(n21)Footnote 20. Harper v. AutoAlliance Int'l, Inc., 392 F.3d 195, 201-202 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n22)Footnote 21. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a).

(n23)Footnote 22. Palmisano v. Allina Health Sys., Inc., 190 F.3d 881, 885 (8th Cir. 1999) .

(n24)Footnote 23. Uppal v. Electric Data Sys., 316 F. Supp. 2d 531, 535-536 (E.D. Mich. 2004) .

(n25)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d).

(n26)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d); Arango v. Guzman Travel Advisors Corp., 621 F.2d 1371, 1375 n.4 (5th Cir. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; all state court proceedings in case subsequent to removal are void); see § 8.08[2].

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART IV. PROCEDURES TO EFFECT REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.61

§ 8.61 Time Limitations on Removaln*

[1] Time Limit for Filing Notice of Removal

[a] General Rule

The notice of removal of a civil action or proceeding generally must be filed within 30 days after the earlier of the date that (1) the defendant receives a copy of the initial pleading setting forth the claim for relief (and showing the basis for removal) on which the action or proceeding is based; or (2) the summons is served on the defendant, if the initial pleading has been filed in state court and is not required to be served on the defendant. n1 The 30-day period is strictly construed n2 and may not be extended by the court. n3

If a case involves multiple defendants, traditionally most courts have held that the 30-day removal period begins to run when the first defendant is served, provided that the case is removable at that time. n4 Thus, the failure of the first-served defendant to file a removal notice within 30 days of service prevents all subsequently served defendants from later removing the action unless there is evidence that the plaintiff intentionally delayed naming another defendant in a bad faith attempt to prevent removal. n5 This approach is known as the "unanimity rule," which requires that all served defendants consent to and join in the notice of removal within 30 days. n6 Later served defendants may either accept the removal or exercise their right to choose the state forum by making a motion to remand. n7

Some courts have rejected the "unanimity rule" and liberalized the time limit, on the grounds that the rule would require the court to insert "first" before defendant into the language of the statute. n8

[b] Time Limit When Initial Pleading Does Not Indicate Case Is Removable

[i] Time Period Begins When Document Indicates Case Is Removable

If the case is not removable as stated by the initial pleading, such as the complaint, the defendant may file a notice of removal within 30 days after receipt of a copy of an amended pleading, motion, order, or other paper from which it first may be determined that the case has become removable. n9 For example, this situation could occur if an original defendant who shared citizenship with a plaintiff, which precludes removal, is dropped as a party from the case pursuant to an agreement between the plaintiff and that defendant. A new 30-day period may commence from the date that the remaining defendant receives the paper indicating that the other defendant is dismissed. n10 The time period may also be affected by voluntary changes in a pleading or circumstances make a case become removable after the first pleading. n11

For purposes of this rule, an initial pleading is deemed not removable even if it is actually removable, if the potential grounds for removal are obscured, omitted, or misstated. n12 The defendant has 30 days from the revelation of grounds for removal to file a notice of removal, even if grounds for removal actually existed when the initial pleading was filed. For example, if the initial complaint fails to mention the plaintiff's citizenship, but the plaintiff's citizenship is subsequently revealed by an amended complaint or answer to an interrogatory, the defendant has 30 days after the receipt of the amended complaint or interrogatory answer in which to remove. n13 Thus, if in fact grounds for removal exist, that is, there is in fact complete diversity, but neither the pleadings nor other papers reveal the citizenship of the parties, the time limit does not begin to run. n14 On the other hand, if grounds for removal actually exist and the defendant had sufficient knowledge of the existence of grounds for removal, the 30-day period begins to run. n15

[ii] Effect of Voluntary Changes That Make Case Removable

A case that is not removable based on the plaintiff's initial pleading may become removable if the plaintiff takes some voluntary action that changes the status of removability, such as by amending a pleading or adding or dismissing parties. n16 The defendant then has 30 days after the voluntary act to file the notice of removal. For example, a voluntary change that provides a basis for removal is the plaintiff's change of residence. When a plaintiff voluntarily changes his or her residence by moving to another state after filing the state court complaint, that move creates diversity. The defendant is entitled to remove within 30 days after receiving notice of the change of residence, n17 provided that the defendant can satisfy the one year overall time rule. n18

If the case is not initially removable, but papers filed in the state court action indicate that the case has become removable, the 30-day period during which the defendant must file a notice of removal begins to run at the time of the voluntary change that creates removability n19 The rationale for permitting removal after a voluntary change by the plaintiff stems from the idea that the plaintiff is the master of the complaint. Subject to limitations such as the artful pleading rule, n20 the plaintiff is entitled to bring an action alleging only state law claims against non-diverse defendants in order to defeat the possibility of removal. According to this rationale, if the plaintiff voluntarily decides to drop non-diverse defendants, or change domicile, for example, the plaintiff presumably is no longer insistent on keeping the action in the state courts and the action is accordingly removable.

[iii] Effect of Involuntary Changes

If the case as stated in the plaintiff's initial pleading was not removable, involuntary changes generally do not change the status of the case to removable. n21 For example, the involuntary dismissal of a nondiverse defendant, by court-ordered dismissal or directed verdict, does not ordinarily create diversity that would allow removal. n22 The judicially created voluntary-involuntary rule is a traditional rule that was developed in diversity cases. n23 The policy favoring a plaintiff's right to determine the removability of a diversity case is consistent with the well-pleaded complaint rule in federal question cases, when the removability of a case depends on an examination of the face of the plaintiff's well-pleaded complaint without consideration of the defendant's federal defenses or claims. n24

There are exceptions to the rule that involuntary changes do not render a case removable. It has been held inapplicable to dismissals based on lack of personal jurisdiction or sovereign immunity, n25 or fraudulently joined nondiverse defendants. n26 The rationale for the exception is consistent with the involuntary-voluntary distinction. A case does not become removable when the involuntary change pertains to the merits of the plaintiff's case. When, however, a case is dismissed because either the court lacks jurisdiction, the defendant is entitled to sovereign immunity, or there was a fraudulent joinder of parties, the court's finding amounts to a determination by the court that the resident defendant was never properly before the court, rather than a determination that the court had jurisdiction overthat defendant but that the case against him or her, although not frivolous, was not meritorious. n27

[c] One Year Overall Limit for Diversity Cases

Despite the exceptions to the 30-day limit, which allow the defendant to file the notice of removal within 30 days of the filing of a pleading indicating that a case is removable, n28 there is an absolute deadline in diversity cases of one year from the date of commencement of the suit. n29 Thus, under the first paragraph of Section 1446(b), the defendant or defendants must file the notice of removal within 30 days after the receipt of the initial pleading when the pleading shows a jurisdictional basis for removal. Under the second paragraph of Section 1446(b), when the case stated in the initial pleading is not removable, but the defendant receives notice of an amended pleading or other paper that indicates that the case is removable, the defendant or defendants also must file a notice of removal within 30 days of receipt of the notice. The second paragraph also provides that, in any event, a case may not be removed on the basis of diversity jurisdiction more than one year after commencement of the action. n30 Congress added this overall limit to prevent a defendant from removing a case that was not originally removable at any time a non-diverse party was dropped, even years later, and also in conformance with Congress' intent to restrict diversity jurisdiction. n31

[d] Triggering Event for Time Limit

[i] Formal Service Generally Required

If a case is removable from the commencement of the action, the 30-day period during which the defendant must remove begins to run at the earlier of the following times: (1) when the defendant receives, generally through service, a copy of the initial pleading n32 setting forth the claim for relief that underlies the proceeding; or (2) when the summons is served on the defendant, if the initial pleading has been filed in state court but is not required to be served on the defendant. n33

The Supreme Court has specified guidelines regarding service and removal time limits. The court stated that the time for removal is triggered by the simultaneous service of the summons and complaint, or receipt of the complaint after and separate from service of the summons, but not by the mere receipt of the complaint unattended by any formal service. n34 Thus, a defendant has no duty to file the notice of removal on the mere receipt of the complaint unattended by any formal service. The Court reasoned that service of process is fundamental to any procedural imposition on a named defendant. Absent service, or waiver of service by the defendant, a court ordinarily lacks authority over a party named by a complaint as defendant. Accordingly, one becomes a party officially, and is required to take action in that capacity, only on service of a summons or other authority asserting measure stating the time within which the party served must appear and defend. Unless a named defendant agrees to waive service, it is required. The Court then specified four rules that cover the various state provisions for service of the summons and the filing or service of the complaint. In each of the categories, the defendant's period for removal must be at least 30 days from service, and in some categories it must be more, depending on when the complaint is received. n35

1. If the summons and complaint are served together, the 30-day period for removal runs from the date of service.

2. If the defendant is served with the summons but the complaint is furnished to the defendant sometime at some later time, the period for removal runs from the defendant's receipt of the complaint.

3. If the defendant is served with the summons and the complaint is filed in court, but under local rules, service of the complaint is not required, the removal period runs from the date the complaint is made available through filing.

4. If the complaint is filed in court before any service, the removal period runs from the service of the summons.

[ii] When Case is Not Initially Removable

If the case is not initially removable, the 30-day period during which the defendant must file a notice of removal begins to run at the time of the voluntary change that makes the case removable n36 If the plaintiff amends the complaint and the amended complaint makes the case removable, courts have taken several approaches in calculating the 30-day period for removal. Thus, the time for removal begins to run:

1. When the defendants are served with a motion to amend the complaint. n37

2. From the date of receipt of the proposed order granting leave to amend the complaint. n38

3. When the state court grants a motion to amend the complaint rather than when the motion was made, because the state court might deny the motion. n39

4. On the filing date of the memorandum raising a federal claim supporting a motion for injunction. n40

If the original complaint fails to demand damages that satisfy the requisite amount in controversy, but the plaintiff increases the demand during discovery, the 30-day removal period begins to run when the defendant receives notice of the change. For example, if the plaintiff increases the amount in controversy through responses to interrogatories, the 30-day period begins when the defendant receives those responses. n41

[2] Nature of Initial Pleading That Generally Commences Removal Time Period

A court's determination of what constitutes an "initial pleading" for purposes of the removal time period requirements may be difficult for states where plaintiffs are not required to file a complaint in order to commence an action. Considering that removal statutes must be strictly construed, doubts as to what constitutes an initial pleading should be resolved in favor of an earlier filing of the notice of removal. n1 In any event, the Supreme Court has clarified that in states where the service of the summons commences the action, but the local rules do not require that the complaint or initial pleading be filed or served at that time, the time for removal runs after service of formal process and when the complaint is made available through filing. n2

If a pleading is served before the complaint, such as a motion for a temporary restraining order or other extraordinary relief such as attachment, and it indicates that the action is removable, courts have held that the 30-day removal period commences from receipt of that pleading. n3 Under the Supreme Court rule, assuming that formal service of the pleading or a summons is required with the pleading, the 30-day period runs from such service. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.30[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Ortiz v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 583 F. Supp. 526, 531 (N.D. Ill. 1984) (stipulated extension for filing answer does not extend time for removal).

(n4)Footnote 3. Liebig v. DeJoy, 814 F. Supp. 1074, 1076 (M.D. Fla. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Getty Oil v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 841 F.2d 1254, 1262-1263 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Brown v. Demco, Inc., 792 F.2d 478, 481-482 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Getty Oil v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 841 F.2d 1254, 1262-1263 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Lewis v. Rego Co., 757 F.2d 66, 68-69 (3d Cir. 1985) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1448 (unserved defendants may be served after case is removed and may then exercise their right to move to remand case).

(n9)Footnote 8. Brierly v. Alusuisse Flexible Packaging, Inc., 184 F.3d 527, 533 (6th Cir. 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1076 (2000) .

(n10)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n11)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1446, Commentary to 1988 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 11. See [ii], [iii], below.

(n13)Footnote 12. See Harris v. Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 425 F.3d 689, 694-695 (9th Cir. 2005) (even though actual facts supporting federal jurisdiction remain unaltered from initial pleading, if their existence has been manifested only by later papers, revealing grounds for removal for first time, defendants may remove case for up to 30 days, provided that their discovery of grounds of federal jurisdiction is belated because facts disclosing those grounds were inadequately or mistakenly stated in the complaint).

(n14)Footnote 13. See Lovern v. General Motors Corp., 121 F.3d 160, 162 (4th Cir. 1997) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Patterson v. Intl. Bhd. of Teamsters, 121 F.3d 1345, 1348-1349 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Cervantez v. Bexar County Civil Serv. Comm., 99 F.3d 730, 733-734 (5th Cir. 1996) (when complaint stated facts suggesting federal claim and removability, defendants could not remove action after 30 days from notice of that complaint.

(n17)Footnote 16. Estate of Combas Martinez v. Barros & Carrion, Inc., 668 F. Supp. 2d 334, 339-340 (D.P.R. 2009) (for case to become removable, court must closely examine motion, order, or other document from which federal jurisdiction is ascertainable).

(n18)Footnote 17. DeBry v. Transamerica Corp., 601 F.2d 480, 488 (10th Cir. 1979) .

(n19)Footnote 18. See [c], below.

(n20)Footnote 19. See [iv][B], below.

(n21)Footnote 20. See § 107.14[2][c][iv].

(n22)Footnote 21. Self v. General Motors Corp. 588 F.2d 655, 656-659 (9th Cir. 1978) .

(n23)Footnote 22. Weems v. Louis Dreyfus Corp., 380 F.2d 545, 546-549 (5th Cir. 1967) .

(n24)Footnote 23. Great N. R. Co. v. Alexander, 246 U.S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 L. Ed. 713 (1918) .

(n25)Footnote 24. Insinga v. LaBella, 845 F.2d 249, 253 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n26)Footnote 25. Insinga v. LaBella, 845 F.2d 249, 253-254 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n27)Footnote 26. Lane v. Champion Int'l Corp., 844 F. Supp. 724, 729-730 (S.D. Ala. 1994) (citizenship of fraudulently joined defendant is ignored for diversity purposes; removal permissible if otherwise timely).

(n28)Footnote 27. Insinga v. LaBella, 845 F.2d 249, 253-254 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n29)Footnote 28. See [b], above.

(n30)Footnote 29. 28 U.S.C. § 1446; see S.W.S. Erectors v. Infax, Inc., 72 F.3d 489, 494 (5th Cir. 1996) (maximum one year period for removal after commencement of action); see also Davis v. Am. Med. Sec., Inc., 334 F. Supp. 2d 1292, 1292-1293 (N.D. Ala. 2004) .

(n31)Footnote 30. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b); see Kinabrew v. Emco-Wheaton, Inc., 936 F. Supp. 351, 353 (M.D. La. 1996) .

(n32)Footnote 31. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n33)Footnote 32. See [2], below.

(n34)Footnote 33. McHugh v. Physicians Health Plan, 953 F. Supp. 296, 299-300 (E.D. Mo. 1997) .

(n35)Footnote 34. See Bush v. Cheaptickets, Inc., 425 F.3d 683, 688 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n36)Footnote 35. Murphy Brothers, Inc. v. Michetti Pipe Stringing, Inc., 526 U.S. 344, 348-356, 119 S. Ct. 1322, 143 L. Ed. 2d 448 (1999) (unless named defendant agrees to waive service, summons continues to function as prerequisite that directs individual or entity to participate in civil action or forgo procedural or substantive rights).

(n37)Footnote 36. See § 8.61[1][b][ii], above; see also Estate of Combas Martinez v. Barros & Carrion, Inc., 668 F. Supp. 2d 334, 339-340 (D.P.R. 2009) .

(n38)Footnote 37. Webster v. Sunnyside Corp., 836 F. Supp. 629, 631 (S.D. Iowa 1993) .

(n39)Footnote 38. Hamilton v. Hertz Corp., 607 F. Supp. 1371, 1373-1374 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n40)Footnote 39. Sullivan v. Conway, 157 F.3d 1092, 1094 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n41)Footnote 40. Hubbard v. Union Oil Co. of Cal., 601 F. Supp. 790, 793-794 (S.D. W.Va. 1985) .

(n42)Footnote 41. Miller v. Stauffer Chem. Co., 527 F. Supp. 775, 777-778 (D. Kan. 1981) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n43)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1446, Commentary to 1988 Amendments.

(n44)Footnote 2. Murphy Brothers, Inc. v. Michetti Pipe Stringing, Inc., 526 U.S. 344, 348-356, 119 S. Ct. 1322, 143 L. Ed. 2d 448 (1999) .

(n45)Footnote 3. Kiddie Rides USA, Inc. v. Elektro-Mobiltechnik GmbH, 579 F. Supp. 1476, 1479 (C.D. Ill. 1984) (pleading seeking attachment order).

(n46)Footnote 4. Murphy Brothers, Inc. v. Michetti Pipe Stringing, Inc., 526 U.S. 344, 119 S. Ct. 1322, 1326-1330, 143 L. Ed. 2d 448 (1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART IV. PROCEDURES TO EFFECT REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.62

§ 8.62 Successive Removalsn*

Circumstances may arise when a defending party is required to remove the same action than once. The statutory removal scheme does not bar such successive removals, n1 provided that there is some changed factual circumstance or law between the time of the two notices of removal. n2 For example, if a district court remands a case to state court because the defendant failed to prove the jurisdictional amount, but the plaintiff after remand discloses that the amount in controversy is greater than the statutory amount in controversy, the defendant may file a second notice of removal. n3 Similarly, if one defendant's removal attempt fails, a later served defendant may file a second notice of removal. n4 However, if circumstances in the case have not changed to justify a second removal, such an attempt may subject the defendant to sanctions, for example, if the second notice is frivolous. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.30[4] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Green v. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 274 F.3d 263, 266-268 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 2. In re Mut. Fund Market Timing Litig., 468 F.3d 439, 444 (7th Cir. 2006) (no block to successive removal if facts or law change after initial remand); see Mattel, Inc. v. Bryant, 441 F. Supp. 2d 1081, 1089 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; new evidence may justify second removal notice).

(n4)Footnote 3. Benson v. SI Handling Sys., Inc., 188 F.3d 780, 782-783 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Brierly v. Alusuisse Flexible Packaging, Inc., 184 F.3d 527, 531-532 (6th Cir. 1999).

(n6)Footnote 5. Midlock v. Apple Vacations West, Inc., 406 F.3d 453, 457-458 (7th Cir. 2005) (defense attorney subject to monetary sanctions when second removal notice was deemed frivolous); see § 8.84.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART IV. PROCEDURES TO EFFECT REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 8.63through 8.79

[Reserved]

§§ 8.63[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART V. PROCEDURES AFTER REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.80

§ 8.80 Remand of Case to State Courtn*

[1] Nature of Remand

A case is removed by the defendant filing a notice of removal that contains a statement of the grounds for removal. At the time of removal, there has been no ruling or approval of the removal by the court. n1 A motion for remand is a procedure that allows the plaintiff to contest removal, and for the court to either approve the removal or to rule that it is not proper; remand is the procedure the court uses to send the case back to the state court. n2 Remand is a statutory process, which generally provides that if at any time before final judgment it appears that the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the case must be remanded to the state court. n3

[2] Grounds for Remand

[a] Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The removal statute provides for remand due to lack of subject matter jurisdiction, and distinguishes such ground from defects in removal procedure, n1 also a ground for remand under the statute. n2 For purposes of remand, the lack of subject matter jurisdiction consists of either a lack of federal question jurisdiction, diversity in citizenship, n3 or other basis for federal jurisdiction, such as supplemental jurisdiction. n4 Lack of subject matter jurisdiction may not be waived, either by the court or by the parties. n5 The primary characteristics of remand for lack of subject matter jurisdiction are that remand is mandatory n6 and the remand order is not subject to appeal. n7

[b] Defect in Removal Procedure

A district court may remand a removed action for any defect in the removal procedure. n8 In general, a defect in removal procedure refers to any defect that concerns any issue other than the issue of whether the case could originally have been filed in federal district court, and the term includes all non-jurisdictional defects existing at the time of removal. n9 For example, a defendant's filing of a notice of removal after the 30-day time period is a procedural defect. n10 Similarly, the failure of all the defendants to join in the removal notice constitutes a procedural defect. n11

A notice of removal is procedurally defective if it alleges diversity in an insufficient manner or fails to explain a defendant's failure to join in the notice of removal, n12 or if the notice insufficiently pleads the plaintiff's residence n13 or amount in controversy. n14 The defendant may remedy such notice defects by filing a motion to amend the notice of removal. n15 The defendant may not amend the notice of removal after the 30-day filing period to add a new, separate basis for removal. n16

The plaintiff has 30 days after the filing of notice of removal to move for a remand based on a procedural defect, n17 and if the court grants the remand, the remand order is not reviewable by the court of appeals. n18 However, if the plaintiff fails to move for remand based on a defect in the removal procedure within 30 days of removal, the defect is waived. n18.1 Furthermore, if subject matter jurisdiction actually exists at the time of judgment, any procedural defect in removal is deemed cured. n18.2 If the judgment reached by the district court must be reversed and the case remanded to the district court for further proceedings, however, the district court in turn must remand the removed case to the state court, because the factors of efficiency, economy, and the interest in finality no longer require retrial in federal court. n19

[c] Abstention

Abstention is a judicially created doctrine that allows a federal court to decline to exercise its otherwise valid subject matter jurisdiction over a case that is pending or that could be litigated in state court. Although federal courts generally have a strict duty to exercise jurisdiction that is conferred on them by Congress, n20 the rule is not absolute, and federal courts may decline to exercise their jurisdiction in exceptional circumstances, such as when denying a federal forum would clearly serve an important interest. n21

With respect to removal, some courts exercise their discretion to abstain from deciding the federal claim that forms the basis for removal, thus deferring to the resolution of state law issues, provided that the reasons for abstention are sufficiently strong to justify a decision to remand a properly removed case. n22 Usually such a court will retain or dismiss the federal claims rather than remand the federal claims with the state claims. n23

The Supreme Court has held that an abstention based remand after removal is inappropriate in suits at law seeking, among other things, contract and tort damages, because the abstention doctrine is limited to equitable cases. Furthermore, in equitable cases, the court's determination whether to remand or dismiss must balance the federal interests in retaining jurisdiction over a dispute involving federal law with the competing concern for the independence of state action in maintaining uniformity in the treatment of local problems. n24

An abstention-based remand order does not fall into either category of remand order described in Section 1447(c), as it is not based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction or defects in removal procedure. Therefore, the restrictions against appellate review do not apply, and a circuit court may review a remand order premised on abstention. n25

[3] Initiation of Remand

[a] Remand on Court's Own Initiative

Whenever the federal district court determines at any time before final judgment that it lacks subject matter jurisdiction over a removed case, the court must remand the case. Not only is this type of remand allowed on the court's own initiative, it is mandatory under the remand statute. n1 On the other hand, if the court has subject matter jurisdiction, and a defect in removal is procedural, the authorities are split on whether district court may remand the case sua sponte. n2

Before an amendment to the statute, a court could remand a removed case at any time before final judgment if it appeared that the case was removed improvidently and without jurisdiction. The amendment significantly changed the rule. Although courts may still remand removed cases on their own motion for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the statute was amended to state that, with respect to remands grounded on procedural defects, a "motion" to remand must be made within 30 days after the filing of the notice of removal. n3 Most courts correctly hold that a district court may not remand a removed case on its own motion based on defects in the removal procedure. n4 These courts emphasize that the statute specifically gives the court concern for subject matter jurisdiction issues, which may not be waived, and the parties, by virtue of the inclusion of the word "motion," concern for procedural formalities, which are waivable and do not affect jurisdiction. n5

On the other hand, a few district courts have ruled that (1) the phrase "motion to remand" includes a district court's sua sponte remand; (2) the amendments were not intended to limit a court's power to remand a case sua sponte; and (3) remand orders must be sought within 30 days after the filing of the notice of removal. n6 Thus, some courts have held that district courts may remand sua sponte for procedural defects, but only within the 30-day period for remand motions based on procedural defects, n7 while some courts have held that a sua sponte procedural remand may be made at any time. n8 Finally, some cases hold that a court may remand an action on its own initiative based on abstention grounds. n9

[b] Motion for Remand By Party

If the federal court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the court, the party making a claim for relief, or the party defending against a claim may request to remand a removed case to state court. n10 Typically, it is a plaintiff who makes a motion to remand, requesting to return to the forum previously selected by the plaintiff by filing the claim, n11 because a defendant is ordinarily the party initiating removal. n12 A removing defendant may make a motion for remand but should be careful because the defendant making such a motion may be subject to sanctions for improper removal. n13 A defendant who was not served before removal and who did not join in the notice of removal may move to remand on any grounds. n14

[4] Time Limit for Making Motion for Remand

[a] When Basis For Remand is Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The federal district court must remand a case whenever it appears that the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, at any time before final judgment. n1 Because a court has an obligation to correct its lack of subject matter jurisdiction for removal at any time, there is no time limit for a remand after removal when the grounds is lack of jurisdiction; n2 the 30-day limit time limit for remand applies only to procedural objections, and not to a lack of subject matter jurisdiction. n3 In diversity cases, the crucial time for a jurisdiction determination is at the time of removal. n4 In making a determination of whether diversity jurisdiction actually existed at the time of removal, the district court may consider matters introduced into the record after the case was removed. Such matters may be considered to the extent they reveals the circumstances existed when the case was removed. n5

It should be noted, however, that the district court may not dismiss a removed case if the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, but rather must remand the case to state court, even when the district court believes that prosecution of the case in state court on the merits would not be successful. n6

[b] When Basis For Remand is Defect in Removal Procedure

A motion to remand a case based on a defect in the removal procedure must be filed within 30 days after the filing of the notice of removal in federal court. n7 This 30-day limit has been strictly construed by the courts. n8 The 30-day period begins on the date that the notice of removal is filed, not from the date the plaintiff is served with the notice. n9 Because the notice is effective on filing and not service, the three days usually added to the time period are not added even if the notice of removal was mailed or sent electronically to the plaintiff. n10 A party that fails to object to a procedural defect in the removal of the case within the 30-day limit waives its right to object. A procedural defect may not be raised after the expiration of the 30-day period, regardless of whether a motion to remand was timely filed within the 30-day period. n11

[c] Waiver Regarding Time Limit

If a plaintiff moves to remand to state court after the applicable time limit, n12 and the defendant does not object to the late motion, the defect is waived and the district court may remand the case. n13 Plaintiffs are also subject to waiver. For example, a plaintiff who fails to move for remand within the 30 days may not complain to the court of appeals that the case should not have been removed because of a lack of subject matter jurisdiction at the time of removal if a ground for subject matter jurisdiction existed at the time of judgment. n14 Furthermore, if a plaintiff takes affirmative action in the federal court prior to making a motion to remand, the plaintiff may waive the right to seek remand even if the 30-day period has not expired; for example, by the plaintiff filing a supplemental complaint in the federal court after the notice of removal is filed. n15 However, a plaintiff does not waive the right to make a motion for remand merely because the plaintiff attacks a notice of removal on one ground, but fails to attack it on another ground. n16

[5] Hearing on Motion to Remand

Once a defendant has filed a notice of removal to remove a case to federal court, the defendant has the burden of establishing federal jurisdiction. n1 A defendant who has removed a case also has the burden of proving the grounds necessary to support removal when the plaintiff attempts to remand the case, n2 including compliance with procedural requirements. n3 At the hearing on the motion, the parties may present the plaintiff's complaint, as it is stated at the time of removal, and the defendant's notice of removal. n4

[6] Determination of Motion to Remand

[a] Discretion of Court

The district court does not have broad discretion when deciding whether to retain or remand an action. n1 The Supreme Court has held that a district court may remand an action only when it lacks subject matter jurisdiction or when there is a procedural defect. n2 The only exception to this general rule is that, in limited circumstances when the case raises claims for equitable relief, the federal court may abstain. n3 Even in such cases, the proper disposition is to stay the federal action rather than remand. n4 When a court makes a determination and order regarding remand, the court should articulate its reasoning, including statutory authority, to facilitate appellate review. If the district court fails to specifically state its reasoning and statutory authority for its remand decision, the appellate court must determine by independent review the actual grounds for remand. n5

[b] Consideration of Personal Jurisdiction

The Supreme Court has held that, when appropriate, district courts have discretion in motions to remand to consider issues of personal jurisdiction before the issue of subject matter jurisdiction. n6 This ruling validates the long-standing practice of many district courts who routinely decided relatively easy motions to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction before analyzing the more difficult questions involving subject matter jurisdiction presented by the case. n7 Although federal courts should ordinarily determine subject matter jurisdiction questions first, a court's jurisdiction to determine whether it has jurisdiction encompasses both subject matter and personal jurisdiction. Although a federal court must satisfy itself of its subject matter jurisdiction before considering the merits of a case, that principle does not dictate a sequencing of jurisdictional determinations. Rather, both subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction are essential to a district court's power to adjudicate a case on the merits. The Court also concluded that removed actions present no special circumstances that require that subject matter jurisdiction be addressed first, and pointed out that issue preclusion could also result from a district court's ruling that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction in a removed case. n8

Similarly, federal courts may make issue-preclusive rulings about state law in the exercise of supplemental jurisdiction. n9 The Supreme Court found that principles of cooperation and comity, essential to the coexistence of federal and state court systems, afford federal courts leeway to exercise discretion in deciding whether to rule on subject matter jurisdiction or personal jurisdiction, weighing the state's dignitary interest as well as concerns of judicial economy and restraint. Therefore, when concerns of judicial economy and restraint are considerable, such as when a straightforward question of personal jurisdiction turns on settled law, and the alleged defect in subject matter jurisdiction raises a difficult and novel question, a federal court does not abuse its discretion by turning directly to personal jurisdiction. n10

[c] Order of Remand

[i] State Court Subject of Remand

When the federal court has decided to remand, it must remand the case to the state court from which the case was removed. n10 Even if an action is transferred after removal to a different federal district court, that court may remand only to the state court from which the case was removed. The transferee federal court may not remand the case to a state court in the transferee's district. n11 Because a court may only remand to the state court from which the case was removed, it is irrelevant that state law provides that venue may be improper in that state court. n12

[ii] Remand of Less Than All Claims

Whenever a separate and independent federal question claim or cause of action is joined with one or more otherwise nonremovable claims or causes of action, the entire case may be removed, and then the district court may determine all issues removed, or the court has discretion to remand all matters in which state law predominates. n13 However, it is not entirely settled whether a removal under Section 1441(a) permits a court to remand an entire case back to state court, as is the case with a Section 1441(c) removal. Some courts have held that Section 1441(c) may provide the basis for remanding an entire case, even if the removal was based on Section 1441(a). n14 However, some courts have determined that there was no authority for that proposition. n15 These courts note that Section 1441(c) grants the district court only limited authority to remand a case, and a district court exceeds its authority if it remands a case on grounds not expressly permitted by statute. n16

Section 1441(c) grants the district court only limited authority to remand a case; thus, a district court exceeds its authority if it remands a case on grounds not expressly permitted by that provision. Federal question jurisdiction is not discretionary with the court. n17 Another court concluded that the phrase "matters in which State law predominates" in Section 1441(c) does not authorize the remand of claims arising under federal law which are properly removed and which fall within the district court's subject matter jurisdiction. n18

[7] Appeal of Order Regarding Remand

[a] Order Denying Motion to Remand

[i] Order is Not Final

A refusal to remand by itself is not a final order and may not be reviewed unless and until a final judgment is entered. n1 Furthermore, unless the denial of the motion to remand is one of the few instances in which an interlocutory appeal is permissible, a court's decision to deny remand and to retain the case is not subject to interlocutory review. n2 After the case reaches final judgment, the issue of removal is reviewable on appeal from the final judgment. n3

[ii] Order Is Appealable if Certified

The order denying a motion to remand may be immediately reviewable if the order is certified. n4 Whenever a district judge in a civil action issues an order that is not otherwise appealable, and the judge believes that (1) the order involves a controlling question of law as to which substantial grounds exist for a difference of opinion, and (2) an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation, the judge must so certify in the order. The court of appeals, in its discretion, may permit an immediate appeal if the party seeking remand files an application within 10 days after the entry of the order denying remand. n5

[iii] Appeal in Conjunction With Other Appealable Orders

The denial of a motion to remand may be appealed when the court has issued another order that is subject to immediate appeal. Thus, if an appeal from an order denying a motion to remand is joined with an appeal from an order granting or denying a motion for preliminary injunction, an appellate court may review the order denying the motion to remand at that time, and need not wait for final judgment or certification. n6 Similarly, the entry of judgment in favor of nondiverse defendants determined to have been fraudulently joined permits review of an order denying remand. n7 The rationale for such a rule is that once an appeal is proper, no good reason prevents the removal issue from being raised in connection with the other appeal, and to do so would prevent waste of judicial resources. n8

[iv] Writ of Mandamus

If a court denies a motion to remand, the court retains the case. The order denying remand is not by itself a final order, but rather an interlocutory order. An interlocutory order may be reviewed before final judgment only in limited circumstances. In the case of an order denying remand, one of the ways a party may request review of the order is by writ of mandamus, n9 but only if the party meets the extremely rigid requirements to obtain the writ. n10 Mandamus is an extraordinary remedy, however, available only in extraordinary situations if the party seeking the writ demonstrates a clear and indisputable right to the writ. n11 For example, a petition for a writ of mandamus must demonstrate that the district court committed a clear error of law in retaining the case, approaching the magnitude of an abuse of judicial power, or a failure to exercise that power when under a duty to do so. n12 A writ of mandamus is appropriate when the denial of immediate review of an order denying remand would render any subsequent review impossible. n13

[b] Order Granting Motion to Remand

[i] When Order is Based on Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[A] General Rule That Order is Not Appealable

By statute, an order granting a motion to remand a case to the state court from which it was removed is generally not reviewable on appeal or otherwise. n14 This means that any remand order issued on the grounds stated in Section 1447(c) n15 (lack of subject matter jurisdiction or procedural defect in the removal) is immunized from all forms of appellate review, whether or not that order might be deemed erroneous by an appellate court. n16 Thus, whenever a court makes a remand order based on a lack of subject matter jurisdiction or procedural defect, that order is not subject to review, even if the district court does not label those as the grounds for the remand, n17 or cite or refer to Section 1447. n18 Additionally, remand orders based on Section 1447(e) are not reviewable. Section 1447(e) gives the court discretion to join additional defendants whose joinder would destroy subject matter jurisdiction and remand the case to state court. n19 It has been held that such orders fall within general prohibition on review of remand orders provided by Section 1447(d). n20 An appellate court may, however, evaluate the merits of an unreviewable remand order in the context of an immediate appeal of an order awarding attorney's fees and costs under Section 1447(c). n21

[B] Exception for Substantive Decision

The "substantive decision" exception to the general rule that remand orders are not subject to appellate review n22 is an exception that distinguishes between jurisdictional and substantive aspects of the remand order; the exception applies only if the remand order is based on a substantive decision on the merits of a collateral issue, rather than on subject matter jurisdiction. n23 Thus, if a federal district court remands after making a substantive decision on the merits of an issue, other than subject matter jurisdiction, that the court had jurisdiction to examine and the substantive decision is conclusive, the remand is reviewable. n24 An order is conclusive if it has the preclusive effect that it is functionally unreviewable in state court. n25

Two types of collateral matters may be subject to the substantive decision exception:

1. If the issue pertains to the substantive rights of the parties; for example, courts of appeals may review district court decisions on the enforceability of forum selection clauses n26 and that a defendant waived the right to remove. n27

2. Even if intrinsic to the district court's decision to remand, a decision that alters the contours of the remanded action is reviewable. For example, if a district court dismisses a diverse third party and a third-party claim before remand, that substantive decision is reviewable, because it is binding on the parties, conclusive as to the third party, and is separable from the remand order. n28 In the same way, if the district court remands an action on foreign sovereign immunity grounds, the decision is reviewable. The order changes the complexion of the lawsuit because the determination of sovereign immunity would be binding on the state court. n29 If a federal court makes a decision, correctly or incorrectly, that it lacks subject matter jurisdiction and remands on that basis, a court of appeals has no jurisdiction to review. n30 This prohibition against appellate review applies even if the remand order is made by the court on its own motion. n31

[ii] When Order is Based on Procedural Defect

In general, an order granting a motion to remand a case to the state court from which it was removed is not reviewable, either on appeal or otherwise n32 when the remand order is based on grounds stated in Section 1447(c). n33 Thus, remand orders based on a timely raised defect in removal procedure are not subject to review, regardless of whether the remand order is erroneous, and whether the trial court characterizes the grounds as procedural. n34 Thus, a remand order based on a defendant's failure to file the removal notice within the prescribed 30-day time limit is not subject to review. n35 Similarly, a remand order based on the fact that less than all of the defendants joined in the notice of removal within the 30-day limit is not reviewable because it is based on a procedural defect. n36

[iii] When Order is Based on Some Other Grounds

Only remand orders made pursuant to, and specifying the statutory grounds listed in, Section 1447(c) are immune from review. n37 Thus, remand orders based on a lack of subject matter jurisdiction n38 as well as remand orders based on a procedural defect n39 are clearly within the scope of Section 1447(c) and not subject to review. n40 The statutory grounds of lack of subject matter jurisdiction and the existence of procedural defects are not the exclusive grounds on which a district court may remand a removed case, and other grounds are subject to review. n41 Some of these grounds are:

1. A remand order based on the abstention doctrine. n42 or based on the district court's crowded docket. n43

2. A remand order based on a determination that a forum selection clause barred removal. n44

3. A remand order based on a determination that a party waived its removal rights. n45

4. A remand order based on public policy considerations. n46

[iv] Mechanism of Appeal

The Supreme Court has held that abstention-based remand orders are subject to immediate review on direct appeal under the collateral order doctrine. n47 In the case, the Court found that nonstatutory remand orders could constitute final judgments reviewable on appeal, in addition to being reviewed on petition for writ of mandamus or writ of prohibition. n48 Several circuits have interpreted the case broadly to authorize direct appeal of any remand order that is otherwise reviewable. n49

For example, some courts have held that review of a district court's decision to remand supplemental state claims under § 1367(c) is by direct appeal, rather than by petition for writ of mandamus. n50 Other courts have held that a remand order based on an untimely motion to remand for procedural defects or an untimely sua sponte order to remand for procedural defects is reviewable by direct appeal, rather than by mandamus. n51 Before the Supreme Court decision, the courts of appeals had held that both these types of remand orders were reviewable by mandamus. n52

[c] Standard of Review

When an order regarding remand is in one of the limited categories of remand orders that is reviewable, n53 the standard for review is de novo. The de novo standard applies whether the order is a denial of a motion to remand n54 or a grant of a motion to remand. n55 An appeal of a remand order based on the abstention doctrine is also reviewed de novo. n56 On a petition for mandamus, however, the reviewing court will issue the writ only if there has been a usurpation of judicial power or a clear abuse of discretion. n57

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsJurisdictional DefectsCivil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsMotions for RemandCivil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsProcedural Defects

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.41[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d); Rollwitz v. Burlington N. R.R., 507 F. Supp. 582, 584 (D.C. Mont. 1981) (federal court need not issue any specific order to complete removal).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Apoian v. American Home Prods., Corp., 108 F. Supp. 2d 454, 455-456 (E.D. Pa. 2000) .

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n5)Footnote 1. Payne v. Brake, 439 F.3d 198, 203-204 (4th Cir. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1447; see [b], below.

(n7)Footnote 3. In Re Atlas Van Lines, Inc., 209 F.3d 1064, 1067 (8th Cir. 2000) (district court's remand based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction).

(n8)Footnote 4. See City of Chicago v. International College of Surgeons, 522 U.S. 156, 165-166, 118 S. Ct. 523, 139 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1997) .

(n9)Footnote 5. See Berger Levee Dist. v. United States, 128 F.3d 679, 680 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c); see Apoian v. American Home Prods., Corp., 108 F. Supp. 2d 454, 455-456 (E.D. Pa. 2000) .

(n11)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d); see Mitskovski v. Buffalo & Fort Erie Pub. Bridge Auth., 435 F.3d 127, 130-131 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n12)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n13)Footnote 9. In re Allstate Ins. Co., 8 F.3d 219, 221 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n14)Footnote 10. Wilson v. General Motors Corp., 888 F.2d 779, 781 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 11. Payne v. Brake, 439 F.3d 198, 203-204 (4th Cir. 2006) .

(n16)Footnote 12. Home Owners Funding Corp. of Am. v. Allison, 756 F. Supp. 290, 291-292 (N.D. Tex. 1991) .

(n17)Footnote 13. In re Allstate Ins. Co., 8 F.3d 219, 221 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n18)Footnote 14. Harmon v. Oki Sys., 115 F.3d 477, 478-479 (7th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 966 (1997) .

(n19)Footnote 15. CBS Inc. v. Snyder, 762 F. Supp. 71, 73-76 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n20)Footnote 16. O'Halloran v. University of Washington, 856 F.2d 1375, 1381 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n21)Footnote 17. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n22)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d); see Mitskovski v. Buffalo & Fort Erie Pub. Bridge Auth., 435 F.3d 127, 130-131 (2d Cir. 2006) (however, order remanding on procedural grounds made by untimely motion or on courts own initiative more than 30 days after removal is reviewable).

(n23)Footnote 18.1. McMahon v. Bunn-O-Matic Corp., 150 F.3d 651, 653-654 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n24)Footnote 18.2. Prize Frize, Inc. v. Matrix (U.S.) Inc., 167 F.3d 1261, 1265-1267 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n25)Footnote 19. Marshall v. Manville Sales Corp., 6 F.3d 229, 231-232 (4th Cir. 1993) (reversing grant of summary judgment and remanded to district court to remand to state court for wrongful removal).

(n26)Footnote 20. Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 424 U.S. 800, 816-821, 96 S. Ct. 1236, 47 L. Ed. 2d 483 (1976) .

(n27)Footnote 21. See Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 248, 88 S. Ct. 391, 19 L. Ed. 2d 444 (1967) .

(n28)Footnote 22. Minot v. Eckardt-Minot, 13 F.3d 590, 593 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n29)Footnote 23. Hernandez v. Six Flags Magic Mountain, Inc., 688 F. Supp. 560, 563 (C.D. Cal. 1988) .

(n30)Footnote 24. Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 714-715, 116 S. Ct. 1712, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1996) .

(n31)Footnote 25. See Schexnayder v. Entergy Louisiana, Inc., 394 F.3d 280, 283 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n32)Footnote 1. Apoian v. American Home Prods., Corp., 108 F. Supp. 2d 454, 455-456 (E.D. Pa. 2000) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c); Barbara v. New York Stock Exch., 99 F.3d 49, 53 (1996) .

(n33)Footnote 2. Compare Page v. City of Southfield, 45 F.3d 128, 132-134 (6th Cir. 1995) with Maniar v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 979 F.2d 782, 785-786 (9th Cir. 1992) ; see also In re Bethesda Mem. Hosp., 123 F.3d 1407, 1410-1411 (11th Cir. 1997) (assuming without deciding that district court may remand case sua sponte for defects in removal process).

(n34)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n35)Footnote 4. Fax Telecommunicaciones Inc. v. AT&T, 138 F.3d 479, 485 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n36)Footnote 5. Page v. City of Southfield, 45 F.3d 128, 133 (6th Cir. 1995) .

(N37)Footnote 6. Averdick v. Republic Fin. Servs. Inc., 803 F. Supp. 37, 41-42 (E.D. Ky. 1992) .

(n38)Footnote 7. Maniar v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 979 F.2d 782, 785-786 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n39)Footnote 8. Averdick v. Republic Fin. Servs. Inc., 803 F. Supp. 37, 41-42 (E.D. Ky. 1992) .

(n40)Footnote 9. Bennett v. Liberty Nat'l Fire Ins. Co., 968 F.2d 969, 970-971 (9th Cir. 1992) ; see [2][c], above.

(n41)Footnote 10. See 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c); see also Ruhrgas AG v. Marathon Oil Co., 526 U.S. 574, 584, 119 S. Ct. 1563, 143 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1999) ; Schexnayder v. Entergy La., Inc., 394 F.3d 280, 283-284 (5th Cir. 2004) (court or any party may seek remand to rectify lack of jurisdiction).

(n42)Footnote 11. See 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n43)Footnote 12. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1441(a), 1446(a); see also Julien v. CCA of Tenn., 268 F. Supp. 2d 19, 21 (D.D.C. 2003) (for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, removal court must remand case to state court from which defendants originally removed case).

(n44)Footnote 13. See Napoleon Hardwoods, Inc. v. Professionally Designed Benefits, Inc., 984 F.2d 821, 822 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n45)Footnote 14. Getty Oil v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 841 F.2d 1254, 1263 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n46)Footnote 1. Schexnayder v. Entergy La., Inc., 394 F.3d 280, 283-284 (5th Cir. 2004) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c); Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3).

(n47)Footnote 2. See Alvarez v. Uniroyal Tire Co., 508 F.3d 639, 641 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n48)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c); see also [b], below.

(n49)Footnote 4. Campbell v. Stone Ins., Inc., 509 F.3d 665, 669 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n50)Footnote 5. See Adkins v. Ill. Cent. R.R. Co., 326 F.3d 828, 833 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n51)Footnote 6. Bromwell v. Michigan Mut. Ins. Co., 115 F.3d 208, 214 (3d Cir. 1997) .

(n52)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c); see 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a).

(n53)Footnote 8. Air-Shields, Inc. v. Fullam, 891 F.2d 63, 65 (3d Cir. 1989) .

(n54)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n55)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d); see Pavone v. Mississippi Riverboat Amusement Corp., 52 F.3d 560, 566 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n56)Footnote 11. See Northern Calif. Dist. Council of Laborers v. Pittsburg-Des Moines Steel Co., 69 F.3d 1034, 1038 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n57)Footnote 12. See [a], [b], above.

(n58)Footnote 13. Student A v. Metcho, 710 F. Supp. 267, 269 (N.D. Cal. 1989) .

(n59)Footnote 14. Fax Telecommunicaciones Inc. v. AT&T, 138 F.3d 479, 486-488 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n60)Footnote 15. Koehnen v. Herald Fire Ins. Co., 89 F.3d 525, 528-529 (8th Cir. 1996) .

(n61)Footnote 16. See Michigan Affiliated Healthcare Sys. v. CC Sys. Corp., 139 F.3d 546, 549 (6th Cir. 1998) .

(n62)Footnote 1. Carpenter v. Wichita Falls Indep. Sch. Dist. 44 F.3d 362, 365-366 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n63)Footnote 2. Meritcare Inc. v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 166 F.3d 214, 222 (3d Cir. 1999) (defendant has burden of proof to establish requisite amount in controversy in removal cases); Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992) (when removal notice alleged nondiverse defendant was sham by plaintiff, defendant had burden to prove sham status against remand motion).

(n64)Footnote 3. Parker v. Brown, 570 F. Supp. 640, 642 (S.D. Ohio 1983) .

(n65)Footnote 4. Miller v. Grgurich, 763 F.2d 372 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n66)Footnote 1. Nordan v. Blackwater Sec. Consulting, LLC, 460 F.3d 576, 589 (4th Cir. 2006) (if district court determines that it lacks subject matter jurisdiction over removed case or there is procedural defect in removal, it must remand).

(n67)Footnote 2. Thermtron Prods., Inc. v. Hermansdorfer, 423 U.S. 336, 342, 96 S. Ct. 584, 46 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1976) .

(n68)Footnote 3. See [2][c], above.

(n69)Footnote 4. Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 719, 116 S. Ct. 1712, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1, 15, 22 (1996) ; Louisiana Power & Light Co. v. City of Thibodaux, 360 U.S. 25, 28, 31, 79 S. Ct. 1070, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1058 (1959) .

(n70)Footnote 5. Vincent v. Dakota, Minnesota & E. R.R. Corp., 200 F.3d 580, 581-582 (8th Cir. 2000) .

(n71)Footnote 6. Ruhrgas AG v. Marathon Oil Co., 526 U.S. 574, 577-578, 119 S. Ct. 1563, 143 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1999) .

(n72)Footnote 7. See Cantor Fitzgerald, L.P. v. Peaslee, 88 F.3d 152, 155 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n73)Footnote 8. Ruhrgas AG v. Marathon Oil Co., 526 U.S. 574, 577-588, 119 S. Ct. 1563, 143 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1999) .

(n74)Footnote 9. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n75)Footnote 10. Ruhrgas AG v. Marathon Oil Co., 526 U.S. 574, 588, 119 S. Ct. 1563, 143 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1999) .

(n76)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d).

(n77)Footnote 11. Bloom v. Barry, 755 F.2d 356, 358 (3d Cir. 1985) .

(n78)Footnote 12. Petrofsky v. ARA Group, Inc., 878 F. Supp. 85, 86 (S.D. Tex. 1995) .

(n79)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(c).

(n80)Footnote 14. See Emrich v. Touche Ross & Co., 846 F.2d 1190, 1196 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n81)Footnote 15. Williams v. Ragnone, 147 F.3d 700, 702-703 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n82)Footnote 16. Borough of W. Mifflin v. Lancaster, 45 F.3d 780, 787 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n83)Footnote 17. Borough of West Mifflin v. Lancaster, 45 F.3d 780, 787 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n84)Footnote 18. Kabealo v. Davis, 829 F. Supp. 923, 926 (S.D. Ohio 1993) .

(n85)Footnote 1. Huffman v. Saul Holdings Ltd. Partnership, 194 F.3d 1072, 1076 (10th Cir. 1999) .

(n86)Footnote 2. See Neal v. Brown, 980 F.2d 747, 748 (D.C. Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1051 (1993) .

(n87)Footnote 3. O'Halloran v. University of Washington, 856 F.2d 1375, 1378-1379 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n88)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b); see Sheeran v. General Electric Co., 593 F.2d 93, 97 (9th Cir. 1979) , cert. denied, 444 U.S. 868 (1979) .

(n89)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b).

(n90)Footnote 6. O'Halloran v. University of Washington, 856 F.2d 1375, 1378-1379 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n91)Footnote 7. B., Inc. v. Miller Brewing Co., 663 F.2d 545, 549-550 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n92)Footnote 8. Takeda v. Northwestern Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 765 F.2d 815, 818 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n93)Footnote 9. Goins v. Hitchcock Indep. Sch. Dist., 424 F. Supp. 2d 902, 905 (S.D. Tex. 2003) , see 28 U.S.C. 1651(a).

(n94)Footnote 10. In re Briscoe, 448 F.3d 201, 212-213 (3d Cir. 2006) (discussion of requirements for mandamus to cure denial of removal).

(n95)Footnote 11. Clorox Co. v. United States Dist. Court for Northern Dist., 779 F.2d 517, 519-520 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n96)Footnote 12. Seedman v. United States Dist. Ct., 837 F.2d 413, 414 (9th Cir. 1988) (mandamus appropriate when court vacated its sua sponte remand order and granted second removal petition based on same grounds as initial petition, because court lacked jurisdiction to reconsider).

(n97)Footnote 13. Rohrer, Hibler & Replogle, Inc. v. Perkins, 728 F.2d 860, 862-863 (7th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 890 (1984) .

(n98)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d).

(n99)Footnote 15. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n100)Footnote 16. Powerex Corp. v. Reliant Energy Servs., 551 U.S. 224, 231-232, 127 S. Ct. 2411, 168 L. Ed. 2d 112 (2007) .

(n101)Footnote 17. Kircher v. Putnam Funds Trust, 547 U.S. 633, 641-642, 126 S. Ct. 2145, 165 L. Ed. 2d 92 (2006) ; see [ii], below (remand on grounds of procedural defect).

(n102)Footnote 18. Ohio v. Wright, 992 F.2d 616, 616-619 (6th Cir. 1993) .

(n103)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(e).

(n104)Footnote 20. In re Florida Wire & Cable Co., 102 F.3d 866, 866-868 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n105)Footnote 21. Mints v. Educational Testing Service, 99 F.3d 1253, 1257 1261 (3d Cir. 1996) .

(n106)Footnote 22. Niehaus v. Greyhound Lines, Inc., 173 F.3d 1207, 1210-1211 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n107)Footnote 23. Anusbigian v. Trugreen/Chemlawn, Inc., 72 F.3d 1253, 1256-1257 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n108)Footnote 24. In re General Motors Corp., 3 F.3d 980, 983 (6th Cir. 1993) .

(n109)Footnote 25. Angelides v. Baylor College of Med., 117 F.3d 833, 836-838 (5th Cir. 1997) .

(n110)Footnote 26. Pelleport Investors, Inc. v. Budco Quality Theatres, Inc., 741 F.2d 273, 276-277 (9th Cir. 1984) .

(n111)Footnote 27. Clorox Co. v. United States District Court, 779 F.2d 517, 520 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n112)Footnote 28. Armstrong v. Alabama Power Co., 667 F.2d 1385, 1387 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n113)Footnote 29. Aquamar v. Del Monte Fresh Produce, 179 F.3d 1279, 1284-1285 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n114)Footnote 30. Van Meter v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 1 F.3d 445, 449 (6th Cir. 1993) .

(n115)Footnote 31. Anusbigian v. Trugreen/Chemlawn, Inc., 72 F.3d 1253, 1255-1257 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n116)Footnote 32. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d).

(n117)Footnote 33. Kircher v. Putnam Funds Trust, 547 U.S. 633, 641, 126 S. Ct. 2145, 165 L. Ed. 2d 92 (2006) .

(n118)Footnote 34. Kircher v. Putnam Funds Trust, 547 U.S. 633, 641-642, 126 S. Ct. 2145, 165 L. Ed. 2d 92 (2006) .

(n119)Footnote 35. In re Uniroyal Goodrich Tire Co., 104 F.3d 322, 324, 325 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n120)Footnote 36. Wilson v. General Motors Corp., 888 F.2d 779, 781 n.1 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n121)Footnote 37. Kircher v. Putnam Funds Trust, 547 U.S. 633, 640, 126 S. Ct. 2145, 165 L. Ed. 2d 92 (2006) .

(n122)Footnote 38. See [i], above.

(n123)Footnote 39. See [ii], above.

(n124)Footnote 40. Kircher v. Putnam Funds Trust, 547 U.S. 633, 640, 126 S. Ct. 2145, 165 L. Ed. 2d 92 (2006) .

(n125)Footnote 41. Poore v. American-Amicable Life Ins. Co. of Texas, 218 F.3d 1287, 1289 (11th Cir. 2000) ; Smith v. Texas Children's Hosp., 172 F.3d 923, 925-927 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n126)Footnote 42. See Schexnayder v. Entergy Louisiana, Inc., 394 F.3d 280, 283 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n127)Footnote 43. Kircher v. Putnam Funds Trust, 547 U.S. 633, 640, 126 S. Ct. 2145, 165 L. Ed. 2d 92 (2006)

.

(n128)Footnote 44. Snapper, Inc. v. Redan, 171 F.3d 1249, 1260 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n129)Footnote 45. Clorox Co. v. United States Dist. Court for Northern Dist., 779 F.2d 517, 520 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n130)Footnote 46. Kolibash v. Committee on Legal Ethics, 872 F.2d 571, 576 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n131)Footnote 47. 28 U.S.C. § 1291; see Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 719, 116 S. Ct. 1712, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1, 15, 22 (1996) .

(n132)Footnote 48. Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 714-715, 116 S. Ct. 1712, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1996) .

(n133)Footnote 49. Ariail Drug Co. v. Recomm Int'l Display, 122 F.3d 930, 933 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n134)Footnote 50. Pennsylvania Nurses Ass'n v. Pennsylvania State Educ. Ass'n, 90 F.3d 797, 800-801 (3d Cir. 1996) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c).

(n135)Footnote 51. In re Bethesda Mem. Hosp., 123 F.3d 1407, 1408 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n136)Footnote 52. Executive Software N. Am., Inc. v. United States Dist Court, 24 F.3d 1545, 1548-1550 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n137)Footnote 53. See [a], [b], above.

(n138)Footnote 54. 1994 Exxon Chem. Fire v. Berry, 558 F.3d 378, 384 (5th Cir. 2009) .

(n139)Footnote 55. United Steel v. Shell Oil Co., 602 F.3d 1087, 1090 (9th Cir. 2010) .

(n140)Footnote 56. Privitera v. California Bd. of Medical Quality Assurance, 926 F.2d 890, 895 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n141)Footnote 57. Schlagenhauf v. Holder, 379 U.S. 104, 110-111, 85 S. Ct. 234, 13 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1964) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART V. PROCEDURES AFTER REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.81

§ 8.81 Procedures Regarding Changes in Case After Removaln*

[1] When District Court Dismisses Federal Claims But State Claims Remain

If the federal claim which formed the basis of federal question jurisdiction in a removed case is dismissed by the district court, the court has discretion to determine whether to retain, remand, or dismiss the supplemental state law claims. n1 If the federal question is dismissed a short time after removal, the court ordinarily should remand rather than dismiss the case. n2 In determining whether to remand or dismiss the state law claim after the dismissal of the federal claim, remand is generally preferable to avoid potential procedural problems, such as the effect of a statute of limitation and the delay and cost of filing new pleadings in state court. n3

An order remanding state claims is subject to appellate review. n4 If the federal question is eliminated soon after removal, retaining the state law claims also may constitute an abuse of discretion. n5 On the other hand, if the district court dismisses the federal claims, and then remands the state law claims under Section 1367(c)(3), but the court of appeals reinstates the federal question claims, the district court may retain and adjudicate the state law claims. n6

[2] When Plaintiff Settles Claim But Third-Party Claims Remain

If the main action on which diversity jurisdiction depends is settled, federal jurisdiction over a third-party claim that existed when the trial began survives that settlement. n1 The general rule in diversity cases is that the jurisdictional requirements are determined at the time the notice of removal is filed, and that subsequent events do not defeat the district court's jurisdiction. n2 Similarly, if the plaintiff settles the federal claim on which jurisdiction is based, the federal court retains supplemental jurisdiction over the surviving third-party complaint. n3

[3] Modification of Amount in Controversy

Removability is generally ascertained as of the date that the notice of removal is filed by the defendant. n1 Therefore, if the plaintiff voluntarily lowers the amount in controversy after the defendant removes the case, that change does not deprive the federal court of jurisdiction, if the amount in controversy exceeded the jurisdictional minimum at the time of removal. n2 Furthermore, because the amount in controversy is determined by the amount demanded in good faith when the complaint is filed, rather than the ultimately sum of liability, n3 federal jurisdiction is not destroyed if the final judgment is less than the jurisdictional amount. n4 If, however, the state court complaint does not allege a specific amount of damages, a post-removal declaration by the plaintiff that the amount in controversy is less than the jurisdictional requisite is sufficient to show a lack of removal jurisdiction, unless the defendant counters the plaintiff's declaration. n5

[4] Discretion of Court to Allow Joinder of Nondiverse Parties

If the plaintiff seeks to join additional defendants after removal, and the joinder of any additional defendants would destroy subject matter jurisdiction, n1 the court has discretion (1) to deny joinder of the nondiverse defendants and retain the action or (2) to permit joinder and remand the action to state court. n2 Once the plaintiff joins a nondiverse party, Section 1447(e) requires remand of the complaint to state court, because the district court no longer has subject matter jurisdiction. n3 This statute is designed to prevent a plaintiff from forum shopping by waiting until late in the case to join all nondiverse defendants, and then seek remand. n4 When the district court allows the joinder of nondiverse parties, the court of appeals has the power to dismiss those parties to cure defects in diversity jurisdiction. n5

This statutory grant of discretion provides no standards to guide the federal courts in exercising discretion; however, the courts have developed factors to consider, including the following: (1) whether there are any valid claims; (2) whether the person is required to be joined by Rule 19 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure; (3) whether the statute of limitations precludes naming the party in state court; (4) whether there was unexpected delay in joinder; (5) whether joinder is only for defeating diversity jurisdiction; and (6) whether denial would prejudice plaintiff. n6

[5] Dismissal by Plaintiff of Nondiverse Party

As a general rule, a plaintiff has the option to avoid removal and obtain an order of remand by joining a nondiverse party. If the plaintiff then voluntarily dismisses the nondiverse party, however, either before or after removal, the remaining defendant may remove, provided that the one-year maximum limit has not expired. n1 Although the voluntary dismissal may be through settlement or otherwise, n2 an informal or tentative settlement may be insufficient to create removability. n3 The question arises, however, whether judgment may be entered if the district court erroneously finds that subsequent events, such as settling claims against a non-diverse party, have rendered the case removable. If the jurisdictional defect is never remedied, the judgment will be vacated on appeal. If, however, the jurisdictional defect is remedied by the time the matter is adjudicated and judgment is entered, the Supreme Court has held that the judgment is still viable. n4

[6] Invocation of Federal Jurisdiction by Plaintiff Waives Remand

A plaintiff may not voluntarily invoke and then disclaim federal jurisdiction by the mechanism of a remand motion following removal. In other words, a plaintiff may not take affirmative action in federal court after removal without risking waiving the right to remand, even when the 30-day period has not expired. Thus, for example, when a plaintiff voluntarily amends the complaint in federal court, the plaintiff waives the right to seek remand. n1 This rule, however, does not limit challenges to subject matter jurisdiction, which are not subject to waiver and may be raised at any time. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalProceedingsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.41[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Executive Software N. Am., Inc. v. United States Dist. Court, 24 F.3d 1545, 1548-1550 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Payne v. Churchich, 161 F.3d 1030, 1043 (7th Cir. 1998) (when district court dismisses all federal claims before trial, usual and preferred course is to remand state claims absent opposing considerations).

(n4)Footnote 3. Payne v. Churchich, 161 F.3d 1030, 1043 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Nelson v. Welch (In re Repository Techs., Inc.), 601 F.3d 710, 724-725 (7th Cir. 2010) (standard is abuse of discretion).

(n6)Footnote 5. Harrell v. 20th Century Ins. Co., 934 F.2d 203, 205 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Payne v. Norwest Corp., 185 F.3d 1068, 1071-1072 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 1. Hill v. Rolleri, 615 F.2d 886, 888-889 (9th Cir. 1980) .

(n9)Footnote 2. Campbell v. Stone Ins., Inc., 509 F.3d 665, 669 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Dery v. Wyer, 265 F.2d 804, 808 (2d Cir. 1959) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c) (court may decline to exercise its jurisdiction over third-party claim if all claims over which court had original jurisdiction have been dismissed).

(n11)Footnote 1. Angus v. Shiley, Inc., 989 F.2d 142, 145 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n12)Footnote 2. See Asociacion Nacional de Pescadores v. Dow Quimica de Colombia S.A., 988 F.2d 559, 565-566 (5th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1041, 126 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1994) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Watson v. Blankinship, 20 F.3d 383, 387 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Watson v. Blankinship, 20 F.3d 383, 387 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n15)Footnote 5. See Asociacion Nacional de Pescadores v. Dow Quimica de Colombia S.A., 988 F.2d 559, 565 (5th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1041, 126 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1994) .

(n16)Footnote 1. Schur v. L.A. Weight Loss Ctrs., Inc., 577 F.3d 752, 759 (7th Cir. 2009) .

(n17)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(e); see Casa Office Machines, Inc. v. Mita Copystar Am., Inc., 42 F.3d 668, 674 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n18)Footnote 3. Coley v. Dragon Ltd., 138 F.R.D. 460, 467 (E.D. Va. 1990) .

(n19)Footnote 4. Le Duc v. Bujake, 777 F. Supp. 10, 12 (E.D. Mo. 1991) (joinder denied because made shortly before trial scheduled to commence).

(n20)Footnote 5. Ingram v, CSX Transp., Inc., 146 F.3d 858, 862 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n21)Footnote 6. Bonner v. Fuji Photo Film, 461 F. Supp.2d 1112, 1120 (N.D. Cal. 2006) ; see Hawthorne Land Co. v. Occidental Chem. Corp., 431 F.3d 221, 227 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n22)Footnote 1. Heniford v. American Motors Sales Corp., 471 F. Supp. 328, 336-337 (D.S.C. 1979) .

(n23)Footnote 2. Rowe v. Johns-Manville Corp., 658 F. Supp. 122, 123-124 (E.D. Pa. 1987) (voluntary dismissal of all nondiverse defendants makes case removable).

(n24)Footnote 3. Vasquez v. Alto Bonito Gravel Plant Corp., 56 F.3d 689, 693-694 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n25)Footnote 4. Caterpillar, Inc. v. Lewis, 519 U.S. 61, 73, 117 S. Ct. 467, 471, 136 L. Ed. 2d 437 (1996) .

(n26)Footnote 1. Akin v. Ashland Chem. Co., 156 F.3d 1030, 1036 (10th Cir. 1998) (voluntarily amending complaint to add defendants constitutes waiver of defense of alleged defective removal); Koehnen v. Herald Fire Ins. Co., 89 F.3d 525, 528-529 (8th Cir. 1996) (although removal was untimely, plaintiff waived right to seek remand by moving to file supplemental complaint and seeking remand after motion was denied).

(n27)Footnote 2. Berger Levee Dist. v. United States, 128 F.3d 679, 680 (8th Cir. 1997) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART V. PROCEDURES AFTER REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.82

§ 8.82 Costs and Attorney's Feesn*

[1] Award of Costs and Attorney's Fees on Remand

When a federal court enters an order remanding a removed case to state court, the federal court has discretion to order the payment of all just costs and any actual expenses, including attorney's fees, that have been incurred as a result of the removal. n1 This provision for discretionary costs and attorney fees is a "fee shifting statute." Although the American Rule ordinarily requires parties to bear their own expenses, the primary purpose of this statute is to compensate the party opposing removal for the actual expenses of the unjustified and unnecessary removal which has complicated and extended the litigation. n2 When a party has wrongfully taken the opposition into a second judicial system, the wrongdoer must expect to cover the incremental costs. Another purpose of the statute is to deter wrongful removal. n3

"Just costs" include filing fees, process service fees, and similar fees for bringing the motion to remand. n4 Costs and fees "incurred as a result of removal" are limited to those incurred in federal court that would not have been incurred had the case remained in state court. Therefore, a party's costs of opposing removal, seeking remand, and other expenses incurred because of the improper removal may be awarded. n5 The court may award fees and expenses incurred as a result of a removal even if the plaintiff is not required to pay fees or expenses; thus, the court may award fees to attorneys that have taken the case on a contingent fee arrangement or a pro bono basis. n6

On the other hand, the plaintiff may not recover ordinary litigation expenses that would have been incurred had the action remained in state court. n7 Furthermore, the court may award the prevailing plaintiff costs and expenses only if the remand is based on a procedural defect or lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Thus, a plaintiff is not entitled to fees and costs if the remand is based on a non-statutory ground such as a forum selection clause that designates state court as the only proper venue. n8 Furthermore, fees and costs may not be imposed on defendants who are added after the case has been removed to federal court. n9

Even after remand has occurred, the district court retains jurisdiction to award costs and attorney's fees because an award of costs and attorney's fees is a collateral matter, and the district court retains jurisdiction over an award even though the court has otherwise been divested of jurisdiction over the merits of the case. n10

[2] Award of Costs and Fees Against Party Causing Wrongful Removal

The removal procedure statute clearly gives the court discretion to order payment of just costs, actual expenses, and attorney's fees that were incurred by a party as a direct result of a removal. n1 Because the purposes of this fee shifting statute are to compensate the opposition for a wrongful removal and to deter such removals, n2 the typical award is against a defendant. n3 However, courts have discretion to make awards under Section 1447(c) against remanding plaintiffs, especially in the unusual case when both the removal and remand has been caused by a plaintiffs' improper manipulative pleading practices. n4

[3] Court's Discretion to Award Costs and Attorney's Fees Based on Wrongful Removal

The court has considerable discretion in awarding costs and expenses in a remand order, but that discretion is not limited and guided by substantial legal principles. n1 Consequently, the Supreme Court has adopted a "just costs" standard for courts to use in awarding costs and fees in removal cases. Under this standard, the key factor in deciding whether to award fees is the propriety of removal, unless there are unusual circumstances; a court may award expenses and attorney's fees under Section 1447(c) only if the removing party lacked an objectively reasonable basis for seeking removal. Conversely, when an objectively reasonable basis existed for the removal, the court should deny fees. n2

In applying the just costs standard, the district court retains discretion to consider whether unusual circumstances warrant a departure from the standard in a given case, while remaining faithful to the purposes of awarding fees, compensation and deterrence. For example, a plaintiff's delay in seeking remand or failure to disclose facts necessary to determine jurisdiction may affect the decision to award attorney's fees. n3

Furthermore, a plaintiff is estopped from recovering costs and attorney's fees if the plaintiff's conduct after removal plays a substantial role in causing the case to remain in federal court, such as when the plaintiff improperly pleads the case so that federal jurisdiction appears from the face of the complaint, alleges federal court jurisdiction in subsequent amended complaints, fails to file a motion for remand, and opposes the defendants' motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction. n4

[4] Appellate Review of Award of Costs and Attorney's Fees

The court of appeals has jurisdiction to review for abuse of discretion the district court's decision whether to award costs and attorney's fees in a remand order. n1 An award of costs or attorney's fees is reviewable even though the underlying remand order is not subject to appellate review. n2 The propriety of an award of costs and fees is reviewed for abuse of discretion. n3 A district court abuses its discretion if it bases its expense or fee decision on a clearly erroneous finding of fact, an improper application of law to fact, or an erroneous legal standard. n4

An important aspect of appellate review of the propriety of an award of attorney's fees for improper removal is a consideration of the underlying remand order. In this regard, the removal procedure statute expressly prevents appellate court consideration of the merits of a remand order for purposes of invalidating the remand, such as a trial court decision concerning lack of subject matter jurisdiction. However, the appellate court may consider the merits of the remand determination for purposes of determining whether the district court abused its discretion by awarding attorney's fees and costs under Section 1447(c). n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.41[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. MR Crescent City, LLC v. Draper (In re Crescent City Estates, LLC), 588 F.3d 822, 828-829 (4th Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Martin v. Franklin Capital Corp., 546 U.S. 132, 140, 126 S. Ct. 704, 163 L. Ed. 2d 547 (2005) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Tenner v. Zurek, 168 F.3d 328, 330 (7th Cir. 1999) (under 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c), expenses may be incurred as soon as process of removal is undertaken and until and including process of remand).

(n6)Footnote 5. Mints v. Educational Testing Serv., 99 F.3d 1253, 1259 (3d Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Gotro v. R & B Realty Group, 69 F.3d 1485, 1486-1488 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Avitts v. Amoco Prod. Co., 111 F.3d 30, 32 (5th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 977 (1997) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Ferrari, Alvarez, Olsen & Ottoboni v. Home Ins. Co., 940 F.2d 550, 555 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Avitts v. Amoco Prod. Co., 111 F.3d 30, 32 (5th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 977 (1997) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Wisconsin v. Hotline Indus., 236 F.3d 363, 365 (7th Cir. 2000) ; see Husko v. Geary Elec., Inc., 316 F. Supp. 2d 664, 668 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (district court retains jurisdiction to consider collateral matters after remand to state court, and attorney's fees may be awarded under separate order from order remanding case).

(n12)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n13)Footnote 2. Martin v. Franklin Capital Corp., 546 U.S. 132, 140-141, 126 S. Ct. 704, 163 L. Ed. 2d 547 (2005) .

(n14)Footnote 3. See Concerned Citizens of Caro v. Mich. Ethanol, L.L.C., 396 F. Supp. 2d 814, 818 (E.D. Mich. 2005) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Millar v. Bart Dist., 236 F. Supp. 2d 1110, 1120-1121 (N.D. Cal. 2002) .

(n16)Footnote 1. Martin v. Franklin Capital Corp., 546 U.S. 132, 139, 126 S. Ct. 704, 163 L. Ed. 2d 547 (2005) .

(n17)Footnote 2. Martin v. Franklin Capital Corp., 546 U.S. 132, 141, 126 S. Ct. 704, 163 L. Ed. 2d 547 (2005) ; Howard v. St. Germain, 599 F.3d 455, 457 (5th Cir. 2010) .

(n18)Footnote 3. Martin v. Franklin Capital Corp., 546 U.S. 132, 141, 126 S. Ct. 704, 163 L. Ed. 2d 547 (2005) .

(n19)Footnote 4. Bankston v. Burch, 27 F.3d 164, 169 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n20)Footnote 1. Circle Indus. USA, Inc. v. Parke Constr. Group, Inc., 183 F.3d 105, 108-109 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n21)Footnote 2. Legg v. Wyeth, 428 F.3d 1317, 1320 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n22)Footnote 3. Rutledge v. Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather & Geraldson, 201 F.3d 1212, 1215 (9th Cir. 2000) ; K.V. Mart Co. v. United Food & Commercial Workers Union, 173 F.3d 1221, 1223 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n23)Footnote 4. Bartholomew v. Town of Collierville, 409 F.3d 684, 686 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n24)Footnote 5. Legg v. Wyeth, 428 F.3d 1317, 1320 (11th Cir. 2005) (even though appellate court may not review decision to remand itself, appellate court must as part of its examination of award of fees, consider objective validity of removing party's efforts, at the time that party attempted to remove case).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART V. PROCEDURES AFTER REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.83

§ 8.83 Sanctionsn*

[1] For Improper Removal

A federal court pursuant to Rule 11 may impose sanctions when papers are filed containing statements that are not well grounded in fact and warranted by law. n1 A federal court is authorized to impose Rule 11 sanctions in the removal context, n2 even if the court determines that removal was improper on the ground that the federal court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. n3 In addition to its power under Rule 11, a federal court has inherent power in the removal context n4 to award attorney's fees as sanctions against a party or an attorney who acts in bad faith or whose conduct constitutes bad faith, n5 or a losing party who has acted vexatiously or for oppressive reasons. n6 Additionally, a court may award attorney's fees against an attorney's who unreasonably extends judicial proceedings under Rule 37, which imposes sanctions for failure to comply with a discovery order. n7

Improper removal does not, in and of itself, constitute bad faith or vexatious conduct; therefore, if the court grants a remand on the basis of improper removal, without additional factors, the order is insufficient to support an award of attorney's fees under Rule 11. n8 If a defendant removes without any objectively reasonable basis, however, the removal subjects the defendant's attorney to the imposition of sanctions; a good-faith belief in the truth of the jurisdictional facts alleged to support removal is insufficient without reasonable inquiry to support the objective reasonableness of that belief. n9 Rule 11 sanctions must be based on conduct in the federal court and may not be based on pleadings filed in state court. n10 However a court may impose sanctions under Rule 11 if a party later continues to advocate a paper in federal court even if that paper containing the misrepresentation was filed earlier in state court. n11

[2] For Frivolous Motion to Remand

Under Rule 11, a federal court may (1) award attorney's fees as sanctions against a party who acts in bad faith or whose conduct is vexatious, and (2) sanction a party who makes a frivolous motion for remand. n1 Additionally, when the district court imposes Rule 11 sanctions on a plaintiff who brings a frivolous suit, the court of appeals may uphold the sanctions even though it ultimately determines that district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the suit. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.41[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. See McKinney v. Board of Trustees, 955 F.2d 924 (4th Cir.1992) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Hernandez v. Conriv Realty Assocs., 116 F.3d 35, 40-41 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Miller v. Cardinale (In re DeVille), 361 F.3d 539, 546 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 763-768, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Rich Co. v. United States ex rel. Industrial Lumber Co., 417 U.S. 116, 129, 94 S. Ct. 2157, 40 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1974) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37; Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 763-768, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Schmitt v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 845 F.2d 1546, 1552 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Rockwell Intl. Credit Corp. v. United States Aircraft Ins. Group, 823 F.2d 302, 304-305 (9th Cir. 1987) (failure to accurately determine citizenship of removing party as grounds for sanctions).

(n11)Footnote 10. Hurd v. Ralphs Grocery Co., 824 F.2d 806, 806-808 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b); see Buster v. Greisen, 104 F.3d 1186, 1190 n.4 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n13)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b), (c); see also Chase v. Shop'N Save Warehouse Foods, Inc., 110 F.3d 424, 430-431 (7th Cir. 1997) (Rule 11 sanctions imposed on remand motion that was frivolous because court had previously denied same motion in identical prior suit).

(n14)Footnote 2. Buster v. Greisen, 104 F.3d 1186, 1188 (9th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 981, 118 S. Ct. 441 (1997) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART V. PROCEDURES AFTER REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.84

§ 8.84 Reconsideration After Order of Remandn*

A district court must remand a case to state court when it determines that the case was improvidently removed because of a lack of subject matter jurisdiction and may remand on the grounds of a defect in the removal procedure. n1 Remand orders based on these statutory grounds are not reviewable on appeal or otherwise. n2 This statutory provision has been construed to preclude not only appellate review but also reconsideration by the district court. n3 Once a district court certifies a remand order to state court, it is divested of jurisdiction and may not take any further action on the case. n4 Thus, if a remand order is based on statutory grounds, a district court has no jurisdiction to correct or vacate a remand order after a certified copy of the remand order is mailed or delivered to the clerk of the state court. n5

However, the federal court may vacate and correct an error prior to the time the remand order is certified to the state court. n6 Furthermore, a district court's remand order does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to consider a subsequent removal petition filed by a later-served defendant who was not involved in the first removal attempt. n7 If a remand order is based on grounds other than those set forth by statute, the district court has jurisdiction to reconsider and correct the order. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.42 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d).

(n4)Footnote 3. Tipp v. AmSouth Bank, 89 F. Supp. 2d 1304, 1306 (S.D. Ala. 2000) .

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Lowe, 102 F.3d 731, 733-736 (4th Cir. 1996) (district court did not have jurisdiction to grant defendant's motion for reconsideration of remand after entering remand order, even though no certified copy of order was mailed to state court).

(n6)Footnote 5. Smith v. Texas Children's Hosp., 172 F.3d 923, 925 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Vogel v. United States Office Prods. Co., 258 F.3d 509, 518-519 (6th Cir. Mich. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Brierly v. Alusuisse Flexible Packaging, Inc., 170 F.3d 583, 587-588 (6th Cir. 1999) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Trans Penn Wax Corp. v. McCandless, 50 F.3d 217, 225-227 (3d Cir. 1995) .

179 of 179 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II Jurisdiction; Venue; Removal
CHAPTER 8 REMOVAL FROM STATE COURTS
PART V. PROCEDURES AFTER REMOVAL

1-8 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 8.85

§ 8.85 State Court Jurisdiction After Remandn*

After the federal court has remanded a case back to state court, and the federal court mails a certified copy of the remand order to the state court, the remand is effected and the state court has jurisdiction to proceed with the case. n1 Generally, the state court must give effect to all pleadings filed in federal court and to all rulings made by the federal court while the case was in federal court. n2 Although the mailing of the copy of the remand order to the state court is automatic, counsel should order certified copies of the entire federal court file for the state court. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalPostremoval RemandsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 16 Moore's Federal Practice, § 107.43 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. Laguna Village, Inc. v. Laborers' Int'l Union of North America, 35 Cal. 3d 174, 180-181, 197 Cal. Rptr. 99, 672 P.2d 882 (1983) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Whiddon Farms, Inc. v. Delta and Pine Land Co., 103 F. Supp. 2d 1310, 1314-1315 (S.D. Ala. 2000) (federal district court loses jurisdiction immediately on entry of remand order).

1 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
1 SPECIAL ALERT TO CHAPTER 9

1-1 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure Scope

Scope

Editor's Note:

On March 26, 2009, the Supreme Court submitted to Congress an order amending Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 6, 12, 13, 14, 15, 23, 27, 32, 38, 48, 50, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 59, 62, 65, 68, 71.1, 72, and 81, adding new Civil Rule 62.1, and amending Illustrative Forms 3, 4 and 60. The proposed changes will take effect on December 1, 2009, barring any Congressional action. Set forth below is a comparison of the amended rules with the rules as they appeared before the amendment. New matter is underlined; matter to be omitted is lined through. The explanatory Advisory Committee Notes are also set forth below.

Rule 6. Computing and Extending Time; Time for Motion Papers.

(a) Computing Time. The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [The following rules apply in computing any time period specified in these rules or in any local rule, court order, or statute:]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(1)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Day of the Event Excluded.] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Exclude the day of the act, event, or default that begins the period.]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(2)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Exclusions from Brief Periods.] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Exclude intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays when the period is less than 11 days.]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(3)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Last Day.] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Include the last day of the period unless it is a Saturday, Sunday, legal holiday, or -- if the act to be done is filing a paper in court -- a day on which weather or other conditions make the clerk's office inaccessible. When the last day is excluded, the period runs until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, legal holiday, or day when the clerk's office is inaccessible.]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(4)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. ["Legal Holiday" Defined.] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [As used in these rules, "legal holiday" means:]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(A)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [the day set aside by statute for observing New Year's Day, Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day, or Christmas Day; and]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(B)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [any other day declared a holiday by the President, Congress, or the state where the district court is located.] The following rules apply in computing any time period specified in these rules, in any local rule or court order, or in any statute that does not specify a method of computing time.

(1) Period Stated in Days or a Longer Unit. When the period is stated in days or a longer unit of time:

(A) exclude the day of the event that triggers the period;

(B) count every day, including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays; and

(C) include the last day of the period, but if the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(2) Period Stated in Hours. When the period is stated in hours:

(A) begin counting immediately on the occurrence of the event that triggers the period;

(B) count every hour, including hours during intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays; and

(C) if the period would end on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the same time on the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(3) Inaccessibility of the Clerk's Office. Unless the court orders otherwise, if the clerk's office is inaccessible:

(A) on the last day for filing under Rule 6(a)(1), then the time for filing is extended to the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday; or

(B) during the last hour for filing under Rule 6(a)(2), then the time for filing is extended to the same time on the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(4) "Last Day"Defined. Unless a different time is set by a statute, local rule, or court order, the last day ends:

(A) for electronic filing, at midnight in the court's time zone; and

(B) for filing by other means, when the clerk's office is scheduled to close.

(5) "Next Day" Defined. The "next day" is determined by continuing to count forward when the period is measured after an event and backward when measured before an event.

(6) "Legal Holiday" Defined. "Legal holiday" means:

(A) the day set aside by statute for observing New Year's Day, Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day, or Christmas Day;

(B) any day declared a holiday by the President or Congress; and

(C) for periods that are measured after an event, any other day declared a holiday by the state where the district court is located.

(b) Extending Time.

* * *

(2) Exceptions. A court must not extend the time to act under Rules 50(b) and (d), 52(b), 59(b), (d), and (e), and 60(b)The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [, except as those rules allow].

(c) Motions, Notices of Hearing, and Affidavits.

(1) In General. A written motion and notice of the hearing must be served at least The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [5] 14 days before the time specified for the hearing, with the following exceptions:

(A) when the motion may be heard ex parte;

(B) when these rules set a different time; or

(C) when a court order--which a party may, for good cause, apply for ex parte--sets a different time.

(2) Supporting Affidavit. Any affidavit supporting a motion must be served with the motion. Except as Rule 59(c) provides otherwise, any opposing affidavit must be served at least The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [1] 7 days before the hearing, unless the court permits service at another time.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

Subdivision (a). Subdivision (a) has been amended to simplify and clarify the provisions that describe how deadlines are computed. Subdivision (a) governs the computation of any time period found in these rules, in any local rule or court order, or in any statute that does not specify a method of computing time. In accordance with Rule 83(a)(1), a local rule may not direct that a deadline be computed in a manner inconsistent with subdivision (a).

The time-computation provisions of subdivision (a) apply only when a time period must be computed. They do not apply when a fixed time to act is set. The amendments thus carry forward the approach taken in Violette v. P.A. Days, Inc., 427 F.3d 1015, 1016 (6th Cir. 2005) (holding that Civil Rule 6(a) "does not apply to situations where the court has established a specific calendar day as a deadline"), and reject the contrary holding of In re American Healthcare Management, Inc., 900 F.2d 827, 832 (5th Cir. 1990) (holding that Bankruptcy Rule 9006(a) governs treatment of date certain deadline set by court order). If, for example, the date for filing is "no later than November 1, 2007," subdivision (a) does not govern. But if a filing is required to be made "within 10 days" or "within 72 hours," subdivision (a) describes how that deadline is computed.

Subdivision (a) does not apply when computing a time period set by a statute if the statute specifies a method of computing time. See, e.g., 2 U.S.C. § 394 (specifying method for computing time periods prescribed by certain statutory provisions relating to contested elections to the House of Representatives).

Subdivision (a)(1). New subdivision (a)(1) addresses the computation of time periods that are stated in days. It also applies to time periods that are stated in weeks, months, or years. See, e.g., Rule 60(c)(1). Subdivision (a)(1)(B)'s directive to "count every day" is relevant only if the period is stated in days (not weeks, months or years).

Under former Rule 6(a), a period of 11 days or more was computed differently than a period of less than 11 days. Intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays were included in computing the longer periods, but excluded in computing the shorter periods. Former Rule 6(a) thus made computing deadlines unnecessarily complicated and led to counterintuitive results. For example, a 10-day period and a 14-day period that started on the same day usually ended on the same day--and the 10-day period not infrequently ended later than the 14-day period. See Miltimore Sales, Inc. v. Int'l Rectifier, Inc., 412 F.3d 685, 686 (6th Cir. 2005) .

Under new subdivision (a)(1), all deadlines stated in days (no matter the length) are computed in the same way. The day of the event that triggers the deadline is not counted. All other days--including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays--are counted, with only one exception: If the period ends on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, then the deadline falls on the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. An illustration is provided below in the discussion of subdivision (a)(5). Subdivision (a)(3) addresses filing deadlines that expire on a day when the clerk's office is inaccessible.

Where subdivision (a) formerly referred to the "act, event, or default" that triggers the deadline, new subdivision (a) refers simply to the "event" that triggers the deadline; this change in terminology is adopted for brevity and simplicity, and is not intended to change meaning.

Periods previously expressed as less than 11 days will be shortened as a practical matter by the decision to count intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays in computing all periods. Many of those periods have been lengthened to compensate for the change. See, e.g., Rule 14(a)(1).

Most of the 10 day periods were adjusted to meet the change in computation method by setting 14 days as the new period. A 14 day period corresponds to the most frequent result of a 10 day period under the former computation method--two Saturdays and two Sundays were excluded, giving 14 days in all. A 14 day period has an additional advantage. The final day falls on the same day of the week as the event that triggered the period--the 14th day after a Monday, for example, is a Monday. This advantage of using week long periods led to adopting 7 day periods to replace some of the periods set at less than 10 days, and 21 day periods to replace 20 day periods. Thirty day and longer periods, however, were generally retained without change.

Subdivision (a)(2). New subdivision (a)(2) addresses the computation of time periods that are stated in hours. No such deadline currently appears in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. But some statutes contain deadlines stated in hours, as do some court orders issued in expedited proceedings.

Under subdivision (a)(2), a deadline stated in hours starts to run immediately on the occurrence of the event that triggers the deadline. The deadline generally ends when the time expires. If, however, the time period expires at a specific time (say, 2:17 p.m.) on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, then the deadline is extended to the same time (2:17 p.m.) on the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. Periods stated in hours are not to be "rounded up" to the next whole hour. Subdivision (a)(3) addresses situations when the clerk's office is inaccessible during the last hour before a filing deadline expires.

Subdivision (a)(2)(B) directs that every hour be counted. Thus, for example, a 72-hour period that commences at 10:23 a.m. on Friday, November 2, 2007, will run until 9:23 a.m. on Monday, November 5; the discrepancy in start and end times in this example results from the intervening shift from daylight saving time to standard time.

Subdivision (a)(3). When determining the last day of a filing period stated in days or a longer unit of time, a day on which the clerk's office is not accessible because of the weather or another reason is treated like a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. When determining the end of a filing period stated in hours, if the clerk's office is inaccessible during the last hour of the filing period computed under subdivision (a)(2) then the period is extended to the same time on the next day that is not a weekend, holiday, or day when the clerk's office is inaccessible.

Subdivision (a)(3)'s extensions apply "[u]nless the court orders otherwise." In some circumstances, the court might not wish a period of inaccessibility to trigger a full 24-hour extension; in those instances, the court can specify a briefer extension.

The text of the rule no longer refers to "weather or other conditions" as the reason for the inaccessibility of the clerk's office. The reference to "weather" was deleted from the text to underscore that inaccessibility can occur for reasons unrelated to weather, such as an outage of the electronic filing system. Weather can still be a reason for inaccessibility of the clerk's office. The rule does not attempt to define inaccessibility. Rather, the concept will continue to develop through caselaw, see, e.g., William G. Phelps, When Is Office of Clerk of Court Inaccessible Due to Weather or Other Conditions for Purpose of Computing Time Period for Filing Papers under Rule 6(a) of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure , 135 A.L.R. Fed. 259 (1996) (collecting cases). In addition, many local provisions address inaccessibility for purposes of electronic filing, see, e.g., D. Kan. Rule 5.4.11 ("A Filing User whose filing is made untimely as the result of a technical failure may seek appropriate relief from the court.").

Subdivision (a)(4). New subdivision (a)(4) defines the end of the last day of a period for purposes of subdivision (a)(1). Subdivision (a)(4) does not apply in computing periods stated in hours under subdivision (a)(2), and does not apply if a different time is set by a statute, local rule, or order in the case. A local rule may, for example, address the problems that might arise if a single district has clerk's offices in different time zones, or provide that papers filed in a drop box after the normal hours of the clerk's office are filed as of the day that is date-stamped on the papers by a device in the drop box.

28 U.S.C. § 452 provides that "[a]ll courts of the United States shall be deemed always open for the purpose of filing proper papers, issuing and returning process, and making motions and orders." A corresponding provision exists in Rule 77(a). Some courts have held that these provisions permit an after-hours filing by handing the papers to an appropriate official. See, e.g., Casalduc v. Diaz, 117 F.2d 915, 917 (1st Cir. 1941) . Subdivision (a)(4) does not address the effect of the statute on the question of after-hours filing; instead, the rule is designed to deal with filings in the ordinary course without regard to Section 452.

Subdivision (a)(5). New subdivision (a)(5) defines the "next" day for purposes of subdivisions (a)(1)(C) and (a)(2)(C). The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure contain both forward-looking time periods and backward-looking time periods. A forward-looking time period requires something to be done within a period of time after an event. See, e.g., Rule 59(b) (motion for new trial "must be filed no later than 28 days after entry of the judgment"). A backward-looking time period requires something to be done within a period of time before an event. See, e.g., Rule 26(f) (parties must hold Rule 26(f) conference "as soon as practicable and in any event at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b)"). In determining what is the "next" day for purposes of subdivisions (a)(1)(C) and (a)(2)(C), one should continue counting in the same direction--that is, forward when computing a forward-looking period and backward when computing a backward-looking period. If, for example, a filing is due within 30 days after an event, and the thirtieth day falls on Saturday, September 1, 2007, then the filing is due on Tuesday, September 4, 2007 (Monday, September 3, is Labor Day). But if a filing is due 21 days before an event, and the twenty-first day falls on Saturday, September 1, then the filing is due on Friday, August 31. If the clerk's office is inaccessible on August 31, then subdivision (a)(3) extends the filing deadline forward to the next accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday--no later than Tuesday, September 4.

Subdivision (a)(6). New subdivision (a)(6) defines "legal holiday" for purposes of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, including the time-computation provisions of subdivision (a). Subdivision (a)(6) continues to include within the definition of "legal holiday" days that are declared a holiday by the President or Congress.

For forward-counted periods--i.e., periods that are measured after an event--subdivision (a)(6)(C) includes certain state holidays within the definition of legal holidays. However, state legal holidays are not recognized in computing backward counted periods. For both forward- and backward-counted periods, the rule thus protects those who may be unsure of the effect of state holidays. For forward counted deadlines, treating state holidays the same as federal holidays extends the deadline. Thus, someone who thought that the federal courts might be closed on a state holiday would be safeguarded against an inadvertent late filing. In contrast, for backward counted deadlines, not giving state holidays the treatment of federal holidays allows filing on the state holiday itself rather than the day before. Take, for example, Monday, April 21, 2008 (Patriot's Day, a legal holiday in the relevant state). If a filing is due 14 days after an event, and the fourteenth day is April 21, then the filing is due on Tuesday, April 22 because Monday, April 21 counts as a legal holiday. But if a filing is due 14 days before an event, and the fourteenth day is April 21, the filing is due on Monday, April 21; the fact that April 21 is a state holiday does not make April 21 a legal holiday for purposes of computing this backward counted deadline. But note that if the clerk's office is inaccessible on Monday, April 21, then subdivision (a)(3) extends the April 21 filing deadline forward to the next accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday--no earlier than Tuesday, April 22.

The times set in the former rule at 1 or 5 days have been revised to 7 or 14 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 12. Defenses and Objections: When and How Presented; Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings; Consolidating Motions; Waiving Defenses; Pretrial Hearing.

(a) Time to Serve a Responsive Pleading.

(1) In General. Unless another time is specified by this rule or a federal statute, the time for serving a responsive pleading is as follows:

(A) A defendant must serve an answer:

(i) within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after being served with the summons and complaint; or

(ii) if it has timely waived service under Rule 4(d), within 60 days after the request for a waiver was sent, or within 90 days after it was sent to the defendant outside any judicial district of the United States.

(B) A party must serve an answer to a counterclaim or crossclaim within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after being served with the pleading that states the counterclaim or crossclaim.

(C) A party must serve a reply to an answer within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after being served with an order to reply, unless the order specifies a different time.

* * *

(4) Effect of a Motion. Unless the court sets a different time, serving a motion under this rule alters these periods as follows:

(A) if the court denies the motion or postpones its disposition until trial, the responsive pleading must be served within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after notice of the court's action; or

(B) if the court grants a motion for a more definite statement, the responsive pleading must be served within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after the more definite statement is served.

* * *

(e) Motion for a More Definite Statement. A party may move for a more definite statement of a pleading to which a responsive pleading is allowed but which is so vague or ambiguous that the party cannot reasonably prepare a response. The motion must be made before filing a responsive pleading and must point out the defects complained of and the details desired. If the court orders a more definite statement and the order is not obeyed within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after notice of the order or within the time the court sets, the court may strike the pleading or issue any other appropriate order.

(f) Motion to Strike. The court may strike from a pleading an insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter. The court may act:

(1) on its own; or

(2) on motion made by a party either before responding to the pleading or, if a response is not allowed, within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after being served with the pleading.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The times set in the former rule at 10 or 20 days have been revised to 14 or 21 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 13. Counterclaim and Crossclaim.

* * *

(f) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Omitted Counterclaim.] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [The court may permit a party to amend a pleading to add a counterclaim if it was omitted through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect or if justice so requires.] [Abrogated]

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

Rule 13(f) is deleted as largely redundant and potentially misleading. An amendment to add a counterclaim will be governed by Rule 15. Rule 15(a)(1) permits some amendments to be made as a matter of course or with the opposing party's written consent. When the court's leave is required, the reasons described in Rule 13(f) for permitting amendment of a pleading to add an omitted counterclaim sound different from the general amendment standard in Rule 15(a)(2), but seem to be administered--as they should be--according to the same standard directing that leave should be freely given when justice so requires. The independent existence of Rule 13(f) has, however, created some uncertainty as to the availability of relation back of the amendment under Rule 15(c). See 6 C. Wright, A. Miller & M. Kane, Federal Practice & Procedure: Civil 2d, § 1430 (1990). Deletion of Rule 13(f) ensures that relation back is governed by the tests that apply to all other pleading amendments.

* * *

Rule 14. Third Party Practice.

(a) When a Defending Party May Bring in a Third Party.

(1) Timing of the Summons and Complaint. A defending party may, as third-party plaintiff, serve a summons and complaint on a nonparty who is or may be liable to it for all or part of the claim against it. But the third-party plaintiff must, by motion, obtain the court's leave if it files the third-party complaint more than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after serving its original answer.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The time set in the former rule at 10 days has been revised to 14 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

* * *

Rule 15. Amended and Supplemental Pleadings.

(a) Amendments Before Trial.

(1) Amending as a Matter of Course. A party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course within:

(A) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [before being served with a responsive pleading;] 21 days after serving it, or

(B) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [within 20 days after serving the pleading if a responsive pleading is not allowed and the action is not yet on the trial calendar] if the pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, 21 days after service of a responsive pleading or 21 days after service of a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f), whichever is earlier.

(2) Other Amendments. In all other cases, a party may amend its pleading only with the opposing party's written consent or the court's leave. The court should freely give leave when justice so requires.

(3) Time to Respond. Unless the court orders otherwise, any required response to an amended pleading must be made within the time remaining to respond to the original pleading or withinThe material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after service of the amended pleading, whichever is later.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The times set in the former rule at 10 or 20 days have been revised to 14 or 21 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 15(a)(1) is amended to make three changes in the time allowed to make one amendment as a matter of course.

Former Rule 15(a) addressed amendment of a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required by distinguishing between the means used to challenge the pleading. Serving a responsive pleading terminated the right to amend. Serving a motion attacking the pleading did not terminate the right to amend, because a motion is not a "pleading" as defined in Rule 7. The right to amend survived beyond decision of the motion unless the decision expressly cut off the right to amend.

The distinction drawn in former Rule 15(a) is changed in two ways. First, the right to amend once as a matter of course terminates 21 days after service of a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f). This provision will force the pleader to consider carefully and promptly the wisdom of amending to meet the arguments in the motion. A responsive amendment may avoid the need to decide the motion or reduce the number of issues to be decided, and will expedite determination of issues that otherwise might be raised seriatim. It also should advance other pretrial proceedings.

Second, the right to amend once as a matter of course is no longer terminated by service of a responsive pleading. The responsive pleading may point out issues that the original pleader had not considered and persuade the pleader that amendment is wise. Just as amendment was permitted by former Rule 15(a) in response to a motion, so the amended rule permits one amendment as a matter of course in response to a responsive pleading. The right is subject to the same 21-day limit as the right to amend in response to a motion.

The 21-day periods to amend once as a matter of course after service of a responsive pleading or after service of a designated motion are not cumulative. If a responsive pleading is served after one of the designated motions is served, for example, there is no new 21-day period.

Finally, amended Rule 15(a)(1) extends from 20 to 21 days the period to amend a pleading to which no responsive pleading is allowed and omits the provision that cuts off the right if the action is on the trial calendar. Rule 40 no longer refers to a trial calendar, and many courts have abandoned formal trial calendars. It is more effective to rely on scheduling orders or other pretrial directions to establish time limits for amendment in the few situations that otherwise might allow one amendment as a matter of course at a time that would disrupt trial preparations. Leave to amend still can be sought under Rule 15(a)(2), or at and after trial under Rule 15(b).

Amended Rule 15(a)(3) extends from 10 to 14 days the period to respond to an amended pleading.

Abrogation of Rule 13(f) establishes Rule 15 as the sole rule governing amendment of a pleading to add a counterclaim.

Rule 23. Class Actions.

* * *

(f) Appeals. A court of appeals may permit an appeal from an order granting or denying class-action certification under this rule if a petition for permission to appeal is filed with the circuit clerk within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after the order is entered. An appeal does not stay proceedings in the district court unless the district judge or the court of appeals so orders.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The time set in the former rule at 10 days has been revised to 14 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

* * *

Rule 27. Depositions to Perpetuate Testimony.

(a) Before an Action Is Filed.

* * *

(2) Notice and Service. At least The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days before the hearing date, the petitioner must serve each expected adverse party with a copy of the petition and a notice stating the time and place of the hearing. The notice may be served either inside or outside the district or state in the manner provided in Rule 4. If that service cannot be made with reasonable diligence on an expected adverse party, the court may order service by publication or otherwise. The court must appoint an attorney to represent persons not served in the manner provided in Rule 4 and to cross-examine the deponent if an unserved person is not otherwise represented. If any expected adverse party is a minor or is incompetent, Rule 17(c) applies.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The time set in the former rule at 20 days has been revised to 21 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 32. Using Depositions in Court Proceedings.

(a) Using Depositions.

* * *

(5) Limitations on Use.

(A) Deposition Taken on Short Notice. A deposition must not be used against a party who, having received less than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [11] 14 days' notice of the deposition, promptly moved for a protective order under Rule 26(c)(1)(B) requesting that it not be taken or be taken at a different time or place--and this motion was still pending when the deposition was taken.

* * *

(d) Waiver of Objections.

* * *

(3) To the Taking of the Deposition.

* * *

(C) Objection to a Written Question. An objection to the form of a written question under Rule 31 is waived if not served in writing on the party submitting the question within the time for serving responsive questions or, if the question is a recross question, within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [5] 7 days after being served with it.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The times set in the former rule at less than 11 days and within 5 days have been revised to 14 days and 7 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

* * *

Rule 38. Right to a Jury Trial; Demand.

* * *

(b) Demand. On any issue triable of right by a jury, a party may demand a jury trial by: On any issue triable of right by a jury, a party may demand a jury trial by:

(1) serving the other parties with a written demand--which may be included in a pleading--no later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after the last pleading directed to the issue is served; and

(2) filing the demand in accordance with Rule 5(d).

(c) Specifying Issues. In its demand, a party may specify the issues that it wishes to have tried by a jury; otherwise, it is considered to have demanded a jury trial on all the issues so triable. If the party has demanded a jury trial on only some issues, any other party may--within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after being served with the demand or within a shorter time ordered by the court--serve a demand for a jury trial on any other or all factual issues triable by jury.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The times set in the former rule at 10 days have been revised to 14 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 48. Number of Jurors; Verdict; Polling.

(a) Number of Jurors. A jury must The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [initially have] begin with at least 6 and no more than 12 members, and each juror must participate in the verdict unless excused under Rule 47(c).

(b) Verdict. Unless the parties stipulate otherwise, the verdict must be unanimous and must be returned by a jury of at least 6 members.

(c) Polling. After a verdict is returned but before the jury is discharged, the court must on a party's request, or may on its own, poll the jurors individually. If the poll reveals a lack of unanimity or lack of assent by the number of jurors that the parties stipulated to, the court may direct the jury to deliberate further or may order a new trial.

Committee Note of 2009

Jury polling is added as new subdivision (c), which is drawn from Criminal Rule 31(d) with minor revisions to reflect Civil Rules Style and the parties' opportunity to stipulate to a nonunanimous verdict.

* * *

Rule 50. Judgment as a Matter of Law in a Jury Trial; Related Motion for a New Trial; Conditional Ruling.

* * *

(b) Renewing the Motion After Trial; Alternative Motion for a New Trial. If the court does not grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law made under Rule 50(a), the court is considered to have submitted the action to the jury subject to the court's later deciding the legal questions raised by the motion. No later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 28 days after the entry of judgment--or if the motion addresses a jury issue not decided by a verdict, no later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 28 days after the jury was discharged--the movant may file a renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law and may include an alternative or joint request for a new trial under Rule 59. In ruling on the renewed motion, the court may:

* * *

(d) Time for a Losing Party's New-Trial Motion. Any motion for a new trial under Rule 59 by a party against whom judgment as a matter of law is rendered must be filed no later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 28 days after the entry of the judgment.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

Former Rules 50, 52, and 59 adopted 10 day periods for their respective post judgment motions. Rule 6(b) prohibits any expansion of those periods. Experience has proved that in many cases it is not possible to prepare a satisfactory post judgment motion in 10 days, even under the former rule that excluded intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays. These time periods are particularly sensitive because Appellate Rule 4 integrates the time to appeal with a timely motion under these rules. Rather than introduce the prospect of uncertainty in appeal time by amending Rule 6(b) to permit additional time, the former 10 day periods are expanded to 28 days. Rule 6(b) continues to prohibit expansion of the 28 day period.

* * *

Rule 52. Findings and Conclusions by the Court; Judgment on Partial Findings.

* * *

(b) Amended or Additional Findings. On a party's motion filed no later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 28 days after the entry of judgment, the court may amend its findings--or make additional findings--and may amend the judgment accordingly. The motion may accompany a motion for a new trial under Rule 59.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

Former Rules 50, 52, and 59 adopted 10 day periods for their respective post judgment motions. Rule 6(b) prohibits any expansion of those periods. Experience has proved that in many cases it is not possible to prepare a satisfactory post judgment motion in 10 days, even under the former rule that excluded intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays. These time periods are particularly sensitive because Appellate Rule 4 integrates the time to appeal with a timely motion under these rules. Rather than introduce the prospect of uncertainty in appeal time by amending Rule 6(b) to permit additional time, the former 10 day periods are expanded to 28 days. Rule 6(b) continues to prohibit expansion of the 28 day period.

* * *

Rule 53. Masters.

* * *

(f) Action on the Master's Order, Report, or Recommendations.

* * *

(2) Time to Object or Move to Adopt or Modify. A party may file objections to--or a motion to adopt or modify--the master's order, report, or recommendations no later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after a copy is served, unless the court sets a different time.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The time set in the former rule at 20 days has been revised to 21 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 54. Judgment; Costs.

* * *

(d) Costs; Attorney's Fees.

(1) Costs Other Than Attorney's Fees. Unless a federal statute, these rules, or a court order provides otherwise, costs--other than attorney's fees--should be allowed to the prevailing party. But costs against the United States, its officers, and its agencies may be imposed only to the extent allowed by law. The clerk may tax costs on The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [1 day's] 14 days' notice. On motion served within the next The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [5] 7 days, the court may review the clerk's action.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

Former Rule 54(d)(1) provided that the clerk may tax costs on 1 day's notice. That period was unrealistically short. The new 14 day period provides a better opportunity to prepare and present a response. The former 5 day period to serve a motion to review the clerk's action is extended to 7 days to reflect the change in the Rule 6(a) method for computing periods of less than 11 days.

* * *

Rule 55. Default; Default Judgment.

* * *

(b) Entering a Default Judgment.

* * *

(2) By the Court. In all other cases, the party must apply to the court for a default judgment. A default judgment may be entered against a minor or incompetent person only if represented by a general guardian, conservator, or other like fiduciary who has appeared. If the party against whom a default judgment is sought has appeared personally or by a representative, that party or its representative must be served with written notice of the application at least The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [3] 7 days before the hearing. The court may conduct hearings or make referrals--preserving any federal statutory right to a jury trial--when, to enter or effectuate judgment, it needs to:

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The time set in the former rule at 3 days has been revised to 7 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 56. Summary Judgment.

(a) By a Claiming Party. A party claiming relief may move, with or without supporting affidavits, for summary judgment on all or part of the claim. The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [The motion may be filed at any time after:]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(1)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20 days have passed from commencement of the action; or]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(2)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [the opposing party serves a motion for summary judgment.]

(b) By a Defending Party. A party against whom relief is sought may move The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [at any time], with or without supporting affidavits, for summary judgment on all or part of the claim.

(c) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [Serving the] Time for a Motion, Response, and Reply; Proceedings. The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [The motion must be served at least 10 days before the day set for the hearing. An opposing party may serve opposing affidavits before the hearing day.]

(1) These times apply unless a different time is set by local rule or the court orders otherwise:

(A) a party may move for summary judgment at any time until 30 days after the close of all discovery;

(B) a party opposing the motion must file a response within 21 days after the motion is served or a responsive pleading is due, whichever is later; and

(C) the movant may file a reply within 14 days after the response is served.

(2) The judgment sought should be rendered if the pleadings, the discovery and disclosure materials on file, and any affidavits show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The timing provisions for summary judgment are outmoded. They are consolidated and substantially revised in new subdivision (c)(1). The new rule allows a party to move for summary judgment at any time, even as early as the commencement of the action. If the motion seems premature both subdivision (c)(1) and Rule 6(b) allow the court to extend the time to respond. The rule does set a presumptive deadline at 30 days after the close of all discovery.

The presumptive timing rules are default provisions that may be altered by an order in the case or by local rule. Scheduling orders are likely to supersede the rule provisions in most cases, deferring summary-judgment motions until a stated time or establishing different deadlines. Scheduling orders tailored to the needs of the specific case, perhaps adjusted as it progresses, are likely to work better than default rules. A scheduling order may be adjusted to adopt the parties' agreement on timing, or may require that discovery and motions occur in stages--including separation of expert-witness discovery from other discovery.

Local rules may prove useful when local docket conditions or practices are incompatible with the general Rule 56 timing provisions.

If a motion for summary judgment is filed before a responsive pleading is due from a party affected by the motion, the time for responding to the motion is 21 days after the responsive pleading is due.

Rule 59. New Trial; Altering or Amending a Judgment.

* * *

(b) Time to File a Motion for a New Trial. A motion for a new trial must be filed no later than 28 days after the entry of judgment.

(c) Time to Serve Affidavits. When a motion for a new trial is based on affidavits, they must be filed with the motion. The opposing party has The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after being served to file opposing affidavitsThe material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [; but that period may be extended for up to 20 days, either by the court for good cause or by the parties' stipulation]. The court may permit reply affidavits.

(d) New Trial on the Court's Initiative or for Reasons Not in the Motion. No later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 28 days after the entry of judgment, the court, on its own, may order a new trial for any reason that would justify granting one on a party's motion. After giving the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard, the court may grant a timely motion for a new trial for a reason not stated in the motion. In either event, the court must specify the reasons in its order.

(e) Motion to Alter or Amend a Judgment. A motion to alter or amend a judgment must be filed no later than The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 28 days after the entry of the judgment.

Committee Note of 2009

Former Rules 50, 52, and 59 adopted 10 day periods for their respective post judgment motions. Rule 6(b) prohibits any expansion of those periods. Experience has proved that in many cases it is not possible to prepare a satisfactory post judgment motion in 10 days, even under the former rule that excluded intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays. These time periods are particularly sensitive because Appellate Rule 4 integrates the time to appeal with a timely motion under these rules. Rather than introduce the prospect of uncertainty in appeal time by amending Rule 6(b) to permit additional time, the former 10 day periods are expanded to 28 days. Rule 6(b) continues to prohibit expansion of the 28 day period.

Former Rule 59(c) set a 10 day period after being served with a motion for new trial to file opposing affidavits. It also provided that the period could be extended for up to 20 days for good cause or by stipulation. The apparent 20 day limit on extending the time to file opposing affidavits seemed to conflict with the Rule 6(b) authority to extend time without any specific limit. This tension between the two rules may have been inadvertent. It is resolved by deleting the former Rule 59(c) limit. Rule 6(b) governs. The underlying 10 day period was extended to 14 days to reflect the change in the Rule 6(a) method for computing periods of less than 11 days.

Rule 62. Stay of Proceedings to Enforce a Judgment.

(a) Automatic Stay; Exceptions for Injunctions, Receiverships, and Patent Accountings. Except as stated in this rule, no execution may issue on a judgment, nor may proceedings be taken to enforce it, until The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days have passed after its entry. But unless the court orders otherwise, the following are not stayed after being entered, even if an appeal is taken:

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The time set in the former rule at 10 days has been revised to 14 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

(New) Rule 62.1. Indicative Ruling on a Motion for Relief That is Barred by a Pending Appeal.

(a) Relief Pending Appeal. If a timely motion is made for relief that the court lacks authority to grant because of an appeal that has been docketed and is pending, the court may:

(1) defer considering the motion;

(2) deny the motion; or

(3) state either that it would grant the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose or that the motion raises a substantial issue.

(b) Notice to the Court of Appeals. The movant must promptly notify the circuit clerk under Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 12.1 if the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue.

(c) Remand. The district court may decide the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose.

Committee Note of 2009

This new rule adopts for any motion that the district court cannot grant because of a pending appeal the practice that most courts follow when a party makes a Rule 60(b) motion to vacate a judgment that is pending on appeal. After an appeal has been docketed and while it remains pending, the district court cannot grant a Rule 60(b) motion without a remand. But it can entertain the motion and deny it, defer consideration, or state that it would grant the motion if the the court of appeals remands for that purpose or state that the motion raises a substantial issue. Experienced lawyers often refer to the suggestion for remand as an "indicative ruling." (Appellate Rule 4(a)(4) lists six motions that, if filed within the relevant time limit, suspend the effect of a notice of appeal filed before or after the motion is filed until the last such motion is disposed of. The district court has authority to grant the motion without resorting to the indicative ruling procedure.)

This clear procedure is helpful whenever relief is sought from an order that the court cannot reconsider because the order is the subject of a pending appeal. Rule 62.1 does not attempt to define the circumstances in which an appeal limits or defeats the district court's authority to act in the face of a pending appeal. The rules that govern the relationship between trial courts and appellate courts may be complex, depending in part on the nature of the order and the source of appeal jurisdiction. Rule 62.1 applies only when those rules deprive the district court of authority to grant relief without appellate permission. If the district court concludes that it has authority to grant relief without appellate permission, it can act without falling back on the indicative ruling procedure.

To ensure proper coordination of proceedings in the district court and in the appellate court, the movant must notify the circuit clerk under Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 12.1 if the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue. Remand is in the court of appeals' discretion under Appellate Rule 12.1.

Often it will be wise for the district court to determine whether it in fact would grant the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose. But a motion may present complex issues that require extensive litigation and that may either be mooted or be presented in a different context by decision of the issues raised on appeal. In such circumstances the district court may prefer to state that the motion raises a substantial issue, and to state the reasons why it prefers to decide only if the court of appeals agrees that it would be useful to decide the motion before decision of the pending appeal. The district court is not bound to grant the motion after stating that the motion raises a substantial issue; further proceedings on remand may show that the motion ought not be granted.

Rule 65. Injunctions and Restraining Orders.

* * *

(b) Temporary Restraining Order.

* * *

(2) Contents; Expiration. Every temporary restraining order issued without notice must state the date and hour it was issued; describe the injury and state why it is irreparable; state why the order was issued without notice; and be promptly filed in the clerk's office and entered in the record. The order expires at the time after entry--not to exceed The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days--that the court sets, unless before that time the court, for good cause, extends it for a like period or the adverse party consents to a longer extension. The reasons for an extension must be entered in the record.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The time set in the former rule at 10 days has been revised to 14 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 68. Offer of Judgment.

(a) Making an Offer; Judgment on an Accepted Offer. The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [More than 10] At least 14 days before the date set for trial The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [begins], a party defending against a claim may serve on an opposing party an offer to allow judgment on specified terms, with the costs then accrued. If, within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after being served, the opposing party serves written notice accepting the offer, either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance, plus proof of service. The clerk must then enter judgment.

* * *

(c) Offer After Liability is Determined. When one party's liability to another has been determined but the extent of liability remains to be determined by further proceedings, the party held liable may make an offer of judgment. It must be served within a reasonable time--but at least The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days--before the date set for a hearing to determine the extent of liability.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

Former Rule 68 allowed service of an offer of judgment more than 10 days before the trial begins, or--if liability has been determined--at least 10 days before a hearing to determine the extent of liability. It may be difficult to know in advance when trial will begin or when a hearing will be held. The time is now measured from the date set for trial or hearing; resetting the date establishes a new time for serving the offer.

The former 10-day periods are extended to 14 days to reflect the change in the Rule 6(a) method for computing periods less than 11 days.

* * *

Rule 71.1. Condemning Real or Personal Property.

* * *

(d) Process.

* * *

* * *

(2) Contents of the Notice.

(A) Main Contents. Each notice must name the court, the title of the action, and the defendant to whom it is directed. It must describe the property sufficiently to identify it, but need not describe any property other than that to be taken from the named defendant. The notice must also state:

(i) that the action is to condemn property;

(ii) the interest to be taken;

(iii) the authority for the taking;

(iv) the uses for which the property is to be taken;

(v) that the defendant may serve an answer on the plaintiffs attorney within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after being served with the notice;

(vi) that the failure to so serve an answer constitutes consent to the taking and to the court's authority to proceed with the action and fix the compensation; and

(vii) that a defendant who does not serve an answer may file a notice of appearance.

* * *

(e) Appearance or Answer.

* * *

(2) Answer. A defendant that has an objection or defense to the taking must serve an answer within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after being served with the notice. The answer must:

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The times set in the former rule at 20 days have been revised to 21 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 72. Magistrate Judges: Pretrial Order.

(a) Nondispositive Matters. When a pretrial matter not dispositive of a party's claim or defense is referred to a magistrate judge to hear and decide, the magistrate judge must promptly conduct the required proceedings and, when appropriate, issue a written order stating the decision. A party may serve and file objections to the order within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after being served with a copy. A party may not assign as error a defect in the order not timely objected to. The district judge in the case must consider timely objections and modify or set aside any part of the order that is clearly erroneous or is contrary to law.

(b) Dispositive Motions and Prisoner Petitions.

* * *

(2) Objections. Within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after being served with a copy of the recommended disposition, a party may serve and file specific written objections to the proposed findings and recommendations. A party may respond to another party's objections within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after being served with a copy. Unless the district judge orders otherwise, the objecting party must promptly arrange for transcribing the record, or whatever portions of it the parties agree to or the magistrate judge considers sufficient.

* * *

Committee Note of 2009

The times set in the former rule at 10 days have been revised to 14 days. See the Note to Rule 6.

Rule 81. Applicability of the Rules in General; Removed Actions.

* * *

(c) Removed Actions.

* * *

(2) Further Pleading. After removal, repleading is unnecessary unless the court orders it. A defendant who did not answer before removal must answer or present other defenses or objections under these rules within the longest of these periods:

(A) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after receiving--through service or otherwise--a copy of the initial pleading stating the claim for relief;

(B) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after being served with the summons for an initial pleading on file at the time of service; or

(C) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [5] 7 days after the notice of removal is filed.

(3) Demand for a Jury Trial.

* * *

(B) Under Rule 38. If all necessary pleadings have been served at the time of removal, a party entitled to a jury trial under Rule 38 must be given one if the party serves a demand within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [10] 14 days after:

(i) it files a notice of removal; or

(ii) it is served with a notice of removal filed by another party.

(d) Law Applicable.

(1) "State Law" Defined. When these rules refer to state law, the term "law" includes the state's statutes and the state's judicial decisions.

(2) The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [District of Columbia] "State" Defined . The term "state" includes, where appropriate, the District of Columbia and any United States commonwealth or territory. The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [When these rules provide for state law to apply, in the District Court for the District of Columbia:]

The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [(A)] The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [the law applied in the District governs; and (B)]

(3) "Federal Statute" Defined in the District of Columbia. In the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the term "federal statute" includes any Act of Congress that applies locally to the District.

Committee Note of 2009

The times set in the former rule at 5, 10, and 20 days have been revised to 7, 14, and 21 days, respectively. See the Note to Rule 6.

Several Rules incorporate local state practice. Rule 81(d) now provides that "the term 'state' includes, where appropriate, the District of Columbia." The definition is expanded to include any commonwealth or territory of the United States. As before, these entities are included only "where appropriate." They are included for the reasons that counsel incorporation of state practice. For example, state holidays are recognized in computing time under Rule 6(a). Other, quite different, examples are Rules 64(a), invoking state law for prejudgment remedies, and 69(a)(1), relying on state law for the procedure on execution. Including commonwealths and territories in these and other rules avoids the gaps that otherwise would result when the federal rule relies on local practice rather than provide a uniform federal approach. Including them also establishes uniformity between federal courts and local courts in areas that may involve strong local interests, little need for uniformity among federal courts, or difficulty in defining a uniform federal practice that integrates effectively with local practice.

Adherence to a local practice may be refused as not "appropriate" when the local practice would impair a significant federal interest. Official Forms

Form 3. Summons.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

To name the defendant:

A lawsuit has been filed against you.

Within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after service of this summons on you (not counting the day you received it), you must serve on the plaintiff an answer to the attached complaint or a motion under Rule 12 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

* * *

Form 4. Summons on a Third-Party Complaint.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

To name the third-party defendant:

A lawsuit has been filed against defendant _____ , who as third-party plaintiff is making this claim against you to pay part or all of what [he] may owe to the plaintiff _____ .

Within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days after service of this summons on you (not counting the day you received it), you must serve on the plaintiff and on the defendant an answer to the attached third-party complaint or a motion under Rule 12 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

* * *

Form 60. Notice of Condemnation.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

* * *

4. If you want to object or present any defense to the taking you must serve an answer on the plaintiff's attorney within The material within the following brackets is overstruck in the original. [20] 21 days [after being served with this notice][from (insert the date of the last publication of notice)]. Send your answer to this address: _____ .

* * *

2 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 9.syn

§ 9.syn Synopsis to Chapter 9: PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL

§ 9.01 Significance and Purpose of Pleadings

[1] Notice of Claims and Assertions

[2] Elimination of Meritless Claims

[3] Specification of Legal Parameters

§ 9.02 Comparison of Pleadings to Motions and Other Papers

[1] Distinction Between Pleadings, Motions, and Other Papers

[2] Required Contents of Motions

[3] Other Papers Allowed

§ 9.03 Types of Pleadings

[1] Federal Rules Restrict Types of Pleadings Permitted

[2] Complaint

[3] Answer to Complaint

[4] Answer to Counterclaim Designated as Counterclaim

[5] Answer to Crossclaim

[6] Third-party Complaint

[7] Third-party Answer

[8] Reply to Answer

§§ 9.04through 9.09 [Reserved]

§ 9.10 Requirements for All Types of Pleadings

[1] Statement of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[a] Requirement Applicable to Complaint and Any Answer that States Claims for Relief

[b] Pleading Must Allege Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[c] Alleging General Diversity Statute Jurisdiction

[i] Amount in Controversy and Citizenship

[ii] Each Party Must Be of Diverse Citizenship From Opposition

[iii] Pleading Amount in Controversy

[d] Alleging Federal Question Jurisdiction

[e] Alleging Special Statutory Jurisdiction

[2] Statement That Claimant is Entitled to Relief

[a] Statement Must Be Sufficient to Provide Notice to Opposing Party

[b] More Particular Statement Required by Other Law

[3] Demand for Judgment

[4] Pleading Defenses and Denials

[a] Short and Plain Statement Required

[b] Representations Made in Responsive Pleading

[c] Failure to Deny Allegation as Admission

[d] Pleading Affirmative Defense

[i] Party Must Plead All Applicable Affirmative Defenses

[ii] Waiver by Failure to Plead

[5] Corporate Disclosure Statement

[a] Required Disclosure Statement

[b] Time for Filing

§ 9.11 Pleading Special Matters

[1] Pleading Capacity, Authority, or Legal Existence

[a] Capacity, Authority, or Legal Existence Must Be Pleaded Only to Show Jurisdiction

[b] Capacity Must Be Raised by Specific Denial

[c] Issue Waived If Not Raised in Timely Manner

[2] Pleading Fraud, Mistake, and Conditions of Mind

[a] Pleading Requirements Stated in Federal Rule

[b] Pleading Fraud

[i] Particularity Requirements of Federal Rules

[ii] Other Statutory Pleading Requirements for Allegations of Fraud

[c] Pleading Mistake

[d] Pleading Condition of Mind

[3] Pleading Conditions Precedent

[a] Pleading Performance or Occurrence of Condition Precedent

[b] Pleading Denial of Performance or Occurrence of Condition Precedent

[4] Pleading Official Document or Act

[5] Pleading Judgment or Decision

[6] Pleading Time and Place

[7] Pleading Special Damages

[a] Requirement of Specificity

[b] Failure to Specifically Allege Special Damages May be Raised By Motion

[c] Effect of Failure to Plead Special Damages With Requisite Specificity

[8] Pleading in Admiralty and Maritime Cases

[a] Election to Proceed Under Admiralty and Maritime Rules

[b] Procedural Effects of Admiralty or Maritime Jurisdiction

§ 9.12 Form of Pleadings

[1] Caption Requirements

[a] Name of Court

[b] Title of Action

[i] Names of Parties

[ii] Exceptions for Pseudonym Use By Plaintiff

[iii] Exceptions for Designation of Defendant by Pseudonym

[c] File Number

[d] Designation of Pleading Type

[2] Requirements for Text of Pleading

[a] Numbering of Paragraphs

[b] Each Paragraph States Distinct Facts

[c] Pleading Multiple Transactions or Parties

[3] Adoption of Pleading Allegations by Reference

[4] Exhibits to Pleadings and Incorporation by Reference

[a] Documents Attached as Exhibits

[b] Incorporation by Reference

§§ 9.13through 9.19 [Reserved]

§ 9.20 Purpose and Applicability of Pleading Signature Rule

[1] Purpose of Signature Rule

[2] Applicability of Signature Rule

[a] Actions In Which Rule Applicable

[b] Situations When Rule is Inapplicable

§ 9.21 Signature and Filing Requirements

[1] Required Contents

[2] Signature Constitutes Certifications Made to Court

[a] Certifications Made By Signing or Advocating Pleading

[b] Reasonable Inquiry Regarding Certifications

[i] Obligation to Make Inquiry

[ii] Required Extent of Inquiry

[iii] Reasonableness Determined at Time of Presentation

[c] Certification Related to Propriety of Purpose

[d] Certifications Related to Legal Argument

[e] Certifications Related to Factual Contentions

[f] Certifications Related to Denial of Factual Contentions

§ 9.22 Sanctions for Violations Of Signature Requirements

[1] Purpose of Sanctions

[2] Acts That Precipitate Sanctions

§§ 9.23through 9.29 [Reserved]

§ 9.30 Service of Pleadings and Papers Other than Complaint

[1] Types of Papers Requiring Service on Each Party

[a] Pleadings Subsequent to Original Complaint

[b] Other Documents Served Under Rule 5

[2] Appearance Determines Which Parties Are Entitled to Receive Service

[3] Persons That Must be Served

[a] Service on Attorney of Represented Party

[b] Direct Service on Unrepresented Party

[c] Service on Custodian of Property

[d] Discretion of Court to Specify Service in Cases of Numerous Defendants

[4] Acceptable Means of Performing Service

[a] Summary of Methods of Service After Complaint is Filed

[b] Hand Delivery to Person

[c] Leaving Paper at Office or Residence

[d] Service by Mail

[e] Delivery to Court Clerk When Address is Unknown

[f] Service by Electronic Transmission

[g] Consent to Service by Other Means

§ 9.31 Proof of Service for Pleadings and Papers Other than Complaint

[1] Required Certificate of Service

[2] Local Rules Requirements

§ 9.32 Filing of Pleadings and Papers Other than Complaint

[1] Acts Constituting Filing

[a] Receipt by Court Clerk

[b] Receipt by Judge

[c] Filing by Incarcerated Pro Se Litigant

[d] Delivery by Electronic Transmission

[e] Other Filing Requirements Established by Local Rule

[2] Discovery Documents Should Ordinarilty Not Be Filed Until Used

[3] Time Requirements for Filing

[a] Filing Must Be Accomplished Within Reasonable Time

[b] Local Rules May Specify Timeliness

§ 9.33 Protection for Private Information in Court Filings

[1] Purpose and Scope of Civil Rule Requiring Privacy Protection in Court Filings

[2] Redaction of Filing Required to Conceal Sensitive Private Information

[a] Required Redaction

[b] Exemptions from Redaction Requirements

[c] Discretion of Court

[d] Waiver of Redaction Requirements

[3] Limitation on Remote Access to Electronic Files in Social Security and Immigration Cases

[4] Alternatives for Filings Under Seal

[5] Protective Orders Related to Privacy in Filing

[6] Optional Filing of Reference List

§§ 9.34 through 9.39 [Reserved]

§ 9.40 Source of Litigation Deadlines

§ 9.41 Deadline Calculation is Based on Increment of Time Period

§ 9.42 Deadline Calculation When Time Period is Stated in Days or Longer Unit

[1] Beginning of Time Period

[2] End of Time Period

[a] Computation of End of Time Period

[b] Ending of Last Day

§ 9.43 Deadline Calculation When Time Period is Stated in Hours

[1] Beginning of Time Period

[2] End of Time Period

§ 9.44 Effect of Inaccessibility of the Clerk's Office

[1] Inaccessibility May Postpone End of Time Period

[2] Inaccessibility Established by Case Law

§ 9.45 Additional Three Days to Respond When Service Is Not by Hand Delivery

[1] Right of Additional Three Days to Respond

[2] Computation of Response Period With Three Additional Days

§ 9.46 Extension of Time by Discretion of Court

[1] Court Has Discretionary Power to Extend Most Time Periods

[a] Discretion of Court to Order Extensions

[b] Extension Prohibited for Specified Time Periods

[2] Extension for Requests Made Before Expiration of Period

[3] Extension of Time Period After Period Has Already Expired

[a] Requires Court's Determination of Excusable Neglect

[b] Inadvertence

[c] Requirement of Motion for Extension

§ 9.47 Motions and Notices of Hearing

[1] Deadlines for Service of Motion and Notice

[2] Affidavits in Support of Motion

[a] Deadline for Service of Affidavits

[b] Deadline for Service of Affidavit In Opposition of Motion for New Trial

[3] Calculation of Deadline for Service and Affidavits

§§ 9.48through 9.49 [Reserved]

§ 9.50 Nature of Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

[1] Characteristics of Amendments and Supplements to Pleadings

[2] Purposes of Amendments and Supplements to Pleadings

§ 9.51 Amendments to Pleadings

[1] Amendment Allowed Once Without Leave of Court

[2] Pleader Has at Least 21 Days After Serving Pleading to Amend Without Leave

[3] Pleader Has Longer Time to Amend Without Leave if Pleading Requires Response

[4] Amendment With Leave of Court or By Consent of Opposition

[a] Court Has Considerable Discretion to Grant Leave

[b] Factors for Court to Consider

[c] Conditional Grant of Leave to Amend

[d] Opposing Party's Written Consent

[5] Contents and Form of Motion to Amend

[6] Amendment to Conform to Evidence

[a] Right to Amendment After Objection to Evidence at Trial

[b] Right to Amendment by Express or Implied Consent

[7] Effects of Amendment of Pleading

[a] Relation Back to Time of Original Pleading

[i] Principle of Relation Back

[ii] Relation Back Provided by Statute

[iii] Relation Back Because Amendment Arose From Same Facts

[iv] Relation Back to Add New Parties

[b] Other Effects of Amendment

§ 9.52 Supplemental Pleadings

[1] Characteristics and Purpose of Supplemental Pleading

[2] Court's Discretion to Permit Supplemental Pleading

[3] Requirements for Supplemental Pleadings

[4] Relation Back of Supplemental Pleading

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART I. NATURE OF PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.01

§ 9.01 Significance and Purpose of Pleadingsn*

[1] Notice of Claims and Assertions

The federal court system uses a "notice pleading" procedure, which is designed to inform the court and all parties of the claims and defenses in the case without the necessity of pleading intricate details of claims and defenses at the outset of a case before discovery is developed. n1 However, it does establish a minimum threshold of factual notice before discovery will be allowed. n2 Thus, notice pleading requires at the minimum that a pleading give the opposition fair notice of the claim or defense pleaded, n3 the factual basis of the claim or defense, n4 and any relief requested. n5 To accomplish its purposes, notice pleading always requires a short and plain statement: from a claiming party, a statement which shows that the pleader is entitled to relief; n6 and from a defending party, which shows its defenses to each claim asserted against it. n7

[2] Elimination of Meritless Claims

In addition to providing notice of claims or defenses to the opposition, pleadings also serve the important purpose of identifying meritless claims or defenses at an early stage in litigation. n1 The federal pleading rules protect parties from undefined assertions and keep federal courts free of claims or defenses that are frivolous on their face. n2 On the other hand, if a claim is plausibly meritorious, a court should not dismiss the claim at least until factual discovery has occurred. Then, the court will grant a motion to dismiss if it appears beyond doubt that the claimant can prove no set of facts in support of the claim that would entitle the claimant to relief. n3 Thus, notice pleadings confine discovery within reasonable bounds and also sharpen issues to be litigated. n4

[3] Specification of Legal Parameters

In a pleading, each litigant states the facts that support the litigant's legal positions or assertions. Consequently, the legal parameters of the case are framed by the pleadings, and those legal parameters may not be expanded by the court on its own initiative. The district court generally may not infer claims that do not plainly appear on the face of the pleadings. n1 The notice pleading standard under Rule 8 is applicable in all civil actions. The foundation of the standard is the requirement that the pleader state facts that support a specified claim or defense, and not mere labels and conclusions of legal theories or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action. n2 Thus, notice pleading requires that a pleading at least set forth minimal facts as to who did what to whom, when, and where. n3 However, in circumstances established by statute or rule, a court may impose heightened pleading requirements for a particular claim or defense. For example, there is a requirement in Rule 9(b) that a claiming party must state fraud or mistake with particularity; n4 and a defending party must explicitly state any affirmative defense, such as accord and satisfaction. n5 However, federal courts may not require a heightened pleading standard even though such a standard is required by the procedure or practice of the court in the state in which the federal court is located. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.09 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-884 (2009) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) (party making initial claim for relief); Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(A), 13(a),(b) (initial defending party's defenses and claims).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(A).

(n9)Footnote 1. Galbraith v. County of Santa Clara, 307 F.3d 1119, 1125 (9th Cir. 2002) ; Arista Records LLC v. Greubel, 453 F. Supp. 2d 961, 965 (N.D. Tex. 2006) .

(n10)Footnote 2. See Ciralsky v. CIA, 355 F.3d 661, 670-671 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n11)Footnote 3. Evans-Marshall v. Bd. of Educ., 428 F.3d 223, 228 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n12)Footnote 4. In re Santa Barbara Copyright Infringement Litigation, 94 F.R.D. 105, 108 (D. Nev. 1982) ; see [3] below.

(n13)Footnote 1. GJR Invs., Inc. v. County of Escambia, 132 F.3d 1359, 1369 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883 (2009) .

(n15)Footnote 3. Educadores Puertorriquenos En Accion v. Rey Hernandez, 367 F.3d 61, 66-68 (1st Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n16)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n17)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c)(1).

(n18)Footnote 6. Johnson v. Hondo, Inc., 125 F.3d 408, 417 (7th Cir. 1997) .

4 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART I. NATURE OF PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.02

§ 9.02 Comparison of Pleadings to Motions and Other Papersn*

[1] Distinction Between Pleadings, Motions, and Other Papers

There are two significant distinctions between pleadings on one hand and all other papers filed in a case, including motions, on the other hand. n1 The primary distinction under the federal rules between a pleading and any other paper filed in a civil case is the substantive content. A pleading is a particular type of document (such as a complaint) setting forth at least a single claim for relief or a particular type of document (such as an answer to a complaint) setting forth a response on the merits to at least a single claim for relief. n2 On the other hand, a motion is a request or application by a party to the court that the court make a particular order, without stating or defending against a claim for relief. n3

The second significant distinction between pleadings and motions and other papers is the difference in the requirements or formalities that must be fulfilled for a paper to have a legal effect as a pleading or as a motion. Generally, a pleading must be presented in accordance with the requirements for pleadings specified in Rules 8 through 11. n4 When a party presents a motion, it must be in accordance with the requirements for motions prescribed in Rule 7(b). n5 Therefore, for example, while a pleading must be set out in consecutively numbered paragraphs, n6 it is inappropriate for a party to use consecutively numbered paragraphs in a motion because a motion does not set out claims for relief or defenses to such claims. n7 The specific requirements for motions are specified in [2], below, and for other papers in [3], below. The specific requirements for pleadings are discussed in the sections that follow.

[2] Required Contents of Motions

A motion is an application to a court for an order. There are five requirements for a motion:

1. A motion must be made in writing, unless made at a hearing or at trial. n1

2. A motion must state with particularity the grounds for the motion. n2 If a motion fails to state any grounds for relief, or simply states that there are several grounds for relief without explaining them, the motion is insufficient under Rule 7(b)(1) and will be stricken. n3 The standard for particularity in Rule 7(b)(1) requires a reasonable specification of the factual and legal basis of the motion. n4 To suffice, a motion must provide notice of the grounds for relief to both the court and to the opposing party, n5 and provide the opposing party with a meaningful opportunity to respond and the court with enough information to process the motion properly. n6 The particularity requirement of Rule 7(b)(1) may be supplemented by local district court rules that require a party to file written motions with attached briefs or memoranda that contain legal argument. n7

3. The motion must state the relief sought; n8 this is not necessarily the legal remedy requested by the motion; rather, it is the action of the court that the party is requesting, such as the grant of a new trial. n9

4. A motion must have a caption and format in the same form as a pleading. n10

5. All written motions must be signed. n11

[3] Other Papers Allowed

In addition to pleadings and motions, the federal rules recognize that there are other types of papers provided for by the rules of civil procedure rules but does not list or precisely define them. n1 The term "other papers" includes papers required by the civil procedure rules to be filed with the court, such as proof of service of process, n2 and notice of appeal. n3 The rules governing captions and other format matters in pleadings apply to other papers. n4 All other papers must also be signed. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 7.03-7.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Port of Stockton v. W. Bulk Carrier KS, 371 F.3d 1119, 1121 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a) (specifying only seven types of pleading); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a), (b) (contents of pleadings).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Warnock v. Pecos County, 116 F.3d 776, 779 (5th Cir. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b).

(n8)Footnote 7. Jarzynka v. St. Thomas Univ. Sch. of Law, 310 F. Supp. 2d 1256, 1264-1265 (S.D. Fla. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1)(A); see Taragan v. Eli Lilly & Co., 838 F.2d 1337, 1340-1341, 267 U.S. App. D.C. 387 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (verbal motion is sufficient when hearing is electronically or stenographically recorded).

(n10)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1)(B).

(n11)Footnote 3. Allender v. Raytheon Aircraft Co., 439 F.3d 1236, 1240-1241 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n12)Footnote 4. See Intera Corp. v. Henderson, 428 F.3d 605, 613 (6th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; local rule may even require legal briefing).

(n13)Footnote 5. Feldberg v. Quechee Lakes Corp., 463 F.3d 195, 197 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n14)Footnote 6. Fort James Corp. v. Solo Cup Co., 412 F.3d 1340, 1347 (Fed. Cir. 2005) , cert. denied, 126 S. Ct. 1768 (2006) .

(n15)Footnote 7. Intera Corp. v. Henderson, 428 F.3d 605, 612-613 (6th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n16)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1)(C).

(n17)Footnote 9. Hatten-Gonzales v. Hyde, 579 F.3d 1159, 1166 (10th Cir. 2009) (motion should have explicitly stated it requested modification or dissolution of injunction).

(n18)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(2).

(n19)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a); see § 9.21.

(n20)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b); see Intera Corp. v. Henderson, 428 F.3d 605, 612-613 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n21)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(l).

(n22)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c).

(n23)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(2).

(n24)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a); see § 9.21.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART I. NATURE OF PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.03

§ 9.03 Types of Pleadingsn*

[1] Federal Rules Restrict Types of Pleadings Permitted

The following are the only seven types of pleading allowed by the federal rules:

1. Complaint. n1

2. Answer to a complaint. n2

3. Answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim. n3

4. Answer to a crossclaim. n4

5. Third-party complaint. n5

6. Answer to a third-party complaint. n6

7. If the court orders one, a reply to any answer. n7

No document other than those listed above has the effect of a pleading when filed in federal court. Thus, motions and other papers such as legal memos are not pleadings. n8 Whether a paper is a "pleading" within the rules is significant because that designation triggers many of the procedural rights, duties, and deadlines under the federal rules. n9 Pleadings are distinguished from other papers in that pleadings contain either allegations affirmatively stating a claim for relief or allegations stating a response on the merits to such a claim for relief. n10

Pleadings vary in type from one another based on the status of the party filing the pleading and whether the pleading states a claim for relief or is defending against a claim for relief. There are four types of claims that may be made in pleadings: an original claim made in a complaint, a counterclaim which is made against an existing party in an answer, a crossclaim, which is made against a party on the same side of the litigation, and a third-party claim, which is made against a person not currently part of the litigation. n11 A complaint or third-party complaint usually contains only affirmative allegations of a claim for relief, n12 while any type of reply to an answer contains only allegations responsive to claims. n13 On the other hand, an answer may can contain both affirmative and responsive statements; for example, a defendant's answer to the initial complaint may not only respond to allegations of a claim but also state a counterclaim against the plaintiff. n14

[2] Complaint

A complaint is the initial pleading that commences a civil action. n1 It consists of allegations that state a claim for relief. n2 Thus, the complaint is an affirmative pleading which must provide the opposition with fair notice of what plaintiff's claims for relief are and the grounds on which the claims rest. n3

The text of a complaint must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds for the court's subject matter jurisdiction. Additionally, the complaint must contain a short and plain statement of the claim or claims, a showing that the complainant is entitled to relief, and a demand for judgment. n4 However, even though a plaintiff in a complaint need not state all of the detailed facts which form the basis of a claim, a pleading is insufficient if it offers mere labels and conclusions or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action. n5 Rather, the complaint must allege enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. n6 For a detailed discussion of the requirements of a complaint, see Ch. 10, Plaintiff's Pleadings.

[3] Answer to Complaint

An answer is a responsive pleading that must state allegations that contradict the allegations of the claims for relief stated in a complaint that has been filed by another person to commence a federal civil action. n1 The purpose of the defendant's answer is to notify the plaintiff and any other opposing parties of the allegations in the complaint that the defendant contests n2 and the allegations the defendant admits and will not be at issue in the trial. n3 Therefore, the answer must contain in short and plain terms the responding party's defenses to each claim asserted in the complaint. n4

Unless the court will hear a motion to dismisses the complaint, an answer must be filed within the time specified in the federal rules. n5 If the defendant fails to deny an allegation in a complaint which requires a response, other than the amount of damages, the failure will constitute an admission as to that matter. n6 Thus, if the defendant fails to state in its answer any affirmative defenses or avoidance, that matter will be waived. n7 In addition to responding to the allegations of the complaint, the answer may also state claims for relief by the answering party, such as counterclaims against an opposing party. n8 For a detailed discussion of the requirements and options in filing an answer, see Ch. 11, Defendant's Response.

[4] Answer to Counterclaim Designated as Counterclaim

A counterclaim is any affirmative claim for relief against an existing opposition party. Thus, a defendant's claim for relief against a plaintiff is a counterclaim. When a party makes a counterclaim designated as such, the party defending against the claim must respond in an answer. n1 If a party fails to respond to an opposing party's claim designated as a counterclaim, the failure may be considered an admission of the allegations within the counterclaim other than those involving damages. n2 The provision regarding designation of a counterclaim was added because of the difficulty of distinguishing between a counterclaim and certain affirmative defenses. Therefore, if a counterclaim is not designated as such, no answer is required; n3 however, if a party mistakenly designates a defense as a counterclaim, or a counterclaim as a defense, if justice requires the court must treat the pleading as though it were correctly designated, and may impose terms for doing so. n4 For a detailed discussion of the requirements related to counterclaims and replies, see Ch. 11, Defendant's Response, Ch. 12, Plaintiff's Response, and Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

[5] Answer to Crossclaim

A crossclaim is a claim against a person that is aligned on the same side as a co-party in the litigation, n1 If served with a crossclaim, the co-party must answer the crossclaim because a crossclaim involves a claim for relief that has not been stated in the prior pleadings, even though the claim arises from a transaction or occurrence or property that is the subject matter of the original action. n2 The answer to a crossclaim must itself contain any affirmative claims for relief against the co-party which filed the original claim, including compulsory or permissive counterclaims. n3 In turn, if the answer to a crossclaim contains an affirmative claim for relief, the co-party that is the object of the claim may be required to file a responsive pleading which is referred to as a reply. n4 For a detailed discussion of the requirements regarding crossclaims, see Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

[6] Third-party Complaint

If a defending party asserts that a nonparty is or may be liable to it for all or part of a claim against it, the defending party may as "third-party plaintiff" serve a "third-party complaint" n1 on the nonparty, n2 who then becomes the "third-party defendant." n3 An original plaintiff may also file a third-party complaint against a nonparty when a counterclaim has been asserted against the plaintiff. n4 Because it is a defending party, a third-party defendant may in turn file a third-party complaint against another nonparty who is or may be liable to the third-party defendant for all or part of any claim against it. n5 When a third-party defendant comes into the lawsuit, the federal rules provide for the liberal filing of claims among the new parties. Thus, a plaintiff may assert against the third-party defendant any claim arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff (original defending party). n6 For its part, the third-party defendant must assert in its answer any affirmative defenses and compulsory counterclaims it has against the party that filed the third-party complaint, and has the option to file crossclaims against other third party defendants and defenses and claims against the plaintiff. n7

For a detailed discussion of the requirements and options related to third-party complaints, see Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

[7] Third-party Answer

When a nonparty is brought into litigation because an original defending party has filed a third-party complaint against the nonparty, n1 the former nonparty, now the "third-party defendant," must file a "third-party answer" in response to the third-party complaint. n2 The third-party defendant uses its answer as any defending party would. Therefore, at the risk of waiver for failure to do so, a third-party defendant is required to assert any defense against the third-party plaintiff's (original defending party's) claim under Rule 12, and any compulsory counterclaims against the third-party plaintiff under Rule 13(a). n3 In its answer, the third-party defendant also has the option to assert: any permissive counterclaims against the third-party plaintiff; any crossclaim against another third-party defendant; any defense that the third-party plaintiff has to the original plaintiff's claim; and any claim arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff (original defending party). n4

For a detailed discussion of the requirements and options related to third-party answers, see Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

[8] Reply to Answer

Whenever, any type of answer has be filed by any defending party, the court has the option, but is not required, to order that the party which has been served with the answer to file a reply in response to the answer. n1 If the answer contains a counterclaim the court will ordinarily allow a reply. Otherwise, the court will not usually order a reply unless there is a clear showing that it is necessary or that there are extraordinary circumstances of a compelling nature. n2

For a detailed discussion of the requirements and options related to a reply to an answer, see Ch. 12, Plaintiff's Response.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDenialsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 7.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(1); see [2], below.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2); see [3], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3); see [4], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(4); see [5], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(5); see [6], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(6); see [7], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7); see [8], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. Mellon Bank v. Ternisky, 999 F.2d 791, 795 (4th Cir. 1993) ; Rhea v. Dollar Tree Stores, 395 F. Supp. 2d 696, 702 (W.D. Tenn. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Washington Mut. Bank v. Bellatrix, 2 F. Supp. 2d 1458, 1459 (N.D. Cal. 1997) ; see Tahoe-Sierra Preservation Council, Inc. v. Tahoe Reg'l Planning Agency, 992 F. Supp. 1218, 1223 (D. Nev. 1998) (if person who has been served complaint files paper in case that does not constitute "answer," party has not filed "pleading," and may not be held to have waived unpleaded defenses).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a), 8(b); Yuhasz v. Brush Wellman, Inc., 341 F.3d 559, 569 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Del Carmen Montan v. Am. Airlines, Inc, 490 F.3d 99, 108 (2d Cir. 2007) .

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n14)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7).

(n15)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (b).

(n16)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 3; see BP Am. Prod. Co. v. Burton, 549 U.S. 84, 127 S. Ct. 638, 166 L. Ed. 2d 494, 503 (2006) .

(n17)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a); see W.L.G. v. Houston County Bd. of Educ., 975 F. Supp. 1317, 1328-1329 (M.D. Ala. 1997) .

(n18)Footnote 3. Karpel v. Inova Health Sys. Servs., 134 F.3d 1222, 1227 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n19)Footnote 4. Swierkiewicz v. Sorema, 534 U.S. 506, 512-513, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002) .

(n20)Footnote 5. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n21)Footnote 6. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883 (2009) .

(n22)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b).

(n23)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(A),(B); see Action Nissan, Inc. v. Hyundai Motor Am., 617 F. Supp. 2d 1177, 1186 (M.D. Fla. 2007) .

(n24)Footnote 3. Hargett v. Valley Federal Savings Bank, 60 F.3d 754, 763 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n25)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b).

(n26)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a) (establishing time limits for answering complaint); see Finnegan v. University of Rochester, 180 F.R.D. 247, 249 (W.D.N.Y. 1998) (service of motion to dismiss under Rule 12 suspends movant's time to file answer until 10 days after court's disposition of motion).

(n27)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6); see § 9.10[4][b].

(n28)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(1).

(n29)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1).

(n30)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n31)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6); see also § 9.10[4][b].

(n32)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3); Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c).

(n33)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(2).

(n34)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g); see Wake v. United States, 89 F.3d 53, 62-63 (2nd Cir. 1996) (existing defendants may not assert crossclaim against former defendant).

(n35)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(4), 13(g).

(n36)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (g).

(n37)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7) (court may order reply to any answer).

(n38)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(5).

(n39)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n40)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2).

(n41)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(b).

(n42)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(5).

(n43)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(3).

(n44)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2); see [7], below.

(n45)Footnote 1. See [6], above; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(5).

(n46)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(6); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2).

(n47)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(A), (B).

(n48)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(C), (D).

(n49)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7); see Garner v. Morales, 237 F.R.D. 399, 400 (S.D. Tex. 2006) .

(n50)Footnote 2. Williams v. Jader Fuel Co., 944 F.2d 1388, 1399 (7th Cir. 1991) ; *Daniel v. Callet, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 53065, at 2 (E.D. Mo. 2007) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

6 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART I. NATURE OF PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 9.04through 9.09

[Reserved]

§§ 9.04[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART II. CONTENT AND FORM OF PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.10

§ 9.10 Requirements for All Types of Pleadings

[1] Statement of Subject Matter Jurisdiction n*

[a] Requirement Applicable to Complaint and Any Answer that States Claims for Relief

Any pleading which states a claim for relief must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds on which the court's jurisdiction depends, unless the court already has jurisdiction and the claim needs no new ground of jurisdiction to support it. n1 Thus, because a complaint always states a claim for relief, an original plaintiff commencing a civil action in a federal district court must always plead the basis for jurisdiction. n2 Pleadings after the original complaint do not require a statement of the ground for jurisdiction unless they contain claims for relief that require new grounds of jurisdiction to support them. n3 Thus, if a party makes a claim that arises out of the same transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the claim in the original claim, the new claim does not require a statement of a separate jurisdictional ground. Such a claim may include a claim in a third-party complaint, n4 a compulsory counterclaim, n5 a crossclaim, n6 or a claim by an intervenor. n7 For these claims, which are filed after the original claim by the plaintiff, the court will have supplemental jurisdiction, provided that the court had federal question (see [c] below) or diversity jurisdiction (see [d] below) over the original claim. n8 For a complete discussion covering the requirements of these types of jurisdiction, see Ch. 5, Original Jurisdiction over the Subject Matter.

[b] Pleading Must Allege Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Federal district courts are courts of limited jurisdiction, which means that the court may only adjudicate cases involving particular types of claims; consequently, a party making a claim in federal court must plead that the claim falls within the specified subject matter. The authority of a federal court to resolve a particular category of claim is known as subject-matter jurisdiction. n9 Congress has granted the federal courts exclusive jurisdiction in matters involving admiralty, bankruptcy, patents, copyrights and trademarks, and concurrent jurisdiction with the state courts in federal question and diversity of citizenship cases. n10 Pleading each basis for subject matter jurisdiction will be discussed below. n11

A federal court may not hypothesize subject-matter jurisdiction for the purpose of deciding the merits of a dispute. The jurisdiction of the court must be established as a threshold matter, and this requirement is inflexible and without exception. n12 Thus, the court must inquire sua sponte whenever a doubt arises as to its existence. The parties may not confer on a federal court jurisdiction that has not been vested in that court by the Constitution and Congress. Consequently, the parties may not waive lack of subject-matter jurisdiction n13 by express consent, by conduct, or even by estoppel. n14 In contrast to subject matter jurisdiction, lack of personal jurisdiction is a defense that a defending party may waive. n15

The claimant may allege subject matter jurisdiction directly or indirectly. Thus, a pleading may directly refer to an appropriate jurisdictional statute, but it need not necessarily do so. The party has the alternative option to file a pleading which contains factual assertions that if proved establish jurisdiction. When a statutory reference is made, the pleading should also contain any factual assertions that are necessary to establish the statutory elements for jurisdiction. n16

[c] Alleging General Diversity Statute Jurisdiction

[i] Amount in Controversy and Citizenship

A claim may be based on diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, which requires the litigant to plead two statements: the amount in controversy and the parties' citizenship. If not based on a federal question, n17 or special jurisdiction statute, n18 a person making a claim for relief must make allegations which establish that the amount in controversy exceeds $ 75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and also that the matter in controversy is between: n19

1. Citizens of different states;

2. Citizens of a state and citizens or subjects of a foreign state;

3. Citizens of different states when citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties;

4. foreign state as a plaintiff and citizens of a state or of different states.

A party need not explicitly refer to the diversity statute provided that the person pleads facts necessary to establish diversity. n20

[ii] Each Party Must Be of Diverse Citizenship From Opposition

The first allegation of a pleading relying on general diversity jurisdiction must establish that each complaining party is of diverse citizenship from each defending party, which is characterized as the "complete diversity" requirement. Therefore, the allegation should state the citizenship of each party making the claim and each defending party so that the court can confirm the existence of complete diversity. n21

To allege the citizenship of an individual, the pleading should state that the individual is a citizen of a particular state or foreign country. n22 An individual who is a United States citizen may be a citizen of only one state at any time, and citizenship is based on the same criteria used to define domicile for personal jurisdiction purposes. n23

To allege citizenship of a corporation, the pleading should indicate the states of citizenship of the corporation. Unlike an individual, a corporation may have more than one state of citizenship for general diversity purposes. A corporation is deemed a citizen of any state in which it is incorporated and is also a citizen of the state where it has its principal place of business. n24

Allegations of citizenship of a partnership or unincorporated association should specify the particular states of citizenship of each partner or member. Partnerships and unincorporated associations lack their own citizenship for purposes of the general diversity statute. Instead, the citizenship of a partnership or unincorporated association is dependent on the citizenship of each of the individual members. In a partnership, every partner must be of diverse citizenship from the party or parties opposing the partnership in the litigation. This is so even if state law permits a partnership to sue or be sued in its firm name. n25 Similarly, each member of an unincorporated association must be of citizenship diverse from that of any party or parties opposing the association in the civil action. n26

[iii] Pleading Amount in Controversy

The second allegation of a pleading relying on general diversity jurisdiction must establish that the amount in controversy in the action exceeds $ 75,000, exclusive of interest and costs. n27 Either an adverse party, or the court on its own motion, may challenge an allegation of the jurisdictional amount. Whether the amount in controversy exceeds $ 75,000 is determined from the perspective and pleading of the party invoking jurisdiction, and the amount is determined as of the time subject matter jurisdiction is initially claimed. n28 In general, all that is required is for the claimant to make a good faith allegation that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional amount. The court may not order dismissal unless it appears to a legal certainty that the claim is for less than the jurisdictional amount. Under this legal certainty test, the court will determine the amount in controversy based on both the specific dollar figure pleaded by the claimant and by the amount that is realistic under the claimant's actual legal claims. n29

[d] Alleging Federal Question Jurisdiction

A federal court has "federal question" subject matter jurisdiction over a civil action if the action arises under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States. n30 Federal question jurisdiction exists only when a claimant's basis for recovery, rather than a defense to a claim for relief, is grounded in federal law. Under the "well pleaded complaint rule" and "artful pleading doctrine," a plaintiff whose claim is grounded in federal law may choose to proceed in state court, but the plaintiff still has a right to remove the case to federal court by removal, even if the plaintiff has used artful pleading to omit discussion of any federal questions that are in fact central to the suit. n31 In other words, these doctrines provide federal courts with subject matter jurisdiction over purported state law claims when the plaintiff has purposefully failed to plead a federal right or immunity that is an essential element of the plaintiff's cause of action; thus, the doctrine does not apply to claims that actually have no federal basis. n32 There is no minimum amount in controversy requirement to establish federal question jurisdiction. n33

The best pleading practice for federal question jurisdiction is to state the federal question explicitly and to include specific references to any particular section of the Constitution, statute, or treaty that supplies the basis for recovery under the federal question, although this is not absolutely required provided that the complaint read as a whole establishes the presence of a federal question. n34 If federal common law is the basis for federal question jurisdiction, the claimant should make a reference to the relevant case establishing the federal common law. n35

[e] Alleging Special Statutory Jurisdiction

If a claim is based on a special jurisdictional statute, the best practice is for the claimant to specify the statute in the first paragraph of the pleading, and to make specific factual allegations in the body of the pleading which demonstrate that the statute applies. Specifically stating a special jurisdictional statute in the allegations illustrates to the court the plaintiff's claim for relief. n36 However, it is not an absolute requirement under Rule 8, and a failure to do so does not deprive the court of jurisdiction, provided that the allegations state facts that enable the court to determine that a claim for relief exists under the statute. n37

Examples of actions based on statutes providing special federal jurisdiction include antitrust actions, n38 federal tax actions, n39 civil rights actions, n40 actions against the United States, n41 and any actions involving patents, copyrights, and trademarks. n42 If a claim for relief is within admiralty or maritime jurisdiction and also within the court's subject-matter jurisdiction on some other ground, the pleading may designate the claim as an admiralty or maritime claim for purposes of having special procedural rules for admiralty or maritime claims control the claim. n43

[2] Statement That Claimant is Entitled to Relief n*

[a] Statement Must Be Sufficient to Provide Notice to Opposing Party

Any pleading that contains a claim for relief, including a counterclaim or a crossclaim, must include a short and plain statement showing that the claimant is entitled to relief. n1 This notice pleading standard does not require all of the detailed factual allegations that could be asserted, but it requires more than an unadorned accusation that the defendant unlawfully harmed the plaintiff. n2 A pleading that offers mere labels and conclusions or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action is not sufficient without an factual enhancement. n3

To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true by the court, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. n4 A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alerted. The plausibility standard does not rise to the level of a "probability requirement." Rather, it requires more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. When a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a defendant's liability, it does not meet the plausibility requirement of entitlement to relief. n5

The basis of notice pleading is the requirement that the pleader state facts that support a specified claim or defense, and not mere labels and conclusions of legal theories or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action. n6 To show a violation of the Equal Protection Clause by intentional discrimination, the claimant need not fit each factual allegation to each element of a prima facie case, such as "discriminatory intent". Rather, the claimant need only allege the facts which show that it is plausible that there was some discriminatory intent on the part of the defendant. n7 However, when based on statute or federal civil rule, the court may apply a pleading standard higher than specified by Rule 8(a)(2). For example, Rule 9(b) requires that when pleading fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake must be stated with particularity. n8

In the Supreme Court's decision in Iqbal, the Court suggested a two pronged approach to evaluate the sufficiency of a complaint. First, the court identifies pleadings that, because they are no more than conclusions, are not entitled to the assumption of truth. Second the court determines whether the well-pleaded factual allegations, assumed to be true, plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief. The plausibility standard is not similar to a probability requirement, but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. n8.1

Whether a statement of a claim is sufficient to meet the plausibility standard and gives fair notice may depend in part on the complexity of the case. Thus, complex issues require more detail in order to give fair notice of the particular nature of the claim. n9 It is important to recognize that Rule 8(a)(2) does not require a short and plain complaint but rather a short and plain statement showing that the claimant is entitled to prevail. n10 Also, each allegation of a pleading--not each pleading itself--must be simple, concise, and direct n11 Rule 8(d) provides that a party may set out two or more statements of a claim alternatively or hypothetically, either in a single count or in separate ones, and if a party makes alternative statements, the pleading is sufficient if any one of them is sufficient. n12 Furthermore, a party may state as many separate claims or defenses as it has, regardless of consistency. n13

Although Rule 8 does not expressly permit statements supporting claims for relief to be made on information and belief, Rule 11 permits a party after reasonable inquiry to set forth allegations that are likely to have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery. n14 Thus, Rule 8 and Rule 11 taken together permit claimants to allege facts that they believe to be true, even though they lack evidentiary support at the time of pleading, especially when the facts that would support the allegations are within the defendant's knowledge or control. n15

[b] More Particular Statement Required by Other Law

Although Rule 8 sets out the general requirements for rules of pleading, it may be modified or supplemented when specified by other federal rules of civil procedure or by federal statute. Thus, Rule 9 contains special requirements for pleading lack of capacity, n16 fraud or mistake, n17 failure of a condition precedent, n18 and special damages. n19 Rule 23.1 addresses pleading requirements for shareholders or members pursuing derivative actions. n20

Federal statutory modifications of Rule 8 have also been promulgated by Congress, which retains authority to enact laws on federal civil procedure notwithstanding its broad delegation of rulemaking authority to the United States Supreme Court through the federal rules, and to other Article III federal courts. n21 For example, under an amendment to the Securities Exchange Act, Congress has made the pleading standards in securities fraud cases more rigorous than the standards under Rule 8 and Rule 9(b). Thus, a claimant alleging securities fraud must specify each statement alleged to have been misleading and the reason or reasons why the statement is misleading. n22 Finally, Rule 8 may also be supplemented or modified by state statutory pleading requirements, when the federal court determines under the Erie doctrine n23 that the special state pleading requirements are substantive, rather than procedural. n24 Thus, the Erie doctrine has been utilized to require those pleading state law claims in federal court to follow certain state statutory directives in product liability and medical malpractice cases. n25

[3] Demand for Judgment n*

Any pleading that sets forth a claim for relief must contain a demand for judgment for the relief the party seeks, including a demand for relief in the alternative or for several different types of relief. n1 The demand for judgment may be stated in general terms. For example, the claimant may demand a single sum of money for an act of negligence that results in physical injury, pain of body and mind, and loss of business. n2 However, the claimant must specify in the complaint the nature of the relief sought, such as a particular amount of money damages n3 an injunction, n4 or declaratory relief. n5 For example, the demand for judgment may request specific performance or, if specific performance is not granted, that the party be awarded a money judgment. n6 Additionally, inconsistent pleading is permitted by Rule 8(e)(2) because when litigants must frame their claims before obtaining discovery, they typically find it necessary to conform their theories to the facts; as the case proceeds, legal theories are allowed to fall or be abandoned. n7

Even though a party must make a demand for relief when making any claim, the court's judgment will not be limited by the monetary amount or the type of relief in the demand, n8 except for default judgments. A default judgment may not be different from the amount requested or the type of relief in the demand. n9 Practitioners should note that a demand for judgment will have a bearing on whether a jury trial will be allowed, because if only equitable relief is demanded, neither party may request a jury trial. n10

[4] Pleading Defenses and Denials n*

[a] Short and Plain Statement Required

A party that is defending against a claim for relief must state in short and plain terms the party's defenses to each claim asserted by the opposition n1 and must admit or deny each allegation of every pleading that presents a claim for relief. n2 Denials must fairly meet the substance of the allegations denied. n3 As is the case for claims for relief, a defending party may make alternative and hypothetical denials. A party may make two or more statements of a defense alternatively or hypothetically either in a single defense or in separate defenses. If a party makes alternative defenses, the pleading is sufficient if any one of them is sufficient. n4

If a party intends in good faith to deny all the allegations of a pleading, including the jurisdictional grounds, the party may do so by a general denial. A party that does not intend to deny all the allegations must either specifically deny all designated allegations or generally deny all except those specifically admitted. n5 A general denial of all factual components within a statement of an affirmative pleading, including allegations of jurisdiction, is rarely used because of its very broad nature. However, such a denial may be used to respond to appropriately simple claims for relief. n6

If a party intends in good faith to deny only part of an allegation, the party must admit the part that is true and deny the rest. n7 If a party lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief about the truth of an allegation, the party must state so, and the statement has the effect of a denial. n8

[b] Representations Made in Responsive Pleading

A defending party that makes a responsive pleading represents to the court that the party has made inquiry reasonable under the circumstances and that after the inquiry, to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief, the responses are not made for an improper purpose, n9 and: (1) the defenses in the pleading are warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law; n10 (2) the factual contentions have evidentiary support or, if specifically identified as such, are likely to have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery; n11 and (3) the denials of factual contentions are warranted on the evidence or, if specifically identified as such, are reasonably based on a lack of information or belief. n12

[c] Failure to Deny Allegation as Admission

Generally, if a defending party fails to deny an allegation set forth in a pleading that requires a responsive pleading, the failure is deemed an admission, except for allegations concerning the amount of damages. n13 A person is required to make the following responsive pleadings: an answer to a complaint; n14 an answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim; n15 an answer to a crossclaim; n16 an answer to a third-party complaint; n17 and, if the court orders one, a reply to an answer. n18 In situations in which no responsive pleading is required, allegations in a pleading are considered automatically denied or avoided. n19

[d] Pleading Affirmative Defense

[i] Party Must Plead All Applicable Affirmative Defenses

In its initial responsive pleading, n20 including an answer to a complaint, an answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim, an answer to a crossclaim, an answer to a third-party complaint, or a court ordered reply to an answer, n21 a party defending a claim must state affirmatively all defenses specified in the civil rules as matters constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense. n22 An "affirmative defense" is a defendant's assertion raising new facts and arguments different from the opposition's claim for relief, which, if true, will defeat the opponent's claim for relief, even if all the allegations in the pleading are true. n23 An "avoidance" is any matter asserted by the defense that effectively precludes the pleader's ability to recover on the claim. n24 There are 18 affirmative defenses specifically listed in Rule 8: n25

- accord and satisfaction;
- arbitration and award;
- assumption of risk;
- contributory negligence;
- duress;
- estoppel;
- failure of consideration;

- fraud;
- illegality;
- injury by fellow servant;
- laches;
- license;
- payment;
- release;
- res judicata;
- statute of frauds;
- statute of limitation; and
- waiver.

In addition to the 18 affirmative defenses listed above, the following examples of avoidances not enumerated in Rule 8(c) must be pleaded:

- failure to exhaust state remedies; n26
- failure to mitigate damages; n27
- hindrance of contract; n28
- common-law immunity; n29
- statutory immunity; n30 and
- statutory limitations on damages. n31

The requirement of pleading affirmative defenses and avoidances is to prevent surprise to the opposition and to give the opposition an opportunity to respond. n31.1 If an affirmative defense or avoidance is accepted by the court, it will defeat an otherwise legitimate claim for relief. n32

In some circumstances, an affirmative defense may be raised even before a responsive pleading is presented, for example, in a pre-answer Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim n33 or in a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment that is asserted before the answer is filed. n34 However, even though a defending party has the option to raise an affirmative defense in a motion filed prior to its answer or other initial responsive pleading, it is not obligated to do so provided it specifies affirmative defenses in its initial pleading. n35

[ii] Waiver by Failure to Plead

If a party defending a claim fails to set forth any affirmative defenses in its initial responsive pleading, including any answer or court ordered reply, the party is generally deemed to have waived the defense. n36 The Supreme Court has held that the initial responsive pleading required by the rule is the one following the events that give rise to the defense. n37 It should be noted that a party has the right to raise an affirmative defense in a motion filed prior to its initial pleading; however, it is not required to do so and is only required to raise affirmative defenses in its initial pleading. n38

There are several exceptions to the waiver rule, n39 including the following:

1. An affirmative defense waiver does not occur if it is raised in a proper motion filed before the first responsive pleading, for example, if the affirmative defense is raised for the first time by a pre-answer motion to dismiss. n40

2. There is no waiver of an unpleaded affirmative defense if the defense is tried by the express or implied consent of the parties under Rule 15(b). Thus, if a defending party introduces evidence at trial related solely to an unpleaded affirmative defense, and the claimant fails to object, there is no waiver. n41

3. An affirmative defense is not waived if the pretrial order sufficiently informs the parties that the defense is an issue for trial. In this situation, there is no waiver because there is no unfair surprise. n42

4. An unpleaded affirmative defense is not waived if it is included in an amendment to the initial responsive pleading under Rule 15(a), n43 unless the claimant would be unduly prejudiced. n44

5. A defendant may raise an affirmative defense at the summary judgment stage (after filing its answer), provided that the plaintiff does not suffer prejudice. n45

6. An appellate court may consider an affirmative defense even though it was not raised in the district court if consideration of the defense will give the appellate court different or additional grounds on which to affirm the district court. n46

[5] Corporate Disclosure Statement n*

[a] Required Disclosure Statement

Each nongovernmental corporate party to an action or proceeding in a district court must file two copies of a statement that either (1) identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock n1 or (2) states that the corporation has no parent corporation and there is no publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock. n2

The primary purpose of requiring this statement is to enable the district court judge to determine whether he or she has the "financial interest" required to subject the judge to automatic disqualification under Canon 3C(1)(c) of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. However, the information required by Rule 7.1 alone does not cover all of the circumstances that may call for other disqualification under the financial interest standard and does not deal at all with other circumstances which may call for disqualification. Rule 7.1 does not prohibit local rules that require disclosures in addition to those required by Rule 7.1. n3

Some authority indicates that the disclosure statement may be considered by the court for other purposes, such as to determine corporate citizenship in diversity cases. n4

[b] Time for Filing

A nongovernmental corporate party that comes within the rule must file the required disclosure statement in every case. It must file its initial statement with its first appearance, pleading, petition, motion, response, or other request addressed to the court. n5 Additionally, a party must supplement its statement whenever the information that must be disclosed under Rule 7.1 changes. n6 For example, if a nongovernmental corporate party to an action in a district court initially had no parent corporation, but was later acquired by a parent corporation, the party would then have to disclose that information in a supplemental disclosure. n7

Although an opposition party may make a motion to compel the filing of a disclosure statement by another party, the court may not impose sanctions for failure to timely file a disclosure, at least unless the disclosing party has purposely delayed filing the disclosure or prejudiced the opposition by the tardy disclosure. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Swierkiewicz v. Sorema, 534 U.S. 506, 512-513, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a).

(n9)Footnote 8. Kinzer v. Metro. Gov't of Nashville & Davidson County, 451 F. Supp. 2d 931, 934 (M.D. Tenn. 2006) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n10)Footnote 9. Iglesias v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 156 F.3d 237, 242 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See U.S. Const. Art. III; 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331-1365.

(n12)Footnote 11. See [c], below (diversity jurisdiction); [d], below (federal question jurisdiction); [e], below (special jurisdictional statutes).

(n13)Footnote 12. Ruhrgas AG v. Marathon Oil Co., 526 U.S. 574, 577-578, 119 S. Ct. 1563, 143 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1999) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3).

(n15)Footnote 14. Insurance Corp. v. Compagnie Des Bauxites, 456 U.S. 694, 702, 102 S. Ct. 2099, 72 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1982) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2).

(n17)Footnote 16. Lykins v. Pointer Inc., 725 F.2d 645, 646 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See [d], below.

(n19)Footnote 18. See [e], below.

(n20)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a); see Maher v. GSI Lumonics, Inc, 433 F.3d 123, 126-128 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 234 n.2, 94 S. Ct. 1683, 40 L. Ed. 2d 90, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 474 (1974) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Whitemire v. Victus Ltd., 212 F.3d 885, 887 (5th Cir. 2000) .

(n23)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(a).

(n24)Footnote 23. Guaranty Nat'l Title Co. v. J.E.G. Assocs., 101 F.3d 57, 59 (7th Cir. 1996) (pleading must allege citizenship and not residence).

(n25)Footnote 24. 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n26)Footnote 25. Carden v. Arkoma Assocs., 494 U.S. 185, 195, 110 S. Ct. 1015, 108 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1990) .

(n27)Footnote 26. Elliott v. Tilton, 62 F.3d 725, 729 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n28)Footnote 27. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n29)Footnote 28. St. Paul Reinsurance Co. v. Greenberg, 134 F.3d 1250, 1254 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n30)Footnote 29. Morgan v. Gay, 471 F.3d 469, 475 (3rd Cir. 2006) .

(n31)Footnote 30. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n32)Footnote 31. Rivet v. Regions Bank, 522 U.S. 470, 474-476, 118 S. Ct. 921, 925, 139 L. Ed. 2d 912 (1998) .

(n33)Footnote 32. Turgeau v. Admin. Review Bd., 446 F.3d 1052, 1060-1061 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n34)Footnote 33. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n35)Footnote 34. Martin v. Deiriggi, 985 F.2d 129, 135 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n36)Footnote 35. Texas Indus., Inc. v. Radcliff Materials, Inc., 451 U.S. 630, 640, 101 S. Ct. 2061, 68 L. Ed. 2d 500 (1981) (federal common law applicable when a federal rule of decision is necessary to protect uniquely federal interests).

(n37)Footnote 36. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(b); [2][a], below.

(n38)Footnote 37. AmSouth Bank v. Dale, 386 F.3d 763, 779 (6th Cir. 2004) (courts may reach beyond specific statutory sections stated in complaint to reach different basis for jurisdiction, based on facts stated on face of that complaint).

(n39)Footnote 38. See 28 U.S.C. § 1337.

(n40)Footnote 39. See 28 U.S.C. § 1340.

(n41)Footnote 40. See 28 U.S.C. § 1343.

(n42)Footnote 41. See 28 U.S.C. § 1346.

(n43)Footnote 42. See 28 U.S.C. § 1338.

(n44)Footnote 43. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(c).

(n45)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 8.04, 8.09, 9.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n46)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).

(n47)Footnote 2. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-884 (2009) .

(n48)Footnote 3. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n49)Footnote 4. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n50)Footnote 5. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) .

(n51)Footnote 6. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883 (2009) .

(n52)Footnote 7. Hayden v. Paterson, 594 F.3d 150, 161-162 (2d Cir. 2010) .

(n53)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); see Carroll v. Fort James Corp, 470 F.3d 1171, 1174 (5th Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n54)Footnote 8.1. Hayden v. Paterson, 594 F.3d 150, 161 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010) .

(n55)Footnote 9. Desai v. Tire Kingdom, Inc., 944 F. Supp. 876, 879 (M.D. Fla. 1996) .

(n56)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).

(n57)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(1).

(n58)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2).

(n59)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(3).

(n60)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n61)Footnote 15. Tuchman v. DSC Communications Corp., 14 F.3d 1061, 1068 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n62)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a)(2).

(n63)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n64)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c).

(n65)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g).

(n66)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b).

(n67)Footnote 21. See 28 U.S.C. § 2071(a) (federal courts' rules must be consistent with Acts of Congress).

(n68)Footnote 22. 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(1).

(n69)Footnote 23. Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n70)Footnote 24. Bushnell Corp. v. ITT Corp., 973 F. Supp. 1276, 1287 (D. Kan. 1997) .

(n71)Footnote 25. Doe v. Chicago, 883 F. Supp. 1126, 1134 (N.D. Ill. 1994) (statute deemed substantive and thus controlling in federal court).

(n72)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n73)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(3).

(n74)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 11

(n75)Footnote 3. *Pulliam v. GM, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3925, at 2 (W.D. Wis. 2004) .

(n76)Footnote 4. *Chimney Safety Inst. of Am. v. Chimney King, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11985, at 11 (N.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n77)Footnote 5. *Barrow v. Greenville Indep. Sch. Dist., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 216, at 28 (N.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n78)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 17.

(n79)Footnote 7. Moriarty v. Lewis Funeral Dirs. Ltd., 150 F.3d 773, 777-778 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n80)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(c); see Mark Andy, Inc. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 229 F.3d 710, 719-720 (every final judgment may grant the relief to which the party in whose favor it is rendered is entitled, even if the party has not demanded such relief in the party's pleadings); see also Ch. 25, Judgment.

(n81)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(c).

(n82)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38; see Ch. 22, Trial by Jury.

(n83)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 8.06-8.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n84)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(A).

(n85)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(B).

(n86)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(2).

(n87)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2).

(n88)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(3).

(n89)Footnote 6. Indigo Am., Inc. v. Big Impressions, LLC, 597 F.3d 1, 5 (1st Cir. 2010) (denial of allegations of breach of contract).

(n90)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(4).

(n91)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(5).

(n92)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

(n93)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n94)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n95)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(4).

(n96)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n97)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2).

(n98)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n99)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(4).

(n100)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(6).

(n101)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7).

(n102)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n103)Footnote 20. See Arizona v. California, 530 U.S. 392, 408-410, 120 S. Ct. 2304, 147 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2000) .

(n104)Footnote 21. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n105)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n106)Footnote 23. Emergency One, Inc. v. Am. Fire Eagle Engine Co., 332 F.3d 264, 271 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n107)Footnote 24. Quiller v. Barclays American/Credit, 727 F.2d 1067, 1069 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n108)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(1).

(n109)Footnote 26. Santos v. Alaska Bar Ass'n, 618 F.2d 575, 576-577 (9th Cir. 1980) .

(n110)Footnote 27. 999 v. C.I.T. Corp., 776 F.2d 866, 870 n.2 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n111)Footnote 28. Fort Howard Paper Co. v. Standard Havens, Inc., 901 F.2d 1373 1377 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n112)Footnote 29. Gomez v. Toledo, 446 U.S. 635, 640, 100 S. Ct. 1920, 64 L. Ed. 2d 572 (1980) .

(n113)Footnote 30. Troxler v. Owens-Ill., Inc., 717 F.2d 530, 532-533 (11th Cir. 1983) .

(n114)Footnote 31. Simon v. United States, 891 F.2d 1154, 1156-1157 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n115)Footnote 31.1. Std. Waste Sys. v. Mid-Continent Cas. Co., 612 F.3d 394, 398 (5th Cir. 2010) .

(n116)Footnote 32. See Blonder-Tongue Lab. v. University of Illinois Found., 402 U.S. 313, 350, 91 S. Ct. 1434, 28 L. Ed. 2d 788 (1971) .

(n117)Footnote 33. Smith-Haynie v. District of Columbia, 155 F.3d 575, 577-578 (D.C. Cir. 1998) .

(n118)Footnote 34. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b).

(n119)Footnote 35. Hoang Van Tu v. Koster, 364 F.3d 1196, 1200 (10th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see [ii], below.

(n120)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(1); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Pictet Overseas Trust Corp., 477 F.3d 616, 622 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n121)Footnote 37. Arizona v. California, 530 U.S. 392, 408-410, 120 S. Ct. 2304, 147 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2000) .

(n122)Footnote 38. Hoang Van Tu v. Koster, 364 F.3d 1196, 1200 (10th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n123)Footnote 39. See First Union Nat'l Bank v. Pictet Overseas Trust Corp., 477 F.3d 616, 622 (8th Cir. 2007) (rule must not be applied mechanically in manner which places form over substance).

(n124)Footnote 40. Concordia v. Bendekovic, 693 F.2d 1073, 1075 (11th Cir. 1982) (res judicata is affirmative defense usually pleaded under Rule 8(c), but may be raised in Rule 12(b)(6) motion); see [i], above.

(n125)Footnote 41. Brinkley v. Harbour Recreation Club, 180 F.3d 598, 612-613 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n126)Footnote 42. See El-Hakem v. BJY, Inc., 415 F.3d 1068, 1076 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n127)Footnote 43. Material Supply Int'l, Inc. v. Sunmatch Indus. Co., 146 F.3d 983, 991 (D.C. Cir. 1998) .

(n128)Footnote 44. United States v. Shanbaum, 10 F.3d 305, 312 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n129)Footnote 45. Ahmad v. Furlong, 435 F.3d 1196, 1201-1202 (10th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n130)Footnote 46. Bechtold v. City of Rosemount, 104 F.3d 1062, 1068 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n131)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 7.1.02, 7.1.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n132)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a)(1).

(n133)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a)(2).

(n134)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a), Committee Note.

(n135)Footnote 4. *See Nipponkoa Ins. Co. v. GlobeGround Servs., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 76227, at *9-10 (N.D. Ill. 2006) .

(n136)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b)(1).

(n137)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b)(2).

(n138)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b), Committee Note.

(n139)Footnote 8. Hall v. Tyco Int'l, Ltd., 223 F.R.D. 219, 257 (M.D.N.C. 2004) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART II. CONTENT AND FORM OF PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.11

§ 9.11 Pleading Special Matters

[1] Pleading Capacity, Authority, or Legal Existence n*

[a] Capacity, Authority, or Legal Existence Must Be Pleaded Only to Show Jurisdiction

A person need not allege capacity, authority, or legal existence except when necessary to show the existence of jurisdiction, n1 either federal question jurisdiction or diversity jurisdiction. n2 Capacity, authority to sue or be sued in federal civil actions, as well as questions of a party's legal existence, are generally determined by state law. n3 However, Rule 9(a) governs the procedural aspects of the issue, such as the manner and time in which to plead or to challenge a party's capacity, authority, or legal existence. n4

With respect to diversity cases, allegations of capacity, authority, or legal existence may be necessary to establish the citizenship of the claimant. Thus, in determining whether diversity jurisdiction exists, the citizenship of nominal or formal parties, such as the legal representative of a decedent's estate, an infant, or an incompetent, will be deemed by the court to be the same as that of the decedent, infant, or incompetent. n5 However, if a party is a trustee of an active trust, the trustee will be considered the real party in interest for diversity purposes. n6 In a class action, the capacity of the representative or representatives of the class should be alleged, because it is the citizenship of the representatives that controls for diversity jurisdiction purposes. n7

Federal question jurisdiction means that federal district courts have jurisdiction over civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States; n8 consequently, to show federal question jurisdiction, claimants typically need to plead capacity, authority, or legal existence to show that the claimant is within the purview of the federal statute under which the claim arose. For example, under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act the claimant must specifically allege that the claimant has the status of a participant, beneficiary, or fiduciary under the Act before it comes within the jurisdiction of the federal district court. n9 In another example, in a shareholder derivative suit Rule 23.1 requires that the complaint contain a specific allegation that the plaintiff was a shareholder or member at the time of the transaction on which the complaint is based or that the plaintiff's shares devolved by operation of law after the transaction. n10

[b] Capacity Must Be Raised by Specific Denial

A defending party must raise the issue of lack of capacity, authority, or legal existence by a specific denial, which must state any supporting facts that are peculiarly within the denying party's knowledge. n11 Thus, a general denial is not sufficient to challenge a party's capacity, authority, or legal existence. n12 However, when the lack of capacity, authority, or legal existence affirmatively appears on the face of a complaint or other pleading seeking relief, the issue is raised by that pleading, and raising the issue by specific denial of capacity is not necessary. n13

The requirements of Rule 9(a) apply to all parties responding to claims for relief, whether a claim in a complaint or third-party complaint, a counterclaim, or a crossclaim. For example, a plaintiff responding to a counterclaim must raise the issue of lack of capacity to be sued as an individual by a specific denial in the plaintiff's answer to the counterclaim. n14 However, the fact that the issue of the lack of capacity or authority must be raised by specific denial does not shift the burden of proof. The burden of proof remains on the party making a claim for relief; thus, once the issue of lack of capacity is raised by a defending party's specific denial, both parties will be able to present evidence on the issue, but the plaintiff has the ultimate burden to prove capacity. n15

[c] Issue Waived If Not Raised in Timely Manner

Except when an allegation of capacity, authority, or legal existence is necessary to show subject matter jurisdiction, n16 a party waives a defense of lack of capacity, authority, or legal existence if the defense is not raised in a timely manner. n17 These defenses are generally considered timely if raised: n18 in the initial responsive pleading, by motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b) for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted, n19 by motion for summary judgment, n20 or in the case of a claimant's incapacity, by motion under Rule 17(a) that the action be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. n21

In any event, a defense of lack of capacity, authority to act in a representative capacity, nor legal existence may not be raised for the first time after the trial has started. n22 However, the court may permit a specific denial of lack of capacity later than the initial responsive pleading or in a pre-answer motion under the liberal pleading amendment policies of Rule 15, n23 or if the harm or prejudice to the opposition was not great. n24

[2] Pleading Fraud, Mistake, and Conditions of Mind n*

[a] Pleading Requirements Stated in Federal Rule

In alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. On the other hand, any condition of mind of a person may usually be alleged generally. n1 However, there are exceptions to these general rules. For a discussion of the specific requirements for pleading fraud, see [b], below; for a discussion of the specific requirements for pleading mistake, see [c], below; for a discussion of the specific requirements for pleading any condition of mind, see [d], below.

If a party fails to plead fraud, mistake, or condition of mind (when required) with sufficient particularly, the court may dismiss the claim for failure to state a claim for relief. n2 However, especially if the pleading party has not had an opportunity to amend its claim, the court has considerable discretion under Rule 15(a) to allow the pleading party the right to amend to conform the pleading with the particularity requirements of Rule 9(b). n3 Rule 15(a) provides that the court should freely give leave to amend when justice requires and should grant a party a right to amend as a matter of course at any time before a responsive pleading is served. n4 However, the court will not grant the party leave to amend if, after a responsive pleading is filed, the pleading in any event would still fail to state a claim or defense even if drafted in compliance with Rule 9(b). n5

[b] Pleading Fraud

[i] Particularity Requirements of Federal Rules

A party must state circumstances constituting fraud with particularity, n6 whether the allegation of fraud appears in a pleading containing claims for relief n7 or in a pleading containing defenses to claims for relief. n8 The purposes of the particularity requirement are (1) to provide detailed notice of a fraud claim to a defending party, (2) to protect a defending party's reputation from improvident charges of wrongdoing, n9 (3) to prevent "strike suits," which are intended to consume a defending party's resources rather than redress wrongdoing, and (4) to prevent persons from first filing a civil claim for relief and then searching to find a valid claim after the action has been commenced. n10

Because of these four purposes of the particularity requirement of Rule 9(b), the court has discretion to relax the requirement in cases when the evidence of fraud is within a defendant's exclusive possession. In such cases, a claimant may plead fraud on information and belief provided that the pleading states facts and information on which the belief of fraud is founded, as well as the efforts made to obtain additional information. However, in the ordinary case when the claimant has adequate access to the necessary facts, the claimant may not plead fraud on information and belief nor in a vague manner. n11

The pleading of the "circumstances constituting fraud" generally requires that the claimant allege the identity of the person who made the fraudulent statement, including: (1) precisely what false or misleading statements were made in what documents or oral representations or what omissions were made; (2) the time and place of each such statement and the person responsible for making or not making (in cases of omission) the statement; (3) the content of any such statements and the manner in which they misled the claimant; and (4) what the person obtained as a consequence of the fraudulent statement or omission. n12 When the party claims a fraudulent misrepresentation based on an omission of facts, Rule 9(b) requires the claimant to plead the type of facts omitted, the place in which omissions should have appeared, and the manner in which omitted facts made the representations misleading. n13 If a claim involves multiple defending parties, a claimant usually may not group all wrongdoers together in a single set of allegations. Rather, the claimant is required to make specific and separate allegations against each defendant. n14

However, each and every alleged misrepresentation need not appear in the pleadings. Furthermore, a claimant is not required to explain the legal theory of the fraud claim. A claimant is merely required to set forth the major misrepresentations or omissions on which the fraud claims are based. n15 Also, while the particularity requirement applies to all pleadings pertaining to fraud, the requirement does not apply to allegations in the pleadings that do not relate to fraud. n16

[ii] Other Statutory Pleading Requirements for Allegations of Fraud

For actions alleging fraud under § 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act, the pleading requirements are no longer governed exclusively by Rule 9, because Congress has expressly set forth specific pleading requirements for alleging fraud under the Act, n17 and the pleading requirements in securities fraud cases are now more rigorous than those set forth in Rule 9(b). n18 These statutory requirements do not replace the procedural rule requiring specificity in pleading fraud; rather, they augment the specific requirements for pleading fraud in general and a plaintiff must fulfill all the requirements of both the statute and the rule. Therefore, in a securities fraud case, the plaintiff must allege: the statements plaintiff asserts were fraudulent and why they were fraudulent, who made the statements, and where and when the statements were made. n19 The plaintiff must also allege that in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, the defendant acted with scienter, n20 and either made a false material representation or omitted to disclose material information so that the plaintiff acted in reliance either on defendant's false representation or its failure to disclose material information, and as a result the plaintiff suffered injury and damages. n21 If an allegation regarding the statement or omission is made on information and belief, the complaint must state with particularity all the facts on which that belief is formed. n22

Civil causes of action under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act (RICO) n23 often involve allegations of fraud, and if so, the pleading is governed by Rule 9(b). n24 Accordingly, a RICO plaintiff must, at a minimum, describe the predicate acts of fraud with some specificity and state the time, place, and content of the alleged communications perpetrating the fraud. Furthermore, in a multiple defendant case, Rule 9(b) requires a RICO plaintiff to plead sufficient facts to notify each defendant of his or her alleged participation in the scheme. n25

[c] Pleading Mistake

Rule 9(b) requires that the circumstances constituting mistake be stated with particularity. n26 Thus, the court will not accept conclusory allegations of mistake. n27 Furthermore, a claimant may plead mistake on information and belief only if the facts required to allege mistake with particularity are not within the control of the party, but are in the control of a defending party. n28 Pleadings containing allegations of mistake are far less frequent in the federal courts than pleadings containing allegations of fraud. n29 However, when mistake does constitute an element of a claim or defense in a federal civil action, its circumstances should be pleaded by making allegations on the "who, what, where, when and how" of the mistake. n30

[d] Pleading Condition of Mind

In contrast to fraud and mistake, a party may allege conditions of a person's mind, such as malice, intent, or knowledge in a general manner. n31 The rationale for allowing conditions of the mind to be generally alleged is that a party cannot be expected to know the adverse party's state of mind. n32 While conditions of mind may be alleged generally, some courts require that intent to harm and other conditions of mind must be alleged with at least some particularity when they are relevant to fraud and mistake. These courts require a party to allege the circumstances that provide a strong, or at least some, foundation for the party's belief that someone else had the requisite intent or other condition of mind. n33

[3] Pleading Conditions Precedent n*

[a] Pleading Performance or Occurrence of Condition Precedent

A party may plead the performance or occurrence of a condition precedent in a general manner. n1 The purpose of Rule 9 in allowing a general allegation of conditions precedent is to promote simple, concise, and direct pleadings as specified in Rule 8(d)(1), and therefore to eliminate lengthy, detailed allegations. n2 For example, a party may allege that "all conditions precedent to the institution of this lawsuit have been fulfilled." n3 For a contract claim, it is sufficient for the party to allege "all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred," n4 or to allege simply that the "claimant has performed all of its obligations" as an insured under the policy." n5 In the event a claimant has failed to plead performance of a condition precedent, the dismissal of the claim is not the appropriate initial course of action. Rather, the court should first provide the claimant with an opportunity to amend. n6

[b] Pleading Denial of Performance or Occurrence of Condition Precedent

To deny occurrence or performance of condition precedents the party must make allegations with particularity. n7 Therefore, when a claimant has generally pleaded that it has performed conditions precedent, the defending party must plead nonperformance particularly by stating which particular condition precedent in the agreement or statute in dispute has not been performed. n8 For example, a defendant insurer, wanting to assert that the time limits in the insurance policy were conditions precedent to a plaintiff's claim and were not met by the plaintiff, may not simply plead that the plaintiff failed to sue "within the limits of time prescribed by relevant statutes." n9

Rule 9(c) applies to all pleadings containing issues of performance or occurrence of conditions precedent. Therefore, if a defending party makes a general allegation of performance of a condition precedent in a counterclaim or crossclaim, the plaintiff or opposing party must specifically deny performance or occurrence of the condition precedent. Similarly, in an action for breach of contract based on defendant's failure to comply with a condition precedent within a contract that would bar the contract from taking effect, the plaintiff must allege specifically in the complaint the nonperformance of the condition precedent. n10

If a defending party fails to deny performance or occurrence of a condition precedent in a timely manner, the failure may result in a waiver of the defense, n11 which makes evidence regarding nonperformance inadmissible at trial. n12 Failure to deny the performance or occurrence of a condition is generally construed as an admission of performance or occurrence. n13 However, a court may permit late allegations denying conditions precedent by granting leave to amend when required by justice. n14 In making its determination of whether to grant leave to amend, the court will consider the degree of culpability of the party who failed to timely deny, the harm to the opposing party and others, and any earlier warnings and chances to rectify given the party. n15 In any event, the court may restrict the availability of the defense by ordering that it not be raised after issuance of a pretrial order, n16 or after the time a trial has commenced. n17

[4] Pleading Official Document or Act n*

A party may plead an official document or official act by making an allegation that the document was legally issued or that the act was legally done. n1 Rule 9(d) is thus consistent with Rule 8(a), which requires that a pleading setting forth a claim for relief need contain only a short and plain statement showing the party is entitled to relief. n2 It also is consistent with Rule 10(c), which permits, but does not require, written instruments to serve as exhibits to pleadings. n3 The application of Rule 9(d) is illustrated in Paragraph 2 of Form 18 in the Appendix of Forms, which provides for a claimant in a patent infringement action to allege the official Letters Patent that were issued to the claimant. n4 It is also illustrated and Paragraph 4 of Form 19, which provides for a claimant in a complaint for copyright infringement to allege that the claimant received the official certificate of registration in compliance with all laws governing copyright, as well as Paragraph 5 of Form 19, which provides for a copyright infringement claimant to allege that the claimant has published or licensed for publication all copies of the book in compliance with the copyright laws. n5

[5] Pleading Judgment or Decision n*

A party may plead the judgment or decision of a domestic or foreign court, judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal, board, or officer by making an allegation of the judgment or decision. A party need not specify facts showing the rendering entity's or officer's jurisdiction to render the judgment or decision. n1 Thus, Rule 9(e) creates a presumption that the judgment or decision earlier rendered was within the jurisdictional authority of the judicial entity or officer and requires the party who opposes use of the earlier judgment or decision to raise the issue of lack of jurisdiction. This does not require that an opposing party plead the lack of jurisdiction with particularity. n2 However, the party opposing the use of the earlier judgment may not allege lack of jurisdiction to render a judgment by a general denial or by motion to dismiss but must raise the issue specifically in the answer. Although the party has the burden of raising the issue of lack of jurisdiction of the court rendering the earlier judgment, the burden of proof on the issue remains with the proponent of the judgment. n3

[6] Pleading Time and Place n*

Allegations of time and place are material for the purpose of testing the sufficiency of a pleading, and time and place must be considered like any other allegation of material matter. n1 Rule 9(f) itself does not necessarily require specificity in pleading time and place. n2 By "material," Rule 9(f) means that allegations that refer to time and place are significant, and if there is any defect or misstatement in an allegation regarding a reference to time or place, it could cause loss of a claim or defense, unless the pleading otherwise specifically cures the defect. The most frequent example is that allegations of a pleading with respect to time have significance in the determination of whether a party has complied with a statute of limitations or some other filing deadline. Under the normal rules of pleading, a statute of limitation is an affirmative defense and must be raised in the answer. However, because Rule 9(f) makes allegations of time material, the defense of the statute may be raised by a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) when it is apparent from the face of the complaint that the time limit for bringing the claim has passed. Therefore, if a complaint on its face establishes the defense of the lapse of a limitations period, the complaint may be required to establish with particularity that the statute should be tolled, for example, due to equitable tolling. n3

Allegations of time and place may be important to either the claiming or the defending party. n4 For a defendant, a defense to a plaintiff's claim based on a statute of limitation must be set forth "affirmatively" under Rule 8(c) and typically means that time and place have significance. n5 If a court finds insufficient allegations of time or place, the court will generally provide a claimant with an opportunity to amend if there is some chance a claim may be sufficiently alleged. n6

[7] Pleading Special Damages n*

[a] Requirement of Specificity

When making any claim for relief, the claimant must specifically state any special damages in the claim. n1 Special damages are damages that have resulted from the occurrence of a wrongful act or omission but that are unusual for, or not normally associated with, the type of claim. n2 In contrast, general damages are defined as the actual damages that are the natural consequence of the wrongful act or omission. n3 For example, damages for personal injury (noneconomic losses) are unusual in contract cases but normal in automobile accident cases, while lost profits are normal in contract cases and unusual in personal injury cases. n4 For claims based on diversity of citizenship or supplemental jurisdiction, state law governs the nature of the damages, while the procedure for pleading damages is governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n5

The purpose of the requirement that special damages essential to claims must be specifically stated is to provide notice to the opposition that the party is claiming these unusual damages n6 and to permit groundless claims to be discovered and dismissed earlier in litigation. n7 There is no black and white test for determining whether an allegation of special damages has been stated with sufficient particularity under Rule 9(g), although conclusory allegations are obviously insufficient. n8 Allegations of special damage must be sufficient to permit a defending party to begin preparing a defense and to give the defending party adequate notice of the alleged damages. Therefore, the more natural or likely or probable the damages are in connection to the claimed injury or breach, the less particularity is needed. n9

The allegation in a demand for relief containing special damages must at least contain a statement of the causes giving rise to the special damages. n10 Special damages with several elements should be set forth in an itemized form rather than in a lump sum. n11 However, if the damages are of such a nature that precise allegations as to the amount of special damages at the time of the initial pleading are impossible, the court will not deny relief merely because the damage or loss computation or manner of proof was not alleged with certainty. In such circumstances it is sufficient for a claimant to state the general nature of the special damages in anticipation that the damage allegation can be made more precise as discovery progresses. n12

[b] Failure to Specifically Allege Special Damages May be Raised By Motion

A defending party may raise a claimant's failure to plead special damages pursuant to Rule 9(g) either by answer or other responsive pleading, or by any of the following motions, which may be filed before answering:

1. Motion to dismiss. If a party commits a violation of Rule 9(g) by failing to adequately plead special damages, the opposition may raise the issue by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted. n13 However, this motion will not be appropriate in many cases, because the failure to adequately plead special damages does not necessarily mean that the party has failed to state a valid claim. n14 There is only one common type of claim in which courts frequently note that special damages are an essential element of a valid claim for relief. In defamation per quod actions, a motion to dismiss is appropriate if the party failed to adequately allege special damages, because such damages are required in such an action. n15 However, the court will usually grant the claimant an opportunity to amend the pleading before granting a motion to dismiss. n16

2. Motion in limine or motion to exclude evidence. A party that wants to raise or preserve a challenge of a failure to particularly plead special damages must at a minimum object before or at trial to the introduction of evidence concerning those special damages. Failure to object amounts to a waiver of any complaint concerning the inadequate pleading, because the matter will be deemed to have been tried by express or implied consent and treated as if it had been properly raised in the pleadings, n17 and the court will allow an amendment to conform the pleadings to the proof. n18 The motion may be made before trial in a motion in limine or motion to exclude evidence. n19 Before granting a motion to exclude, the court will provide the claimant with an opportunity to amend the offending pleading to properly state the special damages with particularity. n20

3. Motion for summary judgment. A party may make a motion for summary judgment for the opposition's failure to adequately allege special damages, but only in the same limited circumstances as would support a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, as discussed in item 1, above. As with a motion to dismiss, an opportunity to amend would be granted before the rendering of any actual summary judgment. A court will grant summary judgment only if the party refuses to amend or is incapable of alleging the required special damages. n21

4. Motion for more definite statement. Inadequate pleading of special damages may be raised by a Rule 12(e) motion for a more definite statement. n22 However, a motion for a more definite statement should be granted only when a pleading to which a responsive pleading is permitted is so vague and ambiguous that a party cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading. n23 Furthermore, motions pursuant to Rule 12(e) are disfavored, and the court will not grant the motion unless the complaint is so excessively vague and ambiguous as to be unintelligible and to prejudice the defending party seriously in attempting to answer it. n24

[c] Effect of Failure to Plead Special Damages With Requisite Specificity

If a party violates the pleading requirements of Rule 9(g), the court may deny an award of special damages. n25 However, it is important to note that in most of the cases stating that special damages may be denied for the failure to adequately plead them, the claim for the special damages was raised for the first time at or after trial. n26 Usually when the inadequate pleading of special damages is raised in a pretrial motion or at a pretrial conference, the court will simply order the party to amend his or her pleading. n27 It is only when the inadequately pleaded special damages surprise a party at trial and the surprised party objects, or when the unpleaded special damages are raised for the first time in a post-trial motion, that inadequately pleaded special damages are likely to be denied. In other cases, the courts will give the defaulting party an opportunity to amend. n28

[8] Pleading in Admiralty and Maritime Cases n*

[a] Election to Proceed Under Admiralty and Maritime Rules

Admiralty and nonadmiralty claims may both arise from the same facts, for example, when a seaman is hurt aboard ship. n1 If a claim for relief is within admiralty or maritime jurisdiction, and also within some other subject-matter jurisdiction of the court, the pleading may designate that the claim is to come within the admiralty or maritime jurisdiction for procedural purposes. n2 If such a claim does not receive a designation in the pleadings, it will be treated as within nonadmiralty jurisdiction. When there is no basis for federal jurisdiction on a claim other than admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, the claim must be treated as an admiralty or maritime claim even if no Rule 9(h) allegation is made in the pleading. n3 As discussed in [b], below, the purpose of Rule 9(h)(1) is to allow the claimant to elect that certain special admiralty and maritime procedures and rules apply. Rule 9(h)(1) also clarifies the applicability of these admiralty and maritime rules and procedures in a case when more than one basis for subject matter jurisdiction has been asserted. n4 To invoke the admiralty or maritime jurisdiction, a claimant must insert a statement in the pleading identifying the claim "as an admiralty or maritime claim for purposes of Rule 14(c), 38(e), 82 and the Supplemental Rules for Admiralty or Maritime Claims and Asset Forfeiture Claims." n5

While the claimant has the power to determine in the initial pleading whether the procedural rules for a case will be either within or outside admiralty and maritime jurisdiction under Rule 9(h), the initial choice is not irrevocable. n6 The designation may be amended in accordance with Rule 15, which provides that leave to amend shall be given freely unless prejudice will result to the opposition. n7 The court has discretion in determining whether to grant leave to amend. n8

[b] Procedural Effects of Admiralty or Maritime Jurisdiction

Several important procedural consequences arise when: either (1) a claimant invokes the benefits of Rule 9(h) by identifying a claim as an admiralty or maritime claim or (2) when a claim is cognizable solely in admiralty or maritime: n9

1. Special rules of procedure for admiralty and maritime claims apply. n10

2. When a claimant invokes admiralty or maritime jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 9(h)(1), there is a waiver of the right to a jury trial, which is otherwise applicable to claims that are based on common law. n11 There is no right to a jury trial because the Seventh Amendment of the federal Constitution does not afford a right to a jury trial when a claim is being heard within a federal court's admiralty jurisdiction. n12

3. The general venue statutes do not apply to admiralty or maritime claims identified under Rule 9(h)(1). n13 Rather, general admiralty practice controls, which provides that venue of admiralty actions in personam is in any district where service of process could have been made on a defending party. n14 For actions in rem, venue of admiralty actions is in the district where seizure of a vessel is made or other property is found or a substitute of the res exists. n15

4. A special rule for third party practice applies. When a claimant elects to invoke admiralty jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 9(h), there is unique third party complaint procedure. A defending party to an admiralty claim, as a third-party plaintiff may bring in a third-party defendant, seeking recovery from either the complaining or the defending party. n16 This rule is intended to preserve a defending party's traditional right in admiralty and maritime claims to demand judgment directly in favor of the plaintiff and against the third-party defendant, in contrast to Rule 14(a), which does not automatically establish a direct relationship between the plaintiff and the third-party defendant. n17

5. A special rule applies to interlocutory appeals. n18 When a court exercises subject matter jurisdiction in a federal civil action over admiralty or maritime claims, there are special rights to appeals. A statute permits appeals from interim decrees that determine the rights and liabilities of the parties to admiralty cases in which appeals from final decrees are allowed. n19 However, this provision is strictly construed, and interlocutory appeals will not be permitted unless the order had the effect of determining substantive rights and liabilities. n20 The statute applies even to non-admiralty claims that have been decided and are joined in an action that has been identified as an admiralty action pursuant to Rule 9(h). n21

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePartiesFictitious Names

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See § 9.10[1].

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b).

(n5)Footnote 4. Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. v. Blum, 649 F.2d 342, 344 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c).

(n7)Footnote 6. Navarro Sav. Ass'n v. Lee, 446 U.S. 458, 464-465, 100 S. Ct. 1779, 64 L. Ed. 2d 425 (1980) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Snyder v. Harris, 394 U.S. 332, 340, 89 S. Ct. 1053, 22 L. Ed. 2d 319 (1969) .

(n9)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n10)Footnote 9. 29 U.S.C. § 1132(e)(1); see Grand Union Co. v. Food Employers Labor Relations Ass'n, 808 F.2d 66, 71 (D.C. Cir. 1987) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1; Lawson v. Baltimore Paint & Chem. Corp., 298 F. Supp. 373, 375 (D. Md. 1969) (allegation of capacity sufficient under Rule 9(a) may be insufficient under more specific requirements for alleging capacity of Rule 23.1).

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a)(2).

(n13)Footnote 12. NAACP v. Laborers' Int'l Union, 902 F. Supp. 688, 699 (W.D. Va. 1993) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n14)Footnote 13. Comstock v. Pfizer Retirement Annuity Plan, 524 F. Supp. 999, 1002 (D. Mass. 1981) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Ivey v. Daus, 181 F. Supp. 793, 797 (S.D.N.Y. 1960) .

(n16)Footnote 15. See Howerton v. Designer Homes by Georges, Inc., 950 F.2d 281, 283 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a)(1); see [a], above

(n18)Footnote 17. Bondpro Corp. v. Siemens Power Generation, Inc., 463 F.3d 702, 705 (7th Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n19)Footnote 18. See Animazing Entertainment, Inc. v. Louis Lofredo Assocs., 88 F. Supp. 2d 265, 268 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) .

(n20)Footnote 19. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n21)Footnote 20. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n22)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); see Marston v. American Employers Ins. Co., 439 F.2d 1035, 1041 (1st Cir 1971) .

(n23)Footnote 22. First Union Natl Bank v. Pictet Overseas Trust Corp., 351 F.3d 810, 815 (8th Cir. 2003) (party waives capacity defense if party defends on merits after it failed to proffer that defense).

(n24)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a) (leave to amend pleading freely given when justice requires).

(n25)Footnote 24. Gardner v. Parson, 874 F.2d 131, 139 n.12 (3d Cir. 1989) (plaintiff not prejudiced when defendant failed to specifically deny capacity in initial answer).

(n26)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n27)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n28)Footnote 2. Carroll v. Fort James Corp, 470 F.3d 1171, 1174-1177 (5th Cir. 2006) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n29)Footnote 3. Drobnak v. Andersen Corp., 561 F.3d 778, 788 (8th Cir. 2009) (Rule 15(a)(2) allows amendment when justice so requires).

(n30)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a); see Lone Star Ladies Inv. Club v. Schlotzsky's Inc., 238 F.3d 363, 368-369 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n31)Footnote 5. Bank v. Pitt, 928 F.2d 1108, 1112 (11th Cir. 1991) (dismissal with prejudice proper when even more carefully drafted pleading could not state claim for relief).

(n32)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n33)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).

(n34)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(a), 8(c)(1).

(n35)Footnote 9. ATSI Communs., Inc. v. Shaar Fund, Ltd., 493 F.3d 87, 99 (2d Cir. 2007) .

(n36)Footnote 10. United States ex rel. Snapp, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 532 F.3d 496, 504 (6th Cir. 2008) (sometimes referred to as "fishing expedition").

(n37)Footnote 11. Drobnak v. Andersen Corp., 561 F.3d 778, 783-784 (8th Cir. 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n38)Footnote 12. Mizzaro v. Home Depot, Inc., 544 F.3d 1230, 1237 (11th Cir. 2008) ; Hefferman v. Bass, 467 F.3d 596, 601-602 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n39)Footnote 13. Carroll v. Fort James Corp, 470 F.3d 1171, 1174 (5th Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n40)Footnote 14. Vicom, Inc. v. Harbridge Merchant Servs., 20 F.3d 771, 778 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n41)Footnote 15. Midwest Commerce Banking Co. v. Elkhart City Centre, 4 F.3d 521, 523 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n42)Footnote 16. Lone Star Ladies Inv. Club v. Schlotzsky's, Inc., 238 F.3d 363, 368-369 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n43)Footnote 17. See 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4; see also Maldonado v. Dominguez, 137 F.3d 1, 9 n.5 (1st Cir. 1998)

(Congress enacted "heightened" pleading standard under federal securities law which requires that factual allegations be of sufficient particularity to give rise to strong inference that defendant acted with requisite state of mind).

(n44)Footnote 18. SEC v. Tambone, 550 F.3d 106, 119 (1st Cir. 2008) (heightened requirements for pleading scienter apply in private actions for securities fraud under PSLRA, but do not apply to actions brought by SEC).

(n45)Footnote 19. Hollin v. Scholastic Corp. (In re Scholastic Corp. Sec. Litig.), 252 F.3d 63, 69-70 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n46)Footnote 20. See Ley v. Visteon Corp., 543 F.3d 801, 809 (6th Cir. 2008) (knowing and deliberate intent to manipulate, deceive, or defraud, and recklessness may constitute scienter; providing nonexhaustive list of factors that are probative of scienter in securities fraud cases).

(n47)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b).

(n48)Footnote 22. 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(1).

(n49)Footnote 23. See 28 U.S.C. § 1964(c).

(n50)Footnote 24. Vild v. Visconsi, 956 F.2d 560, 567 (6th Cir. 1992) .

(n51)Footnote 25. See Goren v. New Vision Int'l, Inc., 156 F.3d 721, 729-730 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n52)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n53)Footnote 27. McAninch v. Wintermute, 478 F.3d 882, 890 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n54)Footnote 28. See United States ex rel. Sikkenga v. Regence Bluecross Blueshield, 472 F.3d 702, 728 (10th Cir. 2006) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3) (allowing pleading of factual allegations that will likely have evidentiary support after reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery).

(n55)Footnote 29. Bankers Trust Co. v. Old Republic Ins. Co., 959 F.2d 677, 683 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n56)Footnote 30. DiLeo v. Ernst & Young, 901 F.2d 624, 627 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n57)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

(n58)Footnote 32. EP Medsystems, Inc. v. Echocath, Inc., 235 F.3d 865, 880-882 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n59)Footnote 33. Campaniello Imports Ltd. v. Saportini Italia S.P.A., 117 F.3d 655, 663-664 (2d Cir. 1997) (intent not adequately pleaded when coupled with fact plaintiff failed to allege any specific instance of defendant's soliciting direct sales in violation of distributorship agreement).

(n60)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n61)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c).

(n62)Footnote 2. See Walton v. Nalco Chem. Co., 272 F.3d 13, 22-23 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n63)Footnote 3. EEOC v. Standard Forge & Axle Co., 496 F.2d 1392, 1395 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n64)Footnote 4. Fitz-Patrick v. Commonwealth Oil Co., 285 F.2d 726, 729 (5th Cir. 1960) .

(n65)Footnote 5. W.E. O'Neil Constr. Co. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 721 F. Supp. 984, 996 (N.D. Ill. 1989) .

(n66)Footnote 6. Reindl v. City of Leavenworth, 361 F. Supp. 2d 1294, 1301-1302 (D. Kan. 2005) .

(n67)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c).

(n68)Footnote 8. Walton v. Nalco Chem. Co., 272 F.3d 13, 22 (1st Cir. 2001) ; Runnemede Owners, Inc. v. Crest Mortg. Corp., 861 F.2d 1053, 1057-1058 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n69)Footnote 9. Jackson v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 678 F.2d 992, 1011 n.26 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n70)Footnote 10. Majchrowski v. Norwest Mortgage, Inc., 6 F. Supp. 2d 946, 967 (N.D. Ill. 1998) .

(n71)Footnote 11. Davis v. Kansas City Hous. Auth., 822 F. Supp. 609, 618-619 (W.D. Mo. 1993) .

(n72)Footnote 12. McKee-Berger-Mansueto, Inc. v. Board of Educ., 626 F.2d 559, 562-563 (7th Cir. 1980) .

(n73)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d).

(n74)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(f) (all pleadings should be construed to accomplish substantial justice); see also Farlow v. Union Central Life Ins. Co., 874 F.2d 791 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n75)Footnote 15. International Paving Sys. v. Van-Tulco, Inc., 866 F. Supp. 682, 691 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n76)Footnote 16. EEOC v. May & Co., 572 F. Supp 536, 540-541 (N.D. Ga. 1983) .

(n77)Footnote 17. Trinity Carton Co. v. Falstaff Brewing Corp., 767 F.2d 184, 192 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n78)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n79)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(d).

(n80)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(1).

(n81)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c).

(n82)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 18.

(n83)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 19.

(n84)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n85)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(e); see Hillman v. Arkansas Highway & Transp. Dep't, 39 F.3d 197, 200 (8th Cir. 1994) (noting relationship between Rule 9(e) and Rule 8(c), affirmative defense of res judicata).

(n86)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(e).

(n87)Footnote 3. See Gull v. Constam, 105 F. Supp. 107, 108 (D. Colo. 1952) .

(n88)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n89)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(f).

(n90)Footnote 2. Huckabay v. Moore, 142 F.3d 233, 241 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n91)Footnote 3. See Staehr v. Hartford Fin. Servs. Group, 547 F.3d 406, 426 (2d Cir. 2008) .

Hoover v. Langston Equipment Assoc., Inc., 958 F.2d 742, 744-745 (6th Cir. 1992) ; see KBT Corp. v. Ceridian Corp., 966 F. Supp. 369, 375 (E.D. Pa. 1997) (in defamation action, plaintiff must plead dates of allegedly disparaging statements with sufficient specificity to allow defendants to raise applicable defenses, such as statute of limitation).

(n92)Footnote 4. *See Mullins v. I. C. Sys., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45111, at * 3-4 (D. Colo. 2007) .

(n93)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c); see also Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 30 (defending party may allege in answer that complainant's claim did not arise within specific number of years immediately before commencement of action).

(n94)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a); see also Linnabery v. DePauw, 695 F. Supp. 411, 412 (C.D. Ill. 1988) .

(n95)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n96)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g).

(n97)Footnote 2. Contempo Metal Furniture Co. v. East Texas Motor Freight Lines, Inc., 661 F.2d 761, 765 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n98)Footnote 3. LINC Finance Corporation v. Onwuteaka, 129 F.3d 917, 922 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n99)Footnote 4. Avitia v. Metropolitan Club, Inc., 49 F.3d 1219, 1226 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n100)Footnote 5. See Muzikowski v. Paramount Pictures Corp., 322 F.3d 918, 924 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n101)Footnote 6. Figgins v. Advance Am. Cash Advance Ctrs. of Mich., Inc., 482 F. Supp. 2d 861, 868 (E.D. Mich. 2007) .

(n102)Footnote 7. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. v. Jacobson, 713 F.2d 262, 270 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n103)Footnote 8. Lebeda v. A.H. Robins Co., 101 F.R.D. 689, 690 (D. Me. 1984) (citing Moore's Federal Practice, and using Federal Rules Appendix of Forms, Official Form 11, as example of sufficient pleading to hold that bare allegation of injury does not meet minimal degree of specificity required by Rule 9(g)).

(n104)Footnote 9. Suarez Matos v. Ashford Presbyterian Community Hosp., Inc., 4 F.3d 47, 51 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n105)Footnote 10. Browning v. Clinton, 292 F.3d 235, (D.C. Cir. 2002) .

(n106)Footnote 11. Woodmont Corp. v. Rockland Center Partnership, 811 F. Supp. 1478, 1484 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n107)Footnote 12. Everco Indus., Inc. v. O.E.M. Prods. Co., 63 F.R.D. 662, 666 (N.D. Ill. 1974) .

(n108)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n109)Footnote 14. Diaz Irizarry v. Ennia, N.V., 678 F. Supp. 957, 959 (D.P.R. 1988) .

(n110)Footnote 15. Computerized Thermal Imaging, Inc. v. Bloomberg, L.P., 312 F.3d 1292, 1298 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n111)Footnote 16. Isuzu Motors Ltd. v. Consumers Union of United States, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1035 (C.D. Cal. 1998) .

(n112)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b).

(n113)Footnote 18. Niedland v. United States, 338 F.2d 254, 258-259 (3d Cir. 1964) .

(n114)Footnote 19. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(3) (proper subjects for pretrial conferences include advance rulings from court on admissibility of evidence).

(n115)Footnote 20. Crosby v. Old Republic Ins. Co., 978 F.2d 210, 211 n.1 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n116)Footnote 21. See Parker v. Aetna Life & Cas., 791 F. Supp. 175, 178 (W.D. Mich. 1991) .

(n117)Footnote 22. See KBT Corp., Inc. v. Ceridian Corp., 966 F. Supp. 369, 374, 378 (E.D. Pa., 1997) .

(n118)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n119)Footnote 24. Greater N.Y. Auto. Dealers Ass'n v. Envtl. Sys. Testing, 211 F.R.D. 71, 76 (E.D.N.Y. 2002) .

(n120)Footnote 25. Smith v. De Bartoli, 769 F.2d 451, 453 n.2 (7th Cir. 1985) (in action alleging denial of due process, plaintiff denied recovery for damages for emotional distress because plaintiff failed to plead such damages and emotional distress injury does not necessarily flow from denial of due process).

(n121)Footnote 26. See National Liberty Corp. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. 120 F.3d 913, 917 (8th Cir. 1997) (motion to amend counterclaim made during trial to add claim for special damages properly denied as untimely).

(n122)Footnote 27. See [b], above.

(n123)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Action Repair, Inc. v. American Broadcasting Co., 776 F.2d 143, 149-150 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n124)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 9.09 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n125)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Zrncevich v. Blue Haw. Enters., Inc., 738 F. Supp. 350, 352 (D. Haw. 1990) .

(n126)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h)(1); see Doyle v. Huntress, Inc., 419 F.3d 3, 6-7 (1st Cir. 2005) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(c), 38(e), and 82; Fed. R. Civ. P., Supplemental Rules for Admiralty and Maritime Claims.

(n127)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h)(1); Baris v. Sulpicio Lines, Inc., 932 F.2d 1540, 1547 (5th Cir. 1991) (election under Rule 9(h) applies only to a claim that is also within the jurisdiction of the district court on some other ground than admiralty).

(n128)Footnote 4. Doyle v. Huntress, Inc., 419 F.3d 3, 6 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n129)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h)(1).

(n130)Footnote 6. Duhon v. Koch Exploration Co., 628 F. Supp. 925, 928 (W.D. La. 1986) .

(n131)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15.

(n132)Footnote 8. Conti v. Sanko S.S. Co., 912 F.2d 816, 818 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n133)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h); see Doyle v. Huntress, Inc., 419 F.3d 3, 6-7 (1st Cir. 2005) ; see also [a], above.

(n134)Footnote 10. Marmac, LLC v. Reed, 232 F.R.D. 409, 413 (M.D. Fla. 2005) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P., Supplemental Rules for Admiralty or Maritime Claims and Asset Forfeiture Actions; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(c), 38(e), and 82.

(n135)Footnote 11. See Murphy v. Fla. Keys Elec. Coop. Ass'n, 329 F.3d 1311, 1319 (11th Cir. 2003) ; Nat'l Cas. Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 415 F. Supp. 2d 596, 604 (D. Md. 2006) ; see also Lewis v. United States, 812 F. Supp. 620, 627 (E.D. Va. 1993) (citing Moore's Federal Practice for proposition that most important consequence of proceeding in admiralty is forfeit of right to jury trial).

(n136)Footnote 12. See Fitzgerald v. United States Lines Co., 374 U.S. 16, 20, 83 S. Ct. 1646, 10 L. Ed. 2d 720 (1963) .

(n137)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n138)Footnote 14. Gipromer v. SS Tempo, 487 F. Supp. 631, 633 (S.D.N.Y. 1980) .

(n139)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P., Supplemental Rules for Admiralty or Maritime Claims and Asset Forfeiture Actions, Rule F(9).

(n140)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(c).

(n141)Footnote 17. Harrison v. Glendel Drilling Co., 679 F. Supp. 1413, 1417-1418 (W.D. La. 1988) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n142)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h)(2); see Doyle v. Huntress, Inc., 419 F.3d 3, 7 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n143)Footnote 19. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(3).

(n144)Footnote 20. Francis v. Forest Oil Corp., 798 F.2d 147, 149 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n145)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9, Committee Note to 1997 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART II. CONTENT AND FORM OF PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.12

§ 9.12 Form of Pleadings

[1] Caption Requirements n*

[a] Name of Court

The caption is the case identification information that must be included at the beginning of every document filed with a federal court. n1 The caption of every pleading must specify the name of the district court where the pleading is initially filed or is pending. n2 If the district court has divisions, the division must be indicated in the caption. n3 If a motion to change venue is granted or the case is otherwise transferred, the name of the court in the caption must specify the district court to which the action is transferred. n4

[b] Title of Action

[i] Names of Parties

The caption of every pleading must contain the title of the action, generally including the names of all of the parties. n5 The names of parties must be included in the original complaint, but in subsequent pleadings in which no new parties are joined it is sufficient to state the name of the first party on each side and an appropriate designation of other parties. n6 The other parties may be indicated by a phrase such as "et al." n7 However, in subsequent pleadings in which new parties are joined, such as a third-party complaint, n8 the caption should also identify each party as in the complaint. n9

All parties to a civil action must be properly identified in the caption of the initial pleading in which they are named. n10 The court has the authority to dismiss a civil action or one or more claims for relief in an action if a named party has no legal identity or is not sufficiently identified to permit the necessary service of process. n11 However, the requirement that each pleading must accurately specify the full name of each individual or entity named as a party in the action is enforced liberally. In the absence of prejudice, the court will permit a party to amend any errors and omissions in the naming of parties. n12 Before a responsive pleading has been filed, a party may even make an amendment without either court order or leave of court, n13 including an amendment to a caption to correct an improper designation. n14

[ii] Exceptions for Pseudonym Use By Plaintiff

The provision of Rule 10(a) that the complaint must provide the names of all claimants to the suit is based on a strong policy that judicial proceedings must be conducted in public. n15 However, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not expressly authorize or prohibit the use of fictitious names by plaintiffs in a claim for relief. Consequently, the federal courts have in special circumstances made exceptions to the policy favoring disclosure. For example, a court may allow plaintiffs to proceed under a pseudonym to protect privacy interests or to avoid physical harm. n16

The courts have developed several similar tests of factors to be weighed by the court in deciding whether to permit plaintiffs to proceed anonymously. These factors include: the degree of need to preserve privacy, the risk of harm to the claimant; the ages of anonymous parties; whether the action is against government or private parties because greater public disclosure is required when the government is involved; and the degree of unfairness to opposing parties. n17 Therefore, the court should permit a plaintiff to proceed anonymously only in exceptional cases involving matters of a highly sensitive and personal nature, actual danger of physical harm, or if the injury litigated against would be incurred as a result of the disclosure of the plaintiff's identity. n18 Leave to proceed under a fictitious name is generally applicable only to individuals, because business entities have little need to avoid publicity harm and have insufficient privacy interests. n19 The use of a fictitious name should not be granted automatically even if the opposing party does not object. The use of fictitious names is disfavored, and the judge has an independent duty to determine whether exceptional circumstances justify such a departure from the normal method of proceeding in federal courts. n20

A party seeking to proceed anonymously must request permission from the court. Absent such permission, the court lacks jurisdiction over the fictitiously named parties. n21 Therefore, if a party proceeds in litigation under a false name without permission from the court, or in deception of the court, dismissal of the entire action is warranted, even if the litigation has proceeded for years. n22

[iii] Exceptions for Designation of Defendant by Pseudonym

The strong public policy that a party to a civil action may use a pseudonym when the circumstances of the case justify such use generally applies in the same manner to a defendant. n23 Thus, in a complaint or other affirmative pleading a party may name an unknown defendant by using a "John Doe"or "Doe" pseudonym or other description if the plaintiff has been unable to ascertain the real identify of the defendant after a reasonable inquiry. A party who wants to use a pseudonym for a defendant must not only allege that the defendant is unknown but must also attempt to provide an adequate description or other known information so that service of process can at least be attempted. n24 A court will not permit use of the Doe designation for a defendant if the plaintiff's ignorance of the defendant's true identity is the result of willful neglect or lack of reasonable inquiry. If reasonable inquiry would have revealed the true identity, the court will dismiss a pleading naming Doe defendants. n25

Naming Doe defendants without identifying their citizenship is insufficient to establish diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n26 However, the removal statute has been amended to provide that if cases are removed from a state trial court to a federal district court based on general diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, the citizenship of defendants sued under fictitious names shall be disregarded. n27

It may be necessary for a plaintiff to designate an unknown defendant with a pseudonym if the statute of limitation on the claim is about to expire. Once the plaintiff determines the proper identity of the defendant, the plaintiff may then make a motion to amend the pleading containing the claim for relief, and the amendment to the pleading will "relate back" to the time of the original pleading for purposes of the statute of limitation. n28 However, this relation back depends on what the defendant to be added knew or should have known; the defendant to be brought in by amendment should have known that the action would have been brought against it but for a misdesignation of the proper party's identity. n29

[c] File Number

In the caption of each pleading, the party must set forth the file number. n30 At the time each civil action is commenced, the clerk of the district court will assign the action a number on a consecutive basis. n31 Some district courts indicate different categories of civil cases in their file number, such as whether the case involves adversary, bankruptcy, or civil proceedings; because local federal district court rules regulate the assignment of file numbers, information contained in the file number may vary among the district courts, and should be obtained from the clerk. n32

[d] Designation of Pleading Type

The pleading party must specify in the caption of every pleading a designation of pleading type. n33 The designations in Rule 7(a), specifying the types of pleadings permitted in civil actions in federal district courts, are: complaint; answer to a complaint; answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim; answer to a crossclaim; third-party complaint; an answer to a third-party complaint; and reply to an answer. n34 These pleading designations are not used for the captions of motions or other papers. It would be improper to designate a pleading as a "counterclaim" or a "crossclaim" in the caption, because these terms are claims for relief, which are alleged in a responsive pleading, the answer. n35

[2] Requirements for Text of Pleading n*

[a] Numbering of Paragraphs

A pleading party must make all allegations of a claim or defense in separate numbered paragraphs. n1 Rule 10(b) is designed to direct attorneys in drafting pleadings that frame issues with sufficient clarity to allow an orderly and meaningful presentation of a claims for relief and any corresponding defenses, either in a motion or at trial. n2 However, the court will excuse a failure to number paragraphs provided that the pleading is intelligible and there is no prejudice to the opposing party. n3 Properly numbering the paragraphs in consecutive order is generally necessary to make useful cross references to particular paragraphs in the same pleading, in a different pleading, or in a motion. n4 For example, parties regularly use incorporation by reference of numbered paragraphs appearing elsewhere in a pleading to satisfy a pleading requirement that a particular allegation such as fraud be pleaded with particularity. n5

[b] Each Paragraph States Distinct Facts

The contents of each numbered paragraph in a pleading must be limited as far as practicable to a statement of a single set of circumstances. n6 This means that there should be a separate paragraph for each distinct set of facts or occurrences. Thus, pleading multiple acts of wrongful conduct in one claim violates Rule 10(b)'s clear requirement that each claim founded on a separate transaction or occurrence must be stated in a separate claim or defense. n7 However, the courts have enforced this requirement liberally. The court will a excuse a failure to limit a paragraph to a statement of a single set of circumstances, and not dismiss the complaint, provided that a pleading is otherwise clear and other parties are not prejudiced. Further, the court will generally provide a party several opportunities to amend a paragraph that covers multiple sets of circumstances. n8 The court may also grant leeway when it ascertains that separate paragraphs would not facilitate clearer understanding of allegations, for example, when the claimant bases their entire claim for relief on a single transaction with a single party. However, parties must remember that distinct paragraphs may be useful even when there is only a single claim or defense if the claim involves many facts or more than a single ground to support a claim or defense. n9

[c] Pleading Multiple Transactions or Parties

If doing so would promote clarity, each claim founded on a separate transaction or occurrence must be stated in a separate count. Similarly, if doing so would make a responsive pleading clearer, each defense, other than a denial, which is founded on a separate transaction or occurrence must be stated in a separate defense. n10 The effect of this rule is that each individual paragraph should not state allegations regarding more than one transaction or occurrence or more than one party. Especially to be avoided are extremely long paragraphs that cover multiple parties and grievances or defenses. n11

The court will require separate counts if necessary to enable the defendant to frame a responsive pleading or to enable the court and the other parties to understand the claims. n12 Thus, if a complaint or other pleading seeking relief is presented against more than one defendant, the claimant may be required to state separate counts to clearly indicate to which defendant each claim applies. n13 Separate counts may also be required if multiple plaintiffs join several claims against the same defendant or defendants. n14

However, if several plaintiffs plead an identical occurrence simultaneously against a single defendant, or the liability asserted by a single plaintiff against two or more defendants is joint, separate counts may not be required because there may be only one transaction or occurrence or one claim involved. n15 Furthermore, because the objective of this requirement is clarity in pleading, the requirement is not strictly enforced when violation causes no uncertainty. n16

[3] Adoption of Pleading Allegations by Reference n*

A party may adopt by reference a statement from any pleading into another place in the same pleading, in another pleading, or in any motion. n1 The purpose for allowing adoption by reference of pleading statements is to eliminate redundancy and repetition. n2 A reference is effective only if the reference is clear and explicit and specifically identifies the statements incorporated. Adoption by reference will not be allowed if vague or imprecise. n3

Most frequently, statements in a pleading are adopted by reference later in the same pleading. Separate counts within the same affirmative pleading may be based on different legal theories and even involve different transactions but nevertheless may share common facts or request the same relief. n4 Similarly, an answer to a complaint may contain both a response to the plaintiff's allegations and a counterclaim against the plaintiff, that could each share many common facts. In these situations, the court will allow adoption by reference of statements later in the same pleading. n5

Statements in one pleading may also be adopted by reference in a subsequent pleading in the same civil action, n6 including adoption of statements from another party's pleading. n7 However, a party must make any such adoption from the same pleading, another pleading, or a motion with a degree of specificity and clarity that will enable the responding party to easily determine the nature and extent of the adoption. n8 Furthermore, the courts have consistently ruled that adoption of a statement in a pleading in one civil action of a statement from another civil action is not permitted, even if the parties to the two civil actions are the same. n9

A party may also adopt by reference a statement in a pleading into a motion in the same case. n10 For example, a motion for judgment on the pleadings may adopt by reference statements in pleadings to support the movant's allegation that there are no material factual issues in dispute and that judgment on the pleadings is proper. n11 A motion for summary judgment may be supported or opposed by reference to statements in the pleadings. The rule on summary judgment clearly contemplates that a motion for summary judgment should be supported or opposed by reference to pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions on file, and any affidavits. n12

[4] Exhibits to Pleadings and Incorporation by Reference n*

[a] Documents Attached as Exhibits

A party may make a copy of a written document an exhibit to a pleading, and it becomes a part of the pleading for all purposes. n1 Thus, the contents of a written document that is an exhibit to a pleading will be considered in determining the party's claim for relief or defense to a claim for relief. n2 All types of documents may be included as exhibits in a pleading under Rule 10(c), n3 such as written contracts, n4 correspondence, n5 motion documents, n6 and litigation papers from earlier state court proceedings. n7 Rule 10(c) does not specify how a party should size, attach, and identify exhibits. Local district court rules typically specify such guidelines. For example, one district court requires that exhibits must be securely fastened, numbered at the bottom of the page and be of particular size. n8

Ordinarily, in the case of a conflict between the exhibit and the pleading, the court will determine that the exhibit controls. n9 However, even though an exhibit becomes a part of a pleading "for all purposes" under Rule 10(c), the party does not necessarily adopt as true the entire contents of the exhibit. For example, a libel plaintiff may attach the writing alleged in the complaint to be libelous without asserting the truth of the matters in the writing, and the court need not accept them as true. n10

[b] Incorporation by Reference

Encompassed in Rule 10(c) is the process of incorporation of a written document by reference. n11 Thus, a written instrument incorporated by reference into a pleading will be considered by the court deciding the motion, provided that there is a "clear and definite reference" to the instrument in the pleading. n12

Rule 10(c) is permissive and not mandatory, and a claim or defense will not be dismissed for failure to attach a document to the pleading merely because the document may have a bearing on the claim or defense. n13 Some courts have held that it is proper for the trial court to consider documents even if they are not directly incorporated by reference, if the document is "integral" to an evaluation of the claim or defense. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsCertification RequirementsCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsSigning Requirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 10.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 1.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 1 (Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply to all civil actions in United States district courts).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 1.

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a); *see also Reytblatt v. Illinois Inst. of Tech., 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 31943, at 3 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 1.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(a).

(n8)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Wiwa v. Royal Dutch Petroleum Co., 392 F.3d 812, 814 n.1 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a), (b); see Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 1; see also Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 4.

(n10)Footnote 9. Boarhead Farm Agreement Group v. Advanced Envtl. Tech. Corp., 381 F. Supp. 2d 427, 431-432 (E.D. Pa. 2006) ; see Van Well Nursery, Inc. v. Mony Life Ins. Co., 421 F. Supp. 2d 1321, 1325 (E.D. Wash. 2006) (case caption of all future pleadings must reflect substitution of new plaintiffs for former plaintiffs).

(n11)Footnote 10. Mitchell v. Maynard, 80 F.3d 1433, 1441 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Stratton v. Boston, 731 F. Supp. 42, 45 (D. Mass. 1989) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n13)Footnote 12. Bernstein Seawell & Kove v. Bosarge, 813 F.2d 726, 730 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n14)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n15)Footnote 14. See United States v. Edwards, 241 F.R.D. 146, 149 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (after responsive pleading has been filed, leave of court required to amend name in caption).

(n16)Footnote 15. Doe v. Smith, 429 F.3d 706 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Roe v. Aware Woman Ctr. for Choice, Inc., 253 F.3d 678, 684-686 (11th Cir. 2001) .

(n18)Footnote 17. James v. Jacobson, 6 F.3d 233, 238 (4th Cir. 1993) , see Doe v. City of New York, 201 F.R.D. 100, 101-102 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Roe v. Aware Woman Ctr. for Choice, 253 F.3d 678, 684-686 (11th Cir. 2001) (abortion cases have always been considered exceptional).

(n20)Footnote 19. In re S. Cent. States Bakery Prods. Antitrust Litig., 86 F.R.D. 407, 411 n.4 (M.D. La. 1980) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Doe v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 112 F.3d 869, 872 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n22)Footnote 21. National Commodity & Barter Ass'n v. Gibbs, 886 F.2d 1240, 1245 (10th Cir. 1989) .

(n23)Footnote 22. Zocaras v. Castro, 465 F.3d 479, 483-485 (11th Cir. 2006) (because courts must be able to preserve integrity of judicial process, party who files suit under false name and proceeds with that deception right up to trial loses right to seek judicial relief).

(n24)Footnote 23. Doe v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 176 F.R.D. 464, 466-467 (E.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n25)Footnote 24. *Beckerman v. Weber, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58092, at 20 (M.D. Pa. 2007) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n26)Footnote 25. Roper v. Grayson, 81 F.3d 124, 126 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n27)Footnote 26. Eckert v. Lane, 678 F. Supp. 773, 775 (W.D. Ark. 1988) .

(n28)Footnote 27. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a).

(n29)Footnote 28. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C); see Nelson v. Adams USA, Inc., 529 U.S. 460, 465-467, 120 S. Ct. 1579, 146 L. Ed. 2d 530 (2000) .

(n30)Footnote 29. Krupski v. Costa Crociere S. p. A., ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 2485, 177 L. Ed. 2d 48, 57-58 (2010) .

(n31)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 1.

(n32)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a)(1).

(n33)Footnote 32. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(a)(1).

(n34)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n35)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(1)-(7).

(n36)Footnote 35. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n37)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 10.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n38)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b).

(n39)Footnote 2. See Bautista v. Los Angeles County, 216 F.3d 837, 841 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n40)Footnote 3. Shaw v. Russell Trucking Line, Inc., 542 F. Supp. 776, 781 (W.D. Pa. 1982) .

(n41)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b), (c).

(n42)Footnote 5. Schwartz v. Celestial Seasonings, Inc., 124 F.3d 1246, 1252-1253 (10th Cir. 1997) .

(n43)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b).

(n44)Footnote 7. Corbitt v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 589 F.3d 1136, 1166 (11th Cir. 2009) .

(n45)Footnote 8. Frederiksen v. City of Lockport, 384 F.3d 437, 438 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n46)Footnote 9. See Lamar Advertising, Inc. v. City of Lakeland, Florida, 980 F. Supp. 1455, 1458 (M.D. Fla. 1997) .

(n47)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(b).

(n48)Footnote 11. See Frederiksen v. City of Lockport, 384 F.3d 437, 438 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n49)Footnote 12. Anderson v. District Bd. of Trustees, 77 F.3d 364, 366-367 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n50)Footnote 13. Ames v. Associated Musicians, 47 F.R.D. 540, 542 (S.D.N.Y. 1968) .

(n51)Footnote 14. Erone Corp. v. Skouras Theatres Corp., 19 F.R.D. 299, 300-301 (S.D.N.Y. 1956) .

(n52)Footnote 15. Peterson v. Stanczak, 48 F.R.D. 426, 432 (N.D. Ill. 1969) ; see Lamar Advertising, Inc. v. City of Lakeland, Florida, 980 F. Supp. 1455, 1458 (M.D. Fla. 1997) .

(n53)Footnote 16. Kjorlie v. Lundin, 765 F. Supp. 671, 672-673 (D. Kan. 1991) .

(n54)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 10.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n55)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c).

(n56)Footnote 2. East Troy v. Soo L. R. Co., 409 F. Supp. 326, 330 (E.D. Wis. 1976) .

(n57)Footnote 3. Federal Nat'l Mortgage Ass'n v. Cobb, 738 F. Supp. 1220, 1227 (N.D. Ind. 1990) .

(n58)Footnote 4. See Fontana v. Haskin, 262 F.3d 871, 877 (9th Cir. 2001) .

(n59)Footnote 5. Van Dyke Ford, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 399 F. Supp. 277, 285 (E.D. Wis. 1975) .

(n60)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c).

(n61)Footnote 7. Federal Nat'l Mortgage Ass'n v. Cobb, 738 F. Supp. 1220, 1227 (N.D. Ind. 1990) .

(n62)Footnote 8. Carroll v. Fort James Corp, 470 F.3d 1171, 1176 (5th Cir. 2006) .

(n63)Footnote 9. Muth v. Dechert, Price & Rhoads, 391 F. Supp. 935, 938 (E.D. Pa. 1975) .

(n64)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c).

(n65)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n66)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c).

(n67)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 10.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n68)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c).

(n69)Footnote 2. Kolbeck v. LIT Am., Inc., 923 F. Supp. 557, 560 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n70)Footnote 3. Thaeter v. Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office, 449 F.3d 1342, 1352 (11th Cir. 2006) (facts drawn from allegations of plaintiffs' complaint and attached exhibit, investigative report which complaint incorporated by reference).

(n71)Footnote 4. Chi. Dist. Council of Carpenters Welfare Fund v. Caremark, Inc., 474 F.3d 463, 466 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n72)Footnote 5. Webster v. New Lenox Sch. Dist., 917 F.2d 1004, 1005-1006 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n73)Footnote 6. Bankcard Am., Inc. v. Universal Bancard Sys., Inc., 904 F. Supp. 753, 757 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n74)Footnote 7. Roucchio v. Coughlin, 923 F. Supp. 360, 366 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n75)Footnote 8. Local Rules, U.S. District Court for the Central District of California, Rule 11-5.

(n76)Footnote 9. Chi. Dist. Council of Carpenters Welfare Fund v. Caremark, Inc., 474 F.3d 463, 466 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n77)Footnote 10. Gant v. Wallingford Bd. of Educ., 69 F.3d 669, 674 (2d Cir. 1995) (even though plaintiff's complaint attached school superintendent's report as exhibit, plaintiff did not adopt superintendent's exculpatory conclusions in report).

(n78)Footnote 11. See Weiner v. Klais & Co., 108 F.3d 86, 89 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n79)Footnote 12. Hinton v. Trans Union, LLC, 654 F. Supp. 2d 440, 446 (E.D. Va. 2009) (incorporation by reference under Rule 10(c) must be sufficiently direct and explicit to enable responding party to ascertain exact nature and extent of incorporation).

(n80)Footnote 13. Cortec Indus., Inc. v. Sum Holding L.P., 949 F.2d 42, 48 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n81)Footnote 14. Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc., 282 F.3d 147, 153 (2d Cir. 2002) .

10 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART II. CONTENT AND FORM OF PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 9.13through 9.19

[Reserved]

§§ 9.13[Reserved]

11 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART III. SIGNIFICANCE OF SIGNING PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.20

§ 9.20 Purpose and Applicability of Pleading Signature Rule

[1] Purpose of Signature Rule n*

Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires the signing of pleadings and other documents to be filed in federal court, provides that such a signing constitutes certain representations to the court about the propriety and veracity of the pleading, and provides for sanctions in the event of violation of the rule. n1 The primary purpose of the requirements of Rule 11 is to deter frivolous and baseless filings in district court and thus streamline the administration and procedure of federal courts. n2 Rule 11 is also designed to prevent the filing of pleadings and other papers based on an improper motive, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. n3 It is not the purpose of Rule 11 to deter novel legal arguments or plausible arguments of first impression. n4 A court applies a standard of objective reasonableness to determine whether the pleading or paper was frivolous, groundless, or advanced for an improper purpose. n5

[2] Applicability of Signature Rule n

[a] Actions In Which Rule Applicable

The signature provisions of Rule 11 apply to all papers filed in civil cases in federal district courts n1 but not to criminal cases. n2 There are two other situations in which Rule 11 is applicable, but in a limited manner: to actions removed from state court to federal court and to habeas corpus proceedings. A notice of removal of a case from a state court to a federal district court is subject to Rule 11, and the notice of removal contains all of the Rule 11 representations regarding the propriety of federal court jurisdiction. n3 Courts are divided, however, on the question of whether Rule 11 may be invoked in a removed action to impose sanctions against a plaintiff on the grounds that the original state court complaint violated the rule. Most of the circuit courts that have addressed the issue have held that papers filed in state court prior to removal are not subject to Rule 11 provisions. n4

On the other hand, at least one circuit has held that a party may be sanctioned on the basis of a complaint filed in state court, finding that when the complaint is removed to federal court, Rule 11 applies at the moment the federal jurisdiction is invoked over the proceedings. n5 Furthermore, if a party continues to advocate a frivolous position taken in a removed complaint, the court may impose Rule 11 sanctions based on that advocacy. n6 Once an action has been removed to a federal district court, any further papers submitted in the removed action must conform to Rule 11, n7 and a party that makes a motion to remand a case to state court after removal may be sanctioned if the motion to remand violates Rule 11. n8

Rule 11 generally applies to habeas corpus proceedings. n9 However, courts have limited this applicability by stating that Rule 11 sanctions should be imposed on habeas corpus petitioner only in the most egregious circumstances. n10 Some courts have also stated that the trial judge must specifically find that Rule 11 sanctions are indispensable, that other remedies are inadequate, and that the sanction award is tailored to the wrong found by the court. n11

[b] Situations When Rule is Inapplicable

The requirements of Rule 11 are limited to conduct related to the signing of pleadings, motions, and other filings in all civil actions in federal district courts. n12 However, Rule 11 provisions do not apply in any of the circumstances listed below.

1. Prelitigation papers or misconduct not involving representations of documents. n13 Because Rule 11 sanctions are available only with regard to papers filed with the court, they do not apply to attorney misconduct in general. n14 Thus, an attorney or party may not be sanctioned for improperly refusing to settle a case. n15

2. Rule 11 does not apply to discovery motions or other documents. n16 Signature requirements, certification standards, and sanctions applicable to discovery requests are governed by Rule 26. n17 For a discussion of discovery certification standards and sanctions, see Ch. 15, Discovery.

3. Bankruptcy proceedings in a district court. These proceedings are controlled by the bankruptcy counterpart to Rule 11, Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011. n18

4. Appeals. Rule 11 does not apply to appellate proceedings. n19 The question of sanctions for filing a frivolous appeal is governed by Appellate Rule 38. n20 For further discussion of sanctions for frivolous appeals, see Ch. 28, Appeal To Court of Appeals.

5. Other controlling law. If specific provisions of other rules or statutes are directly applicable to particular misconduct that is more generally covered by Rule 11, the more specifically tailored provisions generally control in determining whether to impose sanctions. n21 However, if another rule or statute subjects parties or attorneys to a less stringent standard of conduct than that of Rule 11, the more stringent standard may be applied. n22

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsCertification RequirementsCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsSigning Requirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a)-(c); see Peer v. Lewis, 606 F.3d 1306, 1311 (11th Cir. 2010) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n3)Footnote 2. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 393, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990)
.

(n4)Footnote 3. Reinhardt v. Gulf Ins. Co., 489 F.3d 405, 416 (1st Cir. 2007) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Baker v. Alderman, 158 F.3d 516, 521 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Peer v. Lewis, 606 F.3d 1306, 1311 (11th Cir. 2010) (in determination whether to order sanctions court asks whether party's claims are objectively frivolous, and whether person who signed pleadings should have been aware that they were frivolous).

(n7)Footnote . For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Crim. P. 1; see United States v. White, 980 F.2d 836, 843 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Lowery v. Ala. Power Co., 483 F.3d 1184, 1217 (11th Cir. 2007) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a).

(n11)Footnote 4. See Edwards v. Gen. Motors Corp., 153 F.3d 242, 245 (5th Cir. 1998) (Rule 11 does not apply to filings in any court other than a federal district court; declining to uphold a sanctions award to the extent that it punished the filing of a state court petition).

(n12)Footnote 5. Herron v. Jupiter Transp. Co., 858 F.2d 332, 335 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n13)Footnote 6. *Khorozian v. Hudson United Bancorp, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 209, at 9 (D.N.J. 2007) ; see Bisciglia v. Kenosha Unified Sch. Dist. No.1, 45 F.3d 223, 227 (7th Cir. 1995) (court can impose Rule 11 sanctions on removed action if party opposes dismissal of frivolous action first filed in state court which is later challenged in federal court).

(n14)Footnote 7. Willy v. Coastal Corp., 503 U.S. 131, 133, 112 S. Ct. 1076, 1078, 117 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1992) .

(n15)Footnote 8. Burnette v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., 72 F.3d 766, 767 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n16)Footnote 9. Weichert v. United States, 458 F. Supp. 2d 57, 67 (N.D.N.Y. 2006) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(2).

(n17)Footnote 10. United States v. Quin, 836 F.2d 654, 654 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n18)Footnote 11. Anderson v. Butler, 886 F.2d 111, 114 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n19)Footnote 12. Christian v. Mattel, Inc., 286 F.3d 1118, 1121 (9th Cir. 2002) (Rule 11 sanctions do not apply to conduct of attorney outside pleadings, such as conduct in oral argument, at meetings of counsel, or at depositions).

(n20)Footnote 13. Sussman v. Bank of Israel, 56 F.3d 450, 459 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 14. Trulis v. Barton, 67 F.3d 779, 789 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n22)Footnote 15. National Ass'n of Gov't Employees v. National Fed'n of Fed. Employees, 844 F.2d 216, 223 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n23)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(d).

(n24)Footnote 17. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(g)(1)-(3).

(n25)Footnote 18. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a).

(n26)Footnote 19. Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 406, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 2461, 110 L. Ed. 2d

359 (1990) .

(n27)Footnote 20. Fed. R. App. P. 38.

(n28)Footnote 21. See Boland Marine & Mfg. Co. v. Rihner, 41 F.3d 997, 1003-1004 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n29)Footnote 22. Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 549, 111 S. Ct. 922, 932, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) .

12 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART III. SIGNIFICANCE OF SIGNING PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.21

§ 9.21 Signature and Filing Requirements

[1] Required Contents n*

Every pleading, motion, or other paper presented to a federal district court in a civil action must be signed. n1 If a party is represented by counsel, n2 the document must be signed by at least one attorney of record in that attorney's name. n3 If a party is not represented by an attorney and appears pro se, the document must be signed by the party personally. n4 A typed name is not sufficient to meet the requirements of the rule. n5 However, the local rules of a particular district may specify the method for signing a document when that document is filed electronically. n6

In addition to the signature, each document covered by Rule 11 must also include the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. A court may also provide by local rule that a document must include the signer's telephone number for facsimile transmission, if any. n7 Unless there is a specific provision to that effect in another rule or statute, a pleading does not have to be verified or accompanied by an affidavit. n8

The court must strike an unsigned document if it is not corrected promptly after the attorney or party has been informed of the signature omission. n9 Therefore, the court will not automatically strike an unsigned document but will give the attorney or party the opportunity to sign the document before striking it. n10 For example, when a corporate defendant's answer was erroneously signed by a corporate officer rather than by the attorney representing the corporation, the proper action by the court was not to grant a default, but rather to treat the answer as unsigned and give the attorney the opportunity to sign it. n11

[2] Signature Constitutes Certifications Made to Court n*

[a] Certifications Made By Signing or Advocating Pleading

When an attorney or unrepresented party presents a pleading, motion, or other paper to a federal district court by signing, filing, submitting, or later advocating it, the attorney or unrepresented party certifies to the best of his or her knowledge, information, and belief formed after an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances, n1 the following four matters: n1.1

1. That it is not being presented for an improper purpose. n2

2. That its legal contentions are warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument to change existing law or establish new law. n3

3. That its factual contentions have, or, if specifically so identified, likely will have, evidentiary support. n4

4. That its denials of factual contentions are warranted by the evidence or are reasonably based on a lack of information or belief. n5

[b] Reasonable Inquiry Regarding Certifications

[i] Obligation to Make Inquiry

An attorney or a self-represented party has an affirmative duty to make a reasonable investigation under the circumstances of the facts and the law before he or she signs and submits any pleading, motion, or other paper. n6 Thus, an attorneys or self-represented party may not file suit solely relying on discovery to later show that a claim was proper, n7 or file papers and insist that the court or opposing counsel undertake burdensome factual and legal investigation regarding the subject matter of the papers. n8 Rule 11 also prohibits continuing to advocate a position that subsequent discovery or research reveals to be factually or legally groundless. n9

The reasonable inquiry test is an objective standard. As applied to attorneys, the reasonable investigation standard is generally determined with reference to the conduct that would be expected of a competent attorney. n10 When evaluating the reasonableness of an investigation by a pro se litigant, the court may consider the various difficulties that may be encountered by the typical party who appears without an attorney. n11 The objective criteria for measuring the reasonableness of an investigation are discussed in [ii], below.

[ii] Required Extent of Inquiry

Prior to the time an attorney or self-represented party files a pleading, motion, or other paper, the attorney or party has an affirmative duty to conduct both a reasonably thorough factual investigation, n12 and adequate legal research to confirm whether the statements in the paper are warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law. n13 Whether an attorney's or a party's investigation of the facts and the law is reasonable depends on whether he or she performed as the ordinary attorney or party would perform in the circumstances of the case. n14 For example, the amount of time available to investigate a case will be considered by a court in deciding whether sanctions should be imposed. n15 In the absence of time pressure, a reasonable attorney would interview witnesses and any attorneys who represented the client in prior related proceedings, n16 would examine all available documents that are relevant to the case, n17 and would rely on reasonable representations of a competent client. n18

Because a determination of reasonableness of an inquiry is an objective standard, a violation of Rule 11 does not require subjective bad faith. However, some courts have stated that a finding of bad faith must be made for the imposition of sanctions against parties who file frivolous pleadings when the parties are represented by counsel. n19

[iii] Reasonableness Determined at Time of Presentation

Whether a position taken or assertion made in a document presented to a district court is reasonable must be determined considering the situation existing, and the facts known, at the time the pleading, motion, or other paper was signed, filed, or presented. n20 However, the court may examine an attorney's or party's postfiling actions to determine whether he or she recognized that the claims asserted were unreasonable as of the time the document was signed or filed. n21

Additionally, reasonableness after the time of the signing or presentation are relevant to determine whether the litigant is continuing to advocate a position or assertion contained in papers after learning that the papers have ceased to have any merit. n22

[c] Certification Related to Propriety of Purpose

Rule 11 prohibits presentation of a document for an improper purpose, for example for harassment, delay, or needless increase in litigation costs. n23 The list is not exhaustive, and an attorney or party may be sanctioned for any improper purpose. The "improper purpose" test is an objective standard. n24 In applying the objective test, courts may infer the purpose of a filing from the consequences of the pleading or motion. For example, an improper purpose may be inferred when the effect of a pleading or motion is to delay the proceedings. n25 Furthermore, a court may find an improper purpose when a pleading, motion, or other paper has been filed as part of a persistent pattern of abusive litigation. n26 On the other hand, the fact that particular litigation is distasteful or inconvenient for parties involved does not necessarily make the complaint filed for an improper purpose, and the mere fact that a plaintiff is forum shopping does not constitute an improper purpose provided that a viable ground for federal jurisdiction arguably exists. n27

[d] Certifications Related to Legal Argument

A court may impose sanctions against an attorney or unrepresented party for signing, filing, or later advocating a claim, defense, or other legal contention that is not warranted by existing law. n28 However, a party who is represented by an attorney may not be ordered to pay monetary sanctions for violating Rule 11(b)(2). n29 A legal contention is not warranted by existing law if it is based on legal theories that are plainly foreclosed by well-established legal principles and authoritative precedent, n30 unless the advocate plainly states that he or she is arguing for a reversal or change of law n31 and presents a nonfrivolous argument in support of that position. n32

A legal argument violates Rule 11(b)(2) when, in applying a standard of objective reasonableness, the court concludes that a reasonable attorney in like circumstances could not have believed his or her argument to be legally justified. The legal argument must have absolutely no chance of success under the existing precedent to violate the rule. n33 Thus, a legal contention that is made in spite of the obvious preclusive effect of a judgment in prior litigation is not warranted by existing law. n34 Sanctions may also be imposed for asserting claims that have been barred by the law of the case. n35

The court may not impose sanctions if the assertion in the paper is supported by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law. n36 Thus, although Rule 11 is intended to eliminate baseless or frivolous arguments, it is not intended to preclude an attorney's resourcefulness pursuing plausible legal theories. n37 The extent to which a litigant has researched the issues and found some support for its theories in minority opinions, law review articles, or in consultation with other attorneys should be taken into account in determining whether Rule 11(b)(2) has been violated. n38

On the other hand, even an arguable legal assertion is a violation of the rule if it is "frivolous," n39 that is, a claim, defense, or assertion that is baseless and made without a reasonable and competent inquiry, n40 or that has an obvious lack of merit. n41 In determining whether a filing is frivolous, courts are to resolve ambiguities in favor of the filing party. n42 If an argument has been accepted by courts in other jurisdictions, it is likely to be nonfrivolous. n43

[e] Certifications Related to Factual Contentions

When an attorney or unrepresented party presents a pleading, motion, or other paper to a federal district court by signing, filing, submitting, or later advocating it, the attorney or unrepresented party certifies to the court that its factual contentions have evidentiary support, or that specifically identified factual assertions likely will have evidentiary support. n44 Although it is not necessary for all discovery or investigation to be complete prior to the filing of a complaint, the complainant is required to specifically identify any factual contentions that lack an evidentiary basis. n45 If, after a reasonable inquiry under the circumstances, the claimant knows there is no factual basis to support a claim, the court should impose sanctions. n46 The court is especially likely to impose sanctions if the erroneous factual contention is an extremely important one for the situation at issue and likely to alter the outcome of the case. n47

On the other hand, the court should not impose sanctions if there is some evidence tending to support the factual contention, even if the allegations are ultimately disproved. n48 Furthermore, an inadvertent factual error not central to a complainant's case should not form a basis for sanctions under Rule 11 if the error was a good faith mistake made after an adequate prefiling investigation. n49

[f] Certifications Related to Denial of Factual Contentions

When an attorney or unrepresented party presents a pleading, motion, or other paper to a federal district court by signing, filing, submitting, or later advocating it, the attorney or unrepresented party certifies to the court that the denials of factual contentions are warranted on the evidence, or that specifically identified denials of factual contentions are reasonably based on belief or a lack of information. n50 If a denial does not clearly and unequivocally state that it is based on belief or a lack of information, the court may impose sanctions on the party making the denial if the factual contention ultimately is shown not to be warranted by any evidence. n51

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsBaseless FilingsFrivolous Lawsuits

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Duran v. Carris, 238 F.3d 1268, 1271-1273 (10th Cir. 2001) (attorney who provided substantial legal assistance, including ghost-writing brief, should have signed brief in addition to entering appearance).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a); see Green v. Dorrell, 969 F.2d 915, 917 (10th Cir. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Becker v. Montgomery, 532 U.S. 757, 766-768, 121 S. Ct. 1801, 149 L. Ed. 2d 983 (2001) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., United States District Court, Northern District of Ohio, Electronic Filing Policies and Procedural Manual, at p. 8 (party identification name and password constitutes party's signature).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a), Committee Notes to 1993 Amendments.

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a); see Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 544, 111 S. Ct. 922, 932, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) (if an affidavit is submitted to the court, it is subject to the requirements of Rule 11).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a).

(n11)Footnote 10. Becker v. Montgomery, 532 U.S. 757, 766-768, 121 S. Ct. 1801, 149 L. Ed. 2d 983 (2001) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Operating Eng'rs Local 139 Health Benefit Fund v. Rawson Plumbing, Inc., 130 F. Supp. 2d

1022, 1023-1024 (E.D. Wis. 2001) .

(n13)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n14)Footnote 1. See [b]. below.

(n15)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a)-(c); see Peer v. Lewis, 606 F.3d 1306, 1311 (11th Cir. 2010) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n16)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1); see [c], below.

(n17)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2); see [d], below.

(n18)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3); see [e], below.

(n19)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(4); see [f], below.

(n20)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b); see, e.g., Christian v. Mattel, Inc., 286 F.3d 1118, 1127 (9th Cir. 2002) (attorney has affirmative duty not only to conduct reasonably thorough factual investigation but also to perform adequate legal research).

(n21)Footnote 7. Southern Leasing Partners, Ltd. v. McMullan, 801 F.2d 783, 786 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n22)Footnote 8. Land v. Chicago Truck Drivers Union, 25 F.3d 509, 517-518 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n23)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n24)Footnote 10. Whitehead v. Food Max of Miss., Inc., 332 F.3d 796, 802 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n25)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments.

(n26)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n27)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n28)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b); see Whitehead v. Food Max of Miss., Inc., 332 F.3d 796, 802 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n29)Footnote 15. Smith v. Our Lady of the Lake Hosp., Inc., 960 F.2d 439, 447 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n30)Footnote 16. Wigod v. Chicago Mercantile Exch., 981 F.2d 1510, 1523 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n31)Footnote 17. Insurance Benefit Adm'rs, Inc. v. Martin, 871 F.2d 1354, 1357 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n32)Footnote 18. Hadges v. Yonkers Racing Corp., 48 F.3d 1320, 1323, 1329-1330 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n33)Footnote 19. Corporate Printing Co. v. New York Typographical Union, 886 F. Supp. 340, 344 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n34)Footnote 20. FDIC v. Calhoun, 34 F.3d 1291, 1296 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n35)Footnote 21. Jones v. International Riding Helmets, Ltd., 49 F.3d 692, 695 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n36)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b), Committee Note to 1993 Amendments; see Christian v. Mattel, Inc., 286

F.3d 1118, 1124 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n37)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(1)(b).

(n38)Footnote 24. G.C. & K.B. Invs., Inc. v. Wilson, 326 F.3d 1096, 1099 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n39)Footnote 25. Bay State Towing Co. v. Barge Am. 21, 899 F.2d 129, 132-133 (1st Cir. 1990) .

(n40)Footnote 26. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Alla Med. Servs., Inc., 855 F.2d 1470, 1476 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n41)Footnote 27. Sussman v. Bank of Israel, 56 F.3d 450, 459 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n42)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n43)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(5)(A).

(n44)Footnote 30. Christian v. Mattel, Inc., 286 F.3d 1118, 1128 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n45)Footnote 31. Smith v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 959 F.2d 655, 659 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n46)Footnote 32. Lerch v. Boyer 929 F. Supp. 319, 324 (N.D. Ind. 1996) .

(n47)Footnote 33. Morris v. Wachovia Secs., 448 F.3d 268, 277 (4th Cir. 2007) .

(n48)Footnote 34. Foster v. Skinner, 70 F.3d 1084, 1089 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n49)Footnote 35. Morley v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., 66 F.3d 21, 25 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n50)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n51)Footnote 37. See Hurd v. Ralphs Grocery Co., 824 F.2d 806, 811 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n52)Footnote 38. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2), Committee Notes to 1983 Amendments.

(n53)Footnote 39. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n54)Footnote 40. Fries v. Helsper, 146 F.3d 452, 458 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n55)Footnote 41. Christian v. Mattel, Inc., 286 F.3d 1118, 1128-1129 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n56)Footnote 42. Oliveri v. Thompson, 803 F.2d 1265, 1275 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n57)Footnote 43. Smith v. National Health Care Servs., 934 F.2d 95, 96-97 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n58)Footnote 44. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

(n59)Footnote 45. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3); see Loggerhead Turtle v. County Council, 148 F.3d 1231, 1256 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n60)Footnote 46. West Coast Theater Corp. v. City of Portland, 897 F.2d 1519, 1528 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n61)Footnote 47. Jenkins v. Methodist Hosps. of Dallas, 478 F.3d 255, 264-265 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n62)Footnote 48. Hadges v. Yonkers Racing Corp., 48 F.3d 1320, 1323, 1329-1330 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n63)Footnote 49. Milwaukee Concrete Studios, Ltd. v. Fjeld Mfg. Co., 8 F.3d 441, 449, 450 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n64)Footnote 50. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(4).

(n65)Footnote 51. *Chancellor v. Pottsgrove Sch. Dist., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58045, at 15 (E.D. Pa. 2007) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART III. SIGNIFICANCE OF SIGNING PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.22

§ 9.22 Sanctions for Violations Of Signature Requirements

[1] Purpose of Sanctions n*

The purpose of sanctions under Rule 11 is to deter frivolous litigation and filings. n1 Therefore, when a district court determines that a sanction is warranted for a violation of Rule 11, the sanction imposed should be the minimum necessary to deter future violations. n2 Because the purpose of Rule 11 is to deter conduct rather than to compensate a victim, a monetary sanction such as an award of attorney's fees should not automatically be the court's primary option. n3 For the same reason, a party is not automatically entitled to receive full reimbursement of their expenses merely because Rule 11 was violated. To deter future violations, a court should take ability to pay into account when imposing sanctions. For example, to a sole practitioner with a practice that is not lucrative, a fine of $500 may be painful enough to make the desired impact. To a big law firm, a much larger sum may not be a deterrent. The burden is on the sanctioned party to show he or she cannot pay a reasonable sanction. n4

[2] Acts That Precipitate Sanctions n*

Any of the following acts will trigger liability under Rule 11 if the act violates the rule's certification standards:

1. Signing a document. n1

2. Filing or presenting a pleading or motion. n2

3. Filing or presenting a document. n3

4. Advocating a factual or legal contention in a pleading or paper that has already been filed. n4 For example, oral statements made in advocating a pleading or motion are sanctionable when the oral representation advocates a baseless allegation and relates directly to a matter addressed in the underlying, signed paper. The use of the word "advocating" in the text of the rule means that continuing to advocate a position orally after a paper has been signed, filed, or submitted may result in the imposition of sanctions. Sanctions may not be imposed under Rule 11 for statements made for the first time during oral argument. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessAmended & Supplemental Service

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. DiPaolo v. Moran, 407 F.3d 140, 146 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Jenkins v. Methodist Hosps. of Dallas, 478 F.3d 255, 265 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Waltz v. County of Lycoming, 974 F.2d 387, 390 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Anderson v. County of Montgomery, 111 F.3d 494, 502 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n7)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Business Guides, Inc. v. Chromatic Communications Enters., Inc., 498 U.S. 533, 544, 111 S. Ct. 922, 929, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1991) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Bryant v. Brooklyn Barbecue Corp., 932 F.2d 697, 699 (8th Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Eisenberg v. University of New Mexico, 936 F.2d 1131, 1133-1134 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 4. Christian v. Mattel, Inc., 286 F.3d 1118, 1124 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n11)Footnote 5. O'Brien v. Alexander, 101 F.3d 1479, 1489-1491 (2d Cir. 1996) .

14 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART III. SIGNIFICANCE OF SIGNING PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 9.23through 9.29

[Reserved]

§§ 9.23[Reserved]

15 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART IV. SERVICE AND FILING REQUIREMENTS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.30

§ 9.30 Service of Pleadings and Papers Other than Complaint

[1] Types of Papers Requiring Service on Each Party n*

[a] Pleadings Subsequent to Original Complaint

As discussed in Ch. 6, Service of Process and Jurisdiction Over the Person, personal jurisdiction and notice must be established at the initiation of a suit under the exacting service provisions of Rule 4 for the summons and complaint. n1 Once jurisdiction is established, a presumption arises that the party will keep itself informed of the subsequent progress of the proceedings through its attorney. n2 This presumption also means that the provisions of Rule 5 take effect, and Rule 5's less stringent standards regarding notice of future pleadings and papers. Thus, the following pleadings fall within the phrase "pleadings subsequent to the original complaint" in Rule 5(1)(B), and such pleadings must be served on each other party in accordance with the provisions of Rule 5: n3

1. Answer to a complaint. n4

2. Answer to a counterclaim. n5

3. Answer to a crossclaim. n6

4. Third-party complaint. n7 Note, however, that the new party, referred to as the third-party defendant, must be served the third-party complaint pursuant to Rule 4. n8

5. Answer to a third-party complaint. n9

6. Reply to any answer. n10

7. Amended complaints that contain no new or additional claims for relief against a party who has previously appeared. n11

[b] Other Documents Served Under Rule 5

In addition to all pleadings filed subsequent to the original complaint, n12 all of the following types of documents must be served under the provisions of Rule 5:

1. Order which states by its terms that service of the order is required. n13 On entry of such an order or judgment by the court, the clerk must serve notice of that order or judgment pursuant to the method outlined in Rule 5(b). n14

2. Discovery paper required to be served on a party, unless the court orders otherwise. n15 Thus, the court may direct an exception to this requirement in limited instances, such as when service on each and every party of all discovery material would be overly burdensome and expensive in complex litigation involving numerous parties. n16

3. Written motion, except a motion that may be heard ex parte. n17 Motions must be in writing unless presented during a hearing or a trial; consequently, most motions must be served on all parties. n18 Affidavits supporting or opposing motions must also be served on each party in accordance with Rule 5. n19

4. Written notice, appearance, demand, or offer of judgment, or any similar paper. This catch-all provision covers all other similar papers that must be served on each party to the action by the federal rules. n20

[2] Appearance Determines Which Parties Are Entitled to Receive Service n*

A person is entitled to service pursuant to Rule 5 only after the person has made an appearance in the proceeding. n1 An "appearance" is an open, public act by which a party comes into court and submits itself to the jurisdiction of the court. n2 It is an affirmative act requiring knowledge of the action and an intention to appear. n3 An appearance at any stage in the action entitles that party to receive service of all subsequent pleadings and papers. n4

On the other hand, if a party has never made an appearance in the proceeding, and thus is in default for failure to appear, the party is not entitled to notice or service under Rule 5. n5 No affirmative duty is placed on the plaintiff or any other party in the proceeding to serve any pleading or paper on the party in default for failure to appear. Thus, a party in default for failure to appear is not entitled to be notified of any progress regarding the proceedings concerning that party because they have never submitted themselves to the jurisdiction of the court. n6 However, if a party who has made an appearance subsequently defaults, that party continues to be entitled to the service of all pleadings and papers under Rule 5, because an appearance at any time during the action requires service on that party of all subsequent pleadings and papers. n7 But if a new claim is added against a party in default for failure to appear, service of that claim must be made under Rule 4. n8

[3] Persons That Must be Served n*

[a] Service on Attorney of Represented Party

When a party to proceedings in federal court makes an appearance and is represented by an attorney, all service under Rule 5 must be directed to that party's attorney, rather than the party itself, unless the court orders service on the party. n1 Thus, for purposes of service of notice under Rule 5, a represented party and the party's attorney are treated as one. n2 A motion to compel a represented client, for example, may be made by service of the notice on the client's attorney. n3 With respect to class actions, the attorney rather than the class must be served with papers under Rule 5, and notice to the attorney of record constitutes notice to the entire class. n4 If an individual is represented by several attorneys, service on any one of them constitutes valid service on the party under the rule. n5

This rule requiring service on an attorney, rather than directly on the represented party, applies only to service of papers and orders after the service of the summons and complaint n6 and does not apply to service of other process or subpoenas. n7 If a party is represented by counsel, any service made directly on that party, unless expressly ordered by the court, is invalid as not complying with the provisions of Rule 5 n8 and may also constitute a violation of professional ethics. n9

[b] Direct Service on Unrepresented Party

If a party is not represented by an attorney of record in proceedings, that party must be served directly under Rule 5. n10 Additionally, if a party formerly represented is no longer represented by an attorney in a particular action, service must be made directly on the party. Once an attorney has ceased to represent a party, service on the attorney is ineffective service on that party. n11 However, the requirement that service must be made on an unrepresented party directly is applicable only to service made under Rules 5(a) and 77(d). n12 When service of summons or process is made pursuant to Rules 4, 4.1, 45(b), and 71.1, service must be made as provided in those rules. n13

[c] Service on Custodian of Property

If an action is commenced by the seizure of property, any service required to be made before an absentee owner appears must be made on the person with custody or possession of the property at the time of its seizure. n14 This provision applies only when an attachment, arrest, or garnishment is made on a particular piece of property and no person is or need be named as a defendant in order to commence the proceedings. n15 For example, when a prompt deposition n16 is needed for an in rem maritime action, service on the custodian of the ship would comply with Rule 5(a)'s service provisions. In such circumstances, the serving party is not required to locate an actual absentee owner of the ship to accomplish proper service. n17

[d] Discretion of Court to Specify Service in Cases of Numerous Defendants

In any action in which there are unusually large numbers of defendants, the court has discretion, by motion or on its own initiative, to order special service rules for pleadings, claims, and defenses. n18 Under this provision the court may order that:

1. defendants' pleadings and replies to them need not be served on other defendants; n19

2. any crossclaim, counterclaim, avoidance, or affirmative defense in those pleadings and replies to them will be treated as denied or avoided by all other parties; n20 and

3. filing any such pleading and serving it on the plaintiff constitutes notice of the pleading to all parties. n21

When the court makes such a special service order in cases of multiple defendants, the court has discretion to direct which parties are entitled to service of the order. n22

These provisions allow the court flexibility to dispense with strict compliance with Rule 5 in circumstances when it is unnecessarily burdensome or expensive because of the number of parties. n23

[4] Acceptable Means of Performing Service n*

[a] Summary of Methods of Service After Complaint is Filed

There are several alternative methods for service of pleadings and papers after the complaint has been filed and served.

A party may effect service by any of the following:

1. handing it to the person. n1

2. leaving it at the person's office or dwelling. n2

3. mailing it to the person's last known address. n3

4. leaving it with the court clerk if the person has no known address. n4

5. sending it by electronic means, if the person consented in writing. However, such service is not effective if the serving party learns that it did not reach the person to be served. n5

6. delivering it by any other means that the person consented to in writing. n6

If service is accomplished through any of methods 2 through 6 in the above list, and the receiving party has the right to take some action in response to the served paper, or must take such action, the responding party has three additional days for any prescribed period to make the required response. n7 This extension is granted because there is an interval of time that may pass between the sending of a pleading or document served by one of these methods and the actual receipt of the pleading or document. n8 Therefore, a party wishing to expedite matters should serve the other party by hand delivery to avoid the imposition of this three-day time extension. n9

[b] Hand Delivery to Person

The most direct and safest type of service is for the server to personally hand the paper in person to the attorney for the person, or when a party is unrepresented, directly to the party. n10 If service is made in this manner, the party receiving the service does not receive the three additional days for any prescribed period to make a response to the matter that is the subject of the service. n11

[c] Leaving Paper at Office or Residence

A party may serve a paper by leaving it at the person's office if open for business with a clerk or other person in charge or, if no one is in charge, in a conspicuous place in the office. n12 A paper may not be left at a closed office. n13 If the person has no office or the office is closed, the paper may be left at the person's dwelling or usual place of abode with someone of suitable age and discretion who resides there. n14

[d] Service by Mail

A party may accomplish service by mailing the paper to the person's last known address; this service is complete on mailing. n15 Service by mail is valid when the serving party places the documents to be served in an envelope properly addressed to the last known address of the party's attorney or, when a party is unrepresented, of the party, and depositing it with the United States Postal Service. n16 On the other hand, service by mail is not valid if a party attempts to serve another party at an address the party knows or should have known was not the other party's last address. n17

Service by mail is deemed complete at the moment the documents are placed into a receptacle of the United States Postal Service. n18 Therefore, the crucial occurrence in the service procedure under Rule 5 is the mailing, and not the receipt, of the documents being served. Nonreceipt or nonacceptance of an envelope containing the documents is insignificant and has no effect on the validity of service. n19 If a party can prove nonreceipt, however, it is within the court's discretion to extend any applicable response period pertaining to the served document. n20

[e] Delivery to Court Clerk When Address is Unknown

If service on the attorney or the unrepresented party cannot be accomplished because the attorney or unrepresented party's address is unknown, the papers may be left with the clerk of the court to satisfy the service requirements of Rule 5. n21 This service method is of limited necessity and utility in modern practice because Rule 11 states that all pleadings, written motions, and other papers must be signed by either the attorney of record or, if the party is unrepresented, by the party, and the signer must also provide his or her mailing address, e-mail address, and telephone number, and update that information when it changes. n22

[f] Service by Electronic Transmission

A party may accomplish service by sending a document by electronic means if the person consented in writing, in which event service is complete on transmission. However, such service is not effective if the serving party learns that it did not reach the person to be served. n23 Even though consent to electronic service must be in writing, the consent itself may be by electronic writing. Electronic transmission is effected when the sender does the last act that must be performed by the sender. n24 If a local rule so authorizes, a party may use the court's transmission facilities to make this electronic service. n25

For consent to electronic transmission of service, parties should specify the scope and duration of the consent, and the specification should include at least the persons to whom service should be made, the appropriate address or location for such service, such as the e-mail address, n26 and the format to be used for attachments. The court has discretion to adopt local rules that provide for service through the court. Thus, it is anticipated that electronic case filing systems will ultimately have the capacity to make service by using the court's facilities to transmit all documents filed in the case. n27

[g] Consent to Service by Other Means

A party may complete service to a person by any other non electronic means that the served person consented to in writing; this type of service is complete when the person making service delivers it to the agency designated to make delivery under the consent. n28 If the parties agree to service by a means other than electronic transmission, the use of court facilities is not available. n29

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessProofCertificates

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Jones Stevedoring Co. v. Director, 133 F.3d 683, 688-689 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Employee Painters' Trust v. Ethan Enters., 480 F.3d 993, 999 (9th Cir. 2007) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(4).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(5).

(n9)Footnote 8. Oklahoma Radio Assocs. v. FDIC, 969 F.2d 940, 943 (10th Cir. 1992) (Rule 4 must be used to provide court with personal jurisdiction over person of party served).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(6).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7).

(n12)Footnote 11. Ahmad v. Independent Order of Foresters, 81 F.R.D. 722, 726 (E.D. Pa. 1979) .

(n13)Footnote 12. See [a], above.

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(A).

(n15)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d)(1).

(n16)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(C).

(n17)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n18)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(D).

(n19)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n20)Footnote 19. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(2).

(n21)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(E).

(n22)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n23)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(2).

(n24)Footnote 2. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 84 F.3d 137, 141 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n25)Footnote 3. Anderson v. Taylorcraft Inc., 197 F. Supp. 872, 874 (W.D. Pa. 1961) .

(n26)Footnote 4. Radack v. Norwegian Am. Line Agency, Inc., 318 F.2d 538, 541-542 (2d Cir. 1963) .

(n27)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(2).

(n28)Footnote 6. Cutting v. Allenstown, 936 F.2d 18, 21 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n29)Footnote 7. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 84 F.3d 137, 141 (5th Cir. 1996) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(2).

(n30)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(2); Varnes v. Glass Bottle Blowers Asso. 674 F.2d 1365, 1368 (11th Cir. 1982) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n31)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.04[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n32)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

(n33)Footnote 2. Jones Stevedoring Co. v. Director, 133 F.3d 683, 688-689 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n34)Footnote 3. *Berry v. Hawaiian Express Serv., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58184, at *9-10 (D. Haw. 2007) .

(n35)Footnote 4. United States v. Pend Oreille Pub. Util. Dist. No.1, 28 F.3d 1544, 1553 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n36)Footnote 5. Bueford v. Resolution Trust Corp., 991 F.2d 481, 487 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n37)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1).

(n38)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1), Committee Note to 2001 Amendments.

(n39)Footnote 8. Fortner v. Balkcom, 380 F.2d 816, 818 (5th Cir. 1967) .

(n40)Footnote 9. Upjohn v. Aetna Casualty & Sur. Co., 768 F. Supp. 1186 (W.D. Mich. 1990) .

(n41)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1); see Love v. Hayden, 757 F. Supp. 1209, 1211 (D. Kan. 1991) .

(n42)Footnote 11. SEC v. Everest Management Corp., 87 F.R.D. 100, 102 n.1 (S.D.N.Y. 1980) .

(n43)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

(n44)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1), Committee Note to 2001 Amendments; *see Bellis v. Tokio Marine and Fire Ins. Co., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1714, 54 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) .

(n45)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(3).

(n46)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(3), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n47)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a), 30(b)(2).

(n48)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(3), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments.

(n49)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(c)(1).

(n50)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(c)(1)(A).

(n51)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(c)(1)(B).

(n52)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(c)(1)(B).

(n53)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(c)(1).

(n54)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a), Committee Note to 1970 Amendments; see United States v. Environmental Conservation & Chem. Corp., 100 F.R.D. 490, 490 (S.D. Ind. 1984) (because toxic tort litigation frequently involves many defendants, court will typically relax strict service requirements).

(n55)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.04[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n56)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A); see [b], below.

(n57)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B); see [c], below.

(n58)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C); see [d], below.

(n59)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(D); see [e], below.

(n60)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E); see [f], below.

(n61)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(F); see [g], below.

(n62)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n63)Footnote 8. IUE AFL-CIO Pension Fund v. Herrmann, 9 F.3d 1049, 1054 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n64)Footnote 9. See Albright v. Virtue, 273 F.3d 564, 571-572 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n65)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1).

(n66)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n67)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B)(i).

(n68)Footnote 13. Sinett Inc. v. Blairex Labs., Inc., 909 F.2d 253, 254 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n69)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B)(ii).

(n70)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C).

(n71)Footnote 16. Russell v. Delco Remy Div. of Gen. Motors Corp., 51 F.3d 746, 750 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n72)Footnote 17. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 84 F.3d 137, 142 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n73)Footnote 18. Vincent v. Consolidated Operating Co., 17 F.3d 782, 785 n.9 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n74)Footnote 19. Rivera v. M/T Fossarina, 840 F.2d 152, 155 (1st Cir. 1988) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n75)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n76)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(D).

(n77)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(a); see Freed v. Plastic Packaging Materials, Inc., 66 F.R.D. 550, 552 (E.D. Pa. 1975) .

(n78)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

(n79)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2), Committee Note to 2001 Amendments.

(n80)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(3).

(n81)Footnote 26. See Rio Props. v. Rio Int'l Interlink, 284 F.3d 1007, 1018 n.6 (9th Cir. 2002) (noting that rules permit service to email address).

(n82)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2), Committee Note to 2001 Amendments.

(n83)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(F).

(n84)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E), Committee Note to 2007 Amendments.

16 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART IV. SERVICE AND FILING REQUIREMENTS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.31

§ 9.31 Proof of Service for Pleadings and Papers Other than Complaint

[1] Required Certificate of Service n*

After service of any post-complaint pleading, motion, or other paper required to be served, the serving party must complete a certificate of service, and file both the paper itself and the certificate of service with the court. n1 Rule 5, itself, contains no information regarding the format of certificates of service. The format is generally controlled by local rule. n2 However, the certificate of service should specify both the date and the manner of service, as well as provide a certification by the serving party that service of the pleading or paper was actually completed. n3 This information is extremely useful if the effectiveness or timeliness of service is subsequently challenged. For example, the certificate of service may be offered as proof to establish that a motion was received on time by the opposition. n4 Thus, the principal importance of the certificate of service is to provide the court with clear proof that service has been accomplished. This means that a pleading under Rule 5 is not necessarily defective when it has no certificate of service, provided that the party can otherwise prove service. n5

[2] Local Rules Requirements n*

Attorneys should always familiarize themselves with local rules regarding proof of service, because there are no explicit provisions regarding the format of a certificate of service in Rule 5's provisions. Most of the federal district court local rules set forth the required content of the certificate of service. n1 Usually, these local rules require that proof of service show the time and manner of service and the name of the person served. n2 Local rules typically provide that the proof be made either by written acknowledgment of service, by affidavit, n3 or by certification of the attorney. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1); see § 9.32 (filing requirements).

(n3)Footnote 2. See [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d), Committee Note to 1991 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Sterling v. Interlake Indus., 154 F.R.D. 579, 584 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Ives v. Guilford Mills, Inc., 3 F. Supp. 2d 191, 195 (N.D.N.Y. 1998) .

(n7)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n8)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Northern District of Illinois Rule 5.5(b).

(n9)Footnote 2. Rivera v. M/T Fossarina, 840 F.2d 152, 155 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Carpenter, 648 F.2d 919, 921 (3d Cir. 1981) .

(n11)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Northern District of Illinois Rule 5.5(b).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART IV. SERVICE AND FILING REQUIREMENTS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.32

§ 9.32 Filing of Pleadings and Papers Other than Complaint

[1] Acts Constituting Filing n*

[a] Receipt by Court Clerk

After the filing of the complaint, all papers that are required to be served on a party must be filed with the court within a reasonable time after service, together with a certificate of service. n1 The filing requirements for a particular document are considered completed when the document is delivered to the clerk of the court. n2 Provided that they are left in a place particularly designated for filing, papers may be deemed as filed even if at the time of delivery the clerk is not physically present. n3

There are two alternatives to personal delivery to the clerk. First, documents may be delivered to the clerk electronically, when permitted or required by local rule. n4 Second, papers may be mailed to the clerk; n5 however, filing is complete only on actual receipt of the documents or when they are placed in the box in the clerk's office. n6 Unlike service, filing is not deemed complete on mailing, but when the papers are actually received by the clerk. n7

The clerk of the court is expressly prohibited from refusing to accept the papers tendered on the grounds that the papers are not presented in the proper form. n8 This rule was promulgated because the drafters believed that allowing the clerk to reject papers tendered for filing was not a suitable role for the office of the clerk, and such a practice would expose litigants to the hazards of time bars. n9 However, the clerk is still free to advise a litigant or attorney that a paper intended to be filed is not in proper form. A defect may usually be corrected after the document is filed. The court has discretion, however, to strike any non-conforming document after the document is filed. n10

[b] Receipt by Judge

A party may complete filing a paper by delivering the paper to a judge who agrees to accept it for filing. The judge must then note the filing date on the paper and promptly send it to the clerk. n11 When a judge determines that filing with the bench is warranted, the judge will allow particular papers to be filed directly. The decision to accept direct filing remains within the sole discretion of the court, and a judge need not provide particular reasons for a ruling on this issue. n12 A court may grant authorization when it is deemed essential for the protection of a party, such as in situations when a party needs to expedite the effectiveness of a temporary restraining order in order to avoid irreparable harm. n13

Once a party has obtained authorization for direct filing and the papers are delivered to the judge as authorized, filing is established regardless of whether or not the judge properly handles and transmits the papers to the clerk. n14 However, if a party attempts to file papers with the judge and has not acquired the necessary previous judicial authorization from the court, the filing is invalid. n15 If the judge fails to recognize any such defect at the time of the filing, the court may at a subsequent time strike the defective pleading or paper. n16

[c] Filing by Incarcerated Pro Se Litigant

When an incarcerated person without representation by an attorney files a document, the party is deemed to have filed the document in accordance with Rule 5 when the party tenders the document to prison authorities for mailing. n17 The necessity of actual court delivery, either personally or by mail is waived for such prisoners, because prisoners lack control over the timeliness of mailing their documents due to the extensive monitoring of mail by the correctional facilities. n18 Prisoners who have the benefit of representation by an attorney are not accorded the benefit of this early filing determination. n19

[d] Delivery by Electronic Transmission

A district court may by local rule permit or require papers to be filed, signed, or verified by electronic means, provided that the means are consistent with any technical standards that have been established by the Judicial Conference of the United States. n20 If a paper is filed by electronic means in compliance with a local rule, the paper is a "written paper" for purposes of the federal rules. n21 A local rule may require, as opposed to permit, filing by electronic means only if reasonable exceptions are allowed. n22 Many courts require electronic filings, and all courts that have done so must make exceptions when electronic filing would impose a hardship on a party, such as when a party does not have technological capability to make an electronic filing. n23

Under the federal rules, a telephone facsimile transmission, also known as a fax, is considered a transmission by electronic means. n24 Therefore, all of the requirements for electronic transmissions apply to filing by fax, including the requirement that a filing by fax is not allowed in federal court unless permitted by local rule. n25

[e] Other Filing Requirements Established by Local Rule

Local rules for each district may establish particular requirements for filing provided the requirements do not conflict with the federal rules. For example, many district courts specify whether copies must be filed in the ordinary case in addition to the original document. Rules in many of the courts require that a paper original and one paper copy be filed, or if the original filing is electronic, that a paper copy must also be provided to court. n26 Some of the courts require that two copies be filed with the original. n27 Attorneys should become familiar with the local rules that specify particular filing requirements.

[2] Discovery Documents Should Ordinarilty Not Be Filed Until Used n*

Initial discovery requests, depositions, interrogatories, requests for documents or tangible things or to permit entry onto land, and requests for admission generally must not be filed until they are used in the proceeding or the court orders their filing. n1 The purpose of this provision is to alleviate storage problems resulting from the filing of these often voluminous materials, as well as to save the additional expense of copying such documents solely for the purpose of filing them. n2 Many federal district courts have standing local rules stating that discovery documents are not to be filed unless ordered by the court. n3

[3] Time Requirements for Filing

[a] Filing Must Be Accomplished Within Reasonable Time

A party must file all papers requiring service within a reasonable time following service. n1 The precise definition of "reasonable time" is not specified in Rule 5. Therefore, what constitutes a reasonable time has been intentionally left for the court to determine on a case-by-case basis. The courts have liberally construed the provision to avoid technical objections when papers required to be served are served in a timely fashion but happen not to be filed immediately after service. n2 Thus, a party must show prejudice as a result of the delay between service and filing to justify consideration of a sanction such as default judgement. n3

[b] Local Rules May Specify Timeliness

Local rules of a jurisdiction may define a "reasonable time" in terms of a specific number of days for purposes of the Rule 5 requirement that papers be filed within a reasonable time after service. n4 However, the federal rules contemplate that a time limit for filing after service will vary depending on the particular circumstances of the case, and the court should decide on an individual basis whether a particular filing was timely. Thus, the local rules may operate as guidelines rather than as arbitrary time periods. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.30 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Smith v. Planned Parenthood, 327 F. Supp. 2d 1016, 1018-1019 (E.D. Mo. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3); see [d], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Strickland v. Wayne Farms-Southland Hatchery, 132 F. Supp. 2d 1331, 1332-1333 (M.D. Ala. 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(2)(A).

(n8)Footnote 7. Raymond v. Ameritech Corp., 442 F.3d 600, 604-605 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(4).

(n10)Footnote 9. Wilson v. Lowe's Home Ctr., Inc., 401 F. Supp. 2d 186, 189 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Transamerica Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 143 F.R.D. 189, 191 (N.D. Ill. 1992) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(2)(B).

(n13)Footnote 12. United States v. Brown, 921 F.2d 1304, 1309 (D.C. Cir. 1990) .

(n14)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n15)Footnote 14. Life Ins. Co. of N. Am. v. Von Valtier, 116 F.3d 279, 282-283 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n16)Footnote 15. DeMarines v. KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, 580 F.2d 1193, 1195 n.4 (3d Cir. 1978) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Transamerica Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 143 F.R.D. 189, 191 (N.D. Ill. 1992) .

(n18)Footnote 17. Cooper v. Brookshire, 70 F.3d 377, 379 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Lewis v. Richmond City Police Dep't, 947 F.2d 733, 735 (4th Cir. 1991) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Faile v. Upjohn Co., 988 F.2d 985, 988 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3); see AgSouth Farm Credit, ACA v. Bishop, 333 B.R. 746, 748 (D.S.C. 2005) (in absence of local rule to contrary, filing by "electronic means" is not permitted).

(n22)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n23)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(3).

(n24)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note to 2006 Amendments.

(n25)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note to 1996 Amendments.

(n26)Footnote 25. AgSouth Farm Credit, ACA v. Bishop, 333 B.R. 746, 748-749 (D. S.C. 2005) .

(n27)Footnote 26. N.D. Ill. Local Rule 5.2(e) (copy must be included for use by court).

(n28)Footnote 27. E.D. Ark. Local Rule 5.5(a).

(n29)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.32 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n30)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n31)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, Committee Note to 1980 Amendments.

(n32)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Wyoming U.S.D.C.L.R. 26.1(f).

(n33)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d)(1).

(n34)Footnote 2. Keohane v. Swarco, Inc., 320 F.2d 429, 430-432 (6th Cir. 1963) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n35)Footnote 3. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Segal, 163 B.R. 677, 679 n.2 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n36)Footnote 4. See, e.g., S.D. Fla. Local Rule 5.1.B.

(n37)Footnote 5. Betty K Agencies, LTD v. M/V Monada, 432 F.3d 1333, 1338 (11th Cir. 2005) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART IV. SERVICE AND FILING REQUIREMENTS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.33

§ 9.33 Protection for Private Information in Court Filings

[1] Purpose and Scope of Civil Rule Requiring Privacy Protection in Court Filings

Congress has enacted Civil Rule 5.2, n1 which mandates that all documents filed with the court comply with certain personal privacy protection requirements. The rule was adopted in compliance with the E-Government Act of 2002, requiring the Supreme Court to prescribe rules to protect privacy and security concerns relating to electronic filing of documents and the public availability of documents filed electronically. Thus, the Rule was enacted partially in response to the federal policy of access that all documents in civil case files should be made available electronically to the same extent that they are available at the courthouse with the one exception of Social Security cases. Actually, Rule 5.2 goes beyond the requirements of the E-Government Act because it regulates privacy content in paper filings even when they are not converted to electronic form. n2

To accomplish its purpose, Rule 5.2 includes the following provisions: (1) required redaction of filings to protect social-security numbers, taxpayer-identification numbers, an individual's birth date, the minor's initials, and financial-account numbers; n3 (2) limitations on remote access to electronic files; n4 (3) an authorization for the court of appeals to order that filings be made under seal; n5 and (4) the discretion for the court of appeals to make any other appropriate order regarding redaction and limitations on electronic access. n6

[2] Redaction of Filing Required to Conceal Sensitive Private Information

[a] Required Redaction

Unless the court orders otherwise, in an electronic or paper filing with the court, any of the following applicable information must be redacted to include only:

- The last four digits of any social-security number and any taxpayer-identification number. n1
- The year of any individual's birth. n2
- Only initials in the identification of any minor. n3

- The last four digits of any financial-account number. n4

If the person filing an electronic or paper document does not include a required redaction, the court may refuse to accept the document for filing until it complies with the rule. n5 It should also be noted that when a redaction is filed, future references in the case to the information, such as in pleadings, motions, orders, and opinions, should also be in the redacted format. n6

[b] Exemptions from Redaction Requirements

The redaction requirement specified in [a], above, does not apply to any of the following:

- A financial-account number that identifies the property allegedly subject to forfeiture in a forfeiture proceeding. n7

- The record of an administrative or agency proceeding. n8

- The official record of a state-court proceeding. n9

- The record of a court or tribunal, if that record was not subject to the redaction requirement when originally filed. n10

- A filing in a social security or immigration case covered by Rule 5.2(c) or (d). n11

- A pro se filing in an action brought under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2241, 2254, or 2255. n12

[c] Discretion of Court

The provision allowing the court to order "otherwise" in the Rule gives the court discretion to require a greater redaction, such as preventing use of even the last four digits of a number, or precluding use of a number entirely, or requiring use of a complete number. In other words, based on the circumstances of the case, the court may order greater or lesser redaction or protection than specified in the rule. n13

[d] Waiver of Redaction Requirements

If a person files the person's own information by filing it unredacted and not under seal, the person waives the protection provided by Rule 5.2(a). n14 A person may want to make such a waiver, for example, if the person determines that the costs of redaction outweigh the benefits to privacy. If a person files an unredacted identifier inadvertently or by mistake, that person may seek relief from the court to make a redaction. n15

[3] Limitation on Remote Access to Electronic Files in Social Security and Immigration Cases

Unless the court orders otherwise, in an action for benefits under the Social Security Act or in an immigration proceeding, Rule 5.2 restricts access to an electronic file in the case, based on the status of the person seeking access. n1

First, the parties to the proceeding and their attorneys have remote electronic access to any part of the case file, including the administrative record. n2

Second, any other person from the public may have electronic access to the full record while at the courthouse. However, the public may have remote electronic access only to the docket maintained by the court, n3 and an opinion, order, judgment, or other disposition of the court, but not any other part of the case file or the administrative record. n4

With respect to Social Security disability claims, these restrictions on public access recognize that claims contain extremely detailed medical records and other personal information which an applicant must submit in order to establish disability. That medical and personal information is critical to the court, but is of little or no legitimate use to anyone not a party to the case. n5

[4] Alternatives for Filings Under Seal

The court may order that a filing be made under seal without redaction, and also has the option to later unseal the filing or order the person who made the filing to file a redacted version for the public record. n1 This provision reflects the option for the court to use redaction as an alternative to sealing. n2 However, the provision does not limit or expand the judicially developed rules that generally govern sealing. n3 Thus, depending on the circumstances of the filing, the court may order a combination of complete or partial redaction and complete or partial sealing of the filing. n4

Additionally, when a person is making a redacted filing required by Rule 5.2(a), n5 the person may also file an unredacted copy of the filing under seal, and the court must retain the unredacted, sealed copy as part of the record. n6

[5] Protective Orders Related to Privacy in Filing

If the court determines that good cause exists, the court has the discretion to require redaction of information that is in addition to that automatically required by Rule 5.2(a). n1 Additionally, the court for good cause may limit or prohibit a nonparty's remote electronic access to a document filed with the court. n2 In the exercise of its discretion regarding protective orders, the court may request that a proposed protect order be submitted by the parties, but the court retains absolute discretion to reject proposed orders entirely, or to redraft proposed orders to conform to the court's own findings. n3

[6] Optional Filing of Reference List

If a person makes a filing with the court that contains redacted information, the person may also make a filing of a "reference list" (also referred to as a register) that identifies each item of redacted information and specifies an appropriate identifier that uniquely corresponds to each item listed. n1 Then when any reference is made in the case to a listed identifier, it must be construed to refer to the corresponding item of information. n2

The person who files a reference list has the option to file the reference list under seal, and after filing a list, the filer has the option to amend the list as of right. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Computer & Internet LawPrivacy & SecurityGeneral OverviewComputer & Internet LawPrivacy & SecurityElectronic Communications Privacy ActComputer & Internet LawPrivacy & SecurityInvasion of PrivacyLegal EthicsClient RelationsConfidentiality of Information

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2, Original Committee Notes of 2007.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a), (b); see [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(c); see [3], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d); see [4], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e); see [5], below.

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a)(1).

(n8)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a)(2).

(n9)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a)(3).

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a)(4).

(n11)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a), Original Committee Notes of 2007 (responsibility to redact filings rests with attorneys and party or nonparty making filing); *Jamison v. Campbell Chain Cooper Tools, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61304, at 1 n.1 (M.D. Pa. July 24, 2008) ; *see also Johnson v. Astrue, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 102336, at 1 n.1 (W.D. Ark. Dec. 17, 2008) (clerk changed docket sheet because plaintiff should have only included initials of minor child).

(n12)Footnote 6. *See Lachhman v. Lachhman, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 95185, at 1 n.1 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 20, 2008) .

(n13)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(1).

(n14)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(2).

(n15)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(3); *see McCormick v. Brzezinski, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 95260, at 5 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 18, 2008) (in filing exhibit with motion in opposition to compel, defendant was not required to redact plaintiff's date of birth, when that information was already contained in official records of state-court proceeding).

(n16)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(4).

(n17)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(5).

(n18)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(b)(6).

(n19)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a), Original Committee Notes of 2007; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d),(e); see also [4],[5], below.

(n20)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(h).

(n21)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(h), Original Committee Notes of 2007.

(n22)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(c).

(n23)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(c)(1).

(n24)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(c)(2)(A).

(n25)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(c)(2)(B); *see Massey v. Ballard, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 87806, at *1-2 (D. W. Va. Oct. 29, 2008) (court order limiting remote access).

(n26)Footnote 5. *Traversa v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp. (In re Traversa), 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1280, at *8-9 (Bankr. D. Conn. Apr. 16, 2008) .

(n27)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d).

(n28)Footnote 2. *See Gedo v. Sevison, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45142, at 1 (D. Utah June 9, 2008) (when complaint contained material required to be redacted or sealed, district court sealed complaint to allow plaintiff to file amended complaint with redaction or their names entirely blacked out).

(n29)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(d), Original Committee Notes of 2007; see, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)(C) (order for decoction to be sealed).

(n30)Footnote 4. *See Perea v. Hunter Douglas Window Fashions, Inc., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13461, at *13-14 (D. Colo. Feb. 22, 2008) ; *Edward G. Rahll & Sons, Inc. v. Zach, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 99269, at 2 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 9, 2008) .

(n31)Footnote 5. See [2], above.

(n32)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(f).

(n33)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(1).

(n34)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(e)(2); *see Miller v. Nichols, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 92468, at *1-2 (D. Me. Nov. 12, 2008) (court order Attachments to Motion be sealed in order to prohibit remote electronic access to document by any nonparty).

(n35)Footnote 3. *Ipox v. EHC Fin. Servs., LLC, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83577, at *11-13 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 7, 2008) .

(n36)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(g); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(g), Original Committee Notes of 2007 (one filing contains original redactions and another filing contains register of indentifiers).

(n37)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(g).

(n38)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(g).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART IV. SERVICE AND FILING REQUIREMENTS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 9.34 through 9.39

[Reserved]

§§ 9.34 through 9.39[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.40

§ 9.40 Source of Litigation Deadlinesn*

Deadlines which require parties to act during federal litigation may be established either by court order or by statute or federal rule. For example, the court may specify that a party must file or mail a particular document on a specified fixed calendar date, such as "February 14." Alternatively, the court may specify that a party must act within a particular time period; this is a deadline based on a specified number of days or hours following the occurrence of a given event. n1 Similarly, a statute or federal procedural rule may also create a deadline based on a particular time period. n2 For example, Rule 54(d) specifies that a party may file a motion for attorney fees no later than 14 days after the entry of a judgment. n3

Rule 6(a) is a procedural device that specifies the methods to use to calculate those deadlines which are based on time periods. These time computation provisions of Rule 6(a) apply only when an expiration of a time period must be calculated under the applicable statute, rule, or court order. n4 They do not apply when a different time to act is explicitly set out by statute, rule, or court order. In other words, Rule 6(a) does not apply to situations where the court has established a specific calendar date or a particular time of hour as a deadline. n5 Furthermore, Rule 6(a) computation provisions do not apply if a particular statute or rule explicitly states its own method of computing time, rather than Rule 6. n6 In this regard, the mechanism of Rule 6(a) is applicable to calculate federal statute of limitations deadlines for the filing of an action, provided the statute does not do so. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Violette v. P.A. Days, Inc., 427 F.3d 1015, 1016 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B)(i).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Violette v. P.A. Days, Inc., 427 F.3d 1015, 1017 (6th Cir. 2005) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 6, Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a); Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Mondragon v. Thompson, 519 F.3d 1078, 1081 (10th Cir. 2008) ; see also 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.03[2], [3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.41

§ 9.41 Deadline Calculation is Based on Increment of Time Periodn*

Rule 6 provides for two categories of time increment for the computation of a time period: n1 (1) time periods specified in days, weeks, months, or years n2 and (2) time periods specified in hours. n3 These categories are important because the computation of the beginning of a time period and the ending of the time period are both controlled by whether the time increment is stated in days or longer units n4 or in hours. n5

In the federal rules, time periods most frequently are designated in terms of days, rather than weeks, months, or years. The use of days to compute a time period provides a greater degree of uniformity in calculations and fairness to all litigants, than that which occurs when a less precise term such as month or year is used. Furthermore, most of the time periods in the Federal Rules now are specified in multiples of 7 days, so that deadlines will not fall on a weekend. To accomplish this result, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays are now counted as any other day. n6

Time periods are still occasionally designated in terms of weeks, months, or years. In such situations month or year means calendar month or calendar year. Thus, whether a particular month in question is 28, 29, 30, or 31 days long, a one month time period will expire on the anniversary date in the next calendar month. For example, a one month period that begins on February 15 will end on March 15, in a leap year or in a regular year. n7 Just as month means calendar month, year means calendar year. Therefore, whether the year in question is a regular year or a leap year does not matter for computational purposes. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 9.42.

(n6)Footnote 5. See § 9.43.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 7. See Merriweather v. City of Memphis, 107 F.3d 396, 400 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See United States v. Hurst, 322 F.3d 1256, 1261 (10th Cir. 2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.42

§ 9.42 Deadline Calculation When Time Period is Stated in Days or Longer Unitn*

[1] Beginning of Time Period

When the time period under consideration is stated in terms of days, weeks, months, or years, n1 the day of the occurrence of the event that triggers the time period is excluded in the computation. n2 In other words, the day that the event occurs is not counted as one of the days of the time period. Thus, the first day counted to establish the time period is the day after the event. n3 Consequently, if a paper were required to be filed within one month from an event that occurred on February 14, then the first day counted would be February 15, and the filing period would end on March 14, exactly one month after the event. In other words, the time period ends on the anniversary date of the event, not the day before. n4

[2] End of Time Period

[a] Computation of End of Time Period

When the time period under consideration is stated in terms of days, weeks, months, or years, n1 there are two primary rules regarding the computation of the end of the period, which is the deadline. n2

First, after the day of the triggering event is excluded, every day is counted, including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays. n3

Second, the last day of a period is counted, except that if the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, legal holiday, n4 or the clerk's office is inaccessible n5 that day is excluded and the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not so excluded. n6 This non-excluded "next day" is determined by continuing to count forward when the period is measured after an event and backward when measured before an event. n7

[b] Ending of Last Day

Unless a different time is set by a statute, local rule, or court order, the "last day" of a period ends at either of the following times: for electronic filing, at midnight in the court's time zone, n8 or, for a filing by any other means, when the clerk's office is scheduled to close. n9 Thus, to meet a deadline for an electronic filing, a party must make the electronic transmission by midnight of the court's time on the "last day" calculated under the mechanism of Rule 6(a)(1). With respect to a hardcopy filing, the end of the "last day" is at the time of the scheduled closure of the clerks office. However, because Rule 6(a)(4) allows variance by local rule, such a rule could provide that papers filed in a drop box after the scheduled hours of the clerk's office are deemed filed as of the day that is date stamped on the papers by a device in the drop box. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.04[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Mascone v. Am. Physical Soc'y, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 88487, at *5 n.1 (D. Md. 2009) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See United States v. Hurst, 322 F.3d 1256, 1261 (10th Cir. 2003) ; Conde v. Pena, 793 F. Supp. 33, 34 36 (D.P.R. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1)(B), (C).

(n8)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1)(B).

(n9)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(6) (legal holidays are specified by statute, president, Congress or state where federal district court is located).

(n10)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3); § 9.44.

(n11)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1)(C); see [b], below.

(n12)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(5).

(n13)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(4)(A).

(n14)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(4)(B).

(n15)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(4), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.43

§ 9.43 Deadline Calculation When Time Period is Stated in Hoursn*

[1] Beginning of Time Period

When the time period under consideration is specified in terms of hours, the computation of the time period begins immediately on the occurrence of the event that triggers the period. n1 Therefore, periods stated in hours are not rounded up to the next whole hour. In other words, if the triggering event for a time period of 72 hours occurs at 11:01 AM on February 2, the period also begins at 11:01 AM, n2 and the period ends precisely 72 hours later at 11:01 AM on February 5 n3 (unless there is an intervening shift from daylight saving time to standard time, or vice versa). n4

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure currently do not contain any deadlines stated in terms of hours. However, some statutes contain deadlines stated in hours; furthermore, the court may order deadlines in terms of hours, and typically does so in expedited proceedings. n5

[2] End of Time Period

When the period is stated in hours, every hour is counted to determine the deadline, including hours during intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays, n1 However, if the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, legal holiday, n2 or the clerk's office is inaccessible n3 that day is excluded and the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not so excluded. n4

Because subdivision Rule 6(a)(2)(B) directs that every hour be counted, a 72 hour period that commences at 10:23 AM on Friday runs until 10:23 AM on Monday unless on there is an intervening shift from daylight saving time to standard time, in which case the period ends at 9:23 AM. This result occurs because all of the number of hours are counted, irregardless of the change in clock time. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading &

PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.04[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. See [2], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2)(B).

(n8)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(6) (legal holidays are specified by statute, president, Congress or state where federal district court is located).

(n9)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3); § 9.44.

(n10)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2)(C); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(5) ("next day" is determined by continuing to count forward when period is measured after event, and backward when measured before event).

(n11)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(2), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

24 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.44

§ 9.44 Effect of Inaccessibility of the Clerk's Officen*

[1] Inaccessibility May Postpone End of Time Period

Unless otherwise ordered by the court, inaccessibility of the clerk's office on the last day of a time period postpones the end of the period, whether the period is stated in terms of days or longer units or stated in terms of hours. n1 When the time period is specified in days or longer unit, inaccessibility of the clerk's office on the last day extends the time period to the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n2 When the time period is specified in hours, inaccessibility of the clerk's office in the last hour of the period extends the time to the same time on the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n3

It is important to recognize that the inaccessibility exclusion is applicable only when the day in question is the day on which the filing is due, the inaccessibility exclusion is limited by its terms to the final day of a time period. n4 It is immaterial whether the clerk's office is inaccessible on intermediate days because it is only on the day when the papers are due that access to the clerks office is necessary. n5

[2] Inaccessibility Established by Case Law

"Inaccessibility" is not defined, but has been established by case precedent. n1 For purposes of computation of time, inaccessible means that the clerk's office is either closed for business or a person cannot reasonably obtain access to the court as a practical matter. n2 Inclement weather is a typical, but not exclusive, condition of inaccessibility. For example, if weather conditions in the area surrounding the courthouse prevent access to an attorney's office or computer files, the clerk's office is inaccessible under Rule 6(a). n3 Inaccessibility for non-weather related reasons includes an outage of the clerk's electronic filing system. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime

LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3)(B).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3)(A), (B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Hart v. Sheahan, 396 F.3d 887, 890 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 2. Keyser v. Sacramento City Unified Sch. Dist., 265 F.3d 741, 747 (9th Cir. 2001) (inaccessible does not necessarily mean that the clerk's office must be physically closed).

(n9)Footnote 3. United States Leather, Inc. v. H & W Partnership, 60 F.3d 222, 226 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(3), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.45

§ 9.45 Additional Three Days to Respond When Service Is Not by Hand Deliveryn*

[1] Right of Additional Three Days to Respond

If a party makes service of a paper or document other than the complaint in a manner other than by hand delivery or leaving it at the person's office or residence, n1 the party served has an additional three days added to the prescribed time period to make a response to the served document. n2 Therefore, this three day extension to respond to a served document is applicable when service has been made in any of the following ways:

1. Mailed to the person's last known address; n3

2. Left with the court clerk because the person served had no known address; n4

3. Sent by electronic means, if the when person consented in writing; n5 or

4. Delivered by any other means that the person consented to in writing. n6

This three day extension constitutes an adjustment for the extra time required for delivery in a manner other than hand delivery; n7 in practical effect, it is a presumption that the document served will be received by the party served three days after it is mailed, delivered to the clerk, or electronically or otherwise transmitted. n8 However, the rule does not establish that a document served in one of these ways necessarily reaches its destination in three days. Rather, by allowing a reasonable amount of time for the transmission of documents other than by hand delivery, the three day extension provides a balance between the rigidity of measuring from the date of mailing or other transmission, and the ambiguity of measuring from the date of receipt. n9

The three day additional time provision of Rule 6(d) applies only when a time period is triggered by the "service" of a notice or other paper. n10 Rule 6(d) does not apply to time periods that begin with the filing in court of a judgment or an order. n11 Thus, for example, Rule 6(d) does not apply to the 28 day period that runs from entry of judgment for a motion to alter or amend judgment pursuant to Rule 59(e). n12

[2] Computation of Response Period With Three Additional Days

In calculating a deadline when the three days are added under Rule 6(d), the original time period is calculated as it ordinarily would under Rule 6(a). n1 In other words, Rule 6(d) makes clear that the three days are added after the original prescribed period would otherwise expire. n2 Thus, when the time period is specified in days, the day of the triggering event is excluded, and intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays are included in counting the three added days. Furthermore, if the last day of added days falls on a weekend, a legal holiday, or a day when the clerk's office is inaccessible, the period for response runs until the following business day. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(A), (B).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(D).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(E).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(F).

(n8)Footnote 7. N.J. Dep't of Envtl. Prot. v. Exxon Mobil Corp., 381 F. Supp. 2d 398, 402 (D.N.J. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Smith Haynie v. District of Columbia, 155 F.3d 575, 578 (D.C. Cir. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Rivkin v. County of Montgomery, 153 F.R.D. 572, 574 575 & n.9 (E.D. Pa. 1994).

(n11)Footnote 10. See Sea Land Serv., Inc. v. Barry, 41 F.3d 903, 908 (3d Cir. 1994) (deadline for delivery of judgment did not make Rule 6(d) applicable, because that deadline was not triggered by service.).

(n12)Footnote 11. Albright v. Virtue, 273 F.3d 564, 571-572 (3d Cir. 2001) (Rule 6(d) only extends time limits that commence with service of notice or other paper, rather than time limit that is measured from entry of judgment).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Jackson v. Crosby, 375 F.3d 1291, 1295-1296 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d), Committee Note to 2005 Amendments.

(n15)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n16)Footnote 3. Smith v. Krieger, 643 F. Supp. 2d 1274, 1279 (D. Colo. 2009) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.46

§ 9.46 Extension of Time by Discretion of Courtn*

[1] Court Has Discretionary Power to Extend Most Time Periods

[a] Discretion of Court to Order Extensions

When a party may or must perform an act within a time specified by the court or in the Federal Rules, the court has discretion for good cause to allow an extension of most specified time periods. n1 The degree of the court's discretion to extend depends on whether the applying party has made its request for extension before the expiration of the original time period n2 or after the original period expired. n3

The parties to an action may stipulate to an extension of time; however, such a stipulation is subject to approval by the court. Parties may stipulate to an extension of time only with the approval of the court because of the good cause requirement and because the court has the inherent and ultimate responsibility for handling its docket and management of its cases, including the exercise of full control over extensions of time periods. n4

[b] Extension Prohibited for Specified Time Periods

Although the Federal Rules provide for flexibility in their application by allowing the court discretion to extend of some time periods based on the circumstances of the case, it is also necessary to preserve the finality of judgments. Therefore, to ensure certainty in the judgments of the courts, Rule 6(b) specifically lists certain rules that are not subject to Rule 6(b) extension. n5 A party's deadline to act under the following Rules are not subject to an extension by the court: n6 Rule 50(b) (renewal of motion for judgment after trial and alternative motion for new trial); Rule 50(d) (losing party's motion for new trial); Rule 52(b) (motion for amended or additional findings), Rule 59(b) (motion for new trial), Rule 59(d) (grant of new trial on court's own initiative), Rule 59(e) (motion to alter or amend a judgment), and Rule 60(b) (order for relief from a final judgment, order, or proceeding). It should also by noted that these rules are not subject to the three day addition allowance of time of Rule 6(d) because the time periods involved all run from the filing of a judgment or order, and not from the service of notice. n7

Even though Rule 6(b) forbids courts from extending the filing periods set out in the judgment-related rules listed above, sometimes a district court will inadvertently extend such a time period. An equitable doctrine has developed when reasonable reliance on the district court's inadvertent action of extending the time for filing such a motion prevents the party from filing notice within the required period after entry of judgment. Thus, when a district court inadvertently has allowed for the extension of a time period, the courts have allowed a party to file notice of appeal after the 30 day period has expired. n8 This result is based on the principle held by most courts that the judgment related deadlines of these rules are not absolutely jurisdictional, and may be waived or forfeited. n9 On the other hand, if a party has not reasonably rely on the district court's wrongful extension when filing the late notice of appeal, the court will dismiss the appeal. n10

[2] Extension for Requests Made Before Expiration of Period

When any act may or must be done within a specified time, the court has discretion to allow an extension of the specified time period on a mere showing of good cause, provided that the party requests an extension before the original time or its extension expires. For such a request, the court may grant the extension with or without motion or notice. n1 On the other hand, when a request is made after the expiration of the time period, the courts will grant an extension only on motion, and only if the stricter excusable neglect standard is established. n2

Even before expiration of the time period, an extension of time must be supported by "good cause." However, courts have consistently held that the good cause standard is a liberal one. The good cause standard is ordinarily satisfied and an extension will be granted provided there is no bad faith on the part of the party seeking relief nor prejudice to the adverse party. n3 It should be noted that even if good cause is shown the court is not required to grant the extension, but has discretion not to do so in the management of the litigation. n4

[3] Extension of Time Period After Period Has Already Expired

[a] Requires Court's Determination of Excusable Neglect

If a particular time period has already expired, a party must make a motion for an extension of the time period and must show that excusable neglect caused the failure to act in a timely manner. n1 The motion for extension must state the specific reasons for the request and must include factual assertions which establish the standard of excusable neglect. It is not enough merely to assert that excusable neglect has caused the delay. n2

"Excusable neglect" sufficient to justify an extension has been defined as a reason to overlook a lack of justification to meet the deadline; the reason needn't be a compelling reason. A common reason is that the neglect did no harm to harm anyone. It is not sufficient if the excuse is so threadbare as to make the neglect inexplicable. n3 In making its determination of whether an action or omission constitutes excusable neglect, the court is required to consider all evidence proffered by the party in support of the party's claim of excusable neglect and make an equitable determination as to whether an extension is proper. n4 In addition to any other pertinent factors, the court should consider whether any prejudice to the opposing party or undue delay would result from the extension, the importance of the matter at issue, and the degree of the movant's fault in the delay. n5

[b] Inadvertence

Generally, neither mere inadvertence, ignorance, nor other types of carelessness does not qualify as excusable neglect. n6 Similarly, mere mistaken reliance on provisions of the rules or unfamiliarity with the rules does not rise to the level of excusable neglect. n7 In limited circumstances, however, inadvertence, carelessness, or unfamiliarity with the rules may be treated as excusable neglect. A careless neglect may be deemed excusable provided that the risk of prejudice to the opposition is minor, the length of the delay and its potential impact on judicial proceedings were minimal, the reason for the delay was articulable, the delay was not within the reasonable control of the movant, and the movant acted in good faith. n8

[c] Requirement of Motion for Extension

Unlike a request for an extension before a deadline expires, a request for extension made after the expiration must be made by formal motion. n9 This means that the court may not extend the deadline on its own initiative, and that a request for extension may not be made ex parte or informally. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 6.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1); see [b], below (exclusion for certain time periods).

(n3)Footnote 2. See [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. See [3], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See Welch & Forbes, Inc. v. Cendant Corp., 233 F.3d 188, 189 (3d Cir. 2000) ; cf. Fed. R. Civ. P. 29 (stating that parties may modify discovery deadlines by stipulation but that court approval may be required if modification would interfere with case management).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(2).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Albright v. Virtue, 273 F.3d 564, 571 572 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fairley v. Jones, 824 F.2d 440, 443 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Art Attacks Ink, LLC v. MGA Enter. Inc., 581 F.3d 1138, 1143 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fairley v. Jones, 824 F.2d 440, 443 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(A).

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(B); see [3], below.

(n14)Footnote 3. California Trout v. FERC, 572 F.3d 1003, 1027 n.1 (9th Cir. 2009) (noting that Black's Law Dictionary defines "good cause" as any legally sufficient reason why request should be granted or action excused).

(n15)Footnote 4. See United States v. McLaughlin, 470 F.3d 698, 700 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n16)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(B); see [c], below (motion required).

(n17)Footnote 2. United States v. Premises Known as Lots 14, 15, 16, 19, 47, & 48, 682 F. Supp. 288, 290 (E.D.N.C. 1987) .

(n18)Footnote 3. See United States v. McLaughlin, 470 F.3d 698, 700 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n19)Footnote 4. Halicki v. Louisiana Casino Cruises, Inc, 151 F.3d 465, 469 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n20)Footnote 5. Pigford v. Johanns, 416 F.3d 12, 28 (D.C. Cir. 2005) ; see Sampath v. Concurrent Techs. Corp., 227 F.R.D. 399, 403 (W.D. Pa. 2005) (listing other factors).

(n21)Footnote 6. See Lujan v. National Wildlife Fed'n, 497 U.S. 871, 895-898, 110 S. Ct. 3177, 111 L. Ed. 2d 695 (1990) .

(n22)Footnote 7. Cavaliere v. Allstate Ins. Co., 996 F.2d 1111, 1114-1115 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n23)Footnote 8. Pioneer Investment Services Company v. Brunswick Associates Limited Partnership, 507 U.S. 380, 395, 113 S. Ct. 1489, 123 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1993) .

(n24)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(B); see Key v. Robertson, 626 F. Supp. 2d 566, 575 (E.D. Va. 2009) .

(n25)Footnote 10. See Lujan v. Nat'l Wildlife Fed'n, 497 U.S. 871, 896, 110 S. Ct. 3177, 111 L. Ed. 2d 695 (1990) ; Boston Post Rd. Med. Imaging, P.C. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 221 F.R.D. 410, 414 (D. Mass. 2004) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.47

§ 9.47 Motions and Notices of Hearingn*

[1] Deadlines for Service of Motion and Notice

A party must generally serve any written motion and the notice of hearing on the motion at least 14 days before the hearing date. n1 However, a party need not comply with the 14-day deadline for service of a motion and notice of hearing if at least one of the following three exceptions is applicable:

1. The party is entitled to a hearing on the motion ex parte. n2

2. The Federal Rules specify a different time period for a particular motion. n3 Thus, Rule 55 requires service of a motion to obtain a default judgment against a party that has appeared in the action at least 7 days prior to the hearing on the motion. n4 Rule 65 requires only two days' prior service on a motion to dissolve a temporary restraining order that was granted without notice to the restrained party. n5

3. When a court order specifies a different time. A party may apply ex parte for such an order on a showing of good cause. n6

[2] Affidavits in Support of Motion

[a] Deadline for Service of Affidavits

A party must serve any affidavit in support of a motion with the motion. Any affidavit opposing a motion must be served at least 7 days before the hearing on the motion, unless the court establishes a different time for service, or unless the motion is for a new trial. n1 The court may use its discretion to extend time pursuant to Rule 6(b) for serving affidavits on a showing of good cause to account for the delay. Furthermore, if the time period has already expired, a party must make a motion for an extension of the time period and must show that excusable neglect caused the failure to act in a timely manner. n2

[b] Deadline for Service of Affidavit In Opposition of Motion for New Trial

A motion for new trial that is based on affidavits is governed by the provisions of Rule 59(c), not by Rule 6(d). n3 Therefore, an affidavit supporting a motion for new trial must be filed with the motion, and any opposing affidavits must be filed within 14 days of service of the motion. n4 This 14 day limit under Rule 59(c) may be extended by Rule 6(b). n5

After a party files an affidavit in opposition to a motion for new trial based on affidavits, a reply may be filed by the party who made the original motion. Rule 6(c)(2) is silent on the subject of when affidavits filed in support of the reply must be filed. Rule 59(c) states that reply affidavits are permitted but also fails to specify a time frame in which to file them. n6 The courts generally have allowed reply affidavits to be filed with the reply when the affidavits are found to support the reply rather than the original motion. n7

[3] Calculation of Deadline for Service and Affidavits

Calculations of all deadlines related to service of motions, notice of motions, and affidavits are calculated according to the methodology of Rule 6(a). n1 Thus, after the day of the triggering event is excluded, all days, including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays, are included in the counting of the time period. However, if the last day falls on a weekend, a legal holiday, or a day when the clerk's office is inaccessible, the period for response runs until the next business day. n2 Furthermore, because the response deadline for a motion is triggered by service of the motion, three days are added to the end of the 14 day period by Rule 6(d) when service is made by any method under than hand delivery. n3

As a practical matter, the time periods for service of notice of motions and affidavits is also typically modified by provisions of local rules. Such local rules do not conflict with Rule 6, which explicitly allows a court order to set a different time. n4 Therefore, an attorney in motion practice should not rely exclusively on the provisions of Rule 6(c)(1) for determining the time period for serving a motion and notice, but should also consider the particular Federal Rule that governs that particular type of motion, all local rules and standing orders and any particular court orders that has been made in connection with the current motion under consideration. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 6.07, 6.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(b)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(4).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1)(C); see, e.g., Anderson v. Davila, 125 F.3d 148, 156-157 (3d Cir. 1997) (good cause shown to shorten notice period for hearing on injunction due to seriousness of allegations; construing former time periods).

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(2); see also [b], below (time period to serve affidavit opposing motion for new trial).

(n9)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1), discussed in § 9.46; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 59, Committee Note to 2009 Amendments; Shapiro v. Cantor, 123 F.3d 717, 722 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(2).

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(c).

(n12)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1), discussed in § 9.46.

(n13)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(c).

(n14)Footnote 7. McGinnis v. Southeast Anesthesia Assocs., 161 F.R.D. 41, 42 & n.1 (W.D.N.C. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 1. See Lerro v. Quaker Oats Co., 84 F.3d 239, 242 (7th Cir. 1996) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a).

(n16)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1)-(3).

(n17)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d); see also Lerro v. Quaker Oats Co., 84 F.3d 239, 242 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n18)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1)(C).

(n19)Footnote 5. Cf. S.D. v. St. Johns County Sch. Dist., 632 F. Supp. 2d 1085, 1100 (M.D. Fla. 2009) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART V. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LITIGATION TIME DEADLINES

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 9.48through 9.49

[Reserved]

§§ 9.48[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART VI. AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.50

§ 9.50 Nature of Amended and Supplemental Pleadingsn*

[1] Characteristics of Amendments and Supplements to Pleadings

If circumstances relating to claims or defenses change during the course of litigation, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allow for the modification of pleadings, referred to as amended pleadings, and the presentation of new materials in pleadings, referred to as supplemental pleadings. An amended pleading generally is a modification to incorporate events that were unknown but occurred prior to the filing of the original pleading. n1 By contrast, a supplemental pleading refers to additions to include transactions or occurrences that take place after the filing of the original pleading. n2 Note, however, that the technical label attached to a modified pleading is not significant if it meets the requirements to operate as either an amendment or a supplement. n3 Rule 15 allows for liberal amendment and supplementation in the interests of resolving cases on the merits. n4

A party must expressly request all amendments and supplemental pleadings from the district court. A formal motion is advised but not required, provided that the requesting party has set forth with particularity the grounds for the amendment or supplement, and the relief sought. Therefore, a bare request in an opposition to a motion to dismiss, without any indication of the particular grounds on which the amendment is requested, does not constitute a sufficient motion for amendment or supplement. n5 Amendments may relate to either parties or claims and may serve such purposes as adding claims or defenses, properly naming or identifying parties, adding, substituting, or dropping parties, or clarifying jurisdiction. n6

[2] Purposes of Amendments and Supplements to Pleadings

The purpose of modifications to pleadings, including amendments and supplements to pleadings, is to obtain a just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of the legal merits of the action. n1 Because all pleadings must be construed in a manner to do substantial justice, n2 a court should disregard errors or defects in pleading modifications that do not affect the substantive rights of the parties. n3 Furthermore, that amendments should be freely given when justice so requires n4 and supplemental pleadings should be allowed on reasonable notice and on terms that are just. n5

Another significant purpose of Rule 15 is to specify when an amendment to a pleading that is filed after the statute of limitation has run is deemed to relate back to the date of the original pleading so that the claim is not time barred. In order for amendments to relate back, they generally must arise from the same conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in the original pleading. n6 For an amendment that adds or changes parties to relate back: (1) the new party must have such notice of the action that it will not be prejudiced in defending on the merits; and (2) the new party either must have known or should have known that but for the mistaken identity it would have been named. n7 Issues pertaining to relation back are discussed in § 9.51[7][a], below.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 15.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Frank v. U.S. West, Inc., 3 F.3d 1357, 1365 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n4)Footnote 3. Prasco, LLC v. Medicis Pharm. Corp., 537 F.3d 1329, 1337 (Fed. Cir. 2008) (although parties and courts sometimes mislabel amended pleadings and supplemental pleadings, mislabels are not of significance, and court may consider either motion to amend or supplement under correct portion of Rule 15).

(n5)Footnote 4. Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181-182, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962) .

(n6)Footnote 5. United States ex rel. Willard v. Humana Health Plan of Texas Inc., 336 F.3d 375, 386-387 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Burns v. Exxon Corp., 158 F.3d 336, 343 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 1. Nkihtaqmikon v. BIA, 453 F. Supp. 2d 193, 201-202 (D. Maine 2006) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e).

(n10)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 61.

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n12)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n13)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c); see Wilson v. Fairchild Republic Co., Inc., 143 F.3d 733, 738 (2nd Cir. 1998) .

(n14)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART VI. AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.51

§ 9.51 Amendments to Pleadings

[1] Amendment Allowed Once Without Leave of Court n*

A party may amend a pleading once as a matter of course or without leave of court, n1 provided that the amendment is made within the applicable of the following time periods: n2

- Within 21 days after giving service of the pleading; n3 or
- If the pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, within the earlier of: n4
  - 21 days after receiving service of a responsive pleading; or
  - 21 days after receiving service of a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f).

Even if the court will ultimately dismiss a plaintiff's claim, the plaintiff has the right to attempt to amend once, at least after paying a filing fee. n5 However, amendment as a matter of course is allowed only once. n6 Even purely technical amendments are not allowed without leave of court, once one amendment has been made. n7 Furthermore, a claimant must obtain leave to amend the complaint more than once even if the first amendment was not requested, but was made at the court's direction. n8

[2] Pleader Has at Least 21 Days After Serving Pleading to Amend Without Leave

A party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course within 21 days after serving it. n1 Furthermore, if a pleading is one that requires the opposition to file a responsive pleading or certain responsive motions, a longer time is allowed to file one amendment as a matter of course, because the time period of 21 days in such cases are triggered when the pleader receives service of the responsive pleading or motion. n2

After 21 days has elapsed since service of a pleading to which no response is required, the party's right to amend without leave of court is terminated. n3 However, the pleading may then be amended with leave of court or by consent of the opposition. n4 For example, a defending party must obtain leave to amend an answer if more than 21 days have passed since service of that answer. n5

[3] Pleader Has Longer Time to Amend Without Leave if Pleading Requires Response

If a pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, the pleading party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course at the expiration of the earlier of two time periods: n1

- 21 days after receiving service of the responsive pleading, or
- 21 days after receiving service of a motion under Rule 12(b) (motion presenting defenses), 12(e) (motion for more definite statement), or 12(f) (motion to strike).

Based on the "earlier" terminology used in Rule 15(a)(1)(B) it is clear the 21 day periods to amend once as a matter of course after service of a responsive pleading or after service of a designated motion are not cumulative. For example, if a responsive pleading is served after one of the designated motions is served, a new 21 day period does not start after service of the responsive pleading. n2

Typically, complaints and a third party complaints are pleadings which require a response. n3 The purpose of giving the party serving a complaint time to amend until 21 days after a responsive pleading or motion has been served is that the pleader moving for amendment will have time to read the response to the pleading, and adjust the amendment accordingly. Thus, the responsive pleading may point out issues that the original pleader had not considered and indicate to the pleader how to draft an appropriate amendment. n4

After 21 days has elapsed since service of a responsive pleading when required, the pleader's right to amend its pleading without leave of court is terminated. However, the pleading may then be amended with leave of court or by consent of the opposition. n5

[4] Amendment With Leave of Court or By Consent of Opposition

[a] Court Has Considerable Discretion to Grant Leave

After the expiration of the appropriate 21 day time period, depending on whether a response is required to a pleading, n1 a party may amend its pleading only by leave of court, or with the opposing party's written consent. n2

The court should freely give leave to amend when justice requires an amendment. n3 The requirement of justice means that there is a strong policy to permit amendment, and that the court should grant leave to amend with considerable liberality. The court's broad discretion in this regard must be guided by the underlying purpose of Rule 15 to facilitate decision on the merits, rather than on the pleadings or technicalities. n4

During the pretrial phase, a court should allow amendments to ensure that all the issues will come before the court. Thus, the pretrial conference must include discussions of any need or desirability to amend. n5 Parties are required to file amendments no later than the pretrial order unless there is a compelling reason why this could not be done. n6 However, there is a presumption that a court will permit amendment after a pretrial order if amendment would promote the interest of justice and sound judicial administration, provided there will be no substantial injury to an opposing party, and refusal of leave to amend will result in injustice to the movant. n7 On the other hand, despite the lenient standard of amendment under Rule 15, once a deadline for amendment is set in a Rule 16 scheduling order, the moving party must establish good cause for modifying the scheduling order to allow an amendment of a pleading, and the district court does not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend if the moving party does not show good cause. n8

The policy that a court should freely grant amendments limits a court's ability to deny leave to amend, and if a court abuses its discretion in denying leave, the denial will be reversed. n9 An appellate court will consider whether any reasonable person could disagree with the decision and will find abuse based on a showing that the district court made an error in judgment or clearly erroneous findings. n10 It is an abuse of discretion if the district court refuses to grant leave to amend without giving any reason. n11 However, a court is not required to expressly set forth the basis for denial. Rather, the court's rationale must be readily apparent from either the written opinion or the record before the appellate court. n12

Federal practice expressly permits amendments to cure inadequate jurisdictional allegations. By statute, defective allegations of jurisdiction may be amended in the trial court or appellate court, n13 and courts should liberally construe the statute to allow amendments for those purposes. n14 However, a plaintiff may not use the statute to cure defects in jurisdiction, only to correct defective allegations in a pleading that pertain to jurisdiction. Therefore, a plaintiff may not amend the complaint to substitute a new plaintiff in order to cure a lack of jurisdiction, n15 but may drop dispensable parties (those parties not needed establish subject matter jurisdiction), in order to perfect diversity jurisdiction. n16

[b] Factors for Court to Consider

The Supreme Court has stated that, because the purpose of pleading is to facilitate a proper decision on the merits, n17 the district court should freely grant amendments unless the district court indicates a reason for not doing so. The Court also listed the specific grounds on which a district court may base its decision to deny leave to amend, including: n18

1. Bad faith. The degree to which a party moving to amend has exhibited bad faith or a dilatory motive is a consideration, such as a repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendments previously allowed by the court. n19

2. Prejudice to the opposing party. n20 This factor is based on the opposition party's inability to prepare for the amendment and may be related to the delay factor, discussed in item 3, below. A court will deny leave to amend only if the non-moving party is in fact prejudiced by the actions of the moving party. n21

3. Undue delay. The passage of time alone does not necessarily mean the court will deny leave to amend. n22 However, if delay is unduly excessive the court may deny leave based on the factor of the length of delay alone. n23 For example, it was proper for the district court to deny a motion to amend on the grounds of undue delay when the motion was filed after discovery was completed and after an nearly dispositive order had been rendered by the district court. n24

4. Futility of the proposed amendment. A court must deny the motion to amend if it makes a legal determination that the proposed pleading as amended would be insufficient to cure the pleading's deficiencies. n25 Thus, the court will deny an amendment as futile when the evidence in support of the plaintiff's proposed new claim creates no triable issue of fact and the defendant would be entitled to summary judgment. n26 An amendment is "futile" if it merely restates the same facts as the original complaint in different terms, reasserts a claim on which the court previously ruled, fails to state a legal theory, or could not withstand a motion to dismiss. n27

5. The number of times, if any, that the party has already amended its pleadings. For example, a party may be denied leave to amend if the party has repeatedly failed to cure deficiencies in previously allowed amendments. n28

Not all of the factors listed carry equal weight. Some circuits have indicated that the consideration of prejudice to the opposing party carries the greatest weight. n29

[c] Conditional Grant of Leave to Amend

A court has discretion to conditionally grant an amendment when prejudice might otherwise result from granting leave. In this regard, a court has discretion to impose reasonable conditions when granting leave to amend. n30 In determining whether to impose any conditions, a court should consider the factors that affect a court's decision to grant leave. One typical condition imposed by courts is that the party moving for amendment must drop or adjust claims or defenses that have been filed, other than those in the motion. For example, the court may grant the amendment on the condition that the moving party dismiss a claim in parallel litigation in state court. n31

[d] Opposing Party's Written Consent

Even after the expiration of the appropriate 21 day time period, depending on whether a response is required to a pleading, n32 a party may nevertheless amend its pleading if the party obtains the opposing party's written consent. n33 In addition to such a formal written consent, the parties may also agree to permit an amendment to a pleading by "express or implied consent" to a trial of issues not in the original proceeding. n34 However, trial of issues by express consent requires evidence of such consent, and trial by implied consent requires proof by a demanding standard. n35

[5] Contents and Form of Motion to Amend n*

All motions for leave to amend that require court approval must satisfy Rule 7, n1 which requires a party to set forth with particularity the relief requested and the grounds supporting the request. n2 If the party moving for amendment fails to state supporting information, the failure in and of itself may be a sufficient reason for denial of leave to amend. Additionally, the party filing a Rule 15 motion to amend should attach the proposed amendment or new pleading to the motion. n3 However, while failure to attach a proposed amendment is a factor considered by the court, it is not usually an automatically fatal defect. n4

Courts have noted that the principle of freely granted amendment applies only when the party actually has moved for leave to amend, and therefore, the request for leave must be submitted in the form of a formal written motion. n5 Some circuits have held that a request for an amendment in a response to a motion to dismiss does not constitute a proper motion for leave to amend. However, some district courts are at times willing to consider the arguments raised in a response to a motion to dismiss, either as a motion to amend or in conjunction with a formal motion for leave to amend. n6

[6] Amendment to Conform to Evidence n*

[a] Right to Amendment After Objection to Evidence at Trial

The first of two mechanisms of Rule 15(b) to amend a pleading by conforming the pleading to the evidence provides that the pleadings may be amended if a party expressly moves to amend the complaint, and the objecting party fails to establish to the satisfaction of the court that it will be prejudiced by the amendment. n1 If it is in the interest of justice, a court may freely grant leave to amend after an objection. n2 A party may obtain leave to amend over objection unless the opposing party is able to show resulting prejudice. The burden is on the opposing party to show that allowing amendment would result in prejudice to the party. n3 Even if actual prejudice is shown and leave to amend is denied, the court may grant the moving party's request for a continuance in order to address new issues raised at trial. n4

[b] Right to Amendment by Express or Implied Consent

The second of two mechanisms of Rule 15(b) to amend a pleading by conforming the pleading to the evidence allows amendment when a party has expressly or impliedly consented to the amendment. n5 When an issue not raised by the pleadings is tried by the parties' express or implied consent, it must be treated in all respects as if raised in the pleadings. A party may move at any time, even after judgment, to amend the pleadings to conform them to the evidence and to raise an unpleaded issue. But failure to amend does not affect the result of the trial of that issue. n6 The purpose of this type of amendment is to have the pleadings mirror the actual issues tried in the case. n7 This procedure is useful in clarifying the record on appeal or in determining the preclusive effects to be given to the judgment. To accomplish an amendment, a court should liberally allow changes to the pleadings to conform them to the evidence. n8

In determining whether to allow amendments to conform to the evidence, a court should consider whether the opposing party expressly or impliedly consented to the introduction of the evidence. n9 Express consent may be found when a party has stipulated to an issue or the issue is set forth in a pretrial order. n10

Implied consent typically arises in two situations. First, a claim or defense outside of a pleading may be raised at trial, and then be treated by the opposing party as if the claim or defense had been pleaded. n11 Second, consent may be implied if during the trial the party acquiesces or fails to object to the introduction of evidence that relates only to an issue that has not been pleaded. Implied consent must be established by three factors: [1] the parties recognized that the issue outside the pleadings entered the case at trial, [2] the evidence supporting the issue was introduced at trial without objection, and [3] a finding of trial by consent would not prejudice the opposing party. n12 On the other hand, the court may not find implied consent if the opposing party did not recognize that new matters were at issue during the trial. Furthermore, a court may not find consent when the opposing party failed to object to evidence supporting an issue allegedly tried by implied consent, but that evidence is also relevant to other issues actually pleaded and tried. n13

[7] Effects of Amendment of Pleading

[a] Relation Back to Time of Original Pleading n*

[i] Principle of Relation Back

The principle of relation back means that, in specified circumstances, amendments to pleadings relate back to the date of the original pleading for purposes of determination of compliance with the applicable statute of limitation. n1 In other words, Rule 15(c) specifies the circumstances in which an amendment is deemed to have been filed as of the date of the original claim, rather than the later date of amendment. The purpose of allowing an amendment to relate back to the time of the original pleading is that the original pleading notified the opposition party of litigation involving a specific factual circumstances that form the basis of a claim for relief. n2 Therefore, the party has received the protection of the statute of limitation, which is designed to prevent stale claims. n3 The following are the three situations when relation back is allowed in federal court:

1. The applicable statute of limitation allows relation back. n4

2. The amendment asserts a claim or defense that arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence stated in the original pleading. n5

3. The amendment adds new parties who received notice of the action and should have known that the action would have been brought against them but for a mistake concerning the proper party's identity. n6

[ii] Relation Back Provided by Statute

An amendment to a pleading relates back to the date of the original pleading when the law that provides the applicable statute of limitation allows relation back. n7 The rule permits any relation back that may be permitted under the applicable body of limitations law, which may be federal law or may be state law in diversity cases. If controlling state law affords a more forgiving principle of relation back than the one provided in the federal rules, state law may save a claim that would otherwise be cut off. n8

[iii] Relation Back Because Amendment Arose From Same Facts

A party's amendment of a defective complaint generally relates back to the date of the original pleading, even if the amendment states a new claim, provided that the new claim is within the federal court's jurisdiction and arises out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in the original complaint. n8 Factors that a court should consider in determining whether a claim arose out of the same conduct, transaction, or occurrence include: whether the defendant had notice of the claim that plaintiff is now asserting; n9 whether the plaintiff will rely on the same kind of evidence offered in support of the original claim to prove the new claim; n10 and whether unfair surprise to the defendant would result if the court allowed the amendment to relate back. n11 For example, courts generally allow relation back when the new claim is based on the same facts as the original pleading and only amends the legal theory. n12

[iv] Relation Back to Add New Parties

After the statute of limitation has run, Rule 15(c)(1)(C) is the only method for a plaintiff to amend the complaint to change or add a defendant when the plaintiff has made a mistake concerning the identity of the defendant. n13 Thus, Rule 15 expressly allows amendments that change or add parties to relate back to the time of the original pleading if all of the following requirements are satisfied: n14

1. The claim or defense asserted in the amended pleading must arise from the conduct, transaction, or occurrence advanced in the original pleading. n15

2. The new party named in the amended pleading must have received adequate notice so as not to be prejudiced in defending on the merits. n16

3. The new party must have known or should have known that the action would have been brought against the new party but for the mistake. n17

4. The second and third factors above must have been satisfied within the period prescribed for service of process and complaint. n18

If the United States or a United States officer or agency is added as a new defendant by amendment, the notice requirements in items 2 and 3 above are satisfied if, during the period stated in item 4, process was delivered or mailed to the United States attorney or the United States attorney's designee, to the Attorney General of the United States, or to the officer or agency. n19

Because Rule 15(c)(3) is premised on the situation in which the plaintiff has made a mistake concerning the identity of a defending party, it does not apply when the defendant is merely unaware that the person was a potential party or when a plaintiff simply omits from the original complaint a separate, unrelated party, regardless of whether the omission was unintentional. n20 Also, an amended complaint does not relate back if the plaintiff had been aware of the identity of the newly named parties when the plaintiff filed the original complaint, and simply decided not to sue them at that time. In other words, a conscious decision to sue one party and not another does not constitute a mistake, and therefore may not form the basis for relation back. n21

[b] Other Effects of Amendment

In addition to the relation back of an amendment to the date of the filing of the original pleading, n22 properly completed amendments also have the following effects:

1. The amended pleading supersedes the prior pleading, provided that the amended pleading is complete in itself and does not reference or adopt any portion of the prior pleading. n23

2. If the district court sustains an objection to a pleading and the pleading party amends that pleading, the objecting party does not waive all possible objections to that ruling. However, the amending party does waive objections to a court's ruling based on indefiniteness, incompleteness, insufficiency or other technical pleading defects. n24

3. If the opposition party served with an amended pleading is required to plead in response, the opposition party must respond to the amended pleading within 14 days after being served with the amendment, or within the time to respond to the original pleading, whichever is later. n25 As a practical matter, some courts do not strictly require a response to an amendment unless the amendment adds new parties, new claims, or significant new factual allegations; if not, the previously filed response to the original pleading should be a sufficient response. n26

4. Generally, a party responding to an amended pleading must plead in response to the amendments in the pleading and any claims or defenses not responded to in the original pleading. n27 The responding party must also request leave of court if it wishes to add any new counterclaims in its response to the amended pleading. n28 However, if a plaintiff files an amended complaint changing the theory or scope of the case, some courts hold that the defendant is entitled to plead as though it were responding to the original complaint, and therefore the defendant may add new counterclaims without requesting leave of court. n29

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsConforming Pleadings to EvidenceCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsRelation Back

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 15.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Dimaio v. Democratic Nat'l Comm., 520 F.3d 1299, 1303 (11th Cir. 2008) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(A); see [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Butler v. Leen, 4 F.3d 772, 773 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1); Mayle v. Felix, 545 U.S. 644, 665-666, 125 S. Ct. 2562, 162 L. Ed. 2d 582 (2005) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Rodgers v. Lincoln Towing Serv., 771 F.2d 194, 203 (7th Cir. 1985) (federal rules do not distinguish between technical and substantive amendments).

(n9)Footnote 8. Elliott v. Foufas, 867 F.2d 877, 882 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n10)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(A).

(n11)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B); see also [3], below.

(n12)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B).

(n13)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2); see [4], below.

(n14)Footnote 5. See Russo v. Abington Mem'l Hosp., 881 F. Supp. 177, 182 (E.D. Pa. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B).

(n16)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n17)Footnote 3. See 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 15.12[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n18)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n19)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2); see [4], below.

(n20)Footnote 1. See [2], [3] above.

(n21)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2); see [d], below (amendment by express consent of party).

(n22)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n23)Footnote 4. Eminence Capital, LLC v. Aspeon, Inc., 316 F.3d 1048, 1051 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n24)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(B).

(n25)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(3)(A).

(n26)Footnote 7. United States v. Varner, 13 F.3d 1503, 1508 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n27)Footnote 8. Parker v. Columbia Pictures Indus., 204 F.3d 326, 339-341 (2d Cir. 2000) (finding of good cause depends on diligence of moving party).

(n28)Footnote 9. Bank v. Pitt, 928 F.2d 1108, 1112 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n29)Footnote 10. United Union of Roofers v. Insurance Corp. of Am., 919 F.2d 1398, 1400 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n30)Footnote 11. Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181-182, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962) ; see California Pub. Employees' Ret. Sys. v. Chubb Corp., 394 F.3d 126, 163-166 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n31)Footnote 12. Levald, Inc. v. City of Palm Desert, 998 F.2d 680, 691 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n32)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1653.

(n33)Footnote 14. Abigail Alliance for Better Access to Dev. Drugs v. Von Eschenbach, 469 F.3d 129, 132 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n34)Footnote 15. Federal Recovery Servs., Inc. v. United States, 72 F.3d 447, 453 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n35)Footnote 16. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 831-838, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 (1989) ; see Koehler v. Dodwell, 152 F.3d 304, 308-309 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n36)Footnote 17. AmerisourceBergen Corp. v. Dialysist West, Inc., 465 F.3d 946, 957 (9th Cir. 2006) .

(n37)Footnote 18. Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181-182, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962) ; Palmer v.

Champion Mortgage, 465 F.3d 24, 30-31 (1st Cir. 2006) .

(n38)Footnote 19. Long v. Wilson, 393 F.3d 390, 400 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n39)Footnote 20. Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 401 U.S. 321, 330-331, 91 S. Ct. 795, 28 L. Ed. 2d 77 (1971) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Minter v. Prime Equip. Co., 451 F.3d 1196, 1205 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n40)Footnote 21. United States v. Pend Oreille Pub. Util. Dist. No. 1, 926 F.2d 1502, 1511 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n41)Footnote 22. United States v. Pend Orielle Pub. Util. Dist. No. 1, 926 F.2d 1502, 1511 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n42)Footnote 23. Benzon v. Morgan Stanley Distribs., 420 F.3d 598, 613 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n43)Footnote 24. LaRocca v. Borden, Inc., 276 F.3d 22, 32 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n44)Footnote 25. United States ex rel. v. St. Luke's Hosp., Inc., 441 F.3d 552, 555, 558 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n45)Footnote 26. Milanese v. Rust-Oleum Corp., 244 F.3d 104, 110 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n46)Footnote 27. Bower v. Jones, 978 F.2d 1004, 1008 (7th Cir. 1992) ; see In re NAHC, Inc. Securities Litigation, 306 F.3d 1314, 1332 (3d Cir. 2002) (amendment was futile when one claim would be time-barred under the statute of limitation and other claims would not survive Rule 12(b)(6) motions even if made with more particularity).

(n47)Footnote 28. Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962) .

(n48)Footnote 29. Eminence Capital, LLC v. Aspeon, Inc., 316 F.3d 1048, 1052 (9th Cir. 2003) (prejudice is the primary inquiry under Rule 15(a)(2)).

(n49)Footnote 30. Polycast Technology Corp. v. Uniroyal, Inc., 728 F. Supp. 926, 939 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) ; see Dussouy v. Gulf Coast Inv. Corp., 660 F.2d 594, 597 (5th Cir. 1981) (court avoided any prejudice to defendant by conditioning grant of leave on payment of additional expense of discovery by plaintiff).

(n50)Footnote 31. *Collaboration Props. v. Tangberg ASA, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13968, at *14-15 (N.D. Cal. 2006) .

(n51)Footnote 32. See [2], [3], above.

(n52)Footnote 33. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n53)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b)(2).

(n54)Footnote 35. S.D. Farm Bureau, Inc. v. Hazeltine, 340 F.3d 583, 590 (8th Cir. 2009) ; see [6][b], below.

(n55)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 15.17 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n56)Footnote 1. Moore v. Indiana, 999 F.2d 1125, 1131 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n57)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b).

(n58)Footnote 3. Aponte-Torres v. Univ. of P.R., 445 F.3d 50, 58 (1st Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; normal procedure for requesting leave to amend is for party to submit proposed amendment or new pleading to be submitted with motion).

(n59)Footnote 4. Harris v. City of Auburn, 27 F.3d 1284, 1287 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n60)Footnote 5. Belizan v. Hershon, 434 F.3d 579, 582 (D.C. Cir. 2006) (verbal request for leave to amend made at oral argument was not proper motion for leave to amend).

(n61)Footnote 6. See Meehan v. United Consumers Club Franchising Corp., 312 F.3d 909, 913-914 (8th Cir. 2002) (court has discretion, but is not required, to accept response to motion to dismiss as motion for leave to amend); Willis v. Collins, 989 F.2d 187, 189 (5th Cir. 1993) (court should have considered arguments raised in opposition to motion to dismiss as amendment to complaint).

(n62)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 15.18 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n63)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b)(1); Green Country Food Mkt., Inc. v. Bottling Group, LLC, 371 F.3d 1275, 1280-1281 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n64)Footnote 2. American Eagle Credit Corp. v. Select Holding, Inc., 865 F. Supp. 800, 809 (S.D. Fla. 1994) .

(n65)Footnote 3. Crossland v. Canteen Corp., 711 F.2d 714, 729 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n66)Footnote 4. Matter of Prescott, 805 F.2d 719, 725 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n67)Footnote 5. Cook v. City of Bella Villa, 582 F.3d 840, 852 (8th Cir. 2009) (noting that some courts recognize implied consent to amendment even before trial).

(n68)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b)(2); Green Country Food Mkt., Inc. v. Bottling Group, LLC, 371 F.3d 1275, 1280-1281 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n69)Footnote 7. Ostano Commerzanstalt v. Telewide Sys., Inc., 880 F.2d 642, 646 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n70)Footnote 8. First Nat'l Bank of Louisville v. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago, 933 F.2d 466, 469 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n71)Footnote 9. MacDraw, Inc. v. CIT Group Equipment Financing, Inc., 157 F.3d 956, 962 (2nd Cir. 1998) .

(n72)Footnote 10. Studiengesellschaft Kohle, M.B.H. v. Shell Oil Co., 112 F.3d 1561, 1566 (Fed. Cir. 1997) .

(n73)Footnote 11. Brandon v. Holt, 469 U.S. 464, 471, 105 S. Ct. 873, 83 L. Ed. 2d 878 (1985) .

(n74)Footnote 12. Banks v. Thaler, 583 F.3d 295, 307 (5th Cir. 2009) .

(n75)Footnote 13. Portis v. First Nat'l Bank of New Albany, 34 F.3d 325, 332 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n76)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 15.19, 15.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n77)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c).

(n78)Footnote 2. See In re Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 585 F.3d 326, 334 (7th Cir. 2009) (key of relation back of amendment principle is adequate notice at time of original pleading to defendant of its potential liability).

(n79)Footnote 3. Johnson v. Crown Enters., 398 F.3d 339, 342 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n80)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(A); see [ii], below.

(n81)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(B); see [iii], below.

(n82)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C); see [iv], below.

(n83)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(A).

(n84)Footnote 8. DeRienzo v. Harvard Indus., 357 F.3d 348, 353 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n85)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(B); Johnson v. Crown Enters., 398 F.3d 339, 342 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n86)Footnote 9. Baldwin County Welcome Ctr. v. Broan, 466 U.S. 147, 149-150, 104 S. Ct. 1723, 80 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1984) .

(n87)Footnote 10. Johnson v. Crown Enters., 398 F.3d 339, 342 (5th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n88)Footnote 11. Benfield v. Mocatta Metals Corp., 26 F.3d 19, 23 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n89)Footnote 12. Mayle v. Felix, 545 U.S. 644, 665-666, 125 S. Ct. 2562, 162 L. Ed. 2d 582 (2005) .

(n90)Footnote 13. See Garrett v. Fleming, 362 F.3d 692, 696 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n91)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C); see Sanders Burns v. City of Plano, 578 F.3d 279, 288 (5th Cir. 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n92)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(B).

(n93)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C)(i).

(n94)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C)(ii).

(n95)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m).

(n96)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(2); see Montgomery v. United States Postal Serv., 867 F.2d 900, 903 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n97)Footnote 20. Mailey v. SEPTA, 204 F.R.D. 273, 275-276 (E.D. Penn. 2001) .

(n98)Footnote 21. Arthur v. Maersk, Inc., 434 F.3d 196, 204 n.9 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n99)Footnote 22. See [a], above.

(n100)Footnote 23. Fritz v. Standard Sec. Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., 676 F.2d 1356, 1358 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n101)Footnote 24. Davis v. TXO Prod. Corp., 929 F.2d 1515, 1517-1518 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n102)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3).

(n103)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Stanley Works v. Snydergeneral Corp., 781 F. Supp. 659, 664-665 (E.D. Cal. 1990) .

(n104)Footnote 27. Carter v. Church, 791 F. Supp. 297, 298 (M.D. Ga. 1992) .

(n105)Footnote 28. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n106)Footnote 29. Tralon Corp. v. Cedarapids, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 812, 832 (N.D. Iowa 1997) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 9 PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS IN GENERAL
PART VI. AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS

1-9 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 9.52

§ 9.52 Supplemental Pleadingsn*

[1] Characteristics and Purpose of Supplemental Pleading

A "supplemental pleading" is one that adds claims, defenses, allegations, and statements for any occurrences relevant to the original pleading that take place after the original pleading. n1 Its purpose is to bring the pleading up to date to the current status among the parties, n2 and to promote as complete an adjudication of the dispute between the parties as possible. n3

Thus, on the motion of a party and on such terms as are just, a court may allow a supplemental pleading that sets forth transactions and occurrences or events which have happened since the date of the pleading to be supplemented. n4 A supplemental pleading may be used to add additional facts or events relating to liability or to change the relief requested. n5 A party also may supplement a pleading under Rule 15(d) to add new parties when subsequent events make it necessary to do so. n6 Supplemental pleadings are not limited to use by the plaintiff. A defendant may supplement an answer with new or additional defenses, including affirmative defenses, based on after-occurring events. n7

[2] Court's Discretion to Permit Supplemental Pleading

A court has discretion to allow a party to supplement a complaint in the interest of justice. However, the discretion is not unlimited. The court does not have discretion unless in fact there has transpired a transaction, occurrence, or event in the period of time after the original pleading was filed. While the text of Rule 15(a)(2) provides that leave should be freely granted for an amendment, the text of Rule 15(d) does not similarly provide for supplement. n1 However, supplemental pleadings are ordinarily useful to the efficient administration of justice; consequently, they should be allowed by the district court as a matter of course, unless some particular reason for disallowing them appears. n2 It is within the discretion of the court to allow a supplemental pleading to be filed at any stage of the case. n3

[3] Requirements for Supplemental Pleadings

Rule 15(d) applies only to events that have occurred since the date of the filing of the pleading. Supplemental pleadings also are limited to subsequent events related to the claim or defense presented in the original pleading. n1 The allegations in the supplemental pleading, however, do not need to arise out of the same transaction or occurrence as the original; they need only have some significant relationship to the subject of the original pleading. n2 Supplemental pleadings are optional on the part of the party that filed the original pleading. n3 Therefore, neither an opposition party nor the district court has the authority to compel a party making a claim for relief to supplement its pleading, and it is inappropriate for the district court to enter an adverse judgment with respect to claims not included in the original pleading. n4

Other than the required change in circumstances, the same general principles that support the amendment of pleadings also apply to supplemental pleadings. Leave of court is required to supplement a pleading. n5 A court may deny leave to supplement when it would cause undue delay or prejudice to the opposing party, or if the supplementing party has shown bad faith or a motive to delay the action. n6

The court may allow a plaintiff or defendant to supplement a claim or defense even if the original pleading did not state a proper claim for relief. n7 Thus, a plaintiff need not commence a new action when after-occurring events demonstrate that it has a right to relief, even if the original complaint was defective or insufficient. A court may also allow a plaintiff to supplement the complaint even if jurisdiction or venue would not have been proper if the claim had been asserted in an independent action. n8 The court may order how the adverse party must respond to the supplemental complaint and the time allowed for such response. n9

[4] Relation Back of Supplemental Pleading

A supplemental pleading ordinarily does not relate back to the time of the original pleading for statute of limitation purposes to the extent it relies on facts that did not occur until after the expiration of the statute of limitation. n1 However, a court may allow relation back when the allegations in the supplemental complaint show changed or additional circumstances. For example, a court will allow relation back when the injury alleged in the original complaint has become aggravated, when the violations alleged in the supplemental complaint are a continuation of the initial violations alleged in the original complaint, n2 or when the supplemental complaint alleges an occurrence that corrects a defective jurisdictional allegation. n3 A supplemental pleading differs from an amended pleading because it relates to matters occurring subsequent to the filing of the initial complaint, while an amendment relates to events occurring prior to the original pleading. Consequently, relation back principles may be unnecessary, because a new occurrence that takes place after the filing of the original complaint in itself would set a date of accrual of the claim for relief and obviate statute of limitation problems. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 15.30 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d); see Wagner v. Professional Eng'rs in Cal. Gov't, 354 F.3d 1036, 1052 (2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Griffin v. County School Bd. of Prince Edward County, 377 U.S. 218, 226-227, 84 S. Ct. 1226, 12 L. Ed. 2d 256 (1964) .

(n4)Footnote 3. William Inglis & Sons Baking Co. v. ITT Cont'l Baking Co., Inc., 668 F.2d 1014, 1057 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n6)Footnote 5. Glatt v. Chicago Park Dist., 87 F.3d 190, 193-194 (7th Cir. 1996) (supplemental pleading to add specified injuries arising from the event on which the claim is based which occurred after plaintiff filed complaint).

(n7)Footnote 6. Griffin v. County School Bd. of Prince Edward County, 377 U.S. 218, 227, 84 S. Ct. 1226, 1231, 12 L. Ed. 2d 256 (1964) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Sanchez v. City of Santa Ana, 915 F.2d 424, 431-432 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 1. Burns v. Exxon Corp., 158 F.3d 336, 343 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 2. Ashton v. City of Concord, 337 F. Supp. 2d 735, 740 (M.D.N.C. 2004) .

(n11)Footnote 3. Novak v. National Broadcasting Co., 724 F. Supp. 141, 145 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Novak v. National Broadcasting Co., 724 F. Supp. 141, 145-146 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Al-Ra'id v. Ingle, 69 F.3d 28, 33 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n15)Footnote 4. International Rectifier Corp. v. IXYS Corp., 383 F.3d 1312, 1317-1318 (Fed. Cir. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n17)Footnote 6. Concerned Area Residents for the Env't v. Southview Farm, 834 F. Supp. 1410, 1412-1413 (W.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n18)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n19)Footnote 8. U.S. Envtl. Prods., Inc. v. Infilco Degremont, Inc., 611 F. Supp. 371, 374 (N.D. Ill. 1985) .

(n20)Footnote 9. Pratt v. Rowland, 769 F. Supp. 1128, 1132 (N.D. Cal. 1991) .

(n21)Footnote 1. United States ex rel. Wulff v. CMA, Inc., 890 F.2d 1070, 1073-1074 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n22)Footnote 2. William Inglis & Sons Baking Co. v. ITT Continental Baking Co., 668 F.2d 1014, 1016-1018 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n23)Footnote 3. Bates v. Western Electric, 420 F. Supp. 521, 524 (E.D. Pa. 1976) .

(n24)Footnote 4. See Reiter v. United States, 371 F. Supp. 2d 417, 423-424 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

32 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
1 SPECIAL ALERT TO CHAPTER 10

1-1 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure Scope

Scope

Ashcroft v. Iqbal*, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3472 (May 18, 2009)

Background of Case

In Ashcroft v. Iqbal, the respondent was a citizen of Pakistan and a Muslim. After the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks he was arrested in the United States on immigration charges and detained by federal officials. He was deemed to be "of high interest" to the investigation into the terrorist attacks, and was therefore held under restrictive conditions, spending 23 hours a day in lockdown and the remaining hour outside his cell in handcuffs and leg irons. He eventually pleaded guilty to the immigration fraud charges and was removed to Pakistan.

He then filed a Bivens action in federal court against various federal officials and corrections officers, including the U.S. Attorney General and the Director of the FBI, who were the petitioners here. The complaint alleged that they violated the U.S. Constitution by designating him as a person of "high interest," and thereby subjected him to harsh conditions of confinement, on account of his race, religion, or national origin. It further alleged that the petitioners approved a policy of arresting and detaining Arab Muslim men as part of the investigation of the September 11 terrorist attacks, and that both petitioners "knew of, condoned, and willfully and maliciously agreed to subject" the respondent to harsh conditions of confinement as a matter of policy, solely on account of his religion, race, or national origin and for no legitimate penological reason.

The petitioners asserted qualified immunity and moved to dismiss the suit on the grounds the complaint was not sufficient to state a claim against them. The District Court denied the motion to dismiss, and the petitioners appealed to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. While the appeal was pending, the Supreme Court decided Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) , which set out standards for evaluating the sufficiency of a complaint. The Second Circuit discussed Twombly at length, concluding that it called for a "flexible 'plausibility standard,' which obliges a pleader to amplify a claim with some factual allegations in those contexts where such amplification is needed to render the claim plausible." The Second Circuit decided that it was not presented with one of those contexts requiring amplification, and that the respondent's complaint was sufficient to allege the petitioners' personal involvement in discriminatory decisions that, if true, violated clearly established constitutional law.

Determination of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The Supreme Court first noted (Justice Kennedy delivered the opinion of the Court) that the respondent had disputed the Second Circuit's subject matter jurisdiction to hear the appeal, but that the Second Circuit had hardly discussed the issue. However, subject matter jurisdiction cannot be forfeited or waived and should be considered when fairly in doubt.

The Court concluded that the Second Circuit had jurisdiction to hear the appeal under the collateral order doctrine. This doctrine makes a limited set of district court orders reviewable even though not final judgments, when they "finally determine claims of right separable from, and collateral to, rights asserted in the action, too important to be denied review and too independent of the cause itself to require that appellate consideration be deferred until the whole case is adjudicated."

A decision denying a claim of qualified immunity falls within the narrow class of orders that are appealable under the doctrine. This is so because qualified immunity, which shields government officials from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights, is both a defense to liability and a limited entitlement not to stand trial or face the other burdens of litigation.

The respondent argued that a qualified immunity appeal based solely on the complaint's failure to state a claim, and not on the ultimate issues relevant to the qualified immunity defense itself, is not a proper subject of interlocutory jurisdiction. The Court ruled, however, that appellate jurisdiction is not so strictly confined.

Elements of Bivens Action

The Court began by taking note of the elements of a Bivens action--that is, the elements the plaintiff was required to plead to state a claim of unconstitutional discrimination against officials entitled to assert qualified immunity [see Bivens v. Six Unknown FBI Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1971)] . Bivens recognized an implied private action for damages against federal officers alleged to have violated a citizen's constitutional rights. The Court noted, however, that it has never extended this right of action to First Amendment claims. However, the petitioners did not press this argument, so the Court assumed without deciding that the respondent's First Amendment claim was actionable under Bivens.

Government officials, the Court said, may not be held liable for the unconstitutional conduct of their subordinates under a theory of respondeat superior. Accordingly, a plaintiff must plead that each government official defendant, through the official's own individual actions, violated the Constitution. The factors necessary to establish a Bivens violation will vary with the constitutional provision at issue. When the claim is invidious discrimination in contravention of the First and Fifth Amendments, the plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant acted with discriminatory purpose.

The respondent argued that the petitioners could be liable, under a theory of "supervisory liability" for knowledge and acquiescence in their subordinates' use of discriminatory criteria to make classification decisions among detainees. That is, that a supervisor's mere knowledge of a subordinate's discriminatory purpose amounts to the supervisor's violating the Constitution. The Court rejected this argument--each government official is liable only for his or her own misconduct. Thus, a plaintiff must plead and prove discriminatory intent, not mere knowledge of discrimination by subordinates.

Twombly* Is Not Limited to Antitrust Disputes

The pleading standards here were governed by the Court's earlier decision in Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly. Twombly was a complex antitrust case, and the respondent raised the argument that it should be limited to pleadings made in the context of an antitrust dispute. The Court made clear, however, that its ruling in Twombly was based on interpretation and application of Rule 8, which sets out the pleading standard for all civil actions.

Application of Twombly's Pleading Standard

Civil Rule 8(a)(2) requires that a pleading contain a "short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Under Twombly, to survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to "state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.

Two working principles underlie the Twombly decision, the Court said. First, the tenet that a court must accept as true all the allegations contained in a complaint is inapplicable to legal conclusions. Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice. Second, only a complaint that states a plausible claim for relief survives a motion to dismiss. Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief is a context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense.

Thus, the Court read Twombly as applying a two-pronged approach. "In keeping with these principles a court considering a motion to dismiss can choose to begin by identifying pleadings that, because they are no more than conclusions, are not entitled to the assumption of truth. While legal conclusions can provide the framework of a complaint, they must be supported by factual allegations. When there are well-pleaded factual allegations, a court should assume their veracity and then determine whether they plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief."

Following this methodology, the Court concluded that the complaint did not sufficiently plead claims of invidious discrimination. The complaint contained allegations that the petitioners "knew of, condoned, and willfully and maliciously agreed to subject [him]" to harsh conditions of confinement "as a matter of policy, solely on account of [his] religion, race, and/or national origin and for no legitimate penological interest." The complaint further alleged that the Attorney General was the "principal architect" of this invidious policy, and that the Director of the FBI was "instrumental" in adopting and executing it. The Court characterized these assertions as nothing more than a "formulaic recitation of the elements" of a constitutional discrimination claim, and therefore conclusory and not entitled to be assumed true. The Court made clear that it was "the conclusory nature of respondent's allegations, rather than their extravagantly fanciful nature, that disentitles them to the presumption of truth."

The Court then considered whether the remaining allegations plausibly suggested an entitlement to relief. The complaint alleged that the FBI, under the direction of one of the petitioners, "arrested and detained thousands of Arab Muslim men ... as part of its investigation of the events of September 11" and that the policy of holding post-September-11 detainees in highly restrictive conditions of confinement until they were 'cleared' by the FBI was approved by both petitioners in the weeks after September 11, 2001.

These allegations, taken as true, did not plausibly establish discriminatory purpose on the part of the petitioners with respect to the respondent's arrest, as there were more likely explanations for their conduct. A legitimate policy directing law enforcement to arrest and detain individuals because of their suspected link to the attacks would produce a disparate, incidental impact on Arab Muslims, even though the purpose of the policy was to target neither Arabs nor Muslims. The arrests "were likely lawful and justified by his nondiscriminatory intent to detain aliens who were illegally present in the United States and who had potential connections to those who committed terrorist acts." Because of this obvious alternative explanation, discrimination was not a "plausible" conclusion.

Moreover, these allegations were with reference to the respondent's arrest--but his claims against the petitioners rested on their ostensible policy of holding detainees under severe conditions of confinement once they were categorized as "of high interest" The complaint failed to plausibly show that the petitioners purposefully adopted a policy of classifying detainees as "of high interest" because of their race, religion, or national origin. The complaint alleged that the petitioners approved restrictive conditions of confinement for detainees until they were cleared by the FBI. Even accepting the truth of these allegations, the complaint did not show that this action was due to the detainees' race, religion, or national origin.

The Court also rejected the idea that application of Rule 8 and the Twombly standard might be tempered when the district court cabins discovery in such a way as to preserve the defense of qualified immunity as much as possible. The Court ruled that "the question presented by a motion to dismiss a complaint for insufficient pleadings does not turn on the controls placed upon the discovery process... Because respondent's complaint is deficient under Rule 8, he is not entitled to discovery, cabined or otherwise."

The Court concluded that the respondent's complaint failed to plead sufficient facts to state a claim for purposeful and unlawful discrimination against the petitioners, and reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Dissent

Justice Souter (the author of the Twombly opinion) filed a dissent, joined by Justice Stevens, Justice Ginsburg, and Justice Breyer. The dissent concluded that the majority both misapplied the pleading standard under Twombly and incorrectly rejected supervisory liability.

The dissent first observed that the petitioners had explicitly conceded, for purposes of their appeal, that an officer may be subject to Bivens liability as a supervisor on grounds other than respondeat superior. The Court had therefore received no briefing or argument on the proper scope of supervisory liability. Rejecting the principle of supervisory liability in these circumstances was uncalled for, especially as this conclusion had no bearing on the majority's resolution of the present case.

Given the petitioners' concession, the complaint satisfied Rule 8, in the dissent's view. The petitioners admitted they were liable for their subordinates' conduct if they had actual knowledge of the discriminatory nature of the classification of suspects as being "of high interest," and were deliberately indifferent to that discrimination. The complaint alleged, at a bare minimum, that the petitioners knew of and condoned the discriminatory policy their subordinates carried out, and in fact went further and alleged that they acted affirmatively to create the discriminatory detention policy.

The petitioners argued that the complaint failed to satisfy Twombly's plausibility standard because it was implausible that such high-ranking officials would be personally involved in the specific actions of lower-level officers. This response, the dissent said, "bespeaks a fundamental misunderstanding of the enquiry that Twombly demands. Twombly does not require a court at the motion-to-dismiss stage to consider whether the factual allegations are probably true. We made it clear, on the contrary, that a court must take the allegations as true, no matter how skeptical the court may be... The sole exception to this rule lies with allegations that are sufficiently fantastic to defy reality as we know it: claims about little green men, or the plaintiff's recent trip to Pluto, or experiences in time travel. That is not what we have here."

The dissent did not necessarily disagree with the majority over the definition of "plausibility" under Twombly. Rather, the dissent took issue with the first prong of the majority's analysis, under which the majority discarded a number of allegations as "conclusory," leaving only two statements to consider. The dissent agreed that the two allegations selected by the majority did not, by themselves, state a plausible entitlement to relief.

However, the complaint contained allegations linking the petitioners to the discriminatory practices of their subordinates. These allegations, in the dissent's view, were not merely "bare assertions" or a "formulaic recitation of the elements," as the majority would have it. The complaint contained specific allegations as to a policy that discriminated against Arab Muslim men, and further alleged that the two petitioners knew of, condoned, and agreed to subject the respondent to this particular, discrete, discriminatory policy. Taking the complaint as a whole, the dissent concluded that the complaint gave the petitioners fair notice of the claim and the grounds on which it rested.

33 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 10.syn

§ 10.syn Synopsis to Chapter 10: PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

§ 10.01 Table of Times for Plaintiff

§ 10.02 Commencement of Civil Action; Filing of Complaint

[1] Acts Constituting Commencement of Action

[2] Significance of Commencement of Action

[3] Consideration of Other Rules to Determine Commencement of Action

[4] Corporate Disclosure Statement

[a] Required Disclosure Statement

[b] Time for Filing

§ 10.03 Statutes of Limitation

[1] Suit Must Be Commenced Within Applicable Time Limit

[2] Determination of Applicable Limitation Period

[a] Claims Based on State Law

[b] Claims Based on Federal Law

[i] Claim Based on Federal Statute With Specified Limitations Period

[ii] Claim Based on Post-1990 Congressional Enactment With No Specified Limitations Period

[iii] Claim Based on Pre-1991 Congressional Enactment With No Specified Limitations Period or Federal Common Law

[3] Tolling of Applicable Limitation Period

[a] Action Based on State Law

[b] Action Based on Federal Law

§ 10.04 Provisional Remedies

[1] Seizure of Persons or Property

[a] Nature of Remedy

[b] Provisional Remedies Available on Commencement of Action

[c] Procedure Controlled by Federal Rules

[d] Available Remedies

[e] Due Process Considerations

[2] Proceedings Against Sureties

[a] Summary Procedure for Enforcement of Surety's Liaibility

[b] Enforcement by Motion

[c] Surety Submits to Jurisdiction of Court

[3] Appointment of Receiver

[a] Availability of Receivership

[b] Grounds for Appointment of Receiver

[c] Notice and Hearing for Appointment of Receiver

[d] Subject-Matter Jurisdiction

[e] Bond

[4] Deposit in Court

[a] Purpose of Deposit

[b] Procedure for Deposit

§ 10.05 Plaintiff's Pleading of Jurisdiction

[1] Existence of Jurisdiction Determined at Commencement of Action

[2] Manner of Pleading Jurisdiction

[a] Statement of Jurisdiction

[b] Pleading Federal Question Jurisdiction

[c] Pleading Diversity Jurisdiction

[i] General Requirements: Amount in Controversy and Citizenship of Parties

[ii] Citizenship of Individual

[iii] Citizenship of Legal Entities

[iv] Amount in Controversy

[d] Pleading Jurisdiction Under Special Jurisdictional Statutes

§ 10.06 Pleading Claim for Relief

[1] Short and Plain Statement of Claim

[a] Notice Pleading Standard

[b] Detail Required in Statement Depends on Circumstances of Case

[2] Notice to Defendant is Sufficient

[a] Allegations of Facts

[b] Surplusage Does Not Necessarily Invalidate Claim

[c] Merely Conclusory Allegations Insufficient

[3] Party May Make Statement of Claim on Information and Belief

[4] Official Forms Are Sufficient as Pleadings

[5] Special Pleading Requirements

§ 10.07 Demand for Judgment

[1] Requirement of Demand

[2] Effect of Demand on Judgment

§ 10.08 Joinder of Claims for Relief

[1] Liberal Joinder of Claims

[2] Permissive Joinder of Claims; Claim Preclusion

[3] Court May Order Separate Trials of Claims or Issues

[4] Multiple Party Considerations

§ 10.09 Joinder of Contingent Remedies

[1] Claimant May Request Joinder of Contingent Remedies

[2] Joinder of Contingent Remedies Procedural Only

[3] Discretion of Court

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.01

§ 10.01 Table of Times for Plaintiffn1

Issuance of summons	At time of filing of complaint. Rule 4(b).
Service of Summons and Complaint.....	Within 120 days after filing of complaint, except in case of service in foreign country pursuant to Rule 4(f), 4(j)(1). Rule 4(m).
Proof of service of process.....	After service is completed or at direction of court. Rule 4(l).
Motion to amend summons or proof of service of amended process.....	At any time in discretion of court. Rule 4(a)(2), 4(l)(3).
Amendment of complaint as matter of course.....	Once within 21 days of service of answer or within 21 days after service of motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f), whichever is earlier. Rule 15(a)(1).
Amendment of complaint with leave of court.....	At any time. Rule 15(a)(2). Subject to scheduling order. Rule 16(b)(3)(A).
Demand for Jury Trial.....	Within 14 days of service of last pleading directed to issue triable by jury. Rule 38(b)(1).
Demand for Jury Trial in Removed Action.....	Within 14 days of date that demanding party either (1) filed notice of removal, or (2) was served with notice of removal. Rule 81(c)(3).
Prayer for attachment, garnishment, arrest, and other provisional remedies.....	At commencement of and during action. Rule 64.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessTime LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The times specified in this table are subject to the provisions for the extension of time under Rule 6(b), and to the provision of Rule 6(d) for the addition of 3 days to the period prescribed or allowed in the rules when service is accomplished by any means other than by hand delivery. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C)-(F). For further discussion of the time periods for pleadings and motions, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.02

§ 10.02 Commencement of Civil Action; Filing of Complaintn*

[1] Acts Constituting Commencement of Action

To commence a civil action governed by the federal rules, a party must file a formal complaint with the court. n1 The act of filing constitutes the "commencement" of the action. n2 An action is not commenced, for example, by completion of service of process under Rule 4, n3 by filing a motion with the court, n4 or by filing a right-to-sue letter issued by a federal agency for a Title VII discrimination claim. n5 Rule 3's requirement of a complaint applies in actions brought by or against the United States n6 or an officer or agency of the United States. n7 Rule 3 generally controls the commencement of all civil actions; n8 however, a federal statute adopted subsequent to the rules may provide for a different method of commencing an action to the extent provided by Congress. n9

An action is commenced under Rule 3 by the filing of a complaint, even if the complaint fails to comply with local court rules. n10 In diversity actions, the commencement date of the federal action is determined by state law. n11 In cases when an action filed in state court is subsequently removed to federal court, the commencement of the action is also governed by the rules of the state where the action originated. n12

Some circuit courts consider the failure to pay a filing fee a violation of Rule 3. In those jurisdictions, a complaint filed without the applicable filing fee does not commence the action. n13 Other circuits consider an action commenced by the filing of a complaint, even if the filing fees are not paid to the clerk at the time of the filing. n14

[2] Significance of Commencement of Action

The time of commencement of an action, which is to an extent determined by the manner of filing, is important because it may affect the following matters: compliance with an applicable statute of limitations; n1 the availability of provisional remedies; n2 and the assumption of jurisdiction by the federal court, n3 which ultimately gives the court power to enter a valid judgment disposing of the litigation. n4 Thus, a complaint must generally be filed pursuant to Rule 3 before a court may grant a judgment. However, if a complaint has technical deficiencies, but the defendant fails to object on the ground that the action was not properly commenced, the action may proceed as if a complaint had been filed, and a judgment may be entered. n5 Conversely, if the defendant objects to the plaintiff's failure to file a complaint within the prescribed period, the action must be dismissed, and the plaintiff is precluded from filing a new action. n6

[3] Consideration of Other Rules to Determine Commencement of Action

Rule 3 provisions governing the commencement of an action must be construed in consideration of all other federal rules. n1 The following rules are particularly important with respect to the commencement of an action: n2

1. Rule 4, which governs the service of summons. Rule 3 applies in all civil actions requiring service under Rule 4. n3 There is, however, no general requirement that the plaintiff effect service pursuant to Rule 4 to toll the statute of limitation, unless there is explicit statutory law to the contrary. n4

2. Rule 5, which specifies the permissible methods of filing papers, including the complaint, defines the term "filing with the court." n5 Rule 3 must therefore be considered in conjunction with Rule 5(e) to ascertain the time at which the complaint has been properly filed, and thus, the action commenced. n6 The most common method for completion of filing pursuant to Rule 5(e) is to deliver the complaint to the clerk of the court. n7 However, Rule 5(e) also provides for filing of a complaint in other ways: if ordered by the court, the complaint may be delivered by the claiming party directly to the judge, or a court may by local rule permit or require papers to be filed by electronic means. n8

3. Rule 6(b), which provides that time requirements may be extended in certain circumstances. For example, although the service of a summons usually must occur within 120 days after the filing of the complaint, the time period to effect service of process under Rule 4(m) may be enlarged under Rule 6(b). This enlargement can affect the proper commencement of an action under Rule 3 if the action is dismissed for failure to effectuate service of process within the prescribed period. n9

4. Rule 8(a), which provides the requirements for drafting the complaint. Thus, for an effective filing under Rule 3, the provisions of Rule 8(a) must be satisfied, including: a short and plain statement of the grounds for jurisdiction; a claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief; and a demand for judgment for the relief the pleader seeks. For example, in one case the plaintiff timely filed a document entitled "right to sue letter" with the court, but failed to file a complaint denominated as such. The Supreme Court held that the action was not properly commenced because the right-to-sue letter failed to set forth a short statement regarding the nature of the claim as required by Rule 8(a). n10 For a complete discussion of pleading rules under Rule 8(a), see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

5. Rule 10(a), which requires that in the complaint the title of the action must include the names of all the parties. Thus, a careful attorney will be sure the complaint meets all the requirements of Rule 10, including captions and paragraphs. n11

6. Rule 15, which describes the requirements for amendment of a complaint or other pleading, n12 and the principle that the date of an amendment is effective as date of the commence of the action. n13 Just as an action is commenced with the filing of a complaint, an amendment to a complaint is effective when filed. n14

[4] Corporate Disclosure Statement

[a] Required Disclosure Statement

At the commencement of an action, n1 a nongovernmental corporate party must file two copies of a statement that either (1) identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock n1.1 or (2) states that the corporation has no parent corporation and there is no publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock. n2

The purpose of this statement is to enable the district court judge to determine whether he or she has the "financial interest" required to subject the judge to automatic disqualification under Canon 3C(1)(c) of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. n3

[b] Time for Filing

A nongovernmental corporate party plaintiff that comes within the rule must file an initial disclosure statement at the time of filing its complaint, or at the time of its first appearance or any other request by the corporation addressed to the court. n4 Additionally, a party must supplement its statement whenever the information that must be disclosed under Rule 7.1 changes. n5 Thus, if a nongovernmental corporate plaintiff in a district court had no parent corporation at the time of filing the complaint, but was later acquired by a parent corporation, the party must disclose that information in a supplemental disclosure at the time of acquisition by the parent corporation. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsFiling FeesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsPrelitigation NoticesCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 3.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Bush v. Cheaptickets, Inc., 425 F.3d 683, 686 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 3.

(n4)Footnote 3. Pacesetter Sys. v. Medtronic, Inc. 678 F.2d 93, 96 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Allied-Signal, Inc., 915 F.2d 190, 191-192 (6th Cir. 1990) (class action commenced by filing complaint and not by filing motion for class certification).

(n6)Footnote 5. Birge v. Delta Air Lines, 597 F. Supp. 448, 454 (N.D. Ga. 1984) (filing of federal agency right-to-sue letter not sufficient to commence action in federal court without filing of formal complaint in court).

(n7)Footnote 6. United States v. Certain Parcels of Land, 149 F. Supp. 696 (N.D. Ohio 1957) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Farrell v. Ignatius, 283 F. Supp. 58 (S.D.N.Y. 1968) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Woodford v. Garceau, 538 U.S. 202, 208, 123 S. Ct. 1398, 155 L. Ed. 2d 363 (2003) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Matles v. United States, 356 U.S. 256, 256, 78 S. Ct. 712, 2 L. Ed. 2d 741 (1958) (in addition to complaint, affidavit of good cause must be filed with complaint to commence denaturalization proceeding).

(n11)Footnote 10. Loya v. Desert Sands Unified Sch. Dist., 721 F.2d 279, 281 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n12)Footnote 11. South v. Saab Cars USA, Inc., 28 F.3d 9, 12 n.2 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Juliano v. Stroehmann Bakeries, Inc., 734 F. Supp. 595, 596-599 (W.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Wanamaker v. Columbian Rope Co., 713 F. Supp. 533, 538-539 (N.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Johnson v. Brown, 803 F. Supp. 1414, 1418-1419 (N.D. Ind. 1992) .

(n16)Footnote 1. See Pace v. DiGuglielmo, 544 U.S. 408, 415 n.5, 125 S. Ct. 1807, 161 L. Ed. 2d 669 ; United States ex rel. Mathews v HealthSouth Corp., 332 F.3d 293, 295-296 (5th Cir. 2003) ; see also § 10.03.

(n17)Footnote 2. P.K. Family Restaurant v. Internal Revenue Service, 535 F. Supp. 1223, 1224 (N.D. Ohio 1982) ; see § 10.04.

(n18)Footnote 3. See Allen v. Highlands Hosp. Corp., 545 F.3d 387, 401 (6th Cir. 2008) (court cannot assume jurisdiction of claim by individual under Age Discrimination in Employment Act until 60 days after complaint has been filed with Equal Employment Opportunity Commission).

(n19)Footnote 4. Kirkland v Legion Ins. Co., 343 F.3d 1135, 1142 (9th Cir. 2005) ; see § 10.05.

(n20)Footnote 5. Schlesinger v. Councilman, 420 U.S. 738, 742 n.5, 95 S. Ct. 1300, 43 L. Ed. 2d 591 (1975) (technical defect in manner action commenced not jurisdictional and does not prevent entry of valid judgment).

(n21)Footnote 6. Baldwin County Welcome Ctr. v. Brown, 466 U.S. 147, 149-152, 104 S. Ct. 1723, 80 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1984) (filing of right-to-sue letter did not satisfy Rule 3 requirements).

(n22)Footnote 1. McIntosh v. Antonino, 71 F.3d 29, 35-36 (1st Cir. 1995) .

(n23)Footnote 2. For a complete discussion of the following rules as applicable to pleadings, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

(n24)Footnote 3. Harrison v. Kovats, 224 F. Supp. 581, 583 (D.S.C. 1963) .

(n25)Footnote 4. Caldwell v. Martin Marietta Corp., 632 F.2d 1184, 1188 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n26)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e).

(n27)Footnote 6. See Smith v. Planned Parenthood, 327 F. Supp. 2d 1016, 1018-1019 (E.D. Mo. 2004) .

(n28)Footnote 7. Greenwood v. N.Y. Office of Mental Health, 842 F.2d 636, 639 (2d Cir. 1988) (plaintiff placed complaint in night depository box of court clerk after court closed for day; court ruled that action was filed on that day.).

(n29)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e); see § 9.32[1].

(n30)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n31)Footnote 10. Baldwin County Welcome Ctr. v. Brown, 466 U.S. 147, 149-150, 104 S. Ct. 1723, 80 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1984) .

(n32)Footnote 11. Roe v. New York, 49 F.R.D. 279, 281 (S.D.N.Y. 1970) (complaint that failed to properly identify plaintiffs did not commence action under Rule 3).

(n33)Footnote 12. United States ex rel. Mathews v HealthSouth Corp., 332 F.3d 293, 295-296 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n34)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c).

(n35)Footnote 14. Greenfield v. Shuck, 856 F. Supp. 705, 711 (D. Mass. 1994) .

(n36)Footnote 1. See [b], below.

(n37)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a)(1).

(n38)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a)(2).

(n39)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a), Committee Note to original rule; see also Banks v. Corr. Servs. Corp., 475 F. Supp. 2d 189, 194 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (Rule 7.1 disclosure provides current status of corporation regarding required information).

(n40)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b)(1).

(n41)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b)(2).

(n42)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b), Committee Note to original rule.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.03

§ 10.03 Statutes of Limitationn*

[1] Suit Must Be Commenced Within Applicable Time Limit

A statute of limitation is a statute that places a deadline on a person's commencement of a lawsuit for a particular type of legal claim for relief. The deadline is measured from the date a person acquires a right to bring the lawsuit, and this date is known as the date of "accrual" of the claim. n1 Statutes of limitation generally provide that a particular type of claim will be heard by the court only if the person who has the right to sue on that claim commences suit within the applicable period of time. Therefore, three determinations are necessary to answer the question of whether an action is barred by a statute of limitation: (1) a determination of what limitation period of time is applicable; (2) a determination of the time of "accrual" of the claim; and (3) whether any event triggers the stopping or "tolling" of the applicable time period. n2

[2] Determination of Applicable Limitation Period

[a] Claims Based on State Law

Under the Rules of Decision Act, n1 federal courts must follow the laws of the state in which they sit when they are hearing actions involving state law claims. n2 Thus, federal courts must apply state statutes of limitation, n3 as well as any related decisional law, in actions that are instituted in or removed to the federal court on the basis of diversity or alienage jurisdiction. n4 Furthermore, the federal court in a conflict of laws case should apply whatever statute of limitation the court of the forum state would apply. n5

[b] Claims Based on Federal Law

[i] Claim Based on Federal Statute With Specified Limitations Period

When legal rights are created by a federal statute and the statute includes its own limitations period, that limitations provision applies regardless of whether the suit is brought in a state or federal court. n6

[ii] Claim Based on Post-1990 Congressional Enactment With No Specified Limitations Period

In 1990, Congress enacted a statute of limitations that applies to all civil actions arising under any Act of Congress enacted after the effective date of the new statute of limitations, December 1, 1990. The statute specifies that any such cause of action may not be commenced later than four years after the date that the cause of action accrues. n7 This four year "catch all" statute of limitations applies whenever a post 1990 congressional enactment creates a new federal right to maintain an action. Thus, it applies both to any federal right claims congressionally created after December 1, 1990, either from newly enacted stand alone statutes or from amendments to existing statutes. n8 It is important to recognize that because Congress explicitly declined to make Section 1658 retroactive Section 1658 is applicable only to subsequently enacted federal statutes. Therefore, the statute does not displace the "borrowing" doctrines for all claims created by federal statutes enacted before 1990. n9

[iii] Claim Based on Pre-1991 Congressional Enactment With No Specified Limitations Period or Federal Common Law

If a claim is made possible by a pre-1991 congressional enactment of a federal right, or if a claim is based on federal common law and no federal statute provides for a limitations period, the federal court will generally borrow a limitations period from an appropriate source. n10 The determination of which state statute is most analogous is a question of federal law. n11 Thus, when an appropriate limitations period state is borrowed by the federal courts, the statute, in effect, becomes federal law. n12

When a federal court borrows a state statute of limitations, certain essential elements of the state construction of the statute may also be borrowed. For example, questions of tolling are also ordinarily determined in accordance with state law. n13 However, federal courts should borrow only those aspects of state law that are necessary to fill a federal void. n14 For example, even though a limitations period is borrowed from state law, the jurisprudence of a particular substantive federal statute may require that the court examine federal law in order to determine the accrual period for the statute. n15 However, if an analogous state limitations period would frustrate or interfere with the implementation of federal policies n16 or conflict with the purpose or operation of federal substantive law, n17 the federal court may borrow analogous federal law, rather than state law, for a limitations statute more consistent with the objectives of the federal right of action. n18

Both Congress and the courts have recognized that the process of "borrowing" statutes of limitations has a tendency to create inconsistencies and other problems. n19 Consequently, the Supreme Court has summarized a hierarchical process for ascertaining the appropriate limitations period for a federal cause of action when Congress has not set the time within which that type of action must be brought. First, the court must determine whether a uniform statute of limitations should be selected. The court should do so when a federal cause of action tends in practice to include numerous and diverse topics and subtopics, to the extent that a single state limitations period may not be consistently applied within a jurisdiction. Second, when a uniform limitations period is appropriate, the court must decide whether this period should be derived from a state or a federal source. In making this judgment, the court should accord particular weight to the geographic character of the claim: when the federal cause of action at issue has a multistate nature, a uniform federal statute of limitations is desirable. With the possibility of multiple state periods of limitation, the use of state statutes in such a situation presents the danger of forum shopping and complex and expensive litigation over what should be a straightforward matter. Third, even where geographic considerations give a preference to borrowing from federal statute sources, the general presumption of state borrowing requires that a court determine whether an analogous federal source actually provides a closer fit with the cause of action at issue than does any available state-law source. These three considerations will vary depending on the federal cause of action and the available state and federal analogues, and such factors as commonality of purpose and similarity of elements will be relevant. n20

[3] Tolling of Applicable Limitation Period

[a] Action Based on State Law

In federal diversity cases, tolling principles, including the time of commencement of an action, are governed by state statutes and decisional law, n1 rather than the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n2 State law governs statutes of limitation tolling principles under the Rules of Decision Act n3 and such tolling provisions are considered "substantive law" under the Erie doctrine. n4 Thus, if state law provides that an action must be "commenced" by some means other than filing a complaint, the mere filing of a complaint is insufficient to satisfy the statute of limitation. n5

[b] Action Based on Federal Law

When a cause of action is based on a federal question, the running of the applicable statute of limitation is stopped by the filing of the complaint, unless there is an explicit applicable federal law provision to the contrary. n6 This is true whether there is a directly applicable federal statute of limitation or a limitation period is borrowed from an analogous state or federal cause of action. The Supreme Court has stated that when the underlying cause of action is based on federal law and the absence of an express federal statute of limitation makes it necessary to borrow a limitation period from another statute, the action is not barred if it has been "commenced" in compliance with Rule 3 within the borrowed period. n7

When the court "borrows" a limitation rule by analogy from another federal statute, it may borrow the limitation period, the time of accrual, or any method of the tolling of the period, and may borrow each of these determinations from a different statute, depending on the policy considerations to be advanced by the borrowing from the statute. In one case, the Supreme Court decided that a uniform 4-year statute of limitation period applies for civil RICO actions. Noting that the circuits had different rules for when accrual of the action occurred, the Court also held that the accrual of the action occurs at the time the injury actually occurs and not when it is discovered by the plaintiff. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral OverviewGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsPleading & ProofGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime LimitationsGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTolling

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 3.05, 3.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Rotella v. Wood, 528 U.S. 549, 553-559, 120 S. Ct. 1075, 145 L. Ed. 2d 1047 (2000) (court borrowed accrual rule for RICO claim by analogy from claim for relief under Clayton Act; consequently, action accrued when plaintiff was injured).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Pearl v. City of Long Beach, 296 F.3d 76, 78-82 (2d Cir. 2002) , cert. denied, 538 U.S. 922 (2003) (discussion of limitation periods, accrual of claims, and tolling); Gonzales v. Wyatt, 157 F.3d 1016, 1020-1022 (5th Cir. 1998) (jurisprudence under particular substantive federal statute may require that court examine federal law in order to determine accrual period for statute); see also Young v. United States, 535 U.S. 43, 49-51, 122 S. Ct. 1036, 152 L. Ed. 2d 79 (2002) (discussion of equitable tolling).

(n4)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1652.

(n5)Footnote 2. Royal Ins. Co. of Am. v. Ru-Val Elec. Corp., 918 F. Supp. 647, 652 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n7)Footnote 4. Wells v. Simonds Abrasive Co., 345 U.S. 514, 73 S. Ct. 856, 97 L. Ed. 1211 (1953) ; Eades v.

Clark Distributing Co., Inc., 70 F.3d 441, 443-444 (6th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1157 (1996) .

(n8)Footnote 5. King v. Otasco, Inc., 861 F.2d 438, 441 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Holmberg v. Armbrecht, 327 U.S. 392, 395, 66 S. Ct. 582, 90 L. Ed. 743 (1946) ; Tribue v. United States, 826 F.2d 633, 634 (7th Cir. 1987) (action governed by limitations period of Federal Tort Claims Act).

(n10)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1658.

(n11)Footnote 8. See Jones v. R. R. Donnelley & Sons Co., 541 U.S. 369, 124 S. Ct. 1836, 158 L. Ed. 2d 645, 656 (2004) (uniform nationwide limitations period for federal cause of action is always more appropriate than rule which would apply in some States but not in others).

(n12)Footnote 9. See Jones v. R. R. Donnelley & Sons Co., 541 U.S. 369, 124 S. Ct. 1836, 158 L. Ed. 2d 645, 653 (2004) ; see [iii], below.

(n13)Footnote 10. Faibisch v. University of Minn., 304 F.3d 797, 801-802 (8th Cir. 2002) .

(n14)Footnote 11. Agency Holding Corp. v. Malley-Duff & Assoc., 483 U.S. 143, 147, 107 S. Ct. 2759, 97 L. Ed. 2d 121 (1987) .

(n15)Footnote 12. Menowitz v. Brown, 991 F.2d 36, 40-41 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 13. Rodriguez v. Holmes, 963 F.2d 799, 803 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 14. Gonzales v. Wyatt, 157 F.3d 1016, 1020 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n18)Footnote 15. Carreras-Rosa v. Alves-Cruz, 127 F.3d 172, 173 (1st Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 532 U.S. 920 (2001) .

(n19)Footnote 16. Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. EEOC, 432 U.S. 355, 367, 97 S. Ct. 2447, 53 L. Ed. 2d 402 (1977) .

(n20)Footnote 17. DelCostello v. Teamsters, 462 U.S. 151, 161, 103 S. Ct. 2281, 76 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1983) .

(n21)Footnote 18. Agency Holding Corp. v. Malley-Duff & Assoc., 483 U.S. 143, 146-156, 107 S. Ct. 2759, 97 L. Ed. 2d 121 (1987) .

(n22)Footnote 19. See Jones v. R. R. Donnelley & Sons Co., 541 U.S. 369, 124 S. Ct. 1836, 158 L. Ed. 2d 645, 655 (2004).

(n23)Footnote 20. Lampf, Pleva, Lipkind, Prupis & Petigrow v. Gilbertson, 501 U.S. 350, 357, 111 S. Ct. 2773, 115 L. Ed. 2d 321 (1991) .

(n24)Footnote 1. Walker v. Armco Steel Corp., 446 U.S. 740, 751, 100 S. Ct. 1978, 64 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1980) (state law applies in diversity actions for purposes of tolling statute of limitation period); Ragan v. Merchants Transfer & Warehouse Co., 337 U.S. 530, 532-533, 69 S. Ct. 1233, 93 L. Ed. 1520 (1949) .

(n25)Footnote 2. See Torre v. Brickey, 278 F.3d 917, 919-920 (9th Cir. 2002) (district court was correct in applying state law, rather than Fed R. Civ. Proc. 3 and 4(m), to determine when an action was commenced for purposes of applying state statute of limitation).

(n26)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1652.

(n27)Footnote 4. Ragan v. Merchants Transfer & Warehouse Co., 337 U.S. 530, 532-533, 69 S. Ct. 1233, 93 L.

Ed. 1520 (1949) (although action was filed (and therefore commenced under Rule 3) within limitation period prescribed by state law, it was nevertheless barred because state law provided that service of process had to be completed before action was "commenced"); see Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n28)Footnote 5. Habermehl v. Potter, 153 F.3d 1137, 1139 (10th Cir. 1998) (in diversity personal injury lawsuit, commencement of action was controlled by Wyoming rule, which provided that date of filing of complaint would be deemed date of commencement of case only if complaint was served within 60 days after filing); Converse v. General Motors Corp., 893 F.2d 513, 516 (2d Cir. 1990) (products liability action barred by state "service" requirements, even though complaint was filed within state limitation period).

(n29)Footnote 6. Sain v. City of Bend, 309 F.3d 1134, 1137-1138 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n30)Footnote 7. West v. Conrail, 481 U.S. 35, 38-39, 107 S. Ct. 1538, 95 L. Ed. 2d 32 (1987) (action by railroad employee against employer and union under Federal Railway Act not barred when commenced by filing pursuant to Rule 3).

(n31)Footnote 8. Rotella v. Wood, 528 U.S. 549, 551-555, 120 S. Ct. 1075, 145 L. Ed. 2d 1047 (2000) (when patient brought civil RICO action suit against physicians and their related business entities, alleging that they improperly conspired to treat and retain him at psychiatric facility for financial gain rather than his psychiatric condition, Supreme Court held that accrual of patient's action occurred when injury occurred and was not delayed until time he discovered alleged pattern of racketeering activity).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.04

§ 10.04 Provisional Remedies

[1] Seizure of Persons or Property n*

[a] Nature of Remedy

At the commencement of and throughout an action in federal court, a party has available every remedy under the law of the state where the federal court is located that provides for seizing a person or property to secure satisfaction of the potential judgment. However, if a federal statute is applicable, it governs to the extent it applies. Rule 64 authorizes the use of provisional remedies at the commencement and during the course of an action in order to secure the satisfaction of the judgment ultimately to be entered. Provisional remedies are available regardless of how the remedies are designated by state law or whether under state procedure the remedy is ancillary to an action or must be obtained by an independent action. n1 The law of the state in which the district court is held determines the types of remedies available in the particular circumstances. n2 However, the use of any of these remedies is subject both to applicable statutes of the United States and to constitutional limitations such as due process. n3 Although Rule 64 governs the procedure in the federal courts in both federal question and diversity cases, it incorporates the law of seizure "provided by the state in which the district court sits," unless an applicable federal statute or another of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides to the contrary. n4

[b] Provisional Remedies Available on Commencement of Action

The use of provisional remedies is available in federal court only after the "commencement" of an action, n5 which occurs only on the filing of a complaint. n6 Thus, a state practice allowing seizure of persons or property is not available in a federal court before the filing of a complaint. n7 Once an action has been commenced by the filing of a complaint, the defendant's property may be seized pursuant to the relevant law, even before service of summons on the defendant, provided there is a likelihood that service can be made in due course and the requirements of due process are met. n8

Rule 64 applies to actions removed from state court to federal court. However, for provisional remedies to be authorized, the rule requires an action removed from state court to be prosecuted after removal pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n9 The federal removal statute provides that all injunctions, orders, and other proceedings occurring in the state court prior to removal shall remain in effect on removal to the district court. Any attachment or garnishment made by the state court will continue in force in order to secure the final judgment. n10 After removal of a case in which property has been attached in the state court, additional property may be attached or garnished if state law permits. n11

[c] Procedure Controlled by Federal Rules

Under Rule 64, state law controls the substantive law regarding the provisional remedy, but does not affect the procedure for the underlying action, which is governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n12 In a cause of action for garnishment, for example, Federal Rule 4(c), and not a Florida rule, controlled the service of the writ of garnishment. n13 In another case, Federal Rule 13 applied to an action for replevin. n14

[d] Available Remedies

Provisional remedies are available during the pendency of a federal action under the circumstances and in the manner provided by the law of the state in which the district court is held, existing at the time the remedy is sought, except as otherwise provided by the Constitution of the United States n15 or an applicable federal statute. n16 Under Rule 64, this conformity is to the state law as it exists at the time of the commencement of the action, rather than static conformity to state law as it existed on a specified past date. n17 The following remedies are available: n17.1

1. Civil Arrest. If provided by state law, civil arrest is available as a provisional remedy. Civil arrest, which is the apprehension of a person to answer the demands in a civil action, is nearly obsolete, n18 but is still listed in Rule 64 as a provisional remedy. n19

2. Attachment. Designed to ensure that a judgment will be collectible, attachment is the seizure of the defendant's property as security before judgment. n20

3. Garnishment. Garnishment is a process by which a debt owed by a third person to the defendant, or property belonging to the defendant in the hands of a third person, is made subject to plaintiff's claim. n21

4. Replevin. Under the process of replevin, a court can compel one having wrongful possession of the personal property of another to surrender and deliver the property to the rightful owner. n22

5. Sequestration. Sequestration is the act of seizing the property of a party pending the outcome of litigation or that party's compliance. n23

6. Equivalent Remedies. Under the circumstances of a case, the particular remedy sought by the party may be an equivalent to one listed above. When faced with a motion that appears to call for a remedy listed above but is labeled something else, federal courts must look past the terminology to the actual nature of the relief requested. n24

Rule 64 was not intended to embrace all provisional remedies. Rule 65, for example, deals with the practice applicable to the equitable injunctive remedy. Under Rule 65, the court, on a sufficient showing of urgency, will issue a temporary restraining order without a hearing and, in matters of exigency, even without notice to the adverse party. n25 Such an order must be followed promptly by an application for a preliminary injunction, and strict adherence to the requirements for an injunction, such as notice and a hearing. n25.1 Rule 64 governs only the use of provisional remedies prior to judgment. n26 Other rules determine the availability of remedies after judgment. Rule 69 regulates execution to enforce a judgment. n27 Rule 70 regulates judgment for specific acts and vesting title. n28

[e] Due Process Considerations

The remedies available under Rule 64 are limited by applicable provisions of the United States Constitution. In the context of these provisional remedies, governmental deprivations of liberty or property without due process of law are prohibited by both the Fifth n29 and Fourteenth Amendments. n30 The due process considerations related to provisional remedies usually arise from the fact that such remedies are sought prior to adjudication on the merits. In this regard, a defendant risks being deprived of property even though the defendant may ultimately be vindicated after full judicial procedures. In light of this situation, the Supreme Court has applied the Constitution's due process provisions to control the scope and availability of provisional remedies. Stressing the tremendous hardship that a seizure of property may cause, the Supreme Court has required that state garnishment laws must provide notice and an opportunity to be heard prior to issuance of a writ of garnishment. n31 Once the Supreme Court found that notice and hearing were constitutionally required, it proceeded to hold that such procedural protections must be granted at a time when the deprivation of property can still be prevented. n32

The Supreme Court has also held unconstitutional a state statute authorizing prejudgment attachment of real estate without prior notice or hearing, absent a showing of extraordinary circumstances and without the required posting of a bond. The Court invoked a three-part balancing analysis to determine the process due when the government sought to effect a deprivation on its own initiative. Factors to be considered include (1) the private interest to be affected by the official action; (2) the risk of an erroneous deprivation of that interest and the probable value, if any, of additional safeguards; and (3) the government's interest in avoiding the fiscal and administrative burdens that use of additional procedures would entail. n33

[2] Proceedings Against Sureties n*

[a] Summary Procedure for Enforcement of Surety's Liaibility

Rule 65.1 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides a summary procedure for the enforcement of a surety's liability on a bond or stipulation or other undertaking presented under the federal rules. n1 The importance of this provision is that it obviates the need to bring an independent action to enforce the liability of a surety and alternatively allows for a summary procedure on motion. n2 Some of the situations involving plaintiffs in which a surety may be required or permitted by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to enter into a bond or stipulation or other undertaking are as follows:

1. Incidental to an attachment, garnishment, and other provisional remedy where state law requiring security is applicable. n3

2. As a condition to granting a restraining order n4 or preliminary injunction. n5

3. When security for costs is required by the district court pursuant to a local rule promulgated under Rule 83. n6

4. In a derivative action, when state law applies to require a plaintiff shareholder to give security as a condition to the maintenance of an action. n7

[b] Enforcement by Motion

Under federal procedure, a surety's liability may be enforced on motion without the necessity of an independent action. The motion and such notice of the motion that the court prescribes may be served on the clerk of the court, who must mail copies to the sureties if their addresses are known. n8 Thus, a judgment against a surety will not stand when notice has not been given. n9

As discussed above, Rule 65.1 provides that a motion to enforce a surety's liability may be filed after the final determination on the merits of an underlying action. n10 However, a judgment creditor has the alternative right to bring a wholly separate and independent action to enforce a surety's liability. n11 Furthermore, despite its narrow and literal wording, the summary procedure of Rule 65.1 is applicable to a principal as well as a surety on a bond. n12

[c] Surety Submits to Jurisdiction of Court

When a surety enters into a bond or stipulation or other undertaking required or permitted by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the surety irrevocably appoints the clerk of the court as the surety's agent; therefore, any papers affecting the surety's liability on the bond or undertaking may be served on the clerk. Every surety is in effect submitting to the jurisdiction of the court by becoming a surety, and the federal courts automatically obtain personal jurisdiction over a surety on any bond or stipulation or other undertaking posted under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n13 Furthermore, 28 U.S.C. § 1352 provides that the district courts have original jurisdiction, concurrent with state courts, of any action on a bond executed under any law of the United States, except matters within the jurisdiction of the Court of International Trade under 28 U.S.C. § 1582. n14 Thus, district courts have subject matter jurisdiction both over proceedings on a motion under Rule 65.1, as well as over independent actions brought to enforce the liability of a surety. n15 No jurisdictional amount is required. n16 A district court will not have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1352, however, on a suit on a bond once it has been exonerated. n17

[3] Appointment of Receiver n*

[a] Availability of Receivership

A plaintiff may request that the court appoint a receiver under the general equitable powers of the court. n1 A receiver is a person appointed to be an officer of the court to receive, collect, care for, administer, and dispose of the property or the fruits of the property of another or others brought under the orders of the court by the institution of a proper action or actions. n2 When a district court properly appoints a receiver on equitable grounds under Rule 66, n2.1 the receiver may obtain control over the property that is subject to the receivership, even if the property is not located in the district of the appointment. The receiver is entitled to control the property by filing copies of the complaint and order of appointment in the district court for each district in which receivership property is located within 10 days after the entry of his or her order of appointment. n2.2

Rule 66 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure was specifically designed to cover actions involving an equity receiver. It does not apply to receivers appointed in bankruptcy cases. The regulation of receivers appointed in bankruptcy actions is governed by the Bankruptcy Act. n3 Furthermore, the appointment of a receiver in lieu of a trustee in a bankruptcy proceeding is expressly prohibited by statute. n4

The court may appoint a receiver to preserve property pending final determination of its distribution in supplementary proceedings in the aid of execution. n5 Receivership is also an appropriate remedy for a judgment creditor who (1) seeks to set aside allegedly fraudulent conveyances by the judgment debtor; (2) has had execution issued and returned unsatisfied; (3) seeks to subject equitable assets to the payment of the judgment, or (4) is otherwise attempting to have the debtor's property preserved from dissipation until the creditor's claim can be satisfied. n6 In any event, a receivership is only a means to reach some legitimate end sought through the exercise of the power of a court of equity. It is not an end in itself. n7

Inherent in the power of the court to appoint a receiver is the power to vacate the order. n8 Thus, the court may dismiss an equity receivership and restore the property to the debtor when the debtor becomes able and offers to discharge the debts, n9 or the court may condition the continuation of a receivership on the plaintiff's prompt prosecution of the main action. n10 When the reason for continuing the receivership has ceased, the property should be released and restored to the owner. The court should not use a receivership to continue indefinitely an enterprise that does not show signs of working to the benefit of creditors. n11 Once a receivership has terminated, the receiver may still be sued in an individual capacity for improper conduct outside the scope of the appointing authority if there is in personam jurisdiction. Thus, the appointing court retains personal jurisdiction over the individual receiver and may hear suits alleging a breach of authority by the receiver toward the receivership assets. n12

[b] Grounds for Appointment of Receiver

Courts consider the appointment of a receiver to be an extraordinary equitable remedy. n13 Therefore, a court will appoint a receiver only in those situations when the circumstances are extreme and the property interests of the parties are clearly in jeopardy. n14 In this regard, the requisite showing might be analogized to the burden to demonstrate some irreparable harm and a likelihood of success on the merits in order to obtain injunctive relief, which sometimes is requested along with the request for the order appointing a receiver. n15 There is no precise formula for a federal court to determine when a receiver may be appointed. The court should consider a variety of equitable factors in making this determination, including, for example: n16

1. Whether the party seeking the appointment has a valid claim.

2. Whether the defendant has engaged in fraudulent conduct or there is a probability of fraudulent conduct by the defendant.

3. Whether the subject property is in imminent danger of being lost, concealed, damaged, diminished in value, or squandered.

4. Whether legal remedies are inadequate.

5. Whether the harm to plaintiff by denial of the appointment would outweigh injury to the party opposing appointment.

6. The plaintiff's probable success in the action and the possibility of irreparable injury to plaintiff's interest in the property.

7. The degree to which the receivership will serve the plaintiff's interests sought to be protected.

In addition to these general factors, the court will consider the other circumstances on a case-by-case basis. For example, the court may take into account the defendant's refusal to cooperate and supply material needed during discovery. n17 On the other hand, a court may refuse to appoint a receiver if the court concludes that (1) the receivership would serve more harm than good, (2) there is no imminent harm, (3) an adequate remedy exists at law, and (4) the receivership would not serve either the public interest or the interests of the parties. n18

[c] Notice and Hearing for Appointment of Receiver

When a party submits an application for the appointment of a receiver, the court must give notice to all parties concerned. n19 The Supreme Court has held that individuals generally may not be deprived of their property without notice, unless providing notice is somehow impractical. n20 However, Rule 66 does not require that a court have a formal hearing before a receiver is appointed, provided that the record discloses the necessary facts showing the equitable grounds for the appointment. n21 Any person seeking a receivership must supply the appropriate documentation to support their claims that appointment should be granted without a hearing. n22

The notice given to appoint a receiver must be adequate and fair. Factors that are considered when determining if the notice is adequate and fair include the method and scope of the notice, its duration, and the amount of time the notice affords to the opposition to prepare a reply. n23 Thus, when a receiver sent notices to all known investors who may have had a claim against the receivership property, and a separate notice was published in four newspapers, the court held that this form of notice was acceptable. n24

There are circumstances when it is not possible to give the interested parties notice. Such circumstances have to be exceptional to justify the appointment of a receiver without notice. When such relief is requested, it is known as ex parte relief, and the court must carefully review the terms of the order authorizing the receivership. It is important to ascertain whether due process was served in order to protect the property rights of all parties. For example, it is not proper for the court to grant a request for identical relief against all defendants, rather than relief pertaining specifically to each individual defendant, or to appoint a receiver after no more than cursory efforts to serve the defendant personally. n25

Rule 66 provides that practice by receivers must be in accordance with prior federal practice, subject to rules promulgated by the district courts under Rule 83. In all matters other than administration and dismissal, the action is governed by applicable statutes and other Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n26 The general intent is that an action in which a plaintiff seeks a receiver must be commenced like any other civil action and must be prosecuted in accordance with the federal rules. Thus, appointment of a receiver by a federal court is governed by federal law even in cases of diversity jurisdiction. n27

[d] Subject-Matter Jurisdiction

In order to appoint a receiver, a federal court must have subject-matter jurisdiction. n28 Thus, when a plaintiff requests appointment of a receiver, the court must first consider whether the plaintiff has alleged at least one of the following: n29

1. A federal question in a well-pleaded complaint; n30

2. Diversity of citizenship and a claim in excess of $75,000; n31 or

3. A statute setting forth a specific jurisdictional basis. n32 In most cases, the district court will obtain subject-matter jurisdiction through diversity of citizenship. n33 However, the district court will have ancillary subject-matter jurisdiction for all additional suits regardless of diversity of citizenship, amount in controversy, or any other form of relief setting forth a jurisdictional basis if the primary suit involving the appointment of the receiver was proper. Thus, if subject-matter jurisdiction was proper in the appointment of the receiver, any suit which the receiver brings in the future will be ancillary n34 or supplemental to the primary suit. n35

[e] Bond

When it appoints a receiver, the court often requires the receiver to post a bond sufficient to indemnify the parties in the litigation. However, when the primary effect of requiring a bond would cause further depletion of the property, a court will not require the posting of a bond unless it is essential to protect the interest in the property. n36 In the absence of a statute mandating the requirement of a bond, n37 the district court has wide discretion on whether to order the posting of the bond, and in determining the terms and conditions if so ordered. n38

[4] Deposit in Court n*

[a] Purpose of Deposit

If any part of a claim for relief sought is a money judgment or the disposition of a sum of money or some other deliverable thing, a party on notice to other parties and by leave of court may deposit with the court all or part of the money or thing, whether or not that party claims any of the deposited item. n1 The purpose of a deposit in court is to relieve the depositor of responsibility for a fund in dispute, while the parties litigate their differences with respect to the fund. n2 Therefore, the deposit procedure is strictly voluntary; the court has no authority to compel a party to make a deposit under Rule 67. n3 Once a party has deposited a sum of money with the court, the court has the ultimate responsibility to determine ownership and make disbursements of the sum. This is the rule even if the court determines it has no jurisdiction over the proceedings where the deposit was made. The court must then disburse the sum to the depositor or on the terms and conditions of the deposit. n3.0.1

Under Rule 67, a party is relieved of responsibility for the sum or thing deposited but may still claim an interest in all or part of it. n3.1 However, the party making the deposit may relinquish all interest in the fund or thing by clearly disavowing any interest. n4

Whether a deposit should be allowed in any particular case is a matter committed to the sound discretion of the district court and subject to review only under an abuse of discretion standard. n5 Deposits into court are commonly made in several situations: interpleader actions brought under the Federal Interpleader Act, n6 interpleader actions brought under Rule 22, n7 when the deposit is in effect an offer of settlement, n8 or when a party tenders a payment designed to stop the running of interest. n9

[b] Procedure for Deposit

A party may make a deposit in court only in actions where at least part of the relief sought is a judgment for a sum of money or the disposition of a sum of money or some thing capable of delivery. n10 The party may deposit with the court all or any part of the sum or thing in dispute. n11 While the court should allow a later assertion of a claim to the fund by the depositor, unless there is a clear and unambiguous waiver or abandonment, the safest course is for the party depositing the fund to assert any claim to the money in the motion to deposit. n12

Before any deposit is made into court, the depositor must obtain leave of the court and must give notice to all other parties. Then the party making the deposit must serve the court order permitting the deposit on the clerk of the court. n12.1 This is basically to ensure that the clerk is on notice of what is being deposited and when, so that the clerk may carry out the court's responsibilities with respect to the deposit. Notifying the clerk is necessary because funds deposited in the court must be deposited in an interest bearing account or invested in an interest bearing instrument approved by the court. n13 Once deposited with the court, the depositor is no longer responsible for the interest on the fund, which eventually will be awarded along with the funds. n14

By statute, any money paid into any court of the United States, or received by its officers must be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States or a designated depositary in the name and to the credit of the court. n15 Local rules of the district court may provide the details of how the clerk will accept and invest these funds, which can be quite large sums with correspondingly large interest earnings. n16 Once deposited, the funds may be withdrawn only by order of the court. n17 Finally, there is a statutory time limit: funds that have been on deposit with a court and not claimed for five years after the dispute has been fully and finally resolved are required to be deposited in the Treasury in the name and to the credit of the United States. n18 This time limit begins to run on the final resolution of the dispute over the fund, not from the time of the deposit in court. n19

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesCivil ArrestsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesGarnishmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesReplevins

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 64.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a), (b); see [d] below, for discussion of available provisional remedies of arrest, attachment, garnishment, replevin, sequestration, and other equivalent remedies.

(n3)Footnote 2. United States v. Cohen, 152 F.3d 321, 325-326 (4th Cir. 1998) (under Rule 64, court applied law of attachment in Virginia, which is in equity).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a); see Thomas, Head and Greisen Employees Trust v. Buster, 95 F.3d 1449, 1459 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a); see, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 2463 (property taken under any revenue law of the United States is not obtainable by replevin); 28 U.S.C. § 2713 (limits third party claim of ownership of property attached by the United States); 40 U.S.C. § 308 (United States property is not subject to attachment or seizure by other judicial process).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 3.

(n8)Footnote 7. Miller v. Gillette, 267 F.2d 783, 783 (2d Cir. 1959) ; cf. United States v. Cohen, 152 F.3d 321, 325-326 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Uranex, 451 F. Supp. 1044, 1047 (N.D. Cal. 1977) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a), 81(c)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1450.

(n12)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 1; Consumers Time Credit, Inc. v. Remark Corp., 227 F. Supp. 263, 266 (E.D. Pa. 1964) .

(n14)Footnote 13. United States v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 361 F.2d 838, 839 (5th Cir. 1966) .

(n15)Footnote 14. Wright v. Redding, 408 F. Supp. 1180, 1183 (E.D. Pa. 1975) (quoting Moore's Federal Practice).

(n16)Footnote 15. See [e], below.

(n17)Footnote 16. See [f], below.

(n18)Footnote 17. McDowell v. Davies, 96 F. Supp. 301, 304 (D. Wash. 1951) .

(n19)Footnote 17.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(b).

(n20)Footnote 18. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Markarian, 114 F.3d 346, 349 (1st Cir. 1997) .

(n21)Footnote 19. United Refrigerator Co. v. Gershel, 276 F.2d 573, 574 (2d Cir. 1960) .

(n22)Footnote 20. Ross v. Peck Iron & Metal Co., 264 F.2d 262, 268 (4th Cir. 1959) .

(n23)Footnote 21. United States v. Schuermann, 106 F. Supp. 86, 88 (E.D. Mo. 1952) .

(n24)Footnote 22. Commonwealth Trust Co. v. Reconstruction Finance Corp., 28 F. Supp. 586, 587-588 (W.D. Pa. 1939) (trustee in bankruptcy seeking to recover asset subject to fraudulent transfer by bankrupt).

(n25)Footnote 23. Altherr v. Swiss Am. of Miss., Inc., 446 F. Supp. 17, 18 (D. Miss. 1977) .

(n26)Footnote 24. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 64(a); Rosen v. Cascade International, Inc., 21 F.3d 1520, 1530 (11th Cir. 1994) (application for preliminary injunction freezing defendant's assets equivalent to request for prejudgment attachment).

(n27)Footnote 25. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n28)Footnote 25.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a).

(n29)Footnote 26. United States v. Cohen, 152 F.3d 321, 325-326 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n30)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 69.

(n31)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 70.

(n32)Footnote 29. U.S. Const. Amend. V, Cl. X.

(n33)Footnote 30. U.S. Const. Amend. XIV, § 1.

(n34)Footnote 31. Sniadach v. Family Fin. Corp., 395 U.S. 337, 340-342, 89 S. Ct. 1820, 23 L. Ed. 2d 349 (1969) .

(n35)Footnote 32. Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 81, 92 S. Ct. 1983, 32 L. Ed. 2d 556 (1972) .

(n36)Footnote 33. Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 335, 96 S. Ct. 893, 47 L. Ed. 2d 18 (1976) .

(n37)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.1.02 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n38)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65.1.

(n39)Footnote 2. See [b], below.

(n40)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 64; see [1], above.

(n41)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n42)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a), (c).

(n43)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83.

(n44)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(a); Cohen v. Beneficial Indus. Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 555-557, 69 S. Ct. 1221, 93 L. Ed. 1528 (1949) .

(n45)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65.1; United States v. Lacey, 982 F.2d 410, 412-413 & n.2 (10th Cir. 1992) .

(n46)Footnote 9. Beatrice Foods Co. v. New England Printing & Lithographing Co., 930 F.2d 1572, 1576-1577 (Fed. Cir. 1991) (sufficient notice of motion to execute surety's bond was provided by notice sent in response to motion to enforce bond).

(n47)Footnote 10. Nintendo of Am., Inc. v. Lewis Galoob Toys, Inc., 16 F.3d 1032, 1033 (9th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 115 S. Ct. 85 (1994) .

(n48)Footnote 11. American Bible Soc'y v. Blount, 446 F.2d 588, 590 (3d Cir. 1971) .

(n49)Footnote 12. Connecticut Hosp. Ass'n v. O'Neill, 891 F. Supp. 693, 694 n.1 (D. Conn. 1995) .

(n50)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65.1.

(n51)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1352.

(n52)Footnote 15. Buddy Sys., Inc. v. Exer-Genie, Inc., 545 F.2d 1164, 1169 (9th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 431 U.S. 903 (1977) .

(n53)Footnote 16. 28 U.S.C. § 1352.

(n54)Footnote 17. Buddy Sys., Inc. v. Exer-Genie, Inc., 545 F.2d 1164, 1165 (9th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 431 U.S. 903 (1977) .

(n55)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 66.02 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n56)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 66.

(n57)Footnote 2. Booth v. Clark, 58 U.S. 322, 331, 15 L. Ed. 164 (1854) ; Commissioner v. Owens, 78 F.2d 768 (10th Cir. 1935) .

(n58)Footnote 2.1. See [b], below.

(n59)Footnote 2.2. SEC v. Bilzerian, 378 F.3d 1100, 1103-1104 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; requirement of minimum contacts with state of receivership is inapplicable when court exercises personal jurisdiction pursuant to nationwide service of process); see 28 U.S.C. §§ 754, 1692.

(n60)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 66, Advisory Committee Note of 1946.

(n61)Footnote 4. 11 U.S.C. § 105(b).

(n62)Footnote 5. Santibanez v. Wier McMahon & Co., 105 F.3d 234, 241-242 (5th Cir. 1997) (any person may seek appointment of receiver under Rule 66 when person establishes interest in particular property or relation to party in control or ownership of property such as to justify conservation of property by court officer).

(n63)Footnote 6. Santibanez v. Wier McMahon & Co., 105 F.3d 234, 241-242 (5th Cir. 1997) .

(n64)Footnote 7. Kelleam v. Maryland Casualty Co., 312 U.S. 377, 381, 61 S. Ct. 595, 85 L. Ed. 899 (1941) ; National Pshp. Inv. Corp. v. National Hous. Dev. Corp., 153 F.3d 1289, 1292 (11th Cir. 1998) (receivership is equitable remedy not substantive right).

(n65)Footnote 8. United States v. Amodeo, 44 F.3d 141, 146 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n66)Footnote 9. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. PSL Realty Co., 630 F.2d 515, 521 (7th Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 961 (1981) .

(n67)Footnote 10. See Strategis Asset Valuation & Management, Inc. v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co., 805 F. Supp. 1544, 1553 (D. Colo. 1992) .

(n68)Footnote 11. Jones v. Village of Proctorville, 332 F.2d 419, 421 (6th Cir. 1964) .

(n69)Footnote 12. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. PSL Realty Co., 630 F.2d 515, 521 (7th Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 961 (1981) .

(n70)Footnote 13. National Pshp. Inv. Corp. v. National Hous. Dev. Corp., 153 F.3d 1289, 1291 (11th Cir. 1998) (appointment of receiver in equity is not substantive right, but is an ancillary remedy which does not affect ultimate outcome of action).

(n71)Footnote 14. Aviation Supply Corp. v. R.S.B.I. Aerospace, Inc., 999 F.2d 314, 316-317 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n72)Footnote 15. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Watt West Inv. Corp., 755 F. Supp. 287, 292-293 (E.D. Cal. 1991) .

(n73)Footnote 16. Can. Life Assur. Co. v. LaPeter, 557 F.3d 1103, 1104 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n74)Footnote 17. United States v. Ianniello, 824 F.2d 203, 208 (2d Cir. 1987) (not violation of Fifth Amendment for district court to draw negative inference from defendants' refusal to answer questions relating to restaurant operations in considering whether to appoint receiver to prevent conversion of restaurant profits).

(n75)Footnote 18. Meyer Jewelry Co. v. Meyer Holdings, Inc., 906 F. Supp. 428, 432-434 (E.D. Mich. 1995) (court declined to appoint receiver when corporate wrongs alleged by movants were clearly compensable by money damages).

(n76)Footnote 19. Solis v. Matheson, 563 F.3d 425, 438 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n77)Footnote 20. Connecticut v. Doehr, 501 U.S. 1, 12, 111 S. Ct. 2105, 115 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1991) .

(n78)Footnote 21. Citronelle-Mobile Gathering, Inc. v. Watkins, 934 F.2d 1180, 1188-1189 (11th Cir. 1991) ; Resolution Trust Corp. v. Fountain Circle Assoc. Ltd. P'ship, 799 F. Supp. 48 (N.D. Ohio 1992) .

(n79)Footnote 22. United States v. Ianniello, 824 F.2d 203, 207 (2d Cir. 1987) (district court properly refused to hold plenary hearing on government's motion to appoint receiver when such hearing would not provide court with additional information because defendants asserted Fifth Amendment protection).

(n80)Footnote 23. See Solis v. Matheson, 563 F.3d 425, 439 (9th Cir. 2009) ; Sterling Sav. Bank v. Citadel Dev. Co., 656 F. Supp. 2d 1248, 1260 (D. Or. 2009).

(n81)Footnote 24. SEC v. Hardy, 803 F.2d 1034, 1038 (9th Cir. 1986) (over two months notice of receivership action was fair and reasonable where receiver sent notice to all known investors and published separate notice in four local newspapers that clearly stated deadline for filing claim).

(n82)Footnote 25. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. Spark Tarrytown, Inc., 813 F. Supp. 234, 236-237 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n83)Footnote 26. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 66, Advisory Committee Note of 1946.

(n84)Footnote 27. National Pshp. Inv. Corp. v. National Hous. Dev. Corp., 153 F.3d 1289, 1292 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n85)Footnote 28. See Crawford v. Silette, 608 F.3d 275 (5th Cir. 2010) .

(n86)Footnote 29. See, e.g., National Pshp. Inv. Corp. v. National Hous. Dev. Corp., 153 F.3d 1289, 1291 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n87)Footnote 30. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n88)Footnote 31. 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n89)Footnote 32. 28 U.S.C. § 1345.

(n90)Footnote 33. See, e.g., National Pshp. Inv. Corp. v. National Hous. Dev. Corp., 153 F.3d 1289, 1291 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n91)Footnote 34. United States v. Franklin Nat'l Bank, 512 F.2d 245, 249-250 (2d Cir. 1975) .

(n92)Footnote 35. O'Neal v. General Motors Corp., 841 F. Supp. 391, 395 (M.D. Fla. 1993) .

(n93)Footnote 36. SEC v. Universal Fin., 760 F.2d 1034, 1039 (9th Cir. 1985) (district court did not abuse discretion in failing to require receiver to post bond to indemnify investors when posting bond would further diminish value of receivership estate).

(n94)Footnote 37. See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 754; SEC v. Bilzerian, 378 F.3d 1100, 1103-1104 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (bond required by Section 754 is necessary for appointing court to exercise in personam jurisdiction over person or entity that holds receivership assets in remote district).

(n95)Footnote 38. FTC v. World Wide Factors, Ltd., 882 F.2d 344, 348 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n96)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 67.02, 67.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n97)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(a).

(n98)Footnote 2. Cajun Elec. Power Coop., Inc. v. Riley Stoker Corp., 901 F.2d 441, 444-445 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n99)Footnote 3. Rogath v. Siebenmann, 941 F. Supp. 416, 425 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n100)Footnote 3.0.1. Craig's Stores of Tex., Inc. v. Bank of La., 402 F.3d 522, 523-524 (5th Cir. Tex. 2005) .

(n101)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(a).

(n102)Footnote 4. See Veillon v. Exploration Servs., Inc., 876 F.2d 1197, 1201 (5th Cir. 1989) (depositing party relinquished interest in insurance proceeds by disavowing any interest in fund at pre-trial hearing).

(n103)Footnote 5. Cajun Elec. Power Coop., Inc. v. Riley Stoker Corp., 901 F.2d 441, 445 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n104)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a)(2).

(n105)Footnote 7. John v. Sotheby's, Inc., 141 F.R.D. 29, 33 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n106)Footnote 8. Smith v. Martin, 336 F.2d 142, 144 (10th Cir. 1964) .

(n107)Footnote 9. United States ex rel Garrett v. Midwest Constr. Co., 619 F.2d 349, 353-354 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n108)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(a); Gulf States Utils. Co. v. Alabama Power Co., 824 F.2d 1465, 1474-1475 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n109)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(a).

(n110)Footnote 12. Veillon v. Exploration Servs. Inc., 876 F.2d 1197, 1201 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n111)Footnote 12.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(a).

(n112)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(b).

(n113)Footnote 14. Cordero v. De Jesus-Mendez, 922 F.2d 11, 18-19 (1st Cir. 1990) (defendants not liable for post-judgment interest when court failed to deposit funds in interest bearing account).

(n114)Footnote 15. 28 U.S.C. § 2041; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(b).

(n115)Footnote 16. National Indem. Co. v. Grimm, 760 F. Supp. 489, 490 n.2, 494 (W.D. Pa. 1991) .

(n116)Footnote 17. 28 U.S.C. § 2042.

(n117)Footnote 18. See 28 U.S.C. § 2042; Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(b); see also Craig's Stores of Tex., Inc. v. Bank of La., 402 F.3d 522, 525 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n118)Footnote 19. See Folding Carton Antitrust Litig., 744 F.2d 1252, 1254-1256 (7th Cir. 1984) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.05

§ 10.05 Plaintiff's Pleading of Jurisdictionn*

[1] Existence of Jurisdiction Determined at Commencement of Action

Whether a court has subject matter jurisdiction depends on the circumstances that exist at the time the action is commenced. For example, whether there is diversity jurisdiction is determined at the time the lawsuit is commenced pursuant to Rule 3. n1 Furthermore, if a court has subject matter jurisdiction at the time an action commenced subsequent statutory amendments that would otherwise defeat jurisdiction do not apply. n2 However, the act of filing a complaint pursuant to Rule 3 does not by itself confer subject matter jurisdiction on the court, n3 because subject matter jurisdiction is governed by statutory authorization. n4 Conversely, failure to properly commence an action under Rule 3 does not remove subject matter jurisdiction over a matter that the court already possesses. n5

Commencement of an action by filing a complaint does not provide a federal court with personal jurisdiction over a particular defendant. Personal jurisdiction over a defendant depends on proper service and the amount of contact the particular defendant has with the forum jurisdiction. n6 However, personal jurisdiction over a defendant is not necessary to commence an action under Rule 3; proper service establishing jurisdiction may occur later. n7

[2] Manner of Pleading Jurisdiction

[a] Statement of Jurisdiction

Any pleading which states a claim for relief must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds that give the court jurisdiction, unless the court already has jurisdiction and the claim needs no new ground of jurisdiction to support it. Therefore, an original plaintiff commencing a civil action in a federal district court must always plead the basis for jurisdiction. n1 Jurisdiction under Rule 8 refers to subject matter jurisdiction. Subject matter jurisdiction is required because federal district courts are courts of limited jurisdiction. Pursuant to Article III of the Constitution, Congress created the federal district courts and granted them exclusive jurisdiction in matters involving admiralty, bankruptcy, patents, copyrights and trademarks, and concurrent jurisdiction with the state courts in federal question and diversity of citizenship cases. n2

The requirements of a complaint for each of these grounds for subject matter jurisdiction will be discussed below. n3 A statement of jurisdiction may either refer to the appropriate jurisdictional statute or contain factual assertions that establish jurisdiction. Thus, if a complaint alleges sufficient facts to establish jurisdiction, the party need not make a statement of the precise statutory basis for subject matter jurisdiction, n4 although it is generally considered good practice to do so. n4.1 Lack of subject matter jurisdiction is not waivable in the trial court and may even be raised sua sponte by the court. n5 By contrast, lack of personal jurisdiction is a defense that is waivable by a defending party. n6

[b] Pleading Federal Question Jurisdiction

A federal district court has subject matter jurisdiction over all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States. n7 Federal question jurisdiction exists only when a claimant's basis for recovery, rather than a defense to a claim for relief, is based on federal law. n8 No minimum amount in controversy is necessary to establish general federal question jurisdiction. n9

Federal question jurisdiction arises only those cases in which a well pleaded complaint establishes either that federal law creates the cause of action or that the plaintiff's right to relief necessarily depends on resolution of a substantial question of federal law. Consequently, the complaint should set forth the facts that show a claim is based on a violation of the Constitution, a particular federal statute, or the federal common law. n9.1

A formal allegation of jurisdiction is simple to set forth, but it is important to note that a general allegation of jurisdiction must be supported by a short and plain statement of a factual situation showing that a claim exists based on the stated jurisdiction. n10 The claimant may decide what law will be relied on, and the court must look to the manner in which the claim is pleaded to see if a substantial federal question is presented. n11

An allegation of general federal question jurisdiction under Rule 8(a)(1) should be stated simply, usually in the first paragraph of the body of the complaint stating a claim for relief. The safer practice is to include a specific reference to the particular section of the Constitution, statute, or treaty that supplies the basis for recovery, n12 although such a reference is not strictly required provided that the complaint, read as a whole, establishes the presence of a federal question. n13

In cases when federal common law is the basis for federal question jurisdiction, a reference to the relevant case establishing the law and a description of the case's holding apparently is sufficient to provide the general notice required by Rule 8. n14

Whether a complaint adequately states a federal question is normally measured by the face of the complaint. However, a plaintiff who chooses to proceed in state court on a potential federal question may not defeat a defendant's right to remove a case to federal court by artful pleading, that is, by omitting discussion of the federal questions that are in fact central to the suit. n15

[c] Pleading Diversity Jurisdiction

[i] General Requirements: Amount in Controversy and Citizenship of Parties

A claim alleging diversity of citizenship jurisdiction must contain averments of the parties' citizenship and the amount in controversy. n16 In general, a federal district court may exercise general diversity jurisdiction over all civil actions in which the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and in which the matter in controversy is between (a) citizens of different states; (b) citizens of a state and citizens or subjects of a foreign state; (c) citizens of different states and in which citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties; or (d) A foreign state as plaintiff and citizens of a state or of different states. n17 A plaintiff filing a complaint must specifically allege both the amount in controversy and citizenship of the parties, usually in the opening paragraph of the complaint, even if an express citation or reference is made to the diversity statute. A court will deem insufficient a complaint that does not address the amount in controversy and each party's citizenship. n18 However, a failure to expressly refer to the diversity statute is not fatal if the facts necessary to establish diversity are pleaded. n19

[ii] Citizenship of Individual

A complaint that relies on general diversity jurisdiction must explicitly allege facts that show that each complaining party is of diverse citizenship from each defending party. This is commonly characterized as the complete diversity requirement, n20 in contrast to the "minimal" diversity that is permitted under the interpleader act. n21 Citizenship of the parties sufficient to establish diversity should be distinctly and affirmatively averred. An allegation that a person is a resident of a certain state or foreign country is not a sufficient allegation of his or her citizenship, because residence is not the equivalent of citizenship. n22

A party making an allegation of the citizenship of an individual should state that the individual is a citizen of a particular state or foreign country. n23 In general, an individual who is a United States citizen may be a citizen of only one state at any time. Citizenship is based on the same criteria used to define domicile for personal jurisdiction purposes. n24 Individual United States citizens living in United States territories, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico are deemed citizens of "states" for diversity purposes. n25 Individuals who are citizens or subjects of a foreign country are deemed citizens of the state of the United States in which they are domiciled if they are aliens admitted to the United States for permanent residence. Otherwise, they are deemed citizens of the foreign country and must be pleaded as such. n26

[iii] Citizenship of Legal Entities

When a party makes an allegation of citizenship of a corporation, the party must indicate the states of citizenship of the corporation. Unlike an individual, n27 a corporation may have two or more states of citizenship for general diversity purposes. n28 Thus, a corporation is deemed a citizen of any state in which it is incorporated and also of the state where it has its principal place of business. n29

When a party makes an allegation of citizenship of a partnership or unincorporated association, the party must specify the particular states of citizenship of each partner or member. Partnerships and unincorporated associations lack their own citizenship for purposes of the general diversity statute. Rather, the citizenship of any unincorporated entity, including partnerships and unincorporated associations, is determined by the citizenship of each of its owners or members. n29.1 In a partnership, every partner (including limited partners in a limited partnership) must be of diverse citizenship from the party or parties opposing the partnership in the litigation. This is so even if state law permits a partnership to sue or be sued in its firm name. n30 Similarly, each member of an unincorporated association must be of diverse citizenship from that of any party or parties opposing the association. n31 Thus, the citizenship of any entity other than a corporation is the citizenship of each of its members, and this rule applies to any type of association that has not been incorporated, including a joint venture, n32 and the most recently created unincorporated association, a limited liability company. n33

A state of the United States is not a citizen for purposes of general diversity jurisdiction. n34 However, a municipal corporation, a county, or some other political subdivision of a state is a citizen of the state in which it is located, n35 unless it is merely an arm or the alter ego of the state. n36 For a more detailed discussion of the citizenship of corporations and other entities for diversity jurisdiction purposes, see § 5.06.

[iv] Amount in Controversy

A complaint that relies on general diversity jurisdiction must allege that the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs. n37 It is not necessary for a party to set forth a detailed description of the composition of the amount. n38 In general, all that a plaintiff must set forth in the complaint is a good faith allegation that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional amount, and a court will not dismiss unless it appears to a legal certainty that the claim is for less than the jurisdictional amount. n39

An adverse party, or the court on its own motion, may challenge an allegation of the jurisdictional amount. n40 Whether the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000 is usually determined from the perspective and pleading of the party invoking jurisdiction, and the amount is determined as of the time subject matter jurisdiction is first invoked, which is the time of the filing of the complaint. The legal certainty test may not be applicable when the plaintiff alleges only an indeterminate amount of damages, so such an allegation should be avoided. n41

[d] Pleading Jurisdiction Under Special Jurisdictional Statutes

If jurisdiction is based on a special jurisdictional statute, the plaintiff should make reference to the statute in the first paragraph of the pleading, n41.1 and should make specific factual averments in the body of the pleading demonstrating that the statute applies. n42 Examples of special federal question statutes include statutory provisions on patents, copyrights, and trademarks, n43 antitrust, n44 enforcement of orders related to interstate commerce, n45 federal tax matters, n46 postal matters, n47 civil rights matters, n48 actions against the United States under the Torts Claims Act, n49 claims under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, n50 and under the Federal Employers' Liability Act. n51

If a complaint is based on a claim under admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, n52 or under the Merchant Marine Act, n53 the plaintiff should include allegations of fact demonstrating the applicability of admiralty or maritime authority are required. To invoke admiralty status under Rule 9(h), the complaint should state that the claim is an admiralty or maritime claim within the meaning of Rule 9(h). n54

In the federal courts, suits are commonly filed by prisoners and inmates of federal institutions to redress violations of their civil rights. n55 Congress has recently limited access to courts for prisoners who have not suffered from physical harm. Under the federal Tort Claims Act, the federal district courts have exclusive jurisdiction of civil actions on claims against the United States or its agents for money damages for personal injury or death caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission. However, under the recent restriction imposed by Congress, no person convicted of a felony who is incarcerated may bring a civil action against the United States or employee of the government for mental or emotional injury suffered while in custody without a prior showing of physical injury. Therefore, physical injury should be alleged in the complaint. n56

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Northern Trust Co. v. Bunge Corp., 899 F.2d 591, 596 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Gaunce v. De Vincentis, 708 F.2d 1290, 1293-1294 (7th Cir. 1983).

(n4)Footnote 3. United States ex rel. FTC v. Larkin, 841 F. Supp. 899, 903 (D. Minn. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1331 et seq; see [2], below, for requirements for pleading jurisdiction.

(n6)Footnote 5. Schlesinger v. Councilman, 420 U.S. 738, 742 n.5, 95 S. Ct. 1300, 43 L. Ed. 2d 591 (1975) .

(n7)Footnote 6. International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 316, 66 S. Ct. 154 (1945) ; see [2], below, for requirements for pleading jurisdiction.

(n8)Footnote 7. Caldwell v. Martin Marietta Corp., 632 F.2d 1184, 1188 (11th Cir. 1980) (statute of limitation tolled on commencement of action, which occurs when complaint is filed and not when service is complete).

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(1).

(n10)Footnote 2. U.S. Const. Art. III; 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331-1365.

(n11)Footnote 3. See [b], below (federal question jurisdiction); [c], below (diversity jurisdiction); [d], below (special jurisdictional statutes).

(n12)Footnote 4. Elliott v. Tilton, 62 F.3d 725, 728 (5th Cir. 1995) (Rule 8(a)(1) does not require citation of statute by name or number).

(n13)Footnote 4.1. Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(b).

(n14)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3).

(n15)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2), 12(h)(1).

(n16)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n17)Footnote 8. See Rivet v. Regions Bank, 522 U.S. 470, 118 S. Ct. 921, 925, 139 L. Ed. 2d 912 (1998) (presence or absence of federal-question jurisdiction is determined by whether federal issue is presented on face of properly pleaded complaint).

(n18)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n19)Footnote 9.1. Interstate Petroleum Corp. v. Morgan, 249 F.3d 215, 220 (4th Cir. 2001) (trial court lacked federal question jurisdiction when complaint stated only that court had subject matter jurisdiction "based on federal question jurisdiction pursuant to Petroleum Marketing Practices Act," complaint made no claim that defendant violated any provision of Act, did not allege facts showing violation of Act, and alleged only facts that established breach of contract).

(n20)Footnote 10. Household Bank v. JFS Group, 320 F.3d 1249, 1251 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n21)Footnote 11. Gober v. Terra + Corporation, 100 F.3d 1195, 1207 (5th Cir. 1996) (plaintiff's allegations did not satisfy requirements for federal question jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1331 or diversity jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1332).

(n22)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(b).

(n23)Footnote 13. Reich v. Tiller Helicopter Servs., Inc., 8 F.3d 1018, 1032 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n24)Footnote 14. Texas Indus., Inc. v. Radcliff Materials, Inc., 451 U.S. 630, 640, 101 S. Ct. 2061, 68 L. Ed. 2d 500 (1981) ; Ivy Broadcasting Co. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 391 F.2d 486, 492 (2d Cir. 1968) .

(n25)Footnote 15. Rivet v. Regions Bank, 522 U.S. 470, 475, 118 S. Ct. 921, 139 L. Ed. 2d 912 (1998) .

(n26)Footnote 16. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n27)Footnote 17. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n28)Footnote 18. Hammes v. Aamco Transmissions, Inc., 33 F.3d 774, 778 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n29)Footnote 19. Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 234 n.2, 94 S. Ct. 1683, 40 L. Ed. 2d 90, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 474 (1974) .

(n30)Footnote 20. Howell v. Tribune Entertainment Company, 106 F.3d 215, 218 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n31)Footnote 21. See 28 U.S.C. § 1335.

(n32)Footnote 22. Guaranty Nat'l Title Co. v. J.E.G. Assocs., 101 F.3d 57, 59 (7th Cir. 1996) (when parties allege residence but not citizenship, court must dismiss suit); Strain v. Harrelson Rubber Co., 742 F.2d 888, 889 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n33)Footnote 23. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(a).

(n34)Footnote 24. Whitelock v. Leatherman, 460 F.2d 507, 514-515 (10th Cir. 1972) .

(n35)Footnote 25. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d).

(n36)Footnote 26. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n37)Footnote 27. See [ii], above.

(n38)Footnote 28. In re Balfour MacLaine International, Limited, 85 F.3d 68, 76 (2d Cir. 1996) (for purposes of federal court's diversity jurisdiction, corporation may have dual citizenship).

(n39)Footnote 29. 28 U.S.C. § 1332; Illinois Cent. Gulf R.R. v. Pargas, Inc., 706 F.2d 633, 638 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n40)Footnote 29.1. Iraola & Cia v. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 232 F.3d 854, 860 (11th Cir. 2000) (federal courts do not have diversity jurisdiction over cases where there are foreign entities on both sides of action, without presence of citizens of state on both sides of action).

(n41)Footnote 30. Carden v. Arkoma Assoc., 494 U.S. 185, 195-196, 110 S. Ct. 1015, 108 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1990) ; Guaranty Nat'l Title Co. v. J.E.G. Assocs., 101 F.3d 57, 59 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(N42)Footnote 31. Carden v. Arkoma Assoc., 494 U.S. 185, 195-196, 110 S. Ct. 1015, 108 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1990) (diversity jurisdiction in suit by or against entity depends on citizenship of all the members of entity).

(n43)Footnote 32. Schiavone Constr. Co. v. City of New York, 99 F.3d 546, 548 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n44)Footnote 33. International Flavors & Textures, LLC v. Gardner, 966 F. Supp. 552, 554-555 (W.D. Mich. 1997) .

(n45)Footnote 34. Petroleum Exploration, Inc. v. Public Serv. Comm'n, 304 U.S. 209, 217, 58 S. Ct. 834, 82 L. Ed. 1294 (1938) .

(n46)Footnote 35. Moor v. County of Alameda, 411 U.S. 693, 717, 93 S. Ct. 1785, 36 L. Ed. 2d 596 (1973) .

(n47)Footnote 36. State Highway Comm'n v. Utah Constr. Co., 278 U.S. 194, 199, 49 S. Ct. 104, 73 L. Ed. 262 (1929) (no diversity because state highway commission was merely arm of state).

(n48)Footnote 37. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n49)Footnote 38. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(a).

(n50)Footnote 39. St. Paul Reinsurance Co. v. Greenberg, 134 F.3d 1250, 1254-1255 (5th Cir. 1998) (in ascertaining amount in controversy for diversity jurisdiction in insurance cases, court can consider policy limits, potential attorney fees, penalties, statutory damages, and punitive damages, when insurer could be liable for those sums under state law).

(n51)Footnote 40. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n52)Footnote 41. De Aguilar v. Boeing Co., 47 F.3d 1404, 1408-1411 (5th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 865 (1995) (allegation of indeterminate amount of damages insufficient).

(n53)Footnote 41.1. Cf. Doe v. Norwich Roman Catholic Corp., 606 F. Supp. 2d 244, 245 (D. Conn. 2009) .

(n54)Footnote 42. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(b).

(n55)Footnote 43. 28 U.S.C. § 1338.

(n56)Footnote 44. 28 U.S.C. § 1337.

(n57)Footnote 45. 28 U.S.C. § 1337.

(n58)Footnote 46. 28 U.S.C. § 1340.

(n59)Footnote 47. 28 U.S.C. § 1339.

(n60)Footnote 48. 28 U.S.C. § 1343.

(n61)Footnote 49. 28 U.S.C. § 1346.

(n62)Footnote 50. 28 U.S.C. § 1132(e).

(n63)Footnote 51. 45 U.S.C. § 56.

(n64)Footnote 52. 28 U.S.C. § 1333.

(n65)Footnote 53. 46 U.S.C. App. § 688.

(n66)Footnote 54. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 7(c); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h).

(n67)Footnote 55. See, e.g., Women Prisoners of the Dist. of Columbia Dep't of Corrections v. Dist. of Columbia, 93 F.3d 910, 923 (D.C. Cir. 1996) .

(n68)Footnote 56. 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b)(1).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.06

§ 10.06 Pleading Claim for Reliefn*

[1] Short and Plain Statement of Claim

[a] Notice Pleading Standard

Every complaint must set forth a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the plaintiff is entitled to relief. n1 Thus, Rule 8(a)(2) specifies a notice pleading standard, which means that the purpose of the complaint is to provide adequate notice to the defendant of the plaintiff's claims prior to the time of discovery. Consequently, there is no requirement that the plaintiff plead all of the detailed facts to establish each element of a prima facie case for the particular claim. However, to even reach the discovery stage, notice pleading requires a minimum threshold of factual notice. n2 Thus, notice pleading requires at the minimum that the allegations give the opposition fair notice of the claim, n3 by stating a minimum factual basis of the claim. n4 However, in more complex cases, the plaintiff may be required to factually address most of the essential elements of the claim. n5

The Rule 8 notice pleading standard applies to all civil cases in federal court. n6 Even in diversity cases, state pleading law does not govern the question of the procedural adequacy of federal court pleadings. n7 Rule 8 is to be construed in the light of reason and common sense, to accomplish the goal that all complaints must be so construed as to do substantial justice. n8 The rule is fashioned in the interest of fair and reasonable notice, not technicality. The test is whether the complaint factually specifies a wrong the plaintiff has suffered and connects the violation to the named defendants. n9

[b] Detail Required in Statement Depends on Circumstances of Case

Whether a statement of a claim is sufficient to give fair notice depends on the circumstances of the case; it is a context specific issue that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense. n10 The pleading requirements are not tied to rigid standards of the elements of a cause of action. However, a court may impose heightened pleading requirements for a particular case, but only when such requirements are found in the federal rules, such as the Rule 9(b) requirement that when pleading fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake must be stated with particularity. n11 Additionally, in complex cases, the plaintiff may have to plead facts regarding many or most of the essential elements of a claim to inform the defendant of the nature of the claim. n12

The court should determine the adequacy of a pro se pleading under a more liberal standard than pleading drafted by attorneys. n13 Although the pleadings of pro se plaintiffs are held to less stringent standards, even a pro se complaint will eventually be dismissed for a Rule 8(a)(2) violation if the claimant fails to state a claim for relief after being afforded more than one opportunity to amend. n14

The court should determine the adequacy of a pro se pleading under an even more liberal standard than pleading drafted by attorneys. n15 Although the pleadings of pro se plaintiffs are held to less stringent standards, even a pro se complaint will eventually be dismissed for Rule 8 violations if the claimant fails to state a claim for relief after being afforded at least a few opportunities to amend. n16

[2] Notice to Defendant is Sufficient

[a] Allegations of Facts

To survive a motion to dismiss based on the notice pleading standard, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. The "plausibility" standard is not equivalent to a "probability" requirement; rather, it requires only more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted wrongfully. Therefore if a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a defendant's liability, it does not satisfy the plausibility requirement. n1

Based on these principles, a court evaluating the sufficiency of a complaint should use a two step approach: n2

> (1) The first step is for the court to identify pleadings that, because they are no more than conclusions, are not entitled to the assumption of truth. While legal conclusions can provide the framework of a complaint, they must be supported by factual allegations; bald accusations or recitals of legal elements are insufficient without facts. n3 When there are well pleaded factual allegations, a court may assume the veracity of those facts and go to the second step.
>
> (2) In the second step, the court must consider whether the factual allegations that have been asserted in the complaint plausibly suggest an entitlement to relief. Under this step, the court must determine if the there are enough facts to raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence of the alleged wrongdoing. In other words, a claim has facial plausibility if the plaintiff pleads enough factual content to allow the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the wrongdoing.

Once the plaintiff alleges facts sufficient to state a claim, even if the claim does set forth a legal theory, any relief finally granted is not limited strictly to that theory. n4 Thus, the federal rules permit a plaintiff to set forth simultaneously several legal claims, regardless of consistency, n5 and also alternative or hypothetical claims. n6

[b] Surplusage Does Not Necessarily Invalidate Claim

Mere surplusage in allegations is generally not fatal to a claim for relief. Surplusage in a complaint must be extreme before it is grounds to dismiss. Nonetheless, the plaintiff should ordinarily avoid pleading evidence because it may violate the short and plain statement requirement of Rule 8(e)(1). However, when pleading evidence is harmless, or if it assists in providing fair notice, it is tolerated. n7 Another principle that has developed under notice pleading is that excess length in a pleading is not necessarily a fatal defect, because all complaints must be construed as to do substantial justice. n8 For example, the fact that a 12-page complaint in an employment discrimination case was longer than necessary and longer than a model complaint and that most averments in the complaint after page five were unnecessary was not sufficient to justify a dismissal on the grounds that the complaint was not a short and plain statement of the claim. The court reasoned that although the complaint could be improved, it was intelligible and gave the defendants notice of the claim for relief. n9

[c] Merely Conclusory Allegations Insufficient

Although the notice pleading standard does not require all of the detailed factual allegations that could be asserted for a claim, it requires more than a bald accusation that the defendant unlawfully harmed the plaintiff. n10 A pleading that offers mere labels and conclusions or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action is not sufficient without any factual statements. n11

To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true by the court, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. n12 A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct asserted. On the other hand, a conclusory allegation is one that simply declares that the defendant violated some ultimate legal standard that is at issue. A statement of a claim meets the notice pleading standard if it asserts facts that describe the defendant's conduct which imply a violation of a legal standard, such as the conduct that constituted the wrong. n13

As an example, if a claim requires an allegation of "competition" to be plausible, it is insufficient for the plaintiff to merely allege that it is a competitor of the defendant; rather, the plaintiff must allege the facts establishing that status, such as it makes direct sales in the same location as the defendant. n14

[3] Party May Make Statement of Claim on Information and Belief

Rule 8 does not expressly permit statements supporting claims for relief to be made on information and belief. n1 However, Rule 11 permits a claimant, after reasonable inquiry, to set forth allegations that are likely to have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery. n2 The policy underlying Rule 8 taken together with Rule 11 permits claimants to aver facts that they believe to be true but that lack evidentiary support at the time of pleading. n3

[4] Official Forms Are Sufficient as Pleadings

Official forms are provided in the Appendix accompanying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Parties in federal civil actions have the option to use these forms when pleading because the forms are deemed "sufficient under the rules and are intended to indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement which the rules contemplate." n1 Given the Rule 8(a)(2) requirement that each pleading that states a claim for relief must contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing the facts that the pleader is entitled to relief, the best practice would be to always include such a factual statement in any Official Form used; counsel must also consider the landmark Iqbal and Twombly cases on pleading standards, which in some cases may call for more specificity than is required in the Official Forms. n2 The complexity of many actions and claims in modern litigation, and the availability of many detailed, factual, and specialized legal forms from bar associations and legal publishing vendors also warrants use of factual statements. Courts do not require verbatim use of the official forms, except when specified in another rule or statute. n3

[5] Special Pleading Requirements

Congress has retained authority to enact laws pertaining to federal civil procedure and to change pleading requirements by statute. n1 For example, the Immigration and Nationality Act requires that a complaint contain an affidavit of good cause. The Supreme Court has held that the affidavit "must be filed with the complaint when the proceedings are instituted" and that failure to file the affidavit cannot be cured by amendment. n2 Another example of such a statute is the 1995 Private Securities Litigation Reform Act, which amends the Securities Exchange Act to make the pleading standards in securities fraud cases more rigorous than the standards under Rule 8. Thus, a claimant alleging securities fraud must specify each statement alleged to have been misleading, the reason or reasons why the statement is misleading, and, if an allegation regarding the statement or omission is made on information and belief, all the facts, with particularity, on which that belief is formed. n3

In addition to statutes, Rule 8's general rules of pleading, are supplemented in certain respects by other federal rules. For example, Rule 9 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure contains special rules for fraud, special damages, and lack of capacity, and for denying the occurrence of a condition precedent. n4 For a discussion of special pleading requirements, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

State law may also override the pleading requirements of Rule 8 in federal court when the federal court determines that a special state pleading requirement is substantive. n5 For example, the Erie doctrine has been used to require those pleading state law claims in federal court to follow certain state statutory directives in product liability and medical malpractice cases. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); see Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) ; Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-884 (2009) ; see [b], below, [2][a], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Dura Pharms., Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 341, 125 S. Ct. 1627, 161 L. Ed. 2d 577 (2005) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883 (2009) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Bushnell Corp. v. ITT Corp., 973 F. Supp. 1276, 1287 (D. Kan. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e); see Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Dura Pharms., Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 346-348, 125 S. Ct. 1627, 161 L. Ed. 2d 577 (2005) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) .

(n12)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(c).

(n13)Footnote 12. Dura Pharms., Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 346-348, 125 S. Ct. 1627, 161 L. Ed. 2d 577 (2005) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (1980) .

(n15)Footnote 14. See Harris v. Ostrout, 65 F.3d 912, 915 n.3 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Hughes v. Rowe, 449 U.S. 5, 10, 101 S. Ct. 173, 66 L. Ed. 2d 163 (1980) .

(N17)Footnote 16. Harris v. Ostrout, 65 F.3d 912, 915 n.3 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) .

(n19)Footnote 2. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-884 (2009) .

(n20)Footnote 3. See [c], below.

(n21)Footnote 4. Tolle v. Carroll Touch, Inc., 977 F.2d 1129, 1134 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n22)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(3).

(n23)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2).

(n24)Footnote 7. Johnson v. Methodist Med. Ctr., 10 F.3d 1300, 1305 (7th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1107 (1994) .

(n25)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e).

(n26)Footnote 9. Bennett v. Schmidt, 153 F.3d 516, 517-518 (7th Cir. 1998) (it takes much more egregious offense than using 12 pages to set out claim that could have been stated in 6 pages to justify dismissal under Rule 8(a)).

(n27)Footnote 10. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-884 (2009) .

(n28)Footnote 11. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n29)Footnote 12. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n30)Footnote 13. See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884 (2009) ; see [a], above.

(n31)Footnote 14. See Jebaco Inc. v. Harrah's Operating Co Inc., 587 F.3d 314, 321 (5th Cir. 2009) .

(n32)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n33)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3); Volkswagen, Inc. v. Centrix Fin., 357 F. Supp. 2d 837, 845-846 (D. Md. 2005) .

(n34)Footnote 3. Tuchman v. DSC Communications Corp., 14 F.3d 1061, 1068 (5th Cir. 1994) ; Syscon, Inc. v. Vehicle Valuation Servs., 274 F. Supp. 2d 975, 977 (N.D. Ill. 2003) .

(n35)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 84; see Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47, 78 S. Ct. 99, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1957) ; Spanierman Gallery, PSP v. Love, 320 F. Supp. 2d 108, 114 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) ; see also Appendix of Forms, Appendix to Ch. 26, Post Judgment Procedures.

(n36)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-884 (2009) ; Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) ; see [2], above.

(n37)Footnote 3. Trevino v. D.H. Kim Enterprises, Inc., 168 F.R.D. 181, 182-183 (D. Md. 1996) ; see, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(1)(D).

(n38)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2071(a).

(n39)Footnote 2. 8 U.S.C. § 1451(a); Matles v. United States, 356 U.S. 256, 78 S. Ct. 712, 2 L. Ed. 2d 741 (1958) .

(n40)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(1); see Dura Pharms., Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 125 S. Ct. 1627, 1630-1624, 161 L. Ed. 2d 577 (2005) .

(n41)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9.

(n42)Footnote 5. Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) (in diversity case, substantive law of state applied unless case controlled by Constitution or Act of Congress).

(n43)Footnote 6. Irizarry v. Digital Equip. Corp., 919 F. Supp. 301, 304 (N.D. Ill. 1996) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.07

§ 10.07 Demand for Judgmentn*

[1] Requirement of Demand

A complaint must contain a demand for judgment for the relief that the plaintiff seeks, n1 whether the pleading is a complaint or a third-party complaint. The plaintiff may demand relief in the alternative or of several different types. n2

A demand for judgment can be stated in general terms. For example, a plaintiff may request a single sum of money for an act of negligence resulting in physical injury, lost wages or income, physical and mental pain, and medical expenses. n3 Demand for relief in the alternative or for several different types of relief is also permitted. n4 For example, the demand for judgment may request specific performance, or if specific performance is not granted, that the pleader be awarded a money judgment. n5

Although special damages must be specifically stated in any affirmative pleading, n6 a demand for judgment does not have to distinguish between general damages and special damages. Furthermore, Rule 8 does not require a plaintiff to plead damages with particularity. The federal rules do not require claimants to set out in detail the facts on which they base their damages claims. Nevertheless, a plaintiff must include either direct or inferential allegations concerning all material elements necessary for recovery under some legal theory. Thus, the complaint must contain allegations establishing that the plaintiff has suffered some damages as a result of the defendant's conduct. n7

[2] Effect of Demand on Judgment

A demand for judgment will not limit the relief that may be ordered by the court, except for awards arising from default judgments. In this regard, Rule 54(c) limits the significance of Rule 8(a)(3)'s requirement of a demand for judgment once the litigation has begun by allowing the district court to grant the relief to which the prevailing party is entitled. However, it does not permit a court to impose liability where none has been proven. If the plaintiff does not present at trial a case that is valid on some theory, for example, a breach of contract, the district court does not abuse its discretion by refusing to award damages. n1 Additionally, a demand for judgment is significant in the case of a default judgment, because a default judgment may not be different in kind or exceed the amount requested in the demand for judgment. n2

A demand for judgment will also have a bearing on whether a jury trial will be allowed. If only equitable relief is sought, neither party may request a jury trial. n3

Rule 8(a)(3) permits claimants to pray for all relief, legal and/or equitable, to which they are entitled as a matter of substantive right and to pray for relief in the alternative n4 or cumulatively. For example, in an action for specific performance the plaintiff may demand either that (1) the defendant be required to specifically perform the agreement and pay damages of $___, plus interest and costs, or (2) if specific performance is not ordered, the defendant be required to pay damages of $___, plus interest and costs. n5 This prayer is proper under the procedure contemplated by the federal rules, in which the court has the power to grant all relief to which the plaintiff establishes that he or she is entitled, whether formerly legal or equitable. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Nagel v. ADM Investor Services, Inc., 995 F. Supp. 837, 840 (N.D. Ill. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 11.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(3).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 17.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g) (if party claims items of special damage, they must be stated expressly).

(n8)Footnote 7. Nagel v. ADM Investor Services, Inc., 995 F. Supp. 837, 841 (N.D. Ill. 1998) .

(n9)Footnote 1. Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Employers Reinsurance Corp., 144 F.3d 1077, 1081 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(c).

(n11)Footnote 3. Shum v. Intel Corp., 499 F.3d 1272, 1276-1277 (Fed. Cir. 2007) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(a).

(n12)Footnote 4. United States Gypsum Co. v. National Gypsum Co., 352 U.S. 457, 467, 77 S. Ct. 490, 1 L. Ed. 2d 465 (1957) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Official Form 17.

(n14)Footnote 6. Bowles v. Cohen, 65 F. Supp. 499 (E.D. Pa. 1944) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.08

§ 10.08 Joinder of Claims for Reliefn*

[1] Liberal Joinder of Claims

Any party asserting a claim, counterclaim, crossclaim, or third-party claim may join as many claims as it has against an opposing party, either as independent or alternative claims. n1 This rule means that there are no procedural restrictions on the number or types of claims a plaintiff (or other claimant) may assert in a single case. n2 A claim for relief subject to joinder is essentially a statement of factual circumstances that the law states entitles the claimant to the relief requested. Some statutes also specify particular types of claims that may be joined, such as, the supplemental jurisdiction statute, which allows joinder of claims that are so related to the original claims in the action that they form part of the same case or controversy. n3

Joined claims need not be consistent because the rule expressly states that alternative claims may be joined. n4 Thus, Rule 18 complements the rule permitting the pleading of inconsistent allegations, remedies, and theories. n5 The goal of open-ended claim joinder is to permit a claimant to assert an entire dispute in a single case, thus enabling the parties to present the whole array of their disagreement before one court. n6 In other words, joinder in federal practice does not depend on the nature of the claims: joined claims may be independent of one another. n7 The plaintiff may plead in the alternative or may plead wholly inconsistent claims n8 and may assert legally diverse claims. n9

The liberal claim-joinder rule controls only the procedural propriety of bringing more than one claim in a single action. Thus, neither Rule 18 nor any of the other federal civil rules affects the subject matter jurisdiction of the federal courts. n10 In other words, even though unrestricted joinder is permitted as a matter of pleading, the court must have an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction before the court will allow a claim to be litigated. n11 In this regard, claims against the United States are permitted only if the government has expressly waived its sovereign immunity by statute. Ordinarily, sovereign immunity protects the United States from having to defend any type of claim. However, some statutes waive immunity for joinder purposes when necessary to adjudicate the rights of all parties to the action. n12

One very significant aspect of this rule providing for liberal joinder of claims is that, in a diversity case, the claimant may join all of its claims to satisfy the minimum amount in controversy requirement. n13

[2] Permissive Joinder of Claims; Claim Preclusion

Under the permissive claim joinder Rule 18(a), claimants have the option to join any and all other claims they have against the defending party. However, joinder of claims is permissive and not compulsory. This means that the claim-joinder rule does not require a claimant to join all claims that it could assert against another party. n1 However, a claimant must realize that the doctrine of claim preclusion, also known as res judicata, essentially requires a claimant to assert all transactionally related claims in a single case, or the claims will be barred from future litigation. n2 Consequently, a claimant must be careful to join all clams related to a transaction in the current action. n3

[3] Court May Order Separate Trials of Claims or Issues

Despite the fact that the claim-joinder rule permits joinder of multiple and unrelated claims does not mean that the court must allow all such claims to be tried together; the rule addresses pleadings, not trials. n1 The district court has discretion to order separate trials of claims or issues. n2 In other words, after claims among the parties have been joined, the court has discretion to order separate trials based on the type of claim. The district court has broad authority to order separate trials for a wide variety of reasons, such as the prevention of delay, prejudice, or undue expense. n3

[4] Multiple Party Considerations

Joinder of parties is not affected by Rule 18; it is covered by other federal rules. n1 Thus, the claim-joinder rule of Rule 18 operates on the assumption that when multiple parties are asserting claims, or are the subject of claims, all such parties are properly joined under the various party joinder provisions. For example, claim joinder is not limited by the requirements of Rule 20 governing permissive joinder of parties. The latter rule permits joinder of parties if the claims by or against them arise from the same transaction and give rise to at least one common question of law or fact. n2 Those requirements apply to the question of whether certain parties may be joined in a single case; Rule 18 operates to allow such properly joined parties to assert all claims. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesClaimsCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesLiberal JoinderCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSeparate Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 18.02-18.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18, Committee Note of 1966.

(n4)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(3).

(n6)Footnote 5. Compare Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2) with Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 724, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1966) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc. v. Columbia Outdoor Advertising, Inc., 974 F.2d 502, 506 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Kunkel v. Topmaster Int'l, Inc., 906 F.2d 693, 696-697 (Fed. Cir. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Hargrave v. Oki Nursery, Inc., 646 F.2d 716, 719 (2d Cir. 1980) .

(n11)Footnote 10. United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725 n.13, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218(1966) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 82 (jurisdiction unaffected by rules).

(n12)Footnote 11. Frantz v. United States Powerlifting Fed'n, 836 F.2d 1063, 1067 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n13)Footnote 12. See Orff v. United States, 545 U.S. 596, 603, 125 S. Ct. 2606, 162 L. Ed. 2d 544 (2005) (such statutory provision does not provide consent by United States to itself become defending party on claim).

(n14)Footnote 13. Carter v. Tennant Co., 383 F.3d 673, 680 (7th Cir. 2004) ; Pollock v. Trustmark Ins. Co., 367 F. Supp. 2d 293, 299 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice and noting, however, that claims based on different legal theories may generally not be aggregated).

(n15)Footnote 1. Petrenko v. United States, 859 F. Supp. 647, 652 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n16)Footnote 2. Apotex, Inc. v. FDA, 393 F.3d 210, 217-218 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n17)Footnote 3. See Lytle v. Household Mfg., Inc., 494 U.S. 545, 552, 110 S. Ct. 1331, 108 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1990) (merger of law and equity into one action requires plaintiffs to join all legal and equitable claims arising from single transaction to avoid bar of res judicata); see also Ch. 30, Res Judicata and Related Doctrines.

(n18)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n19)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b).

(n20)Footnote 3. Am. Trim, L.L.C. v. Oracle Corp., 383 F.3d 462, 474 (6th Cir. 2004) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b).

(n21)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h), 14, 19, 20, 22, and 24.

(n22)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20.

(n23)Footnote 3. Intercon Research Assocs. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 696 F.2d 53, 56 (7th Cir. 1982) (Rule 20 operates independently of Rule 18; thus improper joinder of parties when requirements of Rule 20 were not met did not affect proper joinder of claims under Rule 18(a)).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10 PLAINTIFF'S PLEADINGS

1-10 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10.09

§ 10.09 Joinder of Contingent Remediesn*

[1] Claimant May Request Joinder of Contingent Remedies

A party may join two claims even though one of them is contingent on the disposition of the other. However, the court may grant relief only in accordance with the parties' relative substantive rights. In particular, a plaintiff may state a claim for money and a claim to set aside a conveyance that is fraudulent as to that plaintiff, without first obtaining a judgment for the money. n1 The purpose of the remedy joinder rule is to allow a claimant to join principal and contingent claims in a single case, even though technically the contingent claim does not accrue until resolution of the principal claim. n2

Essentially, Rule 18(b) provides an expedited procedure of the contingent claim by permitting the party to plead the contingent claim before it accrues by judgment on the principal claim. n3 The primary example, referred to in the rule, occurs when a plaintiff sues a debtor to recover a money judgment and joins a claim against a third-party to whom the debtor has conveyed property, asserting that the conveyance is in fraud of creditors. n4 The fraudulent conveyance fact pattern provides the most obvious use of the remedy joinder rule, but the rule is not limited to that situation. It permits joinder of any principal and contingent claims. For example, a claim to assert rights as a union member may be joined with a claim for reinstatement as a union member. n5

[2] Joinder of Contingent Remedies Procedural Only

The remedy joinder rule is procedural only and does not change substantive law. n1 The rule may not be applied if it would affect a party's Seventh Amendment right to jury trial on any legal issue. n2 The rule makes clear that the contingent claim and the principal claim on which it depends must both be proved before the joined remedies may be granted. n3 The remedy joinder rule merely allows the claimant to plead both remedies together in order to promote efficiency and consistency by placing the entire dispute in a single court for uniform resolution. n3.1 If the plaintiff elects not to use this procedure to join remedies, but elects instead to initiate a separate action solely against the alleged fraudulent transferee, the separate action generally may not proceed until the plaintiff has obtained a judgment on the principal, underlying claim. n4

[3] Discretion of Court

Whether to allow the joinder of remedies procedure is within the discretion of the trial court and may be disallowed if the procedure would cause confusion or delay. n1 Furthermore, as with claim joinder, the district judge has discretion to order separate trials of claims or issues for a variety of reasons, including the avoidance of jury confusion. n2

The remedy-joinder rule does not compel the district judge to allow amendment to add a fraudulent conveyance claim to a pending case against the debtor. n3 For example, when the third-party can be pursued in proceedings to enforce the judgment against the debtor and adding the contingent claim to the pending case would prolong the litigation, a court may properly conclude that the amendment should not be permitted. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesRemedies

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 18.02-18.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Wechsler v. Hunt Health Sys., 285 F. Supp. 2d 343, 347-349 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Jones v. N.W. Telemarketing, Inc., 136 F. Supp. 2d 1166, 1168-1169 (D. Ore. 2001) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. Vars v. International Bhd. of Boilermakers, 204 F. Supp. 245, 247-248 (D. Conn. 1962) .

(n7)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(b); Crook Motor Co. v. Goolsby, 703 F. Supp. 511, 525 (N.D. Miss. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Whitlock v. Hause, 694 F.2d 861, 864 (1st Cir. 1982) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(b).

(n10)Footnote 3.1. Fitzgerald v. United States Lines Co., 374 U.S. 16, 18, 83 S. Ct. 1646, 10 L. Ed. 2d 720 (1963) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Crook Motor Co. v. Goolsby, 703 F. Supp. 511, 525 (N.D. Miss. 1988) .

(n12)Footnote 1. All West Pet Supply Company v. Hill's Pet Products Division, 152 F.R.D. 202, 204-205 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b).

(n14)Footnote 3. All West Pet Supply Co. v. Hill's Pet Prods. Div., 152 F.R.D. 202, 203-204 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Otis Clapp & Son, Inc. v. Filmore Vitamin Co., 754 F.2d 738, 743 (7th Cir. 1985) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 10A.syn

§ 10A.syn Synopsis to Chapter 10A: INJUNCTIONS

§ 10A.01 Definition of Injunction

§ 10A.02 Nature of Remedy

[1] Movant Must Have Equitable Claim

[2] Extraordinary Remedy

[3] Controlling Rule is Procedural Only

§ 10A.03 Purpose of Injunction

[1] General Purpose of Injunctive Relief

[2] Particular Purpose of Injunction Depends on Type

§ 10A.04 Discretion of Court to Issue Injunction

§ 10A.05 Types of Injunctive Relief

[1] Based on Duration of Injunction

[2] Based on Function of Injunction

§ 10A.06 Controlling Law

[1] Injunctive Relief in Federal Question and Diversity Cases

[2] Injunction Procedures in Particular Cases

[a] Employment Relationship Cases

[b] Interpleader Cases

[c] Three Judge Courts

[d] Copyright Impoundment

§§ 10A.07through 10A.19 Reserved

§ 10A.20 General Considerations Related to Injunctive Relief

[1] Subject Matter and Personal Jurisdiction

[2] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

[3] Inadequacy of Remedy at Law

[4] Irreparable Injury

[5] Probability of Future Violations

[6] Balancing of Hardships and Equities

[7] Other Equitable Considerations

[8] Security for Temporary Injunctive Relief

[a] Requirement of Security

[b] Amount of Security

[c] Excuse From Security Requirements

§ 10A.21 Particular Considerations for Temporary Restraining Order

[1] Purpose of Order

[2] Order Generally Requires Notice and Hearing

[3] Factors Considered in Ruling on Motion for Temporary Restraining Order

[a] Trial Court's Discretion

[b] Movant's Likelihood of Success on Merits

[c] Irreparable and Immediate Injury

[d] Balance of Hardships Caused by Order

[e] Impact of Order on Public Interest

[f] Inadequacy of Remedy at Law

[4] Grant of Temporary Restraining Order Without Notice

[a] Requirements for Ex Parte Order

[b] Contents of Ex Parte Order

[c] Extension of Duration of Ex Parte Order

[d] Ex Parte Order Requires Expeditious Hearing on Preliminary Injunction

[5] Modification or Dissolution of Temporary Restraining Orders

§ 10A.22 Particular Considerations for Preliminary Injunction

[1] Purpose

[2] Standards Considered by Court

[a] Court Must Balance Equitable Factors

[b] Irreparable Injury

[c] Reasonable Likelihood of Success on Merits

[d] Balancing of Relative Harm to Interested Parties

[e] Public Interest

[3] Other Equitable Considerations

[4] Pleadings Related to Preliminary Injunction

[5] Submission of Affidavits and Other Documents

[6] Court's Determination of Whether to Grant or Deny Preliminary Injunction

[a] Due Process Generally Requires Notice and Hearing

[b] Procedural Considerations Regarding Hearing

[c] Burden of Proof

[d] Testimonial Evidence

§ 10A.23 Particular Considerations for Permanent Injunction

§§ 10A.24 through 10A.39 [Reserved]

§ 10A.40 Requirements for Injunctive Orders

[1] Every Injunctive Order Must Contain Specific Items

[2] Reasons and Findings for Order

[3] Order Must Be Specific

[4] Order Must Describe Acts Prohibited or Required

§ 10A.41 Persons Bound by Injunctive Order

[1] Parties to Action

[2] Persons Acting in Concert With Party

[3] Requirement of Notice

§ 10A.42 Contempt for Violation of Injunctive Order

[1] Enforcement by Contempt in General

[2] Procedure

[3] Enforcement Against Nonparty for Contempt

§ 10A.43 Appeal of Injunctive Order

[1] Appealability of Orders Regarding Injunctive Relief

[2] Standard of Review

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART I. NATURE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.01

§ 10A.01 Definition of Injunctionn*

"Injunction" is a general term that refers to a decree or equitable order of a court of competent jurisdiction that commands or prohibits conduct by a natural person or entity. n1 Another broad definition of injunction is any equitable decree that compels obedience under threat of the court's coercive power of contempt. n2 Thus, an injunction is a device used by a court to either require or prevent future conduct on the part of the person who is subject to the injunction. However, the court may enter an injunction regarding someone's past conduct, n3 provided that the proponent shows that the past unlawful conduct establishes that there is a reasonable likelihood of continuing that unlawful conduct in the future. n4

The term injunction also encompasses a judicial order that prevents a statute, regulation, or administrative decision from taking effect. n5 Courts have noted that the term "injunction" should not be read narrowly but should be considered as including all equitable decrees that compel obedience under threat of contempt; thus, an order is considered injunctive based on its effect, and not necessarily by its denomination by the court. Thus, even if an order does not as a technical matter grant or refuse an injunction, but is injunctive in practical effect or in practical effect denies an injunction, it must comply with all procedural and substantive requirements regarding injunctive relief. n6

The Supreme Court has explained an important distinction between an injunction that grants relief to a party and an injunction that is procedural. Every order of a court that commands or forbids is an technically an "injunction;" however, in its accepted legal sense, an remedial injunction is an in personam order based on the merits that is directed at a particular person to govern that person's conduct relative to a particular claim for relief in the case. On the other hand, a procedural injunction, such as a stay or writ of mandate, operates only on a judicial proceeding itself, either by halting or postponing some portion of the proceeding, by temporarily divesting a judicial order of enforceability, or by commanding that a lower court take or refrain from some action. n7 In particular, pretrial orders such as orders to compel discovery and denials of summary judgment are not "injunctions" because such pretrial orders do not grant part of the relief requested by the claimant. n8 Thus, it is not an "injunction" when the court makes an order for a party to turn over papers in discovery or to submit to a physical examination. Similarly an order that parties "proceed with all deliberate speed" in calculating sums owed is a preliminary step toward judgment and not an injunction. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Nken v. Holder, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1749, 173 L. Ed. 2d 550, 562 (2009) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Westar Energy, Inc. v. Lake, 552 F.3d 1215, 1222 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. United States Pub. Interest Research Group v. Atl. Salmon of Me., 339 F.3d 23, 33 (1st Cir. 2003) (even though injunction looks to future, it may be rooted in past violations, and its effects may be remedial).

(n5)Footnote 4. Wooden v. Bd. of Regents, 247 F.3d 1262, 1284 (11th Cir. 2001) ; SEC v. Johnson, 595 F. Supp. 2d 40, 43 (D.D.C. 2009) ; see § 10A.03.

(n6)Footnote 5. Illinois Bell Tel. Co. v. Worldcom Techs., 157 F.3d 500, 503 (7th Cir. 1998) (to justify injunction that prevents statute, regulation, or administrative decision from taking effect, applicant must show that probability of success on merits is sufficiently high, or injury from enforcement of order is sufficiently great).

(n7)Footnote 6. Southern Ute Indian Tribe v. Leavitt, 564 F.3d 1198, 1207 (10th Cir. 2009) (quoting Moore's Federal Practice).

(n8)Footnote 7. Nken v. Holder, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1749, 173 L. Ed. 2d 550, 562-563 (2009) ; see Teshome-Gebreegziabher v. Mukasey, 545 F.3d 285, 291 (4th Cir. 2008) (injunctions are specifically directed at parties, while stays are directed at proceedings or courts).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Casey v. Planned Parenthood, 14 F.3d 848, 854 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Mercer v. Magnant, 40 F.3d 893, 896 (7th Cir. 1994) (orders to prepare plans that when adopted will be injunctions are not themselves injunctions, even if the process of preparation is extended and expensive).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART I. NATURE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.02

§ 10A.02 Nature of Remedyn*

[1] Movant Must Have Equitable Claim

A court order imposing an injunction is an equitable remedy, n1 which means that a federal court may provide such relief only if the claiming party qualifies under (1) the traditional tests for an order in equity that existed at the time of the adoption of the U.S. Constitution. n2 and (2) any particular requirements for the type of injunction requested. n3 Thus, the district court is required to weigh and balance the traditional equities of a particular case in deciding to grant an injunction. n4 Because of its equitable nature, the district court's decision on the issuance of an injunction will be overruled only in the rarest of cases. n5

[2] Extraordinary Remedy

An injunction is an extraordinary remedy, enforceable by the full coercive powers of the court. n1 Because it is an extraordinary remedy backed by all of the court's coercive power, including contempt, an injunction may be imposed only in the limited circumstances that clearly require injunctive relief. n2 The court may order injunctive relief to provide a party with preventive, protective, or restorative relief, but not to rectify alleged wrongs that have already been committed but will not occur in the future. n3 Thus, injunctive relief was traditionally designed to deter rather than punish an offending party. n4

[3] Controlling Rule is Procedural Only

Rule 65 is a procedural device which specifies the methods that a party must use to obtain any type of injunction n1 and was designed to protect against abuse of the injunction remedy. n2 Thus, Rule 65 does not affect or alter the substantive prerequisites for obtaining injunctive relief or the requirements for obtaining an equitable remedy, which must be satisfied by the movant to obtain injunctive relief. n3 Furthermore, because Rule 65 merely specifies the procedure for obtaining injunctive relief, it does not confer standing on the person seeking relief, n4 or personal or subject matter jurisdiction, which the person requesting relief must establish in addition to conforming to the proper procedure. n5 However, once a movant has established federal jurisdiction for some claim, it is not necessary that the statute providing for federal jurisdiction provide for relief in the form of an injunction. The right to injunctive relief may be provided by a supplemental state-law claim. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Allstate Settlement Corp. v. Rapid Settlements, Ltd., 559 F.3d 164, 171 (3d Cir. 2009) (injunction is equitable remedy which can be granted or withheld at district court's discretion).

(n3)Footnote 2. Grupo Mexicano de Desarrollo S.A. v. Alliance Bond Fund, Inc., 527 U.S. 308, 318, 119 S. Ct. 1961, 144 L. Ed. 2d 319 (1999) ; Wheeling Pittsburgh Steel Corp. v. Mitsui & Co., 221 F.3d 924, 927 (6th Cir. 2000) . For a compete discussion of federal court equity jurisdiction, see Ch. 5, Original Jurisdiction of the Subject Matter.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Westar Energy, Inc. v. Lake, 552 F.3d 1215, 1224 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Leary v. Daeschner, 228 F.3d 729, 736-737 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See McPherson v. Michigan High Sch. Athletic Ass'n, 119 F.3d 453, 459 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Nken v. Holder, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1749, 173 L. Ed. 2d 550, 562 (2009) ; Gunn v. University Comm'n to End the War in Vietnam, 399 U.S. 383, 389, 90 S. Ct. 2013, 26 L. Ed. 2d 684 (1970) ; see also § 10A.42.

(n8)Footnote 2. Kos Pharms., Inc. v. Andrx Corp., 369 F.3d 700, 708 (3d Cir. 2004) (prerequisites for extraordinary relief of preliminary injunction).

(n9)Footnote 3. Illinois Bell Tel. Co. v. Worldcom Techs., Inc., 157 F.3d 500, 503 (7th Cir. 1998) ; see Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U.S. 119, 124, 12 S. Ct. 659, 36 L. Ed. 368 (1892) .

(n10)Footnote 4. Rondeau v. Mosinee Paper Corp., 422 U.S. 49, 61, 95 S. Ct. 2069, 45 L. Ed. 2d 12 (1975) .

(n11)Footnote 1. United States v. Holy Land Found., 493 F.3d 469, 473 (5th Cir. 2007) (Rule 65 provides specified procedural safeguards to adverse party before district court issues injunction or restraining order).

(n12)Footnote 2. Matter of California Lumber Corp., 24 F.R.D. 190, 192 (S.D. Cal. 1959) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Grupo Mexicano De Desarrollo, S.A. v. Alliance Bond Fund, Inc., 527 U.S. 308, 318-319, 119 S. Ct. 1961, 144 L. Ed. 2d 319 (1999) (substantive prerequisites for obtaining equitable remedy, as well as general availability of injunctive relief, are not altered by Rule 65 but depend on traditional principles of equity jurisdiction; therefore, court must determine whether relief requested by movant was traditionally accorded by courts of equity).

(n14)Footnote 4. Arkansas Peace Ctr. v. Department of Pollution Control, 999 F.2d 1212, 1216-1219 (8th Cir. 1993) ; Citizens Concerned for Separation of Church & State v. Denver, 628 F.2d 1289, 1298-1299 (10th Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 963 (1981) .

(n15)Footnote 5. Lathrop v. Unidentified, Wrecked & Abandoned Vessel, 817 F. Supp. 953, 961 (M.D. Fla. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 6. See Tory v. Cochran, 544 U.S. 734, 737, 125 S. Ct. 2108, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1042 (2005) (substantive California law controls effect of injunction); People v. Terry, 45 F.3d 17, 23 (2d Cir. 1995) (court could order injunctive remedy on independent state law grounds after claimant established jurisdiction under federal civil rights statute).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART I. NATURE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.03

§ 10A.03 Purpose of Injunctionn*

[1] General Purpose of Injunctive Relief

The primary purpose of injunctive relief is to prevent future acts or omissions by the adverse party that constitute violations of the law or harmful conduct. n1 Therefore, if the wrongful act or omission has been permanently discontinued, the court must deny a motion for injunctive relief. n2 However, a defendant's discontinuance of the wrongful act or omission is not dispositive, and the court may order injunctive relief if there is a reasonable likelihood that the harmful conduct or omission will recur. n3 This means that the court will grant an injunction only when there is a cognizable probability of harm if the defendant is not enjoined from specified acts or omissions. n4 On the other hand, a court should deny injunctive relief if the movant demonstrates only a mere possibility of future injury. n5

In all cases, the purpose of an injunction is to prevent wrongs prospectively. n6 Although injunctive relief is commonly based on past wrongs, n7 an injunction may be granted even without a showing of past wrongs if the plaintiff can show it will imminently suffer actual harm from the defendant. n8 For example, the Supreme Court has held that injunctive relief was proper to protect a prison inmate from potentially serious injury, even though the inmate had not been harmed as of the time the injunctive relief was requested, because prison officials had knowingly and unreasonably failed to respond to previous risks of harm. n9

[2] Particular Purpose of Injunction Depends on Type

The purpose of an injunction depends on the type of injunction. For example, a "prohibitory injunction" preserves the status quo, while a "mandatory injunction" is much more extensive, in that it goes beyond simply maintaining status quo, and affirmatively orders a change in the parties' circumstances. n1 For a further discussion of the prohibitory and mandatory injunction, see § 10A.21[2].

The purpose of an injunction is also reflected in its duration. The shortest duration is the "temporary restraining order." Because it is issued even before the opposition has an opportunity to be heard, its purpose is to provide a remedy of limited duration, to preserve the status quo until the adverse party and the merits of a preliminary injunction can be heard. n2 For a further discussion of the purpose of the temporary restraining order, see § 10A.21[1].

The medium-length duration order is the "preliminary injunction." Its purpose is to prevent irreparable injury by preserving the court's ability to render a meaningful decision on the merits. It often happens that this purpose is furthered by maintaining the status quo, but not always. If the currently existing status quo itself is causing one of the parties irreparable injury, the court must alter the situation so as to prevent the injury, either by returning to the last uncontested status quo between the parties by the issuance of a mandatory injunction or by allowing the parties to take proposed action that the court finds will alleviate the irreparable injury. n3 For further discussion of the purpose of the preliminary injunction, see § 10A.22[1].

In contrast to a preliminary injunction, a "permanent injunction" is an injunctive order made on the merits that grants a party all the relief it ultimately may be entitled to and that makes no provision for further hearings on the matter. n4 For example, even though it was titled a "preliminary injunction," an order was actually a "permanent injunction" when the order was issued after the court had conducted three days of fact hearings and contemplated no additional proceedings on the injunctive matter, and when the only events which could modify or lift the order were compliance with its terms. n5 For a further discussion of the purpose of the permanent injunction, see § 10A.05[1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. United States v. Oregon Med. Soc., 343 U.S. 326, 333, 72 S. Ct. 690, 96 L. Ed. 978 (1952) ; Ernst v. Rising, 427 F.3d 351, 380-381 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Hempstead County Hunting Club, Inc. v. Southwestern Elec. Power Co., 558 F.3d 763, 767 (8th Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. SEC v. ETS Payphones, Inc., 408 F.3d 727, 733 (11th Cir. 2005) (party moving for injunction has burden to establish that adverse party will likely violate laws in future).

(n5)Footnote 4. United States v. Oregon Med. Soc., 343 U.S. 326, 333, 72 S. Ct. 690, 96 L. Ed. 978 (1952) (injunctive relief requires real threat of violation that is likely to continue or occur).

(n6)Footnote 5. Sheely v. MRI Radiology Network, P.A., 505 F.3d 1173, 1182 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Illinois Bell Tel. Co. v. Worldcom Techs., 157 F.3d 500, 503 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 7. SEC v. Bilzerian, 29 F.3d 689, 695 (D.C. Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1011 (1995) (injunction may be ordered when defendant's past unlawful conduct indicates reasonable likelihood of further unlawful conduct).

(n9)Footnote 8. Lewis v. Casey, 518 U.S. 343, 349, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606 (1996) ; see United States v. W.T. Grant Co., 345 U.S. 629, 633, 73 S. Ct. 894, 97 L. Ed. 1303 (1953) (party moving for injunctive relief need not show past wrongs).

(n10)Footnote 9. Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 845-846, 114 S. Ct. 1970, 128 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1994) (plaintiff was not required to wait until after occurrence of physical injury in order to obtain injunctive relief).

(n11)Footnote 1. See Louis Vuitton Malletier v. Dooney & Bourke, Inc., 454 F.3d 108, 114 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n12)Footnote 2. Garcia v. Yonkers Sch. Dist., 561 F.3d 97, 107 (2d Cir. 2009) .

(n13)Footnote 3. RoDa Drilling Co. v. Siegal, 552 F.3d 1203, 1208-1211 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Rathmann Group v. Tanenbaum, 889 F.2d 787, 790 (8th Cir. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 5. In re Liberty Music & Video, Inc. 50 B.R. 379, 380 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

47 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART I. NATURE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.04

§ 10A.04 Discretion of Court to Issue Injunctionn*

The court has discretion whether to grant or deny requested injunctive relief. The court must exercise its discretion by applying the principles of equity and the requirements for the type of injunction to the circumstances of each case. n1 Consequently, a federal court is not required to grant injunctive relief in every circumstance in which a requesting party has shown a violation of the law by the adverse party. n2 Furthermore, the consent of any or all parties to the injunctive relief does not require the court to grant injunctive relief. n3

The district court's weighing and balancing of the equities of a particular case maybe overruled only in the rarest of cases. n4 Such a decision may be overruled when the district court abuses its discretion. n5 Such an abuse of discretion occurs only if the district court relies on clearly erroneous findings of fact, improperly applies the governing law, or uses an erroneous legal standard. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. eBay Inc. v. MercExchange, L.L.C., 547 U.S. 388, 391, 126 S. Ct. 1837, 164 L. Ed. 2d 641 (2006) (equitable discretion applied by district court to determine request for permanent injunction).

(n3)Footnote 2. Weinberger v. Romero Barcelo, 456 U.S. 305, 311-312, 102 S. Ct. 1798, 72 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1982) .

(n4)Footnote 3. SKF USA, Inc. v. United States, 512 F.3d 1326, 1332 (Fed. Cir. 2008) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Leary v. Daeschner, 228 F.3d 729, 736-737 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Florida Ass'n of Rehabilitation Facilities, Inc. v. State of Florida Dep't of Health & Rehabilitative

Services, 225 F.3d 1208, 1216 (11th Cir. 2000) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Gonzales v. National Bd. of Med. Examiners, 225 F.3d 620, 625 (6th Cir. 2000) ; see Hamad v. Woodcrest Condo. Ass'n, 328 F.3d 224, 230 (6th Cir. 2003) (high degree of deference to the district court's decision owed only if district court properly understood pertinent law and applied it in defensible manner to facts as they appear in record).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART I. NATURE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.05

§ 10A.05 Types of Injunctive Reliefn*

[1] Based on Duration of Injunction

There are three types of injunctive orders based on the duration of the injunction and the stage of litigation when the court makes the injunctive order. n1 The first type of order is a temporary restraining order (TRO), which is an injunctive order of limited duration the court may use to grant an emergency motion to preserve the status quo pending a compete hearing on an application for preliminary injunctive relief. n2 The court may grant a TRO without notice to the adverse party or attorney if the specific facts show that the applicant for the TRO will suffer irreparable injury, loss, or damage before the adverse party or attorney can be heard in opposition. The specific facts supporting an application for a TRO must be established by affidavit or by verified complaint. n3 The court may grant a temporary restraining order to preserve the status quo only for a maximum duration of 14 days. n4 For a further discussion of temporary restraining orders, see § 10A.21.

The second type of order based on the duration of the injunction is a "preliminary injunction," which is an injunction that the court issues to protect a plaintiff from irreparable injury and to preserve the court's power to render a meaningful decision after a trial on the merits. n5 The primary requirement for the court to order a preliminary injunction is a showing that the movant will suffer irreparable injury in the absence of the injunction; other necessary showings include that the movant is likely to succeed on the merits; that the injunction will not cause substantial harm to others; and that the injunction would serve the public interest. n6 For a complete discussion of the preliminary injunction, see § 10A.22.

The third injunctive order based on the duration of the injunction is the "permanent injunction," which is an injunctive order that implements the final decision on the merits, grants a party all the relief it ultimately may be entitled to, and makes no provision for further hearings on the matter. n7 Therefore, once a court has rendered a decision on the merits of an action, the court may grant only a permanent injunction, and not a preliminary injunction. n8 For a complete discussion of permanent injunctions, see § 10A.23.

[2] Based on Function of Injunction

There are several types of injunctions that are classified according to the function that the injunction serves. n1 A

"mandatory injunction" is one that affirmatively requires a party to perform a specific, positive act to remedy alleged harmful conduct, n2 either altering the status quo, n3 or restoring the status quo pending final adjudication. n4 In contrast to the mandatory injunction is the prohibitory injunction, which preserves or alters the status quo by proscribing conduct. n5 Thus, while a "mandatory injunction" commands performance of certain acts or mandates a specific course of conduct, n5.1 a "prohibitory injunction" forbids or restrains performance of certain acts. n6

The distinction between mandatory and prohibitory injunctions is important because a heightened standard is applied to mandatory injunctive relief. n7 In this regard, the court may require that a party moving for an injunction must meet a higher than normal standard to obtain relief if the request is for any of the following: n8 (1) a mandatory injunction, n9 (2) an injunction that would alter, rather than maintain, the status quo; n10 or (3) an injunction that provides the moving party all the relief that itcould recover at the conclusion of a full trial on the merits. n11 To meet this heightened standard the moving party must make a strong showing both with regard to the likelihood of success on the merits and with regard to the balance of harms. n12

A "provisional injunction" is one that is probationary in that it is not final or permanent but rather involves the supervision of changing conduct or conditions. n13 An injunction is also considered to be provisional if it is designed to preserve the subject matter pending a hearing on the merits. n14 Thus, under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, there are two types of "provisional injunctions" that a court may issue: n15 a temporary restraining order n16 and a preliminary injunction. n17

An "ancillary injunction" is an injunction used by a federal court to sustain its jurisdiction. n18 Under the All Writs Act, n19 for example, a court may order an ancillary injunction to prevent conduct that has been shown to undermine the court's jurisdiction. n20 A party may prosecute an action seeking injunctive relief to maintain a court's decree without reference to the citizenship or residence of the parties, because the suit is ancillary to the original proceeding and is supplementary to the decree rendered in the original court. n21

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Lafreniere Park Foundation v. Broussard, 221 F.3d 804 (5th Cir. 2000) ; *Capshaw v. Butte Cmty. Bank, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49110, at *1-2 (E.D. Cal. 2009) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Belbacha v. Bush, 520 F.3d 452, 455 (D.C. Cir. 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1)(A).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Golden Gate Rest. Ass'n v. City of San Francisco, 512 F.3d 1112, 1116 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Frank Russell Co. v. Wellington Management Co., 154 F.3d 97, 101 (3d Cir. 1998) ; Blue Cross & Blue Shield Mut. v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield Ass'n, 110 F.3d 318, 322 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Amoco Prod. Co. v. Village of Gambell, 480 U.S. 531, 546 n.12, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) (applicant entitled to permanent injunctive relief only after prevailing on merits).

(n9)Footnote 8. Golden Gate Hotel v. City & County of San Francisco, 836 F. Supp. 707, 709 (N.D. Cal. 1993) , rev'd on other grounds, 18 F.3d 1482 (9th Cir. 1994) (preliminary injunction is inappropriate after court grants summary judgment).

(n10)Footnote 1. Andreiu v. Reno, 223 F.3d 1111 (9th Cir. 2000) (dissent noting that there are affirmative, ex parte, final, interlocutory, mandatory, permanent, perpetual, preliminary, preventive, prohibitory, provisional, quia-timet, reparative, special, and temporary injunctions).

(n11)Footnote 2. D.D. ex rel. V.D. v. New York City Bd. of Educ., 465 F.3d 503, 510 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n12)Footnote 3. See Doninger v. Niehoff, 527 F.3d 41, 47 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Schrier v. Univ. of Colo., 427 F.3d 1253, 1260 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n14)Footnote 5. O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Unaio do Vegetal v. Ashcroft, 389 F.3d 973, 975 (10th Cir. 2004) , aff'd, 546 U.S. 418, 126 S. Ct. 1211, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1017 (2006) .

(n15)Footnote 5.1. See Sanchez v. Esso Std. Oil Co., 572 F.3d 1, 20-21 (1st Cir. 2009) (1st Cir. 2009) (one typical example of mandatory injunction is order to clean environmental damage).

(n16)Footnote 6. Louis Vuitton Malletier v. Dooney & Bourke, Inc., 454 F.3d 108, 114 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n17)Footnote 7. See Kikumura v. Hurley, 242 F.3d 950, 955 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n18)Footnote 8. O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Unaio do Vegetal v. Ashcroft, 389 F.3d 973, 975 (10th Cir. 2004) , aff'd, 546 U.S. 418, 126 S. Ct. 1211, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1017 (2006) .

(n19)Footnote 9. D.D. v. N.Y. City Bd. of Educ., 465 F.3d 503, 510 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n20)Footnote 10. See LGS Architects, Inc. v. Concordia Homes of Nev., 434 F.3d 1150, 1158 (9th Cir. 2006) .

(n21)Footnote 11. See Mastrovincenzo v. City of New York, 435 F.3d 78, 90 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n22)Footnote 12. Beltronics USA, Inc. v. Midwest Inventory Distrib., LLC, 562 F.3d 1067, 1071 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n23)Footnote 13. United States v. Swift & Co., 286 U.S. 106, 114, 52 S. Ct. 460, 76 L. Ed. 999 (1932) (provisional injunctions contrasted with permanent injunctions, which give protection to rights fully accrued on facts so nearly permanent as to be substantially impervious to change); Hodge v. Department of Housing & Urban Dev., Housing Div., 862 F.2d 859, 864 (11th Cir. 1989) (injunction intended to effect institutional reform by its terms required ongoing court supervision, and therefore was provisional; modification of such an inunction may be granted more freely).

(n24)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Brown v. Gilmore, 533 U.S. 1301, 1303, 122 S. Ct. 1, 150 L. Ed. 2d 782 (2001) (commenting on use of injunction pursuant to All Writs Act to prohibit enforcement of a presumptively valid state statute pending writ of certiorari).

(n25)Footnote 15. See [1], above.

(n26)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b).

(n27)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a).

(n28)Footnote 18. See Ford Motor Co. v. United States, 405 U.S. 562, 572-578, 92 S. Ct. 1142, 31 L. Ed. 2d 492

(1972) ; In re Nine N. Church St., Inc., 82 F.2d 186, 188 (2d Cir. 1936) .

(n29)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a).

(n30)Footnote 20. ITT Community Dev. Corp. v. Barton, 569 F.2d 1351, 1359 (5th Cir. 1978) .

(n31)Footnote 21. Root v. Woolworth, 150 U.S. 401, 413, 14 S. Ct. 136, 37 L. Ed. 1123 (1893) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART I. NATURE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.06

§ 10A.06 Controlling Lawn*

[1] Injunctive Relief in Federal Question and Diversity Cases

When a federal court's jurisdiction is based on a federal question, both the substantive and procedural issues regarding injunctive relief are controlled by federal law. Thus, the substantive equitable question of whether injunctive relief is available depends on the federal common law and any applicable statutes. n1 Additionally, the procedural methods regarding motions and orders for injunctive relief, as well as procedural safeguards to protect adverse parties, are controlled by Rule 65. n2

On the other hand, in diversity jurisdiction cases, the Erie doctrine provides that for claims based on state law, the court must apply the same law that the forum state court would apply to all "substantive" issues in the case. n3 Injunctive relief is a substantive issue under the Erie doctrine and therefore governed by the forum state law, and not federal law. n4 This principle applies because the equitable powers of federal courts should not enable a party suing in diversity to obtain an injunction if state law clearly rejects the availability of that remedy. n5

However, even in diversity cases, "procedural" issues are controlled by the Federal Rules. n6 In particular, Rule 65 governs all procedural matters regarding requests for injunctions in federal court, because Rule 65 merely sets forth the methods for requesting injunctive relief and the court's order related to that relief. n7 Rule 65 does not itself control whether injunctive relief is available. n8

[2] Injunction Procedures in Particular Cases

[a] Employment Relationship Cases

The procedures specified in Rule 65 do not modify any statutory provisions of the United States relating to temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions in actions affecting employer and employee. n1 Rule 65(e)(1) recognizes that Rule 65 and the other federal civil rules are subject to, and do not change the effect of, any federal labor statutes that prohibit the issuance of injunctive relief regarding concerted labor activity or coercive conduct between parties to a labor dispute. n2 However, Rule 65(e) does not prevent the federal courts from exercising their equitable jurisdiction to order injunctive relief merely because an action has some relation to labor or employment issues, provided the injunction does not conflict with the labor statutes. n3 For example, a court may order injunctive relief related to arbitration of a labor agreement. n4 Similarly, a court would not prohibited from ordering an injunction related to conduct when that conduct is governed by a enforceable employment agreement or collective bargaining agreement. n5

[b] Interpleader Cases

Rule 65 and the other federal civil rules do not modify any procedures specified by statute for preliminary injunctions in actions of interpleader or in the nature of interpleader. n6 The statute provides that a district court may issue enter an order restraining interpleader claimants from instituting or prosecuting any proceeding in any State or United States court affecting the property, instrument, or obligation involved in the interpleader action until further order of the court. The court may make all other appropriate orders to enforce its judgment, and has the discretion to make any injunction permanent. n7

Rule 65(e)(2) means that Rule 65 and the other federal civil rules may not constrain the powers of the judge as specified by the statute. For example, a preliminary injunction may be issued under 28 U.S.C. § 2361 at same time as summons is issued by district court without notice to putative defendants in action, despite the provisions of Rule 65. n9 However, the court may nevertheless apply ordinary equitable injunctive relief principles and the procedures in Rule 65 to the extent that they do not conflict with the statute. n9

[c] Three Judge Courts

Rule 65 and the other federal civil rules do not modify any procedures for preliminary injunctions in actions heard and decided by a district court of three judges. n10 The interpleader injunction statute provides that in such cases a single judge may grant a temporary restraining order on a specific finding, based on evidence submitted, that specified irreparable damage will result if the order is not granted. That temporary restraining order remains in force until the hearing and determination by the district court of three judges of an application for a preliminary injunction, unless the order is previously revoked by the district judge. A single judge may not appoint hear and determine any application for a preliminary or permanent injunction or motion to vacate an injunction. Any action of a single judge may be reviewed by the full court at any time before final judgment. n11

The effect of Rule 65(e)(3) is that, in his or her determination of a temporary restraining order in a three judge case, the single judge is not governed by the other provisions of Rule 65; n12 for example, under 28 U.S.C. § 2284, security is not required for the single judge to grant a restraining order. n13 However, the single judge of a three judge court may nevertheless apply ordinary equitable injunctive relief principles and the procedures stated in Rule 65 to the extent that they do not conflict with 28 U.S.C. § 2284. n14

[d] Copyright Impoundment

All of the provisions of Rule 65 apply to govern equitable relief claims in copyright impoundment proceedings. n15 In a "copyright impoundment" proceeding, the court hearing a pending copyright action determines whether to order transfer of possession of documentation and physical articles that can store the subject matter of a copyright, such as copies, phonorecords, tapes, or film, when the articles constitute the subject matter of an action for copyright infringement. n16 As part of a final judgment or decree, the court may order the destruction or other reasonable disposition of all such articles that the court has found to have been made or used in violation of the copyright owner's exclusive rights. n17

Rule 65(f) was added to replace the antiquated and inconsistent Copyright Rules of Practice that formerly applied to impoundment proceedings. Courts now proceed under Rule 65 whenever utilizing discretionary impoundment under Section 503. n18

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.07, 65.70 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Oregon Laborers Employers Health & Welfare Trust Fund v. Philip Morris, Inc., 185 F.3d 957, 967-968 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See United States v. Holy Land Found., 493 F.3d 469, 473-474 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Erie Railroad Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Combs v. Shelter Mut. Ins. Co., 551 F.3d 991, 1002 (10th 2008) (court must apply law of forum state in determining whether to grant mandatory injunctive relief in diversity cases).

(n6)Footnote 5. Sims Snowboards, Inc. v. Kelly, 863 F.2d 643, 647 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Walker v. Armco Steel Corp., 446 U.S. 740, 750, 100 S.Ct. 1978, 1985, 64 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1980) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Modern Computer Sys., Inc., v. Modern Banking Sys., Inc., 871 F.2d 734, 737 n.5 (8th Cir. 1989) ; Sims Snowboards, Inc. v. Kelly, 863 F.2d 643, 647 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Grupo Mexicano de Desarrollo S.A. v. Alliance Bond Fund, Inc., 527 U.S. 308, 318-319, 119 S. Ct. 1961, 144 L. Ed. 2d 319 (1999) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(e)(1).

(n11)Footnote 2. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 101, 104, 107, 108 (specific requirements for issuance of injunction during labor dispute); see also Boys Markets, Inc. v. Retail Clerk's Union, 398 U.S. 235, 246-247, 90 S. Ct. 1583, 26 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1970) (9 U.S.C. § 101 et seq. did not proscribe order of injunction against strike in violation of no strike obligation when grievance at issue was subject to adjustment under collective bargaining agreement).

(n12)Footnote 3. International Ass'n of Machinists & Aerospace Workers v. Eastern Airlines, 925 F.2d 6, 9 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n13)Footnote 4. *Lexington Childrens Ctr. v. Dist. Council 1707, AFSCME, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4290, at 27 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 17, 2004) .

(n14)Footnote 5. See Boys Markets, Inc. v. Retail Clerk's Union, 398 U.S. 235, 246-247, 90 S. Ct. 1583, 26 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1970) .

(n15)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(e)(2); see 28 U.S.C. § 2361.

(n16)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 2361.

(n17)Footnote 9. See Star Ins. Co. v. Cedar Valley Express, LLC, 273 F. Supp. 2d 38, 42 (D.D.C. 2002) .

(n18)Footnote 9. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Shawver, 208 F. Supp. 464, 470 (W.D. Mo. 1962) (equitable principles permitted restraining order even though procedures of Rule 65 were not necessarily applicable).

(n19)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(e)(3); see 28 U.S.C. § 2284.

(n20)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 2284.

(n21)Footnote 12. See Morrill v. Weaver, 224 F. Supp. 2d 882, 887-888 (E.D. Pa. 2002) .

(n22)Footnote 13. Williamsport v. United States, 273 F. Supp. 899, 901 (M.D. Pa. 1967) .

(n23)Footnote 14. See Ann Arbor R. Co. v. United States, 358 F. Supp. 933, 935 (E.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n24)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(f).

(n25)Footnote 16. 17 U.S.C. § 503(a)(1); *see Epic Games, Inc. v. Altmeyer, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89758, at *6-12 (S.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 2008) (application of Rule 65 provisions in proceedings to impound alleged pirated copies of DVDs of computer games).

(n26)Footnote 17. 17 U.S.C. § 503(b).

(n27)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(f), Committee Note to 2001 Amendments; *see Pem America, Inc. v. Sunham Home Fashions, LLC, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24801, at 6 n.2 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 12, 2003) (Rule 65(f) has replaced former Copyright Rule 4).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART I. NATURE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 10A.07through 10A.19

Reserved

§§ 10A.07Reserved

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FACTORS THAT DETERMINE ISSUANCE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.20

§ 10A.20 General Considerations Related to Injunctive Reliefn*

[1] Subject Matter and Personal Jurisdiction

A court may order injunctive relief only if it has both subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction over the party or parties that will be subject to the injunction. n1 With respect to subject matter jurisdiction, a claim for injunctive relief must be based either on federal question jurisdiction n2 or diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n3 Thus, Rule 65 merely sets forth the procedure for obtaining injunctive relief; it does not provide an independent basis for personal or subject matter jurisdiction. n4

Because of the equitable nature of injunctive relief, personal jurisdiction over a party, while always required, is not necessarily sufficient for the court to order an injunction. Thus, even if the court has personal jurisdiction over the defendant, it has discretion to refuse an application for injunctive relief if the injunction would affect conduct of persons or property rights outside of the court's jurisdiction. n5 Courts are generally reluctant to grant injunctive relief when the injunctive order could affect property rights in another jurisdiction. n6 Courts are also very reluctant to issue an injunction directed toward defendants before the court when the injunction would bind unidentified and non-party individuals. n7

[2] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

A court may not ordinarily grant a claim for injunctive relief until the claimant has exhausted other available remedies for the claim. n1 In particular, if a claimant seeks injunctive relief regarding administrative action or inaction, the claimant cannot obtain that relief until the claimant has exhausted any administrative remedies expressly prescribed by any statute or agency rule, and the agency action is final and therefore subject to judicial review. n2

The exhaustion doctrine is an expression of executive and administrative autonomy and is particularly applicable where the function of the agency and the particular decision sought to be reviewed involve the exercise of discretionary powers granted the agency by Congress or require application of special expertise. n3 On the other hand, exhaustion is not required if the subject matter of the injunctive request does not involve the decision of an administrative agency. Thus, it was held that exhaustion of administrative remedies was not required prior to an applicant's filing suit under the Administrative Procedure Act challenging an administrative agency's regulations as facially violative of Federal

Election Campaign Act, because the suit involved a question of law regarding the agency's power and not the agency decision itself. n4

Exhaustion is required whenever another remedy for the particular claim is clearly provided by statute or regulation. n5 On the other hand, when not clearly required by statute, the district court has discretion to award injunctive relief, even when a claimant has failed to exhaust administrative remedies. n6 Furthermore, the court may grant injunctive relief in the absence of exhaustion of a clear requirement to exhaust, n7 provided the applicant makes a clear showing of irreparable injury. n8

[3] Inadequacy of Remedy at Law

Because it is an equitable remedy, the court may not grant injunctive relief when an adequate remedy at law exists for the movant. n1 Conversely, if there exists an adequate remedy at law, the court may deny a request for injunctive relief. n2 For example, a court denied injunctive relief in one case where it concluded that the plaintiff was able to protect a potential money judgment by attaching the defendant's assets. n3 While an inadequate remedy at law is required for an injunction, it is only one factor in the equitable determination necessary for injunctive relief, and a movant will not be able to support a request for injunctive relief without showing the additional equitable factors. n4

The movant may show a lack of an adequate remedy at law by showing that alternative legal remedies, while available in theory, are difficult to measure or speculative. n5 An adequate remedy at law may also be deemed unavailable if the legal remedy could be recovered only through multiple, successive litigation claims, such as when the defendant repeatedly causes damages to the claimant. n6 Furthermore, a plaintiff may demonstrate a lack of an adequate remedy at law by showing that the awarding of damages by an alternative remedy may be insufficiently compensatory because of the type of harm caused by defendant's conduct. n7

One typical example of a an inadequate remedy at law is when a wrong causes damages to the claimant's reputation, credibility, or ability to continue its business viably. Such injuries to reputation are difficult to calculate, and, thus, money damages would be an inadequate remedy to compensate those injuries. n8

[4] Irreparable Injury

A claimant is entitled to injunctive relief only if the claimant can demonstrate to the court that the claimant would suffer irreparable injury in the absence of injunctive relief. An "irreparable injury" is harm to the claimant that the court would be unable to remedy even if the claimant prevailed on the merits in the final adjudication of the claim. n1 On the other hand, a court will deny injunctive relief if the harm alleged by the movant could be prevented or remedied by some other method. n2

It should be noted that irreparability is only one factor required for injunctive relief and a movant will not be able to obtain an injunction without showing the additional equitable factors. Thus, the moving party is also required to demonstrate that it has no adequate remedy at law, n3 and likelihood of success on the merits. n4 If the moving party can pass this threshold, the court will then consider any irreparable harm a preliminary injunction would cause to the nonmoving party, as well as the consequences to nonparties of granting or denying the requested relief. Then, sitting as would a court of equity, the court will weigh all of these factors on a sliding scale; thus, the more likely that the plaintiff will succeed on the merits, the less the balance of harms need favor the plaintiff. n5

[5] Probability of Future Violations

Because it is prospective only, n1 injunctive relief will not be granted unless the claimant shows that there is a reasonable likelihood that the claimant will prevail on the merits of the claim, and that the defending party's wrongful act or omission will occur in the future. n2 To determine the likelihood of future wrongdoing, the court should consider whether: (1) the defendant's wrong was isolated or part of a pattern, (2) whether the wrong was flagrant and deliberate or merely technical in nature, and (3) whether the defendant's business or activities will present opportunities to violate the law in the future. n3 None of these three factors is determinative; rather, the district court should determine the propensity for future wrong based on the totality of circumstances. n4 The moving party need not allege a reasonable likelihood of future violations with the specificity required by Rule 9(b), because the moving party could not be expected to allege with particularity an offense which has not yet happened. n5

[6] Balancing of Hardships and Equities

In making the determination of whether to grant a request for injunctive relief, a court must balance the hardship and equities faced by the claimant against the hardship the defendant would incur if the relief were granted. n1 In general, the court should grant an injunction if the hardship experienced by the movant exceeds the hardship experienced by the defendant. n2 Conversely, if the plaintiff fails to demonstrate that it would experience more hardship than the defendant if the injunction were denied, the court must deny the application for injunctive relief. n3 This requirement has also been expressed by some courts as a "balancing of the equities." n4 In this regard, the court must consider all of the equitable factors; however, the factors are to be balanced against one another, and each alone should not be considered a prerequisite to the grant of an injunction. n5

In its determination of the balance of hardships between the plaintiff and the defendant, the court also must consider potential harm to non-parties. Also, in assessing whether or not a court should issue a preliminary injunction, the public interest is a factor for consideration. n6 For example, in a case in which judicial candidates brought an action alleging that an enforcement policy embodied in advisory opinions of a state judicial inquiry commission violated their First Amendment rights and should be enjoined, the court held that the public interest would not be thwarted by granting the preliminary injunction. Without reaching the merits of the action, the court found that the public interest was well served because the duly elected officials were not hindered from performing their duties by the allegedly unconstitutional law. n7

[7] Other Equitable Considerations

Injunctive relief is a remedy in equity. Consequently the court should consider all applicable factors that are ordinary applied in equitable determinations. Thus, all of the defenses that the courts traditionally apply in equity are relevant for the court to consider in a determination of a claim for injunctive relief. In the first example, a court must consider the factor of whether the party seeking an injunction has itself acted wrongfully and therefore violated the "clean hands doctrine." n1 Even if a plaintiff has demonstrated both irreparable injury and a likelihood of success on the merits, a court may deny injunctive relief based on the defense of unclean hands if the movant is guilty of conduct involving fraud, deceit, unconscionability, or bad faith related to the matter at issue. n2 However, the court will consider that a movant has violated the "clean hands doctrine," only if the non-movant indicates to the court that the movant's alleged act or acts of bad faith were directly related to the issue sought to be adjudicated in the underlying action. n3

In determining a request for injunctive relief, a court must apply the "clean hands doctrine" to the both the movant and the non-movant. n4 It should be noted that even if the non-movant demonstrates that the movant acted in bad faith or in violation of the clean hands doctrine, such a violation by itself is not dispositive in determining whether to grant injunctive relief, as the court must consider all of the equities. n5

In addition to the unclean hands doctrine, the court should consider in its injunctive relief determination any other applicable equitable principles, including laches, equitable estoppel, n6 waiver, and acquiescence. n7 To prevent a denial of injunctive relief based on laches, the claimant should have commenced its claim as soon as the claimant he or she had knowledge of the wrongful conduct or omission. n7.1 Any unreasonable delay in commencing the action may bar injunctive relief on the grounds of laches or acquiescence. n8 However, while unreasonable delay may constitute laches which could preclude injunctive relief, mere delay in itself does not automatically preclude injunctive relief, n9 because delay is just one of many equitable factors to consider. n10

[8] Security for Temporary Injunctive Relief

[a] Requirement of Security

Except when the movant is the United States, or its officers or its agencies, the court may not issue a preliminary injunction or a temporary restraining order unless the movant gives security in an amount that the court determines proper to pay the costs and damages sustained by any party found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained. n1 This provision means that the court must always consider whether the movant must give security, but it also means that the court has wide discretion as to whether it actually requires security in a given case, n2 and it has discretion as to the amount of security. n3 It is reversible error for a court to order injunctive relief if the court has not even considered the security requirement. n4 A party may move the court to increase or decrease the amount of security so long as the restraint or injunction is in effect. n5

The purpose of the security requirement is to guarantee payment of damages andcosts incurred by a party who is wrongfully enjoined or restrained. n6 A party is "wrongfully enjoined or restrained," and therefore entitled to recover on the bond under Rule 65(c), when it is ultimately decided that the party enjoined had a right to do what it was enjoined from doing. n7 Federal and not state law determines what "costs and damages" are recoverable under bonds given to secure a restraining order or preliminary injunction. n8 In this regard, attorney's fees are not considered costs and are not recoverable from the security bond. n9 The wronged party may, however, recover interest on the amount of the bond from the time of its posting. n10

[b] Amount of Security

The district court has considerable discretion to set the amount of the security. However, it is important that the court specify a sufficient security, because the security must ensure the enjoined party that it may readily collect damages in the event that it was wrongfully enjoined, without further litigation and without regard to the possible insolvency of the applicant. n11 It has been held that, when setting an amount of security for injunctive relief, the district court should err on the high side. The rationale for this rule is that an error in setting bond too high is not serious, because the fee to post bond is usually a fraction of amount of the bond and because any recovery on the bond has to be supported by proof of actual damages. On the other hand, an error on the low side may produce irreparable injury, because the damages for erroneous preliminary injunction are limited to amount of bond. n12 For purposes of notification, and of facilitation of appellate review, circuit courts generally require that the district court explain its calculation of the security amount. n13

[c] Excuse From Security Requirements

A district court that issues a restraining or a preliminary injunction has the discretion to dispense with the security requirement of Rule 65(c) in extraordinary circumstances. n14 For example, the court may excuse the plaintiff from the requirement to post a bond or undertaking as a condition for the issuance of the preliminary injunction if the court finds that the defendants are unlikely to suffer any monetary damages as a result of the issuance of the injunction. n15 Other courts have stated they will not require security if a party lacks the financial resources to post a bond or if the bond requirement might discourage the initiation of a suit to enforce an important public interest. n16

In making its decision regarding security, the court may balance the potential hardships to the parties. n17 The court may also waive the posting of security when the party seeking injunctive relief has great wealth and therefore would be able to pay damages to a party later found to be wrongfully enjoined or restrained. n18 Another circuit has held that a district court has discretion to waive the security requirement if the injunctive order is issued to aid and preserve the court's jurisdiction over the subject matter involved. n19 Finally, the United States and its officers and agencies are exempt from the security requirement. n20

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Smith v. Woosley, 399 F.3d 428, 433 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. *Ma v. Rice, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29404, at *9-10 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 22, 2009) (federal question must be presented on face of complaint for injunctive relief).

(n4)Footnote 3. Advance Am. Servicing of Ark., Inc. v. McGinnis, 526 F.3d 1170, 1173 (8th Cir. 2008) (amount in controversy determined by value of restraining order or injunction to claimant).

(n5)Footnote 4. Univ. Gardens Apts. Joint Venture v. Johnson, 419 F. Supp. 2d 733, 742 (D. Md. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Vanity Fair Mills v. T. Eaton Co., 234 F.2d 633, 647 (2d Cir 1956) (injunctive relief seeking to prohibit conduct outside of court's jurisdiction should be exercised with great reluctance).

(n7)Footnote 6. Reebok Int'l, Ltd. v. Marnatech Enters., Inc., 737 F. Supp. 1515, 1519-1521 (S.D. Cal. 1989) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Summit Med. Assocs., P.C. v. Pryor, 180 F.3d 1326, 1342 (11th Cir. 1999) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d) (orders granting injunctive relief may bind only parties to action, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice).

(n9)Footnote 1. Irizarry v. United States, 427 F.3d 76, 79-80 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 2. Munsell v. Dep't of Agric., 509 F.3d 572, 579 (D.C. Cir. 2007) ; see Woodford v. Ngo, 548 U.S. 81, 88-89, 126 S. Ct. 2378, 165 L. Ed. 2d 368 (2006) .

(n11)Footnote 3. McKart v. United States, 395 U.S. 185, 194, 89 S. Ct. 1657, 23 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1969) .

(n12)Footnote 4. Becker v. Federal Election Comm'n, 112 F. Supp. 2d 172, 176-177 (D. Mass. 2000) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Woodford v. Ngo, 548 U.S. 81, 88-89, 126 S. Ct. 2378, 165 L. Ed. 2d 368 (2006) .

(n14)Footnote 6. Porter v. Nussle, 534 U.S. 516, 523, 122 S. Ct. 983, 152 L. Ed. 2d 12 (2002) (exhaustion of state administrative remedies is not prerequisite to order of injunctive relief against state officer in civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983).

(n15)Footnote 7. See Woodford v. Ngo, 548 U.S. 81, 89, 126 S. Ct. 2378, 165 L. Ed. 2d 368 (2006) .

(n16)Footnote 8. Sampson v. Murray, 415 U.S. 61, 83-84, 94 S. Ct. 937, 39 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1974) .

(n17)Footnote 1. Northern Cal. Power Agency v. Grace Geothermal Corp., 469 U.S. 1306, 1306, 105 S. Ct. 459, 83 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1984) ; Tanimura & Antle, Inc. v. Packed Fresh Produce, Inc., 222 F.3d 132, 137-138 (3d Cir. 2000) (dissipation of trust assets could render money damages inadequate).

(n18)Footnote 2. Sibley v. Lando, 437 F.3d 1067, 1073-1074 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n19)Footnote 3. Rosen v. Cascade Int'l, Inc., 21 F.3d 1520, 1530 (11th Cir. 1994) (injunctive relief was not proper when plaintiff was permitted to attach defendant's assets).

(n20)Footnote 4. Pulliam v. Allen, 466 U.S. 522, 537, 104 S. Ct. 1970, 80 L. Ed. 2d 565 (1984) (to obtain injunctive relief, plaintiff must show both inadequacy of legal remedies and risk of irreparable injury).

(n21)Footnote 5. Broadcom Corp. v. Qualcomm, Inc., 543 F.3d 683, 702 (Fed. Cir. 2008) (lost profits immeasurable when competition was based on "design wins," rather than sales on a unit by unit basis).

(n22)Footnote 6. B. Fernandez & HNOS, Inc. v. Kellogg USA, Inc., 516 F.3d 18, 25 (1st Cir. 2008) (damages based on recurring nature of breach).

(n23)Footnote 7. *AMTRAK v. Caln Twp., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20239, at *26-29 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2009) (recovery of damages by entity would not compensate for threat of fines to entity's employees).

(n24)Footnote 8. BP Chems., Ltd. v. Formosa Chem. & Fibre Corp., 229 F.3d 254, 263 (3d Cir. 2000) (if competitor's business operation was allowed to operate in violation of plaintiff's intellectual property trade-secret rights, it would cause damage because of public perception that plaintiff was unable to protect its proprietary trade secrets).

(n25)Footnote 1. See Phelps Roper v. Nixon, 545 F.3d 685, 694 (8th Cir. 2008) .

(n26)Footnote 2. See Dresser Rand Co. v. Virtual Automation, Inc., 361 F.3d 831, 848 (5th Cir. Tex. 2004) .

(n27)Footnote 3. See [3], above.

(n28)Footnote 4. See [5], below.

(n29)Footnote 5. *Eli Lilly & Co. v. Natural Answers, Inc., 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 29547, *6-7 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n30)Footnote 1. Illinois Bell Tel. Co. v. Worldcom Techs., 157 F.3d 500, 503 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n31)Footnote 2. Sierra Club v. Franklin County Power of Ill., LLC, 546 F.3d 918, 935 (7th Cir. 2008) ; Sheely v. MRI Radiology Network, P.A., 505 F.3d 1173, 1182 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n32)Footnote 3. United States v. Project on Gov't Oversight, 572 F. Supp. 2d 73, 79 (D.D.C. 2008) .

(n33)Footnote 4. SEC v. First City Financial Corp., 890 F.2d 1215, 1228 (D.C. Cir. 1989) .

(n34)Footnote 5. See United States v. Philip Morris, Inc, 116 F. Supp. 2d 131, 149 (D.D.C. 2000) .

(n35)Footnote 1. eBay Inc. v. MercExchange, L.L.C., 547 U.S. 388, 391, 126 S. Ct. 1837, 164 L. Ed. 2d 641 (2006) .

(n36)Footnote 2. See Winter v. NRDC, Inc., -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 261 (2008) (court determines whether equities balance in favor of claimant).

(n37)Footnote 3. Amoco Prod. Co. v. Village of Gambell, 480 U.S. 531, 545-546, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) .

(n38)Footnote 4. SG Cowen Securities Corp. v. Messih, 224 F.3d 79, (2d Cir. 2000) .

(n39)Footnote 5. Leary v. Daeschner, 228 F.3d 729, 736-737 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n40)Footnote 6. See Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 261-263 (2008) .

(n41)Footnote 7. Pittman v. Cole, 117 F. Supp. 2d 1285 (S.D. Ala. 2000) .

(n42)Footnote 1. Register.com, Inc. v. Verio, Inc., 356 F.3d 393, 436 (2d Cir. 2004) ; *Petro Franchise Sys., LLC v. All Am. Props., Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38145, at 46 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 23, 2009) .

(n43)Footnote 2. Estate of Lennon v. Screen Creations, Ltd., 939 F. Supp. 287, 293 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n44)Footnote 3. Jeffries v. Harleston, 828 F. Supp. 1066, 1096 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) , vacated on other grounds, 513 U.S. 996 (1994) .

(n45)Footnote 4. Duggal v. Krishna, 554 F. Supp. 1043, 1047 (D.D.C. 1983) .

(n46)Footnote 5. Shondel v. McDermott, 775 F.2d 859, 868 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n47)Footnote 6. Bridgeport Music, Inc. v. Justin Combs Publ'g, 507 F.3d 470, 494 (6th Cir. 2007) (one requirement of estoppel is that claimant must have used conduct or language to make representation of material fact, and that party asserting estoppel must have detrimentally and justifiably relied on representation).

(n48)Footnote 7. Info. Superhighway, Inc. v. Talk Am., Inc., 274 F. Supp. 2d 466, 472 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (acquiescence may be implied by active consent, which is conduct on claimant's part which amounts to assurance to other person that claimant would not assert rights against that person).

(n49)Footnote 7.1. Blue & Gold, Fleet, L.P. v. United States, 492 F.3d 1308, 1315 (Fed. Cir. 2007) (serious delay in raising claim may impact balancing of equities in determining whether injunction should be granted).

(n50)Footnote 8. Central Point Software, Inc. v. Global Software & Accessories, Inc., 859 F. Supp. 640, 645 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n51)Footnote 9. Software Testing Solutions, Inc. v. United States, 58 Fed. Cl. 533, 535-536 (2003) (delay may be considered in multi factored analysis of whether injunctive relief is warranted, based on application of laches and all other equitable doctrines).

(n52)Footnote 10. Members of Bridgeport Hous. Auth. Police Force v. Bridgeport, 646 F.2d 55, 63 (2d Cir. 1981) (four-year delay in commencing action did not constitute laches when delay did not prejudice defendant).

(n53)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c).

(n54)Footnote 2. RoDa Drilling Co. v. Siegal, 552 F.3d 1203, 1215 (10th Cir. 2009) .

(n55)Footnote 3. See [b], below.

(n56)Footnote 4. Corning, Inc. v. PicVue Elecs., Ltd., 365 F.3d 156, 158 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n57)Footnote 5. Continuum Co. v. Incepts, Inc., 873 F.2d 801, 804 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n58)Footnote 6. Blumenthal v. Merrill Lynch, 910 F.2d 1049, 1055-1056 (2d Cir. 1990) (former employees who were fully vindicated on central issue in arbitration dispute were entitled to damages shown to have been proximately caused by preliminary injunction and such damages were allowable up to limit of bond).

(n59)Footnote 7. Nintendo of Am., Inc. v. Lewis Galoob Toys, Inc., 16 F.3d 1032, 1036 (9th Cir. 1994) (when enjoined party ultimately prevailed in copyright infringement litigation, recovery on security bond was appropriate).

(n60)Footnote 8. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. S.E.K. Constr. Co., 436 F.2d 1345, 1351 (10th Cir. 1971) .

(n61)Footnote 9. Matek v. Murat, 862 F.2d 720, 734 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n62)Footnote 10. Silvers v. TTC Indus., Inc., 395 F. Supp. 1318, 1322 (E.D. Tenn. 1974) , aff'd on other grounds, 513 F.2d 632 (6th Cir. 1975) .

(n63)Footnote 11. Nichols v. Alcatel USA, Inc., 532 F.3d 364, 379 (5th Cir. 2008) (amount of security also provides movant with notice of maximum extent of its potential liability for wrongful injunction).

(n64)Footnote 12. Mead Johnson & Co. v. Abbott Labs., 201 F.3d 883, 888 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n65)Footnote 13. See Gateway E. Ry. v. Terminal R.R. Ass'n, 35 F.3d 1134, 1141 (7th Cir. 1994) ; see, e.g., Beth Medrash Eeyun Hatalmud v. Spellings, 505 F.3d 139, 142 (2d Cir. 2007) .

(n66)Footnote 14. Coquina Oil Corp. v. Transwestern Pipeline Co., 825 F.2d 1461, 1462 (10th Cir. 1987) .

(n67)Footnote 15. Service Employee Int'l Union v. Los Angeles, 114 F. Supp. 2d 966, 975 (C.D. Cal 2000) .

(n68)Footnote 16. Crowley v. Furniture & Piano Moving, Furniture Store Drivers, etc., 679 F.2d 978, 1000 (1st Cir. 1982) , rev'd on other grounds, 467 U.S. 526 (1984) .

(n69)Footnote 17. Temple Univ. v. White, 941 F.2d 201, 219-220 (3d Cir. 1991) .

(n70)Footnote 18. Continental Oil Co. v. Frontier Refining Co., 338 F.2d 780, 782-783 (10th Cir. 1964) .

(n71)Footnote 19. Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Distajo, 107 F.3d 126, 136 (2d Cir. 1997) (injunction issued to stay prosecution of parallel state suits in order to effectuate order compelling arbitration).

(n72)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c); see 28 U.S.C. § 2408; Squaxin Island Tribe v. Washington, 781 F.2d 715, 723-724 (9th Cir. 1986) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FACTORS THAT DETERMINE ISSUANCE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.21

§ 10A.21 Particular Considerations for Temporary Restraining Ordern*

[1] Purpose of Order

A "temporary restraining order" is an order that the court has discretion to use to preserve the status quo until the time the court can hear and determine a motion for a preliminary injunction, provided that the moving party establishes that it may suffer irreparable injury before the court can hear the motion. n1 The court may issue a temporary restraining order if it clearly appears from specific facts shown that the applicant for the order will suffer irreparable injury, loss, or damage before the adverse party or that party's attorney can be heard in opposition. n2 The court may grant a temporary restraining order without written or oral notice to the adverse party or that party's attorney, provided the TRO is based on specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified complaint, n3 and the moving party's attorney certifies in writing any efforts made to give notice and the reasons why it should not be required. n4 A temporary restraining order is an extraordinary remedy n5 that differs from a preliminary injunction in terms of duration, procedural requirements, and appealability. n6 A court that decides to grant a temporary restraining order must fix the duration of the order, not to exceed 14 days. However, a court may extend the temporary restraining order for an additional 14 days for good cause shown or the temporary restraining order may be extended by consent of the restrained party. n7 On the other hand, a preliminary injunction typically is ordered to remain in effect until a final determination on the merits of the claim. n8

[2] Order Generally Requires Notice and Hearing

The court has the option to issue a temporary restraining order without notice to a nonmoving party if certain rigid requirements are met by the moving party. However, when those requirements are not met, the court must require notice and a hearing for the nonmoving party before issuing a temporary restraining order. n1 The circumstances justifying the issuance of an ex parte temporary restraining order are extremely limited. Under federal law, ex parte temporary restraining orders should be restricted to serving their underlying purpose of preserving the status quo and preventing irreparable harm just so long as is necessary to hold a hearing, and no longer. n2 n3 One example of a situation in which notice is not required is when the non-movant is unidentifiable or cannot be found for purposes of giving notice. n4 However, if the location of the non-movant is known and service may be effected, and the movant fails to demonstrate an immediate injury that renders service impractical, the court will deny a request for an ex parte temporary restraining order. n5

[3] Factors Considered in Ruling on Motion for Temporary Restraining Order

[a] Trial Court's Discretion

The trial court has considerable discretion whether to grant an application for a temporary restraining order. n1 It should also be noted that the degree of discretion is so great that the decision on the TRO does not affect a subsequent decision on a preliminary injunction. Thus, the grant or denial of a temporary restraining order does not preclude the grant or denial of relief on a subsequent motion for a preliminary injunction. n2

The factors that a court must consider in its determination whether to grant a request for a temporary restraining order are substantially similar to the factors considered by the court in determining the merits of a motion for a preliminary injunction. n3 Thus, in determining whether to grant a temporary restraining order, the court must consider whether: n4 (1) there is a strong likelihood of success on the merits by the moving party; (2) irreparable injury would be suffered by the moving party if the relief is not granted; (3) that the threatened injury to the moving party outweighs the harm the relief would inflict on the non moving party; and (4) that entry of the relief would serve the public interest.

Each of these factors is not a prerequisite that must be met. Rather, the factors are interrelated considerations that the court must balance together. For example, the probability of success that must be demonstrated is inversely proportional to the amount of irreparable injury the moving party will suffer absent the grant of the TRO. n5

[b] Movant's Likelihood of Success on Merits

To make the determination of whether to grant or deny a motion for a temporary restraining order, the court must consider the movant's likelihood of success on the merits of the action. n6 If a movant demonstrates a likelihood of success, the court will weigh that factor in favor of granting a temporary restraining order. n7 On the other hand, if the court finds that a movant is unlikely to prevail on the merits, it will weigh against the granting of a temporary restraining order. n8 In some cases, when the alleged anticipated injury would be severe, the movant need not demonstrate such a high likelihood of success on the merits. n9

[c] Irreparable and Immediate Injury

In making a determination of whether to grant or deny an application for a temporary restraining order, the court must consider whether the movant is facing irreparable injury, and a finding by the court that the risk of irreparable injury is great weighs in favor of granting a temporary restraining order. n10 On the other hand, a finding that the movant does not face irreparable injury will weigh against granting a temporary restraining order. n11 Additionally, if the order is to be issued ex parte, the threatened harm must be immediate. n12

[d] Balance of Hardships Caused by Order

In its assessment, a court must balance the hardships that the grant of a temporary restraining order would impose on the parties. n13 If the harm experienced by the movant would be greater than the harm experienced by the non-movant if no action is taken, that determination will weigh in favor of granting a temporary restraining order. n14 By contrast, if the harm faced by the non-movant would be greater if no action is taken, that determination will weigh against granting a temporary restraining order. n15

[e] Impact of Order on Public Interest

In making its determination on a motion for a temporary restraining order, the court must consider the effect of its ruling on the public interest. n16

This "public interest" factor allows the court to take into account broad observations about conduct that is generally recognizable as costly or injurious, in contrast to favorable conduct. Furthermore, the court may utilize more precise considerations such as the purposes and interests of any underlying legislative intent, a preference for enjoining inequitable conduct, and the public's interest in minimizing unnecessary expenses that must be paid with public funds. n18

[f] Inadequacy of Remedy at Law

As another factor in making the determination of whether to grant or deny a motion for a temporary restraining order, the court must consider any other applicable equitable principle, n19 including whether the movant has a legal remedy at law. n20 If the movant appears to have alternative legal remedies available to redress its legal grievance, that factor weighs against the request for a temporary restraining order. n21

[4] Grant of Temporary Restraining Order Without Notice

[a] Requirements for Ex Parte Order

The court may grant a temporary restraining order without notice to the adverse party or its counsel under specified exigent circumstances. Before the court may order such an ex parte TRO without notice, the movant must demonstrate to the court by specific facts in an affidavit or a verified complaint that the applicant will suffer immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage before the adverse party or the adverse party's attorney may be heard in opposition. n1 If the movant fails to demonstrate immediate and irreparable injury, the court must deny the motion for a temporary restraining order. n2 Additionally, the movant must demonstrate to the court that efforts have been made to provide notice to the non-movant or that the circumstances underlying the request for a temporary restraining order justify granting the order without providing notice to the non-movant. n3 Because an ex parte temporary restraining order provides an exception to the general principle that a court must give notice and an opportunity to be heard to both sides before making an order in a dispute, n4 the requirements of Rule 65(b)(1) must be strictly followed. n5

A party may apply for an ex parte temporary restraining order either by verified complaint or by motion. n6 Furthermore, the application for an ex parte temporary restraining order must disclose facts sufficient to prove that the applicant will suffer immediate and irreparable damage before notice can be served, or the application will be denied. n7

[b] Contents of Ex Parte Order

If the court grants a temporary restraining order without notice, the TRO must state the date and hour of issuance, must be filed in the clerk's office and entered of record, must define the injury and state why it is irreparable, and must state why the order was granted without notice. The court order must also state the duration of a temporary restraining order granted without notice, which may not exceed 14 days. n8 If the order does not state an expiration date, the TRO automatically expires 14 days after entry by the clerk. n9

[c] Extension of Duration of Ex Parte Order

The initial duration of a TRO may be up to 14 days, as specified by the court. However, for good cause shown within the time specified in the initial order, the court may extend the duration for up to 14 additional days. The court must enter the reasons for the extension on the record. An extension may be granted for a longer period if the party against whom the order is directed consents to the extension. n10 However, courts generally are reluctant to grant more than one extension to the initial 14 day period, except by consent of the parties, n11 and therefore most temporary restraining orders will be limited to 28 days. n12

If a temporary restraining order would remain in effect beyond 14 days, it may be deemed a preliminary injunction for purposes of its appealability. This is because one of the primary distinctions between a TRO and a preliminary injunction is the limited duration of the TRO. n13 It is also clear that an order granting a preliminary injunction is immediately appealable, while an order granting a TRO is not. n14 Nevertheless, a district court has the power to continue a temporary restraining order for the purpose of reserving its decision on a motion for a preliminary injunction. n15

[d] Ex Parte Order Requires Expeditious Hearing on Preliminary Injunction

The purpose of a TRO is for the court to maintain the status quo while it has a decision on a preliminary injunction under consideration. n16 Because an the issuance of an ex parte TRO is a curtailment of the due process normally accorded a party, when a TRO is granted ex party without notice, the motion for a preliminary injunction must be scheduled for hearing at the earliest possible time, and the scheduling of the motion on the preliminary injunction takes precedence over all matters except older matters of the same character. n17 Furthermore, at the preliminary injunction hearing, the party who obtained the temporary restraining order must proceed with the application for a preliminary injunction and, if the party does not proceed, the court must dissolve the temporary restraining order at that time. n18

[5] Modification or Dissolution of Temporary Restraining Orders

A party that is the subject of a temporary restraining order may appear before the court and move for dissolution or modification of the TRO on two days' notice, or on any shorter notice that the court specifies, to the party who obtained the temporary restraining order. The court must promptly hear and determine the motion to modify or dissolve a TRO. n1 Because a TRO is always based on changing and temporary conditions or circumstances, the issuing court may modify the injunctive relief to reflect such changing events. n2 A modification or dissolution may be granted if the restrained party establishes to the court's satisfaction that the circumstances of the case have changed or that it would be severely injured by the injunctive relief. n3

If the restrained party is able to demonstrate to the court that circumstances have changed so that there is no need for a temporary restraining order or that the movant abused the court's order by seeking an unnecessary extension, the court may dissolve the order. n4 The determination of the court in assessing whether to modify an injunctive order is whether the original purpose of the injunctive relief would be furthered. n5 Furthermore, a court may modify or dissolve an order if the underlying law supporting the original injunction was amended or repealed. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.30 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Garcia v. Yonkers Sch. Dist., 561 F.3d 97, 107 (2d Cir. 2009) ; Chi. United Indus. v. City of Chi., 445 F.3d 940, 942-944 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1),(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Steakhouse, Inc. v. City of Raleigh, 166 F.3d 634, 637 (4th Cir. 1999) (TRO is extraordinary remedy involving exercise of far reaching power that may be applied only in limited circumstances which clearly demand it); Home Line Furniture Indus., Inc. v. Banner Retail Mktg., LLC, 631 F. Supp. 2d 628, 632 (E.D. Pa. 2009)

(TRO is extraordinary remedy to be granted only in limited circumstances).

(n7)Footnote 6. Cathedral Rock of North College Hill, Inc. v. Shalala, 223 F.3d 354, 362 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b)(2).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Cathedral Rock of North College Hill, Inc. v. Shalala, 223 F.3d 354, 362 (6th Cir. 2000) ; Bear, Stearns & Co. v. Sharon, 550 F. Supp. 2d 174, 175-176 (D. Mass. 2007) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2).

(n10)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1),(2); see also [4], below.

(n11)Footnote 2. Reno Air Racing Ass'n v. McCord, 452 F.3d 1126, 1131 (9th Cir. 2006) .

(n12)Footnote 3. [RESERVED]

(n13)Footnote 4. First Tech. Safety Sys., Inc. v. Depinet, 11 F.3d 641, 650 (6th Cir. 1993) (normal circumstance for which district court would be justified in proceeding ex parte is where notice at that time to adverse party is impossible, as in case where adverse party is unknown or is unable to be found).

(n14)Footnote 5. American Can Co. v. Mansukhani, 742 F.2d 314, 321-322 (7th Cir. 1984) (district court erred in granting ex parte temporary restraining order when identity of adverse party was known and time was not crucial factor).

(n15)Footnote 1. Chemical Bank v. Haseotes, 13 F.3d 569, 573 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Logan v. Dayton Hudson Corp., 865 F.2d 789, 790 (6th Cir. 1989) (trial court's decision may be overturned only for abuse of discretion, which is defined as definite and firm conviction that trial court committed clear error of judgment).

(n16)Footnote 2. Interox Am. v. PPG Indus., Inc., 736 F.2d 194, 198 (5th Cir. 1984) (temporary restraining order was granted, preliminary injunction was denied).

(n17)Footnote 3. See Northeast Ohio Coalition for the Homeless v. Blackwell, 467 F.3d 999, 1009 (6th Cir. 2006) ; see also Baker Elec. Co op. v. Chaske, 28 F.3d 1466, 1472 (8th Cir. 1994) (primary distinctions between TRO and preliminary injunction are 10-day (now 14-day) maximum duration of TRO and fact that order granting preliminary injunction is immediately appealable, while TRO is not).

(n18)Footnote 4. Summit County Democratic Cent. & Exec. Comm. v. Blackwell, 388 F.3d 547, 550 (6th Cir. 2009) .

(n19)Footnote 5. Schiavo ex rel. Schindler v. Schiavo, 403 F.3d 1223, 1225-1226 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n20)Footnote 6. Dayton Area Visually Impaired Persons, Inc. v. Fisher, 70 F.3d 1474, 1480 (6th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1135 (1996) .

(n21)Footnote 7. Kansas Hosp. Ass'n v. Whiteman, 835 F. Supp. 1548, 1553-1554 (D. Kan. 1993) (movant seeking to enjoin increase in medicaid co-pay fee demonstrated likelihood of success on merits).

(n22)Footnote 8. D.J. Miller & Assocs., Inc. v. Ohio Dep't of Administrative Services, 115 F. Supp. 2d 872, 882-883 (S.D. Ohio 2000) (minority-owned business that established likelihood of success on merits on its civil rights claim arising from alleged unlawful termination of its contract with state agency was entitled to temporary restraining order barring award of contract to other individual or entity); Mayo v. United States Govt. Printing Office, 839 F. Supp. 697, 700 (N.D. Cal. 1992) , aff'd on other grounds, 9 F.3d 1450 (9th Cir. 1993) (movant requesting restraint against conduct of Government Printing Office failed to demonstrate likelihood of success on merits).

(n23)Footnote 9. Towers Financial Corp. v. Dunn & Bradstreet, Inc., 803 F. Supp. 820, 823 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n24)Footnote 10. United States v. Jenkins, 974 F.2d 32, 35 (5th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 985 (1993) .

(n25)Footnote 11. Berman v. Lamer, 874 F. Supp. 102, 106 (E.D. Pa. 1995) .

(n26)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b); Gullo Produce Co. v. A.C. Jordan Produce Co., 751 F. Supp. 64, 67 (W.D. Pa.1990) .

(n27)Footnote 13. National Football League Players Ass'n v. Pro-Football, 849 F. Supp. 1, 1-2 (D.D.C. 1993) (court denied temporary restraining order in case after considering that loss to football league would outweigh harm to union); *ZAS Int'l Agric., B.V. v. ZAS USA, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12330, 3 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (denying plaintiff's request for an ex parte temporary restraining order because court was unwilling to effectively close down defendants' businesses and endanger existing trust assets absent specific showing that assets were actually threatened with dissipation).

(n28)Footnote 14. D.J. Miller & Assocs., Inc. v. Ohio Dep't of Administrative Services, 115 F. Supp. 2d 872, 882-883 (S.D. Ohio 2000) (district court held that: potential harm to minority-owned business if state awarded contract to another individual outweighed any delay that state might experience while court made its determination on merits); Heather K. v. City of Mallard, 887 F. Supp. 1249, 1260-1261 (N.D. Iowa 1995) (balance of equities favored movant seeking to enjoin municipality from burning waste).

(n29)Footnote 15. National Football League Players Ass'n v. Pro-Football, 849 F. Supp. 1, 2 (D.D.C. 1993) .

(n30)Footnote 16. Goshen Rd. Envt'l. Action v. United States Dept. of Agric., 891 F. Supp. 1126, 1132 (E.D.N.C. 1995) .

(n31)Footnote 18. Wachovia Sec., L.L.C. v. Stanton, 571 F. Supp. 2d 1014, 1048 (N.D. Iowa 2008) .

(n32)Footnote 19. See Leary v. Daeschner, 228 F.3d 729, 736-737 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n33)Footnote 20. See Our Co. v. Eagle Snacks, Inc., 812 F. Supp. 6, 7-8 (D. Me. 1993) .

(n34)Footnote 21. Our Co. v. Eagle Snacks, Inc., 812 F. Supp. 6, 7-8 (D. Me. 1993) (TRO inappropriate when alleged injuries could be remedied by award of money damages).

(n35)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1)(A).

(n36)Footnote 2. Belgard v. Hawaii, 883 F. Supp. 510, 517 (D. Haw. 1995) (inmate failed to demonstrate immediate and irreparable injury of denial of constitutional right to exercise religious beliefs, warranting denial of request for temporary restraining order).

(n37)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1)(B).

(n38)Footnote 4. United States v. Kaley, 579 F.3d 1246, 1264 (11th Cir. 2009) .]

(n39)Footnote 5. Granny Goose Foods, Inc. v. Brotherhood of Teamsters & Auto Truck Drivers, 415 U.S. 423, 438-439, 94 S. Ct. 1113, 39 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1974) (noting stringent restrictions imposed by Rule 65 on availability of ex parte temporary restraining orders).]

(n40)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1)(A); In re President of Georgetown College, 331 F.2d 1000, 1001 n.2 (D.C. Cir. 1964) .

(n41)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1)(A); Sampson v. Murray, 415 U.S. 61, 91-92, 94 S. Ct. 937, 39 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1974) .

(n42)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(2).

(n43)Footnote 9. See Granny Goose Foods, Inc. v. Brotherhood of Teamsters & Auto Truck Drivers, 415 U.S. 423, 425-428, 94 S. Ct. 1113, 39 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1974) (construing former time periods).

(n44)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(2).

(n45)Footnote 11. See R&G Mortg. Corp. v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 584 F.3d 1, 6 (1st Cir. 2009) (construing former time periods).

(n46)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(2) (court may extend for "like period").

(n47)Footnote 13. AT&T Broadband v. Tech Communs., Inc., 381 F.3d 1309, 1314 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n48)Footnote 14. Baker Elec. Co-op. v. Chaske, 28 F.3d 1466, 1472 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n49)Footnote 15. SEC v. Unifund SAL, 910 F.2d 1028, 1034 (2d Cir. 1990) (district court is not prevented from continuing temporary restraining order while reserving decision on motion for preliminary injunction).

(n50)Footnote 16. Chi. United Indus. v. City of Chi., 445 F.3d 940, 942-944 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n51)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(3).

(n52)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(3); see Hudson v. Barr, 3 F.3d 970, 975-976 (6th Cir. 1993) (any delay in holding hearing to determine merits of motion for preliminary injunction requires dissolution of temporary restraining order).

(n53)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(4).

(n54)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Gilmore v. California, 220 F.3d 987, 1000 (9th Cir. 2000) (under provision of Prison Litigation Reform Act, district court is bound to modify any injunctive order necessary to correct current and ongoing violation of federal right, provided that relief is limited to enforcing the constitutional minimum); Nicacio v. INS, 797 F.2d 700, 706 (9th Cir. 1985) (court that issues injunctive relief retains jurisdiction to modify terms of relief if change in circumstances requires modification).

(n55)Footnote 3. See Transgo, Inc. v. Ajac Transmission Parts Corp., 911 F.2d 363, 365 (9th Cir. 1990) (appellant in trademark and copyright infringement action was required to demonstrate substantial change in circumstance to justify modification of order).

(n56)Footnote 4. New York State Ass'n for Retarded Children v. Carey, 706 F.2d 956, 967-970 (2d Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 915 (1983) ; see O'Brien v. Moore, 395 F.3d 499, 501-502 (4th Cir. 2005) .

(n57)Footnote 5. Patterson v. Newspaper & Mail Deliverers' Union, 13 F.3d 33, 38-39 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 809 (1994) (injunctive relief may be modified or vacated when original objectives of injunction have been satisfied).

(n58)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Protectoseal Co. v. Barancik, 23 F.3d 1184, 1187 (7th Cir. 1994) (injunctive relief was dissolved when Clayton Act underlying original injunction order was amended).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FACTORS THAT DETERMINE ISSUANCE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.22

§ 10A.22 Particular Considerations for Preliminary Injunctionn*

[1] Purpose

A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary equitable remedy that a court has discretion to order to prevent irreparable injury to any party during pending litigation until final judgment n1 and to protect the court's ability to render a meaningful decision on the merits of the litigation. n2 Usually, this purpose is furthered by preservation of the status quo between parties before the dispute, n3 but this is not always true. If the currently existing status quo itself is causing one of the parties irreparable injury, the court must make an affirmative order that alters the situation to prevent injury, either by returning to the last uncontested status quo between the parties, or by allowing the parties to take proposed action that the court finds will minimize the irreparable injury. n4 Consequently, when courts refer to a status quo with respect to a preliminary injunction, they are referring to the last uncontested status of the parties which preceded the pending dispute. n4.1 Because a decision whether to grant a preliminary injunction is a decision that has only temporary effect, and does not constitute an adjudication on the merits, a decision on a preliminary injunction is customarily granted on the basis of procedures that are less formal and evidence that is less complete than in a trial on the merits. n5

To preserve the status quo until final adjudication, a trial court may fashion a preliminary injunctive order in any reasonable way the court deems proper; it is not obligated to grant or deny the request for preliminary injunction as a whole. n6 Additionally, a court may condition its grant of a preliminary injunction on the conduct of the moving party. n7 An order granting a preliminary injunction remains effective until final adjudication of the matter on the merits. Thus, following a grant of a preliminary injunction, if a plaintiff withdraws the complaint or the action is dismissed for any reason, the preliminary injunction becomes ineffective. n8

[2] Standards Considered by Court

[a] Court Must Balance Equitable Factors

A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that: n1 (1) the plaintiff is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary injunctive relief; (2) he or she is likely to succeed on the merits; (3) the balance of equities weighs in the plaintiff's favor; and (4) an injunction is in the public interest. n1.1 After there has been this threshold showing, the district court then balances these four factors to determine if it should issue the preliminary injunction. n2

With minor variations, the courts in all thirteen of the federal circuits use this basic standard to determine whether the court should issue a preliminary injunction. For a complete and detailed discussion of the precise standard used in each circuit, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.22[5].

It is important to note that the court must consider all of the factors specified above and any other applicable equitable factors; however, the positives and negatives of each factor must be balanced, and the individual factors do not constitute prerequisites to the grant of an injunction. n3

Several circuits have stated that a heightened standard applies when a movant seeks one of three types of preliminary injunctions that are disfavored by the courts: n3.1 (1) one that disturbs the status quo; (2) one that is mandatory as opposed to prohibitory; or (3) one that grants substantially all the relief the movant could recover at the conclusion of a full trial on the merits. The Tenth Circuit has held that any preliminary injunction fitting within one of the disfavored categories must be more closely scrutinized to assure that the exigencies of the case support the granting of a remedy that is extraordinary even in the normal course. n3.2

[b] Irreparable Injury

A party seeking preliminary injunctive relief must demonstrate that irreparable injury to the party is likely to result unless the court grants the injunction. Thus, the plaintiff must show a likelihood of irreparable injury rather than just a possibility. Furthermore, the likelihood of irreparable injury is required even if the plaintiff shows likely success on the merits. n4 For preliminary injunction purposes, an "irreparable injury" means an injury that cannot be adequately compensated with a monetary award even if the moving party prevails in the final judgment. On the other hand, an injury is not irreparable if it is remote or speculative. n5 For example, courts have commonly found irreparable harm when a party is likely to lose a business enterprise, because the ability to continue a business is not measurable entirely in monetary terms. n6 Similarly, courts have found irreparable harm in the loss of a relatively unique product. n7 Other injuries that have been held to be irreparable are possible bankruptcy, n8 loss of an opportunity to pursue a tender offer, n9 disclosure of confidential information, n10 deprivation of statutory rights, n11 and deprivation of constitutional rights. n12

Irreparable harm is not difficult to establish when the impairment of First Amendment rights is at issue--direct penalization of First Amendment rights constitutes irreparable injury for the purpose of granting a preliminary injunction. n13 Furthermore, the loss of First Amendment freedoms for even minimal periods of time constitutes irreparable injury justifying the grant of a preliminary injunction. n14 Another area where irreparable harm is typically found is injury to the environment. The United States Supreme Court has noted that environmental injury, by its nature, can seldom be adequately remedied by money damages and is often permanent or at least of long duration, and therefore irreparable. If such injury is sufficiently likely, the balance of harms will usually favor the issuance of an injunction to protect the environment. n15

However, because irreparable injury does not occur when a claimant can be adequately compensated with monetary damages, n16 loss of income or other economic loss that is capable of calculation and compensable by monetary damages ordinarily will not be considered an irreparable injury. n17 A typical example of an injury that courts have deemed not to be irreparable for preliminary injunction purposes is discharge from employment. n18 n19-20

[c] Reasonable Likelihood of Success on Merits

In its determination whether to grant a preliminary injunction, a district court must consider whether the movant has demonstrated that it is likely to prevail on the merits. n21 Likelihood of success on the merits requires that the moving party find support for its position in the law that governs the underlying claim, including a consideration of which party has the burden of proof. Therefore, if the nonmoving party has the burden of proof on a substantive element of a claim or defense and the nonmoving party has not met that burden, the court will decide that the moving party will likely succeed on its claim for purposes of a preliminary injunction determination. n21.1

In order to weigh in the movant's favor, the movant's success on the merits must be at least sufficiently likely to support the kind of relief that the movant requests. n22 However, while the movant must establish facts to support a likelihood of success, it need not demonstrate a certainty of success. n23 Thus, at the early stage of a preliminary injunction motion, the speculative nature of the "likelihood of success" precludes any automatic or mathematical application of the test. Rather, a court should flexibly weigh the case's particular circumstances to determine whether the balance of equities so favors the movant that justice requires the court to intervene to preserve the status quo until the merits are determined. n24 Thus, the court is not deciding whether the movant for a preliminary injunction will ultimately win. n25

[d] Balancing of Relative Harm to Interested Parties

Another factor the court must consider in its determination of whether it should issue the preliminary injunction is the balance of harm between the parties n26 and whether issuance of a preliminary injunction would cause substantial harm to others. n27 Under this factor, the court must balance the injury faced by the applicant for an injunction and other interested persons against the injury that would be sustained by the defendant if relief were granted. n28 If the hardship experienced by the movant if the injunction were denied outweighs the hardship suffered by the non-movant if the injunction were granted, the court should grant preliminary injunctive relief. n29 On the other hand, if the hardship suffered by the non-movant if the injunction were granted outweighs the likely hardship to the movant if the injunction were denied, the court should deny preliminary injunctive relief. n30 In assessing the balance of hardships between plaintiff and defendant, the court should also must consider potential harm to non-parties. n31

[e] Public Interest

In exercising its discretion whether to grant a preliminary injunction, the district court must pay particular regard to examine the public consequences if an injunction is granted. n32 To resolve this factor, the court should not consider the validity or the merits of the claim. Rather, the court should merely determine whether the public interest would be served by granting the preliminary injunction. n33 In some cases, there may be public policy considerations that weigh both in favor and against the issuance of a preliminary injunction. In such cases, the court must balance the conflicting public interests. n33.1

In cases involving only private interests, this factor is not important as in actions that clearly implicate government policy or regulation, or other matters of public concern. n34 Matters that involve the public interest include policies of Congress, the executive branch, and local governments regarding the environment, n35 law enforcement, n36 issues of employment, n37 regulation of banks and savings and loan institutions, n38 and protection of the public health. n39

[3] Other Equitable Considerations

Because it is an equitable remedy, n1 the district court must consider any pertinent equitable ground in its determination of a motion for a preliminary injunction, in addition to the viability of a plaintiff's claims and the public interest. n2 Rule 65 does not specify a particular standard for the determination of a motion for a preliminary injunction, and therefore the courts have evaluated motions for a preliminary injunction on the basis of such traditional equitable grounds. n3

In almost all cases, the court must consider whether an adequate remedy at law is available. n4 If an adequate remedy at law is available, the courts will deny a request for preliminary injunctive relief. n5 An applicant for a preliminary injunction may show a lack of an adequate remedy at law by showing that any alternative legal remedies are immeasurable or merely speculative. n6 However, while lack of an adequate remedy at law is a necessary condition for a preliminary injunction, it will not, by itself, be sufficient to justify a grant of injunctive relief; all equitable factors must be considered by the court. n7

In addition to the adequacy of the legal remedy, other equitable considerations that may be relevant to a ruling on a motion for a preliminary injunction include the "unclean hands doctrine," n8 and the doctrines of laches, estoppel, waiver, and acquiescence. n9 Therefore, a movant should commence an action and seek preliminary injunctive relief as soon as he or she has knowledge of defendant's alleged harmful conduct. Any unreasonable delay in commencing the action may bar preliminary injunctive relief on the grounds of laches or acquiescence. n10

[4] Pleadings Related to Preliminary Injunction

A party may request preliminary injunctive relief, and a hearing on whether it should be granted, either in the complaint, by a motion, n1 or by an offer to show cause. n2 If a party submits the allegations in a complaint in support of a motion for a preliminary injunction, the complaint must be verified or the court will not consider the complaint in ruling on the motion. n3 In other words, in an application for a preliminary injunction, the movant must offer proof beyond unverified allegations in the pleadings, or the motion will be denied. n4

[5] Submission of Affidavits and Other Documents

Parties regularly submit affidavits in support of or in opposition to a motion for a preliminary injunction. n1 Affidavits submitted in support of the motion must clearly set forth the basis for its submission. Vague or conclusory affidavits will be disregarded n1.1 or will result in denial if they are the only support for the motion. n2 Although affidavits based on mere belief or hearsay statements may be considered by the trial court in evaluating a request for preliminary injunctive relief, affidavits based on actual personal knowledge are more persuasive to the court. n3 The requirements of Rule 56(e) for affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment are not applicable to affidavits in support of a preliminary injunction, because injunctive relief is discretionary and not a final decision on the merits. n4

In addition to affidavits, the court may consider other types of written materials in deciding a motion for a preliminary injunction. Thus, the court may consider depositions taken under oath (deposition testimony may be more even persuasive than affidavits, particularly if the deponent was subjected to cross-examination). n5 Transcripts of prior proceedings and hearings may also be considered by the court in support of a motion for a preliminary injunction. n6

[6] Court's Determination of Whether to Grant or Deny Preliminary Injunction

[a] Due Process Generally Requires Notice and Hearing

Generally a court may not grant a preliminary injunction if the movant has failed to provide timely notice to the opposing party. n1 However, Rule 65 does not specify the type of notice required; therefore, whether or not particular notice in the circumstances is adequate is within the discretion of the district court. n2 Furthermore, it is apparent that proper service of the complaint and summons on the adverse party and notice of the time and place of the hearing on the preliminary injunction are sufficient notice. n3

Because the court may not issue a preliminary injunction without notice to the adverse party, there is an implication that the adverse party is entitled to a hearing in which the party will have a fair opportunity to oppose the application and to prepare for such opposition. n4 A hearing is not an absolute requirement and is in the discretion of the court. If an application for a preliminary injunction presents a close factual question and time permits, the district court should conduct an evidentiary hearing before deciding whether to issue the injunction. Thus, if the parties vigorously dispute the material facts, and the record is too meager to allow meaningful assessment of the plaintiff's likelihood of success on the merits, a failure to conduct an evidentiary hearing will constitute a reversible error as an abuse of discretion. n5

On the other hand, a court need not hold a hearing to determine a preliminary injunction if it would be unnecessary because no dispute exists between the parties regarding material facts, n6 or it would be a futile exercise to hold a hearing. n7 Furthermore, it has been held that a court may grant a preliminary injunction without a hearing if the opposition to the injunction does not request a hearing. n8

[b] Procedural Considerations Regarding Hearing

Either before or after a court begins a hearing on an application for a preliminary injunction, the court has the option to advance and consolidate the trial of the action on the merits with that hearing, provided that the court fulfills two requirements. First, a court may order a consolidation of a hearing and trial on the merits if consolidation would cause a party to be denied the right to a jury trial on the merits of any legal claims. n9 If a party properly asserts a jury trial right, a separate trial must be held on those claims, and the court must separately hear and determine the equitable claims for injunctive relief. n10 The second limitation is that the court may not order consolidation if the court has not provided clear and unambiguous notice of the proposed consolidation and the failure to provide notice would prejudice a party. Indisputably clear notice to the parties before approving a consolidation is required to ensure coverage of all relevant issues and to afford the parties a complete and fair opportunity to present all relevant evidence. n11 Consequently, a party can have the decision of a trial on the merits set aside if the party can show that it was prevented from presenting relevant and admissible evidence because the consolidation was held without the required notice. n12

Consolidation is discretionary, and the trial court may order advancement and consolidation either on the motion of a party, stipulation by all parties, or sua sponte. n13 Consolidation is particularly appropriate when it appears that a substantial part of the evidence offered on the application will be relevant to the merits and will be presented in such form that it qualifies for admission on the trial proper. n14

[c] Burden of Proof

To obtain a preliminary injunction, the moving party has the burden of proof to establish the specific harm caused by the opposition and the other necessary elements, including showing irreparable injury, a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits, that the harm to the movant outweighs the possible harm to other interested parties, and any harm to the public interest. n15 However, the Supreme Court has held that, with respect to the likelihood of success on the merits of the claim, the burden of proof for purposes of a preliminary injunction may be altered by the burden of proof associated with the underlying claim. Thus, the party opposing a preliminary injunction may have the ultimate burden to establish that the opposing party will prevail. For example, if the preliminary injunction seeks to prevent an alleged governmental restriction on religious freedom rights, the government in its opposition has the burden to prove that it has a compelling interest to impose the restriction on religion. n16

[d] Testimonial Evidence

The district court has the option to receive testimonial evidence at the hearing on a preliminary injunction, n17 but it is not required to do so unless the court must make credibility determinations to resolve key factual disputes. n18 The parties also have the option to present testimonial evidence in support of or against a motion for a preliminary injunction unless otherwise ordered by the court. n19 When oral testimony is taken, the court will base its decision on the motion for preliminary injunction on the totality of its observation of the witnesses' testimony and the written documents. n20

Depending on the circumstances, the court may order that a motion for preliminary injunction may be determined entirely on a review of the record in the case, including affidavits filed by the parties, or that it be decided wholly or partly on oral testimony. n21 Because a preliminary injunction hearing requires an adequate presentation of the facts, the courts are generally reluctant to decide disputed factual issues on the basis of the record and affidavits alone. n22 Furthermore, if the court is required to make credibility determinations to resolve key factual disputes regarding the preliminary injunction, it is an abuse of discretion for the court to make the determination solely on documentary evidence. n23 However, when the record before the court permits it to conclude that there is no factual dispute that must be resolved by an evidentiary hearing, a preliminary injunction may be granted or denied without hearing oral testimony. n24 It has also been held that a hearing may be waived by one of the parties. n25 If a party wants to have the court hold an evidentiary hearing, it must make a motion for the hearing in the district court. Even if the district court's decision to hold a hearing is erroneous, it will not be reversed on appeal unless the objection was made in the trial court. n26

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Owner-Operator Indep. Drivers Ass'n v. Swift Transp. Co., 367 F.3d 1108, 1111 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Owner-Operator Indep. Drivers Ass'n v. Swift Transp. Co., 367 F.3d 1108, 1111 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 3. LGS Architects, Inc. v. Concordia Homes, 434 F.3d 1150, 1158 (9th Cir. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Mastrovincenzo v. City of New York, 435 F.3d 78, 89 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 4.1. Schrier v. Univ. of Colo., 427 F.3d 1253, 1260 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n7)Footnote 5. Kos Pharms., Inc. v. Andrx Corp., 369 F.3d 700, 718 (3rd Cir. 2004) .

(n8)Footnote 6. Maxam v. Lower Sioux Indian Community, 829 F. Supp. 277, 284 (D. Minn. 1993) .

(n9)Footnote 7. Oxford House v. Albany, 819 F. Supp. 1168, 1177-1178 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) (preliminary injunction was granted to permit continued use of location as group home for drug and alcohol abusers on condition that movant's apply for use variance within 60 days).

(n10)Footnote 8. Venezia v. Robinson, 16 F.3d 209, 211 (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 815 (1994) (preliminary injunction does not survive dismissal of complaint).

(n11)Footnote 1. See [b]-[e], below.

(n12)Footnote 1.1. Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 261 (2008) .

(n13)Footnote 2. BP Chems., Ltd. v. Formosa Chem. & Fibre Corp., 229 F.3d 254, 263 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n14)Footnote 3. United States v. Edward Rose & Sons, 384 F.3d 258, 261 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 3.1. Schrier v. Univ. of Colo., 427 F.3d 1253, 1260 (10th Cir. 2005) ; see Sun Microsystems, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp., 333 F.3d 517, 525 (4th Cir. 2003) ; Lake Charles Diesel, Inc. v. GMC, 328 F.3d 192, 196 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n16)Footnote 3.2. Schrier v. Univ. of Colo., 427 F.3d 1253, 1260 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 262 (2008) .

(n18)Footnote 5. E. St. Louis Laborers' Local 100 v. Bellon Wrecking & Salvage Co., 414 F.3d 700, 706-707 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n19)Footnote 6. See Gateway E. Ry. v. Terminal R.R. Ass'n, 35 F.3d 1134, 1139-1140 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n20)Footnote 7. Reuters Ltd. v. United Press Int'l, Inc., 903 F.2d 904, 908-909 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n21)Footnote 8. Seide v. Crest Color, Inc., 835 F. Supp. 732, 738 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 9. Martin-Marietta Corp. v. Bendix Corp., 690 F.2d 558, 568 (6th Cir. 1982) (time is of essence in tender offer and plaintiff would suffer irreparable injury if deprived of opportunity guaranteed to tender offerors by statute).

(n23)Footnote 10. Jak Productions, Inc. v. Wiza, 986 F.2d 1080, 1084 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n24)Footnote 11. United States v. Nutri-Cology, Inc., 982 F.2d 394, 398 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n25)Footnote 12. Doe v. Duncanville Indep. Sch. Dist., 994 F.2d 160, 166 (5th Cir. 1993) (irreparable injury resulting from violation of establishment of religion clause).

(n26)Footnote 13. See Butler v. Alabama Judicial Inquiry Comm'n, 111 F. Supp. 2d 1241, 1249 (M.D. Ala. 2000) .

(n27)Footnote 14. Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373, 96 S. Ct. 2673, 49 L. Ed. 2d 547 (1976) .

(n28)Footnote 15. Amoco Prod. Co. v. Village of Gambell, AK, 480 U.S. 531, 545, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 1404, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) .

(n29)Footnote 16. Watkins Inc. v. Lewis, 346 F.3d 841, 844-845 (8th Cir. 2003) (adequate damages for lost profits).

(n30)Footnote 17. Hughes Network Sys. v. Interdigital Communications Corp., 17 F.3d 691, 694 (4th Cir. 1994) .

(n31)Footnote 18. Moore v. Consol. Edison Co. of N.Y., Inc., 409 F.3d 506, 510-511 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n32)Footnote 19-20. [Reserved]

(n33)Footnote 21. Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 261 (2008) .

(n34)Footnote 21.1. Gonzales v. O Centro Espirita Beneficente Uniao do Vegetal, 546 U.S. 418, 429-430, 126 S. Ct. 1211, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1017 (2006) ; see Ashcroft v. ACLU, 542 U.S. 656, 666, 124 S. Ct. 2783, 159 L. Ed. 2d 690 (2004) ; see [6][c], below.

(n35)Footnote 22. Curtis 1000 v. Youngblade, 878 F. Supp. 1224, 1247 (N.D. Iowa 1995) .

(n36)Footnote 23. Abdul Wali v. Coughlin, 754 F.2d 1015, 1024-1025 (2d Cir. 1985) (movant need only show that probability of success is more likely than not).

(n37)Footnote 24. United Indus. Corp. v. Clorox Co., 140 F.3d 1175, 1179 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n38)Footnote 25. Glenwood Bridge, Inc. v. Minneapolis, 940 F.2d 367, 371 (8th Cir. 1991) .

(n39)Footnote 26. Hughes Network Sys. v. Interdigital Communications Corp., 17 F.3d 691, 693-694 (4th Cir. 1994) .

(n40)Footnote 27. Leary v. Daeschner, 228 F.3d 729, 736-737 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n41)Footnote 28. BP Chems., Ltd. v. Formosa Chem. & Fibre Corp., 229 F.3d 254, 263 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n42)Footnote 29. Statharos v. New York City Taxi & Limousine Comm'n, 198 F.3d 317, 321 (2d Cir. 1999) ; Rubbermaid Commercial Prods. v. Contico Int'l, 836 F. Supp. 1247, 1256 (W.D. Va. 1993) .

(n43)Footnote 30. Virginia Carolina Tools, Inc. v. International Tool Supply, Inc., 984 F.2d 113, 119-120 (4th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 508 U.S. 960 (1993) (threat of insolvency by non-movant outweighed threat of lost business and related harms to movant.

(n44)Footnote 31. See Leary v. Daeschner, 228 F.3d 729, 736-737 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n45)Footnote 32. Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 263-265 (2008) .

(n46)Footnote 33. Charles H. Wesley Educ. Found., Inc. v. Cox, 408 F.3d 1349, 1355 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n47)Footnote 33.1. Winter v. NRDC, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 365, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249, 263-265 (2008) (public interest considerations for secure national military defense outweighed public interest considerations in environmental protection).

(n48)Footnote 34. Yakus v. United States, 321 U.S. 414, 441, 64 S. Ct. 660, 88 L. Ed. 834, 28 Ohio Op. 220 (1944) (courts much more likely to deny equitable relief when only private interest is involved).

(n49)Footnote 35. See Amoco Prod. Co. v. Village of Gambell, AK, 480 U.S. 531, 545, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 1404, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) ; American Motorcyclist Ass'n v. Watt, 714 F.2d 962, 967 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n50)Footnote 36. Spiegel v. City of Houston, 636 F.2d 997, 1002-1003 (5th Cir. 1981) (preliminary injunction was reversed when it would have hindered legitimate law enforcement to detriment of public interest).

(n51)Footnote 37. EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753-755 (9th Cir. 1991) (compelling public interest in preventing unlawful employment discrimination and in vindicating right of victims of discrimination warranted departure from clean hands doctrine and favored grant of preliminary injunction).

(n52)Footnote 38. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Dixon, 835 F.2d 554, 557-558 (5th Cir. 1987) (in public interest, court upheld preliminary injunction freezing assets of allegedly wrongdoing officers and directors of savings and loan).

(n53)Footnote 39. United States v. Odessa Union Warehouse Co-op, 833 F.2d 172, 176 (9th Cir. 1987) (finding that public had strong interest in consuming unadulterated wheat, court reversed denial of preliminary injunction).

(n54)Footnote 1. See Henderson v. Stalder, 112 F. Supp. 2d 589, 592-593 (E.D. La. 2000) .

(n55)Footnote 2. Charles H. Wesley Educ. Found., Inc. v. Cox, 408 F.3d 1349, 1354 (11th Cir. 2005) .

(n56)Footnote 3. SEC v. Mono-Kearsarge Consol. Mining Co., 167 F. Supp. 248, 260 (D. Utah 1958) .

(n57)Footnote 4. Northern Cal. Power Agency v. Grace Geothermal Corp., 469 U.S. 1306, 1306, 105 S. Ct. 459, 83 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1984) (party seeking injunction from federal court must invariably show that it does not have adequate remedy at law); Tanimura & Antle, Inc. v. Packed Fresh Produce, Inc., 222 F.3d 132, 137-138 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n58)Footnote 5. Van Arsdel v. Texas A & M Univ., 628 F.2d 344, 346 (5th Cir. 1980) (preliminary injunction was properly denied when plaintiff employee could be otherwise compensated by receipt of back pay and reinstatement of teaching position).

(n59)Footnote 6. Basicomputer Corp. v. Scott, 973 F.2d 507, 512 (6th Cir. 1992) (loss of customer goodwill constituted immeasurable damage and therefore complainant had no alternative remedy at law).

(n60)Footnote 7. Lopez v. Garriga, 917 F.2d 63, 68 (1st Cir. 1990) .

(n61)Footnote 8. Duggal v. Krishna, 554 F. Supp. 1043, 1047 (D.D.C. 1983) .

(n62)Footnote 9. Kay v. Austin, 621 F.2d 809, 813 (6th Cir. 1980) (injunctive relief was precluded by laches when movant delayed seeking remedy for failure to place name on primary ballot for presidential race).

(n63)Footnote 10. See Acierno v. New Castle County, 40 F.3d 645, 654 (3d Cir. 1994) (delay of 12 years in commencing action was considered in denial of preliminary injunctive relief).

(n64)Footnote 1. James Luterbach Constr. Co. v. Adamkus, 781 F.2d 599, 603 n.1 (7th Cir. 1986) (probably best practice if attorney seeking temporary relief makes motion for preliminary injunction separate from prayer for relief in complaint).

(n65)Footnote 2. Plaquemines Parish Sch. Bd. v. United States, 415 F.2d 817, 824 (5th Cir. 1969) (offer to show cause generally constitutes sufficient notice for motion for preliminary injunction).

(n66)Footnote 3. Gaylor v. Reagan, 553 F. Supp. 356, 358 (W.D. Wis. 1982) (motion for preliminary injunction was denied when movant submitted unverified complaint).

(n67)Footnote 4. Bascom Food Prods. Corp. v. Reese Finer Foods, Inc., 715 F. Supp. 616, 624 & n.14 (D.N.J. 1989) .

(n68)Footnote 1. Stanley v. University of S. Cal., 13 F.3d 1313, 1319-1320 (9th Cir. 1994) (opponent of preliminary injunction presented evidence to demonstrate it would suffer hardship by employee's affidavit and supporting exhibits; court agreed that affidavit demonstrate that preliminary injunction would cause hardship); Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Dixon, 835 F.2d 554, 558 (5th Cir. 1987) (affidavits are often reviewed in preliminary injunction hearings).

(n69)Footnote 1.1. *Tseng v. Home Depot USA, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18546, *7-8 (W.D. Wash. 2006) .

(n70)Footnote 2. Atari Games Corp. v. Nintendo of Am., Inc., 897 F.2d 1572, 1575 (Fed. Cir. 1990) (district courts must be wary of issuing injunction based solely on allegations and conclusory affidavits).

(n71)Footnote 3. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Dixon, 835 F.2d 554, 558 (5th Cir. 1987) (leniency in preliminary injunction stage allows court to give weight to even inadmissible evidence).

(n72)Footnote 4. Westpac Audiotext, Inc. v. Wilks, 756 F. Supp. 1267, 1268 (C.D. Cal. 1991) (evidentiary requirements for preliminary injunctions are not as rigid as those in motions for summary judgment); see Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Dixon, 835 F.2d 554, 558 (5th Cir. 1987) (preliminary injunction may be granted on less formal procedures than trial on merits).

(n73)Footnote 5. Kelly v. Gilbert, 437 F. Supp. 201, 210 (D. Mont. 1977) (court may consider deposition testimony in support of motion for preliminary injunctive relief, especially when witnesses are unavailable or facts of action are complex); Beauboeuf v. Delgado College, 303 F. Supp. 861, 862 (E.D. La. 1969) , aff'd on other grounds, 428 F.2d 470 (5th Cir. 1970) (court may determine motion for preliminary injunction on basis of adversary depositions).

(n74)Footnote 6. Redac Project 6426, Inc. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 402 F.2d 789, 789-790 (2d Cir. 1968) (transcript of prior hearing permitted in proceeding on motion for preliminary injunction); see Silverman ex rel. NLRB v. Imperia Foods, Inc., 646 F. Supp. 393, 394 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (court considered transcript of prior proceedings in lieu of evidentiary hearing); International Bhd. of Elec. Workers v. Eli, 307 F. Supp. 495, 505 (D. Haw. 1969) (transcript of previous hearing may be admitted in deciding preliminary injunction motion).

(n75)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a)(1) (no preliminary injunction may be issued without notice to adverse party); Lau v. Meddaugh, 229 F.3d 121, 123 (2d Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 833 (2001) (in advance of pretrial conference at which district court considered filing injunction, party opposing injunction was entitled to notice sufficient to allow party to prepare response).

(n76)Footnote 2. Dominion Video Satellite, Inc. v. Echostar Satellite Corp., 269 F.3d 1149, 1153-1154 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n77)Footnote 3. People ex rel. Hartigan v. Peters, 871 F.2d 1336, 1339-1341 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n78)Footnote 4. FTC v. Enforma Natural Prods., 362 F.3d 1204, 1217 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n79)Footnote 5. Rosario-Urdaz v. Rivera-Hernandez, 350 F.3d 219, 222-224 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n80)Footnote 6. In re Aimster Copyright Litig., 334 F.3d 643, 653-654 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n81)Footnote 7. Charette v. Town of Oyster Bay, 159 F.3d 749, 755 (2d Cir. 1998) (evidentiary hearing is not required if relevant facts have been clearly demonstrated in prior proceedings in the case or are capable of complete resolution on written record).

(n82)Footnote 8. Drywall Tapers and Pointers, Local 1974 v. Local 530 of Operative Plasterers & Cement Masons Int'l Ass'n, 954 F.2d 69, 77 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n83)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a)(2).

(n84)Footnote 10. Bowles v. Bennett, 629 F.2d 1092, 1095 (5th Cir. 1980) ; see Block v. Mollis, 618 F. Supp. 2d 142, 144 (D.R.I. 2009) (if no jury is demanded, court may make decisions on both consolidated non-jury trial and injunction hearing).

(n85)Footnote 11. Sanchez v. Esso Std. Oil Co., 572 F.3d 1, 15 (1st Cir. 2009) .

(n86)Footnote 12. D.L. Cromwell Invs. v. NASD Regulation, 279 F.3d 155, 160-161 (2d Cir. 2002) .

(n87)Footnote 13. Henderson v. Stalder, 112 F. Supp. 2d 589, 592 n.2 (E.D. La. 2000) .

(n88)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n89)Footnote 15. Forest City Daly Hous., Inc. v. Town of N. Hempstead, 175 F.3d 144, 149 (2d Cir. 1999) ; National Wildlife Fed'n. v. Burford, 878 F.2d 422, 432 (D.C. Cir. 1989) ; Kraft General Foods v. Allied Old English, 831 F. Supp. 123, 127 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n90)Footnote 16. Gonzales v. O Centro Espirita Beneficente Uniao do Vegetal, 546 U.S. 418, 428-430, 126 S. Ct. 1211, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1017 (2006) ; see Ashcroft v. American Civil Liberties Union, 542 U.S. 656, 666, 124 S. Ct. 2783, 159 L. Ed. 2d 690 (2004) (at preliminary injunction stage, government had same burden as it would at trial: that of showing constitutionality of content-based restrictions on speech).

(n91)Footnote 17. BP Chems., Ltd. v. Formosa Chem. & Fibre Corp., 229 F.3d 254, 268 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n92)Footnote 18. Cobell v. Norton, 391 F.3d 251, 261 (D.C. Cir. 2004) .

(n93)Footnote 19. Cobb v. Supreme Judicial Court, 334 F. Supp. 2d 50, 54 (D. Mass. 2004) .

(n94)Footnote 20. Farina v. Board of Educ., 116 F. Supp. 2d 503, 513 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) .

(n95)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 43(c).

(n96)Footnote 22. Atari Games Corp. v. Nintendo of Am., Inc., 897 F.2d 1572, 1575-1576 (Fed. Cir. 1990) .

(n97)Footnote 23. Cobell v. Norton, 391 F.3d 251, 261 (D.C. Cir. 2004) .

(n98)Footnote 24. Commerce Park v. Mardian Constr. Co., 729 F.2d 334, 341 (5th Cir. 1984) (testimonial hearing not required when preliminary injunction was denied on undisputed facts); Syntex Ophthalmics, Inc. v. Tsuetaki, 701 F.2d 677, 682 (7th Cir. 1983) (preliminary injunction was properly granted without evidentiary hearing when there was sufficient evidence before district court to allow it to conclude that plaintiff had reasonable likelihood of success on merits).

(n99)Footnote 25. *FTC v. Gregory Bryant, JR., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23315, at 5 (M.D. Fla. 2004) .

(n100)Footnote 26. Sunseri v. Macro Cellular Partners, 412 F.3d 1247, 1250 (11th Cir. 2005) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FACTORS THAT DETERMINE ISSUANCE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.23

§ 10A.23 Particular Considerations for Permanent Injunctionn*

When a party makes an application for a permanent injunction, the party must satisfy a four-factor test before a court will order the permanent injunction. The party must demonstrate: (1) that it has suffered an irreparable injury; (2) that remedies available at law, such as monetary damages, are inadequate to compensate for that injury; (3) that, considering the balance of hardships between the plaintiff and the defendant, a remedy in equity is warranted; and (4) that the public interest would not be disserved by a permanent injunction. n1 These four requirements must be satisfied in every case, and satisfaction of the four part test is not necessarily dependent on statutory elements or presumptions that are applicable to a particular underlying claim for relief. In other words, to order a permanent injunction, the court must examine the four requirements independent of the merits of a statutory claim based on the factual circumstances of the case. n2 Courts have noted that the requirements for a permanent injunction are nearly identical with those for a preliminary injunction; however, a permanent injunction has the added requirement of success on the merits. n3 In other words, the applicant must establish not just a substantial likelihood of success on the merits but must demonstrate actual success on the merits. n4

Because permanent injunctive relief is an equitable remedy, the decision to grant or deny relief is an act of equitable discretion by the district court, and is reviewable on appeal for abuse of discretion. n5 The court should order a permanent injunction only after taking into account all of the circumstances related to the need for prospective relief. A court should be particularly cautious when contemplating relief that implicates public interests. Because permanent injunctive relief is drafted in light of what the court believes will be the future course of events, a court must never ignore recent significant changes in the law or circumstances underlying an injunction. n6 As a corollary to this rule, another rule has developed that once a court has rendered a decision on the merits regarding a particular matter, the court may not order a preliminary injunction on that matter, but may grant only a permanent injunction. n7

Because it is the most extreme injunction in terms of its duration, a permanent injunction must be particularly tailored to the purpose of the relief, so that it is not too broad in scope. Therefore, the scope of the mandate of a permanent injunction must be as limited as practicable with respect to the parties and the activities enjoined; the scope must be narrowly tailored to protect the rights covered by the application for the injunction and the needs of the particular case. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent Injunctions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. eBay Inc. v. MercExchange, L. L. C., 547 U.S. 388, 391, 126 S. Ct. 1837, 164 L. Ed. 2d 641 (2006) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Monsanto Co. v. Geertson Seed Farms, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 2743, 177 L. Ed. 2d 461, 476-477 (2010) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Stolt-Nielsen, S.A. v. United States, 442 F.3d 177, 185 n.5 (3d Cir. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Amoco Production Co., 480 U.S. 531, 546, n.12, 107 S. Ct. 1396, 94 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1987) .

(n6)Footnote 5. eBay Inc. v. MercExchange, L. L. C., 547 U.S. 388, 391, 126 S. Ct. 1837, 164 L. Ed. 2d 641 (2006) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Salazar v. Buono, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 1803, 176 L. Ed. 2d 634, 646 (2010) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Golden Gate Hotel v. City & County of San Francisco, 836 F. Supp. 707, 709 (N.D. Cal. 1993) , vacated on other grounds, 18 F.3d 1482 (9th Cir. 1994) (preliminary injunction is inappropriate after court grants summary judgment).

(n9)Footnote 8. Ayotte v. Planned Parenthood, 546 U.S. 320, 330, 126 S. Ct. 961, 163 L. Ed. 2d 812 (2006) (rather than utilizing most blunt remedy of permanently enjoining enforcement of entire state statute, court should have limited scope to those particular provisions of statute that were unconstitutional); see also Tory v. Cochran, 544 U.S. 734, 738, 125 S. Ct. 2108, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1042 (2005) (permanent injunction as written constituted overly broad prior restraint on speech).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FACTORS THAT DETERMINE ISSUANCE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 10A.24 through 10A.39

[Reserved]

§§ 10A.24[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART III. SCOPE AND ENFORCEMENT OF INJUNCTIVE ORDERS

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.40

§ 10A.40 Requirements for Injunctive Ordersn*

[1] Every Injunctive Order Must Contain Specific Items

Each temporary restraining order and each order granting an injunction must set forth particular written statements, n1 including: the reasons for issuance of the order, n2 specific terms that give the substance of the order, n3 and a description, in reasonable detail, of the acts that are restrained or required by the order. n4 These requirements of Rule 65(d)(1) must be strictly followed because the terms of the injunction must provide a clear basis for any subsequent efforts to enforce it by contempt proceedings or otherwise n5 and to ensure that the courts and parties have knowledge of its exact scope and meaning. n6 Rule 65(d)(1) also requires the court to set out the injunction in a self-contained document. Thus, its required terms may not be specified by incorporating another document by reference. n7

However, a failure to comply with the requirements of Rule 65(d) does not render the injunction void. n8 It is still enforceable if the injunction is sufficiently definite to meet the requirements for a contempt proceeding. n9 Nonetheless, if the injunctive order fails entirely to set out a required statement, it is subject to an order of dissolution. n10 Furthermore, if the duties imposed by the injunction are not ascertainable, the appellate court may vacate or reverse the injunctive order. n11 Alternatively, a nonconforming injunction or restraining order may be remanded for clarification. n12

[2] Reasons and Findings for Order

Every order that a court makes granting an injunction and every restraining order must specify in detail the reasons the court is issuing the injunctive relief. n1 To satisfy this requirement, the court should directly address the key issue or issues and how the factual circumstances require a grant or denial of injunctive relief based on a resolution of the issues. n2 Some courts have noted that there are similar requirements for both Rules 65(d)(1) and 52(a). n3 However, even though a court's thorough written statement of findings and conclusions required by Rule 52(a)(1) or Rule 52(a)(2) may also satisfy the statement of reasons required by Rule 65(d)(1)(A), the court should not rely on one statement to comply with both rules. The best practice is for the court to make a separate statement of findings and conclusions and also a separate statement of the reasons for grant or denial of each injunction or restraining order. n4

[3] Order Must Be Specific

A restraining order or injunction must be specific in its terms. n1 The purposes of this specificity requirement are (1) to prevent uncertainty and confusion on the part of those who are subject to an injunctive order, so that they can avoid a possible contempt citation on a decree too vague to be understood; n2 (2) to provide a solid base for any subsequent efforts to enforce the injunction by contempt proceedings or otherwise; n3 and (3) to facilitate logical and informed review by an appellate court. n4 Consequently, if the court does not make its order specific, n5 the injunctive relief is not enforceable. n6

[4] Order Must Describe Acts Prohibited or Required

A restraining order or injunction must describe in reasonable detail the act or acts sought to be restrained or required. n1 The injunctive order may not make the description by reference to the complaint or other document. n2 The purpose of this requirement is to make the court frame its injunctions or restraining orders so that those who must obey them will know precisely what the court intends to forbid or require. n3 The injunction must also be detailed enough to provide a clear basis for any subsequent efforts to enforce the injunction by contempt proceedings. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsContempt

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.60 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. See [3], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See [3], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Marseilles Hydro Power, LLC v. Marseilles Land and Water Co., 299 F.3d 643, 646 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Schmidt v. Lessard, 414 U.S. 473, 476-477, 94 S. Ct. 713, 38 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1974) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(C); see Kennedy Bldg. Assocs. v. CBS Corp., 576 F.3d 872, 876 n.4 (8th Cir. 2009) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Lau v. Meddaugh, 229 F.3d 121, 123 (2d Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 833 (2001) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Marseilles Hydro Power, LLC v. Marseilles Land & Water Co., 299 F.3d 643, 647 (7th Cir. 2002) (injunction enforceable by contempt if there is core ascertainable duty imposed by injunction).

(n11)Footnote 10. Centennial Broad., LLC v. Burns, 433 F. Supp. 2d 730, 735-736 (W.D. Va. 2006) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Mishawaka v. American Elec. Power Co., 616 F.2d 976, 991 (7th Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1096 (1980) (injunction vacated because trial court did not specify details but merely incorporated broad language of statute).

(n13)Footnote 12. Seattle-First Nat'l Bank v. Manges, 900 F.2d 795, 800 (5th Cir. 1990) (when injunction merely made reference to other documents it was on its face insufficiently specific; however, court of appeals allowed injunction to remain in effect but remanded to enable district court to reform injunction to comply with Rule 65(d)).

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(A).

(n15)Footnote 2. Dexia Credit Local v. Rogan, 602 F.3d 879, 884 (7th Cir. 2010) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Compare Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a)(1),(2) with Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1).

(n17)Footnote 4. See Garcia v. Yonkers Sch. Dist., 561 F.3d 97, 104-105 (2d Cir. 2009) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(B); see Marseilles Hydro Power, LLC v. Marseilles Land & Water Co., 299 F.3d 643, 646 (7th Cir. 2002) (injunction order insufficient because it failed to include crucial details); Centennial Broad., LLC v. Burns, 433 F. Supp. 2d 730, 735-736 (W.D. Va. 2006) (injunction was sufficiently specific because it provided detailed, descriptive definition of type of television programming prohibited).

(n19)Footnote 2. Lau v. Meddaugh, 229 F.3d 121, 123 (2d Cir. 2000) (because injunctive order prohibits conduct under threat of judicial punishment, fairness requires that litigants receive explicit notice of precisely what conduct is outlawed).

(n20)Footnote 3. Marseilles Hydro Power, LLC v. Marseilles Land & Water Co., 299 F.3d 643, 646 (7th Cir. 2002) (even though "injunction" consisted of statement that plaintiff was entitled to enter on defendant's property in order to repair wall, it omitted crucial details, such as plaintiff's duty to purchase insurance against damage to the defendant company's property from repair activity).

(n21)Footnote 4. Schmidt v. Lessard, 414 U.S. 473, 476-477, 94 S. Ct. 713, 38 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1974) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; if trial court has not carefully framed its order of injunctive relief, it is impossible for appellate court to know precisely subject of appeal); Fonar Corp. v. Deccaid Services, Inc., 983 F.2d 427, 429-430 (2d Cir. 1993) (specific, detailed order for injunctive relief is necessary for appellate review).

(n22)Footnote 5. See Indian Educators Fed'n Local 4524 of the AFT, AFL-CIO v. Kempthorne, 590 F. Supp. 2d 15, 20 (D.D.C. 2008) .

(n23)Footnote 6. Florida Ass'n of Rehabilitation Facilities v. Florida Dep't of Health & Rehabilitative Servs., 225 F.3d 1208, 1222 (11th Cir. 2000) (preliminary injunction lacked precision and specificity necessary for it to be enforceable prospectively from date of its entry); see Schmidt v. Lessard, 414 U.S. 473, 476, 94 S. Ct. 713, 38 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1974) (lack of specificity hinders effective enforcement).

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(C); see Marseilles Hydro Power, LLC v. Marseilles Land & Water Co., 299 F.3d 643, 646 (7th Cir. 2002) (injunction order insufficient because it failed to include required as well as prohibited conduct); Centennial Broad., LLC v. Burns, 433 F. Supp. 2d 730, 735-736 (W.D. Va. 2006) (injunction provided detailed description of type of conduct that was prohibited).

(n25)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(1)(C).

(n26)Footnote 3. Lau v. Meddaugh, 229 F.3d 121, 123 (2d Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 833 (2001) (because injunctive order prohibits conduct under threat of possible contempt, fairness requires that litigants receive detailed notice of precisely what conduct is prohibited).

(n27)Footnote 4. Marseilles Hydro Power, LLC v. Marseilles Land & Water Co., 299 F.3d 643, 646 (7th Cir. 2002) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART III. SCOPE AND ENFORCEMENT OF INJUNCTIVE ORDERS

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.41

§ 10A.41 Persons Bound by Injunctive Ordern*

[1] Parties to Action

An injunctive relief order binds only the following who receive actual notice of the order by personal service or otherwise: (1) the parties; n1 (2) the parties' representatives, including parties' officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys; n2 and (3) other persons who are in active concert or participation with parties or their representatives. n3 With respect to representatives, n4 the rule is a codification of the common-law rule allowing the court to hold a nonparty in contempt for violating the terms of an injunction when the nonparty is legally identified with the party in interest, in privity with the party, representing the party, or subject to the party's control. n5

A restraining order or injunction is an "in personam" mandate or prohibition issued against a person over whom the court has acquired in personam jurisdiction. n6 Consequently, the court may not order injunctive relief in a purely in rem proceeding, which is a proceeding in which the court's jurisdiction is directed against specific property rather than a person such as an individual or corporation. n7 Thus, a court may enter an injunction or a restraining order against a person only if the court has personal jurisdiction over the person. n8

[2] Persons Acting in Concert With Party

Even a nonparty may be bound by the terms of an order granting a restraining order or injunction if the nonparty is in active concert or participation with the party. n1 The purpose of this rule is to ensure that defendants do not nullify an injunctive order by carrying out prohibited acts through aiders and abettors even though they were not parties to the original proceeding. The rule is a codification of the common-law rule allowing the court to hold a nonparty in contempt for violating the terms of an injunction when the non-party aids or abets the violation of an injunction. n2 For example, an injunction barring fraudulent transfer of assets was properly applied to the defendant's wife, because the wife had actively assisted the husband in the fraudulent transfers. n3 Similarly, an injunctive order was binding on Arizona corrections officials who were deemed to be acting in concert with Iowa corrections officials on the matter in question. n4 On the other hand, a nonparty who has acted independently of an enjoined or restrained party will not be bound by the injunction, and, if the nonparty has had no opportunity to contest its validity, may not be found in contempt without a separate adjudication. n5

[3] Requirement of Notice

A party, a party's representative, or a person acting in concert with a party is bound by an injunctve order only if the person has received actual notice of the order. Actual notice may be by personal service or by any other means. n1 Under the rule, a person has actual notice and may be held in contempt of an injunctive order if the person in fact has knowledge of the order by any means. n2 Generally, formal notice of the order need not be given to persons in privity with the defendant because such persons are deemed to have actual notice because of the nature of their relationship with the party. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.61 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2)(B).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2)(C); see [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Tesmer v. Granholm, 333 F.3d 683, 702-703 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 6. R.M.S. Titanic, Inc. v. Haver, 171 F.3d 943, 957 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 7. United States v. Casey, 444 F.3d 1071, 1075 (9th Cir. 2006) (it would not make sense for court to direct property to refrain from acting or to act in particular way).

(n9)Footnote 8. United States v. AMC Entm't, Inc., 549 F.3d 760, 774 (9th Cir. 2008) (court may command person subject to personal jurisdiction to perform specific acts, even outside of court's territorial jurisdiction).

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2)(C).

(n11)Footnote 2. Illinois v. United States Dept. of Health & Human Servs., 772 F.2d 329, 332 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 3. FDIC v. Faulkner, 991 F.2d 262, 267-268 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Sisneros v. Nix, 884 F. Supp. 1313, 1349-1352 (S.D. Iowa 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Microsystems Software, Inc. v. Scandinavia Online AB, 226 F.3d 35, 43 (1st Cir. 2000) (such a rule safeguards the rights of those who truly are strangers to an injunctive decree).

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2).

(n16)Footnote 2. See Katie A. v. Los Angeles County, 481 F.3d 1150, 1162 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n17)Footnote 3. Multi-Channel TV Cable Co. v. Charlottesville Quality Cable Operating Co., 22 F.3d 546, 550-551 (4th Cir. 1994) (injunction barring co-owners of residential apartment buildings applied to all owners even though only one co-owner was named in complaint).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART III. SCOPE AND ENFORCEMENT OF INJUNCTIVE ORDERS

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.42

§ 10A.42 Contempt for Violation of Injunctive Ordern*

[1] Enforcement by Contempt in General

Injunctive orders, including temporary restraining orders, preliminary injunctions, and permanent injunctions, are effective remedies particulary because the court has power to punish violations by civil or criminal contempt. n1 Civil contempt is remedial in nature. Civil contempt is designed both to coerce obedience and to compensate the complainant for losses sustained. n2 Consequently, the court may order civil contempt in the form of fines or incarceration until the violating party complies with the injunctive order. n3

On the other hand, the purpose of criminal contempt is to maintain the court's authority and dignity through punishment of the violator. n4 Even though the violation of a restraining order or an injunction typically is enforced through civil contempt, when appropriate it may also be punishable as a criminal contempt. n5 When the court has personal jurisdiction over a restrained or enjoined party, such party is bound by the restraining order or injunction, n6 and the court may utilize its appropriate power to punish for contempt. n7 If the violation of a restraining or injunctive order is punished as a criminal contempt, this adjudication is not affected by the reversal of the order disobeyed or by the basic action becoming moot. n8 However, civil contempt, which is remedial in nature, does necessarily become extinguished with the reversal of the injunction. n9 The essential elements of criminal contempt are a lawful and reasonably specific injunction order of the court and a willful violation of that order. In the context of punishment for violation of an injunction, "willfulness" means a volitional act done by one who knows or should reasonably be aware that his or her conduct is wrongful. n10

[2] Procedure

The federal courts have precisely and concisely outlined the procedure that is to be used for a party to request to have the district court enforce an injunction through the court's contempt power. If the party who obtained the injunction asserts that the enjoined party is failing to comply with the injunction, the party who obtained the injunction may move the court to issue an order to show cause why the enjoined party should not be adjudged in civil contempt and sanctioned. The moving party should specify the injunctive provisions that have been violated and the manner in which the enjoined party has disobeyed the court's restraining order or injunction. n1

If satisfied that the movant's motion states a case of noncompliance, the court will order the enjoined party to show cause why the enjoined party should not be held in contempt, and the court will schedule a hearing for that purpose. At the hearing, if the movant proves what he or she has alleged in the motion, the court then allows a response from the enjoined party. The court then determines whether the enjoined party has complied with the injunction and, if not, whether sanctions including civil or criminal contempt should be imposed as necessary to ensure compliance or as punishment of the violator. n2

[3] Enforcement Against Nonparty for Contempt

When the court has entered an injunctive order against a party over whom the court has personal jurisdiction, and the party has received actual notice of the order, that party is bound by the restraining order or injunction, n1 and the court may use its power to punish for contempt if the party violates the order. n2 However, even nonparties may be held in contempt if the nonparty has aided or abetted a party in a concerted violation of the injunction, provided the nonparty has actual notice of the injunctive order. n3 The purpose of this rule is to prevent nullification of an injunctive order by allowing a party to carry out prohibited acts through nonparty aiders and abettors. n4

The court may hold a nonparty in contempt for violation of an injunction only if the nonparty was in active concert or participation with the party specifically enjoined, usually the named defendant. This requires either that the court determines the nonparty aided and abetted the enjoined party in the enjoined conduct or that the nonparty has a legal relationship with that defendant. n5 The act of aiding or abetting or a legal relationship makes it fair to bind the nonparty, even if the nonparty has not had a separate opportunity to contest the original injunction, because the nonparty's close alliance with the enjoined defendant adequately assures that the nonparty's interests were sufficiently represented. However, a nonparty who has acted independently of the enjoined defendant will not be bound by the injunction, and, if the nonparty has had no opportunity to contest the validity of the injunction, he or she may not be found in contempt without a separate adjudication. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsContempt

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 65.80 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Consumers Gas & Oil, Inc. v. Farmland Indus., Inc., 84 F.3d 367, 370 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Ingalls v. Thompson, 588 F.3d 254, 264 (5th Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Worldwide Moving & Storage, Inc. v. District of Columbia, 445 F.3d 422, 425 (D.C. Cir. 2006) ; In re Bernales, 345 B.R. 206, 227 (C.D. Cal. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Ingalls v. Thompson, 588 F.3d 254, 264 (5th Cir. 2009) ; see also 18 U.S.C. § 401.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Stein v. Paradigm Mirasol, LLC, 586 F.3d 849, 855-856 (11th Cir. 2009) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d); GTE Sylvania, Inc. v. Consumers Union, 445 U.S. 375, 386-387, 100 S. Ct. 1194, 63 L. Ed. 2d 467 (1980) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Spallone v. United States, 493 U.S. 265, 276, 110 S. Ct. 625, 107 L. Ed. 2d 644 (1990) (in fashioning means to enforce judgment, district court has power to enforce compliance with judgment through civil contempt).

(n9)Footnote 8. United States v. United Mine Workers, 330 U.S. 258, 294, 67 S. Ct. 677, 91 L. Ed. 884 (1947) .

(n10)Footnote 9. In re Hunt, 754 F.2d 1290, 1293-1294 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n11)Footnote 10. United States v. Hoover, 240 F.3d 593, 596-597 (7th Cir. 2001) (upholding contempt because injunction order was sufficiently clear and contemnor should reasonably have been aware that his conduct was wrongful).

(n12)Footnote 1. See Porter v. Shah, 606 F.3d 809, 812 (D.C. Cir. 2010) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Reynolds v. Roberts, 207 F.3d 1288, 1298 (11th Cir. 2000) ; see United States v. Crawford (In re Crim. Contempt Proceedings Against Crawford), 329 F.3d 131, 135 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d)(2).

(n15)Footnote 2. New York State NOW v. Terry, 886 F.2d 1339, 1351-1352 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d); see Microsystems Software, Inc. v. Scandinavia Online AB, 226 F.3d 35, 43 (1st Cir. 2000) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Independent Fed'n of Flight Attendants v. Cooper, 134 F.3d 917, 920 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n18)Footnote 5. Blockowicz v. Williams, 675 F. Supp. 2d 912, 915 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (legal relationship such as agent, employee, officer, etc.).

(n19)Footnote 6. Microsystems Software, Inc. v. Scandinavia Online AB, 226 F.3d 35, 43 (1st Cir. 2000) ; see Samnorwood Indep. Sch. Dist. v. Tex. Educ. Agency, 533 F.3d 258, 265 (5th Cir. 2008) (nonparty has standing to appeal injunction that confronted nonparty with choice of either conforming its conduct to mandates of injunction or ignoring injunction and risking contempt proceedings).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 10A INJUNCTIONS
PART III. SCOPE AND ENFORCEMENT OF INJUNCTIVE ORDERS

1-10A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 10A.43

§ 10A.43 Appeal of Injunctive Ordern*

[1] Appealability of Orders Regarding Injunctive Relief

If an order has the very limited scope and duration of a temporary restraining order, the order is not immediately appealable. n1 An order is not immediately appealable whether the order grants, n2 denies, n3 or dissolves a temporary restraining order. n4 On the other hand, according to an express statutory provision, a district court's determination of an application for a preliminary injunction may be appealed to the court of appeals. n5 There is also a provision allowing direct review of a preliminary injunctive order in the United States Supreme Court, when the injunctive relief has been heard and determined by a district court of three judges. n6 Finally, because a permanent injunction is both an order modifying or resolving an injunction and also a final order on the merits, a permanent injunction is always immediately appealable. n7

It should be noted that the issue of appealability is not necessarily controlled by the terminology or labeling that a trial court uses for an injunctive order. n8 Thus, when a restraining order, even if denoted "temporary," is continued past the period prescribed by Rule 65(b), the courts have held that the restraining order is appealable as a preliminary injunction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1). n9 In a similar manner, when a grant or denial of a "temporary restraining order" actually disposes of the action for injunctive relief on the merits, the grant or denial has been held appealable as related to a preliminary injunction. n10

[2] Standard of Review

Because a grant or denial of a motion for injunctive relief is within the sound discretion of the district court, appellate courts generally review determinations whether to grant such relief solely for abuse of discretion. n1 An abuse of discretion means that, in making its determination, the district court has relied on clearly erroneous findings of fact, improperly applied the governing law, or used an erroneous legal standard. n2 This deferential standard of review n3 is applicable to district court determinations regarding both preliminary injunctions and permanent injunctions. n4 Courts have stated that because of its equitable nature, the district court's decision on the issuance of an injunction will be overruled only in the rarest of cases. n5

If the appellate court concludes that it was erroneous for the lower court to issue a preliminary injunction, the appellate court will ordinarily reverse the order and remand the case for further proceedings on the merits of the claim for relief. However, the appellate court has the option to decide the merits if the preliminary injunction was based on a question of law and it is plain that the plaintiff cannot prevail on the merits in any event. When the appellate court makes that determination, it may enter judgment for the defending party. n6

Questions of law are reviewed de novo at either a trial on the merits or at a hearing to determine whether to grant preliminary injunctive relief. n7 Also, the court will apply the de novo standard if the district court's preliminary injunction decision was made without a hearing or a documentary record. n8 On the other hand, questions of fact regarding either the merits or an order related to a preliminary injunction are reviewed under "clear error" standard, also referred to as the "abuse of discretion" standard. n9 "De novo" review means that the appellate court may disregard the district court's conclusions of law and formulate its own conclusions of law afresh, and may substitute its own legal conclusions for those of the trial court. The de novo standard is in contrast to the "abuse of discretion" or "clearly erroneous" standard used for review of factual findings. n10 Under the de novo standard, the appellate court is not required to show deference to the trial court's legal analysis and may freely overturn conclusions it considers wrong. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsTemporary Restraining OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 65.24, 65.41 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. SEIU v. Nat'l Union of Healthcare Workers, 598 F.3d 1061, 1067 (9th Cir. 2010) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Miller v. Mitchell, 598 F.3d 139, 145 (3d Cir. 2010) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Petraco-Valley Oil & Ref. Co. v. United States Dep't of Energy, 633 F.2d 184, 199 (Temp. Emer. Ct. App. 1980) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Leslie v. Penn C. R. Co., 410 F.2d 750, 751 (6th Cir. 1969) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1); see Wilderness Workshop v. United States Bureau of Land Mgmt., 531 F.3d 1220, 1223 (10th Cir. 2008) .

(n7)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1253.

(n8)Footnote 7. See United States v. Trans World Airlines, Incorporated, 18 F.3d 208, 213-214 (3d Cir. 1994) ; see also 28 U.S.C.A. § 1292(a)(1).

(n9)Footnote 8. AT&T Broadband v. Tech Communs., Inc., 381 F.3d 1309, 1314-1315 (11th Cir. 2004) (label placed on order does not control whether order is nonappealable temporary restraining order or appealable preliminary injunction).

(n10)Footnote 9. Sampson v. Murray, 415 U.S. 61, 86, 94 S. Ct. 937, 39 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1974) (temporary restraining order that extends in duration beyond time limits of Rule 65(b) must be treated as preliminary injunction for purposes of appealability); United States v. Crawford, 329 F.3d 131, 136-138 (2d Cir. 2003) (when district court extends temporary restraining order beyond 20-day period specified by Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b) [10 days plus 10-day extension], temporary restraining order becomes preliminary injunction for all purposes, including appealability); Branstad v. Glickman, 118 F. Supp. 2d 925 (N.D. Iowa 2000) ; see 28 U.S.C § 1292(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10. SEIU v. Nat'l Union of Healthcare Workers, 598 F.3d 1061, 1067 (9th Cir. 2010) (appellate court is not bound by what district court chooses to call TRO; order denominated as TRO that has qualities of preliminary injunction is appealable interlocutory order).

(n12)Footnote 1. Ashcroft v. ACLU, 542 U.S. 656, 664-665, 124 S. Ct. 2783, 159 L. Ed. 2d 690 (2004) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Gonzales v. National Bd. of Med. Examiners, 225 F.3d 620, 625 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n14)Footnote 3. United States v. Edward Rose & Sons, 384 F.3d 258, 261 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 4. ACLU v. Taft, 385 F.3d 641, 645 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 5. See McPherson v. Michigan High Sch. Athletic Ass'n, 119 F.3d 453, 459 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n17)Footnote 6. Munaf v. Geren, 553 U.S. 674, 128 S. Ct. 2207, 171 L. Ed. 2d 1, 17-18 (2008) (review of a preliminary injunction is not confined to act of granting that injunction, but also extends to determining whether there is any insuperable defeat of merits, which permits final judgment dismissing claim).

(n18)Footnote 7. Pendergest-Holt v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London, 600 F.3d 562, 569 (5th Cir. 2010) ; Teva Pharms. USA. Inc. v. FDA, 441 F.3d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 2006) .

(n19)Footnote 8. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Leslie & Elliott Co., 867 F.2d 150, 150-151 (2d Cir. 1989) (deference provided to lower court under abuse of discretion standard is inappropriate when proceedings in district court did not include evidentiary hearing nor reasons why such hearing was unnecessary).

(n20)Footnote 9. Miller v. Mitchell, 598 F.3d 139, 145 (3d Cir. 2010) .

(n21)Footnote 10. See Sabah Shipyard v. M/V Harbel Tapper, 178 F.3d 400, 404-405 (5th Cir. 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1048 (1999) .

(n22)Footnote 11. Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows, Inc. v. Utah Div. of Travel Dev., 170 F.3d 449, 453-454 (4th Cir. 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 923 (1999) .

60 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 11.syn

§ 11.syn Synopsis to Chapter 11: DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

§ 11.01 Table of Time Periods for Defending Party

§ 11.02 Significance of Appearance by Defendant

[1] Nature of Appearance in Federal Litigation

[2] Privileges and Liabilities of Person Making Appearance

[a] Default and Challenge to Personal Jurisdiction

[b] Discovery

§ 11.03 Raising Defense by Responsive Pleading or by Motion

[1] Distinction Between Defensive Pleading and Motion

[2] Use of Pleading or Motion to Respond to Plaintiff

§ 11.04 Time to Respond to Complaint

[1] Time Period Ordinarily Applicable to Respond

[2] Exceptions to Ordinary Time Period to Respond

[a] Exception When Defendant Files Particular Motion Prior to Answering

[b] Other Rules Providing Exceptions to Response Time

§ 11.05 Corporate Disclosure Statement

§ 11.05 Corporate Disclosure Statement

[a] Required Disclosure Statement

[b] Time for Filing

§§ 11.06 through 11.09 [Reserved]

§ 11.10 Defenses and Objections Generally Must Be Consolidated in Initial Response or Motion

[1] Mandatory Consolidation of Certain Motions

[2] Rationale for Consolidation

§ 11.11 Defenses That Are Waived if Not Raised at Earliest Opportunity

§ 11.12 Exception to Waiver for Fundamental Defenses

§ 11.13 Affirmative Defenses Subject to Waiver Under Separate Rule

§§ 11.14 through 11.19 [Reserved]

§ 11.20 Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Court or Party May Raise Objection at Any Time

[2] Court's Determination of Issue

[a] Time of Determination

[b] Procedure for Determination

[c] Effect of Determination

§ 11.21 Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

[1] Motion to Challenge Personal Jurisdiction Places Burden on Plaintiff

[2] Defense Waived if Not Made in Timely Manner

[3] Court's Determination of Issue

§ 11.22 Improper Venue

[1] Burden is on Defendant to Establish Impropriety

[2] Defense Waived if Not Made in Timely Manner

[3] Court's Determination of Issue

§ 11.23 Improper Form of Process or Service of Process

[1] Two Types of Motions Available

[2] Motion Must be Made in Timely Manner

[3] Court's Determination of Issue

§ 11.24 Failure to State Claim for Relief

[1] Defendant Must Show Failure to State A Claim

[2] Plaintiff Allowed to Amend Complaint After Motion to Dismiss

[3] Court's Decision on Motion to Dismiss

[a] Matters Considered By Court

[b] Consideration of Other Matters Converts Motion to Motion for Summary Judgment

[c] Court's Decision on Motion to Dismiss

[4] Effect of Grant of Dismissal

[a] Judgment on Merits

[b] Appellate Review

§ 11.25 Failure to Join Party

§ 11.26 Motion for Judgment on Pleadings

[1] Use of Motion

[2] Court's Decision on Motion

§ 11.27 Motion For More Definite Statement

[1] Use of Motion

[2] Motion Disfavored

[3] Effect of Grant of Motion

§ 11.28 Motion to Strike

[1] Use of Motion

[2] Court's Decision on Motion

§ 11.29 Procedural Considerations For Motions Raising Defenses and Objections

[1] Hearing is Optional for Court

[2] Effect of Granting Defensive Motion

§§ 11.30 through 11.39 [Reserved]

§ 11.40 Denials

[1] Standard of Pleading for Denial

[2] Use of Specific Denials

[3] Use of General Denials

§ 11.41 Failure to Deny Allegations in Pleadings

§ 11.42 Responses in Pleadings By Defendant

[1] Defendant Pleading Lack of Knowledge or Insufficient Information

[2] Defendant Must Answer in Good Faith

§§ 11.43 through 11.49 [Reserved]

§ 11.50 Requirement That Defendant Must Plead all Affirmative

[1] Specification of Required Affirmative Defenses

[2] Plaintiff Must Plead Other Matters of Avoidance

§ 11.51 Waiver By Failure to Raise Affirmative Defense

[1] Circumstances of Waiver

[2] Exception to Waiver Rule

§ 11.52 Affirmative Defense May Be Raised By Motion

§ 11.53 Affirmative Defenses Governed By Federal or State Substantive Law

§§ 11.53 through 11.59 [Reserved]

§ 11.60 Characteristics of Counterclaim

[1] Counterclaims May Be Compulsory or Mandatory

[2] Scope of Counterclaims Authorized by Rule

[3] Assertion of Counterclaim Obtained After Filing of Defendant's Initial Pleading

[4] Court's Discretion to Allow Counterclaim Omitted From Defendant's Initial Pleading

§ 11.61 Compulsory Counterclaims

[1] Defendant Must Plead Compulsory Counterclaim

[2] Logical Relationship Test

[3] Same Evidence Test

[4] Counterclaims Are Compulsory Only if Counterclaim Exists At Time Pleading Is Served

[5] Rule Applicable to Responsive Pleading Only

[6] Exceptions to Rules Requiring Pleading of Counterclaims

[a] When Claim is Subject of Another Suit

[b] When Court Lacks Jurisdiction Over Indispensable Party to Claim

[c] Claim In Suit by Attachment or Other Process Lacking In Personam Jurisdiction

[7] Effect of Failure to Plead Compulsory Counterclaim

§ 11.62 Permissive Counterclaims

[1] Nature of Permissive Counterclaims

[2] Use of Permissive Counterclaims

§ 11.63 Counterclaims by or Against United States

[1] Counterclaim Rule Does Not Abolish Sovereign Immunity

[2] United States Waives Sovereign Immunity for Recoupment Claims

[3] Express Statutory Waiver of Sovereign Immunity by United States

[4] United States May Assert Counterclaims

§ 11.64 Procedural Considerations for Counterclaims

[1] Jurisdiction

[a] Compulsory Counterclaims

[b] Permissive Counterclaims

[c] Jurisdiction Over Counterclaims May Be Based on Diversity of Citizenship

[d] Personal Jurisdiction

[e] Venue

[2] Counterclaim Constitutes Affirmative Claim for Relief By Defendant

[3] Counterclaim Is Asserted Only Against Opposition Party

[4] Designation as Counterclaim

[5] Statutes of Limitation

[6] Separate Judgment

[7] Other Procedural Issues

§§ 11.65 through 11.69 [Reserved]

§ 11.70 Purpose of Offer of Judgment

[1] Effect of Offer of Judgment

[2] Unaccepted Offer

[3] Purpose of Rule is to Promote Settlements

§ 11.71 Availability of Offer of Judgment Rule

[1] Offer Made by Defending Party

[2] Applicable Law

§ 11.72 Requirements for Offer

[1] Service and Filing Requirements

[2] Time of Offer and Revocability

[3] Amount of Offer

[4] Application of Contract Principles to Terms of Offer

§ 11.73 Requirements for Acceptance

[1] Service and Timing Requirements

[2] Application of Contract Principles to Terms of Offer

[3] Filing and Entry of Judgment on Accepted Offer

§ 11.74 Effect of Plaintiff's Failure to Accept Valid Offer

[1] When Defendant Prevails

[2] When Plaintiff Prevails

[3] Cost Shifting is Mandatory

[4] Determination of Whether Judgment is Not More Favorable Than Offer

[a] In General

[b] Consideration of Attorney Fees

[c] Consideration of Nonmonetary Relief

[5] Costs That Are Shifted

[a] In General

[b] Attorney Fees

§ 11.75 Appeal

[1] Postjudgment Relief

[2] Appellate Review

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART I. NATURE AND TIMING OF DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.01

§ 11.01 Table of Time Periods for Defending Partyn*

Service of answer or other responsive pleading--	21 days after service of complaint. Rule 12(a)(1)(A)(i).
Service of answer if service of summons was waived	60 days (or 90 days outside U.S.) after date of request of waiver. Rule 12(a)(1)(A)(ii).
United States as defendant	60 days. Rule 12(a)(2), (3).
Eminent domain, answer to complaint or amendment	21 days after service of notice on defendant. Rule 71.1(e), (f).
Answer to amended pleading	14 days from service, or within any time remaining for response to original pleading, whichever is longer. Rule 15(a)(3).
Answer to more definitely stated pleading	14 days after service of more definite statement. Rule 12(a)(4)(B)
Service of summons & complaint on third-party defendant	After commencement of action; but no leave required to make service if third-party complaint filed not later than 14 days after service of original answer. Rule 14(a)(1).
Jury trial demand	Not later than 14 days from service of last pleading directed to issues for jury. Rule 38(b)(1).
Removal notice	30 days after defendant receives initial pleading or 30 days after service of summons; if case not initially removable, 30 days after service of document from which defendant first ascertains that case is removable. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).
Motion to strike	Before responding; or if no responsive pleading is permitted, 21 days from service of pleading. Rule 12(f)(2).
Incorrect venue, motion to dismiss or transfer case	Timely. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a),(b)
Forum non conveniens, transfer to a	At any time for convenience of parties and witnesses, in in-more convenient forum	terest of justice. 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a).

Motion to dismiss--Generally	Before responsive pleading is served, or at trial if no responsive pleading is required. Rule 12(b)
Lack of subject matter jurisdiction	At any time. Rule 12(h)(3).
Motion for summary judgment	Any time until 30 days after close of all discovery. Rule 56(c)(1)(A).
Opposition to summary judgment motion	Later of: within 21 days after motion is served or time responsive pleading is due. Rule 56(c)(1)(B).
Offer of judgment, Service of	At least 14 days before the date set for trial. Rule 68(a).

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. The times specified in this table are subject to the provisions for the extension of time under Rule 6(b), and to the provision of Rule 6(d) for the addition of 3 days to the period prescribed or allowed in the rules when service is accomplished by any means other than by hand delivery. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(C)-(F). For discussion of the time periods for pleadings and motions, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART I. NATURE AND TIMING OF DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.02

§ 11.02 Significance of Appearance by Defendantn*

[1] Nature of Appearance in Federal Litigation

A defendant may respond to the service of process by making an appearance. n1 An "appearance" is an open, public act by which a party comes into court and submits itself to the jurisdiction of the court. n2 A party makes an appearance by filing with the court a notice of appearance n3 or some other motion or pleading; however, in the majority of courts it is not necessary to file formal documents in order to make an appearance. The term appearance includes a variety of informal acts on defendant's part which are responsive to plaintiff's formal action in court, and which may be regarded as sufficient to give plaintiff a clear indication of defendant's intention to contest some claim. n4

Federal case law has historically distinguished between a "general appearance," and a "special appearance." A defending party made a general appearance by submitting to the jurisdiction of the court for all purposes, usually indicated by actively defending a claim. n5 On the other hand, by a "special appearance" a person could take several limited, preliminary procedural steps, most importantly to challenge personal jurisdiction, n6 and not submit to the court's jurisdiction. n7 However, the person had to make objections to jurisdiction at the first opportunity, and to otherwise indicate that it was making a special appearance only. n8 In federal court, the special appearance rules have been largely replaced by the civil rule that a defendant consolidate all of its defenses, n9 but the concept is still useful to the extent that it emphasizes that a defending party must object to personal jurisdiction at its earliest opportunity when the defending party makes its appearance. n10

[2] Privileges and Liabilities of Person Making Appearance

[a] Default and Challenge to Personal Jurisdiction

A mere filing of an appearance does not waive the defenses and objections available to a defendant stated in Rule 12. n1 However, an appearance does not insulate a party from being in default. The typical default judgment scenario involves the complete failure of the defendant to appear in the action. Despite valid service of process, the defendant makes no appearance at all and therefore defaults in the action. The clerk enters this default into the docket under Rule 55. n2 However, there are circumstances in which the defendant may initially appear in the action but later be in default. For example, the defendant may choose to appear to challenge personal jurisdiction, venue, or some other preliminary issue, lose on that issue, and then decline to file an answer in the case. This failure to plead or otherwise defend puts the defendant in default, n3 despite the earlier appearance. n4 Or, default judgment may be ordered by the court as a sanction for the failure to obey a court order with respect to disclosure or discovery. n5 A party that has entered a proper appearance is entitled to the same notice of the proceedings as any party not in default, even though that party may default later from a failure to plead or otherwise defend. On the other hand, a party who is in default for failing to appear is not entitled to notice of any subsequent proceedings in the action. In that event, the defaulting party is entitled to service only of a pleading that contains a new claim, in the same manner provided for service of a summons in Rule 4. n6

[b] Discovery

Prior to any motion or pleading, a defendant making a limited appearance may participate in discovery. That is, the defendant may take depositions, serve interrogatories, serve requests for admissions, or serve objections to interrogatories. In fact, participation in discovery may be made to enable the court to determine a challenge to personal jurisdiction. n7 Additionally, participation in early discover will have no effect upon the right of the defendant to move or answer as provided in the rules. n8 Under some circumstances, the defendant may be required by statute to file a bond in a federal court. For example, the applicable law may permit the defendant to dissolve an attachment by giving bond. The defendant's possible objection to lack of jurisdiction is not waived by giving such a bond in the state court prior to removal or in the federal court after removal. n9 The defendant may attempt to get an agreement for an extension of time for the filing of its motion or answer. When this is done without obtaining an order of the court, it has no effect on the time periods prescribed by Rule 12. Entering into such an agreement, however, does not waive any defense or objection which the defendant might wish to raise at a later time. n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice, § 5.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.); 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.31 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(2), (a)(3), 55(b)(1), (2).

(n3)Footnote 2. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 84 F.3d 137, 141 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Ricotta v. State of California, 4 F. Supp. 2d 961, 988 (S.D. Cal. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Sun Bank v. Pelican Homestead & Sav. Ass'n, 874 F.2d 274, 277 (5th Cir. 1989) (mailing of motion to dismiss to court clerk constituted an "appearance" for purposes of Rule 55(b)(2) even though clerk refused it and returned it for failure to comply with local rules).

(n6)Footnote 5. See United States v. Stein, 435 F. Supp. 2d 330, 379 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See [2][a], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See Lee Barnes v. Puerto Ven Quarry Corp., 513 F.3d 20, 24 (1st Cir. 2008) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Mattox, 897 F.2d 773, 786 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2).

(n11)Footnote 10. See Insurance Corp. of Ireland, Ltd. v. Compagnie des Bauxites de Guinee, 456 U.S. 694, 703, 102 S. Ct. 2099, 72 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1982) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Robinson v. Town of Madison, 752 F. Supp. 842 (N.D. Ill. 1990) (in diversity case, filing of appearance did not waive the right to contest personal jurisdiction).

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(b)(1).

(n14)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(a).

(n15)Footnote 4. See Beitel v. OCA, Inc., 551 F.3d 359, 374 (5th Cir. 2008) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(C).

(n17)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(2).

(n18)Footnote 7. Trintec Indus. v. Pedre Promotional Prods., 395 F.3d 1275, 1283 (Fed. Cir. 2005) .

(n19)Footnote 8. Budde v. Ling-Temco-Vought, Inc., 511 F.2d 1033, 1035 (10th Cir. 1975) (either party allowed discovery when party moves to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction).

(n20)Footnote 9. See Branic v. Wheeling Steel Corp., 152 F.2d 887 (3d Cir. 1945) (appearance and giving bond to dissolve attachment was not a waiver of objection to venue).

(n21)Footnote 10. Orange Theatre Corp. v. Rayherstz Amusement Corp., 139 F.2d 871 (3d Cir. 1944) (lack of jurisdiction of the person was not waived by a stipulation extending time to answer).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART I. NATURE AND TIMING OF DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.03

§ 11.03 Raising Defense by Responsive Pleading or by Motionn*

[1] Distinction Between Defensive Pleading and Motion

A person that is a defendant or potential defendant to a federal lawsuit may raise defenses or objections to claims raised by a plaintiff's complaint in two primary ways: by pleading or by a motion. In a defensive context, the primary distinction under the federal rules between a pleading and a motion is the substantive content. n1 A defensive "pleading" is a particular type of document filed with the court, such as an answer or reply, which must be made as a response on the merits to one or more claims for relief made by an opposing party's pleading. n2 On the other hand, a motion is a request or application by a party to the court that the court make a particular order, without responding to a claim for relief. n3 The significance in the distinction between pleadings and motions is that each type of document has different requirements or formalities under the federal rules. n4 These requirements must be met for the document to have a legal effect as a pleading or as a motion. Generally, a pleading must be presented with more formalities, in accordance with special requirements for pleadings specified in Rules 8 through 11. n5 Motions must be drafted in accordance with the requirements for motions prescribed in Rule 7(b). n6

[2] Use of Pleading or Motion to Respond to Plaintiff

In federal litigation, a party that challenges a claim for relief in a pleading such as a complaint may do so in a pleading such as an answer, but does not necessarily have to respond in the form of a pleading; the defending party may respond to a pleading by a motion. n1 Thus, if a responding party successfully makes a motion to dismiss a complaint or a motion for summary judgment that is granted by the court, then the party need not file an answer at all. n2 Rule 12 provides the defendant a menu of the pleading and motion options available, the order in which they should be presented, the time period for the presentation, and the consequences of failing to follow the rule's prescriptions. Rule 12(a) sets out the time periods within which the defendant must respond by pleading to a claiming party's complaint, counterclaim, or crossclaim. These periods vary depending on whether the defendant is the United States or one of its agencies or officers, or on whether any motions have been filed. n3

Before filing an answer, the defendant must also decide whether to object to personal jurisdiction, venue, process, or service. n4 Special appearances are no longer required to object to jurisdiction. In fact, the rules now generally require the defendant to consolidate all objections and defenses into a single motion. n5 Rule 12(b) also expressly requires the defendant to raise specific matters by motion filed before the answer, but only one such motion is allowed. If the party does file a pre-answer motion, all available objections must be included; the defendant may not raise some in the motion and some in the answer. The following objections may be the grounds for a Rule 12 pre-answer motion to dismiss: n6 (1) lack of subject matter jurisdiction; (2) lack of personal jurisdiction; (3) improper venue; (4) insufficient process; (5) insufficient service of process; (6) failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted; and (7) failure to join an indispensable party under Rule 19.

In addition to the pre-answer motion and a motion for judgment on the pleadings, Rule 12 includes other tools for narrowing and clarifying the scope of the litigation before trial. A court may order a more definite statement to clarify vague and ambiguous claims; n7 and redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous material or insufficient defenses may be stricken by the court. n8 Finally, any party may request a hearing before trial on matters included in a Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss or on a motion for judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c). n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Port of Stockton v. W. Bulk Carrier KS, 371 F.3d 1119, 1121 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a) (specifying only five types of defensive pleading); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a), 8(b) (contents of pleadings).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Structural Concrete Prods., LLC v. Clarendon Am. Ins. Co., 244 F.R.D. 317, 324 (E.D. Va. 2007) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Warnock v. Pecos County, 116 F.3d 776, 779 (5th Cir. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b).

(n8)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b) (available responsive motions); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2), (3), (4), (6), (7) (specifying available responsive pleadings).

(n9)Footnote 2. See Marquez v. Cable One, Inc., 463 F.3d 1118, 1120-1121 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n10)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a).

(n11)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n12)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2).

(n13)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1)-(7).

(n14)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n15)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n16)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(i).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART I. NATURE AND TIMING OF DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.04

§ 11.04 Time to Respond to Complaint

[1] Time Period Ordinarily Applicable to Respond

After a plaintiff has made a valid service of a summons and complaint, a defendant other than a federal governmental defendant must generally serve an answer or otherwise respond within 21 days from the date of service. n1 It is important to note that this 21 day time period, and other time periods prescribed in Rule 12(a), are measured from the date the particular document is served on the defendant, and not from the date it is filed. n2

Exceptions to this 21 day time period apply in certain circumstances, including: when the defendant files a motion under Rule 12(b), (e), or (f) within the applicable time period, which triggers a different timetable for any answer that may be required after disposition of the motion; n3 when the claim in the pleading is brought under statutes prescribing their own time limits for responses; when the United States is a defendant; or when actual service by the plaintiff is replaced by a request for waiver of service, followed by the defendant's actual waiver. n4

The same general 21 day time period applicable for response after the effective service of summons and complaint also applies to the after service of an answer to a counterclaim or an answer to a crossclaim. Thus, when served with a pleading containing a crossclaim, the cross defendant has 21 days from the service date to reply. n5 Similarly, when required, the plaintiff must serve a reply to a counterclaim in an answer within 21 days after service of the pleading containing the counterclaim. n6 Also, if a plaintiff amends its complaint under Rule 15(a), and the court requires a response, the defendant must serve a response within any of the 21 days remaining for responding to the original pleading or within 14 days of service of the amendment, whichever is later. n7 If a party files a supplemental pleading, the other party need file a response only if the court orders it, in the time specified in the order to respond. n8 For a discussion of amended and supplemental pleadings, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

[2] Exceptions to Ordinary Time Period to Respond

[a] Exception When Defendant Files Particular Motion Prior to Answering

A defending party has the option to present any type of defense within its own pleading, such as an answer or a reply. Alternatively, Rule 12 permits the defending party to raise certain types of defenses and objections by motion filed before serving the answer. n1 Rule 12 also requires a party to consolidate many defenses and objections in one motion at the risk of waiving those not included; this requirement prevents abuse of civil motion practice. n2 If a defendant does serve a motion permitted by Rule 12 (such as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim), rather than filing an answer, the ordinary time period is altered for filing an answer. If the court denies the motion or postpones its disposition until trial, the defendant then has 14 days after notice of the court's action to serve the answer. n3

If the court grants a motion for a more definite statement filed pursuant to Rule 12(e), the defendant has 14 days from service of the more definite statement. n4 With respect to other Rule 12 motions that typically request dismissal of the action or the portion of the complaint under challenge, granting the motion will dispose of the case or of that portion of the complaint, rendering an answer unnecessary. Similarly, if a Rule 12(f) motion to strike is granted, typically no further action is required of the defendant. If, on the other hand, a motion to dismiss which challenges only a portion of the complaint is denied, or if a full scale motion to dismiss is granted only in part so that some claims remain for further disposition, the defendant must file an answer within 14 days, as potentially extended by Rule 6(a), after receiving notice of the court's order. n5

As usual, if the final day of the time period ends on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the time period is extended to the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n6 Also, if the defendant was served other than by hand delivery, three days is added. n7 For a complete discussion of the computation of time periods for motions under Rule 6, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

[b] Other Rules Providing Exceptions to Response Time

The following are other exceptions to the general rule requiring a defendant's response within 21 days of service:

1. Other prevailing rules or statutes. Some other federal rules and federal statutes provide their own time periods for responding, which prevail if different from those prescribed by Rule 12. For example, a defendant is allowed 60 days to answer in a proceeding to cancel a certificate of citizenship. n8 Rule 12 time periods do not affect time periods provided in other rules, such as Rule 56 governing motions for summary judgment and do not apply to court orders, such as an order granting summary judgment. n9

2. Defendant's waiver of formal service. A defendant that timely waives service has 60 days from the date notice was sent to respond to the complaint. If notice was sent to a foreign country, the defendant has 90 days. n10

3. United States as Defendant. When the United States or one of its officers or agencies is the defendant, the answer or other responsive pleading must be served within 60 days of service of the complaint, crossclaim, or counterclaim, a time period that may not be shortened by the court. n11 Even if sued in his or her individual capacity, a government officer is generally entitled to the 60-day answer period if acting under color of law, lawful authority, or office in performing the challenged acts, or if the party is represented by a government attorney. n12

4. Additional three days for response. When the answer, motion, or other responsive pleading is served by mail or electronic transmission, Rule 6(d) generally adds three days to any applicable time period. n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(i); Silva v. Madison, 69 F.3d 1368, 1376 (7th Cir. 1995) (construing former time periods).

(n3)Footnote 3. See [2][a], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. See [2][b], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(C).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n10)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g).

(n11)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(A).

(n12)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(B).

(n13)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(A).

(n14)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1)(C).

(n15)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

(n16)Footnote 8. See 8 U.S.C. § 1451.

(n17)Footnote 9. Hathaway v. Coughlin, 841 F.2d 48, 50 n.1 (2d Cir. 1988) (Rule 12(a) time limits inapplicable to motion for summary judgment); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n18)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(ii); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(3), discussed in Ch. 6, Service of Process and Jurisdiction Over the Person.

(n19)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(2).

(n20)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(3); Dickens v. Lewis, 750 F.2d 1251, 1255 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n21)Footnote 13. see Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d), discussed in Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

65 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART I. NATURE AND TIMING OF DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.05

§ 11.05 Corporate Disclosure Statementn*

§ 11.05 Corporate Disclosure Statement

[a] Required Disclosure Statement

Each nongovernmental corporate party to an action in a district court, including defending parties, must file two copies of a statement that either (1) identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock n1 or (2) states that the corporation has no parent corporation and there is no publicly held corporation that owns 10 percent or more of its stock. n2 The primary purpose of requiring this statement is to enable the district court judge to determine whether he or she has the "financial interest" required to subject the judge to automatic disqualification under Canon 3C(1)(c) of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. n3 Some authority indicates that the disclosure statement may be considered by the court for other purposes, such as to determine corporate citizenship in diversity cases. n4

[b] Time for Filing

A nongovernmental corporate party that comes within the rule must file the required disclosure statement in every case. It must file its initial statement with its first appearance, pleading, motion, response, or other request addressed to the court. n1 Additionally, a party must supplement its statement whenever the information that must be disclosed under Rule 7.1 changes. n2 For example, if a nongovernmental corporate party to an action in a district court initially had no parent corporation, but was later acquired by a parent corporation, the party would then have to disclose that information in a supplemental disclosure. n3 An opposition party may make a motion to compel the filing of a disclosure statement by another party. However, the court may not impose sanctions for failure to timely file a disclosure, at least unless the disclosing party has purposely delayed filing the disclosure or prejudiced the opposition by the tardy disclosure. n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 7.1.02, 7.1.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(a), Committee Note.

(n5)Footnote 4. *DirecTV Latin Am., LLC v. Park 610, LLC, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22510, at 16 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) ; *Nipponkoa Ins. Co. v. GlobeGround Servs., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 76227, at *9-10 (N.D. Ill. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b)(1).

(n7)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7.1(b), Committee Note.

(n9)Footnote 4. Hall v. Tyco Int'l, Ltd., 223 F.R.D. 219, 257 (M.D.N.C. 2004) .

66 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART I. NATURE AND TIMING OF DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 11.06 through 11.09

[Reserved]

§§ 11.06[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART II. CONSOLIDATION AND WAIVER OF DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.10

§ 11.10 Defenses and Objections Generally Must Be Consolidated in Initial Response or Motionn*

[1] Mandatory Consolidation of Certain Motions

A party must assert in its responsive pleading to any pleading making a claim for relief every legal or factual defense to the claims made, except for the following itemized defenses, which may be raised by motion: n1 (1) lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter; (2) lack of jurisdiction over the person; (3) improper venue; (4) insufficiency of process; (5) insufficiency of service of process; (6) failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted; and (7) failure to join a party under Rule 19. Such a motion must be made before any responsive pleading is made, and thus it is sometimes referred to as a pre-answer motion. n2

A party may join any motion under Rule 12 with any other motion allowed by Rule 12. n3 Furthermore, a party must generally join any motion made under Rule 12 with any other motion provided for in the rule and then available to the party, and prohibits any later motions to raise any omitted defenses or objections. In other words, if a party seeks dismissal in a pretrial motion based on any of the defenses set out in Rule 12(b), the party must include in such motion any other defenses or objections then available that Rule 12 permits to be raised by motion, or the omitted defenses will be waived. n4 This consolidation requirement applies not only to Rule 12(b) defenses, but also to a motion for a more definite statement under Rule 12(e) and to a motion to strike under Rule 12(f). n5 Exceptions to the Rule 12(g)(2) consolidation requirement appear in Rule 12(h)(2) and may be raised in any Rule 7(a) pleading. n6

[2] Rationale for Consolidation

The consolidation requirements are designed to discourage a defending party from using a series of successive motions as a dilatory tactic. n1 When read together, the consolidation and waiver provisions make clear that to avoid making a waiver of most available Rule 12 defenses or objections, a party must raise them in one initial motion or if no motions are filed, in the first responsive pleading. n2

The mandatory consolidation requirement applies only to a defense or objection "that was available to the party." n3 Therefore, for example, if the defendant moves for and obtains a more definite statement and that statement reveals a ground for a motion to dismiss, the defendant may then advance such a motion instead of answering. However, if the plaintiff amends the complaint, the amendment does not revive omitted defenses or objections that the defendant could have raised in response to the original complaint. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 12.20, 12.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2); § 11.12.

(n6)Footnote 5. FRA S.P.A. v. Surg-O-Flex of America, Inc., 415 F. Supp. 421, 427 n.5 (S.D.N.Y. 1976) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 11.12.

(n8)Footnote 1. Flory v. United States, 79 F.3d 24, 25 (5th Cir. 1996) (discussing Rule 12(h)(1) automatic waiver provision).

(n9)Footnote 2. Armstrong v. Sears, 33 F.3d 182, 188 (2d Cir. 1994) (all defenses must be consolidated in single Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 motion, and defense of insufficiency of service of process waived if omitted from initial Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 motion).

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g); see Glater v. Eli Lilly & Co., 712 F.2d 735, 738 (1st Cir. 1983) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Church of Scientology v. Linberg, 529 F. Supp. 945, 967 (C.D. Cal. 1981) .

68 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART II. CONSOLIDATION AND WAIVER OF DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.11

§ 11.11 Defenses That Are Waived if Not Raised at Earliest Opportunityn*

Under Rule 12(h)(1) a party waives certain defenses omitted from a motion in the circumstances described in Rule 12(g)(2), which refers to a party's motion under Rule 12 that omits a defense "that was available" to the party. n1 When read together, Rule 12 subdivisions (g) and (h) mean that the defendant may preserve any such defense by including it either in its answer or in a Rule 12 motion, but that all such defenses must be included. n2

Rule 12(h)(1) provides for the waiver of the specific Rule 12(b) defenses numbered 12(b)(2)-(5) if they are not raised in the initial motion or responsive pleading: lack of personal jurisdiction, improper venue, and insufficiency of process and service of process. n3 If a party files a pre-answer motion, but fails to include one or more of those defenses, the party waives the omitted defense and may not subsequently raise it in his or her answer or otherwise. n4 Several jurisdictions have held that insufficient service of process may be waived not only by noncompliance with Rule 12(h), but also through conduct that is inconsistent with the defense. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.22 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2); see § 11.10.

(n3)Footnote 2. Stubbs v. Wyndham Nassau Resort & Crystal Palace Casino, 447 F.3d 1357, 1364 (11th Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. English v. Dyke, 23 F.3d 1086, 1090 (6th Cir. 1994) ; Golden v. Cox Furniture Mfg. Co., 683 F.2d 115, 118 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Trustees of Cent. Laborers' Welfare Fund v. Lowery, 924 F.2d 731, 734 (7th Cir. 1991) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART II. CONSOLIDATION AND WAIVER OF DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.12

§ 11.12 Exception to Waiver for Fundamental Defensesn*

Certain defenses are considered so fundamental that they may be raised even during trial n1 and Rule 12 provides specific exceptions to the waiver resulting from the Rule 12(g)(2) prohibition against successive motions. n2 These defenses are listed in Rule 12(h)(2), and include the defenses of failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted, n3 failure to join a party indispensable under Rule 19, n4 and also failure to state a legal defense to a claim. n5 If omitted from the initial motion, those matters may not be raised in a successive Rule 12 motion but may be raised in any Rule 7(a) responsive pleading, n6 in a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings, n7 or at trial on the merits. n8 Lack of subject matter jurisdiction, n9 unlike lack of personal jurisdiction and the related defenses of insufficiency of process or service, may not be waived, but may be raised at any time. In fact, the court is obligated on its own initiative to dismiss the action in its absence. n10

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Weaver v. Bowers, 657 F.2d 1356, 1362 (3d Cir. 1981) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(A).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(B); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(C); Weatherhead v. Globe Int'l, Inc., 832 F.2d 1226, 1228 (10th Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3); Arbaugh v. Y & H Corp., 546 U.S. 500, 506-507, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097 (2006) ; see § 11.20[1].

70 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART II. CONSOLIDATION AND WAIVER OF DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.13

§ 11.13 Affirmative Defenses Subject to Waiver Under Separate Rulen*

Rule 12's consolidation and waiver provisions apply only to defenses that may be raised by motion under Rule 12(b)(2)-(5). n1 Consequently, they do not govern waiver of affirmative defenses, which are listed in Rule 8(c), and which must be pleaded or waived under the provisions of Rule 8. n2 Unlike the Rule 8(c)(1) affirmative defenses, defenses that may be waived under Rule 12(h) may not be raised in an amended answer. n3 Similarly, motions other than the types specified in Rule 12(h)(1) will not be waived by omitting them from a Rule 12 consolidated pre-answer motion, including motions to stay n4 or motions for transfer based on the convenience of the parties and witnesses. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.24 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2), (h)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See § 11.50, et seq.

(n4)Footnote 3. Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. v. Blum, 649 F.2d 342, 345 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Alla Med. Servs., Inc., 855 F.2d 1470, 1475 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Catalano v. BRI, Inc., 724 F. Supp. 1580, 1583 (E.D. Mich. 1989) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART II. CONSOLIDATION AND WAIVER OF DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 11.14 through 11.19

[Reserved]

§§ 11.14[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.20

§ 11.20 Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdictionn*

[1] Court or Party May Raise Objection at Any Time

A party may raise a lack of subject matter jurisdiction n1 at any time. n2 In fact, subject matter jurisdiction is such a fundamental requirement under the law that even if the parties do not identify a potential issue in that respect, it is the duty of the court, at any stage of the proceedings to address the issue sua sponte whenever the court perceives the lack of jurisdiction. n3 Therefore, although other defenses and objections are waived if not asserted in an initial Rule 12 motion or in an initial responsive pleading, lack of subject matter jurisdiction challenges the court's statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate the case, and it may not be waived by the parties. n4

If jurisdiction is challenged by a court or party, the party asserting subject matter jurisdiction has the burden of proving its existence. This means the burden is on the plaintiff in cases filed originally in federal court, and the defendant in cases removed from state court. n5

[2] Court's Determination of Issue

[a] Time of Determination

The district court should determine subject matter jurisdictional issues first, because they concern the court's very power to hear the case. n1 However, the truth of jurisdictional allegations need not always be determined with finality at the threshold of the litigation. Rather, the party with the burden must establish jurisdiction at the outset of a case by means of a nonfrivolous assertion of jurisdictional elements, and any litigation of a contested subject-matter jurisdictional fact issue occurs in comparatively summary procedure before the court alone. n2 However, because jurisdictional facts in the case may be interrelated with the factual merits of the case, the court may postpone a jurisdictional determination until later in the case, even delaying the jurisdictional determination for trial. n3

[b] Procedure for Determination

Unlike a motion for Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal, the court need not confine its evaluation to the face of the pleadings, but may review or accept any evidence, such as affidavits, or it may hold an evidentiary hearing. n4 Thus, a district court may hear evidence and make findings of fact necessary to rule on the subject matter jurisdiction question before trial, if the jurisdictional facts are not intertwined with the merits. n5 When the jurisdictional facts are too interrelated with the merits to permit the determination to be made independently, the court should either employ the standard applicable to a motion for summary judgment (if the material jurisdictional facts are undisputed) or may leave the jurisdictional determination to trial. n6

There are two potential types of subject matter jurisdiction challenges. The first type, known as a facial challenge, accepts that the plaintiff's jurisdictional facts are true but attacks their sufficiency to satisfy each of the statutory requirements. For such a challenge, the court will accept the plaintiff's well-pleaded allegations, draw all reasonable inferences from the facts in the plaintiff's favor, and determine based on those facts whether the plaintiff has propounded an adequate basis for subject matter jurisdiction. The second type of challenge denies the correctness rather than the sufficiency of the jurisdictional facts asserted by the plaintiff. In this type of challenge, the court gives no presumptive weight to the plaintiff's factual assertions and must determine the merits of the jurisdictional claim by deciding the factual disputes between the parties. n7

[c] Effect of Determination

If the court determines to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the dismissal is not a judgment on the merits and, therefore, has no claim preclusive or res judicata effect. n8 Contrast this with a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), n9 which does constitute a judgment on the merits. When the court dismisses for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the party will not be precluded from later bringing the claim if at that later time the court has a basis for such jurisdiction. n10

When a court dismisses a claim on a jurisdictional challenge based on the complaint alone or the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts gleaned from the record, the existence of subject matter jurisdiction is a question of law that the appellate courts review under a de novo standard. n11 On the other hand, a district court's dismissal based on a factual challenge is reviewed under the clearly erroneous standard, which means that the appellate court will accept the factual determination that is the basis of the jurisdictional decision, unless it is clear the determination is in error. n12

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.30 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Carlisle v. United States, 517 U.S. 416, 434-435, 116 S. Ct. 1460, 1470, 134 L. Ed. 2d 613 (1996) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Arbaugh v. Y & H Corp., 546 U.S. 500, 506-507, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097 (2006) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3).

(n5)Footnote 4. FDIC v. Hillcrest Assocs., 66 F.3d 566, 568 (2d Cir. 1995) (because subject matter jurisdiction concerns the authority of court to decide controversy, it may not be conferred or waived even by express consent).

(n6)Footnote 5. Robinson v. Overseas Military Sales Corp., 21 F.3d 502, 507 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Arbaugh v. Y & H Corp., 546 U.S. 500, 506-507, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097 (2006) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Jerome B. Grubart, Inc. v. Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co., 513 U.S. 527, 535-539, 115 S. Ct. 1043, 1050, 130 L. Ed. 2d 1024 (1995) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Valentin v. Hospital Bella Vista, 254 F.3d 358, 364, n.3 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n10)Footnote 4. Hammond v. Clayton, 83 F.3d 191, 192 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n11)Footnote 5. Barrera-Montenegro v. DEA, 74 F.3d 657, 659 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 6. Barrett v. United States, 853 F.2d 124, 131 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n13)Footnote 7. Turicentro, S.A. v. Am. Airlines, Inc., 303 F.3d 293, 300 (3d Cir. 2002) .

(n14)Footnote 8. Thompson v. County of Franklin, 15 F.3d 245, 253 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n15)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n16)Footnote 10. Shockley v. Jones, 823 F.2d 1068, 1073 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n17)Footnote 11. King v. United States, 301 F.3d 1270, 1273 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n18)Footnote 12. Filetech S.A. v. France Telecom S.A., 304 F.3d 180, 181 (2d Cir. 2002) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.21

§ 11.21 Lack of Personal Jurisdictionn*

[1] Motion to Challenge Personal Jurisdiction Places Burden on Plaintiff

A court must have jurisdiction over a person to adjudicate the rights and liabilities of that person in any judgment entered by the court. n1 A defending party may make a motion for dismissal of an action or claim if the court has no personal jurisdiction over that party. n2 While a defendant may submit voluntarily to a court's jurisdiction, the court ordinarily must obtain jurisdiction through proper service of process. n3 If a defending party challenges personal jurisdiction through a motion to dismiss, the party asserting personal jurisdiction (the person making the claim) has the burden of proving its existence, just as is the case with subject matter jurisdiction. n4

Rule 12(b)(2) challenges the grounds asserted for jurisdiction over the person, rather than challenging the method by which jurisdiction was obtained through service of process. n5 Although Rule 12(b)(2) provides the procedural vehicle for challenging personal jurisdiction, its existence will be determined on constitutional, statutory, and other substantive authority, such as whether the defendant had requisite contacts with the forum. n6 Formerly, the defendant could make only a "special appearance" for the purpose of objecting to personal jurisdiction waived the right to be sued in the proper federal district court. However, the current Federal Rules of Civil Procedure have abolished the technical distinction between general and special appearances. n7 Now, in all federal courts, including those exercising diversity jurisdiction, the method for challenging the grounds for a court's jurisdiction over the person of a defendant is a Rule 12(b)(2) motion. n8

[2] Defense Waived if Not Made in Timely Manner

A party defending against a claim must object to the court's exercise of personal jurisdiction at the party's earliest opportunity, n1 either in its first Rule 12 motion or in its first pleading, such as an answer or in a reply ordered by the court. If the defending party fails to raise the issue at that time, it is considered waived unlike for challenges to subject matter jurisdiction. n2 There is some authority that allows a defendant to amend or supplement its initial Rule 12 motion or its answer to add the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. However, the defendant is not entitled to amend or correct its initial Rule 12 motion or answer as a matter of course at any time, and a defendant may not amend an answer or Rule 12 motion merely because the defendant decides to change tactics or strategy. n3 Raising lack of personal jurisdiction in an answer, without further pursuing the defense has also been held to constitute waiver. Defenses referred to in Rule 12(h)(1), including lack of personal jurisdiction, also may be waived by formal stipulation, or by waiver through conduct in submitting to the court's jurisdiction. n4

[3] Court's Determination of Issue

The court has discretion to rely on written submissions or to hold a full evidentiary hearing in order to make its determination with respect to the existence of personal jurisdiction. n1 If the court chooses not to hold a hearing, the party need make only a prima facie case that personal jurisdiction exists. n2 As with challenges to subject matter jurisdiction, the court will accept plaintiff's jurisdictional allegations as true and will resolve any factual disputes in the plaintiff's favor. n3 A prima facie case is established if the plaintiff presents sufficient evidence to defeat a motion for directed verdict. n4 Before it decides the issue, the district court may allow a party asserting jurisdiction to conduct discovery to help establish the jurisdictional facts. n5 If the party must prove jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence and the facts are in dispute, the court should allow discovery. n6

If the court denies the motion to dismiss, the defendant may proceed to trial on the merits without waiving the jurisdictional challenge. n7 If the court holds an evidentiary hearing, or if the issue is litigated at trial, the party asserting jurisdiction must demonstrate its existence by a preponderance of the evidence. In other words, the facts must show by a preponderance that the prima facie case for personal jurisdiction has been made. n8 If the court decides that it lacks personal jurisdiction, generally the court will dismiss the action. However, the court also has the option to transfer the action. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.31 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Vax-D Med. Techs., LLC v. Tex. Spine Med. Ctr., 485 F.3d 593, 596-597 (11th Cir. 2007) ; see Ch. 6, Personal Jurisdiction and Service of Process.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. McCurdy v. American Board of Plastic Surgery, 157 F.3d 191 (3rd Cir. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Robertson-Ceco Corp., 84 F.3d 560, 566 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Santos v. State Farm Fire and Casualty Co., 902 F.2d 1092, 1095 (2d Cir. 1990) (Rule 12(b)(2) motion challenges whether court has power over defendant, while Rule 12(b)(4) or 12(b)(5) motion raises procedural defects in manner in which defendant was served).

(n7)Footnote 6. Sun Bank, N.A. v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 926 F.2d 1030, 1033 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 7. SEC v. Wencke, 783 F.2d 829, 832 n.3 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Product Promotions, Inc. v. Cousteau, 495 F.2d 483, 490 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Rates Tech., Inc. v. Nortel Networks Corp., 399 F.3d 1302, 1308-1309 (Fed. Cir. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 2. LINC Fin. Corp. v. Onwuteaka, 129 F.3d 917, 921-922 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Nycal Corp. v. Inoco PLC, 949 F. Supp. 1115, 1119-1120 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n13)Footnote 4. LINC Fin. Corp. v. Onwuteaka, 129 F.3d 917, 921 (7th Cir. 1997) (defendant made waiver by actively proceeded with defense.

(n14)Footnote 1. Moran v. Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, 27 F.3d 169, 171-172 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n15)Footnote 2. Rano v. Sipa Press, Inc., 987 F.2d 580, 587 n.3 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Robinson v. Giarmarco & Bill, P.C., 74 F.3d 253, 255 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Cable/Home Communication Corp. v. Network Prods., Inc., 902 F.2d 829, 855 (11th Cir. 1990) .

(n18)Footnote 5. Moran v. Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, 27 F.3d 169, 172 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n19)Footnote 6. Butcher's Union Local No. 498 v. SDC Inv., Inc., 788 F.2d 535, 540 (9th Cir. 1986) (discovery should ordinarily be granted where pertinent facts bearing on the question of jurisdiction are controverted or where a more satisfactory showing of the facts is necessary).

(n20)Footnote 7. Stewart v. Ragland, 934 F.2d 1033, 1036 n.5 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n21)Footnote 8. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Robertson-Ceco Corp., 84 F.3d 560, 567 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n22)Footnote 9. Goldlawr, Inc. v. Heiman, 369 U.S. 463, 82 S. Ct. 913, 8 L. Ed. 2d 39, 42 (1962) ; see, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1406.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.22

§ 11.22 Improper Venuen*

[1] Burden is on Defendant to Establish Impropriety

A defendant may challenge the propriety of a plaintiff's chosen venue n1 by moving to dismiss the action under Rule 12. n2 The venue selected by the plaintiff may also be considered improper because of the effect of a forum selection clause. n3

Although Rule 12(b) provides the procedural vehicle for challenging venue and dismissing the claim if improper, the substantive standard for determining the propriety of venue appears in the venue statute, n4 or within convenience of forum statute. n5 The party challenging venue has the burden to demonstrate affirmatively that the plaintiff filed the claim in an improper venue. n6 As with objections to subject matter jurisdiction or personal jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(1) and (2), respectively, the court may permit discovery to aid its factual determination. Because venue determinations are often fact specific, they will generally be reviewed under the deferential abuse of discretion standard. n7

[2] Defense Waived if Not Made in Timely Manner

An objection to venue will be waived if not raised in a timely manner at the earliest opportunity in a Rule 12 motion or in the defending party's answer or reply, n1 unlike some of the Rule 12(b) defenses, such as lack of subject matter jurisdiction n2 or failure to state a claim. n3 For example, the defense of improper venue is waived by a defendant's failure to object in response to an original complaint. n4 Improper venue may also be waived by the defendant's agreement to transfer the case. n5 However, if the defendant relies on the district court's opinion determining a particular jurisdiction as the proper forum, the defendant does not waive improper venue by failing to raise objection to venue explicitly under Rule 12(b)(3). n6

[3] Court's Determination of Issue

A court may not dismiss a case based on improper venue without providing notice and an opportunity to be heard. n1 This allows the defendant to waive the defense and allows the plaintiff to respond to the merits of the defense. n2 A court that makes a determination that venue is improper may dismiss the case, but such a dismissal for improper venue does not constitute a judgment on the merits. n3 The court also has the option of transferring a case that is brought in the wrong district. n4 When an action is filed with venue in the wrong district, if the court decides that transfer is in the interest of justice, it may transfer it to any district or division in which it could have been brought. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.32 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391, 1404.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Rainforest Cafe, Inc. v. EklecCo, L.L.C., 340 F.3d 544, 546 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391, 1404.

(n6)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391, 1404.

(n7)Footnote 6. Int'l Truck and Engine Corp. v. Quintana, 259 F. Supp. 2d 553, 558 (N.D. Tex. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 7. In re Cuyahoga Equip., Corp., 980 F.2d 110, 116 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n9)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(3); Wachovia Bank, N.A. v. Schmidt, 546 U.S. 303, 316, 126 S. Ct. 941, 163 L. Ed. 2d 797 (2006) .

(n10)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n11)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n12)Footnote 4. Gilmore v. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc., 811 F.2d 108, 112 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Tel-Phonic Servs., Inc. v. TBS Int'l, Inc., 975 F.2d 1134, 1137 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 6. See American Patriot Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Mutual Risk Mgmt., Ltd. 364 F.3d 884, 887-888 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 1. Costlow v. Weeks, 790 F.2d 1486, 1488 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n16)Footnote 2. Lipofsky v. New York State Workers Compensation Bd., 861 F.2d 1257, 1259 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n17)Footnote 3. Concha v. London, 62 F.3d 1493, 1507-1508 (9th Cir. 1995) (dismissal for improper venue is final judgment, but is without prejudice); see 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a).

(n18)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a); see Trujillo v. Williams, 465 F.3d 1210, 1216 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n19)Footnote 5. Goldlawr, Inc. v. Heiman, 369 U.S. 463, 466, 82 S. Ct. 913, 8 L. Ed. 2d 39, (1962) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.23

§ 11.23 Improper Form of Process or Service of Processn*

[1] Two Types of Motions Available

The defendant has two types of motions available to challenge the form or service of process. The first type of motion is a motion for insufficient process, n1 which means that the form of the summons is incomplete or improper as specified in Rule 4(a) and 4(b). Errors in the form of process may include errors in naming the proper defendant, failing to state the number of days allowed for the defendant to answer, or failure to obtain a court signature. n2 A motion challenging sufficiency of process under Rule 12(b)(4) must point out specific instances where the plaintiff has failed to comply with the requirements of Rule 4. n3

The second type of motion is a motion for insufficient service of process, n4 which means that, even though the summons was in correct form, the manner of service was improper, usually because it was not served within the appropriate time limit as specified in Rule 4(m). A motion challenging sufficiency of service of process under Rule 12(b)(4) must point out the specific circumstances that show a failure to comply with the requirements of Rule 4. n5 Other examples of improper service include: serving the wrong person, serving an individual not authorized to accept service on behalf of a corporation, and improper mailing procedure. n6

Thus, although Rule 12(b)(2) challenges the existence of jurisdiction over the person served, Rule 12(b)(4) challenges the form of process, and Rule 12(b)(5) challenges the method of serving process on the persons sued. n7 Although some courts may treat Rule 12(b)(4) and 12(b)(5) as interchangeable, attorneys should always make complete and specific motions according to the type of challenge. n8 In all challenges to the sufficiency of either the summons or service of process, the burden of establishing insufficiency lies with the party raising the challenge. n9

[2] Motion Must be Made in Timely Manner

A defendant's option to make a motion under Rule 12(b)(4) or 12(b)(5) is waived if not asserted at the proper time, which must be in the first Rule 12 motion filed or in the first responsive pleading. n1 The rules no longer require a special appearance to contest process; therefore, making a general appearance does not alone constitute a waiver. Pleading insufficiency of process at the first opportunity preserves the objection even if it is not argued before other motions, such as one for summary judgment. n2 In practice, a defendant objecting to the form or service of process will often fail to appear, preferring to challenge the process or service after the entry of default judgment. Some courts have held, however, that if the defendant has actual notice of the suit and if any noncompliance with Rule 4 is merely technical, a defendant may waive the objection by failing to appear and challenge sufficiency of the process or service. n3

[3] Court's Determination of Issue

On making a determination that either process or service of process was insufficient, the court has discretion to either dismiss the action without prejudice, n1 or to nullify service and direct the plaintiff to effect service within a specified period of time. n2 However, on a showing of good cause, the court must extend the time for service for an appropriate period. n3 Ordinarily, a dismissal without prejudice means that the claimant may refile the action in order to properly complete service of process, if the statute of limitation has run by the time of the dismissal, the dismissal constitutes a final judgment. n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(a), (b).

(n4)Footnote 3. O'Brien v. R.J. O'Brien Assocs., 998 F.2d 1394, 1400 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4).

(n6)Footnote 5. Shipley v. Orndoff, 491 F. Supp. 2d 498, 502-503 (D. Del. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Adams v. Allied Signal Gen. Aviation Avionics, 74 F.3d 882, 885 (8th Cir. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 7. McCurdy v. American Board of Plastic Surgery, 157 F.3d 191, (3rd Cir. 1998) .

(n9)Footnote 8. O'Brien v. R.J. O'Brien Assocs., 998 F.2d 1394, 1400 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Bally Export Corp. v. Balicar, Ltd., 804 F.2d 398, 404 (7th Cir. 1986) (defendant bears burden of proof when challenging sufficiency of service of process).

(n11)Footnote 1. Armstrong v. Sears, 33 F.3d 182, 188 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 2. Flory v. United States, 79 F.3d 24, 25-26 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 3. See McGann v. New York, 77 F.3d 672, 674 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Betty K Agencies, Ltd. v. M/V Monada, 432 F.3d 1333, 1340-1342 (11th Cir. 2005) ; Adams v. Allied Signal Gen. Aviation Avionics, 74 F.3d 882, 887 (8th Cir. 1996) .

(n15)Footnote 2. McGann v. New York, 77 F.3d 672, 674 n.2 (2nd Cir. 1996) (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m)).

(n16)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m).

(n17)Footnote 4. Umbenhauer v. Woog, 969 F.2d 25, 31 (3d Cir. 1992) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.24

§ 11.24 Failure to State Claim for Reliefn*

[1] Defendant Must Show Failure to State A Claim

Any party defending a claim, counterclaim, crossclaim or a third-party claim may make a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted. n1 A defending party will not prevail on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion if the claiming party has made a short and plain statement of the claim showing the pleader is entitled to relief. n2 However, the Supreme Court has stated that liberal construction regarding a motion to dismiss is not unlimited. Thus, it is not a sufficient statement of a claim to merely state conclusory assertions regarding a legal theory, without any reference to the factual circumstances. Without any factual assertions supporting a claim for relief, the court must grant the Rule 12(b)(6) motion. n3

[2] Plaintiff Allowed to Amend Complaint After Motion to Dismiss

If a pleading is one to which a responsive pleading is required, the pleading party may amend its pleading once as a matter of course at the expiration of the earlier of two time periods: n1 21 days after receiving service of a responsive pleading, or 21 days after receiving service of a motion under Rule 12(b) (motion presenting defenses), 12(e)(motion for more definite statement), or 12(f) (motion to strike). The purpose of giving the party serving a complaint time to amend until 21 days after a responsive pleading or motion has been served is that the pleader moving for amendment will have time to read the response to the pleading, and adjust the amendment accordingly. Thus, the responsive pleading or motion may indicate issues that the original pleader had not considered and also indicate to the pleader how to draft an appropriate amendment. n2

After 21 days has elapsed since service of a responsive pleading, when required, the pleader's right to amend its pleading without leave of court is terminated. However, the pleading may then be amended with leave of court or by consent of the opposition. n3 Although the decision to grant or deny leave to amend is entrusted to the sound discretion of the district court, n4 that discretion is limited by the dictate of Rule 15(a) that the court must give leave freely given when justice so requires. n5 Accordingly, unless the facts alleged in the complaint clearly show that the plaintiff has no legitimate claim, courts ordinarily will allow the plaintiff leave to amend the complaint. n6 Appropriate grounds for denying a request to amend include untimeliness, undue delay, bad faith, dilatory motive, prejudice to the other party, and futility. n7

[3] Court's Decision on Motion to Dismiss

[a] Matters Considered By Court

In making the determination of whether to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court may consider only the facts alleged in the pleadings, documents attached as exhibits or incorporated by reference in the pleadings, and matters of which the judge may take judicial notice. n1 The courts may consider the following:

1. Documents attached to complaint. n2

2. Undisputed documents alleged or referenced in complaint. n3

3. Public records. n4

However, in its determination of a motion to dismiss, the court may not consider any other matters outside the pleadings themselves, n5 For example, the court may not consider documents attached to a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss because that motion does not constitute a pleading; the court may consider such documents only if the documents are incorporated by reference into the complaint itself. n6 Similarly, the court may not consider any facts asserted in a memorandum opposing the motion to dismiss, because such memoranda do not constitute pleadings under Rule 7(a). n7 If the court does consider any such matters outside of the pleadings, the motion to dismiss is automatically converted to a motion for summary judgment and must be determined according to summary judgment standards. n8

[b] Consideration of Other Matters Converts Motion to Motion for Summary Judgment

A party making a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim faces a higher burden than a party proceeding on a motion for summary judgment because in a motion to dismiss the court may generally only consider matters in favor of the party making the claim. n9 Consequently, if a court considers matters other than those in the pleadings, or those that may be judicially noticed, Rule 12 expressly gives the court discretion to accept and consider extrinsic materials offered in conjunction with the motion. However, such a motion is no longer considered a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, but is deemed a motion for summary judgment, and disposed of as provided in Rule 56. n10 Because a Rule 12(b)(6) motion must usually be filed early in the case, the option of converting it to a Rule 56 summary judgment motion tends to have limited utility. Courts will be more likely to use the conversion option only in situations in which the materials extrinsic to the pleadings are incontrovertible and pose discrete and dispositive issues. Examples of such extrinsic material include things such as a plaintiff's deposition that establishes a limitations bar, n11 a stipulation that is incorporated into a court order in previous litigation, n12 and a handbook that establishes the absence of an employment contract as a matter of law, n13

When considering a converted Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss as a motion for summary judgment, the court must give all parties notice and reasonable opportunity to present all material then made pertinent by Rule 56. n14 An oral hearing is not required; however, under Rule 56(c), a party opposing the motion must file a response within 21 days after the motion is served or a responsive pleading is due, whichever is later; n15 then, the movant may file a reply within 14 days after the response is served. n16

For a further discussion of the conversion option, see Ch. 17, Summary Judgment.

[c] Court's Decision on Motion to Dismiss

When considering a motion to dismiss, the court must assume that all well-pleaded facts in the complaint are true and interpret the allegations in a light most favorable to the plaintiff to determine whether the allegations are sufficient to establish any claim on which relief may be granted. n17 However, the court is not required to accept as true the legal conclusions or unwarranted deductions of fact drawn by the non-moving party. n18 A court may grant the motion to dismiss only if it clearly appears that the plaintiff would be unable to prove any set of facts under the pleadings that would entitle the plaintiff to recover. n19 Thus, the court may grant the motion if either the complaint lacks an allegation regarding an element necessary to obtain relief n20 or the allegations of the complaint fail to show that the plaintiff has standing to bring the claim for relief. n21

Courts have consistently held that claims premised on a federal statute, but that fail properly to allege a claim for relief, should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6), rather than under Rule 12(b)(1). n22 Although labeling a motion incorrectly will not affect a movant's right to relief, dismissing it under the wrong provision will, because Rule 12(b)(6) dismisses a claim on its merits, n23 whereas Rule 12(b)(1) does not. n24 A court may also dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) when a successful affirmative defense or other bar to relief appears on the face of the complaint, such as the absolute immunity of a defendant, claim preclusion, or the statute of limitations. n25 The court may also dismiss if the complaint itself sets forth facts showing that qualified immunity applies, the court may properly dismiss the claim. n26 On the other hand, if a defense requires a factual review to establish the defense the action should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim. n27

[4] Effect of Grant of Dismissal

[a] Judgment on Merits

Unlike a dismissal for lack of subject matter or personal jurisdiction, improper venue, or failure to join proper parties under Rule 19, a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) constitutes a judgment on the merits with prejudice unless the order explicitly states otherwise. n1 This means that a grant of a motion for dismissal for failure to state a claim for relief has a claim preclusive effect under the law of judgments, and anyone who is properly a party to the case will be barred from bringing a later action on the same claim for relief. n2 The doctrine of claim preclusion is also referred to as res judicata and, with respect to dismissal for failure to state a claim, n3 means that the parties or their privies may not initiate subsequent litigation arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions and are barred from relitigating the demand for damages or other relief encompassed by the claim. n4

[b] Appellate Review

When a district court dismisses a case under Rule 12(b)(6), the dismissal is subject to de novo review in the court of appeals, and the reviewing court must generally apply the same standard of review as the district court. Thus, the reviewing court must determine whether the moving party has shown beyond doubt that there are no set of facts in support of the claiming party's claim that would entitle the claiming party to relief. n5 In making its decision, the reviewing court must accept the claiming party's factual allegations and take them in the light most favorable to the claiming party. n6

However, if the district court has considered matters outside of the pleadings in making its ruling, the appellate court should deem the motion to dismiss as having been converted to a motion for summary judgment and, therefore, may review the dismissal under the standard of review applicable to summary judgment, regardless of how the district court characterized the motion. n7 5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.34 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); see Arar v. Ashcroft, 585 F.3d 559, 617 (2d Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-887 (2009) (only well pleaded factual allegations are entitled to assumption of truth, not mere conclusory statements or recitals of elements of cause of action).

(n5)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B); see also § 9.51 (discussion of amended pleadings).

(n6)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n7)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2); see [4], below.

(n8)Footnote 4. San Leandro Emergency Medical Group Profit Sharing Plan v. Philip Morris Cos., 75 F.3d 801, 815 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 5. Rolf v. City of San Antonio, 77 F.3d 823, 826 (5th Cir. 1996) (Rule 15(a) is biased in favor of granting leave to amend.

(n10)Footnote 6. Health Cost Controls v. Skinner, 44 F.3d 535, 538 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 7. Shanahan v. City of Chicago, 82 F.3d 776, 781 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 322-323, 127 S. Ct. 2499, 168 L. Ed. 2d 179 (2007) ; Lovelace v. Software Spectrum Inc., 78 F.3d 1015, 1017-1018 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Taylor v. Appleton, 30 F.3d 1365, 1370 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Fecht v. The Price Co., 70 F.3d 1078, 1080 n.1 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Day v. Moscow, 955 F.2d 807, 811 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d).

(n17)Footnote 6. Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc., 282 F.3d 147, 152-155 (2d Cir. 2002) .

(n18)Footnote 7. Lockert v. Faulkner, 574 F. Supp. 606, 609 n.3 (N.D. Ind. 1983) .

(n19)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see [b], below.

(n20)Footnote 9. McKenna v. Wright, 386 F.3d 432, 436 (2d Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n21)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see Collins v. Red Roof Inns, Inc., 248 F. Supp. 2d 512, 515-516 (S.D. W. Va. 2003) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 (summary judgment motion).

(n22)Footnote 11. Alioto v. Marshall Field's & Co., 77 F.3d 934, 936 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n23)Footnote 12. Property Management & Invs., Inc. v. Lew, 752 F.2d 599, 604-605 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n24)Footnote 13. Peterson v. Atlanta Hous. Auth., 998 F.2d 904, 913 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n25)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d); see Krijn v. Pogue Simone Real Estate Co., 896 F.2d 687, 689 (2d Cir. 1990) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n26)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(B)).

(n27)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(1)(C).

(n28)Footnote 17. Mueller v. Gallina, 311 F. Supp. 2d 606, 608 (E.D. Mich. 2004) .

(n29)Footnote 18. Scalisi v. Fund Asset Mgmt., L.P., 380 F.3d 133, 137 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n30)Footnote 19. Illinois ex rel. Madigan v. Telemarketing Assocs., 538 U.S. 600, 618, 123 S. Ct. 1829, 155 L. Ed. 2d 793 (2003) .

(n31)Footnote 20. Pyles v. United Air Lines, Inc., 79 F.3d 1046, 1049 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n32)Footnote 21. Kaliski v. Bacot (In re Bank of N.Y. Derivative Litig.), 320 F.3d 291, 297-298 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n33)Footnote 22. Health Cost Controls v. Skinner, 44 F.3d 535, 537-538 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n34)Footnote 23. See CNA v. United States, 535 F.3d 132, 140 (3d Cir. 2008) .

(n35)Footnote 24. Concha v. London, 62 F.3d 1493, 1503 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n36)Footnote 25. Kansa Reins. Co. v. Congressional Mortgage Corp., 20 F.3d 1362, 1366 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n37)Footnote 26. Flinn v. Gordon, 775 F.2d 1551, 1552 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n38)Footnote 27. Young v. Selsky, 41 F.3d 47, 54 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n39)Footnote 1. Federated Dep't Stores, Inc. v. Moitie, 452 U.S. 394, 399 n.3, 101 S. Ct. 2424, 69 L. Ed. 2d 103 (1981) ; Davila v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 326 F.3d 1183, 1189-1190 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n40)Footnote 2. Davila v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 326 F.3d 1183, 1189-1190 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n41)Footnote 3. Stewart v. United States Bancorp, 297 F.3d 953, 957 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n42)Footnote 4. See Ch. 30, Res Judicata and Related Doctrines; see also Rivet v. Regions Bank, 522 U.S. 470, 476, 118 S. Ct. 921, 139 L. Ed. 2d 912 (1998) .

(n43)Footnote 5. Andrews v. State of Ohio, 104 F.3d 803, 806 (6th Cir. 1997) (circuit court applied summary judgment standard of review to district court's dismissal of action for failure to state claim when district court had considered matters outside pleadings); see [1], above.

(n44)Footnote 6. Christopher v. Harbury, 536 U.S. 403, 406, 122 S. Ct. 2179, 153 L. Ed. 2d 413 (2002) .

(n45)Footnote 7. Vega-Rodriguez v. Puerto Rico Tel. Co., 110 F.3d 174, 177 (1st Cir. 1997) (circuit court applied summary judgment standard of review to district court's dismissal of action for failure to state claim when district court had considered matters outside pleadings); see [3][b], above.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.25

§ 11.25 Failure to Join Partyn*

A party may make a motion for dismissal under Rule 12(b)(7) if a person required to be joined by Rule 19 has not been included in a pleading. n1 As with a motion for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), a defensive motion for failure to join may be raised in any pleading permitted or ordered under Rule 7(a), n2 by a motion for judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c), n3 or at the latest, at trial on the merits. n4 Any party making a motion under Rule 12(b)(7) has the burden of producing evidence showing the nature of the interest possessed by the absent party and that the protection of that interest will be impaired by the absence. n5 Furthermore, the moving party may not obtain a dismissal by merely asserting that there are some persons required under Rule 19; the party must state the name or otherwise identify each absent person. n6

A dismissal for failure to join a person under Rule 19 does not operate as an adjudication on the merits. n7 Furthermore, as a practical matter, rather than dismiss the action, the court will usually allow the party to be joined, or grant the dismissal conditioned on reinstating the case once joinder of the absent party is secured. If the party is considered "indispensable" to the action and cannot be joined, the court should dismiss. n8

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.35 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(7); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a); see also Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(B).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(C); Lonberg v. City of Riverside, 571 F.3d 846, 849 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n6)Footnote 5. West Peninsular Title Co. v. Palm Beach County, 41 F.3d 1490, 1492 (11th Cir. 1995) ; Thompson v. Jiffy Lube Int'l, Inc., 505 F. Supp. 2d 907, 917 (D. Kan. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Raytheon Co. v. Continental Cas. Co., 123 F. Supp. 2d 22, 32-33 (D. Mass. 2000) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Baris v. Sulpicio Lines, Inc., 74 F.3d 567, 571 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Rhone-Poulenc Inc. v. International Ins. Co., 71 F.3d 1299, 1306 (7th Cir. 1996) (dismissal for failure to join parties vacated to determine whether parties were truly indispensable).

78 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.26

§ 11.26 Motion for Judgment on Pleadingsn*

[1] Use of Motion

At any time after the pleadings close and before the trial commences, a party may move for a judgment on the pleadings. n1 Unless the court orders a reply to an answer, the pleadings close after the last of the following pleadings in the case has been filed: answer, answer to a counterclaim, answer to a crossclaim, and third-party answer. n2 Although Rule 12(c) does not provide a specific time limit for a motion on the pleadings, the motion must be made within such time as not to delay the trial. n3

At least one court has observed that the Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on pleadings may be used in two ways: (1) after close of the pleadings to raise Rule 12(b) defenses based on procedural defects, in which case the applicable standard is that applied to a corresponding 12(b) motion; or (2) to dispose of the case based on the underlying substantive merits, in which case applicable standard is summary judgment standard, except that court may consider only contents of pleadings. n4

Any party may move for judgment on the pleadings, or the court may act on its own initiative. n5 The only distinction between the 12(b)(6) motion and the 12© motion is a matter of timing. n6 If the defendant files the motion prior to filing an answer, the court may treat it as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6). n7 Conversely, a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b) (6) filed after the pleadings close will be treated as a motion for judgment on the pleadings. n8 In fact, any distinction between them is merely semantic because the same standard applies to motions made under either subsection. n9 Additionally, Rule 12(h)(2) expressly allows the Rule 12(b)(6) motion to be made by motion for judgment on the pleadings. n10

[2] Court's Decision on Motion

As with a Rule 12(b)(6) motion for dismissal for failure to state a claim, a Rule 12(c) motion requires the court to accept the nonmoving party's factual allegations as true, n1 viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. n2 The court should thus grant judgment on the pleadings if the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n3 In determining the motion, the court may consider only the pleadings, including the complaint, the answer, any reply and any written instruments attached to them. n4

Whether under Rule 12(b)(6) or 12(c), when the court considers matters outside the pleadings, it must treat the motion as one for summary judgment under Rule 56. n5 All parties must receive notice of the conversion and a reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to the motion by Rule 56. n6 The essential inquiry, when determining if the district court correctly converted a motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment, is whether the nonmovant should reasonably have recognized the possibility that the motion might be converted into one for summary judgment or was taken by surprise and deprived of a reasonable opportunity to meet facts outside the pleadings. n7 Because a motion for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is analogous to the motion for judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c), n8 14 most of the voluminous authority on Rule 12(b)(6) applies to Rule 12(c), and the cases often discuss both motions. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.38 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. Geltman v. Verity, 716 F. Supp. 491, 491 (D. Colo. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Leslie v. St. Vincent New Hope, Inc., 873 F. Supp. 1250, 1252 (S.D. Ind. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Carver v. Nall, 986 F. Supp. 1134, 1137 (C.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Ledford v. Sullivan, 105 F.3d 354, 358 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Burbach Broad. Co. v. Elkins Radio Corp., 278 F.3d 401, 405-406 (4th Cir. 2002) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Seber v. Unger, 881 F. Supp. 323, 325 n.2 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Joe Hand Promotions, Inc. v. Lott, 971 F. Supp. 1058, 1060 (E.D. La. 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 9. GATX Leasing Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 64 F.3d 1112, 1114 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2)(B); National Ass'n of Pharm. Mfrs. v. Ayerst Lab., 850 F.2d 904, 909 n.2 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Simmons v. Galvin, 575 F.3d 24, 30 (1st Cir. 2009) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Perez-Acevedo v. Rivero-Cubano, 520 F.3d 26, 29 (1st Cir. 2008) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Tucker v. Middleburg Legacy Place, LLC, 539 F.3d 545, 549-550 (6th Cir. 2008) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Surgical Synergies, Inc. v. Genessee Assocs., Inc., 432 F.3d 870, 873-874 (8th Cir. 2005) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Rubin v. Schottenstein, Zox & Dunn, 110 F.3d 1247, 1253 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n17)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n18)Footnote 7. Krijn v. Pogue Simone Real Estate Co., 896 F.2d 687, 689 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n19)Footnote 8. Maggette v. Dalsheim, 709 F.2d 800, 802 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n20)Footnote 9. Menominee Indian Tribe of Wis. v. Thompson, 943 F. Supp. 999, 1005 (W.D. Wis. 1996) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.27

§ 11.27 Motion For More Definite Statementn*

[1] Use of Motion

A defending party may make a motion to have the court order a claimant to make a more definite statement with respect to a pleading that allows a responsive pleading. The court will grant the motion when the pleading is so vague or ambiguous that the party cannot reasonably prepare a response. The defending party must make the motion before filing a responsive pleading and must specify the defects complained of and the details desired. If the court orders a more definite statement and the pleader does not obey within 14 days after notice of the order or within the time the court sets, the court may strike the pleading or issue any other appropriate order. n1 A court may order that a plaintiff or other claimant provide a more definite statement in two situations. First, if a pleading does not contain allegations of each element of the claim as required under Rule 8, and if the deficiency is not so material that the pleading should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6), the court may order a more definite statement. n2 Second, a court may order a more definite statement if a complaint is tedious prolonged or confusingly complex, if a more definite statement can assist the court in clarifying the unintelligible claims. n3 The court also has the power to order a more definite statement on its own initiative. n4

[2] Motion Disfavored

Except when it is particularly useful, for example to assist the district court to maintain progress in a legal action, n1 the motion for a more definite statement is not favored, because the court is generally required to liberally construed pleadings. n2 Therefore, although they come within the court's discretion, n3 courts grant the motions sparingly. n4 The standard under Rule 12(e) is designed to correct unintelligibility, rather than lack of detail. n5 If a plaintiff presents proper, although general, allegations, the court will usually be denied on the grounds that discovery is the more appropriate vehicle for obtaining more detailed information. n6

Despite the courts' general disfavor toward granting motions for more definite statement, the liberal construction called for by the Rules' concept of notice pleading n7 makes such motions preferable to dismissal under Rule 12(b) when the complaint will survive the threshold test for dismissal as one for a more definite statement. n8

[3] Effect of Grant of Motion

If the court grants a motion for more definite statement, the pleader then must amend the offending pleading within 14 days of the court's order to provide the more definite statement and information as stated in the order. n1 If the pleader fails to amend the pleading as stated in the order, the court may then strike the pleading or issue any other appropriate order, n2 including dismissing the case. n3 The court may also impose sanctions for noncompliance with it's order. n4 If a pleading amended by a more definite statement raises new defenses or objections, the defendant may file an additional pre-answer Rule 12 motion with respect to matters in the amended pleading. However, any newly asserted defense or objection must not have been available to the party before the amendment, or the new motion will be denied. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.36 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e); see Thomas v. Independence Twp., 463 F.3d 285, 302 (3d Cir. 2006) (construing former time periods).

(n3)Footnote 2. Kelly v. L.L. Cool J., 145 F.R.D. 32, 36 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (copyright infringement claim complaint must allege four basic elements)).

(n4)Footnote 3. Anderson v. Board of Trustees, 77 F.3d 364, 367 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Spencer v. Bumyong Lee, 864 F.2d 1376, 1377 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Bennett v. Schmidt, 153 F.3d 516, 518-519 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n7)Footnote 2. BB in Tech. Co. v. JAF, 242 F.R.D. 632, (S.D. Fla. 2006) (plaintiff generally should not be required to modify its complaint if sufficient to withstand motion to dismiss).

(n8)Footnote 3. Old Time Enters. v. International Coffee Corp., 862 F.2d 1213, 1217 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 4. In re Hanford Nuclear Reservation Litig., 780 F. Supp. 1551, 1583 (E.D. Wash. 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 5. FDIC v. Wise, 758 F. Supp. 1414, 1418 (D. Colo. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 6. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc. v. Smith, 736 F. Supp. 1030, 1032 (D. Ariz. 1989) .

(n12)Footnote 7. Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence & Coordination Unit, 507 U.S. 163, 168, 113 S. Ct. 1160, 122 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1993) .

(n13)Footnote 8. American Nurses' Ass'n v. Illinois, 783 F.2d 716, 725 (7th Cir. 1986) (when defendant is unclear about meaning of particular allegation in complaint, proper course is not to move to dismiss, but to move for more definite statement).

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e); see McClellon v. Lone Star Gas Co., 66 F.3d 98, 103 (5th Cir. 1995) (construing former time periods).

(n15)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n16)Footnote 3. See M.K. v. Tenet, 99 F. Supp. 2d 12, 19 (D.D.C. 2007) (dismissal proper only if less drastic means would be unsuccessful).

(n17)Footnote 4. McHenry v. Renne, 84 F.3d 1172, 1173 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n18)Footnote 5. Harris Bank Naperville v. Pachaly, 902 F. Supp. 156, 157 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (amended complaint does not revive right to present defenses that were available before amendment but not asserted).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.28

§ 11.28 Motion to Striken*

[1] Use of Motion

The court may strike from a pleading an insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter, either on the courts own initiative, or the motion made by a defending before responding to a pleading. n1 If the defendant wants the court to remove any such material from a pleading, it must make a motion to strike before filing an answer, or if no response is allowed to the offending pleading, within 21 days of service of that pleading. n2 The court has discretion to extend the time for a party to file a motion to strike. n3

Only material included in a "pleading" may be the subject of a motion to strike, and courts have not construed that term broadly. n4 Consequently, motions, briefs or memoranda, n5 objections, n6 or affidavits may not be attacked by the motion to strike. n7 Courts disfavor the motion to strike, because it utilizes a drastic remedy. n8 Despite its disfavor with trial courts, however, the ruling on a motion to strike will not be overturned on appeal except for an abuse of discretion. n9

Because the motion to strike is disfavored, if the contents of a pleading are legally sufficient, but improper for some other reason, a motion to strike should be granted only when the moving party shows that the inclusion of the disputed claims or defenses would cause it prejudice. n10 If the moving party does not show prejudice, the Court should defer action on the motion and leave the sufficiency of the allegations for determination on the merits. n11

[2] Court's Decision on Motion

The court may remove material from a pleading that it finds "redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous." n1 To prevail on this motion to strike, the movant must clearly show that the challenged matter has no relevance to the subject matter of the litigation and that its inclusion will prejudice the defendants. n2 Several grounds listed in the rule for granting a motion to strike may overlap. However, as a general matter, courts will strike a claim as "redundant" when it essentially repeats another claim in the same complaint. n3 An allegation is "impertinent" or "immaterial" when it is neither responsive nor relevant to the issues involved in the action. n4 Pleadings containing unnecessary allegations, conclusions, or evidence beyond a short and plain statement of the grounds for relief may be challenged as impertinent by a motion to strike. n5 The court should allow the party to amend the pleading rather than dismiss the claim or complaint in such cases, unless the complaint is so confused, ambiguous, vague, or otherwise unintelligible that its true substance cannot be determined. n6 "Scandalous" means an allegation that unnecessarily reflects on the moral character of an individual or states anything in offensive language that detracts from the dignity of the court. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.37 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1); see Key v. Robertson, 626 F. Supp. 2d 566, 575 (E.D. Va. 2009) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Hrubec v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 829 F. Supp. 1502, 1506 (N.D. Ill. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Board of Educ. v. Admiral Heating and Ventilation, Inc., 94 F.R.D. 300, 304 (N.D. Ill. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Anna Ready Mix, Inc. v. N.E. Pierson Constr. Co., 747 F. Supp. 1299, 1303 (S.D. Ill. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Anna Ready Mix, Inc. v. N.E. Pierson Constr. Co., 747 F. Supp. 1299, 1303 (S.D. Ill. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 8. NOW, Inc. v. Scheidler, 897 F. Supp. 1047, 1087 n.28 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 9. von Bulow v. von Bulow, 657 F. Supp. 1134, 1146 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See In re Gabapentin Patent Litig., 648 F. Supp. 2d 641, 648 (D.N.J. 2009) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Abbott v. Abbott, 495 F. Supp. 2d 635, 641 (W.D. Tex. 2007) .

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n14)Footnote 2. Abbott v. Abbott, 495 F. Supp. 2d 635 (W.D. Tex. 2007) .

(n15)Footnote 3. Davidson v. John Deere & Co., 644 F. Supp. 707, 712-713 (N.D. Ind. 1986) .

(n16)Footnote 4. Williams v. Jader Fuel Co., 944 F.2d 1388, 1399 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n17)Footnote 5. Giuliano v. Everything Yogurt, Inc., 819 F. Supp. 240, 246 (E.D. N.Y. 1993) .

(n18)Footnote 6. Salahuddin v. Cuomo, 861 F.2d 40, 42 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n19)Footnote 7. Cobell v. Norton, 224 F.R.D. 1, 5 (D.D.C. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.29

§ 11.29 Procedural Considerations For Motions Raising Defenses and Objections

[1] Hearing is Optional for Court n*

A defendant may assert Rule 12(b) defenses and a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings before trial on the merits, and thus the court may hold a hearing and determination of jurisdictional or other issues in advance of trial. n1 When a motion relies on facts outside of the record, the court may hear the matter wholly or partly on oral testimony, or on depositions or affidavits. n2 The district court has discretion to decide the most appropriate course procedurally, because neither the federal rules nor the statutes prescribe that defenses be decided in a pretrial hearing or at trial. n3 The court's decision whether to hold a pretrial hearing or to defer the matter to trial on the merits may be set aside on appeal only for abuse of discretion. n4

When the court conducts a hearing on personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff must demonstrate personal jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence. If the court may decide the question instead based on the pleadings, affidavits, and supporting materials, the plaintiff need make only a prima facie showing of jurisdiction. n5 If the court initially relies on the prima facie case, the plaintiff must eventually establish jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence either at a pretrial hearing or at trial. n6 The court generally should not grant dismissal on a Rule 12 motion without a hearing; n7 however, the hearing need not be oral. n8

[2] Effect of Granting Defensive Motion n*

If a court grants a defendant's motion to dismiss under Rule 12, the dismissal may have varying effects on the present and future litigation of plaintiff's claims, depending on the type of motion involved and the scope of the motion and order of dismissal. If a motion to dismiss under any subsection of Rule 12 does not cover all plaintiffs and all their claims, the court will not dismiss the entire case, but only those claims affected. Similarly, a motion to dismiss brought by fewer than all defendants will not fully dispose of the case. For example, in granting a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction (Rule 12(b)(2)) over one of multiple defendants, all claims against that defendant will be dismissed, whereas the claims against the other defendants remain. n1 Even if all the parties and all the claims are implicated by a Rule 12 motion, a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, improper venue, or failure to join an indispensable party is typically without prejudice and does not have a preclusive effect. After curing any defects, the plaintiff may refile the plaintiff's claims. n2 In the case of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), if the court finds beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claims that would entitle the plaintiff to relief n3 and that failure applies to all plaintiff's claims, the entire case will be dismissed. Because a dismissal under that rule is considered an adjudication on the merits, the dismissal is with prejudice and has a claim preclusive effect on future litigation. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.50 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Cruz v. Sullivan, 802 F. Supp. 1015, 1016-1017 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 43(c).

(n4)Footnote 3. CutCo Indus. Inc. v. Naughton, 806 F.2d 361, 364 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Biofeedtrac, Inc. v. Kolinor Optical Enters. & Consultants, 817 F. Supp. 326, 331 (E.D. N.Y. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Nelson by Carson v. Park Industries, Inc., 717 F.2d 1120, 1123 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Marine Midland Bank, N.A. v. Miller, 664 F.2d 899, 904 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Commodities Export Co. v. United States Customs Serv., 888 F.2d 431, 436 (6th Cir. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 8. CutCo Indus., Inc. v. Naughton, 806 F.2d 361, 364 (2d Cir. 1986) (hearing may be based solely on papers).

(n10)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.51 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n11)Footnote 1. House v. Belford, 956 F.2d 711, 716 (7th Cir. 1992) (dismissal of one party without entry of partial final judgment prevents order from becoming appealable until judgment as to all).

(n12)Footnote 2. Baris v. Sulpicio Lines, Inc., 74 F.3d 567, 571 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Wagner v. Devine, 122 F.3d 53, 55 (1st Cir. 1997) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Baris v. Sulpicio Lines, Inc., 74 F.3d 567, 570 (5th Cir. 1996) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART III. DEFENSES AND OBJECTIONS THAT MAY BE RAISED BY MOTION

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 11.30 through 11.39

[Reserved]

§§ 11.30[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART IV. DENIALS AND DEFENSIVE PLEADINGS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.40

§ 11.40 Denialsn*

[1] Standard of Pleading for Denial

A "denial" is a statement by a defending party that an allegation contained in the claim against the defending party is not true. In responding to a pleading, a party must admit or deny each the allegations asserted against it by an opposing party. n1 A defending party must also state in short and plain terms the party's defenses to each claim asserted by the opposition. n2 A denial must fairly respond to the substance of each allegation. n3 A defendant has three choices when answering an allegation made in a complaint: (1) admit the allegation; (2) deny the allegation; n4 (3) state that it is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegation, which has the effect of a denial; n5 and (4) deny a part or a qualification of an allegation; in such circumstances the defendant should specify so much of the allegation as is true and material and deny the remainder. n6 A party may make alternative and hypothetical denials. n7 Under liberal federal pleading standards, a denial is judged by the same standard as a claim for relief, that a denial will be deemed sufficient provided that the substance what is being denied may be gleamed from the denial, and fair notice is given to the opposing party. n8

[2] Use of Specific Denials

When a defendant cannot either admit or deny all of the allegations in the preceding pleading, which is usually the case, the defendant should make specific denials of the allegations. Specific denials are denials that address distinct components of statements alleging many facts. A specific denial may be made for each component of a statement that is denied, with the remaining components admitted. n1 Alternatively, if a more "simple, concise and direct" responsive pleading will result, n2 a specific notation of each component admitted may be made, with all other components then denied. n3

[3] Use of General Denials

A general denial is a good faith denial of each and every allegation, including allegations of jurisdiction, within a statement in an affirmative pleading. n1 Because of the very broad nature of a general denial, as well the duty to respond in good faith after reasonable inquiry, general denials are rarely appropriate responses to multi-faceted statements within claims for relief when numerous facts are alleged together. However, a defendant may respond with a general denial to all of the specific allegations in a particular paragraph in a complaint, when the defendant is able to deny each and every specific contained in that paragraph. n2

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(5).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(4).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e)(2).

(n9)Footnote 8. In re Handy Andy Home Improvement Centers, Inc., 222 B.R. 571, 574 (N.D. Ill. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(3) (defendant may make denials as specific denials of designated allegations).

(n11)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(1).

(n12)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(3) (defendant may generally deny all the allegations except those designated allegations that the defendant expressly admits).

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(3).

(n14)Footnote 2. Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. v. Grant, 8 F.Supp.2d 1275, 1289 (N.D. Okla 1998) (when plaintiffs amended complaint to add specific items to paragraph that defendant has generally denied, defendants have opportunity to supplement their general denials with regard to the specific items added).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART IV. DENIALS AND DEFENSIVE PLEADINGS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.41

§ 11.41 Failure to Deny Allegations in Pleadings

If a defendant fails to deny an allegation in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required, such as a complaint, the denial is deemed an admission, except for allegations concerning the amount of damages. If a responsive pleading is not required, an allegation is considered denied or avoided. n1 Responsive pleadings are required to a complaint, a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim, a crossclaim a third-party complaint, and an answer if the court orders a reply to an answer. n2 Thus, a defendant is not required to respond to answers and third-party answers that the defendant receives from other parties, except those containing counterclaims denominated as such or crossclaims. n3 Therefore, defenses, including affirmative defenses, found in these pleadings are deemed denied or avoided. n4 An equivocal or otherwise improper denial, such as when a defendant attempts to evade the pleading requirements of Rule 8, will be deemed an admission. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(5).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART IV. DENIALS AND DEFENSIVE PLEADINGS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.42

§ 11.42 Responses in Pleadings By Defendantn*

[1] Defendant Pleading Lack of Knowledge or Insufficient Information

If a defendant is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an allegation in a pleading, the defendant must state that fact in the answer or other responsive pleading. Denial based on lack of knowledge or information has the same effect as a denial. n1 Disclaimers of "knowledge" alone are insufficient to obtain the benefit of a deemed denial under Rule 8(b), as are disclaimers of "knowledge or information" alone, without the defendant stating that any level of knowledge or information possessed by the defendant would not support a belief. n2

[2] Defendant Must Answer in Good Faith

Because all pleadings must be certified under Rule 11, defending parties may not respond to claims for relief by presenting answers and other responsive pleadings for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. n1 Defendants must have evidentiary support for their factual contentions n2 and nonfrivolous arguments for their defenses and legal contentions. n3 Defending parties must undertake an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances before presenting any responsive pleading. The inquiry must enable the defendant to certify that the pleading presented represents the best of the pleader's knowledge, information and belief. n4 (n3)Footnote 2. Gilbert v. Johnston, 127 F.R.D. 145, 146 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (pleader of information and belief must follow conditions as specified in Rule 8(b).

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(5).

(n4)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(4).

(n6)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2).

(n7)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART IV. DENIALS AND DEFENSIVE PLEADINGS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 11.43 through 11.49

[Reserved]

§§ 11.43[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART V. AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.50

§ 11.50 Requirement That Defendant Must Plead all Affirmativen*

[1] Specification of Required Affirmative Defenses

In its answer reply, a defendant must set forth affirmatively all the defenses enumerated in Rule 8(c) and any other matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense. n1 An "affirmative defense" is a defendant's assertion raising new facts and arguments different from the opposition's claim for relief, which if true will defeat the opponent's claim for relief, even if all the allegations in the pleading are true. n2 The purpose of requiring a defendant to pleading affirmative defenses and avoidances is to prevent surprise for the opposition and to give the opposition an opportunity to respond. n3 If an affirmative defense or avoidance is accepted by the court, it will defeat an otherwise legitimate claim for relief. n4

There are 18 affirmative defenses specifically listed in Rule 8: n5

- accord and satisfaction;
- arbitration and award;
- assumption of risk;
- contributory negligence;
- duress;
- estoppel;
- failure of consideration;
- fraud;

- illegality;
- injury by fellow servant;
- laches;
- license;
- payment;
- release;
- res judicata;
- statute of frauds;
- statute of limitations; and
- waiver.

Although the affirmative defense that an action is barred by a statute of limitation must be pleaded in an answer by the defendant, it need not be pleaded with specificity. The defense of statute of limitations is raised sufficiently by merely asserting it. n6

A defending party has the option to raise an affirmative defense in a motion filed prior to its answer or other initial responsive pleading. However, it is not obligated to do so and does not waive an affirmative defense provided the party specifies the affirmative defense in its initial responsive pleading. n7

[2] Plaintiff Must Plead Other Matters of Avoidance

In addition to affirmative defenses specifically listed in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a plaintiff must plead in its initial responsive pleading all other matters of avoidance. n1 An "avoidance" is any matter asserted by the defense that effectively precludes the pleader's ability to recover on the claim. n2 The courts have held that all of the following constitute affirmative defenses or matters of avoidance:

Courts have held that the following constitute affirmative defenses, even though they are not enumerated in Rule 8(c):

- Failure to mitigate damages. n3
- Failure to exhaust state remedies. n4 18
- Novation in breach of contract. n5
- Common law immunity. n6
- Statutory immunity. n7
- Hindrance of contract. n8
- Statutory limitations on damages. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.07[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c).

(n3)Footnote 2. Emergency One, Inc. v. Am. Fire Eagle Engine Co., 332 F.3d 264, 271 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Std. Waste Sys. v. Mid-Continent Cas. Co., 612 F.3d 394, 398 (5th Cir. 2010) .

(N5)Footnote 4. See Blonder-Tongue Lab. v. University of Illinois Found., 402 U.S. 313, 350, 91 S. Ct. 1434, 28 L. Ed. 2d 788 (1971) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. Zotos v. Lindbergh Sch. Dist., 121 F.3d 356, 360 (8th Cir. 1997) (defendant sufficiently raised limitations defense by boilerplate statement that plaintiff's claims were barred by applicable statutes of limitations).

(n8)Footnote 7. Hoang Van Tu v. Koster, 364 F.3d 1196, 1200 (10th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see § 11.51.

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(1).

(n10)Footnote 2. See Marsh v. Butler County, 268 F.3d 1014, 1022 (11th Cir. 2001) ; Quiller v. Barclays American/Credit, 727 F.2d 1067, 1069 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n11)Footnote 3. 999 v. C.I.T. Corp., 776 F.2d 866, 870 n.2 (9th Cir. 1985) (failure to mitigate damages is affirmative defense under in claim for breach of agreement to provide financing).

(n12)Footnote 4. Santos v. Alaska Bar Ass'n, 618 F.2d 575, 576-577 (9th Cir. 1980) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Able Int'l Corp. v. B.P. Chems. Am., 145 F.3d 67, 68-69 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n14)Footnote 6. Gomez v. Toledo, 446 U.S. 635, 640, 100 S. Ct. 1920, 64 L. Ed. 2d 572 (1980) .

(n15)Footnote 7. Troxler v. Owens-Ill., Inc., 717 F.2d 530, 532-533 (11th Cir. 1983) (statutory immunity to workers' compensation claim is Rule 8(c) affirmative defense).

(n16)Footnote 8. Fort Howard Paper Co. v. Standard Havens, Inc., 901 F.2d 1373 1377 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n17)Footnote 9. Simon v. United States, 891 F.2d 1154, 1156-1157 (5th Cir. 1990) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART V. AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.51

§ 11.51 Waiver By Failure to Raise Affirmative Defensen*

[1] Circumstances of Waiver

If a defendant fails to raise an affirmative defense by presenting it in the initial responsive pleading, the defendant is generally deemed to have waived the defense. n1 The Supreme Court has held that the initial responsive pleading required by the rule is the one following the events that give rise to the defense. n2 It should be noted that a party has the right to raise an affirmative defense in a motion filed prior to its initial pleading; however, it is not required to do so and is only required to raise affirmative defenses in its initial pleading. n3 The effect of a waiver of an affirmative defense is that evidence relating solely to the defense may not be admitted at any later trial, summary judgment hearing, or similar proceeding. n4

[2] Exception to Waiver Rule

There are several exceptions to the rule that the defendant waives an affirmative defense that is not presented in the initial response to a claim. The most common method for a defending party to preserve an affirmative defense is by raising it in a motion, such as, a motion to dismiss prior to filing the party's initial responsive pleading. Note, however, that even though it has the right to do so, a defending party need not raise an affirmative defense in a motion filed prior to its initial pleading, provided it includes affirmative defenses in its initial pleading. n1

A defense that has not been pleaded may be raised later in a several ways. Waiver of an affirmative defense because of failure to plead it under Rule 8(c) may be avoided if the defense is tried by the express or implied consent of the parties under Rule 15(b). n2 Accordingly, if a defending party introduces evidence related solely to an unpleaded affirmative defense at trial, and the claimant fails to object, the waiver is negated. n3 Additionally, the defendant may be permitted to raise the defense before trial by motion in limine. n4 Waiver of an unpleaded affirmative defense may also be avoided by a motion to amend the responsive pleading under Rule 15(a) to include the defense. A motion to amend will be denied if the claimant would be unduly prejudiced. The court will not find prejudice if the amendment does not surprise the opposing party, for example when the motion to amend is made following discovery undertaken on issues solely related to the defense. n5

A defendant does not waive an affirmative defense if the defendant has actually raised the defense, but has mischaracterized it. When a party has mistakenly designated a defense as a counterclaim or a counterclaim as a defense, the court, if justice so requires, must treat the pleading as if there had been a proper designation. n6 Finally, an appellate court may consider an affirmative defense not raised in the district court if consideration of the defense will give the appellate court different or additional grounds on which to affirm the district court. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.07[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(1); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Pictet Overseas Trust Corp., 477 F.3d 616, 622 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Arizona v. California, 530 U.S. 392, 408-410, 120 S. Ct. 2304, 147 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2000) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Hoang Van Tu v. Koster, 364 F.3d 1196, 1200 (10th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 4. Venters v. City of Delphi, 123 F.3d 956, 968 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Hoang Van Tu v. Koster, 364 F.3d 1196, 1200 (10th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see § 11.52.

(n7)Footnote 2. See Ringuette v. City of Fall River, 146 F.3d 1, 4-5 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 3. United States v. Certain Real Property, 945 F.2d 1252, 1257 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 4. Casas Office Machs. v. Mita Copystar Am., 961 F. Supp. 353, 356-357 (D. P.R. 1997) (defendant permitted to raise unpleaded defenses of release and res judicata by motion in limine when it gave plaintiff sufficient notice of defenses through objections to interrogatories).

(n10)Footnote 5. Cross & Cross Properties v. Everett Allied Co., 886 F.2d 497, 500, 503 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n11)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(2); Reiter v. Cooper, 507 U.S. 258, 263, 113 S. Ct. 1213, 122 L. Ed. 2d 604 (1993) .

(n12)Footnote 7. Bechtold v. City of Rosemount, 104 F.3d 1062, 1068 (8th Cir. 1997) .

89 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART V. AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.52

§ 11.52 Affirmative Defense May Be Raised By Motionn*

A defendant may raise an affirmative defense even before filing an answer, for example, in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. n1 Another method for a defendant to raise an affirmative defense before filing an answer is in a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment that is asserted before the answer is filed. n2 Waiver occurs only if defending party fails to raise the defense in its initial pleading. n3

Even though an affirmative defense may be raised in a pre-answer motion, there is authority for the proposition that the defense may not be raised in post-answer motion unless the defense was first pleaded in the answer. n4 This position is based on the rationale that the failure to plead an affirmative defense in the answer results in a waiver or forfeiture of the defense unless the court permits the defendant to amend its answer. n5 Other courts are not so strict. They do permit a defendant to raise an affirmative defense for the very first time in a post-answer motion if the defense is raised in sufficient time so that there is no prejudice to the opposing party merely because of the delay. n6

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.07[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Vernon v. Heckler, 811 F.2d 1274, 1278 (9th Cir. 1987) (statute of limitations defense allowed in motion to dismiss when running of statute clear from complaint).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b) (defending party may move for summary judgment at any time).

(n4)Footnote 3. Hoang Van Tu v. Koster, 364 F.3d 1196, 1200 (10th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see § 11.51.

(n5)Footnote 4. Harris v. Secretary, United States Dep't of Veterans Affairs, 126 F.3d 339, 343-345 (D.C. Cir. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See United States v. Shanbaum, 10 F.3d 305, 312 (5th Cir. 1994) (affirmative defense not raised in pleading not waived if raised at pragmatically sufficient time and there is no prejudice).

(n7)Footnote 6. Rycoline Products v. C & W Unlimited, 109 F.3d 883, 886 (3d Cir. 1997) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART V. AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.53

§ 11.53 Affirmative Defenses Governed By Federal or State Substantive Lawn*

If a plaintiff's claim in federal court is based on substantive state law grounds, federal procedural law and the state substantive law must be followed with respect to affirmative defenses. n1 For example, because exhaustion of remedies is an affirmative defense provided by state law, application of the defense in litigation in federal court is governed by federal procedural law, and state substantive law. n2 Even if a claim is based on federal law grounds, affirmative defenses under state law are applicable if the relevant federal law incorporates state law defenses. For example, in a civil rights claim involving deprivation of federal constitutional rights by state governmental officers, n3 state statutes of limitation for personal injury actions are applicable. n4 Furthermore, when state law governs an affirmative defense in a civil action in a federal district court, the defense must be pleaded under Rule 8(c). n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 8.07[4] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Palmer v. Hoffman, 318 U.S. 109, 117, 63 S. Ct. 477, 87 L. Ed. 645 (1943) (Rule 8(c) covers only manner of pleading, and contributory negligence was state substantive law that federal court must apply under Erie).

(n3)Footnote 2. Legal Aid Soc'y v. City of New York, 114 F. Supp. 2d 204, 222 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n5)Footnote 4. Wilson v. Garcia, 471 U.S. 261, 280, 105 S. Ct. 1938, 85 L. Ed. 2d 254 (1985) (for section 1983 claims, forum state's personal injury statute of limitation must be applied).

(n6)Footnote 5. Simon v. United States, 891 F.2d 1154, 1156 (5th Cir. 1990) ; see Santos v. District Council of New York City, 619 F.2d 963, 967 (2d Cir. 1980) (although state limitations period applied, federal rules determined whether defense timely raised).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART V. AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 11.53 through 11.59

[Reserved]

§§ 11.53[Reserved]

92 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VI. COUNTERCLAIMS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.60

§ 11.60 Characteristics of Counterclaimn*

[1] Counterclaims May Be Compulsory or Mandatory

A counterclaim is any claim for relief, n1 other than an original claim, that one party has against an opposing party. Thus, any claim which a defending party has against a plaintiff is a counterclaim; and any claim which a third-party defendant has against the third-party plaintiff is a counterclaim. n2 Rule 13 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which governs use of the counterclaim, must be liberally construed to achieve the general objectives of the rules of procedure to avoid multiplicity of litigation, minimize circuity of actions, and foster judicial economy. n3 Counterclaims may be either compulsory or permissive. A compulsory counterclaim is a counterclaim that arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim, and does not require adding another party who is not subject to the jurisdiction of the court. n4 A permissive counterclaim is any claim that a party has against an opposing party any that is not compulsory. n5

[2] Scope of Counterclaims Authorized by Rule

Counterclaims may state independent and affirmative claims for relief, and need not diminish or defeat the recovery sought by the opposing party. A counterclaim may request relief that exceeds in amount or differs in kind from the relief sought by the opposing party. n1 Under the federal rules, a pleading must state any compulsory counterclaim, and may state any permissive counterclaim, that the pleader has against the opposing party. n2 Consequently, counterclaims are not limited to seeking the same type of relief as that sought in the claim of the opposing party. n3

A counterclaim may request injunctive relief if the requirements for pleading an injunction are otherwise met. n4 Similarly, a counterclaim may demand declaratory relief if the requirements for pleading the existence of a case or controversy between the parties are otherwise met. n5 However, the court may still refuse to grant declaratory relief on a counterclaim if the declaratory judgment counterclaim is either redundant, or if the main claim has been resolved, unnecessary and moot in the sense of no longer presenting a case or controversy as to the issues adjudicated in that claim. n6

[3] Assertion of Counterclaim Obtained After Filing of Defendant's Initial Pleading

The court may permit a party to file a supplemental pleading asserting a counterclaim that matured or was acquired by the party after serving an earlier pleading. n1 A counterclaim acquired or maturing after the initial pleading is not considered compulsory under Rule 13, and will not be barred in a subsequent action if not pleaded in the initial action during which the claim arose or was acquired. n2 Rule 13(e) is the counterclaim counterpart to Rule 15(d) for claims, which allows a party to serve a "supplemental pleading" to state out any transaction, occurrence, or event that happened after the date of the initial pleading. n3

Courts may consider whether supplementation to add a counterclaim will cause inconvenience or confusion in the litigation proceeding. n4 Similarly, a court has discretion to refuse to allow an unrelated supplemental counterclaim if allowing the claim will create inconvenience and confusion. n5 A court is more likely to permit an after-acquired or late maturing claim if it otherwise meets the compulsory counterclaim requirements by arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim. n6

[4] Court's Discretion to Allow Counterclaim Omitted From Defendant's Initial Pleading

The court may permit a defendant to amend a pleading to add a counterclaim if it was omitted through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect or if justice so requires. n1 Rule 13(f) is the counterclaim counterpart to Rule 15(a) for claims, which allows a party to amend its initial pleading. n2 Rule 13(f) permits a defendant to raise by amendment a counterclaim omitted from the defendants initial pleading in two situations.

The first situation where the court may allow a pleader to raise by amendment is when the defendant has omitted a counterclaim through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect. n3 The primary factors courts consider in determining whether to allow an omitted counterclaim by amendment include the good faith of the claimant, n4 the danger of prejudice to the opposing party, n5 and the timeliness or extent of delay in raising the claim. n6 Another significant factor to be considered is whether the counterclaim is compulsory; the risk of the claim being barred in a subsequent action especially supports a liberal amendment standard to include omitted compulsory counterclaims. n7 On the other hand, a court may deny a motion to amend if the counterclaim is meritless and the amendment would prove futile. n8

The second situation in which the court may allow the defendant to raise an omitted counterclaim by amendment when justice requires. n9 This language taken from Rule 15(a) illustrates the interplay and harmony between the amendment and omitted counterclaim rules, and provides that leave to amend should be freely granted in the absence of a showing of undue delay, bad faith, or prejudice to opposing party. n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 13.40 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Reiter v. Cooper, 507 U.S. 258, 113 S. Ct. 1213, 122 L. Ed. 2d 604, 614-616 (1993) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a),(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. Hoffman v. Wisner Classic Mfg. Co., Inc., 927 F. Supp. 67, 74 (E.D. N.Y. 1996) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b); Iglesias v. Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, 156 F.3d 237, 241 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(c); see Styler v. Jean Bob, Inc., 154 B.R. 581, 586 n.4 (D. Utah 1993) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n8)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a),(b).

(n9)Footnote 3. United States v. Snider, 779 F.2d 1151, 1156-1158 (6th Cir. 1985) (Rule 13(a) permits but does not require defendant who was sued only for declaratory and injunctive relief to file counterclaim to recover money damages arising out of claim).

(n10)Footnote 4. Baker by Thomas v. GMC, 522 U.S. 222, 226, 118 S. Ct. 657, 139 L. Ed. 2d 580 (1998) .

(n11)Footnote 5. See Iowa Prot. & Advocacy Servs. v. Tanager, Inc., 427 F.3d 541, 543 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n12)Footnote 6. Tenneco, Inc. v. Saxony Bar & Tube, Inc., 776 F.2d 1375, 1379 (7th Cir. 1985) (when one party to contract seeks declaration of contract's meaning, another party's counterclaim to enforce contract is repetitious and unnecessary).

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(e); see Am. Home Assur. Co. v. Pope, 487 F.3d 590, 604 n.6 (8th Cir. 2007) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Stone v. Dep't of Aviation, 453 F.3d 1271, 1280 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n15)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d); Keller v. Davidson, 299 F. Supp. 2d 1171, 1178-1179 (D. Colo. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 4. Harbor Ins. Co. v. Continental Bank Corp., 922 F.2d 357, 360-361 (7th Cir. 1990) (permission to add Rule 13(e) claim will be denied if litigation will be unduly disrupted).

(n17)Footnote 5. All West Pet Supply Co. v. Hill's Pet Prods. Div., Colgate-Palmolive Co., 152 F.R.D. 202, 204-205 (D. Kan. 1993) (in breach of distributorship action, court denied defendant's motion to add supplemental fraud counterclaim under state law as counterclaim did not arise out of same transaction or occurrence as main claim, would complicate trial preparation, result in delay and inject numerous issues unduly extending length of trial).

(n18)Footnote 6. Skaro v. Eastern Sav. Bank, 866 F. Supp. 229, 233-234 (W.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n19)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(f).

(n20)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a); see also Bank of New York v. Sasson, 786 F. Supp. 349, 352 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (liberal policies that support amended pleadings apply to omitted counterclaim; Rule 13(f) and Rule 15(a) are entirely consistent in their facilitation of amended pleadings).

(n21)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(f).

(n22)Footnote 4. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n v. Foster, 783 F. Supp. 916, 919-921 (M.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n23)Footnote 5. Frank M. McDermott, Ltd. v. Moretz, 898 F.2d 418, 420-421 (4th Cir. 1990) .

(n24)Footnote 6. McLemore v. Landry, 898 F.2d 996, 1003 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n25)Footnote 7. Barnes Group, Inc. v. C & C Prods., Inc., 716 F.2d 1023, 1035 n.35 (4th Cir. 1983) .

(n26)Footnote 8. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n v. Foster, 783 F. Supp. 916, 921 (M.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n27)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(f); Pioneer Inv. Serv. Co. v. Brunswick Assocs. Ltd. Partnership, 507 U.S. 380, 395, 113 S. Ct. 1489, 1497, 123 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1993) .

(n28)Footnote 10. Cooper Dev. Co. v. Employers Ins. of Wausau, 765 F. Supp. 1429, 1432 (N.D. Cal. 1991) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VI. COUNTERCLAIMS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.61

§ 11.61 Compulsory Counterclaimsn*

[1] Defendant Must Plead Compulsory Counterclaim

A defending party must plead as a counterclaim any claim that, at the time of its service, n1 the pleader has against an opposing party if the claim:

1. arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim; n2 and

2. does not require adding another party over whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction. n3

It is important to distinguish between the compulsory counterclaim and the permissive counterclaim, which is any claim that a party has against an opposing party any claim that is not compulsory. n4 The primary distinction is whether the claim and the counterclaim arise out of the transaction or occurrence. n5 The terms "transaction" and "occurrence" are not mutually exclusive, and describe a broad category of situations in which there may be a relationship between the claim and counterclaim. n6 Consequently, the courts have developed several tests used to determine whether a counterclaim is compulsory or permissive, including: (1) whether there is any logical relation between claim and counterclaim; (2) whether substantially the same evidence will support or refute the plaintiff's claim as well as defendant's counterclaim; (3) whether issues of fact and law raised by claim and counterclaim are largely the same, and (4) whether res judicata would bar subsequent suit on defendant's claim absent the compulsory counterclaim rule. n7 The first two of these tests are elaborated on below in subsections [2] and [3], below, because they have been recognized by most of the circuits. n8 The tests should not be rigidly applied however, because too mechanistic a comparison of the events causing a claim and counterclaim could lose sight of the policies underlying the compulsory counterclaim rule of achieving economy, fairness, and consistency by requiring both to be determined in a single suit. n9

[2] Logical Relationship Test

One widely recognized test of whether a counterclaim is compulsory is whether there is a logical relationship between the claim and counterclaim. n1 The claims are logically related if the essential facts alleged by the plaintiff constitute, at least in part, the basis of the defendant's counterclaim. In developing the rule, the Supreme Court noted that the word "transaction" may comprehend a series of many occurrences, depending not so much on the immediateness of their connection as on their logical relationship. n2 Under the logical relation test, a counterclaim qualifies as "compulsory" only if it arises out of the same aggregate of operative facts as the original claim in two respects: (1) that the same aggregate of operative facts serves as the basis of both claims, or (2) that the aggregate core of facts on which the original claim rests activates additional legal rights in the defendant that would otherwise remain dormant. n3

[3] Same Evidence Test

The courts have developed a refined version of the logical relationship test in which the claim and counterclaim are logically related if: (1) the facts necessary to prove the two claims substantially overlap and (2) the preclusive effect of a judgment for the plaintiff in the first action would bar the putative counterclaimant from raising the claim in a subsequent action. n1 This test, while not administered rigidly, gives weight to consideration of the same evidence and claim preclusion factors, and is known as the "same evidence test." n2 In this test, the. n3 Some courts have emphasized the utility of the same evidence test, noting that it accomplishes the purposes of the compulsory counterclaim rule by preventing the relitigation of the same set of facts. Another circuit has focused on the overlap of legally relevant facts underlying the claims with a view toward trying them in the same suit, n4 while another circuit makes use of both the same evidence factor and the claim preclusion factor. n5 Finally, some courts have described the test as whether the same evidence would substantially dispose of the issues raised by the opposing claims. n6

The same evidence test seeks to achieve the Rule 13 goals of judicial economy n7 and finality of federal court adjudication, n8 because the compulsory counterclaim Rule was drafted to limit the number of lawsuits that could be brought in connection with one controversy. Furthermore, it was designed to balance the interest of the counterclaimant in prosecuting the counterclaim in a forum of its own choosing n9 28 against the interest in conserving judicial resources by resolving all disputes arising out of common matters in a single action. n10

[4] Counterclaims Are Compulsory Only if Counterclaim Exists At Time Pleading Is Served

A pleading must state as a counterclaim any claim the pleader has against any opposing party at the time of serving the pleading. n1 Thus, a counterclaim that arose from the same transaction or occurrence as the primary claim, but did not accrue or mature until after service of the answer is not compulsory in the action. n2 Before it is mature for purposes of the compulsory counterclaim rule, the counterclaim must be completely vested at the time the pleader serves the responsive pleading, and not merely contingent or likely to arise in the future. n3 For example, a claim for abuse of process that is contingent on the resolution of another lawsuit not yet terminated at the operative filing time is not a mature compulsory counterclaim. n4 Once the claim matures, however, the defendant may have the option, provided the defendant gets leave of court, to bring the claim as a permissive counterclaim. n5

[5] Rule Applicable to Responsive Pleading Only

A claim that should have been pleaded as a compulsory counterclaim in a first suit will only be barred in a subsequent action if a responsive pleading, such as an answer, was required to be or was served in the earlier action. n1 Federal courts deciding the issue have uniformly held that a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12 is not a responsive pleading. n2 As one court stated, to hold otherwise would inappropriately punish a litigant for interposing a successful motion to dismiss before answering by stripping it of the right to bring claims that in retrospect could or should have been brought had the motion to dismiss failed. n3

[6] Exceptions to Rules Requiring Pleading of Counterclaims

[a] When Claim is Subject of Another Suit

A defendant need not plead as a compulsory counterclaim any claim that is already the subject of another action that was pending prior to the institution of the current action, even if the claim arises from the same transaction or occurrence as the claim in the initial action. n1 Thus, the defendant may, but is not required to, file a counterclaim in the second action. n2 If the defendant chooses to file the counterclaim in the subsequent action, it would be able to invoke the supplemental jurisdiction normally accorded to compulsory counterclaims. n3 Alternatively, the defendant may elect to raise the claim in the first-filed action. It is important to note, however, that in either scenario, the first action to go to final judgment will be dispositive as to those issues in the still pending action. n4 The exception applies whether the initial action was filed in state court n5 or in federal court. n6

[b] When Court Lacks Jurisdiction Over Indispensable Party to Claim

A defendant is not required to assert a claim as a counterclaim if the claim requires the addition of another person over whom the court is unable to obtain jurisdiction. n7 Rule 13 allows the joinder of parties required for granting complete relief in a counterclaim, if jurisdiction of the parties can be obtained, and their joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the action. n8 However, there is an exception to the compulsory counterclaim rule when a court is unable to obtain personal jurisdiction over the additional required defendants. n9 This exception is required by basic considerations of fairness, because a party should not be required to litigate its counterclaim in a forum in which it cannot bring in indispensable parties. n10 Inability to join indispensable parties may arise (1) because their joinder would destroy diversity jurisdiction, (2) personal jurisdiction cannot be obtained over them, or (3) joinder would destroy venue in the action. A lack of subject matter jurisdiction over indispensable parties cannot be waived by agreement of the parties. Courts have also noted that lack of personal jurisdiction cannot be waived. n11

[c] Claim In Suit by Attachment or Other Process Lacking In Personam Jurisdiction

A defendant need not state a claim as a counterclaim if the opposing party sued on its claim by attachment or other process that did not establish personal jurisdiction over the pleader on that claim, and the pleader does not assert any counterclaim under this rule. n12 If the defendant does decide to raise a claim as a counterclaim in such circumstances, the defendant is required to raise as counterclaims any claims that the defendant has arising from the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim. n13

If a defendant elects not to appear in an in rem action, a judgment for the plaintiff binds the res only, and the defendant will be free to bring a subsequent, independent action on a claim arising out the of same transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of plaintiff's claim. n14 On the other hand, if a defendant in an action over which the court has only in rem or quasi in rem jurisdiction elects to appear in the action and defend against the plaintiff's claim, the defendant is not required to plead compulsory counterclaims, but may reserve them and assert them in a subsequent, independent action. n15 For example, if the defendant in a quasi in rem attachment action appeared to challenge the validity of the attachment and also had a counterclaim, which would otherwise be compulsory, against the plaintiff for breach of contract, the defendant would have the option to assert the counterclaim in a subsequent action because it would subject the defendant to in personam jurisdiction. n16

[7] Effect of Failure to Plead Compulsory Counterclaim

If a pleading party fails to plead a claim against an opposing party when that claim counstitutes a compulsory counterclaim, the pleader waives the right to bring that claim at a later time, n1 and the claim is barred even in subsequent litigation. n2 In other words, Rule 13(a) bars litigation for the first time on a subject that could have been asserted in a counterclaim. Typically, the timing of a counterclaim and its classification as compulsory do not become crucial until a second action is brought on the same claim, in which the pleader attempts to raise a claim based on the same transaction or occurrence which was the basis of the first suit, and the opposing party moves to dismiss it as barred. n3 While the text of Rule 13 does not explicitly state the prohibition, a claim that was compulsory in a prior suit is barred in a subsequent action based on the same claim. n4

Courts have also barred subsequent use of a compulsory counterclaim in the same action after the defendant failed to plead that counterclaim in an earlier pleading. n5 When a defendant took a default judgment in an earlier action on a claim that was compulsory in that earlier action, the defendant was barred from asserting the claim in any subsequent proceeding. n6 In another example, the court barred a claim in a post-default hearing on damages by a defaulting defendant who had failed to file a responsive pleading containing that claim as a counterclaim. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 13.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See [4], below.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1)(B); see [6], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1)(A).

(n7)Footnote 6. Moore v. New York Cotton Exch., 270 U.S. 593, 609-610, 46 S. Ct. 367, 70 L. Ed. 750 (1926) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Iglesias v. Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, 156 F.3d 237, 241 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Yoon Ja Kim v. Sara Lee Bakery Group, Inc., 412 F. Supp. 2d 929, 935 (N.D. Ill. 2006) ; Harrison v. Grass, 304 F. Supp. 2d 710, 713 (D. Md. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Moore v. New York Cotton Exch., 270 U.S. 593, 609-610, 46 S. Ct. 367, 70 L. Ed. 750 (1926) .

(n11)Footnote 1. Montana v. Goldin (In re Pegasus Gold Corp.), 394 F.3d 1189, 1195-1196 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n12)Footnote 2. Moore v. New York Cotton Exch., 270 U.S. 593, 609-610, 46 S. Ct. 367, 70 L. Ed. 750 (1926) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Iglesias v. Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, 156 F.3d 237, 242 (1st Cir. 1998) ; Eon Labs., Inc. v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 298 F. Supp. 2d 175, 179 (D. Mass. 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Colonial Penn Life Ins. Co. v. Hallmark Ins. Adm'rs, Inc., 31 F.3d 445, 447 (7th Cir. 1994) (court should examine totality of two claims, including their nature, their legal basis for recovery, their respective facts, and underlying substantive law.

(n15)Footnote 2. Harrison v. Grass, 304 F. Supp. 2d 710, 713 (D. Md. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Colonial Penn Life Ins. Co. v. Hallmark Ins. Adm'rs, Inc., 31 F.3d 445, 447-448 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Adam v. Jacobs, 950 F.2d 89, 92 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n18)Footnote 5. Pochiro v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 827 F.2d 1246, 1251-1253 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n19)Footnote 6. Bose Corp. v. Consumers Union of the United States, Inc., 384 F.Supp. 600, 602-603 (D. Mass. 1974) .

(n20)Footnote 7. Adam v. Jacobs, 950 F.2d 89, 93 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n21)Footnote 8. Colonial Penn Life Ins. Co. v. Hallmark Ins. Adm'rs, Inc., 31 F.3d 445, 447-448 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n22)Footnote 9. Burlington N. R. Co. v. Strong, 907 F.2d 707, 710 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n23)Footnote 10. Southern Constr. Co. v. Pickard, 371 U.S. 57, 60, 83 S. Ct. 108, 9 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1962) .

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1).

(n25)Footnote 2. Dillard v. Security Pac. Brokers, Inc., 835 F.2d 607, 609 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n26)Footnote 3. Steinberg v. St. Paul Mercury Ins., 108 F.R.D. 355, 358 (S.D. Ga. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n27)Footnote 4. Young v. City of New Orleans, 751 F.2d 794, 801 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n28)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b),(e).

(n29)Footnote 1. United States v. Snider, 779 F.2d 1151, 1157 (6th Cir. 1985) (defendant's counterclaim to recover money damages arising out of same transaction was not compulsory when defendant was not required to serve responsive pleading in first action).

(n30)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n31)Footnote 3. Mutual Fire, Marine and Inland Ins. Co. v. Adler, 726 F. Supp. 478, 483 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n32)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(2)(A); St. Paul Fire and Marine Ins. Co. v. Seafare Corp., 831 F.2d 57, 58 (4th Cir. 1987) .

(n33)Footnote 2. Old Hickory Barge and Fleeting, Inc. v. Barge M-553, 107 F.R.D. 689, 691 (M.D. La. 1985) .

(n34)Footnote 3. Brach v. Amoco Oil Co., 677 F.2d 1213, 1218 (7th Cir. 1981) .

(n35)Footnote 4. Hastings v. Seattle-First Nat'l Bank, 40 Fed. R. Serv. 2d 669, 673 (M.D. Fla. 1984) .

(n36)Footnote 5. United States v. Sarman, 699 F.2d 469, 470 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n37)Footnote 6. Hastings v. Seattle-First Nat'l Bank, 40 Fed. R. Serv. 2d 669, 673 (M.D. Fla. 1984) .

(n38)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1)(B).

(n39)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n40)Footnote 9. Northwest Airlines, Inc. v. International Ass'n of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, 712 F. Supp. 732, 733-734 (D. Minn. 1989) .

(n41)Footnote 10. Cf. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n42)Footnote 11. Northwest Airlines, Inc. v. International Ass'n of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, 712 F. Supp. 732, 734-735 (D. Minn. 1989) .

(n43)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(2)(B).

(n44)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(2)(B) (exception is applicable only if pleader refrains from asserting counterclaim).

(n45)Footnote 14. Cargill, Inc. v. Sabine Trading & Shipping Co., 756 F.2d 224, 229 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n46)Footnote 15. Old Hickory Barge and Fleeting, Inc. v. Barge M-553, 107 F.R.D. 689, 690 (M.D. La. 1985) .

(n47)Footnote 16. Cargill, Inc. v. Sabine Trading & Shipping Co., 756 F.2d 224, 229 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n48)Footnote 1. Polymer Indus. Prods. v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 347 F.3d 935, (Fed. Cir. 2003) .

(n49)Footnote 2. Ross v. Bd. of Educ., 486 F.3d 279, 284 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n50)Footnote 3. Crown Life Ins. Co. v. American Nat'l Bank and Trust Co., 35 F.3d 296, 300 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n51)Footnote 4. Baker v. Gold Seal Liquors, Inc., 417 U.S. 467, 469 n.1, 94 S. Ct. 2504, 41 L. Ed. 2d 243 (1974) .

(n52)Footnote 5. Greyhound Exhibitgroup, Inc. v. E.L.U.L. Realty Corp., 973 F.2d 155, 160 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n53)Footnote 6. Carteret Sav. & Loan Ass'n, F.A. v. Jackson, 812 F.2d 36, 38-39 (1st Cir. 1987) .

(n54)Footnote 7. Greyhound Exhibitgroup, Inc. v. E.L.U.L. Realty Corp., 973 F.2d 155, 160 (2d Cir. 1992) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VI. COUNTERCLAIMS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.62

§ 11.62 Permissive Counterclaimsn*

[1] Nature of Permissive Counterclaims

A "permissive counterclaim" is any claim against an opposing party other that does not come within the definition of a compulsory counterclaim. n1 Therefore, a permissive counterclaim is one that either does not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim, n2 requires the addition of another party over whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction, n3 or comes within one of the other exceptions to the compulsory counterclaim rule. n4

Thus, a claim that does not meet the test for a compulsory counterclaims is a permissive counterclaim, that the defending party may plead but need not plead if the defending party chooses not to do so. Furthermore, a failure to plead a compulsory counterclaim does not result in a bar on future litigation of that claim. n5 Subject to jurisdictional limitations, a defendant has the option to bring its permissive counterclaims either in the same action in which the opposing party raised its primary claims against the defendant, or in a separate action. Unlike compulsory counterclaims, permissive counterclaims are not barred for failure to assert them in the first action. n6 The text of Rule 18(a) makes it clear that the defendant may bring any permissive counterclaims that the pleader has against the opposing party, subject to the rules governing joinder of claims. n7 The permissive counterclaim rule is based on judicial economy. n8

[2] Use of Permissive Counterclaims

Permissive counterclaims generally do not arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim, and if they do not are not within the court's supplemental jurisdiction, and require an independent basis for subject matter jurisdiction in the federal court. n1 A defendant may join additional parties to permissive counterclaims, subject to the Rules governing joinder of parties. n2 Supplemental jurisdiction by statute is extended to claims involving the joinder of additional parties. n3

Claims for defensive setoff for a liquidated or otherwise ascertained amount which are pleaded solely to diminish or reduce a judgment for the opposing party provide an exception to the rule that permissive counterclaims require an independent basis for jurisdiction. n4 Claims for setoff arise from a separate transaction than the subject matter of the opposing party's claim. n5 The traditional distinction between claims in recoupment and setoff is reflected in the division between compulsory and permissive counterclaims. n6 Claims for setoff are permissive counterclaims. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 13.30, 31 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1)(A).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Baker v. Gold Seal Liquors, Inc., 417 U.S. 467, 469 n.1, 94 S. Ct. 2504, 41 L. Ed. 2d 243 (1974) ; see [2], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. Schwinn Bicycle Co. v. TI Reynolds 531 Ltd., 182 B.R. 526, 531 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a); Carbon Fuel Co. v. USX Corp., 867 F. Supp. 414, 418 (S.D. W. Va. 1994) .

(n9)Footnote 8. O'Bryant v. United States, 839 F. Supp. 1321, 1329 (C.D. Ill. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Consolidated Freightways Corp. v. Coast Freightways, Inc., 628 F. Supp. 894, 897 (C.D. Cal. 1986) .

(n11)Footnote 2. Carbon Fuel Co. v. USX Corp., 867 F. Supp. 414, 418 (S.D. W. Va. 1994) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h), 18(a).

(n12)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n13)Footnote 4. United States ex rel D'Agostino Excavators, Inc. v. Heyward-Robinson Co, 430 F.2d 1077, 1081 n.1 (2d Cir. 1970) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Concept Clubs, Inc. v. Jean Bob Inc., 154 B.R. 581, 587 (D. Utah 1993) .

(n15)Footnote 6. FDIC v. F.S.S.S., 829 F. Supp. 317, 322 (D. Alaska 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 7. Steinberg v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 108 F.R.D. 355, 359 (S.D. Ga. 1985) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VI. COUNTERCLAIMS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.63

§ 11.63 Counterclaims by or Against United Statesn*

[1] Counterclaim Rule Does Not Abolish Sovereign Immunity

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not expand the right to assert a counterclaim or to claim a credit against the United States or a United States officer or agency. n1 This means that a defendant may assert a counterclaim in actions that the government files only when the government has waived its immunity from suit on that claim. n2 A waiver of sovereign immunity cannot be implied and Congress must express the waiver unequivocally. In the case of a counterclaim, the defendants bear the burden to show the express waiver. n3 When the United States does explicitly waive its immunity, however, the waiver applies to counterclaims asserted by a defending party. n4 There are a number of statutes dealing with the right to counterclaims or credits against the United States.

In addition to the substantive limitations on counterclaims imposed by the doctrine of sovereign immunity, a pleading asserting a counterclaim against the United States also raises the issue of whether the United States is an opposing party for purposes of the compulsory counterclaim rule. Even if the counterclaim is, after statutory construction, deemed to be a waiver or partial waiver of sovereign immunity, a court may find that the pleader brought the counterclaim against the United States in a different capacity than that in which it brought suit, and disallow the claim. n5

[2] United States Waives Sovereign Immunity for Recoupment Claims

The mere act of filing suit by the United States does not waive sovereign immunity to counterclaims brought by a defendant. However, when the United States brings a suit, it does waive its sovereign immunity as to any recoupment claims of the defendant. n1 Recoupment has been strictly construed in the sovereign immunity context to include only those claims that arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the government's claim, seek relief of the same kind or nature and seek an amount not in excess of the opposing claim. n2 However, courts have become more liberal in permitting a defendant to assert by way of recoupment any claim arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as the original claim in order to reduce or defeat the government's recovery. n3 While compulsory counterclaims meet this test, permissive counterclaims do not, and require an independent basis of waiver of sovereign immunity. n4

[3] Express Statutory Waiver of Sovereign Immunity by United States

Under the Federal Tort Claims Act, n1 the United States waives its immunity with respect to tort claims brought under the Act against the government. n2 The statutory waiver also applies to counterclaims asserted by a defending party in a suit by the government. n3 The claims must comply with the procedural and substantive provisions of the Act to take advantage of the waiver. n4 Under the Tucker Act, the United States waives its immunity as to certain claims against the government for money damages not arising out of tort. n5 The statutory waiver applies to counterclaims asserted by a defending party in a suit by the government. n6 In another example, the Bankruptcy Code waives sovereign immunity in bankruptcy cases as to compulsory counterclaims to governmental claims and permissive counterclaims to governmental claims, with a maximum setoff limitation. n7

[4] United States May Assert Counterclaims

The provision of Rule 13 provision regarding sovereign immunity and counterclaims against the United States is not applicable to counterclaims brought by the United States. n1 The United States as a party, however, it is subject to the same pleading requirements for compulsory counterclaims as any other defendant, and therefore must plead any counterclaim that is compulsory under Rule 13(a), and may plead any permissive counterclaim under Rule 13(b). n2

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 13.50 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(d).

(n3)Footnote 2. United States v. Neary (In re Armstrong), 206 F.3d 465, 473 (5th Cir. 2000) .

(n4)Footnote 3. United States v. Royal Geropsychiatric Services, Inc., 8 F.Supp.2d 690, 693-694 (N.D. Ohio 1998.).

(n5)Footnote 4. United States v. 255. 21 Acres in Anne Arundel County, Md., 722 F. Supp. 235, 236-238 (D. Md. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Sunrise Sec. Litig., 818 F. Supp. 830, 835-836 (E.D. Pa. 1993) (limited waiver of sovereign immunity for recoupment claims did not apply).

(n7)Footnote 1. FDIC v. FSSS, 829 F. Supp. 317, 321-322 (D. Alaska 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 2. FDIC v. Hulsey, 22 F.3d 1472, 1487 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n9)Footnote 3. United States v. Iron Mountain Mines, Inc., 812 F. Supp. 1528, 1551 (E.D. Cal. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 4. FDIC v. Hulsey, 22 F.3d 1472, 1487 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b).

(n12)Footnote 2. United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 340 U.S. 543, 556-557, 71 S. Ct. 399, 95 L. Ed. 2d 523 (1951) .

(n13)Footnote 3. United States v. 255. 21 Acres in Anne Arundel County, Md., 722 F. Supp. 235, 238 (D. Md. 1989) .

(n14)Footnote 4. United States v. Montrose Chem. Corp. of Cal., 788 F. Supp. 1485, 1490-1491 (C.D. Cal. 1992) .

(n15)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1491 et seq.

(n16)Footnote 6. United States v. City of Kansas City, 761 F.2d 605, 607 (10th Cir. 1985) .

(n17)Footnote 7. 11 U.S.C. § 101 et seq; see In re Price, 42 F.3d 1068, 1072 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(d).

(n19)Footnote 2. United States v. Cawley, 821 F. Supp. 1219, 1223 (E.D. Mich. 1993) , aff'd, 16 F.3d 1221 (6th Cir. 1994) (action by United States to collect on defaulted student loan was not compulsory in student's action for alleged torts and constitutional violations arising out of student's research at university, and thus was not precluded in subsequent action).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VI. COUNTERCLAIMS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.64

§ 11.64 Procedural Considerations for Counterclaimsn*

[1] Jurisdiction

[a] Compulsory Counterclaims

A compulsory counterclaim is included within the supplemental jurisdiction of the court, n1 and therefore the court does not require an independent basis of subject-matter jurisdiction to hear the claim. n2 Under the supplemental jurisdiction statute, a district court may exercise supplemental jurisdiction over claims that form part of the same case or controversy as the original claim over which the court has original jurisdiction. n3 In construing the statutory language, courts have held that any factual connection between the claims can be enough to form a single case or controversy for supplemental jurisdiction purposes. n4 The statute also authorizes courts to decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction under certain circumstances. n5

[b] Permissive Counterclaims

Permissive counterclaims, unlike compulsory counterclaims, do not usually fall within the court's supplemental jurisdiction, and require an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction to be heard by the federal court, n6 unless they arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim. n7 Under the expansive Gibbs test codified in the supplemental jurisdiction statute, a federal court may have supplemental jurisdiction over a permissive counterclaim if it is so related to the main claim that it forms part of the same constitutional case or controversy. n8

[c] Jurisdiction Over Counterclaims May Be Based on Diversity of Citizenship

Under the supplemental jurisdiction statute, a district court has supplemental jurisdiction over claims that form part of the same case or controversy as the original claim over which the court has original jurisdiction. n9 Supplemental jurisdiction is not limited to federal question cases, and may be invoked when the court's original basis of jurisdiction is diversity of citizenship. n10 The statute provides that the court will not have supplemental jurisdiction over claims by plaintiffs against certain third or joined parties if joinder would be inconsistent with the jurisdictional requirements of Section 1332. However, the text of the statute does not prohibit supplemental jurisdiction for claims or defendants asserting counterclaims. n11 Unless it falls within the supplemental jurisdiction of the court, a counterclaim in an action based on diversity must satisfy the jurisdictional amount. n12 However, if the counterclaim forms part of same case or controversy as the main claim, one circuit has held that under the supplemental jurisdiction statute the court in its discretion may exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a counterclaim not meeting the jurisdictional amount. n13

[d] Personal Jurisdiction

A court has personal jurisdiction over the opposing party of a counterclaim who has submitted to the jurisdiction of the court by bringing suit as the plaintiff. n14 Another personal jurisdiction consideration is whether a defendant waives jurisdictional defenses by asserting a counterclaim. Many courts now hold that a defendant does not waive jurisdictional defenses by asserting a compulsory counterclaim. n15 Some courts also have found that jurisdictional defenses are not waived by filing permissive counterclaims. n16

[e] Venue

By filing suit against a defendant, the plaintiff waives the right to object to the venue as to compulsory or permissive counterclaims. n17 Furthermore, the waiver extends to parties joined to a compulsory counterclaim under supplemental jurisdiction, but does not extend to permissive counterclaims. n18 A related issue is whether a defendant waives venue defenses by asserting a counterclaim. It is currently held that a defendant does not waive venue defenses by asserting a compulsory counterclaim. n19

[2] Counterclaim Constitutes Affirmative Claim for Relief By Defendant

A counterclaim is an affirmative claim for relief, asserting a right to payment or other right by a defendant against the claims of the plaintiff or other opposing party. n1 Counterclaims are affirmative claims that either arise from the same transaction or occurrence as, or exist independently of, the subject matter of the original pleader's underlying claim. n2 The counterclaim is broader than the common law devices of both recoupment and setoff, because it permits independent claims for relief. n3 Counterclaims are distinguishable from affirmative defenses, which challenge the plaintiff's legal right to bring an action but, unlike counterclaims, do not allow for independent recovery. n4 Furthermore, a counterclaim is offensive in nature; an affirmative defense is defensive. Counterclaims are also distinguishable from crossclaims, which are claims brought by a party against a co-party. n5 A counterclaim is not a separate pleading, but must be made in a responsive pleading such as an answer. n6

Only defending parties may assert counterclaims. Defending parties are parties against whom a claim has been filed. A party is a defending party in one (or more) of the following four circumstances: n7

1. Defending against a claim in the complaint action; this party is known simply as the defendant. n8

2. Defending against a counterclaim. n9

3. Defending against a crossclaim. n10

4. Defending against a third-party complaint. n11

[3] Counterclaim Is Asserted Only Against Opposition Party

A defendant must file any compulsory counterclaims and may file any permissive counterclaims that the party has against an "opposing party." n1 Although Rule 13 itself does not define the term, opposing parties are parties that formally aligned against each other with respect to the pleaded claim. n2 The term also includes any party who has previously asserted a claim against a counterclaimant. For example, when a plaintiff asserts a claim, the plaintiff becomes an opposing party to the party against whom the claim is brought--the defendant. The defendant is then eligible to bring a counterclaim against the plaintiff. On the other hand, co-parties are considered to be any parties that are not opposing parties, and are usually parties on the same side of the primary litigation, such as co-defendants. The term "opposing party" also includes an original defendant in the main litigation when that defendant files a counterclaim in its answer against the original plaintiff, who becomes eligible to assert a counterclaim in its reply. n3

A defending party must assert a compulsory counterclaim only against an existing party. The defendant may not confer compulsory status on a claim by using it as a basis for impleading third-party defendants not currently parties to the action. n4 Even though it was forbidden in pre-Rule practice, courts have allowed intervenors under Rule 24 to bring counterclaims against an existing party to the action. n5 Defendants in an interpleader action under Rule 22 have also been permitted to file compulsory counterclaims to assert their right to the contested fund. Thus, once the stakeholder joins the claimants in interpleader action, a claimant may file a counterclaim against the stakeholder as an opposing party. n6

"Opposing parties" are not limited to plaintiffs and defendants in the main action, but include third-party plaintiffs and the third-party defendants they have joined. n7 For example, a third-party defendant who is impleaded by an existing defendant/third-party plaintiff must file any compulsory counterclaims, and may file any permissive counterclaim it has against that defendant. n8 A third-party defendant may not assert a counterclaim against an original plaintiff before the original plaintiff files a claim against it; however, it may bring any claims authorized by Rule 14 against the original plaintiff. n9 The original plaintiff in the action must then file any compulsory counterclaims it has against that third-party defendant. n10 Once the original plaintiff in the action files any claims it has against the third-party defendant, the third-party defendant must then assert any compulsory counterclaim it has against the original plaintiff, and may file any permissive concentration it has against the original plaintiff. n11 For further discussion, see Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

[4] Designation as Counterclaim

A defendant should clearly plead and designate a counterclaim as such. n1 because otherwise the opposing party does not necessarily have to answer to the counterclaim in a pleading. n2 However, this rule is not rigidly enforced, and a court will treat an improperly labeled counterclaim as if it had been designated appropriately, and will not penalize the pleader for improper labeling. n3 Thus, if a party mistakenly designates a defense as a counterclaim, or a counterclaim as a defense, if justice requires the court must treat the pleading as though it were correctly designated, and may impose terms for doing so. n4 However, if a responsive pleading fails to give the opposing party fair notice, a court is less likely to redesignate an improperly labeled pleading. n5

[5] Statutes of Limitation

Counterclaims are generally subject to the operation of applicable statutes of limitations. n1 If the main action is timely, a claim for recoupment that arises out of the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim and does not seek affirmative relief nor relief different from that sought in the main claim, relates back to the filing of the plaintiff's claim and is not time barred. n2 Even if compulsory, counterclaims for affirmative relief generally will be time barred. n3 However, an amendment to add a compulsory counterclaim arising out of the same transaction alleged in a timely and previously filed answer relates back to the filing of the answer and is not time barred. n4 Statutes of limitations are considered substantive law and accordingly, in diversity actions, or when the court has supplemental jurisdiction over a state-law claim, the state statute of limitations and related principles of tolling and relation back apply to the actions. n5

[6] Separate Judgment

A court may enter a separate, final judgment on any claim or counterclaim after making an express determination that there is no just reason for delay. n1 The power of the court is discretionary and should be exercised in light of judicial administrative interests as well as the equities involved, giving weight to the federal policy against piecemeal appeals. n2 The court may enter a separate judgment on a compulsory counterclaim if the claim is legally distinct and involves at least some separate facts. n3 Provided that a court has jurisdiction, it may hear and render a separate judgment on a counterclaim even if the opposing party's claim has been dismissed. n4

[7] Other Procedural Issues

The following issues on occasion will appear in a case involving a counterclaim:

1. Service requirements. Counterclaims are generally asserted in the answer, which must be served on a party or the party's attorney in accordance with the Rules governing service. n1 An objection to insufficient service of process is not waived by filing it with a compulsory counterclaim in the answer. n2

2. Demand for jury trial. A party must file a demand for a jury trial, and a general demand by plaintiff for trial of all issues does not necessarily encompass counterclaims in the action. n3 A general demand may encompass compulsory counterclaims. n4

3. Separate trials. A court may sever counterclaims for separate trial in furtherance of judicial convenience, to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to expedition and economy. n5 The issue to be tried must be so distinct and separate from others that trial of it alone may be had without injustice. n6

4. Appeal. A party may seek an immediate appeal from a separate judgment on a counterclaim that was certified under the Rules; other separate appeals from orders regarding counterclaims are generally interlocutory. n7 An appellate court determines de novo whether the district court erred in finding an untimely or barred compulsory counterclaim. n8

5. Treatment as Other Claims for Relief. Except as specified in the federal rules which make unique provision for a counterclaim, n9 a counterclaim is treated as any other claim for relief in a pleading, such as in a complaint. For example, a counterclaim may be subject to a Rule 12(b)(6) in the same manner as a claim. n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 13.90 et seq., 13.110 et seq (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Murphy v. Fla. Keys Elec. Coop. Ass'n, 329 F.3d 1311, 1319 (th Cir. 2003).

(n3)Footnote 2. Centennial Sch. Dist. v. Independence Blue Cross, 885 F. Supp. 683, 685 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n5)Footnote 4. Channell v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., 89 F.3d 379, 385-386 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Channell v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., 89 F.3d 379, 385-386 (7th Cir. 1996) (court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over counterclaims if under 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c) counterclaims would substantially predominate over plaintiff class's claims or if there were other compelling reasons for declining jurisdiction).

(n7)Footnote 6. Iglesias v. Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, 156 F.3d 237, 241-242 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Shamblin v. City of Colchester, 793 F. Supp. 831, 833 (C.D. Ill. 1992) (in action for compensation under Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 201, defendant city's state law claim for breach of fiduciary duty was permissive counterclaim, was not entitled to supplemental jurisdiction, and was be dismissed).

(n9)Footnote 8. Channell v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., 89 F.3d 379, 385-386 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n11)Footnote 10. Shanaghan v. Cahill, 58 F.3d 106, 109-111 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 11. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n13)Footnote 12. Kuhn v. Account Control Technology, Inc., 865 F.Supp. 1443, 1446 (D. Nev. 1994) (permissive counterclaim must meet jurisdictional amount).

(n14)Footnote 13. Stromberg Metal Works, Inc. v. Press Mechanical, Inc., 77 F.3d 928, 930-931 (7th Cir. 1995) (28 U.S.C. § 1367(a) allows suit by pendent plaintiff who satisfies diversity requirement but not jurisdictional amount).

(n15)Footnote 14. See Adam v. Saenger, 303 U.S. 59, 67-68, 58 S. Ct. 454, 82 L. Ed. 649 (1938) (by filing a lawsuit plaintiff consents to jurisdictional power of state and cannot contest personal jurisdiction against counterclaim filed by defendant).

(n16)Footnote 15. Bayou Steel Corp. v. M/V Amstelvoorn, 809 F.2d 1147, 1149 (5th Cir. 1987) (owners of vessel in admiralty action did not waive personal jurisdiction defense by filing action impleading third-party; filing of counterclaim does not operate as waiver of objection).

(n17)Footnote 16. Gates Learjet Corp. v. Jensen, 743 F.2d 1325, 1330 n.1 (9th Cir. 1984) (in action for unauthorized use of trademark and interference with contract, assertion of permissive counterclaim for improper termination of distributorship agreement and defamation did not waive personal jurisdiction defense).

(n18)Footnote 17. General Elec. Co. v. Marvel Rare Metals Co., 287 U.S. 430, 435, 53 S. Ct. 202, 77 L. Ed. 408 (1932) (setting up of counterclaim against one already in court of his own choosing is very different in respect to venue from bringing him into that court).

(n19)Footnote 18. Hansen v. Shearson/American Express, Inc., 116 F.R.D. 246, 251 (E.D. Pa. 1987) (citing Moore's Federal Practice for proposition that although ability of party to compulsory counterclaim who was joined under ancillary jurisdiction to object to venue is limited, party to permissive counterclaim may make timely objection on grounds of venue).

(n20)Footnote 19. Queen Noor, Inc. v. McGinn, 578 F. Supp. 218, 220 (S.D. Tex. 1984) (defendant did not waive objection to venue by including counterclaim in answer).

(n21)Footnote 1. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. City Sav., F.S.B., 28 F.3d 376, 396 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n22)Footnote 2. FDIC v. FSSS, 829 F. Supp. 317, 321-322 (D. Alaska 1993) .

(n23)Footnote 3. Concept Clubs, Inc. v. Styler, 154 B.R. 581, 586 n.4 (D. Utah 1993) .

(n24)Footnote 4. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. City Sav., F.S.B., 28 F.3d 376, 395 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n25)Footnote 5. See Ch. 14, Multiple Party Practice.

(n26)Footnote 6. Bernstein v. IDT Corp., 582 F. Supp. 1079, 1089 (D. Del. 1984) (counterclaims are not pleadings but must be served in responsive pleading).

(n27)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13; Earle M. Jorgenson Co. v. T.I. United States, Ltd., 133 F.R.D. 472, 474

(E.D. Pa. 1991) .

(n28)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2).

(n29)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n30)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(4).

(n31)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(6).

(n32)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1); American Triticale, Inc. v. Nytco Servs., Inc., 664 F.2d 1136, 1148 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n33)Footnote 2. Rainbow Management Group, Ltd. v. Atlantis Submarines Haw., L.P., 158 F.R.D. 656, 659-660 (D. Haw. 1994) ; see Transamerica Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Aviation Office of Am., Inc., 292 F.3d 384, 389-393 (3d Cir. 2002) ("opposing party" should be construed liberally to promote judicial economy).

(n34)Footnote 3. Frank Briscoe Co. v. Clark County, 857 F.2d 606, 610 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n35)Footnote 4. Birmingham Fire Ins. Co. v. Winegardner and Hammons, Inc., 714 F.2d 548, 552 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n36)Footnote 5. Tenneco, Inc. v. Saxony Bar & Tube, Inc., 776 F.2d 1375, 1379 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n37)Footnote 6. New York Life Insurance Company v. Deshotel, 142 F.3d 873, 882 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n38)Footnote 7. Finkle v. Gulf & Western Mfg. Co., 744 F.2d 1015, 1018 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n39)Footnote 8. Kane v. Magna Mixer Co., 71 F.3d 555, 562 (6th Cir. 1995) .

(n40)Footnote 9. Gilbane Bldg. Co. v. Nemours Found., 606 F. Supp. 995, 998 (D. Del. 1985) .

(n41)Footnote 10. Gilbane Bldg. Co. v. Nemours Found., 606 F. Supp. 995, 998 (D. Del. 1985) .

(n42)Footnote 11. Pitcavage v. Mastercraft Boat Co., 632 F. Supp. 842, 849-850 (M.D. Pa. 1985) .

(n43)Footnote 1. Shelter Mut. Ins. Co. v. Public Water Supply Dist. No. 7, 747 F.2d 1195, 1197-1198 (8th Cir. 1984) (pleading must give opposing party fair notice of claim asserted, and if counterclaim is to be asserted it must be designated and pleaded as such).

(n44)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n45)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c); Reiter v. Cooper, 507 U.S. 258, 263, 113 S. Ct. 1213, 122 L. Ed. 2d 604, 614 (1993) .

(n46)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(2); see Dubied Mach. Co. v. Vermont Knitting Co., 739 F. Supp. 867, 871 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n47)Footnote 5. Shelter Mutual Ins. Co. v. Public Water Supply Dist. No. 7, 747 F.2d 1195, 1198 (8th Cir. 1984) (counterclaims were dismissed for failure to plead clearly so that court could not ascertain whether compulsory or permissive; pleading must give opposing party fair notice of claim asserted).

(n48)Footnote 1. Hurst v. United States Dep't of Educ., 901 F.2d 836, 837 (10th Cir. 1990) (government's compulsory counterclaim for collection of student loan was barred by pertinent six-year statutory limitations period for federally funded student loans).

(n49)Footnote 2. Wells v. Rockefeller, 728 F.2d 209, 213-214 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n50)Footnote 3. Wells v. Rockefeller, 728 F.2d 209, 214 (3rd Cir. 1984) .

(n51)Footnote 4. Banco Para El Comercio Exterior de Cuba v. First Nat'l City Bank, 744 F.2d 237, 243 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n52)Footnote 5. Fluor Eng'rs and Constructors, Inc. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 753 F.2d 444, 448 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n53)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n54)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P.13 (i), 54(b); see Vann v. Glen Ellyn Sav. and Loan Ass'n, 151 F.R.D. 692, 695-697 (M.D. Fla. 1993) .

(n55)Footnote 3. Olympia Hotels Corp. v. Johnson Wax Dev. Corp., 908 F.2d 1363, 1367-1368 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n56)Footnote 4. Scott v. Long Island Sav. Bank, 937 F.2d 738, 743 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n57)Footnote 1. Fluor Eng'rs and Constructors, Inc. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 753 F.2d 444, 449 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n58)Footnote 2. Campbell v. Bartlett, 975 F.2d 1569, 1574 n.8 (10th Cir. 1992) (in personal injury action based on diversity jurisdiction, compulsory counterclaim for negligence did not waive Rule 12(b) objections for insufficient service of process).

(n59)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38; see Sound Video Unltd., Inc. v. Video Shack Inc., 700 F. Supp. 127, 145-146 (S.D. N.Y. 1988) .

(n60)Footnote 4. Park Club, Inc. v. Resolution Trust Corp., 967 F.2d 1053, 1057-1058 (5th Cir. 1992) (test for determining whether request for jury on counterclaim entitles party to jury on complaint is whether counterclaim is compulsory).

(n61)Footnote 5. Leon Tempelsman and Son v. TECC Corp., 107 F.R.D. 384, 385 (N.D. Tex. 1985) .

(n62)Footnote 6. Davis & Cox v. Summa Corp., 751 F.2d 1507, 1517 (9th Cir. 1985) (district court did not abuse discretion in ordering separate trials of counterclaims for malpractice from collection action for attorney's fees under Rule 42(b), because most of the issues were different, severance served judicial efficiency, and trial would have been unnecessarily delayed without severance).

(n63)Footnote 7. Snellman v. Ricoh Co. Ltd., 836 F.2d 528, 532 (Fed. Cir. 1987) .

(n64)Footnote 8. Avemco Ins. Co. v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 11 F.3d 998, 999-1000 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n65)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13.

(n66)Footnote 10. See PFS Distrib. Co. v. Raduechel, 574 F.3d 580, 598-599 (8th Cir. 2009) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VI. COUNTERCLAIMS

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 11.65 through 11.69

[Reserved]

§§ 11.65[Reserved]

98 of 108 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VII. OFFER OF JUDGMENT

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.70

§ 11.70 Purpose of Offer of Judgmentn*

[1] Effect of Offer of Judgment

Until 14 days before the date set for trial, a party defending against a claim for relief may serve on an opposing party claimant an offer to allow judgment against the defending party on specified in the offer, including costs then accrued. If, the opposing party claimant serves written notice accepting the offer within 14 days after being served, the clerk will enter judgment on that offer. n1

On the other hand, if the opposing party claimant does not accept the offer, and later obtains a judgment that is not more favorable than the offer, the opposing party claimant must pay all costs incurred after the offer was made. n2 Thus, the purpose of Rule 68 is to provide an incentive for the opposing party claimant to settle and accept reasonable offers. n3 Rule 68 does so by creating an exception to the general rule in most types of litigation that allows a prevailing party to recover its costs n4 by requiring a prevailing plaintiff who recovers less than a rejected Rule 68 offer to pay post-offer costs. n5 In effect, when a defending party has made a valid Rule 68 offer, the "prevailing" plaintiff must obtain a judgment more favorable than the offer in order to remain entitled to a discretionary award of post-offer costs. n6

[2] Unaccepted Offer

The offeree of a Rule 68 offer, the opposing party claimant, has 14 days to accept the offer after being served with the offer by the defending party. n1 If the offeree does not accept the offer during that time, the unaccepted offer is considered withdrawn; however that withdrawal does not prevent the offeror from making another, later offer. n2

Evidence of an unaccepted offer is not admissible except in a proceeding to determine costs. n3 However, an unaccepted offer may be considered by the court to determine procedural matters, such as to determine whether there is a justiciable case or controversy. On the other hand, an offer of judgment cannot be used to support or challenge the merits of a claim and to influence the trier of fact. n4 Furthermore, the unaccepted Rule offer may not be used to prove the amount of the offer, except when the amount of the offer is to be compared with the amount of the judgment that the offeree finally obtained to determine whether the judgment is not more favorable than the unaccepted offer. n5

[3] Purpose of Rule is to Promote Settlements

The primary purpose of the offer of judgment rule is to promote settlements and avoid protracted litigation, in that if an offer is accepted it terminates the case. n1 Although both parties always have an incentive to settle in advance of trial due to the adverse consequences of potential defeat, the offer of judgment provides an additional inducement when, at a time before trial, there is a strong likelihood that the plaintiff will obtain a judgment, but the amount of recovery is uncertain. n2 The making of an offer of judgment shifts to the claimant some of the risk of proceeding with a lawsuit, given the possibility of having to pay post-offer costs. n3 The offer of judgment rule gives incentive to both parties to a suit to evaluate the risks and costs of litigation, and to balance them against the likelihood of success on trial on the merits. n4 The effect of an offer of judgment on the recovery of post-offer costs (see [1], above) gives defendants an incentive to make serious rather than tactically deceptive offers. An offer must be realistic for the offeror to get the benefit of Rule 68 cost-shifting. n5 Plaintiffs also have an incentive to respond seriously rather than with a hard-line approach. A serious Rule 68 offer may threaten to raise the expense of holding out imprudently by shifting costs to a prevailing party who recovers less than the offer. n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 68.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)]

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d); see Bogan v. City of Boston, 489 F.3d 417, 430-431 (1st Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Lohman v. Duryea Borough, 574 F.3d 163, 168 (3d Cir. 2009) ; see [3], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. Grosvenor v. Brienen, 801 F.2d 944, 945 (7th Cir. 1986) ; (Rule 68 modifies Rule 54(d)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Jason D. W. V. Houston Independent School District, 158 F.3d 205, 207-208 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(b).

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(b); see Berkla v. Corel Corp., 302 F.3d 909, 922 (9th Cir. 2002) (unaccepted offer is only admissible in a cost proceeding if it is a formal Rule 68 offer of judgment).

(n11)Footnote 4. O'Brien v. Ed Donnelly Enters., 575 F.3d 567, 574-575 (6th Cir. 2009) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(b).

(n12)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d).

(n13)Footnote 1. Pastor v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 487 F.3d 1042, 1043 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Delta Airlines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 352 & n.8, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) (citing Moore's Federal Practice.

(n15)Footnote 3. Mallory v. Eyrich, 922 F.2d 1273, 1278 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n16)Footnote 4. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 5, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) (using cost-benefit analysis to validate lump-sum offer).

(n17)Footnote 5. See Lohman v. Duryea Borough, 574 F.3d 163, 168 (3d Cir. 2009) .

(n18)Footnote 6. See Webb v. James, 147 F.3d 617, 621 (7th Cir. 1998) (Rule 68 offer imposes certain consequences that can be costly for plaintiff who declines offer, and is thus designed to put significant pressure on plaintiff to consider likely value of its claim as compared to defendant's offer).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VII. OFFER OF JUDGMENT

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.71

§ 11.71 Availability of Offer of Judgment Rulen*

[1] Offer Made by Defending Party

By its terms, Rule 68 only applies to a party defending against a claim. n1 Thus, the rule is generally inapplicable to offers made by plaintiffs, n2 except in situations where a plaintiff is defending against a counterclaim or crossclaim and is making a offer of judgment with respect to that claim. n3

A defending party also has the option to make an offer of judgment even after the defending party's liability has been determined, when the extent of the liability, such as damages, remains to be determined by further proceedings. Such an offer must be served within a reasonable time, but at least 14 days before the date set for the hearing to determine the extent of liability. n4

In cases when there are multiple parties making claims for relief, the defending party must specify an allocation of the total offer to each plaintiff. An unallocated offer of judgment to multiple plaintiffs is not effective to trigger the cost-shifting provision of Rule 68, because it does not permit any single plaintiff to assess the offer's value in relation to the merits of that particular plaintiff's case. Additionally, an unallocated offer deprives the court of a precise figure against which to compare each plaintiff's judgment so in the determination of whether Rule 68's cost-shifting provision is triggered. n5

The language of Rule 68 contains no exception for particular kinds of actions. However, it is disputable whether the offer of judgment rule should apply to cases such as class or derivative actions that require judicial approval of a settlement, because the offer of judgment rule presumes that the offeree (and not the court) has authority to accept or reject the terms of a formal offer. n6 Some courts have held that Rule 68, does apply, but in a modified way so that after a class claim has been filed, all of the named plaintiffs cannot be "picked off," at least until a reasonable amount of time is allowed for the court to make a determination of class certification. n7

[2] Applicable Law

Some state litigation systems have offer of judgment rules that are similar to the federal rule specified in Rule 68. In many cases, there is no functional difference between the state and federal rules, so cases involving an Erie doctrine choice between Federal Rule 68 and a state provision are not numerous. However, when state offer of judgment rules or statutes have different consequences from the federal rule courts must choose whether to apply the state or the federal rule. The majority rule in such cases seems to be that state offer of judgment rules will apply when they permit offers by plaintiffs. Thus, the most common situation in which a state offer of judgment rule might apply in federal court is when state law authorizes offers by plaintiffs and provides a consequence, such as enhanced costs or prejudgment interest, if a defendant rejects the offer but fails to do better at trial. Some courts apply the state rule in a state-law case, finding no direct conflict between the federal and state rules. n1 However, one circuit has applied Federal Rule 68 in a state-law case to bar an offer made by a plaintiff-offeror. n2 On the other hand, another circuit has permitted a defendant to recover attorney fees under a state offer of judgment rule permitting defendants to recover attorney fees when plaintiffs unreasonably reject settlement offers. n3

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 68.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 350, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Simon v. Intercontinental Transp. (ICT) B.V., 882 F.2d 1435, 1439 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(c).

(n6)Footnote 5. Thomas v. National Football League Players Ass'n, 273 F.3d 1124, 1130 (D.C. Cir. 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n8)Footnote 7. Weiss v. Regal Collections, 385 F.3d 337, 345-348 (3d Cir. 2004) (relation-back doctrine prevented mooting of class action by Rule 68 offer of judgment to named plaintiff, even though no motion for certification had been filed, when there was no undue delay in moving for certification).

(n9)Footnote 1. S.A. Healy Co. v. Milwaukee Metro. Sewerage Dist., 60 F.3d 305, 309-312 (7th Cir. 1995) (state law providing for double costs plus interest from date of demand when defendant rejects plaintiff's demand and plaintiff wins judgment larger than demand applied).

(n10)Footnote 2. Home Indem. Co. v. Lane Powell Moss and Miller, 43 F.3d 1322, 1331-1332 (9th Cir. 1995) (refusing to award plaintiff-offeror enhanced prejudgment interest under state offer of judgment statute on ground that Federal Rule 68 governed and did not authorize plaintiff offers or provide for enhanced interest).

(n11)Footnote 3. Tanker Management, Inc. v. Brunson, 918 F.2d 1524, 1528-1529 (11th Cir. 1990) (finding no direct conflict with Federal Rule 68.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VII. OFFER OF JUDGMENT

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.72

§ 11.72 Requirements for Offern*

[1] Service and Filing Requirements

Rule 68 specifies that a defending party must serve an offer of judgment on an adverse party. n1 Because service is required, a Rule 68 offer must be in writing, and an verbal offer of judgment is invalid. n2 Service of an offer of judgment is governed by Rule 5. n3 Under Rule 5(d), when a paper must be served, the paper must also be filed with the court, along with a certificate of service, within a reasonable time after service. n4 This Rule 5 filing requirement is not applicable to a Rule 68 offer of judgment; rather, the offer must be filed only when it is accepted. Thus, if within 14 days after being served, the opposing party serves written notice accepting the offer, either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance, along with proof of service. The clerk must then enter judgment. n5

Thus, the court is not to be notified of an offer of judgment unless it has been accepted or after a verdict if the offer had been rejected. Except in a proceeding to determine costs, it is improper for a defendant to file a Rule 68 offer of judgment with the court before plaintiff accepts. n6 Preventing the filing of unaccepted Rule 68 offers avoids possible undue influence. The court's knowledge of what amount of recovery would avoid or trigger liability for post-offer costs under Rule 68, especially in a non-jury trial, could potentially influence its judgment. n7

[2] Time of Offer and Revocability

A defendant may serve an offer of judgment at any time more than 14 days before the date set for trial. n1 Former Rule 68 permitted the defending party to serve an offer of judgment more than 10 days before the trial begins or before a hearing to determine damages. The time is now measured from the date set for trial or hearing because it may be difficult to know in advance when trial will begin or when a hearing will be held. If the date for trial or hearing is reset, the date establishes a new time for serving the offer. The former 10 day periods have been extended to 14 days to reflect the change in the Rule 6(a) method for computing time periods. n2

Most courts have held that, once accepted, Rule 68 offers of judgment may not be revoked, even during the 14 day time period set by the Rule. This is because when a party has filed the offer, notice of acceptance, and proof of service, the clerk must then enter judgment. In other words, a Rule 68 offer of judgment is self executing. n3 However, some courts permit revocation or rescission of an offer and acceptance of judgment for good cause shown, for example, in the event of fraudulent conduct by the offeree, n4 or to correct an obvious mistake with prompt communication to the offeree. n5

[3] Amount of Offer

A defendant must make an offer of judgment which specifies the terms of the judgment to be taken against the defending party, with costs accrued at that time. n1 Lump-sum offers are permitted, because if defendants were not allowed to make lump-sum offers that would represent their total liability if accepted, they would understandably be reluctant to make settlement offers. n2 The Supreme Court has identified several of the issues that can arise concerning the content of a valid offer. A defendant need not itemize the respective amounts being tendered for settlement of the underlying substantive claim and for costs. n3 The critical feature of this portion of Rule 68 is that the offer be one that allows judgment to be taken against the defendant for both the damages caused by the challenged conduct and the costs then accrued. n4 In other words, the drafters' concern was not so much with the particular components of offers, but with the judgments to be allowed against defendants. If an offer recites that costs are included or specifies an amount for costs, and the plaintiff accepts the offer, the judgment will necessarily include costs; if the offer does not state that costs are included and an amount for costs is not specified, the court will be obliged by the terms of the Rule to include in its judgment an additional amount that in its discretion it determines to be sufficient to cover the costs. n5 Thus, a valid Rule 68 offer may not explicitly exclude costs. n6

[4] Application of Contract Principles to Terms of Offer

Although contract principles permitting do not necessarily govern the issue of revocation before acceptance formal Rule 68 offers, n1 general principles of contract law otherwise do apply when interpreting offers of judgment. n2 For example, ambiguities may invalidate an offer or be construed against the offeror. n3 However, a court may also limit the interpretation of a Rule 68 judgment to its terms and decline to give it effect beyond its scope. n4 The consequences of accepting or rejecting an offer of judgment mean that the offeree needs to have a clear understanding of the terms of the offer in order to make an informed decision whether to accept it. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 68.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 68.

(n3)Footnote 2. Clark v. Sims, 28 F.3d 420, 424 (4th Cir. 1994) (settlement proposal discussed by parties' counsel cannot constitute formal Rule 68 offer).

(n4)Footnote 3. Magnuson v. Video Yesteryear, 85 F.3d 1424, 1429 (9th Cir. 1996) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. Webb v. James, 172 F.R.D. 311, 312 n.1 (N.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Hopper v. Euclid Manor Nursing Home, Inc., 867 F.2d 291, 295 (6th Cir. 1989) (if judge or jury is unaware of offer of judgment it ensures that trier of fact will not be influenced by any knowledge of a rejected offer or its consequences).

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n10)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a), Committee Note to 2009 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 3. Ramming v. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of Am., 390 F.3d 366, 370-371 (5th Cir. 2004) ; see [4], below (contract principles applied to offer of judgment).

(n12)Footnote 4. Colonial Penn Ins. Co. v. Coil, 887 F.2d 1236, 1240 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Cesar v. Rubie's Costume Co., 219 F.R.D. 257, 259 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n15)Footnote 2. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 6, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) .

(n16)Footnote 3. See Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 6-7, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) .

(n17)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a),(d).

(n18)Footnote 5. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 7, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) .

(n19)Footnote 6. Utility Automation 2000, Inc. v. Choctawhatchee Elec. Coop., Inc., 298 F.3d 1238, 1241 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n20)Footnote 1. See [2], above.

(n21)Footnote 2. Arbor Hill Concerned Citizens Neighborhood Ass'n v. County of Albany, 369 F.3d 91, 95 (2d Cir. 2004) ; Scosche Indus., Inc. v. Visor Gear Inc., 121 F.3d 675, 678 (Fed. Cir. 1997) .

(n22)Footnote 3. Arkla Energy Resources v. Roye Realty & Dev., Inc., 9 F.3d 855, 867 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n23)Footnote 4. Scosche Indus., Inc. v. Visor Gear Inc., 121 F.3d 675, 677-679 (Fed. Cir. 1997) .

(n24)Footnote 5. Radecki v. Amoco Oil Co., 858 F.2d 397, 403 (8th Cir. 1988) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VII. OFFER OF JUDGMENT

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.73

§ 11.73 Requirements for Acceptancen*

[1] Service and Timing Requirements

The offeree plaintiff or claimant, as the opposing party of the defending party, may accept the offer only by serving written notice of acceptance of the offer within 14 days after service of the offer. Either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance together with proof of service of the offer and acceptance the clerk will then enter judgment. Acceptance of an offer of judgment must be in writing. n1

It appears that the trial court has authority to extend the time for accepting an offer of judgment under Rule 6(b)(1), which authorizes courts to extend the period of time for an act required or allowed by the Rules of Civil Procedure for good cause established by the moving party. n2 The other view is that courts have no authority to extend the time for accepting an offer of judgment because to do so would undercut the purpose underlying Rule 68 of letting a defending party reduce the risk of being responsible for post-offer costs. n3

[2] Application of Contract Principles to Terms of Offer

As is the case with respect to an offer, general contract principles govern the acceptance of an offer of judgment. n1 For example, for a valid offer and acceptance there must be a meeting of the minds. n2 A claimant's acceptance of an offer of judgment may not be partial. n3 The primary reason that courts refuse to treat partial or selective acceptances as valid is that plaintiffs should not be allowed to impose on defendants settlements to which they have not agreed. n4 Thus, the central concern with partial acceptance remains that settlements require assent of both parties, and a partial settlement may not be what the defending party is seeking. n5

[3] Filing and Entry of Judgment on Accepted Offer

After a claimant timely accepts a valid offer either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance plus proof of service of the offer and notice of acceptance, and then the clerk is required to enter judgment. n1 Therefore, Rule 68 judgments are self-executing, and once the parties agree on the terms of a Rule 68 judgment, the court has no discretion to withhold its entry or otherwise to modify the terms of the agreement. The clerk's function in entering judgment on an accepted offer under the Rule is clerical, and it is an abuse of discretion for the district court to do anything but enter judgment once an offer has been accepted. n2 For the parties, acceptance of a Rule 68 offer and entry of judgment has the effect of cutting off the right to appeal from an earlier action by the district court. n3 A plaintiff with a statutory fee entitlement who accepts a valid Rule 68 offer, even one for a small amount, is the "prevailing party" for purposes of a statute under which such parties are entitled to attorney fees. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, § 68.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1), 6(b)(2) (although Rule 6(b)(2) does not apply to certain specified rules, Rule 68 is not mentioned).

(n4)Footnote 3. Staffend v. Lake Central Airlines, 47 F.R.D. 218, 219-220 (N.D. Ohio 1969) .

(n5)Footnote 1. Whitaker v. Associated Credit Servs., Inc., 946 F.2d 1222, 1226 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 2. Stewart v. Professional Computer Centers, Inc., 148 F.3d 937, 939 (8th Cir. 1998) (there is no binding agreement if parties attach materially different meanings to their manifestations and neither party knows or has reason to know the meaning attached by the other).

(n7)Footnote 3. Whitcher v. Town of Matthews, 136 F.R.D. 582, 585 (W.D. N.C. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 4. Freeman v. B&B Associates, 790 F.2d 145, 152 (D.C. Cir. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 5. See Stewart v. Professional Computer Centers, Inc., 148 F.3d 937, 939 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n11)Footnote 2. Mallory v. Eyrich, 922 F.2d 1273, 1279 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Dugas v. Trans Union Corp., 99 F.3d 724, 728-729 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Cleary v. Martino, 982 F. Supp. 639, 641 (E.D. Wis. 1997) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VII. OFFER OF JUDGMENT

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.74

§ 11.74 Effect of Plaintiff's Failure to Accept Valid Offern*

[1] When Defendant Prevails

Rule 68 does not apply when a defendant-offeror prevails at trial. n1 This result is based on a literal reading by the Supreme Court of the language of Rule 68, which refers to the judgment that the offeree finally obtains. n2 The Supreme Court stated that the plain language of Rule 68 confines its effect to cases in which the plaintiff has obtained a judgment, but for an amount less favorable than the defendant's settlement offer. Thus, all cases in which the court enters judgment in favor of the defendant are excluded from applicability the purview of Rule 68. Although this reading of Rule 68 is subject to criticism, it has the virtue of eliminating the temptation for defendants who expect to win to make sham offers for very small amounts solely to obtain the mandatory cost-shifting benefits of Rule 68. 7 Defendants who can expect no benefit from sham or token offers might as well make serious offers or none at all. n3

[2] When Plaintiff Prevails

There are no cost-shifting consequences to a plaintiff's failure to accept an offer of judgment when the plaintiff-offeree wins a judgment "more favorable" than the offer. If the judgment finally obtained by the offeree is not more favorable than the offer, the plaintiff offeree must pay the costs incurred after the making of the offer. n1 Thus, when a plaintiff rejects the offer of judgment, or does not accept it in timely fashion, the case proceeds to trial, and there is a verdict for the plaintiff in an amount not greater than the defendant's offer. n2

[3] Cost Shifting is Mandatory

When a court compares an offer of judgment with the plaintiff's judgment, and finds that the judgment is not more favorable than the offer, Rule 68 requires that the offeree must pay the costs incurred after the making of the offer. n1 It is well settled that this language makes the imposition of Rule 68's cost consequences mandatory. n2 Although the trial judge has considerable leeway in a hard-comparison case to determine whether the judgment is more favorable than the offer, a determination that the judgment is not more favorable than the offer automatically triggers the cost-shifting specified by Rule 68. n3

[4] Determination of Whether Judgment is Not More Favorable Than Offer

[a] In General

In many cases the court's determination of whether the judgment finally obtained by the offeree is not more favorable than the offer n1 is relatively easy if the plaintiff is seeking only monetary damages, and the costs are small. n2 The defendant will have made an offer of judgment for a sum of money, either including plaintiff's costs thus far accrued or explicitly or implicitly allowing an addition for those costs. Except in cases involving substantial pre-offer attorney fee awards, these pre-offer costs are likely to be relatively small and to have no effect on the comparison. In many cases, the monetary value of the judgment entered can be straightforwardly compared with the offer to determine whether the cost-shifting consequences of Rule 68 are Triggered. n3

[b] Consideration of Attorney Fees

However, things are more complicated if pre-offer attorney fees statutorily defined as costs are involved. In such cases, the inclusion of pre-offer fees as part of the judgment finally obtained favors plaintiffs, to the extent that it increases the value of the judgment and makes it less likely that the defending party's offer will be more favorable. Thus, courts have held that pre-offer attorney's fees must be added to the judgment award for the purposes of determining whether the result obtained by a plaintiff is more favorable than the offer of judgment he rejected. n4 The rationale for the rule allowing pre-offer fees to increase the value of the judgment is that to make a proper comparison between the offer of judgment and the judgment obtained like 'judgments' must be evaluated; because the offer includes costs then accrued, to determine whether the judgment obtained is "more favorable," the judgment must be defined on the same basis: verdict plus costs incurred as of the time of the offer of judgment. n5

[c] Consideration of Nonmonetary Relief

Cases involving nonmonetary relief also pose comparison problems because of the difficulties of evaluating different types of declaratory or equitable relief, such as a declaratory judgment vindicating an intellectual property right, but granting no monetary relief. There is rigid objective method for determining whether a purely monetary offer is less favorable than a declaratory judgment, an injunction, or equitable relief combined with a smaller damage award. Thus, courts have dealt with these problems on a case by case basis. Nearly all the cases try to take nonmonetary relief into account, and often courts find nonmonetary relief sufficient to offset a substantial difference between a money offer and a judgment that mixes damages and nonmonetary relief. n6

[5] Costs That Are Shifted

[a] In General

Although this is not explicitly stated by the text of the Rule, one of the cost-shifting consequences of Rule 68 is that the plaintiff-offeree must both bear its own post-offer costs, and pay those of the offeror. n1 It is well settled that a plaintiff who refuses an offer of judgment, and later fails to obtain a more favorable judgment, must pay the defendant's post-offer costs. n2 The post-offer costs recoverable, though, in the usual case are only those listed in 28 U.S.C. § 1920, which enumerates several items that are mostly relatively minor, including fees for clerk and marshal, court reporter, printing, witnesses, copying, docket charges, court-appointed experts, and interpreters. n3

[b] Attorney Fees

The cost-shifting consequences of Rule 68 do not apply to attorney fees that are not costs as defined by statute. Thus, a claimant who obtains a judgment not more favorable than a Rule 68 offer may still recover such post-offer attorney fees. n4 However, in this situation, the court may consider the plaintiff's rejection of an offer of judgment in determining the amount of fees to be awarded, or whether to award fees to the prevailing party at all. n5

If no applicable statute defines attorney fees as part of "costs," Rule 68 has no effect on entitlements to and liabilities for attorney fees. However, if fees included in "costs" in the applicable underlying statute, they are part of "costs" within the scope of the Rule 68 cost-shifting. n6 The Eleventh Circuit has held that a rejecting offeree who did not obtain a more favorable judgment must pay the offeror's post-offer attorney fees if the statute underlying the action defines "costs" as including attorney fees. n7 This fee liability is especially likely if a court finds that the plaintiff's rejection of the offer of judgment was frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation. n8

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 68.06-68.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 351, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d).

(n4)Footnote 3. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 353-356, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) (literal reading of Rule 68 avoids problem of sham offer).

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d).

(n6)Footnote 2. S ee Local 32B-32J, Service Employees International Union, AFL-CIO v. Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, 180 F.R.D. 251, 253 (S.D. N.Y. 1998.

(n7)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68.

(n8)Footnote 2. United States v. Trident Seafoods Corp., 92 F.3d 855, 859 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Hopper v. Euclid Manor Nursing Home, Inc., 867 F.2d 291, 295-296 (6th Cir. 1989) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68.

(n11)Footnote 2. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 7, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) (post-offer costs merely offset part of expense of continuing litigation to trial, and should not be included in calculus.

(n12)Footnote 3. In re Water Valley Finishing, Inc. 139 F.3d 325, 326-327 (2nd Cir. 1998) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Marryshow v. Flynn, 986 F.2d 689, 692 (4th Cir. 1993) (when evaluating "judgment finally obtained," it must include not only the verdict of the jury but also the costs actually awarded by the court for period that preceded the offer).

(n14)Footnote 5. Marryshow v. Flynn, 986 F.2d 689, 692 (4th Cir. 1993) .

(n15)Footnote 6. Chestnut Hill Gulf, Inc. v. Cumberland Farms, Inc., 749 F. Supp. 331, 333 (D. Mass. 1990) , rev'd in part o.g., 940 F.2d 744 (1st Cir. 1991) (judgment of $653,682 plus three-year retention of service station franchise was more favorable than offer of $700,000).

(n16)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d) (offeree must pay costs incurred after making of offer).

(n17)Footnote 2. Crossman v. Marcoccio, 806 F.2d 329, 333 (1st Cir. 1986) (plaintiff who fails to recover more favorable judgment is responsible for defendant's post offer costs as well as his own).

(n18)Footnote 3. Knight v. Snap-On Tools Corp., 3 F.3d 1398, 1404 (10th Cir. 1993) (plaintiff held liable for defendant's post-offer costs as enumerated in 28 U.S.C. § 1920).

(n19)Footnote 4. Dalal v. Alliant Techsystems, Inc., 927 F. Supp. 1374, 1381 (D. Colo. 1996) (Rule 68 does not bar recovery of attorney fees under Fair Labor Standards Act for services rendered after offer of judgment made, even though plaintiff recovers less than amount offered in settlement).

(n20)Footnote 5. Sheppard v. Riverview Nursing Center, Inc., 88 F.3d 1332, 1337 (4th Cir. 1996) .

(n21)Footnote 6. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 12, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1984) .

(n22)Footnote 7. Jordan v. Time, Inc., 111 F.3d 102, 105 (11th Cir. 1997) (Copyright Act defines "costs" as including attorney fees).

(n23)Footnote 8. See EEOC v. Bailey Ford, Inc., 26 F.3d 570, 571 (5th Cir. 1994) (defendant's attorney fees are among properly recoverable costs with determination that action was frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 11 DEFENDANT'S RESPONSE
PART VII. OFFER OF JUDGMENT

1-11 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 11.75

§ 11.75 Appealn*

[1] Postjudgment Relief

Rule 68 is mandatory in nature. Therefore, a trial court will rarely grant relief under Rule 60 following entry of judgment on an accepted Rule 68(a) offer, or following entry of a Rule 68(d) cost order based on entry of a judgment not more favorable then the offer of judgment. However, some courts have noted that when exceptional circumstances exist, such as the nonexistence of an valid offer and acceptance under Rule 68, those circumstances justify relief from a judgment under Rule 60(b), n1 and it is proper for the trial court to grant a motion to vacate a judgment. n2 Thus, postjudgment relief appears available in exceptions circumstances, for example, if a consequential typographical error in an offer affects whether there was a meeting of the minds of the parties regarding the offer and acceptance. n3 Other cases reflect appellate disapproval of trial courts' efforts to use postjudgment relief powers to let parties escape what seem to be the unduly harsh consequences of the Rule's otherwise proper operation. n4

[2] Appellate Review

The standard of appellate review of trial court rulings on Rule 68 matters depends on the type of issue involved. With aspects of the rule that are mandatory, such as entry of judgment on an accepted offer or imposition of the cost-shifting consequences on a rejecting plaintiff, the appropriate standard is de novo review. n1 Similarly, issues relating to the legal construction of Rule 68 offers are reviewed de novo. n2 On the other hand, controverted factual questions are reversed only for clear error. These factual findings could relate to, for example, the circumstances under which the offer was made, whether an acceptance and offer were inconsistent; and whether a trial court's offer-judgment comparisons for purposes of determining whether the judgment was more favorable than the offer. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 13 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 68.09-68.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b) ().

(n3)Footnote 2. Stewart v. Professional Computer Centers, Inc., 148 F.3d 937, 939-940 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Whitaker v. Associated Credit Servs., Inc., 946 F.2d 1222, 1226 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Mallory v. Eyrich, 922 F.2d 1273, 1279-1280 (6th Cir. 1991) (reversing Rule 60(b) grant of relief from entry of judgment on accepted Rule 68 offer when composition of board of elections changed and defendants sought adjudication on merits).

(n6)Footnote 1. Jordan v. Time, Inc., 111 F.3d 102, 105 (11th Cir. 1997) (because district court has no discretion in applying Rule 68, proper interpretation of Rule 68 is legal question that is reviewed de novo).

(n7)Footnote 2. Jason D. W. V. Houston Independent School District, 158 F.3d 205, 207-208 (5th Cir. 1998) ; Erdman v. Cochise County, 926 F.2d 877, 879 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 3. Jordan v. Time, Inc., 111 F.3d 102, 105 (11th Cir. 1997) (disputed fact findings concerning events surrounding Rule 68 offer are reviewed for clear error).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 12 PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE

1-12 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 12.syn

§ 12.syn Synopsis to Chapter 12: PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE

§ 12.01 Table of Times for Plaintiff Required to Respond

§ 12.02 Reply

[1] Use of Reply

[2] Reply Required to Counterclaim

[3] Reply by Order of Court

[a] Discretion of Court to Order Reply

[b] Contents of Reply Ordered by Court

§ 12.03 Motions Available to Plaintiff Making Response

[1] Use of Motions in General

[2] Motion to Strike Insufficient Defense

§ 12.04 Counterclaim in Reply

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 12 PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE

1-12 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 12.01

§ 12.01 Table of Times for Plaintiff Required to Respondn1

Pleading/ The Reply
Reply required because answer contains counterclaim.....	21 days after being served with pleading that states counterclaim. Rule 12(a)(1)(B).
Reply required because amended answer contains counterclaim	14 days after being served with amended answer, or within time remaining to respond to original answer, whichever is later; or as ordered by court. Rule 15(a)(3).
Reply required by United States or United States agency or officer.....	60 days after being served with answer. Rule 12(a)(2), (3).
Reply required by order of court.....	21 days after being served with order, unless court specifies different time. Rule 12(a)(1)(C).
Motions by Plaintiff Related to Reply
Motion for more definite statement.....	Before filing reply. Rule 12(e).
Motion to strike answer.....	Before filing reply, or if reply not allowed, within 21 days after being served with answer. Rule 12(f)(2).
Motion for judgment on pleadings.....	Any time after pleadings are closed, but not so close to trial date that trial would be delayed. Rule 12(c).
Motion for summary judgment	Any time until 30 days after close of all discovery. Rule 56(c)(1)(A).

Opposition to summary judgment motion.....	Later of: within 21 days after motion is served or time responsive pleading is due. Rule 56(c)(1)(B).
Reply to opposition to summary judgment motion.....	Within 14 days after defendant's opposition is served. Rule 56(c)(1)(C).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsComputationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The times specified in this table are subject to the provisions for the enlargement of time for good cause or excusable neglect under Rule 6(b)(1) and to the provision of Rule 6(d) for the addition of 3 days to the period prescribed or allowed in the rules when service is accomplished by any means other than by hand delivery. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(2)(B)-(F). Additionally, the time periods concerning the service of a reply are altered if the party making a reply serves a motion allowed under Rule 12. Generally the party required to reply is given 14 days after any denial of the motion. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(A). However, if the court grants a motion for a more definite statement, the party has 14 days after the more definite statement is served. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(B). For discussion of time periods for pleadings and motions, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 12 PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE

1-12 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 12.02

§ 12.02 Reply

[1] Use of Reply

After the defendant files the answer, the plaintiff may be required by rule or by court order to respond, either by pleading or by making certain motions. A reply is a response in the form of a pleading by a plaintiff to an answer filed by the defendant. n1 A response is not always required to the defendant's answer, but when a response is required or permitted, the plaintiff may file a reply or one of several types of motions, which are discussed below. n2 The reply is a vestige of pre-1938 common-law and code pleading which has expressly been preserved in the current civil rules, for use in certain circumstances, n3 such as when the defendant has made a counterclaim, n4 or when the court orders that the plaintiff reply to the defendant's answer. n5 The fact that a reply is a pleading, and that it is the last pleading permitted, becomes important in determining whether further pleadings may be filed or whether a demand for a jury trial is timely. n6

When no reply is ordered or permitted by the court, pleadings terminate when a party files an answer to a complaint, n7 an answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim, n8 an answer to a crossclaim, n8.1 or an answer to a third-party complaint. n8.2 When the pleadings are terminated, all allegations and defenses in such pleadings are automatically deemed denied or avoided. n8.3

A plaintiff's reply may only respond to the defendant's answer and may not bring up new matters. A plaintiff may not, for example, include a permissive counterclaim in a reply to a defendant's counterclaim; in that situation, the plaintiff must move for leave to amend its complaint. n9

If a party files an unauthorized reply, the court will treat the pleading as a nullity. n10 However, counsel for the plaintiff should not file a reply without caution, because even though it is a nullity as a pleading, the court may consider the substance of an unauthorized reply as an admission against the party making the reply. n11

[2] Reply Required to Counterclaim

A party must generally respond by answer to allegations in any claim for relief against that party, or the failure is deemed an admission of the allegation. n1 Thus, a party must file an answer to a complaint, n2 an answer to a counterclaim designated as a counterclaim, n3 an answer to a crossclaim, n4 or an answer to a third-party complaint. n5

In turn, if ordered by the court, a party must file a reply to any of these answers which contain an affirmative claim for relief. n6 If the party fails to do so, it is an admission of the allegations in the claim. n7 On the other hand, if an answer contains only defensive allegations, no reply is required because the answer does not contain a counterclaim. n7.1 In such circumstances, the defendant is not prejudiced by the plaintiff's failing to reply, because in fact the defendant never presented an actual counterclaim to the plaintiff. n8

In litigation, it is often difficult in making a clear-cut distinction in an answer between claims for relief and affirmative defenses. Consequently, the rules provide that a plaintiff only need reply to an answer containing a counterclaim designated as such, n9 or when ordered by the court. n10 Furthermore, if a party mistakenly designates a defense as a counterclaim, or a counterclaim as a defense, if justice requires the court must treat the pleading as though it were correctly designated, and require that the parties plead accordingly. n11 For example, when a plaintiff files a complaint against a public official, and the defendant responds with a qualified immunity defense for the official, the trial court may exercise its discretion to order a reply to the defendant's answer. n12

[3] Reply by Order of Court

[a] Discretion of Court to Order Reply

When an answer does not contain a counterclaim designated as such or some other claim for relief, n1 no further pleading is allowed except by court order that specifies that the opposition must file a reply. n2 The court has discretion to order a reply, and will usually require a reply, when an answer contains a counterclaim, a crossclaim or a third-party claim. n3 However, if the answer contains only defensive allegations, the court will order a reply only on a showing of extraordinary circumstances or necessity, n4 for example, to plead and respond to complex affirmative defenses such as qualified immunity. n5 A plaintiff may not use a reply as a substitute for discovery or a pretrial hearing. n6 However, it is important to remember that the court has discretion to order a reply even when a counterclaim obviously is not involved, especially if the reply would promote a just, speedy, and inexpensive determination, or serve important public and private interests. n7

In its order, a court may specify in detail the nature of the reply that is required. n7.1 For example, the court may require that a plaintiff put forward specific, nonconclusory factual allegations, such as allegations that establish improper motive causing cognizable injury in a case where a qualified immunity defense is in issue. n8

[b] Contents of Reply Ordered by Court

A reply ordered by the court is a responsive pleading, rather than one that sets forth a claim. Consequently, Rule 8(a)(2)'s "short and plain" standard does not place a limit on a Rule 7 reply. n9 The only civil rule which controls the content of a reply is Rule 8(d)(1), which requires that each allegation of a pleading be simple, concise, and direct. n10 However, these rules do not impose a strict limit on the length of the reply, and in appropriate circumstances, the court may require that the plaintiff reply to a defense in considerable detail. n11

The most common situation in which a court will order a reply for a purely defensive answer is when the answer raises the defense of qualified immunity for a public official. In such cases, the plaintiff must prove wrongful motive. Consequently the court may exercise its discretion to order a reply under Rule 7(a)(7) so that officials are not subject to unnecessary and burdensome discovery or trial proceedings. The order will require that the reply set out specific, nonconclusory factual allegations that establish improper motive causing injury in order to survive a pre-discovery motion for dismissal or summary judgment. n12 By definition, the reply must be tailored to the assertion of qualified immunity and must fairly respond to each allegation of qualified immunity. This means that a defendant has an incentive to plead an immunity defense with some particularity, because it has the practical effect of requiring particularity in the reply. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7); see Garner v. Morales, 237 F.R.D. 399, 400 (S.D. Tex. 2006) (whenever any type of answer has been filed by any defending party, court has option, but is not required, to order that party which has been served with answer file a reply in response to answer).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 12.03.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a); see also Schultea v. Wood, 47 F.3d 1427, 1433-1434 (5th Cir. 1995) (court has discretion to order detailed reply when public official pleads affirmative defense of qualified immunity in civil rights case).

(n4)Footnote 4. See [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See [3], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. Curry v. Pyramid Life Ins. Co., 271 F.2d 1, 6 (8th Cir. 1959) , cert. denied, 361 U.S. 933 (1960) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n9)Footnote 8.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(4).

(n10)Footnote 8.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(6).

(n11)Footnote 8.3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6); see [2], below.

(n12)Footnote 9. Turner & Boisseau v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 175 F.R.D. 686, 687 (D. Kan. 1997) ; see § 12.04.

(n13)Footnote 10. United States Plywood Corp. v. Hudson Lumber Co., 17 F.R.D. 258, 262-263 (S.D. N.Y. 1955) .

(n14)Footnote 11. Berger v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co., 291 F.2d 666, 668 n.1 (10th Cir. 1961) .

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n16)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2).

(n17)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n18)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(4).

(n19)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(6).

(n20)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7).

(n21)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6).

(n22)Footnote 7.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(N23)Footnote 8. Flynn v. Vevelstad, 230 F.2d 695, 703 (9th Cir. 1956) (failure to reply to pleading denominated as counterclaim was not admission of facts alleged in pleading, when those facts were in reality only affirmative denials of allegations of complaint).

(n24)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(3).

(n25)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7).

(n26)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c)(2); see [3], below.

(n27)Footnote 12. Crawford-El v. Britton, 523 U.S. 574, 118 S. Ct. 1584, 1596-1597, 140 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1998) .

(n28)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(2),(3),(4),(6).

(n29)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7); Goad v. Mitchell, 297 F.3d 497, 503-504 (6th Cir. 2002) .

(n30)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a)(7), Committee Note to 1997 Amendments.

(n31)Footnote 4. *Daniel v. Callet, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 53065, at * 2 (E.D. Mo. 2007)* (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n32)Footnote 5. Goad v. Mitchell, 297 F.3d 497, 503-504 (6th Cir. 2002) .

(n33)Footnote 6. Moviecolor, Ltd. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 24 F.R.D. 325, 326 (S.D.N.Y. 1959) .

(n34)Footnote 7. Cf. Whiting v. Tunica County, 222 F. Supp. 2d 809, 814 n.1 (N.D. Miss. 2002) (after ordering reply to obtain detail, summary judgment used to avoid delay and expense).

(n35)Footnote 7.1. See Schultea v. Wood, 47 F.3d 1427, 1433-1434 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n36)Footnote 8. Crawford-El v. Britton, 523 U.S. 574, 118 S. Ct. 1584, 1596-1597, 140 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1998) ; see [b], below.

(n37)Footnote 9. Schultea v. Wood, 47 F.3d 1427, 1433 (5th Cir. 1995) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) applies only to the subset of pleadings that set forth a claim for relief, whether an original claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim; Rule 8(a) does not encompass pleadings that it does not list, including Rule 7 replies).

(n38)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(1).

(n39)Footnote 11. Schultea v. Wood, 47 F.3d 1427, 1433-1434 (5th Cir. 1995) (court has discretion to order detailed reply when public official pleads defense of qualified immunity in civil rights case).

(n40)Footnote 12. Goad v. Mitchell, 297 F.3d 497, 503-504 (6th Cir. 2002) (alternatively, court may grant defendant's motion for more definite statement under Rule 12(e)).

(n41)Footnote 13. Schultea v. Wood, 47 F.3d 1427, 1434 (5th Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 12 PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE

1-12 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 12.03

§ 12.03 Motions Available to Plaintiff Making Response

[1] Use of Motions in General

As an alternative to pleading a reply, a plaintiff may make one or more motions. If a reply is precluded because the answer does not itself contain a counterclaim designated as such and the court has refused to order a reply, the pleadings are closed. n1 Because the pleadings are closed, either the plaintiff or defendant may move at any time for judgment on the pleadings, provided that this motion does not delay the trial. n2 Another option is for the plaintiff to file a motion to strike within 21 days of receiving service of the answer. n3

Even if the answer does contain a counterclaim designated as such, and even before it replies, the plaintiff has the option to file several motions: motion to dismiss the counterclaim under Rule 12(b), a motion for more definite statement under Rule 12(e), or a motion to strike under Rule 12(f). After the disposition of any of these pre-reply motions, a plaintiff must serve a reply within 14 days of receiving notice of the court's action. n4 or receiving service of a more definite statement. n5 The pleadings are closed at the time the reply is filed, and after that time the plaintiff or defendant may move for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Rule 12(c). n7

A plaintiff may also have rights to respond to a defendant's answer under other rules, such as Rule 56, which provides for motions for summary judgment. n8 However, as is the case with a defendant's responsive motions, any of a plaintiff's responsive motions filed prior to a reply, such as a motion to dismiss or a motion for summary judgment, do not constitute responsive "pleadings." Consequently, the filing of any of these pre-reply motions do not cut off the defendant's power to amend the counterclaims in its answer without leave of court, and the defendant may amend its answer as a matter of right until the plaintiff files its reply. n9 For a complete discussion of the pleadings and motions that may be used in response to a pleading that contains an affirmative claim for relief, see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

[2] Motion to Strike Insufficient Defense

One method of attacking an insufficient defense is specifically set forth in Rule 12(f), which provides that a motion to strike may be used to defeat any insufficient defense. n1 The plaintiff must make generally make a motion to strike material in an answer within 21 days after the service of the answer. n2 However, because Rule 12(f) authorizes the court to strike sua sponte, n3 the court may consider and grant a motion to strike even if it is technically untimely. n4 A court will deny a motion to strike a defense if the defense is sufficient as a matter of law or if the defense fairly presents a question of law or fact that the court should hear. n5 In making a determination of whether a motion to strike should be granted, the court should consider the following six factors: n6

1. Whether the defense is unrelated to plaintiff's claims.

2. Whether the defense is so clearly legally insufficient that it is unworthy of the court's consideration. n7

3. Whether there is a factual question present.

4. The nature of the legal question raised in the dispute. n8

5. Whether the defense could succeed under any set of circumstances.

6. Whether failure to grant the motion would prejudice the moving party. n9

Although motions to strike are generally disfavored, the court will grant the motion when a defense is legally insufficient, in order to save the parties unnecessary expenditure of time and money in preparing for trial. n10 When the Erie doctrine is applicable, the legal sufficiency of a defense is determined by state law. n11

Generally, well-pleaded facts are accepted as true for purposes of a motion to strike, n12 and matters outside the pleadings will not be considered in support of the motion. n13 When a court grants a motion to strike a defense for insufficiency, it usually grants the amending party leave to amend. A motion to strike by its nature involves an analysis of all of the pleadings, and a plaintiff who moves to strike a defense runs the risk of having any or all of its own claims dismissed or stricken if they are not substantiated. n14 A court's decision on a motion to strike an insufficient defense is not a final decision for purposes of appeal. Such a decision may be reviewed only on interlocutory appeal, n15 or on appeal from the final judgment. n16

Rule 12(h)(2) specifically provides that an objection of failure to state a legal defense to a claim may be made in any pleading permitted or ordered under Rule 7(a), or by motion for judgment on the pleadings, or at the trial on the merits. Rule 12(h)(2) means that once an objection is made either in a pleading, a motion, or at trial the objection is preserved, even if the objection is not ruled on by the trial court. n17 Furthermore, the party may raise the objection for the first time at any time through trial. n18

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 12.02.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f)(2). A Rule 12(f) motion to strike any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter is discussed in Ch. 11, Defendant's Response. A Rule 12(f) motion to strike an insufficient defense is discussed in [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(4)(B).

(n6)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c), discussed in Ch. 16, Judgment on the Pleadings.

(n7)Footnote 8. See Ch. 17, Summary Judgment.

(n8)Footnote 9. Zaidi v. Ehrlich, 732 F.2d 1218, 1219 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n9)Footnote 1. Holt v. Southern Ry., 51 F.R.D. 296, 299 (E.D. Tenn. 1969) (when defense and counterclaim contradicted answers to interrogatories served by defendant in another proceeding, it was proper to strike defense and counterclaim pursuant to Rule 12(f)); Brew, Woltman & Co., Inc. v. Anthony, 94 F. Supp. 955, 957 (S.D. N.Y. 1951) (motion to strike counterclaim allowed in conjunction with motion to strike defense predicated on same grounds).

(n10)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f)(2).

(n11)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f)(1).

(n12)Footnote 4. United States v. Lot 65 Pine Meadow, 976 F.2d 1155, 1157 (8th Cir. 1992) (construing former time periods).

(n13)Footnote 5. Cipollone v. Liggett Group, Inc., 789 F.2d 181, 186 (3d Cir. 1986) .

(n14)Footnote 6. Lunsford v. United States, 418 F. Supp. 1045, 1051 (D.S.D. 1976) , aff'd on other grounds, 570 F.2d 221 (8th Cir. 1977) .

(n15)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Kelly v. Kosuga, 358 U.S. 516, 79 S. Ct. 429, 3 L. Ed. 2d 475 (1959) .

(n16)Footnote 8. See, e.g., William Z. Salcer v. Envicon Equities Corp., 744 F.2d 935, 940 (2d Cir. 1984) , vacated on other grounds, 478 U.S. 1015, 106 S. Ct. 3324, 92 L. Ed. 2d 731 (1986) .

(n17)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Lunsford v. United States, 418 F. Supp. 1045, 1051 (D. S.D. 1976) , aff'd on other grounds, 570 F.2d 221 (8th Cir. 1977) .

(n18)Footnote 10. Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Sales, Inc. v. Avondale Shipyards, Inc., 677 F.2d 1045, 1050 (5th Cir. 1982) (court of appeals affirmed district court's order striking defense that alleged contract sought to be enforced was violative of antitrust laws, because plaintiff's allegedly illegal "tie-in arrangement" was not a defense to suit for fair and reasonable price of work performed); Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Isham, 782 F. Supp. 524, 528 (D. Colo. 1992) (in action alleging breach of fiduciary duty of several bank officers and directors, district court held that as matter of law defendants could not maintain defenses by which conduct of federal banking regulators eliminates or reduces defendants' liability; because affirmative defenses could not succeed under any circumstances, they were stricken).

(n19)Footnote 11. In re All Maine Asbestos Litig., 575 F. Supp. 1375, 1378 (D. Me. 1983) (in asbestos products liability suit, motion to strike affirmative defense which asserted defendants were free from liability because products had been manufactured in strict compliance with government specifications was denied, because while Maine as forum state had never considered merits of defense, there were substantial issues of law in addition to factual issues to be resolved).

(n20)Footnote 12. Forseth v. Vill. of Sussex, 199 F.3d 363, 368 (7th Cir. 2000) ; see Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 883-887 (2009) (only well-pleaded factual allegations are entitled to assumption of truth, not conclusory statements or legal recitals).

(n21)Footnote 13. See Carter v. Stanton, 405 U.S. 669, 671, 92 S. Ct. 1232, 31 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1972) .

(n22)Footnote 14. Durham Indus., Inc. v. North River Ins. Co., 482 F. Supp. 910, 914 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) (in tort action to recover damages, plaintiff moved to strike affirmative defense of failure to state a claim; court denied motion, and dismissed sua sponte plaintiff's abuse of process claim).

(n23)Footnote 15. See Cipollone v. Liggett Group, Inc., 789 F.2d 181 (3d Cir. 1986) (on interlocutory appeal, court of appeals reversed grant of plaintiff's motion to strike defense of preemption); Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Sales, Inc. v. Avondale Shipyards, Inc., 677 F.2d 1045 (5th Cir. 1982) (§ 1292(b) interlocutory appeal from district court's order striking defense alleging that contract sought to be enforced was violative of antitrust laws).

(n24)Footnote 16. Tapley v. Lockwood Green Eng'rs, Inc., 502 F.2d 559, 560 (8th Cir. 1974) (order striking amendment to complaint increasing amount of damages sought was not "final decision" and substantial rights of party would not be irreparably lost if review were delayed).

(n25)Footnote 17. Martin v. Southwestern Virginia Gas Co., 135 F.3d 307, 309 n.1 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n26)Footnote 18. Romstadt v. Allstate Ins. Co., 59 F.3d 608, 610-611 (6th Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Pleading Stage
CHAPTER 12 PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE

1-12 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 12.04

§ 12.04 Counterclaim in Reply

A counterclaim is a claim for relief that must be included in a "pleading," such as a reply. n1 Consequently, when a defendant pleads a permissive counterclaim pursuant to Rule 13(b) in an answer, the plaintiff's reply must include as a compulsory counterclaim arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as the defendant's permissive counterclaim. n2 Furthermore, because the plaintiff's counterclaim is compulsory, the defendant may not object to venue. n3

One situation that is not uniform in the case precedent is the right of a plaintiff to assert a permissive counterclaim in the reply. For example, if a plaintiff sues on contract, and the defendant answers and pleads a counterclaim on an unrelated contract, some cases indicate that the plaintiff's reply to the defendant's counterclaim may seek to plead a permissive counterclaim on an entirely unrelated contract. n4 However, the more recent cases indicate that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not allow a plaintiff to file permissive counterclaims in response to a defendant's counterclaim. n5 Some courts have reasoned that, because Rule 7 does not permit pleadings to go beyond the reply stage, if an entirely unrelated claim, such as the contract in the hypothetical case stated above were allowed in a reply, such a reply would not permit the defendant to in turn counterclaim for a claim growing out of the entirely unrelated contract, which Rule 13(a) requires. n6 Consequently, these courts have held that proper procedure requires that a plaintiff may not advance a permissive counterclaim in reply to a defendant's counterclaim. n7 The courts state that the plaintiff's proper course of action in this situation is to make a motion for leave to amend its complaint pursuant to Rule 15(a). n8 If, however, a court construes the rules to permit a plaintiff to reply with a permissive counterclaim on an unrelated claim, the defendant should have the right to object that venue is improper for that claim, just as if it had been set forth in the complaint. Thus, when a plaintiff pleads a permissive counterclaim in the reply, there must be an independent jurisdictional basis for it, or it must be dismissed. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCounterclaimsCompulsory Counterclaims

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Yuhasz v. Brush Wellman, Inc., 341 F.3d 559, 569 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (b); United Broadcasting Co. v. Armes, 506 F.2d 766, 770 (5th Cir. 1975) ; cf. Polymer Indus. Prods. v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 347 F.3d 935, 938 (Fed. Cir. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Southeastern Indus. Tire Co. v. Duraprene Corp., 70 F.R.D. 585, 588 (E.D. Pa. 1976) ; Joseph Bancroft & Sons v. M. Lowenstein & Sons, Inc., 50 F.R.D. 415, 419 (D. Del. 1970) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Warren v. Indian Refining Co., 30 F. Supp. 281, 283 (N.D. Ind. 1939) ; Bethlehem Fabricators, Inc. v. John Bowen Co., 1 F.R.D. 274, 275 (D. Mass. 1940) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Brooks v. Bates, 781 F. Supp. 202, 207 (S.D. N.Y. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Tahoe-Sierra Preservation Council v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, 992 F. Supp. 1218, 1223 (D. Nev. 1998) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Feed Mgmt. Sys. v. Brill, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1094, 1096-1097 (D. Minn. 2007) ; see Davis & Cox v. Summa Corp., 751 F.2d 1507, 1525 (9th Cir.1985) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Turner & Boisseau v. Nationwide Mutual Insurance Company, 175 F.R.D. 686, 687-688 (D. Kan. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Vanderveer v. Erie Malleable Iron Co., 139 F. Supp. 340 (W.D. Pa. 1956) , aff'd on other grounds, 238 F.2d 510 (3d Cir. 1956) (rejecting argument in patent infringement case that defendant's declaratory judgment claim "opened door" to plaintiff's breach of trust claim).

1 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 13.syn

§ 13.syn Synopsis to Chapter 13: INTERESTS OF PARTIES

§ 13.01 Status of Real Party in Interest

[1] Persons Who May Qualify as Real Party in Interest

[2] Qualification as Real Party in Interest

[a] Real Party Is Person Entitled to Initiate Claim for Relief

[b] Distinguished From Party to Action

[3] Assignment or Subrogation May Affect Status as Real Party in Interest

[a] Complete Assignment

[b] Partial Assignment

[c] Assignment of Claims Against United States

[d] Assignment of Intellectual Property Interests

[e] Subrogation

[i] Complete Subrogation

[ii] Partial Subrogation

§ 13.02 Purpose of Designating Real Party in Interest

§ 13.03 Effects of Status of Real Party in Interest

[1] Action Required To Be Brought by Real Party

[a] Only Real Party Entitled to Commence Action on Claim

[b] Requirements for Objection to Real Party Status

[c] Exceptions to Dismissal Rule by Cure of Real Party Defect

[i] Options to Cure Real Party Defect

[ii] Ratification

[iii] Joinder of Real Party

[iv] Substitution of Real Party

[v] Any Cure of Real Party Defect Relates Back to Commencement of Suit

[2] Certain Real Parties Entitled to Sue on Behalf of Another

[a] General Authorization

[b] Statutory Designation of Real Party Entitled to Sue in Representative Capacity

§ 13.04 Jurisdiction Is Not Based on Real Party in Interest Rule

[1] Real Party in Interest Is Procedural Question

[2] Real Party's Citizenship Does Not Necessarily Control for Diversity Jurisdiction Purposes

[a] Real Party Suing On Its Own Behalf

[b] Real Party Suing On Behalf of Another Person

[3] Prohibition Against Collusion to Create Diversity Jurisdiction

[a] Application of Anti-Collusion Statute

[b] Factors Considered by Court to Determine Collusion

[c] Effect of Determination of Collusion

§§ 13.05-13.09 [Reserved]

§ 13.10 General Principles Relating to Capacity to Litigate

§ 13.11 Procedural Considerations Regarding Capacity

[1] Objection Required to Lack of Capacity

[2] Loss of Capacity During Litigation

§ 13.12 Capacity of Individual Acting in His or Her Own Behalf

[1] Capacity Controlled by Law of Domicile

[2] Exception for Suits Based on Federal Law

§ 13.13 Capacity of Person Acting in Representative Capacity

[1] Capacity Controlled by State Law Where Federal Court is Located

[2] Exception for Suits Based on Federal Law

§ 13.14 Capacity of Public Officers

[1] Capacity of State and Federal Officers

[2] Effect of Immunity on Official and Individual Capacity

§ 13.15 Capacity of Receivers

[1] Capacity of Receiver Appointed by State Determined by Law of Forum State

[2] Capacity of Federal Receiver Determined by Federal Law

§ 13.16 Capacity of Business Entities

[1] Capacity of Corporation Acting on Its Own Behalf

[a] Capacity Generally Determined by Law of State of Corporation

[b] Capacity of Corporation Doing Business in Foreign State

[c] Federal Statute May Prevail Over State Capacity Law

[2] Capacity of Corporation Acting in Representative Capacity

[3] Capacity of Government Corporations and Entities

[4] Capacity of Partnerships and Other Unincorporated Entities

[a] Capacity to Litigate State Law Claims

[b] Capacity to Litigate Federal Claims

§ 13.17 Incapacity Due to Infancy or Incompetency

[1] Effect of Incapacity of Infants and Incompetents

[a] Incapacity Allows Appointment of Representative

[b] Court's Decision to Protect Persons Lacking Capacity Is Discretionary

[2] Capacity of Representatives of Infants and Incompetents

§§ 13.18 through 13.29 [Reserved]

§ 13.30 Nature and Purpose of Substitution

[1] Distinction Between Substitution and Amendment

[2] Substitution Rule Does Not Affect Substantive Rights

§ 13.31 Substitution Does Not Affect Jurisdiction and Venue

§ 13.32 Substitution Due to Death of Party

[1] Discretion of Court to Order Substitution on Party's Death

[2] Procedure for Substitution Applicable Only When Party's Death Occurs After Initiation of Action

[3] Requirement of Filing and Service of Statement Noting Death

[a] Requirement Is First of Two Steps

[b] Persons Entitled to File Statement Noting Death

[c] Name of Substitute for Deceased May Be Required

[d] Required Service

[4] Requirement of Filing and Service of Motion for Substitution

[a] Requirement Is Second of Two Steps

[b] Court Has Discretion to Allow Extension of Time to File Motion

[c] Party To Be Substituted Must Be Proper Party

[d] Motion for Substitution Must Identify Decedent's Representative and Must Be Properly Served

[5] Survival of Action Is Prerequisite to Order of Substitution

[a] Necessity of Survival of Claim

[b] State Substantive Law Controls Survival of State Law Claims

[c] Federal Substantive Law Generally Controls Survival of Federal Claims Based on Federal Question

[6] Effect of Substitution Due to Death

[7] Appeal of Order Regarding Substitution Due to Death

§ 13.33 Substitution Due to Incompetency

[1] Court's Discretion to Order Substitution Because of Incompetency of Party

[2] Procedural Considerations

§ 13.34 Substitution Due to Transfer of Interest

[1] Court Has Authority to Order Substitution on Transfer of Interest

[2] Substitution Because of Transfer of Interest Does not Affect Substantive Rights

[3] Court Has Considerable Discretion to Determine Procedure on Transfer of Interest

[4] Timing of Motion to Substitute

[5] Appeal of Order on Motion to Substitute

§ 13.35 Substitution of Public Officials

[1] Substitution of Officials is Generally Automatic on Vacancy of Position

[2] Substitution Procedure

[3] Determination of Official Capacity

[4] Effect of Substitution of Officer

2 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART I. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.01

§ 13.01 Status of Real Party in Interestn*

[1] Persons Who May Qualify as Real Party in Interest

The federal rules provide that a federal civil action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. n1 Consequently, a "real party in interest" is a person that is entitled by substantive law such as statute or case precedent to bring a particular claim for relief in federal court. n2 There may be more than one real party in interest for a particular claim, and not all real parties must necessarily prosecute a claim. The question whether one or more than one person or entity is a real party in interest with respect to any given claim depends on whether substantive law gives one or more than one person a right to enforce that claim. n3

A real party in interest does not necessarily have to be a plaintiff, because a party other than a plaintiff may assert a claim for relief. For example, a defendant asserts a claim for relief when it files a counterclaim against a plaintiff. n4 or a crossclaim against a co-defendant. n5 However, when a person is responding to a claim or acting in some other purely defensive capacity, the real-party-in-interest provisions of Civil Rule 17(a) do not apply. n6

The concept of the real party in interest is similar to the concept of standing, n7 in that both address a party's right to pursue an action as a claimant. n8 However, the real party test may generally be viewed as the more stringent one. Thus, a real party in interest always has standing to sue n9 but not every party who meets standing requirements is automatically a real party in interest. n10 Also, a person who seeks to intervene as a claimant will not be permitted to join an action unless he or she is a real party in interest. n11 A "required party" is by definition a real party in interest because such a party has an interest in the litigation to the extent that the party's presence is necessary to dispose of the litigation. n12

An attorney-in-fact is not a real party in interest. An attorney-in-fact is merely an agent of the real party in interest and does not possess interests sufficient to qualify for real party in interest status. Therefore, an attorney-in-fact may not bring suit in its own name. This principle conforms to the purposes of the real party in interest rule. Any rights of action of an attorney-in-fact arise solely from the power of attorney. The right does not arise from a chose in action, as is the case for an assignment for collection, nor does it arise from contract, as is the case with a contractual agent. n13

[2] Qualification as Real Party in Interest

[a] Real Party Is Person Entitled to Initiate Claim for Relief

A "real party in interest" is a person that is entitled by substantive law, including statutes or common law, to bring a particular claim for relief in federal court. n1 This right to bring a claim for relief must arise from the substantive law that controls the claim, n2 which must be either state or federal substantive law. n3 There must exist at least one real party in interest or the claim cannot be brought in federal court. n4

A party not possessing a substantive legal right is not the real party in interest with respect to that right for the particular litigation. n5 Thus, one who merely stands tobenefit from an action in an economically general way is not necessarily a real party in interest. n6

Because the right to enforce an action as a real party is conferred by statute or by substantive common law, n7 there may be more than one real party in interest in the same action whose rights are recognized by substantive law. n8 For example, if an insurer has paid the entire loss suffered by the insured, the insurer must sue in its own name because it is the only real party in interest; however, if the insurer has paid only a portion of the loss, both the insurer and the insured have substantive rights against the tortfeasor, and those rights may qualify them both as real parties in interest. n9

It is also important to recognize that, in circumstances specified by statute, a party who might otherwise have no legally protected interest in the litigation, may be designated as a real party in interest by the federal or state statute. For example, a real party may be defined by statute in cases involving workers' compensation, legal capacity, decedents' estates, and wrongful death. n10

[b] Distinguished From Party to Action

A real party in interest is entitled to become a party of record in federal litigation, but does not actually become a party until the person is prosecuting a claim for relief in the action. The Supreme Court has clarified the important distinction between a person entitled to become a party, the real party in interest, and an actual party in the action. The court noted that there are only three methods to become a party to an action: (1) institute a lawsuit by bringing a claim for relief; (2) defend against a claim for relief filed by a claimant such as a plaintiff, and (3) intervene in a proceeding that has already been instituted. n11

The importance of the distinction is that a real party in interest that has not become a party to the action is a "nonparty" for purposes of the rules. Unless the federal rules provide otherwise, only a party is entitled to the protections and is bound by the requirements of the federal rules. For example, even though the United States is a real party in interest under the False Claims Act, if it has not brought the claim or intervened, it is not a "party" to the action; therefore, the 30 day time limit to file a notice of appeal in Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 4(a)(1)(A) applies, rather than the 60 day time limit in Rule 4(a)(1)(B) that applies when the United States is a party. n12

[3] Assignment or Subrogation May Affect Status as Real Party in Interest

[a] Complete Assignment

In a complete assignment, the owner of a right or claim transfers ownership of its entire right or interest to another person. n1 When a person has made a complete assignment, the assignee of the claim becomes the real party in interest for that claim. n2 Subject to the prohibition against collusive assignments, an assignee must sue in its own name and need not join the assignor as a party. Furthermore, after a complete assignment has been made, the assignor may not sue on the claim, because it retains no interest on which to base an action. n3 However, it is important to note that because it is procedural, the "real party in interest" rule does not affect substantive law and thus has no effect on the validity of an assignment, which is determined by federal or state substantive law. n4

The "collusive assignment" rule provides that an assignee does not become a real party in interest if the assignment was collusive, which means that the parties effected the assignment for the purpose of subverting or avoiding jurisdictional or procedural requirements. n5 For example, an assignment is collusive if it was made to satisfy the diversity jurisdiction citizenship requirement or minimum amount in controversy requirement. When a pretextual assignment is asserted, the burden is on the party asserting diversity to demonstrate that the reason given for the assignment is legitimate, not pretextual. Factors that the court may consider regarding a purported assignment include the assignee's lack of a previous connection with the claim assigned; the remittance by the assignee to the assignor of any recovery; whether the assignor actually controls the conduct of the litigation; the timing of the assignment; the lack of any meaningful consideration for the assignment; and the underlyingpurpose of the assignment. n6

[b] Partial Assignment

Courts have consistently recognized as valid assignments that are short of complete assignments, which are referred to as "partial assignments." In a partial assignment, the assignor may retain a fractional part of the interest assigned. n7 Alternatively the assignor may retain a particular type of the interest assigned, such as the legal title to assert the claim or the substantive right to collect on any recovery. When a valid partial assignment of a claim is made, the assignor and assignee are both real parties in interest, each with respect to its portion of the claim. Under general principles of assignment law, the assignee of a partial assignment owns the part assigned to him or her and the assignor the balance; each is a real party in interest as to his or her part of the claim. As in the case of complete assignments, the validity of a partial assignments is governed by the applicable law, state or federal. n8

Under federal procedural law, the assignor and assignee may bring suit together if they satisfy the permissive party joinder requirements. n9 On the other hand, they may sue separately if the suit does not violate compulsory joinder requirements. n10

Two types of partial assignments are worthy of particular discussion. First, an assignment for purposes of collection only is an assignment in which the assignee has a duty to account to the assignor. If an assignment for purposes of collection only is valid under applicable substantive law, it transfers substantive rights to the assignee, and therefore the assignee is a real party in interest even though the assignee must account to the assignor. n11 However, to the extent that the assignment for purposes of collection is partial, both the assignee and assignor will be real parties in interest to the extent of their interests. n12 It should be noted, however, that when an assignment for purposes of collection is made in order to create or destroy diversity jurisdiction, the assignment is invalid as collusive. n13

Second, an assignment of a right of action as collateral security passes title to the assignee. When a complete valid assignment is made, the assignee becomes the sole real party in interest. Alternatively, the assignor may also retain an interest sufficient to qualify as one of two real parties in interest. n14 Again, the validity of an assignment of a claim as collateral security is determined by substantive federal or state law. n15

[c] Assignment of Claims Against United States

The federal Assignment of Claims Act restricts the transfer of claims against the United States. The Act provides that a transfer or assignment of any part of a claim against the United States Government may be made only after a claim is allowed, the amount of the claim is decided, and a warrant for payment of the claim has been issued. n16 The Act ensures that the United States maintains all set-off and cross-claims against the original claimants, which may not include an assignee of the claim. n17 Thus, the general rule that an assignment ordinarily shifts real party status to the assignee does not apply to assigned claims against the United States. An assignment invalidated by the Assignment of Claims Act nullifies the assignee's claim against the United States; the purported assignee does not acquire any rights in the claim that would support its action, and the assignor remains the real party in interest. n18

In the same manner that an assignment of claims is prohibited, a person may not assign a contract made with the United States. n19 The language of the Anti-Assignment Act is nearly identical to the Assignment of Claims Act, and courts have noted that violations of either Act are subject to the same principles. n20

There are several exceptions to the general rules stated above. The Assignment of Claims Act does not apply when the assignment is made before the date that the claim arises against the United States. n21 The Act does not prohibit assignments made to financial institutions, an exception intended to encourage financing of government contracts. n22 Furthermore, the Act does not apply to subrogated claims, which are essentially assignments made by operation of law, n23 nor does it apply to transfers thatare analogous to those occurring by operation of law. n24 Finally, the United States may waive the restrictions of the Assignment of Claims Act, either expressly or impliedly. n25

[d] Assignment of Intellectual Property Interests

The owner of a patent, trademark, or copyright has the right to initiate an action for alleged infringement, and thus is a real party in interest for an infringement claim. n26 If the owner of one of these rights completely assigns all its rights, the assignee becomes the real party in interest with respect to infringement claims that arise after the assignment. n27 The assignee may sue in its own behalf as real party in interest and need not join the original owner. n28 If the owner makes a partial assignment, real party status vests in both the assignor and the assignee. n29 In cases of partial assignment, the assignee must bring an infringement action jointly with the original owner-assignor. n30

However, licensees must be distinguished from partial assignees. Mere licensees are not real parties in interest because licensees do not acquire sufficient interests in the license to become real parties in interest. n31 A court must look to the language of the agreement between the inventor and licensee to determine what rights have been granted and the intent of the parties. When the patentee grants an exclusive right to make, use, and sell, either the entire patent or an undivided portion of a patent, or an exclusive right to make, use, and sell within a specific geographical area, the transaction is considered an assignment. This is true despite language in the instrument to the contrary.

On the other hand, if the patentee conveys only the exclusive right to make and sell, but not the right to use, the grant is a license, notwithstanding any language in the instrument to the contrary. Where a patent owner grants an exclusive license to make and sell an invention, but the right to use is not specifically included, the transfer is a "license" and not an "assignment," and therefore the licensee is not a real party in interest sufficient to bring an infringement suit in its own right. n32

[e] Subrogation

[i] Complete Subrogation

A "subrogation" is an agreement in which the "subrogee" is substituted into the place of the subrogor with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right against the subrogor, so that the subrogee succeeds to the liabilities of the subrogor in relation to the claim or debt, and also the subrogor's rights, remedies, or securities. n33 A "complete subrogation" or "total subrogation" occurs when the subrogee pays or makes whole the entire liability or loss incurred by the subrogor, and has taken all of the right, title, and interest in the claims of the subrogee. n34 For example, in an insurance context "subrogation" is an insurer's right to be put in the position of its insured against third parties legally responsible to the insured for loss which the insurer has both covered and paid the insured. n35 Subrogation may be in effect an assignment that occurs by operation of law, or it may be an "equitable subrogation," which is a subrogation that occurs when equitable principles require that one party (who is not a mere volunteer) pays the debt of another party which, in good conscience, should have been paid by the one primarily liable. n36

Under general principles of subrogation, when one party's claim is completely subrogated to another party, the subrogor relinquishes all interest in the subrogated claim, and, by operation of law, the subrogee becomes the only real party in interest. n37 The substantive law of the existence of subrogation in diversity cases is controlled by state law. n38

However, the procedure for joinder of subrogated parties is controlled by federal law even in cases of diversity. n39 For example, in an action by an insurer in which the insurer is seeking reimbursement for its payment to the insured, the situation in which subrogation most commonly occurs, the insurer subrogee assumes whatever rights the insured possessed. An insurer that has paid the full loss suffered by the insured is subrogated to the insured's entire claim and acquires the status of the sole real party in interest with respect to that claim. n40 The subrogee's right of recovery islimited to that of the subrogor, because the subrogee merely stands in the shoes of the subrogor. n41 However, if subrogation of a claim occurs after an action is commenced in federal court, the procedural question of whose name must be used for prosecution of the action is regulated by Rule 25, which governs substitution of parties during litigation. n41.1

[ii] Partial Subrogation

A partial subrogation is a subrogation in which the subrogee has a right to recover an amount it has paid to the subrogor when that amount is only a portion of the amount that is owed to the subrogor on the claim. n41.2 Thus, both the subrogor and the subrogee retain an interest in the claim in a partial subrogation. n41.3 Although in a complete subrogation the subrogee becomes the only real party in interest on the claim, n41.4 in the case of a partial subrogation both of the subrogee and subrogor are real parties in interest to the extent of its unrecovered amount. n41.5 Any one or all of the partial subrogees as well as the subrogor may sue in their own names. n42 Thus, an insurer which does not pay the entire loss suffered by the insured is subrogated only to that portion actually paid. n43 Subrogor and subrogee may sue the defendant together if they satisfy permissive party joinder requirements. n44 Furthermore, a partial subrogee may protect its interest in any recovery by intervening in an action brought by the other subrogee. n44.1

The circuits are not in agreement about the compulsory joinder requirements with respect to partial subrogation. Thus, in some circuits the courts have held that when there is partial subrogation to an insurer, neither the insured nor the insurer-subrogee is an indispensable party; rather than require dismissal of the action where the insured sues without the subrogated insurer, courts have held that where there is partial subrogation the insured may file suit in its own name for the entire amount of the claim, without naming the insurer as a co-plaintiff. n45 On the other hand, other courts have held that a party who has the status of a partial subrogee under state law in a diversity case is a real party in interest and is required to be joined under Rule 17(a) on the defendant's motion for joinder. n46 The Seventh Circuit takes that view that Rule 17(a) provides an independent authority for compulsory joinder, so that the prerequisites of Rule 19(a) need not be satisfied before joinder is appropriate under Rule 17(a). n47

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesReal Parties in InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesReal Parties in InterestAssigneesCivil ProcedurePartiesReal Parties in InterestSubrogees

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.10, 17.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); see, e.g., United States ex rel. Eisenstein v. City of New York, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 2230, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1255, 1262-1263 (2009) (False Claims Act provides that United States Government and individuals are real parties in interest to bring claim under Act).

(n4)Footnote 3. Int'l Equity Invs., Inc. v. Opportunity Equity Partners, Ltd., 411 F. Supp. 2d 458, 462, n.14, 463 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (quoting Moore's Federal Practice that real parties in interest are persons or entities possessing right or interest to be enforced through litigation).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n7)Footnote 6. University of Texas at Austin v. Vratil, 96 F.3d 1337, 1340 n.2 (10th Cir. 1996) (requirement of bringing suit in name of real party in interest applies only to party making claim for relief, and differs from capacity to be sued).

(n8)Footnote 7. In re Maco Homes, Inc, 180 F.3d 163, 165-166 (4th Cir. 1999) (real party in interest rule used to determine standing to appeal from summary judgment on claim).

(n9)Footnote 8. Mecklenburg Farm, Inc. v. Anheuser Busch, Inc., 250 F.R.D. 414, 417 (E.D. Mo. 2008) (quoting Moore's Federal Practice).

(n10)Footnote 9. American National Bank & Trust Co. v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 692 F.2d 455, 459 (7th Cir. 1982) (real party in interest has standing to assert rights or claims of nonparties).

(n11)Footnote 10. New Orleans Pub. Serv. v. United Gas Pipe Line, 732 F.2d 452, 464 (5th Cir. 1984) (distinguishing between real party in interest requirements and standing rule that party may not assert right that is actually possessed by another).

(n12)Footnote 11. United States ex rel. Eisenstein v. City of New York, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 2230, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1255, 1261-1262 (2009) ; New Orleans Pub. Serv. v. United Gas Pipe Line, 732 F.2d 452, 464 (5th Cir. 1984) (citing Moores Federal Practice).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1) (definition of "required party").

(n14)Footnote 13. Choi v. Kim, 50 F.3d 244, 247 (3d Cir. 1995) (complaint in creditor's action was proper, even though captioned "by and through" attorney-in-fact, when complaint clearly identified real party in interest as plaintiff, and defendants' answer indicated that defendants knew creditor was plaintiff).

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); see United States ex rel. Eisenstein v. City of New York, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 2230, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1255, 1263 (2009) (False Claims Act provides that United States Government qualifies as real party in interest to bring claim under Act).

(n16)Footnote 2. Fezler v. Davis (In re Davis), 194 F.3d 570, 577 (5th Cir. 1999) ; Mecklenburg Farm, Inc. v. Anheuser Busch, Inc., 250 F.R.D. 414, 417 (E.D. Mo. 2008) (quoting Moore's Federal Practice).

(n17)Footnote 3. Stichting Ter Behartiging Van De Belangen Van Oudaandeelhouders in Het Kapitaal Van Saybolt Int'l B.V. v. Schreiber, 407 F.3d 34, 47-48 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n18)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(3) (court must dismiss action for failure to prosecute in name of real party in interest if, after reasonable time has been allowed, real party in interest has not ratified, joined, or been substituted into action).

(n19)Footnote 5. Swanson v. Bixler, 750 F.2d 810, 813-814 (10th Cir. 1984) (stepson who commenced action for deprivation of stepfather's testamentary wishes and breach of fiduciary duty owed to stepfather did nothold substantive right to be enforced, and was not real party in interest).

(n20)Footnote 6. South African Marine Corp. v. United States, 640 F. Supp. 247, 251 (Ct. Int. Trade 1986) (mere possibility of obtaining benefit as result of litigation does not make one real party in interest entitled to sue).

(n21)Footnote 7. Matter of Davis, 194 F.3d 570, 577-578 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n22)Footnote 8. HB Gen. Corp. v. Manchester Partners, 95 F.3d 1185, 1196 (3d Cir. 1996) (for particular claim, there may be multiple real parties in interest; however, provided plaintiffs qualify as real parties in interest, Rule 17(a) does not require the joinder or addition of other parties who also qualify).

(n23)Footnote 9. Underwriters at Interest on Cover Note JHB92M10582079 v. Nautronix, Ltd., 79 F.3d 480, 484 (5th Cir. 1996) (case of partial subrogation on which insurer and insureds were all real parties in interest).

(n24)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Matter of Davis, 194 F.3d 570, 577-578 (5th Cir. 1999) (executors and administrators designated as real parties in interest who need not join as plaintiffs persons for whose benefit wrongful death action is brought).

(n25)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); see United States ex rel. Eisenstein v. City of New York, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 2230, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1255, 1261 (2009) (False Claims Act provides that United States Government qualifies as real party in interest to bring claim under Act).

(n26)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); see United States ex rel. Eisenstein v. City of New York, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 2230, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1255, 1264 (2009) .

(n27)Footnote 1. Sprint Communs. Co., L.P. v. APCC Servs., 554 U.S. 269, 128 S. Ct. 2531, 171 L. Ed. 2d 424, 434-435 (2008) .

(n28)Footnote 2. HB Gen. Corp. v. Manchester Partners, 95 F.3d 1185, 1197 (3d Cir. 1996) ; Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs., P.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 466 F. Supp. 2d 467, 473 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n29)Footnote 3. Hefley v. Jones, 687 F.2d 1383, 1387-1388 (10th Cir. 1982) ; Mecklenburg Farm, Inc. v. Anheuser Busch, Inc., 250 F.R.D. 414, 417 (E.D. Mo. 2008) (quoting Moore's Federal Practice).

(n30)Footnote 4. Stichting Ter Behartiging Van De Belangen Van Oudaandeelhouders in Het Kapitaal Van Saybolt Int'l B.V. v. Schreiber, 407 F.3d 34, 44-45 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n31)Footnote 5. See LaSala v. Needham & Co., 399 F. Supp. 2d 466, 471 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) ; Deajess Med. Imaging, P.C. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 381 F. Supp. 2d 307, 310 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n32)Footnote 6. *See Boston Post Rd. Med. Imaging, P.C. v. Allstate Ins., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6583, *6-9 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) ; § 5.50[3][d].

(n33)Footnote 7. In re Katrina Canal Litigation Breaches, 524 F.3d 700, 706 (5th Cir. 2008) .

(n34)Footnote 8. See Sprint Communs. Co., L.P. v. APCC Servs., 554 U.S. 269, 128 S. Ct. 2531, 171 L. Ed. 2d 424, 436-437 (2008) .

(n35)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n36)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19; see HB Gen. Corp. v. Manchester Partners, 95 F.3d 1185, 1195-1197 (3d Cir. 1996) (noting that Rule 17 does not require joinder of all real parties in interest, but that Rule 19 might).

(n37)Footnote 11. Sprint Communs. Co., L.P. v. APCC Servs., 554 U.S. 269, 128 S. Ct. 2531, 171 L. Ed. 2d 424, 435-436 (2008) .

(n38)Footnote 12. Hefley v. Jones, 687 F.2d 1383, 1387 (10th Cir. 1982) .

(n39)Footnote 13. Attorneys Trust v. Videotape Computer Prods., 93 F.3d 593, 597 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n40)Footnote 14. Pacamor Bearings v. Minebea Co., 892 F. Supp. 347, 361 (D.N.H. 1995) (assignee and assignor were both qualified as real parties in interest when assignor retained interest in percentage of net recovery from claim).

(n41)Footnote 15. See Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Tisch, 89 F.R.D. 446, 448 (E.D.N.Y. 1981) (when FDIC assigned claims against debtors to trustee in bankruptcy but retained interest in outcome, both assignor and assignee had status of real parties in interest).

(n42)Footnote 16. See 31 U.S.C. § 3727.

(n43)Footnote 17. Balfour Maclaine Int'l v. Hanson, 876 F. Supp. 52, 57 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (assignment by import-export company of its claims against United States Export-Import Bank was void under anti-assignment statute because assignment occurred before claim was allowed and decided).

(n44)Footnote 18. Saint John Marine Co. v. United States, 92 F.3d 39, 45 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n45)Footnote 19. See 41 U.S.C. § 15.

(n46)Footnote 20. See In re Medina, 177 B.R. 335, 346 (D. Ore. 1994) , aff'd in part on other grounds, 205 B.R. 216 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n47)Footnote 21. Saint John Marine Co. v. United States, 92 F.3d 39, 46-47 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n48)Footnote 22. See 31 U.S.C. § 3727; Bank of Amer. National Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. United States, 23 F.3d 380, 384 (Fed. Cir. 1994) .

(n49)Footnote 23. United States v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 338 U.S. 366, 377-381, 70 S. Ct. 207, 94 L. Ed. 171, 40 Ohio Op. 348 (1949) (subrogation of insurer to claim against government was unaffected by anti-assignment statutes).

(n50)Footnote 24. Saint John Marine Co. v. United States, 92 F.3d 39, 48 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n51)Footnote 25. Cadwalder v. United States, 45 F.3d 297, 299 (9th Cir. 1995) (waiver is determined by totality of the circumstances, including factors such as the government's knowledge, assent, or actions consistent with terms of assignment).

(n52)Footnote 26. See, e.g., 35 U.S.C. § 281 (patent); U-Haul Int'l v. Jartran, Inc., 793 F.2d 1034, 1038-1039 (9th Cir. 1986) (trademark); 17 U.S.C. § 106 (copyright).

(n53)Footnote 27. See, e.g., 37 C.F.R. § 3.71 (patent); 15 U.S.C. § 1060 (trademark); 17 U.S.C. § 204 (copyright).

(n54)Footnote 28. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1)(F).

(n55)Footnote 29. See Walker Mfg. v. Hoffmann, Inc., 220 F. Supp. 2d 1024, 1031-1032 (N.D. Iowa 2002) .

(n56)Footnote 30. See Valutron, N.V. v. NCR Corp., 99 F.R.D. 254, 256-257 (S.D. Ohio 1982) (owners of minority interest in patent who signed assignment restricting their power to license and enforce patent, but who had retained right to make, use, or sell patented invention, were indispensable parties requiring joinder under Rule 19(a).

(n57)Footnote 31. Abbott Lab. v. Diamedix Corp., 47 F.3d 1128, 1131 (Fed. Cir. 1995) (mere licensee, who has no right to exclude others from making, using, or selling the licensed product, has no legally recognized interest that entitles it to bring or join an infringement action).

(n58)Footnote 32. Dr. Fred Hatfield's Sportstrength Training Equipment Co. v. Balik, 174 F.R.D. 496, 499-500 (M.D. Fla. 1997) ; see Pfizer, Inc. v. Elan Pharm. Research Corp., 812 F. Supp. 1352, 1371-1374 (D. Del. 1993) (because patent holder had not transferred substantially all of its rights in patent to exclusive licensee, exclusive licensee was not real party in interest qualified to sue in its own name for infringement of patent).

(n59)Footnote 33. Morris v. Crete Carrier Corp., 105 F.3d 279, 280 (6th Cir. 1997) ; see Lyndon Prop. Ins. Co. v. Duke Levy & Assocs. LLC, 475 F.3d 268, 271 (5th Cir. 2007) (substitution may also arise under equitable principles).

(n60)Footnote 34. See Pepsico do BRASIL, LTDA v. Oxy Dry Corp., 534 F. Supp. 2d 846, 848 (N.D. Ill. 2008) ; Culp, Inc. v. Cain, 414 F. Supp. 2d 1118, 1130 n.25 (M.D. Ala. 2006) .

(n61)Footnote 35. Allstate Ins. Co. v. Gip, 797 F. Supp. 763, 765-766 (N.D. Cal. 1992) .

(n62)Footnote 36. First Fed. Sav. Bank of Wabash v. United States, 118 F.3d 532, 533-534 (6th Cir. 1997) .

(n63)Footnote 37. Pepsico do BRASIL, LTDA v. Oxy Dry Corp., 534 F. Supp. 2d 846, 848 (N.D. Ill. 2008) .

(n64)Footnote 38. Frank v. Hadesman and Frank, Inc., 83 F.3d 158, 159 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n65)Footnote 39. *Cars R US Sales & Rentals, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51478, at 6 (N.D. Ill. June 18, 2009) .

(n66)Footnote 40. United States v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 338 U.S. 366, 380-381, 70 S. Ct. 207, 94 L. Ed. 171, 40 Ohio Op. 348 (1949) (citing Moore's Federal Practice for principle that if subrogee has paid entire loss suffered by insured, it is the only real party in interest and must sue in its own name); Underwriters at Interest on Cover Note JHB92M10582079 v. Nautronix, Ltd., 79 F.3d 480, 484 (5th Cir. 1996) (general rule in federal court is that if insurer has paid entire claim of its insured, insurer is real party in interest under Rule 17(a) and must sue in its own name).

(n67)Footnote 41. Cadwalder v. United States, 45 F.3d 297, 301 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n68)Footnote 41.1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c); see also § 13.30.

(n69)Footnote 41.2. New Orleans Assets, L.L.C. v. Woodward, 363 F.3d 372, 375 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n70)Footnote 41.3. Balistreri v. Richard E. Jacobs Group, Inc., 221 F.R.D. 602, 604 (E.D. Wis. 2004) .

(n71)Footnote 41.4. See [i], above.

(n72)Footnote 41.5. Sysco Corp. v. Chi-Chi's, Inc. (In re Chi-Chi's, Inc.), 338 B.R. 618, 623 (Bkrtcy. D. Del. 2006) ; *see Cars R US Sales & Rentals, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51478, at 6 (N.D. Ill. June 18, 2009) .

(n73)Footnote 42. United States v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 338 U.S. 366, 381, 70 S. Ct. 207, 94 L. Ed. 171, 40 Ohio Op. 348 (1949) .

(n74)Footnote 43. Krueger v. Cartwright, 996 F.2d 928, 932 (7th Cir. 1993) (insurer that pays only portion of loss of its insured is only partially subrogated to insured's rights).

(n75)Footnote 44. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a) (rule permits suit by co-plaintiffs whose claims arise from same transaction or occurrence and create at least one common question of law or fact).

(n76)Footnote 44.1. *See Maricco v. Meco Corp., No. 03-71719, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7890, *3-4 (E.D. Mich. May 3, 2004) (when insured brought suit against tortfeasor, insurer who was partially subrogated had right to intervene in action to protect its pro rata share of potential recovery).

(n77)Footnote 45. See Virginia Elec. and Power Co. v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 485 F.2d 78, 81 (4th Cir. 1973) , cert. denied, 415 U.S. 935 (1974) ; Garcia v. Hall, 624 F.2d 150, 152 (10th Cir. 1980) .

(n78)Footnote 46. Wadsworth v. United States Postal Service, 511 F.2d 64, 67 (7th Cir. 1975) .

(n79)Footnote 47. Sikora v. AFD Indus., 18 F. Supp. 2d 841, 846 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (Seventh Circuit decision provides that a partial subrogee must be joined as real party in interest under Rule 17(a)).

3 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART I. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.02

§ 13.02 Purpose of Designating Real Party in Interestn*

The real party in interest rule is intended to protect defendants from multiple liability in actions by subsequent claimants and to ensure that the judgment in an action will have preclusive res judicata effect. n1 If more than one real party in interest exists with respect to a given claim, a real party who is not joined in the suit and who elects not to intervene or sue separately is bound by the judgment in the original suit. n2 The real party in interest requirement is not based on Article III standing principles but is a prudential standing rule intended to ensure that the party bringing the action is the party entitled to make the claim. Consequently, and because it is intended to protect the defendant, failure to raise the real party in interest objection in a timely manner results in waiver of the objection, and it may not be raised at any time. For example, it may not be raised after trial has started n2.1 or for the first time on appeal. n2.2

When the real party in interest initiates a suit for the benefit of another, a judgment by or against the real party in interest is binding on the person represented. The preclusive effect of the representative's suit protects the defendant from subsequent suits by the one who stands to ultimately benefit from the litigation. n3 Similarly, although not directly involved in a proceeding, a ratifying party is deemed to be a real party in interest to the action and is bound by the outcome. n4

When government officers sue or are sued in their official capacity, the real party in interest is the government. n5 Consequently, a public officer who sues or is sued in an official capacity may be designated by official title rather than by name. However, the court may order that the officer's name be added, for example, when it would facilitate administration of the case. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesReal Parties in InterestGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. National Safe Corp. v. Texidor Sec. Equip., Inc., 101 F.R.D. 467, 470-472 (D.P.R. 1984)

(discussion of dual purposes of Rule 17 to protect defendant from multiple liability and to ensure preclusive effect of judgment in action); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1966 Amendments; see also Coliseum Cartage Co. v. Rubbermaid Statesville, Inc., 975 F.2d 1022, 1024-1025 (4th Cir. 1992) (in action by collection agent on behalf of carrier to recover underpayment from shipper, joinder of carrier who retained right to attempt collection on its own prevented multiplicity of suits).

(n3)Footnote 2. Prevor-Mayorsohn Caribbean, Inc. v. Puerto Rico Marine Management, Inc., 620 F.2d 1, 4 (1st Cir. 1980) (Rule 17 protects defendants from facing subsequent similar action brought by one not party to present proceeding).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Ensley v. Cody Resources, Inc., 171 F.3d 315, 319-320 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 2.2. In re Rodeo Canon Dev. Corp., 362 F.3d 603, 607-608 (9th Cir. 2004) ; see § 13.03[1][b].

(n6)Footnote 3. Long v. Sasser, 91 F.3d 645, 647 (4th Cir. 1996) (guardian's action alleging medical malpractice binding on ward who was incapacitated by stroke).

(n7)Footnote 4. See Metal Processing, Inc. v. Humm, 56 F. Supp. 2d 455, 462 (D.N.J. 1999) ; see § 13.03[1][c][ii].

(n8)Footnote 5. Cheney v. United States Dist. Court, 541 U.S. 913, 918, 124 S. Ct. 1391, 158 L. Ed. 2d 225 (2004) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(d).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART I. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.03

§ 13.03 Effects of Status of Real Party in Interestn*

[1] Action Required To Be Brought by Real Party

[a] Only Real Party Entitled to Commence Action on Claim

In general, every action in federal court must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. n1 If an action is commenced by one who is not the real party in interest,the district court must dismiss the action on objection of the opposition. n2 However, a court may not dismiss an action on this ground until a reasonable time has been allowed after objection for the real party to ratify commencement of the action or to be joined or substituted in the action. n3 Thus, ratification, joinder, or substitution has the same effect as if the action had been commenced in the name of the real party in interest. n4

[b] Requirements for Objection to Real Party Status

In order to have a claim dismissed on the ground that it is being prosecuted by one who is not the real party in interest, the party opposing the claim must object in a timely manner. n5 Otherwise, the court may deem the objection waived. n6 A determination of waiver is made on a case-by-case basis at the discretion of the court. n7

Rule 17 does not expressly specify a particular manner or deadline for a defendant to make a real party in interest objection. However, the courts have held that proper timing depends on how one characterizes the particular defense. Thus, a defendant may object to the original plaintiff's failure to prosecute in the name of the real party as an affirmative defense in its answer. n8 If joinder or substitution of the real party destroys subject matter jurisdiction, a defendant may raise the issue in a motion to dismiss, n9 which may be asserted at any time. n10

As a practical matter, a dispute regarding whether a claim is being prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest should be evident to a defendant at the beginning of the suit because the defendant almost always knows whether suit has been filed by the party who "owns" the claim. Therefore, Rule 17(a) suggests that a defendant must object in a timely manner to allow the joinder of the real party in interest. The earlier the defense is raised, the more likely any unnecessary expense of trial preparation for both parties can be avoided if a real party in interest question is determined adversely to a plaintiff. Early objection also furthers the goal of judicial efficiency. n11 The defending party should also realize that one of the primary factors in the court's determination of whether to dismiss the claim is whether prejudice will result from delay in raising the objection. n11.1

Most courts hold that the court may itself raise the real party objection, n12 and may also, sua sponte, determine that any real party objection has been waived. n13 However, other courts have held that it is the duty of the lawyers, not the court, to raise the objection. n14 The view that allows the trial court to raise real party objections sua sponte appears most consistent with the basic goal of the Rules of Civil Procedure to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. n15

[c] Exceptions to Dismissal Rule by Cure of Real Party Defect

[i] Options to Cure Real Party Defect

If a claimant is not the real party in interest, the court may not immediately dismiss the claim but must allow a reasonable time to rectify the defect. n16 The purpose of allowing the plaintiff this opportunity to cure is to prevent forfeiture when determination of the proper party to sue is difficult or when an understandable mistake has been made. n17

However, it should be noted that Rule 17(a) does not preclude dismissal for failure to sue in the name of the real party in interest. Instead, it simply provides that the claimant will have a "reasonable time" after objection in which to correct the defect. n18 Once a reasonable time has passed, failure to cure the defect is appropriate grounds for dismissal. n19

Rule 17 does not specify the length of a "reasonable time," but leaves that determination to the sound discretion of the court based on the particular procedural circumstances of the case. n20 In any event, the court must allow some time for cure, andin the event the court decides to exercise it discretion to dismiss, the court should set forth its grounds. For example, one circuit court held that the district court abused its discretion when it dismissed an action without explaining why the district court ruled that the less severe alternative of allowing an opportunity for ratification or joinder by the real party trustee was inappropriate. n20.1

[ii] Ratification

One method of curing a real party in interest defect is by ratification, which occurs when the real party in interest ratifies an action taken by another person as a representative of the real party and on behalf of the real party. n21 For example, if a representative party mistakenly sues in his or her own name, the representative is not the real party and has no standing to sue. However, the real party later may later ratify the action of the representative. n22

An effective ratification under Rule 17(a) requires the ratifying party to authorize continuation of the action and to agree to be bound by its result. Thus, the real party in interest may ratify by expressly consenting to the litigation by formally notifying the court n23 or through unambiguous conduct, such as, abandoning claims that are the subject of the lawsuit and allowing the litigation to continue. A ratification has the same effect as if the real party in interest had originally commenced the action. n24

A district court's decision whether a ratification by the real party in interest has occurred is reviewed under the abuse of discretion standard. n24.1

Ratification is not permitted if it would result in evasion of a substantive limitation on assignment of claims. n25 Furthermore, a real party in interest who is made a party after the action has been commenced is subject to jurisdiction requirements. Thus, ratification is not allowed by a real party in interest if it would destroy the court's jurisdiction; similarly, ratification may not be used to retroactively confer diversity jurisdiction. n26

[iii] Joinder of Real Party

The second method to cure a real party defect is to join the person who is the real party in interest. Thus, when a real party in interest has been omitted, the real party may move for his or her own joinder; n27 or, prior to dismissal, the claimant may cure the defect by joining the real party. n28 For example, when it is uncertain which of two claimants is the real party in interest, the court may join both. In such a case, the determination of the proper real party in interest may require an in-depth analysis of the nature of the injury claimed and must be left to the trial court. n28.1 In another example, the court may allow joinder of a purported assignee as a real party, provided that (1) the failure to include the assignee as a party plaintiff from the beginning was not the result of some artifice that resulted in prejudice to the defendant but instead was the result of a mistake as to the legal effectiveness of the documents allegedly assigning the claims to the assignee, (2) the defendant would not be surprised by the joinder, and (3) joinder of the assignee would not alter the complaint's factual allegations or substantially change the issues in the case. n29

[iv] Substitution of Real Party

The third and final option to cure a real party defect is to have the real party in interest substituted for the party named. n30 For example, in one case, the court found that amendments to the complaint would not change the fact that the real party in interest was not named as a party to the suit, and therefore, amending the complaint would be futile. The court concluded that the plaintiff had failed to name the real party in interest, and ordered that in the interest of justice, the court would allow the plaintiff 30 days to substitute the real party or to have that party ratify the commencement of the action. If the plaintiff failed to complete one of the options, the court would dismissthe suit. n31

Substitution under Rule 17 should be distinguished from Rule 25 substitution. Rule 17 applies only when proper parties have not been named in the suit, while Rule 25 applies only when the original parties were proper but a subsequent death or incapacity compelled substitution or there was a transfer of interest. n32 Substitution of plaintiffs under Rule 17 is liberally allowed by the court, especially when the change in parties is merely formal and in no way alters the original complaint's factual allegations as to the events or the participants. n33

[v] Any Cure of Real Party Defect Relates Back to Commencement of Suit

When a real party in interest has been made a party to the action by ratification, joinder, or substitution, the real party is deemed to have commenced the action. n34 Therefore, for statutes of limitation purposes, the entry of the real party as a party to the suit relates back to the date of the original pleading. n35 This curative rule, like similar provisions in Rule 15 regarding relation back of amended pleadings, permits correction of a formal defect without risk that the case will be barred as untimely. n36

The relation back doctrine applies in diversity cases even if a state-law prohibition exists. n37 This is consistent with the Supreme Court's preeminent holding that properly promulgated Federal Rules of Civil Procedure will apply even despite contrary state law. n38

[2] Certain Real Parties Entitled to Sue on Behalf of Another

[a] General Authorization

One of the most important aspects of Rule 17 is that it expressly provides that a person qualifying as a real party in interest may sue on behalf or for the benefit of another without joining the party for whose benefit the action is brought. n1 Rule 17 contains a list of real parties who are specifically authorized to act as representatives, including an executor, administrator, guardian, bailee, trustee of an express trust, or a party with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another; this list is merely illustrative and does not include all of the possible representatives. n2 The following is a list of representatives who are real parties when acting in a representative capacity:

- An executor or administrator may bring suit as the real party in interest on behalf of a decedent's estate, n3 and, in their state of appointment, executors and administrators must act as claimants for the estate. n4

- If a person lacks legal capacity, such as a minor or incompetent, he or she may be represented by a general guardian, who has power to act in the ward's stead, n4.1 or a guardian ad litem. n5 A guardian may sue in its own name without joining the party for whose benefit the action is brought; n6 however, the real party rule does not affect the legal status of a guardian. The substantive law of guardian and ward determines the rights and duties of a guardian. n7

- A bailee is a real party in interest entitled to sue on behalf of the bailor for a violation of the possessory interest in the bailed goods. n8 Whether or not a person is a bailee is determined according to the law of the state where the federal court is located. n9

- A trustee of an express trust is entitled to sue as a real party in interest on behalf of the trust beneficiaries. n10

- A representative who enters into a contract for the benefit of a third party is areal party in interest entitled to enforce that contract. The third party need not be joined in an enforcement action, even though that person holds the beneficial interest under the contract. n11 However, even though such actions are captioned in the real party representative's name, any recovery accrues to the third-party beneficiary. Counsel should also note that if substantive law confers a legally protected right on the third-party beneficiary, the beneficiary is also entitled to bring suit in its own behalf. n12

- A party authorized by statute. n12.1

- Court appointed receivers are real parties in interest entitled to sue on behalf of the party that they represent. n13

Real party representatives owe a fiduciary duty to parties they represent and have the affirmative obligation to adequately represent the parties' interests. As a real party in interest, a representative designated by statute may bring suit in its own name without joining the person for whose benefit the action is brought. However, although not joined in the suit, represented parties who ultimately benefit from the litigation are nevertheless bound by the judgment. n14

[b] Statutory Designation of Real Party Entitled to Sue in Representative Capacity

The federal rules expressly provide that when a state or federal statute authorizes a person to bring an action for the benefit of another, the person may bring an action in the person's name without joining the beneficiary. n15 When a federal statute provides that an action may be brought for another's use or benefit, the action must be brought in the name of the United States. n15.1 Statutorily defined representatives who fall within the real party in interest provision of Rule 17 include labor unions, n16 employers in workers' compensation cases, n17 bankruptcy trustees, n18 and state appointed representatives as proper claimants in wrongful death actions. n19

Under federal statutory law, certain actions must be brought in the name of the United States. n20 The United States brings these actions for the benefit of a class of citizens whose injury involves a federal interest. n21

A claimant whose case is governed by such a statute may be heard in federal court regardless of citizenship or amount in controversy. n22 Although the United States is the proper named plaintiff in such actions, real party status is a separate determination; whether the United States, the represented party, or both are considered real parties in interest in proceedings under these statutes is evaluated on a case-by-case basis. n23

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesReal Parties in InterestGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 17.10, 17.12 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Metal Processing, Inc. v. Humm, 56 F. Supp. 2d 455, 460-461 (D.N.J. 1999) ; see [b], below (requirements for objection).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1); see [c], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a) (real party provision permits reasonable time "after objection" for curing real party in interest defect); see, e.g., In re Rodeo Canon Dev. Corp., 362 F.3d 603, 608 (9th Cir. 2004) (objection must be raised at early time, because the real party must have the opportunity to step into the "unreal" party's shoes and should not be prejudiced by undue delay).

(n7)Footnote 6. Rogers v. Samedan Oil Corp., 308 F.3d 477, 484 (5th Cir. 2002) (defendant waived real party in interest defense under Rule 17(a) by failing to assert it until day before trial); Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Bachman, 894 F.2d 1233, 1235 (10th Cir. 1990) (failure to raise real party in interest defense in district court constituted waiver).

(n8)Footnote 7. Sun Refining & Mktg. Co. v. Goldstein Oil Co., 801 F.2d 343, 345 (8th Cir. 1986) (objection waived when raised after trial and defendant unable to articulate why it could not have been raised earlier).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3).

(n12)Footnote 11. Rogers v. Samedan Oil Corp., 308 F.3d 477, 483-484 (5th Cir. 2002) .

(n13)Footnote 11.1. Allegheny Int'l, Inc. v. Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 40 F.3d 1416, 1431 (3d Cir. 1994) (defendant's objection deemed waived due to delay and potential prejudice to plaintiff).

(n14)Footnote 12. Weissman v. Weener, 12 F.3d 84, 85-86 (7th Cir. 1993) (trial court may raise Rule 17(a) real party objection sua sponte).

(n15)Footnote 13. Ensley v. Cody Resources, Inc., 171 F.3d 315, 318 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n16)Footnote 14. Hartmann v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 9 F.3d 1207, 1214 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n17)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n18)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(3); Wieburg v. GTE Southwest Inc., 272 F.3d 302, 308-309 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n19)Footnote 17. In re Dygert, 232 B.R. 155, 158 (D. Minn. 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(3); Wieburg v. GTE Southwest Inc., 272 F.3d 302, 308-309 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n21)Footnote 19. Weissman v. Weener, 12 F.3d 84, 87 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 20. Price v. Crestar Sec. Corp., 44 F. Supp. 2d 351, 355-356 (D.D.C. 1999) (court allowed 30 days for plaintiffs to join or substitute real party in interest or to have real party in interest ratify commencement of action).

(n23)Footnote 20.1. Wieburg v. GTE Southwest Inc., 272 F.3d 302, 308-309 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n24)Footnote 21. Metal Processing, Inc. v. Humm, 56 F. Supp. 2d 455, 462 (D.N.J. 1999) (action brought by owner of tug and barge seeking indemnity from shipper for settlement which owner's insurers paid to third party for lost cargo would not be dismissed even though owner of tug and barge was not the real party in interest--subsequent to trial insurers ratified all actions taken by owner past and future).

(n25)Footnote 22. Dunmore v. United States, 358 F.3d 1107, 1112 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n26)Footnote 23. Icon Group v. Mahogany Run Dev. Corp., 829 F.2d 473, 478 (3d Cir. 1987) .

(n27)Footnote 24. Dunmore v. United States, 358 F.3d 1107, 1112 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n28)Footnote 24.1. Scheufler v. General Host Corporation, 126 F.3d 1261, 1272 (10th Cir. 1997) (district court's refusal to allow ratification was not abuse of discretion because under Kansas law, property interests of landowner and tenant are distinct, and one may not recover damages based on another's interests).

(n29)Footnote 25. Star Mfg. Co. v. Mancuso, 680 F. Supp. 1496, 1499 (D. Kan. 1988) (ratification denied because it would result in assignment of tort claim in violation of state law).

(n30)Footnote 26. See Associated Ins. Management Corp. v. Arkansas General Agency, Inc. 149 F.3d 794, 797 (8th Cir. 1998) (rather than addressing jurisdiction, Rule 17(a)'s allowance of continuation of lawsuit not brought by real party in interest when real party in interest ratifies it, relates only to proper parties).

(n31)Footnote 27. United States v. Thomas B. Bourne Assocs., 367 F. Supp. 919, 921-922 (E.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n32)Footnote 28. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 671 F.2d 810, 814 (4th Cir. 1982) ; Crown Life Ins. Co. v. Am. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, 830 F. Supp. 1097, 1100 (N.D. Ill. 1993) .

(n33)Footnote 28.1. Bank of Am., F.S.B. v. United States, 51 Fed. Cl. 500, 514-515 (2002) (when suit is commenced by one who arguably has interest in enforcement of claim and real party in interest is later brought into litigation, joinder of real party in interest relates back for limitations purposes to date of original pleading).

(n34)Footnote 29. Scheufler v. General Host Corp., 126 F.3d 1261, 1270 (10th Cir. 1997) (purported assignee allowed to join as real party in interest when joinder (1) would not prejudice defendant, (2) would have no effect on jury's function because parties stipulated they would divide damages between assignor and assignee after trial, and (3) was appropriate to avoid forfeiture of just claims); see Advanced Magnetics, Inc. v. Bayfront Partners, Inc., 106 F.3d 11, 18 (2d Cir. 1997) (corporation's motion to substitute real parties in interest on securities fraud claims should have been granted when claims and recovery sought were included in original complaint, and there was no indication that mistake as to legal effectiveness of assignment of claims to corporation was deliberate, tactical, or made in bad faith).

(n35)Footnote 30. Cover Note JHB92M10582079 v. Nautronix, Ltd., 79 F.3d 480, 484 (5th Cir. 1996) (if named plaintiffs were not real parties in interest at time original suit was filed, trial court's decision to permit substitution of real parties required by Rule 17(a)).

(n36)Footnote 31. Price v. Crestar Sec. Corp., 44 F. Supp. 2d 351, 355-356 (D.D.C. 1999) .

(n37)Footnote 32. Glickstein v. Sun Bank/Miami, N.A., 922 F.2d 666, 672 n.10 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n38)Footnote 33. Advanced Magnetics, Inc. v. Bayfront Partners, Inc., 106 F.3d 11, 20-21 (2d Cir. 1997) (corporation's motion to substitute selling shareholders as plaintiffs was in essence motion to substitute real parties in interest, and motion should have been granted when claims and recovery sought were included in original complaint, and when there was no evidence that mistake as to legal effectiveness of assignment of claims to corporation was deliberate, tactical, or made in bad faith).

(n39)Footnote 34. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(3).

(n40)Footnote 35. Corbin v. Blankenburg, 39 F.3d 650, 654 (6th Cir. 1994) (substitution of successor trustee relates back under Rule 17(a)).

(n41)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c) (rule of relation back of amendments).

(n42)Footnote 37. Davis v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 615 F.2d 606, 610 (4th Cir. 1980) (because relation back doctrine is outcome-determinative, federal rule controls).

(n43)Footnote 38. Hanna v. Plumer, 380 U.S. 460, 465, 85 S. Ct. 1136, 14 L. Ed. 2d 8 (1965) (in diversity cases, state law applies to substantive matters and federal rules apply to procedural issues).

(n44)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1).

(n45)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1); Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n46)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1)(A),(B); Matter of Davis, 194 F.3d 570, 577-578 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n47)Footnote 4. Krier-Hawthorne v. Beam, 728 F.2d 658, 661 (4th Cir. 1984) (Virginia state law required resident administrator as real party in interest to bring personal injury action).

(n48)Footnote 4.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(1).

(n49)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2).

(n50)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1).

(n51)Footnote 7. Long v. Sasser, 91 F.3d 645, 647 (4th Cir. 1996) (in action for medical malpractice, guardian was real party in interest on behalf of ward who was incapacitated by stroke).

(n52)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1)(D); Mitchell Coal Co. v. United Mine Workers of America, 313 F.2d 78, 78 (6th Cir. 1963) .

(n53)Footnote 9. Naghiu v. Inter-Continental Hotels Group, Inc., 165 F.R.D. 413, 419-420 (D. Del. 1996) (federal court located in Delaware applied substantive law of Delaware, including Delaware choice of law rules, to determine that Virginia law would control whether plaintiff was in fact bailee of cash when putative corporate bailor was based in Virginia; because plaintiff did not qualify as bailee under Virginia law, plaintiff failed to establish that he was real party in interest).

(n54)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1)(E); Green v. Lake of the Woods County, 815 F. Supp. 305, 307 (D. Minn. 1993) .

(n55)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1)(F); Orthopedic & Sports Injury Clinic v. Wang Labs., 922 F.2d 220, 227 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n56)Footnote 12. New Orleans Pub. Serv. v. United Gas Pipe Line, 732 F.2d 452, 466 n.30 (5th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1019 (1984) (when parties have agreed that third person is to benefit from contract, third person has relationship necessary to sue for recovery of any contractual benefits).

(n57)Footnote 12.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1)(G); see [b], below.

(n58)Footnote 13. Gross v. Hougland, 712 F.2d 1034, 1039 (6th Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1025 (1984) (receiver appointed for dissolved corporation was entitled to initiate lawsuit on behalf of corporation).

(n59)Footnote 14. Long v. Sasser, 91 F.3d 645, 647 (4th Cir. 1996) (preclusive effect of the representative's suit furthers purpose of real party in interest rule to protect defendant, after representative wins, from subsequent suits by represented party who stands to ultimately benefit from litigation).

(n60)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(1)(G).

(n61)Footnote 15.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a)(2).

(n62)Footnote 16. 29 U.S.C. § 185(b) (under Labor Management Relations Act, labor union may sue or be sued as entity, and in behalf of employees whom it represents.

(n63)Footnote 17. 33 U.S.C. § 933(b) (under Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, longshoremen's right to sue negligent third party for personal injury is assigned to employer under specified circumstances).

(n64)Footnote 18. 11 U.S.C. § 1109(b) (any party in interest, including debtor, trustee, creditor, or equity security holder, may raise and appear on any issue in bankruptcy case).

(n65)Footnote 19. 45 U.S.C. § 51 (personal representative of deceased employee entitled to sue carrier for benefit of next of kin); 46 U.S.C. § 761 (authorizing personal representative of decedent for benefit of dependents to sue in admiralty for wrongful death on high seas); Tex. Civil Practice & Rem. Code § 71.004(c) (Texas wrongful death statute gives administratrix of estate right to sue for wrongful death on behalf of statutory beneficiaries).

(n66)Footnote 20. See 40 U.S.C. § 270b(b) (Miller Act requires naming United States in actions brought on behalf of labormen and materialmen against contractors for federal public buildings and works).

(n67)Footnote 21. 25 U.S.C. § 201 (action brought on behalf of Native American traders).

(n68)Footnote 22. United States v. Tribal Dev. Corp., 49 F.3d 1208, 1212 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n69)Footnote 23. See United States v. SCS Business & Technical Institute, Inc., 173 F.3d 870, 883-884 (D.C. Cir. 1999) (both claimant and United States were real parties in interest in qui tam action brought under False Claims Act, even though Act required that suit be brought in name of United States; procedural question of name in which suit must be brought is distinct from substantive legal question whether plaintiff has cause of action as real party in interest).

5 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART I. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.04

§ 13.04 Jurisdiction Is Not Based on Real Party in Interest Rulen*

[1] Real Party in Interest Is Procedural Question

A determination of the real party in interest, who is the person under the substantive law who possesses the right under the claim, is a procedural and prudential issue, and is governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n1 It is not a jurisdictional issue, n2 and therefore may be waived. n3 The rule relates only to the procedural determination of the proper person to pursue a claim and the authority of the person to sue; however, in a diversity case, this determination must be made with reference to state substantive law. n3.1

Even if a person is the real party in interest with respect to a particular claim, the court must still have jurisdiction over the subject matter of the claim before it can hear it. In other words, the court must be able to exercise subject matter jurisdiction once the real party in interest has ratified or been joined or substituted in the action. n4 If multiple real parties in interest assert separate claims in the same action, each claim must satisfy subject matter jurisdiction independently. n5

[2] Real Party's Citizenship Does Not Necessarily Control for Diversity Jurisdiction Purposes

[a] Real Party Suing On Its Own Behalf

The determination of the parties' citizenship for purposes of diversity jurisdiction is not necessarily controlled by the citizenship of the Rule 17(a) real party in interest, who is the named party; rather, the citizenship of the real party controls provided that the real party is prosecuting the litigation on its own behalf, and not on behalf of another person. n1 The citizenship of a nominal party is disregarded for diversity purposes. Thus, when the question is which of various parties before the court should be considered in determining whether there is complete diversity of citizenship, the answer is generally determined by application of the "real party to the controversy" test: the "real parties to the controversy" are those persons who count for diversity purposes, n1.1 based on which persons could actually benefit, or be subject to liability, from the litigation. n1.2 Diversity must be complete between all of plaintiffs and all of defendants, but if one of the "nondiverse" parties is not a real party to the controversy and is a purely formal or nominal party, that party's presence may be ignored in determining jurisdiction. n2

[b] Real Party Suing On Behalf of Another Person

In contrast to a real party suing in its own behalf, when a real party is suing in a representative capacity, the citizenship of the represented party controls. n2.1 For example, the following scenarios illustrate the rule:

- In suits where a statutorily defined real party brings suit on behalf of someone else, the citizenship of the represented party and not the representative controls. Although the legal representative is the real party in interest, that party is deemed to have the citizenship of the one represented in the action. n3

- In actions by a decedent's estate, the decedent's citizenship controls. Although the decedent's legal representative is the real party in interest, the real party is deemed to have the citizenship of the decedent. n4

- When a real party brings an action on behalf of a person lacking legal capacity, the infant's or incompetent's citizenship controls. As a procedural matter, executors, administrators, and guardians may sue in their own names without joining the party for whose benefit the action is brought. With respect to diversity the legal representative of an infant or incompetent is deemed to be a citizen only of the same state as the represented party, the infant or incompetent. n4.1 Furthermore, the citizenship of a guardian and ward is determined as of the date the guardianship became effective, and the guardian may not establish a new domicile for the ward unless it is shown that the ward had capacity to form the intent to establish a new domicile for diversity purposes. n5

[3] Prohibition Against Collusion to Create Diversity Jurisdiction

[a] Application of Anti-Collusion Statute

A federal district court may not exercise jurisdiction over any civil action in which any party has been improperly or collusively made or joined to invoke the jurisdiction of the court by assignment or other means. n1 This federal anti-collusion statute is aimed at preventing parties from manufacturing diversity jurisdiction to inappropriately channel ordinary business litigation into the federal courts. n2

Collusion in regard to a question of the real party in interest usually arises in the context of an assignment. n2.1 Thus, even though an assignee who holds substantive rights under a valid assignment usually acquires real party status, the assignee will not have real party status if the assignment was merely a subterfuge to obtain federal diversity jurisdiction. In such a case, the citizenship of the assignee will not determine whether diversity of citizenship or alienage jurisdiction exists. n3

[b] Factors Considered by Court to Determine Collusion

Once the question of jurisdiction is raised, the party asserting diversity jurisdiction has the burden of proving the assignment was not collusive. The court may not rely on any single factor to determine whether an assignment was designed to manufacture federal jurisdiction but instead must consider the totality of the circumstances. n4

In making a determination of whether collusion has occurred in an assignment context, the courts consider, among other things, the assignee's lack of a previous connection with the claim assigned, the remittance by the assignee to the assignor of any recovery, whether the assignor actually controls the conduct of the litigation, the timing of the assignment, the lack of any meaningful consideration for the assignment, and the underlying purpose of the assignment. n5 In other words, one of the principal considerations is whether the assignee has received a authentic "stake" in the litigation. n6

[c] Effect of Determination of Collusion

When a court determines that a party has colluded to create diversity jurisdiction, the court will only deny the party a federal forum. The violation does not invalidate an otherwise valid assignment. n7 Furthermore, the anti-collusion statute prohibits collusive assignments intended to create federal jurisdiction but does not specifically apply to findings of collusion, when the collusive action is used in an attempt to destroy, rather than to create, federal jurisdiction. Consequently, some courts have acknowledge that a plaintiff may thwart a defendant's effort to remove a case from state to federal court by various methods, including assigning the claim to a plaintiff whose citizenship is not diverse from that of the defendant. n8

On the other hand, some courts have refused to relinquish jurisdiction when the plaintiff makes a partial assignment to a co-citizen of the defendant solely to defeat federal jurisdiction. n9 Thus, it has been held that federal courts are not required to permit collusive acts to defeat subject matter jurisdiction. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionFamily Law & Probate ExceptionsCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesReal Parties in InterestGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.13 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Stichting Ter Behartiging Van De Belangen Van Oudaandeelhouders in Het Kapitaal Van Saybolt Int'l B.V. v. Schreiber, 407 F.3d 34, 48-49 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Oscar Gruss & Son, Inc. v. Hollander, 337 F.3d 186, 193-194 (2d Cir. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 3. Ensley v. Cody Resources, Inc., 171 F.3d 315, 320 (5th Cir. 1999) (objection to fact that quantum meruit claim belonged to plaintiff's corporation rather than to plaintiff was procedural and not jurisdictional and could be waived).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Stichting Ter Behartiging Van De Belangen Van Oudaandeelhouders in Het Kapitaal Van Saybolt Int'l B.V. v. Schreiber, 407 F.3d 34, 48 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Glickstein v. Sun Bank/Miami, N.A., 922 F.2d 666, 668 n.3 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 5. HB Gen. Corp. v. Manchester Partners, 95 F.3d 1185, 1196 (3d Cir. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 1. National Ass'n of State Farm Agents, Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 201 F. Supp. 2d 525, 528-529 (D. Md. 2002) .

(n9)Footnote 1.1. *Lincoln Prop. Co. v. Roche, 546 U.S. 81, 126 S. Ct. 606, 163 L. Ed. 2d 415, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 9037, at *20-21 (2005) .

(n10)Footnote 1.2. See 17th St. Assocs., LLP v. Markel Int'l Ins. Co., 373 F. Supp. 2d 584, 594-595 (E.D. Va. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 2. Kuntz v. Lamar Corp., 385 F.3d 1177, 1183 (9th Cir. 2004) ; Certain Interested Underwriters at Lloyd's v. Layne, 26 F.3d 39, 42 (6th Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 2.1. *Lincoln Prop. Co. v. Roche, 546 U.S. 81, 126 S. Ct. 606, 163 L. Ed. 2d 415, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 9037, at 24 (2005) ; E.R. Squibb & Sons, Inc. v. Lloyd's & Cos., 241 F.3d 154, 161 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Zee Med. Distrib. Ass'n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1152-1153 (N.D. Cal. 1998 (distributors' association which filed suit seeking declaratory judgment against manufacturer was not "real party to the controversy" involving manufacturer's contracts with distributors; therefore, diversity jurisdiction would be determined based on citizenship of distributors); National Assn. of Realtors v. Natl. Real Estate Assn., 894 F.2d 937, 941-942 (7th Cir. 1990) (in action by association of realtors on behalfof its members charging National Real Estate Association with fraud in sale of malpractice insurance to its members, complete diversity could not exist if any individual member was co-citizen of defendant).

(n14)Footnote 4. Northern Trust Co. v. Bunge Corp., 899 F.2d 591, 594 (7th Cir. 1990) ; see James v. Three Notch Medical Center, 966 F. Supp. 1112, 1115-1116 (M.D. Ala. 1997) (court lacked diversity jurisdiction in wrongful death action, even though personal representative who brought action was citizen of Florida, when decedent and all defendants were citizens of Alabama).

(n15)Footnote 4.1. *Lincoln Prop. Co. v. Roche, 546 U.S. 81, 126 S. Ct. 606, 163 L. Ed. 2d 415, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 9037, at *24-25 (2005) ; see also Acridge v. Evangelical Lutheran Good Samaritan Soc'y, 334 F.3d 444, 449 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n16)Footnote 5. Long v. Sasser, 91 F.3d 645, 647 (4th Cir. 1996) (in medical malpractice action brought by guardian on behalf of ward, evidence supported finding that ward lacked requisite mental capacity to change his domicile for diversity purposes when stroke left ward completely mentally and physically incapacitated and unable to understand or conduct his affairs, and ward's son testified that his father did not participate at all in decision to move him to another state).

(n17)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1359; Piermont Heights v. Dorfman, 820 F. Supp. 99, 100 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (if person takes action other than assignment, such as merger, for purpose of manufacturing diversity jurisdiction, and without a legitimate business purpose apart from the creation of such jurisdiction, 28 U.S.C. § 1359 is violated).

(n18)Footnote 2. See Zee Med. Distrib. Ass'n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1158-1159 (N.D. Cal. 1998) ; Airlines Reporting Corp. v. S & N Travel, 58 F.3d 857, 862 (2d Cir. 1995) (cautious eye with which courts view assignments creating diversity ensures that parties do not inappropriately channel ordinary tort and contract litigation, essentially disputes of a local nature, into federal courts).

(n19)Footnote 2.1. See Deajess Med. Imaging, P.C. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 381 F. Supp. 2d 307, 310-311 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n20)Footnote 3. Kramer v. Caribbean Mills, Inc., 394 U.S. 823, 829-830, 89 S. Ct. 1487, 23 L. Ed. 2d 9 (1969) (in action involving Panamanian corporation that assigned its claim against another alien to Texas lawyer who paid one dollar for claim and agreed to give assignor Panamanian corporation 95 percent of recovery, Court held that jurisdiction failed because assignment violated statutory prohibition on collusive joinder, even though assignment was valid under state law).

(n21)Footnote 4. Airlines Reporting Corp. v. S and N Travel, Inc., 58 F.3d 857, 861 n.4 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n22)Footnote 5. Airlines Reporting Corp. v. S & N Travel, 58 F.3d 857, 863 (2d Cir. 1995) ; see also Toste Farm Corp. v. Hadbury, Inc., 70 F.3d 640, 643 (1st Cir. 1995) (to determine whether improper or collusive assignment has occurred, courts will consider whether parties have shown an independent business justification for assigning claim to diverse party); Pasquotank Action Council v. City of Virginia Beach, 909 F. Supp. 376, 383 (E.D. Va. 1995) (court must consider whether there was nominal or no consideration involved in transaction and interest retained by assignor); Haskin v. Corporacion Insular de Seguros, 666 F. Supp. 349, 353-354 (D.P.R. 1987) (assignee must have some independent, legitimate interest in dispute that predated assignment and was not complete stranger to transaction).

(n23)Footnote 6. See Deajess Med. Imaging, P.C. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 381 F. Supp. 2d 307, 311 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (court found no collusion when assignee plaintiffs owned claims in issue and if they were not successful in litigation, they would not be compensated for services they had provided).

(n24)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1359; see Kramer v. Caribbean Mills, Inc., 394 U.S. 823, 829-830, 89 S. Ct. 1487, 23 L. Ed. 2d 9 (1969) (in action involving Panamanian corporation that assigned its claim against another alien to Texas lawyer who paid one dollar for claim and agreed to give assignor Panamanian corporation 95 percent of recovery, Court held that jurisdiction failed because assignment violated statutory prohibition on collusive joinder, even though assignment was valid under state law).

(n25)Footnote 8. Verschell v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 257 F. Supp. 153, 154 (S.D.N.Y. 1966) (court allowed assignment to defeat diversity of citizenship jurisdiction).

(n26)Footnote 9. Grassi v. Ciba-Geigy, Ltd., 894 F.2d 181, 186 (5th Cir. 1990) (stating that because of their similarity, assignments which destroy diversity should be analyzed under the same standard as assignments which create diversity; that is, issue of whether assignment was improperly or collusively made is to be resolved as merely simple question of fact).

(n27)Footnote 10. McClanahan v. Snodgrass, 319 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Miss. 1970) (plaintiffs could not assign nominal interest in cause of action to individual with same citizenship as defendants in order to destroy diversity of citizenship and defeat right of defendants to trial in federal court); see also Attorneys Trust v. Videotape Computer Prods., 93 F.3d 593, 599 (9th Cir. 1996) (Taiwanese corporation's assignment solely for collection of action to California collection agency to pursue action against California corporation, in which assignee received twelve percent contingent fee, did not defeat jurisdiction).

6 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART I. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 13.05-13.09

[Reserved]

§§ 13.05[Reserved]

7 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.10

§ 13.10 General Principles Relating to Capacity to Litigaten*

The capacity of an individual or entity to sue or be sued means the legal capability or authority of a particular individual or entity to use, or to be brought into, the courts of a particular forum. n1 The most common examples of deficiencies that take away from a person legal capacity are minority n2 and insanity. Other capacity limitations arise from laws that place limits on the capacity of foreign corporations, n3 and on the capacity of unincorporated association to sue or be sued as an entity. n4

A lack of capacity to sue in federal court does not mean that a person will never have an enforceable remedy in federal court. Thus, even though a district court should dismiss a federal civil action with respect to a person who lacks capacity to sue under a state law, the dismissal should be without prejudice in those instances when it is necessary to preserve a claim that may later develop. Thus, in the case of lack of capacity due to minority, the dismissal should be without prejudice so that the minor may bring the action on reaching the age of majority. n5

Capacity to sue is distinct from real party in interest status, n6 in that capacity is a broader concept, aimed at assessing a party's general ability or power to sue or be sued. n7 The real party in interest inquiry is more specific, aimed at assessing whether the party is the holder of the right to be vindicated in a particular case. While all parties including plaintiffs and defendants must have capacity, only those asserting claims must be real parties in interest. n8

Capacity is also distinguishable from the doctrine of standing. Standing refers to the requirement that a party have a legally protectible and tangible interest at stake in the litigation. Parties with capacity to sue may not have standing to prosecute a particular action. n9

The capacity provision of Rule 17 prescribes which law determines a party's capacity. n10 As a general rule, whether a person has capacity is determined by state law in federal court, even though in particular instances federal law controls the question of capacity. n11 Capacity does not affect the substantive issue of choice of law. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesReal Parties in InterestGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Maysonet-Robles v. Cabrero, 323 F.3d 43, 51 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Debellis v. Kulp, 166 F. Supp. 2d 255, 283 (E.D. Pa. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Domino Media, Inc. v. Kranis, 9 F. Supp. 2d 374, 380-381 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Bradbury Co. v. Teissier-Ducros, 387 F. Supp. 2d 1167, 1176 (D. Kan. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Johns v. County of San Diego, 114 F.3d 874, 877-878 (9th Cir. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Marston v. American Employers Ins. Co., 439 F.2d 1035 (1st Cir. 1971) (whether executor, administrator, or guardian has power to sue is not affected by real party in interest rule, because that issue is question of capacity; therefore, even though Rule 17(a) provides that executor may sue on behalf of estate, that provision does not apply in local jurisdictions that have contrary laws).

(n8)Footnote 7. Poole v. Wolke, 58 F.R.D. 110, 112 (E.D. Wis. 1973) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See Zee Med. Distrib. Ass'n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1153 (N.D. Cal. 1998.

(n10)Footnote 9. Glickstein v. Sun Bank/Miami, N.A., 922 F.2d 666, 670 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b).

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b); see Kivalina Relocation Planning Comm. v. Teck Cominco Alaska, Inc., 227 F.R.D. 523, 526 (D. Alas. 2004) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(e).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Valedon Martinez v. Hosp. Presbiteriano, 806 F.2d 1128, 1133-1134 (1st Cir. 1986) .

8 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.11

§ 13.11 Procedural Considerations Regarding Capacityn*

[1] Objection Required to Lack of Capacity

Capacity defects are procedural and not jurisdictional; this means that the court may make rulings regarding a person even though the person lacks capacity to sue or be sued. n1 Claimants are not required to allege capacity. n2 The issue of capacity is raised only if an objecting party raises capacity by specific negative averment, n3 which must include any supporting details that are peculiarly within the pleader's knowledge. n4 If no party raises the issue of capacity, the court may deem the defense waived. n5 Because the determination of capacity is made according to the law of where the federal court sits, n6 capacity may be determined by the court before choice of law. Also, in addition, capacity does not affect the choice of what substantive law to apply to a case. n7

Furthermore, a timely capacity objection does not automatically require immediate dismissal by the court. The party lacking capacity may correct the defect by complying with applicable law, or by substituting a party with capacity. Such curative measures relate back to the time of filing. n8

[2] Loss of Capacity During Litigation

As one court explained, capacity is not only the power to bring an action but also the power to maintain it. Consequently, if a party loses capacity while litigation is pending, the court must dismiss the suit, n1 provided that the opposition objects. n2 For example, a representative's appointment automatically terminates when the person represented is relieved of the disability that led to its need for a representative. n3 Assuming that the claim survives the disability as a matter of substantive law, however, the action readily can be revived. Furthermore, if the capacity defect can be cured, the court should allow the cure, rather than dismiss. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsWaiver & PreservationCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 17.20, 17.28 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82; see Oscar Gruss & Son, Inc. v. Hollander, 337 F.3d 186, 194 (2d Cir. 2003) ; Zee Med. Distrib. Ass'n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1153 (N.D. Cal. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. Tesh v. United States Postal Serv., 215 F. Supp. 2d 1220, 1225-1226 (N.D. Okla. 2002) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(a) (governing pleading of capacity).

(n6)Footnote 5. Swaim v. Moltan Co., 73 F.3d 711, 718 (7th Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1244 (1996) ; see Masood v. Saleemi, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 2170, at 5-6 (9th Cir. Jan. 20, 2009) (unpublished opinion; citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3).

(n8)Footnote 7. Masood v. Saleemi, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 2170, at 6 (9th Cir. Jan. 20, 2009) (unpublished opinion; citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n9)Footnote 8. Garbincius v. Boston Edison Co., 621 F.2d 1171, 1174 (1st Cir. 1980) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Mather Constr. Co. v. United States, 475 F.2d 1152, 1155 (Ct. Cl. 1973) (corporation declared incompetent and case dismissed when corporation was suspended under state law for failure to pay taxes).

(n11)Footnote 2. See [1], above.

(n12)Footnote 3. JuShu Cheung v. Dulles, 16 F.R.D. 550, 553 (D. Mass. 1954) (when child reaches age of majority, child was no longer incapacitated individual and party should bring motion requesting court to remove representative).

(n13)Footnote 4. Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dept. of Health, 19 F. Supp. 2d 567, 575 (N.D. W. Va. 1998) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.12

§ 13.12 Capacity of Individual Acting in His or Her Own Behalfn*

[1] Capacity Controlled by Law of Domicile

When not acting in a representative capacity, the capacity of an individual to sue or to be sued is determined by the law of the individual's domicile. n1 An individual's domicile is determined as of the time of filing. n2 A person acquires a domicile within a particular state by being physically present in the state and either having the intention to make his or her home there indefinitely or having the absence of an intention to make his or her home elsewhere. n3 Thus, an individual may have only one domicile at a time. n4

A person may change domiciles only by establishing physical presence in another state and forming the intent to make that state the person's home. The intent part of the test is based on an individual's subjective intent to stay in that state and not to go elsewhere or to return to the old domicile. n5 The domicile test for capacity is the same test used to determine an individual's citizenship for diversity jurisdiction purposes. n6

The purpose of Rule 17(b)'s focus on domicile is to foster uniform treatment of an individual's capacity in all federal courts. Thus, an individual who has legal capacity under the law of the person's domicile state has capacity in every federal district court in the United States. The law of a foreign forum state has no relevance to an individual's competence to litigate. n7

[2] Exception for Suits Based on Federal Law

When a claim is based on a federal right, the rule that the law of the domicile controls capacity may be preempted by the federal law. For example, some courts have held that the policies underlying the federal civil rights statutes mandate exceptions to the rule that an individual's capacity is determined by the law of the state of the person's domicile. Thus, when a state law strips a prisoner of capacity to sue, courts have held that the prisoner is nonetheless guaranteed a right to be heard in federal court on claims of civil rights violations. n1 Similarly, suits to compel arbitration under the Federal Arbitration Act may be brought by persons or entities lacking capacity under state law. n2

This exception may also apply in cases when the defendant is asserting a lack of capacity to be sued. Thus, in a Title VII action against individual county commissioners alleging racial discrimination in hiring, the district court allowed the plaintiffs to proceed against individual defendants based on civil rights policy grounds even though the local capacity law provided that only the county had the capacity to be sued. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(1); see Thomas v. Humfield, 916 F.2d 1032, 1034 (5th Cir. 1990) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Bowen v. Rubin, 213 F. Supp. 2d 220, 223 (E.D.N.Y. 2001) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n3)Footnote 2. Valedon Martinez v. Hosp. Presbiteriano, 806 F.2d 1128, 1132-1134 (1st Cir. 1986) (in diversity medical malpractice action, domicile tested at time suit is filed).

(n4)Footnote 3. Stifel v. Hopkins, 477 F.2d 1116, 1120 (6th Cir. 1973) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Cassens v. Cassens, 430 F. Supp. 2d 830, 834 (S.D. Ill. 2006) (also noting that intent to change domicile may itself be affected by capacity).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Long v. Sasser, 91 F.3d 645, 647 (4th Cir. 1996) (stroke rendered ward incapable of having capacity to form intent to establish new domicile; therefore, guardian could not establish new domicile for ward).

(n7)Footnote 6. Certain Interested Underwriters at Lloyd's v. Layne, 26 F.3d 39, 41 (6th Cir. 1994) (citizenship of natural person is equated with natural person's domicile for purposes of determining diversity).

(n8)Footnote 7. Urbano v. News Syndicate Co., 358 F.2d 145, 146 (2d Cir. 1966) , cert. denied, 385 U.S. 831 (1966) (under conflict-of-law principles, capacity to sue of plaintiff who is incarcerated for life is determined not by law of state in which prisoner is incarcerated, but by law of state in which prisoner was domiciled before incarceration).

(n9)Footnote 1. McCollum v. Mayfield, 130 F. Supp. 112, 116 (N.D. Cal. 1955) (in action by prisoner against state officials for violation of federal constitutional rights, court permitted plaintiff to sue despite civil death statute of plaintiff's domicile which stripped prisoner of capacity while incarcerated).

(n10)Footnote 2. O & Y Landmark Assocs. of Va. v. Nordheimer, 725 F. Supp 578, 581 (D.D.C. 1989) (District of Columbia partnership without right under District law could sue in its own name under Federal Arbitration Act).

(n11)Footnote 3. Wright v. Manatee County, 717 F. Supp. 1493, 1495-1497 (M.D. Fla. 1989) ; but see Dean v. Barber, 951 F.2d 1210, 1215 (11th Cir. 1992) (refusing to extend partnership or other unincorporated association exception of Rule 17(b)(1) to cover county sheriff's department; applying Alabama law, court held that defendant county sheriff's department lacked capacity to be sued and hence federal civil rights claims against it were properly dismissed).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.13

§ 13.13 Capacity of Person Acting in Representative Capacityn*

[1] Capacity Controlled by State Law Where Federal Court is Located

When a party sues in a representative capacity, its capacity to sue on behalf of its members is determined by the law of the state in which the federal district court sits, regardless of whether the party is a corporation or an individual. n1 Because the determination of capacity is made according to the law of where the federal court sits, capacity may be determined by the court even before any choice of law determination. n1.1 The general rule that capacity of a representative is determined by the law of the state in which the federal district sits applies to all fiduciary representatives, including trustees, executors, administrators, guardians and public officers. In its state of appointment, a representative designated by statute has capacity to sue on behalf of the represented person or entity. n2 This rulesacrifices uniform federal court treatment in deference to local law governing capacity of representatives. Thus, a valid state court judgment appointing a fiduciary is binding on the federal court, which may not question the validity the state court's appointment. n3

By statute, some states allow fiduciaries appointed in other states, such as executors, administrators, and guardians, to sue and be sued in their state. Of the states that allow such foreign representatives to sue and be sued in their state, many require the foreign representatives to comply with local qualification requirements. In such states, the foreign representative has capacity to litigate claims arising under the state law in a federal court sitting in that state only if that representative complies with the conditions of the forum state law. n4

[2] Exception for Suits Based on Federal Law

If a claim arises under federal law, federal statutes may govern the issue of representative capacity. n0.1 Thus, if a federal statute specifically grants a representative an enforceable right, the representative seeking to enforce or defend against that right has capacity notwithstanding contrary forum state law. n1 However, in such cases, the representative must still comply with any forum state capacity requirements with respect to any claim arising under state law that are not preempted by federal law. Thus, a representative may have capacity to sue in a foreign forum under a federal law but lack capacity to sue the same claimant on a state law claim. n2

Once a claim is properly brought against a party, that party's capacity is established, and properly joined parties may assert all claims against their opponents. In other words, once the capacity rule is satisfied, federal joinder rules apply without further inquiry into a party's capacity to assert a particular claim under state law. For example, if applicable state law recognizes the capacity of a fiduciary representative to defend but not to assert claims, the rules permit the fiduciary to assert a counterclaim notwithstanding local law. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesExecutorsCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGuardiansCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesRepresentativesCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesTrustees

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.22 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3).

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Masood v. Saleemi, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 2170, at 5 (9th Cir. Jan. 20, 2009) (unpublished opinion; citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 2. Rives v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 792 F.2d 1324, 1329 (5th Cir. 1986) (under Rule 17(b), trusteeappointed in locale of deceased husband's estate had capacity to recover life insurance policy benefits).

(n5)Footnote 3. Hembree v. Tinnin, 807 F. Supp. 109, 111 (D. Kan. 1992) (in wrongful death action, holding that district court could not review validity of appointment of decedent's father as administrator of estate).

(n6)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Davis v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 615 F.2d 606, 609-610 (4th Cir. 1980) (in wrongful death action brought in North Carolina by executor appointed in Alabama, foreign administrator lacked capacity to prosecute or defend absent qualification as ancillary administrator).

(n7)Footnote 0.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3)

(n8)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Metropolitan Paving Co. v. Int'l Union of Operating Engineers, 439 F.2d 300, 303 (10th Cir. 1971) (corporation may maintain action against labor union for violation of federal labor law regardless of forum law); AM Properties Corp. v. GTE Products Corp., 844 F. Supp. 1007, 1011-1012 (D.N.J. 1994) (CERCLA preempts state statutes regarding capacity of dissolved corporation).

(n9)Footnote 2. Adidas America, Inc. v. National Collegiate Athletic Association, 40 F. Supp. 2d 1275, 1287 (D. Kan. 1999) (although unincorporated associations could be sued in their own names for purposes of enforcing federal right, such associations could not be sued for violations of state law).

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 18 (joinder).

11 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.14

§ 13.14 Capacity of Public Officersn*

[1] Capacity of State and Federal Officers

The capacity of an officer of a state, or of a political subdivision of a state, is determined by the law of the state in which the district court is held. n1 In determining what the state law is, the federal court should follow intermediate appellate decisions unless convinced that the highest state court would rule otherwise. n2 To determine the capacity of an officer or entity to sue or be sued under the state law under which the official position or entity was created, the federal court may also rely on precedential decisions of the federal courts that have made that capacity determination under the applicable state law. n3

While the capacity of state and local officers is determined by the law of the state in which the federal court is held, the capacity of federal officers is determined by the federal statutes that confer federal subject matter jurisdiction over cases by and against federal officers. n4 These statutes are a "safety net" that gives district courts general subject matter jurisdiction over actions brought by or against the United States; other special jurisdictional provisions of other federal statutes may also give district courts jurisdiction over some cases brought by the United States. These grants of subject matter jurisdiction also provide federal officers with the requisite capacity to engage in litigation. n5

[2] Effect of Immunity on Official and Individual Capacity

With respect to officers' immunity from suit, statutes may protect a public officer from being sued in an official capacity; however, they do not necessarily protect that same public officer from being sued in a personal, individual capacity for acts performed in an official capacity. n1 Furthermore, when an officer is sued the circumstances may require that the court apply different standards in the case, one standard to determine possible liability of the officer in his or her official capacity and one standard for liability in his or her individual capacity.

To establish liability of an officer in his or her official capacity in a civil rights case under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, for example, the plaintiff must demonstrate a direct causal link between an unconstitutional governmental policy or custom, and the alleged constitutional deprivation of the plaintiff's civil rights. On the other hand, to establish liability of an officer in his or her individual capacity, the plaintiff must demonstrate that the officer personally caused or participated in an alleged constitutional deprivation, which the plaintiff may establish by demonstrating that the officer acted with a deliberate or reckless disregard of the plaintiff's constitutional rights or that the conduct causing the constitutional deprivation occurred at the officer's direction or with the officer's knowledge and consent. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsClaims By & AgainstGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsEmployees & OfficialsGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsClaims By & AgainstGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsEmployees & Officials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 17.23, 17.27 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b); Dean v. Barber, 951 F.2d 1210, 1214-1215 (11th Cir. 1992) (refused to extend "partnership or other unincorporated association" exception of Rule 17(b)(1) to cover county sheriff's department; applying Alabama law, court held that defendant county sheriff's department lacked capacity to be sued, and hence federal civil rights claims against it were properly dismissed).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Cooper v. American Airlines, Inc., 149 F.2d 355, 357 (2d Cir. 1945) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Jacobs v. Port Neches Police Dept., 915 F. Supp. 842, 844 (E.D. Tex. 1996) (federal court relied on decisions of other federal courts to determine that, under Texas law, county sheriff and police departments generally are not legal entities capable of suing or being sued absent express action by superior corporation--which was county, in case of sheriff's department).

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1345, 1346.

(n6)Footnote 5. U.S. v. American Druggists' Ins. Co., 627 F. Supp. 315, 319 (D. Md. 1985) (court had subject matter jurisdiction over action under 28 U.S.C. § 1345, which confers on district courts general subject matter jurisdiction over suits commenced by United States or by federal agencies or officers authorized to sue by federal statute).

(n7)Footnote 1. Hafer v. Melo, 502 U.S. 21, 23-29 112 S. Ct. 358, 116 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1991) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Glass v. Fairman, 992 F. Supp. 1040, 1043-1044 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (in civil rights action based on alleged inadequate medical treatment of plaintiff's burns incurred while plaintiff was in custody, single instance of allegedly improper medical care was not enough to satisfy requirement of showing governmental policy leading to constitutional deprivation; also, because defendant was not supervisory official responsible for operation of county medical facility at which prisoner suffered allegedly inadequate medical treatment, defendant could not be held liable in his individual capacity).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.15

§ 13.15 Capacity of Receiversn*

[1] Capacity of Receiver Appointed by State Determined by Law of Forum State

Receivers are fiduciaries appointed to represent entities, such as inoperative business organizations and estates. n1 The capacity of a state-appointed receiver is determined by the law of the state in which the district court is held. n2 Whether litigating federal or state claims, only the law of the state in which the case is pending, and not the state in which the receiver was appointed, may grant capacity. n3 This treatment is consistent with that of fiduciaries such as trustees and executors when suing in their state of appointment, where Rule 17 also adopts local law with respect to issues of capacity. n4

[2] Capacity of Federal Receiver Determined by Federal Law

The capacity of a receiver appointed by a federal court to sue and be sued is governed by the federal statutes discussed in the following paragraphs. n1 Federal receivers have capacity to sue or be sued without ancillary appointment in a district court. n2

Section 754 specifically provides that a receiver appointed in any civil action or proceeding involving property, real, personal or mixed, situated in different districts is vested with complete jurisdiction and control of all such property with the right to take possession of the property after giving bond as required by the court; the receiver has capacity to sue in any district without ancillary appointment, and may be sued with respect to the property as provided in Section 959. n3

Section 959 provides that receivers may be sued without leave of the court appointing them, with respect to any of their acts or transactions in carrying on business connected with the property. Such actions are subject to the general equity power of the court so far as necessary to the ends of justice but may not deprive a party of the right to trial by jury. n4 It has been held that a receiver appointed by a court in a foreign country also has capacity to sue in a United States federal district court. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsDissolution & ReceivershipReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesRepresentativesCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsReceiversPowers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.24 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Gross v. Hougland, 712 F.2d 1034, 1038 (6th Cir. 1983) (receiver may be viewed as corporate counterpart of administrator; receiver is appointed to represent defunct corporation and may, for example, be responsible for liquidating remaining assets of dissolved corporation).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. Gross v. Hougland, 712 F.2d 1034, 1040 (6th Cir. 1983) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3); see also Estate of Butler v. Maharishi Univ. of Mgmt., 460 F. Supp. 2d 1030, 1036 (S.D. Iowa 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3)(B); see 28 U.S.C. § 754; 28 U.S.C. § 959(a).

(n7)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 66; see also 28 U.S.C. § 754; 28 U.S.C. § 959(a).

(n8)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 754.

(n9)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 959(a).

(n10)Footnote 5. Mentink v. World Time Corp., 131 F.R.D. 210, 211 (S.D. Fla. 1990) (rationale of Rule 17(b) and 28 U.S.C. § 754 extended to authorize suit without ancillary appointment brought by receiver who had been appointed by High Court of Holland).

13 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.16

§ 13.16 Capacity of Business Entitiesn*

[1] Capacity of Corporation Acting on Its Own Behalf

[a] Capacity Generally Determined by Law of State of Corporation

When a corporation is acting on its own behalf, its capacity to sue or be sued is determined by the law under which it was organized. n1 Thus, if the corporation is federally incorporated, federal law determines its capacity to sue or be sued. n2 For a private domestic corporation, this provision usually refers to the state in which the company was incorporated.

Subject to local statutes which deny court access to businesses not qualified to do business in the state, a corporation with capacity in its state of incorporation has capacity in every federal district court in the United States. n3 Thus, under Rule 17(b),a corporation organized in State A, having capacity to sue or be sued in the courts of State A, has like capacity in a federal court in State B and State C, irrespective of any restriction on capacity placed on it by the laws of those states. The rule that the capacity of a corporation to sue or be sued must be determined by the law of the state under which it was organized is thus applicable to suits in all federal courts, unless the action is based on some specific federal statute that overrides Rule 17(b). n4

If a corporation has dissolved, it has capacity to litigate only if permitted by the law of its state of incorporation. n5 Similarly, a corporation that has had its charter revoked or forfeited is subject to the capacity rules of its state of incorporation. n6 Such former entities have capacity only if the law of the state of incorporation so provides. Most states limit the capacity of a dissolved corporation, often providing that it may sue or be sued only for a particular, specified period after dissolution. Some states treat defunct corporations as unincorporated associations. n7

[b] Capacity of Corporation Doing Business in Foreign State

In diversity of citizenship cases, corporate capacity is subject to valid statutory provisions of the forum state that deny court access to businesses not qualified to do business in the state; n8 these are known as "door closing" provisions. n9 For example, a corporation incorporated in State A with capacity to sue under the law of State A, might bring suit in a federal court in State B invoking diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. If State B has a statute that denies foreign corporations the right to sue in State B unless they have qualified to do business in State B, the foreign corporation may not sue in State B's federal court, even though it would otherwise have capacity under Rule 17. In other words, such a corporation would have capacity but no enforceable right. n10

[c] Federal Statute May Prevail Over State Capacity Law

Public policy considerations forming the basis of a federal statute, such as those underlying federal environmental statutes, may provide that the statute will prevail over conflicting state-of-incorporation restrictions on corporate capacity. Thus, even a corporation that lacks capacity to be sued under state law may be sued in a defensive capacity for violations of federal hazardous waste regulations. Most of these cases arise under the Comprehensive Environmental Response Compensation and Liability Act (CERLCA), which imposes joint and several liability on any party involved in the transportation, storage or disposal of toxic waste pollutants. n11 If state capacity law prevailed, a corporation could avoid liability for creating toxic environmental damage pollution by dissolving. n12 However, most courts recognize that if a corporation's assets have been completely distributed, nothing will be recovered from the corporation under CERCLA. n13

[2] Capacity of Corporation Acting in Representative Capacity

When a corporation is acting in a representative capacity, such as when acting as a trustee, executor, administrator, or guardian, its capacity to sue and be sued is determined by the law of the state in which the federal district court is located. n1 This rule also applies when the corporation is acting on behalf of its members. n2 Thus, while the capacity provision of Rule 17 distinguishes between individuals acting as representatives and individuals acting on their own behalf, it makes no such similar distinction regarding corporations. n3

[3] Capacity of Government Corporations and Entities

The federal government forms federal corporations to act as its agencies and toperform many of its functions. The federal government sometimes even forms corporations under state law to perform federal governmental tasks. n1 State and local governments also incorporate agencies for the same purpose. Rule 17 treats such entities in the same way as private corporations; therefore, the capacity of a government corporation is determined by the law under which it as organized. n2

The capacity of a corporation created by federal statute or chartered by another federal corporation is determined by the law under which it is formed. If neither the legislation nor the charter itself contains a restriction on capacity, a court will presume that the federal corporation may sue and be sued in an unrestricted manner. n3 Similarly, the capacity of an entity charted by a state is determined by the state's law creating the entity. n4

Political subdivisions of a state or local government have capacity only if the law creating them recognizes them as separate legal entities having capacity to sue or be sued. n5 The District of Columbia is treated as a state, so a government corporation formed under the general corporation law of the District of Columbia has the same capacity as any other corporation formed under that law. n6

[4] Capacity of Partnerships and Other Unincorporated Entities

[a] Capacity to Litigate State Law Claims

Partnerships are treated differently than corporations because, while a corporation has a distinct legal personality and distinct interests, partnerships and other unincorporated associations remain mere collections of individuals. n1 Partnerships and other unincorporated associations have the capacity to litigate claims in federal court that arise under state law if allowed and as determined by the law of the state in which the district court is held. Thus, some states allow unincorporated associations, such as partnerships and labor unions, to sue and be sued in their common name, and they have capacity in the federal courts of that state. n2 However, other states follow the common-law rule that prohibits an unincorporated entity to sue or be sued as an entity and requires the joinder of all its members. This issue is determined according to the law of the state where the action is pending and not the law of the state in which the association was formed. n3

[b] Capacity to Litigate Federal Claims

If the law of the state where the district court is located provides that a partnership or other unincorporated association lacks capacity, the entity may still sue or be sued in its common name for the purpose of enforcing, for or against the entity, a substantive right existing under the Constitution or laws of the United States. n4 Under this rule, a partnership or other unincorporated association may sue or be sued on a federal claim in its common name regardless of state law. n5

Whether a federal claim is involved is an inquiry similar to the evaluation of whether a case "arises under" federal law for purposes of invoking federal question jurisdiction. Although the provision applies broadly to a "partnership or other unincorporated association," it does not apply to every entity that is not incorporated; for example, the rule does not apply to an unincorporated governmental entity. n6 The question of what constitutes a partnership or unincorporated association with capacity to bring a federal claim is governed by federal law. n7

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allow class action suits by unincorporated associations that would otherwise be prohibited under state law; thus, Rule 23.2 provides that an unincorporated association may bring suit in its common namethrough the named class representatives. n8 Although Rule 23.2 does not confer capacity on an association that it does not otherwise have, it provides the association with another method to litigate its claims through a representative. If the unincorporated association qualifies for treatment as a class and can name as representatives only members who are of diverse citizenship from the opposing party, the association may bring suit in federal court. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsFormationCorporate Existence, Powers & PurposePowersLitigationBusiness & Corporate LawLimited Liability CompaniesFormationBusiness & Corporate LawLimited Liability PartnershipsBusiness & Corporate LawLimited PartnershipsFormationCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 17.26 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. American National Red Cross v. S.G., 505 U.S. 247, 112 S. Ct. 2465, 120 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1992) .

(n4)Footnote 3. United States v. Northeastern Pharm. & Chem. Co., 810 F.2d 726, 746 (8th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 848 (1987) (capacity of corporation to sue or be sued is determined by the law under which it is organized).

(n5)Footnote 4. Citizens Electric Corp. v. Bituminous Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 68 F.3d 1016, 1019 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Deerfield Specialty Papers v. Black Clawson Co., 751 F. Supp. 1578, 1581 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) (because Delaware law permits dissolved corporation period in order to wind up affairs after dissolution, counterclaim against dissolved corporation for contract work in quantum meruit permitted).

(n7)Footnote 6. F.D.I.C. v. Heidrick, 812 F. Supp. 586, 592-593 (D. Md. 1992) , aff'd on other grounds, 995 F.2d 471 (4th Cir. 1993) (summary judgment granted because Maryland law provided that Maryland corporation with revoked charter lacked capacity to sue).

(n8)Footnote 7. Committee for Idaho's High Desert v. Yost, 92 F.3d 814, 819-820 (9th Cir. 1996) (corporation with forfeited charter had capacity as unincorporated association, even though corporation with forfeited charter lacked capacity under state law).

(n9)Footnote 8. Woods v. Interstate Realty Co., 337 U.S. 535, 538, 69 S. Ct. 1235 (1949) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Angel v. Bullington, 330 U.S. 183, 190-191, 67 S. Ct. 657 (1947) (courts sitting in diversity must apply state "door-closing" statute prohibiting individual's recovery in state court of deficiency judgment under mortgage).

(n11)Footnote 10. Woods v. Interstate Realty Co., 337 U.S. 535, 538, 69 S. Ct. 1235 (1949) (in action where state statute barred foreign corporations from bringing in-state suits if not qualified to transact business in forum state, court held that when one is barred from recovery in state court, one is likewise barred in federal court).

(n12)Footnote 11. See 42 U.S.C. § 9607.

(n13)Footnote 12. AM Properties Corp. v. GTE Prods. Corp., 844 F. Supp. 1007, 1011-1012 (D.N.J. 1994) (CERCLA prevails over state statutes on capacity of dissolved corporation).

(n14)Footnote 13. Traverse Bay Area Intermediate Sch. Dist. v. Hitco, Inc., 762 F. Supp. 1298, 1301-1302 (W.D. Mich. 1991) (while CERCLA liability may generally be imposed on dissolved corporation, dissolved corporation whose assets have been fully distributed is beyond reach of CERCLA); see Chesapeake and Potomac Tel. Co. v. Peck Iron & Metal Co., 814 F. Supp. 1285, 1291 (E.D. Va. 1993) (distinguishing between "dead" and "dead and buried" corporations, court is compelled to dismiss dissolved corporation that in fact proves that it is dead and buried).

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b).

(n16)Footnote 2. Zee Med. Distrib. Ass'n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1153 (N.D. Cal. 1998) .

(n17)Footnote 3. Zee Med. Distrib. Ass'n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1153 (N.D. Cal. 1998) (regardless of whether party is corporation or individual, when party acts in representative capacity, its capacity is determined by law of state in which federal district court sits); Clarkson Co., Ltd. v. Rockwell Int'l Corp., 441 F. Supp. 792, 795-796 (N.D. Cal. 1977) (Rule 17(b) has generally been construed to eliminate distinction between individuals acting in representative capacity and corporations acting in representative capacity, with result that question of capacity of any entity acting as representative is governed by law of state in which court presides).

(n18)Footnote 1. American Nat'l Red Cross v. S.G., 505 U.S. 247, 258-260, 112 S. Ct. 2465, 120 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1992) (discussion of functions of federally chartered corporations).

(n19)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b).

(n20)Footnote 3. Keifer & Keifer v. Reconstruction Fin. Corp., 306 U.S. 381, 394-396, 59 S. Ct. 516, 83 L. Ed. 784 (1939) (governmental corporation held liable for failure to provide adequate food and water to livestock under bailment contract; court found that governmental corporations organized by other federal corporations have capacity in absence of contrary charter provision).

(n21)Footnote 4. Hoisington v. County of Sullivan, 55 F. Supp. 2d 212, 214 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (federal courts must look to state law to determine whether state or local government department may be sued; in this case, municipal department was not amenable to suit under state law which provided that department of municipal entity is merely subdivision of municipality and has no separate legal existence); Hearn v. Hudson, 549 F. Supp. 949, 952 n.1 (W.D. Va. 1982) (under state law, city police department was merely organizational division of city and not independent entity, and therefore lacked capacity to be sued).

(n22)Footnote 5. Hughson v. County of Antrim, 707 F. Supp. 304, 306 (W.D. Mich. 1988) (county sheriff's department and prosecutor's office lacked capacity to be sued because sheriff and prosecutor are individual, constitutional officers elected according to state constitution); Latino Political Action Comm. v. City of Boston, 581 F. Supp. 478, 484 (D. Mass. 1984) (city council did not have capacity to be sued in suit challenging election district plan because under state law city council lacked its own legal identity).

(n23)Footnote 6. Sloan Shipyards Corp. v. United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corp., 258 U.S. 549, 570, 42 S. Ct. 386, 66 L. Ed. 762 (1922) .

(n24)Footnote 1. Zee Med. Distrib. Ass'n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1155 (N.D. Cal. 1998) .

(n25)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3); see Creek v. Village of Westhaven, 80 F.3d 186, 191-192 (7th Cir. 1996) (Illinois law permits partnership to sue or be sued in own name); Roby v. Corporation of Lloyd's, 796 F. Supp. 103, 110 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (New York law allows suit in common name of insurance association).

(n26)Footnote 3. Northbrook Excess & Surplus Ins. Co. v. Medical Malpractice Joint Underwriting Ass'n of Mass., 900 F.2d 476, 477 (5th Cir. 1990) (under Rule 17(b), capacity of unincorporated association to sue or be sued is determined by law of state in which district court is located); Country Club Assocs. Ltd. Partnership v. F.D.I.C., 918 F. Supp. 429, 438 (D.D.C. 1996) (under Rule 17(b), capacity to sue of partnership or unincorporated association is determined by law in district where the court sits; in District of Columbia, partnership is not jural entity capable of suing or being sued).

(n27)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3)(A).

(n28)Footnote 5. See Bowers v. NCAA, 9 F. Supp. 2d 460, 472 (D.N.J. 1998) (unincorporated association, including collegiate athletic association, could be sued in its common name for purpose of enforcing against it substantive right existing under federal law or Constitution).

(n29)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(3)(A); see, e.g., Dean v. Barber, 951 F.2d 1210, 1214 (11th Cir. 1992) (in action by prisoner alleging constitutional rights violations, court dismissed claim because Rule 17(b)(1) did not apply to unincorporated sheriff's department that lacked capacity under Alabama law).

(n30)Footnote 7. Committee for Idaho's High Desert v. Yost, 92 F.3d 814, 820 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n31)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2.

(n32)Footnote 9. See Northbrook Excess & Surplus Ins. Co. v. Medical Malpractice Joint Underwriting Ass'n of Mass., 900 F.2d 476, 478 (1st Cir. 1990) (Rule 23.2 provides method for association to sue or be sued through representative when state law prevents association from doing so in its own name).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.17

§ 13.17 Incapacity Due to Infancy or Incompetencyn*

[1] Effect of Incapacity of Infants and Incompetents

[a] Incapacity Allows Appointment of Representative

Under Rule 17(b)(1), an individual's capacity to sue or be sued when not acting in a representative capacity is determined by the law of the individual's domicile. n1 If that law denies capacity to the individual on the grounds of infancy or incompetency, the litigation of the individual's rights in federal court is subject to the provisions of Rule 17(c). n2 Thus, whenever an individual lacks capacity to sue or be sued under the law of the individual's domicile because the individual is underage or is otherwise incompetent, the provisions of Rule 17(c) become effective, and the minor or incompetent person must sue or be sued through his or her legal representative n3 or, if he or she has no legal representative, through a next friend or guardian ad litem. n3.1

In particular, if the minor or other incompetent person has a representative appointed by law, such as a guardian, committee, conservator, or other similar fiduciary, that representative may sue or defend on behalf of the minor or incompetent person. n4 A minor or incompetent who has no properly appointed representative may sue by a next friend or by a guardian ad litem. n5 If a minor or incompetent is sued and is not represented in the action, the court must appoint a guardian ad litem or make some other proper order to protect the minor or incompetent. n6

The function of the representative or guardian ad litem is to make decisions concerning the litigation on behalf of the minor or incompetent person, n7 and not necessarily to represent the person as an attorney. Furthermore, a parent, representative, or guardian ad litem who is not an attorney may not appear as an attorney in the litigation. n8

If a general guardian fails or refuses to sue or defend in a particular case, or if there is a conflict of interest between the minor or incompetent person and the guardian or next friend, federal courts may appoint a guardian or attorney ad litem to protect the interest of the represented party in the case. n9

[b] Court's Decision to Protect Persons Lacking Capacity Is Discretionary

The requirement of Rule 17(c) that the district court must protect the interests of persons lacking legal capacity does not mean that the court must appoint a representative whenever requested by a party. n9.1 The federal court may make any other order as it deems proper for the protection of the infant or incompetent person. n9.2 The court has discretion to determine if it is necessary to appoint a guardian, and the court need only inquire whether the incompetent's interests are adequately protected. n10 Thus, when a request for a guardian ad litem is made, some action must be taken on the record before a court proceeds on the merits of the claims, but the court need not necessarily appoint a guardian before actually deciding the merits. n11

In some states and in certain circumstances, cases sometimes consider unborn children "infants" whom the court may protect by representation by an appointed guardian. However, the discretion of the court in such situations depends entirely on the facts, and thus involves the protection of the interests of a specific unborn child, for example, under a will, and not unborn children generally. n12

[2] Capacity of Representatives of Infants and Incompetents

The capacity of a guardian is determined by the law of the state of the residence of the ward. n1 Unless it is the forum state, the state of appointment has no relevance to a guardian's capacity. Foreign courts may require a general guardian to meet local qualification requirements. n2

However, guardians ad litem appointed by a federal court under the protective provisions of Rule 17(c) n3 need not meet local qualification requirements when representing a person lacking legal capacity in a foreign forum. On the other hand, if a person simply initiates an action in federal court on behalf of an incompetent as the incompetent's "next friend," without benefit of a formal appointment by a federal court as guardian ad litem, the purported next friend who brings suit bears the burden of proving his or her suitability. This suitability is determined by three general criteria that are independent of the law of the forum state: (1) an adequate explanation of why the minor or incompetent may not bring the suit himself or herself; (2) a true dedication to the best interests of the minor or incompetent represented by the next friend; and (3) some significant relationship with the minor or incompetent. n4

A rule that governs default and default judgments imposes special protection for persons lacking legal capacity. A court may not enter a default judgment against an infant or incompetent person unless the person is represented in the action by a general guardian, committee, conservator, or other such representative who has appeared in the action. n5 Therefore, even if a party meets all of the default rule's general requirements, the clerk may never enter default judgment against an infant or incompetent, n6 and the judge may not do so unless a representative of the infant or incompetent has appeared. Consequently, the court has a responsibility to assess whether entry of default judgment against an infant or incompetent is appropriate. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGuardiansEstate, Gift & Trust LawConservators & GuardiansGeneral OverviewFamily LawFamily Protection & WelfareChildrenGeneral OverviewFamily LawGuardiansGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 17.21, 17.25 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Thomas v. Humfield, 916 F.2d 1032, 1035 (5th Cir. 1990) , aff'd without opinion, 32 F.3d 566 (5th Cir. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice to effect that term "incompetent person" in Rule 17(c) refers to person without capacity to litigate under law of individual's state of domicile, and therefore incorporates concept of incompetent as defined under Rule 17(b)).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2).

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(1)(A)-(D).

(n7)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2); see Friends for All Children v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp., 533 F. Supp. 895, 900-901 (D.D.C. 1982) (appointment of guardian ad litem for orphaned minors injured in airplane crash).

(n8)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2).

(n9)Footnote 7. United States v. 30. 64 Acres of Land, 795 F.2d 796, 805 (9th Cir. 1986) (guardian ad litem may act on behalf of ward and may make all appropriate decisions in course of specific litigation; guardian may make binding contracts for retention of counsel and expert witnesses, and may settle claims on behalf of ward).

(n10)Footnote 8. Collinsgru v. Palmyra Bd. of Educ., 161 F.3d 225, 230-237 (3d Cir. 1998) (right to proceed pro se does not give non-lawyer parents right to represent their children in proceedings before federal court nor did Congress intend to create rights under Individuals With Disabilities Education Act for parents that would entitle parents to represent children in IDEA actions).

(n11)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2); see Hull v. United States, 53 F.3d 1125, 1126-1128 (10th Cir. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 9.1. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. v. Harvey, 260 F.3d 1302, 1309 (11th Cir. 2001) .

(n13)Footnote 9.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2).

(n14)Footnote 10. Burke v. Smith, 252 F.3d 1260, 1264 (11th Cir. 2001) (district court was not required to appoint guardian ad litem when no conflict of interest existed between minor and her mother who acted as her representative); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2).

(n15)Footnote 11. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. v. Harvey, 260 F.3d 1302, 1309 (11th Cir. 2001) (when court set up mechanism through which plaintiff could select guardian ad litem, court was protecting plaintiff, and fact that plaintiff herself had delayed selection of guardian did not preclude summary judgment on merits before guardian was actually appointed).

(n16)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Hatch v. Riggs Nat'l Bank, 361 F.2d 559, 565 (D.C. Cir. 1966) (in action by settlor of spendthrift trust to modify trust, court appointed guardian ad litem on behalf of additional persons, including those unborn, who could be members of class of heirs at time of distribution).

(n17)Footnote 1. Last v. Elwyn, Inc., 935 F. Supp. 594, 596 (E.D. Pa. 1996) (in diversity cases, diversity of parties is based on citizenship of ward, not guardian.).

(n18)Footnote 2. Mann v. De Moss, 323 F. Supp. 1126, 1127-1128 (S.D. Iowa 1971) (foreign fiduciary's failure to file authenticated copy of appointment at commencement of action or before statute of limitation expired, as required by state law, was fatal defect that prevented fiduciary's representation).

(n19)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(c)(2); see [1], above.

(n20)Footnote 4. T.W. v. Brophy, 954 F. Supp. 1306, 1309 (E.D. Wis. 1996) , aff'd, 124 F.3d 893 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n21)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(b)(2).

(n22)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(b)(1).

(n23)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(b)(2).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART II. CAPACITY TO SUE OR DEFEND ON CLAIM

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 13.18 through 13.29

[Reserved]

§§ 13.18[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART III. SUBSTITUTION OF PARTY

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.30

§ 13.30 Nature and Purpose of Substitutionn*

[1] Distinction Between Substitution and Amendment

If the circumstances of a party change to the extent that the party cannot continue in the litigation, for example, if the party dies, but the party's claim is not extinguished by the change, the court may order substitution of another proper party or parties. n1 It is vital to distinguish between substitution under Rule 25 and an amendment that brings in new parties under Rule 15.

Under Rule 25, substitution applies only to those cases where all of the proper parties have been joined in the action, but because of death, incompetency, transfer of interest by a party, or a person's departure from public office, another party may be substituted. n2 On the other hand, amendment of parties under Rule 15 allows the addition of parties who should or might have been joined originally, or may permit replacement of a party in or against whom the cause of action really lies. n3

The distinction may be illustrated by the following examples. After an action has been brought against an employee who has caused an injury in the course of employment, the employee becomes incompetent. The replacement of the incompetent employee by a personal representative is a question of substitution that is governed by Rule 25. n4 On the other hand, if the plaintiff in such a case determines that the defendant's employer should also be held accountable, the question of whether or not the employer may be joined or may take the employee's place as the defendant is a question of amendment under Rule 15. n5

The distinction between amendment and substitution is important because after substitution, the substituted party steps into the shoes of the person replaced and occupies the same relative position in the continued action as the person replaced. n6 Incontrast, when a party comes into the action by an amended pleading, the cause of action as to the new party may or may not be an entirely new cause of action. n7 Therefore, the court has liberal discretion with respect to amendments; but, because the new party assumes the same position as the old in a substitution, with the same rights, when leave is sought for substitution of a party, the scrutiny must be more careful. n8

[2] Substitution Rule Does Not Affect Substantive Rights

Rule 25 is procedural only and does not affect the substantive law related to a claim in federal court. For example, Rule 25(a) does not affect the law specifying which actions survive the death of a party. This is a function of substantive law and is not determined by Rule 25(a). n1

To determine the substantive rights involved in or as a condition to substitution in a diversity case, the district court must look to state law. n2 In an action based on rights created by federal law, United States statutes and federal common law will determine whether an action abates or survives. n3 Thus, when Congress is silent concerning the survival of an action based on a federal statute, whether the action survives the death of the plaintiff is governed by federal common law. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 25.02, 25.10, 25.11 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)-(d); see International Ass'n of Machinists v. Estate of Dickey, 808 F.2d 483, 485-486 (6th Cir. 1987) (when decedent was never made party to action on guaranteed obligation, court should not have substituted his estate as defendant after he died).

(n4)Footnote 3. United States v. Travelers Ins. Co., 40 F.R.D. 316, 317 (D. Colo. 1966) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. Cf. United States v. Travelers Ins. Co., 40 F.R.D. 316, 317 (D. Colo. 1966) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; plaintiff was permitted to amend by making indemnity company defendant, rather than insurance company, when insurance company had treated case as if it were in fact surety on bond named in complaint, and plaintiff had learned true facts as to identity of surety only after period expired to file new action naming indemnity company as defendant).

(n7)Footnote 6. Brook v. Coreq, Inc., 53 F.3d 851, 852 (7th Cir. 1995) (substitute's status in litigation is same as thatof original parties; substitute takes over without any other change in status of case); Corbin v. Blankenburg, 39 F.3d 650, 654 (6th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1192 (1995) (when original trustee in litigation resigned, subject matter jurisdiction was not lost because once it validly exists among original parties, it remains intact after substitution; furthermore, when successor fiduciary steps into shoes of predecessor, substitution relates back to time when original party had standing to sue).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Hackner v. Guaranty Trust Co., 117 F.2d 95, 99 (2d Cir. 1941) , cert. denied, 313 U.S. 559 (1941) .

(n9)Footnote 8. United States v. Travelers Ins. Co., 40 F.R.D. 316, 317 (D. Colo. 1966) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 2. First Idaho Corp. v. Davis, 867 F.2d 1241, 1242-1243 (9th Cir. 1989) (Rule 25(a) is purely procedural; substantive state statute that determines whether judgment may be entered against deceased defendant controls in action based on state law that was removed to federal court).

(n12)Footnote 3. Asklar v. Honeywell, Inc., 95 F.R.D. 419 (D. Conn. 1982) (whether claim under Age Discrimination in Employment Act abates or is subject to revival is question of federal substantive law and is not governed by Rule 25(a); court held in this case that under federal law, deceased employee's action survives death and is subject to revival by his or her legal representative).

(n13)Footnote 4. Hawes v. Johnson & Johnson, 940 F. Supp. 697, 699-700 (D.N.J. 1996) (because Congress was silent concerning survival of action based on Age Discrimination in Employment Act, common law controlled and stated that employee's claims for compensatory damages in nature of emotional injuries under Act survived his death; however, employee's claims for liquidated and punitive damages under Act did not survive his death).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART III. SUBSTITUTION OF PARTY

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.31

§ 13.31 Substitution Does Not Affect Jurisdiction and Venuen*

If a new party comes into an action, subject matter jurisdiction, diversity of citizenship, personal jurisdiction, and venue may all be potentially affected. However, a court's decision to grant substitution under Rule 25 generally does not impact on any of these issues, because these issues are determined at the time the action is commenced. n0.1 First, substitution has no effect on subject matter jurisdiction. Thus, if jurisdiction exists at the time the action is commenced, it is not divested by a later substitution. n1 Even if substitution destroys complete diversity of citizenship, the court retains subject matter jurisdiction provided that proper jurisdiction was previously established by the original parties.

The rationale for this principle was articulated by a court which stated that were this not so, the owners of property could merely transfer legal ownership of the assets from one shell corporation to another in a different jurisdiction, putting a party whose initial suit satisfied the jurisdictional requirements to the immense burden of chasing the involved assets from courtroom to courtroom. n2 The Supreme Court has observed that diversity jurisdiction, once established, is not defeated by the addition of a nondiverse party to the action. A contrary rule could well have the effect of deterring normal business transactions during the pendency of what might be lengthy litigation. n3

Personal jurisdiction is another potential issue when a substitution occurs because a court must acquire jurisdiction over the person to be substituted. n4 However, the applicable rules contemplate service and personal jurisdiction over substituted parties. n5 Thus, when a qualified person who is a stranger to litigation wants to be substituted for a deceased party, under Rule 25(a)(1) he or she may voluntarily submit to personal jurisdiction by merely serving the motion and notice of hearing on all parties as provided in Rule 5. n6 When a present party to the litigation wants to substitute a stranger to the litigation, such as an administrator or executor of a deceased party, Rule 25(a)(1) states that the motion for substitution, together with the notice for hearing, must be served on persons not parties in the manner provided in Rule 4 for the service of a summons, n7 and may be served in any judicial district. n8

As is the case with jurisdiction, substitution does generally not have any effect on venue. If venue is proper at the time of the institution of the suit by the original parties, venue rules will not be violated my by later substitution under Rule 25. Just as joinder of a new party does not disturb the district court's jurisdiction, courts have stated that there is no logical rationale for concluding that joinder in any way destroys venue that was properly established initially. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 25.33 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 0.1. TermoRio S.A. E.S.P. v. Electrificadora Del Atlantico S.A. E.S.P., 421 F. Supp. 2d 87, 95 (D.D.C. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n3)Footnote 1. Freeport-McMoRan Inc. v. K N Energy, Inc., 498 U.S. 426, 428-429, 111 S. Ct. 858, 112 L. Ed. 2d 951 (1991) ; Smith v. Sperling, 354 U.S. 91, 77 S. Ct. 1112, 1119, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1957) .

(n4)Footnote 2. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Eco-Chem, Inc., 757 F.2d 1256, 1263 (Fed. Cir. 1985) .

(n5)Footnote 3. Freeport-McMoRan Inc. v. K N Energy, Inc., 498 U.S. 426, 428-429, 111 S. Ct. 858, 112 L. Ed. 2d 951 (1991) .

(n6)Footnote 4. See LiButti v. United states, 178 F.3d 114, 123-124 (2nd Cir. 1999) .

(n7)Footnote 5. Select Creations, Inc. v. Paliafito Am., Inc., 852 F. Supp. 740, 765 (E.D. Wis. 1994) (if court has personal jurisdiction over predecessor in interest, once successor liability is established, personal jurisdiction over successor in interest necessarily exists).

(n8)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n9)Footnote 7. Ransom v. Brennan, 437 F.2d 513, 518-519 (5th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 403 U.S. 904 (1971) (Rule 4 service on executrix was essential in order to acquire personal jurisdiction over her).

(n10)Footnote 8. Ransom v. Brennan, 437 F.2d 513, 518 (5th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 403 U.S. 904 (1971) (Rule 25(a)(1) service on executor of named defendant is valid although made beyond territorial limits of state in which district court is held).

(n11)Footnote 9. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Eco-Chem, Inc., 757 F.2d 1256, 1264 (Fed. Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART III. SUBSTITUTION OF PARTY

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.32

§ 13.32 Substitution Due to Death of Partyn*

[1] Discretion of Court to Order Substitution on Party's Death

If a party dies and the claim is not extinguished by the death, the court has discretion to order substitution of the proper party or parties in place of the deceased. n1 By its terms, Rule 25(a)(1) provides for the dismissal of the deceased party unless a motion to substitute has been made within 90 days of the filing of a statement noting death. However, the nature of Rule 25(a)(1) is completely discretionary, as indicated by its use of the discretionary term "may." n2

Because of the extensive discretion that has been placed in the trial court under Rule 25(a)(1), courts vary greatly in the manner in which they treat a party's failure to substitute. Some decisions related to substitution due to death depend on whether the death is of a plaintiff or defendant, and others depend on the circumstances of the particular case. For example, when the plaintiff has died, and a representative of the plaintiff fails to move for substitution within 90 days after defendant files a statement noting death, courts uniformly exercise their discretion and dismiss the action, unless the party has shown some excuse. n3 In contrast, when a defendant dies and the statement noting death is filed, but the motion for substitution has not been made, some courts continue to treat the decedent as a party, n4 while others dismiss the entire action or the claims brought by or against the decedent. n5

Sometimes, in the interest of justice or to promote more efficient litigation, a court will order a substitution on the death of a party even if no party has filed a statement noting death or a motion to substitute. Although there is no express provision in the rules for the court to substitute a party on its own initiative, some courts have exercised their discretion under Rule 25(a)(1) to permit substitution outside the parameters of the rule. n6 Other courts have required strict compliance with the rule. n7

It is important to remember that Rule 25(a), as a procedural rule, controls over any state statutes that provide for a substitution procedure. n8

When an action is brought against a defendant in both the defendant's individual and official capacities, both Rule 25(a) and Rule 25(d) come into play. n9 Thus, with respect to the official capacity claim, the successor is automatically substituted as a party without a motion, as provided in Rule 25(d)(1). n10 However, in order to continue the action against the deceased defendant in his or her individual capacity, a motion must be made to substitute a representative of the deceased defendant under Rule 25(a)(1). n11

[2] Procedure for Substitution Applicable Only When Party's Death Occurs After Initiation of Action

The substitution procedure under Rule 25(a) applies only if the person to be replaced died after the service and filing of the complaint, n1 because the rule expressly limits its application to circumstances when a person dies after being made a party to the suit. n2 If it is discovered that a party died prior to commencement of the action, the proper procedure is a motion to amend under Rule 15(a) to add as a party the estate of the deceased party. For example, in one case the court denied the motion to substitute because the representative of the deceased defendant did not have knowledge of the institution of the action within the statute of limitation period. Accordingly, the amendment did not relate back under Rule 15(c) to the date of the original filing. n3

[3] Requirement of Filing and Service of Statement Noting Death

[a] Requirement Is First of Two Steps

When a plaintiff or defendant dies during the pendency of an action, the court may order substitution of the proper parties when a two-step process is followed as specified in Rule 25(a): filing and service of statement noting death on the record, n.01 and then filing and service of the motion for substitution. n1 The first of the two steps has two parts: n2 it requires that a party file "statement noting death" on the record, and then to serve the statement on the parties in the same manner as the motion for substitution. n3 Thus, the statement noting death must be served on a representative who has been appointed for the estate of the deceased party in the manner specified in Rule 4. n3.1

The primary significance of the filing and service of the statement noting death is that it commences the 90-day time limit to file a motion of substitution. n3.2 Casual or informal reference to death in other court papers is generally insufficient to trigger the 90-day period within which to file a motion for substitution. Even if the parties have actual knowledge of the death of a party, the 90-day period does not commence unless and until a formal statement noting death is made on the record in the district court in accordance with Rule 25(a). Thus, it has been held that the fact that parties were aware of plaintiff's death from the course of appellate proceedings, the 90-day period under Rule 25(a)(1) was not triggered unless a formal statement noting death was made on the record. n4 Additionally, a court has the discretion to grant an extension of the 90-day time period, either before or after the 90-day period has elapsed. n5

[b] Persons Entitled to File Statement Noting Death

Even though Rule 25 provides that a motion for substitution must be made by any party or by the successors or representatives of the deceased party, the rule makes no statement regarding who may file and serve the statement noting death. n6 Therefore, courts have concluded that the statement noting death need not be filed by a party or formal representative of the decedent. It has been determined that Rule 25 contains no such restriction on who may file the statement noting death. Therefore, for example, it has been held that a decedent's widow who was not a party to the action and who had not been appointed representative of the decedent's estate was entitled to file the statement noting death and trigger the 90-day limitation period of Rule 25. n7

On the other hand there is authority for the proposition that the attorney for a deceased party may not file the statement noting death, on the rationale that the death of the client severs the attorney-client relationship. n8 However, such authority is the minority view, and many other district courts have permitted cases to be dismissed after the decedent's attorney filed either the statement noting death or the motion to substitute. n9

[c] Name of Substitute for Deceased May Be Required

There is no express requirement in Rule 25(a) that the statement noting death identify the representative or successor who may be substituted as a party in place of the decedent. n10 Consequently, at least one circuit has held that it is not necessary for the statement noting death to name the representative of the estate or the successor of the decedent, and that the rule requires only that the statement noting death be served on the involved parties. The court opined that if there is a problem identifying the legal representative of the estate, a motion may be brought under Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b) to enlarge the time to file the motion for substitution. n11

On the other hand, some courts have held that the statement noting death is insufficient unless it identifies the representative or successor who may be substituted as a party in place of the decedent. n12 This discretionary requirement is imposed by courts apparently to expedite the administration of the litigation. n13

[d] Required Service

Before it will trigger the 90-day limitation period of Rule 25, the statement notingdeath on the record must be served on a representative who has been appointed for the estate of the deceased party. n14 The cases generally strictly construe the provisions of Rule 25(a) as to the specific manner in which service of the statement noting death must be performed; if service has not been effected in accordance with the rule, the 90-day period does not commence. n15 However, courts have held that the personal representative of estate may waive a challenge that service was ineffective when it accepts service as it was performed. n16

The most common error in service occurs when a party merely serves the attorney of the decedent. Rule 25(a), through Rule 4, requires service on non-party successors or representatives of deceased in the manner provided for service of summons. n17 Courts have held that strict compliance with this rule is necessary to alert the nonparty to the consequences of death for a pending suit and to signal the need for action to preserve the claim if the nonparty desires. n18 In addition to insuring that the decedent's representative has notice of the litigation, another reason for rejecting service merely on the decedent's attorney is premised on the law of agency. Because the attorney's power to act ceases with the client's death, counsel has no technical authority to continue or terminate an action on behalf of a dead client. n19

[4] Requirement of Filing and Service of Motion for Substitution

[a] Requirement Is Second of Two Steps

The second prerequisite to a court's order of substitution is that within 90 days of the filing and service of the statement noting death, a party or the decedent's successor or representative must file and serve the motion for substitution. n1 Under the rule, the length of time that a party may delay in filing and serving the statement noting death is irrelevant, provided that the motion for substitution is filed within 90 days after the completion of filing and service of the statement noting death. Thus, in one case, the court of appeals reversed a trial court's denial of a motion for substitution on the grounds that the case had been commenced 14 years earlier; the court of appeals held that the trial court should have allowed the substitution for the named plaintiff because the motion for substitution was timely made in response to the defendants' filing of the statement noting death. While the court of appeals recognized the district court's frustration and the long delay in prosecution of the action that led to the decision rejecting substitution, the court of appeals stated that the motion should have been granted because it was made within the rule's time limits. n2

However, on an appropriate showing, a court may dismiss an action under Rule 41 for failure to prosecute when there has been a delay in moving to substitute. n3

A motion to substitute need only be made within 90 days of filing the statement noting death. The actual substitution order itself need not be entered within 90 days. n4 Furthermore, the court has discretion to allow enlargement of the 90 days before the expiration of the time for good cause shown, or at any time on a showing of excusable neglect. n5

[b] Court Has Discretion to Allow Extension of Time to File Motion

Unless the motion for substitution is made within 90 days after the statement noting death is served, the action must be dismissed as to the deceased party. n6 Based on strict interpretation of this express language of the rule, some courts have dismissed actions when the plaintiff fails to move for substitution for a deceased defendant within 90 days of the filing of the statement noting death. n7 However, the Committee Notes to Rule 25 provide that the 90-day requirement may be extended by Rule 6(b) of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The Committee notes make clear, however, that whether an action should be dismissed for failure to comply with the 90-day rule lies within the sound discretion of the district court. n8

Rule 6(b)(2) provides that a district court for cause shown may at any time in its discretion on motion made after the expiration of the specified period permit the act to be performed when the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect. n9 Thus, it has been held that the history of Rule 25(a) and Rule 6(b) makes it clear that the 90-day time period was not intended to act as a bar to otherwise meritorious actions, and extensions of the period may be granted in the discretion of the court. n10

When an extension is desired, the best practice is for the party to move for an extension of time under Rule 6(b)(1) before the 90-day period has elapsed. n11 However, the trial court may also enlarge the time limit for a motion for substitution even after the expiration of the 90-day period. n12 A party may obtain relief from the 90-day restriction even after the expiration of the allotted time if one satisfies the court that the delay was the result of excusable neglect and the opponent fails to demonstrate that such relief would work undue prejudice. n13 When making a motion for substitution after expiration of the 90-day period, the party should ensure that the motion is made under both Rule 25(a) and Rule 6(b)(2) or it may be denied as a matter of course. n14

The moving party has the burden of showing that the failure to move for substitution in a timely manner was the result of excusable neglect. This burden requires a demonstration of good faith and a showing of some reasonable basis for noncompliance, rather than mere inadvertence. n15 For example, the court found excusable neglect and allowed enlargement of time, when the plaintiff's widow resided in a foreign country and was unfamiliar with the English language, the executor was unaware of lawsuit because it was not mentioned in the will, and there was a temporary lack of assets for the estate to hire an attorney. n16

On the other hand, the court used its Rule 25(a) discretion to refuse to grant an extension of time when the court found that the reluctance of an heir to become the administratrix of the estate, coupled with counsel's failure to file with the surrogate's court a motion to appoint an administrator of the estate until after defendant's motion to dismiss, did not constitute excusable neglect. In that case, the court also found prejudice to the defendant because the defendant was burdened with defending an action in which the plaintiff's heirs showed little interest for two years after plaintiff died. n17

[c] Party To Be Substituted Must Be Proper Party

Unless the party to be substituted is a proper party with respect to the pending litigation, the court must deny the motion for substitution. For example, the court will not substitute the estate, because the estate is not a proper party; rather, the party seeking substitution must be a legal representative of the estate. n18 The party seeking to be substituted must follow the procedure under federal law to demonstrate that the party is a legal representative and a proper party to be substituted. n19 Generally, for a party to be a legal representative, the party must have been lawfully appointed by the court that has jurisdiction over the estate. n20

Unless the estate has already been distributed at the time of substitution, the proper party is either the executor or administrator. n21 An executor named in the will is considered the legal representative even if the will is never probated. n22 If the estate had been closed, the proper parties would be the distributees of the decedent's estate. n23

[d] Motion for Substitution Must Identify Decedent's Representative and Must Be Properly Served

Like a statement noting death, n24 a motion for substitution must identify the decedent's representative or it will be denied. When a plaintiff made a motion for substitution of the deceased defendant, for example, but the motion failed to name the representatives of the decedent's estate, the trial court properly denied the motion. n25 Furthermore, the motion for substitution, like the statement noting death, n26 must be served on parties in accordance with Rule 5 and on non-parties in accordance with Rule 4. n27

[5] Survival of Action Is Prerequisite to Order of Substitution

[a] Necessity of Survival of Claim

Survival of a claim is a prerequisite to the substitution of parties, because Rule 25(a) provides that a court may order substitution if a party dies and the claim is not extinguished by the death. n1 Rule 25(a) is a procedural rule only and does notsubstantively define or control whether an action survives the death of a party. n2 The determination of whether a claim survives is a function of substantive law regarding the particular claim involved and is unaffected by Rule 25(a). n3 The legal representative of the moving party has the burden of demonstrating that the claim survives. n4 In general, state substantive law governs whether a state law claim survives the death of party, n5 and in the case of a federal question claim, federal substantive law controls. n6

[b] State Substantive Law Controls Survival of State Law Claims

The federal courts apply state law to decide whether a state law claim survives the death of a party. To determine the substantive rights involved in, or as a condition of, substitution in a nonfederal case, the district court must follow the state law. n7 Thus, the district court must apply the appropriate survival statute of the state in which the district court is located. n8 In some cases, a defendant's liability survives, n9 and in other cases, liability does not survive. n10 All state jurisdictions have at least some survival statutes that govern whether the claims brought by a plaintiff or against a defendant survive the party's death. n11

[c] Federal Substantive Law Generally Controls Survival of Federal Claims Based on Federal Question

When a claim is based on a federal question, whether the federal claim survives is governed by federal common law, unless there is an expression of contrary intent in the law. n12 Such expressions of "contrary intent" n13 may be found in the language of the statute or in legislative history. n14 Under some federal statutes, liability may survive the defendant's death, n15 but under other statutes liability does not survive the defendant's death. n16

In general, an action survives the death of a party under the federal common law if it is remedial and not penal in nature. n17 To determine whether a statute is remedial or penal in nature the court must consider three factors (1) whether the purpose of the statute was to redress individual wrongs or more general wrongs to the public; (2) whether recovery under the statute runs to the harmed individual or to the public; and (3) whether the recovery authorized by the statute is disproportionate to the harm suffered. n18

There is an exception to the general rule that federal law determines whether a federal question claim survives. First, whether a claim under a federal civil rights statute, such as 42 U.S.C. § 1983, survives depends on the law of the forum state. Claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and other federal civil rights statutes depart from the general rule because 42 U.S.C. § 1988 directs federal courts to refer to state law in deciding all matters which the federal civil rights statutes do not address. Therefore, there is no uniform rule as to whether civil rights actions survive the death of a party, because the determination may vary depending on the law of the forum state. n19

While Title VII actions are civil rights actions, and would therefore seem to be governed by the forum state's law as to questions of survival under the above rule, there is a split of authority as to whether a Title VII claim is governed by state law or federal law. Some courts have applied federal law, n20 while others have applied state law. n21

[6] Effect of Substitution Due to Death

When a party is substituted because of the death of another, the substituted partystands in the shoes of the deceased party; this means the substituted party comes into the case subject to all of the prior judicial orders and rulings. n1 For example, in one case the original party defendant consented to trial before a magistrate judge; the defendant died before trial and his widow was substituted as party defendant. After judgment was entered against the defendant, the defendant appealed, asserting that because the defendant had not consented to trial before a magistrate judge, there was no jurisdiction to enter a judgment. The court of appeals rejected this claim, holding that a successor takes over without any other change in the status of the case. The court noted that the widow entered the litigation as the legal representative of a deceased person and her status in the litigation tracked the position of the original party. n2 The rule of the assumption of identical status likewise continues for the new party; thus if the representative of the estate of the original party subsequently dies, the representative of the representative's estate is then substituted. n3

There are only two exceptions to the status rules specified above. First, if the decedent's death renders a prior determination moot, the determination does not apply to the substitute. For example, the court's order on a motion for expedited trial made by a plaintiff would be rendered moot by the plaintiff's death and would not be binding on a the substituted party. n4 Second, a substituted party is not entitled to continue in a pro se capacity, because to do so would violate the prohibition against the unlicenced practice of law. An executor or administrator is not representing himself or herself, but the estate of the deceased party. n5

[7] Appeal of Order Regarding Substitution Due to Death

If a court denies a motion for substitution, the order denying substitution is a final decision that is appealable under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, because such an order will result in dismissal of the claim with respect to the representative party. Conversely, because it does not make any final resolution in the case or end the litigation, an order granting substitution is interlocutory, and not immediately appealable. n1 A reviewable decision under Rule 25(a), is made de novo on appeal because it is review of a question of law. This is in contrast to a review of factual findings, which may be reversed only if there is clear error. n2

Attorneys must remember that Rule 25(a) applies only when a case is pending in the district court. If a party dies after the filing of the notice of appeal, the proper procedure is to follow the provisions of Appellate Rule of Procedure 43(a), which is derived from Rule 25(a). n3 Appellate Rule 43(a) provides that if a party dies after a notice of appeal is filed or while a proceeding is otherwise pending in the court of appeals, the personal representative of the deceased party may be substituted as a party on motion filed by the representative or by any party with the clerk of the court of appeals.

If a party against whom an appeal may be taken dies after entry of a judgment or order in the district court but before a notice of appeal is filed, an appellant may proceed as if death had not occurred. After the notice of appeal is filed substitution must be effected in the court of appeals in accordance with Appellate Rule of Procedure 43(a).

If a party entitled to appeal dies before filing a notice of appeal, the notice of appeal may be filed by that party's personal representative or, if there is no personal representative, by that party's attorney of record. n4 Even if the motion is not made pursuant to Appellate Rule 43, the appellate court may proceed with the appeal. n5 Even if a party dies prior to entry of judgment in the district court without requesting substitution, the appellate court is not divested of jurisdiction. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsDeath of Party

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 25.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1); Rule 25(a)(2), on the other hand, is not really a rule of substitution, because it provides only that if one or more plaintiffs or defendants dies in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiffs or against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate; thus, it is a rule of substitution only in the sense the surviving plaintiffs or defendants are automatically substituted in place of all of the plaintiffs or defendants as they existed before the death. A statement noting death must still be filed. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Montalvo v. Quigley, 144 F.R.D. 21, 22 (E.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Rembert v. Holland, 735 F. Supp. 733, 735 n.1 (W.D. Mich. 1990) (failure of parties to file suggestion of death on record and move for substitution after death of defendant deemed immaterial because of decision granting summary judgment in defendant's favor).

(n6)Footnote 5. Russell v. City of Milwaukee, 338 F.3d 662, 667-668 (7th Cir. 2003) (when plaintiff's representative or attorney did not file for substitution of parties within 90 days of filing statement of death, district court properly dismissed case); deceased defendant where defense counsel filed suggestion of death but plaintiff never moved for substitution).

(n7)Footnote 6. Kynaston v. United States, 717 F.2d 506, 508 (10th Cir. 1983) (noting that district court sua sponte named widow as personal representative of her husband's estate and ordered substitution before trial).

(n8)Footnote 7. Al-Jundi v. Estate of Rockefeller, 757 F. Supp. 206, 210 (W.D.N.Y. 1990) (Rule 25(a)(1) must be strictly observed).

(n9)Footnote 8. Glassroth v. Houston, 299 F. Supp. 2d 1244, 1246 (M.D. Ala. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Rothschild v. Board of Educ., 778 F. Supp. 642, 644 n.3 (W.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a).

(n13)Footnote 1. Davis v. Cadwell, 94 F.R.D. 306, 307 (D. Del. 1982) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1); see International Ass'n of Machinists v. Estate of Dickey, 808 F.2d 483, 485-486 (6th Cir. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 3. See Davis v. Cadwell, 94 F.R.D. 306, 307 (D. Del. 1982) .

(n16)Footnote .01. Barlow v. Ground, 39 F.3d 231, 233 (9th Cir. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n17)Footnote 1. See [4], below; see also Knauer v. Johns-Manville Corp., 638 F. Supp. 1369, 1388 (D. Md. 1986) (allowing suggestion of death on record and motion for substitution to be filed simultaneously).

(n18)Footnote 2. Ohanian v. Irwin (In re Irwin), 338 B.R. 839, 848 (E.D. Cal. 2006) .

(n19)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3) (service of both statement noting death and motion for substitution).

(n20)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1),(3); see Barlow v. Ground, 39 F.3d 231, 234 (9th Cir. 1994) (when party dies, it is insufficient to serve suggestion of death solely on party's counsel).

(n21)Footnote 3.2. Ohanian v. Irwin (In re Irwin), 338 B.R. 839, 848-849 (E.D. Cal. 2006) .

(n22)Footnote 4. Grandbouche v. Lovell, 913 F.2d 835, 836 (10th Cir. 1990) ; see Henkel v. Stratton, 612 F. Supp. 190, 191 n.1 (N.D. Ohio 1985) (reference to deceased plaintiff in defendant's brief is insufficient to commence 90-day period).

(n23)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1); see [4][b], below.

(n24)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n25)Footnote 7. Unicorn Tales, Inc. v. Banerjee, 138 F.3d 467, 469-470 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n26)Footnote 8. Al-Jundi v. Rockefeller, 88 F.R.D. 244, 246 (W.D.N.Y. 1980) ; Smith v. Planas, 151 F.R.D. 547, 549 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n27)Footnote 9. Felton v. Board of Comm'rs, 796 F. Supp. 371, 380 (S.D. Ind. 1991) , aff'd on other grounds, 5 F.3d 198 (7th Cir. 1993) ; United States v. Private Sanitation Indus. Ass'n, 159 F.R.D. 389, 389 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) , aff'd without opinion, 47 F.3d 1158 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n28)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a).

(n29)Footnote 11. Unicorn Tales, Inc. v. Banerjee, 138 F.3d 467, 470 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n30)Footnote 12. See, e.g., McSurely v. McClellan, 753 F.2d 88, 98 (D.C. Cir. 1985) (suggestion of death insufficient when it did not identify decedents' representatives); Fehrenbacher v. Quackenbush, 759 F. Supp. 1516, 1519 (D. Kan. 1991) (denying defendant's motion to dismiss action based on plaintiff's failure to file motion for substitution of deceased defendant, because suggestion of death filed by decedent's attorney was defective in that it did not identify decedent's representatives).

(n31)Footnote 13. McSurely v. McClellan, 753 F.2d 88, 98 (D.C. Cir. 1985).

(n32)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3); see Barlow v. Ground, 39 F.3d 231, 234 (9th Cir. 1994) (suggestion of death was effective only if served on non-party successors or representatives of deceased in manner provided by Rule 4 for service of summons).

(n33)Footnote 15. Acri v. International Assn. of Mach. & Aerospace Workers, 595 F. Supp. 326, 330 (N.D. Cal. 1983) , aff'd on other grounds, 781 F.2d 1393 (9th Cir. 1986) (90-day period did not commence since service was not in accordance with Rule 25(a)).

(n34)Footnote 16. Capital Investors Co. v. Executors of the Estate of Morrison, 800 F.2d 424, 429 (4th Cir. 1986) .

(n35)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3); Barlow v. Ground, 39 F.3d 231, 234 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n36)Footnote 18. Fariss v. Lynchburg Foundry, 769 F.2d 958, 962 (4th Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n37)Footnote 19. Fehrenbacher v. Quackenbush, 759 F. Supp. 1516, 1518 (D. Kan. 1991) (suggestion of death inadequate when filed by attorney for deceased defendant who did not represent the estate).

(n38)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1), (3).

(n39)Footnote 2. Saylor v. Bastedo, 623 F.2d 230, 237 (2d Cir. 1980) .

(n40)Footnote 3. Montalvo v. Quigley, 144 F.R.D. 21, 22-23 (E.D.N.Y. 1992) (court granted motion to dismiss because (1) action had been pending for nine years, (2) plaintiff had been warned about possibility of dismissal after defendants' prior motion for failure to prosecute, and (3) defendants would be prejudiced by any further delay).

(n41)Footnote 4. Escareno v. Carl Nolte Sohne GmbH & Co., 77 F.3d 407, 411 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n42)Footnote 5. See [b], below.

(n43)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n44)Footnote 7. Patrick v. Sharon Steel Corp., 549 F. Supp. 1259, 1268 (N.D. W.Va. 1982) .

(n45)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1), Committee Note to 1963 Amendments; Russell v. City of Milwaukee, 338 F.3d 662, 667-668 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n46)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

(n47)Footnote 10. Tatterson v. Koppers Co., 104 F.R.D. 19, 20 (W.D. Pa. 1984) .

(n48)Footnote 11. Gronowicz v. Leonard, 109 F.R.D. 624, 627 & n.3 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n49)Footnote 12. Zeidman v. General Acci. Ins. Co., 122 F.R.D. 160, 161 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (Rule 6(b)(2) works in conjunction with Rule 25(a)(1) to provide flexibility).

(n50)Footnote 13. Al-Jundi v. Estate of Rockefeller, 757 F. Supp. 206, 209 (W.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n51)Footnote 14. Farrington v. Benjamin, 100 F.R.D. 474, 476 (D.V.I. 1984) ; see Zeidman v. General Acci. Ins. Co., 122 F.R.D. 160, 161 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (Rule 6(b)(2) works in conjunction with Rule 25(a)(1) to provide flexibility).

(n52)Footnote 15. Zeidman v. General Accident Ins. Co., 122 F.R.D. 160, 161 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (good faith showing).

(n53)Footnote 16. Knight v. H.E. Yerkes & Assocs., Inc., 135 F.R.D. 67, 72 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n54)Footnote 17. Zeidman v. General Accident Ins. Co., 122 F.R.D. 160, 162 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n55)Footnote 18. F.D.I.C. v. Conner, 20 F.3d 1376, 1384 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n56)Footnote 19. Marcano v. Offshore Venezuela, C.A., 497 F. Supp. 204, 207-209 (E.D. La. 1980) (denying motion to substitute by Venezuelan national that Venezuelan law permitted to become administratrix of decedent's estate because she had not obtained judicial designation).

(n57)Footnote 20. Escareno v. Carl Nolte Sohne GmbH & Co., 77 F.3d 407, 409-412 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n58)Footnote 21. Ashley v. Illinois Cent. Gulf R.R. Co., 98 F.R.D. 722, 724 (S.D. Miss. 1983) .

(n59)Footnote 22. McSurely v. McClellan, 753 F.2d 88, 97-99 (D.C. Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1005 (1985) .

(n60)Footnote 23. Gronowicz v. Leonard, 109 F.R.D. 624, 626 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (noting that executrix was proper party because she was distributee of estate and that estate had been distributed at time motion for substitution was made).

(n61)Footnote 24. See [3][c], above.

(n62)Footnote 25. Fehrenbacher v. Quackenbush, 759 F. Supp. 1516, 1519 (D. Kan. 1991) (denying plaintiff's untimely motion for substitution of deceased defendant, on the ground that motion failed to name the representatives of decedent's estate).

(n63)Footnote 26. See [3][d], above.

(n64)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3).

(n65)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1).

(n66)Footnote 2. First Idaho Corp. v. Davis, 867 F.2d 1241, 1242-1243 (9th Cir. 1989) ; Roberson v. Wood, 500 F. Supp. 854, 858 (S.D. Ill. 1980) .

(n67)Footnote 3. Covert v. Liggett Group, Inc., 750 F. Supp. 1303, 1310 (M.D. La. 1990) (abatement of an action governed by law of sovereign that created course of action).

(n68)Footnote 4. Marcano v. Offshore Venezuela, C.A., 497 F. Supp. 204, 208 (E.D. La. 1980) (asserted legal representative of decedent did not meet burden of proving that decedent's claims were not extinguished).

(n69)Footnote 5. See [b], below.

(n70)Footnote 6. See [c], below.

(n71)Footnote 7. Knauer v. Johns-Manville Corp., 638 F. Supp. 1369, 1387 (D. Md. 1986) .

(n72)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Fireman's Fund Mortgage Corp. v. Zollicoffer, 713 F. Supp. 1112, 1113-1116 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (under Illinois law, causes of action for breach of contract and breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing survive under common law; claims for conversion and trespass survive under both common law and Illinois Survival Act; statutory claims of forcible entry and violation of statutory remedies survive under Illinois Survival Act, and punitive damages remain available as to those claims that survive at common law).

(n73)Footnote 9. Conductron Corp. v. Williams, 785 F. Supp. 271, 273 (D.N.H. 1991) (action under New Hampshire common law and certain New Hampshire statutes survives defendant's death).

(n74)Footnote 10. Fehrenbacher v. Quackenbush, 759 F. Supp. 1516, 1521-1522 (D. Kan. 1991) (in Kansas medical malpractice case, punitive damages do not survive defendant's death).

(n75)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Md. Code, Cts. & Jud. Proc. § 3-230; Va. Code Ann. § 8.01-25; W. Va. Code § 55-7-8a.

(n76)Footnote 12. Smith v. Department of Human Services, 876 F.2d 832, 834 (10th Cir. 1989) .

(n77)Footnote 13. Glanz v. Vernick, 750 F. Supp. 39, 42-45 (D. Mass. 1990) .

(n78)Footnote 14. Fariss v. Lynchburg Foundry, 769 F.2d 958, 962 n.3 (4th Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; claim under Age Discrimination in Employment Act survives as a matter of federal law).

(n79)Footnote 15. Neumann v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 736 F. Supp. 182, 185-186 (N.D. Ill. 1990) (federal securities law claims survive defendant's death).

(n80)Footnote 16. United States v. Private Sanitation Indus. Ass'n, 159 F.R.D. 389, 390 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) (injunctive relief under civil RICO claim does not survive defendants' deaths).

(n81)Footnote 17. International Cablevision, Inc. v. Sykes, 172 F.R.D. 63, 66-67 (W.D.N.Y. 1997) (cable company's claim for damages against seller of cable television descrambler under statute abated with seller's death, even though statute was designed to address individual wrongs and recovery was intended to run to aggrieved individual, because $10,000 minimum damages prescribed by statute were disproportionate to harm caused to cable company by one cable descrambler at issue, and therefore statute was penal rather than remedial in nature).

(n82)Footnote 18. Murphy v. Household Fin. Corp, 560 F.2d 206, 209 (6th Cir. 1977) .

(n83)Footnote 19. See Robertson v. Wegmann, 436 U.S. 584, 589-90, 98 S. Ct. 1991, 1995, 56 L. Ed. 2d 554 (1978) .

(n84)Footnote 20. Khan v. Grotnes Metalforming Sys., Inc., 679 F. Supp. 751, 756-757 (N.D. Ill. 1988) .

(n85)Footnote 21. Small v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 759 F. Supp. 1427, 1428-30 (W.D. Mo. 1991) (Title VII claim survives plaintiff's death under Missouri law).

(n86)Footnote 1. Brook v. Coreq, Inc., 53 F.3d 851, 852 (7th Cir. 1995) (substitute's status in litigation is same as that of original parties; substitute assumes prior party's position without any other change in status of case).

(n87)Footnote 2. Brook v. Coreq, Inc., 53 F.3d 851, 851-852 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n88)Footnote 3. See McSurely v. McClellan, 753 F.2d 88, 98 n.4 (D.C. Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1005 (1985) (court granted motion to substitute representative).

(n89)Footnote 4. Owens v. Storehouse, Inc., 773 F. Supp. 416, 417-418 (N.D. Ga. 1991) , aff'd on other grounds, 984 F.2d 394 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n90)Footnote 5. Diamantis v. Judd-Falk, Inc., 125 F.R.D. 396, 398 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (court rejected argument that executrix was representing herself because she was sole residual beneficiary under will).

(n91)Footnote 1. See Saylor v. Bastedo, 623 F.2d 230, 236 (2d Cir. 1980) .

(n92)Footnote 2. Barlow v. Ground, 39 F.3d 231, 233 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n93)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 43(a); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a).

(n94)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 43(a).

(n95)Footnote 5. Berlanti v. Bodman, 780 F.2d 296, 297 n. 1 (3d Cir. 1985) (court, noting that plaintiff died prior to the filing of the appeal and that no substitution was made, allowed appeal to go forward).

(n96)Footnote 6. Coffee v. Cutter Biological, 809 F.2d 191, 193 n.1 (2d Cir. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART III. SUBSTITUTION OF PARTY

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.33

§ 13.33 Substitution Due to Incompetencyn*

[1] Court's Discretion to Order Substitution Because of Incompetency of Party

If a party becomes incompetent, the court has discretion to order that the action be continued by or against the party's representative, provided that a motion has been served on other parties. n1

For example, the court allowed substitution in one case in which a co-plaintiff became ill and subsequently incompetent after she had filed suit. Following a grant of a motion to substitute, the suit was continued by the representative. n2

Rule 25(b) does not provide a definition of "incompetency." There is no specific authority for a federal court to decide that a party has become incompetent based on federal law. Consequently, state law determines issues of incompetency and the appointment of a guardian. n3 Procedure is governed by the federal rules. With respect to service of a motion to substitute, Rule 25(b) "borrows" from the Rule 25(a) substitution on death procedure, n4 and it is reasonable to conclude that other procedural principles of substitution on death are applicable to substitution on incompetency as well. n4.1

A motion to substitute because of incompetency must be distinguished from a motion to amend a pleading. A motion to substitute for reasons of incompetency is filed when the intervening incompetence of the original plaintiff or defendant necessitates replacement. In contrast, a motion to amend the complaint should be used to allow the addition of parties who should have been named in the original complaint or answer. n5

[2] Procedural Considerations

Rule 25(b) provides specifically that a motion to substitute due to incompetence is to be served in the same manner as provided for a motion to substitute on death under Rule 25(a)(3). n1 Consequently, a motion to substitute for incompetence and notice of a hearing regarding the motion must be served as provided in Rules 4 and 5 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n2

Furthermore, it appears that some of the mechanics of substitution resulting from incompetency function similarly to substitution because of death. For example, all of Rule 25's provisions address changes to a party that occur after a lawsuit is filed, not before. Only if someone already a party becomes incompetent may the court appoint a substitute representative. n3 The underlying purpose of Rule 25 is to provide for substitutions in case a particular event (death, incompetency, transfer of interest) occurs during the pendency of a suit, not before. In other words, the rule is applicable only if the disabling event occurs after the service or filing of the complaint. n3.1 This is the same rule as for substitution on death. n4

The text of Rule 25(b) does not expressly mention whether there is a 90-day time limit for filing a motion for incompetence, after a finding of incompetence, as there is under Rule 25(a). Although it is arguable that there should be a similar deadline for a motion to substitute on the ground of incompetency, no decision has so held. Rule 25(b) is entirely discretionary, n5 and, unlike Rule 25(a), Rule 25(b) mentions neither a "statement noting incompetence" nor a 90-day time period. Arguably, if the drafters had intended to incorporate such a time-specific 90-day period in the rule, they would have expressly done so.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsIncompetency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 25.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b) (if party becomes incompetent court "may" allow action to be continued by or against party's representative); see Burns v. Phillips, 50 F.R.D. 187, 188 (N.D. Ga. 1970) (court denied motion for Rule 25(b) substitution of new guardian of incompetent for former guardian because requested change should have been accomplished by amending complaint under Rule 15); Schwartz v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 2 F.R.D. 167, 168 (D. Mass. 1941) (court denied motion to substitute duly appointed guardian as plaintiff for insane ward because ward was incompetent prior to date of filing suit).

(n3)Footnote 2. Sander v. Kristof, 349 F. Supp. 103, 105 (W. D. Ark. 1972) (court granted motion to substitute trialattorney as plaintiff for co-plaintiff who had become seriously ill and incompetent during trial; attorney was required to withdraw as trial counsel before order of substitution allowed attorney to be substituted as co-plaintiff).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b)(1) (capacity to sue or be sued of individual determined by law of individual's domicile).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3).

(n6)Footnote 4.1. *Cf. Harris v. Nat'l Seal Co. Enhanced Severance Pay Plan, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40315, at *7-8 (S.D. Tex. 2007) ; see [2], below.

(n7)Footnote 5. Burns v. Phillips, 50 F.R.D. 187, 188 (N.D. Ga. 1970) (court denied motion for Rule 25(b) substitution of new guardian of incompetent for former guardian because requested change should have been accomplished by amending complaint under Rule 15).

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3).

(n9)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a); see also § 13.32[3][d].

(n10)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b).

(n11)Footnote 3.1. *Harris v. Nat'l Seal Co. Enhanced Severance Pay Plan, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40315, at *7-8 (S.D. Tex. 2007) .

(n12)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1); see § 13.32[2].

(n13)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(b) (if party becomes incompetent court "may" allow action to be continued by or against party's representative).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART III. SUBSTITUTION OF PARTY

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.34

§ 13.34 Substitution Due to Transfer of Interestn*

[1] Court Has Authority to Order Substitution on Transfer of Interest

If a party makes a transfer of interest, the court has discretion to order that the action be continued by or against the original party, or after motion of a party, may direct that the person to whom the interest is transferred is to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party. n1 Courts generally use the expression "transfer of interest" to include most transfers of assets. The types of transfers of interests covered by the rule include: corporate mergers or acquisitions when the original party no longer exists, and another entity has unreservedly assumed its rights and obligations; when a sale or an assignment has been made; n1.1 when a financial instrument has changed hands; or when a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy has succeeded to the assets and liabilities of a debtor. n2 For example, the asset acquisition of a defendant closely held corporation by another closely held corporation falls within the rule. A transfer of interest may also be accomplished by the enactment of legislation. n3

Rule 25(c) does not apply to transfers of interest that occur prior to the filing of the action that is in issue, because substitution expressly applies only to transfers ofinterest that take place during litigation. n3.1 If a transfer occurs before the commencement of suit, the status of the parties is controlled by Rule 17 and Rule 19. Thus, for Rule 25(c) to apply to particular parties, not only must there be an actual transfer of interest between the parties but the transfer must occur during pending litigation. n4

A motion to substitute or join the transferee must be served in the same manner as a motion for substitution on death specified in Rule 25(a)(3). n5 Consequently, the motion must be served on parties in accordance with Rule 5 and on non-parties in accordance with Rule 4. n6

[2] Substitution Because of Transfer of Interest Does not Affect Substantive Rights

Rule 25(c) is procedural only and does not affect the substantive law relating to a claim in federal court. For example, if a claim in federal court is based on an asserted contractual relationship, an assignment of the contractual rights may be the grounds for a substitution under Rule 25(c). However, the procedural act of substitution does not affect the existence or the degree of the liability of any of the parties on the underlying contract. n1 Thus, Rule 25(c) does not substantively determine which actions survive the transfer of an interest; rather, it provides substitution procedures for an action that does survive. n2

Rule 25(c) is designed to allow an action to continue unabated when an interest in a lawsuit changes hands, rather than requiring the initiation of an entirely new lawsuit. Accordingly, Rule 25(c) merely sets forth a procedure to permit the continuation of the suit and prevent unnecessary dismissal n3 and does not affect the substantive law concerning the effect of a transfer of interest on the survivability of a claim. The procedural nature of Rule 25(c) means that the impact of a particular transfer will be determined by state substantive law. n4

Because of the purely procedural nature of Rule 25(c), the transferee will be bound by the judgment concerning the interest, regardless of whether the court orders substitution or joinder of the transferee. n5 This result follows from the principle that the rule does not foreclose any substantive rights under the transfer. Furthermore, the binding nature of the transferee's interest prevents double recovery and advances efficiency. n6

[3] Court Has Considerable Discretion to Determine Procedure on Transfer of Interest

The court possesses considerable discretion under Rule 25(c) when ruling on motions to substitute following a transfer of interest, because that court has the opportunity to take into account all the exigencies of the situation. n1 Courts of appeal have fostered this liberal discretion because of the express language of Rule 25(c), which provides two broad alternative courses of action: the trial court may keep the original party in the suit or substitute the transferee. n1.1

The discretionary nature of Rule 25(c) means that a court may decide to grant or deny a motion to substitute a party to whom an interest has been transferred. Following a Rule 25(c) motion seeking either substitution or joinder of the transferee, it is within the power of the court to continue the action in its original posture, to order substitution of the party to whom the interest has been transferred, or to join the transferee as a party. Thus, the court has the option to add the transferee but retain the transferor as a party. For example, in one case the FDIC, after bringing suit as a receiver for a bank, assigned to a bank trustee the rights and interest in claims asserted in the suit. Because the FDIC retained some legal interest in the proceeds of any recovery obtained by the trustee, the court found that joinder of the trustee, rather than outright substitution, was the proper course of action, because both assignor and assignee were still real parties in interest, and participation in the lawsuit by representatives of both was the most efficient way to ensure that all issues would be fully litigated. n2

The discretionary decision whether to grant or deny a motion to join or substitute a transferee party necessarily is based on convenience and efficiency. n2.1 Thus, a court may order joinder under Rule 25(c) when the transferee will be liable and when a multiplicity of suits can be avoided. On the other hand, joinder will be denied if itwould not be beneficial. n3 Furthermore, the discretionary nature of Rule 25(c) means that the motion to substitute following a transfer of interest is not mandatory and is itself within the discretion of the parties. When the parties fail to move for joinder or substitution under Rule 25(c), the court may continue the action in the name of the original parties. When this happens, the judgment binds the successor as though the successor had been joined or substituted. n4

The trial court has discretion under Rule 25(c) to refuse to substitute parties in an action even if it is proper and one of the parties moves for substitution. n5 Furthermore, regardless of whether the court orders a substitution, the litigation may go forward in the names of the original parties. n6

[4] Timing of Motion to Substitute

The rules do not contain any express provision relating to the timing of a motion to substitute following a transfer of interest under Rule 25(c). n1 Therefore it is arguable, that a Rule 25(c) motion may be made at any time. n2 There are no reported cases that deny a Rule 25(c) motion based on a lack of a timely request. However, it is apparent from recent cases that the timeliness of the motion is one of the many factors that the court may consider in its determination of the motion, and that considerations of efficiency caution against untimely filings. n3

[5] Appeal of Order on Motion to Substitute

Orders under Rule 25(c) are inherently discretionary procedural decisions and, consequently, are interlocutory orders that usually may not be immediately appealed. n1 Furthermore, while a party may try to obtain an appeal of an interlocutory order under a writ or other forms of review of non-final orders, such efforts are not likely to be successful. Several courts have rejected the use of mandamus to review Rule 25(c) orders because the issue of joinder of parties can be effectively remedied on appeal. n2

Courts have reached different conclusions on whether to review interlocutory orders under Rule 25(c) through the collateral order doctrine. One circuit, for example, refused to allow an appeal of an order substituting the bankruptcy trustee as a plaintiff for the debtors because the issue of whether the substitution deprived the debtors of a right to jury trial was not an important issue justifying immediate appeal. n3 On the other hand, another circuit allowed appellate review of an order denying substitution in a bankruptcy case, because the order was easily separated from the bankruptcy proceedings and, therefore, had the requisite finality to be reviewed under the collateral order doctrine. n4

When a circuit court does review a Rule 25(c) order, it is reviewing a discretionary, interlocutory order and must use the abuse of discretion standard. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsTransfers of Interests

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 25.30 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c).

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Schreiber Foods, Inc. v. Beatrice Cheese, Inc., 305 F. Supp. 2d 939, 955-956 (E.D. Wis. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 2. Trombino v. Transit Cas. Co., 110 F.R.D. 139, 147 (D.R.I. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 3. F.D.I.C. v. Wrapwell Corp., 922 F. Supp. 913, 917 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (FDIC substituted as receiver for plaintiff bank because federal legislation provided that agency was to succeed to all rights, titles, powers and privileges of bank, and authorized agency to collect money that was due to bank).

(n6)Footnote 3.1. Maysonet-Robles v. Cabrero, 323 F.3d 43, 49 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 4. Virgo v. Riviera Beach Assocs., Ltd., 30 F.3d 1350, 1358 (11th Cir. 1994) (substitution of originally named corporation was proper and Rule 25(c) applies, since new party had bought all assets of former party while action was pending); Unison Realty Corp. v. RKO Theatres, Inc., 35 F.R.D. 232, 233 (S.D.N.Y. 1964) (Rule 17(a) applied because transfer took place before action was commenced).

(n8)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c).

(n9)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(3); see also § 13.32[3][d].

(n10)Footnote 1. Citibank v. Grupo Cupey, Inc., 382 F.3d 29, 32 (1st Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n11)Footnote 2. Maysonet-Robles v. Cabrero, 323 F.3d 43, 49 (1st Cir. 2003) (Rule 25(c) is procedural vehicle which does not create new relationships among parties to suit; transferee is brought into court solely because it has come to own property in issue, and merits of case and disposition of property are still determined based on relationship of originally named parties).

(n12)Footnote 3. ELCA Enters., Inc. v. Sisco Equip. Rental & Sales, Inc., 53 F.3d 186, 191 (8th Cir. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Explosives Corp. of Am. v. Garlam Enters. Corp., 615 F. Supp. 364, 368 (D.P.R. 1985) (liability of Washington corporation that was successor to dissolved corporation must be determined according to Washington law).

(n14)Footnote 5. Kloster Speedsteel AB v. Crucible, Inc., 793 F.2d 1565, 1581-1582 (Fed. Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1034 (1987) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n15)Footnote 6. Mobil Oil Corp. v. Linear Films, Inc., 718 F. Supp. 260, 273 (D. Del. 1989) (even when transferee company is added or substituted under Rule 25(c), it can be held liable only to extent that transferor corporation would have been liable).

(n16)Footnote 1. USI Properties Corp. v. M.D. Construction Co., 186 F.R.D. 255, 260 (D.P.R. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c); see Citibank v. Grupo Cupey, Inc., 382 F.3d 29, 31 (1st Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n18)Footnote 2. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Tisch, 89 F.R.D. 446, 448 (E.D.N.Y. 1981) .

(n19)Footnote 2.1. ISI Int'l v. Borden Ladner Gervais, LLP, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2406 (N.D. Ill. 2002.

(n20)Footnote 3. Wainwright v. Kraftco Corp., 58 F.R.D. 9, 13 (N.D. Ga. 1973) .

(n21)Footnote 4. Luxliner P.L. Export Co. v. RDI/Luxliner, Inc., 13 F.3d 69, 71 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 5. Froning's, Inc. v. Johnston Feed Serv., Inc., 568 F.2d 108, 110 n.4 (8th Cir. 1978) .

(n23)Footnote 6. Singer Hous. Co. v. Seven Lakes Venture, 466 F. Supp. 369, 378 (D. Colo. 1979) .

(n24)Footnote 1. General Battery Corp. v. Globe-Union, Inc., 100 F.R.D. 258, 261 (D. Del. 1982) .

(n25)Footnote 2. USI Properties Corp. v. M.D. Construction Co., 186 F.R.D. 255, 260 (D.P.R. 1999) (noting that here is no time limit for Rule 25(c) motion); Air Line Pilots Asso. International v. Texas International Airlines, Inc., 567 F. Supp. 78, 81 (S.D. Tex. 1983) (allowing substitution after entry of judgment in order to enforce judgment).

(n26)Footnote 3. USI Properties Corp. v. M.D. Construction Co., 186 F.R.D. 255, 260 (D.P.R. 1999) .

(n27)Footnote 1. Bauer v. Commerce Union Bank, Clarksville, Tenn., 859 F.2d 438, 440 (6th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1079 (1989) .

(n28)Footnote 2. Hazeltine Corp. v. Kirkpatrick, 165 F.2d 683, 685-686 (3d Cir. 1948) , cert. denied, 334 U.S. 819 (1948) .

(n29)Footnote 3. Bauer v. Commerce Union Bank, Clarksville, Tenn., 859 F.2d 438, 440 (6th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1079 (1989) .

(n30)Footnote 4. In re Covington Grain Co., Inc., 638 F.2d 1357, 1360 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n31)Footnote 5. Burka v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 87 F.3d 478, 482 (D.C. Cir. 1996) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 13 INTERESTS OF PARTIES
PART III. SUBSTITUTION OF PARTY

2-13 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 13.35

§ 13.35 Substitution of Public Officialsn*

[1] Substitution of Officials is Generally Automatic on Vacancy of Position

When a public officer is a party to an action in an official capacity and, during the pendency of the action, dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate, and the officer's successor is automatically substituted as a party. In contrast to the other types of substitution under Rule 25, substitution under Rule 25(d) does not require a formal motion to the court to obtain substitution. Rather, substitution under Rule 25(d) occurs without any action by the court or the parties. n1 Furthermore, there is no negative consequence from the parties' failure to request that the court enter a substitution order. However, some reported decisions demonstrate that both courts and attorneys are under the mistaken impression that affirmative steps must be taken to effect substitution under Rule 25(d). n2

Substitution under Rule 25(d) is automatic provided that the action is by or against a public officer acting in his or her official capacity, n3 as opposed to an action involving the officer's individual or personal capacity. n4

[2] Substitution Procedure

Although it is not technically necessary because no motion is required to achieve automatic substitution involving a public officer, n1 the court sometimes orders substitution sua sponte. n1.1 The court may also take judicial notice of the fact that a public officer has been replaced when it is common knowledge that officer has been succeeded in office. n2 In most cases, substitution under Rule 25(d) is so routine that it is effected as a matter of course, and the court will typically use a footnote to reflect the fact that substitution of the plaintiff or defendant official has occurred. n3

If a permanent successor has not yet been appointed, the court will automatically substitute the individual who becomes the acting public officer. n4 In cases when there is no obvious successor to replace the public officer, the court may dismiss the claim against the defendant official for lack of capacity but must afford parties leave to amend to name successors. n5 The court is not required to make a formal substitution, but, for the record, it should direct the clerk of the court to change the caption of the case to reflect the substitution. n6

In making a substitution of officers, a public officer who sues or is sued in an official capacity may be described as a party by the officer's official title rather than by name. n7 Even if a complaint names as a defendant only the category of the officer sought to be held liable, it is sufficient under Rule 25(d). n8

Furthermore, a public officer who sues or is sued in an official capacity may be designated by official title rather than by name, n9 and when a substitution occurs, it is not necessary for the court to record or note the personal name of the officer at all. n10 Thus, by ordering substitution only in the name of the title of the officer, the court is able to effect substitution even if the successor has not yet been named. n11 However, the court may order that the officer's personal name be added, n12 for example, if it would avoid confusion. n13

Because Rule 25(d) provides that an order of substitution may be entered at any time, n14 substitution may be effected at the time judgment is entered, or even after judgment has been entered. n15 Substitution is even permitted under some circumstances on appeal. n16

[3] Determination of Official Capacity

In some cases, it may not be obvious whether an officer is sued in an individual or in an official capacity, or both. The United States Supreme Court has discussed the differences between individual and official capacity actions and explained the relationship of capacity to substitution. The Court stated that an official-capacity suit is, in all respects other than name, actually a suit against the entity as opposed to a suit against the officer. It is not a suit against the official personally, for the real party in interest is the entity. Thus, while an award of damages against an official in his personal capacity can be executed only against the official's personal assets, a plaintiff seeking to recover on a damages judgment in an official-capacity suit is attempting to recover from the government entity itself.

Should the official die pending final resolution of a personal-capacity action, the plaintiff would have to pursue his action against the decedent's estate. In an official-capacity action in federal court, death or replacement of the named official will result in automatic substitution of the official's successor in office. n1 Therefore, the trial court must consider the nature of the proceeding to determine which type of action the plaintiff intended to bring. n2

If an original official was named as a defendant in both an individual and official capacity, the original official should remain a party, even though the official has resigned or died, and the action will continue against the officer in the officer'sindividual capacity n3 and the successor official will be substituted as a party defendant only in his or her official capacity. n4 The corollary to this rule is that if a public officer dies in office, the official capacity claim is governed by Rule 25(d), while the individual capacity claim is governed by Rule 25(a). n5 With respect to the individual capacity claim, substitution is not automatic, and the procedures under Rule 25(a) must be followed or the claim may be dismissed. n6

[4] Effect of Substitution of Officer

After an automatic substitution under Rule 25(d), the predecessor public officer is no longer a party and has no standing to challenge any future decisions in the action. n1 By operation of law, the official who has been replaced is no longer a party as of the date the official leaves office. n2 A successor defendant who is substituted automatically under Rule 25(d) does not become personally liable, even if the predecessor had been named in his or her personal capacity. n3 When a public officer replaces his or her predecessor, the officer is a party only in his or her official capacity. The new successor defendant may not be personally liable for the conduct committed earlier by the original defendant. n4

However, in his or her official capacity, the newly named official stands in the shoes of the predecessor. n5 Even if a successor official is not substituted until after final judgment is entered, the substituted official is bound by the earlier court order binding his or her predecessor. n6 Similarly, an agency that is substituted for another agency stands in the shoes of the predecessor agency and may be bound by a consent decree. n7

Sometimes the seemingly interminable nature of litigation will mean that agency personnel come and go repeatedly while a particular action is pending. Thus, if an already substituted public officer is then succeeded in office, the second successor is automatically substituted and the first successor ceases to be a party, and so on. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsPublic Officers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 25.40 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d).

(n3)Footnote 2. Leslie v. Schweiker, 569 F. Supp. 41, 41 (E.D. Pa. 1983) (court acknowledged replacement of Secretary of Health and Human Services but declined to change caption because neither party moved to substitute pursuant to Rule 25(d)).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Hauptmann v. Wilentz, 570 F. Supp. 351, 401-402 (D.N.J. 1983) , aff'd without opinion, 770 F.2d 1070 (3d Cir. 1985) (court automatically substituted governor and attorney general to the extent that they were sued in their official capacities).

(n5)Footnote 4. Cheney v. United States Dist. Court, 541 U.S. 913, 918, 124 S. Ct. 1391, 158 L. Ed. 2d 225 (2004) .

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d); see Cheney v. United States Dist. Court, 541 U.S. 913, 918, 124 S. Ct. 1391, 158 L. Ed. 2d 225 (2004) (substitution is automatic).

(n7)Footnote 1.1. Glaxo, Inc. v. Bowen, 640 F. Supp. 933, 934 n.1 (E.D.N.C. 1986) .

(n8)Footnote 2. N.A.A.C.P., Frederick County Chapter v. Thompson, 648 F. Supp. 195, 196 n.2 (D. Md. 1986) (court discovered need for substitution from documents filed during pendency of action).

(n9)Footnote 3. Levinson-Roth v. Parries, 872 F. Supp. 1439, 1444 n.3 (D. Md. 1995) (court adds successor as a defendant in his official capacity).

(n10)Footnote 4. Dole v. Compton, 753 F. Supp. 563, 564 n.1 (E.D. Pa. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 5. Board of Sch. Directors v. Wisconsin, 649 F. Supp. 82, 99 (E.D. Wis. 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 6. Modern Computer Corp. v. Ma, 862 F. Supp. 938, 950 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n13)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d)(2); Echevarria-Gonzalez v. Gonzalez-Chapel, 849 F.2d 24, 31 (1st Cir. 1988) (action could have been brought directly against Secretary of Agriculture, without including secretary's name).

(n14)Footnote 8. Lathan v. Block, 627 F. Supp. 397, 405 (D.N.D. 1986) (caption of complaint that named defendants as "All County Supervisors" was sufficient to identify defendants in official capacity action).

(n15)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(d).

(n16)Footnote 10. York Assocs., Inc. v. Secretary of HUD, 815 F. Supp. 16, 18 n.1 (D.D.C. 1993) .

(n17)Footnote 11. Farmland Dairies v. Commissioner of N.Y. Department of Agriculture, 650 F. Supp. 939, 941

n.2 (E.D.N.Y. 1987) , aff'd, 847 F.2d 1038, 1041-1042 n.3 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n18)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(d).

(n19)Footnote 13. [Reserved].

(n20)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d).

(n21)Footnote 15. Baptist Hosp. E. v. Sullivan, 823 F. Supp. 424, 425 n.2 (W.D. Ky. 1993) (court substituted successor officer as defendant in connection with plaintiff's motion to enforce prior judgment).

(n22)Footnote 16. Presbytery of New Jersey of the Orthodox Presbyterian Church v. Florio, 40 F.3d 1454, 1458 n.1 (3d Cir. 1994) (appelate court noted succeeding governor).

(n23)Footnote 1. Kentucky v. Graham, 473 U.S. 159, 166 & n.11, 105 S. Ct. 309, 3105 & n.11, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1985) .

(n24)Footnote 2. Lyon v. Grossheim, 803 F. Supp. 1538, 1557 (S.D. Iowa 1992) (court substituted successor for defendant official who died in office and determined that there was no individual capacity claim asserted, because complaint did not specify whether defendant was sued in official or individual capacity, and pleadings concentrated on officer's job).

(n25)Footnote 3. Levinson-Roth v. Parries, 872 F. Supp. 1439, 1444 n.3 (D. Md. 1995) (official remains defendant in personal capacity but successor is substituted for defendant officer in official capacity).

(n26)Footnote 4. Aleman v. Milwaukee County, 35 F. Supp. 2d 710, 717-718 (E.D. Wis. 1999) (action against sheriff could be continued in his individual capacity, even though sheriff left office; however, sheriff's successor was automatically substituted).

(n27)Footnote 5. Rothschild v. Board of Educ. of City of Buffalo, 778 F. Supp. 642, 644 n.3 (W.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n28)Footnote 6. Scarpino v. Grosshiem, 852 F. Supp. 798, 807 (S.D. Iowa 1994) .

(n29)Footnote 1. Armstrong v. Sims, 869 F.2d 410, 412-413 (8th Cir. 1989) (dismissed defendants could not object to settlement, since current commissioners were real parties in interest).

(n30)Footnote 2. Baugh v. City of Milwaukee, 829 F. Supp. 274, 276 (E.D. Wis. 1993) (even though trial court had not entered order of substitution, defendant was no longer party to action by operation of law).

(n31)Footnote 3. Women in City Gov't United v. City of New York, 112 F.R.D. 29, 31 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n32)Footnote 4. Cabrera v. Municipality of Bayamon, 622 F.2d 4, 6 (1st Cir. 1980) (when mayor replaced predecessor under Rule 25(d), mayor was not personally liable, because neither original nor amended complaint contained allegations of wrongdoing against successor mayor in individual capacity).

(n33)Footnote 5. Baptist Hosp. E. v. Sullivan, 823 F. Supp. 424, 425 n.2 (W.D. Ky. 1993) .

(n34)Footnote 6. Rosario-Torres v. Hernandez-Colon, 889 F.2d 314, 316 n.2 (1st Cir. 1989) .

(n35)Footnote 7. Alberti v. Klevenhagen, 610 F. Supp. 138, 142 n.6 (S.D. Tex. 1985) .

(n36)Footnote 8. Women in City Gov't United v. City of New York, 112 F.R.D. 29, 31 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (court noting that all subsequent office holders are substituted as parties only in their official capacities, and only for so long as they hold office).

22 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 14.syn

§ 14.syn Synopsis to Chapter 14: MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE

§ 14.01 Purpose of Joinder Required for Just Adjudication

§ 14.02 Traditional Classification of Parties for Joinder Purposes

[1] Joinder Rules Traditionally Dependent on Party Classification

[2] Proper Party

[3] Required Party

[4] Indispensable Party

§ 14.03 Summary of Analysis Used for Joinder of Required Party

§ 14.04 Court's Determination Whether Party Needed for Adjudication Must Be Joined if Feasible

[1] Persons Needed for Just Adjudication

[a] Three Situations When Absentees Are Needed

[b] Inability of Court to Accord Complete Relief

[c] Nonjoinder Would Impair or Impede Interest of Absentee

[i] Absentee Must Have Interest in Subject Matter of Litigation

[ii] Practical Application of "Impair or Impede" Clause

[d] Nonjoinder of Absentee Would Make Current Party Subject to Multiple Liabilities

[2] Determination if Joinder is Feasible

[a] Three Situations When Joinder is Not Feasible

[b] Claim by or Against is Not Covered by Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[c] Joinder Not Feasible Because Absentee Cannot Be Served With Process

[d] Joinder Not Feasible Because Absentee Objects to Improper Venue

[3] Court Must Join Required Parties When Feasible

§ 14.05 Court's Determination Whether to Dismiss Action When Joinder of Necessary Party is Not Feasible

[1] Equity and Good Conscience Determine Whether Dismissal Is Proper

[a] Court Considers Four Factors to Determine Equity and Good Conscience

[b] Balancing Test

[2] Whether Judgment Would Have Prejudicial Effect on Absentee or Party

[a] Court's Determination of Prejudicial Effect

[b] Minimization of Prejudicial Effect by Party or Absentee May Allow Court to Proceed

[3] Minimization of Prejudicial Effect by Provisions of Court Order

[4] Whether Judgment Without Absentee Would Be Adequate

[5] Whether Remedy is Adequate If Case Were Dismissed

[a] Necessity of Adequate Remedy

[b] Adequacy of Remedy in Alternative State or Foreign Jurisdiction

[c] Adequacy of Remedy May be Affected by Statute of Limitation

[6] Effect of Court's Decision Whether to Proceed or Dismiss

§ 14.06 Procedural Considerations

[1] Procedural Nature of Decision to Proceed or Dismiss

[2] Raising Issue of Joinder of Persons Needed for Just Adjudication

[a] Court May Raise Issue On Its Own Initiative

[b] Defendant May Raise Issue in Answer or Separate Motion

[3] Pleading Requirements Regarding Joinder

[4] Inapplicability of Compulsory Joinder When Class Action Rules Control

§§ 14.07through 14.19 [Reserved]

§ 14.20 Nature and Purpose of Permissive Joinder

[1] Two Requirements for Permissive Joinder in Federal Court

[2] Purposes of Permissive Joinder

[3] Permissive Joinder is Procedural Device Only

[4] Interaction of Permissive Joinder With Other Rules

§ 14.21 Requirement of Transactional Relationship

[1] Permissive Joinder of Parties Requires Claim Based on Same Transaction

[2] Tests for Other Rules May Provide Precedents for Joinder Purposes

§ 14.22 Requirement of Commonality

§ 14.23 Joinder Considerations When Claim Involves United States Government

[1] General Considerations

[2] Joinder of United States Under Federal Tort Claims Act

[3] Joinder of United States for Non-Tort Claims

§ 14.24 Subject Matter Jurisdiction Required for Joinder

[1] Claims Regarding Each Joined Party Must Be Based on Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[2] Supplemental Jurisdiction Doctrine May Allow Joinder in Some Circumstances

§ 14.25 Venue For Multiple Defendants

§ 14.26 Persons Entitled to Initiate Joinder

[1] Plaintiff

[a] Plaintiff's Option to Specify Parties

[b] Joinder by Amendment of Complaint

[2] Defendant

[3] Other Persons

§ 14.27 Claims Asserted By and Against Joined Persons

§ 14.28 Court Rulings Related to Joinder

[1] Discretion to Order Joinder

[2] Discretion to Order Separate Trials

§§ 14.29through 14.39 [Reserved]

§ 14.40 Nature of Misjoinder and Nonjoinder

§ 14.41 Initiation of Remedies for Misjoinder and Nonjoinder

[1] Requirement of Motion Made to Court

[2] Alternative Motion for Amendment

§ 14.42 Court's Discretion to Order Remedies

§ 14.43 Orders of Court for Misjoinder and Nonjoinder

[1] Remedies for Misjoinder

[2] Remedies for Nonjoinder

[3] Severance

[a] Severance of Claim Results in Distinct Lawsuit

[b] Courts Discretion to Order Severance or Separate Trial

§§ 14.44through 14.49 [Reserved]

§ 14.50 Nature and Purpose of Impleader

[1] Party Structure for Impleader

[2] Purposes of Impleader

[3] Impleader Is Permissive Rather than Mandatory

§ 14.51 Only Defending Parties Entitled to Implead Third Party

§ 14.52 Requirements for Impleader

[1] Impleader Must be Based on Third Party's Liability to Defending Party

[2] Third-Party's Liability Must Be for Plaintiff's Underlying Claim

[3] Impleader Must Be Based on Derivative Liability

§ 14.53 Impleader is Procedural Device Only

[1] Impleader Rule Does Not Affect Substantive Rights

[2] Federal Substantive Law Controls in Federal Question Cases

[3] State Substantive Law Controls in Diversity Cases

§ 14.54 Claims Between Plaintiff and Impleaded Third Party

[1] Claims Between Plaintiff and Third Party After Impleader

[2] Manner of Initiating Claim

§ 14.55 Common Types of Impleader

[1] Impleader of Insurer

[2] Impleader of Joint Tortfeasor

[3] Impleader Involving United States as Party

[a] Availability of Impleader

[b] Substantive Law for Impleader Involving United States

§ 14.56 Procedural Considerations

[1] Complaint Against Third-Party Defendant

[a] Timing

[b] Contents

[2] Motion for Leave of Court to File Third-Party Claim

[a] Timing

[b] Contents

[c] Service On Current Parties to Action

[3] Procedural Rights of Third-Party Defendant

[a] Court May Not Order Impleader Unless Third-Party Defendant is Subject to Personal Jurisdiction

[b] Third-Party Defendant's Motion to Strike Improper Impleader

[c] Third-Party Defendant's Response to Impleader Complaint

[d] Third-Party Defendant's Response to Underlying Complaint of Plaintiff

[4] Permissive Joinder of Claims After Impleader

[5] Statute of Limitation

[6] Motion for Separate Trial or Severance of Impleader Claim

[7] Appeal of Trial Court Order Regarding Impleader

§ 14.57 Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Each Claim Must Have Basis in Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[2] Exception for Cases of Supplemental Jurisdiction

§ 14.58 Venue

[1] Defending Party's Claim Against Third Party

[2] Other Impleader Claims

§ 14.59 Impleader of Admiralty Claims

[1] General Impleader Rule May Be Applied to Admiralty Claims

[2] Application of Optional Admiralty Impleader Rules

§§ 14.60through 14.69 [Reserved]

§ 14.70 Nature and Purpose of Interpleader

[1] Definition and Purpose

[2] Distinction Between True Interpleader and Action in Nature of Interpleader

[3] Distinction Between Rule Interpleader or Statutory Interpleader

[4] Interpleader Proper Even if Claims Against Stake Are Prospective

§ 14.71 Initiation of Interpleader

§ 14.72 Two Stages of Interpleader Action

[1] First Stage Is Court's Determination Whether Interpleader Requirements Have Been Met

[a] Court's Discretion to Determine Whether Requirements Are Met

[b] Requirements Regarding Claims to Stake

[c] Requirement of Personal Jurisdiction Over Claimants

[2] Second Stage Is Adjudication of Adverse Claims and Distribution of Stake

§ 14.73 Comparison of Different Procedures Under Rule Interpleader and Statutory Interpleader

[1] Federal System Has Two Methods of Interpleader

[2] Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[a] Rule Interpleader

[b] Statutory Interpleader

[3] Venue

[a] Venue in Rule Interpleader Proceeding

[b] Venue In Statutory Interpleader Proceeding

[4] Order to Enjoin Other Cases Related to Stake

[a] Injunction for Rule Interpleader Stake

[b] Injunction for Statutory Interpleader Stake

[5] Deposit of Stake in Court

[a] Court Has Discretion to Order in Rule Interpleader

[b] Mandatory in Statutory Interpleader

[6] Application of Substantive Law

[a] Rule Interpleader

[b] Statutory Interpleader

§ 14.74 Application of Equitable Principles

§ 14.75 Costs and Attorney's Fees

[1] Court's Discretion to Award Costs and Attorney's Fees to Stakeholder

[2] Limitation of Amount

§ 14.76 United States as Party to Interpleader Action

§§ 14.77through 14.89 [Reserved]

§ 14.90 In General

§ 14.91 Statutory Right of Federal and State Government to Intervene on Constitutional Issues

[1] Federal Government

[2] State Government

[3] Requirement of Notice and Certification of Constitutional Question

[a] Requirement Permits Federal or State Government to Defend Statute

[b] Required Notice to Government Official

[c] Certification of Question by Court

[d] Intervention Procedure

§ 14.92 Particular Statutes Granting United States Unconditional Right to Intervene

§ 14.93 Particular Statutes Granting Private Persons Unconditional Right to Intervene

§§ 14.94through 14.99 [Reserved]

§ 14.100 Four Requirements to Establish Person's Right to Intervention

§ 14.101 Motion for Intervention Must Be Timely

§ 14.102 Legal Interest in Subject Matter of Action

[1] General Requirement

[2] Less Strict Standard for Public Law Issue

§ 14.103 Disposition of Action Will Impair or Impede Applicant's Ability To Protect Interest

§ 14.104 Applicant's Interest Inadequately Represented by Current Parties

[1] Required Showing of Inadequacy of Representation

[2] Rebuttable Presumptions of Adequacy of Representation

§§ 14.105through 14.119 [Reserved]

§ 14.120 Trial Court's Discretion Whether to Grant Motion for Permissive Intervention

[1] Circumstances in Which Court May Grant Permissive Intervention

[2] Factors Used by Court in Exercise of Discretion

[a] Undue Delay

[b] Prejudice to Existing Parties

§ 14.121 Timeliness of Motion for Permissive Intervention

§ 14.122 Conditional Right to Intervene Conferred by Statute

§ 14.123 Permissive Intervention Based on Common Questions of Law or Fact

§ 14.124 Permissive Intervention Procedures

[1] Service of Motion on Existing Parties

[2] Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[3] Venue

[4] Court's Discretion to Formulate Intervention Order to Further Purposes of Intervention

[5] Appeals and Intervention

[a] Appealability of Decision on Motion for Intervention

[b] Standard of Review

[c] Intervention for Purposes of Appealing Trial Court Decision

§§ 14.125through 14.139 [Reserved]

§ 14.140 Nature of Cross Claim

§ 14.141 Requirements for Cross Claims

[1] Same Transaction or Occurrence or Property as Underlying Claim

[2] Cross Claim May Only be Made Against Co-Party

§ 14.142 Jurisdictional Issues

[1] Basis of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[2] Personal Jurisdiction

[3] Joinder of Additional Parties

§ 14.143 Pleading and Procedural Considerations

23 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
A. JOINDER OF PERSONS NEEDED FOR JUST ADJUDICATION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.01

§ 14.01 Purpose of Joinder Required for Just Adjudicationn*

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure specify when joinder of a person is needed for a just adjudication. The rules provide that in certain specified circumstances a trial court should exercise jurisdiction over a particular person if joinder is feasible, that is, if the person is subject to service of process and if joinder of the person will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action. n1 This type of joinder was traditionally referred to by the courts as "compulsory joinder." n2 Because the rules do not use the term compulsory, a more accurate description of this type of joinder would be "feasible joinder." n3 This rule of feasible or "compulsory" joinder is the exception to the otherwise general policy of allowing the plaintiff to decide who will be parties to the lawsuit. n4

Under the current federal rules, the plaintiff's discretion to determine the parties is no longer the primary consideration; the trial court, other parties, and absentees may take several types of steps to override the party structure the plaintiff has chosen for the case. n5 Thus, Rule 19 prescribes the circumstances in which the plaintiff's autonomy to determine party structure must yield to other considerations. n6 In such circumstances, the rules reflect a policy decision that other interests, primarily the protection of other parties and absentees, outweigh the interest in the plaintiff's autonomy. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 19.01 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Gwartz v. Jefferson Memorial Hosp., 23 F.3d 1426, 1428 (8th Cir. 1994) (Rule 19 governs when joinder of a particular person is compulsory).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Laker Airways, Inc. v. British Airways, PLC, 182 F.3d 843, 848 n.7 (11th Cir. 1999) (after joinder of party is determined not feasible under Rule 19(a), trial court will proceed with analysis of Rule 19(b) to determine whether suit should proceed in absence of party).

(n5)Footnote 4. Lopez v. Martin Luther King, Jr. Hosp., 97 F.R.D. 24, 28 (C.D. Cal. 1983) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a) (permitting defendant to implead third-party defendants who owe defendant indemnity or contribution for all or part of plaintiff's claim).

(n7)Footnote 6. Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc. v. Shepard Niles, Inc., 11 F.3d 399, 404 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Lopez v. Martin Luther King, Jr. Hosp., 97 F.R.D. 24, 28 (C.D. Cal. 1983) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
A. JOINDER OF PERSONS NEEDED FOR JUST ADJUDICATION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.02

§ 14.02 Traditional Classification of Parties for Joinder Purposesn*

[1] Joinder Rules Traditionally Dependent on Party Classification

Courts have traditionally classified parties into three types for joinder purposes: proper, necessary, and indispensable. Although the current rules do not explicitly use the terms "proper," "necessary," and "indispensable," the courts still use these expressions to analyze and discuss how the "required joinder" rules function. n1 These three categories of parties may be viewed as categories on a continuum from broader to narrower, with the broader types encompassing the narrower. n2 Thus, a "proper party" is the broadest category, defining those parties who may be brought in or left out at the plaintiff's option. n3 As a subcategory of proper parties, "necessary parties" (now referred to in Rule 19 as "required parties") consist of proper parties that are so closely related to the pending litigation that their absence creates a risk of harm, either to another party, or to an absentee. The rules have incorporated a policy that avoiding such harm is more important than giving the plaintiff the autonomy to choose parties. Therefore, the court will order joinder of necessary parties if such joinder can be implemented, or is "feasible." n4 n5 Finally, an "indispensable party" is a subcategory of necessary parties, consisting of necessary parties who cannot be joined and whose absence creates a powerful risk of harm, either to an existing party or to an absentee so that the court will dismiss the pending case rather than take the risk by proceeding without the party. n6

An attorney must remember that the labels used in joinder definitions do not replace proper analysis under the feasible and permissive joinder rules. For example, the term "indispensable" is a label placed on an absentee only after completing an analytical process and concluding that the pending action must be dismissed. n6.1 Thus, "indispensability" becomes relevant only after the court identifies a necessary party whose joinder cannot be effected. n7

[2] Proper Party

Proper parties are those who are encompassed by Rule 20, the permissive party rule; n1 therefore, proper parties are parties who may (but need not) be joined in a particular case. Proper parties are those whose claims arise, or against whom claims arise, from the same transaction or occurrence and will raise at least one common question of law or fact. Rule 20 is optional, however, and a plaintiff remains free to refuse to either join proper parties or to leave them to sue or be sued in other cases. Because these other cases could involve the same transaction or occurrence as the pending case, failure to join proper parties may cause duplicative litigation. However, because Rule 20 is permissive, the plaintiff is free to join as many or as few proper parties as it desires. n2

For reasons such as limitations on subject matter jurisdiction or litigation strategy, the plaintiff may structure the case without joining all proper parties. The fact that the plaintiff's litigation structure may run the risk of these systemic harms is irrelevant under the permissive party joinder rule. That rule implicitly recognizes that plaintiff autonomy in this regard is a more important goal than avoiding duplicative litigation. n3

[3] Required Party

A "required party" used to be referred to as either a "necessary party" or as a "person needed for a just adjudication." n1 Sometimes courts and attorneys still use the traditional term "necessary party" to refer to this type of absentee person. n2

An absent person is a "required party" if the person is subject to service of process and joinder of the person will not deprive the court of subject-matter jurisdiction. A required party must be joined as a party if one of two circumstances exist:

1) In the person's absence, the court cannot accord complete relief among existing parties; n2.1 or 2) the person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that disposing of the action in the person's absence may: (a) as a practical matter impair or impede the person's ability to protect the interest, n2.2 or (b) leave an existing party subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of the interest. n2.3

If a required party has not been joined, the court must order that the person be made a party. A person who refuses to join as a plaintiff may be made either a defendant or, in a proper case, an involuntary plaintiff. n2.4

As discussed in [1], above, an indispensable party is a subcategory of required party. "Required" refers to those absentees who should be joined in the pending case; if joinder is infeasible, however, the action may continue without required parties. By contrast, an indispensable party refers to an absentee who must be joined in the pending case if it is to go forward; in other words, if joinder is infeasible for an indispensable party the action must be dismissed. n3 Finally, a party is a required party only if complete relief may not be accorded among those who are already parties to the action, the party's interests may not be protected without its presence as a party, and there is a risk of inconsistent judgments. n4

[4] Indispensable Party

An "indispensable party" is a conclusory term applied to a person after the test in Rule 19(b) is applied. n1 Thus the term refers to an absentee and "required party" n2 whose joinder is not feasible and whose absence causes a court to dismiss the case rather than proceed without the required party. A court considers the following four factors in determining whether the court must dismiss the case:

1. the extent to which a judgment rendered in the person's absence might prejudice that person or the existing parties; n3

2. the extent to which any prejudice could be lessened or avoided by: (a) protective provisions in the judgment; (b) shaping the relief; or (c) other measures; n4

3. whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence would be adequate; n5 and

4. whether the plaintiff would have an adequate remedy if the action were dismissed for nonjoinder. n6

Thus, required parties are absentees who have an interest in the controversy and who ought to be made parties in order that the court may act; and indispensable parties are absentees who not only have an interest in the controversy but an interest of such a nature that a final decree cannot be made without either affecting that interest or leaving the controversy in such a condition that its final termination would be entirely inconsistent with equity and good conscience. n7 Because Rule 19 is designed to protect the rights of an absentee party, both trial courts and appellate courts should consider on their own initiative whether a person is an indispensable party to litigation, even if it is not raised by the parties to the action, when the possibility of such joinder comes to the attention of the court. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 19.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. *See MacDermid, Inc. v. Selle, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16057, at 10-13 (D. Conn. 2008) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a),(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Davis v. United States, 192 F.3d 951, 959 (10th Cir. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See [3], below; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. [Reserved]

(n7)Footnote 6. See [4], below.

(n8)Footnote 6.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b), Committee Note to 2007 Amendments.

(n9)Footnote 7. Kunica v. St. Jean Financial, Inc., 63 F. Supp. 2d 342, 350-351 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20 (discussed in § 14.20 et seq.).

(n11)Footnote 2. Chemical Leaman Tank Lines, Inc. v. Aetna Cas. and Surety Co., 177 F.3d 210, 223 (3d Cir. 1999) .

(n12)Footnote 3. See Jarriel v. General Motors Corp., 835 F. Supp. 639, 640-641 (N.D. Ga. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n14)Footnote 2. Picciotto v. Cont'l Cas. Co., 512 F.3d 9, 16-17 (1st Cir. 2008) .

(n15)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(A).

(n16)Footnote 2.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(i).

(n17)Footnote 2.3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(i).

(n18)Footnote 2.4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2).

(n19)Footnote 3. Davis v. United States, 192 F.3d 951, 957-959 (10th Cir. 1999) (discussion of distinction between necessary and indispensable parties); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a); see also [4], below.

(n20)Footnote 4. Johnson v. Smithsonian Inst., 189 F.3d 180, 188 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n21)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b), Committee Note to 2007 Amendments.

(n22)Footnote 2. See [3], above.

(n23)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(1).

(n24)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(2).

(n25)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(3).

(n26)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(4).

(n27)Footnote 7. Owens-Illinois, Inc. v. Meade, 186 F.3d 435, 440-441 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n28)Footnote 8. Mastercard Int'l, Inc. v. Visa Int'l Serv. Ass'n, 471 F.3d 377, 382-383 (2d Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

25 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
A. JOINDER OF PERSONS NEEDED FOR JUST ADJUDICATION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.03

§ 14.03 Summary of Analysis Used for Joinder of Required Partyn*

The inquiry regarding joinder of a required party is a three-step process: n1

First, the court must determine if joinder is required; under this step the court must determine whether the absentee should be joined, that is, the absentee is needed for a just adjudication as prescribed in three factual situations: (1) without joinder complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties; (2) nonjoinder may as a practical matter impair or impede the absentee's ability to protect its interest; or (3) nonjoinder would put a current party to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations. n2

Second, if the absentee is necessary under any of the three situations in the first step, the court must determine whether joinder of the absentee is feasible. Several factors affect feasibility of joinder: joinder will not be feasible if it destroys subject matter jurisdiction; joinder will not be feasible if the court cannot exercise personal jurisdiction over the absentee; and finally, if a joined absentee objects to venue as improper with respect to the absentee, the court must treat the case as though joinder were not feasible. n3 If joinder is feasible, the court may order that the absentee be made a party. n4

If joinder is not feasible for any of the three reasons described above, the court must proceed to the third and final step, which essentially is whether even though the absentee is needed for a just adjudication, the court should allow the litigation to proceed without the absentee or should it dismiss the pending suit. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 19.02, 19.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Western M. R. Co. v. Harbor Ins. Co., 910 F.2d 960, 962 n.5 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (Rule 19 prescribes three-step process even though steps may appear obscured by its language).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(A),(B); see § 14.04[1].

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1),(3); see §§ 14.04[2][b]-[d].

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2); see § 14.04[2][e].

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a); see § 14.05.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
A. JOINDER OF PERSONS NEEDED FOR JUST ADJUDICATION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.04

§ 14.04 Court's Determination Whether Party Needed for Adjudication Must Be Joined if Feasiblen*

[1] Persons Needed for Just Adjudication

[a] Three Situations When Absentees Are Needed

The title of Rule 19 refers to "required joinder of parties." Rule 19(a) prescribes three situations in which joinder of an absent person is required: n1

1. Under the "complete relief" clause, the absentee is necessary if without joinder complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties. n2 This clause reflects the federal system's interest in efficiency and avoidance of inconsistent results. It does not require that the absentee claim an interest in the subject matter of the pending suit. The complete relief clause is not usually the most critical factor; cases relying on this provision to compel joinder usually also rely on at least one of the other joinder clauses. n3

2. Under the "impair or impede" clause, an absentee is needed for a just adjudication if the absentee is so situated that nonjoinder may as a practical matter impair or impede its ability to protect that interest. n4 In other words, this clause is one of the "prejudice" or "harm" bases of compulsory joinder because joinder is required to avoid harm to the absentee's interest. n5

3. Under the "multiple liability" clause, an absentee is needed for adjudication if the absentee's nonjoinder would put a current party (almost invariably the defendant) to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations. n6 Under this test, joinder of the absentee is necessary not to avoid harm to the absentee but to the defendant. n7

If an absentee is not needed for a just adjudication under any of the three tests described above, the court may not require that the absentee be joined in the action. n8 Of course, parties who are not needed for a just adjudication also may not be the basis for the dismissal of an action. n9

[b] Inability of Court to Accord Complete Relief

An absentee is needed for a just adjudication if without joinder of the absentee the court cannot accord complete relief among those already parties to the action. n10 Unlike the other two bases for joinder set forth in the rule, this provision does not require that the absentee possess an interest in the subject of the litigation or that nonjoinder result in harm either to the absentee or to an extant party. Rather, this provision is grounded in the federal courts' interest in the comprehensive resolution of disputes and the avoidance of duplicative litigation. n11 The purpose of the "complete relief" clause is to avoid duplicative litigation. The primary concern is in rendering complete justice among those already joined, not in finding that an absentee is necessary simply to avoid multiple litigation. n12 The courts use the clause to ensure that they do not enter partial or "hollow" judgments, that is, judgments which do not effectively resolve the current parties' entire controversy. n12.1

Most courts have interpreted the "complete relief" clause in a narrow manner, which means that the court will require joinder when nonjoinder would preclude the court from effecting relief not in some general sense but specifically between current parties to the action. In other words, joinder will be required only when the absentee's nonjoinder precludes the court from rendering complete justice among parties who have already been joined. n13 Thus interpreted, the rule may not be invoked merely because some absentee may cause future litigation. n14 Thus, the fact that the absentee might later frustrate the outcome of the litigation does not by itself make the absentee necessary for complete relief. n15 Furthermore, the "complete relief" clause does not refer to possible relief against other potential defendants, n16 or other possible remedies. n17 Finally, the "complete relief" provision does not absolutely require final adjudication of all claims even among all of the current parties, provided that the relief actually afforded to the parties in the action is meaningful. n18

[c] Nonjoinder Would Impair or Impede Interest of Absentee

[i] Absentee Must Have Interest in Subject Matter of Litigation

An absentee is deemed a required party if the absentee claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and if that absentee is so situated that nonjoinder would as a practical matter impair or impede the person's ability to protect that interest. n19 The "impair or impede" clause is designed to enable the absentee to protect its own interest. n20 The rule specifically requires that the potential harm threaten an absentee's interest relating to the subject of the action. n21 This interest must be legally protectable not merely a financial interest or interest of convenience. n22

The absentee must have a direct stake in the pending litigation; an interest in related subject matter is not sufficient to support definition as a required party. n23

[ii] Practical Application of "Impair or Impede" Clause

Once it is established that the absentee has a sufficient interest in the litigation, the question then becomes whether nonjoinder of the absentee may as a practical matter impair or impede the absentee's ability to protect that interest. This means that the impact of an adjudication on the absentee's interest must be direct and immediate. Consequently, if the outcome of the litigation may have a practical effect on the absentee's interest, the absentee is a party needed for adjudication. n24 Thus, the assessment of the possible impairment to an absentee's ability to protect its interest is a functional assessment, as opposed to a theoretical one. n25

Rule 19 does not require an absolute showing that the absentee's interest will necessarily be harmed by nonjoinder; rather, it is concerned that nonjoinder "may" result in such harm. On the other hand, the harm cannot be merely conjectural; the mere theoretical possibility of prejudice does not require joinder. n26 Instead, the possibility of harm must be such that nonjoinder would be unfair. n27

The emphasis on practical impairment of an absentee's interest reflects the fact that an absentee's interest is rarely affected as a matter of law in the res judicata or collateral estoppel sense, because, under due process, persons generally are not bound by a judgment in a suit to which they were not parties. n28 Only on rare occasions will the stare decisis effect of a judgment harm the absentee's ability to protect its interest. n29 However, stare decisis will rarely pose a practical threat to an absentee because the precedential aspect of case law generally applies only to appellate court opinions, and only regarding matters of law. The holdings of a trial court on issues of fact simply do not constitute binding precedent. Second, the use of stare decisis in some instances may violate due process, and judgments in a separate case between different parties do not bind persons who are not joined or represented. n30

[d] Nonjoinder of Absentee Would Make Current Party Subject to Multiple Liabilities

An absentee with a claimed interest in the litigation is a required party if nonjoinder would leave any of the persons already parties (usually the defendant) subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations by reason of the claimed interest. n31 The "multiple liability" clause does not require that the parties be so situated that nonjoinder of the absentee will necessarily subject a party to a particular risk. It requires merely that there is some substantial risk of harm. n32 However, the risk of multiple obligations must be more than merely possible, n33 and more than conjectural. n34 The inquiry is practical in that it requires a court to consider all relevant factors, including the balance between the plaintiff's choice of forum, on the one hand, and the policies of judicial economy and fairness to other parties, on the other. n34.1

Practitioners should note that the "multiple liability" clause compels joinder of an absentee to avoid inconsistent obligations and not to avoid inconsistent adjudications. n35 Thus, sequential claims for damages do not necessarily pose the necessary risk of harm. For example, if there are several victims of a tortious act and they sue consecutively, one plaintiff may lose, and yet a later plaintiff may win on precisely the same theory. Although the results are inconsistent, the defendant's obligations are not; paying damages to one claimant and not to another is not the sort of inconsistent obligation the clause addresses. Rule 19 is consistent in this regard with the similar provisions applicable to class actions. n36

Furthermore, joint tortfeasors are not necessarily parties needed for a just adjudication. n37 The possibility that because of an absentee joint tortfeasor, a defendant may be liable in the original action and lose a subsequent action for contribution against the joint tortfeasor is not the kind of inconsistency contemplated by the "multiple liability" clause. n38 The "multiple liability" clause does require joinder, however, in those cases when a party complying with one inconsistent court order might breach another inconsistent order. n39

[2] Determination if Joinder is Feasible

[a] Three Situations When Joinder is Not Feasible

If an absent party is a "required party," the court must join the party in the litigation unless joinder is not feasible. Rule 19(a) gives three reasons why joinder may not be feasible: n1 n2

1. If claims by or against the absentee do not invoke federal subject matter jurisdiction. n3 This aspect of the rule refers to the possibility that joining the absentee will destroy diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. The assessment requires the court to align the absentee on the side of the dispute most closely reflecting its interest. n4

2. If the court cannot exercise personal jurisdiction over the absentee. n5 The federal court will make this determination based on considerations such as the absentee's amenability to service of process, and also by state long arm statutes permitting service of process outside the state in which the court sits. n6

3. If the absentee, once joined, objects that venue is improper as to the absentee. n7 This rule is based on the principle that the rule governs only the procedural propriety of joinder and is secondary to requirements such as the venue statutes governing the proper place of trial in federal court. n8

[b] Claim by or Against is Not Covered by Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Rule 19(a) is a joinder rule that governs only the procedural propriety of joinder and, thus, does not affect the jurisdiction of the federal court. n9 Furthermore, because every claim asserted in federal court must be supported by federal subject matter jurisdiction all claims by or against a party needed for a just adjudication must be supported by subject matter jurisdiction. If any claim is not, joinder is not feasible under the compulsory party joinder rule, and the court may not compel joinder of the absentee. n10 The court must then address the question of whether to proceed without the absentee or to dismiss the pending case. n11

The principal grounds for federal subject matter jurisdiction are either the presence of a federal question or diversity of citizenship. n12 When a claim involving an absentee needed for adjudication invokes federal question jurisdiction, joinder is feasible because subject matter jurisdiction poses no impediment. However, in determining whether joinder is feasible under diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, the court must align the absentee on the proper "side" of the litigation, as is the case in any diversity of citizenship case. The court always has the authority to align parties in accordance with their true interest in the litigation. n13 If the proper alignment of the absentee required party violates the complete diversity rule, joinder is not feasible. n14

Another issue that may arise is that of supplemental jurisdiction, which allows a court to entertain a nonfederal, nondiversity claim if the claim is so closely related to the underlying case, which has already properly invoked some basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction, that the claim constitutes part of the same "case or controversy." n15 However, supplemental jurisdiction is of limited use as a basis of feasible jurisdiction, because courts have generally not exercised supplemental jurisdiction over claims by or against parties needed for a just adjudication, on the grounds that the supplemental jurisdiction statute's exceptions clause removes jurisdiction with regard to specific claims n16 when the underlying basis of federal jurisdiction is diversity of citizenship. n17

Therefore, in cases that invoke diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, supplemental jurisdiction is not available to support claims by a plaintiff joined under the compulsory joinder rule. The statute expressly proscribes supplemental jurisdiction over "claims by persons proposed to be joined as plaintiffs under Rule 19. n18 However, nothing in the supplemental jurisdiction statute precludes supplemental jurisdiction over claims by defendants joined under the compulsory joinder rule. n19 Therefore, a party needed for a just adjudication party joined as a defendant could make a claim against the plaintiff and argue that the statute permits supplemental jurisdiction. n20

[c] Joinder Not Feasible Because Absentee Cannot Be Served With Process

Joinder of an absentee required party is not feasible if the absentee is not subject to service of process in the pending case. n21 Even though a required party, if the absentee cannot be brought within the personal jurisdiction of the district court, joinder is not feasible, and the court must then decide whether to proceed without the absentee, or dismiss the pending case. n22

Rule 4 governs service of process in virtually every civil action in federal court, including the joinder of parties needed for a just adjudication. Rule 4 permits service of process anywhere within the territory of the state in which the federal court sits and permits service outside that state only if state law provides. Thus, federal courts may avail themselves of state long-arm provisions. n23 Rule 4 also expressly permits service outside the forum state to accomplish joinder of necessary parties. n24 This permits service of process on the necessary party within 100 miles of the federal courthouse in which the action is pending. n25 While this provision is applicable in major metropolitan areas that encompass more than one state, it is not used that often because of general expansion in availability of extraterritorial service under state long-arm statutes. n26

[d] Joinder Not Feasible Because Absentee Objects to Improper Venue

If the court finds that an absentee is a required party, the court must order that the absentee be made a party, if feasible. n27 If an absentee who has been joined as a required party objects to venue, and joinder of that party would make the venue of the action improper, that party must be dismissed from the action. n28 The Judicial Code provides generally that venue may be laid in civil cases either in any district in which all defendants reside or in any district in which a substantial part of the claim arose. n29 Accordingly, an absentee required party who is dismissed because of a venue objection is treated as one who cannot be made a party. In other words, the objection to venue makes joinder of the absentee not feasible. n29.1

The terms of Rule 19(a), however, do not preclude a court from transferring a case to a proper venue where the absentee can then be compelled to join as a required party, n30 provided that it is a federal district in which all parties and the absentee could be subject to personal jurisdiction and in which venue would be proper. Alternatively, because the absentee has been joined and then objects to venue, it can be argued that venue in the case as a whole is improper, and that the case can be transferred. n31

[3] Court Must Join Required Parties When Feasible

When the court finds an absent person is a required party and that joinder of the absentee is feasible, it must give the plaintiff an opportunity to add the absentee as a party. n1 If the plaintiff refuses or otherwise fails to join the person, the court may dismiss the action because of plaintiff's failure to comply, n2 or the court must itself order that the absentee be made a party. n3

When it orders a party joined, the court must determine the absentee's proper alignment in the controversy. n4 If it determines that the absentee should be joined as a plaintiff, the court must issue an order to that effect, and the party must be served with process. If the absentee declines the offer to participate as a plaintiff, the absentee may be made a defendant, or in a proper case, an involuntary plaintiff. n5 If the absentee is subject to personal jurisdiction, the court will order the absentee joined and served as a defendant. It may then realign the absentee as a plaintiff for diversity of citizenship purposes. n6 Even though these issues are matters only of civil procedure, the court must accord the absentee all appropriate procedural safeguards, including a meaningful opportunity to be heard. If the court fails to do so, any action it takes may be invalidated as a violation of the absentee's due process rights. n7

As noted above, Rule 19(a) provides that the court has the authority to order an absentee joined as an involuntary plaintiff in a "proper case," n7.0.1 which is not defined in the rule. However, the involuntary plaintiff doctrine is disfavored. Consequently, the courts have developed a test that requires that the absent person (1) has an obligation to permit its name or title to be used to protect rights asserted in the action; (2) is beyond the jurisdiction of the court; and (3) has refused to voluntarily join in the action following notification. n7.1 The rule clearly does not mean that whenever an absent party is properly alignable as a plaintiff in a lawsuit, the absent party may be brought in under Rule 19(a) as an involuntary plaintiff. n8 The courts have found such a relationship to exist in cases involving exclusive licensees of patents and beneficial owners of copyrights. n9

Under the involuntary plaintiff doctrine, an involuntary plaintiff may be bound by the judgment even though it never consented to join the case and was not served with process. In fact, the doctrine is available only if the involuntary plaintiff is beyond the personal jurisdiction of the court. n10 However, there must have been an attempt to notify the involuntary plaintiff of the action and offer the opportunity to join before the court will order an involuntary plaintiff joinder. n11 Furthermore, the current plaintiff must have standing to sue. n12 The court itself has discretion to notify a necessary absentee of the pendency of the case. n12.1 The current plaintiff or defendant has the burden of proving that the conditions for using the involuntary plaintiff doctrine are satisfied. n13 In this regard, a defendant who wishes to assert a counterclaim against an absentee is allowed to prove that the involuntary plaintiff doctrine applies, in the same manner as the current plaintiff could. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary Parties

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 19.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. See [b], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(i).

(n6)Footnote 5. See [c], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(ii).

(n8)Footnote 7. See [d], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. Bakia v. County of Los Angeles, 687 F.2d 299, 301 (9th Cir. 1982) (it is a misapplication of Rule 19(a) to require joinder of parties who are not needed for a just adjudication, and who have a separate cause of action entirely).

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(A).

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1966 Amendments; see Laker Airways, Inc. v. British Airways, PLC, 182 F.3d 843, 850 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Friends of the E. Lake Sammamish Trail v. City of Sammamish, 361 F. Supp. 2d 1260, 1271 (W.D. Wash. 2005) .

(n14)Footnote 12.1. Northrop Corp. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 705 F.2d 1030, 1043 (9th Cir. 1983) .

(n15)Footnote 13. Angst v. Royal Maccabees Life Ins. Co., 77 F.3d 701, 705 (3d Cir. 1996) (completeness of relief is determined on basis of those persons who are already parties and not as between party and absent person whose joinder is sought).

(n16)Footnote 14. Coastal Modular Corp. v. Laminators, Inc., 635 F.2d 1102, 1108 (4th Cir. 1980) (United States Navy was not party needed for adjudication in contract action between airport contractors merely because defendant theorized possibility that Navy would institute suit against defendant).

(n17)Footnote 15. Puyallup Indian Tribe v. Port of Tacoma, 717 F.2d 1251, 1255 (9th Cir. 1983) (in ejectment action between tribe and port to settle title to property, joinder of State of Washington not required even though state might subsequently challenge tribe's title).

(n18)Footnote 16. Angst v. Royal Maccabees Life Ins. Co., 77 F.3d 701, 705-706 (3d Cir. 1996) .

(n19)Footnote 17. Gwartz v. Jefferson Memorial Hosp., 23 F.3d 1426, 1429 (8th Cir. 1994) (in action by doctor against hospital for wrongful termination, fact that doctor sought only personal damages and not those accruing to his absentee professional corporation meant that corporation was not necessary party).

(n20)Footnote 18. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. Hotel Rittenhouse Assocs., 844 F.2d 1050, 1054 n.5 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n21)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(i).

(n22)Footnote 20. Marra v. Burgdorf Realtors, Inc., 726 F. Supp. 1000, 1004 (E.D. Pa. 1989) (in action by asserted property owner against real estate agent and firm for fraud and misrepresentation in sale of plaintiff's property, plaintiff's son as record title holder was necessary party under Rule 19(a)(2)(i) because litigation would determine ownership).

(n23)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(i).

(n24)Footnote 22. Northrop Corp. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 705 F.2d 1030, 1043 (9th Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 849 (1983) .

(n25)Footnote 23. Atlantic Aero, Inc. v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 93 F.R.D. 333, 335 (M.D.N.C. 1981) (when plaintiff claimed that plane crashed due to defendant's faulty parts and defendant countered that absent pilot was indispensable because pilot's suit against defendant might be impeded by finding that pilot caused crash, court held that pilot was not necessary under Rule 19(a) because plaintiff's suit would have no preclusive effect on pilot's suit and pilot had no suitable interest in plaintiff's suit).

(n26)Footnote 24. Davis v. United States, 192 F.3d 951, 957-959 (10th Cir. 1999) ; see B. Fernandez & Hnos., Inc. v. Kellogg USA, Inc., 440 F.3d 541, 544-545 (1st Cir. 2006) (noting similarity between Rule 19(a)(2)(i) and Rule 24(a)(2) governing intervention; both require "impair or impede" analysis); see also § 14.103 (intervention requirements).

(n27)Footnote 25. Lopez v. Martin Luther King, Jr. Hosp., 97 F.R.D. 24, 29 (C.D. Cal. 1983) (interest requirement not limited to theoretical legal interest based on adoption of strict legal definitions and technicalities; rather, interest is to be determined from practical perspective).

(n28)Footnote 26. Cortez v. County of Los Angeles, 96 F.R.D. 427, 430 (C.D. Cal. 1983) .

(n29)Footnote 27. Bennett v. Tucker, 827 F.2d 63 (7th Cir. 1987) (Rule 19(a)(2)(i) requires persons to be joined if the judgment in pending action would so definitively establish their legal rights, that it would be inequitable not to join them).

(n30)Footnote 28. Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc. v. Shepard Niles, Inc., 11 F.3d 399, 410 (3d Cir. 1993) .

(n31)Footnote 29. See, e.g., Jansen v. City of Cincinnati, 904 F.2d 336, 342 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n32)Footnote 30. Washington Elec. Coop., Inc. v. Massachusetts Mun. Wholesale Elec. Co., 922 F.2d 92, 98 (2d Cir. 1990) (doctrine of stare decisis generally does not control future, related actions by absentees).

(n33)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(ii).

(n34)Footnote 32. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(ii); Int'l Gamco, Inc. v. Multimedia Games, Inc., 504 F.3d 1273, 1278 (Fed. Cir. 2007) .

(n35)Footnote 33. Temple Univ. Hosp., Inc. v. Group Health, Inc., 413 F. Supp. 2d 420, 426-427 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n36)Footnote 34. Professional Hockey Club Cent. Sports Club of the Army v. Detroit Red Wings, Inc., 787 F. Supp. 706, 715 (E.D. Mich. 1992) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n37)Footnote 34.1. Field v. Volkswagenwerk AG, 626 F.2d 293, 302 (3d Cir. 1980) ; Temple Univ. Hosp., Inc. v. Group Health, Inc., 413 F. Supp. 2d 420, 427 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n38)Footnote 35. Micheel v. Haralson, 586 F. Supp. 169, 171 (E.D. Pa. 1983) (rule protects against obligations that are inconsistent rather than adjudications that are inconsistent).

(n39)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.

(n40)Footnote 37. Temple v. Synthes Corp., 498 U.S. 5, 7, 111 S. Ct. 315, 112 L. Ed. 2d 263 (1990) .

(n41)Footnote 38. Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc. v. Shepard Niles, Inc., 11 F.3d 399, 411 (3d Cir. 1993) ; see Temple Univ. Hosp., Inc. v. Group Health, Inc., 413 F. Supp. 2d 420, 427 (E.D. Pa. 2005) .

(n42)Footnote 39. Micheel v. Haralson, 586 F. Supp. 169, 171 (E.D. Pa. 1983) (under multiple liability clause, person is protected against situations in which there would be two court orders and compliance with one might breach the other).

(n43)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n44)Footnote 2. [Reserved]

(n45)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n46)Footnote 4. See [b], below.

(n47)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n48)Footnote 6. See [c], below.

(n49)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(3).

(n50)Footnote 8. See [d], below.

(n51)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n52)Footnote 10. Owens-Illinois, Inc. v. Meade, 186 F.3d 435, 440-441 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n53)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b); see § 14.05.

(n54)Footnote 12. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (federal question); 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(2) (diversity).

(n55)Footnote 13. Keith v. Volpe, 858 F.2d 467, 476 (9th Cir. 1988) (in determining existence of diversity jurisdiction, court is not bound by plaintiff's alignment of parties in original pleading).

(n56)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1); see Owens-Illinois, Inc. v. Meade, 186 F.3d 435, 440-441 (4th Cir. 1999) .

(n57)Footnote 15. Allendale Mut. Ins. Co. v. Excess Ins. Co., 62 F. Supp. 2d 1116, 1127-1128 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n58)Footnote 16. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n59)Footnote 17. Murphy v. Newport Waterfront Landing, Inc., 806 F. Supp. 322, 325 (D.R.I. 1992) (nondiverse party's joinder was not feasible in tort action against bar owner by injured patron).

(n60)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 19.

(n61)Footnote 19. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19.

(n62)Footnote 20. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n63)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

(n64)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b); Teamsters Local Union No. 171 v. Keal Driveaway Co., 173 F.3d 915, 917 (4th Cir. 1999) ; see also § 14.05.

(n65)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(1)(A).

(n66)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4, 19(a).

(n67)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(1)(B).

(n68)Footnote 26. Freiman v. Lazur, 925 F. Supp. 14, 26 (D.D.C. 1996) .

(n69)Footnote 27. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n70)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(3); see EEOC v. Peabody W. Coal Co., 400 F.3d 774, 779 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n71)Footnote 29. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a)(1); (2) (venue in diversity of citizenship cases); 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(1); (2) (venue in federal question cases).

(n72)Footnote 29.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1966 Amendments; Tick v. Cohen, 787 F.2d 1490, 1493 (11th Cir. 1986) (venue limitations may be basis to bar joinder).

(n73)Footnote 30. Pauley v. Pauley, 58 F.R.D. 386, 387 (D. Md. 1972) (if party needed for just adjudication cannot be joined, case may be dismissed or transferred).

(n74)Footnote 31. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a) (in interest of justice, court may transfer case from improper venue to proper venue).

(n75)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2); Sladek v. Bell Sys. Management Pension Plan, 880 F.2d 972, 980 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n76)Footnote 2. Stanley v. Darlington County Sch. Dist., 84 F.3d 707, 714 (4th Cir. 1996) (if court agrees that absentee is required party and joinder feasible, plaintiff is given choice of amending its complaint to add indispensable second defendant or suffering dismissal of its complaint).

(n77)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2); RPR & Assocs. v. O'Brien/Atkins Assocs., 921 F. Supp. 1457, 1463 (M.D.N.C. 1995) , aff'd without opinion, 103 F.3d 120 (4th Cir. 1996) .

(n78)Footnote 4. See [2][b], above.

(n79)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2).

(n80)Footnote 6. Babcock v. Maple Leaf, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 428 (E.D. Tenn. 1976) .

(n81)Footnote 7. Eakins v. Reed, 710 F.2d 184, 187 (4th Cir. 1983) .

(n82)Footnote 7.0.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2).

(n83)Footnote 7.1. See South Dakota ex rel. South Dakota R.R. Auth. v. Burlington N. & Santa Fe R.R. Co., 280 F. Supp. 2d 919, 935 (D.S.D. 2003) .

(n84)Footnote 8. Promatek Indus. v. Equitrac Corp., 185 F.R.D. 520, 522-523 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (when recovery systems manufacturer commenced action against competitor alleging federal antitrust violations, deceptive trade practices, tortious interference with business relationships, unfair competition, and misappropriation of trade secrets, independent distributor of plaintiff's products was not proper party for involuntary plaintiff status).

(n85)Footnote 9. Ferrara v. Rodale Press, Inc., 54 F.R.D. 3 (E.D. Pa. 1972) (applied involuntary plaintiff doctrine in copyright action).

(n86)Footnote 10. Dublin Water Co. v. Delaware River Basin Comm'n, 443 F. Supp. 310, 315 (E.D. Pa. 1977) .

(n87)Footnote 11. Babcock v. Maple Leaf, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 428, 431 (E.D. Tenn. 1976) .

(n88)Footnote 12. Coast v. Hunt Oil Co., 195 F.2d 870, 872 (5th Cir. 1952) .

(n89)Footnote 12.1. Mastercard Int'l, Inc. v. Visa Int'l Serv. Ass'n, 471 F.3d 377, 383 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n90)Footnote 13. Followay Prods., Inc. v. Maurer, 603 F.2d 72, 75 (9th Cir. 1979) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n91)Footnote 14. Studebaker Corp. v. Algripco, Inc., 331 F. Supp. 375, 378 (N.D. Ohio 1970) (defendant permitted to amend answer to add counterclaim charging licensee and patent owner with fraud and antitrust violations and to join patent owner as new party plaintiff).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
A. JOINDER OF PERSONS NEEDED FOR JUST ADJUDICATION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.05

§ 14.05 Court's Determination Whether to Dismiss Action When Joinder of Necessary Party is Not Feasiblen*

[1] Equity and Good Conscience Determine Whether Dismissal Is Proper

[a] Court Considers Four Factors to Determine Equity and Good Conscience

If the court determines that an absentee is a required party n1 but that joinder of the absentee is not feasible, n2 the court must either proceed with the pending litigation or it must dismiss the case. The court must base its decision whether to proceed or dismiss on "equity and good conscience." Rule 19 lists four factors listed below for the court to consider in its determination. The factors are not arranged in order of importance, and no factor is determinative or necessarily more important than another; furthermore, the four factors are not exclusive. n3

The primary issue is equity and good conscience, which permits the court to consider all circumstances relating to the fairness and advisability of either proceeding or dismissing. n4 The multiple factors must bear on the decision whether to proceed without a required person. This decision must be based on factors varying with each different case, some such factors being substantive, some procedural, some compelling by themselves, and some subject to balancing against opposing interests. Rule 19(b) cannot be applied in a vacuum, and it may require some preliminary assessment of the merits of certain claims. For example, a court must examine to some extent the claims presented and the interests likely to be asserted both by the joined parties and the absent entities or persons. n5

The four factors listed below overlap with each other, n6 and also may overlap with the factors considered by the court to determine whether the absentee was a person initially needed for a just adjudication. n6.1 However, the fact that the considerations are similar does not dispense with the required analysis for each step. n7

The four factors that the court must consider to make its ultimate decision to proceed or dismiss are: n7.1

1. The extent to which a judgment rendered without the absentee might be prejudicial. n8

2. Whether the court can shape the litigation to avoid the sort of prejudice assessed in the first factor. n9 Under this factor, the court should consider whether prejudice could be lessened or avoided by: including protective provisions in the judgment; shaping the relief; or taking other measures. n9.1

3. Whether the judgment will be adequate without joinder of the absentee. n10

4. Whether the plaintiff would have an adequate remedy should the case be dismissed. n11

[b] Balancing Test

In its determination of whether in equity and good conscience the suit should proceed without the necessary party, the court balances the four factors that are specified in Rule 19(b). n12 The analysis of whether to proceed or dismiss also balances the various interests of the parties based on the particular facts of each case. n13 Thus, in addition to the four factors specified in Rule 19(b), the court must consider the underlying interests sought to be protected by the rule: the interest of the plaintiff in having a forum, the interest of the defendant in avoiding multiple litigation and inconsistent judgments, the interest of the absentee in avoiding prejudicial impact of a judgment to which it cannot be made a party, and the public and judicial interest in complete, consistent, and efficient resolution of disputes. n14 In deciding whether to proceed or dismiss, the court should keep interests such as those in mind. n15

The balancing test is flexible and must be made in a practical matter. n16 The issue of whether to proceed or dismiss is vested in the discretion of the district judge, n17 whose determination will not be overturned on appeal unless the court has abused its discretion. n18 When a court does determine that the case should be dismissed for nonjoinder, it should ensure that it creates a sufficient written record to permit appellate review of the dismissal. n19

[2] Whether Judgment Would Have Prejudicial Effect on Absentee or Party

[a] Court's Determination of Prejudicial Effect

The first factor listed in Rule 19(b) that the court must use to determine whether to proceed with or dismiss the case is the extent to which a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to the absentee or those who are already parties. n1 This factor is a determination of degree and is an assessment of the extent of the prejudice that will result from proceeding without the absentee, n1.1 because failure to join an absentee must cause at least some hardship either on the absentee or on a party; otherwise the absentee would not have been held necessary in the first place. However, only when the prejudice would be to the degree that it would offend equity and good conscience should the court use prejudice as a basis of dismissal, taken in consideration with the other factors enumerated in the rule. n2

Sometimes, nonjoinder of an absentee will cause prejudice to both the absentee and the defendant. n3 However, such dual prejudice is not required to warrant either a holding that the absentee is needed for adjudication under Rule 19(a) or a dismissal for nonjoinder if the absentee cannot be joined under Rule 19(b). The analysis of the rule considers the alternative of harm either to the absentee or to the defendant. Furthermore, because all factors are considered, the court need not base its decision solely on prejudice. n4

[b] Minimization of Prejudicial Effect by Party or Absentee May Allow Court to Proceed

In its determination of the extent of prejudice, n5 the court may properly consider whether the absentee's interest is fully represented by the parties already in the suit; n5.1 such representation could mitigate the potential harm to the absentee. n6 However, when considering the effect of representation, mere similarity of interest is not sufficient to prevent prejudice; the interest of the party and the absentee must be the same. n7

With respect to the absentee, the court may consider the absentee's ability to protect itself from prejudice. Furthermore, an absentee's refusal to intervene may be considered in calculating prejudice should the case proceed without the absentee. n8 Courts interpret a decision not to intervene as an indication that the absentee evaluates its interests as not being threatened by the litigation. The absentee's refusal to intervene in such a circumstance may justify the court's decision to proceed rather than dismiss, unless, of course, other factors (such as harm to the defendant) dictate dismissal. n9 The court may refuse to require the absentee to protect its own interest by intervention if it would result in the absentee's waiving an immunity to suit, n10 and in such circumstances, the court may well conclude that the action should be dismissed. n11

With respect to potential for harm to the defendant, the court may properly consider the defendant's options for avoiding prejudice. For example, if the defendant has a claim against an absentee for indemnity or contribution for all or part of plaintiff's claim in the pending case, it can implead the absentee. n12 Furthermore, a defendant sued regarding ownership of the res in property may invoke defensive interpleader to join all claimants to the pending case, and a defendant's failure to use this option when available would justify the court's refusal to dismiss the pending case. n13

[3] Minimization of Prejudicial Effect by Provisions of Court Order

The second factor in Rule 19(b) that the court must use to determine whether to proceed with or dismiss the case is the extent to which prejudice n1 may be lessened or avoided by: including protective provisions in the judgment; n2 shaping the relief; n2.1 or taking other measures. n2.2 For example, when specific performance or rescission of a contract will harm an absentee, the court may lessen the prejudicial effect by awarding monetary relief to the successful plaintiff. n3 If the case involves a dispute of a particular fund of money, the court could order that some amount sufficient to satisfy a subsequent claim by the absentee be left undistributed in the present action, or that a party post security for a particular amount).

In any event, the court should at least explore the option of adjusting or limiting its judgment in some way so that it does not affect the interests of the absentee before it dismisses the litigation. Other factors being equal, however, the district court may grant a dismissal if it cannot fashion a judgment to prevent prejudice. n4

[4] Whether Judgment Without Absentee Would Be Adequate

The third factor listed in Rule 19(b) that the court must use to determine whether to proceed with or dismiss the case is whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate. n1 Under this factor, the court must examine the potential outcome if the court decides to proceed rather than dismiss; in contrast, the fourth factor requires the court to consider the potential effect of dismissing. n2 Both considerations thus reflect not only the interest of protecting parties and absentees but also the interest of the courts and the public in complete, consistent, and efficient settlement of controversies. n3

If a judgment would have to be essentially hollow without the absentee, the court should dismiss rather than proceed. n4 For example, if a plaintiff seeks relief that will require an affirmative act by an absentee who cannot be joined it may make little sense to proceed. n5 Cases of this type are very similar to cases in which the plaintiff sues the wrong defendant and might be dismissed for failure to state a claim on which relief could be granted. n6

The "adequacy of judgment" consideration may operate in conjunction with the other considerations enumerated in the rule, especially the "shaping of relief" consideration of the second factor. If the court finds that proceeding without the absentee would cause a serious risk of prejudice, the court may examine the possibility of shaping relief to lessen the harmful effect and then consider the propriety of awarding relief that is less than complete. n7 Another potential interaction is the relationship between the adequacy of judgment and adequacy of remedy considerations. Thus, even if the court can award some relief, dismissal may be the superior disposition if there is an alternative forum in which all interested persons can be joined in a single case. It is appropriate to weigh the advantages of complete relief available in another forum against the concerns of duplicating expense and effort in light of the time and resources already expended in the pending case. n8

[5] Whether Remedy is Adequate If Case Were Dismissed

[a] Necessity of Adequate Remedy

The fourth factor listed in the Rule 19(b) "dismiss or proceed" analysis is whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder. n1 Under this factor, the court is required to consider the consequences of dismissing the pending case. This "adequacy of remedy" consideration complements the third factor, the adequacy of judgment analysis, which requires the court to consider the consequences of proceeding in the pending litigation and reflects the public interest i n resolving disputes completely, efficiently, and consistently. n2 This factor acknowledges that the decision to dismiss the pending case has direct effect on the plaintiff, who will have to take other steps to vindicate its rights. n2.1

Under the "adequacy of remedy" consideration, the court must assess what those steps might be and their probable effectiveness. The primary consideration under this factor is whether there is a satisfactory alternative forum in which the plaintiff can proceed. Such an alternative forum will only be superior to the present federal forum if all interested persons can be joined in a single case there. Otherwise, the alternative forum will be facing the same problem the court faces in the pending case. n3 In assessing the adequacy of the alternative forum, the court must determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to an adequate remedy, and not necessarily to precisely the same remedy that it sought in federal court. n4 Furthermore, there is no requirement that the plaintiff must proceed in a court in the United States. The preferred alternative forum may be in a foreign country. n5

[b] Adequacy of Remedy in Alternative State or Foreign Jurisdiction

When there is an alternative forum in which joinder can be achieved, it will usually be in a state court (or in a foreign court). n6 In such circumstances, many federal courts are willing to dismiss for nonjoinder of a necessary absentee when all interested persons, including the absentee, can be joined in state court. n7

However, if the absentee cannot be joined due to lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff usually does not have an adequate remedy in the state court in the forum where the federal court sits because that court has no more power to exercise personal jurisdiction than the federal court had. n8 On the other hand, if all parties and the absentee are subject to personal jurisdiction in another state, the court may transfer the case to a federal district court in that state, rather than dismiss. If an absentee is joined under the compulsory party joinder rule but raises a valid objection to venue, it may also be possible to transfer the action to a federal district that meets venue restrictions. n8.1

In most cases discussing the "adequacy of remedy" factor, joinder of the absentee is not feasible because it would deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction. In these cases, no other federal court would be a better alternative because no federal court will have subject matter jurisdiction over the claims involving all parties and the absentee. n9

If a court dismisses a federal case to allow complete resolution in state court, the decision often serves the interest of justice, furthers conservation of resources by avoiding duplicative litigation, and may further the policy interest of protecting the absentee and defendant by allowing joinder to avoid the harm which threatened them. The fourth factor also recognizes the plaintiff's right to seek redress. The practical effect of the rule is to force the plaintiff to share the litigation with others and to litigate in state court. While some plaintiffs may prefer that their cases go forward only in federal court, most courts reject unequivocally arguments that a state court will be less favorable to a plaintiff's claims. n10

The focus on an adequate alternative forum can thus channel the overall dispute to the only court that can handle it as a single unit. Furthermore, in diversity of citizenship cases state substantive law governs, which means that the rule also channels the case to the court most expert in the applicable law. n11

The fact that there is an alternative forum in which joinder of all parties can be achieved does not automatically warrant dismissal of the pending case. n12 As with other determinations under Rule 19, the court must consider all the facts of the particular case. Other factors under the indispensability analysis may require that the court proceed with the case. n13 Furthermore, problems with an alternative forum may make the alternative forum an inadequate remedy. For example, the commencement of litigation in the alternative forum may involve inordinate delay. n14 Courts will also take into consideration whether proceeding in the alternative forum would impose substantially greater expense on the plaintiff. n15 By contrast, the mere existence of a backlog in state court is not a compelling reason to retain the case in federal court. n15.1

[c] Adequacy of Remedy May be Affected by Statute of Limitation

In making a determination of the adequacy of the remedy on whether to proceed or dismiss, an important consideration for the court is whether a statute of limitation has expired in the other forum. n16 If so, dismissing the pending case may leave the plaintiff without a remedy. The court must assess whether a savings or tolling statute applies. n17 Furthermore, the defendant may be willing to waive a statute of limitation defense to secure dismissal of the federal action. Also, if the preferred alternative forum is another federal district court, transfer to that court will obviate the statute of limitation problem. n18

[6] Effect of Court's Decision Whether to Proceed or Dismiss

If the court decides in equity and good conscience that it should not dismiss the pending case, the litigation continues without the joinder or presence of the absentee. However, the judgment in the pending case generally will not bind an absentee. n1 Even if the absentee rejected a right to intervene, n2 the absentee is generally not bound by the judgment. n3

If the court decides in equity and good conscience that it should dismiss the pending case, rather than proceed without the absentee, the court must enter the action after it labels the absentee as "indispensable." The traditional label of indispensable party is given to the absentee merely to indicate that the court has made the finding that it will dismiss the action because it cannot effect joinder of the absentee who is a party needed for a just adjudication. Thus, it is a conclusory label that is applied retroactively. It becomes appropriate, if ever, only after the court has decided (1) the absentee is needed for a just adjudication; (2) the absentee's joinder is not feasible; and (3) the case should be dismissed. The labeling of a party as indispensable is the consequence of the analysis and not a measure of the evaluation as to whether the action should proceed. n4 The concept of indispensability addresses the court's ability to make an equitable adjudication in the absence of a particular person. n5

A court's order of dismissal for failure to join an indispensable party does not constitute an adjudication on the merits. n6 Furthermore, a dismissal for failure to join an indispensable party is not a jurisdictional dismissal; this misconception may have occurred because some courts have permitted the defense to be raised for the first time on appeal. However it is clear under current jurisprudence that a dismissal on these grounds is not jurisdictional. n7 In other words, if a court continues to judgment in the absence of someone who would have been found indispensable, the judgment is not subject to collateral attack. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 19.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1); see also § 14.04[1].

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a),(b); see also § 14.04[2].

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b); see Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851, 128 S. Ct. 2180, 171 L. Ed. 2d 131, 143 (2008) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b); see Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851, 128 S. Ct. 2180, 171 L. Ed. 2d 131, 143-144 (2008) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851, 128 S. Ct. 2180, 171 L. Ed. 2d 131, 144, 147 (2008) .

(n7)Footnote 6. General Refractories Co. v. First State Ins. Co., 500 F.3d 306, 320 (3d Cir. 2007) .

(n8)Footnote 6.1. See, e.g., Kickapoo Tribe of Indians v. Babbitt, 43 F.3d 1491, 1497, 310 U.S. App. D.C. 66 n.9 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (Rule 19(a)(1)(B)(i) consideration very similar to Rule 19(b)(1) and (2)).

(n9)Footnote 7. Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851, 128 S. Ct. 2180, 171 L. Ed. 2d 131, 143-144 (2008) .

(n10)Footnote 7.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(1)-(4).

(n11)Footnote 8. See [2], below.

(n12)Footnote 9. See [3], below.

(n13)Footnote 9.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(2)(A)-(C).

(n14)Footnote 10. See [4], below.

(n15)Footnote 11. See [5], below.

(n16)Footnote 12. Laker Airways, Inc. v. British Airways, PLC, 182 F.3d 843, 848 (11th Cir. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 13. Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851, 128 S. Ct. 2180, 171 L. Ed. 2d 131, 144 (2008) .

(n18)Footnote 14. Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 109-111, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) .

(n19)Footnote 15. Klockner Stadler Hurter, Ltd. v. Insurance Co. of Pa., 785 F. Supp. 1130, 1133 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n20)Footnote 16. Wichita & Affiliated Tribes of Okla. v. Hodel, 788 F.2d 765, 774 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (four factors specified in Rule 19(b) are not rigid, technical tests, but rather guides to determine equity and good conscience).

(n21)Footnote 17. Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc. v. Shepard Niles, Inc., 11 F.3d 399, 405 (3d Cir. 1993) (district court makes discretionary determination under Rule 19(b)).

(n22)Footnote 18. Schulman v. J.P. Morgan Inv. Management, Inc., 35 F.3d 799, 804 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n23)Footnote 19. Davis v. United States, 192 F.3d 951, 961 (10th Cir. 1999) (without factual findings court of appeals could not determine whether analysis of four Rule 19(b) factors compelled dismissal of case).

(n24)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(1); Thompson v. Jiffy Lube Int'l, Inc., 505 F. Supp. 2d 907, 919 (D. Kan. 2007) (absentee would not suffer prejudice); Circle Indus. v. City Fed. Sav. Bank, 749 F. Supp. 447, 457 (E.D.N.Y. 1990) , aff'd on other grounds, 931 F.2d 7 (2d Cir. 1991) (absentee would be prejudiced by judgment because current defendants had little incentive to protect absentee's interest).

(n25)Footnote 1.1. Pettiford v. City of Greensboro, 556 F. Supp. 2d 512, 523 (M.D.N.C. 2008) .

(n26)Footnote 2. Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851, 128 S. Ct. 2180, 171 L. Ed. 2d 131, 147-148 (2008) (court must give sufficient weight to likely prejudice to absentees should case proceed in their absence, and balance it against prejudice to parties, and against other factors).

(n27)Footnote 3. Martin v. Wilks, 490 U.S. 755, 766-769, 109 S. Ct. 2180, 104 L. Ed. 2d 835 (1989) .

(n28)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b), Advisory Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n29)Footnote 5. See [a], above.

(n30)Footnote 5.1. See Extra Equipamentos E Exportacao Ltda. v. Case Corp., 361 F.3d 359, 364 (7th Cir. 2004) , rev'd in part, 541 F.3d 719 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n31)Footnote 6. Professional Hockey Club Cent. Sports Club of the Army v. Detroit Red Wings, Inc., 787 F. Supp. 706, 713 (E.D. Mich. 1992) (single most important consideration in determining whether person's absence will prejudice his or her interests could be whether the interests are adequately protected by the current parties; when there is considerable representation, such absence will have little effect).

(n32)Footnote 7. Burger King v. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 119 F.R.D. 672, 678 (N.D. Ill. 1988) (mere similarity of interest will not do; there must be an identity of interest between absent party and one already party to action).

(n33)Footnote 8. Takeda v. Northwestern Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 765 F.2d 815, 820 n.5 (9th Cir. 1985) (absent party's opportunity to intervene may be considered in calculating prejudicial effect to party).

(n34)Footnote 9. See Burger King Corp. v. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 119 F.R.D. 672, 678 (N.D. Ill. 1988) .

(n35)Footnote 10. Confederated Tribes of Chehalis Indian Reservation v. Lujan, 928 F.2d 1496, 1500 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n36)Footnote 11. Burger King Corp. v. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 119 F.R.D. 672, 679 (N.D. Ill. 1988) .

(n37)Footnote 12. Pasco Int'l (London), Ltd. v. Stenograph Corp., 637 F.2d 496, 500 (7th Cir. 1980) (court refused to find absentee indispensable because defendant could implead absentee).

(n38)Footnote 13. Kelly v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 709 F.2d 973, 977-978 (5th Cir. 1983) (court refused to find absentees indispensable and dismissed case because defendant could have interpleaded them).

(n39)Footnote 1. See [2], above.

(n40)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(2)(A).

(n41)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(2)(B).

(n42)Footnote 2.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(2)(C).

(n43)Footnote 3. Campbell v. Triangle Corp., 56 F.R.D. 480, 482 (E.D. Pa. 1972) (any prejudice to absentee's interests could be avoided by limiting relief to money damages should plaintiff prevail).

(n44)Footnote 4. Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851, 128 S. Ct. 2180, 2188-2189, 171 L. Ed. 2d 131 (2008) .

(n45)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(3).

(n46)Footnote 2. See [5], below.

(n47)Footnote 3. Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 111, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) (whether judgment issued in absence of nonjoined person will be adequate refers to public interest in settling disputes whenever possible entirely rather than partially).

(n48)Footnote 4. Pueblo of Sandia v. Babbitt, 47 F. Supp. 2d 49, 55 (D.D.C. 1999) (on balance, court found in this case that adequacy of potential judgment rendered in state's absence would not be so hollow as to warrant dismissal).

(n49)Footnote 5. Kalinsky v. Long Island Lighting Co., 484 F. Supp. 176, 180 (E.D.N.Y. 1980) (in action by electricity user against power company for declaration that it was exempt from rate structure, case was dismissed for nonjoinder of commission that set pricing rate).

(n50)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n51)Footnote 7. Pueblo of Sandia v. Babbitt, 47 F. Supp. 2d 49, 55-56 (D.D.C. 1999) .

(n52)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b) (third and fourth factors).

(n53)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(4); see Davis v. United States, 343 F.3d 1282, 1289-1294 (10th Cir. 2003) (fourth factor probably is most important factor).

(n54)Footnote 2. See Laker Airways, Inc. v. British Airways, PLC, 182 F.3d 843, 848 (11th Cir. 1999) ; see [4], above.

(n55)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19, Committee Notes to 1966 Amendments.

(n56)Footnote 3. Laker Airways, Inc. v. British Airways, PLC, 182 F.3d 843, 848 (11th Cir. 1999) (court must determine whether plaintiff has available other viable avenues of redress); see [b], below.

(n57)Footnote 4. Kickapoo Tribe v. Babbitt, 43 F.3d 1491, 1499 (D.D.C. 1995) .

(n58)Footnote 5. Laker Airways, Inc. v. British Airways, PLC, 182 F.3d 843, 848 (11th Cir. 1999) (plaintiff had alternative remedy in United Kingdom); see [b], below.

(n59)Footnote 6. Laker Airways, Inc. v. British Airways, PLC, 182 F.3d 843, 848 (11th Cir. 1999) (plaintiff would have alternative remedy were case dismissed for nonjoinder, and dismissal of federal action would be appropriate, because plaintiff court still raised complaint with United Kingdom's Secretary of State for Transport).

(n60)Footnote 7. Angst v. Royal Maccabees Life Ins. Co., 77 F.3d 701, 706-707 (3d Cir. 1996) (Rule 19(b) required dismissal because receiver, who was non-diverse intervenor of right, was necessary and indispensable under Rule 19(a) and plaintiff had adequate remedy in existing state court action which involved all parties which plaintiff sought to join in federal action).

(n61)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(1)(A) (territorial limitation for service of process in federal court may match those in state courts); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(4).

(n62)Footnote 8.1. Pauley v. Pauley, 58 F.R.D. 386, 387 (D. Md. 1972) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a) (transfer from improper venue to proper venue in interest of justice).

(n63)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1); see also Takeda v. Northwestern Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 765 F.2d 815, 820 n.5 (9th Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice, when nondiverse employer was indispensable, only adequate alternative forum was provided by state court).

(n64)Footnote 10. Walsh v. Centeio, 692 F.2d 1239, 1244 n.5 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n65)Footnote 11. Ranger Fuel Corp. v. Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal Co., 677 F.2d 378, 381 (4th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 836 (1982) (state court as capable as federal court to compel arbitration, because of state law governs enforcement of agreements to arbitrate).

(n66)Footnote 12. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. Hotel Rittenhouse Assocs., 844 F.2d 1050, 1055 (3d Cir. 1988) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n67)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n68)Footnote 14. Ilan-Gat Eng'rs, Ltd. v. Antigua Int'l Bank, 659 F.2d 234, 241-242 (D.C. Cir. 1981) .

(n69)Footnote 15. Coalition on Sensible Transp. Inc. v. Dole, 631 F. Supp. 1382, 1386 (D.C. Cir. 1986) .

(n70)Footnote 15.1. Lopez v. Martin Luther King, Jr. Hosp., 97 F.R.D. 24 (C.D. Cal. 1983) .

(n71)Footnote 16. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(4); see, e.g., Weizmann Inst. of Sci. v. Neschis, 421 F. Supp. 2d 654, 663 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n72)Footnote 17. Jenkins v. Reneau, 697 F.2d 160, 163 (6th Cir. 1983) (although dismissed for lack of jurisdiction in federal court, right of plaintiff to sue in state court was preserved by Tennessee statute of limitation).

(n73)Footnote 18. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(4).

(n74)Footnote 1. See § 14.04[1][c][ii].

(n75)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n76)Footnote 3. Martin v. Wilks, 490 U.S. 755, 761, 109 S. Ct. 2180, 104 L. Ed. 2d 835 (1989) (court rejected argument that failure to intervene bound absentee to judgment; person is not bound by judgment unless joined as party or in privity with party).

(n77)Footnote 4. Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 119, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) (to say that court must dismiss in absence of indispensable party and that it cannot proceed without party puts matter wrong way around; court does not know whether particular person is 'indispensable' until it has examined situation under Rule 19(a) and 19(b) to conclude it cannot proceed without party and must dismiss).

(n78)Footnote 5. Owens-Illinois, Inc. v. Meade, 186 F.3d 435, 438 (4th Cir. 1999) (when party cannot be joined because its joinder destroys diversity, court must determine whether proceeding can continue in its absence, or whether action must be dismissed because party is indispensable pursuant to Rule 19(b)).

(n79)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b).

(n80)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1966 Amendments (even if court is mistaken in its decision to proceed in absence of interested person, it does not by that token deprive itself of the power to adjudicate as between parties already before it through proper service of process).

(n81)Footnote 8. Felzen v. Andreas, 134 F.3d 873, 876 (7th Cir. 1998) , aff'd, California Pub. Employees' Retirement Sys. v. Felzen, 525 U.S. 315 (1999) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
A. JOINDER OF PERSONS NEEDED FOR JUST ADJUDICATION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.06

§ 14.06 Procedural Considerationsn*

[1] Procedural Nature of Decision to Proceed or Dismiss

Whether the court should dismiss or proceed with the case when joinder of a party needed for adjudication is not feasible is a matter of procedural law governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. However, federal substantive law, or state substantive law in diversity of citizenship cases, determines the rights and interests of the persons who are already parties to the action, as well as their relationship with those rights and interests of persons not before the court. n1 This means that although it is a procedural issue whether an absentee is needed for a just adjudication, or whether the court should proceed with or dismiss a case because of nonjoinder of such a party, that issue is determined in light of the parties' substantive interests and rights; however, the issue in federal court is governed by Rule 19, even in the face of contrary state procedural law. n2 This principle is based on the Supreme Court's consistent holdings that federal courts must apply properly promulgated provisions of the rules that apply to the issue at hand, even though they may differ from state law. n3

[2] Raising Issue of Joinder of Persons Needed for Just Adjudication

[a] Court May Raise Issue On Its Own Initiative

The federal district court may raise, on its own initiative, the issue of whether party joinder is needed. n1 However, the court will rarely exercise that option because the court usually lacks familiarity with the background facts of the dispute and of the parties' relationships until such information is raised by a party. The court may become apprized of information about the parties when the pleadings required by Rule 19(c) give the court information about persons needed for a just adjudication, and the reasons why they are not joined. n2 In cases in which the court does become aware of an absentee who may be needed for a just adjudication, the court may have a duty to avoid prejudice by determining whether the court should proceed with the case or dismiss because of nonjoinder of that absentee. The court's obligation to act on its own initiative is especially important in cases in which nonjoinder would impair or impede the absentee's interest, because the absentee has no representative acting on its behalf. n3

[b] Defendant May Raise Issue in Answer or Separate Motion

Typically, the defendant is the party that raises the issue of joinder of an absentee needed for a just adjudication. Rule 12(b), which controls the manner in which defenses are presented, specifically provides that the defendant may raise the defense of failure to join a party under Rule 19 either in its responsive pleading or by motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(7). n4 If the pleadings are closed, the defendant may at its option style the motion as one for judgment on the pleadings. n5 This provision covers both a failure to join a party needed for a just adjudication and a dismissal for failure to join such a party, because both constitute a "failure to join a party under Rule 19." n6

As a general rule, a defendant should raise the issue of joinder of a party needed for adjudication as early as possible; it appears the court is entitled to consider the issue waived if not included in the answer or an amendment to the answer. On the other hand, failure to join a necessary party is not expressly listed in the list of defenses waived if not included in the first defensive response. n7 Thus, failure to join a person required by Rule 19(b) may be raised in any pleading, by a motion under Rule 12(c), or at trial. n8 Thus, the party joinder rule states in mandatory terms that a necessary party must be joined if feasible, n9 and Rule 21 permits the court to drop or add parties at any stage of the proceeding on terms that are just. n9.1 Consequently, courts will generally address the issue after the pleadings are closed; this fact does not create a license to delay, however, because the court will always be guided by the underlying policies of the compulsory party joinder rule. Thus, courts should be especially willing to address the issue after the pleading stage if joinder is necessary to avoid harm to the absentee rather than the defendant. n10

A court's determinations of whether an absentee is needed for a just adjudication and, if so, whether joinder is feasible, must be made by the court based on the state of the pleadings at the time the motion is brought. n11 A court that decides the case should be dismissed for nonjoinder should ensure that it has made a sufficient factual record to permit appellate review of the dismissal. n12

[3] Pleading Requirements Regarding Joinder

A party asserting a claim for relief must state: (1) the name of any person known to the claimant who is required to be joined if feasible but is not joined; n1 and (2) the reasons for not joining that person. n1.1 The rule applies not only to plaintiffs, but to all claimants, including defendants who file counterclaims, cross-claims, and other affirmative pleadings. However, it imposes no duty on defendants who do not file an affirmative claim, even though such parties often are in a position to know of absentees who satisfy Rule 19's necessary party provision. n2

The purpose of the pleading provision contained in Rule 19(c) is to provide a process for notifying absentees about pending litigation where the absentee may be a "required party" and to allow the absentee to intervene to protect its interests. n3 An absentee whose interest may as a practical matter be impaired or impeded by a pending suit generally may intervene as of right. n4 However, because a right to intervene is useless without any knowledge of the litigation, the court should direct a letter or other informal notice to the absentee. n5 Furthermore, intervention as of right offers little protection for an absentee whose joinder would destroy diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, because the supplemental jurisdiction statute prohibits supplemental jurisdiction over claims by plaintiff intervenors and against defendant intervenors. n6

If a party fails to inform the court as required under Rule 19(c), the failure is grounds for dismissal of the action. n7 However, courts appear reluctant to use this option; for example, some courts will not dismiss a claimant's failure to plead under Rule 19(c) if the failure was based on its good faith belief that there were no necessary absentees. n8 Furthermore, a claimant can easily correct a violation of the joinder pleading requirement through amendment. n9

[4] Inapplicability of Compulsory Joinder When Class Action Rules Control

All of the provisions of Rule 19 are expressly subject to the rule governing class actions. n1 This means that persons who would otherwise be regulated by the principles regarding persons needed for a just adjudication n2 and dismissal because of nonfeasibility of joinder n3 are not subject to those principles when the rules for class actions apply. n4 In other words, the court is not required to join absentees needed for a just adjudication in a class action. n5 However, the courts may use compulsory joinder provisions to the extent they do not conflict with class action provisions, n6 but may not allow the compulsory party joinder rule to interfere with the proceedings in the class action. The same apparently is also true for shareholder derivative suits and unincorporated association litigation. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 19.02, 19.07, 19.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Provident Tradesmens Bank& Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 119, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) (Rule 19 does not preclude assertion of compelling substantive interests; it merely commands courts to examine each controversy to determine which interests really exist).

(n3)Footnote 2. Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 119, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) ; Swerhun v. General Motors Corp., 141 F.R.D. 342, 344 (M.D. Fla. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Hanna v. Plumer, 380 U.S. 460, 464, 85 S. Ct. 1136, 14 L. Ed. 2d 8 (1965) .

(n5)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(2); see Gonzalez v. Cruz, 926 F.2d 1, 5 n.6 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(c).

(n7)Footnote 3. Enterprise Management Consultants, Inc. v. United States, 883 F.2d 890, 892-893 (10th Cir. 1989) (issue of whether party is indispensable is not waivable, and reviewing court has independent duty to raise issue sua sponte); Deere & Co. v. Diamond Wood Farms, Inc., 152 F.R.D. 158, 161 n.3 (E.D. Ark. 1993) (both trial court and appellate court have power and duty to act sua sponte to protect rights of absent person, whether by ordering that absent party be joined or, if that is not feasible, by dismissing action).

(n8)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(7); see RPR & Assocs. v. O'Brien/Atkins Assocs., P.A., 921 F. Supp. 1457, 1463 (M.D.N.C. 1995) , aff'd without opinion, 103 F.3d 120 (4th Cir. 1996) (on motion under Rule 12(b)(7), court initially determines if absent party should be joined as party in accordance with criteria specified in Rule 19(a)).

(n9)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c); see, e.g., Janney Montgomery Scott, Inc. v. Shepard Niles, Inc., 11 F.3d 399, 406 (3d Cir. 1993) (motion for judgment on pleadings under Rule 12(c) for failure to join indispensable party in breach of contract action).

(n10)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a), (b).

(n11)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(7).

(n12)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n13)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a),(b).

(n14)Footnote 9.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n15)Footnote 10. See Deere & Co. v. Diamond Wood Farms, Inc., 152 F.R.D. 158, 161 n.3 (E.D. Ark. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 11. Associated Dry Goods Corp. v. Towers Fin. Corp., 920 F.2d 1121, 1124 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n17)Footnote 12. Bakia v. County of Los Angeles, 687 F.2d 299, 301 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(c)(1).

(n19)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(c)(2).

(n20)Footnote 2. See [2], above; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n21)Footnote 3. *See S & S Mach. Corp. v. General Motors Corp., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13677, at 10 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n22)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n23)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(c), Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n24)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n25)Footnote 7. William Chris Trucks & Equip. Brokers v. First Canadian Bank, 98 F.R.D. 584, 586 (N.D. Ill. 1983) (failure to comply with Rule 19(c) has been found to be sufficient grounds for dismissal on determination that joinder of a necessary party is not feasible and absentee cannot be made a party within the meaning of Rule 19(b)).

(n26)Footnote 8. See Jones v. International Union of Operating Engn'rs, 524 F. Supp. 487, 493 (S.D. Ill. 1981) (although defendants acting as claimants failed to join absent contractors who might have been necessary parties, defendants had joined as many contractors as possible based on available information; therefore, court denied plaintiff's motion to dismiss under Rule 19(c)).

(n27)Footnote 9. In re Forty-Eight Insulations, Inc., 109 B.R. 315, 316 n.1 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (any violation of Rule 19(c) was cured by plaintiff's amended complaint); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 15.

(n28)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(d); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.

(n29)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n30)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n31)Footnote 4. In re Lloyd's Am. Trust Fund Litig., 954 F. Supp. 656, 675-676 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (court may eliminate need to determine whether absentee is an indispensable party under Rule 19(b), and thus whether or not to dismiss an action, when plaintiff can properly amend complaint to include all such absentees in class definition of class action).

(n32)Footnote 5. Shimkus v. Gersten Cos., 816 F.2d 1318, 1321 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n33)Footnote 6. Shimkus v. Gersten Cos., 816 F.2d 1318, 1321 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n34)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(d); Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.2.

29 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
A. JOINDER OF PERSONS NEEDED FOR JUST ADJUDICATION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.07through 14.19

[Reserved]

§§ 14.07[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.20

§ 14.20 Nature and Purpose of Permissive Joindern*

[1] Two Requirements for Permissive Joinder in Federal Court

"Permissive joinder" of parties is a rule that allows the plaintiff to liberally join multiple parties, aligned on either the plaintiff's side or the defendant's side, provided that a two-part test is satisfied: n1 the claims of the parties on either side must (1) arise out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences; n2 and (2) present some question of law or fact in common. n3

Thus, persons may join in one action as plaintiffs if: (1) they assert any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative with respect to or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences; n4 and (2) any question of law or fact common to all plaintiffs will arise in the action. n5

In a similar way, persons may be joined in one action as defendants if: (1) any right to relief is asserted against them jointly, severally, or in the alternative with respect to or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences; n6 and (2) any question of law or fact common to all defendants will arise in the action. n7

Rule 20 is applied flexibly. Therefore neither any plaintiff nor any defendant need be interested in obtaining or defending against all the relief demanded. The court may grant judgment to one or more plaintiffs according to their rights, and against one or more defendants according to their liabilities. n8

[2] Purposes of Permissive Joinder

The well established policy underlying permissive joinder is to promote trial convenience and expedite the resolution of lawsuits. n1 Thus, the Supreme Court has stated that the motivation behind Rule 20(a) is toward entertaining the broadest possible scope of action consistent with fairness to the parties; therefore, joinder of claims, parties, and remedies is strongly favored. n2 The permissive party joinder rule emphasizes practical application to achieve its purposes of efficient and economical resolution of litigation; therefore, permissive joinder is based not on arcane historic formulations of legal relationships but on a common sense, fact-based analysis of the tests specified in the rule. n3

In addition to the basic purposes of the permissive joinder rule to promote trial convenience and expedite the resolution of lawsuits, there are several other purposes. The rule avoids inconsistent outcomes by requiring that all interested parties are bound by a single judgment. n4

The rule is also easily applied because of its focus on transactional relatedness of the claims; the rule is thus consistent with the basic definition of a civil action in federal court: federal courts use the "transaction or occurrence" test to define the litigative unit. For example, claim preclusion doctrines apply a transactional definition of a case. n5 For years, the Supreme Court has employed such a transactional test to define the scope of a "case or controversy" under Article III of the Constitution. n6 Additionally, the "supplemental jurisdiction" statute incorporates a transactional standard in addressing the scope of civil litigation. n7

By emphasizing the transactional relationship between claims, permissive party joinder also promotes trial convenience for the court and parties. n8 Consequently, the permissive party joinder rule is liberally construed to encompass a broad scope of litigation. n9

[3] Permissive Joinder is Procedural Device Only

Permissive joinder of parties is procedural only and is concerned with the pleadings, rather than the substantive rights asserted by the claimants in the case. n1 Thus, when there are multiple defendants, each must be defending against a claim common to all, either in law or in fact. n2 However, any one defendant need not be interested in defending against all the relief demanded, and the court may grant judgment against each defendant according to its individual liabilities. n2.1

Although joinder at common law was affected by the nature of the legal relationship between the parties and whether liability was joint or several, the permissive party joinder rule has discarded these concerns in favor of its practical dual requirement test. Provided that the parties joined satisfy the rule's requirements, it is irrelevant whether the claims are for joint, several, or alternative liability. n3

The following three consequences flow from the fact that the permissive joinder rule is procedural only:

1. The substantive rights of the parties remain separate and are treated as though prosecuted separately. n4 For example, a plaintiff suing multiple defendants will recover only from those defendants that the plaintiff is able to state a substantive claim against. n5 Therefore, provided that the claims meet the two permissive party joinder requirements, transactional relatedness and commonality, n6 joinder is proper even if the claims are legally unrelated. n7 Rule 20(a) provides that each party "need not be interested in obtaining or defending against all the relief demanded." The rule also provides that the court may grant judgment to each of the plaintiffs according to their rights, and against each of the defendants according to their liabilities. n8 There is no requirement that each of multiple plaintiffs must seek the same relief against each defendant. Each plaintiff recovers according to the rights it establishes, n9 and each defendant is liable according to the respective liabilities proven in litigation. n10

2. In a diversity of citizenship case, the permissive party joinder rule applies in federal court despite any contrary state law joinder procedure. n11 This principle is based on the Erie doctrine, which states that federal courts must apply state substantive law, but federal procedural law, in diversity of citizenship cases. n12 Courts recognize an exception to this principle if joinder will affect substantive rights or liabilities under state law; in such cases, joinder will not be permitted. n13 As is the case with other federal rules, the permissive party joinder rule governs joinder in all federal question cases.

3. Because the permissive party joinder rule provides only a procedural mechanism for joinder of parties, it does not affect the substantive law of jurisdiction or venue. n14 Before a party may be joined, the claims asserted between the current party and the party to be joined must have a basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. n15 Additionally, the court must have personal jurisdiction over all defendants to be joined, n16 and venue must be proper for each defendant. n17 While defendants may waive objections to personal jurisdiction and venue, n18 the parties may not waive a lack of subject matter jurisdiction; it may be raised by a party or by the court at any point in the proceedings. n19 Therefore, even though the permissive party joinder rule may permit joinder of multiple parties as a procedural matter, a defendant may seek timely dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction or venue. Furthermore, regardless of whether a party raises the issue, the court must make a determination at any time whether there is subject matter jurisdiction over the case as the plaintiff has structured it. If the plaintiff joins parties in violation of diversity of citizenship precepts, the parties who have been joined that destroy diversity will be dismissed, n20 unless supplemental jurisdiction is available. n21

[4] Interaction of Permissive Joinder With Other Rules

The following are several rules that interact closely with the permissive joinder rule:

1. Once parties are properly joined under Rule 20, Rule 18 permits any claimant to assert all claims that it has against any joined defending party. n1 It is important to note that the party joinder must occur first; parties must be proper under Rule 20(a) before they are allowed to join all claims under Rule 18. n2

2. The "compulsory" party joinder rule prevails over the permissive party joinder rule. The compulsory joinder rule defines parties who must be joined if feasible because the parties are needed for a just adjudication. n3 On the other hand, the permissive party joinder rule defines proper parties, which consists of those who may, but need not, be joined in a particular case. n4

3. If parties are joined before the court but have not met the requirements of the two-part test of Rule 20(a), n5 the court may sever the parties or order separate trials. n6 "Severance" under Rule 21 is a distinct order from an order of separate trials under Rule 20(b). n7 Thus, severed claims become entirely independent actions to be tried, and the court may enter judgment on such claims entirely independently of the other claims. On the other hand, separate trials usually result in one judgment. n8 If the court orders severance, claims against misjoined parties will be dropped and must be pursued in a separate action or actions. n9 On the other hand, an order of separate trials will not require the filing of separate cases because party joinder is proper under Rule 20. n10 Instead, it simply leads to a separate factual inquiry of claims or issues in the context of a single, properly joined case. No matter how many separate trials the court may order, they remain part of a single case. n11

4. If cases are pending in the same district and involve a common question of law or fact, the district court may consolidate multiple cases for any purpose. n12 The requirement of Rule 42(a) is the same as the commonality requirement for permissive party joinder. n13 Therefore, a claim that does not meet the transactional relatedness requirement may nevertheless be consolidated for various purposes, including trial. Therefore, this is a method for a party who has been denied joinder to bring claims together in a consolidated trial. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesClaims

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.01 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a); see Matthews Metals Prods., Inc. v. RBM Precision Metal Prods., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 581, 583 (N.D. Cal. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See § 14.21.

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 14.22.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(1)(A).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(1)(B).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(2)(A).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(2)(B).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(3).

(n10)Footnote 1. Puricelli v. CNA Ins. Co., 185 F.R.D. 139, 142 (N.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n11)Footnote 2. United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 724, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 1137, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1966) .

(n12)Footnote 3. See Puricelli v. CNA Ins. Co., 185 F.R.D. 139, 141 (N.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n13)Footnote 4. United States v. Tri-State Design Constr. Co., 899 F. Supp. 916, 918-919 (N.D.N.Y. 1995) (joinder binds all potentially liable parties to single judgment); Jonas v. Conrath, 149 F.R.D. 520, 523-524 (S.D. W. Va. 1993) (Rule 20(a) avoids multiple suits by binding all interested parties, and thus expedites final determination).

(n14)Footnote 5. Marrapese v. Rhode Island, 749 F.2d 934, 936 (1st Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 921 (1985) ("transaction" is basis of litigative unit or entity).

(n15)Footnote 6. United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1966) (court examines common nucleus of facts and substance of federal claim).

(n16)Footnote 7. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n17)Footnote 8. California Union Ins. Co. v. American Diversified Sav. Bank, 914 F.2d 1271, 1274 (9th Cir. 1990) (joinder avoids piecemeal litigation).

(n18)Footnote 9. Matthews Metals Prods., Inc. v. RBM Precision Metal Prods., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 581, 583 (N.D. Cal. 1999) (requirements of Rule 20(a) are construed liberally in order to promote the broadest scope of action consistent with fairness to the parties); Hohlbein v. Heritage Mut. Ins. Co., 106 F.R.D. 73, 78 (E.D. Wis. 1985) (Rule 20(a) should be liberally interpreted and applied in practice when consistent with convenience in disposition of litigation).

(n19)Footnote 1. Hohlbein v. Heritage Mut. Ins. Co., 106 F.R.D. 73, 78 (E.D. Wis. 1985) (Rule 20(a) concerns procedure and pleading of case, not substantive rights).

(n20)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(2)(B).

(n21)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(3).

(n22)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n23)Footnote 4. Gates v. L. G. De Witt, Inc., 528 F.2d 405, 413 (5th Cir. 1976) .

(n24)Footnote 5. Vargas v. California State Auto. Ass'n. Inter-Ins. Bureau, 788 F. Supp. 462, 464-465 (D. Nev.

1992) (plaintiff could not recover against insurance agent as defendant because no claim could be stated under state law against that agent).

(n25)Footnote 6. See [1], above.

(n26)Footnote 7. Patterson v. Winthrop-Breon Labs., 115 F.R.D. 478, 483 (E.D. Wash. 1986) (hospital and drug manufacturer properly joined by plaintiff as defendants even though plaintiff asserted liability on different theories relating to personal injuries from administration of drug).

(n27)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(3).

(n28)Footnote 9. Hohlbein v. Heritage Mut. Ins. Co., 106 F.R.D. 73, 78-79 (E.D. Wis. 1985) (joinder permitted although not all plaintiffs interested in seeking same relief).

(n29)Footnote 10. White v. Kelsey, 935 F.2d 968, 970 (8th Cir. 1991) (in action against several doctors who treated plaintiff, court required to render judgment according to individual liabilities of defendants).

(n30)Footnote 11. Har-Pen Truck Lines, Inc. v. Mills, 378 F.2d 705, 708 (5th Cir. 1967) .

(n31)Footnote 12. Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78-79, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188 (1938) .

(n32)Footnote 13. Lee v. Hunt, 431 F. Supp. 371, 374 (W.D. La. 1977) (when federal jurisdiction is based on diversity, state law determines personal jurisdiction).

(n33)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n34)Footnote 15. See Greene v. Mobil Oil Corp., 66 F. Supp. 2d 822, 823 (E.D. Tex. 1999) ; see also § 14.24.

(n35)Footnote 16. Lee v. Hunt, 431 F. Supp. 371, 374 (W.D. La. 1977) (when federal jurisdiction is based on diversity, state law determines personal jurisdiction).

(n36)Footnote 17. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391; see also § 14.25.

(n37)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1) (personal jurisdiction and venue defenses waived if not raised in first defensive response under Rule 12).

(n38)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3) (the court is required to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction whenever it is established).

(n39)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n40)Footnote 21. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367; see also § 14.24.

(n41)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n42)Footnote 2. Intercon Research Assocs., Ltd. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 696 F.2d 53, 57-58 (7th Cir. 1982) .

(n43)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n44)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n45)Footnote 5. See §§ 14.23, 14.24.

(n46)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21; see § 14.40 et seq.

(n47)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(b).

(n48)Footnote 8. Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1122 n.5 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n49)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n50)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n51)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(b).

(n52)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(a).

(n53)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n54)Footnote 14. Kenvin v. Newburger, Loeb & Co., 37 F.R.D. 473, 475 (S.D.N.Y. 1965) (precluding joinder of claims but suggesting appropriateness of joint trial).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.21

§ 14.21 Requirement of Transactional Relationshipn*

[1] Permissive Joinder of Parties Requires Claim Based on Same Transaction

A court may order permissive joinder of persons as plaintiffs or as defendants in one action only if the persons assert a claim or are defending a claim jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences. n1 There is no hard and fast definition of the terms "transaction," "occurrence," or "series." n2 Rather, courts will examine the facts and circumstances of each case individually to determine whether transactional relatedness exists in the case. The courts' flexible approach to transactional relatedness is designed to determine whether, in view of the theories asserted and the facts alleged, joinder is fair. In other words, the case is proper for joinder if the claims involve enough related facts to make joinder in a single case fair, even though different occurrences might be involved. n3 On the other hand, because of the flexible nature of the test, courts may properly refuse joinder of claims that are legally similar if the claims are factually distinct. n4

[2] Tests for Other Rules May Provide Precedents for Joinder Purposes

The federal rules governing cross-claims and compulsory counterclaims employ the same basic test as the permissive joinder rule: such claims must arise from the same "transaction or occurrence" as the underlying case. n1 It has been held that, due to the similarity of purpose of these federal rules, cases construing these other rules provide guidance for interpretation of the function of Rule 20. n2 Furthermore, although the language of the permissive party joinder rule seems broader than that used for compulsory counterclaims and cross-claims because it contains the extra phrase "or series of transactions or occurrences" in addition to the basic requirement of "transaction or occurrence," in practice, the permissive party joinder rule is not interpreted more broadly than the other rules. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesClaims

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(1)(A), (a)(2)(A); see Burns v. W. S. Life Ins. Co., 298 F. Supp. 2d 401, 403 (S.D. W.Va. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Mosley v. General Motors Corp., 497 F.2d 1330, 1333 (8th Cir. 1974) (no hard and fast rules); Carbon Fuel Co. v. USX Corp., 867 F. Supp. 414, 418-419 (S.D. W. Va. 1994) (transaction is concept of flexible meaning).

(n4)Footnote 3. Scott v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 284 F. Supp. 2d 880, 888 (S.D. Ohio 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Abdullah v. Acands, Inc., 30 F.3d 264, 269 n.5 (1st Cir. 1994) (joinder not allowed in action by sailors alleging asbestos exposure but not alleging that plaintiffs served on same vessel during same period, or were exposed to same machinery); Saval v. BL, Ltd., 710 F.2d 1027, 1031 (4th Cir. 1983) (in action alleging breach of federal warranty claims involving automobiles, claims were not transactionally related merely because plaintiffs alleged similar defects).

(n6)Footnote 1. Compare Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a) (permissive joinder), with Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a) (counterclaim), and Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g) (crossclaim).

(n7)Footnote 2. Puricelli v. CNA Ins. Co., 185 F.R.D. 139, 142 (N.D.N.Y 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 3. Cf. Moore v. New York Cotton Exch., 270 U.S. 593, 610, 46 S. Ct. 367, 70 L. Ed. 750 (1926) ("transaction" is word of flexible meaning and may connote series of many occurrences, depending not so much on immediateness of their connection as on their logical relationship).

32 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.22

§ 14.22 Requirement of Commonalityn*

A court may order permissive joinder of persons as plaintiffs in one action only if any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action. Similarly, a court may order permissive joinder of persons as defendants in one action only if any question of law or fact common to all the defendants will arise in the action. n1 The purpose of the commonality requirement is to ensure that only those parties are joined which either assert or defend against claims that can be tried together in an expeditious and convenient manner. Whether the commonality test is met is made on a case-by-case basis, with the burden on the party that is requesting joinder to establish commmonality. n2

The commonality element is relatively easy to establish because, if claims arise from the same transaction or occurrence, the claims almost certainly present at least some common questions. n3 Three additional factors that make the commonality prong easy to establish are: first, the test requires only a single common question, not multiple common questions; n4 second, the common question may be one of either law or of fact, not necessarily both; n5 and third, the common question need not be the most important, or even the predominant, issue in the case. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(1)(B), (a)(2)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2. *DirecTV, Inc. v. Lewis, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8864, at 23 (W.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. *See DirecTV, Inc. v. Lewis, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8864, at *7-10 (W.D.N.Y. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 4. Puricelli v. CNA Ins. Co., 185 F.R.D. 139, 142-143 (N.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Rezulin Prods. Liab. Litig., 168 F. Supp. 2d 136, 145 n.39 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Mosley v. General Motors Corp., 497 F.2d 1330, 1333 (8th Cir. 1974) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.23

§ 14.23 Joinder Considerations When Claim Involves United States Governmentn*

[1] General Considerations

Unless the United States government has waived its sovereign immunity, persons may not bring claims against it, and procedural rules such as joinder rules do not affect that limitation. n1 In other words, a claimant may join claims against the United States, even after permissive joinder requirements are met, only if the government has expressly waived its sovereign immunity by statute. Therefore, even if the United States were properly joined as a co-plaintiff, it would not be subjected to counterclaims or other claims falling within its sovereign immunity. However, when the United States has waived sovereign immunity expressly, the permissive joinder rule does apply and the United States may be joined as a co-defendant with a private party defendant. n2

Ordinarily, sovereign immunity protects the United States from direct suits, as well as having claims joined against it in any form, whether asserted as an independent action, counterclaim, cross-claim, third-party claim, or claim in intervention. Some statutes waive all immunity of the United States. However, some statutes expressly waive immunity only with respect to joinder, as opposed to a complete waiver of all immunity. For example, such a statute may grant consent to join the United States in an action between other parties when the action requires construction of a transaction that involves the government, and joinder of the United States is necessary to permit a complete adjudication of rights of the other parties. n3

[2] Joinder of United States Under Federal Tort Claims Act

The United States has by statute expressly waived sovereign immunity for torts caused by government employees acting within the scope of their employment. Federal district courts have exclusive jurisdiction over such tort claims for damages under the Federal Tort Claims Act. n1 Under the Act, multiple plaintiffs may join to assert tort claims against the United States. n2 Provided that there is subject matter jurisdiction for claims against a private party defendant, the permissive party joinder rule also permits plaintiffs to join the United States with the private party as co-defendants. If no subject matter jurisdiction exists, the claim may be heard by the federal court only under the doctrine of supplemental jurisdiction. n3

[3] Joinder of United States for Non-Tort Claims

Pursuant to the Tucker Act, the United States has waived its sovereign immunity in certain monetary suits that do not sound in tort. n1 In general, the Tucker Act permits claims against the United States for damages in contract. However, if the plaintiff's claim in such an action exceeds $10,000, the case is in the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States Claims Court. n2 Plaintiffs may not join a private party as a co-defendant with the United States in a Tucker Act case involving more than $10,000, because the Claims Court has exclusive jurisdiction over these cases, and the Claims Court has no jurisdiction to hear actions between private parties. n3 Even in Tucker Act cases involving $10,000 or less, a plaintiff suing in the Claims Court may not join a co-defendant. Although jurisdiction is not exclusive, the Claims Court simply has no jurisdiction over actions between private parties. n4

Similarly, Tucker Act cases involving $10,000 or less brought in a district court also prohibit plaintiffs from joining co-defendants. n5 Even though a plaintiff's claims against the United States and another party satisfy the dual requirements for permissive party joinder, the plaintiff is required to bring two separate suits. n6

It should be noted that the Tucker Act only prohibits joinder of the United States as a co-defendant with a private party. It does not apply when the multiple joinder is of plaintiffs. n7 Accordingly, multiple plaintiffs may be joined to assert claims under the Tucker Act against the United States as the only defendant either in the Claims Court or in the district court. n8 Furthermore, the Tucker Act does not prohibit consolidation of separate cases. n9 Consequently, to avoid the joinder prohibition, a plaintiff may file suit against the United States in one action and the private defendant in another action in the same district court, and then move for consolidation under Rule 42. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesClaimsGovernmentsFederal GovernmentClaims By & Against

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. First Ala. Bank, N.A. v. United States, 981 F.2d 1226, 1228 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 2. *Orff v. United States, 545 U.S. 596, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 5013, at *9-10 (2005) ; see [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. *Orff v. United States, 545 U.S. 596, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 5013, at *10-12 (2005) (such statutory provision does not provide consent by United States to itself become defending party on claim).

(n5)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b).

(n6)Footnote 2. De Weese v. United States, 419 F. Supp. 147, 148 (D. Colo. 1974) , aff'd, 576 F.2d 802 (10th Cir. 1978) (several airline passengers joined as plaintiffs in suit arising from aircraft disaster); Wisniewski v. United States, 416 F. Supp. 599, 600 (E.D. Wis. 1976) (spouses joined as plaintiffs in malpractice case).

(n7)Footnote 3. See Diminnie v. United States, 728 F.2d 301, 306 (6th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 842 (1984) (claim against federal employee based on independent ground of jurisdiction may be joined with claim against United States under Federal Tort Claims Act).

(n8)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1346(a); 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a).

(n9)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a).

(n10)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a)(1); see United States v. Sherwood, 312 U.S. 584, 588, 61 S. Ct. 767, 85 L. Ed. 1058 (1941) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Sauders v. South Carolina Public Serv. Auth., 856 F. Supp. 1066, 1075 (D.S.C. 1994) (there is no jurisdiction in district court because Claims Court has exclusive jurisdiction of nontort claims against United States exceeding $10,000).

(n12)Footnote 5. United States v. Sherwood, 312 U.S. 584, 591, 61 S. Ct. 767, 85 L. Ed. 1058 (1941) .

(n13)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n14)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1346(a); 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a).

(n15)Footnote 8. See Pennsylvania v. National Ass'n of Flood Insurers, 520 F.2d 11, 25 (3d Cir. 1975) .

(n16)Footnote 9. United States v. Louisville & Nashville R.R. Co., 221 F.2d 698, 702 (6th Cir. 1955) .

(n17)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(a).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.24

§ 14.24 Subject Matter Jurisdiction Required for Joindern*

[1] Claims Regarding Each Joined Party Must Be Based on Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Permissive joinder rules do not supercede or even affect the jurisdiction of the federal courts. n1 The permissive party joinder rule, like the other federal joinder rules, prescribes only the procedural circumstances in which multiple parties may be joined on either or both sides of litigation. Each claim asserted by multiple plaintiffs or against multiple defendants in federal court must have a basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. n2 The primary, though not exclusive, bases of federal subject matter jurisdiction n3 are federal question n4 and diversity of citizenship. n5

[2] Supplemental Jurisdiction Doctrine May Allow Joinder in Some Circumstances

The assessment of whether an entire case may be heard involves consideration of whether an individual claim asserted invokes a basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. No case may be heard by a federal court unless at least one claim invokes an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction, such as federal question or diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n1 After jurisdiction is established with respect to one claim, the federal court may entertain additional claims under the supplemental jurisdiction doctrine. n2

Supplemental claims that do not have an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction may be combined with the claim establishing jurisdiction if all claims are sufficiently related. n3 The supplemental jurisdiction statute requires that the supplemental claim share a "common nucleus of operative fact" with the claim establishing jurisdiction. n4 The courts equate "common nucleus of operative fact" with "same transaction or occurrence," a phrase that is also employed in the permissive joinder rule. n5 While the supplemental jurisdiction statute grants a broad exception to the normal requirement of jurisdiction, it provides for specific limitations, including claims by plaintiffs against parties joined under Rule 20. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral

OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n3)Footnote 2. Greene v. Mobil Oil Corp., 66 F. Supp. 2d 822, 823 (E.D. Tex. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Greene v. Mobil Oil Corp., 66 F. Supp. 2d 822, 824 (E.D. Tex. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n6)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 1. Matthews Metals Prods., Inc. v. RBM Precision Metal Prods., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 581, 582-583 (N.D. Cal. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Matthews Metals Prods., Inc. v. RBM Precision Metal Prods., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 581, 583 (N.D. Cal. 1999) ; see 28 U.S.C. § 1367 (supplemental jurisdiction); Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a) (permissive party joinder).

(n9)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n10)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1367; see United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1966) .

(n11)Footnote 5. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Spartan Mechanical Corp., 738 F. Supp. 664, 668-670 (E.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n12)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.25

§ 14.25 Venue For Multiple Defendantsn*

As is the case with jurisdiction, the permissive joinder rules do not affect the statutory provisions concerning venue. n1 The general venue statute provides that venue is proper n2 in either a district where all the defendants reside or a district in which a substantial part of the claim arose. n3 If no district in the United States can satisfy either of these tests, venue is treated differently for federal question cases and diversity of citizenship cases. In diversity cases, venue is proper in any district in which any defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction. n4 In a federal question case, venue can be laid in any district where any defendant is found. n5

It is important to note in a multiple defendant situation that the wording of Section 1391(a)(3) was changed from "any district in which the defendants are subject to jurisdiction" to "any district in which any defendant is subject to jurisdiction." The purpose of this change was to avoid any possible implication that Section 1391(a)(3) requires that all defendants be subject to personal jurisdiction in the same district before venue is proper. Thus, under the 1995 amended version of Section 1391(a)(3), a district is proper venue if any of the defendants is subject to personal jurisdiction in that district; if any one of the defendants is subject to jurisdiction in the district, the district is a proper venue for all of the defendants. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMultiparty LitigationCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.08 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n3)Footnote 2. Henderson v. AT&T Corp., 918 F. Supp. 1059, 1065 (S.D. Tex. 1996) (unless balance of factors strongly favors party moving for venue transfer, plaintiff's choice of forum generally should not be disturbed).

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a), (b).

(n5)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a)(3).

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(3).

(n7)Footnote 6. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a)(3).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.26

§ 14.26 Persons Entitled to Initiate Joindern*

[1] Plaintiff

[a] Plaintiff's Option to Specify Parties

The permissive party joinder rule generally provides the plaintiff with the option to structure litigation according to the terms of the complaint. n1 It permits the plaintiff to join multiple parties on either the plaintiff's or the defendant's side. However, the plaintiff is not required to join parties and may decide not to join parties for strategic or tactical reasons. n2 The defendant has no right to require the plaintiff to join all persons who could be joined under the permissive party joinder rule. n3 However, if the defendant files a counterclaim or cross-claim in the pending action, the defendant may join parties to that pleading. n4

[b] Joinder by Amendment of Complaint

A plaintiff will typically use permissive party joinder at the initiation of the lawsuit by naming as many plaintiffs and defendants as the plaintiff considers appropriate. n5 If a plaintiff does not effect proper permissive joinder in the complaint, the plaintiff may join additional parties later in the litigation by amending the complaint. n6 If the defendant has not yet served a responsive pleading, the plaintiff has a right to amend and need not seek leave of court to join permissive parties. If the defendant has served a responsive pleading, however, the plaintiff must make a motion to amend to perform joinder. n7

When a party makes a motion to join additional parties in a proposed amended complaint under Rule 15(a), the court, in deciding whether to grant that motion, must also find that the requirements of Rule 20(a) have been satisfied. n8 Thus, a court determining whether to grant a motion to amend to join additional plaintiffs must consider both the general principles of amendment provided by Rule 15(a) and also the more specific joinder provisions of Rule 20. Satisfying the joinder requirements is necessary to the court's subject matter jurisdiction. n9

First, the court must consider the general requirements of Rule 15. Although amendments are liberally allowed under Rule 15, the trial court has an obligation to deny the amendment if it would not be in the interest of justice. n10 Thus, for example, the court will deny joinder that might have been proper in the original complaint if the plaintiff has delayed excessively in making a motion for the new joinder, or if the joinder would prejudice the interests of an existing party. n11

Before joining by amendment, the court must also consider whether the requirements of Rule 20(a) have been satisfied; whether the claims of the current parties and proposed joined parties arise out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, and if any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action. n11.1 In this regard, the court must consider whether the joining parties participated in the same kind of transaction in which the current plaintiffs had participated and that all the transactions involved similar transactions with the defending parties; whether the joining parties also alleged the same or similar types of violations committed by the defending parties in these transactions; and whether it appears that similar principles of law would have been applicable to both the original plaintiffs and the joined parties. n11.2

The court may also deny joinder if the applicable statute of limitation has expired with respect to the parties to be joined. n12 Furthermore, if the grounds for an asserted motion to amend to add parties is that a change in circumstance has occurred after commencement of the action, the proper motion for the plaintiff to file is a motion to supplement the pleadings. n13

[2] Defendant

If a defendant is pursuing an affirmative claim for relief, the defendant may be able to permissively join parties to the action. Thus, if a defendant files a counterclaim n1 or cross-claim n2 in a pending case, the defendant is treated as a plaintiff for purposes of permissive party joinder. n3 In other words, defendants who are claimants for relief are on the same footing as original plaintiffs in choosing party organization and joinder. n4 Except when making a claim, defendants may be able to alter the plaintiff's choice of party structure only by impleading third-party defendants n5 or by moving for the joinder of absentees needed for a just adjudication under Rule 19; n6 defendants have no general right to insist that the plaintiff join all persons who might be joined under permissive party joinder requirements. n7

A defendant has a right to file a counterclaim or cross-claim with its responsive pleading. As stated above, a defendant who makes such a claim has the right to join additional parties at the time of filing the counterclaim or cross-claim without leave of court. n8 However, a defendant who fails to raise a counterclaim or cross-claim with its responsive pleading, or who raises such a claim but fails to move for the joinder at the time of the claim, must seek leave of court either to file or amend the pleading. n9 If the additional parties are joined because of events occurring after commencement of the action, the proper motion for the defendant is one to supplement the pleadings. n10

[3] Other Persons

A nonparty may not use the permissive party joinder rule. n1 Also, a nonparty may not file cross-claim and attempt to join additional parties under Rule 13(h), because only parties may file cross-claims. n2 A nonparty that wants to enter a civil action should do so through a motion to intervene. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Lopez v. Martin Luther King, Jr. Hosp., 97 F.R.D. 24, 28 (C.D. Cal. 1983) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Applewhite v. Reichhold Chems., Inc., 67 F.3d 571, 574 (5th Cir. 1995) (permissive joinder under Rule 20 is generally at option of plaintiffs).

(n4)Footnote 3. Field v. Volkswagenwerk AG, 626 F.2d 293, 299 (3d Cir. 1980) (while defendant may move for joinder of necessary party under Rule 19, defendant has no right to demand that plaintiff join all parties satisfying Rule 20(a).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h); FDIC v. Bathgate, 27 F.3d 850, 873-874 (3d Cir. 1994) (additional parties may be joined to counterclaim or cross-claim against existing party); see [2], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a); Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n9)Footnote 8. Hinson v. Norwest Fin. S.C., Inc., 239 F.3d 611, 618 (4th Cir. 2001) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a); Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n10)Footnote 9. Hinson v. Norwest Fin. S.C., Inc., 239 F.3d 611, 618 (4th Cir. 2001) .

(n11)Footnote 10. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Continental Ill. Corp., 113 F.R.D. 527, 531 (N.D. Ill. 1986) (even if proposed joinder would satisfy requirements Rule 20(a), court has discretion to deny amendment to avoid delay, expense or prejudice).

(n12)Footnote 11. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Continental Ill. Corp., 113 F.R.D. 527, 531 (N.D. Ill. 1986) (court denied motion for joinder when it was made after extensive discovery had been completed, because joinder of additional parties at that time would cause undue burden, expense, and delay, and serious prejudice both to parties to be joined and present litigants); McBride v. Routh, 189 F.R.D. 48, 49-50 (D. Conn. 1999) .

(n13)Footnote 11.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n14)Footnote 11.2. Hinson v. Norwest Fin. S.C., Inc., 239 F.3d 611, 618 (4th Cir. 2001) .

(n15)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c); Copsey v. Swearingen, 36 F.3d 1336, 1348 (5th Cir. 1994) (court denied motion to add party after expiration of statute of limitation).

(n16)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d); Pratt v. Rowland, 769 F. Supp. 1128, 1131 (N.D. Cal. 1991) (motion to file supplemental complaint to add new defendants).

(n17)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (b).

(n18)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n19)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n20)Footnote 4. FDIC v. Bathgate, 27 F.3d 850, 873-874 (3d Cir. 1994) ; Carbon Fuel Co. v. USX Corp., 867 F. Supp. 414, 418 (S.D. W. Va. 1994) .

(n21)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a).

(n22)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n23)Footnote 7. Field v. Volkswagenwerk AG, 626 F.2d 293, 299 (3d Cir. 1980) .

(n24)Footnote 8. Northfield Ins. Co. v. Bender Shipbuilding & Repair Co., 122 F.R.D. 30, 31 (S.D. Ala. 1988) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n25)Footnote 9. Independent Liberty Life Ins. Co. v. Fiduciary & Gen. Corp., 91 F.R.D. 535, 537 (W.D. Mich. 1981) (court granted defendant's motion to join additional parties to counterclaim under Rules 13(h) and 20(a)).

(n26)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).

(n27)Footnote 1. Thompson v. Boggs, 33 F.3d 847, 858 (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1063 (1995) .

(n28)Footnote 2. City of Tampa v. Fourth Tug/Barge Corp., 163 F.R.D. 622, 624 (M.D. Fla. 1995) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n29)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 69(a); see § 14.90 et seq.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.27

§ 14.27 Claims Asserted By and Against Joined Personsn*

When multiple plaintiffs or multiple defendants are properly joined under the permissive party rules, claims by joined plaintiffs or against the joined defendants may be asserted jointly, severally, or in the alternative. n1 The phrase "jointly, severally, or in the alternative" emphasizes that the rights and liabilities of parties permissively joined depend on practical factors based on the factual circumstances of the parties' relationships and not on whether liability technically falls under the label joint, several, or in the alternative. n2 The express provision for pleading in the alternative is consistent with the modern pleading principles of the federal rules which liberally allow claims for relief in the alternative. n3 However, it should be noted that at least one of the persons joined to make a claim for relief must state some claim for relief against each of the persons defending the claim. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesClaims

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Henkel v. ITT Bowest Corp., 872 F. Supp. 872, 878 (D. Kan. 1994) (joinder of passengers proper in case of liability arising from bus collision).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) (pleading may set forth claim for relief that demands relief in the alternative, or relief of several different types).

(n5)Footnote 4. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. v. Flexwatt Corp., 139 F.R.D. 573, 575 (D. Mass. 1991) (alternative pleadings allowed so long as at least one plaintiff states claim against each defendant).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.28

§ 14.28 Court Rulings Related to Joindern*

[1] Discretion to Order Joinder

A party that has established the permissive party joinder requirements is not automatically entitled to an order of joinder; the determination is at the discretion of the trial court. Thus, the trial court's denial of joinder will be reversed on appeal only on a showing that it abused its discretion. n1 For example, the trial court may deny a motion for joinder if it would not be in the interest of justice. n2 The court may deny the motion to avoid delay, expense, or prejudice. n3

Under the permissive joinder rule, the court also has discretion to order joinder of multiple parties on either or both the plaintiff side and the defense side of the litigation. n3.1 Furthermore, the court may grant judgment to one or more plaintiffs according to their rights, and against one or more defendants according to their liabilities. n3.2 To provide for relief for all of the various claims, the court may also enter separate judgments on claims involving different parties. n4

[2] Discretion to Order Separate Trials

Once a party has effected proper permissive party joinder of multiple parties and their claims in a single case, n1 it does not necessarily follow that the trial court must try all claims together. Under other federal rules, the court has the power to order separate trials, for example, to prevent a party from being embarrassed, delayed, or put to expense by the inclusion of a party against whom the party asserts no claim and who asserts no claim against the party. n1.1 The potential for the jury to be confused by multiparty, multiclaim litigation is another reason the court may order separate trials. n2

The court may order a separate trial on its own initiative or any party may move for a separate trial. The court's discretion whether to order separate trials must be decided on the facts and circumstances of each case, n3 which is decided on its unique facts based on a balancing of the competing interests of all parties. n4

In any case in which joinder is proper, an order of separate trials will result in some inefficiency because of the repetition in the presentation of evidence. Consequently, the burden is on the party seeking the separate trial to show that the interest of judicial economy should give way to protect the party's interest. The moving party must show a substantial risk of harm from a joined rather than a separate trial. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 20.09 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Saval v. BL, Ltd., 710 F.2d 1027, 1031 (4th Cir. 1983) (standard of review is whether district court abused discretion by denial of joinder).

(n3)Footnote 2. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Continental Ill. Corp., 113 F.R.D. 527, 531 (N.D. Ill. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(b).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(1), (a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 3.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a)(3).

(n7)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b) (court may expressly enter separate judgment as to separate parties).

(n8)Footnote 1. Ginett v. Computer Task Group, Inc., 962 F.2d 1085, 1095 (2d Cir. 1992) (discussing underlying interrelationship of claims between parties in multiparty civil action).

(n9)Footnote 1.1. The court may also order separate trials or make other orders to prevent delay or prejudice. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(b).

(n10)Footnote 2. Blesedell v. Mobil Oil Co., 708 F. Supp. 1408, 1421-1422 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (confusing nature of multiple plaintiffs asserting multiple claims against multiple defendants justifies separate trial in jury trials but not bench trials).

(n11)Footnote 3. Independent Liberty Life Ins. Co. v. Fiduciary and Gen. Corp., 91 F.R.D. 535, 539 (W.D. Mich. 1981) (district court's discretion to order separate trial to avoid prejudice).

(n12)Footnote 4. United States ex rel.. Saunders Concrete Co. v. Tri-State Design Constr. Co., 899 F. Supp. 916, 919 (N.D.N.Y. 1995) (balancing competing factors of prejudice and juror confusion against efficiency).

(n13)Footnote 5. Dillard v. Crenshaw County, 640 F. Supp. 1347, 1371 (M.D. Ala. 1986) (moving party did not meet burden to show inconvenience and inefficiency, which was outweighed by interest in economy).

39 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
B. PERMISSIVE JOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.29through 14.39

[Reserved]

§§ 14.29[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
C. MISJOINDER AND NONJOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.40

§ 14.40 Nature of Misjoinder and Nonjoindern*

Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure prescribes the options that the court may take in the event of "misjoinder and non-joinder" of parties. However, Rule 21 does not define either of those terms. n1 Case law has developed meanings for those terms by referring to the rules governing joinder of parties. The most common example of misjoinder occurs when a plaintiff structures the case in violation of permissive party joinder prerequisites. n2

The rule governing permissive party joinder defines those parties who may properly be joined in a single action. Claims by co-plaintiffs or against co-defendants must arise from the same transaction or occurrence and must give rise to at least one common question. n3 If a party fails to satisfy either of these prerequisites for permissive joinder, the party has been misjoined. n4

The plaintiff may also commit misjoinder through a filing mistake, for example, by filing a claim even though the plaintiff is not the real party in interest or by naming parties who have no interest in the dispute. n5 Another example of misjoinder is a plaintiff's violation of a statutory ban on joinder. For example, the Tucker Act allows prosecution of non-tort cases against the United States, but does not extend jurisdiction to claims against private parties, and joinder of an individual with the United States in a Tucker Act case constitutes misjoinder. n6

In contrast to misjoinder, which is improper joinder, non-joinder may be described as a failure to join an absentee (one who currently is not a party) when required by the federal rules. This may occur in several ways. The most important example is a plaintiff's failure to join an absentee who is needed for a just adjudication; the court must order joinder of such a party whenever it is feasible to do so and failure to do so constitutes non-joinder. n7 Nonjoinder may also occur when a person with a partial interest in property has not been properly joined in a suit filed by the other person with the partial interest in the same property. For example, only a patentee (the owner of the patent) may bring an action for patent infringement, and a licensee may bring suit in its own name only if the licensee holds "all substantial rights" in the patent. Therefore, if a licensee without substantial rights in the patent does not join the patentee, the licensee does not have standing to sue, and the suit may not proceed until the patentee is joined. n7.1

When a party has been misjoined or nonjoined, the federal rules give the court discretion to make three types of orders to remedy the situation. Generally, the court may add or drop parties "on such terms as are just" to remedy misjoinder or non-joinder. Specifically, the court may add parties to cure non-joinder, or dismiss parties to cure misjoinder. In lieu of dismissing parties in cases of misjoinder, the court also has the option to order severance of the claims by or against misjoined parties. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 21.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n3)Footnote 2. Glendora v. Malone, 917 F. Supp. 224, 227 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (although federal rules do not define misjoinder, cases make clear that misjoinder of parties occurs when they fail to satisfy the conditions for permissive joinder under Rule 20(a)).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a).

(n5)Footnote 4. Jonas v. Conrath, 149 F.R.D. 520, 523 (S.D. W. Va. 1993) (misjoinder occurs when asserted claims do not arise out of same transaction or occurrence or do not present common questions of law or fact).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a) (requirement that every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest).

(n7)Footnote 6. Cf. United States v. Sherwood, 312 U.S. 584, 591, 61 S. Ct. 767, 85 L. Ed. 1058 (1941) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n9)Footnote 7.1. Mentor H/S, Inc. v. Medical Device Alliance, Inc., 240 F.3d 1016, 1018-1019 (Fed. Cir. 2001) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
C. MISJOINDER AND NONJOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.41

§ 14.41 Initiation of Remedies for Misjoinder and Nonjoindern*

[1] Requirement of Motion Made to Court

As a general rule, the parties do not have the power to effect remedies for misjoinder and nonjoinder under Rule 21; remedies permitted under the rule usually must be made by court order. A party may move for an order under Rule 21, or the court may issue an order on its own initiative. n1 However, in appropriate circumstances, a plaintiff may use an amendment as of right under Rule 15 to add or drop parties or to sever claims without the need for a court order. For example, plaintiffs have a right to amend without leave of court before the defendant serves a responsive pleading. n2 A party should caption its motion as one to add parties, to dismiss parties, or for severance of claims, as appropriate.

With the exception of cases involving non-joinder of a party needed for a just adjudication, n3 an order under Rule 21 may not result in dismissal of the pending case. Consequently, the timing limitations imposed on motions to dismiss do not apply except in such circumstances. n4 Instead, Rule 21 allows the court to make orders adding or dismissing parties at any stage of the action, including after trial, after notice of appeal has been filed, or even on appeal. n5 The fact that a motion under Rule 21 may be brought at any time during the case does not mean that the court is required to grant it; the issue is determined in the sound discretion of the trial court (see [4], below), and a party's delay in bringing a motion for remedy for misjoinder or nonjoinder may weigh against granting the motion. n6

In cases involving non-joinder of a party needed for a just adjudication, the moving party should raise the issue in a motion to dismiss. n7 Such a motion is timely if made no later than the trial on the merits. n8 Furthermore, there is even authority to the effect that a party may make a motion regarding non-joinder of a party needed for a just adjudication for the first time on appeal. n9

Thus, the appellate court may consider issues of nonjoinder or misjoinder on appeal. Usually if the plaintiff that filed the initial claim for relief does not have standing to bring the claim alone, the claim should be dismissed. However, the language that parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or on the court's own initiative at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just applies equally to the appellate court. For example, the appellate court may condition a plaintiff's maintenance of an appeal on the plaintiff's filing a motion pursuant to Rule 21 to add a necessary party plaintiff, and to file a brief in support of the motion. The defending party is then given an opportunity to respond to the plaintiff's motion and brief, if any. If the plaintiff fails to file a motion for joinder in the appellate court, the plaintiff's appeal will be dismissed. n10

[2] Alternative Motion for Amendment

All of the remedies that may be obtained by motion for court order under Rule 21 may also be accomplished by a motion for amended pleadings. n1 A court order is usually required to effect any change in the structure of a pending case, including an amendment of the pleadings. Therefore, as a practical matter, there is no difference whether the moving party seeks relief under Rule 15 governing amendment of pleadings or under Rule 21 for addition or dismissal of parties. n2

However, a party does not always need to obtain leave to amend its pleadings; under Rule 15, a defending party may amend its answer once as a matter of course or without leave of court, n3 provided that the amendment is made within 21 days after giving service of the answer. n4 Most courts have found that the parties may not use this automatic right to amend to add or dismiss parties through a court order under Rule 21, and that changing the party structure of the action requires a court order. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinderCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 21.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 14.43[2].

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3).

(n6)Footnote 5. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 832, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 (1989) (Rule 21 gives district court authority to drop dispensable nondiverse party at any time, even after judgment has been rendered); Mentor H/S, Inc. v. Medical Device Alliance, Inc., 240 F.3d 1016, 1019 (Fed. Cir. 2001) (court of appeals invited plaintiff to file motion under Rule 21 in court of appeals to join co-owner party that was necessary to provide standing for plaintiff to maintain suit); Kalman v. Berlyn Corp., 914 F.2d 1473, 1479-1480 (Fed. Cir. 1990) (district court abused discretion in denying leave to amend complaint because Rule 21 provides that parties may be dropped or added at any time on such terms as are just).

(n7)Footnote 6. Hensgens v. Deere & Co., 833 F.2d 1179, 1182 (5th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 851 (1989) (court should consider whether party was tardy in requesting permissive joinder of new party).

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(7).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2).

(n10)Footnote 9. Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 108-109, 88 S. Ct. 733, 19

L. Ed. 2d 936 (1968) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Mentor H/S, Inc. v. Medical Device Alliance, Inc., 240 F.3d 1016, 1019 (Fed. Cir. 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15.

(n13)Footnote 2. Health Research Group v. Kennedy, 82 F.R.D. 21, 29 (D.D.C. 1979) (both Rule 15 and Rule 21 give court broad discretion to grant leave to add or dismiss parties and in both instances court's decision is guided by related considerations of timeliness and prejudice to opposing party; substitution of one plaintiff for another has been found to be permissible under either rule).

(n14)Footnote 3. See Dimaio v. Democratic Nat'l Comm., 520 F.3d 1299, 1303 (11th Cir. 2008) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(A); see Ch. 9, Pleadings and Motions in General.

(n16)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Streeter v. Sheriff of Cook County, 256 F.R.D. 609, 613 (N.D. Ill. 2009) ; Horton v. Scripto Tokai Corp., 878 F. Supp. 902, 908, 910 (S.D. Miss. 1995) .

42 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
C. MISJOINDER AND NONJOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.42

§ 14.42 Court's Discretion to Order Remediesn*

The court may make orders to add or dismiss parties to remedy misjoinder or nonjoinder on any terms that are just. n1 The provision has been held to provide the trial court with considerable discretion in determining whether to add or dismiss parties, or to order severance. n2 While each case must be addressed on its particular facts and circumstances, the court in exercising its discretion must consider principles of fundamental fairness and judicial efficiency. n3

As part of this inquiry, the court should consider whether an order under Rule 21 would prejudice any party, n4 would result in undue delay, n5 and the possibility of jury confusion. n6 Although the court should consider the likelihood of being able to avoid duplicative litigation, n7 it should sever claims when the claims are based on different factual situations from that of the main action. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 21.02, 21.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n3)Footnote 2. Applewhite v. Reichhold Chems., Inc., 67 F.3d 571, 574 (5th Cir. 1995) (district court has discretion to sever an action if it is misjoined or might otherwise cause delay or prejudice).

(n4)Footnote 3. Stark v. Independent School District No. 640, 163 F.R.D. 557, 564 (D. Minn. 1995) (court has obligation to balance competing considerations when considering motion to add or dismiss parties); German v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 896 F. Supp. 1385, 1400 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (to decide if severance is appropriate, court should generally consider whether (1) issues sought to be tried separately are significantly different from one another,

(2) separable issues require testimony of different witnesses and different documentary proof, (3) party opposing severance will be prejudiced if it is granted, and (4) party requesting severance will be prejudiced if it is not granted).

(n5)Footnote 4. Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 838, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 (1989) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Hawkins v. Fulton County, 95 F.R.D. 88, 91 (N.D. Ga. 1982) (defendant would not be unduly prejudiced or delayed by joinder of plaintiffs on plaintiff's motion during initial stages of discovery).

(n7)Footnote 6. CVI/Beta Ventures v. Custom Optical Frames, Inc., 896 F. Supp. 505, 506-507 (D. Md. 1995) (in action by patentees against competitors alleging infringement of patent for eyeglass frames, court severed counterclaim for patent infringement on different eyeglass frames because any commonality that could exist among patents was far outweighed by potential for jury confusion).

(n8)Footnote 7. Brown v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 132 F.R.D. 451, 454 (E.D. Tex. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Demboski v. CSX Transp., Inc., 157 F.R.D. 28, 30 (S.D. Miss. 1994) (court found trying four separate cases together would jeopardize fairness to all parties and would impose burden on defendant to defend four substantially different sets of facts and law in only one forum that would far outweigh any practical benefits that might accrue to parties and court in conservation of judicial, prosecutorial, and defensive resources).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
C. MISJOINDER AND NONJOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.43

§ 14.43 Orders of Court for Misjoinder and Nonjoindern*

[1] Remedies for Misjoinder

The typical case of misjoinder under Rule 21 occurs when the plaintiff attempts to join a co-plaintiff or a defendant who fails to satisfy the requirements for permissive joinder under Rule 20(a) n1 The permissive party joinder rule generally gives the plaintiff considerable leeway in choosing the party structure of the lawsuit. The plaintiff's choice not to join some proper party is generally respected unless there is a contrary provision in the rules, such as when the absentee is needed for a just adjudication, in which case the court is required to join the absentee. n2 Absentees who would merely be proper parties under the permissive joinder rules have no way to enter the suit except when they can intervene in appropriate circumstances. n3

The court may cure misjoinder of parties in one of two ways. First, the court may dismiss misjoined parties on terms that the court deems are just. Dismissal of a misjoined party under Rule 21 is without prejudice, which means that a claim by or against such a party may be refiled as a separate suit. n4

The court's second option is to sever claims that relate to the misjoined party. n5 By eliminating the claims of improperly joined parties, the court cures the misjoinder problem and retains jurisdiction over the main action. n6 For a discussion of severed claims, see [3], below.

It is important to note that misjoinder of parties is not grounds for dismissal of an action. n7 This is a significant change over common law joinder rules, which required dismissal of some cases for misjoinder. n8 However, while dismissal is not a remedy for misjoinder, the court may use that option for non-joinder of parties. Thus, if an absentee needed of just adjudication of the pending suit is determined to be "indispensable," n9 the pending action must be dismissed. n10

[2] Remedies for Nonjoinder

The most common example of non-joinder occurs when the plaintiff or the court fails to join someone needed for a just adjudication of the pending litigation. The failure to join such a party may be raised by motion to add the party under Rule 21. The absentee must be joined in the pending case if such joinder is feasible. n1 The plaintiff's failure to join such an absentee constitutes non-joinder, and may be cured under Rule 21 by a motion and court order to join the absentee. n2

However, if joinder of an absentee needed for a just adjudication is not feasible, the court may have to dismiss the action. Joinder is not feasible, for example, when the court cannot obtain personal jurisdiction over the necessary party, when the necessary party's joinder would destroy diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, or when the necessary party has a valid objection to venue. n3 In such a situation, the court has only two choices: it must either proceed without joinder of the necessary party or dismiss the pending case. n4 Thus, the court must dismiss the case if there is an absentee whose presence is needed for a just adjudication, whose joinder is not feasible, and in whose absence the court decides to dismiss rather than proceed. n5 Thus, non-joinder of such an absentee may not be cured by ordering addition of the absentee under Rule 21, but the case must be dismissed under Rule 19(b). n6

[3] Severance

[a] Severance of Claim Results in Distinct Lawsuit

Under Rule 21, the court has the power to order that any claim against any party be severed and proceeded with separately. n1 Although courts generally use the terms "sever" and "separate trials" interchangeably, they are analytically and fundamentally unique: the severance procedure authorized by Rule 21 should be distinguished from the separate trial procedure under Rule 42(b). Severed claims become entirely independent actions to be tried and judgment entered on the claim as a distinct case; on the other hand, separate trials usually result in one judgment for all of the claims. In other words, severance under Rule 21 results in separate actions.

A single claim that is severed from a multiple claim action may be proceeded with separately. This means that the severed claim proceeds as a discrete, independent suit. It and the original case result in their own separate final judgments from which appeals may be taken. If a severed claim is one of multiple claims asserted by a single plaintiff against a single defendant neither party is severed from the original action. Rather, both parties are involved in two separate actions.

In contrast, an order of separate trials does not result in the filing of separate cases. Instead, it simply leads to two or more separate factual inquiries in the context of a single, properly joined case. No matter how many separate trials the court may order, they remain part of a single case. n2 While judgment on a severed claim is final for purposes of appeal, judgment on a claim tried separately is not an appealable final judgment unless certified for immediate appeal under Rule 54. n2.1

[b] Courts Discretion to Order Severance or Separate Trial

The question of whether to enter a severance order under Rule 21 is left to the sound discretion of the district court. n3 In deciding whether severance is appropriate, the trial court should generally consider whether: (1) the issues sought to be tried separately are significantly different from one another, (2) the separable issues require the testimony of different witnesses and different documentary proof, (3) the party opposing the severance will be prejudiced if it is granted, and (4) the party requesting the severance will be prejudiced if it is not granted. n4

When deciding whether to order separate trials, a court generally will consider the same factors listed above for severance. n5 However, courts tend to be more liberal in their grant of separate trials, because it is not as drastic a measure as ordering an entirely new case. Courts will order separate trials when there will be little overlap in testimony and evidence between the two proceedings, when the issues to be decided at trial are complex and the factfinder is likely to become confused, when bifurcation will promote settlement, and when a single trial will cause unnecessary delay.

None of these factors are determinative. A court must take into account the overall equities of a case in ruling on a motion for separate trials. Complexity and delay, must be balanced against the fact that a bifurcated trial would result in duplicative testimony and evidence. In addition, the court must consider the effect on settlement that bifurcation would have. The court may reserve the right to revisit the possibility of bifurcation sua sponte should it determine that the situation has changed. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinder

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 21.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Moubry v. Kreb, 58 F. Supp. 2d 1041, 1047 (D. Minn. 1999) (Rule 21 is the proper vehicle for dismissing parties who were improperly joined because they failed to satisfy any of the conditions of permissive joinder under Rule 20(a)); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a), 21.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24; § 14.90 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 4. Michaels Bldg. Co. v. Ameritrust Co., N.A., 848 F.2d 674 (6th Cir. 1988) ; Stark v. Independent Sch. Dist. No. 640, 163 F.R.D. 557, 564 (D. Minn. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n7)Footnote 6. Henderson v. AT&T Corp., 918 F. Supp. 1059, 1062 (S.D. Tex. 1996) (because claims are asserted by parties, there will be instances where severing claim also severs a party from the original litigation; for example, if claim to be severed happens to be only claim asserted by one of multiple plaintiffs, then severing claim will have effect of severing that plaintiff from action); Baker v. Barnard Constr. Co., 860 F. Supp. 779, 779-780 (D.N.M. 1994) (proper remedy for misjoinder under Rule 20(a) would be to sever codefendant from other defendants in this action).

(n8)Footnote 7. Lamar Advertising v. City of Lakeland, 980 F. Supp. 1455, 1459 (M.D. Fla. 1997) (motion to dismiss denied because misjoinder is not grounds for dismissal; rather, court granted motion to strike names of improperly joined defendants).

(n9)Footnote 8. United States v. Commercial Bank of N. Am., 31 F.R.D. 133, 135 (S.D.N.Y. 1962) (Rule 21 was intended to minimize the harsh results of misjoinder under common law).

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n11)Footnote 10. See [2], below.

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n14)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

(n15)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

(n16)Footnote 5. Enza, Inc. v. We The People, Inc., 838 F. Supp. 975, 977-978 (E.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n17)Footnote 6. Moubry v. Kreb, 58 F. Supp. 2d 1041, 1048 (D. Minn. 1999) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n19)Footnote 2. Houseman V. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1122-1123 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 2.1. Sidag Aktiengesellschaft v. Smoked Foods Prods. Co., 813 F.2d 81, 84 (5th Cir. 1987) (severed claim becomes entirely separate suit or judicial unit, so that final adjudication of it is appealable, notwithstanding that there remain unresolved claims pending in original action from which severance was granted and that no Rule 54(b) certificate has been issued); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b)

(n21)Footnote 3. New York v. Hendrickson Bros., Inc., 840 F.2d 1065, 1082 (2d Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 848 (1988) .

(n22)Footnote 4. German v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 896 F. Supp. 1385, 1400 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) ; see Rodin Properties-Shore Mall, N.V. v. Cushman & Wakefield of Pennsylvania, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 2d 709, 720-721 (D.N.J. 1999) (court will decline to sever claims pursuant to Rule 21 when parties fail to persuade court that it should transform claims into entirely independent action with independent case number and independent judgment).

(n23)Footnote 5. Morris v. Northrop Grumman Corp., 37 F. Supp. 2d 556, 580 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n24)Footnote 6. Rodin Properties-Shore Mall, N.V. v. Cushman & Wakefield of Pennsylvania, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 2d 709, 721-722 (D.N.J. 1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART I. JOINDER
C. MISJOINDER AND NONJOINDER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.44through 14.49

[Reserved]

§§ 14.44[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.50

§ 14.50 Nature and Purpose of Impleadern*

[1] Party Structure for Impleader

Impleader, or third-party practice, is a procedural device for use by a person who is currently a party to an action to bring in an additional party and assert a claim against that additional party because of a claim that is being asserted in the action against the original party. Third-party practice under Federal Rule 14 is usually referred to as impleader. n1 The original party who is defending against a claim and who is instituting impleader is called the third-party plaintiff. n1.1 The nonparty joined by impleader is called the third-party defendant. n1.2 The pleading asserting the impleader claim is called the third-party complaint. n2 In addition, when a third-party defendant is made a litigant against whom an affirmative claim for relief is pending, the third-party defendant is a "defending party" and clearly is entitled to assert impleader. n2.1 Such assertions by a third-party defendant are often called "fourth-party claims." n3

Rule 14(a) expressly provides for direct claims between a plaintiff and a third-party defendant; however, these claims do not have commonly accepted names, and courts have not applied consistent labels. These claims should not be referred to as counterclaims, because counterclaims must be between "opposing" parties, n4 and until one asserts a claim against the other, the plaintiff and third-party defendant simply are not opposing parties. n5 Similarly, the claims are not cross-claims, because cross-claims are between co-parties. n6 However, because they are created by a specific rule, in this chapter they are referred to as such: the Rule 14(a) plaintiff against third-party defendant claim, and the Rule 14(a) third-party defendant against plaintiff claim. See § 14.54 for a discussion of these claims.

Rule 14(b) provides that a plaintiff may join a third-party through impleader if a counterclaim has been asserted against the plaintiff. n7 The apparent purpose of this provision is to allow a plaintiff who has become, in effect, a defendant to the counterclaim to implead a third-party who is or may be liable to it on that counterclaim. n8 However, the fact that the impleader rule itself permits any "defending party" to assert impleader arguably renders Rule 14(b) superfluous, because if any defending party may assert an impleader claim, it should not be necessary to state that a plaintiff against whom a counterclaim has been asserted may do so also. n9 However, courts have not attached any significance to this apparently extraneous provision, and merely refer to it as a claim under Rule 14(b). n10

[2] Purposes of Impleader

The third party practice rule, also known as the impleader rule, permits a party who is defending against a claim (referred to as the third-party plaintiff) n1 to bring a new party (referred to as the third-party defendant) n1.1 into the pending case, provided that the third party is or may be liable to the defending party for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against the defending party. n1.2 The joinder provisions of the federal rules generally give the plaintiff considerable discretion to select the party structure of litigation. The impleader rule is a limitation on that right in the narrow circumstances prescribed in the rule. Thus, impleader gives some control to a defending party to bring in parties; in essence, impleader permits a defending party to join a third party for the purpose of transferring to that third party all or part of the defending party's potential liability to the party that is making the underlying claim. Typically, this transference of liability will be based on an assertion that the third party owes the defending party a duty of indemnity or contribution. n2

By allowing the potentially liable party to bring in the third party into the suit, the claim is more efficiently adjudicated because the underlying claim for liability and any claim for indemnity or contribution are all considered in a single case. n3 This inclusive combining of claims saves the judicial system and the parties the time and expense of multiple suits.

Impleader also avoids the possibility of inconsistent judgments. Joinder of all persons interested in the ultimate resolution of the dispute binds them to a single judgment. Without such joinder, the defendant who loses on the underlying dispute must bring a separate action for indemnity or contribution because the alleged indemnitor or contributor would not be bound by the judgment in the first case because it was not a party. n4 Even if the defendant is successful in the second suit, it will be required to pay for separate litigation and may suffer adverse consequences because of the delay between judgments in the two suits. Effecting joinder of the indemnitor or contributor in a single case thus promotes judicial economy and fosters a consistent outcome that allows the defendant to avoid the potential harms of inconsistent results from identical or similar evidence, n5 and delay between the entry of an unfavorable judgment and the entry of a judgment against the third-party defendant. n6

[3] Impleader Is Permissive Rather than Mandatory

The impleader rule provides that a defending party may implead a party when the conditions are satisfied, not that it must implead; n1 because of this language, impleader claims are permissive and not compulsory. n2 Consequently, if a defending party fails or declines to use impleader, or if the court refuses to let it use impleader, the defending party may nevertheless sue the third-party separately at a later time to assert a right of indemnity or contribution. In such a case, the third-party would not be bound by any findings from the original case, because it was not a party to that action. n3

Similarly, because impleader is permissive, if a party asserts an impleader claim in state court, it is in effect manifesting its desire to litigate in state court and waives its right to remove the case to federal court. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 14.02, 14.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Brown v. Shredex, Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 764, 766-767 (D.S.C. 1999) , dismissed on other grounds sub nom. Brown v. Geha-Werke GmbH, 69 F. Supp. 2d 770 (D.S.C. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 1.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 2. See Royal Ins. Co. of Am. v. Southwest Marine, 194 F.3d 1009, 1017 (9th Cir. 1999) ; Thomas v. Barton Lodge II, Ltd., 174 F.3d 636, 652 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(5).

(n7)Footnote 3. Interstate Power Co. v. Kansas City Power & Light Co., 992 F.2d 804, 806 (8th Cir. 1993) (referring to impleader by third-party defendant as fourth-party claim).

(n8)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), (b); Finkel v. United States, 385 F. Supp. 333 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n9)Footnote 5. Spring City Corp. v. American Bldgs. Co., 193 F.3d 165, 169 (3d Cir. 1999) (third-party defendant joined under Rule 14 does not become defendant as against original plaintiff, so that federal jurisdiction is not destroyed where those parties are citizens of the same state).

(n10)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g) (cross-claims between co-parties).

(n11)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(b).

(n12)Footnote 8. In re Dept. of Energy Stripper Well Exemption Litig., 968 F.2d 27, 32 (Temp. Emer. Ct. App. 1992) (proper invocation of Rule 14 by plaintiff who was also counterclaim defendant).

(n13)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a).

(n14)Footnote 10. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. v. Aldridge, 906 F. Supp. 866, 867 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (if counterclaim has been asserted against plaintiff, plaintiff may bring in third party under same circumstances that defendant would be entitled to; in insured's suit against insurer to recover on policy, insured was entitled to bring in and seek indemnity from third party on insurer's counterclaim for declaratory judgment that policy had been validly rescinded because of misrepresentations made by third party).

(n15)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n16)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2).

(n17)Footnote 1.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n18)Footnote 2. See Santana Prods., Inc. v. Bobrick Washroom Equip., Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 678, 681-684 (M.D. Pa. 1999 (after toilet partition manufacturer brought action against competitor and others for antitrust violations and other trade violations, competitor brought third-party complaint against toilet partition manufacturers' group for contribution and indemnity, as well as fraud and negligent misrepresentation).

(n19)Footnote 3. Hood v. Security Bank of Huntington, 562 F. Supp. 749, 751 (S.D. Ohio 1983) (impleader avoids circuity of actions and multiple suits; it also saves time and eliminates unnecessary expense).

(n20)Footnote 4. Martin v. Wilks, 490 U.S. 755, 761-762, 109 S. Ct. 2180, 2184, 104 L. Ed. 2d 835 (1989) (only parties actually joined and nonparties represented by them are bound by judgment).

(n21)Footnote 5. Stiber v. United States, 60 F.R.D. 668, 670 (E.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n22)Footnote 6. See In re Dept. of Energy Stripper Well Exemption Litig., 968 F.2d 27, 32 (Temp. Emerg. Ct. App. 1992) .

(n23)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1), (5).

(n24)Footnote 2. Knudsen v. Samuels, 715 F. Supp. 1505, 1506 (D. Kan. 1989) (third-party complaint is permissive pleading).

(n25)Footnote 3. Richards v. Jefferson County, Alabama, 517 U.S. 793, 116 S. Ct. 1761, 1765, 135 L. Ed. 2d 76 (1996) (because of due process constraints, judgment may only bind parties to litigation and those represented by parties to litigation, even if nonparties share essentially identical interests with those who were joined as parties).

(n26)Footnote 4. Knudsen v. Samuels, 715 F. Supp. 1505, 1506 (D. Kan. 1989) ; see California Republican Party v. Mercier, 652 F. Supp. 928, 931 (C.D. Cal. 1986) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; filing impleader claim in state court waives right to remove because impleader is permissive claim).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.51

§ 14.51 Only Defending Parties Entitled to Implead Third Partyn*

The impleader rule limits those persons who may assert an impleader claim to defending parties. n1 While the scope of this reference includes the defendant, it also includes any other party against whom an affirmative claim for relief is pending. The impleader rule expressly reiterates this principle by stating that a third-party defendant is entitled to proceed under the rule to implead an absentee who may be liable to indemnify or contribute to a judgment. This provision seems redundant in view of the general language that impleader is available to any defending party. Because a third-party defendant is a litigant against whom an affirmative claim for relief is pending, the third-party defendant is a defending party and clearly is entitled to assert impleader. n2 Such claims by a third-party defendant are called "fourth-party claims." n3

There is a similarly redundant provision regarding third-party claims made by a plaintiff. The plaintiff impleader rule expressly provides that when a counterclaim is asserted against a plaintiff, the plaintiff may cause a third party to be brought in under circumstances which under this rule would entitle a defendant to do so. n4 This subdivision is also unnecessary because it is obvious that a plaintiff against whom a counterclaim has been asserted is a "defending party," who is able to implead under the general language of the impleader rule. However, it appears that the provision was included to re-emphasize that the plaintiff may use the impleader rule only when it is acting as a defendant. n5

A litigant may lose its status as a defending party in an action and therefore its entitlement to use impleader in that action. For example, if a defendant is granted summary judgment, its impleader claim is rendered moot. n6 Also, a defendant that defaults in a case is no longer a defending party, because there is no affirmative claim pending against it; consequently the defaulting party may not implead a third-party. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 14.03[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1), (3), (5).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(5).

(n4)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Spring City Corp. v. American Bldgs. Co., 193 F.3d 165, 169 (3d Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. Cf. Chase Manhattan Bank v. Aldridge, 906 F. Supp. 866, 867 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (if counterclaim has been asserted against plaintiff, plaintiff may bring in third party under same circumstances that defendant would be entitled to).

(n7)Footnote 6. Faser v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 674 F.2d 856, 860 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Newhouse v. Probert, 608 F. Supp. 978, 985 (W.D. Mich. 1985) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.52

§ 14.52 Requirements for Impleadern*

[1] Impleader Must be Based on Third Party's Liability to Defending Party

A defending party may use an impleader claim only to assert that the third-party is liable to the defending party that is impleading the third party. n1 Therefore, it is improper for the defendant to implead a third party on the basis of the third-party defendant's direct liability to the plaintiff; courts properly reject such attempts and limit impleader to those third parties who are derivatively liable to the defendant. n2 A third-party complaint must set forth a claim of secondary liability such that, if the third-party plaintiff is found liable, the third-party defendant will be liable to the third-party plaintiff under a theory of indemnification, contribution, or some other theory of derivative liability recognized by the relevant substantive law. Any third-party complaint which does not facially meet this test is not proper under Rule 14. n3

A third-party claim is improper if neither the third party's liability is in any way dependent on the outcome of the main claim nor the third party is secondarily liable to defendant. n4 For example, when a defendant vehicle manufacturer asserted a third-party complaint against the driver of a vehicle, it was held an improper impleader because the complaint asserted only that the third-party driver was liable to the plaintiff and not to the defendant manufacturer. n5

[2] Third-Party's Liability Must Be for Plaintiff's Underlying Claim

An impleader claim is not proper unless the liability of the third-party defendant to the third-party plaintiff is for losses sustained by the third-party plaintiff as a result of the plaintiff's claim; unrelated liability to the defendant is not a basis for impleader. n1 However, in this regard it is important to note that the term "claim" is no longer used in the federal rules as a "cause of action"; rather, a claim refers to the transaction or occurrence that is the basis of the pleading; it has nothing to do with the legal theory on which a party relies. Thus, the fact that a third-party complaint may be based on a different legal theory from the underlying case does not bar impleader. n2

Similarly, the type of relief sought by the plaintiff in the underlying action will not deprive the defendant of its ability to implead. n3 Therefore, a liberal concept of "claim," combined with a strong policy in favor of efficiency and consistency through inclusive joinder, has freed impleader from historical limitations inherent in classic indemnity theories. Courts have construed the impleader rule liberally to achieve its goal of efficient and consistent resolution of multiparty disputes. n4 However, the fact that impleader need not be based on the same legal theory as the plaintiff's claim does not negate the requirement that impleader must be based on derivative liability. n5

[3] Impleader Must Be Based on Derivative Liability

Although the impleader rule is liberally construed to avoid duplicative litigation and refers to the term claim, which is defined transactionally in the federal rules, n1 the test for joinder of a third party under the impleader rule is the same transactional test as for compulsory counterclaims and cross-claims, which are appropriate only if they arise from the same "transaction or occurrence" as the underlying suit. n2 Impleader is a narrower test because impleader must be based on the transference to the third-party of all or part of the liability asserted against the defendant; in other words, it must be an assertion of the third-party defendant's derivative liability to the third-party plaintiff. n3 An impleader claim may not be used to assert any and all rights to recovery arising from the same transaction or occurrence as the underlying action. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 14.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1) (party defending on claim, as a third-party plaintiff, may cause complaint to be served on third-party defendant who may be liable to third-party plaintiff for all or part of such claim).

(n3)Footnote 2. Carriere v. Cominco Alaska, Inc., 823 F. Supp. 680, 691 (D. Alaska 1993) (nonadmiralty impleader may not be based on third-party defendant's liability to plaintiff).

(n4)Footnote 3. Santana Prods. v. Bobrick Washroom Equip., Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 678, 688 (M.D. Pa. 1999).

(n5)Footnote 4. FDIC v. Bathgate, 27 F.3d 850, 873 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Bike v. American Motors Corp., 101 F.R.D. 77, 78-82 (E.D. Pa. 1984) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Johnson v. Rank, 110 F.R.D. 99, 101-102 (N.D. Cal. 1986) (impleader improper because third-party's liability not dependent on defendant/third-party's liability to plaintiff).

(n8)Footnote 2. Crude Crew v. McGinnis & Assocs., Inc., 572 F. Supp. 103, 109 (E.D. Wis. 1983) , appeal dismissed, 762 F.2d 1015 (1985) (impleader proper despite different legal theories where underlying claim and third-party claim arose from same transaction).

(n9)Footnote 3. Eastern Enters. v. Shalala, 942 F. Supp. 684, 689 (D. Mass. 1996) , aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Eastern Enters. v. Chater, 110 F.3d 150 (1st Cir. 1997) (impleader not limited to cases in which underlying claim is for damages; proper in declaratory judgment cases).

(n10)Footnote 4. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Loube, 134 F.R.D. 270, 272 (N.D. Cal. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 5. See [3], below.

(n12)Footnote 1. See [2], above.

(n13)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a) (compulsory counterclaim); Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g) (cross-claim).

(n14)Footnote 3. Kenneth Leventhal & Co. v. Joyner Wholesale Co., 736 F.2d 29, 30-32 (2d Cir. 1984) ; Watergate Landmark Condominium Unit Owners' Ass'n v. Wiss, Janey, Elstner Assocs., 117 F.R.D. 576, 577 (E.D. Va. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Southeast Mortgage Co. v. Mullins, 514 F.2d 747, 749-750 (5th Cir. 1975) ("but for" causation not sufficient for impleader).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.53

§ 14.53 Impleader is Procedural Device Onlyn*

[1] Impleader Rule Does Not Affect Substantive Rights

Impleader is a procedural device only and is governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The impleader rule does not create or effect any substantive rights; n1 however, impleader is a process for presenting claims recognized by substantive law. n2

Federal substantive law, or state substantive law in diversity of citizenship cases, determines the rights and interests of the third-party plaintiff and third-party defendant with respect to the impleaded claim. This means that although it is a procedural issue whether impleader is proper in a particular case, that issue is determined in light of the substantive interests and rights. The impleader rule may not be used to assert a claim that does not exist under the substantive law. It is available only if the controlling substantive law gives a right to pursue a derivative claim from the third-party defendant. n3

Even though federal substantive law, or state substantive law in diversity of citizenship cases, governs the derivative lawsuit rights of a defending party to seek impleader, the method of the presentation of impleader is properly regarded as procedural for Erie purposes. n4 Thus, when a federal procedural rule regarding impleader conflicts with state procedure, the federal rule of procedure controls. The federal impleader rule properly applies to allow a third-party claim under federal procedure, even if state law does not permit accrual or assertion of impleader until after the defendant has incurred an actual loss. n5

[2] Federal Substantive Law Controls in Federal Question Cases

Federal law may create substantive claims for indemnification or contribution that may be asserted through impleader. These claims are usually promulgated in statutes but occasionally are the product of federal common law. n1 Thus, a right to indemnity or contribution exists when a federal statute specifically provides for it, n2 or a statutory provision may imply a right to indemnity or contribution. n3 Federal common law may also be a source of a substantive right to indemnification or contribution, although this source is limited, because it is usually permitted in the few instances in which a federal rule of decision is necessary to protect uniquely federal interests or where Congress has given the courts the power to develop substantive law. n4

[3] State Substantive Law Controls in Diversity Cases

Every claim asserted in federal court, including an impleader claim, must have a basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. n1 When an impleader claim is based on diversity of citizenship jurisdiction n2 or on supplemental jurisdiction, n3 the Erie doctrine n4 requires federal courts to apply state law to determine whether there is a substantive right to be enforced through impleader. In other words, the question of whether there is a claim for derivative liability against the third-party defendant is a matter of substance for Erie purposes. n5

The fact that a case is brought in federal court on the basis of federal question jurisdiction does not mean that state law on indemnification or contribution is irrelevant. If the third-party claim itself is not based on federal law, state law will govern, even if the original jurisdiction-invoking claim in the case is a federal question. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 14.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2072 (impleader rule, like all federal rules, is procedural, and does not create or modify any substantive rights); McLaughlin v. Biasucci, 688 F. Supp. 965, 967 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (impleader is procedural mechanism for asserting claim to indemnification or contribution recognized by substantive law).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Connors v. Suburban Propane Co., 916 F. Supp. 73, 76 (D.N.H. 1996) (impleader does not create causes of action, it merely prescribes manner for bringing substantive claims already recognized under applicable statutory or common law); cf. Lehman v. Revolution Portfolio L.L.C., 166 F.3d 389, 394-395 (1st Cir. 1999) (primary purpose of impleader rule is to avoid unnecessary duplication of action regarding substantive claims).

(n4)Footnote 3. Kim v. Fujikawa, 871 F.2d 1427, 1434 (9th Cir. 1989) (ERISA provides no substantive basis for process of impleader); Connors v. Suburban Propane Co., 916 F. Supp. 73, 76 (D.N.H. 1996) (Rule 14 does not operate to create causes of action; it merely prescribes a method for bringing causes of action already recognized under applicable statutory or common law).

(n5)Footnote 4. Hanna v. Plumer, 380 U.S. 460, 85 S. Ct. 1136, 14 L. Ed. 2d 8 (1965) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Montgomery County, Maryland v. Jaffe, Raitt, Heuer & Weiss, P.C., 897 F. Supp. 233, 238 (D. Md. 1995) (Rule 14 addresses procedural issue and governs in diversity of citizenship case).

(n7)Footnote 1. Northwest Airlines, Inc. v. Transport Workers Union, 451 U.S. 77, 101 S. Ct. 1571, 1580, 67 L. Ed. 2d 750 (1981) .

(n8)Footnote 2. See, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 78i(e).

(n9)Footnote 3. See Santana Prods. v. Bobrick Washroom Equip., Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 678, 680-681 (M.D. Pa. 1999) ; cf. Northwest Airlines, Inc. v. Transport Workers Union, 451 U.S. 77, 101 S. Ct. 1571, 1580-1581, 67 L. Ed. 2d 750 (1981) .

(n10)Footnote 4. See Hricik, Remedies of the Infringer: The Use by the Infringer of Implied and Common Law Federal Rights, State Law Claims, and Contract to Shift Liability for Infringement of Patents Copyrights and Trademarks, 28 Tex. Tech. L. Rev. 1027, 1058-1060 (1997).

(n11)Footnote 1. See § 14.57.

(n12)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(1).

(n13)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n14)Footnote 4. Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 822, 82 L. Ed. 1188 (1938) (with respect to decisions on substantive issues in cases other than federal question cases, federal courts must apply state law).

(n15)Footnote 5. See Hiatt v. Mazda Motor Corp., 75 F.3d 1252, 1255 (8th Cir. 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); United States Surgical Corp. v. John K. Pulsifer & Co., 119 F.R.D. 18, 19 (D. Md. 1988) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n16)Footnote 6. Rodolico v. Unisys Corp., 189 F.R.D. 245, 252-253 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (in suit by former employee union members who were laid off against their former employer for violations of Age Discrimination in Employment Act, employer had option to file third-party claim against union based on New York Human Rights Law).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.54

§ 14.54 Claims Between Plaintiff and Impleaded Third Partyn*

[1] Claims Between Plaintiff and Third Party After Impleader

To initiate impleader, a defending party joins a third party who is or may be liable to the defending party for all or part of the claim pending against it. n1 Thus, the impleader claim joins the third party to the pending case. After the third party is impleaded, and is therefore joined to the case, the rule allows the third-party defendant to assert a claim directly against the plaintiff, provided that the claim arises from the same "transaction or occurrence" as the underlying case. The rule also permits the plaintiff to assert a claim directly against the third-party defendant, provided that the claim arises from the same "transaction or occurrence" as the underlying case. n2

However, these claims do not have commonly accepted names, and courts have not applied consistent labels. These claims should not be referred to as counterclaims, because counterclaims must be between "opposing" parties, n3 and until one asserts a claim against the other, the plaintiff and third-party defendant simply are not opposing parties. n4 In this chapter, these claims are referred to using the status of the claiming party first: the third party-plaintiff claim is a claim made by the third party, and the plaintiff-third party claim is a claim made by the plaintiff.

[2] Manner of Initiating Claim

Rule 14(a) does not specify the manner in which a third party or a plaintiff should make a claim after impleader has occurred. It appears that the third party or the plaintiff should request leave of court to assert such a claim. n1 Similarly, plaintiffs in this situation commonly seek leave of court to amend their complaint to add the claim. n2

However, it is not necessary for a plaintiff to file a formal amendment of the plaintiff's complaint asserting causes of action against a party impleaded under Rule 14(a) provided that the third-party is effectively on notice that it will be held liable on the plaintiff's claims and the two proceed at trial against one another in an adverse manner. n3 Some courts have indicated that the plaintiff may proceed against the impleaded third party by filing a new pleading against the third party. Thus, there is authority for the practical position that the plaintiff may assert the plaintiff-third party Rule 14(a) claim in a separate pleading, without amending the original complaint and without having to seek the court's permission. n4 It also seems clear that the plaintiff should not have to wait for the third-party defendant to respond to the third-party complaint before filing the plaintiff's pleading against the third party. Additionally, provided that the impleaded third party is effectively on notice that it will be held liable on the plaintiff's claims and the plaintiff and third party proceed against one another in an adverse manner at trial, the district court may permitting the plaintiff to amend its complaint to conform to the evidence at trial. n5 On the other hand, the plaintiff may not assert a plaintiff-third party Rule 14(a) claim after the underlying case between plaintiff and defendant has been terminated. n6

Any Rule 14(a) claim between the plaintiff and the third party must arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the underlying dispute between the original plaintiff and the original defendant. n7 Thus, if the third party-plaintiff claim or the plaintiff-third party claim is not transactionally related to the underlying dispute, it may not be asserted in the pending case. n8 Once the plaintiff or third party does assert a proper Rule 14(a) claim, however, it may use the unlimited claim joinder rule to join any claims, even ones that are transactionally unrelated, in the pending case. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 14.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1), (2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(C), (D), (a)(3); see Project Hope v. M/V Ibn Sina, 250 F.3d 67, 76 (2d Cir. 2001)

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a),(b); Finkel v. United States, 385 F. Supp. 333 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 4. Spring City Corp. v. American Bldgs. Co., 193 F.3d 165, 169 (3d Cir. 1999) (third-party defendant joined under Rule 14 does not become defendant as against original plaintiff, so that federal jurisdiction is not destroyed where those parties are citizens of the same state).

(n6)Footnote 1. Finkel v. United States, 385 F. Supp. 333, 336 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) (denying leave to file Rule 14(a) third party-plaintiff claim).

(n7)Footnote 2. Martin v. Lociccero, 917 F. Supp. 178, 184 (W.D.N.Y. 1995) (parties and courts usually deal with issue through motion for leave to amend); Straub v. Desa Indus., Inc., 88 F.R.D. 6, 8 (M.D. Pa. 1980) (liberal amendment policies support assertion of plaintiff-third party Rule 14(a) claim).

(n8)Footnote 3. Project Hope v. M/V Ibn Sina, 250 F.3d 67, 76-77 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 4. Northbrook Nat'l Ins. Co. v. J&R Vending Corp., 167 F.R.D. 643, 647 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Dysart v. Marriott Corp., 103 F.R.D. 15, 18 (E.D. Pa. 1984) (plaintiff does not need court permission to file claim against third-party defendant before running of statute of limitation).

(n10)Footnote 5. Project Hope v. M/V Ibn Sina, 250 F.3d 67, 76 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n11)Footnote 6. Babcock & Wilcox Co. v. Parsons Corp., 430 F.2d 531, 540 (8th Cir. 1970) .

(n12)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(3).

(n13)Footnote 8. Finkel v. United States, 385 F. Supp. 333, 336 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) (denying leave to file third party-plaintiff Rule 14(a) claim because claim did not arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the underlying dispute between plaintiff and defendant).

(n14)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a) (joinder of claims).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.55

§ 14.55 Common Types of Impleadern*

[1] Impleader of Insurer

The nature of an insurance contract is indemnification. In most cases it will not be necessary for the defendant to implead an insurance company because usually the insurer will admit coverage and provide the defense for the defendant. However, the issue of impleader of an insurance company may arise when an insurer disclaims liability n1 or in circumstances involving multiple coverage. n2 In any event, a defending party may not implead an insurer unless the insurer "is or may be liable" to the defendant. n3 Therefore, impleader is not proper unless there is some plausible theory of the insurance company's liability to the defendant for all or part of the claim by the plaintiff against the defendant. n4

On the other hand, an insurer may not prevent impleader by including a provision in the policy that no action will lie against the insurer until judgment has been rendered against the insured and has been paid by the insured. The goals of third-party practice would be defeated if a "no-action" clause were held to preclude impleader. n5

Even where impleader is proper, the court has discretion to deny impleader when there is risk of prejudice if the jury should learn that the defendant is insured. n6 On the other hand, when it is common knowledge that a party is covered by insurance, or if that fact is introduced into the litigation, the court may properly allow impleader because of the slight danger of prejudice resulting from impleading the insurer. n7 For example, courts have allowed impleader after noting that it is common knowledge among jurors that common carriers insure their cargo. n8

[2] Impleader of Joint Tortfeasor

When more than one person perpetrates some tortious act, the law of most jurisdictions recognizes that one joint tortfeasor has some right of indemnity or contribution against the other joint tortfeasors. n1 Because impleader is proper only if the substantive law recognizes a derivative claim against the third-party defendant, one common impleader issue is whether a joint tortfeasor sued by the plaintiff in a particular case has a right to contribution from its joint tortfeasors. While at common law there was generally no right to contribution between joint tortfeasors, in most American jurisdictions that rule has been changed either by statute or by judicial decision. n2 The common law does recognize a right of indemnity, however, where one tortfeasor is primarily liable and the other is secondarily liable to the injured party. The secondarily liable actor is entitled to full indemnity from the primarily liable actor for any damages which it sustains in a suit by the victim. n3 However, impleader based on diversity jurisdiction is still improper on the basis of contribution among joint tortfeasors in the jurisdictions adhering to the common-law no-contribution rule. n4

Even among those states that recognize contribution among joint tortfeasors, there is not a uniform approach regarding the time and manner for asserting a contribution claim. In some states, joint tortfeasors in pari delicto have a right of contribution among themselves but only to the extent that the plaintiff chose to join them in the original action. In other states, a joint tortfeasor against whom judgment has been entered may sue the other joint tortfeasors for contribution but usually not until after it pays the judgment. If the actors are separate, and not joint, tortfeasors, substantive law generally does not recognize a right of contribution, and impleader is improper.

Even in states in which there is no right to contribution, a defendant can implead a joint tortfeasor if there is some other ground for a recovery against the third-party; n5 for example, comparative fault provisions of state law may provide a substantive reason for impleader to determine attribution of fault. n6 When the governing substantive law permits contribution among joint tortfeasors regardless of whether plaintiff has sued the joint tortfeasors initially, the defendant can implead the joint tortfeasors to enforce its claim for contribution. n7 Provided that the governing substantive law recognizes a claim, impleader is proper even if the claim does not arise until one joint tortfeasor discharges the common liability to the plaintiff. n8

[3] Impleader Involving United States as Party

[a] Availability of Impleader

The impleader rule, as well as the other Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, applies to civil actions by or against the United States; however, the rule's application is limited by the principle of sovereign immunity, which restricts the situations in which the United States is required to defend a claim.

When the United States is a defending party, impleader may be used by the United states against a third-party in the circumstances that satisfy the impleader rule. n1 In the most common example, the United States is sued under the Federal Tort Claims Act, and the United States then impleads a joint tortfeasor for indemnity or contribution. n2 In such cases, because the United States is the third-party plaintiff, there is no problem of sovereign immunity, in that the sovereign is the claimant. Furthermore, the doctrine that the United States may not be made a codefendant in district court under the Tucker Act does not impair the government's ability to implead a third-party. That doctrine merely establishes circumstances in which the United States may be sued and is not applicable to a case in which the government is asserting a claim. n3 For purposes of the impleader rule, courts have concluded that a state is a "person," and the United States may therefore implead a state on an assertion of derivative liability. n4

In certain circumstances, a person defending a claim may assert an impleader claim against the United States. In such circumstances, sovereign immunity is an issue because the United states is not making a claim, but is merely acting in a defensive capacity. For example, in a tort case the Federal Tort Claims Act permits a private party who is defending a tort claim to implead the United States as an alleged joint tortfeasor. n5 While the United States may be named as a third-party defendant under the Federal Tort Claims Act, an attempt by the plaintiff to amend its complaint to state a claim directly against the United States is precluded by the requirement under that Act that the plaintiff file a timely administrative claim. Failure to file deprives the district court of an independent basis of jurisdiction over such a direct claim, because filing of an administrative claim is a jurisdictional prerequisite. n6

In another example, the United States may also be impleaded under the Suits in Admiralty Act, even in cases when the underlying claim is cognizable on the law side of the court, and the third-party claim is triable in admiralty. n7

[b] Substantive Law for Impleader Involving United States

Impleader involving the United States may raise issues of what substantive law governs the various claims, including the impleader claims against a third-party defendant. With respect to the Federal Tort Claims Act, the liability of the United States is governed by state law. n8 Consequently, its liability as a third-party defendant is also governed by state law, n9 as well as the United States government's ability to implead a third-party defendant. n10

Federal common law may also be a source of substantive law used in conjunction with impleader claims by or against the United States. In one case, for example, the Supreme Court extrapolated a comparative negligence theory from a standard government contract clause used in the case where the clause provided for indemnification of the United States. The Supreme Court adopted a comparative negligence theory under which the contractor would be partially liable for indemnification to the extent that its negligence caused the damages. n11 In cases involving substantially similar clauses, the United States as the sole defendant should be able to implead the contractor on the basis of this federal common law of comparative negligence. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 14.07-14.10 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Tourangeau v. Uniroyal, Inc., 189 F.R.D. 42, 44 (D. Conn. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Cf. Emons Indus., Inc. v. Liberty Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 481 F. Supp. 1022, 1027-1028 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) (in suit on product liability policy, defendant insurer could have impleaded other insurers that had covered plaintiff, except that plaintiff had discontinued the insured activity).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Forum Ins. Co. v. Ranger Ins. Co., 711 F. Supp. 909, 915 n.21 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (impleader denied because no showing third-party defendant could be liable).

(n6)Footnote 5. Colton v. Swain, 527 F.2d 296, 301-303 (7th Cir. 1975) (citing Moore's Federal Practice for proposition that no action clause does not bar impleader where insurer refuses to defend).

(n7)Footnote 6. Green v. Shepherd Constr. Co., 46 F.R.D. 434, 437-438 (N.D. Ga. 1969) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Baker v. Moors, 51 F.R.D. 507, 509 (W.D. Ky. 1971) (rule against revealing existence of insurance in automobile cases is for protection of defendants, and therefore may be waived by them).

(n9)Footnote 8. Rosalis v. Universal Distribs., Inc., 21 F.R.D. 169, 172 (D. Conn. 1957) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Rodolico v. Unisys Corp., 189 F.R.D. 245, 250 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n11)Footnote 2. Northwest Airlines v. Transport Workers Union, 451 U.S. 77, 87, 101 S. Ct. 1571, 67 L. Ed. 2d 750 (1981) (helpful discussion of history and different approaches by the states).

(n12)Footnote 3. Con-Tech Sales Defined Ben. Trust v. Cockerham, 715 F. Supp. 701, 705, 710 (E.D. Pa. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 4. Johnson v. Serra, 521 F.2d 1289, 1297 (8th Cir. 1975) .

(n14)Footnote 5. Robbins v. Yamaha Motor Corp., 98 F.R.D. 36, 39 (M.D. Pa. 1983) .

(n15)Footnote 6. Tietz v. Blackner, 157 F.R.D. 510, 512-514 (D. Utah 1994) (although Utah law precluded impleader based on indemnity or contribution, impleader allowed to permit court to determine relative fault).

(n16)Footnote 7. Park v. Didden, 695 F.2d 626, 631-632 (D.C. Cir. 1982) .

(n17)Footnote 8. Williams v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 627 F.2d 158, 160 (8th Cir. 1980) .

(n18)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a); Brown v. Shredex, Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 764, 766-767 (D.S.C. 1999) .

(n19)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Brown v. Shredex, Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 764, 766-767 (D.S.C. 1999) (when federal employee's minor child sued United States government under Federal Tort Claims Act for injuries minor sustained from paper shredder at government workplace, government was entitled to implead employee for contribution and indemnification); Collins v. General Motors Corp., 101 F.R.D. 4, 6-7 (W.D. Pa. 1983) (government impleaded van manufacturer for indemnity or contribution).

(n20)Footnote 3. United States v. Sherwood, 312 U.S. 584, 61 S. Ct. 767, 771-772, 85 L. Ed. 1058 (1941) .

(n21)Footnote 4. Palmer v. United States, 652 F.2d 893, 895-896 (9th Cir. 1981) , overruled on other grounds sub nom. White v. McGinnis, 903 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n22)Footnote 5. United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 340 U.S. 543 (1951) (citing Moore's Federal Practice; court held that Federal Tort Claims Act permits impleader of the United States as if it were a private individual); Boone v. Du Bose, 718 F. Supp. 479, 486-487 (M.D. La. 1988) (impleader by defending party against United States for indemnity or contribution).

(n23)Footnote 6. See 28 U.S.C. § 2675(a).

(n24)Footnote 7. Orion Shipping & Trading Co. v. United States, 247 F.2d 755, 757 (9th Cir. 1957) .

(n25)Footnote 8. Richards v. United States, 369 U.S. 1, 82 S. Ct. 585, 589-591, 7 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1962) .

(n26)Footnote 9. Berger v. Winer Sportswear, Inc., 394 F. Supp. 1110, 1113 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) (applying Massachusetts law under provision of Federal Tort Claims Act that requires application of whole law of state where act or omission occurred).

(n27)Footnote 10. Estate of Warner v. United States, 669 F. Supp. 234, 236 (N.D. Ill. 1987) (court dismissed government's impleader claim because Illinois law did not create claim for contribution on facts of case).

(n28)Footnote 11. United States v. Seckinger, 397 U.S. 203, 90 S. Ct. 880, 25 L. Ed. 2d 224 (1970) .

(n29)Footnote 12. Barron v. United States, 654 F.2d 644, 648 (9th Cir. 1981) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.56

§ 14.56 Procedural Considerationsn*

[1] Complaint Against Third-Party Defendant

[a] Timing

A defending party asserting an impleader claim need not obtain leave of court to serve the third party summons and complaint provided that the party files the third party complaint not later than 14 days after serving its original answer. n1 On the other hand, after the specified 14 day period, the party asserting the impleader claim must obtain leave of court on motion and notice to all parties to the action. n2 Even if the defending party does file within the 14 day period, however, the impleader rule provides that the other parties may move to strike the impleader claim. n3

Additionally, the court is not required to allow the impleader complaint, and the issue of whether an impleader complaint should proceed is dependent on the district court's discretion. n4 Accordingly, even when an impleader complaint is filed in a timely manner, the court has considerable discretion to enter any order it deems appropriate to facilitate the litigation and avoid prejudice. n5

[b] Contents

The contents required in a third-party complaint are specified in official Form 16 of the Appendix of Forms to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n6 Under Rule 84, use of the form is sufficient to satisfy the pleading requirements of the federal rules. n7 The third-party complaint must contain a statement of the claim in favor of the defending party against the third-party defendant. A copy of the original complaint should be attached as an exhibit to the third-party complaint. n8

Form 16 contains no allegation of subject matter jurisdiction, n9 as is required for an original complaint. n10 However, it is good practice to include such an allegation, whether the pleader is relying on an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction, including federal question jurisdiction, diversity jurisdiction, or supplemental jurisdiction. n11

Because the general pleading rule permitting alternative pleading applies to third-party complaints, there is no requirement that the defendant must plead its third-party complaint in a manner consistent with its answer. n12

[2] Motion for Leave of Court to File Third-Party Claim

[a] Timing

A defending party asserting an impleader claim must obtain leave of court to serve a third party complaint if the party files the third party complaint later than 14 days after serving its original answer. n1 Leave of court must be obtained on motion and notice to all current parties to the action. n2 In deciding whether to grant a motion for leave to file an impleader complaint, the court has considerable discretion to enter any order it deems appropriate to facilitate the litigation and avoid prejudice. n3 In the exercise of its discretion, the court should consider the following factors: (1) whether the moving party deliberately delayed or was derelict in filing the motion; (2) whether the impleader would unduly delay or complicate trial; (3) whether the impleader would prejudice the third party defendant; and (4) whether the third party complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted. n4

Although the impleader rule does not set a time in which a motion for leave must be brought, undue delay is one factor on which the court may rely to deny the motion. Other factors include whether the delay in seeking leave was excusable and would prejudice a party. n5 Delay may be excused, for example if the party seeking impleader did not know of the existence of, or a basis for joining, a third-party defendant. However, the party must not delay any longer after the basis for impleader becomes clear. n6 The question of whether to permit impleader will depend on the individual facts of the case and is within the sound discretion of the trial court. n7

Another consideration in the timeliness of a motion to implead is the effect of local rules. Thus, a local rule may provide that impleader must be sought within six months of the defendant's service of its original answer. n8 However, such time frames are generally considered one factor to consider in exercising the court's discretion. n9

[b] Contents

If the third-party plaintiff does not file its third-party complaint within 10 days after serving its original answer, the third-party plaintiff must bring a motion to permit it to proceed with an impleader claim. n10 The contents of such a motion are specified in Form 16 of the Appendix of Forms to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n11 Although use of the form is not mandatory, under Rule 84, the form is deemed sufficient to satisfy the pleading requirements of the federal rules. n12 Form 16 requires the moving party to attach a complaint to the motion. This practice provides the court and other parties with notice of the type of claim proposed against the proposed third-party defendant and allows a more meaningful assessment of the propriety of the impleader motion. n13 Although the impleader rule does not set a time for bringing the motion for leave to implead, a defendant's delay in seeking leave may be considered by the court in ruling on the motion. n14

[c] Service On Current Parties to Action

The impleader rule requires that notice of the motion be served on all parties to the action. n15 This provision is repetitious because Rule 5 requires notice to be given to all other parties for every written motion. n16 In any event, the reference to parties in Rule 14(a) includes only those parties that are already joined; n17 such parties are entitled to present objections to the impleader at the hearing on the motion. Because the third-party defendant is not yet a party to the action, however, it is not entitled to notice of the motion for leave to implead or to object at the hearing on the motion. Rather, if impleader is granted, the third-party defendant receives notice by service of the third-party complaint and may move to vacate the order permitting it. n18

[3] Procedural Rights of Third-Party Defendant

[a] Court May Not Order Impleader Unless Third-Party Defendant is Subject to Personal Jurisdiction

The third-party plaintiff must serve the third-party complaint and summons on the third-party defendant under the general service of process rule. n1 Service of process is required because impleader joins a new party to the case, and the third-party defendant, who has been a nonparty to this point, must be brought before the jurisdiction of the court. n2 The court may exercise its personal jurisdiction over the third-party defendant only through service of process. n2.1 The general rule is that a federal district court may exercise personal jurisdiction throughout the state in which it sits and may serve process out of state only to the same extent as the courts of that state. n3 Thus, if a state long-arm statute allows for service of process out of state and the exercise satisfies due process, the court has power to exercise personal jurisdiction over the third-party defendant. n4

In some instances, a federal statutory provision may permit nationwide service of process over a third-party defendant, n5 and the service of process rule specifically refers to the possibility of using such federal statutes. n6

It is important to remember that, unlike subject matter jurisdiction, lack of personal jurisdiction and improper service of process are defenses that may be waived. Therefore, if a third-party defendant fails to assert the defense in a timely and proper manner, the third party may be deemed to have submitted to personal jurisdiction voluntarily. n7

[b] Third-Party Defendant's Motion to Strike Improper Impleader

If a defending party attempts to implead a third party defendant more than 14 days after serving its answer without seeking leave of court, n8 the third party defendant may move to strike the third party complaint. n9 Furthermore, even though the third party defendant is not entitled to notice of a motion for leave to implead, if the motion is improperly granted, the objecting third party defendant should make a motion to vacate the order granting impleader. Although the impleader rule does not expressly provide for a motion to vacate, courts have recognized the district court's power to consider such a motion. It is part of the court's underlying discretion to allow or deny impleader. n10 Thus the rules clearly contemplate the possibility of two rulings on the question of whether impleader is proper. If the third party plaintiff fails to implead within 14 days after serving its original answer, the third party plaintiff must obtain leave to implead on motion and notice to all parties to the action. If leave is granted, the third party defendant's motion to vacate will present the same issue of an abuse of discretion by the court in granting leave. n11

[c] Third-Party Defendant's Response to Impleader Complaint

The third-party defendant must respond to the third-party complaint in the same manner as a defendant to a complaint; the impleader rule provides that the third-party defendant must make any defenses to the impleader claim as provided in Rule 12. n12 Therefore, the third party defendant has 21 days after service of the summons in which to answer or file an appropriate motion. n13 If the third party defendant is the United States government or an agency or officer of the government, the time in which to respond is 60 days after service on the United States attorney. n13.1

Failure to answer or otherwise respond under Rule 12 entitles the third-party plaintiff to demand entry of default. The third-party defendant has the choice to either "answer," or may instead choose to defend in any way permitted under Rule 12. Thus, the third-party defendant may move to dismiss under any of the bases allowed under Rule 12(b), n14 such as lack of subject matter jurisdiction, failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted, lack of personal jurisdiction, or other motion to dismiss. n15

The third-party defendant also has the option to make any other appropriate motion, such as a motion for a more definite statement, n16 motion to strike, n17 or motion for summary judgment. n18 If the third-party defendant fails to respond, it is subject to the waiver provisions of Rule 12. n19

[d] Third-Party Defendant's Response to Underlying Complaint of Plaintiff

The third-party defendant may move to dismiss not only the third-party complaint but also the plaintiff's underlying complaint as well because, once impleaded, the third-party defendant is a party to the litigation. The third-party defendant enjoys the benefits and must abide by the consequences of party status, and because it has been joined and brought before the jurisdiction of the court, the third-party defendant is bound by the judgment in the case. n20 This means that the third-party defendant is bound by the outcome of the underlying claim by the plaintiff against the defendant who impleaded the third-party defendant. Therefore, the rule specifically provides that the third-party defendant may assert against the plaintiff any defenses which the third-party plaintiff has to the plaintiff's claim. n21

In addition to being permitted to assert defenses available to the defendant that impleaded it, the third-party defendant must be accorded the procedural rights of a party. For example, it will be allowed to introduce evidence on relevant issues and to cross-examine witnesses in the main action. n22 These rights protect the impleaded third-party defendant when the third-party plaintiff fails or neglects to assert a proper defense to the plaintiff's action. n23

Although the plaintiff and the third-party defendant are not technically opposing parties, n24 the impleader rule recognizes the derivative nature of the third-party defendant's potential liability and permits it essentially to stand in the defendant's shoes and assert its defenses. n25 On the other hand, if the third-party defendant has no opportunity to litigate the result in the underlying action, for example if the plaintiff and defendant enter a consent judgment, the third-party defendant will not be bound. n26

[4] Permissive Joinder of Claims After Impleader

After properly asserting an impleader claim, the defending party may use the permissive claim joinder rule to join any other claims, regardless of whether transactionally related, against the third-party defendant. n1 Additionally, because the impleaded person is now a party, the other parties have the right to file any appropriate counterclaims and cross-claims. n2 The impleader rule expressly provides that the third-party defendant may assert counterclaims against the third-party plaintiff and cross-claims against other third-party defendants. n3 Consequently, the third-party defendant must assert compulsory counterclaims n4 and may assert permissive counterclaims n5 against the third-party plaintiff. And the third-party defendant may file cross-claims against other third-party defendants. n6

Furthermore, the courts apply the impleader joinder of claims rules liberally to include many types of claims by parties against other parties after impleader occurs, to further the underlying purpose of the federal rules to promote efficiency in litigation and to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. For example, it has been held that when a plaintiff is making a claim directly against the third-party defendant who has been impleaded under Rule 14(a), a formal amendment of the plaintiff's complaint to assert the cause of action against the impleaded party is not necessary, provided that the third-party defendant is effectively on notice that he or she will be held liable on the plaintiff's claims and the two proceed against one another in an adverse manner. n7 It has been held in another case that under Rule 14(a), a third-party defendant may file a cross-claim against an original defendant, even if it would be inappropriate to characterize the third-party defendant as a co-defendant of the original defendant. n8

[5] Statute of Limitation

The applicable statute of limitation for a third-party claim depends on the substantive law of the claim. If the third-party claim arises under federal law, a federal statute of limitation will govern. n1 If there is no federal statute of limitation and the claim is one at law, the state statute of limitation applicable to a similar claim will govern. n2 In many third-party cases, of course, the third-party claim does not arise under federal law; rather, it may be based on state law because the claim is asserted under diversity of citizenship jurisdiction or supplemental jurisdiction. For these claims, state statutes of limitation will govern, regardless of whether the claim is one at law or in equity. n3

With respect to impleader, the defendant may not assert a third-party claim if the statute of limitation has run for the claim against the third party. n4 However, because the statute of limitation is an affirmative defense, the third-party defendant must raise the issue or else waive it. n5

The applicable statute of limitation is the statute prescribed for the substantive claim by the defendant against the third-party defendant. As a general rule, that statute will not start to run on a claim for indemnification or contribution until judgment has been entered against the defendant, or until the defendant has paid the judgment and thus suffered the loss it seeks to transfer to the third-party defendant through impleader. n6 Consequently, a defendant may implead a third party to enforce a right of contribution against the third party, even if the statute of limitation has expired on any claim the plaintiff could assert directly against the third party. n7

Other claims related to impleader are also subject to an applicable statute of limitation, such as, a claim by the plaintiff against the third-party defendant. n7.1 Furthermore, the fact that the defendant has filed an impleader claim against the third-party defendant does not toll the running of the statute of limitation on plaintiff's claim against the third-party defendant. n8

[6] Motion for Separate Trial or Severance of Impleader Claim

After an impleader claim has been made, any party may move for separate trial or severance of the impleader claim. n1 This provision is repetitious of other rules that give the district court authority to order severance n2 and separate trials. n3 Technically, severance is for use by the court to cure misjoinder of parties. It results in two separate lawsuits with separate judgments. On the other hand, an order of separate trials separates issues or claims for different fact finding, but the claims remain in a single case that results in a single judgment. n4

The district court has wide discretion to order severance or separate trials, either on motion or on its own initiative. The court will consider several factors in the exercise of its discretion: (1) whether the issues sought to be tried separately are significantly different from one another; (2) whether the separable issues require the testimony of different witnesses and different documentary proof; (3) whether the party opposing the severance will be prejudiced if it is granted; and (4) whether the party requesting the severance will be prejudiced if it is not granted. n5 Some older cases suggest that there would be not be a strong reason to permit impleader unless the issues could be adjudicated in one trial. n6 However, an order of separate trials of the underlying claim and the impleader claim may be appropriate when confusion might otherwise result; but impleader would still be appropriate to take advantage, even if separate trials are ordered, of having all claims asserted in a single case before a single judge. n7

[7] Appeal of Trial Court Order Regarding Impleader

The general rule is that a party may take an appeal only from a final judgment, which is a judgment that decides all issues relating to the merits in the case. Thus, interlocutory orders generally may not be raised until the entire case is concluded by judgment. n1 There are two exceptions to this general "final judgment rule." The first exception is a statutory permission for interlocutory appeal of issues that have been certified by the court. n2 The other exception is Rule 54(b), which allows entry of a final judgment on fewer than all claims. n3 Absent one of these exceptions, a ruling on a motion for leave to implead is not appealable, because it is not final. n4

Therefore, if the court grants a defendant's motion to implead a third party over the plaintiff's objection, the plaintiff may not appeal; nor may the third party appeal from the order impleading it or from denial of its motion to dismiss the third-party proceeding. Furthermore, resolution of a third-party complaint while the main action is pending is ordinarily not appealable, because it is not a final judgment; n5 neither is resolution of the main claim while the third-party complaint is pending. Similarly, an order dismissing a third-party complaint is not appealable if the main action remains pending. On the other hand, an order dismissing the third-party claim after the main case has been settled or otherwise disposed of is a final and appealable decision because all claims would have been resolved. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 14.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1); see [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(4).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1963 Amendments.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Rodolico v. Unisys Corp., 189 F.R.D. 245, 250 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (to promote judicial efficiency, court should freely grant timely motions for leave to implead non-parties, unless to do so would prejudice plaintiff, unduly complicate the trial, or would foster an obviously unmeritorious claim); see also Eastman Chem. Int'l Ltd. v. Virginia Nat'l Bank, 94 F.R.D. 21, 22 (E.D. Tenn. 1981) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. Form 16.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 84.

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. Form 16.

(n10)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. Form 16.

(n11)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(1).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Willy v. Coastal Corp., 503 U.S. 131, 134-135, 112 S. Ct. 1076, 117 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1992) .

(n13)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e).

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1); see [1][a], above.

(n15)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1); see [3][b], below.

(n16)Footnote 3. See Too, Inc. v. Kohl's Dep't Stores, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 138, 140 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) ; Rodolico v. Unisys Corp., 189 F.R.D. 245, 250 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Devon Mobile Communs. Liquidating Trust v. Adelphia Communs. Corp., 324 B.R. 492, 495 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n18)Footnote 5. Hornsby v. Johns-Manville Corp., 96 F.R.D. 367, 368 (E.D. Pa. 1982) (court granted motion for impleader despite substantial delay because defendants' delay was excusable, there was no prejudice to third-party defendants, and trial would not be unduly delayed or complicated).

(n19)Footnote 6. Jagielski v. Package Mach. Co., 93 F.R.D. 431, 432 (E.D. Pa. 1981) (court permitted impleader despite 18-month delay, because of recent discovery of basis for impleader, and defendant was not dilatory or derelict in pursuing matter after discovery).

(n20)Footnote 7. Lehman v. Revolution Portfolio L.L.C., 166 F.3d 389, 393 (1st Cir. 1999) (determination of whether to permit impleader is left to informed discretion of district court, which should allow impleader on any colorable claim of derivative liability that will not unduly delay or otherwise prejudice ongoing proceedings).

(n21)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Morrison, 148 F.R.D. 295, 296 (M.D. Fla. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 9. Con Tech Sales Defined Ben. Trust v. Cockerham, 715 F. Supp. 701, 703 (E.D. Pa. 1989) (local rule providing for motion not later than 90 days after serving answer did not automatically bar impleader nine months after serving answer, because court should consider prejudice).

(n23)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n24)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. Form 16.

(n25)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 84.

(n26)Footnote 13. Cf. Liberty Folder v. Curtiss Anthony Corp., 90 F.R.D. 80, 84 (S.D. Ohio 1981) .

(n27)Footnote 14. See [a], above.

(n28)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(c)(1).

(n29)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a).

(n30)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n31)Footnote 18. Harries v. General Motors Corp., 786 F. Supp. 446, 447-449 (M.D. Pa. 1992) (motion to strike impleader claim).

(n32)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n33)Footnote 2. See Santana Prods., Inc. v. Bobrick Washroom Equip., 14 F. Supp. 2d 710 (M.D. Pa. 1998) .

(n34)Footnote 2.1. See NASCAR v. Doe, 584 F. Supp. 2d 824, 829-830 (W.D.N.C. 2008) .

(n35)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(1)(A); International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 316, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945) (due process limitation on state's authority to exercise personal jurisdiction).

(n36)Footnote 4. Sonnabend v. Sorrentino, 866 F. Supp. 651, 653 (D. Mass. 1994) (discussion of personal jurisdiction over third-party defendant pursuant to Massachusetts long-arm statute).

(n37)Footnote 5. Pensacola Const. Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine, 705 F. Supp. 306, 315 (W.D. La. 1988) , dismissed on other grounds by United States ex rel. Pensacola Constr. Co. v. St. Paul Fire & marine Ins. Co., 710 F. Supp. 638 (W.D. La. 1989) .

(n38)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(1)(D).

(n39)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1); see also Clark v. Associates Commercial Corp., 149 F.R.D. 629, 632 (D. Kan. 1993) (third-party defendant waived personal jurisdiction defense by failure to include it with initial motion for more definite statement).

(n40)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1).

(n41)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(4); Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac R.R. Co. v. Davis Industries, Inc., 787 F. Supp. 572, 574 (E.D. Va. 1992) .

(n42)Footnote 10. City of Orange Beach v. Scottsdale Ins. Co., 166 F.R.D. 506, 509 (S.D. Ala. 1996) .

(n43)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(1), (a)(4).

(n44)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(A); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 12.

(n45)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(i).

(n46)Footnote 13.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(a)(1)(A)(ii).

(n47)Footnote 14. See Cargill Ferrous Int'l v. M/V Anatoli, 935 F. Supp. 833, 835 (E.D. La. 1996) (third-party moved to dismiss for failure to state claim).

(n48)Footnote 15. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

(n49)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n50)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

(n51)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n52)Footnote 19. Clark v. Associates Commercial Corp., 149 F.R.D. 629, 632 (D. Kan. 1993) (third-party defendant waived affirmative defense by failure to include it with initial motion for more definite statement).

(n53)Footnote 20. Martin v. Wilks, 490 U.S. 755, 761-762, 104 L. Ed. 2d 835 (1989) .

(n54)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(C).

(n55)Footnote 22. Glick v. White Motor Co., 458 F.2d 1287, 1291 (3d Cir. 1972) (because third-party defendant will be bound by judgment on underlying claim, it must be protected by taking part in trial, including examination and cross-examination of witnesses).

(n56)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a), Advisory Committee Note to 1963 Amendments.

(n57)Footnote 24. See Spring City Corp. v. American Bldgs. Co., 193 F.3d 165, 169 (3d Cir. 1999) .

(n58)Footnote 25. Oyster v. Bell Asbestos Mines, 568 F. Supp. 80, 82 (E.D. Pa. 1983) .

(n59)Footnote 26. Dewald v. Minster Press Co., 494 F.2d 795, 797-798 (6th Cir. 1974) (third-party defendant not bound by consent decree of underlyi ng case between plaintiff and defendant).

(n60)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a); see, e.g., Stiber v. United States, 60 F.R.D. 668, 670 (E.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n61)Footnote 2. Thomas v. Barton Lodge II, Ltd., 174 F.3d 636, 652 (5th Cir. 1999) (third-party defendant may assert claims arising out of transaction against original plaintiff, counterclaims against third-party plaintiff, and cross claims against a co-party).

(n62)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 13.

(n63)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n64)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b).

(n65)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n66)Footnote 7. Project Hope v. M/V IBN SINA, (2d Cir. 2001).

(n67)Footnote 8. Thomas v. Barton Lodge II, Ltd., 174 F.3d 636, 652 (5th Cir. 1999) (because Rule 14(a) allows third-party defendants to join additional parties to lawsuit to resolve claims related to claim made against third-party defendants, it would not make sense to conclude that third-party defendants could not bring those claims against parties already involved in suit).

(n68)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1658 (all claims arising under federal statutes enacted after December 1, 1990, which do not provide a limitation period are subject to a four-year statute of limitation).

(n69)Footnote 2. See North Star Steel Co. v. Thomas, 515 U.S. 29, 34-36, 115 S. Ct. 1927, 132 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1995) .

(n70)Footnote 3. Guaranty Trust Co. v. York, 326 U.S. 99, 108 (1945) .

(n71)Footnote 4. Bishop v. Atmos Energy Corp., 161 F.R.D. 339, 340 (W.D. Ky. 1995) .

(n72)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c) (statute of limitation is affirmative defense); see Colonial Refrigerated Transp., Inc. v. Worsham, 705 F.2d 821, 826 (6th Cir. 1983) (affirming judgment in diversity case against third-party defendant that failed to assert apparently meritorious statute of limitation defense).

(n73)Footnote 6. Sea-Land Serv., Inc. v. United States, 874 F.2d 169, 171 (3d Cir. 1989) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); ITT Rayonier, Inc. v. Southeastern Maritime Co., 620 F.2d 512, 514 (5th Cir. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n74)Footnote 7. Wandrey v. McCarthy, 804 F. Supp. 1384, 1386 (D. Kan. 1992) (court may allow impleader even if original plaintiff is barred by statute of limitation from bringing action directly against third-party defendant).

(n75)Footnote 7.1. See Santiago v. United States, 884 F. Supp. 45 (D.P.R. 1995) (noting that impleader would be timely even though statute of limitation had run on plaintiff's right to proceed against third party).

(n76)Footnote 8. Scharrer v. Conrail, 792 F. Supp. 170, 172 (D. Conn. 1992) .

(n77)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(4).

(n78)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 21.

(n79)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b).

(n80)Footnote 4. See Houseman v. United States Aviation Underwriters, 171 F.3d 1117, 1122-1123 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n81)Footnote 5. Morris v. Northrop Grumman Corp., 37 F. Supp. 2d 556, 580 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (separate trial); German v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 896 F. Supp. 1385, 1400 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (severance).

(n82)Footnote 6. Gladden v. Cia Commercio y Vapores, S.A., 26 F.R.D. 155, 156-157 (E.D. Pa. 1960) (impleader should result in single trial).

(n83)Footnote 7. Beights v. W.R. Grace & Co., 62 F.R.D. 546 (W.D. Okla. 1974) (court allowed impleader but ordered separate trial because of differences in basic issues between underlying claim for personal injury and impleader claim of warranty).

(n84)Footnote 1. United States v. Olavarrieta, 812 F.2d 640, 642 (11th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 851 (1987) .

(n85)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b).

(n86)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n87)Footnote 4. Minnesota v. Pickands Mather & Co., 636 F.2d 251, 252-255 (8th Cir. 1980) (order denying leave to file third-party complaint does not fall within the exception and is unappealable).

(n88)Footnote 5. Allegheny Airlines, Inc. v. LeMay, 448 F.2d 1341 (7th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1001 (1971) .

(n89)Footnote 6. See In re Yarn Processing Patent Validity Litigation, 680 F.2d 1338, 1340 (11th Cir. 1982) (order dismissing third-party complaint did not constitute final judgment while other claims remained pending).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.57

§ 14.57 Subject Matter Jurisdictionn*

[1] Each Claim Must Have Basis in Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The impleader rule specifies the procedural circumstances in which the impleader claims may be asserted. n1 However, in addition to satisfying the procedural prerequisites, every impleader claim asserted in federal court must invoke a basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. The federal rules do not affect subject matter jurisdiction. n2 Therefore, after determining whether one of the third-party practice claims is procedurally proper under the impleader rule, the court must then assess whether each claim is supported by subject matter jurisdiction. n3

The principal, although not exclusive bases for subject matter, are federal question jurisdiction and diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. To invoke federal question jurisdiction, the claimant must assert a claim that arises under federal law. n4 To invoke diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, every claimant must be a citizen of a different state from every defendant, and the amount in controversy must exceed $75,000. n5 Once federal subject matter jurisdiction is established over the underlying case, other impleader claims may, in general, be asserted only if they individually invoke a basis of subject matter jurisdiction; in other words, subject matter jurisdiction must exist for each and every individual claim asserted in federal court. If an impleader claim fails to invoke an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction, the court may still hear the claim under the doctrine of supplemental jurisdiction. n6

[2] Exception for Cases of Supplemental Jurisdiction

A federal district court may not hear a case unless at least one claim invokes an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction, such as federal question or diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n1 However, after that requirement is met, the joinder rules, including the impleader rule, may allow assertion of other claims and joinder of additional parties that do not have an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction. n2

Under the principle of supplemental jurisdiction, a federal district court has power to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a third-party claim that does not have an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction, if the third-party claim derives from the nucleus of operative fact common to the jurisdiction-conferring claim. n3 The basic impleader claim must itself pass the test, because the impleader rule allows the defending party to implead the third-party defendant only if the third party is or may be liable to the defendant for all or part of the underlying claim by the plaintiff against the defendant. Thus, because the liability of the third-party defendant to the defendant on the impleader claim is derivative of the defendant's underlying liability to the plaintiff in the underlying case, the impleader claim by definition is concerned with the same transaction or occurrence, or common nucleus of operative fact, as the underlying suit.

Two other types of impleader claims, a claim by the plaintiff against the third-party defendant and a claim by the third-party defendant against the plaintiff, also pass the supplemental jurisdiction test, because the impleader rule itself expressly prescribes a transactional test for these claims. n4 However, there is an exception to this general rule for impleader claims based solely on diversity; the district courts do not have supplemental jurisdiction over claims by the plaintiff against third-party defendants if exercising supplemental jurisdiction over such a claim would be inconsistent with diversity requirements. n5 Thus, the supplemental jurisdiction statute has reversed the prior common practice and precludes supplemental jurisdiction over impleader claims by plaintiffs, even when the plaintiff is acting in a defensive posture. n6 Similarly, in diversity of citizenship cases, the statute prohibits supplemental jurisdiction for Rule 14(a) claims by a plaintiff against a third-party defendant. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 14.41 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n4)Footnote 3. Harry Winston, Inc. v. Kerr, 72 F. Supp. 2d 263, 265 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (fact that third-party defendant's claim against plaintiff arose out of same transaction as plaintiff's claim against defendant, and was thus within federal procedure rule governing third-party practice, did not in itself provide federal district court subject matter jurisdiction over claim).

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n6)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367; see also [2], below.

(n8)Footnote 1. See [1], above.

(N9)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n10)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C.A. § 1367(a).

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(D), (a)(3).

(n12)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C.A. § 1367(a).

(n13)Footnote 6. Chase Manhattan Bank v. Aldridge, 906 F. Supp. 866, 868, 869 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) ; Guaranteed Systems, Inc. v. American Nat'l. Can Co., 842 F. Supp. 855, 856-858 (M.D.N.C. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 7. Owen Equip. & Erection Co. v. Kroger, 437 U.S. 365, 98 S. Ct. 2396, 2399-2400, 57 L. Ed. 2d 274 (1978) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.58

§ 14.58 Venuen*

[1] Defending Party's Claim Against Third Party

Generally, venue is proper where all defendants reside or in any district in which a substantial part of the claim arose. n1 It has been argued with success that the venue statutes apply only to the original jurisdiction-invoking claim by the plaintiff against the defendant, and that an impleader claim should not have to satisfy the provisions of the venue statutes. Because impleader claims are so closely related to the underlying dispute that they may invoke supplemental subject matter jurisdiction, they do not need to satisfy an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction. n2 Therefore, the federal courts have used a concept of "ancillary venue" over impleader claims. n3

While some early cases refused to do so, n4 the majority of courts presently use the concept of ancillary venue, which means that the impleader claim need not satisfy the venue statutes. n5 Under ancillary venue, the impleader claim simply need not satisfy the venue provisions that would apply were the claim asserted as an original action. Thus, the third-party defendant may not object to its impleader on venue grounds. n6

It should be noted that an impleaded third-party defendant is protected against an inconvenient forum because the court has the authority to take account of venue considerations as one of the factors to consider when it exercises its discretion to decide whether to allow impleader. n7

[2] Other Impleader Claims

The impleader rule permits the assertion of transactionally related claims by the third-party defendant against the plaintiff and by the plaintiff against the third-party defendant. Under this provision, the plaintiff may assert any claim against the third-party defendant arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff (defendant in main action); in addition, the rule gives the third-party defendant a parallel right to assert any claim against the plaintiff arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff (defendant in main action). n1

It could be argued that if this claim is independent for jurisdictional purposes it should be regarded as independent for purposes of venue so that the party proceeded against, whether plaintiff or third-party defendant, as the case may be, may move for dismissal unless the venue is proper for the institution of an original action on the claim. However, no substantial purpose would be served by carrying over the jurisdictional rule, by analogy, into the domain of venue.

The additional claims that Rule 14 authorizes the plaintiff to make against the third-party defendant, or vice versa, are factually related to the underlying litigation, because they must arise "out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter" of the claim on which plaintiff instituted the original action. n2 It is arguable that this requirement affords considerable safeguards to either the plaintiff or the third-party defendant that the forum is reasonably related to the additional claim. Furthermore, because these additional claims are not being asserted in an original action, a court may arguably hold the venue statutes inapplicable. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMultiparty LitigationCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 14.41 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a), (b).

(n3)Footnote 2. See § 14.57[2].

(n4)Footnote 3. Petrizzo v. United States, 492 F. Supp. 752, 755 (D.N.J. 1980) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Manley v. Standard Oil Co., 8 F.R.D. 354, 356 (E.D. Tex. 1948) (third-party defendant could object to lack of proper venue if claim against third-party was not related to any recovery sought by plaintiffs).

(n6)Footnote 5. See Carcella v. L & L Coach Lines, Inc., 591 F. Supp. 1272, 1278-1279 (D. Md. 1984) ; F & D, Inc. v. O'Hara & Kendall Aviation, Inc., 547 F. Supp. 44, 45 (S.D. Tex. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See ABCKO Music, Inc. v. Beverly Glen Music, Inc., 554 F. Supp. 410, 412-413 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) ; Kotsonis v. Superior Motor Express, Inc., 539 F. Supp. 642 (M.D.N.C. 1982) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Gundle Lining Constr. Corp. v. Adams County Asphalt, Inc., 85 F.3d 201, 210 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(D).

(n10)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(2)(D), (a)(3).

(n11)Footnote 3. Thompson v. United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., 43 F.R.D. 339, 342 (S.D.N.Y. 1967) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.59

§ 14.59 Impleader of Admiralty Claimsn*

[1] General Impleader Rule May Be Applied to Admiralty Claims

The merging of general civil practice and admiralty practice resulted in significant changes in the third-party practice rule to accommodate and continue some of the traditional admiralty procedures. Consequently, the term "defending party" was substituted in Rule 14(a) for the term "defendant"; and a provision was added to Rule 14(a) specifically dealing with procedures for the assertion of third-party in rem claims within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. n1 Additionally, Rule 14(c) was added to retain special admiralty procedures allowing third-party claims based on liability to the original plaintiff.

Unlike general civil practice, admiralty practice allowed impleader on the ground that the third-party defendant was solely liable to the plaintiff. When unification was implemented, the general civil practice was retained in Rule 14(a), so that a party could assert maritime third-party claims in general civil actions; n2 at the same time, Rule 14(c) was added to supplement the civil practice and preserve the former, more expansive admiralty impleader practice for suits brought originally within the admiralty jurisdiction. n3

The final result of the amendments is that under the general impleader rule, a defending party in a civil case may assert an impleader claim that arises under admiralty law, n4 or in an admiralty case, the defendant may implead a third-party defendant on a nonadmiralty theory. n5 In other words, when an admiralty claim is involved, the impleading party may proceed under the general provisions of Rule 14(a), or if the impleading party desires, may use any optional admiralty procedures specified in Rule 14(a) and (c) that are applicable to the facts of the case. n6

Plaintiff impleader pursuant to Rule 14(b) n7 also applies in all cases, whether general civil or admiralty. Therefore, a plaintiff who is defending against either an admiralty or nonadmiralty counterclaim may implead a third-party defendant under circumstances to the same extent a defendant may under the general impleader rule. This in turn means that the impleader claim itself may arise under admiralty or any other law. n8

[2] Application of Optional Admiralty Impleader Rules

If a third-party complaint is within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, the defending party may make the third-party claim in rem against a vessel, cargo, or other property subject to admiralty or maritime process in rem. In such cases, references to admiralty and maritime terminology are read into Rule 14(a). Thus, the references in the impleader rule to the "summons" are read to encompass the "warrant of arrest," and references to "third-party plaintiff" or "defendant" include, when appropria te, the "claimant of the property arrested." n1

When a claim is an admiralty claim, the impleading party also has the option to employ the provisions of Rule 14(c). n2 However, this admiralty impleader rule n3 applies only in cases in which a plaintiff asserts an admiralty or maritime claim within the meaning of Rule 9(h). n4

When a plaintiff does assert a proper admiralty or maritime claim, the admiralty impleader rule supplements the general impleader rule by providing that the defendant or claimant, as a third-party plaintiff, may bring in a third-party defendant who may be wholly or partly liable, either to "the plaintiff or to the third-party plaintiff," by way of remedy over, contribution, or otherwise on account of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences. The quoted portion of this provision reflects traditional admiralty practice, and is broader than the general right to implead, because it permits joinder of a third-party defendant on the basis of its direct liability to the plaintiff, not just to the defendant. n5

The admiralty impleader rule also provides that in such a case the third-party plaintiff may also demand judgment against the third-party defendant in favor of the plaintiff and that the third-party defendant must make any defenses to the claim of the plaintiff as well as to that of the third-party plaintiff in the manner provided in Rule 12. The action must then proceed as if the plaintiff had commenced it against the third-party defendant as well as the third-party plaintiff, n6 and in such cases, the court may enter judgment for the plaintiff directly against the third-party defendant, even if the former did not assert a claim against the latter. n7

It is not precisely clear what language is necessary for the third-party plaintiff to "demand" judgment against the third-party defendant in favor of the plaintiff. Any language indicating a demand should be sufficient, because Rule 14(c) must be liberally construed. Consequently, it was held in one case that a third-party claim had a sufficient demand when the third-party complaint contained language requesting judgment against the third-party defendant in favor of the plaintiff, prayed that the third-party defendant answer and respond to the complaint of plaintiff in accordance with Rule 14(c), and explained how and why the third party was directly liable to plaintiff. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Admiralty LawPractice & ProcedureGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsImpleader

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 14.50 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(6).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(6).

(n4)Footnote 3. Parker v. Gulf City Fisheries, Inc., 803 F.2d 828, 828-829 (5th Cir. 1986) (nonadmiralty impleader claim in admiralty case).

(n5)Footnote 4. Swans v. United States Lines, Inc., 407 F. Supp. 388, 393 (E.D. Pa. 1975) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Parker v. Gulf City Fisheries, Inc., 803 F.2d 828, 829 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a), (c); see also Royal Ins. Co. of Am. v. Southwest Marine, 194 F.3d 1009, 1017 (9th Cir. 1999) ; Coats v. Penrod Drilling Corp., 61 F.3d 1113, 1160 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(6).

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(a)(6); see also Riverway Co. v. Spivey Marine & Harbor Serv. Co., 598 F. Supp. 909 (S.D. Ill. 1984) .

(n11)Footnote 2. Harrison v. Glendel Drilling Co., 679 F. Supp. 1413, 1422 (W.D. La. 1988) (because Rule 14(c) may be invoked only if plaintiff's claim is explicitly brought under Rule 9(h), or it is apparent that admiralty provides the only basis for jurisdiction, defendant in an action for injuries suffered by plaintiff during transfer from a barge to shore could not implead third-party under Rule 14(c) when complaint properly alleged that it was brought under Jones Act).

(n12)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(c)(1).

(n13)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h).

(n14)Footnote 5. In re Oil Spill by the Amoco Cadiz, 699 F.2d 909, 914 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n15)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14(c)(2).

(n16)Footnote 7. Ohio River Co. v. Continental Grain Co., 352 F. Supp. 505, 511-512 (N.D. Ill. 1972) .

(n17)Footnote 8. See Royal Ins. Co. of Am. v. Southwest Marine, 194 F.3d 1009, 1018 (9th Cir. 1999) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART II. IMPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.60through 14.69

[Reserved]

§§ 14.60[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.70

§ 14.70 Nature and Purpose of Interpleadern*

[1] Definition and Purpose

Interpleader is a form of joinder for use by a person who does not know to which of more than one claimant the person is liable. n1 Thus, interpleader is a procedural device used when more than one person must resolve conflicting claims to distinct money or property, known as the "stake." n2 It enables a person or entity in possession of a tangible res or fund of money (the "stakeholder") to join in a single suit two or more "claimants" asserting mutually exclusive claims to that stake. n3 The stakeholder institutes interpleader, usually as an initial proceeding, by filing a complaint and joining the claimants. n3.1 A stakeholder who has already been sued, however, may institute interpleader defensively, n3.2 by filing a counterclaim or cross-claim to which it joins the additional claimants. n4

Interpleader originated as an equitable remedy to protect a stakeholder from having to defend against multiple suits and from the risk of multiple liability or inconsistent obligations when several claimants assert rights to a single stake. n5 Thus, the purpose of interpleader is to resolve a multiple party dispute to the stake economically and efficiently in a single proceeding, n6 and to relieve the stakeholder from the obligation of determining who has the rightful claim to the money or property. n7 Additionally, the stakeholder can avoid potential multiple liability resulting from inconsistent judgments to different claimants in different suits. n8

Conflicting claimants to the stake may also benefit from interpleader, because all conflicting claims are resolved in a single action and a limited fund can be distributed equitably. n9 Finally, interpleader often eliminates the need to find and execute on the debtor's assets, because the contested stake typically must be deposited with the court. n10

[2] Distinction Between True Interpleader and Action in Nature of Interpleader

In a "true interpleader" action, the plaintiff is a disinterested stakeholder, rather than one of the claimants to the stake. On the other hand, in an "action in the nature of interpleader," the plaintiff-stakeholder also makes an affirmative claim to the stake. In true interpleader, the plaintiff-stake holder runs the risk, but for determination in interpleader, of multiple liability when several claimants assert rights to the single stake. n1 True interpleader is also known as strict interpleader; in this type of action the stakeholder is neutral and asserts no claim to the stake. n1.1 In a proceeding deemed in the nature of interpleader, on the other hand, the stakeholder claims an interest in all or part of the stake, and may deny liability to one or more of the claimants. n2

Although historically courts recognized only true interpleader, in current federal practice either a disinterested stakeholder or an interested stakeholder may invoke interpleader. If the stakeholder has an interest in the stake, the stakeholder may recover funds that are not awarded to the other claimants. n3 However, a disinterested stakeholder still may be required for statutory interpleader. n4 Furthermore, the fact that a stakeholder may have a claim to the stake may still be important with respect to the question of whether the interested stakeholder's citizenship may be used to create diversity for jurisdictional purposes in statutory interpleader. n5 In strict or true interpleader, the stakeholder's citizenship is irrelevant for the purpose of establishing minimal diversity. n5.1

[3] Distinction Between Rule Interpleader or Statutory Interpleader

In federal court, a stakeholder has two alternatives for initiating the procedure of interpleader, through "rule interpleader" or through "statutory interpleader." n1 Rule 22 interpleader is merely a procedural device for joinder of claimants and does not confer federal jurisdiction over a claim; therefore, an interpleader brought under Rule 22 must fall within one of the general statutory grants of federal jurisdiction, such as federal question jurisdiction or diversity jurisdiction. n1.1 Statutory interpleader confers jurisdiction on federal courts over certain specific interpleader claims. n2 The Federal Interpleader Act consists of three separate statutes providing not only a procedural vehicle for joinder but also special provisions for subject matter jurisdiction, n3 venue, n4 and service of process and injunctions against duplicative actions. n5 Statutory interpleader specifies each of its requirements. For example, before discharge under Section 1335, the interpleader plaintiff (stakeholder) must establish that there is a fund greater than $500; the two interpleader defendants (adverse claimants) are of diverse citizenship; the fund is deposited in court; and the stakeholder is disinterested. n5.1

The two types of interpleader are designed to promote the same policies and perform the same function, economy and efficiency. n6 In many cases the stakeholder could have the option of invoking the provisions of either type. It is important to keep in mind that the two types of interpleader actions differ in subject matter jurisdiction, venue, service of process, and injunctions; thus, attorneys must be careful to determine which, if either, is available in a given case. This chapter points out all of the differences. n7

[4] Interpleader Proper Even if Claims Against Stake Are Prospective

A stakeholder has a right to bring an interpleader case even if some or all of the claims against the stake are prospective in nature. n1 Statutory interpleader provides that interpleader is proper when two or more adverse claimants are claiming or may claim an interest in the stake. n2 The "may claim" terminology of the statute allows consideration of prospective claims for purposes of determining whether the requisite claims are involved for interpleader. Thus, the Supreme Court noted that persons with unliquidated tort claims against an insurance fund are claimants for purposes of the interpleader statute. n3

The operative language for rule interpleader under Rule 22 differs from that of the statute. Specifically, it does not provide that anyone who "may claim" against the res is an adverse claimant who may resort to interpleader as a remedy. Nevertheless, Rule 22 does provide that interpleader is available for a stakeholder who "may be exposed" to multiple liability, n4 and courts have held that this language to allow consideration of prospective claims for rule interpleader. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersRequirementsCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersRule InterpleadersCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersStatutory Interpleaders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Amoco Prod. Co. v. Aspen Group, 59 F. Supp. 2d 1112, 1114 (D. Colo. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Airborne Freight Corp. v. United States, 195 F.3d 238, 240 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Chase Manhattan Bank v. Mandalay Shores Coop. Hous. Ass'n, 21 F.3d 380, 383 (11th Cir. 1994) (interpleader is means by which innocent stakeholder, who typically claims no interest in asset and does not know asset's rightful owner, may avoid multiple liability by asking court to determine asset's rightful owner); White v. FDIC, 19 F.3d 249, 252 (5th Cir. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice to define interpleader as procedural device that entitles person holding money or property to join two or more persons that assert mutually exclusive claims to such money or property in single suit).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 3.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Collins v. Teachers Ins. & Annuity Ass'n of Am., 587 F. Supp. 403, 405-406 (D.R.I. 1984) .

(n8)Footnote 5. First Trust Corp. v. Bryant, 410 F.3d 842, 853-855 (6th Cir. 2005) ; Hussain v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 311 F.3d 623, 631 (5th Cir. 2002) ; U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Laborde, 794 F. Supp. 454, 459 (D.P.R. Cir. 1992) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Presidential Comm'n on Good Gov't v. United States Dist. Court for the Dist. of Haw. (In re Republic of the Phil.), 309 F.3d 1143, 1153 (9th Cir. 2002) (if less than all significant claimants are joined in interpleader action, purpose of interpleader is materially frustrated); American Int'l Speciality Lines Ins. Co. v. National Ass'n of Bus. Owners & Professionals, 253 F. Supp. 2d 468, 476 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) (purpose of federal interpleader statute is to provide remedial device that allows person holding stake to compel two or more parties asserting mutually exclusive rights to stake to join and litigate their respective claims in one action); Companion Life Ins. Co. v. Schaffer, 442 F. Supp. 826, 830 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) (insurer sought interpleader against several parties claiming proceeds of same life insurance policy.).

(n10)Footnote 7. 6247 Atlas Corp. v. Marine Ins. Co., 155 F.R.D. 454, 462 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 8. Texas v. Florida, 306 U.S. 398, 407, 59 S. Ct. 563, 83 L. Ed. 817 (1939) (interpleader avoids possibility of recovery in more than one suit when only one party is entitled to recover).

(n12)Footnote 9. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 533, 87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1967) ; Presidential Comm'n on Good Gov't v. United States Dist. Court for the Dist. of Haw. (In re Republic of the Phil.), 309 F.3d 1143, 1153 (9th Cir. 2002) (interpleader action must generally resolve all significant claimants to res (stake) that is subject of action, because core purpose of interpleader action is to resolve all competing claims to stake).

(n13)Footnote 10. Amoco Prod. Co. v. Aspen Group, 59 F. Supp. 2d 1112, 1114 (D. Colo. 1999) (interpleading party deposited royalty payments and any future royalty payments at issue into registry of court).

(n14)Footnote 1. Airborne Freight Corp. v. United States, 195 F.3d 238, 240 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n15)Footnote 1.1. Brotherhood Mut. Ins. Co. v. United Apostolic Lighthouse, Inc., 200 F. Supp. 2d 689, 695 (E.D. Ky. 2002) (in proceeding for "strict" or "true" interpleader, stakeholder disavows interest in stake).

(n16)Footnote 2. Texas v. Florida, 306 U.S. 398, 406-407, 59 S. Ct. 563, 83 L. Ed. 817 (1939) (plaintiff asserted no interest in fund in strict interpleader but in bill in nature of interpleader, plaintiff claimed interest in fund at issue);

American Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roche, 830 F. Supp. 1241, 1243 (E.D. Wis. 1993) (discussion of strict interpleader and bill in nature of interpleader).

(n17)Footnote 3. Reliance Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Great Lakes Aviation, Ltd., 430 F.3d 412, 417 (7th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n18)Footnote 4. See [3], below.

(n19)Footnote 5. American Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roche, 830 F. Supp. 1241, 1248 (E.D. Wis. 1993) (citizenship of interested stakeholder does not create interpleader jurisdiction); Mt. Hawley Ins. Co. v. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp., 695 F. Supp. 469, 473 (C.D. Cal. 1987) (insurer-stakeholder's citizenship used to satisfy diversity jurisdiction).

(n20)Footnote 5.1. Brotherhood Mut. Ins. Co. v. United Apostolic Lighthouse, Inc., 200 F. Supp. 2d 689, 695 (E.D. Ky. 2002) .

(n21)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 22 (allowing plaintiff to join defendants when their claims are such that the plaintiff is or may be exposed to double or multiple liability); 28 U.S.C. § 1335 (granting original jurisdiction to the district courts in any civil action of interpleader or in the nature of interpleader, if two or more adverse claimants are claiming or may claim to be entitled to such money or property that has been pleaded into court).

(n22)Footnote 1.1. Correspondent Servs. Corp. v. First Equities Corp., 338 F.3d 119, 124 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n23)Footnote 2. Selective Ins. Co. of Am. v. Norris, 209 F. Supp. 2d 580, 582 (E.D.N.C. 2002) .

(n24)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1335.

(n25)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1397.

(n26)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 2361.

(n27)Footnote 5.1. 28 U.S.C. § 1335; see Advantage Title Agency, Inc. v. Rosen, 297 F. Supp. 2d 536, 538-539 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n28)Footnote 6. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 529 n.3, 87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1967) (differences between venue and service requirements of two types of interpleader discussed); Fidelity Brokerage Servs., LLC v. Bank of China, 192 F. Supp. 2d 173, 177-180 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (whether pursuant to rule or statute, interpleader is designed to protect stakeholders from defending multiple claims against same fund and to relieve stakeholder from determining meritorious claim among many claims).

(n29)Footnote 7. See § 14.73; see also Wittry v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 727 F. Supp. 498, 500 (D. Minn. 1989) (differences between statutory and Rule 22 interpleader are primarily, procedural requirements such as jurisdiction, venue, service of process, and amount in controversy).

(n30)Footnote 1. Texas v. Florida, 306 U.S. 398, 406, 59 S. Ct. 563, 83 L. Ed. 817 (1939) (because of purposes of interpleader, plaintiff need not wait until claimants have actually instituted independent suits; it is enough if plaintiff shows that conflicting claims are asserted and that consequential risk of loss is substantial).

(n31)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a)(1).

(n32)Footnote 3. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 532-533, 87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1967) .

(n33)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a)(1), (2).

(n34)Footnote 5. 6247 Atlas Corp. v. Marine Ins. Co., 155 F.R.D. 454, 463 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.71

§ 14.71 Initiation of Interpleadern*

Only the stakeholder may activate the interpleader procedure. n1 Usually, the stakeholder commences interpleader as a plaintiff by naming interpleader defendants. n2 However, a defendant stakeholder may commence an interpleader proceeding as a counterclaim against the plaintiff and may join additional parties by a cross claim under the joinder provisions of Rules 19 and 20. n2.1 A counterclaim will lie only against an opposing party, and therefore may only be asserted by the defendant stakeholder against the plaintiff claimant who sued the stakeholder. n3 By contrast, a cross-claim will lie only against a "co-party," and thus must be asserted by the defendant stakeholder against a co-defendant claimant to the stake. n4

In either case, the defendant-stakeholder will be asserting the interpleader claim against a person who is already an existing party to the original action, n5 and that party will not be the only claimant to be joined in interpleader; therefore, there must be a process by which the stakeholder can join additional claimants to the counterclaim or cross-claim. That process is Rule 13, which permits the counterclaimant or cross-claimant to join additional parties who satisfy either the compulsory party joinder provisions of Rule 19 or the permissive party joinder provisions of Rule 20. n6 In most circumstances, the absentee claimants to be joined by the counterclaim or cross-claim interpleader will satisfy Rule 19 because their nonjoinder threatens the stakeholder with multiple or inconsistent obligations. n7 An interpleading party may use interpleader by counterclaim or cross-claim under either rule or statutory interpleader. n8 Rule 22 expressly provides that a defendant exposed to double or multiple liability may obtain such interpleader by way of cross-claim or counterclaim. n9

The joinder provisions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply in interpleader cases just as they would in any other civil action in federal court. n10 Therefore, once a stakeholder joins the claimants to the stake, the parties may file counterclaims and cross-claims under appropriate circumstances. Counterclaims are asserted against an opposing party. They are either compulsory, if they arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the underlying claim, n11 or permissive, if they are transactionally unrelated to the underlying dispute. n12 Cross-claims are asserted against a co-party, and must arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the underlying dispute. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersRequirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.02[4] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Progressive Cas. Ins. Co. v. Belmont Bancorp, 199 F.R.D. 219, 226 (S.D. Ohio 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Rhoades v. Casey, 196 F.3d 592, 595 (5th Cir. 1999) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 924 (2000) (stakeholder filed interpleader action, deposited fund into registry of court, and named those interested in fund as defendants).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a)(2) (defendants to original action who are exposed to liability to potentially more than one other person may obtain interpleader against such persons by way of cross-claim or counterclaim); see Coastal Rehab. Servs., P.A. v. Cooper, 255 F. Supp. 2d 556, 559 (D.S.C. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see, e.g., Septembertide Pub., B.V. v. Stein & Day, Inc., 884 F.2d 675, 683 (2d Cir. 1989) (after author of book sued publishers for proceeds from licensing agreement, publisher's creditor intervened, and publisher filed interpleader cross-claim against other claimants to proceeds of licensing agreement).

(n5)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n7)Footnote 5. See Bankers Trust Co. v. Manufacturers Nat'l Bank, 139 F.R.D. 302, 308 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(B)(ii); see also § 14.01 et seq.

(n10)Footnote 8. Bankers Trust Co. v. Manufacturers Nat'l Bank, 139 F.R.D. 302, 308 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a)(1).

(n12)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(b) (stating that provisions of interpleader rule supplement and do not in any way limit joinder of parties).

(n13)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

(n14)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b).

(n15)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

58 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.72

§ 14.72 Two Stages of Interpleader Actionn*

[1] First Stage Is Court's Determination Whether Interpleader Requirements Have Been Met

[a] Court's Discretion to Determine Whether Requirements Are Met

An interpleader action typically involves two stages. In the first stage, the district court decides whether the requirements for rule or statutory interpleader action have been met by determining if there is a single fund at issue and whether there are adverse claimants to that fund. n1 If the district court finds that the interpleader action has been properly brought, the district court will then proceed to the second stage, which is a determination of the respective rights of the claimants. n2 Interpleader litigation has two stages whether initiated by complaint or initiated defensively. In proceedings in the nature of interpleader, rather than true interpleader, the stakeholder claims an interest in the stake and thus is a party to the second stage. n2.1 On the other hand, in "true" interpleader, the stakeholder does not claim ownership of the stake and thus is discharged after the first stage of litigation. n3

Because interpleader is procedural, its availability does not depend on the merits of the claims asserted against the stakeholder. So long as the stakeholder is confronted with multiple adverse claims or liability, interpleader is proper, even if the stakeholder does not believe that all the claims against the stake are meritorious. n4

The court has considerable discretion in its determination of whether the requirements of interpleader have been met. Generally, interpleader is a favored remedial joinder device that is efficient and avoids multiple liability and inconsistent obligations. These positive principles mean that courts will construe interpleader provisions liberally. n5 This liberal interpretation reflects a modern trend toward increased availability of interpleader and relaxation of historic restrictions on its use. n6

On the other hand, the court has discretion to deny interpleader if its purposes of economy and efficiency are not met. n7 For example, the court may refuse interpleader if a single case will not settle all outstanding claims among the parties, n8 if a pending state action will provide an adequate remedy, n9 if the stakeholder controls one of two claimants, and thus does not have a bona fide fear of multiple and vexatious litigation, n10 or when it is used as a ruse to forum shop when a party's other attempt at litigation has failed. n11

[b] Requirements Regarding Claims to Stake

Before the court will order interpleader, it should make the following determinations regarding the claims to the stake:

1. Whether the stake has been deposited with the court. The provisions governing statutory interpleader require the stakeholder to deposit the stake with the court or to post bond in the amount determined by the court. n12 Rule interpleader does not impose this requirement, n13 although the court has discretion to require the stakeholder to do so under Rule 67. n14

2. The stakeholder must have a legitimate fear of multiple litigation or multiple liability. In determining whether interpleader is proper, the court must determine whether the stakeholder legitimately fears multiple liability resulting from multiple litigation directed at a single stake. n15 In most cases, this requirement is not difficult for the stakeholder to meet, because the courts generally require merely that the stakeholder's concern in this regard be more than conjectural. n16

3. The claims must be adverse to the stake and to each other. Interpleader is proper only if the claims against the stake are adverse to each other and adverse to the stake itself. n17 For example, claims are adverse to each other if each claimant asserts sole right to the fund. n18 Claims are also considered adverse if one claimant admits that the stakeholder has an obligation to another claimant but asserts its claim through an attachment or garnishment. n19 Even if claims are not mutually exclusive, they are adverse if the total amount of combined claims exceeds the stake. n20 Furthermore, interpleader claims are not precluded merely because claims against the stake arise out of distinct and unrelated legal obligations. n21

[c] Requirement of Personal Jurisdiction Over Claimants

Even though it is arguable that interpleader is a quasi-in-rem proceeding because the claim involves ownership of a stake, the Supreme Court has held that interpleader is an in personam proceeding. n22 Thus, the stakeholder must comply with the applicable provisions concerning service of process in federal court, so that the court will have personal jurisdiction over all named claimants. This requirement generally causes no difficulty in statutory interpleader, because that procedure provides for service of process where the claimants reside or may be found. n23 This provision allows nationwide service of process and consequently allows the exercise of personal jurisdiction over any claimant who has established contacts anywhere in the United States, even if that claimant does not have minimum contacts with the forum state in which the federal interpleader court is located.

In contrast, rule interpleader has no special provision for liberalized service of process and thus is treated as a regular proceeding in federal court, with service of process being governed by Rule 4. n24 Rule 4 permits service of process within the state in which the federal court sits and beyond the state boundary only if state law so provides. Thus, under rule interpleader, the district court may exercise personal jurisdiction over claimants only to the same extent as a state court in the forum state. n25

[2] Second Stage Is Adjudication of Adverse Claims and Distribution of Stake

After a court determines in the first stage of interpleader litigation that interpleader is appropriate, including that there is subject matter jurisdiction, and personal jurisdiction over the claimants, the court proceeds to the second stage, in which it adjudicates the claims to the stake and distributes the proceeds. n1 In a true interpleader case, n2 the stakeholder does not claim an interest in the stake, and thus should be dismissed from the case before the second stage proceeds. n3 The court should promptly grant discharge of the stakeholder unless it finds that the stakeholder may be independently liable to a claimant or has failed to satisfy the various requirements of interpleader, including deposit of the stake when required. n4 The court may also delay or deny discharge if it finds that the stakeholder acted in bad faith. n5

In cases in the nature of interpleader, rather than true interpleader, the stakeholder claims an interest in the stake, and therefore, the stakeholder is involved in both stages of the interpleader action. Consequently, the stakeholder is not discharged after the first stage of interpleader. Under either rule or statutory interpleader, the stakeholder remains a party with the other claimants, and litigates its claim in the second stage. n6

The first stage of interpleader, which determines whether interpleader is proper and whether the stakeholder has met the requirements for interpleader, is tried entirely by the court and not a jury, because of the equitable nature of interpleader. n7 However, in the second stage, the court may try the issues to a jury; the court will examine the nature of the merits of the dispute, and if the dispute would be tried by a jury in ordinary civil litigation, a party may have a right to trial by jury. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersRequirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Aon Corp. Accidental Death & Dismemberment Plan v. Hohlweck, 223 F. Supp. 2d 510, 514 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) ; see [b] and [c], below.

(n3)Footnote 2. Rhoades v. Casey, 196 F.3d 592, 595 (5th Cir. 1999) (in second stage, court adjudicates adverse claims and distributes stake); American Int'l Speciality Lines Ins. Co. v. National Ass'n of Bus. Owners & Professionals, 253 F. Supp. 2d 468, 476 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 2.1. See GE Capital Assur. v. Van Norman, 209 F. Supp. 2d 668, 670 (S.D. Tex. 2002) .

(n5)Footnote 3. See § 14.70[2].

(n6)Footnote 4. Aon Corp. Accidental Death & Dismemberment Plan v. Hohlweck, 223 F. Supp. 2d 510, 514 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) ; Travelers Indem. Co. v. Crown Cork & Seal Co., 865 F. Supp. 1083, 1087 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) (interpleader jurisdiction does not depend on merits of defendants' claims).

(n7)Footnote 5. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 533, 87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1967) (Federal Interpleader Act is remedial and must be liberally construed); see Hussain v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 311 F.3d 623, 632 (5th Cir. 2002) .

(n8)Footnote 6. 6247 Atlas Corp. v. Marine Ins. Co., 155 F.R.D. 454, 462 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) . For a complete discussion of the historical limitations on interpleader, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.07 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n9)Footnote 7. Washington Elec. Coop., Inc. v. Paterson, Walke & Pratt, P.C., 985 F.2d 677, 680 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Wausau Ins. Cos. v. Gifford, 954 F.2d 1098, 1101 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 9. Home Indem. Co. v. Moore, F.2d 1202, 1205-1206 (8th Cir. 1974) (court need not grant interpleader relief when issues in complaint could be adequately resolved in pending state court proceedings).

(n12)Footnote 10. Bierman v. Marcus, 246 F.2d 200, 203 (3d Cir. 1957) , cert. denied, 356 U.S. 933 (1957) .

(n13)Footnote 11. American Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roche, 830 F. Supp. 1241, 1245, 1249 (E.D. Wis. 1993)

(citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n14)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a)(2); American Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roche, 830 F. Supp. 1241, 1244-1245 (E.D. Wis. 1993) (court has jurisdiction under interpleader statute if, in addition to other requirements, stakeholder has deposited stake with court).

(n15)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a)(1). John v. Sotheby's, Inc., 141 F.R.D. 29, 33 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (deposit of stake not jurisdictional requirement under Rule 22 but court has discretion to allow deposit under Rule 67).

(n16)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 67.

(n17)Footnote 15. U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Laborde, 794 F. Supp. 454, 459 (1st Cir. 1992) (primary test for determining propriety of interpleader is whether stakeholder has legitimate fear of multiple litigation directed against single fund).

(n18)Footnote 16. Abex Corp. v. ABC Rail Corp., 158 F.R.D. 75, 78 (W.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n19)Footnote 17. Bradley v. Kochenash, 44 F.3d 166, 168 (2d Cir. 1995) (claims are not adverse when stakeholder may be liable to both claimants).

(n20)Footnote 18. Sun Life Assurance Co. v. Thomas, 735 F. Supp. 730, 731-732 (W.D. Mich. 1990) .

(n21)Footnote 19. American Airlines, Inc. v. Block, 905 F.2d 12, 13 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n22)Footnote 20. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 526, 533 n.15, 87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1967) (interpleader intended to remedy problem of allocating limited fund among claimants whose claims exceed amount of fund).

(n23)Footnote 21. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(b) (interpleader action may be entertained although titles or claims do not have common origin or are not identical); Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a)(1)(A) (it is not ground for objection to joinder that claims do not have common source or origin).

(n24)Footnote 22. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Dunlevy, 241 U.S. 518, 521, 36 S. Ct. 613, 60 L. Ed. 1140 (1916) .

(n25)Footnote 23. 28 U.S.C. § 2361.

(n26)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(f); Pan Am. Fire & Cas. Co. v. Revere, 188 F. Supp. 474, 485 (E.D. La. 1960) (process may not run beyond the boundaries of the state in which the court sits).

(n27)Footnote 25. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Chase, 294 F.2d 500, 502 (3d Cir. 1961) (interpleader by counterclaim under Rule 22 not available because claimants not amenable to personal service in District of Columbia, where initial litigation was commenced); for further discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.04[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n28)Footnote 1. Rhoades v. Casey, 196 F.3d 592, 595 (5th Cir. 1999) ; Truck-A-Tune v. Re, 856 F. Supp. 77, 79 (D. Conn. 1993) , aff'd on other grounds, 23 F.3d 60 (2d Cir. 1993) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n29)Footnote 2. See § 14.70[2].

(n30)Footnote 3. Commercial Nat'l Bank v. Demos, 18 F.3d 485, 487 (7th Cir. 1994) (claimant who has no interest in stake may deposit stake with court and withdraw from proceeding).

(n31)Footnote 4. Mendez v. Teachers Ins. & Annuity Ass'n & College Retirement Equities Fund, 982 F.2d 783, 787 (2d Cir. 1992) (before discharging stakeholder court must determine that all requirements of statutory interpleader have been met).

(n32)Footnote 5. Sun Life Assurance Co. v. Thomas, 735 F. Supp. 730, 733 (W.D. Mich. 1990) .

(n33)Footnote 6. Bradley v. Kochenash, 44 F.3d 166, 168 (2d Cir. 1995) (in case in nature of interpleader, plaintiff stakeholder litigates with rival claimants on issue of entitlement to stake).

(n34)Footnote 7. Jefferson Standard Ins. Co. v. Craven, 365 F. Supp. 861, 863 (M.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n35)Footnote 8. Hyde Properties v. McCoy, 507 F.2d 301, 305 (6th Cir. 1974) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.73

§ 14.73 Comparison of Different Procedures Under Rule Interpleader and Statutory Interpleadern*

[1] Federal System Has Two Methods of Interpleader

Under the federal litigation scheme, there are two distinct methods of invoking interpleader in the federal courts: n1 rule interpleader under Rule 22, n2 and statutory interpleader under the Federal Interpleader Act. n3 Both types of interpleader serve the same function of joining in a single proceeding two or more adverse claimants to a stake. n4 Both promote efficiency and fairness and protect the stakeholder from multiple litigation and potential multiple liability. n5

However, even though the two types of interpleaders share purposes and goals, they are characterized by procedural differences, particularly with respect to personal and subject matter jurisdiction, service of process, and venue. n6 In general, the procedural provisions for statutory interpleader are more liberal than those for rule interpleader, n7 because, as part of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 22 does not affect the jurisdiction or venue of the federal courts. n8 Thus, Rule 22 provides only a procedural vehicle for invoking rule interpleader. Subject matter jurisdiction for rule interpleader must be based on Article III of the Constitution and the jurisdictional statutes, federal question and diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. Rule 22 was promulgated to provide interpleader when the interpleading party cannot meet the statutory interpleader requirements but can meet general federal court requirements. n9

On the other hand, statutory interpleader is governed by legislative authorization, and thus sets forth its own provisions concerning subject matter jurisdiction, venue, and personal jurisdiction. In each instance, statutory interpleader features advantages over rule interpleader, as discussed in [2]-[6], below. Rule 22 does not in any way limit the availability of statutory interpleader. Furthermore, statutory interpleader proceedings may take advantage of the various other provisions, including the joinder provisions of the rules. n10 A court may assert jurisdiction under either type of interpleader, even if the complaint asserts the wrong one, provided that the complaint can be construed to confer jurisdiction under one or the other. n11

[2] Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[a] Rule Interpleader

The primary distinction between statutory and rule interpleader involves the requirements for invoking federal subject matter jurisdiction. n1 Rule interpleader is merely a procedural device and does not confer an independent basis for federal jurisdiction over a claim. Consequently, rule interpleader must fall within one of the general statutory grants of federal jurisdiction: n2 either federal question jurisdiction or diversity jurisdiction, which requires complete diversity of parties and an amount in controversy of at least $75,000. n2.1 On the other hand, statutory interpleader confers on federal courts an independent basis for subject matter jurisdiction over certain interpleader claims. n2.2

Subject matter jurisdiction for rule interpleader must be based on Article III of the Constitution and the jurisdictional statutes. The common bases of federal subject matter jurisdiction are federal question and diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n3 Few rule interpleader cases invoke federal question jurisdiction, because under the "well-pleaded complaint" rule the plaintiff's claim must arise under federal law. Consequently, if the stakeholder initiates interpleader defensively in a federal question case, the stakeholder probably cannot invoke federal question jurisdiction because the federal question does not appear on the face of the stakeholder's claim; n4 furthermore, because a stakeholder typically seeks discharge, the complaint may not easily be characterized as asserting either federal or state rights. n5

Most rule interpleader cases invoke diversity of citizenship jurisdiction which requires that the amount in controversy must exceed $75,000 and the controversy must be between citizens of different states. n6 This statutory language requires that there be complete diversity, meaning every plaintiff must be a citizen of a different state from every defendant. Under rule interpleader, the complete diversity rule requires that the stakeholder be a citizen of a different state from every claimant. n7

[b] Statutory Interpleader

Statutory interpleader has an entirely different basis of authorization than rule interpleader. Its provisions are found in the Judicial Code, n7.1 not in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and contain an independent grant of federal subject matter jurisdiction. n8 Its statutory provisions are more liberal than those found in the general diversity of citizenship grant, because the amount in controversy needed to invoke statutory interpleader is only $500 or more, rather than the $75,000 or more needed or diversity jurisdiction. n9 In addition, only two or more claimants must be of diverse citizenship. n10 This provision differs from the general diversity of citizenship grant in two significant respects. First, as a general rule, the court looks only to the citizenship of the claimants, and not the citizenship of the stakeholder. n10.1 Second, in assessing the citizenship of the claimants, all that is required is minimal diversity, which means that diversity of citizenship between two or more claimants is all that is required, without regard to the circumstance that other claimants may be co-citizens. n11-12

The definition of a litigant's citizenship for statutory interpleader is the same as that used under the general diversity of citizenship statute. n13 Therefore, the rules for determining the citizenship of the parties are the same in statutory and rule interpleader actions. For example, in either case, a corporation is a citizen of the state of incorporation and its principal place of business, n14 the legal representative of an estate has the same citizenship as the decedent, n15 and the United States and its agencies are not citizens of a state and thus may not sue or be sued. n16

[3] Venue

[a] Venue in Rule Interpleader Proceeding

In rule interpleader, there is no special provision concerning venue because procedural rules may not affect the jurisdiction or venue of the federal courts. n1 Consequently, rule interpleader is treated as a regular civil action for venue purposes and is governed by the general venue statute. n2 For actions invoking diversity of citizenship jurisdiction, which comprise the majority of rule interpleader cases, venue is proper in either (1) any district where all the claimants reside, or (2) any district where a substantial part of the events giving rise to the claim arose. If there is no district in the United States that satisfies either of these alternatives, the stakeholder may lay venue in any district where any claimant is subject to personal jurisdiction. n3 For actions invoking federal question jurisdiction, which rule interpleader cases do only occasionally, venue is proper in either (1) any district where all claimants reside, or (2) any district where a substantial part of the events giving rise to the claim arose. If there is no district in the United States that satisfies either of these choices, venue is proper in any district where any claimant is found. n4

[b] Venue In Statutory Interpleader Proceeding

Venue in a statutory interpleader action is controlled by the specific venue provision of the Federal Interpleader Act. n5 This venue statute permits a stakeholder invoking statutory interpleader to lay venue in any district in which any claimant resides. n6 Courts have interpreted the phrase "may be brought" to be mandatory and not permissive. Thus, venue in a statutory interpleader proceeding must satisfy the requirement of that statute; the general venue provision does not provide an alternative. n7 For example, a stakeholder may not initiate an interpleader in the district where the underlying action was filed, unless at least one of the claimants resides in that district. n8 In another case, it was held that venue was proper in the district where the interpleader plaintiffs resided, because the plaintiffs were also claimants in this defensive interpleader action, and section 1397 requires the interpleader action to be brought in a district where any claimant resides. n9

[4] Order to Enjoin Other Cases Related to Stake

[a] Injunction for Rule Interpleader Stake

If a court is hearing a rule interpleader case, it may be appropriate or necessary to enjoin the parties from litigating the stake in other courts. n1 However, in rule interpleader, there is no express provision allowing an injunction prohibiting litigation on the stake, as there is for statutory interpleader, n2 and injunctive power provided for statutory interpleader is not available in rule interpleader cases. n3 Furthermore, a request in a rule interpleader case for an injunction against state court proceedings will generally violate the anti-injunction act, which provides that a federal court generally may not enjoin a proceeding in state court. n4

However, exceptions to the Anti-Injunction Act may allow the rule interpleader court to issue an injunction. Thus, the court may issue a preliminary injunction against pending state court proceedings involving the same stake under the "in aid of jurisdiction" exception to the Anti-Injunction Act. Furthermore, the court may issue a permanent injunction at the end of the case to enable it to protect or effectuate its judgment. n5 Additionally the Anti-Injunction Act applies only to pending state court actions; it does not bar a federal court from enjoining parties from commencing a case in state court. n6 Finally, the Anti-Injunction Act does not apply when the overlapping litigation is in another federal, as opposed to a state, court. In such a case, and the federal court may issue an injunction to bar litigation in another court in the federal judicial system. n7

[b] Injunction for Statutory Interpleader Stake

A court hearing a statutory interpleader case may enjoin other proceedings relating to the stake, in either state courts or in other federal districts courts. n8 This statute does not conflict with the Anti-Injunction Act, which provides generally that federal courts may not enjoin state court proceedings, because that statute contains an exception for injunctions expressly authorized by another statute. n9 This exception was created because the usefulness of interpleader as an economical and efficient device for consistent resolution of multiple party litigation would be threatened if several courts could simultaneously attempt to litigate regarding the stake underlying the interpleader case. n10

As is any case involving injunctive relief, the question of whether to issue an injunction in a statutory interpleader action is within the discretion of the court and may be overturned only for an abuse of discretion. n11 However, the court may issue an injunction under the service of process and personal jurisdiction statute for statutory interpleader n12 only if the case properly meets the requirements of statutory interpleader. Therefore, the court must have subject matter jurisdiction under the subject matter jurisdiction statute for statutory interpleader, n13 and the stakeholder must have deposited the stake res with the court or have furnished a bond, because deposit of the stake is a jurisdictional requirement. n14 Furthermore, it must be remembered that the court's power to enjoin other actions is limited to actions against the stake itself and may not be extended to actions against an insured or other alleged tortfeasors if those suits are not claims against the fund. n15

[5] Deposit of Stake in Court

[a] Court Has Discretion to Order in Rule Interpleader

When using rule interpleader, the stakeholder is not automatically required to deposit the stake with the court. n1 However, in any action involving the disposition of property, Rule 67 allows the parties to voluntarily deposit the stake with the court n2 and provides that the court has discretion to order the party in possession of property to deposit it with the court. Therefore, in rule interpleader the court may order the stakeholder to deposit the stake. n3 With regard to the jurisdictional amount required for rule interpleader, the amount in controversy is determined by the fund as stated by the stakeholder, not by the claimants. n4

[b] Mandatory in Statutory Interpleader

District courts have original jurisdiction for statutory interpleader only if the plaintiff has deposited the money or property with the court, or has paid the amount of the loan or other value of such instrument or the amount due under the obligation into the registry of the court, or has given bond payable to the clerk of the court in an amount and with such surety that the court deems proper. n5 The deposit in court is a jurisdictional requirement, and if an interpleading party fails to give it, the court is precluded from proceeding with statutory interpleader.

Furthermore, the stakeholder must post a bond or deposit the highest amount claimed by any of the claimants, even if that amount exceeds that which the stakeholder contends is at issue. n6 However, the stakeholder is not required to cover by deposit any excess resulting from counterclaims filed by a claimant alleging an independent liability of the stakeholder. n7 Furthermore, if an interested stakeholder deposits the amount demanded by the claimants, that stakeholder does not waive its contention that it is not liable to any of the claimants or that it is not liable for the entire amount deposited with the court. n8 Additionally, although the deposit of the stake is a jurisdictional prerequisite, failure to make an immediate deposit of the correct amount is not fatal to the statutory interpleader action; courts commonly allow the stakeholder to cure the defect by depositing the appropriate stake or procuring a sufficient bond within a reasonable time. n9

[6] Application of Substantive Law

[a] Rule Interpleader

Rule interpleader usually invokes diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. In such cases, the substantive aspects of the litigation, including the determination of the various claims to the stake, liability on counterclaims and cross-claims, and claims of independent liability against the stakeholder are all governed by state law. This principle applies to rule interpleader, as it does to other joinder procedures, because under the Erie doctrine, federal courts must apply state substantive law and may apply federal procedural law in diversity of citizenship cases. n1

[b] Statutory Interpleader

It appears that substantive local law also applies in statutory interpleader actions, because although it is based on the subject matter jurisdiction statute for statutory interpleader, statutory interpleader is ultimately a form of diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n2 Thus, the Supreme Court has held that the choice of law rules of the forum state, as opposed to federal law, govern in statutory interpleader proceedings. n3 The Erie doctrine applies in diversity of citizenship cases because the case is in federal court not for vindication of federal policy but simply by virtue of the citizenship of the parties; therefore, the substantive rules should be the same as they would be in the forum state's court.

Because statutory interpleader has more liberal personal and subject matter jurisdiction provisions than rule interpleader, it is not necessarily true that a statutory interpleader case could be brought in state court and application of federal substantive law in statutory interpleader might not result in the sort of forum shopping that Erie was designed to prevent. n4 It is therefore arguable that statutory interpleader does not present a compelling case for applying local state substantive law. n5 However, as stated above, the Supreme Court apparently is not receptive to such an argument, at least with respect to choice of law rules. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersRule InterpleadersCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersStatutory Interpleaders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.04 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Rhoades v. Casey, 196 F.3d 592, 600 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 22.

(n4)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1335; 28 U.S.C. § 1397; 28 U.S.C. § 2361.

(n5)Footnote 4. See Airborne Freight Corp. v. United States, 195 F.3d 238, 239-240 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Washington Elec. Coop., Inc. v. Paterson, Walke & Pratt, P.C., 985 F.2d 677, 679 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 6. General Accident Group v. Gagliardi, 593 F. Supp. 1080, 1086 (D. Conn. 1984) , aff'd without opinion, 767 F.2d 907 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Perkins State Bank v. Connolly, 632 F.2d 1306, 1310 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82 (rules may not be construed to extend or limit the jurisdiction of the United States district courts).

(n10)Footnote 9. American Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roche, 830 F. Supp. 1241, 1244 (E.D. Wis. 1993) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(b).

(n12)Footnote 11. Truck-A-Tune v. Re, 856 F. Supp. 77, 80 (D. Conn. 1993) , aff'd on other grounds, 23 F.3d 60 (2d Cir. 1994) (court asserted jurisdiction under Rule 22 when plaintiff's complaint brought action under interpleader statute but lacked requisite diversity jurisdiction under statutory requirements).

(n13)Footnote 1. Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. United States, 999 F.2d 581, 584-585 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (central distinction is basis for federal court's subject matter jurisdiction under each type of interpleader).

(n14)Footnote 2. Berthoud v. Veselik, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4809 at 6 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 25, 2003).

(n15)Footnote 2.1. Selective Ins. Co. of Am. v. Norris, 209 F. Supp. 2d 580, 581-582 (E.D.N.C. 2002) .

(n16)Footnote 2.2. See 28 U.S.C. 1335; [b], below.

(n17)Footnote 3. See Commercial Nat'l Bank v. Demos, 18 F.3d 485, 488 (7th Cir. 1994) (Rule 22 provides procedural framework for interpleader action but not subject matter jurisdiction); Sun Life Assurance Co. v. Thomas, 735 F. Supp. 730, 732 (W.D. Mich. 1990) (interpleader rule is merely procedural device that does not grant court jurisdiction, which must be based on diversity or federal question).

(n18)Footnote 4. Bell & Beckwith v. United States, IRS, 766 F.2d 910, 917 (6th Cir. 1985) .

(n19)Footnote 5. Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. United States, 999 F.2d 581, 585 (D.C. Cir. 1993) .

(n20)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(1).

(n21)Footnote 7. U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Laborde, 794 F. Supp. 454, 459 (1st Cir. 1992) (in rule interpleader, stakeholder must be diverse from all defendants).

(n22)Footnote 7.1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1335.

(n23)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a); U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Laborde, 794 F. Supp. 454, 459 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n24)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a).

(n25)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a).

(n26)Footnote 10.1. Berthoud v. Veselik, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4809 at 6 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 25, 2003); Selective Ins. Co. of Am. v. Norris, 209 F. Supp. 2d 580, 582 (E.D.N.C. 2002) .

(n27)Footnote 11-12. [Reserved]

(n28)Footnote 13. Geler v. National Westminster Bank, 763 F. Supp. 722, 726 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (for purposes of both interpleader statute and general diversity jurisdiction statute, administrator of alien's estate is treated as alien for purposes of diversity jurisdiction).

(n29)Footnote 14. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c)(1).

(n30)Footnote 15. Geler v. National Westminster Bank, 763 F. Supp. 722, 726 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n31)Footnote 16. Lummis v. White, 629 F.2d 397, 402 (5th Cir. 1980) , rev'd on other grounds, 457 U.S. 85 (1982) .

(n32)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n33)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1391; State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 529 n.3, 87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1967) (rule interpleader based on diversity of citizenship may be brought only under § 1391); Leader Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 901 F. Supp. 316, 320 (W.D. Okla. 1995) .

(n34)Footnote 3. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391(a).

(n35)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

(n36)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1397.

(n37)Footnote 6. Carolina Cas. Ins. Co. v. Mares, 826 F. Supp. 149, 151 (E.D. Va. 1993) .

(n38)Footnote 7. Leader Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 901 F. Supp. 316, 320-321 (W.D. Okla. 1995) ("may" in § 1397 venue provision for statutory interpleader requires that statutory interpleader action be filed only where any claimant resides).

(n39)Footnote 8. Watson v. Manhattan & Bronx Surface Transit Operating Auth., 487 F. Supp. 1273, 1276 (D.N.J. 1980) .

(n40)Footnote 9. See Doe v. Prudential Ins. Co., 744 F. Supp. 40, 42 (D.R.I. 1990) ; see also New Jersey Sports Prods. v. Don King Prods., 15 F. Supp. 2d 534, 540-541 (D.N.J. 1998) (in action in nature of interpleader in which stakeholder is also claimant, stakeholder's residence is relevant for determining whether venue is proper; venue was proper in this case in district where stakeholder/claimant resided even though none of other claimants resided there).

(n41)Footnote 1. Sotheby's, Inc. v. Garcia, 802 F. Supp. 1058, 1066 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (consistent resolution of a multi-sided dispute would be threatened if several courts simultaneously could litigate stake of interpleader case).

(n42)Footnote 2. See [b], below.

(n43)Footnote 3. Geler v. National Westminster Bank, 763 F. Supp. 722, 727 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (injunction not available under 28 U.S.C. § 2361 in rule interpleader case because that section applies only to statutory interpleader actions).

(n44)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 2283; U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Laborde, 794 F. Supp. 454, 459 (1st Cir. 1992) (in rule interpleader actions, injunctions are governed by general anti-suit injunction provision).

(n45)Footnote 5. General Ry. Signal Co. v. Corcoran, 921 F.2d 700, 707 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n46)Footnote 6. Dombrowski v. Pfister, 380 U.S. 479, 484 n.2, 85 S. Ct. 1116, 14 L. Ed. 2d 22 (1965) .

(n47)Footnote 7. Pan Am. Fire & Cas. Co. v. Revere, 188 F. Supp. 474, 483 n.46 (E.D. La. 1960) .

(n48)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 2361; General Ry. Signal Co. v. Corcoran, 921 F.2d 700, 703 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n49)Footnote 9. See 28 U.S.C. § 2283.

(n50)Footnote 10. Melton v. White, 848 F. Supp. 1513, 1514 (W.D. Okla. 1994) (statutory interpleader injunction provision allows court to enjoin other judicial procedures in order to reduce possibility of inconsistent determinations or inequitable distribution of fund).

(n51)Footnote 11. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co. v. Balbin, 591 F.2d 1040, 1044 (5th Cir. 1979) (recognizing interpleader's roots in equity courts, district courts have dismissed or stayed interpleader proceeding if action already pending might obviate need for interpleader action).

(n52)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 2361.

(n53)Footnote 13. See 28 U.S.C. § 1335.

(n54)Footnote 14. United States v. Major Oil Corp., 583 F.2d 1152, 1157 (10th Cir. 1978) ; see [5], below.

(N55)Footnote 15. State Farm Fire and Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 533, 87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1967) (although stakeholder-insurer properly invoked interpleader jurisdiction, it was not entitled to injunction restraining suits against it outside limits of interpleader fund).

(n56)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(a); see also General Ry. Signal Co. v. Corcoran, 921 F.2d 700, 705 n.4 (7th Cir. 1991) (bond-posting requirement becomes moot when plaintiff does not meet statutory interpleader diversity requirement, and plaintiff instead pursues rule interpleader action under Rule 22).

(n57)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(a); Truck-A-Tune v. Re, 856 F. Supp. 77, 80 n.5 (D. Conn. 1993) , aff'd on other grounds, 23 F.3d 60 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n58)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 67(a); Central Bank v. United States, 838 F. Supp. 564, 566 (M.D. Fla. 1993) (even though interpleader action was initiated under Rule 22, court ordered deposit of disputed funds into court).

(n59)Footnote 4. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Eckman, 555 F. Supp. 775, 778 (D. Del. 1983) .

(n60)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a)(2); CNA Ins. Cos. v. Waters, 926 F.2d 247, 249 n.6 (3d Cir. 1991) (stakeholder should have deposited highest amount for which it would be liable but court would allow it to cure defect in amount); U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Laborde, 794 F. Supp. 454, 459 (1st Cir. 1992) (28 U.S.C. § 1335 requires that stake be deposited with court or appropriate bond be posted).

(n61)Footnote 6. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Brewer, 778 F. Supp. 925, 930 (E.D. Ky. 1991) (when stakeholder and claimants disagreed on amount of stakeholder-insurer's liability, court indicated it could not take jurisdiction of action as interpleader action until true limits of liability of stakeholder-insurer were determined).

(n62)Footnote 7. Wayzata Bank & Trust Co. v. A & B Farms, 855 F.2d 590, 593 (8th Cir. 1988) .

(n63)Footnote 8. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Eckman, 555 F. Supp. 775, 777 (D. Del. 1983) (in statutory interpleader, deposit of stake does not constitute waiver of interested stakeholder of claim to stake or part of stake).

(n64)Footnote 9. Abex Corp. v. ABC Rail Corp., 158 F.R.D. 75, 77 (W.D. Pa. 1994) (party permitted to cure defect in amount of posted bond and make additional deposit with court).

(n65)Footnote 1. Lincoln Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 38 F. Supp. 2d 440, 444 (E.D. Va. 1999) (Virginia law would govern substantive rights of claimants of life insurance proceeds, because district court's jurisdiction over insurer's interpleader action was based on general diversity and situs of actions giving rise to action was Virginia); see Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78-79, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188 (1938) .

(n66)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1335(a); Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78-79, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188 (1938) .

(n67)Footnote 3. Griffin v. McCoach, 313 U.S. 498, 503, 61 S. Ct. 1023, 85 L. Ed. 1481 (1941) (in interpleader case, federal courts in diversity of citizenship cases are governed by substantive law rules of courts of states in which they sit).

(n68)Footnote 4. See Hanna v. Plumer, 380 U.S. 460, 468, 85 S. Ct. 1136, 14 L. Ed. 2d 8 (1965) .

(n69)Footnote 5. Perkins State Bank v. Connolly, 632 F.2d 1306, 1311 (5th Cir. 1980) (since there is federal interest in protecting stakeholder, federal law allowing attorney's fees should be applied in statutory interpleader action to determine award to stakeholder).

(n70)Footnote 6. See Griffin v. McCoach, 313 U.S. 498, 503, 61 S. Ct. 1023, 85 L. Ed. 1481 (1941) .

60 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.74

§ 14.74 Application of Equitable Principlesn*

Neither the federal interpleader statute nor Rule 22 interpleader explicitly addresses the application to interpleader of such equitable defenses as laches, n0.01 estoppel, unclean hands, n1 or other lack of equity on the stakeholder's part. However, federal courts apply these equitable principles through their discretionary powers to control interpleader proceedings. n2 For example, some courts may deny interpleader if a stakeholder's wrongdoing has provoked the dispute which led to the interpleader action. n3

However, denying interpleader is a strong sanction for a stakeholder guilty of wrongdoing. Not only does it subject the stakeholder to the possibility of multiple litigation, it burdens the courts with that litigation and creates the risk of inconsistent outcomes. Recognizing this, courts on occasion will look to a lesser sanction for the stakeholder's wrongdoing. For example, a court may permit the interpleader to proceed n4 but deny the stakeholder's motion for an award of attorney's fees and costs. n5 Additionally, the court has the discretion to stay an interpleader proceeding, even when it has personal and subject matter jurisdiction, if a case pending in another court will resolve some or all of the issues in the interpleader case. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.05 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 0.01. United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Asbestospray, Inc., 182 F.3d 201, 208 (3d Cir. 1999) (noting that although rarely so held, interpleader is properly denied when the stakeholder is guilty of laches); Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Barretto, 178 F. Supp. 2d 745, 751 (S.D. Tex. 2001) (because interpleader has its roots in equity, equitable doctrines such as laches apply; three elements support a finding of laches: delay in asserting right, finding that delay was inexcusable; and finding that undue prejudice resulted from such delay).

(n3)Footnote 1. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. McGhee, 345 F. Supp. 288, 291 (N.D. Miss. 1972) .

(n4)Footnote 2. Abex Corp. v. ABC Rail Corp., 158 F.R.D. 75, 77 (W.D. Pa. 1994) (because interpleader is equitable in nature, court may deny interpleader if stakeholder's conduct is improper).

(n5)Footnote 3. Farmers Irrigating Ditch & Reservoir Co. v. Kane, 845 F.2d 229, 232 (10th Cir. 1988) (it is general rule that party seeking interpleader must be free from blame in causing controversy, and where stakeholder is wrongdoer with respect to subject matter of suit or any claimants, court may deny interpleader relief).

(n6)Footnote 4. Abex Corp. v. ABC Rail Corp., 158 F.R.D. 75, 77 (W.D. Pa. 1994) (acknowledging laches, but holding in this case that stakeholder's delay in filing interpleader action close to trial date of state court action involving same claims did not warrant drastic remedy of denying interpleader relief to stakeholder).

(n7)Footnote 5. See § 14.75.

(n8)Footnote 6. Home Indem. Co. v. Moore, 499 F.2d 1202, 1205-1206, 1206 (8th Cir. 1974) (court not required to grant interpleader relief when issues in complaint could be adequately resolved in pending state court proceedings).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.75

§ 14.75 Costs and Attorney's Feesn*

[1] Court's Discretion to Award Costs and Attorney's Fees to Stakeholder

Even though they are not specifically authorized by the statutory interpleader provisions or Rule 22, the court may award costs and attorney's fees to the stakeholder in an interpleader proceeding n1 based on the statutory provision that a court may make all appropriate orders to enforce its judgment n2 and the Rule 54 provision that gives the district court discretion to award costs, not including attorney's fees, to the prevailing party. n3 Rule 54 applies to statutory as well as to rule interpleader. n4 The trial court has discretion to allow a disinterested stakeholder to recover attorney's fees and costs from the stake itself, in both statutory and rule interpleader. n5

Courts are most likely to make such an award to a disinterested stakeholder who concedes liability completely, deposits the disputed funds with the court, and seeks discharge from the litigation. Courts are less likely to award costs and attorney's fees to an interested stakeholder or to a stakeholder who denies liability in whole or in part. n6 Similarly, courts generally deny an award if the stakeholder denies liability for interest on the fund. n7 Costs and attorney's fees usually are awarded from the stake; n7.1 however, the court has the discretion to award them against a party whose conduct justifies the award. n8 For example, the court may make an award against a claimant who has acted in bad faith n9 or a stakeholder who has acted in bad faith. n10

[2] Limitation of Amount

Because the interpleader plaintiff is supposed to be disinterested in the ultimate disposition of the interpleaded fund, the court may limit attorney's fee awards to those fees that are incurred in filing the action and pursuing the plan's release from liability, and not in litigating the merits of the adverse claimants' positions. For example, compensable expenses may include amounts spent preparing the complaint, obtaining service of process on the claimants to the fund, and preparing an order discharging the plaintiff from liability and dismissing the plaintiff from the action. Because the scope of compensable expenses is limited, attorney's fee awards to a "interested" interpleader plaintiff may be modest. n1

The precise amount awarded as costs and attorney's fees is a discretionary matter with the court, with the general guide that the award must be reasonable. n2 Within the limitations set out above in the first paragraph of this subsection, the court may consider a number of factors in setting the amount, including the complexity of the interpleader, the nature of the services performed by the stakeholder for the claimants or the court, the stakeholder's good faith and diligence or lack of diligence, any benefit of the services to the stakeholder, and any responsibility of the claimant in improperly prolonging the proceeding. n3 The burden of establishing entitlement to costs or attorney's fees is on the stakeholder. The stakeholder's counsel is not required to record in great detail how each period of time was expended, but should at least identify the general subject matter of the attorney's time expenditures. Consequently, if the documentation is inadequate, the district court has the option to reduce the amount of the applicant's fee award. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Trustees of the Dirs. Guild of America-- Producer Pension Benefits Plan v. Tise, 234 F.3d 415, 426-427 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 2361.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22(b).

(n6)Footnote 5. Trustees of the Dirs. Guild of America-- Producer Pension Benefits Plan v. Tise, 234 F.3d 415, 426-427 (9th Cir. 2000) (whether to award costs and fees in interpleader action is committed to sound discretion of district court); Millers Mut. Ins. Ass'n v. Wassall, 738 F.2d 302, 304 (8th Cir. 1984) (under common law, courts have long awarded attorney's fees and costs to disinterested stakeholder out of interpleader fund); but see Croskey v. Ford Motor Company-UAW, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8824 at 32 (S.D.N.Y. May 2, 2002) (if stakeholder has engaged in inequitable misconduct, court may deny request for attorneys' fees that could otherwise be awarded against interpleader fund itself).

(n7)Footnote 6. Perkins State Bank v. Connolly, 632 F.2d 1306, 1311 (5th Cir. 1980) (plaintiff who enters conflict by contesting ownership of fund or by disputing correct amount of his or her liability will not be awarded any expenses in absence of special circumstances).

(n8)Footnote 7. Gelfgren v. Republic Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 680 F.2d 79, 81 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n9)Footnote 7.1. See Travelers Ins. Co. v. Estate of Garcia, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2828 at 12-14 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 4, 2003) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Septembertide Pub., B.V. v. Stein & Day, Inc., 884 F.2d 675, 683 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n11)Footnote 9. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Boyd, 781 F.2d 1494, 1497-1498 (11th Cir. 1986) .

(n12)Footnote 10. Murphy v. Travelers Ins. Co., 534 F.2d 1155, 1164 (5th Cir. 1976) .

(n13)Footnote 1. Trustees of the Dirs. Guild of America-- Producer Pension Benefits Plan v. Tise, 234 F.3d 415, 426-427 (9th Cir. 2000) (court did not abuse its discretion in awarding stakeholder only $3,000 because unlike neutral stakeholder in typical interpleader action, stakeholder in this case vigorously opposed party's entitlement to the funds).

(n14)Footnote 2. Corwin Consultants, Inc. v. Interpublic Group of Cos., 375 F. Supp. 186, 193 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) , rev'd on other grounds, 512 F.2d 605 (2d Cir. 1975) (award sought for attorney's fees in interpleader action must bear reasonable relation to amount of stakeholder's deposit).

(n15)Footnote 3. Johnson v. Electrolux Corp., 763 F. Supp. 1181, 1189 (D. Conn. 1991) .

(n16)Footnote 4. Trustees of the Dirs. Guild of America-- Producer Pension Benefits Plan v. Tise, 234 F.3d 415, 427 (9th Cir. 2000) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.76

§ 14.76 United States as Party to Interpleader Actionn*

A private interpleading party may not interplead the United States as a claimant unless the United States has waived its sovereign immunity. n1 Neither the Federal Interpleader Act nor Rule 22 provides the necessary waiver of sovereign immunity. n2 This is also true when the United States sues a stakeholder who then attempts to counterclaim in interpleader against the United States; the government may not be made a defendant in the interpleader action unless it waives sovereign immunity, even if by filing a counterclaim in interpleader, the interpleading plaintiff is actually providing a more appropriate "defendant" for the government. n3

On the other hand, the United States may use either statutory interpleader or rule interpleader as a remedy when the United States is a stakeholder and is presented with conflicting claims to the stake. The government's use of interpleader, however, is not consent for the joinder of other causes of actions by the claimants in the proceeding against each other. n4 Furthermore, when the United States initiates a statutory interpleader action, it does not have to comply with the jurisdictional requirement to deposit the stake or a bond with the court. n5

One statute specifically authorizes use of interpleader by the United States when it acknowledges liability on a life insurance policy and various claimants dispute the right to the proceeds. Under the statute, the United States may initiate the action in the district court for the District of Columbia or for the district where any one claimant resides. The court may order personal service on any claimant not within the district in which the suit was brought or may order service by publication. n6 Additionally, the court may extend subpoenas for witnesses beyond the usual 100-mile limit for good cause shown. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersRule InterpleadersCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersStatutory InterpleadersGovernmentsFederal GovernmentClaims By & Against

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 22.06 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. United Pac. Ins. Co. v. Laurel County, 805 F.2d 628, 636 (6th Cir. 1986) (United States may not be required to interplead if it has not waived sovereign immunity).

(n3)Footnote 2. United States v. Commercial Bank of N. Am., 31 F.R.D. 133, 136 (S.D.N.Y. 1962) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See United States v. Dry Dock Sav. Inst., 149 F.2d 917, 919 (2d Cir. 1945) (government did not impliedly waive sovereign immunity and consent to ancillary bill of interpleader merely because it sought court's aid for collection of indebtedness).

(n5)Footnote 4. Moreno v. United States, 120 F.2d 128, 129 (1st Cir. 1941) (United States brought interpleader action when it admitted liability on insurance policy, and brought in additional claimant to policy).

(n6)Footnote 5. United States v. Herce, 334 F. Supp. 111, 112 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) (United States not required to deposit valuable painting in its possession with court or to post bond in lieu of painting, as must other plaintiffs in statutory interpleader).

(n7)Footnote 6. 38 U.S.C. § 1984(a).

(n8)Footnote 7. 38 U.S.C. § 1984(c).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART III. INTERPLEADER

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.77through 14.89

[Reserved]

§§ 14.77[Reserved]

64 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
1. Statutory Right to Intervene

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.90

§ 14.90 In Generaln*

The court must generally allow an applicant to intervene in an action when the applicant files an application in a timely manner and a statute of the United States confers an unconditional right to intervene. n1 The provision which confers an unconditional right of intervention must be specified in an unequivocal federal statute. Therefore, because a state statute is not a statute of the United States, any state statute conferring a right to intervene will not apply in federal court, even if the language of the state statute appears to grant an unconditional right. Such a state right is subject to the criteria set forth in Rule 24(a)(2), which governs non-statutory intervention as of right. n2 Similarly, an unconditional right to intervene may not be authorized by a federal executive order or administrative regulation. n3

Under Rule 24(a)(1), an applicant for intervention possesses a statutory right to intervene only when a federal statute unambiguously grants the applicant an unconditional right to participate in litigation. If the applicant must fulfill any conditions whatever, such as proving an interest that has been impaired or impeded, then the legislation appears conditional, not unconditional, and Rule 24(a)(1) does not control the determination of the application. n4

Whether a federal statute confers a conditional or unconditional right may not be obvious and may involve a question of statutory construction. n5 Finally, if a statute requires permission to intervene, the intervention must be analyzed under the criteria set forth in Rule 24(b), which governs permissive intervention. For a discussion of statutes conferring a permissive right to intervene, see § 14.122.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionStatutory Right to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.02 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Harris v. Reeves, 946 F.2d 214, 222 & n.10 (3d Cir. 1991) (any state statute conferring right to intervene is subject to Rule 24(a)(2) analysis); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. EEOC v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 506 F.2d 735, 740 (3d Cir. 1974) (executive orders and regulations are not statutes, and therefore do not confer unconditional right to intervene).

(n5)Footnote 4. United States v. Union Elec. Co., 64 F.3d 1152, 1157-1168 (8th Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Ruiz v. Estelle, 161 F.3d 814, 817-827 (5th Cir. 1998) (court construed Prison Litigation Reform Act as granting individual state legislators unconditional right to intervene in actions involving prisoner release orders).

65 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
1. Statutory Right to Intervene

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.91

§ 14.91 Statutory Right of Federal and State Government to Intervene on Constitutional Issuesn*

[1] Federal Government

The United States government has a statutory right to intervene in any case in which the constitutionality of a federal statute affecting the public interest is questioned. If the United States, or one of its agencies, officers, or employees, is not already a party to an action, the court must notify the United States Attorney General and allow the United States to present evidence and argument relating to the constitutionality issue. n1 The requirement of notification, and the order for the Attorney General's intervention, may occur at any stage of the proceeding in which the court determines that such a challenge has been made. n2 Although the court may grant intervention even if the case may be disposed of non-constitutional grounds, the participation of the United States should be limited to the constitutionality issue. n3

[2] State Government

If a party in federal court challenges the constitutionality of a state statute, the district court must notify the state attorney general of the challenge. The state attorney general has a right to intervene and to present evidence, if evidence is otherwise admissible in the case, and to argue on the question of constitutionality. n1 If an agency, officer, or employee of a state is already a party, the attorney general is not entitled to intervene as a matter of right. n2

Because Section 2403(b) is unequivocal, the statute places a mandatory duty on the district court that is not discretionary, n3 even if the claim is frivolous or may be disposed of on other grounds. n4 On the other hand, if there is no issue of constitutionality, there is no right of intervention. n5 There is also no right of intervention when the object of the constitutional challenge is a local ordinance. However, when the local ordinance has been adopted pursuant to a state enabling statute, the state attorney general may intervene when the challenge to the local ordinance is in effect a constitutional challenge to the state statute. n6

[3] Requirement of Notice and Certification of Constitutional Question

[a] Requirement Permits Federal or State Government to Defend Statute

The federal rules require that if a party is litigating the constitutionality of either a federal or state statute, and the applicable federal or state government official is not already a party to the case, then the appropriate federal or state government official must be notified of the constitutional challenge and the court must certify the challenge to the appropriate entity or official. n1 The purpose of these notice and certification requirements is to ensure that the executive branch of the applicable government has notice of the proceeding and an opportunity to intervene and present its arguments regarding its own statute, n2 and to appeal a decision in the event the federal district court determines that the federal or state statute is unconstitutional. n3

The notice and certification requirements are a procedural device designed to give the appropriate government entity the opportunity to defend the statute. n4 Consequently, if a party has a valid constitutional challenge that has been timely asserted, the party's failure to file and serve the notice, or the court's failure to certify, does not forfeit a valid constitutional claim or defense. n5

[b] Required Notice to Government Official

When a party challenges the constitutionality of a federal statute by filing a pleading, written motion, or other paper in a proceeding in which the United States or its agency, officer, or employee is not a party in an official capacity, the party must file a written notice of constitutional question which states the question and identifies the paper that raises the question. n6 The party must also serve the notice and paper on the Attorney General of the United States either by certified or registered mail or by sending it to an electronic address designated by the Attorney General for this purpose. n7

Similarly, if a party challenges the constitutionality of a statute of a state by filing a pleading, written motion, or other paper in a proceeding in which neither the state nor its agency, officer, or employee is a party in an official capacity, the party must file a written notice of constitutional question which states the question and identifies the paper that raises the question. n8 The party must also serve the notice and paper on the state attorney general either by certified or registered mail or by sending it to an electronic address designated by the attorney general for this purpose. n9

[c] Certification of Question by Court

When a constitutional question is raised regarding a federal or state statute, the court must, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2403, certify to the Attorney General of the United States that there is a constitutional challenge to a federal statute, or certify to the state attorney general that there is a constitutional challenge to a state statute. n10 The court certification requirement is separate and independent of the party's obligation to serve notice of a constitutional challenge; the court has an obligation to certify whether or not the party making the challenge has filed and served notice. Thus, the court certification is the only notice provided when the constitutionality of a statute is drawn into question by a means other than a party's written pleading, motion, or other paper. n11

This rule provides for certification by the court whether or not the constitutional challenge affects the public interest. Thus, after receiving the notice the federal or state attorney general has the opportunity to determine whether it is in the public interest to defend the challenge. n12

[d] Intervention Procedure

Unless the court sets a later time, the attorney general may intervene within 60 days after the notice of constitutional question is filed or after the court certifies the challenge, whichever is earlier. Before the time to intervene expires, the court may reject the constitutional challenge but may not enter a final judgment holding the statute unconstitutional. n13 Therefore, pretrial activities may continue uninterrupted during the period available for intervention, and the court has authority to grant interlocutory relief. However, the court may not enter a final judgment that a statute is unconstitutional until the attorney general has responded or the intervention period has expired without response from the attorney general. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionStatutory Right to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.02[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2403(a); see Cutter v. Wilkinson, 544 U.S. 709, 717, 125 S. Ct. 2113, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1020 (2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Wallach v. Lieberman, 366 F.2d 254, 257 (2d Cir. 1966) .

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Benny, 812 F.2d 1133, 1139-1142 (9th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1029 (1993) .

(n5)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2403(b); see Comfort v. Lynn Sch. Comm., 418 F.3d 1, 9 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 2403(b).

(n7)Footnote 3. See Hodgkins v. Peterson, 355 F.3d 1048, 1054 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 4. Merrill v. Town of Addison, 763 F.2d 80, 82 (2nd Cir 1985) .

(n9)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Blair v. Shanahan, 919 F. Supp. 1361, 1363 (N.D. Cal. 1996) (court need not allow intervention when state seeks only to vacate previously litigated judgment of unconstitutionality).

(n10)Footnote 6. Deja Vu of Cincinnati, L.L.C. v. Union Twp. Bd. of Trs., 411 F.3d 777, 796-797 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1; see also [b], [c], below.

(n12)Footnote 2. Doe v. Smith, 429 F.3d 706, 709 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n13)Footnote 3. See Tonya K. v. Board of Educ., 847 F.2d 1243, 1247 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n14)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1, Committee Note; see also [d], below.

(n15)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(d).

(n16)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1)(A).

(n17)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(2).

(n18)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(1)(B).

(n19)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(2).

(n20)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a)(2).

(n21)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1, Committee Note.

(n22)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1, Committee Note.

(n23)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(d).

(n24)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1, Committee Note.

66 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
1. Statutory Right to Intervene

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.92

§ 14.92 Particular Statutes Granting United States Unconditional Right to Intervenen*

The following statutes give an unconditional right to entities of the United States Government to intervene as specified:

1. The Attorney General may intervene in an action involving an alleged violation of the constitutional right to equal protection. n1 To apply for intervention under this statute, the Attorney General must certify that the case is of general public importance; because the government's right to intervene in such cases is absolute, the Attorney General is free to seek whatever relief is desired and may request relief beyond the original scope of the complaint. n2 Furthermore, the Attorney General's right to intervene in such actions does not affect the government's authority to institute any action or proceeding otherwise authorized by law. n3

2. The Secretary of Labor and Secretary of Treasury have an unconditional right to intervene in any Employee Retirement Income Security Act suit by a participant, beneficiary, or fiduciary, other than an action brought solely to recover benefits due under an employee benefit plan. Consequently, a copy of the complaint in any such suit must be served on the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of the Treasury by certified mail. n4

3. The United States Government has an unconditional right to intervene in a private action under the False Claims Act, if it elects to do so. n5 The False Claims Act governs liability to the United States for knowingly making a false or fraudulent claim when seeking payment from the government, n6 and the Attorney General is responsible for investigating alleged violations and may bring a civil action under the Act. n7 When a private person brings a civil action in the name of the government, the private person must provide the Attorney General with a copy of the complaint and written disclosure of substantially all material evidence, and the Attorney General may elect to intervene within 60 days of receipt of the documentation. n8

4. If an applicant for registration of a trademark is dissatisfied with the decision of the Commissioner of Patents or the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, the applicant may appeal to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. n9 Although the Commissioner of Patents need not be a party to that appeal, the court clerk must notify the Commissioner of the filing, and the Commissioner has the right to intervene in the action. n10 The Commissioner also has the right to intervene in an appeal to the circuit court by a party who is dissatisfied with a decision of the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionStatutory Right to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.02[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000h-2.

(n3)Footnote 2. 42 U.S.C. § 2000h-2; see Canterino v. Wilson, 538 F. Supp. 62, 63-64 (W.D. Ky. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 3. 42 U.S.C. § 2000h-3.

(n5)Footnote 4. 29 U.S.C. § 1132(h); see, e.g., Secretary of Labor v. Fitzsimmons, 805 F.2d 682, 694-696 (7th Cir. 1986) (allowing Secretary of Labor to intervene as plaintiff in order to object to terms of proposed settlement).

(n6)Footnote 5. 31 U.S.C. § 3730(b)(2).

(n7)Footnote 6. 31 U.S.C. § 3729.

(n8)Footnote 7. 31 U.S.C. § 3730(a).

(n9)Footnote 8. 31 U.S.C. § 3730(b)(2).

(n10)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1071(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. § 1071(b)(2).

(n12)Footnote 11. 35 U.S.C. § 146.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
1. Statutory Right to Intervene

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.93

§ 14.93 Particular Statutes Granting Private Persons Unconditional Right to Intervenen*

The following are examples of statutes that give an unconditional right to private persons to intervene as specified:

1. Interested persons may intervene in Administrative Agency Proceedings and judicial review of Administrative Agency orders under the Administrative Procedure Act, n1 which governs the rights and procedures of participants in administrative hearings. Interested persons are entitled to participate in agency proceedings, provided such participation does not disrupt the orderly conduct of public business. n2 Specific statutes pertaining to the respective agencies may also regulate the right to intervene. For example, the National Labor Relations Act provides that any person aggrieved by a final order of the National Labor Relations Board may seek review in the court of appeals. n3 The Supreme Court has held that the Act, although not express on the subject, confers an absolute right of intervention in the appeal of the party that was successful in the Board proceeding. n4

2. A person aggrieved in a civil rights action by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) or the Attorney General may intervene in a civil action by the Commission or the Attorney General in a case involving a government, governmental agency, or political subdivision. n5 The person or persons aggrieved plainly include persons who filed the charges of unlawful practices that resulted in the suit. n6 Furthermore, certain powers, remedies, and procedures of the Civil Rights Act were incorporated by reference in the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990. Consequently, persons alleging discrimination on the basis of disability may also intervene in an applicable action brought by the EEOC or the Attorney General. n7

3. Various environmental statutes permit citizens' intervention in government actions. The statutes also provide private parties the right to enforce the provisions of the statutes. For example, the Clean Water Act contains a citizens' suit provision. n8 Although private actions are not allowed if the responsible governmental entity is diligently prosecuting a suit for the same purpose, a private party may intervene as of right in the government's action if the private party could have brought a private action in the absence of the government's action. n9

4. A person aggrieved in a government action under the Fair Housing Act may intervene. The Fair Housing Act authorizes the Attorney General to commence a civil action on behalf of a person aggrieved by a violation of the Act, n10 and an aggrieved person may intervene as of right in that civil action. n11 An aggrieved party may also intervene in a civil action brought by the Attorney General alleging discriminatory housing practices that are part of a "pattern or practice" of resistance to the full enjoyment of rights protected under the Constitution or federal laws. n12

5. A corporate shareholder has the right to intervene in an action to recover insider profits if the corporation fails diligently to prosecute an action to recover such profits. Insider profits are profits resulting from the sale or purchase of securities on the basis of information obtained by an owner, director, or officer of a corporation by reason of his or her relationship to the issuer of the securities. n13

6. A trustee in a Chapter 11 bankruptcy case may intervene in any tax court action to which the debtor is a party. The trustee's intervention may be made solely on behalf of the debtor's estate. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionStatutory Right to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.02[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 5 U.S.C. § 551 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 2. 5 U.S.C. § 555(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 160(f).

(n5)Footnote 4. International Union, Local 283 v. Scofield, 382 U.S. 205, 212-213, 86 S. Ct. 373, 15 L. Ed. 2d 272 (1965) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1); see EEOC v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 506 F.2d 735, 740 (3d Cir. 1974) .

(n7)Footnote 6. EEOC v. American Tel. & Tel. Corp., 506 F.2d 735, 740 (3d Cir. 1974) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See 42 U.S.C. § 12117(a); see also Muth v. Cobro Corp., 895 F. Supp. 254, 255 (E.D. Mo. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 8. 33 U.S.C. § 1365.

(n10)Footnote 9. United States v. Mississippi, 958 F.2d 112, 115 (5th Cir. 1992) (any citizen may intervene as a matter of right under § 1365).

(n11)Footnote 10. 42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)(1).

(n12)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)(1).

(n13)Footnote 12. See 42 U.S.C. § 3614.

(n14)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 78p(b).

(n15)Footnote 14. 26 U.S.C. § 7464.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
1. Statutory Right to Intervene

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.94through 14.99

[Reserved]

§§ 14.94[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
2. Intervention of Right Because Person's Interest Would Be Impaired

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.100

§ 14.100 Four Requirements to Establish Person's Right to Interventionn*

Rule 24(a)(2) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that an applicant is entitled to intervene as of right if, on timely application, the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action, and the applicant is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect that interest, unless the applicant's interest is adequately represented by existing parties. n1 The courts have translated this rule into a precise four-element test to determine whether an applicant should be permitted to intervene as a matter of right under Rule 24(a)(2): n2

1. The motion must be timely; n3

2. The applicant must claim a "significantly protectable" interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action; n4

3. The applicant must be so situated that the disposition of the action may, as a practicable matter, impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect that interest; n5 and

4. The applicant's interest must be inadequately represented by the parties to the action. n6

The applicant has the burden of establishing its right to intervene by satisfying the four elements. n7 These four steps are mandatory and failure to satisfy any one of the criteria, at least to some degree, justifies the court to deny the application to intervene. n8 Although each of the requirements involves distinct issues, the sum of the requirements addresses the basic question of whether the applicant has shown that denial of intervention will have a significant adverse effect on the applicant. The courts have observed that Rule 24(a)(2) is construed broadly in favor of applicants. n9

The inquiry required under Rule 24(a)(2) is a flexible one, and the court should use a practical analysis of the facts and circumstances of each case. n10 Although each of the criteria is independent, practical application of Rule 24(a)(2) involves a balancing of the independent components. The four elements should not be analyzed in a vacuum, and the criteria should be considered together rather than discretely. Intervention should be granted of right if the interests favoring intervention outweigh those opposed. n11 Thus, other factors may come into consideration, such as judicial efficiency and, in a particular case, a court may refuse intervention to applicants who proffer only duplicative evidence. n12

Private parties may intervene if they meet the requirements of Rule 24, even if they could not have initiated the action because a statute provides for initiation only by a governmental entity. In such cases, intervention is available to private parties only if (1) the statute does not limit the application of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in the type of action involved and (2) the statute does not expressly bar private parties from intervening. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. League of United Latin Am. Citizens v. Wilson, 131 F.3d 1297, 1302 (9th Cir. 1997) . Another court's version of the four required elements under Rule 24(a) is as follows: (1) timeliness of the application to intervene; (2) the applicant's substantial legal interest in the case; (3) impairment of the applicant's ability to protect that interest in the absence of intervention; and (4) inadequate representation of that interest by parties already before the court. Grutter v. Bollinger, 188 F.3d 394 (6th Cir. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 14.101.

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 14.102.

(n6)Footnote 5. See § 14.103.

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 14.104.

(n8)Footnote 7. United States v. Texas E. Transmission Corp., 923 F.2d 410, 414 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Security Ins. Co. v. Schipporeit, Inc., 69 F.3d 1377, 1380 (7th Cir. 1995) (church that met all four requirements was entitled to intervene in insurance company's declaratory judgment action against architectural firm).

(n10)Footnote 9. Yorkshire v. United States IRS, 26 F.3d 942, 944-945 (9th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 989 (1994) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Donnelly v. Glickman, 159 F.3d 405, 409 (9th Cir. 1998) (in making determination whether intervention is appropriate, court is guided primarily by practical and equitable considerations); Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 999 (5th Cir. 1996) (practical analysis).

(n12)Footnote 11. United States v. Hooker Chems. & Plastics Corp., 749 F.2d 968, 983 (2d Cir. 1984) , aff'd on other grounds, 776 F.2d 410 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n13)Footnote 12. See Cajun Elec. Power Coop., Inc. v. Gulf State Utils., Inc., 940 F.2d 117, 120-121 (5th Cir. 1991) ; Environmental Defense Fund, Inc. v. Costle, 79 F.R.D. 235, 243 (D.D.C. 1978) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Georgia v. Ashcroft, 539 U.S. 461, 476-477, 123 S. Ct. 2498, 156 L. Ed. 2d 428 (2003) (private parties may intervene in § 5 Voting Rights Act actions assuming they meet the requirements of Rule 24, even though only state that is subject to voting requirements may institute an action in District Court for District of Columbia for declaratory judgment that voting change comports with Act).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
2. Intervention of Right Because Person's Interest Would Be Impaired

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.101

§ 14.101 Motion for Intervention Must Be Timelyn*

An application to intervene as of right must be timely. n1 A determination of whether an application is timely is essentially discretionary with the trial court. A trial court should determine timeliness from all the circumstances of the application, and unless the trial court's discretion is abused, the court's ruling will not be disturbed on review. Whether a motion to intervene is timely is based on a consideration of four factors: (1) the length of time during which the intervenor applicant actually knew or reasonably should have known of its interest in the action before petitioning for leave to intervene, (2) the extent of the prejudice that the existing parties to the litigation may suffer as a result of the intervenor applicant's failure to apply for intervention as soon as it actually knew or reasonably should have known of its interest in the action, (3) the extent of the prejudice that the intervenor applicant would suffer if its petition for leave to intervene is denied, and (4) the existence of unusual circumstances militating either for or against a determination that the application is timely, such as personal injury of the applicant. n2 Even though these four factors give structure to the timeliness analysis, timeliness analysis must be based on the context of the particular case and should not be used as a tool to punish tardy intervenor applicants, but rather should function as a method to prevent prejudice against the original parties by an applicant's failure to apply sooner. n2.1

The requirement of timeliness must be considered within the factual context of each case. Thus, the mere passage of a particular length of time does not render an application untimely; n3 rather, the important issue concerns actual proceedings of substance on the merits. For example, in one case, the court held a motion to intervene filed four years after the initial filing of the complaint was timely because when the motion was filed, the case had not progressed in terms of discovery, no dispositive motions had been filed, and no decrees had been entered. n4 In addition, timeliness should not prevent intervention where an existing party induces the applicant to refrain from intervening. n5 Furthermore, the requirement that a motion to intervene be timely is not a tool of retribution meant to punish an applicant's tardiness. Rather, the requirement is meant to protect the rights of the original parties to the action. n6

If an application to intervene is made following judgment, the court will view the application with disfavor, because it tends to foster delay and prejudice to existing parties. n7 Furthermore, a motion for post-judgment intervention is particularly disfavored if the applicant had a reasonable basis for knowing before the final judgment that its interests were at risk. The stage of the proceeding at which an application to intervene is made is related to the issue of potential prejudice to the original parties resulting from the intervenor's delay. The more advanced the litigation, the more intense the scrutiny of the tardiness of the motion. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. NAACP v. New York, 413 U.S. 345, 366-369, 93 S. Ct. 2591, 37 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1973) .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Ross v. Marshall, 426 F.3d 745, 754 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 3. Smith v. Marsh, 194 F.3d 1045, 1050-1051 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Mountain Top Condominium Ass'n v. Dave Stabbert Master Builder, Inc., 72 F.3d 361, 369 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 5. United States v. Alcan Aluminum, Inc., 25 F.3d 1174, 1181-1182 (3d Cir. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n8)Footnote 6. Sierra Club v. Espy, 18 F.3d 1202, 1205 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n9)Footnote 7. Minnesota Milk Producers Ass'n v. Glickman, 153 F.3d 632, 646 (8th Cir. 1998) , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1130 (1999) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico v. Greenblatt, 964 F.2d 1227, 1231 (1st Cir. 1992) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
2. Intervention of Right Because Person's Interest Would Be Impaired

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.102

§ 14.102 Legal Interest in Subject Matter of Actionn*

[1] General Requirement

The second element that an applicant for intervention must demonstrate is that the applicant has an interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action. In this regard, the applicant should show some "proprietary interest" or other "significantly protectable legal interest." n1 An applicant's interest must be direct, substantial, and legally protectable. n2 The required interest must consist of some legal right that will be affected by the action. An applicant for intervention has a "significant protectable interest" in an action if (1) it asserts an interest that is protected under some law, and (2) there is a "relationship" between the legally protected interest and the plaintiff's claims. This relationship exists if the resolution of the plaintiff's claims actually will affect the applicant. n2.1

The "significant protectable interest" test is not a clear-cut or bright-line rule, because no specific legal or equitable interest need be established. Instead, the "interest" test directs courts to make a practical, threshold inquiry. The sufficiency of an intervenor applicant's interest is a highly fact-specific determination. n2.2 The interest test is primarily a practical guide to disposing of lawsuits by involving as many apparently concerned persons as is compatible with efficiency and due process. n3

Applications to intervene in which the proposed intervenor advances a distinct property interest present the easiest cases for intervention. If an action involves a dispute about a particular property or fund, and an applicant claims a direct, substantial, and legally protectable right to the property or fund, the interest is sufficient. n4 Thus, an interest in a specific monetary fund supports intervention in an action affecting that fund. n5

An interest does not need to be a property right in order to qualify for the second requirement, and some non-property interests have been held to satisfy the interest requirement. For example, expectation of promotion within an employment situation was an interest sufficient to support intervention in an action involving promotional exams. n6 However, the employment interest must have some legal basis such as a contractual relationship. Thus, non-minority employees did not have an interest sufficient to support intervention in an action alleging discrimination in hiring and promotion, because even though the case could affect their seniority rankings, civil servants have no vested legal right in a particular position or appointment. n6.1 Nonetheless, non-property interests do not often support intervention as of right. Many decisions do not find an economic interest alone to be sufficient. n7 Similarly, applicants concerned only about the legal principles that apply to an action may appear as amici curiae, but they are not entitled to intervene as of right. n8

[2] Less Strict Standard for Public Law Issue

Courts have a tendency to judge the property interest requirement by a more lenient standard if the lawsuit involves some public interest issue or is brought by a public interest group. The zone of interests protected by a constitutional provision or statute of general application is perceived as broader than the protectable interests recognized in other contexts. n1 The Supreme Court has also taken a lenient viewpoint regarding the interest requirement in cases involving the public interest. In one antitrust case, for example, the Court permitted intervention by the state of California and several energy companies into an antitrust action brought by the United States. The Court broadly interpreted the interest requirement of Rule 24(a) in holding that non-legally protected interests could qualify for intervention as of right. n2 However, note that all of the requirements of Rule 24(a)(2), including timeliness, must be met even in cases involving issues of public interest. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.03[2] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Donaldson v. United States, 400 U.S. 517, 530-531, 91 S. Ct. 534, 27 L. Ed. 2d 580 (1971) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Kleissler v. United States Forest Service, 157 F.3d 964, 972 (3d Cir. 1998) (intervenors should have interest that is specific to them, is capable of definition, and will be directly affected in substantially concrete fashion by relief sought).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Lynch, 307 F.3d 794, 803 (9th Cir. 2002) ; see United States v. New York City Bd. of Educ., 85 F. Supp. 2d 130, 154-156 (E.D.N.Y. 2000) (in action alleging discrimination in hiring and promotion, non-minority employees did not have an interest sufficient to support intervention, because even though case could affect their seniority rankings, it was not legal interest because civil servant has no vested right in particular position or appointment).

(n5)Footnote 2.2. San Juan County v. United States, 420 F.3d 1197, 1207 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Lynch, 307 F.3d 794, 803 (9th Cir. 2002) .

(n7)Footnote 4. Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Lynch, 307 F.3d 794, 803 (9th Cir. 2002) (contingent, unsecured claim against third-party debtor did not satisfy "direct, non-contingent, substantial, and legally protectable" interest required for intervention as matter of right); United States v. Peoples Benefit Life Ins. Co., 271 F.3d 411, 414-417 (2d Cir. 2001) (insurance company did not have sufficient interest to intervene in civil forfeiture proceedings when company claimed interest in property on constructive trust theory, but property subject to constructive trust was not readily traceable to property subject to forfeiture; Gaines v. Dixie Carriers, Inc., 434 F.2d 52, 53-54 (5th Cir. 1970) (law firm could intervene in former client's action to protect firm's interest in contingent fee award).

(n8)Footnote 5. Mountain Top Condominium Ass'n v. Dave Stabbert Master Builder, Inc., 72 F.3d 361, 366 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 6. United States v. City of Chicago, 870 F.2d 1256, 1260 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n10)Footnote 6.1. United States v. New York City Bd. of Educ., 85 F. Supp. 2d 130, 154-156 (E.D. N.Y. 2000) .

(n11)Footnote 7. New Orleans Pub. Serv., Inc. v. United Gas Pipe Line Co., 732 F.2d 452, 466 (5th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1019 (1984) (customers not permitted to intervene in contract dispute regarding price between electric utility and gas supplier).

(n12)Footnote 8. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 24 F.3d 958, 961 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n13)Footnote 1. Kleissler v. United States Forest Service, 157 F.3d 964, 973 (3d Cir. 1998) ; New Orleans Pub. Serv., Inc. v. United Gas Pipe Line Co., 732 F.2d 452, 463-466 (5th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1019 (1984) .

(n14)Footnote 2. Cascade Natural Gas Corp. v. El Paso Natural Gas Co., 386 U.S. 129, 132-136, 87 S. Ct. 932, 17 L. Ed. 2d 814 (1967) .

(n15)Footnote 3. Lelsz v. Kavanagh, 710 F.2d 1040, 1047 (5th Cir. 1983) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
2. Intervention of Right Because Person's Interest Would Be Impaired

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.103

§ 14.103 Disposition of Action Will Impair or Impede Applicant's Ability To Protect Interestn*

After an applicant has established a sufficient interest in the subject of the action, the applicant must demonstrate that disposition of that action may, as a practical matter, impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect the interest. n1 The "impair or impede" element requires a showing by the applicant that the applicant will be injured in a practical sense. n2 The non-party applicant must show that it would be unfair to decide the case and injure the non-party without allowing the non-party to participate in the litigation. n2.1 In its evaluation of the "impair or impede" element, the court is not limited to consequences of a strictly legal nature. To satisfy this element of the intervention test, a would-be intervenor must show only that impairment or impediment of its substantial interest is possible if intervention is denied. n2.2

Thus, an applicant's interest is impaired if disposition of the action in which intervention is sought will prevent any future attempts by the applicant to pursue its interest. For example, if the doctrine of res judicata would prohibit an applicant from pursuing a claim in a separate action, a total obstruction of the interest would result. n3 Note that under the requirements of the rule, impairment, or a simple decrease in the value of the interest, would also be sufficient. For example, potential harm to a property interest satisfies the rule. n4

An applicant for intervention must establish a practical, rather than theoretical, impairment of its interest. For example, a possible adverse judicial determination, which arguably could be made in the future by a judge on some subjective basis, does not necessarily establish impairment. n5 The practical impairment test is flexible, and its application depends on a functional analysis of the circumstances of a given case. For example, the potential effect on career and promotion opportunities may satisfy the impairment requirement, and an applicant need not demonstrate a vested interest in a promotion. n6

The "impair or impede" determination under Rule 24(a)(2) is the same as the joinder inquiry under Rule 19(a)(2)(i): whether a named party must join a nonparty as needed for just adjudication because disposition of the action would "impair or impede" the nonparty's ability to protect an interest in the litigation. Consequently, cases apply ing Rule 19(a)(2)(i) are helpful in interpreting application of Rule 24(a)(2). n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.03[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. New Orleans Pub. Serv., Inc. v. United Gas Pipe Line Co., 732 F.2d 452, 463 (5th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1019 (1984) .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. See Heaton v. Monogram Credit Card Bank, 297 F.3d 416, 422 (5th Cir. 2002) .

(n5)Footnote 2.2. San Juan County v. United States, 420 F.3d 1197, 1210 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 3. Washington Elec. Coop. v. Massachusetts Mun. Wholesale Elec. Co., 922 F.2d 92, 98 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 4. NL Indus., Inc. v. Secretary of the Interior, 777 F.2d 433, 440 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 5. United States v. Texas E. Transmission Corp., 923 F.2d 410, 414 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 1004 (5th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (court allowed intervention by union and police association in civil rights action against city).

(n10)Footnote 7. B. Fernandez & Hnos., Inc. v. Kellogg USA, Inc., 440 F.3d 541, 544-545 (1st Cir. 2006) ; see § 14.04[1][c] (joinder requirements).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
2. Intervention of Right Because Person's Interest Would Be Impaired

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.104

§ 14.104 Applicant's Interest Inadequately Represented by Current Partiesn*

[1] Required Showing of Inadequacy of Representation

To obtain intervention as of right, the last element that the applicant must show is that the existing parties in the lawsuit inadequately represent the applicant's interests in the action. n1 However, the applicant need not show that the representation by existing parties will definitely be inadequate. The Supreme Court has found that this requirement of Rule 24(a)(2) is satisfied if the applicant shows that the representation of the applicant's interest "may be" inadequate. n2 Some courts have stated that any doubt regarding adequacy of representation should be resolved in favor of the applicant for intervention. n3 The burden on the proposed intervenor to show inadequacy is minimal. If the proposed intervenor can show that the basis for the intervenor's representation and that of the current representation may diverge in the future, even though at the time of the filing they appear to share common ground, the showing of inadequacy is sufficient. n4 Thus, intervention was allowed on appeal when it appeared there was a possibility that representation by the existing plaintiff might become inadequate because of a possibility that the plaintiff would be dissolved in bankruptcy before the appeal was finally resolved. n5

Some showing must be made, however; for example, a mere difference between the existing parties and the applicants to intervene regarding the motive for the litigation does not establish inadequacy of representation in the litigation. n6 Similarly, an applicant's disagreement with an existing party's trial strategy or an existing party's decision whether to appeal an adverse decision generally does not present a sufficient conflict of interest or lack of adequate representation to justify intervention. n7

In order to show inadequacy of representation, the applicants must show that they bring something to the litigation that would otherwise be ignored or overlooked if the matter were left to the already-existing parties. n8

[2] Rebuttable Presumptions of Adequacy of Representation

There are two situations in which there is a rebuttable presumption that the current parties adequately represent the applicant:

1. When there is identity of interest. If an applicant's interests in litigation are the same as one or more of the existing parties, adequate representation is presumed. n1 Thus, there is a presumption of adequate representation if the applicant has the "same ultimate objective" as an existing party. n2 To overcome the presumption, the applicant for intervention must show some conflict of interest with existing parties, or collusion between the existing parties, or dereliction by the existing party that should be representing the applicant's interests. n3

2. If a governmental entity is asserting its status as a guardian or representative of all of its citizens (in the status of parens patriae), n4 the governmental entity is presumed to represent its citizens adequately. n5 However, the presumption is rebuttable, and the effect of the presumption of adequacy of representation by the government is that a somewhat greater showing of inadequacy of representation is required in order to intervene than would otherwise be required. n6 To rebut the presumption, the applicant is not required to demonstrate that there is outright collusion between the governmental entity and the opposing parties; however, the applicant must make a strong showing that the sovereign is not fairly representing the interests of the applicant. n7 The fact that a governmental agency also regulates the proposed intervenors does not necessarily mean that it cannot adequately represent their interests but is a factor to be considered in rebuttal of the presumption. n7.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionRight to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.03[3] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Trbovich v. United Mine Workers of Am., 404 U.S. 528, 538 n.10, 92 S. Ct. 630, 30 L. Ed. 2d 686 (1972) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Falls Chase Special Taxing Dist., 983 F.2d 211, 216 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Heaton v. Monogram Credit Card Bank, 297 F.3d 416, 425 (5th Cir. 2002) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Supreme Beef Processors, Inc. v. USDA, 275 F.3d 432, 437-438 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Washington Elec. Coop. v. Massachusetts Mun. Wholesale Elec. Co., 922 F.2d 92, 98 (2d Cir. 1990) ; see, e.g., Curry v. Regents of University of Minnesota, 167 F.3d 420, 423 (8th Cir. 1999) (applicant campus organizations did not meet their "minimal burden" of showing that university would inadequately represent their interests in action in which several students challenged use of student fees; although the applicants' motives were not the same as the university's, because applicants' were interested in maintaining their funding, and university was merely interested in upholding their current fee system, there was identity of interest because both wanted current fee system upheld).

(n8)Footnote 7. Chiglo v. City of Preston, 104 F.3d 185, 188 (8th Cir. 1997) (prospective intervenor may not show inadequacy of representation by merely disagreeing with litigation strategy).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Hines v. Rapides Parish Sch. Bd., 479 F.2d 762, 765 (5th Cir. 1973) (if issues intervenors seek to present have been previously determined or if parties in original action were aware of these issues and completely competent to represent interest of new group, court may deny intervention).

(n10)Footnote 1. Southmark Corp. v. Cagan, 950 F.2d 416, 419 (7th Cir. 1991) (in foreclosure action, interests of individual investor in real estate partnership adequately represented by receiver of partnership).

(n11)Footnote 2. Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 1005 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Falls Chase Special Taxing Dist., 983 F.2d 211, 215-216 (11th Cir. 1993) (court allowed intervention because applicant's interests were represented only by combining hostile interests of plaintiff and defendant).

(n13)Footnote 4. United States v. Hooker Chems. & Plastics Corp., 749 F.2d 968, 984 (2d Cir. 1984) , aff'd on other grounds, 776 F.2d 410 (2d Cir. 1985) (concept of parens patriae has been expanded to include actions in which government seeks to redress quasi-sovereign interests, such as damage to its general economy or environment).

(n14)Footnote 5. Wade v. Goldschmidt, 673 F.2d 182, 186 n.7 (7th Cir. 1982) .

(n15)Footnote 6. Curry v. Regents of University of Minnesota, 167 F.3d 420, 423 (8th Cir. 1999) (presumption may be rebutted only by a strong showing of inadequate representation).

(n16)Footnote 7. United States v. Hooker Chems. & Plastics Corp., 749 F.2d 968, 984, 986 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n17)Footnote 7.1. Massachusetts Food Assn. v. Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Comm., 197 F.3d 560, 566-567 (1st Cir. 1999) (alcohol trade association that represented retailers and wholesalers was not allowed to intervene in litigation that had been brought against state alcoholic beverages commission to enjoin enforcement of statute because interests of the trade associations were adequately represented by commission, which, like association, also had strong interest in enforcement of statute).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
A. INTERVENTION OF RIGHT
2. Intervention of Right Because Person's Interest Would Be Impaired

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.105through 14.119

[Reserved]

§§ 14.105[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
B. PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.120

§ 14.120 Trial Court's Discretion Whether to Grant Motion for Permissive Interventionn*

[1] Circumstances in Which Court May Grant Permissive Intervention

On timely application of any person, n1 a court may grant permissive intervention pursuant to a federal statute that confers a conditional right to intervene n2 or when the applicant's claim or defense has a question of law or fact in common with the main action. n3 Additionally, state and federal officers and agencies may intervene in an action if an existing party is relying on (1) any statute or executive order administered by the officer or agency or (2) any regulation, order, requirement, or agreement issued or made pursuant to the statute or executive order. n4 Rule 24(b) specifically vests discretion in district courts to either grant or deny any person's motion to intervene, even when the person has met the other requirements of the rule; n5 because of the explicit nature of this discretion, courts have described the discretion as "great" n6 or "broad." n7 While a motion to intervene as of right is reviewed under the de novo or error standard, orders regarding permissive intervention are subject to review under the abuse of discretion standard. n7.1

The court's discretion whether to allow permissive intervention is not absolute. The court must always consider whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties. n7.2 In essence, considerations of trial convenience dominate the question of whether to allow permissive intervention. Like motions to intervene as of right, all motions for permissive intervention must be timely. n8 The determination of timeliness is also discretionary. n9

Private parties may intervene if they meet the requirements of Rule 24, even if they could not have initiated the action because a statute provides for initiation only by a governmental entity. In such cases, intervention is available to private parties only if (1) the statute does not limit the application of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in the type of action involved and (2) the statute does not expressly bar private parties from intervening. n9.1

[2] Factors Used by Court in Exercise of Discretion

[a] Undue Delay

The first factor for the court to consider in the exercise of its discretion is whether intervention would cause undue delay to the progression of the proceedings. For example, one indication of undue delay is whether the intervention would greatly widen the scope of the litigation. Introduction of additional issues at a late stage in the proceedings would cause undue delay. n1 If intervention would cause significant delay, or significantly complicate the existing litigation, the filing of a separate suit to assert an applicant's rights may be a more efficient and effective alternative way to protect the applicant's rights. If an adequate remedy is available to the applicant in another action, the effect of denying permissive intervention in an existing action is mitigated. If a court finds there is another remedy available to the applicant to protect its rights, the court will likely deny intervention, especially if such intervention will result in delay in the existing action. n2

Another factor indicative of undue delay is if the intervention would require consideration of new facts that are wholly unrelated to the underlying litigation. In seeking to bring the litigation to an expeditious close, the district court does not abuse its discretion in denying a motion for permissive intervention in such circumstances. n3

[b] Prejudice to Existing Parties

In deciding a motion for permissive intervention, the court must consider prejudice to other parties; thus, the court may consider whether the applicant's addition is likely to make a significant and useful contribution to the development of the underlying factual and legal issues or, alternatively, is likely to be counterproductive. n4 Courts are particularly willing to grant permissive intervention in complex litigation where the applicant may be able to provide unique input that may be of value to the court or the other parties. n5

On the other hand the court may deny permissive intervention if an applicant will not make any unique contribution to the evidence presented at trial. If a potential intervenor will essentially repeat the same types of testimony given by existing parties, intervention is counterproductive since it will only clutter and prolong the litigation unnecessarily. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionPermissive Interventions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.10[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1), (b)(2); see § 14.121.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(A); see § 14.122.

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B); see § 14.123.

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(2).

(n6)Footnote 5. Georgia v. United States Army Corps of Eng'rs, 302 F.3d 1242, 1250 (11th Cir. 2002) (permissive intervention is discretionary even if appropriate because party's claim or defense and main action have question of law or fact in common and intervention will not unduly prejudice or delay the adjudication of rights of original parties).

(n7)Footnote 6. Ruthardt v. United States, 303 F.3d 375, 386 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Rosenshein v. Kleban, 918 F. Supp. 98, 106 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 7.1. Georgia v. United States Army Corps of Eng'rs, 302 F.3d 1242, 1249 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n10)Footnote 7.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(3).

(n11)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)-(3).

(n12)Footnote 9. See § 14.121.

(n13)Footnote 9.1. Georgia v. Ashcroft, 539 U.S. 461, 476-477, 123 S. Ct. 2498, 156 L. Ed. 2d 428, 449 (2003) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Smith v. Marsh, 194 F.3d 1045, 1050-1051 (9th Cir. 1999) (intervention should be denied when applicants for intervention seek to inject new issues and matters that are well beyond scope of party's claims and defenses, thus expanding scope of litigation and causing delay).

(n15)Footnote 2. Meyer Goldberg, Inc. v. Goldberg, 717 F.2d 290, 293-294 (6th Cir. 1983) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Taylor Communications Group, Inc. v. Southwestern Bell Tel. Co., 172 F.3d 385, 389-390 (5th Cir. 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 930 (1999) .

(n17)Footnote 4. League of United Latin Am. Citizens v. Clements, 884 F.2d 185, 189 (5th Cir. 1989) (county not allowed to intervene in action under Voting Rights Act that involved election process rather than individual judges, because its input would not significantly help develop relevant factual issues).

(n18)Footnote 5. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc. v. Tennessee Valley Auth., 340 F. Supp. 400, 408-409 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) (expertise of applicant would help clarify facts and issues).

(n19)Footnote 6. Getty Oil Co. v. Department of Energy, 865 F.2d 270, 277 (Temp. Emer. Ct. App. 1988) (when non-party presents no new questions, intervention should be denied; amicus curiae brief would be more efficient).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
B. PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.121

§ 14.121 Timeliness of Motion for Permissive Interventionn*

A court has discretion to deny a motion for permissive intervention if it is not timely. A trial court should determine timeliness from all the circumstances of the application, and, unless the trial court's discretion is abused, the court's ruling will not be disturbed on review. n1 In determining whether a motion for intervention is timely, a court must consider three factors: (1) the stage of the proceeding at which an applicant seeks to intervene; (2) the prejudice to other parties; and (3) the reason for and length of the delay. In measuring any delay in seeking intervention, the inquiry looks to when the intervenor first became aware that its interests would no longer be adequately protected by the parties. n2

The requirement of timeliness must be considered within the factual context of each case. Thus, the mere passage of a particular length of time does not render an application untimely; n3 rather, the important issue concerns actual proceedings of substance on the merits. Timeliness should not prevent intervention where an existing party induces the applicant to refrain from intervening. n4 Furthermore, the requirement that a motion to intervene be timely is not a tool of retribution meant to punish an applicant's tardiness. Rather, the requirement is meant to protect the rights of the original parties to an action. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionPermissive InterventionsCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimeliness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.10[1] (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1), (b)(2); San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. United States Dist. Court-- N. Dist., 187 F.3d 1096, 1100 (9th Cir. 1999) (if, however, district court did not base its decision on timeliness grounds and did not make any factual findings regarding timeliness, appellate court may consider issue de novo).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1), (b)(2). San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. United States Dist. Court-- N.

Dist., 187 F.3d 1096, 1100-1101 (9th Cir. 1999) (court concluded that motion to intervene was timely when applicant's interests were being effectively represented by plaintiffs up until filing of stipulated protective order, and although applicant waited 12 weeks before seeking to intervene after protective order was entered, this delay was not prejudicial).

(n4)Footnote 3. Smith v. Marsh, 194 F.3d 1045, 1050-1051 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. United States v. Alcan Aluminum, Inc., 25 F.3d 1174, 1181-1182 (3d Cir. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n6)Footnote 5. Sierra Club v. Espy, 18 F.3d 1202, 1205 (5th Cir. 1994) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
B. PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.122

§ 14.122 Conditional Right to Intervene Conferred by Statuten*

On timely application, n1 the court has discretion to permit anyone to intervene in an action when a statute of the United States confers a conditional right to intervene. n2 This means that when a statute grants such a conditional right, the court then has the discretion to determine whether intervention is appropriate under the circumstances. Rule 24(b)(1) does not mean that "permissive intervention" becomes "mandatory" merely because the conditions in a statute are met. A statute that is construed to permit conditional intervention is only a factor to consider in the court's discretion to allow intervention. n2.1 When an applicant relies on a conditional statutory right to intervene under Rule 24(b)(1)(A), n2.2 the applicant is in the same position as a someone seeking intervention under Rule 24(b)(1)(B), the "common question" permissive intervention rule. n2.3

The statute that confers a conditional right to intervene does serve to notify the trial court that Congress thought the intervenor might be in a category for which intervention may be appropriate. The court still has discretion to deny intervention in spite of the federal statute when it is determined that the intervention would cause undue delay or prejudice. n3

The following are examples of statutes that allow conditional intervention:

1. A court that is hearing a case brought under the Bankruptcy Code may permit a party in interest to intervene, either generally or with respect to a specific issue. The applicant must first show cause. n4 The term "party in interest" includes the debtor, the trustees, and the creditor. n5 Because all applicants are required to show cause in order to intervene, the right to intervene is permissive rather than absolute. The bankruptcy court has discretion to deny intervention to persons whose interests are already adequately represented by existing parties. n6

2. An interested party may intervene in a case under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, n7 which governs the clean-up of hazardous waste sites. The Act contains an intervention provision with language almost identical to the criteria set forth in Rule 24(a)(2), which governs non-statutory intervention as of right. n8 The court's "mandatory" evaluation of whether the applicant had met the multiple criteria of the CERCLA intervention statute is actually a condition on the right to intervene and, in reality, creates a permissive, conditional ability to intervene in such cases. n9

3. The Fair Labor Standards Act, which provides for both private actions and actions by the Secretary of Labor to remedy violations of the Act's provisions, also grants employees the conditional right to intervene in an action brought by a union representative. n10 Private parties may not intervene in an action brought by the Secretary of Labor under the Act. n11

4. The Equal Education Opportunities Act contains a provision conferring a conditional right to intervene in school desegregation proceedings to the parent or guardian of a child. n12 Intervention under this statute must be sought under Rule 24(b)(1), which governs permissive statutory intervention, rather than under Rule 24(a)(1), which governs unconditional statutory intervention as of right. n13

5. The United States may intervene in actions involving property affected by a tax lien. n14 The fact that the relevant statute provides for situations in which the application to intervene is denied indicates that the right to intervene in this context is conditional, rather than an unconditional Rule 24(a)(1) right. n15

6. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission or the United States Attorney General may intervene in private employment discrimination actions, provided the actions involve issues of general public importance. The court may, in its discretion, set limits or conditions, or deny intervention altogether. n16

7. The United States Attorney General may intervene in actions brought under the Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act, provided that the egregious or flagrant conditions addressed by the actions are pursuant to a pattern or practice of resistance to full enjoyment of the rights, privileges, or immunities protected by the constitution or federal laws. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionConditional Right to Intervene

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.12 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See § 14.121.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(A).

(n5)Footnote 2.2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(A).

(n6)Footnote 2.3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B).

(n7)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b); see § 14.120[2].

(n8)Footnote 4. 11 U.S.C. § 1109; Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2018(a).

(n9)Footnote 5. 11 U.S.C. § 1109(b).

(n10)Footnote 6. Fuel Oil Supply & Terminaling v. Gulf Oil Corp., 762 F.2d 1283, 1287 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n11)Footnote 7. 42 U.S.C. § 9601 et seq.

(n12)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

(n13)Footnote 9. United States v. Union Elec. Co., 64 F.3d 1152, 1160 (8th Cir. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 10. See 29 U.S.C. § 216(b); Mitchell v. McCorstin, 728 F.2d 1422, 1423 (11th Cir. 1984) (court held that statute confers only permissive, and not unconditional right).

(n15)Footnote 11. Marshall v. United States Postal Serv., 481 F. Supp. 179, 180 (D.D.C. 1979) .

(n16)Footnote 12. 20 U.S.C. § 1717.

(n17)Footnote 13. See United States v. Mississippi, 958 F.2d 112, 114-115 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n18)Footnote 14. 26 U.S.C. § 7424.

(n19)Footnote 15. Parker v. Brown, 570 F. Supp. 640, 642 (S.D. Ohio 1983) .

(n20)Footnote 16. 42 U.S.C. § 2000(e)-5(f)(1); see General Tel. Co. v. EEOC, 446 U.S. 318, 326, 100 S. Ct. 1698, 1704, 64 L. Ed. 2d 319, 327 (1980) (EEOC's enforcement authority supplements, rather than replaces, private cause of action).

(n21)Footnote 17. 42 U.S.C. § 1997c(a)(1).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
B. PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.123

§ 14.123 Permissive Intervention Based on Common Questions of Law or Factn*

Absent statutory authorization, n1 a court may exercise its discretionary power to grant permissive intervention only if the applicant demonstrates that there is: (1) a common question of law or fact; n2 (2) independent jurisdiction, if jurisdiction in the original action was based on diversity of citizenship; n3 and (3) a timely motion for intervention. n4 The decision whether to grant intervention under Rule 24(b)(1) depends on the facts of each case and is within the court's discretion. n5 Unlike the elements required for intervention as of right under Rule 24(a)(2), it is not necessary under Rule 24(b)(1)(B) that the applicant have an particular "interest" in the subject of the main action. n6

Courts have given the phrase "common question of law or fact" its plain meaning and have read it in the disjunctive. A showing of either a question of law or a question of fact in common between the main action and the applicant's claim or defense is all that is needed to vest judicial discretion to grant permissive intervention. n7 A common question of law exists if the intervenor has a claim against the defendant that is identical to a claim asserted by the existing plaintiff. Such a situation is particularly likely to arise in the context of a class action. n8 A common question of fact exists if evidence on the same issue is relevant to both an intervenor's claim and the claims in the underlying action. n9

In assessing whether the common question requisite is satisfied, a court may use its discretion to assess the potential gains or prejudice that would result if intervention is granted. Perhaps the most obvious benefits of intervention in general are the efficiency and consistency that result from resolving related issues in a single proceeding. Consequently, the goal of preventing a multiplicity of suits that involve common questions of law or fact should be central in any decision to grant or deny permissive intervention. n10

The degree of the "commonality" of law or fact required may depend in part on the nature of the requested intervention. A court may apply a less stringent standard if an applicant seeks intervention for a very limited purpose rather than full participation in the litigation. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionPermissive Interventions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.12 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. See § 14.122.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B); San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. United States Dist. Court-- N. Dist., 187 F.3d 1096, 1101 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 14.124[2].

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 14.121.

(n6)Footnote 5. San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. United States Dist. Court-- N. Dist., 187 F.3d 1096, 1100-1101 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B); SEC v. United States Realty & Improvement Co., 310 U.S. 434, 459, 60 S. Ct. 1044, 1055, 84 L. Ed. 1293, 1306 (1940) .

(n8)Footnote 7. McNeill v. New York City Hous. Auth., 719 F. Supp. 233, 250-251 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) ; Brooks v. Flagg Bros., Inc., 63 F.R.D. 409, 415 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) .

(n9)Footnote 8. Brown v. Eckerd Drugs, Inc., 663 F.2d 1268, 1278 (4th Cir. 1981) , vacated on other grounds, 457 U.S. 1128 (1982) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Bureerong v. Uvawas, 167 F.R.D. 83, 86 (C.D. Cal. 1996) (court granted permissive intervention to government, which intervened to seek stay of civil case and stay of discovery pending criminal trial regarding parallel allegations).

(n11)Footnote 10. See Security Ins. Co. v. Schipporeit, Inc., 69 F.3d 1377, 1381 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 11. United Nuclear Corp. v. Cranford Ins. Co., 905 F.2d 1424, 1427 (10th Cir. 1990) (when collateral party seeks permissive intervention solely to gain access to discovery subject to protective order, no particularly strong nexus of fact or law need exist between two suits).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
B. PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.124

§ 14.124 Permissive Intervention Proceduresn*

[1] Service of Motion on Existing Parties

Any person who wants to intervene in an action must serve a motion to intervene on the existing parties as provided in Rule 5. n1 The motion must state the grounds for the motion and must be accompanied by a pleading setting forth the claim or defense for which intervention is sought. n2 Unless they are identical, the applicant may not merely adopt the prior pleadings of an existing party. n3 Leave of court is not a prerequisite for the filing of a motion to intervene. However, the intervenor is not considered a party unless leave to intervene is granted. n4

A motion to intervene with the attached pleading must be served on all existing parties in the manner required by Rule 5. n5 Rule 5 provides that service is not required on a party that is in default unless the intervenor's pleading states a claim for relief against the defaulting party; and when relief is sought from a defaulting party, service is governed by Rule 4. n6

Compliance with service requirements is mandatory. However, a court will not necessarily deny a motion for technical noncompliance because a court has discretion to disregard purely formal defects in the absence of prejudice to the parties. n7 Whether to permit a procedurally defective motion to intervene is also within the sound discretion of the district court. n8

[2] Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Petitions to intervene must have an independent basis of subject matter jurisdiction. n1 The intervenor may plead a federal question claim or base jurisdiction on diversity of citizenship. Alternatively, it is sometimes possible for the intervenor who lacks diversity or a federal claim to demonstrate supplemental jurisdiction. n2 Thus, in any civil action in which a district court has original jurisdiction, the court may exercise supplemental jurisdiction over all other claims that are so related to claims in the action that they form part of the same constitutional case or controversy. n3 Supplemental jurisdiction specifically includes claims such as intervention that involve additional parties. n4

[3] Venue

When a person makes a motion to intervene as a plaintiff or a defendant, the person has no control over venue, and may not object to the venue chosen for the action; because the intervenor specifically invoked the jurisdiction of the court, any potential venue objections are considered waived. Other parties also may not object. If intervention is as of right, existing parties may not object that venue is incorrect as to the intervenor, because the intervenor has a right to participate in the action. However, an applicant seeking permissive intervention may be required to meet the venue requirements. If venue issues would have prevented joinder of a party as a plaintiff under Rule 19, the same issues serve as a barrier to intervention. n1 However, venue is not a jurisdictional prerequisite, and the fact that the venue was incorrect as to the original plaintiff should not prevent intervention by a plaintiff as to whom venue is proper. n2

[4] Court's Discretion to Formulate Intervention Order to Further Purposes of Intervention

The trial court is not required to make an "all or nothing" decision regarding intervention. Thus, a trial court is not restricted to either granting unlimited intervention or denying the motion entirely. The court may grant intervention wit h specific conditions imposed, such as, limits on the intervenor's right to conduct discovery or to assert certain types of claims, n1 provided that the customized order has the effect of minimizing potential delay and confusion and is within the district court's discretion. n2 For example, the district court has the authority to grant a motion for intervention for a specific, limited purpose, such as, for the purpose of modifying a protective order. In such a case, the court may limit the intervenor's access to discovery material that is in controversy to retain protection for items that would not ordinarily be discoverable on account of privileges or irrelevance. n3 Another situation in which the court may grant limited intervention involves intervention by a state attorney general to present a case concerning the constitutionality of a state statute. Intervention for this purpose is authorized pursuant to a federal statute. n4

As an alternative to intervention, a court may allow an applicant to participate as an amicus curiae. Amicus status allows the applicant to present legal arguments, and, in some cases, to call and cross-examine witnesses. n5 Participation as an amicus curiae, rather than as a party, is particularly appropriate if the applicant has an interest in the legal principles that apply to a dispute but has no personal, legally protectable interest in the litigation. n6

[5] Appeals and Intervention

[a] Appealability of Decision on Motion for Intervention

An order must be final in order to be appealable. n1 It has been held that an outright denial of a nonparty applicant's motion to intervene is immediately appealable because it is a final collateral order under section 1291. The rationale for this holding is that once intervention has been denied the putative intervenor may not appeal from any subsequent order or judgment in the proceeding. Thus, in the absence of immediate appellate review, a denial of intervention becomes effectively unreviewable. n2 However, an applicant may not immediately appeal denial of intervention as of right if permissive intervention is granted, even if the court places restrictions on the grant of permissive intervention, at least when the restriction is imposed in an effort to minimize delay and confusion. n3

[b] Standard of Review

The standard of review on appeal is dependent on the type of issue. A determination of the timeliness of a motion to intervene is committed to the discretion of the district court and will not be disturbed on appeal except for an abuse of discretion. n4 This rule results because timeliness is an issue that the court must determine from all the circumstances in the court's exercise of sound discretion. n5 However, if the district court fails to make express findings on the issue of timeliness, a court of appeals must review the ultimate determination under a de novo standard. n6

With regard to the issue of a whether an applicant may intervene as of right under Rule 24(a)(2), Courts of Appeals for the Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Circuits have held that intervention as of right decisions are reviewed de novo. n7 On the other hand, the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Circuits use an abuse of discretion standard. n8 Under this standard, the appellate court will not reverse a determination regarding intervention under Rule 24(a)(2) unless the district court has applied an improper legal standard or reached a decision that is clearly incorrect. n9 The District of Columbia Circuit uses a mixed approach. When the district court's ruling on a motion to intervene as of right is based on questions of law, a de novo standard of review is applied. When the decision is based on questions of fact, it is reviewed for abuse of discretion. n10

With regard to the issue of a whether an applicant may permissively intervene in a case, a district court's denial of permissive intervention under Rule 24(b) will be reversed only for abuse of discretion. n11 However, at least one circuit has held that although the motion for permissive intervention is directed to the sound discretion of the district court, if the district court's decision turns on a legal question, its underlying legal determination is subject to de novo review. n12

[c] Intervention for Purposes of Appealing Trial Court Decision

A court generally will not allow intervention following a judgment; it is disfavored because it tends to foster delay and to prejudice adjudication of the rights of the original parties. n13 However, a court may allow a person to intervene for the purpose of appealing a decision that the existing parties have decided not to pursue, provided the party meets all of the requirements for intervention and acts promptly after the entry of final judgment, n14 and provided that the person had not earlier asserted that the person would not wish to participate in the litigation. n15

When making a motion, the applicant on appeal must move to intervene for the purpose of appeal, rather than merely moving to appeal; as a non-party, the applicant has no right to appeal the judgment unless the court grants intervention. n16 The general rule is that a post-judgment motion to intervene is timely if it is filed promptly after the entry of final judgment, in view of all the circumstances. n17

The timeliness of a motion to intervene must be considered in light of the purpose for which intervention is sought, the need for intervention as a method of preserving the applicant's rights, and the possibility of prejudice to the existing parties. Consequently, postjudgment intervention is often permitted when the prospective intervenor's interest did not arise until the appellate stage or where intervention would not unduly prejudice the existing parties. n17.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionPermissive Interventions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice, § 24.20, et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(D), 24(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c).

(n4)Footnote 3. Retired Chicago Police Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584, 595 (7th Cir. 1993) (differences between motions to intervene and complaint which applicant attempted to adopt by reference were too significant to allow waiver of Rule 24(c) procedural requirements).

(n5)Footnote 4. White v. Texas Am. Bank/Galleria, N.A., 958 F.2d 80, 82-84 (5th Cir. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(c).

(n7)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a)(1)(D); Fed. R. Civ. P. 4.

(n8)Footnote 7. Beckman Indus., Inc. v. International Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 470, 474 (9th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 868 (1992) (failure to submit pleading was not ground for reversal of grant of permissive intervention because applicant's petition had described basis for intervention with sufficient specificity).

(n9)Footnote 8. Retired Chicago Police Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584, 595 (7th Cir. 1993) (court did not abuse its discretion in denying motions to intervene that were not accompanied by pleadings, despite applicants' attempt to incorporate complaint by reference).

(n10)Footnote 1. Beckham Indus., Inc. v. International Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 470, 473 (9th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 868 (1992) (intervention requires independent jurisdictional grounds).

(n11)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n12)Footnote 3. See Somerset Pharms., Inc. v. Kimball, 49 F. Supp. 2d 1335, 1344 (M.D. Fla. 1999) (refusing supplemental jurisdiction because instant case was not closely related to claim in question).

(n13)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19.

(n15)Footnote 2. Hackner v. Guaranty Trust Co., 117 F.2d 95, 98 (2d Cir. 1941) , cert. denied, 313 U.S. 559 (1941) .

(n16)Footnote 1. Stringfellow v. Concerned Neighbors in Action, 480 U.S. 370, 378, 107 S. Ct. 1177, 94 L. Ed. 2d 389 (1987) .

(n17)Footnote 2. See Security Ins. Co. v. Schipporeit, Inc., 69 F.3d 1377, 1381 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 3. Grove Fresh Distribs., Inc. v. Everfresh Juice Co., 24 F.3d 893, 896 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n19)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 2403(b).

(n20)Footnote 5. United States v. Brooks, 164 F.R.D. 501, 507 (D. Or. 1995) (court denied intervention to residuary beneficiary of estate that was sued by government to recover tax refunds paid erroneously but granted amicus participation to applicant).

(n21)Footnote 6. See Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 24 F.3d 958, 961 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n22)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n23)Footnote 2. Rhode Island v. EPA, 378 F.3d 19, 26 (1st Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n24)Footnote 3. Stringfellow v. Concerned Neighbors in Action, 480 U.S. 370, 380, 107 S. Ct. 1177, 94 L. Ed. 2d 389 (1987) (grant of permissive intervention with conditions is not immediately appealable).

(n25)Footnote 4. San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. United States Dist. Court-- N. Dist., 187 F.3d 1096, 1100 (9th Cir. 1999) .

(n26)Footnote 5. NAACP v. New York, 413 U.S. 345, 366, 93 S. Ct. 2591, 37 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1973) .

(n27)Footnote 6. San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. United States Dist. Court-- N. Dist., 187 F.3d 1096, 1100 (9th Cir. 1999) ; Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 999-1000 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n28)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Ceres Gulf v. Cooper, 957 F.2d 1199, 1202 (5th Cir. 1992) ; Grubbs v. Norris, 870

F.2d 343, 345 (6th Cir. 1989) ; Sierra Club v. Robertson, 960 F.2d 83, 85 (8th Cir. 1992) ; League of United Latin Am. Citizens v. Wilson, 131 F.3d 1297, 1302 (9th Cir. 1997) ; DeJulius v. New Eng. Health Care Emples. Pension Fund, 429 F.3d 935, 942-943 (10th Cir. 2005) ; Walters v. City of Atlanta, 803 F.2d 1135, 1151 n.16 (11th Cir. 1986) .

(n29)Footnote 8. See, e.g., International Paper Co. v. Town of Jay, Me., 887 F.2d 338, 344 (1st Cir. 1989) ; American Lung Ass'n v. Reilly, 962 F.2d 258, 261 (2d Cir. 1992) ; Brody v. Spang, 957 F.2d 1108, 1115 (3d Cir. 1992) ; In re Sierra Club, 945 F.2d 776, 779 (4th Cir. 1991) .

(n30)Footnote 9. Brody v. Spang, 957 F.2d 1108, 1115 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n31)Footnote 10. Mova Pharm. Corp. v. Shalala, 140 F.3d 1060, 1074 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (when issues raised on appeal were pure questions of law, court applied de novo standard of review).

(n32)Footnote 11. DeJulius v. New Eng. Health Care Emples. Pension Fund, 429 F.3d 935, 942-943 (10th Cir. 2005) ; Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 995, 1006 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n33)Footnote 12. San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. United States Dist. Court-- N. Dist., 187 F.3d 1096, 1100-1101 (9th Cir. 1999) ; cf. Pansy v. Borough of Stroudsburg, 23 F.3d 772, 777 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n34)Footnote 13. Minnesota Milk Producers Ass'n v. Glickman, 153 F.3d 632, 646 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n35)Footnote 14. Ross v. Marshall, 426 F.3d 745, 754-755 (5th Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n36)Footnote 15. See Yniguez v. Arizona, 939 F.2d 727, 738 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n37)Footnote 16. Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 993 (5th Cir. 1996) (en banc).

(n38)Footnote 17. United Airlines, Inc. v. McDonald, 432 U.S. 385, 395-396, 97 S. Ct. 2464, 53 L. Ed. 2d 423 (1977) .

(n39)Footnote 17.1. Acree v. Republic of Iraq, 370 F.3d 41, 50 (D.C. Cir. 2004) ; see Nextel Communs., Inc. v. Town of Hanson, 311 F. Supp. 2d 142, 153 (D. Mass. 2004) (court should consider following factors in timeliness determination: (1) how long applicant for intervention knew or reasonably should have known that its interests were imperiled; (2) foreseeable prejudice to parties if intervention is allowed; (3) foreseeable prejudice to applicant if intervention is denied; and (4) any exceptional circumstances).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART IV. INTERVENTION
B. PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14.125through 14.139

[Reserved]

§§ 14.125[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART V. CROSS CLAIM

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.140

§ 14.140 Nature of Cross Claimn*

A cross-claim is an affirmative claim for relief against a co-party. A cross claim may, but need not always, assert a right to indemnification or contribution by the first party against the other. n1 Cross-claims have thus been defined as any claims brought against a co-party to the current litigation. n2

A cross-claim is not a pleading but must be set forth in a pleading. For example, a cross claim is not a pleading such as the defendant's answer n3 and should not be filed as a pleading. Thus, when a document that was labeled simply "Cross-Claims" was filed independently of any other pleading, the court properly struck the document, and the signing attorney was subject to a Rule 11 reprimand. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 13.60 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. In re Oil Spill by Amoco Cadiz, 699 F.2d 909, 913 (7th Cir. 1983) (owner of supertanker causing oil spill permitted to cross-claim against builder of ship for indemnification and contribution).

(n3)Footnote 2. Federal Land Bank v. Cupples Bro., 116 F.R.D. 63, 65 (E.D. Ark. 1987) (claim filed against adverse party rather than co-party is not cross-claim); Earle M. Jorgenson Co. v. T.I.U.S., Ltd., 133 F.R.D. 472 (E.D. Pa. 1991) (noting that "co-party" is not technically defined by the rules, court concluded that co-party is any party that is not "opposing party" on pleaded claim; therefore, third-party defendant was a co-party of non-impleading-defendant and cross-claim by non-impleading-defendant was proper).

(n4)Footnote 3. Cf. Bernstein v. IDT Corp., 582 F. Supp. 1079, 1089 (D. Del. 1984) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Langer v. Monarch Life Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 786 (3d Cir. 1992) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART V. CROSS CLAIM

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.141

§ 14.141 Requirements for Cross Claimsn*

[1] Same Transaction or Occurrence or Property as Underlying Claim

A pleading may state as a cross-claim any claim by one party against a co-party arising out of the same transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the original action or of a counterclaim. n1 Similarly, a pleading may state as a cross-claim any claim by one party against a co-party relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action. n2 When appropriate, a cross-claim may request declaratory relief if the requirements for pleading the existence of a "case or controversy" between the parties are otherwise met. n3

The analysis for determining whether a cross-claim arises out of the same transaction or occurrence is the same as that for determining whether a counterclaim is compulsory. n4 However, it must be noted that a cross-claim is a permissive claim, and if the pleader chooses not to raise a cross-claim in the original action it will not be barred in a subsequent independent action. n5 A co-party may raise as many cross-claims as it has against another co-party, provided that the transactional requirement of Rule 13(g) is satisfied. n6

[2] Cross Claim May Only be Made Against Co-Party

A party may plead a cross-claim only against co-parties. n1 The term "co-party" is not defined in the rules but several decisions describe a co-party as any party that is not an opposing party. n2 Co-parties have also been described as parties on the same side of the primary litigation. n3 For example, co-defendants are co-parties who are eligible to plead cross-claims against each other. For purposes of the compulsory counterclaim rule, it is important to note that courts have held that once a party brings a cross-claim against a co-party, the cross-claimant becomes an opposing party against whom the defending party must then assert any compulsory counterclaims. n4

A pleading may state as a cross-claim a claim that the party against whom it is asserted is or may be liable to the cross-claimant for all or part of a claim asserted in the action against the cross-claimant. Therefore, a cross-claim is not required to be mature at the time it is originally asserted. n5

Some courts have held that impleaded third-party defendants may be co-parties with the impleading defendant. In other words, courts are in disagreement as to whether co-defendants on different levels of an expanded litigation, such as an original defendant and a third-party defendant, may plead cross-claims against each other. There are situations where, after a third-party defendant is properly impleaded, either the third-party plaintiff or the third-party defendant may decide to file cross-claims. Some courts permit cross-claims between original defendants and third-party defendants, n6 reasoning that the policy of the rules encouraging the disposition of related claims in a single action encourages the inclusion of such claims, which by definition relate to the same subject matter as the original action and any related counterclaims. n7 Other courts permit an original defendant to cross-claim against a third-party defendant only if the plaintiff impleaded the party or, when the third-party defendant was impleaded by a different existing co-defendant. n8 The principles of sovereign immunity apply to cross-claims against government entities; however, under some circumstances, the government may waive the immunity. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsPermissive Cross-ClaimsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsTransactional Requirement

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 13.70 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n3)Footnote 2. Allstate Ins. Co. v. James, 779 F.2d 1536, 1539 (11th Cir. 1986) (although court used "same transaction or occurrence" language, fact pattern also fell within "relating to any property that is subject matter of original action" basis for allowable cross-claims).

(n4)Footnote 3. Seattle Audubon Soc'y v. Lyons, 871 F. Supp. 1286, 1290 (W.D. Wash. 1994) (in action challenging legality of forest management plan, cross-claims were permitted for declaratory relief by federal government defendants against intervening timber industry defendants, as claims satisfied "actual controversy" requirement and arose out of occurrence that was subject matter of action).

(n5)Footnote 4. Seattle Audubon Soc'y v. Lyons, 871 F. Supp. 1286, 1290 (W.D. Wash. 1994) (in action challenging legality of forest management plan, cross-claims for declaratory relief by federal government defendants against intervening timber industry defendants arose out of same occurrence as subject matter of main claim which concerned federal management of forests containing endangered species habitat).

(n6)Footnote 5. United States v. Confederate Acres Sanitary Sewage & Drainage Sys., Inc., 935 F.2d 796, 799 (6th Cir. 1991) (potential cross-claims for Fifth Amendment taking were not presented by defendant, and court could not compel defendant to litigate such potential claims, because cross-claims are permissive).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 18(a).

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g).

(n9)Footnote 2. Earle M. Jorgenson Co. v. T.I.U.S., Ltd., 133 F.R.D. 472 (E.D. Pa. 1991) ; Georgia Ports Auth. v. Construzioni Meccaniche Industriali Genovesi, S.P.A., 119 F.R.D. 693, 695 (S.D. Ga. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Federal Land Bank v. Cupples Bro., 116 F.R.D. 63, 65 (E.D. Ark. 1987) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Rainbow Management Group, Ltd. v. Atlantis Submarines Haw., L.P., 158 F.R.D. 656, 660 (D. Haw. 1994) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n12)Footnote 5. Glaziers & Glassworkers Union Local 252 Annuity Fund v. Newbridge Sec., Inc., 823 F. Supp. 1191, 1193 (E.D. Pa. 1993) (cross-claim may be asserted against co-party who is or may be liable to cross-claimant).

(n13)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14 (third-party practice).

(n14)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Earle M. Jorgenson Co. v. T.I. United States, Ltd., 133 F.R.D. 472, 474 (E.D. Pa. 1991) .

(n15)Footnote 8. International Paving Sys., Inc. v. Van-Tulco, Inc., 866 F. Supp. 682, 695 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n16)Footnote 9. See United States v. 255. 21 Acres in Anne Arundel County, Md., 722 F. Supp. 235, 236 (D. Md. 1989) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART V. CROSS CLAIM

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.142

§ 14.142 Jurisdictional Issuesn*

[1] Basis of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Under the supplemental jurisdiction statute, a court has jurisdiction over a cross-claim if it is so related to claims over which the court has original jurisdiction that they form part of the same case or controversy. As cross-claims by definition arise out of the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim, courts have consistently exercised supplemental jurisdiction over them. n1

Supplemental jurisdiction is not limited to federal question cases and may be invoked when the court's original basis of jurisdiction is diversity of citizenship. n2 The statute provides that the court will not have supplemental jurisdiction over claims by plaintiffs against certain third or joined parties if joinder "would be inconsistent with the jurisdictional requirements of § 1332. However, the text of the statute does not prohibit supplemental jurisdiction for claims of defendants asserting cross-claims. n3

Unless it falls within the supplemental jurisdiction of the court, a cross-claim in an action based on diversity jurisdiction must satisfy the jurisdictional amount. n4 However, if the cross-claim forms part of same case or controversy as the main claim, at least one circuit has held that under the supplemental jurisdiction statute the court in its discretion may exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a cross-claim not meeting the jurisdictional amount. n5

[2] Personal Jurisdiction

A court does not necessarily have personal jurisdiction over a cross-defendant, who may raise the same jurisdictional defenses against the cross-claimant as against the plaintiff. n1 Furthermore, some courts have found that jurisdictional defenses are not waived by filing permissive counterclaims or cross-claims. n2 If, however, a court has in personam jurisdiction over a defendant for purposes of the main claim, it will have jurisdiction for purposes of a cross-claim which arises out the same transaction or occurrence as the original action. n3

[3] Joinder of Additional Parties

Rule 13(h) permits the joinder of parties under Rules 19 or 20 required for the granting of complete relief in the determination of a cross-claim, provided that jurisdiction of the parties can be obtained n1 and their joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the action. n2

It is important to distinguish when a party may be joined under the provisions of the rules governing joinder of additional parties and when a party may be brought in under the third-party practice rule. n3 In order to bring a third-party complaint, the requirements of the third-party practice rule, Rule 14, must be satisfied. Rule 13(h) does not apply to third-party claims. n4 Rule 13(h) should not be used as an end-run around Rule 14(a). The rule governing joinder of parties to cross-claims and counterclaims authorizes the court only to join additional persons in order to adjudicate a claim that is already before the court. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionSupplemental JurisdictionSame Case & ControversyCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-Claims

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 13.110 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a); Allstate Ins. Co. v. James, 779 F.2d 1536, 1539 (11th Cir. 1986) (mortgagee's cross-claims seeking foreclosure against mortgagors defaulting on note arose out of same transaction or occurrence as insurer's declaratory judgment claims regarding fire insurance policy on property and were within ancillary [now supplemental] jurisdiction).

(n3)Footnote 2. Cam-Ful Indus., Inc. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 922 F.2d 156, 160-161 (2d Cir. 1991) (court had ancillary [now supplemental] jurisdiction to hear cross-claims between contractor and subcontractor for compensation for additional work done at request of contractor, for delays, and for liquidated damages, because cross-claims were logically related to main claim by subcontractor against surety on payment bond and satisfied test for common nucleus of operative facts); cf. Shanaghan v. Cahill, 58 F.3d 106, 109-111 (4th Cir. 1995) (supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367 not limited to cases when original basis for jurisdiction was federal question).

(n4)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n5)Footnote 4. Kuhn v. Account Control Technology, Inc., 865 F. Supp. 1443, 1446 (D. Nev. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Shanaghan v. Cahill, 58 F.3d 106, 109-111 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Chemco Int'l Leasing, Inc. v. Meridian Eng'g, Inc., 590 F. Supp. 539, 544 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) .

(n8)Footnote 2. Gates Learjet Corp. v. Jensen, 743 F.2d 1325, 1330 n.1 (9th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1066 (1985) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Chemco Int'l Leasing, Inc. v. Meridian Eng'g, Inc., 590 F. Supp. 539, 544 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) (court had jurisdiction over cross-claim arising from same transaction as subject matter of original action when plaintiff was properly before court on main claim).

(n10)Footnote 1. See [2], above.

(n11)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(h), 18, 19; Danner v. Himmelfarb, 858 F.2d 515, 521-524 (9th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1067 (1989) (although court had jurisdiction to hear state law cross-claims, it did not abuse its discretion in dismissing them after federal claims were resolved).

(n12)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 14.

(n13)Footnote 4. For a complete discussion of third-party practice, see §§ 14.50-14.59.

(n14)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(i); FDIC v. Bathgate, 27 F.3d 850, 873-874 (3d Cir. 1994) .

84 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14 MULTIPLE PARTY PRACTICE
PART V. CROSS CLAIM

2-14 Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14.143

§ 14.143 Pleading and Procedural Considerationsn*

The prudent attorney will ensure that all the following considerations have been made before filing a cross claim:

1. When the cross-claim is asserted in the pleading, the pleading must be served on a party or the party's attorney in accordance with the rules governing service. n1

2. Cross-claims for affirmative relief generally are subject to the operation of the applicable statutes of limitation. n2 However, if the main action is timely a claim for recoupment arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim and not seeking affirmative relief or relief different from that sought in the main claim relates back to the filing of the plaintiff's claim and is not time barred. n3 Statutes of limitation are considered substantive law and accordingly, in diversity actions or when the court has supplemental jurisdiction over a state-law claim, the state statute of limitation and related principles of tolling and relation back apply. n4

3. A court may enter a separate, final judgment on any claim at any time after making an express determination that there is no just reason for delay. n5 The power is discretionary and should be exercised in light of judicial administrative interests as well as the equities involved, giving weight to the historic federal policy against incremental appeals. n6 A cross-claim may survive a separate judgment on, or dismissal of, the main claim as long as the court retains jurisdiction over the claim. n7

4. A court may order cross-claims to be heard in a separate trial, in furtherance of judicial convenience, to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to expedition and economy. n8 The issue to be tried must be so distinct and separate from others that trial of it alone may be had without injustice. n9

5. A party may obtain an immediate appeal from a separate judgment on a cross-claim that was certified for appeal under the rules; other separate appeals from orders regarding cross-claims are generally interlocutory. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsCross-ClaimsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 3 Moore's Federal Practice, § 13.91 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4; Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n3)Footnote 2. Cf. Berger v. City of N. Miami, Fla., 820 F. Supp. 989, 992 (E.D. Va. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Berger v. City of N. Miami, Fla., 820 F. Supp. 989, 992 (E.D. Va. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fluor Eng'rs & Constructors, Inc. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 753 F.2d 444, 448 (5th Cir. 1985) (Texas statute governing tolling of statute of limitation applied to pendent state-law cross-claim).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(i); see Leon Tempelsman and Son v. TECC Corp., 107 F.R.D. 384, 385 (N.D. Tex. 1985) (although Rule 13(i) allows court to separate claims for trial and judgment, ultimate purpose is conservation of judicial resources by joining all claims between parties in one law suit).

(n8)Footnote 7. Molett v. Penrod Drilling Co., 919 F.2d 1000, 1004 (5th Cir. 1990) (although supplemental claim must be dismissed if principal claims are dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, court may consider supplemental cross-claims after disposing of main claim within court's jurisdiction on diversity grounds).

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(i); Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b).

(n10)Footnote 9. Danner v. Himmelfarb, 858 F.2d 515, 522 (9th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1067 (1989) (court severed cross-claims under federal securities law pursuant to Rule 42(b) for separate trial before trial of original foreclosure action).

(n11)Footnote 10. Tenneco, Inc. v. Saxony Bar & Tube, Inc., 776 F.2d 1375, 1378 (7th Cir. 1985) (party may obtain immediate appeal from separate judgment of counterclaim or cross-claim certified under Rule 13(i) or Rule 54(b) but not from interlocutory housekeeping order governing timing of disposition of different aspects of dispute).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

2-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure 14A.syn

§ 14A.syn Synopsis to Chapter 14A: CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

§ 14A.01 Purposes and Nature of Class Action

[1] Fundamental Purpose Is to Allow Economical and Fair Presentation of Numerous Claims

[2] Representative Aspect of Class Action

[3] Purpose of Class Action Rule Controls Its Interpretation

§ 14A.02 Interaction of Class Action Procedural Rule With Federal Statutes and Federal Court Local Rules

[1] Substantive Statute's Effect on Applicability of Federal Rules

[a] Certain Statutory Actions Not Controlled by Rule 23

[b] Statutes That Vary Use of Rule 23 Class Action Procedure

[2] Effect of Local Rules

§ 14A.03 District Court Has Discretion Regarding Class Action Determinations

§§ 14A.04through 14A.09 [Reserved]

§ 14A.10 Plaintiffs in Class Action Must Establish Federal Court Jurisdiction

§ 14A.11 Class Action Based on Federal Question Jurisdiction

§ 14A.12 Interstate Class Action Jurisdiction Under Class Action Fairness Act

[1] Function and Purpose of Act

[a] Act Expands Federal Court Subject Matter Jurisdiction for Many Interstate Class Actions

[b] Jurisdictional Purposes of Class Action Fairness Act

[c] Act Provides for Easier Removal of Interstate Class Actions From State Court

[2] Applicability of Act

[a] Act Applies Only to Class Actions and Mass Actions

[b] Act Applies Only to Civil Class Actions Filed After Effective Date

[c] Minimal Diversity Requirement

[d] Amount in Controversy Requirements

[e] District Court Must Decline Jurisdiction Under Act if Class Action Is Primarily Localized

[f] District Court Has Discretion to Decline Jurisdiction Under Act if Class Action Is Slightly Localized

§ 14A.13 Class Action Jurisdiction Based on Traditional Complete Diversity

[1] Citizenship of Parties Based on Named Plaintiffs

[2] Traditional Amount in Controversy Requirement for Class Action Claims

[a] Aggregation of Claims

[b] Effect of Principle of Supplemental Jurisdiction

[c] Severance of Plaintiffs That Do Not Have Minimum Claim

§ 14A.14 Mootness Doctrine Applied in Class Actions

§§ 14A.15through 14A.19 [Reserved]

§ 14A.20 Summary of Prerequisites to Class Action

§ 14A.21 Named Representative Is Member of Defined Class

[1] Court Must Precisely Define Class

[2] Definition Must Enable Identification of Class Members

[3] Court May Modify Order of Definition

§ 14A.22 Impracticability of Joinder of All Members Because of Numerosity

[1] Statement of Prerequisite of Impracticability Due to Numerosity

[2] Factors Considered in Determination of Impracticability

[3] Burden of Proof of Impracticability

§ 14A.23 Commonality of Legal or Factual Issues

[1] Factors Used to Determine Commonality

[2] Interaction of Commonality With Other Class Action Requirements

[3] Burden of Proof of Commonality

§ 14A.24 Typicality of Claims and Defenses of Representatives With Those of Class

[1] Statement of Typicality Requirement

[2] Characteristics of Typicality of Claims or Defenses

[3] Factors Indicating Lack of Typicality of Claims or Defenses

[4] Interaction of Typicality With Other Class Action Requirements

[5] Burden of Proof of Typicality

§ 14A.25 Adequacy of Representation

[1] Significance of Adequacy of Representation

[2] Qualified and Competent Legal Counsel

[a] Adequacy of Class Legal Representation

[b] Class Counsel May Not Have Conflict With Class

[3] Representative's Interest in Outcome to Ensure Vigorous Advocacy

[a] Vigorous Prosecution Indicates Adequate Representation

[b] Motivation for Vigorous Prosecution

[c] Ability to Finance Litigation

[4] Absence of Antagonistic or Conflicting Claims with Other Class Members

[a] Requirement Is Based on Fiduciary Nature of Class Representation

[b] Factors That Indicate That Representation Is Adequate Despite Conflict

[c] Factors That Indicate That Representation Is Inadequate Due to Conflict

[5] Interaction of Adequacy Determination With Other Class Action Requirements

[6] Burden of Proof of Adequacy of Representation

[7] Court's Determination of Adequacy of Representation

§§ 14A.26through 14A.29 [Reserved]

§ 14A.30 Summary of Three Types of Class Actions Under Federal Civil Rules

[1] Three Types of Class Actions Permissible in Federal Court

[2] Court's Discretion to Designate Type When Claims Qualify Under More Than One Type of Class Action

§ 14A.31 Class Action Commenced to Prevent Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications

[1] Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications That Would Pose Risk to Party Opposing Class

[a] Requirements for Prosecution of Class Action Based on Risk Posed to Party Opposing Class

[b] Actual Risk of Initiation of Separate Actions

[c] Separate Action Would Create Risk of Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications

[d] Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications Would Impose Incompatible Standards of Conduct on Party Opposing Class

[e] Certification of Class of Defendants

[f] Notice Is Not Absolute Right of Class Members

[g] Class Members Do Not Have Right to Opt Out

[2] Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications That Would Pose Risk to Members of Class

[a] Requirements for Prosecution of Class Action When Risk Is Posed to Members of Class

[b] Applicability to Cases Seeking Money Damages From Common, Limited Source of Funds

[i] Limited Fund Class Action Requirements

[ii] Showing Required for Limited Fund Class Action

[c] Claimants Requesting Declaratory or Injunctive Relief Regarding Common Right

[d] Certification of Class of Defendants

[e] Notice Is Not Absolute Right of Class Members

[f] Class Members Do Not Have Right to Opt Out

§ 14A.32 Class Action to Obtain Injunctive or Declaratory Relief with Respect to Entire Class

[1] Elements of Injunctive or Declaratory Relief Class Action

[2] Party Opposing Class Must Have Acted or Refused to Act in Manner Applicable to Class as Group

[3] Request for Injunctive Relief Must Predominate

[a] Only Incidental Monetary Damages Permitted

[b] Requested Declaratory Relief Must Correspond to Injunction

[4] Function of Injunctive Relief Class Action

[5] Certification of Class of Defendants

[6] Notice Is Not Absolute Right of Class Members

[7] Class Members Do Not Have Right to Opt Out

§ 14A.33 Class Action Based on Common Questions of Law or Fact

[1] Statement of Requirements

[2] Predominance Requirement

[a] Factors Court Should Consider

[b] Court's Determination of Predominance

[3] Superiority Requirement

[a] Factors Court Should Consider When Comparing Class Action to Individual Lawsuits

[b] Court's Consideration of Alternative Procedural Methods

[c] Court's Determination of Superiority

[4] Factors for Court Consideration in Both Predominance and Superiority Determinations

[a] Listed Factors Are Guidelines

[b] Individual's Interest in Controlling Separate Litigation

[c] Nature and Extent of Pending Litigation Involving Class Members

[d] Desirability of Concentrating All Claims in Single Forum

[e] Manageability of Class Action

[i] Discretion of Court

[ii] Manageability Factors

[5] Notice to Members When Class Is Based on Common Questions of Law or Fact

[a] Notice Is Mandatory

[b] Required Contents

[c] Persons Entitled to Notice

[d] Method of Notification of Class Members

[e] Appearance by Counsel

[f] Right of Member to Opt Out of Class

[g] Amendment or Correction of Notice

[h] Payment of Expense of Notice

[i] Appeal of Certain Court Orders Regarding Notice

§§ 14A.34through 14A.39 [Reserved]

§ 14A.40 Pleading May Initiate Class Action

[1] Court's Certification of Based on Allegations of Complaint

[2] Motion for Class Certification

§ 14A.41 Purpose of Certification

§ 14A.42 Court's Discretion to Grant or Deny Certification

§ 14A.43 Consideration of Merits by Court in Ruling on Certification

§ 14A.44 Certification Procedures

[1] Time of Certification by Court

[2] Court May Allow Discovery on Certification Issues

[3] Hearing to Determine Certification Issues

[4] Reference to Magistrate Judge Regarding Certification Issues

[5] Burden in Certification Determination Is on Proponent of Class Action

[6] Order of Court Granting or Denying Certification

[a] Form and Contents of Order

[b] Definition of Class

[c] Class Claims, Issues, and Defenses

[d] Definition of Subclasses

[e] Appointment of Class Counsel

[f] Modification of Certification Order and Decertification

[7] Court's Order Granting or Denying Certification

[a] No Immediate Appeal of Right

[b] Court of Appeals Has Discretion to Grant Immediate Review of Certification Order

[c] Factors Justifying Immediate Review

[d] No Automatic Stay if Immediate Appeal Is Allowed

§§ 14A.45through 14A.49 [Reserved]

§ 14A.50 District Court Must Appoint Class Counsel on Certification of Class Action

[1] District Court Must Appoint Class Counsel for Each Class or Subclass

[2] Court May Appoint Co-Representatives

[3] Appointment of Interim Class Counsel

§ 14A.51 Appointment Must Ensure Class Counsel Will Represent Entire Class

§ 14A.52 Qualifications of Class Counsel

[1] Court Must Consider Many Factors That Indicate Counsel's Ability to Represent Class

[2] Performance of Counsel on Claims in Current Litigation

[3] Counsel's Experience in Managing Class Actions and Claims Similar to Current Claim

[4] Counsel's Knowledge of Applicable Law

[5] Resources Counsel Will Commit to Represent Class

[6] Other Factors Indicative of Counsel's Qualifications to Represent Class

§ 14A.53 Procedures for Appointment of Class Counsel

[1] Court May Require That Counsel Submit Information

[2] Court's Appointment of Applicant

[a] Court May Select Only Qualified Applicant for Appointment

[b] Procedure When There Are No Qualified Applicants

[3] Appointment After Competitive Bidding

[4] Court's Order of Appointment of Class Counsel

§ 14A.54 Class Action Attorney's Fees and Costs

[1] Claims Must be Made by Motion at Time Set by Court

[2] Notice of Motion Claiming Fees and Costs Must Be Served on All Parties

[3] All Named Parties and Class Members Have Right to Object to Motion

[4] Amount of Fee Award in Class Action

[a] Substantive Grounds for Award of Fees

[b] Calculation of Reasonable Fees

[c] Calculation of Attorney's Fees in Coupon Settlement Cases

[i] Coupon Settlements Subject to Attorney's Fees

[ii] Limitations on Contingent Fees Related to Coupon Settlement

[iii] Limitations on Other Attorney's Fees in Coupon Settlements

[iv] Limitations on Attorney's Fees Calculated on Mixed Basis in Coupon Settlements

[5] Discretionary Hearing on Fees Motion

[6] Court Must State Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law on Fees Motion

[7] Reference to Master or to Magistrate Judge of Determination of Fee and Cost Award

§§ 14A.55through 14A.59 [Reserved]

§ 14A.60 Types of Orders Expressly Permitted by Rule

§ 14A.61 Orders Regulating Course of Proceedings and Presentation of Evidence and Argument

§ 14A.62 Orders Controlling Notice Other than Certification and Settlement

[1] Types of Notice That Court Has Discretion to Require

[2] Discretion of Court to Require Notice

[3] Options for Method of Notice

§ 14A.63 Orders Imposing Conditions on Representative Parties and Intervenors

[1] Discretion of Court to Impose Conditions on Representative Parties

[2] Discretion of Court to Impose Conditions on Intervenors

§ 14A.64 Orders Requiring Amendment of Pleadings to Eliminate Class Representation

§ 14A.65 Other Orders to Facilitate Class Action Procedures

§ 14A.66 Immediate Appeal of Class Action Procedural Orders Generally Not Allowed

§§ 14A.67through 14A.79 [Reserved]

§ 14A.80 Contents of Class Action Judgment

§ 14A.81 Preclusive Effects of Class Action Judgment

§§ 14A.82through 14A.89 [Reserved]

§ 14A.90 Certified Class Action Settlement, Voluntary Dismissal, or Compromise Requires Court Approval

[1] Requirement of Court Approval

[a] Review of Terms of Settlement, Dismissal, or Compromise

[b] Review of Attorney's Fees

[2] Settlements are Favored by Court

[3] Use and Certification of Settlement Class

§ 14A.91 Notice Requirements

[1] Notice Is a Prerequisite to Settlement Approval

[2] Contents and Method of Notice

[3] Court Has Discretion to Apportion Expense of Notice

§ 14A.92 Parties Requesting Approval of Settlement Must File Statement of Any Agreements Made in Connection with Settlement

[1] Parties' Written Disclosure Statement Must Identify All Related Agreements

[2] Parties Must Make Complete Disclosure

§ 14A.93 Factors Considered by Court in Determining Whether to Approve Settlement

[1] Court Should Approve Settlement Only if Settlement Is Fair, Reasonable, and Adequate

[2] Four Primary Factors for Court to Consider

[a] Settlement Is Based on Negotiation Rather Than Collusion

[b] Strength of Plaintiffs' Case Compared to Amount Offered in Settlement

[c] Input of Members of Class Regarding Settlement Proposal

[d] Stage of Litigation

[3] Court Must Make Findings Regarding Approval of Settlement

§ 14A.94 Class Members Have Right to Object to Proposed Settlement

[1] Court Must Receive and Respond to Objections Made by Class Members

[2] Class Members May Withdraw Objections Only on Permission of Court

§ 14A.95 Court May Grant Final Approval to Settlement Only After Holding Hearing

[1] Rule Explicitly Requires Hearing

[2] Time of Hearing

§ 14A.96 Court Has Discretion to Withhold Approval Unless Second Opt Out Is Allowed

[1] Court Has Discretion to Provide for Second Opt Out

[2] Court May Limit or Condition Second Opt Out

[3] Class Members Who Opt Out Are Not Bound by and May Not Share in Settlement

§ 14A.97 Settlement of Class Actions Subject to Class Action Fairness Act

[1] Actions That Are Subject to Class Action Fairness Act

[2] Court Approval of Coupon Settlement

[3] Court Approval of Net Loss Settlement

[4] Prohibition Against Court Approval of Settlement Providing for Payment Based on Geographic Location

[5] Requirement That Defendants Must Notify Federal and State Officials of Proposed Settlement

[a] Defendants Must Give Notice Within 10 Days After Filing Proposed Settlement

[b] Required Contents of Notice

[c] Effects of Failure to Comply

§ 14A.98 Enforcement of Court Approved Settlement Agreement

§ 14A.99 Appellate Review of Court Approved Settlement Agreement

[1] Standard of Review

[2] Persons Entitled to Appeal Approved Settlement

§§ 14A.100through 14A.109 [Reserved]

§ 14A.110 Function of Derivative Action

[1] Nature of Derivative Action

[2] Comparison With Direct Shareholder Action

[3] Comparison With Class Action

§ 14A.111 Federal Rules Govern Procedural Requirements for Derivative Actions

[1] Federal Rule Applicable Only to Procedure

[a] Derivative Action Procedure Requires Compliance with Procedural Rule

[b] Substantive Right to Derivative Claim Based on State Law

[2] Federal Rule Applicable Only to Actions Based on Derivative Claim

§ 14A.112 Prerequisites for Derivative Actions

[1] Stock Ownership Requirement

[a] Plaintiff Must Be Shareholder Throughout Litigation

[b] Exception for Continuing Wrong

[c] Substantive Law Generally Controls Ownership

[d] Double Derivative Suits

[e] Effect of Corporate Acquisition or Merger

[2] Demand on Corporation to Enforce Corporate Right

[a] Requirement of Demand

[b] Exceptions to Demand Requirement

[c] Contents of Demand

[d] Persons Who Must Receive Demand

[e] Timing of Demand

[f] Opportunity for Management to Respond

[g] Refusal to Comply With Demand May Be Justified by Business Judgment

[3] Adequacy of Representation

[a] Necessity of Adequate Representation

[b] Determination of Adequacy of Representation

§ 14A.113 Pleading Requirements for Complaint in Derivative Action

[1] Rule Does Not Have Substantive Requirements

[2] Allegations Required in Complaint

[3] Verification of Complaint

§ 14A.114 Procedural Considerations

[1] Diversity Jurisdiction

[a] Amount in Controversy

[b] Diversity of Citizenship

[2] Venue

[3] Service of Process

[4] Attorney's Representation of Corporation

[5] Privilege and Work Product

[6] Right to Jury Trial

[7] Costs and Attorney's Fees

[a] Prevailing Party in Derivative Action Entitled to Costs and Attorney's Fees

[b] Determination of Amount of Attorney's Fees

§ 14A.115 Compromise and Voluntary Dismissal of Derivative Action

[1] Substantive Requirements

[a] Court Approval Required

[b] Factors Considered Before Court Approval

[2] Procedural Requirements

[a] Notice to Shareholders Required

[b] Manner of Giving Notice

[c] Opportunity of Shareholders to Contest Settlement

[3] Appeal of Settlement

§§ 14A.116through 14A.129 [Reserved]

§ 14A.130 Unincorporated Entities and Its Members as Party to Suit

§ 14A.131 Status of Entity as Unincorporated Association

§ 14A.132 Status of Member of Unincorporated Association Determined by Ordinary Meaning

§ 14A.133 Requirements for Member as Representative of Class

[1] At Least One Member Must Be Named as Class Representative

[2] Named Members Must Adequately Represent Other Members and Association

§ 14A.134 Availability of Rule When Association Has Jural Capacity Under State Law

§ 14A.135 Procedural Considerations Regarding Unincorporated Association Class Suits

[1] Citizenship of Parties for Diversity Purposes

[2] Personal Jurisdiction

[3] Venue

§ 14A.136 Application of General Class Action Principles to Unincorporated Association Class Actions

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART I. FUNCTIONS OF CLASS ACTION IN FEDERAL COURT

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.01

§ 14A.01 Purposes and Nature of Class Actionn*

[1] Fundamental Purpose Is to Allow Economical and Fair Presentation of Numerous Claims

A "class action" is a civil action which is brought by one or more representatives on behalf of all members of a "class" who are requesting relief as a class. n1

The primary purpose of a class action is to obviate the need for many similarly situated claimants or defending parties to file or maintain separate lawsuits when impractical to do so. n2 Thus, a class action is a procedural device used by the courts to efficiently join numerous parties from multiple potential suits into a single suit n3 when the parties' claims or defenses have identical or similar questions of law and fact that arise from the same set of facts. n4 The class action procedure is designed to provide an economical, efficient, and expeditious device to litigate multiple claims by proceeding with one lawsuit, rather than prosecuting multiple lawsuits to decide the same issues. n5 Another purpose of the class action mechanism is to advance the efficiency of multi-party litigation by providing a mechanism for litigation of a combination of relatively small claims that no individual plaintiff would have the incentive to bring alone. n6

From the perspective of the defendant, a class action prevents repetitious litigation n7 by requiring a single proceeding for the defendant to litigate the merits of the plaintiffs' claims. A single proceeding also protects the defendant from inconsistent judgments. n8 To ensure the fairness of the class action mechanism, the procedure is also designed to consider fairly and adequately the interests of absentee class members. n9

[2] Representative Aspect of Class Action

Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which controls class action procedure, requires that a class action must be brought by one or more representatives on behalf of all of the members of a "class," n1 who are those persons encompassed by the court's description of the class. n2 Thus, a class action constitutes a procedural exception to the general rule that civil litigation must be conducted by and on behalf of the named parties only. n3 Class actions developed in equity as exceptions to the general rule to cover situations when the parties were extremely numerous and the court ascertained that it would be almost impossible to bring them all before the court and when the question before the court was of general interest and a few representatives could sue or defend on behalf of the whole. Therefore, in promulgating Rule 23, the court sought to draft in "functional" terms those recurrent practical patterns that called for mass litigation through representative parties. n4

[3] Purpose of Class Action Rule Controls Its Interpretation

The federal courts have consistently held that the courts must construe and interpret the class action procedural rule to facilitate the various purposes of the rule, n1 including to promote judicial efficiency, to provide wronged persons with a remedy when individual litigation is economically unrealistic, and to protect the interests of absentee class members. The underlying objectives of Rule 23 also supply meaningful guidance for courts required to resolve disputes by applying the rule. n2 Furthermore, even though some courts have stated that Rule 23 should be given a liberal construction, and some a strict or narrow construction, n3 the current consensus is that if a court construes Rule 23 according to its purposes, it is not crucial how the construction is characterized. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.02, 23.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a); see Pate v. United States, 328 F. Supp. 2d 62, 70-71 (D.D.C. 2004) ; see also 28 U.S.C. § 1711(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. *Cummings v. Connell, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 4954, at 17 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Weiss v. Regal Collections, 385 F.3d 337, 345 (3d Cir 2004) ; see Devlin v. Scardelletti, 536 U.S. 1, 11, 122 S. Ct. 2005, 153 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002)

(n5)Footnote 4. Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank v. Roper, 445 U.S. 326, 339, 100 S. Ct. 1166, 63 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1980) .

(n6)Footnote 5. American Pipe & Constr. Co. v. Utah, 414 U.S. 538, 553, 94 S. Ct. 756, 38 L. Ed. 2d 713 (1974) ; In re Tri-State Crematory Litig., 215 F.R.D. 660, 691-692 (N.D. Ga. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 617, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n8)Footnote 7. *Bowlin v. Montanez, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4258, at 10 (D. Neb. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 8. United States Parole Comm. v. Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 402-403, 100 S. Ct. 1202, 63 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1980) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Kanter v. Casey, 43 F.3d 48, 55 (3d Cir. 1994) (Rule 23 procedure ensures both that class action treatment is efficient and that it is fair to absentees under particular circumstances of each case).

(n11)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a); see also 28 U.S.C. § 1711(2).

(n12)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1711(4).

(n13)Footnote 3. General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 156, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 832-833, 119 S. Ct. 2295, 2308, 144 L. Ed. 2d 715 (1999) .

(n15)Footnote 1. *In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20497, at 71 n.210 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) , vacated on other grounds, 471 F.3d 24 (2d Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n16)Footnote 2. Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338, 344 (7th Cir. 1997) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n17)Footnote 3. Compare Fisher v. Va. Elec. & Power Co., 217 F.R.D. 201, 210-211 (E.D. Va. 2003) with Clayborne v. Omaha Pub. Power Dist., 211 F.R.D. 573, 580 (D. Neb. 2002) .

(n18)Footnote 4. *In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20497, at 71 n.210 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) vacated on other grounds, 471 F.3d 24 (2d Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART I. FUNCTIONS OF CLASS ACTION IN FEDERAL COURT

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.02

§ 14A.02 Interaction of Class Action Procedural Rule With Federal Statutes and Federal Court Local Rulesn*

[1] Substantive Statute's Effect on Applicability of Federal Rules

[a] Certain Statutory Actions Not Controlled by Rule 23

Procedures for a class action are specifically governed by Rule 23. n1 Additionally, Rule 23 and all of the other Federal Rules of Civil Procedure generally apply in all civil actions, n2 including class actions. n3 However, the parties may not maintain a class action under Rule 23 when the rule is inconsistent with the substantive statute under which the action is brought, or if the substantive statute provides a different means for obtaining class or multiple party joint relief. n4 The following statutes are some examples of statutory actions that are not controlled by the provisions of Rule 23:

1. Claims against the United States in the Court of Federal Claims. The federal rules do not apply in actions against the United States in the Court of Federal Claims. n5 However, the Court of Federal Claims has adopted its own Rule 23 governing class actions. That Rule 23 is similar, but not identical to, Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n6

2. Fair Labor Standards Act. The FLSA specifically provides that no person may be bound by or benefit from a judgment unless the person has filed a written consent to become a party, known as an opt-in consent. n7 Because Rule 23 binds absent parties who fall within the certified class unless they have opted out of the action, n8 Rule 23 conflicts with the FLSA and is, therefore, not applicable to class proceedings under the FLSA. n9

3. Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The enforcement provision of the ADEA specifies that the Act must be enforced in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Fair Labor Standards Act. n10 Therefore, the Rule 23 procedure for class formation is inapplicable to class actions under the ADEA. n11

4. Equal Pay Act. The Equal Pay Act is also governed by the Fair Labor Standards Act, and class actions under the Equal Pay Act must, therefore, be brought in accordance with § 16(b) of the Fair Labor Standards Act, rather than Rule 23. n12

5. Habeas corpus proceedings. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply in habeas corpus proceedings only to the extent that the practice in such proceedings is not set forth in other statutes. n13 The Habeas Corpus Act contains no mention of class actions. However, courts have used their authority under the All Writs Act to allow class actions to be maintained in habeas proceedings using a procedure analogous to Rule 23. Therefore, although Rule 23 technically does not apply to habeas proceedings, the requirements of the rule may provide guidelines for determining the circumstances under which class status is appropriate in habeas cases. n14

6. Federal Arbitration Act. The Supreme Court has declined to decide the specific issue of whether a class arbitration is a permissible procedure under the FAA. n15 However, the Seventh Circuit has held that courts may not order an arbitration to proceed as a class action, unless the arbitration agreement expressly provides for class arbitration because the FAA requires the courts to enforce the parties' arbitration agreement without judicial extension. n16

Even though Congress has provided that Rule 23 does not directly apply relative to the statutes listed above, in actions based on those statutes courts may refer to Rule 23 for guidance in interpreting the requirements of the alternative procedure that actually does apply, when the alternate procedure is analogous to Rule 23. n17

[b] Statutes That Vary Use of Rule 23 Class Action Procedure

Congress has made Rule 23 applicable to some statutes on a limited basis. The following substantive statutes are examples of statutes that contain limitations on the availability of class actions pursuant to Rule 23:

1. Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act. Rule 23 class action procedures are applicable to actions under the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act, but the following jurisdictional requirements must be met under the Act in addition to the requirements of Rule 23: n18 (1) the amount of any individual claim must be at least $25; (2) the aggregated value of all claims in the suit must be least $50,000; and (3) there must be at least 100 named class representatives. The purpose of these additional jurisdictional limitations is to prevent trivial disputes from being brought as class actions in federal court. n19

2. Truth in Lending Act. The TILA expressly provides for the use of the class action procedure, and the requirements of Rule 23 generally apply to TILA cases. n20 However, recoveries in TILA class actions are limited to the lesser of $500,000 or 1 percent of the creditor's net worth. n21 The Act also provides that the court, in determining the amount to award in a class action, should consider the following factors: (1) the amount of any actual damages incurred by the claimant; (2) the frequency and persistence of failures of compliance by the creditor; (3) the resources of the creditor; (4) the number of persons adversely affected; and (5) the extent to which the creditor's failure to comply with the Act was intentional. n22

3. Private Securities Litigation Reform Act. The courts generally require that class actions arising in a private securities litigation context n23 must comply with the Rule 23 provisions governing class actions. n24 Claims under the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 may be brought as class actions. However, a number of special procedural rules apply to these actions, including provisions specifying the manner of appointment of the lead plaintiff. n25

[2] Effect of Local Rules

Local rules of court may impose additional procedural requirements for a plaintiff to initiate and maintain a class action. For example, a local rule may require that the plaintiff file a motion for class certification within 60 days of the filing of the complaint. n26 A local rule may also require the plaintiff to include in the complaint a proposed definition of the proposed class. n27 However, a local rule must not duplicate, and must be consistent with, the subject matter that is covered by a federal rule; in other words, a class action local rule is invalid to the extent it conflicts with a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure. n28

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewGovernmentsFederal GovernmentClaims By & AgainstLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsRemediesClass Actions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.04, 23.62 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Varacallo v. Mass. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 226 F.R.D. 207, 228 (court noted that class action must meet requirements of all Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and Due Process Clause of Constitution).

(n5)Footnote 4. LaChapelle v. Owens-Illinois, Inc., 513 F.2d 286, 288 (5th Cir. 1975) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 2503.

(n7)Footnote 6. See Ct. Fed. Cl. R. 23.

(n8)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n10)Footnote 9. De Asencio v. Tyson Foods, Inc., 342 F.3d 301, 306 (3d Cir. 2003) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(b).

(n12)Footnote 11. Thiessen v. GE Capital Corp., 267 F.3d 1095, 1102 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Ameritech Benefit Plan Comm. v. Commun. Workers of Am., 220 F.3d 814, 820 (7th Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1127 (2001) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(2).

(n15)Footnote 14. Ali v. Ashcroft, 346 F.3d 873, 890-891 (9th Cir. 2003) , rev'd on other grounds, 421 F.3d 795 (9th Cir 2005) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Green Tree Fin. Corp. v. Bazzle, 539 U.S. 444, 449-450, 454, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 156 L. Ed. 2d 414 (2003) .

(n17)Footnote 16. Champ v. Siegel Trading Co, 55 F.3d 269, 276-277 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 17. Sperling v. Hoffman-La Roche, Inc., 145 F.R.D. 357, 359 (D.N.J. 1992) .

(n19)Footnote 18. 15 U.S.C. § 2310(d); see Churchill Vill., L.L.C. v. G, 361 F.3d 566, 574 n.5 (9th Cir. 2004) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Walsh v. Ford Motor Co., 807 F.2d 1000, 1008 (D.C. Cir. 1986) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 202 F.R.D. 310, 316-317 (S.D. Fla. 2001) ; see 15 U.S.C. § 1640.

(n22)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2).

(n23)Footnote 22. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a); see Watkins v. Simmons & Clark, Inc., 618 F.2d 398, 400-401 n.6 (6th Cir. 1980) .

(n24)Footnote 23. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 77z-1.

(n25)Footnote 24. In re Rent-Way Sec. Litig., 218 F.R.D. 101, 105, 112 (W.D. Pa. 2003) .

(n26)Footnote 25. In re Oxford Health Plans Sec. Litig., 182 F.R.D. 42, 45 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) ; see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.190 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n27)Footnote 26. Davis v. Buffalo Psychiatric Center, 613 F. Supp. 462, 464 (W.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n28)Footnote 27. Commander Properties Corp. v. Beech Aircraft Corp., 164 F.R.D. 529, 534 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n29)Footnote 28. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 83(a)(1).

88 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART I. FUNCTIONS OF CLASS ACTION IN FEDERAL COURT

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.03

§ 14A.03 District Court Has Discretion Regarding Class Action Determinationsn*

The trial court has considerable discretion to determine whether the parties may maintain a suit as a class action, n1 and the procedures the court will use. n2 This discretion generally means that an appellate court will reverse a district court's decision regarding class action procedures only if the district court has abused its discretion, n3 the same standard applicable to decisions regarding all other joinder devices. The district court's discretion is not absolute, however, and must be exercised only after consideration of all of the requisite factors under the class action rule. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Shook v. El Paso County, 386 F.3d 963, 973 (10th Cir. 2004) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1); see also § 23.30.

(n3)Footnote 2. In re BankAmerica Corp. Secs. Litig. v. McColl, 350 F.3d 747, 751-752 (8th Cir. 2003) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d).

(n4)Footnote 3. See In re Rite Aid Corp. Sec. Litig., 396 F.3d 294, 296 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Williams v. Chartwell Fin. Servs., 204 F.3d 748, 759 (7th Cir. 2000) .

89 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART I. FUNCTIONS OF CLASS ACTION IN FEDERAL COURT

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.04through 14A.09

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.04[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART II. JURISDICTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.10

§ 14A.10 Plaintiffs in Class Action Must Establish Federal Court Jurisdictionn*

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure may not either extend or limit the jurisdiction of the district courts. n1 Consequently, Rule 23 does not automatically provide subject matter jurisdiction when the requirements for a class action are met; n2 thus, subject matter jurisdiction must be based on some grounds other than Rule 23, n3 including at least one of the following typical bases for subject matter jurisdiction:

- Federal question jurisdiction; n4

- Jurisdiction under the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005. n5 This Act has broadened the scope of class action subject matter jurisdiction in federal courts by specifying special subject matter jurisdiction parameters for most interstate class actions; n6 or

- Traditional diversity jurisdiction. n7

In addition to subject matter jurisdiction, the plaintiffs must meet the other jurisdictional requirements to file suit in federal court, including standing. n8 This means that an actual "case or controversy" must exist between the named plaintiff and the defendants. n9 Furthermore, if the named plaintiff's claims become moot before certification, so that standing is lacking, the dismissal of both the individual and class claims may be required. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.63, 23.64 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n3)Footnote 2. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 612-613, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Olden v. Lafarge Corp., 383 F.3d 495, 498-499 (6th Cir. 2004) (existence of subject matter jurisdiction is prerequisite to class certification); see Ch. 5, Original Jurisdiction Over the Subject Matter.

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 14A.11.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs., P.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co., ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311, 330 n.3 (2010) .

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 14A.12.

(n8)Footnote 7. See § 14A.13.

(n9)Footnote 8. Lierboe v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 350 F.3d 1018, 1022 (9th Cir. 2003) (if named plaintiffs purporting to represent class do not establish requisite of case or controversy with defendants, they may not seek relief on their own behalf nor on behalf of any other member of class).

(n10)Footnote 9. Barr v. Matria Healthcare, Inc., 324 F. Supp. 2d 1369, 1375 (N.D. Ga. 2004) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See § 14A.14.

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART II. JURISDICTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.11

§ 14A.11 Class Action Based on Federal Question Jurisdictionn*

A plaintiff may bring a class action in federal district court when a federal question is in controversy. n1 A "federal question" is any claim that involves the federal Constitution, statute, or common law. There is no amount in controversy requirement for federal question jurisdiction. n2 The presence or absence of federal question jurisdiction is governed by the well-pleaded complaint rule, which provides that federal question jurisdiction exists only when the plaintiff's own cause of action is based on federal law, and only when the plaintiff's well-pleaded complaint raises issues of federal law. n3 It is important to note that federal question jurisdiction must be based on a claim which asserts violation of a federal substantive right, rather than mere use of a federal procedural mechanism such, as the Federal Arbitration Act. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionFederal QuestionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.63 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. In re Auto. Refinishing Paint Antitrust Litig., 358 F.3d 288, 292 n.4 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Arbaugh v. Y & H Corp., 546 U.S. 500, 506, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097 (2006) (Congress amended Section 1331 in 1980 to eliminate former amount in controversy threshold).

(n4)Footnote 3. Marcus v. AT&T Corp., 138 F.3d 46, 52 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n ND v. Strand, 243 F. Supp. 2d 1139, 1142-1143 (D. Ore. 2002) .

92 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART II. JURISDICTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.12

§ 14A.12 Interstate Class Action Jurisdiction Under Class Action Fairness Actn*

[1] Function and Purpose of Act

[a] Act Expands Federal Court Subject Matter Jurisdiction for Many Interstate Class Actions

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (CAFA) n1 has considerably expanded the availability of diversity jurisdiction for interstate class actions. n2 Rather than requiring complete diversity between the parties, n3 CAFA allows federal district courts to exercise subject matter jurisdiction over class actions based on mere minimal diversity. n4 Additionally, CAFA allows the claims of all class members to be aggregated in measuring whether the required amount in controversy has been met, while at the same time raising the amount in controversy needed for a district court to exercise subject matter jurisdiction over a class action based on limited diversity. n5 Congress has enacted these provisions under CAFA to make it easier for plaintiffs to initiate large, interstate class actions of national importance through the process of diversity jurisdiction in federal court, and to make it easy for defendants to remove such class actions to federal court. n6 It is important to recognize that even if the party seeking subject matter jurisdiction cannot meet the minimum amount in controversy under CAFA the party may still be able to establish federal jurisdiction based on federal question jurisdiction n7 or traditional diversity jurisdiction standards. n8

[b] Jurisdictional Purposes of Class Action Fairness Act

Congress enacted the Class Action Fairness Act after making findings of abuses of the class action procedure that have adversely affected interstate commerce. n9 Some of these abuses include: n10

- Keeping cases of national importance out of federal courts; n11
- Acting in ways that demonstrate bias against out-of-state defendants; n12 and
- Making judgments that impose the state-court view of the law on other states and bind the rights of the residents of those other states. n13

Because of these findings, Congress enacted CAFA with the stated purpose to restore the intent of the framers of the federal Constitution by providing that, under diversity jurisdiction, the federal courts may hear any interstate class action that is of national importance. Therefore, the Act expands federal court jurisdiction for most interstate class actions. CAFA amended the concept of diversity jurisdiction for class actions to require only minimal diversity, n14 and liberalized requirements for removing class actions to federal courts. n15

[c] Act Provides for Easier Removal of Interstate Class Actions From State Court

In addition to expanding original jurisdiction, CAFA also makes it easier for a defendant to remove an interstate class action from state court to federal court. n16 There are two aspects of the expansion of removal jurisdiction of class actions. First, the Act makes it easier to establish diversity of citizenship subject matter jurisdiction over class actions, which is necessary for removal jurisdiction. n17 Second, the Act has made several modifications to the removal procedures themselves that apply particularly to class actions. n18 For a detailed discussion of the grounds and procedure for removal of an interstate class action under the CAFA, see Ch. 8, Removal from State Courts.

[2] Applicability of Act

[a] Act Applies Only to Class Actions and Mass Actions

The provisions of CAFA apply to "class actions," which are: any civil actions filed under federal Rule 23 n1 or any civil actions that are removed to a district court of the United States that were originally filed under a state statute or rule of judicial procedure that authorizes an action to be brought by one or more representative persons as a class action. n2

The jurisdictional provisions of CAFA also apply to "mass actions," n3 which are civil actions other than class actions in which monetary relief claims of 100 or more persons are proposed to be tried jointly on the ground that the plaintiffs' claims involve common questions of law or fact. n4 Thus, a federal district court has subject matter jurisdiction to entertain a "mass action" provided that at least four requirements are met: (1) an amount in controversy requirement of an aggregate of $5,000,000 in claims; (2) a diversity requirement of minimal diversity and a $75,000 claim by at least one plaintiff; (3) a numerosity requirement that the action involve the monetary claims of 100 or more plaintiffs; and (4) a commonality requirement that the plaintiffs' claims involve common questions of law or fact. n5 A mass action does not include any of the following: n5.1

- Any civil action in which all the claims in the action arise from an event or occurrence in the state in which the action was filed and that allegedly resulted in injuries in that state or in states contiguous to that state;

- Any civil action in which all of the claims are joined on motion of a defendant;

- Any civil action in which all of the claims in the action are asserted on behalf of the general public, and not on behalf of individual claimants or members of a purported class, pursuant to a state statute specifically authorizing this type of action; or

- Any civil action in which the claims have been consolidated or coordinated solely for pretrial proceedings.

A federal district court may exercise subject matter jurisdiction over a mass action based on the minimal diversity of citizenship that is sufficient for class actions. n6 However, the court has jurisdiction over a case as mass action only if at least one of the plaintiffs alleges an amount in controversy that satisfies the congressional requirement for diversity jurisdiction provided in Section 1332(a), which is currently an amount more than $75,000. n7

[b] Act Applies Only to Civil Class Actions Filed After Effective Date

CAFA applies only to civil class actions commenced on or after the date of enactment of CAFA, n8 which was February 18, 2005. It has been held that the term "commenced" means the initial filing of an action in either a state or federal court. Consequently, if an action is filed in a state court prior to February 18, 2005, the provisions of CAFA do not apply, even if the action is refiled or removed to federal court after that date. n9

[c] Minimal Diversity Requirement

Rather than requiring complete diversity between the parties, which means that each plaintiff must have a different citizenship from each defendant, n10 CAFA allows federal district courts to exercise subject matter jurisdiction over class actions based on minimal diversity. This means that federal courts have subject matter jurisdiction over class actions in which at least one plaintiff class member is diverse in citizenship from at least one defendant, n11 and where the amount in controversy exceeds $5,000,000. n12

The federal court also has diversity jurisdiction in cases meeting the $5 million minimum amount in two situations involving foreign parties:

- When any member of a class of plaintiffs is a foreign state, or a citizen or subject of a foreign state, and any defendant is a citizen of a state; n13 or

- When any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a state and any defendant is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state. n14

Under CAFA, the court determines the "citizenship" of an individual or an entity in the same manner as in other diversity situations n15 However, CAFA provides that an unincorporated association is deemed to be a citizen of the state where it has its principal place of business and also the state in which it is organized. n16 This is in contrast to the ordinary rule which provides that an unincorporated association has the citizenship of each of its members. n17

For purposes of CAFA, the citizenship of the members of a proposed plaintiff class is determined as of the date of filing of the complaint or amended complaint. However, if the claim set forth in the initial pleading is not subject to federal jurisdiction, citizenship is determined as of the date of service by the plaintiffs of an amended pleading, motion, or other paper purporting to establish the existence of federal jurisdiction. n18

[d] Amount in Controversy Requirements

A federal district court has class action subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to CAFA only if the claims in controversy exceed the sum or value of $5,000,000, exclusive of interests and costs n19 and provided that the minimal diversity requirements of the Act are met. n20 In its determination of the $5,000,000 amount in controversy for purposes of CAFA, the claims of all class members must be aggregated. n21 However, when the CAFA action is a "mass action," at least one of the plaintiffs must allege an amount in controversy that exceeds $75,000. n22 These CAFA provisions are significantly less restrictive than the traditional diversity amount in controversy requirement, which provides that either every class member must have a claim worth more than $75,000 or at least one named class member must have an individual claim worth more than $75,000 and the claims of every other class member must satisfy the requirements for supplemental jurisdiction. n23 An action that does not meet the $5,000,000 threshold may not be brought in, or removed to, federal court under the provisions of CAFA. Nevertheless, the action may meet the requirements of federal question jurisdiction n24 or traditional complete diversity jurisdiction. n25

[e] District Court Must Decline Jurisdiction Under Act if Class Action Is Primarily Localized

Even if a party establishes minimal diversity of citizenship and minimum amount in controversy, which gives the court jurisdiction under CAFA, n26 the court must decline jurisdiction if two-thirds or more of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate, and the primary defendants, are citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed.

This provision is referred to as "home-state controversy" exception to CAFA. n27 Similarly, under the "local controversy" exception to CAFA, the court also must decline jurisdiction if all of the following are true: n28

- More than two-thirds of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes, in the aggregate, are citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed; and

- There is at least one defendant who is a citizen of the state in which the action was originally filed who is also a defendant from whom significant relief is sought by members of the plaintiff class or classes, and whose alleged conduct forms a significant basis for the claims asserted by the proposed plaintiff class or classes; and

- The members of the plaintiff class or classes incurred principal injuries resulting from the alleged conduct, or any related conduct, of each defendant in the state in which the action was originally filed; and

- During the three-year period preceding the filing of the class action, no other class action has been filed asserting the same or similar factual allegations against any of the defendants on behalf of the same or other persons.

[f] District Court Has Discretion to Decline Jurisdiction Under Act if Class Action Is Slightly Localized

Even if a party establishes minimal diversity of citizenship and minimum amount in controversy, which gives the court jurisdiction under CAFA, n29 the district court has discretion to decline to exercise jurisdiction if more than one-third and less than two-thirds of the plaintiff class members and the primary defendants are citizens of the state of the filing of the action. n30 Thus, the only situation in which the court must accept jurisdiction under CAFA occurs when one-third or fewer of the class members are citizens of the state of filing, or the defendants have no connection to the state of filing. n31

In the exercise of its discretion whether to decline jurisdiction, n32 the court should consider the totality of the circumstances and the interests of justice, and in particular should analyze the following matters: n33

- Whether the claims asserted relate to matters of national or interstate interest;

- Whether the claims asserted are governed in the action by laws of the state in which the action was originally filed, or by the laws of other states;

- Whether the class action has been pleaded in a manner that attempts to avoid federal jurisdiction;

- Whether the action was brought in a forum with a distinct nexus with the class members, the alleged harm, or the defendants;

- Whether, in the aggregate, the number of citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed in all proposed plaintiff classes is substantially larger than the number of citizens from any other state, and the citizenship of the other members of the proposed class is dispersed among a substantial number of states; and

- Whether during the 3-year period preceding the filing of that class action one or more other class actions asserting the same or similar claims on behalf of the same or other persons have been filed.

If the requirements for the grant of discretion are met, and if a balance of the factors favors a state court proceeding rather than a federal one, the court may use its discretion to decline to exercise subject matter jurisdiction under CAFA. Note, however, that the federal court may dismiss the action or, if the action was removed to federal court from state court, remand the action to state court, only if there is no other basis for federal court jurisdiction, such as federal question jurisdiction or traditional diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n34

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass Action Fairness ActCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 15 Moore's Federal Practice, § 102.26 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

(n2)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 109-2, 119 Stat. 4 (2005); see 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs., P.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co., ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311, 330 (2010) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 14A.13.

(n5)Footnote 4. See [3], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. See [4], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. Tanoh v. Dow Chem. Co., 561 F.3d 945, 952 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n8)Footnote 7. See § 14A.11.

(n9)Footnote 8. See § 14A.13.

(n10)Footnote 9. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 2(a)(1)(B); 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n11)Footnote 10. Johnson v. Advance Am., 549 F.3d 932, 935 (4th Cir. 2008) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 2(a)(4)(A); 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n13)Footnote 12. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 2(a)(4)(B); 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n14)Footnote 13. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 2(a)(4)(C); 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n15)Footnote 14. Johnson v. Advance Am., 549 F.3d 932, 935 (4th Cir. 2008) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Hart v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc., 457 F.3d 675, 681 (7th Cir. 2006) (strong preference of Congress that interstate class actions should be heard in federal court if properly removed by any defendant).

(n17)Footnote 16. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 5; 119 Stat. 4 (2005); see 28 U.S.C. § 1453; Hart v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc., 457 F.3d 675, 681 (7th Cir. 2006) .

(n18)Footnote 17. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 4; 119 Stat. 4 (2005); see 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2); United Steel v. Shell Oil Co., 602 F.3d 1087, 1090-1091 (9th Cir. 2010) (CAFA covers more than traditional class actions by providing for removal of mass actions).

(n19)Footnote 18. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 5; 119 Stat. 4 (2005); see 28 U.S.C. § 1453; Greenwich Fin. Servs. Distressed Mortg. Fund 3 LLC v. Countrywide Fin. Corp., 603 F.3d 23, 26 (2d Cir. 2010) .

(n20)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.

(n21)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1711(2); see 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(1)(B).

(n22)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(A).

(n23)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(i).

(n24)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11); see Tanoh v. Dow Chem. Co., 561 F.3d 945, 952-953 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n25)Footnote 5.1. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(ii).

(n26)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(A); see 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2); see also [c], below.

(n27)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(i); see 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a); see also Tanoh v. Dow Chem. Co., 561 F.3d 945, 952-953 (9th Cir. 2009) .

(n28)Footnote 8. Pub. L. No. 109-2, § 9; 119 Stat. 4 (2005).

(n29)Footnote 9. Springman v. AIG Mktg., 523 F.3d 685, 687 (7th Cir. 2008) (noting that events that take place after filing of action may allow removal, such as amendment to pleadings).

(n30)Footnote 10. See § 14A.13.

(n31)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2)(A); see Ferrell v. Express Check Advance of SC LLC, 591 F.3d 698, 700 (4th Cir. 2010) .

(n32)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2); see [d], below.

(n33)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2)(B).

(n34)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2)(C).

(n35)Footnote 15. See Ch. 5, Original Jurisdiction over the Subject Matter.

(n36)Footnote 16. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(10); see Ferrell v. Express Check Advance of SC LLC, 591 F.3d 698, 704 (4th Cir. 2010) (for diversity purposes under CAFA, "limited liability company" is included in term "unincorporated association").

(n37)Footnote 17. Carden v. Arkoma Assoc., 494 U.S. 185, 195-196, 110 S. Ct. 1015, 108 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1990) .

(n38)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(7).

(n39)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2).

(n40)Footnote 20. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2)(A); see [c], above.

(n41)Footnote 21. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2); see Moffitt v. Residential Funding Co., LLC, 604 F.3d 156, 158 (4th Cir. 2010) .

(n42)Footnote 22. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(i); see Tanoh v. Dow Chem. Co., 561 F.3d 945, 952-953 (9th Cir. Cal. 2009) .

(n43)Footnote 23. See § 14A.13.

(n44)Footnote 24. See § 14A.11.

(n45)Footnote 25. See § 14A.13.

(n46)Footnote 26. See [b] and [c], above.

(n47)Footnote 27. Serrano v. 180 Connect, Inc., 478 F.3d 1018, 1022 (9th Cir. 2007) ; 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(4)(B).

(n48)Footnote 28. Serrano v. 180 Connect, Inc., 478 F.3d 1018, 1022 (9th Cir. 2007) ; 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(4)(A).

(n49)Footnote 29. See [b] and [c], above.

(n50)Footnote 30. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3).

(n51)Footnote 31. Preston v. Tenet Health Systems, 485 F.3d 804, 812 (5th Cir. 2007) (Congress crafted these CAFA provisions to exclude only narrow category of truly localized controversies).

(n52)Footnote 32. See Preston v. Tenet Health Systems, 485 F.3d 804, 811 (5th Cir. 2007) ; Lucker v. Bayside Cemetery, 262 F.R.D. 185, 188 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) .

(n53)Footnote 33. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3).

(n54)Footnote 34. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3) (court's discretion to decline jurisdiction is for jurisdiction provided Section 1332(d)(2), not section 1331 or 1332(a)).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART II. JURISDICTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.13

§ 14A.13 Class Action Jurisdiction Based on Traditional Complete Diversityn*

[1] Citizenship of Parties Based on Named Plaintiffs

As in any other case, a class action may proceed in federal court only if a federal statute provides the court with subject matter jurisdiction. n1 Consequently, if a party cannot base jurisdiction on federal question jurisdiction, n2 or under the more liberal provisions of CAFA, n3 the party may, if possible, base jurisdiction on traditional diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. n4 Diversity jurisdiction requires complete diversity of citizenship between plaintiffs and defendants, which means that the citizenship of each plaintiff must be different from that of each defendant. In a class action suit, only the citizenship of the named parties is considered in determining whether diversity jurisdiction exists. n5 The party relying on traditional diversity jurisdiction bears the burden of proving complete diversity. n6

[2] Traditional Amount in Controversy Requirement for Class Action Claims

[a] Aggregation of Claims

Diversity jurisdiction is applicable to all civil actions, including class actions in which the amount in controversy exceeds the amount or value of $75,000. n1 The party relying on traditional diversity jurisdiction in a class action bears the burden of proving the jurisdictional amount in controversy. n2 Because one of the primary purposes of a class action is to enable litigation of a combination of relatively small claims that no individual plaintiff would have the incentive to bring alone, n3 the issue arises whether the plaintiffs' claims may be aggregated to meet the amount in controversy requirement. The general rule is that when two or more plaintiffs having separate and distinct demands unite in a single suit, each demand must be of the prescribed jurisdictional amount; but when several plaintiffs unite to enforce a single title or right in which they have a common and undivided interest, their interests may collectively equal the jurisdictional amount. In this regard, the Supreme Court has held that the diversity jurisdiction statute, rather than Rule 23 or any other rule of procedure, strictly provides that separate and distinct claims may not be aggregated in calculating whether the plaintiffs satisfy the amount in controversy requirement, n4 unless they have a "common and undivided interest." n5

The courts have not clearly defined what constitutes a "common and undivided interest" (rather than a separate and distinct claim), sufficient to permit aggregation of many smaller claims to meet the requisite jurisdictional amount. Most courts determine its existence from the purpose of the class action. In general, the phrase is used to describe circumstances in which the plaintiffs are attempting to rectify a wrong to all persons in the same situation and are asking for "broad relief" affecting the class as an undivided whole. Thus, a class has a common and undivided interest where only the class as a whole is entitled to the relief requested. n6 In another formulation of the term, a common and undivided interest exists if one plaintiff's failure to collect would increase the recovery of the each of the remaining plaintiffs. n7 Yet another way of expressing the same term is that the more likely a defendant's total liability does not depend on how the recovery of a claim is distributed among the class members, the more likely a court is to conclude that the class has a joint and common interest. n8

[b] Effect of Principle of Supplemental Jurisdiction

The Supreme Court has held that when the other elements of jurisdiction are present, and at least one named plaintiff in the action satisfies the amount in controversy requirement, n9 the supplemental jurisdiction statute n10 authorizes the court to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over the claims of other class members in a class action, even if those claims are for less than the requisite amount in controversy. n11 In its decision, the Supreme Court resolved an issue that had split the circuits: whether a federal court in a diversity action could exercise supplemental jurisdiction over additional plaintiffs whose claims did not satisfy the minimum amount in controversy. The Supreme Court found that even though Section 1367(b) precluded supplemental jurisdiction over claims of plaintiffs joined under the compulsory joinder Rule 19 or over intervenors under Rule 24, n12 nothing in the statute withheld supplemental jurisdiction over claims of plaintiffs certified as class members under Rule 23. n13

The supplemental jurisdiction statute provides that the district courts have supplemental jurisdiction over all claims so related to claims within the courts' original jurisdiction that the claims constitute part of the same case or controversy under Article III of the Constitution. The statute extends to claims involving the joinder or intervention of additional parties. Thus, once a court has original jurisdiction over some claims in the action, it may exercise supplemental jurisdiction over additional claims that are part of the same case or controversy. n14

In order for a federal court to invoke supplemental jurisdiction, it must first have original jurisdiction over at least one claim in the action. Incomplete diversity destroys original jurisdiction with respect to all claims, so there is nothing to which supplemental jurisdiction can adhere. However, provided there is complete diversity, when a well-pleaded complaint contains at least one claim that satisfies the amount-in-controversy requirement, and there are no other relevant jurisdictional defects, the district court has original jurisdiction over that claim, and supplemental jurisdiction of all other claims that are part of the same controversy. n15

[c] Severance of Plaintiffs That Do Not Have Minimum Claim

If certain class members have separate and distinct claims and cannot satisfy the complete diversity requirement nor the requirements for supplemental jurisdiction, n16 the trial court need not dismiss the entire class action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction over those class members with jurisdictional deficiencies. n17 Such members may not participate in the action, but the court may simply sever the members' claims from the action, allowing the court to retain jurisdiction as a class action over the remaining members. n18

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.63 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(4); see § 14A.10.

(n3)Footnote 2. See § 14A.11.

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 14A.12.

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n6)Footnote 5. Payton v. County of Kane, 308 F.3d 673, 681 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Allendale Mutual Ins. Co. v. Excess Ins. Co. Ltd., 62 F. Supp. 2d 1116, 1122 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n9)Footnote 2. Allendale Mutual Ins. Co. v. Excess Ins. Co. Ltd., 62 F. Supp. 2d 1116, 1122 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 617, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n11)Footnote 4. Smith v. GTE Corp., 236 F.3d 1292, 1300-1303, 1309-1310 (11th Cir. 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 5. Snyder v. Harris, 394 U.S. 332, 336-337, 89 S. Ct. 1053, 22 L. Ed. 2d 319 (1969) .

(n13)Footnote 6. Loizon v. SMH Societe Suisse de Microelectronics, 950 F. Supp. 250, 253 (N.D. Ill. 1996) .

(n14)Footnote 7. Eagle v. AT&T, 769 F.2d 541, 546-547 (9th Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n15)Footnote 8. Dollar v. General Motors Corp., 814 F. Supp. 538, 543 (E.D. Tex. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 9. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d).

(n17)Footnote 10. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n18)Footnote 11. *Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Allapattah Servs., 545 U.S. 546, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 5015, at 8 (2005) .

(n19)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n20)Footnote 13. *Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Allapattah Servs., 545 U.S. 546, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 5015, at 27 (2005) .

(n21)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a); see Ch 5, Original Jurisdiction over the Subject Matter.

(n22)Footnote 15. *Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Allapattah Servs., 545 U.S. 546, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 5015, at 24-25 (2005) .

(n23)Footnote 16. See [b], above.

(n24)Footnote 17. See Dawalt v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., 397 F.3d 392, 395 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n25)Footnote 18. Riverside Transp. v. Bellsouth Telecommunications, 847 F. Supp. 453, 456-457 (M.D. La. 1994) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART II. JURISDICTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.14

§ 14A.14 Mootness Doctrine Applied in Class Actionsn*

A claim becomes moot if the claim was an actual and justiciable "case or controversy" at the time of its initiation but later ceased to exist because events occurred or interim relief was granted that completely and irrevocably eradicated the effects of the alleged wrong which gave rise to the claim. n1 Usually, if a party's claims become moot the court loses jurisdiction over the claims and must dismiss the action. n2 However, the effect of a moot claim on a class action depends on the time the claim becomes moot. Once a class has been certified, mooting of the class representatives' claims does not moot the entire action because the class acquires a legal status separate from the interest asserted by its named plaintiffs. Litigation may continue because the stake of other class members is attributed to the class representatives. On the other hand, when claims of the named plaintiffs become moot before class certification, dismissal of the entire action is required on the grounds of mootness. n3

There is an exception to the mootness rule for claims that are inherently transitory to the extent that a trial court could not have time to rule on a motion for class certification before the named plaintiffs' individual interests expire. In such circumstances, the court will allow the action to continue as a class action, even though it had not yet been certified because the later certification is considered to relate back to the time of filing the complaint. n4 Therefore, the case is considered to be certified before the individual claims become moot, and the action is saved from dismissal. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityMootnessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.63 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Paciello v. Unum Life Ins. Co. of Am., 188 F.R.D. 201, 204 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (claim is moot only if there is no reasonable expectation that alleged wrong which gave rise to claim will recur).

(n3)Footnote 2. Maher v. Hyde, 272 F.3d 83, 87 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Carroll v. United Compucred Collections, Inc., 399 F.3d 620, 625 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Weiss v. Regal Collections, 385 F.3d 337, 346-347 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. County of Riverside v. McLaughlin, 500 U.S. 44, 52, 111 S. Ct. 1661, 114 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1991) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART II. JURISDICTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.15through 14A.19

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.15[Reserved]

96 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART III. PREREQUISITES TO ALL CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.20

§ 14A.20 Summary of Prerequisites to Class Actionn*

Rule 23 specifies the prerequisites that must be satisfied before a party may utilize the class action procedure in federal court. The first prerequisite is based on the nature of the class action itself: n1 one or more persons must be named as representatives, and the representatives must be members of a proposed class n2 that is capable of precise definition by an order of the court. n3 This requirement is discussed in § 14A.21.

Rule 23(a) also specifies four explicit requirements for a party to maintain a class action: (1) numerosity of parties; n4 (2) commonality of legal and factual issues; n5 (3) typicality of claims and defenses of the class representatives; n6 and (4) adequacy of representation. n7

When a party proposes class action treatment, the proposed class must satisfy all four of these requirements before a court will consider it for certification. n8 Finally, before the court may grant certification, an action must qualify within one of the three categories of class actions that are specified in Rule 23(b). n9 These requirements are discussed in § 14A.30 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of RepresentationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesMaintainabilityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.20 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See § 14A.01.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a), 23(c)(1)(A); see Anderson v. Westinghouse Savannah River Co., 406 F.3d 248, 260 (4th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Powers v. Hamilton County Pub. Defender Comm'n, 501 F.3d 592, 619 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1); see § 14A.22.

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2); see § 14A.23.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3); see § 14A.24.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4); see § 14A.25.

(n9)Footnote 8. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 613, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Owner-Operator Indep. Drivers Ass'n v. New Prime, Inc., 339 F.3d 1001, 1011-1012 (8th Cir. 2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART III. PREREQUISITES TO ALL CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.21

§ 14A.21 Named Representative Is Member of Defined Classn*

[1] Court Must Precisely Define Class

Before the district court may certify a class action, it must precisely define the class. n1 The class definition must be sufficiently definite so that it is administratively feasible for the court to determine whether a particular individual is a member of the proposed class. n2 A class must be defined in such a way that the identities of the class members are ascertainable by reference to objective, rather than subjective, criteria. Consequently, a class may not be defined according to the plaintiffs' states of mind, such as those persons who believe or claim that they were discriminated against. Also, a party should not define a class in a way that a court must make a determination of the merits of the individual claims to determine whether a particular person is a member of the class. For example, a class limited to those who were in fact discriminated against would not be adequately defined. Rather, the class should be defined according to actions taken by the parties or objective factual occurrences. n3 The definition of a class should not be so broad as to include individuals who are without standing to maintain the action on their own behalf. n4 Whether the definition of a class is sufficiently definite to permit ascertainment of the class members must be determined on the facts and circumstances of each case. n5

The requirement that a class must be precisely defined serves several purposes. The primary purpose is to enable the court to correctly determine whether the proposed class, as defined, satisfies the other requirements of Rule 23. n6 Consequently, courts usually analyze whether the class is adequately defined before making determinations of the other requirements for class certification. Other important purposes of a precise definition of the class are to identify which persons are entitled to notice, n7 which persons would be entitled to relief, and which persons will be bound by the judgment. n8 In other words, if a class definition is so vague that it is not readily identifiable, problems may arise regarding the propriety of the class action, the provision of notice, and the binding effect of a judgment. n9

[2] Definition Must Enable Identification of Class Members

To make a determination whether a class is defined with adequate precision, a court analyzes whether it is administratively feasible for the court to determine whether a particular individual is or is not a member of the class. n1 There must not only be a definite class, the class representative must be a member of that class, n2 that is, must have proper standing. In other words, the named representatives must allege and show that they personally have been injured, not that injury has been suffered by other, unidentified members of the class to which they belong and that they assert to represent. n3 Because standing is the threshold issue in any suit, the court need not reach the class action certification if the named representatives lack standing. n4

The court need not actually identify every member of the class at the commencement of the action; however, the court must be capable of determining whether a particular person is a member of the class at that time. n5 Furthermore, a class may include future members, provided that the court can determine, at any given time, whether a particular individual is then a member of the class. n6 Thus, the particular members of the class may change over time provided that there is an administratively feasible method of identifying the class members at any particular time. n7

[3] Court May Modify Order of Definition

If the court determines that a class definition or description proposed by a party is not sufficiently precise, it need not necessarily deny class certification. n1 Rather, the court has discretion to grant certification of the class with a modification of the definition of the proposed class to provide the necessary precision for the class as certified. n2 In this regard, the court has the ultimate responsibility in its order certifying a class action to precisely define the class, in addition to defining the class claims, issues, or defenses. n3 Additionally, the court has discretion to modify its order defining the class at any time before final judgment, perhaps several times, in order to provide precision as circumstances warrant. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.21 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(B); see Mike v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 223 F.R.D. 50, 53 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Mike v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 223 F.R.D. 50, 53 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Chiang, 385 F.3d 256, 272 (3d Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 4. Murray v. Auslander, 244 F.3d 807, 810-811 (11th Cir. 2001) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Powers v. Hamilton County Pub. Defender Comm'n, 501 F.3d 592, 617-619 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Simer v. Rios, 661 F.2d 655, 670 (7th Cir. 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A), 23(c)(2)(A).

(n9)Footnote 8. Commander Properties Corp. v. Beech Aircraft Corp., 164 F.R.D. 529, 534 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Clay v. American Tobacco Co., 188 F.R.D. 483, 490 (S.D. Ill. 1999) .

(n11)Footnote 1. Mike v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 223 F.R.D. 50, 53 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n12)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Westinghouse Savannah River Co., 406 F.3d 248, 260 (4th Cir. 2005) .

(n13)Footnote 3. Gratz v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 244, 289, 123 S. Ct. 2411, 156 L. Ed. 2d 257 (2003) .

(n14)Footnote 4. Lierboe v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 350 F.3d 1018, 1022 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n15)Footnote 5. In re Tetracycline Cases, 107 F.R.D. 719, 728 (D. Mo. 1985) .

(n16)Footnote 6. Ashe v. Board of Elections, 124 F.R.D. 45, 47 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n17)Footnote 7. Johnson v. Brelje, 482 F. Supp. 121, 123 (N.D. Ill. 1979) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Powers v. Hamilton County Pub. Defender Comm'n, 501 F.3d 592, 618-619 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n19)Footnote 2. Bratcher v. Nat'l Standard Life Ins. Co. (In re Monumental Life Ins. Co.), 365 F.3d 408, 414 (5th Cir. 2004) ; Streeter v. Sheriff of Cook County, 256 F.R.D. 609, 615 (N.D. Ill. 2009) .

(n20)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n21)Footnote 4. Cliff v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 363 F.3d 1113, 1133 n.16 (11th Cir. 2004) .

98 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART III. PREREQUISITES TO ALL CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.22

§ 14A.22 Impracticability of Joinder of All Members Because of Numerosityn*

[1] Statement of Prerequisite of Impracticability Due to Numerosity

A person or persons may maintain a class action only if the number of persons that fall within the class definition are so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable. n1 The district court must conduct a numerosity analysis, and in doing so starts with the most important factor, the sheer number of members that makes up the class. n2 However, there is no absolute numerical test for determining impracticability of joinder. The ultimate determination the court must make is whether joinder of all members is practicable, considering all relevant factors in addition to the sheer numbers. n3 Courts have emphasized that joinder need not be impossible but, rather, that joinder must be very difficult or inconvenient. n4 The requirement ensures that a class action will proceed only if there is an actual necessity for the class action procedure. n5

[2] Factors Considered in Determination of Impracticability

The most important factor in the determination of impracticability to support a class is the number of persons in the proposed class. There is no strict or absolute test to determine numerosity to determine impracticability on the basis of the number of members alone. As a basic guide, however, courts have typically referred to the following numbers: less than 21 is not impracticable, more than 40 is impracticable; any numbers falling in between is open to the discretion of the court. n1

The court must consider the number of proposed members in conjunction with all other relevant factors of impracticability that are applicable to the proposed class, such as the following: n2

- The probability of inclusion of future members in the class definition and the ability to identify and locate current and future class members. n3

- Whether joinder of all class members and their claims in one proceeding would be expensive, time-consuming, and logistically difficult. n4

- Whether geographic dispersion of class members makes joinder more difficult. n5

- The ability and motivation of class members to institute individual actions. n6

- The financial resources of class members. Courts consider the less resources potential members have, the greater the impracticability. n7

[3] Burden of Proof of Impracticability

The party requesting class certification has the burden of establishing commonality, as is the case with the other requirements of Rule 23(a). n1 The requesting party need not prove the precise number of class members to a certainty. However, to satisfy the impracticability aspect of Rule 23(a), the party must make some showing to enable the district court to make a supported factual finding that the class actually certified meets the numerosity requirement; a plaintiff must ordinarily present some evidence reasonably indicating the number of purported class members. n2 Therefore, the party seeking certification may not merely rely on conclusory allegations that joinder would be impracticable or on mere speculation that the class has a particular size. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.22 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Vega v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., 564 F.3d 1256, 1266 (11th Cir. 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. In re Healthsouth Corp. Sec. Litig., 213 F.R.D. 447, 457 (N.D. Ala. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1079 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 1. Vega v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., 564 F.3d 1256, 1267 (11th Cir. 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n8)Footnote 2. Novella v. Westchester County, 443 F. Supp. 2d 540, 546 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) ; Matyasovszky v. Hous. Auth. of Bridgeport, 226 F.R.D. 35, 40-41 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 3. Pederson v. Louisiana State Univ., 213 F.3d 858, 868 (5th Cir. 2000) ; Ali v. Ashcroft, 213 F.R.D. 390, 408-409 (W.D. Wash. 2003) .

(n10)Footnote 4. McMahon Books, Inc. v. Willow Grove Assocs., 108 F.R.D. 32, 35 (E.D. Pa. 1985) .

(n11)Footnote 5. Sanft v. Winnebago Indus., 214 F.R.D. 514, 521 (N.D. Iowa 2003) .

(n12)Footnote 6. Luyando v. Bowen, 124 F.R.D. 52, 55 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) (if individual claims involve small amounts of damages, it is impractical for each person to sue individually).

(n13)Footnote 7. Haymons v. Williams, 795 F. Supp. 1511, 1519-1520 (M.D. Fla. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 1. Trevizo v. Adams, 455 F.3d 1155, 1162 (10th Cir. 2006) .

(n15)Footnote 2. Vega v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., 564 F.3d 1256, 1267 (11th Cir. 2009) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n16)Footnote 3. Golden v. City of Columbus, 404 F.3d 950, 966 (6th Cir. 2005) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART III. PREREQUISITES TO ALL CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.23

§ 14A.23 Commonality of Legal or Factual Issuesn*

[1] Factors Used to Determine Commonality

One or more persons may sue or be sued as representative parties of a class only if there are questions of law or fact common to the class. n1 The purposes for the requirement of a common legal or factual question are to ensure fair and adequate representation of the interests of the absentee members and to provide for practical and efficient case management. n2 The commonality requirement is satisfied if there is even one common question of either law or fact among the grievances of the prospective class, n3 and courts have noted that it is not a difficult requirement to satisfy. n4

The commonality test is qualitative rather than quantitative: one significant issue common to the class may be sufficient to warrant certification. In particular, the plaintiffs may demonstrate commonality by showing that class members have shared legal issues but divergent facts or that they share a common basis of facts but base their claims for relief on different legal theories. n5 However, if individual factual determinations dominate the claims, class certification should be denied on the grounds of a lack of commonality. n6

[2] Interaction of Commonality With Other Class Action Requirements

Courts have frequently noted that the commonality requirement tends to overlap with the typicality requirement of Rule 23(a)(3) n1 because both serve as standards for determining whether the named plaintiff's claim and the class claims are so interrelated that the interests of the class members will be fairly and adequately protected in their absence. Despite their similarity, however, the commonality and typicality requirements serve different functions. While the commonality requirement examines the sufficiency of the common aspects among the class itself, the typicality requirement examines the relation between the named representative parties and the class as a whole. n2

Courts have also noted that sometimes the commonality requirement overlaps with the Rule 23(a)(4) "adequacy of representation" requirement n3 because both requirements may consider whether the class representative's claims and the class claims are so similar that the interests of the putative class will be fairly and adequately represented by the plaintiff. However, the two requirements are distinct because the adequacy-of-representation requirement considers additional issues, such as the competency of class counsel and potential conflicts of interest. n4

In many proposed class actions, commonality analysis tends to overlap with portions of the "predominance" test of Rule 23(b)(3), n5 in which class members requesting damages must establish not only the existence of common questions of law or fact but also that the common questions of law or fact predominate over any questions affecting only individual members. n6 Thus, the predominance test necessarily entails the existence of a common question. However, commonality remains a distinct requirement because the predominance test is more stringent; in addition to the existence of common issues of law and fact, predominance requires the common issues to be numerically and qualitatively substantial in relation to individual issues. n7

[3] Burden of Proof of Commonality

The party requesting class certification has the burden of establishing commonality, as is the case with the other requirements of Rule 23(a). n1 The court has considerable discretion in its determination of whether commonality exists, provided that the proponent shows at least one common question of law or fact. n2 Furthermore, if common questions do not arise among the class as defined in the complaint, the court has discretion to redefine the proposed class or create subclasses to make a finding of commonality. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.23 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 2. Crosby v. Bowater Ret. Plan for Salaried Emples. of Great N. Paper, 212 F.R.D. 350, 355-356 (W.D. Mich. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Varacallo v. Mass. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 226 F.R.D. 207, 230 (D.N.J. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Kanter v. Casey, 43 F.3d 48, 56 (3d Cir. 1994) (commonality requirement not demanding because requirement may be satisfied by single common issue).

(n6)Footnote 5. Dukes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 222 F.R.D. 137, 145 (N.D. Cal. 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 6. In re LifeUSA Holding Inc., 242 F.3d 136, 145-147 (3d Cir. 2001) (class certification is not proper in mass tort actions that necessitate resolution of individualized questions of liability).

(n8)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3).

(n9)Footnote 2. Prado-Steiman v. Bush, 221 F.3d 1266, 1278-1279 (11th Cir. 2000) ; In re HealthSouth Corp. Sec. Litig., 257 F.R.D. 260, 275 (N.D. Ala. 2009) .

(n10)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4).

(n11)Footnote 4. General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 157 n.13, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

(n12)Footnote 5. Unger v. Amedisys Inc., 401 F.3d 316, 320 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n13)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3); see also § 14A.23[2].

(n14)Footnote 7. Wachtel v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 223 F.R.D. 196, 213 (D.N.J. 2004) ; see Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 623-624, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) (predominance more demanding test because it tests whether proposed classes are sufficiently cohesive to warrant adjudication by representation).

(n15)Footnote 1. Miles v. Merrill Lynch & Co. (In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig.), 471 F.3d 24, 35 (2d Cir. 2006) ; see Robinson v. Metro North Commuter R.R., 267 F.3d 147, 156 (2d Cir. 2001) (business policy or practice sufficient to satisfy commonality requirement).

(n16)Footnote 2. Hodgers-Durgin v. De La Vina, 165 F.3d 667, 676-678 (9th Cir. 1999) (commonality requirement of Rule 23(a) is met when plaintiffs complain of an unlawful pattern and practice, even if individual factual circumstances are not identical).

(n17)Footnote 3. Lockwood Motors, Inc. v. Gen. Motors Corp., 162 F.R.D. 569, 575 (D. Minn. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART III. PREREQUISITES TO ALL CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.24

§ 14A.24 Typicality of Claims and Defenses of Representatives With Those of Classn*

[1] Statement of Typicality Requirement

One or more members of a class may sue or be sued as representative parties only if the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the claims or defenses of the class. n1 The primary purpose of the requirement of typicality is to ensure that the interests of the representative parties, also known as the named plaintiffs or defendants, are substantially in conformance with those of the absent class members. Thus, the typicality requirement is designed to preclude certification in circumstances when the legal theories of the named plaintiffs potentially conflict with those of the absentees, by requiring that the common claims are as comparably key to the claims of the named plaintiffs as to the claims of the absentees. n2 In other words, the determination of whether the named plaintiffs' claims and the class claims are interrelated ensures that the interests of the absent class members will be fairly and adequately protected. n3 Conversely, if the legal theories of the class representatives conflict with those of the absent class members, there is a lack of typicality which precludes certification of the class. n4

[2] Characteristics of Typicality of Claims or Defenses

A class representative's claims or defenses satisfy the typicality requirement if they arise from the same events, practice, or conduct, and are based on the same legal theory as those of other class members. n1 The most crucial inquiry regarding typicality is whether the class representatives' claims or defenses have the same essential characteristics as those of the proposed class. n2 If the claims arise from a similar course of conduct and share the same legal theory, factual differences will not defeat typicality. n3 Similarly, the representatives' claims meet the typicality requirement if the factual situation is reasonably co-extensive with those of the class; the legal theories need not be substantially identical. n4

[3] Factors Indicating Lack of Typicality of Claims or Defenses

While mere differences in factual circumstances between members of a class do not defeat typicality, n1 the court may decide typicality is insufficient when factual differences predominate. Thus, if a court must make highly fact-specific or individualized determinations in order to establish a defendant's liability to each class member, the plaintiffs have not established typicality. n2 Similarly, typicality does not exist if the class representatives' claims are subject to one or more defenses unique to the representatives which will be central to the litigation. n3 The rationale behind this principle is the probability that the class representatives will become distracted by the existence of defenses unique to the representatives and, therefore, compromise the interests of the class. n4 In order to defeat typicality, the specific defense in question must be unique, arguable, and likely to involve a significant portion of the representatives' time and energy. n5 However, if a unique defense is not central to the litigation, the defense does not create a significant danger that the class representative will become distracted and, therefore, does not defeat typicality and prohibit class certification. n6

[4] Interaction of Typicality With Other Class Action Requirements

The determination of whether the typicality requirement is satisfied often overlaps with the analysis of other Rule 23 class action requirements. For example, in deciding whether to certify a class, courts frequently merge the typicality requirement with the commonality requirement of Rule 23(a)(4). n1 However, the commonality and typicality requirements serve different functions. The commonality requirement examines the sufficiency of the class itself, while the typicality requirement examines the relation between the representative parties and the class as a whole. n2

The typicality requirement also overlaps the Rule 23(a)(4) adequacy-of-representation requirement because both examine whether absentee class members will be adequately represented. n3 A lack of typicality may also defeat the adequacy-of-representation requirement because, if the class representatives' claims are not typical of those of other class members, the class representatives have less incentive to represent the claims of the other class members. n4 Despite their similarities, however, these two requirements remain distinct because the adequacy of representation requirement also involves an examination of the competency of class counsel and potential conflicts of interest. Therefore, although typicality overlaps with both commonality and adequacy of representation, courts recognize that each of the three requirements must be satisfied individually. n5

[5] Burden of Proof of Typicality

As with the other requirements of Rule 23, the burden of proving typicality lies with the proponent of class certification. n1 However, the proponent need not show that the facts and legal theories regarding the claims are identical. A class representative's claims meet the typicality requirement if they are reasonably similar to those of the class. n2 Thus, the court has considerable discretion in its determination of whether typicality exists; n3 because the claims only need to share the same essential characteristics and need not be identical, the standard for the typicality requirement is not difficult to satisfy.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.24 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3).

(n3)Footnote 2. Newton v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 259 F.3d 154, 182 (3d Cir. 2001) ; In re Mercedes Benz Tele Aid Contract Litig., 257 F.R.D. 46, 71 (D.N.J. 2009) (typicality requirement determines whether named plaintiff's individual circumstances with respect to claims are significantly different from class members).

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Milk Products Antitrust Litig., 195 F.3d 430, 436 (8th Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Kanter v. Casey, 43 F.3d 48, 57 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 1. In re Am. Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1083 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 2. Montgomery v. New Piper Aircraft, Inc., 209 F.R.D. 221, (S.D. Fla. 2004) .

(n8)Footnote 3. See Armstrong v. Davis, 275 F.3d 849, 868-869 (9th Cir. 2001) (in class action by disabled prisoners asserting discrimination claims, class members suffered from different disabilities, but these differences among alleged injuries were minor and insufficient to defeat typicality).

(n9)Footnote 4. Hanlon v. Chrysler Corporation, 150 F.3d 1011, 1019-1020 (9th Cir. 1998) (national class met typicality requirement even though legal theories differed somewhat for various class members in various states).

(n10)Footnote 1. See [2], above.

(n11)Footnote 2. Collazo v. Calderon, 212 F.R.D. 437, 443 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Bishop v. New York City Dep't of Housing Preservation & Develop., 141 F.R.D. 229, 238 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (typicality defeated because named plaintiff's demotion presented unique defense to claim of employment discrimination).

(n13)Footnote 4. Beck v. Maximus, Inc., 457 F.3d 291, 296-297 (3d Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n14)Footnote 5. In re Safeguard Scientifics, 216 F.R.D. 577, 582-583 (D.P.R. 2002) .

(n15)Footnote 6. A.F.I.K. Holding SPRL v. Fass, 216 F.R.D. 567, 576 (D.N.J. 2003) .

(n16)Footnote 1. Bullock v. Sheahan, 225 F.R.D. 227, 229 (E.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n17)Footnote 2. Hassine v. Jeffes, 846 F.2d 169, 177 n.4 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n18)Footnote 3. In re Milk Products Antitrust Litig., 195 F.3d 430, 436 (8th Cir. 1999) (typicality and adequacy requirements both serve as guidelines for determination whether maintenance of class action is economical and whether named plaintiff's claim and class claims are so interrelated that interests of absent class members will be fairly and adequately protected).

(n19)Footnote 4. In re American Med. Sys., Inc. 75 F.3d 1069, 1083 (6th Cir. 1996) (without typical claims, class representatives have no incentive to pursue claims of class).

(n20)Footnote 5. Barabin v. Aramark Corp., 210 F.R.D. 152, 157-158 (E.D. Pa. 2002) .

(n21)Footnote 1. Wiseman v. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 212 F.R.D. 482, 485 (W.D.N.C. 2003) .

(n22)Footnote 2. Schumacher v. Tyson Fresh Meats, Inc., 221 F.R.D. 605, 613 (D.S.D. 2004) .

(n23)Footnote 3. In re Milk Products Antitrust Litig., 195 F.3d 430, 436 (8th Cir. 1999) .

101 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART III. PREREQUISITES TO ALL CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.25

§ 14A.25 Adequacy of Representationn*

[1] Significance of Adequacy of Representation

One or more members of a class may sue or be sued as representative parties only if the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class. n1 The purpose of the adequacy inquiry under Rule 23(a)(4) is to protect the due process rights of absent class members. Thus, the analysis attempts to uncover any conflicts of interest between the named plaintiffs and the class they seek to represent. n2 Because absent class members are conclusively bound by the judgment in any class action brought on their behalf, the court must be especially alert to ensure that the rights of the absent class members are protected through adequate representation at all times. Differences between named plaintiffs and class members render the named plaintiffs inadequate representatives only when those differences create conflicts between the named plaintiffs' interests and those of the class members. n3

The adequacy requirement applies to both representative parties and attorneys for the parties. Thus, adequacy of representation under Rule 23(a)(4) is generally measured by three factors: n4

(1) the representative's attorneys must be qualified, experienced, and generally able to conduct the litigation; n5

(2) the representatives must have a sufficient interest in the outcome of the case to ensure vigorous advocacy; n6 and

(3) the representatives must not have interests antagonistic to those of the proposed class. n7

[2] Qualified and Competent Legal Counsel

[a] Adequacy of Class Legal Representation

Rule 23 provides for a separate procedure in which the court specifically approves and appoints class counsel. n1 In typical cases, the attorney most likely to be considered for appointment as class counsel will be the one selected by a named class representative. However, the court may make the choice of counsel on its own initiative. In appointing class counsel, the court must consider the work that an applying attorney has already done in identifying and investigating the class claim and the extent to which the attorney will fairly and adequately represent the interests of the class. n2

In making its determination to appoint class counsel, the court must consider whether the proposed attorney is competent, qualified, experienced, and able to vigorously conduct the litigation. n3 The court may also consider the experience and record of class counsel in the current case and in prior litigation; n4 the attorney's expertise in the particular type of class action; n5 and any pertinent non-legal resources available to the attorney as well, such as the availability of support staff, discovery and research resources, and the extent of other professional commitments. n6

[b] Class Counsel May Not Have Conflict With Class

The attorney appointed by the court to serve as class counsel must fairly represent the interests of the class. n7 Therefore, a law firm or an attorney may not have any conflicts of interest with the class. n8 An attorney may be disqualified if he or she has some relationship with the class representative, such as that of a relative, associate, or partner. n9 For example, an attorney who represents another class in an unrelated suit against the same defendant may not serve as class counsel. n10 Similarly, the court may deem an attorney's representation unfair if the attorney had an interest in a competitor in the same business as the defendant. n11

[3] Representative's Interest in Outcome to Ensure Vigorous Advocacy

[a] Vigorous Prosecution Indicates Adequate Representation

To qualify as adequate class representatives, the named persons must establish that they have the intent and resources to vigorously prosecute the class action. n1 There are two generally accepted considerations in the vigorous prosecution analysis: whether the representatives have the motivation for vigorous prosecution n2 and the ability of the representatives to finance the litigation. n3

[b] Motivation for Vigorous Prosecution

Courts may consider several factors that indicate either a lack of motivation or an unwillingness to ensure vigorous prosecution of the litigation, including the following:

1. Progress of the class proceedings. Delay in seeking class certification, failure to timely prosecute the litigation, or failure to comply with reasonable discovery requests are factors suggesting that the class representative is inadequate. n4 Similarly, a long delay in prosecuting a case demonstrates the plaintiffs' indifference to adequately protect interests of the class. n5

2. Familiarity with litigation. To satisfy the adequacy requirement, the class representatives must possess at least a minimal degree of knowledge regarding the class action. n6 The class representatives also should at least have a general understanding of the nature of class action litigation. n7 In this regard, the class representatives may not completely abdicate conduct of the case to counsel. n8 However, a class representative need not be so knowledgeable as to be able to assist counsel with the legal aspects of the litigation, especially in a complex case. n9

3. Amount of financial interest in outcome. If a class representative has a significant financial interest in the outcome of the litigation, a court is more likely to find the class representative to be adequate than if the representative has only a small interest. n10 However, because one purpose of a class action is to allow for the efficient adjudication of small individual claims, a class representative will not be inadequate merely because the representative has a small financial interest in the action. n11

4. Personal factors such as health. The court may consider a class representative's advanced age or ill health in its determination of the vigorous prosecution aspect of adequacy of representation. n12 However, some courts are reluctant to find a class representative inadequate based on advanced age or ill health unless there is a specific showing that the representative would be unable to fulfill his or her responsibilities to the class. n13

[c] Ability to Finance Litigation

The court may consider the ability and willingness of class representatives to finance the class litigation because that inquiry is relevant to determining adequacy of representation; if the representatives are not capable of financing the litigation adequately, then they may not prosecute the litigation vigorously. n14 Although class representatives need not pay all of the costs of the litigation, n15 the court may require that the class representatives make an affirmative demonstration of their ability to pay the costs of notice. n16 The court may accept demonstration of this financial-ability requirement by a showing that the class representatives have regularly paid litigation expenses, n17 by a statement of the class representatives that they have the ability to assume the financial obligations, n18 or by a showing that funds have been established to pay the costs of litigation. n19

[4] Absence of Antagonistic or Conflicting Claims with Other Class Members

[a] Requirement Is Based on Fiduciary Nature of Class Representation

To qualify as an adequate representative of a class, the named representative may not have interests that conflict with or are antagonistic to interests of other class members. n1 This requirement is based on the principle that a class representative acts as a fiduciary for the entire class. As a fiduciary, the class representative owes the putative class a duty of loyalty. n2 However, Rule 23(a)(4) does not require that the interests of the class representative and the absentee class members be identical. n3 Furthermore, the named representative needs only to be adequate and not the best of all possible representatives. n4 Courts have also stated that not every potential disagreement between a representative and the class members will preclude a class suit. The conflict that will prevent a plaintiff from meeting the Rule 23(a)(4) prerequisite must be fundamental. n5

[b] Factors That Indicate That Representation Is Adequate Despite Conflict

The following factors indicate that representation is adequate despite a claim of conflict or antagonism:

1. Insubstantial conflict or antagonism. If a conflict or antagonism is merely speculative, hypothetical, or minor, it will not cause the named representatives to be inadequate. n6 Thus, disagreements among class members as to the proper type or scope of relief will not create an impermissible conflict of interest if the class members agree that the defendant is liable. n7

2. Conflict unrelated to subject matter. A conflict of interest does not preclude class certification if the conflict is unrelated to the subject matter of the litigation. For example, mere personality conflicts among the members of the class will not lead to a finding of inadequacy of representation. n8

3. Conflict merely regarding propriety of litigation. The fact that some members of the class object to the litigation is generally insufficient to make the class representative inadequate under Rule 23(a)(4). n9 However, the court may find class representatives to be inadequate if a substantial number of the class members are clearly and vigorously opposed to the litigation. n10

4. Competition among members. The mere fact that a class action could create a conflict of economic interests between the class representatives and the remaining class members does not mean their representation is inadequate. Thus, adequacy of representation is not defeated because of potential economic competition with respect to the relief sought. n11

[c] Factors That Indicate That Representation Is Inadequate Due to Conflict

The following factors indicate that representation is inadequate due to conflict or antagonism:

1. Unique defense that is central to litigation. If the class representative is subject to a defense unique to the representative that potentially will become a focus of the litigation, the class representative will not satisfy the adequacy of representation requirement. n12 The justification for this principle is that the class representative may become distracted by the presence of a unique defense, causing plaintiff's representation of the class to be placed at a disadvantage. n13

2. Representative's legal status. The representative's legal capacity may affect its ability to adequately represent the class. For example, one court has held that a corporation may be inadequate to represent the interest of a class that consists mostly of individuals, at least where the motivations and decision-making processes of the corporation would undermine the interests of individual class members. n14 Depending on the circumstances, an executor or trustee may not satisfy the adequacy-of-representation requirement, at least where the status has a tendency to cause conflict with the class members. n15

3. Representative's affiliation with class counsel. The court may find a conflict of interest between the class representative and other class members if the class representative is closely affiliated with class counsel; courts have held class representatives inadequate when they were related to counsel, or a business associate of counsel, such as a partner. n16 The rationale for denying representative status to such class members is that they might sacrifice the interests of the class for the benefit of class counsel. n17

4. Claims against defendant other than class claims. If a class representative also has asserted claims against a class action defendant in a second lawsuit separate from the class action, a court may conclude that the class representative has a conflict of interest with the class. n18 In a similar manner, courts have found conflicts of interest in cases in which corporate shareholders attempt to pursue both class and derivative claims in the same action. n19

[5] Interaction of Adequacy Determination With Other Class Action Requirements

Courts have often noted that a determination of the adequacy of representation requirement overlaps with the determination of the commonality requirement of Rule 23(a)(2) n1 because both requirements may consider whether the class representatives' claims and the class claims are so similar that the interests of the proposed class will be fairly and adequately represented by the plaintiffs. n2 The two requirements are distinct, however, because the adequacy of representation requirement considers issues additional to representation of interests, such as the competency of class counsel and potential conflicts of interest. n3

Courts have also noted that judicial determination of the adequacy of representation requirement frequently overlaps with the court's determination of the typicality requirement of Rule 23(a)(3) because the adequacy and typicality tests both serve as guidelines for the determination of whether the named plaintiffs' claims and class claims are so interrelated that interests of absent class members will be fairly and adequately protected. n4 Despite their similarity, however, these two requirements remain distinct because the adequacy-of-representation requirement also involves an examination of the competency of class counsel and potential conflicts of interests. n5

[6] Burden of Proof of Adequacy of Representation

Most courts have held that the party seeking class certification carries the burden of proving that all Rule 23(a) requirements are satisfied, including adequacy of representation. n1 However, some courts have held that unlike the other factors that determine certification, the burden of proof is on the party seeking to establish inadequacy of the representative, rather than on the proponent of class action certification. n2 Thus, when the plaintiffs are requesting class certification, these courts hold that the defendants must prove that counsel of the plaintiffs is not qualified or competent to adequately represent the proposed class or that the named plaintiffs' interests are antagonistic to the class. n3

[7] Court's Determination of Adequacy of Representation

Whether there is adequate representation of all class members is a question of fact that primarily depends on the circumstances of each case. Consequently, the district court's adequacy determination will be reversed only if the district court abuses its discretion. n1 The trial court will make a determination of the adequacy of representation at all stages of the litigation, to protect absent parties who will be bound by the judgment. n2 Therefore, the court may raise the issue of inadequacy of representation on its own initiative, or any party may raise the issue. n3

If a court concludes before certification that the proposed class representative will not fairly and adequately protect the class's interests, the court may either refuse to certify the class action for inadequacy of representation, n4 or the court may redefine the class before certification to include only those plaintiffs who are adequately represented. n5

If events occur after class certification that render a class representative inadequate, the court has several options: the court may decertify the class, n6 or may remedy the inadequacy by substituting a new representative, n7 excluding those class members who are not adequately represented, certifying subclasses, n8 or bifurcating the trial. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.25 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4).

(n3)Footnote 2. London v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 340 F.3d 1246, 1253 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Berger v. Compaq Computer Corp., 257 F.3d 475, 479-480 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Berger v. Compaq Computer Corp., 257 F.3d 475, 479-480 (5th Cir. 2001) ; Westways World Travel, Inc. v. AMR Corp., 218 F.R.D. 223, 235-236 (C.D. Cal. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 5. See [2], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. See [3], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See [4], below.

(n9)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g); 28 U.S.C. § 1711(3).

(n10)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B).

(n11)Footnote 3. In re Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., Fair Debt Collection Practices Act Litig., 208 F.R.D. 493, 504 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) .

(n12)Footnote 4. Westways World Travel, Inc. v. AMR Corp., 218 F.R.D. 223, 235-236 (C.D. Cal. 2003) .

(n13)Footnote 5. Sebo v. Rubenstein, 188 F.R.D. 310, 317 (N.D. Ill. 1999) .

(n14)Footnote 6. Gomez v. Illinois State Board of Education, 117 F.R.D. 394, 401 (N.D. Ill. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B).

(n16)Footnote 8. Westways World Travel, Inc. v. AMR Corp., 218 F.R.D. 223, 235-236 (C.D. Cal. 2003) .

(n17)Footnote 9. Zylstra v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 578 F.2d 102, 104 (5th Cir. 1978) .

(n18)Footnote 10. Sullivan v. Chase Inv. Servs., Inc., 79 F.R.D. 246, 258 (N.D. Ill. 1978) .

(n19)Footnote 11. Zylstra v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 578 F.2d 102, 104 (5th Cir. 1978) .

(n20)Footnote 1. Lifestar Ambulance Serv. v. United States, 211 F.R.D. 688, 700-701 (M.D. Ga. 2003) , rev'd on other grounds, 365 F.3d 1293 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n21)Footnote 2. See [b], below.

(n22)Footnote 3. See [c], below.

(n23)Footnote 4. East Texas Motor Freight Sys., Inc. v. Rodriguez, 431 U.S. 395, 405, 97 S. Ct. 1891, 52 L. Ed. 2d 453 (1977) .

(n24)Footnote 5. Culver v. City of Milwaukee, 277 F.3d 908, 912 (7th Cir. 2002) (neither class representative nor class counsel moved suit forward during eight years it had been pending).

(n25)Footnote 6. Darvin v. International Harvester Co., 610 F. Supp. 255, 257 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (named plaintiff was inadequate when representative's deposition revealed extremely limited or nonexistent knowledge of facts pleaded).

(n26)Footnote 7. Margolis v. Caterpillar, Inc., 815 F. Supp. 1150, 1154 (C.D. Ill. 1991) .

(n27)Footnote 8. Lifestar Ambulance Serv. v. United States, 211 F.R.D. 688, 700-701 (M.D. Ga. 2003) , rev'd on other grounds, 365 F.3d 1293 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n28)Footnote 9. In re Southeast Hotel Properties, Ltd. Partnership Investor Litig., 151 F.R.D. 597, 607 (W.D.N.C. 1993) .

(n29)Footnote 10. In re Boardwalk Marketplace Sec. Litig., 122 F.R.D. 4, 8 (D. Conn. 1988) (representatives who had invested $50,000 in case had substantial interest in vigorously pursuing litigation).

(n30)Footnote 11. In re Aluminum Phosphide Antitrust Litig., 160 F.R.D. 609, 614 (D. Kan. 1995) .

(n31)Footnote 12. Edgington v. R.G. Dickinson & Co., 139 F.R.D. 183, 195 (D. Kan. 1991) .

(n32)Footnote 13. Rubenstein v. Collins, 162 F.R.D. 534, 538 (S.D. Tex. 1995) .

(n33)Footnote 14. In re Simon II Litig., 211 F.R.D. 86, 190 (E.D.N.Y. 2002) .

(n34)Footnote 15. Rand v. Monsanto Co., 926 F.2d 596, 599 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n35)Footnote 16. In re Ind. Gasoline Antitrust Litig., 79 F.R.D. 552, 557 (D. Md. 1978) .

(n36)Footnote 17. Esler v. Northrop Corp., 86 F.R.D. 20, 36 (W.D. Mo. 1979) .

(n37)Footnote 18. In re Simon II Litig., 211 F.R.D. 86, 190 (E.D.N.Y. 2002) .

(n38)Footnote 19. Jansen v. Greyhound Corp., 692 F. Supp. 1022, 1028 (N.D. Iowa 1986) .

(n39)Footnote 1. Valley Drug Co. v. Geneva Pharms., Inc., 350 F.3d 1181, 1189 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n40)Footnote 2. Culver v. City of Milwaukee, 277 F.3d 908 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n41)Footnote 3. In re Tetracycline Cases, 107 F.R.D. 719, 730 (W.D. Mo. 1985) .

(n42)Footnote 4. Ballan v. Upjohn Co., 159 F.R.D. 473, 482 (W.D. Mich. 1994) .

(n43)Footnote 5. In re Visa Check/MasterMoney Antitrust Litig. v. Visa, USA Inc., 280 F.3d 124, 143-145 (2d Cir. 2001) ; see [b], below.

(n44)Footnote 6. Valley Drug Co. v. Geneva Pharms., Inc., 350 F.3d 1181, 1189 (11th Cir. 2003) (only fundamental conflict will defeat certification).

(n45)Footnote 7. Hispanics United of DuPage County v. Village of Addison, 160 F.R.D. 681, 689-690 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (fact that some plaintiffs may be entitled to monetary damages does not create conflict between those plaintiffs and others who would be limited to injunctive relief).

(n46)Footnote 8. Krueger v. New York Tel. Co., 163 F.R.D. 433, 443 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n47)Footnote 9. Horton v. Goose Creek Indep. School District, 690 F.2d 470, 486-487 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n48)Footnote 10. East Texas Motor Freight Sys. v. Rodriguez, 431 U.S. 395, 403, 97 S. Ct. 1891, 52 L. Ed. 2d 453 (1977) .

(n49)Footnote 11. Uniondale Beer Co. v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., 117 F.R.D. 340, 342 (E.D.N.Y. 1987) (although there might have been economic conflict between competitor class members in antitrust action, representation was adequate because all class members sought to prove that defendants conspired to fix prices).

(n50)Footnote 12. A.F.I.K. Holding SPRL v. Fass, 216 F.R.D. 567, 576 (D.N.J. 2003) .

(n51)Footnote 13. German v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 168 F.R.D. 145, 154-155 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n52)Footnote 14. In re LILCO Litig., 111 F.R.D. 663, 672 (E.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n53)Footnote 15. First Interstate Bank v. Chapman & Cutler, 837 F.2d 775, 781-782 (7th Cir. 1988) (because executor could only act for benefit of creditors and beneficiaries of estate, executor was inadequate class representative).

(n54)Footnote 16. Susman v. Lincoln Am. Corp., 561 F.2d 86, 95 (7th Cir. 1977) .

(n55)Footnote 17. Phillips v. Joint Legislative Com., Etc., 637 F.2d 1014, 1023-1024 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n56)Footnote 18. Kurczi v. Eli Lilly & Co., 160 F.R.D. 667, 678-679 (N.D. Ohio 1995) .

(n57)Footnote 19. Ryan v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 765 F. Supp. 133, 135-137 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n58)Footnote 1. Szczubelek v. Cendant Mortg. Corp., 215 F.R.D. 107, 119 (D.N.J. 2002) .

(n59)Footnote 2. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 626 n.20, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689

(1997) .

(n60)Footnote 3. Szczubelek v. Cendant Mortg. Corp., 215 F.R.D. 107, 119 (D.N.J. 2002) .

(n61)Footnote 4. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 626 n.20, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n62)Footnote 5. Barabin v. Aramark Corp., 210 F.R.D. 152, 157-158 (E.D. Pa. 2002) .

(n63)Footnote 1. Berger v. Compaq Computer Corp., 257 F.3d 475, 479 (5th Cir. 2001) ; Ogden v. AmeriCredit Corp., 225 F.R.D. 529, 538 (N.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n64)Footnote 2. Trautz v. Weisman, 846 F. Supp. 1160, 1167 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n65)Footnote 3. Piper v. Portnoff Law Assocs., 215 F.R.D. 495, 502 (E.D. Pa. 2003) .

(n66)Footnote 1. In re Visa Check/MasterMoney Antitrust Litig. v. Visa, USA Inc., 280 F.3d 124, 143-145 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n67)Footnote 2. Foe v. Cuomo, 892 F.2d 196, 198 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n68)Footnote 3. Lewis v. National Football League, 146 F.R.D. 5, 12 (D.D.C. 1992) .

(n69)Footnote 4. Roman v. ESB, Inc., 550 F.2d 1343, 1356 (4th Cir. 1976) .

(n70)Footnote 5. Adair v. Sorenson, 134 F.R.D. 13, 20 (D. Mass. 1991) .

(n71)Footnote 6. Culver v. City of Milwaukee, 277 F.3d 908, 910 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n72)Footnote 7. Mississippi Protection & Advocacy Sys., Inc. v. Cotten, 929 F.2d 1054, 1058 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n73)Footnote 8. Welch v. Board of Directors, 146 F.R.D. 131, 136 (W.D. Pa. 1993) .

(n74)Footnote 9. Shipes v. Trinity Indus., 987 F.2d 311, 315 (5th Cir. 1993) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART III. PREREQUISITES TO ALL CLASS ACTIONS

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.26through 14A.29

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.26[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART IV. TYPES OF CLASS ACTIONS AVAILABLE

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.30

§ 14A.30 Summary of Three Types of Class Actions Under Federal Civil Rulesn*

[1] Three Types of Class Actions Permissible in Federal Court

If all class action prerequisites specified in Rule 23(a) are satisfied, n1 Rule 23(b) provides that the named representatives may prosecute the action as a class action if it falls within any one or more of three categories, n2 which are based on the relationship and interaction between the parties. n3 Many courts refer to these categories of class action as "Type I," "Type II," and "Type III." n4

A Type I class action under Rule 23(b)(1) is proper in two situations: n5 when separate actions would create incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class, n6 or when the interests of members not parties to the litigation would be impeded by individual adjudications. n7 A Type II class action requires that the plaintiff seek primarily injunctive or declaratory relief. n8 A Type III class action requires that common questions of law or fact predominate over any issues affecting only individual members, and, therefore, a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy. n9

[2] Court's Discretion to Designate Type When Claims Qualify Under More Than One Type of Class Action

In many situations, a case may qualify as more than one of the three types of class actions listed under Rule 23(b). For example, class actions often qualify under both Rule 23(b)(1) and Rule 23(b)(3) n1 or under both Rule 23(b)(2) and Rule 23(b)(3). n2 In such situations, if the court has a choice of certifying a class under either Rule 23(b)(1) or Rule 23(b)(2) on the one hand, and Rule 23(b)(3) on the other hand, the courts will generally exercise their discretion to certify the class action under Rule 23(b)(1) or Rule 23(b)(2). The first reason for this preference is that members of a Rule 23(b)(1) or 23(b)(2) class do not have the option to "opt out" of the class action, while members of a Rule 23(b)(3) class are entitled to opt out. Courts generally prefer the "no opt-out" class action because there is less risk that individual members will pursue separate litigation that could possibly prejudice other class members or the defendant. n3 The second reason for the preference is that mandatory notice to all class members is required only for class actions under Rule 23(b)(3). n4 These preferences in applying the various parts of Rule 23(b) balance an individual's due process rights with the judiciary's policy of expediting the orderly resolution of controversies. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.40 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1)-(a)(4); see also § 14A.20 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)-(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. Gunnells v. Healthplan Servs., 348 F.3d 417, 425-426 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Alkire v. Irving, 330 F.3d 802, 820 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1).

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 14A.31[1].

(n8)Footnote 7. See § 14A.31[2].

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2); see § 14A.32.

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2); see § 14A.33.

(n11)Footnote 1. In re A.H. Robins Co., 880 F.2d 709, 728 (4th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 959 (1989) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n12)Footnote 2. See Alkire v. Irving, 330 F.3d 802, 820 (6th Cir. 2003) .

(n13)Footnote 3. DeBoer v. Mellon Mortgage Co., 64 F.3d 1171, 1175 (8th Cir. 1995) (certification under Rule 23(b)(1) or 23(b)(2) is preferable over 23(b)(3), in order to avoid unnecessary inconsistencies and compromises in future litigation).

(n14)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n15)Footnote 5. In re Dennis Greenman Sec. Litigation, 829 F.2d 1539, 1544 (11th Cir. 1987) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART IV. TYPES OF CLASS ACTIONS AVAILABLE

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.31

§ 14A.31 Class Action Commenced to Prevent Inconsistent or Varying Adjudicationsn*

[1] Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications That Would Pose Risk to Party Opposing Class

[a] Requirements for Prosecution of Class Action Based on Risk Posed to Party Opposing Class

Once the prerequisites of Rule 23(a) are met, n1 the representatives of a class may prosecute an action as a class action if the prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class. n2 Thus, in addition to the general prerequisites of a class action, a Rule 23(b)(1)(A) class action has the following requirements: n3

- An actual risk of separate actions being brought in the absence of a class action; n4
- The prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class; n5 and
- The inconsistent or varying adjudications would, in turn, establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class. n6

[b] Actual Risk of Initiation of Separate Actions

A party may maintain a class action under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) only if the prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class that would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class. n7 The risk of the initiation of separate actions must be actual n8 and not hypothetical, speculative, or unlikely. n9 This provision contains language similar to the language used in Rule 19(a) relating to the joinder of parties. Courts have held that under the provision, a party seeking class certification must establish that there is a reasonable possibility that separate actions involving the same subject matter will be brought in the absence of a class action. n10

[c] Separate Action Would Create Risk of Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications

Certification under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) requires that likely separate adjudications will probably result in inconsistent or varying adjudications imposing incompatible standards of conduct on the party opposing the class. n11 Therefore, it is not enough that separate litigation may result in inconsistent adjudications. The mere possibility of varying or inconsistent adjudications in which a party may prevail against a putative class member in one case and lose in a second case to another class member does not in itself impose incompatible standards of conduct on the party in satisfaction of Rule 23(b)(1)(A). n12 Rather, Rule 23(b)(1)(A) is satisfied only if inconsistent judgments in separate suits would place the party opposing the class in the position of being unable to comply with one judgment without violating the terms of another judgment. n13 Thus, Rule 23(b)(1)(A) does not generally apply to actions seeking compensatory damages alone. n14

[d] Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications Would Impose Incompatible Standards of Conduct on Party Opposing Class

A party may maintain a class action under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) only if the inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class. n15 Therefore, courts have usually certified classes under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) only in cases that requested injunctive or declaratory relief in which the party opposing the class is obligated to provide identical treatment to all class members, so that any action taken with respect to the class will necessarily affect all class members; usually, such certification is most common in litigation involving labor relations, the government, or trustees or administrators of financial accounts. In each of these types of cases, the party may be required to provide identical treatment to all members of a defined group. n16 As examples, class certification pursuant to Rule 23(b)(1)(A) would be appropriate in the following cases: an action to enjoin state officers from terminating unemployment compensation without a hearing, an action for a declaratory judgment with respect to plaintiff's insurance liability on an illegally declared dividend, or an action seeking rescission of purchases of securities that allegedly were made on the basis of fraudulent misrepresentations. n17

[e] Certification of Class of Defendants

The express language of Rule 23(b)(1)(A) encompasses the risk created by the prosecution of separate actions "against individual members of the class;" n18 this means that the court may certify defendant classes under this provision provided that the action satisfies the rule's requirement that individual litigation may establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party plaintiff opposing the proposed class of defendants. However, as with certification of a plaintiff class, the mere fact that the party plaintiff opposing the class of defendants may prevail against one member of the defendant class and not against another does not satisfy the requirements of Rule 23(b)(1)(A), so that without more, the court will deny certification. n19

[f] Notice Is Not Absolute Right of Class Members

Members of a class certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) do not have an express right to be notified of the action. n20 However, the court does have discretion to notify members when the court makes certification under Rule 23(b)(1)(A). For this type of class action, the court may direct "appropriate" notice to the class. n21 The court's discretion and flexibility in deciding whether to direct notice in a Rule 23(b)(1) class action extends to the method of giving notice. If the court decides to direct notice, the court may decide that informal methods or methods calculated to reach less than all the class are appropriate. n22 The court also has discretion to issue an order requiring that notice be given to some or all of the members of the class, informing them of a particular step in the action and affording them the opportunity to participate in the action or otherwise present their positions to the court. n23

[g] Class Members Do Not Have Right to Opt Out

Members of a Rule 23(b)(1)(A) class are not entitled to opt out of the action, unlike members of a class certified pursuant to Rule 23(b)(3). n24 The rationale behind this prohibition is that the very purpose of a Rule 23(b)(1)(A) action would be defeated if a class member could opt out of the litigation and then institute his or her own litigation; separate litigation would expose the party opposing the class to the risk of facing incompatible standards of conduct. n25 However, there is some authority for the proposition that district courts have discretion to grant opt-out rights from classes certified under Rule 23(b)(1) when monetary damages are sought in addition to injunctive or declarative relief. n26

[2] Inconsistent or Varying Adjudications That Would Pose Risk to Members of Class

[a] Requirements for Prosecution of Class Action When Risk Is Posed to Members of Class

Once the prerequisites of Rule 23(a) are met, n1 the representatives of a class may prosecute an action as a class action if the prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual members of the class, and any such adjudication as a practical matter would be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the adjudications, or substantially impair or would impede their ability to protect their interests. n2 Thus, in addition to the four general prerequisites of a class action, n3 a Rule 23(b)(1)(B) class action has two requirements: n4

- The prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of adjudications involving individual members of the class. A party may invoke Rule 23(b)(1)(B) by showing a potential risk of adjudications, without demonstrating that separate adjudications are probable or even likely. n5

- Any adjudication against members as a practical matter would be dispositive of the interests of other members not parties to the adjudications or would substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests. This risk of prejudice to the potential class members need only be practical, not legal or technical. n6

While Rule 23(b)(1)(A) focuses on possible prejudice to the parties opposing the class due to multiple adjudications, n7 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) focuses on possible prejudice to the members of the proposed class and seeks to protect them against situations in which they would be prejudiced by separate adjudication obtained by other class members. Thus, class certification under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) may be appropriate if a separate adjudication could potentially harm, or as a practical matter would be dispositive of, claims by other class members who were not represented in that other adjudication. n8 One important Rule 23(b)(1)(B) action is the "limited fund" class action, where there is a finite amount of money to satisfy all claims, and when one or a few plaintiffs out of a pool of many potential claimants could exhaust the entire fund in a separate adjudication, to the detriment of the other potential claimants. n9

[b] Applicability to Cases Seeking Money Damages From Common, Limited Source of Funds

[i] Limited Fund Class Action Requirements

Courts most commonly certify cases as Rule 23(b)(1)(B) class actions when they are "limited fund" cases. n10 A limited fund action is an action in which any recovery will come from a fixed fund of assets that is, or may be, insufficient to satisfy all of the claims against the fund and in which the fund must be the plaintiffs' sole source of recovery. n11 Thus, if the assets of the defendants and any applicable insurance coverage are insufficient to satisfy all of the plaintiffs' claims, the sum of those assets constitutes a limited fund. n12 Similarly, courts have found a limited fund when the defendant is an insolvent entity that, despite a flow of income, is unable to earn sufficient amounts to pay all present and future claims. n13 The purpose of certification of a limited fund class action is to ensure that allocation of the defendant's finite fund does not depend on which party gets to the courthouse first or chooses a courthouse that may provide faster results than others. n14 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) is thus designed to preserve a limited fund for the benefit of an entire discernable class, against individual claims of class members that could consume the fund and leave subsequent class member claimants with no remedy. n15

Except for an action seeking damages to be paid out of a common, limited fund, which is in essence considered a request for equitable relief, n16 a court may not certify a class pursuant to Rule 23(b)(1)(B) if the action is seeking only money damages. n17 However, a request for money damages does not preclude certification provided that the plaintiff is also requesting injunctive or declarative relief, and the injunctive or declarative relief is not merely incidental to the action. n18

[ii] Showing Required for Limited Fund Class Action

To obtain certification based on the limited fund doctrine, a party must submit specific evidence establishing that the fund may be depleted by individual litigation before all members' claims can be satisfied. n19 There are three things the proponent must establish. The first is that the totals of the aggregated liquidated claims and the fund available for satisfying them, set definitely at their maximums, demonstrate the inadequacy of the fund to pay all the claims. The second is that the entire inadequate fund would be devoted to the overwhelming claims. Third, the claimants identified by a common theory of recovery are to be treated equitably among themselves. n20

[c] Claimants Requesting Declaratory or Injunctive Relief Regarding Common Right

A second typical case that is commonly certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) is one requesting either declaratory or injunctive relief in which one member would be prejudiced through litigation pursued by other proposed class members. n21 However, courts have generally held that if the claims or defenses of members of the proposed class are based on unique facts or individual relationships with the opposing party, certification is inappropriate. n22 Courts deny certification in such cases because different results in factually disparate actions can logically be explained on the basis of such differing facts. n23 Most courts also hold that the mere possibility of a stare decisis effect that adjudication of one member's claims may have on other members' claims is insufficient for a court to grant certification under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) because stare decisis does not bind courts in subsequent cases involving other putative class members. n24

[d] Certification of Class of Defendants

For a defendant class to be certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(B), the individual defendants' interests must be impaired or impeded by separate litigation. Courts rarely certify defendant classes in limited fund cases because plaintiffs rather than defendants are more likely to seek money damages from a limited fund. However, defendant classes may be certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) because the language of the Rule refers to the risk created by the prosecution of separate actions "against individual members of the class." n25 For example, a court may certify a defendant class in an interpleader action, in which the plaintiff seeks to distribute money to the defendants from a fund held by members of the defendant class. n26 Courts also certify defendant classes under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) in cases seeking declaratory or injunctive relief, if the defendants have common interests or ties that may be affected by an adjudication against an individual defendant. n27

[e] Notice Is Not Absolute Right of Class Members

Members of a class certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) do not have an express right to be notified of the action. n28 However, for this type of class action, the court has discretion to direct "appropriate" notice to the class. n29 The court's discretion and flexibility in deciding whether to direct notice in a Rule 23(b)(1) class action extends to the method of giving notice. If the court decides to direct notice, the court may decide that informal methods or methods calculated to reach less than all the class are appropriate. n30 The court also has discretion to issue an order requiring that notice be given to some or all of the members of the class informing them of a particular step in the action and affording them the opportunity to participate in the action or otherwise present their positions to the court. n31

[f] Class Members Do Not Have Right to Opt Out

In contrast to Rule 23(b)(3), classes certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) are more narrow and do not include the right to opt out. n32 However, in cases requesting money damages in addition to injunctive, declaratory, or equitable relief (including limited fund cases), the Due Process Clause of the Constitution may require notice of the action or the opportunity to opt out, even if the case is properly certified as a class action under a provision of Rule 23 that does not expressly authorize opting out, such as Rule 23(b)(1)(B). n33 Furthermore, the Supreme Court has held that a class member lacking minimum contacts with the forum state has a due process right to an opportunity to remove himself or herself from the class in an action seeking money damages. n34

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.41, 23.42 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1)-(a)(4); see also § 14A.20 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Doe v. Miller, 216 F.R.D. 462, 466 (S.D. Iowa 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See [b], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. See [c], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. See [d], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A).

(n9)Footnote 8. Daly v. Harris, 209 F.R.D. 180, 191 n.7 (D. Haw. 2002) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Ruland v. General Elec. Co., 94 F.R.D. 164, 166 (D. Conn. 1982) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Thomas v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 201 F.R.D. 386, 396 (E.D. Pa. 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A).

(n13)Footnote 12. McBirney v. Autrey, 106 F.R.D. 240, 245 (N.D. Tex. 1985) (rule does not apply simply because defendant is liable for damages to one plaintiff but not to another because paying one claimant is compatible with not paying another claimant).

(n14)Footnote 13. Corley v. Entergy Corp., 222 F.R.D. 316 ; see Hallaba v. Worldcom Network Servs., 196 F.R.D. 630, (D. Okla. 2000) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n15)Footnote 14. McBirney v. Autrey, 106 F.R.D. 240, 245 (N.D. Tex. 1985) (separate actions for compensatory relief would not place defendant in position of complying with one judgment while violating another).

(n16)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A).

(n17)Footnote 16. Doe v. Miller, 216 F.R.D. 462, 466 (S.D. Iowa 2003) (action against state government by group of sex offenders).

(n18)Footnote 17. Zinser v. Accufix Research Inst., Inc., 253 F.3d 1180, 1193 (9th Cir. 2001) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A).

(n20)Footnote 19. Leer v. Washington Educ. Ass'n, 172 F.R.D. 439, 450-451 (W.D. Wash. 1997) .

(n21)Footnote 20. U.S. Trust Co. v. Alpert, 163 F.R.D. 409, 419 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A).

(n23)Footnote 22. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n24)Footnote 23. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(2).

(n25)Footnote 24. Ticor Title Ins. Co. v. Brown, 511 U.S. 117, 120-122, 114 S. Ct. 1359, 128 L. Ed. 2d 33 (1994) ; Thomas v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 201 F.R.D. 386 (E.D. Pa. 2001) .

(n26)Footnote 25. McBirney v. Autrey, 106 F.R.D. 240, 245 (N.D. Tex. 1985) .

(n27)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Eubanks v. Billington, 110 F.3d 87, 94-96 (D.C. Cir. 1997) .

(n28)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1)-(a)(4); see also § 14A.20 et seq.

(n29)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(B).

(n30)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1)-(a)(4).

(n31)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(B).

(n32)Footnote 5. Eliasen v. Green Bay & W. R.R., 93 F.R.D. 408, 412 (E.D. Wis. 1982) .

(n33)Footnote 6. Alexander Grant & Co. v. McAlister, 116 F.R.D. 583, 590 (S.D. Ohio 1987) .

(n34)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A); see [1], above.

(n35)Footnote 8. Lloyd v. City of Philadelphia, 121 F.R.D. 246, 251 (E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n36)Footnote 9. Durrett v. John Deere Co., 150 F.R.D. 555, 557 (N.D. Tex. 1993) ; see [b], below.

(n37)Footnote 10. See Oshana v. Coca-Cola Co., 225 F.R.D. 575, 584 (N.D. Ill. 2005) .

(n38)Footnote 11. Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 841, 119 S. Ct. 2295, 2312, 144 L. Ed. 2d 715 (1999) .

(n39)Footnote 12. In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 100 F.R.D. 718, 725 (E.D.N.Y. 1983) .

(n40)Footnote 13. See Oshana v. Coca-Cola Co., 225 F.R.D. 575, 584 (N.D. Ill. 2005) .

(n41)Footnote 14. In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 982 F.2d 721, 735 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n42)Footnote 15. Beckert v. TPLC Holdings, Inc. (In re Telectronics Pacing Sys.), 221 F.3d 870, 876-878 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n43)Footnote 16. In re Joint Eastern & Southern Dist. Asbestos Litig., 129 B.R. 710, 832 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n44)Footnote 17. Horowitz v. Pownall, 105 F.R.D. 615, 618 (D. Md. 1985) .

(n45)Footnote 18. Robertson v. National Basketball Ass'n, 556 F.2d 682, 685 (2d Cir. 1977) .

(n46)Footnote 19. See Oshana v. Coca-Cola Co., 225 F.R.D. 575, 584 (N.D. Ill. 2005) .

(n47)Footnote 20. Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 838-840, 119 S. Ct. 2295, 144 L. Ed. 2d 715 (1999) .

(n48)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Wyandotte Nation v. City of Kan. City, 214 F.R.D. 656, 665 (D. Kan. 2003) .

(n49)Footnote 22. Riordan v. Smith Barney, 113 F.R.D. 60, 65 (N.D. Ill. 1986) (certification of securities action under 23(b)(1)(B) inappropriate if individual issues exist).

(n50)Footnote 23. In re Catawba Indian Tribe, 973 F.2d 1133, 1138 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n51)Footnote 24. Employees Ins. of Wausau v. Federal Dep. Ins. Corp., 112 F.R.D. 52, 56 (E.D. Tenn.1986) .

(n52)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(B).

(n53)Footnote 26. United States Trust Co. of N.Y. v. Alpert, 163 F.R.D. 409, 418-419 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n54)Footnote 27. In re Phar-Mor, Inc. Sec. Litig., 875 F. Supp. 277, 280 (W.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n55)Footnote 28. Spann v. AOL Time Warner, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 307, 315 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n56)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A).

(n57)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n58)Footnote 31. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(2).

(n59)Footnote 32. Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 947 (9th Cir. 2003) ; Spann v. AOL Time Warner, Inc., 219 F.R.D. 307, 315 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n60)Footnote 33. Eubanks v. Billington, 110 F.3d 87, 94-96 (D.C. Cir. 1997) .

(n61)Footnote 34. Phillips Petroleum v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 811-812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 2974, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART IV. TYPES OF CLASS ACTIONS AVAILABLE

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.32

§ 14A.32 Class Action to Obtain Injunctive or Declaratory Relief with Respect to Entire Classn*

[1] Elements of Injunctive or Declaratory Relief Class Action

After the general class action prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied, n1 the court may certify a class action if the proponent of the class action for injunctive or declaratory relief establishes the following two elements: n2

- The party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class; n3 and

- Because of that action or inaction, final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate with respect to the class as a whole. n4

[2] Party Opposing Class Must Have Acted or Refused to Act in Manner Applicable to Class as Group

A court may certify a class action under Rule 23(b)(2) only if a defendant's conduct or failure to act is generally applicable to an entire class of persons. n1 In making its determination, the court will analyze whether the defendant's behavior had a similar effect on all members of the proposed class. n2 Thus, a class action may not be certified under Rule 23(b)(2) if relief specifically tailored to each class member would be necessary to correct the allegedly wrongful conduct of the defendant. n3 However, a defendant's conduct or failure to act need not be directed specifically at each and every member of the class seeking certification, n4 nor need it damage every member of the class. n5 Additionally, a class action may be certified under Rule 23(b)(2) even though the plaintiffs request individual relief, provided that individual relief is requested in addition to a request for declaratory or injunctive relief for the class as a whole. n6

[3] Request for Injunctive Relief Must Predominate

[a] Only Incidental Monetary Damages Permitted

A court may certify a Rule 23(b)(2) class action only if the action or inaction of the opposition parties requires injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief that is appropriate with respect to the class as a whole. This means that the requested injunctive or declaratory relief must predominate over any request for monetary damages. In other words, if money damages are merely incidental to plaintiffs' request for injunctive or declaratory relief, a class action may be certified under Rule 23(b)(2). n1 A court will presume that a request for monetary relief predominates in a class action unless it is clearly incidental to the non-monetary relief sought. n2 Incidental damages are those flowing directly from liability to the class as a whole in connection with claims for injunctive or declaratory relief; incidental damages are to be viewed as a group remedy. n3

[b] Requested Declaratory Relief Must Correspond to Injunction

A party may obtain declaratory relief in a Rule 23(b)(2) class action only if the declaratory relief corresponds to final injunctive relief with respect to the entire class. As a practical matter, declaratory relief corresponds to injunctive relief if a declaratory judgment is essentially injunctive in nature or would lead to the subsequent entry of an injunction. n4 An action seeking declaratory relief is considered injunctive in nature if any final declaratory judgment would have the same effect as an injunction, which specifies the legality of the opposition's behavior and how the opposition must act or refrain from acting in the future, with respect to the class as a whole. n5 In contrast, courts have held that if an action seeks a declaratory judgment regarding liability that would support monetary damages, the action is not proper for certification under Rule 23(b)(2). n6

[4] Function of Injunctive Relief Class Action

The United States Supreme Court has noted that the primary function of actions properly certified under Rule 23(b)(2) is to prosecute civil rights actions against parties charged with unlawful, class-based discrimination. n1 However, Rule 23(b)(2) is not applicable to all class actions related to discrimination. For example, age discrimination claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act are controlled by provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act, n2 rather than Rule 23(b)(2). n3 It should also be noted that class actions under Rule 23(b)(2) are not limited exclusively to civil rights cases and may be maintained in other types of cases including actions involving constitutional claims n4 and claims involving the government. n5 In claims involving a governmental entity, the named class representative must generally exhaust all available administrative remedies before requesting certification under Rule 23(b)(2). n6

[5] Certification of Class of Defendants

Decisions are split on whether a court may certify a defendant class under Rule 23(b)(2). Some courts assert that the language of the rule does not indicate that it contemplates defense classes because of its language describing the opposition as "the party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class." Usually, plaintiffs charge defendants with having "acted," or "refused to act," rather than vice versa, and plaintiffs seek to enjoin actions by the defendants. n1 However, some courts have held that defendant class actions are permitted under Rule 23(b)(2), provided that the plaintiffs requested declaratory and injunctive relief against multiple defendants who are engaged in uniform conduct. n2

[6] Notice Is Not Absolute Right of Class Members

Members of a class certified under Rule 23(b)(2) do not have an express right to be notified of the action. n1 However, for this type of class action, the court has discretion to direct "appropriate" notice to the class. n2 The court's discretion and flexibility in deciding whether to direct notice in a Rule 23(b)(1) class action extends to the method of giving notice. If the court decides to direct notice, the court may decide that informal methods or methods calculated to reach less than all the class are appropriate. n3 The court also has discretion to issue an order requiring that notice be given to some or all of the members of the class informing them of a particular step in the action and affording them the opportunity to participate in the action or otherwise present their positions to the court. n4

[7] Class Members Do Not Have Right to Opt Out

In contrast to Rule 23(b)(3), classes certified under Rule 23(b)(2) are more narrow and do not include the right of absent members to opt out. n1 However, in cases requesting incidental money damages in addition to injunctive or declaratory relief, a court has discretion to allow class members to opt out. n2 Such a right is purely discretionary, and due process does not create any absolute right to opt out in this type of case. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.43 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1)-(a)(4); see also § 14A.20 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3. See [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See [3], below.

(n6)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2).

(n7)Footnote 2. Heastie v. Community Bank, 125 F.R.D. 669, 679-680 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (because all class members had signed non-responsibility clause, defendant bank had acted on grounds generally applicable to class).

(n8)Footnote 3. Bolin v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 231 F.3d 970, 975 (5th Cir. 2000) .

(n9)Footnote 4. Calkins v. Blum, 511 F. Supp. 1073, 1088-1089 (N.D.N.Y. 1981) .

(n10)Footnote 5. Arnold v. United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., 158 F.R.D. 439, 454-455 (N.D. Cal. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 6. Coley v. Clinton, 635 F.2d 1364, 1378 (8th Cir. 1980) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Cooper v. Southern Co., 390 F.3d 695, 721 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Jefferson v. Ingersoll International Inc., 195 F.3d 894, 896-898 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Cooper v. Southern Co., 390 F.3d 695, 720-721 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b), Committee Note to 1966 Amendments.

(n16)Footnote 5. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Coca-Cola Co., 98 F.R.D. 254, 271 (D. Del. 1983) .

(n17)Footnote 6. Barabin v. Aramark Corp., 210 F.R.D. 152, 160-161 (E.D. Pa. 2002) .

(n18)Footnote 1. Amchem Products, Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 614, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n19)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n20)Footnote 3. Held v. National Passenger Corp., 101 F.R.D. 420, 421-422 (D.D.C. 1984) .

(n21)Footnote 4. Petersen v. Talisman Sugar Corp., 478 F.2d 73, 83 (5th Cir. 1973) .

(n22)Footnote 5. Brown v. Giuliani, 158 F.R.D. 251, 269 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n23)Footnote 6. Briggs v. Anderson, 796 F.2d 1009, 1018 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n24)Footnote 1. Tilley v. TJX Cos., 345 F.3d 34, 39-41 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n25)Footnote 2. United States v. Rainbow Family, 695 F. Supp. 314, 320-321 (E.D. Tex. 1988) (court certified defendant class where plaintiff sought declaratory and injunctive relief against uniform conduct by multiple defendants).

(n26)Footnote 1. Crawford v. Honig, 37 F.3d 485, 487 n.2 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n27)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A); Reeb v. Ohio Dep't of Rehab. & Corr. Belmont Corr. Inst., 221 F.R.D. 464 (S.D. Ohio 2004) .

(n28)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n29)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(2).

(n30)Footnote 1. Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 947 (9th Cir. 2003) ; Daniels v. City of New York, 198 F.R.D. 409, 415 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) .

(n31)Footnote 2. Penson v. Terminal Transp. Co., 634 F.2d 989, 994-995 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n32)Footnote 3. Stewart v. Rubin, 948 F. Supp. 1077, 1089-1091 (D.D.C. 1996) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART IV. TYPES OF CLASS ACTIONS AVAILABLE

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.33

§ 14A.33 Class Action Based on Common Questions of Law or Factn*

[1] Statement of Requirements

After the general class action prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied, n1 the court may certify a class action if the proponent of the class action establishes two elements: n2

- Common questions predominate over any questions affecting only individual members; this is known as the predominance requirement; n3 and
- Class resolution is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy; this is known as the superiority requirement. n4

In its determination of both the predominance and superiority requirements, n5 Rule 23(b)(3) requires a court to consider the following four factors before certifying the class action: n6

- The interests of the class members in individually controlling their own litigation; n7
- The nature and extent of any relevant, pending litigation brought by or against members of the class; n8
- The desirability of concentrating the litigation in the particular forum; n9 and
- Any difficulties that the management of the class action is likely to present. n10

[2] Predominance Requirement

[a] Factors Court Should Consider

The proponents of a class action may prosecute a Rule 23(b)(3) class action only if common questions of law or fact predominate over questions affecting only individual members. n1 In making the determination of predominance, the court should consider any of the following applicable factors, n2 which indicate that predominance exists:

- Resolution of an issue common to the class would significantly advance the litigation. n3
- A common issue constitutes a significant part of each class member's individual case. n4
- Common questions are central to all of the members' claims. n5
- The common questions are related to liability. n6
- The same theory of liability was asserted by class members and all of the defendants raised the same basic defenses. n7
- The substantive elements of the class members' claims would require the same proof for each class member. n8
- The proposed class is bound together by a mutual interest in resolving common questions more than it was divided by individual interests. n9

[b] Court's Determination of Predominance

There is no precise test for determining whether common questions of law or fact predominate. Rather, Rule 23(b)(3) requires a practical evaluation of the entire action and all the factors involved. It should be noted that the predominance requirement is far more demanding than the commonality requirement of Rule 23(a). n10 For a list of predominance factors, see [a], above, and [4], below.

When a party moves for class certification, the court should not decide the merits of the case, nor consider the likelihood of success or failure on the merits, but should accept the substantive allegations contained in the complaint as true. n11 However, the court has discretion to examine factual and legal issues underlying the plaintiffs' cause of action, n12 in order to anticipate the form that a trial on those issues would take. n13 Furthermore, the facts necessary to decide predominance are typically intertwined with the facts relating to the merits, so that some inquiry into the underlying factual issues is required at the certification stage. n14

[3] Superiority Requirement

[a] Factors Court Should Consider When Comparing Class Action to Individual Lawsuits

The proponents of a class action may prosecute a Rule 23(b)(3) class action only if the class action is a superior method to other available methods for a fair and efficient adjudication of the case. n1 This requirement mandates that the class action must be superior to, and not just as good as, the other available methods for handling the controversy. n2 In making this determination, n3 the court may consider all of the follow factors:

1. The size of the proposed class. Other things being equal, a class action involving a large class is likely to be superior to more lawsuits and will save more judicial resources than actions involving fewer parties. n4

2. The extent of commonality of the issues. The more similar the issues, the more likely the class action will be superior to litigating repetitious individual actions. n5

3. Whether the court would be required to make many individual determinations of claims and defenses. Attempting to adjudicate numerous dissimilar claims and defenses through the procedure of a class trial would be inordinately time consuming and difficult, and may also violate standards of fairness and efficiency. n6

4. The size of the anticipated recovery for each individual plaintiff. If the size of any recovery would be small, there is little incentive to bring individual actions, so that a class action will be superior. n7 Conversely, plaintiffs who may recover large judgments have a greater incentive to pursue individual suits. n8

5. The complexity and expense of litigation. A class action may be superior if it is likely that individual plaintiffs would not undertake the costs of the litigation. n9 For example, because of the complexity of securities cases and the small individual recoveries that an individual plaintiff usually obtains, courts favor class actions in such cases. n10

[b] Court's Consideration of Alternative Procedural Methods

The court must consider whether the class action is superior to other procedural methods available to resolve the litigation. n11 Such alternatives to the class action include multiple individual actions n12 and the following multiple party procedural devices:

1. Consolidation. The consolidation of individual cases provides a method of adjudication that may be superior to a class action if more than one similar case is pending and the consolidated actions could resolve both common and individual questions. n13 However, consolidation may not be a viable alternative if the litigation is at an advanced stage or involves numerous claims and geographically diverse parties. n14

2. Intervention. Permitting proposed class members to intervene in a case already brought by another member may offer a superior alternative to a class action. n15 However, the presence of a large class makes intervention a less viable possibility. n16 Furthermore, if the members of the class are unlikely to learn of the existing litigation and are, therefore, unlikely to intervene in that litigation, a class action provides the best method for adjudicating the controversy. n17

3. Joinder. Another possible alternative to a class action is joinder of the class members as parties; however, the court should already have decided that joinder is impracticability, which is one of the threshold requirements for maintaining a class action. n18 Nevertheless, it is plausible that even though impracticable, joinder could be superior to the class action, for example, in a case in which the claim is not amenable to the use of an opt out class action under Rule 23(b)(3). n19

[c] Court's Determination of Superiority

When it makes a superiority determination, the court must make an informed consideration of other available methods of adjudication, compare the degree of fairness to all parties whose interests are involved between the class action and any alternative methods, and compare the efficiency of adjudication of each method. n20 Under the superiority test of Rule 23(b)(3), a class action must be better than, and not merely equivalent to, other methods of adjudication. n21 However, the adjudication of a matter through a class action is superior to no adjudication at all. n22

[4] Factors for Court Consideration in Both Predominance and Superiority Determinations

[a] Listed Factors Are Guidelines

In determining predominance and superiority, the court may consider four factors specified by Rule 23(b)(3):

(1) the interests of class members in controlling their own litigation; n1

(2) the nature and extent of any relevant, pending litigation brought by or against members of the class; n2

(3) the desirability of concentrating the litigation in the particular forum; n3 and

(4) any management difficulties the class action is likely to present. n4

These four factors provide suggestive guidelines simply to help the district court determine the benefits of the proposed class action. n5 There is no strict requirement that a court review all of these factors in every case or that the court make findings with respect to them. Furthermore, the four criteria are not exhaustive. A court may also consider any other matters pertinent to predominance and superiority. n6

[b] Individual's Interest in Controlling Separate Litigation

In deciding predominance and superiority, courts may consider an individual's interest in controlling his or her own separate litigation. n7 For example, if class members are likely to be personally or intensely involved in the litigation, the court may conclude that individual lawsuits are superior to a class action. n8 The presence or absence of large individual damage claims has also been considered as important in the motivation for separate litigation, n9 as has the strong interest of members of a proposed class to proceed with their own trial tactics. n10 On the other hand, if all class members' claims involve the same facts and law and each individual is relatively passive in their prosecution of the litigation, the court may determine that individual class members have little interest in controlling their own litigation, and that the predominance and superiority requirements have been met. n11

A court may analyze the interest of potential class members in controlling their own litigation by considering their conduct as well as expressed opinion. For example, if few class members have filed individual lawsuits, a court has discretion to determine that the members do not have a strong interest in controlling their own litigation. n12 Another indication that the class action may be the superior method of litigation is if relative few members indicate that they intend to opt out. n13

[c] Nature and Extent of Pending Litigation Involving Class Members

To determine predominance and superiority, the court may consider the nature and extent of any related litigation that class members already have commenced. n1 If other class actions are already pending regarding the same issues, the court may determine that certification of a class for another such action is not justified. n2 Similarly, if a governmental entity has brought suit on the same issue a court may decide that the proposed class action is unnecessary and an inferior method of adjudication. n3 Additionally, the more parallel lawsuits there are, the more likely it is that other methods of litigation are feasible and that a class action would not be superior for the resolution of the issues. n4

[d] Desirability of Concentrating All Claims in Single Forum

In making its determination of predominance and superiority, the court may consider the desirability of using the device of a class action to concentrate all claims in a single forum. n5 In utilizing this guideline, the court should consider factors similar to those applied in change of venue determinations, such as the accessibility of witnesses and evidence, n6 the burden on the parties, and the existence of a more appropriate forum. n7 A court may find that the geographical dispersion of class members makes it particularly appropriate to use a class action to concentrate the litigation in a particular forum, especially if the court is already familiar with the issues involved. n8

[e] Manageability of Class Action

[i] Discretion of Court

The final guideline for the trial court to consider in determining predominance and superiority is the anticipated difficulty of managing the class action. n9 This guideline is considered by courts as the most important and utilized of the four guidelines listed under Rule 23(b)(3). n10 Manageability encompasses the entire range of practical problems that could make a class action a burdensome or inappropriate method of adjudicating a particular issue. n11 However, a court may not deny class maintenance because of mere speculation regarding the manageability of a class action. n12 Rather, a court should consider only evidence of actual management problems. n13 This is particularly true with settlement classes because the United States Supreme Court has held that when certification of a class is requested for settlement purposes only, the court need not consider whether a case would be manageable because there will be no trial. n14

Manageability bears on the predominance requirement because it is a consideration of whether the individualized claims of the members predominate and make the case difficult to manage. n15 Courts have also used the manageability guideline in relation to the superiority requirement. Thus, unmanageability may defeat certification of a class when difficulties will make the class action a less fair and efficient procedure than other available methods. n16 A court may also deny certification of a large class if notification and opt-out procedures are likely to be extremely difficult to manage. n17

[ii] Manageability Factors

The following examples are factors that a court may analyze in determining manageability and, in turn, predominance and superiority:

1. The size of a class and the location of its members. For example, if class members who live in different states raise pendent state claims, the court may deny certification of the state claims on the ground that application of the varying standards of state-law liability would make the class action unmanageable. n18

2. The difficulty and expense of communicating with members of the class. This factor includes the difficulty of providing notice to each of the members. n19 If the members of the class are not identifiable, managing the action may pose insurmountable problems. n20 Similarly, if the names and addresses of all members are not known, the case will be difficult to manage. n21

3. The number of individualized claims. The court will consider the number of significant individual liability or defense issues that could would require separate hearings for each class member in order to establish the defendants' liability. For example, if individualized proof required by state statutes or common laws predominate over the common issues in the case, the court may deny class certification. n22

4. The difficulty in computing damages. In this regard, the presence of individual issues increases the difficulty of assessing injury and calculating damages. Consequently, some courts have held that if individual issues in the case will require a significant number of separate trials, the class action will be unmanageable. n23 However, if a court can calculate damages by using a mathematical formula or statistical techniques, the existence of individualized damage claims does not pose a barrier to certification. n24

[5] Notice to Members When Class Is Based on Common Questions of Law or Fact

[a] Notice Is Mandatory

When a class is certified under Rule 23(b)(3), the court must direct that notice be given to the class members of the option to be excluded from the class, of the procedural rights in the class action, and of the effect of the judgment. n1 The notice must be the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. n2

The notice required in Rule 23(b)(3) class actions is entirely different from that for classes certified under Rule 23(b)(1) or (2), in which the court has discretion to give notice and the manner in which notice, if any, is given. n3 Under Rule 23(b)(3), notice of certification and opt-out rights to members of classes certified is "required" and "mandatory," n4 and not in any way discretionary. n5 Mandatory notice is based on constitutional due process, which the Supreme Court has held requires the notice and opt-out procedure specified in Rule 23(c)(2)(B) for money damages class actions certified under Rule 23(b)(3). n6

[b] Required Contents

For any class certified under Rule 23(b)(3), the court must direct to the class members the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. The notice must concisely and clearly state in plain, easily understood language all six of the following items of information: n7

- The nature of the class action. n8
- The definition of the class certified. n9
- Class claims, issues, or defenses. n10
- That a class member may enter an appearance through counsel if the member desires. n11
- That the court will exclude from the class any member who requests exclusion, stating when and how members may elect to be excluded. n12
- The binding effect of a class judgment on class members. n13

The notice should be drafted in such a manner that it is understandable by the people targeted by the notice, which commonly means that it must be in lay terms. n14 The plain language requirement is a reminder that the court and counsel need to strive to communicate effectively with class members and to provide information about most class actions that is both accurate and easily understood by class members who are not themselves attorneys. n15

If liability is established against a defendant in a money damages class action under Rule 23(b)(3), courts may order additional notice to class members that may include a proof of claim form and that establishes a deadline by which class members must submit proof of their individual damages claims. The notice usually provides that those who fail to submit proof by the time of the notice will be barred from any recovery. n16 However, a court may generally not require class members to file a proof of claim form before a liability determination because courts have generally found the use of such a form to be an improper opt-in requirement in violation of Rule 23(c)(2), at least as a prerequisite to trial. n17

[c] Persons Entitled to Notice

The notice required in Rule 23(b)(3) class actions must be the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. n18 Courts have not stated a precise definition of reasonable effort but, rather, have determined the issue on the circumstances of each case. n19 Generally, the proponent of the class action has the burden to identify class members. n20 However, if the party opposing the class is able to identify and find addresses for class members with less effort or expense than the representative plaintiffs, the district court has discretion to order the defendant to perform the identification. n21

Courts should consider two factors in determining persons to be notified and the type of notice to be given. The first factor is the information available to the parties. If the names and last known addresses of class members either are known to the parties or are capable of being identified from records available to the parties, the parties must obtain the information and provide it to the court to facilitate notice. n22 The second factor is the expense of notice. In this regard, the court will consider all proposed means to identify and locate class members and weigh the anticipated benefits against anticipated expenses. Proposed methods that have a high expense and low probability of producing identities and addresses of potential class members are not within the scope of reasonable efforts, and the court will not require the implementation of those methods. n23 When absent class members cannot be identified through reasonable efforts, the court may dispense with individual notice, and use, for example, notice by publication. n24

[d] Method of Notification of Class Members

The court must provide Rule 23(b)(3) class members with the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. n25 When the identity and address of class members can be acquired with reasonable effort, the court should send the notice by first-class mail to each class member. n26 The mere fact that not every class member actually receives notice sent by first class mail does not make this type of notice invalid because the best notice practicable standard does not require that each and every class member actually receive notice, n27 provided that the class as a whole received adequate notice. n28

For class members who cannot be identified or located through reasonable efforts, the court may order notice by publication in periodicals that potential class members are most likely to read. n29 However, the court ordinarily may not rely solely on notice by publication; there must also be direct notice to any individual class members that can be identified with reasonable effort. n30 When appropriate, the court may order that individual notice or publication be augmented by other methods, for example, by broadcast in electronic media. n31

[e] Appearance by Counsel

The notice must inform each Rule 23(b)(3) class member that the class member may enter an appearance through individual counsel, if the member so desires. n32 In addition, the notice should usually contain the names and addresses of the attorneys who have been appointed class counsel. n33 This is necessary information for class members to decide whether to retain their own counsel. n34 A class member may want to enter an individual appearance when the member believes that his or her interest is not being adequately represented by the class representative or class counsel, or when the member's interest in the outcome of the class action is so important to the member that the member wants to receive notice of all filings in the case. n35

[f] Right of Member to Opt Out of Class

The court must provide Rule 23(b)(3) class action members with notice that the court will exclude from the class any member who requests exclusion, stating when and how members may elect to be excluded. n36 This is commonly known as a member's right to opt out. n37 As a practical matter, detailed explanations of the means for opting out of the class are usually contained in a form that the court supplies for a member to exercise the opt-out right and instructions for completing that form. Such a form is sufficient as an explanation of the mechanism for requesting exclusion from the class. n38

The notice must also clearly explain the member's option to take no action and remain in the class and participate in the class action. Federal class action procedures do not provide for "opt-in" classes in which the class members need to take action to be included in the class. n39 Therefore, a class member may do nothing and rely on the class counsel and class representative to conduct the action, in which case the class member is bound by the judgment. n40

[g] Amendment or Correction of Notice

The court has discretion to issue an amended or modified notice in the event circumstances change n41 or if an error has been included in the actual notice sent to individuals, such as an incorrect date to return the exclusion form or a failure to include an instruction. The court may remedy the mistake by extending the exclusion period or directing that another notice letter be sent to correct the information. n42 Additionally, if the "best practicable notice" is not actually received by an absent class member until the opt-out deadline has passed, the court has the discretion to allow the class member to opt out after the deadline. n43

[h] Payment of Expense of Notice

The general rule is that the plaintiff class must pay all costs to compile and send the required notice. n44 However, there are some exceptions to the general rule. If a court orders a defendant to perform certain tasks associated with notice, the defendant may also be ordered to pay the cost of notice if the cost to the defendant would be insubstantial. n45 Courts have also required that the defendant must pay the costs if the defendant has requested certification of a plaintiff class, n46 has conducted itself improperly, n47 or has assumed the expenses as part of a settlement agreement. n48

[i] Appeal of Certain Court Orders Regarding Notice

A party may, in some instances, challenge a trial court's class notification order by an interlocutory appeal because the Supreme Court has held that the district court's notice decisions are appealable as final decisions. The rule is applicable only to notice orders that involve a collateral matter unrelated to the merits of the plaintiff's claim and that constitute a final disposition of a claimed right that is not an element of a claim and which does not require direct consideration with the claim. An example of such an order would be one requiring the defendant to pay expenses of giving notice. n49 On the other hand, an order setting forth the method of notification is generally not appealable unless there is a significant likelihood that a substantial portion of the class members will not receive actual notice. n50

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.43 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1)-(a)(4); see also § 14A.20 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 3. See [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See [3], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. Amchem Products, Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 615, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997)
.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3); see [4][a], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(A); see [4][b], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(B); see [4][c], below.

(n10)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(C); see [4][d], below.

(n11)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(D); see [4][e], below.

(n12)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n13)Footnote 2. See Presbyterian Church of Sudan v. Talisman Energy, Inc., 226 F.R.D. 456, 468 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Krieger v. Gast, 197 F.R.D. 310, 319 (W.D. Mich. 2000) .

(n15)Footnote 4. In re Energy Sys. Equip. Leasing Sec. Litig., 642 F. Supp. 718, 752 (E.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n16)Footnote 5. In re Energy Sys. Equip. Leasing Sec. Litig., 642 F. Supp. 718, 752 (E.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n17)Footnote 6. Gunnells v. Healthplan Servs., 348 F.3d 417, 428 (4th Cir. 2003) ; Smilow v. Southwestern Bell Mobile Sys., 323 F.3d 32, 40 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n18)Footnote 7. Alexander Grant & Co. v. McAlister, 116 F.R.D. 583, 590 (S.D. Ohio 1987) .

(n19)Footnote 8. Genden v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 114 F.R.D. 48, 52 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n20)Footnote 9. Doe v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 145 F.R.D. 466, 476 (N.D. Ill. 1992) .

(n21)Footnote 10. Presbyterian Church of Sudan v. Talisman Energy, Inc., 226 F.R.D. 456, 468 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n22)Footnote 11. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 177-178, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n23)Footnote 12. General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 160, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

(n24)Footnote 13. Wagner v. Taylor, 836 F.2d 578, 587 (D.C. Cir. 1987) .

(n25)Footnote 14. See Coopers & Lybrand v. Livesay, 437 U.S. 463, 469, 98 S. Ct. 2454, 57 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1978) .

(n26)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n27)Footnote 2. Abby v. City of Detroit, 218 F.R.D. 544, 549 (E.D. Mich. 2003) .

(n28)Footnote 3. See [b], below.

(n29)Footnote 4. Goldwater v. Alston & Bird, 116 F.R.D. 342, 356 (S.D. Ill. 1987) .

(n30)Footnote 5. Epifano v. Boardroom Bus. Prods., 130 F.R.D. 295, 299 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n31)Footnote 6. In re LifeUSA Holding, Inc., 242 F.3d 136, 147-148 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n32)Footnote 7. Lake v. First Nationwide Bank, 156 F.R.D. 615, 626 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n33)Footnote 8. Leszczynski v. Allianz Ins., 176 F.R.D. 659, 676 (S.D. Fla. 1997) .

(n34)Footnote 9. Wehner v. Syntex Corp., 117 F.R.D. 641, 645 (N.D. Cal. 1987) .

(n35)Footnote 10. Nelsen v. Craig-Hallum, Inc., 659 F. Supp. 480, 487 (D. Minn. 1987) .

(n36)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n37)Footnote 12. See [a], above.

(n38)Footnote 13. Datz v. Whitworth, 144 F.R.D. 426, 427 (N.D. Ga. 1992) .

(n39)Footnote 14. Esler v. Northrop Corp., 86 F.R.D. 20, 39 (W.D. Mo. 1979) .

(n40)Footnote 15. Zinser v. Accufix Research Inst., Inc., 253 F.3d 1180, 1193 (9th Cir. 2001) .

(n41)Footnote 16. In re Visa Check/MasterMoney Antitrust Litig. v. Visa, USA Inc., 280 F.3d 124, 135-136 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n42)Footnote 17. McClendon v. Continental Group, Inc., 113 F.R.D. 39, 45 (D.N.J. 1986) .

(n43)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1).

(n44)Footnote 19. See Christiana Mortgage Corp. v. Delaware Mortgage Bankers Ass'n, 136 F.R.D. 372, 378 (D. Del. 1991) .

(n45)Footnote 20. Perez v. Government of Virgin Islands, 109 F.R.D. 384, 390 (D.V.I. 1986) .

(n46)Footnote 21. Johnston v. HBO Film Mgmt., 265 F.3d 178, 194 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n47)Footnote 22. In re Tetracycline Cases, 107 F.R.D. 719, 732 (W.D. Mo. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n48)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(A); see [b], below.

(n49)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(B); see [c], below.

(n50)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(C); see [d], below.

(n51)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(D); see [e], below.

(n52)Footnote 5. Buford v. H & R Block, 168 F.R.D. 340, 361 (S.D. Ga. 1996) .

(n53)Footnote 6. Walco Investments, Inc. v. Thenen, 168 F.R.D. 315, 337 (S.D. Fla. 1996) .

(n54)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(A).

(n55)Footnote 8. In re Three Mile Island Litig., 87 F.R.D. 433, 442 (M.D. Pa. 1980) .

(n56)Footnote 9. In re Warfarin Sodium Antitrust Litig., 391 F.3d 516, 534 (3d Cir. 2004) ; Butt v. Allegheny Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., 116 F.R.D. 486, 492 (E.D. Va. 1987) .

(n57)Footnote 10. In re Data Corp. Sec. Litig., 116 F.R.D. 216, 223 (D. Minn. 1986) .

(n58)Footnote 11. Epstein v. MCA, Inc., 50 F.3d 644, 668 (9th Cir. 1995) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 516 U.S. 367 (1996) .

(n59)Footnote 12. Tedesco v. Mishkin, 689 F. Supp. 1327, 1336 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n60)Footnote 13. Central Wesleyan Coll. v. W.R. Grace & Co., 143 F.R.D. 628, 640 (D.S.C. 1992) .

(n61)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(B).

(n62)Footnote 2. In re Warfarin Sodium Antitrust Litig., 391 F.3d 516, 534 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n63)Footnote 3. Pennsylvania v. Budget Fuel Co., 122 F.R.D. 184, 185 (E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n64)Footnote 4. Kurczi v. Eli Lilly & Co., 160 F.R.D. 667, 680 (N.D. Ohio 1995) .

(n65)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(C).

(n66)Footnote 6. In re Warfarin Sodium Antitrust Litig., 391 F.3d 516, 534 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n67)Footnote 7. Ikonen v. Hartz Mountain Corp., 122 F.R.D. 258, 266 (S.D. Cal. 1988) .

(n68)Footnote 8. In re S.E. Hotel Properties Ltd. Partnership Inv. Litig., 151 F.R.D. 597, 609 (W.D.N.C. 1993) .

(n69)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(D).

(n70)Footnote 10. Krehl v. Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Co., 78 F.R.D. 108, 124 (C.D. Cal. 1978) .

(n71)Footnote 11. Gunnells v. Healthplan Servs., 348 F.3d 417, 426 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n72)Footnote 12. In re Relafen Antitrust Litig., 218 F.R.D. 337, 347 (D. Mass. 2003) .

(n73)Footnote 13. Bowers v. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co., 219 F.R.D. 578, 584 (E.D. Mich. 2004.

(n74)Footnote 14. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 620, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n75)Footnote 15. Lockhart v. Westinghouse Credit Corp., 879 F.2d 43, 52 (3d Cir. 1989) .

(n76)Footnote 16. Brown v. Cameron-Brown Co., 92 F.R.D. 32, 49 (E.D. Va. 1981) .

(n77)Footnote 17. Gaffney v. U.S., 834 F. Supp. 1, 6 (D.D.C. 1993) ; see [ii], below.

(n78)Footnote 18. Valentino v. Carter-Wallace, Inc., 97 F.3d 1227, 1234 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n79)Footnote 19. Mateo v. The M/S Kiso, 805 F. Supp. 761, 774 (N.D. Cal. 1991) .

(n80)Footnote 20. Tedesco v. Mishkin, 689 F. Supp. 1327, 1337 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n81)Footnote 21. Riordan v. Smith Barney, 113 F.R.D. 60, 66 (N.D. Ill. 1986) .

(n82)Footnote 22. Bowers v. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co., 219 F.R.D. 578, 584 (E.D. Mich. 2004) (significant variations in each states' laws with respect to use of extrinsic evidence).

(n83)Footnote 23. Zimmerman v. Bell, 800 F.2d 386, 390 (4th Cir. 1986) .

(n84)Footnote 24. Hilao v. Estate of Marcos, 103 F.3d 767, 782-786 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n85)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B); see [b], below (contents of notice).

(n86)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n87)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A); In re Elec. Data Sys. Corp. "ERISA" Litig., 224 F.R.D. 613, 632 (E.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n88)Footnote 4. In re Elec. Data Sys. Corp. "ERISA" Litig., 224 F.R.D. 613, 632 (E.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n89)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n90)Footnote 6. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

(n91)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n92)Footnote 8. See § 14A.01.

(n93)Footnote 9. See § 14A.21[1].

(n94)Footnote 10. See § 14A.80.

(n95)Footnote 11. See [e], below.

(n96)Footnote 12. See [f], below.

(n97)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3); see also § 14A.80 et seq.

(n98)Footnote 14. Mendoza v. United States, 623 F.2d 1338, 1351 (9th Cir. 1980) .

(n99)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n100)Footnote 16. Grace v. City of Detroit, 145 F.R.D. 413, 414-415 (E.D. Mich. 1992) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(2) (court has authority to order notices in addition to initial certification notice).

(n101)Footnote 17. Enterprise Wall Paper Mfg. Co. v. Bodman, 85 F.R.D. 325, 327 (S.D.N.Y. 1980) .

(n102)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B); Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 176, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) (individual notice must be sent to all class members whose names and addresses may be ascertained through reasonable effort).

(n103)Footnote 19. In re Global Crossing Sec. & ERISA Litig., 225 F.R.D. 436, 449 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) .

(n104)Footnote 20. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc., v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 357, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n105)Footnote 21. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 710 F. Supp. 1477, 1484 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n106)Footnote 22. In re Nissan Motor Corp. Antitrust Litig., 552 F.2d 1088, 1105 (5th Cir. 1977) .

(n107)Footnote 23. Sollenbarger v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 121 F.R.D. 417, 437 (D.N.M. 1988) .

(n108)Footnote 24. In re Domestic Air Transp. Antitrust Litig., 141 F.R.D. 534, 548 (N.D. Ga. 1992) .

(n109)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n110)Footnote 26. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

(n111)Footnote 27. Weinberger v. Kendrick, 698 F.2d 61, 71 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n112)Footnote 28. Torrisi v. Tucson Elec. Power Co., 8 F.3d 1370, 1375 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n113)Footnote 29. In re Domestic Air Transp. Antitrust Litig., 141 F.R.D. 534, 548-553 (N.D. Ga. 1992) .

(n114)Footnote 30. Silber v. Mabon, 18 F.3d 1449, 1453 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n115)Footnote 31. In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 169 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n116)Footnote 32. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n117)Footnote 33. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

(n118)Footnote 34. Thompson v. Midwest Found. Indep. Physicians Ass'n, 117 F.R.D. 108, 118 (S.D. Ohio 1987) .

(n119)Footnote 35. In re Three Mile Island Litig., 87 F.R.D. 433, 442 (M.D. Pa. 1980) .

(n120)Footnote 36. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n121)Footnote 37. Monumental Life Ins. Co. v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co., 343 F.3d 331, 337-342 (5th Cir. 2003) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n122)Footnote 38. Vaughter v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 817 F.2d 685, 690 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n123)Footnote 39. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

(n124)Footnote 40. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n125)Footnote 41. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(2) (court may re quire that notice be given for the protection of the members of the class or otherwise for the fair conduct of the action).

(n126)Footnote 42. Blum v. BankAtlantic Fin. Corp., 925 F.2d 1357, 1360 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n127)Footnote 43. Silber v. Mabon, 18 F.3d 1449, 1455 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n128)Footnote 44. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 171, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n129)Footnote 45. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc., v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 358-359, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n130)Footnote 46. Argo v. Hills, 425 F. Supp. 151, 159 (E.D.N.Y. 1977) .

(n131)Footnote 47. Nagy v. Jostens, Inc., 91 F.R.D. 431, 433 (D. Minn. 1981) .

(n132)Footnote 48. Milstein v. Huck, 600 F. Supp. 254, 256 (E.D.N.Y. 1984) .

(n133)Footnote 49. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 173, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n134)Footnote 50. In re Nissan Motor Corp. Antitrust Litig., 552 F.2d 1088, 1095 (5th Cir. 1977) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART IV. TYPES OF CLASS ACTIONS AVAILABLE

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.34through 14A.39

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.34[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
A. CERTIFICATION OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.40

§ 14A.40 Pleading May Initiate Class Actionn*

[1] Court's Certification of Based on Allegations of Complaint

When a plaintiff, as a representative of a class, brings an action against a defendant or when a plaintiff brings an action against a defendant, as a representative of a class, the court must determine by order whether to certify the action as a class action. n1 Consequently, a class action may be initiated by a complaint, n2 provided that the complaint establishes that all of the class action requirements have been met, n3 including jurisdictional requirements, n4 the four prerequisites for all class actions, n5 and the requirements for the particular type of class action involved. n6 To obtain certification, the plaintiff must plead more than mere conclusory assertions that the requirements have been met. n7 Rather, the plaintiff must allege facts establishing that all of the requirements for bringing a particular class action have been satisfied. n8

However, even though the plaintiff must allege facts sufficient to show that the requirements of Rule 23 have been satisfied, each and every detail in support of a class action need not be pleaded; for example, when it is unduly burdensome or impracticable for each of the members of the class to be listed in the complaint, the plaintiff need not do so. n9 In such a case, the mere fact that the plaintiff has established the inability to identify all of the class members raises the implication that the plaintiff may be unable to join them and may therefore lead to a finding that the numerosity requirement is met. n10 Also, if a plaintiff fails to allege sufficient facts to satisfy the class action prerequisites in its original complaint, the plaintiff may amend the complaint to the extent permitted by Rule 15 to correct that deficiency. n11 If after amendment, the court determines from the pleadings that the case should not proceed as a class action, Rule 23(d)(4) permits the court to order that the pleadings be amended to eliminate allegations regarding the representation of absent persons and that the action proceed as an individual action rather than a class action. n12

[2] Motion for Class Certification

If a party wants to initiate a class action for claims or defenses but has not done so by the complaint, n1 the party may make a motion to the court for an order certifying the class. n2 The party opposing a request for class action certification by complaint or motion may make a motion for an order denying class certification n3 and add a motion to dismiss or for summary judgment, if applicable. n4 The moving party should ensure that the motion regarding certification of the class is accompanied by necessary supporting briefs or memoranda and affidavits. If the court grants dismissal or summary judgment but does not formally decide the motion for class certification by written order, the judgment in the case will not be binding on anyone other than the named parties. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCertification

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.80 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(A); see General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 161, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Lusted v. San Antonio Indep. Sch. Dist., 741 F.2d 817, 820 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 3. In re Am. Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1078-1079 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 14A.10 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 5. See § 14A.20 et seq.

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 14A.30 et seq.

(n8)Footnote 7. In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1083 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 8. In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1083 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Dolgow v. Anderson, 43 F.R.D. 472, 481 (E.D.N.Y. 1968) .

(n11)Footnote 10. Doe v. Charleston Area Medical Ctr., 529 F.2d 638, 644 (4th Cir. 1975) .

(n12)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15; Voilas v. General Motors Corp., 173 F.R.D. 389, 394, 396 (D.N.J. 1997) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(4); Bell v. Allstate Life Ins. Co., 160 F.3d 452, 454 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n14)Footnote 1. See [1], above.

(n15)Footnote 2. East Texas Motor Freight System, Inc. v. Rodriguez, 431 U.S. 395, 404-405, 97 S. Ct. 1891, 52 L. Ed. 2d 453 (1977) ; Ramah Navajo Chapter v. Lujan, 112 F.3d 1455, 1459 (10th Cir. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 3. Bryant v. Food Lion, Inc., 774 F. Supp. 1484, 1495 (D.S.C. 1991) .

(n17)Footnote 4. Wofford v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 78 F.R.D. 460, 476-477 (N.D. Cal. 1978) .

(n18)Footnote 5. Besinga v. United States, 923 F.2d 133, 135 (9th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 864 (1994) ; see § 14A.31.

109 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
A. CERTIFICATION OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.41

§ 14A.41 Purpose of Certificationn*

Absent class members may be bound by the judgment in a class action, even if they did not explicitly consent to become a part of the class. n1 Consequently, the certification procedure has been designed to protect absent members, n2 and trial courts must strictly follow the Rule 23 procedural requirements if the class action judgment claim is to have preclusive effect on the entire class. n3 Consequently, if the court fails to certify an action as a class action by formally defining the class and identifying the class claims under the procedures set forth in Rule 23, n4 the action is not a proper class action, n5 and only the named parties will be bound by the judgment. In other words, class certification is necessary so that the parties may proceed with the action under the assumption that the class members will be bound by the judgment resolving the class claims, issues, and defenses. n6 Certification also serves the important function of protecting absent class members whose procedural rights may be directly affected by the class certification. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCertification

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.80 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 176, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) (member of Rule 23(b)(3) class who has not elected to be excluded from class after receiving proper notice is bound by judgment).

(n3)Footnote 2. Berger v. Compaq Computer Corp., 257 F.3d 475, 479-480 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Besinga v. United States, 923 F.2d 133, 135 (9th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 864 (1994) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 5. Fuller v. Fruehauf Trailer Corp., 168 F.R.D. 588, 605 (E.D. Mich. 1966) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Clay v. American Tobacco Company, Inc., 188 F.R.D. 483, 490 (S.D. Ill. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 7. Davis v. Hutchins, 321 F.3d 641, 648-649 (7th Cir. 2003) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
A. CERTIFICATION OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.42

§ 14A.42 Court's Discretion to Grant or Deny Certificationn*

When a request for class action procedure has been initiated, either by pleading or motion, the court must promptly determine by order whether to certify the action as a class action. n1 This means that when class relief is requested or class issues are presented, the court must make a formal written order that states whether the action will proceed under Rule 23 requirements. n2 However, even though the court must make a definite order granting or denying certification, it has considerable discretion in that choice. Rule 23 provides that if the class action criteria are met, an action may, rather than must, be maintained as a class action. n3 If the court determines that relevant factors weigh against the class action procedure, it is appropriate for a district court to refuse to certify or to decertify the class. However, even though the court has broad discretion, certification is generally favored and any doubt as to whether the requirements of Rule 23(a) and (b) have been met should be resolved in favor of class certification. n4

Even though the court's certification determination may be amended or the class decertified at any time before final judgment, n5 a court's certification decision may not be tentative or conditional on later events or findings. If the court is not satisfied that the requirements of Rule 23 are met, the court should refuse certification until they are met. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.80 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. General Tel. Co. v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 161, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Coleman v. GMAC, 296 F.3d 443, 446 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Klay v. Humana, Inc., 382 F.3d 1241, 1270 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(C).

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

111 of 155 DOCUMENTS

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
A. CERTIFICATION OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.43

§ 14A.43 Consideration of Merits by Court in Ruling on Certificationn*

The Supreme Court has held that courts do not have authority to conduct a preliminary inquiry into the merits of a case in order to determine if the case may be maintained as a class action. In determining whether to certify a class action, the question is not whether the plaintiffs have stated a valid claim for relief, or who will prevail on the merits, but, rather, whether the proposed class and class representatives meet the requirements for certification under Rule 23(a) and (b). If courts make an extensive analysis of the issues on the merits, the certification decision may become a preliminary advisory opinion on the merits rather than a consideration of certification issues. n1 However, courts are not strictly limited to the pleadings to determine whether the requirements for class certification are satisfied and are permitted to consider other circumstances. n2 Therefore, while not deciding the underlying merits the district court may examine the issues involved in the litigation in order to determine whether to certify a class. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.80 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 177-178, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Newton v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 259 F.3d 154, 165-169 (3d Cir. 2001) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 3. Shook v. El Paso County, 386 F.3d 963, 974 (10th Cir. 2004) (district court should make factual and legal inquiries necessary to resolve certification issues, including issues intertwined with merits of case).

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
A. CERTIFICATION OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.44

§ 14A.44 Certification Proceduresn*

[1] Time of Certification by Court

A court must determine whether to certify the action as a class action at an early practicable time. n1 This means that the court is expected to actively manage the case to ensure that the certification decision is not unjustifiably delayed. n2 The purpose of the early certification requirement is to ensure that the parties understand the scope and the rights potentially affected by the class action and to protect the parties from prejudice. A failure to decide on certification early in the proceeding may leave the parties in confusion in the district court and may make appellate review more difficult. n3 An early decision on certification may also form the foundation for later determinations regarding the proper procedure for handling the claims and defenses of the numerous parties to the action. n4

On the other hand, several considerations may justify some delay in making the certification decision. The court may need sufficient information to conduct an extensive analysis, and more time may be necessary to permit discovery on certification issues. n5 Additionally the court may need time to appoint class attorneys. n6 The district court must balance these and other considerations to ensure that the time for certification is both early and practicable. n7

[2] Court May Allow Discovery on Certification Issues

The trial court has discretion in determining whether, and in what manner, to allow discovery with respect to class certification issues. Discovery should be allowed to enable a party to show the existence of a class. Specifically, discovery should be allowed where there is a need to determine whether Rule 23(a) requirements are met, and whether the action fits into one of the Rule 23(b) categories. However, the party opposing class certification should be protected from overly burdensome or irrelevant discovery. n1 As a general rule, the district court should limit discovery to class certification issues and postpone discovery on the merits of the action until after the certification ruling, except to the extent the types of discovery unavoidably overlap. n2

Rule 23, rather than the general discovery rules, controls requests for information relating to issues of class certification and notification. The court must consider expense as a factor in defining the scope of the discovery because of the impact the allocation of the expense may have on the parties. The courts have less discretion under Rule 23 to allocate costs than under regular discovery rules; thus, proponents of the class action are usually required to pay the expense of discovery. n3

[3] Hearing to Determine Certification Issues

If the pleadings or motion and other papers set out sufficient uncontested facts from which a court can determine whether the proposed class satisfies the requirements of Rule 23, the court may decide whether to certify the class action without a hearing. n1 Otherwise, the court commonly conducts an evidentiary hearings on the class certification issue. The court should hold an evidentiary hearing if there is any doubt regarding the issue of class certification. n2 A district court's certification decision may be reversed as an abuse of discretion if the court fails to hold an evidentiary hearing on the issue when necessary. n3 However, the failure of a court to hold a hearing does not require reversal unless the party claiming that a hearing was necessary can demonstrate that the party suffered prejudice and that the party requested that the district court hold such a hearing. n4

[4] Reference to Magistrate Judge Regarding Certification Issues

The district court judge may refer the class action to a magistrate judge for the purpose of conducting evidentiary hearings and making recommendations regarding certification. n1 The magistrate judge's report should assist the district court in its determination whether to certify the class, its definition of the class and any necessary subclasses, n2 the specification of notice and opt-out procedures, n3 designation of class representative, and drafting a trial plan. n4

[5] Burden in Certification Determination Is on Proponent of Class Action

The proponent of the class has the burden, either through pleadings or motions or at the hearing, to establish that the four prerequisites for all class actions n1 and the requirements for the particular type of class action involved n2 have been met. n3 However, some courts have stated that when the party opposing certification moves to deny certification, rather than the usual situation in which the proponent moves for certification, the moving party opposing certification has the burden of showing that certification is improper. n4

[6] Order of Court Granting or Denying Certification

[a] Form and Contents of Order

After the court has made its determination whether to grant or deny certification based on the requirements of Rule 23, n1 the court must enter a formal order stating its decision. n2 Even though Rule 23(c)(1) does not expressly state that the order must be in writing, considering the mandatory contents for the certification order, n3 the district court should always enter it in writing in clear and concise language. n4

If the court decides in favor of certification of the class, its order must specify: n5

- The definition of the class; n6
- The class claims, issues, or defenses; n7
- Specification of any sublclasses; n8
- The appointment of class counsel. n9

Although not an express requirement, the order should also specify that all of the requirements of Rule 23(a) have been met and the type of class action under Rule 23(b) that is being certified. n10

If the court decides against certification, its order should specify the factors that were insufficient so as to facilitate potential appeal. n11

[b] Definition of Class

The court's certification order must specify the definition of the class. n12 This rule is based on the fundamental requirement that a class action may not exist unless the class is defined by the court in a way that is specific enough to permit the ascertainment of those persons who qualify as class members and those who do not. n13 If the district court does not properly define the class, the action does not qualify as a class action, n14 and only the named parties are bound by the judgment. n15

[c] Class Claims, Issues, and Defenses

The court's certification order must specify class claims, issues, and defenses. n16 The court must be precise in its identification of the claims, issues, and defenses because when appropriate, a court may certify a class action for particular claims, issues, or defenses. n17 If they seek certification only with respect to particular claims, issues, or defenses, the parties must specify so in the pleading or motion and are required to satisfy the class action requirement of Rule 23(a) and (b) only with respect to those claims, issues, or defenses. The most common example of this type of limitation is a court certification of a class to determine liability only. In such a case, the court will specify that damages for each individual are to be determined in separate litigation. n18 In a similar way, a court may certify a class action limited to trying a particular defense that is common to a large number of asserted class members. n19

[d] Definition of Subclasses

When appropriate, the court may certify a class action by identifying a class and dividing that class into subclasses; in such circumstances, each subclass must be treated as a class, and the provisions of Rule 23 are construed and applied to each subclass. n20 If the court certifies a class into subclasses, each subclass must be treated as a class within the entire class action, n21 and each subclass must independently satisfy the class action requirements of Rule 23 before it may be certified. Thus, if a subclass does not meet one or more of the requirements of Rule 23, the court must deny certification regarding that proposed subclass. n22 The proponent of a subclass has the burden to submit a subclass certification proposal to the court that the subclass meets the requirements of Rule 23. n23 However, the court has the power on its own initiative to redefine or divide a class into a subclass if a class is overly broad and has discretion to certify subclasses under Rule 23(c)(4). A court may redefine a class or create subclasses at any stage of the proceedings. n24

[e] Appointment of Class Counsel

When it certifies a class action, a court must appoint class counsel in its order of certification. The court must make the appointment under Rule 23(g), n25 which specifies the requirements an attorney must satisfy to qualify as class counsel. n26 Basically, the court must evaluate the attorney's ability to conduct class actions and, in particular, whether the attorney is qualified with respect to the particular class that has been certified. n27 The qualifications for class counsel and the procedures for the court to make an appointment on certification of a class n28 are discussed in § 14A.50 et seq. When the court rejects the qualification of the named plaintiffs' counsel to serve as class counsel, the court has discretion to appoint some other attorney as class counsel, rather than merely deny certification. n29

[f] Modification of Certification Order and Decertification

The court may alter or amend an order certifying a class action at any time before final judgment in the event circumstances change regarding the class. n30 For example, the court may amend a certification order to redefine or subdivide the certified class, even to redefine or subdivide the original class to conform to the proof presented at trial. n31 The court also has power to decertify the class, which is the equivalent of an amendment of the certification order, if the court finds that certification should not have been granted or is no longer appropriate. n32 The district court's decision to modify a certification order or to decertify a class, like its decision to certify a class, is committed to its discretion and is reviewed for abuse of discretion. n33

[7] Court's Order Granting or Denying Certification

[a] No Immediate Appeal of Right

A decision by the district court to grant or deny certification under Rule 23 is generally not a "final decision" within the meaning of the United States Code. n1 Consequently, a certification order is not immediately appealable as a matter of right but may be reviewed on appeal from a final judgment in the action. n2 Such an interlocutory appeal is possible only if leave to appeal is granted in the discretion of the court of appeals. n3 When an appellate court does review a district court's certification order, the standard of review is for abuse of discretion. n4

[b] Court of Appeals Has Discretion to Grant Immediate Review of Certification Order

A court of appeals has discretion to permit an immediate appeal from an order of a district court granting or denying class action certification, provided that the appealing party files an application to the court of appeals within 14 days after the district court enters its class certification order. n5 This method of appeal applies only to orders granting or denying certification, not to other types of interlocutory orders in class actions. n6

There are two reasons appellate courts have discretionary immediate appellate jurisdiction over class certification orders. First, if certification is denied, the plaintiff might be unable to secure review of the decision without proceeding to final judgment on an individual claim that by itself would be too insignificant to justify the costs of litigation. Second, if certification is granted, the defendant may be forced to settle rather than incur the costs of defending the class action and the risk of potentially large liability. n7

Under the appellate procedure, a court of appeals has liberal discretion to evaluate any relevant factors in favor of, or against, an interlocutory appeal. n7.1 However, the sheer number of class actions and the lengthy period necessary to complete an appeal has lead most circuits to conclude that Rule 23(f) review should be granted sparingly. n8 Thus, a circuit court will grant a interlocutory appeal in limited circumstances, such as when the certification decision turns on a novel or unsettled question of law or when that decision likely will dispose of the litigation. The district court need not certify this type of order for appeal. However, a district court's statement of reasons for a grant or denial of certification may assist the court of appeals in deciding whether to grant an appeal. n9

[c] Factors Justifying Immediate Review

Several courts of appeals have stated that when exercising its broad discretion on whether to take an immediate appeal from a grant or denial of class certification, a court of appeals should consider the reasons Rule 23(f) was promulgated. These courts have adopted guidelines to specify when Rule 23(f) review should be granted, including when: (1) there is a death-knell situation for either the plaintiff or defendant that is independent of the merits of the underlying claims, coupled with a class certification decision by the district court that is questionable; (2) the certification decision presents an unsettled and fundamental issue of law relating to class actions, important both to the specific litigation and generally, that is likely to evade end-of-the-case review; or (3) the district court's class certification decision is manifestly erroneous. These three factors do not constitute an exhaustive list and are not intended to limit the broad discretion granted the courts of appeal by Rule 23(f). n10 Other circuits have adopted similar guidelines. n11

[d] No Automatic Stay if Immediate Appeal Is Allowed

If the court of appeals grants immediate, interlocutory review, proceedings in the district court are not automatically stayed; proceedings are stayed only if the district judge or the court of appeals orders a stay. n12 A party should request a stay first from the district court. If the district court refuses a stay, its action and any explanation of its views will be considered by the court of appeals. n13 A stay should be issued only when it is demonstrated that the probability of error in the class certification decision is high enough that the costs of proceeding in the district court exceed the costs of delaying. These considerations are similar to those that apply with respect to a stay of a preliminary injunction. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsCertification

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.81 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n4)Footnote 3. Henry v. Gross, 803 F.2d 757, 769 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Jones v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 358 F.3d 205, 215-216 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Am. Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1086 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n8)Footnote 7. Horn v. Associated Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 555 F.2d 270, 273-274 (10th Cir. 1977) .

(n9)Footnote 1. *Loy v. Motorola, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23753, at 11 (N.D. Ill. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 2. Mueller v. CBS, Inc., 200 F.R.D. 242, 244-245 (W.D. Pa. 2001) .

(n11)Footnote 3. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 356, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n12)Footnote 1. Grayson v. K Mart Corp., 79 F.3d 1086, 1096 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 2. Parker v. Time Warner Entm't Co., L.P., 331 F.3d 13, 20 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 3. Morrison v. Booth, 730 F.2d 642, 644 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n15)Footnote 4. Grayson v. K Mart Corp., 79 F.3d 1086, 1099 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n16)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); see Boskoff v. Yano, 217 F. Supp. 2d 1077, 1084 (D. Haw. 2001) .

(n17)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n18)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n19)Footnote 4. Munoz v. Orr, 200 F.3d 291, 298 (5th Cir. 2000) .

(n20)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a); see § 14A.20 et seq.

(n21)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a); see § 14A.30 et seq.

(n22)Footnote 3. Parker v. Time Warner Entm't Co., L.P., 331 F.3d 13, 16 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n23)Footnote 4. Bryant v. Food Lion, Inc., 774 F. Supp. 1484, 1495 (D.S.C. 1991) .

(n24)Footnote 1. See § 14A.32.

(n25)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(A).

(n26)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n27)Footnote 4. Sweat v. City of Fort Smith, 265 F.3d 692, 696-697 (8th Cir. 2001.

(n28)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(A).

(n29)Footnote 6. See [b], below.

(n30)Footnote 7. See [c], below.

(n31)Footnote 8. See [d], below.

(n32)Footnote 9. See [d], below.

(n33)Footnote 10. In re Gen. Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 794 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n34)Footnote 11. See Jacobs v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 219 F.R.D. 549, 551 (S.D. Fla. 2004) ; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(A).

(n35)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n36)Footnote 13. Pottinger v. City of Miami, 720 F. Supp. 955, 958 (S.D. Fla. 1989) .

(n37)Footnote 14. See § 14A.21.

(n38)Footnote 15. Fuller v. Fruehauf Trailer Corp., 168 F.R.D. 588, 605 (E.D. Mich. 1996) .

(n39)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n40)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(4).

(n41)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b), Committee Note to 1966 Amendments; see also O'Keefe v. Mercedes-Benz United States, LLC, 214 F.R.D. 266, 292 (E.D. Pa. 2003) .

(n42)Footnote 19. In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 166 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n43)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(5); see Rector v. City & County of Denver, 348 F.3d 935, 949-950 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n44)Footnote 21. Foster v. Board of Sch. Comm'rs, 872 F.2d 1563, 1565 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n45)Footnote 22. Retired Chicago Police Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584, 596 (7th Cir. 1993) .

(n46)Footnote 23. United States Parole Comm. v. Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 407-408, 100 S. Ct. 1202, 63 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1980) .

(n47)Footnote 24. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(C); see Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 856, 119 S. Ct. 2295,

144 L. Ed. 2d 715 (1999) .

(n48)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n49)Footnote 26. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1).

(n50)Footnote 27. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B), 23(g)(4).

(n51)Footnote 28. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2).

(n52)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2).

(n53)Footnote 30. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(C).

(n54)Footnote 31. Becher v. Long Island Lighting Co., 172 F.R.D. 28, 30-31 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n55)Footnote 32. International Union of Elec., Elec. Salaried, Machine & Furniture Workers, AFL-CIO v. Unisys Corp., 155 F.R.D. 41, 47 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(C), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n56)Footnote 33. Smilow v. Southwestern Bell Mobile Sys., Inc., 323 F.3d 32, 38-43 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n57)Footnote 1. Coopers & Lybrand v. Livesay, 437 U.S. 463, 468, 98 S. Ct. 2454, 57 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1978) ; 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n58)Footnote 2. Reinholdson v. State, 346 F.3d 847, 849 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n59)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f); see Chamberlan v. Ford Motor Co., 402 F.3d 952, 959 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n60)Footnote 4. Hines v. Widnall, 334 F.3d 1253, 1255 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n61)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f).

(n62)Footnote 6. In re Delta Air Lines, 310 F.3d 953, 959 (6th Cir. 2002) .

(n63)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f), Committee Note to 1998 Amendments.

(n64)Footnote 7.1. Vallario v. Vandehey, 554 F.3d 1259, 1263-1264 (10th Cir. 2009) ; see [c], below.

(n65)Footnote 8. Chamberlan v. Ford Motor Co., 402 F.3d 952, 959 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n66)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f), Committee Note to 1998 Amendments.

(n67)Footnote 10. Chamberlan v. Ford Motor Co., 402 F.3d 952, 959-960 (9th Cir. 2005) (factors are merely guidelines not a rigid test); In re Lorazepam & Clorazepate Antitrust Litig., 289 F.3d 98, 105 (D.C. Cir. 2002) .

(n68)Footnote 11. See Prado-Steiman ex rel. Prado v. Bush, 221 F.3d 1266, 1273 (11th Cir. 2000) ; Waste Mgmt. Holdings, Inc. v. Mowbray, 208 F.3d 288, 293 (1st Cir. 2000) .

(n69)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f).

(n70)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f), Committee Note to 1998 Amendments.

(n71)Footnote 14. Sumitomo Copper Litig. v. Credit Lyonnais Rouse, Ltd., 262 F.3d 134, 140 (2d Cir. 2001) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
A. CERTIFICATION OF CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 14A.45through 14A.49

[Reserved]

§§ 14A.45[Reserved]

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
B. APPOINTMENT OF CLASS COUNSEL AND AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES IN CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.50

§ 14A.50 District Court Must Appoint Class Counsel on Certification of Class Actionn*

[1] District Court Must Appoint Class Counsel for Each Class or Subclass

At the time it orders a class certification, the district court must in the certification appoint counsel for the class, n1 unless a statute, such as the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act, n2 specifies otherwise. n3 These attorneys are known as "class counsel" n4 and are appointed to represent either a proposed class or a certified class. n5

If the court divides a proposed class into subclasses, n6 the court must order appointment of separate class counsel for each subclass it certifies because of the potential varying interests among class members. n7 Class members may have divergent interests, which call for the creation of subclasses in a number of situations, such as when a proposed class of persons have both present and future claimants. In such a situation, not only must the court create subclasses, it must appoint separate attorneys because a single attorney or firm attempting to represent both subclasses would have a conflict of interest. n8

[2] Court May Appoint Co-Representatives

Although it is possible that the court could appoint only an individual attorney, almost all class actions are complex cases, and, therefore, it is typical that the court appoints a law firm or group of attorneys. n1 The court may also condition the appointment of a law firm or individual attorney on the condition that appointment would be as co-counsel to work in conjunction with another firm or individual attorney; the court may also appoint lead class counsel and liaison class counsel. n2 However, the court should ensure that it does not appoint such an extensive legal staff that the staff is not responsive to the needs of the class or the appointing court. n3 In its determination of the arrangement and number of appointed counsel for a class or subclass, the court's goal is to secure for the class or subclass the best possible representation of its interests. n4

[3] Appointment of Interim Class Counsel

The court has discretion to designate "interim" class counsel, who are appointed even prior to certification, to act on behalf of an asserted class in the early stages of litigation and before the court has decided whether the class will be certified. n1 Interim class counsel has several duties to perform before the court decides whether to certify the class. Interim class counsel must organize and conduct discovery on the certification questions and file or respond to any certification motions. Additionally, interim class counsel should represent the class at settlement discussions. n1.1

These matters may be accomplished by the attorney who filed the action, and the court need not appoint an interim class counsel to act on behalf of the class in every case. However, when the interest of the class is different than the filing individuals, the court should appoint interim class counsel. Even if the court has not officially appointed the attorney who filed the action as interim class counsel, the attorney should nevertheless take any steps needed to handle the normal precertification matters that typically arise in class actions. n2 It should also be noted that it is not necessary for the court to later appoint an interim class counsel, even one that has performed satisfactorily, as permanent class counsel. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselAppointmentsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselFees

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 23.120, 23.121 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d) (Act contains mandatory provisions that control process for selecting lead plaintiff in private class actions brought under Act); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments (provisions of Rule 23(g) that relate to selection of class counsel do not apply to actions that are subject to provisions of Securities Act).

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1).

(n5)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1711(3); see, e.g., In re Elec. Data Sys. Corp. Secs. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 559, 571-572 (E.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1711(3); see [3], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 14A.34[6][d].

(n8)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(4), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n9)Footnote 8. Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 856, 119 S. Ct. 2295, 144 L. Ed. 2d 715 (1999) .

(n10)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n11)Footnote 2. In re Elec. Data Sys. Corp. Secs. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 559, 571 (E.D. Tex. 2005) .

(n12)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n13)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(4), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n14)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(3).

(n15)Footnote 1.1. In re Air Cargo Shipping Servs. Antitrust Litig., 240 F.R.D. 56, 58 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) .

(n16)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(3), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n17)Footnote 3. See In re Wells Fargo Sec. Litig., 156 F.R.D. 223, 224-226 (N.D. Cal 1994) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
B. APPOINTMENT OF CLASS COUNSEL AND AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES IN CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.51

§ 14A.51 Appointment Must Ensure Class Counsel Will Represent Entire Classn*

An attorney who is appointed class counsel must perform in the interest of the entire class as a whole, n1 not merely in the interest of the named representatives or any other particular members who make up the class. n2 It should be noted that if an attorney who had previously represented a named representative on an individual basis is formally appointed class counsel, there will be some transformation in the attorney's fiduciary duty and allegiance from the attorney's former client (the named plaintiffs) to the attorney's new client (the entire class). n3 Also, because the qualifications of the appointed class counsel are one of the factors the court considers in determining to certify the class, the class representatives do not have authority to terminate, hire, or replace the class counsel. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.120 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(4); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments; *see In re Carbon Black Antitrust Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 660, at *60-61 (D. Mass. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n5)Footnote 4. Maywalt v. Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., 67 F.3d 1072, 1078 (2d Cir. 1995) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
B. APPOINTMENT OF CLASS COUNSEL AND AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES IN CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.52

§ 14A.52 Qualifications of Class Counseln*

[1] Court Must Consider Many Factors That Indicate Counsel's Ability to Represent Class

A court must appoint class counsel who are qualified and capable of representing the entire class fairly and adequately. In the process of appointing class counsel, the court must consider several factors enumerated in Rule 23 that indicate the qualifications and abilities of class counsel, including: n1

- The work counsel has performed in identifying or investigating potential claims in the action; n2
- Counsel's experience in handling class actions, other complex litigation, and claims of the type asserted in the action; n3
- Counsel's knowledge of the applicable law; n4 and
- The resources counsel will commit to representing the class. n5

In addition to these factors, the court may consider any other factors relevant to counsel's ability to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the entire class. n6

[2] Performance of Counsel on Claims in Current Litigation

In its appointment decision, the court must consider the work that a class counsel applicant has done in identifying or investigating potential claims in the current action. n1 This may include any work that the applicant has performed as interim class counsel, for example. n2 In the case of a plaintiff class, the process of drafting the complaint requires investigatory and analytical effort that strangers to the action will not have undertaken. Therefore, when an attorney has performed these or other investigative and analytical tasks before making the application for appointment to permanent class counsel he or she is generally in a better position to represent the class fairly and adequately than attorneys who have not performed those tasks. n3 However, if the applying attorney filed a simple complaint and did not actually devote substantial efforts to the identification and investigation of potential claims before filing the complaint, the fact that the applicant filed the action does not carry as much weight. n4

This factor also recognizes that an important consideration in the selection of class counsel is the existing attorney-client relationship between the applying attorney and the proposed class representatives. Because of a continuous professional relationship with the client, the applying attorney will often have considerable information concerning the client's manner of doing business and the industry in which the client does business. n5

[3] Counsel's Experience in Managing Class Actions and Claims Similar to Current Claim

In its class counsel appointment decision, the court must consider the applicant's experience in handling class actions, other complex litigation, and claims of the type asserted in the action in making the appointment of class counsel. n1 Counsel's experience has been one of the factors courts have always considered in assessing the adequacy of the named representative's retained counsel. n1.1 Courts will consider both counsel's experience in other similar cases n2 and counsel's performance to date in the present case. n3

[4] Counsel's Knowledge of Applicable Law

An important factor that the court must consider in its appointment decision is the applicant's knowledge of the applicable law. n1 This knowledge includes that of class actions in general and also the law of the case being heard. n2 Counsel's knowledge has always been a factor that courts have used when assessing the adequacy of the named representative's retained counsel and of the ability of the named representative to protect the class's interests adequately. n3 As is the case with other factors, the applicant's knowledge of the applicable law should not be the sole criterion on which the court makes its appointment decision. n4

[5] Resources Counsel Will Commit to Represent Class

The final mandatory factor that the court must consider in its class counsel appointment decision is the resources counsel will commit to representing the class. n1 This factor requires an evaluation by the court of the applicant's intention and capability to commit staff, research, supplies, and financial resources to the accomplishment of the class's objectives in the litigation, such that the applicant will fairly and adequately represent the class's interests. n2 The intent and ability to devote resources to the litigation is a factor that courts have always used in assessing the adequacy of the named representative's retained counsel. n3 The court in its evaluation may compare the resources of all the applicants. n4 However, the resources counsel has available to commit to the litigation need only be appropriate to the needs of the litigation, and the court should be careful not to limit consideration to lawyers with the greatest resources. n5

[6] Other Factors Indicative of Counsel's Qualifications to Represent Class

In addition to the factors that the court must consider in the appointment of class counsel, the court may consider any other matter relevant to counsel's ability to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the class. n1 One court has stated that these other matters should be considered only if there are multiple attorneys who wish to represent the class, all of whom can establish that they will do so fairly and adequately. n2 The following is a nonexhaustive list of some of the factors courts have traditionally considered in a class counsel appointment:

- Counsel's resolve to vigorously prosecute class claims or defenses. n3
- Counsel's history of litigating class actions. n4
- Lack of conflicts between counsel and any class members; n5 and, conversely, the presence of conflicts may preclude appointment or result in disqualification if counsel has already been appointed. n6
- Counsel's ethical reputation. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselAppointments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote *. For a more complete discussion, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 23.122 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.)

(n2)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 2. See [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 3. See [3], below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See [4], below.

(n6)Footnote 5. See [5], below.

(n7)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B); see [6], below.

(n8)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(i).

(n9)Footnote 2. *See Henderson v. Eaton, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 274, at 10 (E.D. La. 2002) .

(n10)Footnote 3. Harrington v. City of Albuquerque, 222 F.R.D. 505, 520 (D.N.M. 2004) (Rule 23(g) includes presumption that attorneys who have represented party moving for class certification up to that point will be appointed as class counsel because of their experience on case).

(n11)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(i), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n12)Footnote 5. See In re Air Cargo Shipping Servs. Antitrust Litig., 240 F.R.D. 56, 57-59 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(i), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n13)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(ii).

(n14)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(ii), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n15)Footnote 2. See Linney v. Cellular Alaska Pshp., 151 F.3d 1234, 1239 (9th Cir. 1998) .

(n16)Footnote 3. See Geer v. Cox, 216 F.R.D. 677, 680 (D. Kan. 2003) .

(n17)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(iii).

(n18)Footnote 2. Harrington v. City of Albuquerque, 222 F.R.D. 505, 520 (D.N.M. 2004) .

(n19)Footnote 3. See In re Bankamerica Corp. Secs. Litig., 210 F.R.D. 694, 702 (E.D. Mo. 2002) .

(n20)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(iii), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n21)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(iv).

(n22)Footnote 2. In re Emulex Corp. Sec. Litig., 210 F.R.D. 717, 720 (C.D. Cal. 2002) .

(n23)Footnote 3. In re NASDAQ Market-Makers Antitrust Litig., 172 F.R.D. 119, 128 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n24)Footnote 4. Harrington v. City of Albuquerque, 222 F.R.D. 505, 520 (D.N.M. 2004) .

(n25)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(iv), Committee Note to 2003 Amendments.

(n26)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B).

(n27)Footnote 2. Harrington v. City of Albuquerque, 222 F.R.D. 505, 521 (D.N.M. 2004) .

(n28)Footnote 3. Rutter & Wilbanks Corp. v. Shell Oil Co. 314 F.3d 1180, 1188 (10th Cir. 2002) .

(n29)Footnote 4. In re Managed Care Litig., 209 F.R.D. 678, 685 (S.D. Fla. 2002) .

(n30)Footnote 5. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 626 n.20, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) ; see Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 856, 119 S. Ct. 2295, 144 L. Ed. 2d 715 & n.31 (1999) (subclasses required separate representation to eliminate conflicting interests of counsel).

(n31)Footnote 6. In re Corn Derivatives Antitrust Litig., 748 F.2d 157, 161 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n32)Footnote 7. Kingsepp v. Wesleyan Univ., 142 F.R.D. 597, 599 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure

Copyright 2011, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART IV Parties
CHAPTER 14A CLASS ACTIONS; DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART V. CLASS ACTION PROCEDURES
B. APPOINTMENT OF CLASS COUNSEL AND AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES IN CLASS ACTION

1-14A Moore's Manual--Federal Practice and Procedure § 14A.53

§ 14A.53 Procedures for Appointment of Class Counseln*

[1] Court May Require That Counsel Submit Information

To facilitate its appointment of class counsel, the court may direct potential class counsel to provide information on any subject relevant to the appointment. n1 In its order, however, the court should ensure that confidential or privileged information is protected from disclosure, including to other parties. The court may provide protection by combining its orders to produce information with appropriate confidentiality or protective orders, or by providing that any information is produced for review by the court only. n2 For example, the court may request that the potential class counsel provide information concerning any agreements with their clients concerning potential fee awards and recovery of nontaxable costs. Such information may be relevant with regard to the financial resources that the proposed counsel and his or her client are able to commit to the litigation. n3

[2] Court's Appointment of Applicant

[a] Court May Select Only Qualified Applicant for Appointment

