 33.170-33.175 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n183)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2),(3).

(n184)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n185)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii) (party that does not answer or object to each interrogatory subject to sanctions).

(n186)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(5).

(n187)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2),(3).

(n188)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4); Burns v. Imagine Films Entertainment, Inc., 164 F.R.D. 589, 593 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n189)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4).

(n190)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A).

(n191)Footnote 9. Wagner v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 238 F.R.D. 418, 423-424 (N.D. W.Va. 2006) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4).

(n192)Footnote 10. Chubb Integrated Sys. v. National Bank of Washington, 103 F.R.D. 52, 59-60 (D.D.C. 1984) (for example, objector must submit affidavits or offer evidence that shows how allegedly overbroad interrogatory contains information not subject to discovery).

(n193)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A)(i).

(n194)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A)(ii).

(n195)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1); see also [4], above.

(n196)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i)-(iii).

(n197)Footnote 15. See, e.g., MacMillan, Inc. v. Federal Ins. Corp., 141 F.R.D. 241, 243 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n198)Footnote 16. Burton Mechanical Contractors, Inc. v. Foreman, 148 F.R.D. 230, 233 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n199)Footnote 17. Moses v. Halstead, 236 F.R.D. 667, 672 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n200)Footnote 18. Skelton & Co. v. Goldsmith, 49 F.R.D. 128, 130, n.1 (S.D.N.Y. 1969) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3).

(n201)Footnote 19. Herdlein Techs., Inc. v. Century Contractors, Inc., 147 F.R.D. 103, 104 (W.D.N.C. 1993) .

(n202)Footnote 20. Moses v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 104 F.R.D. 55, 58 (N.D. Ga. 1984) .

(n203)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n204)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(4).

(n205)Footnote 23. Davis v. Fendler, 650 F.2d 1154, 1160 (9th Cir. 1981) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii).

(n206)Footnote 24. Alaska Ctr. for the Env't v. Browner, 20 F.3d 981, 985 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n207)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1).

(n208)Footnote 26. Calderon v. Presidio Valley Farmers Ass'n, 863 F.2d 384, 389 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n209)Footnote 27. Roesberg v. Johns-Manville Corp., 85 F.R.D. 292, 297 (E.D. Pa. 1980) .

(n210)Footnote 28. Pederson v. Preston, 250 F.R.D. 61, 65 (D.D.C. 2008) .

(n211)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n212)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 33.140-33.143 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n213)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4).

(n214)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(iii).

(n215)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5).

(n216)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d).

(n217)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e); see Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) ("electronically stored information" includes, but is not limited to, items such as data files, program files, backup and archival tapes, and e-mail messages).

(n218)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n219)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii).

(n220)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(B).

(n221)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n222)Footnote 10. See Collins v. Williams, 575 F. Supp. 2d 610, 617-618 (D. Del. 2008) .

(n223)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(ii)(iii),(C), 37(b)(2)(C); 37(d)(3); see, e.g., Beard v. Braunstein, 914 F.2d 434, 446-447 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n224)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 33.160 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n225)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(c).

(n226)Footnote 2. Tamez v. City of San Marcos, 118 F.3d 1085, 1098 (5th Cir. 1997) .

(n227)Footnote 3. Bracey v. Grenoble, 494 F.2d 566, 570 n.7 (3d Cir. 1974) .

(n228)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2); see also Bell v. A-Leet Leasing Corp., 863 F.2d 257, 259 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n229)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33, Committee note to 1970 Amendments; see TexPar Energy, Inc. v. Murphy Oil USA, Inc., 45 F.3d 1111, 1115 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n230)Footnote 6. Naeem v. McKesson Drug Co., 444 F.3d 593, 609 (7th Cir. 2006) (impeached witness need not be same person who answered interrogatory); see also Fed. R. Evid. 613.

(n231)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(1).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.26

§ 15.26 Production of Documents, Electronically Stored Information, and Things, or Entry On Land

[1] Purpose and Use of Requests for Production and Inspection n*

[a] Types of Requests Permitted

Rule 34 permits any party to serve on any other party any of the following three types of requests, provided that the item requested is within the responding's party possession, custody, or control, and that the request is within the permissible scope of discovery: n1

1. A request to inspect, copy, test, or sample any designated documents or electronically stored information. Such items may include writings, drawings, graphs, charts, photographs, sound recordings, images, and other data or data compilations, stored in any medium from which information can be obtained either directly or, if necessary, after translation by the responding party into a reasonably usable form. n2 For example, the request may specify that the information produced should be in the form of a machine-readable data compilation such as Excel spreadsheets, if the responding party stores or can retrieve such information in machine-readable format. n3

2. A request to inspect, copy, test, or sample any designated tangible things. n4

3. A request to permit entry onto designated land or other property possessed or controlled by the responding party, so that the requesting party may inspect, measure, survey, photograph, test, or sample the property or any designated object or operation on the property. n5

Rule 34 also recognizes that, pursuant to Rule 45, a party may obtain similar discovery from persons who are not parties to the action. n6

[b] Effect of Mandatory Disclosure Requirements

At the outset of litigation each party has an obligation to automatically disclose the following items to the other parties, without receiving a request from the other parties: a copy or a description by category and location of all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses; n7 the documents or other evidentiary materials, not privileged or protected from disclosure, on which damages computations are based, including materials bearing on the nature and extent of injuries suffered; n8 and for inspection and copying any insurance agreement under which an insurance business may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment. n9

These mandatory initial disclosures do not restrict a party from utilizing Rule 34 (or other discovery rules) to seek additional relevant documents, electronically stored information, tangibles, or permission to enter on land. n10 However, a party generally may not request additional discovery pursuant to Rule 34 until the required initial discovery conference of the parties has been held. n11 Because the required initial disclosures must generally occur within 14 days after the discovery conference, document requests will not usually precede receipt of these disclosures. This is clearly the intent of Rule 26, and is also supported by practical considerations, because the Rule 26(a) initial disclosures are likely to assist a party in formulating any Rule 34 requests for production. n12

[c] Request for Production or Entry Complements Use of Other Discovery Methods

[i] Use of Request for Production or Entry With Other Discovery

A request for production complements but does not replace other methods of discovery, which each have their own advantages and limitations; however, absent specific limitations in the rules the court has discretion to control the organization of discovery types, including the amount of discovery and the sequence of each type of discovery. n13 For example, in contrast to limitations on the number and length of oral depositions and the number of interrogatories and requests for admission, the Federal Rules place no absolute limits on the number of requests for production permitted under Rule 34. n14 However, the court has explicit discovery management authority to limit the number and length of requests under Rule 34 if: the production would be cumulative or duplicative or obtainable from some other source, the party seeking production has had other opportunity to obtain the information sought, or if the production would be burdensome or expensive. n15

Because most courts hold that Rule 27 authorizes the perpetuation of testimony and evidence, and not the discovery or uncovering of evidence, a person contemplating litigation has no absolute entitlement to early discovery under Rule 27. n16 However, the Rule 27 mechanism to perpetuate testimony or other evidence before any court action has been filed, or while an appeal from a judgment is pending, may be used to obtain production of documents of the character provided for by Rule 34 provided court approval has been obtained. n17

[ii] Use of Subpoena Duces Tecum

Rule 30 governs the procedure for noticing, taking, and recording oral depositions. The Rule provides that notice to a party deponent may be accompanied by a request pursuant to Rule 34 for the production of items at the taking of the deposition, and that the procedure of Rule 34 applies to such a request. n18 While Rule 30 requires only that a party give reasonable notice of the deposition to other parties, if the party initiating the deposition has also made a request for production of items at the deposition, the time limits set by Rule 34 apply. n19 Any request for items under Rule 34 that accompany the deposition notice must provide at least 30 days for service of a response, unless a shorter time is ordered by the court or agreed to in writing by the parties. n20 Furthermore, requests for production of items under Rule 34 are subject to limitations imposed by the court. Also, because Rule 34(b) allows parties 30 days to respond to requests for production, the request must be served at least 30 days prior to any "completion of discovery" deadline that has been established by the court. n21

[iii] Use of Subpoena to Nonparty

Rule 34 governs the pretrial production and inspection of documents, electronically stored information, and things from a party and the entry on a party's premises for inspection. n22 Rule 45 is the corresponding provision used when a party desires to obtain such materials in the possession of a nonparty in advance of trial. n23 Thus, the general provisions governing discovery in Rule 26 apply to discovery under Rule 45. n24

Rule 45 also explicitly applies to trials and hearings, and thus may be used to subpoena any party or nonparty to produce books, documents, or tangible things at the trial. n25 However, Rule 45 is clearly intended to be used principally as a pretrial discovery device. n26 Furthermore, although Rule 45 is not limited by its terms to nonparties, it should not be used to obtain pretrial production of documents or things, or inspection of premises, from a party in circumvention of discovery rules or orders. Discovery from a party, as distinct from a nonparty, is governed by Rule 34, not Rule 45. n27

[2] Availability of Requests for Production or Entry n*

[a] Available in Civil Actions in District Court

Rule 34 applies in the United States district courts in all suits of a civil nature whether cognizable as cases at law or in equity or in admiralty, with the exceptions stated in Rule 81. n1 Therefore, Rule 34 does not apply to actions in federal courts other than the district courts, n2 or before administrative agencies, n3 or to district court proceedings not of a civil nature unless some other source of authority makes the Rule applicable. n4

[b] Available Only During Discovery

Rule 34 is applicable only after an action has been commenced in the district court n5 because Rule 26(b)(1) defines the scope of discovery by reference to the subject matter involved in the pending action. n6 As an alternative, however, a party may obtain production or inspection of items by court order pursuant to Rule 27 prior to the initiation of a formal action. n7

Absent leave of court or a written stipulation, a request for production or for entry on land may not be served before the time specified in Rule 26(d). Thus, Rule 34 is designed to be used as a pretrial discovery device. n8 This is also made clear by its inclusion within the section of the Federal Rules denominated as "Depositions and Discovery." n9

There is nothing in Rule 34 concerning its applicability once a judgment has been obtained. However, Rule 69 explicitly allows the use of the procedures set forth in the federal discovery rules in aid of enforcement of a judgment. n10 While a case is on appeal, limited discovery is permitted with court approval, including production of documents or things. n11 After litigation has concluded, discovery under Rule 34 is not permitted. Even in those rare circumstances in which the court might permit production or inspection after litigation has concluded, the provisions of Rule 34 will not necessarily be applied in the same manner as in the pretrial phase. n12

[c] Persons Required to Respond to Requests

Rule 34 procedure generally is limited to parties to the action. n13 Any party may serve a request "on any other party." Coparties may serve Rule 34 requests on each other, and a plaintiff or defendant may serve a request on a third-party defendant, and vice versa. n14

Discovery similar to the type permitted by Rule 34 is available from nonparties pursuant to court order under Rule 27. n15 When production of documents or things is sought from a nonparty, or a party wants to enter on the land of a nonparty, Rule 34 provides that the procedures of Rule 45 may be used. n16

In class action litigation, unnamed class members are not considered "parties" within the meaning of Rule 34, n17 so requests for production may not be served on or by individual class members under that rule; n18 however, production of documents may instead be ordered of representative members of the class pursuant to Rule 23. n19 on a proper showing of particularized need. n20

[3] Scope of Requests n*

[a] Discoverable Items

A party may make three types of requests under Rule 34 for items that are within the scope of discovery under Rule 26(b) and that are in the responding party's possession, custody or control:

1. A party may request the responding party to produce and permit the requesting party to inspect, copy, test, or sample any designated documents or electronically stored information that has been translated when necessary by the responding party into reasonably usable form. Items in this first category include writings, drawings, graphs, charts, photographs, sound recordings, images, and other data or data compilations stored in any medium from which information can be obtained. n1 "Electronically stored information" includes, but is not limited to, items such as: voice mail messages and files; backup voice mail files; e-mail messages and files; backup e-mail files; deleted e-mails, data files, program files, backup and archival tapes, temporary files, system history files, web site information stored in textual, graphical or audio format; web site log files, cache files, and other information recorded by electronic means. n2

2. A party may request the responding party to produce and permit the requesting party to inspect, copy, test, or sample any designated tangible things. n3 The definition of "tangible things," is very broad and could include virtually any type of physical object, under appropriate circumstances. n4

3. A party may request the responding party to permit entry on designated land or other property in the possession or control of the party on whom the request is served for the purpose of inspection and measuring, surveying, photographing, testing, or sampling the property or any designated object or operation on the land or property. n5

[b] Admissibility Not a Limitation

The request for production or entry is not limited to discovery of items that would be admissible at trial, because the request is governed by Rule 26(b), n6 which explicitly also allows discovery of information that appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n7 Because courts favor liberal discovery, the responding party has the burden to produce or make available all the items requested, unless it can show why particular items could not reasonably lead to admissible evidence. n8

[c] Accessibility to Information from Another Source

A responding party generally may not object to a request for production or entry on the grounds that the requesting party may already have some knowledge of or access to the matters requested. n9 However, Rule 34 discovery is subject to the restrictions expressed in Rule 26, which allow a court to limit discovery that it finds to be cumulative or duplicative, burdensome or expensive, or directed at information that the discovering party has already had an ample opportunity to obtain by discovery. n10 Furthermore, a court may refuse to require a party to produce documents that the requesting party already has within its control, n11 and may also refuse to order production of public records that are equally accessible to all parties. n12

[4] Timing of Request n*

[a] Generally After Discovery Conference

Absent leave of court or a stipulation, a Rule 34 request may not be served prior to the time specified in Rule 26(d), which generally prohibits a party from seeking any discovery prior to the conference of the parties required by Rule 26(f). n1 The timing of such a conference is affected by the scheduling provisions of Rule 16. n2 Rule 26(f) provides that, subject to court order, the parties' discovery planning conference must be held at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), n3 which in turn provides that the scheduling order must issue within 90 days after the appearance of a defendant and within 120 days after the complaint has been served on a defendant. n4

Thus, while the earliest time for a Rule 34 request is generally governed by the interaction of Rules 16, 26, and 34, thereafter the timing of such requests remains within the discretion of the parties, subject to the court's broad authority over the management and scheduling of discovery. The court may enter general orders affecting the extent and scheduling of discovery. n5 The court may also place specific limits on the frequency or extent of discovery based on factors such as burdensomeness, convenience, or expense. n6

[b] Request May Be Premature If Served Before Disclosure Due

Rule 26(a) contains a requirement providing for mandatory and automatic disclosure of specified information. In particular, in most types of cases, unless stipulated or directed by court order, a party must, even without a discovery request, provide to the other parties a copy of, or a description by category and location of, all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party and that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless solely for impeachment. n7 However, except in categories of proceedings exempted from initial mandatory disclosure, n8 as otherwise provided by the federal civil rules, or when authorized by court order or agreement of the parties, a party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have had the discovery conference required by Rule 26(f). n9 Thus, it has been held that attempts to anticipate mandatory disclosures by serving production or inspection requests seeking the same information prior to the time that the disclosures are due (which is 14 days after the discovery conference) are untimely and should be stricken. n10 However, this general prohibition against discovery requests until initial disclosures have been made does not prevent otherwise timely discovery pursuant to Rule 34 of independently discoverable documents or things not generated for purposes of mandatory disclosure, such as certain types of impeachment evidence. n11

[5] Request Must Be Specific n*

[a] Writing Required

A Rule 34 request for production or to permit entry on land must be in writing because it must be served on the other parties n1 and must be signed by an attorney of record or by an unrepresented party. n2 If the request is not signed, other parties have no duty to act on the unsigned request until it is signed, and the court must strike it unless a signature is promptly supplied after the omission is called to the attorney's or party's attention. n3 Thus, a court will refuse to compel production or entry if it finds that these formalities of Rule 34 are not satisfied. n4

[b] Request Must Be Stated With Particularity

A party must describe each item or category of items in the request with reasonable particularity. n5 The "reasonable particularity" standard does not have a precise definition, but the test is whether a reasonable person would know what documents or things are called for in the request. n6 Consequently, the more all-encompassing a request is, the more likely it likely it will be rejected on grounds of particularity. n7

Reasonable particularity is determined according to the facts and circumstances of each case. n8 The degree of specificity required may depend on the extent of the requesting party's knowledge of the documents sought, n9 and also the extent to which the proceedings have progressed at the time the request is made. n10

As noted above, a request for production under Rule 34 may identify the items to be inspected either by individual item or by category. n11 When a responding party is giving its response to a request for production of documents by category, the party must produce or object to the request by category. n12

[c] Specification of Time, Place, and Manner for Inspection

In addition to setting forth a description of the items sought, a Rule 34 request must specify a reasonable time, place, and manner for the inspection and related acts. n13 For example, the request may specify the documents must be produced at the offices of the requesting party or the responding party or at the offices of a party's attorney within the 30-day period allowed by Rule 34. n14 Other appropriate places could be at a party's place of business, or trade or manufacturing facilities. n15

[d] Specification of Format for Electronically Stored Information

A party requesting electronically stored information n16 has the option to specify that the opposition produce the information in a particular form or forms. n17 For example, the request may specify that the information produced should be in the form of a machine readable data compilation such as Excel spreadsheets, if the responding party stores or can retrieve such information in machine-readable format. n18 A party can be required to produce data in an electronic format even though it has already produced it in hard copy. However, the requesting party must keep in mind that some of the costs of production can be shifted to the requesting party if the burden is undue because, for example, sources are not reasonably accessible. n19

If a party does not specify in the request the form or forms for producing electronically stored information, unless ordered by the court or stipulated by the parties, a responding party must produce the information in a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable. n20 The Civil Rules encourage the parties to make agreements regarding electronic discovery, and specifically require that the parties discuss the form that production of electronically stored information should take. n21

[6] Response to Request n*

[a] Timing of Response

When a party is served with a request for production or entry pursuant to Rule 34, the party has 30 days from the time of service in which to file a written response, n1 subject to enlargement under Rule 6. n2 The court also has the option pursuant to Rule 34 to shorten or lengthen the 30-day time period for a response to a request for production, and the parties may agree in writing to a shorter or longer time, subject to Rule 29, governing stipulations. n3 Rule 29 requires court approval of any stipulation extending the time to respond to a Rule 34 request if the extension would interfere with a discovery cut-off date, a motion hearing, or trial. n4 If a shorter time has not been ordered by the court or agreed to between the parties but the requesting party has nevertheless specified a time for production that is less than the time allowed by the Rule for a response, the party may not move to compel discovery under Rule 37(a) until the time allowed by Rule 34 has expired. n5

[b] Permissible Responses

The party responding to a Rule 34 request must respond to each item or category of the request in one of two ways: the responding party must either state that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested by the item or category, n6 or state an objection to the item or category, including the reasons for the objection. n7 The responding party may not simply refuse to answer; it must either state in writing whether it will comply or object. A party that neither sends its written response or objects to each item or category is subject to sanctions. n8 Also, the requesting party may move for an order to compel production when the party who must respond fails to respond or object, or if the response is insufficient in any way. n9

[c] Objections Must Be Specific

If a party responding to a Rule 34 request objects to a particular item or category of the request, the reason for the objection must be stated. n10 If the party objects to the production of an item or category in part rather than in its entirety, the objection must specify the part to which the objection pertains. In that case, the responding party must permit inspection and related activities of the unobjectionable portions of the request. n11 If a party that has received a request fails to properly object to a request, the grounds for that objection may be waived. n12

A general claim of privilege is an inadequate response to a request. n13 In addition, the responding party usually may not object to assert the rights of third parties to protect their privileged, proprietary, or confidential information. n14

[d] Objection to Request for Production of Electronically Stored Information

If making a response to a request for production of electronically stored information, the party may state an objection to a requested form for producing electronically stored information. If the responding party objects to a requested form, or if no form was specified in the request, the party must state the form or forms it intends to use. n15 Objections to electronically stored information also may be made on the same grounds as other requests. n16 Additionally, if requested to produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form, the responding party may object to that request on that ground. n17

[e] Waiver of Objections

If a responding party fails to make a proper objection in writing within the 30-day time limit, including a statement of the reasons for the objections, n18 the court may hold that the party has waived the objections that have not been adequately stated. n19 However, if objections have been stated, but the objections do not fully comply with the rule, the court may allow the responding party to make a more complete response. n20

[f] Unintentional Production of Protected Items

If a party makes an inadvertent production of a privileged or work product protected item during the course of Rule 34 discovery, the court may find that the party has waived the privilege or protection by that disclosure. n21 This issue typically arises in complex cases involving numerous items of production and especially in cases of discovery of an extensive amount of electronically stored information. n22 Most courts determine whether an unintended disclosure constitutes a waiver based on a balancing of several factors, such as the following: n23

1. The reasonableness of the efforts to avoid disclosure;

2. The delay in correcting the error;

3. The scope and burden of discovery;

4. The extent of disclosure;

5. Fairness; and

6. The time constraints related to the production of the information.

However, the federal rules specify a procedure to follow to maintain the status quo in cases of inadvertent disclosure of items until the issue of waiver is submitted to and determined by the court. n24 Additionally new Federal Evidence Rule 502 provides for protection for attorney client material and work product material contained in an inadvertent disclosures made in federal court. n25 Such material is not waived, provided that the disclosing party had reasonably attempted to prevent the disclosure, and reasonably attempted to correct the mistaken disclosure. n26

[g] Availability of Protective Order to Avoid Production

A party that has received a Rule 34 discovery request may move for a protective order under Rule 26(c) when the request is improper. n27 A motion for a protective order may be filed in the district where the action is pending. n28 However, as a practical matter, a responding party will typically elect instead simply to make an objection, which will place the burden on the requesting party to make a motion to compel production or inspection under Rule 37(a). n29

The responding party usually may not seek a protective order asserting the rights of third parties to protect their privileged, proprietary, or confidential information. Any affected third party must intervene directly to seek a protective order to protect that information on its own behalf. n30

[7] Manner of Production, Inspection, or Entry n*

[a] Production, Inspection, or Entry Not Restricted to Territorial Jurisdiction of Court

Rule 34 permits a party to request the production, inspection, or related activities of any items within the possession, custody, or control of another party. n1 The rule does not require that the requested materials be within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, because a court having jurisdiction over the parties may enforce an order for production regardless of the physical location of the items. n2

If a party seeks to discover items located outside the United States from a foreign party over whom the court has personal jurisdiction, the party seeking production may employ Rule 34 without first resorting to the Hague Convention on the Taking of Evidence Abroad, n3 although the Hague Convention procedures are also available if they will facilitate discovery. n4

[b] Possession, Custody, or Control of Party

Rule 34 applies only to documents, electronically stored information, tangible things, or designated land or other property that are within the possession, custody, or control of a party. The terms "possession," "custody," or "control" are alternatives, and thus only one of these requirements need be met. n5 The converse of this rule is also true: a party may not be compelled to produce items or permit inspection of items that are not within its possession, its custody, or its control. n6 An item that does not exist is obviously not within the possession, custody, or control of a party. n7

Legal restrictions that may limit a party's ability to obtain certain items at a particular time or to disclose them to others will not necessarily preclude a finding that the party has possession, custody, or control over those items. n8 Therefore, legal ownership of the requested items or things is not determinative, nor is actual possession necessary if the party has control of the items. n9 However, control does include the legal right to obtain the items requested on demand. n10 Furthermore, control by a party over the person or entity in possession of the documents is sufficient to require that the party produce them. n11

The determination of whether a party is in possession or control of documents or other materials involves consideration of a several factors, including: the use or purpose to which the materials were employed; whether the materials were acquired or maintained with the party's assets; whether the party determined the materials' use, location, possession, or access; who actually had access to and use of the materials; the extent to which the materials serve the party's interests; and any formal or informal evidence of a transfer of ownership or title. n12 The burden of establishing control over the items sought is on the party seeking production. n13 However, if the requesting party demonstrates that its adversary has a legal right to obtain the requested items, the burden shifts to the adversary to show why it lacks control. n14

[c] Time, Place, and Manner of Production and Related Activities

A requesting party must specify a reasonable time, place, and manner for inspection. n15 Because such a request must be "reasonable," Rule 34(b)(1)(B) does not require a responding party to produce the documents at whatever location the requestor specifies. Therefore, a responding party may object to the location where requestor seeks to have the documents produced, and such an objection is controlled as other objections under Rule 34. n16 The time for inspection specified in the request must take into account the 30-day time limit allowed in the rule for service of a response. n17 When the volume of responsive items is large, the request or the parties' agreement may provide for continuing access to the items over a period of time for purposes of inspection. n18

Rule 34 provides that the party producing items ordinarily must produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or must organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the request. n19 If a request does not specify the form or forms for producing electronically stored information, a responding party must produce the information in a form or forms in which the party ordinarily maintains the information or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable. n20

After the requesting party makes its specification regarding the timing, location, and manner of production, and the responding party makes its response, the parties may discuss any differences, which normally can be resolved without the necessity of filing a motion, because these provisions may be altered by the parties' agreement. n21 However, the time, location, and manner of inspection may be the subject of dispute because of the costs and burdens that may have to be borne by the respective parties. The fact that production of items would be burdensome and expensive and would hamper the party's business operations is generally not a reason for refusing to order production of relevant items. n22

When there is a dispute, the court will ultimately decide the time, place, and manner of the production and inspection, with the party responsible for the dispute subject to sanctions, including the payment of expenses for the dispute. n23

[d] Costs of Production

The party making production of items under Rule 34 generally does not have to furnish copies or pay the expense of making copies for the requesting party. n24 However, the responding party is generally required to bear the cost of making documents or electronically stored information available in the form they are kept in the usual course of business or, if appropriate, organizing and labeling them to correspond to the categories in the request, or in a reasonably usable form. n25

When a party requests the production of electronically stored information that the responding party has determined to be overly burdensome to produce, the requesting party must show good cause to overcome the problems caused in producing it. n26 Even though there is a presumption that a responding party must bear the costs of complying with a discovery request, n27 the courts have developed a seven-part test for electronic discovery to determine whether it is appropriate to shift discovery related costs to the requesting party in cases where the burden of producing the documents is high. The nonexclusive relevant considerations in the test include: (1) the extent to which the request is specifically tailored to discover relevant information; (2) the availability of such information from other sources; (3) the total cost of production, compared to the amount in controversy; (4) the total cost of production, compared to the resources available to each party; (5) the relative ability of each party to control costs and its incentive to do so; (6) the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation; and (7) the relative benefits to the parties of obtaining the information. n28

If an item that must be produced is in a foreign language and no English version exists, the producing party is not required to translate the item into English at its own expense. n29 However, if the requesting party translates an item for its own use, it may seek to recover its translation expenses if it prevails in the litigation. n30

[e] Testing or Sampling of Items Produced

Rule 34 now authorizes a party to request testing or sampling of documents, electronically stored information, tangible things, or land or other property which are within the scope of permissible discovery under Rule 26(b). n31 Furthermore, a party may request production of items for the purposes of destructive testing or sampling of the items. If the opposition objects to production for purposes of destructive testing or sampling, the decision whether to allow such tests rests within the sound discretion of the trial court, based on the circumstances of each case. In determining whether to permit destructive testing or sampling, the court uses a balancing test, considering the following factors: (1) whether the proposed testing is reasonable, necessary, and relevant to proving the requesting party's case; (2) whether the responding party's ability to present evidence at trial will be hindered, or whether the responding party will be prejudiced in some other way; (3) whether there are any less prejudicial alternative methods of obtaining the evidence sought; and (4) whether there are adequate safeguards to minimize prejudice to the responding party, particularly the responding party's ability to present evidence at trial. n32 Destructive testing or sampling may be denied if the entire item of evidence will be destroyed by the tests or if sufficient justification for this type of testing or sampling is not demonstrated. n33

[f] Entry on Premises

A party may request that the other party permit entry on designated land or other property for the purpose of inspecting, measuring, surveying, photographing, testing, or sampling the property or any object or operation located on the property. n34 The property must be within the possession or control of a party to the litigation in order for access to be obtained under Rule 34(a). n35 As with a request for the production of other tangible things under Rule 34(a)(1), the scope of a request to enter on property is limited only by the broad scope of examination permitted by Rule 26(b). n36 Thus, the results of the inspection need not be admissible at trial in order to warrant discovery but need only be reasonably calculated to lead to admissible evidence. n37 As is the case with the inspection of documents and other materials, a court may specify conditions or limitations that control the entry onto property and any related activities to safeguard against unnecessary disruptions and to protect against unwarranted disclosures. n38 For example, the court may order the inspecting party to pay compensation if any damage occurs during the course of the inspection or testing. n39

When it enters on land under Rule 34(a)(2), the requesting party may perform various activities in connection with entry onto property, including inspecting, measuring, surveying, photographing, testing, or sampling. However, these activities must be performed by the requesting party, and the rule does not authorize a court to order that the responding party actually conduct tests for the requesting party. n40 Whether a requesting party may interview employees or other agents of the party in control of the premises depends on the circumstances of the case, using a need versus burden balancing test. n41

[8] Enforcement By Court n*

[a] Use of Motion to Compel by Requesting Party

A responding party has an obligation to produce items or permit the requesting party to enter its land for all requests within the permissible scope of discovery pursuant to Rule 26(b). n1 If a party served with a Rule 34 request fails to respond to the request or fails to permit inspection, the remedies available to the requesting party are governed by Rule 37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which include payment of expenses, attorney's fees, and restricting evidence on particular issues. n2 Therefore, the requesting party should move for an order under Rule 37(a) with respect to any failure to produce or permit inspection. n3

Rule 34 discovery normally operates without the necessity for intervention by the court. n4 Therefore, there is a requirement that a party may not move for court enforcement until the party certifies that it has attempted in good faith to resolve the matter without court action. n5 It should also be noted that an order compelling production or inspection is necessary only if the party from whom discovery is requested fails to respond, objects to the request, fails to permit discovery, or fails to completely comply with a proper request. n6

[b] Sanctions for Noncompliance With Obligation to Produce or Allow Inspection

The sanction provisions of Rule 37 are applicable to several types of situations involving Rule 34 requests. If the court decides in favor of the requesting party and enters an order compelling discovery under Rule 37(a), the court may order expenses and attorney's fees be paid by the responding party. n7 The court may also order sanctions under Rule 37(b) if the order is not obeyed, n8 and may order sanctions under Rule 37(d) if a responding party has failed to serve any written response to a request for inspection submitted under Rule 34. n9 Finally, if a party refuses to obey a court order to produce or permit inspection, the court may issue further orders, such as the following:

1. Directing that the matters embraced in the order or other designated facts be taken as established for purposes of the action; n10

2. Prohibiting the disobedient party from supporting or opposing designated claims or defenses, or from introducing designated matters in evidence; n11

3. Striking pleadings in whole or in part; n12

4. Dismissing the action or proceeding in whole or in part; n13 or

5. Rendering a default judgment against the disobedient party. n14

[c] Sanctions for Destruction of Potential Discovery Items

The destruction of evidence is referred to as "spoliation." Thus, spoliation is the destruction or the significant and meaningful alteration of a document or instrument. Spoliation occurs when evidence relevant to prospective civil litigation is destroyed, adversely affecting the ability of a litigant to prove his or her claim. n15 Spoliation of evidence includes the improper destruction of either traditional or electronic documents. n16 In the context of requests for production, there are two sources of authority for a district court to impose sanctions on a party who has despoiled evidence: (1) the inherent power of federal courts to levy sanctions in response to abusive litigation practices, and (2) the availability of sanctions under Rule 37(b)(2)(C) against a party who fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery. n17

If an item that is subject to a Rule 34 request for production is destroyed while in the possession, custody, or control of a party, sanctions may generally be imposed on that party. However, there are two exceptions. First, a party may not be sanctioned if the extent of destruction is within the scope of permissible testing or sampling. n18 Second, a court may not impose sanctions on a party for failing to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system, unless there are exceptional circumstances. n19 This provision applies to information lost due to the routine operation of an information system only if the operation was in good faith. Good faith in the routine operation of an information system may require a party to intervene to modify or suspend certain features of the routine operation to prevent the loss of information, when that information is subject to a preservation obligation. n20 If destruction of items other than electronically stored information occurs in the ordinary course pursuant to a regular document retention policy, that may be considered as a factor against the imposition of sanctions, but it does not provide a defense if the party had notice that the documents were relevant to a dispute. n21

The court has a number of options in choice of sanction for spoliation. The most drastic option, which is reserved for flagrant violations, is the entry of a dismissal, default, or other conclusive judgment against the party who destroyed the evidence. n22 Less drastic sanctions include deeming certain facts to be admitted, allowing the factfinder to draw an inference adverse to the offending party with regard to the subject matter of the destroyed evidence, or precluding the violating party from presenting any proof on that subject. n23 The court may also assess costs incurred in seeking the information from alternative sources, or attorney's fees for litigating the destruction issue. n24

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b) (permissible scope of discovery).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1)(A); see Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) ("electronically stored information" includes, but is not limited to, items such as data files, program files, backup and archival disks and tapes, and e-mail messages).

(n4)Footnote 3. *Flying J, Inc. v. Pilot Travel Ctrs. LLC, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55283, at 5 (D. Utah June 25, 2009) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(2)(A).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(c).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(ii); see Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) ("electronically stored information" includes, but is not limited to, items such as data files, program files, backup and archival disks and tapes, and e mail messages); *Flying J, Inc. v. Pilot Travel Ctrs. LLC, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55283, at 5 (D. Utah June 25, 2009) (electronic information produced should be in form of machine readable data compilation such as Excel spreadsheets, if producing party stores or can retrieve such information in machine-readable format).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(iii).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(iv).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a), Committee Note to 2007 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n14)Footnote 13. Hall v. Sullivan, 231 F.R.D. 468, 475 (D. Md. 2006) ; see Wills v. Amerada Hess Corp., 379 F.3d 32, 41 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n16)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i)-(iii); see also Dusa Pharms., Inc. v. New Eng. Compounding Pharm., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 153, 154 (D. Mass. 2005) .

(n17)Footnote 16. In re Landry-Bell, 232 F.R.D. 266, 267 (W.D. La. 2005) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3), (b)(3).

(n19)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2).

(n20)Footnote 19. Contardo v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 119 F.R.D. 622, 624 (D. Mass. 1988) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n22)Footnote 21. Thomas v. Pacificorp, 324 F.3d 1176, 1179 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n23)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a) (request may be served by one party on any other party).

(n24)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1), (c).

(n25)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(5) (subpoena under Rule 45(a)(1)(C) listed as discovery method); see United States ex rel. Pogue v. Diabetes Treatment Ctrs. of Am., Inc., 444 F.3d 462, 468-469 (6th Cir. 2006) .

(n26)Footnote 25. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2).

(n27)Footnote 26. See Goldy v. Beal, 91 F.R.D. 451, 456 (M.D. Pa. 1981) ; *see also Colon v. Cole Bros. Circus, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1403, at 4 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (discussing differences between discovery and trial subpoenas).

(n28)Footnote 27. Hasbro, Inc. v. Serafino, 168 F.R.D. 99, 100 (D. Mass. 1996) .

(n29)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n30)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n31)Footnote 2. See Williams v. IRS, 345 F. Supp. 591, 594 (D. Del. 1972) , aff'd on other grounds, 479 F.2d 317 (3d Cir. 1973) .

(n32)Footnote 3. See United States ex rel. Lee Kum Hoy v. Shaughnessy, 16 F.R.D. 558, 559 (S.D.N.Y. 1955) .

(n33)Footnote 4. Trabon Eng'g Corp. v. Eaton Mfg. Co., 37 F.R.D. 51, 55 (N.D. Ohio 1964) .

(n34)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a); see United States ex rel. Camillo v. Ancilla Sys., 233 F.R.D. 520, 522 (S.D. Ill. 2006) .

(n35)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n36)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3).

(n37)Footnote 8. Karak v. Bursaw Oil Corp., 288 F.3d 15, 21 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n38)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26-37; see also United States ex rel. Free v. Peters, 826 F. Supp. 1153, 1154 (N.D. Ill. 1993) .

(n39)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 69(a)(2).

(n40)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b)(3).

(n41)Footnote 12. See Goldy v. Beal, 91 F.R.D. 451, 456 (M.D. Pa. 1981) .

(n42)Footnote 13. See In re Greenwood Air Crash, 161 F.R.D. 387, 394-398 (S.D. Ind. 1995) .

(n43)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a) (request may be served by one party on another party); Miner v. Punch, 838 F.2d 1407, 1409 (5th Cir. 1988) (provisions of Fed. R. Civ. P. 34 apply only to parties of pending litigation, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n44)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a), (b).

(n45)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(c); American Maplan Corp. v. Heilmayr, 203 F.R.D. 499, 502 (D. Kan. 2001) (Rule 45 specifically confers jurisdiction only on court issuing subpoena).

(n46)Footnote 17. *Cooper v. Pac. Life Ins. Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16465, at 6 (S.D. Ga. 2005) .

(n47)Footnote 18. See Devlin v. Scardelletti, 536 U.S. 1, 15-16, 122 S. Ct. 2005, 153 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002) .

(n48)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(C).

(n49)Footnote 20. In re Carbon Dioxide Indus. Antitrust Litig., 155 F.R.D. 209, 212 (M.D. Fla. 1993) .

(n50)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.12 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n51)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1)(A).

(n52)Footnote 2. Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n53)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1)(B).

(n54)Footnote 4. Alford v. Northeast Ins. Co., 102 F.R.D. 99, 101 (N.D. Fla. 1984) (production of fingerprints, citing Moore's Federal Practice); see ACLU v. United States DOJ, 265 F. Supp. 2d 20, 22-24 (D.D.C. 2004) (production of physical items).

(n55)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(2).

(n56)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n57)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n58)Footnote 8. In re Sulfuric Acid Antitrust Litigation, 231 F.R.D. 331, 337 (N.D. Ill. 2005) .

(n59)Footnote 9. Italia di Navigazione, S.Pp.A. v. M.V. Hermes I, 564 F. Supp. 492, 495 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) , aff'd on other grounds, 724 F.2d 21 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n60)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n61)Footnote 11. Bartley v. Isuzu Motors, Ltd., 158 F.R.D. 165, 167 (D. Colo. 1994) ; see Hagemeyer N. Am., Inc. v. Gateway Data Scis. Corp., 222 F.R.D. 594, 598-599 (E.D. Wis. 2006) .

(n62)Footnote 12. Dushkin Publ'g Group, Inc. v. Kinko's Serv. Corp., 136 F.R.D. 334, 335 (D.D.C. 1991) ; see Snowden v. Connaught Lab., Inc., 137 F.R.D. 325, 333 (D. Kan. 1991) (court may order production when it would be excessively burdensome, for financial or other reasons, for requesting party to obtain items).

(n63)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n64)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1).

(n65)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16.

(n66)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1).

(n67)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(2).

(n68)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(2), (c)(2)(F); see, e.g., Thomas v. Pacificorp, 324 F.3d 1176, 1179 (10th Cir. 2003) (court's "completion of discovery" deadline required that request for production be served at least 30 days prior to deadline because Rule 34(b) allows parties 30 days to respond to requests for production).

(n69)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i)-(iii).

(n70)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(i)-(iv).

(n71)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(B).

(n72)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1)(f).

(n73)Footnote 10. *Farran v. Johnston Equip., Inc., 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6649, at *10-11 (E.D. Pa. May 11, 1995) (interrogatory requesting exhibit list in advance of time set by pretrial order or Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3) is premature (citing Moore's Federal Practice)).

(n74)Footnote 11. See Corrigan v. Methodist Hosp., 158 F.R.D. 54, 58 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n75)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n76)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n77)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n78)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n79)Footnote 4. See Roberts v. Americable Int'l, Inc., 883 F. Supp. 499, 501 n.2 (E.D. Cal. 1995) .

(n80)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(A).

(n81)Footnote 6. In re Folding Carton Antitrust Litig., 76 F.R.D. 420, 424 (N.D. Ill. 1977) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n82)Footnote 7. Regan Touhy v. Walgreen Co., 526 F.3d 641, 650 (10th Cir. 2008) (requests are especially disfavored if they request "all documents relating or referring to" broad type of claim).

(n83)Footnote 8. Westhemeco Ltd. v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 82 F.R.D. 702, 709 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) .

(n84)Footnote 9. See Westhemco Ltd. v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 82 F.R.D. 702, 709 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) .

(n85)Footnote 10. See Taylor v. Florida Atl. Univ., 132 F.R.D. 304, 305 (S.D. Fla. 1990) , aff'd without opinion, 976 F.2d 743 (11th Cir. 1992) (plaintiff set forth categories of documents with as much reasonable particularity as can be expected at this stage of discovery).

(n86)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(A).

(n87)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B); [7], below.

(n88)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(B).

(n89)Footnote 14. Resolution Trust Corp. v. North Bridge Assocs., 22 F.3d 1198, 1201 (1st Cir. 1994) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n90)Footnote 15. See Holliday v. Extex, 237 F.R.D. 425, 427 (D. Haw. 2006) .

(n91)Footnote 16. See Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) ("electronically stored information" includes, but is not limited to, items such as data files, program files, backup and archival disks and tapes, and e-mail messages).

(n92)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(C).

(n93)Footnote 18. *Flying J, Inc. v. Pilot Travel Ctrs. LLC, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55283, at 5 (D. Utah June 25, 2009) .

(n94)Footnote 19. Covad Communs. Co. v. Revonet, Inc., 254 F.R.D. 147, 150 (D.D.C. 2008) .

(n95)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E)(ii).

(n96)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(C); see ThiCovad Communs. Co. v. Revonet, Inc., 254 F.R.D. 147, 149 (D.D.C. 2008) .

(n97)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.13 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n98)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n99)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1).

(n100)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n101)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b).

(n102)Footnote 5. See GFI Computer Indus., Inc. v. Fry, 476 F.2d 1, 3-4 (5th Cir. 1973) .

(n103)Footnote 6. See [7], below.

(n104)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B).

(n105)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii).

(n106)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(iv).

(n107)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B).

(n108)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(C).

(n109)Footnote 12. Dine v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 255 F.R.D. 534, 536 (C.D. Cal. 2009) ; see [e], below.

(n110)Footnote 13. See Obiajulu v. City of Rochester, 166 F.R.D. 293, 295 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n111)Footnote 14. Bush Devel. Corp. v. Harbour Place Assocs., 632 F. Supp. 1359, 1364 (E.D. Va. 1986) .

(n112)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(D).

(n113)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(B),(C).

(n114)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E)(iii).

(n115)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A)-(D).

(n116)Footnote 19. Dine v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 255 F.R.D. 534, 536 (C.D. Cal. 2009) ; Eureka Fin. Corp. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 136 F.R.D. 179, 182-185 (E.D. Cal. 1991) (blanket objection constituted waiver of attorney client privilege and work product protection).

(n117)Footnote 20. Harris v. United States, 121 F.R.D. 652, 655 (W.D.N.C. 1988) ; see Cunningham v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins., 845 F. Supp. 1403, 1409 (S.D. Cal. 1994) (failure to specifically identify documents on privilege log does not automatically waive privilege for omitted documents).

(n118)Footnote 21. Victor Stanley, Inc. v. Creative Pipe, Inc., 250 F.R.D. 251, 254 (D. Md. 2008) .

(n119)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n120)Footnote 23. Victor Stanley, Inc. v. Creative Pipe, Inc., 250 F.R.D. 251, 254 (D. Md. 2008) .

(n121)Footnote 24. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(B); see § 15.03[7][j].

(n122)Footnote 25. See Fed. R. Evid. 502.

(n123)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Evid. 502(b); see § 15.03[8].

(n124)Footnote 27. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1); see, e.g., Obiajulu v. City of Rochester, 166 F.R.D. 293, 297 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) (protective order granted requiring execution of confidentiality order before production of documents).

(n125)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n126)Footnote 29. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(iv); Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b), Committee Note to 2007 Amendments.

(n127)Footnote 30. Blum v. Schlegel, 150 F.R.D. 38, 41-42 (W.D.N.Y. 1993) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 24.

(n128)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.14-34.15 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n129)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1), (2).

(n130)Footnote 2. See Societe Nationale Industrielle Aerospatiale v. United States Dist. Court, 482 U.S. 522, 539-540, 107 S. Ct. 2542, 96 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1987) .

(n131)Footnote 3. See Hague Convention on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters, 23 U.S.T. 2555, 847 U.N.T.S. 231 (1970), 28 U.S.C.S. § 1781, note.

(n132)Footnote 4. See Societe Nationale Industrielle Aerospatiale v. United States Dist. Court, 482 U.S. 522, 539-541, 107 S. Ct. 2542, 96 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1987) .

(n133)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1), (2).

(n134)Footnote 6. See Burton Mechanical Contractors, Inc. v. Foreman, 148 F.R.D. 230, 236 (N.D. Ind. 1992) (motion to compel denied because documents not shown to be in defendant's possession, custody, or control, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n135)Footnote 7. See Gray v. Faulkner, 148 F.R.D. 220, 223-224 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n136)Footnote 8. See Societe Internationale Pour Participations Industrielles et Commerciales, S.A. v. Rogers, 357 U.S. 197, 204-206, 78 S. Ct. 1087, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1255 (1958) .

(n137)Footnote 9. Anderson v. Cryovac, Inc., 862 F.2d 910, 928-929 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n138)Footnote 10. Green v. Fulton, 157 F.R.D. 136, 142 (D. Me. 1994) .

(n139)Footnote 11. See Gray v. Faulkner, 148 F.R.D. 220, 223 (N.D. Ind. 1992)

(n140)Footnote 12. See McBryar v. U.A.W., 160 F.R.D. 691, 697 (S.D. Ind. 1993) .

(n141)Footnote 13. Burton Mechanical Contractors, Inc. v. Foreman, 148 F.R.D. 230, 236 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n142)Footnote 14. Scott v. Arex, Inc., 124 F.R.D. 39, 42 (D. Conn. 1989) .

(n143)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(1)(B).

(n144)Footnote 16. *Petro v. Lighting Serv., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55096, at 4 (S.D. Ohio June 29, 2009) .

(n145)Footnote 17. See Manning v. Trustees of Tufts College, 613 F.2d 1200, 1204 (1st Cir. 1980) .

(n146)Footnote 18. See Board of Educ. of Evanston v. Admiral Heating & Ventilating, Inc., 104 F.R.D. 23, 35-36 (N.D. Ill. 1984) .

(n147)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E)(i).

(n148)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E)(ii); see Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n149)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E).

(n150)Footnote 22. See Technograph, Inc. v. Texas Instruments, Inc., 43 F.R.D. 416, 419 (S.D.N.Y. 1967) .

(n151)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(iv), (a)(5).

(n152)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1)(2) (activities related to production or inspection to be performed by requesting party); Monarch Ins. Co. v. Spach, 281 F.2d 401, 413 n.30 (5th Cir. 1960) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n153)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(E); see In re Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 687 F.2d 501, 508-509 (1st Cir. 1982) (if responding party's record-keeping system is such that items can only be read or comprehended by use of special procedures, responding party may be required to bear expense associated with producing items for inspection).

(n154)Footnote 26. Zubulake v. UBS Warburg LLC, 217 F.R.D. 309, 316 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n155)Footnote 27. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 358, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n156)Footnote 28. Quinby v. WestLB AG, 245 F.R.D. 94, 103-104 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n157)Footnote 29. In re Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 687 F.2d 501, 505-509 (1st Cir. 1982) .

(n158)Footnote 30. In re Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 687 F.2d 501, 506 (1st Cir. 1982) .

(n159)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(1), (2).

(n160)Footnote 32. Mirchandani v. Home Depot, U.S.A., Inc., 235 F.R.D. 611, 614 (D. Md. 2006) .

(n161)Footnote 33. In re Newman, 782 F.2d 971, 974 (Fed. Cir. 1986) .

(n162)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(2).

(n163)Footnote 35. Santa Fe Int'l Corp. v. Potashnick, 83 F.R.D. 299, 300-301 (E.D. La. 1979) .

(n164)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a)(2); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b); Macort v. Goodwill Indus.-Manasota, Inc., 220 F.R.D. 377, 379 (M.D. Fla. 2003) (denying request as overbroad when plaintiff requested unlimited access to defendant's business property for purposes of inspection).

(n165)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n166)Footnote 38. See Dusa Pharms., Inc. v. New Eng. Compounding Pharm., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 153, 154 (D. Mass. 2005) (access denied to areas where inspection would be intrusive; defendant offered plaintiffs access to its premises under reasonable terms).

(n167)Footnote 39. See Martin v. Reynolds Metals Corp., 297 F.2d 49, 57 (9th Cir. 1961) .

(n168)Footnote 40. See Sladen v. Girltown, Inc., 425 F.2d 24, 25 (7th Cir. 1970) .

(n169)Footnote 41. Belcher v. Bassett Furniture Indus., Inc., 588 F.2d 904, 907-908 (4th Cir. 1978) .

(n170)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.16 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n171)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a).

(n172)Footnote 2. See [b], below.

(n173)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1), 37(a)(3)(B)(iv); see Tenkku v. Normandy Bank, 348 F.3d 737, 743 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n174)Footnote 4. Nash v. City of Oakwood, 90 F.R.D. 633, 637 (S.D. Ohio 1981) .

(n175)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1), (d)(1)(B).

(n176)Footnote 6. See Hilgenberg v. Neth, 93 F.R.D. 325, 326 (E.D. Tenn. 1981) (refusing to consider motion to produce until movant has first requested documents and opponent has refused to respond).

(n177)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(C).

(n178)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2).

(n179)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii).

(n180)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(i).

(n181)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(ii).

(n182)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(iii).

(n183)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(v).

(n184)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(vi).

(n185)Footnote 15. See Silvestri v. General Motors Corp., 271 F.3d 583, 590 (4th Cir. 2001) ; Napier v. Cinemark USA, Inc., 635 F. Supp. 2d 1248, 1252 (N.D. Okla. 2009) (noting that spoliation is grounds for discovery sanctions, and in some jurisdictions the basis of independent claim in tort).

(n186)Footnote 16. Buckley v. Mukasey, 538 F.3d 306, 322 (4th Cir. 2008) .

(n187)Footnote 17. Leon v. IDX Sys. Corp., 464 F.3d 951, 958 (9th Cir. 2006) .

(n188)Footnote 18. See [7][e], above.

(n189)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e).

(n190)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n191)Footnote 21. See Lewy v. Remington Arms Co., 836 F.2d 1104, 1111-1112 (8th Cir. 1988) .

(n192)Footnote 22. See Leon v. IDX Sys. Corp., 464 F.3d 951, 958 (9th Cir. 2006) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(v), (vi); see also Maynard v. Nygren, 332 F.3d 462, 467-468 (7th Cir. 2003) (although spoliation permits ultimate sanction of dismissal, it does not require it; dismissal for spoliation under Rule 37 requires a finding of willfulness, bad faith or fault, and an explanation why lesser sanctions would not be appropriate).

(n193)Footnote 23. See 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(iii).

(n194)Footnote 24. Turner v. Hudson Transit Lines, Inc., 142 F.R.D. 68, 78 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.27

§ 15.27 Physical and Mental Examinations of Persons

[1] Requirements for Order of Physical and Mental Examination n*

[a] Party May Make Request for Examination in Any Civil Action

Whenever the mental or physical condition, including blood group, of a party or of a person in a party's custody or legal control is in controversy, the court, on a motion for good cause shown, may order the party to submit to a physical or mental examination by a suitably licensed or certified examiner or to produce the person in the party's control for examination. n1

Although Rule 35 is most often invoked in personal injury actions where the plaintiff's mental or physical condition is obviously in controversy, the rule is available in any civil action, for example, in ERISA cases, n2 sexual harassment claims, n3 and employment discrimination claims. n4

[b] Required Showing of Controversy Involving Mental or Physical Condition

A court may order a mental or physical examination only when the mental or physical condition of the party or person in the party's custody is "in controversy." The Supreme Court has held that while Rules 26, 33, and 34 provide for discovery of material relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action, the Rule 35 requirement that the condition of the person to be examined be "in controversy" is a much stricter requirement. This higher threshold may not be met by mere conclusory allegations of the pleadings, or by a simple showing of relevance to the case. Instead, the moving party must make an affirmative showing that each condition as to which the examination is sought is genuinely in issue regarding a claim or defense in the action, and that good cause exists for ordering each particular examination. n5

This rule does not mean that the moving party must prove its case on the merits or that an evidentiary hearing is required in all cases. Rather, it means that the moving party has the burden of producing sufficient information for the trial court to make an informed decision. The Court recognized that there are certain cases, such as personal injury negligence cases, in which both the "in controversy" and "good cause" requirements are satisfied on the basis of the pleadings alone, and that this applies as much to defendants who base their defenses on their physical or mental condition, such as insanity, as it does to plaintiffs. n6

In applying the Schlagenhauf rule, district courts have emphasized the Supreme Court's guidance that reliance on conclusory allegations regarding mental condition in the pleadings or a showing of mere relevance to the case is insufficient. If the plaintiff has directly placed an ongoing mental illness to establish damages in issue, for example, to prove damages, the mental health is "in controversy" and provides defendant with "good cause" to request a mental examination. n7 One important factor is whether the plaintiff makes use of an expert witness to support the emotional distress claim. If the plaintiff does not intend to support a claim for emotional distress with expert testimony on that subject, the courts most likely will deny a motion for a mental examination. On the other hand, when the plaintiff retains an expert witness specifically to testify regarding the extent of the plaintiff's emotional injuries, the motion generally will be granted. n8 The court may also find that the plaintiff's mental condition is in controversy if the plaintiff has sought professional treatment for the alleged emotional injuries. n9

[c] Good Cause for Examination

In addition to proving that the mental or physical condition of the person to be examined is in controversy, the moving party under Rule 35 must show "good cause" for ordering the examination. n10 Factors used to determine whether good cause is established include relevance, necessity, n11 and the ability of the movant to obtain the desired information by other means. n12 Courts have used this language to find that good cause for ordering an examination may be lacking if the party's mental or physical condition can be established by referring to a prior examination or other documentary evidence. n13 On the other hand, if the party to be examined has alleged an ongoing injury or illness, a prior examination probably will not provide an adequate basis for evaluating the party's current condition. n14 Another primary factor in the "good cause" requirement is the scope of the proposed examination. In making its determination, the court should consider whether the type and extent of the examination is within that necessary to determine the issues in controversy, and may limit the examination accordingly. n15

[d] Court Has Broad Discretion to Enter Order

Even if a party establishes good cause for ordering the examination, the decision whether to order a mental or physical examination under Rule 35 is still within the sound discretion of the court. After good cause is shown, the court must still balance the right of the party to be examined to avoid personal invasion against the moving party's right to a fair trial. n16

For example, courts have exercised their discretion in the following circumstances:

1. To refuse to order the examination if it would be painful or dangerous to the party to be examined. If an examination is painful or risky, the court will require a substantial showing of its necessity. n17 Under a burden-shifting approach, the party to be examined must first show that the proposed test is prima facie painful or dangerous. Once this burden is satisfied, the burden shifts to the party seeking the examination to demonstrate the significant necessity for the examination and its safety. n18

2. To consider the scientific validity and reliability of the requested examination method, n19 including whether the scientific technique has been tested, and whether the technique has been subjected to peer review and publication. n20

3. To specify terms and conditions for the examination. n21

4. To issue an order protecting the person or party requested to be examined from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. n22

[e] Order Must Specify Parameters of Examination

When a court determines that there is good cause for the examination and grants the motion, the order must specify the time, place, manner, conditions, and scope of the examination, n23 as well as the person or persons who will perform it. n24 The court must order that a physical or mental examination be performed only by a suitably licensed or certified examiner. n25

[2] Procedural Considerations n*

[a] Request Made By Motion

A party that wants to compel an examination under Rule 35 must proceed by a motion filed within the time period permitted for discovery. n1 The requesting party must follow the general rules applicable to timing n2 and format of motions n3 and must provide notice to all parties and the person to be examined. n4 In addition, the motion must be specific as to the time, place, manner, conditions, and scope of the examination, and the person or persons by whom the examination is to be made. n5 However, in cases when there is not question that mental or physical condition is at issue, the parties have the option to forego the formal Rule 35 procedure and may agree to conduct physical or mental examinations by stipulation. n6

[b] Time for Filing Motion

A party may not request the court for an examination before the parties have conducted the discovery conference required under Rule 26(f), except when authorized by court order, or agreement of the parties. n7 The party also may not request an examination after the discovery cut-off date for discovery set by the court. n8 As an alternative to Rule 35, Rule 27 provides a mechanism to perpetuate testimony before any court action has been filed, n9 or while an appeal from a judgment is pending, n10 provided that the party obtains prior court approval. n11

[c] Parties May Stipulate to Examination

In cases where mental or physical condition is at issue, parties have the option to agree to conduct physical or mental examinations by way of stipulation or agreement. Thus, despite Rule 35's requirements, physical and mental examinations are typically arranged by stipulation of the attorneys, with the rule standing as a compulsory sanction that helps to produce stipulations. n12 Furthermore, if a party voluntarily submits to an examination by a physician selected by another party, the examined party waives his or her right to insist upon a Rule 35 motion for an order of examination. n13 Such agreements and stipulations offer the advantage of flexibility. However, even in cases when the examinations are made by agreement or stipulation of the parties, the Rule 35(b) requirement of the examiner's report will apply to the examination, unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. n14

[3] Conduct of Examination n*

[a] Persons Subject to Examination

The court may order the examination of a party, or order that a party produce for examination a person in the custody or under the legal control of the party. n1 The purpose of the "custody or control" provision is to make it clear that the court may order a parent or guardian suing for personal injuries on behalf of a minor to produce the minor for examination, n2 and that blood tests may be ordered from minors in cases in which paternity is an issue. n3 Rule 35 is applicable to autopsies, and for purposes of ordering an autopsy under Rule 35, a decedent may be a person in the custody and control of a party. n4 Courts have rejected the argument that a decedent is not a "person" within the meaning of Rule 35(a), noting that the Rule does not expressly limit itself to the living. Thus, the surviving spouse had custody and control of the deceased's body. n5

Failure to comply with an order to produce another person for a Rule 35 examination be may sanctioned under Rule 37, n6 except that such failure is excused on a showing of inability to produce the other party. n7

[b] Persons Allowed to Perform Examination

The court may order a physical or mental examination only by a suitably licensed or certified examiner. n8 Professionals satisfying this requirement include, among others, physicians, psychologists, psychiatrists, and vocational rehabilitation experts. n9 The purpose of the suitably licensed requirement is to ensure that the court examines the qualifications of the proposed examiner for the particular type of examination. Even a licensed physician may be unsuitable if the examination calls for an expertise that the physician does not have. n10 Rule 35 does not limit the number of persons who may examine a particular examinee. An examinee may be examined several times, and more than one person may participate at a specific examination. n11

Absent a lack of qualification, the court may honor the examining party's choice of an examiner. n12 The court also has discretion to make its own designations of examining experts to ensure an independent and impartial evaluation of the examinee's condition. Appointment of expert witnesses by the court is specifically provided for in the Federal Rules of Evidence. n13

[c] Persons Who May Attend Examination

The court must specify the type, scope, and conditions of the examination. n14 Courts thus may, but are not required to, prohibit the attorney for the party to be examined from attending the examination because the presence of the examinee's attorney could inhibit the examiner and also create the possibility that the attorney will become a trial witness. n15 Courts have allowed the attorney to be present when there is showing n16 that the examiner will probe beyond permissible limits and, in effect, transform the examination into a de facto deposition. n17 The modern trend is also to exclude the examined party's doctor from the examination unless there is a showing that the proposed examiner could resort to medically unsound techniques. n18

[d] Location of Examination

The court has discretion to specify the time and location of the examination. n19 The court typically requires an examination to be conducted in the district where the case will be tried. n20 When a plaintiff examinee is obligated to submit to an examination in the district where the plaintiff has filed suit, the plaintiff is responsible for his or her own travel expenses, unless the examinee can show unreasonable hardship or exceptional circumstances. n21

If the examining party makes a motion for an examination outside of the forum district, the party to be examined may oppose the motion on the basis of undue hardship. To decide the issue, the court will consider factors such as the availability of qualified examiners in close proximity to the examinee's residence or the forum district, the distance of the examination from the examinee's residence, and the physical condition of the examinee. n22

[4] Report of Examiner n*

[a] Requests for Report

When an examination is ordered under Rule 35(a), a request for a copy of an examiner's report may be made by the party against whom the examination order was issued or by the person examined. When a request is made, the party that moved for the examination must deliver a copy of the report to the requester, and also a copy of like reports of all earlier examinations of the same condition. n1 In a similar way, after delivering the reports, the party who moved for the examination may request, and is entitled to receive, from the party against whom the examination order was issued like reports of all earlier or later examinations of the same condition. However, those reports need not be delivered by the party with custody or control of the person examined if the party shows that it could not obtain them. n2 Note that the obligation to exchange reports is triggered by a request either by the party against whom the order was entered or by the examined party; there is no obligation to exchange reports unless the examined party makes the initial request, n3 or it is ordered on the court's own initiative. n4 Requesters are entitled to receive a copy of a required report in sufficient time to use it in trial preparation. n5

If disclosure of certain information in the report to opposing parties would be unjustifiably prejudicial, a party may seek a protective order to restrict disclosure of the report. n6 Through in camera review prior to distribution of a report, the court may evaluate whether prejudicial passages in the report should be stricken. n7

[b] Contents of Report

The examiner's report must be in writing and must specify in detail the examiner's results and findings, including diagnoses, conclusions, and the results of any tests. n8 This means that the report must cover the topics contained in the court's examination order, which must specify the manner, conditions, and scope of the examination. n9

[c] Exclusion of Examiner's Testimony for Failure to Deliver Report

If a party fails to deliver a requested report, on motion the trial court may order delivery of the report; if a party then fails to deliver the report, the court has discretion to exclude the examiner's testimony at trial. n10 Furthermore, the rule does not limit the court to exclusion of testimony as the only remedy. If the sanction of exclusion would be inadequate, the court may order other Rule 37 sanctions for failure produce the report. n11

[d] Request for Report Waives Privilege of Requester

By requesting and obtaining a report of the examination or by taking the deposition of the examiner, the examined party waives any privilege in that action or any other involving the same controversy regarding the testimony of any other person who examined or may examine the party with respect to the same condition. n12 However, if the examined party receives an unsolicited copy of the report, the examined party does not waive any privilege by that receipt. n13

[e] Discovery of Report Under Other Rules

Rule 35 provisions regarding the production and exchange of reports do not preclude the discovery of a physician's or other expert's report, or the taking of an expert's deposition pursuant to other discovery rules. n14 Thus, if a physician's report is not privileged, or the party possessing the report has waived the privilege by other means, the report may still be discovered, regardless of whether a request has been made pursuant to Rule 35(b). n15 For example, when examination reports are not privileged and not created in anticipation of litigation or in preparation for trial, they would fall within the general definition of the scope of discovery in Rule 26. n16

[f] Transcription of Examination

Courts generally do not permit the party to be examined to have the examination transcribed either by a stenographer or by electronic means, because of the potential intrusion on the examining process n17 and because of tendency to make examination adversarial. n18 In unusual circumstances, however, the court will permit transcription of the examination if there appears to be no other effective means of preserving the examined person's rights to produce a record of the examination. n19

[5] Enforcement of Order of Examination n*

Rule 37(b)(2) prescribes the possible sanctions for failure to comply with an order for an examination under Rule 35. These include refusing to allow the disobedient party to support or oppose designated claims or defenses or introduce designated matters into evidence, striking pleadings or parts of pleadings, staying the action until the order is obeyed, dismissing the action or parts of the action, or rendering a default judgment. n1 In a personal injury action, the court often uses dismissal as a sanction against a plaintiff who unjustifiably refuses to comply with an order to submit to a physical or mental examination. n2 However, the court may not impose a contempt citation for disobeying an order to submit to a physical or mental examination. n3

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 35.02-35.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Sloane v. Thompson, 128 F.R.D. 13, 15 (D. Mass. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Jansen v. Packaging Corp., 158 F.R.D. 409, 410 (N.D. Ill. 1994) (former employee's allegation of ongoing harm in sexual harassment case placed her mental condition in controversy).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Usher v. Lakewood Eng'g & Mfg. Co., 158 F.R.D. 411, 412 (N.D. Ill. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Schlagenhauf v. Holder, 379 U.S. 104, 118, 85 S. Ct. 234, 13 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1964) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Schlagenhauf v. Holder, 379 U.S. 104, 119, 85 S. Ct. 234, 13 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1964) ; see In re Certain Asbestos Cases, 113 F.R.D. 612, 614 (N.D. Tex. 1986) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Smith v. Koplan, 215 F.R.D. 11, 13 (D.D.C. 2003) (plaintiff alleged as element of damages that mental illness caused by defendant has prevented plaintiff from working).

(n9)Footnote 8. Tomlin v. Holecek, 150 F.R.D. 628, 630 (D. Minn. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Usher v. Lakewood Eng'g & Mfg. Co., 158 F.R.D. 411, 412 (N.D. Ill. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2) (A).

(n12)Footnote 11. Peters v. Nelson, 153 F.R.D. 635, 638-639 (N.D. Iowa 1994) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Schlagenhauf v. Holder, 379 U.S. 104, 118-119, 85 S. Ct. 234, 13 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1964) .

(n14)Footnote 13. DeCrescenzo v. Maersk Container Serv. Co., 741 F.2d 17, 21 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Duncan v. Upjohn Co., 155 F.R.D. 23, 25 (D. Conn. 1994) .

(n16)Footnote 15. See Herrera v. Lufkin Indus., 474 F.3d 675, 689 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Shirsat v. Mutual Pharmaceutical Co., Inc., 169 F.R.D. 68, 72 (E.D. Pa. 1996) ; Green v. Branson, 108 F.3d 1296, 1304 (10th Cir. 1997) (appellate court reviews decision on Rule 35 motion for medical examination under abuse of discretion standard).

(n18)Footnote 17. Stinchcomb v. United States, 132 F.R.D. 29, 30 (E.D. Pa. 1990) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Pena v. Troup, 163 F.R.D. 352, 353 (D. Colo. 1995) .

(n20)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Usher v. Lakewood Engineering & Mfg. Co., 158 F.R.D. 411, 413 (N.D. Ill. 1994) .

(n21)Footnote 20. See Daubert v. Merrell Dow, 509 U.S. 579, 593-594, 113 S. Ct. 2786, 125 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1993) .

(n22)Footnote 21. In re American President Lines, Ltd., 929 F.2d 226, 228 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n23)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A); Usher v. Lakewood Eng'g & Mfg. Co., 158 F.R.D. 411, 412-414 (N.D. Ill. 1994) .

(n24)Footnote 23. See Herrera v. Lufkin Indus., 474 F.3d 675, 689 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n25)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2)(B).

(n26)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(1); see [3][b], below.

(n27)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 35.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n28)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2)(A).

(n29)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

(n30)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b).

(n31)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2)(A).

(n32)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2)(B).

(n33)Footnote 6. Herrera v. Lufkin Indus., Inc., 474 F.3d 675, 689 (10th Cir. 2007) ; see [c], below.

(n34)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n35)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n36)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a).

(n37)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b).

(n38)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a)(3), (b)(3).

(n39)Footnote 12. See Herrera v. Lufkin Indus., Inc., 474 F.3d 675, 689 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n40)Footnote 13. Herrera v. Lufkin Indus., Inc., 474 F.3d 675, 690 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n41)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(6).

(n42)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 35.06-35.09 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n43)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(1).

(n44)Footnote 2. See Schempp v. Reniker, 809 F.2d 541, 542-543 (8th Cir. 1987) .

(n45)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n46)Footnote 4. Plaisted v. Geisinger Med. Ctr., 210 F.R.D. 539, 541 (M.D. Pa. 2002) .

(n47)Footnote 5. In re Certain Asbestos Cases, 112 F.R.D. 427, 433 (N.D. Tex. 1986) .

(n48)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(iv).

(n49)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(B).

(n50)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(1).

(n51)Footnote 9. See Olcott v. LaFiandra, 793 F. Supp. 487, 492 (D. Vt. 1992) .

(n52)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a), Committee note to 1991 Amendments.

(n53)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a) (examination order must specify "person or persons" by whom examination is to be made); Little v. Howey, 32 F.R.D. 322, 323 (W.D. Mo. 1963) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n54)Footnote 12. Powell v. United States, 149 F.R.D. 122, 123 (E.D. Va. 1993) .

(n55)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Evid. 706(a).

(n56)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2)(B); see Herrera v. Lufkin Indus., 474 F.3d 675, 689 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n57)Footnote 15. Tomlin v. Holecek, 150 F.R.D. 628, 631 (D. Minn. 1993) .

(n58)Footnote 16. Sadler v. Acker, 263 F.R.D. 333, 339 (M.D. La. 2009) (some courts permit party's attorney or doctor to be present on showing of good cause).

(n59)Footnote 17. See Zabkowicz v. West Bend Co., 585 F. Supp. 635, 636 (E.D. Wis. 1984) .

(n60)Footnote 18. Ragge v. MCA/Universal Studios, 165 F.R.D. 605, 609-610 (C.D. Cal. 1995) .

(n61)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2)(B).

(n62)Footnote 20. Landry v. Green Bay & Western R.R. Co., 121 F.R.D. 400, 401 (E.D. Wis. 1988) .

(n63)Footnote 21. Matthews v. Watson, 123 F.R.D. 522, 523 (E.D. Pa. 1989) .

(n64)Footnote 22. Blount v. Wake Elec. Membership Corp., 162 F.R.D. 102, 107 (E.D.N.C. 1993) .

(n65)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 35.12 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n66)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(1).

(n67)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(3).

(n68)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(1),(3); see FMC Corp. v. Vendo Co., 196 F. Supp. 2d 1023, 1043-1044 (E.D. Cal. 2002) .

(n69)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(5).

(n70)Footnote 5. Shapiro v. Win-Sum Ski Corp., 95 F.R.D. 38, 38-39 (W.D.N.Y. 1982) .

(n71)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(G).

(n72)Footnote 7. See Swift v. Swift, 64 F.R.D. 440, 443 (E.D.N.Y. 1974) .

(n73)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(2); Sadler v. Acker, 263 F.R.D. 333, 339 (M.D. La. 2009) .

(n74)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(a)(2)(B); see Herrera v. Lufkin Indus., 474 F.3d 675, 689 (10th Cir. 2007) ; see also Waggoner v. Ohio Cent. R.R., Inc., 242 F.R.D. 413, 413-414 (S.D. Ohio 2007) (if court's examination order is not followed, court may exclude examiner's testimony at trial).

(n75)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(5).

(n76)Footnote 11. Salvatore v. American Cyanamid Co., 94 F.R.D. 156, 157-158 (D.R.I. 1982) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A).

(n77)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(4).

(n78)Footnote 13. Hardy v. Riser, 309 F. Supp. 1234, 1236 (N.D. Miss. 1970) .

(n79)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(6).

(n80)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 35(b)(3), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n81)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) (general scope of discovery); Burlage v. Haudenshield, 42 F.R.D. 397, 398 (N.D. Iowa 1967) (defendant permitted to depose plaintiff's physicians when privilege had been waived or would have to be waived at trial in order to prove damages; defendant not required to request independent examination under Fed. R. Civ. P. 35).

(n82)Footnote 17. Favale v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Bridgeport, 235 F.R.D. 553, 557 (D. Conn. 2006) .

(n83)Footnote 18. Nicholas v. Wyndham Int'l, Inc., 218 F.R.D. 122, 124 (D.V.I. 2003) .

(n84)Footnote 19. Underwood v. Fitzgerald, 229 F.R.D. 548, 550 (M.D. Tenn. 2005) .

(n85)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 35.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n86)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi).

(n87)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(v); Schempp v. Reniker, 809 F.2d 541, 542 (8th Cir. 1987) .

(n88)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(vii).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.28

§ 15.28 Requests For Admissions

[1] Purpose Is to Obtain Admissions by Opposition of Undisputed Facts n*

[a] Admissions Simplify Litigation and Save Expense

A request for admission is a request in writing served on a party to admit, for purposes of the pending action only, the truth of any matters within the scope of Rule 26(b)(1) relating to: facts, the application of law to fact, or opinions about either facts or their application; n1 or the genuineness of any described documents. n2

If a fact, opinion, or the genuineness of a document is formally admitted under Rule 36, the matter is conclusively established, unless the court permits that the admission to be withdrawn or amended. n3 When a matter is admitted, the matter is set aside in the discovery process, and the party requesting an admission is entitled to rely on the conclusiveness of it. This process is extremely useful in expediting and simplifying litigation. Any matter admitted under Rule 36 is comparable to an admission in pleadings or a stipulation drafted by an attorney for use at trial, rather than to an evidentiary admission of a party, because a Rule 36 admission may not be rebutted by contrary testimony unless it is withdrawn or amended. n4 Requests for admission can save litigants considerable time and expense by avoiding the necessity to prove facts at trial, n5 or to establish certain facts through more complex and costly discovery procedures, such as interrogatories, depositions, and requests for the production of documents. n6

[b] Effect of Admissions

If a fact, opinion, or the genuineness of a document is formally admitted under Rule 36, the matter is conclusively established, unless the court permits the admission to be withdrawn or amended. n7 When a matter is admitted, the matter is set aside in the discovery process, and the party requesting an admission is entitled to rely on the conclusiveness of that matter. Any matter admitted under Rule 36 is comparable to an admission in pleadings or a stipulation drafted by an attorney for use at trial, rather than to an evidentiary admission of a party, because a Rule 36 admission may not be rebutted by contrary testimony unless it is withdrawn or amended. n8

An admission is binding only on the specific party to whom the request is directed. n9 Furthermore, an admission resulting from a party's failure to answer a request for admissions binds the non-responding party but not coparties on the same side. n10 An admission made under Rule 36 is conclusive for the purpose of the matter admitted in the pending action only, n11 and may not be used as an admission for any other purpose or in any other proceeding. n12 Consequently, admissions made in accordance with Rule 36 have no collateral estoppel effect. n13

[2] Comparison With other Discovery Methods n*

The general limitations and deadlines applicable to other discovery devices also apply to requests for admission. n1 However, a request for an admission is different from other discovery devices because, rather that eliciting facts and evidence relevant to the claims and defenses in the case, the purpose of the request for admission is to have the other party acknowledge facts about which there is no real dispute. n2 Consequently, requests for admission may not be used instead of another discovery method to circumvent that method's particular requirements, such as the numerical limit of interrogatories. n3 Furthermore, requests for admission should not be used as a substitute for other discovery tools that are designed to elicit facts, gather information, or to obtain documents. n4 Conversely, pretrial stipulations should not be relied on as substitutes for requests for admission. n5

[3] Requirements for Requests for Admissions n*

[a] Requests Must Relate to Facts, Application of Law to Fact, Opinions, or Genuineness of Documents

A party may serve on any other party a written request to admit the truth of any matters within the scope of Rule 26(b)(1) relating to:

1. Facts or opinions about facts. n1 Therefore, requests may encompass all of the fact issues in the action. n2 Similarly, requests for admission and the resulting admissions may relate to the ultimate facts of a case. n3 Thus, an admission may serve as proof that is dispositive of an entire action, claim or defense, n4 admissions alone may be sufficient independent grounds to support a summary judgment. n5

2. Application of law to the facts or opinions about application of law to the facts. n6 A request may not be for a pure opinion of law. n7 Furthermore, requests for admissions of law unrelated to the facts of the case are not authorized by Rule 36, and a request for an admission based on an application of law to a hypothetical set of facts is improper. n8 On the other hand, because it relates to the facts of the current action, a party may be requested to admit what its obligations are as a matter of law. n9

3. The genuineness of any described documents. n10 Such requests may be particularly useful in helping parties determine which documents to be introduced at trial will present foundational problems and which will not. n11 A request to admit the genuineness of a document must be accompanied by a copy of the document unless it is, or has been, otherwise furnished or made available for inspection and copying. n12

[b] Requests Must Be Simple and Direct

Each request for admission must be stated separately n13 and must be simple and direct. n14 A party need not admit or deny a request that consists of statements that are vague or ambiguous. n15 The requesting party bears the burden of drafting the request clearly and specifically so that the responding party may simply admit or deny the statement. n16

[c] Number of Requests May Be Limited by Local Rule or Court Order

The number of requests for admission may be limited by local rule or by order of court. n17 Even in the absence of a local rule, the court is required to limit the number and length of requests for production if: the request is cumulative or duplicative or obtainable from some other source, the requesting party has had other opportunity to obtain the information sought, or if answering the request would be unduly burdensome or expensive. n18

[d] Signing and Service of Requests

A request for admission must be signed by the attorney for the requesting party or, if the requesting party is not represented by counsel, then by the party. Additionally, the attorney or the pro se party must give his or her address. n19 The signed request for admission must be served on the party from whom the admission is requested and copies of the request must be sent to all other parties. n20 Service of requests for admission generally may not be served before parties' Rule 26(f) discovery conference. Unless authorized by court order or by agreement of parties, a party may not seek discovery from any source until the parties have held their discovery plan conference as set forth in Rule 26(f). n21

[4] Requirements for Responses to Requests n*

[a] Responses Must Be Timely

The party to whom a request for admission has been directed must ascertain the truth of the request, n1 if the ability to do so is reasonably within the power of the responding party. n2 Then, the party must serve a written response on the party requesting the admission within 30 days of service of the request for admission or within any other time agreed to by the parties in writing or specified by the court. n3

[b] Content of Responses

Each response to a request for admission must respond to the separately stated matter in the request, n4 and must be signed by the party or its attorney, n5 whether it consists of an admission, denial, objection, qualification, or a mix of the possible responses. The reasons for any objection or an inability to respond must be set forth in the response. n6 An objection to any part of the request does not excuse the responding party from properly responding to the other parts of the request to which the responding party has raised no specific objection. n7 Unless the party is avoiding the response, for example by a request for extension of time, the response may consist of any of the following or a combination of any of the following:

1. Admissions. n8

2. Denials. n9

3. Objections. n10

4. Statement of lack of information or knowledge. n11

5. Motion for protective order. n12

The court has discretion pursuant to Rules 36(a)(3) and 37(c)(2) to award sanctions in favor of the requesting party if it finds that a party has failed to respond properly to requests for admissions. Sanctions may be in the form of fees and costs, or the court may deem the subject matter admitted. n13

[c] Authorized Types of Responses

[i] Admission

If the responding party determines that a statement in a request is true, a simple admission is all that is required by the rule. n14 An explicit admission requires no further explanation, and it is not necessary to produce any evidence or authority for an admission. n15 If the responding party cannot simply admit the matter stated in the request without some explanation or qualification, the responding party may admit with qualification. n16 An admission may require qualification when the request is true but the responding party cannot in good faith admit it without some necessary contextual explanation to remedy any improper inferences. The responding party may qualify the response, or specify so much as is true and qualify the remainder. n17 A party may in good faith qualify its answer or deny only part of a requested matter, but it must state specifically what part of the request is true, and deny or qualify the rest. n18 Another way to admit a request for admission is simply to refrain from answering, because any request not responded to within 30 days or within any other time agreed to by parties or established by the court is deemed admitted. n19

[ii] Denial

A responding party may choose to deny completely a request for admissions. Alternatively, a responding party may choose not to deny the request completely but to deny only part of the request. The responding party may then, in good faith, qualify its answer or deny only part of a requested matter. In that case, the responding party must state specifically what part of the request is true, and deny only the rest. n20

Regardless whether a partial or a complete denial is intended by the responding party, the same standards and requirements of Rule 36 apply. The partial or complete denial must be set forth specifically and the response must fairly meet the substance of the requested admission. n21 These requirements are strictly construed n22 and failure to comply with the standards may warrant sanctions. n23

[iii] Objection

An objecting party must serve on the requesting party a written objection, addressed to the matter, specifically stating the reason or reasons for the objection, n24 within 30 days of service of the request, or within any other time determined by the parties or by the court. n25 A responding party may object to either the form n26 or the substance of the request. n27 If the responding party responds to the request without objecting to it, or before attempting to object to it, any objection is waived. n28

If a responding party objects in good faith to only a part of a matter, the answer must specify the part admitted and object to the rest. n29 Courts will sustain objections to the invalid request and direct the responding party to respond to the valid request. n30.

A responding party may validly object to a request for admissions if the requested matter goes beyond the scope of discovery, as set forth in Rule 26(b)(1). n31 An objection may also be based on the responding party's claim that the information sought is confidential or involves privileged matters, such as matters within the attorney-client privilege, the privilege against self-incrimination, or the government privilege. n32

[iv] Lack of Information or Knowledge

The answering party may assert lack of knowledge or information as a reason for failing to admit or deny provided that the party states that it has made reasonable inquiry and that the information it knows or can readily obtain is insufficient to enable it to admit or deny the statement in the request. n33 The responding party may not simply respond that it lacks information or knowledge regarding the matter; it must make the statement that it has made a reasonable inquiry. n34 Furthermore, the party must show that the party did in fact make a reasonable inquiry. n35

[v] Motion for Protective Order

A party on whom a request for admission has been served may challenge a request for admission on the grounds, for example, that it is oppressive or would cause undue embarrassment, burden, or expense by filing with the court a motion for a protective order. n36 Although Rule 36 does not specifically refer to the filing of a motion for a protective order, Rule 26(c) applies to all discovery under the federal rules, and in this respect, requests for admissions are treated as normal discovery. For example, a responding party may file a motion for a protective order when the requests are voluminous or so poorly framed that it is burdensome to ascertain what is in dispute. Then the court must balance the legitimate needs of the requesting party with the claim of oppression made by the responding party. The court may make any protective order that justice requires based on good cause shown. n37

[5] Withdrawal and Amendment of Admissions n*

The court may permit the withdrawal or amendment of an admission or other response, subject to the provisions of Rule 16. n1 There are two requirements: first, the court must determine that the presentation of the merits of the action will be promoted by the withdrawal or amendment, and second, that the party who obtained the admission or response will not be prejudiced in maintaining the action or its defense on the merits if the withdrawal or amendment is allowed. n2

The party moving for the withdrawal or amendment must convince the court that allowing the withdrawal or amendment will promote the presentation of the merits of the case. n3 On the other hand, the party who obtained the admission has the burden to show the court that it will be prejudiced if the amendment or withdrawal is allowed. n4 Prejudice from the withdrawal or amendment of an admission is more likely when the motion for withdrawal of the admission is made once trial has begun. Therefore, after trial has begun, the district judge may not permit withdrawal or amendment of a Rule 36 admission unless failure to do so would cause manifest injustice. n5

Some courts have found that a motion to file a late response to a request for admissions is the equivalent of a motion to file an amended response to a request, and have therefore held that a motion to file a late response must be governed by the same two-part test discussed above. n6

[6] Determination of Sufficiency by Court n*

[a] Challenge to Sufficiency of Responses

A party that has requested admissions may file a motion that asks the court to determine the sufficiency of the responding party's responses. n1 This is the equivalent of a motion asking a court to deem a matter admitted. n2 In the absence of such a motion, the sufficiency of a response does not come before the court. The party objecting to the request or the party opposing the challenge to the sufficiency of the response has the burden of persuasion to show the court that the objection to the request is warranted or that the answer to the request is sufficient. Unless the court determines that an objection is justified, it must order that an answer be served. On the other hand, if the court determines that an answer does not comply with the requirements of Rule 36, it may order that the matter is deemed admitted or that an amended answer must be served. n3 On the motion, the court may order that the losing party pay the winning party's fees and expenses in accordance with Rule 37(a)(5), n4 because the provisions of Rule 37 apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion. n5

[b] Challenge to Sufficiency of Objection to Request for Admissions

A party that has requested admissions may file a motion asking the court to determine the merit of the responding party's objection to a request for admission and ask for the court's ruling that the objection is improper. If the court determines that the responding party's objection to a request for admission is improper because it does not comply with Rule 36, the court may order that the matter is deemed admitted or that an amended answer be served, or it may order the matter to be deemed admitted. The court also has the alternative to defer its determination on the issue until the pretrial conference or some other time. n6 The party losing on the motion may be required to pay the winning party's fees and expenses in accordance with Rule 37(a)(5), n7 because the provisions of Rule 37 apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to a Rule 36 motion. n8

[c] Challenge to Sufficiency of Denial or Statement of Inability to Respond

A requesting party may move the court to determine whether the responding party's denial is sufficient, or whether the responding party's explanation for an inability to admit or deny is adequate. n9 If the court determines that an answer is insufficient and that it does not comply with the rule, the court may order that the matter be deemed admitted, reasoning that an insufficient response is no response at all, or the court may order that an amended answer be served. n10 If the court determines that an answer is not objectionable, that answer may be used in the pending action. If the court orders the matter deemed admitted, the admission may be conditioned on the party's failure to file a proper response within a certain time. n11 On the motion, the court may order that the losing party pay the winning party's fees and expenses in accordance with Rule 37(a)(5), n12 because the provisions of Rule 37 apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion. n13

[7] Enforcement of Obligation to Admit

If a party fails to admit what is requested under Rule 36, and if the requesting party later proves a document to be genuine or the matter true, the requesting party may move that the party who failed to admit pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred in making that proof. n1 The court must make that order unless one of the following is true:

1. The request was held objectionable under Rule 36(a); n2

2. The admission requested was not of substantial importance; n3

3. The party failing to admit had a reasonable ground to believe that it might prevail on the matter; n4 or

4. There was other good reason for the failure to admit. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 34.02-34.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1)(B); *see Christian v. Janed Enters., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 52695, at 6 (M.D. Ga. June 23, 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b); see [5], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Armour v. Knowles, 512 F.3d 147, 154 (5th Cir. 2007) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Moosman v. Joseph P. Blitz, Inc., 358 F.2d 686 (2d Cir.1966) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Langer v. Monarch Life Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 786, 803 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b); see [5], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. Armour v. Knowles, 512 F.3d 147, 154 (5th Cir. 2007) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b).

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3), 36(b).

(n11)Footnote 10. Riberglass v. Techni-Glass Indus., Inc., 811 F.2d 565, 566 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1).

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b).

(n14)Footnote 13. See In re Leon Pizante, 186 B.R. 484, 489-490 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1995) , aff'd without opinion, 107 F.3d 878 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n15)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n16)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1) (general scope of discovery of Rule 26(b)(1) applies to admissions).

(n17)Footnote 2. Armour v. Knowles, 512 F.3d 147, 154 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n18)Footnote 3. *See Heartland Surgical Specialty Hosp., LLC v. Midwest Division, Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80182, at *21-22 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n19)Footnote 4. See Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Rawstron, 181 F.R.D. 441, 446 (C.D. Cal. 1998) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n20)Footnote 5. United States v. Watchmakers of Switzerland Info. Ctr., Inc., 25 F.R.D. 346, 347 (S.D.N.Y. 1960) .

(n21)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n22)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1)(A).

(n23)Footnote 2. Pleasant Hill Bank v. United States, 60 F.R.D. 1, 4 n.1 (W.D. Mo. 1973) .

(n24)Footnote 3. Cereghino v. The Boeing Company, 873 F. Supp. 398, 403 (D. Or. 1994) .

(n25)Footnote 4. In re Niswonger, 116 B.R. 562, 566 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1990) .

(n26)Footnote 5. Dukes v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 770 F.2d 545, 548-549 (5th Cir. 1985) ; Universal City Studios Productions LLP v. Bigwood, 441 F. Supp. 2d 185, 187 (D. Me. 2006) .

(n27)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1)(A).

(n28)Footnote 7. United States v. Petroff-Kline, 557 F.3d 285, 293 (6th Cir. 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n29)Footnote 8. Abbott v. United States, 177 F.R.D. 92, 93 (N.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n30)Footnote 9. Langer v. Monarch Life Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 786, 802 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n31)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1)(A).

(n32)Footnote 11. Berry v. Federated Mut. Ins. Co., 110 F.R.D. 441, 443 (N.D. Ind. 1986) .

(n33)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(2).

(n34)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(2).

(n35)Footnote 14. United Coal Cos. v. Powell Constr. Co., 839 F.2d 958, 967-968 (3d Cir. 1988) ; Sommerfield v. City of Chicago, 251 F.R.D. 353, 355 (N.D. Ill. 2008) .

(n36)Footnote 15. Henry v. Champlain Enters., 212 F.R.D. 73, 77 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n37)Footnote 16. Safeco of America v. Rawstron, 181 F.R.D. 441, 447 (C.D. Cal. 1998) .

(n38)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(A); see, e.g., S.D. Ohio LR 36.1 (limited to 40); E.D. Wash. LR 36.1 (limited to 15).

(n39)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n40)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1).

(n41)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(C), 36(a)(1).

(n42)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1), (f).

(n43)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n44)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1).

(n45)Footnote 2. Johnson Intern. Co. v. Jackson Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 812 F. Supp. 966, 987 (D. Neb. 1993) , aff'd on other grounds, 19 F.3d 431 (1993) .

(n46)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 29(b) (stipulation extending time must be approved by court if it would interfere with time set for completing discovery, for hearing motion, or for trial).

(n47)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(2).

(n48)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3).

(n49)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(5).

(n50)Footnote 7. Jackson Buff Corp. v. Marcelle, 20 F.R.D. 139, 140 (E.D.N.Y. 1957) .

(n51)Footnote 8. See [c][i], below.

(n52)Footnote 9. See [c][ii], below.

(n53)Footnote 10. See [c][iii], below.

(n54)Footnote 11. See [c][iv], below.

(n55)Footnote 12. See [c][v], below.

(n56)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2).

(n57)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(4).

(n58)Footnote 15. Washington State Dep't of Transp. v. Natural Gas Co., 59 F.3d 793, 806 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n59)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(4).

(n60)Footnote 17. Nat'l Semiconductor Corp. v. Ramtron Int'l Corp., 265 F. Supp. 2d 71, 73 (D.D.C. 2003) .

(n61)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(4).

(n62)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3).

(n63)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(4).

(n64)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a); see Panara v. Hertz Penske Truck Leasing, Inc., 122 F.R.D. 14, 17 (E.D. Pa. 1988) (ambiguous denial insufficient).

(n65)Footnote 22. United States v. Jefferson Trust & Sav. Bank, 31 F.R.D. 137, 139 (S.D. Ill. 1962) .

(n66)Footnote 23. Martin v. Brown, 151 F.R.D. 580, 594 (W.D. Pa. 1993) (when responding to requests for admissions, failure to meet requirements is ground for sanctions); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)(B), 37(c)(2).

(n67)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(5).

(n68)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3).

(n69)Footnote 26. Hesselbine v. Wedel, 44 F.R.D. 431, 433 (W.D. Okla. 1968) .

(n70)Footnote 27. Hesselbine v. Wedel, 44 F.R.D. 431, 433 (W.D. Okla. 1968) (objection to request based on privilege).

(n71)Footnote 28. Pleasant Hill Bank v. United States, 60 F.R.D. 1, 4 (W.D. Mo. 1973) (objection waived by answering request for admissions).

(n72)Footnote 29. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3).

(n73)Footnote 30. See also English v. Cowell, 117 F.R.D. 132, 135 (C.D. Ill. 1986) .

(n74)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(1).

(n75)Footnote 32. United States v. 266 Tonawanda Trail, 95 F.3d 422, 428 n.10 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n76)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(4).

(n77)Footnote 34. Han v. Food and Nutrition Serv., 580 F. Supp. 1564, 1566 (D.N.J. 1984) .

(n78)Footnote 35. In re Sweeten, 56 B.R. 675, 678 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) (response inadequate if actual showing of reasonable inquiry not made).

(n79)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(A).

(n80)Footnote 37. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(c)(1).

(n81)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 34.13 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n82)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e) (controlling modification of pretrial order to prevent manifest injustice).

(n83)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b).

(n84)Footnote 3. Hadley v. United States, 45 F.3d 1345, 1348 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n85)Footnote 4. Perez v. Miami-Dade County, 297 F.3d 1255, 1266 (11th Cir. 2002) (court is more likely to find prejudice when party seeks to withdraw its admissions once trial has already begun; mere inconvenience in having to gather evidence does not rise to required level of prejudice).

(n86)Footnote 5. See American Auto. Ass'n v. AAA Legal Clinic, 930 F.2d 1117, 1120 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n87)Footnote 6. See Chancellor v. City of Detroit, 454 F. Supp. 2d 645, 666 (E.D. Mich. 2006) .

(n88)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, § 36.12 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n89)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n90)Footnote 2. Szatanek v. McDonnell Douglas, 109 F.R.D. 37, 41 (W.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n91)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n92)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5).

(n93)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n94)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n95)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5).

(n96)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n97)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n98)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6); United States v. Kenealy, 646 F.2d 699, 702-703 (1st Cir. 1981) .

(n99)Footnote 11. Asea, Inc. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 669 F.2d 1242, 1247 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n100)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(a).

(n101)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n102)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2).

(n103)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(A).

(n104)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(B).

(n105)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(C).

(n106)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(D).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
II. RULES FOR PARTICULAR METHODS OF DISCOVERY

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 15.29-15.39

[Reserved]

§§ 15.29-15.39[Reserved]

22 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
III. MOTIONS AND SANCTIONS RELATED TO DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RULES

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.40

§ 15.40 Motions to Compel Mandatory Disclosures or Discoveryn*

[1] Failure to Make Mandatory Disclosures

Rule 26(a) requires extensive mandatory, automatic disclosures during pretrial of three types of information:

1. General information about persons with knowledge; documents; damages claims; and insurance; n1

2. Information about retained expert witnesses, n2 and

3. Information about evidence that the parties contemplate using at trial. n3

Parties must make these three types of disclosures unless they have stipulated otherwise or the court orders otherwise. n4 If a party fails to make any of these three types of mandatory disclosures pursuant to Rule 26(a), Rule 37(a) authorizes parties to file motions for orders compelling such disclosures and for appropriate sanctions. The court will grant such a motion provided that the party has made a certification that it has failed in a good faith effort to resolve the matter with other parties through negotiations. n5

[2] Failure to Comply With Discovery Requests

Parties may file motions to compel adequate responses to discovery requests when good faith efforts to secure sufficient responses by conferring with the party to whom the discovery probes were directed are unavailing. n1 A motion to compel may be filed not only when a party fails entirely to provide any response, or responds only by objecting and without providing the requested information, but also when a response is provided, but it is at least partially incomplete. n2 The following types of discovery violations justify a motion to compel:

1. A deponent fails to answer a written or oral question propounded pursuant Rule 30 or 31. n3 Generally, an attorney may instruct a deponent not to answer a question only when necessary to preserve a privilege; to enforce a limitation on evidence directed by the court; or to suspend a deposition in order to present a motion under Rule 30(d)(3) to terminate or limit the deposition. n4

2. A corporation or other entity fails to designate a person to testify as a deponent in accordance with Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a)(4). n5

3. A party fails to answer an interrogatory served in accordance with Rule 33. n6 Absent a court order or a written stipulation extending the time to respond, a party must serve answers or objections to interrogatories within 30 days of being served with the questions. n7

4. A party fails to produce documents and things, or fails to permit an inspection requested pursuant to Rule 34. n8 Absent a court order or a written stipulation extending the period for responding, a party served with a request for production or inspection must serve responses or objections within 30 days after service of the request. n9

[3] Persons Who May File Motions to Compel

If a party fails to make a mandatory disclosure, n1 any other party may move to compel disclosure and for appropriate sanctions. n2 However, for any discovery requests and deposition questions only the party that made the discovery request or propounded the questions has the right to make a motion to compel compliance. n3

[4] Procedural Requirements

[a] Appropriate Court

If a motion to compel discovery or disclosure is directed toward a party, the motion must be filed with the court where the action is pending. n1 If a deposition of a corporate party is taken in another district through an officer, director, managing agent, or some other individual designated by the corporate party, n2 the forum court has the power to order the deponent to answer questions. n3

If a motion to compel discovery is directed toward a nonparty, the motion must be filed in the court in the district where the discovery response will be made or must be produced. n4

[b] Required Certification of Attempt to Resolve Discovery Dispute

Every motion to compel disclosure or discovery must include a certification that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the person or party failing to make disclosure or discovery in an effort to obtain it without court action. n5 The certification requirement has two aspects. n6 First, the movant must state the actual certification, which must specifically convey to the court (1) the names of the parties who conferred or attempted to confer, (2) the manner by which they communicated, (3) the date and time of that communication, (4) specific discovery disputes discussed, and (5) the results of the discussion or an explanation why the parties did not have meaningful discussions. The second aspect is the performance of the good faith attempt to confer, which means that the party must have had or attempted to have had an actual meeting or conference to discuss each contested discovery dispute by a personal, live, two-way communication. n7

[c] Timing of Motion to Compel

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure impose no specific time limit for a motion to compel disclosures or discovery responses. However, such limits may be imposed by local rules, standing orders, or orders entered by the court in individual cases. The absence of a specific time limit in the federal rules reflects the difficulty of establishing deadlines that would be appropriate in all cases and circumstances. n8 However, case law has established that, at the least, a party seeking discovery must provide sufficient time after a disclosure or discovery response is due to meet and confer with parties from whom discovery has been sought to complete the required informal negotiations to resolve the dispute. n9

On the other hand, a party entitled to discovery or disclosure does not have unlimited time to file a motion to compel, which may be waived through inaction, particularly if the motion is not filed until the trial has concluded. n10 Courts have considerable discretion in deciding whether motions to compel have been timely filed. In making this determination, courts may take into account many factors, including: n11

1. The length of time in bringing the motion after the date the discovery deadline expired.

2. The length of time that the moving party has known about the discovery.

3. Whether the discovery deadline has been extended.

4. Any explanation for the tardiness or delay in filing the motion to compel.

5. Whether dispositive motions have been scheduled or filed.

6. The age of the litigation case.

7. Whether the delay was tactically inspired, the product of negligence, or was occasioned by good faith efforts to secure the information through negotiations or other discovery tools.

8. Whether the delay in filing the motion is likely to cause prejudice to or impose an undue hardship on any other party.

9. Whether permitting the motion would interfere with the pretrial schedule.

The consequences of failing to bring a timely motion to compel discovery may be significant and, ultimately, may mean that the moving party may not be able to rectify the discovery violation. n12

[d] Notice of Hearing Required

A party must generally make a motion to the court for an order compelling disclosures or discovery on notice to other parties and all affected persons. n13 The notice of the hearing must be served at least 7 days before the date set for the hearing. n14 The notice must comply with the requirements of due process, must be designed to actually communicate the required information, and must afford the noticed party or persons a meaningful opportunity to be heard. n15 To provide useful notice to the opposition, the motion to compel should identify specifically the portions of the responses that are inadequate and briefly explain what is missing or what kind of information would be necessary to make the responses adequate. n16

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 37.02-37.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1), (a)(3)(A).

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1), (3)(B).

(n8)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4).

(n9)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(i).

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(c)(2).

(n11)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(ii).

(n12)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(iii).

(n13)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(2).

(n14)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B)(iv).

(n15)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2)(A).

(n16)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

(n17)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(A).

(n18)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B), (C).

(n19)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(2); see Platypus Wear, Inc. v. K.D. Co., 905 F. Supp. 808, 810 (S.D. Cal. 1995) (motion for order overruling defendant's claim of privilege regarding deposition questions was properly made in district court where action was pending, even though nonparty deponent was resident of another state and was being deposed out of state).

(n20)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6).

(n21)Footnote 3. Independent Prod. Corp. v. Loew's, Inc., 27 F.R.D. 426, 427 (S.D.N.Y. 1961) .

(n22)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(2).

(n23)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1); see Kalis v. Colgate-Palmolive Co., 231 F.3d 1049, 1059 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n24)Footnote 6. See Shuffle Master, Inc. v. Progressive Games, Inc., 170 F.R.D. 166, 170-173 (D. Nev. 1996) .

(n25)Footnote 7. Shuffle Master, Inc. v. Progressive Games, Inc., 170 F.R.D. 166, 170-173 (D. Nev. 1996) ; see Naviant Mktg. Solutions, Inc. v. Larry Tucker, Inc., 339 F.3d 180, 186-187 (3d Cir. 2003) (sending letter to opposition attorney does not constitute conference).

(n26)Footnote 8. Riley v. United Air Lines, Inc., 32 F.R.D. 230, 232-233 (S.D.N.Y. 1962) (drafters of federal rules did not see fit to create this burden).

(n27)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1).

(n28)Footnote 10. Mercy v. County of Suffolk, New York, 748 F.2d 52, 55-56 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n29)Footnote 11. Days Inn Worldwide, Inc., v. Sonia Investments, 237 F.R.D. 395, 397-98 (N.D. Tex. 2006) .

(n30)Footnote 12. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co. v. Baker Material Handling Corp., 62 F.3d 24, 29 (1st Cir. 1995) (seeking reversal after unfavorable verdict is not appropriate remedy for parties who uncover discovery violations; motion to compel must occur at time violation occurs).

(n31)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(1); see Fischer v. McGowan, 585 F. Supp. 978, 983 (D.R.I. 1984) (nonparty deponent is "affected person" entitled to receive notice of motion to compel).

(n32)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c).

(n33)Footnote 15. Holcomb v. Allis Chalmers Corp., 774 F.2d 398, 401 (10th Cir. 1985) .

(n34)Footnote 16. James N. Pappas & Sons, Inc. v. McDonald's Corp., 21 Fed. R. Serv. 2d 773, 773 (D.D.C. 1976) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
III. MOTIONS AND SANCTIONS RELATED TO DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RULES

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.41

§ 15.41 Court's Determination of and Order for Motions to Compel Discovery or Mandatory Disclosuren*

[1] Court Orders Available

In ruling on a motion to compel discovery or mandatory disclosure, the court may grant the motion completely, n1 deny the motion completely, n2 or grant the motion in part and deny the motion in part. n3 A party faced with a motion to compel discovery or mandatory disclosure who objects to the motion on the ground that it would cause annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, may file a cross-motion for a protective order. n4 Furthermore, courts have authority to enter protective orders on their own initiative, without a motion first being brought by the objecting party. Specifically, if a motion to compel discovery or mandatory disclosure is denied in whole or in part, the court may enter any protective order authorized by Rule 26(c). n5 Additionally, an order granting a motion to compel in part may impose conditions or limitations when the discovery as requested would be unjustifiably burdensome. n6

[2] Factors Considered In Ruling on Motions to Compel

[a] Courts Apply Broader Standard for Discovery Requests Than for Mandatory Disclosures

The standards for ruling on motions to compel discovery are generally the same as the standards for mandatory disclosures under Rule 26(a). Thus, the court may compel either initial disclosures or general discovery when the matter in question involves information that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party. n1 With respect to mandatory disclosures, Rule 26(a) sets forth specific criteria for identifying the information that parties are obligated to disclose, absent a contrary stipulation or court order, including that the matter is used to support particular claims or defenses. n2 For matters of general discovery, the court has the option to expand discovery to any matters that are relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. n3

[b] Standard Applicable for Discovery Request Only

In ruling on a motion to compel discovery, the court's first determination is whether the information sought falls within the broad boundaries of the relevance standard, n4 which makes information discoverable if: (1) the information is not privileged, (2) the information is relevant to the claim or defense of any party, and (3) the relevant information, if not admissible in evidence, appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. n5 For good cause, the court may expand the parameter of discoverable information to information that is relevant to the subject matter involved in the action, rather than merely relevant to a claim or defense. Thus, information is discoverable if either: (1) the information is relevant to claims or defenses or (2) there is "good cause" for the information and it is relevant to the subject matter of the action. This rule was designed to involve the court more actively in controlling the breadth of sweeping or contentious discovery. n6

A motion to compel discovery generally will be denied if the materials sought are privileged or protected by the work product doctrine, irrespective of whether the materials fall within the broad definition of relevance. n7 A party resisting discovery on the ground that the material sought is privileged or constitutes work product bears the burden of proving that the asserted privilege or protection attaches. n8

A court may deny a motion to compel discover under the "proportionality test," even if the information requested is relevant and not privileged or work product, n9 if the party opposing discovery establishes any of the following:

1. The discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative; n10

2. The discovery sought is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; n11

3. The party seeking the discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought, n12 or

4. The burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues. n13

The court may also deny a motion to compel discovery in two other situations: (1) if the propounding party's position was not warranted under existing law and could not be supported by good faith argument for modification of existing law; n14 or (2) the motion was filed for an improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. n15

[3] Court Order of Expense Shifting Sanctions

[a] Presumption in Favor of Imposition of Expense Shifting Sanctions

An "expense shifting sanction" is an order of the court on a motion to compel which imposes the reasonable expenses incurred in the motion by the winning party, including attorney's fees, on the opposition party. When a party prevails on a motion to compel disclosures or discovery, there is a rebuttable presumption that expense shifting sanctions should be imposed on the party that lost the motion. n1 If the motion to compel is granted in part and denied in part, the court may apportion expenses among the parties in a just manner. n2

If a motion to compel is granted, the nonmovant may rebut the presumption in favor of expense shifting sanctions in several ways: by demonstrating that the motion was filed without the movant's first making a good faith effort to obtain the disclosure or discovery without court action; n3 by showing that the opposing party's nondisclosure, response, or objection was substantially justified; n4 or by showing other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. n5

If a motion to compel is denied, the movant may rebut the presumption that expense shifting sanctions be imposed against the movant by demonstrating that the making of the motion was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. n6

[b] No Sanctions if Unsuccessful Position Was Substantially Justified

A unsuccessful party to a motion to compel may rebut the presumption in favor of expense shifting sanctions by demonstrating that its position was substantially justified. n7 The Supreme Court has stated that the substantial justification standard is met when a party demonstrates that the dispute about the matter was genuine, meaning that reasonable lawyers could disagree about the appropriateness of the disputed position. n8

The substantial justification standard is objective, that is, whether a hypothetical reasonable attorney would engage in the dispute if confronted with the circumstances presented in the particular case. n9 Because the standard is objective reasonableness, a prevailing party may secure an expense sanction award without proving that the losing party acted in bad faith, and proof by the losing party that it acted in subjective good faith is not sufficient to defeat a request for sanctions. n10

[c] Other Circumstances Making Award of Expense Shifting Sanctions Unjust

An unsuccessful party on a motion to compel may rebut the presumption in favor of expense shifting sanctions by establishing that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust, n11 for example when the prevailing party has acted unjustifiably. n12

A court may not impose sanctions on a party for failing to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system, unless there are exceptional circumstances. n13 This provision restricts only the imposition of "sanctions." It does not prevent a court from taking other action to manage discovery. For example, a court may order the responding party to produce an additional witness for deposition, respond to additional interrogatories, or other substitutes or alternatives for the lost information. n14

[d] Persons Subject to Expense Shifting Sanctions

The court may impose expense shifting sanctions against both attorneys or parties who are responsible for taking the position that the court rejected when it ruled on a motion to compel, n15 and attorneys may not avoid sanction by shifting responsibility to their clients. n16 On the other hand, clients who are entirely responsible for providing clearly inadequate disclosures or discovery responses may not blame their attorneys. When the court apportions fault between attorney and client, the apportionment is committed to the sound discretion of the trial court. n17

[e] Protective Order Available When Motion Denied or Granted in Part and Denied in Part

If a motion to compel discovery or disclosure is denied, the court may issue protective orders authorized under Rule 26(c). n18 Expense shifting sanctions may be awarded in connection with expenses for the motion for a protective order itself. n19

If a motion to compel discovery or disclosure is granted in part and denied in part, the court also may enter any protective order authorized by Rule 26(c), as well as apportion the reasonable expenses incurred in relation to the motion among the parties and persons in a just manner. n20 When a motion for an order to compel is granted in part and denied in part and there is a determination that many of the discovery objections were substantially justified, courts frequently refuse to award expense shifting sanctions to either party. n21

[f] Party May Not Be Sanctioned Without Opportunity to Be Heard

Before imposing expense shifting sanctions on a party who unsuccessfully made or opposed a motion to compel discovery or mandatory disclosures, the court must afford the persons or parties to be sanctioned an opportunity to be heard. n22 Courts may comply with this requirement either by holding an oral hearing on adequate notice, or by considering written submissions from the affected parties. n23

[g] Court Has Discretion to order Reasonable Expenses Incurred in Motion

Sanctions imposed against a party or attorney responsible for taking a position that the court rejected when ruling on a motion to compel are limited to the reasonable expenses incurred in connection with the motion, including attorney's fees. n24 Such expenses include attorney's fees incurred in preparing the motion for expense shifting sanctions itself, n25 as are expenses of defending on appeal an award of expense shifting sanctions. n26

The court has discretion to assess the reasonableness of the hours spent and rates charged in connection with a request for expense shifting sanctions. Most courts use the "lodestar formula" to compute attorney's fees as part of expense shifting sanctions, although not all of them articulate it as such. Under this formula, the number of hours spent by the attorneys is multiplied by the hourly rate normally charged for similar work by attorneys of like skill in the area. The party seeking reimbursement bears the burden of proving the hours spent and the prevailing rates charged. The lodestar figure may be increased or reduced as a result of consideration of a number of different factors, including the complexity of the issues involved, and the perceived skill and efficiency of counsel. n27

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 37.20-37.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(C).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4)(B),(C); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1), (2).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(2).

(n8)Footnote 1. Compare Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(i), (ii) with Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n11)Footnote 4. *Oxford Assocs. Real Estate, L.P. v. TSI Soc'y Hill, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 76450, at 6 (E.D. Pa. 2006) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(3)(B).

(n12)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

(n13)Footnote 6. In re Sealed Case (Medical Records), 381 F.3d 1205, 1215, n.11 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n14)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) (privilege); Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3) (work product doctrine).

(n15)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Resolution Trust Corp. v. Dabney, 73 F.3d 262, 266 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n16)Footnote 9. *Bowers v. NCAA, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14944, at *14-15 (D.N.J. 2008) ; Zubulake v. UBS Warburg LLC, 217 F.R.D. 309, 316 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n17)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n18)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(i).

(n19)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(ii).

(n20)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(iii).

(n21)Footnote 14. *Berube v. A&P, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 87354, at *18-19 (D. Conn. 2006) .

(n22)Footnote 15. *Bat v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9542, at 5 (D. Colo. 2005) .

(n23)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5); *JSC Foreign Econ. Ass'n Technostroyexport v. Int'l. Development and Trade Services, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16772, at 39 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n24)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(C).

(n25)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(i).

(n26)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(ii); see Petrucelli v. Bohringer & Ratzinger, 46 F.3d 1298, 1310-1311 (3d Cir. 1995) (discretion of court to determine issue).

(n27)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(iii).

(n28)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(B).

(n29)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(ii), (B).

(n30)Footnote 8. Pierce v. Underwood, 487 U.S. 552, 565, 108 S. Ct. 2541, 101 L. Ed. 2d 490 (1988) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n31)Footnote 9. *See In re Omeprazole Patent Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6112, at *16-17 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) , citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n32)Footnote 10. Eureka Fin. Corp. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 136 F.R.D. 179, 186 (E.D. Cal. 1991) .

(n33)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(iii),(B).

(n34)Footnote 12. See Solomon v. Scientific Am., Inc., 125 F.R.D. 34, 39 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (court said both parties should bear their own costs).

(n35)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e).

(n36)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(f), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n37)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4)(A),(B).

(n38)Footnote 16. DeVaney v. Continental Am. Ins. Co., 989 F.2d 1154, 1162 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n39)Footnote 17. Frazier v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transp. Auth., 161 F.R.D. 309, 316-317 (E.D. Pa. 1995) .

(n40)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4)(C); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n41)Footnote 19. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(3); Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5).

(n42)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4)(C); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c).

(n43)Footnote 21. Cal Dive Int'l, Inc. v. M/V Tzimin, 127 F.R.D. 213, 218 (S.D. Ala. 1989) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n44)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A), (B).

(n45)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments; see also Hayden Stone, Inc. v. Brode, 508 F.2d 895, 897 (7th Cir. 1974) (upholding sanctions based on deposition transcripts and memoranda written by sanctioned party).

(n46)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A), (B).

(n47)Footnote 25. Sure Safe Indus. Inc. v. C & R Pier Mfg., 152 F.R.D. 625, 627 (S.D. Cal. 1993) .

(n48)Footnote 26. Rickels v. City of South Bend, 33 F.3d 785, 787 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n49)Footnote 27. Bowne of New York City, Inc. v. AmBase Corp., 161 F.R.D. 258, 267 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
III. MOTIONS AND SANCTIONS RELATED TO DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RULES

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.42

§ 15.42 Sanctions for Failure to Comply with Discovery Ordern*

[1] Nature of Sanction for Failure to Comply With Order Compelling Discovery

Sanctions for failure to comply with discovery orders under Rule 37(b) differ from expense shifting sanctions under rule 37(a). Sanctions are available pursuant to Rule 37(b) only if a court has first entered an order compelling the discovery in question, and a party has disobeyed that order. Furthermore, Rule 37(b) sanctions apply only to orders regarding requests for discovery, and not to automatic disclosures. There is no requirement in Rule 37(b) that a party try to secure the discovery through negotiations before filing a motion for sanctions because the requirement of a preexisting court order for discovery obviates the need to meet and confer. Finally, only Rule 37(b)(1), governing a deponent's failure to be sworn or to answer a question after being directed to do so by the court, applies to nonparties. Rule 37(b)(2), governing all other failures to obey discovery orders, does not apply to nonparties. n1

[2] Sanctionable Conduct

A deponent, whether a party or a nonparty, is subject to sanctions for failing to be sworn or to answer a question, if the court in the district where the deposition is pending already has directed the deponent to appear at the deposition and answer questions. n1 The principal purposes of the contempt sanction are to secure compliance with the specific order that has been disobeyed to promote respect for court orders and to discourage noncompliance, and to impose punishment on a person who without justification ignores the law and forces the courts to consume limited resources on a matter that should require no judicial intervention. n2

A party is subject to sanctions for a failure to comply with an order under Rule 35(a) requiring it to produce another person for examination, unless the disobedient party shows that it cannot produce the other person. n3

For all other violations of discovery orders, including failure to comply with orders to provide or permit discovery under Rules 26(f), 35, or 37(a), the potential subjects of sanctions include parties, their officers, directors, or managing agents, and persons designated pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of the parties and their attorneys. n4 These type of sanctions are designed to penalize those whose conduct warrants it, and to deter those who might be tempted to engage in such conduct in the absence of such a deterrent. n5 Other purposes include ensuring that a party will not be able to profit from its own failure to comply, securing compliance with the particular order under consideration, n6 and compensating the court and other parties for the added expense caused by the abusive conduct. n7

[3] Necessity of Existing Court Order

[a] Discovery Order Directed at Party

Before the court may apply Rule 37(b), a court order or direction regarding discovery must be in effect and that order or direction must be violated. n1 The absence of a prior order or direction which compels discovery against the subject party precludes Rule 37(b) sanctions. n2 Whether a party has violated a particular discovery order is a determination in the discretion of the court that issued the order. A district court's findings of fact in connection with a motion for sanctions will be upheld unless the findings are clearly erroneous. n3

The order violated does not have to be a formal, written order. A verbal order will satisfy the prior order requirement if the party to whom the verbal order was directed was given adequate opportunity to try to persuade the trial court that the discovery in question should not be compelled, and the verbal order gave the party who failed to comply sufficiently clear notice of what the order required that party to do. n4 The order need not be in any particular form. Even informal, minute orders may be sufficient, provided they are clear. n5 However, a subpoena is not considered a prior order for purposes of Rule 37(b). n6

[b] Order Must Give Adequate Notice of Duty Imposed

Whether the discovery order alleged to have been violated is written or verbal, formal or informal, it must adequately identify the duties it imposes, n7 because the purpose of the prior order requirement is to ensure that the party to whom the order is directed both understands his or her obligations and has an opportunity to contest the discovery sought before being exposed to sanctions. n8 If the terms of a discovery order are too vague or general to give fair notice of its obligations, it will not support sanctions. n9 The burden of establishing that a discovery order was insufficiently clear to support a subsequent award of sanctions generally is on the party who allegedly disobeyed the order. n10

[c] Propriety of Order

When sanctions are sought pursuant to Rule 37(b) for failure to obey an earlier discovery order, the propriety of the underlying discovery order generally will not be considered by the court making the determination of the motion for sanctions, unless the party against whom sanctions are sought had no opportunity to contest the underlying order. Thus, the issues in the sanctions proceeding at the trial court level usually will be limited to whether there was a violation of the discovery order, and if so, which particular sanction is appropriate. However, a party may be given the opportunity at the appellate stage to challenge the propriety of the underlying discovery order. n11

[4] Procedural Requirements

[a] Timeliness of Motion

A party may file a motion for sanctions under Rule 37(b). n1 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not establish any specific time limit for the filing of a Rule 37(b) motion. However, it has generally been held that such motions must be filed within a reasonable time after the alleged violation of the underlying discovery order occurred, was discovered, or should have been discovered through reasonable diligence. Thus, the longer the delay, the less likely the court will grant the motion. This rule is based on the purpose of the sanctions; thus, the deterrent effect of a punishment would be diluted considerably if the sanction were not imposed until long after the misconduct occurred. n2

[b] Form and Contents of Motion

A motion for sanctions predicated on a party's failure to comply with a discovery order generally must be made by formal motion, n3 and notice of the hearing must be served at least 14 days before the date set for the hearing. n4 Local rules may provide additional requirements regarding the form and content of the moving papers. If it is impossible for the party accused of the violation to prepare an adequate defense to the motion within 14 days, due process may require more notice, depending on the circumstances and the nature of the alleged disobedience. n5

A motion for sanctions based on a party's failure to comply with a discovery order must describe the alleged disobedience with enough specificity to enable the accused party to understand the charges, so that he or she is given a fair opportunity to develop a defense. In short, the motion must comport with the requirements of due process; it must be reasonable and afford some opportunity to be heard. Absent a clear, contrary indication in the motion documents, a motion for sanctions based on a party's alleged violation of a discovery order places both the party and the party's counsel on notice that the court might assess sanctions against either or both, unless they provide the court with substantial justification for their conduct. n6 If the motion seeks an award of expenses, including attorney's fees, n7 it should describe the causal connection between the expenses and the alleged disobedience of the underlying court order, and it should set forth with particularity the nature of the services rendered, the amount of attorney time spent, and the billing rates to the client. n8

[c] Proper Court for Motion

If sanctions are sought pursuant to Rule 37(b)(1) against a deponent for failure to comply with a discovery order, the motion must be brought in the court that issued the discovery order. If the court which issued the discovery direction against the person is not the court in which the action is pending, the only sanction that the court may impose pursuant to Rule 37(b)(1) is contempt. n9 This limitation serves the purpose of confining the application of the results-oriented sanctions that are authorized by Rule 37(b)(2)(A) to the court in which the action is pending. n10

If sanctions are sought against a party for failure to comply with a discovery order, the motion may be brought in the court in which the action is pending. n11 The fact that a court has improperly accepted and maintained subject-matter jurisdiction over a case does not preclude its authority to impose Rule 37 sanctions. n12

[5] Factors for Court to Consider in Determining Motion for Sanctions

[a] Sanction Must Further Purposes of Discovery

Punishment and deterrence are valid and important considerations in determining whether to impose sanctions for failure to comply with a discovery order. n1 Courts must have the power to impose punitive measures if they are to preserve their capacity to promote the orderly progress of discovery in litigation. While the particular sanction must be sufficiently potent, it also must be narrowly tailored to serve only its necessary function. n2 The sanction must also promote compliance with the underlying discovery order alleged to have been violated. n3 Any sanction short of dismissal of the entire case or entry of default judgment on all claims may be used to promote this purpose. n4

[b] Discretion of Court in Sanctions Determinations

The court has broad discretion in deciding whether to impose sanctions and the particular type of sanctions to be imposed. n5 Therefore, the standard appellate courts apply when reviewing decisions imposing sanctions for violations of discovery orders is the deferential abuse of discretion standard. Pursuant to this test, the district court's decision will be disturbed only if the reviewing court has a definite and firm conviction, after weighing all the relevant factors, that the court below committed a clear error of judgment in the conclusion it reached. n6

All sanctions imposed for failing to comply with a discovery order must be reasonable in light of the circumstances. n7 A sanction is reasonable only if its character and magnitude are proportionate to the character and magnitude of the violation of the underlying discovery order and the harmful consequences of that violation. n8

[c] Additional Factors for Court to Consider Before Order of Dismissal or Default Sanctions

The court has the option to use dismissal and default sanctions against a party for failing to comply with a discovery order. n9 However, because of the harshness of these types of sanctions, and the strong policy favoring resolution of cases on their merits, courts have held that these sanctions require circumstances establishing egregious fault on the part of the violator. n10 Thus, these sanctions are appropriate only as a last resort or when less drastic sanctions would not ensure compliance with a court's orders. n11 Therefore, courts have considered the following factors when determining whether to impose a sanction of dismissal or default:

1. Willfulness or bad faith. Dismissal and default sanctions are likely to be reversed if the failure that occasioned the sanction was inadvertent, isolated, no worse than careless, or not a cause of serious inconvenience or prejudice. n12 Willfulness sufficient to support a dismissal or default sanction will be found if the court concludes that a party consciously and intentionally failed to comply with a discovery order, n13 or if the court finds an ongoing violation that is substantially prejudicial. n14

2. Whether the sanction would affect the merits of the action. Rather than imposing a sanction that would affect a party's ability to litigate the merits of the action, courts are more likely to impose sanctions that affect only the claims or defenses to which the discovery would have been pertinent. n15

3. Whether a warning was given. Some courts require that in most circumstances the district court should give advance warning before resorting to dismissal or default sanctions for a party's failure to comply with a discovery order, n16 especially if the sanctioned party is proceeding pro se. n17

[6] Particular Sanctions That Court May Impose for Failure to Comply With Discovery Order

When a party has failed to comply with a discovery order, the court in which the action is pending has discretion to make such orders in regard to the failure that are just. n1 Generally, the court should impose the least severe sanction that will achieve the purposes of the sanctions rules in the circumstances of the case at hand. n2 The following is a nonexclusive list of sanctions that the court may order:

1. Directing that matters embraced in the order or other designated facts be taken as established for purposes of the action, as the prevailing party claims. n3 If deeming certain facts established is tantamount to disposing of claims, appellate courts require the same justification as needed for a dismissal or default judgment sanction. n4

2. Prohibiting the disobedient party from supporting or opposing designated claims or defenses, or from introducing designated matters in evidence. n5 Due process requires that the claim or defense that the disobedient party is prohibited from supporting or opposing must be related to the discovery order that was disobeyed. n6

3. Striking pleadings in whole or in part. n7 A sanctions order that strikes an entire pleading is more likely to be upheld if there are no less harsh sanctions available to the trial court. n8

4. Staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed. n9 This sanction is rarely used against a defendant, unless the court determines that the defendant has no interest in delaying the plaintiff's case. n10

5. Dismissing the action or proceeding in whole or in part. n11 Dismissal of an action is appropriate for repeated violations of various types of discovery orders. n12

6. Rendering a default judgment against the disobedient party. n13 The district court should provide a detailed evaluation on the record of factors considered prior to entering a default judgment. n14

7. Treating as contempt of court the failure to obey any order, except for an order to submit to a physical or mental examination. n15 Criminal contempt may not be imposed as a sanction for disobeying a discovery order unless the disobedience was willful or in bad faith. n16

8. Ordering the disobedient party, the attorney advising that party, or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure to comply with the order, unless the failure was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. n17

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 37.40-37.51 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b); General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Eastern Consol. Util., Inc., 126 F.3d 215, 220 (3d Cir. 1997) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n3)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 2. See Powell v. Ward, 643 F.2d 924, 931 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(B).

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A).

(n7)Footnote 5. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 763-764, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) .

(n8)Footnote 6. United States v. Sumitomo Marine & Fire Ins. Co., 617 F.2d 1365, 1369-1370 (9th Cir. 1980) .

(n9)Footnote 7. Wouters v. Martin County, Fla., 9 F.3d 924, 934 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(1), (2); United States v. One 1987 BMW 325, 985 F.2d 655, 660-661 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 2. Daval Steel Prods. v. M/V Fakredine, 951 F.2d 1357, 1364 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Stookey v. Teller Training Distribs., Inc., 9 F.3d 631, 634 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Halas v. Consumer Servs., Inc., 16 F.3d 161, 165 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Tamari v. Bache & Co. (Lebanon) S.A.L., 729 F.2d 469, 472-473 (7th Cir. 1984) .

(n15)Footnote 6. Daval Steel Prods. v. M/V Fakredine, 951 F.2d 1357, 1364 (2d Cir. 1991) (subpoena is not order issued by judicial officer in resolution of dispute).

(n16)Footnote 7. Daval Steel Prods. v. M/V Fakredine, 951 F.2d 1357, 1363 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n17)Footnote 8. Avionic Co. v. General Dynamics Corp., 957 F.2d 555, 557-558 (8th Cir. 1992) .

(n18)Footnote 9. Hathcock v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 53 F.3d 36, 40-41 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 10. Malautea v. Suzuki Motor Co., 987 F.2d 1536, 1542-1543 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n20)Footnote 11. Diehl v. H.J. Heinz Co., 901 F.2d 73, 73-75 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n21)Footnote 1. United States v. 49,000 Currency, 330 F.3d 371, 376 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n22)Footnote 2. Zimmerman v. Bishop Estate, 25 F.3d 784, 790 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n23)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n24)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

(n25)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(3) (court may order more time); see, e.g., Hathcock v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 53 F.3d 36, 41-42 (4th Cir. 1995) (construing former time limits).

(n26)Footnote 6. Hathcock v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 53 F.3d 36, 41-42 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n27)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(C).

(n28)Footnote 8. Henry v. Gill Indus., Inc., 983 F.2d 943, 946 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n29)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(1).

(n30)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(i)-(vi).

(n31)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A).

(n32)Footnote 12. See In re Exxon Valdez, 102 F.3d 429, 431 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n33)Footnote 1. National Hockey League v. Metropolitan Hockey Club, Inc., 427 U.S. 639, 642-643, 96 S. Ct. 2778, 49 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1976) (per curiam).

(n34)Footnote 2. F.D.I.C. v. Conner, 20 F.3d 1376, 1383 (5th Cir. 1994) (narrowly tailored to serve necessary function).

(n35)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, Committee Note (1937).

(n36)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Marquis Theatre Corp. v. Condado Mini Cinema, 846 F.2d 86, 88 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n37)Footnote 5. Chilcutt v. United States, 4 F.3d 1313, 1324 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n38)Footnote 6. Harmon v. CSX Transp., Inc., 110 F.3d 364, 366 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n39)Footnote 7. Carlucci v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 775 F.2d 1440, 1453-1454 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n40)Footnote 8. Crown Life Ins. Co. v. Craig, 995 F.2d 1376, 1383 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n41)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(v), (vi).

(n42)Footnote 10. See ClearValue, Inc. v. Pearl River Polymers, Inc., 560 F.3d 1291, 1299 (Fed. Cir. 2009) .

(n43)Footnote 11. Wouters v. Martin County, Fla., 9 F.3d 924, 934 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n44)Footnote 12. See Crown Life Ins. Co. v. Craig, 995 F.2d 1376, 1383 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n45)Footnote 13. Bass v. Jostens, Inc., 71 F.3d 237, 241 (6th Cir. 1995) .

(n46)Footnote 14. McLeod, Alexander, Powel & Apffel v. Quarles, 894 F.2d 1482, 1486 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n47)Footnote 15. Avionic Co. v. General Dynamics Corp., 957 F.2d 555, 559 (8th Cir. 1992) .

(n48)Footnote 16. Bass v. Jostens, Inc., 71 F.3d 237, 241-242 (6th Cir. 1995) .

(n49)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Valentine v. Museum of Modern Art, 29 F.3d 47, 50 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n50)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A),(B).

(n51)Footnote 2. Wouters v. Martin County, Fla., 9 F.3d 924, 934 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n52)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(i).

(n53)Footnote 4. Commodity Futures Trading Comm'n v. Noble Metals Int'l, 67 F.3d 766, 770-772 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n54)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(ii).

(n55)Footnote 6. Jankins v. TDC Management Corp., Inc., 21 F.3d 436, 444 (D.C. Cir. 1994) .

(n56)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(iii).

(n57)Footnote 8. Marquis Theatre Corp. v. Condado Mini Cinema, 846 F.2d 86, 88 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n58)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(iv).

(n59)Footnote 10. Bell v. United States, 31 F.R.D. 32, 36 (D. Kan. 1962) .

(n60)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(v).

(n61)Footnote 12. Serra-Lugo v. Consortium-Las Marias, 271 F.3d 5, 6 (1st Cir. 2001) ; see [5][c], above (factors for court to consider to enter dismissal).

(n62)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(vi).

(n63)Footnote 14. P&G v. Haugen, 427 F.3d 727, 738-739 (10th Cir. 2005) ; see [5][c], above.

(n64)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(vii).

(n65)Footnote 16. Richmark Corp. v. Timber Falling Consultants, 959 F.2d 1468, 1479 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n66)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(C).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
III. MOTIONS AND SANCTIONS RELATED TO DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RULES

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.43

§ 15.43 Sanctions for Failure to Make Mandatory Disclosures or Supplementsn*

[1] Sanction of Preclusion

If a party fails to disclose without substantial justification any witness or information required to be disclosed pursuant to the mandatory disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a), n1 or the supplementation requirements of 26(e), n2 the failing party may not use testimony from that witness or the undisclosed information as evidence at trial, at a hearing, or in connection with a motion, unless the failure to disclose was harmless. n3 Instead of a preclusion sanction, the court on motion and after providing an opportunity to be heard, may impose other appropriate sanctions. n4

[2] Other Sanctions Available for Failure to Make Mandatory Disclosures or Supplements

In addition to or in lieu of an evidence preclusion sanction, n1 the court may impose other appropriate sanctions if a party, without substantial justification, violates its disclosure obligations pursuant to Rule 26(a) n2 or supplementation obligations pursuant to Rule 26(e), n3 and fails to show that the violation was harmless. n4 The principal reason this provision was added to the evidence preclusion rule was because preclusion of evidence is not an effective incentive to compel disclosure of information that would be helpful to an opposing party. n5

The sanctions that are authorized in addition to or instead of an evidence preclusion sanction include an order:

1. Requiring the payment of reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure to make the mandatory disclosure. n6

2. Informing the jury of the party's failure. n7

3. Directing that the matters as to which the disclosure was not made, or any other designated facts, be taken as established for the purposes of the action in accordance with the claims of the party seeking disclosure. n8

4. An order prohibiting the disobedient party from supporting or opposing designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting that party from introducing designated matters into evidence. n9

5. An order striking pleadings or parts of pleadings, staying further proceedings until the disclosure is made, dismissing the action or proceeding or any part of the action or proceeding, or entering a default judgment against the party who violated the disclosure rules. n10

[3] Sanctions Not Permitted if Failure to Disclose Was Substantially Justified

Sanctions may not be imposed if a party's failure to disclose information required by Rule 26(a) or to make supplementation required by Rule 26(e)(1) was substantially justified. n1 The rule does not provide a definition of "substantial justification." However, a party's position with respect to a discovery dispute is substantially justified if it appears that the dispute is genuine. n2 The term genuine means a dispute would be deemed genuine if reasonable attorneys, applying the relevant legal norms to the evidence, could disagree about how the dispute should be resolved. n3 For example, a party could be substantially justified in not disclosing evidence if the party could not have been expected to foresee its relevance. n4

[4] Sanction Prohibited if Failure to Disclose Harmless

The court may not imposed sanctions if a party's failure to disclose information required by Rule 26(a) or supplementation by Rule 26(e) was harmless. n1 Two examples of harmless failures to disclose are (1) the inadvertent omission from a Rule 26(a)(1) disclosure of the name of a potential witness known to all parties, and (2) the failure to list as a trial witness in a disclosure mandated by Rule 26(a)(3) a person also listed by another party. n2

Case law indicates that, while the motive or culpability of the party that failed to make the disclosure may have some bearing on a determination of harmlessness, a more significant factor is whether the omission caused other parties to suffer prejudice, n3 and if so, whether the negative effects of the nondisclosure can be remedied by ordering supplemental productions of information and by requiring the breaching party to reimburse its opponent for all the expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the breach. n4

[5] Sanctions Not Permitted for Good Faith Loss of Electronically Stored Information

There is an explicit exception to the imposition of sanctions when a party fails to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system, unless there are exceptional circumstances. n1 This provision applies to information lost due to the routine operation of an information system only if the operation was in good faith. Good faith means that a party may not avoid sanctions by allowing the operation of the system to continue in order to destroy specific stored information that it is required to preserve. n2

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 37.60-37.63 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1), (2).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(A)-(C), see also [2], below (discussion of other available sanctions).

(n6)Footnote 1. See [1], above.

(n7)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)-(3).

(n8)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1),(2).

(n9)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n10)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(A).

(n12)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(B).

(n13)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(i).

(n14)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(ii).

(n15)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(a)(iii)-(vi).

(n16)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n17)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n18)Footnote 3. Nguyen v. IBP, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 675, 680 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n20)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1).

(n21)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n22)Footnote 3. Newman v. GHS Osteopathic, Inc., 60 F.3d 153, 156 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n23)Footnote 4. Nguyen v. IBP, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 675, 682 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e).

(n25)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

26 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
III. MOTIONS AND SANCTIONS RELATED TO DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RULES

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.44

§ 15.44 Sanctions for Unreasonable Failure to Admitn*

[1] Prerequisites for the Imposition of Sanctions

If a party fails to admit what is requested under Rule 36, and if the requesting party later proves a document to be genuine or the matter true, the requesting party may move that the party who failed to admit pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred in making that proof. n1 The court must make that order unless any one of the following is true:

1. The request was held objectionable under Rule 36(a); n2 this exception is available only if: the party who failed to make the admission made a timely objection, the requesting party filed a pretrial motion to determine the sufficiency of the objection, and the trial court ruled that the objection was substantial. n3

2. The admission requested was not of substantial importance; n4 "substantial importance" means that the admission would be material to the disposition of the case. n5

3. The party failing to admit had a reasonable ground to believe that it might prevail on the matter; n6 The true test for determining whether this exception applies is not whether a party would prevail at trial, but whether the party acted reasonably in believing that he or she might prevail. n7

4. There was any other good reason for the failure to admit. n8 For example, a good reason would be that to admit or deny the request, the party would have been required to undertake extraordinary efforts to gather and analyze a substantial amount of information that they did not have. n9

The purpose of this provision allowing expense shifting sanctions for unreasonably denying or unreasonably refusing either to admit or deny a legitimate request for admission is to increase parties' incentives to respond reasonably and in good faith to appropriate requests for admissions. Admissions are extremely valuable because they eliminate unnecessary proof at trial, streamline discovery and motion practice, as well as settlement, and reduce many types of pretrial expenses, most obviously in discovery. n10

[2] Court Not Required to Impose Sanctions if Prerequisites Are Met

The court must make an order imposing sanctions only when the prerequisites are met. Thus, sanctions may be imposed only after the requesting party actually proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter that was addressed in the request for admission. n1 Therefore, the court will refuse to award expense shifting sanctions to the plaintiff even though the plaintiff prevailed on the merits, and the defendant refused to make an admission, if the defendant stipulated to the matter at trial, and the plaintiff had never proven the subject of the requests for admission. n2

Expense shifting sanctions for unreasonably denying or unreasonably refusing either to admit or deny a legitimate request for admission are limited to the reasonable expenses incurred in making the proof of the matter that the opposing party, without justification, did not admit, including reasonable attorney's fees. n3 In determining the amount of the expenses that the failure to admit caused the requesting party to incur, courts will require a sufficient relationship between the expenses claimed and the failure to admit. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 37.70-37.76 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. SEC v. Happ, 392 F.3d 12, 33-34 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(C).

(n8)Footnote 7. Washington State Dep't of Transp. v. Natural Gas Co., 59 F.3d 793, 805-806 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(D).

(n10)Footnote 9. Baird v. Consolidated City of Indianapolis, 830 F. Supp. 1183, 1189-1190 (S.D. Ind. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See Armour v. Knowles, 512 F.3d 147, 154 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n12)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2).

(n13)Footnote 2. Board of Dirs., Water's Edge v. Anden Group, 136 F.R.D. 100, 105 (E.D. Va. 1991) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2); see generally Davis v. Noufal, 142 F.R.D. 258, 259 n.2 (D.D.C. 1992) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Marchand v. Mercy Med. Ctr., 22 F.3d 933, 939 (9th Cir. 1994) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
III. MOTIONS AND SANCTIONS RELATED TO DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RULES

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.45

§ 15.45 Sanctions for Failure to Appear at Deposition, Respond to Interrogatories, or Requests for Production or Inspectionn*

[1] Sanctionable Conduct

A party (or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a party) may be sanctioned for failing to do any of the following:

1. To appear before the officer who is to take a deposition. n1 Most courts also hold that sanctions may also be imposed when a party appears at the deposition, but either refuses to answer any questions, or without excuse provides completely inadequate responses to questions that should have been anticipated. n2

2. To serve answers or objections to interrogatories submitted pursuant to Rule 33. n3 A compete failure to respond to interrogatories is not necessary for the imposition of sanctions. n4 Rather, the court may impose sanctions if the responding party has made evasive or incomplete answers to proper interrogatories that impede discovery, or if the responding party has exhibited bad faith. n5

3. To serve a written response to a request for production or inspection submitted pursuant to Rule 34. n6 Some courts hold that a compete failure to respond to requests for inspection or production is not necessary for the imposition of sanctions. n7

Sanctions may be imposed to punish a party's failure to appear for deposition, or to respond to interrogatories or a request for production and inspection, even if the failure was not willful or in bad faith. n8

[2] Sanctions Not Permitted for Good Faith Loss of Electronically Stored Information

There is an exception to the imposition of sanctions when a party fails to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system, unless there are exceptional circumstances. n1 This provision applies to information lost due to the routine operation of an information system only if the operation was in good faith. Good faith means that a party may not avoid sanctions by allowing the operation of the system to continue in order to destroy specific stored information that it is required to preserve. n2

[3] Sanctions Not Permitted During Pending Motion for Protective Order

If the matter that underlies a party's failure to appear for deposition or to respond to interrogatories or a request for inspection is subject to a pending motion for a protective order as provided by Rule 26(c), that failure may be excused on the ground that the discovery sought is objectionable. n1 The purpose of this provision is to make clear that a party may not properly remain completely silent even when the party regards a notice to take his or her deposition or a set of interrogatories or requests to inspect as improper and objectionable. If the party desires not to appear or not to respond, he or she must apply for a protective order. Although the pendency of a motion for protective order may be urged as an excuse for not responding to a discovery probe, that source of possible excuse disappears once the motion is denied. n2

[4] Sanctions Not Permitted for Failure to Respond Unless Movant Has Attempted Conference With Adversary

A motion for sanctions based on a party's failure to serve answers or objections to interrogatories, or a written response to a request for inspection, must include a certification that the moving party has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the party failing to answer or respond in an effort to obtain a response without court action. n1 Thus, the court may not consider a motion for Rule 37(d) sanctions unless the moving party has included the required certification. n2 This exception does not apply with respect to sanctions for failure to attend a deposition. n3

[5] Types of Sanctions That May Be Imposed

The district court have considerable broad discretion in determining whether to impose Rule 37(d) non-monetary sanctions or monetary sanctions or both. n1 Sanctions are not mandatory, even after finding that a party, without substantial justification, failed to appear for a deposition or to serve answers or objections to interrogatories or a written response to a request for inspection because the language of Rule 37(d) is permissive. n2 Similarly, once the district court decides that non-monetary sanctions are appropriate, the court has broad discretion in determining the type of sanction to be imposed. n3 These principles are reflected in the fact that appellate courts apply an abuse of discretion standard in reviewing Rule 37(d) sanctions awards. n4 For discussion of monetary sanctions, also referred to as expensive shifting sanctions, see [6], below.

The primary non-monetary sanctions authorized under Rule 37(d) for a party's failure to appear for deposition or to serve answers or objections to interrogatories or a written response to a request for inspection, are the various sanctions included in Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi). n5 In consideration of the fact that each of those sanctions could potentially affect litigation of the merits of the case, trial and appellate courts must conduct the same analysis as they would to determine whether any of those measures are appropriate under Rule 37(b) for a party's failure to comply with a discovery order. n6

[6] Court May Impose Expense Shifting Sanctions

Instead of, or in addition to, any non-monetary sanction order, the court must require that a party that fails to appear for deposition or to serve answers or objections to interrogatories or a written response to a request for inspection, or the attorney advising that party, or both, to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified, or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. The amount of expense shifting sanctions is expressly limited to the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the discovery failure. n1

These monetary or expense shifting sanctions are considered mandatory, unless the party to be sanctioned can show that its "failure was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust." n2 n3

The burden of establishing "substantial justification" is on the party who failed to appear for deposition, or to serve answers or objections to interrogatories or a written response to a request for inspection. n4 Similarly the burden of demonstrating other circumstances that make an award of expenses unjust is on the party that failed to respond to the discovery request. The focus of these inquiries is on the original failure to respond to the discovery request, and not on subsequent efforts by the party or the party's attorney to defend against the motion for sanctions, or to avoid dismissal. n5

[7] Procedural Considerations

[a] Motion Must be Filed in Court Where Action is Pending

A motion for sanctions based on a party's failure to appear for deposition or failure to serve answers or objections to interrogatories or a written response to a request for inspection, must be brought in the court where the action is pending. n1 The court where the action is pending is the appropriate jurisdiction to hear the motion, even if the failure physically occurred in a different jurisdiction, because Rule 37(d) sanctions may be imposed only against a party or a party's attorney, and the court in which an action is pending must retain the power to discipline misconduct by parties who are using that court to for litigation of their disputes. n2

[b] Time for Filing Motion

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not specify time limits for parties to file motions for sanctions based on a party's failure to appear for deposition, or failure to serve answers or objections to interrogatories or a written response to a request for inspection. n3 However, courts have acknowledged that the motion must be made within a reasonable time after the alleged failure. Thus, the longer the delay after the failure, the less likely the court will grant the motion. This rule is based on the purpose of the sanctions, and as a deterrent, a sanction would be ineffective if not imposed until long after the misconduct occurred. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 37.70-37.76 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(i).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Estrada v. Rowland, 69 F.3d 405, 406 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Thomas Consol. Indus. v. Herbst, 456 F.3d 719, 725 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 5. *Evenflo Co. v. Hantec Agents Ltd., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36342, at *4-5 (S.D. Ohio 2006) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii).

(n8)Footnote 7. Hathcock v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 53 F.3d 36, 40 (4th Cir. 1995) ; Coane v. Ferrara Pan Candy Co., 898 F.2d 1030, 1031 n.1 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d), Committee note to 1970 Amendments.

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(e); see Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) (electronically stored information includes all information recorded by electronic means, such as computer data files, program files, backup and archival tapes, temporary files, and e-mail messages and files).

(n11)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(2).

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(B).

(n15)Footnote 2. Blue Grass Steel, Inc. v. Miller Bldg. Corp., 162 F.R.D. 493, 495 (E.D. Pa. 1995) (plaintiff did respond after motion for sanctions was filed).

(n16)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(B); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(A)(i); see also Grand Oaks, Inc. v. Anderson, 175 F.R.D. 247, 250 (N.D. Miss. 1997) (district court specifically rejected argument that certification requirement applies to sanctions for failure to appear for deposition).

(n17)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(3).

(n18)Footnote 2. Marx v. Kelly, Hart & Hallman, P.C., 929 F.2d 8, 10 (1st Cir. 1991) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1),(3).

(n19)Footnote 3. Marx v. Kelly, Hart & Hallman, P.C., 929 F.2d 8, 10 (1st Cir. 1991) (choice of sanction lies within sound discretion of trial court).

(n20)Footnote 4. See Telluride Management Solutions, Inc. v. Telluride Inv. Group, 55 F.3d 463, 465-467 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(3); see § 15.42[5](discussion of Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi)).

(n22)Footnote 6. Woodstock Ventures LC v. Perry, 164 F.R.D. 321, 322-323 (N.D.N.Y. 1996) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b); see also § 15.42[5].

(n23)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(3).

(n24)Footnote 2. Lockette v. American Broad. Cos., Inc., 118 F.R.D. 88, 90-91 (N.D. Ill. 1987) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(3).

(n25)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(3).

(n26)Footnote 4. Telluride Management Solutions, Inc. v. Telluride Inv. Group, 55 F.3d 463, 466 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n27)Footnote 5. Hyde & Drath v. Baker, 24 F.3d 1162, 1171 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n28)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(a).

(n29)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(3).

(n30)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d)(1)(a).

(n31)Footnote 4. See United States v. Kungys, 575 F. Supp. 1208, 1209 (D.N.J. 1983) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 15 DISCOVERY
III. MOTIONS AND SANCTIONS RELATED TO DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RULES

2-15 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 15.46

§ 15.46 Sanctions for Failure to Participate in Discovery Plann*

[1] Court Has Discretion to Impose Sanctions for Failure to Participate

If a party or a party's attorney fails to participate in good faith in the development and submission of a proposed discovery plan as required by Rule 26(f), the court may require the party or attorney to pay to any other party the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure. n1 A court considering imposing an expense shifting sanction under Rule 37(f) for failing to participate in good faith in the development of a discovery plan must afford the person who would be sanctioned an opportunity to be heard. n2

The language of this provision is permissive, not mandatory. Thus, a trial court has broad discretion to decide whether to impose this sanction, even if the failure was in bad faith. The only sanction authorized by this provision is monetary, and the monetary sanction may not exceed the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure. n3 However, a violation of a pretrial order directing the party or attorney to participate in the development of a discovery plan could subject the disobedient party or attorney to much more strict sanctions pursuant to Rule 16(f), which governs failure to obey a pretrial or scheduling order, and Rule 37(b)(2), which governs failure to comply with a discovery order. n4

[2] Sanctionable Failure to Participate in Mandatory Discovery Planning

If a party or a party's attorney fails to participate in good faith in the development and submission of a proposed discovery plan as required by Rule 26(f), the court may require the party or attorney to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure. n1 The development of discovery plans is not optional, and is not dependent on the entry of a court order or a party's request. Rather, except in actions exempted by local rule or court order, parties must participate in the development of a proposed discovery plan in every civil action, which is expected to reflect the parties' views and proposals concerning all of the following:

1. Any changes that should be made in the timing, form, or requirement for automatic, mandatory disclosures under Rule 26(a), including a statement of when initial disclosures were made, or will be made. n2

2. Any subjects on which discovery may be needed, when discovery should be completed, and whether discovery should be conducted in phases or be limited to or focused on particular issues. n3

3. Any issues about disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information, including the form or forms in which it should be produced. n4

4. Any issues about claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation materials; n5

5. Any changes that should be made in the limitations on discovery imposed under the federal rules or local rules. n6

6. Any other orders that the court should issue under Rule 26(c) (regarding limitations on discovery) or under Rule 16(b) (contents of scheduling order) and 16(c) (pretrial conference matters). n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 37.110-37.111 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(f); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(f).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(f); see Star Scientific, Inc. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 174 F. Supp. 2d 388, 397 (D. Md. 2001) (court approved of and granted motion for order to compel defendant to participate in Rule 26(f) discovery conference).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2); see, e.g., United States for use of Wiltec Guam, Inc. v. Kahaluu Constr. Co., 857 F.2d 600, 602-603 & n.3 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(f); see [1], above.

(n7)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(A).

(n8)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(B).

(n9)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(C); see Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) (electronically stored information includes information such as data files, program files, backup tapes, voice mail files, and e-mail messages and files).

(n10)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(D).

(n11)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(E).

(n12)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(3)(F).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 16.syn

§ 16.syn Synopsis to Chapter 16: JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

§ 16.01 Use and Purpose of Judgment on Pleadings

§ 16.02 Timing of Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

§ 16.03 Initiation of Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

§ 16.04 Hearing to Determine Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

§ 16.05 Standard Used in Decision by Trial Court to Grant or Deny Judgment on Pleadings

[1] No Issues of Material Fact Presented

[2] Motion Equivalent to Motion to Dismiss

§ 16.06 Motion Treated as Motion for Summary Judgment

§ 16.07 Appeal of Grant or Denial of Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

30 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 16.01

§ 16.01 Use and Purpose of Judgment on Pleadingsn*

After the pleadings are closed, any party may move the court for a "judgment on the pleadings," n1 which is a device for use by a court when the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law considering all allegations in the pleadings of the non-movant to be true. n2 In effect, when a court grants a motion for judgment on the pleadings it decides that it is beyond doubt that the nonmoving party can prove no set of facts in support of his or her claim which would entitle the nonmoving party to relief, even after accepting all allegations in the pleadings, and drawing all inferences in favor of the nonmoving party. n3 Thus, when the nonmoving party is the plaintiff, the court will accept all well-pleaded allegations in the complaint as true and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. n4 The court may not grant the motion unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the claims in the complaint that would entitle the plaintiff to relief. n5

A party may file a motion for judgment on the pleadings, n6 or the court may act sua sponte. n7 In determining the motion, the court may consider any of the pleadings, including the complaint, the answer, and any other documents attached to them. n8

A motion for judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c) n9 and a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), n10 are very similar because the same standard generally applies to either. n11 The primary difference between the two motionsis timing. n12 If a motion is filed before the answer, the court may treat it as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6). n13 On the other hand, if a motion designated as a motion to dismiss is filed after the pleadings have closed, it should be treated as a motion for judgment on the pleadings. n14 This practice is also supported by Rule 12(h)(2), which expressly allows a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to be made by motion for judgment on the pleadings. n15

A motion for judgment on the pleadings is also similar to a motion for summary judgment, except that in deciding a summary judgment motion the court may consider matters outside the pleadings if they are not otherwise excluded by the court; in such cases, the motion must be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56. n16 In that case, the trial court must give the parties a reasonable opportunity to present all the material that is pertinent to the motion. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. Forseth v. Village of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) ; McGann v. Ernst & Young, 102 F.3d 390, 391 (9th Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1181 (1997) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Deravin v. Kerik, 335 F.3d 195, 200 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Forseth v. Village of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Cirino v. Apfel, 34 F. Supp. 2d 861, 862-863 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (when firefighter sought social security disability benefits, claiming he suffered from sleep disorder and hypertension, reviewing court found plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of claim that firefighter was disabled under Social Security Act).

(n7)Footnote 6. Cirino v. Apfel, 34 F. Supp. 2d 861, 862-863 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (both parties brought motions for judgment on pleadings).

(n8)Footnote 7. Ledford v. Sullivan, 105 F.3d 354, 358 (7th Cir. 1997) (affirming sua sponte dismissal of prisoner's claim for violation of due process rights because prison officials temporarily withheld his medication; court found that because prisoner lacked substantive property right in medication, defendant was entitled to judgment on pleadings).

(n9)Footnote 8. Northern Ind. Gun & Outdoor Shows v. City of South Bend, 163 F.3d 449, 452 (7th Cir. 1998) (court may consider letters as well as other documents such as affidavits, contracts, and loan documentation); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c) (copy of instrument attached as exhibit is part of pleading for all purposes).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Narvarte v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 969 F. Supp. 10, 11 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (when defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state claim was filed after answer, court treated motion as one for judgment on pleadings, although court applies same standard to both motions).

(n13)Footnote 12. See National Assn. of Pharm. Mfrs., Inc. v. Ayerst Labs., Div. of/and Am. Home Prods. Corp., 850 F.2d 904, 909 fn.2 (2d Cir. 1988) (although defendant should have named motion one for judgment on pleadings because notice of motion was filed after defendant had filed answer to complaint, under Rule 12(h)(2), court may treat motion as motion to dismiss); Joe Hand Promotions v. Lott, 971 F. Supp. 1058, 1060 (E.D. La. 1997) (when defendants filed motion to dismiss after answer to complaint, district court treated motion as motion for judgment on pleadings).

(n14)Footnote 13. Seber v. Unger, 881 F. Supp. 323, 325 n.2 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (court noted that because defendant's motion essentially served same purpose as a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, it would adopt common practice of treating the premature Rule 12(c) motion as a Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

(n15)Footnote 14. National Assn. of Pharm. Mfrs., Inc. v. Ayerst Labs., Div. of/and Am. Home Prods. Corp., 850 F.2d 904, 909 n.2 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(B); see Christy v. We the People Forms & Serv. Ctrs., United States, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 235, 238 (D. N.J. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n17)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d).

(n18)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); see also § 16.07.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 16.02

§ 16.02 Timing of Motion for Judgment on Pleadingsn*

Rule 12(c) expressly provides that a party may make a motion for judgment on the pleadings only after the pleadings are closed. n1 The time when pleadings are closed is controlled by Rule 7(a), which indicates that, unless a reply is ordered or permitted by the court, pleadings close when the parties have filed the last of the following pleadings: n1.1 an answer to a complaint, an answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim, an answer to a crossclaim, and an answer to a third-party complaint. n2

In any event, a motion for judgment on the pleadings may not be filed before the answer. If the pleadings have not closed because the defendant has failed to answer, the plaintiff's remedy is to file a motion for default under Rule 55, not one for judgment on the pleadings. n3 Furthermore, if a motion for judgment on the pleadings is filed by the defendant before answering, the court should treat it as a motion to dismiss. n4

Once the pleadings are closed, the rule does not provide a specific time limit, but the motion must be made within such time as not to delay the trial. n5 Furthermore, the court may exercise its discretion under Rule 12(i) to defer the hearing or determination of the motion until the trial. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n3)Footnote 1.1. See Doe v. United States, 419 F.3d 1058, 1061 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n5)Footnote 3. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Local Union 1035, 973 F. Supp. 270, 272 n.2 (D. Conn. 1997) , aff'd without op., 175 F.3d 1007 (2d Cir. 1999) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 55.

(n6)Footnote 4. Seber v. Unger, 881 F. Supp. 323, 325 n.2 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c); Wolfe v. George, 385 F. Supp. 2d 1004, 1008 (N.D. Cal. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(i); McIntosh v. Antonino, 71 F.3d 29, 38 (1st Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 16.03

§ 16.03 Initiation of Motion for Judgment on Pleadingsn*

Either party may move for judgment on the pleadings. n1 In the typical case the moving party is the defendant, and the court must accept all well-pleaded allegations in the complaint as true and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. n2

On the other hand, on the rarer occasions when the moving party is the plaintiff, the court will accept all allegations in the answer or other responsive pleading as true and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the defendant. n3 Additionally, the court may, sua sponte, grant a judgment on the pleadings to a party even though the party has made no motion. n3.1 For example, in one case, the court granted a motion for judgment on the pleadings sua sponte to the defendants on a prisoner's due process claim for temporarily withholding of his medication because the prisoner lacked any substantive property right in the medication. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c); Qwest Communs. Corp. v. City of Berkeley, 208 F.R.D. 288, 291 (N.D. Cal. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Forseth v. Village of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) ; see Toy v. United States, 263 F. Supp. 2d 1, 4 (D.D.C. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Ramsey v. Amfac, Inc., 960 F. Supp. 1424, 1426 (N.D. Cal. 1997) (plaintiff may move for judgment on pleadings).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Deravin v. Kerik, 335 F.3d 195, 200 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Ledford v. Sullivan, 105 F.3d 354, 358 (7th Cir. 1997) ; see Flora v. Home Fed. Sav. and Loan Ass'n, 685 F.2d 209, 211 (7th Cir. 1982) (affirming sua sponte dismissal because one party clearly entitled to judgment as matter of law and both parties had opportunity to be heard).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 16.04

§ 16.04 Hearing to Determine Motion for Judgment on Pleadingsn*

If a party makes a motion, the court has the option to hear and determine the motion for judgment on the pleadings before trial. Alternatively, the court may order that themotion be deferred until trial. n1 n2 A court may use the preliminary hearing as a method of disposing of a meritless case at an early stage of the litigation, and thus conserve judicial resources. If the case involves factual or legal questions, however, the court should delay consideration of the motion until trial rather than determine the merits of the case before all material evidence is presented. Such deferment will also provide the parties with the necessary time to complete pretrial discovery and more completely analyze the issues in the case before the trier of fact and the court consider the case on the merits. n3

At the hearing, the court must assume as true all of the well-pleaded factual allegations in the opposing party's pleadings and must assume as false all contravening assertions in the movant's pleadings. n4 Thus, for purposes of the motion for judgment on the pleadings only, the moving party is in effect conceding the truthfulness of the factual allegations in the opposition's pleading; however, the moving party is not conceding matters that would not be admissible in evidence at trial or allegations that constitute conclusions of law. n5

In addition to assuming the truthfulness of the factual allegations for purposes of the motion, the court will draw all reasonable inferences from these facts in favor of the nonmoving party. n6 Inferences drawn from the pleadings in favor of the nonmoving party must be reasonable, n7 and the court may not make inferences contrary to the clear and unambiguous words or actions of the parties or ones inconsistent with matters that are the subject of the judicial notice doctrine. n8 Furthermore, the court may not draw unwarranted factual inferences. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(i); McIntosh v. Antonino, 71 F.3d 29, 38(1st Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 2. [Reserved].

(n4)Footnote 3. Porous Media Corp. v. Pall Corp., 186 F.3d 1077, 1081 (8th Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. United States v. $3,148,884.40 United States Currency, 76 F. Supp. 2d 1063, 1065 (C.D. Cal. 1999) ; see Hal Roach Studios, Inc. v. Richard Feiner & Co., 883 F.2d 1429, 1436 (9th Cir. 1989) (allegations of nonmoving party must be accepted as true, while the allegations of moving party that have been denied are assumed to be false).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Northern Ind. Gun & Outdoor Shows v. City of South Bend, 163 F.3d 449, 452 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Forseth v. Village of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Withrow v. Donnelly, 333 F. Supp. 2d 108, 109-110 (W.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Oh v. AT & T Corp. 76 F. Supp. 2d 551, 554 (D.N.J. 1999) (while court will accept well-pleaded allegations as true for purposes of motion, it may not accept unsupported conclusions, unwarranted inferences, or sweeping legal conclusions cast in form of factual allegations).

(n10)Footnote 9. Mixon v. Ohio, 193 F.3d 389, 400 (6th Cir. 1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 16.05

§ 16.05 Standard Used in Decision by Trial Court to Grant or Deny Judgment on Pleadingsn*

[1] No Issues of Material Fact Presented

The trial court may grant a judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Rule 12(c) only if it appears beyond doubt that the nonmoving party cannot prove any facts that would support his or her claim for relief, after it has accepted all well-pleaded allegations in the pleading as true, and drawn all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party. n1 The requirement that the court must view the facts presented in the pleadings, and the inferences drawn from the facts, in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, is designed to ensure that the rights of the nonmoving party are decided as fully and fairly on a Rule 12(c) motion as if there had been a trial on the merits. n2 Therefore, any issue of material fact in a case will preclude a judgment on the pleadings in favor of either party. n3

As with the Rule 12(b)(6) motion, n4 under Rule 12(c) the court must accept the nonmovant's allegations as true. n5 The trial court should grant judgment on the pleadings only if the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n6 However, the court is not required to ignore facts specified in the complaint that undermine the plaintiff's claim, nor is the court bound by assertions in the complaint that are merely unsupported conclusions of law. n7

When no reply is required by an answer, a defendant may not obtain a judgment on the pleadings based on the allegations in the answer, because under Rule 8(d) such allegations are deemed denied. n8 Similarly, a plaintiff may not move for judgment on the pleadings where the answer raises issues of fact that would defeat recovery, if proved. n9 Furthermore, courts have rejected the assertion that when both parties movefor judgment, it becomes a question of law to be decided on the facts on file. n10

[2] Motion Equivalent to Motion to Dismiss

If a motion for judgment on the pleadings is filed by the defendant before it files the answer, the court may treat it as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) because a Rule 12(c) motion is analyzed under the same standards as a Rule 12(b)(6) motion n1 and is essentially serving the same purpose as a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. n1.1 In such a situation, the ground for the motion for judgment on the pleadings is the nonmovant's failure to state a claim and the nonmovant may include in its opposition papers a request to amend the pleadings if they are found deficient. Consequently, it has been suggested that a slightly more detailed analysis than usual is necessary and the court must distinguish between failure to state a claim for substantive reasons and failure to state a claim for procedural reasons. When the moving party's challenge to the nonmovant's claim is substantive, the movant is entitled to judgment on the pleadings. n2 On the other hand, if the challenge to the nonmovant's claim is procedural, the nonmoving party should be afforded an opportunity to amend the pleadings, provided the party meets the ordinary requirements for amendment. n3

Because a motion for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is analogous to a motion for judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c), n4 the extensive authority on Rule 12(b)(6) motions may be applied by analogy to the Rule 12(c) motion. In fact, many cases frequently discuss both motions. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Forseth v. Village of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n3)Footnote 2. American Fire & Cas. Co. v. Broeren Russo Constr., Inc., 54 F. Supp. 2d 842, 845 (C.D. Ill. 1999 (Rule 12(c) judgment on pleadings is designed to provide a method for disposing of cases when material facts are not in dispute, and a judgment on the merits can be achieved in such motion by focusing on the content of pleadings and any facts of which court could take judicial notice).

(n4)Footnote 3. Hellyer Communications, Inc. v. WRC Properties, Inc., 888 F. Supp. 94 (S.D. Ind. 1995) (in tenant's action to recover rent overpayments, issue of material fact about when tenant should have discovered that tenant was paying for space that it did not occupy precluded judgment on pleadings for landlord).

(n5)Footnote 4. See [2], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Rivera v. Heyman, 157 F.3d 101, 103 (2d Cir. 1998) (court must accept all allegations in complaint as true, draw all inferences in favor of plaintiff, and grant motion only if it appears beyond doubt that plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of claim that would entitle plaintiff to relief).

(n7)Footnote 6. Latecoere Int'l, Inc. v. United States Dep't of the Navy, 19 F.3d 1342, 1356-1357 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Northern Ind. Gun & Outdoor Shows v. City of South Bend, 163 F.3d 449, 452 (7th Cir. 1998) (court not obliged to ignore any facts set forth in complaint that undermine plaintiff's claim or to assign any weight to unsupported conclusions of law).

(n9)Footnote 8. Parker v. DeKalb Chrysler Plymouth, 459 F. Supp. 184, 186-187 (N.D. Ga. 1978) , aff. 673 F.2d 1178 (11th Cir. 1982) (when defendant moves for judgment on pleadings, fact allegations of complaint must be taken as true, but those of answer are taken as true only if and to extent that they have not denied or do not conflict with those of complaint; however, because plaintiff was not required or permitted to reply to answer, averments in answer were deemed denied, and defendant was not entitled to judgment on pleadings).

(n10)Footnote 9. Hal Roach Studios v. Richard Feiner & Co., 883 F.2d 1429, 1437 (9th Cir. 1989) (when defendant denied claim that plaintiff was predecessor in interest of licensor, district court erred in granting plaintiff'smotion for judgment on pleadings because in light of pleadings plaintiff had to be considered stranger to license agreement with no legal interest in action).

(n11)Footnote 10. See M. Snower & Co. v. United States, 140 F.2d 367, 371 (7th Cir. 1944) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Ziemba v. Wezner, 366 F.3d 161, 163 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n13)Footnote 1.1. Seber v. Unger, 881 F. Supp. 323, 325 n.2 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Bushnell Corp. v. ITT Corp., 973 F. Supp. 1276, 1282 (D. Kan. 1997) (when opposition to claim is substantive, motion complies with usual purpose of a motion under Rule 12(c), and judgment in favor of defendant is appropriate if challenge is successful).

(n15)Footnote 3. Bushnell Corp. v. ITT Corp., 973 F. Supp. 1276, 1284-1288 (D. Kan. 1997) (when defendant moved for judgment on pleadings, court granted motion with respect to some claims because defendant's challenge to them was substantive, but permitted plaintiff to amend complaint as to other claims that were simply insufficiently pleaded); see Miracle of Life, LLC v. N. Am. Van Lines, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 2d 494, 498 (D.S.C. 2005) (after denial of Rule 12(c) motion, court allowed amendment of complaint to correct deficiencies).

(n16)Footnote 4. Maggette v. Dalsheim, 709 F.2d 800, 802 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n17)Footnote 5. Smith v. City of Philadelphia, 345 F. Supp. 2d 482, 485 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 16.06

§ 16.06 Motion Treated as Motion for Summary Judgmentn*

The trial court has discretion to consider matters and documents outside the pleadings, but if it does so, the court must treat the motion as one for summary judgment under Rule 56. n1 The court must give all parties notice of the change to a motion for summary judgment and a reasonable opportunity to present all material that would be pertinent to the motion by Rule 56. n2 The essential inquiry when determining if the district court correctly changed a motion to dismiss or for judgment on the pleadings into a motion for summary judgment is whether the nonmovant should reasonably have recognized the possibility that the motion might be changed into one for summary judgment or was taken by surprise and deprived of a reasonable opportunity to present or challenge alleged facts outside the pleadings. n3

The court need not provide notice of a change to a motion for summary judgment if it does not actually consider matters outside the pleadings. n4 Furthermore, a court need not convert a motion for judgment on the pleadings to one for summary judgment nor provide the parties with an opportunity to present material pertinent to a motion for summary judgment, nor provide additional discovery time, when the court is considering matters outside the pleadings that have not been "presented" by a party. For example, a court may permissively consider factors outside the pleadings when deciding whether a statute bears a rational relationship to a legitimate state purpose. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see Rubin v. Schottenstein, Zox & Dunn, 110 F.3d 1247, 1253 (6th Cir. 1997) (when trial court considered matters outside pleadings in ruling on motion for judgment on pleadings, appellate court must apply summary judgment standard of review, regardless of how district court styled motion).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Krijn v. Pogue Simone Real Estate Co., 896 F.2d 687, 689 (2d Cir. 1990) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 3. In re G. & A. Books, Inc., 770 F.2d 288, 295 (2d Cir. 1985) (all parties to be given reasonable opportunity to present all material).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see Cleveland v. Caplaw Enters., 448 F.3d 518, 521 (2d Cir. 2006) (district court did not convert motion for judgment on pleadings to motion for summary judgment, even though matters outside pleadings were presented by parties, when court explicitly refused to consider those matters).

(n6)Footnote 5. Mixon v. Ohio, 193 F.3d 389, 400 (6th Cir. 1999) ; see Heller v. Doe, 509 U.S. 312, 319-21, 113 S. Ct. 2637, 2642-43, 125 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1993) (state statutes subject to rational basis review are presumed valid and should be upheld if there is any reasonably conceivable state of facts that could provide a rational basis for the classification).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 16 JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

2-16 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 16.07

§ 16.07 Appeal of Grant or Denial of Motion for Judgment on Pleadingsn*

If the trial court grants a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the judgment is immediately appealable as a final judgment on the merits of the case within the meaning of Rule 54. n1 On the other hand, if the trial court denies a motion for judgment on the pleadings, it does not constitute a final judgment on the merits, and the moving party does not have a right to immediately appeal the district court's decision. n2 When the court denies the motion, the lawsuit merely proceeds to a trial or otherdetermination on the merits. If the nonmovant then prevails at trial, the movant may raise the denial of the movant's Rule 12(c) motion as error on appeal, provided that the movant preserves the right to appeal and does not expressly or impliedly waive objections to the pleadings. n3

When a party appeals the district court's grant of a motion for judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c), the court of appeals reviews the judgment de novo, n4 in the same manner that it would review the grant of a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6). Thus, in its decision on review, the appellate court must accept all well-pleaded allegations in the complaint as true and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff; the appellate court will affirm only if it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff cannot prove any facts that would support his or her claim for relief. n5 For example, when a judgment on the pleadings has been granted to the defendants, the appellate court on review must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs and must determine whether the plaintiffs undoubtedly can prove no set of facts in support of the claims that would entitle them to relief. The appellate court must accept all of the plaintiffs' factual allegations as true but need not accept as true legal conclusions or unwarranted factual inferences. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. GATX Leasing Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 64 F.3d 1112, 1114 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Roth v. Veteran's Admin. of United States, 856 F.2d 1401, 1403 fn.1 (9th Cir. 1988) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n4)Footnote 3. Sinclair Refining Co. v. Stevens, 123 F.2d 186 (8th Cir. 1941) , cert. denied, 315 U.S. 804 (1941) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Mixon v. Ohio, 193 F.3d 389, 399 (6th Cir. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Forseth v. Village of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Mixon v. Ohio, 193 F.3d 389, 400 (6th Cir. 1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 17.syn

§ 17.syn Synopsis to Chapter 17: SUMMARY JUDGMENT

§ 17.01 Function of Summary Judgment in Federal Litigation

§ 17.02 Purposes of Summary Judgment

§ 17.03 Comparison of Summary Judgment with Other Motions to Dispose of Claim or Defense

[1] Motions Which Challenge Power of Court to Hear Case

[2] Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law

[3] Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

[4] Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

§ 17.04 Jury Trial Considerations

§ 17.05 Any Party May Make Motion for Summary Judgment

§ 17.06 Summary Judgment Practice Under Local Rules

§§ 17.07-17.19 [Reserved]

§ 17.20 Statement of Standard

§ 17.21 Absence of Genuine Dispute of Fact

[1] Movant Must Establish Nonexistence of Genuine Dispute of Fact

[2] Nonmovant Must Establish Existence of Genuine Dispute of Fact by Substantial Evidence

§ 17.22 Materiality of Factual Issue

§ 17.23 Entitlement to Judgment as Matter of Law

§ 17.24 Court May Not Weigh Evidence to Determine Summary Judgment Motion

§§ 17.25-17.39 [Reserved]

§ 17.40 Formal Motion Required

§ 17.41 Response by Nonmovant

§ 17.42 Reply by Movant

§ 17.43 Summary Judgment Record

[1] Contents of Record

[2] Use of Record

§ 17.44 Affidavits in Support of Motion or Response

[1] Use of Affidavits or Declarations

[2] Requirement for Affidavits and Declarations

[a] Must be Sworn or Subscribed as True Under Penalty of Perjury

[b] Content Must Be Based on Personal Knowledge of Competent Person

[c] Content Required To Be Admissible at Trial

[d] Affidavit of Expert

[3] Effect of Conflict in Affidavits

§ 17.45 Other Supporting Documentation

[1] Pleadings

[2] Depositions

[3] Interrogatories

[4] Admissions

[5] Stipulations

[6] Facts Subject to Judicial Notice

§ 17.46 Objection to Supporting Documentation

§§ 17.47-17.59 [Reserved]

§ 17.60 Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment

§ 17.61 Summary Judgment Initiated by Court

[1] Options For Court

[2] Grant of Summary Judgment to Nonmovant

[3] Grant of Summary Judgment on Grounds Not Raised in Motion

[4] Procedural Considerations

§ 17.62 Time Requirements

[1] Requirements for Filing and Responding to Motion

[2] Request by Nonmovant for Additional Time to Ascertain Facts

[a] Options for Trial Court When Nonmovant Requests Additional Time

[b] Diligence Required by Party Requesting Additional Time

[c] Party Must Submit Affidavit or Declaration to Request Additional Time

[d] Party Must State How Additional Discovery Will Aid in Opposition to Summary Judgment Motion

[e] Waiver for Failure to Request Additional Time

[f] Appeal of Denial of Motion for Additional Discovery

§ 17.63 Summary Judgment Motion Burdens

[1] Burdens for Movant

[a] Movant's Initial Burden of Production

[b] Movant's Initial Burden Affected by Burden of Persuasion

[2] Burdens for Nonmovant

[a] Nonmovant's Initial Burden of Production in Response to Motion for Summary Judgment

[b] Nonmovant's Initial Burden Affected by Burden of Persuasion

§ 17.64 Partial Summary Judgment

[1] Summary Judgment for Less Than Entire Case

[2] Partial Summary Judgment Procedure

[3] Appealability of Partial Summary Judgment

§ 17.65 Discretionary Summary Judgment Hearing

[1] Movant and Nonmovant Not Entitled Hearing

[2] Discretion of Court to Hold Hearing

[3] Limitations on Oral Testimony at Summary Judgment Hearing

§ 17.66 Determination of Summary Judgment Motion by Court

[1] Court has Discretion to Determine Motion

[2] Procedure of Court to Determine Motion

§ 17.67 Effect of Court's Determination on Summary Judgment

[1] Effect of Grant of Summary Judgment

[2] Effect of Denial of Summary Judgment

[a] Denial Generally Does Not Have Preclusive Effect

[b] Court That Denies Summary Judgment May Order That Material Fact Is Not in Dispute

§ 17.68 Court Has Discretion to Order Sanctions for Bad Faith Affidavit or Declaration or Frivolous Motion

[1] Sanctions for Bad Faith Affidavit or Declaration

[2] Sanctions for Frivolous Summary Judgment Filings

§§ 17.69-17.79 [Reserved]

§ 17.80 Appeal of Summary Judgment Disposing of Entire Case

[1] Grant of Summary Judgment Immediately Appealable

[2] Denial of Summary Judgment Not Immediately Appealable

§ 17.81 Appeal of Interlocutory Summary Judgment Decisions

[1] Interlocutory Orders Generally Not Immediately Appealable

[2] Appealable Interlocutory Orders

[a] Collateral Order Doctrine

[b] Judgment with Respect to Fewer Than All Claims or Parties

[c] Close and Controlling Question of Law

[d] Interlocutory Order Factually Intertwined with Appealable Order

§ 17.82 Standards for Appellate Court Review of Summary Judgment Order

[1] Standard of Review for Grant of Summary Judgment

[2] Standard of Review for Denial of Summary Judgment

§ 17.83 Procedural Considerations for Appellate Court Review of Summary Judgment Order

[1] Appellate Court's Consideration of Record

[a] Appellate Court Generally Will Not Consider Matter Raised for First Time on Appeal

[b] District Court Reasoning

[2] Appellate Review After Trial of Prior Denial of Summary Judgment

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.01

§ 17.01 Function of Summary Judgment in Federal Litigationn*

Summary judgment is a procedure by which a moving party may obtain a determination of entire case, claims or defenses, or parts of claims or defenses in its favor without the necessity of completing a trial. To obtain summary judgment, the moving party must demonstrate to the court that there is no genuine dispute of any material fact and that the party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n1 Thus, summary judgment means entry of judgment without trial or specific fact finding by the court or jury as a trier of fact, because by definition there are actually no disputes of fact. n2

Unlike most of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which are designed primarily to regulate the litigation process and not to resolve the dispute itself, Rule 56 is specifically designed to decide cases or portions of cases. n3 Summary judgment is a determination by the court concerning a case or a portion of a case that is made prior to trial that does away with the need for trial of the claim or defense or part of claim or defense matter that is the subject of the summary judgment. n4 Thus, if a court grants summary judgment as to an entire case, it eliminates the need for trial entirely, and the court's grant of summary judgment constitutes a final decision in the case and may be appealed by the opponent of the summary judgment just as a final judgment after trial is appealed. Summary judgment, like a judgment resulting from trial, also has a res judicata effect after appellate review has been completed. n5

A court may also enter summary judgment with respect to only a particular claim or defense or part of a claim or defense. n6 These partial summary judgment orders generally are not appealable final orders because the summary judgment leaves matters on which the court must hold trial before it may resolve the entire case. n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Shropshire v. Laidlaw Transit, Inc., 550 F.3d 570, 574 (6th Cir. 2008) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. See T-Peg, Inc. v. Vt. Timber Works, Inc., 459 F.3d 97, 114 (1st Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56, Original Committee Note.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Ardoin v. J. Ray McDermott & Co., 641 F.2d 277, 278 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n8)Footnote 7. See 28 U.S.C. § 1291. For further discussion of partial summary judgment, see § 17.64.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.02

§ 17.02 Purposes of Summary Judgmentn*

Summary judgment has several purposes, which coincide precisely with the general purposes of the federal rules, which are to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding. n1 Thus, the primary purpose of summary judgment is to eliminate a trial for claims and defenses when there is no genuine dispute of material fact presented because such a trial would result in considerable delay and expense. n2 Summary judgment is also used by the parties and the court to pierce any boilerplate in the pleadings and assess the parties' substantive proof in order to determine whether trial is actually required. n3 Summary judgment is also a device to be used by the courts to conserve its own scarce judicial resources. n4 In operation, a summary judgment motion requires the court to go beyond the pleadings and analyze the facts to determine if there is any factual dispute at all. n5 Summary judgment thus separates the merely formal existence of a dispute as specified in the pleadings from the actual substantive existence of a controversy requiring trial. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 56.07-56.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n3)Footnote 2. Smith Wholesale Co. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 477 F.3d 854, 862 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. United Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Tunnel, Inc., 988 F.2d 351, 354-355 (2d Cir. 1993) (motion for summary judgment enables court to pierce through adroit crafting of pleading to consider substance of claim).

(n5)Footnote 4. Acumed LLC v. Advanced Surgical Servs., 561 F.3d 199, 224 (3d Cir. 2009) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) (one significant purpose of summary judgment is to isolate and dispose of factually unsupported claims or defenses).

(n7)Footnote 6. Evans Cabinet Corp. v. Kitchen Int'l, Inc., 593 F.3d 135, 140 (1st Cir. 2010) (one role of summary judgment is to pierce pleadings and to determine whether there is genuine dispute of fact and need for trial).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.03

§ 17.03 Comparison of Summary Judgment with Other Motions to Dispose of Claim or Defensen*

[1] Motions Which Challenge Power of Court to Hear Case

In considering the nature of a summary judgment motion, it is beneficial to consider it in the context of other similar motions that dispose of all or part of the claims in an action. For example, if the facts affecting jurisdiction or venue are not in dispute, a motion seeking dismissal for lack of jurisdiction or venue exhibits some of the characteristics of a summary judgment motion. A defendant may, in appropriate circumstances, thus prevail on a claim or an entire case through a motion to dismiss based, for example, on lack of subject matter jurisdiction; n1 lack of personal jurisdiction over a defendant; n2 improper venue; n3 insufficient form of process; n4 or inadequate service of the summons and complaint. n5 Summary judgment motions, however, differ from these Rule 12 motions in that these motions determine only the existence or nonexistence of the power of a particular court to hear a particular claim. n6 Such motions to dismiss result only in dismissal of the claim, which may be reinstituted in proper circumstances. On the other hand, summary judgment motions, if granted, result in final adjudication of a fact, claim, issue, or case, with subsequent preclusion of identical claims. n7

These motions also differ significantly from summary judgment motions because the court can look beyond the facts alleged in the pleadings, and the court may actually resolve factual disputes in order to determine these types of motions. n8 On the other hand, on a motion for summary judgment, the court may not decide disputed fact issues, and may not look beyond the record. n9 The court is limited to determine whether that there is any genuine dispute as to any material fact, and the court may grant summary judgment only if it has determined that there is no such genuine dispute. n10

[2] Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law

A similar standard applies to a determination of whether to grant a motion for summary judgment and a motion for judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50. n1 The essence of both motions is that there is no genuine dispute of material fact that can be determined by the trier of fact and that on the law applicable to the established facts the moving party is entitled to judgment. n2 Specifically, when considering either a summary judgment motion or a motion for judgment as a matter of law, a court must review all of the evidence in the record, drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party, but making no credibility determinations or weighing any evidence. The latter functions, along with the drawing of legitimate inferences from the facts, are for the jury, not the court. Thus, although the court should review the record as a whole, it must disregard all evidence favorable to the moving party that the jury is not required to believe. n3

There are, however, significant differences between the two motions. One is that the motions are properly made at substantially different times during trial. n4 Because the primary purpose of a motion for summary judgment is to avoid an unnecessary trial, the motion may be made at an early stage of the litigation and should be made at such an early time before trial that it does not delay the trial; in any event a party may file a motion for summary judgment only until 30 days after the close of all discovery. n5 On the other hand, a motion for judgment as a matter of law may be made only after a party has been fully heard on an issue during a jury trial n6 up until the case is submitted to the jury. n7 Because of this timing different, in deciding a motion for judgment as a matter of law, the court has before it a rather more completely developed record based on the evidence developed during the pretrial phase of the case and also presented to the court at least through plaintiff's trial presentation of the case. On the other hand, the record forming the basis of a summary judgment motion is formed only by discovery, investigation, and affidavits assembled before trial, and not by the trial process. n8

There are other procedural differences between the motions. A court should not grant summary judgment when it could not properly enter judgment as a matter of law for the movant, although it may set a contrary verdict aside as against the weight of the evidence. n9 On the other hand, denial of summary judgment does not preclude a grant after trial of a motion for judgment as a matter of law. n10

[3] Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State Claim

A motion for summary judgment is similar to a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted in that when the court grants either motion the court may dismiss the action or claims or a part of a claim. n1 However, the motions differ significantly regarding the applicable standards. The issue in deciding a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal motion is not whether the plaintiff will ultimately prevail but whether he or she is entitled to offer evidence to support the claims. n2 Therefore, the court may grant a motion to dismiss only where it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the claim that would entitle him or her to relief. n3 In contrast, the question at the summary judgment stage of litigation, assuming the movant has met its initial burden, is whether there is a genuine dispute of any material fact n4 and whether the nonmovant's evidence would support a reasonable verdict in the nonmovant's favor. n5

The motions also differ significantly regarding the court's assumptions regarding the evidence. In ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must (1) consider only the allegations contained in the complaint, (2) accept as true all of the averments of the complaint, n6 and (3) draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmovant pleader. n7 Thus, a party making a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim faces a higher burden than a party proceeding on a motion for summary judgment because in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion the court may generally consider only matters in favor of the party making the claim. n8 Thus, in contrast to a motion to dismiss, in which the court must construe the complaint in favor of the nonmovant, n9 the court ruling on a summary judgment motion is not required to defer to all assertions of a party opposing summary judgment. For example, a court may grant summary judgment where the nonmovant makes objectively incredible claims in the form of an affidavit. n10 To defeat a properly made and supported summary judgment motion, the nonmovant must present specific facts showing that summary judgment is not proper and may not rely merely on allegations in a pleading, as may the respondent to a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. n11

Finally, the motions also differ significantly regarding the documentation reviewed by the court in deciding the motion. Although a summary judgment motion may also focus primarily on the facts contained in the complaint, it differs from a Rule 12(b)(6) motion in that summary judgment usually involves a more extensive record involving disclosure, discovery responses, affidavits, and other materials of record or materials submitted to the court by either the movant or nonmovant. n12 On the other hand, a court deciding a Rule 12(b)(6) motion generally may not consider material beyond the four corners of the complaint in determining the truth of the allegations of the complaint. n13 In this regard, if a party does present matters outside the complaint, the court must convert the motion to dismiss into a summary judgment motion. n14

[4] Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

A motion for summary judgment is also somewhat analogous to a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings, which is a device for use by the court to grant judgment after all pleadings are closed if the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n1 For a Rule 12(c) motion, the court deems all allegations in the pleadings to be true. n2 Thus, when a court grants a motion for judgment on the pleadings, it decides that it is beyond doubt that the non-moving party can prove no set of facts in support of his or her claim which would entitle the non-moving party to relief, even after accepting all allegations in the pleadings, and drawing all inferences in favor of the nonmovant. n3 The grant of judgment on the pleadings, like a grant of summary judgment, constitutes entry of judgment and always operates as an adjudication on the merits. n4

However, the motions differ regarding timing and the documentation considered by the court. A Rule 12(c) motion may be made only after the pleadings are closed, n5 while a summary judgment motion may be made at any time until 30 days after the close of all discovery. n6

For a summary judgment motion, the court may consider matters outside the pleadings if they are not otherwise excluded by the court, n7 while the court may not consider matters outside the pleadings in a Rule 12(c) motion, n8 except for any facts of which the court may take judicial notice. n9 If on a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings, matters outside the pleadings are presented to and considered by the court, the motion must be treated as one for summary judgment. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsFailures to State ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(3).

(N5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(5).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Cloverleaf Realty of N.Y., Inc. v. Town of Wawayanda, 572 F.3d 93, 95 (2d Cir. 2009) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Griffin v. United States, 590 F.3d 1291, 1293 (Fed. Cir. 2009) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Morrison v. Nat'l Austl. Bank Ltd., 547 F.3d 167, 170 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n12)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(B), 56(a); Medlock v. UPS, Inc., 608 F.3d 1185, 1189 (10th Cir. 2010) ; see also Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250-252, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) (summary judgment should be granted when evidence is such that it would require directed verdict for moving party).

(n13)Footnote 2. Beck v. Texas State Bd. of Dental Exam'rs, 204 F.3d 629, 633 (5th Cir. 2000) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Medlock v. UPS, Inc., 608 F.3d 1185, 1189 (10th Cir. 2010) .

(n15)Footnote 4. See PPM Am. v. Marriott Corp., 875 F. Supp. 289, 294-295 (D. Md. 1995) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b).

(n17)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n18)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2).

(n19)Footnote 8. Compare Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b) with Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n20)Footnote 9. Agosto v. Immigration & Naturalization Service, 436 U.S. 748, 98 S. Ct. 2081, 56 L. Ed. 2d 677 (1978) .

(n21)Footnote 10. PPM Am. v. Marriott Corp., 875 F. Supp. 289, 294-295 (D. Md. 1995) .

(n22)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n23)Footnote 2. Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236, 94 S. Ct. 1683, 1686, 40 L. Ed. 2d 90 (1974) .

(n24)Footnote 3. McKenna v. Wright, 386 F.3d 432, 436 (2d Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n25)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n26)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1); Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250-252, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n27)Footnote 6. Gorman v. Roberts, 909 F. Supp. 1493, 1501 (M.D. Ala. 1995) .

(n28)Footnote 7. Eidson v. Arenas, 910 F. Supp. 609, 612 (M.D. Fla. 1995) .

(n29)Footnote 8. McKenna v. Wright, 386 F.3d 432, 436 (2d Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n30)Footnote 9. United States v. Rodriguez-Aguirre, 264 F.3d 1195, 1203 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n31)Footnote 10. Applegate v. Top Associates, Inc., 425 F.2d 92, 96 (2d Cir. 1970) .

(n32)Footnote 11. First Nat'l Bank v. Cities Service Co., 391 U.S. 253, 289, 88 S. Ct. 1575, 1592-1593, 20 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1968) .

(n33)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n34)Footnote 13. Carey v. Mt. Desert Island Hosp., 910 F. Supp. 7, 9 (D. Me. 1995) .

(n35)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see United States v. Purdue Pharma L.P., 600 F.3d 319, 325-326 (4th Cir. 2010) .

(n36)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n37)Footnote 2. Forseth v. Village of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n38)Footnote 3. Oneida Indian Nation v. City of Sherrill, 337 F.3d 139, 152 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n39)Footnote 4. American Fire & Cas. Co. v. Broeren Russo Constr. 54 F. Supp. 2d 842, 845 (C.D. Ill. 1999) (judgment on pleadings results in judgment rather than merely in dismissal and has preclusive and binding effect unless specifically limited by court).

(n40)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n41)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b).

(n42)Footnote 7. See Downs v. Governor of Michigan, 622 F.3d 579, 585-586 (6th Cir. 2010) .

(n43)Footnote 8. See Gunasekera v. Irwin, 551 F.3d 461, 466 (6th Cir. 2009) .

(n44)Footnote 9. American Fire & Cas. Co. v. Broeren Russo Constr., 54 F. Supp. 2d 842, 845 (C.D. Ill. 1999) .

(n45)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.04

§ 17.04 Jury Trial Considerationsn*

Despite assertions to the contrary, it has consistently been decided that a properly granted motion for summary judgment does not violate the nonmovant's right to a jury trial under the Seventh Amendment. n1 The rationale for this principle is that if a court grants a summary judgment, it has made a determination that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact. n2 Because it is a basic Seventh Amendment principle that a party is entitled to a jury trial only to the extent that triable issues of fact are present, n3 when no genuine dispute of material fact exists, the court has the power to grant summary judgment without denying a party's right to jury trial. n4 On the other hand, if a court improperly decides summary judgment, it is also erroneous because the court takes away from a party the right to jury for the materially factual disputes that actually exist. n5

Some courts have noted that summary judgment procedures have built-in protection for jury trial right on disputes of fact. n6 The Supreme Court has also stated that summary judgment procedures require the trial court to exercise great care in granting motions for summary judgment and to preserve a litigant's right to a trial when there is a doubt regarding the facts. For example, when damages are in dispute, the court should not grant a summary judgment on damages. Summary disposition of issues of damages should only be on evidence which a jury would not be at liberty to disbelieve and which would require a directed verdict (now judgment as a matter of law) for the moving party. n7

For further discussion of the right to a jury trial under the Seventh Amendment, see Ch. 22, Trial by Jury.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsRight to Jury Trial

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Santa Barbara Capital Mgmt. v. Neilson (In re Slatkin), 525 F.3d 805, 811 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Benjamin v. Traffic Executive Asso. Eastern Railroads, 869 F.2d 107, 115 n.11 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Harris v. Interstate Brands Corp., 348 F.3d 761, 762 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See McDougall v. Pioneer Ranch L.P., 494 F.3d 571, 575-576 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Santa Barbara Capital Mgmt. v. Neilson (In re Slatkin), 525 F.3d 805, 811 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Sartor v. Arkansas Natural Gas Corp., 321 U.S. 620, 624, 64 S. Ct. 724, 88 L. Ed. 967 (1944) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.05

§ 17.05 Any Party May Make Motion for Summary Judgmentn*

Any party may file a motion for summary judgment with respect to all or part of a claim, whether the party has filed a claim for relief or is defending against a claim for relief. Thus, each party must identify each particular claim or defense for which that party is requesting summary judgment. n1 Thus, all types of claimants and defending parties may move for summary judgment, including original plaintiffs, counterclaimants, crossclaimants, third-party claimants, intervenors, and claimants in interpleader, as well as all parties defending any such claims. n2 Prior to the 2010 amendments, Rule 56 addressed motions by claiming and defending parties in separate subsections, and provided for a different time frame for filing a motion depending on whether the moving party was a claiming or defending party. The Rules Committee found that those timing provisions in former subdivisions (a) and (c) should be superseded, and that scheduling orders or other pretrial orders can regulate timing to fit the needs of the particular case. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), Committee Notes to 2007 Amendments; see also § 17.21.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.06

§ 17.06 Summary Judgment Practice Under Local Rulesn*

In addition to the procedural requirements established by Rule 56 and other civil rules, current summary judgment practice is substantially affected by local rules of civil procedure that govern practice in each district court. Although local rules may not conflict with the general type or format of summary judgment motion papers required under Rule 56, nor impose more stringent requirements on the parties, n1 the particular local requirements should be followed or significant adverse repercussions may occur. For example, when motion papers required by local rule are missing or improperly prepared, courts may decide against the litigant on the issue, refuse to consider nonconforming papers, or decline to rule on the motion. Therefore, attorneys should always ensure not only that the content of the summary judgment motion papers is sufficient but also that the format of the motion and opposition papers meets the specific standards under applicable local rules. n2

It should also be recognized that some of the provisions of Rule 56 as rewritten in 2010 have adopted some common practices under local rules. For example, Subdivision (c), regarding supporting documentation, establishes a common procedure for several aspects of summary judgment motions which have been synthesized from similar elements developed in common practice or found in many local rules. n3 The new rule acknowledges that various aspects of procedure are best left to local rule. For example, Rule 56(c)(1)(A) describes the familiar record materials that are commonly relied upon in a motion for summary judgment, and must be included in the record. Once materials are placed in the record, the court by order, or a local rule may direct that the materials be gathered in an appendix, or that the parties may submit a joint appendix. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 56.61, 56.70, 56.82 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Mack v. Dillon, 594 F.3d 620, 623 (8th Cir. 2010) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Schneiker v. Fortis Ins. Co., 200 F.3d 1055, 1057 (7th Cir. 2000) (in granting summary judgment for defendant, district court relied primarily on proposed findings of fact submitted by defendant because plaintiff had failed to comply with Eastern District of Wisconsin, Local Rule 6.05, requiring nonmoving party to submit specific response to movant's proposed findings of fact, clearly delineating only those findings for which genuine dispute of material fact existed).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 17.07-17.19

[Reserved]

§§ 17.07[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART II. STANDARD FOR GRANT OR DENIAL OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.20

§ 17.20 Statement of Standardn*

A court shall grant a summary judgment if the movant shows that: n1 (1) there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact; n2 and (2) the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n3 The court may grant judgment as a matter of law only if a party has been fully heard on an issue during a jury trial and the court finds that a reasonable jury would not have a legally sufficient evidentiary basis on which to find for that party on that issue. n4

A summary judgment movant must demonstrate legal entitlement to judgment. This means that the controlling law must require a decision in the movant's favor. In other words, summary judgment is not appropriate merely because there is no genuine dispute of material fact. For the court to grant summary judgment, the court must conclude that the movant must prevail as a matter of law. n5 An assertion of entitlement to judgment as a matter of law may fail, even in the absence of a genuine dispute as to any material fact, if the controlling law does not, on the set of undisputed facts in question, definitively require a particular outcome of the claim or defense. For example, if a claim turns on the reasonableness of a party's conduct, the controlling law might not definitively require a finding for either side, not even when there is an agreed set of facts. In that event, summary judgment would be inappropriate, despite the absence of a genuine dispute of material fact, because neither side would be able to show a legal entitlement to judgment. n6

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. See §§ 17.21, 17.22.

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 17.23.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1); see Ch. 22, Trial by Jury.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1); Thompson v. District of Columbia, 573 F. Supp. 2d 64, 67 (D.D.C. 2008) (although no genuine disputes of material fact existed, Court had to nevertheless evaluate defendant's motion for summary judgment to determine whether defendant is entitled to judgment as matter of law).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART II. STANDARD FOR GRANT OR DENIAL OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.21

§ 17.21 Absence of Genuine Dispute of Factn*

[1] Movant Must Establish Nonexistence of Genuine Dispute of Fact

A court shall grant summary judgment only if there is no genuine dispute of material fact related to the claim or defense that is the subject of the motion. n1 A "genuine dispute" of fact sufficient to defeat summary judgment is present only if there exists evidence such that a reasonable trier of fact, either judge or jury as applicable, could return a verdict for the nonmoving party. In other words, facts are not "genuinely" in issue unless the factual dispute between movant and nonmovant requires trial of the case for resolution. n2

Thus, the Supreme Court has stated that the inquiry regarding genuineness is a determination of whether there is the need for a trial, that is, whether there are any factual issues that properly may be resolved only by a finder of fact because they may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party. n3 Therefore, when a trial court is asked to rule on a summary judgment motion, the court must examine the submissions of the parties and determine whether there is any evidence showing a factual dispute exists sufficient to warrant a trial. n4 Thus, even if the parties differ about material facts, the factual dispute is not "genuine" if the nonmovant asserts facts and seeks a legally impermissible inference from the facts in order to prevail, or if the nonmovant seeks a factual inference that is objectively impossible. In such cases, the court may grant summary judgment because the court is not impermissibly assessing credibility, weighing evidence, or making fact findings. n5 When considering whether there is a genuine factual dispute, the court will not consider legal memoranda or oral argument as evidence, and such arguments do not in themselves create factual disputes sufficient to defeat a motion for summary judgment. n6

[2] Nonmovant Must Establish Existence of Genuine Dispute of Fact by Substantial Evidence n*

The Supreme Court has clarified that the substantial evidence standard used to decide motions for judgment as a matter of law also applies to summary judgment. Thus, summary judgment under Rule 56 is controlled by the same standard as judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50. n1 Consequently, summary judgment may be appropriate even if material facts are disputed if the nonmovant fails to provide substantial evidence of such contested facts. n2 Conversely, the trial court must treat a fact as genuinely in dispute if the nonmovant responding to a motion for summary judgment submits substantial evidence regarding the fact, such as through proper affidavits given by individuals with personal knowledge and through other significantly probative evidence, such that a reasonable juror drawing all inferences in favor of the nonmovant could return a verdict in the nonmovant's favor. n3 For a discussion of the burdens of production and persuasion that movants and nonmovants must sustain on summary judgment motions, see § 17.63.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.22 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Cline v. Industrial Maintenance Eng'g & Contr. Co., 200 F.3d 1223, 1229 (9th Cir. 2000) (when employees brought action alleging violations of ERISA, district court entered summary judgment for defendants, and court of appeals found that employees failed to raise triable fact question as to whether defendants were plan "administrators" who could be held liable for failing to comply with ERISA reporting and disclosure requirements).

(n4)Footnote 3. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Hunt v. Cromartie, 526 U.S. 541, 552-553, 119 S. Ct. 1545, 143 L. Ed. 2d 731 (1999) (genuine dispute of material fact existed when evidence showed possible racial intent when state legislature drew congressional redistricting plan).

(n6)Footnote 5. United States v. Gilbert, 920 F.2d 878, 882 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 249-252, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) (mere allegations or assertions are not evidence of facts and may not defeat properly made summary judgment motion).

(n8)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.41 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n9)Footnote 1. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n10)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(3); Lohnes v. Level 3 Communs., Inc., 272 F.3d 49, 52-53 (1st Cir. 2001) (in contract case, summary judgment may be appropriate even though there is ambiguity in contract language if evidence presented about the parties' intended meaning is so one-sided that no reasonable person could decide the contrary).

(n11)Footnote 3. United States v. Shumway, 199 F.3d 1093, 1104 (9th Cir. 1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART II. STANDARD FOR GRANT OR DENIAL OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.22

§ 17.22 Materiality of Factual Issuen*

To avoid a summary judgment on the basis of the existence of a dispute of fact, the nonmovant must show that the dispute is regarding a material fact. A fact is "material" for purposes of a summary judgment motion only if existence of the fact in dispute could potentially affect the outcome of the claim or defense under the applicable substantive law. The mere existence of evidence of a factual dispute is insufficient to defeat summary judgment when consideration of such facts would not support nor defeat a claim or defense. n1 Factual disputes that are irrelevant or unnecessary are therefore not considered by the court. n2 Furthermore, if a party making a claim or defense has a complete failure of factual proof with respect to an essential element of the claim or defense, all other facts become immaterial, and the court should enter summary judgment for the movant on the summary judgment motion. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Sovereign Bank v. BJ's Wholesale Club, Inc., 533 F.3d 162, 172 (3d Cir. 2008) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Massey v. Johnson, 457 F.3d 711, 716-720 (7th Cir. 2006) ; see Marathon Fin. Ins., Inc., RRG v. Ford Motor Co., 591 F.3d 458, 467-469 (5th Cir. 2009) (summary judgment proper for movant defendant in tortious interference case because nonmovant plaintiff had burden to disprove justification, and failed to provide any factual evidence on that issue).

48 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART II. STANDARD FOR GRANT OR DENIAL OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.23

§ 17.23 Entitlement to Judgment as Matter of Lawn*

In addition to showing that there is no genuine dispute of material fact, n1 a movant for summary judgment must also establish that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n2 This means that the movant must demonstrate that the applicable governing law requires a trier of fact to find in the movant's favor on the claim or defense that is the subject of the motion. n3 Therefore, to obtain a summary judgment, a party must show a prevailing legal theory, because even if material facts are not disputed or otherwise established, the controlling legal issues may be incapable of determination at the summary judgment stage of litigation, or the trier of fact may have decisions that remain regarding the interpretation of facts or the inferences to be drawn from the facts. n4 From the other perspective, to defeat summary judgment, the nonmovant must present a feasible legal theory showing that the a trier of fact could determine that the nonmovant is entitled to relief should it prevail on the facts at trial. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 56.20, 56.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see §§ 17.21, 17.22.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Thompson v. District of Columbia, 573 F. Supp. 2d 64, 67 (D.D.C. 2008) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Duffy v. Meconi, 508 F. Supp. 2d 399, 406 (D. Del. 2007) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART II. STANDARD FOR GRANT OR DENIAL OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.24

§ 17.24 Court May Not Weigh Evidence to Determine Summary Judgment Motionn*

In a court's determination of a summary judgment motion, the court may not weigh evidence to make fact findings, nor may it consider evidence to make credibility determinations. n1 In determining whether a factual dispute warranting trial exists, the court must view the record in the case and the summary judgment submissions in the light most favorable to the nonmovant. n2 In other words, the court deciding a summary judgment motion may not make a determination of any specific facts; rather, the court reviews the summary judgment motion and response papers and seeks to determine whether the record reveals a disputed factual issue material enough to require a trial and factfinder determination of the factual question. n3 It would be an inappropriate assessment of affiant's credibility, and the court could not grant summary judgment in favor of defendant because a particular affiant was more respected. Similarly, if a court is required to make a determination of which version of events is more likely, it is improperly weighing the evidence, and summary judgment may not be granted. n4

However, as a matter of law, the court is permitted to set the limits of permissible factual inferences based on the applicable substantive law; this principle applies because an inference must be "reasonable." n5 Thus, if the court determines that an inference that would be required for the nonmovant to prevail is legally impermissible, the court may grant summary judgment. In such circumstances, the court is not required to assess credibility, weigh evidence, or make fact findings. n6

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.24 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Sensing v. Outback Steakhouse of Fla., LLC, 575 F.3d 145, 163 (1st Cir. 2009) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Denzler v. Questech, Inc., 80 F.3d 97, 101 (4th Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Sorlucco v. New York City Police Dep't, 888 F.2d 4, 7 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Maroules v. Jumbo, Inc., 452 F.3d 639, 643 (7th Cir. 2006) (court decides whether inference of res ipsa loquitur is permissible and, if so, trier of fact determines whether to draw inference).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 593, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1986) (plaintiff's theory of case and requested factual inferences based on theory rejected).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART II. STANDARD FOR GRANT OR DENIAL OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 17.25-17.39

[Reserved]

§§ 17.25[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.40

§ 17.40 Formal Motion Requiredn*

If a party meets the standards for summary judgment, the party must make a formal summary judgment motion to preserve the party's argument n1 and because a formal summary judgment motion forms the foundation to file accompanying supporting documentation and other exhibits. n2 The party making a motion for summary judgment is referred to in Rule 56 as the "movant." n3

The formal motion for summary judgment should contain the following items: (1) a notice of the motion specifying the date, time, and location of the hearing on the motion obtained through the clerk of the court that will hear and decide the motion; n4 (2) the text of motion itself, which must identify the party requesting summary judgment, the claims or defenses, or parts of claims or defenses, that are the subject of the request for summary judgment, n5 and the legal grounds and factual assertions for the motion; n6 (3) affidavits and other documentation in support of the motion; n7 and (4) if required or permitted by local rule, a proposed order that, if signed by the court, would provide the summary judgment sought. n8

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.70 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1)(A) (requirement of writing).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b) (motion must be filed); see §§ 17.43-17.45; see also § 9.02 (general requirements of motions).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1); see also § 9.47.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1)(B).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A), 56(e).

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Prusky v. ReliaStar Life Ins. Co., 532 F.3d 252, 267 (3d Cir. 2008) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.41

§ 17.41 Response by Nonmovantn*

A party opposing a summary judgment motion has a right to expressly respond to the motion. n1 and is referred to in Rule 56 as the "nonmovant." n2 Local rules and orders of court generally control most aspects of a summary judgment response and a failure to comply may limit the right to respond. Thus local rules or court scheduling orders commonly set time limits on filing a response to a motion for summary judgment. n3 Rule 56 requires all factual claims to be supported by citations to the record. Failure to comply could result in a court order that certain facts are undisputed for purposes of the motion, n4 or even a court order granting summary judgment if the movant's factual record is proper and the movant shows entitlement to judgment as a matter of law. n5

Rule 56 does not specify the format for a response to a motion for summary judgment. In the absence of local rule or court order, the nonmovant should file a response containing the same elements and in the same format as the proponent's motion. n6 The response is typically entitled the "Motion in Opposition to Summary Judgment." n7

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 56.80, 56.81 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4), 56(d), 56(e).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d), (f)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(3).

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 17.40.

(n8)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Pardo-Kronemann v. Donovan, 601 F.3d 599, 618 (D.C. Cir. 2010) ; Perrey v.

Donahue, 703 F. Supp. 2d 839, 858 (N.D. Ind. 2010) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.42

§ 17.42 Reply by Movantn*

Rule 56 recognizes that, once the nonmovant has filed a response, the movant can in turn file a reply to counter the arguments and assertions in the response. n1 Generally, the permitted scope of such a reply, and the deadline for filing it, are controlled by local rules or court orders. Typically, the filing of a reply is optional. Most local rules that allow replies state that a party who has received opposition to a motion may file a reply. However, as a practical matter, a reply may be required to dispute additional facts raised by the opposing party in its response. Thus, Rule 56(e)(2) authorizes the court to consider a fact as undisputed for purposes of the motion when reply requirements are not satisfied. This approach reflects the "deemed admitted" provisions in many local rules. n2 Courts usually limit the scope of reply motions to direct rebuttal to the matters raised in the response motion. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.83 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(2), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. See United States v. Elizalde-Adame, 262 F.3d 637, 640 (7th Cir. 2001) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.43

§ 17.43 Summary Judgment Recordn*

[1] Contents of Record

The summary judgment record is the documentation in support of a motion for summary judgment or in support of a response which a court may, but is not required to, examine in its determination of the motion. The court is required to consider only those matters in the record cited by the movant or nonmovant. n1

The summary judgment record includes the official record in the action, including depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations, admissions, interrogatory answers, and other materials. It also includes items placed in the record for purposes of the summary judgment motion. n2 Thus, Rule 56(c)(1)(A) describes the familiar record materials commonly relied upon. Materials that are not yet in the record--including materials referred to in an affidavit or declaration--must be placed in the record. Once materials are in the record, the court may, by order in the case, direct that the materials be gathered in an appendix, a party may voluntarily submit an appendix, or the parties may submit a joint appendix. The appendix procedure also may be established by local rule. Pointing to a specific location in an appendix satisfies the citation requirement. So too it may be convenient to direct that a party assist the court in locating materials buried in a voluminous record. n3

Discovery items that have been prepared for the case but have not yet been placed in the record may be submitted with the summary judgment motion. Because Rule 5 prohibits parties from filing most disclosure and discovery material until such material is used in the action or filing is ordered by the court, n4 parties should include such items in the record only if they will be referenced in the motion. n5

[2] Use of Record

A movant asserting that a fact cannot be genuinely disputed, or a nonmovant asserting that a fact is in genuine dispute, must support the assertion in one of two ways: by either citing to the particular parts of materials in the record under Rule 56(c)(1)(A), n1 or by showing under Rule 56(c)(1)(B) that the materials cited do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact. n2 Rule 56(c)(1)(B) recognizes that a party need not always point to specific record materials. One party, without citing any other materials, may respond or reply that materials already cited to dispute or support a fact do not actually establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute. And a party who does not have the trial burden of production may rely on a showing that a party who does have the trial burden cannot produce admissible evidence to carry its burden as to the fact. n3

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.90 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3).

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n8)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(B).

(n9)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(B), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.44

§ 17.44 Affidavits in Support of Motion or Responsen*

[1] Use of Affidavits or Declarations

A movant or nonmovant may submit affidavits or declarations in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment. n1 Affidavits or declarations may themselves provide evidence concerning the fact at issue. They may also be used to introduce documents that will supply the evidence but that need authentication by the affiant. n2 An affidavit used to support or oppose a motion for summary judgment is also known as an evidentiary or testimonial affidavit, whose form and content is governed by Rule 56(c)(4), as discussed in § 17.44[2], below. An affidavit or declaration is but one type of the permissible documents a court may consider in ruling on a motion for summary judgment. For example, a verified pleading may serve the same purpose as an affidavit. n3 For a discussion of other supporting documentation for a summary judgment motion, known as the summary judgment record, see §§ 17.41, 17.43.

Rule 56 does not require that a party use affidavits either in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment. n4 Thus, even if the moving party does not accompany its summary judgment motion with affidavits, the motion should be granted provided that the documentation presented to the court demonstrates that the standard set forth in Rule 56(a) for the entry of summary judgment is satisfied. n5

[2] Requirement for Affidavits and Declarations

[a] Must be Sworn or Subscribed as True Under Penalty of Perjury

An affidavit or declaration submitted to support or oppose summary judgment must be a sworn document or declared to be true under penalty of perjury. Courts will not ordinarily consider statements that do not meet one of these two standards. Prior to the 2010 Amendments, Rule 56 referred only to affidavits. Declarations were added in the 2010 Amendments in recognition of the fact that pursuant to Judiciary Code Section 1746, n1 a written unsworn declaration subscribed in proper form as true under penalty of perjury may be substituted for an affidavit whenever a law, rule, regulation, or order requires a matter to be supported by an affidavit. n2 In addition to unsworn or unsubscribed affidavits, courts will also disregard "sham affidavits," which are affidavits that a party files to create an issue of fact by contradicting the party's prior testimony, for example at a deposition. Thus, a party who has been examined at length on deposition may not raise a dispute of fact on summary judgment merely by submitting an affidavit contradicting his own prior testimony. n3

[b] Content Must Be Based on Personal Knowledge of Competent Person

An affidavit or declaration used to support or oppose a motion for summary judgment must be made on personal knowledge of a person who is competent to testify to the matters stated in the affidavit or declaration. n4 If the affiant or declarant did not or could not observe the matter that is the subject of the testimony, he or she does not have personal knowledge. In that event, the court will not consider the affidavit or declaration. The affidavit or declaration must state facts that show personal knowledge of the substantive facts in the affidavit or declaration. n5 Sometimes personal knowledge may be inferred from the content or context of the affidavit, for example, if the description shows knowledge that could only be acquired by being present and active at a particular time, such as personal knowledge of employees about their employment conditions. n6 However, personal knowledge does not require contemporaneous knowledge, and an affidavit of a person regarding a particular transaction is proper even if the person learned of the transaction after it had occurred. n7

An attorney may submit an affidavit with respect to a summary judgment motion provided that he or she conforms to the general requirements applicable to all such affidavits, including that the statement is within the personal knowledge of the attorney. This means that an attorney's affidavit is not acceptable unless the attorney is a competent witness in regard to the subject matter, n8 and the attorney is in a position to provide an affidavit which presents admissible evidence, such as evidence relating to matters in the case, including identification of items in the record or items produced in discovery. n9

[c] Content Required To Be Admissible at Trial

The content of an affidavit or declaration used to support or oppose a motion for summary judgment must set out facts that would be admissible in evidence. n10 At the summary judgment stage, the examination is not on the form of the evidence as it is presented in an affidavit, but rather, whether at trial the matter stated in the affidavit would constitute admissible evidence. To be acceptable, the evidence must be admissible if presented at trial through the testimony of the affiant as a sworn witness. n11 Thus, an affidavit may be rejected because the affiant is incompetent to testify. n12 Similarly, an affidavit that consists of facts that could be presented at trial only through evidence that violates the prohibition against hearsay may not be admitted at the summary judgment stage, unless the affidavit contains evidence that is within a recognized hearsay exception. n13

An affidavit must also contain sufficiently specific statements to support the affiant's position. Affidavits that contain nothing more than conclusory allegations or speculation are not sufficient to be used by the court to consider a summary judgment motion. n14 Furthermore, allegations that provide only legal conclusions supporting the movant's position, but do not provide factual statements, may not serve as support for summary judgment. n15

[d] Affidavit of Expert

The court may consider affidavits setting forth expert testimony. n16 Expert opinion evidence stated in an affidavit must constitute admissible evidence, in that it must establish the competence of the affiant as an expert and be relevant to the issues raised by the summary judgment motion. n17 Generally, the underlying scientific methods must be explained in the affidavit. n18

In addition to satisfying the general requirements for consideration of evidence on a motion for summary judgment, expert testimony must also satisfy the requirements for admission of expert testimony. n19 First, the expert must have been designated as an expert witness under Rule 26(a)(2). n20 Second, the expert's testimony must satisfy the general admissibility criteria of Evidence Rule 702. n21 The expert must state the facts and reasons from which the expert's opinion was derived, so that the court may look behind the expert's ultimate conclusion and evaluate the adequacy of its foundation. n22 To protect its right to discover the basis of an expert's affidavit, an opposition party may make a motion to require supplemental depositions or answers to interrogatories or further affidavits to obtain the underlying data of the affidavit, which the court may order in its discretion to require the expert to furnish the supporting data. n23

[3] Effect of Conflict in Affidavits

When a court considers summary judgment affidavits, the court may have to consider the "sham affidavit doctrine," which is premised on the theory that if a party could raise an issue of fact simply by submitting an affidavit contradicting the party's own prior testimony or affidavit, this would greatly diminish the utility of summary judgment as a procedure for screening out sham issues of fact. Therefore, if a party has submitted two conflicting affidavits, or an affidavit conflicting with a deposition, the conflict does not create an issue of fact, and denial of summary judgment is not required if the affidavits are a sham. n1

Summary judgment, however, will generally be denied if opposing parties submit affidavits that set forth specific facts showing a genuine dispute for trial. Furthermore, if a party's affidavit is inconsistent with that party's earlier affidavit or deposition statement, summary judgment may be denied by the creation of a fact issue, provided that such inconsistencies have a good faith basis. n2 Confusion, lack of access to material, or newly discovered evidence are all legitimate reasons for inconsistencies. n3 Alternatively, the court may ignore one of two conflicting documents. The court should consider all relevant evidence in the record to determine the effect to give to conflicting affidavits or deposition testimony. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.94 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Carmona v. Toledo, 215 F.3d 124, 131 (1st Cir. 2000) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Human Life of Wash., Inc. v. Brumsickle, 624 F.3d 990, 1022 (9th Cir. 2010) (verified complaint is equivalent of opposing affidavit for summary judgment purposes, when allegations contained in complaint are based on personal knowledge).

(n5)Footnote 4. Lujan v. Nat'l Wildlife Fed'n, 497 U.S. 871, 885, 110 S. Ct. 3177, 111 L. Ed. 2d 695 (1990) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) .

(n7)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1746.

(n8)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n9)Footnote 3. Lykken v. Brady, 622 F.3d 925, 933 (8th Cir. 2010) ; see § 17.44[4], below.

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

(n11)Footnote 5. Wicker v. Oregon, 543 F.3d 1168, 1178 (9th Cir. 2008) (court properly disregarded affidavit paragraphs describing negotiations that occurred at meeting not attended by affiants and indicated they had no other personal knowledge of meetings).

(n12)Footnote 6. See FDIC v. Patel, 46 F.3d 482, 484 (5th Cir. 1995) ; White v. MPW Indus. Servs., 236 F.R.D. 363, 369 (E.D. Tenn. 2006) .

(n13)Footnote 7. Dalton v. FDIC, 987 F.2d 1216, 1223 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n14)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

(n15)Footnote 9. Sitts v. United States, 811 F.2d 736, 741-742 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n16)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(4).

(n17)Footnote 11. Gleklen v. Democratic Congressional Campaign Comm., Inc., 199 F.3d 1365, 1369 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (while movant or nonmovant is not required to produce evidence in form that would be admissible at trial, evidence still must be capable of being converted into admissible evidence; *Fashakin v. Nextel Communs., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25140, at 21 n.10 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 25, 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n18)Footnote 12. Insurance & Consulting Assocs. LLC v. ITT Hartford Ins. Group, 48 F. Supp. 2d 1181, 1189 (W.D. Mo. 1999) .

(n19)Footnote 13. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Griffin, 935 F.2d 691, 702 (5th Cir.1991) .

(n20)Footnote 14. Allen v. Coughlin, 64 F.3d 77, 80 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 15. Burlington Coat Factory Warehouse Corp. v. Esprit de Corp., 769 F.2d 919, 922-923 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n22)Footnote 16. See KSR Int'l Co. v. Teleflex Inc., 550 U.S. 398, 427, 127 S. Ct. 1727, 167 L. Ed. 2d 705 (2007) .

(n23)Footnote 17. Brown v. Woodland Joint Unified Sch. Dist., 27 F.3d 1373, 1382 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n24)Footnote 18. Mid-State Fertilizer Co. v. Exchange Nat'l Bank, 877 F.2d 1333, 1339 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n25)Footnote 19. Lewis v. CITGO Petroleum Corp., 561 F.3d 698, 704 (7th Cir. 2009) .

(n26)Footnote 20. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2).

(n27)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 702; see Pro Serv. Auto., L.L.C. v. Lenan Corp., 469 F.3d 1210, 1214-1216 (8th Cir. 2006) (expert testimony presented by plaintiffs was properly excluded because it did not satisfy Fed. R. Evid. 702 standards for admissibility).

(n28)Footnote 22. American Key Corp. v. Cole Nat'l Corp., 762 F.2d 1569, 1579-1580 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n29)Footnote 23. See California v. Campbell, 319 F.3d 1161, 1166 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n30)Footnote 1. Smith v. Johnson & Johnson, 593 F.3d 280, 285 (3d Cir. 2010) (under sham affidavit doctrine, court will disregard affidavit inconsistent with an affiant's prior deposition testimony when party moves for summary judgment on the basis of the deposition unless the party relying on affidavit in opposition to motion can present a legitimate reason for discrepancies between deposition and affidavit); Slowiak v. Land O'Lakes, Inc., 987 F.2d 1293, 1297 (7th Cir. 1993) (parties may not intentionally create a triable issue of fact by submitting conflicting submissions).

(n31)Footnote 2. EBC, Inc. v. Clark Bldg. Sys., 618 F.3d 253, 269 (3d Cir. 2010) ; Jiminez v. All Am. Rathskeller, Inc., 503 F.3d 247, 252-253 (3d Cir. 2007) .

(n32)Footnote 3. Russell v. Acme-Evans Co., 51 F.3d 64, 67-68 (7th Cir. 1995) (in age discrimination action, court rejected claimant's affidavit made after deposition, when affidavit was designed to retract or explain away concessions that claimant had made in deposition, because court noted that no explanations for inconsistencies had been offered).

(n33)Footnote 4. Baer v. Chase, 392 F.3d 609, 624-626 (3d Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.45

§ 17.45 Other Supporting Documentationn*

[1] Pleadings

It is possible that the movant may obtain a summary judgment from the district court from the pleadings alone, provided that the pleading used to support the motion for summary judgment is verified, shows that there is no genuine dispute with respect to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law, and is based on personal knowledge. n1 A party that is using a pleading to support or oppose a summary judgment motion must specify to the court the items in the pleading that support its position and that it requests the court to consider. n2 Alternatively, the attorney may submit pleadings for consideration in a summary judgment motion by incorporating the pleadings with the movant or nonmovant's memorandum of law, such as by referring to specific paragraphs. n3

[2] Depositions

In its determination of a summary judgment motion, Rule 56(c) expressly provides that the court may consider deposition evidence cited by the movant or the nonmovant. n1 Furthermore, even if an entire deposition may not be used, for example, if it was not completed, the deposition may be used as an affidavit to the extent that it fulfills the requirements of an affidavit, because sworn deposition answers are as reliable as affidavits, provided that the content is otherwise admissible. n2 A deposition may also be considered in a summary judgment motion action against a party who was not joined at the time the deposition was taken, because even though deposition testimony could not be admitted as trial evidence against a party who did not have an opportunity to cross-examine the deponent, the deposition testimony could be admitted in lieu of a Rule 56(c) affidavit provided that it was based on personal knowledge and set forth facts admissible in evidence. n3

[3] Interrogatories

Either the movant or nonmovant may use interrogatory answers to support or oppose a summary judgment motion. When submitting interrogatory answers for consideration in the summary judgment determination, the attorney should cite to precisely the answers that the party is relying on for each argument or issue. n1 Interrogatories used in a summary judgment motion are governed by the same rules of admissibility as affidavits. Thus, the interrogatories must be made on personal knowledge and must contain information which would be admissible at trial; interrogatories containing inadmissible hearsay will not be considered by the court. The information contained in the hearsay portions of interrogatories will be inadmissible, even if they are probative, and will not be considered by the court in the determination of the motion for summary judgment. n2

However, if a third party describes another person's testimony in an answer to an interrogatory, and the truth of the matter asserted has not been independently verified by the third party, the description is hearsay and not admissible for consideration by the court in a summary judgment motion. For example, when plaintiff's interrogatory answers contained statements that a physician was of the opinion that the defendant committed malpractice, the answers were hearsay and could not be considered by the court. Furthermore, the evidence could not support the motion for summary judgment when no affidavit or deposition from some other physician was submitted. n3

[4] Admissions

Rule 56 specifically provides that either the movant or nonmovant may use admissions to support or oppose a summary judgment motion. n1 Admissions typically mean admissions made in response to a request to admit propounded and served by a party under Rule 36. n2 Although Rule 36 admissions are perhaps the most potentially useful in seeking summary judgment, they are not the only form of useful admissions. Statements made in open court on the record or other representations to the court, including admissions in letters or other correspondence, may also qualify as admissions on file for purposes of seeking summary judgment. n3 When either a movant or a nonmovant is preparing for a summary judgment motion, the party is searching for the best evidence to support its summary judgment assertions, and Rule 36 admissions are of particular value because they provide a vehicle for establishing facts absolutely. Although admissions made outside Rule 36 also have this potential, these other admissions are subject to being disputed by the nonmovant, while Rule 36 admissions may not be contradicted. Unless the court permits an exception, a Rule 36 admission is conclusive proof and prevails over conflicting evidence. n4

Under Rule 36, if a request is made to a party, the matter raised in the request is considered admitted unless the statement or question propounded in the request is denied or qualified within 30 days after service of the request. n5 The response to the request must be by written answer or objection addressed to the matter, signed by the party or by the party's attorney, and stating a reason if an objection is made. The response must specifically deny the matter or describe the reasons the answering party may not admit or deny the matter. n6 In addition to admissions made as a direct response to a Rule 36 request, a party that fails to make a timely response to a Rule 36 request is in default and has made a "default admission" which, like an express admission, may serve as a factual predicate for summary judgment. A default admission occurs when a party fails to respond appropriately and in a timely manner. n7 When any matter is admitted, either pursuant to a request or by default, the matter is considered conclusively established. n8

In addition to admissions produced as a result of a formal demand under Rule 36, admissions which are prepared or received through pretrial discovery may be utilized as part of a summary judgment motion. n9 These other types of admissions may include, for example, admissions made in correspondence; admissions made in the opponent's own documents; n10 admissions made on the record in court proceedings such as a hearing or oral argument; or admissions contained in the official record of other cases. If an admission is a judicial admission, it constitutes unequivocal evidence. n11 Even if it does not constitute a binding, judicial admission, it nonetheless constitutes admissible evidence of the statement made by the opponent. n12

[5] Stipulations

Rule 56(c) expressly provides that the court in its determination of a summary judgment motion may consider stipulations submitted by the movant or the nonmovant. n1 A "factual stipulation" is a formal concession that has the effect of withdrawing a fact from issue and dispensing entirely with the need for proof of that fact. Thus, a stipulation is conclusive in the action, which means that the facts stated in a stipulation are not subject to subsequent denial or variation; furthermore, the parties will not be permitted to deny the truth of the facts stated, nor to maintain a contention contrary to the stipulated statement of facts, nor to suggest on appeal that the facts were other than as stipulated or that any material fact was omitted. n2 Because of its powerful nature, a stipulation is a useful tool in a summary judgment motion or response. n3

[6] Facts Subject to Judicial Notice

A court in determination of a summary judgment motion may consider matters subject to judicial notice. n1 A court may take judicial notice of facts that are so well-established that they do not need to be proved by the introduction of evidence at trial. The court may take judicial notice of such facts on its own, n2 and must do so when requested by a party and supplied with the necessary information. n3 However, on request of the opposition party, the court must hear argument as to the propriety of taking judicial notice as to any particular fact. n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.94 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Human Life of Wash., Inc. v. Brumsickle, 624 F.3d 990, 1022 (9th Cir. 2010) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Brunet, Summary Judgment Materials, 147 F.R.D. 647, 649 (1993) .

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n6)Footnote 2. In re Sunset Bay Assocs., 944 F.2d 1503, 1509 (9th Cir. 1991) (court considered unsigned and incomplete deposition as affidavit in determination of summary judgment motion because deponent was sworn and deposition was made on personal knowledge and set forth facts that were admissible in evidence).

(n7)Footnote 3. Hoover v. Switlik Parachute Co., 663 F.2d 964, 965-967 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A); see In re Independent Serv. Orgs. Antitrust Litig., 114 F. Supp. 2d 1070, 1085 (D. Kan. 2000) .

(n9)Footnote 2. Garside v. Osco Drug, Inc., 895 F.2d 46, 49-50 (1st Cir. 1990) (expert's anticipated testimony in plaintiff's interrogatory answer constituted inadmissible hearsay when offered as evidence of causation of child's injury); Vidrine v. Enger, 752 F.2d 107, 110 (5th Cir. 1984) (interrogatory answer containing third party's description of expert's anticipated testimony without independent corroboration by expert was inadmissible hearsay).

(n10)Footnote 3. Vidrine v. Enger, 752 F.2d 107, 109 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n11)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n12)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36.

(n13)Footnote 3. See United States v. 2204 Barbara Lane, 960 F.2d 126, 129 (11th Cir. 1992) (statement that property was used to facilitate drug transactions used as admission in civil forfeiture action brought by government).

(n14)Footnote 4. Carney v. IRS (In re Carney), 258 F.3d 415, 420 (5th Cir. 2001) ; Appley v. West, 929 F.2d 1176, 1179-1180 (7th Cir. 1991) (admission is unequivocal evidence); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b).

(n15)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3), (4).

(n16)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(4).

(n17)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3).

(n18)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b).

(n19)Footnote 9. See Welker Bearing Co. v. PHD, Inc., 550 F.3d 1090, 1099 (Fed. Cir. 2008) .

(n20)Footnote 10. Solana v. GSF Dev. Driller I, 587 F.3d 266, 272-273 (5th Cir. 2009) (admissions contained in opposition affidavits).

(n21)Footnote 11. Tobey v. Extel/JWP, Inc., 985 F.2d 330, 333 (7th Cir. 1993) (failure to challenge defendant's statement of facts in sex discrimination action brought against plaintiff's former employer supported use of those statements as admissions against plaintiff for purpose of summary judgment).

(n22)Footnote 12. United States v. Allegheny Ludlum Corp., 366 F.3d 164, 174 (3d Cir. 2004) ; Wright v. Illinois Dep't of Corrections, 204 F.3d 727, 735 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n23)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n24)Footnote 2. Christian Legal Soc'y Chapter of the Univ. of Cal. v. Martinez, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 2971, 177 L. Ed. 2d 838, 853-854 (2010) .

(n25)Footnote 3. Kirtley v. Sovereign Life Ins. Co. (In re Durability, Inc.), 212 F.3d 551 (10th Cir. 2000) .

(n26)Footnote 1. Island Software & Computer Serv. v. Microsoft Corp., 413 F.3d 257, 261 (2d Cir. 2005) ; see 1 Weinstein's Federal Evidence, § 201.32[2] (Matthew Bender, 2d ed.).

(n27)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid. 202(c).

(n28)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Evid. 201(d).

(n29)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Evid. 201(e).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.46

§ 17.46 Objection to Supporting Documentationn*

A party may object that an item of documentation cited to support or dispute a fact cannot be presented in a form that would be admissible in evidence. n1 This objection functions much as an objection at trial, adjusted for the pretrial setting. The burden is on the proponent of the material to show that the material is admissible as presented or to explain the admissible form that is anticipated. Under the new rule, a party should not make a separate motion to strike, n2 which was the procedure utilized for an objection prior to the 2010 Amendments. n3

If the action goes to trial, a party's failure to challenge admissibility of any document at the summary judgment stage does not forfeit the right to challenge admissibility at trial. n4 However, if a party fails to object to the inadmissibility of evidence submitted by its opponent in the summary judgment proceedings, the court may consider the evidence at the summary judgment stage. n5 In other words, a failure to raise the issue in the district court constitutes a waiver of the objection only for purposes of summary judgment. n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.91 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(2), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Ogletree v. City of Auburn, 619 F. Supp. 2d 1152, 1159 n.3 (M.D. Ala. 2009) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(2), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Powers v. Hamilton County Pub. Defender Comm'n, 501 F.3d 592, 613 n.3 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(2), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART III. DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MOTION AND OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 17.47-17.59

[Reserved]

§§ 17.47[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.60

§ 17.60 Cross-Motion for Summary Judgmentn*

Although not expressly considered by Rule 56, the cross-motion for summary judgment has been recognized by the courts. A cross-motion for summary judgment is a motion initiated by a nonmovant who is already responding to a motion for summary judgment by an opposition party. The most significant aspect of the cross-motion is that the cross-motion movant (original motion nonmovant) identifies its own claims or defenses, or parts of claims or defenses, for which it requests a grant of summary judgment; n1 the cross-motion may be used because any party may move for summary judgment. n2 The court may be required to examine a separate set of documentation to determine the cross-motion. n3

When a court is presented with cross-motions for summary judgment, the court must consider each party's motion individually to determine if that party has satisfied the summary judgment standard. In practice, therefore, a cross-motion for summary judgment operates like a single summary judgment motion. n4 This means that even when litigants concurrently pursue summary judgment, it is not necessarily true that at least one party inevitably will be entitled to summary judgment. In other words, the denial of one cross-motion does not imply the grant of the opponent's cross-motion. Each individual summary judgment motion must be evaluated independently to determine whether there exists a genuine dispute of material fact and whether the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n5 Before granting summary judgment with respect to either movant, the court must be satisfied that under the governing legal standard, the facts are not genuinely in dispute. Whether a factual dispute exists is a legal inquiry for the court and may not be waived by agreement of the parties. n6

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.120 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Westfield Ins. Co. v. Tech Dry Inc., 336 F.3d 503, 506 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. CQ Inc. v. TXU Mining Co. LP, 565 F.3d 268, 274 (5th Cir. 2009) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1), (3).

(n5)Footnote 4. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. v. Mobil Producing Tex. & N.M., 281 F.3d 1249, 1253 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (when parties bring cross-motions for summary judgment, each nonmovant receives benefit of favorable inferences).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see Griffis v. Delta Family-Care Disability, 723 F.2d 822, 824 (11th Cir. 1984) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.61

§ 17.61 Summary Judgment Initiated by Courtn*

[1] Options For Court

After providing the parties with notice and a reasonable time to respond, the court may take any of the following three actions on the express authority of Rule 56:

1. The court may grant summary judgment for a nonmovant. n1

2. The court has the option to grant summary judgment to a party on grounds not raised by the party in its motion. n2

3. The court may consider summary judgment on its own after identifying for the parties material facts that may not be genuinely in dispute. n3

These three related procedures have been developed in practice by the courts, and now are included in the text of Rule 56. n4 Even without authority of Rule 56, courts have also historically exercised their discretion to accomplish the same result by simply inviting a party to move for summary judgment; in that event, the regular procedures applicable to summary judgment motions under Rule 56(c) will apply. n5

Rule 56 does not specify the precise requirements for a court to provide the parties with notice and a reasonable time to respond to proposals for court-initiated summary judgment procedures. Formal, explicit notice of a district court's intent to grant summary judgment certainly is sufficient, n6 but is not always required. Even in the absence of formal notice, some appellate courts have held that adequate notice may be inferred from the facts and circumstances of a case. n7

Rule 56(f) also does not specify what constitutes a reasonable time to prepare a proper summary judgment response to a proposed sua sponte summary judgment ruling by the court. This determination must be made on the particular facts of each case. As a minimum notice, Rule 6 provides for at least 14 days' notice of a written motion. n8

[2] Grant of Summary Judgment to Nonmovant

The court may grant summary judgment for a nonmovant. n1 Thus, rather than grant summary judgment for the party that has filed a motion for summary judgment, the court has the option to grant summary judgment to the party responding to the motion in opposition, even if the nonmovant has not filed its own cross-motion for summary judgment. In essence, the court is deciding that, not only is the movant's motion denied, but that it is sua sponte granting summary judgment to the nonmovant on the claims or defenses specified in the movant's motion. To do so, the court must independently determine that the nonmovant has met the standard for summary judgment specified in Rule 56(a). n2

[3] Grant of Summary Judgment on Grounds Not Raised in Motion

The court may grant summary judgment to a party even on grounds not raised by the party in its motion. n1 In such circumstances, the grounds actually relied on by the court must meet the standard for summary judgment specified in Rule 56(a) that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The court must also state on the record the grounds and reasons for granting. n2 As with other court initiated summary judgment determinations, the court may not act until after it has provided the parties with notice and a reasonable time to respond. n3

[4] Procedural Considerations

The court may consider summary judgment on its own, even without a motion filed by a party, provided that it has identified for the parties material facts that may not be genuinely in dispute. n1 This procedure has frequently been used by the courts before its 2010 codification. It requires an appropriate record, n2 notice to the party against which the court is contemplating summary judgment, a reasonable time for that party to present evidence and arguments in opposition, n3 and compliance with the standard for summary judgment specified in Rule 56(a). n4 A court ordinarily may order summary judgment on its own initiative only when discovery is sufficiently advanced that parties have enjoyed a reasonable opportunity to obtain material facts. n5 To grant summary judgment sua sponte, a court need not actually receive submissions of the parties but must at least provide parties with a sufficient opportunity to submit materials and cite to materials and to argue supporting or opposing the motion. n6

Some courts have recognized an exception to an express notice requirement in cases where summary judgment is granted sua sponte when the following conditions are present: (1) the point at issue is purely legal; (2) the record was fully developed; and (3) the failure to give notice does not prejudice the party. n7 However, the notice requirement for sua sponte summary judgment demands at the very least that the parties be made aware of the court's intention to consider such a procedure and be given the minimum 14-day period mandated by Rule 6 to respond to a motion. A court's sua sponte entry of summary judgment without appropriate notice is often grounds for reversal. On the other hand, if the party was not procedurally prejudiced by the lack of adequate notice in that the party was not actually deprived of the opportunity to present evidence in support of its position as a result of the unfair surprise, then the failure to provide notice is harmless error. n8

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.71 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f)(1); see § 17.61[2], below.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f)(2); see § 17.61[3], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f)(3); see § 17.61[4], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n7)Footnote 6. NetJets Aviation, Inc. v. LHC Communs., LLC, 537 F.3d 168, 178 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Acumed LLC v. Advanced Surgical Servs., 561 F.3d 199, 223-224 (3d Cir. 2009) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f)(1).

(n11)Footnote 2. Acton v. City of Columbia, 436 F.3d 969, 975 (8th Cir. 2006) (district court has discretion to grant nonmovant summary judgment, even when nonmovant has not filed cross-motion for summary judgment).

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f)(2).

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see Island Park, LLC v. CSX Transp., 559 F.3d 96, 99 (2d Cir. 2009) (district court denied party's motion for summary judgment, but sua sponte granted it summary judgment on claim not specified in motion).

(n14)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f); see § 17.61[1], above.

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f)(3).

(n16)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c).

(n17)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f).

(n18)Footnote 4. NetJets Aviation, Inc. v. LHC Communs., LLC, 537 F.3d 168, 178 (2d Cir. 2008) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n19)Footnote 5. Frederique-Alexandre v. Dep't of Natural & Envtl. Res., 478 F.3d 433, 438-439 (1st Cir. 2007) .

(n20)Footnote 6. Seamons v. Snow, 206 F.3d 1021, 1025-1026 (10th Cir. 2000) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f); § 17.61[1], above .

(n21)Footnote 7. Gibson v. Mayor & Council of Wilmington, 355 F.3d 215, 219 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n22)Footnote 8. Wells Real Estate Inv. Trust II, Inc. v. Chardon/Hato Rey P'ship, S.E., 615 F.3d 45, 52 (1st Cir. 2010) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.62

§ 17.62 Time Requirementsn*

[1] Requirements for Filing and Responding to Motion

Generally, a party may file a motion for summary judgment at any time until 30 days after the close of all discovery, unless a different time is set by local rule or the court orders otherwise. n1 Thus, other than for this general rule allowing a summary judgment motion until 30 days after the close of discovery, local rules and court scheduling orders commonly set all other time limits on filing a motion and response to a motion for summary judgment. The timing provisions in former Rule 56 have been superseded. n2 The current rule allows a motion for summary judgment to be filed as early as the commencement of an action; however, in most cases the motion will be premature until the nonmovant has had time to file a responsive pleading, and other pretrial proceedings and conferences have been held. n3 Scheduling orders or other pretrial orders can regulate timing to fit the needs of the case. n4 In particular, at an early pretrial conference, the court and attorneys may consider and take action on the appropriateness and timing of summary judgment motions under Rule 56. n5

[2] Request by Nonmovant for Additional Time to Ascertain Facts

[a] Options for Trial Court When Nonmovant Requests Additional Time

In relatively simple cases, a party may move for summary judgment well before discovery is complete. n1 However, it frequently occurs that, because of more access to the facts regarding the claims and defenses, a movant may have more documentation to prepare for a summary judgment motion than a nonmovant may have documentation to prepare for a response in opposition to the motion. n2 In contemplation of such circumstances, Rule 56 authorizes a procedure that allows the nonmovant to request the court for additional time in which to conduct discovery. n3

Under Rule 56(d), a nonmovant may request an order for more time to respond to a motion for summary judgment by showing by affidavit or declaration that the nonmovant cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition, and specifying the reasons it cannot. n4 On such a showing, the court has three alternatives: n5

1. The court may defer considering the motion for summary judgment or may deny the motion for summary judgment. n6

2. The court may allow the nonmovant time to obtain affidavits or declarations or to take discovery. n7

3. The court may issue any other appropriate order. n8

[b] Diligence Required by Party Requesting Additional Time

A party making a Rule 56(f) motion must state the reasons it cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition. n9 This means that the party must demonstrate it exercised due diligence both in attempting discovery before the summary judgment motion, n10 and in requesting an extension of time after the summary judgment motion has been made. n11 The courts consider many factors in determining whether a party has been diligent in pursuing discovery: (1) the length of the pendency of the case prior to the Rule 56(d) request for additional time; (2) whether and when the party could have anticipated its need for the requested discovery; (3) the previous efforts, if any, made to obtain the needed information through formal discovery or otherwise; (4) the degree and type of discovery already taken; (5) any limitations placed on discovery by the trial court; (6) any prior requests of or provisions for discovery by the trial court; (7) any warning that, absent a more prompt request, discovery might be denied; and (8) whether the requested information was accessible to the requesting party. n12

With respect to whether a party has exercised due diligence in seeking a Rule 56(d) extension of time, the courts have decided that a request for additional time for discovery must be made within a reasonable time following receipt of the motion for summary judgment. n13 The request should generally precede or accompany the response to the summary judgment motion. At the least, the request should be made before any court imposed deadline for completion of discovery. n14 There may be extenuating circumstances under which a party opposing a summary judgment motion may not realize until the initial round of oral argument that additional discovery is required. However, oral argument is a maximum limit, and a Rule 56(d) extension request made after the conclusion of oral argument on a summary judgment motion ordinarily is too late. n15

[c] Party Must Submit Affidavit or Declaration to Request Additional Time

A district court may make an order under Rule 56(f) extending time for discovery n16 only if the opposition party files an affidavit or declaration that specifies the reasons it cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition. n17 The courts have interpreted this language to mean that a person with knowledge of the reasons for failure to present facts must submit the affidavit or declaration to the district court before the party is entitled to an order of relief extending time or denying the motion for summary judgment. Most courts have then found that this affidavit or declaration need not be filed with a separate, formal motion pursuant to Rule 56(d), but rather that the party opposing it must attach it to the party's memorandum in opposition to a motion for summary judgment. The courts require some type of separate affidavit or declaration, rather than merely an obscure request in the body of the summary judgment motion or supporting legal memorandum. n18 In other words, a simple reference to the need for discovery in other motion papers is insufficient to meet the requirements for a Rule 56(d) motion. n19

Furthermore, the failure to file an affidavit or declaration is by itself, sufficient grounds for denial of a request for further discovery. Rule 56(d) has been referred to as a carefully crafted rule that serves as a vehicle through which the nonmovant meets its obligation to inform the district court of its need for discovery, n20 and therefore it is extremely important that a party comply with Rule 56(d)'s requirement through the use an affidavit or declaration, as opposed to use of a brief. n21 For example, a mere reference to Rule 56(d) and to the need for additional discovery in a memorandum of law in opposition to a motion for summary judgment is not an adequate substitute for a Rule 56(d) affidavit, and the failure to file an affidavit under Rule 56(d) is in itself sufficient grounds to reject a claim that the opportunity for discovery was inadequate. n22

Most circuits have developed language specifying the precise requirements for the content of an affidavit or declaration in support of a Rule 56(d) motion; the basic requirements are all similar. Some circuits require that the affidavit contain the following information: (1) what facts are sought and the manner in which they are to be obtained; (2) how these facts are reasonably expected to raise a genuine dispute of material fact; (3) what efforts the affiant has made to obtain them; and (4) why the affiant's efforts were unsuccessful. n23 The Third Circuit applies a similar three-part requirement; it requires that the affidavit specify: (1) what particular information is sought; (2) if uncovered, how that information would preclude summary judgment; and (3) why it has not previously been obtained. n24 The Tenth Circuit requires that the affidavit: (1) identify the probable facts that are unavailable and the steps already taken to obtain these facts; (2) state with specificity why extra time is needed; and (3) state how the additional time and material will rebut the summary judgment motion. n25

[d] Party Must State How Additional Discovery Will Aid in Opposition to Summary Judgment Motion

When the nonmovant in the summary judgment motion requests additional discovery, the nonmovant must state specifically how a continuance for further discovery will enable that party to oppose the assertions contained in the pending summary judgment motion. n26 In other words, the movant must show how deferring the determination on the summary judgment motion will enable the movant, by discovery or other means, to show that there is a genuine dispute of fact in the underlying case. n27

To satisfy this requirement, the requesting party may not merely rely on vague assertions that additional discovery will produce needed but unspecified facts. n28 Rather, the party must state in a detailed manner the factual material sought and precisely how those materials will help in opposing summary judgment. n29

[e] Waiver for Failure to Request Additional Time

Courts have consistently held that to obtain an order compelling time for further discovery on a summary judgment motion, a nonmovant must submit the required affidavit or declaration requesting additional time under Rule 56(d) prior to the district court's decision on the summary judgment motion itself. n30 Failure to submit the affidavit or declaration constitutes waiver. Furthermore, if the party fails to file a Rule 56(d) affidavit in the lower court, the appellate court will not consider the argument that the losing party lacked adequate time to perform the discovery needed to oppose the motion for summary judgment. n31 For example, in a civil RICO case the plaintiff could not argue on appeal that the defendants refused to turn over telephone records as requested by the plaintiff during discovery nor that such telephone records would have proven on summary judgment that alleged telephone conversations were conducted interstate. n32

[f] Appeal of Denial of Motion for Additional Discovery

A denial of a request for additional time for discovery to respond to a summary judgment motion constitutes a conclusive determination for the purposes of allowing an interlocutory appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, and therefore is immediately appealable. n33 If the trial court has denied a motion for further discovery under Rule 56(d), the circuit court reviews that denial under the abuse of discretion standard. n34 The circuit court will find an abuse of discretion in a trial court's denial of a motion for further discovery only if there is a showing that further discovery would lead to denial of the underlying motion for summary judgment. n35 Furthermore, when the circuit court reviews a denial of a Rule 56(f) motion for abuse of discretion, the appellate court will not consider justifications for the request for time for further discovery that were not presented with the original motion. n36

If a district court failed to consider a Rule 56(d) motion before it granted summary judgment, the de novo standard of review applies. n37 However, the trial court need not explicitly state its decision on a Rule 56(d) motion, and when a trial court simply grants a summary judgment, the appellate court will assume that the Rule 56(d) motion was denied, and apply the abuse of discretion standard to the implied denial. n38

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewStandards of ReviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 56.61, 56.82, 56.100 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1) (scheduling conference).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(E); see Allstate Ins. Co. v. Passaro-Henry, 660 F. Supp. 2d 317, 319 (D. Conn. 2009) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Ballard v. Heineman, 548 F.3d 1132, 1136 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Willis v. Town of Marshall, 426 F.3d 251, 264 (4th Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 3. See Allen v. Sybase, Inc., 468 F.3d 642, 661-662 (10th Cir. 2006) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n12)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d)(1); *see Aspex Eyewear, Inc. v. United Syntek Corp., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18404, at *24-26 (W.D.N.C. Mar. 7, 2008) (denial of pending summary judgment pending further discovery).

(n13)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d)(2).

(n14)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d)(3).

(n15)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n16)Footnote 10. Rivera-Torres v. Rey-Hernandez, 502 F.3d 7, 10-11 (1st Cir. 2007) (rule may not be used to give relief to those who sleep on their rights).

(n17)Footnote 11. Thomas v. Pacificorp, 324 F.3d 1176, 1179 (10th Cir. 2003) (if party opposing summary judgment and seeking a continuance pending completion of discovery fails to take advantage of shelter provided by rule by filing affidavit or declaration, court may grant summary judgment); see Ayala-Gerena v. Bristol Myers-Squibb Co., 95 F.3d 86, 92 (1st Cir. 1996) (rule is designed to protect vigilant litigants).

(N18)Footnote 12. Theotokatos v. Sara Lee Personal Prods., 971 F. Supp. 332, 343-344 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (party had not been dilatory in pursuing discovery considering that delay was only three months and third-party defendant was waiting for court to rule on its motion to dismiss before commencing discovery).

(n19)Footnote 13. Rodriguez-Cuervos v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 181 F.3d 15, 22-23 (1st Cir. 1999) (district court properly denied plaintiff's request for further discovery when motion was made after court's grant of summary judgment because party must move for a discovery continuance within reasonable time; party may not merely attempt to address summary judgment motion on merits and then fall back on Rule 56(f) if unsuccessful).

(n20)Footnote 14. Thomas v. Pacificorp, 324 F.3d 1176, 1179 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n21)Footnote 15. Massachusetts Sch. of Law v. ABA, 142 F.3d 26, 44 (1st Cir. 1998) (plaintiff's request for additional discovery was too late when filed three weeks after oral argument on summary judgment motion).

(n22)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d)(2).

(n23)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d).

(n24)Footnote 18. McKissick v. Yuen, 618 F.3d 1177, 1190 (10th Cir. 2010) .

(n25)Footnote 19. Thomas v. Pacificorp, 324 F.3d 1176, 1179 (10th Cir. 2003) (affidavit required to show why party making request for extension of discovery is unable to present facts essential to justify the party's opposition to summary judgment).

(n26)Footnote 20. Cacevic v. City of Hazel Park, 226 F.3d 483, 488 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n27)Footnote 21. McKissick v. Yuen, 618 F.3d 1177, 1190 (10th Cir. 2010) .

(n28)Footnote 22. Cacevic v. City of Hazel Park, 226 F.3d 483, 488 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n29)Footnote 23. Gualandi v. Adams, 385 F.3d 236, 244 (2d Cir. 2004) ; see Massachusetts Sch. of Law v. ABA, 142 F.3d 26, 44-45 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n30)Footnote 24. Doe v. Abington Friends Sch., 480 F.3d 252, 256 (3d Cir. 2007) .

(n31)Footnote 25. Southway v. Cent. Bank of Nig., 149 F. Supp. 2d 1268, 1277-1278 (D. Colo. 2001) (plaintiff's affidavit did not comply with Tenth Circuit's requirements for such affidavit).

(n32)Footnote 26. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d); Raby v. Livingston, 600 F.3d 552, 561 (5th Cir. 2010) (request to defer summary judgment decision must set forth plausible basis for believing that specified facts probably exist and indicate how emergent facts would influence outcome of pending summary judgment motion).

(n33)Footnote 27. Everson v. Leis, 556 F.3d 484, 493 (6th Cir. 2009) ; Allen v. Bridgestone/Firestone, 81 F.3d 793, 797-798 (8th Cir. 1996) .

(n34)Footnote 28. Johnston v. Simmons, 45 F. Supp. 2d 1220, 1225-1226 (D. Kan. 1999) (district court denied plaintiff's motion to stay summary judgment determination because plaintiff failed to state with specificity how additional time would enable him to obtain evidence to oppose the summary judgment motion, and plaintiff's mere assertions that discovery was incomplete were insufficient to invoke procedures of Rule 56(f)); Promuto v. Waste Mgmt., Inc., 44 F. Supp. 2d 628, 650 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (district court refused to grant defendants' request for further discovery because defendants failed to provide any basis to believe that further discovery would alter outcome of summary judgment motion).

(n35)Footnote 29. Wiggins v. DaVita Tidewater, LLC, 451 F. Supp. 2d 789, 794-795 (E.D. Va. 2006) .

(n36)Footnote 30. Hackworth v. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co., 468 F.3d 722, 725 (10th Cir. 2006) (opposing party moving for protections of Rule 56(f) must attempt to do so by submitting affidavit in direct response to motion for summary judgment, not following district court's disposition of that motion).

(n37)Footnote 31. Skrzypczak v. Roman Catholic Diocese, 611 F.3d 1238, 1242-1243 (10th Cir. 2010) ;

Scottsdale Ins. Co. v. Flowers, 513 F.3d 546, 552 (6th Cir. 2008) .

(n38)Footnote 32. Annulli v. Panikkar, 200 F.3d 189, 201-202 (3d Cir. 1999) (Rule 56(f) specifies procedure to be followed and provides that party must file affidavit setting forth why time is needed).

(n39)Footnote 33. Garrett v. Stratman, 254 F.3d 946, 956 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n40)Footnote 34. Cyberworld Enter. Techs., Inc. v. Napolitano, 602 F.3d 189, 200 (3d Cir. 2010) ; Moss v. United States Secret Serv., 572 F.3d 962 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n41)Footnote 35. Waterloo Furniture Components v. Haworth, 467 F.3d 641, 648 (7th Cir. 2006) (court did not abuse discretion in denying motion request further time for discovery because information plaintiff requested to discover would not have affected outcome).

(n42)Footnote 36. Stearns Airport Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 170 F.3d 518, 534-535 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n43)Footnote 37. Byrd v. Guess, 137 F.3d 1126, 1135 (9th Cir. 1998) (de novo review of failure to address Rule 56(f) motion).

(n44)Footnote 38. Margolis v. Ryan, 140 F.3d 850, 853 (9th Cir. 1998) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.63

§ 17.63 Summary Judgment Motion Burdensn*

[1] Burdens for Movant

[a] Movant's Initial Burden of Production

Although Rule 56 does not explicitly refer to the burdens of production and persuasion placed on the parties to a summary judgment motion, n1 consideration of any burdens involved is always useful to understand the exact requirements that each party must meet in the summary judgment process. A "burden of production" is an obligation on a particular party to make some factual, probative, evidentiary presentation at a particular stage of the summary process. n2 There is always a burden of production that is imposed on the movant at the time the motion for summary judgment is filed to present facts establishing the summary judgment standard with respect to claims or defenses that constitute the subject matter of the motion. n3 Then, there is a counter burden of production imposed on the summary judgment nonmovant when the movant has satisfied the movant's initial burden of production. n4

The movant for summary judgment bears the initial burden of production to demonstrate at the time of the motion that the requisite standard for summary judgment as set forth in Rule 56 has been satisfied: n5 that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. n6 This burden means that the movant must make a prima facie showing that the motion satisfies the standard for obtaining summary judgment. In this context, a prima facie showing means that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the movant's evidence is sufficient to entitle the movant to summary judgment. n7

The movant may not meet this burden merely by making conclusory assertions that summary judgment should be granted, n8 nor is the initial burden satisfied by unsupported factual allegations. n9 The movant must direct the court to the documentation in the summary judgment record which supports the motion and also the appropriate legal and factual contentions. n10 If the movant fails to meet its burden of production to show that there exists no genuine dispute of material fact, or fails to show entitlement to judgment as a matter of law, the court may not grant the motion for summary judgment. n11 The burden of production ordinarily requires some submission of affidavits or declarations. The optional nature of submitting affidavits is evidenced by the language of Rule 56(c) itself, which describes supporting papers for the movant as, the pleadings, the discovery, and the disclosure materials on file, and "any affidavits" which show that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact. n12 The reference to affidavits as an option, and not as a mandatory part of the supporting documentation, establishes that the burden of production may be met through the identification of supporting material other than affidavits. n13

The burden of production on the movant can be affected by the burden of persuasion. Thus, the movant need not produce documentation in addition to the pleadings, such as affidavits which demonstrate the absence of a genuine dispute of fact, if the movant does not have the ultimate burden of persuasion on a particular claim at trial. In such circumstances, it may satisfy its initial burden by specifying that the record lacks substantial evidence to support a necessary element of the nonmovant's claim. n14

[b] Movant's Initial Burden Affected by Burden of Persuasion

If the movant is also the party bearing the burden of persuasion at trial to prevail on a claim, its initial summary judgment burden for that claim is higher than for the ordinary initial burden of production claim. n15 The burden of persuasion means that the movant at trial would have to establish that the weight of evidence is in its favor and that it is entitled to prevail on the particular claim or defense. n16 When the movant has the burden of persuasion for a claim or defense, the movant must show that the record contains evidence satisfying the burden of persuasion; therefore, the evidence must be so persuasive that no reasonable trier of fact could disbelieve the evidence; in other words, the movant must introduce supporting evidence that would conclusively establish movant's right to a judgment after trial. n17

When the movant has the ultimate burden of persuasion, the movant must still satisfy its burden by showing that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law even in the absence of an adequate response by the nonmovant. Consequently, a party that has both the burden of production and the ultimate burden of persuasion must meet a more stringent standard in order to satisfy the initial burden in a summary judgment motion. n18 On the other hand, if the nonmovant bears the ultimate burden of persuasion at trial, the movant may satisfy its initial burden by establishing that there is evidence which negates a required element of the nonmovant's claim or defense or that there is insufficient evidence in the record for the nonmovant to establish an element of the opponent's claim or defense. n19

[2] Burdens for Nonmovant

[a] Nonmovant's Initial Burden of Production in Response to Motion for Summary Judgment

If the movant has not met its initial burden of production, n1 the nonmovant has no burden of production. However, if the movant has met the initial burden of production, the burden shifts to the nonmovant to produce evidence or designate specific facts showing that there is a genuine dispute issue for trial, or that the movant is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n2 This burden on the nonmovant to respond cannot be satisfied merely by allegations or denials in its own pleading. Rather, the nonmovant must cite to specific matters its own pleadings that support its response; its response may also consist of depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations, admissions, interrogatory answers, or other materials. n3 If the nonmovant does not respond in a sufficient manner, the court may enter summary judgment against the nonmovant. n4 or give the nonmovant an opportunity to properly produce facts to support its position. n5 The court must determine at this stage whether there are any genuine factual disputes that properly can be resolved only by a finder of fact because they may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party. n6

Unless it can show that the movant is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law, it is essential that the nonmovant produce significantly probative evidence that shows the existence of a genuine dispute of material fact. n7 Even if the supporting documentation presented to the court by the movant contains arguments or defenses that could potentially defeat the movant's claim or defense, if developed, summary judgment could still be granted, unless the nonmovant indicates to the court the specific facts that establish a particular issue for trial. n8 In other words, the court is not required to discover or develop an argument or defense sua sponte. n9 Furthermore, the court need not augment a nonmovant's position with its own speculation; all the court need do is provide the nonmovant with an adequate opportunity to respond to the motion. n10

[b] Nonmovant's Initial Burden Affected by Burden of Persuasion

The summary judgment nonmovant's initial burden of production n11 may be affected if the nonmovant has the ultimate burden of persuasion at trial. n12 The burden of persuasion means that the nonmovant at trial would have to establish that the weight of evidence is in its favor and that it is entitled to prevail on the particular claim or defense. n13 When the nonmovant would have the burden of persuasion at trial, there is a second step to the court's evaluation of the sufficiency of the evidence presented by the nonmovant in opposition to the summary judgment motion. The court must evaluate the evidence presented by considering the substantive evidentiary burden on the claim and determine whether there is a triable issue of fact based on the quantum and quality of proof the nonmovant must meet at trial. Thus, the court is required to review the facts based on whether the standard is the preponderance of the evidence, clear and convincing evidence, or some other standard. n14

The standard of proof that the nonmovant has at trial also directly affects its burden on summary judgment. If the nonmovant party will bear the burden of proof at trial on a dispositive issue, the nonmovant bears the burden of production under Rule 56 to designate specific facts showing that there is a genuine dispute for trial based on its standard of proof for that claim. n15 For example, when the trial court was to evaluate the evidence presented for summary judgment in a libel case, it had to consider the higher burden of persuasion a plaintiff on a libel claim must meet at trial, specifically that plaintiff must prove "actual malice," that is, statements made with knowing falsity or reckless disregard for the truth, by clear and convincing evidence. Using that standard, the court had to consider whether a jury reasonably could find for either party at trial, and if so, could not grant summary judgment. n16

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.40 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n3)Footnote 2. White v. Baxter Healthcare Corp., 533 F.3d 381, 400 (6th Cir. 2008) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 3. Bayle v. Allstate Ins. Co., 615 F.3d 350, 359 (5th Cir. 2010) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), (c).

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 17.63[2][a], below; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1), (e).

(n6)Footnote 5. Travelers Prop. Cas. Co. of Am. v. Hillerich & Bradsby Co., 598 F.3d 257, 271 (6th Cir. 2010) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), (c)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n8)Footnote 7. McBeth v. Himes, 598 F.3d 708, 724-725 (10th Cir. 2010) (defendant movant for summary judgment on basis of qualified immunity satisfied initial burden of production by making prima facie showing of objective reasonableness, and that showing shifted burden of production to plaintiff nonmovant).

(n9)Footnote 8. Ass'n of Flight Attendants-CWA v. United States DOT, 564 F.3d 462, 466 (D.C. Cir. 2009) (summary judgment must be supported by "specific facts" stated in affidavits, and not conclusory allegations).

(n10)Footnote 9. Reese v. Herbert, 527 F.3d 1253, 1268-1269 (11th Cir. 2008) (summary judgment cannot be based on factual assertions that are unsupported in the record).

(n11)Footnote 10. Reese v. Herbert, 527 F.3d 1253, 1268-1269 (11th Cir. 2008) (summary judgment cannot be based on factual assertions that are unsupported in the record).

(n12)Footnote 11. Castro v. Collecto, Inc,, 668 F. Supp. 2d 950, 957 (W.D. Tex. 2009) (if movant fails to meet initial burden of production, motion must be denied regardless of nonmovant's response).

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A).

(n14)Footnote 13. See Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Willoughby, 863 F.2d 1029, 1032 (D.C. Cir. 1988) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) ; see § 17.63[1][b], below.

(n16)Footnote 15. Pelt v. Utah, 539 F.3d 1271, 1280 (10th Cir. 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Chi. Bridge & Iron Co. N.V. v. FTC, 534 F.3d 410, 425 (5th Cir. 2008) .

(n18)Footnote 17. Enzo Biochem, Inc. v. Applera Corp., 599 F.3d 1325, 1337 (Fed. Cir. 2010) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n19)Footnote 18. Planned Parenthood Minn., N.D., S.D. v. Rounds, 530 F.3d 724, 736 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Dominant Semiconductors Sdn. Bhd. v. OSRAM GmbH, 524 F.3d 1254, 1263 (Fed. Cir. 2008) ; see § 17.63[1][a], above, § 17.63[2][b], below.

(n21)Footnote 1. See § 17.63[1][a], above.

(n22)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n23)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A), (3); see Triple Tee Golf, Inc. v. Nike, Inc., 485 F.3d 253, 261 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n24)Footnote 4. Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Willoughby, 863 F.2d 1029, 1032 (D.C. Cir. 1988) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(3).

(n25)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(1).

(n26)Footnote 6. Wiley v. Glassman, 511 F.3d 151, 155 (D.C. Cir. 2007) .

(n27)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 247-248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) (existence only of some alleged factual disputes between parties will not defeat otherwise properly supported motion for summary judgment).

(n28)Footnote 8. United States v. Shumway, 199 F.3d 1093, 1104 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n29)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3).

(n30)Footnote 10. Blue Cross & Blue Shield v. Weitz, 913 F.2d 1544, 1550 (11th Cir. 1990) (court had no obligation to develop arguments that were evidenced by documentation but not actually articulated in opposition to summary judgment).

(n31)Footnote 11. See § 17.63[2][a], above.

(n32)Footnote 12. Thom v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., 353 F.3d 848, 851 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n33)Footnote 13. Chi. Bridge & Iron Co. N.V. v. FTC, 534 F.3d 410, 425 (5th Cir. 2008) .

(n34)Footnote 14. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 252-254, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) (in deciding summary judgment motion, court considers evidence based on substantive evidentiary burdens that would be present at trial).

(n35)Footnote 15. Ricci v. DeStefano, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 2658, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490, 511 (2009) .

(n36)Footnote 16. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 254-256, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) (but directing entry of summary judgment when plaintiff nonmovant could not make this showing).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.64

§ 17.64 Partial Summary Judgmentn*

[1] Summary Judgment for Less Than Entire Case

The court has considerable flexibility to divide a lawsuit and to grant summary judgment for only a portion of the lawsuit. First, the court has discretion to grant summary judgment on any claim or defense, or only a part of any claim or defense, that has been identified by a movant in the movant's motion for summary judgment. n1 Additionally, the court has discretion to order summary judgment on its own initiative after it has identified for the parties material facts that not genuinely in dispute n2 for the claims or defenses, or parts of claims or defenses, as identified by the court. n3

A summary judgment ruling that disposes of fewer than all claims and defenses, or fewer than all parties, is commonly referred to as a "partial summary judgment." Effective December 1, 2010, the term "partial summary judgment" is also referred to in the Rule 56(a) heading. n4 The first sentence of Rule 56(a) was added to make clear that summary judgment may be requested not only as to an entire case but also as to a claim, defense, or part of a claim or defense. The Rule 56(a) heading adopts the common phrase "partial summary judgment" to describe disposition of less than the whole action, whether or not the order grants all the relief requested by the motion. n5 However, the term "partial summary judgment"' may be something of a misnomer, in that any ruling that disposes of less than all issues and fewer than all parties in an action is not a true judgment within the meaning of Rule 54, n6 which provides that a judgment includes any form of order from which an appeal lies. n7 Generally, any order or other decision that adjudicates fewer than all of the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties is an interlocutory order that may be revised at any time before there is an final judgment in the case. Therefore, most partial summary judgment rulings are not appealable judgments. n8

[2] Partial Summary Judgment Procedure

If a court decides not to grant summary judgment for all the relief requested in the summary judgment motion, the court may enter an order stating any material fact or facts, including an item of damages or other relief, that is not genuinely in dispute and will thereafter treat the such fact as established in the case. n1 The court will enter an order stating which facts are in dispute only after the court has applied the summary judgment standard specified in Rule 56(a) to each claim or defense, or part of a claim or defense, identified by the motion. The court must take care that this determination does not interfere with a party's ability to accept a fact for purposes of the motion only. A nonmovant, for example, may feel confident that a genuine dispute as to one or a few facts will defeat the motion, and prefer to avoid the cost of detailed response to all facts stated by the movant. This position should be available without running the risk that the fact will be taken as established under Rule 56(g) or otherwise deemed to have been accepted for other purposes. n2

The purpose of Rule 56(g) is to conserve some of the judicial resources involved in the denial of a motion for summary judgment and to streamline the litigation process by narrowing the triable issues. n3 Once the court has made a statement of facts that are not genuinely in dispute, in any subsequent trial, the court will limit evidence based on those factual limitations, and the limitations will preclude the ability of the parties to offer proof on those facts. n4 However, although the result of an order stating that a fact is not genuinely in dispute is that the fact is established in the case, the court is not precluded from reconsidering and modifying this interlocutory order before the final judgment. Once a fact is ordered established in the case, however, the court will disturb that ruling only in special circumstances. The parties have the right to rely on the ruling in their preparation for trial. However, on an appropriate showing, the court has the power to modify the ruling, provided that it gives the parties fair notice of the change and an opportunity to respond, and to permit them to prepare for the changed circumstances of trial. n5

[3] Appealability of Partial Summary Judgment

A partial summary judgment order is an interlocutory order because it is entered prior to the final disposition of a case in the district court, and therefore not generally immediately appealable. n1 Furthermore, a district court should not enter a Rule 54(b) certification that a judgment is final unless there is a complete disposition of a claim. n2 However, the district court may certify a claim for immediate appeal if it finds that the partial summary judgment involves a close and controlling legal question and if early appeal may advance disposition of the matter. n3

On the other hand, the appellate court is not bound by the trial court's determination of appealability and may reject a certification if the appellate court is unpersuaded of the efficiency of early appeal. n4 It is an abuse of discretion for the court to certify as a final judgment a partial summary judgment in connection with a claim or party when there are no considerations of efficiency or judicial economy that would support the finding and when the inability to take an immediate appeal would not create hardship or delay. n5 There are circumstances, however, in which a ruling made prior to trial may allow for the entry of a partial final judgment pursuant to Rule 54(b), n6 which would then allow an immediate appeal. For example, in an action by an insured to force the insurer to defend the insured in an administrative action, the court determined that certification of finality of a partial judgment under Rule 54(b) was appropriate because the claims were separable, involved different questions of fact and law, and could have been separately enforced. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.122 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Kannady v. City of Kiowa, 590 F.3d 1161, 1171 (10th Cir. 2010) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n7)Footnote 6. Brauer v. Pannozzo, 232 F. Supp. 2d 814, 818 (N.D. Ohio 2002) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(a).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b); see also § 17.81[2][b].

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(g).

(n11)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(g), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(g), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments; Geneva Int'l Corp. v. Petrof, Spol, S.R.O., 608 F. Supp. 2d 993, 1004-1005 (N.D. Ill. 2009) ; McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenberg & Lauinger, 587 F. Supp. 2d 1170, 1177 (D. Mont. 2008) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Grow v. City of Milwaukee, 84 F. Supp. 2d 990, 1007-1008 (E.D. Wis. 2000) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Huss v. King Co., 338 F.3d 647 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n15)Footnote 1. Landry v. G.B.A., 762 F.2d 462, 464 (5th Cir. 1985) (district court judgment that did not entirely dispose of any one claim was not appealable order under Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b), and appellate court lacked jurisdiction).

(n16)Footnote 2. Holber v. Jacobs (In re Jacobs), 381 B.R. 147, 158 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(b).

(n18)Footnote 4. See Hamblin v. British Airways PLC, 717 F. Supp. 2d 303, 308 (E.D.N.Y. 2010) .

(n19)Footnote 5. Little Earth of United Tribes, Inc. v. United States Dep't of Housing & Urban Dev., 738 F.2d 310, 312-314 (8th Cir. 1984) .

(n20)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n21)Footnote 7. Avondale Industries, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 887 F.2d 1200, 1202-1204 (2d Cir. 1989) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.65

§ 17.65 Discretionary Summary Judgment Hearingn*

[1] Movant and Nonmovant Not Entitled Hearing

Rule 56 does not make any express refer to a summary judgment "hearing." n1 Prior to recent amendments, Rule 56 referred to a hearing in the context of the deadline for filing opposing affidavits, but that reference was not interpreted as an entitlement by the parties to an actual live hearing for the court to take evidence and consider oral arguments. n2 Some courts have stated that a hearing could actually be detrimental in that it could lead to an improper credibility determination by the court. n3 Rule 56 requires only that the parties have an opportunity to submit their evidentiary material and arguments in writing. n4 Furthermore, another federal rule express provides that the court has discretion to provide by rule or order for the submission and determination of motions on briefs without oral hearings. n5 However, many courts still refer to a summary judgment hearing as if it were an automatic occurrence, and it is universally accepted that a court has discretion to hold an oral hearing, especially in complex cases. n6 However, there are limitations on a court's use of evidence obtained and argument made at a hearing. n7

[2] Discretion of Court to Hold Hearing

Even though the parties are not entitled to a summary judgment hearing, the court has discretion to hold an oral hearing after it has had an opportunity to determine if the supporting documentation justifies a hearing. n1 In actual practice, the "hearing" referred to in Rule 56(c) usually is an oral argument held after submission of documentation in support of or opposition to the motion. n2 However, oral legal argument is not required on a motion for summary judgment. Thus, a court has discretion to deny a request for oral argument to give the attorneys an opportunity to explain and elaborate on submitted documentation when the documentation is sufficient to present the positions of the movant and nonmovant, and when the summary judgment motion is held entirely on legal rather than factual disputes, courts have particularly wide discretion to reject an oral hearing. n3 The procedure for a party to request an oral argument is typically governed by applicable local rules for the district in which the court is located. n4 Any conflicts that exist between local rules and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure must be resolved in favor of the federal rules. n5

[3] Limitations on Oral Testimony at Summary Judgment Hearing

Rule 56 does not expressly require or even authorize the trial court to take oral evidence and receive other evidence in a hearing setting. However, courts have found such permission implicit in Rule 43, which governs use of testimonial evidence for a procedural motion and grants a court discretionary authority to direct any portion of a motion to be heard on oral testimony or deposition. n1 There are some unusual circumstances in which oral testimony may be the most efficient or effective means of determining whether there is a genuine dispute of material fact. In such these circumstances, the facts considered at the evidentiary hearing must relate to foundations for questions of law, or mixed questions of fact and law, rather than to merely common factual determinations. n2

On the other hand, the court does have unlimited discretion at a summary judgment hearing to take oral testimony with respect to factual matters. Evidentiary materials in support of and in opposition to the motion should be submitted and cited by the parties and made part of the record, n3 and it is on this record that the court should ordinarily decide the motion. n4 Because the court should not resolve any existing genuine disputes of fact nor or make credibility determinations regarding witnesses, n5 there should ordinarily be no need for oral testimony. n6

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.110 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. March v. Levine, 249 F.3d 462, 473 (6th Cir. 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See March v. Levine, 249 F.3d 462, 473 (6th Cir. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Seamons v. Snow, 206 F.3d 1021, 1026 (10th Cir. 2000) (verbal testimony at summary judgment stage creates considerable temptation for court to assess witness credibility, which court is not allowed to do).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b), (c)(1)(A).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 78(b); see Jorgensen v. Cassiday, 320 F.3d 906, 913 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Equitable Res., Inc. v. United Steel, Local 8-512, 621 F.3d 538, 545-546 (6th Cir. 2010) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See § 17.65[3], below.

(n9)Footnote 1. March v. Levine, 249 F.3d 462, 473 (6th Cir. 2001) (even though oral testimony is not favored in summary judgment proceedings due to well-founded reluctance to turn summary judgment hearing into trial, court has discretion to hear evidence on motions by oral testimony or on affidavits; citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n10)Footnote 2. See Oravec v. Sunny Isles Luxury Ventures, L.C., 527 F.3d 1218, 1222 (11th Cir. 2008) (three summary judgment hearings held in one month primarily for oral legal argument).

(n11)Footnote 3. Cray Communications v. Novatel Computer Sys., 33 F.3d 390, 395-396 (4th Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 4. Lake at Las Vegas Investors Group v. Pacific Malibu Dev. Corp., 933 F.2d 724, 729 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(a); Brydges v. Lewis, 18 F.3d 651, 652 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 43(c); see Arista Records LLC v. Does 1-27, 584 F. Supp. 2d 240, 255 n.19 (D. Me. 2008) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n15)Footnote 2. See County of Oakland v. City of Berkley, 742 F.2d 289, 297-298 (6th Cir. 1984) (court ordered evidentiary hearing to determine structure of complex agreement that formed basis of claims and defenses).

(n16)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1).

(n17)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3); see March v. Levine, 249 F.3d 462, 473 (6th Cir. 2001) .

(n18)Footnote 5. Vital v. Interfaith Med. Ctr., 168 F.3d 615, 621-622 (2d Cir. 1999) (district court may take oral testimony on summary judgment motion pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 43 to determine whether there are disputes of material fact, but not to assess credibility of witnesses or resolve issues of fact).

(n19)Footnote 6. Seamons v. Snow, 206 F.3d 1021, 1026 (10th Cir. 2000) ; see Thompson v. Mahre, 110 F.3d 716, 720 (9th Cir. 1997) (taking of oral testimony on summary judgment should be rare because it would ordinarily be unproductive).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.66

§ 17.66 Determination of Summary Judgment Motion by Courtn*

[1] Court has Discretion to Determine Motion

The court shall grant summary judgment if the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n1 The rules committee restored the term "shall" to express the direction to grant summary judgment. The word "shall" in Rule 56 acquired significance over many decades of use, but Rule 56 was amended in 2007 to replace "shall" with "should" as part of the style project revisions, under a convention that prohibited any use of shall. However, the committee has concluded that neither of the terms "must" or "should" is suitable in view of the case law on whether a district court has discretion to deny summary judgment. Consequently "shall" has been restored to avoid creating an unacceptable risk of changing the summary judgment standard, and "shall" avoids the unintended consequences of any other word. n2 In this regard, the Supreme Court has stated the plain language of Rule 56 mandates the entry of summary judgment, after adequate time for discovery and on motion, against a party who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. n3 At the same time, the court has admonished that, when there appears to be no genuine dispute as to any material fact, the trial courts should act with caution in granting summary judgment, and the trial court may deny summary judgment in a case in which there is reason to believe that the better course would be to proceed to a full trial. n4

[2] Procedure of Court to Determine Motion

In its determination of the motion, the court need consider only the materials cited by the movant and the nonmovant, but it may consider any other materials in the record. n1 This rule reflects judicial opinions and local rules provisions which state that the court may decide a motion for summary judgment without always undertaking an independent search of the record. n2 If a party fails to properly support an assertion of fact or fails to properly address another party's assertion of fact, the court has all of the following options:

- Give an opportunity to the party to properly support or address the fact; n3 this provision recognizes that affording a party an opportunity to properly support or address the fact will often be the court's preferred first step. n4

- Consider the fact undisputed for purposes of the motion; n5 this approach reflects the requirements stated in many local rules. The fact is considered undisputed only for purposes of the motion; if summary judgment is denied, a party who failed to make a proper Rule 56 response or reply remains free to contest the fact in further proceedings. And the court may choose not to consider the fact as undisputed, particularly if the court knows of record materials that show grounds for genuine dispute. n6

- Grant summary judgment if the motion and supporting materials, including any facts considered undisputed, show that the movant is entitled to it; n7 if a party has made a proper response or reply with respect to some facts, the court cannot grant summary judgment without determining whether those facts can be genuinely disputed. Once the court has determined the set of facts, both those it has chosen to consider undisputed because of a lack of a proper response or reply and any that cannot be genuinely disputed despite a procedurally proper response or reply, it must determine the legal consequences of these facts and permissible inferences from them. n8

- Issue any other appropriate order. n9 The court should make its choice of order to encourage proper presentation of the record. Many courts exercise extra care with pro se litigants, advising them of the need to respond and the risk of losing by summary judgment if an adequate response is not filed. n10

Whatever the court decides on the summary judgment motion, the court must state on the record the reasons for granting or denying the motion. Among other purposes, this statement of reasons can facilitate an appeal or subsequent trial court proceedings. It is particularly important to state the reasons if a court grants summary judgment; the form and detail of the statement of reasons are left to the court's discretion. A statement on denying summary judgment need not state every available reason, but identification of central issues assists the parties to focus further proceedings. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.99 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see § 17.20 et seq. (summary judgment standard).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-324, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3).

(n7)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(3), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(1).

(n9)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(1), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n10)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(2).

(n11)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(2), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(3).

(n13)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(3), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n14)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(4).

(n15)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)(4), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n16)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments; see Hulsey v. Pride Rests., LLC, 367 F.3d 1238, 1244 (11th Cir. 2004) .

66 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.67

§ 17.67 Effect of Court's Determination on Summary Judgmentn*

[1] Effect of Grant of Summary Judgment

If a court enters an order of summary judgment with respect to all parties and claims and defenses, the judgment is a final adjudication of the merits of the claims and defenses presented. When granted in favor of the claimant, the summary judgment affirmatively decides the merits of the claim; if granted in favor of the defendant, it is an absolute bar to the claim, rather than merely a matter in abatement such as a dismissal. In this regard, matters in bar are those such as res judicata, release, statute of frauds, statute of limitations, and laches, all of which block the claimant's recovery. n1 On the other hand, matters in abatement, such as lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter or the person, improper venue, insufficiency of process, and failure to join an indispensable party result only in a dismissal of the action without prejudice, or, if the action is not then dismissed, the prosecution is merely stayed or transferred to another forum. n2

However, if the court grants partial summary judgment, which is a summary judgment for less than all claims or defenses, or for fewer than all parties, it does not constitute a final adjudication. However, a partial summary judgment still alters the nature of the case by eliminating claims, narrowing issues, and consequently affecting the proof presented at trial. Thus, even the grant of a partial summary judgment may affect the final result, even in a jury trial, by controlling the material presented to the jury. n3

[2] Effect of Denial of Summary Judgment

[a] Denial Generally Does Not Have Preclusive Effect

In contrast to a grant of summary judgment on all claims and defenses, which constitutes a final adjudication on the merits, n1 denial of summary judgment is not a final adjudication, but an interlocutory order, n2 and is non-appealable unless it falls within some statutory classification that permits an appeal from such an interlocutory order. n3 Furthermore, the denial of a motion for summary judgment is not res judicata and does not have a preclusive effect. n4 Consequently, the denial of summary judgment generally establishes only that there is a factual dispute to be resolved at trial, and the trial proceeds as usual. n5

A denial of summary judgment, however, is generally treated as "law of the case," at least with respect to the legal issue involved. The law of the case doctrine provides that a court's decision on a matter generally will not be re-examined by the court during the course of the litigation. Note that the doctrine of the law of the case is sufficiently flexible to permit a court to reconsider a decision when warranted. This flexibility allows the trial court discretion to deny a motion for summary judgment without prejudice to a later renewal; n6 and, even when a motion is denied without any provision for renewal, the court may permit renewal. The court, for example, may consider a renewal motion when the new motion is sufficiently distinct because of additional facts developed during litigation. n7 A court may also consider additional or repeated motions if new precedent raises the possibility of a change in the court's ruling. On the other hand, renewed motions are not favored, n8 and a court may exercise its discretion to prohibit repetitive motions even where the subsequent motions differ from the previous motions if the court finds this necessary to prevent harassment, delay, or needless increase in costs. n9

[b] Court That Denies Summary Judgment May Order That Material Fact Is Not in Dispute

Rule 56 expressly provides that if the court denies summary judgment on part of the case or for all the relief requested, and a trial is therefore necessary, the court may nevertheless ascertain what material facts are not genuinely in dispute; thereafter, such material facts are deemed established, and the trial must be conducted accordingly. n10 If, however, the court merely denies the motion for summary judgment and does not specify what facts are not in good faith controverted, all of the issues are open for trial, as framed by the pleadings. n11 If it is readily apparent that the court cannot grant all the relief requested by the motion, it may properly decide that the cost of determining whether some potential fact disputes may be eliminated by summary disposition is greater than the cost of resolving those disputes by other means, including trial. Even if the court believes that a fact is not genuinely in dispute it may refrain from ordering that the fact be treated as established. The court may conclude that it is better to leave open for trial facts and issues that may be better illuminated by the trial of related facts that must be tried in any event. n12

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.07, § 56.130 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. American Fire & Cas. Co. v. Broeren Russo Constr., 54 F. Supp. 2d 842, 845 (C.D. Ill. 1999) ; see Morris v. Wachovia Secs., 448 F.3d 268, 275 (4th Cir. 2006) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Cubie v. Bryan Career College, Inc., 244 F. Supp. 2d 1191, 1201 (D. Kan. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Grow v. City of Milwaukee, 84 F. Supp. 2d 990, 1007-1008 (E.D. Wis. 2000) ; see § 17.64.

(n5)Footnote 1. See § 17.67[1], above.

(n6)Footnote 2. Weise v. Casper, 507 F.3d 1260, 1269-1270 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 3. See § 17.61.

(n8)Footnote 4. C & M Props., L.L.C. v. Burbidge (In re C & M Props., L.L.C.), 563 F.3d 1156, 1166 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n9)Footnote 5. Kutner Buick, Inc. v. American Motors Corp., 868 F.2d 614, 618 (3d Cir. 1989) .

(n10)Footnote 6. Zarnow v. City of Wichita Falls Tex., 614 F.3d 161, 171 (5th Cir. 2010) .

(n11)Footnote 7. Curran v. Ho Sung Kwon, 153 F.3d 481, 487 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n12)Footnote 8. Allstate Finance Corp. v. Zimmerman, 296 F.2d 797, 799 (5th Cir. 1961) (courts do not approve of piecemeal consideration of successive motions for summary judgment because parties should ordinarily be required to present their strongest case for summary judgment when matter is first raised; however, rules do not prohibit consideration by trial court of second motion if different than that of earlier summary judgment motions).

(n13)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n14)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(g).

(n15)Footnote 11. Kutner Buick, Inc. v. American Motors Corp., 868 F.2d 614 (3d Cir. 1989) .

(n16)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(g), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.68

§ 17.68 Court Has Discretion to Order Sanctions for Bad Faith Affidavit or Declaration or Frivolous Motionn*

[1] Sanctions for Bad Faith Affidavit or Declaration

If the court determines that an affidavit or declaration has been submitted in bad faith or solely for delay in connection with a summary judgment motion, the court may, after providing notice and a reasonable time to respond, order the party that submitted the affidavit or declaration to pay the other party reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, that the opposition party incurred as a result of the submission. The court may also hold the party or the attorney who submitted the bad faith affidavit or declaration in contempt or order other appropriate sanctions against the party or attorney. n1 The rules committee has stated that there are three important aspects to this provision. First, these sanctions are discretionary, not mandatory, and reflect the experience that most courts do not frequently use this independent Rule 56 authority to impose sanctions. Second, the rule text has been expanded to recognize that the court must provide notice and a reasonable time to respond to a proposed order of sanctions. Third, the court has explicit authority to impose other appropriate sanctions. n2

The "bad faith" standard stated in Rule 56(h) obviously encompasses affidavits and declarations that contain perjurious or blatantly false allegations or that omit facts concerning issues central to the resolution of the case, n3 but also includes circumstances when the party or attorney subjectively knew that its affidavit or declaration was false, used solely as a delaying tactic, or recklessly drafted with disregard of the truth. The focus in the inquiry is on the submitting person's state of mind, rather than that of the objective standard of a reasonable person. n4

[2] Sanctions for Frivolous Summary Judgment Filings

Rule 56(h) is not the exclusive grounds for a court to sanction attorneys or parties for inappropriate behavior in connection with a summary judgment motion. Frivolous or bad faith affidavits or declarations could result in the imposition of sanctions for violation of the certification and representation standards in Rule 11 n1 or under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 for unreasonable and vexatious multiplication of proceedings. n2 Courts also have inherent power to impose sanctions for bad-faith conduct in the course of litigation. n3

Numerous Rule 11 sanctions have involved attorneys that have moved for frivolous or otherwise inappropriate summary judgment at the expense of opposing parties or the judiciary. n4 The district court has power to impose sanctions for filing of frivolous opposition to summary judgment motion, as well as to a motion in favor of summary judgment. n5 Under Rule 11, a potential violator now has the opportunity to avoid sanctions by withdrawing the violating motion or assertion within 21 days of its filing. n6 For further discussion of sanctions motions under Rule 11, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

A court may impose statutory sanctions for continued or unreasonable assertions of a summary judgment argument by an attorney; thus, an attorney that multiplies the proceedings in any case unreasonably and vexatiously may be ordered by the court to satisfy personally the excess costs, expenses, and attorney's fees reasonably incurred because of the conduct. n7 Note, however, that it is an abuse of a district court's discretion under the statute if it does not make it clear that an attorney might be sanctioned pursuant to the statute, which requires a finding of bad faith for the imposition of sanctions, n8 as distinguished from Rule 11 sanctions, which do not require a finding of bad faith. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.94 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(h), Committee Notes to 2010 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. Jaisan, Inc. v. Sullivan, 178 F.R.D. 412, 415-416 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 548-549, 111 S. Ct. 922, 112 L. Ed. 1140 (1991) ; see United States v. Bolden, 325 F.3d 471, 494 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a), (b).

(n7)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

(n8)Footnote 3. Inherent power to sanction. Chambers v. NASCO, 501 U.S. 32, 42-43, 46, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) ; see Thomas v. Tenneco Packaging Co., 293 F.3d 1306, 1308 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n9)Footnote 4. See Coonts v. Potts, 316 F.3d 745, 749 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n10)Footnote 5. Hurd v. Ralphs Grocery Co., 824 F.2d 806, 809 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n11)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n12)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1927; see Rentz v. Dynasty Apparel Indus., 556 F.3d 389, 393 (6th Cir. 2009) .

(n13)Footnote 8. Hackman v. Valley Fair, 932 F.2d 239, 241-242 (3d Cir. 1991) .

(n14)Footnote 9. See Anjelino v. New York Times Co., 200 F.3d 73, 100-101 (3d Cir. 1999) (although trial court has considerable discretion in imposing sanctions, it must provide attorney with notice and opportunity to be heard on possibility of being sanctioned, consistent with requirements of due process; furthermore, required notice must be particularized so that party is aware of factors that party must address if he or she is to avoid sanctions).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART IV. SUMMARY JUDGMENT PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

17.69-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 17.69-17.79

[Reserved]

§§ 17.69[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART V. APPEAL OF TRIAL COURT DETERMINATION OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT MOTION

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.80

§ 17.80 Appeal of Summary Judgment Disposing of Entire Casen*

[1] Grant of Summary Judgment Immediately Appealable

If a trial court grants summary judgment with respect to all of the pending claims and defenses in a case, and with respect to all parties, the decision is a final judgment. Such a decision completes the adjudication and disposition of the case at the district court level. n1 It is a final judgment because it ends the litigation on the merits and leaves nothing for the district court to do but execute the judgment. n2 A circuit court of appeals has jurisdiction to hear an appeal of complete summary judgment because the circuit courts have jurisdiction over final decisions made in the district courts. n3

A circuit court also has jurisdiction over a summary judgment ruling when it disposes entirely of a case which had been consolidated with other cases. n4 On the other hand, because a grant of partial summary judgment resolves only some of the claims and defenses raised by the pleadings, a partial summary judgment is not an final judgment; n5 therefore, an order granting partial summary judgment is generally not immediately appealable. n6

[2] Denial of Summary Judgment Not Immediately Appealable

The denial of a summary judgment motion is not a "final judgment," because it does not constitute a complete disposition of all of the claims and decisions on the merits; ordinarily, a denial of summary judgment does not give the moving party the right to immediate appellate review. n1 However, when the appeal from a denial of summary judgment is presented together with an appeal from a grant of summary judgment, the circuit court has jurisdiction to review the denial. n2 Furthermore, review is sometimes available for the denial of summary judgment when the denial prevents a defense that would preclude the entire suit. For example, a party may take an immediate appeal from a summary judgment on immunity grounds because the immunity encompasses immunity from both suit and liability. n3 However, appeal of such decisions is limited to issues of law, such as whether an act was truly legislative or whether constitutional rights at issue were clearly established. The defendants may not file an immunity appeal simply on the ground that they did not do what the plaintiffs allege. Such fact-based appeals inappropriately ask the appellate court to revisit the trial court's decision that the pretrial record sets forth a genuine issue of fact for trial. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.130 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. DIRECTV Inc. v. Budden, 420 F.3d 521, 525 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Catlin v. United States, 324 U.S. 229, 233, 65 S. Ct. 631, 89 L. Ed. 911 (1945) ; Tucker v. Tennessee, 539 F.3d 526, 528 (6th Cir. 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1291; see also United States v. Bergbauer, 602 F.3d 569, 574 (4th Cir. 2010) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Beil v. Lakewood Eng'g & Mfg. Co., 15 F.3d 546, 551 (6th Cir. 1994) (after case had been consolidated with another in wrongful death action, summary judgment granted against one defendant on claim of destruction of evidence by plaintiff could be appealed).

(n6)Footnote 5. H.D.V. -Greektown, LLC v. City of Detroit, 568 F.3d 609, 619 (6th Cir. 2009) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n7)Footnote 6. Mueller v. Auker, 576 F.3d 979, 1001 (9th Cir. 2009) ; see § 17.81[2][b].

(n8)Footnote 1. Deutsch v. Jordan, 618 F.3d 1093, 1099 (10th Cir. 2010) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n9)Footnote 2. Thomas v. United States, 166 F.3d 825, 828 (6th Cir. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Amore v. Novarro, 610 F.3d 155, 161 (2d Cir. 2010) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Acevedo-Garcia v. Vera-Monroig, 204 F.3d 1, 7-8 (1st Cir. 2000) (immediate appeal from summary judgment denial of qualified immunity is available only when appeal is based on purely legal ground, but not when it challenges sufficiency of evidence).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART V. APPEAL OF TRIAL COURT DETERMINATION OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT MOTION

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.81

§ 17.81 Appeal of Interlocutory Summary Judgment Decisionsn*

[1] Interlocutory Orders Generally Not Immediately Appealable

Summary judgment may be granted for either a movant or nonmovant with respect to less than the entire case; n1 such an order is known as a partial summary judgment. n2 Any summary judgment decision that does not dispose of the entire case on the merits is deemed an "interlocutory order" rather than final order; therefore, the losing party has no automatic right to be heard by the appellate court. n3 However, a partial summary judgment decision is appealable under certain limited circumstances. n4

The Supreme Court has emphasized that allowing an interlocutory appeal is the exception to the rule and that to permit too many interlocutory appeals may cause harm because it may make it more difficult for trial judges to accomplish their primary function: to supervise litigation and trial proceedings. It may also threaten those proceedings with delay, adding costs, and diminishing coherence. n5 In its decision, the Court mentioned the most frequent bases for permitting interlocutory appeal in summary judgment cases: the collateral order doctrine; n6 a directed entry of final judgment as to fewer than all claims or parties; n7 and the discretionary certification of controlling and doubtful questions of law in order to facilitate efficient resolution of the case. n8

[2] Appealable Interlocutory Orders

[a] Collateral Order Doctrine

Under the collateral order doctrine, a court of appeals may consider an immediate appeal of an interlocutory order when, even though the trial court order does not dispose of the entire case, it makes other conclusive decisions that resolve significant matters separate and apart from the merits. There are three criteria for appellate court review of the collateral order doctrine: the district court must have conclusively decided a contested issue, the issue decided was important and separate from the merits of the action, and the district court's disposition was not effectively reviewable later in the litigation. n1 If a court denies summary judgment and thus rejects a defendant's claim of immunity, for example, the decision is considered final because it forces the defendant to undergo litigation even if the defendant ultimately prevails. n2 A failure to find immunity and thus to avoid further litigation in effect becomes the final determination of the issue. Consequently, immediate appeal is available under the collateral order doctrine. n3

[b] Judgment with Respect to Fewer Than All Claims or Parties

If the court grants a summary judgment with respect to fewer than all claims or parties, as is the case with a partial summary judgment, the order is appealable if the district court certifies the judgment for appeal by an express determination pursuant to Rule 54(b) that there is no reason to delay the entry of a final judgment on its decision. n4

The circuit court may take an appeal with respect to fewer than all claims or parties only if the district court makes an express determination that the action involved separate claims, that there was a final decision as to at least one claim, and that there was no just reason to delay the appeal. n5 The district court may make such an express determination regarding a summary judgment ruling which is dispositive of an entire claim in accordance with a motion made pursuant to Rule 56(a). This should be distinguished from a ruling made pursuant to Rule 56(g), which permits the court to enter an order that a material fact is not genuinely in dispute, but that does not fully adjudicate a claim. n6

When a case involves more than two parties, it is possible for the trial court to enter a summary judgment ruling that fully adjudicates all claims between less than all of the parties. In such a circumstance, Rule 54(b) controls whether the ruling is subject to immediate appeal. n7 Such an appeal is permissible only if there is an express certification by the trial court that there is no just reason for delay, and only on an express direction for the entry of judgment. n8 This express certification is within the sound discretion of the district court, and requires the judge to evaluate such factors as the interrelationships of the claims in order to prevent piecemeal appeals in cases which should be reviewed only as single units. n9 Certification of an appeal is justifiable when the ruling is entirely dispositive of the litigation as applied to some of the parties, even when others remain, because the ruling is entirely distinct from the remainder of the action. n10 If the trial court declines to make an express determination that the ruling as to less than all of the parties is final, an appeal is not appropriate. n11 Similarly, if the trial court retains jurisdiction over matters that would make review of the appeal premature and impractical, the ruling is not final and appealable. n12

[c] Close and Controlling Question of Law

Pursuant to statute, n13 discretionary interlocutory appeal is available if the trial court certifies that the summary judgment decision rendered involves a close and controlling question of law, and that immediate appeal is likely to expedite ultimate resolution of the case. n14 The district court's determination is not binding on the appellate court, which may reject the certification and refuse to hear the interlocutory appeal. n15 For example, a court faced with uncontroverted facts may deny summary judgment based on its own determination of the law, but acknowledge that the question is close. If the competing legal view would result in the grant of summary judgment rather than a long trial, such a case would satisfy the 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) certification standard. n16

[d] Interlocutory Order Factually Intertwined with Appealable Order

An appeals court has discretion to take an interlocutory appeal when it determines that it has "pendent appellate jurisdiction." This occurs when an ordinarily unappealable interlocutory order is inextricably entwined factually with an appealable order. n17 The Supreme Court has stated that this type of interlocutory review is rarely appropriate and requires a very close connection between the appealable claim and the ordinarily unappealable matter. n18 In other words, to be inextricably intertwined the pendent claim must be coterminous with, or subsumed in, the claim properly before the court. n19

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.130 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Mueller v. Auker, 576 F.3d 979, 1001 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Poolaw v. Marcantel, 565 F.3d 721, 728 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Johnson v. Jones, 515 U.S. 304, 313-314, 115 S. Ct. 2151, 132 L. Ed. 2d 238 (1995) (interlocutory appeals may be allowed in certain circumstances such as to avoid injustice by quickly correcting a trial court's error, or on other grounds specified in "immediate appeal" statutes).

(n6)Footnote 5. Johnson v. Jones, 515 U.S. 304, 313, 115 S. Ct. 2151, 132 L. Ed. 2d 238 (1995) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 17.81[2][a], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See § 17.81[2][a], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. See § 17.81[2][a], below.

(n10)Footnote 1. Osborn v. Haley, 549 U.S. 225, 127 S. Ct. 881, 166 L. Ed. 2d 819, 835 (2007) .

(n11)Footnote 2. Cmty. House, Inc. v. City of Boise, 623 F.3d 945, 952 (9th Cir. 2010) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 105 S. Ct. 2806, 86 L. Ed. 2d 411 (1985) (denial of summary judgment motion asserting official immunity is immediately appealable under collateral order doctrine); Acevedo-Garcia v. Vera-Monroig, 204 F.3d 1, 7-8 (1st Cir. 2000) (pre-trial qualified immunity decisions are immediately appealable as collateral orders when immunity claim presents a legal issue that may be decided without considering correctness of plaintiff's version of facts).

(n13)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b); see Bonner v. Perry, 564 F.3d 424, 427 (6th Cir. 2009) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Avondale Industries Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 887 F.2d 1200, 1203-1204 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 6. See Deimer v. Cincinnati Sub-Zero Prods., 990 F.2d 342, 344 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 7. Banque Paribas v. Hamilton Indus. Int'l, 767 F.2d 380, 383 (7th Cir. 1985) (certification for appeal in multiple party case was proper because district court's ruling disposed of entire dispute between two parties).

(n17)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n18)Footnote 9. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Cribbs, 918 F.2d 557, 559 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n19)Footnote 10. Ford v. Elsbury, 32 F.3d 931, 934-935 (5th Cir. 1994) (trial court was correct to certify appeal of partial summary judgment which was granted as to two parties when court ruled that joinder of parties had been fraudulent).

(n20)Footnote 11. Castleberry v. Goldome Credit Corp., 408 F.3d 773, 780 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n21)Footnote 12. Network Communications v. Michigan Bell Tel. Co., 906 F.2d 237, 238-239 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n22)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b).

(n23)Footnote 14. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b); see also Penthouse Owners Ass'n, Inc. v. Certain Underwriters, 612 F.3d 383, 385-386 (5th Cir. 2010) ; Lion's Volunteer Blind Indus. v. Automated Group Admin., Inc., 195 F.3d 803, 805 (6th Cir. 1999) ("permissive interlocutory appeal" pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b)).

(n24)Footnote 15. Cardwell v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 504 F.2d 444, 446-447 (6th Cir. 1974) (both district and circuit courts have complete discretion regarding issue of interlocutory appeal under statute).

(n25)Footnote 16. Lion's Volunteer Blind Indus. v. Automated Group Admin., Inc., 195 F.3d 803, 806 (6th Cir. 1999) (district court granted partial summary judgment on defendants' claim for benefits and their allegation under ERISA of breach of fiduciary duty, but based on its reading of court of appeals prior decisions, district court denied summary judgment as to state law misrepresentation claim, agreeing with plaintiffs that it was not preempted by ERISA; on defendant's motion, district court certified interlocutory appeal on preemption question and court of appeals accepted issue for review).

(n26)Footnote 17. Montano v. City of Chicago, 375 F.3d 593, 599-600 (7th Cir. 2004) .; Martin v. Consultants & Admrs., 966 F.2d 1078, 1083-1086 (7th Cir. 1992) ; see C&W Asset Acquisition LLC v. Knox, 104 Fed. Appx. 936, 937-938 (5th Cir. 2004) (unpublished).

(n27)Footnote 18. Swint v. Chambers County Commn, 514 U.S. 35, 45-51, 115 S. Ct. 1203, 131 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1995) (denial of defendant's motion for summary judgment not appealable as collateral order; noting that only when essential to the resolution of properly appealed collateral orders should courts extend their collateral order and interlocutory appellate jurisdiction to rulings that would not otherwise qualify for expedited consideration).

(n28)Footnote 19. Lee v. Nicholl, 197 F.3d 1291, 1297 (10th Cir. 1999) (appellate court did not exercise pendent appellate jurisdiction over denial of motion for summary judgment filed by board of county commissioners in former employee's § 1983 free speech action, because neither of theories under which board was potentially liable was coterminous with county official's qualified immunity claim, which was under appellate court's jurisdiction).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART V. APPEAL OF TRIAL COURT DETERMINATION OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT MOTION

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.82

§ 17.82 Standards for Appellate Court Review of Summary Judgment Ordern*

[1] Standard of Review for Grant of Summary Judgment

If a party properly appeals the grant of a motion for summary judgment, the appellate court's review of the decision is de novo, which means that the appellate court considers all of the same factors regarding summary judgment that should have been used by the district court in its determination of whether to grant summary judgment at the district court level. n1 Therefore, in reviewing a decision which has granted summary judgment, the appeals court must determine whether there existed a genuine dispute of material fact, and whether the moving party was entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. n2 In its determination of whether a genuine issue of material fact exists and whether the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, the appellate court must review all the record, the affidavits, other documentation, and all factual inferences in the manner most favorable to the nonmovant party. n3

The court of appeals has the discretion to affirm a grant of summary judgment on any ground fairly presented by the summary judgment record. n4 Consequently, an appellate court may affirm a grant of summary judgment if the trial court's ultimate judgment is correct, even if the reasoning given by the trial court is erroneous. n5 An important focus of the review is the correct application of the applicable substantive state or federal law to the claims and defenses in dispute. n6

When questions of law are presented to the appellate court in the course of reviewing the determination of a summary judgment motion, the questions are also subject to de novo review. n7 For example, the question of whether a contract is ambiguous under governing state law is a question of law that may be decided by the appellate court, although there may be factual issues regarding the intent of the parties, as well as performance under the contract. If an unambiguous contract exists between the parties, the appellate court has the duty to determine the meaning of the agreement as a matter of law. If, however, questions of law involve the interpretation of ambiguous language in the contract, summary judgment is not proper, and the court of appeals will reverse the entry of summary judgment, because these determinations are questions of fact for a jury unless applicable law requires that ambiguities be resolved against the party that drafted the contract. n8 Questions of law are not limited to contract disputes, and other common legal issues include constitutional claims, assertions of fraud, and cases involving the defense of immunity, which must be resolved by the appellate court in its review of a summary judgment ruling. n9

[2] Standard of Review for Denial of Summary Judgment

As is the case with the review of the grant of summary judgment, the circuit court generally applies the de novo standard of review for a denial of summary judgment. n1 However, it has been argued that because the district court does have discretion to deny a motion for summary judgment, even if the Rule 56 standard is met, if the decision is based on considerations of fairness or other important policies, that an abuse of discretion standard should apply. n2 In that case, the trial court has discretion to deny a motion for summary judgment, even if it determines that a party is entitled to summary judgment, if the claim would benefit from a full hearing, n3 for example, if policy considerations call for denial. n4 Unless the trial court abuses its discretion in denying the motion, the court's discretion will not be disturbed. n5 On the other hand, if the standard for summary judgment was not satisfied, the trial court must deny the motion for summary judgment; consequently, in such circumstances the standard for review is the de novo standard. n6

The denial of a summary judgment motion is not reviewable after a full trial on the merits. An order denying summary judgment retains its interlocutory character as simply a step along the route to final judgment. Once the case proceeds to trial, the full record developed in court supersedes the record existing at the time of the summary judgment motion. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.131 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Addicks Servs. v. GGP-Bridgeland, LP, 596 F.3d 286, 293 (5th Cir. 2010) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Temme v. Bemis Co., 622 F.3d 730, 734 (7th Cir. 2010) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Dahl v. Rice County, 621 F.3d 740, 743 (8th Cir. 2010) ; Bishop v. Children's Ctr. for Developmental Enrichment, 618 F.3d 533, 536 (6th Cir. 2010) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Miller v. Scottsdale Ins. Co., 410 F.3d 678, 680 (11th Cir. 2005) ; see In re Jones, 966 F.2d 169, 172-174 (5th Cir. 1992) (summary judgment in favor of creditors affirmed based on court's determination that debtors had violated bankruptcy court's order not to encumber proceeds of insurance policy without court's permission).

(n6)Footnote 5. Craig v. M&O Agencies, Inc., 496 F.3d 1047, 1053 (9th Cir. 2007) ; see Rodrigue v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co., 948 F.2d 969, 971 (5th Cir. 1991) (appellate court may affirm grant of summary judgment regardless of correctness of district court's ruling if appellate court finds in record adequate independent basis for that result).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Charry v. California, 13 F.3d 1386, 1388 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Eckert v. Titan Tire Corp., 514 F.3d 801, 804 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Sayers v. Rochester Tel. Corp. Supplemental Management Pension Plan, 7 F.3d 1091, 1096-1097 (2d Cir. 1993) (ambiguous contract language normally precludes summary judgment because questions of contract meaning based on extrinsic evidence present questions of fact).

(n10)Footnote 9. Billish v. Chicago, 962 F.2d 1269, 1276-1277 (7th Cir. 1992) , vac. o.g., 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 15278 (1992) .

(n11)Footnote 1. Anderson v. Family Dollar Stores of Ark., Inc., 579 F.3d 858, 861-862 (8th Cir. 2009) .

(n12)Footnote 2. Johnson v. Bryant, 671 F.2d 1276, 1279 (11th Cir. 1982) (trial court did not abuse discretion in denying plaintiff's motion for summary judgment based on personal injuries); see also 11 Moore's Federal Practice, § 56.131[2]*.

(n13)Footnote 3. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2513, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Marcus v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 651 F.2d 379, 382 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n15)Footnote 5. United States v. Certain Real & Personal Property Belonging to Hayes, 943 F.2d 1292, 1297 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n16)Footnote 6. Clark v. Wilson, 625 F.3d 686, 690 (10th Cir. 2010) .

(n17)Footnote 7. Ortiz v. Jordan, ___ U.S. ___, 131 S. Ct. 884, 178 L. Ed. 2d 703, 709 (2011) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 17 SUMMARY JUDGMENT
PART V. APPEAL OF TRIAL COURT DETERMINATION OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT MOTION

2-17 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 17.83

§ 17.83 Procedural Considerations for Appellate Court Review of Summary Judgment Ordern*

[1] Appellate Court's Consideration of Record

[a] Appellate Court Generally Will Not Consider Matter Raised for First Time on Appeal

Generally, appellate review of a lower court's determination of a summary judgment motion is limited to the record before the district court, n1 and arguments and factual matters not presented in the district court in connection with the summary judgment motion are deemed waived on appeal. n2 An appellate court, however, has discretion in its review to allow exceptions to this rule, and to consider matters raised for the first time on appeal. The circuits have allowed two exceptions: (1) if the issues only involve purely questions of law; n3 or (2) if injustice would result if the arguments were not considered. n4

Under the first exception, issues of law that neither affect nor rely on the facts contained in the record may be considered by the court on appeal. For example, the limited question of the appropriate state law to be applied in a diversity action is an issue of law that the appellate court may consider even if the issue was not raised in the trial court. n5 The second exception provides for review in the interests of justice, and may be used by the appellate court in situations when an injustice would otherwise result if an unraised issue were not considered on appeal. n6 For example, one appellate court granted a party's request for remand for clarification of a clause that might support the party's contract claims; the appellate court determined that it would have been unjust to have prevented the party's right to pursue the claim, although not raised in the lower court. n7 When a party presents conclusory arguments in the lower court, however, they will not be considered on appeal, because the appellate court does not have an obligation to provide details and fully elaborate an argument that a party has presented only in conclusory terms. n8

[b] District Court Reasoning

Rule 56 expressly requires the district court to specify its reasons for granting or denying a motion for summary judgment. n9 Appellate courts have also emphasized the importance of the district court including a statement of reasons for granting or denying summary judgment because, except in very simple cases, a statement of reasoning facilitates appellate review. n10 Appellate review of the district court decision is an error-correcting function, n11 and an unexplained summary judgment order may deny the appellate court the tools necessary for review. A lack of a statement of reasons could require the appellate court to search the record in order to find evidence in support of its decision. n12 If the basis for the district court's decision cannot be ascertained, the appellate court will remand the case, because it is improper for the appellate court to speculate regarding the reasons the district court may have had for granting or denying summary judgment in a case. n13

However, even though a statement of reasoning by the district court facilitates review by the appellate court, the appellate court need not rely on the district court's grounds or reasoning for the appellate court's own decision. In other words, the appellate court will conduct its own independent review, and the court of appeals has the discretion to affirm a grant of summary judgment on any ground fairly presented by the summary judgment record. For example, an appellate court may affirm a grant of summary judgment if the trial court's ultimate judgment is correct, even if the reasoning given by the trial court is erroneous. n14

[2] Appellate Review After Trial of Prior Denial of Summary Judgment

If a district court has denied a summary judgment based on the existence of material factual disputes, the moving party may not appeal that denial on an appeal from a final judgment entered after a trial has been held. n1 Thus, if a party asserts that the district court erroneously denied summary judgment based on factual disputes, the proper procedure is for the party to make a motion under Rule 50(a) for judgment as a matter of law at the close of evidence. On final judgment, the appellate court may then review the denial of that Rule 50(a) motion. n2 Furthermore, if a party fails to renew a summary judgment argument in a motion for judgment as a matter of law at the close of all the evidence, the court of appeals will consider that failure as a waiver of the issue on appeal. n3

On the other hand, when the material facts are not in dispute and the denial of summary judgment is based on the interpretation of a strictly legal question, a party may appeal denial of the motion after final judgment. n4 It has been suggested that attorneys should not rely on their own determination of whether an issue is a question of law or fact, because the distinction is not always clearly defined. Rather, in the interest of caution, counsel should always state the summary judgment grounds in a Rule 50 motion for judgment as a matter of law at the close of all the evidence, and renew that argument after the jury has returned a verdict, if necessary. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 11 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 56.130, 56.131 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Martin v. Russell, 563 F.3d 683, 686 (8th Cir. 2009) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Midwest Oilseeds, Inc. v. Limagrain Genetics Corp., 387 F.3d 705, 715 (8th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Gilbert v. Des Moines Area Cmty. College, 495 F.3d 906, 915 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Defabio v. E. Hampton Union Free Sch. Dist., 623 F.3d 71, 80 (2d Cir. 2010) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Pacific Trencher & Equipment, Inc., 735 F.2d 362, 364 (9th Cir. 1984) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Robinson v. Gov't of Malay., 269 F.3d 133, 146 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Roberts v. Hollandsworth, 582 F.2d 496, 499-500 (9th Cir. 1978) .

(n9)Footnote 8. United States v. Rode Corp., 996 F.2d 174, 176 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

(n11)Footnote 10. Trimed, Inc. v. Stryker Corp., 608 F.3d 1333, 1342-1343 (Fed. Cir. 2010) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Clay v. Equifax, Inc. 762 F.2d 952, 957 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Trimed, Inc. v. Stryker Corp., 608 F.3d 1333, 1343 (Fed. Cir. 2010) .

(n14)Footnote 13. McIncrow v. Harris County, 878 F.2d 835, 836 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Craig v. M&O Agencies, Inc., 496 F.3d 1047, 1053 (9th Cir. 2007) (court of appeals may affirm even if the district court relied on an erroneous ground).

(n16)Footnote 1. Wolfgang v. Mid-America Motorsports, 111 F.3d 1515, 1521 (10th Cir. 1997) .

(n17)Footnote 2. Studnicka v. Pinheiro, 618 F.3d 799, 801 (8th Cir. 2010) .

(n18)Footnote 3. Allahar v. Zahora, 59 F.3d 693, 695-696 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 4. F.B.T. Prods., LLC v. Aftermath Records, 621 F.3d 958, 961 (9th Cir. 2010) .

(n20)Footnote 5. Wolfgang v. Mid-America Motorsports, 111 F.3d 1515, 1521 (10th Cir. 1997) (although defendants argued that district court's ruling was based on erroneous interpretation of strictly legal question, court of appeals decided that ruling was based on factual dispute).

73 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 18.syn

§ 18.syn Synopsis to Chapter 18: PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT

§ 18.01 Purposes of Pretrial Conferences

[1] General Purpose To Promote Speedy, Efficient Trial

[2] Flexibility to Manage Case

§ 18.02 Number and Time of Pretrial Conferences

§ 18.03 Pretrial Conference Procedure

§ 18.04 Attendance at Pretrial Conferences

§ 18.05 Matters Considered at Pretrial Conferences

[1] All Case Management Issues

[2] Factual Contentions and Stipulations

[3] Addition of Parties and Amendments to Pleadings

[4] Formulation and Simplification of the Issues

[5] Consideration of Settlement and Alternative Dispute Resolution Procedures

[a] Use of Settlement and Alternative Dispute Resolution

[b] Two-Stage Case Management

[c] Mediation Procedure

[d] Arbitration Procedure

[6] Matters of Proof

[a] Evidentiary Subjects in General

[b] Evidence Obtained From Experts

[7] Referral of Matters to Magistrate Judge or Master

[8] Other Miscellaneous Subject Matter

§ 18.06 Scheduling Conferences

[1] Discretion of Court to Utilize Scheduling Conference

[2] Attendance at Scheduling Conference

[3] Subject Matter of Scheduling Conference

§§ 18.07through 18.19 [Reserved]

§ 18.20 Significance of Final Pretrial Conference

§ 18.21 Timing of Final Pretrial Conference

§ 18.22 Attendance at Final Pretrial Conference

§ 18.23 Procedures at Final Pretrial Conference

§ 18.24 Subject Matter at Final Pretrial Conference

[1] All Case Management Issues May Be Included

[2] Settlement

[3] Discovery

[4] Issues for Trial

[5] Sequencing or Separation of Trial

[6] Detailed Trial Outline

[7] Stipulations and Additional Admissions

[8] Motions in Limine Regarding Evidence

[9] Exhibits and Documents

[10] Witnesses

[11] Time Limits

[12] Jury Instructions and Interrogatories

[13] Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

§§ 18.25through 18.39 [Reserved]

§ 18.40 Types of Pretrial Orders

§ 18.41 Case Management Order

[1] Nature of Basic Pretrial Order

[2] Discretion of Court to Modify Basic Pretrial Order

[3] Appellate Review of Basic Pretrial Orders

§ 18.42 Scheduling Order

[1] Use of Mandatory Scheduling Order

[2] Consultation Required With Attorneys

[3] Time Limit for Court to Issue Scheduling Order

[4] Contents of Scheduling Order

[a] Mandatory Contents of Scheduling Order

[i] Court Must Specify Deadlines

[ii] Deadline for Joining Other Parties and Amending Pleadings

[iii] Deadline for Filing Motions

[iv] Deadline for Discovery

[b] Discretionary Contents of Scheduling Order

[i] Court's Discretion to Include Variety of Matters in Scheduling Order

[ii] Court May Adjust Disclosure Time or Limit Discovery

[iii] Specifications for Disclosure or Discovery of Electronically Stored Information

[iv] Inclusion of Party Agreements Made Regarding Claims of Privilege or Trial-Preparation Material

[v] Conference and Trial Dates

[vi] Other Matters

[5] Modification of Scheduling Order

[a] Modification Allowed Only on Good Cause

[b] Discretion of Court to Determine Good Cause

[6] Sanctions for Violation of Scheduling Order

[7] Appellate Review of Scheduling Order

§ 18.43 Final Pretrial Order

[1] Use of Final Pretrial Order

[2] Contents

[3] Effect of Final Pretrial Order

[4] Modification of Final Pretrial Order

[a] Modification Must Cure Manifest Injustice

[b] Factors Used to Determine Existence of Manifest Injustice

[5] Appellate Review of Final Pretrial Order

[a] Appealability of Final Pretrial Order

[b] Standard of Review

§§ 18.44through 18.59 [Reserved]

§ 18.60 Source of Authority for Sanctions

[1] Express Provision of Pretrial Rule

[2] Inherent Authority

[3] Other Federal Rules

§ 18.61 Sanctionable Conduct

§ 18.62 Discretion of Court to Impose Sanctions

§ 18.63 Types of Sanctions Available

[1] Selection of Type of Sanction In General

[2] Dismissal and Default Judgment

[3] Monetary Sanctions

[4] Preclusion of Evidence or Testimony

§ 18.64 Procedures for Imposition of Sanctions

[1] Requirement of Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard

[2] Determination and Entry of Order

§ 18.65 Appellate Review of Sanctions

[1] Appealability of Sanction Order

[2] Standard of Review

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART I. INITIAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCES

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.01

§ 18.01 Purposes of Pretrial Conferencesn*

[1] General Purpose To Promote Speedy, Efficient Trial

An initial pretrial conference is a powerful device used by a district court to plan, organize, manage, and expedite a civil case, with the participation and cooperation of all of the attorneys and the parties. n1 It is designed to reach a speedy, inexpensive, and just resolution of the litigation. n1.1 Rule 16(a) specifically provides the district court with discretion to direct the attorneys for the parties and any unrepresented parties to appear before the court for a conference or conferences before trial, in order to: n2 (1) expedite the disposition of the action; (2) establish early and continuing control to prevent the case from becoming protracted because of lack of management; (3) discourage wasteful pretrial activities; (4) improve the quality of the trial through more thorough preparation; and (5) facilitate the settlement of the case.

Rule 16(a) reflects the premise that the judiciary must serve as the critical source of structure and discipline in the federal trial system. After considering the input and requirements of the parties through a conference, the court has the responsibility to ensure that a disposition is reached in each case quickly and efficiently. n3 Another primary purpose of the pretrial conference is to inform the parties precisely what is in controversy, and the pretrial order that is formulated from the conference is considered as superseding the pleadings and as establishing the issues to be considered at trial. n4

While avoidance of unnecessary cost and unjustifiable delay are two of the primary goals of a pretrial conference, many of the provisions of Rule 16 are designed to secure justice on the merits. Therefore, one of the principal purposes of the rule has been to reduce the likelihood that the outcome of civil litigation will be decided on a procedural technicality or unfair tactical advantage. The pretrial conference has always been designed to encourage better preparation and to reduce surprise at trial as well as to discourage the practice of filing motions at the last minute before trial, either to cause delay or to distract and confuse an opponent or the court. The current version of Rule 16 encourages active intervention by judges throughout the pretrial period and is designed to reduce the opportunity for parties to gain unfair advantage by obscuring issues, blocking efficient access to important evidence, or attempting to surprise anopponent with new theories or information produced at the last minute. n5

Under the current version of Rule 16(a), the focus of a pretrial conference is toward more extensive judicial control of the entire pretrial phase, not just the trial. n5.1 This expanded role of Rule 16 is apparent from reading the several objectives of the conference listed above. There has been a shift in emphasis away from a conference focused solely on the trial and toward a process of judicial management that embraces the entire pretrial phase, especially motions and discovery. n6

[2] Flexibility to Manage Case

Even though the drafters of the modern form of Rule 16 wanted the rule generally to encourage much early and active case management by the federal courts, they also recognized that some cases would require much less management than others, and that even in complex cases it would be impractical to require rigid judicial management of all of the details of the pretrial process. Therefore, Rule 16 allows the district court flexibility to apply the tools provided to the specific needs and circumstances of each individual case. n1 For example, the rules give discretion to the trial court to decide whether to hold a pretrial conference at all. n2

Furthermore, the federal rules are not always the exclusive source of a federal court's powers in civil cases. Federal courts are vested with inherent powers enabling them to manage their cases and courtrooms effectively and to ensure obedience to their orders. n2.1 Thus, a district court has inherent power to order parties to appear at a pre-trial settlement conference, even though Rule 16(a) provides only that a court may direct a party's attorneys or unrepresented parties to attend such a conference. The mere absence of language in the federal rules specifically authorizing or describing a particular judicial procedure does not mean that such a procedure is prohibited. n3 On the other hand, district courts do not have unlimited discretion regarding conferences and must exercise their discretion in manner that is in harmony with Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or their actions may be overturned. For example, a district court abused its discretion in utilizing Rule 16(a) to compel the parties to participate in a jury minitrial that would be open to the media and public and to order sanctions against counsel for not participating. The court of appeals held that a district court lacked authority under the federal rules to compel participation in a minitrial. n4

Another aspect of the flexibility given to modern federal courts under Rule 16 is based on a recognition that there is a risk of judicial over-regulation in some cases, because some civil cases are significantly simpler than others. n5 Therefore, when disposition of a case is based on relatively straightforward development of evidence from predictable sources or on an easily identifiable legal issue, significant managerial activity by a judge may be unnecessary and requiring a detailed management plan in such a case may waste the resources of both the parties and the court. Therefore, judges have the flexibility to allow the parties to control pretrial activity or to work out a settlement within reasonable deadlines or by a speedy streamlined trial. n6

Rule 16 also recognizes the advantage of creating unique sets of administrative procedures and pretrial rules for each category of case and gives district courts discretion to determine which categories of cases should be excluded from compliance with the management requirements that apply to the general civil action. n7 Furthermore, many courts have established a series of separate, specially tailored management tracks for special types of cases, such as social security cases, prisoner petitions, habeas corpus, or civil rights actions. Similarly, many courts assign a case to a "standard track" for a case with few legal issues, routine discovery, and up to 10 fact witnesses, and to a "complex track" if the case has numerous, complicated, and possibly unique legal issues and requires extensive discovery. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial ConferencesCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesScheduling Conferences

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.03 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Potthast v. Metro-North R.R., 400 F.3d 143, 153 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Vivid Techs., Inc. v. American Science & Eng'g, Inc., 200 F.3d 795, 804 (Fed. Cir. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(1)-(5).

(n5)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(1) see Geders v. United States, 425 U.S. 80, 86, 96 S. Ct. 1330, 47 L. Ed. 2d 592 (1976) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 1 (federal civil rules construed and administered to secure just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action).

(n6)Footnote 4. Erff v. Markhon Indus., Inc., 781 F.2d 613, 617 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 5. See Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1222-1223 (10th Cir. 2000) (considerations involved in modification of order following final pretrial conference).

(n8)Footnote 5.1. Potthast v. Metro-North R.R., 400 F.3d 143, 153-154 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(2)-(5).

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments; see Woodson v. Surgitek, 57 F.3d 1406, 1417 (5th Cir. 1995) (court has inherent discretionary power to manage cases).

(n11)Footnote 2. Mizwicki v. Gerald Helwig, 196 F.3d 828, 833 (7th Cir. 1999) (no requirement that court hold pretrial conference and court's discretion will not be disturbed on review unless it is clear that no reasonable person would rule as did district court).

(n12)Footnote 2.1. Aloe Vera of Am., Inc. v. United States, 376 F.3d 960, 964-965 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. v. Energy Gathering, 2 F.3d 1397, 1406 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n14)Footnote 4. In re NLO, 5 F.3d 154, 157 (6th Cir. 1993) (granted mandamus to vacate district court's order compelling participation in jury minitrial under threat of sanctions and that such order was clearly erroneous as matter of law).

(n15)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n16)Footnote 6. Mizwicki v. Gerald Helwig, 196 F.3d 828, 833 (7th Cir. 1999) (pretrial conferences discretionary).

(n17)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n18)Footnote 8. See, e.g., N.D. Ohio Local Rule 16.2(b)(3).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART I. INITIAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCES

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.02

§ 18.02 Number and Time of Pretrial Conferencesn*

Although a court will usually call at least one pretrial conference, there is no requirement that any be held, and, therefore, there is no requirement of a minimum number of conferences. n1 Furthermore, the rules do not specify any deadlines for the completion of any pretrial conferences, n1.1 except for the scheduling conference. n1.2

Thus, a trial court has discretion to specify in the pretrial scheduling order thenumber of any pretrial conferences to be held and the particular time that each pretrial conference will be held. n2 For example, in complex cases, the court may deem it useful to have one or more early pretrial conferences, perhaps limited to particular topics or issues. In lengthy cases, it may be desirable to have a number of conferences, starting shortly after the initial claims have been filed, to enable the court and parties to plan the course of discovery and motion proceedings, n3 and to make decisions about the consolidation or separation of trials when multiple parties and issues are involved.

When pretrial conferences are held, the final pretrial conference must be held as close to the time of trial as reasonable under the circumstances. n4 The court still has discretion to set the time for the final pretrial conference but the intent of the rule is that the time between any final pretrial conference and trial should be as short as possible, to be certain that the parties make substantial progress with the case and avoid the inefficiency of having that preparation repeated when there is a delay between the final pretrial conference and trial. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial ConferencesCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.13[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Mizwicki v. Gerald Helwig, 196 F.3d 828, 833 (7th Cir. 1999) (district court did not abuse its discretion in not holding pretrial conference in Title VII action).

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(v) (court has discretion to set times for any pretrial conferences).

(n4)Footnote 1.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(2) (scheduling order, which is issued after any scheduling conference is held, must be entered within 90 days after the appearance of a defendant and within 120 days after the complaint has been served on a defendant).

(n5)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(v).

(n6)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments; Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(F).

(n7)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n8)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART I. INITIAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCES

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.03

§ 18.03 Pretrial Conference Proceduren*

As noted earlier, district courts have considerable discretion and flexibility in their conduct of pretrial conferences. n1 Years ago, the Judicial Conference of the United States printed recommended procedural steps, as outlined in its "Handbook for Effective Pretrial Procedure." The following are some of those recommendations: n2

> 1. The court should ensure that the discovery processes are used promptly and expeditiously in advance of further procedural steps in the litigation. n3
>
> 2. The parties must be given notice as to when and where the pretrial conference will take place. Notice is particularly important considering the 1983 amendment to Rule 16 that requires at least one attorney for each party participating in any conference to have authority to enter into stipulations and make admissions regarding all matters that the participants may reasonably anticipate may be discussed. n4 The rule also requires attendance at the final pretrial conference by at least one of the attorneys who will conduct the trial for each party and by any unrepresented parties n5 and imposes sanctions for non-appearance at conferences and unpreparedness to participate at them. n6
>
> 3. The attorneys should meet before the conference, so that they will have had an opportunity to reach agreement on the items which will be raised at the conference. n7
>
> 4. The attorneys may be required to submit written memoranda to the court prior to the conference. These should contain summaries of the facts each party intends to prove and of legal propositions relied on, supported by citations. They should also contain descriptive lists of exhibits to be offered and should specify documents which a party concedes to be genuine and those as to which a concession is requested. n8
>
> 5. Planning of the conference should be left to the discretion of the judge. Different types of cases call for different procedures, and each judge has an individual preferences and capabilities. n9
>
> 6. The judge should take an active role in the conference and must be willing to take the initiative in overcoming the natural reluctance of counsel to make disclosures and concessions. n10

7. The conference may be used to satisfy the Rule 16 requirement of the preparation of a pretrial order.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.13 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See § 18.01.

(n3)Footnote 2. "Handbook For Effective Pretrial Procedure," Adopted by the Judicial Conference of the United States, 37 F.R.D. 255 (1964) ; see Titus v. Mercedes Benz of North America, 695 F.2d 746, 762-763 (3d Cir. 1982) ; McCargo v. Hedrick, 545 F.2d 393, 396-397 (4th Cir. 1976) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(f).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1)(A)-(B); Goldman, Antonetti v. Medfit Int'l, Inc., 982 F.2d 686, 692 (1st Cir.1993) (dismissal with prejudice for failure to attend pretrial and settlement conference).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Olgyay v. Society for Envtl. Graphic Design, 169 F.R.D. 219, 219-220 (D.D.C. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 8. "Handbook For Effective Pretrial Procedure," Adopted by the Judicial Conference of the United States, 37 F.R.D. 255, 266 (1964) .

(n10)Footnote 9. "Handbook For Effective Pretrial Procedure," Adopted by the Judicial Conference of the United States, 37 F.R.D. 255, 268-270 (1964) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(2); Miller v. Los Angeles County Bd. of Educ., 799 F.2d 486, 489 (9th Cir. 1986) (it was proper for parties to submit direct questions of witness and defendant's objections before trial).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART I. INITIAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCES

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.04

§ 18.04 Attendance at Pretrial Conferencesn*

Every unrepresented party and at least one attorney for each represented party must participate in pretrial conferences, n1 and courts have authority to impose sanctions if no appearance is made on behalf of a party at a scheduling or pretrial conference. n2 Whether the attendance requirement involves attendance in person or participation bytelephone may depend on the sitting judge or local rule. At least one of the participating attorneys for each represented party must have authority to enter stipulations and make admissions with respect to any matter that he or she should reasonably anticipate may be discussed at the conference. n3

In addition to the basic attendance requirements described in the preceding paragraph, local rules, general orders, or the assigned judge's standing orders may also impose requirements about who must participate in pretrial conferences. Some courts, for example, require the lawyer who will serve as lead trial counsel to participate. This requirement reflects the courts' viewpoint that significant decisions are likely to be made at pretrial conferences and their preference to have present all the people who would be necessary to maximize the reliability of those decisions. n4

Sometimes, a court will require parties to attend a pretrial conference. The probability that a court will order the parties to attend an initial case management conference increases with the complexity and the projected cost of the litigation. If appropriate, the court may require that a party or its representative be present or reasonably available by other means to consider possible settlement. n5 A party or its representative means the individual party, an officer of a corporate party, a representative from an insurance carrier, or someone else. Additionally in cases involving large amounts of money or large organizations, there may be no one with complete settlement authority, and the most that should be expected is access to a person who would have a major role in submitting a recommendation to the body or board with ultimate decision-making responsibility. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Erff v. Markhon Indus., Inc., 781 F.2d 613, 617 (7th Cir. 1986) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1), 16(e).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Ha-Lo Indus. v. Your Favorite Producers, 164 F.R.D. 233, 234 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (third chair counsel representing defendant lacked sufficient familiarity with case to discuss all aspects; principal counsel ordered to pay opposition's costs because he wasted time at pretrial conference).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART I. INITIAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCES

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.05

§ 18.05 Matters Considered at Pretrial Conferencesn*

[1] All Case Management Issues

This section discusses the topics that are usually covered in the initial pretrial conference, which is known as the "case management conference" to distinguish it from a "final pretrial conference," which is a special type of conference used to formulate a plan for trial. n1 A case management conference, on the other hand, is a pretrial conference which is used by the court to manage the initial stages of litigation and may include any type of special pretrial conference, such as a scheduling conference. n2 It is important to remember that the court has considerable discretion in managing its own case and any of the many subjects listed in Rule 16(b) or Rule 16(c) may be included on the agenda of an initial case management conference. n3 This section discusses those topics that are more likely to receive the court's emphasis at an initial case management conference, while the topics covered by the final pretrial conference are discussed in § 18.20 et seq. The likely subjects to be considered at the case management conference are set out below roughly in the chronological order that the court may consider them.

In addition to the matters set out below, an attorney new to a particular court should determine other matters considered at pretrial conferences by consulting the local rules of the district court, any applicable general orders the court has issued, and any standing orders of the sitting judge, or the attorney should contact the assigned judge's courtroom clerk or deputy. n4

[2] Factual Contentions and Stipulations

Many courts begin the initial case management conference by asking the attorneys to describe in their own terms the primary and significant events or circumstances that have precipitated the litigation. After listening to the attorney's descriptions of the underlying events that give rise to the litigation, the judge may consider examining the possibility of obtaining admissions of fact or stipulations that would avoid unnecessary proof. n1 "Factual stipulations" are formal concessions that have the effect of withdrawing a fact from issue and dispensing entirely with the need for proof of the fact. A judicial admission is conclusive in the case, which means that the facts stated in a stipulation are not subject to subsequent variation; furthermore, the parties will not be permitted to deny the truth of the facts stated, nor to maintain a contention contrary to the stipulated statement of facts, nor to suggest on appeal that the facts were other than as stipulated or that any material fact was omitted. n2 Consequently, attorneys should not make factual stipulations unless they are absolutely certain of their content after thorough investigation. Judges, actively encourage factual stipulations because they significantly eliminate the time and expense of proof, reduce appreciably the scope of necessary discovery, and may also reduce the need for evidentiary motions and rulings.

By using stipulations to remove some matters from contention right at the outset, a judge may better focus disclosure and discovery activity, n3 which may save the parties time and expense. In complex litigation, the savings in time and expense achieved by this early focus may be particularly significant. n4

[3] Addition of Parties and Amendments to Pleadings

Early in the case, the court will want to know whether there are additional parties that the current parties intend to name as defendants in the complaint or in a counterclaim or cross-claim. After considering the attorneys' input on these matters, the judge will usually set deadlines for joining and serving any additional parties. n1 At an early case management conference, most judges also will ascertain whether the parties intend to add claims or defenses and will specify deadlines for filing amended pleadings. n2 If the court addresses these matters actively early in the pretrial period, it may avoid the delays and the wasteful repetition of discovery events that are often required when amendments must be made later in the pretrial period. n3

One of the most frequent causes of delay at trial is parties that wait until the time of trial to request permission to amend the pleadings; this often results in an adjournment when opposition parties claim surprise. A pretrial conference may help prevent this delay by requiring the amendment of pleadings well before trial. Later in the pretrial process after the court has held at least one pretrial conference, the court is likely to deny permission to amend when such amendment will result in any delay, except when amendment matters have arisen after the pretrial conference or when matters existing at the time of that hearing were not discovered until later and the attorney was not negligent in failing to obtain the information earlier. n4

[4] Formulation and Simplification of the Issues

One of the most important functions of the case management conference is the formulation and simplification of the issues. n1 Under the notice style of pleading required by the federal rules, n2 the pleadings frequently do not define the issues with any degree of sharpness; the real issues are often defined by use of the deposition and discovery procedures under Rules 26 through 37. n3 Rule 16(c)(1) governs the formulation of the issues at the case management pretrial conference and also calls for the elimination of frivolous claims or defenses at that conference. n4

The conference also enables the parties, under the supervision of the court, to substantiate the real issues and eliminate those that are without merit or not really controverted. This serves the purposes of eliminating surprise, assisting the parties in preparing for trial, and avoiding the necessity of preparing nonexistent or marginal issues for trial. n5 In addition to promoting efficiency and conservation of judicial resources, Rule 16(c)(1) confirms the court's power to identify the issues that are subject to litigation and eliminate frivolous claims or defenses without awaiting a summary judgment or other motion by the parties. n6 Nevertheless, the attorneys for the parties bear a significant responsibility in formulating the triable issues in that they must identify these issues for the court or they waive the right to have them tried. n7 Consequently, the trial court need not take final action on apparently weak or questionable claims or defenses at an early stage in litigation but may compel the parties to substantiate them through discovery, n8 motions, or otherwise. n9

[5] Consideration of Settlement and Alternative Dispute Resolution Procedures n*

[a] Use of Settlement and Alternative Dispute Resolution

In many cases, it is appropriate for the judge and parties to consider settlement or the use of alternative dispute resolution (ADR) procedures at an early case management conference when authorized by statute or local rule. n1 At that time, the judge will have listened to the attorneys' descriptions of the underlying events and circumstances of the claims and have worked with the lawyers to identify the most important claims and defenses and the underlying key factual and legal issues. n2

A common approach to case management to foster settlement is the "two-stage" approach discussed in [b], below. When the court considers the subject of settlement during the initial case management conference, the judge may also want to consider which of the many different settlement and ADR procedures best fits the needs of the case and the parties' circumstances outside the litigation. Two of the most commonly used of the ADR procedures are mediation and arbitration. Mediation is discussed in [c], below, and arbitration is discussed in [d], below.

The Alternative Dispute Resolution Act of 1998 requires that each United Statesdistrict court authorize the use of alternative dispute resolution processes in all civil actions. By local rule, each district court must devise and implement its own alternative dispute resolution program, to encourage and promote the use of ADR in the district. n3 An "alternative dispute resolution process" includes any process or procedure, other than an adjudication by a presiding judge, in which a neutral third party participates to assist in the resolution of issues in controversy, through processes such as early neutral evaluation, mediation, minitrial, and arbitration. n4 Each district court must ensure that litigants in all civil cases consider the use of an alternative dispute resolution process at an appropriate stage in the litigation, and all district courts are empowered to require participation in mediation, but the use of arbitration is subject to the consent of the parties. n5 Furthermore, each district may exempt from the ADR process specific cases or categories of cases in which the use of ADR would not be appropriate. n6 If a district court has not adopted formal rules regarding alternative dispute resolution programs, nor any local rules that specify the permissible characteristics of mediation orders, n7 the court may not impose mandatory mediation or other ADR under its inherent judicial powers unless adequate safeguards are adopted to limit the scope and expense of the ADR process. n8

[b] Two-Stage Case Management

One case management plan that the court may use is the "two-stage" approach to discovery and motion practice planning. Under this approach, discovery and motion practice is limited during the first stage of the pretrial period to development of the primary matters that must be addressed to set the case for serious settlement negotiations. The goal in the first stage is to examine only the most consequential evidence and perhaps make rulings on critical legal issues. At the end of this first stage, all formal pretrial activity is put on hold for approximately a month. During this time the parties concentrate on settlement, through direct negotiations, settlement conferences, or through ADR. The parties move into stage two of the pretrial period only if they fail to settle the entire action. If there is no settlement, the parties may then conduct full trial oriented discovery. Thus, there are two key features this approach: (1) limiting discovery in the first stage to the matters on which the success of settlement negotiations are likely to turn and (2) assuring the attorneys and parties that if no settlement is reached at the end of stage one, their full discovery rights will be preserved for stage two. n9

[c] Mediation Procedure

The term "mediation" generally means a relatively informal non-binding process in which a neutral third person attempts to assist opposing parties reconcile their positions consensually. The mediator assists the parties to communicate with each other, describes their positions and underlying interests or concerns, and devises mutually agreeable options for resolving the dispute without a trial. Mediation is a relatively inexpensive process with a good rate of success that has met with considerable litigant satisfaction. n10

The ADR Act n11 lists mediation as an appropriate process for the court to use. It also approves the participation of professional neutrals from the private sector as mediators. While the ADR Act requires district courts to obtain litigants' consent when the court orders arbitration, consent is not necessary for the court to order non-binding mediation or the use of other ADR mechanisms. It is within a district court's inherent power to order non-consensual mediation in those cases in which that step serves the interests of justice, provided that the order ensures procedural fairness and shields objecting parties from undue burdens. The district court has inherent power to appoint persons unrelated to the court to aid judges in the performance of specific judicial duties. In the context of non-binding mediation, a mediator does not decide the merits of the case and has no authority to coerce settlement. Therefore, it is acceptable for the district court to appoint a qualified and neutral private party as a mediator. n12

[d] Arbitration Procedure

Arbitration is an ADR procedure in which a third person known as the arbitrator resolves either an entire dispute or particular aspects of the dispute. Arbitration in a federal civil proceeding may be of two types: binding and nonbinding. n13 In a "binding arbitration," a court may order that the parties unequivocally abide by the arbitrator's decision on a particular dispute or claim, provided that the court is satisfied that the parties actually and explicitly agreed to such an arbitration under contract principles. To determine whether such a binding arbitration agreement exists, the court must resolve any issue that challenges the formation or applicability of the specific arbitration clause that a party seeks to have the court enforce. When there is no provision validly committing them to an arbitrator, these issues typically concern the scope of the arbitration clause and its enforceability. n14

The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) provides that when a written contract involving commerce provides for arbitration of any dispute arising from the contract, a federal court will enforce the provision, except when grounds that exist at law or in equity provide for the revocation of any contract. n15 Thus, the FAA places arbitration agreements on an equal footing with other contracts, and requires federal courts to enforce them according to their terms, except when they may be invalidated by generally applicable contract defenses, such as fraud, duress, or unconscionability. n16

As a gateway matter in each case of arbitration, the court must determine whether the parties have agreed to submit the particular dispute to arbitration. This question of "arbitrability" is presumed to be an issue for judicial determination unless the agreement of the parties has explicitly stated that the arbitrator is to decide such "questions of arbitrability." n17 The Supreme Court has distinguished such questions of arbitrability, which are presumed to be for the court to decide, from preliminaryprocedural questions that the parties would likely expect an arbitrator to decide, such as allegations of waiver or delay; in federal litigation, these are matters for the arbitrator to determine. n18

In summary, parties that ultimately contest a dispute in federal litigation have the option to voluntarily engage in arbitration. An arbitration agreement is enforceable whether made before of after litigation has been commenced, and may specify unique procedures. Parties are generally free to structure their arbitration agreements in the particular manner they want. For example, parties may agree to limit the issues they choose to arbitrate and may agree on rules under which any arbitration will proceed. They may choose who will resolve specific disputes. n19 In another example, the parties may freely elect binding arbitration preceded by no judicial discovery. n20 Because of the flexibility to specify a tailored arbitration process to fit the varying requirements of individual cases or claims, n21 the parties, court, and attorneys must always ensure that they are explicit about arbitration process that they are applying to a particular claim or dispute. n22

[6] Matters of Proof

[a] Evidentiary Subjects in General

At any pretrial conference, the court may take steps to avoid unnecessary proof and cumulative evidence. n1 The court may also seek to obtain stipulations regarding the authenticity of documents, make advance rulings on the admissibility of evidence, and investigate the possibility of obtaining admissions of facts and documents. n2 For example, in cases involving a large amount of documentary evidence, the court may secure the agreement of the attorneys that certain exhibits be received in evidence without the time and cost of authenticating the documents. The admissibility of evidence and the taking of judicial notice have also been subjects of consideration at pretrial conferences. n3 No proof need be offered at trial as to any factual issue that has been admitted at the pretrial conference. n4 Note, however, that although Rule 16(c)(3) encourages stipulations as to the authenticity of documents, parties may not be compelled to stipulate to facts. n5

Rule 16(c)(7) also addresses a variety of subjects regarding final trial preparation of matters of proof, which are designed to eliminate surprise at trial. These are the identification of witnesses and documents, the need and schedule for filing and exchanging pretrial briefs, and the date or dates of further conferences and trial. n6 Thus, the district courts may require that the parties reveal the names of the witnesses they intend to call. Failure to supply these names, unless excusable, may result in the dismissal or default of cases, or in the refusal to hear the testimony of undisclosed witnesses. n7

[b] Evidence Obtained From Experts

In early case management conferences, many courts request that the parties discuss and make plans regarding identity of expert witnesses and reports, disclosures, and proposed testimony submitted by experts. n8 Such a conference will typically occur after the parties have made their mandatory initial disclosures regarding experts. n9 The court has discretion at any pretrial conference to limit the use of expert testimony under Rule 702 of the Federal Rules of Evidence. n10 Thus, even when proposed expert testimony is admissible under the standards of Evidence Rules 403 and 702, n11 the court may deny or limit proposed expert testimony to reasonably limit the expense and expenditure of time required for such testimony. In its determination, the court may consider factors such as the expense to opposition parties of securing testimony on the same subjects by other experts, the other expert testimony in the case, and the other evidence available at trial. n12 The court may also limit the number of experts that may be used or the subjects about which expert testimony may be offered, or both. n13

The court may also use an early case management conference to specify the sequence and the deadlines for identifying expert witnesses, for producing their reports, and for taking their depositions. n14 Typically, courts should prescribe a time for expert witness disclosures in the scheduling order and, in most cases, the party with the burden of proof on an issue should disclose its expert testimony on that issue before other parties are required to make their disclosures with respect to the issue. The court should also consider the right of parties to name, and the duty to file reports from, rebuttal experts. A scheduling order that is silent on this issue may be construed as leaving an unnecessary ambiguity as to whether or when rebuttal expert evidence is permitted or required. n15

[7] Referral of Matters to Magistrate Judge or Master

An important subject for the trial court to consider at a case management conference, especially in larger or more complex cases, is the advisability of using theservices of a magistrate judge or special master, and if so, the manner in which to utilize the magistrate judge or master. n1 Considering the congested dockets in most district courts and the need to allocate precious judicial resources, the ability to appoint magistrate judges, particularly with respect to scheduling and planning, may be very useful. n2 There are many types of assignments that may be given to magistrate judges, such as, whether to assign the case to a magistrate judge for all purposes, including presiding at a jury or bench trial. n3

With respect to masters, some district courts on occasion assign responsibility for case management, discovery, or settlement to special masters, either under their inherent authority, or under Rule 53. n4 These referrals are usually made in complex cases, in nonjury actions for matters of account and difficult computation of damages, in nonjury actions on a showing that the appointment is required by some exceptional condition, and when the parties consent to the appointment of a magistrate judge to serve as a special master. n5 The purpose of a special master is to assist the district judge by supervising various pretrial phases of litigation, reporting on matters such as accountings, directing complex burdensome discovery tasks, negotiating settlements, and issuing rulings on preliminary issues. n6 For a complete discussion of the roles of magistrate judges and masters, see Ch. 21, Masters and Magistrate Judges.

[8] Other Miscellaneous Subject Matter

A court may consider several other topics for discussion at a pretrial conference. Two of these are the form and substance of the pretrial order n1 and the disposition of pending motions. n2 A court may also use a pretrial conference to consider the question of jurisdiction, on its own motion or on motion of a party, and dismiss the action if subject matter jurisdiction is lacking. n3

When appropriate, the court may consider the need for adopting special procedures for managing potentially difficult or protracted actions that may involve complex issues, multiple parties, difficult legal questions, or unusual proof problems. Pretrial procedures to expedite such cases have actually been in use in some district courts for many years. The four characteristics outlined in the rule are not intended to be an exhaustive list. n4 The Supreme Court cited this provision in holding that district courts have discretion to facilitate notice to potential plaintiffs in actions under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. n5

The general residual phrase in Rule 16, that the court may consider such other matters as may facilitate the just, speedy, and inexpensive disposition of the action, n6 is a further example of the flexibility the court has in the conduct of pretrial conferences. n7 Also considered under the residual clause has been a ruling on the right to a jury trial. n8 Parties have also been allowed to stipulate as to matters that may be handled by the court, for example, whether to have bifurcated trials.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial ConferencesCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesScheduling Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.30 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c), 16(e); see Rockwell Int'l Corp. v. United States, 549 U.S. 457, 474, 127 S. Ct. 1397, 167 L. Ed. 2d 190 (2007) (noting that final pretrial order supersedes all prior pleadings and controls subsequent course of trial and litigation).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Rice v. United States, 164 F.R.D. 556, 558 (N.D. Okla. 1995) (district court set number of dates at case management conference, including discovery deadline; dispositive motion deadline; motion in limine deadline; final witness and exhibit exchange; and expert witness exchange); see also Koplove v. Ford Motor Co., 795 F.2d 15, 18 (3d Cir. 1986) (Rule 16 recognizes that scheduling is at heart of case management).

(n4)Footnote 3. Dodson v. Runyon, 86 F.3d 37, 39 (2d Cir. 1996) (case management tools of Federal Rule 16, added in 1983, were expressly designed to enable district courts to better manage their expanding dockets).

(n5)Footnote 4. Vulcan Tools v. Makita USA, 23 F.3d 564, 565 n.2 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(C), (D).

(n7)Footnote 2. Christian Legal Soc'y Chapter of the Univ. of Cal. v. Martinez, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 2971, 177 L. Ed. 2d 838, 853-854 (2010) .

(n8)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(F).

(n9)Footnote 4. See Matter of Maurice, 21 F.3d 767, 772 (7th Cir. 1994) (one purpose of requiring parties to complywith prehearing or pretrial order is to resolve discovery and evidentiary disputes in advance of trial in order to narrow issues and expedite trial).

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A); see Bylin v. Billings, 568 F.3d 1224, 1231 (10th Cir. 2009) (while it is not absolutely necessary for court to set deadline for adding parties, attorneys should ensure that court does so in order to avoid enforcement problems and preclude attempts to add parties at late date).

(n11)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A), (c)(2)(B).

(n12)Footnote 3. See Parker v. Columbia Pictures Indus., 204 F.3d 326, 339-341 (2d Cir. 2000) .

(n13)Footnote 4. See Johnson v. Mammoth Recreations, 975 F.2d 604, 607-608 (9th Cir. 1992) (motion to amend complaint after scheduling order deadline denied when party did not show good cause); Marcum v. Zimmer, 163 F.R.D. 250, 253-254 (S.D. W.Va. 1995) (parties seeking to amend after deadline in scheduling order must satisfy both Rules 15(a) and 16(b)).

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(A).

(n15)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8.

(n16)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(F).

(n17)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(A).

(n18)Footnote 5. Rogan v. Menino, 175 F.3d 75, 81 (1st Cir. 1999) (Rule 16 permits court to dispose of marginal claims or issues that do not warrant full-dress trial).

(n19)Footnote 6. Rogan v. Menino, 175 F.3d 75, 80 (1st Cir. 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n21)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(F).

(n22)Footnote 9. Berkowitz v. Home Box Office, 89 F.3d 24, 28-29 (1st Cir. 1996) (courts may use case management tools to particularize claims or defenses to afford notice to opposing party).

(n23)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.50 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(I); see Lewis v. Sch. Dist. # 70, *2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28267, at *21-22 (S.D. Ill. Apr. 6, 2009) (these procedures are voluntary, and court cannot compel binding mediation or arbitration on litigants).

(n25)Footnote 2. See Geno Enters., Inc. v. Newstar Energy USA, Inc., 280 B.R. 623, 626 (W.D. Mich 2002) (many issues identified at first pretrial conference).

(n26)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 651(b).

(n27)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 651(a).

(n28)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 652(a); see Stolt-Nielsen S. A. v. AnimalFeeds Int'l Corp., ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 1758, 176 L. Ed. 2d 605, 622-624 (2010) (foundational principle of arbitration by agreement is that it is matter of consent); Lewis v. Sch. Dist. # 70, *2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28267, at *21-22 (S.D. Ill. Apr. 6, 2009) (court cannot compel binding mediation or arbitration on litigants).

(n29)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 652(b).

(n30)Footnote 7. See In re African-American Slave Descendants' Litig., 272 F Supp 2d 755, 760 (N.D. Ill. 2003) .

(n31)Footnote 8. In re Atlantic Pipe Corp., 304 F.3d 135, 145 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n32)Footnote 9. See Klein v. King, 132 F.R.D. 525, 529-533 (N.D. Cal. 1990) (two-stage plan described in detail); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(F) (conference specifications regarding discovery).

(n33)Footnote 10. Cf. Rhea v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 767 F.2d 266, 269 (6th Cir. 1985) .

(n34)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C.S. §§ 651-658.

(n35)Footnote 12. In re Atlantic Pipe Corp., 304 F.3d 135, 141-146 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n36)Footnote 13. See Qorvis Communs., LLC v. Wilson, 549 F.3d 303, 310 (4th Cir. 2008) .

(n37)Footnote 14. Granite Rock Co. v. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 2847, 177 L. Ed. 2d 567, 579 (2010) .

(n38)Footnote 15. 9 U.S.C. § 2.

(n39)Footnote 16. Rent-A-Center, W., Inc. v. Jackson, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 2772, 177 L. Ed. 2d 403, 410 (2010) .

(n40)Footnote 17. Howsam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 537 U.S. 79, 83-84, 123 S. Ct. 588, 154 L. Ed. 2d 491 (2002) (typical questions of "arbitrability" are whether parties are bound by binding arbitration agreement or whether particular dispute is within scope of arbitration agreement).

(n41)Footnote 18. Howsam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 537 U.S. 79, 83-86, 123 S. Ct. 588, 154 L. Ed. 2d 491 (2002) .

(n42)Footnote 19. Stolt-Nielsen S. A. v. AnimalFeeds Int'l Corp., ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 1758, 176 L. Ed. 2d 605, 623 (2010) (as with any other contract, parties' intentions control).

(n43)Footnote 20. See Metro E. Ctr. for Conditioning & Health v. Qwest Communs. Int'l, 294 F.3d 924, 927 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n44)Footnote 21. See Shearson/American Express, Inc. v. McMahon, 482 U.S. 220, 234-235, 107 S. Ct. 2332, 96 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1987) .

(n45)Footnote 22. See Pokorny v. Quixtar, Inc., 601 F.3d 987, 998-1000 (9th Cir. 2010) (interpretation of agreement to arbitrate).

(n46)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D).

(n47)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(C).

(n48)Footnote 3. Miller v. Los Angeles County Bd. of Education, 799 F.2d 486, 489 (9th Cir. 1986) (before trial, district court ordered plaintiff to submit questions he intended to ask on direct examination and ordered defendant to present objections, which court then ruled on; court of appeals affirmed on ground that procedure expedited trial in accordance with Rule 16 by allowing plaintiff to present his case with minimum of interruption).

(n49)Footnote 4. Jones v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 870 F.2d 982 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n50)Footnote 5. Cf. Waldorf v. Borough of Kenilworth, 878 F. Supp. 686, 691 (D.N.J. 1995) .

(n51)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(G).

(n52)Footnote 7. See Brock v. R.J. Auto Parts & Serv., Inc., 864 F.2d 677, 679-680 (10th Cir. 1988) .

(n53)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D), (G).

(n54)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(D) (expert witness disclosures must be made at times and in sequence that court orders); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(A)-(C) (content of required disclosures).

(n55)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D).

(n56)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Evid. 403, 702.

(n57)Footnote 12. *See, e.g., Treaster v. Healthsouth Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36507, at *3-5 (D. Kan. June 5, 2006) .

(n58)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n59)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(D) (expert witness disclosures must be made at times and in sequence that court orders); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(A)-(C) (content of required disclosures); Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(A) (expert depositions).

(n60)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(C), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n61)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(H).

(n62)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 636; see also Geras v. Lafayette Display Fixtures, Inc., 742 F.2d 1037, 1041 (7th Cir. 1984) (magistrate judge reference system intended to provide quicker and less costly alternative to usually more delayed adjudication in district court).

(n63)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 73.

(n64)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a), (b).

(n65)Footnote 5. Goldstein v. Kelleher, 728 F.2d 32, 35 (1st Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 852 (1984) .

(n66)Footnote 6. Active Prods. Corp. v. A.H. Choitz & Co., 163 F.R.D. 274, 282-283 (N.D. Ind. 1995) .

(n67)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(J); see § 18.40 et seq.

(n68)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(K).

(n69)Footnote 3. Nelson v. Keefer, 451 F.2d 289, 293 (3d Cir. 1971) (affirming dismissal during pretrial phase for failure to satisfy jurisdictional amount).

(n70)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n71)Footnote 5. Hoffman-La Roche, Inc. v. Sperling, 493 U.S. 165, 170, 110 S. Ct. 482, 107 L. Ed. 2d 480 (1989) (names and addresses of discharged employees in age discrimination suit discoverable).

(n72)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(P).

(n73)Footnote 7. Louisiana Power & Light Co. v. Kellstrom, 50 F.3d 319, 335 (5th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 862 (1995) (noting that under this provision district court may authorize party to produce trial exhibits; however, absent pretrial approval, party may not later request court to tax to opponent production costs of exhibits).

(n74)Footnote 8. Fields Engr. & Equip., Inc. v. Cargill, Inc., 651 F.2d 589, 592 (8th Cir. 1981) (plaintiff waived jury demand by orally consenting to bench trial at pretrial conference).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART I. INITIAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCES

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.06

§ 18.06 Scheduling Conferencesn*

[1] Discretion of Court to Utilize Scheduling Conference

A "scheduling conference" is a particular type of pretrial conference in which the district court formulates a scheduling order, after consulting with the attorneys for the parties and any unrepresented parties. n1 A scheduling order is an order that the court makes to specify the following time limits: n2 joining other parties; amending the pleadings; filing motions; completing discovery; modifying times specified in the rules for making disclosures; disclosing or discovering electronically stored information; making any agreements for asserting claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material after production; holding pretrial conferences and commencing trial; and any other matters appropriate in the circumstances of the case.

The court is not required to hold a formal scheduling conference, nor any other type of pretrial conference. n3 Consequently, the court may issue its scheduling order after any appropriate communication with the parties. n3.1 For example, the court may make a scheduling order after consulting with the parties by telephone, mail, or othersuitable means, or after receiving a report from the parties under Rule 26(f). n4

[2] Attendance at Scheduling Conference

If the court holds a scheduling conference, the court may also specify attendance and participation requirements. The court may require that an attorney for each represented party, and every unrepresented party, attend and actively participate in the scheduling conference. n1 The court may also require that a party or the party's representative be present or reasonably available by telephone to consider the possible settlement of the suit. n2 The term "representative" may be someone other than an attorney, such as an officer of a corporate party, a representative from an insurance carrier, or someone else, depending on the circumstances. n3 At least one of the lawyers for each party participating in a scheduling conference must have authority to enter into stipulations and to make admissions regarding all matters that the participants may reasonably anticipate may be discussed. n4 Local rules may also impose attendance requirements on scheduling conferences. For example, a local rule may require the attendance of the attorney who is expected to try the case. n5

[3] Subject Matter of Scheduling Conference

Even though it is designated as a "scheduling conference," Rule 16 provides that the court may use the conference to deal with any other matters appropriate in the circumstances of the case. n1 Therefore, the attorneys should be prepared for any of the topics listed in Rule 16(c) that the court has indicated will be included on the agenda. n2 Local rules may require that counsel meet with the court and consult before the scheduling conference and to propose deadlines for the various matters, such as a specific date for the completion of all discovery. n3

After holding the scheduling conference or other meetings with the attorneys, the court will issue a pretrial "scheduling order" which establishes deadlines that are binding on the parties and their counsel, and the court should not grant extensions or continuances for those deadlines except on a timely showing of good cause. n4 Therefore, once a schedule is set at the scheduling conference in the scheduling order, there is a firm presumption against the granting of continuances. Even though the parties may request extensions for deadlines and the court has discretion to grant such requests on a showing of good cause, n5 adherence to the schedule set by the court under Rule 16 serves several important purposes, including sharpening the preparation and presentation of cases, eliminating trial surprise, and facilitating the early settlement of disputes. n6

"Good cause" for an extension under Rule 16(b) must by shown by the moving party's diligence in attempting to meet the case scheduling order's requirements. n7 If a party shows good cause, a reasonable extension of time for a particular deadline may be granted by the court; however, stipulations by the parties should not be accepted in the absence of good cause. n8

The court will often in its pretrial scheduling order set a deadline for the parties to amend the pleadings, n9 and under Rule 16(b), the court also has the power to amend its scheduling order to permit an extension of the deadline to amend the pleadings. n10 Because it involves two rules, the determination of a motion to extend the deadline to amend pleadings a two-step analysis: the moving party must first demonstrate to the court that it has "good cause" for seeking modification of the scheduling deadline under Rule 16(b) and then must meet the requirements for permission to amend under Rule 15(a). n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesScheduling Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), (c).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)-(c); Mizwicki v. Gerald Helwig, 196 F.3d 828, 833 (7th Cir. 1999) (pretrial conferences discretionary).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendment.

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1)(B); see, e.g., Restrepo v. Colgate Univ., 149 F.R.D. 17, 19 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) (court conducted telephone conference with attorneys before filing scheduling order); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f) (report setting forth parties' plan for discovery).

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a), (c)(1); see Crossman v. Raytheon Long Term Disability Plan, 316 F.3d 36, 38 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1).

(n9)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1).

(n11)Footnote 5. Northern District of California, Local Rule 16-8(a).

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(vi).

(n13)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2); see also Hernandez-Santiago v. Ecolab, Inc., 397 F.3d 30, 32 (1st Cir. 2005) (court utilized scheduling conference to discuss factual circumstances of product liability, and to order defendants to produce discovery regarding entity that had actually sold product that was subject matter of claim).

(n14)Footnote 3. Olgyay v. Society for Envtl. Graphic Design, 169 F.R.D. 219, 219-220 (D.D.C. 1996) ; see Gestetner Corp. v. Case Equip. Co., 108 F.R.D. 138, 142 (D. Me. 1985) (by requesting scheduling conference, parties may prevent additional expenditures of time).

(n15)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4); see § 18.42[5].

(n16)Footnote 5. Molokai Chamber of Commerce v. Kukui (Molokai), Inc., 161 F.R.D. 426, 427 (D. Haw. 1995) (at initial scheduling conference, magistrate judge set deadline for filing of all motions, and this deadline was extended pursuant to plaintiffs' request).

(n17)Footnote 6. Rice v. United States, 164 F.R.D. 556, 558 (N.D. Okla. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 7. Bradford v. DANA Corp., 249 F.3d 807, 809 (8th Cir. 2001) (good cause was not established when plaintiff made only limited efforts to obtain new attorney after her initial attorney withdrew from case); Hansen v. Schubert, 459 F. Supp. 2d 973, 999-1000 (E.D. Ca. 2006) (when evaluating whether party was diligent, focus of inquiry is on moving party's reasons for modification of schedule).

(n19)Footnote 8. Olgyay v. Society for Envtl. Graphic Design, 169 F.R.D. 219, 220 (D.D.C. 1996) .

(n20)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n21)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4).

(n22)Footnote 11. Hansen v. Schubert, 459 F. Supp. 2d 973, 1001-1002 (E.D. Ca. 2006) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART I. INITIAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCES

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 18.07through 18.19

[Reserved]

§§ 18.07[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART II. FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.20

§ 18.20 Significance of Final Pretrial Conferencen*

A trial court has discretion to hold a final pretrial conference in any civil case. n1 As the name implies, the final pretrial conference is the last conference before trial and must be held as close to the time of trial as reasonable under the circumstances. n2

The significance of a final pretrial conference, in contrast to an ordinary case management conference, is that a final pretrial conference is used to formulate a plan for the trial itself; n3 a case management conference, on the other hand, is a pretrial conference which is used by the court to manage the initial stages of litigation, such as the formulation of issues, the discussion of settlement, and the scheduling of pretrial matters. n4 Furthermore, while an ordinary pretrial conference controls the subsequent course of action unless modified by subsequent order, the final pretrial order that results from the final pretrial conference controls the subsequent course of the trial and may be amended only to prevent manifest injustice. n5 For example, the court in the final pretrial conference may exclude from use at trial any nonconforming evidence. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.70 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e); see MCI Communications Corp. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 708 F.2d 1081, 1169 (7th Cir. 1983) (Rule 16(d) gives court discretion to hold final pretrial conference).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Rice v. United States, 164 F.R.D. 556, 558 (N.D. Okla. 1995) ; see also § 18.01 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 5. Ramirez Pomales v. Becton Dickinson & Co., S.A., 839 F.2d 1, 3 (1st Cir. 1988) ; see Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1221 (10th Cir. 2000) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Ramirez Pomales v. Becton Dickinson & Co., S.A., 839 F.2d 1, 3 (1st Cir. 1988) (issues not included in final pretrial order ordinarily are waived).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART II. FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.21

§ 18.21 Timing of Final Pretrial Conferencen*

The district courts must hold any final pretrial conference as close to the time of trial as is reasonable under the circumstances. n1 This provision was added to clarify that the time between a final pretrial conference, which could also be the only pretrial conference, and the trial should be as short as possible to ensure that the parties make substantial progress with the case and to avoid the inefficiency involved in having the preparations repeated because of a delay between the last conference and trial. n2 Ultimately, how close to the trial date is reasonable under the circumstances is a matter determined by the sound discretion of the sitting judge. n3

One court has suggested that in most cases the optimum time for holding the final pretrial conference should be between 10 and 14 days before trial, and another, has suggested that generally final pretrial conferences should be held only about five days before trial. Given the many variables that influence the time frame, the drafters concluded that it would be inappropriate for the rule to prescribe a precise time. n4 Such variables include the complexity of the case, the number of parties, the amount and nature of the evidence likely to be offered at trial, the number, difficulty, and importance of unresolved issues, the relative clarity or obscurity of the applicable law, and the need for special or detailed jury instructions.

In most circumstances, courts will need to give counsel at least three weeks between the time they make their final pretrial disclosures and the time they file their final pretrial conference statements. Rulings on disputes about important proffered evidence, lines of argument, or legal issues may have a significant effect on other matters that normally would be addressed at a final pretrial conference, such as which witnesses will be called, which documents will be offered into evidence, what the order of proof should be, which jury instructions should be given, and how much time each party should be allotted to try its part of the case. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.74 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fort Howard Paper Co. v. Standard Havens, Inc., 119 F.R.D. 397, 400 (E.D. Wis. 1988) , aff'd on other grounds, 901 F.2d 1373 (7th Cir. 1990) (final pretrial conference less than three weeks before trial date).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n6)Footnote 5. Paradigm Sales v. Weber Marking Sys., 880 F. Supp. 1247, 1249 (N.D. Ind. 1995) (pretrial motions in patent infringement case).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART II. FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.22

§ 18.22 Attendance at Final Pretrial Conferencen*

The final pretrial conference must be attended by at least one of the attorneys who will conduct the trial for each of the parties and by any unrepresented party. n1 This special attendance requirement indicates the significance of the final pretrial conference, in that other earlier pretrial conferences require the attendance of only one of the attorneys for each represented party, plus any unrepresented party. n2 The presence of the attorneys who will be involved in the trial is especially important for the trial court to supervise a more effective trial. n3 As with all pretrial conferences, at least one of the participating attorneys for each party must have authority to enter into stipulations and to make admissions regarding all matters that the participants may reasonably expect could be discussed. n4 The form of attendance is not prescribed by rule, and some judgespermit counsel to participate in final pretrial conferences by telephone or video conference. n5 A judge may sanction either a lawyer or a party who was required to attend or participate in a final pretrial conference but failed without sufficient excuse to attend or participate. n6

In addition to attorneys or unrepresented parties, a court may, based on its own inherent power, require represented parties to attend a final pretrial conference. A court will most likely require a represented party to attend, in person or by telephone or video conference, when it wants to explore the possibility of settlement negotiations. The court may also want to consider whether it would be appropriate to refer the parties to a settlement conference with another judge or some type of alternative dispute resolution. n7 The careful attorney will also be aware of any local rules, or general or standing orders, issued by the district court, that create additional attendance requirements for a final pretrial conference. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.75 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1). See Lucien v. Breweur, 9 F.3d 26, 28 (7th Cir. 1993) (judge may compel appearance of unrepresented party at pretrial conference and dismiss for noncompliance); Ha-Lo Indus. v. Your Favorite Producers, 164 F.R.D. 233, 234 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (final pretrial conference stayed when primary counsel for defendant did not attend and attorney who did attend lacked sufficient familiarity with case to discuss all aspects).

(n6)Footnote 5. Wollenburg v. Comtech Mfg. Co., 201 F.3d 973, 977-978 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Harris v. Marsh, 679 F. Supp. 1204, 1389-1390 (E.D.N.C. 1987) , aff'd on other grounds, 914 F.2d 525 (4th Cir. 1990) (district court properly imposed sanctions for failure to participate in final pretrial conference and comply with final pretrial order).

(n8)Footnote 7. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. v. Energy Gathering, Inc., 2 F.3d 1397, 1406 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Cf. Ha-Lo Indus., Inc. v. Your Favorite Producers, 164 F.R.D. 233, 234 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (final pretrial conference stayed and attorney's fees awarded to opposing party for lead counsel's failure to attend conference).

84 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART II. FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.23

§ 18.23 Procedures at Final Pretrial Conferencen*

Rule 16(d) does not prescribe any specific procedures that courts must follow when they conduct final pretrial conferences and actual practice varies from court to court. Some judges conduct final pretrial conferences in chambers, others permit conference appearances by telephone, n1 and some do not require that the proceedings be stenographically or electronically recorded. n2

One generalization that may be made is that final pretrial conferences are likely to be more formal than conferences held earlier in the pretrial period, and are more likely to be held in the courtroom and on the record, with the participants appearing in person rather than by telephone or video conference. n3 The reason for more formality at the final pretrial conference is that the consequences of the final pretrial order are more significant, in that it will be the last conference, and therefore the order prevails over the orders from previous conferences; thus, the order following a final pretrial conference may be modified only to prevent manifest injustice. n4 In contrast, schedules specified in earlier orders may be modified on a showing of good cause. n5 Another factor contributing to more formality at the final pretrial conference is that the primary purpose of the final pretrial conference is the formulation of the plan for trial, including a program for facilitating the admission of evidence. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.76 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Lucien v. Breweur, 9 F.3d 26, 28 (7th Cir. 1993) (local rule authorized telephonic participation at final pretrial conference; however, judge is not required to follow this procedure absent extraordinary circumstances).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Morrison v. Murray Biscuit Co., 797 F.2d 1430, 1433 (7th Cir. 1986) (final pretrial conference recorded, and transcript in effect constituted final pretrial order); In re Beard, 811 F.2d 818, 833-834 (4th Cir. 1987) (party complained that telephone call should have been put on the record).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1221 (10th Cir. 2000) (considerations of formality).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART II. FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.24

§ 18.24 Subject Matter at Final Pretrial Conferencen*

[1] All Case Management Issues May Be Included

The subject matter commonly included in the final pretrial conference is controlled by its primary purpose to formulate a specific plan for the trial of the action, including a program for facilitating the admission of evidence. n1 Thus, the goal of the court will be to plan the trial as specifically as possible, to resolve all remaining disputes about the law governing the case, and to resolve as many of the parties' disputes about the admissibility of evidence as possible; thus, the trial court will provide the parties with fair notice of the basic rules under which the trial will operate and the expectations of the court. A good final pretrial conference also directs the attorneys to focus their final preparations toward the matters on which the trial will concentrate. Therefore, the final pretrial conference will definitively sharpen and simplify the issues to be tried, and represents a complete statement of all the contentions of the parties. n2

Any of the subjects that could be discussed in scheduling and other pretrial conferences may also be included by the court on the agenda of a final pretrial conference. n3 The considerations that are listed in the following subsections are not intended to be exhaustive, but represent the most common final pretrial conference subjects.

Many courts by local rule or by standing order impose a substantial list of pretrial obligations on the attorneys or parties. The careful attorney should always check these local rules and the standing orders of the assigned judge to determine the applicable practice with respect to preparation for the final pretrial conference. n4

[2] Settlement

Before actually preparing and planning for trial, the court may use the final pretrial conference as a last, but important, effort to settle the case. n1 There are several reasons why the final pretrial conference is a meaningful opportunity for settlement. Discovery is completed at this point and the court will have ruled on the most significant substantive motions.

Moreover, to prepare for the final pretrial conference, the parties will have been forced to review and analyze the case systematically. Some parties remain unprepared, or unwilling, to make the hard decisions that settlement often requires until they reach this point in the litigation. By the time of the final pretrial conference, they usually have virtually all of the information about the case that they may expect to get before the trial begins and have an adequate basis for making their judgments about the settlement value of the action. Thus, in combination with the foreseeable cost of the trial, the heightened risk aversion that pending trial may foster may bring on a heightened interest in settlement. n2

[3] Discovery

At the final pretrial conference, the court should resolve any remaining disputes about disclosures or discovery and, if applicable, order that the parties promptly complete any required discovery obligations. When considering the parties' compliance with their disclosure and discovery obligations, the court may need to determine whether a party has violated discovery obligations to the extent that the court should order sanctions in the form of precluding the offending party's use of particular evidence at trial or ordering that certain facts or claims be deemed established for purposes of the trial. n1 A court may particularly focus on how the parties have responded to requests for admissions because one of the primary purposes of requests for admissions is to eliminate the need to spend time at trial proving matters that cannot reasonably be contested. Courts are specifically authorized to determine the final disposition of disputes arising out of requests for admissions at a pretrial conference or at a designated time before trial. n2 Furthermore, if the court determines that an answer to a request for admissions does not comply with the requirements of Rule 36(a), the court may order that the matter be considered admitted. n3

[4] Issues for Trial

One of the most important subjects for the court and parties is the formulation, simplification, and identification of issues for trial to promote efficiency and conserve judicial resources. Thus, the court and parties at the final pretrial conferences must review the remaining claims and defenses and refine the issues for trial. n1 This review ensures that the parties understand the nature of the claims and defenses that will be tried, determines whether amendments to the pleadings are necessary, and determines whether any claims or defenses may be eliminated voluntarily or by order. n2

If any motions for summary judgment remain pending, the court should rule on them before or during the final pretrial conference, so that the parties may focus their final preparations on the claims and defenses that remain assertable. Further, when the final pretrial conference shows undisputed facts that entitle a party to judgment as a matter of law, the court may grant summary judgment sua sponte. n3 The court must be careful, even at this mature stage of the litigation, not to dismiss claims or defenses, over objection, without giving the adversely affected parties sufficient advance notice and opportunity to present evidence and argument in support of the challenged claim. n4

[5] Sequencing or Separation of Trial

In connection with its review of the remaining claims and defenses, n1 the court may also consider whether it would be appropriate to litigate one or more particular claims or defenses before other claims or defenses. One of the primary purposes of the 1993 amendments to Rule 16(c) is to provide easier facilitation for structuring trials under Rules 42, 50, and 52. n2 To further that purpose, the Advisory Committee added paragraphs 13 and 14 to Rule 16(c). n3 Under Paragraph 13, courts may, when appropriate at pretrial conferences, enter an order for a separate trial n4 with respect to a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, or with respect to any particular issue in the case. n5 Under Paragraph 14, a court may direct a party or parties to present evidence early in the trial with respect to a manageable issue that could, onthe evidence, be the basis for a judgment as a matter of law n6 or a judgment on partial findings. n7

A court may also consider whether the case should be bifurcated and some part tried in subsequent proceedings, either to the same jury, immediately or shortly after the liability phase is concluded, or to a separate jury, shortly after the liability phase or later, after any necessary discovery and motion activity. n8

A party, especially the defendant, commonly asks the court to bifurcate the damages issues for later litigation; n9 requests to bifurcate litigation of claims for punitive damages are also common. n10 At the final pretrial conference, the party seeking bifurcation has the burden of establishing that bifurcation is proper, and that the moving party will be prejudiced if separate trials are not granted. n11 The determination of whether or not to bifurcate is left to the discretion of the trial judge. n12

[6] Detailed Trial Outline

Many judges use the final pretrial conference to establish a detailed outline for the presentation of evidence over the course of the trial. n1 While this kind of outline is not as necessary in smaller or simpler cases, it may be important to maintain order in larger, more complicated cases or in particularly rancorous litigation. Such a trial outline may dictate the format and how much time will be allotted for the opening statements; the order in which each witness will testify; the sequence in which the documentary and other exhibits will be introduced; whether demonstrative evidence will be permitted or site visits made; and the format for closing arguments.

When a case will be tried to the court instead of a jury, a trial outline should specify which documentary material will be the subject of oral testimony and which will simply be submitted for careful review by the judge after the proceedings in court have been concluded. The court also may want counsel to present much of the direct testimony through written narratives, especially when the source of the testimony is an expert witness. n2

[7] Stipulations and Additional Admissions

At the final pretrial conference, the court may request that the parties stipulate or admit to as many factual, evidentiary, and procedural matters as are appropriate. n1 When appropriate, a court may also ask counsel to stipulate to facts that are subject to judicial notice. By using admissions and judicial notice, the court and parties enable the jury to focus without distraction, on the critical disputed issues and the evidence that is pertinent to resolving those issues. n2 Counsel should, however, review any pretrial stipulations and admissions in the final pretrial order because the parties may be bound even by erroneous information; n3 once incorporated in a final pretrial order, the court will relieve a party from a stipulation only to prevent manifest injustice. n4

[8] Motions in Limine Regarding Evidence

At the final pretrial conference, counsel should be prepared to discuss the evidence that the parties plan to offer at trial and the manner in which they plan to present it. The attorneys also should ensure that they are prepared for Rule 16's directive that the parties obtain advance rulings from the court on the admissibility of evidence. n1 The court will probably prefer to rule on motions in limine before trial, rather than taking these motions under submission for later ruling at trial, so that the attorneys will have advance notice of the ground rules that will apply at trial. n2 Motions in limine may have considerable impact on the scope of the trial and on the order in which evidence is presented. Therefore, it is important that the motions be determined before the attorneys begin their final intensive preparations for trial.

A party may make a motion in limine requesting the exclusion of specified evidence or argument and base the motion on any of the grounds available under the Federal Rules of Evidence. n3 Under Federal Rule of Evidence 104(a), the court is responsible for determining preliminary questions concerning the qualifications of a person to bea witness, the existence of a privilege, or the admissibility of evidence, except when admissibility turns on relevancy and relevancy depends on the satisfaction of a condition of fact. n4 If the court were to postpone rulings on these motions it could result in considerable delay of the trial. To counter the possibility of delay, many courts try to resolve many evidentiary motions in limine considerably before the trial begins. Some judges order the parties to file motions well before the final pretrial conference. After the motions are filed, the court may determine whether it should have an evidentiary hearing, separate from the final pretrial conference, to establish the record necessary to support the required rulings, or whether, given the character of the motions, rulings may fairly be made at the final pretrial conference. n5

Motions in limine are also commonly filed regarding expert testimony. For example, a party may seek an order preventing an expert from offering opinions on any matters not covered in written reports or deposition, or from suggesting any bases for opinions that were not disclosed in those reports or in deposition testimony. Alternatively, a party may use a motion in limine to try to limit the fields or subjects with respect to which a particular witness is qualified as an expert or to limit the number of experts who will be permitted to testify about certain subjects or issues. n6

The frequency of motions in limine directed toward limiting expert testimony may increase as a result of the 1993 amendment to subparagraph (4) of Rule 16(c). This amendment was intended to clarify that in advance of trial the court may consider the use of and possible limitations on expert testimony under Rule 702 of the Federal Rules of Evidence. n7 Because of the mounting concern about the expense of expert testimony and also the reliability and the utility of some kinds of evidence offered from persons called experts, the drafters of the 1993 amendments suggested that even when proposed expert testimony may be admissible under Rule 403 and 702 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, courts may preclude or limit this testimony if the cost to the parties would be unduly expensive given the needs of the case and the other evidence available at trial. n8

[9] Exhibits and Documents

In many final pretrial conferences, the court will ensure that all proffered documents and other exhibits, other than those to be offered only for impeachment purposes, have been identified and marked in advance in a logical system. The court will also address any remaining disputes about demonstrative evidence, visual aids, summaries, charts, or other graphics, including the submission and exchange of all proposed items. n1

In complex cases, the court may encourage the attorneys to reduce the sheer number of documents they think they need to introduce into evidence. Alternatively, opposing counsel may stipulate to facts that some documents would be used to establish, and sometimes summaries of voluminous documents will be admissible and suffice for the purpose offered. If some of the documents are cumulative of other evidence, and thus unnecessary, the court may simply exclude their admission. n2

[10] Witnesses

One of the most important tasks for the court and the attorneys at the pretrial conference is to review and organize the parties' plans for the presentation of testimony from witnesses. n1 Some courts use the final pretrial conference to question the attorneys about the scope, purposes, form, and projected duration of each witness's testimony, including testimony to be read to the jury or into the record from deposition transcripts. n2 These questions may help the judge (1) determine the appropriate order of proof, (2) determine whether some of the proffered testimony is unnecessary, and (3) suggest areas of testimony that may best be presented in a written or oral narrative. The use of these narratives may be especially appropriate for background testimony from expert witnesses. n3

When appropriate, the court may determine whether and how testimony from depositions should be presented. n4 In some cases, the parties may be concerned about whether the court will permit a person to assume the role of the deponent and to sit in the witness box when reading the deponent's answers. If the court permits the presentation of the deposition testimony in this manner, additional concerns may arise about who will play the role of the deponent and what limitations should be imposed on his or her demeanor. n5

[11] Time Limits

At the pretrial conference, the trial court may issue orders that establish a reasonablelimit on the time allowed for presenting evidence. n1 Additionally the court may limit the length of trial. Such a limitation may provide the attorneys and parties with a better opportunity to determine priorities and exercise selectivity in presenting evidence than when the limits are imposed during trial, as they may be under the Rules of Evidence. n2 Any time limits imposed by the court must be reasonable under the circumstances, and generally the court should not specify exact time limits until they have considered the parties' submissions about the expected nature and estimated duration of direct and cross-examination testimony. n3

[12] Jury Instructions and Interrogatories

One of the most important matters that the court and attorneys consider at the final pretrial conference is jury instructions. At that time, the parties have usually submitted and exchanged proposed draft jury instructions; this process requires the attorneys to further analyze the elements of the claims and defenses and the evidence. Some judges require the attorneys to confer before the conference and to have submitted a preliminary set of instructions. n1 It is usually at the final pretrial conference that judges consider objections to the instructions that each party has submitted.

Of course, the court may draft instructions of its own or substantially rewrite the instructions that have been proposed by the parties. A court that drafts its own instructions or rewrites the instructions proposed by counsel should provide the parties with final instructions before the first day of trial to give the parties an opportunity not only to file objections but also to conform their final trial preparations to the law as the court will articulate it to the jury. n2

Although the consideration of jury instructions at the final pretrial conference focuses on their content, counsel or the court sometimes also raise questions about the sequence in which the instructions should be given and the form of the instructions. The participants in the conference also may discuss at what stages in the proceedings instructions should be given. Counsel should know, for example, whether the court will give the final jury instructions before or after their closing arguments. n3

At the final pretrial conference, the court may also try to resolve any disputes about the form of the verdict and special interrogatories, if applicable. A court's submission of special interrogatories to the jury is becoming more common. n4 The court and attorneys must draft special interrogatories with considerable care so that the special interrogatories or verdict forms do not misstate the law, or implicitly mislead or confuse the jury about the applicable law. It is common for verdict forms to contain many questions; however, the greater the number of questions, the higher the risk that the form itself will result in jury confusion or error. Therefore, the instructions that accompany the questions must be clear so that after they answer each question, the jurors will understand how they are to answer the next question or fill out the next form. n5

[13] Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

When the case will be tried to the court rather than tried to a jury, the final pretrial conference is the appropriate occasion for court and counsel to review and to discuss the proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law that the court has required the parties to submit. These proposed findings and conclusions are important, not only because they require the attorneys to consider in detail the possible results of the trial, but also because a court may use them before and during trial to understand the evidence as it is presented and the theory of the case. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial ConferencesCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersMotions in LimineGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSeparate Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.77 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(4).

(n3)Footnote 2. Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1222-1223 (10th Cir. 2000) (many years of draft pretrial orders, district court orders, and discovery served to focus legal and factual contentions of parties and culminated in final pretrial order; because numerous draft pretrial orders were produced over many years of litigation, plaintiffs could not claim that they lacked opportunities to draft order to clearly encompass their claims).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3), (c)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. G.J.B. & Assoc. v. Singleton, 913 F.2d 824, 831 (10th Cir. 1990) (counsel appearing before district court have duty to know court's practices).

(n6)Footnote 1. Connolly v. National Sch. Bus Serv., 177 F.3d 593, 599 (7th Cir. 1999) (judge may not delegate power to conduct pretrial settlement conferences to law clerk, even though law clerk may assist trial judge in settlement efforts).

(n7)Footnote 2. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. CEI Fla., 152 F.R.D. 95, 98 (E.D. Mich. 1993) (significant opportunity for settlement when counsel and all parties required to attend final pretrial conference); Wilson v. Westmoreland Farm, Inc., 989 F. Supp. 451, 454 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) (clients and principals with authority to settle ordered to be present at final pretrial and settlement conference).

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f); see, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A).

(n9)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(6).

(n11)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(a).

(n12)Footnote 2. Gillming v. Simmons Indus., 91 F.3d 1168, 1172-1173 (8th Cir. 1996) (important objective of civil procedure rules is to eliminate surprise).

(n13)Footnote 3. Portsmouth Square, Inc. v. Shareholders Protective Comm., 770 F.2d 866, 869 (9th Cir. 1985) (district court has authority to grant summary judgment sua sponte in context of final pretrial conference).

(n14)Footnote 4. Rogan v. Menino, 175 F.3d 75, 80 (1st Cir. 1999) (even though Rule 16(c)(1) authorizes district courts to eliminate frivolous claims or defenses at pretrial conferences, court may not use rule to avoid procedural test of summary judgment rule, which requires advance notice of basis of any pending dismissal).

(n15)Footnote 1. See [3], above.

(n16)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 42, 50, and 52.

(n17)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(M), (N).

(n18)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b); Miller New Jersey Transit Auth. Rail Operations, 160 F.R.D. 37, 38 (D.N.J. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(M);

(n20)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n21)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(N); Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(c).

(n22)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(N); Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b); see Miller New Jersey Transit Auth. Rail Operations, 160 F.R.D. 37, 38 (D.N.J. 1995) (Rule 16(c) permits courts as a matter of efficient case management to issue orders for separate trials or separate presentation of evidence at trial on different issues).

(n23)Footnote 9. Franklin Music Co. v. American Broadcasting Cos., 616 F.2d 528, 538 (3d Cir. 1979) (granting bifurcation); Windham v. American Brands, Inc., 565 F.2d 59, 70-72 (4th Cir. 1977) (denying bifurcation).

(n24)Footnote 10. Jenkins v. Raymark Indus., 782 F.2d 468, 474 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n25)Footnote 11. Miller v. New Jersey Transit Auth. Rail Operations, 160 F.R.D. 37, 39-40 (D.N.J. 1995) (defendant met burden and court trifurcated personal injury action into liability, damages, and indemnification phases).

(n26)Footnote 12. Lis v. Robert Packer Hosp., 579 F.2d 819, 824-825 (3d Cir. 1978) , cert. denied, 439 U.S. 955 (1978) (decision to bifurcate liability and damages issues is decided on case-by-case basis, subject to informed discretion of court).

(n27)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n28)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e) (participants at final pretrial conference should formulate plan for trial, including program for facilitating admission of evidence).

(n29)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n30)Footnote 2. Miller v. Los Angeles County Bd. of Educ., 799 F.2d 486, 489 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n31)Footnote 3. Louis Vuitton S.A. v. Lee, 875 F.2d 584, 588 (7th Cir. 1989) (court properly refused to modify stipulation which was incorporated into court's final pretrial order; stipulation was in conformity with party's deposition).

(n32)Footnote 4. Waldorf v. Borough of Kenilworth, 878 F. Supp. 686, 692-694 (D.N.J. 1995) .

(n33)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(C), (c)(2)(D).

(n34)Footnote 2. Robinson v. Missouri Pac. R.R., 16 F.3d 1083, 1089 n.6 (10th Cir. 1994) (parties should obtain advance rulings on admissibility, especially when evidence is scientific or novel).

(n35)Footnote 3. See Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1212 (10th Cir. 2000) (in ruling on defense motion in limine seeking to exclude some of plaintiffs' expert testimony on accounting claims, district court responded to parties' arguments about parameters of these claims).

(n36)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Evid. 104.

(n37)Footnote 5. See Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1222 (10th Cir. 2000) .

(n38)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D).

(n39)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n40)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D); Green Constr. Co. v. Kansas Power & Light Co., 1 F.3d 1005, 1013-1014 (10th Cir. 1993) (court may limit experts provided that witnesses are not excluded arbitrarily or on numeric basis).

(n41)Footnote 1. United States v. Rayco, Inc., 616 F.2d 462, 463-464 (10th Cir. 1980) (unlisted evidence may be excluded at trial).

(n42)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid. 403; Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D) (authorizing courts to take action at final pretrial conferences to avoid unnecessary proof and cumulative evidence).

(n43)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(4), (b)(3)(B)(iv), (c)(2)(C), (D), (G).

(n44)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a) (designation of deposition excerpts read into evidence); Sterkel v. Fruehauf Corp., 975 F.2d 528, 532 (8th Cir. 1992) (disclosure requirement of all witnesses except impeachment witnesses).

(N45)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(D), (G); Miller v. Los Angeles County Bd. of Educ., 799 F.2d 486, 489 (9th Cir. 1986) (it was proper for parties to submit direct questions of witness and defendant's objections before trial).

(n46)Footnote 4. Tucker v. Ohtsu Tire & Rubber Co., 49 F. Supp. 2d 456, 461 (D. Md. 1999) .

(n47)Footnote 5. See also Mark IV Properties, Inc. v. Club Dev. & Management Corp., 12 B.R. 854, 860 (S.D. Cal. 1981) (use of videotaped depositions at trial).

(n48)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(O).

(n49)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n50)Footnote 3. General Signal Corp. v. MCI Telecommunications Corp., 66 F.3d 1500, 1508 (9th Cir. 1995) (14-day total limit for trial reasonable under circumstances).

(n51)Footnote 1. Fort Howard Paper Co. v. Standard Havens, Inc., 119 F.R.D. 397, 400-401 (E.D. Wis. 1988) , aff'd on other grounds, 901 F.2d 1373 (7th Cir. 1990) (both parties required to submit proposed jury instructions).

(n52)Footnote 2. See Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1222 (10th Cir. 2000) .

(n53)Footnote 3. Stonehocker v. General Motors Corp., 587 F.2d 151, 157 (4th Cir. 1978) (court should instruct jury completely after arguments are completed).

(n54)Footnote 4. Fort Howard Paper Co. v. Standard Havens, Inc., 119 F.R.D. 397, 400-401 (E.D. Wis. 1988) , aff'd on other grounds, 901 F.2d 1373 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n55)Footnote 5. See Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1227 n.13, 1230 n.14 (10th Cir. 2000) .

(n56)Footnote 1. See In Matter of Dupree, 197 B.R. 928, 931-932 (N.D. Ala. 1996) ; see also In re Orange Boat Sales, 239 B.R. 471, 474 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART II. FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 18.25through 18.39

[Reserved]

§§ 18.25[Reserved]

87 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART III. Pretrial Orders

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.40

§ 18.40 Types of Pretrial Ordersn*

There are three basic types of orders that the court will issue in relation to a pretrial conference, based the stage of the litigation when the conference is held: (1) a case management order; (2) a scheduling order; and (3) the final pretrial order. A case management order results from a pretrial conference that is held at the very first stages of the litigation after a complaint is filed. It is used to make orders to collect information through discovery and to begin formulating the issues in the case. n1 A scheduling order is a special type of case management order in which the court orders specific deadlines to accomplish pretrial tasks. n2 A "final pretrial order" is an order made by the court just before trial which supercedes and controls over all existing orders and which implements the final trial plan. n3

The significance of the final pretrial order, in contrast to an ordinary pretrial case management order or a scheduling order is that the final pretrial order is used to formulate a binding plan for the trial itself, n4 while an ordinary case management order or scheduling order is used by the court to manage the initial stages of litigation and establish the pretrial schedule. n5 Furthermore, initial case management orders control the subsequent course of action n6 only until modified by a subsequent order, n7 while the final pretrial order controls the entire course of the trial n8 and may be modified only to prevent manifest injustice. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.77 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. In re Factor VIII or IX Concentrate Blood Products Litigation, 169 F.R.D. 632, 635 (N.D. Ill. 1996) ; see § 18.41.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e); § 18.42.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e); see § 18.43.

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Rice v. United States, 164 F.R.D. 556, 558 (N.D. Okla. 1995) ; see also § 18.01 et seq.

(n7)Footnote 6. Ramirez Pomales v. Becton Dickinson & Co., S.A., 839 F.2d 1, 3 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d).

(n9)Footnote 8. Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1221 (10th Cir. 2000) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART III. Pretrial Orders

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.41

§ 18.41 Case Management Ordern*

[1] Nature of Basic Pretrial Order

A court may enter an order specifying the action taken by the court or the parties after any pretrial conference, regardless of the stage during the pretrial period at which the conference is held. n1 If such an order is not a special type of order, such as a "pretrial scheduling order" or the "final pretrial order," it is typically referred to as a "case management order" n2 or basic "pretrial Order." n2.1 Although Rule 16(e) [now Rule 16(d)] was written in mandatory "shall" terms, the United States Supreme Court has stated that Rule 16(e) [now Rule 16(d)] is permissive rather than mandatory; thus, a district court need not make an order after every pretrial conference. The use of the word "shall" was construed by the court in this instance to be synonymous with "may." n3 In contrast to the routine pretrial order, if the order follows a scheduling conference, it is mandatory. n4

In any event, most courts routinely issue orders following all pretrial case management conferences. Such an order assists the court and parties in keeping track of the litigation n4.1 and provides a record for appellate review. n5 At a minimum, the court should enter a pretrial order whenever an affirmative action is taken by the parties or the court, n6 and the court should draft the order to meet the requirements of the parties. n7

Rule 16(e) does not specify the manner of preparation of a pretrial order. Many courts require, either by local rule or standing order, that counsel for plaintiff or defendant, or both, either separately or jointly, prepare a proposed order, case management plan, pretrial statement, or stipulation. n8 The form and content of such an order, statement, or stipulation may be specified in a local rule, or the court may prepare the order on its own initiative without drafting assistance from counsel. n9 In any event, the attorneys should be given a reasonable opportunity to file any objections they may have to the order. n10

[2] Discretion of Court to Modify Basic Pretrial Order

A case management pretrial order controls the remaining course of the action related to the subject matter of the order, unless it is modified by a subsequent order. n1 Although scheduling orders may not be modified except on a showing of good cause, n2 and a final pretrial order may be modified only to prevent manifest injustice, n3 Rule 16 does not identify the standard to apply when a court is asked to modify the terms of an order entered after a basic pretrial conference. n4

Even though there is no specific standard for determining whether to allow modification of a case management order, most opinions on the topic have stated that modifications should not be liberally granted but should only be modified on good cause. n5 At the same time, courts recognize that modifications should be granted when necessary, especially when a pretrial order from one pretrial conference may have to be altered at a subsequent conference due to changing circumstances. n6

[3] Appellate Review of Basic Pretrial Orders

A pretrial case management order is generally not final because it may be modified later in the pretrial period. Because it is not final, a pretrial order may not generally be appealed until the litigation is concluded at the trial court level. Once a final judgment is entered in the case, the initial case management order is appealable, n1 provided that a timely objection was registered with the trial court. n2

Certain pretrial rulings are appealable, either directly or by writ of mandamus. n3 For example, if the court orders the dismissal of a claim or defense, makes an express determination that no just cause exists for delay of appeal, and gives an express direction for entry of judgment stating its reasons, a Rule 54(b) appeal may be taken. A court may certify the ruling for interlocutory appeal because it may speed up final resolution of the remaining litigation. n4

Whether an appellate court reviews a pretrial order immediately on entry, or after final judgment, the order is reviewed for an abuse of discretion. n5 Abuse of discretion generally occurs when no reasonable person could take the view adopted by the trial court; if reasonable persons could differ, no abuse of discretion exists. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesCase ManagementCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 16.37, 16.63 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d).

(n3)Footnote 2. United States v. Michigan, 424 F.3d 438, 442 (6th Cir. 2005) (case management order specifying deadlines for filing all motions for joinder of parties and all motions to amend pleadings).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Jorgensen v. Cassiday, 320 F.3d 906, 913 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 3. Gutierrez De Martinez v. Lamagno, 515 U.S. 417, 429-431, 115 S. Ct. 2227, 2235 n.9, 132 L. Ed. 2d 375 (1995) ("shall" authorizes, but does not mandate, pretrial order).

(n6)Footnote 4. See § 18.42.

(n7)Footnote 4.1. Bradford v. DANA Corp., 249 F.3d 807, 809 (8th Cir. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 5. Wilson v. Kelkhoff, 86 F.3d 1438, 1442 n.6 (7th Cir. 1996) (pretrial conference and order aids parties and court in preparation for and conduct of trial; order should clearly state various issues that parties intend to litigate).

(n9)Footnote 6. Bristol Steel & Iron Works v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 41 F.3d 182, 185, 188-189 (4th Cir. 1994) (plaintiff could not complain when two witnesses, not revealed by defendant before trial, testified: no pretrial order governing management of action was entered or requested and no mechanism existed to preclude witness's testimony).

(n10)Footnote 7. Wilson v. Kelkhoff, 86 F.3d 1438, 1442 n.6 (7th Cir. 1996) (order should clearly state various issues that parties intend to litigate).

(n11)Footnote 8. Neilson v. United States (In re Olshan), 356 F.3d 1078, 1085 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n12)Footnote 9. McCargo v. Hedrick, 545 F.2d 393, 401 (4th Cir. 1976) (noting that rule contemplates that judge will specify pretrial order).

(n13)Footnote 10. Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1221 (10th Cir. 2000) (when parties to a lawsuit fail to object or move to amend pretrial order, that order measures dimensions of lawsuit both in trial court and on appeal).

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d); Erff v. Markhon Indus., Inc., 781 F.2d 613, 617 (7th Cir. 1986) (pretrial order supersedes pleadings and establishes issues to be considered at trial).

(n15)Footnote 2. See § 18.42.

(n16)Footnote 3. See § 18.43.

(n17)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d).

(n18)Footnote 5. Bradford v. DANA Corp., 249 F.3d 807, 809 (8th Cir. 2001) .

(n19)Footnote 6. Davidson v. Goord, 215 F.R.D. 73, 83 (W.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n20)Footnote 1. Miera v. First Sec. Bank, N.A., 776 F.2d 902, 906 (10th Cir. 1985) (interlocutory nature of pretrial orders generally precludes immediate review).

(n21)Footnote 2. Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1221 (10th Cir. 2000) (when parties to lawsuit fail to object to pretrial order, that order measures dimensions of lawsuit both in trial court and on appeal).

(n22)Footnote 3. In re Rhone-Poulenc Rorer, Inc., 51 F.3d 1293, 1294 (7th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 116 S. Ct. 184 (1995) .

(n23)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n24)Footnote 5. Gorlikowski v. Tolbert, 52 F.3d 1439, 1444 (7th Cir. 1995) (modification or enforcement of pretrial order reviewed for abuse of discretion).

(n25)Footnote 6. Durr v. Intercounty Title Co., 14 F.3d 1183, 1187 (7th Cir. 1994) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART III. Pretrial Orders

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.42

§ 18.42 Scheduling Ordern*

[1] Use of Mandatory Scheduling Order

A "scheduling order" is an order that the court makes after receiving the parties' conference report n1 or after consultation with the attorneys or unrepresented parties n1.1 to specify deadlines and other matters. n1.2

The scheduling order must limit the time to: join other parties, amend the pleadings, complete discovery, and file motions. n1.3

The scheduling order may specify the following matters: n1.4 a modification of the timing of disclosures under Rules 26(a) and 26(e)(1); a modification of the extent of discovery; provisions for disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information; an inclusion of any agreements the parties reach for asserting claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material after information is produced; a specification of the dates for pretrial conferences and for trial; and an inclusion of other appropriate matters. Because of its importance as a tool to manage the court's calendar and to ensure that parties and attorneys are timely in performing their pretrial obligations, n2 the court must enter a scheduling order in every action except in categories of cases that are specifically exempted by local rule from the scheduling order requirement. n2.1

A scheduling order controls the subsequent course of litigation as specified in the order, unless modified by a subsequent order made only for good cause and with the judge's consent. n3 Rule 16 mandates a pretrial scheduling order because when the district court sets specific deadlines for completing the most important aspects of case development, the case will be disposed of by settlement or trial more efficiently and with less cost and delay than if the parties were to set their own schedules. n4 Scheduling orders are so important that it is the only act that Rule 16 requires judges to perform,except in categories of cases exempted by local rule. In contrast, Rule 16 gives the district court considerable discretion whether to hold any pretrial conferences. n5

[2] Consultation Required With Attorneys

Judges may not issue a scheduling order without having first either received from the parties the proposed discovery plan n1 or consulted with the attorneys for the parties and any unrepresented parties in a scheduling conference, by telephone, mail, or other designated means. n2 This consultation allows the court to tailor the scheduling order to the requirements of the individual case, even when the court does not hold an optional scheduling conference. n3 Furthermore, interaction between the court and the attorneys is an effective means to assert control over and manage the litigation and the parties from the outset of the case. Consultation permits the parties to inform the court of crucial procedural and substantive issues that may have an impact on the schedule to be set by the court, which gives the court the opportunity to avoid potential conflicts. n4

Rule 16(b) does not require a particular manner of communication between the court and the parties (or through counsel when counsel is retained) that must precede the court's scheduling order. The contact need not be in person or even over the telephone. Rather, it is sufficient to solicit and receive input from counsel in writing or electronically. What form the contact takes is committed to the discretion of the district court. n5

[3] Time Limit for Court to Issue Scheduling Order

The district court must issue a scheduling order within 90 days after the appearance of a defendant and within 120 days after the complaint has been served on a defendant. The rule also requires that the district court issue the scheduling order as soon as practicable. n1 This means that the court should make the order earlier than the specified deadlines, whenever possible--the deadlines are not intended to encourage unnecessary delays in entering the scheduling order but rather to allow more flexibility in multi-defendant cases. On the other hand, an order filed after the deadline is not invalid. n2 The deadlines are not designed to be used tactically; rather, they are intended to cause litigation to proceed at a reasonable pace. n3

In entering its scheduling order, the court must incorporate the discovery requirements of Rule 26 because the discovery plan conference is also important to the court's management plan under the scheduling order. The court has discretion to set the date of the conference which the parties generally must use to implement discovery early in the case. The rule requires that the parties generally must hold the discovery conference as soon as practicable and in any event at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b). n4

The parties must also submit to the court within 14 days after the discovery conference a written report outlining the discovery plan. However, if necessary to comply with its expedited schedule for a Rule 16(b) scheduling conference, a court may by local rule require that the discovery conference between the parties occur fewer than 21 days before the pretrial scheduling conference is held or a pretrial scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b), n5 and require that the written report outlining the discovery plan be filed fewer than 14 days after the conference between the parties. The court may also excuse the parties from submitting a written report and permit them to report orally on their discovery plan at the Rule 16(b) conference. n6 Because the receipt of a written report outlining the discovery plan is one of the means by which a court may satisfy the requirement that the court secure input from the parties before issuing a scheduling order, a court that receives a Rule 26(f) report need not further consult the parties before issuing a scheduling order regarding discovery. n7

[4] Contents of Scheduling Order

[a] Mandatory Contents of Scheduling Order

[i] Court Must Specify Deadlines

Rule 16(b) divides scheduling subjects into two categories: mandatory subjects for which district courts must specify deadlines in the scheduling order, n1 and optional subjects for which the district courts may set deadlines. n2 With respect to the mandatory category, the court must specify time limits for (1) joining other parties and amending the pleadings; (2) filing motions; and (3) completing discovery. n3 The rationale for requiring the scheduling order to specify these deadlines is because they are the primary functions necessary to set the fundamental parameters of the case. These functions must be substantially completed before the court may determine whether the litigation may be concluded by dispositive motion or by summary judgment, and before the parties will have the information necessary to engage in productive settlement negotiations. n4

Consequently, these deadlines may be modified only on a showing of good cause. n5 The primary measure of the "good cause" standard of Rule 16(b) is whether the moving party can show that it used diligence in attempting to meet the order's deadline. Cases reviewing Rule 16(b) rulings focus in the first instance (and usually solely) on the diligence of the party who sought modification of the order. Thus, a court may modify the schedule on a showing of good cause if it the schedule cannot reasonably be met despite the diligence of the party moving for a modification. The court may also consider a lack of prejudice to the nonmoving party that would result from modification of the scheduling order. However, a court will not consider prejudice if the moving party has not been diligent in meeting the scheduling order's deadlines. n6

Although in the process of developing the case through investigation, disclosures, and discovery the parties sometimes identify additional parties, claims, or defenses that should be added to the case, in most cases the principals are readily identifiable at the outset, just as the kinds of claims and defenses that are likely to come into play are fairly predictable. Therefore, in most cases it is feasible and fair to require the parties to decide relatively early who will be named as parties, and what claims and defenses the pleadings will contain. n7

[ii] Deadline for Joining Other Parties and Amending Pleadings

Scheduling order deadlines may be modified only on a showing of good cause, n8 and the court has considerable discretion in determining good cause. n9 The primary measure of good cause is whether the moving party can show that it used diligence in attempting to meet the order's deadlines. n10

Case precedent has reconciled the potential conflict between Rule 16(b)'s requirement that the scheduling order specify a deadline for amending pleadings and Rule 15(a)'s directive that leave to amend the pleadings be freely given when justice so requires. n11 The settled rule is that the district court's filing a pretrial scheduling order establishes the deadline for amending pleadings, and after that time, Rule 16(b)'s standards control rather than the more liberal Rule 15 standards. In other words, once the pretrial order is entered, the need to support effective case management prevails over the general pleading rules. Consequently, even if an amendment would be permitted under Rule 15 standards, a party may not add a claim or defense after a deadline fixed in a scheduling order without first making a showing of good cause. n11.1

When a motion to amend the pleadings is filed after the scheduling order deadline, the court should apply a two-step analysis, under which the movant must first demonstrate to the court that it has "good cause" for seeking modification of the scheduling deadline under Rule 16(b). Then the moving party must meet the requirements for amendment under Rule 15(a). n11.2

[iii] Deadline for Filing Motions

The scheduling order must specify deadlines for filing motions. n11.3 The purpose of this requirement is to prevent parties from filing substantive motions at the last minute or even during trial, sometimes as a tactic to buy more time to prepare for trial or to disrupt an opponent's presentation of the case. n11.4 The last-minute filing of substantive motions also may impose great burdens and pressures on the court by requiring the court to choose between holding the trial date firm and increasing the risk of ruling erroneously on the motions, on the one hand, and, on the other, continuing the trial date in order to increase the time available for researching the issues presented in the motions. Consequently, if a party exceeds the scheduling order deadline for filing a motion, the court may refuse to consider the motion and relieve the opposing party of any duty it otherwise would have to respond. n11.5 However, some courts have held that there is an exception to Rule 16(b)(2) when the federal rules expressly allocate a particular time for filing a motion, for example, the Rule 56(b) provision which expressly allows a party to file a motion for summary judgment at any time. n11.6

[iv] Deadline for Discovery

The scheduling order must specify a deadline for the completion of discovery. n11.7 Many commentators have stated that, other than for the trial date, the discovery deadline is the most important time limit in civil cases, because most cases turn on the facts and the evidence that establishes facts, rather than on subtle arguments about thelaw. n11.8 Furthermore, even with the new mandatory disclosure rules, n12 discovery remains the primary means for learning about the evidence; because so much dependson discovery, completing it in a timely manner is important. n12.1 Consequently, all courts agree that setting a firm deadline for completing discovery is an essential element of case management. n13

[b] Discretionary Contents of Scheduling Order

[i] Court's Discretion to Include Variety of Matters in Scheduling Order

Rule 16 expressly allows, but does not require, the court to include the following optional matters in its scheduling order: n14 (1) a modification of the time for any disclosure required by a party or an adjustment in the extent of discovery; n15 (2) provisions for disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information; n16 (3) any agreements the parties reach for asserting claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material after production; n17 (4) a specification of the date for any conference before trial, for the final pretrial conference, or for the trial itself; n17.1 and (5) any other matters appropriate under the circumstances of the case. n17.2 Based on these optional provisions of Rule 16(b), most courts now routinely specify in their pretrial orders the times for disclosures, the extent of discovery, and conference and trial dates. n17.3

[ii] Court May Adjust Disclosure Time or Limit Discovery

In its pretrial order, the court has the option to modify the times for mandatory disclosures and adjust limits on the scope and extent of discovery. n18 Thus, the court has the option to override the default time limits specified in Rule 26(a)(2) to make disclosures. n18.1 It may be important for the court to specify the times for the parties to meet their disclosure obligations or modify the disclosure dates because, even though the parties often have completed some of the initial disclosures required under Rule 26(a)(1) before the judge has the opportunity to issue the scheduling order, in many cases these early exchanges of basic information have not been completed. This occurs because Rule 26(a) permits attorneys, unless otherwise ordered, to extend indefinitely by stipulation the deadlines for making their disclosures under Rule 26(a)(1). n19

Additionally, if a party objects to mandatory disclosure, the court must rule on the objection by determining what disclosures if any are to be made and setting the time for the disclosures. n20 Therefore, the assigned judge should inquire in all cases about the status of disclosures under Rule 26(a)(1) and, after considering the parties' input, specify a date or a set of dates by which these initial disclosures must be completed. n21 This preliminary step is important because the information covered by the initial and pretrial disclosure obligations is essential to the remainder of the case management plan. n21.1

[iii] Specifications for Disclosure or Discovery of Electronically Stored Information

In its scheduling order, the court has the option to require that the parties make disclosures or provide discovery of electronically stored information. n21.2 "Electronically stored information" is text, data, or other records stored in computers, computer peripherals, electronic equipment or digital media such as disks, tapes, or semiconductor chips. Common examples of electronically stored information include computer data files and computer email files. n21.3 Rule 16(b)(5) is a new provision designed to remind the court of the possible need to address the handling of discovery of electronically stored information early in litigation when such discovery is expected to occur in the action. n21.4

[iv] Inclusion of Party Agreements Made Regarding Claims of Privilege or Trial-Preparation Material

The court has the option to include in its scheduling order any agreements that the parties may have made for asserting claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material after production of the item or material. n21.5 Alternatively, thecourt may adopt such an agreement by entering a case management or other order. These types of agreements are made to facilitate discovery by minimizing the risk of waiver of privilege or work-product protection. For example, the parties may agree to the initial provision of requested materials without waiver of privilege or protection to enable the party seeking production to designate the materials desired for actual production, with the privilege review of only those materials to follow. Alternatively, they may agree that if privileged or protected information is inadvertently produced, the producing party may by timely notice assert the privilege or protection and obtain return of the materials without waiver. When a party receives information under such an arrangement, the receiving party may not assert that production of the information waived a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material. n21.6

[v] Conference and Trial Dates

A court has the authority but not the obligation in its pretrial order to specify dates for status or pretrial case management conferences, for a final pretrial conference, and for trial. n22 There is no absolute requirement that the court hold any pretrial conferences, n23 and in very simple cases, there may be no need for the court to schedule formal contact with the parties, or perhaps only once at a final pretrial conference. However, in almost all cases, it is advantageous for the court to have some planning communication between the court and attorneys. n23.1

The initial scheduling order should set the date for any desired conferences. n24 Additionally, most courts find that specifying a date for trial in the initial scheduling order is the most important case management tool. Nothing else is as effective to get parties to perform more efficient pretrial work or to seriously consider settlement than an early, firm trial date. n24.1 Thus, most judges prefer to set the trial date in the first scheduling order they enter. n25

After the trial date has been set, the court has the opportunity to select the date for the final pretrial conference. n25.1 To fix the date for that conference when no trial date is contemplated would violate Rule 16(d), which expressly requires the final pretrial conference to be held as close to the time of trial as reasonable under the circumstances. n26 This requirement is intended to ensure that the parties make substantial progress with the case before the final conference is held and to avoid the inefficiency of having that preparation repeated when there is a delay between the last pretrial conference and trial. Recognizing that many variables influence the decision of when to hold a pretrial conference, the Advisory Committee decided that it would be inappropriate to mandate a precise period by which the final conference should precede the trial. n27

[vi] Other Matters

Courts may include in the scheduling order any other matters that are appropriate in the circumstances of the case. n28 Even though it is referred to as a "scheduling order," the catchall provision of Rule 16(b)(8) allows the court to include case management directives in its scheduling order, not just matters related to the case schedule, time limits, or deadlines. For example, the court may include provisions regarding substantive issues in the case. n29

The likelihood that a court will address issues beyond those identified in the first seven subparts of Rule 16(b) increases when the court holds a scheduling conference before issuing a scheduling order. When the court holds a scheduling conference, rather than simply issuing the scheduling order after considering written or electronic input from the parties, the court may address any of the subjects outlined in paragraph (c) of Rule 16 in that order. n30 For example, the court may specify a deadline regarding motions for summary judgment, n31 or a deadline for the identification of witnesses and documents. n32

[5] Modification of Scheduling Order

[a] Modification Allowed Only on Good Cause

A trial court may modify or amend a scheduling order only when the moving party establishes "good cause" and the court (either a district judge or a magistrate judge when authorized by local rule) grants leave to modify. n1 Good cause is required because scheduling orders and their enforcement are regarded as the essential mechanism for cases becoming trial-ready in an efficient, just, and conclusive manner. The control of these schedules is deliberately reposed in the court, and not in counsel, so that this endmay be achieved. n2 If courts permitted modification too easily, the orders would not provide the discipline to prepare that is essential to timely case development and effective docket management. On the other hand, imposing too demanding a standard for modification is unrealistic and may be counterproductive. Thus, because it is made much earlier in the litigation, changes in the scheduling order are evaluated by the good cause standard, while changes in the later, final pretrial order are evaluated under the manifest injustice standard. n2.1 In essence, the drafters of the rule selected a standard for approving changes in scheduling orders that is essentially midway between "freely given," on the one hand and "manifest injustice" on the other hand. n3

[b] Discretion of Court to Determine Good Cause

Trial courts have considerable discretion in determining what kind of showing satisfies the good cause standard. The primary factor considered is whether the party moving for modification has been diligent. n4 In other words, a court may modify the schedule on a showing of good cause if it cannot reasonably be met despite the diligence of the party seeking the extension. n5 Carelessness or oversight is not compatible with a finding of diligence and provides no reason to grant relief. n6

The existence or degree of prejudice to the party opposing modification is also a factor in the decision whether to grant a motion to modify a scheduling order, but the absence of prejudice is irrelevant to whether the opposition was diligent and, by itself, does not establish good cause. n7 Another factor is whether the deadline in question has already passed. Thus, unless a court order specifically permits modification, if a party files a motion after the motion deadline has already passed, the motion is untimely and may be denied solely on that basis. n8

On the other hand, a court will grant extension in the schedule when the moving party shows that it has performed diligently to prepare the case but that unforeseeable circumstances or events beyond its control have intervened to the extent that the moving party will not have a fair opportunity to develop the evidence it needs if the original schedule remains in effect. For example, an untimely filing of a new claim by an opponent could constitute good cause. n9

A court will grant an extension of a deadline to a moving party if it has already granted extensions to an opponent, and refusing to grant comparable relief would put the moving party at an unfair disadvantage. n10 Similarly, although the "good cause" standard must be satisfied for every modification of a scheduling order, the likelihood that a court will grant a modification of a deadline generally increases if both parties approach the court jointly. n11 Some courts will modify a scheduling order if parties expressly stipulate to the change, and hold that by so stipulating, the parties do not need to move the court for a modification and do not need to demonstrate good cause. n12 Other courts strictly adhere to the good cause showing even in cases of stipulation. n13

[6] Sanctions for Violation of Scheduling Order

Pursuant to either Rule 16(f) or its inherent powers, a court may sanction an attorney or an unrepresented party who fails to obey a scheduling order, fails to appear at a scheduling conference, is substantially unprepared to participate in it, or fails to participate at the conference in good faith. n1 When a party commits a material violation of a scheduling order, the court will not be reluctant to impose sanctions. n2 Courts recognize that a failure to enforce its deadlines under scheduling orders will ultimately result in substantial increases in litigation delays and in the backlog of pending cases. n2.1 Although a finding of "willfulness" is not a prerequisite to imposing sanctions under Rule 16(f), one of the factors that is likely to affect the severity of the sanction is the intent that accompanied the violation, such as whether the violation was willful, reckless, negligent, or essentially free of culpability, as when the tardiness was no fault of the party but resulted from forces beyond its control. n3 There are several types ofsanctions available for a violation, including banning the disobedient party from supporting or opposing designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting the disobedient party from introducing designated matters in evidence, n3.1 reprimanding the violator, imposing monetary sanctions, dismissing the claim or action, or entering a default judgment. Sanctions are discussed in detail in Part IV. n4

[7] Appellate Review of Scheduling Order

Courts have generally ruled that scheduling orders are "interlocutory," which means that they are not "final" and are not subject to immediate appellate review. n1 Scheduling orders are interlocutory because they do not directly resolve the merits of claims or defenses, do not terminate litigation at the trial court level, and remain subject to modification on a showing of good cause throughout the pretrial period. n2 Furthermore, scheduling orders do not cause a party to suffer significant and immediate consequences that are irreversible. Therefore, appellate review is ordinarily available only after final judgment is entered on the merits. n3

When properly appealed, an appellate court will review the scheduling decisions of a trial judge under the deferential abuse of discretion standard, n4 because an appellate court is reluctant to upset a district court's interpretation of its own order. n5 A party may not challenge a scheduling order for the first time during an appeal after final judgment. n6 Rather, a party that wishes to preserve its challenge to a pretrial scheduling order must first raise a timely objection at the trial court level. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial OrdersCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesScheduling Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f).

(n3)Footnote 1.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 1.2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3).

(n5)Footnote 1.3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n6)Footnote 1.4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(i)-(vi).

(n7)Footnote 2. O'Connell v. Hyatt Hotels, 357 F.3d 152, 154 (1st Cir. 2004) (purpose of scheduling order).

(n8)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1).

(n9)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4), 16(e); see O'Connell v. Hyatt Hotels, 357 F.3d 152, 155 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a), (c).

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1)(A), 26(f).

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1)(B).

(n14)Footnote 3. See § 18.01 et seq.

(n15)Footnote 4. See O'Connell v. Hyatt Hotels, 357 F.3d 152, 155-156 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1)(B); see, e.g., Restrepo v. Colgate Univ., 149 F.R.D. 17, 19 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) (court conducted telephone conference with attorneys before filing scheduling order).

(n17)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(2).

(n18)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n19)Footnote 3. Johnson v. Mammoth Recreations, Inc., 975 F.2d 604, 608 n.5 (9th Cir. 1992) (scheduling order entered 126 days after filing of complaint is not invalid).

(n20)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1).

(n21)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(2), (f)(4)(A).

(n22)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(4)(B).

(n23)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(1)(A); see Sempier v. Johnson & Higgins, 45 F.3d 724, 734 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n25)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(i)-(vi).

(n26)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n27)Footnote 4. Sherman v. Winco Fireworks, Inc., 532 F.3d 709, 716-717 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n28)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4).

(n29)Footnote 6. Sherman v. Winco Fireworks, Inc., 532 F.3d 709, 717 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n30)Footnote 7. See O'Connell v. Hyatt Hotels, 357 F.3d 152, 155 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n31)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A), (b)(4) (court may not modify scheduling order except on showing of good cause).

(n32)Footnote 9. Colorado Visionary Academy v. Medtronic, Inc., 194 F.R.D. 684, 687-688 (D. Colo. 2000) (defendants failed to establish good cause to support their motion to amend because delay in seeking amendment resulted from their earlier failure to do research necessary to recognize applicability of defense they sought to add).

(n33)Footnote 10. Sherman v. Winco Fireworks, Inc., 532 F.3d 709, 717 (8th Cir. 2008) ; Bradford v. DANA Corp., 249 F.3d 807, 809 (8th Cir. 2001) ; see [i], above.

(n34)Footnote 11. McKinley v. Kaplan, 177 F.3d 1253, 1257 (11th Cir. 1999) (district court erred in denying leave to amend based on deadline established in parties' proposed joint scheduling order because such joint scheduling order was never entered and never became binding; in absence of dispositive scheduling order, whether leave to amend should be granted is governed by more liberal standard set forth in Rule 15(a)).

(n35)Footnote 11.1. Sherman v. Winco Fireworks, Inc., 532 F.3d 709, 716 (8th Cir. 2008) ; see Parker v.

Columbia Pictures Indus., 204 F.3d 326, 339-341 (2d Cir. 2000) (district court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend pleadings after deadline set in scheduling order, because moving party failed to establish good cause through diligence).

(n36)Footnote 11.2. O'Connell v. Hyatt Hotels, 357 F.3d 152, 154-156 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n37)Footnote 11.3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n38)Footnote 11.4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n39)Footnote 11.5. Dedge v. Kendrick, 849 F.2d 1398 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n40)Footnote 11.6. Johnson v. United States, 460 F.3d 616, (5th Cir. 2006) (district court had authority to grant summary judgment notwithstanding fact that motion was filed later than provided in retrial scheduling order).

(n41)Footnote 11.7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n42)Footnote 11.8. See Joseph L. v. Conn. Dep't of Children & Families, 225 F.R.D. 400, 401-403 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n43)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a).

(n44)Footnote 12.1. See Bolden v. City of Topeka, 441 F.3d 1129, 1149 (10th Cir. 2006) (court may refuse further consideration of discovery once deadline has passed).

(n45)Footnote 13. Wollenburg v. Comtech Mfg. Co., 201 F.3d 973, 977-978 (7th Cir. 2000) (Rule 16(b) authorizes district judges to set schedule that limits time to complete discovery; because party offered no good cause for her tardy subpoena duces tecum demanding that opposition produce any copies it held of particular documents, it was within discretion of trial court to quash subpoena duces tecum); Saavedra v. Murphy Oil U.S.A., Inc., 930 F.2d 1104, 1107 (5th Cir. 1991) (no abuse of discretion for court to deny plaintiff's motion to extend discovery after defendant moved for summary judgment, when plaintiff had ample opportunity to conduct discovery on statutory employer issue and failed to seek extension of discovery deadline as required by scheduling order).

(n46)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B).

(n47)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(i), (ii) (modify extent of discovery); see [ii], below.

(n48)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(iii); see [iii], below.

(n49)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(iv); see [iv], below

(n50)Footnote 17.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(v); see [v], below.

(n51)Footnote 17.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(vi); see [vi], below.

(n52)Footnote 17.3. See O'Connell v. Hyatt Hotels, Nos. 02-1571, 357 F.3d 152, 155 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n53)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(i), (ii); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) (court may specify scope of discovery).

(n54)Footnote 18.1. Verzwyvelt v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 175 F. Supp. 2d 881 , at 25 (W.D. La. 2001) (memorandum ruling); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(C).

(n55)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A).

(n56)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A).

(n57)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n58)Footnote 21.1. Serrano-Perez v. FMC Corp., 985 F.2d 625, 628 (1st Cir. 1993) (use of disclosure dates as case management tool).

(n59)Footnote 21.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(iii).

(n60)Footnote 21.3. *See Anadarko Petroleum Corp. v. Billy Don Davis & Geosouthern Energy Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93594, at 77-81 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n61)Footnote 21.4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n62)Footnote 21.5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(iv).

(n63)Footnote 21.6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n64)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(v).

(n65)Footnote 23. Farrell v. Commissioner, 136 F.3d 889, 894 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n66)Footnote 23.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendment.

(n67)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(v).

(n68)Footnote 24.1. Dickenson v. Cardiac & Thoracic Surgery of E. Tenn, P.C., 388 F.3d 976, 983 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n69)Footnote 25. See Olgyay v. Society for Envtl. Graphic Design, 169 F.R.D. 219, 220 (D.D.C. 1996) .

(n70)Footnote 25.1. Bosley v. Singleton, 237 F.R.D. 401, 404-405 (S.D. Oh. 2005) (court may set final pretrial conference and trial date in same order).

(n71)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n72)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, Committee Note to 1983 Amendments; see § 18.02.

(n73)Footnote 28. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(vi).

(n74)Footnote 29. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Notes to 1983 amendment; see, e.g., Hernandez-Santiago v. Ecolab, Inc., 397 F.3d 30, 32 (1st Cir. 2005) (court utilized scheduling conference to resolve factual issues of products liability).

(n75)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2).

(n76)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(E).

(n77)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(F).

(n78)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4); see Parker v. Columbia Pictures Indus., 204 F.3d 326, 339-341 (2d Cir. 2000) (finding of "good cause" depends on diligence of moving party); Johnson v. Mammoth Recreations, Inc., 975 F.2d 604, 607-609 (9th Cir. 1992) (attorney's failure to recognize that not all necessary parties were named in complaint was not good cause).

(n79)Footnote 2. Rouse v. Farmers State Bank, 866 F. Supp. 1191, 1198 (N.D. Iowa 1994) .

(n80)Footnote 2.1. See Northeast Drilling v. Inner Space Servs., 243 F.3d 25, 36-37 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n81)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n82)Footnote 4. Hussain v. Nicholson, 435 F.3d 359, 367 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n83)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n84)Footnote 6. Geiserman v. MacDonald, 893 F.2d 787, 791 (5th Cir. 1990) (scheduling error in counsel's office not good cause to modify scheduling order as to designation of expert witness).

(n85)Footnote 7. Amcast Indus. Corp. v. Detrex Corp., 132 F.R.D. 213, 217 (N.D. Ind. 1990) (absence of prejudice to defendant was insufficient showing of good cause to modify scheduling deadline to file amendments to pleading).

(n86)Footnote 8. United States Dominator, Inc. v. Factory Ship Robert E. Resoff, 768 F.2d 1099, 1104 (9th Cir. 1985) (motion for summary judgment filed after deadline denied because party failed to seek modification of order).

(n87)Footnote 9. Wisland v. Admiral Beverage Corp., 119 F.3d 733, 737 (8th Cir. 1997) (defendant permitted to amend answer to include statute of limitation as defense after original scheduling deadline because original returns of service were in possession of plaintiff's attorney and were not filed with court in timely fashion).

(n88)Footnote 10. Robinson v. T.J. Maxx, Inc., 148 F.R.D. 490, 492 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (when plaintiff's time to depose defendant's witness extended, court extended defendant's time to file summary judgment motion; extension not sought as means to stall case).

(n89)Footnote 11. Harding v. Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 707 F.2d 46, 51-52 (2d Cir. 1983) (when both attorneys fail to observe time limits, judges should grant reasonable requests for extensions and continuances).

(n90)Footnote 12. DDI Seamless Cylinder Int'l, Inc. v. General Fire Extinguisher Corp., 14 F.3d 1163, 1166 (7th Cir. 1994) (parties may stipulate to abbreviated, informal procedure for amending pretrial orders).

(n91)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Chiropractic Alliance of New Jersey v. Parisi, 164 F.R.D. 618, 619-622 (D.N.J. 1996) (parties' stipulation did not extend deadline in scheduling order for filing dispositive motions; parties should have requested extension).

(n92)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1)(A)-(C).

(n93)Footnote 2. See, e.g., In re LTV Steel Co., 307 B.R. 37, 48-50 (N.D. Oh. 2006) .

(n94)Footnote 2.1. See Harding v. Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 707 F.2d 46, 52 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n95)Footnote 3. See Rushing v. Kansas City Southern Railway Company 185 F.3d 496, 509 (5th Cir. 1999) (trialcourt has considerable discretion whether to impose sanctions for violations of scheduling order, and choice of sanction).

(n96)Footnote 3.1. O2 Micro Int'l, Ltd. v. Monolithic Power Sys., 467 F.3d 1355, 1364 (Fed. Cir. 2006) .

(n97)Footnote 4. See § 18.60 et seq.

(n98)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n99)Footnote 2. Vulcan Tools v. Makita USA, 23 F.3d 564, 565 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n100)Footnote 3. In re Recticel Foam Corp., 859 F.2d 1000, 1003 (1st Cir. 1988) (appealability of case management order).

(n101)Footnote 4. Munoz v. Orr, 200 F.3d 291, 303 (5th Cir. 2000) (district court did not abuse its discretion in striking affidavit seeking to introduce new statistical evidence in civil rights action after extension for filing of such reports under scheduling order had already passed).

(n102)Footnote 5. Vulcan Tools v. Makita USA, 23 F.3d 564, 565 (1st Cir. 1994) (district court's decision not to consider summary judgment order filed after motion deadline reviewed under abuse of discretion standard).

(n103)Footnote 6. Ehm v. Amtrak Bd. of Dirs., 780 F.2d 516, 518 (5th Cir. 1986) (scheduling order may not be first challenged on appeal).

(n104)Footnote 7. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc. v. Mann, 814 F.2d 301, 305 (6th Cir. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART III. Pretrial Orders

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.43

§ 18.43 Final Pretrial Ordern*

[1] Use of Final Pretrial Order

A court uses the final pretrial order just before trial to implement the binding final plan to be used at trial. n1 One of the primary characteristics of the final pretrial order is that the order may be modified only to prevent manifest injustice. n2 Thus, the final pretrial order is used to formulate a binding plan for the trial itself, n3 while the ordinary case management order or scheduling order is used by the court to manage the initial stages of litigation and establish the pretrial schedule. n4

The Supreme Court has indicated that use of the final pretrial order is not absolutely essential. n5 Similarly, the courts of appeal have generally held that a failure to enter a final pretrial conference order either does not violate Rule 16(e) or if it does, the failure is not the type of violation that supports appellate relief. n6

As a practical matter, it is important for a trial court to enter orders that recite the principal decisions made at the final pretrial conference. n7 A clear and comprehensive final pretrial order is very effective in ensuring a fair, orderly, and efficient trial. In a pretrial order, the court may set out the basic ground rules that will control the trial. n8 At a minimum, the court should order production of a transcript of the final pretrial conference to serve as a basis for resolving any disputes that arise about rulings entered during the conference. n9

[2] Contents

Most courts request the attorney for the plaintiff to draft the final pretrial order, and he or she may be required to do so on a court form. In some courts, the judge may either assign the task to any party or prepare his or her own order. n1 Whoever prepares the final pretrial order should ensure that it recites all actions taken and rulings made at the final pretrial conference. n2

A complete pretrial order informs the attorneys, the parties, and the court of all of the following: all rulings made at the final pretrial conference; discovery excerpts from stenographic and video depositions, responses to interrogatories and requests for admission; undisputed facts and judicially noticed facts; the claims and defenses thatwill be tried and how the applicable legal principles will be construed; any procedures for consolidation, severance, or transfer of the case; the jury composition and how the jury will be selected, instructed, and managed; what evidence may and what evidence may not be presented and the exhibits to be offered by each side; which witnesses may be called and in what order; what subjects their testimony may address and how long they may testify; the order of proof, including the procedures for presenting testimony and exhibits; the order in which counsel will present closing arguments and how much time they will be allotted for that purpose; how much time each party will be allocated for presentation of each aspect of its case; which questions the jury will be asked to address when it delivers its verdict; objections that are sustained, denied, or deemed waived; and the date and time that the trial will commence. n3

[3] Effect of Final Pretrial Order

An order entered after a final pretrial conference supersedes the parties' pleadings and controls the subsequent course of the action unless modified by a subsequent order. n1 Thus, once the final pretrial order is entered and the parties to the lawsuit do not object to it, that order controls the dimensions of the lawsuit, both in the trial court and on appeal. n2 Both the parties and the court must abide by the terms of a final pretrial order unless and until it is changed. n3

The district court has discretion to rule that a party that has failed to specify that an issue is to be included in the pretrial order has waived the issue. n3.1 Either a legal or factual issue is subject to waiver. n4 For example, a defendant may waive a potential defense by failing to ensure that the issue is clearly preserved in the pretrial order. n5 However, waiver is not automatic, because the trial court has discretion to permit a change in a pretrial order if the party shows manifest injustice. n6

[4] Modification of Final Pretrial Order

[a] Modification Must Cure Manifest Injustice

The court may modify a final pretrial order only to prevent manifest injustice. n1 Although Rule 16(e) does not define manifest injustice, the standard is more stringent than standards courts apply when deciding whether to grant motions to modify orders entered after conferences held earlier in the pretrial period, n2 and courts often deny motions to modify final pretrial orders under this stringent standard. n3 Some courts have used a flexible approach, granting the motion when the interests of justice make modification desirable. n4 In recent years, however, some courts have developed lists of very specific factors to consider when a motion is made to modify. The factors are discussed in [b], below.

[b] Factors Used to Determine Existence of Manifest Injustice

Several courts have developed tests that require the trial court to consider four factors in determining whether to permit a party to modify a final pretrial order to prevent manifest injustice. The most common test is as follows: n5 (1) the prejudice or surprise to the party opposing trial of the issue; (2) the ability of that party to cure any prejudice; (3) any disruption to the orderly and efficient trial of the case by inclusion of the new issue; and (4) any bad faith by the party seeking to modify the order. The moving party has the burden to show that a review of these factors results in a conclusion that manifest injustice would result if the pretrial order is not modified. n6

In its determination whether to modify the pretrial order, the court must consider the specific circumstances of the case and weigh applicable factors when determining whether a party has shown that it is necessary to modify a final pretrial order in order to prevent manifest injustice. Thus, the trial court should weigh the possible hardships imposed on the respective parties n7.1 and balance the need for doing justice on the merits between the parties against the need for maintaining orderly and efficient procedural arrangements. n8

[5] Appellate Review of Final Pretrial Order

[a] Appealability of Final Pretrial Order

The circuit courts may generally review only final orders of the district courts of theUnited States. n1 An order is final when it completely resolves the contested matter, leaving nothing to be done except execution of the judgment. n2 Most final pretrial orders, like most case management orders, are interlocutory in nature, rather than final; they concern preliminary matters, leading up to but not including trial, and may still be modified by the court on a showing of manifest injustice. n3 Therefore, most final pretrial orders are not subject to immediate appellate review; rather, an aggrieved party may not generally obtain appellate review until a final judgment is entered in the action. n4

Nonetheless, certain limited types of pretrial orders are immediately appealable, including the following: a contempt order for defying a pretrial order; n5 orders constituting a clear abuse of discretion in circumstances when the court's legal obligation is plainly established or the court is patently erroneous may be reviewed by way of writ of mandamus; n6 orders entering final judgment as to one or more but less than all claims or parties, provided that the district court makes an express certification that no just reason exists for delay and gives an express direction for entry of judgment; n7 and orders that involve a controlling question of law when (1) there is substantial ground for difference of opinion and (2) an immediate appeal would materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation. n8

[b] Standard of Review

An appellate court reviews district or magistrate judge's decision concerning the amendment, modification or enforcement of a final pretrial order, using the abuse of discretion standard. n9 In general, an abuse of discretion occurs when no reasonable person could take the view adopted by the trial court. If reasonable persons could differ, no abuse of discretion may be found. n10 In making the determination of whether or not the court abused its discretion, a trial court's interpretation of its own final pretrial order is given great deference on appeal. n11 Trial attorneys should also note that the federal appellate courts will not consider an objection to a final pretrial order for the first time on appeal; a condition to such consideration is a ruling on the matter by the district court. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial ConferencesCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 16.78, 16.79 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Rice v. United States, 164 F.R.D. 556, 558 (N.D. Okla. 1995) ; see also § 18.01 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 5. Gutierrez De Martinez v. Lamagno, 515 U.S. 417, 429-431, 115 S. Ct. 2227, 2235 n.9, 132 L. Ed. 2d 375 (1995) (Rule 16(e) [now Rule 16(d)] uses "shall" to authorize but not to require pretrial orders).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Video Components, Inc. v. Laird Telemedia, Inc., 574 F.2d 1061, 1062-1063 (10th Cir. 1978) ; see MCI Communications Corp. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 708 F.2d 1081, 1169 (7th Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 891 (1983) (Rule 16(d) gives court discretion to hold final pretrial conference).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(d), (e).

(n9)Footnote 8. Robinson v. Missouri Pac. R.R. Co., 16 F.3d 1083, 1089 n.6 (10th Cir. 1994) (pretrial order regarding advance rulings on admissibility of evidence).

(n10)Footnote 9. Morrison v. Murray Biscuit Co., 797 F.2d 1430, 1433 (7th Cir. 1986) (final pretrial conference recorded; transcript in effect final pretrial order).

(n11)Footnote 1. Miera v. First Sec. Bank, 776 F.2d 902, 906 (10th Cir. 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n13)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3), (c)(2).

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e); see [4], below.

(n15)Footnote 2. Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1221 (10th Cir. 2000) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Correa v. Hospital San Francisco, 69 F.3d 1184, 1195 (1st Cir. 1995) ; Harris v. Marsh, 679 F. Supp. 1204, 1389-1390 (E.D.N.C. 1987) , aff'd on other grounds, 914 F.2d 525 (4th Cir. 1990) ; see [4], below.

(n17)Footnote 3.1. Springer v. Henry, 435 F.3d 268, 275 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n18)Footnote 4. Morro v. City of Birmingham, 117 F.3d 508, 516 n.3 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n19)Footnote 5. Kay-Cee Enters., Inc. v. Amoco Oil Co., 45 F. Supp. 2d 840, 846 (D. Kan. 1999) (district court granted plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment with respect to defendant's affirmative defense of failure of consideration because defendant waived its right to assert defense by failing to preserve it in pretrial order).

(n20)Footnote 6. Springer v. Henry, 435 F.3d 268, 275 n.4 (3d Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n21)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n22)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n23)Footnote 3. Gorlikowski v. Tolbert, 52 F.3d 1439, 1444 (7th Cir. 1995) (court found there was no manifest injustice to permit modification of jury instruction to include causation theory, when such theory was not disclosed in final pretrial order, and defendant knew of theory at pretrial conference but did not raise it until closing argument at trial).

(n24)Footnote 4. Madison Consultants v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 710 F.2d 57, 62 n.3 (2d Cir. 1983) (court allowed plaintiff to amend pretrial order when defendants were not prejudiced); Eldridge v. Springs Indus., Inc., 882 F. Supp. 356, 358 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (court allowed modification when it added one witness and substituted few documents to establish defendant's position; amendments were modest, contained no new claims, and served only to streamline and clarify defendant's presentation, and therefore did not prejudice plaintiff).

(n25)Footnote 5. Davey v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 301 F.3d 1204, 1209-1212 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n26)Footnote 6. Byrd v. Guess, 137 F.3d 1126, 1132 (9th Cir. 1998) .

(n27)Footnote 7.1. Galdamez v. Potter, 415 F.3d 1015, 1020 (9th Cir. 2005) ; Potthast v. Metro-North R.R., 400 F.3d 143, 153 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n28)Footnote 8. Gorlikowski v. Tolbert, 52 F.3d 1439, 1444 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n29)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n30)Footnote 2. In re Rhone-Poulenc Rorer Inc., 51 F.3d 1293, 1294 (7th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 867 (1995) (final order is one that winds up litigation in district court).

(n31)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e).

(n32)Footnote 4. In re Recticel Foam Corp., 859 F.2d 1000, 1002 (1st Cir. 1988) (pretrial orders not final, and not appealable under collateral order doctrine, because they do not resolve parties' rights in any definitive way).

(n33)Footnote 5. Bennett v. City of Boston, 54 F.3d 18, 20 (1st Cir. 1995) .

(n34)Footnote 6. In re NLO Inc., 5 F.3d 154, 157 (6th Cir. 1993) (upholding use of mandamus to reverse pretrial order requiring participation in summary jury trial).

(n35)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n36)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b); see Coopers Lybrand v. Livesay, 437 U.S. 463, 475, 98 S. Ct. 2454, 57 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1978) .

(n37)Footnote 9. Koch v. Koch Indus., 203 F.3d 1202, 1215-1217 (10th Cir. 2000) ; Morro v. City of Birmingham, 117 F.3d 508, 515-516 (11th Cir. 1997) ; Gorlikowski v. Tolbert, 52 F.3d 1439, 1444 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n38)Footnote 10. Gorlikowski v. Tolbert, 52 F.3d 1439, 1444 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n39)Footnote 11. Hall v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 937 F.2d 210, 212 (5th Cir. 1991) (court's interpretation of own order is reviewed for abuse of discretion).

(n40)Footnote 12. Morrison v. Murray Biscuit Co., 797 F.2d 1430, 1433-1434 (7th Cir. 1986) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART III. Pretrial Orders

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 18.44through 18.59

[Reserved]

§§ 18.44[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART IV. Sanctions for Violation of Pretrial Obligations

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.60

§ 18.60 Source of Authority for Sanctionsn*

[1] Express Provision of Pretrial Rule

Rule 16 expressly authorizes the trial court to impose sanctions for failure to comply with pretrial orders and other pretrial requirements. n1 The authority to impose sanctions under Rule 16 on offending parties, their attorneys, or both, applies in four situations. n2 This sanction authority is designed to encourage forceful judicial case management, n3 to enforce compliance with the applicable procedural rules at the pretrial stage of litigation, and to ensure the parties' adherence to reasonable management requirements for case preparation. n4 The sanction authority also serves a punitive purpose in that it punishes noncompliance with pretrial orders and compensates an opposing party for inconvenience and expense incurred because of any noncompliance with the reasonable management orders of the court. n5

[2] Inherent Authority

District courts have inherent power to control their dockets and may impose sanctions, including dismissal, in the exercise of that discretion. n1 Thus, courts may impose sanctions for failure to comply with pretrial procedures under their inherent authority to regulate litigation. n2 The court's inherent authority is essential to the administration of justice and exists in addition to sanctions available under specific statutes or the federal rules. Because inherent powers are shielded from directlegislative controls, they must be exercised with restraint and discretion. n3 Thus, a federal court may invoke its inherent power only when necessary to protect its ability to function, n4 and a court may not impose sanctions under its inherent authority if the sanction would contravene a statute or rule or unnecessarily enlarge the courts' authority. n5

The inherent authority of courts to impose sanctions generally requires a finding of bad faith. n6 The courts inherent power to issue sanctions encompasses the power to order sanctions under local rules and under standing orders. n7 Sanctions imposed under a court's inherent authority are reviewed for abuse of discretion. n8

[3] Other Federal Rules

In addition to authority under Rule 16, n1 a district court may impose sanctions for inappropriate conduct in pretrial proceedings under other federal rules. In many instances, the same misconduct may be sanctionable under more than one rule. In such circumstances, the sanction should ordinarily be imposed under the most applicable rule, as this is the point where appellate courts begin their review. n2 With respect to sanctions relating to pretrial proceedings, the following are the most important supplemental rules:

1. Sanctions under Rule 11 for baseless filings. Rule 11 is designed to deter the filing of baseless pleadings, motions, and other papers not related to discovery or disclosures. n3 It applies to matters presented in filed papers as well as to subsequent oral argument on matters presented earlier in filed papers. n4 Rule 11 sanctions may be imposed when a frivolous pleading, motion or other paper is filed, n5 but may not be imposed for disclosure and discovery violations. n6

2. Discovery sanctions under Rule 37. Rule 37 permits a court to strike pleadings or dismiss an action when a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, or to appear for his or her deposition. n7 The imposition of sanctions under Rule 37 is within the discretion of the district court, and a decision to dismiss an action for failure to comply with discovery orders will be reversed only if the decision constitutes an abuse of discretion. n8 Rule 16(f) specifically authorizes sanctions pursuant to Rule 37(b)(2)(B), (C), and (D), but not subsection (A). Based on the specific omission of Rule 37(b)(2)(A) sanctions from Rule 16, one court has ruled that Rule 37(b)(2)(A) sanctions are not available for violation of a scheduling order. In the case, the court of appeals held that the district court abused its discretion in imposing Rule 37(b)(2)(A) sanctions because Rule 16(f) specifically omits Rule 37(b)(2)(A), which provides too harsh a sanction for violation of scheduling order. n9

3. Rule 41(b) allows a defendant to move for dismissal of a claim or the entire action if the plaintiff fails to prosecute or to comply with a court order. n10 Although dismissal pursuant to Rule 41(b) is a matter committed to the discretion of the district court, n11 it is a harsh remedy to be utilized only in extreme situations. n12 When reviewing an order to dismiss an action under Rule 41(b) for failure to comply with a court order, the appellate court reviews for abuse of discretion, assessing the dismissal in light of the record as a whole. n13 Noncompliance is frequently treated as a failure to prosecute and courts usually apply the same test used to evaluate both types of dismissals. n14 The various circuits have enumerated many factors that the court should consider in making the determination of whether the dismissal for failure to prosecute constituted an abuse of discretion, including the following list: the effect of the failures on the judge's calendar and time; the probable merits of the claim; the consequences of dismissal for the social objectives of the type of litigation that the suit represents; the degree of personal responsibility for the failures, in contrast to the attorney's responsibility; n15 the duration of the plaintiff's failures; whether the plaintiff received notice that further delays would result in dismissal; whether the defendant was prejudiced by possible further delay; whether the district judge balanced the interest of alleviating the court calendar congestion with protecting a party's right to due process; whether the judge adequately assessed the efficacy of lesser sanctions; n16 whether the party's failure was due to willfulness, bad faith, or fault; n17 and whether the plaintiff hada history of dilatoriness. n18 Even though most courts have held that the district court must give an explicit warning about continued violations before the case is dismissed, there is no requirement the district court is obligated to warn a plaintiff repeatedly, nor is the court required to issue a formal rule to show cause before dismissing a case. n19 For a further discussion of the considerations of the court of appeals when reviewing a dismissal, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 41.51, 41.52 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.90 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f); see also § 18.61.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Olcott v. Delaware Flood Co., 76 F.3d 1538, 1555 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Lindsey v. United States, 693 F. Supp. 1012, 1025 (W.D. Okla. 1988) (compliance with pretrial orders required to promptly process and adjudicate cases).

(n7)Footnote 1. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company v. Hercules Inc., 146 F.3d 1071, 1074 (9th Cir. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Link v. Wabash R.R. Co., 370 U.S. 626, 630-631, 82 S. Ct. 1386, 8 L. Ed. 2d 734 (1962) (court's inherent power to manage docket includes imposition of sanctions).

(n9)Footnote 3. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 44, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n10)Footnote 4. United States v. Providence Journal Co., 485 U.S. 693, 701, 108 S. Ct. 1502, 99 L. Ed. 2d 785 (1988) .

(n11)Footnote 5. In re Novak, 932 F.2d 1397, 1406 n.17 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n12)Footnote 6. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 765-766, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) .

(n13)Footnote 7. Miranda v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 710 F.2d 516, 520 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n14)Footnote 8. Link v. Wabash R.R. Co., 370 U.S. 626, 633, 82 S. Ct. 1386, 8 L. Ed. 2d 734 (1962) .

(n15)Footnote 1. See [1], below.

(n16)Footnote 2. Socit Internationale Pour Participations Industrielles et Commerciales, S.A. v. Rogers, 357 U.S. 197, 207, 78 S. Ct. 1087, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1255 (1958) (because Rule 37 addresses with particularity the consequences of failure to make discovery, there was no need to resort to Rule 41(b), which lacks such specific references to discovery).

(n17)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11; Simpson v. Welch, 900 F.2d 33, 36 (4th Cir. 1990) .

(n18)Footnote 4. Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 892 F.2d 802, 813 (9th Cir. 1989) , aff'd on other grounds, 498 U.S. 533, 111 S. Ct. 922, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) .

(n19)Footnote 5. Sanko S.S. Co. v. Galin, 835 F.2d 51, 53 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n20)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c), (d).

(n21)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2), (d).

(n22)Footnote 8. Bobal v. Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst., 916 F.2d 759, 763-764 (2d Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 499 U.S. 943 (1991) (dismissal of plaintiff's action for failure to appear at deposition).

(n23)Footnote 9. Smith v. Chicago Sch. Reform Bd. of Trustees, 165 F.3d 1142, 1145 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n24)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n25)Footnote 11. Harding v. Federal Res. Bank of N.Y., 707 F.2d 46, 50 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n26)Footnote 12. Link v. Wabash R.R. Co., 370 U.S. 626, 633, 82 S. Ct. 1386, 8 L. Ed. 2d 734 (1962) .

(n27)Footnote 13. Alvarez v. Simmons Mkt. Research Bureau, Inc., 839 F.2d 930, 932 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n28)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Simmons v. Abruzzo, 49 F.3d 83, 87 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n29)Footnote 15. Aura Lamp & Lighting, Inc. v. International Trading Corp., 325 F.3d 903, 908 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n30)Footnote 16. Alvarez v. Simmons Mkt. Research Bureau, Inc., 839 F.2d 930, 932 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n31)Footnote 17. Mulbah v. Detroit Bd. of Educ., 261 F.3d 586, 589 (6th Cir. 2001) .

(n32)Footnote 18. Guy v. City of Wilmington, 169 F.R.D. 593, 596 (D. Del. 1996) .

(n33)Footnote 19. Aura Lamp & Lighting, Inc. v. International Trading Corp., 325 F.3d 903, 908 (7th Cir. 2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART IV. Sanctions for Violation of Pretrial Obligations

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.61

§ 18.61 Sanctionable Conductn*

A court may impose sanctions under Rule 16 against a party, a party's attorney, or both, for engaging in any of four types of conduct: n1

1. Failure to obey a scheduling or pretrial order. n2

2. Failure to appear at a scheduling or pretrial conference. n3

3. Substantial failure to prepare to participate in a scheduling or pretrial conference. n4

4. Failure to participate in good faith. n5

The court may impose sanctions under Rule 16(f) for any of the violations listed above, and in some instances the conduct may be a violation subject to other provisions for sanctions, n6 including violations of discovery orders. For example, a delay in responding to discovery requests or in producing requested documents, in addition to being a violation of a discovery order, may constitute a violation of a scheduling or other pretrial order and be subject to sanctions under Rule 16(f) under item 1, listed above. n7

One of the important attributes of requesting the imposition of sanctions under Rule 16(f) is that Rule 16(f) does not require a finding of bad faith. Therefore, a negligent failure to comply with a court order may justify the imposition of sanctions under Rule 16(f). n8 Another important attribute is that the imposition of monetary sanctions under Rule 16(f) does not require a showing of prejudice in order to justify the sanctions. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.91 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1)(A)-(C).

(n3)Footnote 2. Hathcock v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 53 F.3d 36, 40 (4th Cir. 1995) (default sanction for violation of scheduling order authorized by Rule 16(f)).

(n4)Footnote 3. Lucien v. Breweur, 9 F.3d 26, 28-29 (7th Cir. 1993) ; Cuyos v. Texas Mobile Health Inc., 10 F. Supp. 2d 750, 752-753 (S.D. Tex. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Comcoa, Inc. v. NEC Tel., Inc., 931 F.2d 655, 666-667 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Guillory v. Domtar Indus., Inc., 95 F.3d 1320, 1334-1335 (5th Cir. 1996) (court had authority to impose sanctions against party that never intended to settle but participated in settlement conference without informing court of its position).

(n7)Footnote 6. Lillie v. United States, 40 F.3d 1105, 1110 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Rabb v. Amatex Corp., 769 F.2d 996, 999 (4th Cir. 1985) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Former Emples. of Tyco Elecs v. United States DOL, 259 F. Supp. 2d 1246, 1251 (Ct. Int'l Trade 2003) ; see Ayers v. City of Richmond, 895 F.2d 1267, 1269 (9th Cir. 1990) (court did not abuse discretion by imposing sanction in amount of opposing counsel's costs when counsel failed to attend one pretrial conference due to inadvertence); Martin Family Trust v. NECO/Nostalgia Enters. Co., 186 F.R.D. 601, 604 (E.D. Cal. 1999) (court may impose sanctions under Rule 16(f) for party's unexcused failure to comply with court order, even if that failure was not in bad faith; counsel's mistaken belief that he was not required to file status report because of ongoing settlement negotiations was insufficient to excuse imposition of sanctions).

(n10)Footnote 9. John v. Louisiana, 899 F.2d 1441, 1448-1449 (5th Cir. 1990) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART IV. Sanctions for Violation of Pretrial Obligations

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.62

§ 18.62 Discretion of Court to Impose Sanctionsn*

The decision of the trial court to impose or not to impose sanctions under Rule 16(f) is discretionary. In general, a court need not impose a sanction even after finding a violation. n1 However, the court's discretion is limited by the requirement that a judge must require the party, the attorney representing the party, or both to pay the reasonable expenses incurred because of any noncompliance with this rule, including attorney's fees, unless the judge finds that the noncompliance was substantially justified, or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. This award may be in lieu of or in addition to any other sanction. n2 This provision creates a presumption that, once a violation has occurred, the court should impose expense-shifting sanctions. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.91 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. S.E.C. v. First Houston Capital Resources Fund, Inc., 979 F.2d 380, 381 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f).

(n4)Footnote 3. Cf. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART IV. Sanctions for Violation of Pretrial Obligations

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.63

§ 18.63 Types of Sanctions Availablen*

[1] Selection of Type of Sanction In General

Courts have broad discretion in fashioning appropriate sanctions for sanctionable conduct under Rule 16. The trial court may, on motion or the judge's own initiative, impose any sanctions that are just. n1 A court may take into account a number of factors in determining which sanctions should be imposed, including the nature and consequences of the misconduct or neglect or failure to comply with the court's order; n2 who is responsible for misconduct, either the attorney, the client, or both; n3 which sanctions are available to the court; n4 what purposes will be served by imposing sanctions and what is the least severe sanction that will achieve the intended purpose; n5 and whether the sanctionable conduct was willful or negligent. n6

As is the case with the determination of whether or not to impose sanctions, the selection of an appropriate sanction is within the trial court's discretion. n7 This discretion has limits, in that only sanctions that are "just in the circumstances" may be imposed. n8 Furthermore, the scope of discretion becomes more limited as the sanctions become more severe. n9 However, the determination of the correct sanction is a fact-specific inquiry that the trial court is best qualified to make. n10 For examples of specific types of sanctions that the court may impose, see [2] through [4], below.

[2] Dismissal and Default Judgment

Although dismissal with prejudice is an extreme and harsh sanction that is in contradiction to policy considerations in favor of disposing of cases on the merits, n1 it is authorized by Rule 16(f). n2 Thus, fairness requires that some limits be placed on its use. n3 Likewise, default judgment is a harsh sanction that runs against policy considerations in favor of disposing of cases on the merits. n4 When imposed, the sanction of dismissal with prejudice serves two purposes. Dismissal penalizes the party whose conduct warrants the sanction and discourages those who may be tempted to employ such conduct absent a deterrent. n5

When considering the extreme sanctions of dismissal and default, the court should balance the policy of giving the plaintiff its day in court against the policies of preventing undue delay, avoiding court congestion, and preserving respect for court procedures. The balancing test concentrates on the severity of the conduct that prompted the sanction and, to a lesser extent, the adverse impact that conduct has on the opposition and the orderly administration of justice in the courts. n6 In determining whether or not misconduct is sufficiently serious to deserve dismissal, the court should review many factors, including: the degree of actual prejudice to the opposing party; n7 the amount of interference with the judicial process; n8 the offender's culpability; n9 whether the court warned the party that dismissal of the action would be a likely sanction for noncompliance; n10 and the availability and efficacy of lesser sanctions. n11

[3] Monetary Sanctions

On motion or on its own initiative, a district court may issue any just order for violation of Rule 16. n1 The district court must require a party, the party's attorney, or both, to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by the other party as a result of noncompliance with Rule 16, unless the court finds that the noncompliance was substantially justified or that other circumstances make such an award unjust. n2 As with other sanctions, the court should consider the least severe sanction adequate to deter and punish the party against whom the sanctions are imposed. n3 Monetary sanctions for breaches of pretrial duties serve to compensate the party harmed by the breach and to deter and, if necessary, punish improper conduct. n4 Monetary sanctions ensure compliance with reasonable management requirements for case preparation and compensate opposing parties for inconvenience and expense incurred because of any noncompliance with the reasonable management orders of the court. n5

In setting the amount of monetary sanctions, the trial court should focus on all the purposes of sanctions, not only on fee shifting. n6 The court should consider the following factors: the reasonableness of the amount; the minimum amount necessary to deter noncompliance; the offender's ability to pay; the offender's history, experience, and ability; the severity of the violation; the extent of malice or bad faith that contributed to the violation; and any other factors that the court may deem appropriate. n7

[4] Preclusion of Evidence or Testimony

If a party or a party's attorney engages in sanctionable conduct, the trial court may enter an order refusing to allow the offending party to support or oppose specifiedclaims or defenses or prohibiting that party from introducing designated matters in evidence. n1 For example, if an attorney fails to provide or permit discovery as required by court order, the court may sanction the attorney by precluding the admission of specified evidence or witness testimony. n2 However, preclusion of evidence or testimony is a harsh sanction. n3 In determining whether or not evidence should be precluded from trial based on a violation of a pretrial order, the court should consider: the explanation for the failure to identify a witness, document, or other evidence; the importance of the testimony or other evidence; the potential prejudice of allowing the testimony or evidence to be admitted; and the availability of a continuance to cure the prejudice. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.92 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(ii)-(vii); see also In re Baker, 744 F.2d 1438, 1440 (10th Cir. 1984) (broad range of sanctions for failure to comply scheduling orders).

(n3)Footnote 2. M.E.N. Co. v. Control Fluidics, Inc., 834 F.2d 869, 872-873 (10th Cir. 1987) (harsh sanction of default judgment requires failure to be result of willfulness or bad faith).

(n4)Footnote 3. Newton v. A.C. & S. Inc., 918 F.2d 1121, 1127 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 4. S.E.C. v. First Houston Capital Resources Fund, Inc., 979 F.2d 380, 382-383 (5th Cir. 1992)

(abuse of discretion to impose default sanction when district judge's order fails to indicate why default judgment appropriate sanction for failure to attend pretrial conference or whether other measures considered).

(n6)Footnote 5. Hathcock v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 53 F.3d 36, 41-42 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 6. M.E.N. Co. v. Control Fluidics, Inc., 834 F.2d 869, 872-873 (10th Cir. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Rushing v. Kansas City Southern Railway Company 185 F.3d 496, 509 (5th Cir. 1999) (trial court has considerable discretion whether to impose sanctions for violations of scheduling order, and also choice of sanction); Jones v. Winnepesaukee Realty, 990 F.2d 1, 5 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Ehrenhaus v. Reynolds, 965 F.2d 916, 920-921 (10th Cir. 1992) (discretion to choose sanction is limited in that chosen sanction must be both just and related to particular claim in issue).

(n10)Footnote 9. Hathcock v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 53 F.3d 36, 40 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Oklahoma Federated Gold & Numismatics, Inc. v. Blodgett, 24 F.3d 136, 139 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Woodson v. Surgitek, Inc., 57 F.3d 1406, 1417 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1), 37(b)(2)(A)(v), (vi); see World Thrust Films, Inc. v. International Family Entertainment, Inc., 41 F.3d 1454, 1456-1457 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Velazquez-Rivera v. Sea-Land Serv., Inc., 920 F.2d 1072, 1075 (1st Cir. 1990) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Coleman v. Smith, 814 F.2d 1142, 1145-1146 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Jones v. Thompson, 996 F.2d 261, 264-265 (10th Cir. 1993) (upholding dismissal of legal malpractice action for violation of numerous court orders, failure to prosecute, and abuse of discovery).

(n17)Footnote 6. Omaha Indian Tribe v. Track I--Blackbird Bend Area, 933 F.2d 1462, 1468 (8th Cir. 1991) .

(n18)Footnote 7. Brinkmann v. Abner, 813 F.2d 744, 749 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n19)Footnote 8. Shea v. Donohoe Constr. Co., 795 F.2d 1071, 1075-1076 (D.C. Cir. 1986) .

(n20)Footnote 9. In re Baker, 744 F.2d 1438, 1442 (10th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1014 (1985) .

(n21)Footnote 10. Johnson v. United States Dep't of Treasury, 939 F.2d 820, 825 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n22)Footnote 11. S.E.C. v. First Houston Capital Resources Fund, Inc., 979 F.2d 380, 382 (5th Cir. 1992) (court must find that lesser sanctions would not have served the interests of justice).

(n23)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1).

(n24)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(2); Kiser v. Boeing Co., 163 F.R.D. 13, 14 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n25)Footnote 3. White v. General Motors Corp., 908 F.2d 675, 683-684 (10th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1069 (1991) .

(n26)Footnote 4. Media Duplication Servs. Ltd. v. HDG Software, 928 F.2d 1228, 1242 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n27)Footnote 5. Olcott v. Delaware Flood Co., 76 F.3d 1538, 1557 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n28)Footnote 6. Kiser v. Boeing Co., 163 F.R.D. 13, 15 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n29)Footnote 7. White v. General Motors Corp., 908 F.2d 675, 684-685 (10th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1069 (1991) .

(n30)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(iii).

(n31)Footnote 2. Beech Aircraft Corp. v. United States, 51 F.3d 834, 842 (9th Cir. 1995) ; In re Maurice, 21 F.3d 767, 771-773 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n32)Footnote 3. Freeman v. Package Mach. Co., 865 F.2d 1331, 1341 (1st Cir. 1988) (testimony of expert witness not identified in pretrial order not precluded when witness was identified in pretrial memoranda, when opposing party deposed witness, and when there was no showing of prejudice).

(n33)Footnote 4. Geiserman v. MacDonald, 893 F.2d 787, 791 (5th Cir. 1990) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART IV. Sanctions for Violation of Pretrial Obligations

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.64

§ 18.64 Procedures for Imposition of Sanctionsn*

[1] Requirement of Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard

Before imposing a sanction, a court must give the disobedient party sufficient advance notice and an opportunity to be heard. n1 The requirement of notice and a hearing gives the parties an opportunity to explain the offending conduct before sanctions are imposed and also provides a record for appellate review. n2 The extent of due process required depends on the nature of the alleged misconduct and the severity of the sanction under consideration. n3 The court may provide notice sua sponte by issuing an order to show cause why sanctions should not be imposed, specifying the alleged misconduct; the court may also provide notice after a formal motion of the party requesting that the court impose sanctions. An oral hearing is not required. The court may make a decision on the record before it, provided that the party has had an opportunity to be heard. n4

[2] Determination and Entry of Order

After it has provided due process, the court may make its determination of whether to impose sanctions. Sanctions may be imposed on the judge's own initiative or on motion. n1 In general, the proper time and procedure for imposing sanctions depends on the basis for their imposition and the severity of the sanction. For example, an oral reprimand or warning may be used to deter or reprove courtroom conduct that plainly violates a pretrial order because the order itself gives adequate notice that the offense is unacceptable. This lesser type of sanction should be made promptly after the improper conduct to maximize its deterrent effect so that the court will not need to resort to more severe sanctions. n2

To ensure a complete record for appellate review, the court should memorialize its findings and reasons on the record or in a written order. The findings should identify the objectionable conduct, as well as state the factual and legal reasons for the action taken by the court, including the need for a particular sanction. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.93 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Discon, Inc. v. NYNEX Corp., 4 F.3d 130, 134 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Newton v. A.C. & S., Inc., 918 F.2d 1121, 1127 (3d Cir. 1990) (benefits of notice and hearing).

(n4)Footnote 3. See, e.g., In re Baker, 744 F.2d 1438, 1440 (10th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1014 (1985) (process due when district court threatens to strike testimony is more substantial than that required for imposition of attorneys' fees and costs related to a deposition).

(n5)Footnote 4. G.J.B. & Assocs. v. Singleton, 913 F.2d 824, 830 (10th Cir. 1990) (district court must issue particularized statement on choice of sanctions and identity of sanctioned persons).

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f).

(n7)Footnote 2. See Chilcutt v. United States, 4 F.3d 1313, 1324 n. 30 (5th Cir.1993) .

(n8)Footnote 3. G.J.B. & Assocs. v. Singleton, 913 F.2d 824, 830 (10th Cir. 1990) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 18 PRETRIAL CONFERENCES; SCHEDULING; MANAGEMENT
PART IV. Sanctions for Violation of Pretrial Obligations

2-18 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 18.65

§ 18.65 Appellate Review of Sanctionsn*

[1] Appealability of Sanction Order

Circuit courts have jurisdiction over appeals only from final decisions in the district courts, n1 The Supreme Court has described a final decision as one that ends the litigation on the merits and leaves nothing for the court to do but execute the judgment. n2 Therefore, if a sanction order consists of entry of a default judgment or dismissal of an entire complaint, the order is reviewable immediately on appeal. n3 On the other hand, sanctions such as the imposition of monetary expenses on a party or on a party and its attorney, generally are considered interlocutory in nature because there is no final adjudication on the merits of the underlying controversy and are not immediately appealable. n4

To come within the small category of decisions excepted from the final judgment rule under the collateral order doctrine, an interlocutory order must conclusively determine the disputed question, resolve an important issue completely separate from the merits of the action, and be effectively unreviewable on appeal from a final judgment. n5 Even if a sanction order may be appealed separately from the merits of the underlying action, the amount of the sanction must be reduced to a sum certain before review; a sanction order that leaves the amount of the sanction for later determinationis not proper for immediate review. n6

[2] Standard of Review

A decision to impose sanctions is reviewed under an abuse of discretion standard. n1 Because the choice of sanctions lies with the district court, an appellate court may not lightly disturb its decision. n2 Thus, the appellate court will overturn a dismissal sanction only on a definite and firm conviction that the dismissal was clearly outside the acceptable range of sanctions. n3 In determining whether the court abused its discretion, the appellate court must examine the totality of the circumstances, including the specific case under review, the management problems presented to the trial court by the violating conduct, and access and expense problems for parties. n4 Whenever two permissible views of the evidence exist, the fact finder's choice between them is not clearly erroneous. n5

A court abuses its discretion when its decision is based on clearly erroneous factual findings, n6 an incorrect legal standard, n7 or when the court committed a clear error of judgment in its conclusion after weighing the relevant factors. n8 Although sanctions are reviewable under the abuse of discretion standard, appellate courts have reversed sanctions that are considered too harsh or severe. n9 The factual determinations underlying the imposition of sanctions, such as a finding of willful misconduct, are reviewed under a clearly erroneous standard. n10 Even when a reviewing court determines that a sanction was improperly imposed, the court of appeals will not reverse the judgment in the underlying action if the effect of the sanction constitutes harmless error. For example, if the sanctioned party cannot show that an improper evidence preclusion sanction prevented the party from introducing some material portion of the case, the decision will not be reversed on appeal. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesSanctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 16.94 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n3)Footnote 2. Catlin v. United States, 324 U.S. 229, 233, 65 S. Ct. 631, 89 L. Ed. 911 (1945) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Brinkmann v. Abner, 813 F.2d 744, 749 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 4. DeSisto College, Inc. v. Line, 888 F.2d 755, 761-762 (11th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 952 (1990) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Richardson-Merrell, Inc. v. Koller, 472 U.S. 424, 430-431, 105 S. Ct. 2757, 86 L. Ed. 2d 340 (1985) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Discon, Inc. v. NYNEX Corp., 4 F.3d 130, 132 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 1. Acuna v. Brown & Root, Inc., 200 F.3d 335, 340 (5th Cir. 2000) (district court did not abuse discretion in issuing orders requiring plaintiffs to establish certain elements of their claims through expert affidavits and subsequently dismissing cases for failure to comply with orders).

(n9)Footnote 2. Velazquez-Rivera v. Sea-Land Serv., Inc., 920 F.2d 1072, 1075 (1st Cir. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Malone v. U.S. Postal Serv., 833 F.2d 128, 130 (9th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 819 (1988) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Thibeault v. Square D Co., 960 F.2d 239, 246 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n12)Footnote 5. Olcott v. Delaware Flood Company, 76 F.3d 1538, 1558 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 6. Ayers v. City of Richmond, 895 F.2d 1267, 1269-1270 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n14)Footnote 7. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 405, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n15)Footnote 8. United States v. Schlette, 842 F.2d 1574, 1577 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n16)Footnote 9. Transtech Indus., Inc. v. A & Z Septic Clean, 798 F. Supp. 1079, 1091-1092 (D.N.J. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 10. Ayers v. City of Richmond, 895 F.2d 1267, 1269-1270 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n18)Footnote 11. Ford v. Alfaro, 785 F.2d 835, 839-840 (9th Cir. 1986) .

98 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 19.syn

§ 19.syn Synopsis to Chapter 19: DISMISSALS

§ 19.01 Nature of Voluntary and Involuntary Dismissals

§ 19.02 Governing Rules

[1] Federal Rules Control Methods of Dismissal

[2] Federal Dismissal Rule Controls Over Conflicting State Rule

§ 19.03 Dismissal Rule Applies to All Types of Claims

§ 19.04 Costs for Bringing Previously Dismissed Action

[1] Court Has Discretion to Order Stay

[2] Requirements for Order of Stay

[a] Refiling of Action After Dismissal

[b] Voluntary Dismissal of First Action

[c] Second Suit Based on Same Claims Against Same Defendants

[3] Factors Considered in Determination Whether to Order Stay

[4] Items of Costs That Court May Order

§§ 19.05through 19.19 [Reserved]

§ 19.20 Use of Voluntary Dismissal Rule

[1] General Purposes for Voluntary Dismissal

[2] Plaintiff's Motives for Taking Voluntary Dismissal

[3] Defendant's Motives for Opposing Voluntary Dismissal

§ 19.21 Three Categories of Voluntary Dismissal

§ 19.22 Voluntary Dismissal Must Terminate Action Against At Least One Party

[1] Plaintiff Must Dismiss All Claims Against Defendant

[2] Dismissal of Fewer Than All Claims By Amendment

§ 19.23 Rule Permits Dismissal of Fewer Than All Defending Parties or Claiming Parties

[1] General Rule

[2] Voluntary Dismissal of Nondiverse Parties

[3] Voluntary Dismissal of Misjoined Parties Permissible

§ 19.24 Determination Whether Court Order Required

[1] Two Methods for Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

[2] Exceptions to Unilateral Right to Voluntarily Dismiss

[a] Court Approval Required in Certain Types of Cases

[b] Class Actions

[c] Actions Involving Receivers

[d] Statutes Controlling Dismissal

[3] Voluntary Dismissal With Court Order

§§ 19.25through 19.39 [Reserved]

§ 19.40 Nature of Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Absolute Right to Dismiss

[2] Court May Not Impose Conditions on Dismissal by Notice

§ 19.41 Format Requirements of Notice

§ 19.42 Procedure for Dismissal by Notice

[1] Filing of Notice With Court

[2] Time for Filing Notice

[a] Timely Filing Requirements

[b] Defendant's Service That Cuts Off Claimant's Absolute Right to Dismissal

[i] Service on All Parties Required

[ii] Service Required by Defendants Who Are Object of Dismissal

[c] Right to Dismiss Terminated Only by Answer or Motion for Summary Judgment

[i] Rule Strictly Followed

[ii] Right to Dismiss Questioned in Cases of Lack of Jurisdiction and Bad Faith

[iii] Requirement for Summary Judgment Motion

§ 19.43 Effect of Filing Notice of Voluntary Dismissal

[1] Action is Immediately Terminated

[2] Termination Without Prejudice Unless Otherwise Specified

[3] Effect on Court's Jurisdiction

[a] General Rule

[b] Exception for Collateral Matters

§ 19.44 Operation of Two Dismissal Rule

[1] Rule Makes Second Voluntary Dismissal "With Prejudice"

[2] Requirements for Two Dismissal Exception to Apply

[a] Events Triggering Application of Rule

[i] First Dismissal

[ii] Second Dismissal

[b] Effect of Litigation in Federal or State Court

[c] Identity of Claims

[d] Identity of Parties

[3] Relief From Two Dismissal Rule

§ 19.45 Appeal Regarding Dismissal by Notice

[1] Standard of Review on Appeal

[2] Court Actions That Parties May Appeal

[3] Effect of Prejudice on Dismissal

§§ 19.46through 19.59 [Reserved]

§ 19.60 Parties Have Absolute Right to Stipulate To Dismissal of Action

§ 19.61 Contents of Stipulation of Dismissal

[1] Unequivocal Provision for Dismissal

[2] Signatures of All Parties Who Have Appeared in the Action

[3] Terms and Conditions

§ 19.62 Filing of Stipulation To Dismissal

[1] Requirement of Filing

[2] Exception for Oral Stipulation on Record

§ 19.63 Effect of Stipulation To Dismissal

[1] General Effects of Stipulation on Action

[2] Effects of Stipulation on Courts Continuing Jurisdiction

§ 19.64 Appeal Regarding Dismissal by Stipulation

§§ 19.65through 19.79 [Reserved]

§ 19.80 Nature and Purpose of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

§ 19.81 Court Has Discretion to Order Voluntary Dismissal

§ 19.82 Motion and Hearing for Court Order

§ 19.83 Grounds for Court Ordered Dismissal

[1] Absence of Legal Prejudice to Defending Party

[2] Factors Considered in Determination of Whether Defendant Suffered Prejudice

[a] Focus on Rights and Defenses Available to Defendant

[b] Progress of Litigation

[c] Adequacy of Plaintiff's Reasons for Dismissal

[d] Dismissal to Facilitate Final Judgment for Immediate Appeal

[3] Denial of Dismissal to Preserve Counterclaim

§ 19.84 Effect of Court Ordered Voluntary Dismissal

§ 19.85 Terms and Conditions of Dismissal

[1] Purpose to Protect Defendant

[2] Permissible Terms and Conditions

[a] Condition That Dismissal be With Prejudice

[b] Costs

[i] Determination of Whether to Condition Dismissal on Payment of Costs

[ii] Availability of Types of Costs

[c] Other Conditions That Court May Impose

[3] Prohibited Terms and Conditions

[4] Plaintiff's Response to Imposition of Terms and Conditions

§ 19.86 Appeal of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Order

[1] Appealability of Voluntary Dismissal Orders

[2] Standard of Review

§§ 19.87through 19.99 [Reserved]

§ 19.100 Use of Involuntary Dismissal

[1] Nature of Involuntary Dismissal

[2] Drastic Remedy That May be Granted in Discretion of Court

§ 19.101 Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute

[1] Purpose of Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute

[2] Factors Considered in Determination of Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute

[a] In General

[b] Duration and Number of Failures to Prosecute

[c] Responsibility for Delay

[d] Excuses for Plaintiff's Delay

[e] Contumacious Conduct

[f] Prejudice to Defendant

[g] Notice of Impending Dismissal

[h] Balancing Expediency With Due Process Rights of Plaintiff

[i] Availability of Less Drastic Sanctions

§ 19.102 Dismissal for Failure to Comply With Court Order

[1] Nature and Purpose of Rule

[2] Orders Subject to Noncompliance Rule

§ 19.103 Procedure for Involuntary Dismissal

[1] Initiation of Request for Involuntary Dismissal

[2] Hearing Generally Required

§ 19.104 Effect of Involuntary Dismissal

[1] Constitutes Adjudication on Merits

[2] Exception for Certain Dismissals

§ 19.105 Appeal of Order Regarding Involuntary Dismissal

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART I. USE OF DISMISSALS IN FEDERAL COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.01

§ 19.01 Nature of Voluntary and Involuntary Dismissalsn*

There are two types of dismissals available in federal district courts: n1 voluntary dismissals n2 and involuntary dismissals. n3 There are two distinctions between the two types of dismissals. First, as the name implies, a voluntary dismissal is one that the plaintiff or other claimant has initiated, or at least the plaintiff has agreed to with the opposition party. n4 On the other hand, an involuntary dismissal is a dismissal that the court or the defendant has initiated because of the fault of the plaintiff, either because the plaintiff has failed to prosecute the claim or to comply with the federal civil rules or any order of the court. n5 The second primary distinction between the two basic types of dismissals concerns the effect of the dismissal. n6 Unless it clearly specifies otherwise, a voluntary dismissal is made without prejudice, which means that the claimant may later reinstitute litigation on the same subject matter and with the same defendant. n7 On the other hand, unless it clearly specifies otherwise an involuntary dismissal is made with prejudice, which means that the dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits, and the claimant may not refile an action based on the same alleged wrong. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 41.02, 41.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. D.C. Elecs., Inc. v. Nartron Corp., 511 F.2d 294, 296-298 (6th Cir. 1975) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a); see § 19.20 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); see § 19.100 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Versa Prods. v. Home Depot, USA, Inc., 387 F.3d 1325, 1327-1328 (11th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); see Orca Yachts L.L.C. v. Mollicam, Inc., 287 F.3d 316, 319 (4th Cir. 2004) (when claim or counterclaim is dismissed with prejudice, further action on claim is barred by the doctrine of res judicata).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART I. USE OF DISMISSALS IN FEDERAL COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.02

§ 19.02 Governing Rulesn*

[1] Federal Rules Control Methods of Dismissal

Rule 41 establishes a uniform procedure in federal district courts governing the two general types of dismissals of claims, n1 voluntary and involuntary. n2 There are three categories of voluntary dismissals, n3 and only one category of involuntary dismissals. n4 Voluntary dismissals are dismissals (1) initiated by the plaintiff by notice; n5 (2) by the consent of the parties; n6 and (3) by order of the court. n7 Rule 41(b) governs involuntary dismissals, which are dismissals initiated either by the defendant or the court for the plaintiff's failure to prosecute or comply with the federal rules. n8

A plaintiff's right to voluntarily dismiss by notice or stipulation is ordinarily unconditional. However, the voluntary dismissal procedures are subject to restrictions on dismissals in class actions, n9 in actions in which a receiver has been appointed, n10 and when restricted by federal statute. In such actions, the plaintiff must seek court approval for a dismissal. n11 If a federal statute is involved, a voluntary dismissal may be subject to court approval or other conditions depending on the particular statute in question. n12

[2] Federal Dismissal Rule Controls Over Conflicting State Rule

Voluntary dismissals were formerly controlled by state statutes. Rule 41 brought standardization to federal procedure regarding dismissals, n1 and the provisions of Rule 41 now control over conflicting state law. n2 This conclusion follows the general proposition that procedural rules promulgated pursuant to the Federal Rules Enabling Act n3 prevail over state law when such rules only incidentally affect substantive rights and are reasonably necessary to maintain the rules' procedural integrity. n4 Thus, Rule 41 controls the procedure for dismissal of any action pending in federal court, whether the action was originally commenced in federal court or was removed from state court to federal court. n5 However, if a party in federal court is attempting to file an action infederal court that has previously been dismissed in state court according to state court procedure, the federal court will give effect to that state court dismissal. n5.1

Even though federal procedural law controls the procedure for dismissals, provisions of state law that affect substantive rights control in certain cases. For example, when applying a state statute of limitation, a substantive law, a federal court will apply those provisions of the state voluntary dismissal statute that are deemed to be integral to the policies behind the statute of limitation. n6 Furthermore, a federal court will give res judicata effect to a second voluntary dismissal in state court, if the state has enacted its own version of the "two dismissal rule" (under which a second voluntary dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits). n6.1 The items of costs payable to a defendant for defending a previously dismissed action may also be determined under state law. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 41.02, 41.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a),(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. D.C. Elecs., Inc. v. Nartron Corp., 511 F.2d 294, 296-298 (6th Cir. 1975) (Rule 41 brought standardization to federal practice regarding voluntary dismissals, which was formerly controlled by state statutes).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a); § 19.20 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); § 19.100 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2); see § 19.80.

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); see § 19.60 et seq.

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e), 23.1(c), 23.2.

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 66.

(n12)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A).

(n13)Footnote 12. See § 19.24[2][d].

(n14)Footnote 1. D.C. Elecs., Inc. v. Nartron Corp., 511 F.2d 294, 296-298 (6th Cir. 1975) .

(n15)Footnote 2. Harvey's Wagon Wheel, Inc. v. Van Blitter, 959 F.2d 153, 155 (9th Cir. 1992) (Rule 41(b) controls over state law); Kahn v. Sturgil, 66 F.R.D. 487, 491 (M.D.N.C. 1975) (provisions of Rule 41(d) giving federal court discretion to permit recommencement of voluntarily dismissed suit on payment of costs controlled over state statute which required dismissal where costs of previously dismissed suit had not been paid).

(n16)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 2072.

(n17)Footnote 4. Burlington N. R. Co. v. Woods, 480 U.S. 1, 4-5, 107 S. Ct. 967, 94 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1987) .

(n18)Footnote 5. See Shah v. Racetrac Petroleum Co., 338 F.3d 557, 565 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n19)Footnote 5.1. Ater v. Follrod, 238 F. Supp. 2d 928, 942 (S.D. Ohio 2002) .

(n20)Footnote 6. Scoggins v. Douglas, 760 F.2d 535, 537 (4th Cir. 1985) (Virginia tolling provision requiring refiling of suit within six months of voluntary dismissal controlled even though dismissal was taken under federal rule).

(n21)Footnote 6.1. See Ater v. Follrod, 238 F. Supp. 2d 928, 952-954 (S.D. Ohio 2002) .

(n22)Footnote 7. Simeone v. First Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 971 F.2d 103, 107 (8th Cir. 1992) (although expert fees might not be available to prevailing defendant under federal law, defendant could recover them under Rule 41(d) where previously dismissed action was commenced in state court).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART I. USE OF DISMISSALS IN FEDERAL COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.03

§ 19.03 Dismissal Rule Applies to All Types of Claimsn*

The federal rule controlling dismissals applies not only to the claim in a complaint but also to any other affirmative claim for relief, such as a dismissal of a counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim. n1 Thus, the rules governing both voluntary and involuntary dismissals apply to dismissals of any of the following types of claims: n2

1. A claim contained in complaint, which is an affirmative pleading that specifies a claim for relief. n3

2. A counterclaim, which is any affirmative claim for relief by a defending party. Thus, a defendant's claim for relief against the plaintiff is a counterclaim. The claims for relief in any counterclaim denominated as such must be answered by the opposition's answer. n4

3. A cross-claim, which is a claim against a person that is aligned on the same side as a co-party in the litigation. n5

4. A third-party claim, which is a claim for relief filed by a defendant against a third-party when the third-party would be secondarily or derivatively liable to the defendant in the event the defendant is held liable to the plaintiff. n6

Rule 41(c) applies to both voluntary dismissals under Rule 41(a) n7 and to involuntary dismissals under Rule 41(b). n8 Rule 41(c) clarifies the time when a defending party may unilaterally dismiss any of its own claims by notice. A defending party may dismiss until the time that the opposition has filed a responsive pleading, n9 or if none is required, until the introduction of evidence at the trial or hearing. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.60 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c); see also Busch v. Doyle, 141 B.R. 432, 434 (D. Utah 1992) (defendant's motion for voluntary dismissal of counterclaim).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c); see Brown v. Brown, 343 F. Supp. 2d 195, 197 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) (procedure for dismissals for all types of claims treated precisely the same).

(n4)Footnote 3. Karpel v. Inova Health Sys. Servs., 134 F.3d 1222, 1224 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g); see Wake v. United States, 89 F.3d 53, 62-63 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1); see also Watergate Landmark Condominium Unit Owners' Ass'n v. Wiss, Janey, & Elstner, 117 F.R.D. 576, 577 (E.D. Va. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Victory Beauty Supply, Inc. v. La Maur, Inc., 98 F.R.D. 306, 307-308 (N.D. Ill. 1983) (defendant sought voluntary dismissal by court order under Rule 41(a)(2)).

(n9)Footnote 8. Sea-Land Service, Inc. v. Banca De Republica De Dominica, 697 F. Supp. 253, 260 (E.D. La. 1988) (when defendant deliberately failed to prosecute counterclaim, it was properly dismissed under Rule 41(b)).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c)(2).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c)(2).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART I. USE OF DISMISSALS IN FEDERAL COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.04

§ 19.04 Costs for Bringing Previously Dismissed Actionn*

[1] Court Has Discretion to Order Stay

If a plaintiff has dismissed an action but then commences a separate action against the same defendant based on or including the same claim, the court may order the plaintiff to pay all or part of the costs of that previous action. n1 Furthermore, the court may stay the current proceedings until the plaintiff has paid such costs. n1.1 The purpose of the rule is to prevent forum shopping and vexatious litigation. n2 An award of costs is discretionary with the district court. n3 Consequently, the order granting or denying a stay may be overturned on appeal only under the abuse of discretion standard. n4 Furthermore, the grant of a stay of an action pursuant to Rule 41(d) is appealable sinceit effectively keeps the plaintiff out of court. n5

[2] Requirements for Order of Stay

[a] Refiling of Action After Dismissal

The court may award costs Under Rule 41(d) if the first action has been dismissed and a second action has been commenced. Therefore, the court may not impose costs under Rule 41(d) as a condition of dismissing the first action, because there has been no dismissal yet, and no commencement of a second action on the same claim; n1 however, payment of costs may be available as a term or condition for the court's dismissal of an action under Rule 41(a)(2). n2

It is not clear whether Rule 41(d) applies in the situation when a second action has been brought, but the second action was commenced before the first action was dismissed. Some courts have found that although a technical reading of the rule might preclude costs under such circumstances, an award should nonetheless be permitted to promote the underlying purpose of the rule to discourage vexatious litigation. n3 At least one court, has held that the pendency of the first action barred an order of costs, because the costs could have been sought in the first action under Rule 41(a)(2). n4

[b] Voluntary Dismissal of First Action

Under the terms of Rule 41(d), the court may order a stay only when the dismissal in the first case was by the voluntary unilateral act of the plaintiff. Thus, most courts hold that when the first case was an involuntary dismissal, the court may not order a stay or costs. n5 Some courts, however, have held that the rule does not limit the inherent power of the court to dismiss an action for failure to pay costs incurred in defending an action that was previously the subject of an involuntary dismissal. n6

[c] Second Suit Based on Same Claims Against Same Defendants

A court may condition the filing of a new action on the payment of costs if the action is based on or includes the same claim against the same defendant. The second action need not be identical to the first, provided that there is a substantial identity of claims and parties. n7 The inclusion of new legal claims in the second action does not defeat an award of costs if the operative facts are the same as those in the first suit. n8 Conversely, when the second action is substantially different because, for example, it raises claims that could not have been brought in the prior action or seeks different relief, Rule 41(d) does not apply. n9

Note that there must be identity of defendants in both suits. A party who was not a party to a previous lawsuit incurred no costs with respect to that lawsuit and, accordingly, is not entitled to an award of costs pursuant to Rule 41(d). Such an award would go beyond the objective of Rule 41(d) of preventing repetitive vexatious suits. The addition of new defendants in a second suit, however, does not preclude the court from awarding costs to one who was a party to the previous action, nor does it prevent the court from granting a stay of proceedings pursuant to Rule 41(d) as against all defendants pending payment of an award of costs to the defendant who was named in both the prior and current suits. n10

[3] Factors Considered in Determination Whether to Order Stay

There are numerous factors that the court should consider when determining a motion for a stay or imposition of costs, including: whether the delay will be substantial when a new lawsuit is filed; whether the court believes that the plaintiff is engaging in "forum shopping"; whether the plaintiff or attorney engaged in egregious conduct; whether the plaintiff's conduct has prejudiced and harmed the defendant, monetarily or otherwise; and whether the defendant has expended a great deal of time and incurred very substantial expenses in defending the litigation which was precipitously ended by plaintiff's voluntary act, and the amount of wasted effort because matters that were done during the first litigation will have to be redone in the second lawsuit. n1

The court may deny an order of conditional costs under Rule 41(d) when the plaintiff is financially unable to pay them, or when the plaintiff has acted in good faithand had a legitimate reason for dismissing the prior action. n2 Other courts follow the rule strictly and have stated that the plaintiff's reason for the previous dismissal is irrelevant. n3

[4] Items of Costs That Court May Order

Once the plaintiff has commenced the second action based on the same claim against the same defendant, the court may make any order for the payment of costs of the action previously dismissed as the court deems proper. n1 Under Rule 41(d), the court may require the payment of all of the reasonable costs incurred by the defendant in the first action. n2 Courts have held that the costs available under Rule 41(d) include attorney's fees, as well as the usual items of court costs. n3 In deciding this issue, one court has reasoned that "costs" does not mean only those items that are traditionally considered to be costs in the American legal system. The court found that under the rule the trial court also has discretion to include as costs all attorney's fees reasonably incurred. Otherwise, if the court could impose only costs which a winning party would be entitled to recover under Rule 54(d) and 28 U.S.C. § 1920, then Rule 41(d) would have no teeth and would be useless; if the court could not impose attorney's fees, the rule would not serve its intended purpose to discourage forum shopping. n4 It has also been held that when the previously dismissed suit was in litigation in state court, the defendant may recover whatever items of costs are compensable under state law, regardless of whether they would be available under federal law. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.70 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(d)(1).

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(d)(1).

(n4)Footnote 2. Simeone v. First Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 971 F.2d 103, 107 (8th Cir. 1992) (citing Moore's Federal Practice, costs may be imposed when prior dismissed action was in state court); Esquivel v. Arau, 913 F. Supp. 1382, 1386 (C.D. Cal. 1996) (serves as deterrent to forum shopping).

(n5)Footnote 3. Larsen v. Senate of the Commonwealth, 955 F. Supp. 1549, 1582 (M.D. Pa. 1997) (citing Moore's Federal Practice, decision whether to stay action and impose costs is within broad discretion of trial court); Zucker v. Katz, 708 F. Supp. 525, 539 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (award of costs from previous litigation is under court's discretion).

(n6)Footnote 4. Kern v. TXO Production Corp., 738 F.2d 968, 973 (8th Cir. 1984) (trial court abused its discretion by denying motion to impose costs on plaintiff as condition for suit; appellate court ordered trial court to determine amount of fees and expenses reasonably incurred by defendant up through order of dismissal and to condition voluntary nonsuit on payment of such sum if case was refiled).

(n7)Footnote 5. See Behrle v. Olshansky, 139 F.R.D. 370, 373-374 (W.D. Ark. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 1. Der v. E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., 142 F.R.D. 344, 346 (M.D. Fla. 1992) (Rule 41(d) applies only to claims that have previously been dismissed and refiled).

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n10)Footnote 3. Esquivel v. Arau, 913 F. Supp. 1382, 1388 (C.D. Cal. 1996) .

(n11)Footnote 4. White v. Telelect, Inc., 109 F.R.D. 655, 656-657 (S.D. Miss. 1986) .

(n12)Footnote 5. Chang v. Meese, 660 F. Supp. 782, 786 (D.P.R. 1987) (Rule 41(d) is by its terms applicable only when plaintiff "has once dismissed an action" and does not extend to cases in which there was involuntary dismissal); Duchardt v. Ewing, 571 F.2d 869, 870 (5th Cir. 1978) (only if dismissal is voluntary).

(n13)Footnote 6. Hilgeford v. Peoples Bank, 110 F.R.D. 700, 701-702 (N.D. Ind. 1986) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Hacopian v. United States Dep't of Labor, 709 F.2d 1295, 1297 (9th Cir. 1983) (court's inherent power to order conditional payment of costs in second suit should not be limited by Rule 41(d)).

(n14)Footnote 7. Esquivel v. Arau, 913 F. Supp. 1382, 1386 (C.D. Cal. 1996) (costs may be imposed under Rule 41(d) when plaintiff has brought second identical or nearly identical claim and has requested identical or nearly identical relief).

(n15)Footnote 8. Esquivel v. Arau, 913 F. Supp. 1382, 1387 (C.D. Cal. 1996) (second action based on same claims as first despite addition of claims for constructive fraud, invasion of privacy, commercial misappropriation, and unfair competition).

(n16)Footnote 9. Larsen v. Senate of the Commonwealth, 955 F. Supp. 1549, 1582 (M.D. Pa. 1997) (although plaintiff raised "similar" claims in both actions, district court refused to impose Rule 41(d) costs because some claims in second action could not have been raised in first).

(n17)Footnote 10. Simeone v. First Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 125 F.R.D. 150, 154 (D. Minn. 1989) ; cf. Loubier v. Modern Acoustics, 178 F.R.D. 17, 20-21 (D. Conn. 1998) (although there was not exact identity of parties, there was sufficient relationship between parties for rule to apply).

(n18)Footnote 1. See Behrle v. Olshansky, 139 F.R.D. 370, 373-374 (W.D. Ark. 1991) (court granted motion for stay because it believed that it had no alternative but to make such order for payment of costs of action previously dismissed by plaintiff).

(n19)Footnote 2. Zucker v. Katz, 708 F. Supp. 525, 539-540 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (ordering costs in this case because plaintiff did not raise inability to pay as defense to motion).

(n20)Footnote 3. Activox Inc. v. Envirotech Corp., 532 F. Supp. 248, 251 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) (whatever strategy of plaintiff used in dismissing its previous action, under Rule 41(d) it was subject to payment of costs of action previously dismissed).

(n21)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(d).

(n22)Footnote 2. Zucker v. Katz, 708 F. Supp. 525, 539 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (reasonable costs must be paid, but not necessarily actual costs if they are unreasonable).

(n23)Footnote 3. Evans v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 623 F.2d 121, 122 (8th Cir. 1980) ; Esquivel v. Arau, 913 F. Supp. 1382, 1388 (C.D. Cal. 1996) .

(n24)Footnote 4. Behrle v. Olshansky, 139 F.R.D. 370, 373-375 (W.D. Ark. 1991) .

(n25)Footnote 5. Simeone v. First Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 971 F.2d 103, 107-108 (8th Cir. 1992) (when previously dismissed action was commenced in state that did not limit recovery of expert fees, defendant was entitled to such expert fees on commencement of suit in federal court on same claim, even if expert fees would not be available under federal law).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART I. USE OF DISMISSALS IN FEDERAL COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 19.05through 19.19

[Reserved]

§§ 19.05[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
A. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS IN GENERAL

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.20

§ 19.20 Use of Voluntary Dismissal Rulen*

[1] General Purposes for Voluntary Dismissal

The purposes of Rule 41(a), which governs voluntary dismissals of actions, n1 are to authorize a plaintiff to abandon litigation, n2 to take a voluntary nonsuit and start litigation over, provided that the defendant is not hurt, n3 and to regulate the timing, frequency and conditions of such dismissals and, therefore, protect defendants from harassment and prejudice. n4 Thus, Rule 41(a) allows a voluntary dismissal, whether by notice, by stipulation, or by court order, without prejudice to further litigation. n5

While it may seem unusual for a plaintiff to file and then initiate dismissal of an action, there are many reasons a plaintiff may seek a voluntary dismissal without prejudice. One example occurs when the plaintiff wants to take corrective measures to cure defects that might otherwise ultimately cause the failure of the plaintiff's suit. Thus, a plaintiff may want to temporarily end the litigation to accumulate new evidence needed to state or support a claim n6 or to correct the pleadings. n7

Voluntary dismissals are also used for reasons of forum shopping. For example, a plaintiff may request a dismissal to defeat federal subject matter jurisdiction by dismissing federal claims; n8 to avoid unfavorable state law by refiling in a state or federal court in a different jurisdiction; n9 to avoid a particular federal judge by refiling in state court in anticipation that a different judge could be assigned to the case on removal by the defendant; n10 to ensure a trial before a particular federal judge by filing multiple actions and dismissing those that are not assigned to that judge; n11

A plaintiff may also dismiss an action for practical or tactical reasons. For example, the plaintiff may request dismissal to refile a complaint containing a jury demand; n12 delay or avoid discovery; n13 or eliminate a party as a defendant when the party is obstructing settlement negotiations. n14

[2] Plaintiff's Motives for Taking Voluntary Dismissal

A plaintiff's motive for dismissal is generally irrelevant where the dismissal is effected by notice in the early stages of the litigation. n1 Similarly, a dismissal by stipulation of all the parties is usually not subject to judicial review. n2 Once leave of court is required under Rule 41(a)(2), however, the plaintiff's motive may either defeat the right to dismiss entirely or subject the dismissal to certain conditions. n3 Generally, the court will be less inclined to allow dismissal when the dismissal is sought late in the litigation, n4 when the dismissal is requested to facilitate certain forms of forum shopping, n5 or when it is intended primarily to delay an adverse adjudication on the merits. n6

[3] Defendant's Motives for Opposing Voluntary Dismissal

When a plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal merely to abandon the litigation, n1 the defendants probably will not oppose dismissal of litigation against them. However, when a plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal with the intent of later recommencing the action, the defendant may oppose the dismissal for several reasons. For example, the defendant may rather proceed to the merits of the suit and avoid the additional expense and inconvenience of responding to a newaction. In this regard, one of the central purposes behind the enactment of Rule 41(a) was to limit the ability of the plaintiff at common law to potentially harass a defendant through the repeated filing and dismissal of the same litigation. n2

Usually, the defendant's motive for opposing a dismissal will be the converse of the plaintiff's motive for taking it. This is because a plaintiff will tend to dismiss actions that do not look promising, while a defendant generally will want to obtain an adjudication on the merits in precisely such a case. n3 For example, a defendant may prefer the litigation to take place in the original forum instead of in another where the plaintiff could refile, and when the forum shopping involves a choice between federal and state jurisdictions, the dismissal is often precipitated by the defendant's prior removal of the action to federal court. n4 In another example, the defendant may want to complete discovery quickly and proceed to trial against a possibly unprepared adversary. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Lapierre v. Executive Indus., 117 F.R.D. 328, 329 (D. Conn. 1987) (under Rule 41(a)(2), plaintiff that has filed suit may review claims, determine merits of claims, and dismiss claims rather than face adverse judgment and subsequent award of costs).

(n4)Footnote 3. See McCall-Bey v. Franzen, 777 F.2d 1178, 1184 (7th Cir. 1985) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n5)Footnote 4. Armstrong v. Frostie Co., 453 F.2d 914, 916 (4th Cir. 1971) (court may allow dismissal only at early stage of litigation); Harvey Aluminum Inc. v. American Cyanamid Co., 203 F.2d 105, 108 (2d Cir. 1953) , cert. denied, 345 U.S. 964 (1953)

(n6)Footnote 5. Gardiner v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 747 F.2d 1180, 1190 (8th Cir. 1984) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Kurkowski v. Volcker, 819 F.2d 201, 203 (8th Cir. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Gronholz v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 836 F.2d 515, 518 (Fed. Cir. 1987) (note, however, that when plaintiff seeks temporary dismissal of fewer than all claims, dismissal may be treated as amendment of pleadings).

(n9)Footnote 8. Ethridge v. Harbor House Restaurant, 861 F.2d 1389, 1393 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Manshack v. Southwestern Electric Power Co., 915 F.2d 172, 173 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Jorgensen v. Prudential Ins. Co., 852 F. Supp. 255, 260 (D.N.J. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Murray v. Sevier, 145 F.R.D. 563, 563-564 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Paturzo v. Home Life Ins. Co., 503 F.2d 333, 335-336 (4th Cir. 1974) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Greguski v. Long Island R.R., 163 F.R.D. 221, 223-224 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Aggregates (Carolina), Inc. v. Kruse, 134 F.R.D. 23, 24 (D.P.R. 1991) .

(n16)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Merit Ins. Co. v. Leatherby Ins. Co., 581 F.2d 137, 142-143 (7th Cir. 1978) .

(n17)Footnote 2. Republic of Philippines v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 43 F.3d 65, 81 fn. 21 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n18)Footnote 3. Brooks v. State Bd. of Elections, 173 F.R.D. 547, 549 (S.D. Ga. 1997) .

(n19)Footnote 4. Philan Ins., Ltd. v. Frank B. Hall & Co., 786 F. Supp. 345, 349 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (voluntary dismissal of certain claims denied when litigation had been pending more than four years).

(n20)Footnote 5. Anders v. FPA Corp., 164 F.R.D. 383, 387 (D.N.J. 1995) (plaintiff advanced arguments to show that it had acted in good faith and had not engaged in forum-shopping).

(n21)Footnote 6. Williams v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 627 F.2d 158, 159 (8th Cir. 1980) (district court abused discretion in granting dismissal when plaintiff anticipated that court would grant defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict).

(n22)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Lapierre v. Executive Indus., 117 F.R.D. 328, 329 (D. Conn. 1987) .

(n23)Footnote 2. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 397, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359, 377 (1990) .

(n24)Footnote 3. Thorp v. Scarne, 599 F.2d 1169, 1171-1176 (2d Cir. 1979) .

(n25)Footnote 4. See, e.g., American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Bic Corp., 931 F.2d 1411, 1412 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n26)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Greguski v. Long Island R.R., 163 F.R.D. 221, 223-224 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
A. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS IN GENERAL

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.21

§ 19.21 Three Categories of Voluntary Dismissaln*

A voluntary dismissal is an option that may be used by the plaintiff to either abandon a civil action or to voluntarily dismiss and start a civil action over. The plaintiff may take a voluntary dismissal provided that the defendant is not adversely affected. n1 Thus, by complying with the voluntary dismissal procedure, the plaintiff may freely dismiss an action without prejudice. n2 This means that the plaintiff has the ability to bring a new action provided the dismissal is taken before the defendant has answered the complaint or moved for summary judgment. n3

There are three distinct methods of voluntary dismissal of a claim. In the first two methods, the claimant has a right to dismissal. n4 When using the third method, the claimant must have the voluntary dismissal approved by court order. n5 More specifically, the three methods of voluntary dismissal are: n5.1 (1) voluntary dismissals initiated by the plaintiff by notice; n6 (2) voluntary dismissal effected by the stipulation of the parties; n7 and (3) voluntary dismissal effected by approval and order of the court. n8 The plaintiff may dismiss an action without the court's permission under the first two categories which are specified in Rule 41(a)(1), dismissal by notice and dismissal by stipulation, n9 but must have the court's permission in order to obtain a dismissal under the third category specified in Rule 41(a)(2). n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Echols v. EBA Krug & Priester GmbH & Co., 225 F.R.D. 518, 519-520 (E.D.N.C. 2005) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Semtek Int'l Inc. v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 531 U.S. 497, 505-506, 121 S. Ct. 1021, 149 L. Ed. 2d 32 (2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i); see Medina v. New York State Dep't of Corr. Servs., 03 Civ. 9249 (RWS) *2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21485, 5 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 5.1. Loubier v. Modern Acoustics, 178 F.R.D. 17, 21 (D. Conn. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i); see § 19.40.

(n9)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii); § 19.60.

(n10)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2); § 19.80.

(n11)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n12)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2); Davis v. USX Corp., 819 F.2d 1270, 1273 (4th Cir. 1987) (requires plaintiff to move for leave to dismiss by order of court).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
A. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS IN GENERAL

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.22

§ 19.22 Voluntary Dismissal Must Terminate Action Against At Least One Partyn*

[1] Plaintiff Must Dismiss All Claims Against Defendant

The voluntary dismissal rule refers to dismissal of an "action" rather than a "claim." n1 Consequently, to use the voluntary dismissal procedure, a party must dismiss all of that party's claims against at least one defending party. n2 Even though the rule does not refer to dismissal of a "defendant," courts have held that to terminate an action, at least one defending party must be entirely dismissed. n3 This interpretation is based on the fact that the language of the rule only refers to dismssal of an action, and if the drafters intended to authorize the involuntary dismissal of individual claims instead of the entire action, they could have clearly stated the rule in that language. n4 Another reason for the principle is the general policy of the federal rules to avoid piecemeal dismissals. n5

Consequently, if a claimant wants to dismiss less than all claims against a defendant, the plaintiff should not file a Rule 41(a) motion for voluntary dismissal, but shouldabandon the claim by amendment of the complaint under Rule 15(a). n6 However, if some of the claims against a defendant have previously been dismissed by court order, the plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss all of the remaining claims because the claims remaining after a partial dismissal are deemed to comprise the entire "action" as against that one defendant for Rule 41(a)(1) purposes. n7

[2] Dismissal of Fewer Than All Claims By Amendment

Because the courts have held that a plaintiff or other party that has filed claims for relief may not dismiss under Rule 41(a) fewer than all claims against any defendant, n1 the claimant wishing to dismiss fewer than all claims must amend its complaint or other pleading under Rule 15(a). n2 There are several differences between the rules that become significant under some circumstances. First, in the early stages of the litigation, Rule 15(a) amendment as of right is available longer than dismissal as of right. Entitlement to amendment as of right is cut off only by an answer, n3 while right to a unilateral dismissal by the filing of a notice without leave of court is extinguished by the service of either a summary judgment motion or an answer. n4 Thus, a claim may be deleted by amendment after service of a motion for summary judgment, while voluntary dismissal could not be taken after such a motion. n5

In later stages of an action, the consequences of a purported voluntary dismissal of a claim may differ when the deletion is deemed an amendment rather than a dismissal. For example, appellate jurisdiction may be lost when the claims dismissed form the basis for federal jurisdiction as the resulting "amended pleading" which omits the claim will no longer arise under federal law. n6

Otherwise, courts have noted that the rules have the same effect: both rules are addressed to the discretion of the court when leave is required, require that leave be granted freely unless the defendant is prejudiced, and permit the court to deny leave or impose curative conditions if leave is granted. Also, both rules leave the parties in the same legal position with respect to the claims as if they had never been filed; and the withdrawal of the action is without prejudice. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Hells Canyon Pres. Council v. United States Forest Serv., 403 F.3d 683, 688 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 3. DIRECTV, Inc. v. Benson, 333 F. Supp. 2d 440, 443 (M.D.N.C. 2004) (noting that to dismiss action, claimant need not dismiss all of named defending parties).

(n5)Footnote 4. New W. Urban Renewal Co. v. Viacom, Inc., 230 F. Supp. 2d 568, 571 (D.N.J. 2002) (citing Moore's Federal Practice for authority that rule applies to dismissals of entire actions and not to individual claims).

(n6)Footnote 5. Hells Canyon Pres. Council v. United States Forest Serv., 403 F.3d 683, 687-688 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n7)Footnote 6. See [2], below; Hells Canyon Pres. Council v. United States Forest Serv., 403 F.3d 683, 687-688 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Wilson-Cook Medical, Inc. v. Wilson, 942 F.2d 247, 251 (4th Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 1. See [1], above.

(n10)Footnote 2. Hells Canyon Pres. Council v. United States Forest Serv., 403 F.3d 683, 687-688 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n11)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n12)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n13)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a).

(n14)Footnote 6. Gronholz v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 836 F.2d 515, 518 (Fed. Cir. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 7. Jet, Inc. v. Sewage Aeration Sys., 223 F.3d 1360, 1364-1365 (Fed. Cir. 2000) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
A. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS IN GENERAL

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.23

§ 19.23 Rule Permits Dismissal of Fewer Than All Defending Parties or Claiming Partiesn*

[1] General Rule

A claimant may take a voluntary dismissal against fewer than all defending parties in an action, n1 provided that when a voluntary dismissal is taken against a defendant all claims against that defendant are dismissed. n2 In other words, the term "action" does not mean the entire controversy (all claims against all parties pending before the district court), rather, only the totality of claims against any single defendant. n3 When a dismissal of an action is sought with respect to fewer than all defendants, all defendants are entitled to notice, and the request for dismissal should be made by motion served on all parties who have appeared. n4

Under the same rationale authorizing the dismissal of fewer than all defending parties, courts have held that Rule 41(a) permits fewer than all plaintiffs to withdraw from an action. n5 The same requirements also apply. Thus, the notice of dismissal of two, but less than all plaintiffs, was effective to dismiss the action as to the two plaintiffs, because each plaintiff in the diversity action had separate and distinct claims and because the defendants had filed neither answers nor motions for summary judgment. n6

[2] Voluntary Dismissal of Nondiverse Parties

As noted above, n1 Rule 41(a) permits dismissal of less than all of the opposition parties. Consequently, a dispensable nondiverse party may be voluntarily dismissed to preserve a court's diversity jurisdiction. n2 A party could achieve the same effect by dropping a party under Rule 21 n3 or by amending the complaint to delete the nondiverse party under Rule 15(a) n4 Courts considering the question have noted that which one ofthese procedural rules is used to preserve jurisdiction is generally immaterial. n5

[3] Voluntary Dismissal of Misjoined Parties Permissible

The general rule is that a party may take a voluntary dismissal to eliminate misjoined parties. Although Rule 21 specifically governs the dropping of misjoined parties, its provisions do not necessarily preclude like dismissals under Rule 41 or Rule 15(a). n1 However Rule 41(a) differs from Rule 21 in that early in the litigation, a voluntary dismissal may be effected under Rule 41(a) without leave of court by notice or stipulation. n2 On the other hand, Rule 21 always requires a court order to drop a party. n3 Thus, because either rule may be employed to eliminate a party, a plaintiff may avoid the necessity of a motion by proceeding under Rule 41(a) when available early in the litigation. On the other hand, because voluntary dismissal is no longer available as of right after service of a summary judgment motion, a plaintiff still desiring to dismiss another party unilaterally at that point may resort to amendment under Rule 15(a), which is available until the service of an answer. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Letherer v. Alger Group, L.L.C., 328 F.3d 262, 266 (6th Cir. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n3)Footnote 2. See § 19.22[1].

(n4)Footnote 3. Hells Canyon Pres. Council v. United States Forest Serv., 403 F.3d 683, 687 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Slotkin v. Brookdale Hospital Center, 377 F. Supp. 275, 279 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Koefoot v. American College of Surgeons, 652 F. Supp. 882, 895 (N.D. Ill. 1986) (granting motion of two of several antitrust plaintiffs to withdraw on eve of trial).

(n7)Footnote 6. Miller v. Stewart, 43 F.R.D. 409, 412-413 (E.D. Ill. 1967) (court denied motion to vacate notice of dismissal filed by only two of five plaintiffs).

(n8)Footnote 1. See [1], above.

(n9)Footnote 2. Bumberger v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 952 F.2d 764, 766-767 (3d Cir. 1991) (noting that plaintiff could voluntarily dismiss defendant's insurer under Rule 41(a) to preserve diversity jurisdiction if on remand district found insurer was dispensable party).

(n10)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n12)Footnote 5. Brown v. Texas & Pac. R.R. Co., 392 F. Supp. 1120, 1123 (W.D. La. 1975) .

(n13)Footnote 1. Allen v. Indeck Corinth L.P., 161 F.R.D. 233, 235 (N.D.N.Y. 1995) (court allowed voluntary dismissal because prejudice would not result to other party).

(n14)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n15)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n16)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
A. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS IN GENERAL

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.24

§ 19.24 Determination Whether Court Order Requiredn*

[1] Two Methods for Voluntary Dismissal Without Court Order

A plaintiff may use two methods to voluntarily dismiss an action without filing a motion or obtaining an order of the court. First, the plaintiff may unilaterally dismiss an action by filing a notice of dismissal with the district court before the person defending the claim files an answer or a motion for summary judgment. n1 Second, the plaintiff may file a stipulation signed by all the parties at any time. n2 These two methods are the exclusive means of terminating an action as of right, in other words, without approval or court order. n3

If the claiming party takes any other unilateral action, the action may not be effective as a dismissal, even if it indicates an intent to abandon the litigation or a particular claim. n4 Thus, a plaintiff who has attempted to voluntarily dismiss all claims and withdraw as a party without following the statutory procedures may later be bound by the res judicata effect of a judgment in the action. n5 Similarly, a plaintiff who has requested dismissal of a claim without complying with Rule 41 may not object to the admission of evidence relevant to that claim at trial. n6 Conversely, a defendant may not assert that plaintiff's conduct effected a dismissal when neither a notice of dismissal nor a stipulation has been filed. n7

[2] Exceptions to Unilateral Right to Voluntarily Dismiss

[a] Court Approval Required in Certain Types of Cases

A plaintiff's right to voluntarily dismiss by notice or stipulation is normally absolute and unconditional when the defending party has not yet served an answer or a summary judgment motion. n1 However, Rule 41(a)(1) provides that such dismissals by notice or stipulation are subject to Rules 23(e), 23.1(c), and 23.2 (class actions), n2 Rule 66 (actions involving receivers), n3 and any statute of the United States. n4 When Rule 41(a)(1) is read together with these rules and statutes, the claims specified in these rules or statutes may not be dismissed or settled at any time without approval of the court. n5

[b] Class Actions

Unlike an ordinary claim which may be voluntarily dismissed by mere notice to the court or by stipulation, a class claim may ordinanly not be dismissed or settled withoutcourt approval. n6 In particular, once a class action claim has been filed in the district court, even proposed class actions not yet certified by the court must have court approval for settlement. n7 Additionally, court approval is required even in cases where it is clear that the dismissal will not adversely affect the rights of absent class members. n8

Despite the need for a court order to dismiss a class action, it has been held that the standard for court-ordered dismissals under Rule 41(a)(2) is not mandatory. When the motion is made prior to the service of an answer or motion for summary judgment, the motion is still treated as one under 41(a)(1), subject only to the Rule 23(e) inquiry concerning whether the plaintiff class would be prejudiced. n9 Therefore, the court may not consider, as it must under Rule 41(a)(2), whether the defendant would be prejudiced by the dismissal, and may not impose conditions on behalf of the defendants; n10 rather, the court may only impose conditions on behalf of the plaintiff class. n11 After an answer or motion for summary judgment has been served, however, the court may consider both the prejudice to the defendants under Rule 41(a)(2) and the prejudice to the plaintiff class under Rule 23(e). n12

The Federal Rules also limit the right to dismiss two types of class actions not governed by Rule 23. Under Rule 23.1, a shareholders' derivative action must not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court. n13 Similarly, under Rule 23.2, an action brought by or against the members of an unincorporated association must not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court. n14

[c] Actions Involving Receivers

Although a plaintiff's right to a voluntary dismissal by notice or stipulation is ordinarily unconditional, under Rule 41(a)(1), the dismissal procedures are subject to the provisions of Rule 66. n15 Consequently, in actions in which a receiver has been appointed, the action may not be dismissed except by order of the court. n16 Thus, in one case, the United States as the plaintiff and the defendant were not allowed to voluntarily dismiss a foreclosure action without approval of the court because a receiver involved did not agree or consent to the proposed settlement and Rule 66 required court approval prior to dismissal of any aspect of the litigation. n17

[d] Statutes Controlling Dismissal

Various statutes in the United States Code limit a plaintiff's right to voluntarily dismiss certain types of actions, and Rule 41(a)(1) provides that dismissals by notice or stipulation are subject to such statutes. Consequently, if a statute specifies that dismissal of an action requires court approval, it means that court approval is necessary even before the defending party files an answer or motion for summary judgment. For example, the Clayton Act n18 provides that actions under section 15c(a)(1), which permits state attorneys general to prosecute antitrust actions on behalf of state residents, must not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court. n19

The False Claims Act, n20 provides that a civil "qui tam" action brought by a private person on behalf of the United States may not be dismissed unless the court and the Attorney General give written consent to the dismissal and their reasons for consenting to the dismissal. n21 Also, when the government moves for a voluntary dismissal, the original plaintiff is entitled to notice and a hearing. n22 It has been held, however, that the consent of the Attorney General is required only where a plaintiff seeks voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1), and not where the court orders an involuntary dismissal. n23

In another example, the Immigration and Nationality Act provides that no suit or proceeding for a violation of the Act may be settled, compromised, or discontinued without the consent of the court and any such settlement, compromise, or discontinuance shall be entered of record with the reasons therefor. n24

[3] Voluntary Dismissal With Court Order

A party making a claim may request a voluntary dismissal by court order n0.1 when a voluntary dismissal is no longer available as of right because the defending party has already filed an answer or motion for summary judgment, n1 and the party making theclaim cannot obtain consent to a stipulated dismissal. n2 The purpose of a Rule 41(a)(2) voluntary dismissal is to permit the plaintiff to take a voluntary nonsuit and start over, provided that the defending party is not prejudiced. n3 The court may avoid prejudice to the defendant, even though the voluntary dismissal is requested later in the case than a dismissal as of right by exercising its discretion to make three determinations: whether or not to grant the dismissal; if so, whether to grant the dismissal with or without prejudice; and what conditions, if any, should be imposed on the dismissal. n4 For a complete discussion of a voluntary dismissal granted by court order, see § 19.40 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.30 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i); see § 19.40 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii); see § 19.60 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 3. Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 51-52 (4th Cir. 1995) (under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, these are only two ways in which plaintiff may dismiss an action without consent of court).

(n5)Footnote 4. Oglala Sioux Tribe of Pine Ridge Indian Reservation v. Homestake Mining Co., 722 F.2d 1407, 1413 (8th Cir. 1983) (plaintiff's nonrenewal of attorney's contract and passage of resolution to pursue constitutional remedies to recover land instead of money damages against United States was unilateral action insufficient to constitute withdrawal from proceedings, when plaintiff admittedly failed to follow either method for voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)).

(n6)Footnote 5. Oglala Sioux Tribe of Pine Ridge Indian Reservation v. Homestake Mining Co., 722 F.2d 1407, 1413-1414 (1983) (tribe bound by $100 million judgment in prior action and precluded from suing to recover lands).

(n7)Footnote 6. Paturzo v. Home Life Ins. Co., 503 F.2d 333, 336 (4th Cir. 1974) (when plaintiff's attempt to voluntarily dismiss without prejudice claim for dividend was denied, plaintiff was required either to present evidence or suffer consequences of failure to do so; because plaintiff adduced no evidence to support dividend claim court appropriately decided claim against plaintiff).

(n8)Footnote 7. G. A. Thompson & Co. v. Partridge, 636 F.2d 945, 951-952 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n9)Footnote 1. American Soccer Co. v. Score First Enters., 187 F.3d 1108, 1110 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A); see [b], below.

(n11)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A); see [c], below.

(n12)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A); see [d], below.

(n13)Footnote 5. Baker v. America's Mortgage Servicing, Inc., 58 F.3d 321, 324 (7th Cir. 1995) (public interest in class actions requires court approval for dismissal); Janus Films, Inc. v. Miller, 801 F.2d 578, 582 (2d Cir. 1986) (with some stipulated dismissals, such as class actions, court approval is required, and judge must determine whether the settlement is fair, adequate, and reasonable).

(n14)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e), 23.1(c), 23.2; Austin v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Corrections, 876 F. Supp. 1437, 1455 (E.D. Pa. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 7. Baker v. America's Mortgage Servicing, Inc., 58 F.3d 321, 324 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n16)Footnote 8. Austin v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Corrections, 876 F. Supp. 1437, 1455 (E.D. Pa. 1995) (public interest in class actions requires court approval for dismissal).

(n17)Footnote 9. In re Phillips Petroleum Sec. Litigation, 109 F.R.D. 602, 605 (D. Del. 1986) (dismissal under 41(a)(2) is at discretion of court).

(n18)Footnote 10. Clarkson Gen. Hosp., Ltd. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 93 F.R.D. 497, 499-502 (E.D. Pa. 1982) .

(n19)Footnote 11. In re Phillips Petroleum Sec. Litigation, 109 F.R.D. 602, 605-607 (D. Del. 1986) .

(n20)Footnote 12. Wimber v. Department of Social & Rehabilitation Servs., 156 F.R.D. 259, 260 (D. Kan. 1994) .

(n21)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1.

(n22)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).

(n23)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 66.

(n24)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 66.

(n25)Footnote 17. United States v. Mansion House Center North, 95 F.R.D. 515, 517 (E.D. Mo. 1982) .

(n26)Footnote 18. 15 U.S.C. § 15c et seq.

(n27)Footnote 19. 15 U.S.C. § 15c(c).

(n28)Footnote 20. 31 U.S.C. § 3729 et seq.

(n29)Footnote 21. 31 U.S.C. § 3729 et seq.

(n30)Footnote 22. United States v. TRW, Inc., 4 F.3d 417, 425 (6th Cir. 1993) .

(n31)Footnote 23. Minotti v. Lensink, 895 F.2d 100, 102-103 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n32)Footnote 24. 8 U.S.C. § 1329.

(n33)Footnote 0.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n34)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n35)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n36)Footnote 3. Templeton v. Nedlloyd Lines, 901 F.2d 1273, 1274 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n37)Footnote 4. Spencer v. Moore Business Forms, Inc., 87 F.R.D. 118, 119 (N.D. Ga.. 1980) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
A. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS IN GENERAL

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 19.25through 19.39

[Reserved]

§§ 19.25[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
B. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY FILING OF NOTICE

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.40

§ 19.40 Nature of Voluntary Dismissaln*

[1] Absolute Right to Dismiss

A plaintiff or other claimant may dismiss an action by filing a notice of dismissal at any time before the adverse defending party serves an answer or a motion for summary judgment. n1 Rule 41(a)(1) provides for "automatic dismissal" without court order, provided that the plaintiff files a notice of voluntary dismissal before the defendant has either answered or moved for summary judgment. n2 The purpose of allowing unilateral voluntary dismissal by notice is to provide the plaintiff or other claimant with the right to reconsider and dismiss an action for whatever reason but only when the dismissal occurs at a sufficiently early stage of the litigation so that the defendant is not harmed by making useless trial preparation. n3 Voluntary dismissal by notice provides the exclusive method by which a plaintiff may dismiss an action without the consent of the court or any other party. Although the rule may not be invoked by a defendant to dismiss the plaintiff's action, it is available to defendants who wish to dismiss their own claims through Rule 41(c). n4

Because it is assumed that it takes place at a time that the defending party will not be harmed, courts have stated that a plaintiff's right to file a notice of dismissal before the service of an answer or motion for summary judgment is absolute n5 and unconditional. n6 Thus, the plaintiff's motive for filing the notice is irrelevant. n7 Furthermore, the court may not prohibit the filing of a timely notice of dismissal n8 or vacate a timely and properly filed notice. n9

[2] Court May Not Impose Conditions on Dismissal by Notice

The unconditional nature of the voluntary dismissal by notice is based on the fact that, unlike Rule 41(a)(2), Rule 41(a)(1) does not contain a provision authorizing the imposition of terms and conditions on a dismissal. Thus, the trial court lacks power to impose any conditions on a dismissal made by notice. n1 For example, the court may not direct that the dismissal be with prejudice; n2 even if the prejudice would extend only to refiling in the same circuit. n3 Furthermore, a court may not require the payment of attorney's fees or costs as a condition of dismissal. n4 However, even if the court may not impose conditions on the actual dismissal by notice, the court may prohibit the refiling of the dismissed complaint if it is frivolous within the meaning of Rule 11. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n3)Footnote 2. *Medina v. New York State Dep't of Corr. Servs., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21485, at 7 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Swedberg v. Marotzke, 339 F.3d 1139, 1142 (9th Cir. 2003) ; In re Piper Aircraft Distrib. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 551 F.2d 213, 220 (8th Cir. 1977) (rule allows unilateral dismissal only up to point at which resources of court and defendant are committed to extent that preclusive consequences must be imposed for dismissal).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c); see also Victory Beauty Supply, Inc. v. La Maur, Inc., 98 F.R.D. 306, 307-308 (N.D. Ill. 1983) (defendant was required to seek voluntary dismissal by court order under Rule 41(a)(2) because responsive pleading had already been filed).

(n6)Footnote 5. Janssen v. Harris, 321 F.3d 998, 1001-1001 (10th Cir. 2003) ; Carter v. United States, 547 F.2d 258, 259 (5th Cir. 1977) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Janssen v. Harris, 321 F.3d 998, 1001 (10th Cir. 2003) ; see Great Rivers Cooperative of Southeastern Iowa v. Farmland Industries, Inc., 198 F.3d 685, 689 (8th Cir. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Merit Ins. Co. v. Leatherby Ins. Co., 581 F.2d 137, 142-143 (7th Cir. 1978) (stating that courts have allowed dismissals even when there is indication that plaintiffs are attempting to avoid litigation in particular forum).

(n9)Footnote 8. Williams v. Ezell, 531 F.2d 1261, 1263 (5th Cir. 1976) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Marex Titanic, Inc. v. Wrecked & Abandoned Vessel, 2 F.3d 544, 545 (4th Cir. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 1. Netwig v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 375 F.3d 1009, 1010 (10th Cir. 2004) (court loses jurisdiction at time notice of dismissal is filed and may not reinstate dismissed action); Janssen v. Harris, 321 F.3d 998, 1001 (10th Cir. 2003) (at time valid notice of dismissal is filed, district court loses jurisdiction over dismissed claims and may not issue further orders pertaining to claims); American Soccer Co. v. Score First Enters., 187 F.3d 1108, 1110 (9th Cir. 1999) (plaintiff has absolute right to voluntarily dismiss action if defending party has not yet served answer or summary judgment motion, and this absolute right leaves no room for court to take any action).

(n12)Footnote 2. Brackett v. State Highways & Transp. Commission of Mo., 163 F.R.D. 305, 306-307 (W.D. Mo. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Scam Instrument Corp. v. Control Data Corp., 458 F.2d 885, 886-887 (7th Cir. 1972) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Williams v. Ezell, 531 F.2d 1261, 1264 (5th Cir. 1976) (reversing grant of motion for attorney's fees made after improper denial of pre-answer motion for voluntary dismissal).

(n15)Footnote 5. See Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 396-398, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
B. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY FILING OF NOTICE

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.41

§ 19.41 Format Requirements of Noticen*

The voluntary dismissal notice must meet all of the requirements listed below to constitute proper notice under the rule:

1. Written notice. The party who filed the claim for relief must "file" a voluntary dismissal notice for the claim; n1 therefore the person must use a written document. Oral notice or other conduct indicating a request for voluntary dismissal is not sufficient. n2

2. Indication of intent to dismiss. Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i) does not prescribe the precise label or form of a notice of voluntary dismissal. n2.1 The fact that the claimant does not label the document a "notice of dismissal" is generally harmless if the intent is clear, n2.2 and the plaintiff does not request any additional action by the court. n3 Therefore, if a claimant designates the notice as a "motion to dismiss" or a "request for dismissal" it is still effective as notice. n4 Furthermore, the failure to make specific reference to Rule 41(a)(1)(i) in the notice is not a defect that makes the notice ineffective. n5

3. Notice may not contain conditions. The plaintiff may not include any conditions in the notice of dismissal. The rule was intended to provide a speedy, automatic method of terminating an action, and a conditional notice of dismissal would require the clerk of the court to perform more than the ministerial act of closing the file, in that the clerk would have to determine whether the condition was met. n6 It is not advisable to include the reasons for the dismissal in the text of the notice or in an accompanying affidavit; however, unless it actually imposes a condition, it is still effective as a notice. n7

4. Statement regarding prejudice. Although a notice of dismissal may not contain conditions, as specified in item 3, above, the plaintiff may provide in the notice that the dismissal is with prejudice, n8 because Rule 41(a)(1)(B) provides that a dismissal by notice is presumptively without prejudice, n8.1 and that the claimant may provide for the contrary effect by otherwise stating it in the notice of dismissal. n9

5. Statement regarding persons who are objects of dismissal. The plaintiff should specify which defendants are the objects of the dismissal, n10 if it is effective against fewer than all defendants. n11 A partial notice of dismissal is permitted because an "action" may be dismissed by eliminating all of the claims against a single defendant, without dismissing all claims against all defendants. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. G. A. Thompson & Co., Inc. v. Partridge, 636 F.2d 945, 951-952 (5th Cir. 1981) (plaintiff's statement at unrecorded conference on first day of trial that it would only pursue one claim did not constitute voluntary dismissal of other claims because plaintiff did not follow procedures of Rule 41(a)(1)).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. See Logan v. Burgers Ozark Country Cured Hams, Inc., 263 F.3d 447, 453 (5th Cir. 2001) (request to court for dismissal of action is more important than label of request).

(n5)Footnote 2.2. See Commercial Space Mgmt. Co. v. Boeing Co., 193 F.3d 1074, 1080, (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Wilson & Co. v. Fremont Cake & Meal Co., 83 F. Supp. 900, 903 (D. Neb. 1949) (document was sufficient when it was captioned "Motion," stated that it was plaintiff's "notice of dismissal of the above entitled action," and did not invite, assume, or require any action by court).

(n7)Footnote 4. Matthews v. Gaither, 902 F.2d 877, 880 (11th Cir. 1990) (fact that a notice of dismissal styled as motion to dismiss rather than notice of dismissal is without consequence).

(n8)Footnote 5. Leroux v. Lomas & Nettleton Co., 626 F. Supp. 962, 966 (D. Mass. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Hyde Constr. Co. v. Koehring Co., 388 F.2d 501, 507 (10th Cir. 1968) , cert. denied, 391 U.S. 905 (1968) .

(n10)Footnote 7. Universidad Central del Caribe, Inc. v. Liaison Comm. on Medical Educ., 760 F.2d 14, 19 (1st Cir. 1985) .

(n11)Footnote 8. Joyner v. Triple Check Fin. Serv., 782 F. Supp. 364, 369 (W.D. Tenn. 1991) .

(n12)Footnote 8.1. See Netwig v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 375 F.3d 1009, 1010 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n13)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n14)Footnote 10. James v. Powell, 765 F. Supp. 314, 315 (E.D. Va. 1991) (confusion as to defendant).

(n15)Footnote 11. Winterland Concessions Co. v. Smith, 706 F.2d 793, 796 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n16)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a); Reetz v. Jackson, 176 F.R.D. 412, 413 (D.D.C. 1997) ; see § 19.23[1].

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
B. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY FILING OF NOTICE

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.42

§ 19.42 Procedure for Dismissal by Noticen*

[1] Filing of Notice With Court

The express terms of Rule 41(a)(1), require the "filing" of the notice of dismissal by the claimant n0.01, and notice becomes immediately effective on filing with the court. n0.1 Service alone is insufficient to effect a dismissal. n1 In fact, even though Rule 5(a) generally requires that every written notice be served on all of the parties to the action, service of the notice of dismissal on the adverse party is not required to make it effective--because the rule permits dismissal as of right, it requires only notice to the court, not a motion. n2

Even though the rule requires that a notice be filed, most courts hold that if a claimant inadvertently files a "motion" it will nevertheless be considered a notice and effective when filed. n3 Therefore, as long as the intent for voluntary notice is clear, the court should not negate, or attach conditions to, the dismissal. n4 It has also been held that the plaintiff may properly resort to a motion when prior efforts to file a notice were refused by the clerk of the court. n5 Other courts, which more strictly construe the rule, have held that a plaintiff who specifically invokes the court's discretion by making a motion under Rule 41(a)(2) has technically waived the otherwise absolute right to dismiss by mere notice and thus subjects itself to conditions on dismissal. n6

[2] Time for Filing Notice

[a] Timely Filing Requirements

A party that wants to dismiss claims must file a notice of voluntary dismissal at any time before the service of an answer or motion for summary judgment. n1 Courts have interpreted this provision literally; therefore, on a challenge to a notice of dismissal, they have generally adopted a test that limits the inquiry to the narrow question of whether an answer or motion for summary judgment has been served. n2 Absent service of the answer or summary judgment motion, the courts have generally rejected challenges to dismissal by notice when the challenge is made on the grounds that the merits of the action have been addressed through the procedural equivalent of an answer or summary judgment motion, n2.1 or that the action has progressed to an advanced stage and caused the defending party significant expense. n3

A voluntary dismissal becomes effective immediately on filing of the notice with the clerk of the court. n4 If the clerk of the court is unable or refuses to accept the notice for filing, filing is considered effective at the time the clerk should have accepted tender of the instrument. n5 If a motion is mistakenly employed in place of a notice, the timeliness of the dismissal is considered effective at the time of the filing, rather than the service, of the motion. n6

[b] Defendant's Service That Cuts Off Claimant's Absolute Right to Dismissal

[i] Service on All Parties Required

The claimant may file a voluntary notice of dismissal at any time before the service of an answer or motion for summary judgment. n7 Consequently, the defendant's mere filing of responsive papers with the court will not cancel the plaintiff's right to dismiss. n8 Similarly, a defendant's in-court, oral denial of the allegations of the complaint will not substitute for the service of an answer. n9 Under Rule 5(b), service of an answer or other pleading is deemed complete on hand delivery, mailing, or electronic transmission; n10 therefore, if the plaintiff files a notice of dismissal after the delivery, mailing, or transmission, the notice will be ineffective. However, if an answer is mailed on the same day that the notice of dismissal is filed, the dismissal will be effective unless the defendant can establish that the answer was placed in a mailbox before the time stamped on the notice on filing. n11

Once a defendant has responded to the original complaint with an answer or motion for summary judgment, the plaintiff may not revive the right to dismiss under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i) by filing an amended complaint containing the same or substantially similar claims. n12 The mere amendment of the complaint, however, will not terminate the plaintiff's right to a voluntary dismissal if the defendant has not served an answer or a motion for summary judgment in response to either the original or amended pleading. n13

[ii] Service Required by Defendants Who Are Object of Dismissal

A claimant may want to dismiss the action with respect to fewer than all defendants, n14 and in such a case, the service of an answer or motion for summary judgment by some defendants will not defeat the plaintiff's right to dismiss against any of the non-answering or non-moving defendants. n15 The notice will be effective asagainst a non-answering defendant, even if the same notice improperly names other defendants who have answered or moved for summary judgment. n16

[c] Right to Dismiss Terminated Only by Answer or Motion for Summary Judgment

[i] Rule Strictly Followed

Most courts adhere to a strict bright line test that allows the filing of a notice of voluntary dismissal provided that neither an answer nor a summary judgment motion has been served. n17 This is true even though the merits of an action may have been reached, or claims resolved, through motions, pleadings and procedural devices other than an answer or a motion for summary judgment. Consequently, arguments that other motions or proceedings constitute the "equivalent" of an answer or a motion for summary judgment have been generally unsuccessful. n18 Courts have reached this conclusion by relying on the plain language of the statute and reasoning that the purpose of Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i) would be defeated if they were required to make case-by-case determinations whether the action had reached a sufficiently advanced stage n19 or whether the defendant had been put to extensive time and expense defending the action. n20 Courts have also relied on the fact that the rule was amended in 1946 to give the service of a summary judgment motion the same preclusive effect as an answer but failed to extend that power to any other motion. n21

[ii] Right to Dismiss Questioned in Cases of Lack of Jurisdiction and Bad Faith

Although, technically, a plaintiff's right to file a notice of dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i) is absolute, there are courts that have qualified that right in two circumstances. First, some courts have held that a court may not permit a voluntary dismissal until the court determines that it has subject matter jurisdiction over the claim and party. n21.1 Second, some courts have indicated that a plaintiff's right to voluntarily dismiss an action may be qualified if it is based on a bad faith attempt to manipulate jurisdiction. The court noted that a trial court should have the right to curb a plaintiff's right of voluntary dismissal when used as a tactical tool to frustrate removal in such a way that prejudices a defendant's statutory right to choose a forum. n21.2

[iii] Requirement for Summary Judgment Motion

A plaintiff's absolute right to a voluntary dismissal is cut off when a defending party files a motion for summary judgment. n22 This rule is strictly followed, and the court will not accept "equivalents" for summary judgment, except when the defending party makes a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and the court converts the claim to one for summary judgment. In that case, the plaintiff's right to a voluntary dismissal is not cut off until the court has actually ordered the conversion to a motion for summary judgment. n23 Furthermore, the motion must be accompanied by affidavits or other materials which raise facts outside the pleadings. Affidavits which merely attack the legal sufficiency of the complaint, without introducing extrinsic facts, will not transform the motion into one for summary judgment for Rule 41 purposes. n24

Because rule 41(a)(1) is strictly construed, the right to voluntarily dismiss the action is terminated only by the filing of an answer or a motion for summary judgment, and not by any other procedural service, including the defendant's service of a cross claim n25 or a motion to dismiss under Rule 12. n26

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 0.01. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n3)Footnote 0.1. Netwig v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 375 F.3d 1009, 1010 (10th Cir. 2004) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n4)Footnote 1. Wilson v. San Jose, 111 F.3d 688, 692 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 2. Safeguard Business Sys., Inc. v. Hoeffel, 907 F.2d 861, 863 (8th Cir. 1990) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n6)Footnote 3. Logan v. Burgers Ozark Country Cured Hams, Inc., 263 F.3d 447, 453 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 4. Williams v. Ezell, 531 F.2d 1261, 1263-1264 (5th Cir. 1976) .

(n8)Footnote 5. Aero-Colours, Inc. v. Propst, 833 F.2d 51, 52 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Parker v. Freightliner Corp., 940 F.2d 1019, 1022-1023 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n11)Footnote 2. Marex Titanic, Inc. v. Wrecked & Abandoned Vessel, 2 F.3d 544, 546 (4th Cir. 1993) (giving the rule its "plain meaning").

(n12)Footnote 2.1. See [c], below.

(n13)Footnote 3. D.C. Elecs., Inc. v. Nartron Corp., 511 F.2d 294, 298 (6th Cir. 1975) (court's only function on challenge to dismissal is whether answer or motion for summary judgment has in fact been served prior to filing of notice of dismissal).

(n14)Footnote 4. Netwig v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 375 F.3d 1009, 1010 (10th Cir. 2004) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n15)Footnote 5. Aero-Colours, Inc. v. Propst, 833 F.2d 51, 52 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n16)Footnote 6. Roddy v. Dendy, 141 F.R.D. 261, 262 (S.D. Miss. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i); Exxon Corp. v. Maryland Casualty Co., 599 F.2d 659, 662 (5th Cir. 1979) (motion for partial summary judgment terminates plaintiff's right to file notice of dismissal just as effectively as summary judgment motion directed at entire complaint).

(n18)Footnote 8. Lockary v. Kayfetz, 917 F.2d 1150, 1157 (9th Cir. 1992) (appellate court reversed district court's denial of motions for voluntary dismissals when defendant filed but did not serve answer on all plaintiffs).

(n19)Footnote 9. Winterland Concessions Co. v. Smith, 706 F.2d 793, 795 (7th Cir. 1983) (requiring that notice be filed).

(n20)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A)-(F).

(n21)Footnote 11. Keal v. Monarch Life Ins. Co., 126 F.R.D. 567, 568 (D. Kan. 1989) (defendant must show proof of actual service).

(n22)Footnote 12. Tedeschi v. Barney, 95 F.R.D. 182, 183 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) .

(n23)Footnote 13. In re Piper Aircraft Distrib. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 551 F.2d 213, 219-220 (8th Cir. 1977) .

(n24)Footnote 14. See § 19.23.

(n25)Footnote 15. Plains Growers, Inc. by Florists' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ickes-Braun Glasshouses, Inc., 474 F.2d 250, 254 (5th Cir. 1973) ; Doran v. McGinnis, 158 F.R.D. 383, 389 (E.D. Mich. 1994) ; Aggregates (Carolina), Inc.v. Kruse, 134 F.R.D. 23, 25 (D.P.R. 1991) (may still dismiss non-answering parties).

(n26)Footnote 16. Plains Growers, Inc. by Florists' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ickes--Braun Glasshouses, Inc., 474 F.2d 250, 254 (5th Cir. 1973) .

(n27)Footnote 17. Johnson Chem. Co., Inc. v. Home Care Prods., Inc., 823 F.2d 28, 30 (2d Cir. 1987) ; Jorgensen v. Prudential Ins. Co., 852 F. Supp. 255, 259 (D.N.J. 1994) .

(n28)Footnote 18. Santiago v. Victim Servs. Agency of the Metro. Assistance Corp., 753 F.2d 219, 221 (2d Cir. 1985) (court declined to treat motion for preliminary injunction, where a hearing has been held and issue has been joined, as equivalent of answer or motion for summary judgment under Rule 41).

(n29)Footnote 19. Aamot v. Kassel, 1 F.3d 441, 444 (6th Cir. 1993) .

(n30)Footnote 20. Exxon Corp. v. Maryland Casualty Co., 599 F.2d 659, 662 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n31)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a), Committee Note to 1946 Amendments.

(n32)Footnote 21.1. Murray v. Conseco, Inc., 467 F.3d 602, 604-605 (7th Cir. 2006) ; University of S. Alabama v. American Tobacco Co., 168 F.3d 405, 409 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n33)Footnote 21.2. Nogueras-Cartagena v. Rossello-Gonzalez, 182 F.R.D. 380, 386 (D.P.R. 1998) .

(n34)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(i).

(n35)Footnote 23. Swedberg v. Marotzke, 339 F.3d 1139, 1146 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n36)Footnote 24. Finley Lines Joint Protective Bd. Unit 200 v. Norfolk S. Corp., 109 F.3d 993, 996 (4th Cir. 1997) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see Berthold Types Ltd. v. Adobe Sys. Inc., 242 F.3d 772, 776 (7th Cir. 2001) (court rejected defendant's argument that its motion to dismiss was actually summary judgment motion because motion referred to and attached documents outside complaint; court held that plaintiff would not be precluded from filing notice of dismissal until court actually considered such documentation).

(n37)Footnote 25. See Ecuadorian Gulf Oil Co. v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 73 F.R.D. 99, 100 (C.D. Cal. 1976) .

(n38)Footnote 26. See Arndt v. UBS AG, 342 F. Supp. 2d 132, 136 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
B. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY FILING OF NOTICE

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.43

§ 19.43 Effect of Filing Notice of Voluntary Dismissaln*

[1] Action is Immediately Terminated

When a claimant files a notice of dismissal, n1 the filing immediately terminates the action. n2 The notice is self-executing, which means that it automatically terminates the action n2.1 with no need for a further order, action or approval of the court. n2.2

Once a notice of dismissal is filed, the case is closed and the plaintiff may not unilaterally withdraw or amend the notice. n3 The effect of the dismissal is "to put the claimant and the party defending the claim in a legal position as if the plaintiff had never commenced the action." n4 Neither the parties nor the court may reinstate the case. Some courts hold that voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1)(i) does not constitute a "proceeding" within the meaning of Rule 60(b) and consequently, a party may not obtain court relief from a voluntary dismissal even if it was obtained by mistake or excusable neglect. n4.1 On the other hand, some courts have held that a claimant may move the court to vacate a dismissal under Rule 60(b) for mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, or on a showing of other good cause. n4.2 For example, a plaintiff may ask that the court vacate a notice that erroneously provided that the dismissal was with prejudice instead of without prejudice. n5

[2] Termination Without Prejudice Unless Otherwise Specified

Unless the notice of voluntary dismissal states otherwise, the dismissal is without prejudice to the commencement of another action based on the same claim. n1 The dismissal thus leaves matters as if no action were ever filed, and neither res judicata nor collateral estoppel result from a dismissal by notice. n2

If the notice does explicitly provide that the dismissal is with prejudice, the dismissal by notice operates as an adjudication on the merits. n3 The rule also provides that the dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits when the notice is filed by a plaintiff who has already once dismissed in any court of the United States or of any state an action based on or including the same claim. n4 This exception is known as the "two dismissal rule" and is discussed in § 19.44.

[3] Effect on Court's Jurisdiction

[a] General Rule

Once the claimant files a notice of dismissal without prejudice, the court loses jurisdiction over the case and may not address the merits of the action or issue further orders. n1 Thus, the court may not rule on a pending motion to dismiss, and any decision addressing the merits of such a motion is a nullity. n2 Similarly, it is improper for the court to issue an order after the notice of dismissal that directs that the dismissal be with prejudice instead of without prejudice. n3 Finally, orders issued by the court during the pendency of the action are nullified and are rendered void. n4 Such orders have no collateral estoppel effect in later litigation. n5

[b] Exception for Collateral Matters

Although jurisdiction to pass on the merits of an action is lost once a notice of dismissal has been filed, n6 the Supreme Court has held that a court retains the power to resolve certain collateral issues even after the case is no longer pending. n7 Thus, a Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i) voluntary dismissal by notice does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to consider a Rule 11 motion and impose sanctions, n7.1 including attorney's fees, for the filing of a frivolous complaint or other pre-dismissal conduct. n8 In other words, the filing of a Rule 11 motion does not preclude a plaintiff from later filing a voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i), and the district court retains jurisdiction to impose Rule 11 sanctions based on frivolous claims even after the time those claims have been voluntarily dismissed. n8.1 Note, however, that under Rule 11(c) a plaintiff may avoidsanctions by filing the notice of dismissal within 21 days after service of the Rule 11 motion. n9 It should also be noted that a federal court lacks jurisdiction to impose sanctions if the action was originally filed in state court, and the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses without committing any further sanctionable conduct after removal to the federal forum. n10 Furthermore, even though sanctions may be awarded after a voluntary dismissal, neither the court nor the defendant may seek to prevent the dismissal itself by conditioning the exercise of the right on the payment of sanctions. n11

The imposition of Rule 11 sanctions does not act as an adjudication on the merits or convert the dismissal to one with prejudice, even if on reviewing the merits the district court concludes that the complaint was not factually or legally well founded for Rule 11 purposes. n12

In addition to Rule 11 sanctions, and consistent with the exception under which the district court retains jurisdiction to resolve collateral issues, it has been held that statutory sanctions and attorney's fees may been imposed following the filing of a notice of voluntary dismissal. Thus, for example, a court may impose sanctions for vexatious conduct tending to multiply the proceeding prior to the dismissal, n13 or award attorney's fees to a prevailing party. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesDismissals Without PrejudiceCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsNonsuitsVoluntary Nonsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n3)Footnote 2. Netwig v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 375 F.3d 1009, 1010 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Marex Titanic, Inc. v. Wrecked & Abandoned Vessel, 2 F.3d 544, 545-548 (4th Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 2.2. Hamilton v. Shearson-Lehman Am. Express, Inc., 813 F.2d 1532, 1534-1535 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Noland v. Flohr Metal Fabricators, 104 F.R.D. 83, 87 (D. Ark. 1984) (filing of plaintiff's "Amended Notice of Dismissal," was ineffective in attempt to reinstate defendant who plaintiff mistakenly dismissed in original notice of dismissal).

(n7)Footnote 4. Harvey Specialty Supply Inc. v. Anson Flowline Equipment, Inc., 434 F.3d 320, 324 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 4.1. Netwig v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 375 F.3d 1009, 1010-1011 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 4.2. Warfield v. Allied Signal TBS Holdings, Inc., 267 F.3d 538, 542 (6th Cir. 2001) (court may vacate voluntary dismissal if dismissal is not free, calculated, and deliberate choice; for example, such dismissal may be vacated as void judgment under Rule 60(b)(4) or for any other reason justifying relief from operation of judgment under Rule 60(b)(6)).

(n10)Footnote 5. Witlin v. Gallagher Basset Serv., 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5543 (E.D. Pa. 1993) (court permitted amendment of docket to reflect correction when plaintiff attorney's associate mistakenly filed notice "with prejudice").

(n11)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n12)Footnote 2. Harvey Specialty Supply Inc. v. Anson Flowline Equipment, Inc., 434 F.3d 320, 324 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Concha v. London, 62 F.3d 1493, 1506-1507 (9th Cir. 1995) (citing Moore's Federal Practice in dictum).

(n14)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n15)Footnote 1. Duke Energy Trading & Mktg., L.L.C. v. Davis, 267 F.3d 1042, 1049 (9th Cir. 2001) (court loses jurisdiction over dismissed action because action is deemed to have never been filed); Janssen v. Harris, 321 F.3d 998, 1001 (10th Cir. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Foss v. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Paul, 808 F.2d 657, 659 (8th Cir. 1986) (reversing district court's order which accepted magistrate's recommendation of dismissal on merits).

(n16)Footnote 2. Manze v. State Farm Ins. Co., 817 F.2d 1062, 1065-1066 (3d Cir. 1987) .

(n17)Footnote 3. Williams v. Ezell, 531 F.2d 1261, 1264 (5th Cir.1976) (reversing order which reinstated prior dismissal with prejudice).

(n18)Footnote 4. In re Piper Aircraft Distrib. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 551 F.2d 213, 219 (8th Cir. 1977) (voluntary dismissal "carries down" with it previous proceedings and orders in action, all pleadings of both plaintiff and defendant, and all issues with respect to plaintiff's claim).

(n19)Footnote 5. See In re Piper Aircraft Distrib. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 551 F.2d 213, 219 (8th Cir. 1977) .

(n20)Footnote 6. See [a], above.

(n21)Footnote 7. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 395, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) (well established that collateral issues may be considered after action is no longer pending).

(n22)Footnote 7.1. Zeisl v. Watman (In re Austrian & German Bank Holocaust Litig.), 317 F.3d 91, 98 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n23)Footnote 8. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 396, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) (costs, attorney's fees, contempt sanctions, and Rule 11 sanctions are not judgments on merits of action; rather, they are determination of collateral issues that may be made after principal suit has been terminated).

(n24)Footnote 8.1. See Zeisl v. Watman (In re Austrian & German Bank Holocaust Litig.), 317 F.3d 91, 98 (2d Cir.2003) ; Adams v. NVR Homes, Inc., 193 F.R.D. 257, 260 (D. Md. 2000) .

(n25)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(2).

(n26)Footnote 10. Kirby v. Allegheny Beverage Corp., 811 F.2d 253, 256-257 (4th Cir. 1987) (after removal to federal court and plaintiff's attorney dismissed first four counts, sanctions may not be imposed).

(n27)Footnote 11. See Aggregates (Carolina), Inc. v. Kruse, 134 F.R.D. 23, 26 (D.P.R. 1991) .

(n28)Footnote 12. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 396-398, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n29)Footnote 13. Bolivar v. Pocklington, 975 F.2d 28, 31 (1st Cir. 1992) (pendency of motion for section 1927 sanctions (like Rule 11 motion) presents a collateral issue appropriate for resolution once court has addressed merits); see 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

(n30)Footnote 14. Baumgartner v. Harrisburg Hous. Auth., 21 F.3d 541, 544 (3d Cir. 1994) (judgment not required to have party considered prevailing party); see 28 U.S.C. § 1988.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
B. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY FILING OF NOTICE

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.44

§ 19.44 Operation of Two Dismissal Rulen*

[1] Rule Makes Second Voluntary Dismissal "With Prejudice"

After a plaintiff or claimant has voluntarily dismissed an action in federal or state court, a subsequent voluntary notice of dismissal based on, or including, the same claim operates as an adjudication on the merits. n1 The effect of this rule, known as the "two dismissal rule," is that the second dismissal taken on the same claim must be with prejudice. n2 The rule is an exception to the general rule that a dismissal by notice is without prejudice. n3 The effect of the rule is that the plaintiff is barred from litigating a third action on the claim. n3.1 The purpose of the two dismissal rule is to prevent the harassment of the defendant through the repeated commencement and dismissal of actions based on the same claim. n4

Some courts have reasoned that the two dismissal exception should be construed narrowly to preserve the plaintiff's right to be heard on the merits, particularly in the absence of any intent to harass. n5 However, other courts have taken the position that the rule should be applied literally to all dismissals coming within its terms, regardless of the plaintiff's subjective intent, n6 and that when the rule applies, an attorney's ignorance of the rule, or of the potentially preclusive effect of taking a second dismissal, is irrelevant. n7

[2] Requirements for Two Dismissal Exception to Apply

[a] Events Triggering Application of Rule

[i] First Dismissal

Generally, any type of dismissal, including a dismissal by notice, stipulation, or court order, may qualify as the first dismissal under the two dismissal rule; the rule merely refers to "plaintiff who has once dismissed." A mere deletion of a claim by amendment under Rule 15(a), however, will not count as a first dismissal. n1 In addition, the Second Circuit has held that when the first dismissal is accomplished by a stipulation without prejudice which is knowingly executed by all parties, a second dismissal by notice will not trigger the rule. Although the court agreed that the rule by its literal terms makes no distinction between a dismissal by notice and one by stipulation, it noted that the danger of repeated unilateral dismissals is not implicated by a consensual, stipulated dismissal, and that a defendant wishing to limit futurelitigation may either refuse to sign the stipulation or require that it be made with prejudice. n2

Using this reasoning, one trial court has stated that the two dismissal rule is also inapplicable when, although the first dismissal is by notice rather than by a formal stipulation, the notice results from negotiations and a consent agreement among the parties. n3 The Eleventh circuit has stated that the two dismissal rule does not apply when the first dismissal is by a plaintiff's motion and order of the court. n4 Some courts have also ruled that the two dismissal rule is inapplicable when the first dismissal was by court order or otherwise involuntary. n5

The two dismissal rule applies whenever the first action has been voluntarily dismissed, even if it is asserted that the first action was a nullity for some reason. Thus, the first dismissal of an action will still count for the purposes of the two dismissal rule even though the court had not acquired personal jurisdiction over the defendant at time of the voluntary dismissal. n6 Similarly, an action may still be voluntarily dismissed for the purposes of the rule even though the complaint was already subject to dismissal because the plaintiff lacked capacity to sue. n7

[ii] Second Dismissal

The two dismissal rule applies only when the second dismissal is a dismissal by notice under Rule 41(a)(1)(i). n8 Thus, the third action will not be barred where the second dismissal was pursuant to a court order under Rule 41(a)(2), n9 or a stipulation under Rule 41(a)(1)(ii), n10 or when claims were dropped through amendment of the complaint rather than by a notice of dismissal. n11 Accordingly, a plaintiff who wants to avoid the effect of the two dismissal rule should wait until a responsive pleading is served and seek a court-ordered dismissal under Rule 41(a)(2), or seek the defendant's consent to a stipulated dismissal without prejudice. n12

The question occasionally arises whether the second dismissal was by notice or by court order. One court has held that when the method of filing is consistent with a unilateral, voluntary dismissal, the two dismissal rule will apply even though the second dismissal was ultimately so ordered by the court. n13 Other courts have held that when the defendant becomes aware that the plaintiff will seek a second dismissal by court order and does not object, the two dismissal rule is inapplicable even though the plaintiff does not make a formal motion and requests dismissal at a time it could have been obtained by notice. n14

[b] Effect of Litigation in Federal or State Court

The plain language of the rule provides that the first dismissal may be in either state court or federal court. n15 However, the two dismissal rule applies only where the second dismissal is taken in federal court. It does not apply when the second dismissal occurs in state court, n16 even if the first dismissal was in federal court. n17 If the second dismissal occurs in federal court following removal of the action originally filed in state court, the dismissal of the second action following removal will trigger the rule. n18

On the other hand, the two dismissal rule still applies, even win the second dismissal occurred in state court, if the state has a two dismissal rule. Thus, the federal court will give res judicata effect to such a dismissal if the state has enacted its own version of the two dismissal rule. n19

[c] Identity of Claims

The two dismissal rule does not apply unless the second dismissal is of an actionbased on or including the "same claim" as the first dismissal. n20 Some courts have interpreted this requirement to mean that the two dismissal rule does not apply unless the second dismissed action was based on both the identical legal theory and the same operative facts as the first dismissed action. n21 On the other hand, other courts have held that the rule applies when the factual allegations of the prior two suits were substantially the same, regardless of the legal theories asserted. n22

Note that actions brought after the second action will not be barred by the two dismissal rule if they are not based on the same claim as the earlier dismissed actions. n23

[d] Identity of Parties

The two dismissal rule does not apply unless the defending party asserting the rule is the same defendant or in privity with the defendant who was the object of the two prior dismissed actions. n24 Consequently, a defendant who was not actually a defending party or in privity with a defending party in the two prior dismissals may not utilize the two dismissal rule to bar the third action, even if the third action is based on the same claim. n25 A motion to dismiss based on the two dismissal rule should be denied if a factual question exists regarding the existence of privity between the defendants. n26 The mere identity of interest between the plaintiffs in the first two suits is not sufficient to trigger the two dismissal rule, if the defendants are not in privity. n27

Two dismissal rule issues may also arise regarding the defending parties. Thus, a defendant voluntarily dismissed from two successive actions may invoke the two dismissal rule even though the second dismissal was not taken as against all of the other defendants to that action. n28 The two dismissal rule does not apply if the first dismissal eliminated fewer than all claims against the defendant but not the entire action. n29

[3] Relief From Two Dismissal Rule

When extenuating circumstances exist, a plaintiff may move the district court to vacate the second notice of dismissal triggering the two dismissal rule. n1 As with other dismissals by notice, the motion should be made under Rule 60(b), which allows relief from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, or on a showing of other good cause. n2 The second dismissal is not, however, subject to a collateral attack through the institution of a third action. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesTwo-Dismissal Rule

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 394, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Am. Cyanamid Co. v. Capuano, 381 F.3d 6, 17 (1st Cir. 2004) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. See Muzikowski v. Paramount Pictures Corp., 322 F.3d 918, 923-924 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 4. D.C. Elecs., Inc., v. Nartron Corp., 511 F.2d 294, 298 (6th Cir. 1975) (built into Rule 41(a) is overall provision that plaintiff may but once voluntarily dismiss without prejudice; thus, plaintiff's ability to harass defendant by the filing and dismissing of successive actions involving the same claim is limited).

(n7)Footnote 5. Sutton Place Dev. Co. v. Abacus Mortgage Inv. Co., 826 F.2d 637, 640-641 (7th Cir. 1987) (courts should be careful not to extend scope of such narrow exception when purpose for exception would not be served).

(n8)Footnote 6. Lake at Las Vegas Investors Group, Inc. v. Pacific Malibu Dev. Corp., 933 F.2d 724, 728 (9th Cir. 1991) (dismissals which fall within language of rule should not be read out of it through inquiry into plaintiff's intent to harass).

(n9)Footnote 7. Engelhardt v. Bell & Howell Co., 299 F.2d 480, 485-486 (8th Cir. 1962) (to assert that plaintiff's attorney may have been ignorant of two dismissal rule and its effect, and that plaintiff should be relieved of effects is but to argue that attorney has no authority to try case incorrectly and, if attorney does, his or her client is not bound by result).

(n10)Footnote 1. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. A. H. Robins Co., 61 F.R.D. 24, 29, 30-31 (E.D. Pa.1973)) .

(n11)Footnote 2. Poloron Prods., Inc. v. Lybrand Ross Bros. & Montgomery, 534 F.2d 1012, 1017 (2d Cir. 1976) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Island Stevedoring, Inc. v. Barge CCBI, 129 F.R.D. 430, 432 (D.P.R. 1990) .

(n13)Footnote 4. ASX Inv. Corp. v. Newton, 183 F.3d 1265, 1268 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Loubier v. Modern Acoustics, Inc., 178 F.R.D. 17, 20-22 (D. Conn. 1998) (earlier state court dismissals for lack of prosecution were not unilateral, voluntary dismissals by plaintiff so as to qualify as first dismissal for purposes of two dismissal rule).

(n15)Footnote 6. Engelhardt v. Bell & Howell Co., 299 F.2d 480, 484-485 (8th Cir. 1962) (jurisdiction over defendant is not essential to commencement of action, and plaintiff's contention that dismissal of first action was mere nullity because dismissal was filed at time before court had acquired jurisdiction over defendant is without merit.).

(n16)Footnote 7. Lake at Las Vegas Investors Group, Inc. v. Pacific Malibu Dev. Corp., 933 F.2d 724, 726 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n17)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1); *see Allianz CP Gen. Ins. Co. v. Blue Anchor Line, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8175, at 7 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n18)Footnote 9. Manning v. South Carolina Dep't of Highway & Pub. Transp., 914 F.2d 44, 47 (4th Cir. 1990) (two dismissal rule applies when second dismissal is by notice, but not when defendant is dismissed by motion or by stipulation).

(n19)Footnote 10. *Allianz CP Gen. Ins. Co. v. Blue Anchor Line, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8175, at 7 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (two dismissal rule did not apply when second dismissal was pursuant to a stipulation under Rule 41(a)(1)(ii), even if first dismissal was by notice under Rule 41(a)(1)(i)); Kuhn v. Williamson, 122 F.R.D. 192, 195 (E.D.N.C. 1988) (plaintiff could pursue section 1983 civil rights claim in third action when it was dismissed by stipulation without prejudice in second action).

(n20)Footnote 11. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. A. H. Robins Co., 61 F.R.D. 24, 29-30 (E.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n21)Footnote 12. Engelhardt v. Bell & Howell Co., 299 F.2d 480, 484 (8th Cir. 1962) .

(n22)Footnote 13. Gioia v. Blue Cross Hosp. Serv., Inc., 641 F.2d 540, 545 (8th Cir. 1981) .

(n23)Footnote 14. Sutton Place Dev. Co. v. Abacus Mortgage Inv. Co., 826 F.2d 637, 641 (7th Cir. 1987) (when defendant raised no objections court did not consider defendant harassed litigant).

(n24)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1); see Lake at Las Vegas Investors Group, Inc. v. Pacific Malibu Dev. Corp., 933 F.2d 724, 726 (9th Cir. 1991) (court found that filing in state court commenced action); Schott v. Hepler, 101 F.R.D. 99, 100 (N.D. Ind. 1984) (dismissal of first suit in state court counted as dismissal).

(n25)Footnote 16. Stewart v. Stearman, 743 F. Supp. 793, 794 (D. Utah 1990) (rejecting assertion that two prior state court dismissals barred third suit in federal court); Kuhn v. Williamson, 122 F.R.D. 192, 194 (E.D.N.C. 1988) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n26)Footnote 17. Rader v. Baltimore & Ohio. R. Co., 108 F.2d 980, 986 (7th Cir. 1940) .

(n27)Footnote 18. Engelhardt v. Bell & Howell Co., 299 F.2d 480, 484 (8th Cir. 1962) .

(n28)Footnote 19. Kuhn v. Williamson, 122 F.R.D. 192, 194 (E.D.N.C. 1988) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n29)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B); see Ater v. Follrod, 238 F. Supp. 2d 928, 937-938 (S.D. Ohio 2002) (same claim was not asserted when first action was based on facts related to early stages of pregnancy, while other suit was base on allegation of facts related to birth).

(n30)Footnote 21. Kuhn v. Williamson, 122 F.R.D. 192, 194-195 (E.D.N.C. 1988) (plaintiff could pursue federal civil rights and state law negligence claims against police officer in third action because, even though both were based on same underlying shooting incident, negligence claim was not asserted in first action and civil rights claim was dismissed by stipulation in second).

(n31)Footnote 22. Schott v. Hepler, 101 F.R.D. 99, 100-101 (N.D. Ind. 1984) (two dismissal rule applies when factual allegations of first state court suit and second federal court suit were substantially same, even though federal suit contained additional claim for deprivation of federal rights under section 1983).

(n32)Footnote 23. Brown v. Hartshorne Pub. Sch. Dist. #1, 926 F.2d 959, 961 (10th Cir. 1991) (third and fourth actions not barred by rule when they complained of discriminatory conduct occurring years after dismissal of first two suits).

(n33)Footnote 24. Am. Cyanamid Co. v. Capuano, 381 F.3d 6, 17 (1st Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see Manning v. South Carolina Dep't of Highway & Pub. Transp., 914 F.2d 44, 48 (4th Cir. 1990) (party asserting two dismissal rule must same party or privity who owned interests that constituted subject matter of both dismissed actions).

(n34)Footnote 25. Lake at Las Vegas Investors Group, Inc. v. Pacific Malibu Dev. Corp., 933 F.2d 724, 728 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n35)Footnote 26. Murray v. Sevier, 145 F.R.D. 563, 566-567 (D. Kan. 1993) (finding application of two dismissal rule tenuous where it was not clear whether interests of defendants were so interrelated that each represented same legal right).

(n36)Footnote 27. Murray v. Sevier, 145 F.R.D. 563, 566-567 (D. Kan. 1993) (certain plaintiffs did not twice dismiss against some defendants in suit).

(n37)Footnote 28. Lake at Las Vegas Investors Group, Inc. v. Pacific Malibu Dev. Corp., 933 F.2d 724, 727-728 (9th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 503 U.S. 920 (1991) .

(n38)Footnote 29. Arnesen v. Shawmut County Bank, N.A., 504 F. Supp. 1077 (D. Mass. 1980) (two dismissal rule did not bar assertion of claim in third action, when claim had been dismissed from prior action which went to trial against defendants on other counts).

(n39)Footnote 1. Randall v. Merrill Lynch, 820 F.2d 1317, 1321 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (vacating second dismissal which was filed because of plaintiff's disabling illness and the resulting depletion of his assets).

(n40)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b); see also § 19.43[1].

(n41)Footnote 3. Merrill Lynch v. Randall, 110 F.R.D. 499, 500 (E.D. Cal. 1985) (when plaintiffs contend that application of rule is unduly harsh, proper remedy is for them to move to vacate second dismissal before original district court, rather than making third attempt to litigate the claim).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
B. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY FILING OF NOTICE

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.45

§ 19.45 Appeal Regarding Dismissal by Noticen*

[1] Standard of Review on Appeal

When the trial court makes an order either granting or denying a motion to vacate a notice of dismissal filed under Rule 41(a)(1), the appellate court will apply a de novo standard of review because a pure legal question concerning whether plaintiff's notice was timely is generally presented. n1 The abuse of discretion standard, which governs review of court-ordered voluntary dismissals under Rule 41(a)(2), n2 is not applicable because the court has no discretion to deny or condition a timely filed notice.

When the plaintiff's right to dismiss is affected by the conversion of a motion to dismiss to one for summary judgment, an abuse of discretion standard may apply to whether the conversion was proper. Courts that have adhered to a literal interpretation of Rule 41 and require a formal conversion to terminate the right to dismiss havegenerally viewed the question as one of pure law. n3

[2] Court Actions That Parties May Appeal

A plaintiff may immediately appeal the district court's order vacating a notice of dismissal, even though the order does not finally dispose of the action but rather reopens the case for adjudication on the merits. n1 Such an appeal has been permitted on the ground that any orders entered by the district court after the filing of the notice of dismissal are void. n2 The plaintiff may also take a direct appeal from an order improperly conditioning the dismissal. n3 When the court disregards a notice of dismissal and directs that the action be dismissed with prejudice, n4 or dismisses it after either vacating the notice n5 or treats it as a motion under Rule 41(a)(2), n6 the plaintiff may simply appeal from the resulting judgment. Similarly, when the court vacates the notice of dismissal and enters a judgment after trial or other proceedings on the merits of the action, the plaintiff may raise the order vacating the notice as part of the appeal of the judgment. n7

A defendant may appeal the denial of a motion to vacate a notice of dismissal, since the dismissal results in a final judgment terminating the action. n8 Similarly, an order granting the plaintiff's motion for a dismissal as of right under Rule 41(a)(1)(i) is appealable by the defendant. n9

[3] Effect of Prejudice on Dismissal

A plaintiff may not generally appeal an order granting a voluntary dismissal without prejudice because it does not qualify as an involuntary adverse judgment, in that the plaintiff receives the relief requested and is free to recommence the action. The same reasoning should apply when an appeal is attempted from a voluntary dismissal by notice, n1 which is without prejudice unless otherwise stated. n2 When a document requesting dismissal is construed as a notice under Rule 41 and the case is ordered dismissed, the plaintiff may not appeal the dismissal. n3

If a dismissal was with prejudice, an order denying a plaintiff's motion to vacate a notice of dismissal is appealable. Relief from the operation of the two dismissal rule may be obtained on appeal if the district court refuses to vacate the notice on the grounds of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, or other good cause. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsNoticesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Marex Titanic, Inc. v. Wrecked & Abandoned Vessel, 2 F.3d 544, 545 (4th Cir. 1993) (scope of Rule 41 is question of law subject to de novo review).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Kolman v. Milwaukee Area Technical College, 548 F. Supp. 684, 685 (E.D. Wis. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 1. D.C. Elecs., Inc. v. Nartron Corp., 511 F.2d 294, 298 (6th Cir. 1975) .

(n6)Footnote 2. Thorp v. Scarne, 599 F.2d 1169, 1172, 1173 (2d Cir. 1979) ; Littman v. Bache & Co., 246 F.2d 490, 491-492 (2d Cir. 1957) .

(n7)Footnote 3. Scam Instrument Corp. v. Control Data Corp., 458 F.2d 885, 890-891 (7th Cir. 1972) .

(n8)Footnote 4. Foss v. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Paul, 808 F.2d 657, 660 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 5. Winterland Concessions Co. v. Smith, 706 F.2d 793, 795 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n10)Footnote 6. Hamilton v. Shearson-Lehman Am. Express, Inc., 813 F.2d 1532, 1534-1535 (1987) .

(n11)Footnote 7. Marex Titanic, Inc. v. Wrecked & Abandoned Vessel, 2 F.3d 544, 545 (4th Cir. 1993) .

(n12)Footnote 8. Merit Ins. Co. v. Leatherby Ins. Co., 581 F.2d 137, 144 (7th Cir. 1978) (appeal from order denying motion to vacate and quash the notice of dismissal).

(n13)Footnote 9. Aero-Colours, Inc. v. Propst, 833 F.2d 51, 52 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Concha v. London, 62 F.3d 1493, 1493, 1507 (9th Cir. 1995) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A).

(n15)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n16)Footnote 3. Geaney v. Carlson, 776 F.2d 140, 142 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Randall v. Merrill Lynch, 820 F.2d 1317, 1321 (D.C. Cir. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
B. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY FILING OF NOTICE

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 19.46through 19.59

[Reserved]

§§ 19.46[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
C. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY STIPULATION OF PARTIES

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.60

§ 19.60 Parties Have Absolute Right to Stipulate To Dismissal of Actionn*

All of the parties who have appeared in an action have the power to terminate an action by the filing a stipulation signed by all of them. n1 In addition to facilitating the mutual resolution of disputes, the rule insures that the plaintiff will not be able to take a voluntary dismissal at a late stage of the action without the defendant's consent. Subject only to the specific provisions of other rules or statutes, n2 the parties' right to terminate the action by stipulation is absolute. n3 Thus, a voluntary stipulation under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(ii) does not require court approval. n4 There is authority to the effect that the court has the inherent authority to investigate behind a stipulation to determine whether collusion or improper conduct gave rise to the dismissal, at least in cases involving the public interest. n5

Because the parties' right to a stipulated dismissal is absolute, the court may not impose conditions on the stipulation. n6 Thus, the court may not provide that the dismissal will be with prejudice if the parties have not so provided, n7 nor may the court"order" the stipulation, and by the order make it enforceable by contempt. n8 An order requiring the parties to make the terms of their settlement agreement public also imposes an invalid condition. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.34 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n3)Footnote 2. See §§ 19.24[2][d].

(n4)Footnote 3. Gardiner v. A. H. Robins Co., 747 F.2d 1180, 1189 (8th Cir. 1984) (in ordinary lawsuits between private parties, courts recognize that settlement of dispute is solely in the hands of parties, and parties may prevent a court from becoming involved in the settlement process by agreeing that plaintiff will dismiss lawsuit by stipulation).

(n5)Footnote 4. Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 51 (4th Cir. 1995) (noting that stipulated dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1)(ii) does not require entry of order by court).

(n6)Footnote 5. United States v. Mercedes-Benz of N. Am., Inc., 547 F. Supp. 399, 400 (N.D. Cal. 1982) (in antitrust settlement, court stated that in exercise of inherent judicial powers court could look behind it to determine whether there is collusion or other improper conduct giving rise to dismissal).

(n7)Footnote 6. Hester Indus., Inc. v. Tyson Foods, Inc., 160 F.3d 911, 916 (2d Cir. 1998) (court lacked authority to condition stipulated dismissal on compliance with parties' settlement agreement); Republic of Phil. v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 43 F.3d 65, 81 fn. 21 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 7. McKenzie v. Davenport-Harris Funeral Home, 834 F.2d 930, 934-935 (11th Cir. 1987) (district court was without authority to dismiss claim with prejudice when dismissal was presumed to be without prejudice because parties' stipulation was silent on issue).

(n9)Footnote 8. Gardiner v. A. H. Robins Co., 747 F.2d 1180, 1190 (8th Cir. 1984) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Smith v. Phillips, 881 F.2d 902, 905 (10th Cir. 1989) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
C. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY STIPULATION OF PARTIES

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.61

§ 19.61 Contents of Stipulation of Dismissaln*

[1] Unequivocal Provision for Dismissal

A stipulation of dismissal will not be effective unless it unequivocally indicates that parties have agreed to a dismissal. n1 If the court has any question whether the stipulation was intended to dispose of the action, it should seek clarification from the parties. n2

[2] Signatures of All Parties Who Have Appeared in the Action

A stipulation of dismissal must be executed by "all parties who have appeared in the action. n1 A document signed by only one party will not be effective, n2 even if the parties acknowledge that they intended to dismiss the lawsuit. n3 In multi-party litigation the parties may stipulate to dismiss some, but fewer than all, of the defendants. n4 Similarly, where several actions are consolidated, the parties to each individual case may settle their claims separately. n5 A partial stipulation, however, is not effective to dismiss the action with respect to any defending party who has not signed, and a stipulation which purports to dismiss the entire action without the consent of all parties may be considered ineffective. n6 On the other hand, a person who has not appeared as a party may not have a settlement stipulation set aside merely because the person would otherwise have the right to intervene as a party. n6.1

Courts have also held that the parties to a third-party action may dismiss it without the consent of any party to the main action. n7 To be effective, the stipulation need only be executed by those defendants who have actually "appeared" in the action, not all of those named in the caption. n8

Occasionally, an action may not be disposed of under Rule 41(a)(1)(ii) because a real party in interest lacks capacity to sign the stipulation. For example, an action on behalf an of incompetent person may not be terminated by stipulation, but requires court approval of the settlement. n9 On the other hand, a party is generally bound by counsel's decision to execute a stipulation of dismissal. n10 A stipulation so executed may be vacated, however, on the ground that the attorney lacked authority to settle on the client's behalf. n11

[3] Terms and Conditions

The parties are free to include in their stipulation any terms or conditions they consider appropriate because court approval is not required for the stipulation. n1 They may provide that the dismissal is with prejudice or agree to embody the terms of their settlement agreement in the stipulation or dismissal order. n2 The parties are bound by the terms or conditions specified in the stipulation. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.34 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii); see, e.g., Pipeliners Local 798, Tulsa, Okla. v. Ellerd, 503 F.2d 1193, 1199 (10th Cir. 1974) (parties explicitly and unqualifiedly stipulated that all actions as to all parties with exception of parties to counterclaim were dismissed with prejudice).

(n3)Footnote 2. Vuitton et Fils, S.A., v. J. Young Enters., Inc., 609 F.2d 1335, 1337 (9th Cir. 1979) (court erred making assumptions regarding stipulation).

(n4)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n5)Footnote 2. Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 51 (4th Cir. 1995) ; Morris v. City of Hobart, 39 F.3d 1105, 1109 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 51 (4th Cir. 1995) (unilateral "Notice of Dismissal" signed only by plaintiffs and filed after defendants had answered ineffective even though filed with consent of defendants counsel).

(n7)Footnote 4. Moller v. North Shore Univ. Hosp., 12 F.3d 13, 16 (2d Cir. 1993) (stipulation expressly preserved plaintiff's right to continue action against remaining defendants).

(n8)Footnote 5. United States v. Altman, 750 F.2d 684, 695 (8th Cir. 1984) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Alholm v. American Steamship Co., 167 F.R.D. 75, 79 (D. Minn. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 6.1. GMAC Commercial Mortgage Corp. v. LaSalle Bank N.A., 213 F.R.D. 150, 150-151 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice for principle that voluntary stipulation to dismiss filed during pendency of motion to intervene is effective to dismiss the action, because proposed intervenors could not become parties within meaning of Rule until their motion is granted).

(n11)Footnote 7. First Nat'l Bank of Toms River, N.J. v. Marine City, Inc., 411 F.2d 674, 677 (3d Cir. 1969) .

(n12)Footnote 8. In re Wolf, 842 F.2d 464, 466 (D.C. Cir. 1988) .

(n13)Footnote 9. Miener v. Missouri Dep't of Mental Health, 62 F.3d 1126, 1127 (8th Cir. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 10. Samuels v. Northern Telecom, Inc., 942 F.2d 834, 836 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n15)Footnote 11. Thomsen v. Terrace Navigation Corp., 490 F.2d 88, 89 (2d Cir. 1974) .

(n16)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Muze Inc. v. Digital on Demand, Inc., 356 F.3d 492, 494 (2d Cir. 2004) (dismissal pending finalization of settlement agreement with right to reinstatement of case if settlement is not finalized); see Hester Indus., Inc. v. Tyson Foods, Inc., 160 F.3d 911, 916 (2d Cir. 1998) (because court has no authority to place conditions on dismissal by stipulation, court lacked authority to condition dismissal on compliance with parties' settlement agreement); Gardiner v. A. H. Robins Co., 747 F.2d 1180, 1189 (8th Cir. 1984) (in lawsuits between private parties, settlement of dispute is solely in the hands of parties and parties may prevent court from becoming involved in settlement process by agreeing that plaintiff will dismiss lawsuit by stipulation); see also § 19.60.

(n17)Footnote 2. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 511 U.S. 375, 381, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) (even when dismissal is pursuant to Rule 41(a)(1)(ii), court is authorized to embody settlement contract in its dismissal order if parties agree).

(n18)Footnote 3. Camerson v. City Escort Patrol, Inc., 787 F.2d 588, 588 (6th Cir. 1986) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
C. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY STIPULATION OF PARTIES

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.62

§ 19.62 Filing of Stipulation To Dismissaln*

[1] Requirement of Filing

A stipulation generally must be filed before it is effective. n0.1 It will not be effective if unfiled, even if it is fully executed and provides that it may be filed without further notice. n1 Mere inclusion of the stipulation as an exhibit to motion papers does not constitute filing; n2 nor does the submission of a stipulation which is not signed by the necessary parties fulfill the filing requirement. Furthermore, a stipulation filed after a judgment on the merits has been rendered is ineffective. n3

The parties may dismiss the action by stipulation at any time before a judgment on the merits is entered. n4 Unlike a dismissal by notice under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i), the time to dismiss by stipulation is not restricted to the time before the defendant has answered or moved for summary judgment. n5

[2] Exception for Oral Stipulation on Record

There is an exception to the requirement of filing: an oral stipulation of dismissal communicated to the court on the record meets the requirements of Rule (a)(1)(A)(ii), n1 even though the plain language of the rule anticipates a written stipulation capable of being signed and physically filed. n2 The rationale for a court to accept an oral stipulation on the record is that the stipulation is ultimately reduced to a written document, and such a stipulation sufficiently informs the court and all other parties of the dismissal. n3 Thus, courts have accepted oral stipulations made in open court. n4 An off-the-record oral stipulation, however, does not satisfy the requirements of the rule. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.34 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 0.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 1. Orsini v. Kugel, 9 F.3d 1042, 1045 (2d Cir. 1993) (unlike voluntary notice of dismissal, stipulation of dismissal is not self-executing).

(n4)Footnote 2. Orsini v. Kugel, 9 F.3d 1042, 1045 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 3. McCall-Bey v. Franzen, 777 F.2d 1178, 1186 (7th Cir. 1985) (later-filed stipulation of dismissal with prejudice ineffective where court had already ordered the case dismissed without prejudice).

(n6)Footnote 4. Republic of Phil. v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 43 F.3d 65, 81 (3d Cir. 1994) (court noted that parties to civil action may stipulate to dismissal of action at any time).

(n7)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n8)Footnote 1. Broadcast Music, Inc. v. M.T.S. Enters., Inc., 811 F.2d 278, 279-280 fn.1 (5th Cir. 1987) (plaintiff's counsel's statement to trial court that claims against two defendants were not being pursued constituted voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1)(ii).

(n9)Footnote 2. Ocean Drilling & Exploration Co., Inc. v. Mont Boat Rental Servs., Inc., 799 F.2d 213, 218 (5th Cir. 1986) (although Rule 41 requires written stipulation, courts have not insisted on writing when it is clear that parties have in fact entered into contemplated stipulation).

(n10)Footnote 3. Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 49 (4th Cir. 1995) ; *Kaplan Early Learning Co. v. Midbar Kodesh Temple, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9037, at 4 n.1 (M.D.N.C. 2004) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Pipeliners Local 798, Tulsa, Okla. v. Ellerd, 503 F.2d 1193, 1199 (10th Cir. 1974) .

(n12)Footnote 5. Ocean Drilling & Exploration Co., Inc. v. Mont Boat Rental Servs., Inc., 799 F.2d 213, 218 (5th Cir. 1986) (nothing in record showed consent by all parties).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
C. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY STIPULATION OF PARTIES

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.63

§ 19.63 Effect of Stipulation To Dismissaln*

[1] General Effects of Stipulation on Action

On the filing of a stipulation of dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i), all of the following results take effect:

1. A voluntary dismissal by stipulation terminates the action immediately when it is filed by the parties, whether or not the court approves or implements the stipulation. n0.1 The dismissal also terminates the jurisdiction of the court regarding the merits of the action. n1 n2

2. A stipulation of dismissal terminates the action without prejudice unless otherwise specified by the parties. n3

3. When a stipulation is made with prejudice, the voluntary dismissal has the same res judicata effect as a final adjudication on the merits favorable to the defendant. n4

4. When a stipulation is made without prejudice, the voluntary dismissal terminates the action as if it were never filed, n5 subject to any conditions the parties incorporated into the stipulation. n6

5. Once a stipulation dismissing an action is filed, any second stipulation by the parties attempting to vacate the dismissal will be ineffective absent the existence of grounds for vacating the dismissal under Rule 60(b), n7 such as, mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, or other good cause. n8

6. The statute of limitation is not tolled by the commencement of an action that is later dismissed by stipulation of the parties. n9

7. A voluntary dismissal moots all motions pending before the court. n10

[2] Effects of Stipulation on Courts Continuing Jurisdiction

After the filing of a stipulation of dismissal, the court lacks jurisdiction to enter further orders and any orders entered are of no effect n1 and are considered superfluous n2 or are prohibited. n3 The court may not take action on the merits, n3.1 such as granting summary judgment on the claims that are the subject of the stipulation. n4 An unconditional dismissal by stipulation terminates the district court's jurisdiction; n5 because the district court lacks jurisdiction after dismissal, it may not enforce a settlement agreement once the underlying action has been dismissed by stipulation, n6 unless the parties agree. Thus, if the parties include the provision in the stipulation, the court may retain jurisdiction following a stipulated dismissal by incorporating the settlement in its dismissal order. n7 In other words, a district court does not retain supplemental enforcement jurisdiction over a settlement unless the parties either have agreed to incorporate the terms of the settlement into the dismissal order or have executed a stipulation authorizing the court to retain jurisdiction over the implementation of the settlement. n7.1 However, the court may refuse to dismiss the action when the conditions named by the parties are unacceptable to the court. n8

There are two exceptions to the general rule that the court loses jurisdiction on the filing of a stipulated dismissal. First, the court retains jurisdiction to vacate a stipulation of dismissal under Rule 60(b), enabling it to reopen the case on grounds such as mistake and fraud. n9 Second, the district court retains jurisdiction following a stipulated dismissal to impose Rule 11 sanctions when applicable. n10 This latter authority is based on the court's inherent power to administer its own proceedings regarding collateral matters that do not constitute decisions on the merits. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.34 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 0.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 1. Gambale v. Deutsche Bank AG, 377 F.3d 133, 139 (2d Cir. 2004) ; see [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 2. [Reserved].

(n5)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(B); Golden v. David Barenborg & Salomon Bros., Inc., 53 F. 3d 866, 868 (7th Cir. 1995) (such a rule promotes judicial economy).

(n6)Footnote 4. Kaspar Wire Works, Inc. v. Leco Eng. & Mach., Inc., 575 F.2d 530, 534 (5th Cir. 1978) (dismissal with prejudice same as adjudication on merits).

(n7)Footnote 5. Beck v. Caterpillar Inc., 50 F.3d 405, 407 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 6. Camerson v. City Escort Patrol, Inc., 787 F.2d 588, 588 (6th Cir. 1986) ; see § 19.61[3].

(n9)Footnote 7. *Martino v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14243 88-0532, at 3 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 21, 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n11)Footnote 9. Beck v. Caterpillar Inc., 50 F.3d 405, 406 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 10. See GMAC Commer. Mortg. Corp. v. LaSalle Bank N.A., 213 F.R.D. 150, 150-151 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n13)Footnote 1. United States v. Kellogg, 12 F.3d 497, 501 (5th Cir. 1994) ; see, e.g., Municipality of San Juan v. Rullan, 318 F.3d 26, 27 (1st Cir. 2004) ; see also § 19.60.

(n14)Footnote 2. Meinecke v. H & R Block of Houston, 66 F.3d 77, 82 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 3. Mutual Produce, Inc. v. Penn Cent. Transp. Co., 119 F.R.D. 619, 620 (D. Mass. 1988) .

(n16)Footnote 3.1. Gambale v. Deutsche Bank AG, 377 F.3d 133, 139 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Meinecke v. H & R Block of Houston, 66 F.3d 77, 80 (5th Cir. 1995) (grant of summary judgment void).

(n18)Footnote 5. Hinsdale v. The Farmers Nat'l Bank and Trust Co., 823 F.2d 993, 995 (6th Cir. 1987) .

(n19)Footnote 6. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 381, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) .

(n20)Footnote 7. Marino v. Pioneer Edsel Sales, Inc., 349 F.3d 746, 752 (4th Cir. 2003) ; see Glaxo Group Ltd. v. Dr. Reddy's Labs., Ltd., 325 F. Supp. 2d 502, 508 (D.N.J. 2004) (when parties stipulate to dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1)(ii), court is authorized to embody the settlement contract in its dismissal order but is not required to do so).

(n21)Footnote 7.1. Municipality of San Juan v. Rullan, 318 F.3d 26, 27 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n22)Footnote 8. Alelly v. Mines Ltd. v. Pelletier, 90 F.R.D. 626, 627 (E.D. Tenn. 1981) .

(n23)Footnote 9. Seidman v. City of Beverly Hills, 785 F.2d 1447, 1448 (9th Cir. 1986) (dismissal of appeal is without prejudice to party seeking relief before district court from judgment of voluntary dismissal with prejudice for reasons of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect under Rule 60(b)(1)).

(n24)Footnote 10. Fox v. Acadia State Bank, 937 F.2d 1566, 1569 fn.2 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n25)Footnote 11. Gambale v. Deutsche Bank AG, 377 F.3d 133, 139-140 (2d Cir. 2004) (even after dismissal by stipulation court has power to modify or vacate its own protective orders with respect to sensitive documents filed in case).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
C. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY STIPULATION OF PARTIES

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.64

§ 19.64 Appeal Regarding Dismissal by Stipulationn*

A party may generally not appeal from a stipulated dismissal with prejudice because it is not an involuntary adverse judgment. n1 Some courts have permitted an appeal when the stipulation expressly preserved the right to appeal, n2 while other courts have rejected such a stipulation, on the grounds that voluntary consent to entry of judgment precludes an appeal. n3 The parties may also appeal an order of the trial court that denies effect to a stipulated dismissal or imposes conditions on it. n4 A writ of mandamus challenging the court order may also be appropriate. n5

An appellate court applies a de novo standard of review on appeal when it considers the propriety of a district court order determining whether a stipulation of dismissal complies with the filing and execution requirements of Rule 41(a)(1)(ii). n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.34 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Seidman v. City of Beverly Hills, 785 F.2d 1447, 1448 (9th Cir. 1986) (parties deprive appellate court and any other court of jurisdiction over action by stipulating to voluntary dismissal with prejudice).

(n3)Footnote 2. Dorse v. Armstrong World Indus., 798 F.2d 1372, 1375 (11th Cir. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Dorse v. Armstrong World Indus., 798 F.2d 1372, 1375 (11th Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Smith v. Phillips, 881 F.2d 902, 905 (10th Cir. 1989) (reversing order directing parties to make settlement terms public).

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Wolf, 842 F.2d 464, 466 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (mandamus appropriate when court deprived parties of unconditional right to stipulated dismissal by directing that case be dismissed with prejudice if not reopened within 30 days).

(n7)Footnote 6. Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 51 (4th Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
C. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY STIPULATION OF PARTIES

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 19.65through 19.79

[Reserved]

§§ 19.65[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.80

§ 19.80 Nature and Purpose of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Ordern*

A plaintiff may request a voluntary dismissal from the court, which the court has discretion to grant or deny by order, n1 when a dismissal is no longer available as of right, n2 and the plaintiff cannot obtain consent to a stipulated dismissal. n3 The purposeof a voluntary dismissal by court order is to allow the plaintiff to voluntarily dismiss the action at a later stage in the litigation, while allowing the court to prevent prejudice to the defendant by entering a court order that imposes curative conditions. n4 As discussed in the remainder of this part, in making the decision whether to order the dismissal n5 the court generally must make three separate determinations: (1) whether the dismissal should be allowed at all; (2) whether the dismissal should be with or without prejudice; and (3) what terms and conditions, if any, are appropriate. n6 A defendant may not move for a voluntary dismissal of the plaintiff's action. If the plaintiff joins one of several defendants moving for a voluntary dismissal, however, the court may grant the motion over the objection of the other defendants n7 and need not treat the motion as one for summary judgment. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2); see § 19.81.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i); see Part B, above.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(ii); see Part C, above.

(n5)Footnote 4. Versa Prods. v. Home Depot, USA, Inc., 387 F.3d 1325, 1327 (11th Cir. 2004) ; County of Santa Fe v. Public Serv. Co., 311 F.3d 1031, 1047 (10th Cir. 2002) ; Virgil v. Montgomery, 353 F. Supp. 2d 620, 622 (E.D.N.C. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See § 19.81.

(n7)Footnote 6. Burnette v. Godshall, 828 F. Supp. 1439, 1443 (N.D. Cal. 1993) (three determinations whether to grant dismissal); Spencer v. Moore Business Forms, Inc, 87 F.R.D. 118, 119 (N.D. Cal. 1980) (three predismissal determinations listed).

(n8)Footnote 7. Southern Elec. Generating Co. v. Allen-Bradley Co., 30 F.R.D. 135, 136 (S.D.N.Y. 1962) (although Rule 41(a)(2) specifically provides for dismissal on application of plaintiff, rule may be applied to request by defendant when plaintiff consents to granting of dismissal).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Plasterer v. Hahn, 103 F.R.D. 184, 185 (M.D. Pa. 1984) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.81

§ 19.81 Court Has Discretion to Order Voluntary Dismissaln*

The court generally has discretion to grant or deny a voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(2). n1 However, the scope of the trial court's discretion does not allow the court to act arbitrarily, unreasonably, or to refuse to exercise discretion. n2 In order to facilitate appeal and to allow the understanding of its order, the court should state the reasons for the manner in which it exercises its discretion. n3 The court's discretion extends to whether dismissal should be made with or without prejudice, n4 and to whether costs or attorney's fees should be imposed. n4.1

Some courts take the position that a court does not have discretion to deny a plaintiff's motion for a voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(2) with prejudice. These courts reason that when the plaintiff requests a voluntary dismissal with prejudice, the defendant receives all the relief that could have been obtained after a full trial and is therefore protected from future litigation by the doctrine of res judicata. However, these courts recognize that when a dismissal with prejudice would not dispose of the entire litigation, the court must determine whether the remaining parties would be prejudiced by the dismissal. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Finch v. Ford Motor Co., 327 F. Supp. 2d 942, 945 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Eagles, Ltd. v. Am. Eagle Found., 356 F.3d 724, 730 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See United States ex rel. Doe v. Dow Chem. Co., 343 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Holbrook v. Andersen Corp., 130 F.R.D. 516, 519 (D. Me. 1990) (court has discretion whether to dismiss with or without prejudice).

(n6)Footnote 4.1. Trujillo v. Banco Cent. Del Ecuador, 379 F.3d 1298, 1301-1302 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 5. *ITV Direct, Inc. v. Healthy Solutions, LLC, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 9587, 9 n.2 (1st Cir. 2006) (court had to consider any possible prejudice to third party intervenor; citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.82

§ 19.82 Motion and Hearing for Court Ordern*

The plaintiff's request for a voluntary dismissal by court order should generally be made by a formal motion in writing, n0.1 because a court order is required. n1 Additionally, the opposing party is generally entitled to notice of the motion. n2 Because the rule does not require that the plaintiff's request take any specific form, the court may enter an order dismissing the case under Rule 41(a)(2) whenever appropriate under the circumstances. n3 Thus, an oral motion may be appropriate when dismissal is sought during a hearing or trial, n4 and the court has authority to order dismissal sua sponte when appropriate. n5 Furthermore, the district court has discretion to grant or deny a motion for a voluntary dismissal without holding an evidentiary hearing on the applicable issues. n6

If the plaintiff has filed a notice of dismissal despite the expiration of the plaintiff's time to do so under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i), the court has the option to treat the notice as a motion under Rule 41(a)(2) n7 but is not required to do so and may simply vacate the notice. n8 Similarly, if the plaintiff requests the equivalent of a voluntary dismissal through some other procedural tool, the court may treat the application as if made under Rule 41(a)(2). n9

The plaintiff may move for a court order to effect a voluntary dismissal at any time n10 and must do so to obtain a voluntary dismissal if the defending party has already served an answer or motion for summary judgment and the adverse party is unwilling to stipulate. n10.1 If the motion is made at a time when the plaintiff could have voluntarily dismissed as of right under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i), n11 the court has the option to deal with the motion as a notice of dismissal and automatically grant the dismissal; however, in circumstances when the court should impose conditions, it should do so under Rule 41(a)(2). n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 0.1. Berishev v. Chertoff, 486 F. Supp. 2d 202, 205-206 (D. Mass. 2007) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 1. Noonan v. Cunard S.S. Co., 375 F.2d 69, 71 (2d Cir. 1967) (dismissal should be requested by motion); Wilson v. Eli Lilly & Co., 222 F.R.D. 99, 99-100 (D. Md. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 2. Barber v. General Elec. Co., 648 F.2d 1272, 1275 (10th Cir. 1981) (district court properly vacated order granting voluntary dismissal when defendant did not receive notice of motion or opportunity to be heard); Wilson v. Eli Lilly & Co., 222 F.R.D. 99, 99-100 (D. Md. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 3. Nunez v. IBP, Inc., 163 F.R.D. 356, 358-359 (D. Kan. 1995) (only approval is required).

(n6)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Kenrose Mfg. v. Fred Whitaker Co., 53 F.R.D. 491, 493-495 (W.D. Va. 1971) , aff'd on other grounds, 512 F.2d 890 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 5. Kotzen v. Levine, 678 F.2d 140, 141 (11th Cir. 1982) (court sua sponte dismissed under Rule 41(a)(2) for technical failure of proof without waiting for plaintiff's motion).

(n8)Footnote 6. McLaughlin v. Cheshire, 676 F.2d 855, 857 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (district court has discretion to rely entirely on written submissions from parties or to hold evidentiary hearing to resolve issues of fact if they may not be resolved on papers submitted).

(n9)Footnote 7. *Estate of Williams-Moore v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19075, at 13 (M.D.N.C. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Armstrong v. Frostie Co., 453 F.2d 914, 916 (4th Cir. 1971) .

(n11)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Dee-K Enterprises, Inc. v. Heveafil SDN. BHD., 177 F.R.D. 351, 356 (E.D. Va. 1998) (district court treated plaintiff's motion to amend complaint to eliminate all causes of action againstparticular defendant as motion to dismiss under Rule 41(a)(2)).

(n12)Footnote 10. See Kenrose Mfg. v. Fred Whitaker Co., 53 F.R.D. 491, 493-495 (W.D. Va. 1971) (motion at trial).

(n13)Footnote 10.1. Versa Prods. v. Home Depot, USA, Inc., 387 F.3d 1325, 1327 (11th Cir. 2004) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n14)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(i).

(n15)Footnote 12. Parker v. Freightliner Corp., 940 F.2d 1019, 1022-1023 (7th Cir. 1991) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.83

§ 19.83 Grounds for Court Ordered Dismissaln*

[1] Absence of Legal Prejudice to Defending Party

The primary purpose of Rule 41(a)(2) is to protect the interests of the defendant, n1 although the court should weigh the equities and do justice to all the parties in the case. n2 A dismissal without prejudice should be denied when the defendant will suffer "plain legal prejudice," which occurs when actual legal rights are threatened or when monetary or other burdens appear to be extreme or unreasonable. n2.1 Factors to consider in determining legal prejudice include the defendant's effort and expense involved in preparing for trial; excessive delay and lack of diligence on the part of the plaintiff in prosecuting the action; insufficient explanation of the need to take a dismissal; the current stage of the proceedings; n2.2 and the fact that summary judgment has been filed by the defendant. n3 Thus, in the absence of such prejudice, the court should normally grant an order for voluntary dismissal. n4 Furthermore, the court should grant a motion for voluntary dismissal that is not opposed or that is not countered with a relevant objection. n5

The mere filing of a responsive pleading or motion is not alone enough to deny a voluntary dismissal without prejudice. n6 The expense associated with the preparation for trial or of a summary judgment motion may be considered in determining whether the defendant has been prejudiced. n7 Because one of the primary purposes of Rule 41(a) is to permit the plaintiff to dismiss an action and start over again, it has been frequently held that the mere prospect of a second lawsuit following a voluntary dismissal without prejudice does not constitute plain legal prejudice. n8 Even the fact that the plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage by taking a voluntary dismissal is not sufficient grounds to deny a motion under Rule 41(a)(2). n9

[2] Factors Considered in Determination of Whether Defendant Suffered Prejudice

[a] Focus on Rights and Defenses Available to Defendant

"Plain legal prejudice" sufficient for the court to deny a motion for voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(2) occurs when the defending party's actual legal rights are threatened or when monetary or other burdens appear to be extreme or unreasonable. n1 In this determination, courts focus on the rights and defenses available to the defendant, including whether there is prejudice to some legal interest, claim, or argument of the defendant, such as the loss of a federal forum, or the inability to conduct meaningful discovery. n2

Courts have enumerated a number of factors relevant to the consideration of whether the defendant will be prejudiced by the grant of a voluntary dismissal without prejudice. No one set of factors has been adopted in any particular circuit; the lists formulated have been non-exclusive and are meant to serve merely as guidelines for the district court. n3 Some factors commonly considered on a motion for a voluntary dismissal are: (1) the extent to which the suit has progressed, including the defendant's effort and expense in preparing for trial, (2) the plaintiff's diligence in prosecuting the action or in bringing the motion, (3) the duplicative expense of relitigation, and (4) the adequacy of plaintiff's explanationfor the need to dismiss. n4 Other factors that have been cited include whether the motion is made after the defendant has made a dispositive motion or at some other critical juncture in the case n5 and any vexatious conduct or bad faith on plaintiff's part. n6

[b] Progress of Litigation

Unlike the firm deadline for a notice of dismissal as of right, n7 there is no firm cutoff for a motion for dismissal by court order, n8 and the court is more likely to order a voluntary dismissal the earlier the stage of the litigation. Dismissals are routinely granted when the action has not been pending long and there has been little discovery or motion practice. n9 Conversely, a dismissal may be denied when it is sought late in the litigation and the defendant has been put to great effort and expense in defending the action. n10 However, the advanced stage of the litigation and the expense to the defendant do not by themselves mandate denial of the motion. n11 In this regard, a defendant does not suffer prejudice merely because some discovery has been done in a case, especially when the arguments and evidence sought to be presented by the defendant may be used by the defendant in the event the plaintiff refiles the case. n11.1 Thus, a court may grant a dismissal after the completion of pre-trial proceedings and during the trial itself. n12 Regardless of the stage of the litigation, the court should grant the motion when the prejudice to the defendant may be cured through the imposition of terms or conditions. n13

[c] Adequacy of Plaintiff's Reasons for Dismissal

Although some courts have held that the plaintiff's motive for seeking a voluntary dismissal is irrelevant or a secondary consideration, n14 most courts consider the plaintiff's good or bad faith at least one of the factors in a determination of whether to grant an order of dismissal. n15 Thus, all of the following reasons have at one time or other been considered by the courts:

1. A plaintiff's intention to refile and pursue the litigation in state court is a factor but does not by itself constitute prejudice sufficient to justify denial of a motion for a voluntary dismissal. n16 The fact that the original forum is more convenient than the new forum does not necessarily constitute prejudice to the defendant. n17 A difference in the law applied by the two forums may be prejudicial, however. n18

2. The voluntary dismissal of a non-diverse defendant in order to preserve federal diversity jurisdiction. n19

3. The intent to refile a new complaint to correct mistakes in the original pleading. n20 Similarly, a dismissal to secure new or additional evidence supporting plaintiff's claims may be allowed, n21 unless the plaintiff has not been diligent in pursuing the case. n22

4. Voluntary dismissal made for the purpose of remedying a failure to demand a jury trial; however, a court will normally deny the motion. n23 When it does not appear that the voluntary dismissal was sought as a subterfuge to obtain ajury trial, the possibility that the plaintiff might regain that right after refiling in state court does not require denial of the motion. n24

5. To avoid an adverse determination on the merits of the action; a court will deny a motion for dismissal made for this reason. n25 In particular, the court will not permit a plaintiff to use a voluntary dismissal as an indirect method to correct an initial failure to pursue a case in a timely fashion. n26

6. There is a split of authority regarding whether a plaintiff should be permitted voluntarily to dismiss an action without prejudice in order to defeat defenses. Thus, for example, some courts have found that the loss of the statute of limitation defense constitutes plain legal prejudice adverse to the defendant, prohibiting the grant of a motion of dismissal, n27 while other courts have not. n28 Similarly, one court of appeals has held that a voluntary dismissal should not be granted when it is sought to defeat the defendant's defense of forum non conveniens. n29

7. The district court should not grant a motion for voluntary dismissal merely to substitute for an adjournment of a scheduled trial. n30

8. The district court should not permit the plaintiff voluntarily to dismiss the action merely to thwart discovery deadlines. n31

[d] Dismissal to Facilitate Final Judgment for Immediate Appeal

A party may expedite the appeal of an adverse ruling that disposes of fewer than all claims in the action by voluntarily dismissing the remaining claims. For example, the plaintiff may appeal a summary judgment order dismissing most of its claims by dismissing the remaining claims. Some circuits hold that the plaintiff may not revive those claims voluntarily dismissed. n32 Other circuits have permitted appeals when the unadjudicated claims were dismissed without prejudice. n33 Courts are unanimous in holding that the claims voluntarily dismissed may not be reviewed or revived on appeal. n34 Furthermore, a plaintiff may not take voluntary dismissal to obtain appellate review of a claim that was not dismissed on the merits. n35

[3] Denial of Dismissal to Preserve Counterclaim

A court will deny a plaintiff's motion for a voluntary dismissal if the defendant has asserted a compulsory counterclaim that is inextricably linked to the claims the plaintiff wants dismissed. n1 Furthermore, if a counterclaim has been pleaded by a defendant prior to the service on the defendant of the plaintiff's motion to dismiss, the court will not dismiss the action over the defendant's objection unless the counterclaim will remain pending for independent adjudication by the court. n2 Accordingly, a plaintiff may not dismiss an action when the dismissal would destroy federal jurisdiction and prevent the court from adjudicating the defendant's counterclaim. When, however, there is an independent jurisdictional basis for the counterclaim, Rule 41 does not prohibit dismissal of the underlying complaint. n3 The pendency of a compulsory counterclaim will not defeat dismissal, since the court may retain jurisdiction over a compulsory counterclaim under Rule 13 provided that it had subject matter jurisdiction over the main claim. n4

There are several other situations when the existence of a counterclaim will not defeat voluntary dismissal. A defendant may not object to a voluntary dismissal on the grounds that a counterclaim is pending unless the counterclaim was interposed prior to the service of the plaintiff's motion to dismiss. n5 An action may be voluntarily dismissed despite the pendency of a counterclaim if the counterclaim fails to state a claim or is otherwise improperly asserted. n6 Counterclaims that have been dismissed also pose no bar to dismissal of the main claim. n7 Because of the equitable nature of declaratory relief claims, the district court may also grant a plaintiff's Rule 41(a)(2) motion to dismiss despite the existenceof a defendant's pending counterclaim that requests declaratory relief on state law causes of action, at least where that claim could be determined in a pending state court lawsuit also being pursued by the plaintiff. n7.1 Finally, while Rule 41(a)(2) limits the dismissal of an action in which a counterclaim is pending, it does not prohibit dismissal when cross-claims are pending. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Versa Prods. v. Home Depot, USA, Inc., 387 F.3d 1325, 1327 (11th Cir. 2004) ; Clark v. Tansy, 13 F.3d 1407, 1411 (10th Cir. 1993) ; Schwarz v. Folloder, 767 F.2d 125, 129 (5th Cir. 1985) ; Mercer Tool Corp. v. Friedr. Dick GmbH, 175 F.R.D. 173, 175 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Correspondent Servs. Corp. v. First Equities Corp., 338 F.3d 119 (2d Cir. 2004) ; Burnette v. Godshall, 828 F. Supp. 1439, 1444 (N.D. Cal. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. United States ex rel. Doe v. Dow Chem. Co., 343 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 2.2. County of Santa Fe v. Public Serv. Co., 311 F.3d 1031, 1047 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Doe v. Urohealth Sys., Inc., 216 F.3d 157, 160 (1st Cir. 2000) ; United States v. Berg, 190 F.R.D. 539, 543 (E.D. Cal. 1999) ; see [2], below.

(n7)Footnote 4. Andes v. Versant Corp., 788 F.2d 1033, 1037 (4th Cir. 1986) .

(n8)Footnote 5. Bishop v. West Am. Ins. Co., 95 F.R.D. 494, 495 (N.D. Ga. 1982) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Metropolitan Fed. Bank of Iowa, F.S.B. v. W.R. Grace, 999 F.2d 1257, 1262 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 7. Philan Ins., Ltd. v. Frank B. Hall & Co., 786 F. Supp. 345, 349 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 8. Sox v. Estes Express Lines, 92 F.R.D. 71, 72 (D.S.C. 1981) .

(n12)Footnote 9. Grynberg Prod. Corp. v. British Gas, P.L.C., 149 F.R.D. 135, 138 (E.D. Tex. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 1. United States ex rel. Doe v. Dow Chem. Co., 343 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2003) ; SmithKline Beecham Corp. v. Pentech Pharms., Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1002, 1007 (N.D. Ill. 2003) ; United States v. Berg, 190 F.R.D. 539, 543 (E.D. Cal. 1999) ; see Watson v. Clark, 716 F. Supp. 1354, 1356 (D. Nev. 1989) , aff'd without op., 909 F.2d 1490 (9th Cir. 1990) ; Mayes v. Fujimoto, 181 F.R.D. 453, 456 (D. Haw. 1998) , aff'd without op., 173 F.3d 861 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Westlands Water Dist. v. United States, 100 F.3d 94, 97 (9th Cir. 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n15)Footnote 3. Kovalic v. DEC Int'l, 855 F.2d 471, 473 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n16)Footnote 4. Doe v. Urohealth Sys., Inc., 216 F.3d 157, 160 (1st Cir. 2000) ; see, e.g., Grover v. Eli Lilly & Co., 33 F.3d 716, 718 (6th Cir. 1994) (noting factors of defendant's effort and expense of preparation for trial, excessive delay and lack of diligence on part of plaintiff in prosecuting action, insufficient explanation for need to take dismissal, and whether motion for summary judgment has been filed by defendant).

(n17)Footnote 5. Ratkovich v. Smith Kline, 951 F.2d 155, 157-158 (7th Cir. 1991) ; see, e.g., Doe v. Urohealth Sys., Inc., 216 F.3d 157, 160 (1st Cir. 2000) (appellate court remanded for reconsideration of defendant's motion for summary judgment where factors favored defendant, and summary judgment in favor of defendant would probably be res judicata as to parallel state proceeding against party in privity with defendant).

(n18)Footnote 6. Zagano v. Fordham Univ., 900 F.2d 12, 14 (2d Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 899 (1990) .

(n19)Footnote 7. See § 19.42[2][a].

(n20)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n21)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Grynberg Prod. Corp. v. British Gas, P.L.C., 149 F.R.D. 135, 138-139 (E.D. Tex. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 10. Unida v. Levi Strauss & Co., 986 F.2d 970, 974 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n23)Footnote 11. Hamilton v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 679 F.2d 143, 145 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n24)Footnote 11.1. Berry v. General Star Nat'l Ins. Co., 190 F.R.D. 697, 698 (M.D. Ala. 2000) .

(n25)Footnote 12. Hamilton v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 679 F.2d 143, 145 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n26)Footnote 13. Der v. E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., 142 F.R.D. 344, 346 (M.D. Fla. 1992) .

(n27)Footnote 14. B & J Mfg. v. D.A. Frost Indus., Inc., 106 F.R.D. 351, 352 (D. Ohio 1985) .

(n28)Footnote 15. Read Corp. v. Bibco Equip. Co., 145 F.R.D. 288, 291 (D.N.H. 1993) (finding of good faith on part of plaintiff is relevant factor in evaluating whether defendant has or will suffer substantial prejudice).

(n29)Footnote 16. Le Compte v. Mr. Chip, Inc., 528 F.2d 601, 604, 605 (5th Cir. 1976) ; see San Marco v. City of St. Petersburg, 185 F.R.D. 679, 680-681 (M.D. Fla. 1999) (district court granted plaintiff's motion to dismiss voluntarily so that plaintiff could pursue earlier-filed case in state court because defendant who chose not to remove identical state action to federal court would not be prejudiced by voluntary dismissal of federal action so suit could be pursued in state court.

(n30)Footnote 17. Hamilton v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 679 F.2d 143, 146 (9th Cir. 1982) (doctrine of forum non conveniens is inapplicable to motions to dismiss under Rule 41(a)(2)).

(n31)Footnote 18. Grynberg Production Corp. v. British Gas, P.L.C., 149 F.R.D. 135, 138 (E.D. Tex. 1993) (no legal prejudice when Texas state court would apply same forum non conveniens analysis as federal court).

(n32)Footnote 19. Carson v. Allied News Co., 529 F.2d 206, 208 (7th Cir. 1976) .

(n33)Footnote 20. Cf. Gronholz v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 836 F.2d 515, 518 (Fed. Cir. 1987) .

(n34)Footnote 21. Cone v. West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co., 330 U.S. 212, 217, 67 S. Ct. 752, 755, 91 L. Ed. 849 (1947) (may dismiss to gather evidence).

(n35)Footnote 22. Saviour v. Revco Discount Drug Ctr., Inc., 126 F.R.D. 569, 570 (D. Kan. 1989) .

(n36)Footnote 23. Russ v. Standard Ins. Co., 120 F.3d 988, 990 (9th Cir. 1997) (district court abused its discretion when it permitted plaintiff to dismiss action under Rule 41(a)(2) for admitted purpose of refiling and making demand for jury trial).

(n37)Footnote 24. Templeton v. Nedlloyd Lines, 901 F.2d 1273, 1275 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n38)Footnote 25. Kapoulas v. Williams Ins. Agency, Inc., 11 F.3d 1380, 1383 (7th Cir. 1993) ; see RMD Concessions, L.L.C. v. Westfield Corp., 194 F.R.D. 241, 243 (E.D. Va. 2000) (citing Moore's Federal Practice for proposition that dismissal to avoid effect of unfavorable, but not necessarily dispositive, rulings by court may constitute legal prejudice).

(n39)Footnote 26. St. Clair v. General Motors Corp., 10 F. Supp.2d 523, 530-531 (M.D.N.C. 1998) .

(n40)Footnote 27. Metropolitan Fed. Bank of Iowa, F.S.B. v. W.R. Grace & Co., 999 F.2d 1257, 1259 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n41)Footnote 28. Germain v. Semco Serv. Machine Co., 79 F.R.D. 85, 86 (E.D.N.Y. 1978) (plaintiff allowed to attempt to find different forum with more advantageous statute of limitation).

(n42)Footnote 29. Quintero v. Klaveness Ship Lines, 914 F.2d 717, 725 (5th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 499 U.S. 925 (1991) .

(n43)Footnote 30. Greguski v. Long Island R.R., 163 F.R.D. 221, 223-224 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (plaintiff sought delay to correct complaint).

(n44)Footnote 31. In re Exxon Valdez, 102 F.3d 429, 432 (9th Cir. 1996) (trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion to dismiss, when motion was thinly veiled attempt to avoid discovery by movants whose total failure to respond to discovery orders prejudiced defendants).

(n45)Footnote 32. Empire Volkswagen Inc. v. World-Wide Volkswagen Corp., 814 F.2d 90, 94 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n46)Footnote 33. Hicks v. NLO, Inc., 825 F.2d 118, 120 (6th Cir. 1987) .

(n47)Footnote 34. McGregor v. Board of Comr. of Palm Beach County, 956 F.2d 1017, 1021 (11th Cir. 1992) .

(n48)Footnote 35. Laczay v. Ross Adhesives, 855 F.2d 351, 354-355 (6th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1014 (1989) .

(n49)Footnote 1. Bosteve, Ltd. v. Marauszwki, 110 F.R.D. 257, 259 (E.D.N.Y. 1986) (it would be inefficient use of court's resources to adjudicate defendant's claims only, when they are inextricably linked to plaintiff's).

(n50)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n51)Footnote 3. Farmaceutisk Laboratorium Ferring A/S v. Reid Rowell, Inc., 142 F.R.D. 179, 180 (N.D. Ga. 1991) (counterclaim had independent jurisdictional basis).

(n52)Footnote 4. Pipeliners Local Union No. 798 v. Ellerd, 503 F.2d 1193, 1198 (10th Cir. 1974) .

(n53)Footnote 5. United States v. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Org., 449 F.2d 1299, 1300 (3d Cir. 1971) (motion to dismiss served before counterclaim).

(n54)Footnote 6. Abdulaziz v. Metropolitan Dade County, 741 F.2d 1328, 1332 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n55)Footnote 7. SEC v. Lorin, 869 F. Supp. 1117, 1118 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n56)Footnote 7.1. Bader v. Electronics for Imaging, Inc., 195 F.R.D. 659, 663-664 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (decision whether to entertain declaratory relief action is within discretion of court, considering (1) whether exercising jurisdiction over the declaratory relief action would require it to needlessly determine issues of state law; (2) whether the declaratory judgment action is a means of forum shopping; and (3) whether exercising jurisdiction over the declaratory action would defeat a policy of avoiding duplicative litigation; in this case, all three factors weighed against leaving defendants' declaratory relief counterclaim pending).

(n57)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.84

§ 19.84 Effect of Court Ordered Voluntary Dismissaln*

When a court orders a voluntary dismissal on a motion of a claimant, all of the following results take effect:

1. A voluntary dismissal by a court order is without prejudice unless otherwise specified in the order. n1

2. A voluntary dismissal without prejudice under Rule 41(a)(2) renders the proceedings a nullity and puts the parties in the position they would have if the action had never been filed. n2 The dismissal does not have res judicata or collateral estoppel effect on later proceedings. The district court may, in imposing conditions on the dismissal, decline to vacate all prior orders. n3

3. A dismissal with prejudice is a complete adjudication and a bar to a further action between the parties. n4

4. A statute of limitation is generally not tolled by the commencement of an action that is later voluntarily dismissed by court order. n5

5. Although a court-ordered voluntary dismissal normally terminates the action as if never commenced (as stated in item 2, above), the court retains jurisdiction following the dismissal for certain collateral matters. n5.1 Thus, the court may retain jurisdiction to impose Rule 11 sanctions n6 and to award attorney's fees. n7 The district court also retains jurisdiction following a voluntary dismissal by its order to entertain a motion to vacate the dismissal under Rule 60(b) n8 on the grounds of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, or other good cause. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Wilson-Cook Medical, Inc. v. Wilson, 942 F.2d 247, 252 (4th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Robinson v. Willow Glen Acad., 895 F.2d 1168, 1169 (7th Cir. 1990) ; *Moore v. Chicago, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19739, at *6-7 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. National R.R. Passenger Corp. v. International Ass'n of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, 915 F.2d 43, 48 (1st Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Ferrato v. Castro, 888 F. Supp. 33, 34 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Basco v. American Gen. Ins. Corp., 43 F.3d 964, 965 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 5.1. *Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3652, at 4 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 6. Dunn v. Gull, 990 F.2d 348, 350 (7th Cir. 1993) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

(n9)Footnote 7. Valley Disposal, Inc. v. Central Vermont Solid Waste Mgmt. Dist., 71 F. 3d 1053, 1055 (2d Cir. 1995) ; see 42 U.S.C. § 1988.

(n10)Footnote 8. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. First Republic Bank Corp., 997 F.2d 39, 44 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.85

§ 19.85 Terms and Conditions of Dismissaln*

[1] Purpose to Protect Defendant

When it grants an order of voluntary dismissal, the district court has discretion to impose terms and conditions in the order. n1 Because the purpose of this rule is to protect the defendant, n2 the conditions may vary, depending on whether the defendant has suffered any "legal prejudice," which occurs when the defending party's actual legal rights are threatened or when monetary or other burdens appear to be extreme or unreasonable. n2.1 Courts impose few or no conditions early in a case when the defendant faces at most the mere prospect of relitigation in another forum. n3 In contrast, courts impose more stringent conditions when the case has reached an advanced stage. n4

[2] Permissible Terms and Conditions

[a] Condition That Dismissal be With Prejudice

The district court may impose a condition on a voluntary dismissal requiring that the dismissal be with prejudice. n1 The factors considered in determining whether the dismissal should be with prejudice are essentially the same as those considered in determining whether the dismissal should be permitted at all: (1) the defendant's effort and expense in preparing for trial, (2) the plaintiff's lack of diligence in prosecuting the action, and (3) the sufficiency of plaintiff'sexplanation for seeking the dismissal. n2 The court may also consider whether the action or claim sought to be voluntarily dismissed is meritorious. n3

As a general rule, the court must grant a motion for dismissal if the plaintiff requests that the dismissal be with prejudice. If the plaintiff fails to specify whether the dismissal requested is to be with or without prejudice, or requests that it be without prejudice, the decision is left to the district court. Thus, the district court does not abuse its discretion by dismissing with prejudice when the request for dismissal does not specify whether it is to be with or without prejudice. For example, in an action alleging violations of both state and federal securities laws, the district court granted plaintiffs' Rule 41(a)(2) motion for voluntary dismissal, ruling that the dismissal would be without prejudice to plaintiffs' asserting their state law causes of action in a pending state court case, but that the dismissal would be with prejudice in two respects: first, the plaintiff would be prohibited from reasserting the causes of action in federal court, and second, the plaintiff would be prohibited from asserting the federal claims in the state court action. n3.1

Dismissals without prejudice are usually granted only if the plaintiff pays expenses incurred by the defendant in defending the suit. When a plaintiff seeks a dismissal but asks the court to waive costs, a court may be justified in construing the request as one for a dismissal with prejudice. n4

[b] Costs

[i] Determination of Whether to Condition Dismissal on Payment of Costs

The most common condition of a dismissal without prejudice under Rule 41(a)(2) is the payment of the defendant's costs in the litigation. n5 The court may order the condition sua sponte. n6 If the district court denies costs when the dismissal is without prejudice, the court should provide its reasons for the denial. n7 On the other hand, if the voluntary dismissal is granted with prejudice, the court should deny a condition of costs and attorney's fees, because the defendant will not be burdened by the future risk of litigation. n8 As a matter of tactics, a plaintiff faced with the imposition of attorney's fees and costs on a court-ordered motion to dismiss may request that the action be dismissed with prejudice to avoid payment of costs. n9 There may be extraordinary circumstances, however, when the plaintiff's conduct has been so vexatious that an award of costs is nevertheless appropriate even in a dismissal with prejudice. n10

To determine whether to award costs and attorney's fees to defendants after a voluntary dismissal without prejudice, the court should consider the following factors: (1) any excessive and duplicative expense of a second litigation; (2) the effort and expense incurred by a defendant in preparing for trial; (3) the extent to which the litigation has progressed; and (4) the plaintiff's diligence in moving to dismiss. n11

[ii] Availability of Types of Costs

The court typically awards as a term and condition of dismissal without prejudice the expenses the defendant has incurred in defending the suit, including reasonable attorney's fees. n12 The court also requires the payment of costs to deter vexatious litigation. n13 Accordingly, the costs available under the rule are not limited to taxable costs, but may include compensation for all litigation-related costs, including attorney's fees. n14

An award of costs is particularly appropriate when the dismissal was for the purpose of refiling the action in state court. n15 The court may also award the defendant the costs expended in removing the action, whether or not the plaintiff took the dismissal for the purpose of refiling in state court. n16 The court should grant an award of costs for expenses incurred in preparing work product that will not be useful in subsequent litigation of the same claim. n17 Thus, an award of attorney's fees should be limited to compensation for work that may not beused in a second contemplated litigation or in other pending litigation between the parties, and should not be awarded for fees that were incurred unnecessarily. n18

On the other hand, costs should be denied for expenses incurred for work that will be useful in defending subsequent litigation. n19 Costs may also be denied when the defendant's fees were paid by a third party, n20 or when both parties should be held responsible for the expense of the action. n21 One court refused to impose attorney's fees and costs under Rule 41(a)(2) after it required the plaintiff to execute a covenant not to sue the defendants in the future. This court noted that the purpose of an award of attorney's fees and costs is to reimburse the defendant for litigation costs incurred, considering the risk that the same suit will be refiled and will result in duplicative expenses. n22

[c] Other Conditions That Court May Impose

The district court may impose conditions prohibiting refiling of the action in the original forum or requiring refiling in a particular forum, n23 although it generally does not constitute an abuse of discretion to decline to do so. n24 The court may also condition the dismissal on the plaintiff's stipulation not to oppose the use of existing discovery in the refiled

action. n25 Similarly, the court may condition a voluntary dismissal on the plaintiff's production of documents and evidence. n26

[3] Prohibited Terms and Conditions

The court may not impose conditions on the nonmoving defending party to protect the plaintiff from the consequences of the dismissal. Thus, for example, the district court may not dismiss an action on condition that non-moving defendant waive a statute of limitation defense to a claim once the action is refiled in state court. n1 On the other hand, the court may not award the defendant more relief than the defendant could have obtained through an adjudication of the lawsuit on the merits. n2 Furthermore, Rule 41(a)(2) does not provide an independent basis for imposing conditional sanctions on attorneys. n3 Thus, the Eleventh Circuit held that a district court abused its discretion in retaining jurisdiction to assess attorney's fees and costs against the plaintiff and his attorneys in the event that any of the plaintiff's present attorneys brought an action against the defendants in another forum, because the court implicitly held that sanctions were not available in the present action, and a court has no authority to impose sanctions in a case brought in another court. n4

[4] Plaintiff's Response to Imposition of Terms and Conditions

If the plaintiff accepts the dismissal but fails to comply with the conditions imposed by the court, the court may dismiss the action with prejudice. n1 Some appellate courts require the district court to explicitly warn the plaintiff that dismissal with prejudice will result from a failure to comply. n2

As an alternative to a refusal to comply, a plaintiff that believes it may not accept the terms or conditions set by the court need not accept the dismissal but may withdraw the motion and proceed with the action. n3 An order that awards costs and attorney's fees outright, without expressly conditioning the dismissal on their payment, will nonetheless be considered conditional pursuant to the language of Rule 41(a)(2). n4 If it appears that the plaintiff was not aware of the option to withdraw the motion, the matter should be remanded to the district court to present the plaintiff with the choice. n5 However, if a plaintiff knew or should have known of the option to withdraw, but nevertheless accepted the dismissal, the plaintiff may not then object to the conditions. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersConditions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Cross Westchester Dev. Corp. v. Chiulli, 887 F.2d 431, 432 (2d Cir. 1989) (purpose of authorizing terms and conditions on voluntary dismissal is to protect defendant from prejudice).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. See Pontenberg v. Boston Sci. Corp., 252 F.3d 1253, 1255-1256 (11th Cir. 2001) ; *Thomas v. N.Y. State Dep't of Corr. Servs., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16573, at 10 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) ; Boyce v. Augusta-Richmond County, 111 F. Supp. 2d 1363, 1374 (S.D. Ga. 2000) .

(n5)Footnote 3. D'Alto v. Dahon Cal., Inc., 100 F.3d 281, 283 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Brooks v. State Bd. of Elections, 173 F.R.D. 547, 549-550 (S.D. Ga. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Andes v. Versant Corp., 788 F.2d 1033, 1037 (4th Cir. 1986) (plaintiff deserved notice of court's intent to dismiss with prejudice); Brooks v. State Bd. of Elections, 173 F.R.D. 547, 549-550 (S.D. Ga. 1997) (dismissal with prejudice was appropriate condition in class action that had been litigated for almost nine years).

(n8)Footnote 2. Ratkovich v. Smith Kline, 951 F.2d 155, 158 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Burnette v. Godshall, 828 F. Supp. 1439, 1443 (N.D. Cal. 1993) , aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Burnette v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., 72 F.3d 766, 767 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 3.1. Bader v. Electronics for Imaging, Inc., 195 F.R.D. 659, 663 (N.D. Cal. 2000) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Babcock v. McDaniel, 148 F.3d 797, 799 (7th Cir. 1998) (district court did not abuse its discretion in granting voluntary dismissal with prejudice because plaintiff's request for dismissal did not specify whether he was seeking dismissal with or without prejudice, and plaintiff conditioned dismissal on waiver of costs); see [b], below.

(n12)Footnote 5. Westlands Water Dist. v. United States, 100 F.3d 94, 97-98 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 6. Manshack v. Southwestern Elec. Power Co., 915 F.2d 172, 174 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n14)Footnote 7. Schwarz v. Folloder, 767 F.2d 125, 127 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n15)Footnote 8. Cauley v. Wilson, 754 F.2d 769, 772 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n16)Footnote 9. Horton v. TWA Corp., 169 F.R.D. 11, 18 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n17)Footnote 10. Aerotech, Inc. v. Estes, 110 F.3d 1523, 1528 (10th Cir. 1997) (for example, when litigant makes repeated practice of bringing claims and then dismissing claims).

(n18)Footnote 11. United States ex rel. Haskins v. Omega Inst., 25 F. Supp. 2d 510, 515-516 (D.N.J. 1998) .

(n19)Footnote 12. United States ex rel. Stone v. Rockwell Int'l Corp., 282 F.3d 787, 810 (10th Cir. 2004) ; Gossard v. Washington Gas Light Co., 217 F.R.D. 38, 40-41 (D.D.C. 2003) .

(n20)Footnote 13. Bishop v. West Am. Ins. Co., 95 F.R.D. 494, 495 (N.D. Ga. 1982) .

(n21)Footnote 14. McCants v. Ford Motor Co., 781 F.2d 855, 859-860 (11th Cir. 1986) .

(n22)Footnote 15. Taragan v. Eli Lilly & Co., Inc., 838 F.2d 1337, 1340 (D.C. Cir. 1988) .

(n23)Footnote 16. Bishop v. West Am. Ins. Co., 95 F.R.D. 494, 495 (N.D. Ga. 1982) .

(n24)Footnote 17. Cauley v. Wilson, 754 F.2d 769, 772 (7th Cir. 1985) (purpose is to compensate for unnecessary expense).

(n25)Footnote 18. United States ex rel. Haskins v. Omega Inst., Inc., 25 F. Supp. 2d 510, 516 (D.N.J. 1998) ; but see LeBlang Motors, Ltd. v. Subaru of America, Inc., 148 F.3d 680, 685-686 (7th Cir. 1998) (court is not absolutely prohibited from awarding fees for work that may be useful in later case).

(n26)Footnote 19. Bath Iron Works Corp. v. Parmatic Filter Corp., 736 F. Supp. 1175, 1178 (D. Me. 1990) .

(n27)Footnote 20. Read Corp. v. Bibco Equip. Co., 145 F.R.D. 288, 290 (D.N.H. 1993) .

(n28)Footnote 21. Puerto Rico Maritime Shipping Auth. v. Leith, 668 F.2d 46, 51 (1st Cir. 1981) .

(n29)Footnote 22. Westlands Water Dist. v. United States, 100 F.3d 94, 97-98 (9th Cir. 1996) (avoidable costs should not be awarded).

(n30)Footnote 23. See, e.g., Bader v. Electronics for Imaging, Inc., 195 F.R.D. 659, 663 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (district court granted plaintiffs' Rule 41(a)(2) motion for voluntary dismissal, ruling that dismissal would be without prejudice to plaintiffs' asserting their state law causes of action in pending state court case, provided that plaintiff would not reassert causes of action in federal court and that plaintiff would not assert federal claims in state court action).

(n31)Footnote 24. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. of Sapulpa v. Bic Corp., 931 F.2d 1411, 1412 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n32)Footnote 25. Templeton v. Nedlloyd Lines, 901 F.2d 1273, 1275-1276 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n33)Footnote 26. Hunter v. Surgitek Medical Engr. Corp., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9696, at *11-*12 (N.D. Ind. 1992) (court may condition dismissal on production of documents and evidence).

(n34)Footnote 1. Cross Westchester Dev. Corp. v. Chiulli, 887 F.2d 431, 432 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n35)Footnote 2. Ferrato v. Castro, 888 F. Supp. 33, 34 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (court refused to impose condition that would protect defendant from all future copyright infringement claims, regardless of circumstances).

(n36)Footnote 3. Koch v. Hankins, 8 F.3d 650, 652 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n37)Footnote 4. Woodard v. STP Corp., 170 F.3d 1043, 1045 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n38)Footnote 1. LeBlang Motors, Ltd. v. Subaru of America, Inc., 148 F.3d. 680, 687 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n39)Footnote 2. Choice Hotels Int'l, Inc. v. Goodwin & Boone, 11 F.3d 469, 471 (4th Cir. 1993) ; Medina v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 737 F.2d 140, 143 (1st Cir. 1984) .

(n40)Footnote 3. Gravatt v. Columbia Univ., 845 F.2d 54, 55-56 (2d Cir. 1988) (opportunity to withdraw motion for dismissal without prejudice must be afforded plaintiff before dismissal is converted to one with prejudice).

(n41)Footnote 4. Beard v. Sheet Metal Works Union, 908 F.2d 474, 476 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n42)Footnote 5. Lau v. Glendora Unified Sch. Dist., 792 F.2d 929, 931 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n43)Footnote 6. McGregor v. Board of Comm'rs of Palm Beach County, 956 F.2d 1017, 1021 (11th Cir. 1992) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.86

§ 19.86 Appeal of Voluntary Dismissal by Court Ordern*

[1] Appealability of Voluntary Dismissal Orders

An order granting a voluntary dismissal without prejudice is final and is immediately appealable by the defendant. n1 On the other hand, the plaintiff generally may notappeal a voluntary dismissal without prejudice because it generally does not constitute an involuntary adverse judgment. n2 Furthermore, even if the court imposes costs and fees as a condition of voluntary dismissal, there is no legal prejudice and, therefore, the voluntary dismissal is not adverse and appealable by the plaintiff. n3 However, some courts have held that the award of costs is appealable if the amount is so clearly unreasonable as to constitute legal prejudice. n4 Other courts have held that an award of costs or fees is always appealable but that the review must be limited to whether the district court abused its discretion in awarding the costs or fees. n5

[2] Standard of Review

The grant or denial of a motion for a voluntary dismissal is reviewable under the abuse of discretion standard. n1 In its determination of abuse of discretion, the court of appeals considers the following factors, which are the same that the district court should use in its initial determination: (1) the degree of defendant's effort and expense involved in preparing for trial; (2) whether there has been excessive delay and lack of diligence on the part of the plaintiff in prosecuting the action; (3) the sufficiency in the plaintiff's explanation of the need to take the dismissal; and (4) the present stage of litigation, for example, whether a motion for summary judgment had been filed by the defendant. n2 The appellate court also reviews conditions placed on a Rule 41(a)(2) motion for voluntary dismissal for abuse of discretion. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsAppellate Review

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Brown v. Baeke, 413 F.3d 1121, 1124 n.3 (10th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n3)Footnote 2. Romoland Sch. Dist. v. Inland Empire Energy Ctr., LLC, 548 F.3d 738, 747-748 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Trujillo v. Banco Cent. Del Ecuador, 379 F.3d 1298, 1302 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Versa Prods. v. Home Depot, USA, Inc., 387 F.3d 1325, 1327 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Duffy v. Ford Motor Co., 218 F.3d 623, 628 (6th Cir. 2000) (review of award of attorney's fees is limited to whether district court abused its discretion); GAF Corp. v. Transamerica Ins. Co., 665 F.2d 364, 367-368 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (conditions may be overturned on appeal if not reasonable).

(n7)Footnote 1. 103 Investors I, L.P. v. Square D Co., 372 F.3d 1213, 1218 (10th Cir. 2004) ; Elbaor v. Tripath Imaging, Inc., 279 F.3d 314, 317-318 (5th Cir. 2002) ; Tolle v. Carroll Touch, Inc., 23 F.3d 174, 177 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 2. See Elbaor v. Tripath Imaging, Inc., 279 F.3d 314, 317-318 (5th Cir. 2002) ; Witzman v. Gross, 148 F.3d 988, 992 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Coliseum Square Ass'n v. Jackson, 465 F.3d 215, 249 (5th Cir. 2006) .

130 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSALS
D. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL BY ORDER OF COURT

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 19.87through 19.99

[Reserved]

§§ 19.87[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSALS

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.100

§ 19.100 Use of Involuntary Dismissaln*

[1] Nature of Involuntary Dismissal

The trial court has express authority in the federal rules to dismiss an action when a claimant fails to prosecute its claim or refuses to comply with a court order or federal civil rule. n1 The purposes of this "involuntary dismissal" authority are to achieve the orderly disposition of cases, n2 prevent undue delay in the disposition of pending cases, and to avoid congestion in the calendar of the court. n3 The district court has authority to order involuntary dismissals for two types of misconduct: n4 failure to prosecute n5 and failure to comply with a court order or a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure. n6 The court may dismiss either an action or any claim against the defendant. n7 Consequently, the court need not dismiss the entire lawsuit but may eliminate individual causes of action. Similarly, the court may dismiss fewer than all the defendants. n8

[2] Drastic Remedy That May be Granted in Discretion of Court

The district court has discretion whether to order an involuntary dismissal for a plaintiff's failure to prosecute or to comply with a court order or federal civil rule. n1 However, the discretion is limited because dismissal is such a severe sanction that it should be imposed only after careful consideration. n2 A dismissal for failure to prosecute or to comply with a court order is such a severe sanction that it may be used only in extreme circumstances, n3 as it generally has the same effect of an adjudication on the merits. n4 Consequently, when determining whether or not to dismiss a case under Rule 41(b), a district court should first consider whether any less severe sanction could adequately remedy the effect of the delay on the court and the prejudice to the opposing party. n5

In applying the rule, the court must strike a balance between the competing interests of efficiently managing its docket and deciding cases on their merits. n6 Courts should be especially careful not to prematurely dismiss a case involving civil rights claims n7 or a pro se plaintiff. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.50 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. United States v. United States Currency in the Amount of Six Hundred Thousand Three Hundred & Forty One Dollars & No Cents ($600,341.00), 240 F.R.D. 59, 64, n.8 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Mann v. Lewis, 108 F.3d 145, 147 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. See § 19.101.

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 19.101.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. Colle v. Brazos Cty., Tex., 981 F.2d 237, 240 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Briscoe v. Klaus, 538 F.3d 252, 258 (3d Cir. 2008) .

(n11)Footnote 2. O'Rourke Bros., Inc. v. Nesbitt Burns, Inc., 201 F.3d 948, 953 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Betty K Agencies, LTD v. M/V Monada, 432 F.3d 1333, 1339 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); see Beck v. Bassett (In re Southeast Banking Corp.), 204 F.3d 1322, 1331 (11th Cir. 2000) ; see also § 19.104.

(n14)Footnote 5. Smith v. Gold Dust Casino, 526 F.3d 402, 406 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n15)Footnote 6. Mann v. Lewis, 108 F.3d 145, 147 (8th Cir. 1997) (district court must weigh need to advance docket against consequence of irreversibly extinguishing litigant's claim).

(n16)Footnote 7. Minnette v. Time Warner, 997 F.2d 1023, 1025 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n17)Footnote 8. Schilling v. Walworth County Park & Planning Comm'n, 805 F.2d 272, 277 (7th Cir. 1986) (need for district court to exercise discretion in deciding among alternative sanctions was especially great because of plaintiff's pro se status).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSALS

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.101

§ 19.101 Dismissal for Failure to Prosecuten*

[1] Purpose of Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute

A district court has authority under the federal rules to dismiss an action for the plaintiff's failure to prosecute. n1 District court local rules commonly set guidelines that specify the consequences of failure to prosecute. n2 The purposes of the authority to dismiss for failure to prosecute are to achieve the orderly disposition of cases, n3 prevent undue delay in the cases, and to avoid congestion in the calendar of the court. n4 It imposes a duty of due diligence on a plaintiff, based on the policy favoring the prompt disposition of cases. n5 However, a Rule 41(b) dismissal is considered by the courts to be a harsh remedy appropriate only in severe situations; thus, the courts should be especially hesitant to dismiss for procedural deficiencies when the failure to prosecute is by a pro se litigant. n6

[2] Factors Considered in Determination of Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute

[a] In General

A district court must base a dismissal for failure to prosecute on the record as a whole and in consideration of the totality of circumstances. n1 Failure to prosecute is not defined in the rule n2 but may occur either through simple inaction or through a deliberate pattern of delay. n3 Ordinarily, a single instance of misconduct is not sufficient to dismiss under Rule 41(b). n3.1 However, a particular instance may be the culminating event for a dismissal, at least when accompanied by a warning. For example, a plaintiff's failure to respond to a particular motion which delays the litigation may be the basis for a dismissal for lack of prosecution, but the judge must warn the plaintiff that dismissal is a possibility from the failure to respond, either expressly or by making clear that no further extensions of time to respond will be granted. n3.2

Most of the circuits have developed various tests under the rule, with overlapping or similar factors. n3.3 Typical is the Second Circuit, which applies the following factors in making its determination of whether the district court acted within its discretion in dismissing plaintiff's action for failure to prosecute: (1) the duration of the plaintiff's failures, (2) whether plaintiff had received notice that further delays would result in dismissal, (3) whether the defendant is likely to be prejudiced by further delay, (4) whether the district judge has taken care to strike a balance between alleviating court calendar congestion and protecting a party's right to due process and a fair chance to be heard, and (5) whether the judge has adequately assessed the efficacy of lesser sanctions. n4

Similarly, the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits have adopted a standard authorizing a dismissal for failure to prosecute only when: (1) there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff; and (2) the district court has expressly determined that lesser sanctions would not prompt diligent prosecution or the record shows that the district court employed lesser sanctions that proved to be futile, and, in close cases, one of three aggravating factors was present: (a) delay caused by the plaintiff rather than the attorney; (b) actual prejudice to the defendant; or (c) delay caused by intentional conduct. n5

In any event, the court should balance all of the applicable factors considered in the case, and not focus on any particular factors, n6 although in a given case any one may be controlling. n7 In order to facilitate appellate review, the trial court should specify its findings on the dismissal issue; n8 otherwise, an appellate court may reverse and remand when the district court's order does not contain express findings on which the dismissalwas based and the reason is not clear from the record. n8.1

[b] Duration and Number of Failures to Prosecute

With respect to the factor regarding the duration of a failure to prosecute, the court will consider whether the failure is significant in duration or number and whether attributable to the plaintiff. n9 There is no specific rule defining the length of delay or number of delays that will constitute a failure to prosecute, and the degree of failure is on a continuum. n10 Thus, a court may clearly dismiss an action when the delays or omissions are repeated or of long duration, n11 and conduct resulting in a relatively short period of delay may still justify dismissal when it is part of a deliberate pattern of obstinance. n12 A failure to prosecute occurring at a later stage of the action is more likely to result in dismissal. n13 Disobedience of multiple court orders may subject the plaintiff to a dismissal for failure to prosecute, regardless of the total duration of the action. n14 On the other hand, dismissal will not be justified by isolated delays of short duration, n15 or a single violation. n16 Furthermore, a court may excuse much longer delays if there are no other aggravating factors. n17

[c] Responsibility for Delay

In making its determination whether to order an involuntary dismissal, a court should consider only those delays that are the claiming party's or attorney's personal responsibility; n18 the court may ignore delays attributable to the defendant. n19 For example, one appellate court reversed a dismissal when a six-month delay in an action was explained in part by the transfer of the pro se inmate plaintiff to a county prison facility that was lacking a library and legal assistance resources needed by the plaintiff to pursue the claim. n20 The fact that both the plaintiff and defendant were dilatory may not always excuse plaintiff's conduct. n21

[d] Excuses for Plaintiff's Delay

Circumstances beyond the plaintiff's control may excuse delay in prosecution of an action. The most typical example is the illness of the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney, either or which is a valid excuse for a delay under Rule 41(b). n22 More weight may be placed on this factor if the ill attorney is the only attorney responsible for the case. n23 Assertions of illness must be substantiated, n24 however, and dismissal may be justified despite assertion of an illness when the illness does not prevent the attorney from proceeding with the case. n25 Similarly, a delay caused by the plaintiff's substitution of counsel will generally be sufficient to justify an involuntary dismissal, absent evidence that the substitution was part of a strategy of delay. n26 Finally, dismissal should not be granted when a delay is attributable to ongoing settlement negotiations. n27

On the other hand, the plaintiff's financial difficulties do not excuse a failure to prosecute or to comply with a court order. n28 Thus, a party's claim that destitution prevented him from complying with the order is not an absolute bar to dismissal, especially when the dismissal is also based on other factors. n29 Furthermore, a dismissal attributable to the unexcused conduct of counsel does not necessarily impose an unjust penalty on the client. n30 Some courts are reluctant to grant dismissal based on conduct attributable to counsel, however, and in close cases dismissal may be denied if the plaintiff was not personally responsible for the delay. n31

[e] Contumacious Conduct

Willful contempt (contumacious conduct) is so harmful to the orderly and expeditious litigation process that, if egregious, it may alone be grounds for a Rule 41(b) order of dismissal. n32 Furthermore, when there has been a deliberate, contemptuous refusal to proceed with trial, some courts may order involuntary dismissal evenwhen the threatened delay is short, and may dispense with the consideration of less severe alternative sanctions. n32.1 It should also be noted that the presence of merely intentional or aggravating conduct may also justify dismissal in an otherwise close case. n33

[f] Prejudice to Defendant

If a delay is unreasonable, a showing of prejudice to the defendant may be presumed or may be unnecessary. n34 When moderate or more excusable delays are involved, the court may consider the degree of actual prejudice. n35 Prejudice may be caused by many types of events, such as, when the pendency of the action impairs the parties' pecuniary and property interests, n36 or when the defendant has expended substantial time and money in the preparation of papers and appearances at hearings. n37 The mere fact that the defendant will be required to fund a defense if the suit continues is not prejudice of the sort that will mandate dismissal. n38

[g] Notice of Impending Dismissal

Whether or not the district court has given an express prior warning or some other notice regarding the possibility of dismissal is a factor to be considered in whether dismissal should be ordered. However, a failure to warn does not make an order invalid. n39 Thus, some warning should usually be given, and dismissal may be an abuse of discretion if it is not, particularly if the dismissal is made sua sponte, n40 or against a pro se litigant. n41 Notice is not required when dismissal follows a noticed motion by the defendant. n42 Also, express notice may not be required when the plaintiff or plaintiff's counsel was clearly put on notice from the circumstances that dismissal was likely. n43 Notice on plaintiff's counsel alone is sufficient. n44

[h] Balancing Expediency With Due Process Rights of Plaintiff

In its determination of whether to dismiss, the court should balance the need to alleviate calendar congestion with the plaintiff's rights to due process and should consider the overall effect of the plaintiff's conduct on other cases pending on its docket. Thus, dismissal may be particularly justified when a failure to appear at trial is involved, because such failures are among the primary causes in creating a backlog of cases on the calendar. n45 The length that the case had been pending should also be considered. n46 A dismissal may represent an abuse of discretion, however, if the burden on the court's calendar is not truly attributable to the plaintiff's conduct. n47 In determining whether plaintiff's due process rights have been violated, the court should consider the merits of plaintiff's action n48 and whether the plaintiff had a fair opportunity to be heard before the dismissal. n49

[i] Availability of Less Drastic Sanctions

Unless willful contempt is involved, n50 the district court should always consider first whether any sanction which is less severe than dismissal could adequately remedy the effect of the delay on the court and the prejudice to the opposing party. n51 Furthermore, to facilitate appellate review, the district court's consideration of the possibility of lesser sanction should be evident from the record. n51.1 There is no requirement, however, that the district court make specific findings regarding alternative sanctions, particularly when the parties have discussed the potential remedies in their papers. n52 The alternative sanctions that the court should consider include the assessment of fines, costs, or damages against the plaintiff or his counsel, attorney disciplinary measures, conditional dismissal, dismissal without prejudice, and explicit warnings. n53

A court may grant an involuntary dismissal with prejudice when lesser sanctions have already proved futile, n54 when the defendant has already been irreversibly prejudiced, n55 or when the defendants would be forced to bear the costs for plaintiff's misconduct. n56 When the plaintiff's case appears meritless, and proceeding to trial would prove futile, dismissal with prejudice would be a lesser sanction than dismissing without prejudice and imposing costs. n57

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to Prosecute

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.51 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Employee Painters' Trust v. Ethan Enters., 480 F.3d 993, 997 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. United States v. United States Currency in the Amount of Six Hundred Thousand Three Hundred & Forty One Dollars & No Cents ($600,341.00), 240 F.R.D. 59, 64, n.8 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Mann v. Lewis, 108 F.3d 145, 147 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Ahmed v. I.N.S., 911 F. Supp. 132, 134 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (defendant may move for dismissal where plaintiff fails to prosecute).

(n7)Footnote 6. Mendez v. Walker, 110 F. Supp.2d 209, 216 (W.D.N.Y. 2000) (district court refused to dismiss complaint after pro se plaintiff failed to comply with court order requiring plaintiff to submit documents in English instead of Spanish).

(n8)Footnote 1. Jackson v. City of New York, 22 F.3d 71, 74 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n9)Footnote 2. Lyell Theatre Corp. v. Loews Corp. 682 F.2d 37, 42 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Lyell Theatre Corp. v. Loews Corp. 682 F.2d 37, 42 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n11)Footnote 3.1. Gardner v. United States, 211 F.3d 1305, 1308 (D.C. Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1114 (2000) (court abused its discretion when it dismissed pro se plaintiff's complaint for single failure to appear at motion hearing).

(n12)Footnote 3.2. Bolt v. Loy, 227 F.3d 854, 856 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n13)Footnote 3.3. Briscoe v. Klaus, 538 F.3d 252, 258 (3d Cir. 2008) (specifying six factors).

(n14)Footnote 4. Shannon v. GE, 186 F.3d 186, 193-194 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n15)Footnote 5. Colle v. Brazos Cty., Tex., 981 F.2d 237, 242, 244 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 6. Briscoe v. Klaus, 538 F.3d 252, 258 (3d Cir. 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 7. Ball v. City of Chicago, 2 F.3d 752, 756 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n18)Footnote 8. Shannon v. GE, 186 F.3d 186, 193 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n19)Footnote 8.1. Moneymaker v. CoBen (In re Eisen), 31 F.3d 1447, 1451 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n20)Footnote 9. Jackson v. City of New York, 22 F.3d 71, 75 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n21)Footnote 10. Lyell Theatre Corp. v. Loews Corp. 682 F.2d 37, 42 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n22)Footnote 11. 3 Penny Theater Corp. v. Plitt Theatres, Inc., 812 F.2d 337, 339 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n23)Footnote 12. Peart v. City of New York, 992 F.2d 458, 460-463 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n24)Footnote 13. Salinas v. Sun Oil Co., 819 F.2d 105, 106 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n25)Footnote 14. Ball v. City of Chicago, 2 F.3d 752, 755 (7th Cir. 1993) (although case only twenty-seven months old, dismissal warranted when attorneys failed to appear at four status conferences or to respond in timely manner to discovery requests).

(n26)Footnote 15. McNeal v. Papasan, 842 F.2d 787, 789-790 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n27)Footnote 16. In re Bluestein & Co., 68 F.3d 1022, 1027 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n28)Footnote 17. Gibbs v. Hawaiian Eugenia Corp., 966 F.2d 101, 109 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n29)Footnote 18. Briscoe v. Klaus, 538 F.3d 252, 258 (3d Cir. 2008) .

(n30)Footnote 19. Romandette v. Weetabix Co., 807 F.2d 309, 312 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n31)Footnote 20. Romandette v. Weetabix Co., 807 F.2d 309, 311 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n32)Footnote 21. See Pyramid Energy, Ltd. v. Heyl & Patterson, Inc., 869 F.2d 1058, 1063 (7th Cir. 1989) (delay not excused when course of litigation was within control of plaintiff).

(n33)Footnote 22. Taylor v. Combustion Engr., Inc., 782 F.2d 525, 528 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n34)Footnote 23. Dickerson v. Board of Educ. of Ford Heights, Ill., 32 F.3d 1114, 1118 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n35)Footnote 24. Dickerson v. Board of Educ. of Ford Heights, Ill., 32 F.3d 1114, 1118 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n36)Footnote 25. Ball v. City of Chicago, 2 F.3d 752, 754 (7th Cir. 1993) (dismissal despite heart attack of plaintiff's lead counsel justified when excuse was applicable only to small portion of total course of conduct of delay).

(n37)Footnote 26. Ball v. City of Chicago, 2 F.3d 752, 754 (7th Cir. 1993) (dismissal despite heart attack and continuing coronary problems of plaintiff's lead counsel warranted when the excuse was applicable only to a small portion of the total course of conduct).

(n38)Footnote 27. GCIU Employer Retirement Fund v. Chicago Tribune Co., 8 F.3d 1195, 1201 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n39)Footnote 28. In re Eisen, 31 F.3d 1447, 1452 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n40)Footnote 29. Moon v. Newsome, 863 F.2d 835, 839 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n41)Footnote 30. Knoll v. AT&T Co., 176 F.3d 359, 363-364 (6th Cir. 1999) ; Pyramid Energy, Ltd. v. Heyl &

Patterson, Inc., 869 F.2d 1058, 1061 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n42)Footnote 31. Lowe v. City of E. Chicago, Ind., 897 F.2d 272, 274 (7th Cir. 1990) (appellate court reluctant to affirm dismissal when there was no sign of either client neglect of court processes or knowledge of attorney's neglect).

(n43)Footnote 32. Sealed Appellant v. Sealed Appellee, 452 F.3d 415, 417-418 (5th Cir. 2006) .

(n44)Footnote 32.1. Peart v. New York, 992 F.2d 458, 461 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n45)Footnote 33. Malone v. United States Postal Serv., 833 F.2d 128, 131-132 (9th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 819 (1988) .

(n46)Footnote 34. Daniels v. Brennan, 887 F.2d 783, 788-789 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n47)Footnote 35. Lyell Theatre Corp. v. Loews Corp. 682 F.2d 37, 43 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n48)Footnote 36. In re Eisen, 31 F.3d 1447, 1452 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n49)Footnote 37. West Coast Theater Corp. v. City of Portland, 897 F.2d 1519, 1524 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n50)Footnote 38. Rogers v. Kroger Co., 669 F.2d 317, 319-321 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n51)Footnote 39. Smith v. Gold Dust Casino, 526 F.3d 402, 405-406 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n52)Footnote 40. Hamilton v. Neptune Orient Lines, Ltd., 811 F.2d 498, 499 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n53)Footnote 41. See Smith v. Gold Dust Casino, 526 F.3d 402, 406 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n54)Footnote 42. Morris v. Morgan Stanley & Co., 942 F.2d 648, 652 (9th Cir. 1991) (notice only required if sua sponte).

(n55)Footnote 43. See In re Bluestein & Co., 68 F.3d 1022, 1026 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n56)Footnote 44. In re Bluestein & Co., 68 F.3d 1022, 1026 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n57)Footnote 45. Peart v. City of New York, 992 F.2d 458, 461-462 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n58)Footnote 46. In re Eisen, 31 F.3d 1447, 1452 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n59)Footnote 47. Nita v. Connecticut Dep't of Envtl. Protection, 16 F.3d 482, 485-486 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n60)Footnote 48. Ball v. City of Chicago, 2 F.3d 752, 759 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n61)Footnote 49. Jackson v. City of New York, 22 F.3d 71, 75-76 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n62)Footnote 50. See Sealed Appellant v. Sealed Appellee, 452 F.3d 415, 417-418 (5th Cir. 2006) ; see [e], above.

(n63)Footnote 51. Smith v. Gold Dust Casino, 526 F.3d 402, 406 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n64)Footnote 51.1. Berry v. Cigna/RSI Cigna, 975 F.2d 1188, 1191 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n65)Footnote 52. Morris v. Morgan Stanley & Co., 942 F.2d 648, 652 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n66)Footnote 53. Boudwin v. Graystone Ins. Co., Ltd., 756 F.2d 399, 401 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n67)Footnote 54. Sturgeon v. Airborne Freight Corp., 778 F.2d 1154, 1160 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n68)Footnote 55. In re Eisen, 31 F.3d 1447, 1453 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n69)Footnote 56. Moon v. Newsome, 863 F.2d 835, 837 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n70)Footnote 57. Sturgeon v. Airborne Freight Corp., 778 F.2d 1154, 1160 (5th Cir. 1985) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSALS

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.102

§ 19.102 Dismissal for Failure to Comply With Court Ordern*

[1] Nature and Purpose of Rule

The district court has the discretion under Rule 41(b) to order an involuntary dismissal for a plaintiff's failure to comply with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or a court order. n1 Noncompliance may be treated as a failure to prosecute, and courts usually apply the same test used to evaluate a dismissal for a failure to prosecute in considering a dismissal for failure to comply with a court order. n2 Noncompliance with rules includes a failure to comply with local rules of the district court. n3

The provision of Rule 41(b) for dismissal due to noncompliance with orders overlaps with the provision of Rule 37(b)(2)(C) n4 authorizing dismissal for disobedience of discovery orders. Furthermore, Rule 16(f), which sanctions a failure to obey a scheduling or pre-trial order, incorporates the provisions of Rule 37. n5 Although the criteria for sanctions pursuant to the three rules are the same, n6 the specific provisions of Rule 16 or Rule 37, rather than the general provisions of Rule 41(b), should govern in any case of disparity between the rules. n7 Nonetheless, a repeated failure to comply with discovery orders may qualify for dismissal under Rule 41(b). n8

Because an involuntary dismissal with prejudice is a severe sanction, the court may impose the sanction only for willful disobedience of a court order. n9 To satisfy the requirement, the district court need only find that a party acted deliberately rather than accidentally and need not find bad faith. n10

[2] Orders Subject to Noncompliance Rule

If a claimant fails to comply with any of the following types of orders, the action or claim is subject to involuntary dismissal:

1. Orders regarding pleadings. For example, a dismissal may be ordered under Rule 41(b) for failure to obey an order to file an amended complaint complying with the requirement of Rule 8 that the pleading be short, plain and concise n1 or for failing to meet the deadline for filing the amended complaint. n2

2. Pre-Trial orders. The willful violation of a pre-trial order may be sanctioned with dismissal under Rule 41(b). n3

3. Orders relating to service or filing of papers. The district court may dismiss an action when the plaintiff fails to comply with an order to serve or file papers in compliance with Rule 5. n4

4. Discovery orders. The district court may dismiss an action for failure to comply with court orders related to discovery. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to Comply

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.52 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b); see Bowling v. Hasbro, Inc., 403 F.3d 1373, 1375 (Fed. Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Malone v. United States Postal Serv., 833 F.2d 128, 130 (9th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 819 (1988) ; see § 19.101[2][a].

(n4)Footnote 3. World Thrust Films, Inc. v. International Family Entertainment, Inc., 41 F.3d 1454, 1456 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f).

(n7)Footnote 6. Lucien v. Breweur, 9 F.3d 26, 29 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Societe Internationale Pour Participations Industrielles et Commerciales, S. A., 357 U.S. 197, 207, 78 S. Ct. 1087, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1255 (1958) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Roland v. Salem Contract Carriers, Inc., 811 F.2d 1175, 1178 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Smith v. Gold Dust Casino, 526 F.3d 402, 406 (8th Cir. 2008) (sanction imposed by district court must be proportionate to litigant's transgression).

(n11)Footnote 10. Hutchins v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., 116 F.3d 1256, 1260 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Simmons v. Abruzzo, 49 F.3d 83, 87 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Harding v. Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 707 F.2d 46, 50-51 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Malone v. United States Postal Serv., 833 F.2d 128, 133 (9th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 819 (1988) .

(n15)Footnote 4. St. Michael Balzarini v. Borg, 976 F.2d 736 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Hutchins v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., 116 F.3d 1256, 1260 (8th Cir. 1997) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSALS

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.103

§ 19.103 Procedure for Involuntary Dismissaln*

[1] Initiation of Request for Involuntary Dismissal

Rule 41(b) indicates that it may be requested by motion by a defending party. n1 The sanction it provides may be employed only by a defending party against a plaintiff, n2 although a plaintiff as a defending party to a counterclaim may use it to seek dismissal of the counterclaim. n3 Furthermore, the court has inherent power to order an involuntary dismissal sua sponte. n4

[2] Hearing Generally Required

The court should generally hold a hearing to determine whether to enter an order of involuntary dismissal, n1 because the involuntary dismissal with prejudice is a severe sanction. n1.1 For example, a hearing may be held to determine the credibility of the plaintiff's explanation. n2 In extraordinary circumstances, a hearing may not be necessary. One district court concluded that no hearing was required when the plaintiff, who was an attorney who was representing himself, failed to respond to the motion to dismiss. In that case the court held that no hearing was necessary because the attorneyhad independent knowledge that his delinquency could be grounds for dismissal. n3 Furthermore, no remand for a hearing was necessary when it was clear that the district court had a lesser remedy at its disposal. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsHearingsCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.50[6] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Societe Internationale Pour Participations Industrielles Et Commerciales, S. A. v. Rogers, 357

U.S. 197, 207, 78 S. Ct. 1087, 1093, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1255 (1958) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(c).

(n5)Footnote 4. Minnette v. Time Warner, 997 F.2d 1023, 1027 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 1. *Dewdney v. Eckerd Corp., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44854, at *9-10 (M.D. Fla. June 6, 2008) .

(n7)Footnote 1.1. Betty K Agencies, LTD v. M/V Monada, 432 F.3d 1333, 1339 (11th Cir. 2005) ; see § 19.100[2].

(n8)Footnote 2. Colon v. Mack, 56 F.3d 5, 7 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Guy v. City of Wilmington, 169 F.R.D. 593, 596 (D. Del. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 4. Colon v. Mack, 56 F.3d 5, 7 (2d Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSALS

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.104

§ 19.104 Effect of Involuntary Dismissaln*

[1] Constitutes Adjudication on Merits

Any involuntary dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits n1 and precludes a subsequent action on the claim under the doctrine of res judicata unless the court specifies otherwise in its order or by local rule. n2 When the court dismisses an action sua sponte, rather than pursuant to the rule, the dismissal is still on the merits because it qualifies as a dismissal "not provided for in this rule." n3 Dismissals "not provided for in this rule," have included dismissals for failure to comply with a discovery order under Rule 37, n4 to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), n5 and to file suit within the applicable statute of limitation. n6

Because dismissal of an action under Rule 41(b) for failure to prosecute or to comply with a court order constitutes an adjudication on the merits unless the court orders otherwise, the rule puts the burden on the plaintiff to persuade the district court to specify that a dismissal is without prejudice. n7 When the district court elects to dismiss an action without prejudice under Rule 41(b), the dismissal leaves the parties in the same legal position as if no suit had been filed. n8 Thus, in such a case, the statute of limitation would not be tolled by the filing of the original suit. n9

[2] Exception for Certain Dismissals

Rule 41(b) provides specific exemptions for certain dismissals from the presumption that a dismissal under the rule is with prejudice, including dismissals for lack of jurisdiction, improper venue, and failure to join a party under Rule 19. n1 Thus, a dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(1) (or a dismissal under the other two types of exempt dismissals) constitutes a dismissal without prejudice under Rule 41(b). n2 It should be noted, however, that a failure to respond to a motion to dismiss, even if made on jurisdictional grounds, may be deemed to be a failure to prosecute and thus a dismissal with prejudice under Rule 41(b). n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.50[7] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. LeBlang Motors, Ltd. v. Subaru of Am., Inc., 148 F.3d 680, 687 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Kimmel v. Texas Commerce Bank, 817 F.2d 39, 40-41 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Papilsky v. Berndt, 466 F.2d 251, 255 (2d Cir. 1972) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1077 (1972) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Paganis v. Blonstein, 3 F.3d 1067, 1070-1071 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 6. PRC Harris, Inc. v. Boeing Co., 700 F.2d 894, 896 (2d Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 936 (1983) .

(n8)Footnote 7. LeBeau v. Taco Bell, Inc., 892 F.2d 605, 608 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Hilbun v. Goldberg, 823 F.2d 881, 883 (5th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 962 (1988) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Hilbun v. Goldberg, 823 F.2d 881, 884 (5th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 962 (1988) .

(n11)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n12)Footnote 2. Costello v. United States, 365 U.S. 265, 284, 81 S. Ct. 534, 5 L. Ed. 2d 551 (1961) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Kimmel v. Texas Commerce Bank, 817 F.2d 39, 40-41 (7th Cir. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART V Pretrial Stage
CHAPTER 19 DISMISSALS
PART III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSALS

2-19 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 19.105

§ 19.105 Appeal of Order Regarding Involuntary Dismissaln*

An order to dismiss for failure to prosecute or to comply with a court order or rule is immediately appealable n1 and is reviewable under an abuse of discretion standard. n2 In its review on appeal under that standard, the appellate court must consider the procedural history of the case and its status at the time of dismissal to determine whether the record supports the trial court's findings in the balancing of factors to determine whether to order an involuntary dismissal. n2.1 If the trial court ordered a dismissal without prejudice, the court of appeals will rarely find an abuse of discretion because the plaintiff may simply refile the suit. n3 It should be noted that because the commencement of a suit later dismissed under Rule 41(b) does not toll the statute of limitation, n4 a dismissal without prejudice that is ordered after the suit is time-barred may be treated as tantamount to a dismissal with prejudice. n5 When the appeal is from the district court's denial of a motion under Rule 60(b) to vacate the order of dismissal, the scope of appellate review is much narrower, and the dismissal may be affirmed even if it might have been overturned as an abuse of discretion on a direct appeal. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsAppellate Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.53 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Rogers v. Andrus Transp. Servs., 502 F.3d 1147, 1151 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Wynder v. McMahon, 360 F.3d 73, 76 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Briscoe v. Klaus, 538 F.3d 252, 258 (3d Cir. 2008) ; Pyramid Energy, Ltd. v. Heyl & Patterson, Inc., 869 F.2d 1058, 1061 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 3. McCullough v. Lynaugh, 835 F.2d 1126, 1127 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 4. See § 19.104[1].

(n7)Footnote 5. Rogers v. Kroger Co., 669 F.2d 317, 321 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n8)Footnote 6. Dickerson v. Board of Educ. of Ford Heights, Ill., 32 F.3d 1114, 1116 (7th Cir. 1994) (denial of motion to dismiss reviewed under highly deferential standard).

137 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 20.syn

§ 20.syn Synopsis to Chapter 20: TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

§ 20.01 Assignment of Cases for Trial

[1] District Court Rules May Control Trial Calendar

[a] Discretion for Each District Court to Set Calendar Rules

[b] Examples of Local Calendar Rules

[c] Appellate Review of District Court Trial Calendar Decisions

[2] Continuances Controlled by Discretion of District Court

[a] District Court Has Discretion to Grant or Deny Continuance

[b] Examples of Local Continuance Rules

[c] Appellate Review of District Court Continuance Decisions

[3] Precedence or Preference for Particular Actions

[a] Priority Based on Court Rules

[b] Priority Based on Statute

§ 20.02 Consolidation of Cases for Trial

[1] Nature and Purpose of Consolidation

[2] Requirement of Common Question of Law or Fact

[3] Discretion of Court to Order Consolidation

[4] Balancing Test for Consolidation

[a] Statement of Balancing Test

[b] Factors Balancing in Favor of Consolidation

[c] Factors Balancing Against of Consolidation

[5] Consolidation Procedure

[a] Consolidation of Cases Pending Before Court

[b] Transfer to Accomplish Consolidation

[c] Cases Not Merged

[d] Jurisdiction

[e] Representation in Consolidated Cases

[f] Jury Rights in Consolidated Cases

[g] Appeal

§ 20.03 Separation of Cases for Trial

[1] Nature and Purpose of Order for Separate Trials

[a] Function of Order for Separate Trials

[b] Distinction Between Order for Separate Trials and Order of Severance

[2] Requirements for Order of Separate Trial

[3] Discretion of Court to Order Separate Trials

[4] Balancing Test for Separation

[a] Statement of Balancing Test

[b] Factors Balancing in Favor of Ordering Separate Trials

[c] Factors Balancing Against Ordering Separate Trials

[5] Procedural Considerations

[a] Diversity Actions

[b] Timing of Separate Trial Order

[c] Stay of Discovery

[d] Appeal

[6] Preservation of Right to Jury Trial

[a] Separate Trials May not Subvert Right Jury Trial

[b] Separate Trials Involving Two Juries

§ 20.04 Subpoena Power of Court

[1] Purpose and Scope of Civil Subpoena Power

[2] Form of Subpoena

[3] Issuance of Subpoena

[a] Court of Issuance

[b] Persons Allowed to Issue Subpoena

[4] Service of Subpoena

[a] Delivery Required

[b] Fee Required

[c] Notice

[d] Territorial Limitations on Service

[e] Immunity from Service

[5] Permissible Scope of Subpoena

[a] Obligation of Issuer to Avoid Undue Burden

[b] Enforcement of Undue Burden Limitation

[6] Requirement of Objection to Improper Subpoena for Production or Inspection

[7] Motion to Quash or Modify Subpoena

[a] Purpose and Use of Motion to Quash

[b] Grounds Requiring Court to Quash or Modify Subpoena

[c] Grounds Permitting Court to Quash or Modify Subpoena

[d] Court Has Discretion Whether to Modify or to Quash

[8] Obligations of Person Who is Object of Subpoena

[a] Duty to Produce Documents in Organized Manner

[b] Duty to Assert Any Claim of Privilege in Writing

[c] Duty to Comply With Subpoena

[9] Appeal of Subpoena Orders

§ 20.05 Right of Party to be Present at Civil Trial

[1] Constitutional Nature of Right

[2] Exclusion of Civil Litigant From Trial

[3] Waiver of Right to be Present

§ 20.06 Sequence of Proceeding When Legal and Equitable Actions are Involved in Jury Trial

[1] Court Determines Equitable Issues When Joined With Legal Issues

[2] Jury Must Determine Legal Issues First When Facts Relate to both legal and Equitable Issues

[a] Statement of Jury First Rule

[b] Jury First Rule Inapplicable When Jury Would Not be Affected by Prior Court Decision

[3] Appeal of Order Setting Sequence of Trial

§ 20.07 Objections Required at Trial

[1] Requirement That Party Inform Court of Objection

[a] Purpose of Objection Requirement

[b] Party Must Clearly State Grounds for Objection

[c] Failure to Make Objection Known to Court May Waive Objection

[2] Exceptions to Objection Requirement

[a] No Further Objection is Required When Court is Actually Aware of Party's Position

[b] Party May be Able to Preserve Appeal by Motion in Limine

[c] Lack of Objection Will Not Preclude Appeal When Party Had No Opportunity to Make Timely Objection

§ 20.08 Trial by Implied Consent

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.01

§ 20.01 Assignment of Cases for Trialn*

[1] District Court Rules May Control Trial Calendar

[a] Discretion for Each District Court to Set Calendar Rules

Each district court has authority to promulgate its own local rules for the placement of cases on its trial calendar. n1 Local rules governing practice before each district court must be enacted by a majority vote of the judges in the district. The local rules must be consistent with, but not duplicative of, the Federal Rules of Civil procedure. n2 The local rules that are promulgated under Rule 40 control several procedural mechanisms for the maintenance of district court trial calendars. For example the local rules may control the order in which civil actions are to be heard. n3 Another consideration affecting local rules is the "civil justice expense and delay reduction plan" that each United States district court was required to implement under the Civil Justice Reform Act. Each district's plan was required to facilitate deliberate adjudication of civil cases on the merits, monitor discovery, improve litigation management, and ensure just, speedy, and inexpensive resolutions of civil disputes. n4

Otherwise, the broad discretion granted the district courts by Rule 40 allows the courts to take into consideration local litigation patterns and conditions in drafting the local calendar rules. n5

Local rules on trial settings may not conflict with Rule 40 or any other of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n6 Furthermore, when a judge enacts a standing order, which may also be known as an internal rule, and that standing order conflicts with a local rule, the order may be stricken. The enactment of a standing order that conflicts with a local rule also violates Rule 83. n7

[b] Examples of Local Calendar Rules

Most local rules of the district courts do not specify the precise manner in which a trial date should be scheduled but leave scheduling to the discretion of the court to accomplish in compliance with Rules 16 and 40. n8 However, district courts that have adopted local rules governing the scheduling of a trial date have chosen various procedures for the placement of actions on the trial calendar. Some courts, following Rule 40 closely, provide that cases must be placed on the trial calendar either by motion of a party or on the court's own initiative. n9 Some district courts provide that a case must be set on the trial calendar at the discretion of the judge before whom the action is pending. n10 Some district courts provide for assignment of cases to different tracks, each subject to a different schedule. n11 Finally, many district courts have enacted local rules that correspond with Rule 16, n12 providing for the scheduling of a trial date at the pretrial conference or in the scheduling order. n13

[c] Appellate Review of District Court Trial Calendar Decisions

When a district court makes a trial scheduling decision, a reviewing court may review that decision only for abuse of discretion. n14 A district court abuses its discretion in making a trial scheduling decision only when no reasonable person could agree with the district court; thus, if reasonable persons could differ with respect to the propriety of the court's action the challenging party has not established an abuse of discretion. n15 Thus, a district court has considerable integral authority to control and to manage its own docket; however this authority is limited by a requirement that the court must balance the needs of judicial efficiency with the rights of parties to have the merits of their arguments heard. n16

Due to the wide deference given the district courts in this regard, it is a rare occurrence that a court of appeals will overturn a district court's scheduling decision as an abuse of discretion. n17 For example, in one case the trial occurred in a piecemeal fashion because of the district court's attempts to accommodate the parties' needs. The appellate court found that the sporadic flow of the trial did not render the trial unfair, and rejected on appeal the defendant's objection to the district court's decision to schedule a trial on a date that its lead counsel could not be present. The appellate court upheld the trial court's decision because the district court had done its best to accommodate the competing interests of the parties and had managed the trial dates as efficiently as possible. n18

On the other hand, the court of appeals will overturn a district court's scheduling decision as an abuse of discretion if it is arbitrary or categorical and takes no account of the opposition's interest in the trial schedule. For example, a trial court's ordering a stay of trial without considering whether the delay would increase the danger of prejudice resulting from the loss of evidence, the inability of witnesses to recall specific facts, or the possible death of a party, would constitute an abuse of discretion. n19

[2] Continuances Controlled by Discretion of District Court

[a] District Court Has Discretion to Grant or Deny Continuance

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not explicitly regulate continuances, and this silence means that the individual district courts have authority to enact local continuance rules pursuant to Rule 83. n1 Alternatively, the district courts may utilize their general powers over scheduling, as specified in Rule 16, n2 and Rule 40, n3 in determining whether or not to allow continuances. Ultimately, the district courts have broad authority to control their docket by granting or denying motions to continue. n4

[b] Examples of Local Continuance Rules

Most of the local rules adopted to regulate a grant or denial of continuances provide simply that the court may grant a motion for continuance for good cause only. n5 Some local rules, however, provide that continuances will be granted onlyin exceptional circumstances. n6 One district court rule provides that a case may not be continued unless justice requires. n7

A local rule will typically impose conditions on the grant of a continuance. For example, the local rule may require that notice be given to all other parties before application for a continuance may be made. n8 Several local rules state specific requirements for the granting of a continuance because of the unavailability of a witness or missing evidence. In these courts, for example, the motion must be made on an affidavit showing the nature and materiality of the expected testimony or evidence and that a diligent effort has been made to secure the witness or evidence. n9

[c] Appellate Review of District Court Continuance Decisions

A court of appeals will not reverse a district court's decision on a motion for a continuance unless there has been an abuse of discretion. n10 The reviewing court will not generally overturn a decision by the trial court because district courts have wide discretion to control their dockets by granting or denying motions to continue. n11 Furthermore, unless the moving party shows that denial of the motion had a prejudicial impact, the trial court's decision will be affirmed. n12

In reviewing a denial of a continuance request by the district court, the appellate court should consider four factors: (1) the moving party's diligence in its efforts to prepare its case prior to the date set for the trial or hearing; (2) the likelihood that the need for a continuance would have been remedied had the continuance been granted; (3) the extent to which granting the continuance would have inconvenienced the court and the opposing party; and (4) the extent to which the moving party might have suffered harm as a result of the district court's denial. n13

Based on such factors, or similar considerations, a district court's denial of a motion for a continuance would likely be affirmed in the following cases: when the movant had a history of delaying the case or using dilatory tactics in the case; n14 if the evidence or witness that the moving party seeks to obtain during the continuance would not likely change the outcome of the case; n15 or if granting the continuance would unduly prevent the court in keeping to its trial schedule. n16

On the other hand, a district court's denial of a motion for a continuance would more likely be reversed for an abuse of discretion in the following cases: when the moving party was innocent of blame and would have been put at an unfair disadvantage by denial of the motion; n17 and if the trial court itself did something that caused the need for the continuance. n18

[3] Precedence or Preference for Particular Actions

[a] Priority Based on Court Rules

The criminal and procedural rules give priority to several types of cases that control over any local rules. First, a district court must give preference to criminal proceedings to the extent practicable. n1 The preference for criminal cases is a necessity for the federal judiciary because of the requirements of the Speedy Trial Act. n2 Next, Rule 40 provides that a court must give precedence to actions entitled by any statute of the United States. n3 Third, Rule 57 provides that the court may order a speedy hearing of an action for a declaratory judgment and may advance it on the calendar. n4 Fourth, Rule 65(b) requires that in cases when a court grants a temporary restraining order without notice, the motion for a preliminary injunction must be set for hearing at the earliest possible time and takes precedence over all other matters, except older matters involving a temporary restraining order granted without notice. n5

Finally, after the required rule and statutory preferences have been satisfied, the district courts may enact local rules giving priority to certain types of actions under the district courts' general rulemaking authority pursuant to Rule 83. n6

[b] Priority Based on Statute

One statute generally governs calendar priority in federal civil actions. The statute requires that each district court decide the order in which civil actions should be heard and determined on their calendars, with the proviso that the court must give precedence to the following specific types of actions: n7

1. Habeas corpus actions brought under Chapter 153 of Title 28. n8

2. Any action for temporary or preliminary injunctive relief.

3. Any other action in which a party shows good cause for calendar priority. For purposes of this statute, "good cause" is shown if a federal constitutional right or a federal statutory right would benefit from expedited treatment. n9

4. Actions involving recalcitrant grand jury witnesses. n10

It has been held that this statute clearly intends to give preference to actions raising federal questions, thus justifying a district court in enacting a local rule that gives diversity actions the lowest priority. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 40.02 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 40.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83; see 28 U.S.C. §§ 2072, 2075.

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1657 (general rule that priority of civil actions and order in which civil actions are heard determined by each court of United States); see [b], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 471, 476; see also 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 40.03[2][b]. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n6)Footnote 5. Zukowski v. Howard, Needles, Tammen, & Bergendoff, 115 F.R.D. 53, 54 (D. Colo. 1987) (because local rule 200 gave lowest priority to diversity actions, court denied expedited treatment to current case); Utah-Idaho Sugar Co. v. Ritter, 461 F.2d 1100, 1103-1104 (10th Cir. 1972) (rules of court are prescribed by district judges or by judicial council and are applicable and effective until modified or rescinded; division of court's business in multijudge district is responsibility of all judges and not responsibility of chief judge acting unilaterally).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83; see Wilson v. City of Zanesville, 954 F.2d 349, 352-352 (6th Cir. 1992) (affidavit requirement imposed by local rules conflicted with federal rules on discovery).

(n8)Footnote 7. Martel v. County of Los Angeles, 21 F.3d 940, 946 (9th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 944 (1995) (when judge's standing order violates local rules, it violates Fed. R. Civ. P. 83).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(v).

(n10)Footnote 9. District of Alaska, Local Rule 40.3.

(n11)Footnote 10. See Eastern District of Michigan, Local Rule 40.1.

(n12)Footnote 11. District of New Hampshire, Local Rule 40.1 (expedited track for cases that must be tried within six months of the preliminary pretrial conference; standard track for cases that must be tried within 12 months of the preliminary pretrial conference; and complex track for cases that are scheduled for trial within two years of the preliminary pretrial conference).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(B)(v) (except in categories of actions exempted by district court rule, district judge, or magistrate judge when authorized by district court rule, may enter scheduling order that may include date for trial).

(n14)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Eastern District of Virginia, Local Rule 16(B).

(n15)Footnote 14. Ganther v. Ingle, 75 F.3d 207, 212 (5th Cir. 1996) (district court's decision to address defendants' motion for summary judgment before addressing plaintiff's motion for default judgment was not abuse of court's discretion over scheduling).

(n16)Footnote 15. Smith v. Widman Trucking & Excavating, 627 F.2d 792, 796 (7th Cir. 1980) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Arthur Pierson & Co. v. Provimi Veal Corp., 887 F.2d 837, 839 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n18)Footnote 17. In re Strandell, 838 F.2d 884, 886 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Arthur Pierson & Co. v. Provimi Veal Corp., 887 F.2d 837, 838-839 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S. 681, 706-707, 117 S. Ct. 1636, 137 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1997) .

(n21)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83.

(n22)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16.

(n23)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 40.

(n24)Footnote 4. See Brooks v. United States, 64 F.3d 251, 256 (7th Cir. 1995) (no abuse of discretion in denying continuance as evidence movant sought to obtain would not have likely changed outcome of case).

(n25)Footnote 5. See, e.g., District of Massachusetts, Local Rule 40.3(a).

(n26)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Northern District of Georgia, Local Rule 39.5.

(n27)Footnote 7. See District of Arizona, Local Rule 40.2(b).

(n28)Footnote 8. See, e.g., District of District of Columbia, Local Rule 16.1(b).

(n29)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Southern District of Indiana, Local Rule 16.3.

(n30)Footnote 10. Jennings v. BIC Corp., 181 F.3d 1250, 1259 (11th Cir. 1999) (district court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant a continuance to allow testimony of plaintiffs' expert when expert's testimony would be duplicative of that of plaintiffs' other available experts and in view of alternative means of providing expert's testimony through deposition).

(n31)Footnote 11. Command-Aire Corp. v. Ontario Mechanical Sales & Serv., Inc., 963 F.2d 90, 96 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n32)Footnote 12. Santa Maria v. Metro-North Commuter R.R., 81 F.3d 265, 275 (2d Cir. 1996) (district court's failure to grant continuance to allow replacement counsel to prepare case was prejudicial to movant's right to fair trial).

(n33)Footnote 13. Rink v. Cheminova, Inc., 400 F.3d 1286, 1296 (11th Cir. 2006) .

(n34)Footnote 14. Amarin Plastics, Inc. v. Maryland Cup Corp., 946 F.2d 147, 151 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n35)Footnote 15. Marti v. City of Maplewood, Mo., 57 F.3d 680, 684 (8th Cir. 1995) (continuance of trial to allow appellees to depose witness was not justified, given relative unimportance of testimony sought to be introduced).

(n36)Footnote 16. Mraovic v. Elgin, Joliet & E. Ry. Co., 897 F.2d 268, 271 (7th Cir. 1990) (denial of continuance due to unavailability of expert witnesses was not abuse of discretion when case was more than two years old and plaintiff did not try to arrange for testimony until one week before trial).

(n37)Footnote 17. Santa Maria v. Metro-North Commuter R.R., 81 F.3d 265, 273 (2d Cir. 1996) (district court's antagonism toward merits of case and plaintiff's trial counsel, as well as court's refusal to grant continuance to allow replacement counsel to prepare case, cited by appellate court as reason to vacate judgment and remand for new trial to be held by different judge).

(n38)Footnote 18. Fenner v. Dependable Trucking Co., 716 F.2d 598, 602 (9th Cir. 1983) (trial court caused need for continuance by its promise that witness schedules would be arranged; then court failed to allocate time for material rebuttal witness to present testimony to controvert plaintiff's damaging newly discovered testimony).

(n39)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Crim. P. 50(a).

(n40)Footnote 2. Zukowski v. Howard, Needles, Tammen, & Bergendoff, 115 F.R.D. 53, 55 (D. Colo. 1987) .

(n41)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 40; see [b], below (number of federal statutes which require that court give priority to certain types of actions has been significantly reduced by enactment of 28 U.S.C. § 1657).

(n42)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 57.

(n43)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n44)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(a)(1) (requirement that local rules are consistent with federal law); see Zukowski v. Howard, Needles, Tammen, & Bergendoff, 115 F.R.D. 53, 55 (D. Colo. 1987) (upholding local rule giving lowest priority to diversity actions).

(n45)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1657(a).

(n46)Footnote 8. See 28 U.S.C. § 2241 et seq.

(n47)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1657(a).

(n48)Footnote 10. See 28 U.S.C. § 1826.

(n49)Footnote 11. Zukowski v. Howard, Needles, Tammen, & Bergendoff, 115 F.R.D. 53, 54-55 (D. Colo. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.02

§ 20.02 Consolidation of Cases for Trialn*

[1] Nature and Purpose of Consolidation

The district court may order a joint hearing or trial and consolidation of any or all the matters in issue pending before the court in more than one case, provided that the cases involve a common question of law or fact, and provided that the consolidation would avoid unnecessary costs or delay. n1 Thus, the purpose of consolidation is to provide a valuable and important tool of judicial administration, to be invoked by the court to expedite trial, eliminate unnecessary repetition and confusion, and promote judicial economy. n2

Other purposes of consolidation are to enhance efficiency and avoid the substantial danger of inconsistent adjudications; consolidation is designed to promote a saving of time and effort, and to minimize inconvenience, delay, and expense. n3 Provided there is a common question of law or fact in the cases involved, the tool of consolidation may be used by several types of courts, such as bankruptcy courts, n4 the Admiralty Court, n5 and the Court of Claims. n6 Consolidation is also common in cases filed in the district court of a specialized nature, such as patent cases. n7

[2] Requirement of Common Question of Law or Fact

Any two or more cases pending before a court are appropriate for consolidation provided that they involve common questions of law or fact. n1 The party seekingconsolidation has the burden of proving a common question of law or fact shared by all of the cases that the party wants consolidated. n2 However, The determination of whether common questions of law and fact exist is made under a very liberal standard. For example, a common factual issue, such as a common factual issue in two lawsuits pending in the same court and brought by the same plaintiff, is a sufficient basis for consolidation, if combining the two cases will simplify the litigation process. Consolidation is especially preferred if the alternative would be a complicated exercise of form over substance, when, for example, the court would have to dismiss the second lawsuit and require the plaintiff to amend its first complaint to add the dismissed allegations. n3 Furthermore, common issues of law and fact do not have to predominate over other issues in the cases. All that is required is that the district court find they exist and that consolidation will prove beneficial. n4

However, a finding of common issues of law, common issues of fact, or both, is a necessary prerequisite for exercise of judicial discretion. Even when it appears there are common questions, their presence may be insufficient to justify consolidation. For example, in one case it was held that it was an abuse of discretion for the court to consolidate age discrimination cases brought by two groups of employees because of the different allegations made by the two groups and because of the different time periods of alleged discrimination. n5 Thus it is an abuse of discretion for the court to consolidate two actions which contain no common issues of law or fact, for example, if the only common factual question is the fact that the same person is the defendant in both actions. n6

[3] Discretion of Court to Order Consolidation

Once it has been established that a case pending before a court involves common questions of law or fact, n1 the trial court has broad discretion to determine whether consolidation is appropriate. In the exercise of discretion, courts have taken the view that, as a general rule, considerations of judicial economy favor consolidation. n2 The discretion allowed is very broad, and a decision to grant or deny consolidation will be upheld on appeal unless the court has committed an abuse of discretion. n3 However, discretion is not unlimited and courts must carefully examine the facts underlying the proposed consolidation. n4

After a court has made a threshold finding of commonality of factual or legal questions and of convenience, there are several other factors that are influential in determining whether or not consolidation is appropriate. n5

A court may order consolidation on its own initiative, under the broad managerial power of the district court to control its cases. Thus, the authority to consolidate extends to the consolidation of cases even when no party has brought a motion for consolidation, n6 and a trial court has the power sua sponte to hold a hearing to determine whether actions then pending before it should be consolidated. n7 A court, also sua sponte, may deem cases consolidated on an informal basis by referring to them in the record as consolidated or by issuing a single opinion resolving the merits of the cases. n8

A trial court's discretion extends with respect to consolidation not only to whether it should occur but also to the form that any ordered consolidation must take. Thus, a court may limit consolidation to particular issues and order a joint trial of those issues only. n9 Similarly, consolidation may be expressly limited to pretrial proceedings, including pleadings and discovery. n10

[4] Balancing Test for Consolidation

[a] Statement of Balancing Test

After it has found that cases pending before it involve common questions of law or fact, n1 a court must apply a balancing test. The court must balance the burden on the parties, the risk of inconsistent judgments, and the waste of resources that separate proceedings could engender against the prejudice and confusion that consolidation might entail. n2 For a discussion of the factors on each side of this balancing equation that the court will consider, see [b] and [c], below.

[b] Factors Balancing in Favor of Consolidation

The following factors have all been held to balance in favor of a court ordering consolidation:

1. Interests of justice. The primary factor that will influence a court in granting consolidation is the interests of justice. Thus, even though all courts agree that considerations of judicial economy favor consolidation, efficiency may not be permitted to prevail at the expense of justice, and consolidation should be considered only when savings of expense and gains of efficiency may be accomplished without sacrifice of justice. n3 In other words the benefits of efficiency may never be purchased at the cost of fairness. n4 Thus, in the balancing test to determine whether consolidation is appropriate in a given case, courts have found that fairness must be paramount. n5

2. Efficiency. When courts find that consolidation will achieve significant savings of time or avoid serious duplication of effort, they are much more likely to order the consolidation. Avoiding delay and expediting the trial process are two factors frequently cited by courts in ordering consolidation. n6

3. Savings of expenses. Saving of expense and conservation of resources is a frequently cited justification for consolidation because consolidation commonly saves the resources of both the parties and the court. The more significant the savings, the more attractive consolidation will be to the court. n7

4. Avoidance of inconsistent or conflicting results. n8 The danger of inconsistent results and the inequitable treatment inconsistent results bring about when parties are actually similarly situated have led courts to consolidate proceedings in many types of cases. n9

[c] Factors Balancing Against of Consolidation

The following factors have all been held to be against the court's ordering consolidation:

1. Prejudice. Consolidation is inappropriate when the mere act of consolidating cases will adversely affect the rights of the parties. n10 For example, a party may be prejudiced when the claims or defenses particular to that party are substantially different from the other consolidated claims, and management of the consolidated case would be placed in a lead party whose efforts are likely to focus on the interests of the lead party and deprive the other parties of representation. n11 On the other hand, the court will order consolidation when the lead parties and lead counsel would provide complete representation of all parties. n12 Consolidation may be prejudicial to parties in other ways. For example, prejudice may be caused by the disclosure of proprietary information, such as the extent of insurance coverage, n13 the existence of other lawsuits, n14 or offers of settlement. n15

2. Confusion of Jurors. When multiple lawsuits are tried together, there is usually some risk of juror confusion, n16 and this factor balances against an order of consolidation. n17 The risk of confusion has been held to begreatest when consolidation produces a great amount of evidence, n18 when the parties' situations are excessively diverse, n19 or when the legal positions of the parties are significantly but subtly different. n20 On the other hand, the court may permit consolidation if the court takes steps to minimize the potential for confusion in the consolidated cases by closely drafted, cautionary jury instructions, and special verdict forms outlining the claims of each plaintiff and advising the jury to consider each claim individually. n21

3. Delay. Consolidation is disfavored if it will actually cause rather than reduce delay. When separate trials of two actions will not involve a substantial duplication of effort, their consolidation will often delay rather than expedite resolution of the parties' claims. n22 One of the matters courts examine when assessing delay is the state of case preparation and discovery in each action. The courts tend to deny consolidation when there is a considerable difference in trial readiness, n23 or when the individual lawsuits have progressed to the point where organization of a consolidated trial would only increase the delay. n24

4. Administrative burdens. Consolidation is not appropriate when it results in administrative burdens to the extent that it impairs the potential for a fair and impartial trial. One case exemplifying the concern about administrative difficulties involved proposed consolidation of 44 products liability cases involving claimants with varying types of injuries and against various defendants. The court in that case found consolidation was unnecessarily likely to create administrative difficulties and increase the parties' expenses by forcing them to participate in discovery and other proceedings irrelevant to their individual claims. n25

[5] Consolidation Procedure

[a] Consolidation of Cases Pending Before Court

Rule 42(a) provides for consolidation when two or more actions are pending before the court. Matters are "pending before the court" for consolidation purposes whenever they are subject to the managerial power of a single district judge. A judge may acquire such power through routine assignment or transfer. n1

[b] Transfer to Accomplish Consolidation

Even though Rule 42(a) does not contain express language allowing transfer, actions pending in different district courts may be transferred by statute to other districts and then consolidated by the transferee court for the convenience of parties and witnesses in the interest of justice. n2 The statute also permits courts to make such transfers to different divisions within the same district. n3 In order to transfer cases under Section 1404(a), a court must determine that the action could have been brought in the transferee district or court, that it will be in the interests of justice to effect transfer, and that it will be a convenience to the parties and witnesses if the transfer is completed. n4 The benefits of consolidation may be considered as part of the grounds for transfer. n5

In addition to interdistrict transfers, a district court may transfer to itself and consolidate cases pending in another forum or type of court. For example, a case pending in bankruptcy court may be transferred to the district court and consolidated with a case pending there, without the prior determination of the bankruptcy court. n6 In the same way, a case pending in admiralty may be transferred to the district court and consolidated with a case in the district court. n7

[c] Cases Not Merged

The United States Supreme Court has held that consolidation does not merge the consolidated suits into one lawsuit, change the rights of the parties, or make those who were parties in one suit parties in another. n8 Furthermore, courts havetailored consolidation orders to protect against mergers that could extinguish the individual rights of the parties. For example, one court limited consolidation to pretrial proceedings and a consolidated complaint, commenting that its goal was to avoid impermissibly merging the rights or defenses of the various parties. The trial judge in that case stressed the possibility of reviving individual complaints for trial, while reiterating the principle that consolidation may not bring about any physical merger of the actions or the defenses of the separate parties. n9 Another effect of this doctrine is that, while a consolidation order may result in a single unit of litigation, such a consolidation order does not create a single case for jurisdiction purposes. n10

[d] Jurisdiction

Because consolidated cases are not merged with one another, it has been held that consolidation does not relieve parties to separate actions from the need to independently satisfy the requisite subject matter jurisdiction requirements for the commencement of actions in the federal courts or their removal to federal courts. n11 However, the doctrine of pendent jurisdiction has been applied to allow a court to hear state law tort claims that share a common nucleus of operative fact with claims made under federal law. n12

Under these same principles, consolidation may not be used to defeat jurisdiction of a case with the requisite diversity jurisdiction. Thus, when a court had diversity jurisdiction over one case, that case could not be dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction after the case was consolidated with a second case over which diversity jurisdiction was lacking, because consolidation did not merge the two actions into one case, but, rather, each action retained its own separate identity, and therefore the jurisdictional basis for each action had to be analyzed independently. n13

[e] Representation in Consolidated Cases

The district court may designate attorneys in consolidated cases to perform particular functions to facilitate the litigation and cooperation among all counsel and parties. n14 For example, attorneys may be designated as "lead counsel," "general counsel," "liaison counsel," or "trial counsel." n15 The courts in multidistrict consolidated litigation consult the Manual for Complex Litigation n16 for suggestions on specific functions for lead, liaison, and trial counsel, as well as committees of counsel. n17 The courts exercise authority to appoint lead counsel as part of their general power to order consolidation of cases. n18 Pursuant to that authority, the court may appoint counsel for both plaintiffs or defendants in complex actions to perform a number of substantive and administrative tasks, such as drafting and filing a consolidated complaint. n19

The following is a brief description of counsel in consolidated cases:

> 1. Lead counsel, also known as "general counsel," has broad power to control consolidated litigation. n20 Powers granted to lead counsel have included directing pretrial proceedings on behalf of the consolidated parties, participating in and organizing a discovery plan, deposing witnesses and parties, and overseeing litigation deadlines and schedules and trying the lawsuit. n21 In large, complex, mass tort cases, lead counsel may consist of a committee of attorneys. n22
>
> 2. Liaison Counsel. The court may appoint liaison counsel to act on behalf of other counsel and parties in addition to those they initially represent. Liaison counsel's main function is to perform administrative tasks on behalf of plaintiffs, defendants, or both, according to the court's order. n23 For example, liaison counsel for the defendants may be ordered to perform court-designated functions such as responding to plaintiff's lead counsel's consolidated pleadings and to participate in discovery organization withplaintiffs. n24 In other cases, liaison counsel has facilitated the litigation by receiving or distributing documents on behalf of the represented party (plaintiff or defendant), giving notice of meetings, maintaining a document depository, and undertaking other administrative functions. n25
>
> 3. Trial Counsel. Trial counsel is the role assumed by the attorney or attorneys who actually conduct the court trial of the case. The court may appoint counsel to serve as principal attorney for a plaintiff or defendant group at trial in complex cases. The inherent power of the court to control its own docket, implied in the broad managerial powers described in Rule 42(a), has been cited as authority for ordering that a trial be conducted by particular counsel to the exclusion of other counsel. n26

Two issues typically arise in litigation involving representation in complex cases. The first issue concerns the appointment of lead counsel. Lead counsel is required to maintain a fiduciary relationship with individual parties, while acting on behalf of the group. Therefore, the goal of the court is to find competent and experienced counsel to represent the group. In determining the lead counsel, the court should consider who has specific experience in particular litigation, the highest professional talent, and a high degree of integrity. However, in its decision the court may also consider the issue of cost of counsel. n27 In this regard, some courts now prefer appointment of lead counsel based on a process of a sealed-bid auction, since this process ensures representation at a fair price, provided that the court also insures that the parties receive high quality representation. n28

Another issue that commonly arises in consolidated cases is that of allocation of an award of attorney's fees. Courts typically consider two methods of allocating fees in complex cases: the "lodestar" method, which determines the number of productive hours and multiplies them by a reasonable hourly rate and the "common fund" method, in which a reasonable fee is based on a percentage of the fund available for fees for the group. n29

The actual award may depend on the type of case. Courts have noted that in mass tort litigation, unlike securities cases, plaintiff's individual attorneys play a significant role by their constant interaction with plaintiffs; because a particular court may personally observe only direct trial-related work, the parties and judges must be made aware of the potential for allocating too large a percentage of fees to lead counsel, and take measures to prevent such unfairness by documenting precisely all non trial related work performed by other counsel. n30

[f] Jury Rights in Consolidated Cases

The consolidation of cases may bring about several issues regarding jury rights. A party may properly demand the right to trial by jury in a consolidated lawsuit, although it was waived in one or more of the component cases. It has been held that when two cases are consolidated for all purposes including trial, the right to jury trial attaches to all claims, even those in a case in which a jury trial was waived. n31 Furthermore, when a jury has become the trier of a common question of fact, the jury should be the sole decider of that question. n32

Another issue that commonly arises is the impact of consolidation on the number of peremptory challenges available to a party. The general rule is that parties are allowed the same number of peremptory challenges they would have had if there had been no consolidation. What this means in practice is that the number of different pre-consolidation lawsuits involving any party fixes the number by which peremptories may be increased to produce the total number of strikes for that party in a consolidation. It should be noted, however, that this number is limited by a statute that allows each side in an individual lawsuit only three peremptory challenges, n33 unless the court allows a larger number. n34

[g] Appeal

A court's order granting or denying a motion for consolidation is generally characterized as interlocutory and may not be appealed unless certified for appeal under Rule 54. n35 Similarly, courts have held that bankruptcy orders of consolidation are not appealable because they are also interlocutory. n36 However, a significant exception to this rule is the collateral order doctrine, which allows immediate review of a consolidation order or a denial of consolidation. Underthe exception, a party may take an immediate appeal if the consolidation order or denial that may have significant impact on the rights of the parties apart from the consolidation itself.

Thus, parties may petition for immediate review of a collateral order that finally determines claims of right separable from, and collateral to, rights asserted in the action, too important to be denied review, and too independent of the cause itself to require that appellate consideration be deferred until the whole case is adjudicated. For example, in one case in which relatively minor fraud claims against one defendant were consolidated with a broad fraudulent scheme alleged against other defendants, the court held that the consolidated complaint severely prejudiced the defendant in the minor case, and also that the minor defendant could be precluded from fully litigating its defense; therefore, the court held that the consolidation order was a collateral order that was subject to immediate review. n37

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConsolidation of Actions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 42.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Devlin v. Transportation Communications International Union, 175 F.3d 121, 130 (2nd Cir. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Safety National Casualty Corp. 43 F. Supp. 2d 734, 745 (E.D. Tex. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Passodelis, 234 B.R. 52, 62 (W.D. Pa. 1999) ; Eastgroup Properties v. Southern Motel Assoc. Ltd., 935 F.2d 245, 248 (11th Cir. 1991) ; In re Fleming, 8 B.R. 746, 750 (N.D. Georgia 1980) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Dearborn Marine Serv., Inc., 499 F.2d 263, 270-271 (5th Cir. 1974) ; Parsons Mills, Inc. v. Companhia, Etc., 82 F.R.D. 331, 332-333 (S.D.N.Y. 1978) .

(n7)Footnote 6. United States v. Mitchell, 445 U.S. 535, 537, 100 S. Ct. 1349, 63 L. Ed. 2d 607 (1980) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Cedars-Sinai Medical Center v. Revlon, Inc., 111 F.R.D. 24, 31-34 (D. Del. 1986) (two patent infringement cases consolidated to protect patent holder's right to have single jury decide common factual questions).

(n9)Footnote 1. Devlin v. Transportation Communications International Union, 175 F.3d 121, 130 (2nd Cir. 1999) (court could have considered consolidat ing Age Discrimination in Employment Act claims regarding medical benefits with Employee Retirement Income Security Act claims when actions were before same district court judge and judge knew that they were related); Hendrix v. Raybestos-Manhattan, Inc., 776 F.2d 1492, 1495-1497 (11th Cir. 1985) (consolidation of asbestosis cases with similar allegations regarding extent of disease and identical theories of liability).

(n10)Footnote 2. In re Repetitive Stress Injury Litig., 11 F.3d 368, 373-374 (2d Cir. 1993) ; In re Consolidated Parlodel Litig., 182 F.R.D. 441, 444 (D.N.J. 1998) .

(n11)Footnote 3. Hanes Cos. v. Ronson, 712 F. Supp. 1223, 1230 (M.D.N.C. 1988) .

(n12)Footnote 4. Werner v. Satterlee, Stephens, Burke & Burke, 797 F. Supp. 1196, 1211 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (consolidating securities actions that involved § 10b-5 claims that posed numerous common questions of law and fact despite variations in identity of parties and in some allegations); Hanes Cos. v. Ronson, 712 F. Supp. 1223, 1230 (M.D.N.C. 1988) (court found consolidation of two cases filed by same plaintiff enhanced efficiency and economy for all concerned).

(n13)Footnote 5. King v. General Elec. Co. 960 F.2d 617, 626 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 6. Enterprise Bank v. Saettele, 21 F.3d 233, 236 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n15)Footnote 1. See [2], above.

(n16)Footnote 2. Friedlander v. Roberts, 51 F. Supp. 2d 385, 388-389 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 3. E.E.O.C. v. HBE Corp., 135 F.3d 543, 550-551 (8th Cir. 1998) (consolidation is appropriate whenever cases have common questions of law and fact, and court did not abuse discretion in permitting consolidation even when consolidation resulted in state law claims being tried before jury along with federal claims).

(n18)Footnote 4. In re Repetitive Stress Injury Litig., 11 F.3d 368, 373 (2d Cir. 1993) (before exercising discretion, courts must examine special underlying facts with close attention); Switzenbaum v. Orbital Sciences Corp., 187 F.R.D. 246, 248 (E.D. Va. 1999) (court must conduct careful inquiry to make decision on consolidation).

(n19)Footnote 5. See [4], below.

(n20)Footnote 6. Devlin v. Transportation Communications International Union, 175 F.3d 121, 130 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n21)Footnote 7. Katz v. Realty Equities Corp. of N.Y., 521 F.2d 1354, 1356 (2d Cir. 1975) .

(n22)Footnote 8. In re Adams Apple, Inc., 829 F.2d 1484, 1487 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n23)Footnote 9. In re Air Crash Disaster at Detroit Metro. Airport, 737 F. Supp. 391, 393-395 (E.D. Mich. 1989) (consolidation of more than 150 cases arising out of airplane crash for purpose of trial on issue of liability only).

(n24)Footnote 10. Katz v. Realty Equities Corp., 521 F.2d 1354, 1358-1359 (2d Cir. 1975) (court ordered consolidation of complaint).

(n25)Footnote 1. See [2], above.

(n26)Footnote 2. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Safety National Casualty Corp. 43 F. Supp. 2d 734, 745 (E.D. Tex. 1999) .

(n27)Footnote 3. Devlin v. Transportation Communications International Union, 175 F.3d 121, 130 (2nd Cir. 1999) .

(n28)Footnote 4. Malcolm v. National Gypsum Co., 995 F.2d 346, 350 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n29)Footnote 5. Malcolm v. National Gypsum Co., 995 F.2d 346, 350 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n30)Footnote 6. Hendrix v. Raybestos-Manhattan, Inc., 776 F.2d 1492, 1495-1497 (11th Cir. 1985) ; Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Safety National Casualty Corp. 43 F. Supp. 2d 734, 745 (E.D. Tex. 1999) .

(n31)Footnote 7. Katz v. Realty Equities Corp. of N.Y., 521 F.2d 1354, 1358 (2d Cir. 1975) (use of a consolidated complaint held to promote desired objective of judicial economy).

(n32)Footnote 8. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Safety National Casualty Corp. 43 F. Supp. 2d 734, 745 (E.D. Tex. 1999) .

(n33)Footnote 9. Waste Distillation Technology, Inc. v. Pan Am. Resources, Inc., 775 F. Supp. 759, 761 (D. Del. 1991) (court found consolidation would eliminate risk of inconsistent results between two lawsuits alleging various business torts which shared same plaintiff, identity of facts, and same witnesses and evidence.).

(n34)Footnote 10. Johnson v. Manhattan R. Co., 289 U.S. 479, 496-497, 53 S. Ct. 721, 77 L. Ed. 1331 (1933) (consolidation does not merge actions, and must not substantially and adversely affect rights of parties).

(n35)Footnote 11. Garber v. Randell 477 F.2d 711, 714-716 (2d Cir. 1973) (court found claim too distinctive to consolidate when only one of 15 plaintiffs brought a cause of action against a law firm, and claim was distinct from other plaintiffs' claims).

(n36)Footnote 12. Switzenbaum v. Orbital Sciences Corp., 187 F.R.D. 246, 248 (E.D. Va. 1999) .

(n37)Footnote 13. Arnold v. Eastern Air Lines Inc., 712 F.2d 899, 906 (4th Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1040 (1984) .

(n38)Footnote 14. Bradley v. Soo L. R. Co., 88 F.R.D. 307, 310 (E.D. Wis. 1980) (court denied consolidation of two cases by plaintiff against his employer because jury would be prejudiced by learning of second claim).

(n39)Footnote 15. American Employers' Ins. Co. v. King Resources Co., 545 F.2d 1265, 1269 (10th Cir. 1976) .

(n40)Footnote 16. Johnson v. Celotex Corp., 899 F.2d 1281, 1285 (2d Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 920 (1990) (asbestosis cases with multiple claims and allegations of different types of asbestos-related injuries).

(n41)Footnote 17. Switzenbaum v. Orbital Sciences Corp., 187 F.R.D. 246, 248 (E.D. Va. 1999) .

(n42)Footnote 18. Molever v. Levenson, 539 F.2d 996, 1003 (4th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1024 (1976)

(if consolidated, complex cases would be too much for jury to digest when 4500 pages were involved for transcript in 15-day jury trial).

(n43)Footnote 19. In re Repetitive Stress Injury Litig., 11 F.3d 368, 371 (2d Cir. 1993) (plaintiffs repetitive stress injuries included so many diverse medical conditions that commonality of facts was negated).

(n44)Footnote 20. Seguro de Servicio de Salud v. McAuto Sys. Group, Inc., 878 F.2d 5, 9 (1st Cir. 1989) (consolidation of two separate arbitration proceedings constituted abuse of discretion when contracts requiring arbitration were governed by law of different states and when, on close analysis, contractual arbitration clauses were very different).

(n45)Footnote 21. Johnson v. Celotex Corp., 899 F.2d 1281, 1285 (2d Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 920 (1990) .

(n46)Footnote 22. Southwest Marine, Inc. v. Triple A Mach. Shop, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 805, 807 (N.D. Cal. 1989) (two complex actions involving different government contracts should not be consolidated).

(n47)Footnote 23. Mills v. Beech Aircraft Corp., 886 F.2d 758, 762 (5th Cir. 1989) (one party ready for trial and one not).

(n48)Footnote 24. Switzenbaum v. Orbital Sciences Corp., 187 F.R.D. 246, 248 (E.D. Va. 1999) .

(n49)Footnote 25. In re Repetitive Stress Injury Litig., 11 F.3d 368, 371-372 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n50)Footnote 1. In re Air Crash Disaster at Detroit Metro. Airport, 737 F. Supp. 391, 392-393 (E.D. Mich. 1989) (actions filed in another forum may be transferred to court that may then consolidate such actions); see also [b], below.

(n51)Footnote 2. In re Storage Technology Corp. Sec. Litig., 630 F. Supp. 1072, 1074 (D. Colo. 1986) (three civil actions pending before Northern District of California transferred to the District Colorado for consolidation with twelve civil actions pending there); see 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a) (transfer statute).

(n52)Footnote 3. Mills v. Beech Aircraft Corp., 886 F.2d 758, 761 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n53)Footnote 4. In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 769 F. Supp. 85, 87-88 (E.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n54)Footnote 5. Waste Distillation Technology, Inc. v. Pan Am. Resources, Inc., 775 F. Supp. 759, 761 (D. Del. 1991) .

(n55)Footnote 6. In re Macon Uplands Venture, 624 F.2d 26, 27 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n56)Footnote 7. Blake v. Farrell Lines, Inc., 417 F.2d 264, 265 (3d. Cir. 1969) (personal injury case consolidated with shipowner's suit in admiralty for indemnity).

(n57)Footnote 8. Johnson v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 289 U.S. 479, 496-497, 53 S. Ct. 721, 77 L. Ed. 1331 (1933) .

(n58)Footnote 9. Katz v. Realty Equities Corp. of N.Y., 521 F.2d 1354, 1358-1359 (2d Cir. 1975) .

(n59)Footnote 10. Cella, 173 F.3d 909, 912 (3rd Cir. 1999) ; see [d], below.

(n60)Footnote 11. International Soc. for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Los Angeles, 611 F. Supp. 315, 316-320 (C.D. Cal. 1984) (consolidation of two lawsuits did not cure lack of federal question jurisdiction in second lawsuit because it was not an actual controversy but merely requested advisory opinion, even though other suit properly alleged federal constitutional violation).

(n61)Footnote 12. Dooley v. United Technologies Corp., 786 F. Supp. 65, 81 (D.D.C. 1992) (suit alleging state law claims of retaliatory discharge and tortious interference with contract consolidated with federal RICO and obstruction of justice claims, when plaintiff alleged a scheme to sell armed helicopters to Saudi Arabia without United States government approval).

(n62)Footnote 13. Cella, 173 F.3d 909, 912 (3rd Cir. 1999) ; see [d], below.

(n63)Footnote 14. See Sherleigh Associates LLC v. Windmere-Durable Holdings, Inc., 184 F.R.D. 688, 693-694 (S.D. Fla. 1999) .

(n64)Footnote 15. Vincent v. Hughes Air W., Inc., 557 F.2d 759, 773-775 (9th Cir. 1977) (appellate court description of different attorney roles and their interaction in complex airline crash litigation).

(n65)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Manual for Complex Litigation § 20.22 (3d ed.1995)..

(n66)Footnote 17. In re Ivan F. Boesky Sec. Litig., 948 F.2d 1358, 1364-1365 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n67)Footnote 18. MacAlister v. Guterma, 263 F.2d 65, 68 (2d. Cir. 1958) .

(n68)Footnote 19. In re Wirebound Boxes Antitrust Litig., 128 F.R.D. 256, 258-260 (D. Minn. 1989) (duties of lead and liaison counsel were listed in detail in court's order).

(n69)Footnote 20. Switzenbaum v. Orbital Sciences Corp., 187 F.R.D. 246, 252 (E.D. Va. 1999) (decision to appoint lead counsel carries considerable importance because lead counsel must represent not only the interests of a lead plaintiff, but all members of the putative class; as such, lead counsel should have specific experience in particular litigation as well as the highest professional talent, accompanied by similarly high degree of integrity).

(n70)Footnote 21. In re Ivan F. Boesky Sec. Litig., 948 F.2d 1358, 1364-1365 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n71)Footnote 22. In re Air Crash Disaster at Detroit Metro. Airport, 737 F. Supp. 391, 395-396 (E.D. Mich. 1989) .

(n72)Footnote 23. Vincent v. Hughes Air West, Inc., 557 F.2d 759, 773-775 (9th Cir. 1977) (role of liaison counsel considered in consolidated air crash case).

(n73)Footnote 24. In re Wirebound Boxes Antitrust Litig., 128 F.R.D. 256, 258-260 (D. Minn. 1989) .

(n74)Footnote 25. In re Ivan F. Boesky Sec. Litig., 948 F.2d 1358, 1364-1365 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n75)Footnote 26. In re Air Crash Disaster at Detroit Metro. Airport, 737 F. Supp. 391, 396 n.4 (E.D. Mich. 1989) (court stated that trial would become chaotic and unmanageable if counsel for each plaintiff were permitted to present his or her position or theory of case individually to jury).

(n76)Footnote 27. Switzenbaum v. Orbital Sciences Corp., 187 F.R.D. 246, 252 (E.D. Va. 1999) (court considered specific proffer that firm's contingent fees were below what courts typically award).

(n77)Footnote 28. See Sherleigh Associates LLC v. Windmere-Durable Holdings, Inc., 184 F.R.D. 688, 693-694 (S.D. Fla. 1999) .

(n78)Footnote 29. In re Thirteen Appeals Arising out of the San Juan Dupont Plaza Hotel Fire Litig., 56 F.3d 295, 304-308 (1st Cir. 1995) .

(n79)Footnote 30. In re Thirteen Appeals Arising out of the San Juan Dupont Plaza Hotel Fire Litig., 56 F.3d

295, 311-312 (1st Cir. 1995) .

(n80)Footnote 31. Cedars-Sinai Medical Center v. Revlon, Inc., 111 F.R.D. 24, 31-32 (D. Del. 1986) .

(n81)Footnote 32. Cedars-Sinai Medical Center v. Revlon, Inc., 111 F.R.D. 24, 32 (D. Del. 1986) .

(n82)Footnote 33. 28 U.S.C. § 1870.

(n83)Footnote 34. Fedorchick v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 577 F.2d 856, 858 (3d Cir. 1978) ; see Manual on Complex Litigation, 3d Ed., 1995, § 22.41 (guidelines to courts for use in complex cases provide that court may allow additional challenges, based on whether parties' interests conflict or diverge significantly and provides that additional challenges must be granted sparingly as they will lengthen jury selection process).

(n84)Footnote 35. Garber v. Randell, 477 F.2d 711, 714-715 (2d Cir. 1973) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n85)Footnote 36. In re M. Ibrahim Khan P.S.C., 31 B.R.W. 313, 314 (Bankr. W.D. Ky. 1983) (bankruptcy court order of transfer and consolidation not appealable due to interlocutory nature).

(n86)Footnote 37. Garber v. Randell, 477 F.2d 711, 715 (2d Cir. 1973) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.03

§ 20.03 Separation of Cases for Trialn*

[1] Nature and Purpose of Order for Separate Trials

[a] Function of Order for Separate Trials

The trial court may order a separate trial of any type or number of claims, or of any separate issue or issues, when it would be convenient to do so to avoid prejudice or when separate trials would be expeditious or economical, provided the court preserves the parties' right to trial by jury. n1 Rule 42(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allowing separation has been promulgated to deal with the problems caused by single cases that concern more than one very different element; these problems include confusion, prejudice, and delay. It is essential that trial judges have the authority to separately process such various elements when cases of this kind come before the court. Under Rule 42(b), the court may select specified claims or issues and decide them before proceeding to other matters in the same case. n2

[b] Distinction Between Order for Separate Trials and Order of Severance

Technically, there is a distinction between an order of separate trials under Rule 42(b), also known as an order of bifurcation, n3 and an order of severance under Rule 21. n4 Although many courts generally use the terms "separate" and "sever" interchangeably, they are analytically distinct, and the procedure authorized by Rule 42(b) should be distinguished from severance under Rule 21.

Separate trials result in one judgment, but severed claims become entirely independent actions that must be tried separately, and the judgment entered on each action is independent of the other one. Technically, when only one judgment will result, the court should use Rule 42(b), and when two judgments are necessary, the court should use an order of severance under Rule 21. n5 However, many courts use the terms interchangeably, n6 and this confusion is compounded by the fact that the court's determination as to whether it should order separate trials requires the same considerations as for a determination of whether it should sever claims of a party. n7

[2] Requirements for Order of Separate Trial

Rule 42(b) allows a court to separate claims or issues for trial only when the court ascertains that certain conditions are met. n1 First, the trial judge must determine whether separate trials would either avoid prejudice to a party or promote judicial economy. n2 Only one and not both of these criteria--avoidance of prejudice or judicial economy--need be met. n3 Next, the court must be satisfied that the decision to bifurcate does not unfairly prejudice the non-moving party. n4 Finally, separate trials must not be granted if doing so would violate a party's Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial. n5

[3] Discretion of Court to Order Separate Trials

The trial court has broad discretion to determine whether consolidation is appropriate. Thus, the ultimate decision to bifurcate a trial is generally in the court's discretion and will be overturned only on a clear showing of abuse. n1 Although some courts have described separation as a procedural device to be employed only in exceptional circumstances, n2 most courts hold that it is a purelydiscretionary act to be used whenever the trial court finds that it would further convenience, avoid prejudice, or be conducive to expedition and economy. n3 In exercising its discretion, the court may act on the motion of any party or on its own initiative. n4

After a court has made a threshold finding of the existence of convenience, avoidance of prejudice, or expedition and economy, n5 there are several other factors that are influential in determining whether or not separation for trial is appropriate in the particular case. n6 The party seeking bifurcation has the burden of proving that bifurcation will satisfy the expressed requirements of Rule 42(b), including furtherance of convenience, avoidance of prejudice, or enhancement of expedition and economy. n7

[4] Balancing Test for Separation

[a] Statement of Balancing Test

In ruling on a motion to order separate trials, a court must take into account the overall equities of the case and must not focus on only one factor such as whether there will be overlap in testimony and evidence between the two proceedings, whether the issues to be decided at trial are complex and the factfinder is likely to become confused, whether separation will promote settlement, or whether a single trial will cause unnecessary delay. Thus, the court must balance the reduction in complexity and delay against the fact that a bifurcated trial could result in duplicative testimony and evidence. n1 For a discussion of the factors on each side of this balancing equation that the court will consider, see [b] and [c], below.

[b] Factors Balancing in Favor of Ordering Separate Trials

The following factors have all been held to balance in favor of a court ordering separate trials:

1. Determinative issue. When the resolution of a key issue in the case may determine the outcome of an entire proceeding, the court may be more likely to order that issue separated for trial. In such a case, separation is likely to be conducive to judicial economy and expedition. For example, in an insurer's action for a declaratory judgment that its denial of coverage was proper, the court held that the interests of judicial economy justified trial of the insured homeowners' counterclaim against the insurer for breach of contract and a violation of state consumer protection statutes separately from the declaratory judgment action, because resolution of declaratory judgment action could determine the entire outcome and, thus, obviate the need for the court to consider evidence relevant only to the contract counterclaim. n2 In mass tort litigation, for example, the issue of causation is often determinative of the plaintiffs' ability to recover, and courts in such cases have favored separation of the causation issue for separate trial. n3

2. Issues of liability. To prevent undue delay in the administration of justice in personal injury and other civil litigation in which the issue of liability may be adjudicated as a prerequisite to the determination of any and all other issues, courts commonly order a separate trial on the issue of liability on a motion of any of the parties or at the court's own direction. For example, the circuit court in a civil rights case held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion by ordering a separate trial of an arrestee's claims against police officers who allegedly used excessive force against the arrestee, because if the jury found no liability on that decision, trial on the arrestee's claims against the city and the police department would be unnecessary. n4 Bifurcation of liability issues is a decision that must be made on a case-by-case basis. n5 Bifurcation of liability issues is more likely to be granted when issues are complex and when there would be no significant overlap of issues that would result in duplication of effort. n6

3. Issues of damages. Courts tend to favor bifurcation of damages issues, especially punitive damages issues because the presentation of evidence relating to punitive damages to the jury after the jury's determination of other issues insulates the jury from consideration of improper evidence while determining liability and compensatory damages. n7 Bifurcation ofdamages issues is more likely to be granted when the issues are complex, if there would be no significant overlap of issues that would result in a duplication of effort, and if the bifurcation would encourage judicial economy and efficiency because it would narrow the claims for which damages are recoverable. n8

[c] Factors Balancing Against Ordering Separate Trials

The following factors have all been held to be against the court's ordering separate trials:

1. Prejudice. Bifurcation is improper when separate trials would result in prejudice to a party, for example, by triggering delay in the proceedings or increasing expense. n9

2. Exclusion of admissible evidence. Bifurcation is improper if the separation of trials would effectively exclude important evidence from the jury that is otherwise relevant and admissible. n10

3. Overlapping of issues. Bifurcation is improper where the issues are so closely interwoven that the plaintiff would have to present the same evidence twice in separate trials. In such circumstances, judicial economy is fostered by a single trial. n11

4. Simple issues. Cases that can stand alone and that will not confuse the jury or cause delay by a single trial of all the issues should not be bifurcated. n12

[5] Procedural Considerations

[a] Diversity Actions

A court's authority to order separate trials is a procedural matter, n1 and, in diversity actions the court may order separate trials even if such a procedure would be unavailable under state court rules. n2 For example, in a personal injury diversity action brought by a passenger against a pilot alleging negligence the issue of separate trials was governed by Rule 42(b), even though the issue of the burden of proof on causation in a negligence diversity action was determined by Wisconsin law. n3

[b] Timing of Separate Trial Order

The question of whether to order separate trials for specific claims, affirmative defenses, or issues for hearing or trial should be raised and considered early in the pretrial stages of litigation, preferably before discovery is commenced. n4 As a potential cost-saving procedural management device, separate trials are often considered at the initial case management conference under Rule 16. Included within the listed subjects for consideration at case management conferences is an order for separate trials pursuant to Rule 42(b) with respect to a claim, counterclaim, cross claim, or third party claim, or with respect to any particular issue in the case. n5 By considering bifurcation early on the case management agenda, the parties can formulate an efficient discovery plan and possibly save considerable costs, one of the primary goals of separate trials. n6

[c] Stay of Discovery

If it orders separate trials, the trial court has authority to stay discovery with respect to the second claim or issue if the stay would further the purposes of separate trials. n7 Thus, one of the primary purposes of bifurcation is to defer costly discovery pending resolution of preliminary issues such as liability. n8 It is important to note that a separate trial order will not automatically stay discovery until the claims on the other part of the action are resolved. On the contrary,discovery continues, and claims continue to proceed to trial just as they otherwise would, unless the court specifically orders a stay. n9

[d] Appeal

If the court grants or denies a motion to hold separate trials on any issues or claims for trial, the order is an interlocutory orders that is ordinarily not appealable absent certification. n10 However, an order for a separate trial may be appealed as a "collateral order" when the issue is too important to be denied immediate review. Under this doctrine, a party may take an immediate appeal if the separation order or denial may have a significant impact on the rights of the parties apart from the separation itself. Thus, parties may petition for immediate review of a "collateral order" that finally determines claims of right separable from, and collateral to, rights asserted in the action which are too important to be denied review and too independent of the cause itself to require that appellate consideration be deferred until the whole case is adjudicated. n11

If a party is dissatisfied with a separation order, the party must object to the order at the trial court level. A party may not raise an objection to a separate trial order for the first time on appeal, except to further the interest of substantial justice. n12 When an appeal is properly taken, the decision of the trial court regarding separate trials is at the court's discretion and will be overturned only on a clear showing of abuse. n13

[6] Preservation of Right to Jury Trial

[a] Separate Trials May not Subvert Right Jury Trial

In order to preserve the right to a jury trial under the Seventh Amendment, courts commonly separate legal issues from equitable issues and try the two separately, with the legal issues tried to the jury, and the equitable issues tried to the court. n1 However, it is improper for the court to use the procedural device of separation of trials in any manner that has the effect of preventing the exercise of the constitutional right to a jury trial guaranteed by the Seventh Amendment. n2 Rule 42(b) specifically requires that separate trial orders preserve intact the right of trial by jury as declared by the Seventh Amendment, or as provided by any statute of the United States. Once an equitable claim has been separated for trial from any legal claims, and there are common issues between the claims, the legal claims must be tried to the jury before the equitable claims, to avoid any possibility of infringement on the right to jury trial by the collateral estoppel or res judicata effect of a court determination of the equitable claims. When there are no common issues between the equitable and legal claims, the order of trial does not affect the right to a jury trial. n3

[b] Separate Trials Involving Two Juries

When a court grants a separate trial, for example with respect to issues such as liability and damages, there is no constitutional prohibition against the impediment to the same jury deciding both issues one after the other. n4 However, jury trial rights issues typically arise when the result of a separation order of issues for trial is that the issues in a case will be tried by two different juries. It has been suggested that the use of two juries in such situations may interfere with the constitutionally mandated right to a jury trial. n5 The basis for this argument is a Supreme Court decision in which the Court held that a separation of the issues for trial by two juries may be granted only when it clearly appears that the issues are so distinct and separate from the others that the separate trial may be had without injustice. n6

Recent case law has made it clear that despite the Supreme Court ruling, courts have very broad discretion to employ two juries rather than one. n7 One court of appeals has stated that a district court may not divide issues between separate trials in such a way that the same issue is reexamined by different juries. The key point is that, while both juries can examine overlapping evidence, they may not decide factual issues that are common to both trials and essential to the outcome. In other words, the constitutional prohibition set forth by the Supreme Court is not against having two juries review the same evidence, but rather against having two juries decide the same essential issues. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersSeparate Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 42.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See, e.g., In re Innotron Diagnostics, 800 F.2d 1077, 1084 (Fed. Cir. 1986) (court ordered separate trials for patent claims and antitrust counterclaims).

(n4)Footnote 3. Lisa v. Fournier Marine Corp., 866 F.2d 530, 531 (1st Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 819 (1989) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n6)Footnote 5. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1121-1122 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n7)Footnote 6. McDaniel v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., 987 F.2d 298, 304 (5th Cir. 1993) ; Phillips v. Unijax, Inc., 625 F.2d 54, 56 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Morris v. Northrop Grumman Corporation, 37 F. Supp. 2d 556, 580 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n9)Footnote 1. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1121-1122 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 2. DeWitt, Porter, Huggett, Schumacher & Morgan v. Kovalic, 991 F.2d 1243, 1245 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 3. See MCI Communications v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 708 F.2d 1081, 1166 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n12)Footnote 4. See Angelo v. Armstrong World Industries, 11 F.3d 957, 964 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 5. See Hydrite Chemical Company v. Calumet Lubricants Co., 47 F.3d 887, 890 (7th Cir.1995) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1121 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n15)Footnote 2. United States v. 43. 47 Acres of Land, 45 F. Supp. 2d 187, 191-192 (D. Conn. 1999) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Faerber v. City of Newport, 51 F. Supp. 2d 115, 124-125 (D.R.I. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Fidelity & Cas. Co. of N.Y. v. Mills, 319 F.2d 63, 63-64 (5th Cir. 1963) (in personal injury automobile accident case, court sua sponte ordered separate trials of actions involving third party and insurance company).

(n18)Footnote 5. In re Beverly Hills Fire Litig., 695 F.2d 207, 216 (6th Cir. 1982) .

(n19)Footnote 6. See [4], below.

(n20)Footnote 7. Novopharm Ltd. v. Torpharm, Inc., 181 F.R.D. 308, 310 (E.D.N.C. 1998) (party seeking bifurcation has burden of proving judicial economy would be served and that no party would be prejudiced by separate trials).

(n21)Footnote 1. Rodin Properties-Shore Mall v. Cushman & Wakefield of Pennsylvania, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 2d 709, 721-723 (D.N.J. 1999) .

(n22)Footnote 2. Preferred Mutual Insurance Co. v. Meggison, 53 F. Supp. 2d 139, 144-145 (D. Mass. 1999) .

(n23)Footnote 3. In re Bendectin Litig., 857 F.2d 290, 317 (6th Cir. 1988) (whether drug caused plaintiffs' birth defects would determine case); see also In re Beverly Hills Fire Litig., 695 F.2d 207, 217 (6th Cir. 1982) (finding on issue concerning whether faulty wiring caused fire could render litigation of remaining issues unnecessary).

(n24)Footnote 4. Amato v. City of Saratoga Springs, New York, 170 F.3d 311, 316 (2nd Cir. 1999) .

(n25)Footnote 5. Lis v. Robert Packer Hospital, 579 F.2d 819, 824 (3d. Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 439 U.S. 955 (1978) (decision to bifurcate affirmed because no prejudice was shown).

(n26)Footnote 6. Princeton Biochemicals, Inc. v. Beckman Instruments, Inc., 180 F.R.D. 254, 257-259 (D.N.J. 1998) (bifurcation of liability issues in patent infringement case).

(n27)Footnote 7. Mattison v. Dallas Carrier Corp., 947 F.2d 95, 110 (4th Cir. 1991) (bifurcation proper where punitive damages evidence would be prejudicial to jury's consideration of liability or compensatory damages).

(n28)Footnote 8. Princeton Biochemicals, Inc. v. Beckman Instruments, Inc., 180 F.R.D. 254, 257-259 (D.N.J. 1998) (bifurcation of liability and damages issues in patent infringement case).

(n29)Footnote 9. FDIC v. Refco Group, Ltd., 989 F. Supp. 1052, 1090 (D. Colo. 1997) (court denied bifurcation of alter ego issue where discovery was complete and case was ready for trial, and bifurcation might simply cause further delay).

(n30)Footnote 10. In re Bendectin Litig., 857 F.2d 290, 309 (6th Cir. 1988) (separate trials on liability and causation separately would improperly prevent introduction of evidence of multiple possible causes of birth defects).

(n31)Footnote 11. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1126-1127 (7th Cir. 1999) (district court must not divide issues between separate trials in manner that the same issue is reexamined by different juries); Hilleby v. FMC Corp., 25 U.S.P.Q.2d 1413, 1416 (N.D. Cal. 1992) (judicial efficiency would be impaired by bifurcation when complaint and counterclaim primarily involved same parties, same technology, same expert witnesses, and same issues of patent validity and infringement).

(n32)Footnote 12. Willemijn Houdstermaatschaapij BV v. Apollo Computer, 707 F. Supp. 1429, 1434-1435 (D. Del. 1989) .

(n33)Footnote 1. United States v. 43. 47 Acres of Land, 45 F. Supp. 2d 187, 191-192 (D. Conn. 1999) .

(n34)Footnote 2. Sanford v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp, 923 F.2d 1142, 1146 n.7 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n35)Footnote 3. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1123 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n36)Footnote 4. See [c], below.

(n37)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(13).

(n38)Footnote 6. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1121 (7th Cir. 1999) (goal to promote judicial economy).

(n39)Footnote 7. In re Master Key Antitrust Litig., 528 F.2d 5, 14 (2d Cir. 1975) (decision to stay discovery is within discretion of court in same manner as is decision to order separate trials).

(n40)Footnote 8. Novopharm, Ltd. v. Torpharm, Inc., 181 F.R.D. 308, 310 (E.D.N.C. 1998) (court stayed discovery as to damages and willfulness after court severed those issues from trial of liability issues in patent infringement action).

(n41)Footnote 9. Rodin Properties-Shore Mall v. Cushman & Wakefield of Pennsylvania, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 2d 709, 721, n.4 (D.N.J. 1999) .

(n42)Footnote 10. Garber v. Randell, 477 F.2d 711, 715 (2d Cir. 1973) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n43)Footnote 11. Cohen v. Beneficial Ind. Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 551, 69 S. Ct. 1221, 93 L. Ed. 1528 (1949) ; In re Master Key Antitrust Litigation, 528 F.2d 5, 13 (2nd Cir. 1975) .

(n44)Footnote 12. Sanford v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 923 F.2d 1142, 1146 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n45)Footnote 13. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1121 (7th Cir. 1999) ; Dardar v. LaFourche Realty Co., 985 F.2d 824, 828 (5th Cir. 1993) (plaintiffs not prejudiced by separate trials).

(n46)Footnote 1. Dollar Sys., Inc. v. Avcar Leasing Sys., Inc., 890 F.2d 165, 170 (9th Cir. 1989) ; see Ch. 22, Trial by Jury.

(n47)Footnote 2. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1121 (7th Cir. 1999) ; Hydrite Chemical Company v. Calumet Lubricants Co., 47 F.3d 887, 890 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n48)Footnote 3. Dollar Sys., Inc. v. Avcar Leasing Sys., Inc., 890 F.2d 165, 170 (9th Cir. 1989) ; see Ch. 22, Trial to Jury.

(n49)Footnote 4. Dunn v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 639 F.2d 1171, 1174 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n50)Footnote 5. United Air Lines, Inc. v. Wiener, 286 F.2d 302, 306 (9th Cir. 1961) , cert. denied, 366 U.S. 924 (1961) .

(n51)Footnote 6. Gasoline Products Co. v. Champlin Refining Co., 283 U.S. 494, 500, 51 S. Ct. 513, 75 L. Ed. 1188 (1931) .

(n52)Footnote 7. See Sanford v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 923 F.2d 1142, 1145 (5th Cir. 1991) (one jury determined compensatory damages and other determined liability and punitive damages).

(n53)Footnote 8. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1128 (7th Cir. 1999) (bifurcation did not violate plaintiff's constitutional right to jury trial in action based on crash of small airplane, when court ordered separate trials for issues against pilot alleging negligence and subsequently added issues against manufacturer of part of aircraft, because juries would not be deciding same issues.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.04

§ 20.04 Subpoena Power of Courtn*

[1] Purpose and Scope of Civil Subpoena Power

A "subpoena" is a document issued by, or on behalf of, a court to command persons to appear and give testimony at a trial or other proceeding, n1 to appear and give testimony at a deposition, n2 to have persons produce designated documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, n3 or to compel persons to permit inspection of certain real property premises. n4

Although they are both governed by the same procedure under rule 45, there is a distinction between a trial subpoena and a pretrial discovery subpoena. A trial subpoena is used to compel nonparties to attend and testify at a trial or hearing, or it may be used in narrow circumstances to secure documents at trial, such as to refresh memory or for trial-preparation. On the other hand, a discovery subpoena is used to require a nonparty to produce a broad range of items, such as documents, electronically stored information, and tangible items, during the discovery period. The important distinction is that discovery subpoenas may not be used after the discovery deadline. Furthermore, it is improper to use a trial subpoena to request materials that should have been obtained during the discovery period. n5

For the deposition of a party that is a corporation, partnership, association, or governmental agency, Rule 30(b) provides that these parties may designate one or more officers, directors, managing agents or other persons who consent to testify on their behalf, and such witnesses need not be subpoenaed. n6-7 n8 However, a corporate employee or agent who does not qualify as an officer, director or managing agent is not subject to deposition by notice, and such persons must be subpoenaed pursuant to Rule 45. n9

Generally, a subpoena may be issued only during pending litigation, and every subpoena must state the title of the action and the name of the court in which the litigation is pending. n10 However, Rule 27 provides for the issuance of a subpoena to perpetuate testimony prior to the time litigation has commenced n11 and while a case is on appeal. n12

Rule 81 provides that the federal civil rules apply to proceedings to compel testimony or production of documents in accordance with a subpoena issued by an officer or agency of the United States under a federal statute except as otherwise provided by statute, rules of the district court, or order in the proceedings. n13 This makes Rule 45 generally applicable to proceedings for enforcement of administrative subpoenas to the extent Rule 45 neither conflicts with, nor is preempted by, the statute authorizing issuance of the subpoena. n14

[2] Form of Subpoena

A subpoena must state all of the following: the name of the court from which it is issued, the title of the action, the name of the court in which it is pending, and its civil action number. n1 A subpoena must also include a command to each person to whom it is directed to attend and give testimony or to produce designated books, documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, or to permit inspection of premises. n1.1 If a subpoena is for production of electronically stored information, it may specify the form or forms in which the information is to be produced. n1.1.1 "Electronically stored information" includes all information recorded by electronic means, such as computer data files, program files, backup and archival tapes, temporary files, web site information files, e-mail messages and files, backup e-mail files, deleted e-mails, cache files, cookies, voice mail messages, and backup voice mail files. n1.1.2 Finally, if the subpoena is for deposition testimony, it must state the method for recording the testimony. n1.2 Subdivisions (c) and (d) of Rule 45 detail the rights and duties of subpoena recipients. n2 The different types of subpoenas, whether commanding testimony, document production, or inspection, may be issued separately or may be joined together. n3

[3] Issuance of Subpoena

[a] Court of Issuance

While a subpoena is "issued from" a certain court, it may be "issued by" either the court clerk or by an attorney as an officer of the court, as discussed in [b], below. The proper court of issuance depends on the type of subpoena, as follows:

- For attendance at a trial or judicial hearing, from the court for the district where the trial or hearing is to be held. n1

- For attendance at a deposition, from the court for the district where the deposition is to be taken. n2

- For production and inspection, separate from a subpoena commanding a person's attendance, from the court for the district where the production or inspection must be made. n3 This means that the court of issuance is not necessarily the court of the district in which the documents or items are stored; rather, the court of issuance is the court of the district where the subpoenaed party is required to turn the documents over. n3.1

The purpose of designating the court of issuance is to ensure the accountability of the issuer and the enforcement of the subpoena. n3.2 Also, the court that issues the subpoena is the court where a person must go to file a motion to quash the subpoena n3.3

The purposes of the issuance provisions of Rule 45 are to assure the accountability of the issuer and the enforcement of the subpoena. The subpoena issues from the court where a person would go to file a motion to quash the subpoena n4 or where a person would go to enforce the subpoena, for example, with a motion to compel. Thus, if a party desires to compel an inspection of premises, for example, the court of the district in which the premises exist is the logical court to seek enforcement; consequently, the subpoena must be issued from that court. n5

[b] Persons Allowed to Issue Subpoena

Subpoenas may be issued either by the clerk of the applicable court n6 or by an attorney as an officer of the court. n7 In addition to the provisions of Rule 45(a)(3), local rules of court may give magistrate judges authority to issue subpoenas. n8

When a subpoena is issued by the clerk, the clerk of the court issues a subpoena document that is blank except for the clerk's signature to any party requesting the subpoena. The party then fills out the subpoena before serving it. n9

Rule 45 was amended in 1991 to allow the practice of attorneys, as officers of the court, to issue and sign subpoenas on behalf of the court. Attorneys may issue subpoenas for courts in which they are authorized to practice. n10 In addition, attorneys may issue subpoenas for courts in the district where the subpoena is compelling a deposition or production, if that deposition pertains to an action pending in a court where the attorney is authorized to practice. n11 In other words, any attorney permitted to represent a client in federal court has the same authority as a clerk to issue a subpoena from any federal court for the district in which the subpoena is served and enforced. n12

By authorizing attorneys to issue subpoenas from distant courts, the amended rule effectively authorizes service of a subpoena anywhere in the United States by an attorney representing any party. n13 This change was intended to ease the administrative burdens of inter-district subpoena practice. n14 The expanded role of attorneys as officers of the court which allows them to issue and sign subpoenas carries with it a parallel responsibility and potential liability, including sanctions, for an attorney's misuse of the subpoena power. n15

[4] Service of Subpoena

[a] Delivery Required

Any person who is not a party to an action and who is at least 18 years old may serve a subpoena. n1 Service of a subpoena is effected pursuant to Rule 45(b)(1) by delivering a copy of the subpoena to the person named within the subpoena. n2 A majority of courts have held that Rule 45 requires personalservice, n3 although a growing number of courts have held that subpoenas may be served using the substitute forms of service specified in Rule 4, such as by certified mail. n4 These latter courts have advanced several effective arguments in opposition to requiring personal service. First, nothing in the language of Rule 45(b) suggests that in-hand, personal service is required to effectuate "delivery," n5 n6 and if delivery by the hand of one human being into the hand of another was desired, the drafters should have used language such as that in Rule 4(e), where personal service is expressly described as "delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the individual personally." n7

If proof of service of a subpoena is necessary, a statement of the date of service, the manner of service, and the names of those served, certified by the person who served the subpoena, must be filed with the court from which the subpoena was issued. n8

[b] Fee Required

If the subpoena requires the person's attendance at a trial, hearing, or deposition, the issuing party must give the subpoena recipient fees for one day's attendance and the mileage allowed by law. n9 Fees must be tendered even when the party is proceeding in forma pauperis. n10 Under the statute, fact witnesses attending a deposition receive $40 per day, including the time taken to travel to and return from the place of attendance. n11 In addition witnesses are paid actual expenses of the trip if they travel by common carrier, or are given a mileage allowance and toll and parking charge reimbursement if traveling by privately owned vehicle. n12 A subsistence allowance must also be paid to witnesses. n13 The court may not award fees in excess of those provided for by statute. n14 It has also been held that witness fees and mileage may not be required when an individual is subpoenaed only to produce documents at the place where they work. n15

[c] Notice

When a subpoena commands production of documents and things, or inspection of premises before trial, prior notice must be served in accordance with the notice provisions of Rule 5(b), n16 so that other parties may object to the subpoena or serve a demand for additional documents or things. n17 One court has held that the requirement that "prior notice" of any commanded production be served on each party requires counsel to provide the notice to other parties prior to service of the subpoena. It had been argued that prior notice simply means notice prior to the date set for compliance with the subpoenas. However, the court noted that the purpose of the notice requirement is to provide opposing parties an opportunity to object to the subpoena, if desired, which requires notice and sufficient time to object before the date of compliance. n18 Counsel may be sanctioned for failure to comply with the prior notice requirement. n19

[d] Territorial Limitations on Service

There are territorial limits for the service of a subpoena, which are designed to prevent "undue inconvenience" to witnesses. n20 Under the limitations, all subpoenas under Rule 45 may be served: n21 anywhere in the district of the court from which it is issued; n22 or at any place within 100 miles of the place of the trial, hearing, deposition, production, inspection, copying, testing, or sampling noted in the subpoena; or anywhere in the state where a state statute or rule would permit service of a subpoena issued by a state court sitting in the place of the trial, hearing, deposition, production, inspection, copying, testing, or sampling. n23

The rule uses a state court's subpoena reach as a benchmark for the reach of a subpoena issuing from a district court in that state so that the district court subpoena will be at least as extensive as that of a state court. n23.1 If state court rules would allow service of a subpoena for a greater distance than the "100 mile" or "within the district" distance of the federal rule, the state promulgated distance should be followed, as it is "likely to reflect the varying degrees of difficulty and expenses required for local travel. n24

In addition, a subpoena may be served at any other place when authorized by a United States statute. For example, in suits by the United States under the antitrust laws, a writ of subpoena may be issued for a distance greater than 100 miles with permission of the court after proper application and cause shown. n25 The circumstances and procedure for serving a subpoena on a United States national or resident who is in a foreign country are also governed by statute. n26

[e] Immunity from Service

Nonresident parties, witnesses, attorneys, and others are immune from service of process while in the jurisdiction to participate in judicial proceedings. n27 Courts have held that this immunity doctrine, which is most frequently invoked with respect to service of summons, is equally applicable to the service of subpoenas on nonresidents. n28 The immunity is based on the convenience of the court the person is attending at the time of service and is not an individual privilege to the person.

Immunity may be denied when it is not necessary to foster the convenience of the court, for example, when a second action is related to the first, and judicial necessity requires denial of immunity. n29 Immunity will also be denied when the nonresident's presence in the local forum is extended beyond the time needed for the unrelated action, n30 or when the nonresident is pursuing unrelated business activities while in the forum jurisdiction. n31

[5] Permissible Scope of Subpoena

[a] Obligation of Issuer to Avoid Undue Burden

A subpoena may not subject a person who must respond to the subpoena to undue burden or expense. Therefore, the party who issues the subpoena, or the party's attorney, has the obligation to take reasonable steps to avoid imposing an undue burden or expense on the subpoena recipient. n1 Additionally, if a subpoena commands a person to produce and permit inspection copying, testing, or sampling of designated books, documents, electronically stored information or tangible things, or inspection of premises, that person need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless the person has been commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial. n1.1 The court has the duty to enforce these rules prohibiting imposition of an undue burden on the subpoena recipient; n2 however, the obligation of making a specific showing of an undue burden will be on the recipient of the subpoena. n2.1

[b] Enforcement of Undue Burden Limitation

The court from which the subpoena was issued must enforce the obligation on the issuer of a subpoena to take reasonable steps to avoid imposing an undue burden or expense on the subpoena recipient. Thus, the court may quash a subpoena that imposes an undue burden, or the court may protect the burdened party with an order of less absolute character, if possible, for example, by reducing the subpoena demand to a reasonable level, considering the parties' concerns. n2.2 The court may also impose sanctions on the party or attorney responsible for imposing an undue burden by issuing a overbroad subpoena. n3 Appropriate sanctions may include the subpoena recipient's lost earnings and reasonable attorney's fees. n4

On the other hand, if the party seeking discovery makes a good faith effort to "negotiate reasonable parameters" for a subpoena that was originally overly burdensome, sanctions should not be awarded. n5

[6] Requirement of Objection to Improper Subpoena for Production or Inspection

If a subpoena for inspection or production has been validly served, the person who is the object of the subpoena may not simply ignore it. If the subpoena is improper, the person must object to it, n1 and failure to serve written objections to the subpoena within the time specified ordinarily constitutes a waiver of the objections. n2 However, failure to timely serve written objections may not constitute a waiver if the court finds there are unusual circumstances and good cause for the failure. n3

Courts may find such unusual circumstances when: (1) the subpoena is overbroad on its face and exceeds the bounds of fair discovery, (2) the subpoenaed witness is a nonparty acting in good faith, and (3) counsel for the witness and counsel for the subpoenaing party were in contact concerning the witness' compliance before the witness challenged the legal basis for the subpoena. n4

A person subject to a subpoena to produce and permit inspection and copying may serve a written objection to the subpoena regarding any or all of the requests for production or premises inspection. A person served with a subpoena for the production of electronically stored information in a particular form or forms may object to the form or forms requested. The written objection must be served within 14 days of the service of the subpoena, or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance, if that is less than 14 days. The written objection must be served on the party or attorney specified in the subpoena. n5 The 14-day time limit for objections applies only to subpoenas for production and inspection. It does not apply to subpoenas for attendance and testimony, n6 which may be challenged only by a motion to quash. n7

Once a written objection has been served, the party that served the subpoena may not inspect or copy the materials or inspect the premises without an order from the court from which the subpoena was issued. n8 The issuer of the subpoena may move at any time for a motion to compel the production, provided that notice is given to the person subject to the subpoena and all parties. n9 Any subsequent order to compel production must protect a nonparty from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded. n10 Under this rule, the questions before the district court are whether the subpoena imposes expenses on a nonparty and whether those expenses are "significant." If the expenses are significant, it is mandatory that the court protect the nonparty by requiring the party seeking discovery to bear at least enough of the expense to render the remainder of the expense "non-significant." In making its determination regarding the allocation of expenses to protect a nonparty, the court should consider whether the nonparty actually has an interest in the outcome of the case, whether the nonparty can more readily bear its costs than the requesting party, and whether the litigation is of public importance. n11

[7] Motion to Quash or Modify Subpoena

[a] Purpose and Use of Motion to Quash

Rule 45 provides that a court has the authority to quash or modify a subpoena to protect a witness from misuse of the subpoena power. n1 A motion to quash a subpoena duces tecum may be made only by the person to whom the subpoena is directed or by a person who has a personal right or privilege with respect to the subject matter requested in the subpoena. n1.1 The rights of a witness to move to quash a subpoena are part of the text that must be printed on every federal subpoena to inform witnesses of their rights and duties. n2 The burden of proof lies with the person seeking to have the subpoena quashed or modified, n3 and the motion must be filed in a timely fashion. n4 Like other motions, a motion to quash is subject to Rule 7, which incorporates Rule 11's sanctions provisionsby reference. Counsel should also consult local rules of court, which may add additional requirements for the content of a motion to quash, such as formatting of the motion. n5

Rule 45 does not specify what happens after a motion to quash is denied, in particular, whether the person subject to the subpoena must then comply, or whether the proponent of the subpoena must obtain an order to compel compliance as is required after a written objection to a subpoena to produce under Rule 45(c)(2)(B) has been served. In any event, the best practice would seem to be that a party opposing a motion to quash a subpoena file a countermotion to compel in order to obtain an order compelling production should the court deny the motion to quash. n6

[b] Grounds Requiring Court to Quash or Modify Subpoena

Under the following specific circumstances, the court from which a subpoena was issued must quash or modify the subpoena on timely motion: n7

1. If the subpoena fails to allow a reasonable time for compliance. n8

2. If a subpoena requires a nonparty to travel more 100 miles for a deposition or trial. n9 The 100-mile travel rule is measured from that person's residence, workplace, or place in which the person regularly conducts business. n10 In the case of attendance at trial, however, when the subpoena-issuing party demonstrates a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship, the nonparty subject to the subpoena may be ordered to attend trial from any place within the state in which the trial is held, traveling even further than 100 miles. n11 In this case, the court may require assurances from the subpoena-issuing party that the person subject to the subpoena will be reasonably compensated for any substantial expense incurred in traveling more than 100 miles to attend trial. n12

3. If the subpoena requires disclosure of privileged or other protected material, and no exception applies to the material. n13 This requirement applies to subpoenas for the production of documents or for testimony of a witness. Courts may examine the material in question to determine whether in fact a privilege applies. n14 Federal Rule of Evidence 501 governs privileges in the federal courts. n15 For further discussion of privilege in the context of evidence and trial, see 3 Weinstein's Federal Evidence, Ch. 501, General Rule (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

4. If the subpoena subjects any person to an "undue burden." n16 The determination of what constitutes an undue burden is a matter of discretion on the part of the trial court. n17 As an example of "undue burden," the Advisory Committee described a situation of compelling an adversary to attend trial and incur substantial travel expenses, even though it is known that the adversary has no personal knowledge of the dispute. n18 Other examples of undue burden include failure to properly identify items requested, n19 or issuing a subpoena that is overbroad on its face. n20 A subpoena duces tecum is facially overbroad when the subpoena is not limited by reasonable time restrictions or by documentary descriptions. n21 The burden of proving that a subpoena is unduly burdensome is on the party requesting relief from the subpoena. n22

[c] Grounds Permitting Court to Quash or Modify Subpoena

If the proponent of a subpoena shows that there is a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot otherwise be met without undue hardship and ensures that the subpoena recipient will be reasonably compensated, the court may fashion an order that will compel the appearance or production and, concurrently, protect the witness. Furthermore, under the following specific circumstances, the court from which a subpoena was issued may quash, modify, or condition the subpoena on timely motion: n23

1. Under Rule 45(c)(3)(B)(i), if the subpoena requires the disclosure of trade secrets or confidential research, development, or commercial information. n24 Confidential commercial information is information that would cause substantial economic harm to the competitive position of the entity from whom the information was obtained. n25 For example, in a case in which a party subpoenaed a nonparty corporation to provide testimony, the subpoena to testify was quashed because it sought confidential business information. n26

2. If a subpoena requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion that does not describe events in dispute and is a result of the expert's own study, not the result of a request of a party. n27 This category of protection was designed to guard the intellectual property rights of experts against compulsion to testify without reasonable compensation, if at all. Compelling an unretained expert to render expertise without a showing of substantial need and reasonable compensation may be regarded as a taking of intellectual property. n28 In making a determination whether to quash or modify a subpoena calling for testimony by an unretained expert, the court should consider several factors, including: (1) the degree to which the expert is being called because of knowledge of facts relevant to the case, rather than to give opinion testimony; (2) the difference between testifying to a previously formed opinion and forming a new one; (3) the possibility that the witness is a sui generis expert, (4) the extent to which the calling party is able to show an unlikelihood that any comparable witness will testify, and (5) the degree to which the witness is able to show that he or she has been oppressed by having to testify. n29

3. If a subpoena requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial. If, however, the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot otherwise be met without undue hardship and ensures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance only on specified conditions. n30

[d] Court Has Discretion Whether to Modify or to Quash

The court has discretion to determine the method it may use to remedy a burdensome subpoena: it may quash it in its entirety or it may modify the subpoena to correct overly broad language, to correct ambiguity, and to prevent undue burden. Modifying an overly broad subpoena generally entails putting some kind of scope or date limitation on the request. For example, in one case the court modified a production request from "all agreements" between one of the parties and a third party, to "any and all written agreements relating to the agency relationship" between the party and the third party. n31

However, even though modification may be preferable to quashing, courts are not required to use the lesser remedy of modification first. For example, in one case, rather than entirely quashing what might be necessary discovery, the trial court exercised its discretion by combining its decision to quash the overbroad subpoena with a willingness to later entertain a more narrowly drawn subpoena. The court of appeals held that the district court's decision to quash the subpoena but to allow the subpoena issuer to draft an entirely new subpoena, instead of the court itself modifying the subpoena, was within the court's sound discretion. n32

Thus, reviewing courts generally encourage the trial court to modify a subpoena to accommodate the needs and interests of those affected, and failure to at least consider modification may be found to be an abuse of discretion. n33 Furthermore, quashing a subpoena seems to have no res judicata effect on an issuer submitting a narrower subpoena at a later date. n34

[8] Obligations of Person Who is Object of Subpoena

[a] Duty to Produce Documents in Organized Manner

When a person responds to a subpoena to produce documents or other information, the person must produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or must organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the subpoena. n1

Special rules apply to subpoenas that request production of "electronically stored information," which includes all information recorded by electronic means, such as computer data files, program files, backup and archival tapes, temporary files, system history files, web site information files, e-mail messages and files, backup e-mail files, deleted e-mails, cache files, cookies, voice mail messages and files, and backup voice mail files. n2 When a person responds to a subpoena to produce electronically stored information, and the subpoena does not specify the form or forms for producing the electronically stored information, the responding person must produce the information in a form or forms in which the person ordinarily maintains the information, or in a form or forms that are reasonably usable. n3 The responding person need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form. n3.1

Additionally, a person responding to a subpoena to produce electronically stored information need not provide discovery of the information from sources that the person identifies as not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. On motion to compel discovery or to quash the subpoena, the person responding to the subpoena must show that the information sought is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. If that showing is made, the court may nevertheless order discovery from such sources if the requesting party shows good cause, considering whether the discovery request is cumulative or duplicative or obtainable from some other source, the requesting party has had other opportunities to obtain the information sought, or if answering the request would be unduly burdensome or expensive. n3.2 Furthermore, the court may specify conditions for the discovery. n3.3

[b] Duty to Assert Any Claim of Privilege in Writing

If a subpoena requests information or material that is either privileged or protected as trial preparation material, the party subject to the subpoena may withhold the material but must assert the claim expressly and support the claim with a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the requesting party to contest the claim of privilege or protection. n4 The burden of establishing that the privilege applies for each document claimed is on the person asserting privilege or confidentiality. n5 Rule 45(d)(2) is generally satisfied by the submission of a privilege log detailing each document withheld and the reason. Rule 45(d)(2) serves two purposes. First, it prevents courts from addressing often difficult privilege questions in the abstract. Second, it requires a timely and detailed explanation of the grounds of the privilege in order to protect the right of the party that issued the subpoena to contest the claims of privilege. n6 Some subpoenas demanding production of documents and information may be so broad that to assert a claim of privilege, complete with an adequate description of the nature of the documents to support the claim, would be an undue burden. In such circumstances, a person may object to the subpoena and seek protection under Rule 45(c)(2). n7

If a person subject to a subpoena has already inadvertently produced material in discovery that is subject to a claim of privilege or trial-preparation, the party may nevertheless obtain protection for that material by following the procedure specified in the rules. The party making the claim for privilege or work product must first notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified of the claim, a receiving party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has and may not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved. Alternatively, a receiving party may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a resolution of the claim. If the receiving party disclosed the information before being notified, it must take reasonable steps to retrieve it. While that claim is being resolved, the person who produced the information must preserve it. n8

[c] Duty to Comply With Subpoena

A person subject to a subpoena is obliged to obey the subpoena unless the person has an adequate excuse. Thus, Rule 45(c)(2)(B) and Rule 45(d)(2) together require that a party objecting to a subpoena on the basis of privilege must both (1) object to the subpoena and (2) state any claim of privilege within the stipulated period of service. n9-11 n12 Failure to comply with the subpoena, or to object, n13 maycause the person to become in contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued. n14 Furthermore, by federal statute a court may punish contempt of its authority by a person's disobedience or resisting lawful process. n15

Although Rule 45(e) does not define "adequate excuse," n16 it does provide that an adequate cause for failure to obey exists when a subpoena requires a non-party to appear or produce documents at a place beyond the travel limits set by Rule 45(c)(3)(A)(ii). n17 The Advisory Committee has noted that contempt of court for failure to obey a subpoena should be used sparingly, because the command of the subpoena is not in fact one uttered by a judicial officer but, rather, issued by an attorney. n18 At least one circuit has held that to find a person in contempt of court for failure to comply with a subpoena duces tecum, the party seeking discovery must have obtained an order directing compliance. n19

Under Rule 45(e), a party moving to hold another party in contempt must demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that the alleged contemnor violated the court's prior order. However, a finding of bad faith on the part of the contemnor is not required. In fact, the contemnor's failure to comply with the court decree need not be intentional. Intent of the recalcitrant party is irrelevant in a civil contempt proceeding, because, unlike a criminal contempt proceeding, a civil contempt action is a remedial sanction used to obtain compliance with a court order or to compensate for damage sustained as a result of noncompliance. n20

If a party or witness refuses to answer designated questions at a deposition, or a party fails to produce documents in compliance with a subpoena duces tecum, either the court in which the action is pending or the court in the district in which the deposition is taken, or in the case of an order to a non-party witness, the latter court, may issue an order pursuant to Rule 37(a) requiring that the questions be answered or the documents to be produced. Noncompliance can result in imposition of Rule 37(b)(2) sanctions. n21

If the person subject to a subpoena neither obeys nor objects to the subpoena, the issuing party must file a motion for enforcement of the subpoena or a motion to compel production under the subpoena, and the court may then enter an order for the person to respond to the subpoena or to show cause in writing by a particular date why the person should not be held in contempt. n21.1 Failure to obtain an order compelling compliance with a subpoena may render a sanction of contempt of court unavailable. n22

[9] Appeal of Subpoena Orders

An order denying or granting a motion to quash a subpoena is ordinarily not considered final and appealable. However, if a motion to quash a subpoena served on a non-party is granted by a court in a district other than the district in which the underlying action is pending, that order is final and appealable, because it is the final disposition of the issues before it, and it would be unreviewable on appeal of the final judgment in the principal action. n1

When there is a denial of a motion to quash a subpoena in a district other than that in which the action is pending, the order is not final and appealable without an adjudication of contempt. The standard of review for granting or denying a motion to quash is whether the order was an abuse of discretion on the part of the court. n2

A motion to compel production under a subpoena is treated similarly. Thus, when a party in a court in one district moves in another district to compel non parties to honor subpoenas duces tecum and the court agrees with the objections and denies the motion to compel, the order is immediately appealable. This is true even if the district court retains jurisdiction to hear particularized claims of need because it is settled law that a court's retention of jurisdiction in order to facilitate the consideration of possible future relief does not undermine the finality of an otherwise appealable order. Consequently, the circuit court of thedistrict in which the motion to compel was presented has jurisdiction to hear and determine the appeal. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersSubpoenas

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 45.02 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C), (2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2)(B).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C), (2)(C).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C), (2)(C).

(n6)Footnote 5. *Colon v. Cole Bros. Circus, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1403, at 4 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 6-7. [Reserved]

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6); see Wauchop v. Domino's Pizza, Inc., 143 F.R.D. 199, 205 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Cummings v. GMC, 365 F.3d 944, 953 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(B).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(3).

(n14)Footnote 14. See NLRB v. Cable Car Advertisers, Inc., 319 F. Supp. 2d 991, 999-1000 (N.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(A), (B).

(n16)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C).

(n17)Footnote 1.1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1).

(n18)Footnote 1.1.2. Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n19)Footnote 1.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2), (B).

(n20)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c), (d).

(n21)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n22)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2)(A).

(n23)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2)(B).

(n24)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2)(C).

(n25)Footnote 3.1. Hay Group, Inc. v. E.B.S. Acquisition Corp., 360 F.3d 404, 412-413 (3d Cir. 2004) (person subject to subpoena is required to produce materials in that person's control, whether or not the materials are located in district within which subpoena may be served).

(n26)Footnote 3.2. See Highland Tank & Mfg. Co. v. PS Int'l, Inc., 227 F.R.D. 374, 381 n.10 (W.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n27)Footnote 3.3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments (if subpoena goes beyond limits of subpoena power, person commanded to appear at proceeding must present motion to quash such subpoena to court for district in which proceeding would occur).

(n28)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments (if subpoena goes beyond limits of subpoena power, person commanded to appear at proceeding must present motion to quash such subpoena to court for district in which proceeding would occur).

(n29)Footnote 5. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Murray Sheet Metal Co., 967 F.2d 980, 981 n.1 (4th Cir. 1992) (southern district court of West Virginia properly issued subpoena duces tecum in connection with deposition to be taken in West Virginia in action pending in southern district of New York, and southern district court of West Virginia was also proper court to hear ensuing motion to compel production).

(n30)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(3); see McGill v. Duckworth, 944 F.2d 344, 353 (7th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 503 U.S. 907 (1992) (subpoena is issued by clerk of district court, and not by district judge).

(n31)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(3); Kupritz v. Savannah College of Art & Design, 155 F.R.D. 84, 86-87 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (attorney permitted to sign subpoena on behalf of court).

(n32)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(3).

(n33)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(3).

(n34)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(3); see In re Interbank Funding Corp., 310 B.R. 238, 255 n.22 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n35)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(3), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n36)Footnote 12. Security Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. Duncanson & Holt, Inc., 228 F.3d 865, 869 (8th Cir. 2000) .

(n37)Footnote 13. *Tomkins v. Schmid Sys., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23646, at 7 (D. Ariz. 2004) .

(n38)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(3), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n39)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(3), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments; see [5][b], below.

(n40)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(1).

(n41)Footnote 2. In re Motorsports Merchandise Antitrust Liti gation, 186 F.R.D. 344, 348 (W.D. Va. 1999) (under Rule 45, party properly may serve subpoena on nonparty corporation by personal service on officer or agent, or pursuant to law of state in which district court is located).

(n42)Footnote 3. Smith v. Midland Brake, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 683, 686 (D. Kan. 1995) (service of subpoena duces tecum by certified mail improper).

(n43)Footnote 4. *See Soto v. ECC Indus., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 85634, at *2-3 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n44)Footnote 5. [Reserved]

(n45)Footnote 6. In re Shur, 184 B.R. 640, 643 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n46)Footnote 7. Compare Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(1) with Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(e).

(n47)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(3).

(n48)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1821; CF & I Steel Corp. v. Mitsui & Co., 713 F.2d 494, 496 (9th Cir. 1983) (service of subpoena requires simultaneous tender of witness fees and reasonable estimated mileage).

(n49)Footnote 10. CF & I Steel Corp. v. Mitsui & Co., 713 F.2d 494, 496 (9th Cir. 1983) (simultaneous tendering of witness fees and reasonable estimated mileage allowed by law are required with service of subpoena).

(n50)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 1821(b).

(n51)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1821(c).

(n52)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1821(d).

(n53)Footnote 14. Irons v. Karceski, 74 F.3d 1262, 1263 (D.C. Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1189 (1996) .

(n54)Footnote 15. Windsor v. Martindale, 175 F.R.D. 665, 670 (D. Colo. 1997) (subpoenas duces tecum not quashed for failure to provide witness fees or mileage because subpoenaed individuals were not requested to appear, but were merely required to produce documents at correctional facility at which they worked).

(n55)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(1).

(n56)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(1), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n57)Footnote 18. Biocore Med. Techs., Inc. v. Khosrowshahi, 181 F.R.D. 660, 666-667 (D. Kan. 1998) (notice prior to service of subpoena must provide opposition counsel sufficient time to attempt to stop enforcement of subpoena when subpoena is improper).

(n58)Footnote 19. Spencer v. Steinman, 179 F.R.D. 484, 487-489 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (plaintiff's attorney was ordered to pay attorney's fees incurred by defendant in calling attention to court of violation of prior notice requirement).

(n59)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(2), Committee Note to 1980 Amendments.

(n60)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(2).

(n61)Footnote 22. See In re Jee, 104 B.R. 289, 293 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1989) (when nonparty named in discovery subpoena duces tecum is corporation as opposed to individual, that corporation is amenable to service in any forum within which corporation has sufficient minimum contacts).

(n62)Footnote 23. See In re Motorsports Merchandise Antitrust Litigation, 186 F.R.D. 344, 348 (W.D. Va. 1999) (subpoena duces tecum was properly served on corporate defendant, in accordance with law of Virginia as state in which district court sat; under Federal Rules of Civil Proce dure, party may serve subpoena on corporation pursuant to law of state in which district court is located).

(n63)Footnote 23.1. Dynegy Midstream Servs. v. Trammochem, 451 F.3d 89, 95 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n64)Footnote 24. Chung v. Chrysler Corp., 903 F. Supp. 160, 164 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n65)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 23.

(n66)Footnote 26. See 28 U.S.C. § 1783.

(n67)Footnote 27. ARW Exploration Corp. v. Aguirre, 45 F.3d 1455, 1460 (10th Cir. 1995) ; Cabiri v. Assasie-Gyimah, 921 F. Supp. 1189, 1193-1194 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n68)Footnote 28. Celanese Corp. v. Duplan Corp., 502 F.2d 188, 189-190 (4th Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 420 U.S. 929 (1975) .

(n69)Footnote 29. LaCroix v. American Horse Show Ass'n, 853 F. Supp. 992, 998-999 (N.D. Ohio 1994) (immunity not extended to attorney when service of process is in a case related to case in which attorney is appearing).

(n70)Footnote 30. Atkinson v. Jory, 292 F.2d 169, 171 (10th Cir. 1961) .

(n71)Footnote 31. Uniroyal, Inc. v. Sperberg, 63 F.R.D. 55, 58-60 (S.D.N.Y. 1973) .

(n72)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(1).

(n73)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(2)(A).

(n74)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(1); see [b], below.

(n75)Footnote 2.1. Flatow v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 196 F.R.D. 203, 207 (D. D.C. 2000) (Treasury Department's claims that compliance with subpoena would require thousands of personnel hours were too general to comply with specificity requirement for establishing undue burden); see [7], below.

(n76)Footnote 2.2. Flanagan v. Wyndham Int'l, 231 F.R.D. 98, 102 (D.D.C. 2005) .

(n77)Footnote 3. Dravo Corp. v. Liberty Mutual Ins. Co., 160 F.R.D. 123, 128 (D. Neb. 1995) .

(n78)Footnote 4. Tiberi v. Cigna Ins. Co., 40 F.3d 110, 112 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n79)Footnote 5. Scherer v. Ge Capital Corporation, 185 F.R.D. 351, 352 (D. Kan. 1999) (award to defendant of attorney's fees and costs incurred in bringing motion to quash subpoenas duces tecum that was served by plaintiff after close of discovery was not warranted, given that defendant failed to make good faith effort to resolve dispute without judicial intervention).

(n80)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(2)(B).

(n81)Footnote 2. See Judicial Watch, Inc. v. United States Dept. of Commerce, 196 F.R.D. 1, 2 (D.D.C. 2000) (witness waived objection on grounds of lack of service when witness made voluntary appearance at deposition but failed to file timely written objections); In re Motorsports Merchandise Antitrust Litigation, 186 F.R.D. 344, 349 (W.D. Va. 1999) ; United States v. International Bus. Mach. Corp., 70 F.R.D. 700, 701-702 (S.D.N.Y. 1976) .

(n82)Footnote 3. See In re Motorsports Merchandise Antitrust Litigation, 186 F.R.D. 344, 350 (W.D. Va. 1999) .

(n83)Footnote 4. Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 169 F.R.D. 44, 48-51 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (nonparty who attempted to informally negotiate scope of overbroad document request permitted to raise objections despite failure to strictly comply with time limits).

(n84)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(2)(B); see Tuite v. Henry, 98 F.3d 1411, 1416-1417 (D.C. 1996) (objection and claim of privilege required within 14 days, but not full description of objection material, which may be submitted within reasonable time).

(n85)Footnote 6. National Paint & Coatings Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 147 F.R.D. 184, 185 (N.D. Ill. 1993) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(c)(2)(B).

(n86)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(c)(3).

(n87)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(2)(B).

(n88)Footnote 9. Gould Inc. v. Mitsui Mining & Smelting Co, 825 F.2d 676, 679 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n89)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(2)(B).

(n90)Footnote 11. Linder v. Adolfo Calero-Portocarrero, 251 F.3d 178, 182-183 (D.C. Cir. 2001) (finding that when expenses of compliance with subpoena amounted to $200,000, they were "significant," and court could protect nonparty governmental agencies by ordering that agencies need not comply with plaintiffs' subpoenas when plaintiff would bear no part of expense).

(n91)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3).

(n92)Footnote 1.1. Hertenstein v. Kimberly Home Health Care, Inc., 189 F.R.D. 620, 635 (D. Kan. 1999) (court denied motion to quash subpoena served on nonparty because motion to quash was made by plaintiff, and plaintiff did not establish any personal right or privilege with respect to subpoenaed documents).

(n93)Footnote 2. Smith v. Midland Brake, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 683, 685 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n94)Footnote 3. Doster v. Schenk, A.G., 141 F.R.D. 50, 51 (M.D.N.C. 1991) .

(n95)Footnote 4. See In re Motorsports Merchandise Antitrust Litigation, 186 F.R.D. 344, 350 (W.D. Va. 1999) (motion to quash not timely when filed 36 days after the date on which court found that proper corporate representatives were aware of subpoena).

(n96)Footnote 5. See Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

(n97)Footnote 6. Diamond State Ins. Co. v. Rebel Oil Co., 157 F.R.D. 691, 695 (D. Nev. 1994) (countermotion to compel filed with opposition to motion to quash subpoena).

(n98)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A).

(n99)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A)(i); Mann v. University of Cincinnati, 824 F. Supp. 1190, 1202 (S.D. Ohio 1993) , aff'd on other grounds, 114 F.3d 1188 (6th Cir. 1997) (one week notice requesting disclosure of medical file was unreasonable and violated Rule 45, when there was no urgency justifying such short notice).

(n100)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A)(ii); In re Byrd, Inc., 927 F.2d 1135, 1136 (10th Cir. 1991) (subpoena duces tecum to attend deposition and produce documents quashed as invalid because it required deponent to travel more than 100 miles).

(n101)Footnote 10. Cook v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 816 F. Supp. 667, 669 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n102)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B)(iii); see Chung v. Chrysler Corp., 903 F. Supp. 160, 164-165 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n103)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B)(iii).

(n104)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A)(iii); see Nagy v. Baltimore Life Insurance Co., 49 F. Supp. 2d 822, 825 (D. Md. 1999) (nondisclosure because of state statutory privilege for material related to state insurance administration's investigation of insurer).

(n105)Footnote 14. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Castellett, 156 F.R.D. 89, 92-96 (D.N.J. 1994) .

(n106)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Evid. 501.

(n107)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A)(iv); Irons v. Karceski, 74 F.3d 1262, 1264 (D.C. Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1189 (1996) .

(n108)Footnote 17. Tiberi v. Cigna Ins. Co., 40 F.3d 110, 112 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n109)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A)(iv)), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n110)Footnote 19. Sony Corp. v. S.W.I. Trading, Inc., 104 F.R.D. 535, 544 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (documents must be identified and there must be basis for concluding that they exist).

(n111)Footnote 20. Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 169 F.R.D. 44, 49-51 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (many requests in subpoena asked for information about multinational company defendant's financial condition without limiting inquiry to particular division, segment, or location, even though antitrust action only related to particular segment of defendant's business).

(n112)Footnote 21. Williams v. City of Dallas, 178 F.R.D. 103, 109-110, 115-116 (N.D. Tex. 1998) (subpoena requiring production of any and all documents related to three individuals was overbroad on its face because it did not provide particular documentary descriptions or reasonable restrictions on time); see First American Corp. v. Price Waterhouse LLP, 154 F.3d 16, 23 (district court did not abuse its discretion in determining that the subpoena at issue is not overbroad when burden imposed on accounting partnership by nonparty witness subpoena in action arising out of collapse of bank was not undue, in that extensive discovery was warranted by breadth of alleged fraud).

(n113)Footnote 22. Linder v. Department of Defense, 133 F.3d 17, 24 (D.C. Cir. 1998) ; Plant Genetic Sys., N.V. v. Northrup King Co., 6 F. Supp. 2d 859, 861 (E.D. Mo. 1998) .

(n114)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B).

(n115)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B)(i).

(n116)Footnote 25. Arkwright Mutual Ins. Co. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pa., 148 F.R.D. 552, 557 (S.D.

W.Va. 1993) (because reinsurer sought primarily factual information from expert, material sought was not "intellectual property").

(n117)Footnote 26. Micro Motion, Inc. v. Kane Steel Co., 894 F.2d 1318, 1322 (Fed. Cir. 1990) .

(n118)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B)(ii).

(n119)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B)(ii), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n120)Footnote 29. Young v. United States, 181 F.R.D. 344, 348 (W.D. Tex. 1997) .

(n121)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(B)(ii); see Cook v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry., 816 F. Supp. 667, 669 (D. Kan. 1993) (straight line on map must be used in measuring distance between place of trial and place of service).

(n122)Footnote 31. Diamond State Ins. Co. v. Rebel Oil Co., 157 F.R.D. 691, 697 (D. Nev. 1994) .

(n123)Footnote 32. Tiberi v. Cigna Ins. Co., 40 F.3d 110, 112 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n124)Footnote 33. Northrop Corp. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 751 F.2d 395, 407 (D.C. Cir. 1984) .

(n125)Footnote 34. Tiberi v. Cigna Ins. Co., 40 F.3d 110, 112 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n126)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(A).

(n127)Footnote 2. Super Film of Am., Inc. v. UCB Films, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 649, 657 (D. Kan. 2006) .

(n128)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(B).

(n129)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(C).

(n130)Footnote 3.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C).

(n131)Footnote 3.3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1)(C).

(n132)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(A).

(n133)Footnote 5. Kai USA Ltd. v. Camillus Cutlery Co. (In re Kroll), 224 F.R.D. 326, 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n134)Footnote 6. In re Subpoena Duces Tecum, 439 F.3d 740, 751 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n135)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(2).

(n136)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B).

(n137)Footnote 9-11. [Reserved]

(n138)Footnote 12. In re Sealed Case, 121 F.3d 729, 741 (D.C. Cir. 1997) (in grand jury investigation of former Secretary of Agriculture, grand jury issued subpoena duces tecum seeking documents pertaining to White House Counsel's investigation of former secretary; White House response to subpoena, informing grand jury that it believed withheld documents were privileged, satisfied Rule 45(d)(2)).

(n139)Footnote 13. Broussard v. Lemons, 186 F.R.D. 396, 397 (W.D. La. 1999) (contempt is not available as sanction for party's failure to comply with document subpoena, where the subpoenaed party has timely objected to subpoena).

(n140)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(e); Daval Steel Prods. v. M/V Fakredine, 951 F.2d 1357, 1364 (2d Cir. 1991) (striking of a pleading as contempt sanction for failure to comply with subpoena duces tecum).

(n141)Footnote 15. 18 U.S.C. § 401(3).

(n142)Footnote 16. Kupritz v. Savannah College of Art & Design, 155 F.R.D. 84, 88 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (when subpoena served was served for deposition to commence on that same day, nonparty witness had adequate excuse for not appearing at deposition on that day).

(n143)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(e); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A)(ii), discussed in [7][b], above.

(n144)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(e), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n145)Footnote 19. Pennwalt Corp. v. Durand-Wayland, Inc., 708 F.2d 492, 494 (9th Cir. 1983) (denial of motion to quash subpoena alone does not compel subpoenaed person to comply; once any objection is made to subpoena, court order to compel must be obtained).

(n146)Footnote 20. Food Lion, Inc. v. United Food and Commercial Workers International Union, 103 F.3d 1007, 1016 (D.C. Cir. 1997) .

(n147)Footnote 21. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37; cf. Alexander v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 186 F.R.D. 188, (D.D.C. 1999) (sanctions not awarded in this case because attorneys for non-party subject of subpoena did not "unreasonably and vexatiously" multiply proceedings in case).

(n148)Footnote 21.1. Hairston v. Alert Safety Light Prods., 307 F.3d 717, 721 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n149)Footnote 22. Pennwalt Corp. v. Durand-Wayland, Inc., 708 F.2d 492, 494 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n150)Footnote 1. Northrop Corp. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 751 F.2d 395, 399 n.5 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (appeal was proper of grant of motion to quash production subpoena issued from D.C. district court to Department of State for litigation pending in district court in California, because grant of motion to quash was an appealable final judgment).

(n151)Footnote 2. Tiberi v. Cigna Ins. Co., 40 F.3d 110, 112 (5th Cir. 1994) (grant of motion to quash overly broad subpoena duces tecum was not abuse of discretion).

(n152)Footnote 3. Cusumano v. Microsoft Corp., 162 F.3d 708, 712 (1st Cir. 1998) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.05

§ 20.05 Right of Party to be Present at Civil Trial

[1] Constitutional Nature of Right

The due process clause of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution does not guarantee an absolute right to a civil litigant to be present personally at a trial, n1 and neither does the Seventh Amendment's guarantee of a jury trial. n2 Thus, courts have held that these rights are generally protected when a party is represented by counsel. However, a court may not exclude arbitrarily a party who desires to be present merely because the party is represented by counsel. n3

[2] Exclusion of Civil Litigant From Trial

There are four types of cases that have considered the issue of whether a civil litigant is entitled to be present at trial. The first type of case states the general rule that a party is entitled to be present either in person or by counsel at all phases of the trial. However, representation by counsel does not justify arbitrary exclusion of a party who wishes to be personally present in the courtroom. n1 In the second type of case, one party desires to exclude the other party because the physical presence of the other party before the jury is prejudicial. For example, if an injured plaintiff is disfigured, the defendant may want to exclude the plaintiff because his or her presence may be inflammatory. Courts have rejected this contention, holding that mere physical appearance does not justify exclusion of a party despite his or her desire to be present. n2

In the third type of case, the court confronts the issue of whether to exclude a party whose appearance and conduct was alleged to have resulted in prejudice. This third type of case holds that a party may be excluded based on a balancing test if the party's mental condition, which is the result of the defendant's conduct, renders him or her unable to comprehend the proceedings or aid counsel in furthering the case, and if the party's presence is so disruptive as to have an adverse effect on the fairness of the trial.

In summary, a plaintiff who can comprehend the proceedings and aid counsel may not be excluded from any portion of the proceedings absent disruptive behavior or a knowing and voluntary waiver. Thus, a plaintiff with a solely physical abnormality generally may not be excluded involuntarily, absent disruptive behavior, even when the abnormality is due allegedly to the defendant's wrongful conduct. On the other hand, on those occasions when the mere presence of a party would render the jury unable to arrive at an unbiased judgment concerning liability, and the presence of the party would not aid the fair administration of justice, the trial court may exclude the plaintiff or limit his or her presence. A party's involuntary exclusion under these circumstances does not constitute a denial of due process. n3

To determine exclusion, a hearing on this issue must be held before trial, and a defendant who asserts that a plaintiff's mere presence will prejudice the jury must bear the burden of persuasion on this issue. The issue which the district court must resolve at the hearing is whether the party's presence would prevent or substantially impair the jury from performing its duties in accordance with its instructions and its oath. The requisite showing of prejudice may not be satisfied simply by establishing that a plaintiff has a physical or mental injury; the party seeking exclusion must establish that the party's appearance or conduct is likely to prevent the jury from performing its duty. n4

Finally, in the fourth type of case, it has been held that a prisoner does not have an absolute constitutional right to be present at a civil trial to which he or she is a party. However, a court has the discretion to order that a prisoner be permitted to attend a civil trial. In exercising that discretion, a court should consider several factors, including security, the substantiality of the issues, the possibility of delaying the trial until the prisoner is released, and the extent of the prisoner's interest in presenting his or her testimony in person rather than by deposition. Thus, in appropriate cases, a federal court may direct that a prisoner who has filed a civil suit be permitted to attend the trial. n5

[3] Waiver of Right to be Present

A party or a party's attorney may waive by express consent the party's or the attorney's right to be present at a particular proceeding, including trial. However, an express waiver is strictly construed, and generally does not authorize proceedings other than those subject to the express waiver to be conducted in the absence of a party or attorney. n1 A party or the party's attorney may also waive the right to be present at trial by implication, such as by their voluntary absence from the courtroom at a time when they know that proceedings are being conducted or are about to take place. In such circumstances, the trial may proceed without them. If the jury has retired, it may be recalled for additional instructions, provided the instructions are given in open court. n2 However, absent express consent, it is reversible error for additional instructions to be given elsewhere than in open court without notice to counsel and an opportunity to object. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Helminski v. Ayerst Lab., 766 F.2d 208, 213 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 981, 106 S. Ct. 386, 88 L. Ed. 2d 339 (1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Manning v. Tefft, 839 F. Supp. 126, 129-130 (D.R.I. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fillippon v. Albion Vein Slate Co., 250 U.S. 76, 81, 39 S. Ct. 435, 436, 63 L. Ed. 853 (1919) (if party is represented by counsel, party's rights are protected under due process, even if party is personally absent); Helminski v. Ayerst Lab., 766 F.2d 208, 213 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 981 (1985) .

(n4)Footnote 1. Helminski v. Ayerst Lab., 766 F.2d 208, 213 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 981, 106 S. Ct. 386, 88 L. Ed. 2d 339 (1985) .

(n5)Footnote 2. Helminski v. Ayerst Lab., 766 F.2d 208, 215 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 981 (1985) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Helminski v. Ayerst Lab., 766 F.2d 208, 217 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 981 (1985) .

(n7)Footnote 4. Helminski v. Ayerst Labs., 766 F.2d 208, 214-216 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 981

(1985) ; see Gonzalez-Marin v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc., 845 F.2d 1140, 1146-1147 (1st Cir. 1988) (trial court may decide to bar from courtroom disabled plaintiff incapable of comprehending judicial proceedings during liability phase of trial in order to prevent prejudice that causes substantial impairment to jury).

(n8)Footnote 5. Manning v. Tefft, 839 F. Supp. 126, 129-130 (D.R.I. 1994) .

(n9)Footnote 1. Arrington v. Robertson, 114 F.2d 821, 823 (3rd Cir. 1940) ; see Helminski v. Ayerst Lab., 766 F.2d 208, 217 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 981 (1985) (plaintiff who can comprehend proceedings and assist counsel may not be excluded from any portion of proceedings absent disruptive behavior or knowing and voluntary waiver).

(n10)Footnote 2. Stewart v. Wyoming Ranche Co., 128 U.S. 383, 390, 9 S. Ct. 101, 32 L. Ed. 439 (1888) .

(n11)Footnote 3. Fillippon v. Albion Vein Slate Co., 250 U.S. 76, 81, 39 S. Ct. 435, 63 L. Ed. 853 (1919) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.06

§ 20.06 Sequence of Proceeding When Legal and Equitable Actions are Involved in Jury Trial

[1] Court Determines Equitable Issues When Joined With Legal Issues

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that all legal, equitable, and maritime issues related to a claim should be joined in a single action. n1 Furthermore, the right to a jury trial under Rule 38 extends to individual issues in a case rather than to entire actions. n2 Consequently, litigation frequently involves combined trials in which the court must submit legal claims to a jury, while reserving equitable or maritime claims for determination by the court itself. n3 Thus, even when the plaintiff has a right to a jury trial on the plaintiff's legal claims, the district court must make an independent judgment on any equitable issues. That principle is true even though the jury's determination of factual issues common to both the legal and equitable claims would bind the court. n4

The language of Rule 39 anticipates combined actions. When there is a jury demand, the rule provides for a case to be put on the jury docket for the trial of all such issues, n5 and simultaneously recognizes that issues not demanded for trial by jury must be tried by the court. n6 The court has discretion to determine the sequence in which equitable and legal issues must be tried when the equitable and legal issues are not factually related. However, when the factual questions are related to both equitable and legal issues the jury must determine the legal issues first. n7

[2] Jury Must Determine Legal Issues First When Facts Relate to both legal and Equitable Issues

[a] Statement of Jury First Rule

The right to a jury trial may not be impaired through prior determination of factual issues by the court. n1 This means that when the legal and equitable claims in a case are factually interrelated, and the resolution of issues involved in the legal claims will be relevant to the equitable claims, the court must submit legal claims to the jury first, and then the court must decide the equitable claims. In other words, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requirement that legal and equitable claims be joined in one action may not undercut the right to a jury trial. When the legal and equitable issues are interrelated, the jury decides the factual issues and legal issues, and the court decides the equitable issues, which may require reliance on the factual determinations already made by the jury. n1.1

In cases involving both legal and equitable claims, a party with a right to trial by jury has the right to have issues involving any legal claims decided by the jury first, including those claims that contain both legal and equitable aspects.

n2 The court then decides the equitable claims based on the findings of the jury. n3 This sequence is important because the collateral estoppel or res judicata effect of determining the equitable issues first might infringe on the right to have the legal claims tried by the jury. n4

However, it is important to note that the "jury first" rule means that the jury's decisions on the common factual questions are binding on the court, but that the court is not always bound by the jury's verdict. Thus, if the court determines that a jury determination of a factual issue is infirm to the extent that it is without legally sufficient evidentiary support such that a judgment as a matter of law would be justified, n5 or if the court determines that there are grounds for ordering a new trial, n6 the court may make contrary factual decisions without violating the jury first rule or otherwise impinging on a party's right to a jury trial. n7

The jury first rule applies regardless of whether the issues triable by jury may be characterized as "incidental" to the issues not triable by jury. n8 Although a court is entitled to examine the pleadings and strike a jury demand when there is no genuine issue entitling a party to a jury trial, a court may not characterize a genuine legal claim triable by jury as "merely incidental" to nonjury claims for equitable relief, such as claims for an accounting, and strike a jury demand based on that type of characterization. n9

[b] Jury First Rule Inapplicable When Jury Would Not be Affected by Prior Court Decision

The "jury first" applies only in cases when the legal and equitable issues are truly interrelated. When they are entirely independent, the court may proceed to try the equitable action first. In one case, for example, the equitable action was filed long before the legal action and the overlap of factual matter was not extensive. The court held that it was not error for the district court to resolve factual issues related to the equitable action first. n10 Thus, when a single case combines jury and nonjury claims but the factual issues do not overlap, the determination of the nonjury claims will not have a preemptive effect on the jury's determination of the jury claims; because the right to a jury trial would not be prejudiced by the order of determination of the factually unrelated claims or issues, the sequence of trial is in the court's discretion and the sequence may be set by the court using considerations such as administrative convenience. n11 Similarly, it has been held that when disposition of an equitable claim would make consideration of the a claim unnecessary, common sense requires that the equitable claim be determined first. n12

The "jury first" rule also applies only when the equitable and legal claims are brought simultaneously. Primacy of the right to a jury trial does not enable a party to relitigate issues before a jury if those issues have already been properly determined by a court in an earlier, separate action. n13 The determination of issuesof fact by the court in an nonjury action may properly have collateral estoppel effect on a subsequent, separate jury action involving the same issues. n14

[3] Appeal of Order Setting Sequence of Trial

An order making a determination as to whether a case will be tried to a jury or to the bench is an interlocutory order. Similarly, if the case involves both legal and equitable issues, the court's decision as to the sequence of the trial of those issues is also interlocutory. Therefore, neither of these determinations is generally reviewable as an interlocutory order. n1 However, the court may certify the determination for immediate appeal under the certification statute. n2 Furthermore,if warranted by the circumstances of a particular case, an appellate court may issue a prerogative writ to review a lower court's determination of the method of trial. n3 Additionally, either of these decisions relating to the sequence of trial is subsequently reviewable on appeal from the final judgment in the case by any party prejudiced by the determination. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsActions in EquityCivil ProcedureTrialsJury

TrialsProvince of Court & Jury

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 2, 18.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38; see Ch. 22, Trial by Jury.

(n3)Footnote 3. Newfound Management Corp. v. Lewis, 131 F.3d 108, 114-117 (3rd Cir. 1997) (district court in real estate case determined issue of proper boundary of plaintiff's land in quiet tile suit, and jury resolved issue in trespass suit); Kunkel v. Topmaster Intern., Inc., 906 F.2d 693, 696 (Fed. Cir. 1990) (plaintiff in patent infringement case requested damages, injunction, and declaratory relief all in single action); Blake v. Hall, 668 F.2d 52, 54 (1st Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 456 U.S. 983 (1982) (in prisoners' rights case, jury determined damages claim and court determined request for injunction).

(n4)Footnote 4. International Fin. Servs. Corp. v. Chromas Techs. Can., Inc., 356 F.3d 731, 735 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Adie, 982 F. Supp. 1269, 1271-1272 (E.D. Mich. 1997) ; see [2], below.

(n8)Footnote 1. Beacon Theatres v. Westover, 359 U.S. 500, 510, 79 S. Ct. 948, 3 L. Ed. 2d 988 (1959) .

(n9)Footnote 1.1. International Fin. Servs. Corp. v. Chromas Techs. Can., Inc., 356 F.3d 731, 735-737 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 2. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Adie, 982 F. Supp. 1269, 1271-1272 (E.D. Mich. 1997) .

(n11)Footnote 3. Dairy Queen Inc. v. Wood, 369 U.S. 469, 470-472, 82 S. Ct. 894, 8 L. Ed. 2d 44 (1962) .

(n12)Footnote 4. Dollar Sys., Inc. v. Avcar Leasing Sys., Inc., 890 F.2d 165, 170 (9th Cir. 1989) (bifurcated trial where defendant asserted equitable counterclaim for rescission to plaintiff's legal action for breach of contract; if legal and equitable claims involved common questions of law or fact, legal issues would have to be tried first).

(n13)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n14)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59.

(n15)Footnote 7. Swentek v. US Air, Inc., 830 F.2d 552, 559 (4th Cir. 1987) .

(n16)Footnote 8. Curtis v. Loether, 415 U.S. 189, 196, 94 S. Ct. 1005, 39 L. Ed. 2d 260 (1974) (right to jury trial of legal issues may not be abridged by characterizing legal claim as "incidental" to equitable claim).

(n17)Footnote 9. Dairy Queen, Inc. v. Wood, 369 U.S. 469, 476-478, 82 S. Ct. 894, 8 L. Ed. 2d 44 (1962) .

(n18)Footnote 10. Newfound Management Corp. v. Lewis, 131 F.3d 108, 116-118 (3d Cir. 1997) .

(n19)Footnote 11. Giant Eagle, Inc. v. Federal Ins. Co., 884 F. Supp. 979, 985-986 (W.D. Pa. 1995) , aff'd, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 20080 (3d Cir. 1996) .

(n20)Footnote 12. Holiday Inns of Am., Inc. v. Lussi, 42 F.R.D. 27, 30 (N.D.N.Y. 1967) .

(n21)Footnote 13. Newfound Management Corp. v. Lewis, 131 F.3d 108, 116-117 (3rd Cir. 1997) (jury first rule does not apply in consolidated cases where the equitable action was filed long before the legal one, the trial was a continuation of the equity matter, the overlap of factual matters was not extensive, and inordinate delay had prevented timely completion of the equity case).

(n22)Footnote 14. Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 335, 99 S. Ct. 645, 58 L. Ed. 2d 552 (1979) (defendants who lost on factual issues in injunction action brought by the Securities and Exchange Commission could not in a subsequent suit by investors relitigate those same factual issues, even though the defendants were entitled to a jury in the second action and not in the first).

(n23)Footnote 1. Western Geophysical Co. v. Bolt Assoc., Inc., 440 F.2d 765, 769 (2nd Cir. 1971) (order striking jury demand subject to appeal only by writ of mandamus; in appropriate case, court may treat filing appeal as request for leave to file petition for mandamus).

(n24)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b).

(n25)Footnote 3. Dairy Queen v. Wood, 369 U.S. 469, 478, 82 S. Ct. 894, 8 L. Ed. 2d 44 (1962) .

(n26)Footnote 4. National Union Elec. Corp. v. Wilson, 434 F.2d 986, 988 (6th Cir. 1970) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.07

§ 20.07 n* Objections Required at Trial

[1] Requirement That Party Inform Court of Objection

[a] Purpose of Objection Requirement

The current Federal Rules of Civil Procedure dispense with any requirement that a party take a formal "exception" to a ruling or order of the court. n1 The essence of the rule is to do away with the formal ritual of objecting for the record every time the court enters an adverse ruling. n2 However, Rule 46 still requires that a party must make any objections to a ruling or order of the court known to the court at the time the action is taken. n3 The purpose of Rule 46 is one of notice for the court. An attorney is required to object to allow the court an immediate opportunity to reconsider its action and correct any error. n4

For example, an attorney must not only make clear to the judge what evidence he or she wants to present but also the grounds for believing that the evidence should be admitted, unless the grounds are obvious. n5 The courts will not allow a party to silently await a favorable outcome, and then assert objections to previous trial court actions only when the outcome is unfavorable. n6 Circuit courts enforce this rule by providing that a failure to object to a ruling or other action by the court will generally preclude appellate review of that ruling or action. n7 The secondary purpose of the mandatory contemporaneous objection requirement is to permit an opponent to obviate any defect when it is possible to do so. n8

[b] Party Must Clearly State Grounds for Objection

In order to preserve an objection for appeal, a party must inform the trial court of the action which the party desires the court to take or the party's objection to the action of the court and the grounds for the objection, n9 unless the grounds for the objection is obvious from the context. n10 An objection that fails to clearly state its grounds is not sufficient. n11 However, an objection satisfies Rule 46 if it provides the court with notice of the basis of the objection. n12 Furthermore, the Supreme Court has ruled that a party preserves the party's objection if the attorney puts the trial court on notice with respect to his or her concerns about an issue, even though the attorney might have been more articulate when stating the grounds for objection. n13

[c] Failure to Make Objection Known to Court May Waive Objection

If a party fails to object to an action by the court, appellate review of the trial court conduct at issue is generally precluded. n14 Review was precluded, for example, the district court submitted an issue to the jury that was clearly a question of law, the party failed to object, and the error did not result in fundamental unfairness or a miscarriage of justice. n15 On the other hand, an appellate court may review an action for plain error or a miscarriage of justice when a party has failed to object, but such error is rarely found. n16 In an example of the rare reversal, one court of appeals reversed a judgment for malicious prosecution when the plaintiff, as a matter of law, could not show evidence supporting an essential element of that claim. Although the defendant failed toproperly raise this issue in the district court and would ordinarily be barred from raising it on appeal under Rule 46, the court of appeals ruled that the judgment was plain error when the district court instructed the jury that the plaintiff had established that element of the claim. n17 In any event, when a specific objection is made in the district court, appeal will be limited to the particular grounds on which the party objected at trial. n18

[2] Exceptions to Objection Requirement

[a] No Further Objection is Required When Court is Actually Aware of Party's Position

Formal notice to the trial court is not necessary to preserve an issue for appeal if the trial court has been made aware of the objecting party's position. Thus, an objection is not necessary and the right of appeal will be preserved, if the party otherwise has made its argument clear to the court about a ruling or action of the court. n1 For example, in a case in which the plaintiff repeatedly argued that an insurance appraisal was not an arbitration, the district court finally issued a sua sponte ruling that the appraisal constituted an arbitration award within the scope of the Federal Arbitration Act. The court of appeals held that the plaintiff had preserved that issue for appeal because the plaintiff had filed briefs clearly making its position known to the district court, even though the plaintiff failed to seek reconsideration of the ruling. n2

[b] Party May be Able to Preserve Appeal by Motion in Limine

Courts have not agreed about whether an objection must be repeated during trial if the matter has already been ruled on in a pretrial motion, known as a motion in limine. Some courts have advanced the liberal policy underlying Rule 46 by holding that it is not necessary to renew such an objection at trial in order to preserve the issue for appeal, n3 because the motion in limine puts the court on notice of the party's objection. n4

These courts take the view that a motion in limine preserves for appellate review any issues to which the trial court gives full consideration and makes a definitive ruling. For example, it has been argued that motions in limine should be allowed to preserve an objection on appeal when the attorney is sensibly relying on a definitive, well considered pretrial ruling on a subject that will not be affected by the evidence that comes in at trial, and that in some circumstances requiring the renewal of objections after a clear, definitive ruling may be a needless provocation to the trial judge, and possibly a distracting interruption during the trial. n5 This viewpoint may be more in keeping with Rule 46, because requiring an objection after a matter has been definitively disposed of in limine is tantamount to demanding a formal exception. n6

Another reason advanced by courts of appeals for rejecting the contemporaneous objection rule is that the purpose of a motion in limine is to resolve evidentiary questions prior to the start of the trial. This is advantageous, because the trial may then proceed without numerous interruptions for sidebar conferences. Requiring a contemporaneous objection deprives the motion of its potential for avoiding such lengthy and disruptive colloquies. n7

These courts apply a three-part test to determine whether it is necessary for an objecting party to renew an objection at trial after the objection was made by motion in limine. First, was the objection adequately presented to the district court and fully explored by the court during the hearing on the motion in limine. The answer would be in the affirmative, for example, if the motion in limine set forth reasons, including case citations, to support the exclusion of the evidence, and when counsel diligently advanced the contentions supporting the motion that fully apprized the trial judge of the issue at the hearing. Second, was the issue of the type that could be finally decided in the pretrial hearing; that is, was the decision of whether to admit the evidence a question of law which was not dependent on the character of the other evidence that would be admitted at trial. Third, was the district court's ruling on the motion in limine definitive. Thus, a motion in limine may not preserve an objection on appeal if the district court's denial of the motion was made conditionally or with the suggestion that the matter would be reconsidered. n8

On the other hand, some courts have argued with some persuasion that a motion in limine ought not to preserve an issue for appeal, because the motion does not object to the actual introduction of the evidence at the trial; instead, it seeksto bar prospectively the introduction of the evidence. Hence, the motion is to a large degree speculative, because the evidence sought to be excluded may never be introduced at all. For this reason, some courts of appeals have described a motion in limine as "hypothetical," and have noted that the district court's consideration of the motion is often made in the abstract, that is, without the benefit of the actual progression of the case and the circumstances present at the trial. Accordingly, these courts have concluded that a party whose motion has been overruled must object when the error the party sought to prevent with the motion is about to occur at the trial. n9 This contemporaneous objection requirement allows the court to reconsider its prior determination in light of the development of the evidence at the trial. n10

No matter which rule is applied, however, a motion in limine does not preserve error in favor of the movant unless the motion is denied. If the court reserves judgment on the motion, a contemporaneous objection is always required. n11 Additionally, even if the motion is denied, the movant may rely on the denial only as a ground to challenge the introduction of evidence which the motion sought to exclude. The movant must still object to any objectionable evidence that was not covered by the motion. n12

[c] Lack of Objection Will Not Preclude Appeal When Party Had No Opportunity to Make Timely Objection

An objection is not required to preserve an appeal if the party has no opportunity to object to a ruling or order at the time the court makes the ruling or order. n13 Rule 46 is predicated on a policy of notice to enable a court to cure erroneous rulings, and therefore the rule has no applicability when there is no chance for a party to notify the court at the time of the ruling. Whether an opportunity to object was available is determined by the facts of the particular case. For example, when a district court issued a ruling on damages without any indication that it would not hold oral hearing, and the plaintiff had no opportunity to object to the lack of a hearing before or at the time of the ruling, the plaintiff did not waive the right to appeal that issue. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsObjectionsCivil ProcedureTrialsOpening StatementsObjectionsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsObjections & Offers of ProofObjections

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 8 Moore's Federal Practice, § 46.02 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 46.

(n3)Footnote 2. Cf. Heckman v. Federal Press Co., 587 F.2d 612, 618 (3d Cir. 1979) (defendant's objections were adequate to preserve issue for appeal).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 46.

(n5)Footnote 4. Ginett v. Computer Task Group, Inc., 11 F.3d 359, 361 (2d Cir. 1993) (citing Moore's Federal Practice, court observed that Rule 46 is intended to inform court of party's position and permit it to correct any error).

(n6)Footnote 5. Kasper v. Saint Mary of Nazareth Hospital, 135 F.3d 1170, 1175-1176 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Cooper v. Dyke, 814 F.2d 941, 949 (4th Cir. 1987) (party may not silently wait and take chance of favorable verdict and then complain when it is unfavorable).

(n8)Footnote 7. Shultz v. Rice, 809 F.2d 643, 646 (10th Cir. 1986) (plaintiff's failure to timely object to various evidentiary rulings of district court waived appellate review); see [c], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. Cooper v. Dyke, 814 F.2d 941, 948 (4th Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 46.

(n11)Footnote 10. Kasper v. Saint Mary of Nazareth Hospital, 135 F.3d 1170, 1175-1176 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Angelo v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 11 F.3d 957, 960 (10th Cir. 1993) (when objection stated only that cross examination was beyond scope of direct examination, district court could not reasonably infer that party also objected to violation of standing order; therefore, that issue was not preserved for appeal).

(n13)Footnote 12. Sailor v. Hubbell, Inc., 4 F.3d 323, 325 (4th Cir. 1993) (when district court dismissed jury on its own initiative, plaintiff satisfied Rule 46 by making court aware of objection to action and stating numerous grounds on which objection was based).

(n14)Footnote 13. Beech Aircraft Corp. v. Rainey, 488 U.S. 153, 174, 109 S. Ct. 439, 102 L. Ed. 2d 445 (1988) (plaintiff preserved objection to exclusion of evidence despite fact attorney did not explain evidentiary basis of argument as thoroughly as might be desired).

(n15)Footnote 14. Kasper v. Saint Mary of Nazareth Hospital, 135 F.3d 1170, 1175-1176 (7th Cir. 1998) (party could not appeal erroneous exclusion of evidence when attorney by his silence failed to make clear to judge what evidence he wanted to present and also his ground for believing that evidence should be admitted); Gonzalez v. Volvo of Am. Corp., 752 F.2d 295, 298 (7th Cir. 1985) (when defendant failed to object to alleged misconduct in plaintiff's closing argument, appeal on issue was barred).

(n16)Footnote 15. Porterco, Inc. v. Igloo Products Corp., 955 F.2d 1164, 1173 (8th Cir. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Kafka v. Truck Ins. Exch., 19 F.3d 383, 385-386 (7th Cir. 1994) (plain error doctrine inapplicable when plaintiff failed to demonstrate that miscarriage of justice would result); Angelo v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 11 F.3d 957, 960 (10th Cir. 1993) (plaintiff's failure to object to evidentiary rulings barred appellate review when there was no plain error).

(n18)Footnote 17. Hygh v. Jacobs, 961 F.2d 359, 367 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Brookhaven Landscape & Grading Co. v. J.F. Barton Contracting Co., 676 F.2d 516, 523 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n20)Footnote 1. Curreri v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters, 722 F.2d 6, 13 (1st Cir. 1983) (when plaintiff attempted repeatedly to introduce certain testimony until trial court stated it was not admissible, record was clear that plaintiff disagreed with ruling, and there was no need to object further to preserve appeal).

(n21)Footnote 2. Hartford Lloyd's Ins. Co. v. Teachworth, 898 F.2d 1058, 1060 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n22)Footnote 3. Rice v. Community Health Ass'n, 40 F. Supp. 2d 788, 792 (S.D. W.Va. 1999) (motion in limine will preserve issues raise in motion without any need for repeated objections at trial, provided that movant has clearly identified ruling sought in motion and trial court has in fact ruled on it).

(n23)Footnote 4. Ginett v. Computer Task Group, Inc., 11 F.3d 359, 361 (2d Cir. 1993) ; Sherrod v. Berry, 827 F.2d 195, 203 (7th Cir. 1987) (when evidentiary rulings were raised by defendant's motion in limine and fully argued and determined prior to trial, Rule 46 did not require defendant to repeat objection at trial in order to preserve appeal).

(n24)Footnote 5. United States v. Mejia-Alarcon, 995 F.2d 982, 988 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n25)Footnote 6. American Home Assurance Co. v. Sunshine Supermarket, 753 F.2d 321, 324-325 (3d Cir. 1985) .

(n26)Footnote 7. Palmerin v. City of Riverside, 794 F.2d 1409 (9th Cir. 1986) ; American Home Assurance Co. v. Sunshine Supermarket, 753 F.2d 321 (3d Cir. 1985) .

(n27)Footnote 8. United States v. Mejia-Alarcon, 995 F.2d 982, 986-987 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n28)Footnote 9. Collins v. Wayne Corp., 621 F.2d 777, 784 (5th Cir. 1980) (court stated flatly that overruling of motion in limine is not reversible error; only proper objection at trial can preserve error for appellate review).

(n29)Footnote 10. Collins v. Wayne Corp., 621 F.2d 777, 784 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n30)Footnote 11. United States v. Vest, 842 F.2d 1319 (1st Cir. 1988) (when district court stated its intention not to rule on motion in limine until evidence was offered at trial, movant was required to request a ruling on motion when evidence was offered).

(n31)Footnote 12. Hendrix v. Raybestos-Manhattan, Inc., 776 F.2d 1492, 1503-1504 (11th Cir. 1985) (failure to object at trial to introduction of expert testimony barred appeal of that issue despite denial of similar motion in limine).

(n32)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 46.

(n33)Footnote 14. See Insurance Servs. of Beaufort, Inc. v. Aetna Casualty & Sur. Co., 966 F.2d 847, 852 (4th Cir. 1992) ; see also Bachman v. St. Monica's Congregation, 902 F.2d 1259, 1262 (7th Cir. 1990) (when court at last minute made change in previously agreed on jury instructions and plaintiff's counsel failed to notice omission of portion of charge, plaintiff had no reasonable opportunity to object and Rule 46 did not preclude appeal).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 20 TRIAL PRACTICE IN GENERAL

2-20 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 20.08

§ 20.08 Trial by Implied Consentn*

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure permit the parties to try issues by implied consent. n1 This occurs when during trial the parties raise by the introduction of evidence issues that were not adequately determined by the pleadings and discovery undertaken by the parties. When this occurs, Rule 15(b) commands the court to treat the issues as if they had been raised by the pleadings. n2 This rule applies to defenses as well as to claims. n3 Furthermore, an amendment to conform to the evidence may be made at any time on motion of any party, n4 even in the appellate court. n5

However, it has been held that the appellate court will not allow such amendments by a losing party to cause the reversal of an otherwise correct judgment. n6 In any event, the lack of an amendment does not affect the judgment in any way. In effect, therefore, the parties may, by express consent, or by the introduction of evidence without objection, amend the pleadings at will. n7

Whether there has been a "trial by implied consent" turns on whether the parties recognized that the unpleaded issue entered the case at trial and they actually tried the issue, whether the evidence that supported the unpleaded issue was introduced at trial without objection, and whether the finding of trial by consent prejudiced the opposing party's opportunity to respond. n8

The purpose of an amendment to conform to proof is to bring the pleadings in line with the actual issues on which the case was tried. Therefore, an amendment after judgment is not allowed if it would bring in some entirely extrinsic issue or change the theory on which the case was actually tried. Anamendment is also not allowed when the issue has not been tried fully by the parties, for example, when the parties have tried the issue inadvertently. n9

Similarly, an amendment pursuant to Rule 15(b) is not permitted when the opposition objects at trial to the matter that was not contained in the pleadings, because in that case it is obvious that the parties could not have tried the issue by express or implied consent. n10 An amendment is not allowed if the issue has not been tried completely by the parties even if there is evidence in the record which could possibly support the amendment, but which was introduced as relevant to some other issue. n11 This principle is sound, because there is no implied consent to try an issue when the parties do not precisely recognize it as an issue in the trial. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsConforming Pleadings to EvidenceCivil ProcedureTrialsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 15.18 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Ostano Commerzanstalt v. Telewide Sys., Inc., 880 F.2d 642, 646 (2d Cir. 1989) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. Emmons v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 701 F.2d 1112, 1118 (5th Cir. 1983) (statute of limitation defense allowed when tried by express consent of parties).

(n5)Footnote 4. Galindo v. Stoody Co, 793 F.2d 1502, 1513 (9th Cir. 1986) (liberal policy of allowing amendments at any time).

(n6)Footnote 5. Brandon v. Holt, 471, 469 U.S. 464, 105 S. Ct. 873, 83 L. Ed. 2d 878 (1985) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Worley v. Columbia Gas, Inc., 491 F.2d 256 (6th Cir.) , cert. denied, 417 U.S. 970 (1974) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. Portis v. First National Bank of New Albany, Miss., 34 F.3d 325, 332 (5th Cir. 1994) ; see Insure One Independent Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Koestner, 198 B.R. 709, 713 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (court will not imply consent to try claim merely because evidence relevant to properly pleaded issue incidentally tends to establish unpleaded claim).

(n10)Footnote 9. Yellow Freight System, Inc. v. Martin, 954 F.2d 353, 356 (6th Cir. 1992) ; see Laffey v. Independent School Dist. No. 625, 806 F. Supp. 1390 (D. Minn. 1992) , aff'd, 994 F.2d 843 (8th Cir. 1993) (discovery inquiries do not amount to implied consent to amendment of pleading and issue is not tried by consent merely because party serves discovery request on that issue).

(n11)Footnote 10. Pleming v. Universal-Rundle Corporation, 142 F.3d 1354, 1359 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Pariser v. Christian Health Care Sys., 816 F.2d 1248 (8th Cir. 1987) (district court properly denied motion to amend to add claim for tortious interference with contract where evidence introduced had bearing on other issues already in pleadings).

(n13)Footnote 12. Consolidated Data Terminals v. Applied Digital Data Sys., 708 F.2d 385, 396 (9th Cir. 1983) (district court erred in permitting Rule 15(b) amendment adding new claims, when defendant was not aware that these issues were part of case at time evidence relating to them was introduced; because defendant would have elicited additional testimony had it been so aware, there was no implied consent).

146 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 21.syn

§ 21.syn Synopsis to Chapter 21: MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES

§ 21.01 Scope of Reference to Master in District Court

[1] Function of Master

[2] Master Distinguished From Magistrate Judge

[a] Nature of Positions Held by Master and Magistrate Judge

[b] Sitting Magistrate Judge May Be Appointed as Master in Particular Case

[3] Master Distinguished From Expert Witness

[4] Master Distinguished From Technical Advisor

§ 21.02 Permissible Purposes for Court to Appoint Master

[1] Considerations of Court When Making Determination Whether to Appoint

[a] List of Situations In Which Court Has Power to Appoint Master

[b] Appointment of Master in Jury Trial

[c] Fairness and Expense of Appointment

[2] Appointment of Master as Provided by Statute

[3] Appointment of Master by Consent of All Parties

[4] Appointment of Trial Master Based on Exceptional Condition

[5] Appointment of Trial Master To Perform Accounting or Make Difficult Computation of Damages

[a] No Requirement of Exceptional Conditions

[b] Matters of Accounting

[c] Difficult Computation of Damages

[6] Appointment of Master To Perform Pretrial and Post-Trial Tasks

[a] Nature of Appointment of Master Other Than Trial Master

[b] Appointment of Master for Pretrial Matters

[c] Appointment of Master for Post-Trial Matters

§ 21.03 Qualifications of Person to Serve As Master

[1] Qualifications Are Based On Case Precedent

[2] Persons Disqualified to Serve as Masters

[3] Court's Method of Selection of Person to Serve As Master

[4] Court's Appointment of More than One Master

[5] Challenge to Appointment of Master

§ 21.04 Order of Appointment of Master

[1] Notice Required Prior to Order of Appointment

[2] Contents of Order of Appointment

[a] Required Contents

[b] Particular Contents Depend on Type or Stage of Case

[3] Requirements for Entry of Order of Appointment

[4] Amendment of Order of Appointment After Notice to Parties

§ 21.05 Compensation of Master

[1] Court Specifies Master's Compensation in Order of Appointment

[2] Court Has Discretion to Specify Amount of Master's Compensation

[a] Discretion of Appointing Court to Set Amount

[b] Standards Used to Determine Compensation

[c] Factors Used To Determine Reasonableness

[d] Challenge to Compensation Fixed by Court

[3] Court Has Discretion to Specify Basis and Terms of Master's Compensation

[a] Basis of Compensation

[b] Other Terms of Compensation

[4] Obligation to Pay Compensation to Master

[a] Party or Entity Ordered to Make Payment

[b] Allocation of Obligation for Payment

[5] Obligation to Pay of Compensation to Master

§§ 21.06through 21.19 [Reserved]

§ 21.20 Master's Obligation to Perform Diligently

§ 21.21 Master's Professional and Ethical Obligations

[1] Standards of Conduct

[2] Ex Parte Communications

§ 21.22 Regulation of Proceedings

§ 21.23 Master's Authority to Take Evidence

§ 21.24 Master's Authority to Enter Orders

§ 21.25 Master's Submission of Report

[1] Contents of Report

[2] Filing and Service of Report

§ 21.26 Appointing Court's Review of Master's Order, Report, or Recommendations

[1] Appointing Court Must Allow Input From Parties

[2] Time Limit for Party to Object or Move for Modification

[3] Action of Appointing Court After Permitting Input From Parties

[4] Standards of Review

[a] Findings of Fact

[b] Conclusions of Law

[c] Procedural and Other Matters

§ 21.27 Termination of Reference

[1] Authority of Court to Terminate Reference

[2] Termination of Reference on Death or Disability of Master

§§ 21.28through 21.39 [Reserved]

§ 21.40 Appeal of Order of Appointment of Master

[1] Appealability of Order of Appointment

[2] Timely Objection Required to Preserve Right to Appeal

[3] Standard of Review

[4] District Court's Erroneous Reference to Master Rarely Results in Reversal

§ 21.41 Appeal of Trial Court Decisions Regarding Master's Order, Report, or Recommendation

§ 21.42 Appeal of District Court's Denial of Motion to Make Reference to Master

§ 21.43 Writ of Mandamus to Appeal Matter Regarding Master

§§ 21.44through 21.59 [Reserved]

§ 21.60 Magistrate Judge System

[1] Functions of Magistrate Judges

[2] Purpose of Referral to Magistrate Judge

§ 21.61 Qualification of Magistrate Judge

§ 21.62 Controlling Statutes and Rules

§ 21.63 Magistrate Judge Distinguished from Special Master

§§ 21.64through 21.79 [Reserved]

§ 21.80 Authority to Hear Pretrial Matters

[1] Origination of Authority

[2] Nature of Pretrial Matters

§ 21.81 Distinction Between Nondispositive and Dispositive Matters

§ 21.82 Adjudication By Magistrate Judge of Nondispositive Pretrial Matters

[1] Matters Deemed Nondispositive

[a] In General

[b] Particular Nondispositive Matters

[2] Magistrate Judge's Decision on Nondispositive Matters

§ 21.83 Adjudication By Magistrate Judge of Dispositive Pretrial Matters

[1] Matters Deemed Dispositive

[a] Matters Dispositive Under Magistrates Act

[b] Other Matters Dispositive Based on Circumstances

[2] Magistrate Judge's Decision on Dispositive Matters

§ 21.84 Adjudication By Magistrate Judge of Prisoner Petitions

[1] Applicability of Prisoner Provision

[2] Habeas Corpus Claims Not Covered by Act

[3] In Forma Pauperis Petitions

[4] Jury Trial Rights

§ 21.85 Referral of Matter By District Court to Magistrate Judge

[1] Discretion of Trial Court to Make Referral

[2] Form and Contents of Referral

[3] Effect of Referral

§ 21.86 Proceedings Held by Magistrate Judge to Determine Referred Matter

[1] Motion Required for Disposition by Magistrate Judge

[2] Authority for Subpoena

[3] Conduct of Proceedings

[4] Contempt

§ 21.87 Order Issued by Magistrate Judge

[1] Authority

[2] Orders of Remand

[3] Orders Regarding Attorney's Fees and Costs

§ 21.88 Disposition Recommended by Magistrate Judge

[1] Content and Form of Recommendation

[2] Effect of Recommendation

§ 21.89 Objection of Party to Order or Recommended Disposition

[1] Contents of Objection

[2] Time Limit for Making Objection

[3] Effect of Timely Objection

[4] Failure to File Timely Objection

[a] Failure to Object Generally Constitutes Waiver

[b] Exception to Waiver Rule for Exceptional Circumstances

[c] Exception to Waiver Rule for Lack of Notice

[d] Application of Waiver Rule

§ 21.90 Review of Magistrate Judge's Decision by District Court

[1] Review of Orders Regarding Nondispositive Matters

[a] Authority of District Court to Review

[b] Standard of Review

[2] Review of Recommended Disposition of Dispositive Matter

[a] Review When Party Has Filed Objection

[b] Review When No Objections Are Filed

§ 21.91 Review of Magistrate Judge's Decision by Appellate Court

§§ 21.92through 21.99 [Reserved]

§ 21.100 Magistrate Judge's Authority to Try Case by Consent

§ 21.101 Consent Required

[1] Type of Proceeding That Requires Consent

[2] Consent Required of Parties

[a] Unanimous Consent Required

[b] Effect of New Parties to Action

[3] Form of Consent

[a] Consent Sufficient to Give Jurisdiction to Magistrate Judge

[b] Consent Procedure

[4] Effect of Failure to Obtain Consent

§ 21.102 District Court's Referral to Magistrate Judge

[1] Order of Referral Required

[2] District Court's Order Vacating Referral to Magistrate Judge

§ 21.103 Magistrate Judge's Conduct of Trial By Consent

[1] Proceedings Before Magistrate Judge

[2] Contempt

§ 21.104 Appeal of Magistrate Judge's Judgment

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
A. APPOINTMENT OF MASTERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.01

§ 21.01 Scope of Reference to Master in District Courtn*

[1] Function of Master

When a trial court judge requires assistance to perform a certain project necessary to litigation, the court may refer the task to be performed to a master. n1 This referral is known as a "reference" or "appointment," and the jurisdiction of a master is dependent on the order of appointment, which contains the directions to the master. n2 Thus, a "master" is defined as an individual who is appointed by the court to perform specific functions in pending litigation. In essence, the master is performing the functions specified in his or her appointment in a representative capacity, as a substitute or surrogate for the court itself. n3

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure specifically provide for the appointment of masters in specified situations, with the allowable tasks for the master depending on whether the action will be tried to a jury, whether the parties consent to the appointment, the complexity of the case, and whether an exceptional condition exists requiring the appointment. n4 For example, the district courts frequently appoint masters to organize and control discovery and other procedural matters. n5

[2] Master Distinguished From Magistrate Judge

[a] Nature of Positions Held by Master and Magistrate Judge

A magistrate judge is a judicial officer who is subordinate to an Article III judge. A magistrate judge, whether full-time or part-time, has an ongoing position in the federal judiciary for a specific period of time. n6 Full-time magistrate judges generally serve for a term of eight years and part-time magistrate judges generally serve for a term of four years. n7 In contrast, a master is an individual who is appointed by a court to perform specific tasks or duties in particular pending litigation. Thus, a master performs only the functions specified in the order that appoints the master, known as the "order of appointment," n8 or traditionally, the "order of reference"; the master serves in a representative capacity, as a substitute or surrogate for the court itself, for the limited period of time specified in the order of appointment. n9

[b] Sitting Magistrate Judge May Be Appointed as Master in Particular Case

A district court may refer a magistrate judge currently sitting on the judiciary as a master in a particular case for a particular matter. However, a magistrate judge appointed as a master is subject to the Rule 53 provisions governing masters only if the order of appointment expressly states that the reference is made under Rule 53. n10 Such references may be made, with or without the consent of the parties, pursuant to either Rule 53 or under statute. n11

There are a number of distinctions between references made under the statute and under Rule 53. For example, under the statute nondispositive pretrial matters may be referred to a magistrate judge, without consent, for final determination with reconsideration by the district judge if the magistrate judge's order is clearly erroneous or contrary to law. Under Rule 53, however, the appointment of a master, without consent of the parties, to supervise discovery would require some "exceptional condition" n12 and would subject the proceedings to certain report procedures. n13 If an order of appointment does not clearly articulate the source of the court's authority, the resulting proceedings may be subject to attack on grounds of the magistrate judge's noncompliance with the provisions of Rule 53. Rule 53(i) therefore creates a presumption that the limitations of Rule 53 are not applicable unless the reference is specifically made subject to Rule 53. n14

[3] Master Distinguished From Expert Witness

A district court has the discretion to appoint expert witnesses, including the appointment of panels of experts, to testify at trial for the purpose of assisting the court to understand complex matters, usually of a technical nature. n1 A master is also appointed by the court, to assist the court in the completion of its duties but does not testify; however, the master gives recommendations to the court regarding the master's findings, typically through its report to the court. n2 Thus, while a master serves as a representative of the court, a court-appointed expert under Evidence Rule 706 is essentially functioning as a witness. Therefore, a court may appoint an expert under Evidence Rule 706 without regard to the exceptional circumstance restrictions imposed by Rule 53. n3 In addition, a court-appointed expert is subject to cross examination by all the parties, including the party calling the witness. In contrast, the parties have access only to a master's report. n4

[4] Master Distinguished From Technical Advisor

The court has the authority in cases in which outside technical expertise would be helpful to appoint a "technical advisor," who is a confidential neutral advisor assigned to assist in evaluating technical issues. n1 The most important distinction between technical advisor and master is that a technical advisor is not subject to the Rule 53 regulations that apply to a master. n2 A technical advisor is also not subject to Evidence Rule 706, which applies to an expert witness. n3 The advisor need not be called as an expert witness and is not subject to cross-examination nor required to furnish an expert's report under Rule 706 of the Federal Rules of Evidence. n4

Thus, a technical advisor plays an informal role that is not specifically regulated by the courts, and a court should appoint a technical advisor with caution. It has been argued that the role of a technical advisor should be specifically stated and limited to reduce the risk that the advisor will improperly assume the role of the factfinder. Additionally, while the district court should have wide latitude when choosing a technical advisor, the parties should be given an opportunity to object to any proposed appointment based on bias, partiality, or lack of qualification. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersAppointmentsCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersReferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1); § 21.02 (permissible purposes for appointment of master).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2); United States v. Krizek, 111 F.3d 934, 943 (D.C. Cir. 1997) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 995 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. Aird v. Ford Motor Co., 86 F.3d 216, 218-219 (D.C. Cir. 1996) (master recommended that plaintiffs' attorneys should each be sanction and ordered to pay defendant reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by plaintiffs' failure to comply with master's discovery order); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C) (master may be appointed to address pretrial and post-trial matters that cannot be addressed effectively and timely by available district judge).

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 21.80 et seq. (complete discussion of rights and responsibilities of magistrate judges).

(n8)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 631(e).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b).

(n10)Footnote 9. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 995 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(h).

(n12)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B).

(n14)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e).

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e), Committee Note.

(n16)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 706; Gates v. United States, 707 F.2d 1141, 1144 (10th Cir. 1983) .

(n17)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e), (f).

(n18)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Evid. 706(a); Students of Cal. Sch. for the Blind v. Honig, 736 F.2d 538, 549 (9th Cir. 1984) , vacated on other grounds, 471 U.S. 148 (1985) (appointments of masters under Rule 53 are subject to stricter standards of review than appointments of neutral experts under Evidence Rule 706).

(n19)Footnote 4. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 995 (9th Cir. 2003) (discussion of roles of master and expert).

(n20)Footnote 1. See Reilly v. United States, 863 F.2d 149, 154-161 (1st Cir. 1988) (court appointed economist to advise on calculation of damages).

(n21)Footnote 2. Reilly v. U.S., 863 F.2d 149, 154-161 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n22)Footnote 3. See A&M Records, Inc. v. Napster, Inc., 284 F.3d 1091, 1097 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n23)Footnote 4. Association of Mexican-American Educators v. California, 231 F.3d 572, 590 (9th Cir. 2000) (Rule 706 applies to court-appointed expert witnesses but not to technical advisors).

(n24)Footnote 5. TechSearch L.L.C. v. Intel Corp., 286 F.3d 1360, 1378-1379 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (listing suggested procedural mechanisms to safeguard use of technical advisor and to generate a record for review on appeal).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
A. APPOINTMENT OF MASTERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.02

§ 21.02 Permissible Purposes for Court to Appoint Mastern*

[1] Considerations of Court When Making Determination Whether to Appoint

[a] List of Situations In Which Court Has Power to Appoint Master

A court may appoint a master only for the following purposes:

- To perform as specified by a United States statute. n1
- To perform duties consented to by the parties. n2
- To hold trial proceedings and make or recommend findings of fact on issues to be decided by the court without a jury if appointment is warranted by some exceptional condition n3 or by the need to perform an accounting or resolve a difficult computation of damages. n4
- To address pretrial and post-trial matters that cannot be addressed effectively and timely by an available district judge or magistrate judge of the district. n5

[b] Appointment of Master in Jury Trial

Under the 2003 Amendments to Rule 53, it is now clear that a district court may not, without consent of the parties, refer jury trial proceedings to a master. n6 Thus, the district court may appoint a trial master in a jury trial with consent of the parties and concurrence of the court only if either: (1) the parties waive jury trial with respect to the issues submitted to the master, or (2) the master's findings are to be submitted to the jury only as evidence. n7

[c] Fairness and Expense of Appointment

In its determination of whether to appoint a master, and the scope of any appointment, the court must consider the fairness of imposing the likely expenses on the parties and must protect against unreasonable expense or delay. n8

While it is generally true that the appointment of a master is an important opportunity for the court to conserve judicial resources, n9 Rule 53(a)(3) recognizes that, depending on the circumstances, a reference of a case to a master may actually increase, rather than shorten, both the time needed to bring litigation to a completion and the expenses resulting from delay. n10 The question of whether to appoint a master may also increase the number of steps necessary to reach a certain stage of litigation. n11 Finally, if a party objects or moves to modify a master's order, report, or recommendation, the appointing court must take the time to review the master's findings of fact de novo, unless the parties have stipulated to a lesser standard of review. n12 The court must also review the master's conclusions or recommendations for conclusions of law de novo whenever there is an objection or a motion to adopt or modify the master's order, report, or recommendation. n13

[2] Appointment of Master as Provided by Statute

A court may appoint a master as provided by a United States statute. n14 For example, a district court judge may appoint a master to conduct a trial under Title VII of Civil Rights Act when the case has not been scheduled for trial within 120 days after the issue is joined. n15 This type of reference may be made without the consent of the parties and without the existence of any exceptional conditions but is subject to the parties' right to a jury trial. n16

[3] Appointment of Master by Consent of All Parties

A court may appoint a master to perform any duties consented to by all of the parties. n17 The rule itself contains no express limitation on the authority of the parties to designate the duties they wish a master by consent to perform. n18 However, the Committee Note indicates that a master may be appointed as a trial master when the parties have a right to a jury trial only if all of the parties waive their right to a jury trial. n19 The Committee Note also states that even if the parties consent to reference to a master that consent does not require that the court make the appointment; the court retains unfettered discretion to determine whether to make the appointment. n20

[4] Appointment of Trial Master Based on Exceptional Condition

The court may appoint a master to hold trial proceedings and make or recommend findings of fact on issues to be decided by the court without a jury if the appointment is based on some exceptional condition. n21 The "exceptional condition" requirement in the 2003-amended Rule 53(b) will continue to have the same force as it developed under the previous versions of the rule. n22 The existence of an exceptional condition is determined by the circumstances of each case; because the prerequisite is applicable only to trial masters, and not to consensual or to pretrial or posttrial masters, the exceptional condition requirement is difficult to meet. n23 For example, a party's refusal or failing to comply with a court decree may constitute an "exceptional condition" under Rule 53 that would justify a court in appointing a master to enforce the decree. It should also be noted that a combination of factors that individually may not constitute an exceptional condition, may qualify as such when taken in combination. n24

On the other hand, the Supreme Court has stated that mere court congestion, delay, or complexity of issues does not individually constitute an exceptional condition sufficient to justify a comprehensive trial reference on the merits to a master. n25 Similarly, the following factors individually have been held not to constitute an exceptional condition warranting the appointment of a trial master: problems of docket control; deficiency in the number of judges to handle a cases; n26 and the probable lengthy duration of the trial. n27

However, it should also be noted that even though these factors alone do not constitute exceptional conditions sufficient to support a comprehensive trial reference on the merits of liability, n28 they may support the more limited and particular category of references, such as a reference concerning the resolution of pretrial or nondispositive matters, n29 including the mediation of settlement negotiations, n30 or the post-trial implementation of negotiated decrees. n31

[5] Appointment of Trial Master To Perform Accounting or Make Difficult Computation of Damages

[a] No Requirement of Exceptional Conditions

The court may appoint a master to hold trial proceedings and make or recommend findings of fact on issues to be decided by the court without a jury, if necessary for n32 the master to perform an accounting n33 or to compute damages when the computation is difficult. n34 This provision of Rule 53 allows a trial reference for an accounting or difficult computation of damages even if no "exceptional condition" exists. n35 Under the provision, the trial master may preside over an evidentiary hearing on the merits of any claims or defenses regarding the accounting or computation of damages. n36

Appointment of a trial master for an accounting or to make a difficult computation of damages is warranted only for essentially ministerial determinations that require mastery of much detailed information but that do not require extensive determinations of credibility. Therefore, when evaluations of witness credibility are involved, the case should be assigned to a trial master only when justified by an exceptional condition. n37

[b] Matters of Accounting

A court may appoint a master to hold trial proceedings and make or recommend findings of fact on issues to be decided by the court without a jury if a complex accounting is involved n38 that does not require extensive determinations of credibility. n39 If a matter of account is not complex, a simple accounting rather than a reference to a master is appropriate. n40 Furthermore, the existence of one or more complicated issues requiring an accounting does not justify a trial reference of all issues to a master. The Supreme Court has indicated that a court's referral to a master is appropriate when the circumstances indicate that the value of the court's time would not warrant receiving the proof and making the tabulation of the accounting. n41 A district court has considerable discretion, however, whether to refer difficult accounting matters to masters. n42 Provided the evidence demonstrates the need for an accounting, a judge may make reference to a master in a matter of account even over the objection of the parties and without providing a further rationale for the appointment. n43

[c] Difficult Computation of Damages

The district court may appoint a master to hold trial proceedings and make or recommend findings of fact on issues to be decided by the court without a jury, when the appointment is necessary for the master to resolve a difficult computation of damages. n44 This type of reference probably originated in admiralty practice, in which difficult computations were typically referred to a commissioner or assessor, especially after an interlocutory judgment determining liability. n45 The reference to a master of a difficult computation of damages is now also typical in patent, copyright, and trademark infringement cases. n46 This type of reference is limited to computations that are complex and time-consuming. n47 Within this limitation, and under appropriate circumstances, the trial judge has discretion to reopen a case and sua sponte refer it to a master to hear further evidence regarding the computations. n48

[6] Appointment of Master To Perform Pretrial and Post-Trial Tasks

[a] Nature of Appointment of Master Other Than Trial Master

A court may appoint a master to address pretrial and post-trial matters that cannot be addressed effectively and timely by an available district judge or magistrate judge of the district. n49 Neither consent of the parties nor exceptional conditions are required for the appointment of a pretrial or post-trial master. n50 The court may appoint such masters only for matters that cannot be addressed effectively and in a timely fashion by an available district judge or magistrate judge of the district. A master's pretrial or post-trial duties may include matters that could be handled by a judge, such as reviewing discovery documents for privilege, or duties that might not be appropriate for a judge in particular cases, such as some types of settlement negotiations, investigations, or administration of a business entity. n51

The primary function of pretrial and post-trial masters that distinguishes such masters from trial masters is that the pretrial and postrial masters generally do not preside over an evidentiary hearing on the merits of the claims or defenses in the action. However, this is not a clear line, and a pretrial master may conduct an evidentiary hearing on a discovery dispute; and a post-trial master may conduct an evidentiary hearing on questions of compliance with a court decree. n52

[b] Appointment of Master for Pretrial Matters

One of the most common types of reference to a master at the pretrial phase is a reference to control and schedule discovery matters and to exercise all authority necessary to effectuate rules of civil procedure pertaining to discovery. n53 Another typical reference is for the master to assume control of management of the case schedule and meetings and conferences. Some courts may make a blanket reference for all pretrial matters. n54 However, it has been suggested that a pretrial master should be appointed only when the need is clear with respect to particular tasks. Furthermore, direct judicial performance of judicial functions is particularly important in cases that involve important public issues or many parties. It has also been argued that a blanket delegation of pretrial responsibility may be a violation of constitutional duties under Article III. n55

[c] Appointment of Master for Post-Trial Matters

Most courts have used masters at the post-trial stage to assist in formulating and enforcing complex decrees. n56 However Rule 53 limits this practice to cases in which the master's duties cannot be performed effectively and in a timely fashion by an available district judge or magistrate judge of the district. n57 A court may make a reference to a master when a complex decree requires complex policing, particularly when a party has proved that an opposing party has violated the decree or will resist the decree. n58 The master's role in enforcement may even extend to an investigatory role. In this regard, it may be a permissible or even necessary function of a master to conduct various types of investigations in order to ensure that a party is complying with judicial directives. n59

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1); see [2], below.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A); see [3], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(i); see [4], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(ii); see [5], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C); see [6], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments (use of trial master without party consent is abolished with respect to matters to be decided by a jury, unless a statute provides for that practice).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments (in no event may court appoint master to preside at jury trial).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(3).

(n10)Footnote 9. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 999 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n11)Footnote 10. La Buy v. Howes Leather Co., 352 U.S. 249, 253 n.5, 77 S. Ct. 309, 1 L. Ed. 2d 290 (1957) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 697 n.10 (1st Cir. 1992) (after case was set for trial, parties spent approximately 18 months disputing whether master should be appointed).

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3).

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(4).

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1).

(n16)Footnote 15. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(5).

(n17)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1); see also Gonzalez v. Carlin, 907 F.2d 573, 577 (5th Cir. 1990) (neither consent of parties nor exceptional conditions were required for district judge to appoint master in Title VII case when case had not been set for trial within 120 days after issue was joined).

(n18)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A).

(n19)Footnote 18. Fed. F. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A).

(n20)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n21)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments; see John B. v. Menke, 176 F. Supp. 2d 786, 808 (E.D. Tenn. 2001) (court has inherent power to decide whether to appoint master with or without consent of parties).

(n22)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(i); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments (central function of trial master is to preside over an evidentiary hearing on merits of claims or defenses).

(n23)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(i), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n24)Footnote 23. Sierra Club v. Browner, 257 F.3d 444, 446 (5th Cir. 2001) (district court abused its discretion by appointing master to report and make recommendations concerning summary judgment because fact that case had been pending for two years and filings were voluminous and contained highly technical documents and declarations did not amount to exceptional condition for purposes of Rule 53).

(n25)Footnote 24. Cobell v. Norton, 283 F. Supp. 2d 66, 215-217 (D.D.C. 2003) .

(n26)Footnote 25. La Buy v. Howes Leather Co., 352 U.S. 249, 259, 77 S. Ct. 309, 1 L. Ed. 2d 290 (1957) ; see United States v. Microsoft Corp., 147 F.3d 935, 954-955 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (interpretation of consent decree regarding development of integrated software products did not present issues of such technological complexity that it justified trial reference).

(n27)Footnote 26. McCormick v. W. Ky. Navigation Inc., 993 F.2d 568, 569 (6th Cir. 1993) .

(n28)Footnote 27. In re United States, 816 F.2d 1083, 1089 (6th Cir. 1987) .

(n29)Footnote 28. In re Armco Inc., 770 F.2d 103, 105 (8th Cir. 1985) .

(n30)Footnote 29. In re Bituminous Coal Operators' Ass'n, 949 F.2d 1165, 1169 (D.C. Cir. 1991) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C).

(n31)Footnote 30. McLendon v. Continental Group, Inc., 749 F. Supp. 582, 612 (D.N.J. 1989) , aff'd on other grounds, 908 F.2d 1171 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n32)Footnote 31. See, e.g., Cronin v. Browner, 90 F. Supp. 2d 364, 377-378 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (need for monitoring of consent judgment justified appointment of master to monitor Environmental Protection Agency's production of complex, technical regulation).

(n33)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(i).

(n34)Footnote 33. See [b], below.

(n35)Footnote 34. See [c], below.

(n36)Footnote 35. Gon v. First State Ins. Co., 871 F.2d 863, 869 (9th Cir. 1989) ; see [4], above.

(n37)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n38)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(ii), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n39)Footnote 38. Johnson Enters. of Jacksonville, Inc. v. FPL Group, Inc., 162 F.3d 1290, 1333 n.95 (11th Cir. 1998) ; Magnaleasing, Inc. v. Staten Island Mall, 428 F. Supp. 1039, 1045 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) , aff'd on other grounds, 563 F.2d 567 (2d Cir. 1977) .

(n40)Footnote 39. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(ii), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n41)Footnote 40. Borden v. Sinskey, 530 F.2d 478, 479 (3d Cir. 1976) (court properly refused to refer case to master to merely determine proper amount of credits and set offs).

(n42)Footnote 41. LaBuy v. Howes Leather Co., 352 U.S. 249, 256-259, 77 S. Ct. 309, 1 L. Ed. 2d 290 (1957) .

(n43)Footnote 42. S. Agency Co. v. LaSalle Cas. Co., 393 F.2d 907, 914 (8th Cir. 1968) .

(n44)Footnote 43. Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 691, 694 (1st Cir. 1992) (reference of fundamental issues of liability over objection would be improper but referring complex accounting would be permitted).

(n45)Footnote 44. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(B)(ii).

(n46)Footnote 45. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53, Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n47)Footnote 46. Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. v. Johnson & Johnson Orthopaedics, Inc., 976 F.2d 1559, 1563 (Fed. Cir. 1992) (evidence supported master's findings that defendant willfully infringed plaintiff's patents and plaintiff was entitled to award of damages in amount specified before doubling).

(n48)Footnote 47. Federazione Italiana Dei Corsorzi Agrari v. Mandask Compania de Vapores, S.A., 388 F.2d 434, 440 (2d Cir. 1968) (when parties stipulated to price of lost cargo, freight, and insurance, reference to master was improper).

(n49)Footnote 48. See Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 401 U.S. 321, 331-332, 91 S. Ct. 795, 28 L. Ed. 2d 77 (1971) .

(n50)Footnote 49. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C).

(n51)Footnote 50. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C).

(n52)Footnote 51. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n53)Footnote 52. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n54)Footnote 53. Omnium Lyonnais D'Etanchiete et Revetement Asphalte v. Dow Chem. Co., 73 F.R.D. 114, 119 (C.D. Cal. 1977) .

(n55)Footnote 54. See, e.g., United States ex rel. Newsham v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., 190 F.3d 963, 967 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n56)Footnote 55. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n57)Footnote 56. Harris v. Philadelphia, 137 F.3d 209, 214 (3d Cir. 1998) (trial court appointed master to monitor defendant's compliance with consent decree).

(n58)Footnote 57. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C).

(n59)Footnote 58. Local 28, Sheet Metal Workers' Internat. Assn. v. EEOC, 478 U.S. 421, 481-482 (1986) ; Cobell v. Norton, 283 F. Supp. 2d 66, 215-217 (D.D.C. 2003) .

(n60)Footnote 59. Cobell v. Norton, 237 F. Supp. 2d 71, 80 (D.D.C. 2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
A. APPOINTMENT OF MASTERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.03

§ 21.03 Qualifications of Person to Serve As Mastern*

[1] Qualifications Are Based On Case Precedent

Although Rule 53 states grounds for disqualification, n1 the rule does not explicitly specify any positive qualifications or requirements for a person to serve as a master. n2 However, case precedent has stated that masters have a unique role in the federal judiciary. A master serves as a surrogate or representative of the court and, consequently, is required to perform service that is an important public duty of a high order similar to actually serving in the judiciary. Furthermore, in the modern era of complex litigation, masters perform a broad range of judicial functions such as supervising discovery, issuing stipulations of fact, and hearing and making recommendations with regard to motions to dismiss and for summary judgment, all subject to judicial review. n3 Other cases have indicated that any person with experience and education in the law and in the particular subject matter of the reference order may serve as a master, provided that he or she is qualified to perform the duties required while sitting as the representative of the court. n4

Courts typically appoint attorneys as masters, n5 especially attorneys with expertise in particular areas of the law, n6 or in non-legal fields of expertise, such as, commerce, finance, or business organization. n7 Courts also may appoint analytically proficient legal scholars, such as retired judges n8 and law professors. n9 However, a master need not be an attorney, n10 because there are many areas of expertise in subject matters outside the legal field where legal proficiency is not required, especially in fields such as business, n11 construction and building, n12 and medicine. n13

[2] Persons Disqualified to Serve as Masters

Unless the parties consent with the court's approval to appointment of a particular person after disclosure of any potential grounds for disqualification, a person is not qualified to serve as master if the person has a relationship to the parties, counsel, action, or court that would require disqualification of a judge under federal statute. n14 Consequently, absent waiver, a person is disqualified as a master in the following circumstances: n15

- When the person's impartiality might reasonably be questioned. n16
- If the person has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party, or personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceeding. n17

- If in private practice, the person served as a lawyer in the matter in controversy, or a lawyer with whom he or she previously practiced law served during such association as a lawyer concerning the matter, or the person or such lawyer has been a material witness concerning the matter. n18

- If the person has served in governmental employment and in such capacity participated as counsel, adviser, or material witness concerning the proceeding, or expressed an opinion concerning the merits of the particular case in controversy. n19

- When the person knows that he or she as an individual or as a fiduciary, or a spouse or minor child residing in his or her household, has a financial interest in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding, or any other interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding. n20

- If the person or his or her spouse, or a person within the third degree of relationship to either of them, or the spouse of such a person is any of the following: n21 (1) a party to the proceeding, or an officer, director, or trustee of a party; (2) is acting as a lawyer in the proceeding; (3) is known by the judge to have an interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding; or (4) is known by the person to be a material witness in the proceeding.

A court may also not appoint as master a person related to a judge by consanguinity or affinity within the degree of first cousin. n22 The court may not appoint as master clerks of district courts and deputy clerks in any case unless special reasons require the appointment and those reasons are recited in the order of appointment. n23 Additionally, clerks and assistant clerks of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals may not be appointed as masters in any case. n24

[3] Court's Method of Selection of Person to Serve As Master

Rule 53 does not specify the manner in which the district court should select persons to serve as masters; however, it does specify that before making an appointment, the court must give the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard on their position on whether there should be an appointment. n1 To the extent possible, the notice should describe the master's proposed duties, time to complete the duties, standards of review, and compensation. n2 Before appointment, any party may also suggest candidates for appointment. n3 Often it will be useful to engage the parties in the process of identifying the master, inviting nominations, and reviewing potential candidates. After considering the suggestions, the court has discretion whether to appoint as master one or more of the persons a party has suggested. n4

One option is for the court to notify the parties that the appointment of a particular individual is being considered, and then proceed with the appointment if the parties do not object. n29 An additional option for the court is to provide a list of potential candidates from which the parties may attempt to agree on a candidate. n30 The court may also ask each party to provide an agreed list of nominees, from which the court will select the master. n31

After hearing the parties, the court has discretion in the manner of selection. n32 Courts frequently select a master despite the parties' choice of another person because a working relationship of trust is essential between the judge and the master, while a relationship between the parties and the master is not important and may even be detrimental; in fact, the court must appoint a master in a manner that avoids potential conflicts of interest in the master. n33 Many judges rely on a personal contact network to identify and select qualified candidates for reference; judges also typically seek recommendations from other judges. The court itself will usually initiate the selection of a master; alternatively, the parties may initiate the selection of a master by making a recommendation to the court. However, the court is not required to appoint the parties unanimous choice and even may appoint a master without any input from the parties in the case. n34

[4] Court's Appointment of More than One Master

Courts may appoint more than one master in the same case. n35 Multiple masters may be appointed in extraordinary cases that are too large or complex for one master to successfully manage, n36 or when expertise in a variety of subjects is needed. n37 Additionally, in its order of appointment, the court may permit the master to hire a support staff to carry out the master's assigned tasks properly. For example, in one case the master hired legal, technical, stenographic, and clerical assistants. n38 Also, some courts permit masters to hire additional experts and specialists to function as assistant masters without express prior court approval. n39 This procedure, however, violates Rule 53 if the appointment of the additional staff has not been specified in the order of appointment, n40 and some courts permit masters to hire experts only after first obtaining approval from the appointing court. n41

[5] Challenge to Appointment of Master

Before making an appointment, the court must give the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard on whether there should be an appointment and on the appointment of a particular person master. In addition, the parties may suggest persons for appointment. n1 The hearing requirement of Rule 53(b)(1) may be satisfied by an opportunity to make written submissions unless the circumstances require live testimony. n2 After receiving the notice, any party that has objections should bring them to the attention of the court. Thus, a person proposed as master may be challenged on the grounds of partiality, bias, or conflict of interest. n3 Thus, for example, a party may have a proposed person disqualified by demonstrating actual bias. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.11 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See [2], below.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 995 (9th Cir. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice.

(n5)Footnote 4. Cruz v. Hauck, 515 F.2d 322, 327 (5th Cir. 1975) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Jenkins v. Sterlacci, 849 F.2d 627, 632 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (masters are often practicing attorneys).

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Blackman v. District of Columbia, 185 F.R.D. 4, 8 (D.D.C. 1999) (court noted that appointee as master had significant experience in law of Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, as court learned in some detail when it interviewed her at length and checked her references before appointing her); United States v. Conservation Chem. Co., 106 F.R.D. 210, 224 n. 5 (W.D. Mo. 1985) (attorney appointed master in toxic waste case was expert in land use and environmental law).

(n8)Footnote 7. McLendon v. Continental Group, Inc., 749 F. Supp. 582, 612 (D.N.J. 1989) , aff'd on other grounds, 908 F.2d 1171 (3d Cir. 1990) (attorney with economics expertise appointed master in complicated ERISA case).

(n9)Footnote 8. Mullinax v. Willett Lincoln--Mercury, Inc., 381 F. Supp. 422, 423 (N.D. Ga. 1974) (bankruptcy judges qualified as masters in Truth-in-Lending cases).

(n10)Footnote 9. United States v. Am. Tel. & Tel. Co., 461 F. Supp. 1314, 1348 (D.C. Cir. 1978) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Morgan v. Kerrigan, 530 F.2d 401, 425-427 (1st Cir. 1976) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Arthur Murray, Inc. v. Reserve Plan, Inc., 364 F.2d 28, 30 (8th Cir. 1966) (accountant appointed master to calculate complex damage award).

(n13)Footnote 12. United States v. Cline, 388 F.2d 294, 295 (4th Cir. 1968) (surveyor serving as master).

(n14)Footnote 13. Fox v. Bowen, 656 F. Supp. 1236, 1253-1254 (D. Conn. 1987) (medical experts used as masters in Medicare case); N.Y. Assn. for Retarded Children, Inc. v. Carey, 551 F. Supp. 1165, 1192-1194 (E.D.N.Y. 1982) , rev'd on other grounds, 706 F.2d 956 (2d Cir. 1983) (mental disability expert appointed master to monitor compliance with judgment).

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(2); see 28 U.S.C. § 455.

(n16)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(2).

(n17)Footnote 16. 28 U.S.C. § 455(a).

(n18)Footnote 17. 28 U.S.C. § 455(b)(1).

(n19)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 455(b)(2).

(n20)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 455(b)(3).

(n21)Footnote 20. 28 U.S.C. § 455(b)(4).

(n22)Footnote 21. 28 U.S.C. § 455(b)(5).

(n23)Footnote 22. 28 U.S.C. § 458(a)(1).

(n24)Footnote 23. 28 U.S.C. § 957; Toussaint v. McCarthy, 597 F. Supp. 1388, 1421-1422 (N.D. Cal. 1984) , rev'd on other grounds, 801 F.2d 1080 (9th Cir. 1986) (judge properly appointed law clerk as monitor in prison reform case because of clerk's familiarity with case).

(n25)Footnote 24. 28 U.S.C. § 957.

(n26)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1); see [5], below.

(n27)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n28)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1).

(n29)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n30)Footnote 29. United States v. Yonkers Bd. of Educ., 108 F.R.D. 199, 200 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (court proposed person as potential master, parties approved, and person was appointed as master).

(n31)Footnote 30. Gary W. v. Louisiana, 601 F.2d 240, 242-243 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n32)Footnote 31. BIEC Int'l, Inc. v. Global Steel Services, Ltd., 791 F. Supp. 489, 492-493 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (each party proposed 10 candidates in trademark and tradename case and court appointed from list).

(n33)Footnote 32. In re Hanford Nuclear Reservation Litig. v. E. I. Dupont, 292 F.3d 1124, 1138 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n34)Footnote 33. Belfiore v. N.Y. Times Co., 826 F.2d 177, 185 (2d Cir. 1987) (master's potential for conflict based on relationship with party); see [2], above.

(n35)Footnote 34. Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 694 (1st Cir. 1992) (court may appoint a master even over objection of one or more of the parties).

(n36)Footnote 35. Morgan v. Kerrigan, 530 F.2d 401, 425-427 (1st Cir. 1976) (appointment of panel of masters).

(n37)Footnote 36. Kyriazi v. W. Elec. Co., 465 F. Supp. 1141, 1143 (D.N.J. 1979) , aff'd on other grounds, 647 F.2d. 388 (3d Cir. 1981) (three-person panel in class action sex discrimination suit with more than 10,000 potential claims).

(n38)Footnote 37. Cronin v. Browner, 90 F. Supp. 2d 364, 378 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (need for masters with scientific and technical expertise).

(n39)Footnote 38. Kansas v. Colorado, 484 U.S. 910, 910, 108 S. Ct. 254, 98 L. Ed. 2d 212 (1987) ; see Ruiz v. Estelle, 679 F.2d 1115, 1159 (5th Cir. 1982) , amended, 688 F.2d 266 (5th Cir. 1982) (appointment of clerical and support staff to help master).

(n40)Footnote 39. Thompson v. Enomoto, 815 F.2d 1323, 1326 n.7 (9th Cir. 1987) (master allowed to hire experts, specialists, or other persons whose advice master considered necessary).

(n41)Footnote 40. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c) (order of appointment gives master powers to perform specific acts).

(n42)Footnote 41. National Org. for Reform of Marijuana Laws v. Mullen, 828 F.2d 536, 540 (9th Cir. 1987) (reference order required court approval before master could hire experts, specialists, or other persons).

(n43)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n44)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n45)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(2); see 28 U.S.C. § 455; [2], above.

(n46)Footnote 4. Rios v. Enterprise Asso. Steamfitters Local Union 638 of U.A., 860 F.2d 1168, 1173-1175 (2d Cir. 1988) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
A. APPOINTMENT OF MASTERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.04

§ 21.04 Order of Appointment of Mastern*

[1] Notice Required Prior to Order of Appointment

Prior to entering an order appointing a master, the court must give the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard on whether the appointment is appropriate, n1 and whether the person selected is proper. n2 To facilitate the opportunity to be heard, the court should state in the notice, to the extent possible, a description of the master's proposed duties, time to complete the duties, standards of review, and compensation. The hearing requirement of Rule 53(b)(1) may be satisfied by giving the parties an opportunity to make written submissions unless the circumstances require live testimony. n3

[2] Contents of Order of Appointment

[a] Required Contents

An order of appointment must be entered to effect the appointment of a master. n1 The order of appointment a master must contain all of the following: n2

- A direction to the master to proceed with all reasonable diligence. n3

- A statement of the master's duties, including any investigation or enforcement duties, and any limits on the master's authority under Rule 53(c). n4 Thus, the order must specify any limitations on the master's authority to regulate proceedings, the measures the master may take to perform assigned duties, and the actions the master may take to impose sanctions on a party. In the absence of a statement of the limits on the master's authority, the master has broad authority for all of these matters. n5 The order must also specify whether the master may preside at proceedings and take evidence. n6

- A specification of any circumstances in which the master may communicate ex parte with the court or a party. n7

- A statement of the nature of the materials to be preserved and filed as the record of the master's activities. n8

- A statement of the time limits, method of filing the record, other procedures, and standards for reviewing the master's orders, findings, and recommendations. n9

- A specification of the basis, terms, and procedure for fixing the master's compensation under Rule 53(h). n10 Thus, the basis and terms stated in the order of appointment controls the final compensation due the master. n11

[b] Particular Contents Depend on Type or Stage of Case

The specific contents of an order of reference will vary depending on the stage of the litigation that the master will control, for example, when the court refers pretrial matters to the master, the order of reference should specify the authority of the master, such as the authority to do the following: schedule and monitor depositions and other types of initial disclosure and discovery; resolve discovery disputes, including ruling on claims of privilege; provide tentative rulings on objections and admissibility of evidence; organize and regulate pretrial hearings and require attendance of parties; and promote settlement negotiations. n12

In the case of a post-trial master, the master may be ordered, for example, to calculate complex damages after trial in an employment discrimination class action. In such a case, the order of reference may direct the master to determine how many additional hours class members would have worked in the absence of discrimination and award back pay by multiplying the expected hours worked by the average wage rate in effect during the year that the class member would have worked. n13

[3] Requirements for Entry of Order of Appointment

Before entering an order of appointment, the court must consider the fairness of imposing the likely expenses on the parties and must protect against unreasonable expense or delay. n1 Also, the court may not enter a completed order of appointment until the proposed master files an affidavit disclosing whether there is any ground for disqualification of the master under the applicable statute. n2 If a ground for disqualification is disclosed, the court may not enter the order appointing the proposed master unless the parties have consented, with the court's approval, to waive the disqualification. n3 The requirement of this affidavit is an important source of information about possible grounds for disqualification of a proposed master, but the court should make independent inquiry before making the appointment. However, because a master is not a public judicial officer, it may be appropriate for the court to permit the parties to consent to the appointment of a particular person as master in circumstances that would require disqualification of a judge. The appointing judge must be sure that no party is pressured to consent. However, after such assurances and the parties' consent, and with the appointing judge's own determination that there is no improper conflict of interests or appearance of impropriety, the court may appoint an otherwise disqualified master. n4

[4] Amendment of Order of Appointment After Notice to Parties

The court may amend the order appointing a master at any time after providing notice to the parties and an opportunity to be heard. n1 The hearing requirement may be satisfied by an opportunity to make written submissions, unless the circumstances require live testimony. Amendment of an order of appointment is as important as the initial order, because any provisions that may be placed in the initial order may be accomplished by amendment. n2 Consequently, if the proposed amendment is to change the appointed master, the court should also provide the parties with an opportunity to suggest candidates for appointment. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersAppointments

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 53.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1) (court must give parties opportunity to suggest candidates for appointment); Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments; see § 21.03[5].

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b); see [1], above.

(n6)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2).

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(A).

(n9)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c).

(n10)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(1)(C).

(n11)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(B).

(n12)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(C).

(n13)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(D).

(n14)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(E); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g), discussed in § 21.05.

(n15)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g).

(n16)Footnote 12. Omnium Lyonnais D'Etanchiete et Revetement Asphalte v. Dow Chem. Co., 73 F.R.D. 114, 119 (C.D. Cal. 1977) (master given powers to control and schedule discovery matters and to exercise all powers necessary to effectuate rules of civil procedure pertaining to discovery).

(n17)Footnote 13. Berger v. Iron Workers Reinforced Rodmen, Local 201, 170 F.3d 1111, 1119 (D.C. Cir. 1999) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(3); see § 21.02[1][c].

(n19)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(3); see 28 U.S.C. § 455.

(n20)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(3).

(n21)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n22)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(4); see Cobell v. Norton, 283 F. Supp. 2d 66, 217 (D.D.C. 2003) .

(n23)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(4), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n24)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
A. APPOINTMENT OF MASTERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.05

§ 21.05 Compensation of Mastern*

[1] Court Specifies Master's Compensation in Order of Appointment

In every order appointing a master, the court must state the basis, terms, and procedure for setting the master's compensation. n1 The court must ultimately fix the master's compensation on the basis and terms stated in the order of appointment. Depending on the terms and basis for the compensation, the court may fix the amount either before or after judgment. The court also may set a new basis and terms after providing the parties with notice and an opportunity to be heard, in order to protect the parties against unfair surprise. n2

[2] Court Has Discretion to Specify Amount of Master's Compensation

[a] Discretion of Appointing Court to Set Amount

A district court that appoints a master must establish the master's compensation, n1 both with respect to the amount n2 and the allocation of responsibility for payment of the compensation. n3 The appointing court may consider advice and consent from the parties concerning proposed terms of the master's compensation. However, the court is not bound by a recommendation of the parties nor even by an agreement of the parties regarding the master's compensation. n4

When a master performs his or her duties in federal court pursuant to an order of reference by the federal court, the federal court alone must set the master's compensation; even if a state court has relied on the master's federal court performance in a related state court proceeding, it is improper for the state court to set the master's compensation for federal court performance. n5 However, there are exceptions to the discretion of the appointing court to specify the master's compensation. When the appointed master is a United States magistrate judge, the provisions for compensation of Rule 53 are inapplicable, and the magistrate judge acting as master receives his or her ordinary compensation. n6 Additionally, other federal statutes may specify or affect the amount of compensation of a master. For example, in civil rights cases involving alleged unconstitutional conditions of confinement in prisons, the Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1996 restricts the compensation to be paid to a master to the hourly rates established for payment of court-appointed attorneys in criminal cases. n7

[b] Standards Used to Determine Compensation

Under the federal rules, there is no precise mathematical method for determining masters' fees, and the matter is generally left to the discretion of the appointing court. n8 The courts have used a variety of standards to determine the amount or rate. The United States Supreme Court established a flexible, liberal standard as a benchmark, in which the compensation of master should be based on the services performed, the time employed, and the responsibility assumed. n9 The Supreme Court suggested that salaries of judicial officers performing similar functions may be a possible guide. The Court noted that because taking the position of master may interrupt the master's other undertakings, a higher rate of compensation was necessary to attract able and experienced people to temporary employment as a master. n10 To follow the Supreme Court's lead, other courts have established tangible guidelines to determine a dollar rate in each case. Standards used by courts include the following:

- The fair market value of services provided. n11
- The prescribed salaries of judges, n12 or salaries of other public servants. n13
- A percentage of the amount earned by private attorneys in commercial matters. n14
- An amount based on what the master would receive in his or her private business or practice. n15
- A lodestar calculation, which is the number of hours reasonably worked or performed multiplied by a reasonable hourly rate. n16 This amount then may be adjusted upward or downward based on specific factors, such as the quality of service, delay in service, or delay in receipt of fee. n17

[c] Factors Used To Determine Reasonableness

The appointing court must limit a master's compensation to an amount that is reasonable, irrespective of the standard they use to determine compensation. n18 Many factors may contribute to a determination of reasonableness, and no one factor is controlling. For example, a court may consider the following factors:

- The amount of time necessarily spent on assigned duties. n19
- The proficiency of the master and the degree of success of the master in discharging his or her assigned duties. n20 On the other hand, a master's fee may be reduced if assigned tasks are not performed competently, n21 or if the master engages in misconduct. A master that has engaged in misconduct may also be required to return any compensation already paid. n22
- The importance or magnitude of the matter involved. n23
- The public and professional standing of the master, including the master's perceived ability and experience. n24
- The number and complexity of claims, the difficulty of the services provided, and the special expertise required of the master to perform them. n25
- The standard rates in the locality for compensation of masters. n26
- The short or long term nature of the assignment. n27
- The dollar amount involved in the case or the amount of damages awarded. n28

- Whether compensation is paid by a private party or from public revenues, n29 and if there is any public service component of the master's service. n30

- The presence or absence of objections by parties to the amount of compensation. n31

- The likelihood that the master's acceptance of the assignment will preclude his or her other employment or reduce present or future income for the master. n32

[d] Challenge to Compensation Fixed by Court

A dissatisfied party has the right to seek review of the appointing court's fixing the amount of compensation. In this regard, the master himself or herself is considered a "party" entitled to appeal because he or she is bound by the court's order fixing compensation. n33 However, the master or other party may directly appeal the compensation order only if it constitutes a "final judgment," which completely disposes of a claim, n34 or fits within the narrow collateral order exception. n35 If a direct appeal is prohibited, the compensation order may be challenged by a writ of mandamus. However, while the standard of review on direct appeal is abuse of discretion, for a writ of mandamus the district court will not be reversed unless it has made a clear error. n36

[3] Court Has Discretion to Specify Basis and Terms of Master's Compensation

[a] Basis of Compensation

The appointing court must specify in the order of appointment the basis for the master's compensation n1 and has wide discretion in doing so. The court typically specifies compensation as an hourly rate. n2 The court may specify more than one hourly rate when a master performs different types of services. n3 Some courts have applied per diem rates, both as the sole amount of compensation, n4 and in addition to an hourly rate. n5 Other bases for payment of long term appointments include monthly rates, n6 full-time annual salaries, and lump-sum compensation. n7

[b] Other Terms of Compensation

In addition to specifying the basis of compensation of the master, such as periodic fees, n8 the appointing court must also specify in the order of appointment any other terms for the master's compensation. n9 The appointing court has wide discretion to specify such terms, including compensation reimbursement for the master's overhead costs and miscellaneous expenses incurred during the master's service. Reimbursable costs include costs of hiring assistants and staff and miscellaneous expenses. n10 On the other hand, courts typically do not provide for the payment of items or activities that are not directly related to services performed under the order of appointment. n11

[4] Obligation to Pay Compensation to Master

[a] Party or Entity Ordered to Make Payment

The appointing court must direct that the compensation of the master, which is fixed by the court under the order of appointment, n1 be paid by either a party or parties n2 or from a fund or the subject matter of the action that is within the court's control. n3 The court has several options under the rule:

- The court may order that one party pay the entire cost of the master's compensation, n4 even if that party was the prevailing party in the lawsuit. n5

- The court may order the parties to pay equal amounts. n6

- The court may order the parties to pay in differing amounts. n7

- The court may order more than one party on the same side of the litigation to pay the compensation. n8

- The court may order the compensation paid from a fund that is the subject matter of the litigation, n9 or may order payment from the interest from the investment of such a fund. n10

Before a court makes an order of payment for the compensation of a master, the court must give the party liable for the compensation an opportunity to object, and an order of appointment may be remanded to the district court if it refuses a party's request for an opportunity to object to the master's fees. n11 In its discretion to order payment of the master's compensation, a court may initially provide for payment of master's compensation by one or both parties, but later revise its order specifying the obligation to pay the compensation. n12

[b] Allocation of Obligation for Payment

The court must allocate payment of the master's compensation among the parties after considering the nature and amount of the controversy, the means of the parties, and the extent to which any party is more responsible than other parties for the reference to a master. An interim allocation may be amended to reflect a decision on the merits. n13 Because responsibility of the parties is an element the court should consider, whether a party ultimately prevails in a case is an important factor that the courts have always considered in allocating the obligation. n14

In addition to whether a party prevails in the litigation, courts consider a variety of other factors in making the determination of the allocation for payment of the master's compensation, including the following:

- The nature and amount of the controversy. n15 Parties pursuing matters of public interest, for example, may deserve special protection. n16

- The degree to which each party's actions necessitated the suit or reference to the master. n17

- Whether either party engaged in wrongdoing. n18

- The relative disparity in economic strength between the parties. n19

- Whether there is an agreement of the parties to allocate the compensation expense, or one party's stipulation to assume all of the expenses related to the master. n20

[5] Obligation to Pay of Compensation to Master

In every order appointing a master, the court must specify the procedure for setting the master's compensation. n1 The court that appoints the master has discretion to specify the method for payment of a master, and, depending on the circumstances, the court may use one of a variety of methods. One option the court has is to order a party or parties to make payments directly to the master. n2 Another option is for the court to require the parties to make payments to a separate payment fund or escrow account independent of the court. After court approval of the amounts, the master is then paid from the fund or account. n3 In another procedure, the court may direct the parties to make payments directly to the court; the court clerk then administers the fund and makes payment to the master through the court registry after court approval of the amount. n4 Finally, the court may order payment of the master's compensation from a fund that is the subject matter of the litigation and that is in the custody and control of the court, n5 or from the interest from the investment of that fund. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersCompensation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.50 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(E); see § 21.04[2][a]; see also Baltimore Neighborhoods, Inc. v. LOB, Inc., 92 F. Supp. 2d 456, 473 (D. Md. 2000) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(1).

(n4)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(1).

(n5)Footnote 2. Halderman v. Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp., 855 F. Supp. 747, 748-749 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Atlantic Richfield Co. v. American Airlines, 98 F.3d 564, 572 (10th Cir. 2003) ; see [4], below.

(n7)Footnote 4. Roxana Petroleum Corp. v. Colquitt, 34 F.2d 470, 479 (D. Tex. 1929) .

(n8)Footnote 5. Smith v. Alleghany Corp., 394 F.2d 381, 390 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n9)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 634.

(n10)Footnote 7. 18 U.S.C. § 3626(f); see 18 U.S.C. § 3006A (compensation for appointed counsel).

(n11)Footnote 8. Halderman v. Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp., 855 F. Supp. 747, 748-749 (E.D. Pa. 1994) ; see [a], above.

(n12)Footnote 9. Newton v. Consol. Gas Co., 259 U.S. 101, 105, 42 S. Ct. 438, 66 L. Ed. 844 (1922) .

(n13)Footnote 10. Newton v. Consol. Gas Co., 259 U.S. 101, 105, 42 S. Ct. 438, 66 L. Ed. 844 (1922) (salaries prescribed for judicial officers performing similar duties may be considered; however, higher rate of compensation is generally necessary in order to secure ability and experience).

(n14)Footnote 11. Northcross v. Board of Educ. of Memphis City Schools, 611 F.2d 624, 638 (6th Cir. 1979) .

(n15)Footnote 12. Newton v. Consol. Gas Co., 259 U.S. 101, 106, 42 S. Ct. 438, 66 L. Ed. 844 (1922) .

(n16)Footnote 13. Kyriazi v. W. Elec. Co., 465 F. Supp. 1141, 1147-1148 (D.N.J. 1979) , aff'd on other grounds, 647 F.2d. 388 (3d Cir. 1981) (compensation should be based on consideration of other public salaries).

(n17)Footnote 14. Reed v. Cleveland Bd. of Educ., 607 F.2d 737, 746 (6th Cir. 1979) (one half of amount earned by attorneys in commercial matters or two thirds of amount earned by experienced trial attorneys); Hart v. Community Sch. Bd., 383 F. Supp. 699, 767 (E.D.N.Y. 1974) , aff'd on other grounds, 512 F.2d 37 (2d Cir. 1975) (fee about half that charged by attorneys in private practice plus overhead costs.

(n18)Footnote 15. Kyriazi v. W. Elec. Co., 465 F. Supp. 1141, 1147-1148 (D.N.J. 1979) , aff'd on other grounds, 647 F.2d. 388 (1981) (masters compensated in manner comparable to what they would earn in private law practice).

(n19)Footnote 16. Jackson v. Nassau County Bd. of Supervisors, 157 F.R.D. 612, 617 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n20)Footnote 17. Copeland v. Marshall, 641 F.2d 880, 891 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (amount of compensation inquiry based on lodestar approach).

(n21)Footnote 18. Blackman v. District of Columbia, 185 F.R.D. 4, 10 (D.D.C. 1999) (order specified that defendants must pay reasonable fees and expenses incurred by master in carrying out her duties and responsibilities under order of reference; master was required on monthly basis to account for her activities and submit invoice for reasonable fees and expenses incurred in performance of duties under order).

(n22)Footnote 19. In re Revenue Properties Co., 61 F.R.D. 613, 615 (D. Mass. 1974) (in class action in which master had administered fund awarded to class members, compensation was fair considering time and effort master expended in examining and ruling on complex claims of 6100 members of class).

(n23)Footnote 20. United States v. Yonkers Bd. of Educ., 108 F.R.D. 199, 202 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (master's skill justified fee).

(n24)Footnote 21. Glidden Co. v. Hellenic Lines, Ltd., 315 F.2d 162, 165 (2d Cir. 1963) (court reduced commissioner's fee because of numerous errors in report).

(n25)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Universal Oil Prods. Co. v. Hall, 76 F.2d 258, 265 (8th Cir. 1935) .

(n26)Footnote 23. Jackson v. Nassau County Bd. of Supervisors, 157 F.R.D. 612, 617 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) (when duty of master to create districting plan for new county legislature was of utmost importance, this factor affected compensation).

(n27)Footnote 24. Kyriazi v. W. Elec. Co., 465 F. Supp. 1141, 1147-1148 (D.N.J. 1979) , aff'd on other grounds, 647 F.2d. 388 (1981) (master compensated in manner comparable to what they would earn in private law practice).

(n28)Footnote 25. Am. Safety Table Co. v. Schreiber, 415 F.2d 373, 379-380 (2d Cir. 1969) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); United States v. Yonkers Bd. of Educ., 108 F.R.D. 199, 202 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (master's great skill justified fee).

(n29)Footnote 26. Jackson v. Nassau County Bd. of Supervisors, 157 F.R.D. 612, 617 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n30)Footnote 27. Kyriazi v. W. Elec. Co., 465 F. Supp. 1141, 1147-1148 (D.N.J. 1979) , aff'd on other grounds, 647 F.2d. 388 (1981) .

(n31)Footnote 28. American Safety Table Co. v. Schreiber, 415 F.2d 373, 379-380 (2d Cir. 1969) .

(n32)Footnote 29. Reed v. Cleveland Bd. of Educ., 607 F.2d 737, 748 (6th Cir. 1979) (courts should take into consideration if fees are to be paid from public funds).

(n33)Footnote 30. Jackson v. Nassau County Bd. of Supervisors, 157 F.R.D. 612, 623-624 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) (25 percent reduction in fees appropriate because case involved public institutional relief and service to public).

(n34)Footnote 31. Milwaukee Town Corp. v. Loew's, Inc., 139 F. Supp. 809, 818-819 (N.D. Ill. 1956) (fee reduced on account of parties' agreement).

(n35)Footnote 32. Kyriazi v. W. Elec. Co., 465 F. Supp. 1141, 1147 (D.N.J. 1979) , aff'd on other grounds, 647 F.2d. 388 (3d Cir. 1981) (reduce present or future income).

(n36)Footnote 33. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 996 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n37)Footnote 34. See 28 U.S.C. § 1291; see Ch. 27, General Principles of Appeal.

(n38)Footnote 35. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 996 (9th Cir. 2003) ; see Ch. 27, General Principles of Appeal.

(n39)Footnote 36. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 998 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n40)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(1).

(n41)Footnote 2. Mercer v. Gerry Baby Prods. Co., 160 F.R.D. 576, 579 (S.D. Iowa 1995) ($200 per hour for supervising discovery and assisting in settlement negotiations in complicated case with numerous pleadings and third parties).

(n42)Footnote 3. Halderman v. Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp., 855 F. Supp. 747, 749 (E.D. Pa. 1994) ($100 per hour for professional services, and $15 per hour for clerical work).

(n43)Footnote 4. Morgan v. Kerrigan, 530 F.2d 401, 425-427 (1st Cir. 1976) ($200 per day for masters).

(n44)Footnote 5. Sheldon v. Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corp., 26 F. Supp. 134, 136, 145 (S.D.N.Y. 1938) , aff'd on other grounds, 309 U.S. 390, 60 S. Ct. 681, 84 L. Ed. 825 (1940) (in addition to $11,305 fee, court awarded $250/day per diem for 16 days of travel from New York to California).

(n45)Footnote 6. Grubbs v. Bradley, 552 F. Supp. 1052, 1132 (M.D. Tenn. 1982) (master compensated by defendants at monthly rate set by court).

(n46)Footnote 7. Ellipse Corp. v. Ford Motor Co., 461 F. Supp. 1354, 1380-1381 (N.D. Ill. 1978) , aff'd on other grounds, 614 F.2d. 775 (7th Cir. 1979) (special master compensated $150,000 for work over six-year period).

(n47)Footnote 8. See [a], above.

(n48)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(1).

(n49)Footnote 10. Kansas v. Colorado, 484 U.S. 910, 910, 108 S. Ct. 254, 98 L. Ed. 2d 212 (1987) (court ordered compensation for master for costs of hiring legal, technical, recording, and clerical assistants); Ruiz v. Estelle, 679 F.2d 1115, 1172 (5th Cir. 1982) , amended, 688 F.2d 266 (5th Cir. 1982) (permitting compensation for independent specialists and experts, and clerical and support staff).

(n50)Footnote 11. Reed v. Cleveland Bd. of Educ., 607 F.2d 737, 744 (6th Cir. 1979) .

(n51)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(E).

(n52)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(2)(A).

(n53)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(2)(B).

(n54)Footnote 4. Blackman v. District of Columbia, 185 F.R.D. 4, 10 (D.D.C. 1999) (court ordered defendants to pay reasonable fees and expenses incurred by master in carrying out her duties and responsibilities under order of reference).

(n55)Footnote 5. Apponi v. Sunshine Biscuits Inc., 809 F.2d 1210, 1220 (6th Cir. 1987) (within court's discretion to assess costs to prevailing party).

(n56)Footnote 6. Turner Constr. Co. v. First Indem. of Am. Ins., 829 F. Supp. 752, 765 (E.D. Pa. 1993), aff'd on other grounds, 22 F.3d 303 (1994) (court charged parties equally because master benefitted both parties by materially advancing resolution of case).

(n57)Footnote 7. Kansas v. Colorado, 516 U.S. 1025, 1026, 116 S. Ct. 669, 133 L. Ed. 2d 519 (1995) (special master awarded fees and expenses to be paid 40 percent by Kansas, 40 percent by Colorado and 20 percent by the United States); Teradyne Inc. v. Teledyne Indus., Inc., 676 F.2d 865, 871 (1st Cir. 1982) (costs may be allocated by reference to ratio of amount by which party finally recovers to amount originally sought in complaint or amount sought when case submitted to master).

(n58)Footnote 8. Morgan v. Kerrigan, 530 F.2d 401, 427 (1st Cir. 1976).

(n59)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(2)(B).

(n60)Footnote 10. In re Revenue Properties Co., Ltd. Litig. Cases, 61 F.R.D. 613, 614 (D. Mass. 1974) .

(n61)Footnote 11. Casey v. Lewis, 43 F.3d 1261, 1266 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n62)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3).

(n63)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3).

(n64)Footnote 14. Sea Coast Foods, Inc., v. Lu-Mar Lobster & Shrimp, Inc., 260 F.3d 1054, 1061 (9th Cir. 2001) (trial court has discretion to tax master's compensation in favor of prevailing party as cost).

(n65)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3).

(n66)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n67)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3); see Adventures in Good Eating, Inc. v. Best Places to Eat, 131 F.2d 809, 814-815 (7th Cir. 1942) (court ordered plaintiff to pay compensation because defendant had objected to reference and reference proved to be unnecessary).

(n68)Footnote 18. Omnium Lyonnais D'Etanchiete et Revetement Asphalte v. Dow Chem. Co., 73 F.R.D. 114, 120 (C.D. Cal. 1977) .

(n69)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3) Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n70)Footnote 20. Allen-Myland, Inc. v. Intl. Business Machines Corp., 770 F. Supp. 1014, 1030 (E.D. Pa. 1991) (parties should agree to compensation).

(n71)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(E).

(n72)Footnote 2. Blackman v. District of Columbia, 185 F.R.D. 4, 10 (D.D.C. 1999) (court order specified that defendants had to pay reasonable fees and expenses incurred by master in carrying out her duties and responsibilities under order of reference); In re Sunrise Secs. Litig., 130 F.R.D. 560, 593 (E.D. Pa. 1989) (compensation paid directly to master by parties).

(n73)Footnote 3. In re Revenue Properties Co., Ltd. Litig. Cases, 61 F.R.D. 613, 614 (D. Mass. 1974) .

(n74)Footnote 4. Gary W. v. Louisiana, 601 F.2d 240, 245 (5th Cir. 1979) (state required to deposit master's compensation with clerk of court); Mallonee v. Fahey, 122 F. Supp. 472, 474 (S.D. Cal. 1954) (parties required to deposit money with court).

(n75)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(2)(B).

(n76)Footnote 6. Drascovich v. Equitable Trust Co., 3 F.2d 724, 725 (9th Cir. 1925) (master's compensation paid from funds that were subject of reference).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
A. APPOINTMENT OF MASTERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 21.06through 21.19

[Reserved]

§§ 21.06[Reserved]

153 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.20

§ 21.20 Master's Obligation to Perform Diligentlyn*

Every order appointing a master must direct the master to proceed with all reasonable diligence. n1 The master's duty of diligence applies not only to all of the specific duties that the master must perform under the order of appointment but also applies to general duties, n2 such as the duty to complete reports. n3 If the master fails to perform with diligence, and a party shows it was prejudiced, the master's report may be rejected. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.21[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Trico Prods. Corp. v. E.A. Laboratories, Inc., 54 F. Supp. 782, 784 (E.D.N.Y. 1944) (master's duty at every stage of reference to proceed with all reasonable diligence).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e).

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Ampicillin Antitrust Litigation, 81 F.R.D. 377, 381 (D.D.C. 1978) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.21

§ 21.21 Master's Professional and Ethical Obligations

[1] Standards of Conduct

Although there are no express provisions in the federal statutes or rules making federal judges' judicial standards of conduct and ethical rules applicable to masters, there is considerable case precedent that indicates such rules are applicable. Therefore, because masters perform duties functionally equivalent to those performed by a judge, masters should be held to the same standards as judges, including the Code of Judicial Conduct for United States Judges. n1 Also, a district judge may disqualify a master in a proceeding in which the master's impartiality might reasonably be questioned or if a conflict of interest arises. n2 Similarly, if a conflict of interest arises during the course of the litigation, and the master or a party becomes aware of it, the master or party should notify the appointing court as soon as practicable, because the rules regarding conflict of interest and bias apply equally during the periods of the master's service as they apply to the initial selection of a master. n3

[2] Ex Parte Communications

The order appointing a master must contain a specification of any circumstances in which the master may communicate ex parte with the court or a party. n1 Otherwise, the master may generally not engage in such ex parte communications, n2 unless such a communication is required, such as when the order of appointment requires the master to act as a mediator or settlement negotiator. n3 But some courts have cautioned that a finding of fact based on an ex parte communication might violate a party's due process rights. n4 Consequently, some orders of appointment provide that before reporting to the court, the master's findings of fact based on ex parte communication or other informal fact-finding proceedings must be provided to the parties for their comment and objection, and the parties must be given an opportunity to submit additional evidence or request an evidentiary hearing on the issue before the master. n5

Most orders of appointment should contain some provision allowing for ex parte communications between the court and master n6 because communication is essential to the speedy and efficient management of the case, particularly when the master is assisting the court in pretrial case management. However, a judge may decide that prohibiting these communications will facilitate the chances for settlement because the parties know that confidential disclosures to the master could not be disclosed to the court. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Jenkins v. Sterlacci, 856 F.2d 274, 274-275 (D.C. Cir. 1988) ; see Belfiore v. N.Y. Times Co., 826 F.2d 177, 184-185 (2d Cir. 1987) (Code of Judicial Conduct for United States Judges applies to masters); In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 737 F. Supp. 735, 739 (E.D.N.Y. 1990) (special master is considered judge for purposes of judicial ethics rules).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(2); see 28 U.S.C. § 455; see also § 21.03[2].

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. Certain Parcels of Land Located in Fairfax and Loudoun Counties, Com. of Va., 384 F.2d 677, 681-682 (4th Cir. 1967) (disqualification of master appointed in proceeding for bias or conflict of interest is matter left to sound discretion of district court).

(n4)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(B).

(n5)Footnote 2. Cobell v. Norton, 334 F.3d 1128, 1143-1144 (D.C. Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 3. McLendon v. Continental Group, Inc., 749 F. Supp. 582, 612 (D.N.J. 1989) , aff'd on other grounds, 908 F.2d 1171 (1990) (master appointed for specific purpose of assisting parties with settlement).

(n7)Footnote 4. Alberti v. Klevenhagen, 660 F. Supp. 605, 610 (S.D. Tex. 1987) (ex parte communications permissible if authorized by reference order).

(n8)Footnote 5. Ruiz v. Estelle, 679 F.2d 1115, 1162-1163 (5th Cir. 1982) (overly broad reference order denied parties due process).

(n9)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(B).

(n10)Footnote 7. Cf. Blackman v. District of Columbia, 185 F.R.D. 4, 8 (D.D.C. 1999) ; Derdiarian v. Futterman Corp., 38 F.R.D. 178, 181 (S.D.N.Y. 1965) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.22

§ 21.22 Regulation of Proceedingsn*

Unless the appointing order expressly directs otherwise, a master has authority to regulate all proceedings and take all appropriate measures to perform fairly and efficiently the duties assigned. n1 This provision is intended to provide the broad and flexible authority necessary to discharge the master's responsibilities and reflects that intent by essentially stating that the most important delineation of a master's authority and duties is provided by the order of appointment. n2 To facilitate the master's exercise of his or her duties, Rule 53 also provides that the master may impose noncontempt sanctions on a party as specified in Rule 37 or 45 and may recommend that the court impose a contempt sanction against a party and other sanctions against a nonparty. n3 Before imposing sanctions, a master must give the party notice and an opportunity to be heard on the matter that is the subject of sanctions. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.30 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(1)(A) see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(A) (order of appointment must specify any limitations on master's authority).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(2) see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, 45.

(n5)Footnote 4. Navellier v. Sletten, 262 F.3d 923, 943 (9th Cir. 2001) (master abused its discretion by failing to give party and attorney notice and opportunity to be heard before imposing discovery sanctions.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.23

§ 21.23 Master's Authority to Take Evidencen*

Unless the appointing order expressly directs otherwise, a master authorized by the order of appointment to conduct evidentiary hearings may exercise the power of the appointing court to compel, take, and record evidence. n1 Furthermore, Rule 53 gives parties the authority to subpoena witnesses for proceedings before the master. n2

The parties may procure the attendance of witnesses before the master by the issuance and service of subpoenas as provided in Rule 45. n3 If a witness fails to appear or give evidence before the master without adequate excuse, the master may impose on a party any noncontempt sanction provided by Rule 37 or 45 and may recommend a contempt sanction against a party and sanctions against a nonparty. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 53.31, 53.32 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(1)(C); see also Yascavage v. Weinberger, 379 F. Supp. 1297, 1301 (M.D. Pa. 1974) (master may take testimony when credibility based on demeanor of witnesses may be important).

(n3)Footnote 2. Yascavage v. Weinberger, 379 F. Supp. 1297, 1301 (M.D. Pa. 1974) (master may employ all methods used in non-jury trials, including taking of testimony when credibility based on demeanor of witnesses may be important; master may also rule on admissibility of testimony and make findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding testimony); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c); Fed. R. Civ. P. 45.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 45.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, 45.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.24

§ 21.24 Master's Authority to Enter Ordersn*

A master's authority to enter orders is dependent on the duties he or she is assigned to perform and on any limitations on the masters authority that are specified in the order of appointment. n1 If there are no such limitations in the order of appointment, the master has broad authority to enter all orders necessary to regulate all proceedings and take all appropriate measures to perform fairly and efficiently the assigned duties. n2 For example, a pretrial master supervising discovery has authority to impose sanctions on a party under Rule 37 for failure to perform the party's discovery obligations. n3

When a master makes an order, he or she must file it with the court and serve it promptly on each party, and the clerk must enter it on the docket. n4 Service on the parties may ordinarily be accomplished by mailing or other means as permitted by Rule 5(b), and in appropriate circumstances, the court may have the clerk's office assist the master in mailing the order to the parties. n5 As in the case of a report or recommendation, an order is subject to review by the appointing court, as discussed in § 21.26.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

158 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.25

§ 21.25 Master's Submission of Reportn*

[1] Contents of Report

A master must report to the court as required by the order of appointment. n1 Unless otherwise specified in the order of appointment, the report constitutes a written communication to the appointing court of the master's findings or recommendations on the referred matter and is prepared by the master for delivery directly to the appointing court. n2 The order of reference generally controls the requirements for the report. n3 The materials that a master must provide to support review of the report will also depend on the nature of the report. n4 The master should also provide all portions of the record preserved under Rule 53(b)(2)(C) that the master deems relevant to the report. n5

The parties may designate additional materials from the record and may seek permission to supplement the record with evidence, and the appointing court may direct the master to provided and file additional materials from the record. Given the wide variety of tasks that may be assigned to a pretrial master, there may be circumstances that justify sealing a report or review record from public access, for example, a report on settlement efforts. A post-trial master may be assigned duties in formulating a decree that could warrant similar protection. n6

[2] Filing and Service of Report

The master must file a report and promptly serve a copy of the report on each party, unless the appointing court directs otherwise. n1 Before formally making a report, a master may find it beneficial to circulate a draft to the parties for review and comment. n2 The master also may submit these draft reports in the form of periodic progress reports. In either case, the reports are given to the parties so that the parties may notify the master of any errors. n3 After the master has submitted the draft report to the parties to give them the opportunity to correct the proposed findings, the master must prepare a final report on the matters submitted by the order of appointment. If required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law, the master must state them in the report. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e).

(n3)Footnote 2. Collins v. Foreman, 729 F.2d 108, 118 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(C).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e) see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(D).

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n10)Footnote 3. See Stone v. City and County of San Francisco, 968 F.2d 850, 858 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.26

§ 21.26 Appointing Court's Review of Master's Order, Report, or Recommendationsn*

[1] Appointing Court Must Allow Input From Parties

Before taking action on a master's order, report, or recommendations, the appointing court must afford an opportunity for the parties to be heard. The court has discretion whether to hold a hearing and to take evidence, n1 or alternatively to take written submissions from the parties when the court decides to act without taking live testimony. n2 A party's written response may take the form of an objection, a motion to adopt, or a motion to modify the order, report, or recommendations. n3

[2] Time Limit for Party to Object or Move for Modification

Unless the appointing court sets a different time, n1 a party must file an objection, motion to adopt, or motion to modify the master's order, report, or recommendations no later than 21 days after the time the master's order, report, or recommendations are served. n2 Because of the considerable discretion the court has regarding this deadline, it is not jurisdictional; this means that, although a court may properly refuse to entertain untimely review proceedings, the court also has the option to excuse a party's failure to seek review within the 21 day period. The time period of 21 days is considered sufficient to permit thorough review and response to a complex report dealing with complex claims and legal issues. n3

[3] Action of Appointing Court After Permitting Input From Parties

After receiving and reviewing the order, report, or recommendations, and considering input from the parties, including and holding a hearing if appropriate, n1 the court may take any of the following actions on the order, report, or recommendations: adopt or affirm; modify; wholly or partly reject or reverse; or resubmit to the master with instructions. n2 The court may take any of these actions for orders, reports, and recommendations of consensual masters, trial masters, pretrial masters, and post-trial masters. n3 If the appointing court adopts the findings of fact specified in a master's order or report, those findings are considered to be the findings of the appointing court under Rule 52. n4 If no party asks the court to act on a master's order, report, or recommendations within the 21 day time limit, n5 the court has discretion to either adopt the master's action or to disregard it at any relevant point in the proceedings. n6

[4] Standards of Review

[a] Findings of Fact

The order of appointment may set the standards for review of a masters findings of fact. n1 Otherwise, when a party objects in a timely manner to findings of fact made or recommended by a master, the appointing court must generally review the masters findings of fact on a de novo basis. n2 However, if the parties stipulate, and the court consents, the appointing court may review under one of the following standards: n3

- The court may review the master's findings under the more differential clear error standard. n4 The clear error standard of review is more appropriate with respect to findings that do not go to the merits of the underlying claims or defenses, such as findings of fact bearing on a privilege objection to a discovery request. n5

- If the master was appointed by consent of the parties n6 or if the master is a pretrial or post-trial master, n7 the court may deem the findings of the master as final. n8 When parties stipulate that the master's findings of fact will be final, only questions of law arising from the report may be considered by the court. n9

Even if no party makes an objection to a master's findings of fact, the court is free to decide the facts de novo; n9.1 to review for clear error if an earlier approved stipulation provided clear-error review; or to withdraw its consent to a stipulation for clear-error review or finality, and then to decide de novo. If the court withdraws its consent to a stipulation for finality or clear-error review, it also has the option to reopen the opportunity for the parties to object. n10

A finding is "clearly erroneous" if it is without substantial evidentiary support or was induced by an erroneous application of the law. The appointing court may set aside a master's finding under this standard only if, based on the entire record and with due regard for the master's opportunity to judge credibility, the court is convinced that there is no substantial evidence to support the finding. n11

[b] Conclusions of Law

When a party objects to conclusions of law made or recommended by a master, the court must review the conclusions under the de novo standard. n12 The court also may decide conclusions of law de novo when no objection is made. n13 There is no provision for a consensual lesser standard of review for conclusions of law that the master makes or recommends; the appointing court must always decide de novo all objections to the master's legal conclusions. n14

Under the de novo standard, the appointing court is not required to defer to a master's conclusions of law and recommendations of legal analysis; on the contrary, the appointing court should ordinarily give the master's recommendations and conclusions of law careful scrutiny. However, a district court has discretion to give some deference to a master's legal conclusions or recommendations when the master has "direct and extensive" knowledge about the particular circumstances of the matter. n15

[c] Procedural and Other Matters

Unless the order of appointment establishes a different standard of review, n16 the court may set aside a master's ruling on a procedural matter only for an abuse of discretion. n17 A procedural matter is one that is not a factual or legal determination but rather a determination made by a master that, if made by a trial court, would be treated as a matter of procedural discretion. The court may set a standard for review of such matters in the order of appointment, and may amend the order to establish the standard. n18 If a master makes a recommendation on any matter that does not constitute a finding of fact, a conclusion of law, or a procedural ruling, n19 the court may act on the recommendation in any of the following ways: n20 adopt or affirm; modify; wholly or partly reject or reverse; or resubmit to the master with instructions. n21

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesJudicial Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.40 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(2); [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(D).

(n6)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(2).

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 1. See [1], above.

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(1); see Southern Natural Gas Co. v. Land, Cullman County, 197 F.3d 1368, 1375 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 4. Sick v. City of Buffalo, 574 F.2d 689, 690-693 (2d Cir. 1978) (no final judgment exists that may be appealed until after court considers master's determinations and enters its own order); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 52.

(n12)Footnote 5. See [2], above.

(n13)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(2), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n14)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(D).

(n15)Footnote 2. See In re § 639 Patent Litig., 154 F. Supp. 2d 157, 170-171 (D. Mass. 2001) (de novo review essentially means appointing court makes findings of fact anew, on its own initiative, without giving deference to master's finding).

(n16)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3).

(n17)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3)(A).

(n18)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n19)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A).

(n20)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C).

(n21)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3)(B).

(n22)Footnote 9. Burlington N. R.R. v. Dept. of Rev. of Wash., 934 F.2d 1064, 1072 (9th Cir. 1991) , aff'd on other grounds, 23 F.3d 239 (1994) ; see [b], below.

(n23)Footnote 9.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3).

(n24)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n25)Footnote 11. Hartman v. Duffey, 973 F. Supp. 189, 192 (D.D.C. 1997) (district court adopted report of master in class-action, gender-based, employment discrimination claim, finding that claimants failed to sustain substantial burden of showing that master's factual findings were clearly erroneous).

(n26)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(4).

(n27)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(4) Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n28)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(4).

(n29)Footnote 15. Goodrich Corp. v. Town of Middlesbury, 311 F.3d 154, 171 (2d Cir. 2002) .

(n30)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(D).

(n31)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(5).

(n32)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(5), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n33)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3), (4), (5).

(n34)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(5), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n35)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(1).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.27

§ 21.27 Termination of Reference

[1] Authority of Court to Terminate Reference

The duration of the master's reference is governed by the order of appointment; n1 however, the order of appointment need not state in express terms when or how the reference terminates. Additionally, Rule 53 does not specify a procedure for termination. Therefore, when the order of appointment does not provide for termination, the appointing court has the power to order the date and manner of the termination. n2 Essentially, the court may terminate the reference by making an amendment to the order of appointment which specifies the time and manner it will terminate. n3 A termination may also be initiated by the master in the master's report or recommendation to the court. n4

The underlying principle of termination is that the appointing court has inherent power to utilize the services of a master for administration of justice for only as long as deemed essential by the court. n5 A reference to a master to prepare an order, report, or recommendation on particular issues does not deprive the district court of the essential attributes of judicial power, based on a carefully defined delegation of authority, including the power of the court to terminate the master's authority. n6

[2] Termination of Reference on Death or Disability of Master

Rule 53 does not expressly provide for the situation in which the master dies or becomes disabled before the completion of the master's duties and the preparation of the master's order, report, or recommendation. n1 Consequently, the effect of death or disability is controlled by the terms, if any, that are specified in the order of appointment. n2 If the order of appointment does not specify the effect of death or disability, the court has the power to terminate or to amend the terms of the order of appointment to specify how the reference will continue. n3 How the appointing court will handle the effect of the master's death or disability on the action typically depends on three factors: the types of powers and obligations given to the master under the order of reference; the stage of the interrupted proceedings before the master; and whether witness credibility was a significant factor in the reference. For example, if the master's duty was merely to take and report evidence, and testimonial evidence has been taken but no formal report has been made at the time of death, the court may adopt procedures to obtain a record of the evidence, such as, having the stenographic reporter certify the transcript to the court. Alternatively, when the master dies or becomes disabled before all the evidence is taken the court may appoint a substitute master to complete the task of taking and reporting the evidence. n4

If the order of appointment provides that the master is ordered to make findings for use as evidence in a jury action or when the master is required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in a bench trial, and the master dies or is disabled after completing the hearings but before making those findings, the court may grant a new trial if the case involves disputed questions of fact that depend on credibility determinations. n5 If a case does not involve controverted evidence, however, the judge may adopt a substitute master's report even when the order appointing a substitute master is objected to by a party--the report is merely advisory, the court is not bound by legal conclusions, and the parties should not be required to bear the increased expense of resubmitting the evidence. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesRemovals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(A) (order of appointment must state limitations on authority of master).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Connecticut Importing Co. v. Frankfort Distilleries, 42 F. Supp. 225, 228 (D. Conn. 1940) (power of district court to appoint and withdraw appointment of master to report to the court exists independent of Rule 53, which has purpose of outlining procedure to be followed when power is exercised).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(4) (order of appointment may be amended at any time after notice to the parties, and an opportunity to be heard); Palmigiano v. Di Prete, 700 F. Supp. 1180, 1188-1189 (D.R.I. 1988) (termination by order of court after parties had opportunity to be heard); see also 21.04[4].

(n4)Footnote 4. *Celestineo v. Singletary, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21408, *46, 288 (M.D. Fla. 1992) (termination by recommendation of master and order of appointing court).

(n5)Footnote 5. United States v. Connecticut, 931 F. Supp. 974, 976 (D. Conn. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. U.S. v. Conservation Chemical Co., 106 F.R.D. 210, 213 (W.D. Mo. 1985) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Trico Products Corp. v. E. A. Laboratories, Inc., 54 F. Supp. 782, 784 (E.D.N.Y. 1944) .

(n8)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2), (c).

(n9)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(4).

(n10)Footnote 4. D.M.W. Contracting Co. v. Stolz, 158 F.2d 405, 407 (D.C. Cir. 1946) (when master died after taking testimony and before making findings, appointing court did not err in directing successor auditor to base his findings and report on evidence taken by predecessor).

(n11)Footnote 5. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Williams, 159 F.2d 1011, 1013 (5th Cir. 1947) (because master's findings are given weight by jury, only master who hears evidence should make findings unless parties consent).

(n12)Footnote 6. O'Grady v. Chautauqua Builders' Supply, 33 F.2d 957, 958 (W.D.N.Y. 1929) (court heard case on record made before initial master).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
B. MASTER'S AUTHORITY AND PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 21.28through 21.39

[Reserved]

§§ 21.28[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
C. APPEAL FROM DISTRICT COURT DECISION REGARDING MASTER OR REFERENCE

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.40

§ 21.40 Appeal of Order of Appointment of Mastern*

[1] Appealability of Order of Appointment

In general, a district court's order appointing a special master is considered to be interlocutory and not subject to immediate appellate review. n1 The primary reason that appointment orders are deemed to be interlocutory is that when a district court reviews the report in a non-jury action, that review must be substantive and may render any error in the appointment order harmless. n2 Because an appointment of a special master is not an order that is immediately appealable, it may be reviewed in two ways: on appeal after final judgment, as discussed in this section, or through the extraordinary writ of mandamus filed in the appropriate court of appeals immediately after the appointment is made. n3 Because of the special standards affecting review by way of mandamus, n4 the general rule is that even if there has been a previous denial of a writ of mandamus, the denial does not preclude a successful appeal of the appointment, n5 provided that a timely objection was made in the district court. n6

[2] Timely Objection Required to Preserve Right to Appeal

An appointment of a special master may be reviewed on appeal after final judgment provided that the party raised an objection to the appointment in the district court in a timely manner. Thus, an objection to an order of appointment may not be made for the first time on appeal, and if a party fails to make a timely objection to the appointing court, either at or before the time of the appointment or promptly thereafter, or fails to move to have the appointment revoked, the objection is waived. n1 Absent some form of timely objection to the appointment of a special master or to a particular person's appointment as special master, a party's participation in a proceeding before the master constitutes a waiver of the objection. n2 When the court on its own initiative makes an order of appointment and does not give notice to a party, however, the party who considers that he or she has been aggrieved by the appointment is given considerable latitude as to the form and timeliness of a subsequent objection. n3

[3] Standard of Review

After judgment, courts deem the issue of the appropriateness of an appointment to a special master as a question of law subject to plenary review, otherwise known as de novo review. n1 Most appellate courts, nonetheless, review the propriety of an order of appointment to a particular special master for abuse of discretion. n2 Note, however, that a court of appeals reviews findings of fact by district court under the clearly erroneous standard, including factual findings of a special master, to the extent they were adopted by the district court. n3

[4] District Court's Erroneous Reference to Master Rarely Results in Reversal

Generally, if an appellate court makes an erroneous determination that the district court erred when it determined that an "exceptional condition" required the appointment under Rule 53, the error will not result in a reversal of a final judgment. An erroneous finding of the exceptional condition will not result in a reversible error because the district court's exercise of discretion in appointing a special master is given substantial deference n1 and because any error made by the master may be cured by the district court judge's rigorous substantive review of the master's findings. n2 If an erroneous determination is found to have resulted in an inadequately reviewed and therefore final adjudication by a master, however, the resulting judgment must be reversed because the master is not a Article III adjudicator. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesJudicial Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.53[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Cordoza v. Pac. States Steel Corp., 320 F.3d 989, 996 (9th Cir. 2003) (master may appeal order of appointing court regarding compensation only if order constitutes a "final judgment," which completely disposes of claim); see 28 U.S.C. § 1291; see also Ch. 27, General Principles of Appeal.

(n3)Footnote 2. Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 696 (1st Cir. 1992) (improper reference harmless); Sick v. City of Buffalo, N.Y., 574 F.2d 689, 693-694 (2d Cir. 1978) (no judgment to be appealed until after court considers magistrate judge's determinations and enters its own order).

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 21.43.

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 21.43.

(n6)Footnote 5. United States v. Shirley, 884 F.2d 1130, 1135 (9th Cir. 1989) (because different bases and standards of review apply, denial of mandamus does not preclude appeal); Key v. Wise, 629 F.2d 1049, 1055 (5th Cir. 1980) (because different standards of review apply, denial of mandamus does not preclude appeal).

(n7)Footnote 6. See [2], below.

(n8)Footnote 1. See Fajardo Shopping Ctr. of P.R., Inc. v. Sun Alliance Ins. Co., 167 F.3d 1, 5-6 (1st Cir. 1999) (to contest propriety of reference to master under Rule 53, party must move trial court for revocation of reference, and inaction in this regard is tantamount to acquiescence and reference may not be challenged later on appeal).

(n9)Footnote 2. Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 695-696 (1st Cir. 1992) (waiver of objection to reference to master for discovery not waiver of subsequent reference of entire case to same master); Constant v. Advanced Micro-Devices, Inc., 848 F.2d 1560, 1566-1567 (Fed. Cir. 1988) (waiver of objection when it was untimely).

(n10)Footnote 3. Burlington N. R.R. Co. v. Dept. of Revenue of Wash., 934 F.2d 1064, 1069-1071 (9th Cir. 1991) , aff'd on other grounds, 23 F.3d 239 (1994) (objection filed 13 days after court's sua sponte reference was not untimely when reference was entered without prior notice.

(n11)Footnote 1. Gottlieb v. Barry, 43 F.3d 474, 486 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 2. McCormick v. W. Ky. Navigation, Inc., 993 F.2d 568, 569-570 (6th Cir. 1993) (decision to refer matter to master is reviewed under abuse of discretion standard).

(n13)Footnote 3. Berger v. Iron Workers Reinforced Rodmen, Local 201, 170 F.3d 1111, 1119 (D.C. Cir. 1999) ; see § 21.42.

(n14)Footnote 1. Rios v. Enterprise Asso. Steamfitters Local Union 638 of U.A., 860 F.2d 1168, 1173-1174 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n15)Footnote 2. Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 696 (1st Cir. 1992) (master's error rendered harmless by district court's review).

(n16)Footnote 3. See Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 696 (1st Cir. 1992) (reference made in violation of U.S. Constitution, Article III and Rule 53 was not harmless).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
C. APPEAL FROM DISTRICT COURT DECISION REGARDING MASTER OR REFERENCE

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.41

§ 21.41 Appeal of Trial Court Decisions Regarding Master's Order, Report, or Recommendationn*

Once the appointing court has entered judgment after reviewing the master's order, report, or recommendation, n1 a party may appeal the action that the appointing court took on the master's order, report, or recommendation, provided that the party objected in the trial court. n2 Generally, the appellate court reviews that action for abuse of the trial court's discretion. n3 A court of appeals may reverse the appointing court's decision as an abuse of discretion if the appointing court's record shows that the trial court applied the incorrect standard for its own review of the master's order, report, or recommendation. n4 If the appointing court completely adopts or rejects the master's findings of fact, the findings become those of the trial court and are subject to appellate review under the clearly erroneous standard. n5 However, if the trial court is erroneous in accepting, rejecting, or modifying the master's order, report, or recommendation, the error is not subject to reversal if it is harmless. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesJudicial Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.53[5] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f); see 21.26[3], [4] (standard of review used by appointing court to review master's order, report, or recommendation).

(n3)Footnote 2. Schaefer Fan Co. v. J & D Mfg., Inc., 265 F.3d 1282, 1287-1289 (Fed. Cir. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Charter Oak Fire Ins. Co. v. Hedeen & Cos., 280 F.3d 730, 738 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Shafer v. Army & Air Force Exch. Serv., 277 F.3d 788, 790-791 (5th Cir. 2002) (when master submits report or recommendation, trial court must review factual record on which recommendation is based under standard prescribed by Rule 53(g)).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a); see Accusoft Corp. v. Palo, 237 F.3d 31, 39-40 (1st Cir. 2001) (complete adoption); Cook v. Niedert, 142 F.3d 1004, 1011 (7th Cir. 1998) (rejection).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 61; see Castillo v. Frank, 70 F.3d 382, 386 (5th Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
C. APPEAL FROM DISTRICT COURT DECISION REGARDING MASTER OR REFERENCE

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.42

§ 21.42 Appeal of District Court's Denial of Motion to Make Reference to Mastern*

If the district court refuses to appoint a special master, that denial is not a final order and is, therefore, not subject to appeal until after the entry of final judgment. n1 Because the parties do not have a right to a special master, n2 a refusal does not necessarily constitute error, and the court of appeals will review the denial for abuse of discretion. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersReferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.53[6] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Kearns v. Shillinger, 823 F.2d 399, 400-401 (10th Cir. 1987) (refusal to appoint master is not final judgment or collateral order permitting immediate review).

(n3)Footnote 2. Torrisi v. Tucson Elec. Power Co., 8 F.3d 1370, 1376 (9th Cir. 1993) (court not required to appoint master to investigate propriety of settlement in securities class action before approval).

(n4)Footnote 3. Yeseta v. Baima, 837 F.2d 380, 387 (9th Cir. 1988) (district court did not abuse its discretion by denying motion to appoint master to determine extent of employee's interests as participant in pension plan).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
C. APPEAL FROM DISTRICT COURT DECISION REGARDING MASTER OR REFERENCE

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.43

§ 21.43 Writ of Mandamus to Appeal Matter Regarding Mastern*

A petition for writ of mandamus is an accepted method to challenge a district court's order referring matters to a special master. n1 Mandamus is considered by the courts as an extraordinary remedy, however, and may be used to overturn a district court's appointment of a master only if the appointment is shown to be an improper exercise of judicial power. Therefore, mandamus jurisdiction requires that (1) the court abused its discretion or clearly usurped its power in making the reference, and (2) a challenge following judgment will not adequately protect the interests at issue. n2 In other words, a petitioner is entitlement to a writ of mandamus only on a showing of two elements regarding the district court's order: (1) the order presents a special risk of significant irreparable harm and (2) the order is palpably erroneous. n3 It should be noted that in appropriate circumstances the circuit court may deem a premature or defective direct appeal as a petition for mandamus. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesJudicial ReviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersReferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 53.53[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Sierra Club v. Browner, 257 F.3d 444, 448 (5th Cir. 2001) (party may seek review of order of appointment to master by interlocutory appeal or writ of mandamus but is not required to do so; party may wait to have such order reviewed on direct appeal); United States v. Microsoft Corp., 147 F.3d 935, 954 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (mandamus was proper mode of challenge to trial court's reference to master to determine merits of permanent injunction).

(n3)Footnote 2. In re Fibreboard Corp., 893 F.2d 706, 707-708 (5th Cir. 1990) (mandamus will issue to remedy clear usurpation of power or abuse of discretion when no other adequate means of securing relief is available); see, e.g., McCullough v. Cosgrave, 309 U.S. 634, 634, 60 S. Ct. 703, 84 L. Ed. 992 (1940) (mandamus granted).

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Pearson, 990 F.2d 653, 657 (1st Cir. 1993) (palpably erroneous refers to situation in which claimed error is plain as matter of law and is also substantially prejudicial as matter of fact).

(n5)Footnote 4. Hartland v. Alaska Airlines, 544 F.2d 992, 1001 (9th Cir. 1976) (rather than decide if a reference order was appealable, court treated it as writ of mandamus).

166 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART I. MASTERS
C. APPEAL FROM DISTRICT COURT DECISION REGARDING MASTER OR REFERENCE

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 21.44through 21.59

[Reserved]

§§ 21.44[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
A. STRUCTURE OF MAGISTRATE JUDGE SYSTEM

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.60

§ 21.60 Magistrate Judge Systemn*

[1] Functions of Magistrate Judges

Under the Federal Magistrates Act, the jurisdiction of magistrate judges falls into four broad categories of proceedings:

1. Initial proceedings in criminal cases. n1

2. Trial of criminal misdemeanors. n2

3. References by judges of pretrial matters and other civil proceedings, including references as a special master. n3

4. Trial of civil cases. n4 In addition to handling these four specific categories of judicial duties, a magistrate judge may be delegated by the district court any additional duties as are not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States. n5

Thus, the Act contemplates that all magistrate judges may perform the duties which had formerly been exercised by United States commissioners but that the assignment of all other duties is left to the discretion of each district court to determine based on local court needs and preferences. n6

The specific duties assigned to a magistrate judge are generally set forth in the local rules of each district court and in court orders. The local rules are also extremely important in the control of the procedures of operation for magistrate judge proceedings and trials. For example, in some circuits, local rules guide litigants in the filing of Rule 72(b) objections n7 and require parties to specify the basis of their objections. n8

[2] Purpose of Referral to Magistrate Judge

A magistrate judge is a subordinate judicial officer of the district court. The judges of each district court appoint that district's magistrate judges n1 and may remove a magistrate judge for specified cause. n2 The court also determines by local rule the duties to be assigned to magistrate judges and the manner of allocating work among magistrate judges. n3 The number and location of magistrate judges to be appointed in each district is determined by the Judicial Conference of the United States. n4

The primary purpose of references to magistrate judges is to relieve the district courts' increasing burden in the number of civil cases and thus improve access to the courts for all persons. However, while Congress wanted to increase judicial efficiency, it also wanted to keep intact a litigant's right to a trial by an Article III district Judge. That is why a magistrate judge is not given the jurisdiction to hear and decide an entire trial unless consent is obtained from all parties. n5 Similarly, when a reference is made to a magistrate judge to determine civil pretrial matters or act as a special master, the district court judge retains supervision over the magistrate judge, and the rules give the parties the opportunity to obtain de novo review of the magistrate judge's recommended decision, provided they file objections within the specified time limit. n5.1 Magistrate judges thus perform a crucial function within the district courts, and it has been said that the jurisdiction that a magistrate judge exercises is that of the district court itself, delegated to the magistrate judge by the judges of the court under governing statutory authority and local rules of court. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(a)(1), (b)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 636(a)(3); see 18 U.S.C. §§ 3401, 3402.

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1), (2).

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c).

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(3).

(n7)Footnote 6. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(4); see 28 U.S.C. § 636(b), (c) (magistrate must be "designated" by district court to perform judicial duties).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Miller v. Currie, 50 F.3d 373, 380 (6th Cir. 1995) (local rule required that objection identify the portions of the magistrate judge's recommendation to which objection is made and basis for objection); Sackall v. Heckler, 104 F.R.D. 401 (D.R.I. 1984) (local rule provided that party must file with clerk of court and serve on all parties, written objections specifically identifying portions of magistrate judge's proposed findings, recommendations or report to which objection is made and basis for such objection).

(n10)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 631(b)(5).

(n11)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 631(i).

(n12)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. §§ 636(b)(4), 636(c)(2).

(n13)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 631(a), 633.

(n14)Footnote 5. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 785 (2003) .

(n15)Footnote 5.1. McCarthy v. Manson, 554 F. Supp. 1275, 1285 (D. Conn. 1982) , aff'd on other grounds, 714 F.2d 234 (2d Cir. 1983) ; see Raccoon Recovery, LLC v. Navoi Mining & Metallurgical Kombinat, 244 F. Supp. 2d 1130, 1143-1144 (D. Colo. 2002) .

(n16)Footnote 6. Collins v. Foreman, 729 F.2d 108, 115-119 (2d Cir. 1984) (28 U.S.C. § 636(c) does not violate Constitution Article III because consent requirement prevents wholesale delegation of judicial power to individuals who are not Article III judges).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
A. STRUCTURE OF MAGISTRATE JUDGE SYSTEM

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.61

§ 21.61 Qualification of Magistrate Judgen*

The Federal Magistrates Act provides for both full and part-time magistrate judges, with a preference for full-time magistrate judges whenever possible. If there is insufficient judicial activity to make a full-time magistrate judge position "feasible or desirable," the Act permits the Judicial conference to establish part-time magistrate judge positions. n1 To receive an appointment as a full-time magistrate judge under the Act, a person must have been a member in good standing for at least five years of the bar of the highest court of a state, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands of the United States; however, the person need not be a member of the bar of the jurisdiction in which the magistrate judge will serve. n2 The candidate must also be competent to perform the duties of a magistrate judge, n3 be unrelated to any of the judges of the district, n4 and be selected pursuant to the standards of the Judicial Conference. n5 In general, a candidate for a part-time magistracy must meet the same qualification standards as those for full-time magistrate judges. An individual who does not meet the bar membership requirements, however, may be appointed and serve as a part-time magistrate judge if the appointing court and the conference find that no qualified individual who is a member of the bar is available to serve at a specific location. n6 The part-time magistrate judge who does not meet the bar membership requirements may not conduct a trial by consent of the parties. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 631(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 631(b)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 631(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 631(b)(4).

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 631(b)(5).

(n7)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 631(b)(1).

(n8)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
A. STRUCTURE OF MAGISTRATE JUDGE SYSTEM

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.62

§ 21.62 Controlling Statutes and Rulesn*

The same statutes and rules that govern district court judges also govern the United States magistrate judges. Thus, in civil cases, the practice and procedure for the trial of cases before magistrate judges n1 must conform to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, n1.1 as promulgated by the United States Supreme Court under the Rules Enabling Act. n1.2 Similarly, the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure are applicable generally to criminal proceedings before both magistrate judges and district court judges because the terms "magistrate judge" and "federal magistrate judge," as used in the criminal rules, include a judge. n1.3 The Federal Rules of Evidence, which are formally entitled the "Rules of Evidence for United States Courts and Magistrates," also apply with equal force to proceedings before magistrate judges and judges. n2 The evidence rules, however, do not apply to certain types of proceedings that are conducted primarily by magistrate judges, including preliminary examinations, bail hearings, and the issuance of warrants. n3 Finally, the federal rules governing habeas corpus cases and those governing proceedings attacking federal sentences n4 also apply to both judges and magistrate judges. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 631 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 1.1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(d).

(n4)Footnote 1.2. See 28 U.S.C. § 2072 (Supreme Court prescribes rules of practice, procedure, and evidence for lower federal courts through Federal Rules of Civil Procedure).

(n5)Footnote 1.3. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 54(c).

(n6)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid. 1101(a) (terms "court" and "judge" include magistrate judges).

(n7)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Evid. 1101(d)(3).

(n8)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 2254, 2255.

(n9)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b), Committee Note to 1983 Amendments (when master is hearing prisoner petitions, Rule 72(b) does not apply; rather, specific rules relating to proceedings under Sections 2254 and 2255 of Title 28 are applicable); see also R. Gov. Sec. 2254 Cases in U.S. Dist. Cts. 10.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
A. STRUCTURE OF MAGISTRATE JUDGE SYSTEM

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.63

§ 21.63 Magistrate Judge Distinguished from Special Mastern*

A magistrate judge is distinguished from a special master in that a magistrate judge is a full or part time judicial officer of the court who has duties specified by statute and rules, n1 while a special master is generally appointed by the court pursuant to Rule 53 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to perform specific duties requiring specific expertise based on the subject of the case. n2 The roles are not mutually exclusive, and a district court may appoint a federal magistrate judge to serve as a special master, with or without the consent of the parties. n3

When serving as a special master, a magistrate judge may exercise those powers provided for in Rule 53, as well as any relevant powers set out in the Magistrate's Act. With the consent of the parties, the requirement of unusual complexity as a prerequisite for appointment of a special master may be waived when a magistrate judge is appointed. n4 Furthermore, on consent of the parties, a magistrate judge acting as a master may enter binding findings of fact. n5

Review and objections to a report rendered by a magistrate judge acting as a special master are determined by Rule 53. n6 Generally, factual findings will be disturbed only if clearly erroneous. n7 Legal conclusions are subject to de novo review. n8 For a complete discussion of special masters, see Part I, Masters.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.24 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 636; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 72, 73.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a), (b), (e); see 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(2) states in part: A judge may designate a magistrate judge to serve as a special master in any civil case, on consent of the parties, without regard to the provisions of rule 53(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for the United States district courts.

(n6)Footnote 5. Pacemaker Diagnostic Clinic of Am., Inc. v. Instromedix, Inc., 725 F.2d 537, 546 (9th Cir. 1984) (magistrate judges may conduct civil trials and enter final judgments if parties consent).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f)(3)(A); Southern Natural Gas Co. v. Land, Cullman County, 197 F.3d 1368, 1375 (11th Cir. 1999) (when district court determines that master's factual findings are inadequate or clearly erroneous, court may use its informed discretion to "modify" report on basis of record made before master, or it may reject it in whole or in part or may receive further evidence or may recommit it with instructions).

(n9)Footnote 8. Burlington N. R.R. v. Dept. of Rev. of Wash., 934 F.2d 1064, 1072 (9th Cir. 1991) .

171 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
A. STRUCTURE OF MAGISTRATE JUDGE SYSTEM

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 21.64through 21.79

[Reserved]

§§ 21.64[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.80

§ 21.80 Authority to Hear Pretrial Mattersn*

[1] Origination of Authority

Rule 72 governs the civil pretrial functions of United States magistrate judges. It sets forth the procedure for a magistrate judge to carry out the Magistrates Act's grant of authority, n1 and, like the statute, it gives a considerable amount of discretion to the individual districts in formulating rules of local practice. n2 Rule 72 is divided into two subsections. Subdivision (a) concerns "nondispositive matters," which include discovery motions and other requests for relief that will not result in the grant of relief or dismissal of a claim or defense in the action. n3 Subdivision (b) concerns "dispositive" matters, which include certain prisoner petitions challenging the conditions of confinement. n4 Rule 72 provides procedural instructions in matters before a magistrate judge to whom a pretrial matter is referred. n5 This phrase emphasizes the fact that there is no inherent civil pretrial jurisdiction of the magistrate judges. The Magistrates Act simply provides for the delegation of duties in the discretion of the district judge, which is known as a referral; local rules in almost all districts now exist to govern referral procedures. n6

[2] Nature of Pretrial Matters

The Magistrates Act authorizes a district judge to designate a magistrate judge to hear pretrial matters "pending before the court"; n1 therefore, even though they are referred to as "pretrial" matters, for purposes of Rule 72, such matters are not limited to proceedings that take place temporally before trial. n2 Thus, matters that arose in the preliminary stages of a case may be referred to a magistrate judge during trial or even after judgment. n3 In addition to matters arising early in the case, magistrate judges may be assigned to hear proceedings, such as, those involving execution of judgments, n4 that may include matters previously heard and decided by a district judge. n5

A magistrate judge's determination of pretrial matters must be distinguished from a magistrate judge's "trial by consent" under Section 636(c)(1) and Rule 73. n6 The Federal Magistrate Act of 1979 expanded the power of full-time magistrate judges and certain part-time magistrate judges by authorizing them to conduct any or all of the proceedings in a jury or nonjury civil matter and even to order the entry of judgment in the case, provided that such magistrate judges have been specially designated to do so by the district court, and provided they are acting with the consent of the parties. n7 While the nonconsensual determination of a dispositive pretrial motion is merely a recommendation subject to district court review, a determination by a magistrate judge in a trial by consent is treated as a final judgment of the district court itself and is appealable in the same manner as an appeal from any other judgment of a district court. n8 For a discussion of referral of an entire trial to a magistrate judge, see Subpart C, Magistrate Judge's Trial of Civil Case by Consent of Parties. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72, Advisory Committee Note.

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 21.82.

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 21.83.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. R.T. Vanderbilt Co. v. Babbitt, 113 F.3d 1061, 1065 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A).

(n9)Footnote 2. Bergeson v. Dilworth, 749 F. Supp. 1555, 1562 n.3 (D. Kan. 1990) ("pretrial" is not defined with respect to time of trial); Robinson v. Eng, 148 F.R.D. 635, 641 n.13 (D. Neb. 1993) (magistrate judge has power to hear and determine any pretrial matter pending before court at any stage of litigation).

(n10)Footnote 3. Merritt v. International Bhd. of Boilermakers, 649 F.2d 1013, 1016 (5th Cir. 1981) (question of discovery expenses was still pending after entry of judgment); Robinson v. Eng, 148 F.R.D. 635, 641 (D. Neb. 1993) (fact that determination of motions took place following dismissal of action did not transform them into posttrial matters).

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 69(a).

(n12)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(3).

(n13)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n14)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1); see Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 781 (2003) .

(n15)Footnote 8. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 783 (2003) .

(n16)Footnote 9. See § 21.100 et seq.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.81

§ 21.81 Distinction Between Nondispositive and Dispositive Mattersn*

Rule 72 controls the procedure for a magistrate judge to hear two types of pretrial matters: nondispositive n1 and dispositive. n2 A nondispositive matter is one that does not dispose of a claim or defense of a party. n3 Nondispositive matters may be determined by a magistrate judge with review by the district judge on timely objection by a party. n4 A dispositive matter is one that terminates a claim or defense. A magistrate judge assigned to hear a pretrial dispositive matter must enter a recommended disposition, which may include proposed findings of fact. n5

Thus, when Congress gave the Magistrates Act its current format, it intended two broad categories of disputes for magistrate judge authority: dispositive disputes that have supervening importance for the entirety of the lawsuit and those disputes that involve an issue that will not affect the ultimate result of the litigation. When a magistrate judge determines a dispositive issue, the magistrate judge must submit for the district judge's approval proposed findings of fact and law. On the other hand, the magistrate judge may rule directly on nondispositive pretrial matters, and, on such matters, the district judge may reconsider the magistrate judge's decision only where it has been shown that the magistrate judge's order is clearly erroneous or contrary to law. n6 In the category of dispositive matters are all motions which may directly terminate the action, or a claim or defense in an action, affect the issuance of an injunction, or have another conclusive consequence. Congress undertook to list the dispositive motions and authorized a final decision by a magistrate judge of anything else, deemed for magistrate judge adjudication purposes, as non-dispositive. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.02[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Delta Dental v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 942 F. Supp. 740, 743-746 (D.R.I. 1996) (order remanding action to state court is nondispositive because it merely answers question whether there is basis for removal of action to federal court; parties are left to litigate merits of case in state court); DeCastro v. AWACS, Inc., 940 F. Supp. 692, 694-695 (D.N.J. 1996) (remand order is nondispositive because it merely transfers action to different forum but does not reach merits or resolve parties' substantive rights).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b).

(n7)Footnote 6. United States v. Brown, 79 F.3d 1499, 1503-1504 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A); see § 21.83[1][a].

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.82

§ 21.82 Adjudication By Magistrate Judge of Nondispositive Pretrial Mattersn*

[1] Matters Deemed Nondispositive

[a] In General

A nondispositive matter is one that does not entirely dispose of a claim or defense of a party. n1 Nondispositive matters are stated in the Magistrates Act in exclusionary terms. n2 The Act provides that a magistrate judge has authority to hear and determine any pretrial motion except for the following nonexclusive list of motions in civil actions, which are dispositive in nature: motions for injunctive relief; motions for judgment on the pleadings; motions for summary judgment; motions to dismiss or permit maintenance of a class action; motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted; and motions to involuntarily dismiss an action. n3 Courts have held that the list is not exhaustive. Therefore, other motions are deemed by the courts as dispositive when, under the circumstances, the motion is analogous to any of the dispositive motions listed in the statute. n4 The significance of a nondispositive matter is that the magistrate judge may make a final, determination regarding the matter. Unless a party makes a formal objection to the order within the statutory time period, n4.1 the objection is waived and the matter may not be raised on appeal. n4.2

[b] Particular Nondispositive Matters

The following types of motions have been considered nondispositive:

1. A motion to disqualify a magistrate judge is a nondispositive pretrial matter that may be determined by the magistrate judge who is the subject of the motion. n5 Standards for disqualification of magistrate judges are the same as those for disqualifying other federal judges, including district judges, circuit judges, or justices of the Supreme Court. n6

2. Motions regarding pretrial conferences. Under Rule 16(a), n7 the "court" may control and preside over pretrial conferences; that term includes magistrate judges, and they are frequently assigned this responsibility by local rule, standing order, order in a case, or local practice. n8 Similarly, magistrate judges may be assigned to conduct settlement or status conferences, which in most cases are held in connection with a pretrial conference. n9

3. Discovery is a nondispositive pretrial matter that the district court may refer for disposition to a magistrate judge. n10 Postjudgment discovery, such as, discovery in collection proceedings, may also be referred to a magistrate judge as nondispositive. n11 However, if there is a motion for imposition of a sanction that would terminate a party's claim or defense, it is dispositive and may not be heard by the magistrate judge.

4. Motions to amend. A motion for leave to amend the pleadings is a nondispositive matter that may be determined by a magistrate judge, n12 even if the amendment would destroy federal removal jurisdiction and require remand to state court. n13 If denial of a motion to amend would preclude a claim, however, the decision is deemed dispositive in nature. n14

5. Motions involving parties and claims. Actions of magistrate judges to change the number of parties or alter the claims in a case have often been held nondispositive; for example, appointment of a receiver under Rule 69, n15 impleader of a third party defendant under Rule 14, n16 and intervention under Rule 24, when granted, n17 have all been held nondispositive. An order compelling arbitration has also been held to be a nondispositive order, n18 as has been a motion to disqualify counsel. n19 On the other hand, a denial of intervention is a dispositive motion. n20

[2] Magistrate Judge's Decision on Nondispositive Matters

When a district court refers to a magistrate judge a pretrial matter that is not dispositive of a claim or defense of a party, the magistrate judge must hear and determine the matter promptly. The magistrate judge may conduct such proceedings as are required to determine the matter and, when appropriate, may enter into the record a written order setting forth the disposition of the matter. n1 A party may serve and file objections to the order within 14 days after being served with a copy; n2 otherwise, the party is considered to have waived the objection. n3 The district judge to whom the case is assigned must consider such objections and modify or set aside any portion of the magistrate judge's order that the district court finds to be clearly erroneous or contrary to law. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.02[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Delta Dental v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 942 F. Supp. 740, 743-746 (D.R.I. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Maisonville v. F2 Am., Inc., 902 F.2d 746, 747-748 (9th Cir. 1990) (any motion not listed nor analogous to motions listed in Act § 636(b)(1)(A) falls within nondispositive group of matters that may be determined by magistrate judge; therefore Rule 11 sanction imposed by magistrate judge for frivolous motion was nondispositive under circumstances).

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A); see § 21.83.

(n5)Footnote 4. Massey v. City of Ferndale, 7 F.3d 506, 509-510 (6th Cir. 1993) (analogous circumstances make motions dispositive; post-dismissal motion for sanctions, fees, and costs is dispositive of claim and therefore not to be determined by magistrate judge).

(n6)Footnote 4.1. See § 21.89.

(n7)Footnote 4.2. Maynard v. Bd. of Regents, 342 F.3d 1281, 1286 (11th Cir. 2003) (construing former time periods).

(n8)Footnote 5. Laxalt v. McClatchy, 602 F. Supp. 214, 217 (D. Nev. 1985) (nondispositive motion to disqualify magistrate judge was properly denied by same magistrate judge).

(n9)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 455.

(n10)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a).

(n11)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Flaherty v. Dayton Elec. Mfg. Co., 109 F.R.D. 617, 618-619 (D. Mass. 1986) (magistrate judge ordered plaintiff's counsel to pay opposing counsel's expenses and attorneys' fees for being unprepared to participate at pretrial conference).

(n12)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Molokai Chamber of Commerce v. Kukui (Molokai), Inc., 161 F.R.D. 426, 427 (D. Haw. 1995) (at scheduling conference, magistrate judge set deadline for filing all motions).

(n13)Footnote 10. Maynard v. Bd. of Regents, 342 F.3d 1281, 1286 (11th Cir. 2003) (discovery orders at issue that were entered by magistrate judge were nondispositive orders); Thomas E. Hoar, Inc. v. Sara Lee Corp., 900 F.2d 522, 525 (2d Cir. 1990) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n14)Footnote 11. FDIC v. LeGrand, 43 F.3d 163, 167 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Merritt v. International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, 649 F.2d 1013, 1018 (5th Cir. 1981) (discovery issues are by definition pretrial matters; magistrate judge therefore had authority to assess attorney's fees under Rule 37).

(n15)Footnote 12. United States Dominator, Inc. v. Factory Ship Robert E. Resoff, 768 F.2d 1099, 1102 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n16)Footnote 13. Jacobsen v. Mintz, Levin, Cohn, Ferris, Glovsky & Popeo, P.C., 594 F. Supp. 583, 586 (D. Me. 1984) (motion to remand is not excepted under Magistrates Act § 636(b)(1)(A)); see Vogel v. U.S. Office Prods. Co., 56 F. Supp. 2d 859, 863-864 (W.D. Mich. 1999) (district court held that motion to remand case to state court from which it was removed was not dispositive in nature because it did not address substance of party's claims or defenses).

(n17)Footnote 14. Hunt Energy Corp. v. Crosby-Miss. Resources, Ltd., 732 F. Supp. 1378, 1389 (S.D. Miss. 1989) , aff'd on other grounds, 979 F.2d 1533 (5th Cir. 1992) (if denial of generally nondispositive motion to amend to assert counterclaim would forever bar recovery on counterclaim, motion is dispositive); HCC, Inc. v. R H & M Mach. Co., 39 F. Supp. 2d 317, 321 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n18)Footnote 15. Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc. v. Killop, 589 F. Supp. 390, 393 (E.D. Mich. 1984) ("additional duties" provision under 28 U.S.C. § 636 authorizes magistrate judge to appoint receiver).

(n19)Footnote 16. In re American Export Lines, Inc., 76 F.R.D. 210, 212 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) .

(n20)Footnote 17. Granito v. Sunn, 594 F. Supp. 410, 412-413 (D. Haw. 1984) .

(n21)Footnote 18. Herko v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 978 F. Supp. 141, 142 n.1 (W.D.N.Y. 1997) (order compelling arbitration is neither listed in, nor analogous to, matter listed in § 636(b)(1)(A)).

(n22)Footnote 19. Weeks Stevedoring Co., v. Raymond Int'l Builders, Inc., 174 F.R.D. 301, 303-304 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (court found magistrate judge's order denying plaintiff's motion to disqualify defendant's counsel nondispositive).

(n23)Footnote 20. United States v. New England Tel. Co., 530 F. Supp. 274, 275 (D.N.H. 1981) .

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); see § 21.87.

(n25)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n26)Footnote 3. Maynard v. Bd. of Regents, 342 F.3d 1281, 1286 (11th Cir. 2003) (construing former time periods); see § 21.89.

(n27)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); see § 21.90[1].

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.83

§ 21.83 n* Adjudication By Magistrate Judge of Dispositive Pretrial Matters

[1] Matters Deemed Dispositive

[a] Matters Dispositive Under Magistrates Act

The Magistrates Act states that the following motions are dispositive in nature: n1

1. Motions for injunctive relief. A motion for injunctive relief may not be determined with finality by a magistrate judge n2 but may be referred to a magistrate judge for hearing and proposed findings of fact and recommendations. n3

2. Motions for judgment on the pleadings. A magistrate judge may not enter a judgment on the pleadings, n4 but may submit proposed findings of fact and recommendations to the district judge. n5

3. Motions for summary judgment. A motion for summary judgment may be referred to a magistrate judge only for proposed findings and a recommendation for disposition. n6 A referral authorizing a magistrate judge to conduct discovery and pretrial proceedings has been construed to include authority to issue a recommendation on a motion for summary judgment. n7

4. Motions to dismiss or permit maintenance of a class action. Although class action motions may not be referred to a magistrate judge for final determination, such motions may be referred for a recommended disposition. n8

5. Motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted. n9 A magistrate judge may not dismiss for failure to state a claim but may hear a motion and submit proposed findings of fact and recommendations to the district judge. n10

6. Motions to involuntarily dismiss an action. A magistrate judge may not order involuntary dismissal of a case but may hear the motion and submit proposed findings of fact and recommendations to the district judge. n11

Courts have held that the above list is not exhaustive of dispositive motions, and other motions may be dispositive under the circumstances. n12

[b] Other Matters Dispositive Based on Circumstances

Courts have held that the list of six civil motions in the Magistrates Act is not an exhaustive list of all possible dispositive motions; other motions may be dispositive under the circumstances, n13 and a magistrate judge may not enter a dispositive order in circumstances analogous to those specified in the statute. n14 The following are some of the matters that may be deemed dispositive depending on the circumstances:

1. Jurisdictional matters. Motions to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(1), n15 for lack of jurisdiction over the person of a defendant under Rule 12(b)(2), n16 and for insufficiency of service of process or service of process under Rule 12(b)(4), n17 all are considered dispositive motions. They are deemed dispositive because, if granted, they are the practical end of a claim, even though they are not listed in the Magistrates Act. n18 A motion for realignment has also been held to be a dispositive motion if it would destroy diversity jurisdiction when granted. n19

2. Discovery sanctions that terminate claim. If imposition of a sanction would terminate a claim or the litigation, the sanction is considered dispositive and the magistrate judge may only recommend that it be imposed by the district court. n20 Furthermore, if monetary sanctions imposed by a magistrate judge are extremely high, they may be treated by the district court as recommendations only. n21

3. Grants of motions to amend pleading that would terminate a claim. If denial of a motion to amend would preclude a compulsory counterclaim, the decision is dispositive in nature, and the district judge could consider the denial as only a recommendation by the magistrate judge. n22

4. Motions to strike. Although a motion to strike is generally considered a non dispositive matter within the pretrial authority of a magistrate judge to determine, n23 it may be deemed dispositive under the circumstances if it has a dispositive effect on a claim or defense. n24

5. Voir dire. A magistrate judge may not conduct voir dire in a civil trial without the consent of all parties to the proceeding. n25 However, a magistrate judge may assist a district judge in conducting voir dire, provided that the district judge actually conducts the proceeding. n26

6. Matters of default. The court may conduct hearings, and a trial by jury if required by a statute of the United States, before entering judgment by default. n27 Some cases have classified the entry of a judgment by default as a dispositive motion, n28 for which the magistrate judge may only make recommendations for disposition under Rule 72(b). Judgments by default are final for purposes of Rule 60(b) set-aside motions, n29 for example, and could be considered as dispositive of a case as a successful Rule 56 summary judgment motion (cited in the Magistrates Act as a dispositive motion). n30

7. Motions for relief from judgment under Rule 60(b) n31 are dispositive, and magistrate judges may be referred these matters for proposed findings of fact and recommendations. n32 Because a Rule 60(b) motion may be referred to a magistrate judge for proposed findings of fact and recommendations, arguably a magistrate judge may also be referred a Rule 60(a) motion for findings and recommendations for correction of mistakes in a judgment, order, or other part of the record. n33

[2] Magistrate Judge's Decision on Dispositive Matters

When, without the consent of the parties, a district court assigns a magistrate judge to hear a pretrial matter dispositive of a claim or defense of a party, the magistrate judge must promptly conduct any proceedings necessary to determine the matter. A record shall be made of all evidentiary proceedings before the magistrate judge, and a record may be made of any other proceedings as the magistrate judge deems necessary. n1 After he or she makes a determination, the magistrate judge must enter into the record a recommendation for disposition of the matter, including proposed findings of fact when appropriate, and the clerk must then mail copies to all parties. n2 A party may serve and file specific written objections to the proposed findings and recommendations within 14 days after being served with a copy of the recommended disposition. Any other party may respond to those objections within 14 days after being served with a copy of the objections. n3 Then, the district court judge will determine de novo any part of the magistrate judge's disposition that is subject to the objections. n4

A magistrate judge's determination of a nonconsensual case-dispositive matter under Section 636(b)(1) n5 must be distinguished from a magistrate judge's trial by consent under Section 636(c)(1) n6 because the nonconsensual determination of a dispositive pretrial motion is merely a recommendation subject to district court review, and the district court is free to do as it sees fit with the magistrate judge's recommendations; on the other hand, a decision by a magistrate judge in a trial by consent referral is treated as a final judgment of the district court itself and is appealable in the same manner as an appeal from any other judgment of a district court. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesPretrial OrdersCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A); see United States v. Schultz, 565 F.3d 1353, 1357 (11th Cir. 2009) (all pretrial matters other than on list are nondispositive).

(n3)Footnote 2. Eddins v. Excelsior Indep. Sch. Dist., 88 F. Supp. 2d 683, 685 (E.D. Tex. 2000 (court referred matter only for recommendation of master); but see Touton, S.A. v. M.V. Rizcun Trader, 30 F. Supp. 2d 508, 510 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (district court found that order granting stay in judicial proceedings was not "injunctive relief" for purposes of Magistrates Act, and magistrate judge who granted a stay of proceedings pending arbitration was not granting relief in excess of a magistrate judge's statutory authority).

(n4)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b).

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A); Grant v. Astrue, 574 F. Supp. 2d 559, 561 (E.D.N.C. 2008) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); see, e.g., McPherson v. Astrue, 605 F. Supp. 2d 744, 747 (S.D. W. Va. 2008) .

(n7)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); see also Wesolek v. Canadair, Ltd., 838 F.2d 55, 56-57 (2d Cir. 1988) (motion to dismiss treated by magistrate judge as one for summary judgment).

(n8)Footnote 7. Applegate v. Dobrovir, Oakes & Gebhardt, 628 F. Supp. 378, 381 (D.D.C. 1985) (authority of magistrate judge to hear and make recommendations on dispositive summary judgment motions is element of pretrial proceedings).

(n9)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); see also Nelson v. Nationwide Mortgage Corp., 659 F. Supp. 611, 619-620 (D.D.C. 1987) (magistrate judge had authority to recommend disposition on motion for class certification even though such authority was not expressly stated in referral).

(n10)Footnote 9. See, e.g., United States v. Crisp, 190 F.R.D. 546, 549 (E.D. Cal. 1999) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b).

(n12)Footnote 11. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b).

(n13)Footnote 12. Woods v. Dahlberg, 894 F.2d 187, 187 (6th Cir. 1990) (denial of motion to proceed in forma pauperis is functional equivalent of involuntary dismissal and is beyond scope of magistrate judge's power to determine with finality); see [b], below.

(n14)Footnote 13. See United States v. Rivera Guerrero, 377 F.3d 1064, 1067-1068 (9th Cir. 2004) ; New York Chinese TV Programs, Inc. v. U.E. Enterprises, Inc., 996 F.2d 21 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Maisonville v. F2 Am., Inc., 902 F.2d 746, 747-748 (9th Cir. 1990) (circumstances make motions dispositive if circumstances are analogous to those actually listed).

(n16)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n17)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2).

(n18)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2).

(n19)Footnote 18. See In re U.S. Healthcare, 159 F.3d 142, 146 (3d Cir. 1998) (Third Circuit found that motion to remand to state court was dispositive because action would terminate in federal courts).

(n20)Footnote 19. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co. v. Thomas Solvent Co., 955 F.2d 1085, 1088 (6th Cir. 1992) (motion would have been determinative on diversity issue and therefore was considered dispositive).

(n21)Footnote 20. North Am. Watch Corp. v. Princess Ermine Jewels, 786 F.2d 1447, 1450-1451 (9th Cir. 1986) (district court adopted magistrate judge's report and recommendation to dismiss counterclaim as sanction for failure to comply with discovery order).

(n22)Footnote 21. Litton Sys. Inc. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 90 F.R.D. 410, 420-421 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) .

(n23)Footnote 22. Hunt Energy Corp. v. Crosby-Miss. Resources, Ltd., 732 F. Supp. 1378, 1389 (S.D. Miss. 1989) , aff'd on other grounds, 979 F.2d 1533 (5th Cir. 1992) (denial of generally nondispositive motion to amend to assert counterclaim would forever bar recovery on counterclaim, and court could treat as dispositive matter).

(n24)Footnote 23. Brace v. IBM, 953 F. Supp. 561, 563 (D. Vt. 1997) .

(n25)Footnote 24. United States v. Davis, 794 F. Supp. 67, 68 (D.R.I. 1992) (when magistrate judge issued order striking defenses, district court treated matter as dispositive, and conducted de novo review).

(n26)Footnote 25. Stockler v. Garratt, 974 F.2d 730, 733 (6th Cir. 1992) (allowing magistrate judge to conduct voir dire over plaintiff's objection was reversible error); Olympia Hotels Corp. v. Johnson Wax Dev. Corp., 908 F.2d 1363, 1368-1369 (7th Cir. 1990) (parties may not be compelled without consent to allow magistrate judge to conduct vital stages of trial, including jury voir dire).

(n27)Footnote 26. United States v. Lee, 943 F.2d 366, 369 (4th Cir. 1991) .

(n28)Footnote 27. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 55.

(n29)Footnote 28. Conetta v. National Hair Care Ctrs., Inc., 182 F.R.D. 403, 405-406 (D.R.I. 1998) (magistrate judge's decision to vacate default judgment is dispositive and district court must conduct de novo review of decision).

(n30)Footnote 29. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n31)Footnote 30. Cf. Pauley v. United Operating Co., 606 F. Supp. 520, 524 (E.D. Mich. 1985) (magistrate judge made report and recommendation that district court grant default judgments against defendants).

(n32)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n33)Footnote 32. LeGear v. Thalacker, 46 F.3d 36, 37 (8th Cir. 1995) (district court may refer Rule 60(b) motion to magistrate judge); McLeod, Alexander, Powel & Apffel v. Quarles, 925 F.2d 853, 854 (5th Cir. 1991) (district court may refer Rule 60(b) motion to magistrate judge for evidentiary hearing and proposed findings of fact and recommendations).

(n34)Footnote 33. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(a).

(n35)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); see § 21.86[3].

(n36)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1) see § 21.88.

(n37)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2); see § 21.89.

(n38)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(3) see § 21.90[2].

(n39)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1).

(n40)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n41)Footnote 7. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 585-586, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 783 (2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.84

§ 21.84 Adjudication By Magistrate Judge of Prisoner Petitionsn*

[1] Applicability of Prisoner Provision

Under Rule 72(b) and the Magistrates Act, a court may order referral of a petition by a prisoner that challenges conditions of confinement under Section 636(b) of the Federal Magistrates Act. n1 When the court makes such a referral, the magistrate judge's decision is not a final disposition. The magistrate judge must enter a recommended disposition, which may include proposed findings of fact. n2 The magistrate judge's disposition is subject to de novo review by the district court. n3

As used in Rule 72(b) and Section 636(b) of the Magistrates Act, n4 the term "prisoner" is not limited to inmates actually in prison or jail. Parolees are also considered prisoners for purposes of the Act. n5 However, a plaintiff's status as a prisoner when a claim is filed does not, standing alone, authorize referral of the matter to a magistrate judge. The claim must also be related to conditions of confinement. n6 The term "conditions of confinement" for purposes of the Magistrates Act includes challenges to continuing prison conditions and to specific episodes of allegedly unconstitutional conduct. n7 The "conditions" must relate to the type of confinement and health, safety, or punishment matters. n8 It has been held that the term "confinement" includes pretrial detention, as well as sentence to penitentiary. n9

[2] Habeas Corpus Claims Not Covered by Act

Rule 72 does not apply to habeas corpus petitions. n1 These cases, and proceedings to vacate sentences imposed in the federal courts, are governed by special legislation and rules of procedure. n2 These statutes and rules allow a magistrate judge to hold hearings and submit proposed findings of fact and recommendations for disposition, n3 if permitted by local rule or court order. The result is that magistrate judges, if so permitted, may submit proposed findings and recommendations for all aspects of prisoner litigation, a primary aspect of cases filed in the district courts. n4

[3] In Forma Pauperis Petitions

A prisoner will typically file a "conditions of confinement" petition pro se and accompany the petition with another petition to proceed in forma pauperis. A district judge may refer an in forma pauperis petition to a magistrate judge. n1 A magistrate judge may enter an order granting a petition to proceed in forma pauperis, n2 but may not enter an order denying the petition unless the parties have consented to the referral. n3 Thus, if the parties did not consent to the referral and the magistrate judge decides that the petition should be denied, the magistrate judge must make a recommendation to the district judge for a final decision. n4 Furthermore, if a party files timely objections to the magistrate judge's report, de novo review of proposed findings and recommendations is required. n5 A magistrate judge does not have authority to conduct ex parte investigations when considering a petition to proceed in forma pauperis. n6

[4] Jury Trial Rights

If a party to a case challenging conditions of prisoner confinement demands a jury trial, the case may not be heard by a magistrate judge unless the parties consent. n1 However, if a prisoner petition contains conclusory allegations rather than discernible questions of fact, a magistrate judge may hold a hearing to investigate beyond the conclusory allegations and ascertain the legal basis for the claim despite a jury trial demand. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1); see § 21.88.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(3); United States v. Rivera Guerrero, 377 F.3d 1064, 1067-1068 (9th Cir. 2004)] .

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. Clark v. Poulton, 963 F.2d 1361, 1364-1365 (10th Cir. 1992) (parolee alleging that parole officer used excessive force).

(n7)Footnote 6. Roberts v. Manson, 876 F.2d 670, 672 (8th Cir. 1989) (claim not related to conditions of confinement and not proper referral for magistrate judge where prisoner filed claim against public officials alleging wrongful discharge from employment).

(n8)Footnote 7. McCarthy v. Bronson, 500 U.S. 136, 139, 111 S. Ct. 1737, 114 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1991) (definition of conditions of confinement included cases alleging isolated episodes of unconstitutional conduct as well as ongoing situations).

(n9)Footnote 8. Houghton v. Osborne, 834 F.2d 745, 749-750 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Clark v. Poulton, 963 F.2d 1361, 1365 (10th Cir. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 1. Cavanaugh v. Kincheloe, 877 F.2d 1443, 1449 (9th Cir. 1989) (Rule 72(b) not applicable to habeas corpus petitions filed under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2254, 2255 because such claims are governed by specific statutory rules).

(n12)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b), Advisory Committee Note to 1983 Amendments (when magistrate judge is hearing prisoner petitions, Rule 72(b) does not apply but, rather, specific rules relating to proceedings under Sections 2254 and 2255 of Title 28); see also R. Gov. Sec. 2254 Cases in U.S. Dist. Cts. 10; R. Gov. Sec. 2255 Proc. in U.S. Dist Cts. 10.

(n13)Footnote 3. See R. Gov. Sec. 2254 Cases in U.S. Dist. Cts. 10; R. Gov. Sec. 2255 Proc. in U.S. Dist Cts. 10; see also 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B) (judge may designate magistrate judge to conduct hearings, including evidentiary hearings and to submit to judge proposed findings of fact and recommendations for disposition by judge of court).

(n14)Footnote 4. McCarthy v. Bronson, 500 U.S. 136, 139-140, 111 S. Ct. 1737, 114 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1991) .

(n15)Footnote 1. Spears v. McCotter, 766 F.2d 179, 180-181 (5th Cir. 1985) (magistrate judge may be asked to investigate whether prisoner's motion to proceed in forma pauperis should be denied as frivolous where legal contentions lack arguable merit).

(n16)Footnote 2. Woods v. Dahlberg, 894 F.2d 187, 188 (6th Cir. 1990) (district judge may refer motion for pauper status to magistrate judge, and magistrate judge may enter order granting such motion).

(n17)Footnote 3. Tripati v. Rison, 847 F.2d 548, 548 (9th Cir. 1988) (because denial of motion to proceed in forma pauperis is essentially final judgment, magistrate judge may not enter judgment unless parties consent).

(n18)Footnote 4. Woods v. Dahlberg, 894 F.2d 187, 188 (6th Cir. 1990) (denial of motion to proceed in forma pauperis is equivalent of involuntary dismissal and outside of magistrate judge's authority; district judge may refer motion for pauper status to magistrate judge, who may grant status, but denial may only be recommended to district judge).

(n19)Footnote 5. Woods v. Dahlberg, 894 F.2d 187, 188 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n20)Footnote 6. Gentile v. Missouri Dept. of Corrections & Human Resources, 986 F.2d 214, 217 (8th Cir. 1993) (personal investigation of case is beyond scope of magistrate judge's function, including conducting interviews with witnesses).

(n21)Footnote 1. Lovelace v. Dall, 820 F.2d 223, 225-226 (7th Cir. 1987) (consent must be clear and unambiguous; consent form can constitute necessary consent); In re Wickline, 796 F.2d 1055, 1058 (8th Cir. 1986) (to allow jury trial before magistrate judge without consent is clearly inconsistent with Magistrates Act).

(n22)Footnote 2. Spears v. McCotter, 766 F.2d 179, 180 (5th Cir. 1985) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.85

§ 21.85 Referral of Matter By District Court to Magistrate Judgen*

[1] Discretion of Trial Court to Make Referral

Referral of a case to a magistrate judge is discretionary for the district court, and parties do not have a right to proceed before a magistrate judge. n1 A district court may make referrals to a magistrate judge as a matter of course, for example, by a district court general order, provided that the final authority to decide the matter referred is retained by the district court judge. n2 Unlike trials by consent conducted by a magistrate judge pursuant to Rule 73, n3 referral of pretrial matters to a magistrate judge under Rule 72 does not require the parties' consent. n4 If the parties have executed and filed a consent to a referral to a magistrate judge, Rule 72 does not apply, and the proceedings are governed by Rule 73. n5

[2] Form and Contents of Referral

The district court does not have to make a referral order in writing. n1 However, some courts have stated that written referrals are preferred. n2 The contents of the district judge's referral order may determine the scope of the magistrate judge's authority and the standard of review. n3

Referrals need not be strictly construed by the magistrate judge. For example, if a matter is referred to a magistrate judge for hearing and determination, the magistrate judge may instead decide to issue merely a report and recommendation if it appears that a dispositive order is called for. n4 However, the converse is not true: if a dispositive matter is referred for recommendation, the magistrate judge may not enter an order. n5

Procedural defects in a referral to a magistrate judge may be waived by failure to object; however, jurisdictional defects may not be waived. For example, when the district court made an ambiguous referral, it was procedurally defective and could be waived. n6 For further discussion of waiver of objections, see § 21.89[4].

[3] Effect of Referral

When the district court makes a referral of a nondispositive pretrial matter, the magistrate judge is authorized to enter a final order on that matter. n1 However, if the district court makes a referral of a dispositive pretrial matter, the magistrate judge is authorized only to enter proposed findings and a recommendation for disposition. n2 Unlike orders issued pursuant to Rule 72(a), a magistrate judge's decision entered under Rule 72(b) is not final but is merely a recommendation that assists the district judge in making a final decision. n3 For a discussion of the distinction between dispositive and nondispositive matters, see § 21.81.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersReferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Good v. Allain, 823 F.2d 64, 66 (5th Cir. 1987) (failure to assign magistrate judge to case did not infringe on party's right to equal protection).

(n3)Footnote 2. Mathews v. Weber, 423 U.S. 261, 270-271, 96 S. Ct. 549, 46 L. Ed. 2d 483 (1976) (district court general order required referral of all social security benefit cases for preliminary review by magistrate judge, but district judge retained ultimate decisionmaking authority over matters referred).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73.

(n5)Footnote 4. Jeffrey S. v. State Bd. of Educ., 896 F.2d 507, 511-512 (11th Cir. 1990) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); see also Collins v. Foreman, 729 F.2d 108, 116 (2d Cir. 1984) (parties' consent not necessary condition for references of prison conditions cases for proposed findings of fact and recommendation for disposition).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(a).

(n7)Footnote 1. Parker v. Mississippi State Dep't of Pub. Welfare, 811 F.2d 925, 927 n.4 (5th Cir. 1987) (cases were assigned to magistrate judge without orders of reference pursuant to controlling calendar implemented to reduce backlog of cases).

(n8)Footnote 2. Parker v. Mississippi State Dep't of Public Welfare, 811 F.2d 925, 928 n.7 (5th Cir. 1987) (best practice to have court orders of designation or reference in writing); Archie v. Christian, 808 F.2d 1132, 1137 (5th Cir. 1987) (order should specify statutory basis of referral).

(n9)Footnote 3. Delco Wire & Cable, Inc. v. Weinberger, 109 F.R.D. 680, 685 (E.D. Pa. 1986) (if referral so provides, district judge may refer nondispositive motions to magistrate judge for report and recommendation rather than final determination).

(n10)Footnote 4. Pauley v. United Operating Co., 606 F. Supp. 520, 522-523 (E.D. Mich. 1985) (after referral of party's violations of discovery orders, magistrate judge to recommend dismissal sanction rather than impose sanctions).

(n11)Footnote 5. Bennett v. General Caster Serv. of N. Gordon Co., 976 F.2d 995, 997 n.4 (6th Cir. 1992) (magistrate judge may not enter order dispositive of claim or defense unless parties consented).

(n12)Footnote 6. Gonzalez v. Rakkas, 846 F. Supp. 229, 233 n.9 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); see Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Gordon, 979 F.2d 11, 13-14 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b).

(n15)Footnote 3. Brown v. Wesley's Quaker Maid, Inc., 771 F.2d 952, 954 (6th Cir. 1985) (magistrate judge may not rule directly on dispositive pretrial motions).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.86

§ 21.86 Proceedings Held by Magistrate Judge to Determine Referred Mattern*

[1] Motion Required for Disposition by Magistrate Judge

A magistrate judge may not enter an order disposing of an issue on its own initiative. Generally, the magistrate judge may not dispose of an issue that has not been presented by motion, either to the district court or to the magistrate judge, because sua sponte orders are prohibited, n1 and, ultimately, any order or recommendation by the magistrate judge is subject to the objection of the parties and some level of review by the district court. n2 The magistrate judge may set deadlines for filing pretrial motions, n3 in the same way that the district court sets pretrial deadlines under Rule 16. n4 A magistrate judge is not, however, required to hear oral argument on motions. Motions may be decided by the magistrate judge based on briefs alone. n5

[2] Authority for Subpoena

When the district court has made a referral to a magistrate judge to perform pretrial functions, the magistrate judge has the authority to enforce subpoenas, to the same extent that the district judge who ordered the referral has subpoena authority, n1 except that the magistrate judge does not have the power to enforce pretrial orders with the use of civil contempt. A magistrate judge has such power only in cases of trial by consent of the parties. However, a magistrate judge may resort to the enforcement mechanism of sanctions under any other statute, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, or the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. n2 If the magistrate judge's decision is to deny enforcement of an agency subpoena, however, that decision is a dispositive matter which is subject to de novo review by the district court. n3

[3] Conduct of Proceedings

A magistrate judge may hold proceedings to receive evidence and take the testimony of witnesses, and the Federal Rules of Evidence apply to the proceedings before the magistrate judge. n1 If a magistrate judge holds an evidentiary hearing on a pretrial dispositive matter or on a prisoner petition challenging conditions of confinement, a record must be made of the proceedings. n2 A magistrate judge may also hold hearings in habeas corpus proceedings, and a record must be made of those proceedings as well. n3 For a nonevidentiary proceeding, a magistrate judge has discretion to decide whether a record will be made of nonevidentiary pretrial dispositive matters and on prisoner petitions challenging conditions of confinement. If a party objects to a recommended disposition, the magistrate judge may also determine how much of the record will be transcribed, "unless the district judge otherwise directs." n4 A magistrate judge has discretion to determine whether the proceedings will be recorded by sound recording or by a court reporter. n5

A party objecting to a magistrate judge's recommendations for pretrial disposition or recommendations concerning a prisoner petition challenging conditions of confinement must arrange for a transcription of the record. n6 Although it is not absolutely necessary, it is extremely important for the objecting party to refer to the transcript when making objections; such references are helpful to the district court when reviewing the magistrate judge's order or recommendation, because the objecting party's argument is pinpointed by citation to the record and to case law. It is also helpful for the objection to contain an analysis as to why the magistrate judge's order or recommendation was in error. n7

[4] Contempt

If a person commits an act or conduct that constitutes contempt in a magistrate judge's proceedings regarding a pretrial matter, the magistrate judge has statutory authority to punish the act or conduct through criminal contempt. n1 A magistrate judge has summary criminal contempt authority to punish, by fine or imprisonment, the misbehavior of any person in the magistrate judge's presence that amounts to obstruction of the administration of justice. n2 Penalties that may be imposed by a magistrate judge for criminal contempt are limited by statute to those equivalent to a misdemeanor matter. n3 However, if the magistrate judge believes that a serious contempt has occurred that justifies more serious penalties, the magistrate judge may certify the matter to the district court for the imposition of punishment in the same manner and to the same extent as for a contempt committed before a district judge. n4

In a pretrial matter, the magistrate judge generally does not have the power to enforce orders with the use of civil contempt. A magistrate judge has civil contempt power only in cases of trial by consent of the parties. n5 In pretrial matters, the magistrate judge must certify the matter to the district court for consideration of whether to order civil contempt. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. United States v. Bonanno Org. Crime Family, 119 F.R.D. 625, 626 (E.D.N.Y. 1988) (magistrate judge's sua sponte order disposing of discovery matter was prematurely issued).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Vega v. State University of New York Board of Trustees, 67 F. Supp. 2d 324, 339-340 (S.D.N.Y. 1999.

(n4)Footnote 3. United States v. Bogard, 846 F.2d 563, 567 (9th Cir. 1988) (magistrate judge properly refused to hear motion made after original and extended deadlines had expired).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(2); see Ch. 18, Pretrial Conferences; Scheduling; Management.

(n6)Footnote 5. Laitram Mach., Inc. v. Carnitech A/S, 878 F. Supp. 65, 67-68 (E.D. La. 1995) (failure of magistrate judge to conduct oral argument was not denial of due process).

(n7)Footnote 1. In re San Juan DuPont Plaza Hotel Fire Litig., 117 F.R.D. 30, 32-33 (D.P.R. 1987) (magistrate judge had authority to enforce subpoena duces tecum issued by another court in multidistrict litigation).

(n8)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(4); see also [4], below.

(n9)Footnote 3. NLRB v. Frazier, 966 F.2d 812, 815-818 (3d Cir. 1992) (magistrate judge's decision to quash agency subpoena that compelled production of evidence and attendance of witnesses was dispositive).

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 1101.

(n11)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 3. See R. Gov. Sec. 2254 Cases in U.S. Dist. Cts. 8(b); R. Gov. Sec. 2255 Proc. in U.S. Dist Cts. 8(b); see also 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B) (judge may designate a magistrate judge to conduct hearings, including evidentiary hearings, and to submit to judge proposed findings of fact and recommendations for disposition by judge).

(n13)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2).

(n14)Footnote 5. Nettles v. Wainwright, 677 F.2d 404, 409 n.5 (5th Cir. 1982) (sound equipment may be used in all proceedings before magistrate judges).

(n15)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2).

(n16)Footnote 7. Johnson v. Zema Systems Corp., 170 F.3d 734, 739-740 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(1).

(n18)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(2).

(n19)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(5).

(n20)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(6).

(n21)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(4).

(n22)Footnote 6. See Proctor v. State Government of North Carolina, 830 F.2d 514, 516-522 (4th Cir. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.87

§ 21.87 Order Issued by Magistrate Judgen*

[1] Authority

A magistrate judge has authority to enter a final order with respect to any nondispositive pretrial matter. n1 Nondipositive matters in a civil case generally are pretrial motions other than motions for: injunctive relief, judgment on the pleadings, summary judgment, certification of class action, dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, and involuntarily dismissal of action. n1.1 Such an order is effective unless overturned by the district court. n2 If a local rule provides that a magistrate judge's ruling must be reviewed by a district judge, a magistrate judge's order does not become final until the district judge conducts the review. n3 A magistrate judge's order determining a pretrial nondispositive matter must be in writing. n4 An oral order read into the record meets this requirement. n5

[2] Orders of Remand

When a state court action has been removed to federal district court, case precedent is not uniform on the issue of whether a magistrate judge has authority to enter an order remanding the action. Some district courts have held that remand is a "nondispositive matter" that may be determined by a magistrate judge. n1 Other courts have ruled that remand is a dispositive matter and that remand may not be ordered by a magistrate judge, who is restricted to entering proposed findings and recommendations on a motion to remand. n2 Some circuit courts of appeals have declined to express an opinion on the issue. n3

[3] Orders Regarding Attorney's Fees and Costs

A magistrate judge may not enter an order awarding attorney's fees and costs for the entire action--motions for fees and costs are neither pretrial nor nondispositive. n1 A magistrate judge may award fees and costs in a nondispositve pretrial matter, for example, as a sanction for failure to comply with its discovery orders. n2 If a timely objection is filed to the magistrate judge's determination, the district court must review the matter de novo, because a motion for attorney's fees under Rule 72(b) is treated as if it were a dispositive pretrial matter. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); see Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Gordon, 979 F.2d 11, 13 (1st Cir. 1992) (magistrate judge had power to remand case for lack of jurisdiction and failure to object to order waived right to appellate review of issue on remand).

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Boskoff v. Yano, 217 F. Supp. 2d 1077, 1084 (D. Haw. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A); see also U.S.W. v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 828 F.2d 1001, 1005 (3d Cir. 1987) (pursuant to Magistrate's Act, order of magistrate judge is dispositive unless district court takes action to overturn it).

(n5)Footnote 3. Kimbrell v. Adia, S.A., 834 F. Supp. 1313, 1317 (D. Kan. 1993) (orders of magistrate judge should not be considered ineffective, advisory, or nonfinal simply because they may be reviewed by district court).

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n7)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a), Committee Note to 1982 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 1. Jacobsen v. Mintz, Levin, Cohn, Ferris, Glovsky & Popeo, P.C., 594 F. Supp. 583, 586 (D. Me. 1984) (magistrate judge's remand order could be overturned by district court under "non dispositive matter" standard as clearly erroneous or contrary to law); McDonough v. Blue Cross, 131 F.R.D. 467, 472 (W.D. Pa. 1990) (magistrate judge's final order remanding matter to state court was not clearly erroneous; standard of review proper because remand is nondispositive).

(n9)Footnote 2. Long v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., 783 F. Supp. 249, 250-251 (D.S.C. 1992) (magistrate judge's order to remand case to state court is equivalent to dispositive dismissal and beyond power of magistrate judge); Giangola v. Walt Disney World Co., 753 F. Supp. 148, 152 (D.N.J. 1990) (remand order is dispositive and equivalent to dismissal).

(n10)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Gordon, 979 F.2d 11, 13 (1st Cir. 1992) (court noted conflicting case law on validity of remand orders by magistrate judges, but dismissed appeal for lack of jurisdiction).

(n11)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(D) (motion for attorney's fees may be referred to magistrate judge for recommended disposition); see also Rajaratnam v. Moyer, 47 F.3d 922, 923-924 (7th Cir. 1995) (magistrate judge lacks authority to enter orders for Rule 11 sanctions, and application for attorney's fees may not be characterized as nondispositive); Massey v. City of Ferndale, 7 F.3d 506, 509-510 (6th Cir. 1993) (magistrate judge did not have authority to rule on post-dismissal motions for fees and costs).

(n12)Footnote 2. Grimes v. City and County of San Francisco, 951 F.2d 236, 239-242 (9th Cir. 1991) (magistrate judge's authority to impose discovery sanctions extended even to proscriptive sanctions designed to compel compliance with discovery order); Ocelot Oil Corp. v. Sparrow Indus., 847 F.2d 1458, 1465 (10th Cir. 1988) (magistrate judges have authority to impose attorney's fees as nondispositive discovery sanction; citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n13)Footnote 3. O'Rourke v. City of Providence, 77 F. Supp. 2d 258, (D.R.I. 1999) (if timely objection is filed to magistrate judge's determination, district court reviews matter de novo because Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require that motion for attorneys' fees be treated under Rule 72(b) as if it were dispositive pretrial matter); R.A. v. Department of Children, Youth and Families, 18 F. Supp. 2d 157, 159 (D.R.I. 1998) (motion for attorney's fees under Rule 72(b) is treated as dispositive pretrial matter); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(D).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.88

§ 21.88 Disposition Recommended by Magistrate Judgen*

[1] Content and Form of Recommendation

When, without the consent of the parties, a district court assigns a pretrial matter that is dispositive of a claim or defense of a party or a prisoner petition challenging the conditions of confinement, the magistrate judge must determine the matter and enter into the record a recommendation for disposition, including proposed findings of fact when appropriate. The recommended disposition must be in writing because the clerk is required to mail copies to all parties. n1 If a magistrate judge erroneously enters an order purporting to determine a dispositive matter, a district judge reviewing the order may ignore the form of the decision and treat it as a recommendation. n2 If the district judge does not review the decision and enter a final order, an appellate court must dismiss any subsequent appeal for lack of jurisdiction but may remand the case to the district court for further proceedings. n3

Neither Rule 72 nor the Magistrates Act sets forth specific requirements for the form of a magistrate judge's recommendation on a nondispositive pretrial matter or prisoner petition challenging conditions of confinement. n4 At least one case has held that detailed findings and conclusions are not required, provided that the magistrate judge sets forth sufficient information that the basic requirements of Rule 52(a) are met. n5 Further, local rules may require proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law in strict accordance with Rule 52(a) standards. In jurisdictions that have adopted a waiver rule prohibiting consideration of untimely objections, a magistrate judge's proposed recommendation must notify the parties that objections must be filed within 14 days and that failure to object may bar review. n6

[2] Effect of Recommendation

Rule 72(b) and the Magistrates Act authorize a magistrate judge to enter a recommendation and proposed findings on a pretrial dispositive matter or on a prisoner petition challenging conditions of confinement. n1 Unlike orders issued pursuant to Rule 72(a) regarding nondispositive matters, a magistrate judge's decision on a dispositive matter is not final but is instead a recommendation that assists the district judge in making a final decision. n2 Thus, a magistrate judge's recommendation and proposed findings are not self-operative, even if the parties do not object to the recommendation. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Lancer Arabians, Inc. v. Beech Aircraft Corp., 723 F. Supp. 1444, 1445-1446 (M.D. Fla. 1989) (decision granting motion to strike claim for punitive damages construed as recommendation subject to de novo review).

(n4)Footnote 3. Bennett v. General Caster Serv. of N. Gordon Co., 976 F.2d 995, 997 (6th Cir. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. See EEOC v. K-Mart Corp., 526 F. Supp. 121, 124 (E.D. Mich. 1981) , vacated on other grounds, 694 F.2d 1055 (6th Cir. 1982) (magistrate judge followed letter and spirit of Rule 52(a) by issuing well reasoned report and recommendation stating exactly why he allowed defendants limited opportunity to depose certain individuals in employment discrimination suit); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n8)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(1).

(n9)Footnote 2. U.S.W. v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 828 F.2d 1001, 1005 (3d Cir. 1987) (only when district court adopts and enters order does magistrate judge's proposed recommendation go into effect); Brown v. Wesley's Quaker Maid, Inc., 771 F.2d 952, 954 (6th Cir. 1985) (magistrate judge may not rule directly and finally on dispositive pretrial motions).

(n10)Footnote 3. United States v. Rembert, 694 F. Supp. 163, 167 (W.D.N.C. 1988) (rulings by magistrate judge on dispositive matters are not self-operating, and are not considered valid until entered by district court on appropriate consideration, regardless of fact that parties did not object to order).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.89

§ 21.89 Objection of Party to Order or Recommended Dispositionn*

[1] Contents of Objection

Within 14 days after being served with a copy of the magistrate judge's order or recommended disposition, n1 a party may serve and file objections to the order or recommended disposition. n2 In the objection, the party must specify the issue in the magistrate judge's order or report and recommendation to which the party is making the objection. n3 Provided that the party's objections identify with specificity each of the conclusions to which he or she objects, it is not necessary for the party to identify how the magistrate judge erred. From objections that specify issues, the district court judge knows which issues he or she is to review, and such objections are sufficiently specific to satisfy Rule 72(b). n4 Thus, "specific" objection, as used in Rule 72, requires a party only to specify each issue for which review is sought and not the factual or legal basis of the objection. This interpretation is supported by the section of the Magistrates Act which defines the powers and jurisdiction of the magistrate judges. The relevant provision reads: "A judge of the court shall make a de novo determination of those portions of the report or specified proposed findings or recommendations to which objection is made." n5

[2] Time Limit for Making Objection

A party that wants to object to a magistrate judge's pretrial order or recommended disposition must file an objection within 14 days after being served with a copy of the order or recommendation. n1 To meet the timeliness requirement, strict compliance with formalities is not required in every case. For example, when a pro se party sent a letter expressing disapproval of a magistrate judge's decision, it was treated as an objection when it was submitted within the requisite time and reasonably informed the district judge that the decision was being contested. n2

The 14-day time limit for filing an objection to a magistrate judge's pretrial order or recommendation is governed by the Rule 6 provisions for computation of time periods. n3 Thus, the three day additional time period authorized by Rule 6(d) applies when service is performed in any manner other than by hand delivery, n4 which is applicable to nondispositive orders entered under Rule 72(a), n5 as well as to findings and recommendations on dispositive matters entered under Rule 72(b). n6 For a complete discussion of the computation of time periods for motions under Rule 6, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

[3] Effect of Timely Objection

When a party files a timely objection to a magistrate judge's pretrial recommendation or order, the objection must be considered by a district judge on its review of the recommendation or order. n1 However, the filing of an objection does not automatically stay operation of the order. n2 Decisions by a magistrate judge on nondispositive matters are effective unless overturned by a district judge. n3 If a party files an objection to a magistrate judge's recommended disposition of a pretrial dispositive matter or prisoner petition challenging conditions of confinement, the district judge must make a de novo review of the recommended disposition. n4

[4] Failure to File Timely Objection

[a] Failure to Object Generally Constitutes Waiver

A party that fails to file a timely objection to a magistrate judge's order regarding a nondispositive matter, n1 or to a recommended disposition regarding a dispositive matter, n2 may be deemed to have waived the right to review of the magistrate judge's decision. n3 Rule 72(b) was initially drafted with a clear waiver rule: failure to make timely objection to the magistrate judge's report prior to its adoption by the district judge may constitute a waiver of the right to appellate review of the district judge's order. n4 Rule 72(a) was amended in 1991 to provide that a party may not assign as error a defect in the magistrate judge's order to which objection was not timely made. n5 The purpose of this amendment was to assure that objections to magistrate judge's orders that are not timely made will not be considered by the district court. n6 The language of the 1991 amendment has been construed to deprive an appellate court of jurisdiction over challenges to a magistrate judge's order if an objection is not timely filed. n7

[b] Exception to Waiver Rule for Exceptional Circumstances

The Supreme Court has approved the adoption by the lower courts of a waiver rule conditioning review of a recommendation on the filing of an objection. A court of appeals may exercise its supervisory powers to establish a rule that failure to file objections to the magistrate judge's report waives the right to appeal the district court's judgment. n8 Courts are not required to adopt such a rule. n9 Thus, even in the absence of a timely objection, some courts nevertheless permit appellate review in exceptional circumstances. n10 "Exceptional circumstances" are narrowly defined to include the following elements: (1) when public interest requires review of the unraised issue; (2) when manifest injustice would result from the failure to consider the new issue; or (3) when the alleged error was fundamental and resulted in a highly prejudicial error. n11 Some courts have also held that the court may, in its discretion, consider untimely objections to a magistrate judge's recommended disposition. n12 A court may also excuse a default "in the interests of justice." n13 Finally, issues concerning a magistrate judge's jurisdiction are not waived by a party's failure to file a timely objection. n14

[c] Exception to Waiver Rule for Lack of Notice

When it upheld the constitutionality of a waiver rule, the Supreme Court incorporated a requirement of notice of the consequences of failure to file objections and an opportunity to seek an extension of time for filing objections. n15 Some courts have ruled that if a party has not been informed of the time period for filing objections, and that failure to file objections may preclude review, the waiver rule will not be applied. n16 One circuit has held that notice of the consequences of failure to object is not required if the party who failed to object is represented by an attorney. While the circuit court recognized that pro se litigants may be entitled to notice from the court, it concluded that the court has no obligation to advise lawyers of the deadline for filing objections. n17 Acceptable methods of providing the required notice vary; they may include sending a letter with a copy of Rule 72, or giving notice in a magistrate judge's report and recommendation. n18

As noted above, some circuits have adopted specific requirements for notifying a pro se litigant of the consequences of failure to object. n19 For example, one circuit has held that a pro se litigant's failure to object to a magistrate judge's report may not operate as a waiver of appellate review unless the document informs the litigant of the consequences of failure to object. n20 In another circuit, the court held that waiver did not apply, because even though the magistrate judge's recommendation advised the pro se litigant of the time limit for filing objections and the consequences of failure to object, the notice was nevertheless inadequate in that the notice did not inform the pro se litigant of the proper place for filing objections and also failed to cite the applicable statute or rule. n21

[d] Application of Waiver Rule

The waiver rule has not been applied uniformly in all circuits. Some circuits apply a firm waiver rule under which a party who fails to make a timely objection to the magistrate judge's findings and recommendations waives appellate review of both factual and legal questions. n22 Other circuits have held that the waiver precludes only review of factual determinations. n23 In some circuits, failure to raise objections waives the party's right to review both in the district court and on appeal. n24 Furthermore, in some circuits, only those issues that the parties raised in their objections will be reviewed by the district court and on appeal; a litigant may not present new issues to the district judge or seek de novo review on appeal of an argument never raised in the objections. n25

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See [2] below.

(n3)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. Willis v. Caterpillar Incorporated, 199 F.3d 902, 904 (7th Cir. 2000) (plaintiff waived right to appeal denial of her motion to transfer action due to improper venue when plaintiff failed to raise that issue in her objections to magistrate judge's report and recommendation).

(n5)Footnote 4. Johnson v. Zema Systems Corp., 170 F.3d 734, 739-740 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C).

(n7)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 2. Simpson v. Lear Astronics Corp., 77 F.3d 1170, 1175-1176 (9th Cir. 1996) (document filed by pro se party treated as objection even though it failed to explicitly request review of magistrate judge's decision).

(n9)Footnote 3. See IUE AFL CIO Pension Fund v. Herrmann, 9 F.3d 1049, 1054 (2d Cir. 1993) (construing former time periods).

(n10)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n11)Footnote 5. Mullins v. Hinkle, 953 F. Supp. 744, 747-748 (S.D. W. Va. 1997) (3 days added for service by mail; construing former time periods).

(n12)Footnote 6. CNPq Conselho Nacional de Desenvolvimento Cientifico e CNPQ Conselho Nacional De Desenvolvimento Cientifico E Technologico v. Inter Trade, Inc., 50 F.3d 56, 57 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (3 days added for service by mail).

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a), (b)(3); In re Application & Affidavit for a Search Warrant, 923 F.2d 324, 326 n.2 (4th Cir. 1991) (magistrate judge's denial of motion to unseal search warrant affidavit properly reconsidered by district court).

(n14)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); Litton Indus., Inc. v. Lehman Bros. Kuhn Loeb, Inc., 124 F.R.D. 75, 79 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (automatic stay would encourage frivolous appeals and stifle magistrate judge system).

(n15)Footnote 3. Kimbrell v. Adia, S.A., 834 F. Supp. 1313, 1317 (D. Kan. 1993) (decisions by magistrate judges should not be considered ineffective, advisory, or nonfinal merely because they may be reviewed by district court).

(n16)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(3).

(n17)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n18)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n19)Footnote 3. Frontier Refining, Inc. v. Gorman-Rupp Co., Inc., 136 F.3d 695, 706 (10th Cir. 1998) .

(n20)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b), Advisory Committee Note to 1982 Amendments.

(n21)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n22)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n23)Footnote 7. Charter Oil Co. v. American Employers' Ins. Co., 69 F.3d 1160, 1171 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (failure to object to discovery rulings below precluded raising objections on appeal; untimely objections deprive court of jurisdiction).

(n24)Footnote 8. Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 141, 106 S. Ct. 466, 88 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1985) .

(n25)Footnote 9. Henderson v. Carlson, 812 F.2d 874, 877 (3d Cir. 1987) (Magistrates Act neither precludes nor mandates rule that failure to object is waiver of appellate review).

(n26)Footnote 10. Wirsching v. Colorado, 360 F.3d 1191, 1198 (10th Cir. 2004) (interests of justice required review despite waiver rule).

(n27)Footnote 11. Continental Casualty Co. v. Dominick D'Andrea, Inc., 150 F.3d 245, 253 (3d Cir. 1998) .

(n28)Footnote 12. Rodriguez v. Bowen, 857 F.2d 275, 276-277 (5th Cir. 1988) (district court conducted de novo review because it had discretion to allow late filing of objection to magistrate judge's report).

(n29)Footnote 13. Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 155, 106 S. Ct. 466, 88 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1985) (appellate court may excuse failure to file objections in interest of justice; waiver rule is not jurisdictional).

(n30)Footnote 14. Moore v. United States, 950 F.2d 656, 659 (10th Cir. 1991) (waiver rule applies to factual and legal questions, but not to issues regarding magistrate judge's jurisdiction).

(n31)Footnote 15. Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 155, 106 S. Ct. 466, 88 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1985) (magistrate judge's recommendation contained notice of waiver rule).

(n32)Footnote 16. Thompson v. Nix, 897 F.2d 356, 357 (8th Cir. 1990) (notice should be included in magistrate judge's report and recommendation).

(n33)Footnote 17. Wells v. Shriners Hosp., 109 F.3d 198, 200 (4th Cir. 1997) (construing former time periods).

(n34)Footnote 18. Snyder v. Ridenour, 889 F.2d 1363, 1365-1366 (4th Cir. 1989) (notice was adequate when contained in letter with copy of Rule 72 attached).

(n35)Footnote 19. Wells v. Shriners Hosp., 109 F.3d 198, 200 (4th Cir. 1997) (while pro se litigants may be entitled to notice on need to file timely objections, rule is different for counseled parties).

(n36)Footnote 20. Moore v. United States, 950 F.2d 656, 659 n.7 (10th Cir. 1991) (notice of time period for filing objections and consequences of failure to object required to be given to pro se litigants via magistrate judge's order, or else waiver rule applicable).

(n37)Footnote 21. Haney v. Addison, 175 F.3d 1217, 1219-1220 (10th Cir. 1999) .

(n38)Footnote 22. *Herd v. Tapia, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 27117, at *5-6 (10th Cir. 2009) ; Jones v. Salt Lake County, 503 F.3d 1147, 1152 (10th Cir. 2007) ; United States v. Hernandez Rivas, 348 F.3d 595, 598 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n39)Footnote 23. See Douglass v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 65 F.3d 452, 456 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Lorin Corp. v. Goto & Co., Ltd., 700 F.2d 1202, 1207 (8th Cir. 1983) .

(n40)Footnote 24. Wells v. Shriners Hosp., 109 F.3d 198, 199 (4th Cir. 1997) (failure to file timely objections cuts off all further consideration).

(n41)Footnote 25. Aikens v. Shalala, 956 F. Supp. 14, 19 (D.D.C. 1997) (litigant is not permitted to present new initiatives to district judge).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.90

§ 21.90 Review of Magistrate Judge's Decision by District Courtn*

[1] Review of Orders Regarding Nondispositive Matters

[a] Authority of District Court to Review

A district judge that has referred a matter to a magistrate judge has inherent power to review the magistrate judge's decision unless a statute or court rule authorizes the magistrate judge to make a final decision. n1 Therefore, because Rule 72(a) authorizes a magistrate judge to enter a final order on a nondispositive pretrial matter, a district judge does not have inherent authority to review such an order unless an objection is filed. If a timely objection is filed, review is required. n2

If a party fails to present timely arguments or evidentiary materials to a magistrate judge prior to the magistrate judge's ruling and deprives the magistrate judge of the opportunity to rectify any alleged errors, the party waives the right to present those arguments or materials to the district court on appeal from the magistrate judge's nondispositive order. n3 In addition to its authority to undertake a de novo review, a district court has the option of recommitting a matter to the magistrate judge. n4

[b] Standard of Review

When reviewing a magistrate judge's order regarding a nondispositive matter to which objections are made by a party, the district court must modify or set aside any portion of the magistrate judge's order found to be clearly erroneous or contrary to law. n5 Conversely, if the magistrate judge's order is neither clearly erroneous nor contrary to law, it must be affirmed. n6 For example, motions for disqualification of counsel have been found to be nondispositive and are therefore subject to the more deferential "clearly erroneous" standard of review. n7 Orders on discovery matters are generally considered to be nondispositive and subject to the clearly erroneous standard. n8 Similarly, the imposition of sanctions is reviewable under the clearly erroneous standard unless the sanction itself may be considered dispositive of a claim. n9 The district court applies the clearly erroneous or contrary to law standard to evidentiary rulings. n10 A magistrate judge's finding is contrary to law if the magistrate judge has misinterpreted or misapplied applicable law. n11

There is a split among the circuits as to whether a district court, in its de novo review of the magistrate judge's report and recommendation, must consider evidence or arguments that were not submitted to the magistrate judge. Several circuits have concluded that a district court has discretion to consider such additional evidence. n12 On the other hand, the Fourth Circuit has ruled that a district court is required to consider all new arguments directed to any issue to which proper objection was made, regardless of whether those arguments were raised before the magistrate judge. n13

[2] Review of Recommended Disposition of Dispositive Matter

[a] Review When Party Has Filed Objection

A district judge must make a de novo review of any portion of a magistrate judge's recommended disposition to which a party has filed a timely objection. n1 De novo determination means that the district court starts over to make the determination made by the magistrate judge, n2 independent of the magistrate judge's conclusions. This means that the district court gives no presumption of validity to the magistrate judge's findings or recommendations. The district judge is free to substitute his or her own view for that of the magistrate judge without making any initial finding. n3 The district court may make its determination based on the record of the proceeding before the magistrate judge n4 or may make the determination after taking additional evidence. n5

Even though a party has 14 days within which to object to a magistrate judge's recommendation, n6 entry of an order adopting a recommendation before expiration of the 14 day period does not require automatic reversal, even though the best practice would be for the court to wait until the expiration of the objection period before entering an order. n7 Computation of the 14 day requirement of Rule 72(b) is governed by Rule 6. n8 Thus, when service is by mail, there is a three day additional period allotted for objections to recommendations made by the magistrate judge under Rule 72. n9 For a complete discussion of the computation of time periods for motions under Rule 6, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

The time period for timely objections under Rule 72(b) is subject to the provisions of Rule 6, n10 which controls the computation of time in federal litigation, including the extension of time for good cause or excusable neglect under Rule 6(b)(1), and to the provision of Rule 6(d) for the addition of 3 days to the period prescribed or allowed in the rules when service is accomplished by any means other than by hand delivery. n11 For a complete discussion of the computation of time periods for motions under Rule 6, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

[b] Review When No Objections Are Filed

If no objections to a magistrate judge's recommended disposition are filed, the district judge need not give a de novo review to the disposition. n13 In these circumstances, the district court may adopt the recommendation without conducting any review n14 or the district court may review the recommendation under any standard it deems appropriate. n15

Not all circuits follow the same rule. In the Ninth Circuit, conclusions of law must be reviewed de novo, even if no objection is made. n16 In the Eighth Circuit, a district court has discretion to decide for itself whether a magistrate judge's recommendation is correct, regardless of whether an objection is filed. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. In re Application & Affidavit for a Search Warrant, 923 F.2d 324, 326 n.2 (4th Cir. 1991) (magistrate judge's denial of motion to unseal search warrant affidavit properly reconsidered by district court).

(n3)Footnote 2. U.S.W. v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 828 F.2d 1001, 1008 (3d Cir. 1987) (although district court is obligated to review pretrial ruling of magistrate judge on objection, such review will not automatically occur absent objection).

(n4)Footnote 3. Tenen v. Winter, 15 F. Supp. 2d 270, 272 (W.D.N.Y. 1998) (on review of magistrate judge's report and recommendation, district court normally will not consider legal arguments or evidentiary materials that could have been but were not presented to magistrate judge).

(n5)Footnote 4. Paper Systems Inc. v. Mitsubishi Corp., 181 F.R.D. 611, 614 (E.D. Wis. 1998) (when parties submitted legal arguments to district court based on evidence that did not exist when magistrate judge made its recommendation, district court recommitted motion to magistrate judge with instructions to consider new evidence submitted to district court).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); see Vega v. State University of New York Board of Trustees, 67 F. Supp. 2d 324, 339-340 (S.D.N.Y. 1999. In contrast, dispositive rulings are reviewed by the district court de novo. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); see also [2][a], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. Grimes v. San Francisco, 951 F.2d 236, 241 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Weeks Stevedoring Co. v. Raymond Int'l Builders, Inc., 174 F.R.D. 301, 303 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (magistrate judge's order was not clearly erroneous).

(n9)Footnote 8. Federal Election Comm. v. Christian Coalition, 178 F.R.D. 456, 459-460 (E.D. Va. 1998) (finding no evidence that discovery order at issue was dispositive, district court reviewed magistrate judge's decision under deferential clearly erroneous or contrary to law standard).

(n10)Footnote 9. Ocelot Oil Corp. v. Sparrow Indus., 847 F.2d 1458, 1462-1463 (10th Cir. 1988) (Rule 37 sanction striking pleading with prejudice constitutes dispositive ruling reviewed de novo).

(n11)Footnote 10. See Goldsmith v. Bagby Elevator Co., 513 F.3d 1261, 1276 (11th Cir. 2008) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Gunter v. Ridgewood Energy Corp., 32 F. Supp. 2d 162, 164 (D.N.J. 1998) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Freeman v. County of Bexar, 142 F.3d 848, 852 (5th Cir. 1998) (district court had discretion to consider new evidence when it reviewed magistrate judge's decision granting summary judgment, and court's mistaken belief that it was precluded from considering additional evidence justified reversal of judgment).

(n14)Footnote 13. United States v. George, 971 F.2d 1113, 1118 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n15)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); Maldonado-Maldonado v. Pantasia Mfg. Corp., 956 F. Supp. 73, 75 (D.P.R. 1997) (since plaintiff objected in detail to magistrate judge's recommendation, district court was required to review de novo entire controversy).

(n16)Footnote 2. Cespedes v. Coughlin, 956 F. Supp. 454, 463 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (de novo review means reconsideration afresh by the district judge); see Hermanowski v. Farquharson, 39 F. Supp. 2d 148, 152 (D.R.I. 1999) (in reviewing magistrate judge's recommendations, district court must actually review and weigh evidence presented to magistrate judge and not merely rely on magistrate judge's report and recommendation; district court may accept, reject, or modify recommended decision, receive further evidence, or recommit matter to magistrate judge with instructions).

(n17)Footnote 3. Taberer v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 954 F.2d 888, 904 (3d Cir. 1992) (district judge owes no deference to magistrate judge's findings and conclusions).

(n18)Footnote 4. Rajaratnam v. Moyer, 47 F.3d 922, 924 n.8 (7th Cir. 1995) (de novo determination does not require new hearing before district judge).

(n19)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); Crown Heights Jewish Community Council v. Fischer, 63 F. Supp. 2d 231, 235 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (when making reviewing magistrate judge's report and recommendation de novo, district court has discretion to accept or decline to accept supplemental evidence, but party is not permitted to wait until report and recommendation have been issued to submit evidence that party had in its possession but chose not to submit).

(n20)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a), (b)(2).

(n21)Footnote 7. See McGill v. Goff, 17 F.3d 729, 731 (5th Cir. 1994) (construing former time periods).

(n22)Footnote 8. Huff v. Cruz Contr. Corp., 643 F. Supp. 2d 344, 346 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (construing former time periods).

(n23)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C)-(F); Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n24)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6; Huff v. Cruz Contr. Corp., 643 F. Supp. 2d 344, 346 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) .

(n25)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B) (F).

(n26)Footnote 13. Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 150, 106 S. Ct. 466, 88 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1985) (1986) (Magistrate's Act does not require review when no objections are filed).

(n27)Footnote 14. Cespedes v. Coughlin, 956 F. Supp. 454, 463 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (district court may adopt those portions of magistrate judge's recommendations to which no specific objection is made, as long as those sections are not clearly erroneous).

(n28)Footnote 15. Palmer v. Apfel, 995 F. Supp. 549, 552 n.4 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (district court is not required to conduct de novo review of magistrate judge's report and recommendation on dispositive matter because plaintiff failed to submit "specific objections" as required by Rule 72(b)).

(n29)Footnote 16. Barilla v. Ervin, 886 F.2d 1514, 1518 (9th Cir. 1989) (failure to object relieves trial court only of obligation to review factual findings).

(n30)Footnote 17. Lorin Corp. v. Goto & Co., Ltd., 700 F.2d 1202, 1206 (8th Cir. 1983) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.91

§ 21.91 Review of Magistrate Judge's Decision by Appellate Courtn*

A magistrate judge does not have authority to issue a dispositive ruling on a motion to certify an order for interlocutory appeal if the parties did not consent to referral of the motion to the magistrate judge. n1 When a magistrate judge's order vacates a judgment, leaving the case pending for further determination, the order is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. n2 A party may not seek review of a magistrate judge's pretrial recommendations and findings, because such decisions are not final judgments; before such an appeal may be taken, the district court must review the recommendations and either adopt or reject them. n3 Furthermore, objection to the recommendations in the district court is a prerequisite to an appeal to the circuit court because failure to file a timely objection to a magistrate judge's order or recommendation may waive appellate review of the decision. n4 For further discussion of waiver, see § 21.89[4].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 72.12 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Vitols v. Citizens Banking Co., 984 F.2d 168, 169-170 (6th Cir. 1993) (referral did not give magistrate judge plenary jurisdiction when parties did not consent to certify matter for appeal).

(n3)Footnote 2. Parks v. Collins, 761 F.2d 1101, 1104 (5th Cir. 1985) (order of magistrate judge granting motion to set aside default judgment was not final decision).

(n4)Footnote 3. United States v. Flaherty, 668 F.2d 566, 585 (1st Cir. 1981) (only Article III court may enter final judgment, not magistrate judge); see Massey v. City of Ferndale, 7 F.3d 506, 510 (6th Cir. 1993) (magistrate judge did not have authority to rule on postdismissal motions for sanctions, fees, and costs).

(n5)Footnote 4. Garita Hotel v. Ponce Federal Bank, F.S.B., 954 F. Supp. 438, 447 (D.P.R. 1996) (party's right to review is waived both in district court and on appeal).

184 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
B. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S DISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL MATTERS AND PRISONER PETITIONS

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 21.92through 21.99

[Reserved]

§§ 21.92[Reserved]

185 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
C. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S TRIAL OF CIVIL CASE BY CONSENT OF PARTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.100

§ 21.100 Magistrate Judge's Authority to Try Case by Consentn*

The Federal Magistrate Act of 1979 expanded the power of full-time magistrate judges and part-time magistrate judges who serve as full-time judicial officers by authorizing them to conduct any or all of the proceedings in a jury or nonjury civil matter and even to order the entry of judgment in the case, provided that such magistrate judges have been specially designated to do so by the district court, and provided they are acting with the consent of the parties. n1 The Act also gives the same powers to part-time magistrate judges who are not serving as full-time judicial officers, if additional requirements are met: n2 the consent of the parties is given pursuant to the parties' specific written request, the magistrate judge meets specified bar membership requirements, n3 and the chief judge of the district court certifies that a full-time magistrate judge is not reasonably available in accordance with guidelines established by the judicial council of the circuit. n4

If the requirements of Section 636(c)(1) are met, the magistrate judge has jurisdiction to hear and determine the case. Once the magistrate judge has jurisdiction under Section 636(c)(1), jurisdiction continues according to the procedures specified in Section 636(c)(2) and Rule 73. n4.1 The intent of Congress in giving magistrate judges case dispositive civil authority was to relieve the district courts' caseload, and thus improve access to the courts for all groups, while still preserving every litigant's right to insist on trial before an Article III district judge. n4.2 The constitutionality of the procedure has been upheld for all of the following reasons: consent of the parties is required; magistrate judges are appointed by the district court; the district court that referred the matter to the magistrate judge may vacate the reference despite the parties' consent; and the parties have a right of appeal. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 73.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1); see Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 781 (2003) .

(n3)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 4.1. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 783-784 (2003) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 636(c); Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(a), (b); see also § 21.101[4].

(n7)Footnote 4.2. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 785 (2003) .

(n8)Footnote 5. Wharton-Thomas v. United States, 721 F.2d 922, 929-930 (3d Cir. 1983) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
C. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S TRIAL OF CIVIL CASE BY CONSENT OF PARTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.101

§ 21.101 Consent Requiredn*

[1] Type of Proceeding That Requires Consent

Parties may consent to complete trial of a case by a magistrate judge in any and all civil cases, whether the claims arise under a specific statute or common law, n1 and whether the case is a diversity or a federal question case. n2 A magistrate judge may conduct a civil trial and enter a final judgment whether a case is a jury or nonjury case, provided that the magistrate judge has the consent of all parties and has been designated by the district court or courts where he or she serves. n2.1

If a party demands a jury trial, a magistrate judge may not preside over the trial unless consent has been obtained from all parties; the request for a jury does not constitute consent. n3 Furthermore, the presence of an Article III judge at a trial conducted by a magistrate judge does not obviate the need for consent. n4 Pretrial matters, however, may be referred to a magistrate judge without the parties' consent. n5 For discussion of referral of pretrial matters, see Subpart B, Magistrate Judge's Disposition of Pretrial Matters and Prisoner Petitions. n5.1

[2] Consent Required of Parties

[a] Unanimous Consent Required

A magistrate judge may hold a trial and enter a final judgment in a case only if consent to the trial is unanimous. n1 Unless each party consents, the case may not be tried by a magistrate judge. n2 Each party's consent need not be in the same form, however. Provided that the consent is unanimous, some party's consent may be in writing, and the remaining parties' consent may be by implication. n2.1 Thus, consent of the parties need not take any particular form, so long as it is explicit and on the record. n2.2

Consent by all parties is significant because a party to a civil action in the district court has a right to have the case heard by an Article III judge; n3 because magistrate judges are not Article III judges, consent to reference of a case to a magistrate judge in effect waives the constitutional right to have an Article III judge conduct the trial and enter judgment. n4 The existence of these constitutional rights means that consent to trial before a magistrate judge must be voluntary n5 and may be withheld without any adverse consequences, n6 other than delay of trial. n7 If not all of the parties consent to have the case tried by a magistrate judge, neither the magistrate judge nor the district judge may be informed of a particular party's refusal. n8

[b] Effect of New Parties to Action

If a new party is substituted for an original party, the new party is bound by the consent of the original party. n9 In a similar way, a client is bound by his or her attorney's consent to trial before a magistrate judge pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), and a subsequent substitution for the original attorney may not withdraw the original attorney's consent. n10 On the other hand, if a party is added to the case after the original parties to the action have consented to trial before a magistrate judge, consent of the newly added party is also required. n10.1 If the new parties do not consent, their claims either may be severed, n11 or the reference to the magistrate judge may be vacated. n12

If a motion to intervene is filed in a case that has been referred to a magistrate judge, the intervenor must consent to referral of the motion to the magistrate judge, even though the original parties consented to the referral. n13 If the intervenor's consent is not obtained, the magistrate judge's decision on the motion to intervene is considered as a recommendation subject to de novo review by the district court, n14 rather than as a final judgment directly appealable to the circuit court of appeals. n15 If intervenor status is granted, the intervenor must also consent to have the case tried by a magistrate judge. n16

[3] Form of Consent

[a] Consent Sufficient to Give Jurisdiction to Magistrate Judge

The United States Supreme Court has held that there are two aspects to the statutory scheme set up by Congress for magistrate judge trials by consent of the parties. n1 The first is jurisdictional and requires that the magistrate judge be designated by the district court to conduct the trial and order the entry of judgment in the matter n2 and that the parties consent to the trial by the magistrate judge. The second aspect requires that the court record the consent of the parties following the procedure specified in the Magistrate Act and federal rules; n3 the form of consent for the second aspect is covered in [b], below.

The Supreme Court held that there are two distinct types of jurisdictional consent for trial by a magistrate judge. First, when the magistrate judge is a full-time magistrate judge or a part-time magistrate judge who serves as a full-time judicial officer, the consent of the parties may either be express or implied by the parties' conduct. Thus, if all the parties make general appearances before the magistrate judge at the trial of the matter, after they have been told of their right to be tried by a district judge, their conduct supplies the consent necessary for the civil jurisdiction under Section 636(c)(1) for trial heard by a full time magistrate judge or part-time United States magistrate judge who serves as a full-time judicial officer. n4 In this regard, a general appearance means an overt act by which a person submits himself or herself to a court's jurisdiction, rather than for the sole purpose of objecting to the court's jurisdiction. n5

However, the required consent is more strict for the second type of jurisdictional consent: if the trial is to be held by a part-time magistrate judge who does not serve as a full-time judicial officer, the parties consent is not valid unless the consent is made by specific written request. n6

[b] Consent Procedure

28 U.S.C. Section 636(c)(2) and Rule 73 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure establish the procedures the district court must follow once a magistrate judge is designated and has received consent under Section 636(c)(1) to exercise civil jurisdiction and preside over an entire trial. n7 The clerk of the court must notify the parties at the time the action is filed of the availability of a magistrate judge to exercise jurisdiction and preside over the entire trial. n8 Within the time required by local rule, the decision of the parties must be communicated to the clerk of court. n9 Rule 73(b) specifies that the parties' election of a magistrate judge must be memorialized in a joint form of consent or separate forms of consent setting forth their election. n10 Neither the magistrate judge nor the district judge may be informed of a party's response to the clerk's notification, unless all parties have consented to the referral of the matter to a magistrate judge. n11 The Supreme Court has noted that this procedure envisions advance, written consent communicated to the clerk alone in order to preserve the confidentiality of a party's choice, in the interest of protecting an objecting party against any possible prejudice at the magistrate judge's hands later in the proceeding. n12

If one or more parties withholds consent, the district court judge or the magistrate judge may again advise the parties of the availability of the magistrate judge but must also advise the parties that they are free to withhold consent without adverse substantive consequences. n13 The court may advise the parties of procedural consequences, however, such as the possibility that withholding consent may delay the trial. n14

Although these consent procedures under Section 636(c)(2) and Rule 73 are by no means just advisory, and district courts are bound to adhere strictly to the procedures, the text and structure of the statutory language as a whole means that a defect in the procedures is not jurisdictional, provided that the parties have in fact voluntarily consented, and despite a procedural defect, the express or implied consent of the parties n15 allows a magistrate judge to enter a final appealable judgment of the district court. n16

[4] Effect of Failure to Obtain Consent

As discussed in [3], above, the Supreme Court has held that there are two types of parties' consent required to give a magistrate judge the power to conduct a complete trial and enter a final order in a case: jurisdictional and procedural. If the parties' consent is not in the appropriate form sufficient for jurisdictional consent, any judgment entered by the magistrate judge is void. n1 On the other hand, if the district court does not strictly adhere to the procedures, the defect in the procedures is not jurisdictional and the magistrate judge may enter a final appealable judgment of the district court if the magistrate judge has the requisite express or implied jurisdictional consent of the parties. n2 If parties have given consent to proceed before a magistrate judge, and the case is consolidated with a case in which consent has not been given, the judgment is effective only with respect to parties who have consented. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 73.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. DeCosta v. Columbia Broadcasting Sys., Inc., 520 F.2d 499, 508 (1st Cir. 1975) (magistrate judge could constitutionally and statutorily try case with consent of parties regarding claims for willful and intentional infringement of common-law trademark and unfair competition).

(n3)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Geras v. Lafayette Display Fixtures, Inc., 742 F.2d 1037 .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1); see Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 781 (2003) .

(n5)Footnote 3. Wimmer v. Cook, 774 F.2d 68, 73-74 (4th Cir. 1985) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Fowler v. Jones, 899 F.2d 1088, 1093 (11th Cir. 1990) (consent of parties required even though magistrate judge conducted trial and was speaking for district judge because district judge had lost his voice).

(n7)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).

(n8)Footnote 5.1. See § 21.80 et seq.

(n9)Footnote 1. Brook, Weiner, Sered, Kreger & Weinberg v. Coreq, Inc., 53 F.3d 851, 852 (7th Cir. 1995) (because each litigant has a constitutional right to district judge, consent to magistrate judge must be unanimous).

(n10)Footnote 2. Mark I, Inc. v. Gruber, 38 F.3d 369, 370-371 (7th Cir. 1994) (consent not valid when party was not provided with consent form pursuant to local rule); Hajek v. Burlington N. R.R. Co., 186 F.3d 1105, 1108 (9th Cir. 1999) (no clear and unambiguous consent by "all" parties to magistrate judge to enter judgment in former railroad employee's suit against two employer railroads when employee and one railroad expressly stated that they had no objection to referring case to magistrate judge but second railroad stated only that "at this time, the Defendant does not believe any special procedures are required or are appropriate").

(n11)Footnote 2.1. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 590, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775 (2003) ; see [3], below (discussion of consent by implication).

(n12)Footnote 2.2. Hatcher v. Consolidated City of Indianapolis, 323 F.3d 513, 516 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Dixon v. Ylst, 990 F.2d 478, 480 (9th Cir. 1993) ; see U.S. Const. Art. III, § 2, Cl. 1.

(n14)Footnote 4. Carter v. Sea Land Servs. Inc., 816 F.2d. 1018, 1021 (5th Cir. 1987) (constitutional rights, such as, right to trial before Article III judge may be waived).

(n15)Footnote 5. Adams v. Heckler, 794 F.2d 303, 307 (7th Cir. 1986) (under facts of this case consent given was explicit, not coercive, and valid even though magistrate judge had expectation that party would sign consent form during hearing on pending motions).

(n16)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2); see 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(2).

(n17)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(b), Advisory Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n18)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(b), Advisory Committee Note to 1982 Amendments.

(n19)Footnote 9. Brook, Weiner, Sered, Kreger & Weinberg v. Coreq, Inc., 53 F.3d 851, 852 (7th Cir. 1995) (successor takes case as he or she finds it, without any change of status of case).

(n20)Footnote 10. See Frank v. County of Hudson, 962 F. Supp. 41, 43-44 (D.N.J. 1997) .

(n21)Footnote 10.1. Mark I, Inc. v. Gruber, 38 F.3d 369, 370 (7th Cir. 1994) (unless new party also consents, entire proceeding before magistrate judge may be set aside).

(n22)Footnote 11. Guess v. Chenault, 108 F.R.D. 446, 448-449 (N.D. Ind. 1985) (claim severed where newly added party did not consent to jurisdiction of magistrate judge).

(n23)Footnote 12. Murret v. Kenner, 894 F.2d 693, 694-695 (5th Cir. 1990) (district court correctly vacated grant of trial to magistrate judge because failure of all parties to consent was extraordinary circumstance).

(n24)Footnote 13. New York Chinese TV Programs, Inc. v. U.E. Enters., 996 F.2d 21, 25 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n25)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(3).

(n26)Footnote 15. New York Chinese TV Programs, Inc. v. U.E. Enters., 996 F.2d 21, 25 (2d Cir. 1993) , aff'd on other grounds, 43 F.3d 1458 (2d Cir. 1994) (magistrate judge's decision treated as recommendation).

(n27)Footnote 16. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 24 F.3d 958, 960 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n28)Footnote 1. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 590, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 786 (2003) .

(n29)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1); § 21.102.

(n30)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(2); Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(a).

(n31)Footnote 4. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 591, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 787, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 3427 (2003) (implied consent is sufficient for magistrate judge's jurisdiction when litigant or counsel was made aware of need for consent and right to refuse it and still voluntarily appeared to try case before magistrate judge); see 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n32)Footnote 5. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 587 n.3, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 784 n.3 (2003) .

(n33)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1); see Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 587, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 784 (2003) .

(n34)Footnote 7. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 589, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 784 (2003) .

(n35)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(2).

(n36)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(2).

(n37)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(b)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. Appendix Form 81.

(n38)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(b)(1).

(n39)Footnote 12. See Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 783-784 (2003) ; see also 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(2) (rules of court for the reference of civil matters to magistrate judges must include procedures to protect the voluntariness of parties' consent).

(n40)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(2).

(n41)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n42)Footnote 15. See [a], above.

(n43)Footnote 16. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 786-787 (2003) .

(n44)Footnote 1. Aldrich v. Bowen, 130 F.3d 1364, 1365 (9th Cir. 1997) (magistrate judge had no jurisdiction to hear case, and judgment was nullity because record contained no written consent of parties).

(n45)Footnote 2. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 786-787 (2003) .

(n46)Footnote 3. EEOC v. West La. Health Servs., Inc., 959 F.2d 1277, 1279-1280 (5th Cir. 1992) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
C. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S TRIAL OF CIVIL CASE BY CONSENT OF PARTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.102

§ 21.102 District Court's Referral to Magistrate Judgen*

[1] Order of Referral Required

In addition to requiring the consent of the parties, n1 the magistrate judge must be specially designated to exercise such jurisdiction by the district court or courts the magistrate judge serves. n1.1 A part-time magistrate judge who is not a full-time judicial officer may obtain such jurisdiction only if such magistrate judge has been a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of a state, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Territory of Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, or the Virgin Islands for at least five years, n1.2 and the chief judge of the district court certifies that a full-time magistrate judge is not reasonably available. n1.3 This means that a magistrate judge may not enter a final judgment in a civil action unless an order of referral has been signed by an Article III judge. n2 The Appendix to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure contains a recommended order of reference form. n3 The district court may use the form, provided that the parties have consented to magistrate-judge jurisdiction. n4 Once a valid referral has been made by the district court, the magistrate judge has full authority over all dispositive motions, conduct of the trial, and entry of final judgment for the claims covered by the referral, all without district court review. n4.1 However, a referral to a magistrate judge does not authorize the magistrate judge to issue rulings in subsequent actions between the parties. n5

[2] District Court's Order Vacating Referral to Magistrate Judge

After an effective referral has been made to a magistrate judge to conduct a trial and enter final judgment for the claims covered by the referral, a party does not have an absolute right to withdraw consent that was the basis of the referral to the magistrate judge. n1 However, the district court may vacate a referral of a civil matter to a magistrate judge, either for good cause on its own motion, or for extraordinary circumstances shown by any party. n2 Factors the court should consider include the following: whether the consent was voluntary and uncoerced; presence of delay; the movant's good faith; any bias or prejudice of magistrate judge; prejudice to the parties; any inconvenience to the court and witnesses; whether the movant is acting pro se; and whether requiring the party to maintain consent would serve the interests of justice. n3 The burden of establishing extraordinary circumstances to justify vacating the referral is on the party asserting the extraordinary circumstances. n3.1

Failure to comply with the requirements for obtaining a valid consent also constitutes sufficient grounds for vacating an order of reference, for example, when all of the parties did not consent to the reference. n4 When consent by parties to trial to a magistrate judge has been vacated, the magistrate judge lacks authority to try the case and enter judgment, n5 but may nevertheless hear evidence and submit recommended findings to the district judge. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & AppealCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersReferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 73.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See § 21.101.

(n3)Footnote 1.1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 1.2. See 28 U.S.C. § 631(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 1.3. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 2. Hajek v. Burlington N. R.R. Co., 186 F.3d 1105, 1108 (9th Cir. 1999) ; Silberstein v. Silberstein, 859 F.2d 40, 42 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. App. Form 34A.

(n8)Footnote 4. King v. Ionization Intl., Inc., 825 F.2d 1180, 1185-1186 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n9)Footnote 4.1. Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 783 (2003) .

(n10)Footnote 5. Parks v. Collins, 761 F.2d 1101, 1102 (5th Cir. 1985) (magistrate judge's jurisdiction over original action did not extend to subsequent garnishment action and absence of order referring motion to magistrate judge precluded jurisdiction by magistrate judge in that subsequent action).

(n11)Footnote 1. Dixon v. Ylst, 990 F.2d 478, 480 (9th Cir. 1993) (magistrate judge properly proceeded with trial when party did not provide grounds for withdrawal).

(n12)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 631(c)(4).

(n13)Footnote 3. Carter v. Sea Land Servs. Inc., 816 F.2d. 1018, 1021 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n14)Footnote 3.1. Manion v. American Airlines, Inc., 251 F. Supp. 2d 171, 173 (D.D.C. 2003) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Murret v. Kenner, 894 F.2d 693, 695 n.4 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Sockwell v. Phelps, 906 F.2d 1096, 1099 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n17)Footnote 6. McCarthy v. Bronson, 906 F.2d 835, 839 (2d Cir. 1990) , aff'd on other grounds, 500 U.S. 136 (1991) (consent of parties was not required for magistrate judge to hear evidence and recommend findings to district judge).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
C. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S TRIAL OF CIVIL CASE BY CONSENT OF PARTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.103

§ 21.103 Magistrate Judge's Conduct of Trial By Consentn*

[1] Proceedings Before Magistrate Judge

Because magistrate judges are not Article III judges, the jurisdiction of a magistrate judge is limited to that specifically created by statute. n1 When all parties consent, the Magistrates Act authorizes a specially designated magistrate judge to exercise the jurisdiction of the district court in a civil matter. n2 However, even though the parties must consent to a magistrate judge's exercise of district court jurisdiction, the consent itself does not confer jurisdiction on the court. n3 In other words, the limitations placed on the district court's subject matter jurisdiction, as set by the Constitution or by statute, may not be waived by agreement of the parties. n4 When the parties give valid consent to trial before a magistrate judge, the consent includes authority for the magistrate judge to conduct any or all proceedings in a jury or non-jury civil matter. The magistrate judge has full power over all dispositive motions, conduct of any trial, and entry of final judgment, all without district court review. n5 Thus, the magistrate judge sits in lieu of a district judge. n6 This includes the authority to conduct the following proceedings: (1) presiding over pretrial matters, such as, pretrial conferences and discovery, (2) motion practice, including dispositive motions, such as, motions for summary judgment, and (3) trial of the case itself. n7

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply to the case. n7.1 The Federal Rules of Evidence also apply to proceedings before magistrate judges. n8 The magistrate judge must ensure that a record is made of the trial by consent. n9 The magistrate judge has discretion to determine whether the proceedings will be recorded by a court reporter, electronic sound equipment, or other means specified in Judicial Conference guidelines. n10

[2] Contempt

By statute, United States magistrate judges have specified authority to order contempt within the territorial jurisdiction prescribed by their appointment. n1 In any civil case in which a United States magistrate judge presides with the consent of the parties under Section 636(c), the magistrate judge may exercise the same civil contempt authority as if a district court judge were conducting the proceeding. n2 In such cases, the party seeking civil contempt has the initial burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence, that the alleged contemnor has violated an order of the magistrate judge. The burden then shifts to the alleged contemnor to establish that the violation occurred because of the contemnor's inability to comply with the order. However, a mere assertion of present inability to comply is insufficient to avoid a civil contempt finding. Rather, an alleged contemnor must establish: (1) why the alleged contemnor was unable to comply, with a categorical and detailed explanation; (2) that the inability to comply was not self-induced; and (3) the alleged contemnor's good faith reasonable efforts to comply. n3

In addition to civil contempt authority, a magistrate judge presiding with the consent of the parties has the authority to punish, by fine, imprisonment, or both, criminal contempt constituting disobedience or resistance to the magistrate judge's lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command. n4 The magistrate judge also has the power to punish summarily by fine or imprisonment, or both, any contempt of the authority of the magistrate judge that constitutes misbehavior of any person in the magistrate judge's presence so as to obstruct the administration of justice. n5 Finally, if the magistrate judge believes the conduct of a person constitutes serious criminal contempt, the magistrate judge may certify the matter to the district court for the imposition of punishment in the same manner, and to the same extent, as for a contempt committed before a district judge. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 73.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Roberts v. Manson, 876 F.2d 670, 671 (8th Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Geras v. Lafayette Display Fixtures, Inc., 742 F.2d 1037, 1040 (7th Cir. 1984) (consent allows magistrate judge to exercise jurisdiction granted by statute).

(n5)Footnote 4. American Fire & Casualty Co. v. Finn, 341 U.S. 6, 17-18, 71 S. Ct. 534, 95 L. Ed. 702 (1951) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(1); see Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 783 (2003) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1982 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 7. See, e.g., DeCosta v. Columbia Broadcasting Sys., Inc., 520 F.2d 499, 508 (1st Cir. 1975) .

(n9)Footnote 7.1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(d); see 28 U.S.C. § 2072 (Rules Enabling Act).

(n10)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Evid. 1101(a).

(n11)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(a).

(n12)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(5).

(n13)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(1).

(n14)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(4).

(n15)Footnote 3. Chicago Truck Drivers Union Pension Fund v. Brotherhood Labor Leasing, 230 F. Supp. 2d 963, 969 (E.D. Mo. 2002) .

(n16)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(3).

(n17)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(2).

(n18)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 636(e)(6).

189 of 189 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 21 MASTERS AND MAGISTRATE JUDGES
PART II. MAGISTRATE JUDGES
C. MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S TRIAL OF CIVIL CASE BY CONSENT OF PARTIES

2-21 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 21.104

§ 21.104 Appeal of Magistrate Judge's Judgmentn*

A judgment entered by a magistrate judge who has exercised civil jurisdiction by consent of the parties is treated as a final judgment of the district court and is appealable in the same manner as an appeal from any other judgment of a district court. n1 Furthermore, in the circuit court of appeal, the appeal from a trial to the magistrate judge is subject to the same procedures and standards governing appeals from district court judgments. n2 This rule differs from nonconsensual referrals of pretrial matters under Section 636(b)(1), n2.1 in which case the district court is free to do as it sees fit with the magistrate judge's recommendations. The Magistrates Act also preserves a party's right to seek review in the Supreme Court. n3

Prior to abrogation of the provision by the Supreme Court effective December 1, 1997, parties were permitted, at the time a case was referred for trial to a magistrate judge, to consent to appeal on the record to a district judge. n4 This appellate option was eliminated by the Federal Courts Improvement Act of 1996. Appeals from judgments of magistrate judges may now be taken only to the appropriate circuit court of appeals, and any parties' designation of the district court as the appellate forum was superseded retroactively by the statute repealing the right to make such a designation. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesTrial by Consent & Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 14 Moore's Federal Practice, § 73.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(3); see Roell v. Withrow, 538 U.S. 580, 123 S. Ct. 1696, 155 L. Ed. 2d 775, 783 (2003) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(c), Committee Note to 1982 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 2.1. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(3).

(n6)Footnote 4. See former Fed. R. Civ. P. 73(d).

(n7)Footnote 5. Williams v. General Elec. Capital Auto Lease, Inc., 159 F.3d 266, 270 (7th Cir. 1998) .

1 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART VI Trial and Judgment
CHAPTER 22 Trial by Jury

3-22 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 22.syn

§ 22.syn Synopsis to Chapter 22: Trial by Jury

§ 22.01 Seventh Amendment Right to Jury Trial

[1] Nature and Purpose of Seventh Amendment Right

[2] Seventh Amendment Right Restricted to Common-Law Suits

[3] Exclusion of Certain Claims from Right to Jury Trial

[a] Equitable Claims

[b] Admiralty Claims

[c] Administrative Cases

[4] Courts Subject to Seventh Amendment

[5] Seventh Amendment Procedural Considerations

[a] Judge's Authority Over Questions of Law

[b] Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[i] Diversity Cases

[ii] Federal Question Cases

[c] Personal Jurisdiction

[d] Venue

[e] Choice of Law

[f] Default

[g] Joined Parties

[i] Interpleader

[ii] Intervention

[iii] Class Actions

[iv] Shareholder Derivative Actions

[h] Summary Judgment

[i] Court's Instructions to Jury and Commentary on Evidence

[j] Special Verdicts or Interrogatories Permitted

[k] Court's Grant of Judgment as Matter of Law

[l] Court's Grant of New Trial

[m] Attorney's Fees

[i] Generally No Right to Jury on Issue of Fees

[ii] Contractual Attorney's Fees May Create Right to Jury Trial

[6] Number of Jurors for Verdict

§ 22.02 Right to Jury Trial in Actions Created by Federal Statutes

[1] Intellectual Property

[a] General Considerations

[b] Patent Infringement

[c] Copyright Infringement

[d] Trademark Infringement

[2] Condemnation

[3] Antitrust and Trade Regulation

[4] Declaratory Judgments

[5] Employment Discrimination

[a] Racial and Sexual Discrimination

[b] Age Discrimination

[c] Discrimination on Account of Disability

§ 22.03 Federal Law Determines Right to Jury Trial in Federal Court

§ 22.04 Effect of Federal Rules on Right to Jury Trial

§ 22.05 Right to Jury Trial and Collateral Estoppel

§ 22.06 Jury Right When Federal Government is Party

[1] United States Claimant

[2] United States Defendant

[a] No General Right to Jury in Action Against Government

[b] Statutory Right to Jury in Action Against Government in Tax Case

§ 22.07 Jury Right When Foreign Nation is Party

[1] Foreign Nation Claimant

[2] Foreign Nation Defendant

§ 22.08 Jury Trial Right Determined by Claimant's Choice of Remedies

§ 22.09 Effect of Joinder or Separation of Legal and Equitable Claims

[1] Joinder Does Not Affect Jury Trial Right Under Liberal Joinder Rules

[2] Trial and Jury Decision When Legal and Equitable Claims Have Common Factual Issues

[3] Incidental Damages in Equity Actions

[4] Pleadings Subsequent to Complaint

[5] Bifurcation

§§ 22.10through 22.19 [Reserved]

§ 22.20 Requirement of Demand

§ 22.21 Specification of Issues in Demand

[1] Effect of Specification of Issues

[2] Failure to Specify Constitutes Demand as to All Issues

§ 22.22 Procedural Requirements for Demand

[1] Persons Entitled to Make Demand

[2] Time for Demand

[a] Time Limits

[b] Service of Last Pleading Directed to Issue

[c] Period Runs From Last Responsive Pleading

[3] Format Requirements of Demand

[a] Requirement of Writing

[b] Indorsement on Pleading

[c] Federal Rules Prevail Over Local Rules

[4] Service of Demand

[5] Filing of Demand

§ 22.23 Effect of Amended or Supplemental Pleadings

[1] Amendment Raising New Issue

[2] Amendment That Only Changes Theory

[3] Amendment That Requests Only Different Relief

§ 22.24 Effect of Counterclaim

[1] New Demand May Need to Be Made as to New Issues Raised in Counterclaim

[2] Jury Demand on Compulsory Counterclaim

§ 22.25 Effect of Removal

[1] Demand Not Made in State Court

[2] When Demand Has Been Made in State Court

§ 22.26 Withdrawal of Demand

[1] Withdrawal Generally Permitted Only With Consent

[2] Exceptions to Requirement of Consent

[a] No Consent Required From Party that Opposed or Waived Jury Trial

[b] Maritime Suits

§§ 22.27through 22.39 [Reserved]

§ 22.40 Waiver of Jury Right Despite Presumption Against Waiver

§ 22.41 Test for Waiver is Not Stringent

§ 22.42 Failure to Timely Serve and File Demand

[1] Failure Generally Constitutes Waiver of Jury Right

[2] Effect of Demand Filed by Other Party

§ 22.43 Waiver by Agreement

[1] Waiver by Agreement Permissible

[2] Factors to Determine Whether Waiver is Knowing and Voluntary

§ 22.44 Waiver by Conduct

§ 22.45 Waiver Made by Filing Claim Against Debtor in Bankruptcy

§ 22.46 Effect of Subsequent Trial

[1] Effect of Subsequent Trial on Waiver

[2] Effect of Subsequent Trial on Proper Demand

§ 22.47 Practical Effect of Waiver

§ 22.48 Relief From Waiver of Right to Jury Trial

[1] Motion by Party For Relief from Waiver

